FROM THE OLD WORLD.

(Concluded.)

timate of its value by the exaggerated price named, readily offers one-half the figure, and it is her property. She boasts of her bargain, and he of a sale of twice the price in the shops of Malta.

The women of Malta wear a peculiar headdress, called a faldetta, that is invariably black and shaped like a sun bonnet with one side extended into a very large, stiff loop, and reaching to the waist on the loop side and the back. Only one-tenth of the people can read and write, and this to the shame of England, who in the past hundred years has spent a hundred millions on her fortifications and hardly a farthing on the education of her wards. The law permits the marriage of children and it is frequently the case that parents have large families before they are themselves 21 years of age. The prevailing ignorance, the great density of population and early marriages contribute to an infant mortality that is appalling. The Roman Catholic is practically the only religion that has a foothold on the island, and it is said that in this church there are 2,000 clergy, or one to every twenty families.

Every city in or on the Mediterranean is full of places of interest to the antiquarian, and Malta has its share in proportion to its size. Besides those mentioned there are Phonecian temple ruins 4,000 years old, Roman villas and tombs, and any amount of relics of the chivalric days of the Knights. The church of St. John is one of the most remarkable in Europe. Its half a thousand marble monuments to the knights, its many curious emblems of their days of chivalry, its 450 years of age, its rich decorations, make it a place of great interest. But in the event these, its attributes and contents, are not sufficient to arouse the interest of the traveler surfeited, as I confess I have been, on cathedrals and relics and ruins, St. Johns has four priceless treasures that make it a place of supreme concern.

In a chapel, under lock and key, is a thorn from the Savior's crown, stones with which Stephen was slain, and some of the bones of the apostles. Must I accept this? I tried hard. Oh, shade of the lamented Ananias, help my incredulity. The fact that no one has taken the trouble to refute the claim establishes their genuiness beyond a doubt. Of course it does. And there, too, is the right hand of John the Baptist, a little worse for wear, but still wonderfully preserved. On a finger of the cadaver there was once a diamond ring which the great herald of Christianity was supposed to have worn. When this bit of information was vouchsafed by the guide my faith shook like a reed. John the Baptist in camel's hair clothing and living on a fare of locust and honey—John the Baptist wearing a diamond ring! I could not accept it. I do not charge anybody with deception, but there is a mistake somewhere, that is all. When Napoleon captured the city in 1800 he took the diamond from the finger and threw the withered hand aside in disgust, exclaiming, "Keep the carrion." And they kept it.

But there is yet a more startling apartment in this remarkable edifice, a chapel with walls and ceiling lined with grinning human skulls. They are not placed at random but arranged with artistic skill and care in all sorts of designs, shaped into full framed skeletons that leer at you with startling and ghastly good smiles, in curves and [illegible] forming windows and [illegible] In the world, civilized [illegible] there is not such a [illegible] palling spectacle. In [illegible] the monks, not for decency, [illegible] almost as horrible, for the bodies of all the monks of Malta lie there unburied, in the various dried and twisted stages of decay without decomposition, and wearing the cloaks they wore in life. A story is told of a young man who playfully pinned the dress of a lady to one of these cloaks, and when she moved the skeleton seemed to rise and follow her. The shock destroyed her reason.

But all these superstitions and follies are partially offset by the splendid frugal habits of the people. Education will in time remove these horrible nightmares. Let us think of that day rather than of poor Malta's present moral and mental plight. Let us dwell on the marvelous pluck of her people, upon her illustrious past, upon her commerce amounting to $5,000,000 annually, upon the pleasing fact that in her saving banks, where the inhabitants deposit their earnings, there is $20 for each of them, even the babies, and all this earned off bleak, rocky hillsides that would not support a goat in Texas, and which it would be impudent to offer for sale there at any price.

Farewell, Malta, with thy crazy streets, with thy darling, delecate, woolly dogs and dove-coated, soft-eyed cats; thy ethereal lace and smart tradesmen, and wilderness of rocks and commerce of sacred frauds. Hail, lovely, historic Athens, with thy marble ruins and glorious past.

When I entered into the Millinery Business on my own account I had reason to suppose that my long experience as a buyer in Eastern Markets would qualify me to place before my friends and patrons such ELABORATE and EXCLUSIVE DESIGES in up-to-date MILLINERY that I could reasonably expect much consideration from them. Such expectations have been more than realized. ARTISTIC CREATIONS have had the stamp of approval placed upon them by the people. Such approval warrants me in allowing the very newest things to arrive daily.

I WILL CATER TO THE WANTS OF ALL and nothing will be considered TOO NEW or MODISH for the people of Baird and Callahan County.

Fruit Is Killed In The El Paso Country.

Not only did the valley north of El Paso suffer from the cold of the last few nights, but below the city there was also suffering.

The alfalfa has all been nipped and the first crop will be short. The grape vines have been killed entirely, and it is believed that most of the fruit has been ruined.

The grapes were a little premature, it is said, and will come out again in due time if the frostbitten vines are clipped off, but the first cutting of alfalfa is going to be short and the fruit crop will likely be curtailed a great deal if not wholly ruined by the cold.

The freeze came both Thursday and Friday night, and was rather more severe Friday night than the night previous. Saturday morning there was ice and plenty of it in the horse troughs and on the fields in the water that had been spread over the ground for irrigating. What the freeze did not kill, the frost did.—Barstow Journal.

REVIVAL MEETING.

Beginning on the 4th Sunday in April, Union prayer services will be held in the different churches, alternating from night to night, until the first Sunday in May, when Rev. Adair, the converted Policeman of Dallas, with his noted singer, will be with us, and take charge of the services. Rev. Adair is one of the leading Evangelists of the state, having held some of the best meetings ever held by any one. Hissinger is one of the best choiristers to be found, his leadership in song and praise will be a blesssing to us all.

The revival will be conducted under a large tent, erected near the Court House. All denominations are urged to co-operate in this the greatest effort ever put forth in Baird for the salvation of the lost. We will have to meet the record of this meeting at the judgement bar of God. May we count on you to do your duty, in this, the most needy effort of our town and community. Let each and every one commence now to get ready for this great Spiritual uplift. Let us adjust all our affairs to the meeting and not the meeting to our affairs.

We are now meeting each week in union prayer services and union services each Sabbath night, hoping and praying for a great Revival.

Letter to J. B. Harmon. Baird, Texas.

Dear Sir: If we sell Devoe to paint your town, your road won't have so much freight to handle.

It takes 10 gallons to paint a fair-size house, and that house won't want painting again for 5 or 10 years That's true in a way; but people, you know, rather like fresh paint, and paint for nothing but looks sometimes.

That house would take 12 or 13 gallons of almost any other paint than Devoe and would have to be painted again in half that time. Ten years is a very long time for a paint to wear: and five isn't short.

Which makes the most freight, a 10 or 20-gallon paint? 5 or 10 year-paint? But the 10-gallon paint is the 10-year; and the 20-gallon paint is the 5-year paint. Which makes the most freight?

Ask your paint-dealer which he'd rather sell, and which he could sell most of. Ask your painter which he'd rather paint; whether good or bad paint is good for his business; which is good paint, the 10 or 15-gallon paint; which pays most wages Which will youbuy yourself, the 10-gallon 20-year, or 20-gallon 5-year paint?

Yours truly
