To produce towels...

DCOS told company interested in Snyder

Development Corporation of Snyder board members were told Thursday that a company planning to produce a line of towels is interested in locating in the city's industrial park.

Besides private investors, the company has proposed a partnership with an Australian towel manufacturing company and Lorber Industries of Texas.

DCOS executive director John DeLille told the board that the firm wants to use yarn made by Lorber of Texas.

Lorber, Simba and the firm's founder and son would be the principal owners of the business, DeLille said.

"We've got a long way to go on this project," said DeLille. "But this company is a viable prospect for the industrial park.

DeLille said the company wants to locate as close as possible to Lorber at the industrial park and added, "As a matter of fact, they want the lot right across the street from Lorber."

DeLille said the company is looking at an investment in the project of some $9 million with 60 people working at the manufacturing plant when it becomes operational.

"This will take us a couple of years to put it together," emphasized DeLille.

The plant would produce some 2½ million towels yearly, and would use some 5,000 bales of cotton per year.

DeLille also reported on the DCOS' gas line project to the industrial park and on the progress by Snyder Brick and Tile on the re-opening of the old brick plant.

DeLille said most of the right of way has been obtained for the gas line, and permission to bore under the railroad tracks has also been obtained.

He added that the brick company expects to receive its state grant money by mid-October, and the company is working with Western Texas College on a training program for employees.

"A training program could start as early as the first of November," DeLille said.

In other Thursday, the board approved the 1999-2000 budget in the amount of $126,450 – down from this year's budget of $130,686.

It is expected the budget will be submitted to the city council in September for consideration.

Board vice president Jack Gorman Jr. presided at the meeting in the absence of Roy McQueen, board president. Also in attendance were Larry Anderson and David Cotton. Gary Landes was absent.

Quake death toll tops 10,000

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Rescuers pulled two children barely alive out of the rubble of Turkey's devastating earthquake today, while the government admitted that the lack of water and sweltering heat made chances of survival slim for the up to 35,000 people still believed trapped under debris.

The death toll surged to 10,059 dead, and more than 45,000 were injured, the government said.

People trapped in such situations usually die of dehydration after 72 hours — a window that passed early today for Turkey's quake victims. But hope was not gone yet.

Hungarian specialists with sniffer dogs pinpointed the spot where a little girl was trapped after local emergency workers heard a voice under a collapsed house in the hard-hit Izmit region.

After five hours of digging, the girl was pulled out, frail, thin and barely moving, to cheers from the gathered crowd. She was rushed by ambulance to a nearby medical camp.

A few miles away, a team of Russian rescuers saved a 16-year-old girl in the port town of Golcuk.

Medical teams, meanwhile, were immunizing rescue workers against typhoid and warning of health dangers for the masses of quake homeless, crowded into parks or along roadsides in the sweltering heat without running water or sanitary facilities.

The stench of decay pervaded flattened towns like Adapazari, where at least 2,800 people were killed. Crushed sewage lines and the thousands of homeless living on garbage-strewn streets without portable toilets or fresh water compounded the risk of cholera or other infectious diseases spreading.

"We can't cope with this," Oguz Titiz, a doctor, told private NTV from Adapazari. "Vomiting and diarrhea started showing up last night, especially among children and the elderly."

Health services were in a shambles, despite the arrival of an Israeli medical team, which set up across from the quake-damaged state hospital.

Stairs collapsed in a hospital building, making the first-floor the only one accessible. Some 40 Turkish medical students were sent to help, along with truckloads of supplies, but no one seemed to be in charge.

"There are wild problems with organization," said nurse Egemen Keskin, trying to nap on a lawn in her dirty white uniform. "Nobody knows what they're doing here. ... We've got all the aid we need but no one to supervise it. Everything is in shambles."

Domestic violence help is available

The first thing that most people think of when looking at solutions to the problem of domestic violence is what could one do personally. This usually leads to volunteerism.

Volunteering is a wonderful opportunity to do something for others. Volunteers want to help and at The Noah Project volunteers are loved and appreciated due to the valuable work they provide for our clients. Volunteering takes time and the majority of the population is not able to give the valuable resources of time, so to our volunteers, we say thank you for giving us that valuable commodity — your time. The Noah Project would not be what it is today without each of our volunteers. So what does the rest of society have to offer? Look! Hear! Learn! Help!

People on the job can look for:

Chronic absenteeism, or when the worker is one the job, preoccupation and a deteriorating job performance.

A habit of wearing inappropriate clothing. A woman who consistently wears long sleeved clothing in warn weather is perhaps covering up signs of abuse.

An apparent obsession with arriving and leaving the workplace at the same time each day and repeated refusal to come in early or stay late. Such a preoccupation may be an indication that the abuser is expecting her to be at a specific place at a specific time.

Obvious recurring bruises with no acceptable, believable explanation of how they occurred.

What to do when the above occurs:

The best thing to do is acknowledge they have a problem, do expect them to perhaps lash out at you and tell you to mind your own business.

Don't be put off. Reiterate your concerns.

Don't expect an answer just let them know that people, including you, are available to help them find the resources they need.

If they acknowledge they're being abused, don't expect they will immediately leave the relationship.

It may not be the best time for them to leave the situation. They may be so fearful of being killed, and justifiably so, they feel they have to return to that situation at that point in time.

Be aware that your concern and intervention can help the victim of domestic abuse. What can friends and family do about domestic violence?

Ask direct questions, gently. Give her ample opportunity to talk. Don't rush into providing solutions.

Listen without judging.

Let her know that you support and care about her, that she's not responsible for the violence, that only the abuser can stop the violence.

Explain that physical violence in a relationship is never acceptable, at any time. There's no excuse for it.

Make sure she knows that she's not alone — that millions of American women from every ethnic, racial and socioeconomic group suffers from abuse and that many women find it difficult to leave.

Also explain that domestic violence is a crime — as much of a crime as robbery or rape — and that she can seek protection from The Noah Project.

If she has children reinforce her concern for them, letting her know that domestic violence is damaging to children and let them know you're there for them, too.

Let her know that it is likely that, in spite of his promises, the violence will continue and, probably escalate.

Emphasize that when she is ready, she can make a choice to leave the relationship, and that there is help available.

Provide her with information about local resources — such as the phone number of the local domestic violence hotline (915-573-1822).

She may need assistance to escape. Decide if you feel comfortable helping in this way.

Contact your local domestic violence program yourself for advice or guidance.

If she is planning to leave, remind her to take important papers with her, such as birth certificates, passports, health insurance, etc.

If she remains in the relationship, continue to be her friend while at the same time firmly communicating to her that she and her children do not deserve to be in this violent situation.

If you see or hear an assault in progress, call the police. Do not physically intervene because the assault is often dangerous.

What can the rest of society do?

Speak out and let the batterer know that his behavior is not acceptable.

Shun the batterer.

Tell people in your community that battering will not be tolerated.

Encourage the justice system and law enforcement officers to take action. Remember when smoking was acceptable anywhere or littering on the highway was accepted without blinking an eye. Why are those behaviors looked upon as unacceptable now? Because society said we would not accept the trash on our highways and we don't want smoke in our faces. Can we do any less for someone's life?

Q—What is a capias pro fine warrant?
A—It's a secondary issue of a warrant. The original warrant was issued and the person appeared before the judge, but has not paid the fine. When a person is arrested on a capias pro warrant, the fine must be paid immediately, or jail time is served.

Florida agriculture did well in 1998

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Florida growers and ranchers saw their cash receipts rise in 1998 to their largest ever due to solid gains in citrus and vegetables, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said.

Cash receipts for Florida agriculture rose 3.8 percent to a record $6.69 billion as citrus and vegetables offset weakness in Florida's livestock and foliage industries. The previous record was $6.24 billion in 1989.

Florida farm receipts had declined during the mid-1990s because of storms, droughts and the result of the North American Free Trade Agreement, state agriculture officials said.

"I'm delighted that our farmers are continuing to increase their sales despite our many trade issues and adverse weather conditions threatening their survival," Florida Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford said Thursday.

Citrus led the way with $1.61 billion in revenue, up 7.8 percent for the year. Citrus accounted for 23.8 percent of all farm cash receipts in the state last year. Oranges alone accounted for $1.2 billion, or about 20 percent of all farm cash receipts, and offset the 27 percent decline in grapefruit to $145 million.

Vegetables and melons, boosted by tomatoes, potatoes and squash, generated $1.54 billion, or 22.9 percent of Florida's farm revenue — up 5.3 percent for the year.

Cash receipts are the key measure of farm income for Florida, the nation's ninth-largest agricultural state.

Coalition to help

BOTTINEAU, N.D. (AP) — As area farmers head into harvest, a coalition is preparing to help them find financial and mental health services.

The Team for Interfaith Rural Support was formed to serve Bottineau, McHenry, Renville and Rolette counties.

"People really want to be working together because they know they have to," said Desiree Uhrich of Bottineau, who works with the Lutheran Rural Response unit of Lutheran Social Services.

The coalition includes representatives of agriculture mediation, churches and social service, health care and emergency relief agencies as well as community leaders. By forming the coalition, Uhrich said, the different groups have learned what others have to offer and are able to make referrals.

Sharon Parsley, a social worker with Catholic Family Services in Minot, said the team expects the brunt of the disaster will be felt this fall, when farmers normally collect an income from their crops.

Neighbor-to-neighbor support is needed as well as agency help, said Kenneth Rogers of Maxbass, a mediator with the state agriculture mediation program.

"We have television and newspapers and computers and cell phones — all these modern communication devices — but we communicate less people-to-people, farmer-to-farmer, than we ever have," he said.

Texas city decides all Spanish is best

EL CENIZO (AP) — Flora Barton says her community holds its official meetings in Spanish, but it's just as American as anyplace else in the United States.

"Only because you speak Spanish doesn't make you less American," the city commissioner said. "That's the way I see it."

Walk into an El Cenizo city meeting and you might wonder what side of the Rio Grande you're on.

Two weeks ago, commissioners in this small working-class community along the Mexican border passed an ordinance declaring that all city meetings and functions would be held in Spanish. They also passed a measure forbidding city employees to turn in illegal immigrants.

El Cenizo is believed to be the only U.S. city with an all-Spanish policy. English translations of meetings are available but must be requested 48 hours in advance.

"We know of no other city that is presently conducting their business in Spanish," said Mari Lopez, director of civic education for the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials. "They are the trailblazers, if you will."

El Cenizo is a largely blue-collar town of 7,800 about 10 miles outside Laredo. Its main streets are paved, but dirt roads also run through the city. Well-kept, modest houses exist side by side with ramshackle homes and buildings. For years, the city had no garbage or ambulance service.

Ms. Barton estimates that more than 90 percent of El Cenizo's residents speak Spanish, though many also speak English. A few people, particularly younger ones, speak only English.

For several years, meetings have been bilingual, since residents routinely asked commissioners to explain things in Spanish, she said. But some Spanish-speakers wouldn't attend city meetings because of the language barrier and were surprised by commissioners' decisions.

The most recent city council meeting, on Aug. 12, was conducted in Spanish after passage of the measure. Ordinances and resolutions still will be written in English, but the city will translate them upon request.

English First, a Virginia-based organization working to make English the official language of the country and to undo bilingual education, was troubled by the city's actions.

"El Cenizo is the canary in the mine," executive director Jim Boulet Jr. said Thursday. "I think this is a wake-up call to this country, where in a land where 328 different languages are spoken, that we either are going to speak in one language in this nation of immigrants or we are going to be speaking in many."

In addition to the language measure, El Cenizo passed a Safe Haven Ordinance, forbidding city employees and officials to ask residents whether they are legal immigrants or citizens or to help an agency like the Border Patrol and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. City employees who violate the ordinance can be fired.

Ms. Barton said the city will still cooperate with the Border Patrol on other matters, such as stopping drug smuggling.

She said the ordinance is not aimed at making El Cenizo a haven for illegal immigrants. She said residents simply resent constantly having to prove their status to the Border Patrol.

"We know these people," she said. "They've been here for years like us and we don't know (if they're illegal immigrants).

Navy predicts widespread Y2K failures

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. military report predicts widespread "probable" or "likely" failures in important power and water systems for many of the nation's cities because of the Year 2000 technology problem, a far more dire assessment than anything the White House has made.

But President Clinton's top Y2K adviser, John Koskinen, called the conclusions overly pessimistic in the study by Navy and Marine Corps base commanders worldwide. He said the military was assuming that major utilities would fail unless proved otherwise.

The most recent version of the study, updated less than two weeks ago, predicted "probable" or "likely" partial failures in electric utilities that serve nearly 60 of roughly 400 Navy and Marine Corps facilities.

The study predicted "likely" partial electrical failures, for example, at the new year at bases and offices in Orlando, Fla.; Gulfport, Miss.; Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; and nine other small- to mid-size cities.

It also predicted "probable" partial water system failures in Dallas; Nashville, Tenn.; Houston; Baton Rouge, La.; Montgomery, Ala.; Tulsa, Okla.; and 59 other cities.

The study forecast likely partial natural gas failures — in the middle of winter — in Nashville; Albany, N.Y.; Columbus, Ohio; Fort Worth, Texas; Pensacola, Fla.; and Charleston, S.C.

The military report contrasts sharply with predictions from the White House, which said in its own report just weeks ago that national electrical failures are "highly unlikely." The White House report also said disruptions in water service from the date rollover were "increasingly unlikely."

Koskinen, who vouched for the authenticity of the Navy report, noted nevertheless that all its worst-case predictions for failures were marked as "interim" or "partial" assessments.

"It's not nearly as interesting as the world coming to an end," said Koskinen. "The way they worked was, until you have information for contingency planning purposes, you ought to assume there was a problem."

The Year 2000 problem may occur because some computer programs, especially older ones, might fail when the date changes to 2000. Because the programs were written to recognize only the last two digits of a year, such programs could read the digits "00" as 1900, potentially causing problems with financial transactions, airline schedules and electrical grids.

The Navy report was first summarized this week on an Internet site run by Jim Lord, a Y2K author, who said he obtained it "from a confidential source of the highest reliability and integrity."

"The military has to work from the worst case, but so do we," Lord told The Associated Press on Thursday. "It's reprehensible for them to know this and keep it from us."

'Clothing Clues' event planned

"Clothing Clues" for Youth is a project offered by Kathryn Roberts, county extension agent for family and consumer science.

The project will include understanding fashions, shopping for clothes and other apparel, personal grooming, building self-confidence, clothes care and repair, and other clothing related projects.

Youth interested in participating in the "Clothing Clues" project need to register at the extension office Monday, beginning at 4 p.m. The office is located at 2605 Ave. M (Senior Center building)

This project is for youth ages 8 or third grade through 13 years of age.

Robes recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission says more than 30,000 children's robes manufactured by Bentley Lingerie fail to meet federal flammability standards and are being recalled.

The commssion said Thursday that while no injuries have been reported, the robes present a risk of serious burn injuries to children.

Federal standards require that children's sleepwear be flame resistant or self-extinguish if they ignite.

The "Esleep Junior" robes in sizes four to 14 were sold for about $25 in JC Penney stores nationwide from July 1998 through April 1999. They are made of green or blue polyester, with long sleeves and patch pockets showing either a pair of bear cubs or a sleeping puppy.

Consumers are advised to stop using the robes immediately and return them to the store where they were purchased for a refund.

For additional information consumers can call Bentley Lingerie at (888) 330-3803.

Being Bored Is No Excuse For Bad Behavior at School

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1999 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from "A Teacher Who Cares About the Future." I was saddened when I read your comment that "extremely bright children may act out because they are bored."

Our society has reached a sad state when it excuses unacceptable behavior on the premise that it's OK because of the so-called "brilliance" of the offending child. If a child is truly brilliant, he or she can learn to set limits, learn constructive things to do with his or her time, and continue to excel at his or her own rate without disturbing other children.

My children range in age from 15 to 26. All have been considered "extremely bright" by their teachers. One tested brighter than any child ever tested by our school psychologist during academically talented testing in our school district. Was she ever bored? Yes, often. Did she ever long for more challenges? I'm sure she did. Did she ever, ever once act out in school? Never!

Instead of acting out when she was little, she took extra books and projects to do in her spare time. A wise principal once told me to put her in dance and music classes — and anything else in which she seemed interested. He said she needed to excel in many areas, or she could become bored in a few. I also volunteered regularly in her classrooms to give the teacher time to spend with other children on both ends of the academic spectrum.

Abby, limits need to be set and children need to be held to them. I am eternally grateful to the teachers who challenged each of my children to be the best that they could be. It has paid off handsomely.

Parents: Stop blaming the schools and look in the mirror!

HAPPY MOM IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR HAPPY MOM: While I agree with much of your thinking, the statement that extremely bright children may act out because they are bored was made to me by an early childhood learning specialist whom I trust.

It is essential that physical problems be ruled out as a cause of misbehavior. Mature children have the ability to entertain themselves and to use their time constructively. Children with learning disabilities or ADHD may not. However, this does not relieve parents from the responsibility of teaching their children respect for authority and what is — and is not — appropriate behavior. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I applaud the advice from both you and the "Teacher Who Cares." I have been a schoolteacher and a principal. Children need to be taught respect for adults and authority. They need to accept the word "no." You would be shocked at how often students (even those in the primary levels) make disrespectful and rude remarks to teachers. You would also be surprised how these students — and their parents — react to discipline. They do not approve of it.

Yes, it is hard to say "no" to a child you love dearly. But not saying "no" creates a monster who ends up damaging him or herself and others.

ANOTHER EDUCATOR WHO CARES ABOUT THE FUTURE

DEAR EDUCATOR: Failure to teach children limits and appropriate behavior is a form of neglect that can handicap their educational and social development. Furthermore, children cannot be expected to know what their parents haven't taught them, and they mirror the attitudes of the adults after whom they model themselves. The child of parents who feel that rules do not apply to them will, predictably, be disruptive in the classroom and disrespectful of the rights of others — hardly a recipe for success.

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, August 21, 1999

Developments of bonds being drawn together more tightly with several valued relationships in the year ahead could bring both opportunities and happiness into your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What makes you a born leader again today is your ability to manage difficult situations and people without anyone feeling they are being manipulated or ordered about. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Entertain people to whom you feel socially obligated or those with whom you want to discuss a serious matter in a convivial surrounding. Your place is the perfect setting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might get the first inkling today that something both interesting and beneficial could be developing for you that could affect a friend as well. It'll buoy your spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Deal directly with the top guns today, especially with financial involvements, if you want to get cooperation. Middle management can't make these kinds of commitments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In a most pleasant manner, you're able to deal with some of the toughest issues today. You'll adopt both a positive and tenacious attitude as well, expecting victory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Capitalize on a shift in attitude by others as they will now be willing to help you in ways they would not do so previously for you or others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep all negotiations as simple as possible today and don't let a group or committee intervene. You greatest asset will be in dealing effectively with others on a one-on-on basis.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Because of some measures you take today and the way you go about them, two people in positions to have an affect on your status will view you in a most favorable light.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This could be one of those days when getting out and meeting people could prove luckier for you than usual, especially in the romance department. You'll project an aura of confidence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If the pieces appear to be in place today, make that critical change you've been contemplating that could have a favorable effect upon your material circumstances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Those with whom you'll be involved today will be encouraged to respond in kind by the generous and fair way you treat everybody. Mutual benefits will come of it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Remuneration could be in store for you today for the expertise you offered someone out of kindness in the past. This person may reward you with more than you would have charged.

Airlines progressing toward less-noise goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — All but 14 percent of airplanes flown by major U.S. carriers last year met noise standards designed to bring more peace to communities near airports, and carriers are on track to comply fully with a Dec. 31 deadline for quieter jets, a government report finds.

Based on those results, transportation officials said Thursday the U.S. fleet is quieter than ever and will get even better by year's end when the final standards, known as Stage 3, take effect.

They require airlines to stop using noisier Stage 2 planes, such as older triple-engine Boeing 727s, unless they have been fitted with noise-damping devices, and rely instead on Stage 3 planes like the twin-engine Boeing 757.

It takes roughly five Stage 3 aircraft to create the noise of just one Stage 2 airplane.

"The FAA and the entire aviation community are committed to a cleaner, less noisy airspace system, and this report shows we are living up to that commitment," said Federal Aviation Administration head Jane Garvey.

In 1990, Congress voted to require the phased elimination of noisy jet airplanes by the end of this year. Airlines could comply by buying new planes or installing mufflers on existing aircraft by a set schedule.

As of Dec. 31, 1998, operators had to reach an interim step toward Stage 3 compliance: either phase out 75 percent of their Stage 2 aircraft or operate a fleet of 75 percent Stage 3 airplanes.

According to the report, issued jointly by the Transportation Department and the FAA, the nation's major airlines were 78.7 percent complaint with the Stage 3 standards as of Dec. 31, 1997. By the end of last year, that figure had risen to 86 percent.

A major airline is defined as one that has annual operating revenues of $1 billion or greater. For 1998, the airlines and their compliance percentages were:

Alaska Airlines (100), Dallas-based Southwest Airlines (91.8), America West (88.3), Fort Worth, Texas-based American Airlines (88.2), US Airways (87.9), Delta Air Lines (86.2), Houston-based Continental (84.9), Northwest (84), United Airlines (83.4) and TWA (75).

The carriers were pleased with the report.

"This is something that the airlines have been working on actively for over 10 years," said David Fuscus, spokesman for the Air Transport Association. The trade group represents the major airlines.

Ex-trooper of year gets probation

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — The 1997 Trooper of the Year has been sentenced to five years of probation for shaking down motorists on the New Jersey Turnpike.

The judge scolded Francis Burke, 31, for trashing his career for "a few dollars here, a few dollars there" and ordered him to undergo psychiatric counseling.

Prosecutors said the five-year veteran told two motorists in 1998 he wouldn't ticket them for driving with revoked licenses if they paid him for a tow truck he said had been sent to get their cars. Burke allegedly pocketed the cash.

Burke pleaded guilty to official misconduct in May under a plea agreement that forced him to give up his job and pension and agree to never hold another public service job in New Jersey.

He told the judge Wednesday that he had no explanation for his conduct and was sorry.

Drug-resistant staph bacteria found away from hospital settings

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials have confirmed the deaths of four Midwestern children linked to drug-resistant staph infections they acquired outside a hospital setting.

Drug-resistant staph was once largely confined to hospitals and nursing homes, but the children's deaths in Minnesota and North Dakota show it may be spreading to communities, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Thursday.

"These are the first deaths we're aware of that have appeared in the United States and in medical literature," said Dr. J. Todd Weber of the CDC's National Center for Infectious Diseases. "How rare or how common it is, we don't know yet."

The children, ages 1 to 13, acquired methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus infections between 1997 and 1999. None of the children had been recently hospitalized before their deaths, the CDC said.

Staph bacteria are the No. 1 cause of hospital-acquired infections in the United States, blamed for 13 percent of the 2 million hospital infections annually.

Half of staph bacteria infections contracted by hospital patients in 1997 were resistant to a large class of antibiotics, up from 1974, when only 2 percent were drug-resistant, the CDC said.

Doctors recently have seen an increase in drug-resistant infections acquired outside of hospitals although CDC researchers said they don't know yet to what extent.

"The resistant bacteria have been around 30 years but these four cases suggest it may be getting into the general population," said Dr. Timothy Naimi, a medical epidemiologists with the CDC.

Museum and mill town fighting over paintings

BOSTON (AP) — The city of Lawrence says 88 years is enough: It wants its Monet back.

That's Monet, the painter of "Field of Poppies, near Giverny," which was loaned to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts all those years ago along with 16 other works.

The museum says the down-at-the-heels community 25 miles outside Boston is just going to sell the paintings, and refuses to give them up.

On Thursday, attorneys from both sides were in Suffolk Superior Court debating the fate of the artwork.

"When people lend you something, you're supposed to give it back," said Richard Renehan, an attorney for the paintings' trustees, the Daniel White Fund of Lawrence. "The trustees have a right to control this art."

Fund administrators say their desire to reclaim the paintings and sell them is consistent with the wishes of the art's original owner, the Rev. William Wolcott. The artwork would fetch an estimated $5.5 million to $7.5 million at auction.

In 1911, Wolcott willed the paintings to the fund to "create and gratify a public taste for fine art, particularly among the people of Lawrence." He ordered the pictures housed at the museum until a suitable gallery could be built in Lawrence, a city better known for industry than culture.

Nearly a century later, such a gallery is still not in the city's plans, said Thomas F. Caffrey, president of the White Fund.

And the works — which include the Monet, two works by Camille Pissarro and paintings by American artists Hugh Bolton Jones and Alexander Lawrie — are not benefiting the people of Lawrence, he said.

Lutherans OK unity pact with 'Episcopal'

DENVER (AP) — After years of debate, the nation's largest Lutheran organization has agreed to form an alliance with the Episcopal Church under which they will exchange clergy, recognize each other's sacraments and cooperate in missionary projects.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America approved the pact Thursday at its national convention. The Episcopalians are expected to approve the pact during a convention next year.

The two churches have a combined 7.5 million members in 18,000 congregations, and supporters said the "full communion" agreement will help in urban and rural areas where church resources are scarce.

The pact, which needed the approval of two-thirds of the delegates at a Lutheran convention here, passed 716-317, or with 69 percent of the vote.

Opponents objected to the agreement's requirement that Lutherans follow an ordination practice known as the historic episcopate, in which a bishop is installed by a laying-on of hands by three predecessor bishops from a line believed to extend back to Christ's apostles.

Lutheran teachings don't require such historic succession, and many of the world's Lutheran bodies do not practice it. This is the first time that any U.S. Protestant body has approved such a relationship with an American denomination that follows the historic episcopate. Catholic and Orthodox churches also follow the practice.

Opponents of the pact said the Episcopal Church should be willing to take Lutherans as they are.

Two years ago, the Episcopal Church overwhelmingly approved a similar alliance, but it fell just short of passage by the Lutherans. The pact has been slightly reworked since then.

"I pray that our response can be positive," said Episcopal Presiding Bishop Frank T. Griswold. "The promise of our deepening life together offers real hope for the broken world."

The Lutherans have previously approved similar pacts with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Reformed Church in America and United Church of Christ. But those didn't require changes in Lutheran tradition regarding bishops.

Foundation to give to U.S. art causes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A philanthropic foundation wants to reassert the value of the arts and culture in the United States by spending $50 million over the next five years to arts causes.

The goal of Pew Charitable Trust is to give money to support arts financing, zoning in historic areas and arts curriculum for public schools, said Stephen K. Urice, who will direct the Pew initiative.

"What this is about is the long-term health of American creativity and the sustainability of American arts and culture," he said. "The long-term goal is to strengthen both political and economic support for nonprofit culture."

The $4.7 billion Pew foundation, started by the family owners of the Sun Oil Co., says it plans to establish a centralized information center for reliable data on all aspects of cultural life. It intends to push greater media coverage, in hopes of promoting discussions among policy makers.

You can't make gay son 'go straight'

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 30-year-old never-married son recently confided to me that he is gay. Is there any help to make him go straight? We are concerned because the Bible bans homosexuality.

DEAR READER: Few issues seem to perplex and upset parents more than the sexual orientation of their children. I am sure that you felt devastated when you learned that your son is homosexual. I am equally certain that you cannot conceive of the turmoil he has experienced for years, knowing that his orientation would threaten the very basis of your family stability. For no other reason, he should be complimented on the courage it took to "come out." Now, since he no longer has to deceive you, your love for each other will have a chance to grow stronger.

Some gay people honestly want to change their sexual preferences and become straight. In such cases, psychological intervention, including support groups, may be useful. However, this is more the exception than the rule.

Many homosexuals believe they were born gay and wish to maintain their lifestyles, asking only for parental acceptance. Despite the health risks of same-sex, non-monogamous relations, a significant number of gay people are able to establish long-term, loving partnerships. Thus, I believe that your wish for your son's heterosexuality will probably have little influence on him.

Let's cut to the chase.

Rather than blaming him and increasing his feelings of rejection and isolation, make an effort to achieve greater happiness by accepting him. After all, he is your son and needs your love and approval no less because he is gay. At 30, he is entitled to make his own choices and must accept responsibility for them. In the final analysis, none of us has the power to change other people; we can only change ourselves.

Therefore, I urge you to open lines of communication with your son, accept him as a whole person, and try to be non-judgmental. Although Scripture seems to condemn homosexuality, your son's orientation, salvation and possible sin are issues with which he alone must deal, with whatever spiritual assistance he needs. It seems to me that invoking Biblical injunctions is a paltry excuse for condemning homosexuality, which is — by necessity — the most private of intimate personal acts. In short, it's none of the Church's business.

I do not intend to give a blanket endorsement of all kinds of sexual activity. It's OK to disapprove of specific, dangerous and irresponsible homosexual practices; the same holds true of heterosexual involvement. Sex that is hurtful, manipulative and unhealthful should be rejected, regardless of the orientation of its participants. However, if you depreciate your son as a person, you will build artificial walls in the place of compassion, understanding and warmth. Both you and he need more.

Fun Facts

The largest hummingbird, the 8-1/2 inch Patagonia gigas (or giant hummingbird), weighs less than an ounce.

Hummingbirds can fly forward, backward, up, down, sideways or hover in one place.

Hummingbird eggs are the smallest in the bird kingdom. They are no larger than the seeds of a lime.

Hummingbirds consume up to five times their weight in food and drink eight times their weight in water every day.

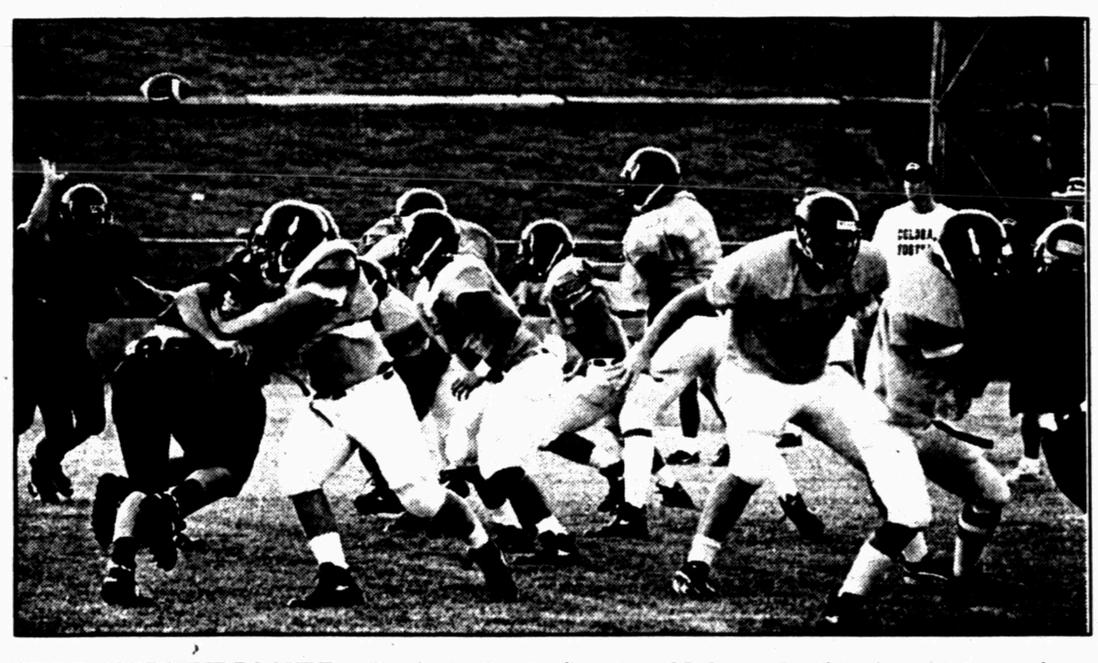
SPORTS



STANDING IN THE POCKET — Snyder's offensive line gives QB Sonny Cumbie plenty of time to throw Thursday night during a scrimmage at Colorado City. The Tigers posted four touchdowns on the evening, to just one for the Wolves. Snyder opens the regular season next Friday at Monahans. (SDN Staff Photo)

Tigers shine in final tune-up of the season

COLORADO CITY — The weather didn't halt action until there were only five minutes remaining on the clock. But the Colorado City Wolves must have felt like they'd already been struck by lightning.

In their only scrimmage before the season opener, the Snyder Tigers displayed the offensive prowess and defensive power that has them picked near the top of the district.

The Tigers capped four of their six drives with touchdowns, while limiting Colorado City to under 100 yards of total offense and only one score, before nearby lightning brought an end to the simulated game.

"I was really pleased with what I saw," Snyder head coach David Baugh said. "Our running backs ran hard, our lineman blocked well, the passing game worked, and our defense looked good. There are still different things we need to work on, but overall I thought we did a lot of things right."

Perhaps the only bad news to come out of the scrimmage was on the injury front. With strong guard Joe Esparza already out for six weeks, strong tackle Corey Knipe went down with an ankle injury midway through the action. The senior lineman had it casted this morning, and will miss the season opener, but could be back the following week

Each team ran 20 offensive plays to begin the action, followed by one quarter of a simulated game. A little over five minutes remained on the clock when play was halted.

Snyder scored twice during its initial 20 plays. Michael Loper busted loose on a 34-yard TD run, before Josh Arizmendi found his way across the goal line from eight yards out. Ralph Ramon booted both PATs.

The Tiger defense rattled the Wolves from the opening snap, forcing a turnover and holding C-City at bay until its final offensive play.

Snyder took the first possession of the simulated game and promptly went to the air. Sonny Cumbie hooked up with Matthew Grimmett for a 45-yard gain, and three plays later Arizmendi scampered in from the 12. Cumbie was 4 of 6 for 84 yards on the night.

After the score, Snyder's defense went back to work, stopping the Wolves after only four plays.

Three plays later, Loper took a handoff up the middle and raced 38 yards for his second touchdown. Ramon was good on his fourth consecutive extra-point try.

The scrimmage was the final tune-up before Snyder opens the season next Friday at Monahans.

Hayward Clay will be sidelined two weeks with sprained knee

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Chan Gailey, who is 8-0 in NFC East games as coach of the Dallas Cowboys, has almost the exact opposite record in exhibition games.

Gailey is winless in seven preseason games over two summers heading into Saturday night's game against the New England Patriots.

"I want to win," Gailey said. "I wanted that last week and the week before and the five last year. But am I going to play the starters all game so I can get a win? No. I'm not."

Gailey's skid is the longest by a Cowboys coach, topping a pair of six-game losing streaks Tom Landry endured.

"The want is to win, but the objective is sometimes other than that," Gailey said.

Dallas' 10-6 record last season proved how unimportant the 0-5 exhibition mark was.

Dallas lost 20-17 in overtime to Cleveland and 10-3 to Oakland. After playing at New England, the Cowboys end the exhibition season at home against Denver and Jacksonville.

INJURY UPDATE: Tight end Hayward Clay sprained his left knee in Wednesday night's practice on the artificial turf of Memorial Stadium and will be out at least two weeks.

Clay suffered the only serious injury of the workout, although Michael Irvin aggravated a sore left big toe and missed much of the session.

Irvin is expected to play against New England on Saturday night and Gailey said there's an outside chance Raghib "Rocket" Ismail also will play. That will be a game-time decision, Gailey said.

Running back Chris Warren, who rejoined the team Thursday getting a groin injury treated by a specialist in Colorado, won't play because he missed practice all week.

Tight end David LaFleur will play for the first time, as will defensive lineman Darren Benson and defensive back Nate Hemsley.

Prolonged injuries will keep out defensive back Charlie Williams and offensive lineman Tony Hutson, both of whom are practicing.

Offensive lineman Everett McIver was supposed to rejoin the team Thursday afternoon, but it won't be until Monday because of a limited workout schedule. Gailey is hoping McIver, out since November with a knee injury, can take a few snaps in next weekend's game against Denver, then see more action in the exhibition finale against Jacksonville.

"He needs to be in there as soon as possible," Gailey said. "I'd like him to play in two games, even if it's for a limited number of snaps."

Brewers rally back against Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Barker, making his major league debut, hit a go-ahead single in the ninth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers beat Houston 6-5 Thursday and stopped the Astros' three-game winning streak.

Barker, a 24-year-old first baseman, flied to center in the second, then singled in the third for his first major league hit. He went 2-for-5.

Brian Banks finished a career-high 4-for-4 with an RBI, and Marquis Grissom went 3-for-5 against Houston, which began the day one game ahead of second-place Cincinnati in the NL Central.

Milwaukee, which had 17 hits, led 5-2 before Tony Eusebio's two-run homer in the seventh off Scott Karl. Jeff Bagwell tie it with an RBI single in the eighth off Rocky Coppinger (2-1).

Alex Ochoa singled off Jay Powell (4-3) leading off the ninth. Grissom reached on a fielder's choice and advanced when shortstop Tim Bogar's throw to first went into the dugout for an error. Barker then singled and Grissom scored without slide.

Reliever Bob Wickman got three outs for his 25th save of the season.

Indians rebound from routs to shutout Texas

CLEVELAND (AP) — Just when Cleveland Indians fans were getting a little concerned, Steve Karsay put their minds at ease.

With area talk radio hosts screaming, "What's wrong with the Indians?" after three straight home losses by a combined 34-10 score, Karsay had a simple answer: nothing.

Karsay pitched five shutout innings to win his 10th straight decision and halt the Texas Rangers' four-game winning streak with an 8-0 victory Thursday night.

"Steve Karsay was outstanding," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said. "He had good velocity and shut down a team that has really been hot."

Karsay (10-1) allowed four hits in his second straight start after 42 relief outings. He worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning, then gave up just two hits and one walk the next four innings.

"Karsay threw as good as any pitcher has against us this year," said Rafael Palmeiro, who went 0-for-3 after hitting homers in three straight games. "His fastball was hitting 98 (mph) and he had a sharp curve, too."

Karsay's fine work in the rotation has Hargrove in a dilemma as to whether to move the right-hander back into a setup relief role.

"I just don't know right now," Hargrove said. "I would love to give him another start, but I don't know if it is best for the club."

Steve Reed, Paul Shuey and Mike Jackson completed Cleveland's fourth shutout this season and first at home since an 11-0 win over the New York Yankees on June 21, 1998.

Richie Sexson and Jim Thome each had two RBIs as the Indians avoided their first four-game sweep at home since Sept. 9-12, 1996, by the California Angels.

Karsay, on the disabled list for much of July with a strained rib cage muscle, lowered his ERA to 2.41.

SDN Sports Briefs

Slingin' Sammy Baugh Snyder tourney

The eighth annual Slingin' Sammy Baugh Snyder Golf Tournament will be held Sept. 11 at Western Texas College. Shotgun starts will be at 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Format will be a four-person scramble and cost is $140 per team. All proceeds benefit Snyder I.S.D. golf programs.

Prizes will be $600 for first place, $400 for second, $350 for third, $300 for fourth and $250 for fifth. A hole-in-one on No. 15 will win a golf cart.

To register, go by the WTC pro shop. Deadline for entry is Sept. 10.

SISD sports tickets

Season passes for all Snyder volleyball and basketball games are on sale now at the SISD business administration office. Passes are $30 for each sport, or $50 for a combined volleyball/basketball pass. The passes are good for all home games, from the varsity level through seventh grade. If purchased individually, adult tickets to home games are $2 each.

Bowling league meeting

The Men's Commercial Bowling League will hold its meeting Sept. 2 at 7 p.m. at Snyder Lanes. League play begins Sept. 9.

For murder...

Kevorkian 'protege' arrested

GALESBURG, Mich. (AP) — With Jack Kevorkian behind bars, authorities believe that his crusade to legalize doctor-assisted suicide will be carried on by his associate, Georges Reding.

Their styles differ — Kevorkian's flamboyance is in sharp contrast to Reding's low-key nature — but prosecutors say both men have equally strong convictions about what they see as the right of suffering people to die.

Kevorkian was jailed in April, sentenced to 10 to 25 years after being convicted of murdering a Lou Gehrig's disease patient. By then, Reding had taken up what his attorneys called a "fellowship" with Kevorkian, assisting in several deaths.

Authorities now believe Reding may have taken another step in picking up where Kevorkian left off. On Thursday, he was charged in New Mexico with first-degree murder in the death of a 54-year-old woman who had multiple sclerosis.

Authorities had thought Donna Brennan died of natural causes in August 1998. However, an autopsy showed she died of a sedative overdose.

Reding's association with Kevorkian became public in July 1996, when Kevorkian attorney Geoffrey Fieger introduced him at a meeting of the National Press Club, describing the connection as a fellowship.

Reding, a 74-year-old retired psychiatrist, told the crowd he had witnessed five assisted suicides and would continue to help Kevorkian judge the mental status of people who seek his help in dying.

"The five people I saw die, their serenity was so beautiful," Reding said. "It's very beautiful and it's full of sorrow."

Reding said he had joined Kevorkian because he was "embarrassed by the cowardice of my profession" in not supporting patients who seek suicide.

While the beliefs of Kevorkian and Reding may be similar, their public personas are very different.

Kevorkian often taunted, even dared, prosecutors to put him on trial. He once dressed up as Thomas Jefferson for a trial. He held a news conference to burn an order barring him from assisting in suicides.

Michael Schwartz, an attorney who has represented both Kevorkian and Reding, said he can't picture a similar performance from Reding. He has "No Trespassing" signs posted on his farm a short drive from Kalamazoo in western Michigan.

"Dr. Reding had I think once or twice talked to the press — it's not really something he's interested in," Schwartz said. "He's not interested in furthering some cause ... just helping people."

Dairy farmer Frank Drobney has lived a few houses down the road from Reding for about nine years. But he knew nothing about Reding's beliefs or activities until this summer.

Quiz show goofs: contestant's right answer said wrong

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A graduate student will get a second chance at $1 million after a game show goofed when it ruled that his guess on a $64,000 question was wrong.

David Honea, a doctoral student in computer engineering from Raleigh, had won $32,000 on ABC's new prime-time show "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire." In the show, taped Wednesday and aired Thursday night, he was stopped in a quest for $1 million by a question on which of the five Great Lakes is the second largest in area after Lake Superior.

A correct answer would have given him $64,000 and put him only four questions away from the big prize. Honea said Lake Huron. The show said Lake Michigan.

The show's host, Regis Philbin, told Honea that he had lost, and he accepted the results. After the show Honea decided to voice his doubts. After several hours of fact-checking, the show's executive producer, Michael Davies, returned with the news: Honea was correct and the show was wrong.

"He said, 'You don't have to worry. I can tell you right now you've won $64,000 and you are going to get a chance to win from here,'" Honea said today.

"I felt awful," Davies told The New York Times. He said the confusion stemmed from the fact that Lake Michigan is second-largest in volume but Lake Huron is second-largest in surface area.

"Every game show makes mistakes," Davies said. "It happens on 'Jeopardy' every so often, but they're not in prime time."

The show taped a new segment to explain that it erred and that Honea would be back to play again Aug. 29. That's the last day of the show's scheduled run, which is 13 shows playing nightly for two weeks with a day off for "Monday Night Football."

Honea, 31, can win $125,000 and a chance to keep playing if he answers another question correctly. But if he guesses incorrectly, it's back to $32,000. After hearing the question, he can also choose not to answer, and keep the $64,000.

The final show will be taped Aug. 28.

"I don't think I'll take too many risks with that amount of money," Honea said.

2 Lybians to go on trial for Pan Am bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families of victims of the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, will be briefed here next week by Scottish prosecutors about the upcoming trial in the Netherlands of two Libyans accused of the crime.

The Justice Department's Office for Victims of Crime arranged the two-day, closed meeting with Scottish prosecutors, constables and Justice officials "to try to address all the questions that arise before a trial is to begin to indeed make sure that survivors are informed," Attorney General Janet Reno told her weekly news conference Thursday.

"I think it is very important for survivors, for victims, to understand what the processes are," said Reno, who will address the families Monday.

Two Libyan intelligence officers, Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi and Lamen Khalifa Fhimah, are being tried under Scottish law in The Hague on charges of planting a suitcase bomb that blew up the jumbo jet, killing 270 people, including 189 Americans. The trial is to begin in early February.

Some victims' families are critical of the deal brokered by the State Department and the United Nations with Libya to hold the trial in the Netherlands rather than in Scotland or the United States.

"We should have held fast for a trial here or in Scotland even if it meant Libya would not turn over these two guys, because then there would be less risk that this trial would be used as an excuse to drop economic sanctions against Libya," Dan Cohen said Thursday in a telephone interview from his home in Cape May Court House, N.J.

Cohen, whose daughter Theodora died in the bombing, fears the trial of the two operatives could become "a judicial fig leaf for the rehabilitation of (Libyan leader) Moammar Gadhafi," who he believes ordered the bombing.

Noting that Great Britain cited the upcoming trial in dropping its sanctions against Libya, Cohen said he fears that even if the pair are convicted, British officials later may grant them early release from prison, rather than keep them locked up for years trying to pressure them to identify the masterminds of the bombing.

The United States has not dropped its economic sanctions, including a ban on American travel to Libya or doing business there. The United Nations suspended its sanctions, but has not decided whether to lift them permanently.

U.N. Security Council resolutions require Libya to renounce terrorism, to cooperate with the prosecution and to pay compensation to the families of the victims of the bombing if the two men are convicted.

"We continue to have a number of deep, deep concerns about Libyan support for terrorism," State Department spokesman James Rubin said Thursday. "We will be watching very carefully whether Libya complies with the requirement in the Security Council that they cooperate fully as the trial unfolds and that they pay compensation to the victims of the Pan Am 103 terrorist bombing."

Asked if U.S. officials believe Gadhafi or other senior Libyan officials ordered the bombing, Rubin replied, "Under legal advice, it establishing a secure Internet Web site with trial reports and an electronic bulletin board through which families can communicate with each other.

The archer with the apple

By Phillip Alder

Yesterday, I mentioned that doctors recommend eating an apple a day. And Cecil Beaton was firmly of the opinion that Katharine Hepburn followed that advice. Well, there was a crossbow expert who had an apple at the heart of his story: William Tell. Another well-known saying is that archers like to have two strings to their bows. Not being a toxophilite, I do not know if that is true, but it definitely applies to bridge players. For example, how would you play in seven spades here? West leads a heart to your ace.

South didn't know what would happen to his diamond queen if North had the ace-king of clubs, rather than the club ace and diamond king. Yet he bid seven because he was playing in a club with a prize of $500 for the first pair to bid and make a grand slam.

Initially, declarer thought he needed the diamond finesse to work. Then he saw another string: a 4-4 club break. So, South played a trump to dummy's seven, ruffed a low club with the spade jack, crossed back to dummy with a trump to the eight, ruffed a second low club high, and drew the last trump by leading his nine to dummy's 10. Now came the ace-king of clubs, on which South discarded his two low diamonds.

As the clubs were 4-4, the diamond queen disappeared on the established club five, allowing South to claim both his contract and the jackpot. If clubs had been 5-3 (or worse), though, declarer would have fallen back on the diamond finesse. Altogether, his odds of success were an acceptable 66.36 percent.

Feds probe Ford SUV wiper failures

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal safety agency said Thursday it is investigating complaints of windshield wiper failures on some late model sport utility vehicles made by Ford Motor Co.

There are nearly 1.5 million of the 1997-99 Ford Explorers and Mercury Mountaineers on the road.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Agency, in a monthly report, said it was investigating 35 complaints from consumers asserting the windshield wipers malfunctioned in inclement weather. Either the wipers stopped, worked intermittently, or operated even though they were shut off, the consumers complained.

"Ford is aware of the investigation and we're cooperating fully with NHTSA," said spokesman Mike Vaughn in Dearborn, Mich.

None of the consumers said they crashed because of wiper failures. However, the report said: "Wipers are a critical automotive safety system without which a vehicle operator is unable to adequately see the road surface and other vehicles during precipitation. This inability to see could result in a crash."

The agency also is investigating 31 complaints that the plastic fuel tanks are cracking and leaking on some older model Ford Windstar minivans. No fires were reported.

The minivans are from model years 1995 through 1997. More than 700,000 Windstars were manufactured during those years.

The agency also is looking at whether the rate of air bag deaths in Hyundai Accent cars is too high, the report said. That investigation was announced last month, but the report included more details.

NHTSA has identified five child deaths that may have been caused by deployment of front passenger air bags in minor to moderate crashes.

Ag chemical conference set

The 47th annual Agricultural Chemical Conference will be held Sept. 15, at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, 1501 6th St., Lubbock.

There will be 5.5 CEUs offered. There will be general sessions and three concurrent sessions to follow.

Conference registration will be $50 if postmarked by Aug. 25. After Aug. 25 the fee will be $70.

Escaped murderer recaptured

MENDENHALL, Pa. (AP) — Luck ran out this morning for escaped murderer Norman Johnston, who was captured, exhausted and wet, after a manhunt that lasted for nearly three weeks.

"We couldn't believe it was him," said Trooper Glenn Blue, one of three officers who found Johnston. "All the fighting we heard he did, he pretty much gave up. He didn't put up a fight and we're very happy about that."

Johnston's arrest came after two other fugitives who escaped from a state prison on Monday were captured Thursday night 100 miles away in Hanover Township. The escapes had prompted Gov. Tom Ridge to order a statewide prison lockdown and call for a review of the corrections system.

Johnson was captured in some bushes behind a home in a housing development about 45 minutes after residents had called police and reported hearing noises, state police Capt. Henry Oleyniczak said.

He yelled "I'm not armed! I'm not armed!" to the troopers before falling to the ground and surrendering, state police said. "He told the troopers he was tired, and 'You guys wouldn't quit,'" Oleyniczak said.

Johnston had cuts on his body and looked tired and wet as he was led into a state police barracks, his hands and feet shackled. He waived arraignment and was to be transported back to prison.

Johnston, 48, escaped Aug. 2 from the State Correctional Institution at Huntingdon in western Pennsylvania after cutting his way through a cell window and two fences. He left behind an elaborate dummy that gave him as much as a 10-hour head-start on authorities.

He returned to the area where he had grown up and had run a multimillion-dollar burglary ring with his two brothers. During his 19 days on the run, there were numerous sightings of him in the area he knew well and two near-captures at a park in Nottingham and a diner in Newark, Del.

Police began another intense search in southeastern Chester County with helicopters.

American doctor's family among earthquake victims

ATLANTA (AP) — Dr. Babur Kilic had planned to join his wife, their five children and his parents this weekend for a vacation in Turkey.

The Marietta anesthesiologist instead left for Istanbul to make funeral arrangements for four of his children and his father. They were among the thousands of people killed Tuesday when a strong earthquake shook western Turkey. They are the only known Americans to die.

Kilic's wife, Jan, and 3-year-old daughter, Natalie, survived the quake, as did his mother, Turkan, who is in critical condition.

Jan Kilic, her children and in-laws were on vacation in the resort town of Yalova, 90 miles southwest of Istanbul, when the five-story building in which they were staying collapsed.

The women were pulled out of rubble after 16 hours, but it was the next day — about 36 hours after the quake — before Kilic's cousin and other rescuers were able to find Natalie, said Jan Kilic's brother, Bill Kemp.

"They felt there were no more survivors. But my brother-in-law's cousin ... went back to the site. He kept digging. ... He was able to find Natalie alive," he said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Kemp said his sister at first believed she had lost all five of her children. But Natalie suffered only a black eye, "which is a miracle in itself," he said.

Cigdem Kilic, a sister-in-law of Jan Kilic, said Ms. Kilic talked to her father-in-law, Nizan, for 12 hours as they were pinned in the rubble.

Nizan Kilic did his best to comfort his daughter-in-law, Cigdem Kilic told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. "Then she couldn't hear him anymore. He stopped talking."

Jan Kilic had injuries to her head, neck and lower back, Kemp said. Her mother-in-law has internal injuries and is partially paralyzed from a stroke, he said.

Babur Kilic is "trying to be strong," Cigdem Kilic said.

"He's very upset, but he's also thankful that his wife is alive and one of his children is alive," she said.

Kemp said the rescuers who saved Ms. Kilic, her daughter and mother-in-law had ignored Turkish officials who wanted them to leave the building because there was a gas leak.

"She realizes that it's a miracle from God that Natalie survived. That's the silver lining in the tragedy."

The Kilic children killed were: Jeffrey Michael, 6; Jennifer Kayla, 5; David Tansan, 2; and Katherine "Katie" Michelle, 9 months old. Kilic's father, Nizam Kilic, had lived with his wife, Turkan, in Marietta.

Kilic and his two brothers are anesthesiologists who practice at Wellstar-Kennestone Hospital in Marietta. Thomas Hurd, president of Georgia Anesthesiologists, said, "we initially heard that all the children were dead."

On Thursday, members of Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Sandy Springs, which the Kilics attended for the past six years, spoke fondly of Ms. Kilic and remembered her children's smiling faces and bright eyes.

"The nursery workers always fought over who would take care of her kids," said Gwen Jenkins, the church's preschool minister. "It's a big loss for our church."

Snyder man found dead at his home

A ruling is expected this afternoon in the death of 31-year-old Juan Ygnacio Benitez who apparently hung himself in a room of his home at 2801 Ave. M.

City Judge Ben Smith was called to the scene and said later he would make his ruling after talking with investigating officers and family members.

Benitez was found by his wife around 7 this morning.

Snyder Police Sgt. Jerry Parker said there is no evidence of foul play.

Police receive runaway report

Law enforcement handled two separate reports involving runaways Thursday.

A man requested to speak to a deputy at 5:50 p.m. in reference to his 16-year-old daughter not returning home. An offense report for runaway was filed.

At 6:55 p.m., a woman notified officers that her 12-year-old son had not returned home. An offense report was submitted for runaway.

The boy was located at 7:28 p.m. and returned to his mother.

Roosevelt Asberry reported a theft from his residence in the 2800 block of Alvin Avenue at 11:46 a.m. An offense report for Class B theft was filed.

Two subjects were taken into custody Thursday.

Department of Public Safety troopers arrested a 19-year-old male at 10:18 p.m. in the 3400 block of College for driving under the influence.

A 32-year-old male was taken into custody at 11:37 p.m. at the American Legion for public intoxication.

Officers worked a two-vehicle minor accident at 3:24 p.m. Thursday. Involved were a 1986 Chevrolet Silverado pickup driven by Catarino Vasquez Jr., 62, of 1713 8th Street and a 1993 Pontiac Grand Prix driven by Shirley Jannette Baker, 59, of 15127 FM 612 in Fluvanna.
