Landmark school building has served many roles

...from HHS to Stanton Special Populations Center

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

For nearly 70 years, Hereford residents have had a landmark of education in the middle of town.

It opened as Hereford High School, after what later became known as Central School was outgrown.

Located at 711 East Park, the building has served a number of functions since those days when high schoolers walked its halls.

After the high school moved out, the building became Stanton Junior High, entertaining a younger group of students than any time in its history.

The building was named for H.V. Stanton, who had served as high school coach when the school was a high school.

In 1959, the building was expanded to accommodate increasing numbers of students.

A social studies wing and science classrooms -- as well as a large gymnasium -- were constructed on the north end of the building.

But 30 years later Stanton was empty -- a decision in 1988 was thought to have spelling the end of Stanton's usefulness as a school.

It was that year that school officials decided to combine Stanton with La Plata Junior High located in the northwest part of town, creating Hereford Junior High.

But far from lifeless, Stanton is entering the 1994-95 school year with a new lease on life as a whole new generation walks its halls.

After serving as an auxiliary administration building -- known as Stanton Educational Support Center -- it took on a new role.

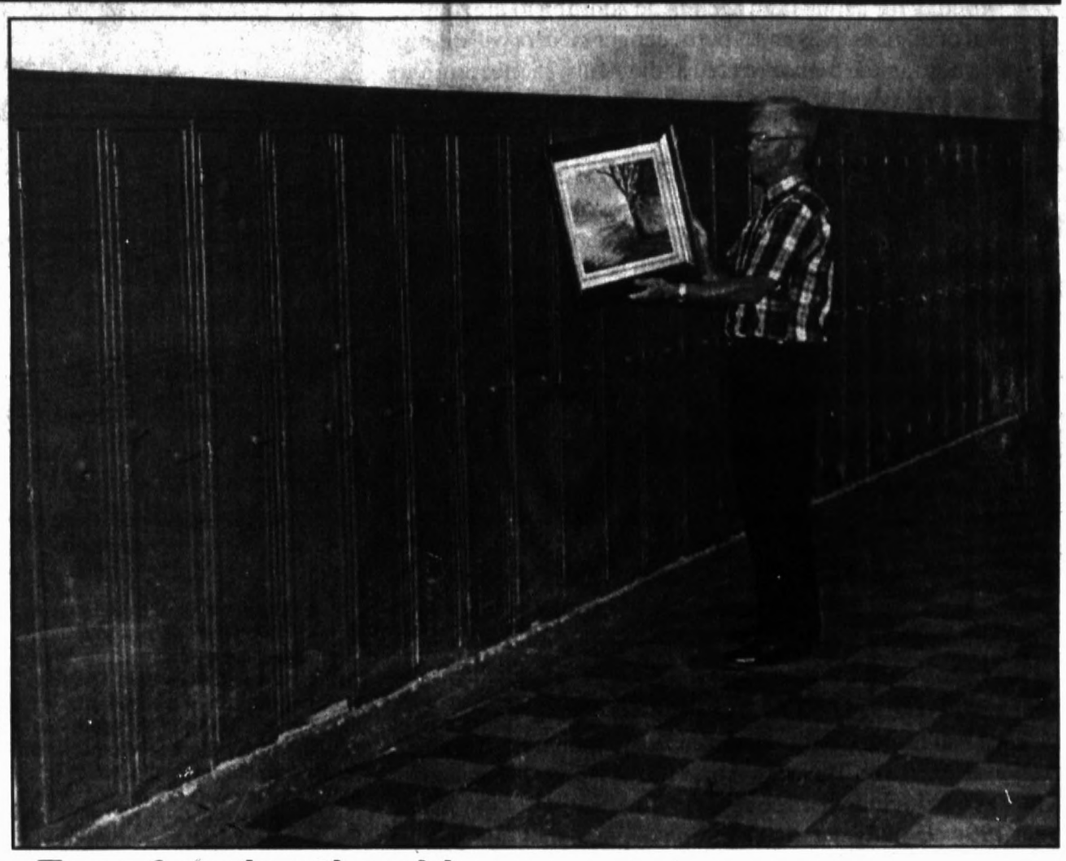

Today, the 1994-95 school year is about to begin and the Stanton Special Populations Center is ready to face the future.

Mal Manchee serves as principal over the diverse programs that occupy the building.

Recently he conducted an informal tour of the building, pointing out where summer renovations and remodelings have tailored the structure for its current needs.

The north wing has been home for several years to the district's Pre-Kindergarten and Migrant 3-year-old program.

Transforming the old

Mal Manchee, principal of the Stanton Special Populations Center, stands in front of freshly painted lockers at the school holding one of many pictures that will be adorning the walls of the former Stanton Junior High School. The building, built in 1926, is the oldest school building in use here and has also served as Hereford High School and the Stanton Educational Services Center. This summer the building has undergone a facelift with the addition of maroon paint on doorways and trim and bright colors of red, green and blue on lockers throughout the complex. The building houses the Pre-Kindergarten program, the SOAR High alternative school and Primetime program for students removed from classrooms for discipline reasons.

Voters have until Tuesday to avoid election-day rush

Voters who want to avoid the rush on election day have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to mark early ballots in the city's special election, set Saturday, to decide if a half-cent sales tax will be levied for economic development.

More than 425 residents had cast ballots through Friday. Voting will continue Monday and Tuesday in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse office of County Clerk David Ruland.

Citizens have been reminded that traffic in the vicinity of the Community Center, site of the Saturday voting, may be heavy because of the concluding activities of Town and Country Jubilee.

"We will have reserved parking at the west end of the building," reported City Manager Chester Nolen.

Voters are being urged to take advantage of the early voting period prior to Saturday.

The half-cent sales tax is the only issue on the ballot for Saturday. Proceeds of the tax would be used to promote new business for Hereford, or to expand existing business.

A task force appointed to study ways to improve tax base and employment recommended that the tax be employed, noting that other cities in the area levy the half-cent.

Josserand also will field questions about the proposed half-cent sales tax, an issue to be decided in a citywide election Aug. 13.

The mayor encourages all interested citizens to attend. Josserand started the breakfast meetings last year to offer residents an opportunity to discuss city policies and services.

Two chain stores reported looking at Winn location

While a new business is expected to move into the vacated Winn's Store here in Hereford in the near future, no definite decision has been made, The Brand learned Friday.

Two large chain stores have been looking at the Hereford location, reports Mike Carr, executive vice president of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. The large general merchandise stores are Dollar General, headquartered in Nashville, TN., and Family Dollar Stores, based in Charlotte, N.C.

Carr checked with the owner of the building Friday, and she said no lease has been signed with either chain operation.

The Castro County News reported Thursday that Dollar General has taken over the lease of the Perry Bros. store in Dimmitt. The article stated that Dollar General is also reported to be taking over Winn's Stores in Hereford, Friona and other Texas cities.

Billee Johnson retiring from 'labor of love' after 60 years

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

After about 60 years on the job, Billee Johnson is going to retire, a bit of news that should not be taken lightly.

Mrs. Johnson has been a major reason that Mothers Park, a one-acre triangle bounded by Main, Avenue B and Park Avenue, has looked so well-tended and groomed.

But she says she's going to have to give up her labor of love for 60 years.

And well she might think about passing the torch to someone else. Mrs. Johnson is 95 years old.

One day last week, she sat on a bench while Maria Escamilla, her friend and and fellow gardener, cleaned out a flower bed.

"I'm down in my back," said Mrs. Johnson, "so I can't do anything today."

She watched as Maria Escamilla ripped out plants that needed attention and talked about the park that occupies a special place in her heart.

The plot of land was dedicated for a park in 1909, she said, when Mr. and Mrs. E.O. Thomas gave the land to the Mothers Club. A plaque in the park calls attention to the donation.

Although Mrs. Johnson didn't come to Deaf Smith County until 1921, she is well versed in the history of Mothers Park.

"In 1910, everyone of the members put on her sunbonnet and came out to work and plant trees," she related.

The story goes, though, that a horse pulling the wagon with trees in the back bolted and one of the volunteers was injured rather seriously.

"It took her two years to recover," said Mrs. Johnson.

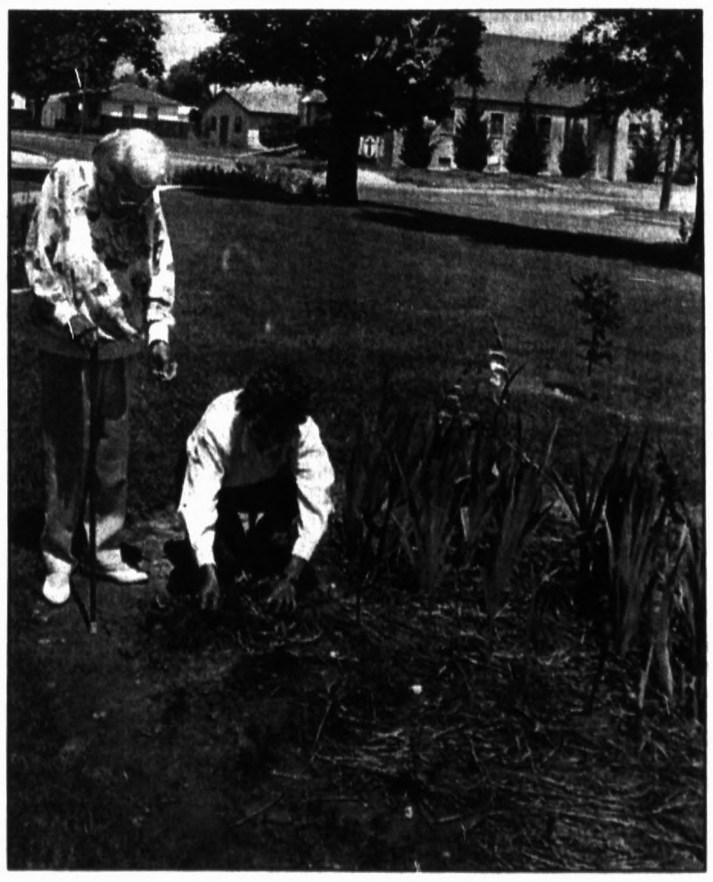

The next year, much of the town turned out for a special workday at the park, she added.

The park became a showplace and a gathering point for community activities, such as pageants, band concerts and plays.

Mrs. Johnson came to Deaf Smith County to visit relatives at Summerfield and was persuaded to stay.

"I was teaching school in Paris in East Texas and decided I'd come out just to visit," she said.

Volunteer park workers

A weekly labor of love keeps Mothers Park an attractive landmark in Hereford. Billee Johnson, left, a 95-year-old gardener, and her friend and fellow gardener, Maria Escamilla, spend most of a day each week tending to plants in the park.

Hereford firm absolved in injury lawsuit

A Hereford business, the defendant in a federal court lawsuit, Wednesday was absolved of responsibility in an injury allegedly suffered by a worker in 1991.

A jury in the U.S. District Court, Northern District of Texas, in Amarillo, found in favor of Poarch Brothers, Inc., sued by a former employee, Alex Saenz of Dimmitt, who sought damages of more than $50,000, for an injury he claimed he sustained while working for the firm.

Saenz was a resident of Clovis, N.M., at the time the suit was filed. Federal statute allows filing in federal court when the plaintiff lives in a state other than the one in which an incident occurred.

Saenz claimed that he suffered a back injury on Aug. 16, 1991, while mounting a row unit on a cotton harvester header, using a manually-operated jib crane and an electric hoist.

The plaintiff alleged negligence by Poarch Brothers, by failing to instruct

Texas attorney named as new prosecutor in Whitewater probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - The new prosecutor in the Whitewater investigation is attorney Kenneth W. Starr, a native of San Antonio and a rising star on the Washington scene.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington on Friday appointed Starr, 48, to take over from Robert Fiske the probe of President Clinton's Arkansas business dealings.

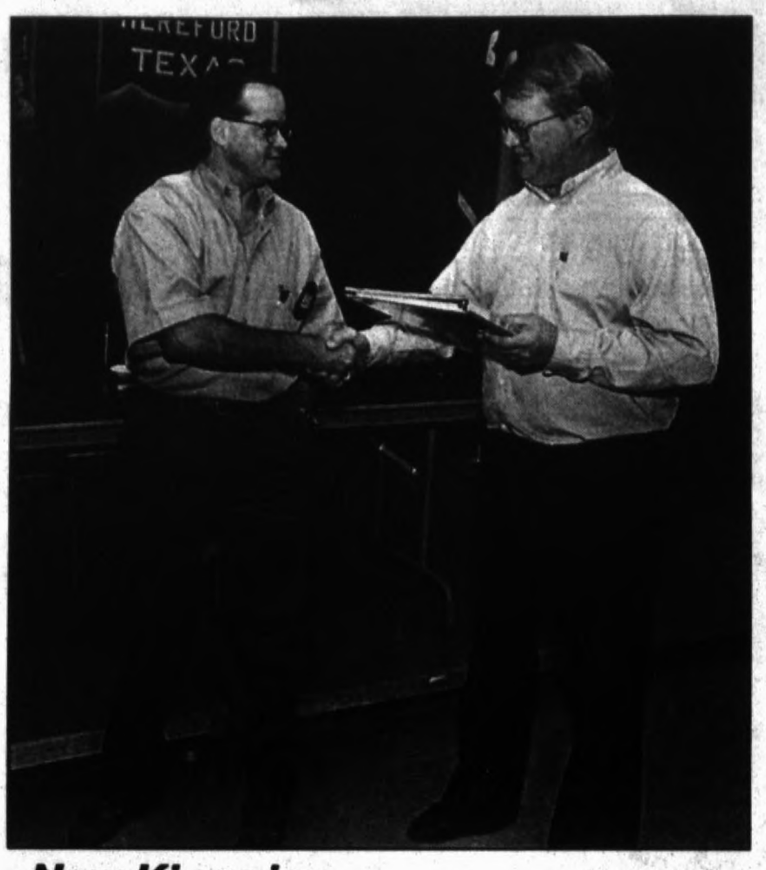

Both Starr and Fiske are Republicans, but the judges noted that Fiske was appointed as special counsel by the Clinton administration and said they wanted to make sure the prosecutor's independence was apparent.

The White House said it would cooperate with Starr, whose title will be independent counsel. Republicans in Congress, often skeptical of Fiske's ability to act without interference, applauded the switch.

The judges, acting under the revived independent counsel act, said they intended no criticism of Fiske, who has been investigating Whitewater since Jan. 20 when Attorney General Janet Reno appointed him.

"It is not our intent to impugn the integrity of the attorney general's appointee, but rather to reflect the intent of the act that the actor be protected against perceptions of conflict," the judges wrote.

In early July, Reno had recommended that the judges stick with Fiske. But several Republican members of Congress had written them questioning Fiske's independence, and conservative commentators had criticized his work.

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSERAND
Mayor, City of Hereford

Exciting times are here within your City! I hope many of you find them exciting, also. Our first neighborhood parks meeting was held Tuesday evening, Aug. 2, at Buena Vista. We had a great turnout of youth and adults. I really think the youth, with there enthusiasm and ideas, truly made the meeting.

While we won't be able to accomplish financially, or labor-wise, all of the suggested improvements for the park, it was truly refreshing to have people so enthusiastic about their neighborhood park.

Our next park session will be community-wide at Dameron Park, at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 9. Since this park probably has the most use of any, I encourage all of you to attend. We can make a difference in our parks with the feedback and enthusiasm of all our citizens.

Speaking of parks, if you haven't been by the aquatic center location recently to see the progress being made by Don Kundert and his crew, you really should do so. It is thrilling to know that a year from now, we will have a beautiful aquatic center and park area. I know all of you feel proud that Hereford is moving forward on this venture.

This will be the last opportunity I have to encourage you to vote in the citywide economic development election, so I just want to give you a few of my personal thoughts about this election. When I asked the task force to take a look at economic development one of the charges I gave them was to examine every possible avenue that we, the citizens, could use for economic development.

After weeks of meetings, the task force came to me and said they were sorry, but the best approach for us to take in Hereford is, as so many other communities have done, to adopt an economic development tax.

First of all, it's probably the fairest way to finance economic development because everyone shares equally as far as a tax burden goes, not just property owners.

Secondly, so many of our neighbors have gone to an economic development tax and we simply are not playing on a level field unless we also can have funding to move ahead.

I know from visiting with a few people that there is still some confusion about how the funds would be administered and for what purposes.

Let me briefly state, again, how we propose to handle this aspect.

First, we are going for a Type "A" economic development tax, which by law spells out very clearly that funds must be used in procuring new economic development jobs in Hereford and Deaf Smith County and/or increasing jobs through existing businesses.

As far as administration of funds goes, this will be handled by a five-member board appointed by the mayor, with the consent of the City Commission.

I have stated publicly in the past, and do so again, that we will select one representative from the business community, one from the financial community, one from the agricultural community, one from the Hispanic community and a member-at-large.

These five persons will be appointed by the City Commission and ultimately will answer to the City Commission. I hope this clears up any misunderstanding of how and by whom funds will be administered.

Let me suggest to those of you who have not voted early, it is critical to the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County that you vote. This is your chance to make a difference on economic development.

This is your chance to send a message throughout the country that Hereford is serious about wanting more jobs and better jobs for its citizens.

I encourage you to vote at the Aug. 13 election at the Community Center. Please don't let this opportunity slip by.

Finally, our next Breakfast with the Mayor will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 10, at 7 a.m. at the Ranch House.

Please come join me for a dutch-treat breakfast to discuss opportunities for the City of Hereford or suggestions you may have. I really encourage your valuable input.

Police Beat

Saturday morning's activity report at Hereford Police Department included two arrests, 14 citations, two accidents, two fire calls and the following:

--A 21-year-old man was arrested on a domestic violence charge, and a 24-year-old was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

--A bomb threat was reported by a complainant at 607 Ave. J. An unknown subject called and said there was a bomb in the house, but nothing was found after a check by the fire marshal and police officers.

--A robbery was reported at a convenience store, where juveniles stole some beer and one suspect struck a clerk on the face before leaving the store.

--A complainant in the 400 block of Ave. J reported the theft of a .38 revolver from the trunk of her car sometime in the past two weeks.

--A gas theft was reported in the 100 block of S. 25 Mile Avenue.

--An assault was reported in the 600 block of Irving.

--A theft was reported in the 1100 block of W. Park Avenue, where a juvenile took a cassette tape.

--Criminal mischief incidents were reported in the 100 block of N. Main and the 300 block of Union.

--Burglary was reported at a house in the 800 block of W. Park Avenue.

--A runaway was reported in the 100 block of W. 8th Street.

--Harassment was reported in the 100 block of Union.

FIRE CALLS

--A propane explosion was reported at a farm house 17 miles north and 1 mile west of Hereford. The blast singed the hair of a man using the propane for cleaning purposes and some smoke and fire damage was reported.

--A CRP grass fire was reported southwest of Hereford on the Deaf Smith and Castro County line. Firemen had a difficult time bringing it under control due to the muddy condition of the field.

STANTON

This year, a wall between two classrooms has been removed to create an oversized center for the two daily bilingual Pre-K classes.

Lockers that had been an industrial brown color were painted -- along with lockers throughout the main building as well -- in bright reds, greens and blues.

Those colors also adorn the doors and outside walkway poles in the children's area of the campus.

Play equipment also sports a new coat of bright paint.

In the original Stanton building are housed two of three secondary school programs over which Manchee presides.

There is SOAR (Step Out and Reach) High, an alternative school mandated by the state to serve junior and senior high students who are unable to function in a traditional classroom setting.

These students apply to attend SOAR, which offers classes is small group settings pursuing lessons in a way suited to their individual needs.

SOAR will be housed on the second floor of Stanton, in the classrooms that formerly served as offices for the district's support services department.

On the first floor, in addition to the administrative offices and student lounge area is the Primetime unit.

Primetime is another mandated unit, this one a non-voluntary discipline unit.

Primetime is designated for students who have experienced discipline problems on their home campuses can be assigned without missing class work.

This unit provides discipline while at the same time allowing students to keep up with class work.

Finally, Manchee's third program is not even based at Stanton. It is the Deaf Smith County Youth Home.

Deaf Smith County operates the youth home for juvenile offenders on a short- or long-term basis.

Every student assigned to the home is enrolled in school there and studies under a teacher assigned to the facility.

In the main building at Stanton, the summer has brought many changes.

Manchee pointed out that a wall was removed, doubling the classroom space for the Primetime unit.

Individual study carrels have been spaced around the room, providing, he said, additional space to move rather than opportunity to add to the size of the unit.

Throughout the main building, outside doors, inside doors and trim have been painted Herd Maroon, while the lockers are red, blue and green.

Young men from the Youth Home did most of the work, Manchee said, estimated that they provided some 2,000 hours of labor during the summer.

The young men were given the task of clearing and cleaning the old girls gym in the main Stanton building and have now transformed that into a place where students from the Primetime unit can eat lunch and have physical exercise programs.

The main gymnasium in the north wing is undergoing a more drastic transformation, as Youth Home residents are lying on the varnished basketball court with scrapers in hand, painstakingly removing years and years of varnish.

Manchee said he was surprised to learn that the stripes on the basketball court were not yellow and black, but had been originally painted blue and white, the colors of Stanton Junior High.

Years of adding coat upon coat of varnish, however, had discolored the lines.

Once the varnish is removed, the floor will be sanded and refinished.

Finally, the flag pole base in front of the building, the porch and name sign have all be repainted as well.

All in Herd Maroon and all for the dawning of a new era in the history of the oldest education building still in use in Hereford.

JOHNSON

She stayed and taught school at Summerfield.

Before long, she met Ray L. Johnson, the son of a rancher.

"My husband preferred farming and he became a wheat farmer," she continued.

Throughout her life, Mrs. Johnson has enjoyed gardening and her love of flowers apparently was passed on to her daughter, Billie Ra Hansen, who lives in Florida.

"She is a day lily hybridizer and I usually have an open house for my day lilies at my home," said Mrs. Johnson. "However, this year the hail got them."

Her interest is not limited, though. She's been experimenting with growing bluebonnets in the area and reported some good success.

"I soaked the seeds and planted them in February. They bloomed beautifully," she reported.

She and her friend Maria Escamilla are watching a flower bed in Mothers Park very carefully these days.

"We planted some bluebonnets there and they should stay green through the winter," she said.

The two gardeners admitted that they fear the bluebonnet plants will be mistaken for weeds.

"They really do look like weeds at first," laughed Mrs. Johnson.

Their weekly trips from Summerfield to Hereford usually are given over to regular shopping and errands as well as working at Mothers Park.

"Sometimes, we've spent as much as seven hours here," said Mrs. Johnson.

Her dedication to her volunteer job appears to be coming to an end. Frail, but spirited, Mrs. Johnson said she doesn't think she'll be able to keep it up much longer.

"And, I don't know who will," she said.

LAWSUIT

him in mechanics of lifting, to provide sufficient workers to perform the work, to provide safe and suitable appliances and tools to accomplish the work with reasonable safety and to provide him with a reasonable safe place to work.

Judge Mary Lou Robinson, in her charge to the jury, asked the jury to decide if a preponderance of the evidence showed the plaintiff to be negligent.

The jury decided Poarch Brothers was not negligent and Saenz was entitled to no damages.

Joe Lovell of Amarillo, attorney for Poarch Brothers, said Judge Robinson is expected to enter an order that plaintiff receive nothing and that he pay the defendant's costs of court.

Prior to the trial, Lovell said, Saenz asked for a judgment of up to $485,000.

Pleadings in the case documented that Poarch Brothers had paid voluntarily $6,311.41 in medical expenses for the plaintiff as well as $1,759.49 in wages while he was on medical leave.

Poarch Brothers did not provide worker's compensation coverage to employees.

The defendant denied negligence and contended that injuries suffered by Saenz were caused in whole or in part by pre-existing injuries or conditions, or by conditions or events not related to plaintiff's employment.

Air raid may help convince Bosnia to accept peace

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) - The air raid that destroyed an anti-tank vehicle could be only the first step in convincing Bosnia's Serbs that they'll be better off accepting a peace plan, U.S. and U.N. military officials said.

Two American A-10s destroyed the M-18 mobile "tank buster" with at least 600 rounds of 30mm cannon fire on Friday, Adm. Leighton W. Smith, NATO's commander in southern Europe, said from Naples, Italy.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the Serbs could be attacked again if they continue violating a weapons exclusion zone around Sarajevo.

The Serbs provoked the NATO raid by seizing heavy weapons, including a tank, from a U.N. depot in Serb-held Ilidza, just west of Sarajevo, and by firing at a U.N. helicopter.

Their Friday morning seizure threatened an already shaky truce that had kept Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, nearly free of Serb bombardment since spring.

NATO imposed the exclusion zone around Sarajevo on Feb. 21, requiring Serbs to remove weapons by at least 12.5 miles from the city center or hand them over to U.N. monitors.

Profile

(Editor's note: This is part of a series of articles profiling the 12 agencies funded by the United Way of Deaf Smith County. The article was prepared by Sally Nolen, executive director of the United Way.)

Boy Scouts of America helps to teach young people self-discipline, self-reliance, leadership skills, responsibility to others, patriotism, fitness and an enduring belief in God. Scouting builds character in young people so that they may assume leadership roles later in life.

Hereford Scout troops are a part of the Golden Spread Council. The Council provides scouting support services to communities in 26 counties of the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles.

Hereford currently has five Cub Packs, three Scout Troops and five Explorer Posts in operation.

More than 320 youth and 80 adults participate in the Scouting program in Hereford.

The following are just a small portion of the services the council provides to local scouts and leaders, services which United Way helps to fund.

-- A trained professional who visits local leaders to provide support, training and help in organizing new troops.

-- Fees for two camps -- as well as Camporees and Jamborees -- are subsidized, making them more affordable to local Scouts.

-- A Council Service Center operates, where awards, program materials, training records and publications are available to youth and leaders.

-- New unit organization and membership recruitment is offered, including spring and fall Roundup programs, School Night to Join Cub Scouting, Explorer First Nighters and more.

When allocating United Way funds, a committee of volunteers insures that money given to agencies will benefit the citizens of Hereford. Boy Scouts of America and the Golden Spread Council give much back to Hereford by providing fun, educational activities to our youth through Scouting.

A worker bee returning to the nest from a food hunt uses a "dance" to tell the other bees where food is. When the flowers are near, the worker dances in circles; if far, the bee dances in the direction of the flowers so the rest know where to fly.

By CHESTER NOLEN
Hereford City Manager

The City has been busy, in case you haven't had time to notice. Lots of things are happening.

The City Commission approved the concept of Neighborhood Park Planning in July. Our first meeting was held Tuesday night, Aug. 2, and it was a success. The neighborhood responded and a significant number of improvements for Buena Vista Park requested by citizens.

City Staff will be assigning cost information to the requests so the Commission then may prioritize the projects and approve the funding. Actual construction probably will not start until later in the year.

Water improvement projects are in high gear and so far we have added more than a million gallons per day to our production capacity. The water storage tank behind the Community Center is completed and in service. Fending should be finished within the week. Landscaping around the tank is scheduled in the spring and should significantly change the appearance of the area.

A GREAT BIG THANK YOU!! goes to residents around the tank area for bearing with us. We know you endured a lot of noise and dust and dirt during construction. We really appreciate your indulgence and willingness to work with us. Again, THANKS!

Swimming pool construction is moving at a fair pace after what seemed like an eternity of little, or no, progress. If weather will cooperate a little bit, we will make a lot of concrete pours in the next few weeks.

So far the project is only about 15 percent complete, however it takes a lot of preparation to get there. Deaf Smith County has had a number of employees helping at the site, in addition to the SPAW program which has provided a lot of labor to the project. There are other inmates responsible for helping on a regular basis who are not part of SPAW. These guys are trying to pay some of their debt to society and they are succeeding.

Still, the main man at the project is Don Kundert. Stop by and visit with him if you want to know about the project or help, in some way.

Special thanks to all the citizens who are helping to make Hereford a better place to live by cleaning their property and helping to keep other areas clean. Citizens have reduced the amount that we were preparing to haul to Amarillo by 30 percent.

This is a result of not placing leaves, limbs and other yard waste in dumpsters. Real dollars -- $45,000.

Rates still will have to go up but not as high as would have been otherwise.

The economic development sales tax is important to Hereford. Don't forget to vote on Aug. 13. The polling place is the west end of the Community Center. Parking will be provided at the west end to accommodate those who are voting during Jubilee. A diagram will be published in the paper to show the best route to the parking area.

Thanks for making Hereford a better place to live and work. Thanks for reading!

We've had a number of "letters the editor" in support of the half-cent tax for economic development and none in opposition. That doesn't mean, of course, that everyone is going to vote for the measure.

Since no one has written in opposition, we'll mention a few reasons we've heard, indirectly. Some citizens just don't want another tax added, no matter how small. Others say they want to know who will be appointed to the five-member EDC board before they'll vote for the proposal. And, we understand there are some anti-chamber of commerce folks who are fearful that the chamber will get their hands on the funds.

Personally, we think the small addition to our sales tax will be a good investment in the community's future. There are no guarantees, but we can't succeed if we don't try.

As for the names of board members beforehand, we have confidence the mayor and city commission can come up with five qualified people. I don't care who they are. There may be one or two appointees that I wouldn't have picked. And, those two might turn out to be the best ones on the board.

People Promoting Progress committee discussed the issue of appointments and decided they didn't want the election to become a personality contest. Whether or not the city has economic development funds should not be based on whether John Doe is on the board.

Some folks apparently think the chamber has not been effective in industrial development work. We would argue that the CofC has not been provided the tools to be effective as it could be in that area. However, this election is not about the chamber.

Approving the sales tax would set up a new way to seek and fund economic development. The city-appointed EDC board, with dedicated tax funds, would actually replace the chamber as the prime mover in the community's economic development efforts.

Don't be misinformed about this election. If you hear something from a reliable source, find out who is doing the talking. If you have questions about the proposal, ask someone who helped put this issue on the ballot--Shirley Garrison or Jeff Carlile or someone else on the People Promoting Progress committee, or Mayor Bob Josserand or a city commissioner.

Be an informed voter and then mark your ballot!

Have you noticed that many liberal members of the Democratic Party have condemned conservative Christians?

Gov. Ann Richards called them "hate mongers." The head of the Democratic Congressional campaign, Rep. Vic Fazio, labeled them as "fire-breathing radicals." President Bill Clinton has been quoted as saying they were "fanatics" with a message of "hate and fear."

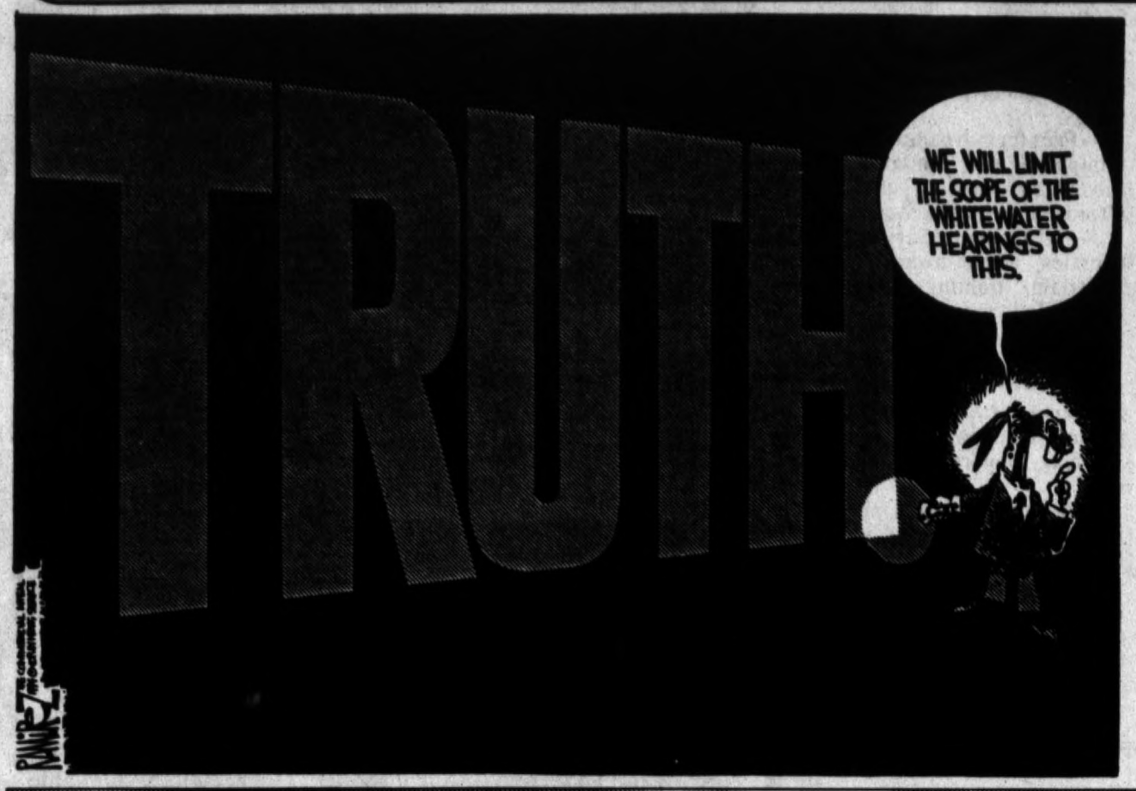

Members of both parties might be guilty of putting labels on each other, but the agenda of the Christian right is not "radical." The principles of the Christian right are opposition to abortion, freedom to pray in the schools, repulsion to homosexual behavior, belief that the Bible is the word of God, and that this nation needs to return to the moral values expressed in the Bible.

Forty years ago, these principles were considered the values held by mainstream America.

Other "radical" ideas expressed by the Christian right are that children should be raised in two-parent homes, condoms should not be distributed free in schools, children should only be born to married parents, and children should refrain from sexual activity until they are married.

Polls across the United States clearly indicate that citizens want a return to the moral values of the past. One poll found that 53 percent of Americans would ban abortion--except in cases of rape or incest or to save the life of the mother. In another poll, the majority said that sexual relations between individuals of the same sex are morally wrong, and that television has too much sex and offensive language.

Why do liberals fear the Christian right? Maybe it's because many of these liberals depend on special interest groups to keep them in office. They want to convince the public that the Christian right is a fringe group of fanatics, not citizens who represent the values favored by the majority of Americans.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

This week has certainly been a busy one for us here at your Hereford Brand.

Inside today's paper is our annual Back to School section and it bears little -- if any -- resemblance to last year's offering.

Not only did we change size, from a tabloid to a full-sheet section, we added quite a bit of information about the schools.

Thanks especially to Charles W. Greenawalt, HISD Superintendent; Nena Veazey, assistant superintendent; and all the principals for their contributions to the section.

Also, thanks to Bill McLaughlin at Walcott School, Patty Hill at Nazarene Christian Academy and Ann Lueb at St. Anthony's School.

My only regret is that we were unable to reach Community Christian School principal Jan Wilks for a greeting from her. Unfortunately, Jan was out of town during the time we were putting the section together.

However, be assured she is excited about the coming year at Community School.

Anyway, all of us here at the Brand hope you enjoy the section.

Last week I wrote a little about the Promise Keepers meeting going on in Boulder, Colo., where more than 50,000 men had gathered to commit themselves to God, their communities and their families.

Last Monday, good friend Mike Harris walked into the office to tell me about the conference first hand!

Seems Mike was part of a group of some 18 men from Hereford who traveled to Boulder to attend the conference.

Mike said it was very inspirational, especially the part where 5,000 pastors -- including Ted Taylor from Hereford Church of the Nazarene -- went to the front of the gathering to pray together and commit themselves to their work before God.

I'm pleased to hear that Promise Keepers has come to Hereford.

Mike said Jeff Torbert will be the local contact with the national Promise Keepers organization, disseminating information to local residents as it comes in.

You know, wouldn't it be great if sometime we could have our own Promise Keepers conference here in Hereford, where hundreds of local men would gather to pray for our city and for themselves and their families?

Promise Keepers is designed to cut across denominational boundaries, to tie men together with simply the love of God and a joint commitment to God and his Word.

I don't think it's an unreasonable goal and is definitely something that would help our community.

* * *

Mike Harris brought me a copy of the "Seven Promises of a Promise Keeper," which is the seven promises on which the organization is based on which participants pledge to keep.

I'd like to share them with you:

1. A Promise Keeper is committed to honoring Jesus Christ through worship, prayer and obedience to His Word, through the power of the Holy Spirit.

2. A Promise Keeper is committed to pursuing vital relationships with a few other men. understanding that he needs brothers to help him keep his promises.

3. A Promise Keeper is committed to practicing spiritual, moral, ethical and sexual purity.

4. A Promise Keeper is committed to building strong marriages and families through love, protection and biblical values.

5. A Promise Keeper is committed to supporting the mission of the church by honoring and praying for his pastor and by actively giving his time and resources.

6. A Promise Keeper is committed to reaching beyond any racial and denominational barriers to demonstrate the power of biblical unity.

7. A Promise Keeper is committed to influencing his world, being obedient to the Great Commandment (see March 12:30-31) and the Great Commission (see Matthew 28:19-20).

* * *

Well, that's it for this week.

Have a good week and, remember, a promise is not just something you say, it is something you mean.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The citizens of Hereford are at a crossroads. Do we want to turn our backs on an opportunity to remain "Hustlin' Hereford", or do we want to say "Yes" ad regain our hustlin' Hereford attitude?

That is exactly what's at stake in the 1/2-cent sales tax proposition. No one wants to add taxes to their daily lives, but we also shouldn't miss an opportunity to become a vibrant and growing city once again.

Towns and cities need a strong economic development program. They must have a plan in place to help locate new industry to their towns and keep the ones already there. But they must have money. The 1/2-cent sales tax is the fairest way to accomplish this. Everyone helps pay...not just business and property owners.

We urge you to vote Saturday, Aug. 13, at the Community Center for progress and to help hustlin' Hereford start hustling again.

John Stagner,
John Cook,
Earl Stagner

Dear Editor:

Voters should realize that the economic growth of Hereford and Deaf Smith County will be greatly affected by the outcome of the one-half cent sales tax election on Aug. 13th.

I believe the passage of this measure is vital if we are to increase our tax base, create more jobs and improve the economic climate here. The economic development tax will be managed by a five-member committee appointed by the mayor and city commission, with the city commission having final say in all expenditures.

The money can be used only for economic development. Virtually all our competing cities have this tax and they have a tremendous advantage. In Amarillo, we are paying this tax and in effect helping them provide money to attract our businesses.

I have complete confidence in Mayor Josserand and the City Commission's ability to manage these monies. I believe they are doing everything possible to promote our city and county.

Vote for the Economic Development tax and help Hereford grow.

Sincerely,
Tom Simons, County Judge

Dear Editor:

Someone is missing in our town. Her contribution to our society may have been small, but it was significant. Probably not a lot of people knew her, but I'm sure they heard her bubbly laughter across the grocery store, as I did.

Eleanor worked in the snack bar at Homeland. She'd been sick for a while, but worked almost up to the day she passed away. I know she didn't feel like being there. Her laughter wasn't there anymore, but she was pleasant as she served Cokes and coffee.

Here laughter and smile made all our lives at little richer, a little more pleasant as we drudged through the grocery store. Thank you for making us smile, Eleanor. We're going to miss you.

Darla Stengel

Dear Editor:

I am writing to appeal to you or your readers for assistance in research I am doing for a new book. I have written two books on the subject of "ghosts", and this will be the third one.

The first, "Spirits of San Antonio and South Texas" has been out about a year and a half. The second, "Ghosts Along the Texas Coast", will be out Sept. 1. The new book will concentrate on West Texas.

I am hopeful that your part of the state will has at least one "really truly" good ghost story for inclusion in my book. If you don't have one in your files, perhaps an "old timer" in your community might help me. I am prepared to travel, visit your city, do an interview, take photos, etc.

If anyone has a good ghost story or knows someone that might have one, please contact me.

Quartet undergoes extraordinary week

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The lofty Lloyd Bentsen never answered a quietly insistent question posed by a House Republican: whether the fracas among top Treasury Department officials had compromised his leadership.

That it came up at all, however, reflects an extraordinary week in which Bentsen and his three top aides displayed to congressional Whitewater investigators the survival instincts that brought them this far.

It wasn't pretty.

President Clinton said at his midweek news conference that it was up to Bentsen to resolve "the management questions" raised by the ruckus. The only real question appeared to be who would go and who, if anyone, would stay.

One Republican, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York, compared Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman to "the type of guy that if he's on a sinking ship he throws the women and children over." In this case, that meant Treasury General Counsel Jean Hanson and chief of staff Josh Steiner, a mere 28 years old.

A day earlier, in his marathon 10-hour session before the Senate Banking Committee, Altman had disputed their recollections of White House-Treasury contacts on the federal Whitewater probe.

"I can understand why he would want to blame me for things, but I won't return the favor," Hanson said later when asked if she'd been hung out to dry.

Fate and connections brought together the trio of aides now fighting to preserve their jobs and reputations, along with the secretary trying to stay above it all.

Altman knew Clinton from college. Steiner was friendly with senior White House adviser George Stephanopoulos and other administration aides from having worked on the 1988 Dukakis-Bentsen campaign. Hanson, a Minnesota native, worked at a New York law firm and had no political background. Bentsen knew none of them well.

The former Texas senator had made one critical personnel decision - to promote Steiner from Altman's assistant to departmental chief of staff earlier this year. But his Capitol Hill colleagues were not inclined to hold that or anything else against him.

There have been "outbursts demanding resignation" of other witnesses, House Banking Committee Chairman Henry Gonzalez said Thursday. "I'm glad nobody has demanded that in this case," he added, smiling at the absurdity of the idea.

Which leaves Altman, Hanson and Steiner as potential scapegoats.

Altman's central role and the calls for his resignation, however, may be offset by a White House patron anxious for him to stay on.

Clinton set the tone with measured but supportive comments at his Wednesday news conference. The next day senior White House economic aide Robert Rubin said he would vouch for his 20-year friend on "absolutely anything."

Bentsen also thawed. "I find him a very intelligent, hard-working man and I believe in his integrity," he told House members.

It was a rare departure from his neutrality principle.

He had just told lawmakers he supported not only Altman's accounts of various Whitewater developments, but also Hanson's conflicting recollections of the same events. "These are two very busy people," Bentsen said by way of explanation.

At some point he may be forced to choose between them.

Cockleburs and Devil Horses

Since my grandfather has been introduced to Brand readers, it seems only appropriate that his life and times be further recounted. The trouble is, there are many times and it's hard to choose among the experiences with him.

He was, primarily, a cattleman. Farming was not his forte, although he grew some wheat and barley, just because survival in the '30s and '40s depended on a combination of raising cattle and growing grain.

Anyhow, when hail got the wheat crop, he still had the calf crop to pay some bills.

He enjoyed watching his cattle and could identify each one, pinning names on many of them. Two of his granddaughters got into the cattle business early when he donated a couple calves to start their herd.

The heifer calf through the years produced many offspring to swell college funds. The steer calf was traded for another female. As time went on, we swapped steer calves for heifers until we had a dozen, or more, animals.

By now, my readers are asking, "What's the point?", and rightfully so.

Well the point is, the original heifer got older and older, until Pa thought she should go to market. And, there was a drought so not much grazing was available in pastures.

So, he decided to sell all the cows, including Little Susie, as she was affectionately known.

Trouble was, he failed to consult with the cow's owners. One was off in college and could use the money very effectively. The other was at home and when she learned Little Susie was going out in the next shipment, a holocaust, World War III, erupting volcano and anything else you can name, exploded.

No way, Pa was told, would Little Susie go to the slaughterhouse.

And, she didn't. But, she was relegated to a small pasture where a couple of animals were kept. One was a horse that was in the neighborhood of 30 years old. Another was a cow that had the misfortune to lose a leg.

As time wore on, the young owner of Little Susie relented. The cow was old and miserable, she decided, so she gave permission for her to be shipped out.

My grandfather got to talking with a man in Amarillo about picking up the old animals. Said the acquaintance, "I'm going to the glue factory in a week, or two, so I'll just come by and pick them up."

The glue factory was not Pa's idea of a final resting place for the beloved animals, even for the $50 the man offered.

"Just forget it," he stormed.

Sometime later, he met another man who performed the same kind of service.

"I've got a three-legged cow, an old cow and a worn-out horse I want to get rid of," he told the fellow. "I don't want anything for them. Just go get them . . . don't tell me when or where you take them."

Not too long after, the three animals disappeared from the pasture. Just gone. Ka-put.

A final chapter in my youth was written when the horse was sent off. Part quarterhorse, if there is such a thing, Suzie Q was a heckuva cowpony. She didn't have to be spurred to know which animal needed to be cut from the herd or brought back to the herd.

My experience with her almost ended any hope I ever had of riding a horse for pleasure, or work. After Pa had driven a small herd of cattle to a water tank, he allowed me to sit in the saddle of Suzie Q. The saddle wasn't tight because he was giving her a rest.

Suddenly, the horse took off to round up wandering cows, like a shot, me hanging on to the saddle horn for dear life and Pa chasing us in the car. He finally headed us and the horse came to an abrupt stop, almost sending me over her head.

As soon as I could, I jumped down and took off for the car. About halfway there, Pa met me, grabbed my arm and, literally, almost dragged me back to the horse.

With the cinch tightened, he hoisted me into the saddle and bellowed, "Now ride her back to the tank."

That may have been the longest quarter-mile horseback ride I ever took. And, it was a long time before I forgave my grandfather for making me ride her.

As years passed, though, I learned what he knew intuitively -- if I didn't ride her then, I'd never ride a horse again.

So, the used animal dealer took part of my childhood, the old horse and cow. Things were never quite the same again.

Panel tabs new man as counsel

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a surprise move, Kenneth W. Starr, a Republican former federal appellate judge and former solicitor general, was named by a special court Friday to take over as independent counsel in charge of the Whitewater investigation.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said Starr would replace Robert Fiske, who was put in charge as a special counsel by Attorney General Janet Reno on Jan. 20.

When the independent counsel law, which expired last year, was re-enacted earlier this year, Reno recommended that the special three-judge court empowered to name independent counsels stick with Fiske.

Several Republican members of Congress had written the judges questioning Fiske's independence and he had been criticized by some conservative commentators.

Starr, 47, is now a private attorney in Washington.

John Bryck, a legal assistant in Fiske's office in Little Rock, Ark., said the office had no immediate comment. Bryck said he understood an order had been issued by the court, but that the office had not seen it yet.

The three-judge panel said it intended no criticism of Fiske, who had brought one indictment in Little Rock, Ark., in a related financial transaction.

Fiske also had ruled that deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster committed suicide, and had cleared White House and Treasury aides of any criminality in discussing a case involving an Arkansas savings and loan owned by a man who was partner with President and Mrs. Clinton in the Whitewater land development effort.

"It is not our intent to impugn the integrity of the attorney general's appointee, but rather to reflect the intent of the act that the actor be protected against perceptions of conflict," the judges wrote in a four-page order.

NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Cosby says he felt "invaded" by a photographer who snapped his picture in a dark auditorium. The photographer says he was assaulted when Cosby led him from the room.

Dick Corkery is suing Cosby for $3 million for the June 1992 incident at a ceremony honoring Cosby's wife, Camille.

In federal court Tuesday, Cosby testified that he held Corkery's elbow to lead him outside, and they had a heated argument. But he said he never assaulted the New York Daily News photographer.

"I didn't like what he had done. I felt I had been invaded," Cosby said.

Cosby said he posed for photographs before entering the Metropolitan Museum of Art and taking his seat at the ceremony.

When he began applauding, he said, "Pop! Pop! goes the camera."

He said the flash was "sort of like a laser" hitting him in both eyes and breaking his concentration.

Azinger returns to tour with nervous 76 round

By RON SIRAK
AP Sports Writer

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) - Paul Azinger took two tentative steps to the center of the tee box, stopped and extended his right arm straight out from the shoulder once full of cancer, making his hand tremble in mock terror.

"See if I do that if I have the lead on Sunday," Azinger said Friday to laughs from the large gallery at the Buick Open.

Then, as announcer Randy Hutton said: "From Bradenton, Florida, please welcome back to the tour, Paul Azinger" the laughs turned to cheers, loud, long cheers punctuated with shouts of "Zinger!"

"I was nervous," he said after shooting a 4-over-par 76, 11 strokes behind leader Fred Funk.

"I almost teared up a little bit when everyone started clapping. Like Corey said, my eyes started sweating."

Playing with Corey Pavin and Ben Crenshaw this was not the Paul Azinger who won three tournaments last year, including the PGA Championship. This was not the Paul Azinger who has won at least once every year since 1987.

"I didn't play very well," he said after starting on the 10th tee and shooting a 40 on the back nine followed by a 36 on the front side.

"But at least I'm not laying in bed throwing up."

"There was a time in chemo when I wondered if I would ever care enough about golf again to get aggravated," Azinger said. "I was definitely aggravated out there a few times. I know I can still play. I just haven't played enough."

This rain-delayed first round at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club was a celebration of the return of Azinger.

Azinger's play was not as bad as his score. His day fell apart when he bogeyed four of the last five holes on the first nine, mostly with some terrible putting.

"Anything involving touch I need work on," he said.

Azinger drove the ball well and hit some very good iron shots and some excellent punch wedges. He was woeful out of the rough and his putting was even worse.

McGriff, Bagwell reach milestones

By TOM WITHERS
Associated Press Writer

Fred McGriff and Jeff Bagwell quietly go about their business - the business of pounding baseballs around and out of NL ballparks.

McGriff and Bagwell, two of the game's most unheralded superstars, each reached milestones Friday night.

In Cincinnati, McGriff hit his 30th homer to join the game's greatest sluggers and help the Atlanta Braves pull away to a 16-6 victory over the Reds.

Meanwhile in Houston, Bagwell was re-writing the team record book in leading the Astros to a 12-4 win over San Francisco.

McGriff's two-run homer, one of four by the Braves, made him only the ninth player in major-league history to hit 30 homers in seven consecutive seasons.

He joins a group that includes Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth, Mickey Mantle and Lou Gehrig.

"You always strive for consistency," McGriff said. "Hitting 30 again proves you've been consistent over the years. It's awful tough. It's like a big rock off my shoulders. Every night, guys know you can hit it out and they try to throw it so you can't."

Roberto Kelly, Terry Pendleton and Jeff Blauser also homered for the Braves and allowed Tom Glavine (13-8) to improve to 12-0 in 13 career starts in Cincinnati.

Consistency has been Bagwell's middle name all season.

The leading candidate for NL MVP honors, Bagwell set team season records for homers, RBIs and extra-base hits.

Bagwell homered, doubled and drove in five runs to raise his major-league leading total to 112. He broke the Astros' club record of 110 RBIs set by Bob Watson in 1977.

Bagwell, who went 3-for-4, hit his 38th homer in the fifth inning to surpass Jimmy Wynn's club mark of 37 set in 1967. He doubled in the third inning and now has 71 extra-base hits this season, moving him past Wynn (1967) and Cesar Cedeno (1972) on the club's list.

"I might never have a year like this again, but I can't dwell on that. So what, I've already had a great two-thirds of the season," said Bagwell, who raised his average to .370.

Houston starter Greg Swindell (8-8) gave up four runs - one earned - and 11 hits in his first complete game this season.

Expos 5, Phillies 0

At Philadelphia, Pedro Martinez allowed two hits - both singles - in eight innings, leading the Expos to their seventh win in eight games.

Martinez, who has won his last four starts, gave up a single to Mickey Morandini in the first and a single to Tony Longmire in the seventh.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 3

Royals take 14th straight win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

From the start, the Kansas City Royals found it easy to enjoy their latest victory.

The Royals won their 14th straight game Friday night, routing the Seattle Mariners 8-0.

Brent Mayne hit an RBI triple in the first inning and, for only the third time during the streak, Kansas City won by more than three runs.

"It's safe to say everybody's having a great time," said Mike Magnante, who pitched the last inning for the Royals. "A lot of us can't remember when we had this much fun."

Tom Gordon stopped Seattle on three hits for eight innings as Kansas City extended the longest winning streak in the majors since a 15-game string by Minnesota in 1991.

The Royals' record is a 16-game streak in 1977. That was the longest winning streak in the majors since 1953.

In other games, New York trounced Minnesota 12-3, Oakland topped Texas 5-4, California defeated Chicago 5-3, Baltimore beat Milwaukee 4-0 and Toronto defeated Detroit 4-2. The game between Cleveland and Boston at Fenway Park was rained out.

Every Royals starter except Felix Jose had a hit. Consecutive doubles by Greg Gagne and Chico Lind and an RBI single by Vince Coleman made it 3-0 in the fourth. Gagne and Lind, who went 3-for-4 with three RBIs, each had two-run singles in the four-run seventh.

Gordon (11-6) struck out five, walked one and retired 14 of the last 15 batters.

"This sounds funny - but we're not playing as well as we need to play," Kansas City manager Hal McRae said.

"We're giving away 4-5 outs every night," he said. "We're not turning some double plays we need to turn."

Ken Griffey Jr. of the Mariners left the game in the fourth inning when he fouled a ball that bruised the inside of his right knee. He was expected to start tonight, possibly as the designated hitter.

"I don't make out the lineup. I'm here early and they'll make a decision on how I feel," he said.

Jim Converse (0-5) lasted 5 2-3 innings and gave up 10 hits and four runs.

The three-game series was supposed to be in Seattle, but was moved to Kansas City because of falling ceiling tiles at the Kingdome. As a result, the Mariners are in the middle of a 32-day, 30-game road trip.

Yankees 12, Twins 3

Jimmy Key became baseball's first 17-game winner as New York earned its eighth straight victory.

Mike Stanley drove in four runs, two with a double during an eight-run fourth inning. The Yankees have won

Cardinals get win for Buddy

By The Associated Press

Buddy Ryan got what he wanted out of his defense, which gave the Arizona Cardinals what they wanted - a victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

The Cardinal defense came up with six turnovers, including three interceptions by linemen, in handing San Francisco only its second loss in 16 exhibition games dating back to the 1991 season.

"That's Buddy's way of doing things," said Clyde Simmons, who returned an interception for a touchdown early in the second quarter and picked off another pass minutes later in Arizona's 17-7 victory. "He wants the defense to deliver the ball to the offense."

"Our first team looked pretty good, but you can't believe how stupid our second team was," said Ryan, who was making his debut as Cardinals coach.

Besides Simmons' two thefts, reserve linebackers Garth Jax and David Merritt recovered fumbles, rookie Perry Carter stopped a late San Francisco drive with a pickoff on the 4-yard line, and Lennie Jenkins, another lineman, intercepted Bill Musgrave's pass on the Arizona 35 in the final minutes.

In other exhibition games Friday night, Detroit defeated the New York Jets 26-13, Indianapolis stopped Seattle 13-9, Chicago downed Philadelphia 12-6 and New England battered New Orleans 24-6.

Oddibe's odyssey brings him back to Arlington

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Oddibe McDowell arrived in Mexico last spring determined to work his way back to the major leagues for the first time since 1990.

At least, that was his plan until he looked around and was repulsed by what he saw.

"If this is the only place I can play," McDowell thought, "then it's time to pack it up and go home."

Suddenly, the game he had once played so well didn't seem worth it any more.

By returning home to Arlington, where he had dazzled baseball as a rookie in 1985 and stuck around to raise his family, McDowell could forsake all of the game's cruelties.

There would be no more injuries like the ones that ended comeback tries the previous two seasons. He'd never have to hear another team say "don't call us, we'll call you."

And, most importantly, he'd put an end to the rumored attacks on his character, those vicious whispers he still thinks forced him out of the majors back in 1990.

But he couldn't shake the game and, a few weeks later, he found himself talking to the Texas Rangers about a possible spot in their system caused by Jose Canseco's season-ending elbow injury.

Sure enough, there was a job available in Class AA Tulsa for only six weeks of guaranteed employment. A late-season callup was highly unlikely and even an invitation to spring training would have to be earned.

Still, on July 13, 1993, he took it.

"I went into it thinking, 'This is my last shot, all I get. It's all or nothing,' " McDowell said. "If I have nine lives, that was my ninth."

The risk paid off on April 25 of this season, when - after six great weeks in Tulsa, a solid spring training and a good month in Class AAA Oklahoma City - McDowell again became a starting outfielder for the Rangers.

If the road back up on Oddibe's odyssey seems unlikely, the road down was even more so, considering what a hotshot he was early in his career.

McDowell, a high draft pick from Arizona State, burst onto the scene in 1985 after proving he was ready for the majors in only 31 minor-league games.

In Texas, McDowell quickly became manager Bobby Valentine's "special little guy" with the big smile, quirky name (oh, how the ESPN guys loved to play with that one!) and a lot of pop for a 5-foot-9, 165-pound outfielder.

In 111 games, he hit 18 homers and drove in 42 runs. There also were 14 doubles, five triples and 25 stolen bases. And there were those two dazzling days in July when he had eight straight hits, including becoming the first - and still only - Ranger to hit for the cycle.

The average, though, was a bit low at .239. Still, all seemed fine the following season as he learned the league and jumped his mark to .266.

But through the years, the average remained a problem. So were his high number of strikeouts: far too many for a leadoff hitter who should be more concerned with slapping grounders or bunting to take advantage of his speed.

McDowell's problem was that he saw his niche as a little guy with a big bat. Trying to live up to that image, he fell into the slugger's trap of overswinging and trying to pull the ball.

Midway through 1988, the Rangers had had enough and sent McDowell back to Oklahoma City. He was hitting .205 at the time.

He was called up a few weeks later and finished the season in Texas, but he began 1989 as a Cleveland Indian as part of a three-for-one trade for Julio Franco. He finished the season with the Atlanta Braves, where he played his last major-league game in 1990.

"In Atlanta, I hit .304 (in 1989) and things were going good," he said. "The next year, I came back and I didn't play."

So McDowell hit the road looking for a chance. The New York Yankees offered him a minor-league contract for 1991, but he instead signed with Baltimore's Class AAA team in Rochester.

Things were going OK there until July, when he partially tore his rotator cuff and sat out the rest of the season. He had played only six games in 1992 when he completely tore the rotator cuff while playing for Edmonton, California's top minor-league team.

By now, things were looking pretty bleak. He hadn't been a regular in the majors since 1989 and he was coming off shoulder surgery.

McDowell also saw one other obstacle: an informal blackballing.

"Guys started spreading rumors about me," he said. "People said I didn't have the fire, that I didn't want to play, and that my religion was in the way. Who knows why those things came out."

Texas general manager Tom Grieve denies that McDowell was intentionally shut out of baseball. Grieve says McDowell's demise was simply caused by a faulty swing.

"When he was here, we felt he was capable of being a much better player than his numbers indicated," Grieve said.

"I hit .260 when I was supposed to hit .300 with 30 homers," McDowell says with a big laugh. "So, what're you going to do? Maybe I should have really stunk and the expectations wouldn't have been so high."

These days, there are few expectations for McDowell, who turns 32 later this month.

He was a starter shortly after his callup and he's been in and out of the lineup ever since. Through Tuesday, his 55th game, he was hitting .272 with four doubles, a triple and a homer. He'd stolen 14 bases, driven in 15 runs and scored 33.

"It's nice to be back after not being here and going through injuries and the other business and political parts of it," said McDowell, who is unfazed by the thought of a strike cutting short his comeback season.

"But I think I'll know when it's time to turn it in and say 'Thank you very much, it's been good.' When it's over, I know I can look back and say I gave it my best."

Bad vibes pervade Cowboys' camp

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - There's a sense of foreboding about the 1994 Dallas Cowboys. Something's wrong here. The vibes aren't good.

Maybe it started with the all-terrain vehicle crash involving Emmitt Smith.

He was riding in one of those John Deere "Gators" when "Crazy" Ray Jones, the team's unofficial mascot, decided at the age of 61 that he had enough speed to beat the vehicle to a crossing.

The vehicle won and passenger Smith went tumbling on the ground with the defense of the Cowboys' Super Bowl season bouncing along with him.

Smith survived relatively unscathed and no damage was done to his shoulder which was separated late last year.

Not a good way to start a training camp. It reminds one of the year Tony Dorsett dropped a mirror and broke his toe. Or the season a Pro Bowl offensive lineman broke his leg on the dance floor. The Cowboys didn't win a championship those years.

Then came Sunday night's injury to running back Derrick Lassic, who had added 20 pounds and looked like a spitting image of Smith during training camp. For some reason the second-year player was on the kickoff team in a meaningless exhibition game. Somebody help me here if they can find any good reason why Lassic should have done that.

Lassic tore the tendon behind his right knee trying to pivot on the sticky Texas Stadium artificial turf which should have been replaced by grass five years ago.

Lassic likely will be out for the season. It reminds one of the year that Charlie Waters tore a knee in Seattle's Kingdome trying to pivot. Waters was out all that season and the Cowboys didn't win a title.

During training camp, Alvin Harper has repeatedly injured his right shoulder and now wears a sling.

Of course, Michael Irvin hasn't practiced because he separated his shoulder in a pickup basketball game. Yes, a basketball game.

Because of the salary cap, teams can't just rush out and replace an injured player like they have in the past. For example, Lassic's $165,000 salary will count against the Cowboys $34.6 million cap.

There's an uneasy feeling about how the injuries are already starting to snipe at the Cowboys.

New coach Barry Switzer is alarmed. He, too, wondered why Lassic was in the game. Switzer also should have yanked fullback Daryl Johnston out of the contest earlier than he did. The Cowboys still have four preseason games to go.

Of course, Switzer is a rookie and making decisions carefully. He is depending on his assistants to tell him the right thing to do. That likely will be the pattern in the first year without Jimmy Johnson.

There are other unsettling things about this team other than the fact that Smith's backup, Lincoln Coleman, is overweight and out of shape.

The kicking situation could get desperate. Rookies Chris Boniol and Richie Cunningham are struggling. The Cowboys may wish they had forked up an extra $250,000 to keep steady Eddie "Mr. Money" Murray.

A lot of irritating little things keep popping up with the Cowboys, who are trying to win a record third consecutive Super Bowl.

The linebacking situation is far from settled with Robert Jones still not taking charge in the middle.

The Cowboys still have four preseason games to go and you couldn't blame Switzer if he put Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith, Johnston and tight end Jay Novacek on ice until the opener on Sept. 4 against Pittsburgh.

At St. Edward's University you get the feeling of an approaching storm and the Cowboys are right in the middle of it.

three-run double off the first-base bag capped a two-out, five-run fourth inning.

The Cardinals had 17 hits and drew 12 walks off four Pirates pitchers while stranding 17 runners - one short of the NL record for a nine-inning game.

Alicea was 4-for-4 with three doubles and Todd Zeile, one of baseball's hottest hitters since the All-Star game, drove in two runs.

Mets 10, Marlins 7

At New York, Bobby Bonilla and Jeff Kent each had three RBIs and Bret Saberhagen benefitted from early support to win his sixth straight.

The Mets have won three straight and eight of their last 10 to move within one game of .500 (53-54) for the first time since June 6.

Dodgers 5, Rockies 4

At Denver, rookie Raul Mondesi had a pair of triples and drove in two runs to help Ramon Martinez win his third straight.

The Dodgers, increasing their lead in the NL West to 3 1/2 games over San Francisco and 5 1/2 over Colorado, scored four runs in the sixth inning on four consecutive two-out hits.

Padres 4, Cubs 2

At Chicago, Scott Sanders allowed one hit in eight innings to snap a personal four-game losing streak. Sanders (4-8) won for the first time since June 19, matching a career-high with 11 strikeouts.

After Sanders walked Mark Grace leading off the ninth, Trevor Hoffman came on for his 18th save.

AL

10 in a row on the road for the first time since 1962.

Key (17-3) improved to 10-0 on the road. He gave up one earned run in seven innings.

Athletics 5, Rangers 4

Terry Steinbach beat out an infield hit with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning as Oakland ended a six-game losing streak.

Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez homered for Texas in the third for a 4-1 lead. Steinbach's sacrifice fly capped a three-run fifth that tied it.

In the ninth, Scott Hemond drew a leadoff walk from Matt Whiteside (2-2). With two outs, Troy Neel singled off Rick Honeycutt.

Ruben Sierra was walked intentionally, loading the bases and bringing on Jay Howell. Steinbach hit a slow grounder to second baseman Jeff Frye and reached safely.

Dennis Eckersley (5-4) worked the ninth for the victory.

Orioles 4, Brewers 0

Ben McDonald pitched the second one-hitter of his career and Baltimore won in Milwaukee.

McDonald (13-7) allowed only a single to Dave Nilsson in the fourth inning.

Angels 5, White Sox 3

Damion Easley homered twice in a game for the first time in his career and California ended a nine-game home losing streak.

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 2

Juan Guzman overcame a shaky start and won for the sixth time in seven decisions as Toronto downed Detroit at the SkyDome.

Arkansas jockey revives fallen career in Texas

By JOHN NAYLOR
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

WILLOW PARK, Texas - As the horses entered the stretch, the jockey took one last glance back. He knew the other horse was gaining on him and when he spotted the rival, it was time to go to work.

Whipping and driving, both horses fighting for every stride, he saved his best for last. When he neared the finish line, he asked for just a bit more, hand-riding his mount in the final jump for a photo-finish.

Once his number was flashed as the winner on the tote board, Ricky Frazier let out a whoop that seemed to define his newfound enthusiasm for his riding career.

The display of emotion wasn't merely because he had just ridden Itron to victory in the $99,225 Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Sale Futurity for colts at Trinity Meadows. The excitement illustrated Frazier's desire to return to the place he felt he belonged all along: the winner's circle.

The 30-year-old rider, whose promising career had stalled amid injuries and personal problems, has experienced a rebirth of his career in the unlikeliest of places, Texas, where the horse-racing industry is in its infancy.

"I knew I was going to get it back," said Frazier, who estimates he has ridden 1,800 winners. "It was coming. I felt myself riding good again. Whether it was going to Texas or going to Finger Lakes (Canadaiqua, New York), I was going to find someplace where somebody was going to give me a chance to prove myself again."

That place was Texas.

Frazier recently won Sam Houston Race Park's leading rider title with 46 victories during the Houston track's inaugural thoroughbred meeting, his first riding title since the late 1980s when he won at Hawthorne and Sportsman's in Chicago. He has continued his successful comeback at Trinity Meadows. The Hot Springs, Ark., native is second in the jockey standings with 25 victories and leads in money earnings after winning both divisions of the TTBA Sale Futurity July 23-24.

Considering the money to be made in Texas is less than he could earn riding at more established racetracks, many horsemen at Trinity Meadows were surprised that Frazier had decided to stay in the Lone Star State. Others who recognize Frazier's obvious riding talents are, however, impressed by his decision.

"It's not like Ricky's here because he has to be here," trainer Monte Couch said. "He's here because he wants to be here. That says something about him."

Frazier sees a bright future in Texas racing and won't second-guess his move for one moment.

"Could've, would've, should've," said Frazier, who plans to return to Houston in the fall and move to San Antonio next April when Retama Park opens. "That's irrelevant. I'm here in Texas now. This is where I want to be. You have to come down here and pay your dues at the start. And when Texas racing is as big as New York and California racing, hopefully I'll be the leading rider in Texas. So, it's not about money. We're here to win races and establish ourselves."

Frazier established himself as a rider at an early age. The youngest of Roy and Lena Frazier's three children, Ricky grew up on the "backside" of many tracks, most notably Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs. At the age of 10, about the same time his father retired from riding to become a trainer, Ricky began galloping horses.

When Ricky reached 16, it was evident he had the talent to become a jockey, but his father was hesitant to grant permission.

"I never really wanted him to ride, because I had to struggle," said Roy Frazier said. "But I never knew he could do this good. We made a little deal that if he didn't make it as a jockey, he'd have to go back to school."

Although Frazier maintained a 3.8 grade-point average and received his general equivalency diploma from Hot Springs High School, his career took off when he was an apprentice jockey and any thoughts of returning to school were erased.

Frazier was the leading apprentice at Louisiana Downs in 1981, winning 92 races and six stakes, a record that still stands. He also rode in New York in '81, where he was leading apprentice jockey at Aqueduct and second leading apprentice at Belmont, finishing second in the country in apprentice victories for the year.

The next five years were spent riding at Louisiana Downs and Fair Grounds in New Orleans. In 1984, Frazier experienced a roller-coaster ride. Riding at Louisiana Downs on Oct. 27, he became only the 25th jockey in history to win seven races on one card. In the aftermath of the celebration, only a week later, Frazier's career came to a stunning halt. He broke his neck in a spill at the Fair Grounds when a horse stepped on his head, crushing his helmet and causing temporary paralysis for two days.

"It took about 10 years off my life," said Roy of his son's accident.

"Everything was pretty fuzzy the first couple of days. It was pretty scary," said Ricky Frazier. "The first thing they told me was that I would never ride again. They wanted to operate on me. But my father and a family friend, Ed Vanston, got a specialist in Dallas who said not to operate and to wear a metal halo. If they had operated on me I never would have rode again. The day they put me in the halo, I knew I'd be back."

Frazier wore the halo around his head for four months and only two days after removing the metal stabilizer, he was back on the track galloping horses.

"The doctors to this day still can't believe how quickly I healed," said Frazier with a grin.

Even emotionally, Frazier bears no scars from the spill.

"For me it's my job," Frazier said. "It's like the race-car driver worrying about directing his car. If you worry about it, it's going to happen."

After the spill, Frazier rebuilt his career in Louisiana and Arkansas, eventually moving to Chicago in 1988. That year, he won the riding title at Hawthorne, finished second in the standings at Sportsman's and third at Arlington Park. In 1989, he finished second in the standings at both Sportsman's and Hawthorne. The future again looked bright, but more problems loomed.

Frazier's first marriage ended in divorce in 1989 and off-track business ventures soon went sour. Frazier attempted to escape his problems by fleeing to California in 1990. "I went to California and said goodbye," Frazier said. "It messed with me pretty good. I just had to get away."

While he fared well on the Northern California circuit, finishing third in the jockey standings at Golden Gate and Bay Meadows, Frazier admits he was just going through the motions. His work habits began to decline and so did the number of mounts and victories. His wins for a season slipped to an all-time low of 48 in 1992.

"A lot of trainers saw that I didn't want to ride . . . I didn't want to be there," Frazier said of what he now calls his "stupid phase." "That was about 1990 to 1992. It took me about two years to give the career away and about two years to get it back. That's when Lance and Jim Gaston came in."

Enduring a slump late in this year's meet at Oaklawn Park, Frazier teamed up with agent Lance Gaston and Gaston's brother, trainer Jim Gaston. Jim was moving his stable to Houston for Sam Houston's inaugural meet and needed a jockey to ride his horses.

"I ride the best riders available anywhere," Gaston said. "And Ricky is a top-notch rider. I told him that if he gave my brother his business, he could ride for me."

The trio agreed and set their sights on Sam Houston's opening meet in April. The combination was an instant success as Frazier and Jim Gaston both led their respective divisions in victories once Sam Houston's meet ended in June.

"Being leading rider at Sam Houston - and just the whole season - was the most exciting time I've had as a rider," Frazier said. "Just because of how hard it was to get my career back. That whole meet was such a confidence builder and it's carried right on over to here."

A stable family life has also been a big boost in Frazier's career. Frazier remarried 2 1/2 years ago, and he and wife Dawn have two children in addition to Frazier's son from his first marriage.

"When you have a wife and three kids, you pretty much have to figure out what you want to do," Frazier said. "There was a time for me to either give up riding or focus on it. This is what I've decided to do . . . focus on it."

High school football two-a-days have changed in recent times

By MIKE HEIKA
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas - Looking back at the boot-camp philosophy that once was Texas football two-a-days, most coaches can laugh. But the memory of searing summer practices for Haltom coach Carl Copeland always has a grim feel.

Copeland lost his best friend in high school, Bill Fireno, to collegiate two-a-days. Fireno, a captain at Mesquite High School with Copeland, died on the field of a heat stroke as a sophomore during spring training at the University of Tulsa in 1968.

"It's something I always think of this time of year," said Copeland, who saw Fireno just before he went away to college that year. "Now we understand more about jogging instead of running 20 100-yard dashes. Every time the kids need a drink of water, they get one. I don't know what I'd do if I lost one."

His memories of past training camps were fresh as he led the Buffalos out to this year's first day of football practice, the earliest ever sanctioned by the University Interscholastic League. More than 900 Texas schools began workouts Wednesday. Many Class 5A schools are scheduled to start next Wednesday because they opted for additional spring workouts.

"It seems to get a little bit earlier each year," Richland coach Bob Briscoe said. "They start school earlier each year and they push football back a little more."

Although players must report at the peak of summer's heat, coaches agree today's players have it much easier than their predecessors.

"To get in shape you ran until you threw up, and if you were in good shape, it was a nightmare because you'd keep running," Copeland said. "Sometimes we'd run and stick our fingers down our throats so we could eventually quit."

Carroll offensive coordinator Duke Christian has a theory on such training techniques.

"I think that's why coaches are the way they are," he said. "We've all had our brains baked."

Christian's favorite tale involves a particularly hot summer in Waco when he was an assistant coach at Baylor. Grant Teaff, then head coach of the Bears, was preparing his team for the season opener with Brigham Young and he played up the heat angle, pushing his team through 100-degree workouts on the artificial turf while posting a temperature reading from Provo, Utah, in clear sight - usually around 72 or 73 degrees, Christian said. The motivation experiment hit its peak when Teaff fried an egg on the sideline for a gaggle of media onlookers.

"And then we went out and Brigham Young just killed us," Christian said. "That's when I knew all this working out in the heat didn't work."

Trainers now offer players numerous water breaks, and coaches work to schedule practices in the earliest part of the day. Coaches at several schools will run their two-a-days in two morning shifts and let players go home at 1 p.m.

"It just doesn't make any sense to kill them," Briscoe said. "We've found they learn more when they're not dying for a drink of water."

Arlington High trainer Jerry Fisher said the new philosophy has prevented other training mishaps, as well. He recalls one particularly painful accident when a fellow teammate was trying to outsmart the coaches during two-a-days.

"A high school teammate, who's now a lawyer, cut a lemon in half and stuck it in his helmet to suck on," Fisher said. "That first hit it got in his eyes and he went crazy."

But not all the memories are bad. Northwest coach Gary Prescott was a freshman at Decatur High School in 1964, the last year the school had a true football "camp."

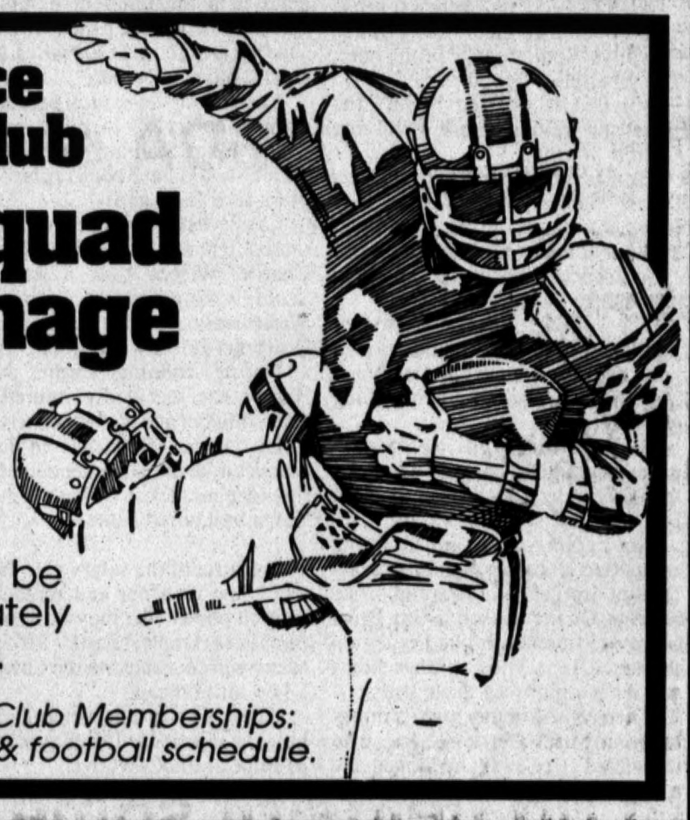

"That year, the kids came up for 10 days - except Sundays - and stayed at the school," he said. "The freshmen brought cots and the bare essentials with them and stayed the night in the field house. The sophomores, juniors and seniors would pitch tents on the football field and stay out there. All the kids were bused to their meals.

"It was a tough camp. Some left, but others stayed. I stayed because I loved football. Now, I look back and remember how it was. When we have class reunions, we still talk about it."

In losing all four of their Super Bowl appearances, the Minnesota Vikings scored only 34 points.

Collection set of containers for pesticides

Empty pesticide containers will be collected along with several other items Tuesday, between 8 a.m. and noon, at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

Old pesticides will not be accepted during the collection.

Sponsored by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, Texas Department of Agriculture and Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the collection also will accept motor oil and filters, used tires and lead-acid batteries free of charge.

Empty pesticide containers must be clean and either triple rinsed or high pressure rinsed.

Since the recycling program was initiated by TNRCC, through 28 events, the number of items turned in has been huge -- 18,111 tires, 47,329 pesticide containers, 24,013 gallons of oil, 19,808 oil filters and 3,565 batteries.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Deaf Smith County Extension Office, 364-3573.

Ropers earn show placing

A Hereford pair of ropers, Mandy Walker and Ty Boggeman, placed third in the Texas State 4-H Horse Show held recently in Abilene.

They competed with 152 teams from throughout the state.

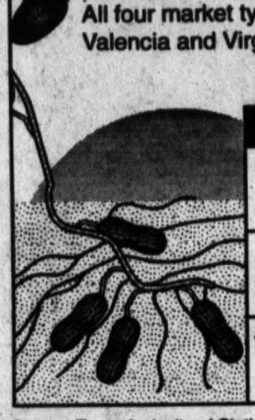

Walker, who has will enroll in Cisco Junior College this fall, has been in 4-H for 10 years. She is the daughter of Guy and Carol Walker.

Boggeman, a 4-Her for five years, is a freshman at Hereford High School. His parents are Ed and Sandy Crawford.

Dry weather limited the Texas peanut harvest in 1993 to 559 million pounds, 18 percent less than 1992's record crop. Most peanuts are grown in a few counties south of Fort Worth, in West Texas, and south of San Antonio. All four market types of this legume — Spanish, runner, Valencia and Virginia — are grown in Texas.

USDA seeking input in 'reinvention' study

A "re-invention" of the Soil Conservation Service is being conducted by soliciting recommendations on the future of the agency.

A forum on the SCS will be held in Plainview Tuesday, with identical agendas scheduled for 1:30 p.m. and 7 p.m., at the Ollie Liner Center, 200 S. Columbia.

Registration for the sessions will begin at 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture SCS was founded 60 years ago to address a national resource crisis, commonly called the Dust Bowl.

A number of changes have been made through the years. Now, the SCS hopes to create a natural resources agency for the future.

"The SCS is at a crossroads and we and our customers have an unprecedented opportunity to anticipate future needs and refocus the agency's mission," said Texas SCS State Conservationist Wes Oneth.

He asked that anyone interested in natural resource conservation is encouraged to take part in the process.

The Plainview date is one of six being conducted throughout the state.

Researcher designs system to measure aerial application

By MICHAEL LANDWEBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department researcher has designed a system for determining the accuracy of aerial pesticide application.

Growers now place water-sensitive cards throughout their fields prior to spraying. After the aerial applicator, known as a crop duster in the old days, delivers the pesticide to the crops, the cards are collected for a spray deposit analysis.

Basically, this means the farmers manually count and measure the spots left on the cards, a long process that can take up to an hour per card.

The new system enhances this method, using video and computer technology, according to Agricultural Research magazine.

Eric Franz, an agricultural engineer for USDA's Agricultural Research Service, designed the system, called image analysis, which uses a video camera and a computer to do the manual labor.

After the field is sprayed, the cards are scanned by the video camera, feeding the data directly into the computer where it is converted into digital information. The computer then provides all the pertinent statistics, including area of spray coverage, number of spots per unit area and droplet size.

Studies have shown that merely spraying is not enough to eradicate targeted pests; the spraying must be done right.

Agricultural Research Service scientist Ivan Kirk determined that different size droplets affect insects differently, even pinpointing the exact size needed to control a variety of pests. Such research, used in conjunction with Franz's system, will help growers waste less pesticide.

At the moment, however, the image analysis system has only been used as a research tool. Other researchers are currently working on a portable system with a hand-held scanner for use in the fields, picking up where Franz left off. Franz died in February 1994.

Farm/Ranch show grows for '94 event in Lubbock

LUBBOCK - A larger area, more crops, more exhibitors and more demonstrations are on the agenda for the Farmer-Stockman Show, returning to Lubbock in October for the second year.

Organizers of the event, set for a three-day run beginning on Oct. 11, report more crops will be seen by show visitors. Besides cotton, corn and sorghum, which dominate the scene, there will be peanuts and alfalfa in the lineup.

Cropland surrounds a 56-acre exhibit field where as many as 300 commercial and educational exhibitors will be housed in tents.

Besides crops and exhibits, the show features 40 acres of conservation demonstrations, a wildlife planting and seed plots shown by seed companies.

Animal demonstrations will feature cattle handling equipment and animal health products. A horse training demonstration will be presented.

A special program of interest to women also is being planned.

Entomologists study system to rid fields of some insects

By MICHAEL LANDWEBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Following their noses, Agriculture Department researchers think they may have sniffed out a solution to insect pests by using their own scents against them.

To attract mates, female insects will often release pheromones - distinct perfume-like chemicals - that help the males find them.

Now, entomologists have designed a system that floods a crop field with the enticing aromas, making it difficult for the males to stay on any particular female's trail, according to USDA's Agricultural Research magazine.

"Normally the male would follow a pheromone trail and find the female," Agricultural Research Service entomologist Everett Mitchell said. "But in our test plots, we put out pheromone dispensers that make it seem like there are thousands of females everywhere. The males are overwhelmed, confused and don't know where to go."

The bombardment of pheromones can result in desensitization of the males to the point that the insects fail to recognize the pheromone as a sign of a female.

The research by Mitchell and fellow entomologist John McLaughlin has been done at an Environmental Protection Agency laboratory that specializes in seeking alternatives to insecticide-based pest control. Besides the environmental concerns surrounding insecticides, pheromones may also help circumvent the pests' growing resistance to such chemicals.

Mitchell and McLaughlin first tested the use of pheromones in 1990-91 against the diamondback moth, which was plaguing Florida cabbage growers. They used their pheromone treatment on a 20-acre test field, while also monitoring two control fields for the pest.

In the pheromone field, researchers found that only 36 percent of the female moths had mated, compared with 86 percent in the other two fields. Additionally, the fields without pheromone treatment needed to be sprayed with insecticides 13 and 15 times, respectively; the test field was sprayed three times.

In addition to stakes in the ground, which release the pheromones, they are using parasitic wasps, which are not a danger to people or crops, and a Bt insecticide, a natural organism that will not harm the wasps.

The wasps, which are released into the field, target diamondback moths, laying their eggs in the larvae. Developing as parasites, the wasp young feed on the moths, preventing them from reaching the adult stage.

However, in a 1992-93 study, only 7 percent of moth larvae were found to have hosted the parasites. In the three-year study, which began this year, Mitchell and McLaughlin intend to increase the wasp saturation from 200 per acre to 600.

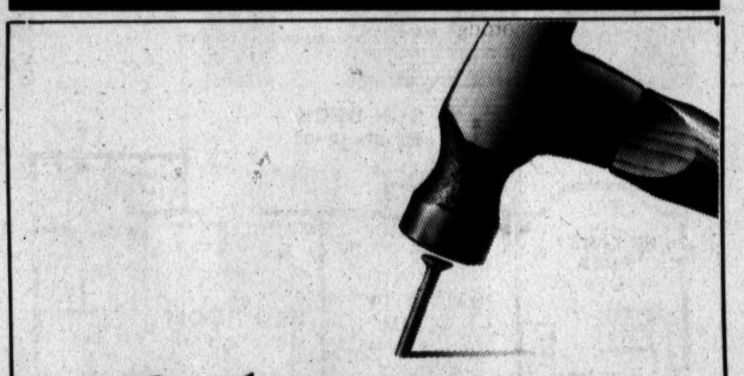

Currently, the major drawback of pheromones is the expense: $300 per acre, not including installation fees. However, the method may become more cost-effective if researchers succeed in combining pheromones to control more than one pest.

"If growers know they can make money using our biocontrol approach, then they'll use it," Mitchell said.

Newspapers distribute more than 86 percent of manufacturers' coupons.

Grandfather's seatbelt lock keeps kids in their places

By LORI HAWKINS
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN - When their grandchildren kept unfastening their seatbelts, Gary and Linda Nelson set out to find a way to keep them buckled.

"Our daughter couldn't keep them in their seatbelts and that increased the chance of an accident," Linda Nelson said. "We knew there had to be a way."

Gary Nelson began designing a gadget for children and adults who, like his granddaughters, have mental disabilities and don't understand the need for a seatbelt.

When their daughter-in-law began using the small device, which wrapped around the buckle to keep it locked, it became clear that the Nelsons weren't the only ones who had problems keeping their kids buckled up.

"My daughter-in-law's friends kept asking where they could get one," Linda Nelson said. "We began to realize there was a real need for something like this."

Dr. Karen Haslund, their grandchildren's pediatrician, was an early fan.

"I thought it was wonderful and could help a lot of children," said Haslund. "I've been a fanatic ever since I first saw them using it."

In December, when Gary Nelson was between construction jobs, they started looking into mass-producing the guard, named the SeatKeeper. The SeatKeeper works with most lap and lapshoulder safety belts and also on most toddler safety seats that have exposed buckles and latch plates.

It fits over the buckle release and can be opened in less than a second by an adult by inserting any car or house key or similar object into a slot in the cover and pressing the seatbelt release button. An emergency release doesn't require an object to be inserted.

Encouraged by talks with the National Association for Traffic Safety in Washington, D.C., and the Texas Department of Health, the Nelsons decided to proceed.

In March, they started Child Quest Inc. to sell the $9.95 guards - special rates are available for large orders - by mail. The company is trying to get them on the shelves of stores.

SeatKeepers are manufactured by the Travis Association for the Blind and packaged by the Austin State School's VRC Industries, a vocational training program for people with developmental disabilities.

After months spent focusing on manufacturing, the Nelsons, who launched the business using savings, are now concentrating on marketing.

At the end of a state-sponsored Southwest Traffic Safety Workshop Wednesday at the Driskill Hotel, Child Quest had sold about 60 SeatKeepers.

"If I had another job, I'd like to write tickets for kids not buckled up," said Doranna Corley, who attended the workshop with her husband, a Grand Prairie police sergeant. "This could save lives."

Corley, who bought SeatKeepers for her grandchildren, understands some parents' fears that their children could be stuck in the car if there were a fire.

"Cars rarely explode or drive into a lake," she said. "The real danger is kids not being buckled in."

SAY 'HELLO' FOR ME

Phoebe, a dear Christian woman from the town of Cenchreae, will be coming to see you soon. She has worked hard in the church there. Receive her as your sister in the Lord, giving her a warm Christian welcome. Help her in every way you can, for she has helped many in their needs, including me.

Tell Priscilla and Aquila "hello." They have been my fellow workers in the affairs of Christ Jesus. In fact, they risked their lives for me; and I am not the only one who is thankful to them: so are all the Gentile churches.

Please give my greetings to all those who meet to worship in their home. Greet my good friend Epaenetus. He was the very first person to become a Christian in Asia.

Remember me to Mary, too, who has worked so hard to help us.

Then there are Andronicus and Junias, my relatives, who were in prison with me. They are respected by the apostles, and became Christians before I did. Please give them my greetings.

Say "hello" to Ampliatus, whom I love as one of God's own children, and Urbanus, our fellow worker, and beloved Stachys.

Then there is Apelles, a good man whom the Lord approves; greet him for me. And give my best regards to those working in the house of Aristobulus.

Remember me to Herodion my relative. Remember me to the Christian slaves over at Narcissus House. Say "hello" to Tryphaena and Tryphosa, the Lord's workers, and to dear Persis, who has worked so hard for the Lord.

Greet Rufus for me, whom the Lord picked out to be His very own; and also his dear mother who has been such a mother to me. And please give my greetings to Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and the other brothers who are with them.

Give my love to Philologus, Julia, Nereus and his sister, and to Olympas, and all the Christians who are with them.

Shake hands warmly with each other. All the churches here send you their greetings.

Graham optimistic about world evangelism

By CHRIS DUNCAN
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - A smile lit up the warm, leathery face of the Rev. Billy Graham when asked about the state of evangelism in the world today.

"It's excellent," said the 75-year-old evangelist.

The world is in the midst of a gigantic religious revival, he said, the likes of which he's never seen.

Graham has reached out to more than 180 million people in 180 countries and territories preaching the Gospel. He has met with prime ministers, popes, presidents and kings. He has written 17 books and has won at least 12 major awards ranging from the Presidential Medal of Freedom to the Clergyman of the Year honor from the National Pilgrim Society.

The reception of his message around the globe has encouraged Graham but he said the most crucial segment of the population to reach now is today's youth - the teen-to-twentysomething generation. He said an evangelist from a different generation needs to also be an interpreter of sorts if he wants to touch today's youth with the Gospel.

"We have a lot of belief without commitment - people believe in God with their heads but they are not committed," Graham said. "But I still think we are within a gigantic religious revival. That seems strange when you read the headlines with all the crime and terrible things going on. Christ forecast such a time when the good would get better and the evil would get worse. And we've seen that in this generation.

"That's where our greatest emphasis is, on the youth," Graham said. "And that's who we've been seeing more and more. For them, there are a lot of hopeful signs."

He saw one sign on a recent trip to Cleveland. Graham helped organize a rally in Municipal Stadium complete with contemporary music from various Christian rock artists. He did not understand the music but more than 62,000 youths exuded what he called an "electric energy" over it. He was apprehensive about following the rock concert with his own spoken message but he said the vocal throng went deathly silent when he took the podium.

"I wondered if these same people who listen to the rap music and all the rest of that would actually listen to a 70-year-old man," Graham said. "But they did listen all the way. It was quiet enough to hear a pin drop."

Graham himself still feels strong physically and said he has no inclination of reducing his workload or retiring from preaching just yet.

"I'm going to go as long as I still have the physical strength and mental alertness," said Graham. "Most of my life has already been spent. The Bible gives us 70 years and if you have the health and strength to go another five or 10 years or more, that's also in the Scriptures.

"But whether I can, I just don't know."

His cragged face and silvery hair detail the life of preaching to the masses and reaching out to the world's leaders. The fiery energy of his youth has vanished but the power of his presence and his words still flash from his deep, ocean-blue eyes. His worn, wrinkled hands tremble slightly and his gait and speech are a bit more deliberate because of the onset of Parkinson's Disease.

But he can still manage a welcome smile with great and kind ease.

Graham has consistently resided on Gallup's list of the world's 10 most admired men - a title difficult for any individual to follow. But Graham said he feels strongly about an individual or many individuals from a pool of 40,000 evangelists he knows of that will carry his legacy with similarly universal influence.

"There are many evangelists who preach the same things I do," Graham said. "We don't have too many in the United States. But you go to Latin America, you go to Africa, you go to the Orient - they have people preaching the same things I do."

FBI agent takes to airwaves

By PHILIP TRUE
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO - Sometimes a day in the life of an FBI agent is more than cops and robbers.

On any given afternoon, for example, Raul Salinas, senior resident agent in the Laredo office, might be found behind the microphone of a San Antonio radio station, taping another in a popular series of broadcasts called "Platicando con el FBI" (Chatting with the FBI).

Salinas is a co-host with San Antonio agent Gregorio Rodriguez, and the show is produced at KCOR in San Antonio.

"I hope that this program carries an educational message for the Hispanic community, and I think that we're beginning to make an impact," Salinas said.

Salinas' show, a five-minute Spanish-language complement to the "FBI This Week" radio show aired by the FBI, works to overcome the image of an agency that, for many in the U.S. Hispanic population, is decidedly negative.

"Many only know the agency as a police force, represented by (television actor) Efrem Zimbalist Jr. Many have told me, "You're the only FBI agent that I've ever talked to,'" Salinas said.

Salinas thinks Hispanics should know that the agency can serve them, too, and that it is the place to go with problems of discrimination prohibited under federal civil rights acts.

And informed Hispanics might be recruited into the FBI, thus opening it and making it more responsive to the minority community.

Content runs to programs on drug abuse, gun control, information about special FBI programs, agency features, and more, Salinas said.

"I told my audience about the good cooperation we managed with Mexican state police when customs broker Leopoldo Garza Benavides was kidnapped from his Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, ranch early last year. We got the head of the plot with the reward money in San Antonio, while the Mexican police freed Garza in Mexico," Salinas said.

Other broadcasts discuss espionage. "People are very excited about spy cases," he said.

Beginning with only 12 stations in 1979, Salinas says, the program now is broadcast on more than 130 stations, reaching 26 states in America, and 11 more in northern Mexico.

Hugo Adames, of WRIB in East Providence, R.I., says he plays Salinas' show every day.

"It is clear, concise information and serves to break down a little of the sense of discrimination many of our Hispanic listeners feel about the FBI," Adames said by telephone.

More than anywhere else, the show plays in Texas.

"We get listeners' comments all the time," said Brenda Huerta, news director at KBGT in Harlingen.

"Raul and Gregorio do the show just like a platica - a chat - instead of straight news talk. They make it seem like a less aggressive, less threatening kind of entity," Huerta said.

Salinas was born in Alice and broke into radio in high school, doing a show called "High School Highlights."

After a stint at radio school in Dallas, he began producing political spots for area politicians. He soon landed a job with U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, and moved to Washington, before finally signing on with the FBI in 1975.

He was assigned to Laredo in 1988.

Having drying problems?

Ever wonder why some wash loads seem to take forever to dry completely? The answer is in what you do and don't do when loading the dryer.

Problem: A blocked lint screen restricts air flow through the dryer which extends drying times.

Reason: Linting can occur with every laundering process. Lint buildup on the screen can occur quickly and block the airflow through the dryer.

Problem: A clogged lit screen can restrict air flow through the dryer and raise dryer temperatures which could result in an automatic shutdown and the overdrying of clothes.

Reason: Continued use of laundry detergents combined with water hardness minerals serves to aggravate the problem. A clogged lint screen will not give up lint readily and will have a sticky, tacky feeling.

Remedies:

-Clean the lint screen after every load.

-Make sure the lint screen fits securely and is not torn or cracked.

Former resident married in Austin

Former Hereford resident, Leslie Tice Conkwright of Austin, and Dr. Scott Thomas Acton, also of Austin, were united in marriage Saturday evening, July 23, in Central Christian Church in Austin.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. Dr. John Powell of Westminster Presbyterian Church of Lubbock.

The bride is the daughter of James Colby (Jim) and Janice Conkwright of Lubbock, formerly of Hereford. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Dorothy Conkwright of Hereford and Mrs. Josephine Berry of Rosston. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. B.E. Acton of Vienna, Va. and the late B.E. Acton. He is the grandson of Mrs. Lucille Brown of Dodge City, Kan.

The church was decorated by arch candelabra accented with greenery and assorted ferns.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father.

The bride's sister, Robin Conkwright of Lubbock, served as maid of honor. Matron of honor was Molly Fouts Holm of Marietta, Ga.

Best man was Geoffrey Holmes of Laguna Niguel, Calif.

Serving as bridesmaids were Jaime Bates, Houston; Amy Brandes, Corpus Christi; Brett Acton Dobratz, Pittsburgh, Pa., the groom's sister; Julie Johnson, Tyler; and Tisha Smith, Houston.

Groomsmen were Geoff Ables, Jackson, MS.; Scott Harris, Albany, Ga.; Jim Hoag, Denver, Colo.; Trey Holm, Marietta, Ga.; Vicent Piarulli, Simi Valley, Calif.; and Philip Hill, Albuquerque, N.M.

Guests were escorted by Jordan Bloxsome, Vienna, Va.; Tom Bryant, Austin; Michael Goeke, Midland; and Gill Richard, Austin.

Members of the houseparty included Meredith Horton of Washington, D.C., Sandi Smith McCormick of Austin, Kelly Paul of Austin, Lisa Tannehill of Austin and Michelle Hollis Wagner of Houston.

Organist Scott McNutty accompanied the Austin Boys Choir directed of Morris Crayton. Craig Morris played the trumpet and principal wedding selections included "Trumpet Voluntary," by Clark; "Wir Eilen mit Schwachen doch em Singen," by Bach; "Alleluia Amen and Chorale," by Wagner; "Aaronic Benediction"; and "Trumpet Voluntary in D" by Stanley.

The bride wore an elegant white silk shantung designer's gown. It was fashioned with a scoop neck banded delicately with embroidered lace bordered with pearls which continued around into a deep scoop in the back. It was also designed with short sleeves and a cathedral-length train.

The cathedral-length tulle veil was held in place by a beaded headband. The bride carried a hand-tied arrangement of champagne and porcelaina roses with white freesia and white natural tear drops with ivy and greenery placed at the base.

The bride carried a handkerchief belonging to her maternal great-grandmother, Ella Tice Elkins, as something old. She wore a string of pearls given to her mother by her father on their wedding day as something borrowed.

Bridal attendants wore designer creations. The two-piece princess line suits of black shantung featured short sleeves and scooped necklines which were enhanced by white, chiffon lacing. The formal-length skirts were straight. Each carried a handtied bouquet designed similar to the bridal bouquet.

The reception was held in the Medallion Room of The Austin Club located in downtown Austin.

The bride's all-white Italian cream cake with buttercream frosting was square-tiered and decorated with lily-of-the-valley and roses.

The groom's triple chocolate mousse cake with poured chocolate fondant icing was decorated with frosted, purple grapes.

The couple left the reception in a horse-drawn carriage. Following their wedding trip to Nantucket, Mass., they will make their home in Stillwater, Okla.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School and is a 1992 graduate of the University of Texas in Austin where she received a B.A. degree in English. She is employed by Sylvan Learning Center in Austin in the computer technology area and test administration.

The groom is a 1984 graduate of Oakton High School in Vienna, Va. He is a 1988 graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and received M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Texas at Austin and recently worked on post-doctoral fellowship with Center of Space Research in Austin. He is going to Oklahoma State University in Stillwater as a professor of electrical engineering.

Wedding guests represented New York, Kansas, Virginia, California, Georgia, Colorado, Pennsylvania, Mississippi and New Mexico.

Pre-nuptial parties in the Austin area included a lingerie shower at Jaime's on Red River; a bridesmaids' luncheon at the historic Page House in Georgetown; a sunset cruise and barbecue dinner on Lake Travis hosted by the groom's family for the rehearsal dinner; and a wedding day luncheon for the wedding party, their guests and family of the bridal couple hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Lou Fouts of Dallas and Mr. and Mrs. Trey Holm of Marietta, Ga. at Lakeview on the Lake in Austin. The bride and groom will also be feted by the groom's mother at a dinner party in their honor in Vienna, Va. following the wedding.

Despite press reports about cars lined up to enter parks such as Yosemite and Yellowstone, America's national parks are still among the best places to visit during your summer vacation. Because almost every state has at least one park unit--and most states have many--it is easy to find places in which to learn about the unique natural beauty and heritage of our nation.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

The community meetings in each of the city parks is a positive move from our mayor and city commissioners. When people are involved, they are more likely to respond to the needs of a project.

This reminds me of a comment made by the Reverend Leonard Jackson, assistant pastor of the 10,000 plus membership First African Methodist Episcopal Church. I was privileged to visit with him before he spoke at a meeting recently in Los Angeles. He said he had been asked what the topic of his sermon would be and he had replied, "Unity in the Community."

How appropriate for the unique gathering of speakers: Jackson; Elder Paul Manwaring, Morman Church; Ken Hoden, Scientology; Reverend Alfreddie Johnson, True Faith Christian Center, Baptist; and a Buddhist Monk, Dr. Havanpola Ratanasara. Quite a gathering, indeed!

HJH plans to have "unity" as we prepare for the new year. We will begin the year with quality education being the foremost project on our campus.

The first formal activity of the new year is the orientation for seventh and eighth graders which has been changed to Tuesday night, due to a conflict. This will begin promptly at 6:30, with students meeting with their teams. Parents are urged to attend with the students as schedules will be available only to those who are accompanied by a parent. Mark the date on your calendar--Tuesday, August 16 at 6:30.

Supplies for HJH students include: 3-ring binder which will be available at HJH, subject dividers, pencil bag, notebook paper, not college rule; ruler, scissors, small box of map pencils; black, blue and red pens; No. 2 pencils and two boxes of tissue. Individual teachers may require other supplies.

Junior Historians will operate the "Little Store" again this year and will sell paper, pencils, folders and pens.

"Unity in the community", or in a school involves every citizen, whether at school, at home or in the workplace. This can be summed up with a quote form the "Why Geese Fly in a V Formation" theory..."People who share a common direction and sense of community can get where they are going more quickly and easily because they are traveling on the thrust of one another."

Re-reading that story would be worth the time for any citizen...

The power of women: It's gaining in strength in all areas of American life today, from politics--record numbers of women were elected to Congress in the last elections--to the workplace. Over 57 percent of all women are in the labor force and of these, over 25 million are executives, administrators and/or managers.

We always like those who admire us.--La Rochefoucauld

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: In a recent column a reader suggested using wallpaper to wrap packages for shipping. As the owner of a small shipping and packing store, I wish you would please tell your readers that it is no longer appropriate to wrap packages for shipping.

Today's material-handling equipment is computerized. It is routine for your package to be transported long distances in the carrier's warehouse without being seen. It only takes a second for a piece of that wrapping paper to get caught in the conveyor belt., and with the address ripped off, the result is an undeliverable package.

The best way to prepare a package for shipping is to pack the items in a clean corrugated carton. If the box has printing on it, use a marking pen to cross out any old names or addresses. Chip-board boxes, the kind you use to wrap a gift, are not sturdy enough to use for shipping. — Linda Dulaski, Indianapolis, Ind.

Thanks for the info.

We spoke to the United States Post Office and were informed that any type of box is OK. They suggest not using masking tape or transparent tape because exposing it to extreme heat or cold might cause it to open. They recommend using paper tape or regular or nylon-reinforced packing tape.

Restrictions are limited to registered mail. All you need to do is call your local post office for more information. — Heloise

TRAVEL MONITOR

Dear Heloise: On a trip I took with my friend, we traveled in a van loaded with food and supplies. My smart friend brought a baby monitor which she placed in the van. She kept the receiver in her motel room and could hear anything in the van loud and clear. — Elaine Gouty, El Paso, Texas

Dear Heloise: I had a mastectomy five years ago. After a couple of years, I discovered that shoulder pads are great to fill in the bra. The round ones are nice. I use two together, then put in some cotton to fill in. They need to be pinned or stitched in so they don't slip out. The half-pads are good too. — J.P., Santa Ana, Calif.

—YOUR EYES—

GETTING USED TO YOUR GLASSES

One youngster we know was delighted with her first pair of glasses. Taken to an ice show that day, she kept looking at the stage, first with her glasses, then without. The people on stage had faces! She became accustomed to her glasses right away.

Most people have little difficulty getting used to new glasses, especially if eyes are examined regularly, with prescription changes as needed. But if it's been awhile and this prescription change is a large one, it will take somewhat longer for the eyes -- and the brain -- to get used to the new way of seeing.

Reading glasses or bifocals may take a while to get used to. Your optometrist will help you learn how to use them effectively, seeing out of different areas of the lens. Even a new frame will require a period of adjustment if it is different from your old one, a little bigger, perhaps, or a different color. If there is any discomfort, of course, see your optometrist right away.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

MISSED OPPORTUNITIES

The clerk didn't look up as I entred the motel lobby. I approached the counter and without making eye contact the clerk said, "Yes?"

"I'm Don Taylor and I think you have a room reserved for me," I replied. The clerk frowned and marked his place carefully in the stack of papers he was working on. He checked the records and slapped a registration form on the counter. "Fill out the top part," the clerk ordered. There was no please, no greeting, no smile, no eye contact, just the order to fill out the form.

I filled out the card and asked politely, "That is a non-smoking room isn't it?"

"Yes," was the short reply.

"If you have something on the ground floor I'd appreciate it," I suggested hopefully. I'd just driven 350 miles after a full day at the office and the thought of making several trips upstairs was not appealing.

"No," he replied. "Your room is on the second floor."

I sighed and reminded myself, that it was late and the motel was probably full and I should be grateful just to have a room. I accepted the key and followed the perfunctory instructions to find my room.

As I parked, I noticed that several ground floor, non-smoking rooms were empty. That's when I realized that I was more of an interruption to the motel clerk's work than a customer to be pleased. Changing my room from the second floor to the first would have required a computer entry and would have added to his "end-of-the-shift" paperwork.

The following morning I was greeted by a somewhat ore friendly clerk. As I checked out, she pushed a brochure into my hand. "This is your 'Return Club' membership," she said. "It's good for a free night's stay." I took the brochure, said thank you to the clerk, and thought to myself, "It would have to be free if I stay here again."

Later I looked at the brochure. If I would give the motel chain more than 70 pieces of personal data including salary and credit information and stay 11 nights, I could earn a free room. "Earn" is the right word, I though as I threw away the brochure.

The Lost Sale

Later that day, I shared this experience with 75 business owners and managers. I was conducting a business development workshop and this "missed opportunity" was a perfect illustration of how poor customer service drives away future business.

The night clerk didn't really care about my business. I was an interruption. It didn't matter if I got what I wanted, as long as I didn't matter if I got what I wanted, as long as I didn't cause him any extra work. Getting his paperwork done was more important than satisfying my needs.

The sad part of this story is that it's repeated thousands of ties each day. Millions of future sales are lost by businesses everywhere because employees have "I don't care" attitudes.

I'm certain many people were involved in this national motel chain's Return club promotion. I' sure hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on brochures and promotion. It's a shame to see a portion of that effort wasted because of one clerk's attitude. It was a missed opportunity.

Business is a series of ongoing opportunities: Chances to serve customers, deliver quality products or services or exceed customers' expectations. Everyday we're blessed with hundreds of such opportunities.

We may miss some of these opportunities because of aggressive competitors. We may miss others due to price/cost factors beyond our control. However, the ones that wreck our business are those we have control over. Factors like customer service. When you drive business away, those are truly missed opportunities.

Perk up sick child

Your kids may have been wishing for a stay-at-home sick day last winter, but now that the weather is ideal, nothing is worse than being cooped up inside while friends are outside breezing by on bicycles to the neighborhood park to play catch.

Here are some strategies to cheer up a child who is recovering.

-To make your child feel special and still connected with the family, set a bell by the bed. When your patient needs a little extra loving care, it's only a ring away.

-When kids are sick, their greatest regret is missing basketball practice. Crumple a large piece of paper in a ball, or use a lightweight ball. Tie one end of a nine-foot length of string around the ball and set an empty garbage can four to five feet from the bed. Challenge your child to shoot a two-pointer. If he/she misses, just pull the string to shoot again and again and again.

-As your child's appetite improves, tempt the taste buds beyond chicken noodle soup and soda crackers. Make simple menus on index cards that include a variety of healthy foods to choose from. Leave a space after each item and let your child check off the choices of juice, cereal, pasta, fruit, etc.

If your child orders toast or a sandwich, turn it into a smiling face by cutting the edges to form a circle. Arrange raisins, banana slices and pretzels on top to make the face. If your child has the chicken pox, humor him with a few red hot candies dotting the portrait.

Health tip: When your child must cough, teach him to bend his arm in front of him toward the opposite shoulder. Then cough into the crease of his arm at the elbow.

Motorists often speed by the thousands of historical markers that dot America's highways, but stopping to read them can be an intriguing, and often humorous, part of a vacation road-trip itinerary.

The superior man is modest in his speech, but exceeds in his actions.--Confucius

August. Time of back-to-school sales and back-to-school...Town and Country Jubilee...New displayers at the library...summer reading..last chance to do the stuff you swore you'd to this summer. August ushers in what is called the "dog days", usually evoking an image of stifling heat, though we haven't seen much of that this AUgust, thank goodness. (Why, by the way, are they called "dog days" and why do we associate them with the hottest days of summer? Answer at end of column!)

Back to school? Well, I guess we're about as ready as we can be for panicked students to come rushing in looking for information on what life was like for the common man in the middle ages or whatever. I will make my annual plea to teachers--PLEASE let us know when you issue an assignment that will require library research. We are more than happy to reserve books or limit checkout, but what generally happens is that the first few students in (or their mothers) get everything available by the time we figure out that a whole class (or two or three) has the same assignment. ALSO...don't assume that the library has the information your students are looking for, or that it is readily accessible. If we know the assignments far enough in advance, we will even order appropriate material, but it seems like we are always playing "catch-up"--this summer's purchases are based on last year's assignments.

Town and Country Jubilee-the highlight of Deaf Smith County's social season--or something like that. Look for the Friends of the Library entry in the parade, and be prepared to catch some prizes! The Friends are also selling book bags that proclaim "I Love My Library!"

New displayers...Baseball players may strike this month, but you can see them anyway at the library. Thomas Maldonado, 11, is displaying his baseball and basketball cards and paraphernalia. He has been collecting for about four years and his favorite item is his autographed baseball cap. His favorite baseball player is Ken Griffey, Jr., and Chris Webber gets Thomas's cheers for basketball. Thomas is the son of Oscar and Monna Maldonado and will be in the sixth grade at Shirley this year.

Our adult displayer is Barbara Jean Sterne. She is exhibiting carvings done by her grandfather, Robert Ware, in the 1920s. She remembers him carving the items and giving them to her. She had a hard time selecting a favorite, but she is awfully fond of the silverware set. Mrs. Sterne's family were pioneers in Deaf Smith and Carson counties in the 1880s.

HEY! Have you noticed the signs up at 4th and 385, and Sampson and 60? The signs were provided by Texas Panhandle Library System, and installed by the Texas Department of Transportation. Thanks to all of those folks for their help. And speaking of TPLS...the system is sponsoring a workshop entitled Volunteers: A Love/Hate Relationship. Some of the topics covered are: pros & cons, recruitment, screening, and supervision of volunteers. Local experts will present the material. There is no charge, but a $3.00 refreshment donation is requested. More information may be obtained by calling the Library at 364-1206 or the System Office in Amarillo at 378-4216.

We are putting out 20 new books this week as usual, but to tell the truth, these "dog days" have gotten to me and I didn't feel like reporting on them.

And why are they called "dog days?" According to Why Do We Say It? (Call #422 Why),"...the ancient Romans believed that the six or eight hottest days of the summer were caused by the rising of Sirius (called the Dog Star) with the sun and adding its heat to the day. They called these days "cuniculares dies?--dog days!!

Home Canning Equipment Essential For Safety

A few dollars spent now for canning equipment will enable you to enjoy garden-fresh fruits and vegetables next winter. Proper equipment for home canning is an absolute necessity. One of the major reasons for spoilage of home-canning foods is faulty or improper equipment.

Jars: Use only standard jars imprinted with the manufacturer's name. Canning jars are available in half-pint, pint and quart sizes and with narrow or wide-mouth openings. Check tops of jars for cracks, chips and dents. Discard those with defects that would prevent any air-tight seal. DANGER: Do not use mayonnaise, peanut butter or other commercial jars. These are not tempered to withstand the heat treatment and may not seal properly in home canning.

Lids: A two-piece, self-sealed lid is the most commonly used lid. It has a metal disk and a metal ring and is self-sealing as the jar cools after processing. The top of the jar must have a smooth edge to make a seal. The metal disk can be used only once, but the ring may be used more than one time. REMINDER: New types of lids and lids manufactured by companies new to the business have entered the market. Lids should meet home canning requirements for sealing properly and hold a seal in handling and storage. Follow manufacturer's instructions to insure proper seal. Cracks in lid seals and mildew on lids may result from improper storage. For mildew, wash lids in soapy water and boil 5 minutes. Lids with cracked sealing compound should be returned to the manufacturer.

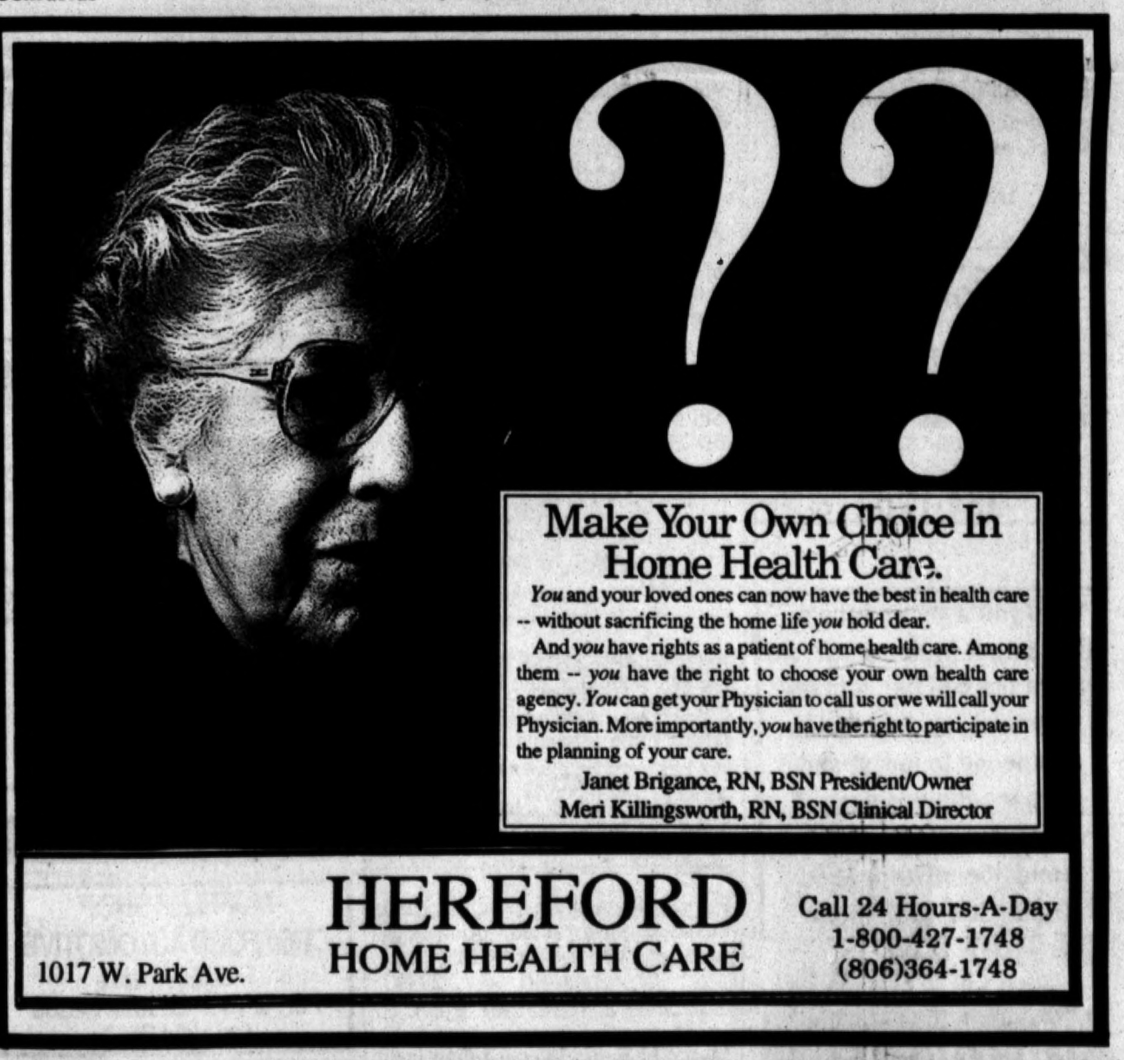

Water Bath Canner: Any large kettle with straight sides, a tight-fitting lid and a rack to keep the jars off the bottom of the kettle can be used for a water bath canner. It should be deep enough to hold the jars upright and permit the water to boil gently 1 to 2 inches over the top of them. The boiling water bath is recommended for canning fruits, fruit juices, tomatoes, tomato juice, rhubarb and pickled vegetables.

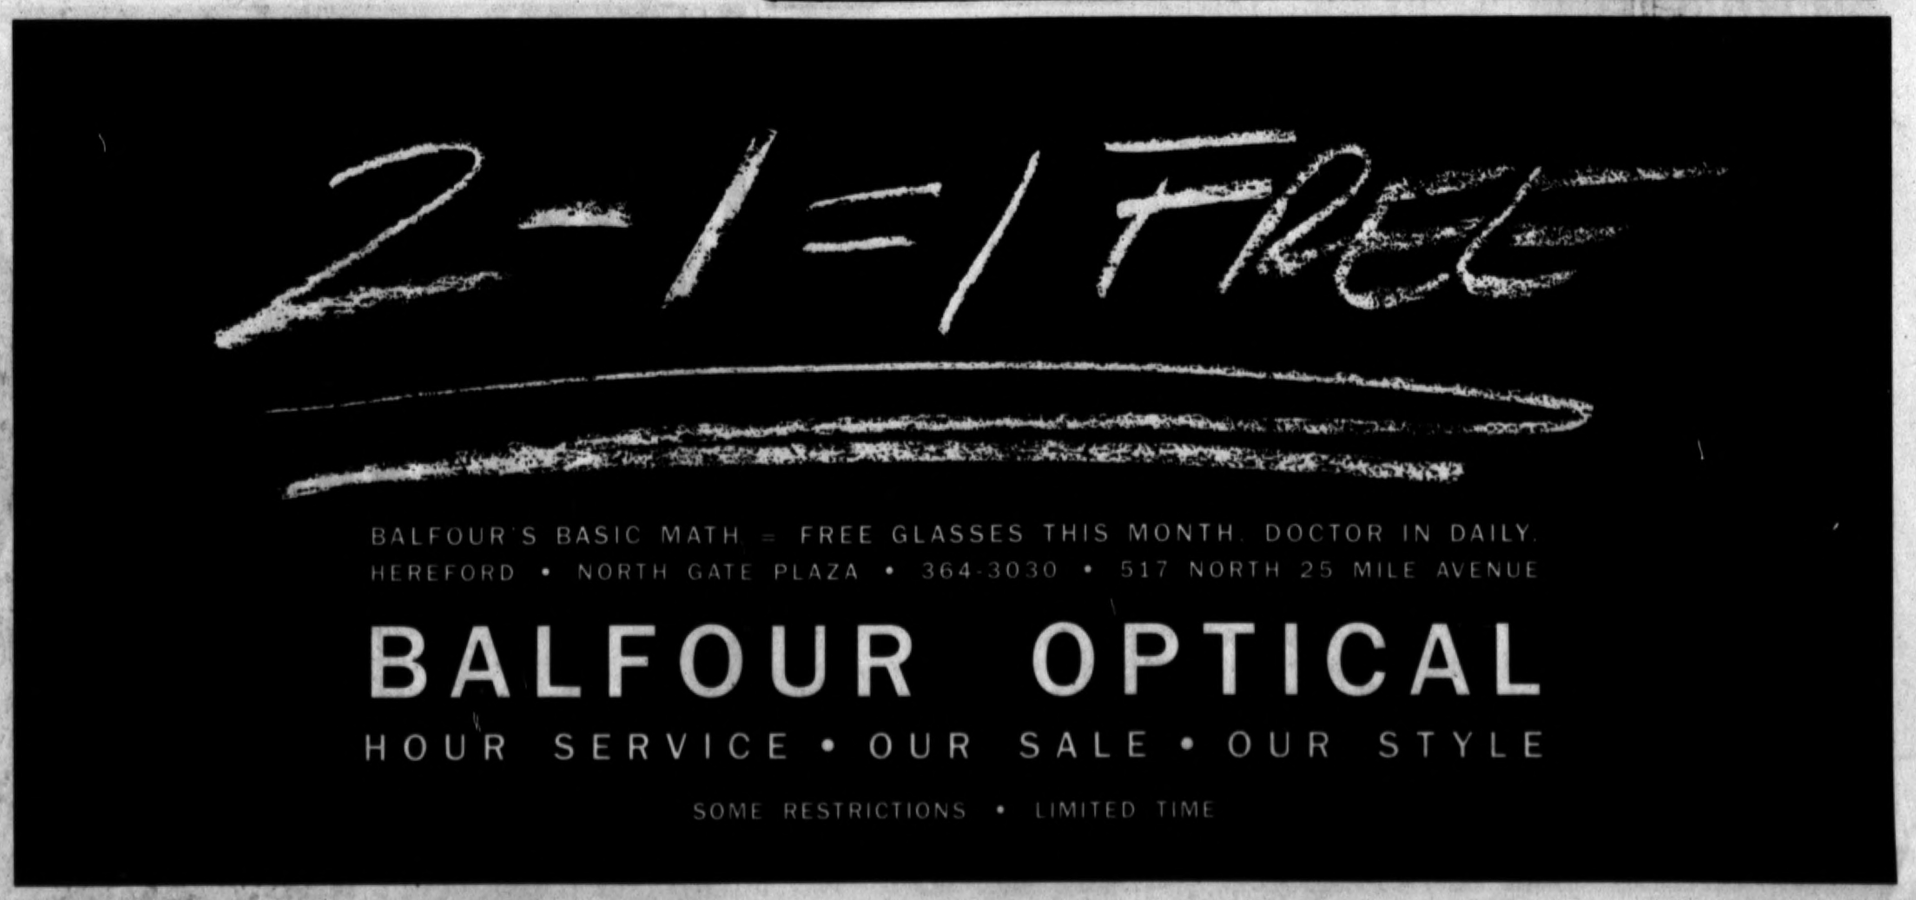

Pressure Canner: The pressure canner method is necessary for processing all non-acid vegetables and other non-acid foods in order to prevent possible spoilage and/or botulinum. Pressure canners are equipped with a dial or weighted gauge. Dial gauges should be tested at least once a year. Petcocks and safety valves control the escape of steam from a pressure canner. Pressure canners should also be tested to be sure they are airtight to prevent loss of pressure and steam. Gaskets that have hardened may need to be replaced. Pressure saucepans of adequate size with an indicator or gauge which operates accurately at 15 pounds pressure may be used for canning small amount of vegetables. DANGER: Do not use the following canning methods for fruits and vegetables. These methods do not insure complete destruction of spoilage or ganisms and some additives may not be safe for human consumption; Open Kettle, Oven canning, Microwave canning, some acidification method sof low-acid vegetables, & Canning powders - compounds or antibiotics.

All canners with a dial gauge should be checked yearly. This check may be done free of charge at the County Extension Office, 4th floor of the Courthouse. Calling ahead will give personnel time to have the equipment ready upon your arrival. (806) 364-3573.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to respond to "Troubled in Holland, Mich.," who was concerned about her young daughter's short lifeline. I can assure her that she has nothing to worry about.

Several years ago, my niece, who considered herself a serious psychic, looked at my palm and observed that my lifeline was unusually short. She then showed me hers, which was much longer. She died before she reached age 60, and I am still going strong at 86. -- Anti-Hokum in Michigan

DEAR ANTI: As I said before--palm reading is not a science; it's parlor game that can scare the daylights out of a person. My mail turned up a surprising number of letters from people who share this view. Keep reading for more on the subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing to calm down "Troubled in Holland, Mich." When I was young, someone read my palm and told me I would died young. I didn't let it worry me. When I was in my early 30s, another palm reading told me I would soon be stricken with a serious illness but would recover from it. Both statements were false. I am now 80 and in the best of health.--Still here in Ohio

DEAR ANN LANDERS: About palm readers: Twenty-five years ago, I was talked into having my palm read. I was told:

1. My ex-husband would die of a heart attack within the year. He is still very much alive.

2. I would meet or already knew a man named Arnie who drove a large blue luxury sedan. I'm still on the lookout for Arnie.

3. I would be driving a bigger, better car within a year. I kept my old car for 10 more years.

4. I would be promoted to a high position. I worked in a small family business, and nobody was ever "promoted" until somebody died.

5. A relative would leave me quite a lot of money. No one ever left me a dime.

Not one thing the palm reader told me panned out.--C.J. in Arizona

DEAR C.J.: I have hundreds of letters from people saying that the palm readers they had visited missed the mark by a mile. This one has a new angle:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in your conclusion that palmistry is more a parlor game than a science. Call it what you want. It made a lot of trouble for me.

I had my palm read six months ago in Indianapolis. The woman told me I would be moving to a smaller city "soon," which turned out to be true. She then said i would have a car accident at a busy intersection. (She named it.)

That "busy intersection" was one I always used on my way to work and back. I made a special effort to be extremely careful when I approached that corner, but damned if a woman didn't run a yellow light at that very spot. It cost me $840 to get the fender dents out.

What do you have to say about this, Ann Landers?--Just Wunnderrin' in Bloomington, Ind.

DEAR JUST: Sorry about the fender, but it may be that whenever you approached that intersection, you became slightly unhinged. I'd say you subconsciously set yourself up for accident. Never underestimate the power of suggestion.

Is life passing you by? Want to improve your social skills? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.15 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Bride-elect is honored

A bridal shower was held for Cory Ott Saturday morning, July 30, in the home of Mary Sue Hull. The honoree and Robert Torres plan to wed Aug. 27. Greeting guests were, from left, Jean Ballard, the honoree's grandmother; Susan Ott, her mother; Cory Ott, the bride-elect; Dorothy Ott, her grandmother; and Linda Ott, her stepmother.

Cory Ott honored with bridal shower

Cory Ott, Aug. 27 bride-elect of Robert Torres, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday morning, July 30, in the home of Mary Sue Hull.

Greeting guests with the honoree were her mother, Susan Ott; her stepmother, Linda Ott; and her grandmothers, Jean Ballard and Dorothy Ott.

Elizabeth Cesar invited guests to register.

The bride-elect's aunt, Beth Welty, and her sister, Ronna Wells, served refreshments of veggie bars, miniature quiche, miniature cinnamon rolls, graham brickle treats, pecan rolls, mock champagne punch and coffee.

The refreshment table was covered with a white embossed silk cloth made by Dorothy Ott. The centerpiece consisted of fresh flowers including purple delphinium, purple statice, white roses and Queen Anne's lace. Also, enhancing the table setting were crystal and silver appointments and a crystal punch bowl on a silver base belonging to Jean Ballard.

A set of Farberware stainless steel cookware was presented to Miss Ott by the hostesses: Evelyn Botkin, Elizabeth Cesar, Bettie Dickson, Dolores Foster, Mary Sue Hull, Opal Robison and Virginia Winget.

George Washington was the only president to run unopposed, in 1788 and 1792. James Monroe also ran unopposed in 1820, but one elector cast his ballot for John Quincy Adams so that Washington's record would not be matched.

Don't spend fortune on valued antiques

Antiques experts who know the ropes about locating finds at flea markets, yard sales and second-hand shops have advice for smart shopping.

If you're in the market for collectibles, know as much as possible about the field, says Terry Kovel, author of several books about collecting. Read price guides and any additional literature on the subject.

Bring along a magnifying glass and a flashlight to closely examine items for flaws and maker's marks and a tape measure to make sure the item will fit into the designated spot at home.

Inspect merchandise carefully. Sometimes even dealers are unaware of hard-to-spot repairs that might lower value - and get you a lower price if you point them out.

Don't be shy; talk to dealers about their merchandise. Often you'll pick up information that will make you a more aware shopper.

Don't be afraid to negotiate. Most flea market dealers expect it.

Expand horizons. A single earring might make an attractive lapel pin merely by glueing it to a ready-made pinback.

Ask for a receipt listing age, condition, and origin of any item that costs $100 or more.

They say there is a customer for everything. However, Kovel suggests steering clear of items in need of substantial repairs.

Do not buy anything that needs to be repaired by an expert. Sometimes the repair can cost more than the item is worth.

Do not buy chipped, cracked and or broken dishes. These flaws lower value by 80 percent.

Do not buy items that have been repainted unless the price is quite low or the value is less important than the appeal of the piece, as-is.

Mary Randolph Carter, author of American Junk (Viking, $29.95), suggests shopping for a pile of things before beginning the haggling process. A dealer is likely to be more amenable to bargaining on a group of items than on a single item.

And she she has advice for a day on the flea-market circuit: Take moist towelettes to wipe grimy hands and tissues to dry them. A cooler with bottled water, juice and snacks makes a long day of shopping less tiresome and minimizes the need to waste time stopping for food. Carter says she carries junk food, appropriately, on her junking expeditions.

Dress in layers for a comfortable expedition. Avoid wearing a heavy coat and don't carry a pocketbook.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: For a few years now, I have been suffering from granuloma annulare. You mentioned it, but I would like to know if there is some medicine I can take to relieve the itching, burning and even painful sensations in parts of my skin. — Mrs. M.D.

ANSWER: Granuloma annulare's rash is of unknown cause.

It starts as a flat, pink, circular spot. In time, as it enlarges, its center lightens, leaving a ringlike patch, giving it its name. The rash often appears on fingers, wrists, ankles and feet.

Cortisone creams can be used to relieve the condition. About three of four cases last about two years before the rash disappears.

A more difficult form of granuloma annulare lasts longer and often resists medical treatment. The same creams are used for that. I do hope you have the milder form.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Definitions for common education terms given

Below are some of the terms used most frequently by the Hereford Independent School District, along with definitions for those terms and, where applicable, the acronym or abbreviation for that term.

The list was prepared by Nena Veazey, assistant superintendent for professional services.

DISTRICT LEADERSHIP TEAM (DLT) -- In compliance with Education Code 21.930 the District established a Districtwide Educational Improvement Team of campus-based professional staff, administrators, parents and community members to advise the Board or its designee in establishing and reviewing the District's educational goals, objectives and major Districtwide classroom educational programs identified by the Board and its designee.

BUILDING LEADERSHIP TEAM (BLT) -- This team is established on each campus to assist the principal in formulating campus performance objectives specific to improving student achievement. The team serves in the role defined by the Board in the District's Site-Based Decision Making Implementation Plan and is chaired by the principal. The areas set forth in the plan include: goal setting, curriculum and instruction, budgeting decisions, staffing, school organization and evaluation procedures.

CAMPUS ACTION/IMPROVEMENT PLANS -- These plans include the mission, goals, objectives and action steps needed to address weaknesses identified through the disaggregation of campus data. The ultimate result of accomplishing the action plans should be improved student achievement.

TAAS -- Texas Assessment of Academic Skills. A criterion referenced test given in the spring of the year to Third through 10th graders to determine individual student progress, campus progress and district progress. Passing of this test is required for graduation in Texas.

SITE-BASED DECISION MAKING -- A process for decentralizing decisions to improve the educational outcomes at every school campus through a collaborative effort by which principals, teachers, campus staff, district staff, parents and community representatives assess educational outcomes of all students, determine goals and strategies and ensure that strategies are implemented and adjusted to improve student achievement.

PORTFOLIOS -- Portfolios are a collection of samples of a student's work. It often contains work from many subjects, including math, reading and science. Student portfolios can include: a journal, art work, homework, audio or video tapes, or examples of how the student solves problems.

ACCELERATED READING -- Accelerated Reading is a book reporting computer program. The students read from a certain selection of books and take computer-generated tests. Credit is given based on the number of correct responses and tracked throughout the year on a computer management system.

HOSTS (HELPING ONE STUDENT TO SUCCEED) -- This program enables community volunteers to read and enhance skills of students who are functioning below the expected grade level. The one-on-one attention also produces self-esteem and builds confidence in the students served.

CHAPTER 1 (ACCELERATED LEARNING) -- Accelerated Learning focuses on at-risk of failure students. If focuses curricular priorities around student needs and builds on student strengths.

MISSION STATEMENT -- The mission statement of a district or campus is the vision that drives the development of improvement goals and objectives.

ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS -- The essential elements of instruction, the content for the state curriculum which all Texas school districts must teach. In addition, they have implications for the statewide assessment program, the content of state-adopted textbooks and state-level staff development.

SOAR HIGH -- Step Out And Reach High. An alternative educational setting for Junior High and High School students. Smaller numbers and a more flexible environment provide special instruction for at-risk secondary students.

PRIMETIME -- Primetime serves the students who have been removed from their regular campus due to disciplinary reasons.

PSI -- Partnership Schools Initiative. Selected campuses throughout the state whose challenge is to provide innovative programming, teaching and support for students. Great emphasis is placed on improved student achievement and increased staff development.

ACADEMIC TEAMING -- Academic Teaming is a middle school practice which enables a core group of teachers to serve a common group of students. The team works together in the areas of integrating curriculum, discipline and parent conferences. Common planning is a key to the success of this program.

SUPERLAB -- Superlab is an instructional setting for students who require preteach, reteach or enrichment activities to obtain a concept or skill. It is based on the Content Mastery delivery model and serves any student requiring additional instruction.

AEIS -- Academic Excellence Indicator System. An annual report describing the district's educational performance. The report includes the performance and profile sections for both campuses and district.

St. Anthony's

BY ANN LUEB
Principal, St. Anthony's

St. Anthony's School will begin its 77th year as an educational institution in Hereford with the 1994-95 school year.

With the beginning of this school year, St. Anthony's School has been named "An American Catholic School for the 21st Century" by the National Catholic Education Association.

The theme for the year is "Lighting New Fires" and the school has made a commitment to shape the future by providing a strong academic curriculum and helping students to understand fully, accept freely and live faithfully the gospel message.

Principal's greeting

Nazarene School

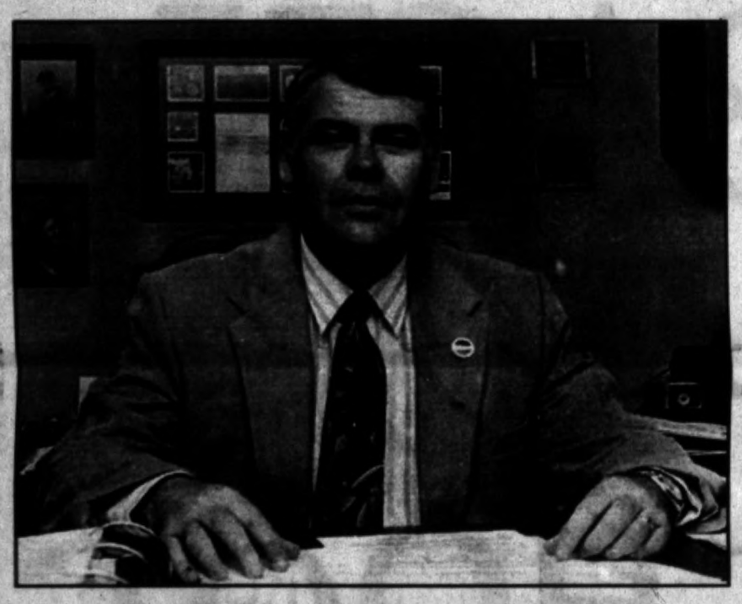

BY PATTY HILL
Principal, Nazarene Christian Academy

Equipping leaders for tomorrow, lives for eternity is what an education at Nazarene Christian Academy is all about. N.C.A. was founded in 1986 to provide a Bible-centered philosophy of education. Our goal is for all students to achieve their potential academically while allowing God to work in their lives to mold their character with Jesus Christ as their standard.

Excitement fills the air as we await our students for 1994-95. This will be the first year for the school to have eighth grade students. We expect great things for this group of outstanding young people. In addition to eighth grade, we are adding flag football to our athletic program. The junior high competes in the High Plains Athletic Association in flag football, volleyball, basketball and track.

Special activities students will be looking forward to this year are computers, musicals, science fair, rocket construction, a geological field trip, honor choir, 7th grade Texas history trip and an 8th grade science trip.

Superintendent's greeting

Hereford ISD

BY CHARLES W. GREENAWALT
Superintendent, HISD

Welcome to the 1994-95 school year.

If I could begin the new school year with one word, it would be communication. I feel it is important for you to keep in mind that the schools are here to serve you, the parents and the community. Your support is necessary if we are to provide the quality of education expected by all citizens in Hereford. Let me encourage you to visit your schools and communicate with teachers, administrators and board members.

Do you have concerns about your child in school? Don't keep these concerns inside--communicate. When we communicate, we share our feelings and there is an exchange of information that can open the minds of educators and parents.

Through the process of communication we can understand each other and this new understanding brings forth a new commitment by the schools and community. It is commitment to further communication; a commitment to finding out for ourselves the exact nature of any problem. It is a commitment to work together, the school and the home--two of the most powerful forces on earth--to seek remedies; to seek solutions; to seek that common ground that will eventually allow our schools and our children to be the best they are capable of becoming.

We--you and I--the school and the home--we can communicate. We can work together. We can make a commitment to serve our children. Remember your school district is committed to children and dedicated to excellence.

Canyon brings strong 3A programs to District 1-4A

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Fans of Hereford High School athletics will have a new, old rival to root against this year. For the first time since 1988, the Canyon Eagles will play in the same district as the Herd.

Because of the University Interscholastic League's biennial realignment, Canyon joins Hereford, Borger, Caprock, Dumas, Pampa and Randall in District 1-4A.

Canyon competed in Class 3A for six years and pretty much dominated its district in all sports. Though it's normally tough for a 3A school to make an immediate impact when moving up to 4A, Canyon could do just that in several sports.

Canyon's girls' basketball tradition is rich, with numerous state championships, the last one coming in 1992. The girls' cross country team has won five state titles in a row. Both the boys' cross country team and the tennis team earned state titles in the last few years.

The volleyball, boys' basketball and both track teams were district champs last year, and both golf teams advanced to the regional tournament. The baseball team failed to make the playoffs last season for the first time in years. In 1993, though, the baseball team went 28-1.

Only the football team had little success last year, at 2-8, but that was the first year in several that it had a losing record.

As athletic director of the Canyon Independent School District, Mike Wartes is familiar with both Canyon High and--through Randall High--District 1-4A.

"We feel like there's going to be many sports where (Canyon is) going to be competitive," Wartes said. He knows that the level of competition in 4A is higher, but he feels "confident that our players will rise to that level and give us a chance to be competitive."

As Wartes later added, though, "How competitive remains to be seen."

Canyon will have the smallest enrollment in District 1-4A at about 790, he said, compared to 1,150 for Randall or 1,222 for Hereford.

A good example of the difference between 3A and 4A may be shown in cross country. Canyon's girls have won five straight state titles and nearly 50 consecutive meets overall. In cross country, though, many meets are divided into two divisions, with 4A and 5A schools in one and 3A, 2A and A schools in another. It will be worth watching how Canyon does competing against the big schools.

*

There are two other significant changes that come with realignment. First, there are now seven teams--an odd number--in the district, which means lots of open dates and even an open week in football.

"An open date, particularly at the time we have it, can help you," said Hereford football coach Danny Haney. "I lets you heal wounds and prepare for your next opponent. I like the concept of having an open date."

Hereford's open date in football is Oct. 14. The Friday before that, Hereford is at Dumas; the Friday after, the Herd hosts Borger.

The second big change is that District 2-4A is now empty, so playoff participants from 1-4A get a first-round bye. There's no week off at the end of the football season, though, because of the open date in the middle. While Hereford is closing the regular season at Caprock Nov. 11, other teams all over the state will be playing bi-district playoff games.

District 3-4A now consists of Canutillo and three El Paso schools: Jefferson, Parkland and El Paso High. District 4-4A consists of Andrews, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, Monahans, Pecos and San Angelo Lakeview.

*

With Canyon joining the district, a long football rivalry with Hereford is renewed. Since 1921, the two teams have met 67 times: Hereford has won 33 times and Canyon has won 33 times. (Remember that scoreless tie in 1933?)

The first meeting was a 49-0 win for Canyon in 1921. The last meeting was a 13-0 win for Canyon in 1987. The next meeting is Oct. 28 at Canyon.

"Canyon brings back a great rivalry between Canyon and Hereford," Haney said. "The rivalry had reached good-sized proportions before Canyon went to 3A. It won't take long to get that old feeling back about Canyon."

HOSTS deemed successful in first year operating here

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

The first year of a program designed to help children learn to read was an unqualified success at two Hereford schools.

Volunteers from all walks of life in Hereford gave 30 minutes or an hour each week last school year to make HOSTS a program to be to be proud of.

Helping One Student to Succeed was installed in Northwest Primary School and West Central Intermediate School a year ago in an effort to give youngsters a leg up in reading.

"We saw so much growth, not only in reading but in self-confidence," said Doris Cagle, who directed the Northwest program.

Second and third graders were tested individually before assignment to HOSTS. Each student spent 30 minutes daily, Monday through Thursday, with mentors.

In addition to the community volunteers, 16 Hereford High School students participated in HOSTS last year. Each one spent 30 minutes with the same child each day.

Community volunteers who spent an hour a week as mentors divided their time between two students.

Daily lesson plans are prepared for mentors to use with their assigned pupil. Cagle and her teacher's assistant, Aurora Jackson, prepared the lesson plans and had them ready when the volunteer arrived.

"Every day, the student reads to the mentor some," said Cagle. At times, though, the mentor does some reading, from books color-coded in the lesson plan.

At West Central, Carlynn DeLozier and her assistant, Amelia Pesina, prepare the daily lesson plans for the mentors and students.

Adding up the time given to HOSTS at both schools by volunteers was almost a job for a calculator. More than 3,000 hours were tallied by the end of the year.

At Northwest, 84 students were served during the year. By the end of the year, 64 were still participating.

"Some exited and some moved," said Cagle about the reduced number.

Without exception, the students recorded significant growth, as much as two years, or more, in reading.

The West Central HOSTS program involved 62 students -- only four moved during the year -- who recorded an average gain of two years in their reading.

One Hereford business provided 12 mentors at West Central, the most from a single business. DeLozier observed that the 11 men and one woman from West Texas Rural Telephone provided a big boost to HOSTS.

The fourth, fifth and sixth graders at West Central benefited, too, from involvement of about 20 senior citizens who saw the mentor program as a "great opportunity to get back in touch with schools," said DeLozier.

Both Cagle and DeLozier cited the one-on-one experience as especially rewarding for children.

"They see people taking an interest in them," observed DeLozier. "It says 'you're special' when the mentors spend the time with them."

Students are tested before being placed in HOSTS. Those who seem capable of reaching grade level are targeted, said Cagle.

Both teachers have years of experience in education. Cagle has 23 years and says HOSTS is "more exciting than anything I've ever done."

DeLozier taught about three years in other systems before starting in Hereford 25 years ago.

"I've worked in other special programs," declared DeLozier, "but this is the most successful of any."

She said that the one-on-one situation with mentors affords immediate attention to children when they need help.

Adults who gave their time were generally positive in their remarks about the program, both Cagle and DeLozier reported.

The proof of the acceptance of HOSTS by the community, they agreed, is that so many of the mentors said they would sign up again for the next school year.

Jeans, T-shirts fine for all kids, but The Dress is just for girls

By The Associated Press

Cottons, knits and denims remain favored choices for the back-to-school wardrobe, whether for pre-schoolers or the college-bound.

Either sex can be outfitted in jeans, T-shirts and sweaters, but a girl has the added privilege of The Dress, especially on those days when she wants to look extra pretty. Choices could include a black-and-white check chambray smock (4-6x) with floral appliques, or a smart mixed-plaid cotton jumper dress (2-4T), both from OshKosh B'Gosh.

If someone in the family can sew, then a little girl might have an elegant smock dress from the Vogue For Me collection for children (Vogue 9048) with a contrast collar and yoke with machine-embroidered motifs.

Not that jeans can't be dressy: Sasson Kids adds white jeans to its line for older children, which also features classic blues and railroad stripes. OKBG offers its National Parks bib overall in plaid flannel-back denim for boys (2-4T), with matching plaid flannel shirt. Girls can be outfitted in OKBG's Back to Nature plaid chambray coverall with decorated bib (2-4T).

Flannel grungewear from Fila features the oversized jeans, button-down shirts and outdoor jackets popular with teens - spiced up with plaids and colors.

The easy-care crowd can enjoy low-maintenance with Haggar Wrinkle-Free Cottons for boys - pleated twills that don't need ironing (8-14 regular and slim, 26-30 student sizes).

Danskin is marketing sports-related clothes for 7- to 12-year-old girls that can be worn at school, on the street, on the field and at home. Long a leading brand of dance leotards and tights, the company offers added tutu and wrap skirts, bike pants, ankle pants, bike unitards, swimsuits, skating dresses, and even an equestrienne group with a mock turtle long-sleeve top and technical jodhpur pants.

What's afoot again this season is the everyday hiking boot - something that erases the line between regular footwear and winter boots.

Public school free, reduced price meal police announced

Hereford Independent School District has announced its policy for providing free and reduced price meals for children served under the National School Lunch Program and School Breakfast Program.

The regular price for lunch and breakfast is $1 for lunch and 50 cents for breakfast at the primary and intermediate levels; $1 for lunch and 75 cents for breakfast at Hereford Junior High; and $1.25 for lunch and 75 cents for breakfast at Hereford High School.

The household size and income criteria have been identified in application forms distributed to all households with a letter informing residents of the availability of free and reduced price meals for children.

Generally, if a person gets food stamps or AFDC for a child, that child can get free meals.

If the total household income is the same or less than the amounts shown on the Income Chart contained in the letter, the child can get free or reduced price meals.

A foster child may get free or reduced price meals regardless of income.

The reduced price is 40 cents for lunch and 30 cents for breakfast at all schools.

Household size and income ranges from one at $13,616 a year to eight members with $45,732 a year.

Applications have been distributed to households and also are available at the principal's office in each school.

To apply, households must fill out the application and return it to the school.

Applications may be submitted anytime during the school year.

The information provided will be used for the purpose of determining eligibility and verification of data.

Under the provisions of the free and reduced price meal policy, Hereford Food Service Director will review all applications for the HISD and determine eligibility.

Parents or guardians dissatisfied with the ruling of the official may wish to discuss the decision with the ruling official on an informal basis.

Parents wishing to make a formal appeal for a hearing may make a request either orally or in writing to Don Cumpton, Assistant Superintendent, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue, or 364-0606.

In the operation of the child feeding programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, sex, national origin, age or handicap.

Sixth grade serves as major stepping stone in child's life

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) - Major markers of a life are birth, marriage, death - and the sixth grade.

Sixth graders, most between 10 and 12 years old, are a diverse lot, maybe even weird. Some weigh 200 pounds and stand six feet tall; others are barely able to peer over the lunch counter at school. Some are sexually active, yet go home to play with toys. Some are into alcohol, tobacco or drugs, while others still prefer cookies and milk.

"They're at that age when they're beginning to experience a lot of adult-type feelings, but they're still trying to comprehend through the mind of a child," says Dr. Jim Hunt, a veteran sixth-grade teacher and now an elementary education professor at Southwestern University. "In most cases the physical changes precede the emotional changes. Then, suddenly, they want to be mature without understanding the responsibilities that go with maturity."

It's a time when peer pressure comes to the fore. "In the sixth grade, the most important group to belong to is their peer group, not their family," Hunt says. "This is the age when they begin to move out of the family circle and bond with their friends."

Complicating matters further, girls in this age group often go through puberty sooner than boys. "Boys tend to be obnoxious at this age," says Hunt. "They've been bombarded with sex in the media, and all of a sudden they are around girls who are developing. Even though they are exposed to a lot of sexuality in our society, there is a certain developmental aspect of it that they are not capable of handling yet."

Recognizing the transitional pressures of this age group, Georgetown last year established a sixth-grade center, called Pickett. All 474 sixth graders in this agriculturally based town now attend the sixth-grade-only school designed for their needs.

Teachers can zero in on the turbulence inherent in this age group. Each Pickett child has a homeroom teacher and attends school with an "academic team" - two teachers who cooperatively track the student's life and schoolwork. It's a bridge between elementary school, where the child had a single teacher, to high school, where he will have many.

Results already are in: Pickett students scored highly on the Texas assessment test, took fifth in Texas Math League competition, and placed sixth and 13th nationally in the U.S. Science Olympiad.

The school's principal, JoAnn Ford, says the idea of keeping sixth graders isolated from older or younger students works. "If they are self-contained, if they can be themselves, if they don't have to show off to try to impress the older kids, or act up, or be someone they are not, they can be incredibly kind to one another," she says.

Southwestern's Hunt, who oversees student teachers in Georgetown, also thinks Pickett is a good idea.

"You hear people try to explain why junior high kids are so weird. They say, 'Well, their hormones are popping,'" Hunt says. "But there's been a recognition that a lot of what they go through has to do with the fact that the structure of their schools doesn't meet their needs."

Hunt says parents can survive their youngsters' sixth-grade year by recognizing and accepting that their interests are diverging. At the same time, he says, keep the communications lines open.

Teachers to be trained in math, science

The Hereford Independent School District is hosting AIMS (Academic Integration of Math and Science) training for teachers in grades kindergarten through eighth next week.

The training -- which is only open to those who signed up by the July 20 deadline -- will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 9 and 10, at the Hereford ISD administration building.

The training will be from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. both days.

Trainers will be Susan Russell, Linda Morgan and Betty Kirk.

Nena Veazey, assistant superintendent, told members of the school board on Tuesday that the training is part of the district's push in the areas of math and science instruction and will utilize most of the administration building and its parking lot.

Participants in the AIMS training are required to bring the following: a pair of scissors, a pencil, a small bottle of glue, a flashlight, a box of crayons, markers and a nutcracker.

Texas dedicating $16.3 M to see if kids are learning

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas is spending about $8 per pupil in a massive testing program that measures student performance and decides whether schools are doing a good job or such a bad one they face being closed.

The nearly $16.3 million in state funds is for development, printing, shipping and scoring of state-required tests administered to about 2 million students in grades 3-8 and high school.

That's out of 3.5 million students statewide, and an estimated state-local education budget of about $16.5 billion in the coming school year.

Leaders say the test money is worth it.

"The state accountability system (for school districts) is built on the testing program, but more importantly, it's used to enhance student achievement," said Carolyn Crawford, head of the State Board of Education and director of counseling for the Beaumont Independent School District.

"Teachers use it to improve instruction. Parents can use it to look at where their students need improvement and where they're doing well," she said. "Given the total cost of education and the dollars spent, I do feel like the amount of money spent at the state level is worth it."

The state's largest school districts say there's also a local price tag in administering and preparing for the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, or TAAS, which tests reading, writing, math, science and social studies in various grades. State end-of-course tests also are required in some subjects.

But the school districts, which belong to a coalition called the Texas School Alliance, don't have an estimate of how much is spent locally. They want the state to study that issue and the effect of testing on instruction.

The cost estimate "is critical to an informed decision" on testing plans, said Stan Paz, alliance president, in a letter to Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno this year. The alliance includes 22 school districts with more than 1 million students.

"There can be no question that districts will experience a fiscal impact. Local funds are used for the purchase of supplies, materials, staff for summer exit testing, all local transportation, and distribution cost," wrote Paz, superintendent of El Paso Independent School District.

The Texas State Teachers Association is trying to determine how much class time is being spent on preparing for the statewide tests, said Richard Kouri, president of the group.

"Beyond how many days are actually spent taking the test, we have a larger concern in terms of how much instructional time is being committed to test preparation," Kouri said. "It's our feeling that an inordinate amount of time is being used."

Meno said "ridiculous worksheets" are used by some school districts to prepare their students for testing. But he said that's neither necessary nor state-required.

"That's their mismanagement of public monies, not mine," Meno said.

"On the other hand, there are the vast majority of districts out there who are going back, looking at what they're doing in the classroom, and making appropriate adjustments to that in terms of just their regular instructional program. That is not costing additional money," Meno said.

Meno said the TAAS tests take about a half-day for students to complete in each subject. End-of-course tests, which may substitute for final exams, generally take between two and three hours, he said.

There is new pressure on school officials because the test scores now are used to determine whether schools are rated acceptable, or whether they must change their ways to avoid being closed. High school students also must pass the TAAS reading, writing and math exams to get their diplomas.

Meno also said school districts aren't losing instructional time compared with 1991-92, when he said there were 60 required exams. That total figure counts separately each subject in each grade tested.

Schools in 1991-92 were required to give a state norm-referenced test, which ranks students compared with others around the country. The state no longer requires such a test, although a number of school districts give one on their own.

A total of 27 state tests will be given this year, including three pilot tests administered in volunteer districts and two other exams that are in their initial stages. In 1998-99, the number is projected to grow to about 32 tests under a state plan, including end-of-course tests in 10 subjects.

The urban school districts also are concerned that the state money comes from an approximately $975 million fund that's divvied up based on each district's number of low-income students, who may have special instructional needs.

"It's somewhat ironic in way that the testing program is coming out of funds that are to help hard-to-educate students," said Superintendent Terry Bishop of the Austin ISD.

He said while the tests are important, the money to pay for them should come out of general funds, so that schools without many low-income students share equally.

Pertinent test dates noted

AUSTIN (AP) - Here are the state tests to be administered to students in various grades in the 1994-95 school year, under the latest state plan:

School violence a concern of parents, school districts

By LINDA LEAVELL
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Aaron Wiederstein is looking forward to starting middle school this month, getting to be around older kids and distancing himself from his elementary school-age brother.

The sixth-grader is a little worried about algebra and working the combination lock on his locker. And although he suspects middle school will mean a little more homework, he's excited about changing classes.

"Then if one teacher's in a cranky mood, I don't have to put up with her all day," Wiederstein, 11, said.

His mother, Kathy Wiederstein of Missouri City, expects Aaron will receive a satisfactory education and enjoy his social life at the Fort Bend Independent School District middle school.

But like many parents, she's concerned about violence on public school campuses. "I worry about knives and guns and gangs and drugs," she said.

Mrs. Wiederstein said the middle school principal cracks down on offenders and campus security officers help ensure safety.

"If they have a problem they handle it," she said. "Maybe that's what scares me - to think that our middle schools have to have security there all the time."

Violence apparently is still a top educational concern for Texas parents, who will be sending their children back to school this month.

Many districts, weary of violence and disruptive behavior in the classroom, have adopted measures they hope will eliminate the problem.

Houston Independent School District spokeswoman Vernell Jessie said the district has metal detectors and hidden cameras on various campuses. Another 20 security officers were hired for the 1994-95 school year, for a total of 150 at 246 schools.

The schools also have a new state-of-the-art radio hookup that allows instant communication between security officers and the Houston Police Department, school buses and other officials.

Some Texas school districts are adopting "zero tolerance" policies to expel all offenders, regardless of their disciplinary or academic histories.

Proponents of the tough policies say such rigidity is needed to ensure students know the consequences of their actions and to allow administrators to dispense discipline without fear of retaliation.

In the El Paso Independent School District, all middle and high schools will have hand-held metal detectors beginning this year. The district also has begun a new program where school officials may request drug-sniffing canine units for campus searches.

In addition to finding new anti-violence programs at their campuses, the state's 3.5 million public school pupils will be returning this month to more year-round schools and the unresolved school funding issue.

The recent statewide trend has been for districts to start school before Labor Day. That way, students finish first-semester exams before the winter break and complete the school year before Memorial Day.

Spokesman Jeff Prescott said the Austin Independent School District will start Aug. 15, the earliest ever. AISD expects an increase of 2,000 students, putting the district's total student population at 74,000.

As has become another statewide trend, six or seven AISD elementary schools will begin year-round education schedules, which calls for a block of educational days followed by short breaks.

The San Antonio Independent School District also is emphasizing year-round school for elementary pupils. Last year six schools converted, and this year nine more have been added.

Most campuses in San Antonio still adhere to the traditional schedule, which begins Aug. 15. The district had approximately 59,500 students last year and expects about the same number this fall.

For about the past five years, enrollment has hovered around 60,000, spokeswoman Rene Lynn said.

Enrollment also is expected to remain flat in the Lubbock Independent School District, with 30,800 students. Classes begin Aug. 18.

Superintendent Mike Moses said final numbers depend somewhat on regional cotton prospects.

"If it's not very good, we tend to see a lot of students from outlying districts move in as their parents seek employment," Moses said. "If the cotton crop is good, then usually our enrollment stays pretty flat."

Lubbock administrators have converted an old junior high into an alternative high school that will offer GED preparation, a jobs program and adult education. Moses said he expects 200 to 300 students to attend Matthews Community Learning Center.

In Houston, about 200,000 students head to school Aug. 22.

This year, the state's largest district is opening the new Rice University school, which does not yet have its own name. Offering grades K-8, the school will be staffed by Rice professors and education majors working on new innovative education programs, Ms. Jessie said.

The Dallas Independent School District will begin the school year free of more than 20 years of federal court oversight. U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled in July that the district was desegregated and had done all it could to eliminate racial discrimination.

DISD enrollment has increased by 3,000 to 146,000 this year, officials said. School begins Aug. 11.

By the 1995-96 year, pupils in some DISD schools may be learning in a new way. Superintendent Chad Woolery has proposed turning some of the district's perennially low-performing campuses into "restructured schools." They would resemble privately run campuses, which are supposed to provide innovative, cost-effective school management.

El Paso ISD starts classes Aug. 16. Officials expect 65,612 students, a tiny increase from last year's 65,159.

The district is entering the 1994-95 year facing the prospect of having to cut the budget by $12 million, more if board members elect not to raise taxes.

"There aren't many new programs because of the budget crunch that we're in," said district spokeswoman Kari Hutchison.

'Mike & Maty' co-hosts garner daytime cheers

Michael Burger and Maty Monfort are the co-hosts of "Mike & Maty," airing weekdays on ABC. The new talk show explores a wide range of subjects featuring celebrities, authors and experts on fitness, cooking, beauty and health.

BY JOHN CROOK

"We're kind of like the 'Sleepless in Seattle' of talk show hosts," says Maty Monfort of her teaming with stand-up comic Michael Burger.

That's not entirely a flip comparison. TV critics around the country are hailing "Mike & Maty," now airing weekdays on ABC, as one of the freshest and most appealing hours to hit daytime television in a long time.

The pairing of Monfort, a former TV personality on Spanish language network Univision, and Burger, an ex-Royal Caribbean cruise ship comic, may be unorthodox. But the potent chemistry between them is hard to dispute.

"It's really funny the way this whole thing has happened," says Monfort, 28, who is married to an Atlanta radio station operations manager. "It's like it's a big-time fate situation. ... My interview (for the job) was scheduled for 1 p.m. At 1:47, they called me into an office and said, 'We never do this, Maty. We've never done this before without thinking about it overnight. But we want to hire you.'

"I can't even tell you how I felt. I was jumping up and down. Being Cuban, we get very excited easily. I mean, this is the dream come true of anyone who works in the Latin market. ... Two months later they told me the pilot was sold to ABC. For the first time in my life I had nothing to say."

"She was easily the best of the group that came in," recalls Burger, 37, who helped audition some 85 applicants. "It was pretty clear right away the difference was that Maty had an agenda. She had her own personality and she was very strong. For the first time I could just sit back and let her run with it. I didn't feel I had to stoke it. That was actually a nice relief, knowing I could leave the ball in her court for awhile."

Monfort was only 18 months old when she and her parents fled their home in communist Cuba on a Freedom Flight ordered by President Lyndon B. Johnson. By contrast, Burger grew up in sunny all-American style in Long Beach, Calif., and knew early on that he wanted to be a talk show host.

"Kids used to say to me in class, once they got to know me, 'How far can you get the teacher off the subject?' " he recalls. "If I thought history was going a little slow ... It's so sad, I used to think of school as really a loose framework for what I did. I was really playing this kind of subliminal talk show host, working on my craft. You know, try to do a nice, tight 10 (minutes) before recess."

Monfort calls Burger a very private man who never turns off his Death Valley-dry wit. He calls her "the high-water mark by which I judge all other women," then immediately turns the compliment into a self-deprecating plea to stop him before he turns into a Stepford host.

"I think the show is different," Monfort says. "It's hip and younger and happier than most of the shows that are out there right now. TV Guide recently wrote ... that we were one of the three wholesomest hours left. I like that – wholesomeness, in the sense that we come on and we really just want people to have a good time with us, not to feel that we're the only ones having a good time."

Burger hoots at the notion that "M&M" has made them celebrities. "We went to this big ABC thing and there was this huge crowd around us. People said, 'Oh, look at that group talking to Mike and Maty.'

"If you looked closely, somebody nearby was passing out rumaki."

Color-coded messages: What do they signify?

Throughout history, color has held significant meaning in many cultures. Here's a few examples:

Yellow: Has been considered unlucky and the color of cowardice. People who are called "yellow bellies" are thought to be weak or lacking in character.

Blue: Since this is the color of the sky, blue has been looked at as a powerful color. It has been considered a color of creative power and luck. Blue is also associated with sadness and heartache. People with broken hearts have "the blues."

Red: This color has been associated with many different things. Love is one. You'll notice that most Valentine's Day hearts and decorations are this color. When someone gives a red rose as a gift, it's a symbol of love and affection.

Red is also associated with speed. Any sportscar that's painted red will be more accident prone. That's why they're more expensive to insure than any other color car. Red is considered a lively color, too. People will go out and "paint the town red." It's considered an honor when someone "rolls out the red carpet" for you.

Black: The ancient symbol of rebirth. It has been associated with the supernatural, as in "black magic." Black plays a role in superstition, too. When a "black cat crosses your path," it is said to bring bad luck. People wear black to funerals, as it signifies mourning in many cultures.

-Black can also have meaning in fashion. You'll notice that the "bad guy" in the movies always wore black. "Black tie" parties are very elegant affairs, and people in big cities will wear all-black clothing to be trendy.

White: White is the symbol of purity and innocence. Brides wear white for this reason. A "little white lie" is one that's meant to protect a person's feelings — so it's not so bad to tell this type of lie. And it only makes sense that the "good guy" in the movies always wore white.

The White House, home of the President, was named for no significant reason. Its name comes from the simple fact that it is a white house. Theodore Roosevelt was the first president to use this name. Before him, it was called the President's House and the Executive Mansion.

Gold: The color of the gods. It was thought of as a royal color. Gold signifies money, they say, "all that glitters is gold."

Green: This color represents jealousy. People can get "green with envy."

Purple: A color of royalty. Ancient kings and queens wore this color.

Pink: Pink is a lucky, cheerful color. If you're "in the pink," you're doing well. It is also the most popular color for little girls' clothing.

Orange: This is a bold, happy color. People who wear orange are considered optimists.

LET'S TALK

'Magnum' not a Yankees fan; a link between 'Lassie' and 'CHiPS'

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Would you please settle a family dispute for me? In "Magnum P.I.," Tom Selleck wears a baseball cap. My dad insists it was a Detroit Tigers cap while the rest of my family insists it was a New York Yankees cap. Your help on this issue would be greatly appreciated. –Christy Vaught, Science Hill, Ky.

A: Father knows best, Christy. Magnum sported a Tigers cap in the series.

Q: In at least some episodes of the old show "Timmy and Lassie," Timmy was played by a boy named Frank Wilson.

Some years later, on "CHiPs," a tall, burly blond actor named Frank Wilson played one of the officers. Is this the same actor? –Scott Tenney, South Gardiner, Maine.

A: Well, you're on the right track, but it seems you may have your signals crossed. Larry Wilcox, who played by-the-book "CHiPs" officer Jon Baker, also played the character of Dale Mitchell on "Lassie" from 1972 to 1974.

Q: Could you please tell me where I can write to Pavel Bure? He is my favorite hockey player. –Andrea Hammond, Portugal Cove, Nfld., Canada.

A: Write to Bure C/O the Vancouver Canucks at 100 N. Renfrew St., Vancouver, B.C. V5K 3N7.

Q: Could you please give me an address where I could write to "Star Search"? Also, could you tell me if they are making new episodes, or if they're just airing reruns? –R.L. in upstate New York.

A: "Star Search" is currently in production, but will be airing repeats through the summer. You can write to the show at Rysher-TPE, 3400 Riverside Drive, Suite 600, Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Q: I would like to know where I can write to Michael Dudikoff, who plays "Scandal" Jackson on "Cobra," and please tell me if the show will be back next season? –S.L. Storm, Longview, Md.

A: While "Cobra" will not be back for a new season this fall, you can reach Dudikoff by writing to him C/O the Sid Craig Agency, 8485 Melrose Place, Suite E, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Tom Selleck

Q: Would you please give me the address to the "Mike & Maty Show"? –Shirlean Square, Chicago Heights, Ill.

A: You can write to the show C/O ABC Media Relations, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Calif. 90067.

Q: I was wondering if the heavy man who played in "Uncle Buck," "The Great Outdoors" and many other movies is the same person who played Norm on "Cheers." –K.R., Beaumont, Texas.

A: No. You have confused the late John Candy with the very-much-alive George (Norm) Wendt.

Q: I have heard rumors that Mark-Paul Gosselaar and Tiffani-Amber Thiessen are married and that's the reason why "Saved By the Bell: The College Years" went off the air. They say Gosselaar is sick and Thiessen is having a baby. Is this true? –Katherine Harper, Natchitoches, La.

A: Well, now there's a new one.

Once and for all, "Saved By the Bell: The College Years" went off the air due to poor ratings.

Gosselaar is not ill and (as far as I know) Thiessen is not pregnant. In fact, she will be joining the cast of "Beverly Hills, 90210" this fall as a transplanted friend of the Walsh family from Minnesota. Her real-life beau, at the moment at least, is Brian Austin Green, also of "90210."

HBO premieres 'P.O.W.E.R.'-ful rise and fall of a drug dealer in 'The Eddie Matos Story'

BY JOHN HARMON

"P.O.W.E.R.: The Eddie Matos Story" should work as an effective deterrent for anybody interested in a drug dealing career.

The only problem is, parents may want to deter their own children from watching this violent and explicit biography premiering on HBO Tuesday, Aug. 9.

The half-hour movie, which airs as part of HBO's "Lifestories: Families in Crisis" series, is a biting indictment of the drug and gun problem that currently plagues American youth.

Parents should be aware, however, that while this film is an effective and moving depiction of a dead-end life on the streets, it is dotted with bloody shootings and explicit language.

"P.O.W.E.R." is based on the true story of Eddie Matos, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., who became a drug dealer at age 14 and was shot in the back and paralyzed by the age of 17.

Alexis Cruz plays Matos, a bright kid who combines classroom smarts with street smarts to become a young but respected dealer.

The emotional tug-of-war that Matos experiences as he's torn between a life of crime on one hand, and loyalty to his family on the other, is handled realistically.

"P.O.W.E.R.," which stands for "People Opening the World's Eyes to Reality," was started by the real-life Matos in the quadriplegic ward of Goldwater Memorial Hospital in Roosevelt Island, N.Y. The group visits high schools to warn about the perils of drugs and guns.

A message from the real-life Matos at the end of the film provides a very poignant and powerful scene. Appearing in a wheelchair with the help of life-support, Matos addresses viewers:

"You are responsible for your life. Don't make the same choices I made. Don't do guns and don't do drugs."

Also this week, Anne Archer stars in "Jane's House" on CBS Sunday, Aug. 7. USA Network premieres "Don't Talk to Strangers" with Pierce Brosnan on Thursday, Aug. 11.

Doherty NBC's novel idea, children's programming booming

CBS' dramatization of "Scarlett," the sequel to Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," is scheduled to air as a miniseries in November. Not to be outdone, NBC has decided to make a movie biography of Mitchell. Since the script casts Mitchell in the same mold as her famous heroine, the network has chosen a famously (or infamously) spirited actress for the role – Shannen Doherty.

It's called "edu-tainment," and it's coming Monday, Sept. 12. A new cable channel dubbed Wam! America's Youth Network will deliver 24-hour edu-tainment to an 8 to 16-year-old audience, as well as their parents and teachers. Despite the happy-speak, Wam! is "designed to be a curriculum-enrichment tool, not a teacher replacement," according to its parent company, Encore Media.

During the school day and again overnight, Wam! will offer programs on science, history, geography and literature. After school, the pace winds down with magazine shows, best-loved reruns, sports, science fiction and adventure. The evening features "wholesome" series and movies, says Encore. Fridays overnight, teacher enrichment is offered. The channel's name was suggested by two middle-school students.

Maurice Sendak's "Little Bear" books will come to life in an animated series to debut on Nickelodeon in the fall of 1995. Sendak began illustrating the books in the 1950s for author Else Holmelund Minarik. The author and illustrator will work together on the series.

Shannen Doherty

"Shining Time Station" is planning a whistle-stop tour in prime time, beginning this winter. The award-winning PBS children's series has begun production on two prime-time specials based on the success of a 1990 effort featuring guest Lloyd Bridges. The new series of nighttime episodes will include more guest stars and some special friends of series mascot Thomas the Tank Engine, including George the steam roller, Bulstrode the barge and Duke, a grandfather figure.

MONDAY

Monday on Fox, Martin Landau, Jonathan Silverman and Helen Slater (from left) star in "12:01," a sci-fi thriller about a young man trapped in a time warp, causing him to experience the same day over and over.

STAR NOTES

Gray 'highlights' early going on 'Models'

BY SARA BENNETT

Shooting the pilot of any new series can be a tedious experience for all involved.

Linda Gray, star of Fox's "Models Inc.," airing Wednesdays, was relieved when the 90-minute pilot was finished.

"It seemed like it was an epic," Gray laughs. "Are we finished yet?" she recalls thinking.

But Gray has the utmost respect for the writers who got it all together.

"Pilots are weird because they have to introduce everybody and their connections and their back story, and still propel a story forward and bring in a little intrigue and action. That's a difficult one. I applaud the writers.

"If someone dumped that in my plate and said, 'Could you please do this and include all these elements?' I'd probably sit on a rock and cry."

Perhaps Gray is indeed better suited in front of the camera, where she helped knock "Melrose Place" ratings through the roof at the end of last season as model agency owner Hillary Michaels. She brings the same character to "Models Inc.," a spin-off of "Melrose."

Gray looks pretty much the same in the new series, except for one thing.

"I'll be a little blonder than normal," she says. "I saw it (her hair) on 'Melrose,' and I thought, 'I look like a mouse!' "

HOME BIJOU

Snipes, Wright score in 'Sugar Hill'; Ryder fetching in Stiller's 'Reality Bites'

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

Great performances propel three new video releases focusing on everything from Harlem hoods to Generation X.

Wesley Snipes and Michael Wright portray sharply dressed New York hoods who also happen to be brothers in "Sugar Hill." For one brother, it's the perfect arrangement – here's a partner in crime he knows he can trust.

But the other, in a long tradition of movie mobsters, is itching to get out. His plan is to make one last big drug deal and disappear to sunny climes. Things go sour as he plots his escape and finds himself antagonizing not only a mob boss (Abe Vigoda) and his henchmen, but his clinging, overwrought brother as well.

The film offers nothing new in the script department, but the performances, especially those of Snipes and the underrated Wright, make it well worth watching. Clarence Williams III and Ossie Davis lend fine support.

Although "Reality Bites" only ate a small portion of spring box-office receipts, Ben Stiller's debut as a director is a smart piece about love and aimlessness among members of that much-maligned Generation X.

Winona Ryder, far more engaging in contemporary cool than her ill-advised forays into period drama, is a recent college grad, newly unemployed, who finds herself torn between an up-and-coming young executive (Stiller) and her scruffy, chain-smoking roommate, played by Ethan Hawke. To its credit, the film doesn't make her choice too easy.

Especially fun are John Mahoney's turn as a preening TV personality and a scene in which Ryder leads an impromptu dance party in a gas station to the Knack's 1979 hit, "My Sharona."

Cliches and cheap sentiment abound in "Wrestling Ernest Hemingway." But the performances of Richard Harris as a contentious old sailor living out his days in Miami and Robert Duvall as a stolid Cuban barber make this one a leisurely, embraceable gem. Shirley MacLaine, Piper Laurie and Sandra Bullock also star.

P

Pleasures ★★ (1986) Joanna Cassidy, Linda Purl. Summer brings romance into the lives of a woman, her sister and her teen-age daughter. 2:00. August 13 7pm.

The Price She Paid ★★ (1992) Loni Anderson, Anthony John Denison. An ex-convict slithers back into the lives of the woman he raped and the son he fathered in that violent act. 2:00. August 7 3pm; 13 5pm.

Prime Target (1989) Angie Dickinson, David Soul. A detective investigating the deaths of several New York policewomen realizes she may be next on the killer's list. 2:00. August 8 8pm.

The Princess Bride ★★★ (1987) Cary Elwes, Mandy Patinkin. A man regales his ailing grandson with a tale of romance and adventure in this lighthearted fairy tale from Rob Reiner. (In Stereo) 2:00. August 7 2pm.

R

Raggedy Man ★★★ (1981) Sissy Spacek, Eric Roberts. In 1944, a Texas telephone operator sacrifices her standing in the community when she has a brief affair with a sailor. 2:00. August 11 1:30am.

Raid on Entebbe ★★★ (1977) Peter Finch, Charles Bronson. Israeli commandos stage a daring raid on a Ugandan airstrip where Arab terrorists have taken more than 100 hostages. 2:00. August 10 1am.

Red Wind ★★ (1991) Lisa Hartman, Philip Casnoff. A battered woman turns executioner after a therapist advises her to take a stand against her abusive husband. (In Stereo) (CC) 2:00. August 7 12pm.

Rescue From Gilligan's Island ★½ (1978) Bob Denver, Alan Hale Jr. The castaways try to cope with the fast pace of society after a tidal wave carries them back to civilization. 2:00. August 8 12:05pm.

Return of the Seven ★★ (1966) Yul Brynner, Robert Fuller. In this sequel to "The Magnificent Seven," a gunfighter and his comrades come to the rescue of a former member of their group. 2:00. August 11 11pm.

SOAP WORLD

Fan upset about Simpson case

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Candace: Thank goodness you have this column because I need to vent. I am a soap watcher and proud of it! And I am sick of my favorite shows being pre-empted by the O.J. Simpson hearings. Isn't this the reason we have stations like CNN and various news programs on the networks at noon, 6 and 10, so that when we want to know what is going on we can tune in?

Why does every network have to air this case all day everyday? It is so boring! I understood when we were involved in the Gulf War and shows had to be pre-empted. I don't even mind when Bill Clinton interrupts to announce something important once in a while, but enough with this Simpson business.

People say that this case has all the makings of a great soap: murder, intrigue, abuse and lost love. I say phooey! This is real-life people, and I think it is kind of sick that most of America, and the world for that matter, wants to know every detail of this gruesome case. Are people so bored with life that they have to watch someone else's life be ruined?

I have nothing against this guy, and I have no idea if he did the crime or not. I don't care. That is for the courts to decide.

I just want my soaps back, and I want them back now! Some people may think because I watch the soaps I need to get a life. But the fact is, I have a life. The soaps just provide a daily dose of escapism for me.

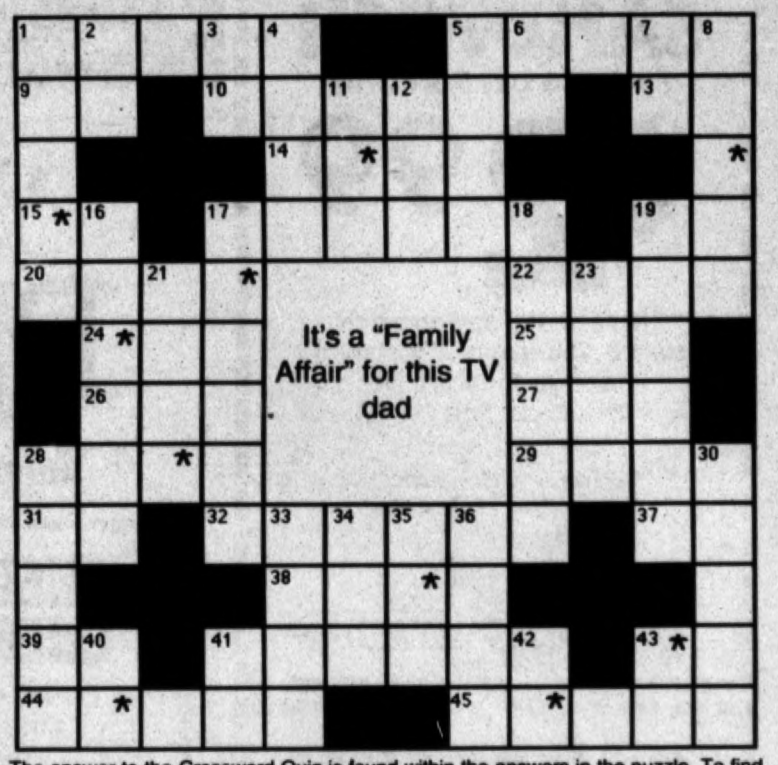

If people want to know what is going on with Simpson, then let them tune in to the news. –Fed up in Oklahoma.

Dear Reader: Soap opera viewers across the nation share your sentiments. Enough is enough. Unfortunately the networks had no idea how long the preliminary hearing would take. Most of the network executives thought it would run two days at the most.

You can be assured that when Simpson does go to trial the event will receive the same type of coverage. But take heart. The soap opera episodes you missed will be aired at a later date, so there is no chance of missing anything.
