GOP budget plan squeaks by Senate

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate early today approved, 50-49, a Republican package of $295 billion in spending cuts that would cancel next year's Social Security benefit increases and pare President Reagan's defense buildup — with an ailing GOP member rushed to the Capitol by ambulance to provide the winning margin.

The three-year deficit reduction package next goes to the Democratic House of Representatives, where its fate was uncertain. House Democratic leaders have generally voiced opposition to any provison limiting Social Security benefits.

Reagan, speaking in Portugal before ending his European trip, praised the package as giving him "more than 90 percent of what we have asked for in the budget." He also said he received assurance from the Senate that he can come back for more it appears the reduction in his defense spending request is harmful.

"I have the agreement of the Senate that if this represents...a cut in (defense) spending beyond where we should go, I will be returning for a supplemental appropriation," he said.

On Social Security, Reagan said, "I was faced with a mandate" from 79 senators who "demanded that we have some curbing" of the cost-of-living increases.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who underwent surgery for a ruptured appendix the day before, was brought to the Capitol from nearby Bethesda Naval Hospital to vote for the package on the suspenseful, post-midnight roll call.

Sen. Pete Wilson

Wilson's vote brought the roll call to 49-49 in the Republican-controlled Senate. Vice President George Bush then voted to break the tie.

After the vote, Reagan congratulated Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., by telephone on successfully steering the compromise 1986 budget through the Senate.

"I think a $300 billion package is worth staying up all night for," said Dole, who invited reporters into his office to hear his end of the call. The final vote came after a nonstop 18-hour Senate session.

"We know you're a little disappointed on the defense (spending levels), but I think there could be some adjustments later on if there's a need," Dole said.

A House-Senate conference committee will eventually have to reconcile differences between versions of the budget passed by the two chambers.

The narrow victory depended heavily on the backing of a few farm-state senators who were won over by the promise of smaller cuts in the agriculture budget.

The administration put back about $3.5 billion of the $19 billion in cuts it had sought over the next three years in an earlier, failed attempt at budget compromise, as well as offering to establish a new export subsidy that would give bonus surplus commodities to foreign buyers of U.S. farm goods.

The largest chunk of restored money came in the area of commodity price support programs. The administration agreed to cut $5.5 billion over the next three years in that area, instead of the previously sought figure of $8 billion.

Also a key to the support today of senators such as Mark Andrews, R-N.D., and Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., was the new export subsidy, which will use surplus government-owned grain and other commodities to enhance the competitiveness of U.S. farm goods in world markets.

Saturday vote could end or extend jail controversy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County voters on Saturday may help cut through or even bind more tightly the chains of controversy surrounding the Midland County Jail.

They will be voting on two propositions. They may cast ballots for either issue, vote for both or vote against both.

Proposition No. 1 calls for the issuance of $3 million in bonds to renovate and expand the jail, expand Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention center, and fund a study of Midland County needs into the 21st century.

Advocates say the project would "complete the jail," which was built in 1973 as the fifth floor of the courthouse, and would meet requirements set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. The addition of cells in the jail's undeveloped northwest quadrant would increase the jail's bunk space from 101 to an estimated 130.

■ City, county voting maps — Page 4A

The jail's population currently is limited to 85 due to a remedial order issued by the Jail Commission. And the jail's population is limited to 85 percent of its capacity due to the system of classifying and segregating prisoners. Backers of Proposition No. 1 say a study of Midland County courthouse, jail, library and other needs should be studied before new building projects get under way.

Proposition No. 2 would provide for the issuance of $9.9 million in bonds for building an $8.4 million jail and sheriff's complex on seven acres about 2½ miles east of the downtown courthouse and for the $500,000 expansion of Culver Youth Home.

The proposed jail initially would lodge 225 inmates and be equipped to handle 75 more. It could be expanded to hold 600 inmates in maximum security cells. Proponents say leasing block space to the federal government to house federal prisoners would help defray the jail's cost, as any tax hike to pay for the indebtedness would be adjusted according to the revenue flow and tax base.

The jail project under Proposition No. 2 also would address the crowded courthouse by freeing the fifth-floor jail area and much of the basement for additional courtroom and office space. Proposition No. 1 does not. Instead, it calls for a study to discern those needs, which Commissioner Win Brown says the commissioners already have made on their own and through architects.

White: Blue Law repeal shouldn't stir seven-day work week

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to repeal the Blue Law and allow Sunday shopping needs to protect family life and shouldn't allow seven-day work weeks, Gov. Mark White says.

"That's one of the things I've been saying all along I wanted that Legislature to consider — the fact that workers have families and they should be given time with their families," White said.

The House has approved a bill to repeal the Blue Law and allow Sunday sales for all but automobile dealers. The legislation has been endorsed by the Senate State Affairs Committee and could be debated by senators next week.

Without specifically threatening a veto, White said he is studying the bill to make certain seven-day work weeks aren't allowed.

"We must make some protection for individuals to have time for their homes, their families," White told his weekly news conference Thursday.

"We don't want to do anything at the state level that would help speed up the loss of that family unit or support for our children. That's one of the biggest problems we face in Texas today, in the nation. Many of the problems we have in that prison, in schools, is the fact that we have families that are not as strong a unit as they once were."

Backers of the repeal bill say it includes provisions to allow time off for religious worship and to protect workers against having to work seven days a week.

"I like that," the governor said. "If you force somebody to work seven days a week, you have a very severe problem."

White also said he hasn't yet decided whether to sign into law a bill that would triple tuition at state colleges and universities, effective this fall.

The bill, designed to raise about $275 million more for state government over the next two years, has passed both the House and Senate. Lawmakers say it is needed to help balance the state's 1986-87 budget.

Before he decides whether to sign it, White said, he wants to make certain the legislation will enable poor students to obtain financial aid to get a college degree.

"I am reviewing it right now to see the full implications of that, to make certain that every child who is otherwise qualified will not be deprived of the right to an education for lack of money," White said.

Bill makes gun control state, not local prerogative

AUSTIN (AP) — A self-proclaimed law-and-order senator has won tentative approval of a bill that would "make clear" that the Legislature, and not local communities, should determine whether Texans can own guns.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said his bill was filed as a result of what "has happened in other states, where cities have passed ordinances that prohibit ownership of guns."

"I think that's contrary to the Texas attitude," Brown told reporters Thursday. "This bill would make sure that if that's ever going to happen in Texas, it would have to happen right here in the Legislature."

Brown's proposal was tentatively approved 20-11 but senators balked at final passage Thursday.

Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said "several senators indicated they would vote for final passage but wanted to look at it again" before sending the measure to the House.

Senators questioned whether Brown's bill would override zoning ordinances and would leave cities at the mercy of rioters, and several amendments were added.

One by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, spells out that cities can regulate "possession and use" of guns in emergencies "to protect the public safety."

Parmer mentioned "riots, insurrections, teen-age gang violence, racial violence," and added, "I don't want to take away any city's ability to regulate emergencies."

"We're putting police and public safety officers in even graver danger during riots or social upheaval" without a provision to control guns in emergencies, Parmer said.

An amendment by Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, would authorize cities to prohibit the discharge of firearms within city limits and would regulate "the use of property under its zoning authority."

Yet another amendment, by Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, deleted a provision that any municipal ordinance now in effect that conflicts with the bill would be void.

Without his amendment, Glasgow said, if some "right-wing crazy" was locked up for shooting dogs, "the case would be gone."

"I want cities to have the authority to regulate who shoots guns in residential areas," said Glasgow.

A motion to table Glasgow's amendment failed 15-16, and the amendment was approved 18-13.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved and sent to the House proposals that would:

— Extend the life of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

— Direct state agencies to establish programs to make the public aware of the benefits of cleaning up litter on Texas beaches.

— Specify that failure to renew a teacher's contract must be based on the recommendation of the school district's administrator, professional personnel and "valid" educational criteria.

— Exempt from jury duty for a year a person who has served on a jury for at least five days.

— Establish fees for misdemeanor and felony drug offense convictions.

— Authorize the state health commissioner to close waters containing contaminated finfish to fishing.

Houston narcotics officers arrest 'bootlegging' granny

HOUSTON (AP) — A 75-year-old great-grandmother has been accused of illegally trading prescription pills and alcohol for food stamps, narcotics agents say.

Sally Evans, who claims she has 22 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren, was arrested Thursday at her home after deputies confiscated about 4,000 pills and three refrigerators full of beer, wine, vodka, whiskey and gin, said Sgt. Bill Kessler of the Harris County sheriff's department.

Ms. Evans had been selling the contraband to "kids, juveniles, whoever" in the neighborhood, Kessler said.

"They were trading food stamps for pills and liquor. It was quite an elaborate boot-legging operation for a 75-year-old woman," he said.

Ms. Evans was charged with possessing and selling controlled substances, possessing alcohol with intent to sell it without a a license and with selling alcohol without a license. Bond was set at $13,600.

When Ms. Evans was arrested, she had about "300 Valiums and several hundred dollars" in her pockets, Kessler said. Investigators also seized a variety of pills, a rifle, a shotgun, a pistol, marijuana, about $4,000 cash and $800 in food stamps during the raid, Kessler said.

"She's not your typical grandmother," he said.

Investigators were tipped about the operation two weeks ago through the local Crime Stoppers program, Kessler said.

Kessler said investigators found more than 20 varities of pills in 500- to 1,000-unit containers.

"It could be stolen or from an illegitimate market somewhere," he said.

Border controversy plagues small town in Oregon

By JEFF BARNARD

NEW PINE CREEK, Ore. (AP) — Pat Burkett, who used to live in San Jose, doesn't want to be a Californian again.

Eddie Fisher, who retired as a Hollywood special effects man, says his property taxes will be lower if New Pine Creek becomes part of California, but he doesn't really care.

Mrs. Burkett and Fisher are among the 300 Oregon residents who would become instant Californians if the Golden State succeeds in having the border moved about a half-mile north to the 42nd parallel.

"They're getting greedy down there," Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh has said. "They've got all the California coast, and now they want a little chunk of Oregon."

Preliminary studies indicate that, as the result of an 1870 surveying error, Oregon has about 31,000 acres of California, while California has about 20,000 acres of Oregon.

California sent a delegation to Salem, Oregon's capital, in December to discuss the border issue, but officials said settlement of the boundary question could be several years away.

No one is affected more directly than the residents of New Pine Creek, the only community to straddle the Oregon-California border.

Last winter, Mrs. Burkett's patience ran out after a stream of television news crews came into her Stateline General Store on the Oregon side seeking an interview on the border controversy.

"I bodily threw them out," said Mrs. Burkett, who moved to Oregon three years ago. "What angers me is the animosity the press has created between the Californians and the Oregonians. It wasn't there and the press has done it."

"Most of the people here are satisfied with the way it is," said the Rev. Frank Reedze, pastor of the First Baptist Church. "It would cause a lot of heartbreak."

If the border were adjusted, Reedze could move back to the church parsonage, which is on the Oregon side. He moved to the California side of town so his son could attend seventh grade at the Stateline School rather than ride a bus 14 miles north to Lakeview.

The border dispute has its roots in the survey done by Daniel Major, who passed through Goose Lake Valley in 1868.

Joseph Ross was the only settler. He had a place on what was then defined as the California side.John O'Neill, who ran a pack train for the Army, settled on the Oregon side in 1869, the year the survey reached the Pacific.

In 1901, residents rejected changing the name to Orcal to commemorate the fact the town straddled the border.

During California's last gold rush in 1918, the town's population swelled to 5,000. There were seven bars, all on the California side, since Oregon was dry. Wendt's Opera House showed silent movies.

Today, all the bars are closed, and residents rely on television satellite dishes for entertainment. Many old buildings are boarded up. Cattle and hay ranching support the local economy.

Until 1976, no one really cared where the border ran. That's when Bud Uzes, a boundary official for the state of California, started researching a book on the boundary.

The 42nd parallel has served as a boundary since 1819, when it was cited in a territorial treaty between the United States and Spain. At that time Spain held California and the United States had what was to become Oregon.

When Major traced the 42nd parallel, he took astronomical readings with a sextant only three times, said Uzes. As a result, he wavered back and forth across the true line as he made his way west from the 120th meridian to the Pacific Ocean.

Uzes didn't pursue the boundary matter immediately, because California was waging battle in the U.S. Supreme Court over its border with Nevada, claiming that part of Nevada north of Lake Tahoe was actually California's. But once that issue was settled — the justices decided to let the line stand — California looked at its northern boundary.

"I sort of woke up one day and somebody called us from California and said, 'Gee whiz, we're going to sue you,'" said Ed Zajonc, director of Oregon's State Lands Division. "I said, 'I beg your pardon?' And they said, 'The boundary is off.' At first I thought it was some kind of a joke. Then I thought it was ludicrous."

Two months later, the California delegation visited Salem.

Meanwhile, the California Attorney General's office has recommended taking the issue to the U.S. Supreme Court, which handles border disputes between the states.

Radios way of life in Beirut

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — You really need a radio in Beirut. It helps keeps you alive.

As disc jockeys elsewhere give reports on traffic and the weather, here they constantly warn the city's 800,000 people about falling artillery shells, where the snipers are shooting, which areas to avoid because of kidnappings.

The war's never far away in this city once called the Paris of the Middle East.

Exploding shells keep you awake at night. During the day, if you manage to make it to the office, you sit at your desk listening to the crackle of gunfire down the block.

After 10 years of civil war the name of the game is coping — and keeping your head down.

Somehow things continue to function, but street crime has become an epidemic.

Nobody walks around with more money than is necessary for the outing. Everyone's fair game for gunmen, who also steal cars, loot apartments and take over others to live in. They clean out banks and jewelry stores and run protection rackets. If a shopkeeper stops paying, the shop gets blown up.

Calling the police won't help — if you can find a telephone that works.

The 2,000-man force is vastly outgunned by the armed militias who are the real rulers. Each militia has its own fiefdom.

The other day during a shootout between rival gunmen, a man called the police to find out what was going on. The police telephone didn't answer.

But he wasn't totally put out at finding no policemen on duty. The phone did work after all.

The fire department also has its problems: In the Kharroub region south of Beirut, buildings smouldered for days after Druse militiamen stormed Christian villages. No one bothered to try to put out the flames.

Electricity is an on-off thing. As often as not, whole districts are blacked out because the citizenry throws garbage bags from apartment windows into the street, usually shorting out overhead wires.

Lawlessness extends to officials at the airport who look the other way if bribed as well as to householders who illegally hook into power lines to get free electricity.

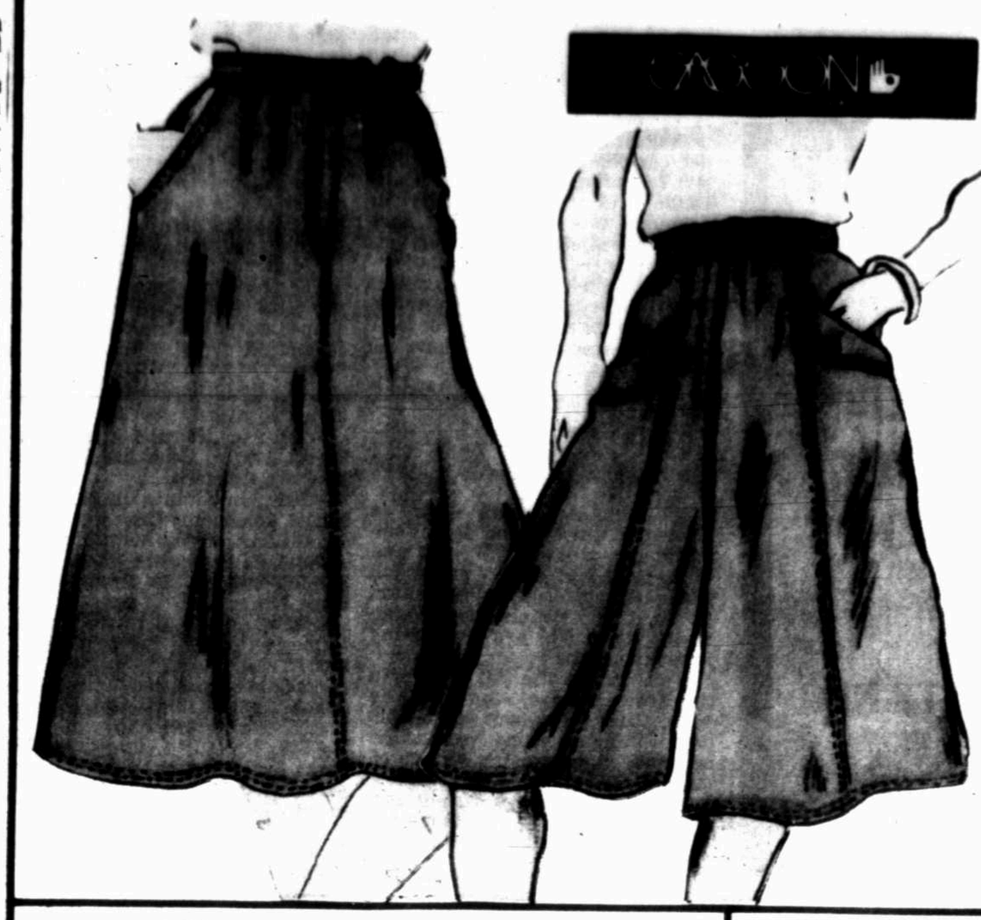

Car insurance is out of the question. Drivers involved in an accident more than likely will start shooting at each other.

Just about everyone carries a pistol.

Parking can be a problem. Everyone's worried about car bombs that have killed hundreds. Suspicious militiamen sometimes take strange unattended cars apart to make sure they're not carrying explosives.

Forget about taking the bus or train to work. Most of them have been used for barricades to block sniper fire at intersections between rival districts.

'Mission accomplished' in Europe

By CLIFF HAAS

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Reagan ended his symbol-laden, four-nation trek through Europe today declaring "mission accomplished," and said the United States must consider whether to continue observing a nuclear arms agreement with the Soviet Union.

Reagan, questioned about continued compliance with the unratified SALT agreement with the Soviet Union, said: "There's considerable evidence now that that has been rather one-sided. If it has been, then there's no need for us to continue."

"We have tried on what seemed to be a verbal agreement between ourselves and the Soviet Union for some time that even though we have not ratified that treaty...that we would both seek to abide by the terms," Reagan said.

Speaking to reporters before departing, Reagan said the United States will make a decision "down the road" on whether to continue observing the strategic arms limitation agreement.

When a decision is made, he said, "we'll do it openly and...with full knowledge of the Soviet Union."

Reagan held a departure news conference in front of Queluz Palace. He stood outside on a bright, cloudless day with the palace's manicured gardens behind him.

The president viewed some of the palace's horses before boarding Air Force One for the trip back to Washington.

"We're leaving today with our Atlantic ties strengthened and we're returning home mission accomplished," he said.

"It's been a long, historic and thoroughly worthwhile trip," Reagan said.

Answering questions, Reagan noted his invitation to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and said Gorbachev's recent tough talk hasn't changed his mind about a meeting.

"I think there'd be a lot to talk about and I just happen to believe it's time we started talking to each other and not about each other," he said. As for Gorbachev's harsh talk, he said, "What's new about that?"

Reagan said "we have no confirmation yet Mr. Gorbachev is coming" to the United Nations later this year but added, "The word probable is about the best way to describe it."

He said his invitation for a meeting "still goes, so the ball is in his court."

Meanwhile, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said in an interview with The New York Times that despite the tough talk there "probably" would be a summit meeting between the two.

"These leaders are positioning themselves with their own people," Regan said. "Gorbachev recognizes he has to have the Eastern bloc behind him. He is not known as the leader of the Eastern bloc yet. He's getting there."

JAIL

The Commissioners' Court is divided on the jail bond issue. Commissioners Durward Wright and Win Brown and County Judge Bill Ahders are promoting Proposition No. 2; Commissioners Scott Welch and Wally Craig are supporting Proposition No. 1.

Welch wants the jail to remain downtown; Craig, who says the county does need a new jail, is leaning toward Proposition No. 1, since he thinks it has a better chance of passing the voters' scrutiny than does Proposition No. 2. Wright and Craig indicated they would vote for both propositions in hopes that at least one would pass.

The Concerned Citizens Committee, led by businessman Bill Williams, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, are endorsing Proposition 1. The essence of that proposition was recommended by the Chamber's Jail Task Force, headed by banker Wayne Merritt.

Painter said he favors keeping the jail directly linked to the courthouse. He suggested the commissioners reconsider a 1983 plan to build a courthouse addition and jail on the courthouse square and to join the old jail with the new.

Brown, however, noted that the proposal was rejected by a 4-to-1 ratio by the voters in 1983. Afterward, the commissioners "junked" the plans and then launched an "exhaustive" study which resulted in the proposed jail represented by Proposition No. 2.

Brown has accused former commissioner Charlie Welch of undermining — for political reasons — the commissioners' efforts to build a new jail without submitting those plans to a vote of the people. In 1984, the commissioners had planned to fund the $8.4 million jail by issuing certificates of obligation, which do not require voter approval. However, the plan was squashed by the Concerned Citizens Committee, of which Welch is a member.

Brown says county taxes, now at 16.5 cents per $100 valuation, would be increased by 12 to 15 percent were either proposition to pass. The difference would be the time to pay off the indebtedness: 15 years for Proposition 2 and less than five years for Proposition 1.

Should both propositions pass by majority votes, the Midland County Commissioners' Court, which mostly favors a new jail, would decide which proposition to implement. Should both fail, the sheriff would continue to transfer excess inmates to other county jails at taxpayers' expense.

This week, 54,811 Midlanders are registered to vote in the election. Of those, 1,017 or 1.85 percent voted absentee.

Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. Polling places by commissioners' precincts and voting precincts follow:

Christian Science lecture scheduled

Waldman

"Life is not some giant lottery," says Fay Mckenzie Waldman of California. "We just don't have to go along with the thinking that says we live in a lawless universe, subject to risk and chance."

Mrs. Waldman will speak on the theme "God's Law, Not Chance, Governs" at 8 p.m. today at the Christian Science Church, 1001 W. Tennessee Ave.

Several years ago, she left a busy acting career to devote her full time to the Christian healing ministry as a Christian Science practitioner, and she draws on a variety of healing experiences to develop her message. Her interpretation of the Bible; and the teachings and works of Christ Jesus provide the basis for lecture.

In her lecture, Mrs. Waldman stresses the effect of thinking on our lives. But she says she is not an advocate of "positive thinking." On the contrary, she says simply thinking "nice" thoughts isn't sufficient to overcome the immorality, ill-health, and general evil that face so many people in the round of daily living.

Her visit is sponsored by First Church of, Christ, Scientist, Midland, and is open to the public. Free care for small children will be provided by local church members.

Police question two men in Austin slaying

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police questioned two men today in connection with the slaying of an Asian man and the wounding of three others.

The men were taken into custody late Thursday at the apartment complex where the shooting took place Wednesday, Charles Peters, a police spokesman said.

Questioning of the men posed problems for Austin officers, Peters said.

"We have a little bit of a communications barrier. They don't speak English. We don't speak Vietnamese," he said.

Investigators would continue questioning the suspects to determine if they were those wanted, he added. If they were found to be the suspects, they would be held without bond, he said.

STATE

Warrants charged capital murder naming Canh Nguyen, also known as Johnny Nguyen, no age available, and a man going by the alias Hoang Doai, 23, whose real first name was Tuan but whose last name was unknown, were issued by Municipal Court Judge Wilfred Aguilar.

The judge said the third warrant was for a man in his early 20s whose identity was unknown.

"It looks as if the suspects had lived there with the victims but were thrown out for not paying their share of the rent," said homicide Lt. Jim Baker.

The victims included six people who were in the North Austin apartment Wednesday night when a gunman forced his way into the second-story unit.

The suspects were three Oriental men who apparently fled in a car owned by one of the apartment occupants, according to police spokesman C.F. Adams. The car turned up in the apartment complex parking lot Thursday morning.

Police happened on three rifles wrapped in a bedsheet after an Oriental man drove out of the lot Thursday. The guns, believed to have been owned by the victims, were found in the spot where the car driven by the unidentified man had been parked.

Austin police identified the dead man as Ba Ngoe Bui, 29, who died at Brackenridge Hospital of gunshot wounds.

Chickens serve as guinea pigs in sleeping sickness experiment

DALLAS (AP) — City and county health officials who want to check for disease-carrying mosquitoes say they are using 200 White Leghorn hens as guinea pigs in the experiments.

Researchers said that chickens are a favorite target of mosquitoes, which carry St. Louis encephalitis, also known as sleeping sickness.

The chickens will be monitored for the debilitating and sometimes fatal disease through monthly blood samples by health officials.

Workers will spray mosquito breeding grounds — riverbeds and ponds — with larvicide and insecticide fog if the disease is detected.

"This is definitely the time to put those sentry chickens out there," county health department administrator Robert Hohman said. "It's been a heavy rain season, and there should be a heavier stock of mosquitoes than usual in the area."

Health officials said the hens have been Dallas County's guinea pigs for more than 30 years. They helped detect the area's largest encephalitis outbreak in 1966.

Home buyers saddled with builder's bills

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston-based builder has been unresponsive to claims by home buyers who were saddled with liens and bills for supplies and home repairs when the company stopped work, the homeowners say.

Several subcontractors and suppliers have filed liens against homeowners to collect money owed by Genex Homes, which stopped construction in at least three Dallas-Fort Worth neighborhoods.

Other Genex homeowners said they have had trouble getting the company to make warranty repairs. Telephones at the company's headquarters were not answered late Thursday.

"Being my first home, I thought it was going to be a real good experience, but I've been real disappointed since I moved in," homeowner Robert Benford said, adding his roof now leaks and water pipes are faulty.

Benford and other homeowners in southwest Dallas met to form a neighborhood association Wednesday. He said the group plans to send complaint forms to the Texas attorney general's office and the Federal Trade Commission.

The company has closed sales offices and pulled construction crews from new housing sites, homeowners said.

Benford, who moved into his house last June, said Genex has not reimbursed him for the plumbing work to fix his pipes.

Pat Halyard, another homeowner, said a plumber had put a $650 lien on her house because Genex failed to pay for repairs it had requested.

"One of the most attractive selling points was that warranty," said Ms. Halyard. "Genex is just not paying their bills. It's frustrating. We're not sure what's going to happen."

The company builds homes in Houston, San Antonio, and in nine Dallas-Fort Worth neighborhoods for prices ranging from $60,000 to the upper $90,000s.

Senate votes to end newspaper sales tax

Nacogdoches Sen. Roy Blake's bill was sent to the House on voice vote.

Newspaper sales were included under the sales tax from 1961 until 1977. Then, with the support of State Comptroller Bob Bullock, the tax was repealed. During last summer's special session, the sales tax exemption on newspaper sales was removed.

At a Senate committee hearing in late March, deputy comptroller Claudia Stravato said most newspaper sales are made through independent contractors, including some 30,000 youthful carriers, and the tax "is impossible to administer and enforce equally."

House tentatively OKs right-to-death bill

AUSTIN (AP) — House members will have one more vote next week on a bill that would let relatives or friends of a terminally-ill patient stop life-sustaining machines.

The measure was temporarily approved 75-61 Thursday.

"There is great recognition now that medical technology is such it can prolong life under the most gruesome circumstances," said Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman. "The medical profession now is totally supportive of laws that give other persons the right to make the decision."

Rep. Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, said present law was "a good delicate balance," and tried to table Bush's bill. His motion failed 60-74.

Texas' 1977 Natural Death Act allows a patient to direct in a written document that their life not be artificially prolonged if they become terminally ill.

"This act is strictly limited and mostly unworkable," Bush said.

His bill, supported by the Texas Medical Association and the Texas Hospital Association, would let a terminally-ill adult person designate another person, either in writing or verbally, to make the decision if the patient was comatose or incompetent. The directive would have to be witnessed by two persons who are not relatives, beneficiaries of any will or medical personnel.

If a patient made no directive, the decision could be made by two people — the patient's spouse and an adult child, parent or relative.

Bush stressed that no decision could be made until at least two physicians declared the patient terminally ill.

The bill says life-sustaining procedures could not be withdrawn from a pregnant woman.

"This is limiting the protection we have now in the law on pulling the plug," Roberts said.

"This bill is part of an evolution," Bush said. "The situation has become more complicated. Medical technology has made it possible for a body to exist in a state of death virtually indefinitely."

In other action Thursday, the House approved on voice vote a Senate amendment made to a bill that puts intrastate telephone calls under the state sales tax and sent the measure to the governor.

Lawmaker wants 'Sick Tax Bill' probed

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas lawmaker has asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to investigate a political mailing designed to look like a state tax bill.

Texans Against the Sick Tax sent out about 40,000 copies of the mailing as part of its effort against a proposal to tax private hospitals to pay for health care for the poor.

The mailing says "Your State of Texas Sick Tax Bill" and "Official Information." It carries a seal similar to the state seal.

Inside, the mailing told Texans about the proposal and asked them to contact their legislators.

"The unmistakable intent was to simulate an official document for the purpose of frightening older people. They succeeded, and I'm angry," Rep. Jesse Oliver, D-Dallas, said in his Thursday letter to Mattox.

The mailing was sent out by Grassroots Texas, an Austin-based company that was hired by the Texans Against the Sick Tax — whose membership includes the Texas Hospital Association.

House Public Health Committee Chairman Brad Wright, R-Houston, said THA's lobbying tactics this year have been "reprehensible."

"They have shown they do not have the interests of the health care consumers of Texas at heart, but they have the interests of the few special interests hospitals at heart," said Wright.

Charles Stuart, THA vice president for government relations, said, "I hope there haven't been any misunderstandings. There may have been."

"The mailing did not come from the THA," he said, adding that the group is a member of the organization that arranged it.

The Gray Panthers, a lobby group for older Texans, said its investigation showed the return address listed on the mailing is a post office box rented to a THA official.

"It was designed to get people's attention," said Bill Miller, director of Grassroots Texas.

Court hears Merkt's plea for reversal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel has heard a plea to reverse the conviction of Stacey Lynn Merkt, a halfway house worker facing a six-month prison sentence for transporting illegal aliens into the United States.

There was no indication when a ruling would be issued by the three-judge panel, which heard arguments from Ms. Merkt's lawyers on Thursday.

Ms. Merkt, a 30-year-old volunteer at the church-supported Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito, near Harlingen, has said that she considers helping illegal aliens into this country to be her religious obligation.

She was recently sentenced to six months in prison, plus a separate 90-day sentence for breaking probation on a similar conviction nine months earlier.

In a friend-of-the-court brief, the National Council of Churches and five other church organizations said Ms. Merkt was only following her religious beliefs, and the case set up "a confrontation between secular authority and religious obligation."

"Stacey Merkt, in assisting these Salvadoran refugees, was living her religious principles," the brief said.

Dennis Riordan, a San Francisco lawyer for Ms. Merkt, spent most of his argument on a claim that she "had a sincere belief" that the two aliens had a legal right to wade the Rio Grande River and enter the United States, and therefore she had no intent to commit a crime.

Her intent, he said, was to assist them in filing for political asylum.

"There is no crime unless she transported them for the specific purpose of bringing them in illegally," he added.

Riordan said Ms. Merkt did not take the two San Salvador citizens to the Immigration and Naturalization Service center in Harlingen, though she passed by it, because she wanted to take them to the INS center in San Antonio, where the director was considered much more sympathetic.

Ms. Merkt was driving the two Salvadorans on a 290-mile back-roads route from San Benito to San Antonio when she was stopped on Highway 649, 20 miles east of the border.

Dan Hodges, a Houston lawyer acting for the Department of Justice, argued that no one could be allowed to choose which INS center they like best, because if the courts allow this as a defense in illegal alien prosecutions, none of the cases could be won.

Anyone caught transporting illegal aliens could simply claim they were being taken to an INS center up the road somewhere, he said.

"Once you make exceptions, how do you put limits on those exceptions?" he asked.

Furthermore, Hodges said, if illegal entries are made easy, there is no longer any incentive to seek entry legally.

Senate OKs health facilities commission

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has breathed life into the Texas Health Facilities Commission, but the 10-year-old agency still faces a possibly hostile state House of Representatives.

Senators voted Thursday to continue the three-member commission despite claims by opponents that its refusal to authorize the building of more hospitals is costing lives.

The Senate bill was approved on a 24-7 vote, but the measure still must clear the House, which has deleted funding for the commission from its proposed two-year state budget. The Senate voted to fund the agency, and the separate budget proposals will be resolved by a House-Senate conference committee.

"Without a doubt, this agency is costing the lives of little children," said Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite.

Lyon said Rockwall, "25 minutes from Dallas," does not have a hospital because the commission will not grant a certificate to build one, and children there who needed emergency hospital care have died.

"I'm mad at this bill, and I'm mad at the people who won't let us put a hospital there," said Lyon.

The commission was touted by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, "as the single most effective tool the state has to hold down health costs."

He said Arizona abolished a similar certification process, and health care costs quadrupled within a year.

Without continuation of the agency, Edwards said, Texas could lose $70 million in federal funds in October 1986.

Edwards won approval of amendments that would exclude home health agencies from commission review but would subject single pieces of health equipment costing $500,000 or more to review.

"I'm no apologist for this agency," said Edwards, but the bill would get the commission "out of the nit-picking business."

Lyon mentioned $3.4 million in unspecified legal fees, and said, "That's an absurdity."

White urges legislators to approve bills for teachers

AUSTIN (AP) — Proclaiming 1985 "the year of the teacher," Gov. Mark White on Thursday urged legislators to approve four bills he said would make work better for Texas classroom teachers.

White asked lawmakers to quickly pass bills to guarantee a work-free lunch period for teachers, reduce unnecessary paperwork, beef up classroom discipline and provide affordable health insurance for teachers.

"Teachers deserve a time to eat lunch away from the responsibilities of their job," the governor told his weekly news conference. "Duty-free lunch is an idea that is long overdue."

He backed legislation proposed by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, to establish duty-free lunch as a state policy.

White also endorsed a House bill he said will ensure teachers have authority to maintain "effective discipline in the classroom."

White honors high school's academic decathalon team

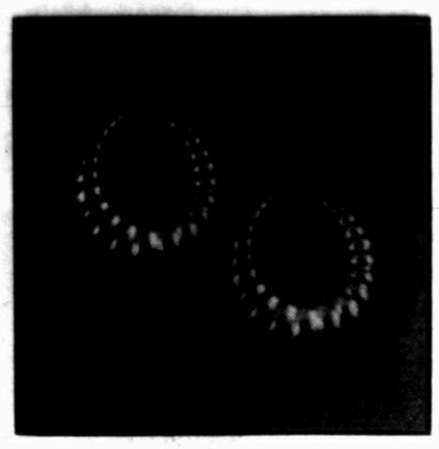

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of Richardson Pearce High School's academic decathlon team were honored Thursday by Gov. Mark White and both houses of the Texas Legislature.

For the second straight year, the Pearce team won the National Academic Decathlon, an academic competition which pits teams from various states against one another in a battle of intellect in 10 categories.

The nine Pearce students competed against finalists from 34 states.

"Recently, there has been much attention focused on the sacrifice and commitment student athletes must make in order to participate in extracurricular activities," White said.

Important vote

Midland voters have faced a number of important election decisions over the past couple of years, but none was more important than Saturday's election when voters will be asked to decide on the future of Midland County Jail.

In a nutshell, voters will have the opportunity to indicate whether they favor a $3 million renovation of the existing jail facility, along with an expansion of Culver Youth Home and a comprehensive study of long-range county jail and courthouse space needs, or a $9.9 million package which would entail construction of a new jail on the city's eastern outskirts and additions to Culver Youth Home, or neither of the two.

The importance of the election cannot be overemphasized for already Midland County taxpayers are "paying" an unseen tax since a number of county jail prisoners are being transported to other areas for detainment. That is the result of a ruling by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards which found the local jail lacking in a number of important areas. Without a doubt, until those shortcomings are addressed the limitation on the county facility's prisoner capacity will not be altered.

So in that sense, at least, there is a mandate to do something about the jail and quickly.

Quite a bit of controversy has been generated over the issue, primarily because neither proposition would totally resolve all problems associated with need for a larger jail that would house current and anticipated jail populations and meet jail standards as well as address crowded conditions in the courthouse. And, not unexpectedly, different people believe that on balance one proposal's merits outweigh those of the other.

The Reporter-Telegram believes Proposition I is the best answer at this time. We do not think it is a total answer or a permanent answer. But neither do we believe its approval would constitute the waste of millions of dollars as some have claimed.

We realize that if it is approved by voters, the study Proposition I authorizes eventually could result in a jail facility recommendation much like the one proposed east of Midland. But, if so, that recommendation would be made in the context of an updated look at all aspects including the long-term total needs of the courts, offices and agencies now located in the courthouse or scattered in annexes. Likewise, the desirability of a downtown location, either at or apart from the current courthouse, would no doubt be thoroughly explored. We believe taxpayers would be more comfortable with recommendations made in that context than they are with Proposition II as it now stands.

Proposition I may well be only the first step in resolving total county needs. For that reason, if approved, its implementation should be made as inexpensively as possible although much of the jail renovation work would be needed if that space is to be utilized in the future for any purpose.

One thing is clear. We must address the jail issue immediately and we must look to addressing the long-term jail and courthouse needs as soon as possible based on the best information we can obtain. We believe Proposition I is the best way to go about both. The Jail Task Force and board of directors of Midland Chamber of Commerce seem to agree.

The really important thing is for Midland County residents to vote Saturday. Hopefully, it is a good sign that more than twice as many absentee ballots were cast this year than in 1983, the last time citizens voted on the jail issue.

The implications and potential results of this election are too great to be determined by a relative handful of voters.

CHARLEY REESE

'Lesson' of Vietnam forgotten

This has been the month for the lessons of the Vietnam War. So far I have not seen anyone mention the single most important lesson that war should have taught us: that you cannot win a war if you allow the enemy to operate uncontested on the home front.

Charley Reese

The Vietnam War was lost in the United States, not in Vietnam. In Vietnam, the U.S. military won every battle it fought. There had never been a question in the minds of the North Vietnamese leaders, who were realists, that the U.S. would prevail on the battlefield. Militarily it was an unequal contest.

The communist strategy was simply to destroy the United States' will to use its power. This is where they succeeded by utilizing communists and leftists in the United States to wage a psychological war.

For some reason there is an unwillingness in America, particularly in the press, to acknowledge the obvious truth that there is a communist infrastructure in the United States. Its job is to support communist soldiers wherever they may be engaged.

Any reasonable person can see that the wars in El Salvador and Nicaragua are being decided here in the United States, just as in the case of Vietnam. Again, the communist goal is the same: to prevent the United States from using its power effectively.

The psychological and propaganda war being waged in behalf of the communists in El Salvador and Nicaragua is virtually identical to the campaign they waged in behalf of the North Vietnamese.

These are the points being sold and you can see the similarity: (1) The communists are the good guys and their opponents are corrupt criminals; (2) Victory by the communists is inevitable; (3) The U.S. goal must be peace, not victory; (4) The U.S. must not use military power to overcome people who are using military power to pursue their goals; and (5) The American intelligence and counter-intelligence agencies are the villains, not the communists.

How can Democrats in the House and Senate demand that the democratically elected government of El Salvador must negotiate with communist rebels but the communist government in Nicaragua need not negotiate with democratic rebels? How can they insist on elections in El Salvador but not in Nicaragua?

How can any American seriously charge that the FBI is abusing people's civil rights simply by questioning less than 100 of the several thousand American leftists traveling in Nicaragua? Implicit in this attack on the FBI is the same package of false assumptions so effectively used in the Vietnam era: (1) All Americans who support the communist government in Nicaragua are loyal, freedom-loving Americans who simply disagree with their government's policy; and (2) All efforts by the FBI to exercise its role as a counter-intelligence agency are simply an unconstitutional attempt to harrass political opponents of the Reagan administration.

This duo of duplicitous assumptions serves the purpose of attacking those who defend liberty while protecting those who are in the service of totalitarianism.

We have to distinguish between those Americans who have an honest difference of opinion about government policy and those who are working in behalf of totalitarianism. It is not as difficult as you might think.

How many times does a pattern involving virtually the same people and the same tactics have to repeat itself before the American people wake up? You find the same people and the same organizations which defended the North Vietnamese now defending the guerrillas in El Salvador and the communists in Managua. As during the Vietnam War, you can observe that these people question every statement by the U.S. Government, but accept every statement by the communists. You can observe them impugning the motives of the U.S. Government but asserting the integrity of the communists. You can observe them asserting the innocence of American leftists and the guilt of the FBI and the CIA.

The modern traitor wraps himself in the flag and the Constitution. He wouldn't be of any use if he announced himself as a traitor. But there is nothing in the Bill of Rights which requires that the United States shall commit suicide.

It does no good to oppose communists in foreign countries with military means if you are going to allow communists in the United States a free hand to disrupt and discredit U.S. policy. That's one lesson we had better learn quick.

Oman contract threatens security

WASHINGTON — A hush-hush Pentagon contract involving U.S. military bases in the strategic sultanate of Oman has become a bit of a sticky wicket, thanks to the influence of British advisers to the country's ruler, Sultan Qabus bin Said.

Jack Anderson

As we reported earlier, the British persuaded the sultan to insist that the contract for maintenance and operation of the bases be awarded to a British company, Airwork Ltd.

Even though Airwork has agreed to take an American firm as partner in the contract, security-minded U.S. officials are leery of giving foreigners access to the extremely sensitive equipment that will be positioned in Oman. They remember the damage done in the past by the likes of Klaus Fuchs and Kim Philby, who had the highest British security clearance while they spied for the Soviets.

Are the Oman bases worth all the concern? You bet they are.

One of the installations, at Al Khasab, forms the southern wedge of the strategic bottleneck known as the Strait of Hormuz, through which most of the oil from the Persian Gulf is carried to the Western world. From Al Khasab, it is just 24 miles across to Iran.

The most important of the four bases is on Masirah Island. It is being built up as an airfield and staging area for use by the U.S. rapid deployment force in the event of a crisis in this vital area.

"Omani facilities could be very important for sea control and support of naval forces, and could serve as staging bases for land-based tactical fighter and mine countermeasure operations to protect the Strait of Hormuz and the Arabian Sea," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger explained in a secret report.

The report didn't even mention the highly sensitive communications facility the Air Force plans to build on the island. Its top-secret code machines and other equipment will provide instantaneous communication with Ninth Air Force headquarters in South Carolina, as well as other U.S. military facilities and orbiting satellites.

The importance of such a sophisticated communications base was illustrated by its absence during the 1980 attempt to rescue the hostages in Tehran. The rescue team had to rely on airborne command posts and other radio transmissions that were intercepted even by ham-radio operators in the area.

Obviously, anyone with access to the Masirah Island communications would know the condition, readiness and placement of U.S. military forces in the area at any given time — including AWACs planes on surveillance patrols. Such information could be devastating if it fell into the wrong hands — such as arms smugglers or terrorists — or a country targeted for U.S. military action.

The civilian contractor charged with maintaining the communications base — no American military personnel are allowed to be stationed there permanently — "is expected to receive messages from the Air Force from time to time telling him to break out certain of the assets and make them ready for the U.S. military forces," a source explained. By assets he meant tanks, trucks, planes, ammunition and other hardware stored at the Omani bases.

"Such a message could indicate either an exercise in a war game or it could indicate a serious deployment given an incident," the source said. "That information should not be available to anyone who does not possess the required clearances and a need to know."

In fact, the security precautions are not merely theoretical. The Pentagon is already using Omani bases, but keeping it quiet lest the friendly sultan suffer the fate that befell a previous U.S. ally, the shah of Iran. Four different military exercises have been conducted from the Omani bases, and Navy P-3 Orion anti-submarine spotters fly out of Masirah. Oman was also the secret staging area for the aborted hostage rescue mission.

A CHANGED MAN: Dennis Banks, who earned his reputation — and a prison sentence — as a hothead of the American Indian Movement, is winning a new nickname: St. Dennis. Banks, who is serving a three-year sentence for assault and inciting a riot before the 1973 Indian takeover of Wounded Knee, has emerged as a leader respected by inmates and staff alike at the South Dakota state penitentiary in Springfield. He had been a fugitive until last October.

A few weeks ago, after a tornado destroyed homes and farms in the area, Banks was among the first to volunteer for cleanup work. He has also been instrumental in having a traditional Indian "sweat lodge" built at the minimum-security facility.

But the incident that drew near-veneration from Indian prisoners ocurred when he was still at the main prison in Sioux Falls last Christmas Eve. A young Indian prisoner had a hysterical fit and screamed that he was going to kill himself. He called repeatedly for "Mr. Banks."

Another View:

Helping Ethiopia

The Ethiopian government's latest contribution to the welfare of the Ethiopian people is a forced evacuation of some 50,000 people from a refugee feeding camp, ostensibly to resume a normal life in their home villages.

The resulting international outcry forced the country's leader, Mengistu Haile Mariam, to disavow the action.

The sequence underlines the continuing tensions between Marxist-led Ethiopia and the democratic nations supporting it, and the difficult new stage of the country's ordeal.

In Ethiopia, the West has made possible a relief effort of nation-saving dimensions. For Ethiopia's rulers, it is a great embarrassment to need help from countries they profess to abhor, to suffer the interventions the donors rightly insist on in order to bring mercy and to have to accept criticism of the regime's policies that caused or aggravated the crisis.

Among the donors the thought regularly stirs of whether it is worth providing help that saves lives, but also props up a squalid and hostile regime, one that has countenanced massive suffering — especially in rebel-held areas — to stay in power.

The very success of relief may be sharpening these tensions. The camps offer refuge but also spread disease and dependency: they are not for all time.

Meanwhile, foreign donors, through their efforts, have created a possibility of starting to move people back to their old villages, or to new villages. But the donors are ill-prepared for this necessary next phase.

For instance, American law permits only relief, not rehabilitation, in countries such as Ethiopia, with which the United States has unresolved property and debt disputes: grain for bread, yes, grain for seed, no.

In all the donor countries the compassion that sustained the rescue of stricken children diffuses as families, saved, trickle back to the land. Development was faring poorly before the present drought-plus-mismanagement crisis.

Few in the West think it makes economic sense, let alone political sense, to rebuild the country the Marxist leadership's way.

There is no clear path through these difficulties, but it helps to keep in mind what the West's priorities should be: 1) to save lives; 2) to ease the political disputes between Ethiopia and some of its neighbors that generate refugees; and 3) to let Ethiopia, for its rehabilitation, move out of the charity ward, back into the realm of the international-development institutions.

Chamber backs No. 1

The Midland Chamber of Commerce, acting at the request of both the Midland County Commissioners Court and the Committee of Concerned Citizens, appointed a 13-member task force this past January to study the Midland County jail situation. The task force represented a broad range of interested citizens, including two representatives from the Midland County Commissioners' Court and two representatives from the Committee of Concerned Citizens.

The charge to this "blue ribbon" panel was to both study the jail in light of current and future community needs and requirements imposed by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and to develop a recommendation which might encourage voter approval. The task force, under the leadership of Wayne Merritt, made a very thorough study of the situation and developed a broad-based recommendation which was received and endorsed by the chamber board of directors on March 21, 1985. In its recommendation, the task force, while readily acknowledging the need for a new or improved jail, stated that a "long term solution to all of the County's needs is preferable to more frequent, stop gap measures."

Following the report of the task force, the Midland County Commissioners' Court called a bond election for May 11, 1985, for the purpose of voting on two propositions. Proposition No. 1 asks the voters of Midland County to approve the expenditure of up to $3,000,000 (a) to remedy existing jail deficiencies so as to bring the jail into compliance with the standards of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, and to make certain other repairs to the courthouse; (b) to make federally mandated improvements to Culver Youth Home; and (c) to conduct a comprehensive long-range space need study for the county. Proposition No. 2 asks the voters to approve a $9.9 million bond issue for use in constructing a new facility on the eastern edge of town and to make certain federally mandated improvements to the Culver Youth Home. Proposition No. 2 apparently does not authorize the use of funds to make improvements or repairs to the current courthouse facility.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce board believes that Proposition No. 1 most nearly approximates the recommendation of the task force and, therefore, supports its passage.

The issues to be determined on Saturday are vital to the Midland community. The failure of both Proposition No. 1 and Proposition No. 2 could well result in the closing of the Midland County jail facility and the shipping of prisoners to other facilities at great expense to Midland County. The Midland Chamber of Commerce urges all registered voters in Midland County to take time to vote this coming Saturday on this important issue.

James M. Alsup
President, Midland
Chamber of Commerce

Jail task force urges approval

It is the consensus opinion of the Midland County Jail Task Force that Proposition 1 is the best course of action in addressing the jail/courthouse situation. The task force represented a cross-section of Midlanders who studied the alternatives, weighed the evidence and made a decision.

The easiest decision would have been to recommend the new jail east of Midland, but the group recognized other important needs such as courtrooms, office space, plumbing, electrical work and juvenile detention quarters. Proposition 1 can eliminate deficiencies cited by the jail commission, provide needed repair to the courthouse and organize an overall game plan in providing county government services.

The recommended study is very important because many things have changed since the April 1983, jail bond election. Examples include state and local economies, law changes (DWI), state prison overcrowding and budget problems, new courts for Midland and public attitudes about criminals. Consequently, let's assess our future needs based on the most current information available.

We respectfully recommend Proposition 1.

Wayne Merritt
Task Force Chairman

Jail problem lies in laws

Whether we use the road gangs as suggested by one writer or not, something needs to be done. I do not like my tax money to be spent for luxury living for those in jail.

The pictures of the jail inmates in chains was nothing. Who minds chains when they have all the other things they need. Something is not severe enough or the same ones would not be back again and again in jails and prisons.

Personally, I think it is our laws that are our problem. If a person knew that if he killed he would be killed, if he raped he would be castrated, if he stole he would have to work at minimum wage to pay back all that he stole with interest, our jail population would decrease.

Incidents of malaria on rise in many Third World areas

MANGAPWANGI, Zanzibar (AP) — Brought under control 20 years ago, malaria is on the rise again in many countries of the Third World.

Three million Africans, a third of them children, die of the mosquito-borne disease every year; 2 billion people — 52 percent of the world's population — live in malaria-risk areas in 100 countries, according to the United Nations World Health Organization.

The resurgence of malaria was evident here one recent morning as young men lugging ungainly DDT-spraying cannisters fanned out around the village. They were part of a U.S.-funded project to eradicate the disease that has become the biggest health problem on the two spice islands of Zanzibar, a semi-autonomous part of Tanzania on the African mainland.

Malaria cases increased 40 percent between 1981-82 in Haiti and 29 percent in the Domincan Republic, which share Hispaniola Island in the Caribbean.

While malaria cases dropped significantly in India between 1977 and 1982, cases climbed more than 400 percent in neighboring Pakistan, according to the World Health Organization in Geneva, Switzerland.

Off India's southern tip, Sri Lanka saw malaria reduced in 1963 to just 17 cases — 11 of them newly arrived foreigners — and issued a postage stamp marking the victory over the disease. But Dr. Mohan Rodrigo, deputy director of Sri Lankan health services, said there were 149,000 cases last year.

In Zanzibar, absenteeism due to malaria at schools and workplaces can reach 25 percent following monsoon rains, said Dr. Juma Muchi, the overall anti-malaria program director here. Abu Makame, the island's 36-year-old malaria-control officer, himself contracted the disease.

Official statistics here reflect the roller-coaster ups and downs of the past two decades. The percentage of Zanzibaris having bouts of malaria dropped from nearly 70 percent in 1958 to under 5 percent in 1964.

But last year, the rate was back up to 50 to 60 percent, said Robert L. Turner, 56, and American who is the chief malariololist on the $7.4-million project funded by loans from the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID).

"If Zanzibar's program hadn't been suspended in the 1960s, malaria would now be 98 percent eradicated," said Turner, who has battled the disease in Africa for the World Health Organization and AID after giving up a "just too monotonous" pest control business in Kansas City, Mo.

The U.N. Environment Program blames much of the spread of malaria on improper use of chemicals.

"The massive use of insecticide achieved (results), but, in recent years the mosquitoes have become resistant to the main insecticides used against them, while the parasites themselves have become resistant to many anti-malarial drugs."

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. Lows mid 60s. Wind south 5 to 15 mph. Saturday becoming fair with highs mid 90s. Wind southwest 10 to 20 mph.

Rain may hit area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Rain may dampen the Midland area tonight but skies are expected to clear Saturday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport calls for partly cloudy skies tonight with a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. Tonight's low in the middle 60s is expected to warm to a high in the middle 90s Saturday. Tonight's southerly winds of five to 15 mph will shift to the southwest Saturday at 10 to 20 mph.

Thursday's high of 96 was five degrees below the record set in 1967. This morning's low was 32 degrees above the 1961 record of 40.

STATE

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast today for West Texas as a ridge of high pressure moved eastward ahead of a developing trough of low pressure over New Mexico.

Forecasters say the showers and thunderstorms should spread eastward tonight into western portions of North Central Texas. They warn that some of the showers and thunderstorms may reach severe levels in the Panhandle tonight.

Skies were to be clear to partly cloudy over the rest of the state today, tonight and Saturday.

Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s today, ranging upward to as warm as near 102 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s in the Panhandle and 60s and 70s elsewhere. Highs Saturday will again be in the 80s and 90s.

An area of showers and thunderstorms extended at dawn from the eastern Panhandle through the South Plains to the Edwards Plateau region.

NATION

The East warmed up today and Midwestern thunderstorms weakened but showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the south Atlantic Coast to the central Gulf Coast, through western sections of the Plains and parts of the Rockies.

Showers and thunderstorms scattered from Michigan to Wisconsin were weakening early today after dumping one-inch sized hail on some sections Thursday evening.

Elsewhere, rain spread across northern Maine; strong winds churned dust and sand in the desert of southern California, prompting travelers' advisories; and dense fog blanketed southeastern North Carolina.

O'Grady fires 63

IRVING (AP) — Mac O'Grady invoked the name of Steve Carlton and refused to speak with the press after shooting an 8-under-par 63 that staked him to a one-shot lead in the first round of the $500,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"He pointed out that (Philadelphia Phillies pitcher) Carlton doesn't talk to the press and nobody thinks anything about it," PGA Tour official Tom Place said Thursday after he made a vain effort to induce O'Grady to speak with reporters.

"He said he doesn't have to talk with the press and he doesn't want to," said Place, the information director for the Tour.

Place said O'Grady "apparently was upset" over a magazine article about him last year.

"He said he had been embarassed by the press and had absolutely nothing to say to them," Place said.

J.C. Snead declined an invitation to a mass interview last year, but did talk with reporters on an individual basis.

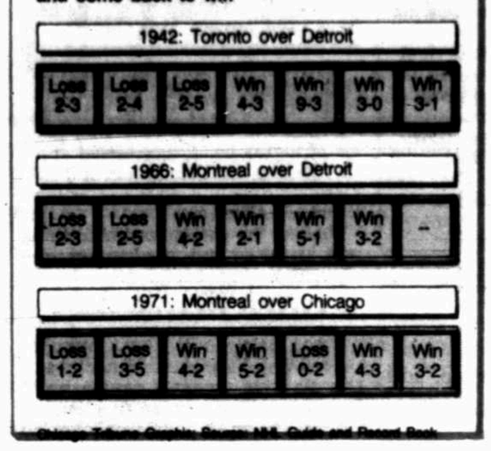

Deane Beman, a former player and now commissioner of the PGA Tour, failed to appear at a press conference at the St. Louis Open in the early 1970s. He said later he was not invited.

Sather raps NHL refs

CHICAGO (AP) — Edmonton Oiler Coach Glen Sather reprimanded the National Hockey League late Thursday "for permitting the referees to allow clutching, tackling and knocking players down that would normally lead to penalties."

Sather, who watched his Oilers lose to the Chicago Black Hawks 5-2 in Game 3 of the Campbell Conference finals, wondered "why coaches stress passing and skating, but once the players get into the playoffs, they have to play a different style of game."

He said he feared "hockey is going back to what it was in the 1950s when players could virtually get away with murder."

The Oiler coach recalled, "that when I was told that the league would relax on its penalty calling, I had to tell my players that they had better be prepared for anything."

The Oilers now hold a 2-1 edge in the series with Game 4 to be played in Chicago on Sunday.

Flyers power past Nordiques, 4-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers were 12th in power plays in the 21-team National Hockey League during the regular season.

So it came as a bit of a surprise when the injury-riddled Flyers scored three goals on six power plays attempts in defeating the Quebec Nordiques 4-2 Thursday night to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Wales Conferece finals.

Nose Dive

San Diego's Tim Flannery does a nose dive into third as Pirates' Jim Morrison applies the tag. Padres won 1-0 over Pittsburgh in National League game at San Diego Thursday.

When Lubbock Monterey scored the winning run with one out in the bottom of the seventh Tuesday at Lowery Field, it put Midland Lee in a no-room-for-error hole. The 3-2 victory gave the Plainsmen a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-three bi-district playoff series with the Rebels.

Lee and Monterey conclude the series Saturday with the if-necessary doubleheader at 1 p.m. at Angel Stadium. If Lee wins the first game, the second will immediately follow with the winner of that game advancing in the playoff bracket. The loser packs his bags away for next year. If Monterey wins the first game, Lee's season is finished.

Over the years, Midland Lee and Lubbock Monterey have met on the baseball diamond more times than Rebel coach Ernie Johnson and Plainsman coach Bobby Moegle care to count. This year, for example, the two teams have already played six games.

IN THE '85 series, which Monterey leads 5-1, neither team has been able to dominate the other. The two squads are so evenly matched that only one game was decided by more than one run, that game being their first meeting in the Tournament of Champions which Monterey won, 9-7.

Tuesday's 3-2 Plainsmen victory was typical of the kind of down-to-the-wire, nail-biting finishes that seem to happen when the two teams meet, meetings which have taken place every year that 24-year coach Johnson has been at Lee.

"We've never missed a year," said Johnson about the games he and his players look forward to at the start of each season. "It gives a chance to play a top-calibre team early in the season and that helps us prepare for district."

Moegle, who has two years seniority on Johnson, considers Lee a "class operation. We've been ranked in the Top 10 all year long and believe Lee should be up there beside us."

And, there is support to his arguement. Of Lee's seven losses this year, six have come at the hands of ranked teams: Four to No. 7 Monterey and two to No. 2 and fellow District 4-5A member Abilene Cooper. The only non-ranked team to get by the Rebels this year was Abilene High.

BUT, POLLS don't really concern Johnson. Awards will come if his team keeps winning.

If Lee is to beat Monterey Saturday, it won't be "doing anything different than Tuesday but we'll hope we can execute better," said Johnson. "We weren't hitting the ball very well. We were looking at the first strike down the middle and then chasing two in the dirt.

"We were outfundamentaled," said Johnson soon after Tuesday's loss and later added, "I guess we got away with a lot early in the game that we shouldn't have. We played a good game except for those mistakes and in any other ball game we might have won."

Statistically, Monterey has the edge in both hitting and pitching categories. The Plainsmen bring a .360 batting average into the game compared to Lee's .316 and the pitching staff has been doing the job to the tune of a 2.39 earned run average to Lee's 2.85.

On the mound, Mike Eckles, 12-0, has been the most effective of a basically two-man rotation. Eckles, the winner Tuesday, has pitched 79⅓ innings, struck out 98 against 31 walks, allowed 57 hits and 18 earned runs for a 1.59 ERA.

The No. 2 man has been Brad Walker, who, in 58⅔ innings, has and a 64-29 K-walk ratio, allowed 47 hits and 29 earned runs for a 3.46 ERA. Walker is expected to get the start in the first game Saturday, Eckles the second.

At the plate, eight starters have .300-plus averages led by Doug Welch with a .444 stick. Mike Gustafson is a point back at .443 and is followed by Eckles (.438), Shane Sayler (.363), James Goolsby (.354), Brian Christiansen (.354), Jimmy Webster (.343) and David Coleman (.301).

Major leaguers granted immunity

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said Thursday he believed in the innocence of players who testified before a Pittsburgh grand jury investigating possible drug trafficking involving major league baseball players.

About a dozen major leaguers have been granted immunity and testified before the federal grand jury. The group includes Lonnie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals, Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos and Rod Scurry of the Pittsburgh Pirates — all of whom went through rehabilitation for chemical dependency problems.

Others who appeared before the grand jury included Al Holland and Lee Mazzilli of the Pirates; ex-Pirates Lee Lacy, now with the Baltimore Orioles, and Dale Berra, now with the New York Yankees; Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets; and Enos Cabell of the Houston Astros. Holland appeared just a day after being traded by Philadelphia to the Pirates.

The commissioner would not say if he has talked with federal authorities involved in the Pittsburgh probe. "I will tell you, though, that I feel the players who testified are innocent," he said.

Redbirds win ugly in 10th

Associated Press

The St. Louis Cardinals won ugly, thanks to two 10th-inning errors by Los Angeles first baseman Greg Brock. But after losing on three unearned runs the previous night and blowing a two-run lead in the ninth, the taste of victory was hardly sour.

"Last night, we made the errors," said Willie McGee who scored the winning run in the Cardinals' 5-4 victory Thursday night. "They made the errors tonight. That's baseball."

McGee led off the 10th with a single and went to third when Brock lost a pickoff throw by from loser Ken Howell, 2-2. One out and an intentional walk later, pinch-hitter Steve Braun hit a double-play grounder to short, but Brock dropped the throw to first, enabling McGee to score.

"That's our game, running, that's how we win," McGee said. "You throw so many times over to first, it's hard not to make a mistake. I definitely plánned to steal on that pitch.

"I didn't see the error but I had my mind made up to go to third."

The Dodgers had tied the game with a two outs in the ninth inning on a single by Pedro Guerrero off winner Neil Allen, 1-2, the third Cardinal pitcher. Ken Dayley pitched the 10th to earn his first save.

Padres 1, Pirates 0

Tim Flannery got up a little early, thanks to his 11-day-old son Daniel, and capped a long day with a seventh-inning single to drive in the game's only run for NL West pacesetting Padres.

"We got up at six o'clock and had a talk, and I told him I was going to hit one for him," Flannery said.

That he did, stroking a two-out hit off the glove of Pittsburgh second baseman Johnny Ray to score Carmelo Martinez from second base. Martinez walked to start the inning off loser Mike Bielecki and advanced when winning pitcher Mark Thurmond sacrificed for the second out.

Thurmond, 1-2, tossed a three-hitter for his second career shutout, striking out three and walking none.

Giants 1, Cubs 0

San Francisco's Manny Trillo didn't like what he saw, but after being ejected the previous night for protesting a called third strike, knew when to keep his mouth shut. And it paid off later when his two-out hit lifted the Giants over Chicago.

"I was going to swing if the pitch was anywhere close," said Trillo, whose single on an 0-2 pitch from loser Warren Brusstar gave the Giants their fourth victory in five games and dropped the Cubs to second place in the NL East. They trail the New York Mets by a half-game.

"I thought the last pitch was a ball, but I didn't say anything to the umpire (Doug Harvey)," Trillo said of his eighth-inning strikeout.

He had been ejected from Wednesday night's 1-0 loss to the Cubs after arguing with Eric Gregg.

Rob Deer, batting for winning pitcher Scott Garrelts, lined a two-out single to center in the 12th and went to second when Brusstar hit Dan Gladden. Trillo followed with his single to left, giving the Giants their first run in 24 innings. The Cubs have been blanked over their last 20 innings.

Atlee Hammaker, who worked the eight innings, and Garrelts, 1-1, combined on a four-hit shutout.

TED BATTLES

Commissioner's hands bound

What was intended to be a muscle-flexing display of authority by the baseball commissioner turned out be just the opposite.

In declaring that club owners, minor leaguers, trainers, bat boys and peanut vendors would be subject to drug-testing, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth gave the impression that he was taking charge and would cure baseball's growing cancer.

The headlines screamed gleefully of a long overdue crackdown on drug trafficking in baseball. Oh, but it were true. Unfortunately, Ueberroth's decree included everybody but the ones who need it the most, the all-powerful Major League Baseball Players Association, whose executive secretary Don Fehr, in fact, wields more effective power than the once mighty commissioner's office.

Ueberroth's plan of spot checks is akin to treating that broken leg by taking an aspirin to ease the headache that came with it.

DESPITE Ueberroth's popularity, his winning public image and the financial miracle he pulled off in the Los Angeles Olympics Games last summer, he is, on the surface, it seems, as powerless as was Bowie Kuhn in the face of the game's big problems, such as the strike of a few years back.

It's simply a fact of life. Fans and owners look to the commissioner's office for answers he no longer possesses, without express and written permission of the MLBPA, which has no intention of yielding an inch, whether it's for the good of the game or the welfare of the players.

According to Fehr, as far as the union can tell...the intimation being that the MLBPA really doesn't care...the existing agreement is working, despite the uncovering of a Pittsburgh drug version of Wall Street. "It's not perfect and our experience is somewhat limited, but I think it is working."

Says Fehr, "Our position is you don't invade an individual's privacy. You assume innocence." Fine, but the MLBPA will fight any intrusion even after guilt has been established.

THE INTEGRITY of the game is incidental to the stakes involved. It's simply a case of too many, making too much on illicit drug trafficking to tamper with the status quo.

It isn't too far-fetched to suspect that if point-fixing was the natural outcome of drugs at a small potatoes level like Tulane that human nature and temptation being what it is, there are shennanigans of Cecile B. DeMille proportions at the major league sports levels, where gambling activity is big business, even if on the up-and-up.

Fehr says the MLBPA wanted major league players treated no differently than anyone else in the country. "No better and no worse", except you can't make us takes tests like you're doing the rest of baseball.

Ueberroth appears to have made a spectacle of himself and unintentionally shown the commissioner's office as possessing power and influence on a par with a constitutional monarchy.

That's the initial reaction.

THE LATEST move also may be Ueberroth's way of exposing the festering scandal for all to see and pinpointing the sector from which any remedial reforms must come.

Uberroth may not be the jester in court tassels he appears. This may be his way of centering responsibility. His trump card may be fan reaction, public opinion...a groundswell demanding that something be done to restore baseball's integrity and salvage an eroding reputation.

It's in the open now. The lines have been established. Maybe something will happen, or, maybe, they'll just take the broom, lift up the corner of the rug and declare, "See, it's gone."

Guys who made game non persons to today's stars

They played in leather helmets or none at all. The shoes were high-cut and had wooden cleats the size of thimbles. The pants were made of moleskin and the shirts had patches on the elbows.

Only sissies wore pads. No one had ever heard of face masks. If you hadn't lost any teeth, the coaches knew you were no good.

They played for $50 a game. There was no trainer, no doctor. You tended your own wounds. There was no hot water but that didn't matter because there were no towels anyway. They came to the ballpark suited up in uniforms they had to launder themselves.

If they wanted their games in the paper, they took the story down to the sports department. It was usually a good idea to take a bottle of whiskey, too.

They played for the Stapleton Pros, Dayton Triangles, Providence Steamrollers, Canton Bulldogs, Frankford Yellowjackets or Hartford Blues. They played wherever the bus broke down, these pro football pioneers.

IF IT WAS your team, you got your line out of the roundhouse, your backfield out of a pool hall and your coaches out of the Marine Corps.

There was no draft. No self-respecting college would let your representative on campus. Your game appealed only to a small, hard core of aficionados. Nice people didn't go.

If you were a player, you played both ways. There was no such entity as a special team. You played on punt returns, kickoff returns, defense, offense and everything in between. There were 16 men on a squad.

You were pioneers. You helped build a sport. You helped capture the public imagination. When you came along, only Yale-Harvard, Army-Navy, Notre Dame-Army sold out the big ballparks in the big cities.

You were Alex Wojciechowicz and Ken Strong and Greasy Neale and Jim Thorpe and Turk Edwards and Tuffy Leemans and Dutch Clark and Ace Gutowsky, and you clawed your way to history by word of mouth. Howard Cosell, NBC and CBS weren't there to help. There was no "Countdown to Kickoff."

YOU TOOK the forward pass out of the rule book and put it in the game. You took a set-piece, by-the-numbers gavotte and turned it into hard rock. You turned it into a tribal rite where a whole nation would come to a stop one Sunday in January to watch, the biggest one-day extravaganza since the Christians and and the lions. You made a pass-the-hat business a billion-dollar package.

And what do you get out of it? A pat on the back, an introduction at a back table at a banquet, a few faded clippings in a hometown newspaper. But you're still playing for fun, not money.

You might even be in the Hall of Fame. Unfortunately, you can't sleep there. For some, that's too bad. It might be warmer — and cheaper — than where they are living. There might be someone there to do something about the arthritis on their knees or the recurring headaches.

You made the game what it is today. You may have memories to go with the limp. But, what you don't have is a pension.

You see, if you played the game before 1959, you're a non-person. Not for you any Super Bowl, Pro Bowl or intra-league revenues. You're still playing out in the cold. You don't get to be seen driving in one of those automobile ads. You don't get in those comical beer commercials.

You don't even get a gold pass to all the games. Even the railroads used to issue them to their old-timers. Football makes Commodore Vanderbilt look like Tiny Tim.

I HAD lunch with Dick Daugherty the other day. Dick is an old Ram, a pre-1959er who is on the executive committee of an organization called the National Football League Alumni Association. It was founded some years ago by Wojciehowicz, the old Fordham and NFL center, when he came upon an old teammate, broke, dying and about to be evicted from a place you wouldn't want to live in in the first place.

There were some 900 old-time players at that time — 623 are still alive. They were not all destitute. Some were captains of industry themselves, successful real estate developers, company presidents.

But some of them weren't. The great old coach, Buddy Parker, was dying, broke, in Texas. An ex-quarterback with a daughter who had a catastrophic disease couldn't pay the hospital bills.

It wasn't as if these guys had squandered their money. They didn't have any to squander. When they played the game, you had to have a real job on the side.

At first, Wojie's organization was greeted with hostility. It was considered a threat by both players and the league itself. It didn't help when it began filing lawsuits.

But, today, Daugherty reports, the organization is beginning to find itself. Last week, it had one of approximately 30 golf tournaments it sponsors each year. It has 8,000 members, although not all of them are former football players. Bob Hope and President Reagan are members. The organization raises money not only for old football players but also for young kids and medical research.

Bronko Nagurski, Alex Wojciehowicz and the others found out that the public hadn't forgotten them, even if the game had.

Guys who kept the flickering flame of the sport alive in the days when it was considered the illegitimate offspring of the college game no longer have to wonder how to keep themselves alive. As usual, they had to do it themselves. As usual, they could. As usual, they did.

Ref beats up coach, fans

BELGRAE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A handball referee beat up the coach and several fans who disagreed with his decisions, Tanjug news agency reported on Thursday.

Vladan Milutinovic earned only criticism for his performance as the referee at a match in Bajina Basta, in Bosnia. But he kept his silence.

After he blew the whistle signifying the end of the match, he chased the coach and objecting spectators, beating them up.

Commenting on the showdown, the news agency said Milutinovic proved he was "more familar with the rules of boxing than with those of handball."

"We felt our power play needed work. We worked on it and it paid off with three goals."

Ilkka Sinisalo scored the go-ahead goal in the second period and the Flyers' stingy defense took over from there.

Keenan had praise for Brad Marsh's defensive play.

"Marsh has played well all year and the playoffs have raised him to a slightly higher level," Keenan said. "He's always ready to take the body and finish his check."

The coach also was pleased with the performance of Joe Paterson, who was brought up from the minors at the tailend of the season. "It wasn't my doing. It was Paterson's doing. At Hershey he worked hard on his game."

Paterson, who had a goal and an assist, said the playoffs were, "a kind of dream."

"I got to play a lot at Hershey. I learned to shoot instead of pass. Then the shots started going in. I consider myself mainly a checker instead of a scorer."

He said his game tying goal at 1:41 of the second period was made by center Peter Zezel.

"One of their defensemen misplayed the puck. It came right to me and I just put it in."

Flyers' goalie Pelle Lindbergh, who saved 21 of 23 Quebec shots, said, "the defense cleared every shot and rebound.

"I didn't feel 100 percent but luckily we won. I was really tired and hot."

Marsh said he feels stronger at skating then he has been in years.

ONE DIFFERENCE for Lee is the Rebels have three pitchers that have shown themselves capable of getting the job done: Mike Rittenberry (2.91), George Matta (2.93) and Mike Small, (2.97).

Small started and suffered the loss on Tuesday but is ready to go again Saturday if needed. Johnson hasn't named his starting pitchers for the game yet, but Matta has been mentioned as possible for the opener and then Small or Rittenberry in the nightcap.

At the plate, Lee doesn't have any starter above .400 for the year, but does have eight hitting better than .300.

Greg Shaw has the hottest Rebel bat with a .377 season average followed by Dirk Bergoon (.356), Tuey Rankin (.354), Keith McDonald (.340), Mike Small (.333), Paul Colwell (.333), Donny Rivas (.333), and Cary Brown (.316).

Mancini calls it a career

Ex-champ tired of training

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, who held the World Boxing Association lightweight title for two years and made millions of dollars in a 5¼-year pro career, says he is retiring from boxing.

"I don't want to train anymore," Mancini, 24, told the New York Daily News. "I don't want to get banged around at this stage of the game. I have used boxing. Don't worry, I'm not going to let boxing use me."

Mancini, who won the lightweight title on May 6, 1982 with a first-round knockout of Arturo Frias, was a favorite of boxing fans who liked his straight-ahead, aggressive style. He recently was the subject of a television movie, "Ray Mancini, the Heart of a Champion."

He held the championship until he was knocked out by Livingstone Bramble last June 1, a bout that caused him to be hospitalized because of the punishment he took. He also took hundreds of punches in losing, by decision, a rematch to Bramble on Feb. 25.

Mancini won 29 of 32 pro fights, 23 by knockout. His only other defeat was against then World Boxing Council lightweight champion Alexis Arguello on Oct. 3, 1981.

Mancini's retirement has been anticipated since the second loss to Bramble.

"I ain't coming back, I'm almost sure of it now," he said then. "But I just want to know if I can still practice the self-denial a fighter must have."

His relatively short career has been a lucrative one, he said, and his bank account is healthy.

"I can live off interest for the rest of my life," Mancini said. "That's the bottom line."

Mancini's boxing career followed in the footsteps of his father, Lenny, who also was nicknamed "Boom Boom." Winning the lightweight title for his father, who was denied a title shot when he was drafted for World War II and then was wounded, long was the younger Mancini's No. 1 ambition.

One of the defenses ended in tragedy. Korean fighter Duk Koo Kim lapsed into a coma after being knocked out by Mancini in the 14th round on Nov. 13, 1982, and the challenger died several days later.

Canadians to back baseball commissioner on tests

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The Vancouver Canadians of the Pacific Coast League have decided to back baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth's plan to institute mandatory drug testing in the minor leagues.

Stu Kehoe, general manager of the Canadians, said the tests would affect players, coaches and full-time office staff.

"If you want my opinion, I think it's great," Kehoe said Wednesday.

"If it's going to save a man's life, be it his family life or his personal life, I say let's get behind it and help save him."

The enemy is us

Coaches, ADs to blame

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — "The enemy is us" — head coaches and athletic directors are directly to blame for the ethical crisis in college athletics, says the director of women's athletics at the University of Texas.

"I'm sick and tired of listening to those who'd have us believe that fanatical alumni, the NCAA system, (NCAA executive director) Walter Byers and all those things are responsible for this despicable state in which we find our so-called educational sports programs.

"Not so, it's us," Donna Lopiano — in her 10th year as women's athletic director at Texas — told people attending Wednesday's Ethics and Athletics Seminar at LSU.

"There is no justification for a 20 percent graduation rate of student-athletes who complete four years of eligibility. There is no justification for illiterate baccalaureate degree-holding student-athletes."

Lopiano said athletic directors and head coaches should not only be responsible for "X's and O's," but for making sure most of their students graduate and for setting high ethical standards.

"WE MUST be required to produce winners on three courts: On the playing field, in the classroom and in the public arena," she said.

Lopiano noted that the success of women's sports and high graduation rates at Texas go hand-in-hand.

This year alone, she said, Texas has earned one NCAA championship, and finished second, ninth and 15th in three others. Five of seven head coaches were named Coach of the Year in their respective sports, she said.

Of those student-athletes who have completed four years of eligibility, 96 percent have graduated, and 35 percent of all athletes have at least a B average, she said.

"So, it can be done," she said. "Ask Joe Paterno (head football coach at Penn State) and ask Notre Dame."

Lopiano said 90 percent of all the current academic problems can be solved at the institutional level.

Her three main areas of concern are: winning on the field, graduating 95 percent of all scholarship athletes and producing articulate, ethical young men and women to represent the school.

On winning, she said, "It should be a goal of every athlete and every athletic team to win. There is nothing wrong with winning. There is nothing wrong with commercial sports.

"If any coach can't achieve a .500 record he (or she) should be fired, especially since they're the ones who choose (the athletes) and the teams they want to play against."

"If we as athletic directors and coaches are given significant institutional financial resources, and we are told, 'Here are the resources to conduct a quality program,' then there is a right for expectations. Coaches and athletes should pursue excellence and should achieve excellence in their performing art."

ON THE 95-percent graduation rate, she said, "That is not an impossible goal. Coaches do force athletes to get out of bed and go to practice. They do force athletes to do a lot of things that they don't want to do, because (the coaches) consider those tasks to be important. They had better consider going to class important."

"If the coach tells the athlete to run 30 laps, the athlete runs 30 laps," she said. "If the coach tells the student-athlete to get to study hall, the student-athlete gets to study hall. A coach can get an athlete to do almost anything.

"Athletes don't listen to their academic advisors, they don't listen to their mothers, they listen to their coaches."

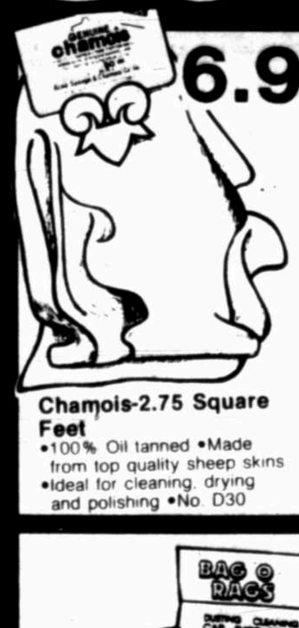

On setting standards of ethical behavior, she said, "The student-athlete should be an articulate public speaker.

"He or she should adhere to the same ethical or behavioral standards of faculty members, administrators, anyone employed by that institution.

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

If Dale Murphy continues at his present pace, he would hit 65 homers and drive in 207 runs this season, setting major league records in both categories rather handily.

While consistency is one of his major objectives, even Murphy admits that shooting for numbers like those would be like shooting for the proverbial "pie in the sky."

"I can't hit like I have in the month of April the rest of the year," he said, "but hopefully I can build on this. Right now, everyone is asking me to project what I could do if I stayed consistent. I really don't know."

After going 1-for-4 Wednesday night against the New York Mets, Murphy had a National League-leading batting average of .365 (tied with Tom Herr of St. Louis) with 32 RBI and 10 home runs. By April 30, he had 29 of his RBI, tying a major-league record for run production in the season's first month set in 1977 by Ron Cey.

MURPHY, WHO won the league's Most Valuable Player award in 1982 and 1983, is, without question, capable of some outstanding numbers. And, with 36 home runs in each of the past three seasons, consistency would not seem to be one of his problems, either. His highest major league batting average, however, was a mere .302 in 1983.

"You just have to wait and see," Murphy said in answer to The Question: "How good can you be?"

"That's a season question, a career. Then we'll see what kind of lessons I've learned. I want to learn something from both the good and the bad."

Last season, Murphy had a taste of the bad. He struggled through a slow April and was hitting just .274 by the All-Star break. After the break, he hit .309 to raise his season average to .290 and wound up with 100 runs batted in. He didn't hit his 10th home run of the season until May 25, in his 43rd game of the year.

"I've only had really one consistent year, 1983," Murphy said. "In 1982, my September wasn't too good. Last year, April and May weren't too good."

BESIDES hitting .302 in 1983, Murphy led the league with 121 RBI. For the past three seasons, he has played in each of the Braves' ballgames and his current string of 521 consecutive games is the longest currently in the major leagues. He is only the 30th player ever to participate in 500 straight games.

Murphy currently has hit in 11 straight games and is batting .447 with runners in scoring position.

"Everybody is asking me if the ball looks bigger now," Murphy said. "But the last few days, I haven't been swinging all that well. It comes and it goes. A lot of things get amplified this early in the season."

While Murphy gets great delight out of stealing bases — he had 30 in 1983 — and would like to cut down on his strikeouts, his hot streak has drawn a lot of attention to his propensity for hitting the longball.

His current pace, early as it is in the season, would give him the record for homers in a single season. Roger Maris had 61 homers in 1961, breaking the long-standing record of 60 in a season by Babe Ruth.

While Murphy doesn't expect the pace to continue, he also points out that his ability to hit "dingers," as the major leaguers call them, is a rather recent development in his career.

"I definitely wasn't a threat in the minor leagues," Murphy said. "I didn't really start to fill out until after I signed with the Braves (in 1974)." At 215 pounds, Murphy says he weighs 20 pounds more now than when he signed.

"I didn't have any power until 1977 when I hit 22 home runs at Richmond," Murphy says. Before that, his highest home run total was 12 with Savannah in 1976. In his first full season with the Braves, in 1978, he hit 23 homers.

"Home runs just kind of happen," Murphy said. "I've always tried to steer away from thinking about them at the plate. In Atlanta, anything can happen there. Home runs are easier there, especially if you get a good swing.

"They say Hank Aaron, at the end of his career, knew how to do it — how to hit homers when he wanted to," Murphy said, "but I don't think I'll ever be able to do that."

UIL expels Dulles from state track

From Wire Reports

The UIL state executive committee disqualified Stafford Dulles' 1,600-meter boys' relay team for the state track meet this weekend. Dulles ran a Region 4-5A record time of 3:16.33 in San Antonio last Saturday but was disqualified because one of the runners was ineligible under the no-pass no-play rule. Rosenberg Lamar Consolidated replaced Dulles as the regional winner and third-place San Antonio Wheatley was elevated to runner-up and a berth in state. Deer Park pole vaulter James Halstead, second in Region 3-5A also was disqualified under the rule that says an athlete must pass every course to compete...

Mayor rallies behind Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros says it is imperative the San Antonio Spurs remain in town and he will support a move to another playing site in the city if necessary.

Cisneros made the comments Wednesday after team President Angelo Drossos said mounting construction around the Convention Center Arena may force the National Basketball Association team to look at another playing location or at even leaving the city.

Drossos has talked with the advisory board for the Freeman Coliseum, a smaller facility east of downtown.

He has set a June 1 deadline for a decision on where the team will play the 1985-86 season. The confusion is holding up finalization of the NBA schedule, Drossos said.

The Convention Center is due for expansion and a new hotel will be built just down the street, causing parking and access problems to the arena for at least two years, Drossos said.

"It is imperative we keep the Spurs in San Antonio," Cisneros said, saying a move out of the city would have a deflating impact on the community. "I think the problems are resolvable."

Bexar County Judge Tom Vickers said $2 million in improvements would need to be made in the coliseum if the Spurs relocate there.

But Assistant City Manager J. Rolando Bono said the city staff would make every effort to work out the traffic problems so the Spurs can continue to use the arena. Bono would not comment on the legality of a move to the coliseum.

Drossos in January exercised his option to extend the Spurs lease on the arena for another five years.

Under terms of the expiring lease, the Spurs pay the city $2,000 per exhibition game and 5 percent of season ticket sales up to $2.5 million and 2.5 percent in excess of that.

Some TV series conclude season with cliffhangers

ENTERTAINMENT

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's May cliffhanger time again, and the season-ending mysteries are twisting to semiconclusions. The networks' moustache-twirlers have come up with some devious devices again to make life complicated for the folks at "Dallas," "Dynasty" and other prime-time series.

CBS' "Dallas" knocked the country on its ear in the spring of 1980 with the "Who Shot J.R.?" mystery. It set the whole world speculating about who pulled the trigger. Viewers had to wait until November to find out (it was Kristin), and the episode broke viewing records.

It also put "Dallas" in first place in the Nielsen ratings and set a pattern of cliffhangers for other shows. "Dallas" stayed in first place until it was overtaken this past season by ABC's "Dynasty."

"Dallas," ending its eighth year Friday, May 17, has expanded to 90 minutes for a season-ending episode called "Swan Song." Lorimar Productions promises it is "guaranteed to rival the infamous 'Who shot J.R.?' cliffhanger."

It will be the last show for actors Patrick Duffy (Bobby Ewing) and Charlene Tilton (Lucy Ewing). Duffy left the $40,000-a-week job on his own accord; the producers reportedly gave Miss Tilton her walking papers.

It's already been suggested that Miss Tilton will return next year for several guest appearances, so don't look for much there. But, since Bobby is caught between Jenna Wade and his ex-wife, Pam, something will happen to Bobby.

People magazine reported in this week's edition that good Samaritan Bobby steps in front of a careening car bent on killing someone else in the "Dallas" clan. People says not to miss the farewell hospital deathbed scene.

Boo-hoo.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, J.R. (Larry Hagman) gains Miss Ellie's backing to put Sue Ellen away because of her drinking and unpredictable behavior. Cliff decides that Jamie is no longer useful to him in his struggle against the Ewing family.

Incidentally, Miss Ellie will have undergone another change when the new season starts. Barbara Bel Geddes is returning to resume her role as the Ewing matriarch. Donna Reed took over the role last year when Miss Bel Geddes was sidelined by illness.

Things are also cooking at rival "Dynasty," which ends on Wednesday, May 15. The whole Carrington family goes to the principality of Moldavia for the fairy tale wedding of Amanda to Prince Michael. But some palace troublemakers are trying to stop the wedding with a coup — reportedly a violent one at that.

Meanwhile, Rock Hudson's character, Daniel Reece, was killed off Wednesday night and in his will he names Krystle as executrix. That angers Sammy Jo, who vows to wrest control of the estate from Krystle.

And, what is to happen to Fallon, who has re-emerged in the person of actress Emma Samms? ABC has announced that it will spin off Fallon and Jeff (John James) in a new series next year called "Dynasty II: The Colbys." In fact, some storylines in "Dynasty" will conclude in "Dynasty II."

NBC's "Hill Street Blues" wraps up on Thursday, May 16, with an episode in which Capt. Frank Furillo, a reformed alcoholic, played by Daniel J. Travanti, is found to have alcohol in his system during a routine urinalysis.

World traveler John Denver appearing in United States

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

John Denver, who seems usually to be traveling the world on a people-to-people or hunger eradication mission, is back in the country of the Rocky Mountains.

He has a new album and is touring in the United States May 16 to June 16. After that, he'll write songs for a Broadway musical about Will Rogers and he's studying rope tricks because he'll play Will.

The new RCA Records album, "Dreamland Express," is out June 3. The single from it, "Don't Close Your Eyes at Night," came out in mid-May. "I think the album's very contemporary sounding," Denver says. "The production and engineering are contemporary; it's a very romantic album. One song has a Motown sound to it, one's rock 'n' roll. I use a lot of horns. It's just not to have a dated sound, to be contemporary."

There's also a song written by Stevie Wonder, "If Ever." Denver says, "It's a beautiful, beautiful love song. Anybody could do it. I'm really thrilled he gave it to me."

Asked how that happened, Denver says, "What I heard is, when he wrote the song he said, 'I ought to give this to John Denver.' It just so happened that a short time after that, my engineer, who was working on one of his projects, told him I was coming in the studio and Stevie said, 'I've got a song for him.'

"I recorded it and he came later and played harmonica on it. I've met him, several times, in passing, at Grammy Awards and things like that. He came to the studio in Los Angeles and we had a wonderful conversation. He is a fine man.

"We had asked him if he would play. Initially there was a lot of difficulty in getting Motown to agree to let him perform on somebody else's album. Then there were difficulties with his schedule. He's a pretty busy guy. We were holding off for it. It's the last thing we did on the album."

Denver only has four songs on the album. He says, "I had written five. One didn't live up to the rest of the material."

Asked whether he composes a lot, Denver says, "I'm not the kind of song writer who works on songs a little bit every day. I have a lot more ideas than I'm able to find time to work on. I have a notebook I carry with me all the time.

"For instance, for 'African Sunrise' on the album, I had an idea the fifth night I was in Africa, in Burkina Faso, which used to be Upper Volta. I wrote the song two weeks later in Mozambique."

Denver went to Africa for 17 days last fall. "As one of the founders of the Hunger Project, I've made a commitment to the end of hunger," he says. But he admits, "I was afraid in going to Africa I'd be liable to think this can't be done. I returned convinced hunger can be ended. As desperate as the circumstances are in many parts of Africa, great things have been accomplished there in the last 10 to 20 years. I think things are just beginning there.

"It is pretty wonderful to see 'We Are the World' and U.S.A. for Africa, all these things that are happening now. The issue is coming to the fore in people's consciousness and other artists are becoming involved. It is just fantastic."

After that trip, Denver spent two weeks in Europe promoting "Love Again," a duet with Sylvie Vartan. It's on the RCA "John Denver's Greatest Hits Vol. 3" album released last fall.

Artist has dreams of sculptures that double as buildings

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER

Youngman sees his designs as the perfect blend of art and architecture, structures that combine useful space with interesting textures, patterns, shapes and colors.

He favors the sculptures because of their graceful lines, natural materials and ability to blend with the landscape, though he also believes they would be relatively inexpensive to construct and to heat.

Now, after 22 years of thought, the 57-year-old Youngman longs to bring his idea to life.

"In our lives, we have one dream," he said in an interview. "You think if you can do it, you could almost go out and lie down and die. To take these materials, give form to them, then be able to walk inside would be the ultimate for me."

Youngman, who teaches art to architects at the University of Illinois, is known for his huge concrete sculptures. He would like to create a sculpture that also would be a building.

The technique is simple: A pile of earth is pushed into the desired shape and objects are added to provide the design. Concrete is then poured over the mold and the earth is dug out from under the hardened structure.

What is left is a sort of inside-out sculpture, a hollow shell whose undulating inner surface is textured with "strong, solid, gutsy" designs. Glass-topped openings could allow sunshine to dance across the concrete and create moving areas of light and shadow.

"If you walk from north to south you have a certain visual experience. But when you turn around and go back it's completely different," said Youngman. "The process is exciting because no two of these are alike."

Interior walls could take any shape, even using another mold, and would be fashioned as partitions allowing an unobstructed view of the building's entire ceiling. A prism could add natural color to complement brightly colored tapestries and furniture; the outside could be covered with earth or it could provide another design in the concrete, he said.

His fascination with this concept began around 1962 as he used it to form the roof of a 7,600-seat auditorium at Anderson College in Indiana. The 268-foot concrete dome was poured over a mold of gravel that Youngman rented.

However, his work for the next two decades focused on solid concrete sculpture. He produced an enormous bas-relief for Manufacturers Bank of Detroit, one city block long, half a block deep and two stories high. The individual sections were cast in wooden molds in Dearborn, Mich., then trucked to the site.

He considers his most famous work to be the 28 sculptured columns, each 14 feet tall and 32 inches square, supporting an entrance canopy 420-feet long at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Youngman said the greatest influence on his life was his father, a blacksmith who taught his son to weld and use a hammer and to visualize completed works in his mind.

He spent a great deal of time in the art museum in St. Louis. However, his own early work, all done in the blacksmith shop in Murphysboro, Ill., consisted of welded metal sculptures.

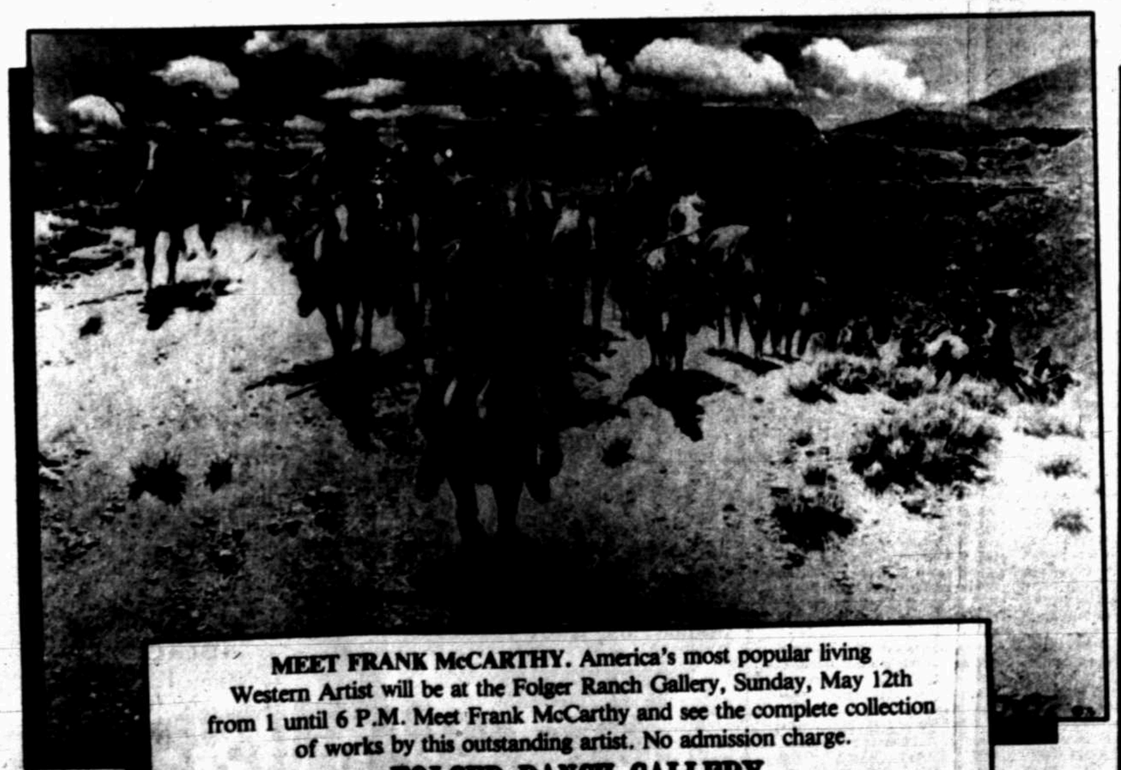

It was an eight-inch tall figure playing the flute that really launched Youngman's career as an artist. At the age of 24, that piece — personally selected for entry by his father — earned the top prize for Youngman in a competition in St. Louis.

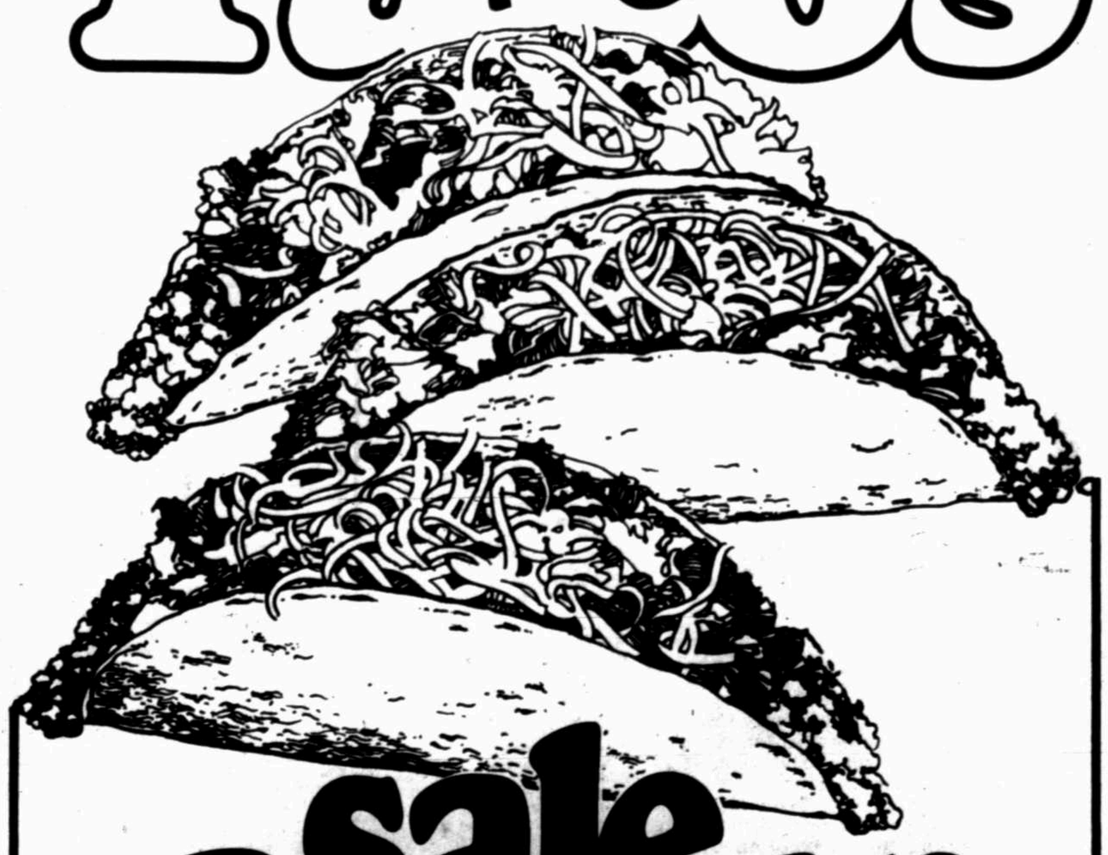

Youngman taught at the University of Illinois in the mid-1950s, then served as chairman of the Art Department at Anderson College.

New documentary more compelling than 'Space,' 'The Right Stuff'

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — You've seen the dramas, now see the documentary. "Space" and the "The Right Stuff" were good, but public television's "Spaceflight" is the real stuff.

Well-done reality is more compelling and riveting than fiction or fudged non-fiction, and that's the case with "Spaceflight." The four-parter began on PBS Wednesday and continues the next three Wednesdays.

CBS' recent 13-hour "Space" cost $32 million. This documentary, produced and written by former PBS creative director Blaine Baggett, cost a mere $600,000.

"Spaceflight," narrated by Martin Sheen, examines three decades of space rides, first with the 23-inch aluminum ball Sputnik to today's reusable shuttle that doubles as spaceship and science laboratory. The ups and downs of the American and Soviet space programs are chronicled in pictures and interviews with academics, reporters and the principals.

The four-parter goes full circle, beginning with the German V-2 rocket as war weapon (hitting London in World War II) to President Reagan's "Star Wars" concept to utilize the heavens as a military base.

But, in between, there are superb science stories and glorious pictures about human quests and conquests, featuring rare footage from the U.S. and Soviet space programs. Film from NASA was labeled top secret, buti

He also got 10 hours of film of Soviet space missions from a scientist attached to the Soviet Embassy in Washington. After the Soviets shot down the South Korean Air Lines jet in late 1983, Baggett's contact was deported as a spy, the producer said.

"I guess he gave me the film because he believed I wasn't out to rape the Soviet Union," Baggett said. "I hope I've presented their achievements in a good light."

Tonight's "Thunder in the Skies" covers some of the same terrain as "The Right Stuff." Daredevil Chuck Yeager, competing against other pilots for the title of fastest man alive, is shown in the 1950s at Edwards Air Force Base in California breaking the sound barrier in the X-1 jet.

Yeager recounts the story of how a rib injury prevented him from using his right arm to close the door on the X-1 before his first record-breaking flight. So a friend rigged a broomstick through the door handle that Yeager could use to pull it shut with his left hand.

These heroics are taken in aw-shucks stride. Fellow test pilot Scott Crossfield said his X-15 once split in two and blew up another time. "Those were just rocks in our shoes," he said.

Next week's "The Wings of Mercury" covers the earliest manned space flights by the Soviets and Americans, who were spurred on by President Kennedy and turned the race to the moon into a symbolic test of America's leadership, spirit and manhood.

The astronauts' groupie scene at Cape Canaveral and their family lives, so important for the dramatic "Right Stuff" and "Space," are ignored here. The real drama and peril of venturing into the unknown and the man-vs.-man elements are stressed instead.

Alan Shepard, one of the original seven Mercury astronauts and the first American in space, says the tremendous competition among the Magnificent 7, as they came to be glamorized, was "underlying everything."

Pete Conrad describes his Gemini 5 duration flight as "eight days in a garbage can" and physically painful and tedious.

Webb asks Gov. Thompson to free 'innocent' Dotson

CHICAGO (AP) — Cathleen Crowell Webb withstood sharp questioning and asked Gov. James R. Thompson to try to see through the web of lies she spun eight years ago and grant clemency to Gary Dotson, the man she once accused of raping her.

In nearly four hours of testimony at a clemency hearing Thursday, Mrs. Webb maintained that the rape story was a "big lie" and that now she wanted "simply to tell the truth about a deception that sent an innocent man to jail for six years."

But Thompson, who had called the emergency session of the Illinois Prisoner Review Board, persistently challenged Mrs. Webb about her new account and her motive for saying she fabricated the story that Dotson had raped her.

More than 16 other witnesses were scheduled to testify as the hearing resumed today, including Mrs. Webb's foster parents, Dotson's attorney, Cook County proscutors and a polygraph examiner who tested both Mrs. Webb and Dotson.

Thompson can pardon Dotson or commute his sentence.

The 23-year-old Mrs. Webb said repeatedly Thursday that she could not recall details surrounding the events of July 9, 1977, the day the alleged rape occurred.

"In the police car didn't you tell the officer who picked you up the details (of the rape)?" Thompson asked. "Didn't you tell (another) officer? ... Didn't you tell (your foster mother)?"

To each question Mrs. Webb replied, "I don't remember if I did or didn't."

Dotson, imprisoned since his 1979 conviction but free on bond during legal efforts to gain his release, earlier made an emotional appeal to Thompson to free him.

"This nightmare doesn't seem to end," said Dotson, 28, of suburban Country Club Hills, who spoke haltingly and frequently sipped water during his testimony. " ... What else can I say, what else can I do, except say that I'm innocent."

He said people seem to forget that he could not have committed the rape because he was "with my friends far away from her" the night of the alleged rape.

"The most frustrating thing in all this is that most of the attention and most of the questions have been to Mrs. Webb," said Dotson.

Mrs. Webb, formerly of suburban Homewood but now a resident of Jaffrey, N.H., testified in 1979 that she was abducted by three men and raped by Dotson, who was convicted of rape and aggravated kidnapping and sentenced to 25 to 50 years in prison.

Days of not listening to Dotson over

For eight years, Dotson proclaimed his innocence. He told the government. He told his attorneys.

CHICAGO (AP) — For Gary Dotson, the days when no one was willing to listen are over. Now the nation — perhaps the world — is his audience.

For eight years, Dotson proclaimed his innocence. He told the government. He told his attorneys. He told judges. And he told a jury he did not rape Cathleen Crowell.

"I wanted to prove I didn't do this terrible thing," he said. "But people weren't willing to listen to a person like me."

On Thursday, with scores of reporters from across America gathered in a hearing room and thousands watching on television, Dotson got his biggest hearing.

This time the 28-year-old high school dropout asked Gov. James R. Thompson for executive clemency from his sentence for a rape his accuser has now declared a lie.

The now-married Cathleen Crowell Webb, 23, says she lied when she identified him as her rapist in 1979.

The image of Dotson asking for his freedom with trembling hands and choking voice was recorded by more than 125 reporters, photographers and 13 television cameras.

The British Broadcasting Corp. and the Voice of America were on hand.

Thompson took note of the fact that an international spotlight was trained on the hearing. "Beyond the fate of Gary Dotson, which is important, Illinois' criminal justice system is being examined by the world," he said.

The proceedings were carried live by on radio and television.

Cable News Network, which reaches 32 million households nationwide, switched between live broadcasts of the Dotson hearing and the attempted murder trial of socialite Claus von Bulow in Providence, R.I.

"We had calls from Louisiana and Florida," said Mitch Walker, CNN's assignment editor in Chicago. "I had one lady who broke into tears. She said the governor was so eloquent."

It was a drama that eclipsed some of the regular soap operas, which were bumped off the air by the local television station's day-long broadcast.

A key element in its drawing power was the "cast": a governor called "Big Jim" who made his name as a crime-busting prosecutor, a high-school dropout who had scrapes with the police even before the controversial rape case and a born-again Christian who says her faith spurred her to recant.

Bag-toting downtown shoppers wandered into the 600-seat auditorium of the new steel-and-glass State of Illinois Center. Other spectators started arriving at 5:45 a.m. But the room was never filled to capacity.

The world listening at last, Dotson poured out an emotional appeal: "I still fight for hope because this nightmare doesn't seem to end. ... What else can I say, what else can I do except to say I'm innocent."

Grace heatedly defends government report

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Peter Grace, shouting down allegations that his Grace Commission study on government efficiency had recommended taxing welfare, says it's time to stop dwelling on the numbers and start finding ways of cutting costs.

"Why not consider what we are recommending rather than how accurate the numbers are?" Grace, chairman of commission, told members of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Thursday.

But Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., questioned the commission estimate that the 2,478 proposals it made last year to streamline government operations and cut costs eventually would save the taxpayers $424.4 billion.

"You peddled that $424 billion all over the country," Eagleton said. "But you know its an erroneous figure, but you know it's a figment of your imagination. You know it's fraud."

"You peddled it all over the country in your private jet. ... It's a fiction. It's an invention of Mr. Grace," Eagleton charged.

"Be sure to put quotes around that," Grace shot back. "What you are saying is baloney."

"You still stand by that figure?" Eagleton responded. "Is there anybody in the country that stands by that figure except your two guys?" Eagleton said, referring to the W.R. Grace & Co. executives who flanked their boss at the witness table.

"Oh, there's 2,000 people who are sticking by it," Grace said in reference to the business executives who participated in the Grace Commission, known formally as the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control.

Eagleton noted that other government agencies had cited lower savings estimates from the commission-recommended changes. The White House Office of Management and Budget estimates the Grace Commission proposals in the 1986 budget would save taxpayers $116 billion by 1990.

The Congressional Budget Office puts the savings at just $96 billion, a figure Comptroller General Charles Bowsher of the Government Accounting Office testified he generally agrees with.

"The OMB doesn't agree with the $424 billion," Eagleton told Grace. "The comptroller general said you may be a fourth right."

"How much do they earn?" Grace declared.

"Not everybody has to make your salary to be a reputable person, to have a decent honorable opinion," Eagleton retorted. "The country is not owned by the super-billionaires like you."

The two also clashed when Eagleton suggested the commission had proposed taxing welfare benefits.

Eagleton said both the GAO and the budget office interpreted the commission's report as recommending taxing some low-income people for the federal Medicaid and Medicare benefits they receive.

"All I can say is that's a lot of baloney, that's all I can say," Grace said.

"GAO testified today and still stands by its belief that you are recommending a poor folks' tax," Eagleton said.

"Do they still have their jobs?" Grace asked. "Are you keeping them on the payroll? If they said that they are completely off base."

"I think you are trying to separate youself from your Grace tax," Eagleton said. "If I had recommended a tax on the poor, I'd want to disown it too."

"I'll stand on the record we never recommended it," Grace shouted back. "I will not sit here to be lied about by anybody. If GAO wants to lie about it. ..."

"You're not going to lie about Mr. Bowsher," Eagleton said.

"That's a lot of crap," Grace said of the GAO report.

"That would make it track beautifully with the Grace Commission report, which is a pile of it," the senator replied.

J.P. Balduc, a W.R. Grace & Co. vice president who directed the comission study, said the panel offered as one possible option a tax on federal welfare benefits. "But we never made such a recommendation," Balduc said.

Noting that the Grace Commission had criticized federal pensions as overly generous, Eagleton asked Grace what he earns.

Grace estimated his annual salary plus bonus at $500,000 to $600,000.

"When you retire you get 50 to 60 percent of that. You won't be hurting, Mr. Grace," Eagleton said.

Child bride leaves husband

NEWPORT, Tenn. (AP) — The off-and-on romance of a sixth-grader and the 40-year-old neighbor she married is apparently off again, parents of the young bride say.

And prosecutors in this rural area of East Tennessee say the latest break-up has led them to renew statutory rape charges against the husband.

Jo Anne Johnson, now 14, married Howard R. Johnson, 40, in December amid kidnapping and statutory rape charges filed against Johnson for taking the girl and her brother on a two-day "joy ride" to Florida.

Upon their return, Carolyn Clevenger, Jo Ann's mother, agreed to drop the kidnapping charges but authorities pressed the statutory rape count after human service workers examined the girl.

Relatives said Mrs. Johnson returned home for a second time since their marriage when her husband let her out at a friend's house April 28.

"She's got to get a divorce," said Bill Clevenger, the bride's father. "... I really think she loves him. But he don't care nothing about her. I've tried to tell her ... but she won't listen."

The Johnsons had moved to Winston-Salem, N.C., after the wedding but she returned home shortly thereafter. Johnson also returned to Tennessee and sued for divorce.

'Mercy killer' jailed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 75-year-old man convicted of murder in the "mercy killing" of his wife of 51 years to end her suffering from Alzheimer's disease says his mandatory 25-year prison term amounts to a death penalty for him.

"It's the end of my life," said Roswell Gilbert after the jury on Thursday convicted him of first-degree murder. "What is left? You think I'm gonna live over 100?"

Circuit Judge Thomas Coker Jr. immediately sentenced Gilbert to life in prison, with a 25-year mandatory term. The state had waived the death penalty, making the life sentence the only possible punishment for first-degree murder.

Gilbert sat stoically, but his only child, Martha Moran, burst into tears when the verdict was read after five hours of deliberation.

"They killed my father," Mrs. Moran said, weeping as her husband led her from the packed courtroom.

As marshals led him out of the Broward County Courthouse, Gilbert said the term amounted to a death sentence for him.

"Is this justice?" he asked.

"He's numb right now," said defense lawyer Harry Gulkin, adding he would appeal the conviction.

Gilbert had testified that he shot his wife Emily, 73, twice in the head out of compassion. He called police and surrendered after the shooting.

Mrs. Gilbert, killed March 4 in the couple's condominium apartment, was senile from brain degeneration caused by Alzheimer's disease and suffered from osteoporsis, a painful bone disintegration.

Witnesses testified that she longed for and begged for death.

Prosecutor Kelly Hancock had urged jurors to ignore pleas for compassion, saying the shooting was premeditated, cold-blooded murder.

"Sympathy cannot play a role," Hancock said in closing arguments Thursday. "It was an act of convenience. He didn't solve her problems, he solved his. (The marriage vow) doesn't say 'until one of you gets sick and you shoot."

Defense lawyer Joe Varon begged jurors in his closing arguments earlier Thursday to ignore laws and set legal precedent with an acquittal.

"There is no law to fit this situation," Varon told jurors. "She was sick. There was no hope. She was wracked in pain."

Gilbert testified Wednesday his wife's senility and pain were increasing. Often confused, she sometimes refered to him as "the bastard" and was terrified that he would desert her.

Soviet Union says it will respect SALT II limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has told the United States it will respect SALT II missile limits when it deploys new SS-25 missiles, a move a senior U.S. official says could boost prospects of continuing the unratified treaty.

The official, who favors continuing SALT II beyond the scheduled expiration at the end of this year, said the administration is "in the throes of a major ... debate on the whole thing." He spoke to a reporter Thursday on condition he not be identified.

President Reagan is due to report to Congress by June 1 on the consequences of continuing U.S. adherence to the SALT II limits, although he could request an extension. The State Department official said he expects a decision in six to eight weeks.

Reagan said today in Portugal that "there's considerable evidence" that compliance with the treaty "has been rather one-sided."

"If it has been, then there's no need for us to continue," Reagan said.

At a Lisbon news conference before departing for Washington, the president said a decision on continued compliance will be made "down the road."

"Actually we have not come to a point in which we in any way in our own buildup are violating or going beyond the terms of that treaty," Reagan said. "It is possible in regard to one system of weapons that we might come to such a point. And we'll make that decision then and if we do we'll do it openly and we will do it with full knowledge of the Soviet Union."

The State Department official said the administration's decision could "go either way." He said the review also includes whether to continue adhering to the SALT I treaty, which was ratified but has expired.

Although the United States didn't ratify SALT II, which was negotiated by the Carter administration in 1979, both Moscow and Washington have said they would abide by its terms.

Reagan said in February he would decide in the next several months whether to join Moscow "in violating" the treaty limits on the number of missiles each nation may deploy. Moscow has denied violations, although the United States contends it has tested more new missiles than the treaty allows.

The administration has to decide something in the near future because a new Trident missile-firing submarine, the USS Alaska — which is to begin sea trials in October — would cause the SALT II limit to be exceeded unless another older submarine is retired.

The official said Moscow signaled its willingness to continue the treaty when it informed U.S. officials two weeks ago that it would retire older SS-11 intercontinental ballistic missiles now in silos when it installed new SS-25 ICBMs in the near future.

The Soviets are understood to have said they would deploy 18 of the new mobile, single-warhead SS-25s and remove 20 of the older SS-11s. The notification was made to the U.S.-Soviet Standing Consultative Commission, which deals with questions of adherence to terms of arms-control agreements.

"They notified us of the deployment in the proper way," the official said. He said the Soviet move provides support for those in the Reagan administration who want to continue the SALT II treaty.

The official said he didn't think Reagan had made up his mind on the SALT accords and would wait for recommendations from his top advisers, who will be taking the matter up soon after receiving position papers now being prepared at lower levels.

State Department officials are regarded as generally favoring continuing SALT II, while Pentagon officials are regarded as favoring scrapping it.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle told a congressional committee earlier this week he believes the treaty should be terminated. "For the United States to adhere to a treaty the Soviets are violating would create a double standard, which I think would be unwise," he said.

However, the State Department official said that while Mocow may have committed some violations, "there is no doubt they are adhering to the most important elements of the agreement."

Congressmen of two nations to meet today

MEXICO CITY (AP) — After a period that has seen some of the greatest strains in U.S.-Mexican relations in recent years, congressmen from the United States and Mexico start their annual meeting today to discuss issues affecting both countries.

Among the items on the agenda for discussion at the 25th annual meeting are relations between the two countries, drug trafficking, migrant workers, border issues, economic affairs and such international issues as the situation in Cenral America.

The three-day meeting alternates between the United States and Mexico each year. This year's conference will be held in Queretaro, a colonial city that has grown into an industrial center 138 miles northwest of Mexico City.

The government newspaper El Nacional on Thursday quoted U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, as saying that a climate of terror does not exist along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Model shows inner planet formed from crashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The birth of the inner solar system likely was a violent period of giant objects crashing and fusing into one another to form molten planets and the Earth's moon, according to new computer models re-creating the creation.

The mathematical models, which simulate conditions during the first few million years in the solar system's 4½-billion year history, support theories that giant impacting bodies played an important role in the formation of the planets, a Carnegie Institution of Washington scientist says.

Dr. George Wetherill, director of Carnegie's department of terrestrial magnetism, said Thursday that the elaborate models suggest much of the Earth's present size is due to mass accumulated from these "impactors."

"This work shows that if you start with a plausible model, the solar system naturally develops these large impactors and that they come together to form the terrestrial (inner) planets," Wetherill said in an interview.

In a study published today in the journal Science, Wetherill said his computer simulations are the first to model the early solar system in three dimensions with as many as 500 beginning objects. Most previous studies used fewer than 100 bodies calculated in two dimensions, he said.

Wetherill constructed and ran 10 similar models with slight changes in some variables to see if the computer simulations would result in an inner solar system similar to the one that exists today, with the hard-surfaced terrestrial planets Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars circling the sun.

"I get this thing (the computer) going and then stand back to watch what happens," he said. "It assumes it's the solar system and evolves all by itself."

The models excluded the gaseous outer planets, which Wetherill said probably formed earlier through a different process.

His models pick up the evolution of the solar system when it is about 2 million years old, when early clouds of dust and gases had accumulated into 500 objects called planetesimals, each about one-third the mass of the Earth's moon.

This swarm of objects resulted in numerous collisions as the masses swirled into one another when their orbits brought them into contact, a process that formed larger bodies.

According to the studies, after nine million years, about 66 percent of the mass of the planetestimals had accumulated into what would be the final planets and a few other massive bodies.

After 252 million years, nearly all the bodies had come together as planets with masses and orbits resembling the present inner solar system.

Wetherill said most of the big impacts occurred when the system was about 10 million years old, but some still were happening at 50 million to 100 million years.

NATION in brief

Ex-mental patient gets 15 years on plea bargain

STILLWATER, Minn. (AP) — A plea bargain calls for 15 years' commitment for a former mental patient who admitted planting a bomb here and planned to plead guilty to 26 other explosives charges in four states, a prosecutor said.

Washington County District Judge Esther Tomlijanovich set sentencing for July 1 for Earl Steven Karr, 25, who entered a plea Thursday to a felony charge of possession of an explosive device.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Heffelfinger said Karr would be committed to up to 15 years, starting with high-security psychiatric care at the Minnesota Security Hospital in St. Peter, followed by 10 years' probation.

Groups deny preaching

CLEVELAND (AP) — Representatives of the Salvation Army and Gideons International, organizations banished from a military induction center, said they handed out literature but did not preach to inductees.

Maj. John F. Dunn, 42, commander of the center, said Thursday that the groups were barred because their activities disrupted operations.

The Salvation Army gave out stationery and the group's national magazine, "War Cry," said Maj. Paul M. Kelly, divisional commander of the Salvation Army in Cleveland. Elmer B. Farkas, a Gideon volunteer, said members had been handing out material at the center for more than 35 years.

Girl subjected to stress

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A 9-year-old girl whose stepfather was sentenced to life in prison for sexually abusing her had to undergo the indignity of rape, then the pressure of being forced to say the incident never happened, a prosecutor said.

Pinellas Circuit Judge Claire Luten passed sentence after the 34-year-old defendant, whose identity is being kept secret to protect the girl, was convicted by a jury.

The man confessed to the Dec. 23 sexual assault, according to police testimony. But his wife, who reported the crime, testified that the report was false, and her daughter denied her previous statements about the incident.

Prison term overturned

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A woman, pardoned 10 years after she went to prison for hiring a man to kill her husband, had been "terribly abused" by the victim, a member of the state Pardon Board said.

Donna McCurley, 42, whose husband shot her in the abdomen, killing their unborn child, 11 years before she was convicted of first-degree murder, was ordered released from prison Thursday.

Supreme Court Justice Tom Steffen, a board member, said he could see how pressures would "build up and build up" in Mrs. McCurley's case. She said she had been continually threatened by her husband before his slaying.

Man faces fraud charges

BOSTON (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to two federal charges in connection with an adoption network that authorities said bilked couples out of $750,000 still faces 15 other counts of mail and wire fraud in Utah.

Bryan M. Hall, 38, of El Paso, Texas, pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Arthur Garrity to mail and wire fraud and conspiracy. Garrity said 14 other fraud charges would be dismissed at Hall's June 6 sentencing.

Hall was among five people indicted in Boston or Salt Lake City in February on charges of defrauding 350 prospective parents between 1978 and 1983 out of payment for adoptive Mexican children that most never saw.

Republicans not giving up

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The dropping of a lawsuit by the loser of the hotly contested election recount in Indiana's 8th Congressional District does not mean that Republicans are giving up the fight, an aide said.

Party lawyers dropped a lawsuit in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington against Congress, which refused to seat Rick McIntyre after state election officials said he had won by 34 votes, party officials said Thursday.

Attempted capital murder appeal heard

From Staff Reports

An appeal hearing in the attempted capital murder conviction of a Midland man by a seven-man, five-woman jury Feb. 22, 1984, was scheduled for 9 a.m. today before the Texas Court of Appeals 8th Supreme Judicial District in El Paso.

The defendant, Albert Roy Sanchez, then 18, was alleged to have abducted, stabbed and abandoned his former fiance's mother at an isolated oil lease site near Greenwood Oct. 6, 1983. He was accused of taking Arlene Mullin, then 45, to the isolated area on the pretext of showing her a car.

Court-appointed defense attorney Bill Bowden of Odessa filed the motion for appeal on three issues: the lesser included offense of aggravated assault was not included in the charge to the jury; 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin would not allow taxpayers' money to be used to pay expenses for out-of-state reputation witnesses for the defendant; and a confession was improperly admitted into evidence by the judge over the defense's objections.

Sanchez admitted during the trial that he stabbed the woman but said he "didn't mean to do it." He also testified that he carried a strip of bedsheet around for four days before the abduction and had a 10-inch butcher knife concealed in his sock when he induced Mrs. Mullin to accompany him on a drive to see a car he told her he had purchased as a present for her daughter.

The cloth was used as a blindfold that Mrs. Mullin testified she put on after Sanchez told her he wanted her "to be surprised" when she saw the vehicle.

The daughter had left for California to be with her father before the stabbing, according to Mrs. Mullin, who posted the bond for Sanchez the previous spring, after he was arrested on a burglary charge. He was found guilty of that offense and placed on five years probation May 31, 1983.

Mrs. Mullin testified she had introduced Sanchez to her daughter after she had gotten to know him at a restaurant where they worked. The mother also testified the young couple was going to wait until the girl turned 18 before they married.

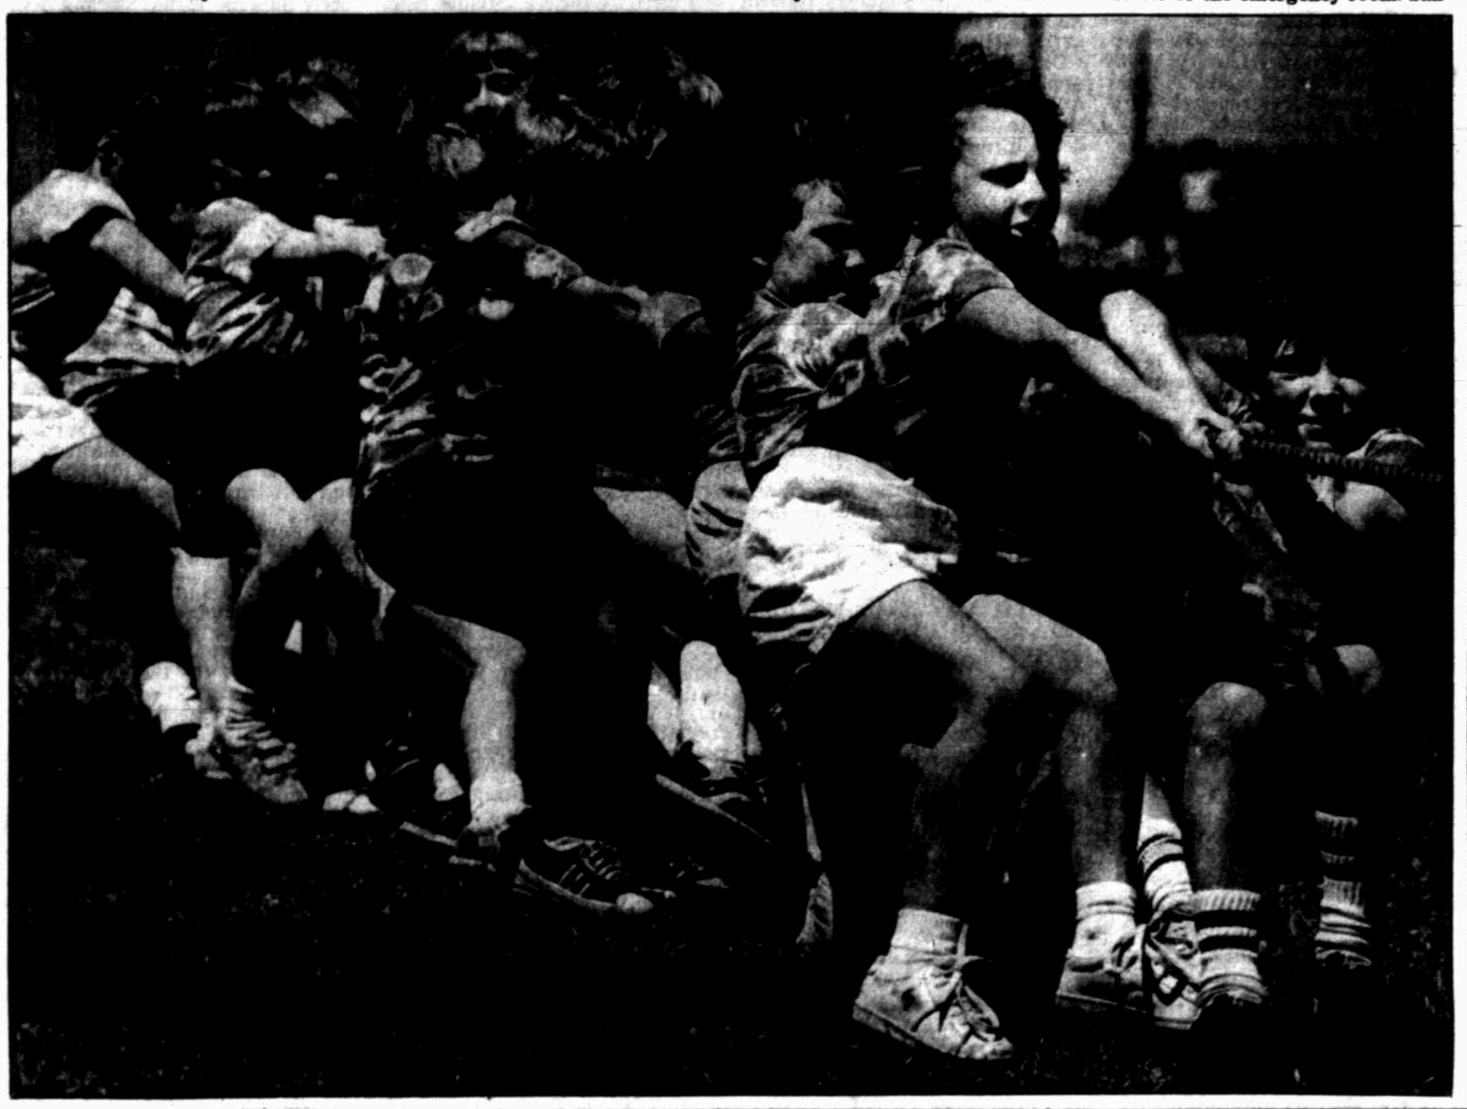

According to her testimony, Sanchez stabbed her in the lower back with the butcher knife and she pleaded with him to take her to a doctor or the emergency room. Sanchez refused, however, stating they would know he had done the stabbing, she said.

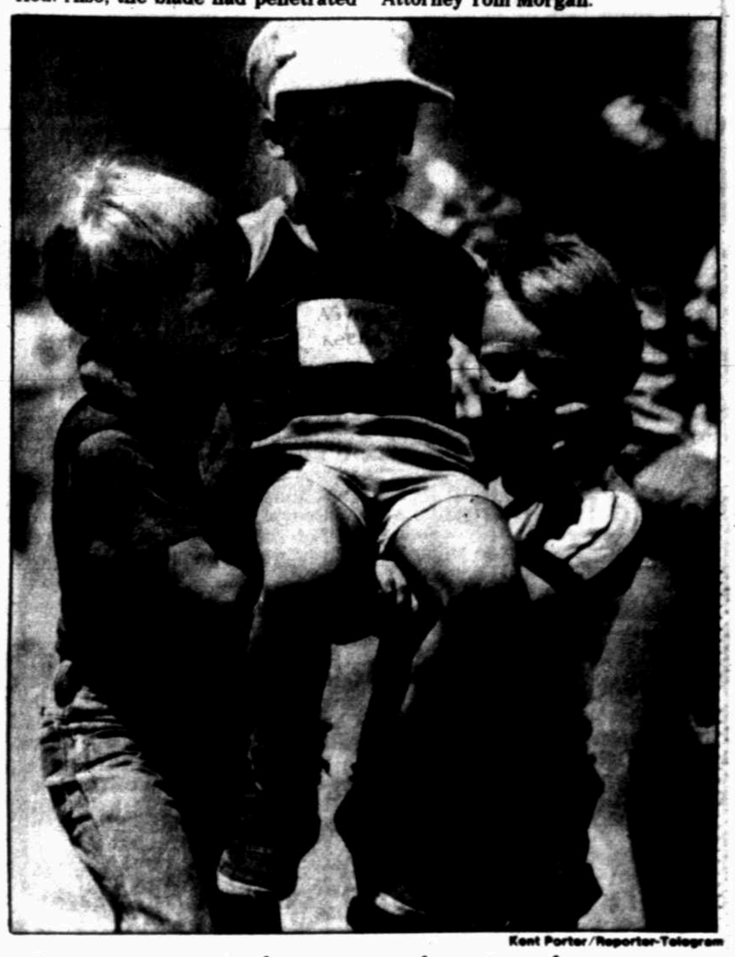

Mrs. Mullin said Sanchez left her but returned twice before she persuaded him she would tell medical personnel she had been abducted and stabbed by two strangers. On the way into town, they ran out of gas and a passing motorist drove them to Midland Memorial Hospital.

A physician on duty that night testified Mrs. Mullin would have died without medical treatment. She had lost 40-60 percent of her circulatory blood volume and had no discernible pulse when she arrived, he testified. Also, the blade had penetrated her intestines, causing her abdomen to fill with blood and she had a blood pressure of 70 over 0 when a normal blood pressure for her would have been 140 over 80.

The youth testified he took the knife with him because he was going to talk to Mrs. Mullin about some remarks she allegedly made about her daughter being "immature and irresponsible." He said he felt "she wouldn't listen to me" unless he had something with which to intimidate her.

Arguing the case for the state today will be Midland County Administrative Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan.

Greenwood gets physical

Order sought against no-pass, no-play rule

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A petition filed by the parents of seven schoolboy football players in state district court seeks a temporary restraining order to prevent enforcement of the no-pass, no-play rule.

The players were barred from spring practice by the rule which prevents Texas school students failing any class from participating in extracurricular activities for six weeks.

An attorney for the parents asked the 51st District Court in Tom Green County for a ruling on the request early today. Students named as plaintiffs Thursday in the action had failed a class for the six-week grading period ending April 12.

San Angelo attorney Kirk Hawkins also urged that a class-action suit be instituted on behalf of all high school and ninth-grade students who might be affected by the rule within the San Angelo Independent School District.

The petition seeks a restraining order preventing the district from enforcing the rule until a hearing can be held on the issue.

"It's somewhat difficult to formulate any position until you understand what is taking place, legally," said Bill Graves, district superintendent. "Until we are contacted by the court, we can't formulate any position."

Similar court actions have been filed across Texas against the rule, imposed on state schools last summer by the Texas Education Reform Act of 1984.

Benefit set for Mule Train owner

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

RANKIN — A benefit for Georgia Carroll Bishop, owner of the legendary Mule Train just west of Rankin, will be held Saturday afternoon and night at the Mule Train, a museum and club.

The rustic rock-walled Mule Train was launched in 1956 by J.C. Carroll, her husband, who died in 1978. She later married Don Bishop.

The benefit is to raise funds for Mrs. Bishop, who is undergoing radiation treatments in San Angelo for inoperable cancer of the left lung. She has no insurance to cover her treatments.

"I'm going to make it," she said Thursday.

Upton County Judge Peggy Garner views the Mule Train as one of Rankin's more prominent tourist attractions and somewhat of a historic site.

"The thing that impresses me about Georgia is the tight ship she runs out there," Judge Garner said. "You don't ever hear anybody talking dirty out there, because she fines them $1 every time she hears a cuss word." She said one customer "cleaned up his act" after he paid $17 in fines.

Judge Garner married Georgia Carroll and Don Bishop in December 1979 at the Mule Train. J.C. Carroll died in June 1978.

"She and Don have continued to carry on those traditions" started by Carroll when he opened the Mule Train in 1956. "She's a good person."

Each Thanksgiving and Christmas, the Mule Train provides free feasts of turkey and deer, other meats, and all the trimmings for friends, travelers, strangers and anyone who hasn't a place to call home or dine on those holidays.

J.C. Carroll had tender blue eyes, a kind heart, much hospitality and a knack for telling tales and making his audience feel most comfortable and welcome.

The Mule Train's atmosphere is created by the hundreds of "artifacts and the friendship and the way they treat people," said the judge.

Carroll, who was nearing 55 when he died at the Mule Train, had lined and cluttered the Mule Train edifice and grounds with artifacts from the rangeland, from the oil patch and with artifacts given him or traded for. He had worked in the oil fields before he "sure got tired of working for the other fellow," he once said. "Had to move around too much."

The Mule Train since has been reorganized but still retains its charm.

Carroll's penchant was for piddling, tinkering, spinning tales, making friends and grubbing up artifacts — from cowboy and Indian days into the petroleum age. The Mule Train has horse shoes to juke boxes.

"People still come in and don't even know he died," Mrs. Bishop said. Travelers from throughout the country and from Europe drop in on the Mule Train, she said.

"If they ever stop, they come back the next year."

The benefit will begin with a barbecue supper at the Mule Train from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday and will continue with a dance that night. The First State Bank of Rankin has set up a Georgia Carroll Bishop Fund to help defray her medical expenses.

Once she learned the cancer was inoperable, Mrs. Bishop said she "didn't want them cutting on me anyway. Once they do, it starts spreading."

Woman realizes dream of being nurse

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Marilyn Richardson has come a long way in her 36 years.

Sometimes though, even she's surprised at her accomplishments — going from wife to mother of three children to student to registered nurse in four short years.

"I always wanted to be a nurse," Mrs. Richardson recalled, "but I got married, put my husband through school and then I started having babies. I just sort of forgot about it."

On Saturday, however, Mrs. Richardson will realize her dream when she walks to the podium at Al G. Langford Chaparral Center to collect her long-awaited associate degree in nursing from Midland College.

Until 1981, Mrs. Richardson claimed to have been content keeping the home fires burning despite her desire to pursue a career.

"Finally, I decided what I wanted to do," she said. "Then I went to my family and told them. I said, 'If you don't want me to do it, tell me now.' They all agreed."

Though the family was "supportive most of the time" Mrs. Richardson said there were occasions when she wondered if it was worth the trouble.

THFC to render decision on behavioral health center

From Staff Reports

The Texas Health Facilities Commission will decide next week if the Clearview Behavioral Health Center in Midland should be granted more time to finish its facility.

A decision had been expected Thursday, but the three-member agency postponed that ruling until it could decide if the project's cost increase of about 28 percent would require new certificate-of-need hearings.

"It's an amendment to increase the cost by 27.75 percent," Judith Monaco, assistant general counsel for the commission, said today. A regulation which went into effect Oct. 1, 1984, requires the new hearings for all projects with a cost increase exceeding 20 percent, she said.

If the commission decides that rule applies retroactively to the Clearview facility, the new hearings could delay completion by several months, said Ms. Monaco. She expected a decision from the commission by May 16.

Clearview officials were attending a board meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., and were unavailable for comment this morning.

Clearview is a joint venture by Midland Memorial Hospital and two Arizona firms, Camelback Hospitals of Scottsdale and Samaritan Health Service of Phoenix. It is to provide treatment for abusers of drugs and alcohol. Ground was broken in November for the 50-bed facility on ten acres of land west of Loop 250 and north of the future extension of Thomason Drive.

Four Midland youths win National Merit Scholarships

From Staff Reports

Four Midland youths were among more than 5,700 high school students nationwide to be awarded National Merit Scholarships for 1985.

Miss Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Collier, 3318 W. Dengar, was named valedictorian of the 1985 graduating class. She also is a member of Student Council, National Honor Society, orchestra, Medical Explorers, Junior Classical League, Junior Engineering Technical Society and the Ready Writing team.

The recipient of four consecutive academic letters, she was named to the All-Region Orchestra, summa cum laude, American Association of University Women, Outstanding Girl and Outstanding Student in math, science and orchestra. She plans to pursue a career in investment banking.

Laura Renick, the recipient of the Texas Christian University M.E. Sadler Merit Scholarship, also is a senior at Lee High School.

Miss Renick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard "Pete" Renick, 3611 Imperial St., is a member of National Honor Society, Medical Explorers, youth delegate to the 1984 Republican National Convention and the Texas French Symposium. She also received first place in the State Parent-Teacher Association Cultural Arts Contest and won third place overall in the State French Contest.

Virginia Lee Waite

UTPB student charged with criminal mischief

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old University of Texas of the Permian Basin student has been released after posting bond for felony criminal mischief in connection with more than $8,000 worth of damage early Thursday morning to bank machines.

Charles Richard Stump of Odessa was released Thursday after posting a $5,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Stump was arrested by police responding to an alarm at the First City National Bank's drive-through, 901 Andrews Highway. According to reports, he had walked up to the officers inspecting the damage, first estimated at $1,070, to explain he had caused it when trying to retrieve a bank card that was taken by the machine.

The man first used another card to pry out the card, and then an instrument to retrieve both, reports said.

A 22-year-old Midland man was arraigned Thursday on a $25,000 bond in connection with the burglary Wednesday morning of Walgreen Drug Store, 215 Andrews Highway. Bond for Lonnie Ray Bishop, who gave police an address at 4603 Ric, was set by Pine.

According to reports, Bishop was arrested at 7:30 a.m. inside the store by police responding to an alarm. Point of entry had not been determined, police said.

Midland police this morning were continuing their investigation into the thefts of two cars.

According to reports filed Thursday, a $13,000 1983 GMC pickup owned by D&M Builders was stolen at 1:30 p.m. from a residence for sale at 3409 Crestmont.

Ben Malone, part-owner of the pickup, said he had gone into a construction trailer at the site and when he returned five minutes later, the pickup was gone. About $3,000 worth of tools were in the truck, reports said.

Keith Thompson, an employee of Texas Electric Service Co. at 1700 W. Wall, told police he was reading meters at the Fairmont Apartment complex, 4700 Boulder, Thursday and left his company car in the parking lot with the keys under the seat. When he returned to the lot after an hour, the 1980 Ford was gone.

Jerry Wells reported the burglary Thursday of a car at the Main Auto Sales lot, 100 E. Florida. Reports indicate entry to the 1982 Toyota was gained by breaking a $250 window with a rock. A $700 in-dash stereo system was stolen in the incident.

Joe Lynde, 3319 W. Cuthbert, told police his house was burglarized Thursday afternoon and a 5-gallon water bottle containing $300 in change was stolen. Entry possibly was gained through a rear door, reports said.

William Lewis, 4315 Neely, No. 801, reported the theft at noon Thursday of $300 worth of camera equipment from Photogenesis camera store, 1028-A Andrews Highway. Taken were a camera and automatic winder, reports said.

A $300 portable television set was reported missing after a burglary of the Sylvia Cole house, 1605 E. Mulberry. According to reports, entry was gained through an unlocked door between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Thursday.

Equipment valued at $255 was reported stolen from a storage room at the Ye Olde English Village, 4303 Andrews Highway. Dottie Craddock, manager, said the theft took place between March 15 and Thursday. Taken were an electric sander, saw, drill and a drop light.

In reports filed with the county sheriff's office, Bob Noble reported the theft of a $1,030 generator from a pickup parked in the lot of American Well Service, 7000 S. Rankin Highway. The offense occurred between 5:45 a.m. and 7 a.m. Thursday.

Andrews celebrates 75th birthday with Diamond Jubilee Arts Festival

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — Andrews is celebrating its 75th birthday this year and has scheduled the Diamond Jubilee Arts Festival for Saturday through May 17. Artists, musicians, writers and dramatists are participating and most of the events are free.

On the kick-off Saturday, the Andrews Art Guild is having its annual show and sale at the Civic Center. The public is invited from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

A folk arts fair is being conducted Saturday. Inside on display at the Community Building will be folk art forms such as quilts, stencil painting, samplers, wood carving and other crafts. Outside in adjoining Pioneer Park, demonstrations ranging from scrimshaw to folk and Indian dancing to spinning will go on all afternoon. Wolf Camp Rendezvous will be on hand for samples of pioneer life. The folk art fair will be from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Local students will be conducting a Piano-thon to raise money to buy a community grand piano. A literary magazine, featuring the writings and drawings of Andrews residents, will be on sale for $3.50 each. Food and drinks will be available.

The grand finale of the Arts Festival is a dinner theater May 17. The show is a variety of music, provided by the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Consort and a local madrigal group and poetry reading. The meal will be catered by the Andrews Mesquite Burners. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for students.

Other events in the Andrews Diamond Jubilee Arts Festival:

— May 13, Public school music concert, high school gymnasium, free.

— May 15, Community church choir production, "The Day He Wore My Crown," First Baptist Church Auditorium, 8 p.m., free.

— May 16, Andrews High School Orchestra (assisted by members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony), Andrews High School Little Theatre, 7:30 p.m., free.

— May 17, Dinner Theatre, Andrews High School under the Dome, 6:30 p.m., $10 adults, $6 for students.

NURSE

"That first semester was really hard. They piled so much on us, especially the courses we needed before we started clinical work.

"I remember one weekend I was home and the wash had piled this high," she said, placing her palm face down across her forehead. "The dishes hadn't been washed and the beds hadn't been made. I just threw my hands up in the air and cried."

A lot of tears and a little persuasion resulted in a family agreement to help lighten the load. Soon afterward the Richardsons were leading as close to normal a lifestyle as possible.

In hindsight, Mrs. Richardson laughingly admits "you look at things differently at 36 than when you're in high school. I set my priorities and I told my family if they weren't willing to help I wouldn't waste my time. I never could have done it without them," she said. "Why, it was as hard on them as it was on me. That oldest one of mine (Melanie), she's always got something going on."

She added: "My husband (Jim) is so neat. When you work in a hospital you see a lot of disturbing things. I'd come home at night and he'd serve as my sounding board. He'd just sit and listen."

Mrs. Richarson said of her classmates, "A lot of us were in the same situation with children. We always wanted to be nurses.

"I think that's what kept a lot of us going. It was a support system," she added.

According to MC instructor Celia Harris, most nursing students are about 28 years old on the average, are married and many have families.

What is unique, she said, is "when these nursing students go to school the whole family kind of goes."

The reasons, she added, are because nursing students generally are highly motivated. It is a time and effort-consuming program."

In time, Mrs. Richardson said she would like to continue her studies and eventually earn a bachelor degree, noting "it will get to the point where I'll have to think about it if I want to stay in nursing."

Hollowell UMC sponsors 'The End of the Road'

Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., is sponsoring a religious play entitled, "The End Of The Road," at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the church's sanctuary. The play is written and directed by Mrs. Addie Allen Johnson.

In it, characters play theme roles. Some play the part of those who keep in touch with Christ and obey His word. By doing this they have been able to stay on the "Road to Christ" and are rewarded by entering into heaven. Other characters, who were so sure of themselves entering into God's kingdom, but were disappointed in the end, are also portrayed.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards, pastor of Hollowell UMC, invites the public to attend.

If babies could only tell you...
Every woman doesn't need a baby-
But every baby needs a mother.

Many things have changed-but not babies. They are just as helpless and demanding in the 1980's as they were in the 1880's. They need "quantity care" around the clock.

The role of motherhood requires love, dedication, hard work, and long hours. The rewards are love, fulfillment, achievement, and a stake in the future.

The role of motherhood means giving your baby a home - with a mother in it. Eagle Forum salutes all women who have chosen the career of mothering in order to nurture their children.

We appreciate the contribution mothers make in rearing strong, self-reliant, moral children who will become citizens capable of self-government.

Happy Mother's Day

Eagle Forum is pro-family organization of 70,000 members, active in every state, working at the local, state and federal levels to protect the social, economic, and moral intergrity of the traditional family. Eagle Forum works to restore to our nation the proudest achievement of the American private-enterprise economy - a society prosperous enough to enable a husband to support his family in a home where his wife can be a fulltime mother to their children.

Violist to play with local quartet

David Dalton

The Thouvenel String Quartet will give its final concert of the season at 8 p.m. Sunday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Joining the quartet for a performances of Brahms' Quintet in G Major, Opus 111, will be violist David Dalton.

Dalton is professor of viola at Brigham Young University. He has toured the United States and Europe as viola recitalist and was a student of the eminent violist William Primrose, with whom he collaborated on several books.

The quartet, which recently returned from tours of China and California, will appear later this month in New York City at Abraham Goodman House.

Single admission tickets will be sold at the door. Season tickets are good for this concert which is part of Midland's second annual Celebration of the Arts. Celebration runs through May 20.

From Staff Reports

Free swimming lessons will be offered by the Midland County Chapter of the American Red Cross and the Midland Parks and Recreation Department at the MHS pool May 20-22.

Class A will begin at 6 p.m. and Class B will begin at 6:30 p.m. Classes are open to all individuals ages 6 years old to adult and will range in skill level from non-swimmer to advanced swimmer.

Each class is 30 minutes long and attendance is required on all three days.

The instructors are under the leadership of a Water Safety Instructor Trainer authorized by the American Red Cross. This is an opportunity to have individual teaching, to test and improve skills and to prepare for the coming swim season.

May 9, 1985

Dear Midland County Citizen and Taxpayer:

I am writing this letter in response to the many inquiries I have received regarding the Bond Election to be held Saturday, May 11, 1985.

The Supporters of Proposition No. 1 are pushing for a downtown courthouse and jail complex. (This concept was voted down 4 to 1 in 1983). We are currently shipping over 20 inmates to other jails. The proposed renovation when plans are drawn, might increase the jail capacity by 20 more inmates. If we experience any growth in jail population, we will still be shipping inmates after the renovation. Proposition No. 1 also calls for a STUDY of future jail and courthouse needs again with a downtown complex in mind which will result in a called bond issue within the next 18 months that easily could be two or three times greater than Proposition No. 2. I don't think that the taxpayers of Midland County want a 40 - 50% tax increase. We have no assurance that if we renovate the jail and spend 1.5 to 2 million all of the Jail Standard Commission objections will be met. And should the larger bond issue in 18 months fail our jail would probably be closed. I consider this a big gamble and an extravagant waste of the taxpayer's money. If we renovate the existing jail we do nothing to address other crowded conditions in the courthouse.

For six years the other Commissioners and I have been involved in studying jail problems, courthouse and jail construction and courthouse expansion needs. Our uppermost concern was to get the best jail and courthouse space with the least burden to the taxpayer. This we have done in most courthouse expansion needs. Our PROVIDES FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A JAIL ON LAND ALREADY OWNED BY MIDLAND COUNTY, BUILT TO PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS ALREADY DRAWN, APPROVED AND PAID FOR, RENOVATION AND REMODELING OF THE CULVER YOUTH HOME AS MANDATED BY FEDERAL LAW, AND THE FREEING-UP OF MUCH NEEDED SPACE IN THE COURTHOUSE. All departments need more room plus we need to provide for another County Court-at-law which has this year been created by the legislature.

Our six year study has resulted in a jail design that will house 225 inmates now with easy expansion of 75 more and ultimate expansion to 450 male inmates with 50 female inmates. Already approved by the Jail Standards Commission, this design called "Line-of-sight" can handle twice the inmates with the same number of jailers. The total expense during the life of a jail is 18% - building, 11% - maintenance and utilities and 71% - jailers and related personnel. Therefore, one can readily see that the "line-of-sight" design is a savings to the taxpayers. Construction for the jail in Proposition No. 2 can be underway in 45 to 60 days.

As an additional bonus in moving the jail and sheriff's office from the courthouse, we gain 21,200 square feet or an increase of 55% in useable space for court rooms and office expansion that will take us well into the year 2000.

If only Proposition 1 passes or if both propositions fail, Midland County can expect a tax increase greater than the tax for Proposition 2. Our backs are literally to the wall. Delays work against us, the taxpayers. I strongly support Bond Proposition No. 2 and I urge you to vote Saturday for Proposition 2. In the short and long run, Proposition No. 2 is the best for the taxpayer.

Sincerely,
Win Brown

Teacher mad at politicians

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Remember when a very tough teacher was mad at you? You wished you were invisible. Looked longingly at an open window. Wondered about the odds of making a clean getaway.

Virginia Budd is one of those teachers and she's mad at legislators, who may be looking for an open window before the session ends in July.

Mrs. Budd, a 28-year veteran of the teaching corps, is president of the Louisiana Association of Educators and is "a little more than tired" of politicians blaming the ills of the public education system on her and her colleagues.

Just a brief conversation with the Opelousas teacher and you can conjure up an image of 144 legislators scrubbing blackboards all day with Mrs. Budd looking on, holding that wicked-looking ruler in one hand.

The part-Cajun — "I'm a half-breed" — has a tradition of teaching in the family.

"My mother couldn't get a teaching job in north Louisiana because her politics weren't right so she moved to Abbeville and met my father. I guess if it wasn't for Huey Long I wouldn't be here."

Pugnacious? "No, call me assertive," she said. "I am determined and I'm willing to say things that many teachers feel and are not able to say."

She's 55, married to an elementary school teacher and the mother of an X-ray technician and a volunteer worker at a drug and alcohol abuse center. They've stopped the tradition.

"With today's pay and politicians blaming us for everything, I don't blame them," she said. "My niece graduated with honors in teaching but she's not teaching, either."

When a teacher is forced to be a bookkeeper, social worker, law enforcement officer, educator and scrounger for the same wages as paid to some unskilled worker, "well, let's just say it doesn't help the morale," said the feisty Mrs. Budd, who still manages to grin through most of the interview.

Many politicians are using teachers as scapegoats, she said while "the teachers are out scrounging to find enough paper, pencils, paste and textbooks to do our job."

The job of president of the state's largest teacher organization required Mrs. Budd to take a year's leave from her special educaion teaching position in St. Landry Parish.

She gets to talk to her husband on weekends and "once and awhile we actually see each other," she laughed.

"I am on sabbatical and I'm taking nine hours while I'm here trying to do this," she said.

Why did she run for the post and just what is it that she does?

"I feel my profession is at risk. Teachers are an endangered species. I'm concerned about the negativism, the political climate and I just feel a responsibility to the profession that I've devoted so many years of life to...

"There is this deep seated anger in me and in many members of my profession about what's happening in education, the fads we are forced to live through, forced on us by the state with no input from us.

"I am trying to go around the state and communicate the feeling to the public. I want to be positive and constructive. The bottom line is the kids. We as teachers are willing to help. We are part of the education family that includes the parents. But, we need help. We need understanding. When at times you are in a class with eager faces looking at you and you don't have a book for all of them...

"Well, we just need some help."

Officer tickets car on roof

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — When a campus officer found a silver BMW parked atop the physical science building at California Institute of Technology, he took it in stride: He got a ladder and wrote a parking ticket.

Besides, such a stunt is tame compared with what departing students at the engineering school can come up with on "Senior Ditch Day," a kind of high-tech April Fool's Day.

According to a tradition dating back to the 1920s, the college's seniors secure their belongings and abandon the campus to underclassmen, rigging their rooms with puzzles, mazes and booby traps, including intricate laser equipment.

One year, a student found his doorway bricked over and his attendance records wiped out. Rooms have been converted into a fish tank complete with sharks, a garage containing a car with engine running, and a barn, cow and all.

Other students have switched the green and red lenses on city stoplights, fired strawberry Jello from a historic cannon and rigged up a launcher to lob oranges at nearby Pasadena City College.

This year, one senior imposed a computerized point system to allow entry to his room, with 55,000 points needed. One student got 3,000 points by shaking hands with each member of the Board of City Directors, or city council. Another got points for taking a bath in a home without the owner's permission.

The rooftop BMW was engineered by students of Page House, who hauled the locked car across campus by fork lift and onto the roof of the 1½-story building by crane.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other hard currencies in early trading in Europe today amid conflicting expectations about a cut in U.S. interest rates. Gold prices fell.

Dealers in Frankfurt said expectations of a possible drop in U.S. interest rates following the Senate's approval of President Reagan's budget pushed the dollar marginally lower.

"The market is looking more and more desperately for a rally, but the longer it fails to happen the more likely prices are to sink lower," said one dealer.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 252.70 Japanese yen from Thursday's 251.75 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 252.30 yen.

–3.124 West German marks, up from 3.123

–2.6295 Swiss francs, up from 2.6285

–9.515 French francs, down from 9.54

–3.5235 Dutch guilders, down from 3.527

–2,003 Italian lire, up from 1,993

–1.3798 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3785

In London, the dollar gained against the British pound, which cost $1.231 compared with $1.2388 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $313 a troy ounce and the city's five major bullion dealers later fixed a recommended price of $313.50. Both were below late Thursday's closing bid of $315.

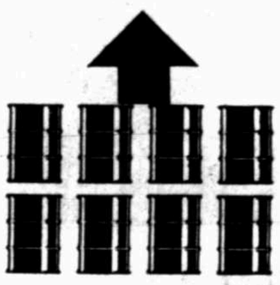

In Zurich, the bid price was $313.25, down from $315.50 late Thursday.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold fell $2.10 to close at $312.80 late Thursday.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.30 a troy ounce, down from Thursday's $6.36.

PBPA: Local, national oil industry must unite

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

RUIDOSO, N.M. — Perry Bolger, president Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) urged the oil industry of the Permian Basin and the nation to "join hands" to confront problems facing the independent sector of the petroleum industry, Thursday night at the opening night of the PBPA annual meeting at the Inn of the Mountain Gods at Ruidoso.

Given the current status of the independent segment of the domestic petroleum industry, plus the legislative and regulatory threats, at both the state and national levels, I am surprised we haven't doubled our membership to counter the threat," said Bolger.

He said the association could meet the threat if every member would enlist a new member and let the politicians in Washington, Austin and Santa Fe know that the Association continues to oppose any additional spending, or taxing until the national defecit and state spending are under control.

Bolger was joined in the call for solidarity by Jon Rex Jones, president Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) and Bud Scoggins, general counsel for the organization. Jones and Scoggins have been on a nationwide tour, informing the oil industry of the dangers of the proposed U.S. Treasury Department flat tax proposal.

Jones said the proposal, if adopted in 1984, would have reduced funds expended by the oil and gas independents by 50 percent, resulting in the drilling of 30,000 fewer oil and natural gas wells and the business failure of 4,000 independent oilmen.

He said the Treasury proposal was based on a number of fallacies. He also said that other flat tax or simplified tax proposals offered in Washington would not work to the advantage of the oil industry.

In other Association business incoming and outgoing officers were named for 1985-86 terms.

Incoming officer are: Frank Kell Cahoon, vice president at large; Gary Vogt, Treasurer; Chester Kilgore, secretary; Ed Thompson, executive vice president and Harry Spannus, membership director. Also named as area vice presidents were: Wilton J. Brown, San Angelo; Charles R. Perry, Odessa; and Beach Snyder, Hobbs.

Outgoing members of the Executive Committee are: Jack Armstrong, Dick Beveridge, George W. Bush, Frank K. Cahoon, Arlen Edgar, Gene Floyd, Jerry Gahr, Budge McDonald, Joseph I. O'Neill, III, and W.J. Stevens.

Odessa oilman gets Top Hand Award

RUIDOSO, N.M. — Veteran oilman, Charles R. Perry, of Odessa, was presented the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's Top Hand Award, Thursday, at the Association's annual meeting in Ruidoso.

The award is presented each year to an individual who has given themselves in outstanding service to the independent segment of the domestic petroleum industry. Former honorees include: Ben Alexander, president DA&S Well Servicing of Hobbs; Stanley Moore, founder of Drilco; Jno. P. Butler, former president First National Bank, Midland; and Ed Thompson, executive vice president PBPA.

A highly successful businessman, Perry is the founder and former owner of Perry Gas Companies, a conglomerate of natural gas related businesses, and a trucking company. He is now involved in aircraft sales and leasing and oil and gas investments.

He has also been involved in the affairs of the oil industry as a member, officer, and director of Permian Basin Petroleum Association for many years, according to Ed Thompson, executive vice president PBPA.

Perry is currently one of the founders and a vice president in the Council for a Secure America, a coalition of oilmen and Jewish leaders who propose a strong national energy policy.

Harris: Hard work key to success

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

Some may wonder what the oil business has to do with football, but Cliff Harris says the two are closely related.

"They both are challenging and take hard work. I've found more ties between football, the oil business and life," said Harris as he spoke to more than 400 people attending the Desk & Derrick's Industry Appreciation Banquet Thursday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

The 36-year-old former safety with the Dallas Cowboys owns Penta Exploration, a Dallas-based oil and gas company, which is currently drilling wells in the Brushy Draw area of Eddy County, N.M.

"I formed my company a year ago at a tough time for the oil business," he said, adding that he feels conditions for the industry are improving.

"It just takes hard work. The Cowboys went to the Super Bowl because we worked hard. Roger Staubach used to say 'a spectacular performance is the result of a lot of unspectacular work.' I believe in a lot of hard work," he said.

Harris learned about work ethics during his college years at Wachita Baptist University in Arkansas. "We'd work hard and then we had an inspirational coach. His name was Buddy Bob Benson. He'd talk to us and we were ready to blow the doors down."

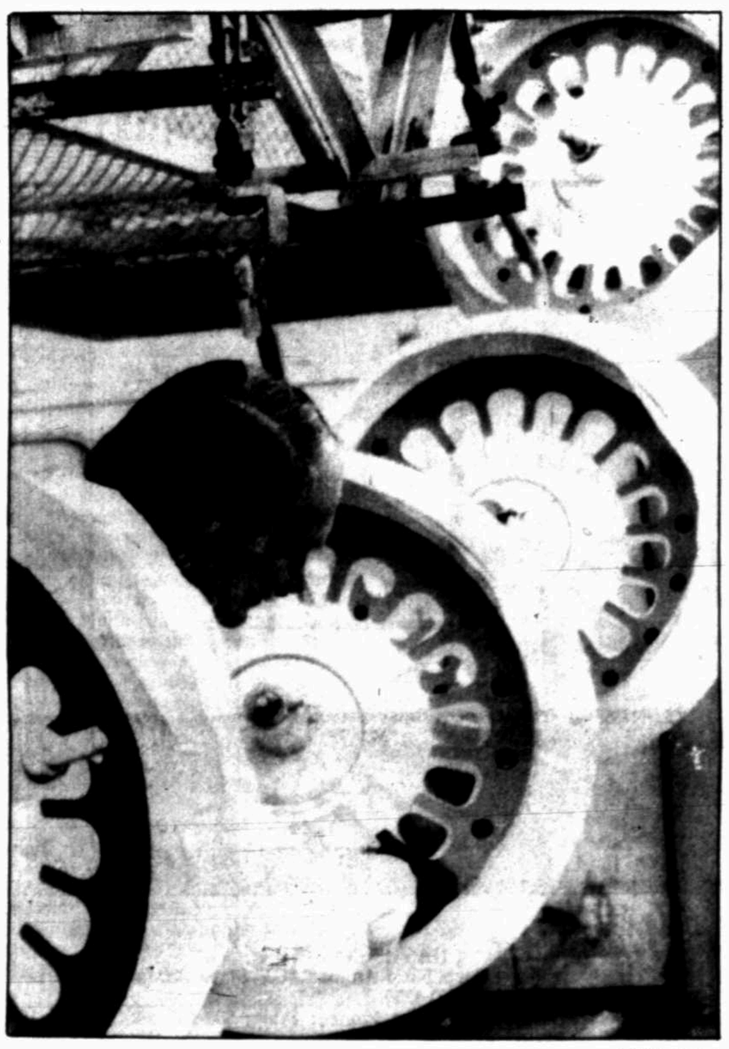

"Then, I started my first game for Dallas against San Diego. Tom Landry came in and I was ready for his speech. He came in and crossed his arms, like he always does, and he talked, like he always does and said 'you've worked hard, you've seen all of the training films, you know what to do. Let's go play ball.' That was his speech the 10 years I played ball for him," he laughed.

Harris quickly added that he respected Landry and that he was a brilliant coach. "He just had trouble with names. He'd come over and say 'Charlie?' He was always getting Charlie Waters and I mixed up. I learned my name after three years."

Another man Harris said he admired was Staubach. "He was instrumental to our success. He was the 'comback king' and usually got the credit, but I must take credit for that Hail Mary pass against Minnesota."

He said he had developed a theory to stop a Minnesota drive but instead helped the team score. "But see, if I had not made that fumble that caused them to score, we would have never been behind and Roger would have never thrown that Hail Mary pass."

"I guess my theory was like geology in the oil business," he joked.

Gasoline, oil send wholesale prices up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher gasoline and heating oil prices sent prices at the wholesale level up .3 percent in April, the largest monthly increase since last November, the government said today.

The gain actually says more about March prices, however, because the energy price calculations in the Labor Department's produce price index lag a month. Energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent report.

Prices at the wholesale level have now risen 1.7 percent for the first four months of 1985, but are only .7 percent higher than April 1984 because there have been several months in which prices declined.

The April increase of 0.3 percent would translate to an annual rate of 3.8 percent if extended for 12 consecutive months.

The volatile increase is the first time in 12 months when the index has shown back-to-back gains.

The department had reported back-to-back increases in November and December but revised the December figure today to show wholesale prices really were flat that month.

Gasoline prices rose 9.5 percent in the April report and heating oil rose 10.2 percent. Natural gas prices, on the other hand, declined .2 percent.

Those energy prices, which translated to a seasonally adjusted 5.8 percent in the energy index as a whole, offset declines in other major areas.

Food prices dropped 1 percent, the fourth consecutive decline. Prices for consumer goods other than food and energy edged down 0.2 percent, after a 0.6 percent increase in March.

Despite the sharp jump in energy prices, which had been a major element in prices at the retail level rising .5 percent in March, analysts say they don't forsee a continuation of that trend and are still predicting another year of relatively modest inflation.

The optimism is based largely on the fact that worldwide oil demand is still well below the production capacity of oil-producing nations and is likely to remain so for some time.

The U.S. dollar also remains high on world markets, tending to hold prices down in the United States.

—New car prices were down .2 percent, the first decline this year, and light truck prices fell .9 percent.

—Capital equipment costs were unchanged after two consecutive months of substantial gains.

—Women and girls apparel costs were both higher, but there was no change for men and boys clothing prices. Shoe prices were down for everybody.

—Tire prices fell 1.2 percent, but rubber footware costs shot up 5.3 percent. Plastic prices increased .9 percent.

Prices turned down sharply for pork and fresh vegetables, after rising a month earlier, and also fell for beef, veal and fresh fruits. By contrast, egg, fish and candy prices all rose.

There were also downturns for over-the-counter drugs, home electronic equipment and household glassware.

Tax revision gets boost despite new questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The drive to overhaul the federal income tax has a fresh pledge of support from the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill is raising questions about the fairness of the Reagan administration plan.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the tax-writing panel, told reporters Thursday, "I am enthusiastic about a bill and will move it as fast as I can." His goal, he said, is final action by the end of the year.

But O'Neill indicated a statement earlier in the week by Reagan is causing him to reconsider his promise to support the plan the president sends to Congress, probably next week.

During his European trip, Reagan volunteered that his plan will be "less progressive" than the current system. O'Neill interpreted that to mean the plan would reverse the 70-year-old principle that the wealthy should pay a greater proportion of their income in taxes than do other Americans.

"The president seems to have reverted to old ideological Ronald Reagan," O'Neill said in a statement. "I have said that I would support the president if he presents a fair tax bill. I am still hoping that the voices of pragmatism within the White House will prevail over the voices of right-wing ideology."

Neither Reagan nor the White House explained the "less progressive" statement. However, the phrasing may just have been the president's shorthand way of pointing out that his plan would reduce most income tax rates, including cutting the 50 percent maximum individual tax rate, which applies only to upper-income people, to 35 percent or less.

The aim of the rate cuts is the same as under the across-the-board tax reduction enacted in 1981: to increase incentives for work and investment by taxing away less of each additional dollar earned. And reducing the number of personal tax rates from as many as 16 down to just three would mean most people would not be pushed into a higher tax bracket when they get a pay raise.

Lower rates for individuals and corporations are certain to be a part of the president's bill, which also calls for raising the 1985 $1,040 personal exemption to $1,800 or $2,000, boosting the standard deductions and limiting or repealing many deductions used by millions of taxpayers.

The big uncertainty is over which deductions will be trimmed. Sources in Congress and the Treasury Department say the president still has not given his final approval to those details, although his plan will be patterned closely after the sweeping overhaul recommended by Treasury last November.

Packwood said he, too, is in the dark and won't endorse Reagan's plan until he's sure what it includes.

However, he indicated the administration will go along with his demands to retain the tax-free status of most employer-paid worker fringe benefits. The only exception is likely to be that the first $300 a year of health insurance premiums paid by the employer would be taxed as income to the employee.

"As far as I'm concerned, there will be a tax bill this year," Packwood said after his committee heard congressional sponsors of three tax plans spell out their ideas.

Business leaders forecast sluggish economic growth

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The U.S. economy, battered by foreign competition and high federal budget deficits, is entering a period of sluggish growth, the country's top business leaders said today.

While the business executives did not forecast a new recession this year or next, they expressed misgivings about the longevity of the current recovery.

The forecast by the business leaders was markedly more pessimistic than the expectations of the Reagan administration.

The executives blamed the country's weakening economy on what they termed the interrelated problems of huge government budget deficits and soaring trade deficits with other countries.

"At no other time has a subject so dominated the concerns of the business community as the related questions of the budget deficit, the trade deficit and the strength of the dollar," said Edmund T. Pratt Jr., chairman of Pfizer Inc., the giant pharmaceutical firm.

Economic growth during the first three months of this year slumped to an anemic 1.3 percent annual rate, the slowest pace since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

The slowdown was blamed primarily on the beating the U.S. industrial sector took from foreign competition both in increased imports and in slumping export sales.

The trade problem has led to growing calls for protectionist measures in Congress, but the business executives said such an approach would be short-sighted, leading to retaliatory actions by other countries.

"The preferred solution to the trade deficit and trade debt problems of the United States is a significant tightening of the federal budget," the Business Council said in a report.

The executives said large federal budget deficits drive up U.S. interest rates, attracting foreign capital to this country and thus driving up the exchange rate of the dollar. A strong dollar worsens the trade deficit by making imports cheaper and U.S. products more expensive on overseas markets.

While the Reagan administration has in the past denied a link between budget deficits and a strong dollar, the business report said, "the root cause of the strong dollar and trade imbalance is high federal budget deficits."

The report said even with congressional approval of further spending cuts, deficits would hover around $200 billion over the next two years.

The business forecast predicted that the economy this year would grow 3.1 percent, far below the 6.8 percent pace turned in during 1984. For 1986, the executives predicted an even more slower growth rate of 2.2 percent.

By contrast, the Reagan administration is predicting growth this year of 3.9 percent and 4 percent for 1986.

While some forecasters have begun to warn that a recession is likely next year, the business group said they believed a downturn in the next 18 months was unlikely.

However, the report warned that the country's trading problems were seen as the major risk in sparking a new recession.

"We have to have an economic policy that recognizes that trade is much more important than it was 20 years ago," said Edward G. Jefferson, chairman of DuPont Chemical Co.

In an effort to seek solutions to the country's trade problems, the executives were devoting their two-day conference at this mountain resort to meetings with U.S. and foreign trade officials.

Ministers from the European Community, Canada, Mexico and Japan, including Akio Morita, chairman of Sony Corp., were participating in the closed-door sessions.

The business forecast said the expected sluggish economic growth would mean little improvement in the unemployment rate, which has been stuck at 7.3 percent for the past three months. The forecast said the rate could drop to 7 percent by the end of this year but would rise to 7.2 percent by the end of 1986.

The executives saw continuing good news on the inflation front, predicting that consumer prices will rise 3.9 percent this year, even better than last year's 4 percent rate. For 1986, the executives forecast inflation of 5 percent.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Amoco begins offshore Louisiana production

Amoco Production Co. announced that natural gas production has begun from its West Cameron 294 field, about 30 miles offshore Louisiana. The field, comprisedof Est Cameron Blocks 293 and 294, is located south of the mouth of the Sabine River in 45 feet of water.

"Production, based on purchaser demand at this time, is running at 70 million cubic feet of gas per day and is being sold to Texas Gas Transmission," said W. V. Grisham, New Orleans regional vice president.

Amoco has 100 percent working interest and operates the West Cameron 294 field, which has a production design capacity of 100 million cubic feet of gas per day.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has cut in half its estimate of the amount of oil and gas that can be recovered from offshore waters, the Office of Technology Assessment says.

The technology office released a report Wednesday on offshore drilling and safety technology, with particular emphasis on Arctic waters, to coincide with the opening of hearings on the subject by the outer continental shelf subcommittee of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"Oil imports, which have declined in recent years, are expected to gradually increase and may again reach the high levels of the 1970s," the report said.

The OTA said the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service now estimates total offshore oil reserves at 12.2 billion barrels, the equivalent of about two years of U.S. consumption and a 55 percent reduction in the previous estimate, made in 1981, of 27 billion barrels.

The estimate for natural gas was cut 44 percent to 90.5 trillion cubic feet, the equivalent of about five years of consumption.

The great bulk of the reduction came through lower estimates for federal waters off Alaska, cut 73 percent to 3.3 billion barrels of oil and 78 percent to 13.9 trillion cubic feet of gas, and in the Atlantic, which dropped 87 percent to 680 million barrels of oil and 48 percent to 12.3 trillion cubic feet of gas.

The 1981 estimates were provided by the U.S. Geological Survey, also a part of the Interior Department, using different estimating methods. Up to now, the Minerals Management Service has used the survey's figures.

O.W. Girard, deputy assistant director of the survey for research, said his office had just begun to study the reserve estimates from its sister agency.

"We wouldn't quarrel with lower estimates, but I don't know about the magnitude (of the reduction)," Girard said. He said he knew of no reason to question the different techniques used to produce the new estimate.

The Minerals Management Service gave the new estimates to the technology office on Feb. 4 in what footnotes said, without elaboration, was a "personal communication."

The estimates were not publicized at that time, and the service did not mention the new figures on March 21 when the department unveiled the first draft of the five-year leasing plan to take effect in 1987.

Mattox says Texas could gain $215 million in dispute

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas stands to gain up to $215 million if a federal appeals court sees things the state's way in an offshore oil dispute, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox on Wednesday filed a 50-page brief with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, asking it to uphold a lower court ruling granting Texas a 50-percent share of revenues from federal oil and gas leases off the Texas coast in the Gulf of Mexico.

The U.S. Interior Department is appealing U.S. District Judge Robert Parker's 1984 ruling that ordered the federal government to share oil revenues in a "fair and equitable" manner with coastal states.

Parker said that is 50 percent, but the Reagan administration has challenged his finding.

"The effect of prior Texas leasing and development on federal bonus payments was a staggering windfall for the federal government," the brief said, because the state's initiative substantially increased federal revenue.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Revenues of the nation's 100 largest black-owned companies for 1984 grew 10 percent from the previous year, outpacing the 6.9 percent expansion in the gross national product, according to an annual survey by Black Enterprise magazine released Wednesday.

Auto dealerships, which represented nearly half of the top 100 black-owned businesses, saw robust growth in sales last year, the survey indicated. Similarly, there were increases in revenue for computer, media and entertainment concerns included in the survey. However, the year was marked by stagnant or declining sales for many oil concerns and hair-care companies.

"From the list, you can see that black-owned businesses are continuing to grow and to grow into the mainstream," said Earl G. Graves, publisher of Black Enterprise. "We're seeing a trend toward a more service-oriented economy, and the businesses on our list are reflecting that."

The four largest black-owned companies were unchanged from last year's list. In the No. 1 position was the Johnson Publishing Co., the Chicago-based media and cosmetics concern that publishes Ebony and Jet magazines and manufactures Fashion Fair cosmetics. The company's sales increased 17.7 percent in 1984 from the previous year, resulting from higher advertising revenue and improved cosmetics sales, the magazine survey stated.

In the No. 2 position was Motown Industries, the entertainment company. Motown's sales increased 26 percent, Black Enterprise said, largely because of the success of records by Stevie Wonder and Lionel Richie.

H.J. Russell Construction Inc., a construction, development and communications concern based in Atlanta, and the Thacker Construction Co., a Decatur, Ga., construction and engineering company, were Nos. 3 and 4, respectively.

In fifth place was Soft Sheen Products Inc., a manufacturer of hair products based in Chicago. Soft Sheen ranked eighth on last year's list.

Absent from the 1984 survey was the Fedco Foods Corporation, the New York-based supermarket chain that was soldin August. Mr. Graves said it was no longer considered a black-owned business.

Of the companies on the list — the magazine's 13th annual survey, published in its June issue — auto dealerships were the largest group in terms of revenue, with sales representing $812.2 million, or 32 percent of the revenue for all 100 companies.

Construction-related concerns accounted for $343.8 million in sales, or 13.4 percent of the revenue of the listed companies. Sales of energy and petroleum distribution companies totaled $260.1 million, or 10.2 percent of the total.

"The number of black-owned automobile dealerships shrank substantially during the recession and a number went out of business then," said Andrew F. Brimmer, president of Brimmer & Co., an economics and financial consulting concern in Washington. "This is a revival. They've just about gained the number they had before the recession."

Graves said that there were also more computer concerns on the list and that the largest black-owned companies were "no longer part of the side show" but had become "part of the main event."

While Graves interpreted the results of the survey as an indication of increasing economic brawn, some others said the growth of the black-owned companies was too languid to be considered encouraging.

Murdoch to sell Chicago newspaper

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Sun-Times is going up for sale for the second time in less than two years so that its owner Rupert Murdoch can buy a local television station, the newspaper's publisher says.

Murdoch has decided to sell the paper rather than seek an exemption to federal rules for his purchase of WFLD-TV, Sun-Times publisher Robert Page said Thursday. WFLD is one of seven stations Murdoch is buying from Metromedia Inc. for $2 billion.

"Yes, it's true that Rupert Murdoch has decided to sell the Sun-Times," Page said in a memo circulated Thursday to Sun-Times employees. "He has determined that he will comply with FCC (Federal Communications Commission) regulations which now prohibit cross-ownership of newspapers and TV stations in the same market."

On Monday, Murdoch said that he and oilman Marvin Davis would purchase the Metromedia stations, then sell one of them, WCBV-TV in Boston, to Hearst Corp. for $450 million.

Murdoch also is purchasing WNEW-TV in New York, where he owns the New York Post. Through spokesman Howard J. Rubenstein, Murdoch said, "We're under no pressure to sell the New York Post. We are proud of the newspaper, and there, too, we are considering all our options."

On Wednesday, Rubenstein had said Murdoch did not intend to apply for a waiver of the government's cross-ownership rules.

Murdoch also owns newspapers in Boston and San Antonio and several magazines, including New York magazine, as well as media companies in Great Britain and Australia.

In a statement to the Sun-Times staff on Thursday, Murdoch said, "We are under no pressure for an early sale. We are putting first things first and getting our clearances from the FCC.

"The Sun Times' profitability is nearly twice what it was when we bought it. There is no doubt about the paper's growing strength or its future. We hope to have at least 18 months to consider our options."

"I don't believe people are optimistic or pessimistic," said reporter Charles Nicodemus, Sun-Times Newspaper Guild chairman. Nicodemus said many members of the editorial staff had weathered the 1978 dismantling of the Chicago Daily News, the subsequent move to the Sun-Times and its eventual sale to Murdoch.

Murdoch bought the Sun-Times for $90 million cash in November 1983 and assumed control in January 1984.

The purchase came 10 months after Marshall Field V and his half-brother, Frederick Field, announced plans to dissolve Field Enterprises Inc., which had owned the newspaper.

A spokeswoman for Marshall Field V said Thursday the former owner was not interested in regaining control of the newspaper.

Hartley Steward, general manager of the Toronto Sun, visited the Sun-Times newsroom Thursday, and had planned another visit for today. The Toronto Sun Publishing Corp., which had shown interest in the Sun-Times at the time of Murdoch's 1983 purchase, bought the Houston Post the same year for $100 million.

At the time of Murdoch's purchase, the Sun-Times was the nation's seventh-largest daily newspaper with a circulation of 649,000.

At the beginning of this month, the Sun-Times announced daily circulation of 639,187 and Sunday circulation of 690,904.

Murdoch purchased the struggling New York Post from publisher Dorothy Schiff in December 1976 for approximately $30 million, and later bought New York magazine and the Village Voice.

Copper still significant in Arizona

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — An mining executive says copper made a significant contribution to Arizona's economy last year despite its overall slump — and that there are signs of a rebound, besides.

C.J. Hansen, president of the Arizona Mining Association, said he based his conclusion of surprising "bedrock strength" in the industry on a study complied by the Western Econommic Analysis Center in Marana.

And going beyond the study, he added, "given the efficiencies developing in mining operations and the signs of a better copper market, I believe this industry is ready for a rebound."

George F. Leaming, who compiled the study, said in it that the overall contribution of the copper industry continued to fall in 1984 as producers continued to curtail some operations.

Leaming also said the importance of the industry as a source of jobs and person income for Arizona residents continued to drop under the weight of lower copper prices, slack demand and continued labor troubles.

Total 1984 employment in the Arizona copper industry dropped to 11,600 people, down 18 percent from a year earlier, he said, and well below the about 23,000 it employed at its peak a few years earlier.

However, Leaming said, the actual tonnage of copper produced in Arizona in 1984 was greater than that of 1983 — but its value was one percent below that of the previous year.

Nonetheless, Hansen said, figures weren't as grim as he had expected.

Leaming said the total amount of moneey spent in Arizona by the copper industry totaled nearly $1 billion, though even that was 2.5 percent below the 1983 total. Leaming also said that circulation and recirculation of copper industry payrolls, purchases, taxes and other payments amounted to almost $4 billion — three times the copper industry's own sales.

Hansen noted that the study had found that the industry spent nearly $550 million with Arizona firms last year, an increase of $43 million over 1983.

Hansen said it also found that Arizona copper producers paid workers $334 million in wages and salaries last year and that the average weekly copper pay of $555 led all other categories.

Yield columns represent: annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. r - restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 261 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $1.0 billion to $186.7 billion during the week ended May 7, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 7.82 percent from 7.83 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 7.93 percent from 7.98 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity increased one day to 45 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Assets of taxable money funds increased $1 billion this week as institutional investors switched back into the funds. During March and April, the average rates on short-term money market securities plunged more than 90 basis points (0.9 percent) before inching upward the first week of May. In those two months, the Donoghue's 7-day Average Yield of taxable money funds had a net increase of one basis point (0.01 percent). The Average Stated Rate on bank and thrift money market deposit accounts, as reported by Bank Rate Monitor, decreased by 17 basis points (0.17 percent) during that 8-week period. The spread between the Donoghue's 7-day Average Yield and Bank Rate Monitor's Average Stated Rate widened from 12 to 30 basis points from March 6 to April 30."

Diet plan stresses learning to be 'thin from within'

Copley News Service

Locked up somewhere in our fat cells, kicking and screaming for deliverance, is that thin person within. So, throw away the scales, push aside the calorie counters and feed this streamlined specimen the key.

Your mirror will thank you every day. So will the salesperson who fits you for a new wardrobe.

Judy Wardell — all of 5 feet 6 inches and a taut 114 pounds — liberated her current leanness from a prison of plumpness a decade ago. She learned to think thin. To identify hunger. To eat only what she wanted only when she wanted it. And, ultimately, to reach exemplary proportions by consuming ideal portions.

THE RESULT: Thin Within, a weight-loss program based in the San Francisco Bay area in which 20,000 people claim to have lost weight and gained self-esteem. Wardell, 44, launched the Thin Within workshops 10 years ago to spread the gospel of finding one's natural weight — the thin person within — through such strategies as:

— Eating the foods you love, which doesn't necessarily mean carrying on a romance with celery sticks and alfalfa sprouts.

"Sometimes," admitted Wardell, "I might even substitute dessert for dinner — if that's what my body craves."

More often than not, though, it's something more nutritious. "The body," she said recently, "has a way of telling you what you need. The whole concept of Thin Within is to be in tune with your body and not the clock or the traditional three square meals a day."

ON THE SURFACE, such an eating plan would seem to be vulnerable to all sorts of abuses. Too much fat. Too much sugar. Too little of the nutrients that promote optimal health.

But Wardell — who never counts calories, rarely gets near a scale and worries not about the percentage of protein, carbohydrates and fat in her diet — seems impervious to such pitfalls. A good listener, that body of hers.

"My husband (Dr. Arthur Halliday, 53) is a physician," she said, "and he administers an annual battery of blood tests. I check out fine. Sometimes I take supplements, sometimes I don't — depending on whether I feel I need them or not.

"I've gone from a three-square-meals, meat-and-potato childhood to a person who may eat only one or two meals a day. It's interesting that people on this plan may head first for the previously forbidden foods.

"Then, noticing how they feel, they go for what the body really wants, which is a balance of nutrients. In a nutrition study at the University of Toronto, Dr. Herman Polivy offered children junk food and well-balanced meals.

"First, they went for the junk. But after three days they were eating healthy food — responding to their bodies' needs."

WARDELL — WHOSE PLAN is detailed in her new book ("Thin Within: How to Eat and Live Like a Thin Person," Harmony Books, $14.95) — is quick to point out that the average stomach is the size of a fist. "That's not much to fill," she said, "so why not be selective."

Accordingly, she divides food into three groups: pleasers (foods we love), teasers (those that are convenient, look better than they taste and are invariably sought when we're not hungry and just want something — anything — to eat) and total rejects.

"For me," she said, "potato chips are teasers. When they're sitting in front of you, they sort of call you. But they don't interest me anymore.

"Ice cream is a pleaser, but it can be a teaser, too. If you're not really hungry and you see someone eating an ice cream cone, you may want one — but the urge is psychological, not physical."

And distinguishing the psychological from the physical is one of the keys to success in the Thin Within philosophy. It takes time, Wardell concedes, and there are major hurdles to climb — one being our natural resistance to hunger.

"People fear hunger," she said. "They're afraid of feeling empty. They identify it with starving children in India. Actually, it's not bad. When you are hungry — that is, 0 on a fullness scale of 0 to 10 — you are getting a clear message from the body. It may say, 'Cashew chicken salad.'

"When you're at 3 instead of 0 on the scale, the messages are fuzzy. What you really need may be a break, a hug or a nap. Or maybe you're just procrastinating."

TO SUCCEED in the program, Wardell further recommended:

Sixty percent of Thin Within's graduates have lost the weight they wanted and kept it off permanently, she claims. Clients have ranged from the obese to those merely wishing to improve their perspective of food, including those suffering from anorexia and bulimia.

For Wardell, the eat-what-you-want method worked better than having her jaw wired shut — a condition she was subjected to for six weeks to heal a fracture sustained when she fell down a flight of stairs.

"I lost weight," she recalled. "Down to 98 pounds. But I gained it all back because I was thinking as a fat person. I was worried about gaining, preoccupied with food. I didn't change the way I felt about myself. I didn't experience myself as a thin person."

Nor did as much as four hours of vigorous exercise daily as a professional dancer do the trick. "I would eat to compensate," she said. "I still hadn't learned how to think thin."

Earlier, at 21, she was bulimic for a year — a time when the term bulimia was confined, like the practice, to the closet.

SHE LOST MORE self-esteem than weight. And the binging became uncontrollable: "After a large meal — everything from escargot to cherries jubilee — I would stand up and eat toast with peanut butter or jelly on it until I was gorged." Then she would purge — and feel miserable.

"It had nothing to do with a physical hunger," she said. "It was a void that I felt needed to be filled, and I thought food was the answer. It never is."

It wasn't until Wardell began to analyze thin people — how they regarded food, how they listened to their bodies — that she got a handle on her own situation. In eight months, 38 pounds came off. And stayed off.

"The only way it can work," she said, "is if it is positive and feels good. You can't deprive yourself. It has to be a way of life, something you can follow on weekends and holidays — any place, any time.

"Most people eat by the clock, eat to please a loving parent or a well-meaning host or eat for emotional comfort. You have to learn that you don't eat because the clock says it's noon. You don't have to finish everything on your plate, and a bag of chocolate cookies will not solve the problems at the office or mend a broken heart.

AS FOR MEASURING our weight with scales, forget it, says Wardell.

"Our clothes and your mirrors tell us if we look and feel good. Scales offer useless information."

Wardell's ability to listen to her body in determining what and when she eats is applicable, as well, to exercise. "I love to walk and hike, and I love to dance," she said.

"I also run 3 miles two or three times a week and work out on a rowing machine. I used to do it no matter what. Now I've learned to take a day off if I feel like it."

For those less apt to stop eating when their bodies tell them they've had enough — a signal that, at first, many people may find confusing — Wardell professes compassion.

"Don't feel because you've already overeaten that you might as well keep going. That is fat thinking. It's guilty thinking.

Unusual Mother's Day card sent to congressmen

Hearst News Service

The most effective Mother's Day card this year won't go to mother, but to every member of Congress.

It comes from the Older Women's League, and it's a traditional rose-decorated, pink card with sampler-styled lettering. The message, however, is sharp rather than sweet:

Your mother didn't bring you up so you could let other mothers
down.

Inside, in lieu of a verse, this question is addressed to every U.S. senator and member of the House of Representatives: "What do you suppose she'd say about your vote on these issues?

— "Freezing the Social Security Cost-of-Living-Allowance

— "Cutting low-cost senior housing

— "Increasing the amount Medicare beneficiaries will pay for health care

— "Decreasing the amount of federal monies available to the states for Medicaid

— "Increasing military spending while reducing social programs

"Happy Mother's Day."

"By Mother's Day, May 12, we will have 20,000 of these cards in the mail," said Tish Sommers, national president of OWL. "Our 13,000 members in 93 chapters across the country want this year's Mother's Day to increase public awareness of the severe social and economic problems women face as they grow older. For the past two years OWL has zeroed in on Mother's Day to bring to public attention the fact that once the job of mothers and grandmothers is done, they are forgotten in public policy.

"We want to put their priorities before Congress. For example, if the Social Security cost-of-living allowance is eliminated, each year it will push another 500,000 older persons below the poverty line. The Reagan budget now before the Senate would have a disastrous effect on older women. Although the President promised not to cut Social Security, he changed his mind. That Social Security check is a lifeline to so many older women."

Sommers, a "free-lance agitator" who used her 59th birthday in 1974 to launch what has become a national OWL attack on ageism, said the "send a Mother's Day card to Congress" campaign is flourishing.

OWL's educational and development office is at 3800 Harrison St., Oakland, Calif. 94611, telephone (415) 658-0141, although a national office was established in Washington in 1983. The national OWL grew out of the 1980 Alliance for Displaced Homemakers and the White House Mini-Conference on Older Women.

Statistics show women's struggle

Hearst News Service

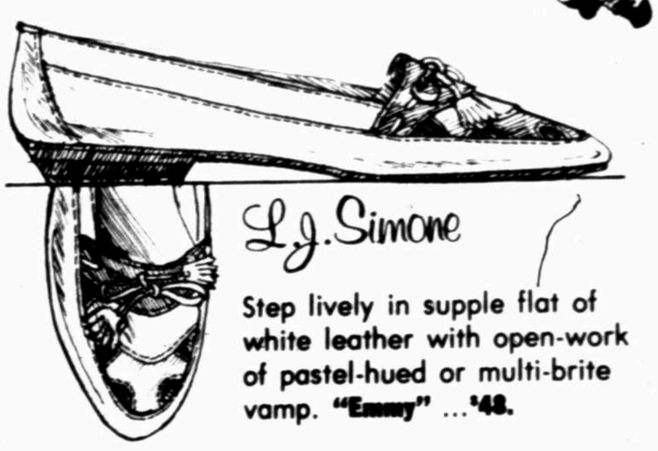

The grim statistics gathered by OWL, now in its fifth national year of fighting for the woman who lives on $330 a month Social Security, point to:

— 2.8 million women live at or below the poverty level, trying to make ends meet on Social Security alone.

— 4 million women between 45 and 65 have no health insurance, and many are unable to obtain it at any price.

Awareness can reduce poison risk

Copley News Service

You're in the middle of cleaning the bathroom and the phone rings. While you run to answer it, curiosity gets the best of your 2-year-old, and she reaches for the toilet bowl cleaner.

The doorbell rings just as you've finished loading the dishwasher with detergent or filling a mop bucket with a pine-oil floor cleaner. As you leave the room, the substance is available to your toddler for the taking.

In the first two examples, the danger is burns — from the acid in the toilet bowl cleaner and the alkaline dishwasher detergent. In the third, the risk is chemical pneumonia, a very serious condition caused when a victim chokes on an oil-based cleaner and aspirates it into the lungs.

Such poisonings are happening more regularly. Even though parents keep their household chemicals locked up, their youngsters are getting to them once they're taken out of safety-latched cabinets to be used.

Maureen Stoen, education development coordinator at the San Diego Regional Poison Center: "The potentially toxic chemical may be in a bucket, on a rag, on a sponge. The moment you take it out of the cupboard, the minute you turn your back, there can be a potential poisoning. It takes a lot of discipline not to answer the door until you've put it away, or at least out of reach."

But Stoen indicates that's what needs to be done.

According to Stoen, a registered nurse, there are telltale signs of poisoning, if you're not sure what has happened:

— The child has vomited.

— There are signs of the substance around the mouth and lips.

— There are burns on the lips or mouth from a corrosive substance.

Once poisoning has been established, consider the following:

— First, call a physician or a poison center to determine whether the poison should be diluted or eliminated.

— Fluids should not be given to an unconscious patient, nor should syrup of ipecac, without recommendation by a physician or a poison center.

— When contacting a poison center to report a suspected incident, give the child's age, weight, name and amount of substance ingested and whether the child has vomited (in which case, it should be saved).

— Keep the caps on both household products and medications closed tightly after use.

— For everyone's safety, keep products in their original containers — specifically, don't put leftover gasoline or other automotive products in soda cans or milk cartons.

— Clean medicine cabinets periodically

Study finds children of employed mothers have better reading skills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children whose mothers work outside the home read better than their classmates, a federally financed testing agency reports.

The study also says significant numbers of students report heavy television viewing, with some 40 percent of 4th graders saying they watch five hours or more per day. But the television addiction diminishes as students get older.

"Students with working mothers — contrary to what many would expect — performed better in reading," the National Assessment of Education Progress also said its latest survey of schoolchildren.

Also, "more children of working mothers reported attending nursery school, which is associated with better reading performance," the study said.

Archie Lapointe, executive director of the testing program, said the findings "clearly refute any categorical statement that when mothers go to work their children's reading achievement automatically suffers."

Fifty-six percent of the fourth graders, 64 percent of the eighth graders and 66 percent of the 11th graders reported their mothers worked outside the home.

The National Assessment since 1969 has conducted periodic tests of a large cross-section of youth on a variety of subjects. The tests, financed by the U.S. Department of Education, formerly was administered through the Education Commission of the States in Denver.

Those were the first results released from a survey of nearly 100,000 students in grades 4, 8 and 11 tested in 1983-84. The testing agency, now administered by Educational Tecsting Service of Princeton, N.J., plans torelease the full results of its latest reading and writing tests this summer.

The latest survey found:

— Roughly 40 percent of the fourth graders watch five hours or more of television daily. In eighth grade, 25 percent watch that much and by 11th grade the percentage of such television addicts drops to 12 percent.

— One-third of the fourth graders and about one-fifth of the eighth and 11th graders reported they did not have any homework assigned the night before.

— Most 13- and 17-year-olds reported doing more homework in 1983-84 than students their age reported when asked the same question in 1979-80.

DEAR ABBY

'Peepholes' invade privacy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I was a 16-year-old girl, I discovered a semi-concealed peephole in the wall of a ladies' rest room at a gasoline station. The hole had been strategically drilled at a level that would afford the "viewer" on the other side of the wall a pretty good peep show.

Since then I have examined the walls of hundreds of gas station rest rooms and have found a surprising number of peepholes!

I think gas station owners who are aware of this disgusting invasion of privacy should be held accountable by law. What agency should I contact to put a stop to this? And if I can't do anything to stop it, perhaps a letter in your column will alert women to the fact that they may be inadvertently the "star" of some creep's peep show. — DISGUSTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DISGUSTED: Write to the consumer relations department of the oil company that owns (or leases) the gas station.

And until some action is taken to ensure privacy, men as well as women should be on the lookout for such peepholes. (A view is possible from either side of the wall.) P.S. An important remedy: Stuff the hole with a wad of toilet tissue. Here's looking at you, lechers!

DEAR ABBY: You often advise people to talk to counselors, but let me ask you something: Can counselors help people decide whether to have children or not?

I've seen two counselors about this problem, and they were no help at all. They've seen so many kids with problems that their stock answer is: "When in doubt — don't."

I could be happy with or without kids, but my husband loves kids and he would make a wonderful father. I like kids, too, but they walk all over me; I've never been able to exercise authority over anyone. Even 2-year-olds push me around.

I told this to one counselor, and he said, "If you had a kid, by the time he was 10, he'd be kicking your rear end."

What do you think, Abby? Should I take a chance and leave all the disciplining to my husband? — WEAK IN WATERLOO, IOWA

DEAR WEAK: No. Kids who have a "wait 'til your father comes home" kind of mother usually grow up hating their fathers and walking all over their mothers.

Don't take on parenthood until you've had a course in parenting and feel equal to the task. It's an 18-year commitment (minimum).

DEAR ABBY: I have had this friend for many years. We go out together — her husband and mine — and we even take trips together. I guess you could call us "young senior citizens."

"Molly" is a lady of good breeding and good manners, but she does something that is rude, crude and downright uncalled for. No matter if we're dining at someone's home or at a dinner at a restaurant, after she has finished her meal, Molly takes a tissue out of her purse and blows her nose at the table. And I mean she has a real blow-out! She does this every time without fail.

I asked her, after one of these "blowouts," if she had sinus trouble. She just said "No." (I guess she didn't get the hint because she still does it.)

I truly like Molly. She's kind-hearted and a wonderful friend, but this one habit drives me (and my husband) up a wall.

If you print this, you will have me for a friend for life. — ABSOLUTELY ANONYMOUS

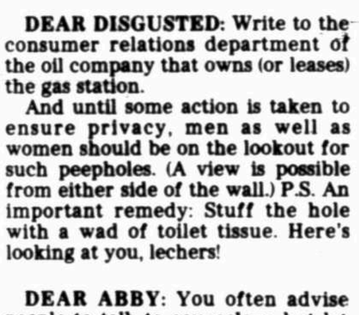

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Hello, friend.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 11, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Once you and your co-workers recognize the benefits of cooperation, the sky is the limit on what you can achieve! Be on the lookout for travel opportunities; the contacts you make on trips prove very valuable. A love relationship needs tender nurturing if it is to blossom. Get out and about more. The more interests you have, the better companion you are. A long-sought career goal moves within reach. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: dancer Martha Graham, comic Mort Sahl, actor Doug McClure, Mets pitcher Walt Terrell, Kansas City Royals' Dale Iorg, comic Phil Silvers, artist Salvador Dali, musical genius Irving Berlin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend or relative may not live up to a promise. Rely on your own efforts. Spend some time alone today sorting things out in your own mind. A romance develops.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ask questions if suspicious of someone's intentions. Having title to your home or a piece of property gives you a feeling of security. Romance thrives. Let mate know your plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Curb a tendency to be stubborn or impulsive. Loved ones could be upset by a sudden switch. Think twice before deciding whether or not to go ahead with a career or domestic change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An older or more experienced person helps you solve a personal problem. Do not be embarrassed that you needed assistance. Pooling ideas with someone who shares your creativity could mean new profits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An excitingly offbeat entertainment idea receives a warm welcome. A social event puts you in contact with prominent and influential people. Romance continues to progress at a steady pace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family and domestic affairs enjoy generally favorable influences. Watch a tendency to be inflexible or overly demanding. A gifted friend or relative suggests an unusual way to make money. Investigate further.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Complete household chores and shopping early in the day. The afternoon belongs to family and friends! A letter or message brings surprising news from a loved one. Call and ask for details.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get in touch with someone you haven't seen recently. Throw a last-minute party and tell your guests to dress casually. A new financial plan should make money worries a thing of the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You get a lucky break where investments are concerned. Make the most of an unusual opportunity. Relatives could be involved. Put your request in writing if asking for a loan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An older or more experienced person can hasten progress now. Romance becomes more serious. There is even talk about setting a wedding date! Hold off on buying a special gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Nothing happens by chance today. A development that some find startling was carefully planned. Your intuition is more accurate than in the recent past. Follow up a hunch concerning an employment matter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your co-workers are eager to cooperate when you adopt a more imaginative approach to work. An improvement project adds to the comfort and value of your home. Romance continues to surprise you.

CANADIANS QUALIFY FOR WORLD PLAY

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 2 ♡ J 10 6 3 ◇ 10 6 2 ♣ A Q 8 7 2
WEST ♠ J 9 8 4 ♡ Void ◇ A K Q J 9 8 7 4 ♣ 3		EAST ♠ K 10 7 6 5 ♡ 9 8 7 4 2 ◇ 5 ♣ 9 4
	SOUTH ♠ A Q 3 ♡ A K Q 5 ◇ 3 ♣ K J 10 6 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	5 ♠	Dble	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇.

In 1985, North America will be represented by two teams in the Bermuda Bowl, the team championship of world bridge. The U.S. is automatically qualified, and its team will be selected at trials to be held in Memphis later this month.

The other team will be Canada. It earned the right by defeating Mexico and Bermuda in a playoff for the second berth. Here's a hand from Canada's match against Bermuda.

West's bid is not a misprint. It is a "transfer preempt" showing the next-higher suit. In this case it might have helped the opponents, for North was able to double to show clubs, making it easy for South to contract for slam. Had West been able to preempt naturally with five diamonds, the outcome of the auction would have been less clear.

Six clubs is an excellent contract, and but for an unfortunate break and a moment of carelessness by declarer, it would have sailed home. West decided that his best bet to beat the hand rested on a heart ruff. Since he was unlikely to find a high-card entry in his partner's hand, he led the four of diamonds.

Declarer reflexly played low from dummy, and an astonished East found that he had won the first trick with the five of diamonds. When he recovered from the shock he had no difficulty finding the heart shift which his partner ruffed—down one.

West's preempt and lead of a low diamond should have been a warning signal to declarer. Had he played dummy's ten on the opening lead, he would have ended up with an overtrick.

Filmmaker hospitalized after taking ill at reception

LeRoy, 84, appeared to be having difficulty breathing Thursday while waiting to greet Barbara Bush at the Century Plaza Hotel, where she received the 21st annual Woman of the World Award from Childhelp USA, a non-profit group working against child abuse.

He taken to the Beverly Hills Medical Center for examination, then released in good health an hour later, said Dr. Stephen C. Acosta, the emergency room physician.

LeRoy, whose screen credits also include "Little Caesar," "Little Women," "The Bad Seed" and "The Green Berets," was awarded a special Academy Award in 1945 for his contribution to the film industry.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley said he learned a thing or two about storytelling from his great-aunts, especially one who enjoyed a dip of snuff while spinning yarns.

"When she was in good form (she) could drop a lightning bug at six yards," said Haley, 64, who was honored Thursday by the state Legislature with a resolution to convert his family home in rural Henning into a museum.

Haley

The author of "Roots" said his great-aunts enjoyed a dip of snuff during storytelling time on the porch of the home, which he has agreed to sell to the state for $1.

The House Finance Committee on Thursday approved a $182,250 appropriation for the conversion.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The works of exiled Czechoslovakian novelist Milan Kundera have "given expression to the struggle of the individual for his freedom," said a panel that selected him for the Jerusalem Prize for the Freedom of Man in Society.

In conjunction with Israel's annual book fair, Mayor Teddy Kollek on Wednesday presented the prize, worth $5,000, to Kundera, whose books were banned in his homeland.

The three-member judging panel said Kundera had "given expression to the struggle of the individual for his freedom and uniqueness against the forces of history, regime and politics."

Kundera, 56, has been living in Paris and lecturing at French universities since 1975. The Czechoslovakian government abrogated his citizenship in 1979.

He has written poetry, short stories and a play. His latest novels include, "The Book of Laughter and Forgetting," "The Farewell Party" and "The Unbearable Lightness of Being."

•••

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jack Nicholson was set to begin shooting of a film sequel to "Chinatown," in which he played the Los Angeles private eye Jake Gittes, when Paramount Pictures pulled the plug on the production.

The company had already spent $1.5 million in preproduction costs on the film, "Two Jakes," starring Nicholson, 48, and with a screenplay by Robert Towne, who won an Academy Award for his script for "Chinatown."

A spokeswoman for Paramount confirmed the movie had been shelved and said "Paramount has no further comment at this time."

•••

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Edmond O'Brien, an actor who won an Oscar in 1954 for his role in "The Barefoot Contessa" and starred in the original "1984," died Wednesday of complications from Alzheimer's disease. He was 69.

O'Brien

O'Brien's film credits include "The Killers," "A Double Life," "Another Part of the Forest," "White Heat," "The Bigamist," "The Great Impostor," "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," "The Birdman of Alcatraz," "The Longest Day," "Fantastic Voyage" and "The Wild Bunch." He also starred in three TV series, "Johnny Midnight," "The Long, Hot Summer" and "Sam Benedict."

•••

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Theodore Hamilton Sturgeon, one of the pioneers of American science fiction writing, died Wednesday. He was 67.

Sturgeon's first book was "Without Sorcery," in 1949. He was probably known best for his books, "More Than Human," "Venus Plus X," "Some of Your Blood" and "The Dreaming Jewels."

•••

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dolph Sweet, a veteran Broadway and movie actor who starred in the television comedy series "Gimme a Break," died Wednesday of cancer. He was 64.

Sweet

Sweet's Broadway credits included "Rhinoceros," "Streamers," "The Penny Wars," "Billy," and "The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window." His movie credits included "You're a Big Boy Now," "Heaven Can Wait," "Which Way is Up?" and "The New Centurions." On television, Sweet also starred in "Another World," and "When the Whistle Blows."

OCEAN CITY, N.J. (AP) — When Martin Z. Mollusk hits the beach, people here take notice in a big way.

A high school band, dancing girls, men on stilts, a kazoo band, and a big cake made of sand with 10 candles were on hand Thursday for the arrival of the 2-inch hermit crab, who is joining Punxsutawney Phil as an animal weather forecaster.

"Martin saw his shadow; that means summer will come a week early to Ocean City," said Mark Soifer, a public relations man whose work includes the Miscellaneous Suntanning Tournament each August.

Every May, residents of this Methodist settlement just south of Atlantic City turn out to watch as Martin is placed on the beach. All hope he will see his shadow when he pokes his tiny head out of the shell.

"This was the 10th anniversary creep, so we had a lot more pomp and circumstance than usual," said Soifer.

•••

And that's a sore subject in the city of Ashland.

The city filed suit Thursday asking a judge to order the train collector to remove the four railroad cars to a more suitable location.

By ERNST ABEGG

USTER, Switzerland (AP) — A 4-inch-thick concrete and steel ceiling collapsed "like a lid" onto three indoor public swimming pools, killing 12 people, including five schoolchildren, and trapping others, police said today.

Rescue workers drained some water from the pools, then used jackhammers and their bare hands to dig at least one hole through the slab, enabling divers to enter the pool and search for survivors and bodies.

Workers at the scene said children and members of a local swim club had been among those trapped. Police said the youngest victim was a 12-year-old girl, who drowned along with her 13-year-old brother and their 34-year-old mother. No names were given.

"It was agonizing and ghastly," said one resident of the Zurich suburb of Uster, describing the scene at the complex, which houses two large pools and a wading pool. Uster is 12 miles southeast of Zurich.

About 40 people were believed to have been in the swimming complex when the ceiling section collapsed at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday. An undetermined number escaped injury or were treated on the scene for light injuries.

Zurich state police spokesman Robert Leiser said two women remained hospitalized this morning with light injuries. He said 12 had been killed, and that earlier reports of 13 dead were due to confusion at the rescue site.

Rescue workers said a few people managed to slip through the gaps between the slab and the pool's edge immediately after the ceiling collapsed.

One such survivor of the accident was the Swiss national champion in the women's 200-meter breast stroke, Fraenzi Nydegger. She was not injured, but suffered from shock, rescue workers said.

Scores of rescue workers aided by six dogs worked through the night as ambulances and three evacuation helicopters stood by. A police spokesman said this morning that it appeared no more people were trapped in the pools.

The concrete and steel slab, which was attached to the roof by steel bars, measured about 105 feet by 90 feet, said a police duty officer, who declined to give his name because he is not an official spokesman.

He said the roof section that fell was about four inches thick and had a 1½-inch layer of wood underneath.

Town residents, some close to tears, watched the rescue operation in horror. "How could this happen?" asked city council member Max Kolb, shaking his head.

The cause of the collapse of the 13-year-old building's roof was not immediately known, Leiser said, adding that officials would begin an investigation today.

An engineer at the scene, who said he had examined the building several years earlier, said he suspected one or more of the steel posts had rusted through. He asked that his name not be used.

Wilfried Bachofen, a former city councilman, said officials had noticed about five years ago that the roof sagged about an inch in one area above the pool.

He said an engineering firm hired to examine the roof said at the time that the sagging was not dangerous.

Leiser said the ceiling remained intact and covered "like a lid" the three pools in the complex — one about 25 by 11 yards, another about nine by nine yards, and the other a wading pool for children.

Pope to start five-day visit to Netherlands

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday starts a five-day trip to the Netherlands, where his conservative policies have run into a wall of opposition from some of the world's most liberal Catholics.

In advance of the papal visit, posters containing death-threats and calls for riots have appeared in Amsterdam. The "Call-up for Anti-Papist Rioting" urged rioters to "get" the pope, describing him as a fascist.

"Progressive" Dutch Catholics — and their priests — question the church's bans on artificial birth control, marriage for priests and the ability of laymen to say Mass, as well as the position of women in the church and papal infallibility on doctrinal matters.

The split between "progressives" and "traditionalists" polarizes the approximately 5.6 million Dutch Roman Catholics, about 40 percent of the population.

The Vatican has acknowledged the problems facing the pope during his trip, which also includes stops in Luxembourg and Belgium.

"Today the Dutch church is in a state of crisis," the Vatican newspaper said in a front-page commentary on Wednesday. "There is talk of a difficult trip."

Monsignor Harrie Verhoeven, director of the Pontifical Missionary Aid Works in the Netherlands, said: "The problems facing the church in general are seen even more sharply in the Netherlands. I think he will offer the Dutch encouragement to practice the fundamentals of the faith."

He added that the pope's plans to speak in Dutch "will have a positive effect" on his attempts to reconcile the Dutch church.

The "progressive" positions, sparked in large part by the modernizing trends of the Second Vatican Council of the 1960s, have given rise to the terms "experimental" or "do-it-yourself" Catholicism, to signify individual decision-making rather than Vatican direction.

John Paul's appointment in 1983 of Archbishop Adrianus Simonis, a hard-line conservative, to succeed Dutch primate Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, a moderate, was sharply criticized by the liberals of the church.

The Polish-born pontiff also named three new conservative bishops in 1983, despite an outcry from liberal Dutch Catholics that the move was "authoritarian" and accusations that "the voices of the faithful are no longer heard" in choosing local church leaders.

Iran shaken by anti-war demonstrations

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

Exile groups and other sources say a wave of anti-war protests has shaken Iran's cities, just as that battle-weary nation is entering a new period of political uncertainty.

The past month's anti-government demonstrations, some reportedly bloody, pose little immediate threat to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's rule, say diplomatic and academic specialists who follow Iranian events.

But they say the disturbances dramatize growing discontent among ordinary Iranians over the 4½-year-old war with Iraq — at a time of battlefield disasters, economic privation, a looming presidential election campaign, and continued frail health for the 84-year-old supreme leader Khomeini.

"Previously, I thought that once Khomeini died, the transition to new leadership would be smooth," said one Washington-based authority on Iranian politics, Shaul Bakhash. "But if he dies amidst a crisis of mounting street demonstrations, I just don't know."

Tehran's six-year-old Islamic revolutionary government generally bars Western journalists from Iran. Accounts of the protests have come from several rival anti-Khomeini exile groups, including the Mujahedeen Khalq, which says its underground units in Iran organized the street actions. An official U.S. Iran-watcher — who would not be further identified publicly — confirmed that anti-war demonstrations have taken place.

The leftist Mujahedeen Khalq, through their headquarters-in-exile outside Paris, said 10,000 people took part in the first Tehran anti-war protest, on April 10. "Several" protesters were shot and killed, and other civilians and Revolutionary Guardsmen were injured when the Guards routed the demonstrators, the opposition movement said.

Further protests, often to chants of "We want peace and freedom!", followed in Tehran and other cities over the subsequent three weeks, exile groups said. They said some of those also ended in bloodshed.

In the northeastern city of Mashhad, "resistance forces" for a time wrested control of one district from Revolutionary Guards, and disturbances there last four days, the Mujahedeen Khalq said.

In a telephone interview from his office in France, Massoud Rajavi, the Mujahedeen Khalq's self-exiled leader, said anti-war demonstrations had taken place in 74 cities and towns, and 900 people had been arrested.

"We will continue and extend the dimensions of our activities," Rajavi said.

"They do have perhaps the most organized and broadest (opposition) base in the country," Shireen Hunter, of Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies, told a reporter. "But I think in large part these demonstrations may be spontaneous.... Dissatisfaction with the war and its deprivations has been growing for two years."

Various reports from Iran suggest some disturbances also may be popular reactions against religious zealots who have assaulted people in city streets for "un-Islamic" dress.

Iranian leaders have been forced to take public notice of the anti-war unrest.

On April 25, the official Tehran Radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, the Parliament speaker, as saying Iran's external enemies had mobilized the Mujahedeen Khalq, Marxists, royalists and other "internal agents" to force Iran to abandon its aim of toppling President Saddam Hussein's Iraqi government.

Khomeini, unquestioned patriarch of the Iranian revolution, has declared repeatedly that the war will be fought until Hussein is ousted.

Bakhash, of Washington's Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, said the "veiled open debate" over the war "would have been almost unthinkable six months ago." He noted, for example, that the "liberal" Iranian faction led by former Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan has issued an open letter calling for a negotiated peace.

The war is going badly for the Iranians.

In mid-March, they suffered what one U.S. source described as "ferocious" losses in a massive ground offensive thrown back by the Iraqis. Soon afterward, Iraqi air attacks killed a reported 400 people in Iranian cities. U.S. officials estimate at least a half-million Iranians have been killed or wounded in the war, two or three times the total Iraqi casualties.

The Iranian economy remains stagnant. Food is rationed, jobs are scarce. The war and the world oil glut have held Iran's oil production well below the 2.3-million-barrel-a-day quota set by the OPEC oil cartel.

The official U.S. source said he expects Khomeini to try to keep any divisiveness out of the election campaign.

"The leadership is very much aware of the imperative that they hang together at this point," the official said.

But it still remains unclear whether President Ali Khamenei will run for another four-year term. He may have been politically damaged by one recent event — his sister's defection to Iraq last week.

The militant opposition is not counting on swift change in Tehran. But, Rajavi asserted, "this year and next year will be very decisive."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Christian militia chief changes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting ebbed today after Christian militia leaders, bowing to Syrian pressure, replaced their pro-Israeli chief with a new leader who paid tribute to Syria's role in Lebanon.

Police reported a "marked de-escalation" of hostilities along Beirut's dividing Green Line after Elie Hobeika's election was announced Thursday night. Hobeika is the man Israel says led the massacre at the Beirut Palestinian refugee camps in 1982.

Police said only sporadic sniping was recorded across the mid-city demarcation line overnight, following 12 days of clashes that left 77 people killed and 400 injured. All crossings between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors remained closed, however.

Hobeika's election came after more than a month of Moslem-Christian fighting in which Syrian-backed Moslem militias had gotten the best of Christian militias in southern Lebanon and Beirut. More than 250 people have died since March 29.

Aliens won't meet deadline

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The military government will not extend today's deadline for 700,000 illegal aliens to leave the country, but will not use force against those unable to leave in time, the interior minister said.

News reports Thursday estimated only a quarter of the aliens, leaving by plane, ship and truck convoy, would meet the deadline.

Maj. Gen. Mohammed Magoro, the interior minister, said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. that about 50,000 aliens had left Nigeria through neighboring Benin and "quite a number have gone by both air and sea." However, he gave no total figure.

"They have no cause to fear," he said of the aliens, who were attracted to Nigeria during its oil boom of the late 1970s. Now that the boom is over, the government says the aliens take jobs from Nigerians and are responsible for a high crime rate.

U.S. embargo defended

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Defending the U.S. embargo of Nicaragua, the American delegate told the U.N. Security Council that Nicaragua's leftist rulers were intent on subverting their neighbors and creating a Soviet satellite in Central America.

U.S. Ambassador Jose S. Sorzano was speaking Thursday on the second day of the council's debate on Nicaragua's request for council approval of a resolution calling for a halt to the embargo announced May 1.

It is the ninth time Nicaragua has gone before the Security Council with complaints against the United States.

Sorzano accused Nicaragua of engaging in an arms buildup to "destabilize and subvert" its neighbors, and said the leaders of the ruling Sandinista Front "are committed Marxist-Leninists intent on converting Nicaragua into another totalitarian satellite of the Soviet Union."

Costa Rica stays 'neutral'

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Rica has refused to back the U.S. trade embargo of neighboring Nicaragua, saying participation would violate its policy of neutrality and damage peacemaking efforts.

The democratic country, which recently asked for U.S. military advisers to train its civil guards and has expressed fears of a Nicaraguan incursion, said it agreed with U.S. attempts to encourage talks betwen Nicaragua's leftist government and rebels.

But a Foreign Ministry statement said participation in an embargo would violate Costa Rica's obligations as a member of the Central American Common Market as well as a 37-year-old peace and friendship treaty with Nicaragua.

Testimony retracted in Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — An underworld leader today retracted in court his claim that the former military intelligence chief ordered him to murder a Chinese-American journalist, describing his earlier testimony as "a misunderstanding."

Chen Chi-li, 42, was testifying before the Taiwan High Court, which is reviewing a life sentence imposed on him last month by the Taipei District Court for the murder.

He said he made the accusation against Wong Hsi-ling, former director of the Defense Ministry's intelligence bureau, "out of anger."

Algerian president in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid, holding another round of talks Thursday with Mexican officials, says the economic crisis of some developing countries is "beyond the threshold of deterioration."

Benjedid, on an official visit to the Mexican capital, expressed concern about the economic plight of Third World nations at a dinner in his honor Wednesday night.

"These are times in which the Third World nations are undergoing the degradation of the political climate and the erosion of international cooperation in their daily living," he said.

He said the world is faced with a "double dichotomy — East-West and North-South."

Ethiopians returning to center

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Thousands of drought victims are streaming back to the feeding center from which they were expelled last week, but a relief official says poor facilities at the camp have created conditions for an epidemic.

"If ever there were a situation for a life-threatening epidemic disease, this is it," said Tony Atkins, director for the U.S.-based charity, World Vision International. "It is a very precarious situation."

Atkins told a news conference that the Ibnet camp, 250 miles north of Addis Ababa, was short of doctors, nurses and nutritionists, and basic camp facilities such as sanitation and shelter.

U.S. diplomats leave Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Two American diplomats expelled from Poland for allegedly taking part in an anti-government demonstration received an emotional farewell today from U.S. Embassy officials.

The two diplomats, William Harwood, 38, first secretary at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw, and David Hopper, 32, consul at the American consulate in Krakow, were loudly applauded by more than two dozen U.S. officials as they arrived at Warsaw's Okecie Airport.

"We are very sorry to see them go," said U.S. Charge d'Affaires John R. Davis, the senior American diplomat in Poland. "They were good friends and valuable officers."

Honduran troops at border

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The armed forces chief says troops have been dispatched to the western part of the frontier with Nicaragua to protect towns and farms, apparently in response to reported Nicaraguan incursions.

Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes would not say what prompted the move, but military spokesmen said it was a response to reports of two border crossings by Nicaraguan soldiers in pursuit of Honduran-based rebels.

The officers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 200 Nicaraguans penetrated up to 25 miles inside Honduras to attack 300 insurgents of the National Democratic Force, or FDN, the largest rebel group fighting the the leftist Sandinista government. The attacks occurred Saturday and Sunday, they said.

Lakewood Apartments

Dear Dad,
I'm so excited about my new apartment. It's a beautiful place called Lakewood. I know you're concerned so let me tell you that it's very safe & secure. I've got great neighbors & Sandy the activities director, is introducing me to a lot of new people, just like me and Dad, you won't believe this; I got to decorate my own apartment. Just like you & Mom did when you bought your home.
Please visit soon.
Your Daughter
