MISD juggles extra administrative salaries

Editor's note: This is the first of a two-part series on salaries and benefits of top executives, directors and other administrators of the Midland Independent School District.

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

At a time when enrollment is dipping and the state is mandating at least a two-cent tax break for school districts, the Midland Independent School District will be heading into the fall semester with two more employees in its central office than it apparently thought it would have.

The first overlap is between the $77,000 position of Agreed Judgment director, Jane Carrens — whose retirement this summer was supposed to facilitate creation of the $70,000 executive director of communications services position currently held by Barney Welch.

Administrators had told the board of trustees when it approved Welch's appointment 6-1 in February that Mrs. Carrens would be retiring at the end of June.

Now officials say she will be staying on half-time, receiving half her usual paycheck, possibly until the end of the fall 1999 semester.

In addition, at Tuesday's board meeting, trustees approved an $81,000 annual contract beginning Aug. 1 for Milton Evitt, future replacement for Larry Lusby as executive director of computer and pupil services.

FOR SALE: In good neighborhood, one slightly used oil refinery...

U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram
Officials with Fina Oil and Chemical announced Thursday that the Big Spring refinery will be sold because Fina is merging with a French company that has no interest in the refining aspect of the industry.

Fina announces plan to sell Big Spring refinery

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Fina Oil and Chemical officials announced Thursday that the Big Spring refinery will be getting a new sign — a "for sale" sign.

Fina Vice President Jeff D. Morris said that contrary to public belief, the sale of the facility stems from a change in company direction, not the failing economy.

"We are being acquired, or merging with the French oil company Total," Morris said. "They want to move away from the refining aspect of the oil business, and concentrate more on the petrochemical side of the industry."

Morris said every effort is being made by Fina's corporate officials to make sure the sale of the refinery will be a profitable and stable one for the community, as well as the more than 300 people who work at the facility.

"We are going through a West Boston banking firm (for) the sale of the refinery and its facilities," Morris said. "They are a really good company, and I don't think people should get the wrong idea. This doesn't mean the refinery will be closing — just that it will be changing ownership.

"We are taking every possible step right now to make sure the sale of the Big Spring refinery works to the good of the community, as well as the employees," he said.

No buyers have yet come forward.

"Right now, we don't have any particular buyers to look at," Morris said. "We hope to begin showing the facility this summer, and have a buyer lined up and ready to finalize by the end of the year."

Big Spring refinery manager Steve Weber said the biggest misconception among local employees and residents is that the refinery will soon be closing their doors.

"We don't currently have any programs or plans moving to prepare for a closure" Weber said. "There have been a lot of rumors flying around, both recently and in the War in Kosovo leaves Midland residents both haunted and relieved

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

What may be called the Kosovo War, now apparently drawing to a peaceful conclusion and to an Allied victory over Yugoslavian President Slobodan Milosevic's forces, is leaving some Midlanders distressed and relieved.

"There is always going to be a controversy," said Roberto E. Banda, a 53-year-old disabled Vietnam War Marine Corps veteran.

"We were right to be there to liberate people from the atrocities that are occurring (in Kosovo)," reasoned Banda, an early-childhood coordinator in Midland Independent School District and a former principal and teacher.

Tonight, for the first time in 79 days, the skies over Yugoslavia are silent. ... We have achieved a victory for a safer world, for our democratic values and for a stronger America.
—President Bill Clinton

He noted America's decision-makers, primarily President Clinton, apparently were putting principle before national interest in trying to halt the "ethnic cleansing" of ethnic Albanians in Kosovo by Serb military forces and police.

Banda, who in 1968 and 1969 was helicopter gunner and sergeant in Vietnam, had left the dangers of combat flying to ground duty when he, near Da Nang on Marble Mountain just 15 days "from coming home," was severely injured by rocket and mortar fire.

✔ NATO suspends attacks/7A
✔ Refugees return home/10A

Although there were no American or NATO combat deaths in the Kosovo air war, thousands of Serb ground soldiers in tanks and afoot were killed and wounded by the airstrikes, which also killed or injured innocent civilians.

"Any time there is any death, I get very emotional because I've seen it," Banda said. "I lost a lot of brothers — Marine brothers, service brothers" — in Vietnam.

"It hurts. It hurts more so when there are so many Vietnam brothers" who were killed and wounded and others, whole in body, suffered grievously in spirit.

"What angers me the most about all of this is having a government that commits the young, brave servicemen and servicewomen to action such as this and then they want to do away with the benefits that they promised to take care of. They promised to take care of the individuals" who fought in war.

In the Kosovo War, "We lost no one in combat,"

Graves says ex-boyfriend killed toddler

By Rick López
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Cynthia Jolynn Graves testified Thursday that she now blames the death of her 2-year-old son on the man she once trusted.

Ms. Graves, 23, is on trial this week on capital murder charges stemming from the Nov. 19, 1995, beating death of her son, Bradon Graves.

She testified that even after the child died, she continued to see Carlos Cain Hinojos, now 23.

"He was a big source of comfort for me. I wasn't getting that at home at the time," she testified Thursday.

For two years, she believed he was innocent, she said.

Odessa police testified that Hinojos was initially suspected of sexually assaulting the child; who before his death, suffered visible injuries to his colon and other internal organs.

Hinojos was arrested a few days after the child's death. However, medical examiners could not find hair or body fluids on the child; therefore, the charges were dismissed, prosecutors said.

Weeks after his arrest, Hinojos and Ms. Graves reconciled and eventually had two children together.

She alternated between staying at his Odessa apartment and liv-

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Stanton's 20th Old Sorehead Trade Days this weekend will feature more than 350 vendors bearing goods and wares from "antiques to wearable art to Beanie Babies," according to Brenda Kaye Kendall, Trade Days promoter.

The event, which has been held thrice yearly in April, June and October since 1993, is held from sunrise to sunset Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Among the Trade Days entertainment this weekend will be the fiddling of 12-year-old Aaron Mingus, the 1999 Texas Junior State Champion Fiddler, of Lovington, N.M.

"We've got all kinds of great entertainment," Mrs. Kendall said.

The event will feature food courts, including one operated by the Martin County Senior Citizens whose food fare traditionally includes home-made ice cream. "They do it up right," Mrs. Kendall said.

Trade Day, co-sponsored by the Martin County Chamber of Commerce and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's Community Development Committee, is in downtown Stanton and the Martin County Community Center.

"What's God Got To Do With It?"
It was the shot that no one expected with 4 seconds on the clock. New York Knicks power forward Larry Johnson launched a long 3 pointer that seemed to be radar controlled. Right in the basket! Later, his interview with sportscasters began and ended with, "all praise be to Allah!" The next day, Bob Page, TV sports commentator asks, "what has God, or Allah (the Islamic name for God) got to do with it?"
Here's the heart of the question. Is God really concerned with the outcome of the NBA playoffs, and choosing the winners? Yes, He does know about little things such as those pesty sparrows at the bird feeder, and items as small as the hairs on your head! Matthew 10:29, 30. But is the "prayer line" first-come, first-served for our own whims and deals?
I doubt it. God's ultimate goal? "Who desires all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth." I Timothy 2:4. Once we accept the gift of salvation, our job is to share it. Matthew 28: 18-20. We can ask for anything, but He responds "according to His will." I John 5:14. Our business may be earthly success. But God is in the "soul" business!

FAMILY TOGETHERNESS

Dorothy Zimmerman of Midland was recently hostess to three women from across the state.

Ruth Crisp of Nacogdoches and Ms. Zimmerman have maintained a correspondence and a friendship for many years. Although they have talked about a visit, the trip did not materialize until this summer.

After deciding to visit Ms. Zimmerman in Midland, Ms. Crisp invited her niece, Billie Gordon of Beaumont, to go with her. On their way to Midland, the two women went to the farm home of Ms. Crisp's sister-in-law, Oneta Langston, who lives near Lamesa. There they picked up Ms. Langston and brought her to Midland with them.

The three women, with their hostess, visited the Petroleum Museum, Midland International Airport and the cemetery where Ms. Zimmerman's husband, James, is interred.

But most of all they talked and visited with each other. And during those talks, one of them mentioned having a grandparent named Teague who had lived in Nacogdoches long ago.

One by one, the others said that they too had family members named Teague in their backgrounds.

As their family stories unfolded, these four women discovered that — even though before the recent trip to Midland, they had never met — they are related.

Ms. Zimmerman said of the trip and the visit — and the discovery of their relationships: "It was a wonderful day!"

MISD: Baressi says need has changed since January

(From 1A)

Lusby's annual salary is about $85,700, but he will not be retiring until the end of December.

That means MISD will be paying almost $69,500 over the first five months of the school year for two employees in a single position.

How does the district — reportedly on a shoestring budget this coming year — plan on carrying the extra staff load?

"We are reallocating resources in the existing budget," said Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr.

Baressi said Mrs. Carrens' salary will come out of Agreed Judgment funds currently available.

"The net effect there of that overlap is zero on the budget," he said.

As for the computer and pupil services position, Baressi said the money should come out of the technology expenditure.

And if that money proves not to be there when the district determines its budget this summer? There are always reserves, say officials.

"In a typical year, you want a balanced budget or have a little left over at the end of the year. But there are cases where we use reserves for special purposes," said Art Martin, executive director of business services. The district currently has a little over $17 million in reserves, about $14 million in cash.

But even if reallocation or reserve money will suffice, some may question why the overlap is necessary in the first place.

For the Agreed Judgment director, Baressi said the fact that a hearing in the school district's desegregation case has not yet occurred is a factor.

"The Agreed Judgment hearing hasn't happened yet, and Mrs. Carrens is instrumental in preparing for that," Baressi said.

But administrators knew at the beginning of the year, when Mrs. Carrens still was slated to retire this summer, that a hearing probably would occur after her exit.

Baressi pointed out that the district is spending only about 5.5 percent of its total instructional costs on central administration — about half the state standard of 11 percent.

In a previous interview with the Reporter-Telegram in January, Baressi said he thought Mrs. Carrens' duties leading up to a hearing could be absorbed by other administrators. "I think we're pretty well along on it (the Agreed Judgment), and the reporting mechanisms are in place," he said at the time.

But now, with the potential for a hearing on the bilingual education program emerging as an "added burden," Baressi claims the attitude has changed.

"I would expect that she would be one of our major witnesses (in a hearing) as well," Baressi said.

Lusby's and Evitt's overlap is partly because of the need to train the new employee and enlist assistance in preparing for the Y2K problem in the district's computers. Baressi said administration also wanted Evitt there while the district was in the process of replacing its mainframe computer with a different system.

"We wanted the new person to be on the ground floor with that," said Baressi.

This past school year, a total of $12,304,312 was budgeted toward payroll for instructional, school and general administration.

The budgeted amount was higher than the $8,478,759 set aside the previous year, because of a 2.5 percent pay increase for administrators and other factors, said Martin.

Officials expect the budgeted amount for salaries to go up slightly this year because of the overlap, but are not saying one way or the other whether administrators will receive a pay raise as well.

"We're not sure we're going to have any money for it," Baressi said.

Baressi pointed out that the district is spending only about 5.5 percent of its total instructional costs on central administration — about half the state standard of 11 percent.

Saturday: What are the perks?

TRIAL: Graves was flattered by attention Hinojos gave Bradon

(From 1A)

ing at her parents' house in Stanton. Since 1995, she has worked at several businesses in Midland.

Ms. Graves and Hinojos began dating since July 1995, she testified.

"From the beginning, I told him that I had a little boy, and told him that if he had a problem with that, he had to let me know," Ms. Graves said. "He said, 'I love little boys.'"

In old love letters read to the jury Thursday, Ms. Graves told Hinojos that his attention was flattering, but was most flattered with the fact that he liked spending time with Bradon.

She describes the difficulties of being a single mother, and told Hinojos that his assistance in taking care of the child "was like taking a load off my back."

She apologized to Hinojos for never formally asking him if he was ready to take on such a responsibility. So many times, Ms. Graves wrote, she took advantage of the fact that Hinojos would baby-sit Bradon and run errands for her.

"I'll never leave you, if you don't give me a reason to," Ms. Graves wrote.

Last year, her ex-boyfriend's story began to crumble, she said.

"He said he put Bradon in bed, and heard him rustle around ... then he wasn't breathing. The next thing he knew, they were in the hospital," Ms. Graves testified.

When the couple was indicted in November, Ms. Graves discovered for the first time:

■ Bradon died from a gash in his colon, which allowed fecal matter to seep into his bloodstream and slowly poisoned him to death. Doctors originally blamed Bradon's death on a birth defect, but his autopsy revealed otherwise.

■ The next day, police seized bloody towels and clothing from Hinojos' apartment, which she didn't see before she left for work at 3:30 p.m. Odessa police testified that they never conducted blood analysis on the items.

■ Bradon was taken to the hospital covered in bruises — most of them on his back and buttocks. He only had a few on his arms and legs the last time Ms. Graves saw him. He got those at a restaurant's playground, Ms. Graves said.

"You're accused of throwing Bradon against the wall. Did you do that?" asked defense attorney Tom Morgan.

"No," Ms. Graves replied, biting her upper lip in an effort to muffle her sobs.

"When was the last time you had contact with your child?"

"When I left to work, he was sitting on the couch. I kissed his head and told him I was going to work and would see him a little bit later."

"When was the next time you got to hold him?"

"After he died."

"How do you feel about Cain at the moment?"

"I despise him."

"Why?"

"Because he killed my son. No doubt about it."

Several witnesses testified Thursday that Hinojos was a handsome and charismatic man who left a good impression on anyone who met him.

"He's a charmer," testified Tammy Bird, who's known Ms. Graves for more than five years.

Robin Boyd, who knew the couple in 1997, testified that Ms. Graves seemed as devoted to the relationship as she was to her child.

Without Hinojos, Ms. Graves "was unable to go to work, not taking her son to day care on time.... she was depressed and worried about their relationship," Ms. Boyd testified.

Hinojos, she said, "was fun-loving, likable, social... He comes across as a great man, but beyond his dark, handsome look, he's a manipulator. A con-artist."

Hinojos was also charged in the child's beating death, but accepted a plea deal Monday in exchange for 10 years in prison.

The trial will resume this morning in the 358th District Court of Judge Bill McCoy.

SELL: Fina hopes to close deal by end of year

past, that we are going to close the doors of the facility, and that's certainly not the case.

"We are still putting money and time into the refinery, and everything is moving in a way to suggest we will be open not just tomorrow, but for a long time to come. The sale of the refinery is really just like the sale of any other facility; the only thing that changes is the name of the people in charge."

Weber said Fina's decision to sell comes strictly from a directional point of view.

"Total has made it clear they don't want to support inland refining," Weber said. "That doesn't mean there isn't another company that wants to come here. This refinery is still a very profitable operation, and I'm sure we'll have no problem finding someone who wants to pick up the facilities."

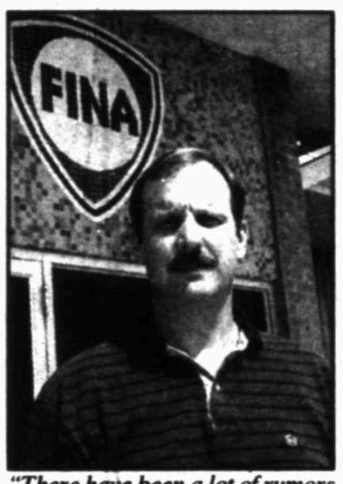
Moore Development for Big Spring Executive Vice President Pam Welch said the sale of the refinery represents a positive change in the industry, as well as the community.

"From what we can see, the sale of the refinery shouldn't have any kind of negative impact on the local economy. In fact, we believe it will have a positive impact, bringing in a new company to the area, along with new ideas.

"As far as we can tell, the only thing that will really change is who is at the helm of the refinery. We don't expect it to cause a loss of jobs or anything else that would impact the local economy in a negative manner."

Ms. Welch said Moore Development will help Fina in its quest for a buyer, and will do everything in its power to make sure the economics involved reflect a positive direction for not only the refinery, but for the local area as well.

Fina officials said they want to begin reviewing bids on the facility in September and hope to close the deal by the end of the year.



"There have been a lot of rumors flying around, both recently and in the past, that we are going to close the doors of the facility, and that's certainly not the case."
Big Spring refinery manager Steve Weber

KOSOVO: Midland mother praises Clinton's decision

(From 1A)

Banda said. "And, yet, we did cause a lot of damage, and there was a lot of innocent lives lost.

"When individuals believe in something that they would die for, whether it is against our principles or for our principles, there is always the distinction that someone is wrong," he said. "The other side is wrong, and we are right. But, as a Christian, one should not take a life in vain. That's where the moral issue comes it. Was it right, or was it wrong? It was right to go in and salvage the situation" in Kosovo. "It was wrong that individuals had to die at a very high cost and particularly the innocent."

A Midland mother, Asuzena Ramos, 23, said "that's good" of the end of the 11-week war, the exiting of Serb military forces from Kosovo and, protected by peacekeepers, the eventual return to refugees to their war-devastated Kosovo province in the old Yugoslavia in Europe's Balkan states.

"A lot of people were dying, getting killed," Mrs. Ramos said. "It was good that NATO won the war. He (President Clinton) made a good decision in sending the military there" to try to halt the carnage associated with a civil war.

Luis Torres, 18, said that it is "good that they (the refugees) get to go back home. I'm glad it (the war) didn't get any bigger that what it was."

"That's a good thing," Lupe Bonilla, 17, said of war's end. "No one got drafted."

Evangelist Bertha Hernandez, who is in her 50s, said that "it's about time it (the war) ended.

"They were spending all of our tax dollars," she said. "In the first place, we shouldn't have been there. The president was never in the (military) service. To him, it was so easy. He exposed them (U.S. military personnel) to death."

To stop the killing and to bring about peace, "We just have to pray to the Lord," Ms. Hernandez said. "Satan is the one who brings war because he hates peace, and Christ is the Prince of peace."

Midlander Layne Johnston, 42, suggested that the U.S. military should not have gotten involved in the conflict "in the first place.

"It's a civil war," Johnston said. "I think it was a war that wasn't ours."

The Vietnam War was "political. It was not a war to win." The United States had viewed itself as peacemakers. "We're the big dog.

"It's the same way in this war in Kosovo," Johnston said. "We were the big dog" among the 19 nations represented in the NATO forces allied against Milosevic's army. The Yugoslavian leader had the moral support of Russia and China. "It was a waste of tax dollars."

At the piano — amateurs vie for honor

FORT WORTH (AP) — They were all amateurs, but took the stage like professionals.

Robert Scrimale, the first to approach the piano, bowed deep to the crowd of about 200, smiling slightly under his mustache after he'd played the last chord of his chosen solo piano works.

Until now, the 43-year-old Dallas office worker, an assistant with a consulting company, had played only for small groups of friends.

Scrimale is one of 90 performers from nine countries competing in the first International Piano Competition for Outstanding Amateurs, which runs through Sunday on the campus of Texas Christian University.

The judges are mainly music professors and piano performers, including Germaine Deveze and Sabine Lacoarret, both of the Paris Conservatory, and David Karp of Southern Methodist University.

The competition is sponsored by the Van Cliburn Foundation, the same organization that runs the prestigious Van Cliburn International Piano Competition every four years.

Officials hunt for killer in slayings along railroad tracks

WEIMAR (AP) — In earlier times, the railway running through this town in southeast Texas meant progress. Even the founder of a successful feed store earned his fortune after jumping off a freight train to find work.

These days, the screech of the train whistle has turned sinister.

In the past month, three people have been bludgeoned to death in their homes here, apparently by a killer who is riding the rails.

The crimes were identical — a break-in under the cover of night, a brutal beating, valuables missing. Behind the houses, yards away, lay railroad tracks.

They were the first killings in these parts that even the old-timers can recall.

"The train used to be a good sound," says Charles Herzik, who has lived all his 60 years in Weimar, a ranching community of 2,000 people 80 miles west of Houston. "Now it makes you feel scared."

Herzik manages the M-G Farm Service Center, a general store offering everything from potting soil to shotguns. In the past few weeks, he has sold more firepower than during all of hunting season.

"Everybody you talk to is scared," he says. "People have never seen anything like this."

Investigators say at least two killings in the Houston area and one in Lexington, Ky., may be linked to those here. The victims were all beaten to death, and the crimes occurred near railroad tracks.

This week law officers from Texas and Kentucky, along with the FBI and railroad officials, formed a task force to intensify the hunt for the man suspected in all six slayings: 39-year-old Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, a drifter from Mexico with a record of weapons and burglary charges.

"We're looking for a fugitive that possibly does not have any set roots in one location," says Don Clark, head of the FBI's Houston office. "That's the biggest thing that we know right now, is that this person is probably in a constant transient status."

The suspect first was linked to the Dec. 17, 1998, slaying of Dr. Claudia Benton at her home in West University Place, a well-to-do community of professionals that is surrounded by the city of Houston. The 39-year-old physician had been sexually assaulted, stabbed and beaten.

Police say Resendez-Ramirez's fingerprints were found inside her home, which is about 100 yards from the railroad tracks.

DNA from the crime scene has been linked to evidence in the slayings of the Rev. Norman "Skip" Simic, 46, and his wife, Karen, 47, in the parsonage behind Weimar United Church of Christ. They were beaten to death with a sledgehammer and were found May 2 after they failed to show up for Sunday services. The railroad tracks run behind the garden where Mrs. Simic grew sunflowers and vegetables.

The Simics' pickup truck and Ms. Benton's vehicle were later found abandoned in San Antonio.

Then last Friday, only days after the yellow police tape had been removed from the Simics' home, 73-year-old Josephine Konvicka was found beaten to death in the tiny farmhouse where she had lived all her life. It is three miles from the parsonage and, again, only yards from the tracks.

Police say Resendez-Ramirez's fingerprints were found inside.

The next day, the body of 26-year-old Noemi Dominguez was found in her Houston home. She died of a blow to the head, and her car had been stolen. Resendez-Ramirez is considered the prime suspect.

He also is being sought for questioning in the 1997 slaying of Christopher Maier, 21, a University of Kentucky student who was struck in the back of the head as he and his girlfriend took a shortcut along some tracks in Lexington on their way from one party to another.

A $60,000 reward has been posted for information leading to Resendez-Ramirez's arrest.

"It's a major-league fear out here," says Darius Brisco, Mrs. Konvicka's son-in-law. "I don't think you can buy a handgun out here. The reality is the ugliness of the big city has struck rural America."

The freight railroads have stepped up security, watching for drifters hopping trains.

The task force was in action Thursday, stopping and searching freight trains rolling through the town of Flatonia, about 75 miles east of San Antonio. Flatonia is a major intersection of east-west and north-south rails.

Weimar Mayor Bennie Kosler, who used to brag about his community's hospitality, now urges townspeople to get home before dark, lock the doors and windows they used to leave open and turn on all their lights. His 19-year-old granddaughter has taken to sleeping in her parents' bedroom.

Yugoslav troops leave Kosovo; NATO suspends air attacks

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav troops rumbled out of Kosovo in trucks, armored cars and buses Thursday, prompting NATO to suspend its punishing 78-day air war and the United Nations to authorize a heavily armed security force to restore peace and begin reconstruction.

NATO troops massed in neighboring Macedonia to begin the peacekeeping mission, with the first soldiers ready to enter Kosovo as early as Friday.

"We shall be off quite soon," Lt. Gen. Michael Jackson, commander of NATO forces in Macedonia, said Thursday night.

Jackson also warned the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army not to try to take advantage of the withdrawal to pursue its fight with Serb forces.

He said U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and other senior political leaders made it "quite clear that it would be foolish in the extreme to interfere with or create incidents" connected with the pullout.

"I would endorse that and say it would indeed be very stupid," Jackson said.

Despite the death and destruction wreaked by the bombing campaign and the imminent arrival of a huge foreign force on Yugoslav soil, President Slobodan Milosevic proclaimed victory.

"The people are the heroes," he said on national television at the same time that NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana announced the bombing campaign had been suspended.

In Washington, President Clinton praised NATO's unity and warned Milosevic that airstrikes would resume if he reneges on a peace deal to allow more than 860,000 ethnic Albanian refugees to return to Kosovo — most of them fled to Macedonia and Albania.

"We now have a moment of hope," Clinton said. "We have to finish the job and build peace."

The troop pullout began hours after NATO and Yugoslav generals signed an agreement, a follow-up to the peace plan that Milosevic accepted last week after Russia and the West presented it as essentially nonnegotiable.

All of the estimated 40,000 soldiers and special police are supposed to clear out of the southern Serb province within 11 days.

About 150 trucks, other army vehicles and cars piled high with luggage and boxes carried soldiers across Kosovo's northern border Thursday afternoon at Merdare. The convoy included armored vehicles and mobile anti-aircraft weapons.

Some of those in the convoy smiled and flashed the three-finger Serb sign denoting unity or displayed souvenirs apparently taken from Albanian homes.

Two soldiers in one truck held up a decorative carpet emblazoned with the Albanian flag and a framed photograph of Marshal Tito, Yugoslavia's legendary former communist leader who died in 1980, before Yugoslavia split into several countries and warred over Bosnia and Kosovo.

The independent Beta news agency said about 20 carloads of Serb civilians joined the convoy, their vehicles packed with luggage. They were apparently fearful of living in the ethnic Albanian-majority province without army and police protection.

Ceiling crashes in Russian subway station, killing 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — A concrete overhang collapsed Thursday evening over a crowded subway entrance in central St. Petersburg, killing at least five people and injuring several, officials said.

Russian rescue workers used jackhammers and cranes to search for bodies in the debris of the 10- to 15-ton chunk of concrete.

At least five people were killed, including one child, said Grigory Gribunov, spokesman for the fire department. Several more were hospitalized, including a policeman who had been patrolling the area.

Gribunov would not speculate on why the piece of concrete, about 100 yards square, crashed down on the entrance.

Helen Greathouse philanthropy has enriched us all

During the past several years, literally thousands of Midlanders have directly benefited from the generosity of Helen Greathouse and her late husband, Barney R. Greathouse.

Their generosity has made a difference in countless lives. Yet many of the recipients may never know Mrs. Greathouse; many of today's Midland residents never knew her husband. He died in 1973.

Yet the Greathouses have left a tremendous legacy in Midland through their charitable giving, their philanthropy. On her 90th birthday Tuesday, Helen M. Greathouse did what she has been doing for years. She gave away more than $480,000 of the estate she and her husband were able to accumulate to various Midland organizations and services. In that way, she made life better for all Midlanders.

The Greathouses have left a tremendous legacy in Midland through their charitable giving, their philanthropy. On her 90th birthday Tuesday, Helen M. Greathouse did what she has been doing for years. She gave away more than $480,000 ... .

Webster's Dictionary defines philanthropy as "goodwill toward one's fellow man especially as expressed through active efforts to promote human welfare." It's quite clear that Helen Greathouse is an outstanding philanthropist.

As an alternate term for such benevolent acts of giving, Webster's offers the word humanitarianism. It is clear that she qualifies in that regard, too, since a humanitarian is one whose efforts are described as "civic, social and amply beneficial."

Through their charitable giving, the Greathouses have touched thousands of students at Midland College, many others at High Sky Children's Ranch and still others through the Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Midland, Buffalo Trail Council, Camp Fire Boys and Girls, Casa de Amigos, Centers for Children and Families, Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC), Gladney Fund, Midland Community Theatre, Habitat for Humanity, Christmas in April, Midland Memorial Foundation, Museum of the Southwest, Safe Place, Samaritan Counseling Center, Teen Challenge, Alzheimer's Association's Greater West Texas chapter and City of Midland Aquatics. Their generosity has literally been overwhelming.

The Texas Legislature and Gov. George W. Bush had approved a resolution commending Mrs. Greathouse as "a humble humanitarian." Mayor Bobby Burns, proclaimed Tuesday as Helen Greathouse Day in Midland.

She definitely is a wonderful humanitarian. She and her husband have been that and much, much more to the people of Midland!

Reforming politics should begin today

The crusade to clean up the money side of political campaigns — languishing among both Austin and Washington lawmakers — got a double nudge this week.

A national gambling commission said states should crack down on political contributions from gambling interests.

And reform at the federal level advanced a baby step when six Republicans in the U.S. House joined 195 Democrats and one Independent in petitioning for a vote on the Shays-Meehan campaign-finance reform bill. ...

The unwholesome influence of big money in state and national politics is one of the shames of our era.

The "I'll quit tomorrow" crowd needs to get serious about improving democracy's health.

— Austin American-Statesman

JACK ANDERSON

Government still has far too many secrets

Few self-inflicted wounds contribute more to successful espionage against the United States than the government's own ridiculous methods of classifying official documents.

Anderson

Too many people are empowered to wield the little rubber stamps (now computer keys) that make secrets of mundane material, and they exercise their heady prerogative with wild abandon.

The result is that genuine secrets important to national security become cheapened by their association with the chaff: documents that get overclassified because of potential political embarrassment, ignorance, carelessness or simply a bureaucrat's ego. All this has produced far too many "secrets" for anyone to guard properly.

"When everything is classified, then nothing is classified," wrote the late Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, "and the system becomes one to be disregarded by the cynical or the careless, and to be manipulated by those intent on self-protection or self-promotion."

Stewart was writing about the Pentagon Papers case in 1971, when the government tried unsuccessfully to prevent publication of secret documents on the conduct of the Vietnam War.

The weakness of the government's case was demonstrated when a lower court judge challenged the Nixon administration's lawyers to identify the most sensitive secret in the whole mass of leaked documents. The lawyers conferred and decided on the material dealing with "Operation Marigold," a secret 1966 attempt to negotiate with North Vietnam through Polish diplomatic intermediaries.

Never mind that the communist adversaries obviously knew about Operation Marigold; the judge also discovered that this super-sensitive secret had been published long before in newspapers — and described at length in President Johnson's memoirs.

The heart of the problem is the number of federal employees who are authorized to classify documents at one level or another. Currently, there are believed to be more than one-million rubber-stamp wielders, sources told our associate Dale Van Atta.

How can that be? After all, the latest report delivered to the president by a small office concerned with classification says there are 'only' 4,010 "original classification authorities."

This unit of the National Archives, called the Information Security Oversight Office, reports annually on the progress of a presidential order to declassify government secrets. ISOO trumpeted the 4,010 figure to President Clinton as proof that intelligence agencies had reduced the number of people who could classify. In fiscal year 1997, the report noted, "they again responded (to your request) by reducing the number by over 400 individuals."

It sounds wonderful on its face, like Americans have reason to believe the government is becoming more open on all but the most serious intelligence and military secrets. We wish that were the case. But the report fails to mention the number of individuals who have what is known as "derivative classification authority."

These "derivatives" may normally classify material only when it uses information from an originally classified document. But in some cases, they can make their own classification decisions on original material, using guidelines laid down by the top rubber-stampers. Taking these people into account, there are more than one million federal employees contributing to the mountain of secret paper that is proving so hard to protect.

ISOO reports that there were 6.4 million derivative classifications in fiscal year 1997. It estimates that every "original" classification decision produces an average of 40 such derivatives.

The report is right in calling the Clinton administration's achievement of declassifying documents "extraordinary." Between 1996 and 1998, the first two years after President Clinton issued an Executive Order on the subject, "the agencies have declassified 56 percent more pages than in the prior 16 years combined."

But the problem is that the whopping 400 million pages released during those years still constitute just a small percentage of the billions of pages worth of government secrets — a number that grows every day.

Time and again, the General Accounting Office has pointed out the folly that governs classification decisions. In one report, they found that "the informal rule of thumb followed was, when in doubt, classify the information at the Secret level." Furthermore, the GAO noted, "the penalties for underclassifying far outweigh those for overclassifying," meaning that survival-oriented bureaucrats tended to produce more secrets than necessary.

Clearly, the classification system is in continued need of an overhaul. While the Clinton administration should be lauded for making important headway, officials still fail to understand the obvious: Only when the number of both "original" and "derivative" classifying bureaucrats is drastically cut back will America's legitimate secrets be given the protection they deserve.

NeighborWorks bring good news to Midland

Right here in Midland, there is a story that may be of interest to you and your readers.

Reversing the decline of older residential communities is one of the most serious challenges facing our country today. Unemployment, a troubled lending industry and abandoned or foreclosed properties are just some of the problems facing residents. However, through the hard work and vision of thousands of NeighborWorks volunteers, this picture is being brightened in 800 communities across the nation. Under the guiding theme, "Transforming Communities Together," accomplishments of these people will be celebrated during National NeighborWorks Week, June 5 to 12, 1999, here in Midland and nationwide.

Midland Neighborhood Housing Services Inc., a nonprofit, publicly supported partnership of residents, business leaders and local government officials, is the proud local NeighborWorks organization. Locally, right here in Midland, our accomplishments from May 1998 to May 1999 include four Affordable Housing Program clients, four Disabled Affordable Home Program clients, 48 HIP program clients, and 420 clients attended the Homebuyer Workshop with the help of the city of Midland, Chase Bank, Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation, and Bank of America (formerly Nations Bank).

Nationally, NeighborWorks staff and volunteers are helping families to purchase, rehabilitate and create nearly 34,000 affordable housing units each year, including repair services. The total annual amount of community revitalization investment generated by the NeighborWorks network exceeds $819 million.

This is a story of people working together to make this a stronger, safer community. Join us at 300 E. Indiana June 7 to 12, 1999 for painting and cleaning.

I urge everyone in our community to help Midland Neighborhood Housing Services celebrate the hope and pride that has replaced despair in South Association and to work together to ensure a bright and prosperous future.

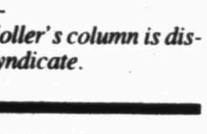
CHARLEY REESE

Despite accord, NATO lost war in Yugoslavia

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's war against Yugoslavia reminds me of my high-school Latin teacher. Miss Katie Monroe, a fine lady, was fond of saying, "Boy, if you're arguing with me, you've already lost."



Reese

Seems more than clear to me that NATO has already lost its war against Yugoslavia despite the peace agreement announced. No matter what deal is made, NATO lost.

NATO lost its moral standing by violating its own charter and the U.N. charter by attacking a sovereign nation at peace with its neighbors.

It lost its military credibility. The world's most powerful military alliance bombed a little country of about 10 million people for more than 70 days as of this writing and failed to do significant damage to the Yugoslav army. At the end, NATO was still flying at 15,000 feet to avoid casualties. That's a problem with attacking a small country. There is nothing impressive about a bully's victory.

This is being duly noted, you can be sure, in the war rooms of larger countries.

What ought to alarm Americans — but apparently doesn't — is the foolishness, ineptness and immorality of American leaders. Clearly, the Clinton administration is unqualified to play with armies and air forces, much less nuclear weapons.

Take, for example, the basic equation of costs vs. benefits. The United States has no national interest in the question of Kosovo. Whether it's part of Serbia, independent or part of Albania has absolutely no effect, positive or negative, on the American people.

On the other hand, setting U.S.-Russian relations back several decades — to use the phrase of Russian envoy Viktor Chernomyrdin — affects U.S. national interests big time. When you have pro-Western men like Chernomyrdin and Russian President Boris Yeltsin talking about nuclear war becoming a real threat, this is serious. NATO's behavior has caused the Russians to believe they may be next. The slogan making the rounds in Moscow is "Belgrade today, Moscow tomorrow." This feeling won't change with a peace agreement.

Despite what arrogant little twits in Washington say, this is a dangerous situation. Wars are often made of unintended consequences, misjudgments and apprehensions. The same crowd who are dismissing Russian anger are the ones who confidently predicted three or four days of bombing would bring Milosevic to his knees.

The significant part of this agreement is that its implementation plan must be in the form of a U.N. Security Council resolution, which means Russia and China will have a voice and veto. Politicians characterize anything as a victory, but it seems to me that this is a victory for Milosevic and the Russians.

Assuming we survive this folly without glowing in the dark, Americans should see it as an object lesson. Next fall, when you get ready to choose a president, be careful which one you choose. The world is unstable. The main and most important duty of a president is the conduct of foreign policy. I'm pretty sure any domestic damage a president might cause can be repaired. That's not true in foreign affairs. Blunder into a war, and you can end up on a one-way street with no turnaround and no exit.

In the meantime, I expect the Balkan peace to be as difficult as the Balkan war.

Kosovo refugees contemplate returning, rebuilding homes

SKOPJE, Macedonia (AP) — Although she doesn't know when she'll be allowed to return to Kosovo, refugee Fatimire Zhubi knows what she'll do when she arrives: get down to work.

"I don't know how they're going to organize it all," Zhubi, a pediatrician, said during a pause from examining squirming children in a refugee camp clinic. "But we'll start working as soon as we can."

She and other ethnic Albanian refugees know that the challenge will be immense to rebuild their homeland, poor and scarred by fighting even before NATO started bombing in March and the worst of the ethnic purges began.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees estimates that at least 350,000 houses in Kosovo have been seriously damaged. The U.N. Children's Fund says massive damage was inflicted on hospitals, clinics and schools. Doctors, nurses and teachers are in severely short supply.

An international peacekeeping force was marshaling Thursday to go into Kosovo as Yugoslavia began withdrawing troops and NATO suspended its bombing campaign. Many refugees are eager to be right behind, to start reconstructing their land and their lives as quickly as possible.

"It doesn't matter that I don't have a home," said Sabri Ukzmalji, a mason whose skills will be in great demand.

"I want to go back home, because home is better," echoed Arif, his gap-toothed 10-year-old son.

But Ukzmalji's wife, Nexhmia, was more cautious — worried about how she would care for their five children, ages 2 to 19, without a roof over their heads or sure access to food and water.

Despite the massive reconstruction Kosovo requires, homes can be repaired, hospitals restaffed. Teachers can hold class in tents if need be. But rebuilding a sense of security and trust will be much harder.

Some of Kosovo's Serbs, who made up just 10 percent of the prewar population of 2.1 million, already are reported to be moving out of Kosovo. Those who remain face suspicion at best, vengeance at worst. Nexhmia Ukzmalji blames all Serbs for Kosovo's woes.

"I would never go back and live with them after what they did to us," she said. "I'd rather stay in this (refugee camp) tent forever than go back and live with them."

The United Nations and other international agencies say their first priorities will be food, water and housing. Tents will be set up for some returning refugees. Money has been earmarked to repair at least one room in each of thousands of damaged houses so that families have a warm haven in the coming winter.

A NATO source said peacekeepers may be put to work repairing homes. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, acknowledged that NATO bombs caused some of the damage, but said Yugoslav troops bore most of the blame.

Selvete Krasniqi, who fled Kosovo three weeks ago, is also eager to get back to her work — teaching chemistry. When asked if she would return to reopen schools, she answered quickly and simply: "Yes, with pleasure."

After housing and food comes medical care, said Zhubi, the pediatrician, who said she would go back "as fast as I can, as soon as I can. There's a lot of need for doctors, a lot of need."

Zhubi and her husband, also a doctor, left two months ago after being told they weren't needed at their suburban Pristina clinic because they were ethnic Albanians. Her husband was beaten.

"My house was burned. I have no home to go back to. But I have the soil," she said. "It's better there than here — just the feeling of being home."

Pope preaches tolerance in eastern Poland

SIEDLCE, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II paid tribute Thursday to Catholics slain for resisting conversion under the Russian czar and to Jews sent to Nazi death camps "from this martyred Polish soil."

The pontiff also reached out to Orthodox Christians, preaching a message of tolerance in eastern Poland, a region that has suffered war and religious conflict. And as the sun set, he welcomed Muslims attending a multifaith prayer service.

Christian unity and religious pluralism are major themes of John Paul's 13-day pilgrimage to his homeland, which reached the halfway point Thursday with the 79-year-old pope drawing huge crowds of faithful from across eastern Europe.

He appeared to be bearing up well after a day of rest, though his speech was slurred — a possible symptom of Parkinson's disease. But the pope sang prayers and switched languages easily to greet people from former Soviet territories in their native tongues.

At his first stop in Siedlce, midway between Warsaw and the border with Belarus, John Paul shared a stage with bishops from Belarus, Kazakstan, Russia and Ukraine to celebrate Mass before 400,000 faithful.

Thousands of Roman Catholics and Eastern rite Catholics were in the crowd as the pontiff urged people to follow the example of 13 Catholic martyrs slain in Pratulin in 1874 for resisting conversion to Orthodox Christianity.

"These simple people, fathers of families, chose at the critical moment to suffer death rather than yield to pressure in a way untrue to their conscience," John Paul said. "'How sweet it is to die for the faith.' These were their last words."

Such devotion was needed today, he said, citing "problems and violent changes" facing humanity.

"In such a world, many people, especially the young, feel lost and wounded," he said. "Some fall victim to sects and travesties of religion, or to manipulations of the truth. Others succumb to different forms of slavery. Attitudes of selfishness, injustice and insensitivity to the needs of others becomes more widespread."

Then, in remarks not in his prepared text, he said: "On this martyred Polish soil, I cannot fail to mention the martyrdom of the Jewish nation ... in Siedlce."

More than 12,000 Jews — the city's entire Jewish population — were deported by the Nazis to the Treblinka death camp and slain. On Friday, the pope plans to further honor Jewish victims of the Holocaust during a stop at the Umschlagplatz monument in Warsaw.

Prime minister urges Russian lawmakers to pass austerity bills

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Sergei Stepashin warned lawmakers Thursday that if they fail to approve a package of economic reforms, he might take steps to dissolve the Communist-dominated parliament.

The package is part of a long list of reforms that the International Monetary Fund has set as a condition for releasing a badly needed $4.5 billion loan.

IMF demands include the unification of Russia's two separate systems for trading currencies, which has helped protect the shaky ruble.

A Western economist warned, however, that the ruble may plunge if trading restrictions are lifted.

If Russia complies, "we could be looking at another attack on the ruble," said Peter Westin, an economist with the Russian European Center for Economic Policy, a Moscow-based study group.

The ruble was trading at 6 to the dollar before Russia succumbed to global financial crisis in August 1998. The ruble then plunged, though it has held relatively stable at around 25 to the dollar in recent months.

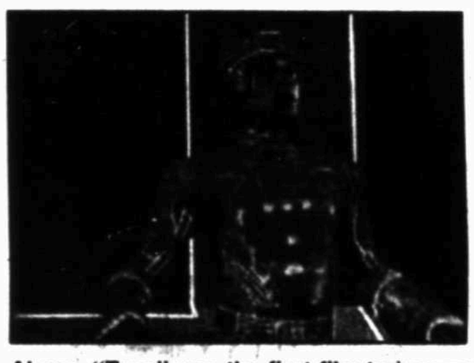
SYNTHESPIANS
Where's the HUMANITY?



Above, "Tron" was the first film to incorporate computer graphics. At the time, the graphics were revolutionary but the film didn't do well at the box office. "Tron" set back computer graphics a good decade. The real push for digital animation didn't occur until the computer-generated "Toy Story," at left, raked in millions at the box office in 1995. The giant ape in last year's "Mighty Joe Young," at top left, solved the hair problem, making King Kong look like a big guy on his way to a costume party. And "Antz," at bottom, starred creatures that communicated complex emotions, even if they were just a bunch of pests. In "Star Wars Episode I: The Phantom Menace," the character Jar Jar Binks, shown at top right, was completely computer generated. The mummy in this summer's version of "The Mummy," actor Arnold Vosloo shares the title role with a computer-generated spectral creature, shown below left. And in Titanic, there were a lot of virtual people sliding into the water. They used to do it by throwing dummies.

'I like movies with real people having real problems, not just computer-generated things.'

"All the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players: they have their exits and their entrances; and one man in his time plays many parts." That was the premise in Elizabethan England when Shakespeare wrote "As You Like It."

Tomorrows have passed since then and as humanity stands on the threshold of the third millennium A.D., computers have created a brave new world, one in which synthespians — manipulated pieces of binary code — strut and fret their hours upon the stage.

"If they keep on like this, it's only a matter of time before actors are replaced, at least in film," said Dan "Clark" Hodge, a 1999 graduate of Midland High School who plans on majoring in acting. "They are already working on putting in completely computer-generated characters in film with varying amounts of realism."

Sound unbelievable? Some have suggested realistic digital humans could be on the screen within the next five years.

"If a director has to choose between me or say a computer-generated Charlton Heston, he'll get Charlton Heston," said Hodge. "They're doing some of that already — take an old John Wayne movie and cut it into a commercial. I wouldn't be surprised to see a film come out starring Humphrey Bogart because they can do that now. They have the technology."

Day of the digital actor isn't far off

By Patti Hartigan
N.Y. Times News Service

The scene sounds like a plot from a sci-fi pulp, or an old B movie: A snaggle-toothed scientist toils in the laboratory, perfecting his creation. A touch-up here, a tiny tuck there. But this is not some green-gilled monster from the house of Dr. Frankenstein; it's a realistic human with shiny hair, glittering teeth, and liquid eyes. The pressure is on to beat other genetic geniuses racing to create human clones. Suddenly, there's a burst of energy — and voila! — the model comes to life. Blink your eyes, and it's Marilyn Monroe. Blink again, and it's James Dean.

This scenario isn't as far-fetched — or as far off — as it might once have seemed. In this case, the scientists in question are digital doctors: computer programmers developing the software needed to create a photorealistic digital actor, or "synthespian." Special-effects wizards have already created convincing digital dinosaurs and dolls, aliens and ants, stuntmen and superheroes. And the two biggest box office draws of the moment — "The Mummy" and a certain prequel that unfolds in a galaxy far, far away — showcase digital creatures.

ACTORS: High school thespians believe there always will be place for humans

(From 1B)

In fact, the success of George Lucas in "The Phantom Menace" in creating synthespians has some minds questioning if these artificial creations will eventually replace the living on the film stage.

"I can still notice (the difference)," said Cody Wirshing, a senior at Midland High School this fall who also hopes to pursue acting as a career. "With the Jar Jar Binks character in 'The Phantom Menace' he appeared to be more cartoonish than the surrounding area. In 'The Mummy' some things you know aren't humanly possible. Some of the movements."

The enhancement of the human actor, South African Arnold Vosloo, with a computer-generated spectral creature in "The Mummy," was, Wirshing said, "Great. It just added more onto what you were seeing. But with Jar Jar Binks, if he was a live character, I still wouldn't be able to stand him. The movie was kind of disappointing. If there was no Star Wars before it, it would probably have been a very good movie."

Wirshing's disappointment with "The Phantom Menace" stemmed from the fact that he had "a lot of problems with the characters," those that were computer-generated and those that were not and with the story line.

"He (Lucas) introduced old characters and then just kind of pushed them aside like a cameo appearance, and I don't think that was a very good idea."

As someone whose goals are set on live theater, Wirshing would still "jump for it" if offered a role in film. "I find myself daydreaming about it, too, but I just love the stage too much."

At the present time, Wirshing doesn't "feel" computer-generated characters represent a threat to actors.

"As long as a synthetic character needs a voice, there's always someone who can do a cold read," Wirshing said. "I don't think we've come far enough to replace all actors yet."

For now, the technology hasn't become that refined, and the potential of this medium remains open to speculation. However, it seems possible that in the none-too-distant future realistic synthespians could play leading roles in film as brand new characters or reincarnations of old legends. Both concepts have an impact on young people studying the art of acting today and on the films being watched by the audiences of tomorrow.

Morgan Merritt, a senior this fall at Midland High School who hopes to become an actress, feels synthespians "could affect" acting "a great deal.

"There are millions of actors who try to get a job, and if they're going to this new technology that could put a lot of people out of business," Miss Merritt said, seeing the prospect of using familiar screen faces from the past as a contributing factor. "The audience recognizes their faces instead of just some new person."

Miss Merritt, who is "probably more geared to film" than stage acting and has done some commercial work, hadn't given much thought to the future uses of computer-generated thespians.

"But, now that you mention it," Miss Merritt said, "it's kind of scary."

Rebecca King, a senior at Lee High School this fall, also sees synthespians as possibly representing "a threat to my future as an actress. I don't want to compete with an animated character" who "can do more things than I can do because it is a computer."

Miss King, who prefers stage to film acting, would like to major in acting despite knowing that "it is not a very stable career." She would be willing to work with computer-generated characters. "It would be kind of hard, but I think it would be really neat to do it maybe once or twice," said Miss King, who draws the line at what she finds acceptable in computer-generated characters. "I like real people. Maybe if they just keep it with animals and dinosaurs and crazy characters on Star Wars. But actual people, they should leave that to real people, actual humans."

Tate

'I like real people. Maybe if they just keep (computer-generated characters) with animals and dinosaurs and crazy characters on Star Wars. But actual people, they should leave that to real people, actual humans.'
—Rebecca King, LHS senior

Miss Merritt also prefers watching human actors.

"It seems like a lot of those (synthespians) are in sci-fi movies," Miss Merritt said. "And I like movies with real people having real problems, not just computer-generated things."

Justin Tate, a senior at Midland High School this fall who plans on pursuing acting as a career, doesn't "see computer animated characters replacing human actors totally as far as the genre of the performing arts goes. I think it presents some really exciting opportunities that could possibly add to the story line.

"But so far as animated characters go and their taking over of the screen, I think it would have happened by now when cartoons like 'Aladdin' and 'The Lion King' became popular. Personally I haven't seen the new Star Wars movie, but I haven't heard one positive thing about Jar Jar Binks. And I would choose to watch a real actor any time over a computer-generated figure."

Vanessa Layman, a senior at Lee High School this fall, agreed.

"I don't think that they'll be replacing the live actors completely," said Miss Layman, a drama student who plans on becoming a psychiatrist. "We always need live actors or the audience will be too alienated from the movie. I think with the computer-generated technology they are developing, it will allow for more elaborate story lines and plots that will need synthetic actors."

She found the use of clips of President John F. Kennedy cut into the film "Forrest Gump" "really cool," saying, "There were able to make it look like he was actually there."

Thomas D. Tucker, a 1997 honors graduate of Lee High School who has been in "a short film and a few on-stage productions" and worked this spring as a columnist and movie critic on the University Daily Newspaper at Texas Tech University, doesn't see computer-generated characters "as a bad thing.

"I think most movies are founded on a vision or a message," Tucker said. "If that stays true whether it's human or synthetic, then I think the purpose is fulfilled."

Tucker, who attended Texas Christian University on a vocal scholarship and studied astrophysics and music before attending Tech, where he is majoring in political science and computer science, recalled a movie which had a synthetic character, "The Flight of the Navigator." The young boy in the film develops a relationship with the starship he is navigating.

"In some ways, characters like that can make us think more than human characters," Tucker said. "Perhaps it is the interaction between humans and synthespians that creates such an interest. The fact that we can see a human character actually relate to something that most of us would consider a fantasy, or an ideal character that presents an entirely new medium. It's like talking to a dream, almost."

In the real world, synthespians lack human needs: food, shelter, money and rest. These features appeal to some directors. For instance, a new movie starring a synthespian Marilyn Monroe would naturally not present to the director any of the obstacles Miss Monroe brought to a project.

"It's cool they're able to do it with the technology, but it seems such a waste of resources," said Miss Layman. "If you're having to choose, always go with the human because they offer so much more to the role than a computer-generated form ever could."

"The director could have less conflicts than with an actor who is a prima donna," said Miss Merritt. "But then again, it could give you a very good experience. It just depends on what type of actor you have working for you."

Hodge, whose first love in acting is the stage, finds performances by humans wear better in the viewing time and again.

"When you look at a computer, everything is programmed," said Hodge. "When you're looking at a real person, there are tiny details they put into a character that makes it more rewarding to watch over and over again, whereas the more you watch something computer generated, the more it looks like a computer."

He prefers movies to have all synthespians, like "Toy Story," or none, but did enjoy "Who Framed Roger Rabbit." "I think 'Who Framed Roger Rabbit' was charming because it didn't take itself too seriously," said Hodge. Writers and directors have more control over the finished product in a film, such as "Toy Story" or "Antz," that utilizes synthespians to the exclusion of other actors.

Wirshing

"I think it takes the right combination of people," Hodge said of the movie-making process. "A good film, for me, starts with a good script, gets a talented cast and good directors, and it's a combination of their visions, not just one person."

If all movies were "all computer generated," Hodge said, "A lot of people would lose interest because there's no one you could relate to."

A successful portrayal takes, Wirshing said, "Some sort of emotion. You can't just get up there and talk. You really have to have a kind of a driving force when you're acting."

Synthespians are a relative newcomer to the art, said Tate, who is interested in film work. "Right now, it's just wait and see.

"I see it as still in the experimental stage. Even though it's been used in several films, it takes time to see what the public reaction is going to be."

And, although synthespians will have an impact on acting, Tate said, "In the long run, it's going to be the human characters that will really have the impact."

Actors suffer at hands of director's preoccupation with synthetic creatures

by David Allen
Reporter-Telegram Movie Critic

Like hordes of other loyal fans, I trekked to see "Episode I, The Phantom Menace," the latest, and largest installment of the epic, on opening day. I entered the Tall City Ten with as much excitement as fear. I held excitement for the prospects of the great adventure that might lay ahead.

Yet, I was afraid that Lucas could not possibly live up to the expectations created by the original series nor the hype created by the media. After watching "The Phantom Menace," I can only say that I was right to be both excited and fearful. This movie turns out to be almost as bad as it is good.

Over the last few years there has been a debate among actors about letting a new type of actor enter our ranks. We are very concerned about down-sizing in a time when films are getting bigger and bigger. At first glance, this may not make sense because bigger budgets should mean more actors employed, but after you see "The Phantom Menace," you will understand better what we fear and why. You too will come to know the evil deeds of the synthespian.

No, this isn't a character like Darth Vader, or the new incarnation of evil, Darth Maul. The synthespian is a synthetic actor, an actor who does not exist in real life, an actor who doesn't need coffee breaks, costumes, or even a salary.

The synthespian is essentially an animated character, one that is generations beyond Bugs Bunny. The synthespian is the product of computer technology that allows a programmer to have complete control over a "three-dimensional" character, from the twitch of a lip, to the blink of an eye, to the length of a tongue.

We have seen the synthespian used to great success in films like "Toy Story," "Jurassic Park" and even "Titanic," but never to the extent or with as much success as in "The Phantom Menace." The use of the synthespian is director George Lucas' greatest achievement and most disappointing failure.

This spring "Phantom Menace" star Liam Neeson complained about film being a director's medium. His comments reflect an argument over who is the central artist in the world of theater and film. Some folks believe that the director is the most important artist, while others believe that the actor is the most important. This film provides ammunition for those on both sides of that issue.

Those in favor of the director-as-king approach will rightly point out the exciting visual smorgasbord, the overwhelming reality Lucas creates in the worlds he brings to the screen, the fact that the synthespians in this film, especially Jar Jar Binks, are so completely and utterly believable that you totally forget that they are nothing more than manipulated pieces of binary code. They will insist that the successful use of these characters finally gives directors the control they need to be the central artist and demonstrates the possibilities of the results of that control.

Those on the other side who want the actor to remain the central artist, will rightly point to the incredibly bad acting throughout this film by every single human as an example of a director who has forgotten how to work with human beings. They will insist that the expression of the human condition, a fundamental purpose of art, can only be accomplished through the display of the human heart and soul by a human, by a real thespian and that "The Phantom Menace" demonstrates what happens when the director is given too much control.

The acting by humans in this film falls far short of expectations. Liam Neeson, as Jedi master Qui-Gon Jinn, fails to reveal any part of the human heart he so gloriously shows us in his other work. Ewan McGregor's vast talents are completely wasted on a cheap imitation of Alec Guiness' Obi-Wan Kenobi. Samuel Jackson gives an uncharacteristically wooden and boring performance as Mace Windu.

As for the rest of the human cast, their embarrassing performances range from ineffectual (Natalie Portman as Queen Amidala) to useless (Jake Lloyd as Anakin Skywalker). Given the credentials of the human thespians working on this project, one cannot lay the blame for the uniformly cardboard performances at their feet.

No, these actors don't suffer from a lack of talent; they are suffering at the hands of a director who is more concerned with and adept at handling his synthetic creations. The result is a film that lacks the heart, passion, and soul of the original series because it lacks any believable human characters.

Yet I cannot deny the huge success of the synthespians. They were the most interesting characters in the film.

I was captivated by Jar Jar Binks, astounded by the blue winged junk dealer, and mesmerized by the huge number of synthespian extras, each of which looked like an individual maintaining its own independent action. Add to this the scale and detail of the digital sets, the current version of the death star, the complicated motions and trajectories of hundreds of vehicles all flying about at the same time, a spectacular race on Tatooine and the final battle sequences, which blew me away, and Lucas presents a couple of hours of exhilarating visual activity.

So, when friends ask if "The Phantom Menace" is a good or bad movie, I must answer by say, "Yes." It is both good and bad.

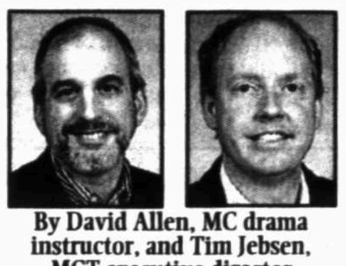
"The Phantom Menace," taken for what Lucas claims it is, a throwback to Saturday morning serials designed to delight the kids and not the adults, is very, very successful. However, as a film for adults who appreciate and seek more heart and soul, even in an action/adventure/sci-fi/western, it is nearly a failure.

In the final analysis, Lucas has been very successful at bringing the possible future of the acting profession into stark highlight. Will real human actors on film go the way of the dodo bird? Only time and technological advancement will tell.

Perhaps one day, with the advent of holographic motion pictures, the human actor will disappear from screen and stage. As an actor, teacher of acting and as one who derives great pleasure from watching actors perform their art, I rue that day while, at the same time, I prepare to go see "The Phantom Menace" for the second time.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review



By David Allen, MC drama instructor, and Tim Jebsen, MCT executive director

A gusher: good to excellent

Dry well: Fair to poor

DAVID: "The Love Letter" tells the story of Helen MacFarquhar (Capshaw), a middle-aged woman who runs a quaint book store in a sleepy, New England, seaside village. She discovers an unaddressed love letter in her store. Helen proceeds to prove the old adage correct by assuming that the letter is for her, that the author is the hunky college student working for her (Tom Everett Scott), that he is love with her, and that she has more than friendly feelings toward him.

TIM: This movie gets off to a very slow start. After a half-hour, I have to ask myself why I should care if this protagonist ever finds love. Capshaw plays Helen as a cold-hearted woman that has shut herself off from love. Congratulations — mission accomplished. Unfortunately, it does not create an interesting or compelling character around which to base this movie.

Fortunately, we get some relief by seeing an old flame George (Tom Selleck) try to win her love. Since leaving television's "Magnum P.I.," Selleck has carved out a nice niche for himself in movies like "Three Men and a Baby" and "In and Out." The desire to see Helen turn her attention to George helped to turn up the heat and create some focus in this movie.

DAVID: Tim, I agree with you entirely. Did you ever whip up a soufflé, using only the best ingredients, only to have it fall as you took it out of the oven? If your answer to that question is yes, then you will understand what happens to "The Love Letter" and might be interested in seeing it anyway.

If you don't know what a soufflé is, then you will not care to see "The Love Letter" in the first place. The ingredients include a simple story, a group of down-to-earth characters, some comic moments, some touching moments, a couple of good performances, especially by Tom Selleck and Ellen DeGeneres, some well photographed, pretty scenery, and a romantic sound track.

Perhaps a tasty treat is in the works, I thought to myself after finally getting through the first half-hour, but this soufflé never started to rise in the proverbial pan.

TIM: If you're looking for character development, you might give this movie a try. Unfortunately, you'll be disappointed by the results. Thus, "The Love Letter" rates a dry well.

DAVID: "The Love Letter" never rises high enough to make it a real treat, and a couple of gratuitous uses of foul language do not help. The flat soufflé at the bottom of the pan may taste great but is still unservable. In the end, this flat soufflé is just like a dry well, lots of promise with no pay-off.

"The Love Letter," starring Kate Capshaw, Ellen DeGeneres and Tom Selleck rates two dry wells and is playing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

COMPUTER: Digital humans could be on screen in next five years

(From 1B)

So why not digital humans? Why not virtual stars?

"The digital actor has been the Holy Grail forever, since the dawn of 3-D computer animation," says Brad Lewis, executive producer of visual effects and vice president of Pacific Data Images, the firm that gave life to insects in "Antz." "There's always been someone trying to do a hand or a face or some aspect of a human being that looked real."

Some say realistic digital humans will be on-screen within the next five years. These synthespians could be brand-new characters or reincarnations of old legends, long cold in the grave. One Hollywood producer, for instance, is planning a film that would resurrect martial-arts phenomenon Bruce Lee; another is reportedly working on a digital version of an aging screen star (rumored to be Marlon Brando), restoring his youth and making him a contender for a manly role. Another producer got permission to re-create the late George Burns in a film called "The Best Man," and a California firm, Virtual Celebrity Productions, has obtained the rights to digitally reproduce a handful of stars, including Marlene Dietrich and W. C. Fields.

But some veterans of computer animation are wondering whether the quest is worth it. "I think it's a scientific goal, but I'm not sure it's an artistic goal," says Lewis. "Because it's the Holy Grail, though, there is a movement to achieve it. But once the technology progresses, the industry will come back to the question of 'Why?' "

Day of the flying logos

Back in the late '70s, the pioneers in computer animation weren't asking "Why?" They were asking "How?" There was no shrink-wrapped software for special effects; they invented it as they went along. Ellen Poon, visual effects supervisor for George Lucas's Industrial Light and Magic and senior technical director for "Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace," got her start in advertising 20 years ago. "We were doing flying logos," she says. "The computer power wasn't good enough to do anything more complicated than that."

The technology's leap forward was visible in 1982 with "Tron," the first film to incorporate computer graphics. At the time, the graphics were revolutionary: The plot, however, was revolting. "We all thought 'Tron' would open the floodgates for computer animation in feature films," recalls "Tron" animator Jeff Kleiser, co-director of the North Adams-based computer animation firm Kleiser-Walczak Construction Co. "It didn't do well at the box office, so they said, 'Oh, computer graphics doesn't work.' 'Tron' set back computer graphics a good decade."

Technology doesn't drive Hollywood: Money does. So despite other breakthroughs in technology over the years, the real push for digital animation didn't occur until the computer-generated "Toy Story" raked in millions at the box office in 1995 — and made a small fortune with its line of dolls and accessories. Shortly after the release, Pixar Animation Studios, which made the film for Disney, went public; the stock soared, leaving founder Steve Jobs with more than $1 billion.

Overnight, the race to create digital humans intensified.

By now, computer-generated creatures — once the domain of special-effects masters who built miniatures and puppets and prosthetics — are fairly routine.

But it's one thing to create crowd scenes that flash across the scene for a second; it's another thing entirely to emulate hair, skin, and facial expressions for major characters. The giant ape in last year's "Mighty Joe Young" solved the hair problem, making King Kong look like a big guy on his way to a costume party. And "Antz" starred creatures that communicated complex emotions, even if they were just a bunch of pests.

Still, no one has found a way to capture a human soul with a mathematical formula. And many of the folks who write the code insist that actors are never going to be made obsolete. "A human being brings something to the screen that is a function of their working mind," says John Andrew Berton Jr., Industrial Light and Magic's visual effects supervisor for "The Mummy." "There is inspiration there; it happens on the fly. You can't simulate that stuff. It's not a mathematical model. You can't confuse the computers with the artists. They're just a tool."

The downside of FX

Berton and others often cite George Lucas, the industry guru who insists that "Star Wars" is primarily about the story, not the special effects or the toy collectibles or the pizza boxes. "We have to make sure that what we're doing serves the story, not the interest of advancing the art of making digital characters," Berton says.

But that is precisely what has fueled criticism of both "The Mummy" and "Phantom Menace." In both cases, the computer steals the show, chewing up the very scenery it helped create. Is the quest for the perfect digital actor really worth it if the price is a loss of humanity?

That's a question the Screen Actors Guild is mulling as it watches the technology evolve. Guild president Richard Masur scoffs at the idea that synthespians will ever replace the real thing. "Actors are not inert objects to be manipulated by directors or technicians or even puppeteers," he says. "When you talk about replacing them, you assume that they have no creative input, no character choice. You're cutting out one of the major contributors to the finished work when you cut an actor out of the process."

And face it, movies have always been about illusion. "Look, reality has been messed with since the beginning of movies," says Masur. "In the original silent 'Ben Hur,' they did the chariot scene with one row of living people in the arena. The rest were wooden cutouts moving on sticks, but it looked like hundreds of people. In 'Titanic,' there were a lot of virtual people sliding into the water. They used to do it by throwing dummies. The only change is that the technology is more effective."

Precisely.

But how far will that technology go?

Dead celebrities society

And then there's Virtual Celebrity Productions, the California company that is aiming to simulate dead celebrities for commercial use. Its version of W. C. Fields looks like a stuffed mannequin with a puffy nose, but company founder Jeff Lotman, a former food-company executive, contends that the technology is getting better. "When I saw Tom Hanks shake hands with John Kennedy in 'Forrest Gump,' I thought, 'Wow, that's great.' Someone is going to create a photorealistic actor who can do whatever you want, and I wanted to be a part of it."

The effects in "Gump" were created by slicing old footage together, similar to techniques used for commercials that had Fred Astaire dancing with an electric broom and John Wayne shilling beer. Digital technology, however, won't be limited to existing footage. Lotman has already obtained the rights to reproduce such celebrities as Vincent Price, James Cagney, Groucho Marx, Gracie Allen, George Burns, and Sammy Davis Jr. But don't expect to see James Dean resurrected to star in a fourth feature film: His estate turned down Lotman's offer.

Masur of the Screen Actors Guild says he doesn't have any problem with Lotman's venture, since he is obtaining the legal rights from the estates.

But like the scientists whose discoveries wreak havoc in horror films, some digital pioneers are appalled by the application. "It's another indication of how careful we have to be as human beings not to damn our own futures," warns Lewis of Pacific Data Images. "I hope to God when I'm dead nobody tries to create a digital version of me. Now we're going to have to put in our wills, 'I cannot be digitally recreated in any form.' We're just going to make the lawyers rich again."

Such tinkering is making digital animators question their craft — even as they race to perfect the technology to make it possible. "The idea of dredging profits from the grave is unethical and immoral," says Kleiser. "It becomes spooky. We don't want to besmirch the careers of actors from the past.

But a film starring a digital Marilyn Monroe or a virtual George Burns will probably be nothing more than a novelty. And no one is predicting that acting coaches will have to retire or that stuntmen will have to pursue careers in the World Wrestling Federation. Until a computer figures out how to exude charisma, actors will get work. "I don't think if anyone had the choice between Harrison Ford and a digital actor that they'd opt to create it themselves — unless they wanted his nostrils pulled over his eyelids," Lewis says.

But back in the computer laboratories, some technical wizards are wondering just what it is they are creating. The real test of a digital actor will come when it can realistically perform a monologue in close-up. "We can do skin texture; we can pretty much do hair," Kleiser says. "We're better at the subtlety of motion of a human face. But I'm talking about a close-up, someone's face talking that looks realistic. I don't think we're there yet, and I'm not even sure it's worth it."

Even as the questions emerge, Universal Pictures is working on a hush-hush project that reportedly will break major ground on creating a photorealistic digital actor. The film isn't due out for two or three years; some industry sources think it's about to be canceled. Form will reflect content in this tale: It's a digital remake of a film called "Frankenstein."

Making a mummy

In "The Mummy," South African actor Arnold Vosloo shares the title role with a computer-generated spectral creature. In some scenes, he's half-human and half-mummy, with part of his face superimposed with petrified goo. It took several days to shoot one scene in which a bug crawls out of his neck and into his mouth; Vosloo performed the scene wearing tracking markers on the place where the bug would be superimposed by the computer during post-production.

By now, most actors are used to performing against a "blue screen," the blank background that is later filled in with digital scenery and effects. But three days to munch an imaginary beetle?

"By the third day, it was hard to be enthused about chewing a bug," says Vosloo, who trained in the theater in South Africa. "But in a way, it goes back to the classical stuff. Whether you're playing Hamlet or whatever, you often find yourself standing alone on a stage and talking about the mountains or the birds and the bees. It's the same thing. It's just visualization."

Most of the other actors in the adventure film failed to see the Shakespearean significance of the process. "They didn't have a good time," Vosloo says. "It's easy to get tired, and when you're so busy trying to hit computer marks, you can forget about the performance." The other actors had to imagine they were running from a spectral mummy or react in horror as they were devoured by invisible creepy crawlers.

The actors in "Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace" worked the same way; some 1,965 of the film's 2,200 shots are jazzed up with computer-generated imagery. Liam Neeson, for one, didn't find the experience freeing. "I'm retiring from movies next year," he told Redbook magazine. "Honest to God, I don't want to do it anymore. I'm not happy doing it. Film is a director's medium; it has nothing to do with actors. We are basically puppets, walking around, hitting marks, saying lines." Later, he said he was only kidding. Go figure.

DEAR ABBY

Tattoos only skin deep; not personality flaws

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a mature, 21-year-old college student who has a tattoo. (Gasp!) I read your column religiously and was infuriated with "Worried Parents in Washington." Getting a tattoo does not make you a bad person, a criminal or more likely to commit a crime. I have never even been pulled over for speeding. My friends with tattoos have never been in trouble with the law either, nor have they any experience with drugs. Tattooing is a form of expression, and becoming more and more commonplace with young people. The art has been around for thousands of years.

Van Buren

I found the comment, "People with tattoos are usually individuals who have been or still are in prison, and tattoos are not reflective of our cultural background," particularly offensive. "Worried Parents" should allow their daughter to make her own decision to keep or remove her tattoo. It does not change the person she is or will be. They should back off and allow her to make her own choices and live with the aftermath. — JENNIFER L. LEWIS, MARYVILLE, ILL.

DEAR JENNIFER: I wish you hadn't taken offense so quickly and had reread the sentence that bothered you. It read: "We discussed it with her and explained that in OUR country, people with tattoos are usually individuals who have been or still are in prison, and that tattoos are not reflective of OUR cultural background." In other words, they were raised in another culture where tattoos are less common and less accepted than they have become in this country. I agree that the tattoo will not change the daughter as a person.

The letter from "Worried Parents" needled more than a few readers. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked at the attitude of "Worried Parents in Washington." All my sister's friends at an all-girl Catholic school have tattoos, and they come from very high-class backgrounds.

Abby, those people can't control their daughter's entire life. Maybe if they had let her have a little more freedom when she was younger, this wouldn't have happened. —JULIE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR JULIE: We don't know whether the girl and her parents are in the U.S.A. permanently, or whether they plan to return to their country of origin in the next few years. In some countries, parents CAN control their daughters' entire lives.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 13, I worked in a beauty supply store. All of the wonderful women who worked there had tattoos. None had been in prison. During college, I worked in a Beverly Hills skin-care salon. I saw lots of naked bodies — rich, famous and otherwise. You wouldn't believe how many had little hidden tattoos. Not just rock stars and actors. Some were producers, writers, accountants, civil engineers, etc.

My favorite "tattooism": The difference between people with tattoos and people without is people who have them don't care if you don't have one. — THREE TATTOOS SO FAR

DEAR THREE TATTOOS: I am aware that people in many professions sport tattoos, including doctors, nurses, lawyers and college professors. For many, their tattoos have a deeply personal meaning. A reader from Berkeley informed me that in some cultures, the meaning can be spiritual or religious as well.

However, I would caution those who are contemplating permanent body art to think twice about it — because tattoos are harder to get rid of than they are to get.

DEAR READERS: This was sent to me by Lou Yelnick of Deerfield Beach, Fla.: "A lecturer was talking on endlessly. The audience started to become fidgety. A husband and wife were in the front row and the man fell asleep. Noticing this, the lecturer became red-faced and whispered to the wife, 'Wake up your husband.'

"She answered, 'You put him to sleep. You wake him up.'"

FAMILY MATTERS

Blended family feels strain

DEAR FAMILY: My mother divorced my father when I was 13 and my sister was 11. We both lived with our mother, but spent a lot of time with our father.

May

Over these 15 plus years that they have been divorced, my mother's story about "why" they divorced has changed several times. My father hasn't said much about it in one way or the other, but mother is determined to keep bringing it up. My sister and I don't want to talk about it at all, but for the last six months Mother keeps telling us things anyway.

Her original story (when I was 13) was that she and Dad "just didn't love each other anymore." What my sister and I remember is that Dad wanted to stay married and Mother didn't. Dad hardly said anything, but what we do know for sure is that we were at Dad's house almost every weekend while mother went out and partied. Mother is not going to change that part in my mind no matter what she says.

We both remember how sad Dad was all that time. Eventually, Dad found someone and remarried before Mother did. That really bugged Mother. We think that is part of the problem (because he is still happily married).

Mother was very negative about Dad's new wife, but she was — and is — just great toward my sister and me. We couldn't be more blessed. To make things even better, she had two boys who were younger than us, so we even got brothers in the deal. To this day, we are all a close "family."

Mother, on the other hand, married and divorced, then remarried again. We have never liked hardly any of the men she has dated and really hated our first stepfather. He was mean and drank way too much. He didn't like us and we didn't like him, so we stayed away as much as possible.

When Dad got married, Mother's first "story change" was that Dad had been having an affair with "that woman" and that is the reason for their divorce. She did work at Dad's office, but we don't believe Mother because we were with Dad all the time and they didn't start dating until over a year after the divorce.

Mother always, always complained about not having enough money, that the courts weren't fair and that it is "a man's world." I know for a fact that Dad always paid our child support on time, and he bought us both cars and paid for our college education. I now know that he didn't have to do that but he did it anyway.

Mother's latest version is that she doesn't have any retirement because Dad got it all. The man she's married to now is OK, but he is just like her and has spent every dime he ever made. Neither one of them has any retirement because they never worked any place long enough to earn it.

Sis and I are so tired of hearing all of this. My husband thinks that I should confront my mother on all her lying and make her accountable. But he has never liked my mother and he and Dad are close.

I want it to stop but I do not know what I should do. What do you recommend? TRAPPED AGAIN

DEAR TRAPPED: Many people try to rewrite history for their own purposes. Would it do any good to confront your mother about her various "rewrites?" Perhaps, but I doubt that it would get the desired results.

A basic assumption in dealing with others says that if the first person can present factual data to the second, then the second person will acknowledge those facts and react rationally. For example, I assume that at the time of your parents' divorce, your mother received one-half of your father's retirement. If you wanted to check on that, you could go to the courthouse of the county of their divorce and look up the records. The property settlement may be spelled out in the filings.

However, your mother has demonstrated over the years that she has no interest in being confused by facts. She has her stories and she is sticking with them. I have found that such people only get belligerent when confronted, and fight anyone or anything that suggests that they are simply reaping the consequences of their decisions.

Consider trying a "boundary setting" technique, where you and your sister declare any discussions having to do with your father or his wife off limits. Tell your mother about this new rule, and that the consequences for violating it is that you will terminate any conversation with her at once — leave her presence or hang up the telephone.

After she has experienced these consequences a few times, she probably will stop. However, some people simply refuse to stop violating this rule, so be prepared to not interact with your mother for an extended period of time.

I hope she will honor and accept your request. Your father sounds like an exemplary parent who richly deserves the consequence of his actions too. You and your sister enjoy being with him, his wife and her sons. How blessed you are to have a truly blended family.

Continue to be kind and loving towards everyone, but be firm about the consequences of inappropriate behaviors.

Life still rich, even without eyesight

By Lana Cunningham

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Norma Lewis, who is visually impaired, enjoys playing piano and singing at Southeast Senior Center. She also sings in the choir at Macedonia Baptist Church and volunteers at VAN Serving the Visually Impaired.

It was a bright sunny morning, the type that made Norma Lewis sing when she got up. Driving to her job as a music teacher at Pease Elementary, she stopped as usual at the intersection of Lamesa Road and Scharbauer, but suddenly the sun's glare blocked out her vision.

"I couldn't see anything but glare. I pulled to the side of the road and prayed, and it cleared up," she recalled.

That day in 1993 signaled the beginning to the end of her vision. With a hole in the pit of her stomach, Mrs. Lewis knew what it meant. She came from a long line of diabetics who had lost their vision, as did her mother.

In 1994, more than one laser surgery was performed on her eyes. A specialist in Lubbock tried everything in the book, and then some, so Mrs. Lewis could keep her vision. But on her 50th birthday, Aug. 9, 1994, she knew the sight was going while her husband Jessie was driving her to Lubbock. At the office, the specialist "declared me legally blind."

Another surgery helped some, and in October she could see the face of her son, Daryl. By November, the sight was gone, and she had exhausted all avenues.

Depression hit. "I used to lay in the bed. I boo-hooed and I cried and I went to Pity City," she said with a laugh. "Then one day I got up and cooked lunch. "

Her family, including father and aunts and uncles, had visited and spread their love. "

I felt loved and I got up and got with it." She remembered the story of the little train engine that puffed as it went up the steep mountain, "I think I can, I think I can."

The story's message worked on Mrs. Lewis. "I always pray to God. If I make one step, he'll make two." She often can be heard saying, "I can do it, I can do it."

Mrs. Lewis was on her way to living again, except that God had changed the course of her journey. Instead of working for Midland Independent School District, she now shares her love of music with churches and the Southeast Senior Center.

She was raised in a musical family, and her father, Doxie Hill, came to Midland when she was 11 to take a job as band director at Carver Junior and Senior High Schools. After graduating from Carver High School, she earned a degree in music education at Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, and took additional course work at the University of Texas at Austin and Angelo State University.

While in San Angelo, she met and married Jessie Lewis, and the couple has three sons, Maurice, Daryl and Deric. Eventually she returned to Midland and worked at Community Day Care Center as executive director before going back into teaching with her assignment at Pease Elementary.

Then came that fateful day when the blinding light changed the road for Mrs. Lewis.

With help from the Texas Commission for the Blind and several months spent at a rehabilitation center in Austin, Mrs. Lewis learned how to re-adjust. "I learned how to walk with a cane, how to cross streets. It was amazing — I learned how to be blind," she said with a laugh. "I learned how to cook and listen to books on tape." One son tape-recorded a chocolate chip cookie recipe which she makes.

"I learned how to tear up computers and put them back together, and how to use WordPerfect."

These skills gave her confidence to return home, but not to a job. Her days are filled with water aerobics, walking and music. "

With love from other people, I've excelled," she said. "The only problem I have is transportation. It's been through friends and senior citizens" that she travels to where she needs to go.

One friend picks her up for water aerobics in the mornings at the Northeast YMCA. Then she walks or finds a ride to the Southeast Senior Center. Rehabilation included learning how to walk from her house to the center. "You learn to listen for traffic."

She also has help from neighbors "who watch me like a hawk," Mrs. Lewis said.

Each Wednesday finds her at VAN, where she plays the piano and sings for the group, does arts and crafts or plays Bingo on Braille cards.

Returning to the piano was a hurdle she had to overcome. "There was a fear that I would make a mistake," she said. Her son, Deric, enticed her back to the keyboard. "He would start playing a song and I would say, 'Show me.'"

Then came the Sunday she returned as pianist for Macedonia Baptist Church. "I was scared and I when I got through I was boo-hooing. But they were tears of joy."

She not only plays for Macedonia Baptist, but also works with the young children's choir there and plays for Greater St. John's Baptist Church.

At Southeast Senior Center, Mrs. Lewis accompanies a choir of senior citizens. Before school was out, she performed an inspirational song for students in the Southeast After-School Program.

"'I believe I can fly,' " she sang softly. " 'I believe I can touch the sky. I can spread my wings and fly away.'

"That song has such a very deep meaning for me," Mrs. Lewis explained.

The loss of sight didn't bring darkness to the world she shares with so many others, a world into which she brings a shining light of her laughter and her music.

"We were born to die," she reasoned. "It's what you do in between that counts."

Clinton embraces victory, says 'We must finish job, build peace'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton claimed victory in the air war against Yugoslavia Thursday as American ground troops moved toward Kosovo to protect the return home of more than a million refugees. "We have to finish the job and build the peace," he said.

A wave of euphoria swept through the White House at the successful conclusion of an 11-week conflict that had brought biting criticism and doubts about Clinton's handling of the showdown with Slobodan Milosevic. Clinton said the Serb retreat was a vindication for America's fighting forces.

"We have a real chance for Europe to be put right," Clinton said in a congratulatory call to French President Jacques Chirac. "Twenty years from now we'll look back on this as a great day for Europe." The president spent much of the morning on the telephone with world leaders, including Russian President Boris Yeltsin, British Prime Minister Tony Blair and NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana.

Army Gen. Wesley Clark, the top NATO commander, told Clinton in a call: "I knew we would win it. I knew you would win it, Mr. President."

"This has been a very happy day at the White House because of the peace agreement in Kosovo," Clinton said at a South Lawn celebration with the 1998 World Series champs, the New York Yankees. "It's a good day for America."

Seventy-nine days after addressing the nation at the start of the air campaign, Clinton was returning to the Oval Office to speak about the end of the bombing and the challenge of safely returning refugees to Kosovo.

"This is going to be difficult," Defense Secretary William Cohen said. "I don't think anyone should minimize the hardship that's going to be involved." He said that "the world is going to be outraged" once humanitarian groups get into Kosovo and see evidence of atrocities. Cohen said he hoped Milosevic would be held accountable by his people for the ordeal they've suffered.

The House, meanwhile, backed away from Republican-sponsored legislation that would cut off funds for Kosovo after Sept. 30. The turnabout came after Clinton promised Congress to seek express approval for a peacekeeping force in Kosovo and to manage it "without harming military readiness." Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., said, "Congress would be the laughingstock of the world" if the measure had passed in the wake of the Kosovo agreement.

More than 850,000 ethnic Albanians were forced from their homes and fled to Albania and Macedonia. An additional 500,000 also were displaced but are believed to remain inside Kosovo.

"In the past four months we have seen some of the worst inhumanity in our lifetime, but we've also seen the bravery of our troops, the resolve of our democracy, the decency of our people and the courage and determination of the people of Kosovo," Clinton said after NATO announced it was suspending its bombing campaign.

"We now have a moment of hope," the president said. "And we have to finish the job and build the peace."

The United States has pledged 7,000 troops for a 50,000-member peacekeeping force in Kosovo. The vanguard of those forces went ashore in Greece and began heading overland to Macedonia to spearhead the entry into Kosovo.

"We face challenges and risks in bringing home the refugees and restoring stability," the president said. He declined to estimate how long the peacekeepers would stay, saying, "I don't think we should put a timetable on it."

The United States also is prepared to help European nations rebuild Kosovo and neighboring countries aligned with the West, though Clinton said America shouldered most of the cost of the air campaign and now Europe will carry the heaviest burden of the rebuilding.

Outbreak of new virus reported, spread by e-mail

NEW YORK (AP) — A new computer virus was spreading across the Internet Thursday, infecting machines by e-mail like the recent Melissa virus — but causing more damage by ruining computer files.

Anti-virus teams in the government and at universities were trying to determine the severity of the outbreak of "Worm.Explore.Zip," a virus that arrives by e-mail with an attached file that can infect a computer. Numerous software companies issued warnings about the virus.

It wasn't immediately clear how many machines or networks had been stricken. MSNBC reported that the virus was "causing havoc with e-mail" at its parent companies, Microsoft, NBC and General Electric.

Virus experts would only say that the volume of calls reporting problems was substantially higher than normal. Some Web sites took their e-mail systems off line to slow the spread of infection, said Shawn Hernan of the Computer Emergency Response Team at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

Trend Micro, a maker of anti-virus software, said five large customers reported Thursday that their systems were infected. Trend Micro declined to name the companies.

The virus spreads much like the Melissa virus that overwhelmed computer networks in late March, worming its way into the address books of personal computers and shooting off new e-mails to those addresses.

Worm.Explore.Zip arrives by e-mail with a friendly message: "Hi (Recipient Name)! I received your email and I shall send you a reply ASAP. Till then, take a look at the attached zipped docs."

The virus actually isn't dangerous unless the computer opens the "zipped docs," a term referring to a compressed file sent along with the e-mail. By opening that file, a computer user inadvertently activates the virus.

The Worm.Explore.Zip virus hunts through a computer's hard drive and deletes the information in files created by popular software programs, including Microsoft Word and Microsoft Excel.

Government grants approval to match funds on donations made over Internet

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a click and a credit card, Americans will be able to send contributions to presidential hopefuls over the Internet and earn the candidates extra financial assistance from the government.

The Federal Election Commission gave a major boost to fund raising in cyberspace on Thursday, agreeing to make credit card donations eligible for the federal matching funds presidential candidates receive.

"We recognize the reality that the Internet is here and a big part of our life," FEC Chairman Scott Thomas said after the 6-0 vote. "We need to let it be used freely."

Eager to find new outlets for money, financially struggling GOP presidential hopeful Lamar Alexander immediately hailed the decision as the "greatest innovation in how we conduct campaigns since the advent of television."

Former Sen. Bill Bradley, who is challenging Vice President Al Gore for the Democratic nomination, prompted the ruling by asking the FEC this spring to qualify his Internet donations for the federal aid.

While it was legal for candidates to accept donations over the Internet, the FEC had refused until Thursday to count those donations toward the millions in matching dollars the presidential candidates receive each election.

Under Watergate-era campaign finance laws, the government matches the first $250 of each individual contribution that a presidential candidate receives. In return, the candidate agrees to strict spending limits.

"That's a big victory for us," Bradley said. "We felt from the beginning that the Internet was going to be a big part of what we did."

Even before the decision, Bradley had begun raising money over the Internet — $169,000 through this month.

Congress has 30 days in which it could overturn the new rules, which will apply to all contributions received since Jan. 1.

The ruling will have a sweeping effect for the major candidates, all of whom have Web sites. Experts said it will prompt campaigns to make their fund-raising appeals by e-mail, a much cheaper option than traditional phone banks and letter solicitations.

It costs virtually nothing to send e-mails, and it's much faster than direct mail.

After six failures in a row, antimissile system scores a hit

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — After six straight failures, a $3.8 billion experimental missile-defense system scored its first hit Thursday, shooting down a rocket in a test that left a puff of smoke and a twisted white trail of vapor across the desert sky.

It was a much-needed boost to the Army's effort to create an antimissile umbrella that would protect ground troops across an entire war zone.

The project, the Theater High-Altitude Area Defense system, is designed to use ground-launched missiles to destroy incoming enemy missiles. Some critics have complained that the cost is too high and have expressed doubts over whether it will even work.

"For all of those people who stood on the House floor and said missile defense doesn't work, guess what? Today we hit a bullet with a bullet," Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., one of the most outspoken advocates of a national missile-defense system, said in Congress.

The previous failures were an inevitable part of the process of developing a new technology, he said.

THAAD is made by Lockheed Martin Missiles & Space, which was fined $15 million after THAAD's sixth failure March 29. If THAAD cannot make a second successful intercept by July 16, Lockheed will owe an extra $20 million in penalties.

The target missile lifted off first, then the THAAD missile lifted off 120 miles to the south from White Sands and struck the target seven minutes later, creating a burst of debris in the clear sky.

Taxpayers for Common Sense, a Washington-based group that has been critical of the program, was unconvinced.

"The 1-for-7 record isn't that much better than 0-for-6," said Brian Hughes, director of the group's national security reform project. It's a batting average that shouldn't put that in the starting lineup for missile defense."

Odessa's Zubia keeps pro record unblemished at 8-0

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

The embroidery on the front of Jesse Gutierrez' boxing trunks spelled out "Spoiler." That turned out to be inaccurate.

Odessa's Humberto Zubia overcame a bloody nose to earn a unanimous decision over Gutierrez and keep his perfect professional record intact at 8-0-0 Thursday night at the Midland Center.

The junior welterweight bout was the sixth of seven \fights on the card during the Midland stop of the Miller Lite Texas Title Belt Boxing Series. Two other Odessans fought on the card: middleweight Jorge Trejo won his pro debut and welterweight Armando Zapata ended up in a draw.

Zubia, an Odessa College student who entered the ring to loud cheers from the home folks, had an especially impressive second round, connecting solidly with Gutierrez several times. However, Gutierrez, from Castroville, mostly greeted Zubia's punches with challenging looks. Gutierrez fell once in the second, stumbling into the ropes.

"I heard he would put pressure on me," Zubia said. "I expected him to come after me, so I used my jab to keep him away."

Zubia coudn't keep him away the entire time. Zubia's nose started bleeding in the fourth round.

"I think it's broken. He caught me with a straight right," Zubia said. "I broke the left side a month and a half ago, so I knew it was going to bust open. I expected it."

Gutierrez also didn't seem to be bothered by most of the punishment.

"He was pretty strong," Zubia said. "I think he's gone the distance before, and this was my first time to go eight rounds."

At the end of the eight rounds, Zubia had his unanimous decision. Judges Levi Martinez and Jesse Reyes both scored it 79-73, while Jerry McKenzie had the fight at 78-74.

Former assistant coach Willard "Junsie" Cotten is now the new men's basketball head coach at Midland College. Cotten takes over for Pat Rafferty, who after five years leaves the Chaparral program to take an assistant coaching position at the University of Louisville.

Thursday, Willard "Junsie" Cotten was named the new head coach of the Midland College men's basketball team. Here are the records of his predecessors.

Midland College felt good about Willard "Junsie" Cotten and in turn Cotten felt good about Midland College. So in the end the decision was simple.

Midland College announced Cotten as the new men's head basketball coach Thursday to replace Pat Rafferty, who has accepted an assistant coaching job at the University of Louisville under Denny Crum.

Cotten, who for the past two years was an assistant under Rafferty at Midland College, proved to be a logical choice for school officials, bypassing a national search in favor of the 26-year-old with no previous head coaching experience.

"Normally we would go more to the outside looking for candidates for this position, but we feel that we have someone here very special at Midland College and someone very deserving of the job," said Midland College athletic director Joe Williams. "He comes highly recommended by coach Rafferty and has his full support. I know the administration and myself also give him 100 percent of our support.

Rafferty leaves Chap program to take assistant coach position at Louisville

By Oscar LeRoy

Pat Rafferty said the hardest thing about taking the assistant coaching job at the University of Louisville was leaving the players he's recruited to Midland College.

"It's a wonderful move for me and it's a great opportunity for me," said Rafferty in a phone interview from Louisville, Ky., where he attended a press conference announcing the new hiring in the Cardinals basketball program. "There's an emotional downside for me, though. Leaving Midland College and the kids is not an easy thing. I really like them and was really looking forward to coaching them."

Rafferty resigned this week as Midland College men's basketball head coach to take the job in Louisville under legendary coach Denny Crum. In Rafferty's place, two-year Rafferty assistant Junsie Cotten was named as head coach in a Thursday morning press conference.

Andrews beats Brenham for spot in Class 4A final

By Mike Butts
MRT Correspondent

AUSTIN — Ultimately it may have been the most advantageous swinging strike in Mike Hudgens' career.

It allowed the Andrews senior left fielder to gather himself enough for the game winning hit in the Mustangs 4-3 Class 4A state semifinal win over Brenham Thursday at Austin's Disch-Falk Field. The Mustangs will play Corpus Christi Calallen in today's 1:30 p.m. final for their first appearance in the state high school baseball championship since1969, when the lost to Taylor 3-0.

Hudgens hit a sacrifice fly to left field with the bases loaded, one out and the score tied 3-3 in the last inning before about 3,500 people on a typically muggy June Austin day. With Brenham reliever Danny Muegge on the mound, it scored first baseman Brandon Long to win the game.

The Mustangs can bring home Andrews first-ever state baseball title with a win today.

"All I could think about was staying calm because I was shaking like a leaf on a tree up there," Hudgen said after his team went 34-3 on the year. "When I chased a pitch I knew I needed to relax. The next one came down the middle and I just tried to get it into the air."

Cooper stops Coahoma with 2A semifinal defeat

By Mike Butts

AUSTIN — This just isn't Coahoma's decade at the state baseball tournament.

The Bulldogs earned a right to play the state final four for the fourth time in the past five years. And after falling 4-1 to Cooper in the Class 2A state semifinal at Toney Burger Field Thursday, they have now failed to make the finals all four times.

The Bulldogs did, however, tie a Class 2A record for three straight appearances in the state tournament. But it was no consolation for the downhearted 'Dogs, who avoided a shutout with a run in the final inning. This despite Coahoma starter Delvin White entering the seventh inning with a chance to tie the tournament record for strikeouts by a 2A pitcher.

"We led them in hits and beat them in strikeouts. We had everything going for us," said White, who fell four short of his career high and three short of the tournament mark with 14 strikeouts and gave up two hits. "I guess you could call it bad luck."

Cooper took advantage of several Coa-

Missions give 'Hounds 2nd-straight pounding

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The San Antonio Missions came to the Rock Yard Thursday night with eyes rolling like a Shreveport slot machine.

Hiram Bocachica went 6-for-6 at the plate and hit for the cycle while Tony Mota hit two home runs and drove in seven as the Missions buried the Midland RockHounds, 23-8.

The Missions put 26 hits on the board, including five homers overall as the 'Hounds' pitching staff got shelled again. The Missions had a huge seventh inning, a frame where they scored nine runs and sent 10 batters to the plate before an out was recorded. Mota hit a three-run homer in the inning while Mike Metcalfe produced a three-run triple to highlight the action.

Mission runners were rounding the bases so fast that the Christensen Stadium scoreboard couldn't keep up with the action, running out of numbers to record the results.

The San Antonio win evens this six-game series at 2-2 and the winning team has scored 10 or more runs in every one of the games.

It wasn't the Midland bats that lost this one. The RockHounds scored eight

Hull scores winning goal; Stars get even with Sabres, Hasek

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Stars finally found a strategy good enough to beat the Dominator: Desperation.

Brett Hull, who feared he might never see the Stanley Cup finals again, scored the winning goal for Dallas with 2:50 remaining and the Stars staved off a possibly lethal loss by beating Buffalo 4-2 Thursday night to even the series at a game apiece.

Hull, one of the NHL's top scorers for years but absent from the Stanley Cup finals since his rookie year in 1986, beat hard-to-beat Dominik Hasek with a wicked slap shot from above the right circle dot.

"Where he put it was unstoppable," Sabres coach Lindy Ruff said. "Dom might have had a chance, but a defenseman or Michael Peca slid in front of him and he didn't see it. It was just a perfect shot."

The Stars almost had to win, as only three clubs in the last 60 years have rallied to win the Stanley Cup after losing the first two games.

"We just we knew we had to win this game. It's like a Game 7 for us," Hull said.

Now, the Stars have the momentum heading into Game 3 Saturday night at Marine Midland Arena. The team that has won Game 2 has won 26 of the past 28 Stanley Cups, including every team in the last 10 years.

Hull's goal capped a determined Dallas comeback after the heavily favored Stars were contained by the Sabres' smothering defense for two periods, only to bury Buffalo with a 19-4 shot advantage in the final period.

They also took several shots at Hasek when he strayed from the crease, including one by Mike Modano that was labeled a "cheap shot" by Ruff.

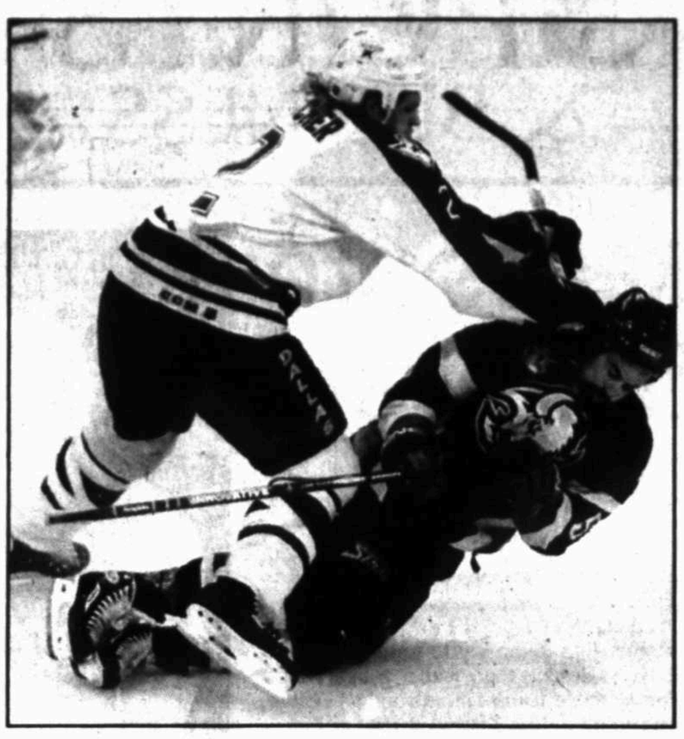
"We were desperate tonight," the Stars' Joe Nieuwendyk said. "Once you get one or two by him, your confidence grows a little bit."

Dallas salvaged a 1-1 tie in the series at home despite being 1-for-17 on the power play, 0-6 in Game 2.

The Stars' victory assures the Stanley Cup playoffs won't end in a sweep for the first time in five years. Western Conference teams had scored the last three sweeps, by Detroit in 1998 and 1997 and Colorado in 1996.

This series seems so close so far, even seven games might not be enough to decide the true winner.

"I've never seen two teams play with a passion like these two did," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said.



AP Photo

Dallas Stars' Derian Hatcher (2) knocks Buffalo Sabres' Jason Woolley (5) to the ice during the first period of Game 2 of the Stanley Cup finals in Dallas. The Stars won the game 4-2.

"There's going to be no runaway here," Ruff said. "It's going to be a roller-coaster ride. Nobody said this was going to be a four- or five-game series."

Still, the victory extracted a potentially costly price. Dallas played the final 10 minutes without Modano, who injured a wrist. He is listed as day-to-day, but will be re-examined Friday.

"He is not out for the series, hopefully," Hitchcock said.

Even at the end, Dallas had to fight to preserve the lead, killing off a rare late-game power play resulting from Derian Hatcher's high-sticking penalty at 17:31. Hatcher made up for his mistake, scoring into an empty net at 19:34.

The Sabres, trying to put a 2-0 stranglehold on the series before playing at home, fell behind 2-1 despite dominating the first two periods, then tied it on Alexei Zhitnik's power-play goal at 5:36 of the third.

It was a lethal combination for the two-time defending NHL regular-season champion Stars — Darryl Sydor in the box and Buffalo on the power play.

Royals ownership not likely to be resolved in September

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Baseball owners are not likely to act on Miles Prentice's bid to buy the Kansas City Royals at their September meeting, commissioner Bud Selig said Thursday.

Prentice, who has put together a group of more than 40 investors to buy the team for $75 million, met for almost three hours with the ownership committee Thursday.

Prentice, who owns the Midland RockHounds, reached his agreement with the team last Nov. 13. He and Royals president Mike Herman had been hopeful of getting approval of the owners in September, which Selig said was "a possibility but not likely." The owners' next scheduled meeting after that is in January.

"The purchase of a baseball team is a unique process," Selig said. "We've had other large groups. Every one of these has its own indigenous characteristics, which makes it difficult to assess and compare one to another. They made a very good presentation."

Selig said the size of Prentice's group was "not a particular concern," but was evasive when asked if the group's finances worried the committee. Baseball officials have expressed concern about whether the group has enough money to successfully operate the team.

While Selig had met previously with Prentice, Herman and Royals chairman David Glass, this was the first time information on the sale was given to the full ownership committee.

"I am very confident we will have baseball in Kansas City and Miles Prentice will be the owner," Herman said.

Miami, Rice coaches see similarities

By Tim Korte
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — To hear Miami coach Jim Morris and Rice coach Wayne Graham, college baseball isn't about home runs anymore. Both insisted Thursday their matchup to open the College World Series is about pitching.

The top-seeded Hurricanes (46-13) and No. 8 Owls (58-13) play Friday night after the College World Series, celebrating its 50th year in Omaha, opens with a matinee between No. 4 Oklahoma State (46-19) and No. 5 Alabama (51-14).

Asked Thursday what Rice needs to do to beat Miami, Graham said it depends on what the Owls can do against Hurricanes right-hander Alex Santos (11-3, 3.10 ERA).

"My concern is scoring off Santos," Graham said. "He's pretty good. We've got to pitch well, play defense well and scratch a few runs off Santos."

Morris, seated next to Graham during a news conference for the eight CWS coaches, returned the compliment for Rice ace Mario Ramos (13-2, 2.42).

"I could throw in Ramos and duplicate what he just said. Any time you're going against a left-hander, you always have to take advantage of every scoring opportunity you get," Morris said.

Morris said this isn't the typical Miami collection of sluggers with their mighty alumninum bats.

"I'd say we're a pitching and defense team," Morris said. "That's kind of amazing to sit up here and say with all the talk of alumninum bats. Our guys play hard. They feel someone is going to get it done for them."

Morris said that, in any given game, he doesn't know who will carry the Hurricanes. One of the leaders is shortstop Bobby Hill (.378, 9 HRs, 28 RBIs), who stole 50 bases this season to become Miami's career leader with 137.

Rice has won 31 of its last 36, and the Owls got gritty after losing their openers in the regional and super regionals. The top hitters are outfielder Will Ford (.403, 11, 70) and shortstop Damon Thames (.377, 9, 68).

According to rankings established by Collegiate Baseball, Miami is No. 1 nationally and Rice No. 2. But forget about it.

Alabama enters the College World Series with a 15-game winning streak and has won 23 of its last 25. Not bad for a team that sometimes has as many as five freshmen in the lineup.

Baylor Pitcher gets award

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — In high school, Jason Jennings was a catcher. In college, he became Baylor's ace pitcher and the Bears' top hitter. And on Thursday, Jennings was named Baseball America's player of the year.

Jennings, selected as the 16th overall pick in last week's amateur draft by the Colorado Rockies, also was named player of the year by Collegiate Baseball.

Baylor coach Steve Smith touted Jennings' skills as a cleanup hitter and a pitcher. Jennings hit .368 with 17 home runs and 68 RBIs this spring and was 13-2 with a 2.58 ERA. The Rockies want him as a pitcher.

Smith said he is looking forward to the day when the Rockies let Jennings hit.

ROCK: 'Hounds lose 2nd to Missions

(From 1C)

times, including a five-run seventh in which Justin Bowles launched a grand slam homer.

The Midland arms, however, were another story as the 'Hounds marched through five pitchers, who gave up 20 earned runs. Ironically, reliever Jake O'Dell (1-1) took the loss and he gave up only one run in 3 1/3 innings of work.

Bocachica became the first player to hit for the cycle at the Rock Yard this season. He homered in the first, singled in the fifth and sixth, doubled in the seventh, tripled in the eighth and singled again in the ninth. In fact, San Antonio hit for the cycle as a team in the seventh inning alone and Glenn Davis doubled twice in the inning.

ROCK PILE: Midland starter Luis Vizcaino pitched only 1 1/3 innings before leaving with a blister on his pitching hand... The 'Hounds have sent Jason Anderson (1-6, 9.32 ERA) to Class A Visalia. He will be replaced by Kevin Gregg, Oakland's 15th-round draft pick in 1996 who is promoted from Visalia. Gregg won't take long for a chance to produce for the pitching hungry 'Hounds. He starts tonight in Game 5 of the series... Josue Espada, who saw his 17-game hitting streak (.515) on Wednesday started another streak with a first inning hit... San Antonio's Bocachica has now hit in five straight games and has reached base in 32 consecutive games... Mission Luke Allen has 10 RBIs in this series and has 20 RBIs in eight games at the Rock Yard this year... Allen had six RBIs in a game here on May 8, but Mota passed that mark with seven RBIs Thursday...

Conder selected to Shrine game

Midland High tight end Luke Conder is one of 36 high school football players selected to play for the state of Texas in the fifth annual CalTex Shrine Game June 26.

Conder, who is listed as an offensive lineman on the Texas roster and was a second team All-District 4-5A pick, will attend North Texas next season on a scholarship. He is the only 4-5A player to be selected for a stellar Texas squad.

Conder will try to help Texas break a four-game California winning streak in the game, which will be played at Cerritos College in Southern California.

MC honored with selections

The Midland Christian softball team, which won the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 4A state championship last spring, had two players who were named to the all-state team.

A pair of seniors, pitcher Mindi Sheppard and catcher Bethany Spradlin, were named to the first team. Junior Holly Lemons was named to the second team while sophomore Sarah Lemons and freshman Danna Sheppard were honorable mention picks.

For the Midland Christian baseball team, senior catcher Trent Lee was a second team selection.

The Northern Braves defeated the North Central Cardinals 6-3. Dylan Carpenter was the winning pitcher and doubled for the Braves along with Bryan Hastings and Joe Brosig. Orlando Figueroa, Tyler West and Ben Bolla doubled for the Cardinals.

The Eastern Yankees beat the Northern Astros 4-3. Rudy Munoz was the winning pitcher while Bobby Whiteside homered for the Astros.

The tournament runs through Saturday with the city championship game set for 10 a.m.

BOX: Trejo wins decision

(From 1C)

Gutierrez' record fell to 9-4-0.

After the fifth fight of the night, a draw decision left Zapata kicking himself over not fighting harder in the fourth and last round of his welterweight bout with Arsen Aivazian.

"It's my fault," said Zapata (1-0-1). "I felt like I won the first two rounds, but I lost the last one, and that's what made it a draw.

"I tried to keep my hands up — because I heard he was real strong — and be defensive," he said. "I think I should have been more aggressive."

Zapata had his home-town supporters, while Aivazian, from Fort Worth, drew some support due to his appearance. He bore a striking resemblance to Sylvester Stallone, and his red, white and blue trunks made him look even more like the movies' Rocky Balboa. He was nearly as muscular as Rocky.

"I was kind of intimidated, because he looked bigger than me," Zapata said. "But looks don't win."

Trejo, a Floridian who moved to Odessa two years ago, got a split decision in the first fight of the night, a middleweight win over David Thompson (3-2-0), who was announced as being from Lubbock. Judges Martinez and Reyes both had Trejo winning 39-37 in the four-round bout, while McKenzie chose Thompson, 39-37.

Trejo looked tired early on, and he threw some punches that missed wildly, but he had enough to win his first professional fight after a long layoff.

"It's been awhile," he said. "My last amateur fight was probably five years ago. A lot of my friends have been pushing me, (saying) 'When are you going to turn pro?'"

Both fighters were visibly tired in the fourth round, keeping their guards down (or almost nonexistent), but neither could take advantage for a knockout punch.

"I was trying to take him out," Trejo said with a chuckle, "but at the same time I was thinking I didn't want him to take me out. I was tired."

In the main bout, a fight for the heavyweight Texas Title belt, Calvin Lampkin (16-2-0) of Dallas gained a unanimous decision over Wesley Martin (10-17-7) of Sebia.

Earlier, a broken hand stopped Starr Johnson (1-4-0) of Killeen after only one round of a welterweight bout, giving Nelson Alexander (3-2-0) of Arlington the win by technical knockout.

Jesse Lara (2-0-0) of Dallas earned a win over Aureo Dominguez (2-4-0) of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, in a featherweight fight that was stopped by the referee 15 seconds into the third round.

In a junior welterweight bout, Carlos Rodriguez (1-1-0) of El Paso earned a unanimous decision over Jeff Clayton (0-3-1) of Pittsburg.

This stop on the Texas Title Belt Series, one of 23 stops in 14 Texas cities, benefitted the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. The crowd was announced as 805.

Trinidad says Las Vegas not neutral site for fight

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Felix Trinidad wants more influence in the selection of judges for the welterweight unification fight against Oscar De La Hoya, saying Las Vegas is not neutral ground for the Sept. 18 championship.

Trinidad and his managers also said they want to set aside 3,000 of the 12,000 tickets for the fight at the Mandalay Bay Hotel for fellow Puerto Ricans to help eliminate any hometown advantage.

Trinidad's handlers say they are concerned because Bob Arum, De La Hoya's promoter, is based in Las Vegas and De La Hoya is from southern California.

The fight must be "absolutely fair," said Trinidad's manager and father, Felix Trinidad Sr., because it will be the biggest match since a disputed March 13 bout between Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis.

Boxing fans disgusted by allegations of misconduct by judges in the Holyfield-Lewis fight won't pay the $49 pay-per-view fee.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks fell Thursday as good economic news for Japan stimulated Wall Street's fears that the unfettered growth of the U.S. economy will prompt the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 69.02 to close at 10,621.27. The blue-chip index, down as much as 164 points earlier in the session, began marching back in the last hour of trading.

Broader stock indicators were also lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 15.82 to 1,302.82, and the Nasdaq composite index, dominated by technology stocks, fell 34.73 to 2,484.62.

Stocks came under pressure after the Japanese government said the nation's gross domestic product grew 1.9 percent in the first three months of the year — a larger increase than expected, and the first since the summer of 1997.

On the New York Stock Exchange, declining issues outnumbered advancers by a 2-to-1 margin. NYSE composite volume totaled 853.38 million shares, compared with 794.35 million in the previous session.

The NYSE composite index fell 6.43 to 622.85, and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 4.74 to 768.25.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 2.92 to 442.27.

Gas tumbles

(AP) NEW YORK — Natural gas futures fell sharply Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange after figures showed a surprising increase in storage last week despite above-normal temperatures.

Other energy futures also retreated. On other markets, silver futures rose sharply, while wheat advanced.

The American Gas Association reported inventories jumped by 91 billion cubic feet, or 5.3 percent, last week. That puts storage levels virtually on par with last year.

It also was the largest increase in nearly a year and comes at a time when demand from utilities for natural gas to power generators is expected to increase. Natural gas demand typically rises sharply with the advent of hot or cold weather, as Americans turn on air conditioners and fans or heaters.

Energy futures traded also were surprised earlier this week by increases in crude inventories and by an unexpected decline in unleaded gasoline demand.

The storage figures cast a pall over a market that had shown signs of resiliency amid expectations of hotter weather and producer cutbacks could finally combine to reduce large U.S. surpluses.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar edged lower against the yen Thursday after riding a foreign exchange rollercoaster that included an unusual intervention by the Bank of Japan that boosted the U.S. currency.

The dollar also fell against the euro as traders bought euros and dumped Swiss francs, helping the euro strengthen overall.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 118.84 Japanese yen, down from 118.93 late Wednesday. The euro was quoted at $1.0489, up from $1.0465.

Report: Cornyn, SCI met last month

Attorney general met with company before issuing opinion, newspaper says

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Cornyn met last month with representatives of a funeral home company fighting a $445,000 state fine, then last week issued a legal opinion that could help the company avoid the penalty, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

Among lawyers listed on the legal opinion was Cornyn's top assistant, Andy Taylor.

Before joining Cornyn's staff, Taylor was a partner at the Houston law firm which represents the funeral home company, Service Corporation International. Lawyers for that firm, Locke, Liddell & Sapp, prepared a legal brief for Cornyn in the SCI case, the American-Statesman reported

SCI, the world's largest funeral home company, is fighting the fine that was recommended by the Texas Funeral Service Commission.

Cornyn's spokesman, Ted Delisi, said Thursday that Taylor recognized the potential conflict of interest and removed himself from deliberations and meetings on the case. Delisi said there was no memo or other written record of that decision.

He said Taylor's name was on the written legal opinion because of his position as first assistant attorney general. Taylor wasn't available to comment, Delisi said.

The spokesman said Cornyn invites input from all parties when legal opinions are sought and that there was nothing improper in meeting with SCI's representatives.

"The opinions committee sends out letters asking for input," he said.

The president of a national consumer group that monitors the funeral industry criticized Cornyn for meeting with SCI officials and said Taylor's name on this opinion raises additional questions about conflicts of interest.

"What are they doing meeting with SCI?" asked Lamar Hankins, a San Marcos lawyer, who is president of the Funeral and Memorial Societies of America and its Austin chapter.

"The Taylor thing certainly gives the appearance of impropriety, but to be meeting with someone who has a case in controversy against the state and be meeting privately with them — that is far beyond an appearance of impropriety," Hankins said.

"I really cannot understand how the attorney for the state of Texas would engage in that," he said.

Revelations of the May 7 meeting between the attorney general and SCI came on a day that the former head of the Funeral Service Commission filed a complaint with the State Bar of Texas about Cornyn's actions in the case.

Eliza May, who was fired as the funeral agency's director in February, had been in charge of the state's case against SCI.

The agency has accused two dozen SCI funeral homes of using unlicensed embalming companies, allowing unsupervised apprentices to embalm bodies and of failing to inform families of how much it paid outside companies to perform the services.

SCI contends the state funeral agency misinterpreted state embalming laws when it recommended the $445,000 in fines last year.

Cornyn's written opinion, which carries the force of law, said licensed embalmers can work as independent contractors in another company's funeral home without a commercial embalming license, and that, in general, funeral homes are not required to disclose what they pay a third-party embalmer.

SCI, which owns nearly 3,700 funeral homes and cemeteries around the world, gave Cornyn a $2,000 campaign contribution after his November election, the American-Statesman reported.

Bruce LaBoon, co-managing partner of Locke, Liddell & Sapp, said Taylor never worked on SCI matters while at the law firm.

Unemployment at highest level since January

WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for unemployment benefits rose last week to the highest level since early January, but economists shrugged it off as a temporary blip in a job market that remains exceptionally healthy.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that 323,000 Americans filed new claims for jobless benefits for the week ending June 5 — up 14,000 from the previous week.

The jump pushed jobless claims to the highest level since the week of Jan. 9, when there were 358,000. After reaching that peak, they declined for nearly two months. They remained below 300,000 for nine straight weeks, the longest stretch in 26 years.

The four-week moving average for jobless claims, which smoothes out week-to-week volatility, also was up slightly to 308,250. That was the highest level since May 1.

The increase in last week's new claims was unexpected, but government analysts noted that the reporting period included the Memorial Day holiday.

Given that, economists cautioned against reading too much into the latest weekly figure. They also expressed doubts that the one-week increase would influence the Federal Reserve very much as it considers at month's end whether to raise interest rates to slow down the economy and keep inflation under control.

"It's too soon to say that it would ease the Fed's concern, but potentially there are the seeds of some good news there" if weekly claims continue to grow, reflecting signs of a needed slowdown in the economy, said Astrid Adolfson, an economist with MCM MoneyWatch.

Morgan Stanley Dean Witter economist Kevin Flanagan agreed, adding that the Fed is likely to give more weight to upcoming government reports on consumer prices and producer prices.

Federal Reserve Board Governor Roger Ferguson signaled Thursday that Fed policy makers will be watching inflation indicators closely when they meet June 29-30.

"We must be concerned that, with the economy operating at such a high level of labor utilization and robust growth, we might be in some jeopardy of setting the stage for an upturn in inflation," Ferguson said in a speech prepared for delivery to a business group in East Hanover, N.J.

High-flying Internet stocks boost U.S. economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The impact of the Internet on the nation's economy exceeds $301 billion in revenues and accounts for more than 1.2 million jobs, growing over the past four years to a level other industries took decades to reach, a study says.

The study, by an economics research center that described its results as "highly conservative," found that electronic commerce — the worldwide purchases across the Internet of books, automobiles and other goods and services from U.S. companies — generated nearly $102 billion last year.

The remaining revenues came from companies that create hardware or software, support the Internet's infrastructure or act as intermediaries for digital transactions, such as online travel agents or brokerages.

The study, which will be updated four times annually, was funded by Cisco Systems Inc., the $8.5 billion company in San Jose, Calif., that makes specialized computer hardware for the Internet. It was conducted by the Center for Research on Electronic Commerce at the University of Texas in Austin.

The total Internet-related revenue of $301 billion is about 4 percent of the nation's gross domestic product — the broadest measure of economic health — and electronic commerce is about 1.3 percent of GDP. But Cisco's chairman, John Chambers, predicted dramatic growth will continue.

"Internet business, in today's times — it's only in the second or third inning," Chambers said Thursday. "Think about how long it took other industries to reach $300 billion. Literally, in under a decade, we've reached a level that it took other industries 100 years to reach."

Ethan Harris, deputy chief economist for Lehman Brothers, said the study's results were important because, despite anecdotal information about the Internet's tremendous impact on the economy, there exists what he called a "data desert" to quantify its effects.

"I don't want to stand up here and say this is God's gift to the world," Harris said. But he also called the study "a very good start" and noted that gauging activity across the Internet was a difficult exercise.

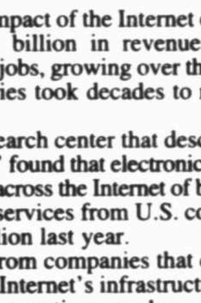
The university said it compiled the study's results by looking at 3,100 U.S. companies that generate all or part of their revenues from Internet products or services. Some of the information was compiled using reports from research companies, financial reports and the Web sites for 300 of the largest companies.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

No single stock market index mirrors the entire market

By Eric Tyson

Q: I've heard a lot about the Dow Jones Industrial Average, which I understand is made up of 30 big companies. People have criticized this index for not being broad nor representative of all the different types of stock one can buy. What are the other major stock market indexes you follow?



Tyson

A: You're correct that the Dow isn't representative of many types of stocks — especially smaller company stocks in the United States. Here are some other important market indexes and the types of stocks they track:

Standard & Poor's 500. Like the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the S&P 500 tracks the performance of larger-company U.S. stocks. As the name S&P 500 suggests, this index tracks the prices of 500 stocks. These 500 big companies account for more than three-quarters of the total market value of stocks traded in the United States. The Dow Jones stocks represent about 20 percent of the total market value of U.S. stocks. Thus, the S&P 500 is a much broader and more representative index of the larger company stocks in the United States than is the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

Russell 2000. This index tracks the performance of 2,000 smaller U.S. company stocks of varying industries. Small company stocks tend to move in tandem with larger company stocks. It's unusual for one to fall while the other is rising, although this happened last year when the S&P 500 was up nearly 29 percent while the Russell 2000 was down 2.5 percent. Smaller company stocks tend to be more volatile, often rising more when the stock market increases and falling more precipitously when the market declines.

Wilshire 5000. Despite its name, the Wilshire 5000 index actually tracks the prices of more than 6,000 stocks of U.S. companies of all sizes — small, medium and large. Thus, this index is considered the broadest and most representative of the overall U.S. stock market.

Morgan Stanley EAFE. Stocks don't just exist in the United States. Morgan Stanley's EAFE index (EAFE stands for Europe, Australia and Far East) tracks the prices of stocks in the other major countries of the world.

Morgan Stanley Emerging Markets. This index follows the price movements of stocks in the less economically developed but "emerging" countries, which tend to concentrate in Southeast Asia and Latin America. These stock markets tend to be more volatile than those in established economies. During good times, emerging markets usually reward investors with higher returns.

Indexes allow you to compare or benchmark the performance of your stock market investments. If you invest primarily in large-company U.S. stocks, for example, you should be comparing the overall return of the stocks in your portfolio to a comparable index — in this case, the S&P 500.

Literally hundreds of other indexes exist. Many financial service and news companies, largely out of desire for publicity, develop their own indexes. If the media reports on these indexes, the index developer effectively gets free advertising. Many of the other indexes out there essentially replicate the ones I've just discussed, which are considered the major and best ones to follow.

Some other types of indexes you may hear about are more narrowly focused, such as those that track the performance of stocks in particular industries: advertising, banks, computers, drugs, restaurants, semiconductors, textiles and utilities. Other countries, such as Japan, the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Canada and Hong Kong, have stock indexes that track the performance of their own stock markets. It's dangerous to focus your investments in the stocks of just one or two industries or smaller countries. Thus, I think you should ignore these narrower indexes.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, June 11, 1999:

Follow-through counts more than you can imagine. Work with the unexpected. Surprises surround distant matters, law and publishing. Nothing can or will go as you think! Take advantage of these opportunities for dynamic growth. Opt to spend time alone for reflection or for relaxation from a heavy workload. Learn to screen calls. Make yourself more of a priority. If single, you certainly could become involved in an interesting relationship! Be aware of what you are walking into. If attached, you learn much about your partner this year. Learn to understand and empathize better. TAURUS can be a challenge!

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Work on being reasonable when dealing with a contrary and difficult associate. Be flexible when things don't go exactly as you'd like. A friend pressures you, wanting something that really is yours. Just say, "No!" Establish needed boundaries. Tonight: Have some fun — you deserve it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Don't kid yourself about who wears the pants — at least at work! Tune in to others' motivations and needs so you can better comprehend how to handle them. If you don't like the present circumstances, think about changing jobs or becoming more independent. Tonight: A makeover, perhaps?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★ News from a distance forces you to regroup and to rethink a decision. You're in control; don't be upset. You might opt to change plans and head in another direction. Realize what is going on with you before you make a quick, impulsive decision. Take the opportunity to break patterns. Tonight: Do your own thing!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Call your own shots and head in the direction you want. Your innate talent for understanding is key to your success and to making the right decisions for you. Network, schedule meetings, let others know exactly where you come from. Aim for financial freedom. Tonight: Play or listen to music with buddies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Life changes from your usual roller-coaster ride to a rocketship exploring the universe. There are so many surprises! Roll with the punches today, and you will cruise into a much-deserved weekend. Partners force you to set boundaries and to accept responsibilities. Tonight: Tie up loose ends — then celebrate!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your strength lies in your ability to take an overview when others are scattered and reactive. Discuss what is really going on at work. The truth might be difficult to ascertain, but you know that the status quo must not continue. Tonight: Leave the office as soon as possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Relating remains key to making decisions, especially concerning a child or a creative idea. Use special care with a flirtatious associate. You could be aiming for a backfire; another simply doesn't see a situation the same way as you do. Tonight: Be sure you and another are on the same wavelength.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Others dominate the scenario. Though you might want to have more say, restrictions seem unavoidable. Unexpected developments on the homefront definitely send you into a tizzy. Let others have their say. Eventually, you will have yours! Tonight: Go along with the program.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Hold onto your seat belt! The unanticipated marks your interactions. You could have a difficult time leaving work, as last-minute demands are made of you. Work with what is. Prioritize. Your sense of humor helps loosen up a difficult situation. Tonight: Ready for anything!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Relax and see a decision's creative potential rather than the negatives. You will be more satisfied than you realize. Assume an open, dynamic attitude. Finances seem to be cascading out of control. Work within a set budget. Tonight: Kick up your heels — it is the weekend!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You absolutely throw others for a loop. Your perspective changes a lot because of what is going on. Allow greater creativity in a domestic situation. Not everyone has to agree with you. Stay on track, knowing what is important for you. Responsibilities weigh heavily. Tonight: Head home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Your perspective changes radically because of what is going on. Keep communication flowing, even if you want to toss caution to the wind and head in another direction. Others are also having a hard time right now. Be understanding. Your patience will take you far. Tonight: Out.

Drawing Trumps The Hard Way

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1◇	3♣	Dbl	Pass
3♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5♡	Pass	6♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

There is often more than one way to draw trumps. South overcame a bad break to land an interesting slam contract on this deal.

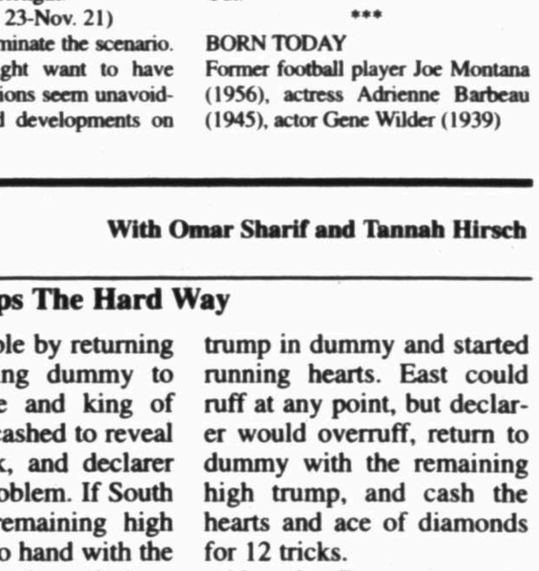
North's double of three clubs was for takeout — an unusual action. Most players would be content to bid some number of hearts. It did, however, result in North-South reaching an impregnable slam — six hearts could have been defeated with a defensive spade ruff.

West made the normal lead of the king of clubs, taken with the ace in the closed hand. The jack of hearts was led to the ace, and East did as well as possible by returning a club, forcing dummy to ruff. The ace and king of spades were cashed to reveal the 4-1 break, and declarer had a little problem. If South cleared the remaining high spade, came to hand with the ace of diamonds and drew the remaining trump, there would be no entry back to the table to cash the good hearts.

The solution was simple enough. Declarer left a high trump in dummy and started running hearts. East could ruff at any point, but declarer would overruff, return to dummy with the remaining high trump, and cash the hearts and ace of diamonds for 12 tricks.

Note that East cannot gain by discarding diamonds on the run of hearts. Declarer does the same, and is left with two high trumps at the end.

CLOSE TO HOME



To stave off spring fever among employees on sunny days, Credmont Industries wisely installed rain-simulation devices above all windows.

Mull explores his psyche through art

OMAHA, Neb. — It may require a leap of faith to take a satirist seriously, but Martin Mull said his paintings are for true believers.

Mull, who stars in "Sabrina the Teenage Witch," is exhibiting a series of abstract paintings at the Bemis Center for Contemporary Art.

He says he's serious about exploring his childhood and his psyche through art.

"It's the great irony of my life," Mull said. "I have always considered myself first and foremost a painter — that's where my heart and soul is. The other stuff I did to pay the bills so I could paint."

LOS ANGELES — Winona Ryder sold her former home in Beverly Hills for about $900,000, or about $100,000 below the asking price, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The buyer is a former "Seinfeld" writer whom the paper didn't identify.

Built in 1926, the 2,000-square-foot, Spanish-style home has three bedrooms, limestone floors and a fireplace. Ms. Ryder bought and restored the house in 1996.

The star of the upcoming film "Girl Interrupted" purchased a nearby home last year for $2.5 million.

LIMA, Peru — First, President Alberto Fujimori had to fly in coach class. Then an American Airlines employee searched his luggage for contraband.

"It seems impertinent, unacceptable to me that a common employee of American Airlines searched my baggage," Fujimori told reporters Wednesday. "What they should be doing is looking into whether American Airlines employees are smuggling drugs."

Fujimori complained he was bumped to economy class despite having a first-class ticket for a flight from Kansas City to Dallas last weekend. Because of a mix-up, he was traveling without his usual security personnel.

Fujimori did not say in which airport his bags were searched. He compared his treatment to what passengers deal with on Lima's cheap city buses. "To do this to the president of the republic is not proper conduct," he said.

The airline issued a statement Thursday expressing "our deepest apology for any inconvenience we may have caused the president. The matter is being investigated and appropriate corrective action will be taken."

GEORGIANA, Ala. — Jett Williams, who discovered after she grew up that she was the daughter of Hank Williams Sr., has signed a contract for a movie about her life.

Ms. Williams signed the deal during an appearance at the 20th annual Hank Williams Sr. Festival last weekend. No date has been set for filming to begin.

"What better place to make an announcement than right here where my daddy lived and in front of his fans," Ms. Williams said.

She was born Jan. 6, 1953, to Nashville secretary Bobbie Jett, five days after her father died.

NEW YORK — Evel Knievel says celebrities should enjoy their fame.

"You can be famous for a lot of things," the daredevil says in the July Esquire magazine. "You can be a Nobel Prize winner. You can be the fattest guy in the world. ... Whatever it is, enjoy it. It don't last forever."

Another pearl: "Heaven is a place you can go and drink a lot of draft beer and it don't make you fat."

"You can cheat on your wife and she don't get mad. You get a beautiful female chauffeur ... There are motorcycle jumps you never miss. You don't need a tee time."

NEW YORK — Ricky Martin's got Rockefeller Center in an uproar.

The Manhattan office complex handed out maps to workers showing ways to avoid the thousands of frenzied fans expected for the singer's appearance Friday on the "Today" show.

The Latin music sensation was scheduled to perform outside NBC's "Today" studio at 8 a.m.

The viewing area holds about 1,200 people, but police were braced for thousands more and warned that they might have to close some streets.

Martin, 27, is enjoying the wild success of his debut English-language CD, simply titled "Ricky Martin." Its first single, "Livin' la Vida Loca," which means living the crazy life, is topping the charts.

Before going solo, Martin was part of the Latin teen group Menudo.

RAFFERTY: Coach leaves for Louisville

(From 1C)

members of the Louisville athletic program.

"It was a very unexpected scenario for me," Rafferty said. "Myself and the athletic director (Tom Jurich) are like brothers. We go way back to when I was coaching at Northern Arizona. I did not send a resume and I wasn't looking for a job. I knew that if Louisville was interested in me, they would contact me. And that's how it transpired. I got a call Tuesday morning at about 10:30 and they asked if I could be on a plane by 4:30.

"The head football coach (John L. Smith) and I also go way back to when I was an assistant at the University of Idaho. So, it's been like home to me. I'm with people I like and respect."

In introducing Rafferty as his new assistant coach during Thursday morning's press conference in Louisville, Ky., Crum said, "Pat is the perfect fit for our needs. He's got a lot of energy, is very personable, an excellent recruiter, has a lot of contacts, outstanding basketball knowledge and will spend as many hours as it takes to get the job done. I've had the opportunity to spend a lot of time talking with Pat, and have been very impressed with his knowledge of the game and recruiting philosophy."

Rafferty leaves Midland College as the school's second all-time winningest coach with a 97-51 record in his five years. He led the Chaps to three Region V tournament appearances during that time and also guided Midland College to its first outright Western Junior College Athletic Conference championship in 11 years in 1998. Also during his tenure, Rafferty had 14 Chaparrals head to Division I schools.

Rafferty leaves a successful program here at Midland College and heads to one of the most respected programs in the country. He replaces Jerry Eaves, who left Louisville to take an assistant job with the Charlotte Hornets. Rafferty's main duties will be to do off-campus recruiting.

"This is one of the top five programs of all time," said Rafferty talking about Louisville. "When you're talking about tradition, Louisville is up there. I also have a chance to work for a Hall of Fame coach in Denny Crum. This isn't just any program.

"I've had conversations and contact with different people about other opportunities I had to leave Midland College sooner. I said it was going to take something significant and special to leave Midland. I wasn't looking for a job and I knew it was going to take something unique and special. This qualifies as that."

Rafferty said it will be the players he will remember most about coaching at Midland College.

"I was very lucky. I had great kids," he said. "We had kids that accepted what we had to offer, kids that accepted coaching and I will always be proud with the kids that came to our program. Watching players like D'Juan Baker, Kevin Rice and Harold Arceneaux come through this program is what this whole thing is about. And to see them still accomplishing long after they leave the program is very special."

Rafferty says he's leaving the program in good hands with Cotten.

"It was very easy for me to give Junsie my endorsement because we were a team and we complemented each other," Rafferty said. "He's a great communicator and a great people person. He's going to learn as a coach. I'm still learning. Coach Crum is still learning. We're all still learning. (Cotten's) not just an assistant but a good friend. who I'll always love. He's my guy.

"It was an easy hire because he's highly respected by everyone at Midland College. He's earned the respect and the credibility."

Rafferty said since being offered the job, he's been on the phone calling players and recruits telling them about his move.

"The phone calls were emotional and in some ways sadness," Rafferty said. "I haven't personally been able to get through with all of them but I have left messages with their parents and coaches. None have wavered in coming to Midland College. Partly because Midland College is still Midland College and the fact that Junsie was going to be hired helped because he already has a rapport with them.

"This is the best group of players since I've been at Midland College. I don't know if there's a Baker or Arceneaux but they could develop into that type of player."

Rafferty thanked those who supported him in the Midland College administration such as Midland College President Dr. David Daniel, former Dean of Student Camal Dakil, vice president of student services Dr. Greg Williams, and athletic director Joe Williams.

"Midland will always be a part of me. I like Midland and I hope Midland likes me," Rafferty said.

COACH: Cotten takes over at MC

mendation, but the philosophy that coach Cotten has blends right in with what coach Rafferty has always had, which deals primarily with good defense and strong rebounding. Coach Cotten is an excellent recruiter, responsible for a lot of the top players that not only we have gotten but for other schools."

Cotten has been part of winning programs everywhere he's been. During the last two years with MC, the Chaps have posted a 43-18 record. Prior to coming to Midland, Cotten was an assistant at the College of Eastern Utah where the team went 51-13 during his two years at the school.

When Cotten left Eastern Utah, he brought with him Junior College All-American Harold Arceneaux, Alu Williams, and recruit Dejuan Daniel, all of whom were instrumental in helping MC win the Western Junior College Athletic Conference title in 1998.

Cotten also served as a student assistant coach during the 1994-95 season at Utah State, his alma mater, where he helped guide the team to a 21-8 mark and a Big West Conference championship.

"I think it's a tribute to Midland College in showing they have the confidence in me to come in here and do a great job," Cotten said. "I appreciated everybody influential in hiring me. I think it's going to be a great situation for Midland College and I think it's going to be a great situation for me."

Rafferty leaves the program after five years, compiling a record of 97-51 during that span and three trips to the Region V Tournament. In 1998, Rafferty guided his team to the first outright WJCAC title in 11 years. His teams went 35-29 in conference.

In his final year with the Chaparrals, Rafferty led his team to a 17-14 overall record and a fourth place finish in conference. His Chaps ended the 1998-99 season by losing to eventual Region V champion Weatherford, 69-61, in the first round of the regional playoffs.

"He's is very much a class individual. He's got a tremendous opportunity in which we're all happy for him," said Williams about Rafferty, who wasn't in attendance during Thursday morning's press conference because he was in his own press conference being announced as a new assistant coach in Louisville, Ky. "He treated adversity as well as success the same way. We really appreciate the caring and the sincere feeling he had for his players."

The move by Rafferty was quite sudden for everybody involved. Williams said Rafferty came into his office on Tuesday and was very apologetic, telling him about the job offer he had received from the University of Louisville.

"It was as much a surprise to him," said Williams about Rafferty. "He was not applying for the job. He was not outwardly seeking the job. I don't know how long the position has been opened but it did open. They knew who they wanted and they came after him. I was very happy for him to have that opportunity. It says a lot about our program to have a coach in a program like that also."

Williams said the decision to name Cotten as head coach came very quickly after meeting with Midland College President Dr. David Daniel and receiving input from Rafferty.

"We all felt good about coach Cotten," Williams said. "We felt good about everything he's done here and I think he's very deserving of an opportunity.

"We're very confident that coach Cotten can handle the program and we're very confident that the players have great respect for him. Otherwise, such a decision would not have been made."

For Cotten, who becomes the sixth head men's basketball coach in the program's 24-year history, the news also came very quickly.

"This just came about late last night (Wednesday)," Cotten said. "I got a phone call from Joe Williams and he told me to call Dr. Daniel. When I called, he told me, 'Do you have a problem being in a suit and tie at 11 o'clock in my office?' I said, 'No, no I don't.' I was just ecstatic from that point on. I'm just very grateful. A lot of coaches coach for 20 years and never get a head coaching job. This is truly an honor. It means a lot to me because they could've gone out and had a national search but they felt I was right for the job. That means a lot to me because it shows the type of program we have here and the type of people we have working here."

Cotten said he never once sought after, or speculated, about taking the job. He also said he never knew Rafferty's intentions until a phone call Wednesday night.

"I knew nothing about it, but at the same time, I'm very happy for him," Cotten said. "I've learned such a great deal from him as far as dealing with the complete student athlete."

Diving into a head coaching job for the first time in his career, Cotten not only felt ecstasy but also expected a little nervousness.

"To say I'm not nervous would be ludicrous," Cotten said. "At the same time, I'm not going to look at my age and I'm not going to look at my past coaching experience. I'm going to look at the positive side of it. I have the opportunity, this is a lifelong dream of mine. It's a reality now. All I can do is tell you I'm going to do the best job that I can do from a coaching standpoint and from friendship. You have to bond a relationship with these kids."

Currently, Midland College has signed six players to go along with the five returning players from last year. Cotten expects to sign at least three more before the summer is through.

Cotten said that after he and Rafferty spoke to the players who have already signed, none have wavered on their decision to attend Midland College.

"I don't think we're going to lose anybody. I'm really looking forward to it," Cotten said. "Ever since we lost to Weatherford in the first round (of the Region V tournament), our goal has been to win a championship. That's what I'm about, winning championships. There's nothing like winning, but there's also nothing like losing either. Hopefully, we're going to have more ups than downs."

STATE: Andrews to face Corpus Christi Calallen

(From 1C)

heroics by Andrews starting pitcher Chris Trevino, shortstop Shaud Williams and catcher August Lewis sent Brenham home from its 12th trip to the state tournament and halted the Cubs' drive to a seventh state title. The Cubs left seven men on base and scored only one run in a pivotal fifth inning when they had the based loaded and only one out.

"I don't think any team in our school history has been to the state championship," Williams said. "It feels great."

Trevino (13-1) hurled a complete game on 117 pitches and allowed only two earned runs. He got out of the fifth inning jam by striking out the Cubs' fifth and sixth hitters to end the frame.

"That to me was the big point in the ball game," said Brenham coach Jim Long. "All year long we have come through in that type of situation and it just so happens in that inning we didn't."

Said Andrews coach Joe Ray Halsey: "Trevino just gutted it up and threw some good pitches. I think he threw an outstanding game against people who can really hit. One guy (the Cubs' Dustin Majewsky) has 77 RBIs. That's a career for most people."

The Mustangs' low point came when Williams left the game in the fifth after getting spiked on the forefinger of his throwing hand when he took an errant throw to second base from Trevino on a play that loaded the bases. It looked like the Cubs would have a breakout inning and the Mustangs would lose Williams, their leadoff hitter who reached base on all four of his plate appearances and scored twice.

But after an RBI single put Brenham up 3-2, Trevino got his strikeouts. And Williams would return the next inning.

"It was a pretty good gash," Halsey said of Williams' cut, which Williams guessed would require five stitches. "But you can't say enough about our team. And there wasn't going to be anybody keeping Shaud out of there."

Williams said he will play today. Halsey said senior P.J. Lewis (12-1-2) will start against Calallen.

Both teams had shaky starts. Trevino got hit hard by the first three batters as the Cubs took a 1-0, first-inning lead. And Brenham committed two infield errors to allow Andrews to score in the first.

The Mustangs tied the game at 2-2 in the fourth when Lewis led off with a home run to left field. They came back again the the fifth to make it 3-3 when Williams led off by sprinting to a triple and scoring on Geraldo Bueno's ground ball.

"It was a game we should have one," Jim Long said. "We really felt like we had them beat."

But for the first time in four trips to the state tournament, the Mustangs are sticking around for the party on the last day.

COAHOMA: Bulldogs miss out on finals ticket

(From 1C)

homa miscues in the fourth inning ton break a scoreless tie and score three runs. The Bulldogs committed two errors in the frame and White threw a wild pitch.

"The wheels kind of fell off in that fourth," Coahoma coach Scott Lewis said. "They had a routine bunt and we tried to get the lead runner and we ended up not getting anybody."

It was a duel of left-handers as Cooper's Brandon Shaw held the Bulldogs in check until the seventh inning, when Jeremy Green led off by reaching on an error and came home on Aaron Ovalle's single to right. The Bulldogs' best chance to score before that came in the fifth with Ovalle on first and Vincent Garcia on third.

But third baseman Brandon Hancock's bid for a base hit was run down nicely by Cooper left fielder Adam Shaw.

"That's been kind of our downfall all year is not getting people on base home," Lewis said. "When we get behind we're kind of in the panic mode. We need to get a one-run lead and let Delvin hang on to it for us."

But Thursday there would be no one-run lead and no state final for Coahoma.

Calallen scored twice in the second inning after Edward Armstrong led off with a single and scored on Justin Rougeau's triple. Rougeau then scored on Edwards' sacrifice fly to right field.

Edwards' RBI triple in the fourth gave Calallen a 4-1 lead.

Houston Bellaire 14, Austin Westlake 9

Bellaire (37-2) advances to Friday's title game against the winner of Thursday night's other semifinal between Laredo Alexander (28-4) and Duncanville (27-8-1).
