'Chapter Two' opens Monday at Opera House

Colorado City Playhouse members report brisk ticket sales for "Chapter Two", the Neil Simon play which will open Monday at the Opera House for a six-day run.

"Chapter Two," an adult comedy, revolves around a man in his 40s coping with the death of his wife of 12 years.

The play has four characters—"George Schneider", played by Jim Baum; "Jennie Malone" played by Penny Solomon; "Leo" played by Walter Hearin; and "Faye Medwick" played by Linda Hearin.

George Schneider is recently widowed and his brother Leo is constantly trying to find a suitable companion for him. Jennie Malone is recently divorced and her friend Faye Medwick, a "soap opera" actress, is also a friend to Leo.

A rapier-sharp Simon wit combined with a split set will be keeping theater-goers on the edges of their seats, promises director Tandy Curlee.

"Chapter Two" will be presented August 26, 27, 29, 30 and 31 and September 3. The box office opened Monday and reservations may be made between noon and 5 p.m. at 728-3491. First nighters will be treated to hors d'oeuvres at the "Red Dog Saloon" during intermission.

'Behind the scenes' is busy

When the curtain opens Monday night for the Colorado City Playhouse production of Neil Simon's "Chapter Two," the audience will see the four characters in the play, but behind the scenes are a lot of committee members making sure the performance comes off letter-perfect.

Veteran Playhouse director and actor Tandy Curlee is directing the production. Bill White and Brian Bass-ham are in charge of sets while Carl Moore, Doug Baum, Marie Jackson and Tracy Womack are in charge of lights and sound.

Lovess Curlee and Shirley Delaney are in charge of costumes while Donna Starr, Jack Starr and Linda Hearin comprise the properties committee.

Marsha Moore is in charge of make-up and Tom Kelly is responsible for the programs.

Kitten Arthur is responsible for obtaining ushers. John Mikow is house manager, and Marie Womack is overseeing the Red Dog Saloon.

Anita Richardson has charge of the box office, and Marie Jackson is responsible for ticket preparation.

Pre-production and background music has been recorded by Margaret Baum, pianist.

Ranch

lor Barr, the Renderbrook-Spade Ranch was bought by one of two inventors of barbed wire, Colonel Isaac Ellwood of Illinois, in 1889 from the Snyder Brothers.

According to legend, the ranch, located 22 miles south of Colorado City, takes its name from nearby Renderbrook Spring, so named for a soldier ambushed by Indians along its banks. Actually, however, an 1876 Army staff map shows the spring was named for a Captain Joseph Renderbrook.

Ellwood purchased his first cow herd from J. F. "Spade" Evans. Since that time, cattle on the 120,000 acre Renderbrook spread have worn the Spade brand.

Because Ellwood felt his investment had been a good one, he insisted that all improvements be permanent. So, in 1901, a rock house with carbide lighting and the latest conveniences, including hot and cold running water, was built at ranch headquarters. The Renderbrook Ranch also piped water to its cattle long before other West Texas ranchers began to do so.

When his son W. L. Ellwood died in 1933, Ellwood left the ranch, which by now included land in Lubbock, Hale, Hockley and Lamb counties, to his daughters, Mrs. F. H. Chappell and Mrs. R. Leland Keeney. Fourteen years later, Colonel Ellwood's great grandson, F. H. Chappell Jr., established the 40,000 acre Chappell-Spade Ranch.

The Spade Ranches today consist of three outfits: The Renderbrook-Spade Ranch in Mitchell County, the Chappell-Spade Ranch near Tucumacari, New Mexico, and the Borden-Spade Ranch near Gail, Texas. The Spade brand is common to all the ranches.

They are operated by F. H. Chappell Jr. and Mrs. B. D. Bassham, and are managed by W. J. "Dub" Waldrip, who introduced cross-breeding to the ranches. The strains, which never contain more than five-eighths percent of any breed in the cross, are Hereford, Angus, Brown Swiss and Simmental. His plan was the first which crossed two British and two Swiss breeds.

In addition to cattle, the ranches breed horses and sheep. The land is not cultivated, but remains native range.

At 95 years of age, the Renderbrook-Spade Ranch is three years older than Colorado City. It has been acknowledged by the Texas Historical Survey Committee with a marker for its "White House," a structure built in the late 1800's by the Snyder Brothers, which is still in use today.

SCHOOL HAS STARTED early for Colorado High School Wolf Band members who are rehearsing daily in preparation for football season. The band, under the direction of Steve Smith, will have a new look this year during halftime performances at Wolf football games. The band members are also in the process of selling subscriptions to the RECORD. The annual subscription drive is one of the band's money-making projects.

Opera House has colorful history

The Colorado City Opera House, built by the Colorado City Opera House Company in 1899-1900, was the second opera house in Colorado City and cost $2,813 to build.

Colorado City at the turn of the century was considered to be the cultural center of West Texas.

The Colorado City Opera House Company staged light opera, traveling theater groups and vaudeville.

In 1911, the Opera House became a silent movie theater.

In the 1920's, the slanting audience floor was taken out, a second floor level was installed and the building turned into a rooming house. It catered to cattle drive persons, ranchers and drummers in off the train, as well as other visitors.

In the mid 1960s, the rooming house was given up by its owners to the city, county and school district for accumulated back taxes. The city acquired the interests of the county and school district with an eye to the possibility of converting the old opera house into a museum. However, after hearing a report from an architect, the city decided the project would be too expensive.

The Colorado City Playhouse, Inc., a local community theater organization, asked the city council if it might renovate the building back into a theater. The councilmen were sceptical, but agreed. Terms for the lease of the building to the playhouse were $1 per year for a 20-year lease with a 20-year option.

The Playhouse members completed the renovation...working some three nights per week for about two years.

Recently, the Colorado City Playhouse, which calls its home "The Opera House," added in excess of $125,000 in improvements to the stage size, scenery, fly-rigs, etc., to make the facility adaptable to more ambitious projects than are already undertaken.

Loraine boosters to meet

The Loraine Sports Boosters will meet Monday, Aug. 26 at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

Phil Ryan, president of the Southern Football Officials Association, will be guest speaker.

Following the speaker, election of new officers and other business will be conducted.

An ice cream supper for football players, their parents and boosters will follow.

Park

Bobby "Red" Lemons. There will be a variety of food booths including cold soft drinks, homemade ice cream, snow cones, hamburgers, Mexican food, cold watermelon, Frito pies, hot dogs and popcorn.

To buy food and to play games, park-goers must purchase tickets at 25 cents each. A ticket booth will be set up in the center of the park throughout the day.

The event is being sponsored by the Colorado City Park Board in order to help raise $125,000 to match a grant from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission. The money will be used to build a new swimming pool at the park as well as for other park improvements.

Southwestern Bell establishes bureau

Realizing the importance of the Hispanic market in Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone has developed a new Spanish-language customer information program called the "800 Spanish Service Bureau."

The bureau is designed to provide Spanish-speaking customers with general information about telephone service.

The bureau opened for service in Colorado City August 1.

To reach the 800 Spanish Service Bureau, customers will dial 1-800-592-7766 from anywhere in Texas. There is no charge for the call. Spanish-speaking Southwestern Bell employees will handle the calls, providing information, answering questions or acting as interpreters as necessary for the customer and other telephone company employees.

"In the next 15 years, eight million more people will live in Texas—at least 25 percent of those people will be Hispanic," said Jim Adams, president of Southwestern Bell's Texas Division. "Programs such as the Spanish Service Bureau demonstrate our concern for Hispanic customers and help provide opportunities for us to market our goods and services to them."

Adams will initiate the three-phase trial of the bureau on August 1 in El Paso. Along with El Paso, the bureau will begin serving customers in the Panhandle, Midland-Odessa, Dallas-Fort Worth and Austin in Phase I.

Phase II, which begins September 2, will bring the Spanish Service Bureau to the Houston-Beaumont area. On October 1, the trial begins in San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley.

Pest resistance reduces pesticide value

AUSTIN—"When it comes to pesticides, Texas farmers are paying more and getting less," concluded a recent study by the Texas Center for Rural Studies (TCRS) in Austin. Will Dibrell, researcher for the non-profit educational and research organization stated, "With thousands of pesticides on the market, the millions of dollars spent on pesticide research, and the billions farmers pay to use these products, you'd think we were winning the battle against agricultural pests—unfortunately that's not the case. Ever-growing pest resistance has reduced the value of much pesticide use, and skyrocketing pesticide costs aren't helping farmers cope with tight budgets."

In 1982, Texas grain, cotton, vegetable, and fruit farmers spent 122 percent more per acre on pesticides than in 1974, according to data from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture (USDA). Over the same period these same farmers received only a 23 percent gain in crop sales per acre. Texans are second only to California in their pesticide use and buy about 10 percent of all agricultural pesticides used in the U.S.

"The most dramatic difference can be seen with cash grain farms, one of the largest sectors of Texas agriculture," noted Dibrell. Over the eight year period (1974-1982) their crop sales per acre rose only six percent while pesticide costs per acre soared 119 percent.

"At a time when farmers are strapped with chronically low commodity prices and a variety of other financial difficulties, these cost increases are especially burdensome," stated Dibrell. "The dollar increase can be largely attributed to skyrocketing pesticide prices," he explained. A chemical industry journal has reported that pesticide prices almost tripled since 1974, far outpacing inflation over the same period.

"There's no question that chemical pesticides have been effective," stated Dibrell, "but some of the effects have been negative, and positive effects are often short-lived." He explained that one of the biggest problems with pesticide effectiveness is pest resistance. Massive applications of pesticides since the 1940's have bred resistance to many of these products.

While there were only 12 known species of resistant insects in 1948, today there are well over 400. The numbers of resistant weeds and plant diseases are also growing. Although farmers are now using more than ten times the amount of pesticides than in the 1940's, estimated crop losses to insects almost doubled between the 1940's and 1970's (from seven percent to 13 percent). In the early 1900's before organic insecticides, these losses were estimated at around 10 percent.

Dibrell points to the case of cotton as an example of the pesticide resistance problem. In the 1940's boll weevils grew increasingly resistant to organochlorine insecticides, eventually requiring 15 to 20 applications per crop to control them. These massive doses killed the natural predators of a relatively harmless cotton pest, the tobacco budworm. Unchecked, the budworm became a major cotton pest, and in turn developed resistance to all known insecticides. South Texas cotton was devastated.

Eventually, a new type of insecticide (synthetic pyrethroids), integrated pest management (IPM), and new cotton varieties have allowed cotton to reestablish, but the problem is not over yet. IPM specialist Tom Mueller at the Texas Department of Agriculture said, "The tobacco budworm may be showing signs of resistance to synthetic pyrethroids, and there are currently no registered insecticides waiting in the wings to replace them. This could be disastrous for cotton production in the state. The irony is that it may take a disaster of that magnitude to really give a boost to biological (pest control) research and methods."

"There are alternatives to just using more chemicals for control of pests," Dibrell noted, "but though entomologists and the Extension Service have started to place more emphasis on these methods, this information hasn't been available to many farmers." A 1982 USDA survey of 6,000 farmers showed only 12 percent to have received information or to have had any knowledge of beneficial insects. "Some farmers have successfully used minimal quantities of chemical pesticides," Dibrell explained. "Their problem solving approaches to pest control can be and are being developed into safe, effective and economical pest control for all farmers."

Texas Unemployment rate increases

By Lloyd Bentsen
United States Senator

In July, for the first time in 15 years, the Texas unemployment rate equaled the national unemployment rate.

This represents a sharp unemployment increase for our state over the past year.

In June 1984, the Texas jobless rate was 4.9 percent. By last month, we had equaled the 7.3 percent national rate, which had remained about the same during that period.

This is the first time the Texas unemployment rate has equaled the national rate since July 1970, when the Texas rate hit 5.2 percent and the national rate was 5 percent.

In more real terms, this means that some 590,000 Texans can't find work.

Many jobs in our state have been lost or exported overseas because of the United States' problems in world trade.

Our deficit-bloated dollar, overvalued by 30 percent or more in relation to other currencies, gives foreign products a tremendous price advantage over American products in world markets, including our own.

Our nation's trading partners are increasingly following the example of Japan by erecting barriers to imports. And the Europeans continue their unfair subsidies in competing with us for sales to third countries.

These problems have finally caught up to Texas' traditionally strong economy. And all segments—agriculture, manufacturing, energy and services—have been hit hard.

Since September, there have

Child should have choice in clothes

By Debbie Christian County Extension Agent

As summer winds down, it's time to do shopping for that "back-to-school" wardrobe. The greatest amount of money spent on children's clothing usually goes for back-to-school clothing.

Other than just having something to wear, children's clothing serves other purposes. Most adults know that looking good is an important part of feeling good. Sometimes parents overlook how important feeling well-dressed is to children. Children who have confidence in how they look tend to be more positive in their schoolwork and their relations with classmates.

Parents can help children have that extra bit of confidence by planning school clothes carefully. The basic element in selecting school clothes is that they should be attractive, comfortable, and safe. Beyond that is an enormous range of choice.

Enabling the child to help make a choice can help him/her develop a sense of ownership and responsibility, learn about decision making, and use their imaginations. Clothing also serves another purpose in that it allows children to fit in and be liked by other children.

With finances and practicality given consideration, you can help your child select a wardrobe that both you and him/her will be pleased with.

State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company

been more than 3,500 layoffs in the Texas semiconductor industry, with more expected. This is partly caused by Japan closing its market to our semiconductors and declaring a price war to take over the U.S. market.

Texas farmers will lose 40 percent of their net income this year over last. The overvalued dollar has hurt world demand for our farm products. Resulting surpluses are pushing ever lower the price farmers can get as they try to compete with government-subsidized foreign farm products.

Texas furniture manufacturers—just one of whom employs 1,200 people in Texas and Arkansas—feel so threatened by unfair foreign competition that they have asked the Administration for relief. The first advice they received was that they might have to move their manufacturing plants overseas to take advantage of cheaper labor.

Along the Texas coast, more than 54,000 manufacturing jobs were lost between 1980 and 1984 as our refinery and petrochemical industries have been damaged by imports from state-controlled foreign companies with access to cheap, subsidized oil and gas. Coupled with the weakening world oil market, this hurts our state's service sector, which is closely tied to the energy industry.

To prevent the continued export of U.S. jobs, we must develop a tough, comprehensive trade policy and put our trading partners on notice that we will not longer tolerate unfair trade practices.

We must also take effective steps to reduce the huge federal deficits that are a millstone around the neck of our nation's economy and add to our trade woes.

The Texas economy retains its basic strength and diversity. But if we want to see our economy grow as it has in the past, then the trade situation must be turned around.

Laws put restrictions on debt collectors

By Jim Mattox
Attorney General

You may think that you will never have trouble with a debt collector because you always pay on time. But you might lose your job, become ill or have a particular debt. Under those circumstances, you would not want to suffer harassment from a debt collector.

It is also illegal to threaten to tell a person's boss, neighbors or friends about the debt or to call the debtor's workplace after the debtor requests that such calls cease.

My San Antonio office filed suit recently against two companies whose collectors were harassing consumers by threatening them with arrest and calling them at work even after they had been warned not to make such calls.

It is against the law to make phone calls to the debtor without identifying the caller as a debt collector and it is illegal for the caller to identify himself as an attorney if he is not. The use of abusive and profane language by the debt collector is prohibited by the law also.

Here are some tips for avoiding all this harassment if you do owe a debt:

—Respond quickly to the debt collector's initial contact.

—If you are not certain that you actually owe the debt, make a request in writing for validation of the debt and keep a copy of your request.

—If you do owe the debt but you can't pay it immediately, ask for a payment plan. My consumer protection lawyers advise against signing postdated checks or making any promises you cannot keep.

If you do not owe the money, inform the collector in writing that the charge is invalid and insist that all collection efforts stop. If you have cancelled checks, send copies to the debt collector. Keep the originals of your checks and copies of any communication between yourself and the debt collector.

If you are being harassed by a debt collector that you believe is violating the law, you may get help from my Consumer Protection division.

If you need more help or information on this or other consumer problems, contact your nearest Attorney General Consumer Protection Office (in Austin, Dallas, El Paso, Houston, Lubbock, McAllen, and San Antonio). The Attorney General's Office is the people's law firm. We're here to help you.

Library films to be shown

The Mitchell County Public Library will show the following films on Saturday, August 24 at 2 p.m.

"Smallest Elephant in the World," 6 minutes, color; Lucerne, 1966. While showing that there is a place for everyone in the world, both big and small, this film utilizes a delightfully animated technique to tell the charming story of the elephant who was no bigger than a house cat.

"Seven with one Blow," 10 minutes, color, Bosustow, 1979. The little tailor kills seven flies with one blow of his yardstick and decides he was made for better things. Through sleight of hand, trickery and deviousness, the tailor is rewarded with marriage to the princess. He finally becomes King and rules the country wisely ever after.

"The Joke's on Mr. Little," 24 minutes, color, ABC Wide Word of Learning, 1983. Schoolboys Streeter and Drag have a surprise in store for them when they rush to school on the first day to give their favorite teacher a bottle of perfume but are greeted by her bespectacled replacement, Mr. Lester Little. They'll play outrageous practical jokes on the unsuspecting Mr. Little and embarrass him into leaving. Adapted from Robert Newton Peck's story, the film expresses the spirit of adolescence—the breezy beat of youth and the perplexing rhythms of growing up.

Cowan flies helicopter during testing procedures

THIS HH-60A helicopter, flown by Maj. Stetson Cowan, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Cowan, of Colorado City, hovers during a ceremony in Owego, N.Y. Major Cowan is a test pilot stationed at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Major Stetson Cowan, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Cowan of Colorado City, flew the prototype of the Air Force HH-60A Night Hawk search and rescue helicopter that was unveiled earlier this month in ceremonies at Owego, N.Y.

Major Cowan is a test pilot stationed at Edwards Air Force Base in California where the helicopter will be ferried to at the end of August to start testing new equipment.

The ceremony marked the completion of work done by the International Business Machines Corp.'s Federal Systems Division to install navigation and communications equipment, sensors and visual displays in the helicopter.

The Night Hawk is scheduled to fly to Edwards AFB later this month to begin avionics and operational testing and evaluation.

The main airframe engineer at Edwards, Capt. Larry Davis, said that pilots and engineers from the HH-60A Combined Test Force have been troubleshooting in Owego to "make sure the equipment works well enough to take it to Edwards."

When the helicopter returns to its California test base, it will undergo operational and developmental testing into 1987.

Captain Davis said that the first part of checking out the prototype aircraft took place at Edwards from May to November 1984. The CTF personnel tested the basic airframe, the flying qualities, fuel use and the operation of the rescue hoist. High-altitude performance testing was conducted over Bishop, Calif.

The HH-60A has been in Owego since November 1984. On its return flight, it will stop for refueling at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio; Scott AFB, Ill.; and Kirtland AFB, N.M.

The Night Hawk was developed to perform combat missions in hostile territory. It contains 179 electronic units that will allow search and rescue crews to fly at night and in limited adverse weather.

The HH-60A is the first new helicopter developed for the Air Force since the Vietnam Era, according to Aeronautical Systems Division officials at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

They said the helicopter's cockpit and integrated avionics were designed to allow the pilot and co-pilot to manage all data without the aid of a flight engineer as currently required in conventional helicopters.

The HH-60A's cockpit also is compatible with night vision goggles that improve the pilot's field of vision in darkness. It's also equipped with a forward-looking infrared system that uses heat-sensing to provide a television-like picture of what's ahead of the aircraft.

Speaking to IBM employees during the unveiling ceremonies, Lt. Gen. Thomas H. McMullen, ASD commander, said the Night Hawk's avionics integration work "represents the kind of technological achievement needed to keep us out front in the capability to respond to any worldwide challenge."

He said the helicopter's combat rescue abilities make it important to the Air Force.

"Our aim is to ensure our aircrews have a confirmed round-trip ticket home when we send them flying off into combat," he said. "The guarantee of the return trip portion of that ticket is provided by combat rescue."

"For an injured crewmember forced to bail out over enemy territory, the not so graceful curves of the Night Hawk will be the only plus he has; it's his edge in a grim situation."

General McMullen said downed crewmembers will have confidence in the helicopter's ability to reach them because of its performance ability and its integrated avionics systems.

The Air Force plans to buy 90 of the helicopters with the first production models expected to begin arriving at Military Airlift Command units in 1988.

The Night Hawk rolled out in January 1984 at Sikorsky Aircraft in Stratford, Conn. Designers combined a modified Army UH-60A Black Hawk airframe with an upgraded powerplant, transmission and two jettisonable external fuel tanks to create the HH-60A. The added equipment and power will allow the Night Hawk to be flown without escort or refueling for up to 250 nautical miles behind enemy lines, officials said.

M.D. Anderson registers 200,000

HOUSTON—The University of Texas M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute registered its 200,000th patient this month.

The milestone was marked by an 84-year-old Abilene area woman who has a common form of skin cancer that is highly curable.

It took almost three decades, from the time the first patient was treated in a temporary clinic on March 1, 1944, to serve the first 100,000 patients referred to M. D. Anderson from all parts of Texas and beyond. The second 100,000 patients have been registered in less than 12 years.

Cancer is a disease as old as recorded history, yet most improvements in therapy have been achieved very recently. In fact, nearly all progress against cancer made at institutions around the world has occurred in just the 41 years since M. D. Anderson opened in a converted Army barracks.

By comparison with other major American medical institutions, the history has been relatively brief for UT M. D. Anderson Hospital, one of the nation's original federally designated comprehensive cancer centers.

"Great progress has been made in the cancer field in the last 20 years. As a result of our improving knowledge, cancer has been transformed into a highly curable chronic disease. More than 50 percent of all patients coming to M. D. Anderson today are considered cured. Most of the others are benefitting from steadily improving therapies, which mean longer survival times," noted Dr. Charles A. LeMaistre, president of the UT Cancer Center.

Nationally, about one in four cancer patients was cured during the 1940s. By the time the 100,000th patient was accepted at M. D. Anderson in October of 1973, the long-term survival had improved to one in three patients.

As the cure rate has improved to about one in every two patients, some of the most encouraging results have been achieved in the areas of childhood leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, melanoma and bone cancer, all of which were usually fatal 20 years ago.

Pigskin preview set Thursday

The Annual Pigskin Preview, introducing new football players at Colorado High School, is scheduled for today at Wolf Stadium at 7 p.m. Introduced will be ninth grade, junior varsity and varsity football players.

Significant progress also has been made in treating testicular, cervical and thyroid cancers.

Amidst the heartening news about better cancer treatments, though, Dr. LeMaistre offered a sobering message.

"We know that about 85 percent of the causes of cancer are found in our lifestyle or in our environment. About one-third of all cancers are directly caused by cigarette smoking and another one-third are associated with diets. Much of the rest are related to excessive exposure to sunlight and a wide range of infrequent factors," he explained.

Changing known cancer-causing habits would go a long way toward preventing the majority of lung, breast, colon and rectal cancers. These sites account for two-thirds of deaths from the more than 100 malignant diseases called cancer.

The total number of Texans having cancer is expected to nearly double—from 44,500 last year to an estimated 84,000—by the year 2000. This prediction is based on the state's growing population, increases in middle- and older-age groups and disturbing forecasts about more lung cancer cases.

Recent studies show cancer care for Texans is costing more than $400 million a year, while the annual loss to the state's economy exceeds $1.5 billion.

Registering M. D. Anderson's 200,000th patient provided a time to reflect on progress for both the institution and cancer care generally, but Dr. LeMaistre cautioned that scientists working in laboratories and medical teams treating patients can only accomplish so much.

"We now have an unparalleled opportunity to begin the end of cancer's long scourge of mankind of avoiding the agents in our lifestyle and our environment that cause cancer. The next strides in cancer control truly depend on each one of us," Dr. LeMaistre emphasized.

Scrimmages set Friday

Colorado City and Loraine football teams officially begin their 1985 seasons with scrimmages scheduled for 6 p.m. tomorrow.

The Colorado High School Wolves travel to class AA Stanton while the Bulldogs visit Santa Anna. Loraine and Santa Anna will use a practice field because of conditions at the playing field.

Food And Drugs
Certain drugs can increase or retard the absorption of drugs into the bloodstream. For example, the absorption of iron is enhanced if it is taken along with foods that are rich in vitamin C such as citrus fruit. More commonly, however, food impairs the absorption of drugs. One well-recognized interference comes from antibiotics. If dairy foods are eaten during tetracycline therapy, the calcium, in the milk, etc., will impair the absorption of the tetracycline. Other antibiotics, such as penicillin, ampicillin and erythromycin, should not be taken with fruit juices, citrus fruits, tomatoes, vinegar, pickles and cola drinks. If drugs need to be swallowed with liquid, it is safest to drink plain water.

significant role we already play in the health care needs of hundreds of families. If you are new to the Colorado City area we suggest you become acquainted with us even before you need our service. TEXAS GARDENER TIPS

It's Tea Time For Herbal Brews

Most everyone knows that black gold makes up the Texas "T," but did you know it also can be made of herbs? Texas tea, that is. Each season, many gardeners plant herbs for the kitchen, but overlook the many wonderful herbs that can be grown for teas.

If you missed planting herbs this year, you might try buying some different herbs for teas, pick the ones you like best and prepare your garden to plant your own herbs next year.

Though most herbs are planted in early summer, it's an excellent idea to begin preparing your planting beds well ahead of time. The most important considerations for a successful herb garden are full sun and good drainage. Herbs do poorly if forced to grow in areas with excessive moisture. Rain water should percolate easily through the soil, yet enough should remain to provide a continuous supply to the roots. To test a potential garden spot, scoop up a handful of soil. It should crumble easily in your hand. If it doesn't you can improve the soil by working in sand and organic matter, such as well-decomposed leaves, grass clippings or compost.

If all else fails, herbs do very well on raised beds. As a rule, your herbal tea garden will thrive in a fairly heavy soil with plenty of humus incorporated into it to loosen its texture. Your soil's pH should be between 6.4 and 6.8. If your soil has a higher or lower pH, which you can determine by having the soil tested, you should contact your local Extension service office for information on how to adjust the pH level.

Once they're planted herbs require adequate moisture and should be fertilized lightly and mulched. Otherwise, they require little care.

Some excellent herbs to plant for making tea are anise, basil, bee balm, borage, catnip, Roman chamomile, comfrey, lavender, sweet marjoram, scented geraniums, orange bergamot mint, rosemary, sage and spearmint.

Galvans tell of mission work

At the regular monthly fellowship meeting of the United Methodist Church of Loraine, Eddie and Nora Galvan told of their recent mission trip to Old Mexico.

The church served supper in the fellowship hall after which a period of singing, devotional and prayers were given.

Eddie first gave his Christian witness and of his eagerness to serve in telling the story of Jesus.
