Flyers Bound For New York or Even Further
If Fuel Will Hold Out

By United Press.

BALDONNEL AIRPORT, Ireland, Sept. 16.—Captain Macintosh and Commandant Fitzmaurice of the Free State Air Force departed today on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight to the United States. They arose from this field at 1:34 p. m. (7:34 a. m. eastern standard time). Macintosh and Fitzmaurice were bound for New York but would fly on perhaps to Philadelphia if their gasoline supply was sufficient. The trans-Atlantic monoplane Princess Xenia was sighted today at 3:30 p. m. flying low over the Atlantic off Galway Bay. Civic guards sighted the plane heading into the fog.

Mine Guards Are Attacked, Fight Ensues, None Hurt

By United Press.

NELSONVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 16.—A force of attackers and guards at the Licks Run coal mine, engaged in a two-hour machine gun and rifle fire exchange as a result of an attempt to operate the company property on an open-shop basis, officials here were advised. No one was injured in the exchange of bullets. Dynamite caps and fuses believed to have been intended for use in blowing up the mine property were found in the vicinity of the battle.

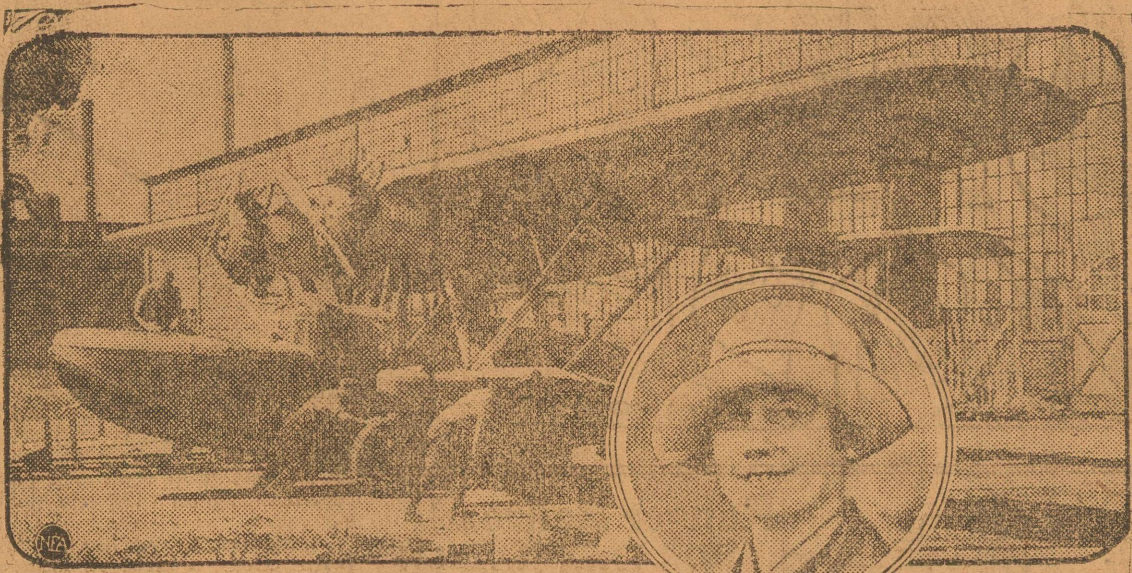

Eastland County Commissioners Seek Architect

By United Press.

DALLAS, Sept. 16.—Eastland county commissioners were here today to select an architect to design the proposed $300,000 county court building at Eastland. The four commissioners conferred with County Judge F. H. Alexander who described to them the work on the new Dallas county hall of records, which is under construction.

Tragedy that has befallen recent attempts to fly the Atlantic has not one bit deterred pretty Frances W. Grayson's plans to hop to Europe from New York this year in her bi-motored Sikorsky amphibian. Here it is being tuned up at Roosevelt Field. Miss Grayson, who will be accompanied by a pilot and navigator, is intent. Her home is in Forest Hills, Long Island.

FURTHER FIGHT MAY BE MADE ON RESERVE BOARD

Crissinger Resigns as Governor of Board Following Protest
From Chicago.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Resignation of Daniel R. Crissinger, Marquette, Ohio, as governor of the Federal Reserve Board is expected to result in further attacks on the board's exercise of power despite treasury official statements that the recent conflict over the Chicago rediscount had nothing to do with his retirement.

Supporters of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank which opposed the board's order for a rediscount, are expected to take advantage of the vacancy to urge President Coolidge to appoint a new chief of the nation's banking more in harmony with their views.

Mr. Coolidge, however, has already selected a successor it was stated today and probably will announce his name in a few days. No statement as to changing or retaining present fiscal policies was available here today.

FEARS CLEVELAND MAY BE CRIME CENTER OF NATION

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 16.—Sixty-three murders have been committed in the city of Cleveland since the first of the year and 20 of these remain unsolved.

In addition police are still without a clue to the slayers of three persons who were murdered in suburbs of the city. Police Inspector Cornelius Cody has asked an entire reorganization of the police squad to prevent Cleveland from "becoming known as the crime center of the nation."

COLONY FAIR IS HUGE SUCCESS, VISITORS SAY

Exhibit Contains Display of Products Not Common To This County.

Colony community fair went over in great shape yesterday, its exhibits and attendance far exceeding that of any other community fair in this section, this season.

The exhibits were fine and of great variety, as figs, celery, broom corn and other products not commonly grown, showed that the farmers of Colony are practicing the gospel of diversification.

A collection of cut flowers and potted plants was evidence that the beautiful things were to have their coming along with the revenue bearing products of the farm.

Fine needlework, a wonderful display of canned vegetables and fruits, and a mouth watering exhibit of pies and cakes were displayed in the women's department.

F. J. Lockridge farm demonstration agent of Breckenridge judged the live stock exhibit which was very good, and also the agricultural display, while Miss Viola McKenzie, county home demonstration agent of Stephens county judged the culinary, fancy work and cooking displays in the women's department.

Secretary Briggs of the Eastland chamber of commerce was present and talked to the assembly of the Eastland county fair, to be held next week in Eastland.

Wayne C. Hickey, secretary of the Ranger chamber of commerce, handed out cigars to the men, as a compliment from the merchants of Ranger.

At noon a meal, composed of many different edibles was enjoyed by the large number of Colony folks and their guests who were present and so satisfactory was the whole fair, that it was voted to hold one next year, the date of which will be determined later.

Sunday issue of this paper will carry a complete list of the awards.

PERSHING IS GLAD TO SEE FRANCE AGAIN

Squadron Of Planes
And Military Bands
Meet The Leviathan

By United Press.

CHERBOURG, France, Sept. 16.—Rearing motors of a squadron of hydroplanes, the blare of military bands and the cheers of thousands of citizens today welcomed the general staff of the "Second A. E. F." Officials of the American Legion returning after almost nine years to the land which once beckoned them in war disembarked from the great liner Leviathan, a vessel formerly belonging to the common enemy.

General Pershing was dressing in his cabin when interviewed by a United Press correspondent.

"I am glad to see France and you again," was his greeting.

"How does your present visit compare with the first time you arrived?" asked the correspondent.

"Well I confess it doesn't give me quite the same thrill as when I landed at Boulogne from the Baltic in June, 1917," he said. "But we must remember that those were stirring times, that the greatest events of the ages were happening and we came to do a man's work."

STATE BRIEFS

DALLAS, Sept. 16.—It takes an early riser to be a candidate for the 1927 Southern Methodist football squad.

All this week Coach Ray Morrison is holding daily practice at 6:30 a. m. A second daily session is held at 5 p. m. Each drill session lasts an hour and a half. The early and late sessions are held to avoid the heat of the day.

AUSTIN, Sept. 16.—Asphalt surfacing of 320 miles of roads, which was ordered recently by the state highway commission, is only a starter of the work of this sort proposed. Present plans contemplate similar treatment for every mile of state highway that now is graveled. This totals nearly 4,400 miles.

PERSHING IS OFFICIALLY 'RECEIVED'

Welcome Is In Strange Contrast to That Given Him
In June, 1917.

By United Press.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—General John J. Pershing, honorary commander of the American Legion was officially received by the French nation today for the first time since he arrived on these shores in 1927 as the leader of 2,000,000 American troops.

Pershing arrived here today from Cherbourg where he had disembarked with other legionnaires from the SS. Leviathan.

The welcome today as General Pershing himself remarked was in strange contrast to that day ten years ago when he arrived to assist in the prosecution of the greatest war recorded in history.

Babe Ruth Cleared On Charge Having Assaulted Man

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Babe Ruth was cleared of the charge of assaulting Bernard Neimeyer today in magistrate court.

Neimeyer testified that he was attacked by a man July 4. The crowd attracted by the fight, cried, "It's Babe Ruth," Neimeyer said. He brought charges against the home run king.

Ruth said Tuesday that he was in New Jersey that day and that it was a case of mistaken identity.

Gas Masks for Texas Rangers in Borger Being Considered

By United Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 16.—Gas masks for Texas Rangers sent into the Borger oil field are being considered by Acting Adjutant Nichols. Two rangers, who have been on duty there have been transferred because of illness from the sulphuric gas.

Chief R. D. Parker of the oil and gas division of the railroad commission says the only cases of gas poisoning reported to them has been where workmen directly over wells have been overcome.

Citizens generally are not affected.

Nelson of Eastland. Burial will be in the Eastland cemetery. The deceased was born in Hartsville, Tenn.

CABINET HAS TALK OVER SLUMP IN PRICE

Indication Is Given
That Price Surveys
May Be Discontinued

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Under authority he possesses for investigating cotton price fluctuation, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine intends to investigate as far as possible the spectacular drop in yesterday's cotton market.

This was revealed this afternoon following an unusually long cabinet session—nearly three hours, which discussed among other problems, the spectacular flop which yesterday followed publication of agricultural department price survey.

Simultaneously it was indicated that the price surveys published for several years past are likely to be abandoned.

The surveys are not made generally available to the press but have not been considered secret heretofore it is said.

Before the cabinet meeting one spokesman of the department declared these were not "press releases." After the session Secretary Jardine made it clear that the unfavorable price information regarded by the cotton market yesterday as significant had been generally known as it was already in the August cotton price report.

"Everybody knows the position of cotton is better this month than last," said Jardine, "and the statement of the department does not justify the action of New York dealers."

He hinted there had been a disposition to ignore departmental observations which might operate on the bull side but to seize unfavorable items. The price surveys, it was said, were intended to be helpful and not aids to speculation.

Well Near Olden Comes In For 360 Barrels Daily

The Prairie Oil & Gas company reports the coming in of two good producers yesterday. The one in which Eastland county is most interested is the S. H. Parsons No. 2, south of Olden, which came in yesterday for 360 barrels, topping the sand at 1,608 feet, with a total depth of 1,616 feet.

This well, which shows a good volume of gas, came in flowing at the rate of 15 barrels an hour and was drilled by John D. Gholson and Bob Disney. It is an offset to the Hurdleson-J. U. Fox No. 1, which came in a few weeks ago for a 50-barrel well, increased its flow to 100 barrels, dropped to 75 barrels, went back to 79 barrels, which production it still maintains.

S. H. Parsons No. 1 of the Prairie, on the southwest corner of the tract, came in as a producer, grew light in production and was finally plugged. The new well is in the northwest corner of the tract and was drilled in about 10 days from the time it was spudded in.

The other well, which is in Crane county, is a big producer, making 200 barrels an hour and is Lassater No. 2. It was drilled in yesterday at a depth of 2,950 feet. No. 3 Lassater, which has been closed down for some time, was opened up for a short while, and Nos. 3 and 4 Lassater produced in one hour a total of 705 barrels.

Both were pinched back to 100 barrels an hour on account of insufficient storage to take care of the production.

Hurdleson et al. are engaged in drilling their No. 2 well, which will probably be in before another week rolls by.

The Texas Pacific Coal & Oil company is setting the 10-inch casing in the Dillon No. 1, at 1,665 feet, two miles southeast of Cisco.

About two miles south of Sand City the same company is rigging up on a location on the R. H. Works, which will be its R. H. Works No. 2.

THE BIG JUBILEE.

The Home-Coming Oil Jubilee which is to be held at Ranger on Oct. 21 and 22, little more than a month off now, is taking on rather gigantic proportions, according to information which has been obtained at the office of John M. Gholson, general chairman of the committee in charge of the affair.

When the committee was first organized its members reckoned that its first work was to get the people advised of the jubilee and get them to come home for the occasion, and started to work on that angle of the proposition. It seems to have accomplished that part of its task in a very efficient manner, if acceptances to the Home-Coming are to be taken as an indication.

With the jubilee six weeks to two months in the future the leading hotels of Ranger began getting requests for reservations for Oct. 21 and 22. Demands for hotel accommodations during the occasion have continued with almost alarming increases as the time for the big weekend draws closer.

The people of the oil belt are taking a very liberal view of the occasion. They are looking upon it not so much as a Ranger proposition but rather as an affair that is of interest to the entire oil belt. They regard the discovery of the McCleskey well near Ranger as the event which really ushered in the oil fields of western Texas.

Within a few months' after the discovery well was brought in, exploration work was under way over a territory extending from the northern limits of Young county south to the Colorado river and from Mineral Wells on the east to Abilene on the west, an area roughly estimated as 100 miles square.

The discovery of oil at Ranger has made villages into cities and has transformed cross-roads into thriving towns. Ranger, Brownwood, Breckenridge, Eastland, Cisco, Graham, Moran and a dozen other towns that 10 years ago were mere villages are now small cities, and the discovery of oil and the development of the fields in this section of the state are responsible for this advancement.

For these reasons every town and every community in the oil belt feels a personal interest in the big Home-Coming Oil Jubilee that is to be held in Ranger. They feel that it is not for Ranger only, which is altogether true. The celebration is for all the people of the West Texas oil belt, and is being held at Ranger only because Ranger happened to be the point where the discovery was made and the center from which operations were directed.

Eastland District Safety League In Meet at Leon Lake

The Eastland district of the Central Safety League met Thursday night at the Oil Belt Power company's clubhouse at Leon lake, four miles southeast of Eastland. W. N. Hart of Eastland, chairman, called the meeting to order. The roll call by the secretary showed 40 members present and 27 as absent.

The following program was rendered:
Talk, M. F. Gill, explaining in detail first aid kits.
Talk, E. R. Johnson, "Purpose of Safety Meetings."

Following the above two talks the meeting was turned over to the members, who held a round-table discussion of such subjects as "unsafe practices," "keeping fit physically," "prone pressure methods of resuscitation," etc.

At the adjournment of the meeting Walter Hart treated those present to ice cream, cigars and coffee.

Perhaps one reason why husband-calling contests aren't more popular is that it would take all the prize money to pay the fine for using such language in public.

Prince of Wales May Let Mother Pick His Bride

By C. P. WILLIAMSON,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON.—The Prince of Wales is home from his Canadian tour—perhaps the last trip he will ever make as a bachelor.

A totally unconfirmed report now going the rounds of London's social and diplomatic circles says that the prince before departing on his tour was asked by a close friend when he was going to marry. The prince is said to have replied, "When I am 33 and to anyone whom mother chooses."

How much truth there is in this story is one thing, but it certainly is a fact that some persons close to both Buckingham palace and York house are looking forward to some result of the years of attempts which have been made to link the prince's name with that of some suitable candidate for the throne of England.

For years professional tea-pourers have been examining the royalty pages of Whitaker's peerage seeking other possibilities for England's next queen. As a result of the prince's long wait before choosing the fortunate woman who would become Princess of Wales, the list of eligibles has slowly dwindled to a few European princesses and has even caused attention to be turned to the prince marrying someone other than royalty.

There have been several vague suggestions that the prince might well consider the highly valuable strengthening of Anglo-American relations by marrying an American girl. But the most eligible candidate for the prince's hand at the present time, according to the latest social gossip, is the beautiful Lady Cambridge, daughter of his uncle, the Earl of Athlone.

It is noteworthy in connection with this suggestion, that Lady Cambridge during her recent visit to England from South Africa, where her father is governor general, her aunt, Queen Mary, paid more than ordinary attention to her niece. In fact it was noted that the queen demanded Lady Cambridge's complete time during the visit, exerting almost a motherly interest in her.

Lady Cambridge is a first cousin of the Prince of Wales, both her father and Queen Mary being issue of the late Duke of Teck. They are also related distantly through Queen Victoria, who was a first cousin of the Duchess of Teck, Lady Cambridge's grandmother.

Lady Cambridge is not 21 years old, or 12 years younger than the prince. Much of her time has been spent in South Africa with her father. She is a keen sportswoman and at the present time is with a hunting party in Africa.

Marriages, the fall of a number of European royal houses, a still bitter feeling between countries in Europe since the war have all contributed to the thinning out of the field of eligible princesses to a mere two or three.

Before her marriage to Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, Princess Astrid of Sweden was looked upon favorably as a candidate to be the next queen of England. Following marriage, however, attention turned to her sister, Princess Martha and for a time she was considered a fitting prospect for the union. It has been vaguely rumored of late, however, that she or Princess Ilena, daughter of Queen Marie of Rumania, might be asked by King Boris of Bulgaria, to become his queen. So far, however, there has been no confirmation of these reports.

Recently the prince paid a visit to Spain. To many gossips this immediately took the shape of an impending union between the royal houses of England and Spain, for the Infanta Beatrice of Spain has long been looked upon in some quarters as a suitable future queen of England. Close friends of the prince, however, scoff at the idea for the same reason that they scoff at the idea of his marrying Princess Giovanna of Italy—because both are Catholics and it is believed that a Catholic princess would not go well with the British people.

Ever since the prince was 17, trying to marry him off to someone has been a favorite sport throughout the British empire. It was at that time that his marriage to Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia was mooted. This "impending union" was felt by many people to be a certainty since the kaiser and kaiserin were then visiting Buckingham palace. Next came Grand Duchess Olga, daughter of the late Czar of Russia, as a prospective candidate—most probably based on the fact that the two had played together as children.

Just who his mother is going to choose for him to marry, if the story of his reply to his friends is true, is not known, but there is almost a feeling of certainty in social circles in London that the prince, if he does marry will do so during the coming year or two, that is, before he is 35.

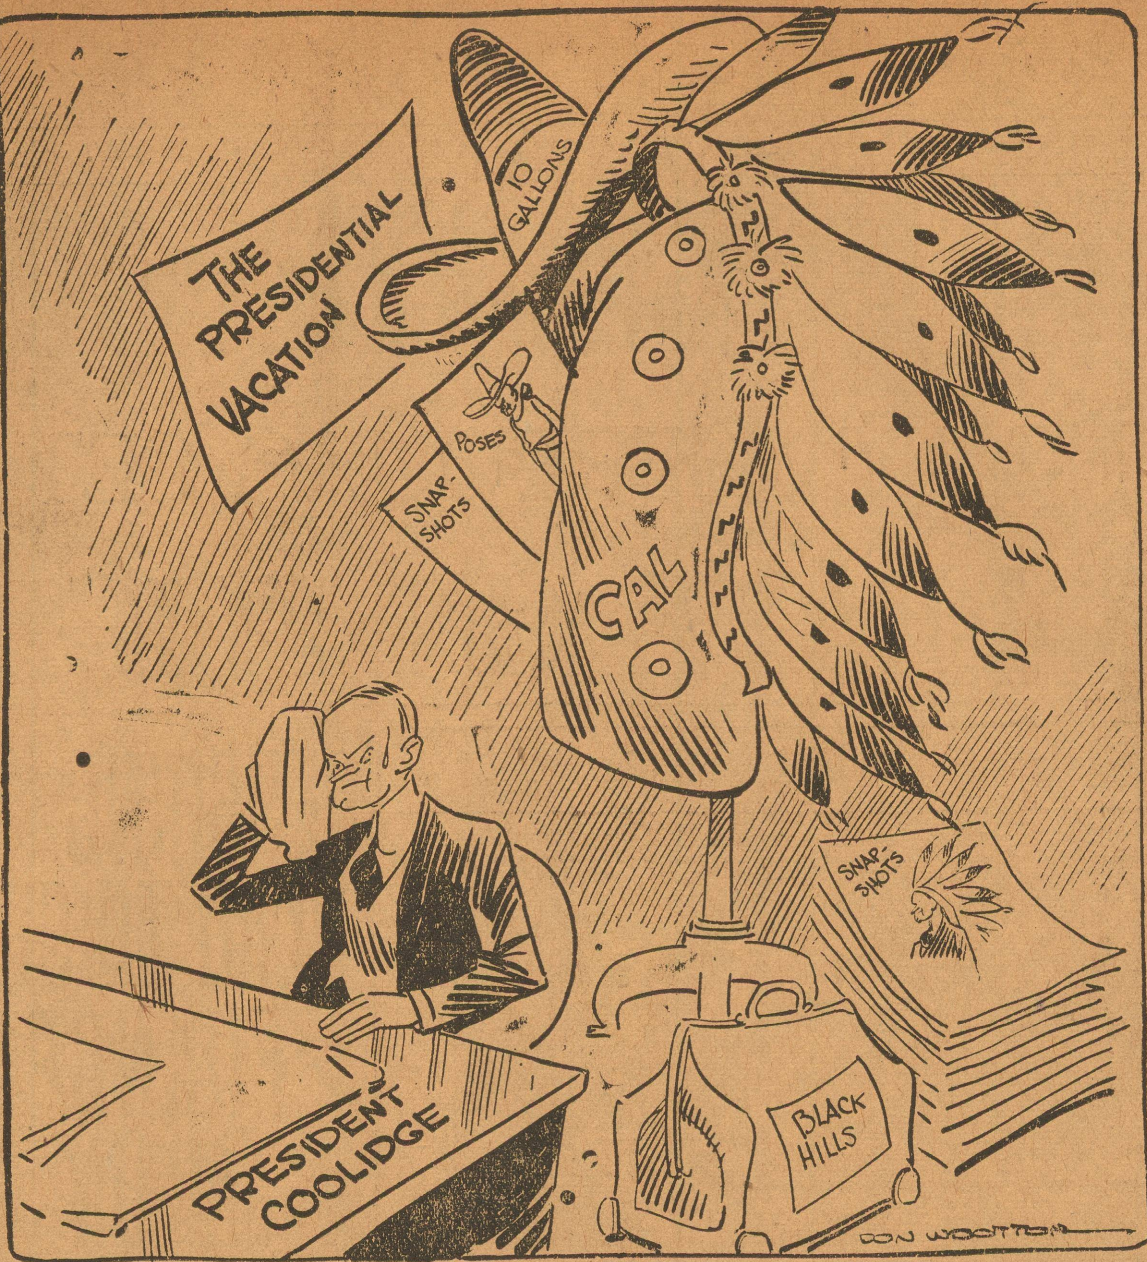

Should Queen Mary pick the pretty Lady Cambridge as the woman who will sometime succeed her to the throne, it will be necessary for parliament to alter the royal marriage act which stipulates that sons in direct succession to the throne must take a princess or ladies of the blood royal as wives. It is probable that there would be no difficulty in getting parliament to adjust the act in the event Queen Mary chose for the future Princess of Wales one so popular as Lady Cambridge.

ENGLISH DIVINE PROTESTS AGAINST "DOG COLLAR"

By United Press.
LONDON.—At least one London divine is tired to the point of distraction with the clergyman's "dog collar."

"Never again," said the Rev. A. Cumming of Adlestone, Surrey, recently, "will I go about in a state of asphyxiation with that monstrosity, the 'dog collar,' around my neck. I only put it on on Sundays for the services and off it comes the instant I get to the vicarage."

This outbreak against the stereotyped dress of the clergy is so unusual that it has caused amazement on the part of the more conservative element of the church.

GRADUATE NURSES IN RANGER MAY FORM PERMANENT CLUB.

Miss Beulah Bowles invited the graduate nurses of Ranger to meet at her home on Strawn road on Wednesday evening for a social meeting, with getting acquainted with one another as one of the main objectives of the meeting. The result was that plans were discussed towards the permanent organization of a graduate nurses' club, however, no definite action was taken in the matter. After the general discussion of the subject the hostess proposed bridge and after a number of games she served delightful refreshments. Those invited to share the evening with Miss Bowles and other graduate nurses were Meses. J. B. Big Prizes Being Offered on Farm Produce at Fair

ABILENE, Sept. 16.—For some farmer in West Texas there is a market for a part of his milk maize at the rate of $2.50 per head. This price is good for only ten heads, but there is a crying demand for that number.

Eleven others can each dispose of ten maize heads at a price varying from 10 cents up to $2.
With a total of $100 the West Texas Fair wants to get 120 heads of maize from the farmers of this section. No restrictions are made as to who offers the grain or as to where it comes from.

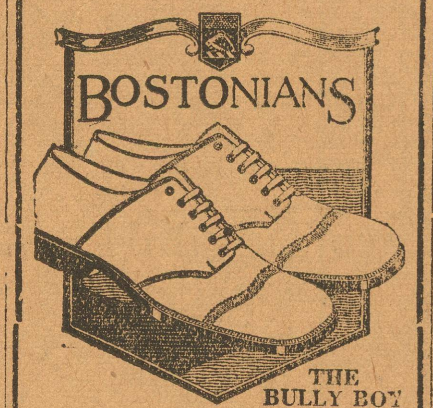

This unusual offer is being made as a part of the agricultural department of the West Texas Fair. In order to stimulate interest in a better quality of grain sorghum for West Texas the sum of $100 has been set aside to be divided into twelve prizes. These premiums to be awarded for the best twelve exhibits each of ten heads of maize, ranging downward from $25 for the first; $20 for second, $10 for third, $9 for fourth and dropping one dollar for each lower award. These premiums are expected to bring the best assortment of maize ever collected.

Any person may make as many separate entries in this contest as they desire, but according to the rules of the fair that department, as printed in the catalog only one award will be made to an individual.

Entries may be mailed, expressed or entered in person not later than 12 o'clock, September 26. No exhibits will be returned and transportation to the fair must be prepaid. Either white or red maize can be shown and the decision of the judges will be final.

Gripings By GUS

We have often re-iterated that griping gets results, but please do not get the idea that we are taking any credit whatsoever for them for without the hearty cooperation of the dear readers we would be as helpless as a hog on ice.

For instance, in the matter of the Eastland hill road. We griped. The road has been fixed. But we didn't fix it. Hall Walker schemed around somehow and got it fixed and nobody passed the donation sheet around to the merchants for the money, either, which was expected by many of them.

At the instance of several of the more or less influential citizens, we spoke of the traffic tie-up at the railroad crossing. It looked for a couple of days like they were fixing to take up the railroad on account of it but it really developed that they were only putting new boards down over the crossing and they have even gone so far as to fix the one on East Main street.

The T. P. is certainly doing their part in helping get Ranger ready to present a good appearance for the big Home Coming Oil Jubilee. They are reforesting all crossings, cutting the weeds on plenty of acres of property that is producing them no revenue whatever and are painting the passenger station and their part of Ranger will soon be ready.

But we have digressed miles from what we started in to say about gripes getting results. That was that the usual array of birds were roosting in the grandstand at Lillard Field yesterday afternoon and were commenting on things in general.

Saunders Gregg has agreed to bring along a piece of lighted punk for us to light our cigarettes from and, for a wonder, Morris Leveille had both cigarettes and matches. Bill McDonald was there with that great relaxed feeling of satisfaction that follows a worth while task well done. He had moved the water hydrant from the side lines. He didn't say and we didn't ask but the general consensus of opinion was that he had placed them wrong in the first place with the thought in mind of getting paid for moving them later on.

Jack Mooney said he thought it would make a fitting ceremony if the mayor would present us with a handsome well-filled combination set consisting of a cigarette case and a pocket lighter. C. E. Shields offered to write the speech for the mayor. Blackmon was there too, but nobody offered to furnish the set so we guess the deal fell through for lack of public spirit.

Well, if you'll excuse us, we'll start to begin to commence to arrange to get ready to go to the football game.

Eastland Revival Services Getting Large Attendance

The Methodist revival, conducted by Rev. Lynn Squires, "the Kentucky wonder," is drawing good crowds nightly. The auditorium at the Methodist church is packed and much interest is being manifested in the messages delivered by the evangelist. Thursday night's crowd was the biggest weekly night gathering that has been held, the auditorium being filled.

Tonight Rev. Mr. Squires will discuss "The Great Arbitration Case," which is one of his best lectures. There will be services Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and Saturday night at 7:45. Sunday he will occupy the pulpit and at 3:30 o'clock he will deliver his sermon, "Problem of Democracy," which is of special interest to Eastland people. Sunday night at the usual hour he will take as his subject, "Finding the Cross."

There will be no morning service Monday but there will be night service as usual, Rev. Mr. Squires said this morning.

BOY SCOUT MANEUVERS WILL BE FEATURE CENTRAL TEXAS FAIR

One of the interesting features of the Central West Texas Fair to be held in Eastland in the downtown section, Sept. 22-24, will be the Boy Scout maneuvers, which will take place from 10 o'clock a. m. to 12 o'clock noon, Saturday, the last day of the fair. The program will be in the nature of a contest and will be under the direction of Guy N. Quirl, scout executive.

In Eastland county there are 12 Boy Scout troops, consisting of four patrols to the troop, making a total of 48 patrols. Only one patrol out of each troop, however, will be permitted to enter the contest, therefore there will be only 12 patrols seen in the maneuvers.

According to Scout Executive Quirl the patrols will form at the end of the pavement on East Commerce street, which will be roped off in order that no cars may enter on the street and interfere, and march to and around the square. Judges stationed along the route will judge the contest, there being prizes offered by the Eastland Chamber of Commerce for first and second place winners in this contest.

In addition to the troop contest there will be patrol stunts, each patrol selecting its own stunt, and individual stunts, in which any scout may enter. The individual stunt will be fire building without fire. The patrol stunt may be any stunt pertaining to scouting where eight boys take part.

Following are the prizes which the Eastland Chamber of Commerce is offering the winners in the Boy Scout contest:

For the troop winning out in inspection and drill will be awarded a parade troop flag. Sixty points will be given for inspection and 40 for drill.

Second prize for the above contest will be a troop bugle.

For the best stunt in scouting where eight boys participate will be given a cook kit that will take care of eight scouts. Get your patrol together and work up a stunt pertaining to scouting and all of your patrol taking part.

Second prize for the above contest will be a signaling set.

For the scout making a fire by flint and steel and constructing a fire will be given a hunting case with illuminous dial.

Come to the scout office and get particulars on this stunt.

Second prize for the above will be a signaling pocket flashlight with blue, white and green globes.

More than 100 planes are to take part in the National Air Derby from New York to Suokane, September 19-31. The first prize in this contest is $10,000, and the second, $5,000. Three other prizes totaling $3,500 are offered for third, fourth and fifth places.

Penney Reports Big Increase In August Sales

The J. C. Penney company reports its gross sales for August, 1927 as $11,006,769.30.

This is an increase of $2,921,781.83 over the gross sales for the same period for 1926 which were reported as $8,084,987.47 and a reported increase of 36.14 per cent.

The cumulative gross sales for the last eight months are reported as $82,208,835.44, a gain of $19,723,986.44 or 31.57 per cent over the gross sales for the same period of last year which were $62,484,849.

While the J. C. Penney company has reported constantly expanding sales throughout the year as compared with figures for the same period of last year, the August increase is at a rate of more than 5 per cent in excess of the rate of increase for the year to date.

The J. C. Penney company stands second among all chain store systems in volume of sales and has held this position since April.

TAKES THE "STATIC" OUT OF BUYING

There's a peculiar bug sweeping over the world today that has already sunk its teeth into millions.

Its name is Radio.

No one is immune. If it hasn't bitten you yet, your time will come. For some months you will lie absolutely helpless in its power. You may later recover from its effects sufficiently to go about your daily tasks and attend to your social duties, but you will never fully recover.

The experience is indescribably delightful and the pleasure of never-ending—if—There's quite an "if" in radio.

We repeat, the pleasure is never-ending, if you get a good radio receiver and good accessories.

And you overcome the "if" by careful reading of radio advertising. Like everything else, good radio sets and accessories are the advertised ones. It doesn't pay to advertise the worthless.

Advertising will help you in radio as it helps you in selecting intrinsic value in everything else. You can rest assured that anything which is continuously advertised, whether it be a radio set or a can of asparagus, has stood the test.

Radio works best in the dark—but there's no need to buy in the dark.

LET THE LIGHT OF ADVERTISING SHOW YOU THE RIGHT ROAD TO RADIO SATISFACTION. READ ADVERTISING REGULARLY

Huggins Has Big Machine And Is Holding On To It

By BILLY EVANS.
What a lot of piffle this talk about the New York Yankees trading some of their best players in order to equalize the playing strength of the American league.

For 20 years the New York Americans annually waged a losing battle for honors in the American league, a goodly portion of the time finishing in the second division.

During those years the New York Giants were meeting with unusual success and the National league enjoyed a commanding prestige with the followers of baseball in Gotham.

It was a well known fact that strong representation in New York by the American league would be a fine thing for the organization as a whole, particularly in a financial way. In the biggest city in its circuit the American league had only an ordinary team that didn't draw any record-breaking crowds as did the Giants.

At various times it was hinted, always erroneously, that other clubs in the American league would turn over some of their reserve strength in an effort to bolster the New York Americans.

Yanks Not to Blame.
With a very few exceptions, any of the players ever traded over to the Yankees by other clubs was material that just couldn't be used.

Twenty years of waiting and plugging was a long time but in 1921 the efforts of the Yankee officials were rewarded with a pennant. Three of them have followed since, while another is just a few weeks away.

True, the New York club does to a certain extent outclass the rest of the field in the American league, but the Yank management can't be blamed for that. The responsibility rests with the other seven clubs, including magnates, managers and players.

New York has built up a machine that should travel in high speed for several years more. When the club slipped in 1925, Manager Huggins saw the handwriting and added new material that came through.

Such players as Combs, Gehrig, Lazzari, Koenig, Moore, Pigras and others have been developed by a good scouting system and proper coaching. Try to get any of them from the genial Colonel Ruppert and the wise Miller Huggins.

Have Powerful Club.
It is a baseball proverb that in order to win pennants you must knock off the closest contenders.

The Yankees, in the American race the club made in the American league has been able to do that very thing in a most convincing manner. So-called crucial series have been soft for Huggins & Co.

During the final stages of the race Washington got into a position where the players believed they offered a threat. When the two clubs met, New York won three out of four games and started Washington on a slump that didn't end until that club had lost 12 straight.

A little later, Detroit, with 13 straight victories to its credit, met New York in a three-game series. The Tigers expected to continue at the expense of the Yanks, make their second place berth more certain and retain a stronger mathematical chance for the pennant.

New York won all three games and started the Tigers on the road to ruin, Detroit suffering eight straight defeats before winning a ball game.

The Yankees certainly seem to have "it," which in baseball means "power," batting strength that makes for runs.

Baylor Squad Has Fighting Spirit, Needs Good Kicker

WACO, Sept. 16.—A question mark has been left by the football critics in considering the potential strength of the Baylor football aggregation this fall.

A tragedy at Round Rock last season in which the lives of several of the school's most promising athletes were ground out still holds its pallor over the local gridiron.

Most of the squad will be green material, but the Bruins have a fighting spirit that is respected throughout the conference. Several of the new faces appearing at practice sessions this week look promising, according to Coach Morley Jennings, and the herculean task performed by Baylor in defeating a splendid Texas U. team one week and a week later winning from a husky Texas Aggie team is still remembered.

Coach Jennings went on a fishing trip with Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, last month and much of their conversation was about football. Jennings is talking but little about his prospects but some of Rockne's theories may appear on the local gridiron this season.

The Bears play two non-conference games before meeting their first Southwestern conference opponent, Arkansas, and these two preliminary tilts may give Jennings and his able assistant, Jim Crow, opportunity to develop a satisfactory combination from the 40 candidates attending practice sessions this week. According to Jennings, one of his greatest needs at the outset is a capable punter and place kicker.

The Baylor schedule includes conference frays with Arkansas, T. C. U. Texas S. M. U. and Rice. The latter four games come in a row at the end of the season. The complete schedule follows:

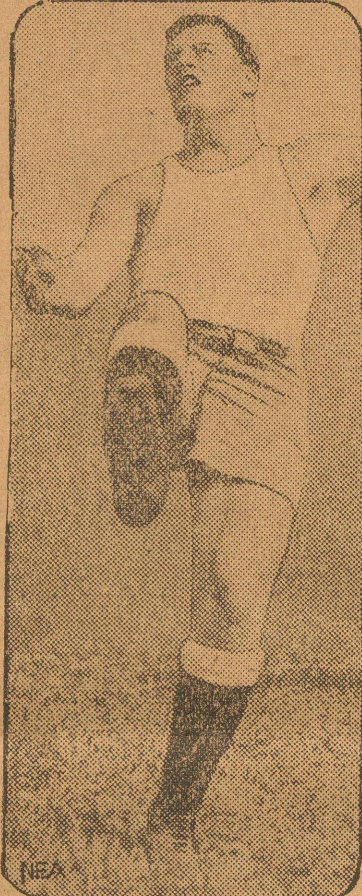

Sept. 24.—Southwestern at Waco.
Sept. 30.—Trinity at Waxahachie.
Oct. 8.—Arkansas at Fayetteville.
Oct. 15.—St. Edwards at Waco.
Oct. 22.—Centenary at Waco.
Oct. 29.—T. C. U. at Waco.
Nov. 5.—Texas at Austin.
Nov. 12.—S. M. U. at Dallas.
Nov. 24.—Rice at Houston.

RANGER BANKERS GOING TO RISING STAR MEETING

The Eastland County Bankers association, which will meet tonight at Rising Star, will be represented by seven men from the Citizens State Bank of Ranger. The party will include W. W. Housewright, R. L. Hamrick, L. M. Baze, Hall Walker, E. E. Harkrider, Clyde Funk, and W. C. Greager.

The Rising Star members will serve dinner to the visiting members at 7:30 o'clock.

Penn's Punter

Pep Squad Swings Into Action For Opening Battle

Rupert Murphy, stepping along in front of the Ranger High school band last night, as the band and the pep squad descended on Ranger for the first time this year, took possession of the main thoroughfare for a short while. It was the opening gun in the football season and Murphy looked like a young Sousa as he accomplished the hitherto unaccomplished, that is, the band playing music and marching at the same time.

The long line of Maroon and White formed at the High school and marched down Marston to Main, stopped at the various street intersections, and did some peppy stunts, and played some peppy numbers. As the hands of the pep squad clapped out the tunes their voices carried, the hundreds of bystanders joined in and the result was a pean of pep, loud enough to make everybody who was not already in town, hurry down.

Miss Mattie G. Roberts, leader of last year's pep squad, as well as of this year's, and Miss Wilma Simer, the other sponsor of the squad, were not the only teachers joining in as Dean Von Rader stood on the sidewalk a minute or two, caught the contagion and joined the ranks of Maroon and White.

Last year the members of the pep squad did some valiant work. They were in several cases the soldiers, who not in the firing line, yet were soldiers just the same, singing "Hold that line" when their eyes were filled with tears, when some heavier line would sweep the fighting Bulldogs almost off their feet. They carried on.

This year, augmented by quite a few new voices, they are prepared to do or die for their team, as they demonstrated last night in their initial effort of the season.

They'll be marching with the band this afternoon and be right on the job during the game.

The Aero Club of Astoria, N. Y., has a president, secretary, well-equipped clubrooms, and 65 members, but no airplane. A drive has been started to get funds for the purchase of a plane.

RANDALL VS. MARTIN
By DOC REID

One hundred and six years ago today, marked the successful comeback effort of Jack Randall, middleweight champion of England, who after an absence from the ring of nearly three years, returned to defend his laurels against Jack Martin, claimant of the title, whom he knocked out after one eight minute round of furious fighting at Grinstead, near Manchester, England, in the presence of 30,000 spectators. Close to a million dollars was wagered on the result of the conflict.

It happened that Martin was his last opponent upon the occasion of his retirement from the ring three years previous, when he defeated the challenger in one hour of a hard fought battle before about 20,000 persons. Martin showed such improvement in all of his bouts after the retirement of Randall however, that the latter was induced to re-enter the ring in defense of the title. After the second affair with Martin, he slid back into retirement and seven years later died from dissipation.

Fortune Hunters Warned Against Going To Paris

By JOHN O'BRIEN,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS—Adventure and the search for the rainbow's end will ever have an irresistible attraction for millions of youthful spirits of every country and it is useless trying to dissuade them. But there is one warning that might possibly be heeded by the adventurous boys of the United States who don't care whether they go in hope of making fortunes. That is: "Don't make Paris the goal of your journey."
In the course of one month recently the American Aid society, doing the very best it can on very limited resources, sent 24 stranded Americans back home, sent seven others to the care of friends and gave cash to another 24, besides spending about $250 in cable messages to relatives. After this was done there were still nearly 100 cases awaiting relief.
Among these are 21 men in perfect physical trim, educated and willing to work but unable to find employment, five old men, five deserted wives, two stranded seamen and seven college boys. It is all very well to say: "Oh, I'll get along somehow as long as I can pay my wage over to Paris." France is one of the most difficult countries for a man to get work in unless he can speak the language or know some of the special French trades.

One of the best bartenders that San Francisco ever saw in the old days wandered around Paris for two years before he got a job. When you consider that "American drinks" are all the fashion in Paris since the war that might serve as an eye-opener. There are 50,000 Russians here, ready and capable of doing anything from driving a taxicab to presiding at an official reception and all are dependent for a meal on the charity of their fellow exiles in better circumstances.

When the boy from Oshkosh or Kalamazoo tried his luck by jumping a freight and heading for New York he had at least the advantage if he ever struck Broadway of being able to talk to the first chance acquaintance with the certainty of being understood. Nobody can understand what the stranded American here is trying to say and even if they did they would say: "He can't be a real American because no American ever lacks money."

Every time a liner sails from Havre or Cherbourg the port authorities are on the watch for stowaways—not foreigners but Americans who haven't the price of the ticket home—and the consuls are forced to turn away scores who cherished the fond illusion that the United States is obliged to send indigent citizens back to their home towns. The consulates have no funds for that purpose and even if the applicants were able to work their way home on a freighter the regulations forbid it.
No, says the relief association, unless you have a round trip ticket or the assurance of work in France don't try your luck here.

Channel Swimmer Has Easy Task To Young Icelander

By BALDUR SVEINSSON,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
REYKJAVIK, Iceland—An endurance test, not only equalling the deeds of the ancient Norsemen, but one far superior to that of modern channel swimmers, was recently accomplished by a young resident of Iceland.

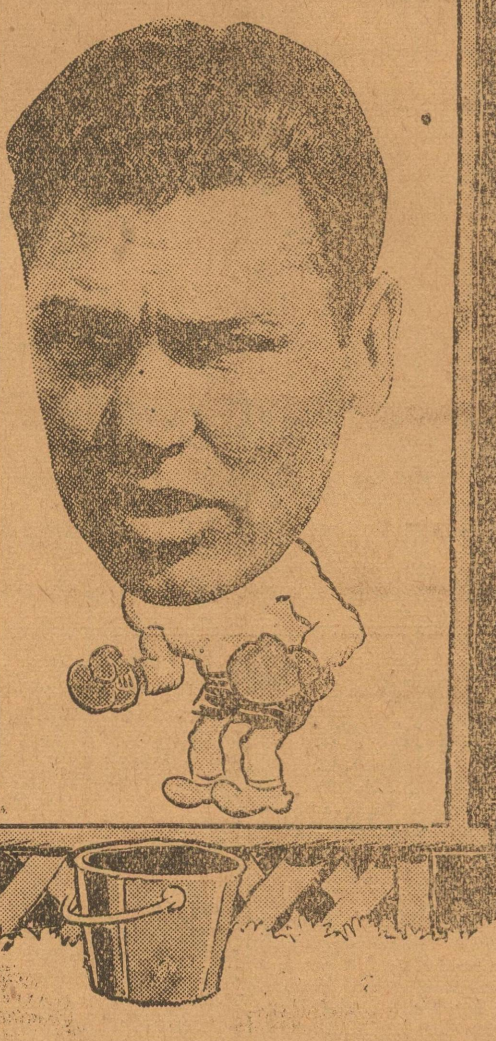

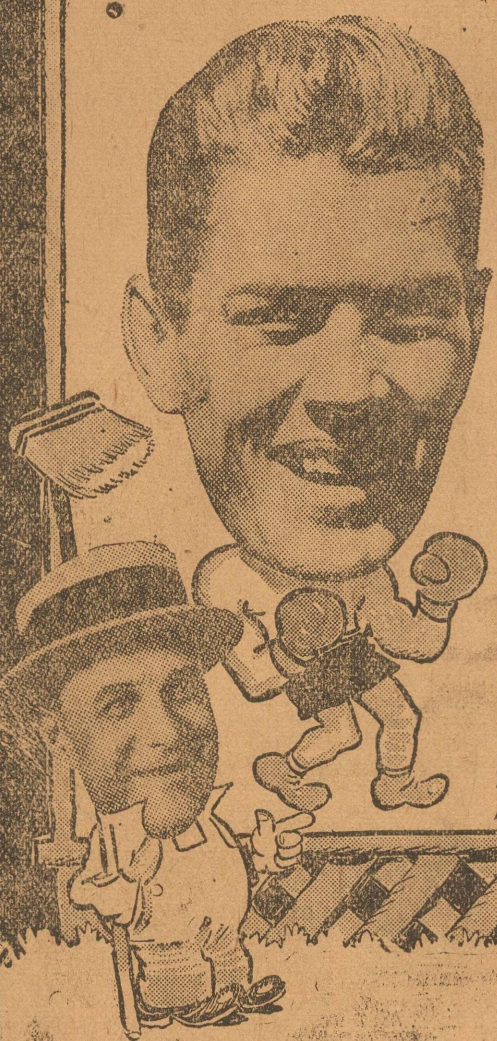

After battling the tides and the Skaga firth off the north coast since fridity of the Arctic waters for nearly four and three-quarter hours, Erlingur Palsoon succeeded in swimming from the island of Drangey to the mainland of Iceland, a distance of more than four miles, in water far colder than the English channel is in mid-winter.
Palsoon, a robust Icelander, 32 years old, is the first man ever to accomplish the swim in the famous his life was forced to make his abode on the desolate island of Drangey. It is recounted that one cold night in 1030 his fire went out, owing to his carelessness and as there were no matches or dry wood with which to rekindle it, he was forced to go to one of the isolated farms on the mainland for fresh sparks with which to start his fire. Having no boat, he dove into the icy waters of the Skaga and swam to the mainland where he secured the sparks and was returned to his retreat by a local farmer in a boat.

Several attempts have been made, during the 900 years which have passed since Grettir accomplished the feat, to repeat his deed, but all swimmers have been forced to give up somewhere in the channel due to the temperature of the water.
Actually Drangey is only 4.22 miles from the mainland, but due to the tides, Palsoon was forced to swim a total of 4.65 miles. Palsoon was accompanied by a boat during his swim, but refused to take nourishment during it, contending that Grettir had no boat with him and was unable to take food if he had so desired.
It is noteworthy that there are

Biblical Expert Has New Life Of John The Baptist

By United Press.

LONDON.—New Biblical discoveries, including a new Jeremiah Apocryphon, a new Life of John the Baptist and some uncanonical Psalms have been made by Dr. Rendel Harris, the well known Biblical expert.

Dr. Harris has been working in association with A. Mingana of the Rylands library at Manchester, in an intensive study of early Christian documents in Syriac. All of the documents which were collected by Dr. Mingana will be preserved in the Rylands library. The present translations, which will be published shortly, are accompanied by facsimile reproductions of the texts.

Among the manuscripts which Dr. Mingana collected and translated with Dr. Harris, were two Arabic translations of the works of Serapion. Apparently Serapion wrote in Greek, but the Greek texts have long since been lost. The most interesting of the Serapion finds was his biography of the life of John the Baptist which he elaborates from the canonical Gospels, but he tells more of John's childhood.

It was a trouble one for not long after his birth, Herod, alarmed by the visit of the Wise Men, began a systematic murder of male children in Bethlehem.

"And Elizabeth," the translation shows, "feared that her child might be killed like them, and she took him immediately to Zacharias in the temple and she said to him, 'My Lord, let us go with our son John to some other country in order to save him from Herod the Unbeliever.' But Zacharias answered and said to her, 'I must not leave the service of the temple of the Lord to go to a foreign land the inhabitants of which worship idols.' And she said unto him, 'What should I do in order to save my infant child?' And the old man answered and said unto her, 'Arise and go to the wilderness of Ain Karim and by the will of God you will be able to save your child.'

"Now when Zacharias had said good-bye to Elizabeth and his son John, he had blessed him and made him a priest and afterwards delivered him to his mother. Then she took the child and went into the wilderness in which no soul lived."

Zacharias was slain by Herod's soldiers, but John wandered in the desert with his mother, where

"God prepared for him locusts and wild honey as food in accordance with what his mother was told about him not to let any unclean food enter his mouth."

"After five years, the pious and blessed old mother Elizabeth passed away, and the holy John sat weeping over her, as he did not know how to shroud her and bury her, because on the day of her death, he was only seven years and six months old."

Of the beheading of John, the translation continues: "When the head of John was brought before Herodias the eyes of the holy John were open and his ears were hearing as in his lifetime. The adulteress spoke with her before the head as follows: 'O accursed one who was not ashamed to look at the King in the face and answer him, I shall put out your eyes with my hands and place them on a dish and I shall cut off the tongue which used to say to the King that it was unlawful for him to marry Herodias, his brother's wife. As to the hair of your head and your beard, I shall pluck it out and place it under the feet of my bedstead.' But the head of the blessed John let the locks of its hair rise from the dish and it flew to the middle of the convival room before the King and his high officials. In that very moment the roof of the house was opened and the head of John flew into the air."

Eastland County Boy Scouts Will See Lindbergh

Every Boy Scout in Eastland county is to have the opportunity to go to Abilene to see Lindbergh if plans under way materialize, according to G. N. Quirl, Eastland county scout executive.

The only requirement is that every scout who wants to go shall appear in uniform. Transportation will be provided for as a number of men are donating their personal cars and trucks to carry the boys.

The boys will be in Abilene for the opening day of the Abilene fair which is the day that Lindbergh is honored by a reception in that city. The fair opens Monday, September 26.

The West Texas Coaches originally offered to furnish free transportation for the scouts but their new busses will not arrive until sometime in October.

No definite report has been received by Quirl in regard to entertainment being provided by Abilene but in all probability there will be a scout parade. Each scout is requested to bring enough money along to buy his lunch with as it is not known whether lunch will be furnished the troops or not. However, this is probable.

An accurate estimate of the number of scouts that will attend the fair cannot be given at this time as all have not registered. Scout Executive Quirl hopes that a large majority of the 12 troops will be able to make the trip.

Scout executive Quirl announces a meeting of all scout masters and assistants for Wednesday night at the scout office in Eastland.

Business will be transacted and plans for the Abilene trip will be discussed as will other plans for the year.

There are 17 scoutmasters and assistants in Eastland county.

State Will Take Steps Increase Fish on Coast

By United Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 16.—Scientific methods to increase the fish supply on the Texas coast are being inaugurated by the state game, fish and oyster department and the state board of health.

A glance at the map will show the large body of shallow water known as Laguna Madre. In portions of this body the water has become doubly as salty as the water of the Gulf of Mexico. It has also become so low in oxygen that it will not support life.

Graphs made by the department show a sharply rising curve of salinity as the shore is approached and a decreasing curve marking the oxygen content. Temperature tests show that even in early morning the water retains a temperature of 90 degrees.

The game and fish department plans to combat this by dredging channels into Laguna Madre through which the less saline, and fully oxygenated water of the gulf will flow.

The health department is working on a different plan. Dr. Livingstone Anderson is testing the possibility of planting algae in the saline water which will increase the oxygen. He is confident that a number of varieties of fish will live in the highly saline water. The one best adapted to the conditions is being sought. The dredging of channels will be

Who Owns Her?

This three-masted schooner was picked up at sea off the Mexican coast by a passing ship. Aboard were two men who professed to know nothing about the ship or where they got there. The boat was towed to Long Beach (Calif.) harbor and the men disappeared. No one has claimed the strange ship and she is to be sold to satisfy libels for wharfage charges.

without cost to the state. The shell obtained by dredging is sold to the state in many places and finds ready demand. The operations required to produce the necessary channels might not make it feasible to sell the shell, but it is expected that contractors can be found who would be willing to make the channels in order to get the shell free.

Youth's Greatest Charm for Women

The greatest charm of womanhood is that youthful vivaciousness and buoyancy of spirit which comes with good health; and there is no reason nowadays why every girl or woman shouldn't have this charm.

Thousands of them who found themselves growing weak and listless are now using St. Joseph's G. F. P. to build them up and strengthen them.

How well satisfied these girls are with this vegetable compound is best shown by the words of Miss Fondtella Early, which are typical of those of girls and women everywhere who are using St. Joseph's G. F. P.

Miss Early, who lives at 1600 Hauger St., Little Rock, Ark., says, "Now I'm on my seventh bottle of G. F. P. I feel just wonderful and never miss a day from school. I am always going and having a good time. I want every girl to know about this medicine."

Player of Punch Boards Has Only Slight Chance

By United Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—What chance has the man who plays the punchboards and various chance devices that are exhibited?

Professional publications advertising the devices gave this information to a United Press correspondent.

A "bullet board" advertised that it takes in $50 and pays out $25 in merchandise. The $25 worth of merchandise is split up into 100 rewards. A thousand people play before the whole board with its 100 winners is used.

A "pellet board" is advertised to take in $30 and pay out $17.50 in trade. An attendant is unnecessary, according to the advertisement.

Here's the spiel for a keyless lock to be sold in fair crowds: "You can shout 'free!' at the top of your voice and that is what the crowd likes to hear. You can back up your statement by passing a few around the crowd and let them try to open them. It is the strongest demonstration possible, and then it is you need no 'shills'—the crowd works for you."

Another device is advertised as "the only absolutely legitimate machine that gets the money." Mexican jumping beans are supplied at $3 a hundred. Profits on other fair devices are indicated by these wholesalers quotations: Balloons from $3.50 to $7 a gross;

"Lucky Lindy" rings at $10 a gross. The "Lindy" catchword is used for pillows and all sort of novelties. The "flying birds" so popular with the carnival peddlers, strangely enough, have not been named for the colonel.

An aerial ambulance is maintained in Lapland for the inhabitants in Northern Sweden. From the frozen wastes it has made many rescues, carrying patients to the military hospital at Boden.

FELT DULL, DIZZY Georgia Man Tells How He Found Relief for Many Complaints by Using An Old Home Remedy.

Athens, Ga.—"I have been married 51 years, and am the father of ten children," says Mr. J. C. E. Weatherford, R. F. D. "A," this city. "About the best home remedy I have ever found is Black-Draught. I can't remember when we haven't used it in the family, giving it to the children for colds and minor ills where a laxative is needed."

"We must have used Black-Draught for 40 years, anyway, and in that time we have tried it for many complaints. I would have felt dull, stupid feeling, and my head would ache and when I would lean over, I would get dizzy. I found that a couple of doses of Black-Draught would relieve this. I used to have gas on my stomach, and would spit up grease. Black-Draught relieved this."

"It is just an all-round good medicine. Now that I am 72 years old, I have to take a laxative, and Black-Draught acts easy and gives me satisfaction."

Plagiarism?

Valeska Suratt, widely popular actress, above in nurse's uniform, has sued Cecil B. de Mille, the movie director (below) and others for $1,000,000. It is her allegation that the photoplay, "The King of Kings" is a plagiarized version of "Mary Magdalene," a scenario she owns.

as well as a boy.

Accordingly, Miss Zubaly has just returned from a 10,000 mile hobo trip—a trip where in she dressed as a man, mingled with tramps of all varieties, sizes and degrees of raggedness, rode the brake beams and the blind baggage, ate stew out of a tin can and bummed her way completely across the continent twice.

Glad to Get Back. And, having had this taste of adventure she is perfectly satisfied to return to her home and spend six days out of every seven clicking the keys of her typewriter at the old job.

Miss Zubaly had always wanted to travel. But a stenographer's salary doesn't permit wandering so very far afield. So she decided to ride free.

Dressed in man's clothing, her closely bobbed hair tucked under a rough cap, she was off. Seventeen days later she was in Los Angeles, all there she had an adventure not on the schedule. She was hit by an auto and suffered a broken arm. For nearly a month she was in a hospital recovering. Then, the arm sound again, she began considering where she would go next.

"I met a girl there by the name of Hester Stout," she explains. "She was part Choctaw Indian. I told her how I had bummed my way west, and she got interested. She proposed that we two go from Los Angeles to Miami, Fla."

"I consented. In a day we were on our way—traveling most of the distance on the brake beams. I tell you, it is a real sensation to lie huddled dled on the rods beneath a passenger coach whizzing along at a mile a minute, with the roadbed only a few inches under you."

In 26 days the two were in Miami. They saw the sights—and headed back for Los Angeles again. This time they abjured the brake beam; in favor of empty gondola cars and box cars.

In Los Angeles they separated and Miss Zubaly headed slowly back home, traveling alone.

One she came upon a pair of honeymooning hoboes.

"When I first saw them I was scared," she says. "I was hiding in a refrigerator car waiting for the train to pull out. A few minutes before the train was due to leave, I discovered I was not alone. Nearly were two persons, apparently two men."

"Then I found one of them was a girl—the wife or the other one. I then disclosed my own identity, and we had a nice chatty time during our ride together. They told me they had been married a short time before and lacking the funds for a more conventional honeymoon trip, had decided to take a six months' cruise around the country as hoboes. They were enjoying it greatly, too."

Miss Zubaly is proud of the fact that through all her travels her sex was never discovered—except on the occasions, like the encounter with the honeymooners, when she met other girls and voluntarily "fessed up." Frequently she was at hobo camps with a score of "lights of the road," talking with them, sharing meals with them and swapping yarns with them, but never did any of them suspect that she was anything but a rather frail boy.

Lots of Girl Hoboes. Miss Zubaly says she met many other girl hoboes in disguise. "There are lots of them—especially on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad," she declares. "However, most of 'em only travel for short distances. There are hardly any transcontinental girl hoboes."

Among her varied experiences was an encounter with a policeman.

"In Topeka, Kans., I was arrested," she says. "The policeman started to take me to the nearest station house. On the way there he evidently took compassion on me and decided to let me go with a warning. Never try to fool a policeman, boy," he said. And I promised I wouldn't."

Now that Miss Zubaly is back home she is willing to stay. Her one hobo jaunt was enough.

"Hoboeing is great sport—but home is better," she admits.

When Charles E. Hughes returned to New York from a trip abroad he said he had seen nothing in President Coolidge's "I do not choose" statement which was an insurmountable barrier to the president's candidacy for re-election next year. Hughes said he himself was absolutely out of it.

EASTLAND COUNTY SCOUTS TO HAVE "NOT CONTESTS"

Frank Laurent, member of Eastland Boy Scout troop number six has on display a home made knot board at the Boy Scout headquarters office. The board consists of 48 knots all tied neatly and placed on a large board with the name of each knot under it.

The Eastland county scout executive, G. N. Quail is planning to arrange a contest whereby the scout that makes the best board by October 21 will be given five dollars.

The boards will be displayed at the Oil Jubilee in Ranger.

While liquor cannot legally be imported from France to Hollywood, there is no restriction on the bottles that once contained it, provided they are quite empty.

Due perhaps to the new American custom of refilling empty liquor bottles with re-agents of the Volstead era, there were not enough bottles of the type needed for use in "Hard-Boiled Haggerty" in which Milton Sills is starring.

As a result the entire empty bottle and keg stock of a large French cafe has been imported by the First National studios.

Raffaele is still director of the Mingus band and may be chosen director of the Ranger band, to fill the vacancy made by the sudden departure of Leo Underwood to Wichita Falls to take charge of a band there.

Oil Belt Dokeys Form Chapter At Breckenridge

BRECKENRIDGE, Sept. 16.—At a recent meeting at the local K. of D. Hall, the Oil Belt Crescent of Azotus Temple 175 was organized and officers elected. This Crescent is a branch of Azotus Temple at Fort Worth. The branch headquarters was formerly at Eastland, but was recently transferred here. The local Dokey chapter controls a district including Eastland, Cisco, Ranger, Gorman, Cross Plains, Hamlin, Mingus, Olden, Stephenville, Strawn and Thurbur.

There are 100 Dokeys in the local Knights of Pythias lodge, this number being necessary in order to secure the Crescent. Local work can now be put on by the Crescent, instead of having a team come out from Fort Worth as heretofore.

The following officers were elected at the meeting: Royal Vizer, A. M. Smith; Grand Emir, Nelson H. Clark; Sheik, I. T. Woodall; Mahedi, T. L. Carlisle; secretary, D. L. Tobolski; treasurer, Raymond McKay; Satrap, Jack Steinberg; Sahib, M. C. Ennis.

COLUMBUS LIGHT MAY BE AERIAL BEACON FOR NEW TRAIL BLAZERS

By HARRY W. FRANTZ (United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The Faro de Colon or Columbus Light, projected for erection at Santo Domingo as an imperishable memorial to the great ocean navigator, may eventually find its chief usefulness as an aerial beacon for aviators.

Definite plans for construction of the light are expected to take form soon, and some of the most distinguished architects of American countries already are showing interest. Discussion here indicates that some of the architectural projects will propose an aviation field in connection with the beacon tower.

Belief that there will be an extraordinary expansion of inter-American air routes in the next decade accounts for the present consideration of possible utilitarian as well as sentimental value to the light. Enthusiasts for the Columbus Memorial project have for some time regretted the fact that its rays would not be visible from the seamer path between Panama and Europe unless a tower of impossible height were erected to offset the curvature of the earth. It is pointed out, however, that from airplanes the light will be visible from vastly greater distances and its potential usefulness is thereby greatly enhanced.

Recently there was demonstrated at Charlottesville, Va., an improved searchlight, the powerful rays of which could be seen at a distance of 200 miles. Such a light, or one based on the neon-gas principle will be kept in mind by architects. It is conceivable that the Columbus light may impart its rays to a larger area of the earth's surface than any other light in history. One suggestion for the light, believed likely to be accepted, is that its rays flash intermittently the dots and dashes of the Morse code for "C-O-L-O-N."

Financing of the memorial light, in which all of the American republics are to participate, is reported now to be in an advanced stage, with success assured and the next step will be an architectural contest for designs. This will be a matter of extraordinary professional interest, as there will undoubtedly be rivalry between proponents of steel and stone construction.

Albert Kelsey of Philadelphia, members of the firm which designed the Pan-American Union building—often called the "Taj Mahal" of Washington" because of its exceptional grace and beauty—recently went to Santo Domingo. It is understood that his visit is in connection with the preliminary arrangements for the architectural competition.

WIDOW OF SUN BOLTS PARTY OF HUSBAND

She Deserts Government Supposed To Further Her Husbands Ideals.

By United Press.
HANKOW.—Madame Sun Yat-sen, widow of the man whom Chinese nationalism venerates as its great apostle, has withdrawn from the Hankow Kuomintang government which professes to be furthering his ideals. She withdraws in protest, not against radicalism, but against reaction public she says in part:

"We have reached a point where definitions are necessary, and where some members of the party executive are so defining the principles and policies of Doctor Sun Yat-sen, our first president, that they seem to me to do violence to Doctor Sun Yat-sen's ideals and ideals. Feeling thus, I must dissociate myself from active participation in the carrying out of these new policies of the party."

Probing the nature of revolution, Madame Sun continues: "In last analysis all revolution must be social revolution, based upon fundamental changes in society; otherwise it is not revolution, but merely change of government."

"To guide us in the Chinese revolution, Doctor Sun has given us his three principles and his three policies. It is the third principle, that of livelihood of the people, that is at stake at present. This third principle was held by Doctor Sun to be the basis of our revolution. In this principle we find his analysis of social values, and the place of the labor and peasant classes defined. These classes become the bases of our strength in our struggle to overthrow imperialism, cancel unequal treaties that enslave us, and effectively unify the country. They are the new pillars for building a new China, a free China. Without their support, the Kuomintang as a revolutionary party becomes weak, chaotic, and illogical in its social platform; without their support, political issues are vague. If we adopt any policy that weakens these supports, we shake the very foundations of our party, betray the masses, and are falsely loyal to our leader."

Commenting on the statement that policies must be changed to fit the needs of the times, Madame Sun says that the suggested solutions for differences within the party are "part of a policy which would alienate and suppress the classes upon which our strength largely depends and for which the revolution must be fought."

Admitting that mistakes have been made, Madame Sun finds the proposed corrections more serious than the mistakes. "Some of us are unwilling to face the fact," she says, "that we are at least as responsible for many of these mistakes as those whom we would now hold completely at fault. We have helped make them. We must correct them."

"More over for revolutionary mistakes, revolutionary solutions must be found. We must not betray the people. We have built up in them a great hope. They have placed in us a great faith. To that faith we owe our final allegiance."

Doctor Sun came from the people. He told me a great deal about his early days. He came from the peasantry. His father was a farmer, and the people in his district were farmers.

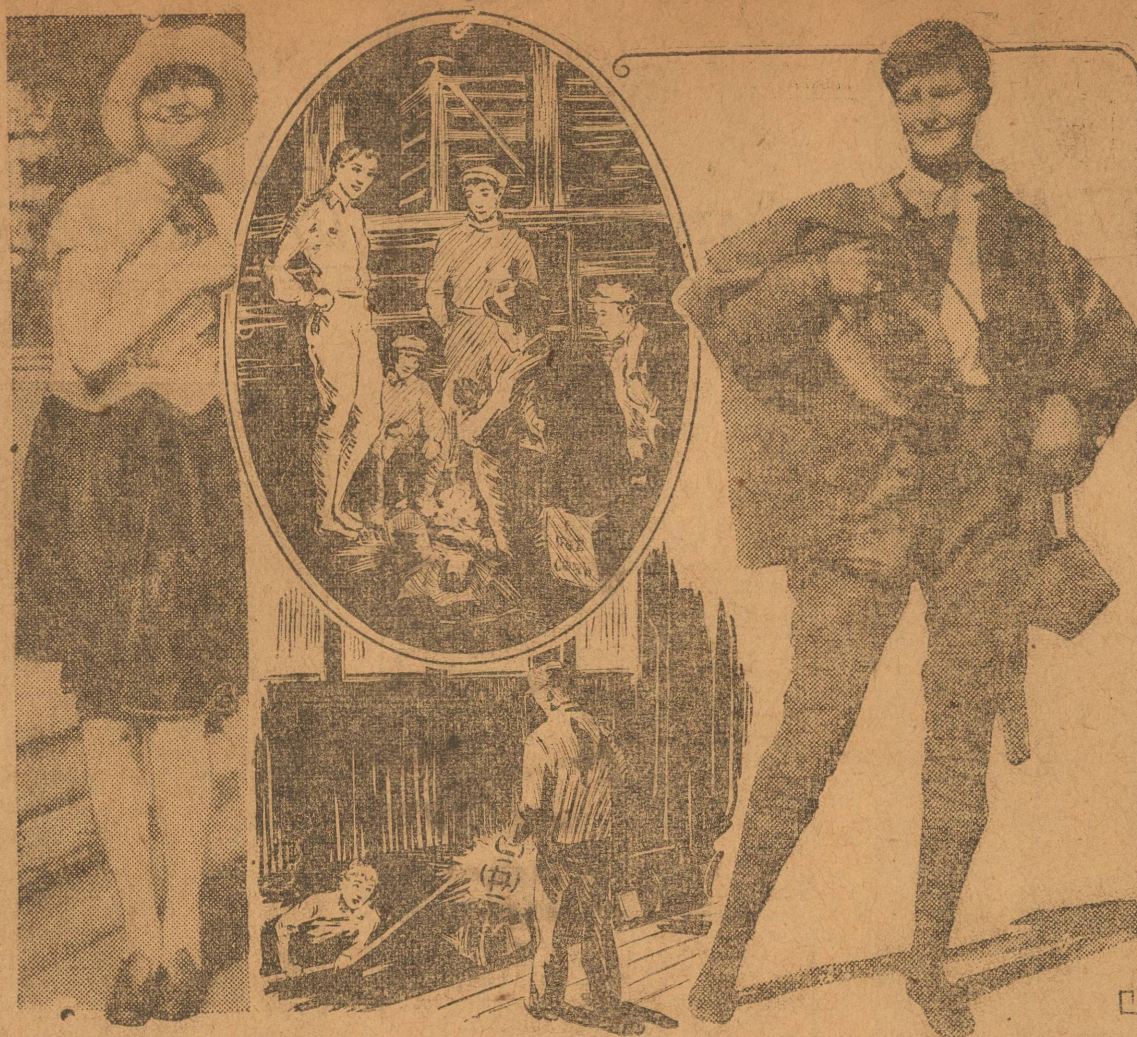

"Dr. Sun was poor. Not until he was 15 years old did he have shoes for his feet, and he lived in hilly regions where it is not easy to be a barefoot boy. His family, until he and his brothers were grown, lived almost from hand to mouth, in a hut. As a child he ate the cheapest food—rice, for rice was too dear. His main nourishment was sweet potatoes. Today the lot of the Chinese peasant is even more wretched than in those days when Doctor Sun was driven by a great sense of human wrongs into a life of revolution. And today men who profess to follow his banner talk and think in terms of 'revolution' that would virtually disregard the sufferings of these millions of poverty-stricken peasants in China."

The charge that the peasant and labor movement is recent and of alien origin is false, according to Madame Sun.

The Kuomintang party, she says, is in danger of becoming a mere tool of the militarists and an "agent of oppression."

The Woolworth building in New York city, which uses 53 of its 60 stories for offices, houses more than 10,000 persons during office-hours, according to an answered question in this week's Liberty.

Tomorrow in the World of Fashion

By LUCILE BUCHANAN,
Fashion Editor of Harper's Bazaar.
(Written for United Press.)

NEW YORK.—Before you buy your autumn wardrobe, there are several emphatic "don'ts" I would like to go on record as having said.

Here are most of them:
Don't buy a reproduction of a very successful new model unless you know that it is a faithful copy of the original in cut and detail. Otherwise you will have just one of the dozens of versions you will see every time you wear said little number. You don't mind being one of many wearing a smart, authentic, much-favored frock. At least the smart Parisienne doesn't, so why should you? But you don't like to be caught in one of those little-almost-frocks that don't quite make the grade.

Don't follow the crowd. If you think a fabric is going to be very popular, don't invest in a costume of it, unless you wish to discard it very soon. You will hate it before the season is over, and you will never feel or look distinguished in it.
Don't ask you—don't buy an extreme hat, one with a definite costume quality, unless you are sure that the costume you wear with it is exactly right. Far better stick to some version of the still-smart cloche or a small Deboux felt that is neither one thing or the other. I have seen many an exotic head-dress type of hat far away from its native Rue de la Paix looking very odd indeed when worn with a simple little crepe Ford and a couple of yards of pearls.

Watch your ensemble. If you wear one of the extremely modern hats that Agnes, for instance, makes, you will wish to be very careful in your choice of accessories. You will wear a necklace of some cleverly designed costume jewelry, bracelets to harmonize with it, and perhaps exactly the right pair of modern earrings. Your trusty pearls will not do.

If you are small and inclined to be not too slim, don't wear one of those new satin hats with the large ribbon loops over the ears. I've seen several on this type of figure and they look just plain funny. It is a ravishing hat for the tall and otherwise gifted, but for what we like to call the "average reader" it is not a hat, it is a disguise.

The irregular hem-line has great charm when it is properly handled; the little cluttered up black satin or velvet frock with its sash ends and bias-pointed panels is as dowdy as possible and there will be many of them this season. I can feel them coming on.

Be conservative. You will have difficulty in going wrong about color this autumn. Browns and tans that begin in the beige range and grade to rich coffee colors are very smart. Black, or course, has been revived. Slate blues and inky blues. Odd shades of green, gray and "greige." Some reds, mostly purple reds. These are all good and all effective. When in doubt, invest in beige and brown combinations. "Off" shades, so smart this season, are subtle and hard to wear. What is more, nothing harmonizes with them. You have to buy each small accessory with the off shade in mind.

If you wear a frock and coat of some shade of brown or tan and have beige gloves, bag, stockings, and even hat to match it's almost too easy. The result is always smart.

While I'm at it, I should like to go into the matter of stockings and gloves. Why, oh why, do women still persist in wearing fancy gloves? Gloves with fancy stitching, with embroidery, with cuffs, with gauntlets. The plain slip-on glove with the simplest stitching possible, in beige or tan or natural chamois-color is the only possible glove at the moment, and I hope it never changes, because it surely is the best taste. Occasionally suede gloves to match a costume

The PENNY PRINCESS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Vera Victoria Cameron, an efficient private secretary, consents to let Jerry Macklyn, advertising manager of the Peach Bloom Cosmetic Co., transform her into a beauty. In transforming her, the beauty specialist copies a picture Jerry finds in his desk, an uncaptioned colored picture of a beautiful woman. Jerry falls in love with Vera, also known as Vee-Vee, and his affection endures although he learns she wants to be beautiful so she can spend her vacation at fashionable Lake Minnetonka, hoping there to meet Schuyler Smythe, the man she loves.

At the lake hotel, all the guests, including Smythe, mistake her for Vivian Crandall, ex-princess, who, after a Paris divorce, is in hiding. Vera tries to convince everyone of her true identity but is not believed.

Mrs. Bannister, a hotel guest, and Nan Fosdick, who accuses Vera of stealing Schuyler's love from her, go to the city and Vera knows they will notify the Crandalls and an expose will follow. Nan's mother tells Vera she has learned Schuyler is a salaried secretary, four-flusher and fortune-hunter.

Thurston, hotel manager, has Vera and Schuyler watched, hoping to ingratiate himself with the Crandalls. They are on the pier at midnight when she learns detectives await her at the hotel and she and Schuyler run away in a car. Schuyler pours out his love for her. When she tells him the truth about herself, substituted with Jerry's letter, he is furious, revealing his true character too plainly. Then it occurs to him she may be tricking him, testing his love, and he tries to retrieve, but too late. She demands that he take her to the nearest town and on the way, they are stopped by two masked men in a car.

Vera is whisked away with the men and Schuyler is left. Vera at first thinks the man was a detective, then from their conversation she learns they are kidnapping her, thinking she is Vivian Crandall. She insists she is not the ex-princess but to no avail. They drive rapidly to a clearing where awaits an airplane.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXX
At the moment when Vera Victoria Cameron, being kidnapped as Vivian Crandall, was stepping gingerly over a stubby field toward a great man-made bird that was to bear her aloft, she knew not whether Schuyler Smythe was standing in the middle of the road, waving his arms frantically to attract the attention of an approaching car.

"Miss Crandall and I were eloping when the kidnappers captured us."

The car slowed up, hesitated then shot past him, the driver—a man with a girl sitting beside him—evidently fearing a hold-up. Schuyler stamped with rage, but there was nothing for it but to wait until another car came along. Two others sped past his waving arms and he was about to give up in despair when he made one more attempt.

The car—a small coupe—slithered to a stop, and a cheery male voice called out: "Car stalled, young man?" "Yes," Schuyler answered eagerly. "Can you give me a lift? I'm stopping at the Minnetonka—out for a ride—car gone dead on me—" He was babbling excitedly as he climbed upon the running board.

"Sure! Hop in! Reckon no one can run off with your car, if you can't make it go. I'm going to the Minnetonka myself. I'm a doctor—Dr. Blessington. Got a hurry-up call from the Minnetonka. Seems that the house doctor is off for the night. I relieve for him, you see."

"You're very kind, Dr. Blessington."

He did not want to talk, wanted to give graceful thought to the story which he would tell when he reached the hotel. There was no use trying to follow the masked bandits in the doctor's car. They had had more than half an hour start, and the doctor had just said that he was speeding to Minnetonka on an emergency call. He decided at first, in his extreme nervousness, not to say anything to the doctor of his night's adventure, but reconsidered, in a panic.

In a rapid, jerky voice he told the doctor what had happened, or as much of what had happened as he could bring himself to admit. He said nothing of his own quarrel with the girl, confining his explanation to the bare facts of their encounter with the masked men.

"Vivian Crandall! My soul in heaven!" the doctor ejaculated incredulously. "Why didn't you do something, man?"

"With one revolver pointing at my head and one at hers!" Schuyler defended himself indignantly. "I couldn't take a chance on her being shot, doctor."

"No, I suppose not," the doctor agreed. "Well, I'll burn up the road getting you back to the hotel. They can send out an alarm—telephone the police of all the neighboring towns."

He bent over the wheel, his keen eyes behind gold-rimmed spectacles trained on the road that the valiant little car swallowed at such a breathtaking rate of speed.

Although it was nearly 2 o'clock when the doctor's coupe swung into the crescent-shaped driveway before the Minnetonka hotel, the great, sprawling building was blazing with lights. Flashlights, gleaming like fireflies, were bobbing about the grounds. Voices were hallooing at each other from across the lake, where men in rowboats seemed to be dragging the dark waters on a gruesome quest for the vanished heiress. Women, in evening dress, scurried about in the lanes of lights from doors and windows, calling shrill inquiries and making foolish suggestions. A group of men were conferring on the broad front porch when Schuyler descended from the doctor's car.

Thurston, the hotel manager, lunged toward him, seized his arm and half dragged him up the steps.

"Where's Miss Crandall, Smythe? For God's sake, tell us what you've done with her? You're the last person seen with her—"

Schuyler Smythe stood blinking dazedly in the strong light that flooded from the entrance hall and from the porch lanterns.

"Is this Smythe, the chap that's been beating Miss Crandall around up here?" A big, frowning-browed, dark-faced man elbowed his way importantly out of the little knot of men. "I'm Barr—Detective Barr—of New York, Smythe. Detective Durgan and I came down here to-night to identify Miss Crandall and to ask her to get into communication with her parents. Mr. Crandall sent us. He got a tip this morning that his daughter was here. Now, speak up, man. Where is she?" His big hand closed in a crushing grip on Schuyler's shoulder.

"I don't know where she is—now," Schuyler said loudly, trying to brush the detective's hand from his shoulder. "We were out driving—"

"In my car!" Thurston thundered. "So you're the thief! Well, come on. What happened?"

"I'm trying to tell you," Schuyler retorted with dignity. "But you might remember that I'm a gentleman. I took your car, Thurston, because you had mine tampered with to prevent my being alone with Miss Crandall. Quit interrupting," he admonished Thurston sharply, as the hotel manager gasped for words strong enough to express his emotion.

"We're wasting valuable time, for I came back here as quickly as I could to tell you that Miss Crandall has been kidnapped by two masked men who overpowered me, took from me the keys of your car, Thurston—" "Kidnaped! Good God!" Thurston groaned. "Quick, man! Which way did the car go? What did the men look like?"

"Here, Thurston, let me handle this bird," Detective Barr said curtly. "Now, Smythe, pull your wits together and give us facts."

Attracted by the commotion on the porch, guests who had been searching the grounds and the lake came pouring in, the women shrilly demanding to know what happened, the men clapping passages importantly, offering loud suggestions before they knew what had really happened.

Schuyler, mopping his glistening forehead with an already damp handkerchief, told his story as rapidly as possible, giving the approximate location of the hold-up, and an unavoidably vague description of the men, due to the fact that they had worn masks.

"All I can say is that one was tall and thin—gaunt, I should say—and the other stocky," he told the detective.

"About how tall was the tall one? Six feet? Six feet, one, two?" Detective Barr demanded impatiently.

When Schuyler had told the detective all that he could remember about the appearance, the manner and the voices of the two kidnappers, Barr plunged into the hotel, shouting to the switchboard operator to put in a call for the two nearest towns as well as for New York.

Detective Durgan took up the questioning of Schuyler where Barr had left off. He made copious notes on the missing girl's costume, the exact words of the conversation that had passed between the four of them and a description of the car they were driving.

"Good heavens! Mrs. Fosdick's sedan! It was stolen tonight from the garage," Thurston exclaimed, smiting his right palm with his clenched fist. "It ought to be easy to trace it. She can give you a description of the car, from bumper to bumper, if the doctor can pull her out of her fit of hysterics. That's the call that Dr. Blessington was answering," he explained to Schuyler Smythe.

"A lot of us would like to form a posse to scour the country for the kidnappers, Thurston," one of the men spoke up eagerly. "We ought to be able to dig up enough pistols to protect ourselves—"

"Clarence!" a woman screamed. "You shan't go a step! Those awful kidnappers would kill you!"

Over the hubbub Thurston shouted: "All you people had better go to bed. The police have this thing in hand now. They'll know how to handle it, and they won't want a lot of amateur assistance. By the way, Smythe, how did you happen to be taking a midnight ride with Miss Crandall when you and she both knew that she was wanted in the office? The bellboy had found her and delivered the message. It was he who told us that you were with her on the far pier."

Schuyler Smythe squared his shoulders and thrust up his chin for his big moment. "Miss Crandall and I were eloping to be married when the kidnappers captured us," he said impressively.

"Married! Good Lord!" Thurston groaned. "Maybe it's a good thing she was kidnapped! Why you damned little fortune-hunter, you—" and he made a lunge toward the younger man as if he intended to knock him down.

"This is no time for fighting, gentlemen," Detective Durgan said briskly. "I'm going in to help Barr with the long distance telephoning. You, Thurston, send somebody in a car immediately to check up on this guy Smythe's story about your car, and have another car ready for Barr and me for anything we may need it for tonight. And as for you people," he waved toward the crowd of guests pressing in upon the porch, "if you don't know anything about this case, get to bed. You're gumming up the works."

Half an hour later, during a lull in the storm of telephoning, Detective Barr, who was awaiting instructions from the police in New York, turned upon Thurston, who was sunk wearily in the swivel chair in his private office.

"What puzzles me is how Miss

Looks the Part

Marie Scheling, of Philadelphia, not only has grand opera ambitions but she has often evoked comment by her resemblance to Madame Jeritza, the diva. Critics say that Marie's dramatic soprano eventually will win fame in the world of voices.

Crandall got that suitcase out of her room without being observed. What did the maid say was missing?"

"Toilet articles, pajamas, kimono, two or three dresses, a coat and a green felt hat," Thurston answered, frowning with fatigue and bewilderment. "Looks like that upstart, Schuyler Smythe or Shuler Smith or whatever his name is, was telling the truth and that Miss Crandall was eloping with him. What she could see in him beats me, but any fool woman, no matter whether she's a princess or a pauper, will fall for one of those patent-leather-haired sheikhs with a mushy line. Why, man, I had half the guests in the hotel on sentry duty to keep those two apart as much as possible."

"It's sure been a nice quiet hotel tonight!" the detective commented with a chuckle. "And it's going to be nice and quiet tomorrow with an army of reporters down here from New York. George! I'd like to know where that girl is right now! Gives you the creeps to think of it, doesn't it? One little bit of woman flesh worth 40 million dollars being dragged God knows where by a couple of East Side gunmen!"

Vee-Vee, remembering Jerry Macklyn's promise to come for her in an airplane if necessary, thinks it is he that has kidnapped her. But she is destined for a rude awakening.

Are You Really Well?

For Good Health There Must Be Proper Kidney Action.

DO you find yourself running down—always tired, nervous and depressed? Are you stiff and aching, subject to nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizzy spells? Are kidney excretions scanty and burning in passage? Know then that these are often signs of improper kidney action. Sluggish kidneys allow acid poisons to remain in the blood and upset the whole system. If your kidneys are acting sluggishly, assist them with Doan's Pills. More than 50,000 users have publicly recommended Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

SIDELIGHTS ON LIFE OF FOCH

The man on whose shoulders rested chief responsibility for prosecution of the allied cause was, at one time, dropped from the French War college in some disgrace because of his political and religious convictions. He is somewhat rude in approach and has been known to remind his talkative caller that "time is money," this being about the only English sentence he can pronounce correctly.

Asked how the war was won he said "By not getting excited."

Unlike Napoleon Bonaparte and other great military strategists Foch seldom plays chess.

He is intensely religious. Former Premier Clemenceau, known as anti-clerical, respected this in the marshal, however, and once when he called for Foch and was told that he was at church he said:

"Leave him where he is; that has always agreed with him. I will wait."

FINANCIAL LEADERS ON TRIAL
CHARGE OIL FIRM IS WRECKED

By DAN CAMPBELL,

United Press Staff Correspondent.
LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—A "big parade" started here Thursday—a parade into the courts of justice of 55 bankers, brokers, millionaires, movie magnates and "small fry," charged with wrecking the once-rich Julian Petroleum corporation.

Pillars of society and captains of finance are among those who await trial for the financial nightmare which brought losses to 50,000 stockholders, whose corporation collapsed.

The first group to go on trial will include S. C. Lewis, former president of the Julian company, under indictment on two counts for conspiracy to violate the state corporate securities act and obtaining money under false pretenses in connection with an over-issue of stock, estimated at 5,000,000 shares.

The list of those indicted, who will follow Lewis and his associates in the oil company to trial reads like a "Who's Who" of the Pacific coast.

Charles F. Stern, president of the Pacific Southwest Trust & Savings bank and executive vice president of the First National bank, recently merged into one institution, faces trial on charges of embezzlement and violation of the bankers' bonus law. John E. Barber, president of the First Securities company and vice president of the First National bank, face like charges.

The following are among those accused of conspiracy to violate the state usury act. They all are asserted to have been members of the so-called million-dollar pools No. 1 or No. 3, which milked the Julian company of hundreds of thousands of dollars and which would have collected 228 per cent if they had run a year, the prosecution charges.

Motley H. Flint, vice president of the Pacific Southwest Trust & Savings bank; Louis B. Mayer, millionaire motion picture magnate, president Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Adolph Ramish, millionaire theater magnate; Harry M. Haldeman, civic leader, capitalist and president of the Better American Federation and the Uplifters' club; W. I. Hollingsworth, president of the insurance company which bears his name and a score of others.

As the first of the group went to trial, Jack Bennett, alias Berman, young "financial wizard" and missing key man to the Julian muddle, had not been apprehended after a search that led through the principal capitals of Europe and back to New York where the trail was lost.

The indictments, it is reported, were based on alleged transactions that began as early as September of 1926, when the Julian corporation officers were contemplating a merger with 10 other companies, to be known as the California Eastern Oil company. Subsequently, up to late in April, millions of shares of spurious stock are alleged to have issued out of the offices of the stock transfer department.

This over-issued stock it is further charged eventually found its way into the hands of 40,000 to 50,000 innocent purchasers, who today are confronted with the loss of untold millions of dollars.

Between September and April, as the $12,000,000 financing for the merger was delayed, the corporation became hard pressed for funds to meet obligations, and officers of the company are asserted to have negotiated for huge loans with Los Angeles men, money-lenders, "big and little," for loans.

It was on these loans, some of which ran for only a few days, others for months, that the usurious interest rate is asserted to have been extracted, and the high-handed financial piracy was carried on until $18,000,000 usury money had been paid out.

The trials are expected to consume weeks and new phases of the crash are expected to be revealed as the "big parade" progresses.

Ready to Hop

This is Captain R. H. MacIntosh, British pilot, who has completed preparations to fly in his Fokker monoplane, the Princess Xenia, from Baldonnel, England to Philadelphia.

There are 51 living members of the "Caterpillar Club." The society is composed of American airmen who have been saved by parachute landings, which Air Corps records place at 54 out of 60 emergency jumps. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, one of the members, holds the top record with four parachute drops.

Abé Rosenberg, the deceased pawn broker, insisted upon having his test- ing acid and his magnifying glass buried with him. Evidently he wants to be sure that his golden harp and his crown of jewels are genuine.

Here Is Miss New Mexico

Miss Kitty Banks, former Follies girl and model for Howard Chandler Christy, went to Albuquerque, N. M., several years ago. New York newspapers once reported her dead, but now she appears to be very much alive as winner of a state beauty contest.

LONDON—A story of a novel monkey captured is told in a report recently received here from the Malay states.

Monkeys in some sections of the Malay states find crabs a delicacy and frequently catch them with their hands or hook out of holes in the earth with their tails. They then take the crab to the water, wash it and, after breaking it open, eat it.

During a rising tide, however, a drowning monkey was found with his tail down a hole. The crab was a large one and had caught the monkeys or hook out of holes in the key.

Germany is experimenting with motorless "gliders" and expects to develop "aerial trains" of a locomotive and six or more cars each. A pilot flew from Cassel to Frankfurt towing a passenger-carrying glider in his wake. At Frankfurt the glider was disconnected high in the air and the glider's pilot made a perfect landing.

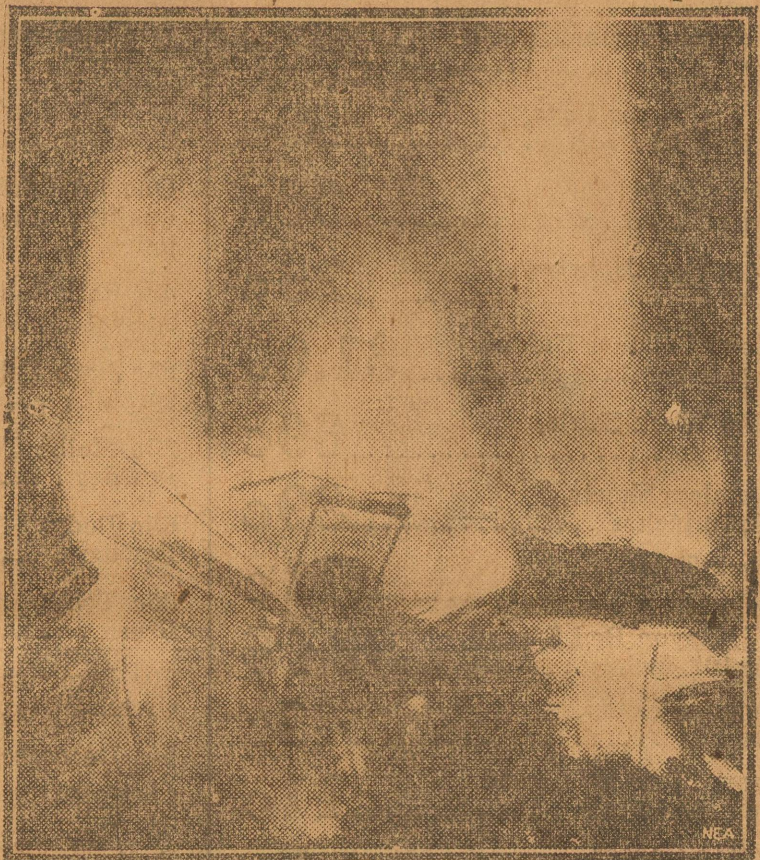

The live freight carried by an airway company in Germany includes guinea pigs, white mice, and dogs.

Zane Grey Sees Real Romance

Zane Grey has written romances. Recently he saw it, too, with the marriage on his schooner-yacht, The Fisherman, of Capt. Fred Kleibing and Phyllis Reid, daughter of the skipper of another schooner (shown together above). The pair met three years ago in the South Seas port of Nukualofa. Fate called them apart. This summer Kleibing searched the islands for his sweetheart and found her a nurse at Whangaroa—and waiting. They were married, but on returning to America it was discovered the consul at Whangaroa had neglected to give the girl's passport. Separation seemed imminent again, but an ingenious immigration officer released the girl "in custody of her husband" until the visa arrived.

Seven Planes Take Last Hop

Hundreds watched a column of flame shoot up at Blackwood flying field, Nashville, Tenn., the other night. It was the funeral pyre of seven obsolete "Jenny" planes of the 105th Observation Squadron. Formerly used as training vehicles for fledgling war birds, they recently were declared unfit for further service.

SCORNS NAME OF CITY

By United Press.
HIBBING, Minn.—Although Hibbing has a population of 20,000, it does not choose to become a city, but wants to be known as the richest village in the world.

The scene of the largest open pit mine in the world, and with many other valuable mines in its immediate vicinity, Hibbing is well qualified to boast of its richness.

Besides having some of the richest, if not the richest, iron mines in the world, Hibbing also boasts one of the largest high schools in the country. The school was completed several years ago at a cost of $4,000,000.

IS PARSON, DOCTOR AND BOSS TO HIS WORKERS

By United Press.
KANSAS CITY.—The 24 hours that go to make up a day are sometimes scarcely enough for one Kansas Citian to get done all that his many different jobs call for. For with his duties guiding a manufacturing business employing 180 persons, with a business volume approaching $1,000,000 a year; administering to the physical ailments of the employees as a licensed practicing physician, acting as their spiritual guide when occasion demands, in addition to preaching to a congregation of 200 persons Sundays, Dr. Walter L. Wilson certainly has little time to loaf and still keep on the job. Dr. Wilson runs the business.

keeps his employees well, preaches to them when they need spiritual guidance, and performs marriage ceremonies when the occasion demands.

Much of what passes for dishonesty is just plain ignorance.

A passenger airplane to seat 100 persons, equipped with 12 motors, having 4800 horsepower, and weighing 100,000 pounds, is under construction at Garwood, N. J. According to the designer, the giant craft will run night and day, rain or shine, through wind, fog, storms and cyclones.

The difference between workers and shirkers is far more than the sound of the words would indicate.

ALPINE, Sept. 16—Two army airplanes from San Antonio will be brought here Oct. 1 according to Jack McFarland, cameraman for a news reel syndicate, for use in making pictures of the Canyon of the 100 Grande between Brewster county and Mexico.

The pictures will be made from one machine while the other will be shown in the pictures, according to McFarland. The picture making flight will cover nearly 1,000 miles.

The United States government recently purchased a fleet of five Chevrolet touring cars for field use in the Tennessee mountain district by engineers of the geological survey.

"they give us our Sugar free"

"Yes, they do just that—sounds unreasonable doesn't it?"

"Why they always charge me for my sugar here—same as anything else."

"Not the grocery, my dear. The Imperial Sugar Company gives me my sugar free."

"You see it's this way. We own five shares of Imperial Sugar preferred stock. There are five of us, you know—Joe, Lillian, Herbie, little Jimmie and myself. You'd hardly believe it, but we use about 500 pounds of sugar a year. That costs somewhere between $30.00 and $35.00.

"Our five shares of stock pay us $35.00 per year which is more than enough to buy all our sugar—canning and all. So you see they are really giving us our sugar free."

What this thrifty woman has discovered you now have a chance to investigate.

Perhaps you are thinking "Why should a big company like that want me to buy a few shares of stock?"

Here's the reason: We want the thrifty home-managers of this section to own this stock... be interested in Imperial Pure Cane Sugar... and buy it at their grocers.

And when you know the sugar—you'll be quite as in love with it as you will be with this wonderful investment proposition.

Checks will be mailed October 1st to cover the 12th Quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on Imperial Sugar Company 7% Preferred stock. Will you get one?
