Conferees give Carter coal plan tentative OK

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate energy conferees gave unanimous but tentative approval Friday to the bulk of President Carter's plan to make power plants and industries switch from oil and natural gas to coal.

The compromise bill could send electricity prices soaring to consumers in areas where power plants now burn large quantities of these fuels.

It would prohibit new plants from burning oil or natural gas, give the government the power to force existing plants to shift to coal and generally prohibit any use of natural gas by utilities after 1990.

Although the legislation is a compromise between a tougher bill passed by the House and a milder Senate version, it contains most of the coal-conversion provisions sought by the President.

Conference Chairman Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., who met with Carter shortly before the panel acted, said the compromise appeared acceptable to the administration. He predicted Carter would sign it.

The compromise is subject to a final vote by conferees after they complete action on other portions of the national energy legislation.

Conferees have now completed action on two of the five-bill energy program. They earlier reached tentative agreement on a bill containing a wide variety of energy-conservation programs.

That leaves three major bills to be resolved before Congress can send Carter the final energy legislation: natural gas pricing, energy taxes and electricity utility rate revision.

It is in these remaining areas where the largest differences are between the two chambers and where the administration received the biggest setbacks at the hands of the Senate. The House passed the president's entire program largely intact.

The conference committee also voted Friday to ban future hookups of outdoor decorative gas lamps and to require homeowners and businesses that now have them to replace them by 1982.

There are between two and four million such lamps in the United States. Conference leaders said that while the step would save a significant amount of natural gas, the decision to ban them was more important as a symbolic gesture than as an energy-conservation program.

Forcing power plants to convert to coal could cost utilities as much as $45 billion, costs that would largely be passed along to consumers in higher monthly electric bills, committee aides said.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who led the House conferees on this topic, said it is impossible to predict how much more consumers could expect to pay as a result of the bill.

Desolate Castle Gap may harbor treasure

CASTLE GAP PARK — Were this place a commercial enterprise, dependent on repeat business, it would probably flop.

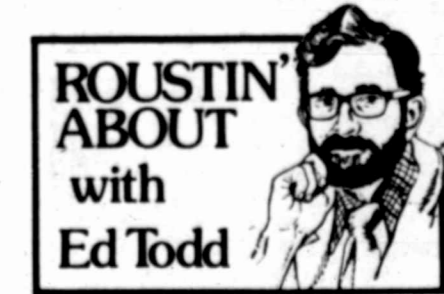

Most parks would.

It doesn't have the attraction of a full-service state or federal park. It has wind and rock, caves, gullies and history.

But it does afford a desolation that, strangely enough, can be soothing — particularly if you're fed up with city traffic and crowds.

Castle Gap is a legend. It is replete with stories of migrating, marauding Indians, of '49ers heading westward for gold, of the Butterfield Overland Mail Route, of cattle drives and settlers and of Mexican Emperor Maximilian's gold.

The gold is buried "in the vicinity," which today is midway between Crane and McCamey.

Begin makes appeal to Egyptians

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin appealed directly to the Egyptian people Friday to end bloodshed and "start on the road to friendship."

The extraordinary, handwritten plea came amid fresh fighting on Israel's border with Lebanon and reports of more casualties and the downing of an Israeli jet. Israel denied any jet was downed, however.

Begin's statement, addressed to the "citizens of Egypt," appeared to be a spontaneous reply to a speech by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who offered Wednesday to ignore the technicalities blocking peace talks and go anywhere, even to the Israeli parliament, to negotiate.

"Let us say one to another, and let it be a silent oath by both peoples, of Egypt and Israel: no more wars, no more bloodshed and no more threats," said Begin, reading his statement to reporters.

In a quick response, Egypt challenged Begin to prove his sincerity by withdrawing Israeli troops from occupied Arab lands.

An official government statement carried on Cairo television said, "This is the only way to make the Arab people believe his talks on peace and respond to them because peace cannot be achieved through occupation of lands and neglecting the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Egypt accused Begin of trying to divide the Arabs because he "limited his appeal to the Egyptian people while he knows that they are part of the Arab world and had never been alone in their wars against Zionist expansionist designs."

The Israeli military command said, meanwhile, that two air force planes, sent to patrol southern Lebanon after a Palestinian rocket attack, encountered anti-aircraft fire from a grove near the Mediterranean town of Tyre, 12 miles north of the border. The planes attacked the source of fire and returned safely to base, a spokesman said. He said the firing was from an inhabited area.

Palestinians in southern Lebanon claimed a new Israeli air strike killed or wounded 12 persons in the area, and that an Israeli jet was shot down during the raid.

At the United Nations, Israeli

Ambassador Chaim Herzog blamed Palestinian guerrillas for civilian deaths in Israeli air raids against southern Lebanon, saying the guerrillas stored their ammunition too close to population centers.

At the same time, the U.N. General Assembly's special political committee recommended two resolutions against Israel for the assembly's adoption and only Israel opposed them. The measures dealt with Israeli treatment of Palestinian refugees.

A few hours earlier, the military command said Katyusha rockets fired from Lebanon landed near an Israeli kibbutz, causing no damage or casualties. Israeli gunners returned fire, a spokesman said.

Officials in Beirut said the Israeli gunners shelled five southern Lebanese towns for three hours with no casualties reported.

The Katyusha missiles that struck near Yiron, two miles south of the central sector of the Lebanese border, were of the same sort that killed three Israelis in the town of Nahariya this week and prompted a strong retaliatory air raid by Israel Wednesday that left 110 dead and 150 wounded.

For widow, Vietnam finally over

By SHARON CONWAY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Eleven years to the day after the downing of her husband's fighter plane over North Vietnam, Pat Mearns watched quietly Friday as a horse-drawn caisson took the casket of Col. Arthur S. Mearns to an Arlington National Cemetery graveside for burial.

It had been another cloudy Veterans Day when Mearns set out as the flight leader of a squadron of F-105s for a target area northeast of Hanoi. After a successful strike, the group was returning home when enemy ground fire hit and downed Mearns' plane.

He had volunteered for fighter pilot action in Vietnam, and during his 14-year career in the Air Force, volunteered for duty in Korea in 1955. "He loved to fly," said another mourner, Rep. Robert Dornan, D-Calif.

"We have to make sure this war doesn't happen again," said Mrs. Mearns. "There are over 600 still missing in action and this ceremony in a way is honoring them."

"The war is over for Art," said Dornan, who knew of Mearns through the work Mrs. Mearns had done for MIA families in his district.

Many who attended the ceremony Friday were fellow flyers and many had learned their flying from Mearns during the years he taught at Luke Air Force Base.

"For a war that went on too long, the pain is at an end. For someone who waited for so long, the war and its pain are over," said Lt. Col. Bruce Cooke, the chaplain who conducted the service.

The hallmarks of full military honors — the flag-draped casket, the fusillade of musketry, the skirl of bagpipes, the lonely, searing notes of the bugle — attended the burial. They were requested by Mrs. Mearns "in honor of those who have yet to return." Friday's ceremony took place on the day 59 years ago that an armistice to end all wars was celebrated.

The cause of those who have yet to return has occupied much of the energies of Mrs. Mearns, filling the void caused by her husband's uncertain status as one of the thousands of American servicemen listed as missing in action. She joined the National League of Families of Servicemen Missing in Action and rose to a position of national leadership.

In addition, she raised their two young girls, Mary Ann and Frances, and worked as an educator and nurse in the Los Angeles school system. For her, Friday was an end and a beginning.

"We will leave that work (with MIAs) behind now. We have to pick up our lives and start again," she said.

Years of doubt were finally resolved when Mearns' status as missing in

More spice than sugar makes bakery X-rated

By BURT BERLINER

NEW YORK (AP) — Sex and the sweet tooth? A case of more spice than sugar?

Call it whatever, it was something tastefully titillating, passionately palatable that inspired The Erotic Baker Inc., a shop on Manhattan's West Side that features gingerbread men — and women — considerably more explicit than the ones grandma used to bake.

"We're not censors, just bakers," say owners Patrika Brown and Karen Dwyer from behind the counter of their new shop, which opens for business next week.

"Anything goes," the ladies say, including custom-baked fantasies. Designed to satiate even the most amorous appetites, concoctions include rump cakes, crimson lips, bun loaves, his and her breads, candy cremes, hearts and an assortment of kisses.

And the cheesecake is hardly sexist when it comes to the gingerbread cookies; large, luscious ladies and gentlemen, their particulars trimmed in fudge. Licorice whips sell for $1.50 each.

"It started out as a joke," recalls Ms. Dwyer, 30, a singer and actress from Newport, R.I. "We were sitting around with friends and got to talking about erotic art. I said, 'Wouldn't it be funny if you could buy erotically shaped cakes and breads?'"

She and Ms. Brown talked it over, took their love of erotic art and sweets, and stirred in $20,000 to launch their tiny shop.

Counterfeit $300,000 confiscated

ODESSA — In what was described as an "undercover operation," Odessa police seized nearly $300,000 of what they say is counterfeit money Friday morning.

Officers arrested Coleman Cox, 23, of Sanderson at a motel located on U.S. Highway 80 in Odessa where the money was found, Capt. Jack Fillyaw said Friday.

Coleman was charged with forgery by passing before Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris who set bond at $50,000. Coleman remained in jail Friday night.

Fillyaw said the arrest was the result of several months' investigation by narcotics officers of the Odessa Police Department, the Secret Service and Department of Public Safety investigators.

The investigation began after counterfeit currency began showing up "all over" Odessa, Fillyaw said.

You take the ace of hearts and draw two rounds of trumps. When West discards a club you must get to dummy for a trump finesse. Suppose you play the deuce of diamonds to dummy's jack. You then take the trump finesse and draw the last trump. The next step is to cash the ace of diamonds.

You get the second piece of bad news when East declares a heart. If you overtake the queen of diamonds with dummy's king, West's ten will become a stopper, you must lose three clubs and a heart.

CORRECTION

Now go back to the first diamond trick. Instead of leading the deuce to dummy's jack, lead the queen to dummy's king. It is the same play you must make at some stage; but this is the right time for it.

You continue with a trump finesse and draw East's last trump. Next you lead the ace of diamonds, discovering the bad break. The difference is that you can now lead the deuce of diamonds and finesse with dummy's nine. Since you are in dummy, you can continue with the king of diamonds and the last diamond.

ANSWER: Bid 3 NT. Adding your own 10 points to those shown by partner, you know that your side has 26-28 points. This should be enough for nine tricks at notrump, but may not be enough for 11 tricks at diamonds. Bidding diamonds on the way to 3 NT will merely help the opponents pick their best opening lead.

Airline prose on weird side

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

OVER DENVER (AP) — In case nobody has noticed, the airline in-flight magazines are going in for some very uplifting literature these days.

Now on a cross-country hop or even the milk run out of Scottsbluff, Neb., or aboard the Boston shuttle you can dip into best sellers like Walker Percy's "Lancelot," John Cheever's "Falconer" and Phil Caputo's "A Rumor of War" instead of memorizing that little plastic card telling where the exits are.

So far, none of the jet set culture custodians has dared to break any new literary contrails with an offering like Erica Jong's "Fear of Flying" or Piers Paul Read's "Alive: the Story of Andes Survivors," in which the passenger list gets confused with the menu, but there is real hope for the English language at 37,000 feet.

After years of heavy turbulence on the lips of stewards making cabin announcements, the mother tongue at last may be ticketed, as they say aloft, for friendlier skies and not have to deplane from the rear.

Both "ticketed" (as in "are you ticketed?") and "deplane" failed to make the latest edition of the Oxford English Dictionary, but they are hardly the outer abominations of airline prose.

Just this morning as we were taxi-ing (to cite another noun converted to a verb at great expense by the aircraft industry) onto the runway, the captain came on the horn to wish us good morning and announce: "This is United's Flight 98 nonstop to Los Angeles. If there is anyone aboard not going to Los Angeles, this might be an excellent opportunity to deplane."

Meaning, I suppose, that it could get a bit dicey deplaning from the rear or wherever when we climbed out over Long Island Sound to our cruising altitude.

"Are you lunching with us today?" cooed a sweet young thing, genuflecting by my side in the aisle in a courtesy borrowed from "The King and I." Have you noticed how courteously cabin crews have become lately, both in gestures and lingo, as the competition for customers gets tougher up there? Now where else did she think I'd be lunching at 27,000 feet over Lake Erie?

The question might be valid on Freddie Laker's no frills, brown bag airline or maybe aboard Air Syria during the Ramadan fast but there wasn't much choice aboard this "nonstopper," as the Flight Services Supervisor — the head stewardess in drag — kept calling our flight.

Somewhere west of the wide Missouri ("Down there on your left," the captain advised those of us who might be inclined to look skyward for the mighty river), the seatbelt sign came on "purely as a routine precaution" on account of what was deemed "light turbulence" was causing pots and pans to rattle in the galley closets, overhead luggage compartments to burst open and one tray of cocktails to seek a higher altitude.

"Our light turbulence unfortunately is accelerating to normal turbulence and we now have head winds," the captain came on again in his normal May Day voice. "So will the flight staff please pick up the cabin and resume their seats?"

"Pick up the cabin? Did that include the guy who had fallen out of the John?"

A new gimmick on some airlines these days, "as part of our audio program," permits passengers to eavesdrop on conversations between the flight deck and the tower on approach. There the prose style can get very dramatic. It sometimes beats the in-flight movie.

"United 98, take runway four, 275 degrees and taxi to Gate 43."

"What's he doing down there? Who is that? What's his heading?"

"That's Northwest 64. We're using parallel runways today."

"Well, you might have said, so," suggested our cool captain with just a bit of pique trailing sparks from beneath his peaked cap. Then he got back on the blower and in an emotional farewell address thanked us for choosing his airline over all the others in the world. Dickens doing a deathbed number couldn't have phrased it more poignantly.

One felt guilty for passing up Air Ghana, Cathay Pacific and Icelandic Air and all the bereft others to fly into Los Angeles or Scottsbluff or wherever today, but we were grateful for his joy at having us aboard. Gratitude is such a rare commodity in the world today, those of us deplaning through the forward door could barely keep our passions in check acknowledging the stewards' tender adieus and muffled sobs as we passed out into the terminal area to join the unticketed masses in the baggage recovery area.

But for airline rhetoric at its most recherche, nothing has shaken me to the soles of my earth shoes like the question posed by a drawing, magnoliascented young thing at a checkin counter in New Orleans:

"Sir, would you care to pick your seat on the plane?"

I don't know what they do south of the Mason Dixon line, M'am, but up North we have some standards of privacy.

Roger and out.

Ohioan's find: valuable relic or piece of junk?

By RICHARD E. BLOOM

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Fred Wayble of New Concord, Ohio, has a mystery on his hands — a 10½-pound piece of metal shaped like an ancient face.

Although he has questioned both the Ohio Historical Society and the Smithsonian Institution, its identity remains unestablished.

Was it forged by the hands of prehistoric inhabitants of the lands now within Guernsey County? Is it a discarded calling card of some advanced race from beyond the stars, or simply a hoax? No one knows.

Wayble walked into the newsroom of the Zanesville Times Recorder lugging what appeared to be a cast iron artifact and asked for help in identifying the "face."

Newsroom personnel turned it over in their hands, running fingers over its rough, pocked surface; tapped it with pencils, weighed it and speculated on its age and origin. But skepticism veiled each examination.

Wayble's oval-shaped "mystery" is approximately 9 inches long and 5 inches wide at the eyes. It bears a prominent nose and the faint outline of a mouth, almost as if it had been poured from a death mask.

And while the artifact has been in Wayble's possession for at least 30 years, he says, its age and origin remain the largest gaps in the puzzle.

"One day back in '43 or '44, I think, my dad and I were tearing down this old log house over in Londonderry Township in Guernsey County," Wayble said.

"I happened to be walking under this little tree near the house when I stepped onto something that felt like a stone. I bent down to pick it up and that stone turned out to be the nose," he said, running his finger along its ridge.

Wayble said the metal object was not embedded in the ground, "just covered with some leaves and dirt." He brushed the debris away but that's all he did.

"I left it just like it is, never tried to clean it. I knew if I rubbed it with steel wool or something I might scratch the face."

Although it was an unusual find, neither Wayble nor his father gave it much thought. He said they took it home and used it as a doorstop. There it lay until some three years ago when Wayble's curiosity nudged him into his first identity search.

"When I finally became interested in it, I took it to the Historical Society in Columbus. But after looking at it they said I'd probably have to take it to a larger facility. They had checked every reference book on hand and couldn't come up with anything close to it," he said.

Officials of the society doubted that Ohio Indians forged the piece since they were unfamiliar with metals. But they did speculate it could possibly have been deposited by Michigan Indians, more familiar with the craft.

Still determined to seek out an identification, Wayble took his "mystery" to Marietta College. There "a woman said she couldn't begin to tell me what it was or how much it might be worth. But she did say it was priceless."

Disappointed, Wayble returned home, shoved the iron back into the paper sack and placed it on a shelf in the closet. It lay there undisturbed until a friend, Omie Mohler, came across it recently.

So Wayble and Mohler embarked on a second identity search which took them to the Times Recorder newsroom, where Wayble turned it over to one of the employees planning a weekend trip to Washington.

She stopped by the Smithsonian and, unable to meet personally with anyone there, left photographs of the face and requested any help authorities might be able to offer.

A few days later, she received a reply from Robert Elder, Museum specialist in the Department of Anthropology, which read, in part:

"After careful examination by our several curators, we find no adequate basis for identifying it."

Proposal may mean long ride while in labor

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Women in labor might face four-hour automobile trips to have their babies if proposed federal cost cutting rules take effect, hospital officials heard Friday.

Some 250 members of the Texas Hospital Association gathered to map a pressure campaign to block the proposed U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare rules.

They received advice from U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, and sympathy from Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who let fly a blast at his old friend, President Carter.

One standard would limit the number of hospital delivery rooms.

A hospital in a metropolitan area with more than 100,000 people could have an obstetric unit only if it delivered 2,000 babies a year, while the benchmark in smaller area places would be 500 babies.

Richard Bettis, an association staff member, said 88 per cent of Texas hospitals responding to a survey failed to meet that standard.

Travel time to the next closest obstetrical hospitals would range from five minutes to four hours and would average 54 minutes, the survey showed.

"We don't think Texans are going to be willing to have their wives in labor go 100 miles down the road in order to have delivery," said Bob English, senior vice-president of the association.

He said, "The hole card is finally being turned over for a comprehensive national insurance program dictated by a very authoritarian HEW."

HEW has set a Nov. 22 deadline for commenting on the proposed guidelines, which would be enforced by withholding federal money, such as Medicare and Medicaid payments, from hospitals that do not comply.

O. Ray Hurst, association president, said the American Hospital Association plans to file suit in Washington to nullify the HEW rules if they are put into effect.

Sam Edwards, association vice-president for research and development, said curtailment of bed space and services mandated by the guidelines, would force hospitals to turn away one in four patients.

Briscoe said the regulations would result in a shortage of health care facilities and doctors in many areas of Texas.

"It is unfortunate, but all too clear, that in President Carter's dealings with the Washington bureaucracy on the formation of the national health policy as with the national energy policy that the bureaucrats have won them both," Briscoe said.

Collins advised a fast and furious letter-writing campaign, enlisting congressmen to pressure HEW to change the regulations.

"HEW can take any bill we write and when they get through interpreting it, you wouldn't recognize it," he told the group by telephone.

"You're telling Noah about the ark," said association president O. Ray Hurst.

1,000 hurt, at least 45 dead in train explosion

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An explosion Friday aboard a freight train loaded with about 30 tons of dynamite killed at least 45 persons and injured about 1,000 others at a station in the city of Iri, 120 miles south of Seoul.

Police said they feared the death toll would climb as rescue workers continued to search the area. There was no immediate word what caused the explosion, which carved a crater 60 yards deep, authorities said.

The thunderous blast, heard within a radius of 10 miles, damaged or set fire to about 500 buildings around the railroad station, police said.

Most of the casualties were among 700 patrons of a theater near the railroad station who had been listening to a popular Korean singer when the explosion took the roof off.

National police said they recovered 15 bodies but that many more persons may be trapped in the rubble. The other two known dead were railroad workers.

The blast occurred at 9 p.m. (7 a.m. EST), and about 20 fire trucks along with scores of civilian defense workers and police sped to the scene to fight the inferno and help in the rescue, officials reported.

Hospitals in and around Iri soon reported they were crowded with injured, including many people cut by flying glass from smashed windows.

Police said the fires were brought under control within two hours. The extent of damage was not immediately known.

There was also uncertainty over the cargo of the freight. Initial reports said it was carrying chemical products, but one radio station reported that the train was loaded with dynamite en route from Incheon, a major port city near Seoul, to Kwangju about 60 miles south of Iri.

Laser pioneer awarded patent after long fight

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 18 years of court battles — including three years when the military refused to let him see his own notes — a 57-year-old inventor has been granted one of the basic patents on the laser.

"It looks like I'll have something to retire on," reflected R. Gordon Gould.

Gould, vice president of a small optical fiber firm in Gaithersburg, Md., has been officially recognized as developer of the system using solid material, such as a ruby, to generate the laser beam. This type of laser represents about one-third of the high-intensity light devices now in use.

In addition, Gould has patents pending on lasers using gas instead of solids, as well as several applications of the laser. At least one of these has already been recognized in Canada, although not yet in the United States.

Gould's long fight for recognition was hampered by a run-in with the military establishment that started in 1959 when he sought to interest defense officials in his work.

Seeing the possibility of a "death ray," they classified his patent application secret. And since Gould had some left-wing political involvement in the early 1940s, he was denied security clearance, his notebooks were confiscated and he wasn't allowed to work with defense experts following up his ideas.

"That slowed down their laser development," he noted, "because they couldn't tell me what they were doing and get guidance from me."

And, he added, "you'd think that when they classify something and put it in a vault it would be safe, wouldn't you. But when I got the material back after three years, one of the notebooks was missing."

This proved less of a problem for Gould than it might have been, however, since he had kept copies of the notebooks without the knowledge of the Defense Department.

The incident did result in some problems during his legal battle for his patent rights, however.

Opponents questioned whether his work was detailed enough for a patent since it took the military two years to make a laser while working with his notes. Gould responded that if he had been allowed to consult with them and show them how to follow his plans, it wouldn't have taken so long.

Lasers with sales currently estimated at $1 billion a year and projected at $5 billion by 1984, are used for delicate surgery, in the transmission of photographs, for cutting metal, for determining distances, relaying communications and for military applications.

Basically they are devices for amplifying light into a powerful straight beam. It can be focused to a fine point to generate heat or extreme light intensity with great delicacy.

The word laser, coined by Gould in a 1957 notebook, stands for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation.

The announcement of the patent has reverberated through the laser industry, with manufacturers facing the possibility of new license fees and royalty payments on the devices.

Eugene M. Lang, head of the firm which is marketing Gould's patent rights, said he expects when all the patent issues are settled, Gould will have a claim on 90 per cent of the lasers manufactured or sold in the United States.

He indicated that the firm will ask for a percentage of the first selling price of the machines and will seek payment from users only if no agreement can be reached concerning lasers already sold.

Reaction has been mixed from laser manufacturers, which now face payments extending during the 17-year life of the patent. An earlier patent issued to Dr. Charles H. Townes and Arthur Schawlow expired more than a year ago.

Townes had developed the maser, a device producing microwave radiation, and proceeded from this to laser development at about the same time as Gould.

Gould's saga began at Columbia University in 1957 where his first notebook showing the basic laser concept was prepared and notarized.

But Townes and Schawlow applied for a patent first, in 1958, and published their work first in scientific journals.

So the legal battle began, resulting at first in disappointment for Gould when courts held that he couldn't count his first 1957 notebook, but only a later one, notarized after the Townes-Schawlow application in 1958.

Oil company to drill second Alaska test well

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Co. USA announced Friday it plans to drill a second test well near a recently completed Point Thomson wildcat on Alaska's North Slope.

Exxon announced Nov. 1 that the No. 1 Point Thomson unit well on the Beaufort Sea coast about 50 miles east of the prolific Prudhoe Bay field had flowed oil at a rate of 2,300 barrels a day on an initial test.

The second test well, the No. 2 Point Thomson, will be four miles west-southwest of the discovery well and will have a proposed depth of 13,500 feet.

Drilling is expected to begin early next year, pending acquisition of necessary permits.

The technical location of the second test well is 2,615 feet north of the south line and 1,801 feet west of the east line of Section 3, Township 9 North, Range 22 East, Umiat Meridian, North Slope.

The No. 1 Point Thomson was drilled to a depth of 13,298 and the eight-hour flow test was made from perforations from a depth of 12,963 to 13,050 feet. Exxon is planning additional tests.

In addition to Exxon, other operators with interests in the 40,000-acre state unit include Pennzoil, Al-Aquitane, Carling National Breweries, Coastal States Gas, Forest Oil, Trans World Oil & Gas, Newmont Oil, Oil Resources, Sunlite International, Chevron, Mobil, Phillips, Cities Service, Atlantic Richfield, Continental and a group headed by Tipperary Corp.

Carter tax cut hoped simple

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will propose tax cuts for individuals and business next year, but probably not the comprehensive tax reform program he promised during his campaign, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal predicted Friday.

He said Carter will decide within a few weeks on the tax bill he will send to Congress early next year. But Blumenthal said he hopes it will not include "long and complicated" tax changes because they would have an unsettling effect on the economy.

"My advice is that tax action next year be relatively simple so that we get confidence built within the business and financial community and do something to provide tax relief for individuals and incentives for business," Blumenthal said.

"That should be the first priority, and I think it will be," he added.

While Blumenthal didn't mention tax cut figures during his appearance before the Senate Banking Committee, he has said previously the administration is considering tax reductions of between $15 billion and $20 billion next year for business and individuals.

He did say he thought a start could be made on tax reform. However, if the administration decides to keep the tax bill simple next year, it probably would not include Carter's previous pledges to eliminate tax preferences on capital gains and deductions for business lunches.

Also eliminated probably would be

Weather may warm

A slight warming trend is expected to settle into the Permian Basin this weekend, as temperatures are expected to rise into the lower 70s during the day and dip into the lower 40s tonight and Sunday night.

Winds are expected to blow southerly from 5 to 10 mph.

The high temperature Friday was 67 degrees and the overnight low Friday was 30 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Clear skies and cool but pleasant weather was reported Friday night in Stanton, Rankin, Andrews, Lamesa, Big Lake and Odessa.

the plan to reduce the double taxation of corporate dividends.

Carter said at his news conference Thursday he had not yet made any final decisions on what to include in the tax bill.

In addition to the retreat on comprehensive tax reform, Blumenthal also disclosed two other apparent changes in administration policy.

In answer to a question, he said the administration does not put the fight against unemployment ahead of combatting inflation, an apparent reversal of Carter's campaign pledge that creating jobs would be the first priority of his administration.

"We can't deal with one without the other ... They are of equal importance," Blumenthal said.

But when the treasury secretary said that the administration has no basic differences with Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board, it was almost more than committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., could stand.

Proxmire said he was "perplexed, puzzled and disappointed" because Blumenthal seemed to be "endorsing the Fed's restrictive money supply."

Proxmire said he thinks recent Fed actions to restrain money growth will lead to still higher interest rates and slower economic growth.

But although he pressed Blumenthal to admit some serious disagreement with Burns, the secretary acknowledged only that there have been differences on tactics and that those were not serious.

"As for the general trend of monetary policy, I'm satisfied at this point he has been about right, in a very difficult situation," Blumenthal said.

Mendelsohn withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nomination of Robert Mendelsohn to a high Interior Department post was withdrawn Friday after a California agency announced plans to sue him in connection with an alleged scheme to launder campaign funds.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus announced the withdrawal of the nomination and said it was at Mendelsohn's request.

secretary Claudia Townsend said the withdrawal would be accepted, but that the White House had no other comment.

The California Fair Political Practices Commission said it planned to file suit against Mendelsohn on Monday alleging "widespread violations of California's campaign disclosure laws."

Andrus said he felt certain Mendelsohn would be exonerated and he would resubmit Mendelsohn's name at that time.

In a statement issued through the Interior Department, Mendelsohn said the action by the California agency was "wrong and totally unjust."

He said he voluntarily took a lie detector examination and that it supported his contention that he had done nothing wrong.

"The results of that test were made available to the commission," he said.

Mendelsohn is accused of being negligent in supervising the reporting activities of his 1974 campaign committee. He ran unsuccessfully for state controller.

A spokesman for the Interior Department said the post Mendelsohn was to have filled would remain open "on a permanent basis."

The California commission said it planned to file the suit against Mendelsohn, his campaign committee and five other individuals.

"We have uncovered what we believe to be very serious violations of the campaign disclosure law," commission chairman Daniel Lowenstein told a news conference.

The commission said $26,500 was funneled into Mendelsohn's unsuccessful campaign for state controller and that "a conspiracy to cover up the true source of the money still exists."

Firemen check cause of blaze

ODESSA — Firemen here are investigating the cause of a fire Friday afternoon that heavily damaged a home here.

The fire began on a back porch of the residence located at 3308 Lanewood Drive about 2:09 p.m. Four city fire units battled the blaze for more than two hours, a fire department spokesman said.

No occupants of the house belonging to Terry Williams were home at the time the fire began, fire department officials said.

DEATHS

Miller H. Box

FORT WORTH — Miller H. Box, 70, of Rockwood died Thursday in a Fort Worth hospital after a short illness. He was the stepfather of Mrs. Sue Johnson of Midland and the grandfather of Brian Johnson of Midland.

Services will be at 2:20 p.m. today in the Rockwood Baptist Church with burial in Rockwood Cemetery directed by Henderson Funeral Home of Santa Anna.

Box was born Jan. 22, 1907, in Rockwood. He married Julia Wise Nov. 29, 1929, in Brownwood. She died in 1969. He then married Ruby L. Pritchard Jan. 20, 1970, in Santa Anna. He lived most of his life in Rockwood. He was a security guard for General Dynamics in Fort Worth before his retirement in 1972. He was a member of the Baptist church and the River Oaks Masonic Lodge No. 1311 in Fort Worth.

Other survivors include his wife, a daughter, a stepdaughter, two stepsons, three sisters, two brothers, nine grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Way said paved to settle six-week-old dock strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The way was paved Friday for an early settlement of a six-week-old selective strike by 50,000 Atlantic and Gulf coast longshoremen after local agreement on guaranteed annual income was reached at the last remaining northern port to settle on that issue.

Nine hours before a local pact in Baltimore was announced, shipping industry representatives from ports on the upper Atlantic Coast presented a new offer for a coastwide master contract in a joint meeting with union negotiators.

The Baltimore agreement was the last of separate settlements by local management and union officials for northern ports, which the 50,000-member International Longshoremen's Association demanded before master contract negotiations could be completed.

An industry spokesman said much work remained on the master contract.

obviously is obscured — unless someone already has stolen away with it.

Some claim it to be at Horsehead Crossing on the Pecos River about 12 miles due east of the gap.

Some thought it would be right at the gap. That's why in the late '60s, a couple of guys with bulldozers cut through part of the canyon.

They made two deep gullies that are neither ugly nor beautiful. They are merely statements of man's quest.

If they uncovered the gold, they made no ballyhoo about it. They left.

On the north side of the gully, on the canyon wall, are a series of natural caves. Each could offer refuge in earlier days and they probably were look-outs or temporary abodes for Indians. Each shallow cave could be a place to bed down and get away from howling wind.

The canyon's most frequent visitor is the ever-present wind. It whines and howls. It sometimes subsides but it never deserts the canyon.

You can get to the canyon by car, cycle or foot. It's three miles east of U.S. Highway 385 and it's on a stretch of land where the late San Angelo rancher Caton Jacobs ran his sheep. After his death, his estate gave a hundred-acre tract for the park to Upton County.

It's not much, mostly history. It's like the rising and falling sun. It'll be here. It'll be here for those who would savor it, but no need to rush.

business. It's been a real crum course," says Ms. Brown, 40, a theatrical lighting designer from San Francisco. "We experimented with different molds night after night for weeks."

Blake Fleetwood, vice president of the block association on West 83rd Street where the shop is located, said some neighbors feel the bakery "shouldn't be in a residential neighborhood."

But Ms. Dwyer said children will not be allowed inside and a curtain will be kept drawn across the bottom of the window. That's to prevent children — and short adults — from seeing the goods on display.

And Blake Fleetwood's brother, Francis, said the bakery is "better than what was there before" — a reputed numbers bank.

The women say their venture into risqué recipes is no mere fleeting passion. "The success of The Erotic Baker depends on quality products," Ms. Dwyer says. "Our goods are made fresh daily. We want our fantasies to be more than food for thought."

If the venture fails, the ladies say, "Well, show business people are used to taking incredible risks. The worst is we'll end up with a pile of bills."

"That's the way the cookie crumbles."

Band contest due in Odessa

Midland and area high school and junior high band students will be competing in the Region 6 University interscholastic League marching and twirling competition in Odessa today.

More than 50 bands will be in competition.

Judges for the marching competition will be John Farone of El Paso, O. T. Ryan of Plainview and Jim Suddeth of San Marcos.

Twirlers will be expected to perform seven fundamental twirling movements and an original routine.

Califano Europe-bound to look at health systems

By CHRIS CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., seeking ideas for a national health insurance program, is heading to Europe to study universal health care systems in Great Britain and Germany.

Califano and five other HEW officials depart tonight for a first-hand look at how the two European nations guarantee health care to virtually all of their citizens.

The Carter administration is striving to formulate a national health care plan that can be unyielded next year.

The HEW team will spend a week in Great Britain and Germany, which have old and diverse systems of national health care. The trip and an advance visit by three Califano aides will cost the taxpayers about $20,000, HEW officials said.

In England, Califano will talk with doctors and top government health officials, tour a London hospital and clinic and attend a regional health authority meeting in Kent. He will follow a similar schedule in Bonn and other German cities.

President Carter has promised to provide a national health insurance program that covers all Americans, including the 18 million now without private health insurance and without the coverage provided by the government's Medicaid program for the poor and Medicare for the elderly.

Califano spent two days on a similar mission to Canada in September and came away praising Canada's health insurance system, under which the federal government in Ottawa subsidizes hospitalization and health care programs administered by the provinces.

"In many ways, Canada is 20 years ahead of us. We've got a lot to learn," the health, education and welfare secretary said.

Great Britain started its highly socialized National Health Insurance in 1948. The government owns or controls all hospitals and clinics, and nearly all medical services are provided free to residents or tourists — including Califano if he should happen to take sick.

Germany has a system closest to what exists in the United States, with a mix of public and private insurance plans. Started nearly a century ago, it involves more than 1,800 health insurance funds organized by region, trade or employer instead of one federally administered program.

The roast was part of the swim team's effort to kick off its first annual fund raising event called "Christmas Freestyle." The event will be on Dec. 2 and 3 in the Midland County Exhibit Building. On the first day, a preview party for invited guests only is planned. On the second day, a bazaar with Christmas entertainment, refreshments and door prizes will be held. It is open to the public. Proceeds from the event will be used to continue expanding the operations of the team's competitive and community service programs.

Carter promises said not kept

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE and DAVID S. BRODER The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A splinter coalition of radical Democrats and a "mainstream" collective of party supporters put President Carter in the middle of a rhetorical crossfire Friday, saying that the new administration has dismally failed to deliver on campaign promises.

The Democratic Agenda, a new group headed by Socialist advocate Michael Harrington and backed by some of the nation's leading labor and civil rights leaders, charged the Carter administration with pandering to the business community and reneging on a campaign commitment to full employment. Harrington said the new group will march on Democratic National Committee headquarters here today to demand full implementation of the jobs plank of the 1976 Democratic Party platform.

"All of us voted for Jimmy Carter, and some of us were involved in the platform process. It says right on the cover of that platform that it's a contract with the people... well, we are here to collect on that contract," Harrington said.

In the meantime, Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and author Ben Wattenberg announced that they have revived the Coalition for a Democratic Majority because "mainstream" Democrats like themselves have been excluded from important policy posts in the Carter administration.

The CDM, which has close ties to the leadership of the AFL-CIO, and of which Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., serves as co-chairman, was created in 1972 to wrest control of the Democratic Party away from the followers of Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D.

The revived CDM, Wattenberg and Moynihan said, will support Carter on Panama and some domestic issues, but will remain critical of his approach to the Middle East and the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

In a press conference in which the Democratic Agenda announced 600 liberal activists would meet over the weekend to chart a program for forcing full employment, Harrington criticized Carter's handling of domestic economic matters.

"He has spent a lot of time trying to win the confidence of those who tried to defeat him — the business community — and he has not spent enough time trying to win the confidence of those who elected him," Harrington said.

Harrington said that while the new coalition was pleased with the President's endorsement of the Humphrey-Hawkins full-employment bill in Congress, he and other liberals view it as "a victory only in the sense of a beginning."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., a member of the new group, said, of the employment bill, "We're not going to sit around and let this bill get gutted by a few key amendments... It's not going to go down that way. I can assure you."

Others involved in the new coalition include Machinist Union President William Wimpisinger; Madison, Wis., Mayor Paul Sogline; Rick Scott, chairman of the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor party; Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees; and Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif.

Sogline called the new group's conference "a friendly reminder to the president that the deadline (for stimulating jobs) is near.... A reminder who is responsible for Jimmy Carter occupying the White House."

In Friday's breakfast meeting with reporters, Wattenberg said that while his allies produced the votes that made Carter president, "the McGovern people have the troops inside the administration."

He and Moynihan did not blame this directly on Carter, but said the people Carter picked for top jobs in the administration then turned to the "network of movement activists to fill out their own staffs."

Moynihan complained that not one person he or his friends had suggested for sub-Cabinet or ambassadorial jobs had been named by Carter.

"Cyrus Vance," he said, "is perfectly acceptable as secretary of state, but we would hope he'd preside over a more representative group." CDM complained in a statement last week that the administration was "softening its stand on human rights."

Midland man hurt in wreck

A 21-year-old Midland man was listed in good condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Friday night following a car-motorcycle accident in the 200 block of Midkiff Drive.

Daniel T. Reiter of 3112 Kessler St. was injured after he was thrown from his motorcycle following a collision with a car about 5:04 p.m., police said. His condition was listed as good, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesman.

The driver of the car involved in the collision was Juanita Potter of 3411 Princeton Ave., according to police reports.

Strike upstaging game

By JACKSON DIEHL

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Instead of the painted sheets and signs that normally festoon the Yale University campus before the Yale-Harvard football game, different banners appeared this week.

"Yale Must Negotiate" reads one, a reminder of the bitter, six-week-old strike by blue-collar workers.

"There's no question that the strike has had an effect," Yale football Coach Carmen Cozza said Friday in explaining how the strike has squelched the spirit — and many activities — for Saturday's game.

"We just don't feel we should have such large displays," Cozza said. "The concern is that the strikers might not react well to them."

Two years ago, Yale students stole the Harvard football banner, hung painted sheets over dormitory windows, built a bonfire at a pep rally and even painted yellow "Beat Harvard" signs on city streets.

This year there is no pep rally. There is a banner contest, but most signs displayed around the campus deal with the strike of blue-collar workers that began Sept. 30 in a wage dispute.

When Harvard's football players arrive for Saturday's game — the 94th confrontation between the Ivy League teams — they will see such signs as "Hannah: Let Them Eat Doughnuts. Sirabella: Cook a Cantab."

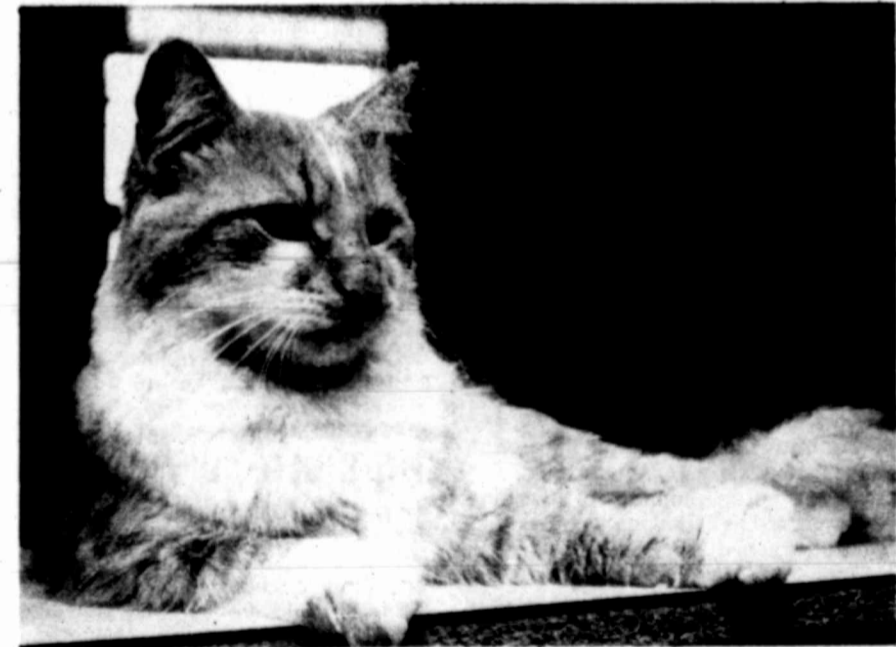

Hannah Gray is Yale's acting president. Vincent Sirabella is business manager of the union of 1,400 blue-collar workers on strike. And Cantab is a Yale nickname for a Harvard student.

"We wanted to do something that would show our priorities with the union as well as the football team," said Rick Andelman, a senior from Tulsa, Okla., who painted the banner with his roommates.

And it nearly started trouble. Andelman said someone identifying himself as a union representative, not understanding the reference to Cantab — a nickname for a person from Cambridge, Mass., where Harvard is located — thought the banner was negative and threatened to firebomb the student's room.

Because the striking employees are primarily food and maintenance workers, Yale's 5,000 undergraduates have been forced to clean their own dormitories and either cook their own food or eat out. The university cafeterias have served only coffee, juice, doughnuts and other packaged convenience foods since the strike began.

No end to the strike is in sight. The university's last offer, made in July, included wage and cost-of-living increases ranging from 15 to 20 percent over three years. The union has asked for a one-year contract with an 8 percent pay raise plus an increase in last year's cost-of-living clause, amounting to roughly 11 percent. The union also says job security is a crucial issue.

Governor gives runoff dates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe set runoff election dates Friday for the four legislative contests resulting from the Nov. 8 special elections.

Two will be Dec. 3 and two more on Dec. 10.

On Dec. 3 the vacancy created by the resignation of Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, will be filled either by C.B. Bunkley III or Lanell Cofer.

On the same day, El Paso area voters will decide between Republican S.L. Abbott and Democrat Othon Medina Jr. The vacancy in the five-county district was created by the resignation of Rep. James Kaster, D-El Paso.

The vacancy in state Senatorial District 31 will be filled on Dec. 10 by either state Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo, or former U.S. Rep. Bob Price, Republican of Pampa. The winner takes the place of Sen. Max Sherman, D-Amarillo, who resigned to become president of West Texas State University.

Absentee voting in the Dec. 3 elections will begin Nov. 23 and end the 29th.

Absentee voting in the Dec. 10 elections is for the Nov. 30/Dec. 6 period.

Nobel Prize winner to teach at Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Nobel-prize winning scholar Gunnar Myrdal of Sweden and his wife, Alva, will teach at the University of Texas at Austin next spring.

Myrdal, co-winner of the prize in economics in 1974, authored the 1944 work, "An American Dilemma: The Negro Problem and Modern Democracy," that was cited in the U.S. Supreme Court's desegregation decision of 1954, Brown vs. Board of Education.

He holds more than 30 honorary degrees. Mrs. Myrdal is distinguished in her own right, having served as a Swedish cabinet member, ambassador, member of Parliament and chief of the Swedish delegation to the disarmament conference in Geneva from 1962 to 1973.

The Myrdals will be co-holders of the Distinguished Visiting Tom Slick Professorship of World Peace in UT's Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs. The professorship, endowed from the estate of the late Tom Slick of San Antonio, promotes research, teaching and public enlightenment on the subject world peace.

New airport services

Two most welcome pieces of news came from last Tuesday's meeting of the Midland City Council.

One had to do with approval by the council of an ordinance granting a franchise for operating limousine service between Midland and the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The other concerned the launching of free transportation from the airport's temporary parking lot to the main terminal building.

The limousine franchise was granted to The Chauffeur of Midland, represented by Henry Blanton.

The lack of limousine service to and from the air terminal has been one of its major problems the last several years, ever since the service was discontinued by the previous franchise holder. The problem has become even more critical during the remodeling and expansion program now under way at the airport.

Both the city council and the limousine service operator are due commendation for getting together on the franchise agreement, which will provide a needed public service.

Service is expected to begin soon after the first of December. Four radio-dispatched, 14-passenger vehicles will be put into service at that time, with the possibility of adding two additional vehicles later. The limousines will operate from three Midland hotels and The Chauffeur's two parking lots.

Airport patrons presently parking their cars on the airport's temporary parking lot also are delighted at the action taken by the council in approving an offer by The First National Bank of Midland to provide free transportation between the lot and the main terminal building. This also is a great public service and commendation is due both the bank and the council.

The overall situation existing at Midland Regional Air Terminal is tough enough at best during this particular period of construction, and the two transportation developments certainly will help in multiple ways.

City and airport officials regret very much the inconvenience caused by the remodeling and expansion program, but it is necessary in order to have the vastly improved facility which will result from the construction program.

Meanwhile, everything possible will be done to make it easier on airport patrons, who have increased in almost unbelievable numbers in recent months. It is hoped that everyone will take the inconveniences in stride, in view of the better things to come.

Patience is the watchword at the airport at this particular time. Your cooperation will be appreciated by all concerned.

Gem, Mineral Show

One of the most popular events held here annually is the big show sponsored and staged by the Midland Gem and Mineral Society.

And this is the weekend of the society's 15th annual show, which started from scratch but has enjoyed tremendous growth each year.

The 1977 event opens this morning in the Midland County Exhibit Building on U.S. 80 East, and will continue through Sunday.

The show features demonstrations and spectacular displays of all kinds, with more than 60 club members and a number of guests exhibiting their works. In addition, nine dealers from eight states have reserved display space at the show. Four dealers will have working demonstrations of their art.

A special attraction at this year's show is a display of the "Lone Star Cut," which has been designated by resolution of the state legislature as Texas' official cut.

It's a great show. We think you will like it.

IT HAPPENED HERE—

Thirty Years Ago (Nov. 12, 1977):

The Midland Lions Club, at its meeting today noon, contributed $1,043 to the Midland Memorial Hospital fund campaign, bringing the club's total gift to $7,500.

Mrs. Edward Barrow, state regent of Daughters of the American Revolution, was the featured speaker at a regional meeting of the DAR here. Mrs. Tom Sealy, regent of Midland's Lt. William Brewer Chapter, was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Robert Cox, 1907 W. Texas St., entertained the Twentieth Century Study Club at a guest day meeting and program Tuesday.

FTC proposals on used car deals

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — "Would you buy a used car from this man?" may soon fade away as a motto for shady dealers. Proposed federal regulations would require used car dealers to inspect every car they sell and disclose its condition on a window sticker.

A Federal Trade Commission staff proposal would force dealers to reveal the car's previous use, mileage, mechanical condition, safety defects and the fitness of such key components as headlights, horn and brakes.

Many used car dealers intentionally cover up mechanical faults in order to sell the cars, FTC investigators have found. The public, according to an FTC staff report, "is confronted with immaculate vehicles and smooth-talking salesmen who strive to assure the customer that the gleaming beauties are in 'mint condition' while maintaining a wall of silence about defects which may lie beneath the surface."

Such dealers "misrepresent that vehicles are defect-free or that substantial repairs have been performed," the report charges. They glibly promise to fix any defect that develops, but when a problem occurs, they deny having made any promises. "These verbal assurances," the study declares, "have all too often proven empty rhetoric to the buyer of a 'lemon.'"

These practices are especially prevalent on used car lots that the study calls "ghetto rip-offs." And some salesmen are so familiar with the defects "that they can identify vehicles on the lot which they will not sell to their friends," but will eagerly peddle to strangers.

Many dealers try to make old cars look brand new. Ignoring the mechanical defects, they eliminate signs of previous wear and tear through a method called "appearance reconditioning."

They remove dents and scratches, repaint the car, shampoo the interior, replace torn upholstery, dye the carpeting, repaint the engine and spray the interior with a "new car smell." Some customers are even stuck with "fleet" cars that were previously battered as police cars, taxicabs, rent-a-cars, or driver education cars.

The problem, one FTC investigator told our associate Howie Kurtz, is that "one" guy, the seller, has all the information, and the other guy, the buyer, has almost no information. That spells disaster. "As the staff report put it: 'The consumer, in large part, ends up buying a pig in a poke.'"

Less than 20 percent of used car buyers are told about the defects in their autos, a recent survey ordered by FTC found. But in states which require disclosure statements, such as Wisconsin, customers get "somewhat lower asking prices" and "substantially lower repair costs."

The system saved Wisconsin car buyers about $40 million last year, with the average customer saving $163.

The federal disclosure statement will be considered by the full commission in January.

CHARLEY REESE:

Teaching guides and values are discussed

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — You can get an idea of some of the things wrong with public education by reading the "Values Clarification Teacher's Guide to Life's Special Report on the New Youth."

This thing was written by Howard Kirshenbaum and the National Humanistic Education Center in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. While it applies specifically to the Life program, it's fairly typical of current attitudes in much of the educational establishment.

In the first place, Life's Special Report on the New Youth or this daily newspaper, for that matter, is hardly an adequate text for teaching values. Apparently, a great many people who ought to know better confuse the words "relevant" and "topical."

The ability to read and write and to use and understand the language of numbers is relevant. Students who do not know these things are likely to end up in the ash heap of a technological society.

History and economics and logic and philosophy are relevant; the daily news, the current fads and fashions are merely topical. They may or may not be relevant to the life of a youngster.

The second problem the guide points up is the current notion that an exchange of uneducated and immature opinions is somehow "educational." This no doubt stems from the philosophy of the social scientists who seem to think if they measure ignorance and convert it to a bar graph they have advanced the knowledge of mankind.

The purpose of an educational system ought to be to expose children to informed and educated opinions as well as known facts. They can share their misconceptions and prejudices at home without the benefit of a multi-million dollar educational establishment.

"It is entirely legitimate for you, the teacher, to share with the students your own feelings, opinions and experiences on the issues being discussed," the guide says. "But this should not be done in an imposing manner—one that suggests, 'Now here are the right answers' or 'I will link less of you or penalize you if you do not agree with me.'"

In other words, teach, lower yourself to the level of a teen-ager and join in the gabfest. One opinion is as good as another, for there are no "answers" to anything.

Except, of course, the editors of Life and their educational cohorts do assert, obliquely, answers to certain questions. For example, to the discussion question, which of the following causes do you think contribute most to juvenile crime, only these possibilities are listed: lenient judges, breakdown of the traditional family, TV violence, high unemployment, restricted police procedures, or clogged and outmoded juvenile courts.

You will note that implicit in all of these is the premise that the individual juvenile delinquent himself is not a cause of his own behavior.

The main point, though, is that immature minds with limited life experiences that are un-read cannot progress very far in acquiring knowledge by holding rap sessions with each other even if their instructor acts as moderator.

The technique that is suitable on the graduate level is not when transferred to the secondary level. What youngsters need to know is what the best minds in the history of man — and that excludes the editors of Life — think about values.

Only after they have studied what their superiors in intellect and experience have had to say and then integrated that knowledge into their personal lives are they likely to have an opinion worth expressing.

This rap session approach to education is robbing children of a foundation they must have to lead intelligent lives. It is the principal reason we are turning out, at great expense, ignoramuses with diplomas and degrees, a process which may spell success for the circulation of some modern publications but one which will surely doom the nation.

Young people today have the same distribution of intelligence any other generation has had yet the most striking characteristic of youth as a group is a colossal ignorance of history which forces them to live and think out of context.

Consequently, they view current events and opinions with tunnel vision. Consequently, most of the time, they have not the foggiest notion of what they are talking about.

When you see what the educational establishment is doing and visualize the consequences, you're tempted to boil a bucket of tar and go in search of feathers. That would be relevant.

INSIDE REPORT:

Administration's ambivalence in handling Helms case

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When a balky federal judge threatened to upset the government's plea bargaining agreement with Richard Helms, Justice Department lawyers declared their intent to proceed with a 10-count perjury indictment against the former CIA director — a final example of the Carter administration's ambivalence in handling the Helms affair.

Months of indecision over what to do about Helms were followed by more months of plea bargaining. Yet, when the chance selection of an obstreperous judge threatened to upset the agreement, the administration was prepared to do what no great power has ever done: the self-destructive prosecution of its own chief of intelligence for doing his duty.

That only heightens the mystery of President Carter's own attitude, toward Helms in particular and the intelligence service in general. Contrary to his public statements, Mr. Carter was deeply involved in the decision to prosecute and then to avoid a trial. Yet Mr. Carter never gave a hint of how he truly regarded the case. "The President was a sphinx," one insider told us.

The President is by no means wholly responsible for the humiliation visited on Dick Helms to conclude his distinguished career in public service. The action of bringing federal charges against him for not revealing to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee covert operations in Chile by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was started by President Ford's Attorney General, Edward Levi.

The inflexible Dr. Levi could not be convinced that Helms was only following his oath of secrecy. Griffin Bell, Levi's successor in the Carter administration, was considered a more practical man. Bell, however, ran into three hard obstacles against dropping the case.

First, aggressive young lawyers in the Justice Department had been working on the Helms case for 18 months. To set aside their work would bring charges of "cover-up," foulest of crimes since Watergate.

Second, an implacable stand that Helms must be prosecuted to set an example for the intelligence community was taken by Sen. Frank Church, author of the dubious theory that the CIA has been a "rogue elephant" out of control. Church was well-qualified to mobilize the liberal community in protest to a "cover-up."

Third, and perhaps most important, was quiet support for Church from his erstwhile Senate colleague in harassing the CIA: Vice President Walter Mondale. Indeed, the Helms case illustrates why Mondale is one Vice President who should be taken seriously.

No opposite arguments came from officials who might be expected to urge dropping the case (such as CIA director Stansfield Turner or Secretary of State Cyrus Vance). Thus it became clear during the summer that Helms would be prosecuted one way or another, setting up the real struggle within the administration.

Church's insistence on severe punishment of Helms, even if it led to an open trial, was backed quietly by the Vice President. Influential friends of Helms, descending on the President and Attorney General with pleas for clemency, came to regard Mondale as their major problem.

But three influential figures argued resolutely that a trial must be avoided at all costs: Atty. Gen. Bell, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger (a former CIA director). They argued that a nightmarish Helms trial would expose U.S. secrets that would make this country the laughingstock of the world.

The President wanted no identification with any of this, even to the point of not fully informing a press conference of his involvement. Ultimately, however, he was convinced that plea bargaining was the only way to escape from this self-made trap.

It was then that, purely by chance, U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker of the District of Columbia was assigned the case. When Parker objected to the plea bargaining, the incredible intent to pursue a 10-point indictment was revealed by government lawyers.

With Edward Bennett Williams defending him, Helms quite likely would have won acquittal. Consequently, that Judge Parker finally acquiesced was more in the interest of the nation than of Helms (though the judge could not resist his unshedding tongue-lashing of Helms from the bench).

The outcome was assailed as a "double standard" of justice by Sen. Church and other CIA critics, and viewed as the happiest solution possible by high administration officials. But the low morale of career intelligence officers drooped even more at the indignities visited upon their former chief. How much more depressed they would have been had they known how much worse it nearly was.

Ball-hogging Rebs defeat Pack, 10-3

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

It's not an easy life being an offensive lineman. Like Rodney Dangerfield they get very little respect, and on top of that are one of the most misunderstood species on the face of the earth.

The position brings to mind big, dumb lugs who have neither the brains nor the ability to make it anywhere else. People consider the offensive line a place where you exile most of your 200-pound rejects.

And of course, there's the anonymity. It goes without saying that the only time an offensive lineman gets any publicity is when he makes a mistake — like holding on 90-yard touchdown passes.

But it wasn't mistakes that earned Brian Briscoe, Chuck Owens, Terry Padgett, Mark Scroggin and Pat Calhoun some recognition Friday night. No indeed. Together they displayed some of the finest blocking and manhandling of a defensive line this side of Conrad Dabler, and were reason number one why the Lee Rebels pulled out an exciting 10-3 season-ending victory over Midland at Memorial Stadium.

Rebel fullback Jeff McCowan ran up 149 yards in 24 carries, including what proved to be a decisive 49 yard touchdown ramble, but the 205-pound junior knows who he has to thank for a lot of those yards. So does the other Rebel running back John Marks, who picked up 70 yards Friday.

With Briscoe (center), Owens, Padgett (guards), Scroggin and Calhoun (tackles) opening holes a truck could drive through, the Rebels piled up 286 rushing yards against the Bulldogs, and more importantly, enabled Lee to control the ball all night. In the second half, the Rebs had possession more than 70 per cent of the time, and there's not much an opponent can do when they can't get their hands on the ball.

A perfect example of Lee's offensive dominance came in the final quarter. They took the lead midway through the third period on McCowan's long scoring run, which broke a 3-3 tie. The only scoring until then had been a 22-yard first quarter field goal by Midland's Robert Montgomery, and a 25-yard boot by Lee's Jerry Moore in the second period.

Anyway, up by seven, the Rebs got possession on their own 10-yard line with 10:23 left in the game. They knew they had to eat up the clock and get it out of their own end of the field, and did they ever.

McCowan and Marks just followed their blocking, and 10 plays and nearly five minutes later, the Rebels had a first and 10 on the Midland 20. At one point, they registered three first downs in a row. Quarterback Todd Clements got the first one on a 10 yard run, then Moore followed with a 13 yard ramble, and Marks made it three in a row on a 12 yard run.

A penalty eventually stopped their drive, but not before it chewed up more than five minutes off the clock and left the Pack with it's back to the wall and very little time.

The Rebs didn't do too bad defensively either, as they held Midland's on-again-off again offense to just 178 yards — only 60 of it on the ground.

They intercepted Bulldog quarterback Doug Attnip three times in the game. John White picked off two of them and Stan Carter stole the third one.

With the exception of Midland's first drive of the game, when they moved from their own 20 to the Lee five before settling for Montgomery's three-pointer, the Rebel defense allowed the Pack to get no closer than 40 yards from paydirt.

GRID GRIT: Billy Walker, Midland's 220-pound defensive tackle, was taken off the field in an ambulance midway through the second quarter. He may have a broken leg. The Midland and Lee games performed at halftime as they prepared for regional competition which is set for today at W.T. Barrett Stadium in Odessa. Lee finished with a 5-5 overall record and were 3-4 in district, while Midland ended up 3-6-1 and also were 3-4 in district play.

Kermit stings Cranes for 7-AA title

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

KERMIT — Kermit's Yellow Jackets wear the District 7-AA football crown for 1977. Junior tailback Alfred McGilbra scored three touchdowns Friday night to guide Kermit to a convincing 21-0 victory over the battling Crane Golden Cranes in Walton Field.

Both teams went into the 7-AA championship tilt with 2-0 league records and the Yellow Jackets didn't disappoint the home crowd.

McGilbra rushed for 143 yards in 25 carries with some great broken field running while fullback Mickey Williams added 55 in 15 carries to give the 'Jackets an 8-2 record going into bi-district action next week against the 8-AA champion.

KERMIT STRUCK for two lightning-quick touchdowns early in the game to put the Cranes into a deep hole — one which they could not dig their way out of against a quickreacting Kermit defense.

Crane took the opening kickoff and was unable to move the ball, but Kermit cranked up and marched for its own very first possession.

The 'Jackets went 50 yards in seven plays to draw first blood. McGilbra broke on a 17-yard run down the middle and Williams added five more and Kermit was off and running.

McGilbra capped the short drive with a five-yard burst for the touchdown and Leslie Baucom booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead with 7:40 left in the opening period.

Crane quarterback Rocky Rives fumbled moments later and Kermit's Patrick Partin recovered at the Crane 19. On the very next play, McGilbra skipped 19 yards for the score.

TONY MOORE threw a crushing block on the cornerback to spring McGilbra for the TD. The PAT failed, but Kermit owned the scoreboard, 13-0, with 6:43 left in the first quarter.

Kermit picked up two more points in the first period on a safety when the ball was snapped over the punter's head and it sailed out of the end zone, making it 15-0 with 59 seconds left.

Crane had its only scoring chance of the game in the second period, but the Cranes were unable to cash in.

Curtis Pittman put the Cranes into business when he recovered a Kermit fumble at the Crane 48. On the next play, Rives hit tight end Tom Hughes with a 34-yard strike with Hughes taking the ball away from two Kermit defenders at the 'Jacket 18.

Ismael Ortega threw Rives for a 12-yard loss and a 15-yard penalty on Crane put them out of reach for a chance to score.

JIMMY SIMMONS saved a TD for Crane moments later when he dragged down McGilbra from behind after a 12-yard run.

Sam Stroder picked off a Kermit passing attempt by quarterback Scott Edwards at the Crane 17 to turn the 'Jackets away just before the half.

So stout was the Kermit defense that Crane only had two first downs at halftime and a total of 34 yards passing and 24 rushing.

Kermit took the second half kickoff and marched on its own 36 to the Crane 14 where the determined Cranes, who could not move the ball after that great defensive stand.

Ray Weatherby and Marc Aulf led the Crane defense that stopped the 'Jackets.

PITTMAN CAME up with another

Kermit fumble in the third quarter, but Crane was unable to move the ball.

Kermit went 41 yards in nine plays to ice the gamewith McGilbra scoring from the one. The PAT failed, but the score was 21-0 with 11:58 left in the game.

Marfa buries McCamey to nail down 6-A title

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

McCAMEY—McCamey's eleventh hour bid for state playoff glory was destroyed by District 6-A champion Marfa here Friday night in a 55-7 nightmare.

Marfa's Shorthorns literally buried the Badgers to earn the right to meet the state's No. 1 ranked Seagraves Eagles next week in the bi-district round of the Class A playoffs. The awesome Marfa offense churned out 477 yards rushing and another 115 passing for a total offensive barrage of 592 yards against the McCamey defense.

McCamey's Badgers went into the game hoping for the major upset of the year. They could have earned a playoff berth with a victory, but the No. 4 Shorthorns were much too much for the outmanned Cinderella team of West Texas.

THE BADGERS were picked to finish last in 6-A play by some prognosticators this year, but the Badgers flew to a 6-4 season mark and a second place 4-2 district reading. The Badgers had captured the fancy of West Texas grid fans this year after coming off a 1-8 season in 1976. But this was Marfa's night, and now they have a chance to upend the state's top hot dog next week.

Marfa just scored at will in this one as quarterback Manuel Mendoza, Rink Polson and Robert Barnett each scored two touchdowns in the runaway. Jon Polson caught a 20-yard pass from Mendoza and Kerry Barnett scored on a 14-yard run for the other two Marfa tallies.

It took Marfa only 12 plays to score the first time they got the ball with Mendoza scoring from 28 yards out for an 8-0 lead at the end of the first period. But Marfa whipped out 27 points in the in the second period to ice the contest. The only trouble was that they didn't stop after that.

MENDOZA HAD an exceptional night while rushing for 145 yards in only nine carries and completed six of seven aeriels for 102 yards. He scored twice and tossed for another six pointer in the game.

That would have been enough in itself, but Rink Polson stepped off 137 yards in 20 totes and scored twice himself. Kerry Barnett added 95 yards in 10 carries and a touchdown while reserve Robert Bartlett scored twice and rushed for 49 yards in the fourth quarter.

It just went on and on, and McCamey was no match for the Shorthorns, who out weighed the Badgers 657 pounds per man in the ungody line led by Glenn Madrid, a 250-pound guard.

McCamey's only moment of glory came in the second period of play when quarterback Bobby Acosta, who was playing injured and who was injured again in this one, dialed sophomore Billy Ray Terry with a 59-yard scoring toss. Terry was pulled up off the JV for this contest and he promises to give McCamey fans some excitement before he is threw.

McCAMEY HAD 184 yards rushing and 97 passing against the Giants of the West, but it was not enough to come close.

The contest had been billed as the battle for a playoff berth since the winner would go to the playoffs, but there were skeptical views put forth this week that McCamey's amazing Badgers could pull this one off. They couldn't, but the season they had is still like something out of a make believe novel. A 6-3 season is not bad for a team averaging 156 pounds per man, and not many McCamey fans will forget this team very fast.

Frazier paces Cavs

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers, paced by Walt Frazier, scored the first 12 points of the third quarter and hung onto beat the Milwaukee Bucks 88-82 Friday night in a National Basketball Association game.

The burst turned a 49-47 halftime lead into a 61-47 margin with 8:50 left to play in the period as the Cavaliers won their 10th straight over the Bucks. Milwaukee's first points of the period came 15 seconds later on a pair of Ernie Grunfield free throws.

Frazier led a balanced Cleveland scoring attack with 16 points, while Bingo Smith and Campy Russell each added 14 and Jim Chones had 13.

The Bucks closed the margin to 84-82 with a fourth-quarter rally after a jumper and pair of free throws by Junior Bridgeman with 3:13 left.

But Chones hit a layup with 2:40 left, clinching the victory.

The Bucks had possession of the ball three times after that as Cleveland's Fouts Walker committed an offensive foul and the Cavaliers were charged with a 24-second violation. But a Grunfield shot was blocked by Chones and Jim Brewer slammed in a basket for Cleveland with 48 seconds left.

Bridgeman led Milwaukee with 20 points, while rookie Kent Benson had a pro career high of 19.

Go bother somebody else, Pack fullback Brentley Jackson seems to be pleading as an unidentified Rebel defender comes up to make the hit on him. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Permian nudges Odessa High

ODESSA — Odessa, Permian got by cross-town rival Odessa High Friday night at Barrett Stadium, but it wasn't easy.

The Panthers, who clash with Denton next weekend in the first round of the state playoffs, needed a pair of Robert Oroscio field goals to squeak out a 6-3 win over the Bronchos. The win gives Mojo a perfect 10-0 slate, while it was Odessa's fourth loss of the season.

The Bronchos got on the board first, when Charlie Whittington booted a 35-yard field goal early in the second quarter, but Oroscio came through with a 22-yarder of his own to knot things at the half.

Then, in the third quarter, Oroscio kicked a 23-yarder to round out the scoring.

Cowboys have it easy compared to Cheerleaders

Cheerleaders lineup to welcome Cowboys' starting lineup.

BY TED BATTLES

The money isn't that good. The career life-expectancy is so brief it's little more than a wink.

Then there is always the lurking menace of the Turk, hovering in the background. When he strikes in pro summer camps, it's always in the stillness of the night. One day there is a player, hopeful and eager, and the next day it's as though he had never been there.

In this case the Turk strikes terror in broad daylight.

Maybe it's the glory and glamor that attracts them in droves.

WHATEVER IT IS, they DO come out. Last spring when tryouts were held, 675 showed up, which means the competition to make the team of 32, plus four on the taxi squad, is more intense than it is to make the Dallas Cowboys.

So what compels a fetching morsel of feminine pastry to brave the competition and risk the heartbreak and tears that accompany failure?

The pay isn't much, $15 a game, the hours are good, three hours 10 days or so a season, but the fringe benefits are good and getting better all the time. It's mostly a matter of exposure, a story in Newsweek, a cover and feature in Esquire, a story in Sporting News and an ABC TV special segment on the tryouts.

EACH DALLAS home game they pour themselves into and in some cases ooze out of their sexy cheerleaders' outfits and undulate before 50,000 to 60,000 fans, the male half of whom would rather miss a touchdown than one of the famous moves.

At home, wives can't understand why hubby sits through commercial breaks. She doesn't know that cutting away from and coming back to the action usually entails a bonus shot of the "real" action on the sidelines.

The Cowboys' distractions have been a going concern for six years and their popularity has spawned similar "spirit" leading groups the width-and-breadth of the NFL. However, the Cowboys' cheerleaders are the ones everybody talks about and wants to oogle. As a result, professional jealousy has risen its carefully coiffured head.

SEEKING TO cash in on the Dallas group's popularity head start, the Buffalo Bills challenged the Cowgirls to a legs contest. The Bills wanted to race the Dallas lassies and any Cowboys fan knows Cowgirls legs are for looking, not running.

They come from all walks of life, but mostly they are students, secretaries and even grocery clerks looking for a little attention, some excitement and a chance to root for the Cowboys.

Some have experience, ranging from high school drill teams, pep squads and twirlers to more formal dance training.

But when it comes to the final cutdown, it's looks and poise that count and even then it's not easy for the four-man panel of judges. Tickets to the tryouts are more dear than they are to the Super Bowl, and little wonder.

As one witness described the final 66, they are all "lovely, leggy and luscious. Tawny tigers and fantastic foxes. Breathtaking birds and enchanting chicks. The creme de la creme of Texas femmes de la femmes."

The only thing wrong with that is they also come from as far away as Kansas, New Mexico and Arizona.

If you're statistically minded, when they started out the more than 600 hopefuls represented 7,772 pounds in heels and bikinis. If they were arranged in 36-24-36 sequence with the smile to go with it, they had the best chance of making the elite 66.

The competition is tough and gets tougher. This year 18 of the 30 returnees from last year were visited by the Turk.

Like the Cowboys for whom they lead the cheers, they have become celebrities.

FANS ASK them for their autographs. At least, you assume it's an autograph and not a phone number when a 10-year-old hands a program and pencil over the wall to an accommodating miss. Although Midland Cubs usherettes contend the preteen age youngsters are bigger mashers than the older fans.

Once they make the 36-member squad, they come under the wing of Texie Waterman, the choreographer who is a "legendary figure in American dance, ballet, tap and jazz, with stage shows in New York and other metropolitan cities."

Kay Oschenbein, a Dallas makeup artist, inspects each girl for cosmetic flaws, a job somewhat akin to dusting off a Jaguar fresh off the assemble line.

Texie teaches them simple dance routines. For 10 weeks prior to the season, workouts are twice a week. Once the season starts, it's once a week, but even after she's a Cowboys' cheerleader, a girl must watch her figure or risk immediate waivers. A girl who misses two games without a good excuse is a quick ex.

One of those that didn't make it, maybe because she slipped a chew of Red Man tobacco into her mouth every so often, was a looker named Cindy.

"I picked it up in high school while I was a batgirl. The coach taught me," confesses Cindy. She carries a soft drink cup and says, "That way, people will think your just drinking coke."

"I have never seen a girl who chewed tobacco," said an astonished Lisa Wittrock, one of those who did make it.

LISA is a native of Dallas and graduate of Griffin Academy and is a genuine dancer, brightening the nightlife at Les Jardin and No. 3 Lift discos. This spring she plans to enroll at SMU and hopes to become an entertainer, "maybe beginning with a part in one of the Dallas Summer musicals."

A secretary in Dallas, Janice Garner hails from St. Louis and was a balance beam specialist in gym. "I have been writing music since I was 12, and I studied piano from the age of 8." She also studied voice.

Blonde Linda Kellum is one of those with a high school drill team (Dallas Spruce) and Henderson Junior College, she has stewardess ambitions. In her second year, she admits, "I've loved every second of it. But I'm burned up about that magazine (Newsweek) that said we didn't do any dance steps. We're the best choreographed group in the NFL."

SUZETTE RUSSELL, training to become a legal secretary in Fort Worth, said it was her love for discotheque dancing that led to her trying out for the cheerleaders. "It looked like a lot of fun and I found out it is." She once performed for the L.D. Bell drill team and did a stint with the Rangerettes of Kilgore JC.

Vanessa Baker teaches school in a Dallas high school and attended Tuskegee Institute after graduating from Dallas Lincoln. She is working toward a master's degree in educational supervision.

Vanessa claims the competition is getting tougher every year. "The girls keep getting prettier and prettier. I'm afraid one day they're going to say 'Goodbye Vanessa!'"

MONICA MUEHLHAUSE is in her second year as a cheerleader by popular demand. The Dallas Thomas Jefferson grad who is majoring in nutritional research at Texas Tech, and plans to return after football season, even has her own fan club in Abilene.

"I love working with Texie Waterman because I minored in dance in college, but this year it's gone way beyond that. There's more recognition for Cowboy cheerleaders now. It's a lot bigger deal."

Blonde, five-eight Micheling Austin is one of the busiest cheerleaders. She works in a discount store after classes at Cooke County JC and is a modeling school grad, not to mention an expert gymnast.

Shannon Baker once did a solo turn with the Bolshoi Ballet and the 19-year-old blonde, like Monica, is a Dallas Jeff grad. She majors in broadcast journalism and carries a 4.0 grade average, just like her figure. This is also her second year.

SOME OF the girls are married and Jeanne Cavett, who went to Grady Spruce High, says of husband Terry's reaction, "I think he was a little jealous at first, but now he's used to it and he really enjoys going to the games."

Debbie Constanzo relates that her husband had his doubts at first, but now "He's so proud he can't stand it."

And California-born, Brenham-bred Carla McBeath's husband has his own independent insurance company and she claims being a cheerleader has made her "nationally famous locally." "Everytime the TV camera is on me, as soon as the game is over my folks' phone rings off the wall."

Linda Kellum contends being a cheerleader has done wonders for her confidence.

"I wasn't very popular in high school. I didn't have much self-confidence and I was sort of shy. I guess you could say I began to blossom after I went to college, but I never really developed any self-confidence until now."

Whatever it is that brings 'em, you won't hear any complaints from NFL fans, although groans of appreciation are not uncommon.

Hillman, King pace

Jersey Nets to win

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Darnell Hillman scored 28 points and rookie Bernard King added 27 as the New Jersey Nets snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Chicago Bulls 91-89 in a National Basketball Association game Friday night.

Artis Gilmore registered 27 points and 26 rebounds for the Bulls.

Kareem claims refs use two standards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said Friday he truly regrets his part in the National Basketball Association altercation with Kent Benson of Milwaukee. But the 7-foot-2 Los Angeles Lakers' star added, "What happens in this league as far as officials are concerned is different standards for different people."

In the NBA season-opener at Milwaukee, Benson, a rookie from Indiana, elbowed the veteran Abdul-Jabbar, who retaliated with a punch to the head that knocked out his foe.

In the news conference, Abdul-Jabbar said, "I recognize that my conduct in the Benson incident was a proper subject of league discipline, but I am extremely upset that the league office not only imposed no fine on Benson, but failed in its public pronouncements about the incident even to recognize the responsibility Benson shares."

Abdul-Jabbar fractured a bone in his hand, and has not been in action since. He was also fined $5,000, a league record, by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

ABDUL-JABBAR said he did not know for sure when he would return to action. The Lakers hope it will be no later than next week. "To me, what happened was clear," the veteran center commented. "The film clips confirm my view of what happened. If the league office had any question about what happened, it might have at least asked the participants to give their views prior to making a decision."

"Surely the fact the referees did not see the foul on me does not justify the commissioner's inaction or silence on the matter..."

Talking to newsmen, the Laker center said, "The bigger players have more finesse now. There are so many skilled players, this rough stuff isn't justified."

HE ADDED that the failure to penalize Benson might well encourage others to provoke attacks.

"Since I have played in the NBA (eight years), by necessity I have learned to play the game as a contact sport, really at the expense of playing basketball."

"The handling of this incident does not give me much hope that I can rely on the league's crusade against violence for my physical protection even though I concede that self-help techniques are not the answer to the problem."

Quarterback injuries fail to crater Longhorns

By ISH HALEY
Dallas Times Herald

AUSTIN, Texas — Against top-10 ranked Oklahoma in Dallas on Oct. 8, Texas' two leading quarterbacks went out for the season with injuries in the first half.

The Longhorns were backed to the edge of the cliff and it seemed just a matter of time before they took the big plunge — again.

"If the same thing had happened to us last year, we might have folded," said senior guard Rick Ingraham.

As its perfect record indicates, Texas was neither spindled, folded or otherwise mutilated. Randy McEachern, an obscure reserve in his fourth year at Texas, came in and helped the Longhorns beat the Sooners for the first time since 1970, 13-6.

What happened against Oklahoma was a severe test," said Texas coach Fred Akers. "And it was one that was passed not only by Randy McEachern but by our entire football team."

ALTHOUGH MANY faces are the same, Texas is not the same team it was in 1976 when legendary Darrell Royal ended a 20-year Longhorn coaching career with a 5-5-1 record.

What has caused the dramatic change from a .500 team to the nation's best club? There are many theories, but two are most dominant:

—Injuries, most significantly fullback Earl Campbell's hamstring, decimated the 1976 squad.

—The change in offensive philosophy between Royal and Akers. One simply, Akers abandoned the wishbone offense that Royal introduced.

ANALYSIS

ed nine years ago.

When asked about the difference in the two Longhorn teams, Royal, now the UT athletic director, said "last year, we were getting beat. This year we're undefeated (8-0). I'm not being sarcastic, but I think this is rather obvious."

Texas, on the basis of 10 offensive and eight defensive regulars returning, was penciled for national recognition last year. But the injury situation snowballed and buried the Longhorns like an avalanche. With Campbell carrying only five times, Texas lost only its ninth opener in 84 years of football at Boston College. Without Campbell, the wishbone was ineffective, producing 2,203 yards last year. With Akers' more flexible attack, Texas has stamped for 2,069 rushing yards in seven games.

"WHEN YOU lose 13 starters, you get discouraged," Ingraham said. "We had a bad mental attitude. We didn't believe in ourselves." But Royal declined to diagnose injury as the underlying difference between his last team and Akers' first which is ranked No. 1.

"I'll let you decide that. I don't have anything to say. My coaching career is history and I don't believe there's any part of it that I have to apologize for," Royal said. "Fred Akers has charged of our football program and he's doing an excellent job."

Campbell, the nation's leading rusher, missed four games last year. When he could limp, he played and gained 653 yards on 138 carries, and when he could stay for the finish, Texas did not lose. He wasn't able to stay for the last game against either Boston College or Texas Tech.

Johnny (Lam) Jones, the Olympic gold medal sprinter, suffered a back injury, running back Johnny (Ham) Jones had a series of leg injuries and split end Alfred Jackson played with sore ribs. Last year's offensive line took more lumps than this year's quarterbacking corps.

ON DEFENSE, Texas lost more big ends than Weight Watchers. Tackle Brad Shearer, an all-American hopeful, played on a knee that required post-season surgery. Safety Johnnie Johnson, seventh leading tackler this year and third nationally in punt returns, missed eight games including Oklahoma. Last month, it was Johnson who collared Sooner quarterback Thomas Lott on fourth down at the Texas five-yard line, one-step shy of a first down. A touchdown and two-point conversion probably would have given Oklahoma a win.

"Had we won the Boston College game or beaten Texas Tech, last year might have been different," said David McWilliams, one of the two Royal aides retained by Akers. "Losing to Tech really threw us. Had we re-grouped and beaten them, it might have been different — not easier — but we might have played better."

Akers, Longhorn assistant for nine seasons before his two-year tour as head coach at Wyoming, was the surprise choice as Royal's successor.

Ingram said the first meeting between players and head coach set the pace for this fall's accomplishments. "He told us we weren't going to be like last year," Ingram remembered. "He said he was hired to bring Texas back, and he was going to do it. He's been the catalyst."

UNDER THE guidance of the enthusiastic Akers, the Texas team, Ingram says, "has more unity and purpose; the material was here, but it wasn't used to its fullest. This year, we've played up to our potential — the way we ought to play."

Ingram said his statement should not be interpreted as criticism of Royal's final year. "I am not trying to say anything bad about the coaches," he said. "You just have to look at what we had, and what we lost. The coaches weren't bad last year. I'm just saying that this year some players realize they didn't want to go out on a bad note."

Before last season, Royal's teams had won at least eight games per year in every campaign since switching to the wishbone in 1968. Two national championships and six straight Cotton Bowl appearances are included in that string.

Texas' Earl Campbell is healthy this season, as SMU tacklers discover, and Texas is ranked No. 1. (AP Laserphoto).

TEE TIME

Anyone missing diamond ring?

BY REX WORRELL
Hogan Park golf pro

We have some lady's diamond ring at the pro shop. It was found by Mrs. Bob Connors on the putting green Thursday. If you were at the golf course and are missing a ring, stop by and identify it and pick it up.

It's turkey time again at Hogan Park. The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association will conduct its annual turkey shoot next Saturday. The tournament will be an ABCD scramble event.

Entry fee will be $2 plus green fees. The entry deadline is 6 p.m. Thursday. Tee times and pairings will be arranged by the tournament committee. The members of the low four teams will each win a turkey in the 12-14 pound size. We encourage golfers to sign up early and shoot yourself a Thanksgiving turkey.

THE HOGAN Park Women's Golf Association held a Most Bogeys event Thursday with Betty Cobb, Shirley Edwards, Cheryl Starcevic and Gene Velton tying for first place honors in the 18-hole division. They each had nine bogies.

In the nine-hole division, Pat Kolb came in first with five bogies and Mary Davis was right on her heels in second with four.

There will be a board meeting at the home of Dorothy Melzer Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. All board members are urged to attend.

There will be a general meeting and election of officers at the Hogan golf shop Thursday at 9:30 a.m. All members are urged to attend.

The ladies will hold a Turkey Shoot following the general meeting and each member will make her own pairings for the event.

Bristol awaits call

ATLANTA (AP) — If the Atlanta Braves can't find anyone to replace Dave Bristol as manager, Bristol has a candidate — himself.

Bristol, who was fired last month from the National League baseball team, sent a telegram to Braves owner Ted Turner saying he wants another chance.

"According to informed sources, you can't find a manager to replace Dave Bristol," the telegram said. "With my experience, knowledge of the situation and love for Atlanta, I am applying."

Wolverines' Schembechler wary of Boilermakers

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
By The Associated Press

The Purdue Boilermakers did a terrible thing last season — they beat mighty Michigan...and now the day of reckoning is at hand.

When Purdue upset Michigan 16-14, the Wolverines were the nation's No. 1-ranked college football team. But the stunning reversal dropped them to No. 4 and they never got higher than second thereafter, finally finishing third after a 14-6 Rose Bowl loss to Southern California.

"When they ruin a perfect season for us, that's got to be on everybody's mind," says Michigan safety Jim Pickens.

ECHOES Coach Bo Schembechler:

"Maybe it's a good thing that we're going back to Purdue. It will give us the added incentive to get ready for them and to really go after them."

Michigan is ranked No. 6 this time around. The current villain is Minnesota, which shocked the Wolverines — again — ranked No. 1 at the time — 16-0 a couple of weeks ago and hasn't won a game since.

Don't look for any changes at the top of the rankings Saturday. No. 1-rated Texas entertains lowly 2-6 Texas Christian while runner-up Alabama hosts 3-5 Miami of Florida.

Elsewhere, the schedule finds Colorado at No. 3 Oklahoma, Indiana at No. 4 Ohio State, No. 5 Notre Dame at No. 15 Clemson, No. 7 Kentucky at Florida, No. 8 Arkansas at No. 11

Texas A&M, Temple at No. 9 Penn State and No. 10 Pitt vs. Army at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

The rest of the Second Ten has Kansas at No. 12 Nebraska, No. 13 Brigham Young at No. 17 Arizona State for a crucial Western Athletic Conference night game, No. 14 Southern Cal at Washington in one of several Pac-8 Rose Bowl shootouts, Memphis State at No. 16 Florida State under the lights, No. 18 Texas Tech at Southern Methodist, No. 19 North Carolina at Virginia and North Carolina at No. 20 Colgate.

MICHIGAN'S quest for victory at Purdue, however, goes deeper than just plain old-fashioned revenge. The Wolverines trail Ohio State by one game in the Big Ten race and next week's showdown will decide the conference's Rose Bowl representative barring some dastardly upset this weekend.

"Last year," says Pickens, "we went down there with the wrong mental attitude — just kind of lax and not really taking Purdue serious enough, I guess."

Linebacker John Anderson calls it "a do-or-die game. Last year, we went there undefeated, but this time we have a loss. We have to be mentally ready, that'll be the difference."

HOWEVER, Michigan will be up against a Purdue team — coached, by the way, by former long-time Schembechler aide Jim Young — which has won three games in a row, its longest such streak since 1972, and boasts one of the nation's leading passers in Mark Herrmann. The freshman sensation has completed 155 of 275 for 2,215 yards and 17 touchdowns, but also has thrown 21 interceptions.

"Mark Herrmann is a great passer, probably the best thrower since I've been in the league," says Schembechler. "But the thing that has made them successful is that they are achieving a balanced offense. They have rushed for more than 200 yards in each of their last three games and they have won them all. I think that tells us what we are up against."

Says Young, in his first season at Purdue:

"We're as excited as we've been all year. But Michigan has two things going for it — last year and a chance for the Rose Bowl again this year. They have to win Saturday for their game with Ohio State to mean anything. I'm sure they'll come in here ready to play. We just want to win and have a 7-4 season. I don't care who is across the field."

MEANWHILE, Notre Dame, No. 5 in the ratings but No. 1 in the hearts of the Cotton, Sugar and Orange Bowls, faces what Coach Dan Devine says "could well be our toughest test of all" in Clemson Memorial Stadium, known as "Death Valley" for good reason.

Judy 2 back as Kathy leads in Singapore

SINGAPORE (AP) — Kathy Whitworth of the United States, playing brilliantly on the back nine, shot a 3-under-par 69 to grab a one-stroke lead in the first round of the Far East Open women's international golf tournament Friday.

Whitworth collected two bogeys and a birdie on the front nine but overcame pressure to register four birdies on the back nine.

Marlene Floyd of the United States ranked second with a 70. Judy Rankin, the top-money winner on the women's circuit, shot a 71 and was tied with fellow Americans Mary Lou Crocker and Donna Caponi Young.

"I have been playing cautious golf," Whitworth said. "I had a poor round on the front nine but my putting was a savior on the back."

"Like most of the golfers, I can stand the heat because I had played in hotter weather. But the humidity is really bad. There were times when I could feel my arms getting weary."

The tourney is sponsored by Colgate.

Japan reduces U.S. on Aoki's 3-under

TOKYO (AP) — Isao Aoki shot a 3-under par 69 Friday as the Japanese were being counted daily reduced the United States' lead from six to four strokes, 501-497, after second-round play in their dual professional golf tournament.

The seven best scores Aoki, 35, a former of eight American and Japanese World Cup nine Japanese players on each side in the second round stand.

Starting with the $24,000 top prize. The second round, scores of team prize is $18,000 for the seven best players were being counted daily the losers.

The 35-year-old Aoki rolled three birdies against no bogeys on the 7,140-yard, par-72 course, because of illness.

Dave Stockton of the United States stood second after his second straight 69 for a 138 total on the 7,140-yard, par 72 Harima Country Club course. Tom Weiskopf, who posted his second consecutive 70, and Toru Nakamura, who had a 72 Friday, were tied for third at 140. Next at 142 came J.C. Sneed and Jerry McGee. Sneed shot a 74 and McGee had a 72.

East Texas' Jones, Kirk earn laurels

SAN MARCOS — Don Jones and Danny Kirk, the leaders of an East Texas State defense that keyed last Saturday's 7-6 upset win over Texas A&I, have been named Lone Star Conference defensive players of the week.

S.F. Austin tailback Bobby Mitchell was named the offensive standout.

"Jones put the pressure on their quarterback and Kirk made the big defensive plays," ET Coach Ernest Hawkins said after the win which ended A&I's unbeaten streak at 46.

Jones, a 6-4, 225-pound junior defensive end from Friendswood, was in on six tackles, while Kirk, a freshman linebacker from Marlin, had nine tackles, caused two fumbles and had a quarterback sack.

Mitchell rushed for 187 yards on 27 carries and scored on runs of 72, four and two yards as SFA beat Howard Payne, 31-3, to end a 15-game losing streak. Mitchell is a 6-3, 187-pound junior from Big Sandy.

Employers protest new increase in workers' compensation costs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — State Insurance Board rating formulas give insurance companies too much money for workers' compensation policies, an actuary hired by Texas manufacturers says.

Charles Edwards of Dallas told the board that a change in just one element might eliminate the need for a proposed 3.2 percent rate increase recommended by the state agency's statisticians.

Speaking for the Texas Association of Business, Edwards said that the typical company paid a gross premium tax of 1.79 per cent last year although the rating formula gives it 3.85 per cent.

"This change in the premium tax loading alone might be enough to eliminate the need for an increase," he said.

Board statisticians recommended a 3.2 percent average statewide increase in workers' compensation rates, effective Jan. 1, 1978.

They proposed a 3.2 percent hike for manufacturing firms, 3.7 percent for contractors, a 2.5 per cent reduction for oil companies and a 4.3 percent increase for "all other" categories of business and industry.

The National Council on Compensation, which usually objects that staff recommendations are too low, said it was satisfied with this year's proposals.

Jim Yancy, general counsel of the Texas Association of Business, objected both to the 3.85 percent allowance for premium taxes and the 2.5 percent of the premium dollar added for profit.

Yancy said the biggest Texas writer of workers' compensation, Texas Employers, had a 16.8 per cent profit on the business it wrote last year.

"You're setting the rate too high,"

he said.

Edwards said the companies were making about six to seven percent from investing the premiums they receive from businesses on workers' compensation policies.

He recommended adjusting the rate formula to show actual company expenses, not the theoretical ones now in use — the same proposal he made earlier this year for home and auto insurance.

Insurance companies protested the home insurance rates that resulted, particularly because of the small allowance given for premium taxes. They claimed that allowing them to recover anything less than the maximum 3.85 percent would be confiscatory and, therefore, illegal.

But the board has not yet asked for an attorney general's opinion, although the staff has drafted a request for one.

Texas businesses pay more than $800 million a year for workers' compensation insurance, and rates have increased 55.9 per cent in the past four years.

Social vengeance calls for capital punishment

(Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of three articles. The other two articles were published in The Reporter-Telegram on Thursday and Friday.)

By AMY KIDD
Austin Bureau

HUNTSVILLE — Billy Hughes is 25 years old. To the state of Texas, his case is terminal.

Last year, Hughes was convicted of killing a Department of Public Safety officer — a crime he says he didn't commit. And while he maintains his innocence, he knows he has little to do but wait, right along with his 61 neighbors on Death Row.

"It seems like I have never known anything else than this right here," he says.

"I've set my mind to accept it. I can remember — and I know what it was like on the outside, but I'm here and I'm going to be here for years, it seems like. So I've set my mind that I know this and nothing else."

Hughes and the other men in their isolated row of cells are caught in the middle of a gut-level conflict that has kept the state from executing an inmate since 1964: the right of the individual to life and the right of society to a safe existence.

The question of whether the death penalty deters other violent crimes remains the central argument of whether capital punishment has a place in the criminal justice system. But statistically, it's a different case to prove.

Records from the Department of Public Safety show little more than a fluctuation in the annual murder rate for 100,000 Texas residents: 16 in 1946, 25 in 1947, 12.6 in 1976 and 12 in 1964.

But Dr. Charles Friel, assistant administrator of Sam Houston State University's Criminal Justice Center, says the issue of statistics simply may mask the "social vengeance" factor behind the capital punishment dilemma. Most people, he notes, don't understand statistical arguments about deterrence — but there's more to the death penalty than numbers.

"If there's a rationale for capital punishment that I would accept, it would be based upon society's need to express the limits of what they'll tolerate in terms of deviancy," he says.

"There are certain acts committed by other people that so outrage the conscience of society, their moral standards, that for their own social and psychological equilibrium, they have to say, 'That's a dastardly act. That's an unforgivable act. That's something that so outrages us that we need to do something that is outrageous to express that.'"

"Taking another person's life is an extreme response to that."

Friel predicts the controversy will continue, although the capital punishment issue is "a tempest in a teapot" compared to the number of cases processed through the nation's criminal justice system.

"It has all the trappings of that kind of symbolic issue around which society can express its frustrations with people who will not obey the law, who commit dastardly acts and the institutions that deal with them seem ineffective to do anything about them."

Rehabilitation, often touted as the social savior of the condemned criminal, is still primitive in the United States, Friel notes. And he admits that neither the criminal justice system nor the field of psychology has decided how to change the behavior patterns of the hired killer, for example.

"An individual like that is a predator. He's a predator by choice. It's a profession, it's a business."

"A terrorist — it's a profession, it's a choice, it's a business. He goes in the business of violence. He wears the symbols of violence. He does violent acts. The potential for rehabilitating those people I don't think is real great because we don't know why they do it. I don't think we understand how to change them into something else."

Meanwhile, Hughes says the worst thing about his sentence is remembering what he lost outside the red brick and barred wire: eating a Big Mac and french fries, being able to walk into a store, hearing people laugh.

"I'm lucky," he adds, saying the days pass quickly because he stays busy writing letters, free-lancing cartoons for riding magazines and hoping.

"I don't think I'm going to die. I'm not worried about dying. I hope I can live to the old age of 35, maybe 40 or 45."

"I kid about it. And I joke all the time," he adds. "Time flies when you're having fun."

Digital watch makers dropping from market

AP Newsfeatures

Time is running out on some solid state watches. Extensive engineering, expense, production and testing have gone into the evolution of the digital watch which, unlike conventional watches, has no watch movements — balance wheel, tuning fork and the like.

But that complex mechanism has created problems. A number of traditional watchmakers — for example, Gruen and Benrus — have become dropouts from the digital watch market. Some semiconductor companies have abandoned digital business. Fairchild has reported an $8 million pretax loss on digital watches in the second quarter, according to Business Week.

A digital watch is not a simple timepiece that anyone can repair. An entire module may need to be replaced at a factory, which has the complex electronic equipment needed for module testing — something the consumer should know.

There are 35,000 watch makers and jewelers who can service, repair and adjust conventional watches, electronic tuning fork watches and quartz watches with conventional dials. In contrast, "there are no experts in retail stores who have been trained to repair solid state watches," the Bulova Time Center says.

In addition, there are no standards for the hundreds of modules of digital watches — one reason inexperienced people cannot repair them — or for minibatteries or for battery replacement procedures. Some types of watches, such as the light-emitting diodes (LEDs), may have complicated setting procedures that burn up their lives quickly. In fact, this year there has been a big shift from watches with the LEDs to the models with liquid crystal displays known as LCDs, reports the business news magazine.

Typical quartz crystals used in quality, solid-state digital watches keep time by vibrating 32,768 times a second. Some watches may need regulation for accuracy, and only a watch rate measuring timer, an electronic instrument used by jewelers, can be used for that purpose.

The public's confusion is compounded by retailers who do not know enough about these watches to provide service, industry sources say. Two years ago when a million solid state watches were retailed, some stores reported a 60 percent return of new watches due to malfunction. In 1976 jewelers reported returns of 30 to 40 percent, whereas returns of hand-wound watches were at the rate of only 1 percent.

Some module assemblers did not make proper tests necessary to these complicated mechanisms, according to industry sources, and many solid state watches were of poor quality — a great many selling for a few dollars. A lot of intricate circuitry is involved in time and calendar displays on watches in dividing down the high frequency to hours, minutes, months. Such watches must be meticulously assembled.

LCD-type digital watches display time by light reflection and are minibattery-powered for continuous operation, usually 12 months; LED models light when a button is pushed, burning energy rapidly and often bringing complaints of short battery life by consumers.

Sales people should be equipped to demonstrate performance and features, and should be able to set the watch accurately to the second, minute, hour and day of the week. The store should carry the minibatteries that are needed and be equipped to change them, industry sources suggest, although a jewelry shop can provide these services.

Building dedicated

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Frank W. Mayborn Building was dedicated Thursday at the George Peabody College for teachers.

The building, formerly called the Industrial Arts Building, was renovated last year and named for Mayborn, a board of trustees member. Mayborn is a Temple, Tex., businessman and communications executive.

"This action was taken in recognition of the outstanding service and devotion of Frank W. Mayborn to the college as a member of the board of trustees and as a true friend of American education," John Dunworth, Peabody president, said.

The building houses the Peabody School of Library Science, the college's program for educators of youth, instructional media center, classrooms and faculty offices.

Horace G. Hill Jr., board chairman, called the dedication a double honor.

"This day is, of course, an honor for Frank Mayborn because we have chosen to name a building as a lasting memorial for him," Hill said.

Benefits concern president

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Friday he is "quite concerned" that benefits which would be awarded retired persons under pending Social Security legislation are excessive.

"We are hopeful Congress will not come forward with too generous a package that will add substantially to the tax burden of working people and employers," the president told a group of editors and publishers in a White House interview.

The House and Senate have passed bills to sharply increase payroll taxes to keep the financially troubled Social Security system solvent. A conference committee is working out the differences in the legislation.

"I'm quite concerned that the various types of benefits that are awarded to retired people will be excessive, because working people and employers now have to pay those benefits," the president told the interviewers in the Cabinet Room.

A week ago, the Senate approved an administration-backed Social Security plan to shore up the system with increased payroll taxes, most of which would be levied on employers.

The Senate bill places a limit of $6,000 on the amount a retired person could earn and still receive Social Security benefits. The House bill places no limit on the earnings. Carter favors the Senate bill.

Meanwhile, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., charged Friday the Senate was misled last week in voting against his amendment to eliminate the earnings limitation beginning in 1982 for persons 65 or older.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, told the Senate before its Nov. 4 vote that Goldwater's amendment would cost the system $2 billion or more annually.

But after that vote, Church acknowledged on the Senate floor that he used the wrong figures and that lifting the limit at age 65 in 1982 would cost only $400 million to $600 million a year more than lifting it at age 70.

A Social Security recipient who earns more than $3,000 loses $1 in benefits for each $2 earned above the limit. Persons 72 or older already can earn an unlimited amount without losing benefits.

South Africa warned foreign investment could end

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A Swiss banker warned South Africa Friday that foreign investments might dry up because of fear that the government's policies could lead to "revolution, civil or underground warfare."

He spoke as South Africa's white-minority government assumed wartime powers to force any company operating in South Africa to produce strategic and military goods on demand. The move was seen as a response to the international arms embargo against South Africa ordered by the U.N. Security Council.

Addressing the Financial Mail's annual investment conference, Robert Studer of the Union Bank of Switzerland said it "won't" South Africa's policy of racial segregation that would deter foreign investors, but their growing feeling that the country is a bad risk.

Studer said investors believed it was unlikely the West would agree to an economic embargo against Pretoria.

"On the other hand, serious concern continues to exist that South Africa's policy of apartheid (racial separation) could produce revolution, civil or underground warfare and even open war between East and West," he said.

Studer added, "The very existence of these incalculable risks may bring it about that the flow of foreign capital to South Africa ... will decline in the future or dry up completely."

An American banker who asked not to be identified said many Western bankers have ordered a review of their loans to South Africa in the wake of protests, arrests and crackdowns that followed the Sept. 12 prison death of black national leader Steve Biko.

The banker said that longterm capital available to South Africa has been decreasing steadily since 1974 and the trend was accelerated after rioting in Soweto last year.

South Africa currently needs foreign funds for several big projects, including a uranium enrichment plant, expansion of a plant that derives oil from coal and additional railroad, electric and harbor facilities.

In the past, South Africa was a favorite among international investors because of the high rate of return. According to the U.S. Commerce Department, the average rate on U.S. investments in 1974 was 19.1 percent.

Embassy radiation again protested

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S. government has protested again to the Soviet government over continued microwave radiation beamed at the American embassy following sharp increases in levels of intensity, it was learned Friday.

Several protests were delivered in Moscow and Washington in recent weeks but the exact number was not disclosed. The U.S. position is that such activity is indecent and should be stopped.

Sources familiar with the situation said that surges in the levels of radiation intensity had occurred 26 times in the past two months.

The sources gave no explanation for the reported sharp rise.

Authorities had no explanation for the abnormally high levels of white blood cells detected in one out of every 29 persons at the embassy, despite a stepped-up program of tests and analysis of individual health histories. There are 233 adults at the embassy.

The State Department has ruled out any connection between the elevated blood counts and microwave radiation. It says the high white cell levels have caused no outright disease symptoms and that environmental factors including viruses and intestinal parasites might be behind the situation.

The reasons for the Soviet microwave bombardment, which is aimed at the upper four stories of the 10-story embassy building, have been unclear since the beams were first detected at least as far back as 1962.

Various theories put forward suggest the radiation activates bugs inside the embassy, foils American electronic intelligence gathering operations or is designed to affect the performance of embassy personnel.

Israeli raid turns village to rubble

By JOE ALEX MORRIS JR.
Los Angeles Times

AZZIYAH, Lebanon — A few days ago, this was a modest hamlet of concrete-block dwellings, perched above a narrow grove and roughly equidistant from the Israeli border and Lebanon's southernmost city, the old Phoenician port of Tyre.

Today it is a sea of rubble, punctuated by bomb craters, some of them 10-feet deep. Not a single dwelling remains standing and the only structure to survive a combined Israeli air and artillery assault is a concrete telephone tower.

The survivors of the 200 to 250 villagers scratch about in the still-smoldering ruins. Baggy clothed men with crude tools search for the six or more children and adults believed still buried in the rubble. The women, many wearing the lip and chin tattoos of the Moslem peasantry, dig with bare hands, pulling out curtains, linen, half-burned mattresses.

A bulldozer stands nearby, but is not being used for fear of setting off unexploded bombs.

The scene is quiet, broken only by the occasional sound of shovels and the wailing of a woman mourning her dead children. Only a few Palestinians are visible, although this is the Lebanese south, the tinderbox region still controlled by the Palestinian guerrillas.

It was their looting of three salvos of Soviet-made Katusha rockets at the Israeli resort town of Nahariyah that brought the swift and terrible retribution down upon this village last Wednesday. But it is confusing and particularly tragic because this was a Lebanese village, not Palestinian.

"We are all Lebanese here. There are no Palestinians," cried a straight, unshaven man named Dib el-Gassim, who lost a daughter and a sister.

The Israelis announced their raid was against guerrilla targets, but it seems certain that they made a mistake in hitting this village. Months ago, Palestinians were training here and others are still in training over the mountain ridge.

The people in Azziyah were themselves refugees, Lebanese farmers from the town of Marwahayn that lies less than a mile from the Israeli border further south. They left their town on the border a few months ago, when they were caught up in the intermittent warfare that has raged here between Lebanese Christians, supported by Israel and Palestinian fighters.

These people have their own ideas about why the Israelis attacked them. "They attacked this village on purpose, to turn all Lebanese against the Palestinians," said a black-shirted youth named Sami Saleh.

A dozen other voices repeated the story. And to some extent, it seems to have worked that way.

Hassa Ghassan, who lost his sister and son-in-law when his two-room house was leveled, blamed the Americans. "America sends us bread and sends Israel bombs. We should eat grass before we take anything more from America," he said.

To a man, the villagers denied there were any Palestinians in the area.

In fact, there is a Palestinian training camp about a mile away on a hilltop and intelligence sources in Beirut confirmed remarks by Lebanese in Tyre who said that months ago, the Palestinians had been active on the site plastered Wednesday by the Israelis.

Was the attack due to pilot error or perhaps faulty Israeli intelligence?

Miss Lillian catches chill

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — President Carter's 79-year-old mother became ill Friday and canceled her engagements for the rest of the day.

"She's caught a chill," Tim Ryan, her host during an unofficial goodwill visit with a group of Iowans, told reporters.

Aides said Miss Lillian had gone to bed after being drenched during a tree-planting ceremony in a Dublin park.

There was no indication that a doctor had been called in.

Earlier, Mrs. Carter appeared to be in high spirits at a reception in Dublin Castle Thursday night.

Tower, Bush address women's meeting

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — U.S. Sen. John Tower and former CIA director George Bush preached the power of positive politicking Friday in appearances at the 11th Biennial Texas Federation of Republican Women's Convention.

In a mid-morning speech, Bush said he felt "optimistic" about the GOP's future, "but we cannot build a party simply by tearing down someone else ... we can't build by hoping that a Democrat will stumble. We can't take delight. That philosophy would be negative and we have a positive message."

Tower, noting that he had not officially announced his candidacy for a fourth term in the Senate, added Friday afternoon "I expect to run again and will make an announcement in January. I intend to conduct a positive campaign based on my own views and my own records and will do so regardless of my opposition."

Texas' senior U.S. Senator could not, however, let an opportunity pass to take a few jabs at the Democrats.

"Right now, noting that the President's popularity has been in the decendency in the last few weeks, I would think that the President has been doing has adversely affected his own party," said Tower adding that he "sharply disagrees with President Carter's view of 'accusing the oil lobby of working against the national interest.'"

Tower also said he felt the energy issue would continue to haunt the President and would be a topic on which the Republicans could capitalize. "The Republican stand on energy has been very clear," he said. "That is deregulate the price of gas and decontrol the price of oil and provide whatever incentives are possible for expanded exploration."

Bush, who said he was keeping his political "options open," told the more than 400 delegates, "We as Republicans must avoid a death wish. Those who demand absolute, total agreement are not going to find it. We can't ask that everybody agree ... we have to adhere to broad Republican policy."

Bush also gave the women his views on Communist super powers China and Russia.

"The threat from the Communist world today clearly is from the Soviet Union," he said. "China makes outrageous demands that we should not meet," but added, "the worst thing that could happen would be for the Soviet Union to have good relations with China such as in the 1950s."

He also said that according to an intelligence report he helped make on China while he served as the CIA director that China is underdeveloped and does not have the standing force to be a strategic threat to the U.S.

The convention adjourns Saturday following a morning session during which the delegates will vote on several resolutions dealing with the Panama Canal treaty, abortions and International Women's Year.

Commissioner says Klan patrol publicity stunt

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service indicated Friday he thinks the Ku Klux Klan's "border watch" patrol for illegal aliens in the Southwest is a publicity stunt.

"What patrols?" responded Leonel Castillo when questioned about the KKK tactics following a speech at Trinity University here.

"There were 14 Klansmen, a few cars and 1,400 newsmen at the border," he said. "The Klan stopped no one. There were no apprehensions, but they made a lot of publicity."

Meeting attempts rejected

By CHARLES R. BABCOCK
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, made several attempts to arrange an appointment between then-President Ford and recently indicted, Korean-born businessman Hancho C. Kim, but each time was turned down by the National Security Council, two of Ford's congressional liaison aides said Friday.

At least once, in June, 1975, Kim was scheduled to meet the president with Guyer and other members of Congress and their friends, a Ford spokesman said Friday from Rancho Mirage, Calif. But that meeting never came off, "probably because the NSC opposed it," the spokesman said.

Vernon C. Loen, a House lobbyist for the Ford White House, said in a telephone interview Friday that Guyer asked him at least three times in 1975 and 1976 to try to arrange such an appointment.

"My job was to get votes for President Ford," Loen said, and when I'd approach Tenny he'd say, "Sure I'll support the president on this veto override." Then he'd say, "I have this friend who's a big supporter of a college in my district and it sure would be nice if he could get in to see the president."

Guyer was reported to be traveling in his district and could not be reached for comment Friday night. He has previously said that he knew Kim for several years, but had never taken any favors from him.

Kim, a naturalized U.S. citizen was indicted in September on charges he was part of a South Korean government-sponsored conspiracy to bribe members of Congress. The indictment said he received $600,000 in cash from the Korean CIA in 1974 and 1975 for the purpose of "corruptly influencing" U.S. officials.

During the time when he was seeking an appointment with the president Kim was allegedly sending international Telex messages from his Lanham, Md., home to KCIA headquarters in Seoul.

Loen and Max Friedersdorf, Ford's chief congressional lobbyist, both said Friday that the requests from Guyer were forwarded to the president's scheduling office and then, because he was foreign-born, to the National Security Council. "Each time they (NSC officials) objected," Friedersdorf said.

An NSC spokesman said Friday that he was unaware of any national security reasons for rejecting a Kim appointment with Ford. He pointed out that presidents usually have time only to see high-ranking foreign visitors.

The indictment against Kim charges that as part of the conspiracy to influence U.S. policy he entertained members of Congress, made a $10,000 donation to Findlay College, and wrote letters to an executive branch official.

The congressmen have since been identified as Guyer and former Rep. Vernon Thomson, R-Wis. The executive branch official to whom Kim wrote the letters was identified Friday by sources familiar with the investigation as President Ford.

Guyer and Kim are both graduates of Findlay College.

Loen said that he recalls receiving a letter from Kim to the president while he served at the White House. "Guyer told me it was coming," he said. "I think I sent it over to the National Security Council."

Loen emphasized that he never heard Guyer "advance the cause of Korea" while making the requests for a Kim audience with the president. "As far as I knew he (Guyer) was just trying to take care of a constituent."

GARAGE SALE

Patio Sale, Yard Sale whatever term you use, it's an enjoyable and profitable experience. It's your opportunity to "clean up" while you "clean out." You'll become re-acquainted with your neighbors and meet new friends, and the fresh air is good for your health.

Check your attic, basement, garage and closets for good, but no longer-used items - furniture, tools, - the list goes on and on. Every item should be priced, of course. You may want to combine your sale with a friend or neighbor. Choose your days, get your signs ready and place your ad in the Classified section. Your ad should list a few key items, give the date, time, and good directions.

Geneva talks, short-term cures have little effect

EDITOR'S NOTE: Negotiators from nearly 100 countries have been meeting around a conference table in Geneva for three years in search of a solution to the world trade imbalance. This last in a three-part series outlines what the Carter administration hopes to accomplish.

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is counting on finding solutions to America's serious trade problems at a conference table in Geneva where three years of negotiations have had little result so far.

"Not a damn thing that amounts to a hill of beans has been accomplished in the last three years, and it's time to get on with it," says Robert S. Strauss, President Carter's chief trade negotiator.

Representatives from 97 countries have been negotiating in Geneva since 1974 on a new world trade agreement to lower tariffs and other trade barriers. Several deadlines have been pushed back, and the new one is 1978.

By one estimate, U.S. trade with Europe could grow from $40 billion now to $100 billion in 10 years, which translates into a lot new jobs and production.

The Geneva negotiations are part of the administration's long-run strategy to help erase the nation's huge trade deficits and to stem the loss of production and jobs to other nations. Another part is to enact an energy program that will reduce reliance on imported oil.

The short-run strategy has been to do as little as possible, and hope that economies of other nations will grow in strength and increase the demand for U.S. products. So far, this part of the strategy has not worked very well.

The administration has been forced by pressures from some well-organized unions and industry to give short-term help in the form of temporary import quotas, notably for shoes and color televisions sets.

In response to pressure for help from the domestic steel industry and its unions, the administration also is stepping up enforcement of its trade laws, which could result in the assessment of punitive tariffs on imported steel.

The 500,000-member Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union is seeking similar action against imports of apparel and textiles from eight Latin American and Asian nations, alleging that unfairly low prices are costing thousands of American jobs.

Tariffs, which are a fee levied against imports, already exist for most goods imported into the United States, including steel and television sets. Quotas, which limit the quantity of a product that may be imported, are used less frequently but are common.

In the case of steel and television sets, however, the existing protection has not kept American industry from feeling serious competitive pressures, and so there are demands for even tighter restrictions.

The administration is reluctant to resort to trade restrictions because of concern it would invite retaliation by the nation's trading partners against U.S. exports.

"Protectionism is just as strong in Europe and Japan as it is in this country," Strauss said in an interview. If nations begin raising barriers against trade with one another, he said, there could be a "return to the dark ages of world trade" that accompanied the Great Depression.

But Strauss indicated that unless a trade agreement is reached at Geneva that is "fair, balanced and substantive," Carter might be unable to resist the growing domestic pressures for drastic measures to bar imports.

"We have a reasonably good chance of completing negotiations before the end of 1978," Strauss said. "If we fail to complete it, we will go backward dramatically in our trade relations."

Strauss denied he was using the possibility of U.S. trade barriers as a threat to pressure other nations into reaching an agreement. "We are not using a club, but we are using the persuasion of this nation," he said.

U.S. participation in the Geneva negotiations was authorized by Congress in the 1974 Trade Act. The talks were formally opened in Tokyo, and so are known as the Tokyo Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — GATT.

The GATT is a Geneva-based international trade organization established in 1947.

A major aim of the Geneva negotiations is to slash tariffs across the board. Congress has approved tariff reductions of up to 60 percent, but European countries have favored a smaller reduction.

The negotiators are now discussing a compromise Swiss proposal for a 44 percent cut in tariffs. Alonzo L. McDonald, Strauss' chief deputy at Geneva, says the final cut is more likely to be 40 percent. That would be an average reduction, with some cuts of up to 60 percent and others less than 40, he added.

The United States also wants a reduction in non-tariff barriers, which McDonald said are just as important to the success of a new trade agreement as a reduction in tariffs.

Such barriers include subsidies a government gives to its exports, such as the refund of domestic taxes that European governments give to producers on goods for export. The United States has its own tax-incentive export program.

There would be carefully listed exceptions to the reduction in tariffs. McDonald said one of these is likely to be for employment-intensive U.S. textile manufacturers.

"We have to be hypersensitive to employment statistics," he said. In some cases, the changes that are agreed to would be intended to take effect later on, rather than at once, when economic conditions have changed.

One major U.S. goal in the trade negotiations is to win greater access for farm products, especially grains, in the European Common Market, and for beef and citrus in Japan. It also is seeking removal of licensing restrictions that impede exports of sophisticated goods such as computers, transistors and aircraft.

McDonald said the government has given up on trying to obtain a general lowering of tariffs and barriers to U.S. farm goods but is optimistic about winning concessions for individual products. U.S. negotiators have asked for lowering of various trade barriers against 1,000 products, most of them agricultural.

Strauss said most Americans have the mistaken belief that restricting trade solves problems. "People don't understand... it sounds simple to say keep out foreign imports because they cost American jobs," he said.

Strauss noted that one of every six U.S. manufacturing jobs is supported by exports, and that except for the nation's oil imports and trade with Japan, America actually has a surplus in its trade with most nations.

One example illustrates the problem. Although Japan shipped $2.1 billion in steel to the United States last year, it imported about $1 billion in U.S. coal, which is used to fire its steel industry. Reduce one, and you also reduce the other.

The United States does hope, however, to separately reduce its trade deficit with Japan, which totaled $5 billion for the first eight months of this year. The recent increase in the value of the Japanese yen to an all-time high against the dollar is expected to help. The change has been encouraged by the United States.

A major stumbling block to a new Geneva agreement from the outset was the worldwide economic recession, from which many nations have not yet fully recovered. With unemployment high and production sluggish, there is a reluctance by any nation to make trade concessions.

But the United States position now is that the industrial nations of the world cannot afford not to negotiate a new agreement as soon as possible. The agreement would regulate world trade for the decade of the 1980s. Without it, Strauss said, there would be chaos.

Readers offer choice advice

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The column is devoted today to suggestions from readers.

"Several times lately in various publications and columns, including your own, there have been recommendations for taking the yellow out of white piano keys. Maybe the methods explained work, but my method is so easy and does such a good job that it would be wrong not to make it known to the general public. I hope you can print it. Brush the keys with a cloth moistened with ordinary cider vinegar and water. There should be only a small percentage of vinegar, about 5 percent. Use enough to dampen the keys but not soak them. After waiting a few minutes for the solution to dry, polish the keys with a soft, clean cloth. Repeat the process, drying between applications, until all the yellow is gone. After about three applications, if by some chance there is still a little color in the keys, wait until the next day and repeat the process. This avoids keeping the keys unnecessarily wet and the possibility, not very likely, of loosening the ivories. Do this about once a month and the keys will stay white. Any odor from the vinegar disappears in a few minutes." Mrs. R. W.

"If you have a jig or band saw or other power tool, you sometimes find that you have the need for a small wrench of the open-end type. One way to keep it handy at all times is to put it on the table or stand that holds the tool by pressing it into a lump of putty. I use weatherstripping putty, but other kinds will do. The putty is just tacky enough to stay on the table and hold the wrench in place." J. C. B.

"There were some cracks between a few of the boards on our painted porch floor. I filled them with putty twice, but each time the putty shrank and became loose after a while. I then dug out all the putty and filled the cracks this time with oakum caulking that I bought at a boat shop. I left a small fraction of an inch at the top of each crack, then filled that tiny opening with putty. After waiting a few days, I painted the putty to match the rest of the porch floor. That was almost a year ago and the repair seems to have held." S. T. Jr.

"I have an old and beautiful maple table that has been in the family for many years. Some tea was spilled on it and not noticed for several days. When we tried to get out the stain, nothing worked. At the suggestion of a friend, I removed the table top and took it to a local planing mill, where they took off a tiny fraction of an inch of the top, exposing a beautiful clean, new surface." C. R. B.

Dow says employees show no sterility from DBCP

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. said Friday its male employees exposed to the fungicide DBCP, suspected as a cause of sterility, did not appear to be less fertile than other males.

Sperm counts from Dow employees here who were "associated with the production of DBCP" were about the same as sperm counts from a group of workers who were not exposed, Dow said.

Both groups of men showed sperm counts "within the normal distribution pattern for sperm counts," a Dow statement said.

DBCP, dibromochloropropane, is a fungicide used on pests such as worms which attack root crops. The domestic makers of the chemical, Dow and Shell Chemical Corp., stopped manufacture in September after reports of sterility or low fertility among employees of Occidental Chemical Corp. in Lathrop, Calif., who handled DBCP.

Dow collected sperm from 249 workers who had been exposed to DBCP here and 77 who had not. All were volunteers, Dow said.

"In both cases, two-thirds of the employees tested at or above 40 million sperm per milliliter of semen," said Dr. David B. Johns, medical director of Dow's Michigan Division, which made the DBCP.

A milliliter is a cubic centimeter, about 6 percent of a cubic inch.

Johns said physicians consider 40 to 50 million sperm per milliliter normal.

About 63 percent of both groups had counts above 50 million.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

Say what you want about the Bible — it lives. It has endured through centuries. No matter where you go across the face of the globe you can find it, printed in a vast variety of languages, bringing new meaning to new thousands.

Maybe some of it may be a muddle to you. It isn't easy reading, even the revised versions. But because it really is the greatest story ever told it's worth all the study you can give it.

Think about it. This book has lasted through wars, floods, famines, periods of both depression and prosperity, this over centuries. Get to know it better. Both on your own, and through your church.

The Mysterious Book Case!

The Nancy Drew Mystery

Did your grandparents or parents read Nancy Drew and Hardy Boys mysteries when they were growing up?

Yes  No

THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE

The jacket of the second Nancy Drew book, Nancy has changed some during her 47 years. She is now 18 instead of 16, so she can drive in most states.

THE MISSING CHUMS

The jacket of the fourth Hardy Boys book. Many of the Nancy Drew and Hardy Boys books have been rewritten to keep up with the times.

Father—Edward Stratemeyer started Nancy Drew, the Hardy Boys, the Bobby Twins, the Rover Boys and some 140 other series.

Daughter—Harriet S. Adams carries on the family business. She is now in her 80s and still writing. She is the mother of four. She has 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Who "done" it?

Who writes the Nancy Drew mystery books?

We had to investigate.

The trail led to Maplewood, New Jersey. It led to the offices of Harriet Adams.

But we thought Carolyn Keene wrote the Nancy Drew books.

But Carolyn Keene is Harriet Adams. She has been writing under that name ever since she took over the Nancy Drew series in 1930.

She has been writing at least one Nancy Drew book a year ever since.

Mrs. Adams' father, Edward Stratemeyer, really invented Nancy. He wrote the first three books.

Mr. Stratemeyer has been called a "book machine."

He didn't want it to get around that one person was doing so much writing. That was why he thought up some 60 names of authors for his 1,200 books.

Both Mrs. Adams and her father used ghostwriters. Ghostwriters help an author with a book, but their name is never given out. It's a trade secret.

What Mrs. Adams does is carefully outline some books, chapter by chapter. Then a ghostwriter comes along and fills in the details.

It's the same with the Hardy Boys books, too. Mr. Stratemeyer thought up the name Frances M. Dixon. When he died, other authors took over and wrote under that name.

Mrs. Adams now has several business partners. They run a company called the Stratemeyer Syndicate. They have turned out over 1,200 books themselves.

The Nancy Drew series has 54 titles

Dillons Win a Caldecott Medal Two Years In a Row

Leo and Diane Dillon and their 12 year-old-son Lee (an artist, too), live in Brooklyn, New York.

The Caldecott medal is given each year to the most outstanding picture book for children. Leo and Diane Dillon are the first people ever to win the Caldecott medal two times in a row.

They won it in 1976 for their art for "Why Mosquitoes Buzz in People's Ears: A West African Tale."

They won it this year for their art for "Ashanti to Zulu: African Traditions." This book, written by Margaret Musgrove, tells about 26 African customs from A to Z.

The book was published by Dial Press of New York City.

Dial Press also broke a record by becoming the first publisher to win both the Caldecott and Newbery in the same year.

The Newbery medal is given each year for the best-written book for children. It is usually for older kids.

The 1977 winner is Mildred D. Taylor for "Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry."

Mrs. Taylor was born in Mississippi. She grew up in Ohio. After college, she spent two years in the Peace Corps. Her book is about a rural Mississippi family during the Depression.

This year, both books honored deal with the black background and history.

The medals are awarded by the American Library Association. The winners are picked by a committee of 23 people. Suggestions are sent in by children and school librarians.

as the meeting house of the Frostburg Church of the Brethren, of which Greene has been pastor for the last three years.

The 450-foot-long building may also house a Christian school, or a community center or even a clinic. It all depends on what God tells Greene to do with it.

For that is the reason, Greene says, he is building the ark — because God told him to.

The whole thing started conventionally enough. The little congregation was outgrowing its old Brethren Church building, so the members bought 3 acres of farmland on the edge of town. That was when Greene's visions, or "nightly visitations," as he calls them, began.

Night after night for three months it was the same thing, the preacher recalls. Scene one: Noah, straight out of the 45th chapter of the Book of Genesis, preaching to scornful people and telling them to repent.

Scene two: Noah, summer and saw in hand, building the great ark with which he and his family and the animals would survive the great flood God sent to destroy the unrepentant and their wicked ways.

"It was as real as when I see you sitting there," Greene said to a visitor, sitting across the green-and-white, Greene-cooked kitchen table.

"I'd wake up in the morning and pray about it, 'cause it was repeated night after night, always the same thing," he recalls.

Then one day, while mousing in a book store, Greene picked up a book by a man who had been part of an expedition to search for the remains of the original ark. The book contained a drawing of what Noah's vessel was thought to look like.

"When I opened up this book, I almost fell to the floor," he said. "The spirit of the Lord came down on me, because the picture was almost exactly what I had seen in my nightly visitations."

Convinced that this was one more sign that God did indeed expect him to build Noah's ark, Greene "yielded" and the following Sunday told his congregation about the visions, and the destiny Greene believed God had in mind for them.

Divine visitations notwithstanding, the pastor was aware that there might be some problems in selling a congregation of about 30 practical-minded farmers on undertaking a multimillion-dollar building project. So he asked God to "send an artist to my door" who would sketch the building that appeared in Greene's visions.

He promised his congregation that the detailed sketches would be ready for them within three weeks. "What I did figure God three weeks to send somebody (an artist) to my door," recalled Greene, who has a somewhat more casual approach to the Almighty than his Old Testament prototype.

Within a week and a half, the prayer for artist appeared — just one more sign, according to Greene, that the whole enterprise was part of divine planning.

When Greene presented his sketches, which were actually preliminary architectural drawings, to the members of the congregation, they agreed after only 10 minutes of discussion, Greene recalls, to go ahead with the project. To Greene that was "the greatest miracle of all." He said, recalling that only a couple of years earlier the church had voted down spending $2,000 for new pews and lights.

Once under way, the progress of the ark has been just one miracle after another, according to Greene. None of them surprising, though, since "God had revealed in the vision that people of all faiths around the world would contribute with their monies, talents and materials."

For instance, there was the retired farmer from whom the church bought the land. The original 3 acres, purchased when the church was still thinking in terms of a conventional church, proved to be too small an area to build an ark, which to be authentic, they decided, must be biblical.

Greene went back to the crusty old farmer, who had been on record as saying he would "never sell another inch of his land. On the way to the interview, "God told me what to say to him," Greene recalled.

"I told him, 'I know you said you'd never sell another inch of your land, but God told me to ask you

Carter sets Nov. 24 as Thanksgiving Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, officially proclaiming Thursday, Nov. 24, Thanksgiving Day, said today that Americans "can look to the future with hope and confidence."

"We have never lost sight of the principles upon which our nation was founded," he said in the annual Thanksgiving Day proclamation.

Carter is expected to spend the holiday either in Washington or at Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland. The president previously had planned to spend the holiday in Lagos, Nigeria, on the third stop of a four-continent tour, but the trip has been postponed.

Here is the text of the president's proclamation:

"Although the first years of America's struggle for independence were often disheartening, our forebears never lost faith in the Creator, in their cause, or in themselves. Upon learning of the American victory at Saratoga in 1777, Samuel Adams composed the first national Thanksgiving proclamation, and the Continental Congress called upon the governors of every state to designate a day when all Americans could join together and express their gratitude for God's providence 'with united hearts.' 'By their actions they extended a revered regional custom into a national tradition.

"Precisely two centuries have now passed since that time. We have tamed a continent, established institutions dedicated to protecting our liberties, and secured a place of leadership among nations. But we have never lost sight of the principles upon which our nation was founded. For that reason we can look to the future with hope and confidence.

"Now, therefore, I, Jimmy Carter, president of the United States of America, in accord with Section 6103 of Title 5 of the United States Code, do hereby proclaim Thursday, November 24, 1977, as Thanksgiving Day. I ask all Americans to gather on that day with their families and neighbors in their homes and in their houses of worship to give thanks for the blessings Almighty God has bestowed upon us."

Texas hospital group leader raps proposed national health guidelines

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas hospitals will have to turn away one patient in four if proposed national guidelines for health planning take effect, a leader of the Texas Hospital Association said Friday.

Sam Edwards of Austin, vice president of the association, addressed the meeting of more than 250 hospital administrators who came together to discuss ways to keep the guidelines from taking effect.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who already has written President Carter in opposition to the guidelines, was scheduled to speak later.

In remarks prepared for that speech, Briscoe said, "It is unfortunate, but all too clear, that in President Carter's dealings with the Washington bureaucracy on the formation of the national health policy as with the national energy policy that the bureaucrats have won them both.

"Implementation of the proposed guidelines will wreak havoc throughout the health care industry in Texas and will cause our citizens much unnecessary expense and inconvenience and will, in the long run, result in a shortage of health care facilities and health care professional in many areas of the state," Briscoe said.

"I will continue to fight for a more appropriate federal health policy," Briscoe said.

Edwards said the guidelines would mean a 29 percent reduction in Texas hospital beds, meaning a loss of more than 19,000 beds.

In addition, he said, the proposal of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare would limit the number of patient-days to 1,000 per 1,000 overall population. But in Texas last year, there were 1,158 patient-days per 1,000 population, Edwards said.

"If this is put into effect, you will have to refuse admission to every fourth patient who applies to your hospital," he said.

A major purpose of the meeting was to rally support for a pressure campaign on Congress and other officials to repeal the HEW guidelines.

The association surveyed Texas hospitals earlier this month and found that a majority could not comply with the guidelines.

Edwards said the guidelines would mean a 29 percent reduction in Texas hospital beds, meaning a loss of more than 19,000 beds.

In addition, he said, the proposal of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare would limit the number of patient-days to 1,000 per

One guideline is that in order to have an obstetrical unit, a hospital in a major urban area should deliver 2,000 babies a year and those in rural areas should have at least 500 deliveries annually.

Eighty-eight percent of the hospitals did not meet this guideline, and the average travel time to the next nearest hospitals with an obstetrical unit was 54 minutes.

In some outlying areas, travel time was as much as four hours.

"We don't think Texans are going to be willing wives in labor go 100 miles down the road in order to have delivery," said Bob English, another vice president of the association.

He said the guidelines amounted to a forerunner of a "comprehensive national health insurance program dictated by a very authoritarian HEW."

Besides having support from Briscoe in this effort, the association released letters from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Bill Clayton to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano urging withdrawal of the proposed guidelines.

Merrill Lynch consents to $1.6 million refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investors in a Texas computer company who say they were fraudulently lured into the investment by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. will receive $1.6 million in compensation from the brokerage firm.

Merrill Lynch, while not admitting the allegations, agreed Thursday to settle a Securities and Exchange Commission civil complaint over the matter by making the payment and accepting a censure for the firm and some of its agents.

The SEC, after a four-year inquiry, said Merrill Lynch should have known better than to push the stock of Scientific Control Corp., a small Dallas based computer company.

Before Scientific filed a petition for an arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act in late 1969, it never enjoyed a profitable year, the SEC said.

But in 1968 and early 1969, the commission said, Merrill Lynch promoted it intensely, rated it as "buy-hold," and described it as a "speculative" investment for customers looking for "growth."

The SEC did not contend that a stock firm is liable for losses by its customers. But it did maintain that a company should not promote a stock intensely unless it has done adequate research on it.
