Murder trial likely into November

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

As Scurry County's first capital murder trial moves to the individual questioning of prospective jurors, local officials are predicting the case will not be concluded in 132nd District Court until early and possibly mid-November.

Scheduled is the State of Texas versus Dorsie Lee Johnson, 19, of Colorado City. He is accused of killing Allsup's convenience store clerk Jack Huddleston during a robbery of that store March 23.

Court officials say at the earliest, the selection of 12 jurors and two alternates should take one week. Following this, both Judge Gene Dulaney and District Attorney Ernie Armstrong agree that the trial itself will likely last from one to two weeks.

Once the trial begins, the DA has listed a potential of up to 60 witnesses. While the possible number of defense witnesses is not known--the law does not require they be listed prior to trial--a lengthy transcript of testimony for both sides is expected.

Monday, individual "voir dire" of potential jurors will begin at 9 a.m.

To streamline this process, some 200 county residents were summoned for jury duty last Monday. The original list of 200 was cut to 117 after 83 were dismissed for reasons of age or medical conditions.

Those that remained were asked to fill out questionnaires. They were asked such questions as their opinion of the death penalty--a possibility in the Johnson trial since a life was taken during the course of a crime.

Sales tax eroded to minus

Snyder's cumulative sales tax total--which has been slipping monthly since June--dropped into the minus category with the latest report.

The year-to-date figure dropped to a minus 1.7 percent, making the first time this year that the overall total has been in the negative category.

The past five monthly reports of fewer sales tax dollars have eroded the cumulative total from its high of a plus 15.6 percent reported in May.

The monthly drop just reported reflected a 23.8 percent decline for sales made here in August.

In actual dollars, the report was $45,677 for the month as compared to $60,018 for the same time period last year.

The year-to-date total is now nearing $672,000 as compared to some $683,000 last year. Exact figures for each are $671,777 and $683,404.

The statewide total for sales tax is also in the negative category--although less than 1 percent--and continues to reflect the downturn in the Texas economy, says State Comptroller Bob Bullock. It is now listed at a minus .6 percent.

The largest recipients of sales tax, the cities of Houston and Dallas, are both reporting a minus 5 percent cumulative total.

All but one area city within a 100-mile radius of Snyder reported sales tax totals in the minus category. These include:

—Lubbock: a minus .95 percent with $10,706,926 reported to date compared to $10,810,158 last year.

—Abilene: a minus 3.5 percent with $6.3 million reported to date compared to $6.5 million last year.

—San Angelo: a plus 1.4 per-

Trooper assigned to Snyder

Snyder will gain a new locally-based Department of Public Safety trooper effective Thursday.

Assigned to the local office is Ricardo Campos, 28, who recently graduated from the DPS Training Academy in Austin.

Campos was one of 83 cadets commissioned as state troopers in graduation ceremonies held there. He is a native of Abilene.

Here, he will join fellow troopers Pat Alexander, John Land and Larry Brown. Kirby McCravey also serves locally as the DPS license and weight officer.

The DPS training course just completed by Campos includes instruction in traffic law, criminal law, arrest procedures, accident investigation and numerous other law enforcement related topics.

Teenage pregnancy on meeting agenda

The problem of teenage pregnancy will be addressed here Monday as part of programs planned through the newly formed Advisory Committee on Education for Self-Responsibility.

The session is scheduled as the first in a series of programs attempting to inform local parents of problem areas which might affect their child.

A future meeting will discuss alcohol and drugs and the school-aged child.

Monday, Dr. Mary Merki, a health education specialist with Dallas ISD, will speak. Her program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Worsham Auditorium.

Merki will be address the local, state and national problem of teenage pregnancy among unwed mothers.

In addition to her appearance Monday, she has been asked to assist the school in planning for a two to three week study unit to be introduced at the fifth, seventh and ninth grade level. Parents of students in grades 5-12 are especially urged to attend Monday's meeting.

For Dallas ISD, Merki has developed and implemented a program related to human development and self-responsibility. Currently, she is also developing guidelines for the Texas Education Agency in this area.

Snyder native given four-year prison term

DALLAS--Jack E. Spikes, a Snyder native who went on to become a college all-American gridder, Friday was sentenced to four years in federal prison for fraud connected with a Grapevine bank.

Spikes, a resident of Dallas, had pled guilty Aug. 15 to charges that he defrauded the American Bank of Grapevine of $388,000 in 1983 while he was serving as the bank's board chairman.

Spikes, 48, was given four years in prison on one count and five years probation on a second count. The remaining 12 counts were dismissed and Spikes was ordered to pay $38,000 in restitution.

Court officials indicated Friday that Spikes likely will be sent to the federal facility in Big Spring, but that the Federal Bureau of Prisons will make that decision. Spikes is scheduled to begin his prison term on Dec. 1.

Court records indicated that the funds in question went toward the purchase of thoroughbred horses at a time when Spikes was heavily in debt to several banks in Texas.

Spikes could have received a maximum punishment of seven years in prison and a fine of $10,000. Sentencing occurred Friday in U.S. District Judge Jerry Buckmeyer's court.

Spikes was involved in banking with his younger brother, Sam Spikes, whose West Texas banking empire was toppled by

Last Saturday just wasn't Bob Lang's day. Lang is manager of McWhorter's in Snyder and a member of the Snyder Lions Club.

Like a good Lion, Lang signed up to play in the four-man charity scramble at WTC. Lang was teamed up with Bruce Kallemeyn, Snyder National loan officer.

Lang knew that playing with Kallemyn would be a heavy load, and he had hoped that Friday night's rains would have cancelled the tournament.

In spite of soggy course conditions, the tournament was held as scheduled. After the tournament, drawings were held for a variety of door prizes donated by business members of the Lions Club.

Lang had donated a portable TV set. Only a few ...ies were still left in the hat when it came time ... the TV drawing. Lang won his own TV, but tournament director Dennis Chisum disqualified his win and another name was drawn.

Perhaps Lang's luck will improve in the Lions-Rotary tournament which is scheduled soon to benefit the United Way.

It was identified first in Scotland, then spread worldwide. Its victims, who number in the millions, experience extreme emotional highs and lows that become addictive. If there were a cure, most of the poor deluded victims would reject it.

FBI test

AUSTIN (AP) — FBI officials said they have begun giving lie detector tests in connection with the bugging of the office of a key campaign strategist for gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

Agents said Friday they began giving polygraph tests to aides in both the Clements and Gov. Mark White campaigns in an effort to find out who placed an electronic listening device in the Austin office of Karl Rove, a Clements' strategist.

"We anticipate going to the grand jury in the very near future," said Byron Sage, FBI agent in charge of the Austin office.

The FBI and Texas Department of Public Safety began their investigation Oct. 5 after the device was discovered by two private detective working for Clements.

Sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — The former sheriff of Montague County, convicted of mailing sexually explicit photographs, was sentenced to 10 years in prison plus five years probation.

Harry James Walker, 37, who was convicted on the federal charges in August, was sentenced Friday by U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer.

All water project freebies ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, capping a long struggle to put a lid on the pork barrel, is decreeing an end to one of the nation's biggest freebies: dams, harbors and other water projects fully funded by the Treasury.

By lopsided margins Friday in the House and Senate, lawmakers sent President Reagan legislation that would force local beneficiaries to begin paying an average one-fourth of the huge cost of building water projects.

But with the bad tidings for states, communities and port-users there was good news: The legislation would authorize construction of $16.3 billion worth of Army Corps of Engineers water development projects around the country.

The bill, expected to get Reagan's signature, is the first omnibus water projects legislation to clear Congress in 16 years. The drought on new project authorizations was caused by a dispute over local cost-sharing.

The change in how projects are financed would end a system almost as old as the nation. With Washington paying the entire tab, which projects were built often depended less on merit and need than on how much clout a lawmaker had in the backrooms of Congress.

When people on Capitol Hill talked about pork-barrel legislation, they talked first about water project bills.

"No more pork barrel," says Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the water resources subcommittee of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, which helped write the bill.

"People are not going to be coming up here and asking for projects unless they're willing to put their own money up," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "It's a magnificent step forward."

"It's a historic change in the way water projects are selected and paid for," says Robert Dawson, assistant Army secretary for civil works.

Sense of humor is best therapy

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A sense of humor can be the best therapy for disabled people, says presidential press secretary James Brady.

Brady, 46, who suffered severe head wounds in the 1981 attempted assassination of President Reagan, received the Tau Award on Thursday from the Medical Rehabilitation Foundation.

The award has been given since 1979 to recognize individuals for remarkable courage, innovation or service to the disabled.

Brady has had to undergo daily therapy sessions but has recovered enough to go to the office about twice a week. His left arm is paralyzed and his left leg is weak, but he can walk with the aid of a brace and cane.

"You must maintain your sense of humor," he said in an interview, adding that his "Irish stubbornness" has helped him with the sometimes painful rehabilitation program.

Elderly first-time criminals tied to chemical imbalance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Elderly first-time law-breakers should be checked for abnormal amounts of natural bodily substances in the blood, because such levels can cause psychiatric problems, a researcher says.

In one case, an excess of calcium in the blood caused by a glandular problem led a man to kill his wife because he thought she wanted to kill him, said Dr. Robert Brown Jr., clinical associate professor of behavioral medicine and psychiatry at the University of Virginia Medical Center.

Brown described the case Friday at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law.

Elderly people can have illnesses and take medicines that predispose them to the abnormal levels in the blood, he said in an interview.

Because of the psychiatric impact of abnormal blood levels of minerals such as calcium or of electrolytes, substances that aid in biochemical reactions, elderly first-time offenders should be checked for such problems, Brown said.

Simply consuming a lot of calcium in the diet will not lead to high calcium levels in the blood because the body normally regulates that level closely and can get rid of excess calcium, he said.

"I'm not trying to say behind every elderly offender is an electrolyte abnormality," said Brown, a psychiatrist and specialist in internal medicine. "(But) it would be very unfortunate to miss the few that are clearly there."

Another expert said Friday that electrolyte and calcium levels should be checked as part of a more comprehensive search for medical causes when psychiatric symptoms appear in the elderly.

High calcium levels can bring on such psychiatric symptoms as depression, confusion, delirium, paranoid ideas and psychosis, said Dr. Steve Schleifer, assistant professor of psychiatry at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

But, he said in a telephone interview, "most of the time the problems these guys get into don't involve criminal acts."

The case Brown described involved a 68-year-old man who showed no recognized psychiatric symptoms nor domestic violence until shortly before shooting his wife and grandson.

In May 1984, he was anxious and confused, and thought people were trying to harm him. Excess blood calcium, called hypercalcemia, was diagnosed but treated ineffectively, Brown said.

The next month, the man suffered a severe anxiety attack. Several days before the shooting, he became suspicious that one of his medications was poison, Brown said.

Annual oil show big in spite of slump

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — When the annual Permian Basin Oil Show came around this year after one of the worst oil slumps in recent history, the running joke was that one of the only sure exhibitors would be U-Haul.

As it turned out, a record 594 exhibitors purchased every inch of space and more then 100,000 guests preregistered.

"It's nothing short of a miracle to have sold it out," said oilman T.L. "Woody" Gregory, president of the 1986 show and one of 170 board members scattered across Texas and the oil-rich area known as the Permian Basin.

"The oil industry is never on an even keel," said executive director Jay Alvey, one of only two paid employees of the biennial exposition. "It's either up or down, and I think we have more interest in this show on down years."

In the champagne days of $35 oil, the world's largest inland oil exposition could be an extravaganza of excess.

"Some years it's been wild and roaring and there's been some really big bucks spent," Gregory said.

But with the industry in a prolonged slump, it was a leaner, meaner show that concluded a four-day run Saturday. Officials maintain this year's has been one of the best and most significant.

"We wanted the show to be a shot in the arm for the industry," Gregory said. "We've really worked hard at it this year. We started early because we knew it was going to be a little difficult."

Bob Horn, who handled publicity for the show, said: "I think this is going to be a confidence builder for the industry. We're not by any means dead."

Then he added, with a grin, "Of couse, we may be licking our wounds a little."

Horn said oil veterans had been through downturns before and adjust to them. However, he said, no one anticipated a slump of quite this magnitude.

Cowboy preacher plans Snyder visit

Glenn Smith, president of International Western World Outreach Center Inc.--also called Rodeo Cowboy Ministries--will be in Snyder two days this week.

He will appear at 7 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday at the Union Community Center located 5½ miles west of Snyder on the Lamesa Highway.

Music for praise and worship will be provided by New Creation of Lamesa.

Smith, an ex-rodeo professional and rancher, now ministers the gospel with a western flavor. He is from Roswell, N.M. and was ordained to full-time ministry in the early 1970s.

Seven million plus given to Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major water resources bill passed by Congress in its waning moments provides Texas with $724.5 million to build eight new water projects and expand or study five other projects.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, ranking member of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, said the projects will give Texas $724.5 million to build vital flood control, navigational and recreational projects.

"This is the first major water projects legislation in a decade," said Bentsen, who was a member of the House-Senate conference that came up with the compromise bill.

Bentsen's office released the following new Texas projects authorized in the bill:

—Brazos Island Harbor, a $31.8 million deep draft navigation and recreation project in the Port of Brownsville.

—Texas City Channel, a $199.7 million navigation project in Galveston Bay.

—Boggy Creek, Colorado River and tributaries, $23.9 million for a flood control and recreation project in the Austin area.

—Lake Wichita-Holiday Creek, $29 million for urban flood control in Wichita Falls.

—Lower Rio Grande Basin, $195.7 million for a joint Corps of Engineers-Soil Conservation Service flood control project in Hidalgo, Willacy and Cameron counties.

—Sims Bayou, $126 million for flood control and recreation within the city limits of Houston, South Houston and Missouri City.

—Buffalo Bayou and tributaries, $92 million flood control project providing protection to suburban Houston.

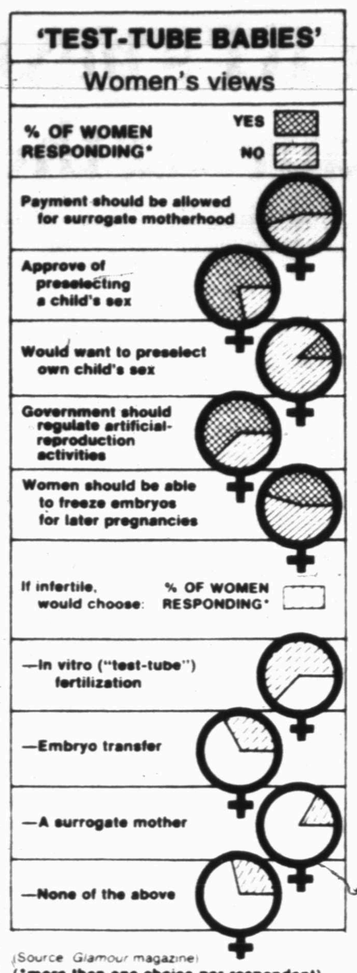

—Cooper Lake and channels, $14.8 million for mitigation of anticipated habitat losses from contruction of the Cooper Lake project near Commerce.

Preconstruction planning on two additional projects is authorized in the measure, with actual construction predicated on future action by Congress. Those are a flood control project on five Mile Creek near Dallas and a one-mile extension of the Sabine River Channel-Sabine Neches Waterway.

The Omnibus Water Resources legislation also includes the following modifications to existing facilities in Texas:

—The Denison Dam at Lake Texoma is authorized to increase allocation of storage in the reservoir for water supply and include recreation as an additional purpose.

—The Red River Chloride project to clean up naturally occurring chloride, a $126 million project.

Texas federal workers join nat'l government shutdown

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. government in Texas didn't grind to a halt Friday, but it certainly slowed a bit when thousands of federal workers in the state and their collegues around the country took unpaid furloughs.

All nonessential federal employees in the state were sent home early after Congress failed to pass legislation needed to authorize paying their salary.

For some in Texas, the holiday started precisely at 12 noon Friday. Others, including those at the large NASA complex near Houston, didn't get the word until early afternoon.

But no matter the hour, when the time came, there was a quick evacuation. The civil servants left federal courthouses in Fort Worth and Houston, tax offices in Odessa, the Border Patrol complex in El Paso and the Johnson Space Center near Houston. Virtually every federal office in the state was affected at least in some small way.

Some workers said they felt a festive air about the sudden and unexpected holiday.

"I'm looking forward to it," said NASA secretary as she watched the clock for a countdown to leisure.

About 3,000 civil servants were to leave their Johnson Space Center offices at precisely 1:45 p.m. CDT, but managers at the last minute modified the order. Only "non-exempt" employees were to leave, the leaders decided. Virtually all of the secretaries, receptions and clerks at NASA are non-exempt.

The bosses suddenly found they had to answer their own phones.

"It's lucky we only have a couple of hours to go in the day," said one NASA executive. "We can't operate without our secretaries."

Most agencies experienced some loss of what the government calls "administrative support" (clerks and secretaries), but functions considered essential were not affected.

Fourteen part-time or temporary workers left the Border Patrol office in El Paso, but 550 patrol personnel stayed on the job.

"Law enforcement positions are considered essential," said Gustavo De La Vina, the acting chief of the El Paso office of the Border Patrol office.

He said if the border patrol were to suddenly walk off the job "it would be a disaster."

University of Texas...

Four alumni are honored

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Treasury secretary, a former governor, a television journalist and a retired chemical engineering professor were honored Friday at the University of Texas as recipients of the 1986 Distinguished Alumnus Awards.

The awards have been presented annually since 1958 by the University of Texas Ex-Students Association.

This year's awards bring the total number of recipients to 115, said Don Massa, spokesman for the association.

This year's awards were given to:

— Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III.

Baker, who served as White House chief of staff during President Reagan's first term, became treasury secretary on Jan. 29, 1985. A graduate of Princeton University, he received his law degree from Texas in 1957.

Baker was national chairman of Gerald Ford's presidential campaign in 1976, the 1978 GOP candidate for Texas attorney general, and in 1979-80 was national chairman of George Bush's presidential bid.

— Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Uvalde.

A 1943 UT graduate, Briscoe is chairman of the boards of the First State Bank of Uvalde and Security State Bank of Pearsall.

His political career began when he first was elected to the Texas House in 1948. He served as governor of Texas from 1973 until 1979.

— William Cunningham of Austin, retired professor emeritus of chemical engineering at UT.

Cunningham, who holds his bachelors, masters and doctorate degrees from the university, taught at UT from 1935 to 1971 and has a professorship endowed by former students in his name.

A fellow of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, Cunningham has been associate editor of the 45-volume "Encyclopedia of Chemical Processing and Design."

— Bill Moyers, CBS News correspondent and analyst.

Moyers was graduated from the University of Texas in 1956. He served as deputy director of the Peace Corps under President Kennedy, and as a special assistant and press secretary to President Johnson.

Moyers' broadcasting career has earned him numerous honors, including 11 Emmy awards, four George Foster Peabody Awards and the Sigma Delta Chi award for distinguished service in journalism. His public television series, "A Walk Through the Twentieth Century," was named the 1984 outstanding informational series by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

In being honored by UT, the four joined 111 other UT alumni in receiving the distinguished alumni awards.

Congress extends commission's life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress on Friday approved and sent to President Reagan a bill extending for three years the life of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the federal agency that regulates trading of futures contracts.

By voice vote and without debate, the Senate approved the compromise measure, which had been given House approval earlier this week.

The measure also contained a handful of unrelated amendments, including one designed to enhance foreign confidence in the quality of U.S. grain by prohibiting the practice of adding dockage, or foreign material, to shipments bound for export.

Other changes adopted included moving up the date for income subsidy payments to wheat farmers from the summer, when such checks now go out, to November; and giving the Agriculture Department more flexibility in deployment of meat inspectors to packing plants so that resources can be concentrated on problem plants.

The CFTC was created in 1974 to oversee trading on exchanges of contracts for future delivery of agricultural goods, metals, financial instruments and other commodities. The bill would extend its authority through 1989 and beef up its enforcement powers.

PRI's next test to come during the 1988 elections

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — While struggling through a major credibility crisis complicated by economic crisis, the government's Institutional Revolutionary Party continues to chalk up one political victory after another.

And as Mexico heads toward the 1988 presidential campaign, the party, known as the PRI, presumably will rely on its tried-and-true tactics of ignoring claims of obvious vote rigging, ignoring subsequent political protests and, for the most part, ignoring the opposition altogether.

This attitude, while frustrating supporters of the opposition minority, has reinforced the PRI's position as the party that brought and has maintained social peace in Mexico for 57 years. It also serves as a subtle message that the PRI is the only party that counts in Mexico.

Using these measures in the past two years, the PRI has averted potential political fiascos in the northern states of Chihuahua, Durango, Nuevo Leon and Sonora where the conservative National Action Party, or PAN, has its strongest support.

In all four states the PRI waged extensive and costly campaigns to convince voters that it is the party of the people.

In this summer's elections in the northern border state of Chihuahua, the largest of Mexico's 31 states, the PRI announced its gubernatorial victory while citizens, mainly those in PAN strongholds, still waited in long lines to vote.

As PAN supporters staged protest marches and blockaded highways and international bridges, the federal government in Mexico City rejected their claims that the PRI had stolen the elections.

At his lavish inauguration ceremony earlier this month, PRI Gov. Fernando Baeza proclaimed, "Chihuahua has decided."

The party's success, even in the four years the "PRI-government" has been blamed for Mexico's economic crisis, can be attributed to some extent to the failure of the conservative PAN and the weaker leftist parties to develop a lasting movement.

The PRI stopped patronizing opposition parties three years ago after its main challenger, the PAN, swept to important mayoral victories in Chihuahua and Durango states.

Rodolfo Felix Valdes, the PRI governor of northwestern Sonora state, said during his election campaign last year that the government opened up the political system to give the opposition a "voice" in how the country is run.

"But not to govern," he said.

Electoral reforms adopted in 1977 had expanded opportunities for minority parties in an attempt to avert growing voter apathy.

The PRI and the government are one in Mexico.

Wage earners' taxes go to finance PRI political campaigns, PRI-controlled state legislatures pass election codes making it easier for their candidates to win, PRI-controlled electoral ommisisons certify the results that invariably favor the party and, ultimately, the PRI-government in Mexico City rejects claims of fraud.

In a country where low-cost government housing is essential and PRI-affiliated labor unions control jobs, many people are made to feel their security depends on voting for the PRI.

Dozens of voters who responded "the PRI" when asked their party preference on election day in Chihuahua added, "Malo por conocido que bueno por conocer," which means they'd rather have a government they know is bad than gamble on one that might be better, but also could be worse.

The opposition has been trying for years to change that attitude.

Government ineptitude and corruption are widely blamed for the economic turmoil that started in 1982 and worsened this year when prices for oil, Mexico's most important export, plunged even more.

Mexicans, except for the very rich, are a lot worse off than they were before the country fell into the severe economic crisis, linked in large part to its huge foreign debt of nearly $100 billion.

The minimum wage in dollar equivalents has fallen from $70 a week in early 1982 to $21 a week now. As the cost of food, housing, transportation and consumer goods increases, fewer and fewer families can afford to maintain the standard of living they once took for granted.

The PAN acknowledges that much of its support in the past few years has come from anti-PRI sentiment in the middle classes that have seen their economic burden grow.

Federico Ling, PAN president in Durango state, said in an interview that the party there is not counting on the support of big businessesin the future because, he said, "We will lose them the minute the economy turns around."

The PRI's challenge from now to 1988 is to assure that the standard of living doesn't slip beneath the tolerable level or, barring that, to convince Mexicans that better times are just around the corner.

The PRI-government, through a series of economic measures, is offering that glimmer of hope.

Business classes most popular at local college

Business courses have a strong appeal for students at Western Texas College this fall.

Ninety-one students designated a business administration major, the largest number of those listing a major. Thirty-one students listed a computer science major and 27 chose an accounting major. These majors are university parallel courses.

In the occupational-technical division, 39 students listed stenographic and general secretarial studies as a major, 26 listed a word processing major and 14 listed a management major.

Other majors with 10 or more students were elementary education with 61, criminal justice with 51, pre-nursing with 42, art and golf course operations and landscape technology with 30 each, cosmetology with 27, health and physical education with 25, general agriculture with 22, auto mechanics with 20, psychology and vocational nursing with 18, pre-med and welding with 17, electronics with 15, management with 14, drama with 12, journalism with 11 and diesel mechanics and music with 10.

Six students were listed as secondary education majors, far fewer than the 61 education majors.

Students with university parallel majors earn the associate in arts degree, while students in the occupational-technical division receive the associate in applied science degree or one-year certificates.

Computer group meets Monday

The Snyder Computer Association will meet at 7 a.m. Monday in the Western Texas College Science Lecture Hall.

The program will feature a discussion of the Apple II GS. This new entry into the computer market has some outstanding features including enhanced graphics and sound.

The Computer Association meeting is open to everyone interested in learning more about computing. Anyone wishing more information is invited to contact Britt Canada at WTC.

Why Fight The Traffic Jam To Save A Few Pennies

Have you been to one of the large shopping centers lately?

If you have, you've probably fought a lot of traffic, and parking problems.

And while a lot of those "big shopping centers" offer you free parking, you might have to walk ¼ mile just to get inside.

We think it's easier to shop right here at home, with PEOPLE YOU KNOW

You get a good deal, great service, and you don't have to put up with all that hassle of out of town driving.

Catchall spending bill is authorized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 99th Congress all but finished its work Friday night after the House and Senate agreed on an unprecedented $576 billion catchall spending bill, breaking a stalemate that had forced a partial government shutdown.

The ill-tempered, bleary-eyed legislators, wrapping up two weeks past their original Oct. 3 adjournment date, also approved a sweeping rewrite of the nation's immigration laws and agreed to a popular, election-year package aimed at combatting illegal drug use and trafficking.

Although the House and Senate finished the bulk of their legislative business Friday night, Congress was not formally adjourning for the year until Saturday.

On the way to adjournment, the House took time Friday night to surprise House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass, with an emotional farewell — including three standing ovations. The shaggy, white-haired O'Neill is retiring after serving 34 years in the House, 10 as speaker.

Senior House members from both sides of the aisle paid tribute to O'Neill, who has become a national symbol of the Democratic Party. A resolution of "thanks of the House" was unanimously passed.

As O'Neill appeared to fight back a tear, Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., told his friend, "Oh pal, we love you."

"I leave with no rancor in my heart for anybody," O'Neill said. "I'll always be a man of the House of Representatives. But always, first, I'm an American and so proud of this body. Thank you. I love you all."

Later in the evening, Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., the assistant majority leader, Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois made the customary call to President Reagan to tell him that the House was about to adjourn.

Michel called O'Neill to the phone, telling the president, "I've got an old, cantankerous lovable friend of yours here."

The speaker planted his tongue in his cheek and told the president, "I want to say thank you for making me a very important man in the eyes of the American people."

For a time Friday, the members of the House and Senate seemed like party guests who would never leave as disputes persisted over the omnibus spending bill needed to fund government operations and programs for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

James C. Miller III, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, said the president would sign the measure and that government workers scheduled to work Saturday should report as usual.

The impasse on the spending measure left the government technically without spending authority Friday, prompting the Reagan administration to order about 500,000 federal workers classified as "non-essential" to go home. No important government services were interrupted.

The inability of lawmakers to agree on the omnibus spending bill had been a principal obstacle to their exodus from Capitol Hill.

But as the day wore on, various squabbles resolved themselves with lawmakers deciding they were more interested in going home than carrying on the fight for pet projects.

But there was plenty of frustration on the way to adjournment.

The increasingly restive House heard Rep. Paul B. Henry, R-Mich., accuse the Senate of "parliamentary terrorism" in holding House members hostage.

In the meantime, Congress on Friday gave final approval to a bill outlawing most mandatory retirement as the House, by voice vote, approved and sent to the White House the legislation that had previously been approved by the Senate.

Legislative activity in the Senate had stalled for nearly 24 hours beginning Thursday afternoon when Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., began a sometimes-heated filibuster in an effort to preserve a controversial training aircraft, manufactured at a plant in his home state. The Air Force has said it does not want the plane.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, led the opposition to the T-46A trainer manufactured by Fairchild Republic Co. in Farmingdale, N.Y.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., prodded negotiations on a compromise saying, "We could be out of here if we could just resolve this issue." Dole has more than a parliamentary interest in the issue because the competing Cessna Aircraft Co.'s T-37 trainer is manufactured in his home state of Kansas.

Finally, all sides agreed by voice vote to a compromise that would not require purchase of the plane but would provide for a competition with other aircraft.

The resolution of the dispute over the aircraft cleared the way for the Senate to complete work on the spending bill, the largest ever considered by Congress, and complete the other remaining legislative business.

After completing work on the spending bill, the Senate gave final congressional approval, 63-24, to the major overhaul of the nation's immigration laws, including amnesty for many illegal aliens. The House approved the bill earlier and the president has agreed to sign it.

Meanwhile, the Senate also gave final congressional approval, on a voice vote, to a popular election-year package aimed at combating illegal drug use and trafficking.

By a 378-16 vote, the House on Friday, in effect, sent the Senate two versions of the anti-drug package, one including the death penalty in some drug-related murder cases and one which does not. The Senate approved the version without the death penalty and sent the package to the White House.

Because some Senate opponents of the death penalty had threatened to scuttle the legislation in that chamber, senators went along with the version that provided for life imprisonment instead of the death penalty.

Another major fiscal measure that was resolved involved a package of $11.7 billion worth of deficit reductions that would allow Congress to at least, on paper, meet its deficit target required by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law. Congressional negotiators reached agreement on a compromise version of that package late Thursday and the House approved it 305-70 on Friday.

The package includes sale of the Conrail freight railroad.

Real estate seminar set

A real estate marketing seminar will be offered by Western Texas College in weekend classes meeting Nov. 8-9 and Nov. 22-23.

Classes will meet from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day with a one-hour lunch break. Attendance at all four sessions is mandatory.

This class will earn students 45 clock hours toward a real estate license. Tuition will be $45 per student and students will also be required to purchase a textbook costing $20.

Pat Cornett will be the instructor for the class.

Cannot afford TV time

ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — GOP attorney general candidate Roy Barrera Jr. told supporters Friday his campaign does not have enough money to buy the television ad time he must have to unseat Democrat Jim Mattox.

"We need money. We need to get on television. We need to express our position, our desire, our intent to serve this great state," Barrera said at a breakfast in Austin before heading to Round Rock.

The morning event featured U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker, the Republican's unsuccessful 1978 candidate for Texas attorney general. Baker said the Texas GOP is "extremely fortunate that someone with Roy's experience would offer himself for public service."

"He's going to sneak up on this guy that's attorney general," Baker predicted.

Barrera continued his pleas for money at a Round Rock luncheon attended by Ed Walsh, who lost to Barrera in the Republican runoff election.

Barrera told the luncheon crowd, "Whether it's $10, $100 or more, please help me. Whatever you can afford is going directly to television to help us."

Barrera's Friday schedule also included a Corpus Christi appearance with GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

At the Austin breakfast, Barrera said it will be difficult for him to beat Mattox unless he can come up with the money for television ads.

"I recognize ... that first you must convince the state of Texas why the incumbent does not deserve to be re-elected, because tradition and history clearly point that Texans are not that quick to fire incumbents," he said.

Mattox has brought four years of disgrace to the attorney general's office, said Barrera, a San Antonio state district judge.

In 1859, France and Piedmont declared war on Austria.

Washington, Texas, Nevada officials discuss proposals

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Officials from all three states nominated to host the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump vowed Friday to join forces to fight the government's plans.

Visiting nuclear waste officials from Texas and Nevada were greeted by the Washington Nuclear Waste Board as comrades in a common struggle against the U.S. Department of Energy, rather than as rivals.

The government wants to put 70,000 metric tons of highly radioactive wastes at one of three proposed sites: the Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Yucca Mountain in southern Nevada, or Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle.

All three states have filed lawsuits claiming the site-selection was unscientific and flawed and ripping President Reagan and the DOE for dropping plans for a second repository in the East.

Officials from all three states joined in some DOE-bashing Friday, declared all three sites unsuitable, and pledged joint efforts to study the sites and to try to get the government to overhaul its whole program.

"The department has done a lot to convince the people the program is totally out of control...and not safe," said Steve Frishman, director of the Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office.

"Public confidence is at an all-time low," said Robert Loux, executive director of the Nevada Nuclear Waste Project Office.

The three states agreed to squelch the competitive urge to prove why the other nominated sites should be chosen rather than their homestate site.

"We don't think any of the three have any future of even being licensed" due to fatal flaws overlooked by the government in nominating them, said Frishman. "They're pretty low-quality sites."

Curt Eschels, energy advisor to Washington Gov. Booth Gardner, said the states must keep away from scrambling to "win the reverse sweepstakes."

He added, "Where we work together, we'll be stronger."

Frishman replied, "Our governor has said he doesn't want an unsafe site anywhere in this country."

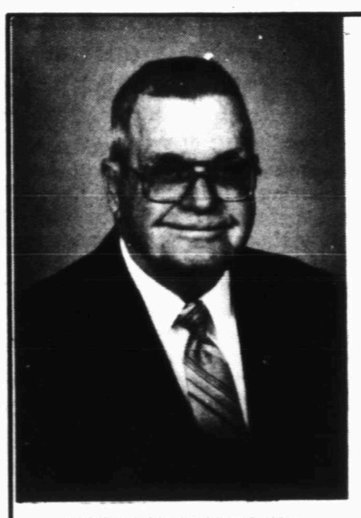

Texas and Nevada officials endorsed the statewide referendum on the ballot in Washington on Nov. 4. That measure sharply criticizes the siting process, calls on state officials to fight it in the courts and elsewhere, and ensures a statewide vote if Hanford is selected.

"It's certainly going to send a message that business-as-usual will not fare," said Loux.

The referendum will catch the eye of Congress and the Reagan administration, and might help revamp the whole process, said Frishman.

He termed the siting process "a national political game," with locations seemingly chosen "solely for political reasons." Gardner has said much the same thing.

The Texas and Nevada officials outlined the increasingly extensive — and expensive — job their states are doing to determine whether the sites are suitable.

Texas Air tightens control

MIAMI (AP) — Texas Air Corp.'s boss Frank Lorenzo strengthened his hold over Eastern Airlines by becoming chairman of the carrier Friday, and he moved closer to acquiring the assets of insolvent Frontier Airlines when an investor group withdrew a surprise $160 million rival bid at a bankruptcy hearing.

In electing Lorenzo, Eastern's board of directors also replaced the company president, a move immediately attacked by two Eastern unions.

Lorenzo, 46, has been chairman and chief executive officer of Texas Air since 1980. Texas Air's $676 million purchase of Eastern, announced in February, was approved by the Department of Transportation last month and would make the Houston-based company the biggest airline operation in the country.

Eastern's chairmanship had been vacant since Frank Borman retired July 1.

The airline also replaced Joseph Leonard, president and acting chief executive officer, with Phil Bakes, 40, president of Continental Airlines since 1984. Continental also is owned by Texas Air.

Lorenzo will remain in Houston but Bakes is already in Miami and is in charge effective immediately, said Jerry Cosley, Eastern's chief spokesman. The company also said it is cutting 47 corporate officer positions down to 16, but that nobody will be fired.

Charles Bryan, head of Eastern's machinists union, said the unions intended to proceed with their attempt to buy the airline and accused the board of trying to expedite Lorenzo's appointment to thwart the unions.

"It was a desperation action," said Bryan, one of two union board members. "They made a mockery of proper procedures." He said he did not even know why the board meeting was called until he arrived.

The unions have been trying to stall the acquisition in favor of its purchase plan.

Eastern shareholders are expected to formally approve the Texas Air takeover at their Nov. 25 meeting. Texas Air already owns more than 51 percent of Eastern's stock, said Glenn Parsons, another Eastern spokesman.

Robert Callahan, president of the flight attendants union local, warned that Texas Air was reducing Eastern to a shell corporation.

"Eastern exists only as a name," said Callahan. "The 14,000 jobs in this community are going to be gone in two years, and nobody seems to care."

Under the new structure Leonard will stay on as executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Eastern lost $154.7 million in the first half of this year, and has lost $500 million this decade.

False claims of molestation increasing in custody fights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fathers seeking custody of their offspring during divorce battles are increasingly subject to false accusations that they sexually molested their children, psychiatrists said Friday.

The therapists blamed greater public awareness of sexual abuse, laws requiring teachers and doctors to report even unsubstantiated accusations, careless counselors who interview alleged victims, and joint custody laws that spur mothers to fight harder for sole custody of their children.

The custody laws and changing moral values mean mothers "have got to get a little more vicious and come up with something better than adultery" accusations against their estranged husbands during custody battles, said Dr. Diane Schetky, a Rockport, Maine, child psychiatrist.

Experts lack reliable statistics documenting the increase in unfounded molestation allegations, said Schetky and other therapists who delivered papers about the trend Friday during the annual meeting of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry.

Court-appointed therapists who investigate such claims "uniformly report a marked increase in false allegations of sexual abuse arising in contested custody cases," said Melvin Guyer, a University of Michigan psychologist-lawyer who evaluates custody cases for Michigan judges.

"False sexual abuse allegations are rare to begin with, but the area where they're (increasingly) common is in contested custody disputes," and fathers are almost always the targets, said Dr. Spencer Eth, a psychiatrist at the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Eth warned that false claims of molestation in divorce cases "should not discredit allegations of sexual abuse of children who are not in contested custody cases. Most of those allegations are truthful."

Most false accusations of molestation are made sincerely, not intentionally, Guyer said.

"A mother would say that little Sally came back from a visit with her dad, she was quiet, she looked tired, she was weepy, she wasn't herself, her tummy hurt," he explained. "Then the child has a diaper rash, and the mother puts all the pieces together and says, 'I think something happened.'"

Moslem militia says it captured Israeli

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — The main Shiite Moslem militia said Friday it had captured an Israeli flier whose jet was shot down during a bombing raid on Palestinian guerrilla bases in south Lebanon.

Israeli troops swept in by helicopter and rescued the other member of the two-man crew after the F-4E Phantom was downed Thursday near Sidon. A local commander of Amal, the Shiite militia, initially said one of the Israelis was killed.

"The captive has a fractured arm. Otherwise he is well," said a spokesman for Amal, who would not give his name. The militia is led by Nabih Berri, the Lebanese justice minister.

He refused to say where the airman was being held. Reports in this southern port said he was taken to the Beirut area overnight by ambulance.

Israel continued its search for the flier, sending helicopter gunships on reconnaissance flights. Israeli naval vessels patrolled off Sidon.

Brig. Gen. Ephraim Lapid, the chief Israeli army spokesman, said: "We will not rest until we have returned the missing man into our hands." Without giving specifics, he added that "we will act on all fronts and in all ways."

Uri Lubrani, Israel's coordinator of affairs in Lebanon, said in an official statement that his government held Amal responsible for the crewman's well-being.

Palestinian guerrillas, Amal fighters and leftist Lebanese militias were on alert Friday, manning combat positions along the southern coast in anticipation of an Israeli landing.

Guerrillas fired barrages of rockets at Israeli jets that streaked overhead on reconnaissance flights at dawn and midday, breaking the sound barrier.

Rashid Karami, Lebanon's prime minister, ordered that a complaint be made to the U.N.

Arms dealings are questioned

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Reagan administration got caught up Friday in a barrage of questions about details of a potential nuclear arms accord discussed at the Iceland summit as a Senate military expert criticized U.S. proposals as poorly prepared.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan may have told legislators after the summit that, even though he and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev may have agreed to scrap all long-range nuclear missiles, that proposal was never actually on the bargaining table in Reykjavik.

"It certainly was not fleshed out," Speakes said in response to questions raised on the Senate floor by Sam Dunn, D-Ga., widely respected by fellow senators as an expert on military affairs.

In a floor speech Friday, Nunn said there is "a genuine question" about terms of the agreement which was nearly reached last Sunday by Reagan and Gorbachev. The potential accord fell apart in a dispute over the U.S. "Star Wars" anti-missile research program.

Nunn said he had talked with Reagan, Secretary of State George Shultz, and other top administration officials, and said he was confused about the details of the potential arms reduction agreement.

Nunn also said that if Reagan's offer involved elimination by both superpowers of nuclear weapons, the proposal should be withdrawn. The senator said making any such agreement would leave the Soviets with a major edge in non-nuclear weapons such as tanks and jet fighters.

"It is obvious that this proposal has not been thought through adequately," he said.

Both superpowers have a variety of types of nuclear weapons, including land-based and sea-based ballistic missiles, atomic bombs carried by bombers, and low-flying, long-range cruise missiles.

Specifically at issue is whether the two sides agreed within the next decade to eliminate all long-range nuclear weapons, or to only eliminate ballistic missiles and not to eliminate bombers and cruise weapons. The United States generally is considered to have an advantage in bombers and cruise weapons.

Speakes, talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as Reagan headed to North Dakota for a political appearance, said the Soviets proposed eliminating all strategic, or long-range weapons, over a 10-year period, and that the United States proposed the elimination of ballistic missiles. Speakes said the issue was never resolved because the talks bogged down over the issue of "Star Wars."

But Reagan gave a different account Monday night in his nationally televised speech.

Reagan said, "We proposed a 10-year period in which we began with the reduction of all strategic nuclear arms, bombers, air-launched cruise missiles, intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and the missiles they carry."

Reagan went on to say, "they would be reduced 50 percent in the first five years. During the next five years, we would continue by eliminating all remaining offensive ballistic misiles, of all ranges." But the president did not say if bombers and cruise missiles would also be reduced in the second five years.

Nunn said, "To say the least, this suggests that there is considerable confusion within the administration on this crucial detail."

Another version of the potential agreement has been spelled out by Richard Perle, the assistant secretary of defense and one of the members of a group of U.S. officials who worked much of the night last Saturday in Iceland trying to iron out an agreement with a Soviet team.

Perle, speaking Wednesday night on ABC News' "Nightline," said, "what we proposed, and we were able to agree on part of this, was that as a first step, the nuclear weapons on both sides — the intercontinental ballistic missiles as well as bombers — should be significantly reduced, by about 50 percent down to equal levels."

Nunn called for a "fundamental review" of the administration's thinking on arms control, saying it seems fraught with confusion.

But Speakes said the Joint Chiefs of Staff is conducting a study of the feasibility of a nuclear-free world and what types of changes might have to be made in U.S. defenses if all atomic weapons were eliminated.

Specialized geriatric hospitals okayed

AUSTIN (AP) — A watchdog group for state agencies recommended Friday that specialized treatment centers for the elderly be designated for Kerrville and San Angelo.

"This will do away with the consternation and trauma that resulted from previous recommendations," said Pete Snelson, a member of the Sunset Advisory Commission.

The voice vote of the commission Friday advanced Snelson's amendment to a final vote the commission will take when it makes its final report in December.

The staff of the Sunset Commission, which periodically reviews the operations of state agencies, originally recommended that the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation take longterm geriatric patients out of state hospitals and put them in nursing homes.

The staff estimated this would result in an $8 million savings in operation of state hospitals.

"We had no intention of shifting everyone to nursing homes and walking away from them," said Kathy Hutto, program analyst for the commission.

"If you put 700 patients in nursing homes it would close down these two institutions (at Kerrville and San Angelo)," Snelson said Friday.

Snelson's successful amendment would designate the Kerrville State Hospital as the Geropsychiatric Hospital for Texas for patients more than 65 years of age who have been in a state hospital for five or more years.

He proposed that San Angelo State School be made into the Geriatric Treatment Center for the Retarded, also for those over 65.

The proposals by Snelson, a former state senator from Midland who is the Democratic nominee for Congressional District 21, evoked little debate from the commission.

"I wonder if we are heading in the right direction when we designated certain hospitals for special facilities," said Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, commission vice chairman. "Where are we going in longterm cost?"

"We will still need these special facilities in the future and they will not get any cheaper," said Snelson.

"People are living longer than they did. Specialization will be very important in the future," he said.

Snelson said his proposals would not close geriatric divisions in other state hospitals but would allow physicians to transfer patients over 65 to Kerrville and San Angelo where it was considered best for the patient.

"The geriatric population in the state schools will increase in the years ahead and by designating these schools as the primary provider of services to this age group, a greater degree of specialization will be possible," Snelson told the commission.

Injuries mount prior to Eagle-Cowboy game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The Philadelphia Eagles may have to do battle against the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday without quarterback Ron Jaworski or rookie running back Charlie Crawford, who had taken the starting spot away from the highly-touted Keith Byars.

Jaworski's status was downgraded to questionable Friday because of numbness in the last two fingers of his throwing hand, the result of a bruised right elbow suffered in last week's 35-3 loss to the New York Giants.

Crawford, who sprained his ankle Thursday, was also listed as questionable for Sunday's game, in which the Cowboys, 4-2, are five-point favorites. The Eagles are 2-4.

Crawford won the start after Byars, the Eagles' No. 1 draft pick and the man described by Coach Buddy Ryan as a "franchise player," was benched for ineffective running and blocking.

Ryan, in drafting Byars, had gambled he would recover from a potentially career-ending foot injury. Byars completed his rehabilitation successfully, but he has missed blocks and has averaged only 2.9 yards on 75 carries.

The coach refused to put the blame on the offensive line.

"Hell, if there are holes there, anybody can run," Ryan said. "I can. You've got to make something on your own, break some arm tackles, things like that."

"I don't care who starts as long as he produces. It's a positive for Charles, not a negative for Keith. I just want to take a look at the other kid."

The differences are striking:

Byars was an All-American from Big 10 power Ohio State. If he hadn't suffered the foot injury in his senior year he might have been the top choice in the draft instead of the 10th.

Crawford didn't even play his senior year at Oklahoma State because of academic ineligibility. His last college season was two years ago. The Eagles took him seventh in a July supplemental draft.

While Byars was groomed for stardom, Crawford toiled on special teams.

Byars signed a four-year contract for close to $2 million. Crawford was happy to sign.

Crawford, a back who has yet to run from scrimmage in an NFL game, noted that the Eagles haven't had a back gain 100 or more yards in a game. "I can make a name for myself quick," he said after learning that he was to start against Dallas.

Crawford isn't the only new starter for the Eagles. Rookie Matt Darwin replaces the injured Gerry Feehery at center. Offensive tackle Leonard Mitchell is doubtful with a knee injury and may be replaced by Joe Conwell.

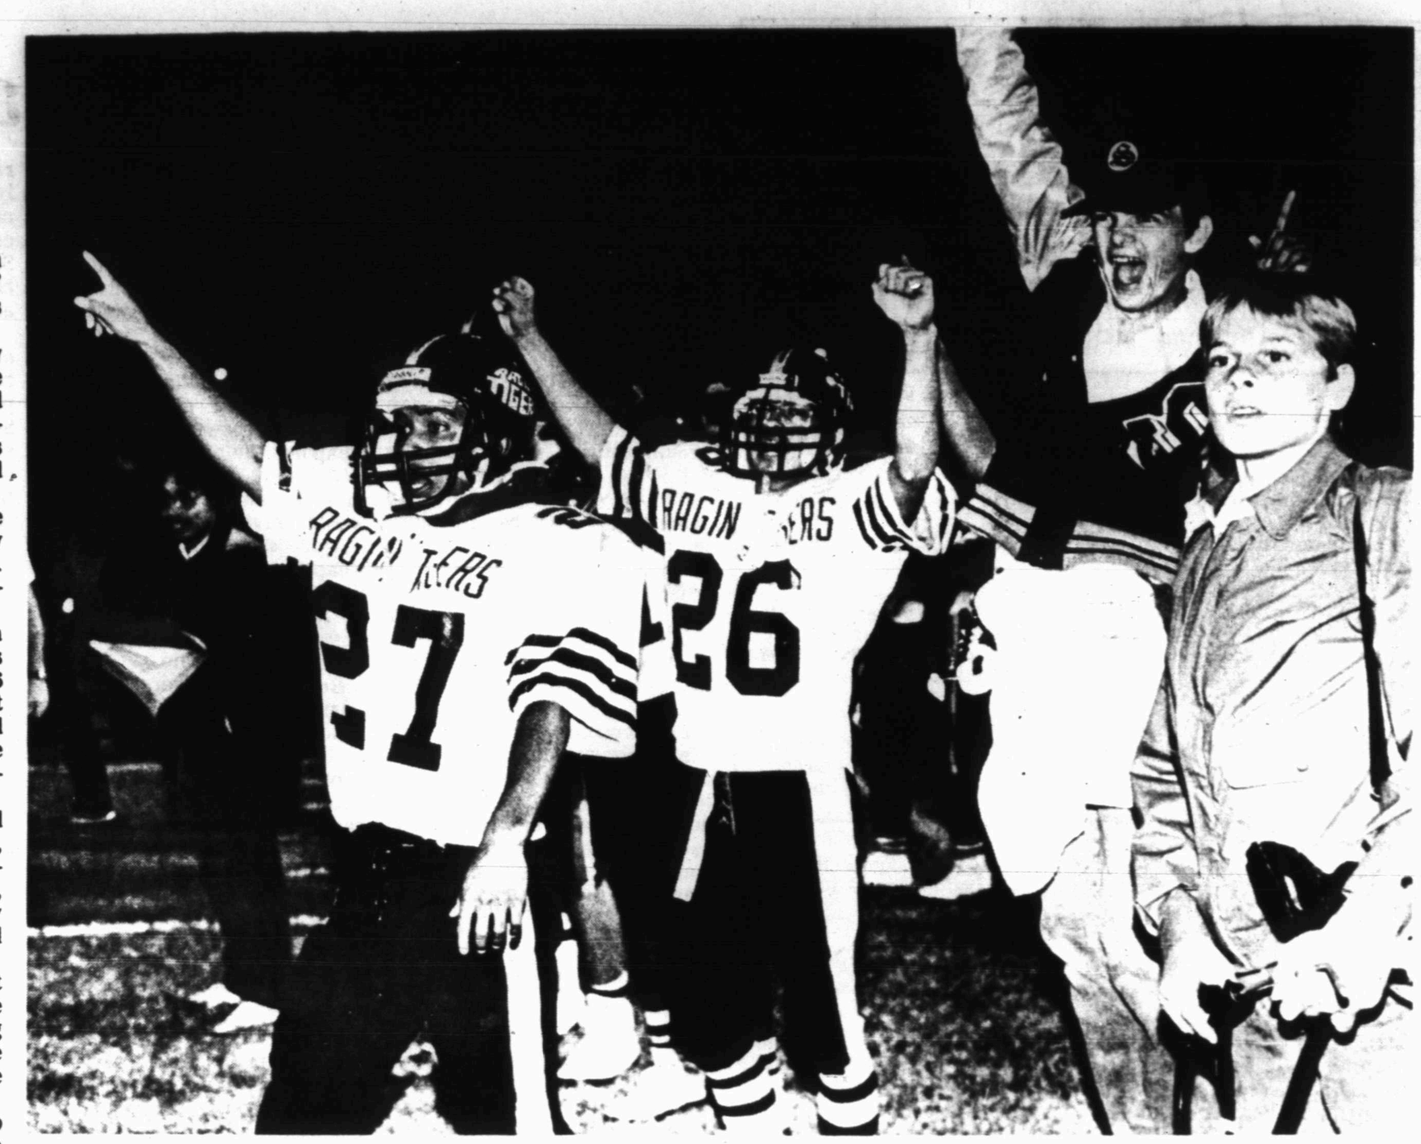

Dallas apparently will be without quarterback Danny White for the third straight week. Coach Tom Landry said he expects to use Steve Pelleur.

Pelleur subbed for White in a 29-14 loss to Denver two weeks ago and led the Cowboys to a 30-6 triumph over Washington last week. Dallas is one game behind the Redskins and Giants, who are tied for first in the National Conference East at 5-1.

The Eagles defense, triggered by defensive end Reggie White, middle linebacker Mike Reichenbach and safety Andre Waters, has to control the running of Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker and Walker's pass receiving.

Jaworski leads an offense that hasn't scored a touchdown in the last six periods or a TD running this season. The Eagles average only 89 yards a game on the ground.

Jaworski will try to throw to wide receiver Kenny Jackson and Mike Quick. Fullback Mike Haddix joins Crawford as a running back.

Overcomes early setback...

Snyder bridles AHS 'Stangs, 28-13

ANDREWS -- Snyder's Ragin' Tigers overcame adversity early in the ballgame here Friday night to defeat Andrews 28-13 and earn their first victory of the 1986 season.

The Tigers could have thrown in the towel with only 14 seconds gone in the game when Andrews' David Criswell ran the opening kickoff 96 yards for a Mustang touchdown. But they didn't.

"I called the team together and told them 'Fellows, Andrews doesn't know it but we're ready to play, and that (the kick return) doesn't make any difference,'" said Snyder Coach Dennis Tomlin.

He was right. After Mike Moisant kicked the point-after to put the Mustangs ahead 7-0, Snyder marched down the field and tied the game.

"I think the kickoff return just made us want it (a victory) more," said Scott Lanier, who scored Snyder's tying touchdown on a one-yard run. "I'd say the kickoff return surprised us, but it didn't really bother us. We knew we were going to win the ballgame."

Snyder marched 67 yards in 15 plays to counter-attack Andrews' TD. Highlighting the drive were runs of six, three and five yards from Troy Burton, seven, 15 and four yards from Michael Riggins, and five and 11 yards from Lanier.

Lanier, who frequently gets the call on short-yardage situations, bulled over from a yard out to make it a 7-6 game with 4:23 still to go in the first quarter. Randy Townsend was perfect with the conversion, and the game was tied at 7-all.

Except for a late fourth-quarter drive, Andrews put together its only march of the game next. The Mustangs worked from their own 40 to the Tiger 26 before Wayne Ware knocked away a Mike Visentine pass from the outstretched arms of Jay Haggard on fourth down.

The Mustangs were unable to mount any kind of threat after that until late in the game, when Snyder already held a 28-7 advantage.

Meanwhile, Snyder's offense turned opportunistic. Cotton Merritt recovered a Cayentano Rios fumble on the Andrews 44-yard line, and the Tigers took advantage.

The visitors got a break on first down, as Roland Romo's pass was deflected by a Mustang defender but fell into the arms of an alert Toby Ubando. The Tiger senior turned the play into a 24-yard gain to the Mustang 21.

Snyder ran off seven yards in two plays, but a five-yard penalty kept the drive in doubt. Romo stopped the heads from shaking, however, when he speared Chris Garrett on a 16-yard toss to the Andrews 3.

It took the Tigers just one play to push the ball into the end zone. Lanier got the ticket again, scoring with 7:11 left in the second quarter. Townsend's kick-after put the visitors in front 14-7.

As a leader on Snyder's "Special Forces" short-yardage unit, Lanier was quick to spread the accolades.

"I love it. My blockers make it easy," he said. "I guess I get the recognition, but they are the ones who should. They do all the work."

Snyder showed its maturity later in the third quarter. Dennis Martinez was back to receive a punt and he inadvertantly touched the ball. An Andrews player fell on it, and the Mustangs took over at the Snyder 37.

It was another opportunity for the Tigers to snap under pressure, but they didn't. Andrews ran three plays and netted only four yards before being forced to punt.

Still later in the quarter, Snyder seized another scoring opportunity. It came when Criswell fumbled at the Andrews 24, and Chris Garrett came up with the Tiger defense aggressive; keeps Mustangs controlled

An aggressive defense was perhaps the key to Snyder's 28-13 victory over Andrews in District 2-4A football action Friday night.

"This was the hardest hitting I've ever seen a Snyder team," said defensive coordinator Kevin Wiseman. "Tonight, this team went out for the win, and not just out to not lose."

Snyder pulled a switch on the Mustangs by playing a 6-1 with Trey Tippens roaming the middle.

"Teams have a tendency to run away from him," noted Wiseman of Tippens, who usually plays defensive end. "We came out with a different look against Andrews, and without looking at the film, I think we did a pretty good job executing it. I know we won the hitting match. We had 11 guys getting to the football every play. And we made some big plays out there.

"I thought we held Criswell (Andrews running back David Criswell) pretty well. Except for the runback and there at the end, I'd say our kids played well," he added.

Andrews ran back the opening kickoff, then scored another touchdown late in the fourth quarter. The Mustangs managed 224 total yards, but got 81 of them in the final 4:18 of the game.

"Our kids really responded. Andrews ran back the opening kickoff, but they didn't let it get to them. It was a great effort. The kids believed they could do it, and they did," said Wiseman.

The coach said Snyder would probably continue to use the 6-1 defense on occasion.

"It really depends on the opponent. We're going to do what ever we think will stop them. But I'd say right now we'll definitely be running it some more," he said.

Sweetwater nails Pecos; Loboes, Steers winners

Sweetwater tossed aside Pecos on Friday but the Mustangs face an even greater foe next weekend if they hope to repeat as District 2-4A titlists - much less, state champions.

Sweewater defeated upstart Pecos 21-7 in the Mustang Bowl to take over sole possession of third place in the 2-4A standings with a 4-1 record; 5-1 overall.

Meanwhile, Big Spring and Monahans remained atop the ladder as the Steers blanked Fort Stockton 16-0 and the Loboes thrashed Lake View 49-21. Both schools are 4-0 in district play.

Monahans' victory keeps the Loboes undefeated on the season as well at 6-0, while Big Spring is 5-1.

The two teams clash on Oct. 31 in Monahans.

For now, however, the Loboes will have to concentrate on next Friday night, when they play Sweetwater. The Mustangs have defeated Monahans three times in the past two years, including a come-from-behind effort in 1985 from which the Loboes were unable to recover.

In the only other 2-4A game Friday, Snyder broke into the win column by defeating Andrews 28-13. The Tigers, under Coach Dennis Tomlin, hope to make it two in a row when they host Lake View next weekend.

Hughes-led Bulldogs ramble past Blackwell Hornets, 57-16

IRA – Lancer Hughes ran for 281 yards and six touchdowns as Ira's Bulldogs burned Blackwell here Friday night 57-16 in a District 4-1A East Zone ballgame.

Hughes, who has been plagued with shoulder problems all season, got on track to help the Bulldogs to their third straight victory on the 1986 season. The 'Dogs, now 3-3-1 on the campaign and 3-0-1 in zone play, take on two-time defending state champion Jayton next week.

Hughes put Ira on the scoreboard with 4:34 left in the first quarter when he ran in from 13 yards out. Early in the second quarter he did the same, this time on a 23-yard jaunt. Reyez Juarez kicked one two-point conversion for a 14-0 advantage.

But Ira was just getting warmed up. The Bulldogs went on to score four second-quarter touchdowns.

Brent Withers found paydirt when he snared a 16-yard scoring toss from Juarez. Juarez tacked on the conversion.

The next two Ira touchdowns came on runs of 30 and 16 yards from Hughes. Juarez added another conversion kick, giving the hosts a 36-0 advantage at halftime.

Ira widened its lead in the third quarter when Josue Espino tucked in an eight-yard pass from Juarez, who also added the kick-after.

Finally, Blackwell got into the act. Jason Shipman put the visitors on the board with a 49-yard TD run. Ray Walls kicked the conversion. The Hornets stung for another touchdown moments later on a Shawn Murphy 19-yard run. Walls also added the PAT kick.

Ira answered the too-late challenge of the Hornets with Hughes, who scored twice more in the final 2:30 of the game. The 5-10, 175-junior tallied on runs of 65 and 13 yards.

Juarez got the final point of the game on a PAT pass to Mike Martini.

Ira managed 457 yards rushing, with Justin Spradlin adding 112 to Hughes' effort.

"We played our best game of the year," said Ira Coach Mitch Lee. "We did a good job of executing. Hughes was healthy and he showed it."

Blackwell was big, but Ira had the edge in speed.

"We took it to Blackwell pretty well. We really just out-quicked them," said Coach Lee, who is already thinking ahead to next week's game with Jayton. "Hopefully this gives us some momentum. We feel we can play with Jayton. I know a lot of people wouldn't think so, but I think we can."

Jayton has never lost a six-man football game. The Jaybirds, 42-8 victors over Highland on Friday, have won back-to-back state championships and are 6-0 in 1986.

Borden bombs Wildcats, 78-28

GRADY – Borden County's Coyotes struck both offensively and defensively, by land and by air, as the scalped the Grady Wildcats here Friday, 78-28.

The victory leaves the Coyotes at 4-2 on the season and 3-1 in District 4-1A West Zone play. Grady falls to 0-7 overall.

"Our kids played well," said Coach Joe Bond. "Grady has a bunch a young kids and they played hard, but they weren't able to keep up. We were pleased with our kids. We needed that to get the momentum back after the loss to Loop."

Borden County will return to Gail for next week's homecoming game with Dawson, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Rocky Harber carried the ball only four times but picked up 82 yards and three touchdowns for his efforts. He also caught one conversion pass. Michael Murphy led the Coyotes in rushing with 103 yards on six carries. He also ran one touchdown, passed for two conversions, and picked off a couple of Grady tosses that he returned for touchdowns.

Brian Bond, subbing for brother Shannon, who was injured in the game with Loop, hit Kerry Fryar and Lance Telchek on a couple of touchdown passes.

Borden's other offensive TDs came on a pair of runs by Brice Key, who scampered 87 yards in only three carries.

Mickey Burkett had a defensive touchdown on a pass interception.

James Smith also caught a PAT pass and Randall Hollis was good on five conversion kicks to round out the scoring.

2-4A ROUNDUP

Besides the Sweetwater-at-Monahans matchup, another contest of consequence is building in 2-4A. Big Spring buses to Pecos, in a game which could boost the Steers' credibility, or knock them out of the running for a district title.

In the only other district game, Lamesa is at Fort Stockton. Lamesa is 1-3 in district play; Fort Stockton is 0-1.

For World Series start...

Sox banged up, but ready

NEW YORK (AP) - Boston left-hander Bruce Hurst, sidelined by a groin pull for seven weeks in midseason, is fit and eager to pitch in the biggest assignment of his career - the opening game of the World Series.

Roger Clemens says he's OK, too, and insists he'll pitch in Game 2 against the New York Mets at Shea Stadium.

Boston Manager John McNamara and pitching coach Bill Fischer were sure about Hurst, rested since last Sunday, for Saturday night's matchup with Ron Darling. They weren't certain about Clemens and delayed a definite decision until later.

And all of Boston's walking wounded, including first baseman Bill Buckner, third baseman Wade Boggs and outfielder Tony Armas, were available for at least part-time duty in the opener of the best-of-7 series against New York's National League champions.

The Red Sox flew from Boston, checked into their hotel and then went directly to Shea Stadium Friday for a two-hour workout. All hands participated in the light tuneup.

McNamara's main concern was the bullpen, where Clemens, observed closely by Fischer, tested his arm for the first time since three starts against California in the American League playoffs.

"He did his usual throwing for about eight or 10 minutes," Fischer said. "He threw all right. His arm didn't appear tired. He's OK."

Clemens, who led the majors with 24 victories this year, insisted he would start Sunday. He got no argument, but McNamara wasn't ready to make it official, saying he's undecided on whether to start Clemens or Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd in Game 2.

There's little doubt that McNamara would prefer to go with Clemens, leaving Boyd to start Game 3 in Boston Tuesday night.

The only question was whether the 6-foot-4 Clemens can pitch effectively a third time in a row on just three days rest.

Pounded by the Angels in the playoff opener, Clemens came back to throw four-hit shutout ball for eight innings in Game 4. It marked the first time this year he had pitched with just three days rest.

Then, after Boyd was a 10-4 winner as Boston evened the playoffs 3-3 last Tuesday, Clemens came back to win Game 7, allowing just four hits while throwing 92 pitches.

Western places 11th at Coody-WT tourney

ABILENE -- Wes Skaggs brought his score up but he was the only Westerner to do so as Western Texas College finished 11th in a field of senior colleges at the Charles Coody West Texas Intercollegiate Golf Tournament, held Thursday and Friday at Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club.

Skaggs, who shot an 81 Thursday, turned in an improved 75 to lead the Westerner contingent. He shot 156 for the 36-hole tournament. Others players were Joel Fults, 80-85 for 165; Brent Wilson, 75-80 for 155; Clint Adams, 76-81 for 157, and Todd Neal, 78-82 for 160.

Western turned in a 627 total.

Sam Houston State University won the event with a 592. Second was Abilene Christian with a 597, followed by Texas Tech University with a 601.

Fifteen colleges entered and Western was the only junior college.

SHSU's Brad Floyd earned medalist honors with a 143.

The universities of Illinois and Southern California tied for numerical honors in the 1986 NFL draft. Each school had nine players selected.

Hank Aaron is the career leader in runs-batted-in with 2,297.

Brent's Hints

Now is the time to winterize your lawn. Winterizing is the most important fertilizer of all. We have Fertilome winterizer plus weed preventer to prevent those winter weeds.

TIGERS VICTORIOUS

football for the Tigers.

Riggins, the fleet-footed sophomore tailback, led the drive this time. He darted between blocks for 15 of the yards on four carries before quarterback Brad Gartman scored on a one-yard run. Gartman at first fumbled the ball from center, but picked it up, and ran to his right, outracing Andrews defenders for the TD. Townsend was good again on the kick-after, and Snyder celebrated a 21-7 lead with 40 seconds to play in the third quarter.

The Tigers put the game away on the next series. Shawn Randolph kicked off to the Mustangs. He was supposed to nail a squib kick to prevent the runback, but hit the ball too high and it bounced just in front of the Andrews receiving team.

The kick turned into good fortune for Snyder because Merritt fell on the ball after it hit a Mustang player, and the Tigers took over at the opponent 48-yard line.

This time, Snyder marched the distance in seven plays, overcoming two five-yard penalties in the process. The big play was a 33-yard strike from Romo to Martinez on a third-and-17 play from the Mustang 40. Riggins ran for six yards to the 1-yard line from there, then bulled over the right side to score with 10:18 left in the game.

Townsend, now eight-for-eight in conversion attempts this season, was true again.

"I thought that the pass from Roland to Dennis was what broke their back," said Coach Tomlin later. "We had a lot of big plays in the game - the running of Michael Riggins, the performance of our short yardage offense, that big pass play, and the play of our defense, of course."

Snyder's defense showed its toughness on Andrews' next drive. The Mustangs got the ball at the 45-yard line after the kickoff, and moved to the Tiger 18 before being forced to give the ball up on downs.

Andrews did add a consolation touchdown with 32 seconds left in the game, when Joe Don Finley scored on a one-yard run.

The Mustangs managed 224 yards and 11 first downs in the contest, though 81 of those steps and four first downs came in the final 4:18.

Snyder put together 183 yards on the ground, including a 15-carry, 75-yard effort from Riggins. Romo, who shared quarterback duties for the first time with Gartman, was three-of-three in passing for 73 yards.

Criswell, a 5-10, 170-senior, led Andrews in rushing for 81 yards on 23 carries.

The victory was Snyder's first over the Mustangs since 1978 and leaves the squad with a 1-5 record as it prepares to host San Angelo Lake View next Friday. Andrews, 2-5, will be idle.

"We learned something about ourselves tonight," said Tomlin. "We've been playing on the edge and we went over this week. This is the best win I've ever coached, mainly because of the vast improvement in the physical hitting of our players. They really got after Andrews tonight," he said.

LTV must pay benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has passed a stop-gap bill requiring ailing LTV Corp. to keep paying life and health insurance benefits for all its retirees at least until May 15, 1987, officials announced Friday.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and pushed in the House by Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, was included in the continuing resolution bill which funds the government during the 1987 fiscal year.

"LTV retirees can breathe a sigh of relief," Metzenbaum said in a prepared statement. "LTV will not be allowed to renege on its commitment to them. LTV will be required to pay health and life insurance benefits to all its retirees through May 15, 1987."

Both Frost and Metzenbaum initiated congressional action in July after LTV filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code and attempted to cut health and life insurance coverage to its nearly 70,000 retirees nationwide, including more than 4,000 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Under an agreement reached Thursday by House-Senate conferees, those benefits will be guaranteed for both salaried and union employees through mid-May.

NASA names test crews

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA named a crew of astronaut veterans and a crew of space rookies Friday to conduct a series of launch pad tests at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The astronauts will participate in a countdown test and a test of launch pad emergency evacuation procedures, said NASA spokesman Jack Riley. The tests are expected to start next month.

The veteran astronauts were on the crew of the last successful space shuttle mission, the week-long flight last January of Columbia.

Robert L. Gibson, just as he did in the mission, will command the test crew. The others are Charles F. Bolden, pilot, and mission specialists Franklin R. Chang-Diaz, Steven A. Hawley and George D. Nelson.

The astronauts, along with Congressman Bill Nelson, D-Fla., were on a mission that ended Jan. 18, just 10 days before Challenger blew up 73 seconds after launch. The Challenger accident killed seven crew members and caused the shuttle fleet to be grounded.

To conduct the countdown test, Gibson and his crew will pretend they are about to be launched into space aboard Atlantis. They will board the craft at the usual pre-launch time and then spend hours communicating with the launch control center. The countdown will procede up to the moment of normal rocket engine ignition.

Space shuttle Atlantis is sitting on the launch pad at the Kennedy Space Center, but has not been fueled or physically prepared for launch.

Logs show pilot's missions

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American pilot killed when his plane was shot down while resupplying Nicaraguan Contra rebels flew missions over the past 16 months to U.S. military bases, to Colombia and inside Angola, according to log books found in the crash.

According to his personal flight crew logs, Wallace B. Sawyer also was piloting a Southern Air Transport L382 cargo plane in Central America this year even though Southern Air insists he had left the company by 1985.

Southern Air, a onetime CIA-owned company, has denied any connection to the C123 cargo plane that was shot down over southern Nicaragua on Oct. 5. Reagan administration officials have also said they were not involved with the flight, although they have yet to identify who was.

Sawyer, who lived in Magnolia, Ark., kept detailed records of his flights in two log books covering the period from June 2, 1985, until shortly before the crash. The books list the planes used, the crew's last names and shorthand designations for airports.

While some of the notations are unclear and others appear to be personal abbreviations for clandestine airstrips, the roughly 400 entries portray Sawyer as a pilot involved with diverse worldwide operations. Nicaraguan officials allowed The Associated Press to review the books for several hours.

More than 100 entries appear to mark flights in Central America, including many to "MSSS," the international code for El Salvador's Ilopongo military airport, where a surviving American crewman on the downed flight, Eugene Hasenfus, said the Contra resupply operation was based.

Hasenfus told a news conference in Nicaragua that two Cuban-Americans, known as Max Gomez and Ramon Medina, "worked for the CIA (and) did most of the coordination of these flights." CIA officials denied that Gomez, whose real name is Felix Rodriguez, works for them, although intelligence sources said he was an agent in the past.

From 1984 to the present, Congress has barred U.S. government military aid to the Contras, a ban that is expected to be lifted when final approval is given this month to President Reagan's $100 million Contra aid package.

Although Sawyer spent much of his time at Ilopongo, 77 of his log entries mention flights to or from "AGU," an apparent reference to Aguacate, the Contras' U.S.-built airstrip in eastern Honduras. Other notations mark flights to "MOC," presumably Mocoron, a U.S.-built airstrip used by Indian rebels allied with the Contras. Other flights are to commercial airports in Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador and Belize.

The bulk of Sawyer's Central American flights were made between last February and September, with a flurry of apparent Aguacate-based flights between March 24-28 listed as "ops," common military shorthand for military operations. During that period, Nicaraguan government forces had crossed into Honduras to attack Contra base camps along the border.

Southern Air spokesman William Kress said he could not explain why Sawyer would be flying a Southern Air plane in Central America this year after his reported departure from the company.

Two L-382 cargo planes that Sawyer flew in Central America and the United States were leased by Southern Air from Safair Freighters (USA), Inc., which is affiliated with Safair Freighters of South Africa, according to Hugh Flynn, president of the U.S. company.

Before this year's stint in Central America, Sawyer's log books show him flying 106 flights in Angola from Oct. 21 to Dec. 19, 1985, on a Southern Air-registered L382. According to the airport designations, most of the flights were either to or from Luanda, the capital of the Marxist-ruled country that has been fighting a civil war.

Sawyer's flights, as listed on the logs, appear to be mostly to towns under control of the Soviet-backed government and particularly to Menongue, a town in south-central Angola that has been a staging area for attacks against the pro-U.S. rebels of Jonas Savimbi.

Many of flights to Menongue occurred during a period of heavy fighting last fall. Sawyer's father, Wallace B. Sawyer Sr., said Friday his son had talked about "flying mostly diesel fuel" in Angola to airstrips where he would see Russians.

In the summer of 1985, Congress lifted a decade-old ban on CIA involvement in Angola and early this year, the CIA began funneling covert support to Savimbi.

Southern Air spokesman Kress said Southern Air does fly general cargo in Angola under contract to diamond mine operators, whom he refused to identify. Most of Angola's diamond mines are in the northeast, however, while Sawyer's flights were to the south and coastal regions.

In 1985, Southern Air had $26 million in contracts with the Pentagon to fly logistical supplies to U.S. military bases. According to Capt. Tom Larock of the Military Airlift Command, Southern Air emerged as a major military transporter in 1983 and this budget year is expected to receive $42 million for such flights.

The logs also show Sawyer twice flying a Southern Air L-382 cargo plane to two cities in Colombia and then to Miami in October 1985. One of the cities, Barranquilla, is a bustling port on the Caribbean and also considered a center for drug smuggling.

Lefty O'Doul, sometimes a part-time player and pinch-hitter, still had a lifetime batting average of .349 for 970 games in 11 seasons.

Confusion persists over arms policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration policy on a key arms question remains confused following a statement by Secretary of State George Shultz about prospective weapons cutbacks that appeared at odds with President Reagan's reported position.

Speaking to a National Press Club luncheon Friday, Shultz said the United States proposed to Soviet negotiators last week in Iceland only the elimination of ballistic missiles — not all long-range weapons.

Under that proposal, Shultz said both sides would keep atomic bomb-equipped aircraft and cruise missiles with nuclear warheads.

But Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said in a speech Friday that Reagan told congressional leaders Tuesday he had proposed in Reykjavik to eliminate within 10 years "all nuclear ballistic missiles and everything else, including bombs."

And in comments to reporters last Sunday following the end of the meetings between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Shultz himself said, "However, as the agreement that might have been said, during this 10-year period in effect all offensive strategic arms and ballistic missiles would be eliminated ... "

In his nationally televised speech Monday, Reagan said the United States proposed to the Soviets a 50 percent reduction of all strategic arms during the first five years and the elimination of "all remaining offensive ballistic missiles" in the second five-year period.

This suggested that bombers and cruise missiles would not be eliminated in the second half of the program and contradicted what Nunn said he heard from the president the next day.

Ballistic missiles are the long-range rockets that operate similarly to those used in space shots. Most bombs carried by airplanes are powered by gravity and low-flying cruise missiles use engines similar to jets.

Nunn said that to eliminate all strategic offensive nuclear arms over the next decade would put the United States at a serious disadvantage because of the substantial edge the Warsaw Pact nations hold over Western Europe in conventional military forces. He said he pointed this out during the meeting with Reagan.

Nunn, a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a respected military analyst, suggested that the elimination of only ballistic missiles might leave the nuclear balance "resting precariously on the shoulders of our respective bomber and air defense forces."

The Soviets have made massive investments in air defense while the United States has virtually nothing in that area, he said.

"I think we must act immediately to pull our zero ballistic missile proposal off the table before the Soviets accept it," Nunn said. "There are some deadly serious questions."

"It is obvious that this proposal has not been thought through adequately," said Nunn.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan may have told legislators after the summit that he and Gorbachev agreed to scrap all long-range nuclear missiles. But such a proposal was never actually on the bargaining table in Reykjavik, the spokesman said.

"It certainly was not fleshed out," Speakes said in response to the questions raised by Nunn. In any case, discussion of the issue was abruptly halted when Reagan rejected the proposal by Gorbachev to link weapons reductions to U.S. abandonment of its Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars."

But Speakes lent weight to Nunn's suggestion that Reagan favors the elimination of all strategic arms, not just ballistic missiles.

"Given a choice of a world free of nuclear weapons or a world with, I think the American people would favor a world without," he said.

Shultz indicated that the answer to the doubts expressed by Nunn is not to continue relying on thousands of nuclear weapons for deterrence but to reduce them while offseting the current Soviet advantage in conventional forces. This would require a defense spending increase, Shultz said

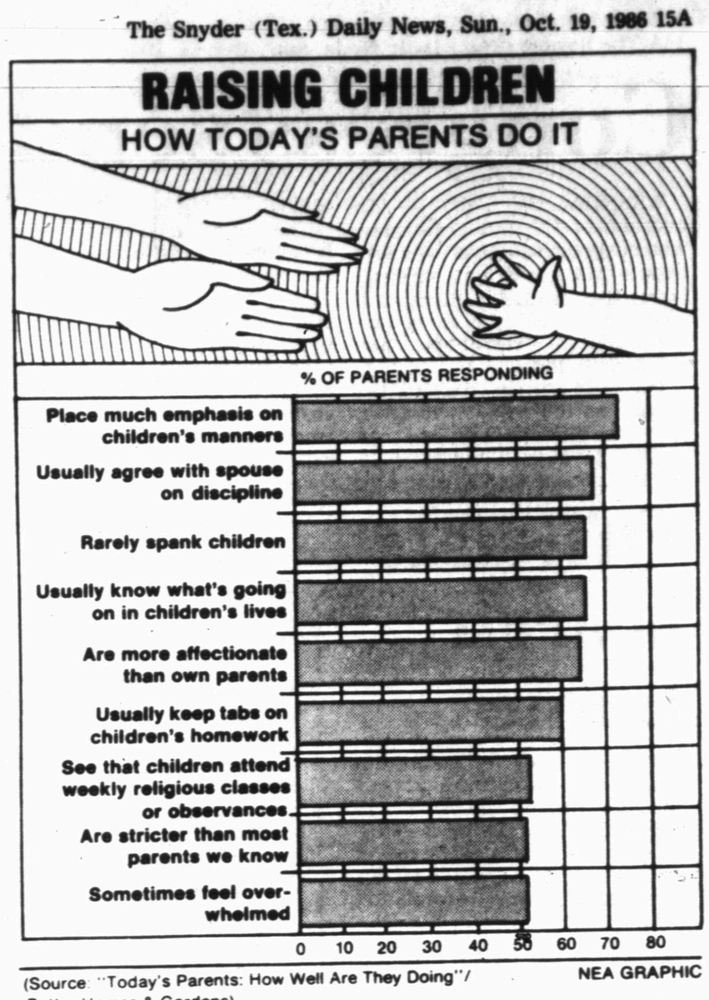

"From our standpoint there's no question about the fact that deterrence based on conventional forces is sharply more expensive than deterrence based on nuclear forces," he said. "But it's a safer form of deterrence.

"We would have to make up our minds to spend more money. But you can't tell me that an economy that's already at $4.5 trillion, and is moving toward $5 trillion, that we can't afford far more than $390 million for our defense and national security."

Campaigning for GOP Sen. Mark Andrews in North Dakota Friday, Reagan defended the Star Wars program, calling it a "purely peaceful technology" and comparing it to World War II radar used to beat back the Nazis.

At a political rally for Andrews, Reagan said that trading Star Wars for arms reductions at the Iceland summit would have been tantamount to Britain's Neville Chamberlain appeasing Hitler at Munich before World War II.

"The Soviets are hard bargainers," Reagan said. "America must be even more patient and determined and united."

In a recent survey, most parents said they keep close tabs on their children's habits, education and religious training and know what's going on in their lives. All this adds up to a job that many sometimes find overwhelming.

Colleagues bid O'Neill farewell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., whose white mane and stout build became symbolic of the Democratic Party, said farewell to the House of Representatives where he was ending his 10-year tenure as speaker.

"I leave with just love and affection for this great body," O'Neill, D-Mass., said Friday night during an alternately hushed and uproarious interlude as the 99th Congress drew to a close. "I'll always be a man of the House of Representatives."

O'Neill was given several long and cheering standing ovations as he held the gavel for one of the last times.

In a quiet and sometimes emotion-tinged voice that contrasted with the booming tones usually heard during contentious debate, he reminisced about his 50-year career as a legislator and restated the Democratic philosophy that has guided him.

"Fifty years ago, every community had a poorhouse or an alms house," he recalled before the nearly full chamber. "Your father worked six days a week. What was life all about? Life is all about the family, a roof over your head, food and sustenance, your children to have a better education than you have.

"... And in 50 years I've seen a change. And I've seen a change because the American people wanted a change... The great laws, Social Security, Medicare, the G.I. Bill of Rights ... in 50 years I've seen so much."

Trial jury panel selection slated

Attorneys for both sides have been reviewing these questionnaires this past week in preparation for the individual questioning to begin Monday.

Twelve of the 117 prospective jurors are expected to be interviewed Monday.

Both Frank Conard of Sweetwater, the court-appointed defense attorney, and Armstrong have 16 "strikes" during jury selection.

A strike means they can have the potential juror dismissed because they feel the individual might be inherently prejudiced against their case.

Assisting Conard Monday will be Snyder attorney Jim Clark, who was appointed by Dulaney for this portion of the trial process.

"After Monday, we'll see how we're doing," Dulaney said Friday afternoon, indicating the number of potential jurors called during the week will be based on the speed of jury questioning during the first day.

As a general rule, attorneys have indicated they would like to interview six persons during the morning and six during the afternoon each day until the selection process is completed.

Fourteen jurors will be chosen, two as alternates in case some member of the jury cannot hear all of the case's evidence.

Through the testimony portion of the trial, all 14 will be seated. Once the jury begins its deliberation, however, only 12 will be sequestered. If the two alternates are not needed, they will be dismissed at that time, Dulaney said.

Banks which at one time were contolled by Sam Spikes were located in Snyder, Seminole, Brownfield and Lubbock. All were closed by federal regulators.

Sam Spikes currently is under federal indictment in Lubbock with regard to federal banking violations.

After graduation from Snyder High School where Spikes was a highly-recruited fullback, he played for Texas Christian University and was twice named all-Southwest Conference.

In 1960, Spikes began his professonal football career with the Dallas Texans. He moved with the team to Kansas City in 1963 and later played for the San Diego Chargers, Houston Oilers and Buffalo Bills.

Oil talks stalled on prices, quotas

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC's marathon oil talks, bogged down for nearly two weeks, have encountered a new roadblock: rebuilding the cartel's shattered pricing policy.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Saturday entered the 13th day of what has become one of the longest meetings in the cartel's 26-year history.

When the talks adjourned Friday evening after five hours of discussion, there were few signs that the conference was approaching a conclusion, although some officials said progress was being made.

"We are gradually advancing," said Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, the oil minister of Venezuela.

Fawzi Shakshuki, the Libyan oil minister, told reporters there was a concensus within the cartel to try to return to OPEC's previous system of fixed oil prices.

After years of erosion, this system fell apart last September. Since then the OPEC countries have been free to use whatever pricing system they liked — with most linking their prices to rates on the open market.

Libya and some other OPEC countries want to return to a unified pricing policy in which the cartel declares and seeks to defend a single price. Others, however, say it is too soon to attempt this.

Saudi Arabia is reported to be seeking an OPEC commitment to a price target range of $17 to $19 a barrel for 1987. This, in combination with a new set of production controls, could be the first step back to an official pricing structure.

When OPEC unofficially abandoned its fixed-price system last fall, the cartel's basic price was $28 a barrel.

The main stumbling block to reinstating a fixed OPEC oil price — besides differing views on what the price ought to be — is the world oil glut that is pushing prices down.

The oil glut washed out OPEC's efforts to fix oil prices, and, over the past five years, undermined the cartel's ability to control the market.

Minor wrecks worked Friday

Two minor traffic accidents were reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the first — at 8:18 a.m. in the 3700 Block of Ave. V — were a 1977 Oldsmobile driven by Joan Rachell Holder of 3725 Ave. V and a 1982 Cadillac driven by Charles Gibson of 2101 42nd St.

The day's second mishap was reported at 9:35 p.m. on the parking lot of Snyder Nursing Center on the Big Spring Highway.

Involved in it was a 1975 Cadillac driven by Wilma Jean Gleghorn of Rt. 3, Snyder which struck a parked 1983 Pontiac owned by Bobby Burney of the Arah Rt.

Windshield said broken

Police are investigating one criminal mischief report filed early Saturday morning.

Bryan Thrower of 2226 Sunset Dr. reported at 1:33 a.m. that the windshield on his 1983 Plymouth had been broken while the car was parked at Snyder High School Friday night.

No estimate was available for the value of damage to the vehicle.

Congress sends immigration bill to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — An overhaul of U.S. immigration law won congressional approval with Senate passage Friday, offering hope that illegal entries will cease even as millions of undocumented residents are granted amnesty.

The 63-24 Senate vote sent the legislation to President Reagan, who "awaits the bill and has agreed to sign it," said chief Senate sponsor Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.

The bill lingered for six years between life and death and, at the end, sponsors had to keep it alive Friday with a 69-21 vote to choke off a filibuster against its amnesty provisions.

The final version never lost the cornerstones with which it began: fines and prison terms for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens; amnesty for those who came here long ago and established roots. The amnesty applies to those who arrived before 1982.

"The president awaits the bill and has agreed to sign it," said chief Senate sponsor Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.

Simpson admitted there are flaws in the compromise legislation, but told colleagues, "There never will be a perfect bill, any more than there are perfect children, perfect marriages, perfect crimes, or anything."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, the chief opponent of the bill, said it was unfair to 1.9 million current applicants who waded through legal channels to become U.S. residents.

He said the Immigration and Naturalization Service has just started processing applications for permanent residency for people who applied eight years ago.

Gramm also expressed "great concern" that illegal aliens could produce "clear-cut documentation and proof" to verify they qualified for amnesty.

But Simpson replied that "document fraud is a cottage industry" today within yards of the U.S. Capitol, where "you can pick up anything you want" in forged identification documents.

He said the Immigration and Naturalization Service would improve verification procedures with the onset of legalization.

Gramm's fellow Texan, Democrat Sen. Lloyd Bensten, sided with Simpson, commenting, "The sooner we pass an immigration law the sooner we will develop the integrity of our borders. We have lost that."

Even more "absurd" than the general amnesty, Gramm said, was the special legalization program for foreign agricultural workers.

Officials search home

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities staged a pre-dawn raid Friday on the unlicensed Fort Worth children's home run by the Rev. W.N. Otwell because of threats of violence from Otwell and his backers, Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

No children under age 18 were found, Mattox said. If any children return to Otwell's Community Baptist Church School, authorities will take them out, Mattox said.

"If children are brought back into the facility, they will be taken and either placed back with their parents or with other facilities in the state," Mattox said.

Mattox said that next Wednesday, his office will ask a state judge to close the Otwell home. He said authorities were concerned what might happen if such an order is issued.

"Because Rev. Otwell has made statements that would indicate there is some possibility of violence, we felt it would be proper to remove the children before that might take place," he said.

"Rev. Otwell has made statements such as (that) we would see blood running in the streets if we attempted to take these children out of the facility. They've left a dead cat on my front porch. They have prayed for our deaths. I do not know what the intent of these individuals is."

Mattox said officials of the Department of Human Services, Texas Youth Commission, Department of Public Safety, his office and local law enforcement agencies entered the Otwell home between 5 a.m. and 5:30 a.m.

They were armed with an order issued by a Tarrant County judge, Mattox said.

No unity hurts oil import fee

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan will not consider supporting an oil import fee until the energy industry is united on the issue, U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker said Friday.

Baker said he personally supports a tariff on imported oil, but the president's opposition has not wavered.

"The president took a look at that several months ago ... and he concluded at the time that it was not something he would support because the energy industry was badly divided," Baker said at an Austin news conference.

"Not just the majors opposed it, but organizations like the independent producers association came out strongly against it. The entire petrochemical industry of Texas was opposed also," he said.

The treasury secretary was in town to be honored as a distinguished alumnus of the University of Texas.

In addition to the divided sentiment within the industry, Reagan shied from the oil import fee because "it was very close to being a new tax" and because a federal bureaucracy would have to be set up to monitor it.

"What's really needed more than anything else is unity from the industry. You had half the industry up there lobbying strongly against and half of them lobbying strongly for it," Baker told reporters.

Texas Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, and Bill Clements, White's GOP opponent, both support an oil import fee as a way to boost sagging oil prices that have busted portions of the Texas economy.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

The old cliche "stubborn as a mule" rankles Tommy Marricle of Snyder. The county's resident "mule expert" insists that the animals rarely display the behavior the saying implies. And as long as he is physically able to do so, he plans to help disprove the myth.

"I don't know whether it's love, admiration or respect I have for mules — probably all three," he admits.

Regardless the reason, Marricle continues to raise the animals and to participate in mule shows in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

The long time mule skinner (an individual who knows the proper way to handle the animals) treats local residents to glimpses of his team during parades, fairs and, most recently, the performance of Whirlagig.

Raised in Crosby County in the Texas Panhandle, 65-year-old Marricle worked with mules from the time he was old enough to share in the family's farming responsiblities. "Almost everyone around us farmed with mules in those days," he explained. "That's all we used. We didn't have a tractor until after I was out of high school."

Mules are the hybrid product obtained when a jack (male donkey) and a mare (female horse) are mated. "Not many people realize that you can cross a stallion and a jenny or female donkey to make a henny. I probably wouldn't know the difference, but an expert probably could tell," he said.

Marricle also explained that a defect in a mule's chromosomes usually prevents them from conceiving. "Even if a mare mule does conceive, she usually cannot carry a colt to full term. There have been only a few documented cases. The most famous, Old Beck owned by Texas A&M, did conceive and raise two colts — one a mule and one a horse," he added.

His fascination with the animal led him to become a "mule historian" of sorts as well as a handler. While serving as the country's first president, George Washington introduced mules to the United States.

"In 1785, Washington admired 'jack stock' — breeding stock — during a visit to Spain. In 1786, the king of Spain (Charles III) sent him a jack and two jennies," he explained. Washington's jack, Royal Gift, was used to begin this country's Mammoth jack stock. The term "Mammoth" was coined to distinguish mules from the smaller burros which migrated north from Mexico.

Although Missouri has consistently led the nation in mule population, sometime in the 1930s Texas managed to take the top spot. "I don't know the exact number, but I would say we had in the hundreds of thousands," Marricle hazarded a guess.

"In 1889, 25,300 new mule colts were born in Texas alone. There were 117,000 foal total in the United States and Missouri led with 34,500," he quoted from one of a stack of mule magazines.

Although he grew up working with the animal, he did not begin to raise them seriously until moving to Scurry County in the early 1970s.

After graduating from high school in 1939, he moved to Midland "to cowboy" on a ranch. Then in 1942, he joined the Army Air Corps and served as a gunner with the Fifth Air Force in the South Pacific during World War II.

He returned to Midland after the war ended. Following a few years in Mitchell County, he worked as a ranch hand on the 6666 Ranch in Guthrie.

Although mules were no longer the mainstay for labor, Marricle explained that they were used to move the chuckwagon during drives. "I helped the cook quite a bit. He was a good cook, but he didn't know a thing about mules," he laughed.

Following employment for some five years with McBeth Egg Farm, he opened a domestic water well service specializing in sales and service of windmills and pumps. "We set up business in 1977. I guess we are probably one of the few windmill service companies left in this part of the country," he added.

He bought his first jack 11 years ago from a horse trader in San Angelo and has "bought, sold and traded animals since. Some of the best mules in this part of the country came out of him (the first jack) including the Best All Around mule in this year's fair."

Marricle raises mules primarily for pleasure and will provide his animals for stud service when a request is made. At the present time he owns six mules including a jack. He also has three mares which should produce mule foals next spring. "Some days I may have 20 and some days only one" due to frequent trading.

He noted that more mules have been raised in the last 10 to 15 years than in the years since the early 1940s. He attributes the increase primarily to a greater interest in using mules for pleasure and to increased opportunities for mule racing.

"In a 300-yard race, a mule would probably be about 1½ to two seconds slower than a quality quarterhorse — not the top racing quarterhorses but good quality," he explained.

He added that mules are bred for different functions just as horses are. "Some are bred to run, others to work. You breed them for what you want to use them for."

Races near this area usually take place in Lubbock and Ruidoso. "Racing is really a rich man's game just like it is when racing quarterhorses," he said.

A member of the Ruidoso Downs Mule Skinners Association, he attends races to assist primarily with auctions.

During a recent sale in Ruidoso, he auctioned a racing mule named Macho Man to a California man for $4,800. "The man who bought him thinks he will be the fastest mule in the country," Marricle noted.

Auctioneering is another aspect of his involvement with mules on a regular basis. Although he considers his sideline only a hobby, he has been a licensed and bonded auctioneer for the past 35 years and serves in that capacity for three major shows as well as local 4-H and Future Farmers of America sales. He has also held 4-H and FFA events in Midland the past 15 years. "I do Ruidoso every year, Lubbock the last two years and Oklahoma the last five years (all major shows)," he said.

Also a member of the Denton-based American Mule and Donkey Association, he explained that several areas hold "mule celebrations" including one considered the largest in the country at Bishop, Calif. "I haven't been able to go yet, but I plan to," he admitted. "But I generally try to make five or six major shows a year particularly Lubbock, Ruidoso, Oklahoma and Stephenville. I've also been to the big Houston show."

He explained that most trading and selling is conducted at the large shows and the annual all-mule rodeo in Ada, Okla.

Because of his interest, he and his wife Tavia rarely take a "real vacation." Since Tavia works for Stinson Drug, she uses her time off to travel to mule shows with

Feminine styles change to suit modern lifestyle

CHICAGO (AP) — For fall '86, hair and fashion are all about style — and lifestyle. Just as fall fashion derives from the feminine form, hairstyles take their cue from curves, says a team of salon owners and educators from across the country.

The group, the Helene Curtis Master Trainers, has developed a collection of fall hairstyles based on fashion's silhouette and style, and have named it the Tough and Tender Collection.

Tough style reflects a woman's self-confidence, they point out. For the woman who favors a bold fashion statement, there are slim skirts and slim jackets in gutsy leathers and form-fitting knits.

Tough looks in hair might mean deep, dramatic waves sweeping off the face or a combination of precisely defined waves and free-form curl. On longer hair, finger-styling achieves a rough finish that has all the impact of spiky looks with a more modern feeling.

Tender looks turn up in soft suedes, laces and cashmere. Skirts are longer and flirty while tops and jackets curve to the body, emphasizing the waist and hips.

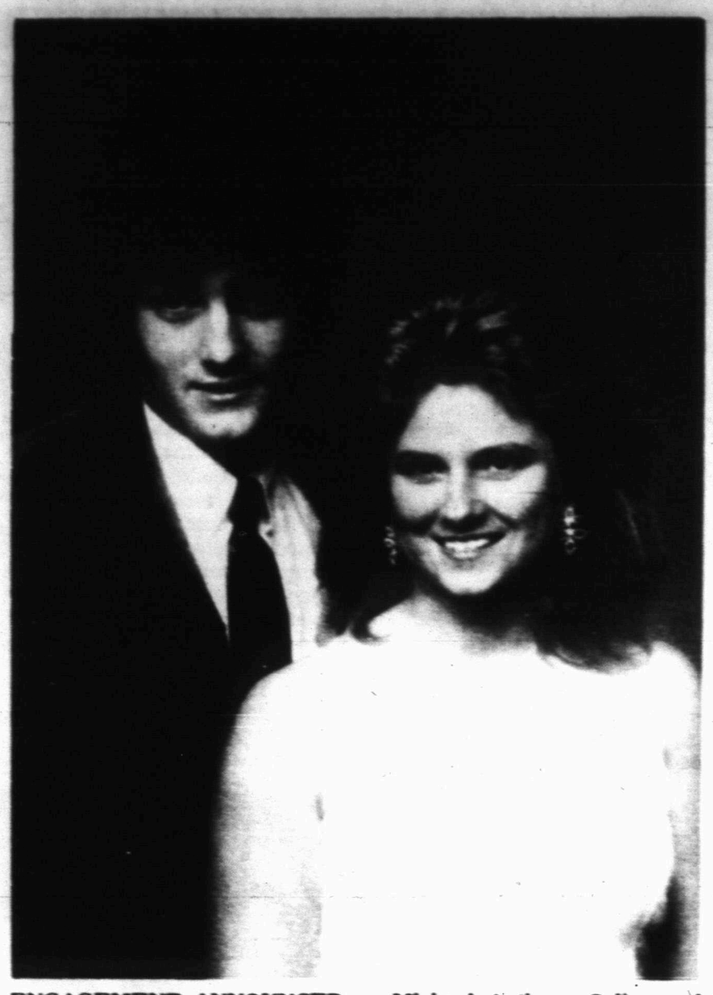

Tender hairstyles take wave and finish it with polish and softness. Perms are used to create a diffused, delicate texture or glamorous, '40s-style curl. Short cuts are styled smoothly up and back, while longer looks may be based on bold wave that fades into soft curl.

"Finally, designers have given women the option of dressing to suit their mood, whether it's in a 'tough' black leather suit or 'tender' sweater set and suede skirt," says master trainer Douglas Marvaldi of Winter Park, Fla. "Any hairstyle has to be able to easily make the transition from one look to the other. A cut based on form allows the versatility that fall fashion demands."

The form the master trainers see as most influential for fall is a geometric one that can be adapted to any length of hair, in "tough," avant-garde interpretations or a "tender" look of subtle sophistication. The hair moves in waves off the face — a departure from the forwardmoving styles of seasons past. There is extension and volume at the front and back, while the sides and crown remain close to the head.

"It is the detailing which makes the difference between a tough and tender look, both in fashion and hairstyle," says master trainer Richard Calcasola of Long Island, N.Y. "Working from a basic form, a woman can style her hair according to her mood. For a night out, she might use gel to mold a dramatic wave into the front, then pull the rest back into a ponytail. By day, the same cut can be styled with mousse to create smooth waves at the front and add volume to the nape area."

Perms are essential for fall, says Calcasola, for the textural interest they add and the style support they offer.

Range Conservationist

WHAT IS RANGELAND?

Rangeland may appear to be unmanaged wildland that in many cases may appear to be unproductive, but rangeland is:

—land that provides grazing for millions of cattle, sheep, goats and horses;

—land that provides food and shelter for numerous wild animals;

—land where hundreds of birds spend much of their lives;

—land that provides millions of people with 365 days of recreation opportunity each year;

—land that provides water for livestock, wildlife and humans;

—land that provides energy in the form of oil, coal, natural gas, uranium, sun, wind and water; —land that supports a renewable natural resource, range vegetation.

Rangeland in Texas is as big as the states of Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Vermont, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and Rhode Island combined. Rangeland occupies 90 million acres in Texas or 59% of the state's land area.

The facts presented above are released by the Society for Range Management - Texas Section. The Society for Range Management is a professional organization composed of individuals with a common interest in the study, management and rational use of rangeland and related ecosystems.

The Society's objectives are:

—to develop an understanding of range ecosystems and of the principles applicable to the management of range resources;

—to assist all who work with range resources to keep abreast of new findings and techniques in the science and art of range management;

—to improve the effectiveness of range management to obtain from range resources the products and values necessary for man's welfare;

—to create a public appreciation of the economics and social benefits to be obtained from the range environment;

—to promote professional development of its members.

For more information on Texas Rangelands, contact the Snyder SCS Field Office located at 3423 Ave. T.

Men living longer, but women still outlive them

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1979, women outlived men by 7.8 years, but in 1985, the female edge gradually narrowed to 7.0 years, according to AIMplus magazine.

It says more women are now smoking, and men are taking better care of themselves by exercising more and watching their diets.

However, researchers claim women will probably always outlive men because they have more biological immunity to infections than men do.

Ninety years are celebrated

Mrs. Roy Jones, ninety years old Oct. 15, was honored last Sunday with a family dinner and party at Rose Park Activity Center in Abilene. Hosting the event were Mrs. Jones's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cooper and their family.

Entertainment included skits depicting events in the honoree's life and music played by Allan and Leah Leach with sons Joe and Jim of Burleson, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of the honoree.

Special guests attending were Mrs. Jim Clanton of Kerrville, sister of the honoree, and Mrs. Luther Blythe of Snyder, sister-in-law of Mrs. Jones.

Fifty-five guests attended the event from Fort Worth, Carrolton, Burleson, Dallas, Big Spring, Kerrville, Sweetwater, Abilene, Colorado City, Clyde and Snyder.

Mrs. Jones was born Oct. 15, 1896 in Woodruff County, Ark. She has been a resident of Scurry County since 1914.

County man seeks to change mule's image

her husband. "I guess there was only one time we took what you might call a vacation to see an old buddy in Michigan," he laughed.

Although individuals outside the mule community are generally unaware of the holiday, Congress passed a resolution last year proclaiming Oct. 26 as Mule Appreciation Day. "Mule people wrote thousands of letters asking them to recognize mules for their contributions to this country," he explained.

The date was chosen because it marked "two centuries to the day" when King Charles III presented his gift.

Through his community efforts to include his animals in parades and other functions, Marricle hopes to help change the mule's public image. To characterize a mule as "stubborn" is a misconception, he claims. "Usually when they stop, it's because they are tired," he said. "A horse will keep going until he drops from exhaustion.

"You treat a mule like one of your kids. Don't hit him between the ears. Most respond to love and kindness. Sure, every once in awhile you will find a bad one just like there are bad kids. If you get a bad one, get rid of him."

Marricle believes that mules possess several superior qualities over their equine counterparts. "They have more stamina than a horse; they're stronger; they can live on less and do more work than any horse that ever lived," he explained.

"They don't hurt themselves, either. A horse will overeat and die. A mule will leave food in the trough when he's had enough. I really think they're smarter than a horse."

To indicate just how smart he thinks they are, Marricle said, "The story goes that a rich Texan went on a bird hunt with an Oklahoma friend. He got up early raring to go and said to the friend, 'Let's get the dogs and get going.'

"The Oklahoman said, 'We don't use dogs, we use mules.' So they went out into the bush and spotted the birds. The mule went into a perfect point — ears laid back, one foot up and his tail straight behind him.

"When it was time for the Texan to return home, he asked his friend to let him buy the mule. 'No, you can't,' the Oklahoman said. 'You won't be able to get him home. You won't be able to cross the Red River because he likes fishing even better than hunting.'"

Oil acts as coolant

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Motor oils today do more than provide a lubricating film and reduce friction, according to Phillips.

It says a third important function is to act as a coolant to remove heat generated by the engine. As much as 5 to 10 percent of engine heat comes from friction produced by closely fitted engine parts, such as connecting rods and main bearings, camshafts and piston rings.

Don't fly on Thursdays

NEW YORK (AP) — Thursdays are the busiest day of the week at U.S. airports.

Travel agents have no explanation as to why that day is so popular, but suggest traveling on other days to help reduce possible problems.

Experts also recommend that early morning and late afternoon flights be avoided if possible on any weekday, due to the large number of business travelers at those times.

Spying out the land

By James Jacoby

There are plenty of high cards for South's three no-trump contract, but that doesn't mean nine tricks are easy. Step into the declarer's shoes for a moment and decide how you would play after winning the opening lead with your king of hearts.

The contract will make easily if diamonds split 3-3. You simply play A-K-J, overtaking the jack with dummy's queen. But if the diamonds are not dividing evenly, you will be developing the setting trick for the defenders on a deal where their hearts may have only been 4-4. In that event, you could have made your contract simply by playing a club. And it's worth noting that even when the opponents have the ability to cash out four heart tricks and the ace of clubs, sometimes the defender who holds the club ace will foolishly duck when a club is led through him.

The right line of play is based on a little deception. Play the king of diamonds as though you were missing the ace. Although neither opponent has the ace, each will believe it possible that the other holds that card. Each will therefore endeavor to give count, playing the lowest card from three small ones and starting a high-low echo from an even number of cards. With such a scenario, if either defender first plays the two of diamonds, you should readily assume a 3-3 split. Otherwise, try to steal a club trick.

ITALIAN-STYLE TURKEY BURGERS

1 small eggplant, peeled
1 beaten egg
¼ cup seasoned fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons milk
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pound ground raw turkey
1 tablespoon cooking oil
One 15½-ounce jar chunky garden-style spaghetti sauce
2 slices American cheese, halved

Cut four ¾-inch-thick slices from center of eggplant; set aside. Combine egg, crumbs, milk and salt. Add turkey; mix well. Shape into 4 patties the same diameter as the eggplant slices. Cook patties in hot oil 5 minutes per side or until brown; remove. Drain off fat. Stir spaghetti sauce into skillet. Arrange eggplant in sauce. Top with turkey patties. Cover; cook 8 to 9 minutes. Place cheese pieces on patties. Cover and cook 1 minute more or until cheese is melted. Makes 4 servings.

Prints to be displayed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The exhibition, "Matisse Prints," will be on view at the Fort Worth Art Museum Oct. 5-Nov. 30.

The exhibition includes 90 black-and-white prints and spans over 50 years of the artist's printmaking. A renowned painter and great colorist, Matisse was equally talented in graphic media.

The exhibition shows his competence and originality in the various print media — drypoint, etching, lithography, linoleum cut, monotype and aquatint.

Museum acquires art

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Forth Worth Art Museum says it has acquired three major paintings by Ellsworth Kelly and a sculpture by James Wolfe.

The Kelly paintings are titled "Red Panel," "Dark Blue Panel" and "Dark Green Panel." Wolfe's welded metal sculpture is titled "Peak Swing."

POOR WATER QUALITY PRODUCES LAUNDRY PROBLEMS

Despite what the commercials say, using the "right" detergent and water temperature aren't the only factors that determine what your clothes look like after they've been washed.

The quality of your local water supply has a lot to do with whether detergents can actually work to get clothes clean.

In hard water, much of the detergent added to the washer goes to soften the water instead of clean the clothes. Over time, clothes washed in hard water become dingy or yellow, develop a build-up of soil, may have a stiff, harsh feel or show white or gray streaks on colored fabrics.

You can compensate for hard water — to a certain extent — by using adequate amounts of low-sudsing phosphate detergent and water as hot as recommended for the fabric.

The harder the water, the more phosphate detergent you will need to use. This can be expensive and contribute to water pollution.

Non-phosphate detergents and soap will not perform satisfactorily in hard water.

In addition to using extra detergent, water can be treated in the washer with a non-precipitating water conditioner, or water softener, commonly sold in powder form in the detergent section of grocery stores.

The best solution for hard water is to install a water softener system to the water supply lines for the washer and kitchen or the entire house.

However, people on sodium-restricted diets will need to consult a physician before installing a water softening system that supplies water for drinking or cooking, since it will increase the sodium content of the water.

Some of those "mystery" spots and stains you find on laundered clothing may also come from the water supply.

Yellow, red or brown stains, for example, can come from iron in the water supply or from rusty metal parts in the well or water heater. The use of chlorine bleach in water that contains dissolved iron will cause the iron to be deposited in fabrics.

Commercial rust removers are available for treating stains on white and colorfast washable fabrics. A second method is to sprinkle salt on the spot and dampen it with lemon juice. Dry in the sun and then rinse.

Test either form of rust removal on a hidden part of the item first, since the process can cause color change. Non-colorfast fabrics should be taken to a commercial laundry for professional treatment.

Red, reddish brown, green or blue stains on clothing are often caused by acid water. The stains are caused by the corrosive action of the water on the pipes. The type of metal in the pipes determines the color of the stains.

Red or reddish-brown stains may be treated as rust stains. Blue or green stains may respond to bleach if it is safe for the fabric.

Water quality affects more than laundry. It may also affect the operation and life span of appliances, the taste and odor of the water and your health.

Book Review

On display this month at the Scurry County Library is an exhibit of Navajo artifacts, loaned by Mary Keith of Fluvanna.

The sesquicentennial display this month concerns ranch life in Texas. Following are reviews of two of these books.

THE BIG RANCH COUNTRY. By J. W. Williams.

The "Big Ranch Country" reaches deep down into the stories of the folks who made ranching in the southwest. Colorful stories are told in bare knuckle fashion that leaves no cushion of falsehood to soften the truth. The "Big Ranch Country" covers a greater span than would seem possible in a single volume, treating the ranching industry far up into the Panhandle, and deep down to the great ranch empires at the Texas coast. At the climax the book presents a survey of the big ranches of the southwest as well as of the nation's highly important beef supply.

50 YEARS OF A LIVING LEGEND. By Hooper Shelton.

The Texas Cowboy Reunion, staged at Stamford during the first days of each July, has indeed become a "living legend" of the West. It began as a rodeo and has come to be the largest amateur rodeo in the world, one which matches working cowboys against working cowboys in various arts of their trade.

Lovell, Lofton exchange vows

LUBBOCK — April Lynn Lovell of Lubbock and David Wayne Lofton of Snyder were united in marriage July 19 at 8 p.m. in Highland Baptist Church in Lubbock. Officiating the double-ring ceremony was Dr. Stan Blevins, pastor of the church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. (Bud) Lovell and Mr. and Mrs. Norris Lofton.

The altar was decorated with large candelabras set up in a wave formation with spirals adorning each end. There was a total of 84 candles lighting the altar with a unity candle highlighting the setting. The church baptistry held a massive starburst arrangement of peach trumpet flowers.

Musical selections chosen for the prelude were "Alleluia" sung by an ensemble composed of Belinda Bounds, Toi Prevost, Chuck Canfield, Charlie Allen and Steve Prevost; "In This Very Room" by Chuck Canfield and "In Those Eyes" performed by Belinda Bounds.

Selections for the processional were "Trumpet Voluntary" and "Bridal Chorus." "Flower of Beauty" was performed by the ensemble and "Wind Beneath My Wings" was sung by the bride. The ensemble sang "Thy Blessings Father," Toi Prevost and Charlie Allen sang "Evermore," and "Alleluia" was sung by Charlie Allen and Chuck Canfield to end the ceremony. "Joyful Joyful We Adore Thee" was used for the recessional.

Brent McWilliams accompanied the musical selections on the piano and organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a contemporary gown of candlelight silk taffeta designed by Jlissa. The bodice was shaped by a boatoue neckline with a deep V covered in Alencon lace, seed pearls and sequins. The back of the gown was also cut in a deep V shape ending with a large bow attached at the dropped waistline. The sleeves were tucked at the shoulder tapering to a point just below the wrist.

The skirt had a pyramid of Alencon lace motifs with seed pearls and sequins at the bottom. This theme was carried to the tip of the cathedral train. A border of Alencon lace covered the entire hemline and edge of train.

The headpiece was a beaded wreath of small leaves clustered with sprigs of pearls. The veil of silk illusion fell from a poof at the crown.

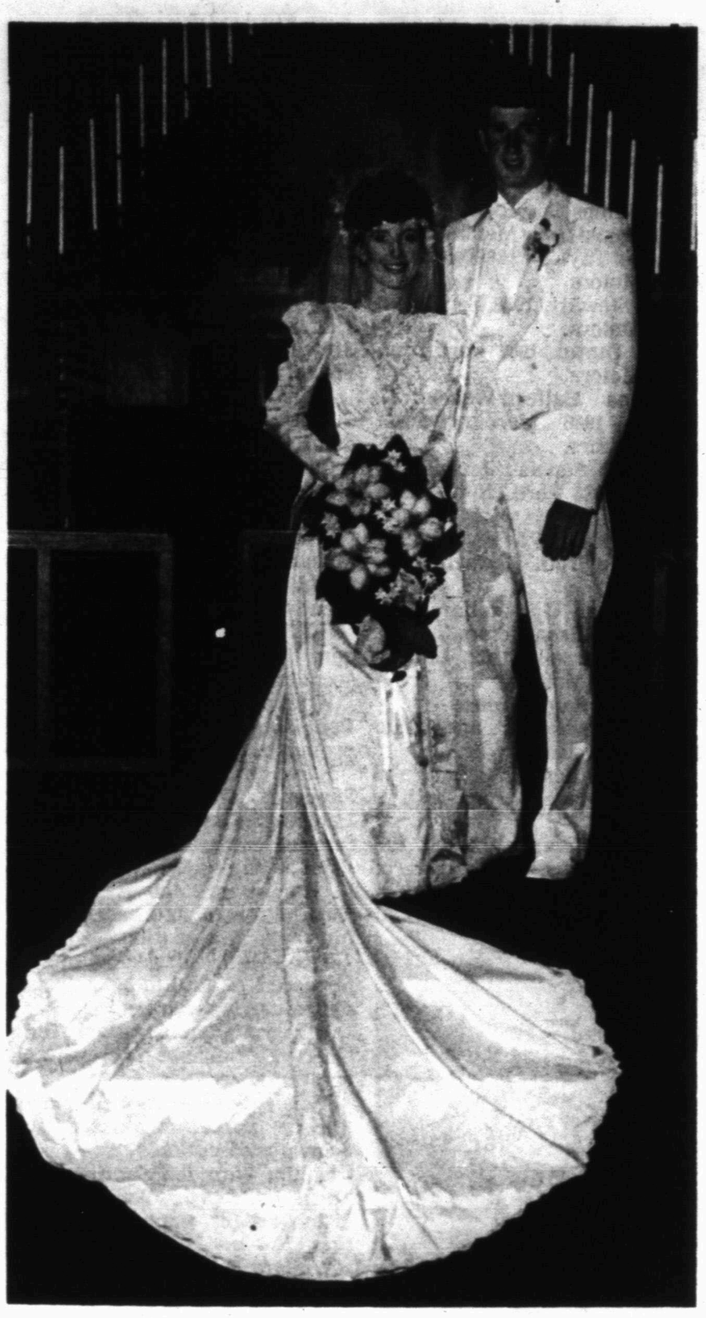

The bridal bouquet was a cascade of three peach hibiscus and two peach calla lilies with English ivy serving as a background. Tiny peach flowers accented the bouquet. Peach and ivory picot satin ribbon formed the streamers with love knots.

In keeping with tradition, for something old the bride wore pearls given to her on her fourteenth birthday. Her new garter was of blue and ivory.

The maid of honor was Beth Lovell of Lubbock, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Sharla Bufkin of Houston and Lisa Halco of Lubbock. Each attendant wore a tea-length dress of royal blue taffeta. The skirt was straight with an organza bustle topped with a bow. Royal blue hosiery, shoes and gloves accented the attire.

The attendants carried arm bouquets composed of a peach trumpet flower, a white bridal lily and blue spider flowers. Peach satin ribbon formed the bow and streamers which flowed from the bouquet.

Rebecca Daves of Robert Lee, niece of the groom, served as flower girl. Her full-length dress of royal blue taffeta was designed with a high waist accented with a cummerbund covered with royal blue organza. The dress featured cap sleeves and rounded ivory embroidered lace collar.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID WAYNE LOFTON

The ring-bearers were Dustin Daves of Robert Lee and Matthew Lofton of Marble Falls, both nephews of the groom. They wore ivory tuxedos with short overcoats and ivory shirts accented by royal blue cummerbunds and bowties.

The ring pillow was ivory with blue and peach cross stitching in the Christian marriage symbol and accented with lace and satin ribbons. The pillow was designed and created by a special friend.

The groom wore an ivory tuxedo with all accessories in ivory. His boutonniere was a peach rose bud accented with peach azalea and baby's breath.

Trey Harlin of Ft. Worth, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Roger Lofton of Marble Falls and Whit Parks of Snyder. Their attire consisted of ivory shirts, slacks and shoes accented with royal blue short jackets, bowties and cummerbunds. The boutonnieres were peach azaleas accented with baby's breath.

Ushers were Philip Lovell of Lubbock, brother of the bride, and Brad Copeland of Ballinger.

The registry table was an oval antique maple table belonging to the bride's grandmother. Pam Richardson of Nashville, Tenn., cousin of the bride, registered guests.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall with a 12 foot table flanked by a four-foot round table on each end. Each table was covered by a floor-length ivory cloth gathered at the edge of the table. The long table was centered by the wedding cake which was flanked by an arrangement of calla lilies and candles.

The cake was ivory decorated with icing roses and doves with a ceramic dove cake top. Brass appointments were used and coffee was served on one round table with punch on the other. The cake was elevated on a round riser covered with ivory lace embroidery; the rest of the table was accented with the same lace embroidery.

Mrs. Fred Ewing and Mrs. Tommie McWilliams served the cake. Mrs. Hal Rowe and Mrs. Mickey Andress assisted in serving coffee and punch.

The groom's table was a maple harvest table covered with an ivory crocheted runner. The centerpiece was an arrangement of Gergera daisies in bright colors in an upright watermelon half; fruits were served in watermelon halves. Pineapples and greenery completed the arrangement. Mrs. Kim Craig served.

After a honeymoon in Las Vegas, Nev., the couple is making their home in Ardmore, Okla. where the groom is employed with Union Oil.

The bride attended Texas Tech University and plans to continue her education at the University of Oklahoma.

The groom received his bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech University.

FALL IS TREE PLANTING TIME

Fall is easily the most ideal planting season for most ground covers, vines, shrubs and trees. Here's why.

The most critical aspect of any transplant effort is for the plant to re-establish an effective system of feeder roots before it's subjected to severe stress. By planting in the fall, new plants have several cool, leisurely months during which to proliferate new feeder roots before the rigors of summer heat and drought set in.

In fact, research indicates that planting now will give plants almost a full growing season advantage over planting next spring. Furthermore, fall planted materials will have enough feeder root development by spring to be able to effectively use an early spring application of fertilizer for even faster growth.

Fall is also a good time to purchase landscape plants because individual specimens can be rated on the clarity and brilliance of their fall colors.

Finally, nursery and garden center personnel usually have more time now to answer questions and help with specific landscape concerns than during the spring rush.

To get your landscaping project off to a good start, select some authoritative books on do-it-yourself home landscaping. Most homeowners don't realize how large many trees and shrubs can get and, as a result, they plant too many, too close together and thus dwarf the house.

Next, choose tough, low-maintenance, pest-resistant plants that are adapted to local environmental conditions.

Smart homeowners will avoid poorly-adapted, troublesome or pest ridden plants so common in today's marketplace.

When planting, dig generous holes, backfill with an open, well-drained growing mix, and mulch the soil surface with 6-8 inches of dry grass clippings, leaves, straw or other organic material to moderate soil temperature. Water regularly throughout the fall and winter.

Sleeping pills dull mind for next day

NEW YORK (AP) — Sleeping pills — over-the-counter or those available by prescription only — can help you sleep, but you might pay tomorrow, says Better Homes and Gardens.

Next-day side effects include drowsiness, dizziness, poor memory or concentration, lack of coordination and digestive troubles. Pills taken the same night you've used alcohol can upset breathing — possibly seriously, it says.

Husband gets permission to leave; Israel next stop

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities Friday gave final approval for a Soviet woman and her husband to leave for Israel so she can donate bone marrow to her leukemia-stricken brother, the husband said.

Viktor Fleurov told The Associated Press by telephone that he had just left the Soviet visa agency, OVIR, where he was given a card certifying he has permission to leave the country.

He said it would take about two weeks to complete all the documents that must be turned in to OVIR before passports and tickets are issued to him and his wife, Inessa.

"I'm exhausted and I just don't know what to say," Fleurov said. "They promised me last Friday that I would be able to leave and now they've fulfilled that promise."

He said he did not know exactly when they would leave.

Mrs. Fleurov's brother, Mikhail Shirman, who lives in Israel, is suffering from leukemia. Doctors say his life may be prolonged if Mrs. Fleurov donates bone marrow for a transplant.

Soviet authorities granted her a visa to leave the country for Israel on Aug. 20, but had not granted permission to her husband because his father would not sign a financial waiver. All Soviets must obtain such waivers from their parents before they can emigrate.

Mrs. Fleurov refused to leave without her husband.

Fleurov said today that he never got the paper signed and that the authorities gave him permission to leave anyway.

The decision marked the latest in a series of Soviet moves on human rights cases.

During the Reykjavik summit, the Soviets released poet Irina Ratushinskaya from a jail in the Ukraine, and earlier granted exit permission to several long-term "refuseniks" — Soviets who previously were refused permission to leave.

LIVES SAVED

In 1968 in the U.S., 968,000 died of heart disease; in 1983 only 546,000 such deaths occured. Similarly, stroke deaths in 1983 were 51% less than 20 years ago. The decrease was likely due to diet improvement, less smoking, increased exercise and better medical care. Is your diet and exercise program as healthful as it can be?

Boy cleared of charges

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — A Hays County grand jury cleared a Staples teen-ager of felony charges in connection with an automobile accident that killed the daughter of country singer George Strait.

Jurors cleared Gregory Allen, 18, of the charges Thursday but recommended the district attorney file a misdemeanor charge of criminally negligent homicide against the teen.

Jennifer Strait was a passenger in a car driven by Allen when it rolled over near Farm Road 2439. The 13-year-old girl died of injuries she suffered in the June accident.

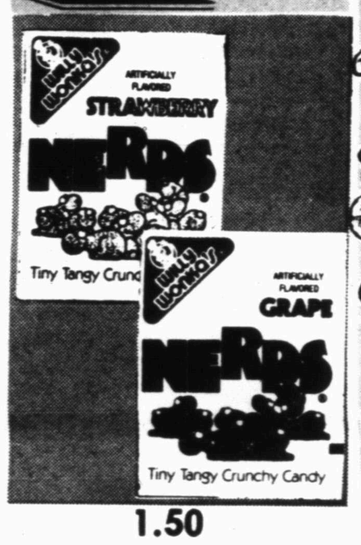

Allen was charged with criminally negligent homicide after the accident and was indicted by a grand jury in July for involuntary manslaughter.

Music spans two continents

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — The music of Victor Phume spans two continents and two cultures.

A South African Zulu by birth, the 31-year-old Phume is also a born-again Christian who praises God through what he calls "contemporary African gospel music."

In Greenville recently, Phume recorded an album with Lazer Productions, the studio owned by Sam Loy.

The two men met at the 12th Annual Christian Artists Music Seminar in Estes Park, Colo., in August. "It's the most prestigious event in gospel music," said Loy. "There are concerts every night for five days. Victor was there as a performer, and I went as a registrant — to go to the classes — but I wound up performing with him."

At the close of the seminar, Phume went back to South Africa but returned to this country three weeks later at the invitation of Loy and his wife, Didi, to record an album of eight songs. The music will have an African beat but all the songs are original numbers, Loy says.

Most of the profits from the sale of Phume's record will go to support his ministry in South Africa. In addition to serving as director of Phume Ministries, he also performs with a group of born-again Christian dancers and singers called The Syndicate. The 10 men and women represent a variety of tribes, and all wear their traditional native garb when they perform.

"I want to build a relationship between Christ and the African culture," said Phume. "I take the initiative of identifying with the people."

Many of these "grassroots people," as they are called, have been told that they must eliminate the old culture and their traditional ways of dressing if they are to be part of the Christian community, he explained.

"They say, 'We can't get rid of our culture,' and I say to them, 'God is not against your culture. What is important is to get right with Jesus.' I wear the traditional clothes and sing traditional songs in order to communicate with our people," he added.

The lyrics in Phume's album will be in both Zulu and English, and the album title will be "Inkhosi Ya Makhosi," which means "King of Kings" in the Zulu language.

A late October release date is planned, and Loy said he has been in contact with a large video-TV production company in Denver about marketing ideas.

Shakey's

Shakey's Pizza Parlor, located at 312 East Hwy. has built a solid reputation for fun and good food since their opening.

The atmosphere at Shakey's is lively and pleasant, and all the employees are friendly and courteous. There is a separate TV room with a 72 inch projection screen where everyone, including the kids, can enjoy entertaining shows and movies. Birthdays or other parties are welcomed with reservations requested to be made 3 days in advance.

Shakey's is managed by Mohammed Ilyas, owner of the Pal-O-Mar Motel.

Shakey's is more than just a pizza parlor. In addition to great tasting pizza, they offer you fried Chicken, mojo's, a salad bar, special sandwiches, pasta and dessert.

Shakey's famous lunch buffet is something else. It's fast and ready to go when you come in the door. You can eat all you want from the lunch buffet with salad bar included.

Visit Shakey's Pizza Parlor and see why it's the food and fun place in Snyder for every age.

Polynesian Garden

The Polynesian Garden is very well known for the fine Polynesian and Chinese food that they serve. But what a lot of people don't know is that they also serve American and seafood.

The whole family will be able to select whatever menu item fits their taste. The Polynesian Garden delights in offering you a wide range of food. Such selections as Waikiki Chicken, and King Crab legs to filet of Sole and Boiled Shrimp.

Well known Chinese dishes include Sweet and Sour Pork or Chicken, Egg Foo Young, Pepper Steak and delicious Egg Rolls. International dishes include T-Bone steaks, Sirloin steaks and hamburgers and fries.

Manager Savoir Buoy invites you to come and try the Polynesian Garden specialties. The Polynesian Garden, located in the Varsity Square Shopping Center, will prove to be something new and different for your dining pleasure.

In fact, you can get more than fabulous steak dinners, like special favorites such as catfish, chicken teriyaki and chicken fried steak, hamburgers, great tastin' side dishes, Super Beef K'Bobs ...plus the largest salad wagon in these parts.

K-Bob's

In 1966 K-Bob's opened its first steakhouse in Clovis, New Mexico, deep in the heart of North America's finest ranch and farmland.

The concept was simple. Start with an outstanding salad wagon. Serve the finest beef in a pleasant and friendly atmosphere at reasonable prices and get down to the serious business of good eating.

The concept is still the same at Snyder's K-Bob's. Located at 4604 College Ave. It offers the finest in family dining.

The newest addition to K-Bobs fine selection of food is the vegetable steam table. Choose from a selection of hot vegetables to complement your main dish and salad wagon.

Owners Kyle Jackson and David Breedlove and manager JoAnn Neal encourage you to come by for lunch and try their daily luncheon specials where you have two meat choices, choice of potato, salad wagon, tea or coffee and hot rolls and blueberry muffins.

K-Bobs is open on weekdays from 11 a.m. til 9 p.m. and on weekends from 11 a.m. til 9:30 p.m.

Keep K-Bobs in mind for your family gatherings, rehersal dinners, parties, etc.

The folks at K-Bobs want you to know that they appreciate your business and hope you'll want to come back again and again.

Clark's Country Kitchen

Clark's Country Kitchen, formerly Ella Mae's, is located at 2503½-25th Street right next door to Permian Communications.

Breakfast is served everyday Monday through Friday from 7-10:30 A.M. and Saturday from 8-10:30 A.M.. Besides the regular breakfast menu, they offer a "Quick Breakfast" consisting of sausage, biscuit, gravy and coffee for only $2.00.

You can enjoy their delicious specials everyday at lunch for only $3.50 plus drink or you can order from the menu. Fresh homemade pie is available daily.

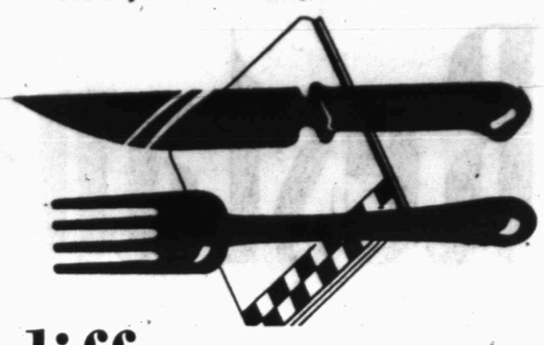

Brenda and Chester Clark moved to Snyder in February, 1980 and in February, 1985 after Chester retired from the oilfield, they decided to make this their home and opened Clark's Country Kitchen, specializing in just "good ole home cooking."

Clark's is open Monday through Friday from 7:00 A.M. until 2:00 A.M. and on Saturday from 8:00 A.M. until 2:00 P.M. They welcome carry out orders and catering is also available.

Stop in and enjoy a delicious breakfast or lunch at Clark's Country Kitchen.

F. Neigh: citizen lobbyists can make a difference

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Frances Neigh of Santa Fe believes citizen lobbyists can make a difference.

"I sure want people to know that it's possible to do and it's worth it, it's worth it," said Mrs. Neigh, 80.

In 1985, she lobbied the Legislature for a measure requiring life care retirement communities for the elderly to disclose certain financial information to prospective customers.

Her work led to the Continuing Care Act, sponsored by Reps. Bill Camp, R-Bernalillo, and Robert Hawk, D-Bernalillo.

The measure requires "disclosure of information so senior citizens can evaluate the information and make their own judgment as to whether it's prudent to put their life savings into this sort of thing," Camp said.

He said the law was needed because in other states, people had solicited large deposits of around $50,000 from elderly people interested in a life care facility. But the facilities never were built and the backers disappeared with the money, he said.

In other cases, honest business people opened up a life care home, only to have it fail due to poor management or other factors, he said.

"Senior citizens who would lay out large fees were left holding nothing," Camp said.

Camp credited Mrs. Neigh for getting the law through the Legislature.

"Fran was a very effective lobbyist," Camp said. "She was someone who could go to all the hearings, could testify to the problems."

Mrs. Neigh, who lives in a life care home for the elderly, worked for two years gathering information and similar laws from other states before she went to the Legislature with the idea. "You have to have your heart and soul in it," she said. "It has to be a real cause with a capital C. It can be done."

Great Western

The Great Western Restaurant is located at 800 East Highway and has such a variety of food items to choose from it is impossible to tell about all of them.

For breakfast you can start your day with Belgian waffles that will melt in your mouth. You can have apple, blueberry, strawberry, bacon, ham or sausage waffles or you may prefer plain waffles. You can also have burritos, steak and eggs, omelets, hot cakes and many more popular breakfast items. Every Saturday and Sunday from 6 A.M. to 11 A.M. they have a breakfast special for $1.99, which includes two eggs any style with ham, bacon or sausage, biscuits or toast, with jam, jelly and butter.

Monday through Saturday, Great Western Restaurant offers a lunch special for $3.99 which you can choose from three choices of meat (different choices daily), 2 choices of vegetables, 2 choices of potatoes, the salad bar, dessert, soup and bread are all included in this price. You realy should come by and enjoy this great food at such a great price. There are many other items on the menu you may choose from if you don't want the lunch special. Great Western has sandwiches, chicken fried steak, some very special burgers including swedish burgers with bacon and swiss cheese, chili cheese burgers with homemade chili and many other items too numeous to mention.

The Great Western has some very unusual items at the evening meal. They have grilled beef tip cubes cooked with fresh tomatoes, bell peppers, onions, and cooked with some very special spices and sauces and this is served with rice and for only $5.10 it is a real treat.

The evening menu has so many foods to choose from - hamburger steak, pan fried or grilled fish, seafood including shrimp, scallops, oysters and a delightful seafood platter. They have chicken strips, all sorts of sandwiches, steaks, Mexican food, a special section on the menu is for children under 12 years old and all for under $2.45.

Pervaiz Saleem is the manager and he wants to invite you each and eveyone to come and eat at Great Western and see for yourself. Great Western Restaurant is open from 5:30 A.M. until 2:00 P.M. and 5:00 P.M. until 9:00 P.M. Monday through Saturday and is open Sunday from 6:30 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. There is also a private club with memberships available.

Gann's Bar-B-Q

Any business can claim to serve the best barbecue around, but experience is what puts Gann's Bar-B-Q ahead of the rest. And along with George Gann's barbecue comes George's service, which is also ahead of the rest.

Since Gann's Bar-B-Q and Sandwich Shop opened, George's cooking has drawn quite a following. He cooks brisket, pork ribs and sausage over a mesquite fire for that special flavor. But don't think that barbecue is all that is served. He also serves hamburgers, bacon burgers, grilled cheese sandwiches, ham and cheese sandwiches, patty melts and the newest item on the menu, chicken-fried steak.

A winter-time favorite at Gann's is the homemade beef stew and chili. Served with delicious cornbread either dish makes a fine meal.

Another of George's specialties is catering to any event that you might have in mind. Gann's will cater anywhere within 75 miles of Snyder.

George Gann has been in the food business for over 50 years, 18 of those years associated with Greyhound Food Service at Angelo State University and Western Texas College.

Don't forget to stop by Gann's Bar-B-Q and Sandwich Shop, open from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Sweet's Shop

Sweet's Shop, located at 2505 Avenue G, is one of Snyder's oldest continuously operating restaurants.

Owned and operated by the Hatfield family, Sweet's Shop was the first in Snyder with an electronic ordering system. The system now features a computerized order taker that prints in detail what you order and the price on your ticket.

Food is always cooked to order while you wait or you may call ahead and pick up your order when you get there.

Sweet's Shop is open Monday through Saturday from 10:30 a.m. until 10:00 p.m.

One of the most requested orders at the restaurant is the Chicken Strip Dinner which includes chicken strips, fries, gravy and toast.

A new item on the menu is the Catfish Nugget Dinner consisting of farm raised catfish nuggets, cold slaw, french fries and biscuit puffs for only $3.50.

Jerry, Mrs. Hatfield and all the staff at Sweet's Shop invite you to come to their establishment, where food is still delivered to your car.

Hand-painted clothing sold

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — From little acorns grow big oak trees. And from little businesses come big companies. At least that's what Jo DuFault, 31, owner of the Alternative Clothing Store, hopes.

Capitalizing on the New Wave fashion trend, Ms. DeFault sells vintage and hand-painted clothing — popular among today's teenagers and young professionals who want to make a unique fashion statement — from a cluttered and colorful store next to her home.

Ms. DuFault is looking for the trend to expand, and has dreams of a large warehouse with space for hair styists, artists who do airbrushed art on clothing, for her vintage and hand-painted clothing and for designers — of which she will be one.

"I am definitely going into design," she says. For now she's content with the shop, particularly with the location because it allows her to be with her daughters Sierra, 4, and Zoe, 8 months.

She has pieces ranging from the 1930s through the 1960s. "I have lace, linen, silk, overcoats, men's jackets, and everthing else," she says. Her shop is filled with clothing, as is her storage room and Airstream trailer.

"There's always an ample supply of clothing. I'm always getting in new stuff," she says. She began dabbling in handpainted clothing "because I wanted to make the shop more exciting."

She buys her clothing from estate sales, auctions and at charity stores such as Goodwill and the Salvation Army. Although prices range between $5 and $35, none of the garments carries a price tag. "The price tags are all in my head. I know what the prices should be, but I can and will adjust the price according to the customer and their circumstances. If someone wants to build a wardrobe, I want to be able to help them." Even so, she says she's never operated in the red — always in the black.

Her most frequent customers include hairdressers and high school students and some young professionals, she says. "The people I'm aiming for are people who want to have fun with fashion. That's what this is all about — having fun with fashion, who want to wear a one of a kind item."

Her reputation has spread word of mouth, she says, and only in the last few months has she decided to promote her shop. "I've had people come in here and tell me they've looked for my store for two years."

A native of Virginia, she studied art for seven years, then went to the Students Art League in New York. She started selling vintage clothes at Sohozat in New York City, on West Broadway. "Back East, it's very artsy to have a vintage clothing store in an old house. It's different here — here, people want their stores streamlined in a mall."

She says she doesn't believe a wardrobe should cost a lot of money, and she doesn't like someone spending a lot of money at her shop. "A lot of professional women don't make mueh money, but they want to move up, feel good about themselves. I feel I'm helping people by providing the outfits."

Ms. DuFault considers herself a fashion consultant: "I don't let anyone leave with something that doesn't look right — it doesn't fit or it's the wrong color for them. And I don't let people go through by themselves. I ask them, 'What do you want? What kind of look do you want, what do you want to express? I'll help you.' Don't feel guilty — go for it."

"I'm for the artist, the creative person," she continues. "I always got along best with the 'outcasts' — the creative people. And I've always admired entrepreneurs. All the studying and work I've done, and watching them work and make their dreams come true. I'm doing the same thing, in my own way. The alternative way can pay off."

Divorce petition filed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Debra Echard Kihn, wife of rock singer Greg Kihn, has filed for divorce after a one-year marriage.

Kihn has produced several rock music albums and is probably best known for the 1985 hit "Jeopardy." The rock video version of the song depicts Kihn experiencing a nightmare wedding.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television actors Gil Gerard and Connie Sellecca have filed for divorce.

Gerard, who appears in ABC's "Sidekicks," and Miss Sellecca, who appears in the network's "Hotel," filed petitions in Los Angeles Superior Court. The couple married Oct. 28, 1979, and separated in August 1985.

They have a 5-year-old son.

Five Steps To A Quality Steak Dinner.

Step #1. Start with steak. USDA "choice" steak. Fresh cut everyday. Never frozen.

Step #2. Next you need potatoes. Fresh Idaho potatoes. Big potatoes. 12 oz. or more. Or fresh-cut French fries. (You did start with a USDA "choice" steak? Right?)

Step #3. Then you must have a superb salad bar. Fresh and generous... filled with all the good things you expect. And more. (And your steak is USDA "choice"? You did make sure of that?)

Step #4. And you should enjoy service that's fast, attentive and courteous. (Excuse me, with a USDA "choice" steak, remember?)

Step #5. Enjoy all of the above, (including only USDA "choice" steaks) at a price that's reasonable, and family-affordable.

Chemical imbalance may cause compulsive acts

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Compulsive gambling may be caused by an imbalance of chemicals in the brain, and its withdrawal symptoms are similar to those of alcohol and narcotics addicts, experts say.

About 2.5 million of the estimated 80 million Americans who gamble do so compulsively, said Dr. Robert Custer, director of compulsive gambling treatment at Taylor Manor Hospital near Baltimore and Charter Hospital in Las Vegas.

"They have so much energy. They're so competitive. They'll gamble for days without stopping. The average person couldn't handle that," he said in an interview Thursday.

Eventually, the obsession and mounting debts catch up with them, driving them into a "desperation" phase that can lead to crime and suicide attempts, said Custer and other speakers at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law.

Custer, who has treated or evaluated more than 800 compulsive gamblers, is working with researchers at the National Institute of Mental Health on a study seeking to link compulsive gambling to low levels of serotonin, a substance brain cells use to communicate.

A study of murderers found lower serotonin levels in those who killed impulsively than those who planned the killings, he said.

Rainbow Inn

For a taste bud delight, you must try the Rainbow Inn. You'll find a relaxed atmosphere, excellent food and courteous service.

Jimmy and Wendy Chen are the owners of the Rainbow Inn, located at 1703 College Ave. They come to Snyder from Midland where Jimmy was the head cook for Holiday Inn for four years.

The Rainbow Inn offers breakfast, lunch and dinner specials at very affordable prices. The Chens especially invite you to try their chicken-fried steak.

Menu items include burgers, broiled steaks, seafood and other items too numerous to mention.

Soon coming to the Rainbow Inn will be a buffet for noon and evening meals.

The Rainbow Inn is open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and on Sunday from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Wendy and Jimmy invite everyone who is interested in freshly prepared food to stop by and enjoy.

Golden Corral

Snyder's newest restaurant, the Golden Corral Family Steak House, opened for business on October 2. Located at 3206 College Ave., Jon Knoke is the local manager.

The restaurant features USDA choice sirloin and ribeye steaks, Idaho baked potatoes, Texas toast and a soup, salad and potato bar. The salad bar is 14 ft. long and features both hot and cold vegetables and salads.

Knoke says that the chain's success is attributed to the Golden Corral's commitment to "Serving quality products at family prices."

The meat served at Golden Corral is cut fresh daily by the chain's own meatcutters.

Menu prices range from $1.99 for a hamburger platter to a top price of $7.99 for a 12-ounce ribeye dinner. The most popular steak on the menu, he said, is a 7-ounce sirloin with baked potato and Texas toast for $4.79.

Knoke pointed out customers can expect their main dinner item to be served within 7 to 10 minutes after the order is given.

Seating capacity for the steak house is 216 persons and private dining rooms are available for parties and banquets.

Louise's Coffee Shop

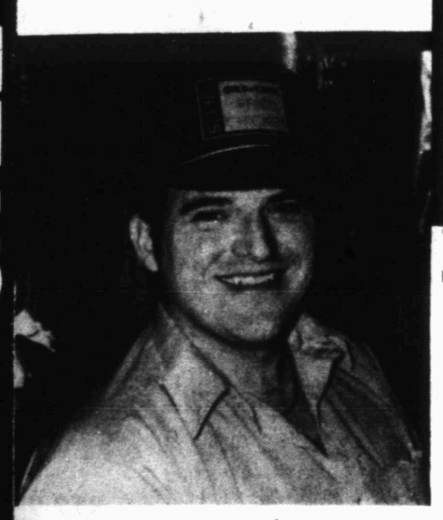

Louise Rice, owner and operator of Louise's Coffee Shop conveniently located downtown at 1715-26th Street, has been preparing food just the way you like it for twenty-one years. Just last July she moved to a new location which seats more people and eliminates waiting for lunch hour customers.

Louise's opens every morning Monday thru Friday at 6:30 A.M. with the best breakfast in town. There is a variety of menu items to choose from at lunch ranging from Chicken Fried Steak to sandwiches. For those cold, wintery days there is always a pot of Louise's homemade chili and stew on the stove and your meal can be topped off with a slice of fresh homemade pie.

Louise invites to you come in and enjoy a delicious homecooked meal at Louise's Coffee Shop.

Collecting, restoring Jaguars is family affair

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Bill Fleming did not mean to start. But once he did, he could not seem to stop. His obsession led him to mingle with people he did not know, and it also depleted his cash supply.

Fleming is a Jag junkie. He owns nine of the automobiles and enters two of them in shows. He has had at least one Jaguar automobile since 1965, when he bought one that did not run for $200. It came with parts and an engine. He was living in Georgia at the time, and "I just wanted a sports car," he said.

"I wanted a sports car and it just so happened that it was a Jaguar. We went to look at a Mercedes, but I wasn't impressed with it. The Jaguar was the next one we saw, so we bought it," he said.

Fleming bought a 1969 2-plus-2 XKE Jaguar for his son, Billy, when he graduated from high school. By that time, the family had moved to Texas.

"He's probably the real reason we have as many as we have, because everytime he finds one, he calls me and away we go," Fleming said.

His Jaguar collection includes a 1959 Mark IX, a 1954 120 roadster, a 1959 150S roadster, a 1965 3.4 S sedan, a 1959 Mark I sedan, a 1962 Mark II sedan, a 1978 XJ6 sedan and the two show cars, a 1959 XK150 and a 1965 Mark X limousine.

Fleming has a story or interesting fact for each of his Jaguars. The Mark X limousine was originally owned by the British Embassy in Washington, and is one of only three of the automobiles exported to the United States, according to Fleming. "When we first bought the car it was a dog. The interior was bow wow wow — doggy dog," he said.

Jaguars are made in Coventry, England, and Fleming called once to check on the original condition of the 150S. Fleming gave the representative the car's chassis number and the motor number. "He told me it was manufactured Sept.12, 1959 and delivered to Morristown, Pa., Sept.19. The paint was originally the color of cream and it had a black top and a red interior," said Fleming. The 150S roadster is a special model with three carbureators. "It'll snap your head back," he said.

The 120 roadster has been stored idle in a garage for nine years before he bought it. Why would someone buy an automobile and then store it? "People buy these cars to restore and they either become discouraged or run out of money," he said.

But Fleming says he has had neither problem. Fleming and Mark Schroeder, an employee at Fleming's gas station, do most of the restoration of the Jaguars.

"We do 99 percent of the mechanical work. I've got too old to do it. He (Schroeder) asked me one day, 'What did you do before I came along?' " said Fleming. "I told him I did it, but now there's no point. I've got someone to do it."

His family shares his enthusiasm. "My son is a Jaguar freak and my wife is a Jaguar freak," Fleming says.

"She'll say, 'What do you need with a Jaguar.' I say I don't need it but someone made me an offer I couldn't refuse. That's what happens — someone makes me an offer I can't refuse.

Fleming's wife, son and daughter-in-law attend the car shows with him. "We wear Jaguar shirts — I guess you'd call it a family affair," he said.

The Mark X has been graded second in its class three times, and the XK150 has won first place once in shows sponsored by the Jaguar Club of North America Inc., graded by three judges on a 100-point grading system.

Unlike most entrants in the Jaguar shows, Fleming drives his car to the show "because they're driveable."

Kentucky Fried Chicken

Kentucky Fried Chicken gained a popular reputation around Snyder for their quick service and fine food. Their location at 812 25th Street is where you can get the Colonel's world famous fried chicken.

You get a large selection at Kentucky Fried Chicken. Besides being able to choose between regular or extra crispy fried chicken, you also get their delicious made-from-scratch biscuits which are so mouth watering! They offer fresh made cole slaw. You can't beat a selection like this when you tie it all together with the Colonel's Original Recipe.

Kentucky Fried Chicken will fill your orders fast and your food is hot and ready to eat when you get it. The offer the service of a drive-up window if you prefer not to go in. For those of you who don't have time to wait, just call 573-2333 and the friendly staff will take your order and have it ready in no time. If you haven't been to Kentucky Fried Chicken lately, then stop by and find out for yourself how "they do chicken right".

Sonic

The Sonic Drive-In offers delicious, fresh and hot food, cooked to order. The food is not made ahead of time where it sits and waits until someone orders it, in fact, their slogan is "we don't start cooking 'till we hear from you."

The Sonic, located at 4100 College Ave. is getting ready to celebrate it's 16th birthday in Snyder. Mac and Virginia Humphrey are the owners and Barry Lee is the local manager. These folks have worked hard to build a reputation for the Snyder Sonic as being a favorite hangout for fun and good food.

One of the best features of the Sonic Drive-In besides the food is that you don't have to get out of your car. You can sit back and enjoy your own kind of music while you enjoy your favorite foods. There's no need to dress up; no need to make reservations. You can even call ahead if you want your order to be ready when you get there.

The wide variety of food the Sonic offers includes sandwiches, burgers, fries, basket dinners, conies, ice cream and soft drinks.

The Sonic offers a different special each day of the week at reduced prices so you can eat at bargain prices every day.

The good, fresh food at the Sonic is just waiting for you to come by--today.

McDonald's

Snyder's McDonald's Restaurant opened for business at 5:30 a.m. on Tuesday, July 1 of this year. This ended a long wait in Snyder for those who suffer from "Big Mac attacks".

McDonald's employs some 95 individuals locally and the 4,000 sq. ft. facility is open seven days a week. The restaurant is located at 3414 College Ave.

Owner of the local franchise is Herbie Figueredo and supervisor for the local restaurant is Barry Bourgois.

McDonald's serves all the burgers made famous on TV commercials including the Big Mac, Quarter Pounder and McDLT. The chicken McNuggets are also a menu favorite.

The restaurant opens at 5:30 a.m. each day, and closes at 11:00 p.m. on Monday Tuesday and Wednesday; 12 midnight on Sunday and Thursday; and 2:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Large touring and sports groups are always welcome at McDonald's and children's birthday parties are a favorite, too. Contact Lillie Russell to schedule these special events.

Whether you're hungry for breakfast, lunch or dinner, McDonald's is ready to serve you with good food and fast, courteous and friendly service.

Jaramillo's

Jaramillo's Mexican Food is one of the latest additions to Snyder located at 1405 East Highway by the Purple Sage Motel.

They prepare each item in a unique and wonderful way. Absolutely some of the best Mexican food you'll eat anywhere. Just a few of the treats on their menu: stuffed sopaipilla stuffed with ground beef, cheese, lettuce and tomato, chile relleno plate topped with ground beef, espanola sauce, cheese, beans and rice.

Jaramillo's is open from 11:00 A.M. through 9:00 P.M. Monday through Saturday and on Sunday they are open from 11:00 A.M. through 2:00 P.M.

Owners and operators of the Mexican food restaurant are David and Raymond Jaramillo.

Jaramillo's also has steaks, chicken strips, chicken fried steak, hamburgers and just about anything you ever wanted in the way of Mexican food.

Please stop by and enjoy a meal at Jaramillo's, you'll be glad you did.

Club operators eye drinkers

Club operators say they've had a sharp eye out for people who drink too much even before the recent state court ruling that they might be held liable for damages or injuries caused by drunken patrons.

The workers who wait tables and serve drinks have been trained to detect, and report, early signs of drunkenness, and some establishments offer taxi or limousine service to heavy drinkers.

These procedures were in place, according to some club operators, before the Texas Supreme Court ruling Wednesday that effectively gives Texas a "dramshop" liability law.

The ruling came in a Houston case in which a 31-year-old man was killed when a drunken driver ran a red light in January 1983.

"We hold that a bar operator owes a duty to the motoring public to not knowingly sell an alcoholic beverage to an already intoxicated person," said a Houston appeals court ruling that was upheld by the Supreme Court.

"The staff is instructed not to serve anyone who is intoxicated," manager Kim Carter of the private Capital Club in Austin said Thursday. "On occasion, it's come to light that somebody is drinking too much, and we've cut people off unless they let us call a taxi.

"We totally support the staff even though it's awkward because we're a private club, and our members pay dues to do as they please.

"Some might put up a fuss but we find that it's worth it. Others will say, 'Yeah, I've had enough, it's time to call it a day.' And no one has called the next day to say they they're furious or quitting."

Gayle Anderson, president of the Houston Restaurant Association, said, "We certainly don't think it's a fair ruling. We can't be responsible for every person that gets drunk. And I can't imagine testing everyone coming in or out of bars and restaurants. Can you?"

The court ruling places the responsibility on the wrong side of the bar, said Randy Claborne, owner of Randy's Night Club in Houston. "If you do it knowingly, then you should be responsible. But who's the expert?"

Sherrita Manney, who has been managing Gasoline Alley in El Paso for seven years, said identifying the drunk driver is the problem.

"We try to control the amount of liquor, but they may look stone sober when they leave here," said Ms. Manney. " It's not fair for them (Supreme Court) to say we're responsible. Once they leave the lot, they are responsible for their own actions."

But patrons appear to be controlling their drinking in public places more often now, she said.

"I think people are very aware of their responsibility as citizens. More and more people are cutting themselves off," when they know they've reached their drinking limit, she said.

Pete Zotos, barkeep at the Dallas' watering hole Dix Last Resort, says the bar has a longstanding policy of not letting drunks drive.

"You either find a friend or get them a cab," Zotos said. "Some of them will resist, but if you can get them to the curb the cab driver will even lend a hand."

At the Million Dollar Saloon, a topless bar in Dallas, managers say the secret is training bartenders to recognize drunk patrons.

"Various people are affected differently by alcohol," Manager Ken Scott said. "I think the secret is training bartenders to recognize a person who should not drive."

Scott said his club's valet parking helps identify drunk drivers before they get in their car. If valets spot a tipsy patron they direct them back inside the club.

"We sit them down with a black cup of coffee and ask them to stay awhile until they can drive," he said.

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor and Oscar-winning director Sydney Pollack are talking about making a movie based on Keillor's best-selling book "Lake Wobegon Days," says a spokeswoman for Minnesota Public Radio.

Keillor, the star of MPR's "Prairie Home Companion," has not been available for comment, but Alison Circle of MPR said, "It should come as no surprise to anyone that when there is a best-selling book there is always talk about a movie."

Pollack is an Academy Award-winning director who recently directed "Out of Africa."

Gill's

Are you hungry for delicious southern fried chicken and all the trimmings? Sound good? Then Gill's Fried Chicken at 3700 College Ave. can satisfy your appetite, no matter what size.

Gill's is in it's eighth year here in Snyder. Richard Sikes is the manager who keeps everything operating smoothly.

In addition to their chicken, you may choose from tasty hot french fries, buttery corn-on-the-cob, fresh cole slaw, old fashioned potato salad, hot fried pies, and of course fresh rolls and soft drinks.

Gill's crisp fried chicken comes in snack packs for the small size appetite all the way up to dinners for the whole family.

Picky eaters can also find what they want at Gill's where you may order all white, all dark or a combination of both types.

Although Gill's has a dining room for those who prefer to eat there, they specialize in take-out food with a drive-in window for your convenience. And, if you like, you can call ahead and your order will be ready when you get there.

Pizza Inn

If you haven't tried the new Deep Dish Pan Pizzas at Pizza Inn, then you're missing out on a good deal! These new Pan Pizzas are delicious and a real treat for the whole family when dining out. Come on in to Pizza Inn, located at 912 25th and try a Pan Pizza, they are really something different.

Pizza Inn still offers you the wide selections in their salad bar. You can have fresh vegetables and salads everyday along with their delicious Pizza which is made fresh daily, not frozen.

The Pizza Inn offers a noon buffet everyday except Saturday and on Tuesday and Thursday nights. And for those who prefer, they offer membership in their private club. Come to Pizza Inn and enjoy good food with good friends. What better way to spend a relaxing and fun evening than at Pizza Inn.

Spanish Inn

The Spanish Inn, operated in Snyder by the Rodriguez family, is proud of the fact that their business has become a "family tradition".

The Rodriguez' came to Snyder from Big Spring to help Chon Rodriquez, founder of Spanish Inn, operate his business as a family. With the knowledge they acquired from Chon, Sr. and experience of growing up in the food business, many of the Rodriguez family members now own their own restaurants.

Dorothy Rodriguez, co-owner of the Spanish Inn here in Snyder, along with Chon Rodriguez II and Joni Gonzales, are proud to be a part of Snyder and credit their success to the customers they serve and the late Concepcion (Chon) Rodriguez.

The Spanish Inn, specializes in that spicy Mexican food loved by many folks in our area of the country. In addition to their delicious Mexican food, they offer American food including steaks and hamburgers.

Located at 2212 College, the Spanish Inn is open from 6 a.m. until 9 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday for breakfast, lunch and dinner traffic.

For your entertainment the Spanish Inn also has a private club with memberships available at the front desk.

Domino's Pizza

Mike and Lisa Wineteer and Nicky moved to Snyder about a year ago from Southeast Texas to open a Domino's Pizza and are proud to be celebrating a very successful first year in Snyder. They are now in the process of opening a new Domino's in Big Spring in about a week.

Domino's specializes in thirty minute guaranteed delivery and the best pizza around. Starting next week the new manager in Snyder will be Ellen Allen from Hermleigh.

All Domino's nationwide are joining forces for a Canned Goods Drive which will begin October 29 and run through November 26. By giving a can of food, customers will be able to save a dollar on their order and the proceeds will be donated locally to needy families. They will take all types of donations--hams, turkeys, etc. would be greatly appreciated.

If you are hungry for a great Pizza give Domino's a call at 573-1844.

By Donny Brown

Shifting through our file for column ideas, we came across this scribble--"Newspapers as institutions."

Now what in the cat hair did we mean by that?

Thinking back, it must have had something to do with how readers perceive the newspaper. A question, by the way, we don't have a ready answer for.

The two extremes would be 1.) as a PR outfit for municipal government; or 2.) as a crusading yellow sheet out to expose all the political crooks hiding under the public bed.

A median approach would be to view newspapers like they enjoy portraying themselves. As unbiased sources of information, printing facts within the perimeters of the law and always in the holy name of "the public good."

Our personal opinion to all three is "maybe."

While trying to figure out how a newspaper is perceived, we got to thinking about how newspapers perceive their readers.

A longtime newspaper editor once offered us some insight. He compared the journalistic approach in two Texas cities of comparable size where he had been the head news guy.

His comment was, "I figured out pretty quick you didn't report the news the same way in both places."

Our own experience tells us the same thing. And the only difference we can figure out is that in some communities, people take the news, for lack of a better word, pretty dadgum personal.

So why the difference in cities the same size? The difference, of course, is within the cities themselves.

When you feel your audience is a sea of faceless readers, you report the news in a different way. Any newsman who tells you different is blowing smoke.

Some places take themselves seriously. And when that happens, you better by gosh get it right when you're writing about them.

While we're trying to explain this journalistic "Who's on first?," let's keep in mind that there is a major difference between a newspaper and a community. A community is comprised of a whole bunch of cats. A newspaper, only a handful.

And over a span of say 10 to 20 years, which of the two is most likely to have major losses? The newspaper, of course.

So here's something else to consider. A newspaper is an institution because it is an entity that will operate regardless of who happens to be turning the steering wheel at the moment.

In this regard, we've often thought there are two separate classes of people who have the wrong idea about newspapers. Those who often praise the stuff that gets done; and those who with as great a frequency criticize it.

Fifty years ago, your faithful hometown newspaper--with only minor changes for style--was doing approximately the same thing it is now.

And unless we're several bubbles off plumb, it will continue to do so 50 years hence. For the record, that's 2036.

In that modern, enlightened time, newspapers will still be doing things that please its readers and things that tee them off.

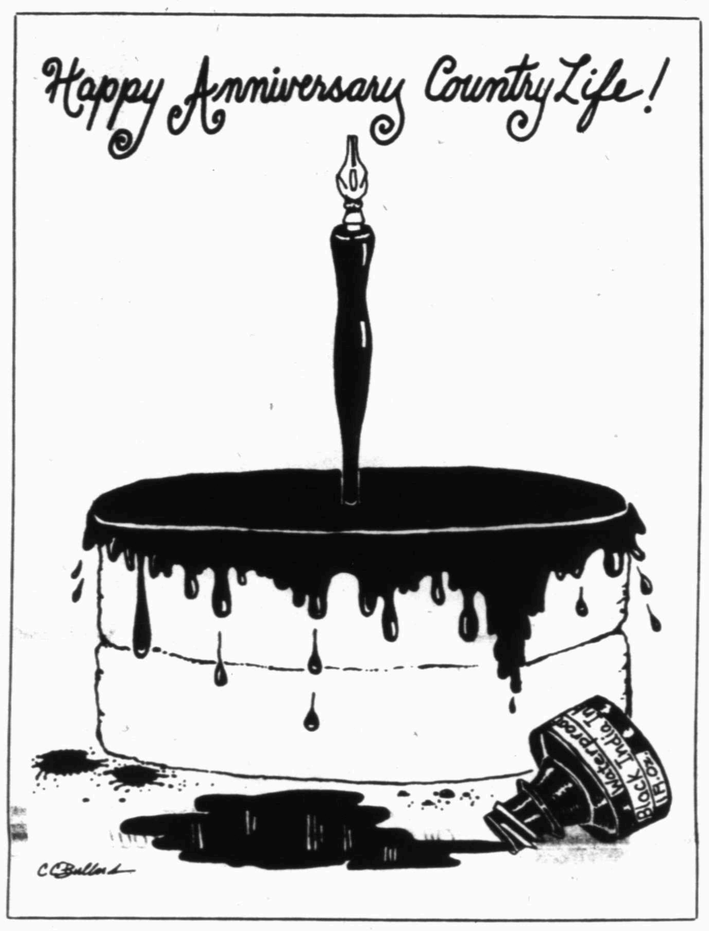

Regardless, that newspaper of the future will be a reflection of the community in which it makes its living.

If all you read is bad news in it, please don't shoot the messenger. There's only another guy waiting to replace him, and he might be a real idiot.

Also, keep this in mind. You might have had some hand in how things have come to be.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Happy Anniversary, Country Life! This Sunday marks the first year since my column appeared in the SDN. My good friend and colleague, Carol Bullard, joined me about a month later with her wonderful cartoons, so we consider this a joint anniversary. We wanted to take a little space to tell you how we've been, what Country Life has meant to us, and to thank all you guys out there for making it possible.

Neither of us had ever done anything like this before, could you tell? We started out tentatively, feeling our way through a dark room, getting used to the position of things. For me, blabbermouth that I am, the hardest part was knowing when to shut up. My longest columns, the ones that run underneath Carol's cartoons (which, by the way, are shortened to make room), are still no more than 750 to 800 words long. A typical article or short story that you read in a magazine runs about 3,000 words.

I had to learn to aim each sentence, like an arrow, straight for a target: what I was trying to say. There is no room in a column for a lengthy description of a sunset.

Carol, on the other hand, had to gain confidence. Her first cartoons, while we thought they were as good as all the rest, were drawn finely, with a soft pencil, as if she were poised to erase the whole thing if somebody didn't like it. Now they are bold, attention-getting, branded with her own sense of humor.

At first we stuck slavishly to country themes, but gradually we came to realize that anything we did was written from the perspective of someone who lives in the country. Like the old saying, "The rich are different," country folk are different, too. When you've got an hour-long drive staring you in the face just to buy a loaf of bread, it tends to focus your thinking. When too much rain becomes, not just a nuisance, but a threat to your whole life, it makes you tough, and fine-tunes your faith.

Something neither of us counted on was how close Country Life would draw all of you to us. Everywhere we go, people come up to us and tell us how much they enjoy our work, which columns they've saved, which they've mailed off to relatives, which ones they like best. But my all-time favorite comment came from the sweet lady who said, "I went down there to the 'Scurry County Times,' and I told them that if they quit running your column, I would cancel my subscription!"

For Carol and me, Country Life has bonded a friendship that was already close. Each week, after I write the column, I call her up and read it to her over the phone. She laughs in all the right places, interrupts whenever she feels like it, and then we talk and talk, tossing ideas around for cartoons and future columns, but mostly saying, "That's what it's really like, and your support helps me live with it." Still, I never know what the finished cartoon looks like until I drive to the mailbox on Monday noon — it's a bit like opening a present, and I get to laugh all over again.

Country Life has given me the chance to work with award-winning professionals, and believe me, I have learned from them. Donny Brown's column, "Above the Fold," won first place this year in the Texas Press Association awards for small dailies. The SDN has also won awards in almost every other category. Snyder is fortunate to have a newspaper that is grounded in such journalistic excellence. It's an honor to be associated with them.

For me, Country Life has afforded a chance to grow as a writer. And I have to say, it is a great freedom to be able to write about anything I want without having to worry about whether or not it will sell, how to select a market, then waiting six weeks to see if it is rejected. I have also been given freedom to say most anything I want, and athough my work has, thankfully, been edited from time to time, it has never been censored. Misspelled words and grammatical mistakes are corrected, but not a single opinion has ever been deleted in publication. This is a privilege which I hope never to abuse.

I can honestly say, and I speak for Carol, too, that nothing I have ever done professionally has given me a greater sense of satisfaction and joy. We owe it all to you, and we thought it was time we said a great big, "Thanks, we love ya!"

FIVE YEARS AGO

Local champions of the 1981 West Texas Barrel Association season included Ann Henderson of Snyder, winner of the 500 novice horse division, and Jenny Hinton, runner-up in the open class.

Scores of onlookers and television crews from Lubbock and Abilene were on hand at the Snyder National Bank this morning — Oct. 15 — as bank president Roger B. Mize presided over the unveiling of a gold plated Delorean automobile in the bank lobby. The car — one of only two manufactured at the Delorean plant in Ireland — will remain on permanent display in the bank.

The Rev. Kendall Coffey was named minister of Snyder's First Christian Church today — Oct. 16. The Anson native, a TCU graduate, will replace the Rev. Gary Dudder, who resigned the position to become minister of a church in Lockhart.

10 YEARS AGO

New directors of the Scurry County Farm Bureau elected Thursday — Oct. 14 — included Gilbert Merritt of Fluvanna, Don Franklin of Snyder, and W.J. Fuller of Dunn.

Kathy Huddleston was named Ira Homecoming Queen for 1976 at ceremonies held during halftime of Friday's Ira-Hermleigh football game.

Milton Fletcher, ACU vice-president for public relations and development today — Oct. 17 — announced the appointment of Jennifer Mullins of Snyder to the position of director of information for the university. Mullins is a 1971 graduate of SHS.

Snyder city councilmen last night — Oct. 18 — appointed John Fagin to the position of mayor. Fagin has been serving as mayor pro-tem and assumes the mayor's post to fill the vacancy created by the death of William A. Vestal earlier this month.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
October 12

The projected fall cotton harvest for Scurry County has been downgraded to less than 14,000 bales, an estimate county ag officials are calling "a real sad situation." A good crop year would produce 60,000 bales of cotton.

Scurry County candidates facing opponents in November's General Election have filed their third statement required by law disclosing campaign expenses and contributions.

Totals for three contested races were reported in Sunday's newspaper.

A general rain of approximately 1 inch fell across Scurry County Friday afternoon and night, upping the official year-to-date total in Snyder past the 27 inch mark, it was reported Sunday.

MONDAY
October 13

Following nearly an hour of discussion, commissioners Monday named themselves as the final appeal body for indigent health care cases and concluded that Cogdell Memorial Hospital personnel should assume responsibility for identifying indigent eligibility.

Two Snyder High School groups competed well at competitions held during the weekend, it was reported Monday.

The Snyder High School "Pride of the West Black and Gold Marching Band" earned a first division rating and qualified for the UIL area marching contest.

In addition, 26 members of the Snyder High School choir were named to the 88-member All District choir following tryouts at Abilene Cooper High School.

Ralph Williamson was sworn in as Snyder's newest member on the city council Monday. Williamson will represent the District 2 seat.

TUESDAY
October 14

The first report for no-pass, no-play at Snyder High School was in the process of being finalized Tuesday morning.

Systemwide, the indication was that 25 percent of SHS students failed one grade or more. The student body total was 228 failing at least one grade out of 893.

Beginning Tuesday, staffers with the Scurry County Health Unit will begin charging a nominal fee for the services they provide--a change mandated by the state.

Staffers emphasized Monday that the fee will be "nominal," expected to be $1 per shot given.

For those unable to afford even this small payment, staffers emphasized "no one will be turned away."

Some 60 producers from Scurry and Borden County were encouraged Tuesday night to offer comments prior to an Oct. 27 deadline regarding the newly implemented USDA Sodbuster program.

A meeting to outline provisions of Sodbuster was called by local ASCS and SCS officials.

WEDNESDAY
October 15

A Snyder elementary campus--the area where the district's bilingual education students are grouped--has been singled out by the Texas Education Agency (TEA) for a special monitoring visit this school year due to low scores on the statewide TEAMS test, it was reported Wednesday.

Snyder's Central Elementary campus is among 98 from across the state who were due TEA accreditation visits this year and, as a result, were pinpointed due to scores said to be among the lowest one-quarter reported.

THURSDAY
October 16

Absentee voting began Wednesday for the upcoming November General Election and 10 votes had been cast as of Thursday morning.

In addition to three locally contested races, voters must decide statewide races to include the hotly contested governor's race.

FRIDAY
October 17

The Texas National Guard has announced the posting of Spec. 4 Gerry Portis to Snyder as Training NCO for the local detachment, it was reported Friday. He will oversee activities of Det. 2, Co. E of the 111th Engineering Battalion.

Although Scurry County's unemployment rate saw its second modest decline since June, Texas Employment Commission (TEC) officials say the change indicates no reversal in current economic conditions, it was reported Friday.

According to figures released by TEC for August, the county's unemployment is still listed in double figures at 10.8 percent — a drop of .30 from July's 11.1 rate.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

The Lady Dusters and the Westerners are very excited about the fast approaching 1986/-87 basketball season.

A special "Meet the Athletes" night will be held on Oct. 21 beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the Western Texas College cafeteria and we sophomore players would like to extend a personal invitation to all our basketball fans to attend.

We have been working very hard and really believe we are going to have a good season; however, we believe we can be even better with the support and enthusiasm of the community.

We would like to meet our fans and sincerely believe they will find a group of friendly, dedicated young people. The entire Lady Duster and Westerner teams will be there.

To the editor,

The 1986 Scurry County Fair was once again a great success. Many volunteers and community leaders committed themselves to a most worthy endeavor. The Scurry County Fair was begun 21-plus years ago by a group of dedicated citizens. Today we still celebrate the county fair with great appreciation going to those who dreamed and then put into place this event. Generations of families have passed on the tradition as well as the responsibilities. We reap the rewards of those before us.

A special salute to those in the

Dissident unhappy without daughter, family

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An ailing dissident freed by the Soviet Union calls his sudden release a miracle but says his happiness is incomplete while his daughter and her family remain in Moscow.

David Goldfarb arrived here with his wife, Cecilia, on Thursday evening, more than seven years after he first requested permission to leave the Soviet Union for Israel.

His release was granted despite his refusal to leave without his wife, or to make a deal with the KGB to frame American journalist Nicholas Daniloff, his son said.

The couple flew from Moscow aboard Armand Hammer's private jet after the American industrialist arranged permission for their departure through a former Soviet ambassador to the United States.

"Yesterday a miracle happened," Goldfarb, a 67-year-old geneticist, said after he was taken off the jet on an stretcher.

"But, as they say, there is no complete happiness without misfortune and no luck without problems," he said in Russian with his son, Alexander, translating.

The elder Goldfarb's daughter, Olga, who remains in Moscow with her husband and their 9- and 4-year-old daughters, said she was delighted and stunned by her father's departure.

"This was all so quick," she said. "We said farewell and it was very emotional. Now we're just sitting here and thinking what will happen next."

Ingrown hairs are painful

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a problem with ingrown whiskers on my neck. They get infected and painful. I've tried different kinds of razors and shaving creams, but the problem seems to be getting worse. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Pluck the problem hairs with tweezers. Ingrown hairs can be produced by any kind of shaving instrument, so you will have to get rid of the hairs that turn inward and cause inflammation.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I just read a book on hypothyroidism. The doctor who wrote it says that a morning basal (at rest) temperature below 97.9 degrees Fahrenheit, and symptoms, may indicate hypothyroidism. Have you ever heard of this basal temperature test? Mine is 96 and I have many other symptoms. I took the book to my doctor and asked him to read it. He wouldn't even look at it; he said he knew more than the doctor who wrote it. He also said the doctor probably needed a psychiatrist, and so did I for reading such garbage. (Needless to say, I am trying to find another doctor.)

DEAR READER — The basal temperature is a recognized and useful procedure that allows a person to obtain an accurate measure of the body's temperature before exercise, eating and so forth. A woman's basal temperature may vary slightly at the time she ovulates.

Patients with hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid glands) do tend to have slightly lower temperatures than normal people. However, the diagnosis is so readily established by modern blood tests that the nuisance of temperature-taking is unnecessarily cumbersome.

I don't understand your (ex-) doctor's temper tantrum. I would have expected him at least to scan the book to see what the competition has to say. Doctors do write books and, frankly, many of the publications are kooky. But you are obviously interested in the subject of hypothyroidism, and he could have given you the courtesy of a friendly argument about the author's perspective.

Hypothyroidism is often unsuspected in people who complain of fatigue, lassitude, thinning hair, coarsening of the skin, constipation, intolerance to cold and menstrual irregularities. The condition is entirely treatable once the diagnosis has been made.

Because you seem to be in the market for a new doctor, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, CHOOSING A PHYSICIAN: MAKE A DECISION FOR GOOD HEALTH. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A young fellow I know, who is 22, refuses to eat any vegetables because he doesn't like them. I tell him that he's making a serious mistake, but can't think of the specific problems this might cause. Can you?

DEAR READER — I'm surprised that a young adult refuses to eat any vegetables. I wonder how much his distaste may be related to an emotional, rather than a dietary, rejection. His mommy may have given him a hard time at the dinner table during his childhood; now he is paying her back.

At any rate, he is unlikely to develop a real nutritional deficiency if he eats dairy products, fish, poultry and grain products. Supplemental vitamins would be useful. He'll miss some fiber, of course, but whole-wheat bread will take care of that.

What's wrong with this picture?

As he lolled in his Styrofoam chair, Dr. Ethan Mergatroyd floated aimlessly, like a bathtub toy, in the middle of his above-ground swimming pool. He lifted a chilled glass of gin and diet tonic and mused as he pressed the cold container to his furrowed, sweating forehead. He lolled and mused and reflected about his career.

With the help of bank credit, he exhibited most of the trappings of a successful professional, including a cordless telephone, a condo on Cape Cod and a home computer. But, he concluded with a snap of his head, he didn't have it all. "Why?" he asked himself for the hundredth time. Why had he not been accepted by his medical comrades?

This perfectly simple but vital goal had thus far eluded him, despite his most valiant efforts. He couldn't understand it. There were mutterings and titterings among the nurses when he made rounds. His opinions were never solicited. He seemed permanently relegated to the least prestigious hospital committees, such as the Radioisotope and Quality Assurance Committees.

He thought he deserved more respect, more power. "Why don't they bow down to me?" he pondered. He had followed all the rules, made all the right moves, played all the political angles. Although the M.D. degree entitled him to adoration and acceptance, he had yet to bask in the warmth of these virtues. Where had he failed?

Having a blonde wife hadn't helped. Sure, she was No. 3, but it seemed like an ideal match and he had been ready to move up. She shared his hunger for the good life and believed in his ability to provide — hitched her wagon to a star, she'd said. He felt all cuddly inside when she offered that testimonial; it was just what he needed to hear.

Buying a Cadillac hadn't helped. He scrimped and saved during his first two years of practice just to make the down payment on the cushy Eldorado, and thereby prove to the peasants that he had made the grade. He knew he couldn't afford the monthly gasoline bills, much less the automobile itself. But owning it made him feel important, and the bank had been ever so understanding when he applied for a loan.

Giving lawn parties for other doctors hadn't helped. He'd had the bright idea to organize a volleyball game between the surgeons and physicians. His side lost the game, and he was awarded a dinky little cap with a sculptured horse's behind on it. Since he had the whole event catered, that was the limit. He really put out for those doctors, and he suspected that they schemed to give him the hat regardless of which team won.

Cultivating a certain class of patients hadn't helped. He thought that becoming a doctor for well-connected hypochondriacs would guarantee instant success. He envisioned that the constant flow of referrals to his surgical associates would provide a bonanza of unnecessary operations. He would be a hero. He especially believed that the anesthesiologists would welcome the business and would accept him with the same enthusiasm with which they accepted the insurance checks generated by his face-lift referrals. But it was not to be.

Writing a newspaper column hadn't helped. Doctors nitpicked him to death for making inconsequential human errors. In trying to please everybody, he'd failed to please anybody. He wasn't taken seriously; his views were so controversial that he was labelled a crackpot. He had tried — Lord, had he tried — to put doctors in a good light, but that had been impossible. He was criticized for duplicity. How can you support a profession that says one thing and does another? Eventually, he'd taken the easy path and served his own self-interests. He'd grumbled, but other Health-makers had proved to him that it's a dog-eat-dog world out there.

Nothing had helped. Mergatroyd was mortgaged to the hilt, had exhausted his revolving line of credit, enjoyed berating his patients, depended on a steady supply of free tranquilizers from drug companies, assumed a grandiose and sententious attitude, spent conspicuously, made friends with the bishop, complained constantly about his work schedule and ingratiated himself to his colleagues. In short, he had behaved like any other modern doctor.

As Mergatroyd slowly sipped his drink, he gently revolved in the chlorinated stillness of the pool. Where, he wondered, oh, where have I gone wrong?

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Wine operation taken over

AUSTIN (AP) — Operation of the Ste. Genevieve winery in West Texas has been taken over by the University of Texas and the Bank of America while UT and the bank look for a new operator for the facility, according to an attorney for the school.

W.O. Schultz, UT's associate general counsel, said the university canceled the winery's lease Oct. 7, but he declined to say why the 30-year lease, with a 30-year renewal option, was terminated.

The winery, the largest in Texas, operates on 1,000 acres of university land in Pecos County. It had projected sales of 150,000 cases of wine in 1986.

The winery, which began shipping wine in the summer of 1985, sells a variety of wines under the Ste. Genevieve label.

In mid-September, the winery introduced its first 1986 vintage wine — Texas First Blush — produced from the season's first harvest of premium grapes.

Bob Simpson, Ste. Genevieve's general manager, said the company was preparing a statement concerning the situation.

The Bank of America has repossessed Ste. Genevieve's wine-making facility, Schultz said.

The company has placed current production capabilities at more than 500,000 cases a year.

Toxic tide now at South Padre

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Since arriving on the Texas coast in January Mark Hamner has survived spring break and a busy summer as acting general manager of the Hilton Inn on South Padre Island.

But he's not sure how he'll handle the toxic red tide that kept hotel visitors away from the beach Thursday because of its searing effects on the eyes, lungs and nasal passages.

"Now, we've got something I don't know how to deal with," Hamner said, his eyes reddened by the tide as he surveyed a desolate beach. "What can I do? What can this whole island do?"

The red tide washed into South Padre late Wednesday and by Thursday afternoon dead catfish littered the beaches of the coastal resort.

The red tide began near Galveston in late August and slowly has moved south. Thousands of fish have been killed by the heavy concentration of marine micro-organisms.

Officials in Corpus Christi, 120 miles to the north, have been forced to close beaches to swimmers.

The Texas Health Department has suspended oyster harvests for 300 miles of coast from San Louis Pass to the mouth of the Rio Grande because the organism that causes the red tide builds up in shellfish, said Hector Herrera, regional engineer for the health agency in Harlingen.

Jury convicts 'choker rapist'

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict known as Austin's "choker rapist" faces up to 99 years in prison after a jury convicted him of strangling a 17-year-old Kingwood girl 10 months after being paroled from a 123-year sentence.

After two days of testimony, jurors in State District Judge Ted Poe's court took just over two hours Thursday before convicting Thomas Earl Grettenberg of burglary and intent to commit aggravated assault in the July 11 attack on Lisa Kilgore. The jury knew nothing of Grettenberg's past criminal record.

The punishment phase in the trial of Grettenberg, 33, was scheduled for Friday.

Wearing a neckbrace because of injuries she allegedly received during the attack, Miss Kilgore said Grettenberg harassed her at the Kingwood restaurant where she worked for several months and once followed her to another restaurant where he stared at her while she had dinner with friends.

"He told me he was going to kill me," Miss Kilgore testified in tears. "I was scared, I thought I was going to die."

After Grettenberg allegedly choked her during the early morning hours at her parent's northeast Harris County home, Miss Kilgore said she blacked out.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earl has criticized state parole officials for releasing Grettenberg after he served only eight years of a 123-year prison sentence for rapes and burglaries that occurred in Austin in the late 1970s. The victims in each case were choked.

"I couldn't believe it," Miss Kilgore said of Grettenberg being on parole. "I didn't understand how if they (parole board) knew he had the capabilities of doing these things how they could just let him do it."

Grettenberg also is accused of choking a Humble teen-ager in her bed Aug. 18.

Miss Kilgore's mother, Marie Martin, testified Wednesday that Grettenberg came to her door once posing as a marketing surveyor, repeatedly called the house and left a note atop the family's mailbox before the attack.

Mrs. Martin also said she once found Grettenberg staring through a window of the restaurant where her daughter worked and told him that "if he didn't leave my daughter alone, he'd have to deal with me.

"He looked at me like I wasn't there," she said. "Then he walked away."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Oct. 20, 1986

Perseverance and hard work will yield larger-than-usual rewards for you in the year ahead. This will be true whether you are an entrepreneur or employed by someone else.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are not likely to fare too well today in financial situations that contain too many risky elements. Let your common sense rule your actions. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll perform effectively today, provided you aren't pushed or pressured by others. If this occurs, you might dump the whole mess in their laps.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be the source of your own undoing today if you behave too impulsively. Take time to open doors instead of trying to crash through them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You and a close pal might have a disagreement over a financial matter today. Don't place greater value on material things than on friendship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Unless you have the full support of your associates, a critical career objective could be denied you today. Show proper appreciation for anyone who helps.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have to deal with someone today with whom you've had an unpleasant experience in the past. Don't let an old grudge dictate your behavior.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's best today not to pry into a matter that a friend is anxious to keep secret. Your curiosity could draw you into something you might later regret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Decisions that have an effect on your material well-being should not be left to others today. If something has to be decided, insist on being present.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be self-sufficient at work today, but don't start changing things around without first consulting your superiors. You could unknowingly cause problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make a diligent effort today and tomorrow to trim waste from your expenditures. Don't buy now, hoping you'll be able to cover it later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not let a volatile issue blast you and your mate apart today. Instead of fanning the fire, try to extinguish it through compromise and understanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not try to overpower associates so that they will do your bidding today. Pressure tactics are a sure way of creating additional conflict.

Oct. 19, 1986

Conditions in general look promising for you in the year ahead, both career-wise and socially, yet friends aren't apt to play key roles in your material affairs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If there are certain activities that you feel you can't afford today, scratch them off your agenda. For prudence's sake, spend only on essentials. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be considerate of others today and let the majority rule, instead of insisting on doing just the things you like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It could produce complications if you disregard your duties and responsibilities today. Do what needs doing rather than pretending these things are insignificant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to bank too heavily on information passed on to you today at a social function. It could just be colorful conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be laboring under a false illusion if you feel you have to embellish your recent achievements in order to make others think well of you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Flattery will prove to be a very ineffective tool if you try to use it for ulterior purposes today. If you want to make a real impact, be sincere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Measure your financial expenditures carefully today to be sure each dollar you spend is doing its full job. Avoid situations where you don't get full value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you are a very decisive and direct person, but today you could look for the avenues of least resistance rather than meeting issues head-on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is a possibility that you may be a trifle self-indulgent today. This is OK, provided you look out for the needs of others as well as for your own.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extra mindful of your behavior in social situations today. Don't do anything that could cause friends to think you have used poor taste.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you may feel impelled to put on affectations in order to make a favorable impression. These urgings come from your ego, not the real you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A slick-talking purveyor of flamboyant ideas might try to sell you on his or her concepts today. Dont' be taken in by a pitch with nc substance.

Natural and Adoptive Parents Both Had Something to Offer

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing not to tell my story, but to share this beautiful poem. If you consider it worth printing, it may inspire others. Thank you.

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I do.

LEGACY OF AN ADOPTED CHILD

Once there were two women
Who never knew each other
One you do not remember
The other you call mother.

Two different lives
Shaped to make yours one.
One became your guiding star
The other became your sun.

The first gave you life
And the second taught you to live in it
The first gave you a need for love
And the second was there to give it.

One gave you a nationality
The other gave you a name
One gave you the seed of talent
The other gave you an aim.

One gave you emotions
The other calmed your fears
One saw your first sweet smile
The other dried your tears.

One gave you up —
It was all that she could do.
The other prayed for a child.
And God led her straight to you.

And now you ask me
Through your tears,
The age-old questions
Through the years;

Heredity or environment —
Which are you the product of?
Neither, my darling — neither
Just two different kinds of love.

DEAR ABBY: I have been wanting to say this for a long time: My wife and I adopted a child years ago, and since then I've become fed up with the so-called "rights" of biological parents and the so-called "rights" of adopted children. What about the rights of parents who adopted that child?

In recent years I have seen numerous TV shows, articles and letters in your column pushing for the "rights" of everyone involved in an adoption — except the adoptive parents.

Remember us? We're the ones who sent our pictures and letters stating our qualifications for parenthood to over 100 doctors, lawyers, adoption agencies and hospitals begging for a child. We're the ones who waited seven years for one of those contacts to pay off. And when it finally did, we're the ones who loved this child with all our hearts. This child is ours!

Abby, I am not one of those jerks who believe that most children are given up for selfish reasons. I know that they were given up because their birth parents wanted what was best for their child. Nevertheless, when they gave up that child, they also gave up their right to contact that child.

Finally, Abby, I'm not going to prevent my child from finding her biological parents, if that's what she wants to do when she's of legal age. On the contrary, I've kept records in my safe-deposit box that will help her locate the birth parents. But in the meantime, if anyone tries to interfere with my family and our lives, he will need a lot more than a handful of so-called "rights"!

DETERMINED IN L.A.

past as well as the present. Your commitment and dedication continue to make your fair most successful.

A special thanks to the groups and individuals I worked directly with in the Home Economics Division: textiles division, adult sewing division, junior sewing division, junior and senior handicrafts division, baked goods, canned foods, men's division and educational exhibits. The superintendents and associates put forth a great deal of effort to provide the community such a service.

The Scurry County Fair is a family affair. It takes all families and members to make such a successful happening. It's great to know that we have a tradition to look forward to each year.

Small college boasts 'winner'

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Three decades ago, George Mason University opened its doors as a two-year school with 17 students. Today it has 17,000 students on a sprawling, fast growing campus, and it boasts something that only a few American universities can claim: a Nobel Prize winner on the faculty.

It proves there is no need to be a Berkeley or Harvard to garner one of the world's most prestigious honors.

"We're very excited," Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, said following Thursday's announcement that the 1986 Nobel Prize in economics had been awarded to George Mason's James McGill Buchanan.

To the editor,

Knights of Columbus Council 8875 wishes to give thanks to all who helped to reach our goal to help the hearing impaired.

Thanks for your donation goes especially to Spanish Inn, Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home, James L. Wadleigh, Thornhill's Hair Designers and Whataburger.

Thanks also to Spanish Inn, Taco Villa and Eckerd's Drug for allowing us to sit up on their business location.

Companies post heavy losses

DALLAS (AP) — Multi-million dollar losses and declining profits for major Texas banks are an indication that the economic drain of the oil industry may be spreading through the Texas economy, experts say.

Allied Bancshares Inc. and Texas American Bancshares posted third quarter losses in the tens of millions while MCorp and Interfirst Corp. showed meager profits for the third quarter.

Sandra J. Flannigan, an analyst with PaineWebber Inc. of Houston, said the loan problems appear to be spreading from energy and real estate into the general business portfolios of the banks. This indicates, she said, that the effect of the depressed energy prices is now rippling into other economic sectors.

Georgia L. Head, a banking analyst with Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. of Dallas, said troubling times may continue for Texas banks into next year.

"I would say that because nonperforming loans are going up, we are going to see these large provisions and charge-offs for the rest of the year and into next year," she said.

Allied Bancshares reported income losses for the quarter ending Sept. 30 of $46.4 million. Texas American Bancshares showed losses for the same period of $84.1 million.

Houston-based Allied in the same quarter last year had a net income of $30.3 million, while Texas American of Fort Worth had third quarter net income last year of $7.6 million.

Texas MCorp of Dallas reported earnings were down by $25 million over the same period last year. For the third quarter of this year MCorp showed a profit of $7 million.

Interfirst Corp. of Dallas reported net income was down by 87 percent from one year ago. The company showed income of $2 million for the third quarter of 1986 while the company had $16 million in income for the third quarter of 1985.

Both Allied and Texas American had heavy loan losses charged against the quarterly income. Many of the troubled loans were on the energy or real estate investments, but other sector loans also were represented.

MCorp chairman and executive officer Gene H. Bishop said a significant increase in non performing assets and declining asset values struck a severe blow to the bank's income.

"The sharp decline in energy prices during the first quarter of 1986 created the potential for the deterioration in asset quality," he said.
