PLO leader fighting Syrian-backed revolt

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and his outgunned guerrillas fought off tank, rocket and artillery fire from Syrian-backed mutineers Saturday, and hospital sources reported 240 dead and 550 wounded in three days of fighting.

Among the dead were Arafat's ally Abu Mustafa, head of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, his wife and five children who perished when a shell hit their house in the Nahr el-Bared camp, the camp commander said.

Outside the Islamic Hospital, Tripoli's biggest, a trailer truck was turned into a morgue and bodies were piled in layers on blocks of ice.

A doctor said the hospital morgue was full and that only the severely wounded were being treated in the facility.

"We are saturated and I don't know how we can cope," he said, asking to remain anonymous. "No medicines. No blood. No electricity. No fuel for generators. And no staff."

Artillery shells and rockets from multiple launchers in the Syrian-held mountains poured on the two Palestinian refugee camps on the outskirts of this northern Lebanese port, pressing a six-month-old rebel offensive to depose Arafat as chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"They want to end the PLO," Arafat said of Syria. "They want to create an alternative PLO that will be a puppet in their hands. But I tell them, I will only bow to God and to the will of my people.

"I will fight and die here with my people but will never compromise on my peoples' dignity, independence or rights," Arafat told The Associated Press at the Baddawi camp.

Arafat charged that the Syrians had massed up to 25,000 men, 170 tanks and up to 180 artillery pieces around Badawi and Nahr el-Bared, which together house about 8,000 Arafat loyalists among 45,000 refugees.

He would not comment on Syria's denials that its troops were involved in the fighting, saying, "You have eyes. You can see for yourself."

Both Arafat and Lebanese security officials in Tripoli said the rebel attackers had made no significant progress in their attempts to advance on the camps.

"They captured a few hundred yards the first day," said a Lebanese official who requested anonymity. "Several positions have changed hands over the last three days. But now I can say nothing has fallen into their hands."

Oil tanks in Tripoli's refinery on Baddawi's edge continued burning, with firemen unable to reach the scene because of intense shelling.

Associated Press photographer William Foley saw the refinery hit again Saturday, sending flames high into the air.

"Black plumes floated over the sea, and it looked like midnight the way the smoke blocked the sunlight," Foley reported.

Outside Damascus, Syrian security forces opened fire on hundreds of Arafat's supporters in Syria's Yarmouk camp, killing six demonstrators and wounding 17, informed sources in the Syrian capital said.

Congressmen on Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. congressmen visited battle sites and talked with the acting civilian leader of this Caribbean nation Saturday in an attempt to determine what led President Reagan to order the U.S. invasion.

When the 14 congressmen arrived Friday, the commander of U.S. forces on Grenada, Maj. Gen. Edward Trobaugh, said many of the Cubans on the island apparently were construction workers, and that the U.S. military had no hard evidence that American residents were in immediate danger before the invasion Oct. 25.

The chairman of the 14-member congressional delegation, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Saturday it is possible American troops might be needed on Grenada "into the next year" to enable the government to establish full control over the island and move toward elections.

Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., said, "I think we'll have a (military) contingent here for at least a few months."

The House approved a War Powers resolution last Tuesday requiring Reagan to withdraw U.S. forces from Grenada before Christmas. The Senate passed an identical measure Oct. 28 but killed the unrelated bill to which it was attached. Another vote is scheduled, but no date has been set.

The Reagan administration has said it ordered the invasion to restore calm, protect civilians and evacuate Americans who felt unsafe after a bloody power struggle within the Cuban-backed Marxist government. Later he accused the Cubans of plotting to take over the island nation. Cuba has denied it.

SEAL squad staged rescue

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In an operation that killed four U.S. servicemen, Navy commandos battled Grenadian forces two days before Marines and Army Rangers landed on the Caribbean island nation, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The Oct. 23 landing by the elite SEAL squad rescued the island's British governor-general, Paul Scoon, who had been under house arrest.

Because the SEALs — who take their name from the elements in which they operate, sea, air and land — always operate secretly, the Navy said it could provide no further information on the rescue mission.

"I can say the SEALs fought a very pitched battle to get to the governor's house," Navy spokesman Cmdr. Mike Sherman said.

The size of the invading force was not revealed.

The Navy sources told The San Diego Union that the SEALs crept up a hill to Grenada's Government House, where they were met with heavy fire and were driven back.

But they attacked again and overran the forces defending the mansion, then held off repeated assaults by Grenadian forces until the full U.S. invasion began Oct. 25. Scoon was safe inside the mansion with the SEALs.

The Navy said the four SEALs drowned after their boat capsized at sea. Their bodies were not recovered, the newspaper said.

Andropov's failure to attend meeting stirring speculation

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov failed to attend a nationally televised Kremlin gathering Saturday at the start of the country's biggest holiday, increasing speculation about his health.

The 69-year-old Soviet leader has not made a public appearance since Aug. 18. He has been reported suffering from kidney, heart and other ailments, and is said to have given up plans to receive visitors in the Kremlin since then.

His absence from a meeting to inaugurate a three-day celebration honoring the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution to power was considered highly unusual. Attendance is traditional and expected.

Foreign diplomats said they assumed Andropov would have attended the speechmaking and concerts in the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses unless he was incapacitated.

Last month, the Kremlin publicized a letter Andropov wrote to international scientists in which he said he could not meet them in Moscow then because he had a cold.

Government spokesman Leonid Zamyatin said after the Saturday ceremony that Andropov was absent because he had a cold, which he described as "not serious."

Zamyatin, head of the Central Committee's International Information Department, also said he "doubted" Andropov would attend the Revolution Day parade Monday in Red Square.

"The doctors will say when he can return to work," Zamyatin told Western reporters. He said Andropov had been suffering from the cold for 10 days.

Andropov's absence from the parade would be considered even more startling. His predecessor Leonid I. Brezhnev never missed any Revolution Day festivities despite numerous ailments.

Brezhnev died at age 75 on Nov. 10, 1982, three days after watching the annual parade from atop the tomb of revolutionary leader Vladimir I. Lenin.

A longtime resident of Moscow, who asked to remain anonymous, said Saturday that wartime leader Josef Stalin even attended a makeshift ceremony in 1941 that was held in a Moscow subway station during the Nazi invasion.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said workers, party officials, veterans, military officers and "the leaders of the Communist Party and the Soviet state" attended the Saturday meeting.

It did not mention Andropov. But Soviet television carried live coverage of the Kremlin gathering, giving viewers ample opportunity to note his absence.

The ceremony began promptly at 5 p.m., when members of the Politburo and other dignitaries filed onto the stage and took their places.

Last JFK memorial will be biggest

Kennedy

DALLAS — November 22, 1971, was cold and windy. Eight years had passed since President John F. Kennedy had been shot and killed in downtown Dallas.

About 50 people stood shivering in the open-walled plaza and listened to then-Mayor Wes Wise eulogize the young president.

"Each of us today remembers this day with his special kind of grief," Wise said, solemnly laying a huge wreath of flowers on the Kennedy Memorial.

It's been in this quiet, bleak manner that a proud city has dutifully remembered that on Nov. 22, 1963, it was the center of a national tragedy.

The anniversary of Kennedy's death has never attracted huge crowds in Dallas. And as time faded memory, the number of mourners has dwindled, prompting critics to urge that the whole thing be put to rest.

But organizers says this year's observance will be larger and better attended, including a luncheon for an expected 2,000 people.

"Without a doubt this will be the biggest memorial," said Frank Hernandez, a lawyer in charge of arranging the function for the Democratic Party. "There is something magic about 20."

This year's commemoration will also be the last time the memorial is celebrated on the date of Kennedy's death, Hernandez said. From now on, Dallas will mark Kennedy's birthday, May 29.

"People focus in on the assassination, which is really a sad event, and they ought to focus on his birthday, which is happy day. We don't celebrate Lincoln's death. We celebrate his birthday," Hernandez said.

For years, the commemoration has been simple. A hymn was sung, a prayer was said and flowers were laid on a plaque that reads: "The joy and sorrow of John Fitzgerald Kennedy belonged to all men — so did the pain and sorrow of his death."

Across the street stands the red brick building, then the Texas School Book Depository, from which Lee Harvey Oswald is believed to have fired three shots.

Wise, mayor from 1971 to 1976, approves of the simple ceremonies that have been held each year on Nov. 22.

"I always felt it was in good taste," Wise said in an interview. "It was not overly sad, but had a serious demeanor like (the memorial) in Washington. It was low-keyed. You didn't see a lot of tears."

Until 1976, when Wise left office, the city and the Greater Dallas Community of Churches co-sponsored the annual services.

Rain is due for parts of the Pacific Northwest and showers are forecast for the upper Rockies into central California for Sunday, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also expected in eastern Texas and Louisiana.

City's skies to turn partly cloudy

Overcast skies will turn partly cloudy by this afternoon and continue through Monday, according to the friendly neighborhood weathermen with the National Weather Service.

Rains that have brought more than an inch of precipitation and a flash flood watch to the area are not expected to continue.

Highs today should be in the middle 70s and lows in the mid-50s, with southerly winds of 10-15 mph expected. Monday's forecast calls for warmer temperatures, with highs in the upper 70s.

The record high for Nov. 5 is 83 degrees, set in 1955. That is 16 degrees above Saturday's high of 67. And the overnight low of 58 was 37 degrees warmer than the low of 21 recorded in 1959.

Small voter turnout anticipated

AUSTIN (AP) — A low voter turnout is expected for Tuesday's statewide election, and officials say half of all votes should come from Houston, where local issues have stirred interest.

Elsewhere in Texas most ballots will consist only of 11 proposed constitutional amendments, and voting trends of the past show dismal turnouts for such off-year elections.

Texas has about 6.5 million registered voters.

"It is obvious that the turnout for the Houston city election will be a significant portion of the statewide vote," said Secretary of State John Fainter, the state's chief election officer. "About half of the state vote might be a good guess."

Karen Gladney of the secretary of state's election division predicted a turnout of 11 percent for this election. Only 7.9 percent voted in the off-year election of 1979, but 68 percent turned out in 1980, a presidential election year.

In Houston, the election of a mayor and city council members and the controversial issue of a new convention center are expected to attract many of the 1.1 million eligible voters.

Houston voters could also have a major say in whether the Texas Constitution, which has been amended 253 times already, gets 11 morew changes.

The most publicized of the 11 proposed amendments is No. 6, which would allow the state to take money out of a person's paycheck before he receives it to make overdue child support payments.

At present, Texas is one of only two states that prohibit any form of garnishment of wages, regardless of the prupose. The other state is South Carolina.

If voters approve, up to a third of a person's earnings could be taken, on court orders, to support his children. Linda Gale White, the governor's wife, heads "Texans for Child Support," an organization backing No. 6 that boasts the statewide support of both business and labor.

Other supporters include the Citizens Committee for the Protection of Texas Families, which comprises lawyers, legislators and law professors.

Another widely discussed amendment, No. 11, would remove the governor from the prison parole process. The amendment would give the State Board of Pardons and Paroles the full authority to investigate and grant or revoke paroles and releases from prison.

However, the governor would retain some accountability by being able to appoint all six members of the new board, which would be twice as large as the current panel. At present he appoints only one to the three-member board.

The governor would retain his powers of clemency, which includes his authority to grant stays of execution as provided by the constitution.

The Legislative Budget Board has estimated the change might save the state $45 million over five years. Supporters of the amendment include the League of Women Voters of Texas.

A new wrinkle in the Texas economy would be introduced if Proposition 7 passes. It would allow the Veterans Land Board to issue $800 million more in state-guaranteed bonds to help the state's military veterans.

Up to $300 million in bonds would go to continue the current program to provide low-interest loans to veterans who use the money to purchase 10 or more acres of land.

The remaining $500 million would go for a new program, providing up to $20,000 in low-interest loans to help veterans buy their first homes. Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says the amendment is supported by the broadest based coalition he has seen — veterans organizations, lending institutions, real estate professionals and home builders.

One proposition that has drawn some opposition is No. 4, which would set up a line of succession if senators and representatives were killed, wounded, captured or missing due to an enemy attack. The Legislature already is empowered to provide for prompt and temporary replacement of other public officeholders, including local officials.

But at present, the constitution makes no provision for replacing lawmakers. If No. 4 passes, the legislative replacements would be nominated from retired and former state legislators in each district and selected by the lieutenant governor and speaker.

The league of Women Voters of Texas protested the amendment would give the governor dangerous and unprecedented powers by allowing him to call the Legislature into session somewhere other than Austin.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, a candidate for the U.S. Senate, has said "this bizarre proposal only distracts us from the need to find ways to reduce the threat of nucear war."

The Texas Municipal League has urged all cities and govenmental units to support Proposition No. 10 which would permit cities and towns to replace or relocate sewer lines on private property and then assess the property owners.

Municipalities now are barred from using public funds to improve private property. The municipal league, an association representing most incorporated cities in the state, says the amendment would let the cities do the work cheaper because the work could be bid collectively and would help homeowners because their payments would be spread over a five-year period at a low interest rate.

Proposition No. 2 would change the terms of the homestead exemption for urban home owners. Under the current law, urban homesteads are protected against foreclosure for up to $10,000. The amendment would replace the valuation by protecting urban homesteads of up to one acre. The amendment is supported by the Citizens Committee for the Protection of Texas Families who said the one-acre limit would stop frequent changes in the constitution because of increasing property values.

No. 5 would allow school districts to issue bonds guaranteed by the Permanent School Fund. Currently the $4 billion trust fund for education is invested by the state to help pay for public schools. If school districts could issue bonds guaranteed by the Public School Fund they would pay lower interest rates, say supporters, who include the League of Women Voters.

Proposition No. 8 would let city and county government give property tax exemptions to certain veterans and fraternal organizations. The legislation was aimed specifically at the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans and fraternal organizations set up for "charitable and benevolent functions."

No. 1 would let sparsely populated counties have fewer justices of peace and constables. At present all 254 counties are required to have at least four elected justices of the peace and four constables. Under the amendment, counties with less tha 18,000 could have as few as one JP and one constable.

No. 9 would allow probate judges, who generally hear only matters concerning wills and estates, to sit in probate courts in counties other than the one in which they were elected.

No. 3 would allow famers and ranchers to vote if they wanted to assess a charge against the profit on their products. This money would be used to finance marketing, research and educaton projects relating to that product. The amendment was needed because in the past the Texas Supreme Court ruled this was a form of taxation.

JFK killing: America wept, prayed

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The first dreadful flash from Dallas clattered across bell-ringing teleprinters in newsrooms across the country at 1:34 p.m., Eastern time.

The news raced to car radios and street-corner transistors, then to television.

Hardly had the startled pigeons returned to their perches in Dealey Plaza than an entire nation was plunged into mourning. For four agonizing days in late November 1963, Americans wept, prayed, shook their fists and stared at their TV sets, benumbed by the sights and sounds of the unthinkable.

Even now, 20 years later, people who have trouble remembering details of a wedding or the birth of a child can recall with remarkable clarity exactly where they were, and what they were doing, when they first heard that John F. Kennedy had been assassinated.

• • •

A man braked his car to a halt in the middle of a busy New York intersection and ran over to a sidewalk luncheonette. "Is it true?" he asked. Without looking up, the counterman replied, "Yes, he's dead." The motorist returned to his car, slumped behind the wheel and listened to the radio, oblivious to the impatient honking around him.

"My God! My God! What are we coming to?" said Speaker John McCormack, 71, the craggy Democratic warhorse from Boston who learned from two reporters in the House restaurant that he suddenly was next in line of succession to the presidency.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, flying with other Cabinet members to Tokyo for trade talks, read the flash aloud. Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges, seated nearby, began sagging to the floor. Rusk ordered the plane to turn around over the Pacific and head home.

Across the country, shoppers began weeping and praying together in the aisles of department stores. Traffic came to a halt. Courts closed in the middle of hearings. Racetracks shut down, bewildering bettors. The telephone system blacked out in Washington, D.C., under an avalanche of calls that swamped the entire area code.

Richard J. Daley, the tough mayor of Chicago, burst into tears at lunch with associates. NBC anchorman Chet Huntley went on television but was too stunned to speak.

Fourth-graders in a wealthy Dallas suburb cheered when their distraught teacher dismissed them for the day. A high school youth in Amarillo, Texas, ran into a restaurant and yelled, "Hey, great, JFK's croaked!"

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy picked up the poolside phone at his McLean, Va., home and heard the news from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. Freshman Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was presiding over the Senate when someone whispered in his ear. He quietly laid the gavel on its side and left the chamber. He called his mother, Rose, at Hyannis Port, Mass. After a pause, she said, "We'll be all right," hung up, donned her coat and walked out for a stroll alone on the beach.

A sailor weeps as the caisson bearing the body of John F. Kennedy passes him on its way to the burial site at Arlington National Cemetery.

At Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, after a Roman Catholic priest had performed the last rights for her husband in Trauma One, Jacqueline Kennedy brusquely rejected a suggestion that she wash the dried blood and brains from her pink wool skirt and stockings. "No," she said, "I want them to see what they have done."

In Chicago, a husky black construction worker on lunch break in a tavern knocked a glass of whiskey from the bar. "For God's sake," he said, and rushed out. A bartender in Harlem, pondering Lyndon B. Johnson as the new president, told a customer: "Let's see what your cracker president is going to do for you now."

"Not in Dallas!" cried Mayor Earle Cabell. Jack Ruby phoned the Dallas News to place an advertisement announcing he was closing his two small strip joints out of respect for the president, then headed for police headquarters posing as a reporter. In the bedlam there, he was never challenged.

Wall Street paid Kennedy its highest homage. A bell rang shortly after 2 p.m., ending a frenzied wave of selling and closing the New York Stock Exchange in mid-trading for the first time in 30 years. The bells at St. Patrick's Cathedral tolled somberly. "Where was his protection?" people shouted. "Damned Texans!"

Housewives came to the door sobbing when postman Fred Tracy of Greenwich, Conn., appeared with their mail. Misthopoulis Georges, a Greek-born barber in New York, said, "I feel he was a very good boy. I cry."

Colleges halted classes. Theaters, movie houses, dance halls and night clubs locked their doors. Cotillions, bingo games and football games were canceled. Thousands of people headed for churches. The lights in Manhattan's gaudy Times Square went off.

When The New York Times hit the streets that night, it contained 22 paid obituary notices lamenting the death of John F. Kennedy. More than 190 pages of retail advertising in the main section of the Times' Sunday editions were canceled.

As Air Force One flew back toward Washington, carrying the new president and the body of his predecessor, a few people gathered in the dusk at Dealey Plaza, below the Texas School Book Depository where Lee Harvey Oswald had fired his mail-order rifle. They jumped up and down on the asphalt pavement and yelled, "This is where he was shot."

In Madison, Wis., a man wearing a swastika marched around the state capitol announcing he was "celebrating" Kennedy's death as "a miracle for the white race." A youth in Birmingham, Ala., told an Atlanta radio station's call-in show that "any white man who did what he did for niggers should be shot." The announcer cut him off the air. A man shouting "They killed my man!" fired two pistol shots through the John Birch Society offices in Phoenix, Ariz. All New York City policemen were placed on alert to deal with "any unexpected reaction" to the assassination.

The office of Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, a conservative who had been highly critical of Kennedy, received a dozen threatening telephone calls. Tower sent his wife and three daughters to the Maryland suburbs to spend the night.

The Dallas police switchboard was jammed with calls, one from Sydney, Australia. Most of them, a spokesman said, "wanted to know why we killed President Kennedy." Said Mayor Cabell: "This was a maniac. It could have happened in Podunk as well as Dallas."

That night, while the autopsy was performed at Bethesda Naval Medical Center, Lyndon Johnson took a break from the hectic activity in his old vice presidential offices adjacent to the White House. He wrote brief, personal letters to the Kennedy children, Caroline and John Jr., in longhand. Afterward, he told his aides, "I wish that I could reach up and bring down a handful of stars and give them to that woman."

A thousand people gathered silently under the bare elms and beeches of Lafayette Park, facing the White House, where a bunch of chrysanthemums left by a young girl hung forlornly in the bars of the sidewalk fence.

At 4:34 a.m., John F. Kennedy returned to the White House in a coffin carried by six enlisted Marines and a junior officer. The official mourning was beginning.

• • •

On an Arlington hillside, Cardinal Richard Cushing of Boston stood at the grave overlooking the Lincoln Memorial and bade farewell to "this wonderful man, Jack Kennedy."

Texans buried two other men that day.

In Dallas, 4,000 relatives, friends and fellow police officers attended the funeral of Officer J.D. Tippitt, who was shot to death trying to arrest Oswald after the assassination.

Thirty miles away, in Rose Hill Cemetery on the eastern fringe of Fort Worth, Oswald was buried in a moleskin-covered pine box at a service arranged by the Secret Service. "We are not here to judge him, but to bury him," said the preacher.

The service was attended by Oswald's widow, Marina, and their two young daughters, his mother Marguerite and brother Robert, 100 city policemen and 40 reporters. He had no friends.

Reagan prohibits drilling in California buffer zone

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed legislation that prohibits offshore oil and gas drilling for one year along a 20-mile buffer zone on the southern California coast and limits the sale of other drilling and mining rights.

The provisions were contained in a $9 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Interior and Energy and related agencies. Deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced Saturday that the president had signed the legislation Friday.

The bill also limits the ability of the Interior secretary to sell offshore drilling rights in California, Florida and Massachusetts, as well as his authority to approve strip-mining of western coal reserves.

It also guarantees that federal wilderness areas cannot ever be drilled. However, outgoing Interior Secretary James G. Watt long ago conceded that battle to environmentalists.

Under the legislation, coal lease sales also will be restricted. The department will be unable to approve coal leases until 90 days after a federal commission finishes its review of sale procedures. The commission appointed to review whether the government was getting a fair price for its coal was the subject of the remark that drew Watt's resignation.

He said the commission included "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

The measure also prohibits the department from approving oil and gas leasing in designated wilderness areas. Although the ban also is a one-year restriction, that year overlaps the December 31 deadline set in the wilderness act of 1964 for any mineral development to start. That means the ban will be permanent.

The bill included $1.2 billion for the Energy Department.

Organizers want to make museum

DALLAS (AP) — It is a dim, dusty place now. The white-painted brick walls are pocked and chipped. The floor is battleship gray.

The only light on the empty sixth floor of old book warehouse comes through large, low romanesque windows. The only access is by several dark flights of stairs, the same ones Lee Harvey Oswald ran down in his brief flight to freedom.

But the clear view of Elm Street through the window, the corner one on the right, is the same — looking down at the spot, 250 feet away, where 20 years ago President John F. Kennedy was shot and killed as his motorcade passed by.

The Texas School Book Depository building today is officially the Dallas County Administration Building. It houses a court room and county offices on the two bottom floors.

No visitors are allowed on the four other floors. But organizers are seeking $3 million in private funds to create an exhibit on the sixth floor so the thousands of people who come to the building each year can see the perch from which, according to the Warren Commission, Oswald shot a president on Nov. 22, 1963.

The exhibit is being planned by the Dallas County Historical Foundation, a nonprofit foundation set up by the county. There will be recreations of the sniper's perch, the place near the stairs where the Italian-made, mail-order rifle used to kill Kennedy was found and the second-floor lunchroom where Oswald was seen sipping a Coke moments after the shooting.

The foundation hopes to open the museum within two years.

Visitors come to stare at the depository building almost every day. They can be seen wandering in the street below, coming, alone or by the busload, from all corners of the world.

Hinckley-led firm faces Connally-backed takeover

DALLAS (AP) — Vanderbilt Energy Corp. of Denver, headed by the father of presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr., had no response to a friendly takover offer from an oil and gas company led by former Texas Gov. John Connally.

A spokesman for Vanderbilt Energy said the company has not had time to consider the $31 million offer, made only one day after Vanderbilt announced plans to merge with a New York firm for a lesser amount.

Dallas-based Chapman Energy Inc. indicated it would pursue Vanderbilt on an hostile basis if the Hinckley family and other directors reject the stock swap.

Chapman Energy, bankrolled by wealthy Texas investors, has grown rapidly through acquisitions and energy discoveries since Connally was elected chairman of the company last January.

state

Vanderbilt Energy was founded in Dallas in 1970 by John Hinckley Sr., father of the man who attempted to assassinate Ronald Reagan, who is chairman of the company. It was moved to Colorado in 1975. Hinckley's other son, Scott, is president.

The acquisition offer was outlined in a letter sent to Vanderbilt directors Wednesday by Chapman. The letter was signed by Connally.

Vanderbilt and Chapman are relatively small firms active in oil and gas exploration and production. Vanderbilt reported revenues of $6.3 million last year. Chapman, created in 1982 from the consolidation of several smaller companies, reported $4.8 million in revenues last year.

Chapman offered to acquire Vanderbilt by exchanging Chapman stock for Vanderbilt stock in a nontaxable transaction valued at $31 million. Vanderbilt shareholders would receive the equivalent of $8.50 per share for their holdings.

The offer is intended to be more attractive than a $26 million acquisition plan announced Tuesday by Vanderbilt and Madison Fund.

Motel manager, family missing

JOHNSON CITY (AP) — Investigators are stymied by the disappearance of a couple and their daughter who vanished after leaving Tuesday on a trip to Austin.

The family of Don E. Cooper left a roast cooking in a slow-cooker in their apartent when they left Tuesday in their Mazda pickup. Cooper, a motel manager, was due back at his desk at 5:30 p.m.

Motel owner Charles Matus called Sheriff Sherman Brodbeck at 9 a.m. Wednesday to report the family missing.

Cooper, 40, told friends that he, his 24-year-old wife Penny and their daughter Erin were going to Austin, about 50 miles east of here, to run errands.

Brodbeck said he does not know if the couple ran into problems or had just decided to leave. "I don't know what to think," he said.

Brodbeck said there is no record that Cooper had been at a gunshop he planned to visit in Austin.

"The whole thing is really bizarre," said Tom Cole, a Johnson City funeral director who is a friend of the couple.

"We found out today that Penny had hugged goodbye to a woman that works at the motel, and that's unusual. They had a check coming for answering our phone for us and Penny asked us to bring it by Monday and that was unusual, too. They usually just waited until we took it over."

The Coopers moved to Johnson City from San Antonio about two years ago.

Sesquicentennial Commission OKs wagon train trip

AUSTIN (AP) — The commission in charge of Texas' sesquicentennial celebration has approved plans of the Texas Wagon Train Association to make a 2,800-mile "fun and friendship" journey through the state by wagon train.

The Texas Sesquicentennial Commission said Friday the wagons will roll out of Sulphur Springs on Jan. 2, 1986, as part of the celebration of Texas' 150th anniversary of independence from Mexico.

The trains will travel to Austin, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, Midland, Odessa, Amarillo, Abilene, Wichita Falls, and will arrive in Fort Worth on July 3, 1986.

"We have reached the point in time when we as Texans, and as Americans, no longer have with us the many people who came by wagons to settle the West," said Jan France, executive director of the Wagon Train Association. "As this historical event takes place in 1986, we will have achieved a living exhibit of our western heritage."

Child pornographers can destroy childhood

The child trusts him. He buys the child candy takes the child to movies, gives the child his time when no one else will. He is the child's special friend.

The child does not want to lose his friend. The child will do anything to keep him. Besides, he is a grown-up; he knows what is right and what is wrong.

Child pornographers can destroy precious moments of childhood. When a camera is held by a pornographer, the child will be haunted by the exprience for the remainder of his life.

According to the Texas Department of Human Resources, studies show that a majority of those who are sexually abused as children will become child molesters as adults. The wreckage of the life of a sexually abused child is devastating and society pays the price.

Anyone from a stranger to a close friend or family member can be a sexual abuser of children. The Crime Stoppers Advisory Council for the month of November is concentrating its efforts on the prevention and apprehension of child pornographers in Texas.

tion and apprehension of child pornographers in Texas.

Parents, family members and friends are encouraged to become informed on ways to prevent children from becoming involved with child pornographers and sexual abusers, and learn to recognize the symptoms of a child under a pornographer's influence.

Persons with information on child pornographers are asked to call their local Crime Stoppers program or the toll-free Texas Crime Stopper's hotline at 1-800-252-TIPS anytime, day or night.

Cash rewards are available for information leading to the arrest and felony indictment of criminals in Texas. Citizens are not asked their names and will be given a unique code unmber of reward purposes.

Child pornographers and other sexual abusers of children can be stopped but only with the help of informed citizens.

Kidney dialysis patient's family seeks additional damages

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for the family of a woman who died while undergoing kidney dialysis are seeking an additional $1 million in punitive damages from the manufacturer of a malfunctioning machine.

A complaint filed in federal court Friday amended a suit filed earlier in the week by the daughter and mother of Jeroline Thompson. The original suit sought $1 million in damages from Extracorporeal Inc., which made the dialysis machine; National Medical Care, owner of the Dallas Kidney Disease Center; and the center's operators, Bio-Medical Applications of Dallas Inc.

The court filing Friday seeks an additional $1 million from Extracorporeal, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson.

Mrs. Thompson and two others died Oct. 28 when a backup heater of the dialysis machine kicked on while the regular heater was operating, raising the temperature of the patients' blood to levels that caused heart attacks.

After planted story, abducted baby found

FORT WORTH (AP) — After Cherie Ann Kennedy was abducted last May, FBI agents asked the news media for help in locating the 7-week-old baby by running a story saying she needed a special formula, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Saturday.

The infant, now 7 months old, was reunited with her parents Friday night. A Fort Worth woman who was arrested in El Paso has been charged with kidnapping in the case.

On May 17, FBI agents and John Peter Smith Hospital personnel conducted a news conference at which a physician said the girl had a metabolic condition requiring a special formula, Pregestimil. The formula is available at only a few local pharmacies.

Dr. John Menchaca, head of the hospital's pediatric outpatient clinic, said the condition could cause mental retardation if the child did not take the proper formula.

Menchaca and FBI agents knew at the time that Cherie Ann had no such problem.

At the end of the news conference, hospital and FBI officials told reporters that the story was false, the Star-Telegram reported. FBI agents asked newspapers and radio and television stations to distribute the story in an effort to find the child.

Linda Gomeza is a suspect in the abducation of Cherie Ann Kennedy from a Fort Worth hospital.

Several area news organizations, including the Star-Telegram, agreed to run the story, the newspaper said.

Jackson calls for presidential campaign aimed at America's disadvantaged

CHICAGO (AP) — In a homecoming speech to a cheering crowd, the Rev. Jesse Jackson pledged Saturday to "stand on reservations, in ghettos, in housing projects" to bring his presidential campaign to America's disadvantaged.

Jesse Jackson

The civil rights leader called on other Democratic candidates to recognize the needs of America's "locked-out" people, and said his campaign would motivate thousands of the "downtrodden" to aspire for higher public office.

The Democratic Party should do "not what is politic or popular, but what is right," Jackson told an overflowing audience of more than 1,500 in the South Side headquarters of his civil rights group, Operation PUSH.

"This campaign is not about a show horse making it across the finish line first and getting a gold medal — it's about a work horse pulling across a wagon first," said Jackson, speaking for the first time to a hometown audience since he became the eighth officially announced candidate for the Democratic nomination last week. He is seeking to become the first black nominated for president by a major political party.

"Amidst much chaos, confusion and despair, I sense we have arrived at a special moment in history ...," said Jackson, a Baptist minister and former top aide to the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. "We are going to take our campaign down below to the underclasses ... the people with no heat in the winter time.

"We shall stand on (Indian) reservations, in ghettos, in the housing projects ... and challenge the press, the (Democratic) politicians to come down to the people!" he shouted, gesturing fiercely.

> "We shall stand on (Indian) reservations, in ghettos, in the housing projects ... and challenge the press, the (Democratic) politicians to come down to the people!"
>
> Jesse Jackson
> • Democratic presidential candidate

The mostly black audience in the old auditorium rose often to cheer and applaud, some shouting "Right on!"

"I present myself not as a perfect servant but as a public servant — representation for the unemployed and hope for the downtrodden," said Jackson, who has never before run for public office.

He again called on whites, blacks, Hispanics, other minorities and women to join his "rainbow coalition."

"We're not talking here about one man running for higher office, we're talking about 10,000 running for all offices," including sheriff, governor and mayor, said Jackson.

Scorning reports of an improving U.S. economy, Jackson said unemployment had risen by 4 million and welfare cases by 3 million since President Reagan took office in January 1981.

Jackson said more Americans are living in poverty than at any time since 1965, but "there are more millionaires than ever. There must be a change. We must go another way."

Chrysler strike continues

TWINSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Despite earlier optimism, a union negotiator on Saturday held out little hope of quickly settling a strike by 3,200 workers that has idled 20,000 other Chrysler Corp. employees nationwide and threatened the company's new prosperity.

"We're not getting closer, we're getting further apart," Bob Weissman, President of Local 122 of the United Auto Workers, said of Saturday's marathon negotiations.

Chrysler spokesmen have declined to characterize the talks, which began Friday morning.

Workers at Chrysler's Twinsburg stamping plant walked out Tuesday, alleging forced overtime and poor working conditions. Because the parts made at the plant are crucial to auto production, other plants in four states and Canada shut down in a chain reaction.

At 5 a.m. Saturday, Weissman said an agreement was expected "within hours," but at 7:30 a.m. a minor snag prompted negotiators to take a breakfast break of a few hours. About 10 a.m., Weissman said: "This has taken such a crazy turn. If we make it by noon, we're lucky." No agreement had been reached four hours later.

Local 122 Financial Secretary Paul Jeunette said two issues were dividing the negotiators.

Another union official who asked not to be identified said the two issues were union demands for only licensed crane operators to work at the plant and for enough janitors to clean up hazardous oil spills from machinery.

"We've been waiting six hours for a tentative agreement, and we might not wait any more," Jeunette said shortly after noon Saturday.

James McCarthy, personnel manager at Chrysler's plant in Dayton, Ohio, which produces air conditioners and heaters, said a planned layoff of 600 workers set for Monday because of the Twinsburg strike was temporarily put on hold as negotiations progressed, although he was prepared to issue the layoff order if necessary.

Because of earlier optimism, the UAW scheduled a ratification meeting for 11 a.m. Sunday at Cuyahoga Falls, an Akron suburb near the Twinsburg stamping plant.

Since the Twinsburg plant produces all the front doors and most of the steel underbodies for Chrysler cars, the strike caused parts shortages leading to shutdowns at other Chrysler plants.

WHY DO 67,800 TEXAS SINGLE-PARENT FAMILIES GO ON THE WELFARE ROLLS EACH YEAR?

The main reason is lack of child support from an absent parent. In Texas 71% of the welfare recipients qualify for welfare because one parent is absent and not paying support.

HOW WILL TAXPAYERS BE AFFECTED BY THE CHANGE?

For every 10% effectiveness, $10 million in state and federal taxes will be saved. The predicted average effective rate is 40% for a tax savings of $40 million. This is solely the result of a reduction in welfare payments. Other benefits include easing of crowded court dockets by avoiding repetitious contempt suits and employees' avoiding loss of time on the job due to court proceeding.

Thirty Years of Service and Over $300 Million Strong

Bodies of Marines continue to arrive at Air Force base

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The bodies of 29 Marines killed in a terrorist bombing in Beirut arrived here early Saturday and were honored at a military ceremony, a week after the first shipment of the dead arrived.

"The men we honor here today, this morning, are today's patriots, today's heroes," Navy Rear Adm. David L. Harlow said at the service. "The men who have died in support of peace, they are special men who are members of an honorable profession ... in service to their country, in service to their fellow man."

Marine Brig. Gen. J.R. Dailey told grieving family members and friends at the service that the Marines "condemned the cowardly act" on Oct. 23 in which more than 200 U.S. servicemen were killed by a terrorist bomb at a Marine headquarters building in Beirut.

He said the Marines wanted to be of help to the families and at the same time, be determined "that these Marines have not died needlessly."

The bodies arrived at 3 a.m., bringing the total number of bodies from Beirut to 180 that have been brought to the base. The bodies of 14 servicemen killed in Grenada have also been brought to the base.

All of the victims have been honored in military ceremonies.

The bodies were being prepared at the base mortuary, the largest such facility on the East Coast, then transferred to their hometowns.

Buono convicted of second murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Angelo Buono Jr. was convicted Saturday of a second murder in the 10 Hillside Strangler slayings, making him eligible for the death penalty.

The jurors' verdict in the death of 15-year-old Judith Lynn Miller was the third in a week after a trial lasting almost two years. Last week Buono was convicted in one other slaying and found innocent in another.

By being convicted of multiple murders, Buono, 50, a former auto upholsterer, becomes eligible for the gas chamber.

Buono was accused of killing 10 young women and girls in the Hillside Strangler slayings in the Los Angeles area during late 1977 and early 1978.

Buono sat impassively as the clerk read the verdict and polled the jury.

Deputy Attorney General Roger Boren said he was "very gratified that (the jury) agreed that Angelo Buono was one of the murders of Judy Miller."

He noted that in the Miller death, "There were no links to Kenneth Bianchi," Buono's adoptive cousin who pleaded guilty to five of the slayings and two in Washington state and turned witness in the case to escape the death penalty for a life prison sentence.

Bianchi's contradictory testimony has been attacked as unreliable by defense attorneys.

Evidence linking Miss Miller to Buono was "very, very strong," and included a fiber found on her eye and the location of the body, Boren said.

"The fiber was polyester fiber that was found on her eye. And it was stuck to her eye and it matched very exactly a roll of fiber material found in Angelo Buono's (upholstery) shop," he said.

"As to the physical manifestations on Judy Miller's body, the marks that were on her wrist and ankles compare quite closely to those marks found on Lauren Wagner (another victim). The only difference was that Lauren Wagner had also been electrocuted."

"I'm disappointed, extremely disappointed," said defense attorney Gerald Chaleff.

"No lawyer or person likes the prospect of facing the death penalty," he said."I've always considered this and Lauren Wagner the two strongest counts."

Jurors resumed deliberations on the seven other slayings after Superior Court Judge Ronald George told them to fill out a declaration which makes the death penalty possible, a duty which they had forgotten before delivering the verdict.

The jury has been deliberating six days a week since it received the case Oct. 20. The trial, which began Nov. 16, 1981, is the longest in California history and possibly nationwide.

Miss Miller was a runaway who worked in Hollywood as a prostitute. She was picked up outside Carney's Diner on Sunset Boulevard early on the morning of Oct. 31, 1977, testimony showed.

Raped and sodomized, her body was found the same day dumped in a flower bed outside a home in La Crescenta, about 13 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

On Thursday, the jurors found Buono innocent of killing Yolanda Washington, 19, a waitress and prostitute. Three days earlier the panel found Buono guilty of murdering business college student Lauren Rae Wagner, 18.

The string of killings six years ago terrorized Los Angeles. Some of the victims were prostitutes solicited by telephone; others included an aspiring actress, students and hitchhikers who wre picked up by men posing as police officers.

Gay father given joint custody

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — The homosexual father of a 9-year-old girl has been allowed joint custody of the child, provided he does not share a bedroom or a bed with his male friend while the girl lives with him, a judge says.

Fairfax County Circuit Judge Richard J. Jamborsky noted the case was difficult because of the 32-year-old father's acknowledged homosexuality and the fact that his male friend lives in the house. But the judge found "no competent evidence that the father's conduct has had an adverse impact on the child."

Jamborsky's ruling granted the mother joint custody with the father, who had had sole custody for five years. The child will live with her father during the school year and with her mother in the summer.

The August ruling had been ordered sealed by Jamborsky, but the Washington Post reported Saturday the judge made his written decision available on the condition that names not be disclosed.

Condor program to continue

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A state panel has allowed the continuation of a breeding program aimed at saving the California condor.

The permit allows the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to take condor eggs in the wild and hatch them in captivity with the idea of eventually replenishing the condor population in the wild. The permit was approved by the California Fish and Game Commission on Friday during a public hearing here.

The California condor, North America's largest bird, roams a 50,000-square-mile range in a rugged mountain area about 100 miles north of Los Angeles. Biologists say only 20 of the huge scavengers are left in the wild, with four known breeding pairs.

City releases 300 inmates

NEW YORK (AP) — The city has released more than 300 inmates, cutting its prisoner population to less than 10,000 in an effort to meet a federal judge's order against jail overcrowding.

Correction Department spoksman Edward Hershey said the number of inmates in city jails was cut to 9,973 on Friday as the number of prisoners released last week reached 307.

All those released had been held on bail of $1,500 or less and were able to post 10 percent of their bail in cash, Hershey said.

The city was allowed to deny release to prisoners accused of murder, attempted murder, manslaughter, attempted manslaughter or serious sex crimes, even if their bails were $1,500 or less.

Wallace flies resident to funeral

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace has flown Omaha resident Julian Walker 850 miles so he can attend the funeral of his son, one of the more than 200 Marines killed in Beirut.

Walker's son, Marine Lance Cpl. Leonard Walker of Dothan, Ala., was killed in the bombing of the Marine Corps headquarters Oct. 23.

Julian Walker and his wife, Martha, were flown from Omaha to Dothan Friday evening on the governer's plane. The 22-year-old Marine, Walker's son by a previous marriage, will be buried there Sunday.

Walker and his son's mother, Celia Johnson, are divorced. Walker said Wallace also flew one of his son's sisters and an aunt from Virginia for the funeral.

Walker, a retired Air Force major, said of U.S. involvement in Lebanon: "I just hope and pray we're doing the right thing."

Seven-year-old saves sister

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A 7-year-old boy who said "I love my baby sister" carried the 17-month-old girl to safety when his home began filling with smoke.

"I didn't want her to get hurt or choked," said Jay Wilson, a 60-pounder who stands 4½ feet tall.

The incident occurred Wednesday night at the suburban Richmond home of Anthony B. Harry and his wife, Martha Winston, Jay's stepfather and mother. Smoke began to fill the home when the fireplace damper accidentally closed, Ms. Winston said.

"I was so panicky," she said. "I started to choke and cough and I was trying to open the windows. That's when I realized my son was outside with his little sister," Meredith.

Firefighters opened the damper when they arrived on the scene, and the house wasn't damaged. Harry was at school training to be a firefighter at the time.

Flynt outrages, tantalizes media

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the five years since Larry Flynt was shot on a Georgia street, the self-described "smut peddler" weathered pain, paralysis and drug addiction and has emerged as an outrageous, headline-grabbing salesman — of himself.

"When it comes to politics and dealing with the media, I don't need a public relations man because I'm my own PR man," Flynt says.

And Flynt, confined to a gold-plated wheelchair behind the guarded and electrified gates of his huge Bel-Air mansion, has proved his point the last two weeks.

Reporters and camera crews eager for news on John Z. De Lorean's cocaine-trafficking trial beat a path to the home of the Hustler magazine publisher only to hear a barrage of outrageous statements, obscenities and innuendoes.

On Friday, Flynt wore a T-shirt with an obscenity printed on it because he didn't want television cameras to focus on him.

"I have no interest whatsoever in John De Lorean," Flynt insisted while releasing explosive material that aborted the scheduled start of the automaker's trial.

A furious prosecutor denounced Flynt as the "personification of reasonable doubt," and suggested his claims should be approached "with measured tread and long tongs."

The 40-year-old Flynt propelled himself into the De Lorean court battle two weeks ago, revealing he had released the secret De Lorean FBI videotapes to CBS-TV and its Los Angeles station, KNXT.

Then, as publicity on that was waning, he summoned the press and played an audio tape that was claimed to show De Lorean was threatened by a government informer.

Meanwhile, Flynt continues to claim he has the so-called Vicki Morgan sex tapes, allegedly showing politically powerful men in compromising positions.

Amid the hubbub surrounding these events, Flynt is promoting his run for the presidency of the United States.

"I love it," he said. "I'm their worst dream come true — a fabulously wealthy pornographer with the courage and the will to spend every last dime to beat them at their own game."

"Just call me Mr. Smut Peddler," Flynt said.

SLA remembered 10 years later

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They cheered their high school football teams. They fought in Vietnam. They helped rehabilitate convicts. They seemed like All-American kids, the sons and daughters of merchants, ministers and military men.

But in the fall of 1973, these children of the middle class formed the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) and declared war on the United States in the name of "the people." They assassinated a black educator. They kidnapped Patty Hearst. They robbed banks.

The rise of the SLA began with the Nov. 6, 1973, ambush of Marcus Foster, first black superintendent of the Oakland Unified School District. The fall came Sept. 18, 1975, after the largest manhunt in FBI history led to the arrest of the two active "soldiers" and Miss Hearst, a captive turned comrade.

The SLA had been formed weeks earlier in Berkeley by Donald DeFreeze, a prison escapee fascinated by guns and revolution. Calling himself Cinque, DeFreeze was a black leader of young white followers. Several "soldiers" had worked as volunteers at a state prison in Vacaville, where DeFreeze had formed a state-sanctioned group for fellow inmates.

AP Laserphoto

In February 1974, the SLA kidnapped Patty Hearst, 19-year-old daughter of millionaire publisher Randolph Hearst, from the Berkeley apartment she shared with fiance Steven Weed.

In the weeks that followed, Miss Hearst, blindfolded and locked in a closet, listened to news reports of her abduction. It was thought the SLA would ask for the release of Little and Remiro as ransom.

Ms. Hearst shocked observers when she adopted the name Tania, after a woman who had fought in Cuba with Che Guevara, the Argentine-born revolutionary, and renounced her father as a "pig."

On April 15 — 2½ months after her abduction — an armed Patty Hearst helped the SLA "expropriate" $10,960 from a San Francisco bank. Two passersby were wounded. Another communique followed.

Ms. Hearst surfaced again on May 16, when SLA members Bill and Emily Harris were caught shoplifting in a Los Angeles sporting goods store.

On Sept. 18, 1975, the FBI caught the Harrises jogging outside a San Francisco apartment and arrested Patty Hearst in another, along with federal fugitive Wendy Yoshimura.

The Harrises were freed from prison last spring and now work in the San Francisco Bay area. Attorney Stuart Hanlon, who also represents Little and Remiro, says all former SLA figures want to leave the past behind, and none consented to an interview, including Miss Hearst.

Jet down; Two Marines dead

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — A Marine F-4S Phantom jet went down at sea about 16 miles southeast of New River, N.C., killing two crew members, a Marine spokesman said.

Search crews recovered the bodies of the two Marine Fighter Attack Squadron 115 crew members Friday afternoon, said Capt. Jeff Cardeilhac of the Marine Corps Air Station-Beaufort, where the squadron is based.

The crew members were Major David G. Buell, 36, of Arlington, Va., pilot and executive officer of the squadron, and Air Force exchange officer Capt. Donald Spearel of Clearwater, Fla.

The aircraft left the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, N.C., at 8:45 a.m. with four other aircraft and was scheduled to participate in a simulated close air support mission at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Care for the dead can't cover up horror of life in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — At the Islamic hospital in Tripoli, medics carry the dead from the PLO fighting, wrapped in blankets, and pile them atop chunks of ice, their battered faces exposed.

U.S. Marines were more scrupulous with their men killed by a suicide bomber. First they laid them out in rows, covering them with blankets so that only their bare feet were visible. Then they zipped each one into a green, nylon body bag.

Care for the dead, however, cannot reduce the horror of death — an sometimes life — in Lebanon.

Murder is committed here by almost every conceivable means, for reasons often unfathomable.

It started long ago. It is said that 20,000 Christians were massacred by Druse in their struggle for power in the Chouf mountains in the 1860s.

An estimated 60,000 people died in the 19-month civil war in 1975-76. In 1981, a relatively quiet year in Lebanon's recent history, police estimated the death toll from fighting and car bombings at 2,379.

Police claim almost 20,000 people died in Israel's invasion of Lebanon last year. That does not include the hundreds of Palestinians massacred by Christian militiamen in the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps Sept. 16-18, 1982.

The toll for the latest round of civil war, which began in August, has been put at more than 800 by police. A cease-fire slowed the hostilities with a Sept. 26 truce, but it has been broken repeatedly. Snipers shot two Lebanese soldiers dead only hours after the warring parties decreed the cease-fire.

Then came Oct. 23 — at least 230 American Marines and 58 French troops were killed in twin truck bombings by suicide terrorists. Two weeks later, another terrorist truck-bombed an Israeli army post, reportedly killing 28 Israelis and 32 Lebanese.

The Israelis retaliated by bombing Syrian and Palestinian positions in Lebanon, and Lebanese radio reports said 60 people were killed.

While the Israelis died in the explosion in Tyre, Palestinian guerrillas fought each other in northern Lebanon with their shells falling on civilians, too, both in the Palestinian refugee camps outside Tripoli and in the city itself. More than 240 have been reported killed in three days.

All this death occurs in a country smaller than Connecticut with a population estimated at 4 million.

Hardly anyone in Lebanon remains untouched by violent death.

A taxi driver picked up a newspaper last week and read that his aunt had been shot by Shiite militiamen in the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon. A weeping woman telephoned her husband at his office, telling him a sniper bullet killed their neighbor as he sat in his suburban Beirut apartment.

Most of Lebanon's warring leaders who went to Geneva in attempts to make peace have survived assassination attempts or witnessed relatives cut down by bullets or bombs.

Walid Jumblatt, the leftist Druse leader, was wounded in a car-bomb attempt on his life last December. His father was assassinated in a hail of machine-gun bullets in 1977. His grandfather also was shot to death.

Talks 'psychological breakthrough'

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Lebanese leaders scored a psychological breakthrough by managing to convene their reconciliation talks, but they left Geneva without agreement on a formula for the withdrawal of Israeli forces.

During five days of often heated meetings, which ended Friday, the Lebanese government and the various factions did narrow their differences on the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal pact.

The Lebanese government and its supporters agreed that the U.S.-mediated pact posed enormous political problems for President Amin Gemayel's administration.

Pro-Syrian delegates, including former Christian President Suleiman Franjieh and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, accepted the idea that some agreement with the Israelis must be found if Lebanon is ever to be free of foreign occupation.

Unless some formula is found, prospects seen bleak for bringing peace to Lebanon and allowing the U.S. Marines and other members of the multinational peacekeeping force to withdraw.

Khomeini wants Israel set on fire

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said Saturday he would like to set Israel on fire, but Iran had nothing to do with the terrorist bombings against Israeli, American and French forces in Lebanon.

Truck bombs killed 230 U.S. military personnel and 58 French troops in Beirut Oct. 23, and 28 Israeli soldiers and 32 Lebanese prisoners in Tyre Friday. Both the Americans and the Israelis suggested pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem groups were to blame, and one, calling itself Islamic Holy War, claimed responsibility for all three blasts.

Tehran Radio quoted Khomeini as saying, "Today they blame Iran for any explosion which takes place anywhere in the world and say: 'We possess some evidence that the issue is connected with Iran, and the best proof is that there have been explosions in Iran.'

"What kind of an argument is this? What has it got to do with us when the people are against Israel. Of course we would like the whole of Israel to be set on fire, and with God's help we will go and will free the people from the evil of Israel. However, this does not mean that we carried out the explosion there."

Tehran Radio said Khomeini made the remarks to members of the Internal and Foreign Affairs Committees of Iran's Parliament.

Meanwhile, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iraqi missiles killed 30 Iranians and wounded 160 in attacks.

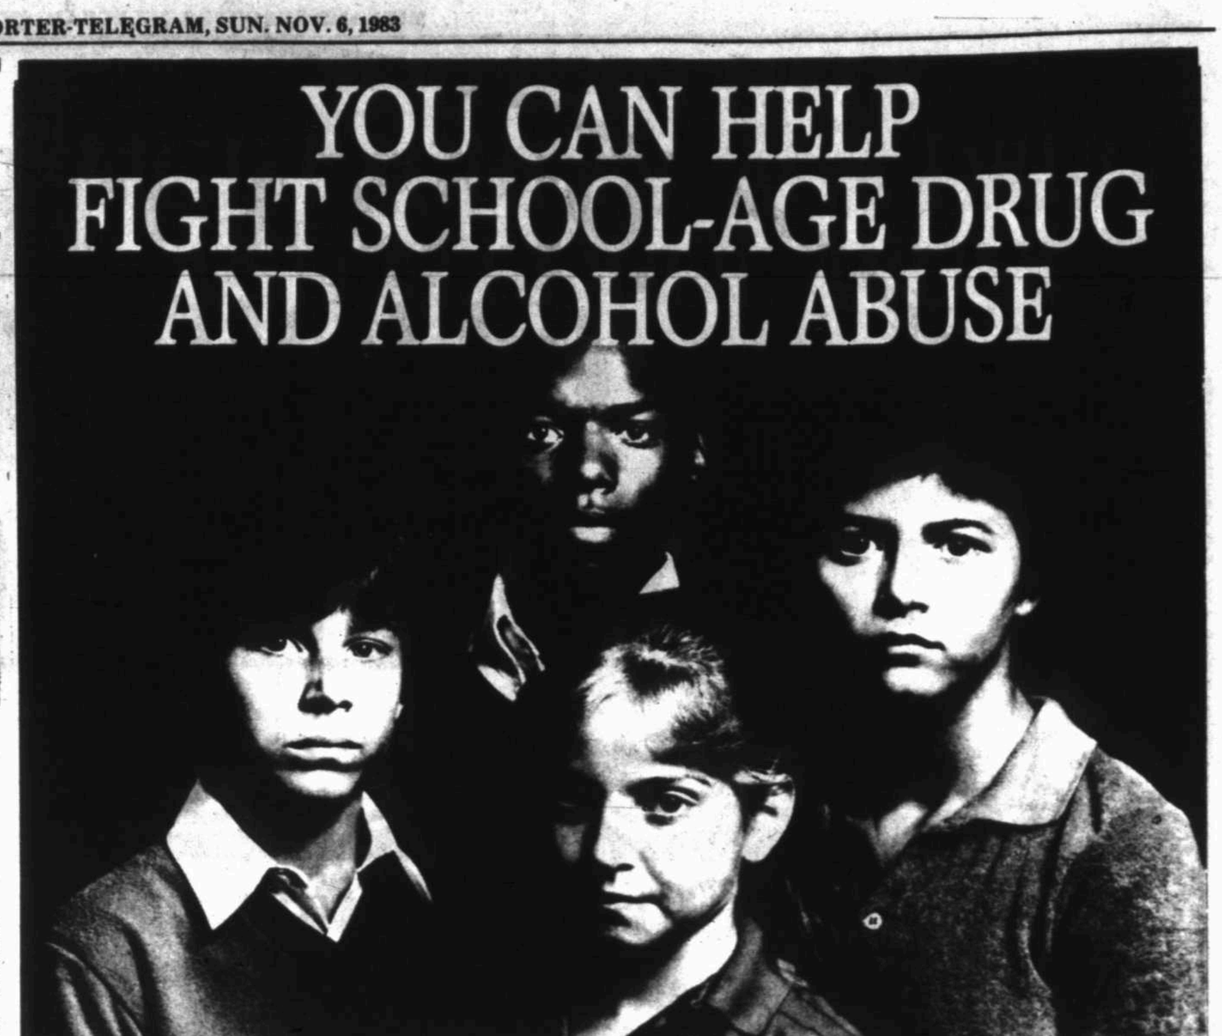
YOU CAN HELP FIGHT SCHOOL-AGE DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE



WATCH THE CHEMICAL PEOPLE, NOVEMBER 2 AND 9
On KERA/Channel 13 8PM

THE CHEMICAL PEOPLE

THE WHITE HOUSE

Welcome to The Chemical People project. Your willingness to participate locally is the very heart of this landmark project. We need to bring together parents, teachers, professionals and other key citizens to combat the terrible problem of drug and alcohol use among our school-age children. Having visited drug abuse treatment and prevention programs across the country, I am convinced it is a problem we cannot ignore.

Two PBS network programs and your local public television station serve as the media focus for The Chemical People. But your commitment is the project's most important element. Your help in creating community groups to fight the drug problem so prevalent in our schools, neighborhoods, and even our homes, will make all the difference.

I believe The Chemical People represents one of the most innovative drug awareness programs to be found. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for getting involved and demonstrating your concern for our precious children. You have my best wishes for success.

Sincerely,
Nancy Reagan

U.S. envoy arrives in El Salvador

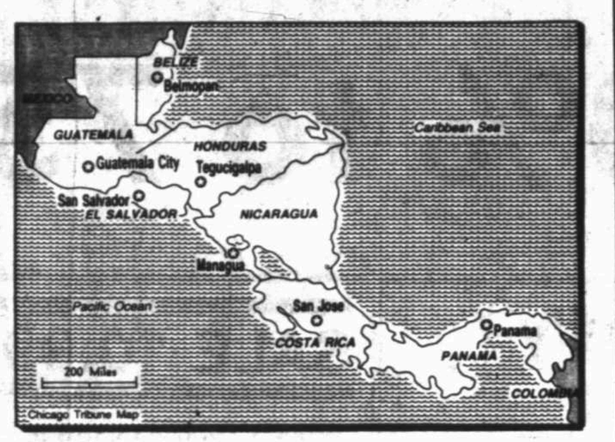
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Washington's special envoy for Central America, Richard Stone, went to war-torn El Salvador Saturday to continue the Reagan administration's peace efforts in the turbulent region.

Stone arrived shortly after 9:00 a.m. from Costa Rica and immediately drove off for meetings with Salvadoran officials. A U.S. Embassy spokeman said Stone would meet with President Alvaro Magana and other leaders.

Elsewhere in Central America, unidentified gunmen in a speeding car fired on the residence of U.S. Ambassador Frederic L. Chapin in Guatemala City, but no one was hurt. Also, security forces in El Salvador released the father of Auxiliary Bishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez.

Stone is on a tour of Central America — his fourth since his appointment in May — to discuss a peace plan for the region proposed by Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama, which make up the Contadora group.

The Contadora plan calls for demilitarization of Central America. It would bar military advisers and prohibit outside support for insurgencies in the region.



THE UNITED STATES, which is aiding rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, accuses the Sandinista regime in Managua of funneling Cuban and Soviet weapons to Marxist rebels in El Salvador.

Stone met Friday night for two hours with Foreign Minister Fernando Volio after arriving here from Guatemala.

He called the Contadora effort "an important step" toward restoring peace in the region.

Stone said in Guatemala City on Friday that his talks with Guatemala's chief of state included "concrete steps and procedures to achieve democracy in Central America."

Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores, who seized power from Gen. Efrain Rios Montt in an Aug. 8 coup, has promised elections for a constituent assembly next July.

Stone has not said if he will visit Managua to meet with Sandinista leaders.

Guatemalan Foreign Minister Fernando Andrade announced after meeting with Stone that the Contadora foreign ministers will meet in Washington on Nov. 14. The meeting will coincide with a meeting of the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States. The ministers had been planning to gather Nov. 17-19 in Panama City.

IN GUATEMALA CITY, an embassy spokesman said the U.S. ambassador had been out of the country for a week when his residence was shot at Friday.

"They opened fire on the ambassador's residence from a speeding vehicle, but the bullets hit the wall of a nearby house," he said.

The spokesman said the gunmen fired at least five shots at the residence. He said guards returned the fire but apparently did not hit the car.

The residence is located on the south side of the city in an area known as Santa Clara. It is surrounded by a nine-foot high brick wall.

In San Salvador, Hernan Rosa Chavez, a brother of the auxiliary bishop, said authorities released their father, Mercedes Salome Rosa, Friday after he was held overnight at military barracks near his hometown of Sociedad, 106 miles east of San Salvador.

He said he didn't have "the slightest idea" why his father was detained.

Three days before the father was arrested, a rightist death squad warned Rosa Chavez and Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas they would be "drastically punished" if they continued to speak out against human rights violations.

U.S. ends search for jet's wreckage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department said Saturday it has ended its unsuccessful, $22.4 million search for the wreckage and flight recorders of a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet shot down Sept. 1 by the Soviet Union.

The two-month search in the Sea of Japan "has been completed," the Pentagon said in a statement. "U.S. units found no wreckage or signs of wreckage," it added.

Officials said the cost of the search was estimated at $22.4 million.

The KAL Boeing 747 was shot down by a Soviet fighter jet near Sakhalin Island after it strayed into Soviet airspace. The 269 people aboard the plane were killed, including 61 Americans.

The military began searching for the wreckage, particularly the flight recorders, the day the aircraft was downed. U.S. officials had hoped the recorders, containing tape recordings of the crew's conversation and other flight information, could shed some light on why the aircraft veered off-course on a flight from New York to Seoul.

U.S. Navy ships, Japanese salvage ships under contract to the Navy, a U.S. Coast Guard cutter and U.S. Navy and Air Force planes participated in the search, the Pentagon said.

The initial air search covered 3,000 square miles and the surface ship search covered more than 150 square miles, the Pentagon said. More than 3,000 hours were flown and more than 320 ship days steamed during the search.

Turkish election may hang on endorsement

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

An Analysis

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A last-minute party endorsement by Turkey's military leader could be decisive in parliamentary elections today that are intended to return Turkey to civilian rule.

The three parties permitted by the military to run for the 400-seat Parliament wound up low-key campaigns Saturday with rallies in major cities and sound trucks blaring through the streets.

President Kenan Evren, the general who led the 1980 military coup, went on national radio and television Friday night and threw his support to the law-and-order Nationalist Democracy Party led by retired Gen. Turgut Sunalp.

He also used the occasion to attack Turgut Ozal, whose free-enterprise Motherland Party has been running ahead of the Nationalist Democracy Party in unofficial polls.

The third party in the race is the moderate leftist Populist Party led by Necdet Calp, a former high-level civil servant.

The military, which has intervened three times in Turkish politics since 1960, holds extraordinarily high prestige among the population. The Turks widely supported the 1980 takeover that ended terrorist warfare.

A year ago Evren campaigned heavily for a new constitution as part of a return for democracy and the document was approved by 91 percent of the voters in a referendum. The same vote elected Evren as president for a single, seven-year term.

Evren sharply criticized Ozal who, as the military-appointed deputy premier in charge of the economy for two years until his resignation in July 1982, was credited with bringing inflation down from 130 percent to under 30 percent and rescuing Turkey from bankruptcy.

Now a large Ozal vote could be viewed as a protest against continued military interference in Turkish politics.

Evren warned not to believe "sweet promises" that only one man could solve Turkey's economic ills.

While praising parliamentary democracy as the best form of government, Evren also addressed himself to "our European friends." These have criticized Turkey's human rights records under the military dictatorship as well as the election procedure in which the military rejected more than 500 potential candidates and 12 of 15 political parties.

Evren said there is no single form of parliamentary democracy and, so, "to each his own."

A total of 1,217 candidates are running in Sunday's race.

Voters mark an "X" on the paper ballots over the party symbols — a rooster for Nationalist Democracy, a bee for the Motherland Party and the sun for the Populist Party — fold the ballot and place it in an envelope.

Gas station blast kills one, injures five

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — An explosion early Saturday blew a concrete roof off a Texaco gas station, killing the owner and injuring five people, police said.

Firemen were able to keep a blaze in the shattered office from spreading to a fuel truck that was filling underground tanks at the time of the explosion.

The explosion, which occurred at about 7:15 a.m. CST, was felt several blocks away and debris was strewn along two main avenues in the San Juan business district.

Sgt. Jose Guevara identified the dead man as Froilan Bajos Vazquez, 52, who was inside the office when the explosion occurred.

Police said the driver of the gasoline tanker and four motorists suffered cuts and bruises from flying glass and debris.

Blast levels garage

BRADFORD, England (AP) — An explosion ripped apart a gas station in the center of this north England city Saturday, killing two people, injuring at least nine others and burying a number of victims in the rubble, police said.

The explosion leveled the garage, hurled metal and stone through the windows of neighboring buildings and sent passers-by diving for cover.

Officials on the scene said initial indications were that the blast was caused by a leak in natural-gas containers in the garage.

Japanese watch Soviets

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union last month conducted military exercises on Akiyuri, a Japanese-claimed island in the Habomai group off Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido, Kyodo News Service reported Saturday.

Kyodo said Japanese observed for the first time from Nosappu in eastern Hokkaido on Oct. 14 about 20 Soviet soldiers and four horses on Akiyuri, and about 35 soldiers armed with rifles crawling about the island Oct. 31. Akiyuri, which is eight miles northeast of Nosappu, is part of Habomais, one of four islands occupied by the Soviets since the end of World War II. Japan claims the islands.

Soviets to aid Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Soviet Union will continue to help Vietnam with oil and gas exploration off its southern continental shelf under a long-term cooperation agreement signed Oct. 31, Radio Hanoi said Saturday.

Under the agreement, the two countries will expand their exchange of goods and cooperation in joint enterprises, the official radio said in a broadcast monitored here.

The Soviets will continue training Vietnamese in various fields and help advance science and technology in Vietnam. Under the new pact the Soviets will supply Vietnam with agricultural machines and equipment, the radio said.

Journalists brave U.S. military to get to Grenada

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press Writer Richard T. Pienciak and AP Photographer Doug Jennings were among nine journalists who tried to get to Grenada by sea when reporters were still barred from the island.

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK

UNION ISLAND, The Grenadines (AP) — These have been boom times for Caribbean drug smugglers and rum runners. Their cargo, however, hasn't been dope or liquor, but journalists paying thousands of dollars to get to Grenada by sea.

In tiny rowboats equipped with balky outboard motors, or in handsome yachts, reporters hopped from island to island — St. Vincent, Mustique, Carriacou and Union — repeatedly looking for some sure way to Grenada.

They came from France, West Germany, England, Canada and the United States. They crossed paths again and again, cut off from the rest of the world because of faulty telephones or no phones at all.

And until they heard the crackling radio reports, they had no way to know that several hundred colleagues were already on Grenada getting interviews and writing stories, thanks to free transportation from U.S. planes on Barbados.

But even after they learned of their colleagues' good fortune last week, they pressed on, partly because of pride, partly because of considerable outlay of their bosses' money, but mostly because by then they were only hours from Grenada but still days by boat from any island with facilities offering flights back to Barbados.

Their craft were yachts or fishing boats; some reporters blacked their faces with burnt cork or shoe polish so they might be taken for local fishermen. Their obstacles were U.S. helicopters, frigates, destroyers, F-14 fighter jets and radar.

Several reporters were thrown off the private resort island of Petit St. Vincent, where the assistant manager told them he didn't care that their boat was almost out of gas and said, when the reporters asked to see a government official, "I am the government."

These trips to Grenada introduced a novel cost formula that any tourist would appreciate — it cost twice as much to go one way as round trip.

For example, a fisherman or smuggler who successfully landed a reporter on Grenada received $1,000. If he failed, the fee was slashed to $500. This eliminated an earlier problem where many of the skippers would turn back at the sight, however distant, of a military plane or boat.

During their trips, the reporters saw how the poor people of the islands lived. Like the islanders, they relied on roosters as alarm clocks. If they had rooms with showers, the water was cold, the pressure weak.

They also saw how the wealthy fared.

At Basil's bar on Mustique, a bartender totaled a bill for several hundred dollars.

"Is that for a week?" asked a reporter.

"That's for part of a night," he answered.

The seven most publicized journalist-sailors landed on Grenada on Oct. 25, only hours after the American forces. They had taken to the water because reporters had been barred from the island since a bloody coup the week before.

Others then tried to imitate.

The prices paid were staggering. In the early going, several thousand dollars per head was common for the 30-mile ride from Union island to Grenada on what the natives whimsically called a speedboat — a 12-foot rowboat with a tiny motor.

But the best adventure stories include some danger.

Last Monday, a U.S. frigate fired shots across the bow of the Mizpah, a 40-foot sailboat carrying four cows, six Grenadians trying to return to their island and nine journalists crammed into a tiny room over the engine.

The reporters on the Mizpah, which left Carriacou — 20 miles north of Grenada — Monday morning with the cows and refugees, had told the crew not to stop.

After several hours, a Navy helicopter appeared and dropped one smoke flare, then a second.

Then came signal lights from the frigate. The nine journalists wished they understood Morse code.

Finally came two machine gun bursts across the bow.

"Those are warning shots. The next ones usually go through the engine room," said Chuck de Caro, a correspondent for Cable News Network. The reporters quickly called for a surrender.

In Grenada, Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf, commander of the 15,000 U.S. troops, had told reporters brought to the island on military transport that he knew "how to stop those press boats."

"We've been shooting at them," he said, tongue in cheek. "We haven't sunk any yet, but how are we to know who's on them?"

NATO allies have second thoughts about invasion

LONDON (AP) — As American troops withdraw from Grenada, sharp criticism of the invasion from America's Western European allies is fading, and some government officials suggest that damage to the Atlantic alliance will be minimal.

There have been some signs of second thoughts since the virtually unanimous castigation of the Oct. 25 mission, conducted with hardly a nod toward the allies, who constantly press Washington for more consultation on major international issues.

Some Western European officials, noting the quick American success on Grenada and the fact there were minimal casualties, have turned from condemnation to welcoming Grenada's new opportunity to install a democratic regime.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher tempered her initial criticism by saying "Whenever people have the yoke of communism lifted I am delighted...to be perfectly honest I am delighted that the people of Grenada are free."

Western European criticism initially followed three distinct themes:

—The invasion of sovereign, independent Grenada was a violation of international law.

—It handed the Soviet Union strong arguments to counter criticism of Moscow's occupation of Afghanistan.

—Coming a few weeks before scheduled deployment of new American missiles in Western Europe, doubts were expressed over whether America could be trusted to take European interests into account .

WHEN TO LIST YOUR HOUSE

For a homeowner, the most favorable time to list a house for sale is as soon as you have decided to sell. Six months before the expected move is almost a minimum for best results. Otherwise, you might end up paying on two houses at once for a few months after you move.

Even if satisfactory buyers for your present home appear promptly, the complicated paperwork involved in mortgage applications, and the dovetailing of your needs and the buyer's needs, can result in problems if you are pressed for time.

If your house is not sold by the time you must leave, keep in mind that a vacant house almost never shows as well as it did with your furniture in place, so that it may sell less readily or bring less money.

Houses have been known to be transferred in a few weeks but this is the long shot exception. It's best to allow 3 to 6 months where possible. You are most likely to receive the highest price if you draw from the largest pool of possible buyers. An unhurried sale is the best way to accomplish this.

Lee, Permian in playoff doubleheader

Rebels-Sandies, Panthers-Whitefaces at Jones Stadium

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech University's Jones Stadium will host a Class 5A bi-district doubleheader Saturday with Midland Lee's Rebels taking on Amarillo High's Sandies at 1:30 p.m. and Odessa Permian meeting Hereford at 7 p.m.

The Rebels will be making their first voyage into playoff waters since 1976 and the Nov. 12 date and site was decided here Saturday at the Lubbock administration building at 10:30 a.m.

Lee head football coach Spike Dykes, Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh and Lee High principal Stan Cobb met one hour with AHS coach Larry Dipple and Amarillo athletic director John McGuire to iron out the details in a worry free meeting.

There was little discussion of having a home-and-home flip. Both coaches seemed to prefer playing in the 47,000 seat Jones Stadium with an Astroturf surface.

"With the weather the way it is now, I think Jones Stadium will be perfect and we didn't want to take a chance on playing in Amarillo on natural grass where you could get a soggy field," said Bartosh.

Dykes wanted Jones Stadium before leaving Midland. "I think it will be a special treat for our kids and I also think that the artificial surface is to our benefit at this time of year since we have some speed and Amarillo High is a good defensive team."

Dipple said, "Playing at Jones Stadium the same day as Permian and Hereford should help all four schools. We are just happy to be here and Lubbock is exactly halfway for both schools."

The only coin flip held between the two schools came over who would be the home team. Dykes called tails on the Dipple flip, winning the home team honors, which means that all Lee fans will sit on the press box side of Jones Stadium and out of the sun. Lee also will wear the Maroon jersies, another preference of Dykes.

Tickets for the game will be $5 for adults and $3 for students if purchased at school prior to the game. All adult and student tickets will be $5 at the gate. Student tickets are expected to go on sale Tuesday morning at Lee High if they arrive in time, according to Cobb. Bartosh will open the sale of $5 adult tickets at 8 a.m. Wednesday morning at the athletic ticket office, located at the northeast corner of Memorial Stadium.

Both coaches mutally agreed to use the Abilene chapter of officials, headed by Curly Hayes.

AMARILLO HIGH was declared District 3-5A's champion Friday night after a 41-0 victory over Lubbock High. The Sandies finished in a four-way tie for first with Hereford, Plainview and Lubbock Monterey, but AHS had beaten all three in regular season play, thus earning the No. 1 position. All those teams had 6-2 league marks. Lee finished the District 4-5A campaign in second place to Permian with a 5-2 record.

PERMIAN, THE winner of 4-5A for the fourth year in a row with a 6-1 league mark, didn't know who they would play when they got to Lubbock Saturday morning. Hereford, Plainview and Monterey had to flip for second place. In the odd-man-out flip, Plainview was eliminated. By virtue of Hereford's regular season win over Monterey, Hereford got the bi-district nod.

Permian and Hereford then decided to make Saturday's bi-district game at Jones Stadium a doubleheader. Tickets for the Lee-Amarillo High game will not be honored at the Permian-Hereford contest and Permian-Hereford ticket holders will not be admitted to the Lee-AHS game. Tickets will have to be purchased for both games if you want to see both.

Permian and Hereford preferred the afternoon slot, but Lee and Amarillo had already decided on the 1:30 p.m. time and this is a first-come-first-served basis.

Amarillo High finished the regular season campaign with an overall 6-3 record. The Rebs and Sandies have played two common opponents and Lee seems to have the edge. Amarillo High lost to Lubbock Coronado by a 13-12 margin and Lee defeated Coronado to open the season, 35-7. The Sandies also lost to Odessa High by a 14-7 margin where Lee was a 14-9 winner over OHS. Amarillo's other loss was to cross-town rival Amarillo Palo Duro, 27-0. Lee's losses have come to San Angelo (14-9) and Abilene Cooper (23-21).

"We couldn't have had things turn out better if we had tried," said Dykes. "They (Amarillo) are class people to deal with. I think our fans, players and students will all be pleased with what we have decided. I hope so because this game is for the entire community."

Bartosh added, "I think we got everything we wanted. I'm pleased."

THE ONLY other flipoff of note came last week when Midland radio station KCRS won a coin flip with Midland station KBAT to earn the right to broadcast the game. KCRS will carry all of Lee's playoff games in 1983 until the state network picks up the games in the semifinals.

Saturday's winners advance in the playoff structure and the losers are finished for the year. The two Jones Stadium winners Saturday will face the two emerging El Paso schools from bi-district competition being held there next weekend.

Red Raiders kiss a Horned Frog

LUBBOCK—When Texas Christian and Texas Tech tangle in Jones Stadium, it's an impossible game to predict. Like in 1979 it was a low-scoring 3-3 tie. Then, in 1981 it free-wheeling 39-39 thriller.

The only thing for sure is that it will end in a tie.

Saturday it was 10-10 as both teams missed final quarter field goals that could have rendered a winner and spoiled the sequence.

This is the best run of tie games since the glory days of eastern football when Pitt and Fordham played three in a row back in the 1930s. Only those were uncluttered gems of perfection to the purist. The scores were 0-0, 0-0, 0-0.

And when TCU and Tech play, it isn't exactly the Dream Backfield against the Seven Blocks of Granite.

Tech's offense has been described as the Rock of Gibralter and every bit as threatening to the opposition's goal as the Rock is to South America. In groping for words to adequately describe TCU's rationing of points and yards to the opposition, Johnstown Flood seems to fit.

This SWC game was played in daylight under lights as a surprising 37,000 fans braved gray, threatening skies to watch the third stalemate of the 40-game series.

Both coaches felt the kicking game let them down. Tech's Ricky Gann missed a 47-yard field goal in the second period, but the one that hurt was the 30-yarder with 10 minutes left in the final period. The attempt came after Leonard Harris returned a punt 50 yards to give the Raiders first down the TCU 21, but the Raider offense stalled at the 13.

"Gann is an all-conference kicker," said a disappointed Jerry Moore.

"Before the season I thought kicking would be the strong point of our game," the Tech coach added.

Athletic injuries common among high schoolers

Sports Special

By Bruce Castleberry

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a three part series dealing with injuries among high school-age athletes. The first part deals with the occurrence of injuries.)

The merits of high school athletics have been debated many times, and in 1983 the issue has been particularly hard-hitting in the state of Texas.

Officials see declining test scores and more illiteracy than ever before. Athletics, and the time they consume, have been singled out as negative factors.

On the fields of play, another issue has played a role in attitudes towards high school competition. With contact and collision sports such as football and basketball, injuries go hand-in-hand with the games. Even non-contact sports, such as volleyball, tennis, track and baseball produce their share of injuries.

In the state of Texas alone, two high school football players have already died this season as a direct result of collisions.

FOOTBALL IS agreed to be the most likely cause of a high school athlete sustaining an injury. "We treat many more football injuries than anything else," says James "Doc" Dodson, the athletic trainer at Midland High. Dodson, who has been at MHS for 25 years, was a trainer for the U.S. Olympic team in 1972 and until last year was a charter member of the National Certification Board. As a board member, Dodson helped set the standards for practicing trainers. Dodson worked up the first test for the state of Texas. Texas was the first state to license athletic trainers, and one of only a handful that have licensing.

Of course, the hitting in a game like football have much to do with the occurrence of injuries. But to all sports, the most common crisis is knee damage.

The wear and tear on a knee is significant even in natural use, but in high-speed sports the chances for serious injury multiply. The knee's flexibility is tested to maximum capacity. A 180-pound halfback takes a pitchout and cuts upfield to his left. A 225-pound middle linebacker, following the back's path, flings himself at the runner as his left foot plants to cut. The linebacker hits the knee directly at full force.

A 6-6 center goes high for a rebound, and comes down on the side of the defender's outstretched leg. Players collapse in a jumble. The center has broken his ankle; the defender suffers a dislocated knee.

There are problems in every sport. Baseball pitchers try to master the difficult curve at age 15. By 18 their careers are threatened by elbow problems. Tennis players place thousands of pounds of pressure on their feet, ankles and knees making lightning-quick stops.

YOUNG ATHLETES as recently as ten years ago would be in store for various discomforts for long periods. Orthopedic injuries customarily meant surgery, then a cast to immobilize the leg or arm, and then a long rehabilitation period.

In a society that elevates sports to the highest level, the need for an intelligent approach to the vagaries of athletic injuries was inevitable. Enter the era of sports medicine.

The field of sports medicine is one that is in its first stages. In Midland, and for virtually all of West Texas and southern New Mexico, Dr. Thurston Dean is the leading orthopedic surgeon. Dean's interests haye been in the area of sports-related injuries, and he tends to many high-school injuries.

Dean acknowledges that the field has just begun to grow. "I came here in 1960 and at that time, no one was interested in sports injuries," Dean said. "Now, coaches and trainers are educated more and know how to recognize injuries."

As the field has grown, so has the technology. Perhaps the most relevant sports-related development has been the use of arthroscopy. Fiberoptic technology is credited with the creation of the arthroscope. The arthroscope looks like a small tubular rod about an eighth of an inch in diameter. It acts as a seeing-eye for the surgeon, allowing him to look directly into the patient's knee (or shoulder, or other). The image is often put on a large video screen, and the doctor operates by those pictures.

ARTHROSCOPY HAS led to some extraordinary recoveries. Knees suffering torn ligaments or cartilage can be arthroscoped and the athlete can most times be sufficiently recovered and ready to play three weeks after the initial injury.

MHS quarterback James Welborn suffered a torn lateral meniscus (a cartilage cushion between bones in the knee) Oct. 14 in the Bulldogs' 30-0 loss to San Angelo. Welborn's injury went untreated and undetected until the next week, and on Wednesday Oct. 19, Welborn had arthroscopic surgery. Friday, Welborn played the entire game at quarterback in Lee's 35-0 win against MHS. Welborn played with braces on both knees.

Dean warns that the initial injury is the start of an important rehabilitation process. "It takes therapy, time. Many think they are ready to go a week afterward. We can only patch them."

(The second part of the series deals with specific cases and the applications and responses to treatment).

Jimmerson's field goal upsets Arkansas in 24-21 Baylor win

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Marty Jimmerson kicked a 24-yard field goal on the final play of the game to give Baylor a 24-21 Southwest Conference victory over Arkansas on Saturday.

Despite an all-out blitz Cody Carlson completed a 33-yard pass to Bruce Davis to set up Jimmerson's field goal.

Arkansas' freshman kicker Greg Horne had two chances in the fourth quarter but his 31-yard attempt was low and blocked and his 50-yard attempt with 40 seconds left never had a chance.

After the second miss, Baylor started from its 33 and Carlson hit passes of 17 yards to Gerald McNeil and 13 yards to Broderick Sargent to get the drive going.

Baylor took a 14-0 lead on drives of 99 yards in 14 plays and 89 yards in 16 plays. Carl Miller's 100-yard kickoff return and an 80-yard drive that ended nine seconds before the half made it 14-14 at the end of the second quarter.

Arkansas went 69 yards with its first possession of the third quarter and Baylor came right back with a 90-yard drive on 13 plays. Allen Rice, the fullback-quarterback, ended that on a 1-yard sneak with 5:40 left in the third quarter. The extra point was the 42nd point in less than 25 minutes of playing time.

Baylor is 6-2-1 and Arkansas is 5-3.

BAYLOR MADE 34 first downs and 543 yards total offense. Late in the third quarter, Baylor was 11 of 12 on third downs.

The Bears turned the football over four times, including a fumble at the Arkansas 7 that Rodney Beachum recovered earlier in the fourth quarter. Baylor threatened on the next possession but Rice couldn't handle a pitch and Clint Wilson fell on the ball at the Arkansas 36. He ran off the field with the football, an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty, and Arkansas started from its 21. Derrick Thomas converted a fourth-and-one near midfield but was stopped by Kevin Hancock on third-and-one at the Baylor 14. Horne, who had an extra point blocked earlier, never got the ball high enough to have a chance. The kick was blocked by Derek Turner with more than five minutes left in the game.

After Baylor's second punt of the game, Arkansas quarterback Brad Taylor hit two passes for 43 yards and the Razorbacks were on Baylor's 19. Miller, on a sweep left, was nailed high and Johnny Subia recovered. Carlson's pass bounced off a receiver and Greg Lasker returned it 33 yards to the Baylor 32. After three incomplete passes, Horne missed the 50-yarder.

Taylor started Arkansas' first possession of the third quarter by throwing to Mistler for 32 yards and then Thomas broke tackles on a 25-yard run. Horne eventually missed a 28-yard field goal but Baylor was offsides and Thomas scored from the 1 with 10:54 left in the third.

Rice and Anderson got the Bears moving for the tying touchdown and then Carlson threw to Anderson for 13 yards and a first down at the Baylor 37. Carlson hit McNeil, curling inside for 16 yards. Rice, on a sneak, made 5 and a first down at the Arkansas 34 and Carlson threw down the middle for Davis for 25 more. Rice scored three plays later.

ARKANSAS STOPPED Baylor only once in the first half. The Bears fumbled at their own 42 and their own 44 but Arkansas failed to capitalize. On the second fumble, the Razorbacks reached the 3-yard line and Pat Coryatt stopped Thomas short on what looked like it was going to be a touchdown. Taylor lost inches on the sneak and Alan Jamison and Subia stopped Thomas short on fourth down.

From there, the Bears went 99 in 14 plays with Carlson completing four of four for 44 yards. Rice, who doubles at fullback and quarterback, got the drive started when he kept for 9 yards on third-and-seven from the 4. The next time Baylor got the ball, it covered 89 yards in 16 plays.

The Bears converted on four straight third downs.

Miller returned the ensuing kickoff up the right side, cut to the middle of the field and was never touched on his 100-yard return.

After Baylor's only punt of the half, the Razorbacks covered 80 yards, using two minutes, 50 seconds and 15 plays.

The biggest was a swing pass to Thomas, who ran over people for 7 yards to the Baylor 18. On fourth down, he made the first down and three plays later, Taylor hit Donnie Centers in the corner to tie it with nine seconds left in the first half.

UT to host '85 women's championships

AUSTIN (AP) — The NCAA Division I-A basketball committee will recommend that the 1985 women's basketball championships be held at the University of Texas, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

The basketball committee made its decision after hearing presentations from Austin, Long Beach and Indianapolis, the newspaper said.

The recommendation now goes to the NCAA executive committee, which picks sites for championship contests.

UT women's athletic director Donna Lopiano said she "doesn't see any problem with (the executive committee) approving the selection."

"We told them we thought we can get 21,000 fans for two nights," said Ms. Lopiano. "This will establish UT as a home for national championships. We would like to have one each year, and this is the most prestigious one."

Patricia Bork, liaison between the two NCAA committees, said she expected the executive committee to approve the recommendation.

Atkins paces Ponies past Rice

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Jeff Atkins dashed 56 yards to setup a touchdown, scored two more and ground out 218 yards Saturday to carry the No. 8 ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs to a hard-earned 20-6 Southwest Conference homecoming victory over the Rice Owls.

With scouts from the Bluebonnet, Citrus, Sun and Liberty Bowls watching, Rice battled SMU to a 6-6 tie through three quarters, intercepting SMU quarterback Lance McIlhenny four times.

Atkins, a freshman from Fort Worth, ran 56 yards down the right sideline and five plays later McIlhenny flipped a one-yard scoring pass to tight end Rickey Bolden for the go-ahead fourth period score.

Dwayne Anderson's interception of a Phillip Money pass at the Rice 33 positioned Atkins for consecutive runs of 11 and 22 yards that finally put the Owls away with 6:45 to play.

Atkins' total, fashioned on 20 carries, was the third best in SMU history and the most ever by a freshman.

SMU's other tailback, Reggie Dupard, carved out a career best 172 yards on 29 carries as the Mustangs finally wore down the depth-thin Owls.

The combined total of 390 yards by Atkins and Dupard surpassed a school record of 347 by Eric Dickerson and Craig James.

SMU is 7-1 overall and 4-1 in SWC play, a game behind Texas. Rice is 1-9 and 0-7 in league play..

The Owls took a 3-0 second quarter lead on the longest field goal in the school's history, a 55-yarder by sophomore James Hamrick that just cleared the crossbar.

It came with 1:38 left in the half and broke the school mark of 53 yards set last season by Joel Baxter.

The stung Mustangs surged 80 yards in just four plays to score 65 seconds later to take a 6-3 halftime lead.

Atkins ran for 9 and 10 yards then Dupard ripped off a 60-yard gallop to the Owl one-yard line. Atkins bulled across for the score on the next play with 33 seconds left in the half.

Hamrick kicked a 34-yard field goal to tie the game 6-all in the third period before SMU finally broke loose.

The leading rusher for the Owls, who have now failed to score a touchdown in five consecutive games, was Kevin Trigg, who gained 74 yards on 20 carries.

SMU had 478 yards in offense against Rice, which had averaged yielding over 400.

MC opens season against Cisco

When Midland College opens its 1983-84 basketball season Monday night, you'll need a program. The Chaps have that many newcomers on this year's squad.

MC faces Cisco Junior College at 7:30 p.m. in Al Langford Chaparral Center and a capacity crowd is expected for the Pack Chap Center Night with free tickets available from participating Midland Chamber of Commerce members.

Returning are four lettermen, just one of whom started for Coach Jerry Stone last season.

Six-three Ervin Williams, Dallas Carter, is the lone starter, but 6-5 Jackie Phinnessee, muscleman from Bolivar, Tenn., and 6-6 power forward Brian Essary, North Mesquite, saw heavy duty off the bench. Preston Robertson, 6-4½ postman from Midland High, is the fourth letterwinner.

"We have a good bunch of freshmen. It's just a question of how fast then can become a cohesive team," says Stone.

The Chaps will be missing 6-8 Mike Woolley, Odessa Permian, who dislocated his shoulder in practice. Hopefully, he'll be ready for the Chaparral Classic Tournament starting Thursday.

Cisco losts its opener to Odessa College, 107-87, last Tuesday, staying close to the Wranglers until the final seven minutes.

STONE IS looking forward to better bench strength this year. "At the first of the season, we'll be playing a lot of different combinations, trying to find the right blend."

This year's team has a strong Texas flavor. The freshmen include Zeak Williams, 6-0½ from El Paso Bel Air; 6-0 Bert Cooper, Irving High; 6-2½ Chuckie Graves, Dallas, Kimball; 6-3 Jerald Wrightsel, Big Spring; 6-1½ Vernon Coleman, Fort Worth Paschal; 6-5 Kurt Martin, San Antonio Madison; 6-4 Jeff Hurd, Dallas Hillcrest; and 6-3½ Lawrence Chumbley, Dallas Samuell. Lone none Texas is 6-9 Tevin Bins, Bronx, N.Y.

After the Chaparral Classic, MC goes on the road for tournaments at Hutchinson, Kan., and Amarillo. After this week, their next home appearance won't be until the start of the Western Junior College Conference season against Western Texas College Nov. 28. That will mark the start of an 18-game WJCC schedule, interrupted only by the OIL Class in Big Spring Jan. 13-14.

MC will be seeking its 201st victory since flooring its first team in 1975.

Monday's game will be aired on Cable Channel 2 in Midland by the newly-formed Chaparral network, which will carry all the Chaparral games this year. About half the Chap games will be taped for delayed telecast on Channel 2.

"We're excited about the new network," said MC athletic director Delnor Poss. "The television exposure should attract new fans during the season."

TSD appeals UIL ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas School for the Deaf, which suffered through a 1-39 football record as a Class 3A school, is protesting a University Interscholastic League decision that would move the Rangers back into the bigger class.

TSD athletic director Walt Camenisch said the UIL count of students at his school was unfair because it included 35 multiple handicapped children.

For the past two years, TSD has found relative success at the 2A level, posting a 4-5 record last year and finishing this season at 5-5 after Friday's 35-22 loss to Bartlett.

From 1978 through 1981, the Rangers suffered through misery as a 3A team, winning one game and running up a 32-game losing streak.

The UIL realignment for the school years 1984-85 and 1985-86 was announced last Saturday. TSD's student body was counted at 295, above the 274 cutoff between 2A and 3A.

Camenisch said the 295 figure is unfair for athletic purposes because it includes 35 students whose multiple handicaps make them unavailable for sports.

The UIL appeal panel will consider TSD's complaint Thursday.

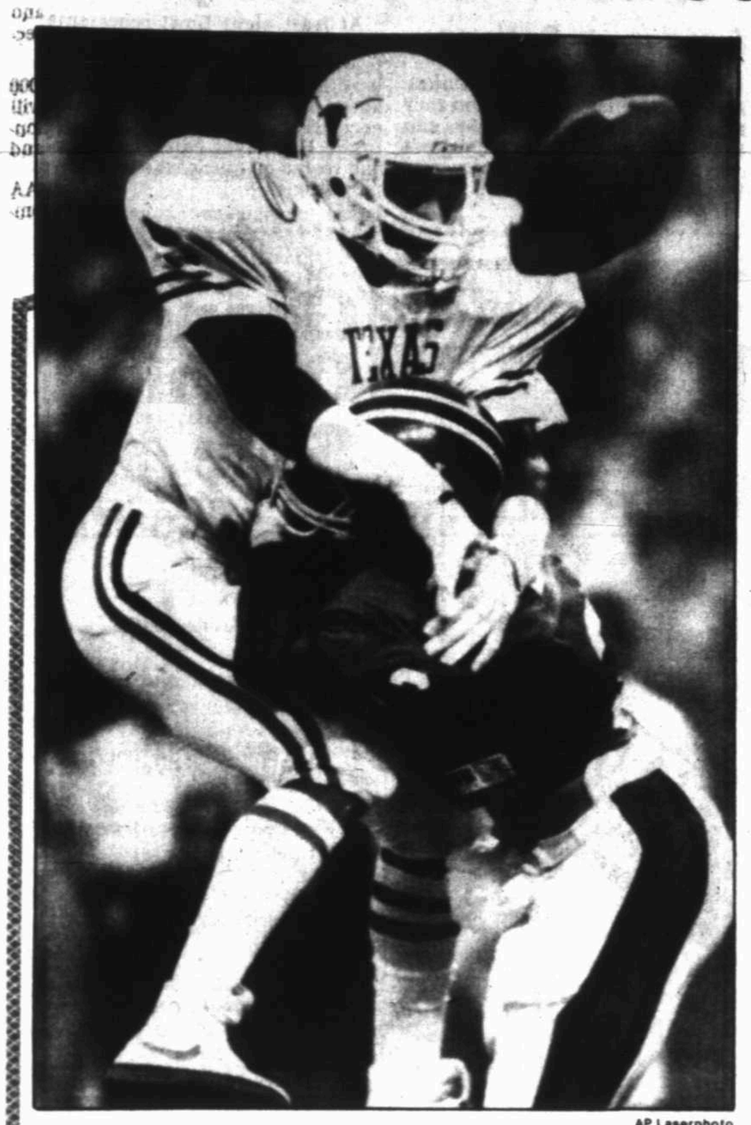
Ward boots three to save Horns from Cougar upset



AP Laserphoto

Texas strong safety Craig Curry (5) blocks a pass attempt by Houston quarterback Gerald Landry (3) in the second quarter of Saturday's game in Houston.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas kicker Jeff Ward booted field goals of 20, 51 and 47 yards, the last with 4:37 left to play, and the No. 2 ranked Longhorn's defense overcame Houston's determined upset bid Saturday to defeat the Cougars 9-3 in a Southwest Conference showdown.

Texas' defense, ranked first in the nation in total defense, came up with four Houston turnovers while the Longhorn offense struggled throughout the game recording zero or minus yardage on seven of its first 12 drives prior to a late fourth quarter drive.

The Longhorns, 8-0, did not get a first down in the second half until 9:40 remained in the game. The Longhorns ended that drive with Ward's third field goal; a 47-yarder for a 9-3 lead.

Houston kicker Mike Clendenen missed field goal attempts of 39 and 29 yards in the first and fourth quarters as the Cougars dropped to a 3-6 record.

Texas took a 6-0 halftime lead on Jeff Ward's field goals of 20 and 51 yards as the Cougars continued to hurt themselves with mistakes.

Mossy Cade's 56 yard interception return to the Houston 4 and a 2-yard face mask penalty set up Ward's 20-yarder in the first quarter.

A 35-yard pass interference call against UH free safety Robert Jones was the big gainer prior to Ward's 51-yarder in the second quarter.

But Texas' ineffective offense couldn't take full advantage of the gifts and had gained only 38 yards at the half.

It was the second straight slow start for the Longhorns, who trailed Texas Tech 3-0 a week ago at the half before winning 20-3.

After Cade's interception, Houston's aroused defense stopped Texas for a minus one yard on three plays.

Texas safety Jerry Gray recovered a fumble by quarterback Gerald Landry at the Houston 24 to start a late second quarter Longhorns drive that went for a minus 25 yards. The drive ended when UH's Eugene Lockhard sacked Todd Dodge for an 11-yard loss.

Texas now is 5-0 in SWC games and Houston dropped to 2-4.

HOUSTON'S ONLY score came in the third quarter after defensive tackle Eddie Gilmore recovered a fumble by Mike Luck at the Texas 6 to set up Clendenen's 24-yard field goal.

Houston, playing its best defensive game of the season, held the Longhorns to 96 total yards and did not allow a sustained drive until late in the fourth quarter.

Cornerback DeWayne Bowden intercepted two passes and tackled Luck for a loss that forced Texas to kick a field goal.

Texas running back Anthony Byerly sparked Texas' late fourth quarter drive that also included passes of 15 and 7 yards from Dodge to Bill Boy Bryant prior to Ward's 47-yard kick.

Texas' 6-0 halftime lead extended the Longhorns' string of shut out quarters to six against Houston, which lost to UT 50-0 last year and did not score in the last two quarters of a 14-14 tie in 1981.

The first three drives of the game ended with interceptions and a 3-0 Texas lead.

Landry, a freshman making his second collegiate start, was intercepted by Gray to start the turnover derby. Dodge then threw an interception Bowden and Cade got the ball right back for Texas with his 56-yard return.

Shepherd fastest in last day of qualifications

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Morgan Shepherd was the fastest qualifier Saturday as the last 10 spots were filled for Sunday's Atlanta Journal 500.

Shepherd, driving a Buick Regal, ran a fast lap around Atlanta International Raceway's 1.522-mile oval at 164.028 mph.

Shepherd almost didn't get to make his two-lap qualifying run, though. As he tried to leave pit road, the car ground to a halt.

"There was a bolt too long in the water pump and it had locked up," Shepherd said. "I heard the belt squealing, so I stopped. My heart almost stopped."

Shepherd's speed actually would have been good enough to put him somewhere in the middle of the 40-car field if it had come in time trials Thursday or Friday. But the man who sat on the pole here a year ago said his team purposely waited to qualify in the final session.

Shepherd is locked in a battle with Dave Marcis and J.D. McDuffie for the Chamelion Change Award, which goes to the driver who improves his position the most during the course of the season.

"We did this intentionally because we're after that award," Shepherd said. "When they drop the green (flag), I'll go hard than usual to work my way up to the lead cars, so I don't get lapped. It worked last week. We started 32nd at Rockingham and within 10 laps, I was running 12th."

Marcis qualified 33rd and McDuffie will start from the 35th spot. The slowest qualifier in the field, at 160.314 mph, was Blackie Wangerin.

The race, which will be televised live on WTBS, will start at 12:35 p.m. EST Sunday.

UIL's first team tennis rained out

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League's first team tennis championship tournament was postponed Saturday by an all-day rain that soaked most of Austin.

Tournament director Gina Mazzolini said the event would resume here next Saturday. Only one round of the three-round competition was completed Saturday.

In opening round play, San Antonio Churchill beat Clear Lake 12-6.

Young plunges for Georgia winner

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Barry Young scored on a 1-yard plunge early in the fourth quarter as fourth-ranked Georgia continued its mastery of Florida with a 10-9 Southeastern Conference victory over the ninth-ranked Gators Saturday.

Young's scoring run with 13:18 to play capped a 99-yard drive for a sputtering Bulldog attack that had netted only 96 yards for almost three quarters.

The Gators, losing to Georgia for the sixth year in a row, had dominated the game until the winning drive.

Florida drove inside the Georgia 25-yard line six times, but had to settle for a trio of field goals by Bobby Raymond that covered 21, 25 and 32 yards.

Raymond missed a 41-yard try and the other two penetrations inside the 25 ended on interceptions of Wayne Peace passes, the first in the end zone by Charlie Dean and the second by Darryl Jones at the 1, from where Georgia started its scoring drive.

The triumph was Georgia's 23rd in a row in the SEC and set up a championship battle with third-ranked Auburn in Athens, Ga., next week. Georgia is 8-0-1 overall and 5-0 in the conference. Auburn has a 4-0 SEC record with a later date with Alabama still remaining after the Georgia game.

Georgia's only other score came on Kevin Butler's 51-yard field goal following a 44-yard drive in the first period.

The Georgia scoring drive featured a 16-yard scamper by John Lastinger to the 19 and a 25-yard screen pass to Clarence Kay, with a 15-yard piling on infraction added to the gain.

Georgia drove 67 yards to the Florida 1 on its next possession, but Mark Korff stopped Lastinger short on a fourth down play. That drive featured a 33-yard flanker reverse by Fred Lane.

It was the second loss in a row for Florida, which fell to 6-2-1 and 3-2.

Auburn grinds out win

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Tommie Agee raced for 219 yards, including touchdown bursts of 61 and 44 yards, as No. 3 Auburn ground out a 35-23 victory over seventh-ranked Maryland in a top intersectional matchup Saturday.

Maryland quarterback Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes, scoring strikes of 10 yards to Sean Sullivan and 14 yards to Greg Hill in a third-quarter rally and a 40-yard bomb to Russell Davis in the fourth quarter.

But Auburn's Bo Jackson bulled over from the 5 for one fourth quarter score, giving the lead back to the Tigers at 21-17. And then Agee sprinted 44 yards for what proved to be the clincher with five minutes left.

Auburn defensive tackle Donnie Humphrey fell on an Esiason fumble in the end zone for Auburn's final score with 9 seconds remaining in the game.

The victory raised Auburn's record to 8-1 as it heads into its final Southeastern Conference showdowns against No. 4 Georgia and No. 19 Alabama.

Maryland, which upset then-No. 3 North Carolina in a critical Atlantic Coast Conference game last week, dropped to 7-2 on the year in the game before 75,600 mostly Auburn fans.

Miami needs late TD

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Bernie Kosar lunged in from the 1-yard line with 1:04 to play Saturday to lift No. 5 Miami to a 12-7 college football victory over upstart East Carolina.

Kosar set up his touchdown sneak with a 52-yard strike to wide receiver Ed Brown, giving the Hurricanes a first down at the Pirates' 13.

The touchdown, six plays later, gave the Hurricanes a school record ninth straight victory after an opening loss while East Carolina dropped to 6-3, all three losses to Florida teams.

The winning 80-yard, nine-play drive consumed 3:48 of the fourth quarter, coming after East Carolina place-kicker Jeff Heath was wide right on a 21-yard field goal attempt.

Bama survives LSU

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Scrambling Walter Lewis threw for a pair of touchdowns Saturday and No. 19 Alabama survived a fourth-quarter scare for a 32-26 Southeastern Conference victory over Louisiana State.

Alabama ran its record to 6-2 overall and 4-1 in the nationally televised thriller, despite a record 343-yard passing game by LSU sophomore Jeff Wickersham.

The loss dropped LSU to 0-4 in the SEC and 3-6 overall.

Leading 17-10 entering the final quarter, Lewis threw a 7-yard scoring pass to Joey Jones with 10:42 to play to give the Tide a 24-10 lead. But, in the next nine minutes, 24 more points were scored and LSU twice pulled within a touchdown of tying Alabama.

The clincher for Alabama came on a 62-yard drive, capped by a 1-yard scoring plunge by Kerry Goode with 6:02 to play. The Tide followed that up with a two-point conversion on a short run by Ricky Moore.

Clemson kicks Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Bob Paulling kicked three field goals and Mike Eppley tossed a third-quarter touchdown pass to guide Clemson to a 16-3 victory over 10th-ranked North Carolina in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Paulling's kicks covered 27, 29, and 28 yards. He has hit 14 of 16 attempts this season.

Eppley capped a 44-yard scoring drive with a 6-yard scoring pass to tight end K.D. Dunn with 6:01 left in the period. Paulling added the extra point, his 63rd straight successful kick and the 99th of his career, to tie the Clemson record.

Clemson raised its record to 7-1-1. Although the game does not count in ACC standings because of Clemson's probation, the Tigers have beaten 18 straight ACC rivals. Also, Clemson has not lost to North Carolina in Chapel Hill since 1971.

Twice in the fourth period, North Carolina got inside the Clemson 20, but failed on fourth-down passes and fell to 7-2.

WVU bounces back

MORGANTOWN, W.Va (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Hostetler tossed two first-half touchdown passes to Rich Hollins and West Virginia scored on four of its first six possessions Saturday as the 17th-ranked Mountaineers bounced back from a two-game losing streak to beat Temple 27-9.

West Virginia, 7-2, kept its bowl hopes alive as Hostetler completed 14 of 23 passes for 175 yards, including scoring passes of five and 44 yards to Hollins, a senior split end.

West Virginia's defense held Temple four times inside the 5-yard line in the third quarter. A controversial fourth-down pass from Tim Riordan to Paul Palmer from the 2-yard line was ruled out of bounds, ending an Owl drive which lasted more than seven minutes.

Tigers rip Bulldogs

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Danny Sparkman passed to Derrick Crawford for two touchdowns and Don Glosson kicked three field goals as the Memphis State Tigers defeated Mississippi State 30-13 Saturday for the Bulldogs' seventh straight football loss.

Sparkman, hitting 10 of 18 passes for 198 yards, teamed with Crawford on a 50-yard scoring play in the third quarter, then rifled a 3-yarder to the wide receiver for the clinching touchdown in the fourth period.

Duke rallies, 31-21

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Tailback Mike Grayson rushed for 152 yards and two second half touchdowns as Duke rallied to defeat Wake Forest 31-21 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richmond demolished James Madison's porous defense with Bob Bleier's passing and the running of Jarvis Jennings on Saturday and handed the demoralized Dukes their fifth straight football setback, 32-0.

Jabbar admits past drug use in his book

DALLAS (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar expects some negative reaction to his forthcoming autobiography, which includes admissions of drug use, but says he wanted to be "completely candid" about his life.

Abdul-Jabbar, in Dallas to prepare for a National Basketball Association game with the Mavericks, told The Dallas Morning News he wanted "to set a few things straight about my life" in his book "Giant Steps."

The 14-year NBA star admits using heroin, cocaine and other drugs in the book.

"Once in college I snorted some heroin. I threw up all out the window, and the next day I was sick. That was the end of that," Abdul-Jabbar said in the book.

In other exerpts, Abdul-Jabbar said:

"For a while there at UCLA I didn't want to hang out with anyone who didn't smoke reefer, but that was as parochial a view of the world as any uptight antidoper's...

"I got involved with cocaine between college and the pros, but not for long. What turned me off was a minor brush with death...

"But after four or five trips, what I ultimately learned from acid was that I did not need to take acid."

"Through the years, I've had to deal with other people's opinions about me," Abdul-Jabbar told the News. "I wanted my say, to do it in my words ... and to be completely candid in saying how I got to be who I am."

ABDUL-JABBAR wrote "Giant Steps" with Peter Knobler. The book is due in bookstores this week.

"I made the decision that if I was going to do a book, and open myself up, then I'd open up all the way," Abdul-Jabbar said.

Abdul-Jabbar said stirring up controversy was not his intent with the book.

"I dealt with all kinds of subjects, the toughest for me being my relationship with my parents," he said.

"But everything relates to what has happened to me in my life."

In the book, Abdul-Jabbar retraces his steps from Power Memorial High School in New York to UCLA and through his NBA years.

"Yes, I know there will be negative reactions," he said. "But it's a part of my life that I just couldn't conveniently ignore. There are people out there who know things I've done in the past, the mistakes I made. I couldn't leave them out and have those people know I wasn't honest. Then, it wouldn't be an honest book."

Missouri upsets No. 11 Oklahoma in shutout style

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Marlon Adler threw a scrambling 20-yard touchdown pass and a swarming Missouri defense shut down No. 11 Oklahoma's offense in leading the Tigers to a 10-0 upset of the Sooners Saturday.

Oklahoma came into the game averaging almost 290 yards rushing a game, fourth-best in the nation, but showed a shocking minus-7 yards rushing in the first half and less than 100 for the game.

Missouri's defense, led by linebackers Jay Wilson and Tracey Mack and defensive ends Taft Sales and Bobby Bell, dominated the line of scrimmage. They consistently pressured Sooner quarterback Danny Bradley on passing plays and stopped Oklahoma runners at the line of scrimmage.

It was the first time the Sooners have been shut out in a Big Eight game since Missouri's 30-0 victory in 1965.

The victory boosted Missouri's record to 6-3 overall and 4-1 in the Big Eight, putting them in a tie with the Sooners for second place. Oklahoma is also 6-3 overall.

All the scoring came in the first half, with Brad Burditt getting the Tigers rolling on their first possession by kicking a 37-yard field goal.

Adler, the junior quarterback who tied a school record by scoring four touchdowns the week before against Iowa State, engineered a 71-yard touchdown drive in the second period.

Wolves boil Purdue

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan quarterback Steve Smith set a school record with four touchdown passes and ran for another score as the 13th-ranked Wolverines romped to a 42-10 Big Ten college football victory over Purdue.

Smith, who played less than three quarters, completed 11 of 13 passes for 159 yards and kept the ball on 12 option plays for an additional 126 yards for 285 total yards — his third-best day as a collegian.

The triumph improved Michigan's record to 7-2 for the season, 6-1 in conference play. The Boilermakers slipped to 2-6-1 overall and 2-4-1 in the Big Ten.

The Michigan defense, tops in the conference against the pass, came up with three first-half interceptions and a blocked punt and the Wolverines converted three of those four turnovers into touchdowns while charging to a 35-3 halftime lead.

Huskers destroy ISU

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mike Rozier ran for four touchdowns and set three school records while quarterback Turner Gill tossed a trio of scoring passes as top-ranked Nebraska beat Iowa State 72-29 in a Big Eight Conference football game Saturday.

The 10-0 Cornhuskers, unbeaten in five conference games, grabbed a 14-0 first period lead. I-back Rozier scored from the 5.

Bucks blast Hoosiers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Tailback Keith Byars rushed for 169 yards and four touchdowns, leading 14th-ranked Ohio State to a 56-17 Big Ten Conference football victory over Indiana and extending the Buckeyes' unbeaten string against the Hoosiers to 28 games.

Byars' first two touchdowns came as Ohio State raced to a comfortable 28-3 halftime lead.

The Hoosiers, unable to move on the ground, had to rely on the passing of quarterback Steve Bradley. But the Indiana sophomore was intercepted three times, each one leading to a touchdown run by Byars.

The victory lifted Ohio State to 5-2 in the Big Ten and 7-2 for all games. Indiana, which last beat the Buckeyes in 1951, fell to 2-5 and 3-6.

Spartans edge 'Cats

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Aaron Roberts ran for a touchdown and Michigan State's defense held Northwestern to 55 total offensive yards as the Spartans earned a 9-3 Big Ten college football win.

The victory improved the Spartans to 4-4-1 overall and 2-4-1 in the Big Ten. Northwestern fell to 2-5 in the league, 2-7 overall.

Michigan State's defense used seven quarterback sacks to help limit the Wildcats to a negative 47 yards on the ground. Northwestern never entered MSU territory in the first two quarters, and most of the Wildcats' total offensive yardage came in the dying minutes of the game.

Tulsa stops Drake

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Michael Gunter ran for two touchdowns and Steve Gage passed for another to lead Tulsa to a 22-13 victory over stubborn Drake in Missouri Valley Conference.

Tulsa had to overcome an early 10-6 deficit and an inspired Drake defense to beat the Bulldogs for the 19th time in 20 games. The league-leading Golden Hurricane sent their record to 7-3 overall and 4-0 in the conference, while Drake fell to 1-9 and 1-5.

Gage threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to fullback Rodney Young to give Tulsa a 12-10 halftime lead and Gunter bolted 30 yards for a score on Tulsa's first play of the second half. Gunter also scored on a 2-yard run in the first quarter and Jason Staurovsky kicked a 20-yard field goal in the third period to complete the Tulsa scoring.

Wildcats rock Pokes

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Greg Dageforde's 3-yard touchdown run and Steve Willis' extra point with 11 seconds to play capped a dramatic fourth-quarter comeback Saturday that lifted Kansas State to a 21-20 college football upset over Oklahoma State.

The Wildcats, winning for the first time in their last five games, improved to 3-6 overall and 1-4 in the Big Eight Conference. Oklahoma State, whose only previous losses were to Nebraska and Oklahoma, fell to 6-3 and 2-3.

Kansas State quarterback Stan Weber, whose running and passing had kept the Wildcats close to Nebraska until the fourth quarter of their game a week ago, guided the team 77 yards in the final two minutes to set up Dageforde's touchdown blast.

Pitt upsets Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Tailback Joe McCall scored two touchdowns and John Congemi hit Bill Wallace with a 44-yard pass for another TD to lead unranked Pitt to a 21-16 victory over 18th-ranked Notre Dame.

The Panthers struck for two quick scores in the first period on the Congemi-Wallace pass and a 10-yard run by McCall following a fumble recovery. They wrapped it up in the fourth quarter when McCall scored on a one-yard plunge that he had set up with a 31-yard run.

The victory was the fifth straight for the Panthers, who boosted their record to 7-2 in front of representatives from seven bowls, including the Sugar, Orange and Cotton.

The loss, a serious blow to Irish bowl hopes, ended Notre Dame's five-game winning streak and dropped the Irish to 6-3 for the season.

Iowa routs Badgers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Chuck Long passed for 231 yards and four touchdowns and Eddie Phillips ran for 162 yards as 15th-ranked Iowa rolled to a 34-14 Big Ten victory over Wisconsin.

At least eight Bowl representatives were at Camp Randall Stadium to witness the explosive offense and hard-hitting defense of the Hawkeyes, 7-2 overall and 5-2 in conference play.

The Hawkeyes came out flying and scored on four of their first five possessions.

Goddard wins M-O eighth grade football title

Goddard won the Midland-Odessa eighth grade football conference Saturday with a 26-0 win over Odessa's Bowie. Goddard ended the season with a perfect 8-0 mark.

Midland's eighth grade units fared well this year, losing only one game to Odessa all year. That loss came Saturday when San Jacinto fell to Nimitz 27-12. SJ finished with a 4-4 record while Alamo, who finished last week, finished second behind Goddard with a 7-1 mark.

The ninth grade season also ended Thursday and Saturday Nimitz rolling Lee Maroon (4-4-1) 28-6 and Lee White (4-5) pelting Bowie 37-6. Midland Purple (5-4) beat Ector 32-7 and Midland Gold (4-5) lost to Crockett 14-7.

In the seventh grade American Conference, Goddard White and San Jacinto Green tied for top honors with 6-2 records. Goddard White defeated SJ Green 18-12 Saturday. Alamo Scarlet (5-2-1) beat SJ White 34-0 while Alamo Grey (3-4-1) ran over Goddard Red (2-4-2) by a 40-8 count.

In the seventh grade National Conference, top honors went to Goddard Red with a 7-0-1 record. Red defeated Alamo Grey (0-8) by a big 54-0 score Saturday. SJ Green (4-3-1) won a 6-0 decision over Goddard White (7-1), knocking White out of the championship. Alamo Scarlet (2-4-2) won a narrow 8-6 verdict over SJ White (4-4).

Permian Basin net officials to meet at SJJHS

The Permian Basin Chapter of the Southwest Basketball Officials Association will hold their first meeting 7:30 p.m. Nov. 9 at Midland's San Jacinto Junior High cafeteria, it was announced by Chapter President Jim Scott.

The SJJHS is located at 1400 North N Street.

All members and prospective basketball officials are invited.

A rules clinic will be held Nov. 12, beginning at 9 a.m., at the Midland College Gym (PE building). All officials desiring to work a scrimmage are advised to bring the necessary equipment.

Scott said basketball coaches are invited to attend both meetings at which rules changes for 1983-84 will be discussed.

Gandsey's field goal stuns Arizona State, 26-24

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Tom Gandsey kept a late California drive alive by running for a first down on a fake punt play, and Randy Pratt kicked a 38-yard field goal with 48 seconds left to give the Bears a 26-24 upset victory over Arizona State Saturday.

Pratt booted four field goals in the Pacific-10 game, raising his season total to a school-record 18. Luis Zendejas of ASU kicked three and has 20 for the season.

The ASU Sun Devils, whose hopes for a conference title virtually died with the loss, trailed 23-13 early in the fourth period but moved ahead 24-23, capitalizing on a blocked punt and a fumble recovery.

The fumble recovery, by Kevin Graven, set up Darryl Clack's 1-yard touchdown run which came with 5:04 left and made the score 23-22. Reserve quarterback Sandy Osiecki, who came in for a shaken-up Todd Hons late in the game, then fired a 2-point conversion pass to tight end Curt Arons.

After ASU kicked off, Cal moved quickly to midfield. But the Bears faced a fourth-and-4 situation at the ASU 47, and Gandsey was sent in.

The Cal punter ran to his left after faking a pass and gained eight yards. Quarterback Gale Gilbert, using mostly running plays, then directed the drive to the 22 before Pratt came on for the game-winning kick.

Gilbert threw a pair of long touchdown passes to Rance McDougald and Cal linebacker Ron Rivera recovered two fumbles to set up field goals in the victory which gave the Bears a 2-3-1 Pac-10 record and made them 4-4-1 overall.

Far West

Arizona State suffered a third straight loss, falling to 2-2-1 in the Pac-10 and 4-3-1 for all games.

UCLA beats Oregon

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Kevin Nelson rushed for 131 yards and scored all three UCLA touchdowns Saturday as the Bruins knocked off Oregon 28-13 to remain atop the Pacific 10 Conference football standings.

Nelson scored in each of the first three quarters on runs of 30, 12 and 4 yards as UCLA built a 21-0 lead. Nelson carried the ball 17 times in the contest.

The Bruins remained the frontrunner in the Rose Bowl race with the victory, improving their record to 5-0-1 in the Pac-10 and 5-3-1 overall.

Oregon, 2-3 in the conference and 3-6 for the season, rallied in the fourth quarter on two touchdowns by wide receiver Lew Barnes. The junior college transfer caught a 24-yard scoring pass from freshman Chris Miller to cut the lead to 21-7.

CU gets victory, 34-23

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Sophomore fullback Chris McLemore rushed for 160 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Colorado Buffaloes to a 34-23 victory over the Kansas Jayhawks in a ragged Big Eight football game Saturday.

Sophomore quarterback Derek Marshall, in his first starting assignment for the Buffaloes, connected on 11 of 22 passes for 148 yards and one touchdown as he and McLemore picked apart the KU defense.

McLemore had 23 carries, including a 75-yard scoring dash from scrimmage, in the best performance of his career.

The Buffs held a 17-6 lead at halftime, raising the margin to 24-12 in the third.

Falcons stomp UH

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Fullback John Kershner and halfback Jody Simmons ran for two touchdowns apiece as streaking Air Force posted its fifth straight victory with a 45-10 rout of Hawaii in Western Athletic Conference football.

The triumph raised the Falcons' overall record to 7-2 and WAC mark to 4-2 and kept their hopes alive for a bowl bid. Hawaii had its three-game winning streak snapped and dropped to 4-3-1 overall and 3-2-1 in the WAC.

Nugent leads Rams

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Hot-handed Terry Nugent threw for 418 yards and three touchdowns and freshman fullback Steve Bartalo hammered over from the 1-yard line twice for tallies as the Colorado State Rams pounded intrastate-rival Northern Colorado 41-20 in non-conference college football action to win their fourth game in a row.

Colorado State, a Division I school, evened its record at 5-5 with its fourth consecutive victory, the first time the Rams accomplished that feat since 1977. With its fifth-straight loss, Northern Colorado — a Division II school — fell to 3-6.

Nugent, a senior playing his last home game at Hughes Stadium, finished the day with 31 completions on 40 attempts for 418 yards and one interception. Bartalo, a walk-on, gained 112 yards on 32 carries.

Boise St. wins, 32-20

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Rodney Webster scored on an 80-yard sideline pass play here Saturday to lead Boise State to a 32-20 Big Sky Conference football victory over Idaho State.

ISU, its attack crippled when star quarterback Paul Peterson was injured in the first quarter, battled back to a 20-13 deficit two minutes into the fourth quarter on Perry Larsen's 34-yard field goal.

The loss dropped ISU to 3-2 in Big Sky and 6-3 overall. BSU kept its faint title hopes alive, moving to 3-2 in league and 5-4 overall.

Utah rips Fullerton

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Quarterback Mark Stevens passed for two touchdowns and scored another pair on the ground to spark Utah to a 47-20 football victory over Cal State-Fullerton here Saturday in a non-conference game.

The victory gives Utah, of the Western Athletic conference, a 5-4 overall record on the season. Fullerton State, of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, is now 7-3 on the year.

Stevens completed 15 of 22 passes for 324 yards, including a 57-yard scoring strike to split end Danny Huey and a 40-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Joe Tarver.

Utah St. fakes for win

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Tailback Eric Adams scored on a 3-yard run with 3:13 left to give Utah State a 22-15 comeback victory over San Jose State in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association football game Saturday.

The Aggies trailed by one point with about 4:00 remaining and used a fake punt to set up the winning touchdown. On a fourth-and-eight from USU's 22, punter Russell Griffith ran 18 yards for a first down.

On the next play, quarterback Chico Canales escaped a rush and shoveled a pass to fullback Andre Bynum for a 20-yard gain. Then flanker Fred Fernandez sprinted 37 yards to the 3 on a reverse to set up the score.

The victory puts Utah State at 3-2 in the PCAA and 4-5 overall. San Jose slipped to 3-2 and 5-3 overall.

Cougars rip Beavers

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Washington State sophomore Kerry Porter rambled for 131 yard and two touchdowns Saturday as the Cougars downed Oregon State 27-9 for their third consecutive Pacific 10 Conference football victory.

It was the fourth straight time Porter has gained more than 100 yards in a game.

The Cougars improved their record to 5-4 overall and 3-3 in the Pac-10. Oregon State, which ended its 30-game Pac-10 winless streak against Stanford last weekend, dropped to 1-5 in the Pac-10 and 2-7 overall.

USC evens record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fullback Kennedy Pola stunned Stanford with a 65-yard touchdown pass to Timmie Ware on Southern Cal's first offensive play, and the Jerome Tyler-led Trojan defense manhandled the Cardinal offense Saturday in a 30-7 Pacific-10 Conference victory.

The triumph evened Southern Cal's record at 4-4-1, and the Trojans are 4-1 in conference play. They are, however, on probation and ineligible for the Pac-10 title or any bowl bid.

Huskies nip Wildcats

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Cornerback Vestee Jackson broke up a two-pint conversion, shorting out a stunning 19- point Arizona comeback as the 20th-ranked Washington Huskies survived 23-22 Saturday night in a key Pacific 10- Conference football contest.

Arizona quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe hit tailback Vance Johnson on a 34-yard touchdown pass with 2:53 remaining to bring the Wildcats' within one point. But Tunnicliffe was injured on the pass and Jackson broke up a conversion pass thrown by replacement quarterback Alfred Jenkins.

Three Permian Basin teams off to playoffs

Three Permian Basin area district teams qualified for the state playoffs Friday night, and first round opponents and sites were announced yesterday.

District 7-A champion Greenwood, who finished with eight straight wins and an 8-2 mark, faces district 7-A North runner-up Klondike. Klondike finished 5-5 on the year with a 29-0 win over Sands.

The teams meet Friday in Stanton at Buff Stadium at 7:30.

District 6-AAA runner up Crane finished an unbeaten 9-0-1 year with a 21-14 win over Colorado City. The win propelled the Cranes into the playoffs against district 5-AAA titleist Kermit, 14-0 winners over Alpine. Kermit's stifling defense held Alpine to only one first down. The teams meet in Crane Friday at 7:30.

McCamey's Badgers finished their year at 7-3 with a 31-6 road win over Stanton. The win qualified the Badgers for the playoffs in coach Buster Leaf's first year at the McCamey helm. McCamey, district 8-AA runners-ups behind champ Wall, will play 7-AA champion Marfa. The Badgers and Shorthorns hook up in either Alpine Friday at 7:30 or Fort Stockton at 7:30 Saturday. The site has yet to be determined.

Lobos defeat Cowboys

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Sophomore tailback Willie Turral ran for two touchdowns and New Mexico's defense killed two late Wyoming drives to preserve a 17-10 New Mexico Western Athletic Conference football victory Saturday night.

Turral, a 5-foot-11, 193-pounder, broke through Wyoming's porous defense on TD runs of 13 and 24 yards, while freshman Joe Bibbo connected on a 26-yard field goal.

Wyoming, which came into the game ranked 11th nationally in rushing, never could get its offense on track. The Cowboys got a 1-yard scoring plunge from quarterback Brad Baumberger and a 39-yard Rick Donnelly field goal.

The Lobo defense, which held Wyoming to 110 yards on the ground, well below their season average of 258 yards, twice stopped the Cowboys deep in New Mexico territory in the final eight minutes.

The victory improved New Mexico's season mark to 4-6 overall and 2-3 in the WAC. Wyoming now is 4-5 overall and also 2-3 in the WAC.

Aggies rout Shockers, 62-28

LAS CRUCES (AP) — New Mexico State's big play offense, led by sophomore speedster Mark Dunn and return specialist Fred Young, rolled over Wichita State 62-28 Saturday in college football.

Dunn scored two touchdowns, one on a first quarter 75-yard punt return while Young returned a kickoff 90 yards for another score as the Aggies, now 4-6 for the year, exploded for 55 first half points.

The 62 points was the most scored by an NMSU team since 1972. Wichita State dropped to 2-8 overall. The game also counted as a Missouri Valley Conference contest for the Shockers, who are now 2-3 in the league.

Mesa clinches RMAC crown

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) — NAIA national power Mesa College unleashed its relentless ground attack on New Mexico Highlands and took a 38-9 victory Saturday that clinched for the Colorado team the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference football title.

New Mexico

The victory gave Mesa an 8-0-1 overall record and a 7-0-1 mark in the conference. It was the second straight year Mesa has won the RMAC title.

Ross Hodgson and Jerry Larghe keyed Mesa's ground game that rolled up 327 yards. Hodgson scored three times and finished with 155 yards on 26 carries while Larghe picked up another 106 yards on 13 carries.

Mesa's Joe Stellevato also booted a 53-yard field goal and Bill Monson scored a pair of touchdowns on short runs.

W. New Mexico falls, 24-14

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) — Halfback Herman Heard rushed for 259 yards and scored on runs of 69 and 85 yards to lead the University of Southern Colorado to a 24-14 Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference victory over Western New Mexico.

Heard's 69-yard run in the opening quarter gave USC the lead for good. Southern Colorado took a 24-0 lead through the first three quarters as Sheldon Anderson added a 32-yard field goal, Heard broke through the Mustang defense for his 85-yard scoring jaunt and Frank Mash pulled in an 85-yard TD pass from John Wristen.

WNMU got on the board twice in the fourth quarter on an 8-yard run by Sam Pavlinch and an 8-yard Tom Matthews to Kent Grider pass.

ENMU still unbeaten, 45-3

GUNNISON, Colo. (AP) — Quarterback Kevin Kott riddled the Western State defense for 469 yards and four touchdowns, including three scoring tosses to receiver Pete Johnson, to lead undefeated Eastern New Mexico to a 45-3 whipping of the Mountaineers in non-conference college football action Saturday.

The victory gave the Greyhounds 8-0 record while Western State fell to 2-6-1.

A Chuck O'Brien 1-yard run opened the scoring for the Greyhounds in the first period. A safety on the ensuing kickoff gave Eastern New Mexico an early 9-0 lead.

Penn State uses big plays to defeat Brown, 38-21

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Touchdown runs of 61 yards by Jon Williams, 55 by Kenny Jackson and 44 by D.J. Dozier highlighted Penn State's 38-21 rout of Brown in college football Saturday.

The victory assured Penn State of its 45th consecutive non-losing season, extending its National Collegiate Athletic Association record. The last time Penn State had a losing season was in 1938 when the Lions were 3-4-1.

Even if they lost the two remaining games against Notre Dame and Pitt, they would wind up 6-6.

Brown, the five-touchdown underdog from the Ivy League, played surprisingly tough except for the big plays that beat them. It was their fifth loss of the season against two victories and a tie.

Brown actually outgained Penn State in first half total offense, 229-205, but still trailed 17-7.

Penn State took a 7-0 lead in the first quarter as Williams' 31-yard run triggered a seven-play 62-yard drive capped by quarterback Doug Strang's 6-yard touchdown run.

The Nittany Lions made it 14-0, en route to their sixth win against four losses, on Williams' 61-yard TD burst, and boosted it to 17-0 on Nick Gancitano's 47-yard field goal with 1:44 left in the opening period.

Brown reduced its deficit to 17-7 with an eight-play 64-yard second quarter drive on which quarterback Joe Potter scored from the 11.

In the second half, State scored on Jackson's 55-yard end around, Dozier's 44-yard run and a 1-yard smash by Tony Mumford. Brown scored its second touchdown on a fourth quarter, eight play, 71-yard drive capped by Brian Heffernan's 6-yard scoring run with 9:42 remaining.

Brown then made it 38-21 with 1:41 left when flanker John Monaghan recovered teammate Steve Ketteiberger's fumble and ran 2 yards into the end zone.

Eagles bomb Army

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Doug Flutie threw four touchdown passes, two each to wide receiver Brian Brennan and tight end Scott Gieselman, leading 16th-ranked Boston College past Army 34-14 Saturday in college football.

With scouts from the Sun, Gator, Peach and Citrus bowls in attendance, the elusive Flutie, who ranked second in the nation in total offense coming into the game, found wide-open targets all game. The junior completed 15 of 29 passes for 258 yards before leaving midway through the third quarter with the Eagles ahead 34-0.

Syracuse strikes quick

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Syracuse scored two quick first-quarter touchdowns on a 2-yard plunge by halfback Jaime Covington and 7-yard return of a blocked punt by tackle Tim Green and stifled seven Navy scoring drives inside the 20-yard line as the Orange posted a 14-7 victory over the Midshipmen Saturday.

Navy's only touchdown came early in the second quarter when tailback Napoleon McCallum took a pass from quarterback Rick Williamson at the 4-yard line, eluded one tackler and fell just over the goal line.

The Navy defense virtually shut down Syracuse, 4-5, except for the 49-yard drive that resulted in the first TD.

Navy is now 2-7 on the year.

Tigers rally, 41-33

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Doug Butler threw for 469 yards and three touchdowns and defensive back Eric Robinson had three of Princeton's four interceptions in the fourth quarter as the Tigers rallied for a 41-33 victory Saturday over Lafayette in college football.

The Tigers rallied from a 33-21 deficit to go ahead 34-33 on free safety Jim Anderson's 21-yard interception return and Butler's 13-yard scoring strike to Graham within a 2:40 span early in the fourth quarter. Ralph Ferraro then scored on a 1-yard run late in the period.

BU in I-AA playoffs

BOSTON (AP) — Terrier tailback Paul Lewis scored his 14th touchdown of the season and rushed for 112 yards as Boston University earned the Yankee Conference berth in the Division I-AA playoffs with a 17-7 football win over Connecticut.

Cornell tears up Yale

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Halfback Derrick Harmon scored four touchdowns and gained 210 yards on 25 carries to lead Cornell to its first victory of the season Saturday, a 41-7 victory over winless Yale in an Ivy League contest.

Harmon scored on touchdown runs of 44, 46, 11 and 37 yards. His first two touchdown runs capped four-play drives and gave the Red a 14-0 halftime lead.

Harvard pulls out tie

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Steve Ernst ran for a touchdown and Jim Villanueva booted a field goal in the first half and Harvard's defense frustrated Holy Cross Saturday as the Crimson shocked the unbeaten Crusaders by hanging on for a 10-10 football tie in a driving rainstorm.

Harvard, 4-2-2, dominated Holy Cross in the first half but could do little on offense in the final two quarters. However, the defense hung tough and Holy Cross had to settle for the tie on a 44-yard field goal by Tony Melink at 9:52 of the third period.

Tie sets up Ivy knot

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Craig Saltzgaber kicked a 32-yard field goal on the final play of the game Saturday to enable Dartmouth to tie Columbia 17-17 and remain deadlocked with Penn for first place in the Ivy League.

Dartmouth is now 4-0-1 in the league, same as Penn which played a non-league game against Colgate Saturday.

ACU defeats Sam Houston, 27-20

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Loyal Proffitt hit 20 of 37 passes for 189 yards and two touchdowns Saturday to lead Abilene Christian to a 27-20 victory over Sam Houston State in a Lone Star Conference game.

Tailback Lembia Kinsler's 56-yard touchdown run, Proffitt's 18-yard scoring pass to Robert Daffron and Boo Jones' 29-yard field goal gave Abilene Christian a 17-7 first-quarter lead, with Sam Houston scoring on Jon Meyers' 6-yard pass to Willie Lane.

Pat Delaney's field goals of 41 and 24 yards brought Sam Houston to within 17-13 in the third quarter, but Proffitt teamed with Kinsler for a 5-yard TD and Jones booted a 36-yard field goal to put the Wildcats out front 27-13 going into the final 15 minutes.

Pat O'Brien's 38-yard pass to Sam Moore brought Sam Houston to within 27-20 in the fourth quarter, but Abilene Christian made two first downs and ran out the clock.

ACU raised its record to 6-2 overall and 3-2 in LSC play, while Sam Houston State fell to 4-5 and 1-4.

NTSU blanks Lamar

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Scott Toman hit Nathan Williams with a 23-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to lead the North Texas State Eagles to a 10-0 victory over the Lamar Cardinals Saturday in a Southland Conference football game.

Todd Smith's 54-yard field goal in the first quarter were the only other points scored.

The first half was a defensive match-up, with North Texas State held to 20 yards in total offense and one first down, while Lamar got only 9 yards of total offense and three first downs.

"It was ho-hum, but it was a win," NTSU coach Corky Nelson said.

NTSU improved its record to 6-3 and 3-1 in SLC play, while Lamar fell to 2-7 and 1-3.

SFA downs Payne

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Claudell's 53-yard punt return for a second-quarter touchdown sparked Stephen F. Austin to a 17-10 victory over Howard Payne Saturday and kept the Lumberjacks in a first-place tie for the Lone Star Conference leadership.

Rick Wilson added a 40-yard field goal and Mike Lathan scored on a one-yard run, giving Stephen F. Austin a 17-0 lead going into the fourth quarter. Howard Payne closed the margin on Mike Jones' 26-yard field goal and Joe Batiste's one-yard run.

SFA ran its record to 6-3 for the year and 4-1 in LSC play while Howard Payne lost its sixth straight game to fall to 1-7 and 0-5.

Lutheran romps, 26-7

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — Trent Faith rushed for 186 yards and scored two touchdowns as Texas Lutheran romped over Southeastern Oklahoma, 26-7.

Faith got his first score with less than three minutes gone in the first quarter, galloping 53 yards. He scored the second on a 12-yarder in the opening minutes of the final period.

In the second period, Ben Kempf put Texas Lutheran, 6-3, ahead 12-0 with a 15-yard pass play from quarterback Carlton Drisdal. But Southeastern, 1-7, cut the margin to 12-7 as Billy Brown hit Kent Davis on an 18-yard pass play.

Braddy leads UAPB

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Cornerback Eddie Braddy returned a blocked field goal 72 yards for one touchdown and ran an intercepted pass back 55 yards for another as the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff defeated Prairie View 34-6.

Braddy's first score came with 10:29 left in the second quarter. The Golden Lions, 2-6-1 on the season, got their other three touchdowns on the passing of quarterback Feryl Jordan. Jordan hit tight end Dale Marlow with a 25-yard scoring pass and then teamed with his brother Russell Jordan for touchdowns of 65 and 25 yards.

Prairie View got its only touchdown on a 2-yard run by Darryl Smith in the third quarter. A pass interference penalty on UAPB gave Prairie View a first down on the 1.

Prairie View is 0-9.

ETSU holds off A&I

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Kyle Mackey passed for two touchdowns and 240 yards and led an East Texas State offense that totaled 581 yards as the Lions crushed Texas A&I 35-24 in a Lone Star Conference football game.

ETSU tailback Ricky Dirks gained 154 yards on the ground and ran 8 yards for a touchdown as the Lions moved to 6-2 on the season and 4-1 in LSC play.

For the Javelinas, quarterback Chris Soza threw for 139 yards and rushed for 81.

ETSU will meet Stephen F. Austin, also 4-1 in the conference, next Saturday.

McMurry rips Tarleton

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Kevin Walker and Clyde McKenzie each passed for one touchdown as McMurry tallied a 17-0 Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association victory over Tarleton State Saturday night.

Trinity edges Nuevo

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — David Garcia's 100-yard interception return for a touchdown led Trinity of Texas to a 10-7 victory over the University of Nuevo Leon, Mexico Saturday night.

McNeese wins, 20-16

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Subester Brooks ran six yards for a touchdown and kicker Tony Whittington booted two field goals Saturday to lift McNeese State to a 20-16 Southland Conference football victory over Texas-Arlington.

Kings rip apart Rockets, 123-106

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — LaSalle Thompson established career highs of 22 points and 17 rebounds to power the Kansas City Kings to a 123-106 National Basketball Association victory over the Houston Rockets Saturday night.

A free throw by the Rockets' Phil Ford at the 5:07 mark of the third quarter pulled Houston to within two points, 77-75, but the Kings ripped off eight unanswered points in the next minute to take a 10-point lead.

Frogs miss winning field goal

TCU WAS to suffer the same disappointment before it was over. Starting on their own 12 with 2:28 left, the Frogs drove to the Tech 32 where Ken Ozee missed a 49-yarder with less than 10 seconds to play. That's usually about when this game is won, when either team wins it.

TCU Coach Jim Wacker's reaction: "I kept saying, 'He's got it, he's got it', but then somebody finally said 'no he didn't.' Then I probably said something else. Offensively, and defensively, we just outplayed them. It was just that danged kicking game..."

Wacker said he would have tried another play before the kick, except "if we'd caught the ball in bounds, the clock would have run out on us. I thought about throwing a sideline route, but they were covering the sidelines pretty tight, so then I started worrying about an interception. Finally I thought, we'll kick it. Ozee has a strong leg, and it was definitely in his range. Nobody feels worse about that than Ozee does."

THE DECISION-making delay also made the kicker a hurryup job. Only 14 seconds were left when the kicking team came on the field. "I don't think that really bothered us," said Ozee. "I looked up right before the snap to see what was left on the clock (two seconds)."

Tech quarterback Jim Hart said, "We've been complaining because the offense hasn't been scoring anything but field goals. And today, we couldn't even get a field goal when we needed it."

Actually, the elusive Harris gave Tech plenty of opportunities to win. He returned a punt 83-yards for a touchdown with 14:19 left in the second period, broke a reverse for a 65-yard touchdown in the same period, but had it called back after 28 yards for stepping out of bounds. And, of course, in the final period, he returned a punt 50 yards to give Tech its final chance.

"Harris certainly gave us enough opportunities. We weren't able to come through in the clutch. We weren't able knock them off the line of scrimmage and that's discouraging," Moore said.

Tech's defense gave the Raiders favorable field position throughout the day. It wasn't until the second period that TCU crossed midfield, and then the Frogs went all the way. Freshman halfback Egypt Allen, who entered the game late in the opening period, slithered over tackle, broke into a scattered secondary and rode the Nile 47 yards for the score with 7:15 left in the half. That concluded a five-play, 69-yard drive that began after Gann's missed 47-yard field goal.

Moments after the TD, TCU was threatening again, taking over after a punt at the Tech 49 and moving to the Tech 13 on a 36-yard pass from quarterback Anthony Gulley to split end Greg Arterberry. However, free safety Stan David, who was to save the game in later, intercepted Gulley at the eight and return it to the Tech 35.

Harris broke his 28-yard run on a reverse and Tech inched to the TCU 25 from where Gann toed a 43-yard field goal with 22 seconds in the half.

TECH WAS lucky TCU didn't do more than tie it in the third period. From third and nine at the TCU 18, Gulley floated a pass up the sidelines to streaking James Calhoun, who appeared touchdown bound. Somehow David managed to get him with one hand and knock him out of bounds at the Tech 21.

"When he first caught the ball, I thought he might be gone. I don't know what kind of angle I had on him until I see the film, but I grabbed him by the back of the helmet and pulled him out of bounds," the 6-4 senior from Tucumcari, N.M. said.

On third down, TCU fumbled at the Tech 13 and Tech fumbled it back on the next play. That set up Ozee's 35-yard field goal with 5:03 left in the third period.

HARRIS then gave Tech its final opportunity with the 50-yard punt return in the fourth period, but unfortunately the Raiders couldn't follow through. He's the one big threat the 3-4-1 Raiders have and he came to Lubbock by chance. He attended Austin College, but then followed his brother Jamie to Tech. Then, he did an unbrotherly thing. He beat Jamie out of his job, so Jamie transferred to a Big Eight school.

The 5-8, 153-pound senior from McKinney came within a yard of tying the SWC punt return record with his 145 yards total in returns and the 83-yard return was Tech's first return for a TD in 15 years.

"We weren't able to convert on third down when we only had one or two yards to go," Hart said in explaining Tech's offensive problems. "We busted some plays, stepped out of bounds on the reverse and, yes, throwing the football was a problem. It was wet and we couldn't be fancy. We had to be careful."

Hart completed five of 15 passes for 28 yards. Gulley and Anthony Sciafarra combined for 212 yards on 10 of 18.

On the Road Again

with Allen and Jackie Cason

In cold weather, it becomes increasingly important to maintain an RV's batteries in their fully charged state. Cranking loads increase as engine oil thickens with the cold while battery capacity decreases at the same time. Let us assume that at 80° F, the battery's capacity is 100% and the required cranking power is also 100%. At the freezing mark of 32% F, only two-thirds of your batteries' energy is available. Yet, the required cranking power rises to 250%. Remember as well that a fully charged battery freezes at a much lower temperature than one that is but partially charged.

For realistic solutions to your recreational vehicle problems, or in additions to your R.V. such as T.V. antennas, electric tongue jacks and awnings, come to Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E. 2nd, Odessa (337-6635, Midlanders phone 663-4800). Open Mon.-Fri. 9 to 6, Saturdays 9 to 5. We wish you a safe and happy Veterans Day Weekend.

Hint: If the specific gravity of a battery's electrolyte is under 1.220, it needs to be recharged.

Chargers desperately need victory over Steelers

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Steelers, with the best record in the American Conference, entertain the San Diego Chargers Sunday, a team desperately trying to stay in the National Football League playoff picture.

The Steelers, 7-2, own a two-game lead in the Central Division while the Chargers are 3-6 in the AFC West, losers of three in a row and all but mathematically out of the running for a postseason berth.

Sunday's other NFL games are Atlanta at New Orleans, Miami at San Francisco, Denver at Seattle, the Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, St. Louis at Washington, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Buffalo at New England, Baltimore at the New York Jets, Dallas at Philadelphia, Cleveland vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago at the Los Angeles Rams and Cincinnati at Houston. Monday night, it's the New York Giants at Detroit.

Chuck Muncie, San Diego's leading runner every year since coming from New Orleans during the 1980 season, said the Chargers still are thinking like winners. That, he said, is not the way it was in his four years with the Saints, when their season was almost always over by the midway point.

"Everyone expected to lose," Muncie said. "They'd just suit up and that was about it. But that's one thing about Don Coryell (the Chargers' coach). He won't let that happen here. He instills pride in all of us.

"Here, we don't even think about not winning. He won't let us. If you think about it, you don't belong here."

Tight end Kellen Winslow also said he hasn't given up hope this year. "If I thought it was too late," he said, "I'd pack my stuff and head home." Still, things are bleak for the Chargers, still playing without quarterback Dan Fouts, out with a damaged rotator cuff in his right shoulder.

The last time San Diego got off to such a poor start was in 1978, the last time it failed to make the playoffs. And the last time the Steelers got off to such a good start was in 1979, the last time they won a Super Bowl. They also are missing their No. 1 quarterback. Terry Bradshaw's been out all year with a sore elbow.

Ed Luther, San Diego's starting quarterback the past two games, threw six interceptions in last Monday night's 27-24 loss to Washington. Now he goes against the NFL's sack leaders. The Steelers' defense has flattened quarterbacks 37 times this year.

NFL

THE SAINTS' defense is the best in the National Conference, allowing barely 300 yards per game. It will be facing an Atlanta offense which has rolled up better than 400 yards in each of the past two games — and it will be performing in front of a capacity crowd in the Superdome. It's the first time New Orleans has sold out three consecutive home games. In the teams' first meeting this season, the Saints won 19-17 as Morten Andersen kicked a 35-yard field goal on the game's final play.

The Dolphins-49ers game matches division leaders. Miami shares first place with Buffalo at 6-3 in the AFC East, while San Francisco, also 6-3, is one game ahead of the Saints and Rams in the NFC West.

The Dolphins have won all three previous meetings, most recently 17-13 in 1980, and have the AFC's best record against NFC foes at 34-8. Miami's 147 points allowed are the fewest in the league, matched only by Denver, the surprise co-leader with the Raiders in the AFC West. The Dolphins have won three in a row with rookie Dan Marino, the AFC's passing leader, at quarterback.

The Broncos have won four in a row since Steve DeBerg replaced John Elway at quarterback and, at 6-3, hold a one-game edge over Seattle, which last Sunday completed a season sweep of its two-game series with the Raiders.

Curt Warner of the Seahawks, who gained 101 yards against Los Angeles, surpassed Houston's idle Earl Campbell for the AFC rushing lead with 755 yards and is on his way to becoming Seattle's first 1,000-yard runner. He's only 50 yards away from tying Sherman Smith's single-season club record.

THE CHIEFS will throw their pass defense, the league's second best, against Marc Wilson. He's making his third start of the season for the Raiders, the AFC's highest scoring team (242 points). It could be an aerial war if Kansas City's Bill Kenney performs like he did last Sunday. In a 27-24 loss to Denver, he threw the ball a club-record 52 times.

On Oct. 9, the Redskins routed St. Louis 38-14. Since then, the Cardinals are unbeaten with two wins and one tie — but the Cards haven't won in Washington since 1978. Washington's 294 points scored leads the league.

Tampa Bay and Minnesota are at the opposite ends of the NFC Central standings, the Bucs still looking for their first victory of the year and the Vikings 6-3 and holding a two-game lead over Detroit and Green Bay.

One of Tampa Bay's narrowest losses was 19-16 on Sept. 18, when Benny Ricardo's last-minute 38-yard field goal for the Vikings forced overtime and his 42-yarder won it.

Buffalo is on the road in four of its next five games, starting against the Patriots, whom they trounced 31-0 two weeks ago. Joe Ferguson of the Bills, who threw two touchdown passes in that game, has fired 12 in the past four gmes, giving him 18 for the season. Two of them went to Mike Mosley last week against New Orleans.

The Jets, who have toughened their rushing defense in the past few games, face Baltimore, owner of the league's top rushing offense.

New York has won the last three meetings against the Colts. The Jets' next touchdown and extra point will give them 100 consecutive points against the Colts without allowing one point.

Quarterback Richard Todd of the Jets, who suffered a strained groin muscle last Sunday at San Francisco, probably will start against Baltimore.

THE BROWNS, in the AFC, and the Packers, in the NFC, are each two games out of their Central Division leads. Cleveland is second in the conference in passing and tight end Ozzie Newsome is the AFC's receiving leader with 50 catches for 508 yards. Green Bay hopes to get James Lofton back into their offense. Last week, the speedy wide receiver was held without a catch by Cincinnati.

The Bears-Rams games matches two of the game's great runners, Walter Payton of Chicago and Eric Dickerson of Los Angeles. Payton needs only 23 yards to move into second place in NFL career combined yardage. He has 14,346 to O.J. Simpson's 14,368 and Jim Brown's record 15,459. Last weekend at Miami, Dickerson became the 17th rookie in NFL history to gain 1,000 yards in his first season and the first running back to reach that total this year. He has 1,096. That's 186 more than Atlanta's William Andrews, his closest pursuer.

Another of the game's great backs, Earl Campbell, returns to action for Houston against Cincinnati after sitting out last weekend's 25-19 overtime loss to Cleveland. It was the Oilers' third overtime loss of the season and their 16th consecutive loss over two seasons, two shy of the club record and 10 off Tampa Bay's league record for futility.

The Bengals, with quarterback Turk Schonert under contract after his flirtation with the United States Football League, are bidding for their third consecutive victory this year and fourth in a row over Houston.

'It's time to put-up or shut-up' for Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "It's time to put-up or shut-up," said Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski.

The Eagles' playoff hopes are in jeopardy Sunday when they meet the Dallas Cowboys here in a National Football League game.

"We've lost three games in a row and we can't afford to lose another," said Jaworski of the 4-5 Eagles.

"We're still in the hunt for a playoff spot and we all realize it. But another loss would make it tough," the quarterback observed.

"It's a must game, no doubt about it. We have to win"

It won't be easy.

The 8-1 Cowboys already have beaten the Eagles 37-7 and are favored to repeat the blowout of a team which hasn't won at home this year and lost eight of the last nine on their turf.

Jaworski, however, sees some hope.

"We usually play them well, matchup pretty well," he said, discounting the lopsided earlier defeat. "I'm sure you'll see a fired up emotional football team Sunday. We have to be."

The Eagles feel one key to beating the Cowboys is stopping tight end Doug Cosbie from catching passes over the middle.

"There is no question that we can't allow that," said Eagles coach Marion Campbell. "We can't let him free wheel like he did. The big thing we have to stop is Cosbie and Ron Springs on their third down situations. We've done a good job on that before, but just got away from it."

Dallas coach Tom Landry said he doesn't expect an easy game.

"It was our best game, but it wasn't Philadelphia's obviously," Landry noted. "It's difficult when you're coming back from a game like that to play a team that did not play the way it's capable of. It's going to be a very tough game."

Dallas quarterback Danny White said, "not many teams can't improve and get better in some ways. But the bottom line is are you making the plays necessary to win football games? And we've been making them or we wouldn't be 8-1."

White has completed 176 of 301 passes for 2,231 yards and 19 touchdowns. Last week he threw five TD aerials to tie a team record.

He does have 15 interceptions.

White attributes the interceptions to a more aggressive attitude. He has been throwing the ball in traffic a lot more.

"I've tried to force it in situations I shouldn't have," he said. "But we've done some things with the passing game that last year we wouldn't have tried. It's just a matter of perfecting it."

Jaworski has been the Eagles' main offensive threat. He's completed 128 of 228 for 1,840 yards and 9 TDs, with seven intercepted.

On the ground, the Eagles will have to stop Tony Dorsett and Springs. Dorsett, the NFL's ninth all-time rusher, is having an excellent season with 819 yards on 166 carries, a 4.9 average. Springs has gained 351 on 91 carries, a 3.9 norm.

The Eagles could be hard pressed since they're 26th in the 28-team league against the run. They are first in pass defense.

The Eagles running game, a sore spot all season for Campbell, features Hubie Oliver (271-65) and Mike Williams (195-52). Williams returns after missing a game with an injured shoulder.

Oilers out to end losing streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Sunday's National Football League battle between the Houston Oilers and the Cincinnati Bengals could have been a good "misery loves company" meeting. But the Bengals have ruined the plot by winning their last two games.

The Oilers have lost 16 in a row over the last two years, including nine this season.

The Bengals had lost six of their first seven games this year, before beating Cleveland and Green Bay in their last two games.

In those victories, Cincinnati's offense eliminated the mistakes that had plagued the team early in the season. The Bengals' defense, meanwhile, ranks No. 1 in the National Football League.

"We haven't been turning the ball over and making mistakes," said Cincinnati quarterback Turk Schonert.

Norman easily wins Kapalua

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Australian Greg Norman, hitting long drives and sinking five birdies, fired a 4-under-par 67 Saturday and easily ran away with a six-stroke victory in the $300,000 Kapalua International Championship of Golf.

Norman, who captured the largest purse in his seven-year pro career, $100,000, completed the four rounds on the par-71 Kapalua Bay Golf Course in 16-under-par 268.

Crenshaw, Wadkins and Simpson finished at 274, while Massy Kuramoto of Japan was another stroke back at 275.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, who started the final round in second place just two strokes behind Norman, birdied three of his first eight holes. But he then put a shot into a sand trap on the ninth hole and missed the putt for a bogie.

He birdied the 10th, but bogied the 11th, 12th, 14th and 17th to finish with at 8-under 276.

Norman started off the final round with birdies on the 4th, 6th, 7th and 9th holes, dropping him 16-under-par for the tournament. He sliced another stroke off par when he birdied the 10th, but bogied the 18th hole to finish with a 67 for the day.

Linemen nominated for Lombardi Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Offensive guards Dean Steinkuhler of top-ranked Nebraska and Doug Dawson of Texas were among 12 players nominated Saturday to receive the 1983 Lombardi Award as college football's lineman of the year.

The 12 players were selected by a 158-member committee of college coaches, sports writers and sportscasters.

The nominees included Rick Bryan, Oklahoma defensive tackle; Bill Fralic, Pittsburgh offensive tackle; William Fuller, defensive tackle from North Carolina; Gordon Hudson, tight end from Brigham Young; and Stefan Humphries, Michigan offensive guard.

Also on the list were Rick Hunley, inside linebacker from Arizona; Wilber Marshall, Florida outside linebacker; Ron Rivera, outside linebacker from California Berkley; Tony Slaton, offensive center from Southern California; and Reggie White, defensive tackle from Tennessee.

Increased compensation isn't slowing free agent market

NEW YORK (AP) — A year ago the list ineluded Steve Garvey, Floyd Bannister, Don Baylor, Steve Kemp and Omar Moreno. This year, there are stars such as Rich Gossage, Kent Tekulve, Manny Trillo, Rod Carew and Dave Parker.

All are free agents, and they have become an integral part of many clubs' building plans. Even an increase in compensation for teams losing top quality free agents has not slowed their movement, and there is bound to be a flurry of activity Monday at this year's reentry draft.

Some clubs consider the free-agent market a waste of money, "more often than not hurting you more than it helps," says Larel Prieb, a spokesman for the Minnesota Twins. "The first multimillion-dollar salaries went to free agents, and then they became the standard-setters for the other players."

The Twins are among those teams that have mainly avoided the free-agent market. But many more clubs still find the lure of all this footloose talent too much to resist.

It's called the quick fix. Draft 'em, sign 'em and — management hopes — win. These are players that can help right away, or so the clubs thought when they signed them.

It's not that simple, though. At best, it's a chance, and oftentimes it's the players with the smaller contracts who help most.

Last year, for example, 41 players went through the re-entry draft — 14 outfielders, 11 pitchers, 10 infielders and six catchers.

Of those signed, 12 won contracts worth $1 million or more over various lengths. They were Garvey with San Diego, Kemp, Baylor and Bob Shirley with the New York Yankees, Bannister with the Chicago White Sox, Moreno and Alan Ashby with Houston, Terry Forster with Atlanta, Hal McRae with Kansas City, Bob McClure with Milwaukee, Rick Manning with Cleveland and Al Cowens with Seattle.

PERHAPS FIVE — Garvey, Bannister, Baylor, McRae and Forster — had years equal to their salaries. The rest left their clubs with little to show for the investment.

Garvey, who had left Los Angeles, signed a five-year, $6 million contract with the Padres. Despite missing the last part of the season with a thumb injury, he drove in 59 runs, hit .294 average and had 14 home runs.

Bannister, who had been with Seattle, was a big part of the White Sox' drive to the American League West Division title after signing a five-year, $4.79 million deal with options for three more years. He started slowly, but finished with a 16-10 record, 3.35 earned run average and 193 strikeouts.

Baylor, formerly California's designated hitter, was a big hit with the Yankees this season. He signed a four-year deal worth more than $3.6 million and responded with a .303 average, 85 RBI, 33 doubles and 21 homers.

McRae, another DH, re-signed for three years with the Royals, earning $2.4 million. Although far off his 1982 mark of 133 RBI, he did hit .311 with 82 RBI and 12 homers.

Forster was another of the Dodgers' runaways and was a big help for Atlanta, which needed his left-handed relief pitching. Forster had a 2.16 ERA in 79 1-3 innings, mostly in long relief, with a 3-2 record and 13 saves.

AFTER THAT, the numbers fade.

Kemp's contract was eclipsed in value among 1982's free agents only by that of Garvey. After leavng the White Sox, Kemp signed a five-year, $5.45 million deal with a $500,000 bonus with the Yankees. The right fielder slumped, then missed the final part of the season with a broken jaw. He finished at .241 with only 49 RBI and 12 homers.

The Orioles signed two free agents, both of whom played in Baltimore in 1982 and were among the "role players" who helped the Orioles to victory in the World Series this year. Catcher Joe Nolan played in 73 games this season as World Series MVP Rick Dempsey's backup, hitting .277 with five homers in 184 at-bats, and John Lowenstein, who re-signed, platooned in left field with Gary Roenicke, hitting .280 with 60 RBI and 15 homers.

Chargers desperately need victory over Steelers

By The Associated Press

NFL

The Pittsburgh Steelers, with the best record in the American Conference, entertain the San Diego Chargers Sunday, a team desperately trying to stay in the National Football League playoff picture.

The Steelers, 7-2, own a two-game lead in the Central Division while the Chargers are 3-6 in the AFC West, losers of three in a row and all but mathematically out of the running for a postseason berth.

Sunday's other NFL games are Atlanta at New Orleans, Miami at San Francisco, Denver at Seattle, the Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, St. Louis at Washington, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Buffalo at New England, Baltimore at the New York Jets, Dallas at Philadelphia, Cleveland vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago at the Los Angeles Rams and Cincinnati at Houston. Monday night, it's the New York Giants at Detroit.

Chuck Muncie, San Diego's leading runner every year since coming from New Orleans during the 1980 season, said the Chargers still are thinking like winners. That, he said, is not the way it was in his four years with the Saints, when their season was almost always over by the midway point.

"Everyone expected to lose," Muncie said. "They'd just suit up and that was about it. But that's one thing about Don Coryell (the Chargers' coach). He won't let that happen here. He instills pride in all of us.

"Here, we don't even think about not winning. He won't let us. If you think about it, you don't belong here."

Tight end Kellen Winslow also said he hasn't given up hope this year. "If I thought it was too late," he said, "I'd pack my stuff and head home." Still, things are bleak for the Chargers, still playing without quarterback Dan Fouts, out with a damaged rotator cuff in his right shoulder.

The last time San Diego got off to such a poor start was in 1978, the last time it failed to make the playoffs. And the last time the Steelers got off to such a good start was in 1979, the last time they won a Super Bowl. They also are missing their No. 1 quarterback. Terry Bradshaw's been out all year with a sore elbow.

Ed Luther, San Diego's starting quarterback the past two games, threw six interceptions in last Monday night's 27-24 loss to Washington. Now he goes against the NFL's sack leaders. The Steelers' defense has flattened quarterbacks 37 times this year.

THE SAINTS' defense is the best in the National Conference, allowing barely 300 yards per game. It will be facing an Atlanta offense which has rolled up better than 400 yards in each of the past two games — and it will be performing in front of a capacity crowd in the Superdome. It's the first time New Orleans has sold out three consecutive home games. In the teams' first meeting this season, the Saints won 19-17 as Morten Andersen kicked a 35-yard field goal on the game's final play.

The Dolphins-49ers game matches division leaders. Miami shares first place with Buffalo at 6-3 in the AFC East, while San Francisco, also 6-3, is one game ahead of the Saints and Rams in the NFC West.

The Dolphins have won all three previous meetings, most recently 17-13 in 1980, and have the AFC's best record against NFC foes at 34-8. Miami's 147 points allowed are the fewest in the league, matched only by Denver, the surprise co-leader with the Raiders in the AFC West. The Dolphins have won three in a row with rookie Dan Marino, the AFC's passing leader, at quarterback.

The Broncos have won four in a row since Steve DeBerg replaced John Elway at quarterback and, at 6-3, hold a one-game edge over Seattle, which last Sunday completed a season sweep of its two-game series with the Raiders.

Curt Warner of the Seahawks, who gained 101 yards against Los Angeles, surpassed Houston's idle Earl Campbell for the AFC rushing lead with 755 yards and is on his way to becoming Seattle's first 1,000-yard runner. He's only 50 yards away from tying Sherman Smith's single-season club record.

THE CHIEFS will throw their pass defense, the league's second best, against Marc Wilson. He's making his third start of the season for the Raiders, the AFC's highest scoring team (242 points). It could be an aerial war if Kansas City's Bill Kenney performs like he did last Sunday. In a 27-24 loss to Denver, he threw the ball a club-record 52 times.

On Oct. 9, the Redskins routed St. Louis 38-14. Since then, the Cardinals are unbeaten with two wins and one tie — but the Cards haven't won in Washington since 1978. Washington's 294 points scored leads the league.

Tampa Bay and Minnesota are at the opposite ends of the NFC Central standings, the Bucs still looking for their first victory of the year and the Vikings 6-3 and holding a two-game lead over Detroit and Green Bay.

One of Tampa Bay's narrowest losses was 19-16 on Sept. 18, when Benny Ricardo's last-minute 38-yard field goal for the Vikings forced overtime and his 42-yarder won it.

Buffalo is on the road in four of its next five games, starting against the Patriots, whom they trounced 31-0 two weeks ago. Joe Ferguson of the Bills, who threw two touchdown passes in that game, has fired 12 in the past four gmes, giving him 18 for the season. Two of them went to Mike Mosley last week against New Orleans.

The Jets, who have toughened their rushing defense in the past few games, face Baltimore, owner of the league's top rushing offense.

New York has won the last three meetings against the Colts. The Jets' next touchdown and extra point will give them 100 consecutive points against the Colts without allowing one point.

Quarterback Richard Todd of the Jets, who suffered a strained groin muscle last Sunday at San Francisco, probably will start against Baltimore.

THE BROWNS, in the AFC, and the Packers, in the NFC, are each two games out of their Central Division leads. Cleveland is second in the conference in passing and tight end Ozzie Newsome is the AFC's receiving leader with 50 catches for 508 yards. Green Bay hopes to get James Lofton back into their offense. Last week, the speedy wide receiver was held without a catch by Cincinnati.

The Bears-Rams games matches two of the game's great runners, Walter Payton of Chicago and Eric Dickerson of Los Angeles. Payton needs only 23 yards to move into second place in NFL career combined yardage. He has 14,346 to O.J. Simpson's 14,368 and Jim Brown's record 15,459. Last weekend at Miami, Dickerson became the 17th rookie in NFL history to gain 1,000 yards in his first season and the first running back to reach that total this year. He has 1,096. That's 186 more than Atlanta's William Andrews, his closest pursuer.

Another of the game's great backs, Earl Campbell, returns to action for Houston against Cincinnati after sitting out last weekend's 25-19 overtime loss to Cleveland. It was the Oilers' third overtime loss of the season and their 16th consecutive loss over two seasons, two shy of the club record and 10 off Tampa Bay's league record for futility.

The Bengals, with quarterback Turk Schonert under contract after his flirtation with the United States Football League, are bidding for their third consecutive victory this year and fourth in a row over Houston.

'It's time to put-up or shut-up' for Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "It's time to put-up or shut-up," said Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski.

The Eagles' playoff hopes are in jeopardy Sunday when they meet the Dallas Cowboys here in a National Football League game.

"We've lost three games in a row and we can't afford to lose another," said Jaworski of the 4-5 Eagles.

"We're still in the hunt for a playoff spot and we all realize it. But another loss would make it tough," the quarterback observed.

"It's a must game, no doubt about it. We have to win"

It won't be easy.

The 8-1 Cowboys already have beaten the Eagles 37-7 and are favored to repeat the blowout of a team which hasn't won at home this year and lost eight of the last nine on their turf.

Jaworski, however, sees some hope.

"We usually play them well, matchup pretty well," he said, discounting the lopsided earlier defeat. "I'm sure you'll see a fired up emotional football team Sunday. We have to be."

The Eagles feel one key to beating the Cowboys is stopping tight end Doug Cosbie from catching passes over the middle.

"There is no question that we can't allow that," said Eagles coach Marion Campbell. "We can't let him free wheel like he did. The big thing we have to stop is Cosbie and Ron Springs on their third down situations. We've done a good job on that before, but just got away from it."

Dallas coach Tom Landry said he doesn't expect an easy game.

"It was our best game, but it wasn't Philadelphia's obviously," Landry noted. "It's difficult when you're coming back from a game like that to play a team that did not play the way it's capable of. It's going to be a very tough game."

Dallas quarterback Danny White said, "not many teams can't improve and get better in some ways. But the bottom line is are you making the plays necessary to win football games? And we've been making them or we wouldn't be 8-1."

White has completed 176 of 301 passes for 2,231 yards and 19 touchdowns. Last week he threw five TD aerials to tie a team record.

He does have 15 interceptions.

White attributes the interceptions to a more aggressive attitude. He has been throwing the ball in traffic a lot more.

"I've tried to force it in situations I shouldn't have," he said. "But we've done some things with the passing game that last year we wouldn't have tried. It's just a matter of perfecting it."

Jaworski has been the Eagles' main offensive threat. He's completed 128 of 228 for 1,840 yards and 9 TDs, with seven intercepted.

On the ground, the Eagles will have to stop Tony Dorsett and Springs. Dorsett, the NFL's ninth all-time rusher, is having an excellent season with 819 yards on 166 carries, a 4.9 average. Springs has gained 351 on 91 carries, a 3.9 norm.

The Eagles could be hard pressed since they're 26th in the 28-team league against the run. They are first in pass defense.

The Eagles running game, a sore spot all season for Campbell, features Hubie Oliver (271-65) and Mike Williams (195-52). Williams returns after missing a game with an injured shoulder.

Oilers out to end losing streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Sunday's National Football League battle between the Houston Oilers and the Cincinnati Bengals could have been a good "misery loves company" meeting. But the Bengals have ruined the plot by winning their last two games.

The Oilers have lost 16 in a row over the last two years, including nine this season.

The Bengals had lost six of their first seven games this year, before beating Cleveland and Green Bay in their last two games.

In those victories, Cincinnati's offense eliminated the mistakes that had plagued the team early in the season. The Bengals' defense, meanwhile, ranks No. 1 in the National Football League.

"We haven't been turning the ball over and making mistakes," said Cincinnati quarterback Turk Schonert since they're 26th in the 28-team league against the run. They are first in pass defense.

Norman easily wins Kapalua

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Australian Greg Norman, hitting long drives and sinking five birdies, fired a 4-under-par 67 Saturday and easily ran away with a six-stroke victory in the $300,000 Kapalua International Championship of Golf.

Norman, who captured the largest purse in his seven-year pro career, $100,000, completed the four rounds on the par-71 Kapalua Bay Golf Course in 16-under-par 268.

Crenshaw, Wadkins and Simpson finished at 274, while Massy Kuramoto of Japan was another stroke back at 275.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, who started the final round in second place just two strokes behind Norman, birdied three of his first eight holes. But he then put a shot into a sand trap on the ninth hole and missed the putt for a bogie.

He birdied the 10th, but bogied the 11th, 12th, 14th and 17th to finish with at 8-under 276.

Norman started off the final round with birdies on the 4th, 6th, 7th and 9th holes, dropping him 16-under-par for the tournament. He sliced another stroke off par when he birdied the 10th, but bogied the 18th hole to finish with a 67 for the day.

Linemen nominated for Lombardi Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Offensive guards Dean Steinkuhler of top-ranked Nebraska and Doug Dawson of Texas were among 12 players nominated Saturday to receive the 1983 Lombardi Award as college football's lineman of the year.

The 12 players were selected by a 158-member committee of college coaches, sports writers and sportscasters.

The nominees included Rick Bryan, Oklahoma defensive tackle; Bill Fralic, Pittsburgh offensive tackle; William Fuller, defensive tackle from North Carolina; Gordon Hudson, tight end from Brigham Young; and Stefan Humphries, Michigan offensive guard.

Also on the list were Rick Hunley, inside linebacker from Arizona; Wilber Marshall, Florida outside linebacker; Ron Rivera, outside linebacker from California Berkley; Tony Slaton, offensive center from Southern California; and Reggie White, defensive tackle from Tennessee.

Increased compensation isn't slowing free agent market

NEW YORK (AP) — A year ago the list included Steve Garvey, Floyd Bannister, Don Baylor, Steve Kemp and Omar Moreno. This year, there are stars such as Rich Gossage, Kent Tekulve, Manny Trillo, Rod Carew and Dave Parker.

All are free agents, and they have become an integral part of many clubs' building plans. Even an increase in compensation for teams losing top quality free agents has not slowed their movement, and there is bound to be a flurry of activity Monday at this year's re-entry draft.

Some clubs consider the free-agent market a waste of money, "more often than not hurting you more than it helps," says Larel Prieb, a spokesman for the Minnesota Twins. "The first multimillion-dollar salaries went to free agents, and then they became the standard-setters for the other players."

The Twins are among those teams that have mainly avoided the free-agent market. But many more clubs still find the lure of all this footloose talent too much to resist.

It's called the quick fix. Draft 'em, sign 'em and — management hopes — win. These are players that can help right away, or so the clubs thought when they signed them.

It's not that simple, though. At best, it's a chance, and oftentimes it's the players with the smaller contracts who help most.

Last year, for example, 41 players went through the re-entry draft — 14 outfielders, 11 pitchers, 10 infielders and six catchers.

Of those signed, 12 won contracts worth $1 million or more over various lengths. They were Garvey with San Diego, Kemp, Baylor and Bob Shirley with the New York Yankees, Bannister with the Chicago White Sox, Moreno and Alan Ashby with Houston, Terry Forster with Atlanta, Hal McRae with Kansas City, Bob McClure with Milwaukee, Rick Manning with Cleveland and Al Cowens with Seattle.

PERHAPS FIVE — Garvey, Bannister, Baylor, McRae and Forster — had years equal to their salaries. The rest left their clubs with little to show for the investment.

Garvey, who had left Los Angeles, signed a five-year, $6 million contract with the Padres. Despite missing the last part of the season with a thumb injury, he drove in 59 runs, hit .294 average and had 14 home runs.

Bannister, who had been with Seattle, was a big part of the White Sox' drive to the American League West Division title after signing a five-year, $4.79 million deal with options for three more years. He started slowly, but finished with a 16-10 record, 3.35 earned run average and 193 strikeouts.

Baylor, formerly California's designated hitter, was a big hit with the Yankees this season. He signed a four-year deal worth more than $3.6 million and responded with a .303 average, 85 RBI, 33 doubles and 21 homers.

McRae, another DH, re-signed for three years with the Royals, earning $2.4 million. Although far off his 1982 mark of 133 RBI, he did hit .311 with 82 RBI and 12 homers.

Forster was another of the Dodgers' runaways and was a big help for Atlanta, which needed his left-handed relief pitching. Forster had a 2.16 ERA in 79 1-3 innings, mostly in long relief, with a 3-2 record and 13 saves.

AFTER THAT, the numbers fade.

Kemp's contract was eclipsed in value among 1982's free agents only by that of Garvey. After leavng the White Sox, Kemp signed a five-year, $5.45 million deal with a $500,000 bonus with the Yankees. The right fielder slumped, then missed the final part of the season with a broken jaw. He finished at .241 with only 49 RBI and 12 homers.

The Orioles signed two free agents, both of whom played in Baltimore in 1982 and were among the "role players" who helped the Orioles to victory in the World Series this year. Catcher Joe Nolan played in 73 games this season as World Series MVP Rick Dempsey's backup, hitting .277 with five homers in 184 at-bats, and John Lowenstein, who re-signed, platooned in left field with Gary Roenicke, hitting .280 with 60 RBI and 15 homers.

Jimmy Connors encourages partner Chris Evert Lloyd after they lost a tie-breaker point in their first set against Carling Bassett and Vince Van Patten Friday night.

Tanner-Jaeger move into WMD tennis finals

HOUSTON (AP) — Roscoe Tanner and Andrea Jaeger traded jibes with Ilie Nastase through most of two sets and then rallied for a 2-6, 7-5, 7-5 victory Saturday night over Nastase and Hana Mandlikova to gain the semifinals in the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles championships at Astroarena.

Third seeded Chris Evert Lloyd and Jimmy Connors met Betsy Nagelsen and Butch Walts in a later semifinals match for a berth in Sunday's finals, which will pay $100,000 to the winning team.

Nastase and Tanner exchanged gestures in the second set after Nastase slammed an overhead shot at Jaeger's feet. The banter continued throughout most of the second set with Nastase at least once aiming an obscene gesture in Tanner's direction.

Tanner-Jaeger finally broke Mandlikova in the 12th game of the second set when Mandlikova hit a forehand net error.

The foursome settled down to playing tennis in the third set with Jaeger showing improved serve and volley play.

After Jaeger and Mandlikova were broken in the third and fourth games, the match went down to the 12th game once again before Mandlikova was broken at the first match point.

Mavs hold on to beat Lakers

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks scored only two field goals in the final 7:43 but held on to defeat the Los Angeles Lakers 107-102 behind Mark Aguirre's 33 points Saturday night in a National Basketball Association game.

Aguirre scored the game's final points on a 20-foot jumper with 1:42 to play. Los Angeles could not take advantage of two Dallas turnovers in the final 1:10 as Jamaal Wilkes, Michael Cooper and Bob McAdoo all missed shots.

Rookie Dale Ellis, who scored 14 points, hit his second consecutive basket to give Dallas a 100-90 edge with 7:43 to play.

Shriver wins Wightman for U.S.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Pam Shriver felt the British team saw her as the American player to beat, so she responded by clinching the Wightman Cup trophy Saturday for the United States.

"The British were thinking the way to win was to get to me," Shriver said after beating an injured Sue Barker 6-0, 6-1 to give the United States a 4-1 lead in the best-of-seven match between the two countries.

"I certainly liked the pressure this time."

Martina Navratilova beat Jo Durie 6-3, 6-3 in a match between the top players of the two countries that added another point for the Americans. Shriver and Navratilova then combined in the doubles to make it 6-1 by beating Durie and Annabel Croft, 6-2, 6-1.

Barker, the No. 2 British player, was playing on a left ankle she had hurt.

'Osterman Weekend's' focus fuzzy

A Review

"The Osterman Weekend," starring Rutger Hauer ("Blade Runner") and John Hurt ("The Elephant Man"), opens with a grainy video picture of Hurt and his wife (played by Merete Van Kamp of TV's "Princess Daisy" fame) making love. We are the voyeurs and as such, join a host of others looking on via video linkups from darkened rooms. The watchers become the watched who are watched — in a technique that harkens back to film school and is showing up in more and more movies today ("The Big Chill").

Why is there this preoccupation with the human image in two-dimensional form, lacking clarity and resolution as it does? And what does director Sam Peckinpah (best known for "The Wild Bunch", but whose 1978 movie "Convoy" preceeded a five year hiatus from film) intend in this spy versus good guy thriller? An indictment of our political, media, and technological process?

It is anybody's guess.

Based on the Robert Ludlum best-seller of the same name, "The Osterman Weekend," written by Alan Sharp, is the first of Ludlum's novels to reach the screen. And if this adaptation holds true for the others, the intricacy which can be followed in book form, does not so easily translate to film.

"The Osterman Weekend," is about television journalist John Tanner (Hauer), who is "more American than America." He delights in picking apart bureaucrats and sets his sights on the ultimate target, the chief of the CIA (Burt Lancaster). But in order to get the bureau's cooperation, Tanner must first participate in a plan to uncover the alleged traitorous activities of his three best friends.

A weekend is planned — part of an annual gathering named in honor of its host, that began seven years previously when the four graduated from Berkeley — and the CIA moves in to plant video cameras in all the strategic places. Meanwhile, Hurt mans a mobile unit near the house and playfully switches channels as the action moves from room to room.

But there's more. This plot is merely a screen for the bigger plot wherein Hurt avenges the murder of his wife by CIA operatives. Why she is murdered (in a gruesome scene that Hurt masochistically plays over and over on his video tape player) is never made clear. Nor is it clear why Hurt was chosen for this pivotal role as husband and CIA agent.

Trapped in a lethal game of double-espionage, John Tanner (Rutger Hauer) tries to warn his friends, by video monitor, that they are in danger as Bernie Osterman (Craig T. Nelson) looks on in the Twentieth Century-Fox release, "The Osterman Weekend."

From the beginning, when we see him make love to his tempting and seductive wife, it seems forced. Something about the way he holds her, shyly escapes from the sheets, and tiptoes to the bathroom, suggests a lack of familiarity with it all, a lack of conviction.

Rated R, "The Osterman Weekend" has the Peckinpah standards of slow-motion violence, action galore, and a heavy-handed message to "grasp what is left of your free will," and turn off your TVs (reminiscent of Peter Finch's proclamation in "Network"). This strident admonition, coming late in the movie, doesn't help the focus, it only adds to the blur of this already fuzzy film.

"Dead Zone," based on the novel by Stephen King, stars Christopher Walken ("Brainstorm") in a sensitive and harrowing performance of a man who is seriously injured in an auto accident and forever changed.

Hospitalized, in a coma for five years, Walken as schoolteacher Johnny Smith, awakens to find his world rearranged. His fiancee (Brooke Adams) has married another, he has no job, and now with the touch of a hand he can foretell other's pasts and futures and even change them.

The adjustment for this delicately tuned man is painfully displayed in his every movement — the halting gait, quizzical turn of his head and brief, slit-eyed grin of a child. But Walken in his other-worldly way, that distinguishes him from all other actors, seems at home in this man who is now set apart.

Photographed by Mark Irwin in a style reminiscent of "The Shining," the snow-covered New England countryside provides a stark, uninviting setting for the special kind of terror that foresight brings to Johnny Smith. He foresees fires, death and catastrophe, sometimes as if he were actually there. And each encounter weakens him, making him more emotionally and mentally vulnerable.

Though admirably backed up with performances by Herbert Lom as Smith's doctor, Anthony Zerbe as a stubborn financier and father, and Tom Skerritt as the local sheriff, "Dead Zone" is Walken's movie. Martin Sheen does appear as a hypocritical, maniacal politician, but his performance is strangely camp against the other low-key ones.

Rated R, "Dead Zone" has an appeal that often accompanies the inexplicable or the quirky, and Walken steps off the safety-netted high wire of "Brainstorm" to fall freely in the space of the "Dead Zone." Funny though, when he risks, so do we.

Big Spring Symphony begins season

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Symphony Association begins its fourth season of concert presentations with the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra Friday at 8 p.m. in the Big Spring High School Auditorium.

Featured soloist will be Robert Davidovici, concertmaster. He will perform the Mozart A major violin concerto on the "Davis" Stradivarius violin.

The Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra, under the leadership of John Giordano, has attained a reputation for excellence. The orchestra has received good reviews whether performing in New York (at Carnegie Hall) or in the Peoples Republic of China.

Friday's concert will open with the Rossini Overture to "La Cenerentola (Cinderella)," followed by the Mozart violin concerto in A major. It will close with Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony.

The concert is made possible in part by grants from the American Petrofina Foundation and a Tour Grant jointly funded by the Texas Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Single admission tickets will be sold in advance at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, in the credit department at Dunlap's Department Store and the Copper Kettle in the Big Spring Mall.

Tickets will also be available at the door. Price is $7.50 for adults and $4 for students.

Actress denies rumors of royal blood

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Merete Van Kamp isn't royalty after all, more's the pity.

For Merete, the title star of NBC's yummy, trashy miniseries, "Princess Daisy" (which airs today and tomorrow), looks regal.

She has the clean, cool blondeness of the late Grace Kelly, the proud, unsullied look the late Alfred Hitchcock loved.

When she was cast over more than 500 competitors in the showcase role of Daisy, heroine of Judith Krantz' steamy, seamy novel, publicists proclaimed that hers was a case of typecasting.

She really was royal, they said.

But Merete says she's not one bit of it and is, in fact, rather embarrassed by the report of her blue blood.

"MY father is in aluminum," says the 22-year-old Danish beauty, meaning not that he's encased in it, but that he does work related to the metal.

"I didn't put out the word that I was royal," Miss Van Kamp continues. "That was done by a friend who was trying to do me a favor."

After two months of trying for the "Daisy" role, she went to Las Vegas, Nev., to relieve the pressure and, while she was there, a chum called an NBC executive and leaked word that Merete was of royalty.

Far from having grown up as a sheltered member of the aristocracy, Miss Van Kamp, according to her own confession, was a chronic runaway. Her parents were divorced. She wasn't terribly happy with either nor at school so, at 12, she skipped out to make her fortune.

FAILING to do so in Hamburg, Germany, she went back home but kept running away until, at "about 16," she got away for good, becoming a model in Paris.

Merete doesn't tell what her mother thought of these shenanigans, but her father was tolerant.

"He told me I'd be safe so long as I had a ticket home," Miss Van Kamp reports. "Twice he had to send me a ticket."

Now a resident of Los Angeles, Merete isn't homesick for Denmark, in which, she claims, she never felt at home.

"I never felt I belonged there," she says. "Even as a child, I didn't feel that it was home...As a child, I wanted to go to Disneyland...

"I always wanted to be an actress, but I didn't know how."

Unmarried, Merete shows little interest in the institution which she fears was bad for her mother.

She does give a clue as to her taste in men, though. In "Princess Daisy," Merete is courted by Paul Michael Glazer playing a casual, womanizing television commercial director and Robert Urich playing a well-tailored business tycoon.

Asked which type she prefers in real life, Merete responds promptly.

"OH, Robert Urich," she says. "He's so classy."

Rock-and-roller swings case at cameraman

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Rock-and-roll star Chuck Berry struck a television cameraman at Anchorage International Airport, a local station reported.

Berry told KTUU cameraman Kim Daehnke not to take any pictures when the entertainer arrived Friday afternoon for a concert that night.

"I went ahead and raised my camera and started shooting," said Daehnke. "Then he just swung this briefcase at the camera. I almost dropped it...I guess he was really serious about no pictures."

Pianist's performance sabotaged by instrument

A. Romanic

Would a Mario Andretti be expected to drive last year's Indy March that had not been overhauled? For racing fans, the answer is obvious. A top flight driver would be given the latest model, in mint condition, ready to perform like the driver can.

Yet the Midland-Odessa Symphony presented guest artist, 25-year-old Aleksandra Romanic, with a piano during her Midland performance which produced a sound in no way equal to her talent.

The former could cost a driver's life or limb. The latter perhaps only a frustrating night fighting an inadequate instrument.

Both players could refuse to perform. A driver would, if he knew in advance. However, it's impossible to check everything. Mistakes do happen. A driver could find himself in a race with something wrong with his machine. If he could soldier on with it, he would do so.

That was very much the situation this week for the symphony's second subscription concert of the season. The 9-foot Steinway (which does not belong to the symphony) was tuned as close to performance time as possible. The symphony management said Miss Romanic indicated she was satisfied at that time.

Something was wrong with it by the time of the performance.

To have this happen once can be referred to as a shame. A mistake. But, "per capita, this is the richest metropolitan area in the U.S. (Forbes Fall 1983 Special Issue)." Surely it won't happen again.

Miss Romanic trained at the Moscow Conservatory and was awarded a special diploma for excellent achievement throughout her studies. She has given numerous recitals in her homeland, Yugoslavia, and in Hungary, Czechoslovakia, France, the Soviet Union and West Germany. She represented Yugoslavia at the International Meeting of Pianists in Paris.

Slim and petite (under five feet), Miss Romanic played with a solid touch. Her fingers flying over themselves to their destination, she performed Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2, in C minor, Opus 18, with skill and enthusiasm.

Despite the difficulties she was having with the piano, she retained her composure except when her concentration was broken by the applause following the first movement. Then she shushed the audience with her hand.

She played two encores at the audience's insistence — Chopin's Nocturne in F minor and his Berceuse in D-flat major.

The symphony's execution of the Rachmaninoff complimented hers. It was in this work that the symphony, directed by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, gave its most solid performance of the evening.

Selections performed by the symphony alone were John Corigliano's "Promenade Overture" and Morton Gould's "Jekyll and Hyde Variations." Both of these Texas premieres left the audience with mixed feelings — the first getting off to a surprise start and the second crossing the finish line after frequent stalls.

Elephant makes grand entrance — into the audience

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A bull elephant making an entrance in the opera "Aida" bolted into the audience, upstaging the other performers in the spectacular production of Verdi's grand opera but causing no injuries.

The elephant was quickly subdued Friday night by its handler and taken out of sight.

The elephant, named Toto, was to have been part of a triumphal procession in Opera Omaha's lavish 25th anniversary production of the opera, set in ancient Thebes. A sellout crowd of 7,000 people turned out for the performance. The second and final performance is scheduled for Sunday night.

A leopard had been placed on the elephant's back for Toto's entrance onto the stage, but Opera Omaha's marketing director, Riley Nelson, said a headphone wire dropped from above a doorway and knocked the big cat from the elephant's back.

Toto bolted, taking a left turn instead of a right. Heading for the northwest corner of the Ak-Sar-Ben Coliseum, he bounded straight for the aisle separating one section of the audience from another.

A woman in a wheelchair was pushed to one side, and Toto's handler ran to the elephant's side. With Toto turned around, the handler directed him back to the wings and out of sight.

The animals that were supposed to follow Toto — two other elephants, three leopards and white horses — never made it to the procession.

The performance had a cast of more than 400 people.

Midland Arts Assembly sets first 'Celebration'

Entries for Midland Arts Assembly's first "Celebration of the Arts," set for May 11-19, have been mailed out to area artists.

May 19, Midland artists will have their work on view and for sale at Midland Center and the adjacent park. Artists interested in participating must submit an application form and (representational) slides of their work to MAA by Dec. 15. Art forms to be included in the jury selection are ceramics, drawing, fiber, glass, graphics, jewelry, painting, photography, textile, sculpture, mixed media, floral arranging and calligraphy.

Additional information and application forms may be obtained at the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 109 N. Main St. For more information call 687-1149 from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Started in 1981 to foster and promote the various art forms in Midland, MAA has scheduled events May 11-19 that will focus on individual art forms.

A breakdown of each day's events (tentatively) scheduled thus far would include:

—May 11 Midland Community Concerts Association will feature the Texas Opera Theatre in "Champagne and Gershwin."

—May 12 a "Mini-Celebration of the Arts" will be held at Midland Park Mall where individual artists and some of the art forms offered in Midland will be recognized. That evening the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale will perform with bass-baritone A. Voketaitis as guest artist.

—May 13 each Midland church is being asked to give special recognition to "Sacred Music in the City's Churches." That afternoon the Museum of the Southwest will have a special showing of nationally known Midland artists and the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame will give special recognition to "Midland's Annual Celebration of the Arts." Sunday evening the Midland-based Thouvenel String Quartet will perform.

—May 14 will be a day of recognition for the historical and architectural achievements in Midland. Photography from Midland Camera Club will be highlighted. That evening a special performance will be presented featuring Bobby Short of New York's Cafe Carlyle.

—May 15 a "Celebration of the Arts in the Schools" is planned with each school promoting its arts. That evening the public will be invited to a special production presented by the Midland Independent School District.

—May 17 "The Lion in Winter" will be presented by Midland Community Theatre as its contribution to honor drama.

—May 18 dance will be the theme when the Permian Civic Ballet Association and the Theatre Midland Dancers co-sponsor an evening production of "A History of Dance." The production will be produced by Tom Pazik, director of the Maryland Ballet, and Cherry Jones, choreographer and dance instructor at Midland Community Theatre.

—May 19 has been designated as a "Day of Celebration for the Individual Midland Artist." In addition to the art exhibition and sale, performances will be staged by Midland's performing artists. Support auxiliaries of Midland's cultural organizations will be invited to participate by manning information booths in order to provide the public with information on their organizations. Also, Miller Lite Beer will sponsor a dual "Run for the Arts" race and a "Triathlon," which features a team race in swimming, bicycling and 10k race.

Each noon hour the week of May 14, MAA, in conjunction with the Midland Parks and Recreation Department, will co-sponsor "Celebration in the Park." Performing art groups and individual artists will perform in the Showmobile at the Downtown Plaza Park. Residents will be encouraged to bring lunch and enjoy the entertainment.

Activities will also be scheduled throughout the week which offer children and young people of Midland the opportunity to learn what art has to offer them.

Solicitation for individuals who are interested in providing performing arts during the noon "Celebration in the Park" will be conducted in early 1984. Volunteers interested in working during the "Celebration of the Arts" may call the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Acclaimed violinist mugged in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Internationally acclaimed violinist Eugene Fodor was attacked as he left his Manhattan apartment and robbed of thousands of dollars in cash and jewelry, police said Saturday.

"He was walking east from his apartment at 5:30 p.m. Friday when two youths pulled a knife, punched him in the stomach and robbed him of $400," police spokesman Sgt. Peter Ruane said.

The thieves also stole Fodor's credit cards, a gold chain worth $1,000 and a Cartier gold ring worth $5,000, Ruane added. The violinist refused medical aid, Ruane said.

'The Day After' leaves network heads proud, puzzled

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — "The Day After," ABC-TV's film depiction of the nuclear aftermath of World War III on Lawrence, Kan., has the network executives proud but puzzled.

"I'm not sure if people are going to watch it," said Brandon Stoddard, President of ABC Films, following a press screening of the 2-hour, 15-minute film, scheduled for prime-time on Sunday, Nov. 20. Stoddard said he had "no idea" if any advertising had been sold for the program — an evasive attitude, as the problems of getting advertising support for "The Day After" have been widely aired.

Although advertising sales have been nil to date, the subject matter of the film and the brutally honest approach used by director Nicholas Meyer probably precluded any sales, which ABC must have concluded months ago. Indeed, advertising would lend a tastelessly banal tone to the film.

"The Day After" follows the lives of surgeon Dr. Russell Oakes (played with admirable restraint by Jason Robards), the family of farmer Jim Dahlberg (John Cullum) and other residents of Lawrence from two days before two nuclear bombs are dropped on nearby Kansas City to several days after the blast.

The fear of nuclear war is the backdrop for the first 45 minutes of the film, as people concern themselves with their lives and families, and although various radio and television news flashes increase the tension, it is not until nuclear rockets streak out of nearby Minuteman missile silos en route to Russia that the message of what is to come is brought home with terrible exactitude to the Kansans.

Kansas City is engulfed in a miles-wide cloud of flame. Drivers watch, horrified from their cars stalled on an interstate highway. Oakes returns to the University of Kansas hospital to find three-quarters of the staff dead, no electricity and waves of patients to be treated. The Dahlberg family hides in their cellar, their daugher's wedding forever cancelled, their son blinded from looking at the flash. They eventually emerge to a scorched, chalky, savage world.

The film's ending is particularly memorable and meaningful, concluding in the University of Kansas' Allen Field House, a stadium normally used for basketball and track meets. But in "The Day After," it is a vast depository for thousands of dying people, a scene reminiscent of the Civil War hospital sequence in "Gone With the Wind." It is horrific.

"The Day After" strikes with the impact of a kick in the stomach, but its plot-lines unfortunately are so undernourished that it misses an important opportunity to depict the effects of nuclear war on the most important level — the personal one.

Needed changes

Of the 11 amendments to be proposed for the Texas Constitution in Tuesday's election, three are especially worthwhile and should be approved by voters.

One is Amendment No. 5 which reads, "The constitutional amendment authorizing the use of the permanent school fund to guarantee bonds issued by school districts."

The enormous influx of people to Texas in recent years has created a need in many school districts for construction of facilities. What the provisions of this amendment will do is to allow the Legislature to use the permanent school fund and the income from it to guarantee bonds issued by school districts. Backers of the amendment note that the amendment will provide a virtually risk-free bond guarantee program, will result in millions of dollars in savings to taxpayers and will allow school districts to accommodate the state's rapid population growth. It's needed.

Amendment No. 6 reads, "The constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to provide for additional remedies to enforce court-ordered child support payments.

We wish this amendment wasn't needed — but it is. The state constitution does not allow for garnishment of a person's wages, and during the past couple of decades — with the divorce rate booming and more single-parent households resulting — non-payment of child support ordered by courts has been a mounting problem.

The only alternative has been jailing of non-compliant parents, but that alternative is foolish since it means the non-complaint parent can still avoid their child support responsibilities. The provisions of this amendment will mean more Texas' children can receive the support they truly deserve — and more parents cannot escape their responsibilities.

Amendment No. 7 reads "The constitutional amendment for financial assistance to veterans and to authorize the issuance of $800 million in bonds of the state to finance the Veterans' Land Program and the Veterans' Housing Assistance Program."

In appreciation of their service to this country, the voters of Texas created the Veterans' Land Program in 1949. That program has been highly successful, never costing taxpayers a single penny, as Texas Land Office officials proudly point out. But more than three decades later, the Texans returning from wars have different needs. Texas isn't just a rural state any longer and more veterans need housing assistance in a city than a plot of land in the country.

The amendment will authorize the land board to issue $800 million in general obligation bonds with $300 million to be added to the land fund for the purchase of additional land to be sold to veterans. The remaining $500 million of the proceeds from the bond sale will be used to provide home mortgage loans to veterans.

This appears to be a sound program and, as events of recent weeks illustrate, Texas will always have veterans who have land and home needs.

These three amendments are deserving of the support of voters.

Three others to pass

Three other proposed constitutional amendments on Tuesday's ballot should gain the approval of voters. They are amendments number 3, 9 and 11.

Probably most controversial of the three is Amendment No. 11 which reads, "The constitutional amendment to change the Board of Pardons and Paroles from a constitutional agency to a statutory agency and to give the board the power to revoke paroles."

This proposal is a direct result of a Blue Ribbon Commission appointed by then Gov. Bill Clements in 1982 to study ways to address prison overcrowding. This was one of that panel's 24 recommendations.

Currently, the members of the Board of Pardons and Paroles are appointed by three separate officials. The board's recommendations require the governor 's action.

The proposed change would streamline the process by eliminating the governor from the paroles process and by expanding the board's membership to six, all appointed by the governor, with a composition authorized by the Legislature.

This is a good change to speed the paroles process while maintaining adequate control and review. The overcrowding in Texas' prisons demands it.

Amendment No. 3 reads, "The constitutional amendment providing for the advancement of food and fiber production and marketing in this state through research, education, and promotion financed by the producers of agricultural products."

There is more need today than ever before for agricultural producers to promote their products. In the past this has been accomplished by voluntary contributions of producers. While this change would mean that an assessment could be levied against the sale profits of independent producers, the assessment would be refundable — meaning any producer who did not want to contribute could get his money back.

Amendment No. 9 says, "The constitutional amendment providing for assignment of judges of statutory probate courts to other statutory county courts with probate jurisdiction and to county courts."

The state's 11 statutory probate courts are located in Bexar, Dallas, Galveston, Harris and Tarrant counties. While it will mainly benefit those counties — and the ones immediately surrounding them — in the beginning, eventually it could help other counties throughout the state by allowing assignment of the respective judges to areas having particularly heavy caseloads. This would be a beneficial change.

These amendments are needed and should be approved by Texas' voters.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1972, the last of the Apollo moon missions began with the launching of Apollo XVII.

And in 1981, President Reagan told congressional leaders he'd abandoned hope for achieving a balanced budget by 1984.

Ten years ago: American financier Robert Vesco was arrested in the Bahamas at the request of the United States for extradition on fraud charges.

Five years ago: The shah put Iran under military rule, but said it was only a temporary move to restore order.

One year ago: At a reunion of Nixon administration officials in Washington marking the 10th anniversary of Richard Nixon's re-election, the former president said he was sorry he had been unable to complete his second term.

Today's birthdays: Composer-conductor Ray Conniff is 67 years old. Actress Sally Field is 37.

Thought for today: "Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap." — President Thomas Jefferson (1743-1827).

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lilliputian laws tie Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON — A secret briefing paper on Central America devotes a full page to a crude drawing of Gulliver lying flat on his back, tied down by restrictions enacted by the little people of Congress.

Jack Anderson

This curious, classified drawing of Jonathan Swift's hapless hero betrays how the Reagan administration feels about itself. By its lights, the administration is battling the Marxist menace in Latin America while entangled in congressional strings. The invasion of Grenada apparently was an attempt to untie Gulliver.

The Gulliver briefing was given last month to the Central America commission headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. The point was to show how the United States, like Swift's 18th-century "pitiful, helpless giant," has been restrained by Lilliputian laws from conducting the kind of dynamic foreign policy befitting a superpower.

To make sure the Kissinger commission understands the art work, it is given the title, "Obstacles to Policy Implementation (Gulliver and the Lilliputs)." The ropes that restrain Gulliver are the Arms Export Control Act, the Foreign Assistance Act and the War Powers Act.

The briefing paper is no comic book, however. My associate Dale Van Atta obtained a copy of the document. It unveils Reagan's objectives in the Caribbean and on Capitol Hill with startling candor. It starts out tough:

"With the Central American-Caribbean Basin area currently facing the most serious threat of its history — i.e., an insidious, relentless, externally supported insurgency — the security interests of the United States very clearly hang in the balance."

The document also makes clear that Fidel Castro's Cuba is providing the external support for the relentless insurgency. To deal with Cuba, the paper proposes just two objectives: "Put Castro on the strategic defense" and "Cause withdrawal from continent."

In other words, the Reagan administration wants to drive Castro's troublemakers off the Central American mainland and confine them to the boundaries of Cuba.

The briefing paper describes "U.S. security objectives for the region" as forging "a shield for democratic development" and fostering "ultimate regional self-sufficiency." To achieve "progressive democratic government," for example, the U.S. goals should be to:

"1. Insure stable government, respect for human rights;

"2. Promote economic growth, equitable distribution of wealth;

"3. Develop self-sufficiency in defense;

"4. Promote regional cooperation, cohesion."

Under the heading, "Making region safe for democracy," the recommendations are more controversial. The United States "should provide" military and economic aid, intelligence, technology transfer, logistical support, communication, humanitarian assistance, infrastructure development, training for forces and strategic mobility.

What will surely cause an outcry from members of Congress — whether Lilliputians, Brobdingnagians, Houyhnhnms or Yahoos — are some of the recommendations listed under "Legislative relief for Gulliver." While the first one — "Recognize the need to support friendly democratic countries of Central America" — suggests nothing more than an innocuous congressional resolution of good intentions, the others will strike sparks of suspicion with either liberals or conservatives. They are:

— "Provide a role for the Department of Defense in development of Humanitarian Assistance;

— "Provide meaningful economic aid to the democratic states of Central America;

— "Provide for the deferment and forgiveness of indebtedness;

— "Provide for grant assistance to Central American states;

— "Provide a Presidential waiver for friendly Central American states (regarding) defense stockpiles, training by (U.S. military) personnel (and) police training; — "Support rationalization, standardization and interoperability as Security Assistance goals for Central America, as is the case for NATO, Japan, Australia and New Zealand;

— "Delete 'training exercise' from the definition of training in the Arms Export Control Act and add to (the act) and the Federal Assistance Act an exclusion for activities incidental to combined exercises." This would allow the president and the Pentagon more latitude in joint military exercises.

It's not often that an administraton lays out its foreign policy goals with such candor. Whether the Kissinger commission chooses to accept the guidance or not, the White House may regret its cartoon caricature of Congress as a bunch of midgets obstructing the administration with silly laws.

GEORGE F. WILL

Luther: Potent opinion-shaper

WASHINGTON — Ask 20 thoughtful persons to list the 20 historical figures most important as makers of the modern world and you may get a hundred names. But a few names would be on every list: Einstein. Freud. And the man born half a millennium ago, Nov. 10, 1483.

George F. Will

Arguably, the modern world began when Martin Luther, appearing at an inquiry into his thought, reportedly said: "Hier steh' ich, ich kann nicht anders." "I can do no other." It seems an odd cry of freedom. It foreshadowed societies based on recognition of "unalienable" rights.

Luther's words announced the ascendance of private judgment — of conscience. But he was speaking the language — "ich kann nicht" — of restriction, compulsion. The life of this driven man demonstrated that the modern notion of freedom — freedom from external restraints imposed by others — can mean submission to a hard master, one's conscience. Alternatively, it can mean the soft tyranny of conformity to opinion. That, however, is an option that never occurred to Luther. He was perhaps the most potent opinion-shaper since Christ.

Luther was a conservative and a revolutionary. He supported forceful, sometimes brutal, defense of the social status quo while actually subverting with his ideas the established order in every particular. An Italian contemporary, Machiavelli, was secularizing politics, orienting it toward man's passions rather than God's laws. Luther was peeling politics off religion, in a quest for religion's essence.

Of course Luther's theology had political consequences. You, reader, are living in a country that is, in no small measure, a consequence.

His dispute with Rome was cast, unavoidably, in categories of political thought: "authority" within the Church, the Church's "power" in society, the "right" of the faithful to "participate" in certain arrangements. He thought the State legitimately could be, and probably must be, powerful and sometimes ruthless. By his reckoning, the State is of less dignity than it was when Church and State were thoroughly melded. The State, he thought, is responsible only for order, and is barely relevant to the serious business of life, salvation.

It is said that someone seeking a purpose in life should see a bishop, not a politician — but that today's bishops talk like politicians. Someone seeking to extract political agendas from Christianity gets little help from Luther.

Christianity's assessment of man, at once high and severe, is about right for political philosophy: Man can be magnificant, but is magnificant rarely, and never spontaneously — without help from nurturing institutions. Luther had a haunting sense of the utter allenness of mankind, and of mankind's total dependence on God's grace for even the slightest amelioration of the consequences of sin. This insulated him from the political temptation to believe in the perfectability of man through the improvement of social arrangements. In the endless argument about which dominates, nature or nurture, Luther knew: nature.

His quest for purity in religious experience — an anticipation of the modern quest for "authenticity" — led him to scant the institutional help necessary to mankind's quest for religious satisfaction and social fulfillment. But the radical individualism implicit in his thought was tempered by his celebration of the family as society's molecular unit.

The former monk started a family at age 41. Although never without a piercing sense of sinfulness, this most human of outsized heroes overflowed with enjoyment — of beer and sex and music. (His chorales and hymns earn him a significant place in the history of music.)

Luther's career was made possible by another German's career, Johann Gutenberg's. Luther's was the first great life bound up with mass communication — printing with movable type. He was the most prolific serious writer in history. One edition of his works exceeds 100 volumes. More than 2,500 of his letters survive.

Charles V, Luther's antagonist, said the German language was suited only for speaking to horses. Luther made it speak to God. His translation of the Bible into German virtually invented the German language. It also showed how the tangible (a new technology, printing) can shape the intangible (the idea of an institutional church). When laymen could read scripture, priests were challenged in their role as mediators between laymen and God.

Luther's doctrine of salvation by faith alone rather than by good works expressed his belief that salvation derives from God's gift of unmerited grace. This doctrine challenged the role of priests as deliverers of grace through sacraments.

He was no democrat, but with seven words — "each and all of us are priests" — he asserted an idea of equality that evolved into an underpinning of popular sovereignty. So this Republic, 207 years old, should honor a Founding Father born 500 years ago.

Airport marathons flying past

The first Airport Terminal Marathon was held last week at O'Hare Field in Chicago. The idea for the marathon came from Fred Tatashore, a young lawyer who had watched the entire New York Marathon on television a couple of Sundays ago.

Art Buchwald

He said, "I've been racing through airports all my life and it suddenly occurred to me that most terminals are now 26 miles long. Since people have to run to catch their planes, there was no reason not to have an airport marathon.

"I am amazed how many have shown up for it. We have competitors from terminals in Atlanta, Miami, San Francisco, London, and Paris, and one team came all the way over from the Tokyo airport."

"How does a terminal airport marathon differ from the New York and Boston Marathons?" I asked.

"Ours is much more difficult because we require the contestants to run the 26 miles fully clothed, carring either an overnight case or a garment bag. The course is laid out as follows: Everyone starts from the curb. When the gun goes off they race up to the ticket counter, check in, and then they go to the gate where their plane is leaving from."

"Won't some contestants have shorter distances to run than others?"

"No, that's the beauty of O'Hara airport. Every plane gate is exactly 26 miles from a ticket counter."

I talked to several of the contestants who were warming up in the parking lot. Husbands were rubbing wives shoulders and wives were putting Ben Gay on their spouses' legs. I was surprised to find a lady who said she was 68 years old, putting resin on her shoes. "My children live all over the country so I've been in training for a year. I once ran from one end of the Detroit airport to the other in 7 minutes and 14 seconds."

The youngest runner was Tommy Styson, who was eight years old. He said he got interested in air terminal marathon running because his mother was always late for their plane.

Before I could interview anyone else, the gun went off and the First Airport Terminal Marathon was on. The field was jammed as it began, but once people went through the X-ray machines, it started thinning out. One FBI man got cramps in his legs and fell in front of Gate E-1, several got as far as the cocktail lounge before they began retching. Pilots, baggage handlers, and porters cheered them on, and airline stewardesses provided Gatorade for those who looked like they were about to drop. Every wheelchair at O'Hare was put in service to take off those who dropped from exhaustion.

The winner turned out to be a traveling salesman, Jimmy Diamond, from Rosslyn, New York, who got to his gate in 2 hours, 12 minutes, and 4 seconds, beating out the Atlanta favorite, Jeff Harrington, who works for Federal Express. Harrington might have won, but he claimed the woman at his ticket counter had sent him to the wrong gate.

I talked to Diamond after the race. He was in agony and gasping for breath. I asked him if it was the toughest airport terminal race he had ever been in. He said, "No. I once had to run from Piedmont to the Eastern Shuttle at National Airport, and I couldn't stand on my feet for two weeks."

The first lady to cross the finish line was Virgie Kessling of Doylestown, Pa. She was hardly puffing. "I'm an Avon lady sales rep, and I've been doing this for years."

What made the Chicago O'Hare race so inspiring was that the losers were just as exhilarated as the winners. As one contestant told me, "Just to have completed the 26 miles is enough glory for me. Running through an airport is the only way an ordinary person like me can prove he still has the right stuff."

Grenada basis for effective regional policy

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Maybe the most heartening consequence of the decision to send our troops into Grenada has been the overwhelming support it received from the American people. As we learned to our grief in the not-very-distant past, no foreign policy and above all, no military action by this country can be successful without the people's backing. And now the main body of U.S. troops is being withdrawn to be replaced by East Caribbean allies.

Once the Grenada operation had been launched, it didn't take the public long to cut through the political guff, second-guessing and hand-wringing of the project's critics at home and abroad. As every opinion poll shows, Americans by big majorities rejected unfavorable judgements, predictably and almost instantly, handed down by TV know-it-alls, liberal columnists, UN diplomats and Congressional Democrats on the election trail. Using their sound common sense, most Americans-at-large recognized the Grenada affair for what it was — one of the best planned, incisively conducted and thoroughly justified actions of recent times.

Americans don't seem to have been either fooled or deterred by charges that President Reagan "blundered" by ordering military action. They dismissed accusations that the reasons given for invading were exaggerated, even deliberately faked. Nor did fellow Americans become stirred up by media allegations that the government was withholding the truth by preventing newsmen from entering Grenada during the first few days of combat. Most folks apparently felt they had adequate data to form valid judgements, as they told pollsters.

A FACTOR IN helping them reach their conclusions was almost certainly President Reagan's masterly TV address to the nation and the world five days after military operations began. Hearst columnist Kevin Phillips described the presentation as "one of the most successful Presidential speeches of the post World War 2 era" and I agree 100 percent.

Now, of course, we must look to the future of the Caribbean and Latin America as a whole. Grenada provides a very positive basis for effective policy in the entire region. By that I don't mean that we should just use our military power to hold our enemies in check out there, important as military power is and may prove to be again. What Grenada demonstrated was that we can move swiftly when we are in the right. We are no longer the helpless, lumbering giant we probably appeared to the pro-Soviet, Castroite revolutionaries only two weeks ago. The lesson of Grenada wasn't lost on another extreme Marxist, Col. Desi Bouterse, in the former Dutch colony of Surinam. His regime promptly threw out the Cuban ambassador and downgraded relations with Havana only hours after the Americans landed on Grenada. The Grenada lesson had beneficial impact around the world.

BUT I DON'T want to leave the subject without expressing my personal disappointment over British

EDITOR'S REPORT

Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher's failure to support President Reagan. Her anti-Communism once earned her the nickname, "Iron Lady" from the Soviet Union. We supported her when the British government undertook the Falklands war against Argentina. It cost us lots in terms of Latin American relations. My disappointment is in exact proportion to my esteem for this gifted lady.

Prime Minister Thatcher astoundingly tried to distance herself from the President's initiative. Perhaps she was influenced by advisors who saw the Prime Minister getting involved in a fierce Commonwealth debate in a few weeks, when the Commonwealth members meet. Grenada is a member. But, that doesn't wash, either. Remember what President Reagan did on her behalf in the Falklands campaign. This dispute, fortunately, is being healed. But British newspapers like the "Daily Mail" took Mrs. Thatcher to task, saying, "It was not her finest hour."

THE SERIOUS-MINDED "Daily Telegraph" pointed out that if the British hadn't rushed to leave the Caribbean, and created a vacuum, an orderly transition could have been established to democratic government. Yet nobody had a logical explanation for Mrs. Thatcher's sudden and brief change of temperament which I choose to call a "temporary aberration."

A vote the other day in the House of Commons, though, proved conclusively that the Iron Lady had returned to her normal, tough anti-Communist position. By 362-to-218, the Conservative Party endorsed the government's decision to install American cruise missiles on British soil before the end of this year. Mrs. Thatcher ignored the salvo of last-minute Soviet threats and protest demonstrations.

On the other major point of U.S. involvement — Lebanon — I'm afraid I can't be as upbeat. While I hate to second-guess our military or political officials at moments when they are burdened with terrible responsibilities, it now appears there was serious laxity in the security and intelligence safeguards relating to our Marines in Beirut. These lapses led directly to the terrorist catastrophe in which so many died and were injured.

IT SEEMS to me that the Marine commanders in Beirut concentrated that number of troops in a multi-level building without, as it has now been revealed, an adequate defense perimeter of any kind. It was comparable in its way to the Pearl Harbor mistake of concentrating much of the Pacific fleet at the same naval basin. Pearl Harbor was a lesson our military should have learned forever without this kind of reminder.

Added to this have been disclosures that American officials on the ground received a steady stream of intelligence reports in the days just before the kamikaze bomb attack that such a sneak assault was planned by a pro-Ayatollah Khomeini sect. These reports were ignored.

Even in the present atmosphere, where all the major Lebanese factions talk peace in conferences at Geneva, their armed militias shoot at each other around Beirut. For our part, we must maintain strict vigilance and responsibility for the disaster to the Marines should be determined. The sooner, the better; a cover-up would be a bad mistake.

SPEAKING OUT

Stars and stripes symbolizes unique freedoms

By H.A. TUCK

H.A. Tuck is currently serving his ninth year as public relations director for Midland College. Prior to that, he was public relations director for the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

You can see it in front of banks, savings associations, schools, even fast food places.

Its appearance with our Marines in Lebanon made us swell with pride.

But you can't find it on sale in Midland.

"It" is an American flag. I recently went to 15 retail outlets in Midland seeking a small flag with staff and holder to mount in front of a house. Not one of the stores had one in stock. In desperation, I explained my plight to a helpful store manager who finally found a flag kit back in the store room.

This flag was purchased as a gift for a Polish Solidarity leader who, with his family, was forced to leave his native land in search of freedom. This family was celebrating the first anniversary of their arrival in America and a flag seemed an appropriate gift.

Are our retail outlets unwilling to devote a few square feet of display space for flag kits at time other than the Fourth of July?

Most of us choked up when we saw the television shot of a tiny tattered and dirty flag flying bravely over the rubble of our Marine Headquarters in Beirut after it was reduced to rubble. Our Marines were wearing the American flag on their uniform jackets...the same flag which draped more than 225 caskets of their comrades killed in that attack, plus those killed in Grenada.

Next Friday is November 11. It used to be called Armistice Day. Now it's Veterans' Day. Regardless of its label, it is a day for Americans to honor those who served, with special remembrance for those who were wounded or killed in the service of our country.

There are times we may not agree with all that our country does. But that's like being part of a family. We may not always agree with what the members of the family do or say...but we're still a family.

And we are still a country with a proud heritage, with freedoms and opportunities which are envied by the rest of the world. How many people are risking their lives to cross the Iron Curtain into East Germany or move to Poland?

Our flag is the symbol for our unique freedoms. It should be displayed by every household in Midland on Veterans' Day, Memorial Day, and Independence Day.

But it also should be honored during public ceremonies. I continue to be appalled by those who talk, continue to move, or fail to uncover their heads when the flag is displayed and the national anthem is played.

This flag might be nothing more than printed cotton, but it is the symbol of our nation, the more than 200 years of sacrifice and work which made it great.

As Americans we can take pride in our flag...but we can never take it for granted. Too many others are envious of our nation or zealously seek to destroy us.

I'll probably hear from a number of stores which regularly stock American flags. But until our flag is more readily available, I fear we are too complacent about it.

So, how about it Midlanders? Let's fly our flags Friday...and let's pause a moment to recall, and be grateful, its real meaning. For our flag means freedom, hope, and a shining beacon for the future of the world.

Economics

To the Editor:

Two recent articles in the Midland Reporter-Telegram about Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace illustrates his ignorance and contempt for the laws of economics, and a failure to learn from the mistakes of the past.

In the first article (Oct. 21), Wallace warned of another "energy crisis," and called for an energy conference. The "energy-crisis" of the '70's was caused by the government intervention in the form of price controls, and not the Arab oil embargo. As George Riesman points out in his book, "The Government Against the Economy," if an unhampered market were in existence during the embargo, the United States would have become an oil exporter. The same would be true today. However, such bureaucrats as Wallace do not want an unfettered market — else he would be out of a job. His claim of protecting future generations is merely a collectivist whitewash for his own prurient interests. And those interests call for an energy conference to be held.

Such a conference would invariably yield useless controls and agency to enforce them — or increase the power and extend the life of present regulatory agencies such as the Railroad Commission.

Friday's article, and especially Sunday's, shows Wallace's contempt for, and an ignorance of, the immutable laws of economics. This is best exemplified by Wallace's considering the harmful effects of state regulatory systems as a myth. As the late professor Ludwig von Mises proved time and again, any interference in the process of trade causes unnecessary price increases and eventual shortages. There is nothing any regulatory agency can do to make the market operate fairer or more efficiently.

Wallace also praised Texas' system of correlating natural gas markets' supply and demand. That is all very well and good, but the system is a total waste of time and money. An unhampered market will take care of itself. Texas' system of prorations assumes the producers and purchasers are incompetent and only a regulatory agency knows how to respond to supply and demand.

With such a man as Wallace in his position of power professing such pernicious ideas, it is time that consumers, producers, purchasers (pipelines), and royalty owners begin pushing for the elimination of the RRC.

Hue and cry

To the Editor:

So now it is that a great hue and cry is being raised by certain members of Congress over our landing in Grenada. Who are these people? Are they fifth columnists or just deluded nincompoops?

Just what in the world do they think the Soviets and Cuba were doing there — on a goodwill tour to promote peace and prosperity? Of course, they were — Russian style. Can they not get it through their peanut brains that there was in the making a new springboard for the Soviets to spread their evil machinations throughout South America.

And must we sit in that plush country club for a multitude of envoys from two-bit countries called the United Nations, which we host and pay for and listen to a vitriolic diatribe by the Soviet emissary denouncing the United States of America as aggressor, inveighing against it as a great power throttling a small defenseless nation such as Grenada. Were the Soviets not so Godless these protests would sound in false piety. U.S. aggression indeed.

Ask the Soviet envoy about Afghanistan, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania, and their plotting and scheming throughout the world. Make no mistake, the Soviets are not interested in peaceful coexistence except as they define it. There will be no peace in our world until the Soviets (which does not mean the Russian people, but the ruling councils) are exterminated and that we must face sooner or later, just as we did the Nazis in Germany. There is not one single one of those misguided demonstrators, here or abroad, who can be depended upon to preserve the freedom for which they think they are mindlessly chanting.

They may be conceded one point, however, they are unaware of it. It just may be that those Pershing missiles may be of no more use defensively than the Maginot Line was to France in May 1940. It is not the Soviet way to start shooting. Their way is found in civil disorder. Look to El Salvador, Nicaragua, Chile and Angolia and the entire Middle East. And whose weapons are those people using?

Voters' rights

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, Nov. 8, we will have the privilege and responsibility as citizens and registered voters to cast ballots regarding 11 Texas State Constitutional Amendments. These amendments are complicated and require some serious consideration and study. They also have an incredible bearing on our lives and liberties in Texas.

The various media and the Reporter-Telegram have, for a few weeks now, provided voters with objective information designed to educate prior to Tuesday's election on the content and anticipated effects of the proposed amendments. In today's paper there is also a League of Women Voters' Voters Guide concerning the amendments. I urge each of the voters in Midland (and, indeed, in Texas) to familiarize himself/herself with the amendments and to exercise the right (responsibility) to vote on Tuesday.

These amendments govern our representatives in Austin; indeed, they govern each of us — if passed — whether we vote or not. It behooves more than just a handful of us to have input into this process. Our vote is important — not only to elect candidates in certain elections, but to define our state constitution's control over Texas residents. We can choose to allow our friends and neighbors to do this. Or, we can exercise our own vote. Our absence from the polls tells Texas only that we abdicate our responsibility to participate in the process. The amendments will pass or fail with however many or few that vote. Do we want only a few to amend our constitution?

I urge all registered voters in Texas to study the information available and to cast a ballot personally on the 11 amendments, Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Grim report

To the Editor:

Wherever people suffer, children suffer most. According to UNICEF'S 1983 State of the World's Children report, they die at a rate of 40,000 a day from childhood diseases, dehydration, and lingering malnutrition.

If UNICEF'S report sounds grim, it nevertheless also strikes a note of opportunity and challenge — because we now have the means at hand to prevent half of these deaths. Oral rehydration therapy, called the medical breakthrough of the century, can potentially save the lives of 5 million children a year at a cost of 10 cents per treatment.

Universal immunization against childhood diseases, the promotion of breast-feeding and the use of growth charts to detect hidden malnutrition can go a long way toward eradicating the other major causes of child mortality. The cost of all four measures is less than $10 per child.

All that is really lacking is the political will; the concerted opinion that 40,000 child deaths a day is too many. And there is something you can do to help.

The Unitarian Universalist Church is selling UNICEF holiday gift cards every Wednesday through the month of November, and the first two Wednesdays in December. Your purchase of these gift cards can help provide the funds for the child survival revolution that UNICEF is trying to launch.

Good news

To the Editor:

It's already that time of year. We see pumpkins and masks and candies galore. It's all in getting ready for the big day, Halloween.

Halloween is the eve before All-hallows, or All Saints' Day, the evening of Oct. 31st.

This day has lost its significance and has given way to tricks and treaters. It's a fun time especially for children. But we ought to remember it as a movement in the 16th century which aimed to restore the church, founded by Jesus Christ. God used Martin Luther to bring abut change in the church. In Luther's day people were taught that they could get to heaven through their own good works. They no longer were taught that man is saved through faith in Jesus Christ, their Savior. They thought Jesus Christ was not enough for their salvation, good works were also necessary.

Luther rediscovered the central truth of the Scriptures that Jesus Christ is the only way to heaven. He encouraged the people to put their trust in the Gospel. The Gospel is the good news that tells us that all our sins are forgiven through faith in Jesus Christ alone.

Christians throughout the world should thank God for the reformation by sharing with others the Christ of the Bible.

BILL MODISETT

Texas on threshold of future which is alien to its heritage

Bill Modisett

Texas is changing.

What was once an expanse of land that took weeks to cross — and trailed frontiersmen from the windless pine forests through the gently rolling hills in the central part of the state and on to the desert beauty, and dangers, of the Big Bend — has become a small state, reduced in magnitude by the marvel of air travel and modern-day communications.

Texas stands on the threshold of a future so alien from its heritage that it may be difficult for future generations to grasp what transpired before. That new breed of Texan is already born; that new day has already begun.

If you want evidence, all you need to do is open your eyes. It's all around you. For example, take Tuesday's constitutional amendment election. Among other proposals, Texans will be asked whether they want to let the Legislature use the state's permanent school fund and the interest from it to guarantee bonds issued by school districts.

The purpose? Simple. The influx to the Sunbelt states in recent years has flooded Texas schools with new pupils and school plants are hard-pressed to accommodate their enrollments in many areas.

The state's growth is far from over, experts say. Texas has a lot going for it in a lot of ways — friendly people, good climate, relatively low tax base. And those attractive features are some on the main reasons Texas is changing.

Take another of the proposed amendments as an example. Land Commissioner Garry Mauro is pushing the amendment to authorize the veterans' land board to issue $800 million in general obligation bonds. Of that amount, $300 million will be used to continue the highly successful veterans' land program. The other $500 million will be used to provide home mortgage loans to veterans.

The reason there is due to another of the changes Texas has undergone in recent decades. When the veterans' land fund was established in 1949 about the most common way to make a living in the Lone Star State was by working the land. The fund gave veterans a way to do just that.

But now life is different in Texas. Very few Texans make their living totally off the land; family farms have been disappearing faster than freshly baked brownies. The amendment is an attempt to provide for the needs of veterans where those needs really exist and, regrettably in my opinion, that isn't on the farm any longer.

These facts and more that you're well aware of should be ample evidence that Texas is being inundated by a rapidly changing lifestyle. I'm not necessarily disappointed by that reality, but in a way I do regret watching the old lifestyle die. It had a magic — a beauty — all its own. But progress marches on, understandably.

Yes, Texas is changing.

Midland Reporter-Telegram
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1983

The bright yarn crocheted around a smiling face reflects Florence Byrd's outlook on life because of Hospice.

FLORENCE
AND HER FRIENDS

Florence Byrd turns 68 today. It could be her last birthday.

Because she has cancer, she might have only operations, tubes, medication and blood counts for which to live. A life full of sterile sheets and antiseptic rooms. Metal blinds and bleak walls.

But she's lucky.

Although she is spending this special day in the hospital, it is temporary.

With friends around her, caring and seeing to her household and medical needs, Florence can go home tomorrow, just like she has for the past year.

"I'm in the hospital a lot," she explained during a visit at her home recently. "I go in for chemotherapy every three weeks and I'm usually in the hospital about six days."

But the rest of those days, like those of many other terminally ill patients, are spent at home with the help of Midland's Hospice.

As she cut the first piece of her chocolate birthday cake Friday, Hospice volunteers crowded around her bed as nurses strayed in to quickly wish a favorite patient an early birthday greeting.

"I don't mind it," she said of her visits to the hospital. "They're awful good to me up there. Hospice and the hospital, too. They've been awful good to me."

Reared in Lamesa, Florence lived there most of her life. She moved to Brady with her husband, and following his death, to Midland in 1979.

A younger brother, Happy Flud, has lived in Midland for 15 years. Towering over his sister with his large but cuddly frame, he fits his name with his continuous smile. When Florence became sick, Hap was there to welcome her into his home.

Almost a year ago, right before Christmas, Hap told Florence about Hospice. With a group of dedicated volunteers, the organization provides at-home care for terminally ill patients — making shopping trips to the grocery store, taking them to appointments with the doctor, holding their hands during trying times.

"I hadn't even heard of them before," Florence said. But within a short time, Julie McKinley entered Florence's and Hap's life.

"I can't do without her," Florence said, smiling at Julie.

"Neither could I," Hap said. "The whole group has been awful good and really helped."

"You were using the walker the first time I came over," Julie said. "And you were still doing some cooking."

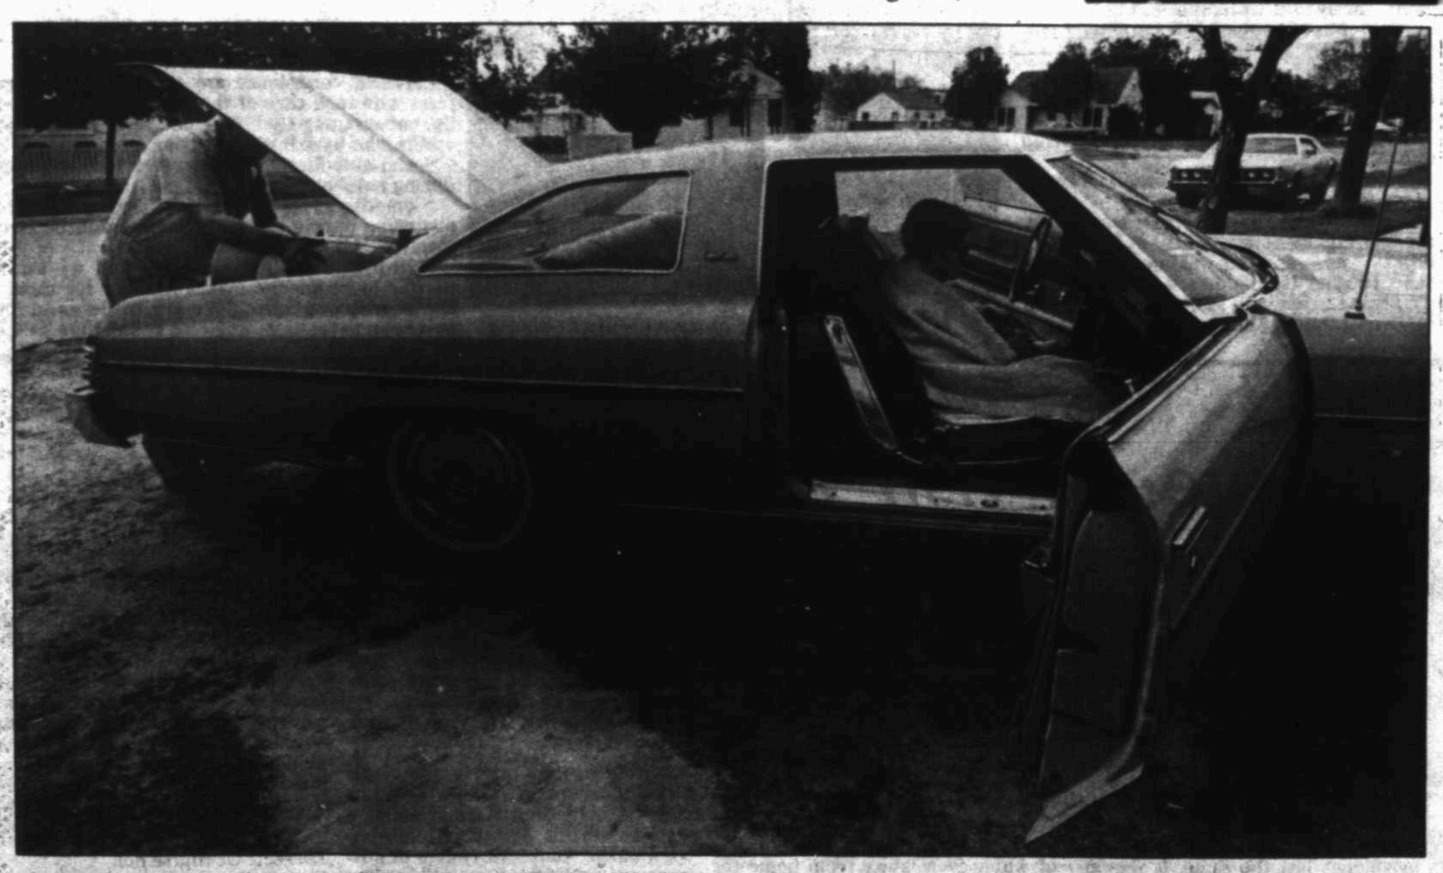
But in July, the bone in her leg cracked where a graft had been made after it was discovered the cancer had moved into her bones.

"I can still get into my wheelchair myself," Florence said. "If it wasn't for my hands and arms, I'd never make it. I think all my strength is going there. 'Course, they hold the wheelchair for me. They're always standing nearby."

When Julie walked into their life, the family grew.

A nurse from Hospice visits regularly, "taking blood pressure, my temperature, she does the whole works," Florence said. Liz Lipscomb, Hospice medical social worker, was responsible for getting food stamps and other benefits for which Florence was eligible.

(See HOSPICE, Page 2C)



Florence huddles in the car while her brother Hap loads a suitcase for her trip to the hospital for chemotherapy treatments.

Educational reports seen as challenge

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

School systems, like many vast government institutions, generally carry out their duties with little notice or complaint from the public. But in recent months public education has been besieged by criticism from all sectors.

On the heels of the "Nation at Risk" report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education came H. Ross Perot and the governor's Select Committee on Public Education. Then lobby groups and think tanks joined in to point out flaws in the nation's system of education. Not since the launching of Sputnik has there been such loud and persistent clamoring for reform.

Several of the recent reports have made similar and sweeping criticisms. Among them: teachers are poorly paid, trained and monitored; many graduating seniors don't have minimum competency skills; graduation requirements are not strict enough; students are not sufficiently challenged by the type or content of courses; there is a lack of discipline in the classroom; extracurricular activities are emphasized and promoted at the expense of academics.

Rather than becoming defensive, local teachers and administrators seem to welcome the controversy as a means of stirring interest, involvement and, they hope, solutions.

"I think it's great to have education in the paper and have people concerned and looking for answers," commented Dr. Duane Moore, assistant superintendent for the Midland Independent School District.

"If it makes people aware then I think each and every criticism is valid," agreed J. Murphy Horton, Midland member of the State Board of Education. "It seems so easy to sit down and address the problems that beset public education. What's difficult is doing something constructive. Before you really start criticizing... become a part of the process, don't just stand outside and throw stones."

While local authorities say problems do exist, they contend it is difficult to judge how serious and widepread they are because most are intangible.

"These sweeping statements are hard to deal with," Moore said. Like many others interviewed, he indicated it would be difficult, if not impossible, to remedy the situation with legislation. Problems can only be identified and dealt with effectively on a local level, he said.

"I think they are legitimate concerns," Moore conceded. "But it's the responsibility of the school district and the parents to address them. The local district is the one that knows its problems and knows its students. It is difficult for the state to dictate to the local districts. But local control also means local responsibility."

Those concerned — teachers, parents, administrators, students and PTA members — said Midland is better than most school districts. They feel MISD tries to identify and deal with potential problems before they became serious.

"There's been a lot of positive steps taken in recent years to correct some of the problems that are mentioned in these reports," said Molly Bedrich, president of City Council Parent Teacher Association. "Some of these problems were recognized and addressed before these reports came out. However, that doesn't mean we can just sit back and think that we have no problems. There's room for improvement and efforts need to continue."

Bedrich and others pointed out that many of the solutions offered by various groups are already in effect in Midland. Examples include significantly higher teacher pay, merit pay, educational grants to potential teachers, higher graduation requirements, programs for exceptional students and stricter eligibility requirements for participation in extracurricular activities.

While one of the recurring themes in education reports is a need to get back to basics, local authorities say the fundamentals must be balanced with challenges to develop thought processes and decision-making skills.

"You can't have one without the other," insisted Sam Manning, a teacher at Lee High School and president of the Midland Federation of Teachers. "We need to make sure students know alternatives and know how to make sound choices."

"We believe in the basics, but that is the floor on which we start," Moore explained. "Every student must be able to read, write, compute and communicate, but we need to reach beyond that. They need to know how to seek out knowledge. It's not an either-or issue. The problem is with districts who feel the minimum is the maximum."

Horton agreed that knowledge alone isn't enough. "Some of the dumbest people I know have a Ph.D. behind their name, but they haven't adapted their knowledge to wisdom."

Popular opinion seems to indicate that more money, particularly higher teacher salaries, will solve many of the current problems in education. Not only will schools be better equipped to compete with private industry and retain good teachers, they say, but if taxpayers are willing to pay more they have the right to expect more from educators.

"I think the pay (in Midland) has a lot to do with the type of schools we have," Manning speculated. "We're probably, academically, in the top five compared to other school districts." One complaint is that those with the most at stake have the least input. "They're not including us in their decisions," complained Lee High School student council president Keith Cox.

He disagreed with many of the findings of the public education committees, at least as they pertained to MISD. He doesn't feel graduation requirements need to be raised.

"I'm an honor graduate and I think it's tough enough. Those students who are really trying and planning ahead are going to take tougher classes and are probably going to be more successful. Kids won't do good in a class if they're forced to take it. They are offered, and that's enough. It should be up to the students and the parents to decide what they want to take."

Unlike the adults interviewed, he didn't feel exit testing should be required of graduating seniors. "Some students just don't do well on tests," he pointed out, saying if teachers do their job it shouldn't be necessary.

He also felt that MISD did not let extracurricular activities interfere with academics, and that such activities were an essential part of education. That opinion was also shared by others interviewed.

"Extracurricular activities contribute to the growth and development of young people," Moore said. "Our first priority is educating the students. School districts need to find a balance. There could be a danger of overemphasizing extracurricular activities to the detriment of academics, but that's not the case in Midland."

Cox indicated the decision to participate should be left to the student and his parents. "Those people who are able to make their grades and be involved in extracurricular activities and handle both of them should be allowed to do it."

He had a similar philosophy for academics. Midland schools offer everything students need to excel, he said, and it's up to each individual to take advantage of that. The desire to learn and achieve can't be forced or legislated. "A student gets out what he puts into it."

Vivian gives Florence a goodbye hug before Hap drives Florence to the hospital.

Hospice provides help in form of friends

A hairdresser, who requests anonymity, regularly visits Florence on her days off to do her hair, which, unusually, became thicker with the chemotherapy treatments.

And Vivian Howell, a friend of the Hospice volunteers who was introduced to Florence, took an instant liking to her, moved in and has been her constant companion.

"I came over her the first day and said 'I can tell, the two of you are going to sit here all day and smoke cigarettes and drink coffee,' " Shirley Gist of Hospice said.

Vivian helps prepare Florence's meals and studies for classes at Midland College while Florence crochets afghans and doll-face decorations. The two do spend endless hours together, watching soap operas, talking, smoking and drinking coffee, although Florence said she doesn't like coffee as much as she did before the chemotherapy treatments began. And she's really not supposed to smoke, she added with a grin.

Hap, watching Julie and Florence together from another room, said Florence deserves the good friends she now has. According to her brother, Florence was always one to help friends when they were ill.

"She never did have enough education to be a nurse, but that's what she always wanted to do — help other people," he said.

Always freshly dressed in pretty robes with her hair combed and lipstick on, Florence plays the gracious hostess, with Julie sitting beside her holding her hand, as the many guests wander into her home during the day.

Some, like Shirley, rarely visit without bringing food.

"Shirley always brings us some good eats with her," said Florence's cousin, Art Cummins.

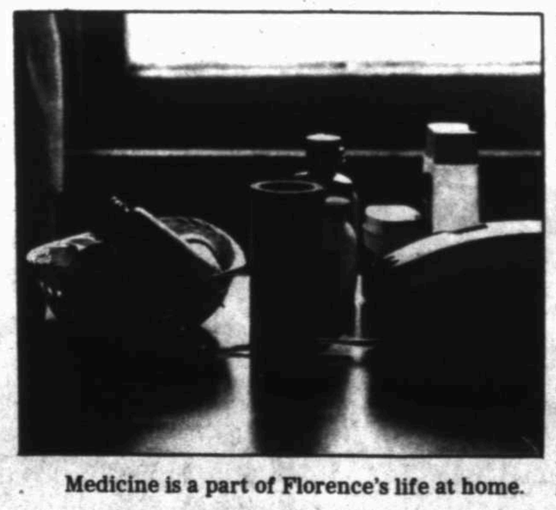
"I love to cook and I believe that anything that smells good in the kitchen helps more than anything," Shirley said with a smile.

"We're old bachelors and we'll take anything," Hap retorted, grinning.

Julie, even more so, brings happiness into Florence's home.

"I feel like I'm part of their family," she said. "They didn't mind me coming in at all. Some of the families really open their arms — and this was one of them.

"I hold her hand, rub her feet — do a lot of touching," Julie said. "When I first started with Florence, I thought of her as my patient. Now I think of her as my friend."



Medicine is a part of Florence's life at home.

'Uplifting' program recognized

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"People think it's so depressing and it's not," Gail Wilson said. "These people are living."

As patient care coordinator for Hospice of Midland, Ms. Wilson said working with the terminally ill patients is an uplifting experience.

Hospice, which helps the patients live at home with their families, is like a family itself.

The non-profit organization, which is being recognized on the national level this week, relies on donations, memorials and fund-raising activities to exist.

"All of the funding comes directly from the community," Ms. Wilson said.

Besides the 90 volunteers, 75 of which are active, the organization has a paid staff of four registered nurses, one home health aide, one fulltime medical social worker and Carol Armstrong, office manager and volunteer coordinator.

The volunteers include nurses, dieticians, social workers and attorneys, who help with wills, insurance and other legal problems and questions. Other volunteers include physical, occupational and speech therapists.

And most of the volunteers, who have helped more than 240 families since it was organized in 1980, are citizens who just want to help run errands and offer friendship and love to the patients and their families.

After receiving a recommendation, Ms. Wilson checks with the patient's physician about helping the patient live his or her last days at home.

"We find out where the family is, what its strengths are and whether they need support from us," Ms. Wilson said. "We really encourage the family to give the patient as much self-control over his care as possible. That gives him more dignity. All of those things that he didn't have as much control over when he was in an institution are so important."

According to Ms. Armstrong, most of the volunteers work with a patient on a one-to-one basis. But if the family or patient needs more help, volunteers double up to provide the necessary care.

All volunteers attend eight three-hour training sessions. Doctors, volunteers, chaplains, and dieticians discuss the care of terminally-ill patients.

But after the patient has died, the care continues.

"We're always concerned about our survivors," Ms. Armstrong said. "When they are a survivor, we help them to be a good one."

Cards of condolence are sent and the volunteers who took care of the patient visit the family, encouraging them to come to meetings with others who have lost a loved one.

Social activities for the survivors are planned during holidays.

"Sometimes, this is the only place a survivor can come during the holiday times and be comfortable," Ms. Wilson said.

"I think just them knowing that we know they've lost someone makes it easier for them," Ms. Armstrong said. "We try to do as much as we can to let them know we're still here."

Liddy, Leary debate: A visit with two old friends

A couple of my old friends were in Odessa the other day.

There was Timothy Leary, undisputed king of psychedelic drugs, and his old adversary, G. Gordon Liddy, known far and wide as the weirdest S.O.B. to come out of the Nixon White House.

And that, my friend, is saying something.

Let's face it, it is not the kind of honor one covets. Still, Liddy gets it hands down. Forget Agnew, Mitchell and all the rest. When it comes to strangeness, Liddy had no peer. He was Mr. Bizarre.

Ahh, yes, Leary and Liddy together again. It was a flashback. A stroll down memory lane. Familiar voices from the past. A slice of Americana revisited.

Their presence gave cause to relive the turbulent '60s, a time when many young people were following Leary's advice to "turn on, tune in and drop out." But everytime minds focused too intently on that era, Liddy's appearance would yank them 10 years forward to Watergate.

Oh, how I miss the good 'ol days.

The occasion was the Thursday night Leary-Liddy debate at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and, though the evening's theme was "the individual's rights versus those of the state," the overriding emotion was one of nostalgia.

This was particularly true for those of us who experienced both periods in history. The radical '60s were an exciting time when college students struggled for an identity. An unpopular war was being waged. Idealistic professors were tossing out revolutionary ideas. Minority groups were becoming more vocal in their demand for equal rights. And, yes, violence sometimes resulted.

Still, freedom was the code word and while many of us were not sure what we wanted, we joined the movement just the same. It was an uplifting, creative time and we all wanted to be a part of it.

In many ways Leary personified the era. He was outspoken, intelligent and witty. He preached a lifestyle that impressionable young people found appealing. Forget the drugs (though they certainly were an integral part of campus life), it was Leary's philisophy that many sought to emulate. And why not? It was one that sounded good, at least in theory. Love. Peace. Individual freedom. Who could argue with those virtues? And, if personal use of drugs fell into those categories, so be it.

Remember, we are talking about impressionable young people, many of whom were away from home for the first time.

But eventually we grew up. We moved into the mainstream of society. We matured. We married. We started families. We gained new responsibilities.

Some of us kept our liberal leanings, but became more tolerant of the conservative thinking of others. We didn't change completely, just moved slightly to the middle. In some cases, we became cynical.

Enter the '70s and something called Watergate.

It too was an interesting time. Crime. Corruption. And all the other evils we had been warned about a decade earlier. We got a close-up view of the American system of government and found it lacking. The cynics laughed and said, "I told you so." Others, the born-again idealists, got involved and tried to make constructive changes.

The remainder, we observers, sat back and watched. That's why Liddy was such a pleasant figure Thursday night. Like Leary and the '60s, Liddy is representative of Watergate. He refused to apologize. He believed the end justified the means. He was loyal to the end. Indeed, he seemed to revel in his notoriety. He took pride in his beliefs and would not change.

Were his actions justified? No.

Were Leary's teachings totally correct? Of course not.

But as for me, I have one thing to say to both men: Thanks for the memories. It was fun.

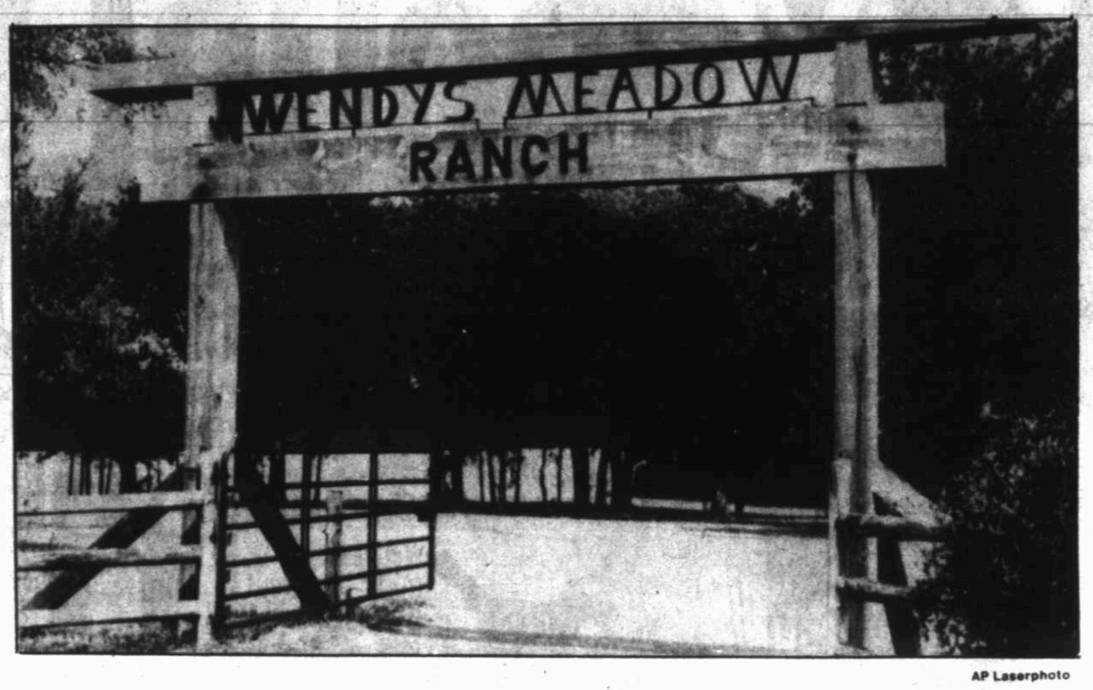
Spirit lives on at ministry ranch



AP Laserphoto

"Wendy's Meadow Ranch," in Edom, Texas, is a place of Christian rest, recreation, education and rededication built in memory of Wendy Dean Hickman.

EDOM, Texas (AP) — The spirit of a 17-year-old Christian athlete who died from a heart attack during high school football practice has blossomed into a ministry ranch near here.

The 420-acre "Wendy's Meadow Ranch" honors the memory of Wendy Dean Hickman, who died in January 1972 at Skyline High School in Dallas. The ranch is located 70 miles east of Dallas, between Canton and Tyler.

That year Wendy's father, Bob Hickman, and younger brother, Andy Hickman, formed Meaningful Life, Inc., a non-profit, interdenominational organization. A book titled "Fully Alive" and subtitled "The true Story of Wendy Dean Hickman" was written by Gloria Cage.

Hickman and his son are partners in Metroplex Associates, a Dallas construction company that specializes in condominiums and apartments. Hickman serves as chairman of the board and Andy as president of Meaningful Life.

Hickman in 1979 purchased the land on which the ranch was built as a place for Meaningful Life to provide an atmosphere for Christian rest, recreation, education and rededication.

At that time he hired Bill Krisher as executive director of Meaningful Life. Krisher, his wife Lana and their two sons Chad, 15, and Eric, 17, live in a custom-built log cabin home on a 12-acre ranch near Wendys Meadow Ranch.

Krisher said he met Hickman while working for Fellowship of Christian Athletes as southwest regional director responsible for Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Through FCA, Krisher helped start a Bible study for Dallas Cowboys football players who met in his home in Dallas for eight years. Cowboys Coach Tom Landry also was "involved very strongly with FCA," Krisher said. The teacher was Dr. Howard Hendricks, of Dallas Theological Seminary, who is also on the advisory board of Meaningful Life.

The Dallas Cowboys Bible study group in April 1981 was the first to visit Wendys Meadow Ranch, according to Krisher.

"A lot of Dallas Cowboys come down as individual friends of mine," said Krisher, a former professional football player with the Pittsburgh Steelers and the former Dallas Texans team that is now the Kansas City Chiefs. One such friend, former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, serves on the advisory board of Meaningful Life.

Krisher observed there's "a nucleus of six real strong couples (Dallas Cowboys and wives) who come down quite a bit. He said the Cowboys Bible study group still meets Thursday evenings in a Dallas home.

"I retired from football as I felt the Lord called me to go full time into Christian work," Krisher said. He then worked for three years in the FCA national office and later became Southwest regional director.

Krisher resigned from FCA in 1979, accepting an offfer from Hickman to become executive director of Meaningful Life.

"We started with nothing here (Wendys Meadow Ranch and personal land) and worked for two years building everything," Krisher said.

"We dug a lake, taking out 100,000 cubic yards of dirt," he recalled. "We built four cabins (named Matthew, Mark, Luke and John), a 6,000-square-foot barn with a racquetball court, ping pong, bumper pool, meeting room, weight room, tack room and horses for people to ride."

Krisher explained groups were allowed to come down in 1981, but the ranch didn't officially open until June 1982. "Until we finish our dining hall, we're not going to be completely done," he added.

Krisher and his wife Lana "basically oversee the groups," he said. "We do the ministry to them and sometimes bring outside speakers."

He said the ministry draws people "out of busy city life. We try to bring them out here to God's nature and to enjoy the 420 acres we have. They can hike, walk, relax."

He noted the ranch offers "recreation we feel very strongly about. We have basketball, football, Wallyball (played like volleyball in a racquetball court), and horseback riding which gets us into a different atmosphere also. We try to get people relaxed, particularly in our program activities."

The ranch is available to groups ranging from 20 to 30 people on weekends, with reservations required about a month in advance, according to Krisher. The cost of $40 per person includes two nights in a cabin and five meals. Each cabin accommodates eight people (four on each side) and is equipped with private baths, full kitchen, washer, dryer and a fully screened large front porch. Towels and bedding also are provided.

The cabins are nestled among pines along the shores of the 25-acre manmade lake, which is stocked with fish. Boating, swimming and fishing also are offered.

Some 500 people have come to Wendys Meadow Ranch in the past year, according to Krisher, who is aided by his wife and sons, along with maintenance man Don Williams and chef Evelyn Woods.

"We don't serve a Friday evening meal," Krisher said. "People come in about 8 p.m., go to the barn, get acquainted and play some games. We go over the rules of the camp, try to relax and have refreshments.

"The next morning we have breakfast and go horseback riding for a couple of hours. Other people are recreating while we're horseback riding.

"We go over priorities in life and have refreshments that evening. Sunday everyone has breakfast in the cabins, and we have a big brunch at 10 o'clock."

Krisher said Wendys Meadow Ranch is "considered a Christian awareness center rather than a retreat center ... We're just really excited about the potential of what it is — actually what we'd like to call it is an outreach to the unreached.

"It's all centered around Christ, the church and emphasis on living the Christian life."

Midlander awarded damages on appeal

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A Midland teen-ager has been awarded $419,906 in damages for the loss of his mother and stepfather in a traffic accident.

The case was the first in which a local jury was allowed to consider the loss of a parent's "society, copanionship, love, affection, comfort and family relationship" as a measure of damages, based on an appellate court's decision two years ago.

Jurors awarded Kelly John Streun, a 17-year-old ministerial student, $350,000 of the $2 million he sought for the loss of his mother, 34-year-old Linda Streun Moore. State District Court Judge Don Lane ruled Streun could not receive damages from the death of his stepfather, 39-year-old Donald Moore, because he had not been formally adopted.

The couple was killed Dec. 21, 1979, in an accident on U.S. Highway 87 between Eden and San Angelo. A 15-year-old cousin also was killed in the accident and an 18-month-old child, whom the Moores were adopting, was seriously injured.

Streun had sued Gooch Packing Co., Inc. of Abilene and James Eugene Smith of Midland, a driver for the company, for more than $2.1 million.

Gooch filed a third-party action against the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, alleging the pavement's slick surface and lack of warning signs caused Smith's 18-wheel rig to jackknife and slide into the path of the Moores' vehicle.

Jurors ruled 11-1 Wednesday that Smith's driving errors were the sole causes of the accident.

Streun, who suffered a fractured pelvis and head injuries in the accident, also was awarded $2,986 for medical expenses, $6,078 for funeral expenses, $15,000 for pain and anguish and $45,842 for loss of support, service and advice from his mother.

Midland Home Lumber opens after reorganization

After filing for reorganization under federal bankruptcy codes Midland Lumber Company, with businesses located at 6501 W. Industrial and 401 S. Main, has reopened.

The firm does business under the names Midland Home Lumber Company and Fort Stockton Home Lumber Company.

The petition for reorganization was filed Oct. 27 under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code in U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division. Under Chapter 11 a company continues to operate under court protection from creditors while seeking to work out a plan of reorganization.

After taking over some loans of the now-defunct First National Bank of Midland, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation seized some assets of the lumber company, causing it to close Oct. 22, according to a press release issued by attorneys representing Midland Lumber Company. It reopened Thursday after filing a complaint against the FDIC in U.S. Bankruptcy Court Wednesday. Judge Joseph Elliott approved an agreement between Midland Lumber Company and the FDIC providing for the return of those assets.

The petition for reorganization also includes Fort Stockton Home Lumber Company, which is owned by the Midland-based business.

Midland County motorists soon will pay more for car insurance

AUTSIN — A "typical" Midland County motorist will soon be paying 2.4 percent more in automobile insurance premiums under new rates approved last week by the State Board of Insurance.

The statewide, average increase is 4.8 percent. Preimiums vary due to several factors, including the geographical location where the vehicle is driven.

Rates for some specific types of coverage will actually go down while others increase. For example, comprehensive coverage will drop from the current $158 to $152. But personal injury protection will rise from $30 to $33.

Overall, a person paying $584 for full coverage in Midland County will pay $598 in the future.

Gem club to host annual show

The Midland Gem and Mineral Society will host the 21st Annual Gem and Mineral Show Nov. 12 and 13 at the Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80.

Show hours will be 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Members are selling advance tickets for $1.50 or $2 at the door.

The show will feature exhibits by local and area club members and personal collections of the dealers. Everything from finished jewelry to rough material will be offered.

Sand bottle creations and marble making and carving will be demonstrated both days. A silent auction and flourescent show will be ongoing events, as well as a sand box treasure hunt for children.

Proceeds will go to the club building fund.

MADD to hold meeting Tuesday

The Midland-Odessa Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Pastoral Counseling Center at Air Terminal.

Susan Hildebrand, president of the Bexar County MADD chapter, is the featured speaker. Mrs. Hildebrand's mother was killed by a drunk driver.

All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting. More information can be obtained by calling Midland-Odessa Chapter President Cynthia Grubb at 694-4870.

Crime rate drops in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of violent crimes in the nation's fourth largest city dropped 9.3 percent during the first nine months of 1983, according to statistics released by the Houston Police Department.

Police Chief Lee P. Brown said the overall decline was due partly to increased number of officers patrolling the streets.

For Medley, the times (and tunes) are changing

Midlander in Profile

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

George Medley went to work for the city just until he could find a better job. "I said I was going to be here only until I found something else."

That was in 1954.

In January, Medley, 62, will retire from his job as city engineer.

It wasn't that he always liked the job. In fact, he quit after less than a year. But he was back at City Hall in December 1955 and never left.

"I didn't like city work," Medley says of those early days. "I was a structural engineer." But the economy was creeping at a snail's pace and there was no need for many structural engineers. When Medley came back the second time, he had decided being a civil engineer wasn't that bad. Over the years, he became certified in that field, an addition to his first degree.

MEDLEY DECIDED there was more to city government than just civil engineering. He read minutes from old city council meetings. He visited all the departments and found out what they did and were planning to do. His "prowling around," as he calls it, has made Medley today a walking verbal authority on city government.

"I've butted in all over the city. I know a little bit about everything. I have the capacity to remember things. And numbers fascinate me," he says, rattling off dates when something occurred or exact location of a specific street and when it was constructed. "For some reason, it all stuck. But this kind of information I can't give to anyone else."

A slender man who fits unobtrusively into the City Hall niches, Medley has seen the municipal government ebb and flow along with the city's economic tides. As the tide was high, the work flow increased. When the economy receded, so did the work.

He remembers the long, drawn-out council meetings, and the humorous side to them. He laughs over the good times and good friends at City Hall. And he shakes his head over the one problem that has kept the city awash in controversy from flood to flood.

There was the time he learned one of those jingles at a Texas Municipal League convention. He sang it so much the council made him give a performance at a meeting. Sung to the tune of "Just a Closer Walk With Thee," Medley can still croon:

"Just a bowl of butter beans
"I don't want no collard greens
"Pass the cornbread if you please
"All I want is a bowl of butter beans."

But all weren't pleasant. "I had a mayor who said if he told me to put a sewer line on a power pole I'd better do it. I told him if I did it, it wouldn't work. The council decided to let the staff decide where to put the sewer lines, which is what we thought in the first place. That's why we were hired."

Laughing, he remembers the time that water to a mayor's home was shut off in the middle of a council meeting. His wife, upset, called. The mayor had forgotten to pay the bill.

For many years, the council didn't start its session until 7:30 in the evening. With controversial items, the meetings dragged on past midnight. "One public hearing ended after 1 in the morning" and the council still hadn't finished the agenda. One councilman left and returned with some beer, a case of soft drinks and barbecue sandwiches. "They sat around and let their hair down," Medley recalls. "I didn't get home until 4 in the morning."

George Medley didn't like working for the city in 1954. But the occupation grew on him and he'll be retiring in January.

There used to be Christmas parties at the home of a previous city manager. The employees took their families for refreshments and a Christmas bonus. "The biggest bonus I got was 10 bucks."

THE CELEBRATING went even further for the annual awards ceremony. It was a barbecue at Cole Park for employees and families. "We used to have some real good times on our awards day. There were speeches and music. I sang with a barbershop quartet, and the police department had a string band," Medley says.

But the event got too large and the cost too high, and it was changed to a small dinner for awards recipients only.

However, some things haven't changed...like drainage.

Medley says the biggest problem he's faced in his job has been how to drain the city.

Glancing out the window of his office in City Hall on a recent rainy day, Medley notes: "We don't have any place to run this water to. People always ask about a storm sewer. If you have $25 million we could put one in. But Midland Draw isn't big enough to carry the run-off. Drainage is going to be one of the biggest problems facing developers."

As the city grows north, more water flows unimpeded into the rest of Midland. "If it rains in Andrews, it drains in Midland," jokes Medley. Turning serious, he explains the city is trying to work on that problem by developing a large drainage channel in north Midland.

When he first started as city engineer, no one paid any attention to drainage. "My instructions were to pick up water on the west side of a subdivision and drain it through to the east. We didn't worry about where it went."

But the '60s were a turning point. Medley was given one subdivision that apparently was stuck between a rock and a hard place. It was situated between two other subdivisions and the grades on both sides already had been set. The water in this development had no where to go.

That prompted the city to require each developer to provide a contour map to check drainage. And in the late '70s, comprehensive plans had to be submitted.

"WE HAVE A drainage plan we're working on all the time," Medley says. "It's one of those things that costs money. Plans a few years ago called for lining Scharbauer Draw so the water would run off faster. But the money was too much."

Some of those plans have been implemented, he says, pointing to a storm sewer in Golf Course Road.

Money is one of those frustrating aspects of being a city employee. "We prepare a lot of plans and get, 'Well, we just can't do it,' and we put it back. It gets irritating."

Mulberry Lane is one of those frustrations. Medley says plans for draining that street have been ready for 10 years. But the council backs off, saying "it's not economically feasible," relates Medley. "I don't know of any structures that have been damaged by water, but the day might be coming."

Medley says he likes to solve problems — that's what has intrigued him about the city job for so many years — but sometimes he's had to admit failure. There was the recent case of a Realtor selling lots to persons, claiming they could get a water and sewer tap easily. The truth is that there were no water and sewer lines in that area of the city.

"During the boom, these re estate people sold land and sa water and sewer was available; they had to do was pay $200 for water tap. But there's no line the to make a tap."

The Realtor had sold 25 lots unsuspecting persons. City offici finally solved the citizens' proble by installing water and sewer lin and allowing the people to pay o what they owed.

"THE CITY looked for recour against these real estate people, b couldn't," says Medley. "The Realt didn't violate a city ordinanc There was nothing illegal; ju unethical. The Realtor was awar there was no service there but wasn't going to pay to have it p in."

In June 1954, Medley knew h didn't like working for the city, b his opinion changed over the years.

"You've got to like municip work. A city employee is more of public servant. I don't think I'm her to make money for the city; I'm her to help the citizens. I've made a l of enemies, but I feel I made som friends."

Medley was 32 and the father o two when he received his engi neering degree. It's been his wif Eleanor, pushing him through th years; first into college and then int city work.

To not like the job at first, Medle says he wouldn't ever want to leav municipal work. But he caught him self acting like his first boss an decided it was time to retire.

"I said when the time comes can't go along with a new idea, the it's time to leave. I found myself say ing, 'It's always worked this way.'

"I feel like I've done all I can fo the city. I feel like they need a youn ger person. Times have changed."

Teacher almost falls in same manhole that swallowed boy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A teacher said he almost stumbled into the same open manhole, obscured by weeds, that a 12-year-old boy disappeared into, never to be seen alive again.

Rescuers spent hours searching for Raul Perez, but finally had to wait for his body to drift eight miles to a sewage treatment plant. His body surfaced late Friday, more than a day after he plunged into the city's underground sewer system after he jumped over a fence to retrieve a ball while playing soccer.

The sixth-grader fell through the uncovered manhole about 2 p.m. Thursday during a physical education class at Tafolla Junior High School.

Val Estrello, a teacher who was supervising the class, told reporters that he ran to look for Perez and "stumbled upon the hole, which was uncovered and obscured by high weeds."

"I almost fell in myself," he said.

The boy's mother, Beatrice Perez, said she "just started crying" when she first was told about the accident.

"That hole was supposed to be covered," she said. "If it had been, nothing would have happened to my son."

Roy Ramon, an eighth-grader, said Perez jumped over a fence in pursuit of a soccer ball and just disappeared.

"He was just hanging on the gate and he pushed off and fell (feet first) into the hole," Ramon said.

The rescue crews had searched for Perez's body by using a special underground remote camera and sending "spelunkers" to search the system, Deputy Fire Chief Jim Miller said.

Empty water jugs also were floated through the system to see if they would be obstructed by anything, but they easily glided through the swiftly flowing water.

"After we couldn't find him for so long, we just waited for him to float in there," said Assistant Fire Chief Jimmy Saldana. "We were afraid he had snagged on something but after so long, we knew he was dead."

Student to compete for Century III trip

A Midland High School senior has been named the school's top Century III Leader. Karen Eggleston will now compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 scholarships and a trip to the Century III Leaders National Conference in Virginia in March. State winners will compete for an additional $10,000 scholarship.

Eggleston

The program is designed to recognize students who show both strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America. Miss Eggleston was judged on leadership skills, school and community involvement, an essay and a current events examination.

Miss Eggleston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Eggleston, 1605 W. Tennessee. She has also been recognized as a National Merit semi-finalist. Runners-up in the competition were J.J. Baskin, son of Judge and Mrs. Pat Baskin, and Patrick Culp, son of Judge and Mrs. Vann Culp.

Dawson

CORA DAWSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dawson of 107 W. Dormard, is the recipient of the Eta Epsilon Zeta Chapter, Zeta Phi Beta sorority scholarship award. She is a 1983 graduate of Lee High School and is enrolled at Midland College, majoring in business administration and secretary science. She was a member of the LHS band and a student council representative.

PAMELA SOUTHERLAND, daughter of Joan and Robert Southerland of 4206 Valley Drive, was recently elected to the freshman council at Texas Tech University. The 30-member group works with the student association and senate to learn about the university's student government. Miss Southerland, an Alpha Chi Omega pledge, is majoring in interior design.

THREE MIDLAND students have been selected as members of the Hardin-Simmons University Chorale. Scott Carrell, a freshman church music major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Carrell; Elizabeth Ireland, a senior music major, is the daughter of R.E. Ireland; and Tyler Patton, a freshman music major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Patton.

Krusekopf

TWO MIDLAND High School seniors were recognized Thursday by the Midland Downtown Rotary Club. Charles Krusekopf, son of Hank Krusekopf Jr. of 2610 Cimmaron, is vice president of JETS and a member of the National Honor Society. He is also active in Methodist Council on Ministries, Conference Council on Youth Ministries and president of Big Spring District United Methodist Youth.

Cowden

Christy Cowden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coley Cowden of 2200 Seaboard, is involved in National Honor Society and the French Club and is the recipient of academic letters. She is recording secretary for Student Council, football secretary and Packbacker officer.

WILL SEVIER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Sevier of Midland, has pledged Delta Tau Delta fraternity at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. He was elected vice president of his pledge class.

Greg Bartus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene G. Bartus of Midland, has pledged Phi Delta Theta fraternity at TCU. Both are graduates of Midland High School.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items submitted should be delivered or mailed to Rhonda Rigenhagen at The Reporter-Telegram. Pictures can be picked up or returned with a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Judge releases millions to airline

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has released $10 million of restricted cash so financially ailing Continental Airlines will be able to keep its planes in the air.

U.S. District Judge R.F. Wheless Jr. released the money after Mickey Foret, the carrier's vice president and treasurer, testified Friday that Continental officials were uncertain the operation could continue through this week without additional funds.

The airline may spend money it has received from transactions since Sept. 24, the day the company filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy laws. But to use funds acquired earlier, the company must receive permission from the court.

The airline's cash reserve had increased from $53 million on Sept. 24 to $67.5 million by Friday, Foret said.

However, he said, the unrestricted funds — or money that the company may spend — dropped from $27 million to $7 million, Foret said.

Continental attorney Bruce Zirinsky argued that the airline's $70 million in receivables due and the value of the fleet were "more than ample collateral" for the airline's secured lenders.

education in brief

Craddick to address teachers' group on legislature, education

Rep. Tom Craddick will discuss education and the Texas Legislature when the Classroom Teachers Association of Midland meets Nov. 14. The CTAM Administrator of the Year will also be announced and reports from various committees will be given. The meeting will begin at 4:15 p.m. in the Alamo Junior High School library. That is also the deadline to nominate TCTA state convention delegates.

Clower to speak at MCS banquet

Jerry Clower, professional entertainer and Grand Ole Opry star, will be guest speaker for Midland Christian School's annual Tree of Life dinner at Green Tree County Club. The Nov. 12 dinner is designed to express appreciation to those who support the school with an annual gift of $1,000 or more.

Eric Vaughn, vice president of American Music Center, will provide dinner music during the program. For additional information call 686-0319.

Choir clinic scheduled at MHS

Almost 200 high school students from Midland and area communities will participate in the All-Region Clinic Dec. 3 at Midland High School, and the public is invited to the 7:30 concert in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Students named to the All-Region Choir after tryouts included:

From Midland Freshman High School Shelly Daniel, David Willingham and Candice Howard.

From Lee Freshman High School Kevin Oyenik, Felicia Long and Jessica Garrett.

From Midland High School Tammi Biel, Francene Burnett, Darin Taylor, Marcelles Holloway, John Porterfield and Andrew Garza.

From Lee High School Debbie Barela, Liz Thurman, Deidre Howard, Chris Maxey, Sharon Specht, Sissy Jaso, Kristi Craig, April Paris, Amy Johnson, Joey Sperl, Anna Diaz, Daniel Simmons, Tracy Sherman, Todd Sparks, Steve Barnes, Ricky Pertile, Carl Cosgrove, Lake Davis, Mike Elliot and Kevin Williams.

Students also earning the right to audition for the Area Choir Dec. 2 are Felicia Long, Jessica Garrett, Tammi Biel, Darin Taylor, John Porterfield, Deidre Howard, Chris Maxey, Kristi Craig, April Paris, Daniel Simmons, Tracy Sherman, Ricky Pertile and Carl Cosgrove.

Midlanders offer 'Helping Hands'

This school year more than 1,200 Midlanders have agreed to help a child in trouble through a program known as "Helping Hands." Volunteers place a poster of green fluorescent hands in their front window as a signal they are available to assist children who need help.

The "Helping Hands" program is a combined effort of the Midland Independent School District, Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department, City Council PTA, Volunteers in Public Schools and the Midland Downtown Lions Club. Anyone who wishes to participate should contact the principal of any elementary school.

'Women in Transition' to meet

A group of "Women in Transition" will meet 7 to 9 p.m. for the next six Mondays at Midland College in Room 233 of the Learning Resource Center.

The group was formed as the result of a workshop to assist women who are divorced, widowed or entering the work force. Topics include emotional, legal, economic, social and psychological problems and issues which women face.

There is no charge for attending the meetings, but interested persons should pre-register by calling Wanda Phillips at 684-7851, extensions 264 or 243.

Water education plan initiated

A pilot project in water education has been implemented at five Midland schools. Its goal is to increase students' knowledge of water, its nature, its uses and man's dependence upon it.

Water and Man Inc. materials were developed for all grade levels and explore many areas of water such as agriculture, energy, transportation, recreation, environment, elements and conservation. The project is being funded by the Texas Society of Professional Engineers. Texas Electric Service Company is coordinating the program in cooperation with Region 18 Education Service Center.

Far West Texas and portions of the Panhandle also may experience higher-than-average temperatures.

October rains offer ray of hope

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

The October rains on thirsty West Texas ground have resulted in some rangeland weed growth — which should help prevent winter wind erosion — but in only marginal grazing.

Many West Texas counties suffered through the worst drought conditions in three decades most of the year, and the rains, while perhaps not drought-breakers, at least provided hope.

"It had some good effect," said extension agent Kent Powell of Upton County. "We've got some weeds coming. We'll make a little cheap feed, and, if it holds off on frost a while, it'll make some cattle feed, I think."

Upton County had received only .8-1.5 inches of rain all year until an October rainstorm dumped 2.5-5 inches on rangeland and a second rain added .75-1 inch.

"It wasn't the answer," said Powell, "but it was a start.... We would hope that it was a drought breaker, but we wouldn't say it is. People remember the '50s. It would rain like that and it wouldn't rain anymore."

Powell said that while he hasn't dug into the soil since the initial rain, "it's saturated pretty good right now...It's seasoning, moisture, in the soil, and hopefully we'll get some more next spring."

Meanwhile, the rains came too late to do anything but hurt cotton crops in Martin County.

"Some of the cotton that was open and standing in the field, the hard rains did tend to waste it on the ground," said Martin County agent Gary Clevenger.

The 3-5 inches of rain had only an aesthetic effect on Martin County rangeland.

"It has greened up, but due to the cool nights and cool days we haven't grown any grazing," said Clevenger. "We have more farmland than pastureland, and about all the moisture has allowed us to do is plant some small grains to help keep down erosion in the winter from the wind. That's the primary benefit we got...We could still get some more rain this fall, but if it doesn't rain next year we'll still be in a drought condition."

Crane County pastureland is showing both the benefits and disadvantages of the heavy rains.

"We're starting to get more grasses showing up, but one problem is we're getting in a season of poisonous weeds and we're going to have a lot of trouble with them because of the rains," said county agent Willie Stumberg. The poisonous plants include shinnery, the leaves of which could be consumed in massive quantities by livestock.

Prior to this weekend, Crane County had received approximately 4.5 inches, compared to only 1.8 inches in the initial part of 1983.

"It's not a drought breaker," said Stumberg. "We won't know that until we go into spring and summer months. It'll help us get through the winter a little better than what we had planned on, but if you put it on a scale, (pastureland) is still in poor shape. We haven't gotten near the growth that we normally have going into the winter months. Most of the grass we have is dried out and what we have seen is re-growth."

Midland County rangeland, while displaying greenery, also received rain too late to have a great effect.

"We're not far from the freeze date and there's not enough time to grow ample grass to re-stock and carry us through the winter," said county agent Earnest Kiker. "What this did is give us a good outlook for next year, if we can continue to get good rainfall and build good underground seasoning to carry us to next year and spring."

In spots, Midland County received up to 7.5 inches in the two October rains — rainfall heavy enough to cause some damage to cotton crops.

"It caused this cotton to have a regrowth which delayed our cotton harvest," said Kiker. "However, we're satisfied with the rainfall and would rather have rain than not."

Reports based on 1982 agriculture census

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is turning out preliminary reports based on the 1982 census of agriculture. There is some question, however, whether the reports are keeping up with the times or are necessary at all.

Defenders of the agricultural census say that the figures provide the most reliable look at the nation's leading industry and that the reports are used extensively in making decisions that can affect the well-being of all Americans.

By law, the Commerce Department is required to conduct economic and agricultural censuses every five years. The Census Bureau, part of Commerce, performs the task.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office, an investigative agency of Congress, noted that there have been attempts to eliminate or abridge the agricultural census, including a proposal by the bureau in 1981 to skip the 1982 census. For the most part, pressure from Congress and the private sector has prevailed.

Information for the $57 million 1982 census was collected mostly by questionnaires sent to farmers at the end of last year and were to be returned by Feb. 15, 1983. The previous farm census was in 1978, but the five-year cycle was shortened to put it in step with the economic census of U.S. business activity.

The agricultural census goes back to 1840 when it began as a once-every-decade enumeration. However, beginning in the mid-1920s the farm census speeded up to every five years.

Although the GAO report did not make specific recommendations on what to do with the agricultural census, if anything, it outlined some of the benefits of continuing the survey — as well as some of its shortcomings.

The GAO report was submitted to Congress last month at the request of a House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee.

One development has been that the Agriculture Department since the late 1920s "has reduced its reliance on the census" for certain commodity estimates because USDA has developed its own statistical apparatus to a high degree of efficiency, the report said.

Entries sought for pecan show

The 1983 Midland County Pecan Show has been scheduled November 28 and 29 at Dellwood Mall. This year has been a good year for pecans and we encourage all producers to enter this year's show.

Kiker

Participants are limited to one entry of each named variety they grow. The grower may enter as many seedlings, known hybrids or natives as he wishes. The exhibitor must be the grower.

A minimum of 40 pecans are necessary for each entry. This minimum sample of 40 should represent the variety and be uniform in size and shell color. Mixed samples (more than one variety in an entry) will be disqualified. The grower may wish to select the heaviest pecans by weighing individual nuts.

A variety entry may be composed of nuts from more than one tree. For example, if the grower has 10 Choctaw trees, each tree could contribute nuts the grower's one Choctaw entry.

Nuts should be without insect or disease damage. The pecans should be free of dust, dirt and shuck remanents. They should not be buffed to the extent that shape or color is altered.

Pecans selected early may still contain considerable moisture. For this reason it is best not to package samples in tight plastic bags because of condensation. A brown paper bag folded loosely or stapled is best. Pecans exhibited must be from the 1983 crop.

Pecans are judged on the basis of size (number per pound), appearance and shell color. Kernel quality is equally important and is based on the percent kernel (as relative to shell), color, general appearance, texture, hollowness and taste.

Anyone wishing to enter pecans in the show may take their entries to the following collection points: County Extension Office, 218 W. Illinois, until 5:00 p.m., Friday, November 25th; Village Barber Shop, 2-B Meta Dr., until 1:00 p.m., Saturday, November 26th; or to Marge Shaw residence, 40 Lavera Dr. (Ridge Heights Addition) until 5:00 p.m., Saturday, November 26th.

Farmers should not wait until next spring to begin planning their crop fertilization programs. By collecting samples now and having soils tested, farmers can get a jump on next year's production.

Testing soils this fall offers several advantages: samples often can be collected when fields are dry and more accessible. In the spring, it's often difficult and sometimes impossible to collect samples because soils are wet or even flooded. By testing this fall, farmers avoid the typical spring rush in te Soil Testing Laboratory. Applying fertilizers in the winter minimizes spring planting delays because of tight dealer schedules and reduces the potential for moisture loss just prior to planting. also, fertilizers usually cost less in the fall than in the spring when demand is greater and supplies tighter.

Fall testing also eliminates the risk of not getting fields sampled. If soils are not tested until near spring planting time, chances are good that fields will not be tested at all.

For more information concerning soil testing and materials, contact your County Extension Office.

When the Bell System splits up, your phone bill won't.

Beginning January 1, different companies will provide different parts of your phone service. It's due to the break up of the Bell System.

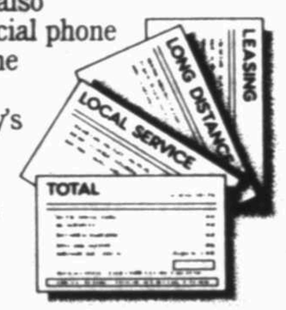
But you'll still get only one bill each month at your home or office.* Because all of the services previously provided by the Bell System will be billed through Southwestern Bell Telephone, except for purchases of new telephone equipment from AT&T.

So you'll continue to make just one payment each month to Southwestern Bell Telephone as you now do. But the way your phone bill looks will change. It'll have more pages.

For example, local service from Southwestern Bell Telephone will be on one page, long distance from other companies will be on another page and leased equipment on an additional page.

You'll also see a separate page for some long distance charges from Southwestern Bell Telephone. These would be for long distance calls made within your surrounding area which Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to handle. Outside that area, though, long distance will be provided by other companies. And all long distance calls and charges will be itemized as always.

Separate company charges will show you exactly what each service costs. There also will be a special phone number on the first page of each company's section that you can call for questions about that part of your bill. That's important, because each company will be responsible for handling questions concerning its services.



Southwestern Bell Telephone has combined all of these separate service charges into one bill to make it easier for you. And to show you exactly how much each part of your total telephone service costs. It's one more way we're working to keep your telephone service, even with all the changes, what most people think is the best in the world.

If you would like to find out more about your new bill format, call 1 800 555-5000, toll free. We'll be glad to answer your questions. For questions regarding specific charges, please refer to the phone numbers on your bill.

Council to debate airports

Fate of property at Midland Air Park and Midland Regional Airport may be decided Tuesday by the City Council when it meets at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

Bids were received in early September for sale or trade of 48 acres of Air Park property and 44 acres of Regional Airport property. At that time, the council withheld a decision until the bids could be compared. Only two were received: one offered to trade land, another offered to sell land.

The council also will proceed with another phase in its $20 million water effluent disposal project being constructed 15 miles southeast of the city. One proposal is to award a bid for clearing land at the new disposal site. A second proposal will award the bid for constructing a terminal reservoir at the site. And a third proposal will consider advertising for bids for constructing a pump station, furnishing irrigation equipment and installing underground effluent distribution lines and electrical systems.

Midland County will be requesting the city to furnish water to the new jail site east of the city.

The request of residents in the 3500 block of West Wadley to allow parking in front of their homes will be reconsidered.

In other action, the council will look at an ordinance concerning parking along Illinois Avenue from Acklen Drive to Midland Drive, installing new school zones and crossings, levying a 1 percent gross receipts tax on bingo games within the city limits and purchasing four units of a communications console for the radio room for the Police Department.

New rates for vehicular parking at Midland Regional Airport will be viewed. Rates in the overflow lot will go from $1.50 per day to $3. Rates in the nearby parking will be combined and will be $6 per day.

A public hearing at 1:35 p.m. will consider a request for a specific use permit for a lounge on the west side of Rankin Highway.

A 1:40 p.m. public hearing will consider a request by Midland Helicopters, Inc., for an amended specific use permit for a heliport at 104 S. Pecos St.

A 1:45 p.m. public hearing will consider amendments to the zoning code as follows:

—To permit certain retail uses in the O-1 and O-2, office districts.

—To amend the regulations pertaining to the locations of front yards; and —To amend the regulations pertaining to the application of minimum lot widths and depths.

A public hearing at 2 p.m. will consider annexation of the window pane area south of U.S. Highway 80 between Cotton Flat Road and Johnston Street.

MISD Board of Trustees

Midland school trustees should face a brief and routine agenda when they meet Tuesday afternoon.

Business items include electing three directors to the Midland County Appraisal District, hearing a request by the Midland Soccer Association to begin a soccer program at MISD and hearing a summary of student attendance.

The meeting begins at 1:30 p.m. in the board room of the administration building, 702 N. N St.

Tuesday's polling places listed

Polling places for Tuesday's constitutional amendments election will be as follows:

—Precincts 101, 102, 105 and 106, Fire Station at Midland Drive and Thomason.

—Precincts 103 and 104, Lamar Elementary School, 3200 Kessler.

—Precinct 202, Greenwood Elementary School cafeteria, Cloverdale Road.

—Precinct 208, Lee Freshman School, 1400 E. Oak Ave.

—Precincts 204, 205, 206, 207; Bowie Elementary School, 805 Elk and N. A St.

—Precincts 201 and 203; County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

—Precincts 302, 303, 304, 305 and 306; Public Safety Building, 404 E. Texas Ave.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Insulin treatment tailored to needs of patient

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am following my doctor's advice and injecting myself with insulin three times a day. But I know some people who take their insulin only once a day. Is this because different doctors have different ideas about what sort of treatment is best? It would be a lot easier if I could only take it once a day then forget about it. I would appreciate an explanation. — Joyce, Wheaton, Md.

Dear Joyce: The simple answer to your question is that no two people are alike and that treatment has to be tailored to the specific needs of the individual patient. However, there are other reasons as well.

Studies have shown that when the dosage is spread throughout the day, a patient may actually require a smaller total dosage of insulin than if it is taken in one dose. Moreover, the divided or split doses provide better glucose control and decrease the risk of hypoglycemia (abnormally low blood sugar).

Some physicians use a single daily injection for patients who might otherwise have difficulty in complying with the recommended course of treatment. However, the single dose requires an amount of insulin that might increase the risk of hypoglycemia, particularly in people who tend to skip meals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is taking digitalis for a heart condition. When I went with him to his doctor, the doctor mentioned that some elderly people may have a reaction to digitalis. Although I don't live with my father, I would like to know what kinds of signs indicate that a person is having a reaction to digitalis. — Greg, Medford, Ore.

Dear Greg: A number of studies have shown that older people tend to have a predisposition to digitalis toxicity. From a behavioral standpoint, symptoms may include a lessened degree of alertness, either lethargy or agitated behavior, and incoherent speech. Some people may also become unusually suspicious or claim to hear or see things that do not exist. Nightmares and feelings of depression are other possibilities.

A patient who begins to exhibit any of these symptoms should be seen by a physician so that the kind and dosage of the medication being taken can be reevaluated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there any particular kind of laxative you would recommend for a pregnant woman? Are some more mild that others? — Mrs. B.R., Atlantic City, N.J.

Dear Mrs. R.: I would recommend that a pregnant woman see her obstetrician if she suffers from constipation. Medication is not the only method of relieving constipation. Exercise and the use of bran cereal, unsweetened fruit juices and raw fruits and vegetables may help.

Consumer confidence increases

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — As the United States emerges from recession, American consumers have more confidence than any time in more than 10 years, a University of Michigan study finds.

But the study also preidicts that the rapid pace of the recovery likely will slow and that a rise in interest rates will dampen consumers' attitudes.

"The record levels of optimism are based on the current or the expected direction of change in the economy, following a prolonged period of adversity, not on the current or expected level of economic performance," survey director Richard T. Curtin said in releasing the study on Friday.

The favorable attitudes of consumers indicate a "robust" recovery in sales of cars, houses, and large household appliances, he said.

The study by the university's Insitute for Social Research based its findings on responses from 2,000 people nationwide gathered in the third quarter of 1983.

The institute's Index of Consumer Sentiment reached 91.6 in the third quarter, just above the 91.5 recorded in the second quarter. The July-September quarterly reading was the highest since a peak of 94.4 was recorded in 1972. The survey used February 1966 as a reference point of 100.

Higher interest rates were expected during the coming year by 44 percent of those surveyed. Only 20 percent to 23 percent of respondents expressed concern over higher interest rates in each of the four prior quarters.

Declines in interest rates were expected by only 19 percent of the respondents.

Reagan salutes veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan saluted the nation's veterans on today, saying, "They have never let America down. We will never let them down."

The president devoted his weekly radio address to "our finest heroes" in advance of Veterans Day on Nov. 11.

Speaking from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan said that if the country remembers "their dedicated service in defense of our freedom ... their sacrifice will not be in vain. This is our obligation and this has been the spirit of Veterans Day from the beginning."

Reagan also reaffirmed his intention "to get the fullest accounting of our missing in Southeast Asia ... We must not rest until we know their fate."

Noting that he had visited Camp Lejeune, N.C. on Friday, the president said, "Such men and women can only come from a nation that remains true to the ideals of our founding fathers."

He added, "Each time our nation has called upon our citizens to serve, the best have come forward."

Reagan went to North Carolina for a memorial service to honor the Marines killed in Lebanon and Grenada.

NOTICE OF FILING OF
SOLID WASTE APPLICATION

THE CITY OF MIDLAND has filed Application No. 1605 with the Texas Department of Health for a permit to operate a proposed Type I municipal solid waste disposal site to be located approximately 6.0 miles east of Midland, 7.0 miles southeast of the intersection of IH-20 and State Highway 158, and approximately 0.75 mile north of State Highway 158 at the end of an unnamed road, in Midland County.

The application covers approximately 412.42 acres of land and seeks a permit to receive solid wastes under the regulatory jurisdiction of the Texas Department of Health for disposal or other processing in accordance with the said Department's Municipal Solid Waste Management Regulations. A preliminary study of the application will be made by the Department and supplementary material may be required of the applicant.

Before the issuance or denial of a permit, a public hearing on the application will be held pursuant to the Texas Solid Waste Disposal Act (Article 4477-7, Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes) and the Administrative Procedure and Texas Register Act (Article 6252-13a, V.T.C.S.). Notice of such hearing will be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the area where the site is located at least thirty (30) days prior to the date of such hearing.

Additional information concerning this application should be requested from the above-named applicant or from the Bureau of Solid Waste Management, Texas Department of Health, Austin, Texas 78756-3199, phone (512) 458-7271.

Issued this 20th day of October, 1983.

Senior Geophysicists

ARCO Exploration Company is one of America's leaders in domestic oil and gas exploration. We are managed by explorationists and will have an exploration program approximating $1 billion per year. Much of this activity is centered in the Gulf Coast, onshore and offshore.

We are renowned for our policy of promoting from within. However, our sustained growth has created more challenging positions requiring the expertise of creative, aggressive geophysicists than we can fill internally. There has probably never been a better time to join our exploration team.

You will become part of the team effort as you work daily with land and geology professionals in the implementation of exploration programs.

Excellent technical support will be provided in the areas of computer application, data acquisition and processing.

Specifically, you will be responsible for total geophysical evaluation for onshore/offshore programs. You will:

- Generate exploration programs.
- Apply data acquisition knowledge to help establish acquisition parameters.
- Apply processing knowledge to help establish processing parameters.
- Interpret geophysical data, properly relating the data to geological setting.
- Utilize state-of-the-art geophysical exploration techniques and tools.
- Participate in the development and evaluation of prospects.
- Deliver oral presentations and written reports to management.
- Assist in the training and development of less experienced personnel.

To qualify, you must have a BS in Geophysics or related discipline and at least five years experience in seismic data interpretation.

These positions are available in Midland, Anchorage, Dallas, Denver, Houston and Lafayette.

We offer very competitive starting salaries, an outstanding benefits program and one of the best moving/relocation plans in the country.

For prompt and guaranteed confidential consideration, please send a detailed resume including your geographic preferences, if any, to: Mr. L.N. Gater, ARCO Exploration Company, P.O. Box 2819, Dallas, Texas 75221.

Chemical Sales Representative

Successful now?

Share the excitement of a new division of ChemLink . . . in Midland/Odessa.

We are the Industrial/Petroleum Chemicals Division of ChemLink, created to make dramatic strides in the fluid treatment field. We can position you in this accelerating subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Company.

The products you'll represent include: Polymers, boiler-treatment chemicals that prevent scaling. Cooling-water treatment chemicals for refinery processes. Mutated bacteria. Refinery and petrochemical process side corrosion inhibitors, antifoulants, emulsion breakers, finished fuel additives. And an expanding repertoire of other specialty chemicals that will enable you to compete very successfully against stiff competition.

Above all, you will find an alert marketing organization that's committed to making you a key factor in its growth.

Your responsibilities will include developing and implementing sales plans for either or both water treatment and process chemical additives. Providing an effective level of technical service to the major industrial facilities of our new customers. Offering solutions/applications assistance to new and established customers. Negotiating contracts. And acting as a trend spotter and identifier of new product requirements.

If your credentials include: BS in Chemistry or in an engineering discipline with at least two years of college chemistry; minimum of two years of experience in specialty chemicals ... and a record of success in sales and technical service in water treatment or process chemical additive field ... we would like to meet you. Particularly if you have some process engineering experience in refinery or general industry.

For full briefing on the highly attractive salary/commission structure, and the outstanding career prospects we offer, send confidential resume and earnings history to:
Mr. S.J. Conway, ChemLink, Inc., A Subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Company, P.O. Box 7258, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19101. Principals only.

THIS ISUZU GETS MORE MILES A TANKFUL THAN ANY OTHER ECONOMY TRUCK IN THE COUNTRY.

Today, a lot of diesel truckmakers are spending a lot of money to advertise the mileage figures of their new diesel trucks.

Toyota is telling people that their diesel longbed can get a whopping 640 highway miles on a tankful of fuel.

Datsun has proudly announced that their diesel longbed has a highway range of an amazing 659 miles.

And yet, perhaps the most amazing thing of all, is that both these trucks get substantially fewer miles per tankful than the diesel longbed from Isuzu.

The Isuzu Longbed Diesel, with its 19.1 gallon tank, delivers a highway range of over 878 miles per tank.*

That's 219 miles per tankful more than the economical diesel Datsun.

That's 238 miles per tankful more than the fuel efficient diesel Toyota.

238 miles!

Which means that you'd have enough fuel to drive from Memphis to Jackson in an Isuzu Longbed Diesel, after you ran out of fuel in a Toyota.

The new Diesel Longbed from Isuzu.

"I'VE SEEN EVERY APARTMENT COMMUNITY IN MIDLAND."

"My feet hurt and my patience was wearing thin. I'd seen every apartment community in Midland, and none met my standards... until I discovered Oakridge Apartments. Just a little off the beaten trail, Oakridge has the quiet, private location I'd been looking for. Plus all the other extras I'd just about given up on. Like new construction, nice, friendly neighborhood appeal and superior amenities—indoor spa and sauna, clubhouse and pool, to name just a few—Oakridge is the greatest. I should know, I've seen them all."

1- and 2-bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

"It's good to have a place where you really like to live."

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

Getting together for a good cause

For the first time in Midland, alumnae of 16 national sororities have teamed their Christmas fund-raising efforts to present the Panhellenic Sorority Sampler, 10:30 a.m.-6 p.m., Thursday at St. Ann's Gymnasium at the corner of N and Illinois streets.

Planning stages of the Sampler began two years ago. Because of the success other sororities had with the idea in bigger cities, said Judy Thornton, chairman of the event, the Midland groups thought it was worth an experiment.

"In Midland, sororities had always held individual-fund raisers. For one group to absorb all of the overhead expenses is prohibitive," she said.

The concept was designed to reduce the cost in presenting a benefit bazaar.

"Our timing was good. Little did we know two years ago that the economy today would be like this."

Mrs. Thornton expects the cooperative effort in this year's plan to benefit all the sororities.

"The idea that each group could pick their own charities attracted many of the sororities.

At the Sampler, each booth will feature hand-made crafts, novelty items and homemade goods. "We tried to vary items and get as many different artisans as we could."

A $1 admission fee will be charged at the door and refreshments will be served. Children accompanied by adults are welcome at the event.

Mrs. Thornton's co-chairman is Nancy Doss. Other officers are Caroline Holmes, treasurer; Julie Brower, telephone chairman; and Dorothy Campbell, publicity chairman.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA: Proceeds of Christmas items, sand castings, wall hangings and an animated Santa will benefit scholarships for local girls, a local charity, the Cystic Fibrosis Fund and the National Easter Seal Society.

ALPHA DELTA PI: Proceeds from sales of homemade pies, paintings, purses, school benches, boxes, wooden toys such as games, baby rattle, night lights, puzzles, trains and checkers will benefit the Ronald McDonald House in Dallas.

ALPHA XI DELTA: Proceeds from sales of personalized Christmas wreaths and small brass accessories will benefit a local charity.

ALPHA PHI: Proceeds from sales of assorted cheese balls will benefit Midland Memorial Hospital's Cardiac Care Unit.

CHI OMEGA: Proceeds from sales of shelled and unshelled pecans will benefit their scholarship fund and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women.

DELTA DELTA DELTA: Proceeds from gift wrap booth featuring paper, ribbon, stickers, gift cards, totes, bags, tins, baskets, containers, tissue paper and boxes, will benefit Young Life.

DELTA GAMMA: The Delta Gamma booth will feature "Hand Makings for the Holiday Hostess," featuring aprons, cloth baskets, table runners, place mats, napkins and wooden ornaments.

DELTA ZETA: Proceeds from treasure chests for baby, kitchen, bath and Christmas items will benefit Gallaudet College for the Deaf in Washington D.C. and Midland Association for Deaf and Hard of Hearing.

GAMMA PHI BETA: Proceeds of plant and gift wrap sale will benefit Gamma Phi Beta Camps for Underpriveleged Children.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA: Proceeds from sales of original watercolors, fabric gingerbread houses, frozen crepes and lasagne, gold jewelry, ribbon wreaths and chocolate items will benefit the Community Children's Ministry.

KAPPA DELTA: Proceeds from the "Christams Gift Boutique" sale, featuring handmade dough ornaments, dolls with wardrobes, ducks, cats and geese, will benefit the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Va.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA: Proceeds from sales of red tulip and daffodil planting bulbs will benefit the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women.

PHI MU: Proceeds from sales of jalapeno jelly, wine jelly, potpourri sweeper packets, gingerbread items, gingerbread mix in jars with cookie cutters, a gingerbread house and Phi Mu Pumpkin Pops will benefit Project HOPE.

PI BETA PHI: Proceeds from sales of arrowcraft placemats, napkins, wooden toys and baby items, baked sweets and bread, gooseberry pie, Christmas cards, Greek stationery and a Christmas needelpoint canvas will benefit Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts in Gatlinburg, Tenn.

SIGMA KAPPA: Proceeds from letters from Santa and key chains will benefit the American Farm School in Greece, Maine (Seacoast Mission) and Christmas in April.

ZETA TAU ALPHA: Proceeds from sales of pottery, stocking stuffers, painted baskets, smocked items and "Santa's Visit to Your Home," will benefit Midland's Cerebral Palsy Center.

Cooking up keepsakes

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Bonnie Matthews was more concerned with her high school tennis team, her high school sweetheart and her summer as a foreign exchange student in Japan when she lived in Midland 14 years ago.

Today, she rallies her energy among printing bids, artists, promotions, high altitude recipe testing, her three sons and the same high school sweetheart.

Bonnie, now Mrs. John Welch, is co-author of "Kitchen Keepsakes," a cookbook released in October of this year.

After her graduation from Midland High School, she moved to Austin to study American studies at the University of Texas. John, also a Midland High School graduate, went to Texas A&M to major in agricultural economics. Ten years ago, they moved to Castle Rock, Colo., just south of Denver.

The idea for authoring a cookbook didn't occur to her until one evening when she was preparing dinner for her husband and two children.

She had been doling out creative, easy-to-cook recipes to friends for years. Suddenly, at the creation of yet another one, she decided to compile and sell them.

Mrs. Welch and her co-author, Deanna White, combined their favorite family recipes and some new ones and suddenly found themselves hunting for printers, artists and publishers.

The book was launched at a lavish brunch which attracted about 75 Douglas County women at the sprawling Welch ranch house in Castle Rock's Surrey Ridge.

The cook-author saw a need for "a good-family style cookbook that called for everyday ingredients most of us normally keep in our pantries...because many popular cookbooks require special trips to the grocery store for unusual ingredients," Mrs. Welch said in a recent telephone interview.

Both of the Welch's parents, Jack and Frances Matthews and Charlie and Eileen Welch, live in Midland.

When Mrs. Welch put her talents on the competitive cookbook market, she didn't leave her family and friends behind. Many of the recipes are named after people dear to her.

She attributes her "Texas-delicacy know-how" to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Eileen Welch, the namesake for several recipes on cowboy beans and fried okra. Another recipe from her is "Eileen's Italian Cream Cake."

" 'Mama Lange's Cinnamon Rolls,' is from one of my very best friends, Jennie House. The recipe was her grandmother's."

"Mom's Hot Crab Meat Sandwich" recipe is one of Bonnie's mother's old family recipes.

The cookbook was "a family effort," said Bonnie Welch, former Midlander and author of "Kitchen Keepsakes."

Some of the family recipes "were never written down — she just told us how to make them. Bonnie's maternal grandmother's specialty was "Bar L Rolls," named for her ranch near Breckenridge, Texas. The recipe is a part of the collections in spiral bound form.

"Sarah Lew's Layered Potato Casserole" is a recipe her aunt, Sarah Lew Grimes, gave her.

"Dodies Curried Scallops" is from her sister, Judy Craig, who lives in Houston. Many of the book's game recipes are from another sister, Midlander Susie Howard, whose husband is a wild game enthusiast.

"Poose's Chow Chow" is a popular recipe of the late Poose Odom, Midland County Public Library's librarian for several years. "I've used it for gifts for several years up here," said Mrs. Welch.

The book is divided into 11 sections for categories such as appetizers and beverages, eggs and cheese, soups and sandwiches, breads, salads, meats, chicken and fish, vegetables, rice, pasta, desserts, preserves, relishes and sauces and "kids' food."

Advice is sprinkled throughout the book with such tips as "Always wear rubber gloves when working with jalapeno peppers or hot chili peppers. The juice from the peppers will burn your hands."

Being the mother of three children — Bob, 5, Andy, 2 and Wesley, 1 — has given her ideas for creative and timely ideas for children to have fun in the kitchen.

E.T. cookies, yogurt sundaes, rainbow ice and Superman steaks, are just a few of the highlights in the "Kids' Food" section.

Gift ideas, such as "Jezebel Sauce," green tomato relish and mocha balls, are also listed in the book.

"I've always loved to cook. I've never studied it and I'm not a gourmet cook. I just like this kind of food. I come from a background of real good cooks."

Though she said it's too early to tell if she would ever write another cookbook, she added, "If it takes off, we might. I sure look for more recipes now than I ever have.

"It was a lot of work, but it is different from anything I'd ever done before. I've sure learned a lot about the printing business.

"I'm real proud of it. It's been a family effort and it's something that will be around for a long time."

Mrs. Welch didn't forget her friends and family when she had her cookbook published. Apparently they haven't forgotten her either — more than 250 books have been sold in Midland since its release.

Nell Freeman, a friend of the Matthews family, has already sold 50 copies of the book. She donated her sales commission to Hospice of Midland.

The book will also be sold at the upcoming Sorority Sampler Nov. 10 and at the Daughters of the American Revolution's Bake Sale Nov. 17.

Retail stores carrying the book are A La Carte, Driscoll's Gifts, Oakleaf Books, Lois Grupe's Gifts and J.W. Parks Gallery.

Author interprets human body's 'love signals'

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — At a restaurant in the heart of the West Hollywood chic zone, Dr. David Givens sits at a table and peers unobtrusively at the well-heeled clientele around him. Actually, he stares, but the people he is looking at are so self-involved they do not notice. Givens has been asked to describe and interpret the action going on and he does so, in clipped, professional phrases.

About a blonde eating at the bar and a man speaking to her: "She's leaning away a little, he's leaning in. That's not good for him. But both have their shoulders forward — that's good, submissive. He's really checking her reaction closely. He's looking at her more than she's looking at him. He used palm rotation — that's friendly. He's paying the check. She's not leaning away anymore. They're at least in Phase Three if they are courting."

PHASE THREE is the speaking phase of Givens' five-phase courting ritual — attention and recognition are One and Two, and touching and mating are Four and Five. All of them are outlined in his new book "Love Signals," subtitled "How to Attract a Mate."

Givens, a 39-year-old research anthropologist from the University of Washington, spent five years engaged in just this sort of scientific voyeurism, carefully monitoring how people meet and court others in singles' bars, university dining halls and "wherever people go." His premise is that people — like chimps, ducks and certain lower crustaceans — have mating rituals that have nothing to do with the conscious mind, but go back to our primitive roots, starting with something called "the reptilian core."

"Wired into this reptilian core you find a lot of basic social behaviors like approach and avoidance, dominance and submission, territory and mating instincts," he explains. "Later in evolution, an emotional cortex was put around that reptilian core. Next we got emotional animals like mammals who can express happiness and sadness. Finally, for humans, along came a second layer — the neo-cortex — where we have reading, writing and arithmetic.

"In courtship, it's these two lower levels of consciousness that are more or less taking over, though we may think we're in control," he concludes. "Courtship is not intellectual."

MIXED IN WITH the anthropological talk is advice on how to work with and not against your reptilian core — how to move and approach people without triggering natural defenses, how to read the signals given off by others. There are other body language books on the market, but "the difference is, I broke these things down into tangible, gritty details," Givens explains. "The main benefit is that it makes you an observer. I want to make people watch people."

Among those gritty details are Givens' tips on how men and women can become more attractive to one another, culled from long hours of observation. Women, Givens states in the book, benefit greatly from makeup and high heels ("makes a woman's hindquarters protrude, her breasts jut out, and her body bounce with every step"), should wear their hair "long and fluffy," and should dress in slit skirts and a peasant-type ruffled blouse that rides low on her shoulders or a scoop-neck sweater with puffy sleeves.

MEN SHOULD WEAR an expensive-looking flannel shirt in a light color, and a soft, bulky-knit lambswool cardigan with patch pockets and a shawl collar which, Givens says, "sends the compelling message: 'Hug me.' " On a barstool, Givens further advises, "a man should lean forward a little, rest his right hand on his right thigh, and put his left hand in his pocket. This will raise his left shoulder, flex the right one forward, and create a softer symmetry."

If you thought you left posturing and game-playing behind after having your consciousness raised in the '70s, Givens says it never should have been abandoned. He views his task this way: "We've only been living in crowded urban conditions for the last 10,000 years since the invention of agriculture and we still use the same courtship signs we used pre-agriculturally when we lived in small hunting and gathering bands and pretty much knew each other," he explains. "Things have changed so dramatically — now you go into a space crowded with strangers and try to act natural and it's impossible. It's unnatural for humans to be around so many strangers. I'm trying to tell people how to be natural."

GIVENS ADMITS HE has always been very shy and remembers being "submissive" around women. "I thought if I had my head down and looked up through the fringes of my hair, that made my face look better somehow," he muses. (In love-signal talk, that is known as being "boyish and juvenile," which is a courting plus.) But Givens never suffered from the kind of loneliness that causes singles to seek each other out in bars. "I always had girlfriends," he says. Divorced once, he recently married a woman he had gone with for seven years.

Southern belle called myth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scarlett O'Hara was not born in 1845 — she was created in 1936 when Margaret Mitchell published "Gone With the Wind."

Jean Friedman was once fired as a consultant to the Atlanta Historical Society for pointing out the difference.

Even in her finest green velvet dress, Scarlett "had no place in a historical exhibit," Ms. Friedman had told society members who were trying to make the fictional heroine the center of a display on Southern women.

"She is a myth," Ms. Friedman said.

And the Scarlett O'Hara myth — Southern women as coquettish, manipulative belles — has been perpetuated not only in the South but all over the country, said Ms. Friedman, now a history professor at the University of Georgia.

Church and family influenced Southern women much more than moonlight and magnolias, she said in a recent speech at Meredith College here.

"Forget Tara. 'Gone With the Wind' is just a Harlequin romance when you analyze it," she said. "It's a destructive myth, extremely destructive to Southern women. It says they're manipulative, that they gain power through seduction.

"Harlequin romances always have the dark brooding lover who puts the woman down. Rhett Butler does that. And there's that famous love scene where he sweeps her up the stairs. That's actually a rape," she said.

She said the Freudian interpretation of such a woman was that she's a masochist. "All that is basically harmful," she said.

Ms. Friedman has written a book, "The Enclosed Garden: Women in the Evangelical South, 1825-1885," to be published by the University of North Carolina Press, that is a history of the Southern community and its effect on women's roles.

She says the evidence shows that these women dreamed about community. And who made up the community? Kinfolk, of course. Southerners' sense of a family was a stronger influence on Southern lifestyles than slavery ever pretended to be, Ms. Friedman said. Slaves were viewed as property that, like any other type of material objects, merely enhanced the family's position.

Quiz checks knowledge of body's 'love signals'

Hearst Feature Service

Test your knowledge of body language with research anthropologist Dr. David Givens' quiz:

1. To show availability and attract attention at a singles' bar, a woman should: a. Flex, pitch and roll her shoulders. b. Keep her upper body motionless. c. Present her best profile and toss her head.

2. The quickest way for a woman to get to know a man is to: a. Dance with him. b. Take him boating. c. Go for a ride together in a car.

3. To present the right masculine image, a man should lift his chin, square his shoulders and puff out his chest. True or false?

4. When a man reaches out and administers the first touch — pats a woman's wrist or playfully takes her elbow in his hand — he'll know she's truly touchable if she: a. Tips her head over to one side. b. Raises her shoulders. c. Touches him back.

(5) The most congenial night spots offer: a. Music with a beat. b. Fluorescent lighting. c. Themes from the "safe past." d. Waiters instead of waitresses.

6. A sure sign of attraction is when a woman: a. Points her index finger. b. Rolls her hand palm up. c. Makes a series of palm-down gestures.

7. It's good practice for a man to approach a woman from an oblique angle, that is, from the side, rather than head-on. True or false?

8. Men like women who: a. Present meek, dependent images. b. Put on strong, seductive displays. c. Show "spunk."

9. To show a woman he'd like to get better acquainted, a man's best plan is to: a. Lock eye-to-eye with her for 10 seconds. b. Wait until her gaze meets his. c. Sweep his line of sight several times over her field of vision.

10. It's easy to know when a man is flirting with a woman by the way he speaks because: a. His voice is pitched higher. b. He seems excited and a bit "childlike." c. He keeps "checking" your reaction with his eyes. d. All of the above.

ANSWERS

1. a and c — Shoulder shrugging is the universal gesture of submission and safeness. "Without thinking, men and women pitch and roll their shoulders with partners they're attracted to," Givens writes. Hair-tossing is a come-hither signal.

2. c — Time in a car allows you both to commune on many sensory levels at once.

3. False — This is the crosscultural threat stance, not very conducive to courting.

4. a, b, c — Head-tilting and shrugging are both signals of friendliness and approachability. Touching takes the process one step further.

5. a and c — Music establishes a universal beat that everyone in the bar responds to subliminally, and causes synchrony which is necessary in courtship. Safe themes are tranquilizing and non-threatening, and induce people to linger.

6. b — Rotating your palm to an upward position is a friendly gesture designed to bring the other person in toward you.

7. False — Men prefer strangers to approach from an oblique angle; women prefer them to come up face-to-face.

8. c — "Women on a man's 'most-liked' list nearly always have Sally Field traits," Givens writes. "Men like her because she's feminine, vulnerable, and faithful, and she's got that ineffable steely stuff: spunk."

9. c — The unsolicited contact with a stranger that a direct look implies is threatening. "Gaze crossing" signals a mere intention to gaze and invites a friendly response.

10. d — "You will detect a childish bearing in an amorous man," Givens writes. Both men and women make themselves more vulnerable and submissive while courting, which takes the form of juvenile behavior.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Dr. Henry Page, whose birthday is today, was honored at a delightful surprise party Saturday evening in the Parish Hall of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Given by his wife Carol, the champagne reception was attended by a host of friends to offer their best wishes and congratulations.

Entertainment included a humorous musical skit, which reunited Dr. Page with friends from the distant past. The honoree and guests were surprised when the final friend to appear emerged from a large birthday cake.

A highlight of the evening for Dr. Page was the unexpected arrival of his daughter, Penny (Mrs. Goerge) Mayer from Jacksonville, Florida, and his sister, Nancy (Mrs. Richard) Fielding from Philadelphia.

Among those assisting Carol with party arrangements were Gloria (Mrs. Robert) Steelman, Carol (Mrs. Richard) Schmickrath, Mavis (Mrs. Mike) Murphy, Dr. Martha Madsen, Jane Clancy Debenport, Midge Anderson and Joyce (Mrs. John) Hammett.

Dr. Page has been a resident of Midland since early 1971, moving here from Philadelphia. He serves as medical director for Midland's four nursing homes, as well as Trinity Towers retirement center.

Born and raised in Philadelphia, Dr. Page is a third generation internist. Graduating from the University of Pennsylvania and its Medical School, he began his medical career during World War II aboard the hospital ship, the Solace, and was a survivor of Pearl Harbor. Prior to his move to Midland Dr. Page was head of the Department of Aging Research at Lankenau Hospital in Philadelphia and a professor of geriatics at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Page was a public speaker on geriatics at the White House Conference on Aging during President Eisenhower's term of office.

LONG-TIME MIDLANDER Mrs. Loleta Guffey was honored at a lovely party on her 80th birthday in the parlor of First United Methodist Church. A dinner for family and close friends followed at Mrs. Guffey's home that evening. Hosting the event were her daughters and their husbands, Lucille Pruitt of St. Petersburg, Florida, Lois and Johnny Carter and Frances and Howard Atwater.

Making the day even more special was the surprise arrival of her grandchildren from out of state, Lige Midkiff Jr. of San Francisco, Dana (Mrs. Levi) Little of Berkeley, California, and Tom Midkiff of Cheshire, Connecticut. Other grandchildren and great-grandchildren present for the occasion were Connie and Jerry Foote and sons Michael and Brian of Pampa, and from Midland, Mary and Jim Atwater and sons Lee and Chad; Bonnie Atwater and Trey, John J. Carter, and Vicki and Wayne Hathaway and children Jennifer, Jason and Jana.

Born Oct. 28, 1903, near Yates Center, Kansas, the former Loleta Robison was married to Emmett V. Guffey in El Dorado, Kansas, in 1919. Along with their three daughters, they moved from Wink to Midland in 1933, when Mr. Guffey opened the Reda Pump office here.

Since her husband's death in 1951, Mrs. Guffey has been a bookkeeper for several Midland businesses and continues in that capacity on a part-time basis now.

A 50-year member of First United Methodist Church, she currently serves as president of the Friendly Builders Sunday School Class and is a member of the administrative board, United Methodist Women and Eleanor Luton Circle. She is past president of Altrusa Club and active in other civic endeavors.

A TRIPLE BIRTHDAY celebration was held recently in the home of Betty Barnes to honor Dottie (Mrs. Jack) Fox, Ann Semple and former Midlander Royce Lubke, who came in from Houston for the weekend.

Co-hosting the party were Nancy Clayton, Ken Gosnell and Bruce Terrell. The party rooms were festively decorated in a Halloween theme with orange and black balloons and crepe paper and jack-o'-lanterns.

DELL AND GEORGE DAVIS had a delightful 15-day trip to New England this fall, highlighted by a stopover in Boston to take in all the historic sights and attractions of the area.

Traveling with friends from Dallas and Ocala, Florida, they enjoyed the brilliant foliage during a drive through Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. Via Highway 1 up the Maine coast, they went as far north as Bar Harbor. They loved the picturesque New England harbors and particularly enjoyed the Maine lobster and Vermont maple syrup.

ARCO entertained its employees and their guests at a festive theatre party at a recent Sunday afternoon at Theatre Midland. Following the revue of Cole Porter music, a cocktail buffet was served in the lobby.

Party-goers included Marjorie and Clarence Cardwell, Loraine and Billy Anderson, Betty and Jim Rhotenberry, Snookie and Raymond Howard, Carol and Jim Hartman, Farnsworth and John Gurr, Cathe and Bob Leggott, Sally and Martin Mogford, Martha and Joe Hastings, Helen and Pat Fletcher and Margie and Wayne Barton.

THE NEWLY-ORGANIZED Shell Alumni Group of the Permian Basin met recently in Midland Center for a barbecue and a day of visiting and reminiscing. Dean Rippetoe from the Midland office addressed the assemblage on "What's Happening with Shell."

Over 100 persons attended the event from throughout Texas and New Mexico. Among the out-of-town guests were Paula and Roy Sebesta of Fredericksburg and formerly of Midland, Lenna and Wally Chastain of Ute Park, New Mexico, and Evelyn and Charles Lain of Paris, Texas. A number of Midlanders were present, including Ruth and August Wenck, accompanied by their son Dr. Robert Wenck of College Station; Ann and Jess Lindsey, Louise and Otis Hitchcock, Roberta and Joe Rhodes, Maudie and Jack Jones, Jan and Arnold Brown, Glyna and Bob Kretzler and Raymond Monkress.

Bullard selected as national debutante

Janan Bullard

Janan Bullard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bullard Jr. of Midland has been selected as one of 34 debutantes nation-wide to be presented at the National Debutante Cotillion and Thanksgiving Ball of Washington in November at the Washington Hilton.

The festivities will benefit the Children's Hospital National Medical Center in Washington D.C.

The founder and chairman of the National Cotillion is Mary-Stuart Montague Price. Former First Lady Bess Truman sponsored the first cotillion. Former first ladies Lady Bird Johnson, Betty Ford and Mamie Eisenhower were also sponsors of the event.

The Ambassador of Turkey and his wife will host a tea dance during the five-day event.

Miss Bullard attends Madeira School in McLean, Va., and will to attend Texas A&M next year where she plans to major in political science.

Hartwell presented at San Antionio social club

Helene Milby Hartwell

Helene Milby Hartwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Milby Hartwell of Midland, was recently presented at the San Antonio German Club's ball as one of 10 debutantes of the 1983-84 season.

The San Antonio German Club is one of the oldest men's social organizations in the U.S. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Gish are Milby's sponsors. Mr. C.A. Kallaway, a new member of the German Club, of San Antonio will escort Miss Hartwell.

Miss Hartwell is a senior business major at the Unversity of Texas at Austin, where she also serves as president of her sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma. She is also active in Spooks, Orange Jackets, Mortar Board, Student Union Committee and ODK.

Handicapped create handcrafts for holiday sale

Soft, chic "in" for hairdos

By COLLETTE BOUCHEZ
Copley News Service

When it comes to the "new" look everyone in the industry, from clothing designers to hairstylists, is focusing attention on softness and strength. The combination of these two opposing elements brings forth a new look for the American woman.

In hair, the styles are soft, yet chic.

Stylists have come up with two new styles that women all over America will be wearing. The first, "The Bob" is a throwback to the 50s with some very sassy 80s updating.

The second style, called "The Parachute" which is more along the lines of an updated "pageboy."

Exhibit shown

LEXINGTON, Mass. (AP) — The exhibition, "The Loyal Americans: The Military Role of the Loyalist Provincial Corps and Their Settlement in British North America 1775-1784," is on view at the Museum of Our National Heritage here through next March 13.

The exhibit examines the military role of the Loyalists in Colonial America and points out the causes of the American Revolution in general terms.

BAMBOO EAST
...an exquisite new collection crafted from split bamboo, hand-woven and imported from the Orient.
For thousands of years, mankind has admired the rich textural character of split bamboo. Now Dixie continues that celebration of the inherent beauty of natural bamboo, using it as the focal element in a furniture collection for the beautiful homes of today. Each Bamboo East piece is painstakingly crafted using only the finest of nature's materials . . . laboriously hand-woven and imported from the Orient. A clear natural finish highlights the inherent beauty and rich character of the woven, split bamboo and solid maple. The result is distinctive furniture of exceptional beauty, equally at home in beachfront college or city townhouse . . . the finest bamboo furniture available, domestic or imported!

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Purchasing good wines can be a challenge

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Buying wine in a restaurant is more challenging than buying wine in a wine shop.

To begin with, those sauntering into a wine shop usually have a larger selection from which to choose than they do on the average restaurant wine list. It's not uncommon to find a dozen Chardonnays, 12 more Cabernet Sauvignons and various other selections on retail shelves. It's a rare wine list that has more than three whites, three reds and maybe, for variety, a ros.

The limited list of wines most restaurants offer makes it even more of a challenge to the wine buyer. If there's not much to choose from, the buyer must get the best possible value. And I emphasize the word value here because often the best wine is overpriced.

But first some general remarks about wine in restaurants and how it is supposed to be served. And how you are supposed to act.

Break the rules if you wish, but this is the way it's generally done:

— If you simply want a glass of the house wine, it might be a good idea to find out who makes it. Sometimes by asking you'll learn that two or more house wines are available — something you might not otherwise have been told.

— Ask the price of single glasses of house wine, and also inquire about the cost of a liter. It might be that a liter is better value than two glasses — and it also may be that a bottle of something with a cork in it is better value than a liter of the house wine.

— If you'd rather not choose a wine, or can't make up your mind, or you are adventurous, ask the waiter or waitress if he or she has a favorite to match the dishes you've ordered. If the answer comes in a convincing, self-assured manner, it may be wise to try it. If the answer comes haltingly, beware.

— If you are interested in a vintage wine, but the vintage date is not listed on the menu, ask what vintage the wine is. For example, $15 might be a good value for a 1975 Bordeaux, but terrible value for a 1977 Bordeaux.

— Whether seeking a red wine, a ros or a white, look at the entire wine list (if feasible), even if only scanning. There may be a treasure buried. One recent evening, I was looking at white wine, but I spotted a bottle of 1976 Chambolle-Musigny from the famed Burgundy producer Louis Latour sitting on a shelf near the kitchen. The wine was not listed on the wine list. I inquired about it, was told it was the last bottle in the place, and that it was $21. I ordered it and I was not disappointed.

— When the waiter brings your selection to your table and shows you the label, look at it carefully to make certain it's what you ordered. Many times over the years I have been offered wines I did not order. Only once was the wine worth taking anyway.

— If the bottle is brought to your table with the cork already pulled, reject the bottle. Who knows when the bottle was opened, or even if the wine in this particular bottle is what it's supposed to be?

— When you are poured a sample of the wine you ordered, look at it for indications of an off bottle; swirl it and sniff to see if there's anything foul; and taste to determine if it has gone sour. However, reject the wine only if you're sure it is spoiled.

Fewer wed in church

Fewer Norwegian couples are choosing to marry in church. Ten years ago, 82 percent of them did, but fresh statistics show that the figure has dwindled to 60 percent or less. In the Oslo diocese it's as low as 40 percent.

Antiques' origins, values given

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Member, Antiques Appraisers Association of America
Copley News Service

Q: This hand-painted porcelain vase is 14 inches tall and marked "D and C" over "France" on the bottom. It also is signed "M. O'Leary." What can you tell me about it?

A: Your vase was made in Limoges, France, by Delinieres and Cie early in the 20th century. It would probably sell in the $175 to $225 range.

There is no information available about O'Leary. That is not unusual; the artists who decorated porcelain were not famous.

Q: Enclosed is a sketch of the mark on my 8-inch "Dream Baby" doll. It has painted hair, stationary eyes and papier-mache body. What can you tell me about it?

A: Your doll was made in Germany by Armand Marseille in the early 20th century. According to the "Twentieth Century Doll Series," it sells for $200 to $315 depending on condition and market area.

CNS Photo

This hand-painted porcelain vase was made in Limoges, France.

Q: Why is "RS Prussia" porcelain more valuable than "RS Germany?"

A: Good question! RS Prussia was made by both Erdmann and his brother, Rheinhold. Erdmann also used the "RS Suhl" mark. Rheinhold used "RS Tillowitz" and "RS Germany." The "RS" doesn't stand for Rheinhold Schlegelmilch, it stands for their father, Rudolph.

Erdmann operated in Suhl, Germany; Rheinhold's factory was in Tillowitz, Germany (later Tulewice, Poland). Their nephew had a factory in Langwiesen.

If that doesn't confuse you; there is a lot of fake RS Prussia porcelain on the market. I would like to say that Schlegelmilch porcelain should be judged for its quality, but who am I to change the world?

Cleaning lowers lead in children

BOSTON (AP) — Keeping floors mopped and children's hands clean will substantially reduce high levels of lead in youngsters' bodies, according to a recent study.

Children pick up lead, a metal that can cause learning problems and retardation, when they crawl around their homes and then put their fingers in their mouths.

The researchers said that keeping houses free of lead is difficult unless people are shown where the concentrations are high.

"I want to be cautious about not labeling these families as being dirty," said Dr. Evan Charney, who directed the study. "That's probably not the case. It's very hard, unless you know where the lead spots are, to do the cleaning correctly."

No one knows how much lead is safe. However, more than 600,000 children in the United States may have lead levels that exceed federal standards.

In the latest study, researchers mopped families' floors twice a month and gave them cleaning instructions in an effort to cut down on lead-tainted house dust.

"It is clear," they wrote, "that lead levels in house dust can be reduced by a regular and focused dust-control effort and that the blood lead levels of children residing in those homes can be significantly lowered."

A year after the cleaners began visiting people's homes, the levels of lead in youngsters' blood had dropped 18 percent.

Charney said the findings cast doubt on the effectiveness of programs that strip lead paint off the walls and woodwork of homes where young children live.

"Those programs may not be making a major difference," he said in an interview. "They may be preventing the kids from getting a lot higher lead, but they're probably not helping the kids get much lower."

The study was conducted by doctors from Sinai Hospital in Baltimore, and it was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Two research assistants went into the homes of 14 children twice a month and mopped the floors and windowsills. They identified spots in the house where lead dust was especially thick and urged the adults to scrub them two or three times a week. They also instructed parents to wash the children's hands before meals and at bedtime.

When the study started, all the youngsters had blood levels of lead that were above 30 micrograms per deciliter, the safety level established by the Centers for Disease Control.

Their lead levels were compared with those of 35 other children whose homes were not in the cleaning program. However, flaking paint had been scraped from all the youngsters' homes, and all lead paint was stripped from parts of the houses that were within the children's reach.

After a year of regular house cleaning, the children's lead levels fell from an average of 39 to 33 micrograms. In four, they dropped below 30 micrograms. There was no sigificant change in the comparison group.

The most serious lead problems were on windowsills and on the floors near windows. Charney said he believed most of this lead dust came from paint and putty that crumbled off window casements.

Wallpaper can be cheapest or costliest wallcovering

By The Associated Press

Wallpaper isn't always paper. But when it is, it encompasses both the cheapest and most expensive of wallcoverings.

Machine-printed wallpaper is in the $5 to $15 per roll range, is available in widths ranging from 18 inches to 27 inches and is usually pre-pasted and pre-trimmed. What is called hand-screened paper can cost up to $100 per roll. Between these price ranges are many varieties of wallpaper.

Other wallcoverings which are given the "wallpaper" tag are not paper at all. Among these are all-vinyls, foils and fabrics. Since the world of wallcoverings is complex, we asked Robert C. Yeager to do some clarifying for our readers. Having recently completed the restoration of a 70-year-old house in Northern California and a book called "Painting and Wallpapering" (Ortho), Yeager seemed like the right person to ask.

"All-vinyl wall coverings," he said, "stand up to the most wear-and-tear. They are scrubbable, stain-resistant and best suited for areas of the house which tend to take on the most dirt. Kitchens, bathrooms, hallways and children's rooms are great candidates. Available with cloth and paper backing, vinyl coverings are moderately priced. One important precaution must be taken while hanging vinyl coverings — fungus-resistant adhesives are recommended to combat the mildew which can develop under this non-porous material."

What about the foils?

"These are made of aluminum or polyester films that resemble metals and may be cloth- or paper-backed. They are available in pre-pasted, standard rolls but are considered expensive and the hardest to apply. Once again, the threat of mildew requires that a fungus-resistant vinyl adhesive be used, not wheat paste. Also, it is important not to apply foil paper over previous layers of paper. And don't forget that foil can conduct electricity, so be careful around outlets, fixtures and switches."

Can anybody apply these wallcoverings?

"Yes, with certain rare exceptions. For instance, in the fabrics, which are available in widths twice the size of the typical 27-inch rolls, anyone can handle the unbacked type, but paper-backed fabrics are recommended because the paper improves the stability of open-weave designs. However, backed fabric wallcovering is difficult to apply."

Information for families available free of charge

Copley News Service

Families need to help to get by in these modern times. They can find that help here in three informative booklets on drug abuse, diet during pregnancy and caring for a new baby.

BABY BOOKLET

A new baby is a source of joy, but it can also bring lots of anxieties — especially for first-time parents who aren't sure what to do or expect. Many of those fears can be alleviated by this free 30-page booklet from the Public Affairs Committee entitled Caring for the New Baby — The First 18 Months.

New parents will find a wealth of practical, detailed advice on baby care and baby development, including: "Early Care and Feeding," "Health and Safety," "Development and Personality," and "Parents' Feelings and Expectations."

The booklet seems to answer almost every imaginable basic question parents are likely to have. How to hold the baby during breast-feeding. How to prevent colic. When to start solid foods. How to handle minor illnesses. When to immunize (a schedule is included). How to handle toilet training, thumb-sucking and teething.

"Being a good parent is the most demanding job in the world," say the authors, both pediatric specialists. At least you'll know what the job is all about with this common-sense information that guides you from caring for the helpless newborn to training the independent toddler.

Offer good through Nov. 31, 1983.

PRENATAL NUTRITION CHART

You are what you eat — and your baby will be too, so it's important to eat the right foods during pregnancy to prepare you for childbirth and to fuel your baby's growth. Put up this fold-out pamphlet, Food, Pregnancy and Health on your refrigerator door and you'll have a constant reminder of your daily food needs throughout pregnancy.

The 12-page pamphlet includes a chart which tells you how many servings of each food group you need every day and offers a number of dos and don'ts that can help you care for the life inside you. (Do drink at least six to eight glasses of liquids daily. Don't drink wine, beer or alcohol.)

Your baby's health is in your hands. Better eating during pregnancy can ensure an easier birth and a healthy baby, and could have the added benefit of giving the rest of your family more nutritious eating habits, too.

Offer good through Nov. 30, 1983.

Directions: Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask for: Food, Pregnancy and Health.

DRUG ABUSE ADVICE

Could my children be using drugs? Why would they want to? What can I do to prevent them? What kind of damage could they do to themselves? Are they using drugs already?

These are tough questions that every parent may face as drug usage increases among young people. And according to this thoughtful, in-depth 30-page handbook — Drug Abuse — the answers aren't simple.

To begin with, says the handbook, the use of drugs is not an isolated problem but has roots in today's social changes. Once you accept the fact that kids use drugs for understandable reasons, there are things you can do to make drugs less tempting to your kids — and less important in their lives.

In addition, there are guidelines to help you determine how seriously involved your kids are or could become with drugs. There are also suggestions for various ways of dealing with drug usage at any age.

Number of single mothers increases

Hearst Feature Service

In the United states today, almost eight million women are rearing their children alone, and by 1990 — just seven years away — one in two children can expect to spend a large part of life with mother only.

Single mothers, Redbook Magazine says in the November issue, "have very little help and not much money, but with a lot of love and courage, millions are holding their families together." The plight of these single mothers, says economist John Kenneth Galbriath, "is one of the most serious problems of our time."

Ripped emotionally by a failed marriage and divorce, most of them plagued by a shortage of money, these single parents must assume responsibility for the children's physical and psychological well-being. But, somehow, they cope, many of them surprisingly well.

Says Richard Wortman, a clinical psychologist at University Hospital in Cleveland: "That these women do as well as they do against incredible odds is a testament to the tenacity of the human spirit."

Lack of enough money is a major problem. Redbook cites these grim statistics: One year after divorce, a woman's standard of living has decreased 73 percent, while her husband's has increased 42 percent. Three years after divorce, only 19 percent of fathers continue to pay alimony or child support. More than half of all households headed by women live in poverty, and the percentage is increasing.

And in the past year, government-funded programs for child care, food stamps, health-care benefits and public assistance have been cut by $10,000,000.

DEAR ABBY

Understanding hubby may know too well

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for eight years. This is a second marriage for both of us. His job keeps him on the road for a week and sometimes two weeks at a time. I hold a full-time job, plus a part-time job because we're buying our own home.

The last time my husband was home he told me that he would "understand" if I had an affair or wanted to have one. Abby, he is all the man I want, and I have never thought of having an affair, so I was shocked by his statement.

Now that he's gone again, I keep thinking about what he said, and I have grown increasingly uneasy. I have an idea that he is either already involved in an affair or he's thinking about it.

Do you think he was trying to tell me something? – WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: He may have been testing the matrimonial waters. But before you head for the life rafts, have a serious talk with him. Your marriage appears to be lacking in the most vital ingredient of a healthy relationship – communication. Tell him what's on your mind and ask him to tell you what's on his. And if you feel incompetent to handle it alone, a family counselor would be very helpful to both of you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a retired widower who enjoys taking lovely single ladies to dinners, concerts, etc.

Last evening my date and I were having a very nice time, and when it came time to take the lady home, she asked me to go a certain route. Then she pointed out a certain house where her ex-husband now lives, and all the way home she ranted about how terrible he had been to her, berating him and running him down. Needless to say, it spoiled what would have been a beautiful evening for me. I could tell that she felt good telling me about it, but I felt lousy having to listen to it.

Other women have done this, too. Abby, please tell your single readers not to air their dirty laundry to their dates. We want a nice evening with pleasant company. I'm certain that many single people wonder why they are not asked out a second time, and this could be the reason. Pass it on. – UTAH WIDOWER

DEAR WIDOWER: Many women (and men) in search of a sympathetic ear wind up with a cold shoulder. To bad-mouth an ex-spouse is very poor taste.

AT WIT'S END

Family holiday reunions nearly impossible

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Some of you may possibly remember our Christmas card of 1978.

One son is sitting on the sofa in a tie and sportcoat. He is not wearing shoes. Our daughter is looking straight into the camera with her eyes closed. Another son is hanging over my shoulder with a temperature of 102. I am between them knotting my handkerchief. With the exception of my daughter, all of our eyes are focused left wondering if my husband is going to make it to the sofa before the camera clicks.

Only his nose and right hand are in the picture.

It took three weeks of planning and four hours to get that picture. Are you listening, Ansel Adams?

The older the kids get and the more independent they become, the more difficult it is to assemble the troops for a reunion.

There are a lot of mothers who take pride in knowing all there is to know about their children. I'm not one of them. I live in ignorance and I wouldn't live in any other neighborhood.

I don't want to know or even hear how one of them got into the Guinness Book of Records by driving from Encino to Los Angeles airport in 23 minutes in a car with no brake fluid and no gas, and still had five minutes to make a phone call telling a friend he left his coffee maker plugged in.

I don't want to know they borrowed the money to make the trip. Or that they traded working Christmas to be home because that's when the rest could make it.

I remember watching a television show a few years ago where Ed Asner and his family came home for Christmas. They were great. They huddled around the fire together and were actually all in the same room at the same time, talking to one another and laughing.

Ours roll out of bed in different time zones and stagger around like newborn field mice. One eats weird. One doesn't eat at all. One hangs onto the phone like a pacifier. One spends the entire time behind the bathroom door. One puts a hand on everything in the house individually and asks, "Do you want this?" At mealtime, it's like the debates at Hyde Park with chairs.

"Do you want to have a family picture on our Christmas card this year?" asked my husband.

"How do we get them here?" I asked.

"We could tell them we're reading the will."

It might work.

Internships key to breaking into job market

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q - I am a marketing student and read your column about col-lege. Can you help me get started in advertising? The competition is fierce in on-campus recruiting. I'm graduating in December and I'm desperate.

A — Use the time you have left to get an internship, even one for a month. Go to a variety of advertising companies, corporate departments or government agencies and offer your services as an unpaid intern.

Don't complain if you are asked to do menial jobs. Take anything and learn to connect yourself to someone you like and trust. Show your willingness to come through in a cheerful way and I bet you'll have a jump on a job soon.

Q - I am a 45-year-old woman, with children in school, and no real career. I've been a clerk off and on but that is boring. I'd like to get interested in skin care, hair styl-ing or flower arranging. How do I get started?

A — You have to decide whether you want to perform these services (cut hair, apply makeup, or arrange flowers) or sell or manage.

Ask where you buy cosmetics or have your hair cut if you can help out, on any level, at any time (even fill in for sick employees or during the next big holiday). This may help you test the waters and get some experience in the meantime. Then you may have to go to school or at least through a training program.

Until you demonstrate your skills, be willing to start as a clerk and look for opportunity to expand once you're in a job. Or sign up with an employment agency that specializes in temporary positions.

Q — I have taught myself reupholstery by reading books and practicing on junk furniture over the past 5 years. I'm ready now to work part time. How do I acquire sample fabric books to sell material? How much should I charge for materials and labor?

A — Look at your behavior patterns. You have learned a skill solo — that is, without connecting yourself to any master or other upholsterers. So while you may be more than competent as an upholsterer, I'm afraid you'd have a poor chance in business without more commercial skills.

Dr. Scheele answers letters from readers in her column. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

GO CRAZY

Text by Diane Booth

Tired of putting a pair of bedroom slippers under the tree for Sis every Christmas or giving Uncle Harry his annual tie?

Try a sculpted life-size plaster portrait, mink teddy bear, solid chocolate Rolls-Royce, French wine thermometer, green diamonds, a water garden, silk longjohns, cedar dog bed, oil well music box, buffalo skull, a box of Texas sized T-bone steaks or a cave elevator.

Holiday gift buyers can vary their shopping routine by taking an armchair trip through a stack of catalogs.

Perhaps the biggest advantage of catalog shopping is the convenience of browsing through an assortment of gift possibilities in the comfort of one's home.

WHATEVER A SHOPPER'S taste or pocketbook, catalogs provide unique gift ideas from the tasty and decadent to the unusual, extraordinary and bizarre.

The affluent gift giver may choose from some of the more imaginative presents.

Neiman Marcus offers a pair of matched quarter horses for $10,000 and the Sakowitz catalog offers a monogram machine for those who want personalized clothing and accessories for $12,185.

For $750,000, Sakowitz offers a one-month cruise through the Mediterranean or the Caribbean for a loved one and 70 guests on the Sea Cloud, built in 1931 for E. F. Hutton and Marjorie Merriweather Post. The ship, 316-feet tall with 30 sails, is the largest passenger-carrying tall ship in the world.

A UNIQUE, BUT less expensive gift offered through Sakowitz is to name a star after a friend or family member. For $35, a star listed in the International Star registry will be permanently identified with the name of your choice and registered in a Swiss vault and the Library of Congress. The star's namesake will receive an official certificate of record and a sky chart pinpointing the star's location.

A seafarer's gift — a yacht sculpted in lucite modeled after the 120-meter America Cup racer is priced at $745. The limited edition piece sold by Midland's Mole Hole catalog, stands 23 inches tall and is signed and numbered by the artist.

THERE IS A BAG FULL of catalogs for the hunter on your gift list featuring the appropriate garb and gear, including boomerangs, samurai swords and crossbows, but The Prairie Edge catalog of art and artifacts contains implements used for combat and hunting by the Plains Indians.

The authentic crafts made in the Black Hills of South Dakota, includes a hunt record elk robe, $800; a ceremonial pipe-axe, $260; a coyote fang necklace, $38 and a buffalo honoring collection, $2,030.

For the old fashioned at heart, The Vermont Country Store has a book full of sensible treasures such as an English Hops pillow. The bouquet from the hops-filled pillow is said to have sleep inducing properties.

OTHER ITEMS in the catalog which might make good stocking stuffers include wool and leather slipper socks, a hand crank card shuffler and bag balm, an antiseptic healing balm for cows' udders. The salve is also used for chapped hands.

Mountain Laurel has a collection of infants and children's clothing, toys and quilts hand-sewn in the Kentucky mountains. A quilted poke bonnet designed to protect a baby's delicate skin from the sun costs $30.

If the person on your list favors futuristic gifts, Armatron may be the perfect choice. This working industrial robot arm is designed to function like those used in ultra modern factories and laboratories.

THE BATTERY-POWERED device shown in The Sharper Image Catalog can play chess and serve hors d'oeuvres. It costs $49.

For those who live dangerously, The Sharper Image offers a bullet-resistant raincoat. The coat, which reportedly repels more than the rain and cold, consists of 11 layers which are designed to stop handgun threats up to a .38 caliber special. The catalog maintains protection exceeds N.Y.C. police requirements for street officers.

THERE ARE LOTS OF creative gifts for children including an old-fashioned wicker doll's pram for $110 by Horchow and a cast iron 1923 vintage John Deere model D tractor by The Vermont Country Store. The 6-inch long scale model toy costs $12.95.

Always popular, the teddy bear is seen in several catalogs in all shapes, sizes, colors and fabrics. Spiegel's catalog shows a cuddly bear in natural and dyed ranch mink. The nine-inch tall charmer costs $75.

For children of all ages, Horchow advertises a small solid brass steam engine that runs. Made in Germany, it runs on a bit of dry fuel. This engine, which comes with fuel and lubricating oil, can chug its way into a any "child's" heart for $495.

IF FRIENDS AND FAMILY like the personal touch, Distinctive Designs has a catalog full of everything from lollipops to umbrellas which can be personalized with monograms or names.

For those who celebrate Hanukkah, Hamakor Judaica, Inc. publishes a catalog of gift ideas and items to use in celebrating the holidays.

Selections include a Shofar, an authentic ram's horn, $45; a wide assortment of menorahs or candelabras and for entertainment, Hebrew Scrabble, $14.95; and a computerized game called Jewish I.Q. Baseball, which rewards players with singles, doubles and homers for correct answers to questions about the bible, Jewish history and Israel.

ASIDE FROM CATALOGS that feature the traditional pears, apples, citrus fruits, nuts, fruitcakes, jellies, jams, dried fruits and cheeses, there are catalogs exclusively devoted to popcorn, seafood, chocolate and beef. Unusual food items include old fashioned penny candy from The Vermont Store, diabetic chocolates from Teuscher's, sauces from Fauchon, the famous Paris gourmet shop are sold through Horchow, Fortnum and Mason's Christmas Pudding from Horchow.

A CHEESECAKE, Baked Alaska, shaped like the 49th state, is sold by Harry and David's catalog along with other culinary delights such as smoked pheasant and oysters, a Yugoslav confection called Medjumurska, Baklava and Apple Pandowdy.

If none of these catalogs perk your interest there are hundreds of catalogs devoted to everything from grandfather clocks, stamps, teddy bears, posters, king-size clothing, home video cassettes, Zuni Indian jewelry and Corvette accessories.

New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art catalog features over 1,000 gifts such as crystal, scarves, sculpture and books. The Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. sells a catalog that offers reproductions, porcelains, needlework, toys and even gift wrap.

A GIFT THAT CAN be enjoyed by many is a donation to Carlsbad Caverns National Park. According to park officials, donations can be money or any of the items listed in the catalog.

The park catalog is requesting lantern fuel, 25 gallons of fuel costs $4 a gallon; fire extinguishers, $10 each; water fountains suitable for the handicapped, $1,500 each; a freeze drying unit to prepare animal specimens for exhibits, $2,500; an additional seasonal ranger, $5,000 and refurbishing the interiors of four cave elevators for a total of $8,000.

Each gift will be acknowledged with a letter of appreciation and gifts of $100 or more will be recognized with a color print of the cavern. All donations are tax deductible.

Constance Coleman has made a career of painting animals on commission from their owners.

Artist paints pets' portraits

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. Constance Coleman once spent an entire day looking for a cat.

You would think it would have been easier to visit a pet shop or the local animal shelter.

Coleman, however, was searching a house because she was there to research a portrait of the resident cat. "Out of Nowhere, at suppertime, he finally surfaced," she recalled.

For seven years now, Coleman has made a career of painting animals on commission from their owners. During that time, she said, she has executed more than 85 renditions for clients, who pay $975 and up to have their pets enshrined in oils.

Coleman is from Cincinnati and does her artistry there. But from time to time during the year she makes the rounds of Palm Beach, Dallas and other humble hamlets to meet with pet owners. Recently, she was in Beverly Hills, and took time out to discuss her specialized art.

"First of all, I usually spend half a day following the animal around with a camera, using at least three color rolls. I'm not looking for anything particular, just, capturing the pet being himself.

"Some of them are very shy about a flash. I remember one Siberian husky who would run under the bed and into the closets. We finally had to go outside tok get anything.

"I also make rough pencil sketches on a tablet, and I make notes. There are some details a camera doesn't pick up — the exact shading of fur, the true expression of the eyes."

The groundwork doesn't end there.

"I interview the owner to try and find out how he or she sees the animal, and how the personality is interpreted. The owner might start talking about how the dog likes to sleep on the bed, or maybe what a sweet old lady the pet is.

"I've had cases where the owner had the whole scene worked out in her mind in advance, such as having the dog on the bed. Well, it's entirely possible the animal has been trained all along to stay off the bed. Now he is told to get on. There have been times where two of us wind up physically pushing a dog onto a bed."

Coleman always takes up with the client the matter of the setting — whether it should be a corner of the living room, or on the bed, or out in the yard.

The advance work completed, Coleman returns to her Cincinnati studio to mate oil and canvas.

"My method is to be working on several at a time," she said. "Otherwise I feel I might get stale if I stayed with just one. As far as hours are concerned, it probably averages a week of work for each animal."

Sometimes the client wants several included, and for this the fee is $500 for each additional.

From the time Coleman was in the first grade, at Columbia University's Lincoln School, she was found to have an artistic bent. While attending Berkeley (Calif.) High School, she illustrated her first book.

"At the start I thought I wanted to do portraiture," she said. "While I was in my 20s and working at a gift shop in Carmel, however, I came up with the idea of doing people as their dogs.

"I would have your dog doing whatever you wanted. If you were a golf player, the dog would be playing golf. If you wore red neckties, the dog would wear a red necktie."

Although exhibitions were to come eventually — at galleries both in this country and overseas — Coleman also did her share of illustrations for playing cards and cocktail napkins.

Probably her most famous rendition of that period, and one still reproduced, is "Barhounds," showing a group of business-suited canines hanging out at a bar.

In addition. Coleman re-created (for wallpaper) distinguished works of art, substituting dogs. Mona Lisa, for instance, was a basset hound.

Coleman also did greeting cards, eventually reared two sons and a daughter.

Hobbyists 'talk' by computer

By GREG GROSS
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Every night, very late, I go up to the spare bedroom over the garage. Closing the door between my tapes of Pat Metheny and my sleeping wife, I sit at my desk and talk to strangers.

I talk to other Californians, and to Kansans, New Yorkers, Texans, Canadians. We talk about anything, or almost nothing. The person chatting with me may be five miles away, or 15,000 miles. I won't know where he is, nor who he is, until he tells me.

We never see each other.

Some would say my hobby is computers, since a Xerox 820 is the instrument of these conversations. But for me, the medium is not the message. The conversation is what counts.

We'd probably snarl if some talkative stranger called on the phone at 1:15 in the morning. But when the call comes from someone on a computer, it's a different story. We type our messages back and forth to each other, each message appearing on the other's video screen as we hunt and peck.

"Tactile CB," as one computerist calls it.

OUR COMPUTERS are joined through ordinary telephone lines, connected by a small electronic box called a modem. But the key is a database, a sort of electronic library, post office and "party line." They have names like CompuServe, Delphi and The Source. Through them, you can call anyone using the same database at a given moment, almost anywhere in the world, without a long-distance charge.

This has let me meet some fascinating people, folks I might never have met and probably will never see.

There is Rick, a rock 'n' roll guitarist in Bangor, Maine, who teaches computer programming when he isn't teaching music, and tries to make computers usable to quadriplegics who cannot use their hands.

There is Chuck in Denver, who went to Yale to take up the cause of civil liberties, but ended up taking a wife, a mortgage and a life in real estate law. And there's Eric, a onetime East Coast roadie for the British rock group The Who, who is about to emerge from Syracuse University with a degree in electrical engineering and the computer he built himself.

WHEN ARTHUR isn't selling Xerox products to people in Wilmington, Del., he's using a computer of his own to keep track of the weddings he photographs on weekends.

Yves, a French citizen in New York City, is assigned to search American databases for information demanded by French companies, find what they're after and ship the knowledge electronically to Paris.

What do the French companies want? "Everything you can think of," he told me, "from 'Where's a good restaurant in NYC?' to 'Where can we get a lion for a TV commercial?'"

There's Diane in San Francisco, who had a brief flirtation with celebrity status as a part of the U.S-Mexico prisoner exchange a few years back.

"I tried to write a book about it," she told me. "I had a publisher. But when I went to rewrite it, I couldn't. Didn't want to live through it all again."

AND THERE'S Cathy, a programmer somewhere south of Chicago who likes the Beatles and Journey and just wants to talk to someone.

Of all the people I've "met," maybe my all-time favorite will be Mike in West Danville, Vt. Mike spends most of his computer time poring over airline schedules, thinking about all the places he wants to go in the world and trying to find the flights that will take him there.

Most of them are flights of fancy, for Mike is 12 years old.

He has a colleague in Cambridge, Ont., Canada. Scott, also 12. Using a $3,000 IBM PC to play video games. "Having a Dad who's the president of his own computer company does have its advantages," he told me.

When not playing on his PC, he's fending off his two sisters from the machine. "One is eight, the other is 14 and they're both pests!" he wrote.

"Being the only boy sandwiched between two girls can be tough," I answered back. "But it beats being alone. As an only child, I oughta know."

MY SCREEN stayed blank for a few moments, then came Scott's answer:

Sometimes the topics are weighty — Beirut, Grenada, the economy. Eventually, though, we turn to more urgent matters.

"Where are the best beaches in San Diego?"

We ask a lot of questions of each other, trying to get a feel for a person we can't see. And we field each other's technical problems.

But mostly, we just talk to each other.

"I work nights in a hospital, then come home and play with this thing," Betty told me one night from the California city of Modesto. "It's great to know there's someone out there you can talk with."

Advice given on local security

How can citizens help local police protect neighborhoods?

That is a question many homeowners are asking themselves today as their homes and those of their neighbors are broken into and valuable possessions stolen. They also realize that their municipal police staffs, stretched thin by tight operating budgets, must focus available manpower on high-priority, major crime incidents.

Pinkertons, the private security and investigation firm, offers the following suggestions:

— Prepare homes and grounds for optimum security by installing outdoor lighting, sturdy door and window locks, electric timers and interior alarm systems, if possible, and by trimming hedges and shrubs to eliminate cover and easy access for intruders.

— Organize a neighborhood watch program. Ask a local police department official to conduct a meeting with residents to review basic security and monitoring methods. When residents go on vacation or weekend trips they should ask their neighbors to periodically check on the status of their homes. Residents should also be alert to note the identity of unfamiliar vehicles and drivers.

— Conduct scheduled civilian patrols. Residents can form two-man patrol units on a rotating basis which will check on vacant homes, observe any unusual or suspicious activities and report their observations to the local police.

— Retain a private security patrol. For a surprisingly low cost per homeowner private security firms will maintain a walking or vehicular patrol around-the-clock or during peak crime periods. They will also supply warning decals for doors and windows as an added deterrent. Records indicate that neighborhoods which conduct patrols, especially private security, experience significantly lower burglary rates.

Sweetener lowers blood pressure in animal tests

BOSTON (AP) — The new sugar substitute called NutraSweet, now being used in some diet soda, will lower high blood pressure in lab animals, scientists reported, as the sweetener's maker denied suggestions that it might brighten human moods.

Dr. Richard J. Wurtman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said it's still not clear whether the sweetener lowers blood pressure in people. But if it does, he said, it might someday be recommended as a "medical food."

However, an official of G.D. Searle & Co., which makes NutraSweet, criticized the way the study was conducted and said he thinks its conclusions cannot be applied to people.

The sweetener, known generically as aspartame, is used in a variety of low-calorie foods, including powdered ice tea and milk shakes.

The researchers injected high doses of it into rats that inherit high blood pressure, a condition doctors call hypertension. It lowered their blood pressure by about 15 percent.

"It was the kind of fall you might get if you gave somebody with human hypertension a mild antihypertensive agent, like a diuretic," Wurtman said in an interview.

He speculated that aspartame might also influence mood, appetite and sleep.

However, Max Downham, vice president of planning at Searle, said, "We feel that Dr. Wurtman is wrong on this. There is no question in our minds about the safety of aspartame."

Wurtman conducted the study with Dr. Timothy J. Maher of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy. It was published in a letter in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Wurtman said that aspartame probably would not have any effect on those with normal blood pressure, and people should not worry about using it.

Sweetener okayed for diabetics

AUSTIN — Daniel W. Foster, M.D., president of the Texas Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association, said recently that "moderate amounts of carbonated soft drinks and foods that contain the non-caloric sweetener aspartame can be included in the meal plans of all persons who have diabetes."

Dr. Foster stated the voluntary health agency's position that "while aspartame has not been tested extensively in people with diabetes, medical evidence indicates that aspartame is acceptable as a sugar substitute and can be included in a diabetic meal plan provided it is not used in excessive amounts." Dr. Foster noted that because the low-calorie sweetener is a protein it does not require insulin to be metabolized and can be used by children and adults with this chronic disease.

Aspartame contains four calories per gram and is nearly 200 times sweeter than sugar. Because of its intense sweetening power only a very small amount is needed. This makes its caloric intake virtually insignificant for both insulin-depenent and non-insulin-dependent diabetics.

The American Diabetes Association provides information and materials on nutrition, exercise and management of diabetes. The month of November has been declared by Congress as "Diabetes Month" to call attention to the seriousness of diabetes, the third leading cause of death by disease. Classes and public programs will be sponsored by local chapters of the Association throughout Texas.

Yorks of Maine picture postcard scenic

By RIVIAN TAYLOR
Copley News Service

YORK, Maine — Up and down U.S. Highway 1, coastal Maine draws visitors with a sparkling string of picturesque little communities that offer something for virtually everybody — from beach-goers to lobster lovers, from history buffs to sailors of every variety. Sailing is big here, and you can do it for an hour, a day or even a week on an authentic windjammer of yesteryear.

Some of the better-known towns, such as Bar Harbor and Catden, offer picture-postcard scenes, combining the beauty of mountains and the sea. Others, such as Bath, allow visitors to relive the heydays of New England shipbuilding by carefully preserving 300 years of Maine's nautical history.

For the most part, it's all at a leisurely pace — and as long as you stay on U.S. 1, you had better not be in a hurry. It is slow going on this two-lane road that slices right through many of the coastal towns and is often the only road to take. Traffic from both locals and tourists can be frustrating at times. When making a coastal trek, savvy locals suggest, take Interstate 95 in one direction.

Having had my fill of U.S. 1, I particularly enjoyed York, one of several charming communities in the state and one that is not bisected by this road, which runs west of town. Originally named Agamenticus, it was chartered as a city — the first in America — in 1641 when it was renamed Gorgeanna. It got its present name 11 years later.

York is my recommendation for a good spot from which to start a coastal tour of this corner of Maine that's very popular in summer but can best be enjoyed in fall and spring. Come winter, of course, downhill and cross-country skiers flock to the Pine Tree State's several fine ski areas.

York, at the southern tip of Maine, actually comprises three communities, four if you want to be picky — York Village, York Harbor, York Beach and, for the purists, Cape Neddick. Thanks to local pride and still-smoldering antagonisms, each has its own post office, leaving the city of York (population about 9,000) with four ZIP Codes.

But, absurdity aside, that's a major ingredient of York's charm. Here you'll find a healthy diversity that makes you feel you're not necessarily a tourist.

To be sure, if it is tourism you want, there's plenty of that in York Beach. Along Long Sands Beach you'll find modest cottages, guest houses and surf-side motels. The beautiful sandy beach extends for more than a mile to what is the only crass part of the York — a commercial area complete with such tourist trappings as souvenir seashells, T-shirts and the like. But as popular holiday areas go, it's not as tacky as others, and a lot of visitors to Maine actually do want to return home with live lobsters.

As the other extreme, York Harbor, apparently once a snob enclave, still reeks of tradition and privilege. From the exclusive York Harbor Reading Room, established in 1897 and featuring an elevated view of a pretty rocky beach, to the manicured lawns of "summer" or "shingle-style" cottages, which are actually enormous, rambling, three-story shingled mansions, this community exudes a moneyed ambience. It also sports an attractive harbor, old inns and antique shops.

And then there's York Village — the hub of the three Yorks. It has the feel of a year-round city while offering a heritage of early American history. Leaving U.S. 1, you travel down a tree-lined road past handsome homes and gardens before encountering Colonial New England. The Village Grenn features Town Hall, a 1734 building remodeled in 1811, where the town government is still conducted. Also on the green is the First Parish Church, first built in 1747 and remodeled in 1882 and which has been a center of activity for the town for two centuries.

Nearby are the Old Burying Ground and the Old Gaol dating back to 1719, the oldest public building still standing from Colonial days.

More than 200 years of history live on today in Maine. The Maine coast is a dreamland for sailors of every skill and the Pine Tree State has carefully preserved reminders of its 300 years of nautical achievement.

All told, eight historic buildings are open to the public, and several of them have costumed guides to show what life was like in 18th and 19th century York. Nearly every street boasts 200-year-old homes, many of them still occupied by descendants of the original builders.

For some, Sherlock Holmes is a fictional character, his adventures the figment of the fertile imagination of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, his character personified by the film figure of Basil Rathbone.

But for others, Holmes is as real as Queen Victoria herself and his supporters have made a complete life for him.

David L. Hammer is one such believer, and his admiration and faith has led to the creation of this lavishly illustrated extraordinary guide, "The Game Is Afoot."

For Sherlockians, this is a welcome guide to the locations of Holmes' journeys and addresses. Where did Holmes really live in London, considering that the site of 221B is a mortgage lending institute? And where was the Grimpen Mire, where one false step meant "death to man or beast?" Did it truly exist and was it anywhere near a house as magnificently foreboding as Baskerville Hall?

Using the studies of fellow Sherlockians and scouring the English countryside, Hammer has produced a unique kind of guide for any traveler to England.

For the Sherlockian, this is a must. They can wander the isle checking off locations of their favorite stories, trusting that perhaps Sir Arthur did indeed have this place or that in mind when he wrote of a house or square.

For the average tourist, Hammer's guide is a chance to get away from the usual tourist spots.

Waterfront scenes such as this one of a pier in Halifax, Nova Scotia, are common throughout Canada's Maritime Provinces.

Nova Scotia: Treasure in the rough

By JACK BIESTERFELD
Copley News Service

At first, the land looks barren and foreboding. Waves crash upon rocky shoreline, kicking salty spray high into the air. The sparse vegetation is whipped into strange shapes by the constant blustery ocean winds.

But Cape Breton, clutching to the eastern end of Nova Scotia, is a place of beauty and wonder. There are quiet inland lakes and sandy beaches, forests carpeted with pine needles, dramatic cliffs and tumbling waterfalls.

The cape also has a rich historical heritage from waves of English, French and Scottish settlers who emigrated to the land over the last 450 years.

Nature has been preserved in the Cape Breton Highlands National Park, and by following the Cabot Trail through the wilderness, visitors can sample the many delights of this Canadian treasure.

From its lofty perch, the road swoops down into the sheltered inlet of Ingonish Harbour. Here in this tiny resort town is the Keltic Lodge, a legend in its own time. Its bleached white clapboard walls and bright, red-sheathed roofs stand out in sharp contrast to the deep green forests surrounding it.

The resort, one of the few remaining of the grand old hotels, is perched on a peninsula jutting out into the sea. Don't be surprised to hear the cheerful, yet foreign, sound of a bagpipe dirge wafting in on the ocean breeze. A lone piper often greets visitors with a Gaelic welcome, a throwback to the region's Scottish heritage.

From the lodge, take the Middle Head Trail out to the end of the peninsula. It winds through spruce forests, up and down hills and along the jagged rocks of the finger of land. At one point, walkers stand high above a clearing, rimmed on both sides by jagged rocks and granite cliffs. The sea beats mercilessly against the rocks, working itself into a foamy frenzy, trying to cut off the spit of terra firma from the mainland.

Further along, the trail comes out to the naked end of the peninsula. The wind has blown away nearly all the trees, and those that remain are nothing but gnarled dwarfs. The jagged rocks jut bravely out into the sea, fighting back the waves. Overhead, sea gulls and terns swoop and swirl in the breeze, looking for tasty morsels.

Back on the mainland again, brave swimmers can take a dip in the chilly Atlantic at Ingonish Beach, while walkers can stroll along the rock-strewn shore looking for shells.

Continue on the Cabot Trail. A side road leads past Warren Lake and up to Mary Ann Falls and Branch Pond. Camping, hiking, picnicking and swimming facilities can be found along here.

The main highway skirts the ocean again and occasional turnouts allow motorists to stop and admire the view. At Green Cove, take a short cycle trail to see how wind and waves have shaped the geology of the coast and how flora and fauna have adapted to its harsh environment.

More hiking trails near the western entrance to Cape Breton Highlands National Park explore Acadian life, the Cheticamp River and the Gulf of St. Lawrence coastline. The Cabot Trail then leaves the park, forcing travelers out of their wilderness Eden and back into the realities of civilization.

Invasion sparks tourists' concerns

By JAMES T. YENCKEL
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada suddenly thrust the tiny island into the headlines, worried Americans immediately started phoning the State Department asking, "Is it safe to go on my vacation in the Caribbean?"

And from the outset, the official answer was that there was nothing to worry about. "We've been assuring them," says consular affairs spokesman John Caulfield, "that if they are going elsewhere than Grenada or Cuba, there are no conditions that would affect their trip."

Travel agencies and tour operators also have been getting concerned calls, but report very few cancellations. "People just like to be convinced," says Susan Burke of Windjammer Barefoot Cruises of Miami, one of whose ships, the Yankee Clipper, cruises the Grenadine islands, near Grenada, every week. A few passengers have rebooked on ships going to more distant ports of call, and less than a handful have canceled outright. The passage of the Clipper, which does not touch at a Grenada port, has not been altered.

"It hasn't really affected business very much," says Burke. "But we do get calls constantly."

Meanwhile, Caribbean travel officials-who similarly have no doubts about safe travel to their region-hurriedly began to assess the impact of the events in Grenada on the crucial tourism industry.

Overall, their initial conclusion, based in part on the apparent absence of any tide of cancellations, is that tourism in the Caribbean will not be significantly affected. They are hoping that the traveling public is aware of the region's geography and knows that large sea distances separate most other islands from Grenada.

A second big factor is that this is a traditional low season in travel to the Caribbean. The winter high season does not begin until mid-December.

"To date, it (the invasion) has not had any significant impact. It shouldn't have any repercussions," says A.R. Cools-Lartigue, the director of the East Caribbean Tourist Association in New York, which represents several Caribbean island nations, among them three that joined in the invasion. "We sincerely hope by the season that everything will be cleared up. Everything is confined to Grenada. The other islands are as peaceful and quiet as they have always been."

One nation that has expressed concern about its tourism, however, is the island of Barbados, only about 150 miles from Grenada. "Oh yes, that's all they've been talking about," says Rene Allen Mack, a New York-based spokesman for the island's travel industry. Last year the island drew 92,000 U.S. tourists and was anticipating a more than 65 percent increase in that number this year.

Before the U.S. press could reach Grenada in the first days of the fighting, all of the news was datelined from Barbados, the closest place to Grenada reporters could reach and file their reports. "A lot of people are going to associate Bridgetown (the Barbados capital) with Grenada," says Mack. "It's doing a lot of damage."

In the first couple of days of the U.S. landing, some hotels began receiving cancellations, he says, but that rapidly tapered off. Tourism officials are considering a promotional campaign once the situation in Grenada is settled.

Michael Powell, the minister of tourism for the tiny new nation of St. Kitts-Nevis, hundreds of miles north of Grenada, told a New York television audience the Caribbean may initially feel some impact on its tourist business. But in the long run, he says, the invasion was a favorable event that is going to remove a cause of turmoil from the region.

And the French islands of the Caribbean, including Guadeloupe and Martinique, are anticipating "the best season ever," says spokesman Joseph Petrocik, who represents the French West Indies Tourist Board in New York. That is because the dollar remains strong against the French franc.

"We don't feel this (the invasion) is going to have any effect on the French islands," says Petrocik, "just as long as the American public is aware that what is happening is not happening in our back yard. One problem is that people don't know the large distances in the Caribbean."

The prospects even look bright for Grenada's tourist business, says William Craft, who is assigned to the State Department's Grenada Task Force.

Smaller cruise ships enjoyable

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BEAUFORT, South Carolina — You get an appreciation for the smaller things of life on board the Newport Clipper. Things like working a 1,000-piece jigsaw puzzle; getting excited over seeing a family of wild pigs — piglets clinging tenaciously to the backs of their mothers — swimming frantically out of the way of your ship; watching a movie like "The Four Seasons," even though you have already seen it three times; waving to a seemingly endless procession of million dollar yachts as they make their way down the Intracostal Waterway to winter in Palm Beach.

There are no Broadway extravaganzas on this cruise ship, no swimming pool, not much of a sun deck, no lavish 10-course meals, no casino, not even a lifeboat drill. Small-ship cruising is done on an appropriately miniaturized scale.

The Newport Clipper is the newest of the minicruise ships, a 207-foot midget that would fit in the lifeboat of the QE2. At $8.5 million it is also the most expensive and luxurious of the small cruise ships.

IN THE PAST few years there has been an explosion in the popularity of such ships. More than a dozen of the little cruisers are now taking passengers around the lakes, inland waterways and oceans of the Northern Hemisphere, catering mostly to people who are tired of "Love Boat" excursions.

The most obvious advantage of the small ships is that they can go where ships like the giant "Norway" could never hope to tread. They sail on the Great Lakes, on rivers like the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi, through the San Juan Islands and along the Chesapeake Bay. The Newport Clipper, for example, has only a seven-foot draft, so it can slip into nearly any waterway with no worry of scraping its bottom. And, moving along at a stately 10 miles per hour, the ship allows plenty of time for sightseeing along the way.

The emphasis on most small ships — and the Newport Clipper, with 100 passengers and a crew of 26 is typical — is on relaxation. Bridge, reading the newest bestseller, Scrabble, and putting together jigsaw puzzles (our group constructed three 1,000-piece puzzles on a recent cruise), take up most of the sailing time, accompanied by casual glances at the shoreline to see egrets and pelicans and the occasional family of wild pigs.

There are no masquerade parties, no singles get-togethers, no ping pong tournaments — none of the organized nonsense (one man's opinion) that most major cruise lines seem obliged to offer their passengers. You must generate your own excitement and activity on the Newport Clipper.

STATEROOMS ON THE ship are small. Each room has a shower, sink and toilet, excellent closet space, and room under each bed for stowing suitcases. The rooms are so small that it is more convenient if one of the parties in a room steps into the hall while the other dresses for dinner. But, as the ads always say, you don't spend much non-sleeping time in the room anyway, so size is relatively unimportant.

When the ship was in port most of the passengers eagerly participated in the shore excursions offered. Cruise passengers tired of the crowds in St. Thomas can, instead, walk the nearly deserted streets of Beaufort. The shopping might not be as spectacular, but the welcome is much warmer.

Tours of the old homes of Savannah, the lush landscapes of St. Simons Island, the fine historic district of Beaufort, and the stunning mansions of Charleston, were all well-attended by passengers. Since the average passenger was considerably older than those on a typical one-week Caribbean cruise, interests ran more to history than to nightclubs and rum swizzles.

Unlike large cruise ships, there was much less emphasis on food on the Newport Clipper. There were but two choices for dinner, rather than the seven or eight on most cruise ships, and lunch usually was little more than a bowl of soup and a sandwich. No midnight buffet here, but bowls with fruit, raisins and granola provided a necessary emergency snack in the middle of the night. Since the ship was firmly anchored each night at one destination or another, those tired of the shipboard food could always try a restaurant ashore.

The staff on the Newport Clipper lacks the flair of the Italians on the Home Line or the sophistication of the British waiters on the QE2, but they make up for their lack of experience (the Clipper has only been cruising for a month) with extraordinary Tom Sawyer enthusiasm. Most of the young (the average age is 24) crew were recruited from around St. Louis, the homebase of the Clipper Cruise Line.

The youngsters, most of whom had never even seen a real cruise ship, are multitalented. When the young waitresses finish serving breakfast, they clean the cabins. It is not unusual to see the captain of the Newport Clipper, Roy Keith, washing the windows of the vessel when it is tied up in port.

That, perhaps, is the true charm of sailing on the Newport Clipper and the other small U.S. cruise ships. There is a genuine informality, a natural friendliness that makes it easy to get to know both passengers and crew without the formal introductions and phoniness experienced on so many cruises. Yes, there is a captain's cocktail party, but no photographer to record that historic moment when you shake the captain's hand. But who cares? Captain Keith happily posed for pictures at any time, and we didn't have to choke down any second-rate champagne like one must do at most captain's parties — there was an open bar.

Cruising on a ship like the Newport Clipper is certainly not for everyone. If you are after action, big shows, first-run movies and lavish meals, you should forego the small ships. However, if you are interested in unique ports, an informal atmosphere, and the opportunity to cruise waters that have seen few ships, a small ship cruise may well fit your needs.

Florida golf haven for duffers, pros alike

By MICHAEL CARLTON
By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

PONTE VERDA BEACH, Florida — As the duffer stumbled down to the lake's edge, about to remove his golf shoes and socks, roll up his pants, and wade into the lake after an errant ball — as he had done so many times on his home course in Pennsylvania — his caddy shrieked. "I wouldn't do that, boss. Alligators." Such are the joys of Florida golf.

While alligators aren't really much of a physical hazard (although you do see the little rascals in the water hazards of most courses), they do play at the mind, especially when you are standing on the 17th tee at the Tournament Players Club (TPC) at Sawgrass, one of Florida's most magnificent resort complexes. The 17th, you see, is all carry, all 121 yards of it. The island green is surrounded by water (and alligators), joined to the fairway by a thin umbilical cord of grass and gravel. Miss the green and we're talkin' splash city, Bubba.

IF ALL THAT water and all those alligators aren't enough to distract you during a round of golf in Florida, malevolent golf course architects have added enough sand to pack the Sahara, enough stands of pampas grass to fill Argentina's ranches, enough Spanish moss to choke the Armada. Cutting through vast forests of cypress and live oak, across wind-whipped seaside dunes, up and down rolling meadows, golf architects have hacked more than 600 courses out of Florida's countryside.

So popular is golf in Florida that eight PGA tournaments — Walt Disney World Classic, Pensacola Open, J.C. Penny Mixed Team Classic, Chrysler Team Invitational, Honda Classic, Doral Eastern Open, Bay Hill Classic and Tournament Players Championship — are held in the state and six LPGA events — J.C. Penney Mixed Classic, Mazda Classic of Deer Creek, Elizabeth Arden Classic, Bent Tree Classic, Florida Lady Citrus and S&H Classic — are also played here.

WITH APOLOGIES TO California, Florida can rightfully be called America's golf haven, a place for duffers and professionals alike, a state where a high-handicapper can play the same course as the professional tour's leading money winner and — for a moment at least — imagine he is a scratch player putting for the $100,000 first prize.

That, perhaps, is the biggest lure of Florida golf. Most of the state's finest courses are open to tourists — and you don't even need a letter of recommendation from your home pro.

The TPC course, destined to become one of the finest golf courses in America, can be played by anyone staying at the adjoining Sawgrass resort. Although only a third of the tee times at the TPC are reserved for Sawgrass guests (the others are reserved for touring pros and members), I had no difficulty in getting a starting time on a recent visit.

PLAYING AT THE TPC isn't exactly cheap ($35 greens fee and a $16 fee for a shared golf cart), but where else can you literally walk in the footsteps of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, Jerry Pate (who dove into the lake — forget the alligators — after winning the 1982 TPC here) and Tom Watson?

It is that feeling of playing where the great professionals play — a little like playing center field at Yankee Stadium, or catching a pass in the Rose Bowl — that makes so many of Florida's courses special. Try getting a tee time at Marion, Firestone, Oakmont or many of America's other famous courses, and you'll find it's easier to get a private audience with the pope. But in Florida, it's a breeze.

A recent week of playing four Florida resort courses — a week of hacking divots the size of basketballs from the defenseless fairways and of beaning unsuspecting alligators by the dozens — may not have given me a lot of confidence in my golf game, but it surely gave me a week of fun.

The week started at Sawgrass, home of the TPC. Even if you don't play the TPC (and only the brave of heart and the foolish should), Sawgrass offers two other fine courses — Oceanside and Oak Bridge — scattered throughout its 4,800 acres of lush land. Or, you can play tennis on one of the resort's 13 courts, or swim or just walk along the wide, white-sand beach, mostly deserted except for a few sandpipers rushing along on their little matchstick legs.

Sawgrass, of all the resorts we visited, is the newest, and its sparkling condominium accommodations are superb — large, airy, well-equipped with full kitchens, cable television, king-sized beds and stunning decors. There are bikes to ride, and fish to catch, and nearby St. Augustine (America's oldest city) to tour when the golf and the tennis are finished.

SAWGRASS OFFERS A number of packages for golfers and tennis players. The basic cost for an ocean-front studio begins at $110 per night, while a two-bedroom club villa begins at $105 in the low (December-February) season. Greens fees at the non-TPC courses begin at $20 for 18 holes, with a shared cart cost of $16.

For anyone who wants a beach, the most modern accommodations, fine dining, and a bit of history with his golf, Sawgrass is hard to beat — even in Florida.

In the middle of central Florida, tucked among orange groves and swampland, is the home of the course rated the best in Florida by that state's golf magazine — Grenelefe's 7,325 yard West Course. This monster winds through sand traps and pine trees and curling waterways, testing even the best golfer. It is more wide-open than the Sawgrass TPC (rated Florida's No. 2 course), but difficult pin placements and undulating greens make it a true test. If the West Course is too tough, the East Course (rated No. 9 in Florida) will give you a difficult enough challenge to write home about.

Like Sawgrass, Grenelefe also offers tennis facilities, swimming pools, jogging courses, fishing and boating on its 950 acres.

GRENELEFE IS OLDER than Sawgrass, and accommodations are not as luxurious, although they are certainly not second class. A one-bedroom condominium will cost you $95 a night here, and greens fees are $18, plus $16 for a shared cart.

This resort caters heavily to groups and, as a result, its restaurants are more attuned to mass feeding. The Green Heron, Grenelefe's best restaurant, is only fair.

An added advantage at Grenelefe is its proximity to some of Florida's most popular attractions — Walt Disney World, Circus World, Sea World and Cypress Gardens.

Any golfer who has played for many years has probably played on many Mickey Mouse courses, so called for their burned fairways, greens as hard as cement, tees that haven't seen a blade of grass for a decade, and par fives that are only 400 yards long.

BUT TO PLAY the real thing, go to the source — Walt Disney. The three Disney golf courses — Palm, Magnolia, Lake Buena Vista — are anything but Mickey Mouse in the usual sense. They are challenging, interesting courses, good enough to host a professional golf event, as they do each year.

The courses are as tidy as everything at Disney World, well-groomed and entremely interesting, if not as challenging as the best at Sawgrass and Grenelefe.

Of particular interest at Disney World's golf complex is the "wee links," a six-hole prototype course designed with the novice golfer in mind. Nestled in a wooded 25-acre parcel of land on the Magnolia course, the wee links features two par threes, three par fours and one par five, with a total yardage of 1,150 for the par 23 layout. The wee links is a perfect spot for youngsters to begin their golf careers.

Courcheval in the French Alps is famed for fine powder skiing.

French skiing vacation buy

By Philip Sousa
Copley News Service

Early snows are being predicted for the French Alps, and with them the promise of a long and lasting season for Americans taking advantage of this winter's low airfares and packages, plus the increased value of the dollar in France.

Among the most economical packages are those being offered by Air France and Jet Vacations at six classic and classy French ski resorts. The packed-powder slopes at Courchevel, Val d'Isere and La Plagne can be reached via Lyon, while the super runs of Chamonix, Avoriaz and Megeve are accessible through Geneva, Switzerland.

Both Lyon and Geneva can be reached through Air France's gateways — New York, Chicago, Houston and Los Angeles. Land packages start as low as $100 for seven days.

Entertainment centers tested for flight

Hearst Feature Service

PASADENA, Calif. - First magazines, then in-flight movies. Now an ex-McDonnell Douglas engineer has come up with a hand-held "entertainment system" that will allow passengers to fight air flight ennui by playing video games, listening to business lectures or learning French.

The 6-inch by 10-inch battery-operated units, which should be available on most airlines by next spring, were developed by Al Shilton, now vice president of product development of Avicom International, a leading supplier of movie and audio packages for airlines.

Currently being tested by the Federal Aviation Administration, the units are programmed with a variety of games, including popular video games such as Pac-Man and Donkey Kong, chess, backgammon and poker. Some units also will have Wall Street reports, short stories, up-to-date information on destinations, business lectures and fashion programs - some in four different languages.

Cabinets or so-called "mother units" will be clustered about the aircraft. Passengers will insert any major credit card and select their program. A master system then checks the credit card is valid, charges the user with a refundable $100 deposit and bills the passenger against the clock for the unit at a rate of $2 to $3 per hour, depending on the airline.

Passengers without credit cards can purchase "paper credit cards" from flight attendants or travel agents for specified blocks of time. And if the paper credit card's time expires in the middle of a game, the unit's internal clock provides a modest extension.

But what will it be like to sit next to one of these pop-ring-and-whirr addicts? No problem, says Shilton, as the units come equipped with headphones.

Several airlines already have signed letters of intent to try out the system. Avicom will install and service the systems for free. In return for allowing the company to place the system onboard its planes, carriers receive 10 percent to 20 percent of the tariff. Avicom also picks up the 5 percent to 7 percent credit card service charges.

"We think it's a step in the right direction," said Avery Coryell, spokesman for American Airlines. "All airlines are looking for ways to provide entertainment without increasing costs - this is certainly one of the more creative ways."

"We're very impressed," said Ona Burns, spokeswoman for TWA.

FABRIC SECRETS

BETTY MARTIN

Stripes, plaid and motif fabrics can be difficult enough to match up when constructing a garment. However, if these fabrics are directional, the matter can be even further complicated. In a directional design, there is one-way movement either up and down or right and left. When the movement is up and down, all fabric pieces should be placed with the pattern going in the same direction, neck to hem. When the movement is right to left, the stripes can be moving around the body in the same direction or arranged in a mirror image with one side the reverse of the other.

Make LEGGETS FABRICS your headquarters for all your sewing supplies...patterns, materials and notions. Stagecoach pauses at Express office in Columbia, Calif., a town where sights and sounds evoke Gold Rush era.

Columbia golden font of California lore

By HAROLD MCCONNELL
Copley News Service

Columbia, Calif. — The clop-clop-clop of horses' hooves could be heard in the distance. Soon the old stagecoach rounded the corner and pulled up in front of the Wells Fargo Express office. Passengers began unloading — and if it weren't for the modern clothes they were wearing you would have sworn you were in a twilight zone of the 1850s.

For almost everything about the gold rush town of Columbia, except the tourists, reminds you of those early days — the stagecoach, the fire engine house, the hotel, the saloon. Columbia has been preserved as a State Historic Park by California since 1945.

THE FEVERISH ERA following the discovery of gold — when the mines at Columbia yielded $87 million at 19th century prices — is only a part of legend and history now. But in Columbia you can still find the sights and smells and sounds that evoke those colorful old days. Walking the tree-shaded streets, you can imagine yourself rubbing shoulders with bearded prospectors and gamblers.

The restored brick and stone buildings appear much as they did then, and even some of the businesses — like the blacksmith and barbershops — are somewhat the same.

In the smithy shop Arnie Roff, besides making metal items for use in historic parks, will stamp your name on a horseshoe for a souvenir. And in the old Express office, 76-year-old Merl Hughes will sell you a ticket for the stagecoach ride.

The stagecoach travels a bumpy dirt road that winds through the nearby woods. On the way a "bandit" holds it up and swaps insults with the driver. Corny, yes — but the ride does give you a feeling of what the pioneers put up with.

EVEN IF TOURISTS crowd its streets, Columbia still has the stamp of authenticity. Located in the heart of the mother lode, it is the best preserved of the gold rush towns.

For example, the 1966 replica of the Columbia Gazette office, built in about 1855, is an operating newspaper. The Odd Fellows' Hall, built in 1855, still looks about the same as it did then. The two-story City Hotel, started in 1857, was restored in 1974.

Two fires, one in 1854 and another in 1857, destroyed nearly all the wooden buildings. The town was rebuilt with locally produced red brick. Thanks to the bricks — as well as the efforts of the state and concerned citizens — the town has stood the test of time. Schoolchildren all over the state contributed $52,000 of the $60,000 needed for restoration of the two-story schoolhouse.

Columbia is about 135 miles from San Francisco and about four miles off State 49, which runs through the heart of the gold country. Other gold rush towns on State 49 include Sonora, Jamestown, Angels Camp, Mokelumne Hill, Sutter Creek and Coloma.

Mexico relaxing getaway

By JOHN SINOR
Copley News Service

Reflections come to you from Crippled Bug Hill, 12.2 miles below where the pavement ends on Mexico's Highway 5.

It's a dusty, lazy, sunny, windy lump of ground on the Baja California peninsula overlooking the Sea of Cortez.

No woman in her right mind would camp in such a place. And men who would camp here for a week probably have to be a bit off the wall themselves.

No matter. My brother Bern, two friends and I came here to spend seven days doing something we've wanted to do for some time.

Nothing.

This is the place to do it. We wake up each morning facing only two decisions for the rest of the day.

Where to go to the bathroom. And which camp stinkbug to shoot first.

Even these activities tend to tire us out some. So we spend most of the rest of the day sitting in our fold-up chairs, moving only when the desert sun moves the shade from our plastic cover.

We could fish, and we have a little. But we have made friends with three Mexican men and a boy, Gilberto, Emilio, Martine and Gilberto's son, Geraldo, and they have smoothed out our life here considerably.

We came up with some tools and helped them work on their boat. We shared our beer and Pepsi with them. We gave them a bottle of tequila and some fresh oranges. We called them amigo.

Now they bring us more fish than we can eat. They bring us crab, giant shrimp, and manta ray roasts.

The second night we were here they even came over and cooked our dinner after dropping off enough firewood to keep our campfire dancing for a month.

It's hot and dusty here, but paradise enough.

We brought a pistol along. Not a real pistol. That's illegal and could put us on a diet of prison tortillas for a long, long time.

I brought along a fairly harmless BB gun.

But it surely looks like a real gun. It looks like a big ugly 45-caliber automatic.

A small band of dirt bikers roared by our camp the first day. They stopped for a minute, looked our way, and we could hear them say, "Good Lord! Those guys have a gun!"

Caves rescued from vandals

By CHARLES HILLINGER
By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

OREGON CAVES NATIONAL MONUMENT, Ore. - Vandalism and graffiti played a role in the designation of this national monument in southern Oregon in 1909.

Surprised? You thought, perhaps, that vandalism and graffiti were more recent phenomena.

At the urging of poet Joaquin Miller and others, President William Howard Taft on July 12, 1909, set aside 480 acres containing several miles of marble rooms and passageways to save the cave for posterity.

Although the monument is named Oregon Caves, it in fact contains only one cave.

Miller called it "the Marble Halls of Oregon.'

If spray paint had been available 75 to 100 years ago, Oregon Caves would really be a mess.

As it is, hundreds of signatures are preserved under a thick coat of calcite on cascading flowstone, on cave walls, and on scores of stalactites and stalagmites.

Evidence of vandalism is obvious in nearly every room where cylindrical or conical deposits of calcite projecting downard from the cave's ceiling or upwards from the floor have been broken and removed.

The damage occurred from the time of the cave's discovery by Elijah Davidson in 1874 to the creation of the monument in 1909.

Since then, visitors have been led by guides and warned not to touch or deface any of the walls or deposits.

"Owners of Oregon Caves before President Taft stepped in to save it invited people to bring their hammers and chisels with them to knock off the stalactites and stalagmites and carry the deposits off as souvenirs," explained Charles Davis, 31, head guide at the national monument.

It was not easy to get here in those early years. It was a steep eight-mile hike or horseback ride. But people came just the same and carried out their souvenirs.

And apparently nearly everyone who came before 1909 left his or her mark on a formation, scrawling their signatures or drawings for all to know that they had visited Oregon Caves.

Many of the signatures on the delicate calcite deposits are from those who should have known better, people such as widely known (during his day) Oregon Professor Thomas Condon, who led a party of 20 into the cave on Aug. 6, 1878.

The name of Professor Condon and every member of his party are permanently preserved under a varnish of calcite that has dripped daily over the signatures for more than a century on the spectacular Niagara Falls flowstone deposit.

It was a dog that led to the discovery of the cave. Elijah Davidson was deer hunting 109 years ago when his dog, Bruno, picked up the scent of a bear and followed the bear into a dark, mossy-green hole.

Worried about his dog, Davidson entered the hole in the side of the mountain at an elevation of 4,000 feet and became the first person of record to explore the cave.

He never did find the bear, but he found his dog.

Visitors to Oregon Caves today are led on guided hikes through .6 of a mile of the three miles of low, narrow passageways and fascinating rooms. During the tour, visitors climb 240 feet from the entrance to the exit.

Oregon Caves is filled with peculiar formations created over the centuries by the dripping of mineral-rich water. Formations such as one large deposit that is a ringer for former President Nixon's profile; another of a duck flying into a wall, a camel, a ram, a Coca-Cola bottle and many others.

Tour guides warn that anyone having claustrophobia or acrophobia should forgo a visit.

White House aide says freeze good idea

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In retrospect, a top economic advisor to President Reagan says, the administration would have been wise to accept a proposal by Democratic Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South Carolina for a spendng freeze to force down budget deficits. Ultimately, he added, something like that will be required.

A member of the president's Council on Economic Advisors, speaking off the record to a group of economic reporters last week, expressed both the alarm about the unprecedented deficits in a booming economy — and the pessimism that they could be reduced anytime soon because of the impasse over taxes.

"We've been talking about 'disciplining' the deficit through economic growth and cuts in spending. But that may not be enough," the official said.

"In retrospect, I regret we did not take up Hollings and (Arkansas Sen. Dale) Bumpers and other Democrats last winter on their freeze resolution."

A freeze, or a modified version of one, would spread the pain, he said, including in defense and in social-welfare programs for the elderly and the poor. A freeze may also be the only way to get the decisive downward pressure on deficits that now are forecast to extend through the decade at more than $200 billion a year — with virtually nobody able to predict the economic impact.

HOLLINGS' FREEZE plan called for a 3 percent real growth in defense spending compared to the 10 percent requested by Reagan and the 5 percent growth ultimately allowed by Congress under the 1984 budget. He would have saved $150 billion in defense spending in five years, compared to what will be spent under the congressional plan.

The freeze deficits under the Hollings plan compared to the congressional budget currently in effect would have been $169 billion in 1984, compared to $183 billion; $109 billion in 1985 compared to $184 billion; $74 billion in 1986 compared to $196 billion; $42 billion in 1987 compared to $209 billion and $2 billion in 1988 compared to $215 billion.

The concern over the deficits that will keep rising even after a vigorous recovery is what has propelled Senate tax and budget leaders to take another, urgent search for ways to reverse the present course.

The main players in this search are Finance Chairman Robert Dole of Kansas, Budget Chairman Pete V. Dominici of New Mexico, Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee and the leader of the GOP conservative bloc, William Armstrong of Colorado.

Joined by Senate Democrats, they have trying to produce a bi-partisan package that would cut the deficit by about $150 billion over a three-year period. So far, they have gone over old ground: cuts in spending (including defense and the automatic escalators in such benefit programs as Social Security) and some new taxes. Dole incorporated many of those ideas last week in a deficit-reducing plan that would have built on Hollings' freeze by permitting no more than a 2.5 percent growth in federal spending in 1985.

THE WHITE HOUSE — and segments of the all-important business community — promptly knocked down the Dole plan, showing the preference to gamble that the deficits won't abort the recovery until after the 1985 elections.

Unless the bi-partisan Senate group, which includes Democrats Lawton Chiles of Florida and Russell Long of Louisiana, can come up with a compromise, the deficit controversy could remain on dead center, politically, with a budget freeze option no more palatable than when Hollings first floated it more than a year ago.

That assumption might be misleading, however.

A White House economic aide said "the Dole plan seems to be rising from the dead. It may have a chance after all."

Even with the White House opposed to it?

"YOU SHOULD WATCH the signals coming from the White House very carefully in the next week — watch for signs of subtle change," he said.

It would take change from President Reagan himself. He has been at the heart of the resistance, adamantly opposed to any new taxes before the 1984 elections and seemingly convinced by the arguments of Treasury Secretary Donald Regan that the boisterous recovery itself will force down deficits.

Reagan has rebelled against the persistent contradictory argument made by Harvard professor Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, that these deficits are locked into the structure of the budget — and that only concrete actions to cut spending or raise taxes will reduce them below their projected $200 billion level through the next decade.

Regan's credibility in his "deficits don't matter" scenario extends little beyond the president. Feldstein's gloomier view, however, is shared not only by Federal Reserve Paul Volcker but by most of the congressional economic chiefs.

Dole attempted last week to put a 2.5 percent ceiling on federal growth but it self-destructed within 48 hours because, in the view of Feldstein's CEA colleague, "a coalition for it hadn't been built. And it was too late to attach it to the debt limit bill."

DOLE, DOMINICI, Baker and Armstrong will be trying again this week, undeterred by Reagan's refusal to consider any tax-increase.

As of now, none of this is reflected in the frenetic briefings on the 1985 budget options currently being reviewed by Reagan with his budget director, David Stockman — but in reality the raging behind-the-scenes deficit battle has everything to do with the Stockman-Reagan sessions on the next year's budget.

Reagan faces some unpleasant options in the weeks ahead: to propose a 1985 budget that would have untenably high deficits, to "cook" the numbers and predict deficit numbers so low they aren't believable — or to propose some dramatic reductions in the deficit through difficult election-year cuts in spending and increases in taxes.

An aide to Stockman confirmed there was much movement in Congress on the budget deficit crisis — but whether this amounted to more than fruitless "milling around" was not yet clear.

One idea which a budget aide called "very ingenuous" would reduce the cost-of-living automatic escalators on welfare and retirement benefits to two percent or three percent below the level of inflation, with the savings going toward shoring up the Medicare system.

"Thus far, no radical ideas have cropped up yet," he said.

But, it is apparent after Stockman's three budget briefings with Reagan so far that "the options for the 1985 budget are very, very difficult."

They may be difficult enough to force the president and the congressional Democrats to sit down together, once again, and seek common agreement even in an election year.

Analysts agree recovery strong

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the economic recovery passes its first anniversary this month, most Wall Street analysts agree it is still showing plenty of youthful vigor.

According to the experts who keep track of such things, it was in November of 1982 that a long, severe recession reached bottom and economic activity began to improve.

Today, officials of the Reagan administration say the upward trend has made such progress that it can now be labeled "expansion" rather than merely "recovery." That may be merely political semantics, but there is little in the latest economic data and private analyses to dispute the point.

"The economy is proceeding through the first year of recovery in an orderly and predictable way," says Data Resources Inc., a forecasting firm. "Prospects are good that the expansion will continue for at least another year."

The official figures on the pace of the economy lately have been especially impressive. The Labor Department reported Friday that the civilian unemployment rate fell to a 20-month low of 8.8 percent in October. The jobless rate has fallen two percentage points since late last year.

Auto sales remained strong in the last part of October, sales of new homes recorded a big jump in September, and retailers reported continuing strong gains in their business.

Henry Kaufman, the Salomon Brothers economist, said in a commentary published Friday that the improvement "shows signs of becoming increasingly more broadly based. Business spending is rising and shows every indication of making a substantial contribution to economic growth in the period ahead."

One missing piece in the puzzle, however, is the enthusiasm one might expect to see in the securities markets. Among all the positives confronting them, stock traders have chosen lately to focus on interest rates — both their present high level and fears that they might soon go higher still.

In the past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 5.29 to 1,218.19 for its fourth consecutive weekly decline.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index slipped .51 to 93.77, while the American Stock Exchange market value index rose .97 to 213.42.

Big Board volume averaged 83.31 million shares a day, against 81.65 million the week before.

One reason for the interest-rate fears is the general perception that the Federal Reserve is taking a different approach to its task of managing monetary policy than it might have at the same point in past periods of economic growth.

Rather than standing ready to administer a "cure" as soon as inflation starts to revive, the Fed is seen as using a restrictive credit policy now as preventive medicine.

Thus Kaufman at Salomon Brothers maintains that "the next significant Federal Reserve move," perhaps as early as this winter, will be to apply additional restraints on monetary growth.

Another big bugaboo in the financial markets is the federal government's budget deficit. There are some prominent dissenters, but many analysts believe interest rates cannot come down until the deficit is narrowed, lightening the burden of government borrowing on the credit markets.

Some observers, however, say those who see the deficit as an unmitigated evil are missing one of its most pervasive effects. When the government spends more than it takes in, that spending acts as a stimulus to the economy.

Fund raising expert built career with skills learned selling Girl Scout cookies

By KERI GUTEN
Hearst Feature Service

No wonder Joan Flanagan is an expert at fund-raising — she hasn't stopped asking for money since selling the most cookies in her Girl Scout troop as a young girl.

"I got to be an expert by doing it," she said from her office in Chicago. "You can't go to Harvard to get a Ph.D. in bake sales."

Flanagan has turned her fund-raising expertise into a full-time consulting business and also has written several books on the subject, including "The Successful Volunteer Organization" and "The Grass Roots Fundraising Book," which has become the fund-raisers' bible and has sold more than 40,000 copies.

Flanagan defines grass roots fund-raising as "do-it-yourself fund-raising using your own people. Grass roots simply means you are ordinary people asking for money for your organization. It is dependable, renewable, internally controlled money because it comes from people who need and want your organization."

Her basic premise is that the money is out there, fund-raisers just have to ask for it — and that's sometimes the hard part.

"The difficulty is not with the donor, but with the asker," she said. "Most adults are afraid to ask for money. We are taught to be afraid to ask for money; it's a part of human nature to be afraid to talk about it.

"If you can be taught that fear, you can be untaught, especially if what you're asking for can improve lives. We do role-playing to get people used to asking for money. They only seem to have problems at the beginning. But once they are successful, it gets easier. They become fearless and start asking everyone. They learn they have nothing to lose and everything to gain by asking."

The public has proven a ripe market for fund-raisers. Flanagan cites statistics that show 5 percent of the philanthropic dollar comes from foundations, 5 percent comes from corporations and 90 percent comes from individuals.

"Historically, Americans are the most generous in the world," she said. "Other countries wish they had such a philanthropic history. I think it comes from our pioneer heritage and our pride in taking care of ourselves and our neighbors."

There was a time, however, when many organizations depended on grants from the government and foundations to grease their machinery.

"There was lots of grant money in the 1970s, but with Reagan, government funding has been cut back to social service programs, and foundations have been feeling the economic pinch," Flanagan explained.

"A lot of organizations that were grant-dependent faced going out of business or learning how to raise money. Getting a grant was as easy as writing a term paper. But with a grant, all you get is money. When that runs out, the organization is no stronger, no one in the community knows you and no leaders have evolved.

"Grass roots fund-raising is hard. But the only limit is the enthusiasm of your volunteers, and you end up with better leadership, better programs, better publicity — the entire organization is strengthened."

On top of all these pluses, Flanagan can even see advantages to Reagan's cutbacks and the subsequent growth of grass roots organizations.

"Clarity — that's what you gain," the 36-year-old explained. "If you get money, you know people want what you are offering, that you are accountable to your community. These are the programs which flourish; the others are run by do-gooders who just fold up and go to law school or to get an MBA."

"Fund-raising is a team sport that's a lot of fun, but it's also the life blood of an organization; it's what's keeping the group alive. If it's treated importantly and not as an odious chore, participants will be enthusiastic and the money will come in. All you have to do is ask for it."

Trade with USSR won't help peace, experts say

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Increased trade between the United States and the Soviet Union would have little effect on chances for peace or in changing internal Soviet policies, say two experts on the Soviet economy.

"I don't think expanded trade would better the chances for peace. I think we should concentrate on arms control talks," said Edward Hewett, a senior fellow of the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C.

Hewett and Judith Thornton, a professor of economics at the University of Washington, spoke here recently at a forum on economic realities in the Soviet Union.

Thornton said the U.S. should not think economic leverage will significantly influence the USSR. Trade has expanded greatly between the two countries in recent years with no important change in relations, she said.

The two economists also agreed Russia's economy is in bad shape. "In the last five years, economic growth in the Soviet Union has fallen off the cliff. Last year, possibly it was less than 1 percent," Thornton said.

Since 1977, Soviet annual growth has averaged 2 percent, Hewett said, cautioning that no one should think, however, that the Soviet Union is about to collapse or is weak militarily. It has not had a negative annual growth rate since World War II, and the Soviet military still has top priority.

Hewett ticked off the reasons for the Soviet Union's poor gross national product performance: adverse weather that has wrecked grain production, a declining population growth in western areas where capital production is located, the rising cost of raw materials and inefficiency based on a contradiction between a 50-year-old way of economic planning and the needs of a modern, heavily militaristic Soviet state.

Hewett noted Russia has enormous energy reserves of oil, natural gas and coal. But the reserves usually are located in remote, uninhabitable places like Siberia where the cost of extraction is high.

Thorton added that prices for Russia's major exports, oil and gold, have fallen. She said there has been a decline in capital investment, which can be seen in the country's failure to complete electric power projects because of non-delivery of turbines, generators and concrete.

"The Soviets would have much to gain if they reallocated resources from the military to other areas of their economy," she said.

Efforts by the U.S. to influence Soviet economic decisions by embargoes don't work, she said, because the Russians simply buy elsewhere, and thus drive wedges between America and its allies.

Both speakers said trade should be pursued, but for normal commercial reasons, not to influence Soviet decisions.

The economists also noted:

Unemployment is unknown in Russia, but many workers are underemployed and poorly paid.

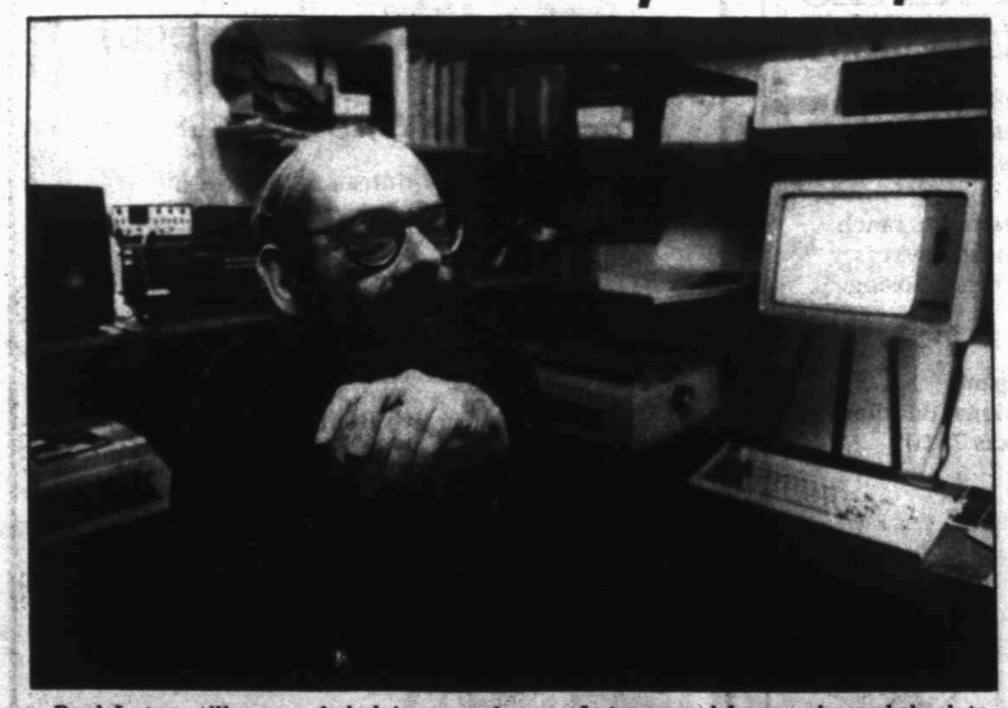
The USSR's economy is about 60 percent the size of America's.

Personal wealth exists in Russia, but in the form of privileges, such as travel and admission to special shops.

The Soviets honor their commercial agreements with the West, but their record of commercial relations with other communist countries is not as good.

In 1981, the U.S. exported $2 billion in goods, mostly agricultural and high technology products to Russia. The U.S. imported $400 million in goods, mostly raw materials, from the Soviet Union during that same year.

Freelance computer programer moves out of shack



Paul Lutus still wears faded jeans and running shoes after striking it rich with the best-selling Apple Writer word processing program and the GraFORTH computer language. Expecting to gross $2 million this year, Lutus moved from a plywood shack to a Spanish Style house on 35 acres in Sunny Valley, Ore. Lutus says he owns a hang glider and hangar and doesn't believe in giving personal loans.

SUNNY VALLEY, Ore. (AP) — Four years ago, Paul Lutus lived in a plywood cabin he built himself on Eight Dollar Mountain, earning about twice that much a day as a freelance computer programmer.

Then he struck it rich with the best-selling Apple Writer word-processing program and the GraFORTH computer language. He expects to gross about $2 million in royalties this year.

But Lutus is finding the status and earnings of a rock star in the computer world carry their own problems.

"I wish it hadn't been as much money," says Lutus, 38, who moved across the valley after his success and now lives alone in a $240,000 Spanish-style house on 35 acres on Sexton Mountain. "There's just no way you can abdicate the responsibility of that much money.

"The biggest problem was worrying about the changes" the money would make in his life, he adds, speaking rapidly and intensely. "Virtually everybody I knew asked me for a personal loan. That was depressing."

Though the toys he plays with now — a satellite dish antenna for his TV set, a new telescope, an ultra-light airplane — cost much more than his old toys, Lutus says he has managed to keep his life pretty close to the way it was when he lived on Eight Dollar Mountan.

"Before, I had a hang glider and jumped off cliffs," Lutus says. "Now I own a hangar, and inside it is a hang glider with a motor on it.

"I still drive around town looking for parking meters with time still on them," he says.

He still wears a full red beard, faded jeans, plaid shirts and running shoes and works without regard for a clock. But he says he is not worried about the money.

"The choice I have at this point is to continue fighting and end up punch drunk ... or to only select projects I am actually interested in without regard to the money potential," he says.

"I lived on $40 a month on Eight Dollar Mountain. The sorts of things I like to do haven't changed. I would still walk around on that ridge up there," where he spots bears and foxes among the fir and spruce.

Lutus says he had a hard time persuading his accountant that he should pay cash for the house, rather than take a loan that would increase his tax deductions.

The accountant just was not used to someone with that much cash, Lutus says. But now, if the money ends, the house and land are paid for, with taxes of only about $1,000 per year.

"I can always scrape that much together," he says.

Besides, Lutus has just put $1.2 million into Treasury securities, assuring annual income of about $100,000.

"The bank manager was in tears when I took the money out," he says. "I think they had a wake."

Lutus moved to the mountains of southwestern Oregon in 1975 with $2,000 in his pocket after working on the lighting system for the space shuttle. He spent $1,500 to build a cabin on land he already owned and had $500 left over.

Lutus got rich because he broke out of the mainstream and came up with a way to talk to computers that ordinary people found easy.

He attributes his success, in part, to his solitary life.

"Writing a computer program is absolutely cryptic unless you get a place like this, where there are no phones ringing and no gorgeous secretaries around," he says.

His interest in talking to people also helps, he says. "Most computer people don't have communications skills or humanitarian interests."

Lutus says his money gives him status that provides greater access to people and ideas as well as allowing him to make what he calls "mega-votes" in favor of things he believes in, like the Nature Conservancy, Planned Parenthood and public broadcasting.

"I pay 62 percent taxes (state and federal). The rules allow me to play with about half of that" in making tax deductible gifts, he says. "I just donated $20,000 so Planned Parenthood could open an office in Grants Pass (Ore.)."

He says his former home on Eight Dollar Mountan went to the Nature Conservancy to start a botanical preserve.

But Lutus draws the line at personal loans.

Fire report plan work continuing

AUSTIN — Work is continuing by the State Fire Marshals Office to expand the Texas Fire Incident Reporting System, which now includes 252 cities; representing close to half the state's population.

State Fire Marshal Ernest Emerson reports Houston will soon be joining the system. Dallas has "had some technical problems" which have delayed its participation.

Texas A&M University is assisting the State Fire Marshall's office in training local fire departments in preparing reports under the system (known as Tex-FIRS), and has been working recently on "quality control," Emerson said.

"I think it is really going to identify a lot of problems. And when you identify the problems you can know what you should be doing," he said.

A recent report on the first quarter of 1983 (covering reports from 2210 fire departments, representing about 6.2 million population, or 43.9 percent of the state's total), shows 15,639 fires were reported, with $43,348,197 in damages.

Thirty deaths were reported as a result of those fires; along with 391 fire-related injuries — 169 involving firefighters.

Of the total, 4,176 were building fires, with 3,186 vehicle fires and 8,277 "other" fires.

Most of the losses — over $35.9 million — were associated with structure fires, with "misuse of heat ignition" being the most common cause, both for fires and for "civilian" injuries.

Emerson says it's hoped that the system eventually will include virtually all of Texas' fire departments, and that information gathered on use of fires will be used by the departments in preventing fires.

Amendments to industrial revenue bond regulations have been proposed by the Texas Economic Development Commission, with various changes required under ligislation (SB 105) passed earlier this year.

The legislation changed the name of the Texas Industrial Commission to the Texas Economic Development Commission, and provided for TEDC to adopt guidelines describing the areas which may be considered "blighted or economically depressed" for purposes of financing commercial projects with bond proceeds.

The bill also authorized TEDC to set a fee for filing industrial revenue bond applications, with the charge not to exceed $1,500.

TEDC is proposing a $500 charge in its regulations, which detail considerations which are to be considered by local officials in designating areas (with some matters as unemployment, substandard structures, etc., to be used).

State regulatory officials continue to monitor banks for any problems because of energy related loans, which have been seen as a factor in the collapse of three Permian Basin banks this year — but the Department of Banking reports no special instructions have been given to State examiners.

Interim Banking Commissioner William Aldridge, a long-time bank examiner, says it appears the worst may be past with regard to energy related loans, and that the situation "has stabilized."

The Department of Banking has been monitoring agricultural loans as well, Aldridge said, but it still appears "a little early" to determine if problems will result in that area.

"The jury is still out on the PIK (payment in kind) program, he comments, and many areas of Texas have suffered from bad weather.

Until harvests are completed, "we won't be sure what the results from the farming areas will be," Aldridge said.

Sam Kimberlin, Texas Bankers Association, says TBA is hopeful that "the worst is behind us...I think we have seen the residual effects."

Many energy loans which have resuslted in problems were made at a time when it appeared the price of oil would rise to $100 a barrel, and the "oil glut" wasn't forseen.

It may take a quarter or two for earnings to recover," Kimberlin said, "but the people we talk to think the worst is over."

A similar view was expressed by Hagen McMahon, Inependent Bankers Association of Texas, who said the problem with energy loans has been one of "bad timing".

"Things just didn't go the way a lot of people thought they would," he said.

Texas banker says state still strong

Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Despite widely publicized problems in banking because of energy loan losses, Texas is still one of the best, if not the best, banking markets in the country, Lewis H. Bond, chairman of the board of Fort Worth-based Texas American Bancshares Inc., told New York and Boston securities analysts last week.

"Texas banking, while staggering from some tough punches, is very much alive," Bond said. "Although profitability ratios may have peaked in 1981, economic growth and structural adjustments should permit us to resume soon our normal growth patterns in assets and earnings."

He predicted the energy industry, "which has provided our roller coaster ride," seems to have bottomed out and is moving back up.

"There is no question that Texas has been badly bruised by the dramatic decline in oil and gas drilling activity that began in early 1982. Energy is important, representing 15 percent of our state's economic activity, and when it slumps, the ripples spread far," Bond said.

Although Texas American's earnings this year have been negatively impacted by energy loan losses, Bond noted that the holding company's conservative underwriting policies have minimized the problems of non-performing loans compared to other Texas banks.

"Although energy loans do make up the major part of our non-performing loans, we are still active in lending to this industry and expect to continue our involvement. Energy loans have been very good to us through the years and we do not expect another shock such as began in 1982," he stressed.

An exciting development in Texas' economy this year was the selection of Austin as the headquarter site for Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC), a cooperative venture of 12 leading electronic companies. MCC is expected to draw many other related companies and industries to Austin, Dallas and Fort Worth, where TAB subsidiaries are well-represented.

In addition, the holding company has recently announced four new acquisitions — two in the East Texas market; one in Wichita Falls; and another in Dallas.

Bond said the holding company's name change program was successfully completed last fall. "This is already resulting in savings in advertising expense, printing and forms, and also is helping in recognition of the company. With 68 percent of our assets in two media markets — Dallas/Fort Worth and Houston — you can easily see the benefits from unified advertising."

Regarding 1983 earnings, Bond attributed the 15 percent decline in year-to-date income before securities transactions to decrease spreads due to the deregulation of rates and loan losses which have required higher provisions than usual.

"To help offset these negative factors, we have worked hard on the other two factors which play a major role — other operating income and expenses," Bond said, adding that operating income is up 17 percent over last year and expenses are up only 10 percent.

He predicted that the completion of the holding company's new data processing and operations center near Dallas/Fort Worth Airport, scheduled for completion next spring, will be a major positive factor in expense control.

Gary W. Cage, TAB executive vice president, noted that declining net interest yield has been offset to a considerable degree by continuing good loan growth. "With the apparent continuing increase in drilling activity and the economic recovery, I expect our loans will grow at an even greater rate in 1984."

ERTA added tax trap

By DONALD J. MASSOGLIA

The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (ERTA) added a new depreciation system called the Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS). ERTA simplified many provisions related to depreciation (now called cost recovery) but added a significant trap for the unwary.

The trap lies in the use of ACRS for nonresidential real property.

Nonresidential real property is real property that does not receive 80 percent or more of gross rental income from dwelling units. If ACRS is used for nonresidential real property, the full amount of cost recovery deductions taken are recaptured as ordinary income upon sale of the property at a gain. If the straight line method is used there is no recapture of cost recovery deductions.

The potential adverse tax consequences of this trap can be best understood with an example. Assume that Mr. A purchases nonresidential real property on Jan. 1, 1981, for $100,000 and sells it on Jan. 1, 1985, for $200,000. Mr. A elects to use ACRS for the period Jan. 1, 1981, to Jan. 1, 1985, and he takes cost recovery deductions of $39,000. Upon the sale of the property on Jan. 1, 1985, Mr. A realizes a gain of $139,000 of which $39,000 is recaptured as ordinary income and $100,000 is generally long term captial gain.

If Mr. A had used the straight line method, his deduction would have totalled $26,667 (100,000/15 x 4). Upon the sale of the property for $200,000, he would realize a gain of $126,667 which would be generally capital gain. The following table illustrates the tax effects of this election on the sale in 1985, assuming that Mr. A is in the 50 percent bracket:

TAX ON SALE

	ACRS	STRAIGHT LINE
Ordinary Income(recapture) $39.000 x .5	$19,500	$—0—
Capital Gain
$100,000 x .2	$20,000	$—0—
$126,667 x .2	$—0—	$25,333
	$39,500	$25,333

This potential trap exists anytime a taxpayer sells the nonresidential real property at a gain if he has used ACRS. Therefore, very careful consideration and planning should precede a decision to use ACRS on nonresidential real property.

Inventory management more critical than ever

By MIKE R. ELLIS

Inventory management is perhaps more critical than ever before because of today's volatile economy. The high cost of money, the fluctuating supply and demand of the marketplace, inventory "carrying costs" and tax implications have combined to underscore the need for accurate and timely inventory reporting. Yet, despite the recognition among middle-market company executives that an effective approach is essential, many companies lack a system that is tailored to their specific needs and capabilities.

One of the more tangible reasons for an inventory control management system is supported in a recent study by the American Production and Inventory Control Society (APICS), which noted that annual "carrying costs" of inventory represent more than 30 percent of a company's inventory value.

The ability to maintain a proper balance between the marketing, operations and financial inventory "needs" is essential as part of a company's operations.

The first step in implementing inventory control management involves a commitment from the "top" to a system which best meets a company's needs. It must represent a tailored approach, working within the confines and capabilities of management. A "canned system" — one that does not take into account a company's total operations and needs — will not serve a firm's best interests.

Management then must determine which inventory items should be highlighted, from raw materials to finished goods. For example, special emphasis should be placed on certain products that sell more quickly than others, or items that require long lead times, or have very high value, etc; a system that fails to address these, and other factors, is not very useful.

The next step involves a determination by management of is needs, which takes into account operations, sales and accounting concerns. For example, the production manager typically needs to know substitute uses of inventory items; status of outstanding orders; delivery times and alternative sources of supply.

The salesman needs to know product availability and how quickly it can be delivered. And the financial officer is concerned with the bottom-line — unit dollar values; inventory turnover; dollar accuracy of inventory in stock, and other factors. An inventory control management system that considers these needs will prove especially valuable to managers at all levels.

Why Inventory Control?

There are any number of manual and mechanized inventory management systems on the market today, and the boom in technology has expanded the options. How this software is adapted and applied to a particular operation will make the difference between success and failure. But the advantages of inventory management — if properly executed — are apparent.

If a company has balanced its inventory, it can postion itself to maximize customer service and cash flow, as well as to minimize product costs. The system can help enable a company to forecast product demands accurately and present the company with an opportunity to generate timely and pertinent information that will assist in decision-making on pricing strategies, year-end tax planning and improved levels of productivity. If a loan is secured by inventory, the accuracy of a control system will help to define how much a company can borrow — as well as penalities that can be levied.

Every dollar unnecessarily invested in inventory is money uninvested in potentially lucrative opportunities such as programs to increase sales, expand production, improve research, or simply invest in the money market. Storage costs, the need to optimize warehouse space and minimize the number of personnel to maintain inventory, represent additional reasons for introducing an inventory management system. Because of the danger of product obsolescence and waste on slow moving inventories, company executives must be aware of the importance of a system that "fits" their operation.

Often a company's largest individual investment is its inventory. If proper planning and control is not established by means of a workable system, consistent with management objectives, and runs the risk of finishing last in the race against the competition — both in the regional and world marketplace.

Businessmen face important question

Texas businessmen face an important question: Is the slowdown in Texas economic growth temporary, or are we moving into a more permanent period of slower growth?

The Texas Economic Outlook Conference, scheduled for Nov. 16 at the Westin Oaks Hotel in Houston, will bring together industry experts and leading economic researchers to shed light on what's in store for the Texas economy.

The Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas at Austin and Data Resources Inc., the world's largest economic information company, are joint sponsors of the conference.

Topics will include the overall outlook for Texas and the outlook for high technology, energy, real estate and construction.

Scheduled speakers include Adm. Bobby Ray Inman, president of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC); Ray Marshall, a leading economist and former Secretary of Labor under the Carter administration; George P. Mitchell, president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.; and J. McDonald Williams, managing partner of Trammell Crow Co.

Keynote speakers from the Bureau of Business Research will be Victor Arnold, director of the bureau and former dirctor of the Texas 2000 project, a highly successful long range, state wide planning effort; and Thomas Plaut, bureau chief economist.

Cost of the one-day conference is $150. For further information contact Judy Sampieri, Data Resources Inc., Capital Bank Plaza, Suite 3350, Houston 77002. Phone (713) 658-9261.

Businessman wants capitalism in Pentagon, forms new group

Hearst News Service

Stanley Weiss would like to bring a little capitalism to the Pentagon.

He has founded a national organization — Business Executives for National Security — to push for cost-effective alternatives to the escalation of nuclear arms. He believes that present military policy undermines the national economy and threatens world peace.

Weiss is not your typical peacenik. He heads a multinational mineral and oil processing company. He chose to organize fellow executives because "when business talks, Congress listens."

His group (BENS) is neither a disarmament group nor anti-military. It supports a U.S. military force powerful enough to counter the threat that it believes the Soviet Union poses.

Foremost, the Washington, D.C.-based organization wants to stop "the lemming-like walk toward toward nuclear disaster," Weiss said. "Being dead is bad for business. The ashes of capitalism and communism will be indistinguishable after a nuclear war."

BENS opposes first-strike weapons, deployment of MX missiles and other weaponry that speeds up the hair-trigger decisions of nuclear warfare. The group also seeks to replace rhetoric about communism with sober, balanced assessment of Soviet strengths and weaknesses, Weiss said.

"I think the Russians are bullies. I think we need to be strong," Weiss said. "Anybody who wants to undress in front of the Russians won't feel comfortable in our group."

The group calls for competition in government contracts to prevent the abuses that have resulted in 29-cent widgets costing hundreds of dollars. More importantly, Weiss said, the nation needs to radically reassess its principles of national security.

He said military spending is soaring while other areas of national security, including the economy and education, have been neglected. Unless military spending is brought under control, the nation's businesses will continue to be stifled by inflation and high interest rates generated from enormous deficit spending, he argued.

Weiss therefore believes it is in a prudent business executive's interest to reduce military spending and to revamp national priorities. He hopes his year-old organization, now with 800 members including prominent chief executives, will grow to 20,000 in the next few years.

Memberships cost $100 for individuals and $1,000 for corporations. The address for BENS is: Euram Building, 21 DuPont Circle NW, Washington D.C. 20036.

Fish farming key to increased supply

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Extensive development of aquaculture, or fish farming, appears to be the key to a continued increase in the world supply of fish, delegates to the International Symposium of Salmonid Reproduction were told here recently.

William McNeil, general manager of Oregon Aqua Foods of Springfield, Ore., noted that the world harvest of fish leveled off in the late 1960s and 1970s.

But in the past 10 years, he said, salmon ranching has doubled and now produces about one-fourth of the world supply of these fish.

Japan's extensive industrial salmon farming contributes significantly to the harvest of fish off Alaska, he said.

Salmon farms operate much like hatcheries, releasing juvenile salmon and harvesting the fish when they return to spawn at the end of their life cycles.

Extensive development of aquaculture would amount to a change in the sea harvest from a "hunting to a farming economy," he told scientists from all over the world who attended the symposium.

McNeil, whose firm rears and releases salmon on the Oregon coast, said opposition to salmon farming by commercial fishermen was based on fear that a change in the economics of the ocean fish harvest would harm their industry. Such fears were groundless, he said.

"Commercial fishermen catch two chinook and coho salmon that we release to every one that we get," he said.

Another speaker, Canadian salmon trolling fisherman Abe Vanderhorst, told delegates that marked hatchery-produced coho salmon caught off British Columbia were smaller than unmarked "wild coho." And newer Canadian hatcheries produce salmon that are larger than those produced in older U.S. hatcheries, he added.

He suggested that the influence of hatcheries, especially older ones, is causing salmon to evolve into a "lesser species."

More than 80 scientists will discuss critical factors that influence salmon reproduction during the three-day symposium sponsored by the Washington Sea Grant Program with financial help from the Pacific Sea Grant College Program, National Marine Fisheries Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Political awareness becoming important

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-energy Writer

As government tries to muscle in on business and industry, the two are beginning to fight back — by becoming more involved in government.

In the last three years there has been a proliferation of business political action committes and political awareness programs, said Bob Madison, vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

The reason, said Madison, a longtime political observer, is "because the country was headed down the road to socialism and business finally woke up and decided to do their part" to reduce taxes and regulations.

Madison said political awareness programs are important because they inform and involve people in the political process. Such programs, he said, help reduce the chances of the minority ruling because of an apathetic majority.

One company who has been taking an active political role is Mesa Petroleum Co. Madison said Mesa has "one of the best" political awareness programs.

OFFICIALS AT MESA said their program is strong because about 95 percent of their 700 employees are stockholders in the company. As a result, what affects the company affects them.

The program was implemented in 1980. It was the idea of Mesa's Chief Executive Officer T. Boone Pickens.

Marion Causey, vice president of Mesa's Permian Basin division office in Midland, said being politically aware is important at Mesa.

"Mesa and its employees are very aware of what's happening, politically, in our industry. We want to have input because we're going to be affected by it. We should have input as to how our political system should operate. What benefits our industry also benefits the American people, because certainly our industry is important to Americans nationwide.

"Mesa encourages all their stockholders and royalty owners to become active. This is not a program just for employees. It reaches out to anyone associated with the company," Causey added.

MESA'S PROGRAM has two primary purposes. First, it encourages employees and those associated with Mesa to register and to vote. Second, it provides employees and associates with as much information as possible on industry issues.

The company also encourages employees to write or call their elected officials.

Pat Berry is coordinator for Mesa's political awareness program. Berry, who considers herself to be very politically active, contends the program is not only important to Mesa but also to everyone.

"Our program is important because politics affects all of business and all of our individual lives. It is important to have employees who are politically astute and know what's going on. Every individual employee needs to be informed about legislation that will affect him or her."

Berry has been with the program since its inception in 1980 and believes it is accomplishing what it set out to do.

"The program works excellently. It tells employees what's going on in the political system, it encourages employees to vote, it reminds them about upcoming elections and helps them with registration and where to vote.

"We disseminate information about candidates and what's on the ballot. We do not take a stand on the candidates; we do present the issues and their platform," Berry said.

ON INDUSTRY ISSUES, Berry said, Mesa has a committee which reviews them and decides the company's position.

"The company formed an operating committee. It's their job to review the information on specific issues and decide what stand, if any, the company will take and then explain why.

"For example, on the upcoming constitutional amendment election on Nov. 8, we will analyze each amendment for our employees. On the appropriate amendments we will take a stand and explain the company's position."

Berry said she must constantly monitor government activity at the state and national levels.

"We track industry legislation at the state level and in the U.S. Congress. We also track relevant business issues. When there is something important enough to bring to our employees, we do. For example, the Reagan tax cut; we encouraged our employees to write their congressmen on this issue because it was important to everyone. It didn't just affect one business or industry.

"Our contacts are industry organizations in each state where we have offices (Texas, Colorado and Kansas), and in Washington. One of our contacts is the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association. They have a national office that monitors our industry in Congress. They send out a weekly newsletter when the legistature is in session; and they send out bulletins when there's something of extra importance."

BERRY HAS BEEN pleased with the program's results.

"Our employees have been very receptive and glad to have someone to talk to about political issues. Also, they're glad to have someone who can help them with voter registration information when they move to a different county or state."

Causey added, "We've had a very positive response from our employees. We've also had a pretty good increase in the number of employees taking action since the program was created in 1980."

Causey said the program is strong because of management's commitment.

"I think the program is strong because of the encouragement it has received from management throughout Mesa. Management is simply encouraging everyone to be a good citizen. We should participate in government and make our feeling known. Politics affect the company and our everyday lives."

CAUSEY ALSO SAID no one is pressured into doing anything he or she doesn't believe in.

"This is an information-providing vehicle. We are not trying to pressure anyone. We are not telling people how to vote. We simply present the information and let them decide."

Ted Schmidt, division geophysicist and local program coordinator in Midland, is the force behind getting employees registered and voting.

"I do what ever it takes to help employees to know what's going on. I do encourage employees to be active in the political system. However, I think this should be an individual effort. Employees should not feel pressured to do anything if they dont want to."

Because of Mesa's strong commitment to the program, Causey said, they offer any assistance needed by employees and their families.

"We will do whatever we can to assist our employees in participating in the system. We will set aside time for them to vote and we will also provide transportation for the employee or their spouse if they do not have a way to the polls. We want to make sure that every employee, who wants to vote, is able to."

Causey said the program has been educational and a boost for him.

"IT HAS HELPED me. If you were going to try to find out everything about a bill in Congress, it would take a tremendous amount of time. This program presents the information in a concise way, which better helps me. It also reminds me of what I need to do."

Both Berry and Causey said the program doesn't present much information on Midland issues.

The reason, Causey said, is because "most people will be aware of local issues. This program concentrates on national and state issues. It would be impossible for our people to be on top of every local issue in all the cities where Mesa has offices."

As to whether or not their program has had an impact on political issues, Causey replied, "I hope it has; you always like to think it has. However, it is difficult to measure how much impact you have had on a particular issue. I do know that several times Mesa has made its position known to people in Washington and several of our employees testified at committee hearings."

Congressman Tom Loeffler of the 21st District said political awareness programs do make their presence known, and the political system is enhanced by efforts which encourage citizen interest and awareness in government.

"I am aware of and excited by the programs offered by many companies, including Mesa Petroleum. I have always felt such efforts provide a valuable service."

LOEFFLER ADDED, "Our nation benefits from those who understand, appreciate and participate in the governmental process."

Causey said, "It's the philosophy that Mesa is their company; and their company is affected not only by whether or not it makes a profit, but also by those outside forces such as in Washington or the state legislatures which have a bearing on the company. Therefore, employees have to be aware of this and they should express their opinion."

J&L is Satisfying North America's Needs for World-Class Quality Seamless Steel Pipe

"We built a unique, new seamless mill in Youngstown, Ohio, for two reasons: to meet the overseas challenge head-on, and to take the lead as America's top producer of world-class quality pipe"

David H. Hoag
President & Chief Executive Officer

Oil country and other industrial consumers of seamless steel pipe need no longer look overseas for tubular goods of world-class quality. They can order all they need "Made in U.S.A." from LTV's Jones & Laughlin Steel.

J&L was the first American producer to acknowledge and combat the inroads of foreign seamless shipments with actions louder than words. We put our money where our mouth is... over $60 millions worth.

Now we're ready to talk quality and delivery with you. Our new-from-the-bottom-up hot mill features the latest in seamless producing equipment...and high-technology quality and process controls...manned by trained, dedicated people.

Here are just a few of our reasons why you can buy world-class quality seamless standard and line, casing, tubing and drill pipe...much closer to home:

- OD sizes from 2⅜" through 14⅜" in a wide range of wall thicknesses
- Pipe tolerances consistently surpass API standards for over 1500 seamless tubular products
- Computer processing monitors and controls more than 450,000 operating variables
- Automatic, single groove plug mill establishes extremely close dimensional accuracies
- Two separate on-line nondestructive testings doublecheck every length through the mill
- IQCS (Integrated Quality Control System) statistically analyzes, refines or eliminates any variations affecting quality

J&L intends to become North America's leading source of world-class quality seamless steel pipe. Let's talk. Call 412-227-4000. Or write for the brochure describing our new mill; Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, 3 Gateway Center, Pittsburgh, PA 15263.

Comparing insurance makes good sense

If you have a need for any type of insurance, the best that you can do is compare. All insurances are not the same! Different policies offer different coverages at different prices. So how do you find the coverage best suited to your needs? Why call Olin Burnham at Burnham Insurance, of course!

Olin Burnham is an independent insurance agent, with 20 years of experience in the insurance field. Eighteen of those twenty years were dedicated to Farmer's Insurance. In December, 1981, Mr. Burnham retired from Farmer's Insurance and became an independent agent.

In his experience with insurance, Olin Burnham has given his best to find any small detail which would result in lower insurance rates. Burnham Insurance will find for you the best coverage available at the most affordable price possible.

Burnham Insurance agency represents all lines of insurance. These lines include automobile coverage, home owners insurance, mobile home coverage, life insurance and hospitalization.

You may qualify for as much as 20% deviation on automobile coverage. To find out if you qualify, give Olin Burnham a call today.Burnham Insurance Agency is always willing to compare and see if you can better the coverage of your present policy.

For those who are presently lacking in some area of insurance coverage, be it home, life, car, mobile home or hospitalization coverage, call Olin Burnham today. Mr. Burnham suggests that you shop for the best available insurance policy. Stop by Burnham Insurance Agency, located at the rear of 1802 West Wall in Midland.

Properly installed energy-efficient storm doors or windows from Midland Building Specialties will save you money time and time again through the years. Here, one of these windows is custom fit and professionally installed by Ed Stewart, Jr. Call Midland Building Specialties at 563-3013 or 683-2184 for a free estimate.

Affordable offices for independent businesses

Owning a small, independent business these days can simply be murder! With the state of the economy, it is extremely hard for any independent businessman to be successful. One of the main reasons for this difficult situation is that office space, like everything else, has gone sky-high. There are so many hidden costs for a small independent, it seems a hopeless case. Most go bankrupt within the first year.

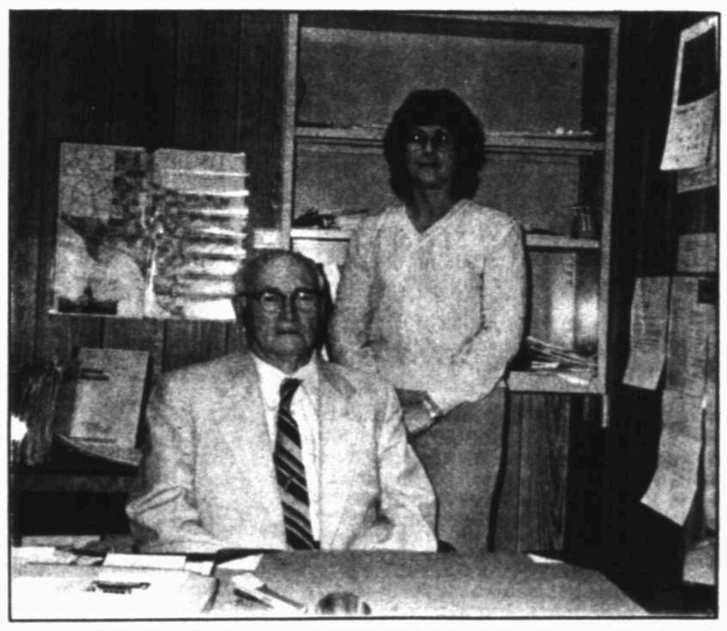
If you do presently own an independent business, or are planning one soon, you will need an office away from your home. What do you look for? Well, first, you need a place that is convenient to your customers as well as yourself. Next, you should find a place that offers good quality office/ warehouse space at a reasonable price. You should also consider your privacy and even the efficiency of the management where you lease your space. If you are in the process of looking for office or warehouse space, you need look only one place. Even if you are not actively hunting at the present time, you should compare your present location with what others have available. Once you compare, you will see that the perfect place for your business is the Midkiff Business Center, 1308 S. Midkiff in Midland.

The Midkiff Business Center brings to Midland a fresh new concept for both commercial offices and small retail space. The project covers over 77,000 square feet, and the available space is designed in such a manner as to be extremely flexible to meet almost any of your needs. The design is for independent businessmen like yourself who don't need an overly large amount of office or warehouse space, but prefer not to pay the prices of most Midland office complexes. The Midkiff Business Center is truly "The Independent Businessman's Address."

"The Independent Businessman's Address" presently has available several different sized units for both commercial and retail purposes. Midkiff Business Center realizes that each client is an individual and has individual needs. Accordingly, they provide professional management that cares about you and your business. Whether you own a small retail store, or commercial, or even a service-related business, you are treated as the individual you are by a truly professional and caring management. Come by today and see some of the different units available. Some of the commercial units even include outside storage.

Is the Midkiff Business Center really the place for you to operate your business from? Look at the numerous advantages offered to you if you lease from Midkiff Business Center. The location is very convenient to all parts of town, Interstate 20, Highway 80, and is only a short ten minute drive from Midland Regional Airport. The professional management truly cares about you and your individual needs for your business, something that is nearly impossible to find today. All units include a 10 x 10 overhead door, allowing easy access to the warehouse/ showroom space, or a place to park your company vehicle overnight. Each unit includes not only air conditioning, but also heating coils and even a private restroom. In addition, the water and office trash costs are included. But most convincingly, the Midkiff Business Center offer 6 month and 1 year leases at prices you can afford!

Both commercial and retail space is available still, but you had better hurry! The advantages of leasing from the Midkiff Business Center are so numerous, they may not last much longer. Call property manager Peggy Willmon today for your chance to see "The Independent Businessman's Address." The telephone number is 687-5043. Midkiff Business Center is located at the corner of Industrial and Midkiff in Midland. Calling Peggy Willmon today could well be the best investment you will make for your business all year!



Olin Burnham and secretary Shirley Doss invite you to compare the coverage and prices on insurance policies and choose the best coverage for the best price, because all policies are not the same! Call Burnham Insurance Agency at 682-5209, or go by 1802 W. Wall, in the rear.

MBS professionals beat winter cold

Cold weather is just around the corner, but there is still plenty of time to install custom fit storm windows and doors. Heating bills are going to be high, and it is a sure thing that these insulating techniques will save you money during the winter months ahead.

It makes good sense to save money and be comfortable at the same time. Midland Building Specialties custom fits all storm windows to insure a perfect fit. They offer a variety of frame colors as well as Ford Sunglass at no extra cost.

Midland Building Specialties also has both insulated replacement windows andinsulated replacement doors available to further increase your money savings. These are available in different styles and colors to suit your home's need as well.

And to go along with insulating your home, Midland Building Specialties can also help you with Rockwool brand insulation for your attic and walls. So for a free estimate, give them a call at 683-2184 or 563-3013, or stop by at 900 W. Front and see for yourself.

The staff at your local Kelly Services office is eagerly waiting to fill all of your temporary help needs. Branch manager Pam Paris(seated), Wilma Fulton(left), and Donna Pollard assure you of only the highest quality temporary help. Call Kelly Services today at 689-9801 or go by Imperial Shopping Center, Wadley at Midkiff in Midland.

Kelly Services--serving you in so many ways

You think of your business or organization as relatively self-sufficient when it comes to personnel and staffing matters. And most of the time, it is.

But there are always times when even the best-run operations need outside help– temporary assistance that's immediately available, experienced, and reliable. That's how we can assist. We're Kelly Services, and we're a leader in the temporary help field.

The help you need, when you need it

For nearly 40 years, Kelly Services has filled the needs of business in areas that were never dreamed of in the beginning. Today, the variety of our assignment may well surprise you.

Who we are and how we can help you

Kelly Services was founded in 1946 by William Russell Kelly in Detroit, Michigan. Originally known as Russell Kelly Office Service, we became known as Kelly Girl Service, Inc., in 1959. As we approached our full range of job classifications, going far beyond secretarial skills, we assumed the name of Kelly Services, Inc. in 1966.

Kelly Services is now the largest supplier of temporary office, clerical, and secretarial help in the United States– and a leader for all types of temporary help– with 475 offices throughout the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, and Europe.

Kelly Services is a single, publicly owned coroporation with uniform national bill and testing procedures. Kelly is only in the business of providing temporary services, and is in no way connected with a permanent employment agency.

Our full attention is given to testing, evaluating, and monitoring the quality of our Kelly people. We take pride in what we do! Whether your needs are half-a-day or a long term assignment, we take pride in the quality of our services.

Kelly is continually building on a reputation for reliability. If you are ever dissatisfied with one of our Kelly Service employees, you don't pay. And that's the way it has been since our beginnings in 1946.

Please feel free to come in and meet our staff. Pam Paris, branch manager, and Donna Pollard or Wilma Fulton will be glad to assist you with any of your temproary help problems. Call Kelly Services at 689-9801.

This is the time of the year for holidays. Over the next two months, there are three major holidays which will bring family members and friends from all over. Even if you only see your distant family members once each year, the time will likely be within the next two months. First comes Thanksgiving, a time of joy and time to give thanks for all of your blessings, especially family. Who can forget the Thanksgiving dinners? Next comes Christmas, another time to share with family members as well as close friends the true meaning of love and happiness. Then, but one week later, New Years Day rolls in bringing with it celebration and resolutions. With all of these festive occasions just around the corner, are you prepared to preserve your memories? The holiday season also brings about frustrations, such as forgetting your camera or film, having to wait for your film to be developed, and even film lost in the mail, whether it be your fault or the fault of the developing lab. But you can avoid these frustrations and preserve your memories of these festive occasions for a lifetime by putting your trust in Troy Davis Qwik One Hour Photo Service.

Even if you avoid the frustration of forgetting or losing your camera, forgetting your film, or having your batteries wear out, nobody likes to take a roll of film and then have to wait a week or more to get their pictures back. When you take a roll of film, you want to relive those wonderful times as soon as possible! Troy Davis Qwik Photo is open from 7am to 6pm, Monday through Saturday, and offers quick one hour processing from 9am to 5pm every day. They have only the latest and most modern equipment available, all of which are enclosed in a seperate, dust-proof room to keep the nasty West Texas dust from spoiling your memories. With over ten years continuous experience in film developing, you can rest assured that the job will be done right, every time!

Troy Davis Qwik Photo offers convenience, too. They offer the customer two drive-up windows for those who would care to just drop their film off quickly. They sell Kodak film for those who need it. You can save yourself further time and lots of money in the future by purchasing a VIP card. Call them or go by today to see how the VIP card works.

The employees at Troy Davis Qwik Photo not just friendly, they are well-qualified and experienced. They offer you the friendliest, fastest, best service available anywhere. You can get an instant passport photo at Troy Davis'. The staff is willing to sit down and discuss with you any questions about film or film processing you may have, and are willing to help in any way possible. It is almost impossible to find that kind of personal attention and genuine concern for the customer anywhere in today's world. At Troy Davis Qwik Photo, the customer truly comes first!

Before the holidays arrive and leave you wishing you had film or a new camera, remember Troy Davis Qwik Photo. They offer not only the best service and equipment available, but also the personal attention that you deserve. You are assured of a job well-done every time! Troy Davis Qwik Photo is located across from Gibsons at 3102 W. Cuthbert, or call 689-0761. Come by today and relive some of the most precious moments of your life.

Troy Davis, owner of Troy Davis Qwik Photo Service, offers his customers the best in friendly, personal service, and quality film processing. Go by 3102 W. Cuthbert (across from Gibsons) or call 689-0761 today.

BOTTOM LINES

Parallel Petroleum Corp., a Midland-based independent oil and gas company, reported a positive operating cash flow of $133,917, or $.33 per share for the first nine months ending Sept. 30; compared with a negative operating cash flow of $74,124, or $.20 per share for the same nine month period last year. The company also reported a net loss of $153,170, or $.038 per share, compared to a net loss of $565,580, or $.150 per shre for the respective nine month periods of 1983 and 1982.

Oil and gas sales during the first nine months of 1983 were $390,075, an increase of 22 percent, as compared to $319,675 for the same 1982 period. Total costs and expenses during the first nine months of 1983 were $824,596, a reduction of $462,598, or 36 percent as compared to the same 1982 period.

Frank S. Delay, president, said Parallel has continued to maintain its strong financial position with a working capital of $803,440 and no debt.

Delay said Parallel's current inventory of 14 internally generated oil prospects provides the planned opportunity to participate in the dilling of 32 wells through December 31, 1984, of which 28 are classified as development and four exploratory. The total cost to drill and complete the 32 wells is approximately $21 million, of which joint venture participation of approximately $18 million, or 85 percent, has been committed by oil and gas industry partners and investors.

Parallel's share of such activity is projected to be $2,156,000. The company said their share will be funded through a private equity offering. With respect to this offering, Delay emphasized that Parallel does not require equity for debt service or overhead; the Company has no short — or long-term debt and overhead is covered by operating cash flow.

Texas American Energy Corporation (AMEX Symbol TAE) recently annouced it had completed a private placement of $11 million worth of First Mortgage Bonds, Series 1, with an institutional investor.

The placement was arranged by the firm of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Inc. and the purchaser was Aetna Life Insurance Co. The proceeds were used to reduce the bank debt of Western Kentucky Gas Co., a division of Texas American Energy. The division's available bank credit has also been reduced to $13 million. The bonds have a 15-year maturity and a 10-year average life with an interest rate of 13.75 percent and are secured by the utility's property, plant and equipment. This is the first long-term financing by the utility since 1976.

• • •

Alta Energy Corp. recently announced a significant increase in the company's proved reserves of oil and natural gas for the 1983 fiscal year.

Alta's oil reserves increased by 101 percent from 116,700 to 334,500 barrels of oil. Gas reserves went from 1,888 to 1,933 MMcf. Overall, the increases represent a 36 percent increase over last year on an equivalent barrel basis.

During the year, Alta drilled 24 wells with a 79 percent success ratio and purchased working interests in 30 wells. This high drilling success ratio reflects Alta's conservative philosophy of concentrating primarily on close-in drilling. The company's 1983 activity increased total revenues by 36 percent from $1,052,476 to $1,430,990, and resulted in a total net income of $27,130.

AMARILLO — Pioneer Corp.'s third quarter income from continuing operations amounted to $19.2 million, or $.51 per share, the Amarillo-based energy resources corporation reported recently.

Revenues for the quarter, which ended Sept. 30, were $272.6 million.

Comparable figures for a year ago were income from continuing operations of $26.5 million, or $.72 per share, from revenues of $303.4 million.

The reported figures give effects to a spin-off to the Pioneer shareholders of Energas Co., formerly a division of Pioneer, on Oct. 18.

Pioneer's net income for the third quarter this year was $18.6 million, or $.50 per share, compared with $26.1 million, or $.71 per share, a year ago.

For the first nine months of 1983, Pioneer reported income from continuing operations of $58.1 million, or $1.55 per share, from revenues of $780 million. The comparable figures for 1982 were income from continuing operations of $43.9 million, or $1.19 per share, from revenues of $835.2 million.

This year's net income for nine months was $60.2 million, or $1.61 per share, compared with $42.9 million, or $1.16 per share, in the same period of 1982.

Computation of net income and net income per share for the nine-month period last year included a special charge to provide for uranium losses. Without that charge, Pioneer would have reported net income of $72.6 million, or $1.96 per share, for the first nine months of 1982.

Pioneer also announced that its board of directors declared an increased quarterly dividend of $.31 per share, an increase of $.02 per share over the prior quarter. That dividend will be paid Dec. 2 to stockholders of record Nov. 17.

HOUSTON — United Energy Resources Inc. recently reported an unaudited consolidated net loss of $18 million, or $0.65 per share, on revenues of $844 million for the third quarter of 1983. The results included a previously announced write-down of its exploration and production subsidiary's oil and gas properties which reduced net income by $35 million, or $1.26 per share. The third quarter 1983 results compare with net income of $41 million, or $1.46 per share, on revenues of $1.3 billion for the third quarter of 1982.

New England energy rich

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Serivce

WASHINGTON — New England appears to have abundant supplies of energy for the next decade, officials all over the region agree.

But they also qualify their upbeat mood in two ways: There is widespread uncertainty about how much that energy will cost, and there is lingering fear the supply scenario could be disrupted by regulatory agency problems or an international incident.

Still, 10 years after the Arab oil embargo severely disrupted the region and the nation with supply shortages and engendered widespread fear, energy prospects for the six states for the next 10 years emerge as decidedly strong.

"I don't see, and I don't think anybody else sees, any panic situation up here at all," said John M. Lindley Jr., executive vice president of the Associated Industries of Vermont. "Things look good," added Nancy Wentzel, senior planner for the Maine Office of Energy Resources.

"I see no natural gas supply problems for the next five to 10 years," maintained Edward F. Burke, chairman of the Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission.

"There are adequate supplies of electricity," said Bradford S. Chase, Connecticut undersecretary for energy.

THEIR CONFIDENCE STEMS from 10 years of largely successful efforts to both increase and secure the region's energy supplies.

"There are two significant things you can do," said Frank G. Zarb, federal energy administrator between 1974 and 1977. "You can produce more domestic supply and reduce consumption."

In New England, significant steps have been taken to do both, and those steps are the basis for the promise so many of the region's energy officials see.

The majority of New England's homes use oil, and over the next 10 years, that is not likely to change much, even though wood, solar heating and other alternatives have become popular.

"There's no way to push oil out of our economy," said Joseph Belanger, director of the Connecticut energy office's research and policy division.

THOSE CLOSE TO THE situation sense two trends. First, people have become acclimated, however grudgingly, to cooler indoor temperatures. Over the past six years, the Independent Connecticut Petroleum Association, which distributes 80 percent of the state's heating oil, estimates the average household is using about one-third less of its product.

"The reason is not patriotism," said Charles S. Isenberg, the group's executive vice president. "People learned to live with lower temperatures."

The other trend involves equipping homes and businesses with more fuel-efficient equipment. Isenberg pointed to technological improvements that could have a dramatic effect on oil consumption, notably a computer-controlled burner. that could be programmed to heat a single room of the house, or go on at a certain hour. Experts think such a device could be mass-marketed by the decade's end, if not sooner.

The price outlook is murkier. Isenberg pointed out that prices are down thus far this year, and said that he thought costs would be stable for some time to come.

But Maine's Wentzel saw increases slightly outpacing the rate of inflation. "Later in the decade supplies will grow tighter," she said. "And there will be some increase in international demand."

Supplies of natural gas may be most promising of all because two plans to bring Canadian natural gas into the region are pending.

One would bring in gas from western Canada through Niagara Falls. Some would come into the area in 1984, with more due in 1986.

EQUALLY PROMISING IS a pipeline that would run from Nova Scotia's Sable Island down through northern New England.

John French, director of regulatory and governmental affairs for Nova Scotia Resources Ltd., one of the natural gas producers, estimated the fuel would start flowing by 1987.

"We think it will provide a secure, long-term supply," he said. "You (New England) will be at the start of the supply line, not the end." Most natural gas now comes to the region from the deep South.

Before any natural gas comes down from Canada, though, there are regulatory mountains to conquer. And a 337-mile pipeline must be built in the United States.

"If we can get all the things sorted out and the necessary regulatory approvals, there should be no supply problems," said Robert H. Willis, chairman and chief executive officer of Connecticut Natural Gas Corp.

"But if we run into regulatory delays, I expect the gas bubble in the lower 48 states to disappear by 1985."

THE PRICE OF the natural gas is uncertain. It is expected that the natural gas from Canada would be competitively priced, but few know what that price might be. The industry is in the midst of price turmoil, since deregulation has gradually been taking effect.

"A lot depends on the national policy on natural gas," Chase said.

Before the Arab oil embargo, utilities simply assumed electric consumption would increase at a 7 percent annual rate. That changed abruptly.

Between 1974 and 1983, the annual growth rate was just 2.2 percent, and officials of the New England Power Pool, which controls 99 percent of the area's generating capacity, expect that pace to continue for 10 years.

They also say there are still more conservation measures that can be used.

"There are still a lot of things you can do," said William Golding, assistant director in the New Hampshire Governor's Energy Office. "Just look at the amount of incandescent lights around. You don't need them."

HE SUGGESTED INSTEAD "task lighting," like a work light over a person's desk, instead of an overhead light above the entire work space.

Second, as long as people think electric rates are high, they will cut back.

"I doubt people will go back to their old ways," said William B. Ellis, chairman and chief executive officer at Northeast Utilities. "It's not just a principle. It's a matter of price."

With usage remaining stable, observers are confident supplies will be more than sufficient. Fueling their belief is the upcoming arrangement with Hydro-Quebec of Canada.

On March 22, agreements were signed that will allow the New England Power Pool's 64 utilities to import an estimated 33 billion kilowatt hours of Canadian power beginning in 1986.

The Canadian pact should help curb price increases. Power pool officials think consumers will save about $100 million in 1987 and as much as $350 million by 1995.

BUT UNTIL 1987, the price news is expected to be less encouraging. At Northeast Utilities, for instance, "We expect prices to exceed the rate of inflation between now and 1987," said Michael J. London, system news representative.

The utility wants to phase in the cost of the Millstone III nuclear-power plant during that period.

Most officials are not optimistic about more widespread use of wood, solar and other non-traditional energy sources.

Solar seems to have most promise for consumers as a way of heating water, some said..

"We'll see an effective competition between solar and electric hot water," said Belanger. But he and others agreed anything else may not be attractive to consumers yet, since it would not show an obvious cost benefit.

Wood poses a different set of problems. One is price. As Belanger put it, "Unless you buy wood for under $100 a cord, oil is cheaper."

THE OTHER IS PRCATICAL. "Wood is not convenient," Isenberg noted. It has to be cut, or at least carried. Even Susan O'Rourke, communications director of the Wood Heating Alliance, a Chicago-based industry group, said, "Wood takes a particular kind of personality."

Despite the increased conservation, many officials still have a a nagging fear that the region could be blindsided by something they have no control over.

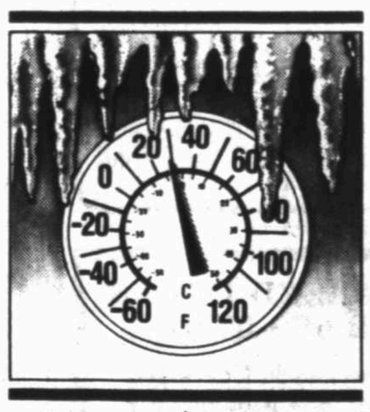
The country's dependence on foreign sources has not changed that much in the last 10 years. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, imports accounted for 33.4 percent of U.S. consumption in 1982, compared to 36.1 percent in 1973.

Willis, who serves on the New England Council's energy committee, said, "I'll give you 10-to-1 odds there will be a blowup in the Mideast in the next five years and it will have an impact on New England."

If it does, he said, "We'll be only slightly better off than we were 10 years ago. We have potential to do the right things, but (federal energy) policy is moving very slowly."

"We still have an energy problem and will continue to," Chase said. "Our greatest risk is that we won't learn from the past."

Easy ways to save.



When the temperature starts to drop, here's what you can do to help hold down your heating bills and save money. Set your thermostat at 68° or lower.

Remember, the lower you set your thermostat during the winter, the lower your electric bill will be. At night and when you're going to be away, set it at 55° or lower. Open drapes during the day to let sunlight in, and close them at night to help hold in warm air.

These easy ways to save can help you use less energy this winter. And you can learn more ways to help hold down your electric bill — winter and summer — with a TIPS booklet from Texas Electric. For your copy call us or ask for it on the comments section of your electric bill.

Plans to sell China technology delayed

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PEKING — U.S. plans to sell China more advanced technology have been seriously delayed by Chinese unwillingness to guarantee how that technology will be used, American businessmen said recently.

Peking has balked at Washington's terms barring the transfer of sensitive technology to other countries, such as North Korea, and requiring periodic inspection to ensure that sophisticated equipment, such as high-speed computers, is still being used for the civilian purposes for which it was sold and has not been converted to military use.

The Reagan administraion, in a major bid to improve Sino-American relations offered six months ago to liberalize the restrictions imposed on the sale of high-tech products to China. The administration is dismayed by the prolonged deadlock, according to American businessmen here, and it now feels somewhat betrayed by Chinese efforts to change the terms.

The focus of the dispute is a required exchange of letters between China and the United States confirming the conditions that will govern American exports of advanced technology. Without such Chinese guarantees the liberlization cannot go into full effect.

Although the Chinese say they are still reviewing the U.S. terms and are continuing to request "clarifications," which some American sources describe as "further U.S. concessions," American officials here said that they remain convinced that the United States will receive the necessary Chinese assurances before long.

"China has accepted, certainly in principle, the conditions under which this technology will be available," a U.S. official said, "and presumably it eventually will also accept them in fact, simply because it would be in China's interest to do so."

Peking, however, sees serious questions of Chinese sovereignty at issue, and nothing is taken more seriously here than sovereignty.

China opposes "out of principle" any agreement for on-site inspection, Chinese sources said. Similarly, it believes strongly that, having purchased advanced know-how or equipment, it ought to be able to refine, develop and sell products stemming from it without getting further permission from the United States.

China is also pressing hard, businessmen said, to get a full exemption from the review procedures of Cocom, the coordinating committee set up in the West to monitor exports to Communist countries.

Even under the liberalized U.S. export regulations, which become the basic guidelines among the Western allies, Chinese purchases of advanced technology would continue to be scrutinized by Cocom. Peking is demanding that Washington get it a full exemption as a "friendly, non-allied country," according to business sources here.

If Peking linked that question formally to its acceptance of U.S. terms for technology exports, the whole matter could be delayed for months and probably more than a year because of the number of countries involved, Western diplomats warned, acknowledging at the same time that the issue is crucial to China.

In their discussions with Chinese officials, Reagan administration representatives have stressed that the U.S. conditions are no more stringent, in practice, than those written into Chinese contracts with U.S. companies over the past five years.

The fact that they will now be confirmed by an official government guarantee appears to matter a great deal to Peking, however, and the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade are both understood to be insisting that the other sign the agreement if, in the end, it must be signed.

Essentially, the liberalization would do two things. First, the levels of technology China may buy in seven sensitive areas, including computers, microcircuits, instruments with built-in microcomputers and equipment to manufacture semiconductors, would be raised significantly. Second, the procedures for licensing such exports would be greatly simplified.

The prolonged dispute could affect further U.S. efforts to liberalize export controls, American businessmen here fear, and U.S. oil industry representatives are planning to press the Reagan Administration soon for blanket authorization for technology transfer in their field as part of the American participation in the search for offshore oil here.
