Wrong signal may have caused crash

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Operators using a newly installed system may have given the wrong signal to two trains that crashed head-on, killing at least 110 people and injuring 1,000 in the country's worst rail accident, officials said.

About 40 people remained in critical condition today, according to one hospital official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, and the government declared a day of mourning.

The 10-car express train and seven-car mail train slammed into each other Sunday outside the farming village of Maizdi Khan, sending cars tumbling and tossing passengers into freshly-harvested rice paddies.

The express train was traveling at about 50 mph, the mail train coming to a halt, authorities said.

AP

Communications Secretary Mazurul Karim estimated that more than 2,000 people were aboard the trains, many of them Moslem pilgrims. He said, however, that people routinely ride between the cars and on the roofs, making a precise count difficult.

Rescue workers using two large cranes to pull apart the crumbled wreckage finished the search for victims early today and reopened the track. Karim said no bodies were found inside.

Shortly after the accident, senior officials of the state-run railroad said they suspected operators may not have known how to properly work a sophisticated digital signaling system installed five days earlier.

"Human failure and wrong signaling may have caused the two trains to come on the same track, leading to the collision," said one official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Dhaka newspapers on Monday blamed the accident on human error.

The Sangbad, an independent Bengali-language daily, quoted unidentified railway officials as saying the express train ignored a signal to stop and allow the mail train to pass. Another Bengali-language daily, the Khabar, quoted witnesses as saying either the wrong signal or no signal failed to keep the two trains off the same track.

But Communications Minister Anwar Hossain disputed their suspicions, saying more than 200 trains had traveled on the track since the system was installed Tuesday. The track on which the crash occurred shares north- and southbound traffic, so trains often must wait on sidings for trains going in the opposite direction to pass.

Bush vows to work toward fulfilling King's dreams

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush, in a glowing tribute to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., today pledged that as president that he will work to fulfill King's dreams of racial equality.

Bush called the late civil rights leader an American hero, saying, "He lived a hero's life. He dreamed a hero's dreams. He left a hero's indelible mark on the mind and imagination of a great nation."

In an address to a breakfast of the American Bicentennial Presidential Inaugural Afro-American Committee, Bush added, "We pledge once more our nation's sacred honor in pursuit of his dreams."

Noting he will be sworn in as president on Friday, Bush signaled to black Americans that he will be sensitive to their concerns.

"What becomes of Martin Luther King's dreams is up to us," he said. "We must not fail him. We must not fail ourselves. We must not fail the nation he loved so much and gave his life for.

"I understand that five days before coming president of the United States of America," Bush added to applause from the gathering of some 300 black leaders.

And Bush also cautioned that Americans must remember not only the goals of King but "why these were dreams and not reality."

"Remember the moral stain of segregation, the lies it taught and the anguish it inflicted on the lives of black Americans and on the conscience of the entire American people," Bush said.

Bush said that he will work to ensure "that bigotry and indifferenee to the disadvantaged will find no safe home on our shores," and that King's dreams for the children of America will be fulfilled. "This must be our mission together. It will, I promise, be my mission as president of the United States."

Bush as vice president was part of the Reagan administration that has been criticized for its civil rights record and what black leaders have said is indifference to their cause.

Bush, however, has made a concerted effort to show minorities that his will be a much more activist presidency in terms of minority needs.

Reagan's retirement to be 'perky'

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan heads "back to the ranch" on George Bush's inauguration day, he will carry with him a passel of perquisites that presidents receive when they become former presidents.

For one thing, he will fly to California on Air Force One, but that's only a one-shot deal. The plane will be flown back to Washington without him and after that will be earmarked for the new president.

There will be no need, however, to pass the tin cup for Reagan. Unlike such early presidents as Thomas Jefferson, who had to sell his books to make ends meet, Reagan will, like other recent ones, be quite comfortably off.

He gets two pensions, around-the-clock Secret Service protection, an office allowance and the use of a townhouse in Washington. In addition, the government will pay to ship his papers to California, process them and run his presidential library.

Reagan already receives a pension of $29,188 a year from the state of California, because of his eight years as governor.

Now, with eight years as president under his belt, he will receive a federal pension equal to the annual salary of a member of the Cabinet. This is currently $99,500 but will jump to $155,000 if Congress approves a salary increase Reagan has recommended.

DOE confirmation of SSC site expected by Friday

DALLAS (AP) — Somewhat like a bride-to-be, Texas has anxiously been waiting to be finally handed a large ring.

And beginning today, President Reagan could give the state the most expensive ring the federal government will have created — the $5 billion atom-smashing oval known as the superconducting super collider project.

Officials said the confirmation definitely will be made by Friday when the Reagan administration leaves office.

A final, 10,000-page environmental impact statement officially was noted in the Federal Registry Dec. 16.

"The law says that no sooner than 30 days from the official availability of the (statement) can the agency make a final decision. The time has to pass," said Energy Department spokesman Jeff Sherwood.

U.S. Energy Secretary John Herrington in November named Ellis County as site for the project, pending the outcome of the environmental impact study. The 30-day waiting period is permitted for public commentary on the study.

Texans passed a bond proposal in 1987 promising to kick in $1 billion to help cover such costs as building the super collider lab, electrical utility capacity and for higher education and physic research projects.

The 53-mile oval-shaped super collider underground tunnel project will yield about 4,000 construction jobs, some 3,500 permanent jobs, prestige in the scientific community and spinoffs for transporation, medicine, communications and defense.

The Reagan administration is recommending $250 million be spent on the project in the 1990 fiscal year. Some $90 million of that appropriation would be spent on research and development while the remaining $160 million would pay for initial construction of the project.

"If approved by Congress, this will get us off to a strong start on building the superconducting super collider," Sen. Phil Gramm said.

The congressman whose district includes much of the supercollider site, Joe Barton, said he was pleased to see the proposed allocation in the Reagan budget. The Ennis Republican said he would lobby for even more first-year funding of the project.

Former hostage returns home to Colorado

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — A professor who was held hostage in Beirut for 20 months returned home and predicted that other American hostages would soon follow.

Mithileshwar Singh, who was released by his Islamic Jihad captors last Oct. 3, arrived Sunday night at his home here, which was festooned with yellow ribbons and "Welcome home" signs. About 20 neighbors, some in tears, were there to greet Singh and his wife, Lala Mani.

Singh, 61, has undergone medical treatment in the New York City area since his release. His diabetes was aggravated during his captivity and he suffers from other health problems, according to John Curtis, a family friend in Grand Junction.

Sunday night, Singh said he feels "very good" but added that he didn't expect to return to full health for months.

Singh said he believed that President-elect George Bush and Secretary of State-designate James Baker would be "more flexible on hostage releases" than their predecessors.

"I think they will be more willing to negotiate and discuss the issues, because some kind of dialogue should be initiated by our government," he said.

He also predicted that the remaining American hostages in Lebanon might be released this week to coincide with Bush's inauguration, much as Americans held hostage in Iran were released the day that Ronald Reagan was sworn in as president in 1981.

"I do feel that something should happen by the date of inauguration," Singh said. "I do not really know, it is my faith."

Singh, a citizen of India who became a resident alien in the United States in 1965, was chairman of the business department at the American University of Beirut when he was abducted on Jan. 24, 1987.

"When I was in captivity, I thought all the time of coming home," Singh said after his arrival at Walker Field.

Inaugurations often marked by eloquence, bad weather

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington trembled as he delivered his first inaugural address.

Abraham Lincoln was thrown off his stride by a spectator falling from a tree.

Now it's George Bush's turn.

From the 13-star flags to the metal detectors, everything is just about ready for Friday's repetition of the ceremony Franklin D. Roosevelt called "a day of national consecration."

The inauguration of an American president has, in its 200-year history, been marked by eloquent prose, adorned by poetry, buried under a blizzard, pelted with rain and on two occasions visited by such harsh weather that participants had to move indoors.

It has seen reunions of Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders, of the battery that Cpl. Truman led in World War I and of the P-T boat crew that John F. Kennedy commanded in the Pacific.

The metal detectors are a new touch in keeping with the terrorist-conscious Washington of 1989, but security is nothing new to inaugurals.

When Lincoln took the oath in 1862, "two riflemen lurked at each window of the Capitol wings flanking the inaugural stand, watching for any interference," wrote biographer Carl Sandburg.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt assumed office in the depth of the Depression in 1932, there were machine guns at the Capitol.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low is expected to be in the mid-20s, with southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph.

Tuesday will be sunny with a high in the lower 60s and southerly winds blowing at 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 62 was 17 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 79, set in 1935. The overnight low of 18 was three degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 15, set in 1972.

STATE

Scattered showers over Far South Texas and patches of early morning fog along the Red River Valley and extreme Southeast Texas gave way to mostly fair skies across Texas today.

The National Weather Service reports low-level cloudiness prevailed in Central Texas, Far South Texas and sections of Northeast and North Central Texas early today. Streaks of high-level clouds were over the Trans-Pecos extending into the Hill Country, and into Central Texas.

NATION

Rain dampened eastern parts of the Carolinas and light rain and snow brushed the Pacific Northwest, but the rest of the country stayed dry early today.

Blizzard conditions forced the closure of a 45-mile stretch of Interstate 84 between La Grande and Baker Sunday afternoon, stranding hundreds of motorists in the storm-ravaged northeastern Oregon. The road wasn't opened until this morning, officials said.

Clouds and some fog stretched from eastern Texas to the Atlantic Coast. Clouds also extended from the central and northern Pacific Coast across to the Dakotas and the Great Lakes, while clear skies predominated from Southern California to New Mexico, Colorado and the central Mississippi Valley.

Today's forecast called for scattered snowshowers from northern Vermont and New York state across the upper Great Lakes to northern parts of Minnesota and North Dakota, and in western Montana. Rain was expected to be widespread in the Pacific Northwest. Fair skies were forecast for the rest of the nation.

Pastor says King's work 'unending'

ATLANTA (AP) — Worshippers filling the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s church were admonished today to remember the slain civil rights leader's birthday by rededicating themselves to his work.

"It is our hope and our desire... that we will realize it is an unending quest," said the Rev. Joseph Roberts, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King and his father preached.

Roberts opened the annual ecumenical service that attracted local, state and federal officials to mark the national holiday honoring King. Among those gathered on the podium were members of King's family, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, actress Jane Fonda, Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris and the state's senators and congressmen.

In Boston, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis invoked King's memory when he announced an executive order that will bar the state from buying goods and services from companies that have dealings with the South African government.

In Groton, Conn., 72 demonstrators were arrested on trespassing charges at the Electric Boat shipyard as they protested the construction of Trident nuclear submarines. The demonstrators, many carrying pictures of King and citing his belief in non-violent protest, said the demonstration was held in observance of his birthday.

Elsewhere around the nation, planned observances of the King holiday included the swearing-in of the first blacks on the Dallas County (Ala.) Commission in more than a century. The ceremony was scheduled for Selma, where King began the 1965 Selma-to-Montgomery march that resulted in passage of the Voting Rights Act.

The Liberty Bell in Philadelphia was to be symbolically tapped today and church and school bells were being rung in Michigan. Golfers were to tee off in a suburban Los Angeles tournament benefiting King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The observance at Ebenezer Baptist Church capped a week of remembrance in King's hometown. At the church Sunday, King's widow urged Bush to hold true to his call for "a kinder, gentler nation" and to impose strict sanctions against South Africa.

In addition, Coretta Scott King said in her annual "State of the Dream" speech, the United States must do more by "providing education and economic assistance directly to black South Africans who bear the brunt of suffering in that troubled land."

"I think we ought to take the president-elect at his word and hold him to his call for a kinder, gentler nation where peace and justice are in fact a reality," she said. "But a kinder, gentler nation will require kinder, gentler leaders."

Mrs. King spoke before an estimated 1,200 people at the church where King and his father were co-pastors. It may have been her final "State of the Dream" address as president of The King Center, a memorial and policy center in Atlanta.

On Saturday, she announced that her 27-year-old son, Dexter Scott King, would assume the presidency April 4 — the 21st anniversary of King's assassination at a Memphis, Tenn., motel in 1968.

Today is the fourth year for the King national holiday. In 1983, after considerable debate, Congress named the third Monday in January as a national holiday honoring King, whose actual birthday was Sunday.

Most states also observe Martin Luther King Jr. Day as a state holiday. Among the few that don't is Arizona, where rallies were planned in Phoenix and Tucson and where prospects are uncertain for a measure that lawmakers plan to introduce this year.

"When will those who have been elected to lead our great state into the 21st century finally remove all the suggestions of racial bigotry and narrow, myopic political viewpoints and let this state join the entire nation?" said the Rev. Warren Stewart during a church service in Phoenix on Sunday.

Former Gov. Bruce Babbit created a King holiday for some state employees in 1986 after the Legislature refused to act on a broader bill, but the state attorney general ruled it illegal without legislative action.

Babbit's successor, Evan Mecham, rescinded the order before the first holiday could be celebrated. The uproar helped create a climate that led to Mecham's impeachment and removal from office last year.

Jackson, the former Democratic presidential candidate, was in New York on Sunday where he told about 1,500 people in a Harlem church that too many young blacks are confused about what their civil rights are.

"If you know your history, you'll have a sense of destiny," Jackson said. "If slavery could not stop us...if apartheid could not stop us, nothing can stop us now."

He also urged people to avoid drug abuse.

"That is a civil wrong. Dr. King did not die for your right to sniff cocaine and crack and heroin. Stay the dream. Don't betray the dream," Jackson said.

REAGAN

The Secret Service protection applies to both the president and his wife, Nancy. Should Reagan die, she would receive lifetime protection unless she remarried. The Reagans' children will receive no protection, since they are all adults.

Former Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., who waged a campaign to scale back benefits for former presidents during his Senate career, estimated the cost of the Secret Service protection at $9.3 million in 1986. This covered former Presidents Ford and Carter, but not Nixon, who chose to hire private bodyguards.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see that double in the first year that Reagan is out of office," said Robert Coakley, who was Chiles' staff director and is now on the staff of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

Coakley said the first year out of office is always the most expensive because of equipment purchases.

Also, although Reagan spoke in his final presidential radio address Saturday of going "back to the ranch," he and Mrs. Reagan actually plan to live in a fashionable Los Angeles neighborhood and continue to use their 688-acre ranch north of Santa Barbara as a vacation home. Protecting both places also will increase the cost.

Each former president receives an office allowance of up to $300,000. Reagan already has waiting for him a penthouse suite in a Los Angeles office building, with offices for himself, Mrs. Reagan, the Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation, the Secret Service and press aide Mark Weinberg.

The Washington townhouse, on a side street near the White House, is reserved for the use of former presidents when they come to town, although they do not always use it. President Carter, for instance, stayed in the presidential suite of a hotel about a block away when he came through town on a recent book promotion tour.

In 1986, the Senate passed a Chiles bill to limit Secret Service protection and reduce the office allowances, but it failed to win approval in the House.

Chiles did secure enactment of a bill requiring the private backers who put up the funds to build presidential libraries also to create an endowment to underwrite the cost of running them. There's a catch, though. At the insistence of the administration, the bill exempted the Reagan library, now being built in Simi Valley, Calif.

In addition to the cost of running the library, National Archives spokeswoman Jill Brett said an estimated $500,000 is ticketed for moving Reagan's presidential papers to California and $1.3 million for renovating and equipping storage room for them in the Archives' facility at Laguna Niguel and in rented space at Culver City.

Weinberg said Reagan expects to use only "some limited communications support to facilitate the transition."

James B. McKinney, director of the White House Military Office, which oversees transportation, medical and other services for the president, said those services will be available to the ex-president for six months, but he will have to pay for them.

Reagans' personal finances are hard to measure, since most of his assets are in a blind trust. His latest government financial disclosure form, which discloses assets in broad categories, said only that the trust is worth more than $250,000. The Reagans bought their ranch for $526,000 in 1974 and made $127,000 in improvements to it eight years later. The new home in Los Angeles was purchased for $2.5 million by California friends from whom the Reagans are leasing it for a reported $15,000 a month.

Both of the Reagans plan to write books and make speeches, for which they are expected to command handsome fees.

All in all, if Reagan's presidential limousine turns into a pumpkin at the stroke of noon on Friday, it certainly should be a prize pumpkin.

OATH

Both Lincoln and Roosevelt were in the stovepipe hat era of inaugural dress, which prevailed until 1952, when Dwight Eisenhower opted for homburgs. Kennedy returned to the high silk hat tradition, but more recent presidents have usually worn business suits. President Reagan wore morning clothes, with striped pants and tails, for his first inaugural in 1981.

The weather also has varied. It rained on FDR's inaugurals in 1933 and 1936, as well as on Lincoln's second one in 1866.

In 1909, Washington was in the grip of a blizzard, so William Howard Taft took the oath in the Senate Chamber instead of outside as usual.

In 1961, it was 28 degrees at noon, but the ceremonies went on at the East Front of the Capitol as scheduled. That was when poet Robert Frost, blinded by the sunlight reflected from fallen snow, was unable to read the especially written poem he had brought with him, and summoned up from memory an old one, "The Gift Outright" — "Such as we were, we gave ourselves outright...To the land vaguely realizing westward ..."

In 1984, with the temperatures in the dangerously cold range, Reagan canceled all outdoor activities for his second inaugural.

The New York City Commission on the Bicentennial of the Constitution, which is also observing the bicentennial of Washington's first inauguration, says the best account of it was given by an observer named Willam Maclay. According to Maclay, the father of his country "trembled, and several times could scarce make out to read" as he delivered his address to a joint session of Congress at Federal Hall in New York.

By Washington's second inauguration, after the capital had moved to Philadelphia, he was advised by his Cabinet to hold a simple ceremony in the Senate chamber and travel to it "without form, attended by such gentlemen as he choose." He chose to ride alone, in his carriage.

At Lincoln's inauguration in 1862, according to an observer quoted in Sandburg's biography, "at one point in his speech, Mr. Lincoln was thrown completely off his balance for a moment by a crash not far in front of him, followed by something which for an instant looked like a struggle...a spectator falling out of a tree."

As for Truman, he wrote in his memoirs that the pre-inauguration gathering in the Capitol Rotunda took so long that the Marine Band didn't strike up "Hail to the Chief" until 12:14 p.m., and it wasn't until 12:29 that he actually took the oath.

It didn't matter. He had been president since noon anyway. The Constitution provides that the old president's term ends and the new president's term begins then, not with the speaking of the oath.

TRAINS

The express train was headed north from Dhaka to Tongi, then southeast to Chittagong. The mail train, bound for Dhaka, had just stopped in Tongi.

Officials said many involved in the crash were pilgrims traveling to Tongi, where hundreds of thousands of Moslems have gathered for Biswa Ejtema, or World Congregation, Islam's largest gathering after the Haj in Mecca.

Many involved in the crash were pilgrims traveling to Tongi, where hundreds of thousands of Moslems have gathered for Biswa Ejtema, or world congregation, Islam's second largest pilgrimage after the Haj in Mecca, Saudi Arabia.

"It was a big jolt and minutes later I found myself trapped inside a tilted coach," said Kohinoor Begum, 40, as she waited for treatment at Dhaka's Pangu Hospital for cuts.

Prior to Sunday, the worst train crash in Bangladesh occurred on Jan. 26, 1981, near northern Chuadanga, and killed at least 75 people.

According to government statistics, at least 2,537 train accidents have occurred in Bangladesh in the past 15 years, killing at least 883 people and injuring more than 7,000.

The government appointed a commission to investigate the collision and ordered that the panel's findings be ready within two weeks.

Soldiers, fire officials and villagers pulled at least 100 bodies from the trains on Sunday, and another 10 people died at hospitals, police and railway officials said.

At the scene, sobbing relatives tried to look for loved ones among rows of bodies laid alongside the single track, but were held back by police.

"Oh, God! Bring brother back!" cried Sunil Daniel, pressing his arms against his chest.

Hundreds of injured were taken to hospitals at Tongi, five miles to the north, and to the capital, Dhaka, 22 miles to the south.

Still politicians in the six states passed over for the project — including Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina and Tennessee — are seeking independent confirmation that the site selection was done purely on scientific merits.

"The Texas decision has a strong smell of White House politics," Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said at the time of the November announcement.

A group of Illinois lawmakers suggested the huge population of fire ants could harm the Texas site and that Herrington's recommendation should be reconsidered.

Although the Reagan administration proposed $363 million for the super collider last year, Congress only apportioned $100 million and decreed the funds could not be used for construction.

Patty Hearst pardon being considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly nine years after former President Jimmy Carter commuted Patty Hearst's prison sentence, President Reagan is looking into a possible pardon for the newspaper heiress.

Reagan was asked Sunday on his return to the White House from Camp David whether he planned to pardon Ms. Hearst, who received a seven-year sentence for participating in the armed robbery of a San Francisco bank.

"All of this thing, I have asked everybody to look into this for me," he replied.

He walked into the White House without elaborating.

After Carter commuted her sentence, Ms. Hearst was released from prison Feb. 1, 1979. She had served 23 months.

Ms. Hearst last August made a quiet bid for a pardon, asking for forgiveness for her role in the 1974 robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch.

She has maintained she was brainwashed by the radical Symbionese Liberation Army, a group of self-styled revolutionaries who abducted her in Berkeley, Calif., in February 1974 and orchestrated the bank heist.

BUSH

President Reagan, who has questioned the motives of some civil rights leaders during his eight years in office, had proclaimed the King holiday on Dec. 23 in a statement that said the civil rights leader's "work is not dope, but neither is his witness stilled."

Reagan, who initially opposed the holiday, signed the legislation creating into law in 1985 and made videotaped tributes to King in past years. He had no public appearances on his schedule today.

Bush returned home Sunday after a three-day fishing trip to the Florida Keys.

Cecilio Ruiz, INS officer in charge of the Port Isabel detention camp, oversees 183 officers and a maximum of 425 detainees in the 347-acre detention camp.

INS officer known for humanity in tough job

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — When Cecilio Ruiz was 14, baling hay in Falfurrias, he was arrested by the U.S. border patrol and interrogated for four hours.

An American-born citizen of Mexican descent, Ruiz said. "If I'm a U.S. citizen, why (were) they questioning me?

"I decided, 'There has to be something I can do,' I wanted to make sure that wouldn't happen again."

So he joined the Border Patrol, he says, "to improve their techniques."

Today, after 18 years' service, Ruiz is officer in charge of the Port Isabel detention camp, one of the largest immigration prisons in the country. He oversees 183 officers and a maximum of 425 detainees in the 347-acre camp. Renovations now under way will enlarge the capacity to 850.

Ruiz has been on the receiving end of every immigration emergency in the past 20 years. He was in the anti-smuggling unit in Miami during the 1980 Mariel boat lift, when 120,000 Cubans entered the United States in six months.

He was officer in charge of Miami's Krome detention camp in 1981, when thousands of Haitians arrived, feeling the Duvalier dictatorship.

He transferred to Los Fresnos in 1982, and was met by a wave of Salvadorans fleeing right-wing death squads.

In May 1987, he was made officer in charge of Los Fresnos — just in time to receive a massive influx of Nicaraguans.

"In my 18 years in the immigration service I've seen a lot of things," Ruiz says. "And because of what I've seen, it's made me change...If I can help an alien, I will, if it's within the law."

Even the most bitter critics of the INS have good words for Ruiz. "He's one of the few people in the INS that've been able to stay there for a long time without losing his sense of humanity," says Harlingen attorney Lisa Brodyaga, who has filed numerous lawsuits against the INS.

"When the chips are down and there's a human being on the line, if you're reasonable, he'll be reasonable, which is more than I can say about most people at INS, unfortunately," Brodyaga adds.

Brodyaga founded the Proyecto Libertad law office in 1981 to defend refuge-seekers detained at Los Fresnos. Attorney Jeff Larsen was office director in 1985-86. "I think he's a great guy," says Larsen. "He's honest. He's slightly compassionate. He has a real gruff exterior but a soft heart underneath.

"I think that's why they have so few problems out there, because he's willing to step in and do something. I mean, the Nicaraguans didn't burn down Los Fresnos when the Cubans were burning Oakdale."

Cecilio Ruiz winces at these eulogies. "I try to be fair whether I agree with them or not," he says. "If there's feuding among us, we're not going to get anywhere."

Ruiz has had more than enough feuds. He was a Marine helicopter aerial gunner in Vietnam during the 1968 Tet offensive. "It was a nightmare," he says.

"I volunteer for everything. Ever since I was a kid I wanted to be a Marine, becuase of the dress blues," Ruiz says. "But even as a Marine, I never had the money to buy the dress blues (uniform)."

Though never wounded in Vietnam, Ruiz was not so lucky in the Border Patrol. In 1977, a marijuana smuggler dressed as a priest shot him two times at close range with a .44-Magnum. With two bullets in him, Ruiz chased the smuggler for 17 miles. "I was irritated," he says.

His nose has been broken eight times, and his kneecap once, in job-related injuries.

Today, he is happy to fly a desk. As assistant district director of detention and deportation, Ruiz knows immigration law from the ground up — and he knows the people those laws affect.

"The Cubans were a difficult type," says Ruiz. "A lot of the Marielitos we dealt with were criminal. Not to say they all were."

After Cubans burned prisons at Atlanta and Oakdale in 1986, the Justice Department agreed to review their cases and release those who were rehabilitated. As part of the review, Ruiz went to Talladega, Ala., in November, to interview Cubans detained there.

Five Cubans at Talladega were deported to Cuba last month, the first deportees Fidel Castro has accepted since 1984.

"It was a difficult process," Ruiz says, "since a lot of the records were destroyed during the riots at Oakdale and Atlanta."

One Cuban at Talladega had a history of violence and repeated attempts to escape. He was handcuffed during the hour-long interview. "He was trying to escape from the handcuffs during the interview," says Ruiz.

Any way you look at it, Ruiz says, Los Fresnos "is still a place of detention. Regardless of that, I'm an immigration official and they're an alien that's detained here, it's still my job to take care of them. And nobody's going to harass them while I'm here."

King holiday celebrated with parades, tributes

STATE

Associated Press

Thousands of Texans began celebrating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday with parades and marches this weekend, but state agencies and some schools planned to remain open during the federal holiday Monday.

All federal and many city and county agencies will close Monday in honor of the slain civil rights leader. Most stores and businesses, as well as colleges, will remain open.

King's oldest son, Martin Luther King III, told a Dallas audience that students who must attend class Monday can remember his father in school.

The NAACP planned to demonstrate Monday against the Grand Prairie school district's decision not to close, officials said.

"We'll have signs, we'll have chants and we'll sing some songs just to continue to press this issue," said Lee Alcorn, president of the Grand Prairie chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

But King said he thought his father would challenge a "school system to be a better school system, not necessarily to close it." He did not criticize districts that chose to remain open, but encouraged students to celebrate by "living a day in peace."

King on Saturday encouraged the overhaul of the city's public housing system and urged Dallas residents to move forward with the recommendations made last week by a mayoral commission that studied race relations for nearly a year.

Actress Cicely Tyson gave a reading of portions of King's speeches and other passages relating the black experience to a San Antonio audience of 400 on Saturday night. Ms. Tyson planned a similar appearance in Dallas Monday.

On Monday, the Black Heritage Society in Houston and the North Houston Frontier Club will sponsor a breakfast and parade. With Mayor Kathy Whitmire making a formal city declaration honoring King, the two organizations will also sponsor an afternoon tribute with entertainment and speeches at Hermann Park.

In San Antonio, about 20,000 people will march from four directions to the city's Martin Luther King Plaza Monday morning, said organizer Jaime P. Martinez.

William H. Bywater, vice president of the AFL-CIO and Numonde Ngubo, a representative of the Black African Miners from South Africa, and Mayor Henry Cisneros and County Judge Tom Vickers are scheduled to speak at the plaza.

Second teen arrested in chase accident

DALLAS (AP) — A second Dallas teen-ager was arrested on a murder warrant early today for his alleged role in a police chase that ended in a crash that killed two young officers.

Officers Lisa Sandel and Mark Fleming were killed when their police cruiser went out of control on a rain-slickened street during the Friday night chase. A police recruit riding in the back seat of the car was seriously injured.

On Sunday night, a mother brought her 16-year-old son to police after hearing they wanted to talk to him in connection with the accident. Police arrested a 17-year-old male on a murder warrant after questioning the first teen-ager, said Detective Roy Hodgens.

Both youths have been charged with murder, said Detective J.C. Davis. The 17-year-old was in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in lieu of $100,000 bond. The 16-year-old was in the Dallas County Juvenile Detention Center. Bond has not been set, but police will try to have the teen certified as an adult, Davis said. Charges related to the vehicle's theft were pending, he said.

Hodgens said it was too early to discuss the specific roles the youths may have played in the car theft and chase.

The first teen-ager's surrender came, ironically, just as police and their loved ones were gathering Sunday to mourn the deaths of the two officers.

"Obviously, it would be somewhat of a relief that a suspect is at least being questioned about this," said Sgt. Jim Chandler of the Dallas police public information division following the arrest of a 16-year-old.

"It's hard to accept on its own face that two officers have been killed. When the person that cost or directly resulted in their deaths is out there, you don't feel good about it."

Chandler said a break in the search for someone who might be able to explain how the officers lost control of their car and slammed into an oncoming pickup came after officers recovered a stolen car on Saturday.

"Detectives canvassed the neighborhood and talked to a lot of people out there who provided them with a description," Chandler said. "This juvenile matched this description."

About 200 police officers, their families and city officials gathered Sunday for a 6 p.m. candlelight vigil honoring Sandel and Fleming, who worked in the Southwest Patrol Division.

Many in the group let out an audible sigh when Deputy Chief Terrell Bolton, head of the Southwest Patrol Division, announced at the start of the vigil that a person the officers may have been chasing had been arrested.

Bolton said he though Sandel and Fleming would like fellow officers to remember them for their hard work and would like the police force to continue doing the best job possible, despite the risks.

"We don't know if we're going to make it home or not," Bolton said. "But we accept that challenge."

Lawmakers would outlaw abortions, activists say

AUSTIN (AP) — An abortion rights leader says her group may have a fight on its hands to convince lawmakers in the future not to rewrite the state's abortion statutes and that her group will work to change the lineup of individuals who might make such a decision.

Phyllis Dunham, executive director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, agreed that the current Texas legislature probably will outlaw abortions if such given a chance by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court agreed last week to revisit the Roe vs. Wade case, a Dallas lawsuit that led to the landmark ruling establishing a woman's right to abortion.

Before the Roe vs. Wade case challenged Texas' abortion law in 1973, the statute was known as one of the toughest in the United States. It remained virtually unchanged since it went on the books in 1854 and permitted abortion only when a woman's life was endangered.

The Supreme Court's decision on the abortion matter is not expected until summer or fall, after the 71st Legislature adjourns.

Ms. Dunham said the 1990 elections are a chance to choose lawmakers that more accurately mirror public sentiment about abortion.

"As far as the Texas Legislature is concerned, in their attitudes toward abortion they are much more conservative — anti-abortion — than their constituents," she said. "The vast majority of them are Anglo males from affluent backgrounds who may not be able to understand...the drastic effect limiting access to abortion has on women's lives."

Activists on both sides of the issue believe most current Texas lawmakers, if given a chance by the U.S. Supreme Court, would ban abortion as long as there were exceptions for rape and incest or to save the woman's life.

"I think we'd put it back on the book," Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. Kubiak, an abortion opponent, said his interest is due partly to his adopted children.

Ms. Dunham said she expects a "tremendous fight."

"We probably have nine to 11 pro-choice votes in the Senate (among 31 members), maybe 40 to 50 votes in the (150-member) House," Ms. Dunham said. "Draw your own conclusions. It looks grim."

Archaeologists uncover rich trove of mosaics in Cyprus

By KERIN HOPE

PAPHOS, Cyprus (AP) — Archaeologists have unearthed 100 exquisite mosaic floors of mythological and geometric design from the glory years of Paphos as a rich Roman trading port, and may find as many more.

British soldiers discovered the first floor, depicting Hercules about to attack a lion, while digging an air-raid shelter in 1942. They covered it up again.

The mosaics, made of thumbnail-sized cubes of sawn stone called tesserae, decorated wealthy Cypriot homes when Paphos was the capital of the eastern Mediterranean island more than 2,000 years ago.

"They were the ancient equivalent of a fitted carpet, and a status symbol" of the rich "in the rooms where they entertained," said Demetrios Michaelides, the government archaeological officer in charge of the 950,000-square-yard site."

He said in an interview there may be "more than another 100 mosaics on the site."

A second chance find 20 years after the soldiers uncovered Hercules and the lion led to systematic digging by archaeologists.

They unearthed a mansion filled with mosaics and called it the House of Dionysus because the god of wine and revelry was prominent in the decorations.

Three other mansions with spectacular mosaic floors have been found in recent years, one so lavish it eventually was identified as the palace of the Roman governor.

"It's surprising to find a highly developed mosaic art in Cyprus at a point when it was really one of the empire's provincial backwaters," said Christina Kondoleon, professor of art at Williams College of Williamstown, Mass., who is publishing a book on the discoveries.

"The designs are lively and creative...Mosaicists copied each other and used pattern books, but these are often original, with a very wide color range," she said in a telephone interview.

Naturalistic figures are surrounded by borders in floral and geometric designs that are based on classical architecture and intended to give a three-dimensional effect.

Scholars agree the mosaics were made of local stone by craftsmen influenced by the sophisticated styles of mosaic workshops in Antioch on the coast of nearby Syria.

Michaelides said many were laid during a period of great prosperity in the late 2nd and early 3rd centuries.

One of the finest shows Orpheus, a mythological musician whose playing was said to tame wild beasts, seated on a rock performing with his lyre for an audience of animals — a tiger, leopard, deer and several others.

It measures 13½ feet by 16 feet, 4 inches. The colors are a subtle range of grays, pinks and browns.

A later series, again of Dionysus and his followers in luminous colored robes, dates from the middle of the 4th century, when Christianity was gaining adherents in Cyprus.

Ms. Kondoleon said the Dionysus mosaics "are certainly making an anti-Christian statement, reasserting the old pagan values."

The Paphos mosaics have become the island's biggest tourist resource, attracting more than 250,000 visitors a year, but it will be years before all are on show.

Michaelides said the "difficulties and expense of conserving and displaying mosaics mean you can't go out and dig one up whenever you want."

Gauze and sacking are glued to a mosaic to keep the tesserae in place, then it is cut out of the ground.

Last summer, the Orpheus mosaic was lifted in one piece by experts from the Getty Conservation Institute in Los Angeles, who rolled it around a wooden drum to help keep it intact.

"Usually you cut the mosaic up in panels on the site and reassemble it later, but this way there's less danger of damaging it," Nicholas Stanley Price, the archaeologist who supervised the operation, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

This part of a mosaic floor, depicting a goat feeding on tree leaves while shepherd's pipes hang from a nearby branch, covers the floor of an ancient mansion in the Cypriot city of Paphos. Archaeologists have unearthed 100 of the exquisite floors, dating from the glory years of Paphos, when it was a rich Roman trading port more than 2,000 years ago.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

it'ə-ra'tiv

iterative — (adjective) Edgar Allen Poe's "The Bells" is an "iterative" poem, called that because it involves repetition or reiteration. In Poe's poem, the phrase "the bells, bells, bells" is repeated continually throughout the poem. The word "iterative" has been traced to the Middle French word "iteratif," which is derived from the Late Latin word, "iterativus," meaning "frequentative." Can you name any other "iterative" poems or songs?

GEORGE BUSH: A MIDLAND SCRAPBOOK

This special section will be published Friday in conjunction with the Inauguration of George H.W. Bush as 41st President of the United States.

Focusing on the years spent in Midland and the Permian Basin by Bush and his family, the special INAUGURAL will focus on Bush as a young businessman, a family man, civic leader and politician.

Included:

- Current exclusive interviews with George & Barbara Bush
- How former Midland Associates of Bush (and current ones) remember his Midland years
- The role Midland and some Midlanders played in Bush's early political career
- Plus photographs from the family's personal collection of the Bush family, dating back to the 1950's

Look for it...

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush's choice of a moderate, pragmatic cabinet means the confirmation process that begins this week will lack the ideological overtones of the Reagan years and instead offer debate on substantive issues.

The Democrats who control Congress are likely to use the sessions to force Bush's nominees to say how they will carry out their boss' campaign promises to tend to neglected social programs in a time of extreme fiscal austerity, and to test the strength of Bush's no-new-taxes pledge.

"They will want to build a record for why new revenues are going to be needed," said Charles Cook, a Washington political analyst. "The Democrats are going to let the nominees build their case for them."

Initial reactions on Capitol Hill to Bush's cabinet selections have been generally positive. The majority of those named are veterans of federal government service. Three are holdovers from the Reagan administration, five others have been previously confirmed by the Senate for other jobs, and four are former members of Congress.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, has said he is impressed with the appointees as a group and expects the Senate to work well with them.

"They are generally experienced, hopefully pragmatic people, and we won't have the rigid ideology of the first Reagan term," Mitchell said. "I am trying very hard to establish from our side an atmosphere of cooperation and bipartisanship."

Mitchell said he will seek speedy confirmation for the appointees following committee scrutiny, with the first batch going to the Senate floor for votes on Jan. 25.

The most grumbling about Bush's choices has come from the Republican Party's right wing, which complains that the nominees are too non-ideological and fears that they will abandon the path laid down by Reagan. But other than some occasional tough rhetoric, most conservatives are unlikely to try to make trouble for their party's new administration.

Rejection of a presidential cabinet nominee is rare. Since the birth of the republic just eight cabinet appointees have been voted down by the Senate, which has the power to do so under the Constitution. The last instance came in 1959, when President Eisenhower's choice for commerce secretary, Lewis L. Strauss, was rejected on a 49-46 vote.

The Constitution does not establish a formal cabinet for the president, but it has developed through custom dating back to George Washington. Also by custom, the Senate largely defers to the president in the choice of his official family. Rejections of appointees have generally come not over policy differences, but amid political tiffs between the White House and Congress.

Beginning this week with secretary of state-designate James A. Baker III, Elizabeth Dole, Bush's choice to head the Labor Department, and Richard G. Darman, the new budget director, Congress will quiz the appointees in an effort to discern where Bush will depart from the policies of Reagan, whose relations with the Hill often were rocky.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee opens hearings on Baker Tuesday. On Thursday the Senate Labor Committee begins hearings on Mrs. Dole and the Senate Government Operations Committee begins hearings on Darman.

From Baker, members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will likely want to know what the new administration will do about helping to find peace in Central America — and in particular how to treat Nicaragua's moribund Contra rebels; what will be done to ease Third World debt; how to pursue further arms reductions with the Soviet Union; and how to breathe life into Middle East peace efforts.

Dole will have jurisdiction over issues that Bush made keys to his "kinder, gentler nation" pledge, including parental leave and adjustments in the minimum wage.

Darman's appearance before the Governmental Affairs Committee will be Congress' first shot at finding out what might be in the budget plan Bush is expected to submit in February.

Panel members will be looking for clues about the new administration's budget priorities and how it will address the deficit. Specifically, they will be probing for whether Bush's promise not to raise taxes might have loopholes that would provide revenues to finance pet programs.

And since the Office of Management and Budget also oversees government regulation, members will be asking about health, safety and environmental matters.

In the next few weeks, attention will focus on hearings for former Sen. John Tower, Bush's choice for secretary of defense; Robert Mosbacher, to be commerce secretary; former Rep. Jack Kemp, to head Housing and Urban Development; Samuel Skinner, Transportation; Louis W. Sullivan, Health and Human Services; Clayton Yeutter, Agriculture; former Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, Veterans Affairs; former Rep. Manuel Lujan Jr., Interior; and retired Adm. James D. Watkins, Energy.

Other appointees of cabinet rank include Carla Hills, who had been HUD secretary in the Ford administration, as trade representative, and former Education Secretary William Bennett as "drug czar."

Tower's pre-nomination difficulties attracted media attention, but the charges of womanizing, drinking and coziness with the defense industry have been blunted by an FBI probe that apparently gave Bush no reason not to name him. Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., has warned that "we're not going to play the old-boy game this time around" with Tower, but will ask probing questions and want to know as well about whom Tower will enlist as Pentagon subordinates.

Three current cabinet members — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos — are holdovers in the new administration and will not require new Senate confirmation.

Family dies after falling through ice

BANGOR, Pa. (AP) — Four skaters, including a mother and her two young children, died after they fell into a frigid lake despite a fisherman's efforts to save them and signs warning of thin ice, authorities said.

"I ran over there and my first reaction was to get those kids out," said Carmen Gruppo, 37, who went to their aid Sunday afternoon on Minsi Lake.

"I grabbed a piece of rope and tried to work my way out as close as I could. Upon getting pretty close to them, I ended up falling in also," said Gruppo, who was pulled out on a ladder by firefighters. The others were pulled out by divers.

Carolee A. Strunk, 27, her children, April, 8, and Jared, 5, and the children's playmate, SaraAnn Bowers, 8, all of East Bangor, were walking across the lake when the ice cracked underneath them, authorities said.

The group had planned to go skating at the popular ice-fishing spot 65 miles north of Philadelphia, said Monroe County Coroner Robert Allen.

The four were in the water about 35 minutes before they were rescued, and clung to life up to nine hours after the accident, officials said.

They fell through the ice about 150 yards from shore, said Capt. Darryl Moser of the Portland Ambulance Corps diving unit.

Gruppo said he threw a rope toward the victims but it was too short.

"They were trying to reach the rope but couldn't," he said from his Bangor home after treatment for hypothermia. "I was basically as helpless as they were."

Work of Dr. King for all people

Martin Luther King Jr., the slain civil rights leader whose birthday is observed with a federal holiday today, helped to focus the nation's attention on the rampant prejudice and bigotry that existed. In doing so, he earned the respect — and the hatred — of differing segments of the American population. What he did took courage. He showed it without fail and should be remembered today for doing what millions of others might have thought of doing, but failed to do.

What King did he did for blacks, but also for Mexican-Americans, Orientals, American Indians, even Anglos. He fought prejudice, racial bigotry and injustice. He fought them because they are wrong and because they were stifling the nation, sapping its beauty and glory.

King envisioned a world of equal opportunity, one in which — in the words of his immortal "I Have a Dream" speech delivered in Washington, D.C. in 1963 — "my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

That is not a dream for any particular race of man, but for all mankind.

Although King's forthright action brought the nation face-to-face with the matter of racial inequality and prejudice, the causes for which he worked and suffered are not completed even today — more than two decades after his death. Progress has been made along the road leading to the society of which he dreamed but that day still has not dawned.

That's why it's important to remember and honor King, but also to remember the life work to which he was so committed. The work must go on. It must live in every American because the work of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was performed for every American.

Only in a world of social and racial equality will each of us be treated as equals.

Another View:

On Wednesday night President Reagan recounted the story of an Indochinese refugee calling from his crammed and leaky boat to a crewman on the carrier Midway: "Hello, American sailor — Hello, Freedom Man." Yet his administration proposes to make room for more Soviet refugees mostly by lowering the quota for Southeast Asians.

This juxtaposition of Mr. Reagan's reverential rhetoric and his own aides' slashing of quotas mocks the spirit of U.S. refugee policy. It also offers the worst solution to a difficult, delicate problem.

Under the 1980 Refugee Act, foreigners who can demonstrate "a well-founded fear of persecution" are entitled to permanent sanctuary. Thousands are admitted under annual allotments for various areas. The ceilings fluctuate with changing world conditions and with funds available for benefits after the refugees arrive.

For the current year, the administration proposed to admit 90,000 refugees. Of these, 53,000 were to come from Asia, about half from Vietnam and half from "first asylum" countries like Thailand, where Indochinese refugees have languished while awaiting resettlement.

The administration also proposed to admit 18,000 refugees from the Soviet Union. But new Soviet openness, and unrest in the Caucasus, has prompted many more, particularly Soviet Jews and Armenians, to apply for admission. As an interim measure, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh has agreed to use his discretionary "parole" authority to admit up to 2,000 additional Soviets a month for several months. These parolees get no special benefits.

Now the administration proposes to go further and shift 7,000 refugee slots from other places to increase the Soviet quota. It says that the slots will come mainly from unused allocations for political prisoners not yet released by Vietnam. But why send Hanoi a signal that seems to say the United States has lost interest in their release? Besides, there are three better ways to accommodate the Soviets without hurting the Vietnamese.

- Raise the overall ceiling for refugees and ask Congress to allocate additional funds or seek money from private organizations.
- Encourage more Soviets to apply for entry as immigrants who might qualify under family or occupational preferences.
- Consult quickly with Congress and create another standard for entry that would be less demanding than the fear of persecution but more compelling than the desire for economic improvement.

In his speech, Mr. Reagan referred to America as "still a beacon, still a magnet for those who must have freedom." Unfortunately, Mr. Reagan's policy fails to match his rhetoric. It's George Bush's turn to relight the beacon.

JACK ANDERSON

Nixon should have handled Gadhafi

WASHINGTON — If Moammar Gadhafi has become a pain in the American derriere, we can thank Richard Nixon, who likes to boast that, whatever his inadequacies, he guided U.S. foreign policy with uncommon skill.

Jack Anderson

It is worth recalling, therefore, how he handled Gadhafi's arrival on the world stage. Gadhafi was a 28-year-old communications lieutenant when he overthrew the legitimate government of Libya in 1969.

He headed a band of young conspirators, representing no constituency in particular, who usurped power at gunpoint. By an Arabian Nights ruse, they got the palace guards drunk, carried them off to prison, then crept through the darkened streets in the wee hours to arrest the key leaders.

Gadhafi displaced a constitutional government, which had succeeded ages of foreign rule and imposed puppets. King Idris I had followed a pro-Western policy and became the preeminent oil supplier of several NATO countries. Overnight, Gadhafi tore up existing treaties, proclaimed his alignment with radical Arab states and indulged in radical rhetoric and posturings.

The young pretender displayed all the symptoms of deep hostility toward the United States. The second day after the coup, the revolutionary junta demanded that Wheelus Air Force Base, then the centerpiece of the U.S. defense system in the Mediterranean, suspend flight operations temporarily. The purpose was to block any arrivals or departures not under junta control.

The United States immediately complied, thus according sovereignty to what was merely a splinter group of pretenders.

Shortly after the junta, the U.S. Air Force rescued a Libyan Jew from Gadhafi's clutches by hiding him in a crate supposedly carrying musical instruments and flying him safely to Malta. The junta raised a howl when the escape was discovered. The United States, which in a more robust age would have gloried in the deed, officially apologized and agreed to allow more Libyan controls at Wheelus.

Not long afterward, the United States meekly closed down its most important foreign base at Gadhafi's request.

We have it from Nixon's then-national security adviser, Henry Kissinger, that the U.S. government debated within itself whether to accept or reject the Gadhafi seizure of power and that Kissinger had analyses made of various actions that could be taken against it.

The Central Intelligence Agency insisted that it would be simple to engineer a coup and replace Gadhafi with a leader more friendly to the West. What's more, the United States could have acted not as a conqueror, but as a defender of the lawful government, interceding at its request.

What then, with the redoubtable Richard Nixon at bat, was the rationale behind what Kissinger would later confess as his administration's passivity in Libya?

The State Department's explanation, given in a Senate inquiry, was that there was a local intelligence failure which made misjudgements unavoidable. Kissinger's suggestion is probably more accurate. He said that the lower echelons of the U.S. foreign policy apparatus were softheaded about America's true interests and had a schoolboy's crush on left-wing revolutionaries.

Or, as Kissinger put it, "The working level of our government, especially in the State Department, operated on the romantic view that Third World radicalism was really frustrated Western liberalism."

TERRORIST WAR — The existence of a chemical weapons plant in Libya is a danger, but not because Moammar Gadhafi would embroil his country in a declared war with a chemical arsenal. The worry is that Gadhafi, the darling of international terrorists, will supply chemical weapons to them. The low cost of chemical weapons makes them attractive to terrorists. Chemical weapons can also be smuggled into a target area without detection. And the United States is a wide-open target area. In fact, one expert has warned the Secret Service that a terrorist, posing as a tourist, could stroll through the White House with a tour group and leave behind a poison that would kill everyone in the building.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The United States gave El Salvador $537 million in aid last year, but apparently the dollar doesn't buy what it used to. The Salvadoran judicial system has failed to protect citizens of that country from brutal abuses by the government. Murders in which the military is a prime suspect go unresolved — the most blatant case being the murder of Archbishop Oscar Romero in 1980. It is time that the United States demanded more satisfaction for its money. Our government has become the rich old uncle, a soft touch who doesn't ask any questions. Except that Uncle Sam's wealth is a thing of the past.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Cordie Mae's diet lets you eat your heart out

Everybody and his fat sister-in-law is trying to lose weight.

I must see 15 different diet programs advertised during just one night of television.

That's fine, but aren't there some people out there who want to gain weight? I see skinny people everyday.

Grizzard

These people look pale, sickly, underfed and they couldn't be happy looking like that.

But nobody helps them. Nobody offers a gain-weight diet. At least I haven't seen one, so I've decided to help.

I phoned an old schoolmate of mine, the former Cordie Mae Poovey, who still weighs more than the mobile home in which she lives with her devoted husband, Hog Philpott. (Hog's no lightweight himself. Down at Mudd's Gulf, where he works, they refer to Hog as "Al." Al as in Alps.)

As for Cordie Mae, the stork didn't bring her. UPS did. It took the entire plane.

Cordie Mae can look at a bowl of mashed potatoes and sprout a new 45-pound arm. She tried to visit Rhode Island once but they wouldn't let her in. There wasn't enough room.

(I would steal Rodney Dangerfield's line here, but I'm not that kind of person. So I'll give him credit for saying he went out with a girl who was so fat when she wore watches on each of her wrists they were in different time zones.)

I told Cordie Mae of the plight of skinny people and she agreed to share her county-wide, famous "When-Your-Arms-Get-Tired-of-Shoveling-in-the-Food-Then-Eat-With-Your-Fee t-Bloatation Diet."

"Just give us a typical one-week program," I said.

"I'd be happy to," said Cordie Mae, reaching into her icebox for a quart of lard on which to snack while she dictated her gain-weight diet. Clip and save the following:

MONDAY: Breakfast, a dozen eggs, six cinnamon rolls, a chocolate cake, then go to Shoney's for the breakfast buffet. Lunch, a jar of mayonnaise, three Wendy's double cheeseburgers, four grape snowcones, and a gross of Butterfingers. Dinner, a barbecued goat, hold the mayo. You've had enough of that for lunch.

TUESDAY: Breakfast, a dozen chocolate Dove bars, a liter of Pepsi, and whatever was left of the barbecued goat. Lunch, call Dominos for pizza. Order their entire inventory. Dinner, a Waffle House.

WEDNESDAY: Breakfast, a tub of grits (with butter), four vanilla milkshakes and one pork chop for every year you've been able to vote. Lunch, all the pork chops you want, no limit. Dinner, what the heck. Eat another barbecued goat.

THURSDAY: Breakfast, a dozen Twinkies, and then go to Baskin-Robbins for some real food. Lunch, some munchies from Kroger. The entire aisle. Dinner, a gallon of mashed potatoes and a banana-split salad.

FRIDAY: Breakfast, two boxes of donuts, and a jar of peanut butter mixed with whipped cream. Lunch, fill up the back of your truck at the McDonald's drive-through window. Dinner, one large buffalo cooked any way you want.

SATURDAY: Just lay around the trailer all day and relax with a vat of banana pudding.

SUNDAY: A day of rest. Send your husband or wife out for tacos, and stop by the Chinese place for egg rolls and then go to the deli for potato salad and cheesecake. And if a chicken walks through your house, knock it in the head and fry it in case The Colonel is closed when you need a midnight snack.

Cordie Mae says good luck — and good gaining.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Jan. 16, the 16th day of 1989. There are 349 days left in the year. This is Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a federal holiday honoring the civil rights leader.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 16, 1978, NASA named 35 candidates to fly on the space shuttle. The list included Sally K. Ride, America's first woman in space; Guion S. Bluford Jr., America's first black astronaut; and four people fated to die in the Challenger disaster: Francis R. Scobee, Judith A. Resnik, Ronald E. McNair and Ellison S. Onizuka.

On this date:

In 1547, Ivan the Terrible was crowned czar of Russia.

In 1883, the U.S. Civil Service Commission was established.

In 1920, America went "dry" as the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution took effect, and Prohibition became the law of the land.

In 1942, actress Carole Lombard, her mother and about 20 other people were killed when their plane crashed near Las Vegas, during a tour to promote war bonds.

In 1944, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower took command of the Allied Invasion Force in London.

In 1964, the musical "Hello, Dolly!" starring Carol Channing, opened on Broadway.

In 1969, two manned Soviet Soyuz spaceships became the first vehicles to dock in space and transfer personnel.

In 1981, in Northern Ireland, Protestant gunmen shot and wounded Irish nationalist leader Bernadette Devlin McAliskey and her husband.

In 1987, Broadway columnist Earl Wilson died in Yonkers, N.Y., at age 79.

Ten years ago: Following a year that saw his country racked by political turmoil and violence, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi departed Iran for Egypt, leaving behind a civilian government in control; he would never return.

Five years ago: In a generally conciliatory speech, President Reagan declared "1984 is a year of opportunities" for peace, and he called on the Soviet Union to revive nuclear arms talks.

One year ago: Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder was fired as a CBS Sports commentator, one day after making controversial remarks about blacks to a Washington TV station, including the assertion that, during the era of slavery, blacks had been bred to produce stronger offspring.

CHARLEY REESE

Holocaust Center rallying point for ideals

When I wrote my annual conflict of interest column, I saved the one organization of which I am an active member for a column all to itself.

It is the Holocaust Resource Center of Orlando, Fla.

Charley Reese

This is a tremendously important organization created by survivors of the Holocaust and more than anyone else by a remarkable survivor, Tess Wise.

Of course as soon as you mention the word Holocaust, some people will say why do Jews want to dwell on the past or what's the use of dredging up old Nazi crimes against Jews?

For one thing, Jews don't and don't want to dwell on the past anymore than anyone else. For another, the study of the Holocaust is not an exclusively Jewish project. For a third, the ominous significance of the Holocaust affects all people. For a fourth, studying the past is the only rational way to understand the present and to make any reasonable predictions about the future.

The Holocaust was not a freak of history, a one-time atrocity brought about by chance combination of events. It was the most significant occurrence in the 20th century — a climax of trends, an ominous portent of a possible, nightmarish future.

The work of the Holocaust Center and of other organizations is not mere remembrance. It is the work of advancing the cause of human rights here, today and in the future. As post-Holocaust events have unfolded, it has become frighteningly clear that studying the Holocaust grows ever more urgent with each passing day.

One facet of the premeditated murder of six million Jews is that when an evil government set out to commit a monstrous crime, decent governments, for reasons of expediency, did nothing about it. That pattern continues to repeat itself. In the 1970s Pol Pot, a communist fanatic, exterminated two and half million people in Cambodia — a third of the population. The decent governments did nothing but follow the usual pattern of denial and then mild, words-only reaction. We in the United States even witnessed the appalling act of our representative to the United Nations, during the Carter administration, arguing that Pol Pot's was the "legitimate government."

Once more, adherence to legalism rather than a sense of justice and political expediency rather human compassion gave an evil man a free pass. Once more, lip service to high faluting principles was matched against bullets and clubs. The bullets and clubs killed their intended victims. The lip service to high faluting principles did not save them. The pretentious, and totally phony, framework of international law and international organizations did not save them. Cambodians were murdered as easily in the 1970s as Genghis Khan once murdered centuries ago. So much for the pretense of human progress.

Studying the Holocaust — and more importantly, seeing to it that it is not erased from public consciousness as in George Orwell's "1984" where history was constantly revised to meet present political objectives, is the main work of the Holocaust Center.

Studying the Holocaust lets you see the 20th century as it is, not as various political and governmental and economic interests would have you think it is. The sight is bloody awful. Arrayed on one side are the horribly effective acts of evil and on the other, the horribly ineffective response of the democracies.

Enormous bureaucracies have evolved in the 20th century which can crush humans the way a millstone grinds corn and vomit lies like an erupting volcano. Evil ideologies have taken root and spread which view humans as mere units of a whole, all expendable. And one of several legacies of the Nazis — the idea of killing as social therapy — hangs on like an evil vapor.

Only individuals can possess ideals and the courage to put them into action. Never before have individuals been up against such enormous forces. Simply to assert ideals is today a heroic act. The Holocaust Center is one rallying point for such individuals.

Fires in three states kill 20

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A house fire killed seven people, including two who made it within inches of safety but were blocked by a locked door, said authorities, who found the bodies at their feet when they forced open the door.

The fire at the rooming house here was one of five in the nation during the past two days in which 20 people died. A predawn fire today destroyed a rooming house in Niles, Mich., killing at least five residents, police said.

Three fires in eastern Missouri killed eight, including a family of five who died trying to escape a blaze that destroyed their mobile home.

The badly burned bodies of the two men in Yonkers were found just behind the front door of the three-story house, said Fire Commissioner William McLaughlin.

The bodies tumbled onto the stoop when firefighters forced open the door, he said.

Eight other people were injured in Sunday morning's fire, which burned out of control for 2½ hours, officials said.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Many of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, authorities said.

The fire was the worst in Yonkers since 1965, when nine children and three adults died in a blaze.

The fire also left 10 people homeless, including an 8-year-old child, said Sam Delapena of the Westchester County Red Cross. One of them was given shelter in a motel and the others were taken in by friends or relatives.

Marcos back in hospital

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos was in guarded condition with pneumonia after entering St. Francis Medical Center for the third time in little more than a month, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 71-year-old Marcos, also suffering from bronchial asthma, returned to the hospital Sunday afternoon, said nursing supervisor Cindy Miller.

He was moved to intensive care, according to Marcos spokesman Gemmo Trinidad. Ms. Miller said she was unauthorized to confirm that.

Marcos' doctors, who have been monitoring his condition since he was last released from the hospital Jan. 5, made the decision that he should return, Trinidad said.

Marcos' wife, Imelda, was with him at the hospital, Trinidad said.

His two previous hospital stays, one for nine days and the other for seven, were for treatment of congestive heart failure, his doctors said.

Dolphin begins training

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A young dolphin that has refused to leave Broad Bay's chilly waters for six weeks despite two federal rescue attempts is being trained to survive the winter.

"Because he's young, he would normally be in a herd of dolphins and depend on the experience of older animals for guidance," Joseph R. Geraci, a U.S. Marine Mammal Commission veterinarian, said Sunday.

"Without that guidance, his greatest need as I see it is for social contact. Being in cold water, he also needs a lot of food."

Dolphin trainer Richard L. Trout has begun school for the young animal, nicknamed "Rascal" by residents.

Trout, who has trained the sea mammals for 15 years, raps on the side of his boat three times to bring Rascal to the surface. When the dolphin surfaces, Trout tosses him a sea trout or herring. Rather than gobble the treat, Rascal bounces it on his nose or kicks it with his tail.

Inaugural cake planned

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Amid the preparations for President-elect Bush's inauguration, George Montilio takes the cake.

Actually, he'll be taking about 20,000 boxed cakes to the nation's capital for Friday's festivities.

"We put the call in to the inaugural committee and asked them if we could do the cake and they called back and said, 'Sure, we'd love it,'" said Montilio, whose father used Washington connections to provide confections at President Reagan's 1980 inauguration.

Baking the presidential pastries should be completed by Wednesday, said Montilio. Montilio's Bakery's contributions will be 4-by-5-inch individual white cakes with buttercream frosting.

The ingredients: 800 pounds of flour, 28 pounds of baking powder, 72 ounces of cream of tartar, 12 pounds of salt, 72 gallons of milk, 480 pounds of butter and shortening, 480 egg whites, 1,000 pounds of sugar and 7 pounds of vanilla.

Outgoing interior chief hits environmentalists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel is leaving Washington convinced that leaders of environmental organizations are much too partisan and out of touch with their members.

Hodel also said in a farewell interview that he believes the global warming called the "greenhouse effect" has been overblown, and the cost of cleaning up the nation's nuclear weapons plants has been overstated.

Hodel said he was "delighted and astounded" that the losing Democratic campaign of Michael Dukakis argued, in Hodel's words, that "you don't have to choose between an improving environment and an adequate energy and minerals supply; you can do both" — his own position.

The environmentalists who attacked President Reagan's first interior secretary, James Watt, whom Hodel served as deputy, were "the anti-can-do-both" people, Hodel said.

Hodel often has been called a smoother version of Watt, following the same policies but without the rancor. Asked if he were a "Watt policy clone," he replied, "I hope so, because we worked for the same man," Ronald Reagan.

Watt's critics "were the people who said we had to choose between improving our environment and the lifestyle of the American people. They were the ones who had foisted the idea off on the Carter administration that we were going to have to live with less, that there was a malaise in the country, that the United States' glory days were behind us."

Hodel said many leaders of environmental organizations "made a horrible mistake" when they endorsed Carter for re-election in a White House Rose Garden ceremony in 1980.

"I think if their membership understood how blatantly partisan the paid leadership was, the membership would demand that something be done," Hodel said.

Few environmental leaders made an endorsement in the just-concluded campaign, though some attacked the record of the Reagan administration and George Bush.

The leaders are "single-issue people," Hodel said, but "the bulk of the membership really does believe we can do both. They are responsible, dedicated supporters of wildlife, clean air, clean water and the environment."

Hodel's complaint was scoffed at by two environmental organizations.

"When I joined the Wilderness Society in January 1981, the same month the Reagan administration took office, we had 40,000 members. We now have 240,000," said former Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., the society's counselor.

"Every single environmental organization in the United States has significantly increased its membership," Nelson said.

Dave Baker, political director of Friends of the Earth, said, "Our membership votes with their dollars...I think our membership does believe you can do both (enhance the economy and protect the environment), but I don't think Don Hodel and the administration have done much to promote that."

Hodel, however, insisted that self-styled public interest groups have been taken over by "single-issue politicians."

He said that in the early 1980s it was clear that the impending release of much natural gas from price controls would mean falling prices because demand had fallen below production.

"The consumer lobby continued to insist that price controls were necessary to 'protect the consumer.' And I don't think it had anything to do with 'protecting the consumer.' It has to do with a regulatory frame of mind that these people have, which is: They want the government, which they as single-interest politicians can influence, in control of the market because then they can skew it for their purposes when they need to."

Some gas was decontrolled and prices did fall. The Reagan administration has not succeeded in persuading Congress to free the remaining 40 percent of gas still under controls.

Hodel said he believes that nuclear waste cleanup costs faced by the Energy Department probably have been overstated.

"When you hear $360 billion estimates or whatever the number is, that includes cleanup way beyond what is necessary for health and safety," he said.

The Energy Department has estimated it needs $81 billion through 2010 for cleanup and modernization.

Positive attitude, exercise may slow AIDS destruction

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Positive thinking, exercise, support from friends and other ways of reducing stress may help AIDS victims slow the disease's progression, researchers said.

But some AIDS researchers at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science cast doubt on the theory.

"The jury is still out," said Janice Kiecolt-Glaser, a clinical psychologist at the Ohio State University College of Medicine.

"We encourage people (infected with the AIDS virus) to do things that may be helpful and certainly can't be harmful," such as exercising, getting adequate sleep and nutrition and avoiding drugs and alcohol, said Dr. Karl Goodkin, a psychiatrist at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

But he said Sunday undue optimism that a positive outlook might slow progression of AIDS could spur people infected by acquired immune deficiency syndrome to blame themselves wrongly when their condition worsens.

Within the last decade, studies have shown stress can affect the development and course of upper respiratory infections, mononucleosis, herpes simplex, rheumatoid arthritis and skin, breast and cervical cancer.

In that light, Dr. Ronald Glaser, chairman of immunology at the Ohio State medical college, said it's not surprising to theorize that psychological factors may play a role in the progression of symptom-free AIDS infection to AIDS-related complex to fully developed AIDS.

Blood and psychological tests on 18 AIDS patients found that those who exercised, were assertive and had lower levels of tension, depression, fatigue, stress and anger also tended to have higher numbers of disease-fighting immune system cells, according to a study by Lydia Temoshok, a psychologist at the University of California, San Francisco, and George Solomon, a UCLA psychiatry professor.

AIDS cripples the immune system, leaving people susceptible to fatal infections and cancer.

University of Miami psychologist Michael Antoni measured various signs of psychological and immune system functioning among 39 symptom-free homosexual males at various times before and after tests revealed if they were infected by the AIDS virus. Some of the men had been participating in a 10-week aerobic exercise program while others had not.

Among those who turned out to be AIDS-infected, the exercisers had higher levels of certain immune system white blood cells. Men who were better at venting their emotions and seeking social support also had better signs of immune system performance, Antoni said.

King's widow, college wrangle over papers

BOSTON (AP) — As Martin Luther King Jr.'s message of peace and justice is remembered today, his widow is fighting Boston University over 83,000 documents left by the slain civil rights leader.

Coretta Scott King sued her husband's alma mater in December 1987, seeking return of the papers, which include early glimmerings of his "I Have a Dream" speech, a prescribed diet and hate mail. She insists they belong with the rest of the King archives at the King Center in Atlanta.

Boston University, in turn, sued Mrs. King. The private school claims it is the rightful owner of all King papers, including the 100,000 in Atlanta.

Efforts at an out-of-court settlement failed, details of which neither party will disclose. Instead, both sides want a trial to settle the matter. But they disagree on what issues the trial should decide. The dispute is now before state Appeals Court Judge Christopher Armstrong.

King earned his doctorate in theology at Boston University in 1955. It was there he met his future wife, a music student.

In 1964, the year he won the Nobel Peace Prize, King wrote to Boston University that on his death the university would be "the repository of my correspondence, manuscripts and other papers."

Four years later, he was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn. He would have been 60 on Sunday.

The university's collection represents about one-third of King's documents and correspondence and it was in the school's possession when he died.

The collection is mostly sermons that King composed on yellow legal paper in his thin scrawl and fills 16 file drawers. There are also letters, many unsigned from strangers, including hate-filled ones.

Most people are familiar with disability coverage that helps you pay bills if you cannot work. What happens to a small business when the boss is disabled?

There's similar protection available: a business overhead expense disability policy that provides cash flow to keep the business afloat.

Like a personal disability policy, the business policy allows for a waiting period: how long the company can manage without benefits. The policy can be written to pay as much fixed business expenses as necessary, from rent and utilities to the salaries of key employees.

A policy custom-tailored to each company's needs may pay benefits for as long as two years, if necessary. Of course, premiums are determined by the amount and duration of benefits.

Another plus: some policies will pay partial benefits if the boss can return to work on a limited basis.

No proof found plant is producing weapons

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German experts who examined U.S. evidence said they found no hard proof that a Libyan plant was built to produce chemical weapons, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The conservative Bonn newspaper Die Welt said Sunday documents shown by U.S. officials to the team of West Germans last week failed to show the plant in Rabta, 60 miles southwest of the capital Tripoli, was definitely intended to manufacture poison gas.

However, Die Welt said Bonn officials "were not denying" news reports last week that U.S. intelligence agencies intercepted telephone conversations of Libyan officials in August asking West German chemical companies for help in cleaning up a chemical spill in Rabta.

The newspaper telexed its report to news agencies in advance of its publication Monday.

Chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost said Saturday the U.S. information "indicates a number of German firms as well as companies from several nations made deliveries for the Libyan chemical plant," but that officials had not found evidence to warrant prosecution.

"A preliminary evaluation of the documents provided by the Americans shows that the material is nothing beyond what we already know about so far and would not stand up in court," Ost said in a statement.

The two West German companies under investigation are Imhausen-Chemie of Lahr and the now-defunct I.B.I. Engineering of Frankfurt.

In newspaper interviews published Sunday in Britain and West Germany, I.B.I. owner Ihsan Barbouti was quoted as saying he doubted the Libyans were producing chemical weapons in Rabta.

They were the first published interviews of Barbouti since he was publicly linked to the plant.

"I was there five years and nobody had ever mentioned that it was a poison gas factory," the West Berlin newspaper Morgenpost quoted Barbouti as saying. "All the blueprints for the pharmaceutical factory were all over the office, everyone could see them."

Barbouti, a 61-year-old Iraqi architect who lives in London, was quoted as saying he received a contract from the Libyans to build a large manufacturing complex but that the plant in question was built separately by the Libyans.

"I believe firmly that they (the Libyans), as far as I know, did not produce poison gas while I was there and are not producing it now," he was quoted as saying.

Barbouti was also quoted as saying that companies from West Germany, Japan, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Italy and France delivered equipment for the Rabta complex.

In his interview with the Observer newspaper of London, Barbouti was quoted as saying the complex was to include a foundry, a plastic molding workshop, maintenance and engineering workshops and storage hangars for Libya's vast imports.

Barbouti was quoted as saying the Libyans decided in 1985 to add a pharmaceutical factory to the site "so that they could make their own drugs under license."

"I saw a plan to produce around 50 different drugs," he was quoted as saying.

When asked who built the pharmaceutical plant, he was quoted as saying "The Libyans themselves."

Ex-Belgian prime minister believed kidnapped

Vanden Boeyants

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A former prime minister believed to be kidnapped, possibly by a terrorist group, was threatened before he disappeared, Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said today.

A caller claiming to represent an unknown group, the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade, has said the organization abducted former Prime Minister Paul Vanden Boeynants.

Officials said they were handling the case of the 69-year-old Christian Democrat, who disappeared Saturday, as a kidnapping.

"Mr. Vanden Boeynants had received threats lately and had requested to meet with the interior minister," presumably to discuss his safety, Martens said on Belgium's Dutch-langage radio network, BRT. He did not elaborate.

Interior Minister Louis Tobback confirmed he had been due to meet with Vanden Boeynants today. He said Vanden Boeynants' secretary called his office Thursday to say her boss wanted to discuss "a personal matter."

However, Deputy Brussels Prosecutor Andre Vandoren told reporters, "We have no elements to say a direct link can be established between the threats to Mr. Vanden Boeynants" and his disappearance.

He said he was treating the disappearance as a kidnapping, possibly for political reasons.

However, Johan Vande Lanotte, an aide to Tobback, said in a statement: "So far, the case is a strictly judicial matter. There is nothing to indicate that a truly terrorist act or politically inspired action is involved."

ANC guerrillas sentenced to 25 years in prison

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three African National Congress guerrillas, among them one of the most senior ANC leaders tried in 25 years, were sentenced to lengthy prison terms today for treason and terrorism.

A 20-year sentence for treason was issued to the most prominent defendant, Ebrahim Ismail Ebrahim, 51, who was abducted from Swaziland in 1986 by men he said were South African agents. He has been widely described as the highest-ranking ANC official to go on trial since Nelson Mandela and several colleagues were sentenced to life in 1964.

Another defendant, Mandla Maseko, received a 23-year sentence for treason. The other, Simon Dladla, received 12 years for terrorism. They were found guilty of laying landmines that injured eight people in Transvaal Province in 1986.

Ebrahim, who is of Indian descent, and his co-defendants, who are black, turned toward supporters in the gallery at the Pretoria Supreme Court and gave clenched-fist salutes before they were led away. All three could have been sentenced to death.

The men were convicted in November after a 16-month trial. At one stage last year, three members of the ANC's executive committee — who faced arrest in South Africa — gave evidence for the defense at a court session held in London.

Neither Ebrahim nor his co-defendants testified during the trial, but he submitted a 17-page written statement to the court in which he alleged that all three men were tortured by police.

Kevin Ratliff, 16, a Midland High School junior, studies braille English notes while LaShonda Jackson, also 16, leads him through MHS halls before school.

LIFE in the DARK

Kevin relies on braille notes.

see Kevin go to class,
see Kevin march in the band,
see Kevin get good grades,
...but Kevin can't see.

A joke from Kevin's English teacher evokes a smile.

Kevin Ratliff spoke barely above a whisper when explaining what people who aren't blind should understand about those who are.

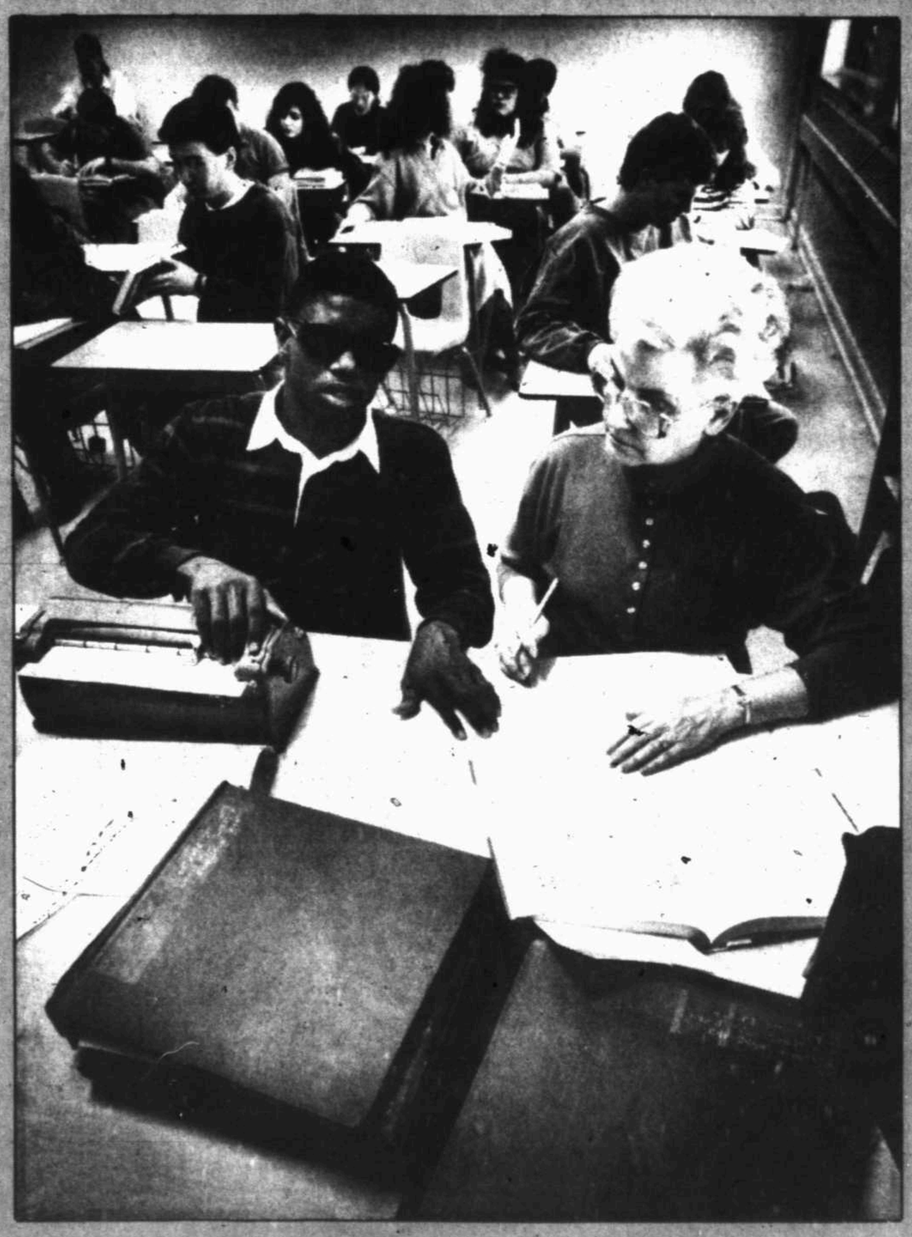

"We can do everything," the 18-year-old said.

Although seemingly shy, the Midland High School junior believes he is "special" because of "everything."

"He's never wanted anybody to pity him," his mother said. Not that anybody would have reason to.

For starters, Kevin has a 4.0 grade point and is enrolled in two Honors classes at school.

KEVIN

He not only marches in the band, but plays coronet and piano for pleasure.

He lost his sight when he was 1½ years old. Occular tumors had grown around both eyes, and when they were removed, he was blind, his mother Shirley explained.

He's an independent young man, his mother says, who refuses to use a cane to help walk around.

"I don't like them," he explained, again quietly.

Prior to the start of a new semester, a teacher at school helps Kevin walk through the paces of his new schedule of classes.

Inside the classroom, he uses a tape player to record class notes and inputs "written" answers to test questions on a special typewriter called a "brailler."

During Kevin's second period, he and two teachers work to input class lessons on a computer which outputs the material in braille.

The geometry book Kevin's peers use is put into braille for him. However, while classmates have one book, Kevin has 54 volumes of a year's worth of geometry studies. Geometric shapes in the books are reliefs so that he can "feel" a triangle or perpendicular lines.

The Bulldog band member, who marches in parades, but not on the field, learned to play his coronet and the piano by sound because he can't see the music sheets.

Some people treat him specially, he acknowledged, and he doesn't really like that.

At home, he's just another one of the Ratliff's four children. Kevin washes the dinner dishes and takes out the trash, he said.

Adds his mother: "I've just been real proud of him."

Man killed in accident

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An elderly West Texas man, who was discussing an accident with another man alongside an Oklahoma City highway, died when he was hit by a tractor-trailer and dragged 69 feet, authorities said.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol said Lloyd G. Morehouse of Plains was pronounced dead at the scene shortly after the accident that occurred on Interstate 44 about 8:25 a.m. Sunday.

Trustees to name new ECISD schools, appoint principals

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees Tuesday night are expected to announce names selected for three new elementary schools and appoint principals for the new facilities, which are scheduled to open for the 1989-90 school year.

Board members also are expected to review and accept new attendance boundary lines. The proposal trustees are considering is expected to coincide with administration recommendations that were presented to the board in December.

The board will hear a recommendation from Superintendent Hugh Hayes to eliminate the $64,000 position held by Keith Dial, restructure some administrative positions and split Dial's former duties among other administrators. Dial retired effective Dec. 31.

According to Communications Director Chuck Hornung, students throughout the school system were asked to suggest names for the three new schools. A board committee reviewed the suggested names and selected those deemed most appropriate.

Principals of the new schools and pupils will draw a name for each of the schools from boxes containing the suggested names.

The Tuesday meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the ECISD Administration Building.

Convicted drug smuggler becomes paid informant

HOUSTON (AP) — A convicted Colombian drug smuggler received nearly $100,000 and a shorter prison term after providing information about other people who allegedly worked for him in the smuggling organization, a newspaper reports.

Idinael Martinez also received a shorter prison term and has been placed in a federal witness protection program, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Shortly after his arrest at Houston Intercontinental Airport in October 1984, Martinez told prosecutors he had information about a Colombian smuggling ring and would testify about its higher-ups.

Martinez was arrested after smuggling more than 1,800 pounds of cocaine into the Houston area and faced up to 300 years in a federal prison.

Federal officials quickly struck a deal with Martinez that included a 10-year maximum prison sentence and putting Martinez and his family in the witness protection program.

Only one person who may have played a larger role than Martinez in the smuggling operation has been indicted. He is Pedro Ortegon, a reputed drug exporter who is hiding in his native Colombia.

"Martinez led the government to believe that he could help them catch the big fish," said Kent Schaffer, a defense attorney representing one of Martinez's alleged associates. "Now they realize that he is the big fish."

No injuries reported in accident

From Staff Reports

Westbound traffic on Interstate 20 was backed up for more than an hour early today after an accident involving at least one truck, the Department of Public Safety reported.

No injuries were reported in the 7:20 a.m. accident, which occurred on I-20 two miles west of Loop 250, according to the DPS.

Both westbound lanes of the interstate were closed until the truck and debris were swept from the roadway about an hour after the accident, according to a Midland County sheriff's department dispatcher.

Olivia de Havilland returns to her alma mater

By DANELLE MORTON
Copley News Service

I'm telling ya, Sid, it's a knockout script! Star goes back to her childhood home. We could call it, oh, "Saratoga Trunk," or "Los Gatos People," or "Return to the Valley of Heart's Delight,' or ... oh, well, title's not important."
What's important is the credits: Starring Olivia de Havilland

Open with black-and-white footage from "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte." Shot of Olivia de Havilland as Miriam, a middle-aged urban sophisticate, pulling up to the Hollis mansion in a taxi. The mansion is a classic Southern plantation house with two-story-tall columns. Close-up of Miriam sirutinizing the mansion, whose dirty white paint and overgrown vines declare its years of neglect.

OLIVIA AS MIRIAM:

"They say the places you knew as a child always seem smaller than your memory of them. But it's not true."

Olivia as Miriam exits the cab and walks slowly up the mansion steps to its double doors as the driver deposits five suitcases and a hatbox on the veranda.

DISSOLVE TO:

Los Gatos High School's main building, strikingly similar to the Hollis mansion in its Southern revival architectural style, sparkling white in the early evening of a brilliant California June. The time of season and weather make the colors seem unnaturally bright, almost too vivid. Camera tight on the double doors of her alma mater as Olivia, now 72, escorted by Principal Ted Simonson, makes her way to the place of honor on the dais.

Tight shot on Olivia's remarkably youthful face listening to Simonson introducing her. The hairstyle — an asymmetrical flip that looks like a wave breaking from the right side of her head over the left ear — is more flamboyant than the one she wore in the film footage, but the basic look of her face is unchanged from 25 years ago.

HER SKIN IS taut and her eyes sharp with sparkle. Her head rests wistfully on the palm of her right hand as she listens to Simonson.

SIMONSON:

"She is this high school's most widely known alumnus, recognized as a star since her debut and never anything less than a star. She is known as a throughgoing professional actress and a person equally at ease with the highest levels of society and with the people of Paris, Hollywood and Los Gatos. As David O. Selznick once said, there are only two kinds of class: First Class and No Class. Ms. de Havilland is first class. May I present to Los Gatos High School's Centennial graduating class one of the most able students ever to graduate from this institution, Ms. Olivia de Havilland."

Olivia comes up to the podium embraced by a steady warm applause. As she speaks, the camera draws back to the crowd's view of Olivia: a tiny figure in a green silk dress viewed by the 3,000 who have gathered on the school's front lawn to watch the graduation. The cadence of her rich, theatrical voice rolls over the silent crowd, transfixed as much by her sound as by her words.

OLIVIA:

"More than half a century stands between us, but we are bound by the powerful ties of love for this school, which has nurtured you and me, and by curiosity."

CUT TO: Camera tracking Willys Peck through his dark warren of a house. Saratoga's amateur historian, he has known Olivia most of his life. Every inch of wall space is covered with historical mementos, art and artifacts. Peck, his glasses arched at an angle similar to Jerry Lewis' in the "The Nutty Professor," is in search of a specific item in his collection.

PECK

"Anyone who has lived in Saratoga and is pushing 60 knows there is only one Olivia, and her last name is de Havilland."

Peck enters a dark room full of bookshelves and takes out a big picture book.

"Where is that thing? Oh, here it is. My father was the editor of the Los Gatos paper, and it got this kind of thing all the time. This is the promotional book for the first movie Olivia was in. "A Midsummer Night's Dream," put on by Max Reinhardt in 1934 — or was it '35? Yeah, '35. I remember taking a train up to San Francisco to see it."

Peck takes the book and some photographs and goes out to a small deck shaded from the afternoon sunlight.

"She's still involved in this town; it's a little strong to say she's still a presence here, but she still keeps her ties. When they were trying to save the Saratoga Grammar School from being torn down, Olivia sent a telegram from France asking them to save it. She'd gone to school there. People were no end impressed that she would send a telegram. That's the kind of thing she does. She sends personal letters to people around her all the time asking them for their memories or if they can confirm something she's trying to pin down about her past."

CNS Photo

Olivia de Havilland as she appeared in the film "Captain Blood."

PECK PUTS DOWN the book and picks up an aerial photograph of Saratoga in the 1930s. The town is only a small cluster of buildings. To all sides fruit orchards in full bloom surround the tiny town in a sheet of white.

"When Olivia de Havilland talks in her dreamy-eyed way about Saratoga, this is what she's talking about. Saratoga and Los Gatos are now far, far removed from what they were when she grew up here. These were small towns — period."

CUT TO:

Graduation speech continued. Olivia says, "Others would like to know the wild things we did. The hot spot in Los Gatos in 1934 was the Eatmore Creamery on North Santa Cruz Avenue, where you could get a keen milk shake for 10 cents. And if I had saved my money I might treat myself to a root beer float at Kirk and Bill's. Kirk and Bill kept strict accounts /hen I walked by there after an 18-year absence, they followed me out into the street to ask that I settle on outstanding bill for $1.81. I paid it on the spot."

CUT TO:

A stroll down modern-day North Santa Cruz Avenue, the heart of Los Gatos' polite suburban downtown, where a Double Rainbow milk shake costs $3. Shops like The Maid's Quarters, California Interiors and the French Connection feature white and olive-green wicker furniture this season, accented by tea sets and whimsical pastel ducks and bunnies formed in thick pottery.

CUT TO:

Shot of Sue La Forge, director of the Los Gatos Chamber of Commerce, in her office, which is decorated in a cat theme. Dressed in a bright red suit and multicolored metal jewelry, La Forge stands out from the drab poster of cats on the wall behind her desk. There are perhaps 35 cats in different states of action and repose in the large poster. Statues of the two cats that are Los Gatos' symbol — Leo and Leonia — rest on a side table. Her phone has a cat shoulder rest.

La Forge says, "The popularity of our Ferrari dealership is one of our town's major attractions. We have one of the largest dealerships in Northern California. The average price of a home here is $260,000, so most people in the Bay area can't afford to move to Los Gatos. Still, we've managed to maintain a mix of services and shops in the downtown even though the recent trend is in the top end of the retail market: expensive women's clothing stores and that kind of thing."

CUT TO:

Fund-raiser at the Forbes Mill Museum, a local history museum for Saratoga and Los Gatos, whose featured attraction is Olivia. She is seated at the head of the receiving line on a high-backed museum chair with her feet on a footstool. A plate of fruit and cheese and a glass of white wine rest on a stool next to her. She smiles graciously as people kneel beside her to request an autograph. Mozart played by a string quartet positioned on the balcony above the main room of the museum wafts down on the partygoers, who have paid $15 each to shake hands with Olivia.

The museum's featured exhibit is the life of Olivia: programs from plays she acted in, photographs of her as a teen-ager in local productions of "Alice in Wonderland" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," drawings for dresyet she designed in her high school domestic science class and predictions of her success on the stage from the local newspapers.

Shot of an article on Olivia from the San Jose Mercury, Aug. 12, 1934.

"While the other grammar school children on the stage were frightened by the crowd and were forgetting their dances, she showed sufficient poise to challenge the best that the others could do, and the presentation was a success."

Shot of an undated San Francisco Chronicle review of Olivia in "Alice in Wonderland."

"This Alice is exquisite of Zace, dainty, trembling on the verge of young womanhood. She has intelligence, the ability to impersonate, a sense of rhythm in reading lines, the power to project a character and build it up until she and it are one."

The photograph of her with her fellow student government leaders shows an impish Olivia whose amused expression and ease in front of the camera make her seem to be looking directly into the viewer's eyes. People entertain themselves by trying to pick her out of her high school class picture and comparing that tiny face in the crowd with the one they are about to meet. They paw through her scrapbook of her film career, cooing over the movie stills. The book notes Olivia's two Oscars, for "To Each His Own" in 1946 and "The Heiress" in 1949, and her three other nominations.

People in line recount previous times they have encountered Olivia, no matter how minor the event was. Words most frequently heard over the string music are "gracious" and "a real lady."

UNNAMED MAN:

(Addresing his companion.) "I asked her if she remembered me from the time we worked on the senior dance committee together, but she didn't." (Indicates his head with one finger pointed.) "Her mind isn't what it used to be."

Shot of Olivia posing with Allyson Cochrane, the 1988 winner of the De Havilland Cup, which Olivia established in 1952. Los Gatos High School awards it to the student who reads the liveliest monologue.

Shot of Emerson Shaw, breathless, excited museum curator who is beside himself with the success of the event. He is standing at the entrance to the tiny museum, trying to move along the crowd, which snakes out into the parking lot in an orderly, well-dressed line. A shaft of sunlight illuminates his animated face in the dark museum.

Movie buffs find treasure trove on cable

Film aficionados applaud release of seldom seen movies

By RON ALEXANDER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK —, Howard Mandelbaum, the owner of Photofest, a Manhattan movie-photo archive, says the unthinkable has happened — he's become a slave to his video recorder. Meryl Mintzer, an administrative assistant, says she no longer has time to shop, let alone clean her apartment. Bill Dworkin, the vice president of sales at Rizzoli Publishing, confides that what he really likes to do these days and nights is stay at home in front of his television.

And then there are all those thousands of people out there in the dark, to paraphrase Norma Desmond, who have also been spending a hefty chunk of the fall and winter attending TNT parties.

Ever since the first week in October, when the cable network TNT — Turner Network Television — appeared on the scene on Manhattan Cable and on many other cable systems throughout the country, the calendars and schedules of film buffs have been turned blissfully — some might say frighteningly — upside down.

FILM AFICIONADOS indeed have something to applaud: reel after reel of rare movies that TNT has been ushering to home screens at the rate of 9 or 10 a day.

When Ted Turner, the media mogul, bought M-G-M in March 1986, he also acquired the studio's library of 3,300 films, most of which had not been seen on television or in the dwindling revival houses for years, if ever. Some of the films, in fact, had not left the vault since their first release decades ago.

Half of the titles were released by M-G-M before 1982; the rest are almost equally divided between pre-1948 Warner Brothers films and the entire RKO output. Add to this more than 6,000 cartoons and short subjects (Pete Smith, Robert Benchley, "Crime Does Not Pay" among them) and the ecstasy of film fans is understandable.

For movie lovers (and their VCR's), the joy begins weekdays at 9 a.m. with the movie category called "Love Affair." Reruns of the old televison series "Medical Center" at 11 o'clock provide a chance for a quick bath, speeded-up aerobics, a jog with the dog, and settling back secure in the knowledge that noon means a film musical under "Song and Dance"; 2 p.m., a comedy ("Just for Laughs); 4 o'clock, "Hollywood Legends"; 8 and 10 o'clock, "Big Pictures," and from midnight through dawn, an overnight of rare treats. Five hours of cartoons and children's fare are also tucked away in the schedule.

Turner, who owns three other channels, has proved an unlikely hero for film purists still angry at his insistence on coloring their black-and-white favorites.

IF TURNER has drawn upon himself the scorn of many fans for artificially coloring "Casablanca," some of these same fans now find themselves begrudgingly mumbling thanks as they gulp Raisinets while watching such deliciously unfamiliar films as "Baby Face," with Barbara Stanwyck (1933), "Employees' Entrance," with Loretta Young (1933) and "Man-Proof" with Myrna Loy (1938).

But the true star of TNT is 34-year-old Lisa Mateas, the network's director of program acquisitions and scheduling. Along with Terry Segal, TNT's 36-year-old vice president and general manager, it is her task — enviable or formidable depending on one's point of view — to choose from among the more than 3,000 titles and decide what gets played and when.

To the TNT audience, most of whom do not even know her name, Ms. Mateas, who was previously programming director at KTLA-TV in Los Angeles, has become as magical as Glinda the Good, as much a heroine as, say, Kay Francis, to name but one of the one-time stars whose not-so-easy-to-recall films have found a new and appreciative audience.

Ms. Mateas has shown a sly sense of humor in her programming. Consider these three-in-a-row late-night features: "He Couldn't Say No," "She Couldn't Say No," "She Had to Say Yes."

Or, on a recent Saturday night, Norma Shearer as "Marie Antoinette," followed by Dolores del Rio as "Madame Du Barry" and George Arliss as "Voltaire."

Remember Tom Conway as the Falcon? Ms. Mateas showed four "Falcons" in a row. Lupe Velez as the "Mexican Spitfire"? Three in a row.

SHE ALSO PAIRED the 1931 "Trader Horn" with its 1973 remake and offered a double bill of seldom-seen Joan Crawfords, "Torch Song" and "A Woman's Face."

These are pleasures that have not gone unnoticed by fans, many of whom sit through entire evenings, finger on the Stop button, ready to cut commercials from what will be their own library of films.

Ms. Mateas said she tries to find "connections between what we show." She said she hasn't seen all the films in her care, "but I've immersed myself in film books and plots."

Recently she has discovered the 1930s matinee idol Warren William and the comedy team of Wheeler and Woolsey, and if there happens to be a Joe E. Brown fan club, she's ready to join. (Segal said he has fallen for Hedy Lamarr.)

As for the public, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy fans have written of their gratitude and there has been "a surprisingly big interest in Mario Lanza," she said.

Best of all, the films, with few exceptions, are in mint condition, silvery and creamy. The original negatives and master prints are stored in vaults in Kansas City (one likes to imagine somewhere near where Dorothy and Toto lived). They are remastered in Los Angeles; one-inch tapes are then sent on to Atlanta, the headquarters of TNT.

Also shown have been the first of two made-for-TNT productions ("A Man for All Seasons" with Charlton Heston and "Finish Line," a film about steroids with James Brolin.) TNT's goal is a dozen new productions during the year ahead.

BUT IT IS the old films that are driving the fans wild with delight or mad with controversy.

Some fans say there have been cuts in running time; Ms. Mateas denies it.

Mandelbaum, for example, insists that Ann Sothern's rendition of Cole Porter's "Make It Another Old-Fashioned, Please" was cut from "Panama Hattie" and that at least one scene was cut from "Ice Follies of 1939."

"Crawford and Jimmy Stewart suddenly announce they're married, but in the 1930s there would have been a wedding shot or at the very least a proposal scene," he says with the authority that only a film buff can have.

MEANWHILE, THOUGH, he wouldn't dream of missing a TNT party where tapes are shown. Are the tapes ever lent? A look of 1930s horror crosses Mandelbaum's face.

"When you've waited your whole life to see a film," he said, "you don't lend it out so quickly. In fact, you become quite possessive."

Bill Dworkin, ecstatic over having the chance to see the 1937 movie "Sh! The Octopus" again after all these years, puts it this way: "With all these great films to see, I can anticipate the time when I'll never go out of the house again."

Television, video tape viewing up

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The advances made by cable television are reflected in a report published by Multichannel News, a television-industry trade journal.

Cable television is being seen in 47 million households in 1988, 3.5 million more than the 1986 figure.

The publication says that, according to industry estimates of 300,000 new cable TV households each month, cable television should reach a penetration figure of over 54 percent early in 1989.

While cable viewing is up, watching video tapes is also on the rise.

Nearly 60 million American homes have a videocassette recorder, according to Media Home Entertainment Inc. Of VCR owners, it says, 55 percent are between the ages of 25 and 49 years, 60 percent have college educations and 60 percent have annual family incomes over $35,000.

DEAR ABBY

Peace of mind found through forgiveness

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Did you know there is an International Forgiveness Week? Well, neither did I, until last year. And this is the week.

If you are a card-carrying member of the human race, there is at least one person in your life who needs your forgiveness. Or perhaps it's YOU who needs to be forgiven. So, get aboard the mea culpa bandwagon. Robert Muller, former assistant secretary-general of the United Nations, wrote this piece especially for International Forgiveness Week:

DECIDE TO FORGIVE
Decide to forgive
For resentment is negative
Resentment is poisonous
Resentment diminishes and devours the self.
Be the first to forgive,
To smile and to take the first step.
And you will see happiness bloom
On the face of your human brother or sister.
Be always the first
Do not wait for others to forgive
For by forgiving
You become the master of fate
The fashioner of life
The doer of miracles.
To forgive is the highest,
Most beautiful form of love.
In return you will receive
Untold peace and happiness.

Here is the program for achieving a truly forgiving heart:

■ Sunday: Forgive yourself.
■ Monday: Forgive your family.
■ Tuesday: Forgive your friends and associates.
■ Wednesday: Forgive across economic lines within your own nation.
■ Thursday: Forgive across cultural lines within your own nation.
■ Friday: Forgive across political lines within your own nation.
■ Saturday: Forgive other nations.

Only the brave know how to forgive. A coward never forgives.

It is not in his nature.

— ROBERT MULLER

Many years ago, B.C. (Before Column), I came across this particularly poignant description of forgiveness:

"Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet which still clings fast to the heel that crushed it." No source was credited, so I searched for years until I finally found it. And here it is:

FORGIVENESS
By GEORGE ROEMISCH

Forgiveness is the wind-blown bud which blooms in placid beauty at Verdun.

Forgiveness is the tiny slate-gray sparrow which has built its nest of twigs and string among the shards of glass upon the wall of shame.

Forgiveness is the child who laughs in merry ecstasy beneath the toothed fence that closes in Da Nang.

Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet which still clings fast to the heel that crushed it.

Forgiveness is the broken dream which hides itself within the corner of the mind oft called forgetfulness, so that it will not bring pain to the dreamer.

Forgiveness is the reed which stands up straight and green when nature's mighty rampage halts, full spent.

Forgiveness is a God who will not leave us after all we've done.

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen anything regarding answering machine etiquette — what kind of message is proper, and what is not. Are there any guidelines? I have heard some rather wild and crazy stuff on answering machines. Some are even X-rated. — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: On your own machine, resist being clever, cute or original. Simply say, "Hello, you have reached ..." (then state your telephone number). "If you wish to leave a message, please do so — but please wait for the beep."

When leaving a message on someone else's machine, simply leave your name, the hour and day you called, and if you want the party to return your call, leave your phone number.

Chaps host Clarendon

From Staff Reports

Midland College hosts Clarendon College at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Chaparral Center in Elementary School Night with free tickets for all Midland elementary students.

One adult also is admitted free with each student pass.

The Chaps will be seeing their only action of the week against the Bulldogs, who are 12-1 in WJCAC, and will be endeavoring to rebound from Thursday's 84-82 loss to Odessa College at the Chap.

Midland also may be picking up one or two players, who have been academically ineligible since Christmas. Freshmen Tim Owens and Eric Golightly, both starters in the fall, have been attending interim classes the past three weeks.

Owens was the team's leading scorer and rebounder during the first 12 games, hitting 17.5 points and 8.5 rebounds.

And in a strange conference campaign, the Chaps still are looking for their first conference victory at home. Currently 2-3 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action, the Chaps have won both their road games, but are 0-3 at home.

Two of those losses have been nail-biters, an overtime loss to Howard College and the two-point defeat at the hands of Odessa.

Midland is 11-7 for the season.

Based on past performances, the Chaps are big favorites to win tonight over Clarendon. The Bulldogs have gotten only two wins against the Chaps in 30 tries, both of those at Clarendon. Midland College has taken the nine straight games from Clarendon.

Freshman Fred Campbell, a 6-8 freshman, has taken up much of the slack in both scoring and rebounding. He hit 30 points against Odessa and got 11 rebounds. Strong help has been coming from freshmen Troy

Oliveras back for 3rd year with M-Angels

From Staff Reports

Max Oliveras will be back for a third season as manager of the Midland Texas League Angels and he'll be coming off a triumphant Winter season in Puerto Rica.

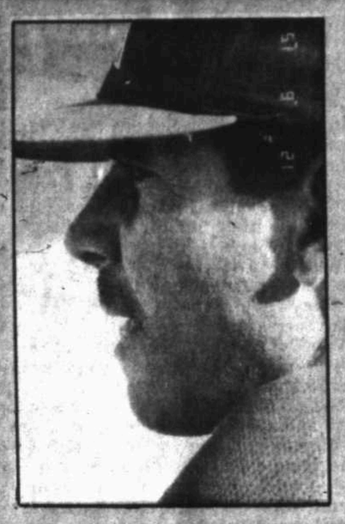

Oliveras managed the San Juan Metros to first place this winter and his team is currently in the Puerto Rican League playoffs. For his efforts, Oliveras was named manager of the year.

Oliveras is 136-135 won-lost in two seasons with the Angels and has had two near misses on playoff berths, the Angels losing out in the late stages of the second half West Division race.

Gary Ruby will be the new Angels' pitching coach. Ruby, signed by Hank Peters, then at Cleveland, pitched for the Indians from 1970-74 and was traded to Kansas City in 1974.

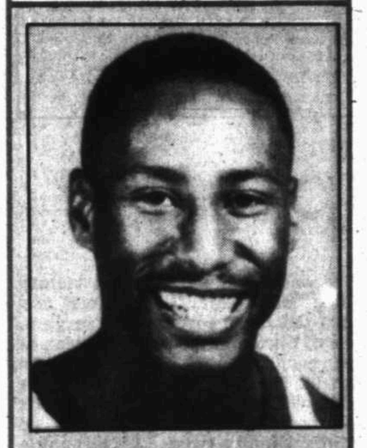

This is his third year as a coach, starting 1986 at Quad City, Midwest, and at Palm Springs, California, 1987.

Also returning is Sam Joseph will return to the Angels as trainer this summer.

SMU's Kato Armstrong

Books bench SMU star Armstrong

DALLAS (AP) — Kato Armstrong, leading scorer for the Southern Methodist basketball team, has been declared academically ineligible to play for the spring semester, university officials said Sunday.

"I'm disappointed," Armstrong said in a statement issued by the school. "I'd like to be playing basketball, but I am going to continue in school and work towards getting my degree, which is very important to me."

Armstrong led the Mustangs with a 19.9 scoring average this season. He finished as the seventh leading scorer in Southern Methodist history with 1,297 points and ranked fourth among SMU's career leaders with 389 assists.

AUSTIN — The third-ranked Lady Longhorns proved to be the fastest in a fast field, and won their Tarn-Pure Longhorn National Swimming and Diving Invitational that Sunday by 143 points.

Texas individual winners boosted the Lady Longhorns to 731.5 points and victory Sunday in a meet featuring six women's teams rated in the top 20.

Stacy Cassiday claimed the 200 free with a time of 1:48.58, Andrea Hayes took the 1,650 free in 16:31.14, Leigh Ann Fetter claimed the 50 free in 23.28 and Kelly Jenkins won the 3-meter diving with 497.55 points for the Lady Longhorns.

Steve Jones 'can't believe' Hope win

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — For the second time in two years, Paul Azinger left the Bob Hope Classic title on the greens of a desert golf course.

And, for the second time in eight days, Steve Jones came away a winner, the first since Gil Morgan in 1983 to sweep the first two tournaments of the year on the PGA Tour.

"I can't believe it. I won one tournament in five years and then open up boom-boom," said Jones, who made up three shots on the last three holes of regulation play Sunday, then beat Azinger and Sandy Lyle in a sudden death playoff.

The lanky, 6-foot-4 Jones, a 3-shot winner in the Tournament of Champions last week, won this one with a four-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole, the 14th at Bermuda Dunes.

"After they'd missed (long birdie attempts), I don't know how I shook it in, but I did," Jones said.

The victory was worth $180,000 from the total purse of $1 million and pushed his earnings for the season to $315,000, more than in any previous full year on the Tour.

The playoff was set up when Azinger missed a six-foot par putt on the final hole of regulation play in this five-day, 90-hole tournament.

"I thought I made it. It just leaked a little bit to the right on me. Obviously, I'm incredibly disappointed. I made a mistake when I didn't need to," Azinger said after the three-putt bogey dropped him back into a tie for the lead.

It was an unfortunately familiar sensation. In the final round of this event a year ago, Azinger had a chance to win until — almost incredibly — he five-putted one green at

Not-so-Super Miami seeks better image

By STEVEN CRIST
N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — Shortly after arriving in Miami this week, each of the 90,000 visitors expected for Super Bowl XXIII at Joe Robbie Stadium next Sunday will receive an original piece of artwork: the medium is crayon, the artists nearly 100,000 students in the Dade County elementary school system.

The visitors might be happier with a souvenir from the set of "Miami Vice," but the children's drawings seem a more appropriate symbol of the face this city is trying to show the world this week.

Civic leaders are hoping to restore the air of relative innocence that surrounded this area a generation ago, back when Jackie Gleason used to call Miami Beach "the sun and fun capital of the world."

FIVE OF the first 13 Super Bowls were held at the Orange Bowl in Miami, but the city has been on an unofficial probation from the National Football League since then because of a record number of complaints about conditions surrounding the 1979 game. Visitors to Super Bowl XIII were victimized by price-gouging hotels and tour operators, and dismayed by an increasingly deteriorating city wracked by crime and racial strife.

CITY OFFICIALS see the coming week as a chance to prove to the league, to the visitors, and to an estimated 150 million American television viewers that Miami has changed for the better in a decade.

"I'll be blunt, 1979 was very problematic," said Ron Kent, a chairman of the Miami Super Bowl Superhost Committee, which is coordinating everything involving this year's game. "Everyone's attitude seemed to be, this is for today, let's do as well as we can. Now the city feels it's not for today, it's for the future."

Kent estimates that the Super Bowl will bring about $68 million to local hotels and merchants by Sunday. No one is being shy about trying to attract the tourist dollars. Every store in town seems to be having a sale offering a "Super Bowl of savings," and every price sticker has taken on the shape of a football.

Gulfstream Park has cancelled its usual Sunday card, but is running a $65,000 Super Bowl Handicap race Friday, the $65,000 Joe Namath Stakes on Saturday, and a new $50,000 I Guarantee It Stakes (named for Namath's 1969 Super Bowl prediction) Monday.

Every tavern in town seems to be turning into a "sports bar," with new and improved cover charges. Penrod's on Miami Beach is building bleachers on the beach and erecting a 30-foot television screen. The Sports Rock Cafe in South Miami is showing the game on 40 screens.

KENT, AND the Superhost staff of 65 full-time employees and 1,600 volunteers, appear to have three goals for this week: avoiding the problems of a decade ago, showing off as much of the new Miami as possible to the world, and dealing with the frustration of the local residents, who are being urged to celebrate an event that very few of them will be able to attend.

The first goal may be the easiest to attain. The Superhost Committee has signed pledges from more than 150 hotels not to charge a nickel more than the usual winter rates. A toll-free citywide reservations hot line, staffed by 10 operators, is directing 2,000 callers a day to accommodations ranging from $60-a-night motels to $500-a-night suites at luxury hotels.

The city is being marketed as having something for everyone. The new skyscrapers downtown will literally be spotlighted by a projection system that will throw lighted images of football players stretching 20 stories high on the sides of two tall buildings. The list of entertainers performing at hotels and theaters next weekend includes Wayne Newton, Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr., Robin Williams, and Kenny G.

Neighborhood festivals will show off everything from art deco architecture to rodeos.

"We want people to see that it's an entirely different city now," said Mary Louise English, communications director for the Greater Miami Visitors and Convention Bureau. "People who were here 10 years ago won't even recognize the skyline."

FOR RESIDENTS, the Super Bowl is inescapable. Every light pole on the major expressways is being hung with a placard painted with a different NFL team helmet. Yet for many residents, the Super Bowl seems a private party for corporate America and out-of-towners.

Only 7,500 of the 75,000 seats at Joe Robbie Stadium were allotted to the local franchise, with Dolphins' season-ticket holders entering a lottery for those not used by the Robbie organization. By contrast, the Bengals and 49ers were allotted 15,000 tickets each, as was the NFL, for officials and corporate sponsors.

"We are trying very hard to deal

Bengals try different approach

N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — Determined that the Bengals will neither wilt nor freeze up in Super Bowl XXIII, as their Bengal predecessors did seven years ago, Coach Sam Wyche put them through a 1-hour-45-minute practice in the 78-degree weather soon after they arrived Sunday from Cincinnati.

"I want them to be tired, like they've played a Sunday game," Wyche explained before traveling to the Dolphins' practice site in North Miami. The San Francisco 49ers, who were expected to arrive here Sunday night, had no practice scheduled.

"We don't want to be out of sync," Wyche said. "Our practice today is one that will leave them breathing heavy and sweat a lot, just as if they've played a Sunday game. Then tomorrow's a recovery day. I want them to get used to the heat. We've been practicing in cold weather for six or seven weeks."

The Bengals' memories of Super Bowl XVI are mostly bad, when they lost to the 49ers, 26-21. This time, the Bengals are trying a different tack. Take their hotel. They are at the Omni on Biscayne Boulevard, not far from whatever excitement it is that young ballplayers seek. The 49ers will stay at the airport Hilton.

Holiday prep tourneys are 'in' thing

Battles

Bill Grimes was warned right off, even before he wrote the column suggesting that Midland needed a Christmas holiday week basketball tournament so that he would have something to do.

Trouble makers like that are something we can do without.

It was pointed out that Midland has tournaments running out its ears. What wasn't needed was another tournament.

Furthermore, Grimes was threatened, if anything should come of this hairbrained idea, he would be held personally accountable.

Meanwhile, it was suggested, go run 10 miles a day. That was before it was realized he did that anyway.

With some reluctance, it now must be admitted Grimes, cuss his trouble making ways, not only had an idea with merit, but was right on target.

HOLIDAY basketball tournaments, high school tournaments, are becoming big time.

Reference isn't made to the "Hey, let's get Lubbock, Andrews, Amarillo and a couple of teams from El Paso and have a tournament." These teams wouldn't even qualify for such a tournament.

This one would be recruited from the Top 25 List.....you know, teams from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Florida, California, Maryland....

Matching up the best from far away sections of the land is becoming popular and supply those rankings more credence, perhaps, than some of the popularity polls conducted at higher levels, such as the college ranks, that is, until NCAA tourney time. No Wyomings or West Virginias allowed in these polls.

ST. ANTHONY'S of Jersey City, N.J., is currently ranked No. 1 among the nation's high schools and during the holidays proved it.

St. Anthony's went to Florida to clean house on teams from Louisiana, South Carolina, New York, Ontario and Florida in the Great Florida Shootout and Kissimmee.

From there, St. Anthony's went west to the King Cotton Classic in Pine Bluff, Ark., and whipped up on the best Virginia, Tennessee, California, Ohio, Kentucky, Louisiana and Arkansas sent forth.

Now, St. Anthony will probably go home and get beat by West New York, N.J., or Hackensack.

NEVERTHELESS, high school basketball is becoming big business with encouraging bucks and publicity from ESPN. Dallas' Dr Pepper is thinking of expanding its horizons to get in on the act.

Why not Midland? With an arena, Chap Center, adjudged by no less an authority than Sports Illustrated as being the No. 1 junior college facility in the land, it has the site.

The Top 25 list would provide the field with the best Texas prep team as the host. Unfortunately, this year, so far, no Texas teams are ranked in the top 25.

Texas teams have a disadvantage, since many of the nationally ranked teams are private schools with the freedom to recruit players from a broader range than public schools.

THE ONLY question is whether Midland has the interest in high school basketball to make such a venture a success. Of course, similar ventures elsewhere are turning to corporate sponsors for help...isn't everybody...

Just think of the promotional tool it would be for MC.

Okay, Grimes, quit laughing and go run to Stanton or someplace.

What's so Super in Super Bowl?

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

In the days before Super Bowl V in Miami, Duane Thomas, then a rookie running back who had not yet decided to distance himself from the news media, was sitting on the grass at Fort Lauderdale Stadium where the Dallas Cowboys were practicing.

"Duane," a sportswriter asked, "is this the ultimate game?"

"They're playing it again next year, aren't they?" he said.

Nobody else has ever put Super Bowl hype in such perfect perspective.

And on Sunday the San Francisco 49ers and the Cincinnati Bengals will be playing it again for the XXIIIrd time. But they will be playing it again for the first time in 10 years in Miami where so much of the game's early lore developed:

WHERE VINCE Lombardi coached the Green Bay Packers for the last time.

Where Jim O'Brien's field goal for the Baltimore Colts won the only Super Bowl game that has been decided in the final seconds.

Where Terry Bradshaw's passes led the Pittsburgh Steelers to two of their record four victories.

Those five games were played not far from downtown in the Orange Bowl, a two-tiered horseshoe with palm trees swaying behind the goal posts at the east end.

But this time Joe Robbie Stadium, a $115 million three-tiered octagon named for the Dolphins' owner, will provide the stage up near the Fort Lauderdale line. And where Bill Walsh might coach the 49ers for the last time.

OF THE 13 different winning Super Bowl coaches, only Lombardi abdicated after a victory. His second victory actually.

After the Packers' triumph over the Oakland Raiders in II, he resigned as coach but remained as general manager. In the locker room before that game Jerry Kramer, the Packer guard who would collaborate with Dick Schaap on the book "Instant Replay," tape recorded Lombardi's last pre-game speech as the Packer coach.

"This is a club that's going to hit you," Lombardi said of the Raiders. "They're going to try to hit you and you've got to take it out of them. You've got to be tigers out there. Just hit. Just run. Just block and tackle. If you do that, there's no question what the answer's going to be in this ballgame."

Right, by 33-14.

IN III the next year, the most memorable pre-game speech occured on the Thursday night before the Jets, the American Football League champions who were 17-point underdogs, opposed the Baltimore Colts, representing the National Football League establishment.

At a Miami Touchdown Club dinner, Namath was honored as the 1968 season's outstanding pro football player.

"You can be the greatest athlete in the world," Namath said in accepting the award. "But if you don't win those football games it doesn't mean anything. And we're going to win, I guarantee you."

Two days later Lombardi was assessing the game in a conversation with Morrie Siegel, the longtime Washington sports columnist.

"I don't particularly like the life style of No. 12," Lombardi said of Namath, "but he can take any team to a championship."

Encouraged by Lombardi's opinion, Siegel phoned a Miami bookmaker. After betting $200 on the Jets with 17 points, he asked the bookmaker how the betting line would be affected if the public knew that Vince Lombardi considered the Jets to be a big overlay.

"That would depend," the bookmaker said, "on how much money Mr. Lombardi bet."

LOMBARDI, of course, didn't bet a dime. And like all the other NFL people, he winced when the Jets won, 16-7. That upset not only put the AFL up on the same pedestal as the NFL, it also enabled the 10 AFL teams to retain their identity in the merger realignment for the 1970 season.

After that 1970 season the Colts won V from the Dallas Cowboys, 16-13, on Jim O'Brien's 32-yard field goal with five seconds remaining.

At the time not even Art Rooney, the patriarch of the Pittsburgh Steelers, dreamed of four Super Bowl rings. At the time the Steelers had never won any title. But in X, Lynn Swann, the Steelers' wide receiver, resembled a trampoline acrobat.

Soaring and twisting, he caught four of Terry Bradshaw's passes for 161 yards and one touchdown in a 21-17 victory. Swann had suffered a concussion two weeks earlier in the AFC title game with the Raiders, prompting Cliff Harris of the Cowboys to warn that "getting hit again" had to be on Swann's mind.

"Harris was trying to intimidate me," Swann said, "but he can't scare me or this team."

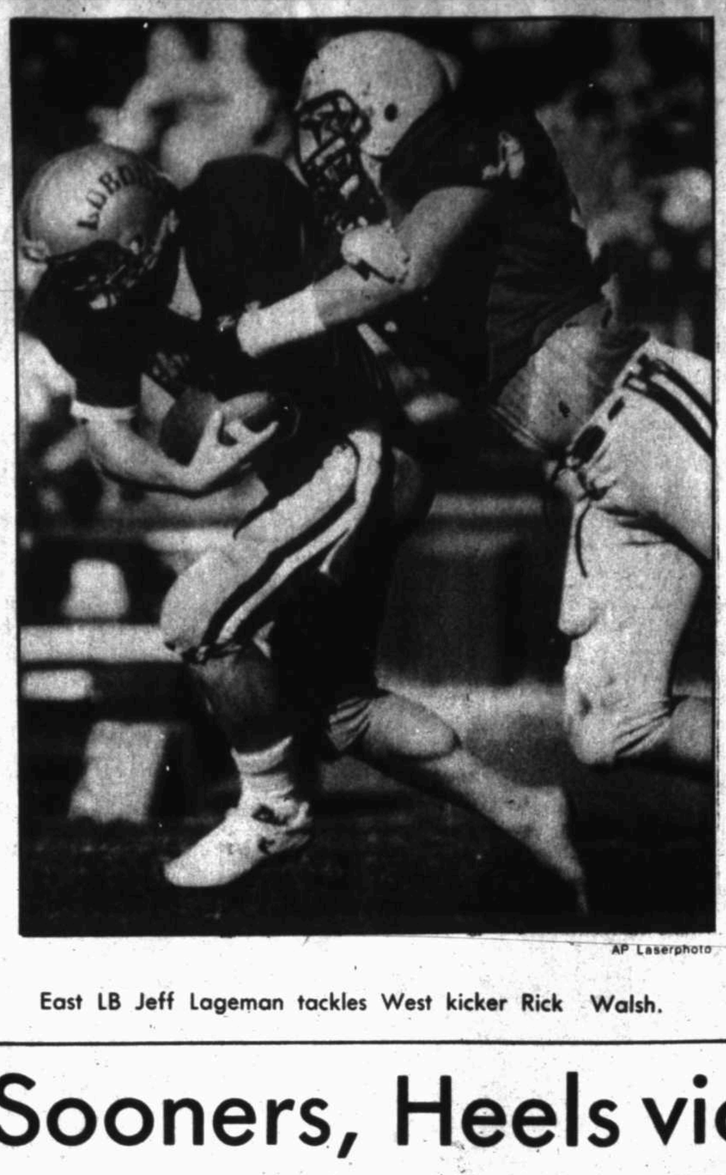

Three years later in XIII another Cowboy, the loquacious linebacker Thomas (Hollywood) Henderson, made the mistake of using the word "dumb" to describe the Steelers' quarterback.

"Bradshaw," said Henderson, "couldn't spell cat if you spotted him the 'c' and the 'a.'"

Bradshaw's response was to complete 17 of 30 passes for 318 yards and 4 touchdowns, a record eventually equaled by Doug Williams of the Washington Redskins a year ago.

"Go ask Henderson if I was dumb today," he said after the game.

For the last decade, the Super Bowl has traveled to New Orleans twice, Pasadena three times, Pontiac, Tampa Bay, Palo Alto and San Diego.

Jackson's Tillman leads East to win

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Lewis Tillman of Jackson State rushed for 86 yards and a touchdown and Pitt linebacker Jerry Olsavsky scored on a 75-yard interception return as the East beat the West 24-6 in the East-West Shrine Game on Sunday.

Tracy Johnson also ran for a touchdown and the East defense bottled up the injury-depleted West offense throughout the day in the 64-year-old collegiate all-star game.

Rick Walsh of New Mexico provided the only West points with two first-half field goals.

Arkansas' 6-foot-4 defensive back Steve Atwater, one of several potential first-round draft picks on hand, intercepted two passes and was named defensive player of the game.

The 6-foot, 205-pound Tillman, who shattered Walter Payton's school career and single-season rushing records, earned offensive-player honors by averaging 4.4 yards on 19 carries and bulling in for a 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

Olsavsky's spectacular run clinched the victory late in the fourth period. With the West trailing by 11 points and on a rare drive, he picked off an errant pass by Oregon State's Erik Wilhelm and eluded two last-gasp attempted tackles to lurch into the end zone with 4:40 remaining.

The game, showcasing top college seniors from around the nation as well as two from Canada and one from Mexico, benefits 22 Shriners Hospitals for crippled and burned children in North America.

Sooners, Heels victims of upsets

College Basketball

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maybe Pitt should stick with Top Five opponents. Just ask Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs.

The Panthers lost earlier this season to Siena and Duquesne and had lost three of their last four games when they upset third-ranked Oklahoma 99-91 on Sunday.

"You saw the real Pitt team today," Tubbs said. "They played a physical game, and they whipped us physically and emotionally. Every time we'd get close, they'd make the big play and we'd make the wrong play."

Brian Shorter scored 37 points and had 12 rebounds, and Rod Brookin had 24 points as Pitt overcame Mookie Blaylock's 37-point performance for Oklahoma. Neither Shorter nor Brookin had ever scored that many points in a college game.

Oklahoma, 13-2, had won 11 in a row, and the loss was the first for the Sooners in the 12 games they have scored 90 or more points.

Pitt's only victories in its last five games have been against then-No. 2 Syracuse and Oklahoma, which hadn't lost since losing to Michigan in the third game of the season.

Shorter had 22 first-half points as Pitt used a nine-point run — aided by a technical foul on Tubbs — for a 55-49 halftime lead. Pitt scored only 57 points in its last game, a 76-57 loss No. 7 Georgetown last Wednesday.

Oklahoma, averaging 110.5 points a game, trailed by as many as 12 but closed to 86-81 on Herman Henry's tap-in with a little less than five minutes left. But Pitt then scored seven straight points — four by Brookin and three by Shorter — for a 93-81 lead with 2:30 to play.

Oklahoma, riding Blaylock's outside shooting, surged into an 18-8 lead, but Pitt, beating Oklahoma at its own fast break game, scored 23 of the next 30 points for a 31-25 lead midway through the first half.

Blaylock, who is averaging 21 points and five steals a game, had 26 first-half points. His previous high this season was 33. Stacey King had 26 points and nine rebounds points although his shooting range was obviously affected by a broken left index finger that forced him to miss three games.

The Sooners shot 45.5 percent as Tyrone Jones was 0-for-9, including six misses from 3-point range. Blaylock was 12 of 28. Shorter was 11 of 14 and 15 of 18 from the foul line as Pitt shot 49.2 percent.

UVA 106, UNC 83

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Richard Morgan scored a career-high 39 points and Virginia trounced No. 8 North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Morgan, a 6-4 senior guard, made a school-record eight of 14 shots from 3-point range. Virginia broke a five-game losing streak and improved to 8-6 overall and 1-2 in the ACC, while North Carolina slipped to 14-3 and 1-1.

It was the Cavaliers' first victory since Coach Terry Holland was hospitalized Jan. 1 for stomach surgery. North Carolina had won six straight games against Virginia and 13 of the last 14. The Tar Heels played the last 5:23 without Jeff Lebo, who was leading North Carolina with 26 points when he twisted his left ankle and had to leave the game.

L-ville 67, Ga. Tech 65

ATLANTA — Kenny Payne hit two 3-point baskets in the final 77 seconds, lifting ninth-ranked Louisville, 12-2, to victory over No. 19 Georgia Tech.

Fla St 101, Tennessee 90

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. - Tony Dawson scored 30 points and George McCloud added 29 as 14th-ranked Florida State, 12-1, defeated No. 17 Tennessee, 11-2.

King began the day with a seven-shot lead over Lopez and started the round with a birdie.

"It was very hard playing with that kind of lead," said King, who won $75,000. "I was trying not to falter. I know that it tends to give the players in your group new life if they see you struggling."

King did not have a bogey until the sixth hole. She finished with birdies on the 17th and 18th holes.

with the frustration of the local residents who can't attend the game," Kent said. "We've tried to create community activities to make them feel like they're part of the Super Bowl."

The largest of the 125 special events planned for the week is the Super Miami Extravaganza at Bayside Park Friday night, sort of a block party for 250,000 that will offer music, food festivals, and fireworks.

City officials expect more than 90,000 visitors by game day: the 67,500 with seats and the 25,000 or so who usually show up for a Super Bowl just to be on the scene. This latter group will include the usual influx of pickpockets, prostitutes, and hotel thieves who converge on major sports events.

Police officials say they are mounting a major anti-crime effort that includes an emergency network between major hotels to track break-ins and baggage thefts.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your inner strength helps you handle anything that comes your way. Build a solid foundation for the future. You have greater control over your emotions and your career. Expect positive relationship developments that could include marriage or remarriage. Special patience is called for when it comes to money. You need to promote yourself and your ideals. Consult experts if unsure what to do next.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Benjamin Franklin, actor James Earl Jones, hairstylist Vidal Sassoon, actress Betty White, Cubs manager Don Zimmer, puppeteer Shari Lewis, boxer Muhammad Ali.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You thrive in the workplace. Avoid conflicts with higher-ups. Memories of a great relationship occupy your thoughts. You are able to make up for lost time. Loyalty means a lot to other family members.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are on your way to the top again. Humor is one of your best allies. Self-confidence is part of your renewed success. A loyal partner also makes a big difference.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have a chance to make a major career move if you want to. A new plan will lead to wider social and job opportunities. Find practical applications for your bright ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is every reason to feel optimistic today. Your income is steady and will soon rise. Find ways to avoid people who drain you emotionally. A lucky break gives you an edge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on your broad overall plan and try not to get bogged down by details. Your success depends on playing a cool hand when challenged. Stay calm when your views come under fire. Romance blooms.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotions run high today. If aggravations add up, your temper could erupt before nightfall. Be careful not to alienate those you need most. Observe all safety rules.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do something practical to help a person who is in trouble. It may be inexpensive and still demonstrate a great deal of affection for the object of your generosity! Show support.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone may show hostility when you expected friendliness. Live and learn — and realize the hidden activity of some of the minds around you. Deal with any setbacks positively!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Foreign travel opens up new social and business horizons. Obtain the help of professionals if hoping to turn a clever idea into a commercial success. Be prepared to pay for their advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Retirees find a more interesting lifestyle at a price they can afford. Think about changing directions if you feel bogged down. An older person lends a helping hand. Return the favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look to mate or an old friend for comfort and inspiration. An alliance with a member of your own sex brings special benefits. Intelligent concessions will lead to greater domestic harmony.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An early-morning telephone call leaves you feeling on top of the world! Follow through on your promises. Your versatility impresses influential people. Keep tight control over your assets. Avoid lending money.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A ♡AKQJ73 ◇874 ♣AK8

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—We are sure that there'll be votes for a direct cue-bid of two spades, a takeout double or a jump to four hearts. Our choice is none of the above—we would bid three no trump! With any lead other than a diamond, we should be able to claim nine tricks; and even if the opponents find a diamond lead, there's no guarantee that they can take five tricks.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J6 ♡KJ5 ◇AKQ107 ♣AQ4

Your right-hand opponent opens three hearts. What action do you take?

A.—You can't double because you don't have spades and you might not come close to 11 tricks at diamonds. We'd gamble on three no trump—the odds are pretty good that partner will have the cards we need to collect nine tricks, as well as the half-stopper in spades.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q107 ♡A6 ◇K95 ♣AQ765

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—This is no time for dragging your feet. You have a good hand, stoppers in all suits and a sure source of tricks, since partner almost surely has a six-card diamond suit and you have a key filler. Bid three no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQ74 ♡6 ◇KJ952 ♣873

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Since partner almost surely has four spades on this auction, we would opt for four spades. However, if you feel the urgent need to check on whether partner does, indeed, have four spades, we would accept a cue-bid of two hearts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K1076 ♡5 ◇KJ6 ♣98652

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—In standard methods, partner is showing a balanced hand of about 21 points. With your 7 points, you should be content to try for nine tricks in no trump rather than 11 at clubs, despite your five-card club support and singleton heart. Pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠954 ♡7 ◇AK9872 ♣A63

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You know your side has at least an eight-card spade fit, and you have a very fine hand for partner—three prime cards, three trumps and a singleton. Three diamonds is a terrible bid—it shows a sub-minimum two-over-one response. If you bid anything other than four spades, you need to haul out that book on bidding theory.

'Boy wonder' honored with party

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jay Leno, Corbin Bernsen and Ed McMahon were among the 250 celebrities and friends who honored NBC entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff at a surprise 40th birthday party at Dodger Stadium.

Tartikoff was flown by helicopter into the stadium Sunday where he was met by a marching band and Leno, who was host of a "This is Your Life, Brandon Tartikoff" tribute.

Among the stars cheering in the stands were McMahon, Bernsen and his wife, actress Amanda Pays; Bernsen's fellow "L.A. Law" actor Harry Hamlin and his wife, Laura Johnson of ABC's "Heartbeat;" Justine Bateman and Michael Gross of "Family Ties;" George Wendt and John Ratzenberger of "Cheers;" Anthony Dennison, Susan St. James, Sandy Duncan and Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda.

The party was arranged by Tartikoff's wife, Lilly. Guests received blue baseball caps that said "Brandon, still a wonder at 40," a reference to his former nickname as the boy wonder of television programming.

"This has all been overwhelming," Tartikoff told the crowd. "Not only has my life been so blessed and so wonderful, but I wondered (when I was flying in here) when will my life be happier than at this moment?"

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Fonda is promoting a new exercise video that embraces her new philosophy of moderation, saying she is "striving hard to control compulsive tendencies."

Fonda

"In the old days I was very driven," Fonda said in an interview today in The New York Times. "Now I want to enjoy things more, to add more moderation to my life."

Fonda's new 65 minute video features exercises that are less strenuous than her previous tapes, in which she urged followers to "go for the burn." The new tape includes a 30-minute segment in which half of the on-screen class does high-impact aerobics and half does low-impact, giving viewers a choice.

"I'm not as macho as several years before," the 51-year-old actress said. "Hard and fast is not as effective as longer workouts in moderation...

"Now I'm striving hard to control compulsive tendencies."

Fonda said she is already working on her next exercise video and aims to attract "the institutionalized couch potatoes."

DAVISON, Mich. (AP) — Christopher Jeffries says he won't forget his Michigan roots even after his marriage to Princess Yasmin Aga Khan.

Jeffries, 38, a Flint native and president of a New York real estate company, plans to marry the princess Feb. 4 at the Plaza Hotel in New York. The television show "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" recently featured the couple's nuptial plans.

The 39-year-old princess is the daughter of the late Prince Aly Khan, spiritual leader of 5 million Ismaili Moslems, and the late movie star Rita Hayworth. The marriage will be the second for her and Jeffries.

"I still have close connections there...My entire family is still there," Jeffries said of the Flint area. "I still try to eat at Whitey's (Restaurant) every quarter."

Jeffries' mother, Jocelyn, said she was surprised to find that her future daughter-in-law was fond of the area during a recent visit.

"She thought Flint was quite charming," Mrs. Jeffries said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A nationwide weekend telethon raised nearly $22.6 million in pledges to fight cerebral palsy, a crippling disease that affects 700,000 Americans.

The 21-hour Weekend With The Stars Telethon, with "Hooperman" star John Ritter as host, was broadcast on 80 television stations around the country on Saturday and Sunday.

The 11th annual telethon raised money for United Cerebral Palsy Associations Inc., to conduct research and provide programs and community services.

The show raised $22,563,721 in pledges, including $737,048 from the Los Angeles area, according to telethon officials.

Among others appearing were Robert Urich, Joanna Kerns, Pia Zadora, Dennis James, Florence Henderson and Ritter's wife, Nancy Morgan Ritter.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The wife of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat made an unannounced appearance at a fund-raiser honoring talk show host Johnny Carson, praising the comedian and calling for peace.

Jihan Sadat praised Carson as "an American who is a household name throughout the world, a man who has humorously chided us for our shortcomings and brought laughter into our lives."

The star-studded dinner Sunday night also was held to raise money for scholarships in Carson's name to Hebrew University of Jerusalem, publicist Lee Solters said.

"Our goal must be books and brotherhood. We must pledge that there will be no more war, widows and no more war orphans and no more war veterans," said Mrs. Sadat, a longtime supporter of the university. "We can carry out that pledge through higher education, for knowledge is a giant step toward understanding, and understanding leads to peace."

Carson, host of NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show" for 26 years, was named recipient of Hebrew University's Scopus Award for his humanitarian efforts and excellence in his chosen profession.

He told the audience that a large telescope was being built in Hawaii and quipped: "Even with that telescope, I still wouldn't be able to see why Hebrew University is honoring this gentile."

But he added: "When I heard that more than 1,000 scholarships would come from this evening, I knew this was something I wanted to be a part of."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Home Box Office swept the cable industry's 10th Annual ACE Awards on the strength of a trio of dramas that captured 13 of the cable network's 35 awards.

HBO won four times more awards than its nearest competitor: Arts & Entertainment, which won eight. The ACE awards were presented during ceremonies Sunday sponsored by the National Academy of Cable programming.

HBO's winning dramas were "Vietnam War Story," "Mandela" and "Tidy Endings." In all, HBO had received 114 nominations in the 76 categories for which prizes were given.

Winning performers included Danny Glover, Alfre Woodard, Stockard Channing, Rip Torn, Robin Williams, Billy Crystal and Billy Joel. Lucy Webb received a fourth consecutive ACE as best actress in a comedy series for HBO's "Not Necessarily the News."

"Vietnam War Story," a 30-minute anthology series, won five awards out of its 18 nominations, the most of any show. It was named best dramatic series and Wesley Snipes won as best actor. Other ACEs in the dramatic series category were for directing, writing and direction of photography.

Regulator: FHLBB may be abolished

By THOMAS C. HAYES
New York Times News Service

DALLAS — The Treasury Department is considering whether to abolish the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as part of a sweeping overhaul of financial services regulation in the Bush administration, a top banking regulator said last week.

Robert L. Clarke, comptroller of the currency, also said the Treasury was considering whether to shift control of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., the savings industry's troubled insurance fund, to the banking regulators who govern the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The two funds would be kept separate, but FDIC officials would control the sales of troubled institutions and foreclosed properties.

The bank board, which governs the FSLIC, managed the rescue of 217 insolvent institutions last year, pledging $38 billion in future aid.

The FSLIC faces costs of $100 billion or more to cover losses at up to a third of the nation's 3,100 savings institutions. Analysts say taxpayers are likely to pay for most of the expected losses.

The FSLIC, which insures deposits of up to $100,000 in savings institutions, has little money available. The FDIC, which insures bank deposits up to $100,000, has a surplus of $15 billion.

The banking industry has opposed any proposal to directly combine the funds and their obligations.

A Treasury spokesman declined to comment on a report in The Wall Street Journal on Friday that said Treasury officials were close to proposing that bank regulators take over the management of the FSLIC.

This month, L. William Seidman, chairman of the FDIC, called for an end to the bank board's authority over the savings industry fund.

He told reporters that the bank board's role in enforcing regulations "gets mixed up with other duties, such as promoting housing." He added that the conflict weakened the board's commitment to protect the fund.

Lawrence J. White, one of three directors of the bank board, said Seidman's view was "crazy." In an interview Friday, he said he opposed transferring control of the FSLIC — and therefore, the management of the savings industry crisis — to bank regulators.

A Bush administration move to close the bank board would bring more uncertainty and confusion to the troubled industry, he said.

"Mistakes were made in the past," White said. "But this is not 1983 anymore. This is 1989. We have a much better regulatory system out there."

In a series of steps begun in 1985 the bank board clamped down on abuses within the industry by tightening capital requirements, restricting rates of growth and equity investments and doubling the number of loan examiners, to 1,500.

The vast majority of the losses recognized last year in the loan portfolios of savings institutions resulted from commitments made in 1983 and 1984.

Arco shows off new district office

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

After a year of extensive remodeling Arco Oil & Gas Co. has moved into its new Central District headquarters at 600 N. Marienfeld.

After being scattered among five separate buildings in town, all Arco employees are now together under one roof in the 11-story Arco Building, a fact that was celebrated Sunday with an open house for employees and their families.

Arco occupies 97 percent of the 197,500-sq. ft. structure which include an attached multi-tier garage. Distinctive features of the building include its spacious multi-story atrium and its unique sloped roof which sets it apart in the Midland skyline.

Marvin Pringle, vice president for Arco's Central District, said the building will house 525 of Arco's 1,400 Central District employees. "We are delighted to have finally have all our employees under one roof in Midland," said Pringle. "This move represents a long-term commitment to Midland."

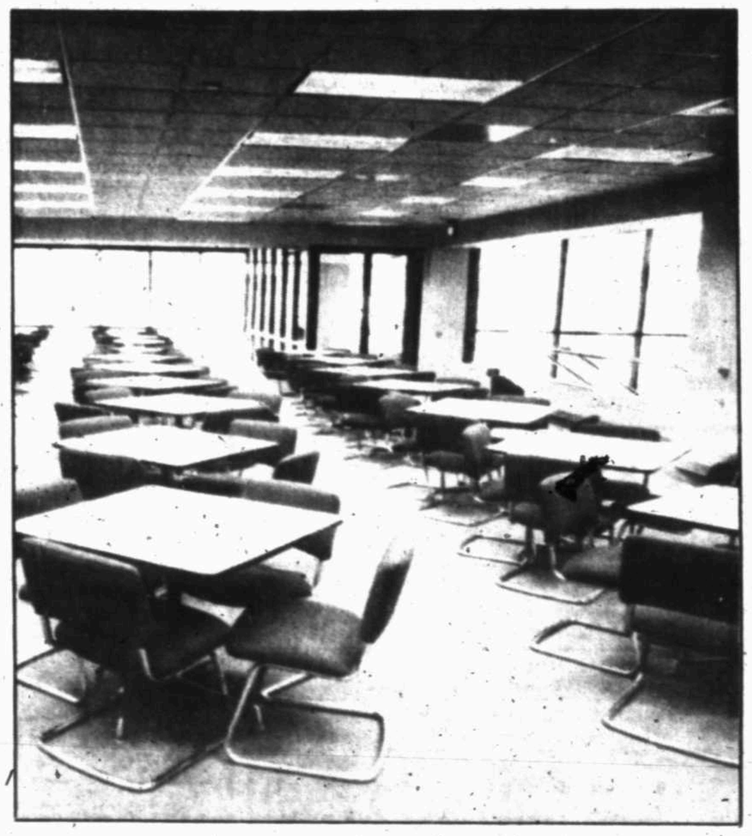

The Central District, which comprises 22 states, is the largest district for the oil company.

"We are proud of this new district headquarters in Midland," said Arco President Jim Middleton, in town for the open house. "It was very much needed."

He said with the recent Arco restructuring in which Denver and Tulsa offices were closed and merged into Midland and the move to the new headquarters building it appears Arco will maintain a strong presence in Midland for some years to come.

Arco has been active in the Permian Basin since 1919 and established a company headquarters in Midland in 1937.

Houston's rebound may hurt Louisiana recovery

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's chances for a recovery from its oil-based energy recession could be hurt by Houston's rebound as as big energy companies consolidate operations to cut costs, industry watchers say.

"A whole lot of exploration companies are closing offices," said Albert J. Anton of Carl H. Pforzheimer in New York.

While Houston has come to rely less on the oil and gas industry, the industry is focusing increasingly on Houston as the energy capital of the world.

Houston's Economic Development Council estimates energy company consolidations into Houston have added about 3,000 jobs in the past three years.

To date, the largest has been Enron Corp. After Enron merged with Omaha, Neb.-based InterNorth Inc. in 1985, it brought 1,000 jobs to Houston from communities including Bossier City.

Amoco Production Co. is looking at moving its New Orleans exploration and production office, with a staff of 1,050 into its Houston exploration office.

Other big oil companies have been making similar moves, but most are regional or field offices with fewer than 1,000 employees.

Michael O'Donnell of the accounting firm Arthur Andersen & Co. in Houston said companies are positioning themselves to live in a low-price environment.

Coastal begins unsolicited bid for Texas Eastern

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coastal Corp. today announced it was making an unsolicited cash tender offer for Texas Eastern Corp. in a $2.6 billion deal that would combine two of Houston's largest energy companies.

The $42 per share offer was about 40 percent more than Texas Eastern stock closed on Friday.

Texas Eastern said in a statement this morning that the Coastal tender offer had not been made and that the company had not received a copy of the tender offer.

"When the offer is received, the board of directors of Texas Eastern will carefully consider the offer and expects to advise its shareholders of its recommendations not to take more than 10 business days from the date of commencement of such tender offer," the Texas Eastern statement said.

Coastal said the decision to make the offer was approved at a Sunday night meeting of its board of directors.

Coastal is a Houston-based diversified energy firm with $8 billion in assets and operations in natural gas transmission and storage, gas and oil exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal, trucking and independent power production.

Texas Eastern is involved in natural gas and petroleum products, pipeline and international oil and gas exploration and production.

Futures price slips from high

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil prices softened this morning, unable to sustain the life-of-contract highs the February delivery contract set on Friday.

At midmorning the near-month contract was trading at $18.36, off 12 cents from Friday's close of $18.48, a gain of 31 cents from Thursday. Earlier in Friday's session the contract traded as high as $18.64.

For the week, the contract settled with a gain of 93 cents.

Late Friday, many Permian Basin purchasers raised their posted prices 50 cents to $17.25.

Speculators support dollar trade

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in modest early European trading today, helped by persistant speculative interest, currency dealers said. Gold prices fell.

Traders said the market was attempting to test the resolve of the central banks. The banks and other financial institutions are closed for national holidays in Japan and the United States, meaning they could not participate in any coordinated intervention.

"The Europeans would have to go it alone if they want to push the dollar lower," said a dealer at a major West German bank in Frankfurt.

In London, one British pound cost $1.7610, cheaper for buyers than $1.7770 Friday.

In London, the dollar was also quoted at 127.65 yen.

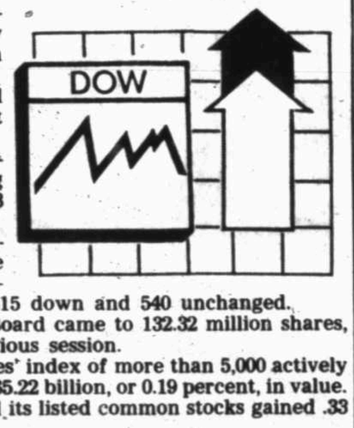

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $401.65 a troy ounce, down from $405.75 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $401.75.

In Zurich, the bid price was $401.65, down from $405.75 bid late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 48 cents to close at a bid $402.65.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.88 a troy ounce, its lowest level since March 1987, compared with Friday's $5.96.

Stocks set fresh post-crash high

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market chalked up another gain Friday to set fresh new highs since the crash nearly 15 months ago.

But the day's progress was small and tentative, coming on volume that lagged far behind Thursday's pace.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.75 to 2,226.07, finishing the week with a net gain of 31.78 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 836 up, 615 down and 540 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 132.32 million shares, down from 183 million in the previous session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $5.22 billion, or 0.19 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .33 to 159.59.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose .82 to 328.81, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .70 at 283.87.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Overall auto sales up despite GM sag

DETROIT (AP) — U.S.-made car and truck sales rose 5.6 percent during early January this year compared with the same period last year, despite a 19.8 percent decline in car sales at General Motors Corp.

The drop at GM may have been due to dealers moving some sales from early January to late December to inflate year-end numbers, analysts speculated on Friday. Strong truck sales helped bolster sagging automobile sales.

General Cinema sells bottling operation

BOSTON (AP) — Soft drink giant Pepsico Inc. has agreed to buy General Cinema Corp.'s bottling business for $1.75 billion in cash, the companies announced two weeks after an earlier deal fell through.

The previous deal, which carried a price tag of $1.5 billion, disintegrated after the Federal Trade Commission asked for additional details to determine whether it might violate antitrust laws. The delay prevented the sale from being completed in time for General Cinema to obtain tax deferral benefits.

1986 tax overhaul expected to widen deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional analysts disputed the Reagan administration's projection that the 1986 tax overhaul will worsen the federal budget deficit by nearly $91 billion over five years.

Nevertheless, the Congressional Budget Office acknowledged Friday its own forecasts show that rather than being "revenue neutral" as had previoulsy been thought, the sweeping law will lose $23.4 billion during the same five-year period ending in 1992.

Pentagon defendants enter innocent pleas

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — An electronics company and six men, the first group indicted in the Pentagon purchasing investigation, have pleaded innocent to charges they paid or took money for inside information about a multimillion-dollar defense contract.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Williams set a trial date Friday of March 27 for Teledyne Electronics of Newbury Park, Calif., a division of Teledyne Industries; for three Teledyne employees, George H. Kaub, Eugene R. Sullivan and Dale Schnittjer; for two private consultants, William Parkin and Fred Lackner, and for a Navy purchashing official, Stuart Berlin.

MCorp losses flood Shearson with red ink

NEW YORK (AP) — Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., Wall Street's largest firm, says it will report a loss for the fourth quarter of 1988 due to bad investments in a troubled Texas bank.

The company also said Friday it would revise downward its profit for the rest of 1988 because of previously reported accounting problems at The Boston Co., a subsidiary that caters to wealthy clients.

Shearson did not estimate the amount of quarterly loss from devalued securities in MCorp of Dallas, but said it would release fourth-quarter figures later this month. One stock analyst put the loss at $15 million to $16 million.

Brazilian government takes sweeping action

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government imposed a price freeze, revamped the currency and laid off 60,000 public employees as part of a sweeping program to control soaring inflation and trim a huge budget deficit.

Union leaders immediately threatened to call for a nationwide general strike to protest the measures, which eliminated an automatic monthly indexing of wages to inflation.

"Inflation should fall drastically and abruptly," Finance Minister Mailson da Nobrega said at a press conference Sunday.

Ortega vows opportunities, budget cuts

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — After a march by 5,000 opposition supporters, President Daniel Ortega said the government plans to give the opposition greater political opportunity and those who don't want it can "look for their democracy in Miami."

Ortega

In his Sunday speech, Ortega also said he would propose severe budget cuts that would require extensive government layoffs.

Sunday's opposition demonstration, the largest since a July 10 rally in the town of Nandaime that police broke up with tear gas and beatings, was called to protect the leftist government's economic management and political repression.

The peaceful march through Managua's streets was organized by the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinating Committee, a coalition of 14 opposition parties and several unions.

"We hope to have more demonstrations like this, more unity. There's no reason we can't run a single candidate for president next year," said Coordinating Committee president Carlos Huembes.

He claimed the fragmented opposition parties "are united against the Sandinista government."

Ortega did not refer directly to the demonstration or next year's scheduled presidential elections in a speech hours later to about 1,000 representatives of pro-Sandinista organizations. But he said sectors that oppose the government would be given a "pluralistic" opportunity.

He said that those who have been "dreaming of Yankee intervention and the defeat of the revolution" could "look for their democracy in Miami and stop enriching themselves in Nicaragua."

It was a sarcastic reference to the thousands of Nicaraguans who have fled the country in recent months, many to find themselves homeless in Miami or other parts of the United States.

Ortega acknowledged that Nicaragua's economic condition is "very critical" and said the state's budget will have to be cut.

He gave few specifics except to say the police budget would be protected but that massive layoffs would be required in most departments. On Dec. 31, Ortega had said he would cut the defense budget 40 percent.

No arrests were reported in the opposition march, whose participants complained about the economy, saying they were not earning enough to pay for rice, eggs, beer or milk.

"Where is the milk? Children are dying of hunger," said one angry construction worker. Like many, he did not want to give his name for fear of government retaliation.

Others said that a quart of milk costs about 45 cents, while a worker earns just 90 cents a day.

Ortega blames Nicaragua's economic plight on the war against U.S.-supported Contra rebels, a U.S. economic boycott and the battering the nation received in October from Hurricane Joan.

"They are killing us with hunger but they don't want to blame themselves," an old man wearing a straw hat said of the government.

He said he was 81 and the only worse time he could remember was the early 1930s, when Gen. Augusto Sandino was fighting U.S. Marine occupiers.

The 3½-hour march began with a Mass in memory of slain newspaper editor Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, then wended its way almost two miles to the cemetery where Chamorro is buried.

"Everybody's afraid, but people are beginning to lose their fear. The hunger does it," said Alberto Borge.

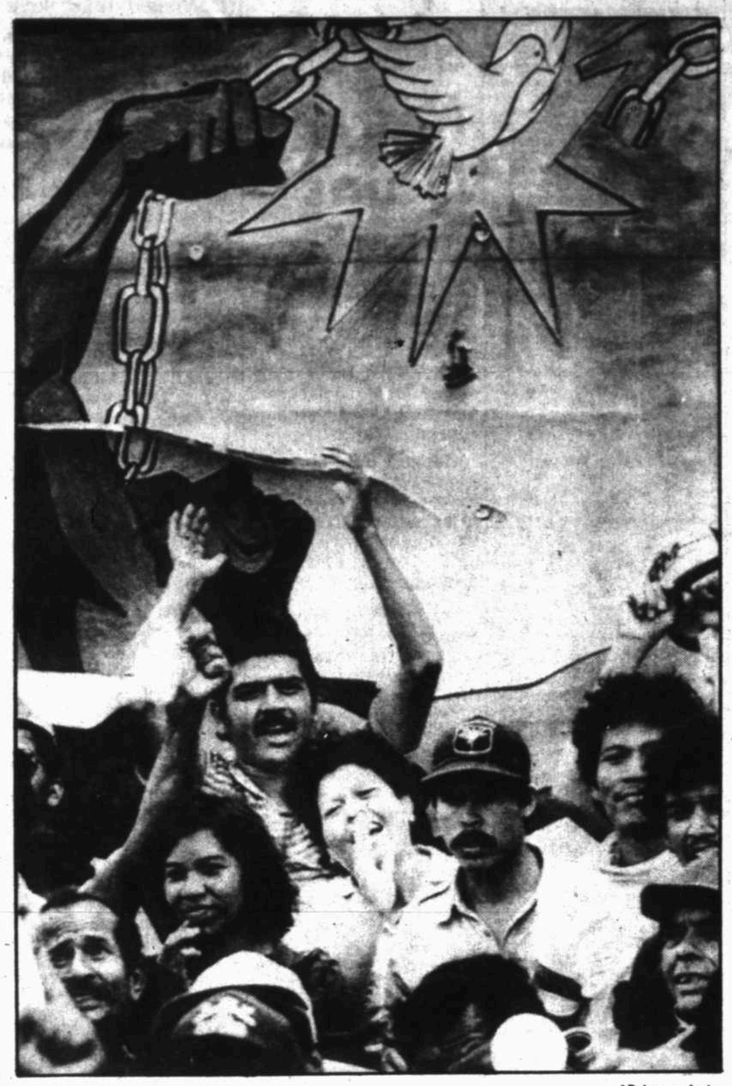

Borge said he was a computer technician, a former Sandinista and a cousin of the powerful Interior Minister, Tomas Borge.

The government issued a permit for the march, the largest anti-Sandinista demonstration since the Nandaime rally.

More than 40 demonstrators and 10 police were reported injured and more than 30 people arrested when police broke up that protest. The Sandinistas claimed Washington instigated the demonstration and expelled U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton.

Few police officers were visible Sunday. The Nicaraguan baseball league's all-star game was given a morning start to coincide with the march and drew 4,000 spectators.

Chamorro was publisher of the newspaper La Prensa. His Jan. 10, 1978 assassination galvanized opposition to the dictatorship of the late Anastasio Somoza, who was toppled a year later by the popular revolution the Sandinistas rode to power.

Police break up Prague rally

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Police detained at least 20 prominent Czechoslovaks before using clubs, dogs and water cannon to break up a banned rally by thousands of people, a human rights activist said today.

Among those detained Sunday was former Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, said Anna Sabatova of the Charter 77 human rights group. Hajek, 75, was a leader of the 1968 reform movement that was crushed that year by a Soviet-led invasion.

More than 5,000 people protested in Prague streets later Sunday to commemorate a student who burned himself to death to protest the invasion.

Communist authorities said 91 "of the most active instigators" were detained. At least one person was badly injured and several others, including members of a West German television crew, were beaten by police.

Sabatova said about 20 prominent activists, including author Eva Kanturkovs and Charter 77 activists Ladislav Lis and Rudolf Battek, were arrested before the rally as they prepared to lay flowers in memory of the 20-year-old student.

She said they were released after several hours, but it was not certain whether those arrested during the rally were freed.

The official news agency CTK denounced Sunday's rally, charging it was instigated by "Western subversive centers."

In East Germany on Sunday, police broke up a rally by several hundred human rights activists in downtown Leipzig, witnesses said. They said police arrested about 80 people.

The demonstrators in Leipzig were protesting Friday's arrest of 11 opposition activists, the witnesses said on condition of anonymity. The West German ARD television network said about 500 people took part.

The police action in Prague came on a day Czechoslovakia joined 34 other countries in signing a landmark accord on human rights at the Helsinki Review Conference in Vienna, Austria.

The U.S. ambassador to the talks, Warren Zimmermann, said Czechoslovakia's Communist authorities had violated the freedom of assembly granted in the spirit of the 1975 Helsinki accords.

In Prague, marchers chanted "Long Live Freedom!" and called for the release of political prisoners as they headed toward Wenceslas Square, jeering at police.

White-helmeted riot police wielding rubber truncheons, some with leashed dogs, attacked about 1,000 demonstrators who had gathered at the square and sang the national anthem.

Demonstrators were dispersed into side streets, but remained there whistling and jeering at police.

Several people were injured in beatings by police, and one man was so badly injured that an ambulance had to be called. Among the beaten was an ARD television crew, a correspondent of the West German news agency DPA said.

CTK reported 91 arrests.

The rally was called as a tribute to Jan Palach, who ended his life by setting himself ablaze in the square on Jan. 16, 1969.

The suicide was a protest of the Warsaw Pact invasion the previous year that crushed the "Prague Spring" of liberal reforms. Thousands of shocked Czechoslovaks attended his funeral.

On Sunday, a second protest of up to 3,000 people in front of the school Palach had attended was also dispersed, activists said.

Sunday marked the third time in six months that police used force to break up rallies in central Prague attending banned rallies. The other demonstrations took place in August and October.

'Dodge City' violence impeding Aquino's struggle to build democracy

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Filipinos sat fixated before their television sets as troops poured automatic fire and rockets into a military camp. Was the target Communist or Moslem insurgents? No. It was the police.

Later, the hottest topic of newspaper and broadcast commentators was a report that hundreds of Uzi submachine guns and Galil rifles were being imported into a country already awash with weapons.

The importer was the House of Representatives.

The two episodes illustrate the nature of Philippine society, where a Westernized, democratic veneer covers an often violent land of "Dodge City" social norms.

They also underscore the challenge facing President Corazon Aquino in trying to build a modern, progressive nation in a land still locked into corrupt and violent ways.

The United States, which maintains six military bases in the archipelago nation and is committed to helping build democracy in the Philippines, has a substantial stake in her success.

President Reagan this month proposed doubling aid to the Philippines to $649.4 million at a time when assistance to other nations is being held in check or reduced.

Continued weaknesses and shortcomings in the 165,000-member armed forces were highlighted by the three-day takeover of the regional headquarters of the Philippine Constabulary in Zamboanga City, 560 miles south of Manila.

On Jan. 5, about 15 Moslem policemen and their supporters, angry over plans to charge them in a 1984 killing, managed to seize control of the garrison and killed the commander and his chief of staff.

The renegades then held out for two days against a furious military assault by nearly 1,000 troops after the government refused further negotiations.

By the time the garrison was secured, 21 people, all but two of them renegades, were dead. But the renegades' leader, Rizal Alih, escaped to the humiliation of Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa, who ordered the assault.

Meanwhile, the regional headquarters was destroyed, becoming the second major garrison destroyed in 18 months of military operations against dissident soldiers or police.

The general staff headquarters in Manila was gutted during the August 1987 coup attempt by former Lt. Col. Gregorio Honasan. No major headquarters has been destroyed in clashes with Communist or Moslem rebels since Mrs. Aquino took office in 1986.

Most Manila television stations, which rarely report events outside the capital, dispatched crews to Zamboanga. Dramatic footage of soldiers battling police shocked residents of the capital, many of whom are largely insulated from violence in the countryide.

"The inconclusive result is now viewed by a shocked nation as using a sledgehammer to swat a fly," wrote columnist Jesus Bigornia in The Manila Bulletin.

In the aftermath of the Zamboanga incident, de Villa has ordered commanders to weed out "scalawags" from the police and military ranks. Yet many Filipinos are skeptical this crackdown on lawlessness in the ranks will be any more effective than those that came before.

Last year, Cicero Campos, chairman of the National Police Commission, said his agency received an average of 1,500 complaints a year of criminal activity by some of the country's 52,000 policemen. He admitted the figure was the "tip of the iceberg," and few of the complaints result in prosecution or dismissal.

"What do the authorities do about these criminal elements dressed in law enforcement uniforms," wrote columnist Ninez Cacho-Olivares in the newspaper BusinessWorld. "Do they wait until these criminal elements storm a building or an army camp before moving in on them?"

Less dramatic — but equally ominous — were reports in Manila newspapers that the House of Representatives was importing up to 600 Uzi submachine guns and Galil rifles to provide "security" for its some 200 members.

Rep. Renato Unico, a member of the House defense committee, confirmed the reports and said the Israeli-made weapons had been ordered after the chamber's security force ran away during the August 1987 coup attempt.

Unico, dubbed "Uzico" by radio commentators, said congressmen needed the weapons for protection during visits to remote districts, where Communist and Moslem insurgents operate.

But the idea of congressional security guards wielding high-powered firearms, paid for by tax money, raised the specter of a return to the "private armies," which Filipino politicians traditionally used to intimidate opponents and guarantee their re-election.

Mrs. Aquino had promised to disband such "private armies," which were believed to number nearly 300 when she came to power.

"Let's face it, political bouts are settled as much by blood and bullets as by ballots," wrote the Philippine Daily Inquirer in an editorial.

The newspaper Malaya said the report ominously suggests that despite promises of a new era in Philippine politics, "the political warlordism of Philippine politics, with all its negative connotations, is here to stay."

Ambassador unveils bronze bust of King

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins today unveiled a bronze bust of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and said the slain black American's non-violent civil rights movement held some lessons for South Africa.

Perkins told reporters he did not "tend to equate" South Africa and the United States, "but searching for non-violent solutions is probably something worth thinking about" in South Africa.

Perkins, the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa, and Zenos Frudakis, the Philadelphia sculptor who made the bust, unveiled the work under a tent on a bushy plot where a new U.S. Embassy is to be built.

The 125 onlookers at the gathering in Pretoria included black and white South Africans prominent in campaigns against the apartheid system of legalized race segregation, and a low-level representative from the South African Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

A 30-member choir from the Roman Catholic church of St. Peter Claver in Mamelodi, a black township near Pretoria, sang several civil rights hymns. Women in red headscarves and conical hats woven from grass mingled with dark-suited diplomats.

One hymn was "Senatla Martin Luther King." Senatla means leader in the Sotho language.

Enos Mabuza, chief minister of South Africa's KaNgwane black homeland, told the gathering there were striking parallels between the racial separation in South African today and segregation in the United States during King's lifetime. A major difference, he said, was that the U.S. Constitution protects individual rights but South African laws "protect white privilege and white-minority rule."

Shultz calls on Soviets to dismantle jamming transmitters, tear down wall

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Praising the Soviet Union for its progress on human rights, Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived today to wrap up the most ambitious human rights accord of the 1980s.

Shultz called for the dismantling of the Soviets' radio jamming transmitters and renewed the U.S. demand that the Soviets tear down the Berlin Wall. He called action on the wall "one of the acid tests" of Kremlin intentions.

The secretary and other foreign ministers are in Vienna to sign the East-West human rights and security accord, a 35-nation review of the 1975 Helsinki agreements.

The 50-page document took more than two years to negotiate and was formally adopted on Sunday. It contains landmark commitments on human rights and sets the seal on new NATO-Warsaw Pact talks on conventional arms control that are due to open in Vienna in March.

Shultz flew to Vienna from Washington on his final diplomatic mission after 6½ years as State Department chief. He is to speak Tuesday to foreign ministers reviewing the Vienna accord.

Listing human rights improvements as his proudest achievement, Shultz credited the Soviets and their East European allies with adopting "much more open" societies than they had in 1975, when the agreement to foster East-West understanding was signed.

Shultz told reporters as he flew to Vienna that "real progress has been made, particularly in the last two or three years."

However, he called on the Soviets to dismantle the giant transmitters that had jammed Western radio broadcasts for years. Late last year, the Soviets and their East European allies stopped interfering with Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe broadcasts.

"Jamming has stopped," Shultz said, "and we don't want to see it reinstituted."

Therefore, Shultz said, "we think that the facilities by which you jam ought to be dismantled so that you can't start it up again."

The Helsinki accords, signed by the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada and 32 European nations, tacitly accepted the post-World War II borders of Eastern Europe. In exchange for this concession, the Soviets pledged to permit more contacts with the West and freer movement of people and ideas.

"In Helsinki," Shultz said, "the diplomacy was way ahead of the reality. Gradually, the reality has moved toward what we set out as the objective. It has a long way to go, but now we have a process of movement."

Shultz, who leaves office with the Reagan administration on Friday, seemed confident the incoming Bush administration would keep pressure on Moscow.

He singled out the concrete and barbed-wire wall that surrounds West Berlin, keeping East Germans from fleeing, as an unfulfilled goal.

"It's more than a symbol. It tells you, by its very presence, that you still have a long way to go," Shultz said.

China, Vietnam have first meeting in decade

BEIJING (AP) — China and Vietnam have begun talks on the Cambodian conflict in the first face-to-face meeting of high-level officials from the two countries in more than nine years.

China's Foreign Ministry said today that First Deputy Foreign Minister Dinh Nho Liem of Vietnam was in Beijing for "private consultations with Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Liu Shuqing on a political settlement of the Kampuchean (Cambodian) question."

Neither China nor Vietnam would offer further details of the visit, which both sides apparently tried to keep secret.

Liem's arrival Saturday was not reported by the Chinese media and his welcoming venue was changed in an apparent effort to evade foreign journalists who had learned he was on a commercial flight from Bangkok.

Eastern European sources said the talks would last at least several days and cover the timetable for Vietnam's troop withdrawal from Cambodia and that country's political future.

Vietnam, which invaded Cambodia in late 1978 to drive the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge from power, claims it now has about 50,000 troops in Cambodia and has set September 1989 as a target date for pulling out all its forces.

China says previous Vietnamese "withdrawals" were mere troop rotations, but has called the recent announcement of the September withdrawal a "step forward."

The East European sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said discussions of Cambodia's political future will be more difficult.

China has called for a coalition government led by resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk and including both the Vietnam-backed faction of Heng Samrin and the Khmer Rouge.

Hanoi wants Heng Samrin to have a major role in any future coalition government and demands guarantees that Pol Pot and other Khmer Rouge leaders held responsible for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during the Khmer Rouge's brutal four-year rule be barred from positions of power.

The sources said China also is not interested in discussing a visit by Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach until the vice minister-level talks achieve positive results.

China, a staunch ally of Vietnam during the 1960s and 1970s, launched a 20-day border war against Vietnam in early 1979 to "punish" Hanoi for its invasion of Cambodia.

There have been no direct senior-level talks since, and China has insisted Vietnam must first pull its troops out of Cambodia before normal contacts can be resumed.

Chris-
Just wanted to drop you a line to let you know I'm all settled into my new spot at Saddle Club Apartments. And it's just fantastic! This place has everything I need and even more! I never imagined that apartment living could be like this, or I would have moved here months ago. Spacious and affordable. Private, but the people are really friendly. And the amenities are out of this world!
Give me a call soon. Or drop by sometime-I'm sure you'll enjoy it. Life at Saddle Club Apartments is simply...GREAT!
