Hotel Disaster Claims 111

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rescue teams moved crumpled steel beams early today and freed 10 people trapped under two "sky bridges" that crashed onto a crowded dance floor at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, killing 111 and injuring more than 140, police said.

"The last slab was moved about 7:45 a.m.," said Police Sgt. Jim Treece. "There were 31 dead under the last slab. We feel we have recovered all the bodies in the rubble."

Treece, a spokesman for the department, said 108 bodies had been pulled from the debris in the lobby of the luxurious mid-town hotel.

Earlier, Jerry Jette, an administrative assistant to Mayor Richard Berkley, said 142 people were injured and were taken to area hospitals, where 62 were admitted. Three of those people later died, bringing the total number of dead to 111.

The recovery of the last body ended a rescue effort involving some 1,000 workers that began 13 hours earlier when the walkways collapsed in the enclosed five-story courtyard of the year-old hotel.

The rescue teams worked feverishly through the night, cheering when they freed those trapped in the rubble and quietly, and grimly, freeing the mutilated bodies of the dead.

Mayor Richard Berkley and Police Chief Norman Caron, who were at the hotel most of the night, described the rescue workers and their efforts as "heroic."

There was no explanation for the collapse.

"You could hear cries for help from different people," said one fireman, who spent about two hours digging people from the rubble.

The fireman, who refused to identify himself, said he got one girl out and "she cried, 'My sister's back in there.' We went back and we found her dead."

Police Chief Norman Caron said it was "the worst disaster in Kansas City history in terms of loss of life."

There were some discrepancies about the number injured. Caron said 101 people were admitted to hospitals after the collapse and estimated the total number of injured at 150. Jette said 62 were admitted to hospitals and 142 were injured.

Caron said about 250 policemen, about the same number of firemen and 200 to 300 paramedics would be at the scene all night.

Witnesses said there was a loud snap before the collapse, which happened so quickly that few had time to run for safety.

"People didn't even have time to scream," said Pat Dinatale, who said he and his wife were having dinner on a second-floor terrace.

Dorothy Johnson, a nurse from Kansas City, was having dinner at a restaurant overlooking the lobby.

Oklahoma Women Survive Tragedy

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — When Virginia Peters entered the Hyatt Regency Hotel, she was thinking how much she missed some old high school friends she was about to see at her 35th class reunion.

When she left the hotel Friday night, she didn't know how many of those friends still were alive.

Mrs. Peters, 53, of Shawnee, Kan., and Leonard and Mary Hanks, also of Shawnee, were among those in the lobby of the luxurious hotel when two "sky bridges" collapsed into a crowded lobby, killing at least 111 people and injuring more than 100.

ly," said Mrs. Peters. "It just sounded like something falling and glass splintering. And we just knew we had to get out."

Hanks said he heard a sound "like a wrecking ball hitting a building — a coarse, crumbling sound. After that there was glass and dust so thick I couldn't see."

Hanks, 55, said he turned around to alert his wife and Mrs. Peters, who were standing partially underneath the walkway.

"Something fell on my wife's foot, and by the time I turned around to get them they were already on the floor," said Hanks. "I pulled them up and pushed them out the door."

"That's what saved us," said Mrs. Peters. "He pushed us out of the way of whatever was falling."

Outside the two couples waited for medical attention. But when they saw that other people were more seriously injured, the two men carried Mrs. Hanks to their own car and drove to a local hospital.

Mrs. Hanks was admitted; Mrs. Peters was treated and released.

Canadian Man Scores High

Final action in the Raleigh Lights Scurry County Rodeo was to get underway at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Scurry County Coliseum. Western Texas College students and a few of the high ranking International Rodeo Association cowboys were scheduled to perform.

White of Okmulgee, Ok. had 7.8 in the tie-down.

In saddle bronc riding, Mike Mitchell of Roby scored 70.

Glennas Wisekert of Clyde had 15.35 in the barrel races.

Phillip Hogan and Tom Walker of Norman, Okla., had a 5.9 in the team roping event.

Jim Nunnely of Caney, Kansas, in the final bull ride of the evening, scored 76 points.

Highest scorer in Friday night bareback riding was Jimmy Martin of Canadian, Tx., with 66. Randy

Bozeman Trip Climaxed Year Of Hard Riding

By LOIS GLEASON

Nineteen years-old and straight from his freshman year at Sul Ross, Ty Springer of Snyder was runner-up in the average at the National College Finals rodeo — a big accomplishment for anyone, especially a rookie.

What he remembers most about the finals rodeo are the bars and the snow — in that order.

None of that "in training" stuff for cowboys, "Got to go to the bars and stay in shape," joked Springer. In Bozeman, he said the competitions lasted till about midnight, then the wanted one. Who wanted one?

The college rodeo teams had cause to celebrate. Only the two best teams from each region were eligible to participate and that meant everyone who made it to Bozeman was good. The trip climaxed a year of hard riding and roping.

Springer said his father taught him much of what he knows about roping and that he has an advantage over some of the other competitors because he was raised around it.

When Springer first started entering rodeos, his father loaned him the entry fee. If Springer didn't win, at least enough to pay back the loan, the amount was entered in a record book and he was expected to pay it off somehow. At times, Springer was in the red quite often to his father. But as he improved, it got to where he loaned himself the entry fee from his past winnings.

money I wanted, I wouldn't be as good at it."

He also learned to handle money and how to keep from spending it. One way Springer saves money is traditional with cowboys. "You load up as many people as you can to get to the rodeos to help pay for gas."

Times can get tough for the cowboy on the circuit no matter how well he does. "That's what culls people out," Springer observed. "If you're rich you can still keep going or if you're good you can make money and keep going."

"Rodeo people are the best people in the world. Rodeo people are everybody's buddy," Springer said. And that helps too when the going gets rough.

During school, Springer is with the rodeo team at Sul Ross but naturally devotes much of his time to studying. He's majoring in ag-business.

But during the summer months, Springer is working for his father a few days a week and getting as much rodeoing in as he can the rest of the time.

Despite his win at Bozeman, this summer has had its share of pitfalls for Springer. With two entries in team roping at the Scurry County Coliseum Thursday, he failed to even place in front of a hometown crowd. As revelers hit the bars. They were up early the next morning but had time for a quick nap if anyone thought his father was being too rough on him. Now he admits, "It was real hard. But if he'd given me all the

Sales Tax Rebates Keep Pace Here

Snyder's city sales tax rebates continue to run about 30 percent ahead of last year, according to the July report by Bob Bullock, state comptroller of public accounts.

The Snyder rebate check for July amounted to $34,320, which ran the total for 1981 to $410,855. At this time last year, the city sales tax had produced $316,191 here.

The state comptroller collects the one percent city sales tax along with the four percent state sales tax and then rebates their portion to the cities.

Statewide, Bullock reported that sales tax rebates are up by 17 percent over last year at this time. The cities have received a total of $343.4 million, compared to $291.9 million through July of 1980.

Figures for other area cities in Snyder's population bracket include the following, with the July check and the total for the year, in order:

Sweetwater, $36,420 and $323,107; Levelland, $28,810 and $359,174; Monahans, $26,230 and $239,904; Andrews, $24,520 and $320,254; Lamesa, $22,900 and $241,292; Pecos, $20,170 and $231,911; and Brownfield, $15,740 and $202,734.

The totals for other towns in the immediate Snyder area include Colorado City, $11,630 and $100,546; Post, $8,070 and $85,212; Rotan, $1,350 and $26,336; Roscoe, $540 and $14,240; and Roby, $540 and $6,981.

Police Probe Theft Report At Store

Eunice Huston at Tot-Teen, told officer Robert Harbin she was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash while at the store. She said a customer came in, bought some merchandise and was to pick it up later. When the subject failed to return, she looked in her purse and noticed the money was missing. The theft was reported at 2:17 p.m. Friday.

A minor accident was reported at noon at 2600 25th at noon. Involved was a 1977 GMC pickup driven by Roger Batchelor and a 1969 Chevrolet El Camino driven by John Rodriguez. Officer Harbin took the report.

Friday night, officer Don Whittenburg took a 19 year-old man into custody at 14th and College for no driver's license, expired motor vehicle registration and being an illegal alien. The Border Patrol in Big Spring was notified.

A prowler was reported at 209 35th at 10:55 p.m. Tommy and Ellen Welch said they had left the door unlocked and left the residence. When they returned, a man grabbed Tommy by the throat as he walked into the house. The subject then fled. Officer Tony Pantoja responded to the call.

Prowlers were also heard during the night at 205 36th Place and at 1708 Ave. Q.

John Lamb reported a criminal mischief at 11:22 p.m. at 414 28th. He told officer Pantoja someone had broken the left door window on a vehicle. Damage was estimated at $100.

Arturo Navadette told police a Navadette 45, on a Harley Davidson motorcycle with saddle bags, fired shots at him on South College. Police were unable to locate the subject.

The SDN Column

Do you get the feeling that there's a lot of hair-splitting going on in Washington as the tax-cutting proposals are debated?

And are you suspicious that no matter which plan is adopted, any benefits you realize will be taken out of another pocket?

One of the pitfalls that most successful politicians encounter is pursuit of personal glory, and somehow, we suspect that the headline-grabbers on both sides of the tax dispute are infected to some extent.

If the taxpayers could divide the money the arguments have cost, they probably would come out better than they would under either of the proposals.

Scanning our "Looking Back" column, we noted that Lake J. B. Thomas went over the emergency spillway for a second time 20 years ago. And if our memory is sound, that was the last time the water reached spillway level there.

However, the Colorado River Municipal Water District reports that inflow into Lake Thomas for the first six months this year was second high for the first half of a year since the lake was built. It amounted to 15,055 acre feet.

The much younger, but larger Lake E. V. Spence also had its second best first-half year, picking up 54,080 acre feet.

The average for the first six months at Lake Thomas during the past 10 years is 6,250 acre feet, and for Lake Spence it is 14,870.

In these days of unusual interest in the nation's economy, we like the story about the man who wanted to buy some cattle.

He reached an agreement with a rancher and then went to his banker to try to arrange for financing. In due time, the prospective buyer telephoned the rancher: "The bank will lend me the money to buy the cattle from you if you'll co-sign the note."

The rancher pondered the situation for a moment and replied, "Tell you what I'll do. I'll loan you the money myself, if the bank will co-sign the note."

But he had only a small problem compared to the striking baseball player who returned home to find that his wife had walked out.

She left a note saying if she didn't get $500,000, she was going to become a free agent.

Weekend update

Auto Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats have narrowly defeated an attempt to prohibit the use of federal funds for mandatory automobile inspections intended to reduce air pollution.

By a 184-177 vote, the House refused Friday to attach the amendment by Rep. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., onto a $63.3 billion 1982 appropriation bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Environmental Protection Agency and a variety of other government agencies.

Twenty-nine states have been ordered under the federal Clean Air Act to establish programs for mandatory inspection of pollution controls on motor vehicles in 37 areas of high pollution.

Dannemeyer said the program is costing Californians about $210 million a year in repairs needed to pass inspection but has cut hydrocarbons pollution only 3.6 percent and nitrogen oxide pollution by only 2.2 percent.

Israeli Raids Continue

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes and artillery blasted Palestinian guerrilla strongholds south of Beirut today in the third straight day of aerial strikes that have taken hundreds of lives.

The Palestine Liberation Organization and Lebanon's state- and privately-owned radio stations reported the new air raids hours after an alliance of the nation's Moslem leftist forces called for stationing Soviet-made SAM-6 anti-aircraft missiles in this capital city.

Earlier, the PLO said it fired rockets into northern Israel again today as a "down payment" on its promised retaliation for the "air massacre Israel committed in Beirut."

Controllers Reject Contract

By The Associated Press

The nation's air traffic controllers are turning thumbs down to a tentative contract that headed off a strike last month, according to a spot check of union locals by The Associated Press.

A strike by air traffic controllers could cripple the nation's air service. A new strike vote would be needed before a walkout could be called.

The vote by controllers serving Springfield, Mass., and the Connecticut cities of Windsor Locks and Hartford was typical of preliminary counts across the country: 45-0 against.

For Nation's Milk Business...

Production Not Slowing Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's milk production, which reached record levels in 1980, is showing no signs of slowing down this year, according to the latest Agriculture Department production figures.

Milk output in June, traditionally one of the biggest months, was 11.6 billion pounds, up 3 percent from June of last year, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Friday.

That was the 26th straight month that U.S. milk production has increased from year-earlier levels.

The increase has resulted in high costs for the government's milk price support program. It also has prompted Agriculture Secretary John R. Block to sharply criticize the program and brought a rejoinder from the head of the National Grange, who didn't like Block's comments.

Production over the first six months of this year was 67.5 billion pounds, a 3 percent increase over the 65.2 billion produced in the first half of 1980, the report said.

Milk output per cow averaged 1,069 pounds in May, 21 pounds more than a year earlier and 46 pounds more than in June 1979.

Total milk cows averaged 10.9 million head in June, 1 percent more than a year ago and 2 percent more than two years ago, the report said.

Milk production set a record last year at 128.4 billion pounds, compared to 123.4 billion in 1979.

The steady climb in milk production has resulted in surplus supplies of butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk purchased by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. under the government's milk price support program.

A boost in milk supports scheduled for April 1 was skipped as Congress went along with the Reagan administration plans to hold down costs of the support program.

Dairy supports are included in new farm legislation that is supposed to be completed by Congress before it takes its August recess. Block, however, says President Reagan would veto the bill unless its dairy provisions are brought into line with administration policies.

Block has made no secret of his dissatisfaction with the current mandatory supports, which he says help trigger surplus production. He wants more leeway to reduce those supports when milk surpluses are on the upswing.

At a meeting of the National Association of Farmer-Elected Committees earlier this week, Block reportedly called the dairy program an "embarrassment to American agriculture," according to Edward Andersen, master of the National Grange.

This riled Andersen, who fired off a letter to Block, a copy of which was made available to reporters on Friday.

"I could not believe my ears," Andersen said. "I would not have been as shocked had that statement come from the director of the Office of Management and Budget, but that it came from the secretary of agriculture is truly appalling."

Andersen said farmers "have the right to expect their secretary of agriculture to show leadership by speaking out for their interests, not by referring to any farm program as an 'embarrassment'."

"I can understand, as does the dairy industry, that from time to time farm programs need some new direction, but to publicly ridicule a program that has worked well for over 40 years is not, in my judgment, the way to bring about change," Anderson wrote to Block.

"I urge you to clarify your position on the present dairy program and let American dairy farmers know that you are, and want to be, their leading advocate not their adversary," he said.

Corn, Sorghum

Set To Be Sold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the government will sell its stocks of surplus corn and sorghum in a manner that won't significantly affect the market.

Block outlined the sales policy on Friday in Columbus, Ohio, at a meeting of the National Corn Growers Association. Later, the Agriculture Department released further details.

As of May 31, according to a report issued on July 8, the department's Commodity Credit Corp. owned more than 250 million bushels of corn, much of it acquired during the embargo of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

"Once we decide to sell, only a portion of the inventory will be sold at minimum sales price. Then, bids on additional amounts will be accepted at successively higher prices," Block said.

"Also, farmers and livestock feeders hopefully will be encouraged to bid on some of these (corn) stocks," he said. "A new procedure will allow us to sell as little as 1,000 bushels at a time."

Reports have circulated that Block is under strong pressure from the Office of Management and Budget to sell the corn, thus helping reduce budget costs of storage and handling.

The CCC has been selling some of its corn regularly for some weeks, department officials acknowledge. But most of that corn involves grain that is "out of condition" or of low quality and is part of routine housekeeping operations, they say.

According to the later report, as of July 2 the CCC inventory included 199 million bushels of corn and 13.9 million bushels of sorghum that had not been committed for sale. The sorghum was acquired under the price support program, not as a result of purchases — as in the case of corn — to offset effects of the embargo.

As a general rule, the CCC grain cannot be sold for less than 11 percent of the county price support loan rate plus carrying charges for interest, storage and handling. Those charges will be 54 cents a bushel for both corn and sorghum.

Next Week...

Pope Paul May Leave Hospital

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II is recovering satisfactorily from a viral infection and may be discharged from a Rome hospital next week, his doctors said today.

"The clinical picture and laboratory tests show that the viral disease of the Holy Father is in the stage of significant regression," a medical bulletin said.

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer at the Gemelli Hospital, told reporters that John Paul, 61, has had no fever for the past few days.

"This is a very good sign and we hope that it will remain so," Tresalti said. "The Holy Father eats normally and is in excellent mood."

He said the pope is spending several hours a day attending to official business, reading and signing documents and receiving visitors.

The pontiff may be discharged Thursday, the doctor said.

It was the most optimistic medical bulletin on the pope's condition since he was hospitalized after being shot in a May 13 assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Fending off emphysema

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had emphysema for about 15 years. The doctor told me there was nothing he could do but the best thing I could do was to stop smoking, which I did. In the last year it has become a lot worse. They call it chronic obstructive lung disease, emphysema.

I have trouble breathing and am short of breath if I do anything physical or exert myself, such as climbing steps. I get short of breath if I do much walking. My thighs ache until I rest. When squatting or crouching over I feel dizzy when I get up for a short time. I cough up phlegm, especially in the morning, sometimes with a little blood. My wife says I have become crabby and impatient lately. I haven't cut the grass in more than two years and have given up all hobbies lately. I would appreciate any information on emphysema that you have.

DEAR READER — You didn't tell me your age but if you had emphysema advanced enough to be diagnosed 15 years ago, you've done fairly well for such a serious disease. Your doctor was quite right in getting you to quit smoking; you would have had a lot more trouble sooner if you had not followed his advice.

Chronic obstructive lung disease is a term used to include the various disorders that interfere with the free passage of air into and out of the lungs. This usually includes both chronic bronchitis and emphysema that often exist together.

Almost all adult people have some small amount of emphysema. This refers to overdistention and loss of elasticity of the little air sacs in the lungs and connecting airways. Fortunately, in most people a small amount produces no symptoms. But as the condition advances it causes breathlessness as you experience and often fatigue.

It is a complex topic so I am sending you The Health Letter number 17-8, Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Things that can help include stopping smoking (for smokers), avoiding air pollutants, all aerosol sprays, including deodorants and hair sprays, and yearly flu vaccinations.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I make an eggnog in my blender for my son every morning as he will not eat breakfast otherwise. I have been told that excessive egg white intake can destroy the biotin in the body which is essential to blood clotting so I strain out the white each day. Will you please comment on this?

DEAR READER — Raw egg whites do contain a substance that inactivates biotin, a vitamin essential to man and animals. In man a deficiency may result in digestive disturbances, skin irritation and hair loss. The symptoms disappear rapidly when biotin is given. Cooked egg white will not affect biotin, and even with raw egg whites it takes a large amount to produce this effect in man.

I'm not enthusiastic about your breakfast for your son. As a male he is more likely to develop heart and vascular disease as he grows older. You need to limit his cholesterol intake and train him to like foods that are low in fat and cholesterol. I would vote for a nice hot bowl of oatmeal or whole grain cereal instead.

Parents Of Quintuplets Face Financial Troubles With Hope

TY CORNER, (N.J. AP) -- The parents of 11-year-old quintuplets, Bill and Peggy, to Kienast saw the money they built rearing seven children will pull them through their latest financial crisis.

After a series of money woes, including bankruptcy, the family almost lost their Somerset County farmhouse at a sheriff's sale earlier this month. The sale was averted and now, Mrs. Kienast says, "We can see the light at the end of the tunnel."

When the fraternal quintuplets -- Amy, Sara, Abigail, Gordon and Ted -- were born on Feb. 24, 1970, their parents were approached with offers to do commercials, endorsements and public appearances. But with the increased use of fertility drugs, quintuplets became more commonplace and the offer disappeared.

Two years ago, Bill Kienast's business went bankrupt, leaving him with $74,000 in mortgages, no source of income and seven children in school.

At one point, the only money coming in was his unemployment check, and the family had to scrape to make the weekly $200 food bill, Mrs. Kienast said.

"It's been tight. It's been very tight," said Mrs. Kienast, who gave birth to the quintuplets after taking fertility drugs and an experimental drug to lessen the chance of multiple births.

After Kienast's company, Plex, which manufactured plastics for eyeglasses, and Kienast both filed for bankruptcy in October 1979, First National State Bank of West Jersey -- holder of the $21,381 second lien on the farmhouse -- demanded payment that the family could not make, Mrs. Kienast said.

The seven-bedroom house, exp. ed with donated land, and materials after the quintuplets were born, went on the auction block.

"It was ludicrous that they would put nine people out on the street. It would have been the worst possible public relations scheme ever conceived by anybody," said Mrs. Kienast. "I would have been out there with a shotgun if anyone thought they were going to come in here and take this place."

At the last minute, the Kienasts reached an agreement with the bank, she said.

"If you don't have to worry about paying the bills, everything else is easy," Mrs. Kienast said.

"Raising the five of them brought us together. If anything, we knew we had to work harder at this thing. I do not feel that the Kienasts have failed. Plex died, but the Kienasts are going strong."

Kienast this month started a new business matching sellers of chemical commodities with buyers. Mrs. Kienast is breaking into the real estate business. Their oldest daughter, Meg, 15, baby-sits, while their older son, John, 13, says he invests in old comic books.

Boy Dies When Throat Is Cut

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) -- A four-year-old boy died here when his throat was cut by kite strings covered with broken glass, a local hospital said Friday.

Hospital officials said Heriberto Lemos became entangled in the string of a kite an older boy was flying. Brazilian children often glue broken glass and other sharp objects to kite strings and compete to cut the strings of other kites.

The doctored kite string cut the boy's jugular vein, officials said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old male who needs your help with an embarrassing problem. It's my behind. It is enormous! I'm 5-foot-8 and weigh 180.

I work out three times a week at a health club and am in pretty good shape except for the abovementioned. I've tried every conceivable exercise and diet I've come across, but can't seem to lose any of the flab back there.

It's just plain fat, Abby, and no amount of exercise can firm it up.

Someone told me that it can be removed by surgery. Is that so? I don't care if the operation is painful and leaves a scar. Anything would be better than hauling around this outsized caboose all my life. I'm not exaggerating — I look practically deformed. It's so bad I hate to go to the beach.

If this kind of operation can be done, who would do it?

A YARD OF LARD

DEAR YARD: A plastic surgeon. (But try to find one who doesn't mind getting a little behind in his business.)

DEAR ABBY: You have stated many times in your column that the unwed mother who gave up her child for adoption showed the ultimate in unselfishness. Well, it's time you heard from one of the "selfish" mothers who kept her child over the objections of her parents and many well-meaning friends.

It took more than unselfishness for me to keep my baby. It took courage, determination, confidence and a lot of guts! I was 17 at the time and had to drop out of school in my senior year. I had my baby, went to work, borrowed money and paid it back. I finished my education and didn't go on welfare, either. I made a choice that was right for me and I never regretted it.

I am now married to a fine man and we have two other children. I thank God that I kept my firstborn. I will never have to wonder how she is, what she looks like, what her interests are or how she will turn out.

"SELFISH" IN WISCONSIN

DEAR SELFISH: Your case is very rare, and I commend you. The most recent statistics show that last year in this country there were 1.1 million pregnancies among teen-agers, and that 96 percent of those girls kept their babies. About two-thirds of this number will go on welfare, resulting in the cost of about $8.3 billion a year to taxpayers. (P.S. More than 90 percent of the teen-aged boys who fathered these children took no responsibility for the baby or the teen-aged mother.)

DEAR ABBY: If after years of hard work, your husband finally had an opportunity to do what he has always wanted to do — run his own business and be his own boss — but it meant that you would have to leave your lifelong friends and part of your family, your lovely, comfortable home and move to another state where you knew no one and would have to practically start all over again, what would you do?

EDNA

DEAR EDNA: Are you kidding? I would go with him and never look back. And I've done it three times — with no regrets.

DEAR ABBY: For those who are shocked that a non-virgin bride wants to wear white at her wedding: What would they suggest? Tattletale gray?

AMUSED IN KY.

DEAR AMUSED: Why not? And she could carry daisies. They don't tell.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Financial & tax planning

TAKING BACK PAPER

To facilitate selling your real estate, you may choose to finance the buyer by carrying a contract (take back paper).

If later you choose to sell your "paper" to generate cash, you will probably have to sell it at a discount. There are many buyers for such paper; the average one currently seeking a 20% to 25% yield.

A typical discount transaction would look like this. The contract being offered for sale has a $30,000 current balance due at 12% interest, $350 per month for 16 more years. A contract buyer desiring a 25% yield will offer you approximately $16,500. This represents a 45% discount from the current balance. If the contract had been written for an eight year term, the discount would be 33%.

Keep in mind that when you sell a contract to yield 25% to the buyer, you are paying 25% simple interest for money. Your need for cash should, therefore, justify such a rate of interest.

Consider using your contract as you would cash. Many individuals wishing to sell their real estate would be happy to take your contract at little or no discount in exchange for their property. This is true also of various equipment and merchandise retailers.

Since real estate transactions usually involve substantial amounts of money and can have significant tax consequences, you are wise to secure the services of both an accountant and an attorney.

Oil Town Attracts Filmmakers

HOUSTON (AP) — Hollywood probably has little to worry about, but this steamy boomtown of factories and oil refineries has added a new industry to its list of mushrooming million-dollar enterprises — motion pictures.

A tourist official said Friday the boom began here with the 1979 success of "Urban Cowboy," which brought movie crews from the West Coast to Houston's blue collar suburb, Pasadena, home of Gilley's, the western nightclub with the mechanical bull.

The star of that film, John Travolta, returned to this sprawling seaport Thursday to promote a new movie, "Blowout," and was greeted by hundreds of screaming women. Mayor Jim McConn gave him the key to the city and declared him an honorary Houstonian.

The year after he starred in the movie shot in Houston, film projects pumped over $4 million into the hands of Houstonians, said Steve Moore, director of Visitor and Film Development for the city's tourist bureau. He said the movie business promises to play an even bigger role in the city's economy in the future.

"The interest in Texas obviously permeates the shooting here. And you wouldn't get into Texas unless you had previous films to attract your attention, such as 'Urban Cowboy,'" Moore says. "But it goes back to

'Brewster McCloud.' The only reason the screenplay was set here was because of obvious locations, like the Astrodome."

"Brewster McCloud," chronicled a young man's attempts to fly. The movie culminated in his successful bird-like circling into the upper reaches of the huge, covered stadium, before being shot down by impressed but unamused authorities.

Moore said in recent years Texas has become filmdom's "third coast," behind Los Angeles and New York. Houston is attracting movie companies because costs are low, there are no union problems, and Houston just has some unique sites, he said.

But Houston was unable to host the movie "Superman," although Moore said producers did come to town and look around.

"One of the reasons we didn't get it is because if you suspend Superman up in the air and fly him, you run out of skyline. That doesn't happen in Manhattan," he said.

Moore said exterior scenes of the 1979 film "Middle-Aged Crazy" starring Bruce Dern and Ann-Margaret were filmed here, but the Canadian production company decided to do the interior shots in Toronto.

Moore said he signed on with the company as a kind of "Texana" consultant to make sure the takes filmed in Canada maintained a "Texas flair."

"I would play tape recordings of country-western radio stations up there on the sets, especially including Houston commercials and Houston traffic reports," he says. "Everything from 'the K-b-l-a-n-k-b-l-a-n-k-b-l-a-n-k weather report calls for 90-degree temperatures and high humidity' to a commercial for 'Don's Western Wear, located on Katy Freeway and other locations in the Houston area.'"

"You'd see a gaffer stand up and look up in the air, and he'd have to remind himself that he was in Toronto and not Houston, Texas," Moore said.

Moore said film crews spent 39 weeks in Houston in 1980 filming two feature films, three TV movies, two television pilots and one soap opera.

He says one feature film, "Student Bodies" — a satire on the recent wave of teen-horror movies — has been completed in Houston so far in 1981. A film version of the Larry McMurtry novel "Terms of Endearment" is scheduled to be filmed here later this year, he said.

Safety Commission May Inspect Swiss Skyride

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Texas State Fair's "Swiss Skyride" is a consumer product even though it's too big for a back yard or schoolyard, a federal appeals court ruled Friday.

In a 2-1 decision, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed a lower court ruling that the Consumer Product Safety Commission had no jurisdiction over the amusement park ride.

"The (Consumer Product Safety) Act covers more than toasters and other small household appliances," the court ruled. "The hallmark of the Commission's authority is not the customer's legal relation to a product, but the consumer's physical exposure to it."

Judge Robert A. Ainsworth Jr. dissented, agreeing with the plaintiffs that the law covers only household or school equipment and the reading used by the majority gives the CPSC virtually limitless authority.

The CPSC wanted to inspect the ride and relevant records as part of an investigation following two fatal accidents — one at the Texas fair, one at a Missouri amusement park.

In the Texas accident, four of the open gondolas in which passengers ride over the fair collided and crashed to the ground Oct. 21, 1979, killing one passenger. The Missouri accident, for which no date was given in the opinion, killed three people.

But when the commission tried to inspect the Texas fair's ride and its records, the fair and the company which operated the ride would only let a commission engineer watch the ride from a distance.

The fair and the company, Steck & Stapf Attractions, went to court asking for a ruling that the ride is not a "consumer product" and therefore is beyond commission jurisdiction.

U.S. District Judge Patrick E. Higginbotham ruled that the tramway was a consumer product, but that the commission hadn't proved it had the right to more than gaze on it from afar.

But the 5th Circuit said the Consumer Product Safety Act gave the commission the legal right to see the records.

The disagreement between Ainsworth and the other two judges stems from the Safety Act's statement that it applies to any article or part of an article produced or distributed for sale or personal use or enjoyment "in or around a permanent or temporary household or residence, a school, in recreation, or otherwise."

Wood Assassination Probe Continues...

Harrelson Appears Before Federal Grand Jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Government attorneys finally succeeded in getting Jo Ann Starr Harrelson before the federal grand jury, but it was not known whether she answered any questions about U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.'s assassination.

Mrs. Harrelson spent two hours closeted with the jurors Friday afternoon, but her attorney refused to divulge whether the 41-year-old blonde wife of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson answered any of the jury's questions.

Attorney Gerald Goldstein was asked whether the fact that Mrs. Harrelson had not been jailed for contempt of court indicated that she had answered grand jury questions.

"I wouldn't say it indicates anything," Goldstein said as his somber client strode from the federal courthouse without commenting on her appearance.

Mrs. Harrelson, who plays blackjack for a living, had told reporters earlier this week that she would refuse to answer questions on grounds of marital privilege and the Fifth Amendment guarantee against self-incrimination.

Earlier, Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions rejected Goldstein's motion to dissolve a grant of immunity to Mrs. Harrelson that Sessions signed on May 20. The government had sought the immunity status as a first step toward compelling her to testify and jailing her for civil contempt if she refused.

A similar procedure was used to jail Mrs. Harrelson's daughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, on March 27, and two other witnesses who later refused to testify.

Sessions also ruled on Goldstein's motions to reveal any electronic surveillance of Mrs. Harrelson and for an unexplained "protective order", but it was not revealed how he ruled.

Although Sessions conducted a purported public hearing with news media representatives in the room, the entire hearing took place with attorneys huddled around Sessions at the bench and whispering.

Sessions has sealed every aspect of the investigation from public view and has warned attorneys about discussing the case publicly. In recent months, nearly all hearings have been sidebar to prevent reporters from hearing what was said.

"Rule 6 requires us to maintain some modicum of secrecy," Goldstein, a renowned First Amendment lawyer, said in refusing to comment on other aspects of Mrs. Harrelson's appearance Friday.

Attorney Robert Price, a Goldstein associate, said Mrs. Harrelson would not return at least for the weekend. Neither government nor the witness' attorneys would indicate when the next grand jury session would take place.

Price earlier indicated that Mrs. Harrelson was leaving the grand jury room and consulting with Goldstein after each question.

The grand jurors arrived at 9:30 a.m. and apparently killed time while Goldstein legally sparred with government attorneys.

Mrs. Harrelson finally entered the grand jury room at 2:30 p.m. and emerged at 4:38 p.m.

Four of the grand jurors left the building calling the session, "weird."

"It sure was weird," one young man said. "I'll have to read the paper to find out," he replied when asked if the grand jury would return Monday.

"Weird," an older man said, shaking his head.

"Boy, that was weird," another juror remarked. "You can say that again, weird," his walking companion asserted.

Mrs. Harrelson and her husband both have been listed as "targets" of the 26-month investigation.

Attorneys for the Harrelsons have said the government suspects that high-stakes gambler Jimmy Chagra hired Harrelson to shoot Wood.

The judge, who was scheduled to preside in Chagra's narcotics trafficking trial, was killed with a single .243-caliber bullet outside his San Antonio apartment on May 29, 1979.

Chagra subsequently was convicted and sentenced to 30 years in prison. Harrelson was arrested on three unrelated state charges and is held without bond in Houston.

By Texas Senators...

Medical Bill Approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas senators have approved a bill designed to ease the conflict between medical and osteopathic doctors, passing the health care controversy on to the House.

House debate is expected to include efforts by nurses and optometrists for more authority in treating Texas patients.

The Senate vote Friday was 27-0, although at least one senator said he disapproved of parts of the bill.

A similar bill is before a House committee which has made no recommendation.

"This is a bill we can all agree on," said Sen. John Wilson, D-LaGrange. "We have solved the problem of discrimination in hospitals between medical doctors and osteopaths... As far as we are concerned, optometrists were never an issue. Only one witness for optometrists appeared before our committee. We had no request from the state optometrists association."

Basically, the bill reconstitutes the State Board of Medical Examiners, which licenses all doctors in Texas, both medical and osteopathic. The licensing power will expire Sept. 1, under the state's Sunset provisions, unless the Legislature renews the examiners board.

Efforts to pass the bill failed in the regular session mostly because of House-Senate differences over discrimination against osteopaths on hospital staffs and allowing optometrists to give prescription drops to test eyes.

The Senate-approved bill sets up a Board of Medical Examiners that includes nine medical doctors, three osteopathic doctors and three public members to regulate the approximately 35,000 physicians in Texas. The old board had 12 medical doctors.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, distributed copies of a letter signed by officials of the Texas Medical Association, the Texas Osteopathic Medical Association and the Texas Hospital Association urging passage of the Senate bill.

An amendment by Brooks and Wilson would "prohibit differentiation solely on the basis of the academic medical degree" and said determination of medical staff appointments shall be based on professional and ethical qualifications of the physician.

"This is an improved bill, from the one presented in the regular session, but it is not an adequate bill," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, who voted for it but said he hoped the House would make some changes.

He said the most "critical need" was for competition.

Three Local Doctors Honored At Hospital

Three doctors were honored with a tea in the doctors' lounge of Cogdell Memorial Hospital on July 15. For Dr. Paul A. Thompson and Dr. John O'Banion, the tea was to honor them in the month they came to Snyder to practice. It was also an occasion to formally introduce Dr. James W. Howell, who just recently moved to Snyder, to the hospital staff.

Dr. Thompson is originally from Memphis, TN. He attended Abilene Christian University where he received his degree in Agronomy in 1966 and then went back home to ranch for six years. In 1972, Dr. Thompson went back to school at the University of Texas Medical School where he received his medical degree. He worked in family practice from 1976-79 in San Antonio and came to Snyder in July of 1979. Dr. Thompson and his wife, Fay, have two children, Paul III who is 14 years old and Lea Ann who is 12 years old.

Dr. John O'Banion is a Dallas native and did his undergraduate work at Southern Methodist University in Zoology. He received his medical degree from the University of Texas Southwest Medical School in Dallas. He and his wife, Audrey, have three children. They are Mrs. Debra Wheeler of Lubbock, James Van Howell of San Diego, CA, and Nancy Howell, of the home.

doctor and graduated from the same school as her father, Jack will be a senior at Snyder High School this fall and Patricia is married and living in Houston.

Dr. O'Banion joined the Cogdell Memorial Hospital staff in 1959.

Dr. James W. Howell, pathologist, is the newest doctor at Cogdell. He is originally from Lamesa and did his undergraduate work at Hardin Simmons in Abilene. Federal Agents Agree Letter Was Big Help LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents say a letter describing a 32-year-old Salvadoran woman as an aid to the leftist movement in El Salvador is the basis for their investigation of her possible anti-government activity.

"Her name is Estela Guevara, and I know she will be of much worth in the liberation movement," states a letter of introduction quoted by a story in today's Corpus Christi Caller.

The woman, who told authorities her name is Ana Estela Flores

Guevara, currently is serving a 90-day sentence in the Nueces County Jail for illegal entry into the United States.

The one-page, typed note, written in Spanish, is a letter of introduction addressed to "comrades" and identifies the bearer as Estela Guevara.

According to the letter, the woman was on her way to Puerto Rico to seek refuge there with her parents.

"...I am sure that she can work well with anti-Salvadoran government groups," the letter adds.

FBI agents seized the letter after U.S. Border Patrol officials arrested the woman in Cotulla on June 24, the newspaper reported.

Federal authorities said Friday that the confiscated letter is the key to whether Ms. Guevara is Commander Norma Guevara, a former leader of the Union Democratica Nacional, a leftist group that split from the Salvadoran government in early 1980.

For Israeli Raids...

Palestinian Leaders Are Promising Revenge

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian leaders are promising revenge for Israel's devastating raids on Beirut and southern Lebanon. The guerrillas sent a barrage of Soviet-made rockets into northernmost Israel this morning, and Israeli gunners fired back, the military command in Tel Aviv said.

Israel cited previous Palestinian shelling of its northern settlements as the provocation for sending its U.S.-made warplanes to batter guerrilla strongholds Friday.

At least 159 people were reported killed and more than 500 wounded in Israel's air, sea and artillery attacks. Lebanese Charge d'Affaires Fakhri Saghiyyah, addressing an emergency session of the U.N. Security Council in New York, said there were more than 300 killed and 800 wounded.

The PLO spokesman said the casualty figures were likely to rise as rescuers dig into the rubble of collapsed buildings in Beirut.

"It is a barbaric blood bath, but we shall avenge it," he said.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat pledged "swift retaliation" that will "teach the enemy a lesson he will never forget."

The Israeli military command said the Galilee panhandle was hit before dawn today and six civilians were treated, two for shock and four for minor injuries. Israel Radio said electricity and telephones were knocked out in the area. A rocket attack Wednesday, the worst since the 1973 Mideast war, killed three Israeli civilians, the first such casualties in 2½ years.

The Security Council, meeting at Lebanon's request, called the raids "deplorable" and urged an "immediate end to all armed attacks." Lebanon and the PLO, which has observer status at the United Nations, said they would seek a more forceful condemnation of Israel. No date was set for another council meeting.

Israel said it would continue to pound the Palestinian guerrillas until assaults on Israeli settlements cease.

"It never has been Israel's intention to harm innocent Lebanese civilians," Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum told the Security Council. "The unfortunate fact is that for years now, the PLO in its cowardly way has chosen to take cover in villages and refugee camps."

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori, speaking on Israel Radio, left the door open to even tougher actions unless the guerrillas halt their attacks.

"We hope they get the message and the peace will be restored, and if not the Israeli government will have to decide on other measures," Zippori said.

All Israel's neighbors except Lebanon — even militant Syria — refuse to allow the Palestinian guerrillas to operate from their territory, partly in fear of Israeli reprisal attacks. In Lebanon, where dozens of private armies operate in the chaotic political wreckage of the 1975-76 civil war between Moslems and Christians, it is not clear that any authority would be strong enough to suppress the guerrillas.

Missing Plane Is Discovered

EAGLETOWN, Okla. (AP) — The wreckage of a single-engine plane missing for five weeks has been discovered by a lumber company employee marking trees near this far southeastern Oklahoma town.

Civil Air Patrol spokesman Charles Oliver said Paul Strand and Ray Haugen, both 50, of Decorah, Iowa, apparently died upon impact when their small airplane took a nosedive into the rugged terrain.

The plane had taken off June 6 from an airport at Paris, Texas, en route to Decorah. Heavy thunderstorms moved through the tri-state area later that night.

Oliver said an unidentified employee of Weyerhaeuser Co. was marking trees just before nightfall when he came upon the charred wreckage.

The CAP spokesman said the heavily forested area in which the aircraft crashed prevented its sighting from the air.

Officials from the National Transportation and Safety Board were en route Saturday to investigate the crash.

On Monday, a farm hand near Green Forest, Ark., had spotted what he believed to be the plane's wreckage, but searchers were unsuccessful in locating the missing aircraft.

Democratic Senator Wants To Defeat Governor's Plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Democratic senator who wants Gov. Bill Clements' job says he's going to work overtime this weekend to defeat a congressional redistricting plan the Republican governor supports.

At stake are the shape of Texas' congressional districts for the next decade and possibly House Majority Leader Jim Wright's chances at becoming speaker.

A Democratic majority banded together Friday to stall passage of the redistricting proposal that one Texas congressman feels could double the number of Republicans in the Texas delegation.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, referred to the proposal as "the governor's plan," and said he was "going to work on everybody who has a vote in the Senate to get them to see the light."

A three-hour midday recess gave four Democratic senators who were absent in the morning a chance to get here, and they joined 13 others in postponing a vote on the redistricting plan until Monday afternoon.

The vote to postpone action was 17-14, which was significantly different than a 16-11 vote against postponement in the morning.

The delay gives Democrats an opportunity to switch votes on redistricting before Monday.

Asked who might switch, McKnight replied, "We had some surprises come up this week, so maybe we can surprise the other side."

The surprises came Wednesday when Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, and Sen. Jack Ogg, D-

Houston, voted in committee for a proposal that would create a black district in Dallas County at the apparent expense of Democratic incumbents Martin Frost and Jim Mattox.

Sen. John Wilson, D-La Grange, acknowledged his proposal would leave Mattox "just about prone." Clements said he was "delighted" with the measure, but predicted the final bill would be written by a House-Senate conference committee.

Wilson's bill also would give Mexican-Americans another district in South Texas.

U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, predicted the bill would give the GOP five more seats in Congress. The Texas delegation now has 19 Democrats and five Republicans, but Texas gets three more seats because of population growth shown by the 1980 census.

If Congressman Wilson's forecast came true, the delegation would be divided 17-10, with the Democrats still in the majority.

Sen. Wilson said he would take off over the weekend for a coastal trip and "try to relax and get over this week."

He said Wright had contacted everybody in the Senate but him, trying to hold onto as many Democratic seats as he can to get elected speaker when U.S. Rep. Tip O'Neill steps down.

"He's not going to become speaker. It's not possible that Congress is going to let us have Sam Rayburn as speaker and Lyndon Johnson as Senate majority leader and George Bush as vice president and then Jim Wright as speaker," said Wilson. "I think Texans have had about their fair share of high and lofty position in the Congress."

Divers Search Bayou For Body

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County divers combed a bayou Friday for the body of a 5-year-old girl believed thrown in by a kidnapper.

Divers battled a stiff current for two hours after a man identified only as a family friend said he threw Monica Marie Alvarez into the water after carrying her from her home. The search was called off, but Harris County sheriff's officials expected to start again early Saturday.

The girl was asleep when she was carried from her home early Friday morning, officials said. The girl's mother reported the incident about 7 a.m. Monica's 3-year-old sister, Angela, said she saw "Jimmy" take her sister away. Officials will not name that man, but say he grew up with Ted Alvarez, the girls' father, and lived with the family until about a month ago.

Deputies questioned the man for the majority of the day.

He eventually told them he took the child and threw her into Greens Bayou.

Deputies on horseback found some of the girl's clothing near the location the man described.

Alvarez watched anxiously throughout the search. "You see this sort of thing on the news and never believe it will happen to you," he said.

Southeast Corner of Square

some of whom were handcuffed.

The city has agreed to a $250,000 out-of-court settlement in a class action suit and DeAnda has ordered it to improve training and review procedures.

Sullivan reportedly made his remark June 13 to about 15 wives of McAllen officers during a meeting. Wives of patrolmen have organized to demand better working conditions following the police brutality controversy.

DeAnda held the hearing after Jim Harrington, a lawyer for plaintiffs in several police brutality cases, asked that because of Sullivan's remark all videotapes subpoenaed by him and federal prosecutors be kept at the federal clerk's office.

A federal grand jury is investigating possible criminal violations of prisoners' rights by policemen.

The judge earlier had approved a request from McAllen City Attorney Michael Cosentino that some of the original 72 tapes be returned to McAllen — 70 miles away — to help officials decide whether to discipline some officers.

DeAnda had agreed and the tapes had been taken to McAllen hours before Friday's hearing started.

They were returned before the proceeding ended at 6:30 p.m.

Cosentino argued that, regardless of what Sullivan said, the tapes were safe because McAllen officials had no intention of disobeying his order to preserve them.

The judge said he would keep everything until another hearing Thursday to determine what Sullivan said. DeAnda said he wanted to give the city commissioner time to defend himself.

Sullivan declined comment after the hearing on the circumstances of his remark and if it was in jest.

Harrington, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer, also complained that a McAllen policeman and City Manager Don Sisson had not kept appointments to give depositions in Harrington's office.

"What's going on with the city of McAllen? Don't they understand there's a jail here," DeAnda said. "Everybody is going to understand they're in a federal court in a lawsuit and we're not going to play any games."

The judge later decided city officials could give depositions at city hall and did not have to drive to Harrington's office in San Juan, 5 miles away.

Senate Rejects One-Year Tax Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate, rejecting a one-year tax-cut alternative to President Reagan's three-year plan, is steamrolling Democratic attempts to target tax relief toward lower and middle-income Americans.

On a 61-24 vote Friday, the Senate rejected a one-year tax plan pushed by Democratic liberals that would have focused more relief on families with incomes under $50,000.

The vote indicated little sentiment for anything less than the full three-year, 25 percent, across-the-board tax cut that Reagan is advocating.

Before the bill is passed, however, Democrats are expected to offer other amendments that would shift a greater share of tax relief to families with incomes under $50,000.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., chief sponsor of the one-year tax-cut alternative, said Reagan's plan would mean higher inflation, continued high interest and less assistance for low- and middle-income families.

Opponents didn't even bother to debate the question. And, when the roll was called, 18 Democrats joined Republicans in killing Bradley's amendment.

The Senate is expected to complete action on the tax-cut package next week. Senators arranged to discuss the bill today but planned no votes.

The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee is writing a two-year, 15 percent tax cut bill also aimed at giving low- and middle-income families more of the pie.

Reagan is trying to win the support of enough conservative Democrats to ensure a victory for his approach when the bill reaches the House floor late this month.

Arguing for Bradley's one-year proposal, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said Reagan's measure is morally wrong in giving 36 percent of its relief to 4.8 percent of the population — Americans with incomes over $50,000 — even though they pay a large share of all taxes.

With a limited amount of revenue for a tax cut, Bumpers said, such a tilt toward the well-to-do leaves little relief for those who are hurt worst by rising Social Security taxes and inflation.

Bradley's amendment would have taken $7 billion from the relief intended for the over-$50,000 group and given it to those making less than $50,000.

The individual tax cuts in the Finance Committee package are what Reagan recommended: a 25 percent, across-the-board reduction in personal tax rates over three years, with the first small installment coming next Oct. 1.

The Senate, on a 92-0 vote, approved an amendment by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., to help small businessmen by cutting corporate tax rates on the first $50,000 of taxable income.

The amendment would reduce the tax on the first $25,000 of income from 17 percent to 15 percent and the tax on the second $25,000 from 20 percent to 18 percent.

Public Likes O'Connor

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan's nomination of Sandra D. O'Connor to be the first woman on the U.S. Supreme Court draws overwhelming approval from the American public.

The latest Associated Press-NBC News poll said that support for the nomination of the Arizona appeals judge comes from just about every major group: liberals and conservatives, those who voted for Reagan last year and those who voted for Jimmy Carter, men and women.

Writer Recounts Hotel Tragedy In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — I was standing on the bandstand, judging the dance contest. Swing. Good music. Then I heard that sound, a sound like something in a movie.

I saw the catwalks, one falling onto another, and then falling onto the people. I watched it, and I knew it was happening. But something kept telling me it couldn't happen, not really. These things don't happen to real people. Something in me wanted to reach up there and hold it back.

My first thought was of my two daughters, one 12 and one 14. And I thought about the birthday we were going to celebrate in a week or two. Then there was nothing to do but react.

I was standing beside a friend, Gerry Walters, a dance instructor, and I reached for her to help her off the bandstand.

I knew my wife was out there somewhere, but I didn't know where. But for some reason I went to my right, and there she was. But our children were out there, somewhere.

The rubble was everywhere, piles of wood and steel on people. Water sprayed down from somewhere above, huge flows of water falling on us and adding to the terror.

I had to find my daughters, just as hundreds of others had to find their loved ones somewhere in all that.

People were screaming names, all sorts of names, trying to find a friend or a wife or a son. I remember someone shouting for Les. "Les, where are you?" No one answered.

My daughters were nowhere I looked, but I kept trying. I was afraid they were dead. Then one of my friends at the hotel stopped me. "Two girls in white dresses," he said. "Right?"

When I knew they were all right, safely outside in the parking lot, I went back inside. I saw Rich Gale, the Royals pitcher, throwing things aside, fighting his way through the rubble to pull people out.

We tried to help. My wife, Margie, is a nurse, and she went to help wherever she could. And I was a journalist, a notebook in my hand, trying to do my job. It wouldn't work. If the instincts were there, they didn't take over. There were too many people hurting, too much to be done.

Mostly you could only add a little comfort in all that terror and sadness. When a hysterical lady came to me, there was nothing I could do but hug her. Finally, she settled down. I don't know her name.

I stopped counting after 10 ambulances, and I couldn't even count the rescue workers. They were everywhere, working fast and getting the job done right. Most of us could do little but comfort each other, talk and wait.

I didn't know until later how close we had come to a real tragedy in our own family. Not until I had talked to the girls.

The girls were on the way to the top of the catwalk to get a better view of the dancing.

They had just entered the elevator when it happened. The doors flew open, and they were shoved out of the building by adults.

CONTROL YELLOW APHIDS IN PECANS

If your pecan trees are dripping, a tiny yellow aphid is the likely culprit.

This little insect sucks juice from pecan leaves, taking much more sap than it can fully use so that it passes through a sticky substance called honeydew.

Often, honeydew is first noticed on the windshield of a car parked under a pecan tree. When aphids build up in large numbers, honeydew will fall as a mist and cover everything under the tree canopy.

Although the amount of actual damage from yellow aphids to pecan leaves or nuts is highly debated, leaves do not perform as well when these pests are present. The primary damage is often not from the aphid itself, but from leaf shading caused by a black sooty mold growing over the upper surface of leaves covered with honeydew.

Besides this, the honeydew around yard trees can create quite a mess on cars, patios and sidewalks. This situation is often reason enough for homeowners to want to control yellow aphids.

Pesticides labelled for yellow aphid control include Cygon, DeFend, Rebelate, Guthion, diazinon, malathion or Zolone. When using any insecticide, be sure to read and follow closely information on the product label.

STEM END BLIGHT ALERT

Stem end blight attacks the nuts during the "water

stage." It can be devastating especially when there is stress on the crop such as overloading. Where the soil moisture is good, we should get some relief. All areas of Texas are advised to spray for this fungus if there are enough pecans that a harvest is expected.

Sprays should be timed to the beginning of the "water stage." When the water begins to fill the kernel areas, an application of Benlate should be made. A second application may be made two weeks later. The second application can be extended to the half-shell hardening stage if the interval is not longer than three weeks. Trees should be checked for nut development every week.

Benlate is the only fungicide shown to be effective against this disease. Due to the mild summer, temperatures and rainfall, SEB is not expected to be severe in 1981 and thus one application may be adequate for many areas. Growers are encouraged to watch their pecans closely after the first application for signs of disease development. If losses are light, then only one application may be required. For these varieties that drop heavy from SEB, or if Western or Wichita are the varieties being sprayed, two applications are suggested.

Benlate should be used at the following rates: 0.5-100 gallons of water; 25 lbs.-50 gallons of water.

Water stage for pecans in Scurry County should begin in the week of July 25-31.

Martin Luther, reformer and Bible translator, nailed his 95 theses to the church door in Wittenburg, Germany, in 1517. His original theses were directed against the sale of indulgences by the Dominican monk Johan Tetzel. They were burned as heretical, but copies spread throughout Germany. Luther, known as the founder of Protestant civilization, died in 1546.

'Pokes Sign Fourth Choice

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys signed fourth-round draft choice Derrie Nelson to a multi-year contract Friday, and a club official said the former University of Nebraska linebacker will help put the team back in the Superbowl.

"We hope that he will be one of the missing ingredients that takes us to the Superbowl," Gil Brandt, Cowboy vice president, said. "We have hopes that he will take the place of the missing ingredient that we did not have last year."

Nelson, 22, from Lincoln, Neb., told Brandt Friday he was ready to sign his contract. He had been thinking about it since Monday.

Brandt said the 225-pound Nelson is being evaluated as a strong-side linebacker after signing Friday morning.

"He just started working this afternoon so it is too early to tell," Brandt said. "He had a history of success at Nebraska because of his aggressive play and outstanding athletic ability. He is just a pretty solid football player."

"We are very pleased to have him in here in camp practicing with us," Brandt said. "He could help us a lot in our special teams."

Buggs Leads Oiler Drill

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Danny Buggs, a former Washington Redskins who played in the Canadian Football League, was the star of the 40-yard dash session at the first workout of the Houston Oilers training camp Friday.

Buggs ran a 4.48, best among the rookies and free agents who reported to camp Thursday. Draft choices Michael Holston, Larry Jones and Willie Tullis all ran 4.5 and Bill Kay turned in a 4.53.

None of the rookies and free agents reported noticeably overweight. Second-year lineman Angelo Fields, reporting to camp a week before the rest of the veterans, was down 16 pounds (to 324) from two weeks ago.

Fields faces a daily fine if he weighs more than 310 by Thursday.

"The fact that he's here working tells me what his intentions are," said new head coach Ed Biles. "I'm not worried about him."

The only casualty of the first workout was Angelo State product Guy Sellers, who failed to pass his physical and was waived.

LGA To Play At WTC Course

The Ladies Golf Association will hold a two-man scramble at Western Texas College Golf Course Sunday morning.

All LGA members interested in participating should be at the golf shop by 8:30 a.m. for pairings.

Wilson Prostaff balls; fourth place, two dozen Wilson Prostaff balls.

In addition to the tournament, contestants will be treated to a barbecue dinner Saturday evening.

Busceme Stops Montes In Six

BEAUMONT (AP) - Unranked James "Bubba" Busceme scored a sixth-round technical knockout Friday night over Herman "Kid" Montes, ranked 11th in the World Boxing Council lightweight ratings.

The 29-year-old Texas lightweight champion scored repeatedly with combinations in the first five rounds before Montes quit the fight at 1:55 of the sixth.

Busceme, now 24-3 with 21 knockouts, had scored with a right and left combination, opening a cut on the right side of Montes' nose.

He dominated the fight with his quick combinations and footwork.

Montes, 22, who suffered his second loss in 35 pro fights with three draws, had drawn against WBC

No. 1 contender Rodolfo Gonzales in July 1980. He failed to land effective blows with his crowding style against the quick Busceme.

Busceme had a six-inch reach disadvantage against Montes but repeatedly scored with his hand speed and footwork, managing to keep the fight in the middle of the ring, instead of the corners or the ropes.

Busceme, now is 8-0 since becoming affiliated with manager Hugh Benbow of Yoakum, Texas, with six knockouts.

Before turning pro, he earned five Texas Golden Gloves titles and four National Golden Gloves championships. He also represented the United States in the 1972 Olympics in Munich.

Finals Set Saturday...

Snyder Sacks Rotan, 5-0

ROTAN - Snyder All-Stars, at one time sitting on the edge of elimination, found themselves vying for a tournament crown after blanking Rotan 5-0 here Friday night. The leaguers were to meet Rotan at 8 p.m. again Saturday in a contest to determine the champion of the week-long Little League Tournament held here. Snyder opened the week on Monday with a one-hit, 7-0 loss to Rotan, whose pitcher, Jerry Carter, fanned 19 batters. The All-Stars rallied back to defeat Hamlin and Stonewall-Kent on Tuesday and Thursday, then paid Rotan and Carter back Friday night to set up the championship game.

The winner of Saturday's game will advance in Little League playoff action, though the next opponent was still undetermined.

Unlike Monday's single-hit game against Rotan, Snyder banged out 10 Friday. Superb pitching from Mark Velasquez, backed by almost flawless defensive play, helped avenge Monday's loss. Velasquez allowed only five hits and struck out seven batters. He walked two.

Snyder failed to score in the first inning, but leadoff hitter Steven Mack spelled the story as he opened with a single to right field. Michael Long also singled in the inning, but Carter fanned the final two batters to retire the side.

Velasquez began Snyder's scoring attack in the second inning when he led off with a double to right field. Roman Reyes backed him up with a triple to push across the first score, and Kenneth Pickering followed with a double down the right baseline to make it 2-0.

Reyes played a role in Snyder's third score after taking first base on an error in the fourth inning. He scampered to third when shortstop Rodney Greene's throw to first was wide of the bag, and stole home several pitches later.

Mike Risenhoover

scored in the fifth as he reached first on a grounder up the middle, took second on a single by Michael Long, and raced home on a two-out single by Kyle Guerry, 4-0. Snyder's final run came in the sixth when Reyes led off with an infield hit, advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored on a fielder's choice.

Rotan's biggest scoring threat came in the bottom of the fifth when George Reyes and Stacy Tucker hit back-to-back singles and Vincentio Ortega walked to load the bases with no outs. Velasquez obliged by striking out the top of the order to end the challenge.

Carter, who had pitched a near-perfect game Monday, struck out nine batters.

While maintaining he still supports the collective bargaining process, Donovan told reporters "I will be available" if needed in the new series of talks. He had said earlier that the continuing strike "was a kick in the teeth to the American people."

Texans Leading Open After Friday's Round

SANDWICH, England (AP) - Ben Crenshaw, with a bridesmaid complex and a head full of golf history, chased fellow Texan Bill Rogers for the lead as the British Open Championship moved into the third round Saturday.

Neither of them has won a major tournament, although Crenshaw has been runnerup in four big ones and Rogers tied for second place in this year's U.S. Open.

Rogers led with a two-round total of 138, 2-under-par for the windy Royal St. George's links. Crenshaw was at 139 and shared second with Nick Job, a red-haired, wisecracking Englishman who joked about his unexpected success.

The two Texans had Tom Watson, defending champion, only four shots behind at 142. And Jack Nicklaus, after a nightmare first round of 83, shot a 66 and miraculously hung on in outside contention.

Rogers, 29, from Waco, also is steeped in a bit of history this week, but not of the golfing kind. He is staying in a recently opened country club that once was the home of Lord Kit-chener, Britain's war minister at the start of World War I.

"It's a fascinating place and just about the biggest house I've ever seen," Rogers said. "It's so big I can't imagine anybody living in it. It's bigger than anything in Texas."

The weather improved Friday and the course lost some of its first-round terrors. Not a single player had got inside par 70 on the first day. This time, 22 did.

First, Nicklaus and then Rogers equaled the course record of 66, set last year by Harold Henning of South Africa. But at the end of the day a little known Englishman named Gordon Brand holed in one at the 165-yard 16th and went on to post a 65.

Brand had made 78 in the first round and was six shots off the pace.

Crenshaw went out in 31 and might have done better than 67. But he had bogeys at the 16th and 18th, 3-putting at one and getting into a bunker at the other.

Buckalew, Dryden Wed In Home Of Parents

Kristi Kay Buckalew and William Randall Dryden were married in the home of the groom's parents on June 27 at two in the afternoon. Rev. Bobby McMillan, minister of First United Methodist Church, formerly of Trinity United Methodist Church in Snyder, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Buckalew of Graham, TX, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dryden of Snyder.

The bride and groom pledged their vows under a rainbow arch of fresh lemon leaf and leatherleaf fern suspended from the cathedral ceiling. The fireplace, filled with an abundance of mixed, fresh flowers in yellow, white, blue and apricot provided the backdrop for the ceremony. The unity candle on a fern stand to the right of the fireplace was decorated with leatherleaf fern and baby's breath tinted yellow, blue and apricot.

The musical program consisted of a medley of wedding selections and a vocal solo of "Let It Be Me." Mrs. Jane Womack was the pianist and soloist.

The bride wore a formal gown of baby blue crepe knit with a sheer cape attached at the shoulders. She carried a side cascade bouquet of French blue, apricot and yellow carnations and baby's breath with touches of leatherleaf fern. Streamers of blue and white completed the bouquet.

Miss Kelly Dryden, sister of the groom, served as maid of honor. She wore a pastel blue floor length dress with small white flowers and a silk ribbon bow in the back. She carried a colonial nosegay of blue, yellow and apricot carnations and baby's breath. The streamers were blue, yellow and apricot.

Mr. Pat Dryden of San Angelo served his brother as best man.

The reception was held immediately following the ceremony on the patio of the home.

The bride's table was covered with a floor length white eyelet cloth and a blue linen overcloth. A silk bouquet in apricot, pale yellow and blue complimented the three-tiered cake which was adorned with silk flowers and baby's breath. Punch was served from a silver punch bowl, and other appointments were silver and crystal. The patio was decorated with hanging baskets and varied flowering plants in the bride's colors. Guests were served by Misses Cindy Olson, Diane Gradel, Melanie Jarrell and Carrie Ainsworth.

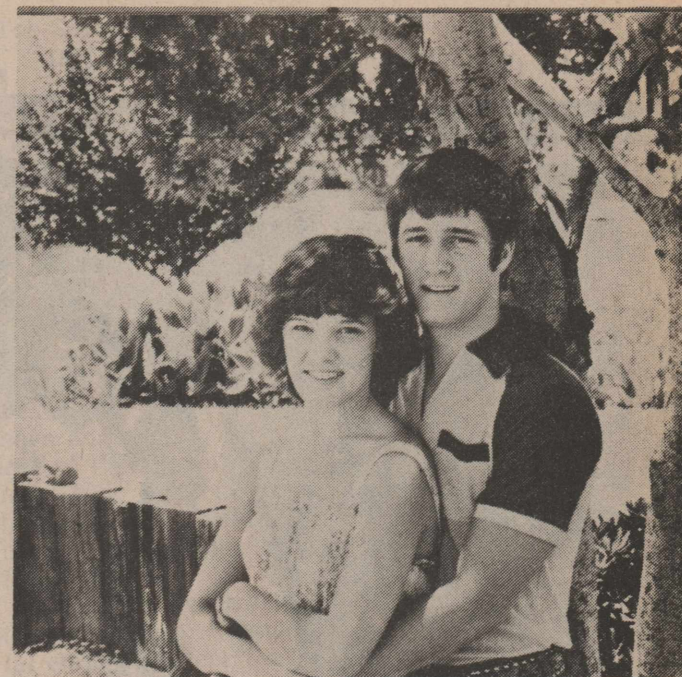

Miss Cindy Olson of San Angelo registered guests in the bridal book.

Following a wedding trip to Mexico, the couple is at home in Wichita Falls, TX.

The bride is a 1978 graduate of Graham High School and the groom is a 1973 graduate of Snyder High School. He is also a 1978 graduate of Tarleton State University and is employed by Hughes Tool Company.

NITROSAMINES

If your diet contains bologna, frankfurters, salami, and other cold-cut type meats containing nitrite preservatives, vitamin C can prevent the nitrite additives from forming cancer-causing nitrosamines in your stomach, reports Dr. S. Mirvish of U. of Nebraska. Some meat processors are adding vitamin C to nitrite-containing meats, however you may protect yourself by taking vitamin C supplements along with any meals that contain nitrite.

Mother Nature To Cooperate

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer have a more than 80 percent chance of fine weather for their July 29th wedding, London weathermen predicted today.

The Meteorological Office, which monitors London weather conditions, has reviewed late July weather in the capital over the past 20 years and concluded there is less than a one-in-five chance of rain on the royal wedding parade.

During the last five days of July for the past 20 years, it has rained for more than three hours only twice, the weather office said.

And at the crucial time of late morning, when the bridal party will be winding its way to St. Paul's Cathedral, the likelihood of rain is less than one percent, according to the predictions.

Turning to the temperature, the weather office said that late July on average is the warmest time of the year in Britain with afternoon temperatures likely to be in the 70s.

The weathermen said the wedding day will most likely be "bright, dry and comfortable...with quite light winds."

But with traditional caution, they stressed they cannot give a precise forecast. On July 26 last year, instead of being warm and dry, London suffered a violent storm which plunged the capital into darkness.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white sweetheart roses, yellow silk lily of the valley, white stephanotis, baby's breath and springer with white lace streaming ribbons.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried something old, a handkerchief belonging to her great-grandmother; something new, her veil and diamond earrings which were a gift from the groom; something borrowed, her dress which belongs to her sister, Sharon Fritz, and something blue was her garter.

Katrina York served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Annette Way of Hermleigh; Sharon Fritz, sister of the bride, and LaDonna Halford, sister of the bride. Each wore a yellow gown with a deep cape collar of scalloped lace worn off the shoulder. The dress also featured a full pleated skirt which flowed from the high waistline. Each carried a nosegay of mixed spring flowers, baby's breath, springer and yellow satin ribbon.

YOUR Independent AGENT
SERVES YOU FIRST

Do you consider automobile insurance to be overpriced but necessary evil? It is difficult to understand just what is needed and why. The best thing to do is to question your agent. No one will understand your particular auto insurance needs in the same way. Ask also about updating your auto coverage. Lower rates may be available, for example, when teenagers move away and are no longer using the family car. In addition, as the car gets older, it make sense to increase deductibles and reduce or eliminate coverages that are no longer economical.

We'll assist you in getting complete coverage at the most economical cost. As an independent agency we handle multi-lines, from many different companies. We put our customers first and represent them with the best insurance company. Stop by at THE DEFFEBACH AGENCY, 1810 27th, 573-5611 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Mon. thru Fri.

INSURANCE TIP:

BEAUTY DIGEST

Mane management

To pamper summer-weary hair, always rinse and instant-condition it after a swim. Salt water and chlorine can strip hair of moisture. Shampoo more often but lather only once, and dilute the shampoo with water first. A deep-conditioning every two weeks will counteract the sun's drying effects. You may need a trim sooner than usual, too, since all that solar exposure can cause breakage and split ends.

Scrub down

A tan will give your face a golden glow, but it'll also make the outer layer of skin tougher and thicker. That means oil and dirt can get trapped beneath the surface. To loosen and remove this tough layer of skin cells and flush out impurities, use an abrasive product — cleansing grains are good. For oily skin, daily use is recommended; normal skin needs treatment every other day. Twice a week is sufficient for dry skin.

Blue plate special

If you've hit a diet slump and can't seem to cut down on your eating, the color of your dishes could be the culprit. Research has shown that certain dish colors make you want to eat more. Warm colors like orange, red and yellow spark the appetite by making food look even more appealing. The good news, though, is that cool colors like green and blue can slow down your nervous system and keep your appetite in check.

Eye opener

A few seconds is all you'll need for this simple eye exercise. Close your eyes tightly, then open them wide. Look straight ahead, then glance up as far as you can without lifting your head; relax. Next, stare as far to the right as you can without moving your head; relax. Again without moving the head, stare down as far as you can. Relax, then look as far to the left as possible. Close eyes a few seconds and rest. Your eyes will feel better, and the rest of your body more relaxed.

Peaceful waters

Singer Michelle Phillips told Beauty Digest her secret for pampering herself after a grueling day: "I love oil baths. The thought of lying in a tub for an hour is just too marvelous to contemplate. From a beauty and health point of view, it's just great for soothing frazzled nerves. I love knowing that I can jump into a fragrant bath at a moment's notice."

Changing Hair

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — In the past several months, the hair of New York's governor has turned from a statesman-like gray to a youthful reddish hue.

It had been thought that the 62-year-old Hugh Carey was simply trying to look younger for his 44-year-old bride, but it now turns out he may have been trying to help New York businesses all along.

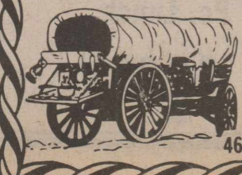

"You know we do make Clairrol in this state," he quipped Thursday. "We make Bristol-Meyers products in this state."

Carey did not disclose, however, which manufacturer was tinting the gubernatorial locks.

"I think in terms of equal rights for men. It's a matter of personal privacy," he explained.

Airline Fighting Clock To Stave Off Takeover

H. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Continental Airlines, staving off a stubborn takeover attempt by Texas International, now is fighting the board as well. The race actually may determine who runs the country's largest airline.

For months Continental employees, with management encouragement, tried to purchase 15.4 million shares of new Continental stock, take over the airline and thwart the Texas International bid. But there has been one setback after another. Continental's effort would be scuttled together if the Civil Aeronautics Board approves the merger with Texas International before an employee plan is approved.

A CAB administrative law judge is expected to make his recommendation on the merger later today and oral arguments are planned before the board next week. The five-member board has set an Aug. 31 deadline to rule on the merger.

Texas International began purchasing Continental stock six months ago and by March had accumulated 48.5 percent of the common shares outstanding, enough to control the Los Angeles-based airline. But the CAB ordered the stock kept in a special trust until it decides whether the acquisition should go through.

Trying to thwart the Texas International takeover, 11,000 Continental employees established an association to purchase controlling interest of Continental.

The plan required that Continental sell 15.4 million in additional shares to its employees, doubling the total number outstanding, and thereby diluting Texas International's holdings by 50 percent.

The employee ownership plan was viewed by airline industry analysts as an innovative way to raise money, reduce labor costs, and stop hostile mergers.

A consortium of banks agreed to lend the employees the $180 million to purchase the new shares and the employees said they would forego half their future pay increases to pay off the loan.

Texas International fought the employee plan every step, including at the CAB and in court in Los Angeles. After taking some early victories, the Houston-based carrier lost major decisions before the CAB and in the courts.

Then the New York Stock Exchange threatened to delist Continental if the new employee shares were issued without shareholder approval, a major victory for Texas International.

Continental took the matter to the California Corporations Commission, but the commissioner also ruled last week that Continental must get shareholder approval before issuing the new shares.

"There's no doubt that time is an important problem for us now," said one Continental official. He explained it will take weeks to put together a shareholders meeting for a vote. Meantime the CAB's Aug. 31 deadline gets closer.

Continental's other option, an outside chance in the view of some industry experts, is to get the California legislature to exempt the company from the control of the state corporations commission.

The Texas International-corporations commission.

Continental takeover fight has been one of the most bitter in airline industry history.

Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air Corp., the parent company of Texas International, has been adamant in his pursuit of Continental, which has had financial problems in recent years but is much larger than Texas International.

Administration Close To Announcing Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is close to announcing its long-awaited immigration policy, but the president has yet to approve several options presented to him, Justice Department sources said today.

And Attorney General William French Smith told reporters after a 90-minute Cabinet meeting Thursday — the third on the politically sensitive topic in the last two weeks — that one more Cabinet session may be needed to iron out details.

Nonetheless, the attorney general said, the new policy may be announced "in the next day or two." Several elements of the proposal would have to be approved by Congress before becoming law.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Cabinet had agreed to a proposal that a total of 100,000 alien workers be admitted in a two-year trial. Congress would have to give its approval, however, before the guest worker program would become law.

Other points agreed to at the Cabinet meeting, the sources said, embodied the recommendations of a presidential immigration task force. The sources emphasized, however, that Reagan still had the final decision.

The proposal put before the president included these points, the sources said:

- Grants of amnesty for illegal aliens who have lived in the United States for five years. The task force estimated 1.2 million people would be eligible.

— A request to Congress for legislation making employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens subject to fines of $500 to $1,000. The fines would apply, however, only to employers with four or more workers.

— Instituting a near-tamper-proof Social Security card that would be issued to all American job applicants. New arrivals would get the cards immediately. They would be issued to current Social Security card-holders over several years.

— Allowing Cuban and Haitian refugees who landed in the United States before Oct. 10 to apply for permanent resident status. Criminals, the mentally ill and other difficult-to-place refugees would be detained, however, until they can be sent home.

— Increasing the ceiling for all immigrants into the United States by 100,000 a year for the next five years and doubling permanently the limit on the number of Mexican and Canadian immigrants granted permanent resident status to a total of 80,000 from both nations.

— Seeking agreements with neighboring nations to allow U.S. officials to seize ships outside American territorial limits believed to be carrying potential illegal aliens.

Such seizures would be made, however, only if requested by officials of the potential aliens' native land. This provision is aimed specifically at curbing the flow of illegal Haitian immigrants.

Man Ordered To Pay Costs

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A man who turned a cypress swamp into a "moonscape" with poisonous wastes from his battery-salvage business has 45 days to pay $11.2 million in damages to the state.

Jerry Sapp couldn't be reached for comment Thursday on the ruling by Marianna Circuit Judge Robert McCrary.

Although Lorenzo denies the allegations, Continental employees fear that if Texas International obtained control of Continental, the new operators would sell much of Continental's aircraft fleet and lay off workers.

Cows To Tell When They Are In Mood

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is going to let cows "broadcast" when they're in the mood for a little romance.

Dairy Systems of Longmont, Colo., received a Federal Communications Commission waiver Thursday for its tiny "BouMatic" radio transmitters to be installed on cows' legs and around their necks.

Since cows move about a little more when they are in heat, the leg transmissions, fed into a nearby computer, would tell herdsman which cows are ready for breeding.

FCC approval is required for any device that broadcasts radio signals.

Reunion Plans To Be Made

A committee is being formed to plan a 10-year reunion for the Snyder High School class of 1972. An organizational meeting will be held Tuesday, July 21, at 7 p.m. in the community room of the West Texas State Bank. Tentatively scheduled for next summer, activities will include an ice cream supper, a brunch and a dance.

Church School Planned To Open

Offering an alternative education for the Christian family and Biblical instruction for Christian parents, the "Family Success Center" of Snyder will open Snyder Christian School on August 31. The "Family Success Center" is sponsored by Agape Christian Fellowship, an interdenominational church located at 111 E. 37th Street.

Snyder Christian School will provide an individualized instruction for grades 1-9 using the Accelerated Christian Education curriculum in an atmosphere of Christian love and discipline.

"The school is Bible-centered and interdenominational," stresses Pastor Jay Newsom, principal. "We offer a quality academic curriculum including reading, math, science, English, spelling and civics.

The individualized instruction method allows for accelerated learning as well as individual attention for students with learning difficulties. The program is success-motivated but there are no social promotions. "Our goal is to train Christian leaders and build strong families," Newsom said.

Fall semester enrollment is limited, and registration deadline is August 15. Persons wishing more information may contact Newsom at 573-8895.

Four Boy Scouts To Leave Monday

Four Boy Scouts from Snyder will leave Monday for the 10th National Scout Jamboree at Fort A. P. Hill, Va. The scouts from Troop 107 are Victor Bruns, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Bruns, and Billy Overhulser, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Overhulser, Jr. Scouts from Troop 27 include John Hamlett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Hamlett, and Brad Gambrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley M. Gambrell.

Joel Hamlett, a troop leader, will accompany the scouts. They will all leave Colorado City Monday morning at 7:30 a.m. They will travel to the jamboree site by chartered bus and will tour the countryside including a stop at Washington, D.C.

The Snyderites will arrive at the jamboree site July 29 and will start home August 5.

The theme for this jamboree, which is held every four years, is Scouting's Reunion of History. A host of activities have been planned for the scouts. About 3,000 people are expected to attend.

Thanks Snyder!

We appreciate the tremendous response since our opening last January.

Thomas, Hammond Wed In Afternoon Ceremony

Glenda Thomas and Bob Hammond were united in marriage on June 20 in an afternoon ceremony in Bellview Baptist Church in Midland. Rev. T. O. McGee officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Dickey of Snyder.

The altar held a candelabrum decorated with fern and white gladiolas. The pews were marked with spring flowers and velvet ribbons.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown featuring a lace inset yoke and blouson sleeves. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers with pastel streamers.

In keeping with tradition, for something old the bride wore a hand painted brooch which belonged to her grandmother, a string of pearls also belonging to her grandmother, her gown was something new and her garter was something blue.

Cindy Thomas served her mother as maid of honor and Sandi Rasnick of Midland served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Liz Miller and Kathleen Morris.

The flower girl was Amber Turner of Midland who wore a white embroidered dress with a yellow hat and trim. She carried a white basket with spring flowers.

Dean Hammon, son of the groom from Midland served his father as best man. Groomsmen were Lee House, Charles House and Mike Davis, all of Midland. Ushers were Joe Hensley and Gary Lang.

The ring bearer was Max Thomas, son of the bride. He wore a blue tuxedo with black piping and a white ruffled shirt.

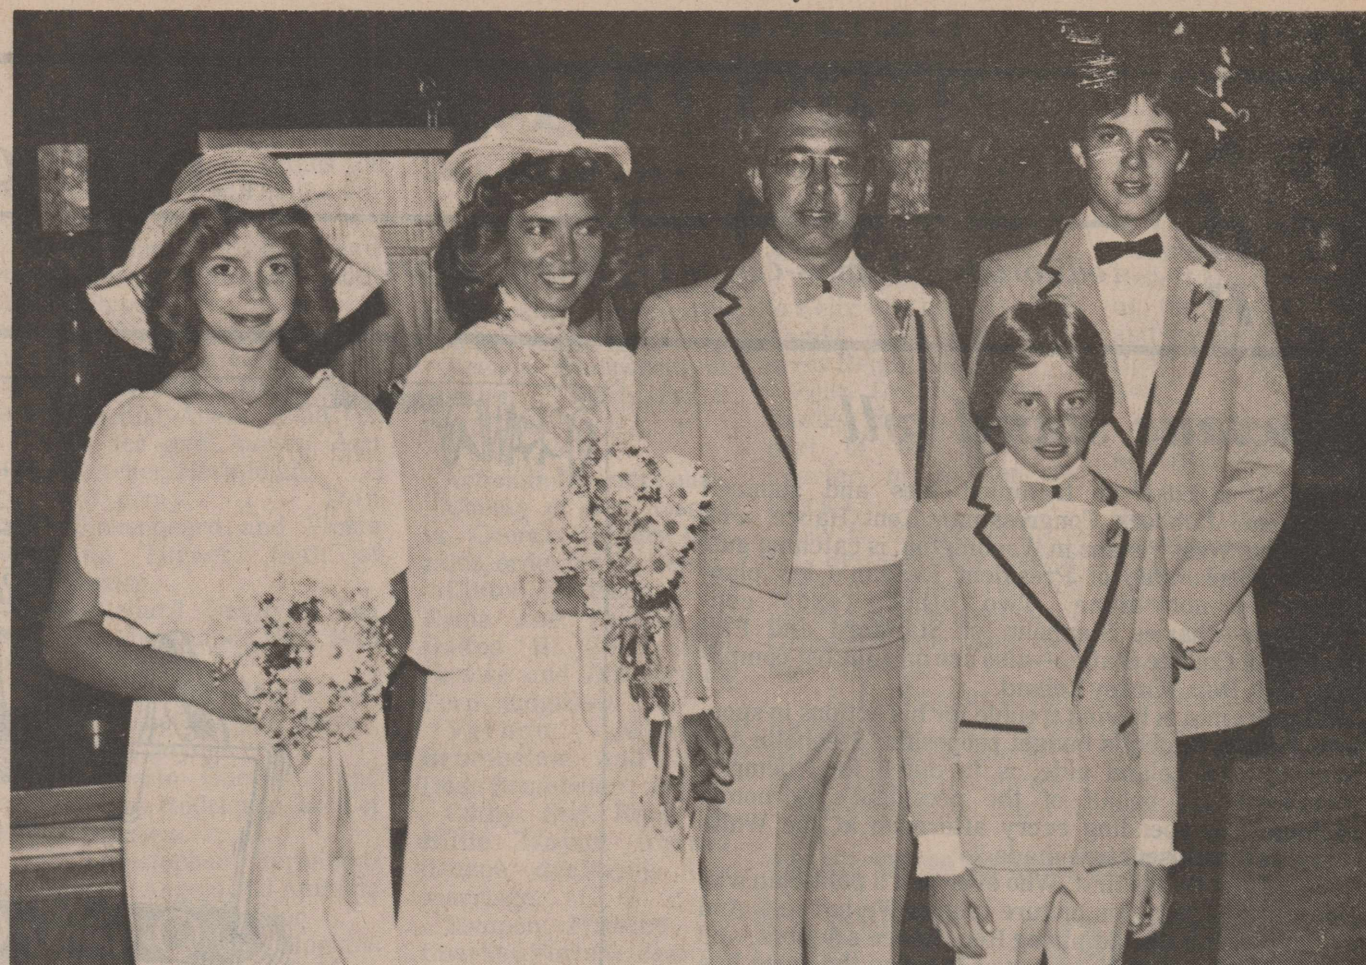

The reception was held in the home of Peggy Hefner.

The bride's table was laid with an ecru lace cloth. It held a spring flower arrangement as centerpiece and the three tiered white cake topped with wedding bells. Silver and crystal appointments were used. Martha Hill of Sweetwater and Mary Rinehart of Snyder, both sisters of the bride, served over the table. Peggy Hefner registered guests in the bride's book.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidoso, NM, the couple is at home in Midland.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School. She also graduated as an LVN from Cogdell Hospital and is presently employed for Professional Land Services in Midland.

The groom is president of Hammond Energy Investments and owner of The Carpet Place in Odessa.

Mystery Chef Blueberry Pie Is A Trustworthy Recipe

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

You can trust this blueberry pie recipe. Its donor, Mrs. Harriet Bepler, has been using it for over 40 years, although along the way she altered the proportions of some of its ingredients. She modified them, brought them up to date. Now the pie is less sweet than it once was and has fuller blueberry flavor. Where did the original recipe come from? Mrs. Bepler found it in the long out-of-print "The Mystery Chef Cookbook."

In the 1930s, The Mystery Chef had a nationally broadcast radio program devoted to "talks on cooking," and he wrote several cookbooks.

In the introduction to one of his books, he said he came to the United States in 1906 from London, took up cooking as a hobby and ended by making it a career. He prided himself on cooking all the meals for his wife and himself and adopted a pseudonym only because, as he wrote, "My dear mother was horrified when she first heard that I had taken to cooking ... In deference to her wishes, I decided to use the name of The Mystery Chef."

Although, amusingly enough, he introduced his wife and himself as "Mr. and Mrs. Mystery Chef," I discovered from the copyright line in his books that his name was John Macpherson. As a cookbook collector, I've always wished he hadn't been so secretive about how and where he gathered his culinary knowledge because, in some ways, he was ahead of his time. It would be interesting to know more about his background.

Thighs are a tough spot to firm up, but this exercise should help. Get down on your knees with your legs slightly apart and raise your arms straight out in front of you. Keeping your back straight, slowly lean back as far as you can. You'll feel the pull through the front of your thighs. Don't strain. Hold this position for 10 seconds, then return to the starting position. Repeat the exercise three times.

Toasty tarts

Instead of calorie-laden puff-pastry shells, try shells made of toast for party hors d'oeuvres that even dieters can enjoy. Cut slices of thin sandwich bread into 3-inch circles with a glass or cookie cutter. Press into muffin tins and bake 10 minutes at 400. Before the party, sprinkle the bottoms of the shells with grated Swiss or Gruyere cheese. Spoon in chopped tomatoes seasoned with basil and pepper — or chopped, drained cooked spinach spiked with Tabasco. Heat through in a 400-degree oven. Each appetizer has 42 calories.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

I watched a television show the other night in which there was nudity, graphic violence, mature situations, explicit sex, profanity, adult language, horror, vulgarities and a rating that called for "parental discretion."

I called my mother and said, "So why weren't you here to discret?"

"What are you so sore about?" she asked. "Weren't you forewarned?"

"Oh, sure, they told me everything except it had no plot!"

Frankly, my mother has become quite lax lately about parental discretion and so have I. And I'm not sure it's all our fault. Neither of us ever "discreted" in our lives until about seven or eight years ago when I saw the warning on the movie and TV ratings.

I asked a couple of my friends and they didn't know what we were supposed to do either. One mother said she thought it meant seeing the TV show before the kids saw it. But it had two drawbacks. By the time she saw it, it was over and they had missed it and she picked up a vocabulary she couldn't use in public.

Someone else said it was a gimmick to get kids to watch a show. And what better way than to tell them their parents had to approve of it?

The whole rating system was rather vague. No one ever told us how long we had to use parental discretion or when a child was old enough to discret for himself. One mother monitored her children's viewing habits until they started to ask questions. I monitored mine until they stopped.

I remember one night, we took our children to a movie that looked like family fare in the ads. As we approached the window, the woman selling tickets looked at us and said, "You're taking your children to see this?" We withdrew feeling like two adults who wore raincoats with nothing under them.

Frankly, I don't know of any mother who actually engages in parental discretion these days. If there are any, they are the same mothers who check out the American Journal on Tooth Decay at the library, and get sullen when their children don't notice their clothes smell nice.

The reality is it's just too difficult to control their viewing at home and away.

A concerned mother asked me the other day what I allowed my children to watch when they were young.

I told her, "Illicit sex, violence, prejudice, brutality, murder, assault and profanity."

"You let them watch the late movie?" she gasped. "No. Just the 6 o'clock news."

3 texans stand tall

Call it a case of trampled toes and shunned liberalism: Lubbock Congressman Kent Hance, who represents West Texans in Washington, is catching guff for his sponsorship of President Reagan's tax plan. Hance is not alone. Two other Texas congressmen—Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Phil Gramm of College Station—also are on a hit list compiled by U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland.

Rep. Gramm is having trouble for his actions in sponsoring the president's budget proposals: Stenholm, according to a Leland aide, is in dutch for "being a cheerleader in behalf of the president's economic package and spending every afternoon at the White House getting his picture made."

Well. First things first. Who ever met a politician who didn't like to have his picture taken? We haven't. And we have to admit to admiring Rep. Hance's actions, and those of his colleagues, so far as bucking the party line and acting on behalf of the people concerned. Their tax and budget actions were a rarity in the ordinarily gutless political arena, where backroom deals and party considerations all too often cast the die.

Rep. Leland is pushing for censure actions against all three of his fellow Texans. Though the state Democratic party is not expected to cooperate, Leland wants the other congressmen stripped of their party assignments and committee chairs. He recently took his case to the Texas Coalition of Black Democrats.

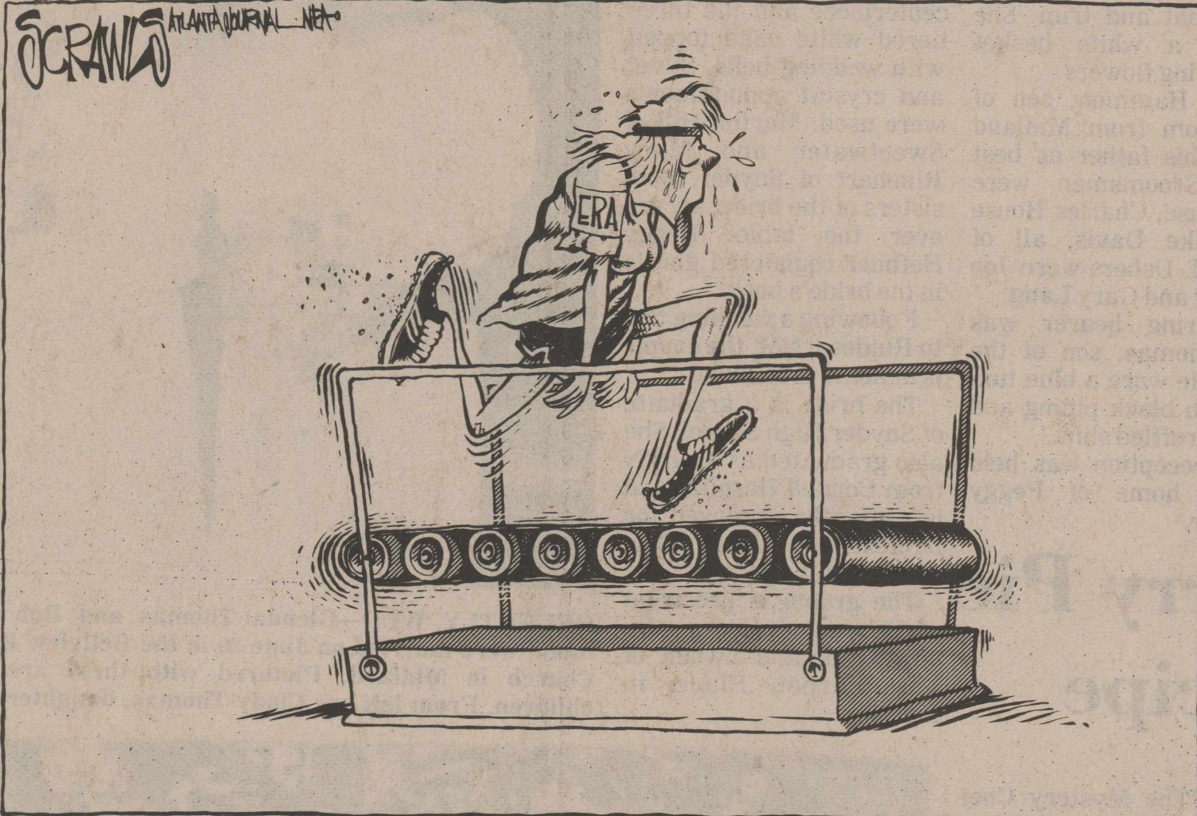

According to an aide, Rep. Leland is upset with the maverick trio, not because of "their votes per se," but because of what he called their "direct violation of Democratic policies and platform."

Rep. Leland apparently really believes what he is saying, and we respect that. But we can't give it much credence. The "Democratic policies and platform" that Rep. Hance and company decided to abdicate have historically comprised a ruinous tax-and-spend plan that was destined for failure.

One look at the Democratic platform devised during the last party convention — which coincided with a time of crippling inflation and national disenchantment with big government — shows the Democratic party has been out of touch with reality for too long.

It's a fact, too, that not many Southern Democrats ever take all that stuff too seriously.

In the case at hand, West Texans and their counterparts nationwide were crying for tax relief. They wanted fewer burdens and a balanced budget, and they overwhelmingly placed Ronald Reagan in office to obtain those ends.

WASHINGTON (NEA) —One of Ronald Reagan's first acts as president was to impose a federal hiring freeze. Administration officials hoped that the freeze coupled with normal attrition would substantially reduce the federal work force. But it has not.

Figures from the Office of Personnel Management show that federal employment actually increased in January and February but dropped in March by 6,603, mainly as the result of reductions in the Census Bureau with the completion of the 1980 census.

There was another decrease — of 1,872 — in April, the latest month for which figures are available. But for the third month the Defense Department showed an increase of more than 5,000 full-time employees.

Moreover, the April figures reflected a new way of counting federal workers. Defense Department employees and 28,243 employees "exempt from personnel ceilings" were listed separately.

There will have to be 89,303 fewer employees on the federal payroll on Sept. 30 than there were on April 30 if the administration is to reach its announced personnel goals. Government experts say that this will happen only if very large numbers of workers are dismissed over the next 90 days.

Of course, this could lead to another round of suits.

New Yorkers had better have enjoyed the recent 24-hour visit of Prince Charles to their city for a performance of the British Royal Ballet.

Why? Because his police protection cost them $350,000.

New York Mayor Ed Koch and the New York Police Department think that the federal government should pick up the tab. But the Treasury Department is saying, "No way."

"The law is clear," says a Treasury official. "The federal government will reimburse New York for protection only in the case of a foreign dignitary coming to address what in the law is called 'an official international body,' which means the United Nations."

He explains that the federal government paid for Pope John Paul II's protection in New York because he addressed the United Nations and would have paid for the prince's protection had he done likewise. But he did not, so the government is forbidden by law from paying the bill.

"The people in New York are now making statements that they are surprised we are not picking up the tab," says the Treasury official. "But the day they heard that Charles was coming, they were on the phone asking if we would pick up the protective bill. We said no then, so I can't see how they are surprised now."

Interior Secretary James Watt, who is described in official government biographies as a Coloradan, is supposed to represent the New West in the Reagan Cabinet. But closer examination reveals that this sagebrush rebel has spent most of his adult life not in the Wild West but in the affluent suburbs of Washington, D.C.

Watt did spend his youth in Wyoming. But for more than 20 years, he lived in the Washington area while working for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, on Capitol Hill, as a deputy secretary of the interior and as a member of the Federal Power Commission.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Two muscles which operate without the direction of the brain are the heart and the tongue."

Right in the middle of the year we're making a resolution. In the future we will never ask "What happened?" when we meet someone with a cast or bandage.

We understand folks are sincerely interested, but repeating the same story is tougher than the injury. It's double tough when the thing that caused the injury is less than intelligent.

Last Friday for example, my son and I decided to get nine holes of golf in before dark. That's a rather safe decision unless you've forgotten that in-laws were coming for dinner or you forgot to look for water moccasins before you reached for that lost ball.

My error was trying to play by the rules, hitting the ball from where it lies. In this case it was directly behind a small tree.

Normally I would have kicked the ball into the fairway, but this time I made the mistake of swinging a 3-iron. The iron broke as it hit the tree and the bottom half came back and stuck in my hand. Seven stitches and $85 later I'm ready for the questions.

But it has been a summer for freak mishaps. Take Penney's manager Brian Boswell. He's answering those questions about that neck brace.

Boswell is back on the job following surgery to repair a broken bone in his neck. The injury occurred while he was looking up and changing a light in the store.

Deputy Sheriff Andy Anderson had a reaction to a wasp sting and it caused a cardiac arrest and a couple of days in the hospital.

Wasp and bee stings seem to be occurring with more frequency this year. We heard reports of some violent reactions and some folks were unaware that they were allergic.

SHS teacher Wallace Combest, who is allergic to such stings, made two trips to the doctor last week. On Thursday he received five wasp stings and the following day he was hit by a scorpion.

Another freak accident occurred last Saturday morning. Karen McAden, who works at the First National Bank, slipped while pushing a lawn mower and broke her right arm. I committed that same social blunder by asking "What happened?" when I saw her in the doctor's office.

Our women's editor Paula Pryor, says her husband Saturday also was victim of a golfing injury. His downswing hit his leg, and he's been limping all week.

Another golfing injury came last Sunday on the final hole of the Earl Fish Tournament.

Pharmacist Eddie Peterson and Dr. Jay Kidd appeared to have a grip on the first flight championship. However, Eddie missed a three-foot putt and the duo finished second. Peterson's pride was shattered.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This may be one of those days where you will find it difficult to please certain individuals, regardless of what you try to do for them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of seeking activities which are pleasurable, but inexpensive, you may be tempted to do other way today and indulge in extravagant outlets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Normally you're very sensible in programming your time and efforts, but today you could spread your forces too thin and end up with little to show for the hours spent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Being able to keep a secret may not be your long suit today. Think twice before repeating information told to you in strict confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be doubly careful today with your possessions, as well as with those others have entrusted to you. A loss might occur if you let your guard down.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Unfortunately, you might not be able to put too much stock in what others promise you today. This could be especially true in dealings with the opposite sex.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep in mind that any duties or responsibilities you fail to take care of today will eventually have to be attended to. Produce, don't postpone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be on your best behavior today socially, or you could tarnish your image. Think "moderation." Avoid any type of excess.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a possibility you could be a trifle too complacent today where your goals are concerned. Achievements will be denied you if you fail to assert yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against a tendency today to speak without thinking. You may blurt out something which is too critical or pointedly impolite.

Killer Children Look Like Babies, But Aren't

By Laura Richardson
AP Writer

DALLAS (AP) — David Keeler and two other boys walked out of the Dallas Police Department Youth Division in handcuffs. David's hands were cuffed behind his back, and just before he stepped into the elevator, he pulled his left wrist gently against the metal. If he was uncomfortable, it didn't show in his face. His face showed nothing.

The other boys, both very young, blond and thin, were cuffed together, and the manacles look ludicrous on their delicate wrists.

The elevator door closed, and a reporter broke the silence, saying the children looked like babies.

"Don't feel sorry for them," a policeman snapped. "Those 'babies' do terrible things."

David, 14, is accused of killing his parents. Police say he went to church with William and Anita Keeler on July 12, but arrived home before them, took a semi-automatic shotgun into his room, and waited.

Police say he waited while his parents came home and entered their room. Then — when they came out — he shot them and left the house. His 27-year-old sister, Barbara, arrived later and found her dying mother and her dead father lying in the hallway. The mother accused her son:

"David... David... David did it."

David Keeler is what Harvard social psychologist Robert Coles, writing in "Children of Crisis," called one of the "privileged ones." His father was the president of Arco's oil company, which made sales of $4.4 billion last year. The family lived in an unostentatious yet comfortably "well off" neighborhood in north Dallas, where homes like theirs, which has a swimming pool, are valued at around $150,000.

David, a handsome child with thick honey-blond hair and a graceful, athletic-looking body, was an honor student at St. Marks, an exclusive and expensive Dallas private school.

This world of power, money and success is, according to Coles, a world where children learn they must "be better, do better, appear better."

"It is a world others watch with envy and curiosity, with awe, with anger, bitterness, resentment," he wrote.

"If, at times, the 'privileged' seem, in fact, frightened and guilty and confused and conflicted — in their own ways victims — then so it goes: the ironies of everyday life."

"I can cite instances of very bad, very violent children," said Tom Sewell, a former Dallas homicide investigator now working in the Youth Division. "Most of them started at a very young age. When we talk about the profile, we can say:

broken home, lower socioeconomic group.

"But look at this kid! A fine Christian home, yet he kills his mother and daddy."

"Violence in the family is terribly common, it's the most common kind of violence," said Tom Cottle, a psychologist at Harvard Medical School. "Violence in families occurs across the culture, not just the poor and minorities. Rich whites never do it — the hell they don't!"

"The problems of the children of the rich, particularly the prominent rich, is that they experience problems they can never discuss," he said. "I would say a lot of these kids have problems — long-standing problems — never revealed to anybody."

"Children are different from adults," said Randy Hester, a psychologist whose job at Dallas County Mental Health-Mental Retardation includes psychological testing of children accused of crimes. "They're different in terms of breadth of experience, degree of insight and judgment."

"The important point is not to think of the child as psychologically different, and use that as an excuse."

"Homicide is an adult act."

The men quoted above are scholars who study, doctors who treat, and policemen who investigate children who kill. They are, in their way, experts. John, who has agreed to tell his story if his anonymity is protected, is an expert of a different kind. His young son killed a close adult acquaintance.

"Something like this is a whole lot different than a member of the family suddenly dying, or even a member of the family being murdered. I'm sure that's a trauma and a terrible thing, but it's a different kind of trauma, obviously, when a member of the family is a killer," he said.

At 14, David Keeler is too young to be released on bond, too young to stand trial, too young to go to prison. He is not too young to make headlines, and his family's prominence and importance ensures their grief is public.

John said that when a member of the family kills, you must handle the press and at the same time explore the depths of grief and rage, learn first-hand the strictures of the criminal justice system and the limits of your ability to help your child.

You also learn that the violent act that has plunged the family into such painful turmoil may never be explained or understood.

The Keelers' friends have already begun the inevitable questioning, and are getting no answers.

"Obviously everybody speculates, tries to look back," said William Stewart, a close Keeler family friend. "I just don't know that there's any identifiable circumstance."

"He was a high achiever, and that was important to him. Nobody had a more supportive family. That's what makes it so mystifying," he said.

David wasn't "hard on himself," but he was "certainly active," Stewart said. "I really just don't know. I really can't put my finger on a single thing."

The soul-searching process could go on for years, John said.

"You don't know why. You don't know what caused it. Your mind conjures up all sorts of strange things," he said. "What happened? Does it involve some weird situation that I've been totally unaware of?"

"If it's someone you know who has been killed, what went on between the two? What did it? Why won't he say? Is there some hidden reason? And you think of all sorts of hidden reasons. You always think something like this had to be precipitated."

When a child does explain "why" he killed someone, Hester said, there are two levels of explanation.

"There's the superficial: I killed them because I couldn't have the car, they were mean to me, and so on. When we leave it at that level, we think, 'My God, how calloused!'" he said.

"With a child, there're probably many factors going on in his family, and someone would have to take a very close look at the dynamic of the family as well as the individual child."

"It may be in the case of this child (David) that no one will ever know the motivation," Hester said.

"We were aware of the pressures, we were aware of moodiness, we were aware of certain things. Had we been psychiatrists we might have seen there was a mental condition," John said of his son. "But we weren't and we didn't."

"It is shocking to know that as parents, you obviously didn't know what was best for the child. You were blind to it for whatever reason. You thought you understood, but now discover that you really didn't understand the child."

Bewildered, family members also feel guilty, John said.

"The first thing anybody feels is guilt," he recalled. "Why didn't I stop it? Why didn't I see?"

Anger quickly follows.

"Isn't there something that could have been done to avert the tragedy? Why didn't others see and report? You automatically assume that anyone connected with the child should have noticed something — particularly the family, brothers and sisters."

"If you don't get help, the family's put in a position of sitting there with all of the recrimination, the kids blaming the parents, the parents questioning why the kids did certain things... You get all the soul-searching. The children, or the parents, or both, start making judgments... Fingerprinting becomes a problem."

"Even with counseling, even with friends' support, even with making a strong effort to move along in some normal way, the tension in the family increases ten-fold," he said. "Everybody is on edge. Everybody is preoccupied by what's happened. It's so easy to get into arguments, to have disagreements."

But the outside world leaves little time to handle this new chaos. There are, first of all, the police.

"It's a rude shock to realize what anyone goes through who's involved in a homicide case," John said. Going to the police station, having your child put in a juvenile detention center, having to adjust to the idea that right now that child needs you worse than he or she ever has, and yet — you can't get to him."

"The first night is a horror. All of a sudden, this seemingly reasonable, normal child with his or her own little niche in the family is transported away... where the family has absolutely no control, no access, no way to help the child with the things you know the child is accustomed to needing and wanting help on."

If the victim or the killer was socially prominent — and often even if neither were — there is the press.

"Reading incorrect stuff in the paper about why-he-might speculation, quotes from playmates, 11- and 12-year-old kids being quoted... whether it's true or not...."

"You have to face the stories in the paper that are obviously way off base, but there's no way to refute them so you don't even try. You just weather it," John said.

If the child is judged delinquent or insane and sent to an institution, the family feels the continued pain of separation, lashed by fear of the unknown.

"It's frightening, of course. You write to the child, and you get letters from the child. It tears your heart out," he said. "You get angry letters. Despondent letters. Crazy letters, frankly, just wild. You don't know what's happening, and... you hear all kinds of horror stories... about drug therapy programs, and children and adults."

"Your only relationship with the child eyeball-to-eyeball is in family counseling, ... and it's not a family situation. There's always somebody else there. It's an ordeal every time."

"It doesn't really lessen family tension, it increases it."

After what can be years of agonizing struggle, the child may improve enough to be released from the hospital.

"How do you bring a child back into some situation that the child can handle, that the family can be satisfied with, and — in the case of a homicide — that the community can be satisfied with? How do you do it? That's when you really need a lot of understanding people," John said.

"It's not as traumatic, obviously, as it was at first. But there's the problem of the other children in the family. You can't go home again. You can never go back to the way it was. You can't say, 'We'll start over,' because ... you get the idea quite early that the family has changed.... and its fragility goes on forever."

Can't Disclose Agents Names

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill making it a crime to disclose the name of an American intelligence agent has been amended by a House subcommittee to reduce the possibility it could be used against some journalists.

The amendment by Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., was approved 4-1 Thursday by a House intelligence subcommittee after supporters said it focuses the legislation on those who are "systematically engaged in identifying agents."

Boland's amendment stipulates that individuals disclosing agents' names must intend to impair or impede the government's intelligence functions "by the fact of such identification and exposure."

CIA Director William Casey said the amendment was "acceptable" but that his agency still prefers a Senate version that would make disclosures of an agent's name illegal regardless of intent.

States Allow Sterilization

WASHINGTON (AP) — States are still allowing poor Medicaid recipients to be sterilized without required consent procedures and even when they are younger than 21 despite 1974 and 1978 laws forbidding it, a consumer health group says.

The Ralph Nader-affiliated Public Citizen's Health Research Group asked Thursday for increased federal policing, saying there still is "widespread state indifference to and ignorance about the long-standing problem of sterilization abuse."
