Hart 'follows suit,' trumps Mondale

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Gary Hart said today his three-to-one trouncing of Walter Mondale in Vermont is fresh evidence the Democratic primary tide is turning in his favor, but contends his campaign will "still be playing catch-up" at least through the month.

Out at dawn, the Colorado senator greeted workers at a Birmingham, Ala., plant with "I'm Gary Hart, running for president. I need your help."

Interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, Hart said Tuesday's victory in the non-binding Vermont primary "continues very much what seems to be a pattern evolving."

He added, "There have been three states in a row ... that seem to be moving in our direction."

Yet, with Mondale's campaign outspending his 10 to 1, Hart said, "In many respects, I guess, I'm still the underdog. ... I think we'll still be playing catch-up, if you will, throughout the rest of this month at least."

For his part, Mondale, who had expected to lose in Vermont, conceded that Hart's apparent sweep of every precinct in the state "will hurt."

To a cheering Florida crowd, the former vice president implored: "This is not just a horse race. This has become a battle for the soul of the Democratic Party and the future of our country."

It is a horse race that has seen Hart win an an ever-increasing share of the votes: 37 percent to Mondale's 28 percent in New Hampshire; 51 percent to 44 percent in Maine and 71 percent to 20 percent in Vermont.

Mondale, once the front-runner and the victor so far in only the Iowa party caucuses, looked south for his comeback, campaigning today in Georgia, Alabama and Florida — three of the nine states holding Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses on "Super Tuesday" next week.

"If I were in the White House ... I would be very concerned about the Hart candidacy. He represents a far more significant threat to the president than does Walter Mondale."

- Mondale's showing in Vermont analyzed — Page 9A
- Candidates gear up for Southern primaries; Reagan again asks campaign questions — Page 4C

And Hart, noting indications of a Republican crossover vote in Vermont, declared, "I intend to defeat Ronald Reagan."

Although no delegates were at stake in Vermont and the outcome was mainly symbolic, the depth of Hart's victory was dramatic.

Hart appeared to have won every precinct in the state, an accomplishment that not even former President Jimmy Carter achieved in 1980 when he captured 73 percent of the state vote in a Democratic primary against Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Polling conducted of voters by CBS News indicated that Hart drew support from voters under 30 years of age by an 8-1 margin. He also outdrew Mondale among elderly voters by 2-1 and carried the union vote, despite the former vice president's AFL-CIO endorsement.

For Mondale, the loss had not been unexpected, and he sought to put the best face on it, saying he had not really contested Vermont.

"New Hampshire, Maine has hurt. I assume Vermont will hurt," Mondale said.

Mondale said he would now focus exclusively in the South, adding, "We were really not contesting Vermont. We spent little or no money there ... this was one we just couldn't afford to be in."

Henkel said Mondale's statement "flies in the face of reality. They were here and they played hard."

Mondale said Vermont would give Hart momentum, but contended, "You don't elect momentum to the White House. You elect a human being."

With all of Vermont's 264 precincts reporting, Hart had 51,703 votes, or 71 percent, to Mondale's 14,896 votes for 20 percent.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson had 5,677 for 8 percent. By failing to gain 10 percent of the vote for the second straight primary, Jackson now faces the prospect of losing federal matching campaign money in 30 days. To regain eligiblity for federal money, he must win 20 percent in an upcoming state contest.

"If we don't get national funds it would not stop our campaign," Jackson said in Michigan.

Ohio Sen. John Glenn and former Sen. George McGovern weren't on the ballot in Vermont. Glenn kept up a southern campaign schedule while McGovern remained in Massachusetts, where Democrats also hold their primary Tuesday.

McGovern waged a last-minute write-in campaign and hoped for at least 5 percent of the vote. Write-in votes had not been tallied in the unoffical count by the News Election Service.

"There appears to be a Republican crossover. I feel that's the real story to come out of Vermont," said Henkel.

Jackson said Hart's string of wins might help him. "Hart is embarrassing the Democratic apparatus. He's almost humiliating them," Jackson said.

Vermont's selection of delegates for the national convention will not begin until April 24, when local caucuses will choose representatives to the state convention. Vermont sends 17 delegates to the Democratic convention and 19 to the GOP convention.

Vermont's open primary allows residents to vote in the primary of their choice, and history has shown that voters tend to go where the action is.

In 1980, 62 percent of the voters cast Republican ballots, with Democrats boosting John Anderson

Mayoral candidate Frank Lasater attacks the way in which city government has been operated, basing his statements on a Texas Research League study.

Tax hikes, service cuts not answer, Lasater says

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"Cutting services and raising taxes" isn't the way to run city government and citizens won't go for it, contended mayoral candidate Frank Lasater this morning during a news conference at City Hall.

On the last day to file for city, school board and hospital district races, Lasater criticized the manner in which the City Council has handled the public and problems of street maintenance and operated City Hall.

The private businessman based his comments on an independent report released by the Texas Research League in January 1983.

- Odessa also has heated mayoral race — Page 1C

The idea to cut services and raise taxes had been offered by the City Council last Friday during a special meeting to look at the city's financial condition. The report reflected the city will experience a shortfall of $2.1 million, down from the projected $2.5 million.

Lasater, who is opposing incumbent G. Thane Akins, said the "council is responsible in providing necessary services."

Instead of cutting services, Lasater suggested the council form a commission to look for inefficiencies in how city government is being run. He suggested selling the sanitation department to private business, since the city is facing a deficit in that area. Many of the apartment complexes have gone to private business and Fort Worth saved $1.5 million when it sold its department.

Family flees home with 'life of its own'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Joan says she doesn't believe in ghosts, but she and her husband and six kids have moved out of a house they say took on a life of its own with objects flying through the air, lights flashing and a shower that turned itself on.

Police said there was nothing they could do about reported kamikaze flights by everything from telephones to candlesticks.

An electrician couldn't stop lights and appliances from turning on apparently without anyone touching a switch.

Three Mormon missionaries say they saw things move.

The family, identified only as Joan and John and their six children, moved to a motel Monday night to escape the bizarre events that began Saturday, the Columbus Dispatch reported Tuesday.

"I don't believe in the supernatural," the newspaper quoted Joan as saying. "But the stereo would blast, and radios and TVs would turn on without electricity."

Mike Harden, a Dispatch columnist, said the family contacted him Monday, agreeing to an interview on condition they not be identified, after police and church officials said they couldn't help.

Pilot found uninjured after plane crash

From Staff Reports

A Permian Basin pilot was found uninjured at a crash site by a three-member crew from the Midland Civil Air Patrol Squadron early Tuesday evening after the squadron was called out to locate a missing plane at 3 p.m. that day.

Sam Henderson, no age available, was found by Captain and Commander Richard Kolas, 2nd Lt. Bill Robinson and Senior Member Cliff Sikes, after the crew detected the downed plane's ELT (emergency locator transmitter), which is activated automatically when a plane goes down.

Ameen said Henderson was thought to live at the ranch.

The Midland and Odessa Civil Air Patrol Squadrons were notified of the missing plane Tuesday afternoon by Group 16 Comdr. Lee Reagan of Odessa. The Odessa crew included 1st Lt. Van Canfield, pilot, and 2nd Lt. Lori Hale, observer.

According to Ameen, the Midland crew, with Robinson acting as pilot, Kolas as observer and Sikes as scanner, located the plane. Odessa's crew landed to investigate the crash site for injuries and turn off the ELT.

The Midland and Odessa squadrons cover a sector which includes the western third of the state, Ameens said. If they are needed, however, they can be called in to help locate missing planes in Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Mexico.

Raids staged in child molestation investigation

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Photographs, weapons and records were seized in raids on 10 homes and a now-closed school where authorities say up to 60 young children were bound, sexually abused and forced to watch while pet rabbits and turtles were tortured.

Tuesday's daybreak raids came six months after a former teacher was arrested for investigation of child molesting after the mother of a 2-year-old complained, authorities said.

Police and sheriff's deputies served 11 search warrants at the Virginia McMartin Pre-school and homes in Los Angeles, Riverside and Orange counties, police Capt. John Wehner said.

Among the homes searched were those of Virginia McMartin, who ran the school for 30 years; her daughter, Peggy McMartin Buckey, who helped run the school; and Mrs. Buckey's son, Raymond Charles Buckey, who had taught at the school.

Buckey, 25, was arrested Sept. 7 on suspicion of child molestation and released on $15,000 bail. However, the district attorney never filed charges against him, saying additional investigation was needed, and his bail was refunded.

The school voluntarily closed three months ago after parents began withdrawing their children, and last month the state Department of Social Services temporarily suspended its operating license, the first step toward permanent revocation.

The department's complaint alleges that for more than a year before his arrest, Buckey molested at least 25 boys and girls between the ages of 2 and 5 who were under the care of the school. Manhattan Beach police and the Los Angeles district attorney's office have said the number may be as high as 60.

Air France plane diverted

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A lone hijacker diverted an Air France plane with 68 people aboard en route from Frankfurt to Paris today and forced it to land in Geneva. Swiss police overpowered him nearly five hours later.

Geneva police spokesman Marcel Voudroz said the hijacker was arrested by security men disguised as airport personnel who were allowed to board the plane with food for the passengers.

"He was arrested in the cockpit without a struggle," Voudroz said. He said the man had no firearm but that a knife was found in his airplane bag which he apparently had claimed to contain a bomb.

The hijacker, who spoke Arabic and several other languages, had demanded that the plane be refueled to go to Libya. Swiss officials said he was about 30 years old. He was not immediately identified.

Fifty-four passengers and six crew members aboard the Boeing 737 were freed unharmed at 1:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. EST), Justice Ministry spokesman Ulrich Hubacher said.

Gina Divita, 25, Research Technician at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, jogs along the seawall on Tuesday afternoon. The concrete structure that Galvestonians and tourists use for recreation spared the island $100 million in hurricane damages.

Engineers estimate seawall saved $100 million

GALVESTON (AP) — Galveston's seawall, a 10-mile-long barrier that blocked the storm surge of Hurricane Alicia last summer, prevented about $100 million of additional damage, according to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The seawall, stretching along the Gulf side of this island resort, protected the densely populated and developed portions of Galveston, said Corps spokesman Ken Bonham.

Bonham told the Galveston News that a survey shows that without the seawall Hurricane Alicia would have created a swath of destruction one to two blocks wide when it slammed into the Texas coast Aug. 18.

The spokesman said the $100 million estimate "is considered rather conservative" since it is based on 20-year-old engineering appraisals.

Since the wall was built, Bonham said, the Corps estimates that it has prevented about $400 million in storm damage. Construction on the wall started after a 1900 storm that washed over Galveston and killed more than 5,000 people.

state

Hurricane Alicia struck Galveston Island as it moved ashore, causing extensive flooding in areas not protected by the seawall.

A Corps estimate placed the total loss from the storm in Texas at about $287 million. The loss to residential property was estimated at $100 million. Utility companies suffered about $60 million in damage and there were about $51 million in agriculture losses, the Corps said.

The hurricane sent ashore a storm surge that measured 12.7 feet at San Luis Pass, on the south end of Galveston Island. High water marks on the portion of the island not protected by the seawall ranged from 11 to 6.5 feet. The wall prevented most tidal flooding in the center of the city, officials said. Bolivar Peninsula, northeast of Galveston Island, was virtually inundated with the surge reaching 7.3 to 8.3 feet.

A hurricane-protection project in the Texas City-La Marque area prevented about $8 million in damage, Bonham said. Without the project's levee and drainage system, he said storm waves would have swept all the way across Texas City and La Marque. He said the storm surge measured 9.2 feet at nearby Hitchcock.

Clean up following the storm, according to the Corps estimate, cost about $12.9 million. There were 103,000 telephone customers without service in the Houston-Galveston area and Southwestern Bell estimated that 4.5 million feet of aerial cable and 9 million feet of customer feed wires had to be replaced, along with 2,600 utility poles.

About 750,000 customers were without electrical power, some for more than a week. The Houston Lighting and Power Co. reported that more than 2,300 poles were felled and more than 2,700 transformers destroyed.

The Corps said it cost about $17.9 million to repair damage to waterways and spoil disposal areas.

NTSB investigates Amtrak derailment

MARSHALL (AP) — A former railroad track inspector who was demoted following an Amtrak trail derailment that killed four and injured 69 passengers said he did not slow the train down because he "knew in my mind the track was safe."

Glenn Stafford, at the time a Missouri-Pacific rail inspector, testified Tuesday before investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board.

Stafford's testimony opened the hearing at a Marshall hotel, about 10 miles south of the derailment site in near the Louisiana border.

Lester Reingold, NTSB public information officer, said the investigation would focus on a section of shattered rail which investigators believe might have caused the derailment.

"The next step will be the actual accident report, which will be out in three or four months," Reingold said, adding the report will include conclusions from the laboratory report and the investigation at the scene of the accident.

In his testimony, Stafford said his instincts and 13 years experience as a foreman told him a section of the track still under repair was safe. It was the same section that collapsed under the Amtrak "Eagle."

Stafford said no instructions were given to the Amtrak train to slow its speed because, "in my opinion there was no need. It was safe. It was a judgment factor on my part, but in my 13 years as a foreman, I'd learned the difference between good and bad track."

He added, "I knew in my mind the track was safe."

Stafford said only three of the four bolts needed to secure an "angle bar" brace on the replaced section of rail were in place when the train passed.

Stafford said he watched a freight train pass safely before the passenger train, and saw the track was functioning properly.

Reingold said the board also will ask questions about how human factors might have contributed to the derailment.

Guardian to protest dinner

ROCKWALL (AP) — The guardian of a teen-ager whipped by a sheriff said a planned appreciation dinner for the former official is a "slap in the face of justice" and that she will risk "attack or arrest" to protest it.

The barbecue dinner is scheduled Saturday to honor former Rockwall County Sheriff John M. Vance, who is to start a one-year federal prison sentence four days later.

"I'm 42 years old, a little old fat lady that doesn't know how to do anything like protesting," Martha Glenn said Tuesday. "But I've taught my teen-agers to stand up for what they believe in, and I feel like it's a slap in the face of justice."

Vance was sentenced Feb. 22 after he pleaded guilty to charges he whipped 15-year-old Richard V. Williams, an auto theft suspect who was released when authorities learned the car they thought stolen was Mrs. Glenn's.

U.S. District Judge Joe Fish also fined the veteran law officer $1,000 for the conviction on a violation of civil rights charge.

Dewayne Cain, a local developer, helped organize the dinner and said Vance "needs some support and the people of Rockwall need to show that support."

Mrs. Glenn said she will pay the $5 fee to attend the dinner, even if she has to go alone.

"I've pursued the case all the way to the Justice Department and if I have to go to the dinner all by myself, I'll go all by myself," she said.

"I would like the opportunity to speak to Mr. Vance face-to-face. I would like to ask for my own piece of mind if Richard was an isolated case," she said.

Mrs. Glenn said she would not protest the dinner if it were held in private.

"My only gripe is it's being held at the high school. I feel that is sending a message to students that the school itself upheld the sheriff's action. He flogged one of the students and then they allow the school to honor him," she said.

Williams, who said Vance whipped him with a leather riding crop, was once a student at the Rockwall High School, Mrs. Glenn said.

Mrs. Glenn said she called the superintendant of schools and the president of the school board and asked them to prevent use of the school, but they told her they still planned to allow the dinner.

"They've made application to use the cafeteria in compliance with school policy. In Rockwall, we allow citizens of the community to use school facilities on application, and they've made application," said School Superintendent Jimmy Williams.

Mrs. Glenn said Rockwall is a small town, "everyone knows me, unfortunately." But she said no matter what the risk she wants to protest the dinner.

"I feel maybe I would be in danger.," she said. " ...I am willing to take the chance of being arrested or attacked to stand up for what I believe in.

Turkey's traditional coffeehouses have long history

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's traditional coffeehouses have served as community centers throughout centuries, successfully defying all attempts to bring them under some sort of official control.

Now a new education minister hopes to turn them into meeting grounds with a dash of culture.

In a recent statement to a Turkish wire service, minister Vehbi Dincerler announced plans to introduce "book corners" to the coffeehouses so that they could partially serve as reading rooms for the nation's youth.

"We are studying the matter. Perhaps we could supply the books free of cost. This way the young people could make better use of their free time," he explained.

Most of Turkey's secondary schools and universities lack sufficient library space, study halls, recreational or sport facilities.

With 3 million unemployed who are mostly young, coffeehouses have flourished as informal youth centers.

One of the most popular in this capital city is Baba's coffeehouse near the law and political science schools. There the students exchange notes, get some homework done and consume cups of darkly brewed tea or Turkish coffee.

"The coffeehouses already serve as reading and study rooms for us. The minister would do better to improve existing school libraries," says Kadir Bas, 21, a student of economics.

Says his classmate, Tuncay Karaartu, "We don't come here out of choice. Our school does not even have a student snack bar or any other place for us to meet for fun or study."

Turkish coffeehouses mean many things to many people. Some find them places for idlers where time is killed with playing of cards and backgammon and petty gossip.

Others view them as indispensable and valuable, mirrors of most of the society.

Coffee first came to Turkey from Arabia in 1543 and the first coffeehouse was established a decade later. In the 17th century, Ottoman turks introduced coffee to Europe through Austria and France.

In Istanbul's coffeehouses the janizaries plotted the overthrow of the sultans. The Moslem clergy condemned the houses as "dens of evil" that kept the faithful away from the mosques for daily prayers.

In 1933, Ottoman Sultan Murat the IV closed down the coffeehouses, banned drinking of coffee and smoking of tobacco.

All three, however, returned with a vengeance. Soon, in Istanbul alone there were over 1,000 coffeehouses.

Coffeehouses differed widely according to neighborhood and attendance. Several, like Meserret and Ikbal in Istanbul, became famous as the gathering place of the literati.

Disease aids Spaniards' conquest

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Diseases that had existed in Europe for centuries before the discovery of the New World helped the Spaniards' conquest to a greater degree than previously believed, says a Santa Fe researcher.

Daniel Reff, who is completing a thesis and a book on the effects of Old World diseases among the Indians of northwest Mexico, says disease traveled quickly in advance of the conquering Spaniards.

Historical data is scarce, says Reff, 34, who is a visiting scholar at the School of American Research in Santa Fe. He says evidence suggests smallpox, malaria, measles, typhoid, influenza and dysentery killed many native people before they saw any Spaniards.

So far, Reff's research has turned up evidence to suggest that Old World diseases may have spread into Arizona and New Mexico and killed thousands of native people by the mid-1600s.

Reff is also questioning the widespread belief that a severe climatic change and warfare caused the decline of many of the native cultures in the mid-1400s.

He says his research shows many native cultures were large and complex until the mid-1500s and that disease could have played a significant role in the demise of the cultures in northwest Mexico and what was to become Arizona and New Mexico.

Although Reff admits his research is less than conclusive, he says it explores a void in previous writings about the history of the area and about the dynamics of European-Indian relationships.

The bulk of Reff's research comes from writings of the Jesuit priests who missionized northwest Mexico — the area that was to become the states of Sonora and Sinaloa, along the coast of the Gulf of California.

"It's difficult to tell the size of the populations before the Jesuits got there," he said. But he said the Jesuits noted that many people had died because "the diseases were spreading in advance of the mission frontier."

Reff said the Jesuits had written to their superiors in Mexico City and Rome between 1590 and 1680 that major epidemics broke out in the Sonora area every five to eight years.

As evidence, Reff noted that in that time period the Jesuits baptized some half million people, but that only 68,000 natives remained in the Sonora area by 1678.

When the Spaniards began their push from Mexico City to the north along the western coast of Mexico, disease spread rapidly among the native people. In 1536, Reff said, when the Spaniards began to expand their frontier into Sinaloa, a 5,000-man army composed of Indians was virtually wiped out by malaria.

The expansion of the frontier along the coast and along the Camino Real, on opposite sides of the Sierra Madre mountains that cut through northern Mexico, were known avenues for disease. But Reff said historical records did not shed much light on the impact of disease on Indians living further north in what was to become the United States.

Reff suggests that between 1530 and 1565, when the Spanish explorer Coronado went as far north as the plains of Kansas, Indians may have been exposed to previously unknown diseases.

Members of the simple, scavanging societies were receptive to the mission life, Reff said, because their cultures had been emaciated by disease.

The missionaries, Reff said, attempted to "reconstitute" the native cultures by introducing agriculture and trade and other aspects of life that the native people had once practiced.

"Priests went into the villages that had been zapped by disease, whose economic and political system had been destroyed. The Jesuits re-established the native systems," he said.

At issue for Reff and other historians who have pursued the importance of disease in the conquest of the New World is a better understanding of the prehistoric era, the historic period and the nature of the contact between the Europeans and native people.

Reff says he does not know whether his research will prove that Old World diseases affected the Spanish conquest of the Americas, but hopes he has raised enough questions to get other anthropologists and archeologists to look more closely at the possibility.

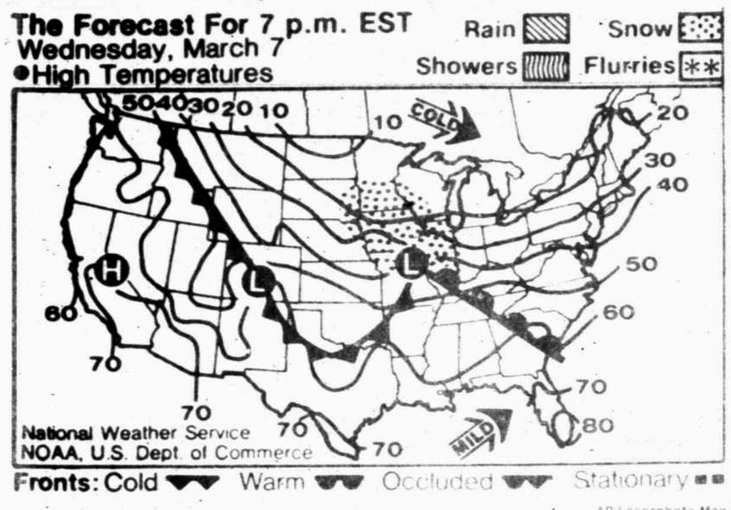
WEATHER SUMMARY



Snow is predicted in the Midwest through Wednesday, according to National Weather Service.

Another cold night due; Clear skies dominate state

From Staff and Wire Reports

Another cold and bleak night is in store for Midlanders tonight.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast a low tonight in the mid-30s and northeasterly winds at 10 to 15 mph.

For Thursday, the weatherman is calling for fair and mild and a high in the mid-60s. Winds are to be easterly to southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph.

The daytime high Tuesday was 55 degrees, which was nowhere near the record high of 90 degrees for the date in 1946.

The overnight low was 28 degrees, while the record low for a March 7 is 16 degrees in 1931.

STATE

A weak system of high pressure located off the lower Texas coast resulted in mostly clear skies statewide. A few high clouds covered the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

A stationary trough of low pressure stretching across the Panhandle and South Plains brought light westerly winds to the western half of the state. Meanwhile, light southwesterly breezes were noted across the rest of Texas.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 30s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 20 at Amarillo to 47 at Galveston.

The forecast called for mostly fair skies statewide through Thursday. Afternoon highs were expected to reach the 60s and 70s, but a weak cool front was expected to blow into North Texas, dropping daytime highs into the middle and upper 50s on Thursday.

The coastal marine forecast called for southwesterly winds at 10 to 15 knots tonight. Along the upper coast, northwesterly winds at 15 to 20 knots and gusty were expected Thursday, while gusty northerly winds at 15 to 20 knots were on tap for the lower coast.

NATION

High winds and heavy snow over the upper Midwest threatened to bring near blizzard conditions, with forecasters predicting that the wind chill of 20 below zero in northeastern Minnesota would drop to as much as 50 below.

With 4 inches of new snow on the ground by 1 a.m. EST at Sioux City, Iowa, the National Weather Service posted winter storm watches for the Dakotas and a travelers' advisory for locally heavy and blowing snow over northwestern Iowa and east central Nebraska.

Arctic air persisted in the upper Midwest, with the temperature falling to 17 below zero early today at International Falls, Minn., and to 5 below zero over upper Michigan. Stiff winds off Lake Superior held the threat of lower readings later in the day.

Travelers' advisories also went up for the mountainous West Virginia and western North Carolina, where as much as 2 inches of snow was predicted.

Other new snowfall early today included an inch at Omaha and Norfolk, Neb.

Iraq attempts to reclaim oil fields

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi forces have launched a drive through the marshlands to regain the Majnoon oil fields from Iranian invaders, and an official says Iraq might be forced to destroy Iran's main oil export terminal if the counter-offensive fails.

Iran, which seized the Majnoon Islands 10 days ago, verified that Iraq had launched a "massive" counterattack Tuesday but said it was repulsed with heavy losses.

Access to the battle zone is tightly restricted, and the conflicting claims, monitored in Cyprus, could not be confirmed.

The giant Lloyd's of London insurance exchange announced Tuesday it has doubled its war-risk premiums for ships traveling into the Iran-Iraq war zone following confirmation an Indian ship had been hit by a missile in the Persian Gulf. Sources said Tuesday that a Turkish freighter had been hit and sank.

Iraq repeated its denial that it had started using chemical weapons in its 3½-year-old war with Iran and criticized the United States for supporting Iran's allegations that such weapons were being used.

Herbert Benzer, a doctor at Vienna's General Hospital, said the soldier had been injured by a chemical substance that "destroys the skin and the membranes and also the bone marrow."

The soldier was the second to die of the Iranian fighters flown abroad for emergency treatment. A 17-year-old soldier died Monday in Sweden.

Iraqi Defense Minister Gen. Adnan Khairallah announced the Majnoon counter-attack Tuesday.

Speaking to foreign reporters in Baghdad, he said he was "optimistic" Iraq could regain control of Majnoon, but added that it need Iraq would "destroy the island of Kharg."

The Majnoon oil field, about 90 miles northeast of Basra, is on two sandbars on the eastern side of the 90 mile-long Hur al-Azah Marsh. The islands have an estimated 2 billion barrels of crude oil deposits.

Iraq last week vowed to blockade Kharg Island and other Iranian ports in the Persian Gulf. The statement sparked renewed concern that Iran might carry out a threat to close the Strait of Hormuz, a narrow channel through which nearly 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil passes.

In London, Lloyd's underwriting committee said its decision to dicate doubled its premiums for ships traveling near Kharg, said a Lloyd's spokesman who asked not to be identified. The announcement followed confirmation that an Indian-owned cargo ship in the Persian Gulf was badly damaged after being hit by a missile apparently fired by Iraq last Thursday.

In Ankara, Turkey, informed sources reported the Turkish freighter Sema-G was struck by an Iraqi missile near Kharg Island last Friday and sank. They said they believed two of the 28 crew members drowned and several were wounded.

Iraq called the United States "unbalanced and hypocritical" for saying it believed Iran's claims of chemical weapons use by Iraq.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said in Washington on Monday that "available evidence" showed Iraq was using chemical weapons.

"The United States, like the last country with the right to speak about morals, is the one ... that's already used chemical weapons, by destroying Hiroshima and Nagasaki during World War II with the power of the atom bomb," ... during ... number ... the official Iraqi News Agency said. ... and ... 'Trevor's mission' grew from need

Boy carries food to 'street people'

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — In subzero temperatures and biting winds, the dark mass on the fire escape barely moved.

But when 11-year-old Trevor Ferrell approached, carrying a blanket and asking, "Want some soup?" the form became human, a thin man who stretched out his hand for the soup and then raised it to the boy in a respectful salute.

"He's shy. He doesn't like other people around too much," Trevor said later. "I'm the only one he'll talk to."

Scraps, one of the many street people Trevor visits almost nightly, showed the plight of street people struggling for food or caught up in the cold weather.

Hardén has called the case a "very unusual one." He said that no crime or intercede. He has been a consultant for the Department since May 1983, and before that was a police chief with the Columbia Police Department for two years.

The Dispatch said the strange events began Saturday morning, when strange lights in the house were seen outside.

They assumed the incidents were triggered by a power surge and called the Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co., which suggested they call an electrician, the newspaper said.

Electrical contractor Bruce Close II said he could find nothing wrong, he said.

"I was up there three times and the lights were just turning themselves on all over the place," he said.

Clagett said he tried taping eight switches "but as soon as I would turn them in the down position, they'd come back up."

Later, members of family said the newspaper, small furniture items and wall hangings began moving by themselves.

Upstairs, the shower began running. The temperature knobs in the tub were turning faster than normal.

Policeboy called late Saturday, but there was nothing they could do.

As the weekend wore on, the events seemed to center upon the couple's 10-year-old daughter, Tina, who was often struck by flying objects, a brass candlestick, a clock, a wall hanging, they said.

On Sunday evening, the family told the newspaper, they summoned three elders from the Mormon church to pray with Tina.

Stanley M. Smoot, president of the Ohio Columbus Missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, said two missionaries were invited along with a friend of the family's son, who is a church member. Other family members are not Mormons.

Smoot said "there was a calmness" during the visit, which lasted about 25 minutes. But as the elders left, he said, they saw "some things happening."

"They did see some movement among some glasses in the china closet," Smoot said. "And that was the extent of what they reported to me."

Hardén said he called photographers to the home Monday morning after he saw a telephone leap through the air and a cup of coffee fly from a table and smash against the fireplace.

Seven other passengers — six women and one sick man — were freed earlier.

Police said there was never any panic aboard the plane during standoff or when the two security agents stormed into the cockpit where the hijacker sat behind the pilot.

Hubacher said the hijacker was in custody in a police car at the airport.

Hubacher said the plane was refueled at midday on orders of Geneva authorities.

French officials in Paris said West German, French, British and Swiss were among the freed passengers.

Two women passengers, speaking to reporters after they were freed, said they did not see any weapons on the plane and did not hear the hijacker speak. They said they saw one man, presumably the hijacker, walk into the cockpit.

The plane had left West German airspace when the hijacker took control and forced the pilot to land at Geneva, officials said.

The plane was parked on the airport tarmac some distance from the terminal while Swiss authorities considered the hijacker's demand for enough fuel to take the plane to Tripoli, Libya. No security forces were visible around the aircraft.

French news reports said a crisis group set up at the French Foreign Ministry to deal with the hijacking was believed to be in contact with Libyan officials. The report could not be immediately confirmed.

Air France said the plane has a range of 1,200 miles, meaning it could reach Libya — about 960 miles from Geneva — non-stop.

Passengers normally undergo security checks with metal-detecting devices at Frankfurt airport before boarding flights. Airport officials were unavailable to comment on the security procedures used for the Air France flight.

Ruediger Wussow, a spokesman for Rhein-Main International Airport in Frankfurt, said Air France Flight 741 departed at 8:04 a.m. (2:04 a.m. EST). It landed in Geneva about an hour later.

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's mobile society may be settling down a bit.

That's the word from the Census Bureau, which reports that the share of Americans changing residence dropped to 16.6 percent in 1982.

Twenty years ago, a record one American in five moved each year.

Now, says Kristin A. Hansen of the bureau, more Americans own homes, which tends to keep them settled. And the ones who do consider moving face ever higher housing prices and high mortgage interest rates.

In addition to the decline in moving found nationally, the trend of migration from metropolitan to nonmetropolitan areas may also have slowed or stopped, according to the new report on geographical mobility issued Sunday.

In 12 months that ended in March 1982, central cities lost about 2.5 million people to migration. But nearly all of the gain went to suburbs, with the increase in non-metropolitan areas considered insignificant by experts.

Ms. Hansen said she suspects this could indicate a change in the earlier trend of movement out of urban settings — the widely reported return to the countryside.

But she said the numbers are still too small to be sure whether a real change has occurred, or if it is merely a sampling error in collecting statistics.

During the 1970s, metropolitan areas across the nation lost nearly 3 million people to non-metropolitan areas, according to earlier studies.

Ms. Hansen said that while the new figures seem to indicate that the flow of people may have evened out, she could not say whether that movement might reverse.

On a national basis, virtually all the decline in moving over the last two decades has occurred among people who changed residence within the same county.

Renters are much more likely to move than home owners, the study by Ms. Hansen and Celia G. Boertlein pointed out. So an increase in the share of people who own their own homes tends to reduce the number of movers.

"In addition, recent increases in the cost of homes and the interest rates on mortgages have also tended to reduce the rates of local moving," the report said. This can discourage the homeowner who merely wants a new or larger residence.

For moves from one county to another, those usually associated with a change in job or other major change in lifestyle, the rate has been fairly constant over the last 20 years at about 6 percent of Americans.

The report on geographical mobility showed that overall 20 percent of Americans changed residence in the year 1960-61. This dropped to 16.6 percent by the 1981-82 year, the report said.

Convention important to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — As conventions go, it won't be the largest, it won't generate the most revenue, it won't come close to the most number of delegates and it won't fill the most hotel rooms.

It probably won't even fill most restaurants at dinner.

But most Dallas officials agree that the Republican National Convention Aug. 20-23 will be one of the most important events to this city in 20 years.

More than 20,000 people, including the 2,000 voting delegates, are expected here for the presidential nominating convention. That translates into about 15,000 hotel rooms and $20 million for the city and its businesses.

In 1978, more than 50,000 people attended the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders and occupied 22,000 rooms. Later this year 24,000 people are expected for a convention of the Food Marketing Institute.

The GOP convention, said Terry Barshop, manager of the Dallas Convention Center, "is a convention the size of which we've handled on a number of occasions."

"But the importance of it," he said, "is the image that we will project, the visability of the city. The Republican convention is very important to this city."

In 1984, 23 "major trade shows" totaling 187,500 delegates will be held in Dallas — before the Republican National Convention, said Charles Bass, director of the Dallas Visitors and Convention Bureau.

In the city's 1982-83 fiscal year, at least 1,808 meetings were held in Dallas with more than 1.6 million people attending. That translates into an estimated revenue of more than $536.6 million, Bass said.

But what the Republicans may lack in numbers or dollars, they make up for in publicity and attention on a city that is convention-hungry.

"When the home builders were here, only the home builders knew about it," Bass said. "We'll get exposure all over the world from the Republicans. It will be heads and shoulders above anything we've ever had before."

Dallas is currently expanding its 11-year-old convention center to house 602,000 square feet of exhibit space and 125,000 square feet of meeting space. By this summer Dallas will have 35,000 hotel rooms.

"We knew that 1984 was going to be our biggest year ever before we got the Republicans," Bass said. "We had the cake made and the Republicans are the frosting."

Bass said a survey by a trade publication titled "Meeting News" found that Dallas, the nation's seventh largest city, ranked as the third busiest meeting site behind New York and Chicago.

Bass said the Republicans — big spenders by legend — would have an economic impact far beyond the average $325 spent by a typical conventioneer, in part because the Republican National Committee and many news organizations will begin setting up their operations next June.

The convention dollars will find their way to electrical contractors and limousine services as well as hotels, airlines and taxi companies.

Bass has one big worry, however — about restaurants and what he says is a misconception that eateries "will do a tremendous business while they are here."

Bass is concerned that delegates won't have time to patronize them and regular customers will back off because they assume restaurants will be clogged with conventioneers.

"The Republicans will be meeting in prime time that week," he said, "and I'm afraid most regular customers will be scared away and the restaurants will be empty."

Study reveals airport congestion

DALLAS (AP) — One-third of the general aviation airports in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, both privately and publicly owned, will reach capacity by the year 2000, and the system must be expanded to meet the demand, a new study shows.

But the report, prepared for the North Central Texas Council of Governments, says that many private airport owners are fighting for survival and face the possibility of closing, not expanding.

These smaller, private airports handle many of the non-military and non-commercial airline flights that make up general aviation. But the COG report says they are threatened by soaring property taxes.

"By the year 2000, if there aren't some sort of (tax) breaks given to private airport owners, they probably won't be around," Julie K. Dunbar, a council planner, told The Dallas Morning News. "With land values going through the roof, it won't be too long before the owners can make a lot more money off the airport by selling it to developers."

But the council report forecast a 59 percent increase in general aviation traffic by the year 2000 and a 55 percent increase in the number of airplanes based at 39 general aviation airports in the North Central Texas region.

Twenty-three of the airports are privately owned, and "any time we lose an airport it hurts us as a system," said Danny Bruce, director of aviation at Dallas Love Field.

"You just have to expect that many private airports will close out," said Dan Echols, the dean of instructional technology at Tarrant County Junior College-Northeast Campus.

Guards capture escaped inmate

Willie Lee Myers, serving two life sentences for aggravated robbery and a five-year term for theft from Harris County, escaped from the Darrington Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections on Monday afternoon, said prison spokesman Charles Brown.

Brown said a couple living in the area reported someone had broken into their mobile home. Prison guards, aided by dogs, found the inmate hiding in the brush and grass. Myers, the third inmate to escape in a week, surrendered without resistance, the spokesman said.

Former pilots to go on trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal judge has set an April 30 trial date for two former striking Continental pilots accused of possessing pipe bombs.

U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle on Tuesday granted the request for a non-jury trial for Francis Early, 44, Houston, and Weldon Charles Hall, 54, Humble. They were arrested in San Antonio in November 1983 by a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper who said he became suspicious when the men tried to evade a routine license check.

Trooper Hector Herrera said a paper bag tossed out of the car by the two men contained two unexploded pipe bombs.

UT to study Hispanics' media use

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas has received a $46,000 grant from the Gannett Foundation for a study to determine preferences Hispanic people in Texas have in using news media.

University officials said Tuesday that the study, based on bilingual telephone surveys of 1,000 Texas Hispanic and non-Hispanic adults, will focus on three areas: to what extent Hispanic people use the traditional news media such as newspapers, radio, television and magazines; to what extent they prefer or depend upon bilingual or Spanish-language news media; how much use they make of new technologies such as cable television and home computers which give access to news information?

Agency to get new computer system

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards said Tuesday a $1.9 million contract had been awarded Sperry Corp. for a new computer system.

Sperry was the low bidder on the equipment, which will replace a 12-year-old system.

Mary Pilney, director of information services for the Treasury Department, said the new computer will speed retrival of information on state checks as well as allow for the connection of necessary remote terminals.

Escaped convict killed after wounding trooper

MARION, N.C. (AP) — One of two escaped Tennessee convicts who vowed not to be taken alive was shot and killed this morning after wounding a state trooper, officials said.

Ronald Lee Freeman, 41, a convicted double murderer, was killed, according to Forest City Police Chief Tom McDevitt and Russ Edmenston, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Further, Maj. Bill Emory, director of administrative services for the state Highway Patrol in Raleigh, had ...

State Trooper Larry Clegg was ... shoulder, Emory said.

... in a [illegible] ... about half-a-mile from a house ... where a break-in had been reported earlier.

Jerry Knight, a resident of the neighborhood, said one of the fugitives entered his father-in-law's house through a window, but was seen and fled.

Clegg, 39, and Freeman had been believed in North Carolina after another state trooper had been shot Tuesday.

The hunt had shifted from Tennessee to Nebo, N.C., when Highway Patrol Trooper L.H. Rector was shot four times Tuesday by two men he had stopped for speeding. A white Cadillac with the rear window shot out was later found abandoned near the Nebo Elementary School.

The two men "without question" were the Tennessee escapees, said Highway Patrol Capt. Chester Sutton.

Clegg, of Bristol, Tenn., and Freeman, 41, of Knoxville, Tenn., were among five inmates who fled a work gang after pulling guns on two guards. Two of the inmates are back in custody and a third is believed to be in Illinois.

Clegg was serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal and Freeman was serving 198 years for the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and her stepdaughter.

The police activity by late Tuesday was "like being in the middle of a war zone," said Ben Gunter, who lives near the school.

Blue lights from patrol cars flashed through the heavy fog, sleet and rain in the western North Carolina town about 40 miles south of the Tennessee line. One store stayed open through the night to provide food and coffee for searchers.

Clegg and Freeman, described as armed and extremely dangerous, escaped Feb. 18 from Tennessee's Fort Pillow Prison. On Feb. 21 they allegedly killed a Brownsville, Tenn., man who was grilling steaks in his back yard. They stole his car, took his wife hostage and told her that they would not be taken alive.

About 60 heavily armed officers from the state's Highway Patrol, Corrections Department and Bureau of Investigation, the FBI and four counties surrounded a rugged, wooded area.

"We're going to shut them down that so there's no way they can move," Highway Patrol Sgt. Steve Goodson told 26 members of the Mutual Aid Response Team at a meeting Tuesday night.

Goodson displayed photographs of the fugitives, but cautioned that Clegg had changed his appearance by shaving off his beard.

Religious roots

In the Supreme Court's nativity scene decision and the Senate debate on prayer in school there is a glimmer of hope that an ancient wisdom will prevail: That man must not stray far from his roots.

The two questions are not totally unrelated. In one, the Senate is attempting to put to rest the important question of whether prayer in any form should be allowed in the nation's schools. In the other, the court said, in effect, that communities may include nativity scenes in officially sponsored holiday displays.

Both questions have become muddled over the last few years as the Supreme Court apparently attempted to draw a fine line between church and state in a nation dedicated to separation of the two. That isn't possible, of course, because of the country's Judeo-Christian roots; religious concerns literally strike at the heart of the nation, illustrated pointedly by the results of a 1983 Gallup Poll that showed 81 percent of Americans in favor of Reagan's school prayer amendment while 14 percent opposed it.

What the majority of Americans seem to want is the availability of non-structured prayer in the public schools, a stabilizing influence for their children. They seem to want the freedom for their children to participate without the requirement to do so. But that desire has become increasingly complex.

The simple issue has been rendered complex by various factions pushing and pulling in an effort to sway public opinion to their cause. The heart of that issue is this: Should public nativity scenes be permitted in a government-sponsored setting and should acknowledgement of God be removed from public schools or any governmental institutions?

In answer to those two vital questions we raise more vital questions. Can apples be removed from apple pie? In other words, can God be removed from a reportedly God-fearing nation without destroying the very fabric from which the country is sewn?

What's wrong with an amendment that permits voluntary, unstructured, non-denominational prayer or alternate religious recognition by those students who choose to participate? Those who choose to may sit quietly while the other students pray in their own way.

What's wrong with atheists and those whose non-Christian religious beliefs cause them to feel discomfort when viewing nativity scenes to simply not do so? Wasn't this nation formed to serve the interests of the many at the detriment of the few, if necessary?

Either this nation should recognize it's religious heritage and tell the moaners to shut up or rewrite the Pledge of Allegiance to relinquish its claim of being "one nation under God."

Looking at UNESCO

American taxpayers should be pleased that the United States Congress is going to take a hard look at the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. In recent years $50 million of their money has been shelled out annually to support about 25 percent of the budget for the U.N. outfit many of whose members are blatantly anti-American.

The Reagan administration has decided to pull out of UNESCO at the end of the year unless some drastic changes are made. So Congress has decided to send a team to the organization's Paris headquarters to make a thorough investigation.

"Not only is UNESCO anti-American, its officials are charged with waste and mismanagement, even corruption. Many of its members have been trying for years to create a 'new world information order' which would result in infringement by governments on freedom of the press.

The congressional team hopes to finish its review by the end of this year, at which time the Reagan administration will decide whether UNESCO has taken any concrete steps to mend its wayward ways. Our congressmen are not only acting in the best interest of the taxpayer — that $50 million isn't chicken feed — but in the best interest of the liberties and human rights we in the West hold so dear.

Another View:

Six-letter epithet

The presidential campaign is more than a test of the voters' ideological preferences and the candidates' endurance. It is also, and importantly, a test of the candidates' character. That's why Jesse Jackson's remark about "Hymies" deserves to be taken seriously.

The term is as insulting to Jews as "Rastus" is to blacks; Jackson's use of it falls in the sorry tradition of racial and ethnic slurs that have gotten politicians from Earl Butz to James Watt in hot water. The label is one that a person fit for the presidency could utter only in a fit of absence of mind.

An immediate admission and apology following the Washington Post story would have cleared the air. Instead, Jackson tried to push and bully his way through. Righteous denial, with Jackson challenging the Washington Post, in effect, to put up or shut up, was followed by a series of "I don't recalls." Jackson next tried to change the subject, turning the issue into a claim that American Jewry was "orchestrating" a "conspiracy" against him, a slur that has opened particularly sensitive — and potentially dangerous — ethnic wounds.

Even as Jesse Jackson finally admitted, on Feb. 26, that he had, indeed, referred to Jews as Hymies, he expressed surprise that "something so small has become so large." Apparently, he still doesn't understand.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Dog muzzled for nipping bosses

WASHINGTON — Conscientious Pentagon employees trying to save the taxpayers a few billion dollars often wind up cutting their own throats instead of costs.

Jack Anderson

Lambert's job is to keep an eye on the taxpayer dollars that flow into the plant. But when he blew the whistle on what he thought was waste and mismanagement in handling hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of defense contracts, he was slapped down by his Pentagon bosses.

In fact, his associates Indy Badhwar and Donald Goldberg have reported that Navy Cmdr. Hugh D. Ames is proposing to fire Lambert for being openly critical of higher authorities — specifically Ames himself and Lambert's supervisor, John Stampf — in a letter he sent to Ames.

The commander has accused Lambert of "insubordination" for criticizing his superiors and for giving copies of critical reports to the Pentagon's inspector general and the Office of Special Counsel. That office was set up expressly to prevent retaliation against whistle blowers.

"You charge me with being dishonest, immoral, unscrupulous, irresponsible, incompetent ... Your letter is replete with gratuitous insults," Ames wrote Lambert.

Lambert is admittedly no diplomat. He expresses himself in blunt language. In the letter to which Ames referred, Lambert accused his superiors of being unfit to serve in the U.S. government.

"Over the past 18 months Lambert has recommended ways to save $24 million on IBM contracts worth $167 million. And he made no secret of his belief that even more could be saved if his bosses would get their acts together.

All of the issues raised by Lambert have not been resolved yet. But the Pentagon's famed cost-cutter, Ernest Fitzgerald, who now serves as the Air Force's deputy for management systems, has reviewed Lambert's documentation and believes Lambert is right.

Fitzgerald said he is "outraged" over the proposal to fire Lambert, whom he considers a conscientious auditor.

Here are some of the issues Lambert has raised:

He signed a complaint to the Pentagon charging that Stampf had ordered him to use a rubber-stamp auditing technique instead of forcing the contractor to justify expenditures in detail. He charged that this resulted in excessive costs. Fitzgerald says he is ready to back Lambert on this issue. And an initial investigation of this charge by engineering supervisor Maj. George Olson substantiated Lambert's concern on this issue.

Lambert signed a complaint that Stampf had recommended labor costs that were roughly $30,000 higher than the contractor deserved. This is one of several charges under investigation by the inspector general. Fitzgerald said: "On a prima facie basis, Lambert is accurate on this issue."

In a letter to Ames — and a report to Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md. — Lambert suggested that Ames had known about a serious backlog in un-negotiated contracts, but had done nothing to clear it up. The Pentagon routinely allows contractors to go ahead with expenditures pending final negotiations.

But, as Lambert pointed out, when a contract goes six months without final action, the contractor may have spent as much as 70 percent of the total contract budget. In effect, this means that only 30 percent of the contract is negotiable.

In his letter to Long, Lambert also accused his supervisors of poor management, which he said caused low morale and high turnover. His charge is supported by an official document known as the "Gatewood Report." I have obtained a copy of the report. Here are excerpts:

"Supervisors tend to be authoritarian and distant toward their subordinates. A majority of those surveyed would not recommend the IBM Manassas (facility) as a good place to work. All IBM Manassas divisions have serious internal personnel problems affecting morale, productivity and departure intentions."

A spokesman for the Defense Logistics Agency said the proposal to fire Lambert was based on his "potentially libelous" letter to his boss. The spokesman added that Lambert's auditing method was unacceptable and that the problems he complained about were either non-existent or were being taken care of.

REGAN REAGAN CONNECTION: When Donald Regan speaks, Ronald Reagan listens. Of all the Cabinet members, the Treasury secretary has become the closest to President Reagan's ear.

Reason: The president likes what he hears. He doesn't want to cut defense spending; he also doesn't want to look like Scrooge by cutting programs for the poor in an election year. Still, he doesn't want to raise taxes. The adviser who comes closest to giving him a rationale for these conflicting priorities is Regan.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Central America part of struggle

Not long before he died, Soviet President Yuri Andropov told the Moscow newspaper Pravda that "the situation is extremely tense in Central America."

William Giandoni

According to the Soviet leader, "The U.S. administration is encroaching on the independence of sovereign states" in the area.

What he termed the "U.S. aggression against Grenada" made it clear "that the United States wants to smash the people's power and return by force of arms the hated dictators, the stooges of the United States."

That, of course, is the way a Marxist would describe the Reagan administration's determination to halt the spread of communism in Central America and the Caribbean.

The reference to Grenada was a distortion of the facts, though. Grenada was a quiet little spice island until March 1979, when the late Maurice Bishop staged a coup and ousted Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy. With the overt and covert help of Cuba, the Soviet Union and North Korea, Bishop was making progress in his effort to impose a Marxist regime there, until last October. Then some of the more radical members of his New JEWEL movement arrested and murdered Bishop and some of his closest associates. The intervention of the United States, Jamaica and Barbados, at the request of most of the eastern Caribbean mini-republics, was aimed at the group of extremists who killed Bishop and the others.

Andropov's statement, published in Pravda Jan. 25, touched on the deployment of U.S. missiles in Europe and the action of U.S. forces in Lebanon as well as the situation in Central America.

The late Soviet leader mentioned those points of tension between East and West to support his contention that "there are no grounds" for concluding that the world has become a safer place.

"By setting itself the aim of tipping the military balance in its own favor, the United States has compelled us to take countermeasures," Andropov said, without spelling out what they may be.

Other, more detailed Soviet analyses of events in Latin America make it clear that, as the Reagan administration has said repeatedly, Moscow is counting on Cuba to go on stirring up trouble in the Western Hemisphere.

Since Fidel Castro's triumph in 1959, "socialist Cuba has consistently supported the struggle waged by the progressive, anti-imperialist forces of the continent," New Times, a Soviet world affairs weekly, commented recently.

"Internationalist solidarity and firm support of Cuba by the Soviet Union and the other countries of the socialist community play a particularly important role," New Times added.

One of Cuba's internationalist obligations is to provide troops when and where the Soviet Union needs them, in Angola, in Ethiopia and elsewhere. Columnist Patrick Buchanan noted recently that Cuba has more troops stationed abroad than any of the NATO countries, except the United States.

Over and above supplying mercenaries, though, there has been "the subordination of the interests of the country to the general interests of the struggle for socialism and communism, national liberation, the suppression of colonialism and any and all forms of exploitation and discrimination," according to one scholarly analysis of Cuban foreign policy.

But Victor Lunin and Pavel Projorov, writing in the Soviet Academy of Sciences' monthly publication, America Latina, suggest otherwise.

"Cuba's relations with the U.S.S.R. and other socialist states, from the very first years of the revolution, became the determining factor of Cuban foreign policy," Lunin and Projorov wrote.

"In the Western Hemisphere, Cuba is the secure bastion of the socialist community and the active driving force behind the authentically anti-imperialist unity of the Latin American countries," the Soviet specialists affirmed.

That, in other words, is what the Reagan administration has been saying all along, and what critics of the president's Central American policy have been unwilling to believe.

ART BUCHWALD

Election game best in town

My wife and I were watching the results of the New Hampshire primary.

"Is the race all over now?" she wanted to know.

Art Buchwald

"You mean the Democrats are going to play a football game to decide who their candidate is going to be?"

"No. Super Tuesday on March 13 is the day nine states choose 650 delegates for the Democratic convention. We'll know a lot more about who will oppose Reagan then than we do now."

"If Super Tuesday is that important, why was everyone so excited about New Hampshire?"

"Because New Hampshire was the first state to hold a primary. New Hampshire could give us a hint on what will happen on Super Tuesday."

"I thought Iowa did that."

"Iowa was just political caucuses. New Hampshire was decided by the people going to the polls. It's a whale of a difference."

"Then why did the media make such a big deal of Iowa?"

"Because it was the first test of how the candidates would do. The big dealer Iowa was not that Mondale won so big but that Gary Hart did better than everyone expected and John Glenn did worse than he had hoped for. This obviously affected what the media would do about the contest in New Hampshire. Many of them who had ignored Hart started concentrating on him and giving him momentum at the expense of Glenn and the others who bombed out in Iowa. This is why Hart did so well in New Hampshire and Mondale did so badly."

"Mondale didn't do that badly. He came in second."

"Yes, but he was supposed to come in a big first. After Iowa we thought Mondale had the thing all wrapped up. But with Hart's showing in New Hampshire, we now have a new ball game and this will put all the political pundits back in business."

"Why should the public believe anything you people say after you were so wrong in New Hampshire?"

"They have no choice if they want to have an exciting Democratic primary. The only serious political parties can commit is to vote the American people."

"I think the media is just hyping up all these races so they have something to write about and show on TV."

"That's not true. We're giving the Americans what they want. If Mondale had it all sewed up after New Hampshire, no one would buy newspapers or watch their TV sets on Super Tuesday. How would you have felt if you knew six months in advance that the Los Angeles Raiders were going to win the Super Bowl?"

"Why did everyone say in the fall that the race was going to be between Glenn and Mondale?"

"Because Glenn looked like a natural candidate in the tradition of Dwight Eisenhower. He was a hero who had gone into space."

"So what happened?"

"The other Democratic presidential candidates used his space achievements against him. They said Glenn didn't know anything except how to drive a capsule around the earth."

"Do the New Hampshire results mean that Glenn is out of it?"

"Glenn doesn't think so. He said the fact that Gary Hart won so big against Mondale means that Mondale is vulnerable and that it is a good omen for Glenn because of his strength in the South."

"Then what did New Hampshire prove?"

"It proved that Iowa didn't mean beans for Mondale — but it meant everything for Hart."

"What did New Hampshire do for Jesse Jackson?"

"It gave him an opportunity to apologize for referring to New York City as 'Hymietown' in hopes of winning the Jewish vote in Florida."

"What am I supposed to do for Super Tuesday?" she wanted to know.

"Go to the deli and buy lots of cold cuts, potato salad, popcorn and beer. I'll invite over all the guys in the carpool, because nobody in America wants to watch Super Tuesday alone."

Protesters plan boycott of Philippine elections

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Nearly 20,000 marchers urging a boycott of elections in May paraded into the heart of Manila today to complete a seven-day journey from the rural provinces of the Philippines.

The protesters, many of them fishermen and farmers, converged on the capital in two columns, from the north and south, chanting and carrying signs denouncing the "U.S.-Marcos dictatorship."

Hundreds of office workers in the Makati financial district greeted the passing southern column with confetti and firecracker explosions. Thousands of students left classes and joined the northern parade as it wound past Manila schools with chants of "Boycott, boycott."

The marchers, organized by supporters of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, were unhindered by riot troops who had stopped a protest by hundreds of thousands of people six weeks ago.

Today's protest underscored the viability of the boycott movement despite the decision of some opposition groups to field candidates in the May 14 National Assembly elections.

Election supporters say the chance to vote will provide an opportunity to end President Ferdinand E. Marcos' 18-year rule. Supporters of the boycott contend that voting will give Marcos a false appearance of legitimacy.

Voters are to decide 183 seats in the assembly. Marcos' New Society Movement now holds a 95 percent majority and predicts few losses.

"There is only a minor crack in the opposition, not a split," said Agapito 'Butz' Aquino, brother of the slain opposition leader. "The enemy is Marcos," he told The Associated Press.

Agapito brought cheers and applause as he walked through one crowd of protesters, many wearing tattered clothing and straw hats.

A major opposition coalition headed by former Sen. Salvador H. Laurel, who recently returned from a U.S. speaking tour, is fielding candidates in the election.

Aquino, who is leaving Friday for a similar U.S. tour, met Laurel at the airport on his return, saying they both are fighting for the same goal — to bring down Marcos.

Shultz argues for aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, refusing to rule out emergency military aid to El Salvador, says restrictions proposed by House Democrats are so stringent that "we would be better off just saying, 'Forget it.'"

"I really don't understand you people," an exasperated Shultz told the Democrat-dominated House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations Tuesday during a sometimes heated grilling on the administration's plans for increased Central American security assistance.

Arguing that Central America is "right next to us" and that a presidential commission headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger concluded the region "is vital to our interests," Shultz told Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill.:

"You tell me, 'Because we have a problem, let's walk away.'"

Yates, in an exchange in which he and Shultz each raised his voice to be heard over the other, denied saying this and argued, "As far as I can see the attitude of the administration is that El Salvador will receive as much money as it requires from now until eternity."

Syrians comment

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian sources in Beirut said today that the resignation of Syria's Cabinet and the immediate reappointment of the prime minister may be a show of strength by President Hafez Assad after a challenge by his brother.

The 31-member Cabinet resigned Tuesday, after serving three years, and an official Syrian statement said Assad had asked Premier Abdel-Raouf al-Kasm to form a new one.

Political observers in Damascus suggested the resignation was a means of filling vacancies caused by the deaths of at least four ministers.

Israeli bus bombed

ASHDOD, Israel (AP) — A bomb exploded today on a bus in this Mediterranean port city, killing an elderly man and woman and injuring at least 10 people, police and hospital officials said.

A police officer in the city of 55,000, located 20 miles south of Tel Aviv, said 30 people had been detained for questioning, most of them Arabs.

The bomb exploded in the bus as it drove along a tree-lined street near the Mediterranean, a few hundred yards from a seaside market. The wrecked bus was taken to the nearby central bus station, where forensics experts searched among the blood-splattered seats and spilled shopping bags.

Deputy district police commander Amikam Aharon said in a telephone interview that police forces had sealed off the area around the central bus station and the market, where the explosion occurred.

U.S. on 'tightrope'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is again teetering on a diplomatic tightrope between two valued friends, Greece and Turkey, over the future of Cyprus.

Congress, impatient with a lack of diplomatic progress, is threatening to cut U.S. military aid to Turkey, while the Reagan administration is pleading for more time to try resolve problems caused by the declaration of an independent Turkish Cypriot state nearly four months ago.

This time, the administration is banking on U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to gain access for Greek Cypriots to part of the city of Famagusta, held by Turkish troops since they invaded the island in July 1974.

In a classified letter, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, they were hopeful of progress through the United Nations.

But their joint appeal not to cut Turkey's military aid did not dissuade Democrats on the powerful European and Mideast subcommittee headed by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind. On a 6-3 party-line vote Tuesday, they trimmed $39 million from the pending foreign aid bill.

Downing condemned

MONTREAL (AP) — The International Civil Aviation Organization, on a 20-2 vote, has condemned the Soviet downing of a South Korean jetliner last fall and reprimanded the Soviets for keeping information from its investigators.

Soviet warplanes shot down an off-course Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 on Sept. 1, killing all 269 people on board.

The governing council of the ICAO, a U.N. agency, on Tuesday adopted a resolution that "condemns the use of armed force which resulted in the destruction of the Korean airliner and the tragic loss of 269 lives."

The impact of the resolution is basically political, because the ICAO does not have the power to take disciplinary action.

Ghanian vote sought

LONDON (AP) — Ghana's military ruler says he may propose elections to form a civilian government but does not want the new political system to imitate Western-style democracies, according to a broadcast monitored in Britain.

Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings, head of the Provisional National Defense Council, spoke on state-run radio Tuesday to mark the 27th anniversary of the impoverished West African nation's independence from Britain.

Rawlings, who came to power in a military coup in June 1979, said the time had come "to start formulating and discussing the basic outlines of the new political system."

"It is our intention to work towards the emergence of a representative national assembly which will be the supreme organ of government and state power through electoral processes," he said.

Salvadoran candidate's office hit

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A right-wing death squad says it carried out the machine-gun attack on the office handling publicity for the top moderate candidate in El Salvador's presidential election.

It was the first such attack directly related to the campaign for El Salvador's March 25 election.

The Salvadoran Anti-Communist Command, in a telephone call to the newspaper El Mundo, claimed responsibility for the machine gunning Tuesday of an office handling publicity for presidential candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte of the Christian Democrats.

It said the attack was in retaliation for "disinformation" by the director of the firm, Sigrid Munes. No injuries were reported.

Four men got out of a car and fired submachine guns on the office in a house in a middleclass neighborhood, witnesses said. The shots broke a few windows and punched holes in the walls.

Munes, the Salvadoran ambassador to Costa Rica, recently accused Capt. Eduardo Avila of participating in terrorist activities in Costa Rica while a military attache at the embassy in 1982.

Avila is under arrest on charges stemming from military discipline violations. Sources say he also is being held as a possible witness in the January 1981 murder of two American labor advisers and a Salvadoran land reform official.

Leftist guerrillas, meanwhile, attacked two villages in San Vicente province, where the government is conducted a pacification and redevelopment program. Military officers said two civil defensemen and two Red Cross volunteers were killed and five civil defensemen wounded.

Col. Roberto Rodriguez Murcia, commander of the 5th Army Brigade, said guerrillas attacked the villages of Guadalupe and Verapaz, 45 miles east of San Salvador, late Monday, fighting civil defense forces until government reinforcements arrived at dawn Tuesday.

Academics were there when injury ended sports

Jeff Robinett
...in football

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a four-part series on local athletes who excel in the classroom as well as on the playing field. This installment focuses on a Midlander away from home.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

In high school, Jeff Robinett was a breed so rare — a genuine student-athlete — that the Ivy League came looking.

In 1979, Robinett led District 4-5A in rushing and his speed was such that Princeton wanted him as much for his track ability as his football potential.

The Ivy League schools, once the nation's football powers — there was a time when Walter Camp seldom looked further than Princeton-Yale-Harvard in picking his All-America teams — no longer give athletic scholarships as such. It's not that they are lackadaisical recruiters, it's just that the grants are distributed primarily on the basis of need and scholarship.

ROBINETT FOUND it flattering that a Princeton would court him, but his uncle was an All-America on Texas A&M's 1939 national champions and his father also played on that team before transferring to Texas Tech. Jeff's background was Texas. Who would ever hear of him again if he went back East and played for an Ivy League school?

Besides, there was the life long dream of one-day perhaps playing pro ball.

The decision didn't turn out to be that tough to make. For one thing, although his father, Ed, had played in the pros on the San Francisco 49ers with Frankie Albert and Norm Standlee and his uncle, Marshall, had gone on from A&M to play for the NFL Chicago Cardinals, his parents, both teachers, had stressed academics. "They balanced academics and athletics and kept them in their proper perspective," says Jeff.

Sports Special

"I had some walkon offers from the big schools," relates Jeff, "but I realized I would basically have been a piece of meat. My size was not that great..."

It would be nice to report that Robinett, like Tommy Lee Jones, another former Midlander who was an all Ivy-League guard at Harvard, went on to football fame at Princeton, but that's not the way it turned out. In retrospect it was almost as though he had received ethereal guidance in making his decision.

AFTER TWO years of waiting in the wings (freshmen don't play varsity football in the Ivy League), last season it was senior Robinett's turn to play, only it didn't work out that way. A series of five concussions over the years, some major some minor, led to the decision to give up football.

Instead of being forsaken, ("I don't think I'd still be on scholarship somewhere else," says Jeff), Robinett survived. "It was the worst experience in my life, not being suited up. It took the entire season to get used to. I was lucky enough to have friends and a wife who was helpful. I missed football even when it was raining and cold.

"I had devoted over half my college life to athletics, but I really enjoyed this last semester with no athletics. For the first time in my life, I concentrated on academics."

"And there was something else that was gratifying. When I was injured, I did not fall from grace with the coach. He showed compassion and understanding. He continues to be one of my best friends even today.

"You see, at Princeton, it isn't all that uncommon. Of the 76 freshmen footballers with whom I enrolled, only nine played as seniors. One flunked out, but came back. The rest quit athletics (without loss of scholarship) and are still in school."

OC, Howard post victories

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Lady Wranglers crushed Ranger Junior College 77-45 behind Sharon Cain's 19 points, setting up a WJCAC semifinal between OC and Howard College (83-71 winners over Cooke Community College, tonight at 9 p.m. at the Chap.

In the other bracket, McClennan Community College of Waco advanced with a 75-72 win over Amarillo College in which AC's Machelle Whitehead set a Region V scoring record. The Lady Badger ripped loose for 42 points in the losing cause.

McClennan faces Western Texas in tonight's other semifinal match at 7 p.m. WTC was a 62-55 victor over Cisco.

OC WASTED no time in taking charge of the ball game late in the first half. Lady Wrangler coach Ken Hefner called a timeout with 7:05 to play after RJC had scored five straight points to make the score 20-18 OC. After the break, OC geared up the attack, and with Cain and Sharon Blair providing inside damage, stretched the lead with a 17-5 spurt.

The half ended there at 37-23. OC made another strong blitz in the second half to send the Rangeannes packing. The Lady Wranglers were aided by pathetic RJC shooting (8-33 in the first half, 18-69 on the game), and buried RJC early in the final half.

The Rangeannes scored twice in the half's first 2:13, the second basket from Laura Lennox making it OC 39, RJC 27.

Then the Lady Wranglers blew RJC away en route to their 31st win in 35 outings. Reeling off a 20-1 spree, RJC (ending the year 15-12) didn't score a field goal again for almost ten minutes.

By the time Jessie Cloud hit a short turnaround jumper for RJC with 8:53, the score had gotten out of hand, and OC led 61-30.

Annie Davis netted 14 for OC, while Blair chipped in 12 and Trucia Clay 13. Blair, Davis and Cain all had nine rebounds, and as a team OC out-boarded RJC 50-26.

IN HOWARD College's quarterfinal win, gigantic center Terri Moore poured in 26 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead the Hawk Queens. Janene Berry contributed 14 points, Molly Early and Debbie Hall had 12 and Alex Provincio scored 11 to pace the win that was rarely in doubt.

Cooke's best threat occured after CCC had cut a nine-point deficit to four, 53-39, with 9:45 remaining. But HC settled down, Berry made a key drive for the hoop that made it 55-49, and the Hawks began to stretch out. Berry hit two more baskets off of fast breaks moments later to put HC up 68-55, and the Hawks moved to 24-8 on the year.

Eliminated Cooke is 23-8.

Dogs win; Monterey sweeps Lee

LUBBOCK — The Midland High Bulldogs, getting five strong innings from starter Mike Timlin and one each from relievers Michael Gonzales and Jerry Neatherland, posted a 6-1 victory over Lubbock Coronado here Tuesday.

The Bulldogs scored the winning run in the second inning by putting two notches on the scoreboard. They added three more in the fifth and one in the sixth while giving up the lone Coronado tally in the fifth.

Timlin, who lost to San Angelo by virtue of a lost coin flip to break a 3-3 deadlock, notched his first victory of the year and evened his record at 1-1. Steve Rodriquez suffered the loss in three innings of duty.

Midland High is now 2-2 for the season. The Bulldogs will face Amarillo Tascosa in the 12:30 p.m. game of the Tournament of Champions at Cubs Stadium Friday.

MIDLAND LEE, fresh off three victories enroute to the Pre-District baseball tournament title over the weekend, found an old nemesis still causing problems: Lubbock Monterey.

The Plainsmen, who ejected the Rebels from the bi-district playoffs last year in a best-of-three series, picked up where they left off by cooling the Rebels bats in both games of a doubleheader.

Monterey pitcher Todd Hunt, with relief help from David Coleman in the sixth, blanked Lee in the first game, 8-0, while Mike Eckles and Doug Welch teammed up in the second for a darkness shortened 8-3 victory.

In the second game, Lee held a brief 2-0 lead in the first inning only to see Monterey tie the game in the bottom of the second and take a 6-2 lead in the third.

Lee was held to seven hits in the two games by the Plainsmen pitchers, none of which went for extra bases. In the first game; Edwards drilled both a double and triple while Kevin Short connected for a three-bagger and a home run to lead the attack.

There were no extra base hits in the second game.

Depending on how Lubbock Monterey does against Dallas Thomas Jefferson in the Tournament of Champions, Lee's next opponent could again be Monterey. The winner of the DTJ-Montery game will face Lee.

Women's game not that different

Bill Broome coached high school basketball in Illinois 10 years before coming to Cooke County Community College six years ago to start the women's program.

Broome claims the adjustment, after all those years coaching the boys, wasn't that drastic. In fact, he coaches in both the men's and women's programs at Cooke.

"You talk to the girls the same way and you employ the same technique in pointing out mistakes. If I'm tough on the men, I'm equally tough on the women."

Broome, who grew up in southern Illinois, but played college basketball at Ole Miss, went on "I was really looking for a small college, but when I visited the campus at Oxford, I was sold."

ACCORDING to Broome, whose Cooke team tied with McLennan for the Northern Conference title this year, "The most obvious difference is no dunks. That and the fact that there is no 10-second line at midcourt. I like the absence of a time line in women's basketball. I don't think it would be a good idea for the men's game."

Broome also likes the 30-second clock. It helps keep the game moving at a fast pace.

In the Western Conference, men players are recruited from all over the U.S. It's one reason the league is one of the strongest junior college leagues in the country. Broome says there are no limits on how far he goes to recruit talent for his girls' team.

"I have a girl from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., another from Palisades Park, N.J., and several from Oklahoma and Louisiana.

JOE CUSHING of Western Texas College took a slightly different route to coaching women.

After four years in service, Cushing, who calls Loraine, between Abilene and Big Spring, home, enrolled at Angelo State University.

Rowena, a small town of 2,500 near Angelo needed a part time coach. I applied and got the job.

"When I started, they told me coaching the girls was part of the job. So that's how I got into coaching girls basketball. I'd finished classes at noon and then head down to Rowena to my coaching jobs."

ONE OF the things he likes about coaching the women is that there are no discipline problems. "The girls are all very coachable."

"You don't have to worry about the grades. The girls take their school work seriously. And, yes, we have a good rate of placing the girls in four year colleges...100 per cent as a matter of fact. We have girls at Division I, II and III schools and in Texas some of our girls are in the programs at Texas Tech, Baylor, Eastern New Mexico (pratically Texas) and North Texas State.

"Lots of times a four-year college coach will take a girl who has played 65 junior college games over a two-year period rather than a high school girl because he knows what she can do in fast competition."

WHEN CUSHING moved up to Western Texas College coach, a few years ago, he discovered that Texas, along with Iowa and Oklahoma, were behind other parts of the country in developing college players.

Those states were still playing the "half-court" game at the high school game. The guards never came over midcourt and never shot.

"I was fortunate that the previous coach had recruited all of the players when I took over at Western Texas. Then, I discovered nine of the 11 players recruited were guards. My tallest girl was 5-10. The rest were 5-6, 5-7. I had to teach them all to shoot," Cushing explained.

"We didn't have much choice, so we pressed everybody and wound up as co-champions with Odessa College that first year."

Young pact ruins USFL salary line

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

In both the United States Football League and the richer rival National Football League, the reaction to Steve Young's $40 million contract ranges from outrage and befuddlement — and disappointment from USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons — to delight.

Young, the record-breaking quarterback from Brigham Young University, signed with the USFL's Los Angeles Express Monday. The team is owned by J. William Oldenburg, head of the San Francisco-based Investment Mortgage International Inc. Young's playing contract runs four years — but the payments run for 43 years. Of the total worth, $34.5 million is in deferred payments.

Simmons, who repeatedly had said one USFL goal would be to hold the line on salaries, expressed dismay over the value of the contract. "The idea was to be reasonable," he said. "Then came the competition. Once it starts, it's tough as hell to stop it. ..."

"As commissioner, I don't like it. It worries me. I do not think it is in the best interest of professional football or the league, but what is to be done? These are wealthy businessmen seeking to build and sell a product and to compete."

JOHN BASSETT is one of those businessmen. He owns the USFL's Tampa Bay Bandits. A decade ago he owned the Memphis Southmen of the World Football League, which went bankrupt after only 1½ seasons.

He suggested that the salary war would end up in a USFL-NFL merger, just as the NFL merged with the American Football League in 1966, or in a collapse by the USFL.

Bassett, who once claimed he was among the richest WFL owners but one of the poorest in the USFL, a way of showing how financially sound the new league is, said the original USFL memorandum on salary levels called for $1.6 million per club the first year (1983), $1.75 million in 1984 and $2.5 million next year. This year's player salaries are about $3.25 million per team, nearly double the projection.

"Sports history is full of the likes of this," Bassett said. "It has established that you end up with one league or you go out of business. History also shows that salaries never go back to an old level.

"All this reminds me of the old commentary that goes, 'When a man with money meets up with a man of experience, the man with experience usually ends up with the money and the man with the money ends up with the experience.'

"I have no intention of going bankrupt signing wealthy players. I have had the experience some of our owners have now. I have lost my $10 million."

ONE OF Bassett's fellow USFL owners, William Dunavant Jr. of the Memphis Showboats, said the contract, and the salary war with the NFL, was "ridiculous. I'm against this kind of thing. We want to be competitive as a football team in the USFL, but something like this doesn't make economic sense to me. I simply cannot conceive of anything like this."

Ron Blanding often has spoken of selling the Denver Gold, one of the USFL's more frugal operations — and the only one to make money last season. He mused: "I don't know where we're going in this league. I don't understand why we need to pay a man $2 million to play 18 games and work six months out of the year."

But Berl Bernhard, owner of the Washington Federals, called the signing of Young "a superb time for the league. It continues to give a stamp of approval to the USFL. But, of course, it's upped the ante for everyone, too. But maybe that's the way to go. With every guy we get, we are moving closer to the NFL in parity."

YOUNG'S $40 million contract is the richest in pro team sports, surpassing the $25 million, 25-year package held by Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the National Basketball Association's Los Angeles Lakers. And, like Johnson and Wayne Gretzky of the National Hockey League's Edmonton Oilers ($21 million over 21 years), Young becomes a million-dollar-a-year player.

But there also are $2 million-a-year athletes, among them baseball's Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees ($21 million over 10 years) and George Foster of the New York Mets ($10 million over five), basketball stars Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics ($15 million over seven) and Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers ($13.2 million over six).

And that doesn't include "self-employed" athletes.

night's work against Gerry Cooney in 1982. Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia earned $2 million in 1982 — and fellow tennis star John McEnroe reportedly gets $8 million a year for his combined playing and endorsements.

Sources knowledgable on pro football contracts say the actual cost of Young's contract isn't that much different from the USFL's two Heisman Trophy catches, running backs Herschel Walker of the New Jersey Generals and Mike Rozier of the Pittsburgh Maulers, nor is it worth that much more than the contract quarterback Warren Moon signed with the NFL's Houston Oilers.

The present value of the contract — the amount to be paid over the four-year playing period — is about $5.5 million. The remaining $34.5 million in deferred payments can be covered by $1.5 million invested at the 11 percent prime interest rate.

Walker's contract is worth $5 million over three years, but like Young's, it is heavily deferred. Rozier's is worth $3.3 million over three years, but it is not deferred. And Moon's is worth $5.5 million over five years.

MIKE LYNN, general manager of the NFL's Minnesota Vikings, called Young's contract "the craziest, dumbest and poorest" business deal he has ever heard of in sports. "It had to be a desperate move," he said.

Lamar Hunt, owner of the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs and one of the founders of the AFL when the Chiefs were known as the Dallas Texans, recalled that it cost about $10 million for the entire AFL operation in 1960, "and that means salaries, office staffs, rents, coaches, uniforms, travel ... "

"When I hear what USFL teams are reported to be paying," Hunt said, "I think of that great line Clint Murchison (owner of the NFL's Dallas Cowboys) said when the WFL started signing players. He said, 'If they succeed, let's not go after their players. Let's go after their accountants.' I think that would apply today. If you've got a 49-man squad, history shows you can't have one player making some huge sum and the others some miniscule amount. ... I don't see how they can make it work. If they do, they'd better have good accountants."

The USFL's signing of Young and quarterback Jim Kelly of the University of Miami, by the Houston Gamblers, have been likened to the AFL's signing of Joe Namath by the New York Jets in 1965 for the then-enormous sum of $425,000.

Monterey to defend Tall City baseball title

Defending champion Lubbock Monterey, Amarillo Tascosa and Dallas Thomas Jefferson are the three baseball teams coming into the Tall City this weekend to compete in the 1984 Tournament of Champions at Cubs Stadium.

Host teams Midland Lee and Midland High round out the five-team field for the two-day tournament.

Monterey had to go the distance to win the title last year, facing Midland High in the first of two championship games. The Bulldogs won the first encounter but lost the second in the double elimination brackets.

Friday's tournament schedule is as follows:

1 Monterey vs. Thomas Jefferson, 10 a.m.

2 Tascosa vs. Midland High, 12:30 p.m.

4 Losers of games one and two at 5:30 p.m.

5 Winners of games two and three at 8 p.m.

To win the tournament, a team can have no more than one loss. If a team loses its first game of the weekend in the championship game, then, under the double elimination format, a second game will be played at 8 p.m. between the two finalists.

A's dump Brewers in Cactus, 6-5

By The Associated Press

Arizona's high temperatures and low humidity usually produce a lot of runs and hits during baseball spring training games.

And that's what hapeened when the Cactus League season started Tuesday as the Oakland A's, with 12 hits, downed the Milwaukee Brewers, with 11, by a 6-5 count in 10 innings.

Bill Almon's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th drove in pinch runner Tom Romano from second base with winning run, pinning the loss on Chuck Porter. The A's had tied the game in the ninth on Mitchell Page's solo homer off Pete Ladd.

Reliever Bill Caudill, acquired by Oakland in an off-season deal with Seattle, pitched two perfect innings for the victory.

Cecil Cooper, Charlie Moore and Jim Gantner each had three hits for the Brewers, who took an early 5-0 lead. Cooper knocked in two runs with first-inning double and a third-inning single.

Milwaukee starter Mike Caldwell tossed three shutout innings before Oakland bounced back on a three-run homer by Carlos Lezcano in the sixth and Dan Meyer's three hits.

IN OTHER spring training games, all in Florida, Dave Parker and Dave Concepcion homered as the Cincinnati Reds topped the Houston Astros 6-5.

Parker, signed by the Reds as a free agent, homered in his first at-bat for Cincinnati, which was playing for the first time under new Manager Vern Rapp.

Houston raked Cincinnati starter Mario Soto for five runs in three innings. Alan Ashby doubled in two of the runs. But the Reds rallied to win against reliever Joe Sambito, who was making his first appearance in nearly two years after arm surgery. Tom Lawless tripled home Paul O'Neill with the tie-breaking run in the seventh.

Exhibition Baseball

Craig McMurty and three Atlanta relievers combined on a four-hitter, and Terry Harper scored the game's only run on a seventh-inning throwing error by Bob Bailor, as the Atlanta Braves nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0. Fernando Valenzuela pitched three scoreless innings for Los Angeles.

WADE BOGGS and Jim Rice cracked consecutive triples during a three-run first inning against Jack Morris that carried the Boston Red Sox to an 8-4 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

Steve Kemp and Butch Wynegar delivered RBI singles as the New York Yankees scored four runs in the first inning and went on to beat the Montreal Expos 7-3. John Montefusco was the winning pitcher.

Julio Cruz belted a two-run double off Baltimore starter Scott McGregor as the Chicago White Sox beat the Orioles 4-1 and Toronto's George Bell singled in the tying run and scored the game-winner as the Blue Jays topped the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

From Wire Reports

FORT WORTH — Texas Rangers outfielder Billy Sample says he is the target of an organized hate campaign that he believes began four years ago when Sample, who is black, married his wife Debi, who is white, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

No matter how often Sample changes his unlisted telephone number, the calls continue, he said while in spring training at Pompano Beach, Fla.

Callers leave messages for Sample as he plays during road trips. One Sample said, "It's going to explode."

The calls to the home was connected to race, Sample said the caller said, "You're going to find your husband in a pool of blood with a hot slug in him."

FBI agents got a trace on the phone but could not find the callers.

"It's got to be an organized hate group with great connections. Sample said. "I know they've got connections with the phone company because we still have an operator that listens to our calls at home."

Three years ago, Rangers traveling secretary Dan Schlissel received a phone call from Sample's then-wife, Rhonda Sample, asking that the Rangers set up beach umpires during spring training.

"They asked me to take a message to Billy," Schlissel recalls. "They said a people mentioned from the Anaheim Police Department had called and said Billy's wife had been shot.

"Just after the game left Anaheim Stadium, I got a call and heard a noise on their car which sounded like gunshots. I still have no proof that it was somebody sending the death threat."

Rice, Tech, Ags post victories

By The Associated Press

Rice Coach Tommy Suitts says everything from "now on out is just icing on the cake."

Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Rice notched first-round victories in the Southwest Conference post-season tournament Tuesday night, sending Baylor, Texas and Texas Christian home from the party early.

Rice used a second-half slow-down game to defeat TCU, ahead in Houston, Tech overcame a shaky first half to down Baylor 63-48 at Lubbock, and Texas A&M got a career-high 25 points from freshman Winston Crite in its 75-54 win over Texas in College Station.

In the second round Friday night in Houston's Summit, A&M meets Southern Methodist, which took a bye through the first round of the tournament. That game will be followed by a matchup between Tech and Rice.

Although the final margin wasn't close, Texas Tech struggled for three quarters against Baylor. After falling behind 19-15 with 6:33 remaining in the first half, Tech used six points by Bubba Jennings, who had a game-high 17, and a layup by Vince Taylor, who scored a season-high 16 to forge a 27-23 lead with 2:44 left.

The Bears outscored Tech 6-2 before the half and trailed by only two points, 29-27, at intermission.

Tech increased its lead to 10 points midway through the second half before Keary Castleberry and Paul Kuiper fueled a 7-0 Baylor surge that whittled the deficit to 47-44 with 7:06 remaining.

The Raiders put the game out of reach by hitting six consecutive points and hitting 10 of 14 free throws in the final 3½ minutes of play.

Tech is now 17-11 overall. Baylor ended at 5-23.

"In the end, their athletic ability was the difference," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "Texas Tech has a very good team. I think they are deserving of post-season recognition."

The next game will be tough on Tech, he said. Tech Coach Gerald Myers: "We've got to start all over tomorrow."

The Owls, 12-16 for the season, were leading the Frogs 47-44 with 8:54 to play when they went into a slowdown offense and gradually pulled into a commanding lead.

Tyrone Washington, who had 14 points for Rice, hit a bucket. Cunningham added two free throws and Tony Barnett completed a slam dunk and free throw to spurt the Owls to a 54-48 lead with 4:21 to play.

It was the decisive surge for the Owls, who never allowed the Frogs to challenge again.

TCU freshman Carven Holcombe led his team, which ended the season at 11-17 overall, with 21 points, including 17 in the second half and eight in a row over the closing minutes.

The Aggies scored five quick points to open the second half against Texas, breaking open a tight contest on the way to their eighth straight win over Texas and their third for the season.

A&M is 14-14 for the year, Texas finished at 7-21.

Darnell Williams added 11 points and Holloway scored 10 for the Aggies, while David Seitz led Texas with 14 points and George Davis added 12.

Oddly, Texas outshot the Aggies from the floor 57.6 percent to 48.3.

The winner of the Tech-Rice matchup will meet conference champion Houston at the Summit on Saturday. The winner of the SMU-A&M meeting will play Arkansas in the late game.

FOOTBALL—A new $90-million stadium should be ready for the Miami Dolphins by 1987, says Owner Joe Robbie, who plans to use private funds for the 73,000-seat, hotel-shopping complex just south of Calder Race Track. The announcement comes eight days before voters will be asked to approve a $55-million renovation of the city-owned Orange Bowl, the current home of the Dolphins...

"I can't control what people say or write. I'm flattered that anyone would consider me for such a job as UCLA's. But it is unfair to us for rumors to turn up at this time it doesn't help us in many ways, including recruiting. I love Arkansas. I love living in Fayetteville. So does my family. But Madlock disagrees with Parker's recent remarks that the team's personality changed dramatically — and for the worse — after Stargell's retirement in 1982 stripped the Pirates of their on-and off-the-field leader. "When Willie Stargell left, obviously there was a difference in the Pirates. How could there not be a change when one of the greatest players of all time retires? SKIING—Robert Zoller nd won a World Cup slalom, avoiding the pitfalls on the 65-gate Vail Mountain course that claimed several of the favorites. The unheralded Zoller, 22, came from fifth after the first run to clock the fastest time on the second run and win with a combined time of 1 minute, 41.11 seconds. Second was Peter Popangelov of Bulgaria, with a combined 1:41.56. Phil Mahre tied for third with Lars-Goeran Halvarsson of Sweden at 1:41.73.

week organized workout for weights and agility. We can work out on our own the rest of the time. And the coaches at all schools respect the rules. If they didn't, they wouldn't be around."

The only concentrated drills are the two-week camp at the University before the season. Also, three days are held.

"Today, in the locker room, there's more talk about current events than football. But once on the field it is all football."

Robinett says despite his senior year disappointment, he wouldn't have missed the competitive experience. "It was a learning experience. I brought me the importance of doing your best at all times. It still breaks me that I fumbled in two of the three games back in high school, mainly because I didn't give 100 percent concentration."

Jeff's uncle Marshall Robinett played on Homer Norton's national champions of 1939 as a teammate of John Kimbrough. He later was rookie of the year with the NFL Cardinals, who have since shifted from Chicago to St. Louis.

His father, a 6-0, 175-pound fullback played at A&M as a sophomore in 1942, then transferred to Texas Tech, where he starred at halfback. "My father taught me more than anyone about football. He also made me realize there's more to football than football was a great sport, but not everything."

AT PRINCETON, Jeff relates, "every athlete has a full load. There is no 'dumb' athlete at Princeton. There are no 'jocks' or athletes. Each player is required to do an independent work course as a junior, requiring two papers. Seniors must write a 100-page thesis. No athlete has ever gone through without doing all the work. If anything, that's the special part about Princeton."

In his first game as a freshman against Dartmouth, Jeff discovered the essence of Ivy League football when he shook hands with his opponent before kickoff and was asked, "What's your major?"

For those who criticize the evils of college football, it would be nice to be able to point at the Ivy League experience as a shining example. Unfortunately, that isn't the way it works. The Ivies still are akin to an island in a desert.

Texaco defuses one takeover threat

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. has defused one potential takeover threat, but analysts say the giant oil company may have opened the door to future acquisition overtures by "ransoming its shares back."

On Tuesday, Texaco agreed to acquire 25.6 million shares of its stock now held by Bass Brothers Enterprises Inc. in a cash and securities transaction valued at $1.3 billion.

The costly truce with the Fort Worth, Texas, Bass family business sent Texaco's shares plunging $5.875 to close at $38.75 a share, with nearly 3.4 million shares changing hands Tuesday.

Alvin Silber, an oil industry analyst at the investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., estimated the profit for the Bass group at $12 a share, or $307 million. He said the quick profit suggests others may try the same tactic.

Adam Leight, an analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said that through the transaction, "Texaco's ransoming its shares back."

"If they are willing to pay the kidnapper the first time," Leight said, "it just opens the door to another attack."

Bass Brothers Enterprises is operated by Sid, Robert, Edward and Lee Bass, the sons of Perry Bass, who inherited much of the fortune of Sid Richardson, a bachelor uncle and legendary oil wildcatter. The private company has interests in oil, real estate and other investments.

Texaco said it would buy 13 million shares of its stock from the Bass group for $50 a share in cash, or $650 million.

The remaining 12.6 million of its shares held by the Bass family would be exchanged for an equal number of new Texaco adjustable-rate preferred stock with a stated value of $50 a share. That is equivalent to about 4.9 percent of Texaco's outstanding common stock.

In exchange, Bass Brothers Enterprises agreed it would not acquire any additional Texaco shares during the next decade and said that the shares it continues to hold in that period would be voted in accordance with the recommendation of Texaco's board.

In January, when the Bass family increased its holdings to 9.9 percent of the outstanding stock in Texaco, speculation grew that the family was building an alliance to launch a takeover for Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company.

As a result of those rumors, Texaco stock rose from $39 a share at the end of January to $44.625 a share at the close of trading Monday, then gave up all of that gain and a little more.

The agreement is subject to approval by Texaco's board, and Texaco said it would schedule a meeting soon.

Texaco recently purchased Getty Oil Co. for $10.13 billion, in what is the largest corporate takeover in U.S. history.

That mark will be surpassed, however, if Standard Oil Co. of California succeeds in the $13.2 billion bid it made Monday to acquire Gulf Corp. The Federal Trade Commission is reviewing that proposal for any antitrust implications.

Oil lease boiler room shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents have opened a nationwide drive to shut down "boiler rooms" staffed by high-pressure telephone salesmen with raids on 22 such operations in five states, the Justice Department says.

The agents were searching mainly for evidence of fraudulent sales of oil and gas leases, part of a $100 million-a-year "boiler room" industry, Stephen S. Trott, head of the department's criminal division, said Tuesday.

A list of 17 warrants executed in the raids showed the agents, from the Postal Inspection Service, the Interior Department and the FBI, also sought records of Alaska, Nevada and Wyoming land leases, coin investments and sales of precious metals and promotional items.

Trott said some of the raids in New York, California, Michigan, Florida and New Jersey were expected to yield criminal charges.

Some sales offices misrepresented themselves as legitimate services promoting the federal Bureau of Land Management's "Simultaneous Oil and Gas Lottery," which was suspended Oct. 12, Trott said.

Lottery winners could lease government lands not within known geological structures of producing oilfields for for nominal fees and then attempt to sell their rights to oil companies interested in exploration.

Trott said the boiler rooms were charging customers an average of $300 in fees for entering the bimonthly lotteries. He said the fee charged by the government was $75.

FTC will review merger

Oil company union must survive anti-trust look

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

As industry officials and analysts studied Standard Oil Co. of California's record $13.2-billion bid for Gulf Oil Corp., attention shifted Tuesday to Washington and questions of whether the largest merger ever proposed will pass antitrust muster and survive possible congressional scrutiny.

Officials at the Federal Trade Commission said they will conduct a review of the proposed merger that could last up to 25 days. At the end of that time, the commission could take any of a number of steps, ranging from no action at all to filing a lawsuit to block the takeover.

Most oil-industry analysts and the companies themselves expect the commission to approve the combination — on the condition that San Francisco-based Cal Standard divest itself of overlapping assets, particularly gas stations and refineries, a condition Cal Standard has said it will fulfill.

Nonetheless, some antitrust experts expressed reservations Tuesday about the merger's prospects because of its sheer magnitude, even in an industry with thousands of companies and hundreds of gasoline dealers. Cal Standard currently is the fourth-largest U.S. oil company in terms of revenues and assets and Pittsburgh-based Gulf is the fifth largest.

"It does look, at least superficially, like this is a more sizable merger than the ones we've seen so far," said Robert Pitofsky, an FTC commissioner during the Carter administration and current dean of the Georgetown University law school in Washington.

"It's a little different from (the other oil) mergers. Those involved parties in which one of the companies was relatively small. Here, (both) are in the top five. Together, they'll be second (in assets after Exxon Corp)."

Arthur L. Smith, a vice president and energy expert with Oppenheimer & Co. in New York, said he is concerned with possible congressional intervention.

"The major issue now is whether there will be some legislation out of Washington barring all these mega-mergers," Smith said.

In less than three years, the oil industry has produced three other giant mergers. Most recently, Texaco Inc. acquired Los Angeles-based Getty Oil Co. for $10.1 billion, a record that will be toppled if the Cal Standard-Gulf deal is completed.

Each big oil-industry merger has produced calls in Congress to halt the absorption of small companies by larger ones. Bills to do that have been introduced on occasion but never enacted.

The current merger mania stems from the high cost of finding new oil versus the relatively low cost of buying it by acquiring an existing oil company. In the heavily explored United States, there are fewer and fewer promising places to look for oil and most of them — such as Alaska and the offshore continental shelf — are expensive to plumb.

Meanwhile, oil stocks have been depressed because nearly flat sales and stable oil prices have taken the pizazz out of profits. Even after a five-month speculative run-up in Gulf's price, for example, Cal Standard will roughly double its oil and gas reserves at a cost of $4.40 a barrel by acquiring Gulf, about 30 percent of what it cost in 1982 to find a barrel of oil.

In the midst of a turnaround last fall after several dismal years, Gulf became the target of an investor group led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. and his Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa Petroleum Co., about 5 percent the size of Gulf.

Mesa and its partners bought 13.2 percent of Gulf's stock, waged an unsuccessful proxy battle over shareholder rights and finally launched a tender offer they promised to conclude by taking over Gulf and possibly liquidating it. In a desperate effort to evade that fate, Gulf put itself up for sale.

Just last October, a skeptical Cal Standard Chairman George M. Keller said in an interview that it was hard to see how Pickens' group "with that modest interest could do anything." In the end, Keller led the team that beat out two other would-be buyers to come to Gulf's rescue.

Analyst Smith of Oppenheimer said that Cal Standard's $80-per-share offer — which works out to about 70 percent of the liquidation value set by asset appraisers at John S. Herold Inc. — looks like a good deal for Cal Standard, as well as for Gulf shareholders, whose stock has sold for as little as $31 a share within the last year.

Texas Gulf workers worry about future

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Workers at the Gulf Oil refinery in Port Arthur — the company's largest — are upset and concerned about their future after learning their employer is becoming part of Standard Oil of California in one of history's largest mergers.

"How does it feel to be working for Standard Oil?" quipped a worker as he made his way past Gate 19 Tuesday morning.

The gatekeeper just looked tired. "I don't know yet," he said, watching day shift workers follow the paths their fathers and grandfathers have taken since 1901 when the company was known as Guffy Oil. "We don't know a — damn thing yet."

The company's local spokesman, Art Spencer, could supply no answers. He had been told not to comment.

"Anything we might say at this point could affect the deal," Spencer said. "I have been asked not to comment, not to explain."

On Monday, Socal reached agreement to purchase Gulf for $13.2 billion in what would be the largest corporate takeover in U.S. history.

At the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union hall in Port Arthur, Local 4-23 spokesman Kenneth Whigham said most calls he handled were about pensions.

"Everybody is totally upset but I am not sure there is any room for worry yet," he said. The union's executive committee met Monday night with a representative of the company and took questions for three hours.

"But they didn't have the answers to most of them," Whigham said. "They did say a letter would go out right away to retirees assuring them that nothing would happen to their pensions. At least that's what we have been told."

Whigham said the buyout would send him back to the bargaining table.

"One thing is sure, we will have to have a successor agreement with Standard," he said. "I don't know much about the company but I intend to find out real quick."

Other questions concerned special stock options for employees.

"They could not answer those," Whigham said.

"We are hoping they'll leave the name alone," he said. "Standard Oil has the West Coast and the Deep South. We had the East Coast and the Southwest. Gulf has been one of the best companies in the industry to its workers. They took care of their employees."

Dr Pepper names new president

DALLAS (AP) — Dr Pepper has named Joe K. Hughes, the company's executive vice president and operations marketing executive, as president and chief operating officer.

Hughes, 56, has been with the Dallas-based company for 15 years. He joined the firm in 1968 as vice president of franchising.

He played a key role in Dr Pepper's merger with Forstmann Little & Co. and succeeds Richard Q. Armstrong, who resigned in January.

Dr Pepper's board of directors made the announcement in a prepared statement Tuesday after a meeting with the directors of the Dr Pepper Bottlers Association.

Last week, Dr Pepper shareholders voted in favor of a merger with Forstman Little, a New York private investment firm.

Hughes was named vice president-marketing of services in 1969 and a year later was elected vice president of marketing.

In 1973, he was named executive vice president of marketing, and in 1982, became executive vice president, in charge of all corporate operations.

Dividends on the common and convertible preferred stock are payable April 2, 1984, to shareholders of record at the close of business on March 15, 1984.

James D. Berry, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Dallas-based, 37-member bank holding company, announced the action by the board of directors. As of December 31, 1983, RPT reported total assets of $19.1 billion and deposits of $13.9 billion.

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

DALLAS — Texas Instruments Chairman Mark Shepherd, Jr., and President J. Fred Bucy has said, "TI net sales billed for the year 1983 were $4,580 million, an increase of 6 percent over 1982. Billings increased in semiconductors, governments electronics, metallurgical materials, increased in semiconductors, government elctronics, metallurgical materials, electrical control, and data systems, while a sharp decline was experienced in geophysical exploration services. In consumer electronics, net sales billed were well below the 1982 level.

"Despite the favorable economic climate during 1983 and strong TI earnings in the fourth quarter, large and unexpected losses from TI's 99/4A home computer products, plus charges resulting from the decision in October to withdraw entirely from the consumer home computer busness, put the company into an overall loss position for the year. TI's consolidated net after-tax logs in 1983 was $145.4 million, or $6.09 per share, compared with net income of $144.0 million and earnings per share of $6.10 in 1982. Results for 1983 include recognition of an income tax benefit of $193 million arising from the U. S. financial statement net operating loss carry forward. The total segment loss from the home computer in 1983 was approximately $660 million.

"Excluding consumer activities, TI performance improved substatially in 1983, with net sales billed up 10 percent and operating profits up 73 percent from 1982. In 1983, without consumer activities, profit from operations as a percentage of net sales billed was 9.1 percent, compared with 5.8 percent for the same operations in 1982.

"For the fourth quarter of 1983, net sales billed were $1,299 million, up 17 percent from the same period a year ago. Net income was $77.5 million, an increase of 82 percent. Under TI's formula, no profit sharing was accrued for the fourth quarter of the year 1983. Earnings per share in the quarter were $3.23, compared with $1.80 in the fourth quarter of 1982. These results include a net after-tax gain from home computer operations of aproximately $11 million, or $0.48 in earnings per share during the quarter, derived primarily from better-than-expected sales of previously written-off home computer hardware and software.

This figure was calcuated on the same basis as segment profit, and will be included in the Digital Products segment of the 1983 annual report. It includes operating losses, write-downs, write-offs, and other accruals taken in conjunction with falure to meet planned home computer shipmentt levels and the decision to withdraw from the business.

TUCKER DRILLING CO., INC.

San Angelo — Tucker Drilling Co., Inc. reported unaudited results for the third quarter and first nine months of Fiscal 1984 with comparisons to the same periods for the prior year.

L. J. Tucker, President of Tucker drilling, said contract drilling revenues totalled $10.2 million for the nine months just ended, compared to $15.0 million for the same period a year ago. Oil and gas sales for the first nine months were $4.8 million, up from the prior year's P$4.2 million during the same period. Oil field equipment and supplies sales were $4.5 million, down from the year earlier total of $5.3 million.

MORAN ENERGY INC.

HOUSTON — Moran Energy Inc. has announced that based upon preliminary estimates, it anticipated that its net income for the fourth quarter of 1983 will approximate $2 million, or $.20 per share, as compared with net income of $1.9 million, or $.19 per share, for the fourth quarter of 1982.

In addition Moran said that Kaneb Services, Inc. filed a registration statement concerning the proposed merger of Moran into Kaneb with the Securities and exchange Commission. A special meeting of Morna's stockholders is scheduled for March 19, 1984, for the purpose of considering and voting upon the proposed merger.

MUSE AIR

DALLAS — Muse Air Corporation has reported its fourth quarter, 1983 operating profit of $11,402,000 helped the Company to solidly reverse the calendar year 1982 operating loss of $4,738,000 into a healthy $4,616,000 10983 operating profit. The airline's 1983 fourth quarter net income was $202,000 or $.04 per share, which marked its second consecutive profitable quarter (1983 third quarter net income was $780,000 or $.17 per share).

For the full year, Muse Air incurred a net loss of $1,959,000 or $.49 per share, versus the 1982 full year net income of $11,468,000 or $3.87 per share. Michael L. Muse, president of Muse Air, pointed out, however, that "all of 1082's net income was derived from the nonrecurring sale of tax benefits associated with four new MD 80 aircraft placed in service during 1982." The sale of the tax benefits on three of the four aircraft occurred during 1982's fourth quarter. Accordingly, results for 1983 do not include any proceeds from the sale of tax benefits.

THE WESTERN CO.

FORT WORTH — The Western Co. of North America today reported a net loss for the year 1983 of $22.5 million, or 67 cents per common share on revenues of $540.5 million. These results compared with net income of $56.7 million, or $1.27 per common share in 1982 on revenues of $688.3 million.

Strike threat looms as UAW map strategy

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers delegates have put overtime, health care, pensions and wages at the top of their list as they debate a platform for contract negotiations this summer with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

On the first day of the union's bargaining convention, UAW President Owen Bieber and the resolutions committee went on record against increasing use of overtime by the major domestic automakers, which are trying to keep up with a sales boom.

The union wants the companies to start calling back some of the more than 100,000 UAW members on indefinite layoff in the auto industry.

Bieber, in the keynote address Tuesday, said the union has no intention of giving in if GM and Ford demand that workers pay more for health care, which currently cost $328 a year for a GM worker on the family plan.

"We are not looking for fights," Bieber said of the possibility of a strike. "But if the power of persuasion doesn't work, we will use the persuasion of power, if that's what is necessary."

On pensions and wages, Bieber said GM and Ford, which in 1983 made profits of $3.73 billion and $1.87 billion respectively, can afford to pay much more.

The second day of the convention gets under way today with consideration of bargaining demands from 2,500 delegates representing 1.5 million active and retired UAW members.

"GM and Ford better be ready to cut workers a bigger piece of the pie in these negotiations," Bieber said.

The 1983 profits at GM and Ford earned production workers checks of $650 and $440 respectively under profit-sharing provisions in UAW contracts that expire Sept. 14.

While Bieber said profit sharing showed the union and companies "agree on something," it will not be enough to placate workers this year.

"Let me make it absolutely clear. Profit-sharing cannot replace wage or benefit increases," Bieber said.

Union officials have not indicated how much of a pay raise the union will demand. UAW members two years ago gave up the equivalent of $3 billion in wage increases and benefits while the automakers struggled through their worst sales slump since the Great Depression.

An average assembly-line worker now makes $12.50 an hour at GM and $12.61 an hour at Ford — more than $2,000 a month without overtime. With benefits included, it is estimated that the cost per worker will be $23 an hour at the end of the current contract.

Pension improvements are expected to be a big issue too, as the union tries to make up for what it considers lost ground in recent years due to the sales slump and inflation.

The maximum UAW monthly retirement benefit is $947.

"That's $11,000 (a year), poverty level," said Richard Topola, a 25-year GM employee and leader of a rank-and-file committee for bigger pensions. "Some get as low as $6,600" in pensions, he said.

The committee is called 30-15-84, which stands for retirement after 30 years at any age and $1,500 a month in pensions in 1984.

Union members can retire anytime after having put in 30 years, but they cannot get maximum benefits until age 62.

The 30-15-84 committee contends that more older workers would retire and make room for younger, laid-off workers if the retirees could get more money and collect the maximum after 30 years regardless of age.

The UAW delegates also will be deciding strategy for negotiations with a dozen other corporations.

American Petrofina reports fourth-quarter profit

DALLAS(SWN) — American Petrofina Inc. reported net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983, was $55,260,000, or $5.10 per share, as compared with $54,401,000, or $5.03 per share, in 1982.

Fourth quarter net income in 1983 increased to $23,362,000, or $2.16 per share, from $14,835,000, or $1.37 per share, during the fourth quarter of 1982.

Gross revenues in 1983 of $504,983,000 in the fourth quarter and $2,088,526,000 for the year were down from $530,350,000 and $2,253,678,000, respectively, for the same periods of 1982.

Commenting on results for the year, Paul D. Meek, president and chief executive officer, said operating income for the petrochemicals and plastics segment continued to improve with the strengthening of the economy. In the production and exploration segment, operating income was substantially improved compared to last year.

Valero Energy shows decline

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Energy Corp. has reported net income of $4.1 million or seven cents per share of common stock for the fourth quarter ending December 31, 1983, and net income of $44.7 million or $1.57 per share for the full year. In 1982 net income was $20.9 million or 82 cents per share for the fourth quarter and $81.7 million or $3.21 per share for the full year.

Operating income for the full year of 183 amounted to $104.4 million, compared to $106.7 million in 1982, reflecting lower gas sales volumes which were offset by record highs in both gas transportation volumes and natural gas liquids production.

Bill Greehey, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Valero, said that the decline in fourth quarter net income reflected a loss registered by Saber Energy, Inc. in which Valero has a 50 percent interest.

Introducing
Halliburton's Trump™ Packer.

If you've ever tried to pull a corroded packer, you'll see why putting packer rubbers down here makes good sense.

By putting the seals at the bottom of the new Trump packer, they can protect the packer's upper components from attack from corrosive fluids — whether those fluids are a result of CO_2 injection or come from the formation.

Retrieval is easier because the packer is far less likely to be corroded in place. And the Trump packer is easier to redress. Usually, only the seals need to be replaced.

The exclusive Trump packer design incorporates other features that make it ideal for corrosive service in injection, production, treating, and disposal applications.

It's rated for up to 7,500 psi from either direction in the 5½ inch size. It meets NACE standards for sour gas service. For additional corrosion protection, you can order the packer in any of several custom alloys.

The Trump packer is designed for multiple sets and releases. It can be set at any depth because it sets in tension. But, it does not require work string weight or tension to remain set. Halliburton's patented ratcheting mechanism makes setting and releasing a matter of simple tubing manipulation. The mechanism also virtually eliminates the possibility of accidental release.

When you equip the Trump packer with its optional tubing release mechanism, you can pull the tubing without disturbing the packer.

With all of those features, it simply makes good sense to talk to your Halliburton tools specialist about the new Trump packer. Right now is a good time to call.

Your best way to make the most of every well.

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mayor Bob Bryant plans to stand on his record.

His challenger, John Minor, plans to mix some of Bryant's old standards with a few new tunes of his own.

Bryant's four-year reign started in 1980 in the midst of the latest boom. He was re-elected in 1982 by a wide margin as the recession was setting in on the Permian Basin.

Until Nov. 8, 1983, Minor served the city as municipal court administrator. His 10 years managing the city's court system ended when city council approved the recommendation of City Manager John Harrison and Fiscal Services Manager John Muser and voted to terminate him.

Before leaving office, Minor had filed criminal charges against Harrison and Muser which led to their arrest. The Ector County grand jury Dec. 15 chose not to indict Harrison or Muser on charges of official oppression and official misconduct.

THIS CONTROVERSY, which centered around the transfer of responsibility of the warrant division from Minor's office to the police department, is over except for a pending FBI investigation of one officer, Pat Trout.

Gone from the city's employment is Larry McMillion, the part-time municipal judge who issued the warrants for the two officials' arrests. Suspended are two warrant officers who arrested the two officials.

"He's running because he was fired by the city," said Bryant. The mayor said his opponent was dropped by the city because "he tried to take matters into his own hands."

Minor filed the complaints which led to the arrests when the city attempted to move the warrant division — the development of which he promotes as his proudest achievement as an administrator — to the police department's responsibility.

"I've got some strong feelings about how the organization should be run," said Minor. But he is not stressing the rift between him and the current city government in his campaign.

He is aiming at "bureaucratic fat" he sees at the city manager level and would work to reorganize the "upper-level management."

"THEY'VE STRUCTURED the city organization similar to the big-city style of government," said the challenger.

Bryant argued that lay-offs would "add fuel to the fire," with unemployment remaining a problem in Odessa.

"We can be a stimulus to the community," he said. "We've already got enough people out of a job."

"As a politician, (Bryant's) going to say those things," said Minor. "As far as following through and getting things done, I don't think there's a solid background there."

Bryant points to the $3.5 million Mission Dorado development, which came about when Midland moved its extra-territorial jurisdiction line so that Odessa could provide utility service to the development.

The mayor is also working for the formation of the West Texas Economic Development Corporation which would bankroll the efforts by the two cities to draw oil and non-oil related businesses to the Petroplex.

Neither favors tax increases, though Bryant said that he would support tax hikes when facilities were needed during boom times.

"I think the citizens have indicated they're unhappy with the current tax base," said Minor. "We need to look at the city's spending habits."

BRYANT DISAGREED that Odessa has been overspending, noting that $7.5 million in capital improvements are being funded by available cash reserves. "It's not just an accident that we can do this now," said the mayor.

Citizens would become more involved in decision making if he is elected, said Minor, with "blue-ribbon citizens groups" providing a link between the people and city govdernment.

"Based on the feedback, we can represent the people," he said.

"If I'm going to go in and appoint these boards, I would certainly listen to what they have to say," promised the 32-year-old challenger.

Bryant, while supporting a task force to monitor the troubled cable franchise, calls the use of citizens' groups "really a cop out."

Group joins fight against crime

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

They're mad as hell. They're doing something about it. And they need help.

The citizens' group has been getting together during informal, bi-weekly luncheon meetings at the Petroleum Club in recent weeks to hammer out goals and establish a membership base from which to find solutions to the city-county crime problem.

The non-profit, non-partisan group — some of whose members have been the victims of recent burglaries — elected officers and outlined some of the steps they'll be taking in an effort to reduce the growing local crime rate.

Compared to 1982, the city experienced a slight increase in major crimes during 1983 — despite a declining transient population and an overall statewide crime decrease of 3.5 percent, according to Department of Public Safety figures.

"One of the first things we're going to do is meet with the Midland school board and protest their lax drug policy," a NABD spokesman said Tuesday after noting the link between drugs and crime and the recently publicized difference between drug policies in Midland and Odessa schools. "It's five years old and not adequate."

In addition to helping law enforcement agencies in the battle against crime — with a focus on drugs and burglaries — another of NABD's goals is to arouse citywide public interest in the problem.

Toward that end, according to NABD President Neal Meares, the group will examine various law enforcement policies and practices — including arrest, bail bond, trial, probation, and plea-bargaining procedures.

Also, Meares noted, NABD will form an education committee to inform the community "on how to be better jurors."

Other NABD officers include Frank Cahoon, vice-president; Keith Somerville, secretary; and Ted B. LaCaff, treasurer.

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With escalating health care costs, a group of 700,000 elderly Texans have decided to fight back on the local and state level.

Members of the 246 Texas chapters of the American Association of Retired Persons cited controlling climbing costs of health care as the number one priority in a recent survey.

Under federal mandate, Medicare reimbursements have been drastically lowered. Many physicians are no longer accepting assignments, forcing the patients to come up with the remainder of the costs.

"They laugh at you anymore," said Eloise B. McDowell, an Andrews resident and AARP Assistant State Director for Texas. "They want the full amount.

"Physicians used to always accept Medicare assignments," she said, "now not any of them do."

A 23-member AARP State Legislative Committee will present a cost-cutting plan to legislators seeking re-election this year. According to Mrs. McDowell, "the Texas Legislature will have to take that in their hands."

Because Medicare reimbursements for specific health care services are the same despite varying fees charged by physicians, a state rate-setting commission will be proposed, according to an AARP news release.

"If a doctor charges $26 in Andrews and $50 in Odessa, Medicare will still pay that little ol' amount," Mrs. McDowell said. "And doctors don't charge the same amount."

Other plans for cost-cutting cited by the AARP, whose members must be at least 50 years old, include expansion of existing health maintenance organizations and local incentives for doctors to accept Medicare as their full payment.

Another area of concern expressed by the state AARP members is providing alternatives to costly institutionalization, such as care based in the home or community, according to the news release.

"Hospital costs are 400 percent higher than they've ever been," said Mrs. McDowell, head of 15 AARP chapters in 27 counties. "Something has to be done because Medicare isn't going to be able to take care of everything."

The immediate priority of the almost 16-million AARP members is to save Medicare, according to Mrs. McDowell. Medicare is threatened with insolvency by the end of the decade and faces a $300 billion deficit by 1995 unless prompt action is taken.

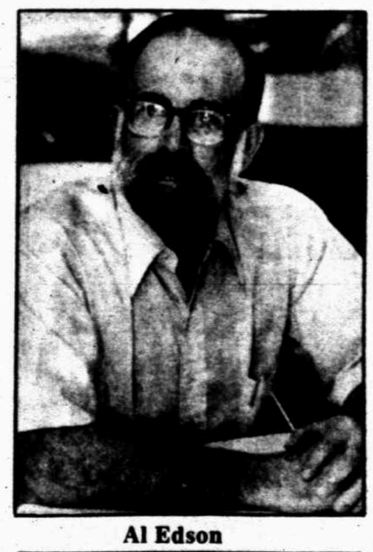
Goals of the AARP national health care campaign include reducing the rate of cost escalation in health care, preserving and strengthening the Medicare and Medicaid programs and ensuring their availability of affordable health care for all citizens, and encouraging the development of alternate health delivery systems such as Health Maintenance Organizations and home health and ambulatory care services that can be more responsive to consumer needs and more efficient in the delivery of care than current institutional systems.

Also, the organization hopes to provide information to consumers on health care costs and options and encourage Americans of all ages to adopt and practice more healthy lifestyles.

According to Mrs. McDowell, 81 percent of the American public believe that a reasonable limit on what hospitals and doctors can charge is the only way to save Medicare.

"We are concerned about everybody," Mrs. McDowell said, "but we're primarily concerned about the elderly. They don't have the income or the company insurance that working people do."

Owner of loose dog applies for head of Animal Control



Al Edson

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Though he lost his dog case, Midlander Al Edson says he is not cowed or giving up. He might even get in the running for head "dog catcher."

"I'm not going to drop this," Edson, 40, said Tuesday after he said he would not appeal the Municipal Court jury's Feb. 22 verdict of his watchdog Mushroom running loose in the neighborhood and fined him $220. He said a lawyer, retained by a "very wealthy" Midlander interested in the dog case, could find no grounds — no error — for appeal but would have financed any further court action. Edson represented himself in the case, which was tried by Keith Stretcher, a city prosecutor.

Edson said Municipal Court Judge Michael Abrams is allowing him to pay out the fine in installments.

MEANWHILE, Edson said he is considering applying for director of the city's Animal Control in the wake of the recent resignation of Dalton Byerly, AC director for the past several years. The two citations by an Animal Control officer resulted in Edson's trial.

"I'd love to apply for the job," he said. "I'd love to get it."

"It would be kind of a joke if I became Animal Control director," he reflected, "but I would take it seriously. There would be some changes. I feel the law should be used as guidelines, not as absolutes."

Edson claimed that his 7-year-old shepherd-cross mutt patrolled the neighborhood, served as a "Neighborhood Watch," by her barking warned of approaching strangers, lived in an older car in front of his house and cannot bear to be fenced in, tethered or leashed.

The city ordinance, which prohibits a dog or other animal from running loose, however, allows four exceptions. A dog is not deemed at large if:

—The dog is restrained within a fenced-in area or by a leash, chain, rope or cord of not less than six feet in length.

—The dog is "actively engaged in dog obedience training" and is under control of his owner or trainer who has in his possession a leash. The dog must be enrolled in or has graduated from a dog obedience training school approved by a city-enforcement agent.

"It would be kind of a joke if I became Animal Control director, but I would take it seriously..."

— Al Edson

SINCE HIS BOUT with the city's leash law, Edson said his mother baby-sits the dog.

Edson said he talked to Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins and Councilman Tom Sloan about the Mushroom case. Akins, who was "quite nice," referred Edson to City Attorney Joe Nuessle.

However, Akins told The Reporter-Telegram that the city couldn't just make an exception to the leash-law for Edson's and Mushroom's sakes. If the dog were to bite or attack someone, "Who'd be liable for that?" Akins asked. "I'll tell you who they're going to sue — the city."

"I THINK it's a good ordinance, in most cases," Akins said of the leash law. "Like anything else, there are exceptions."

Nuessle said he could not sanction exceptions to the ordinance.

"Those laws become unenforceable if they are not applied equitably and uniformly," he said. To make an exception would jeopardize the validity of the entire ordinance. There are some restraints we have to live with...I don't think guard dogs are permited to run at large."

Edson, who said he views "the justice system as just a game," said he would like a revised leash-law that "wasn't so cut and dried."

Edson said were he to get the Animal Control job that he would turn it into a "service department" to serve the Midland citizenry. "I don't know that I would call it a harassment department."

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sales tax collections are up statewide — with the exception of Midland and Odessa — and officials say it indicates the state is pulling out of the economic trough it fell into last year.

On Tuesday, state Comptroller Bob Bullock sent out checks totaling $53.5 million in local sales tax payments to the 985 cities that levy a 1 percent city sales tax on top of the 4 percent state tax.

Eighteen of the state's 20 largest sales tax cities recorded increases during January, and collections were up substantially in El Paso, Brownsville and Laredo, he said. Only Midland and Odessa among the 20 largest are running behind last year, he said.

"We were almost at the peak of the boom," said Gifford of the March 1982 figure. "I'm still cautiously optimistic we won't see a major slump, that we'll grow out at a 5 percent rate."

"Texas is pulling out strongly from the trough we were in last year," Bullock said. "Overall, sales tax receipts are up more than 12 percent."

John Moore, tax information specialist with the comptroller's office, said the office's tax revenue estimates "project a modest recovery to continue for 1984, and we're within 1½ percent of that (estimate)."

Bullock said Houston received the largest March check, $9.7 million, bringing the city's total for the fiscal year to $37.2 million; a 5 percent increase over the same period a year ago.

Dallas received $6.7 million, bringing the year's payments to $24.8 million, a 15 percent increase over last year. San Antonio's payment was $2.9 million, up 36 percent from the same period a year ago, Bullock said.

Austin received $2.3 million, putting its yearly total at $8.4 million, an increase of nearly 22 percent; Fort Worth got $2 million for a $7.4 million total this year, a 7 percent increase over 1983, and El Paso received $1.2 million in March, with its 1984 year-to-date total running almost 20 percent ahead of 1983, Bullock said.

Three checks also were sent to metropolitan transit authorities.

The new Dallas transit authority received its first check, $4.9 million; Houston MTA got $11 million and San Antonio MTA got $1.6 million.

Ceremony commemorates fall of Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Almost 200 people crowded into an historic chapel to commemorate the 148th anniversary of the fall of the Alamo and remember the men "who died for freedom."

A pair of bugles blew a mournful "Taps," reverberating off the Alamo's pockmarked stone walls, and children lit candles to honor the 188 men who gave their lives for Texas' independence.

Before dawn on March 6, 1836, a force of 5,000 troops led by Mexican general Santa Anna stormed the mission fortress and killed the men, who had staved off the army for 13 days.

"One thing is certain," he said during Tuesday's ceremony. "The mention of the word 'Alamo' to an American or a foreigner means an indomitable spirit of courage, devotion and selfless sacrifice."

The Alamo Mission Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas organized the 148th anniversary ceremony to memorialize the volunteers who came from 20 states and six nations to help protect the Alamo, known now as the "cradle of Texas liberty."

Members of an honor guard from Lackland Air Force Base carried flags representing each state and country as the roll call of the dead was read.

"Each of us value our freedom and, unfortunately, each of us tend to take it for granted in the course of our daily lives," McGiffert said.

"There are always those among us who proclaim loudly that neither freedom nor anything else is worth dying for," he said. "It seems almost sacrilege to even whisper here in the Alamo the words, 'Nothing is worth dying for.'"

McGiffert evoked the historic names — James Bowie, Davey Crockett, William Barret Travis — as he sketched the tale of the Alamo, told how men who could have run chose instead to take a stand.

South Padre Island prepares for students

By SYDNEY RUBIN

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Troy, Tab, Frankie and Annette all spent spring breaks on the beach in movies of decades past and college students still flock to the beach each year when school lets out and the weather warms.

South Padre Island merchants and police are bracing for 110,000 students from 32 Texas and Oklahoma colleges who are expected to visit between this weekend and March 25.

Students coming for sun, fun and romance (not necessarily in that order) have booked all of the island's 1,600 hotel rooms and most rental condominiums, according to Chamber of Commerce officials.

Gary Shield, executive director of the Port Isabel-South Padre Island Chamber of Commerce, said the young visitors will inject $3,850,000 into the local economy during the month with each student bringing an average of $350 spending money.

Although students have been flocking to the Texas coast for two decades, organized entertainment has been offered for only the last five years.

This year, a variety of corporate sponsors working with the Chamber are offering films, concerts, dances, contests and games to break up the tedium of flirting and basking in the sun.

Cinematic masterpieces like "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes" and "Bikini Beach" will entertain students tired of competing for best suntan or best legs.

Dancing under the coconut palm pavilions will be to the beat of King Ocrasco and the Fabulous Thunderbirds or The Outsiders and the Fabulous Dukes of Rhythm.

Woman reports theft of jewelry

Police, Fire Round-up

The theft of nearly $30,000 worth of jewelry topped the list of theft and burglary complaints filed with city police during the past 24 hours.

Jean Richmond of 3109 W. Kansas told officers the jewelry was discovered missing after a garage sale Saturday. Total loss was placed at $29,917.

In another theft complaint, the National Mortgage Corp. of Odessa reported the disappearance of a washer, dryer and assorted kitchen appliances worth a total of $1,300 from a mobile home at 1201 S. Camp.

[illegible] the city council says, 'The [illegible] to stop somewhere and [illegible] take the heat,'" said Bryant.

Pointing to a committee appointed [illegible] the city which helped raise funds [illegible] the new $8 million police/courts building, Bryant contended "We have a lot of committees." Later, in trying to list the committees, he said, "We don't have enough."

"The city has been under fire lately for withholding information media are entitled to under the Open Records Act. Minor's platform promises "open, honest and accountable city government."

"THE PEOPLE need to know what's happening, from a positive or negative standpoint," he said.

"Most city employees are dealing with the same oppression," said the former court administrator.

"There's been too much of that," agreed Bryant, who said he met recently with media managers Harrison and City Attorney Joel Roberts to clear up this issue.

"It gives this grand illusion that we've got something to hide," said the mayor. He has instructed Roberts to research this issue so that he can readily release or deny requests without waiting for an outside legal opinion.

While Minor can plan his platform around the problems the city has had, the mayor noted, "I can't run aginst the city of Odessa, I am the city of Odessa."

Bryant would like to continue, even beyond a third term. "I like being the mayor because I can cause things to happen," he said.

"When I can no longer be effective, I'll certainly be willing and able to step aside and give it to someone else," he said. But Bryant's not ready to "give it" to Minor.

Memo says state spending may increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republican Party headquarters has sent local leaders a memorandum saying that Gov. Mark White apparently intends to spend considerably more money in 1984 then the previous year.

White's office replied that the governor's office budget will be "adjusted" to fit available revenue.

"The governor's fiscal 1984 operating budget reveals several areas where White plans to place increased emphasis in comparison with his actual expenditures in fiscal 1983," the GOP memo said.

Bill Hamilton, White's budget officer, said "1984 was the first full fiscal year since he has been in office and the entire budget is based on the anticipated revenue to the state.

The GOP memo, which went to all members of the State Republican Executive Committee and to county chairmen, said travel plans for the main governor's office show a 156 percent increase, from $59,197 to $151,536.

Tammy Wynette admits she was dependent on painkillers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music queen Tammy Wynette is quoted in a soon-to-be published book as saying she has been dependent on painkillers and used the narcotic sedative Demerol, but that she was never "addicted."

The book is "Ragged but Right: The Life & Times of George Jones," by Dolly Carlisle. Miss Wynette and Jones were married from 1968 until divorcing in 1975.

To be published in mid-April by Contemporary Books Inc. of Chicago, the book quotes Miss Wynette as saying last November:

"I've depended on Demerol, plus a lot of other medications, to get me through an awful lot of shows and a lot of pain. There's been many nights when I thought I would die if I had to go on stage and I depended on pain pills to get me through many times."

"I've had physicians tell me many times that I was dependent on painkillers," she says. "In the same sense, they would turn around the next week and do surgery and use Demerol."

Miss Wynette said her 13 stomach operations started her using drugs.

"I do deny that I was addicted," she says. "Maybe I see addiction different. I see addiction to Demerol or morphine or whatever as like somebody having to have it like on a daily basis or if they don't, they go through withdrawal. I've never done that. But I don't deny that I've used it and I've used it an awful lot."

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Gov. Bob Kerrey is being criticized by a Republican Party official for going to London to have "tea by the Thames" with actress Debra Winger.

Kerrey, a Democrat, left the state Friday to meet Miss Winger for a brief vacation. The two began dating after she came to Lincoln for filming of the highly acclaimed movie "Terms of Endearment."

"Some may think it's a big joke that Kerrey skipped the country to meet his girlfriend, but I believe a majority of Nebraskans are appalled at the governor's lack of good judgment," said Lancaster County Republican Chairman Randy Moody on Tuesday.

NTSB: Tighter controls on aircraft needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government should keep a closer eye on how helicopters are used in movies to assure that safety considerations are given proper attention, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The board recommended tighter government control of aircraft in movies after concluding its investigation Tuesday into the 1982 helicopter crash that killed actor Vic Morrow and two children during the filming of the "Twilight Zone" movie.

The board said the crash resulted from poor communications and coordination between the movie's director, other participants and the pilot that led to the helicopter flying too close to a series of special effects explosions.

Five people associated with the movie, including director John Landis and pilot Dorcey Wingo, have been charged in Los Angeles with involuntary manslaughter. The five have pleaded innocent and a decision is expected to be made next month on whether the case should go to trial.

The safety board urged that the Federal Aviation Administration require movie producers to submit for approval detailed plans outlining the procedures to be used by helicopters whenever a scene involves flying below 500 feet. Currently, such approval is required when using fixed-wing aircraft.

Japanese actor honored in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Marvin and director Terrence Young joined other U.S. film personalities to praise Toshiro Mifune, who vaulted to fame as the star of "Roshomon" 30 years ago and has since become one of the world's best-known actors.

Mifune, best known to American audiences for his role as the Japanese warlord Lord Toranaga in the television miniseries "Shogun," is a veteran of 126 movies.

Francis Ford Coppola, Yoko Ono, Mick Jagger, Raul Julia and Robert De Niro were also present at Japan House for the benefit Tuesday evening which kicked off a 40-film retrospective.

After tributes and excerpts from 13 of his movies, Mifune, 64, stepped on stage wearing samurai or warrior hunting garb dating from the 6th century. He demonstrated bow and arrow positions and ended with a samurai victory cry "to wish you all good will."

He and Mifune were at sea on a raft with rain coming up and the camera boat and land out of sight. Mifune relaxed and produced a pack of cigarettes and matches fastened in a plastic bag — "the complete professional."

Among excerpts shown Tuesday were clips from "Drunken Angel," the first of 16 films Akira Kurosawa directed him in, in 1948; "Throne of Blood," a 1957 version of "Macbeth," and a comedy scene from "1941."

Dear Mrs. Y.: A vegetarian diet can be appropriate for a pregnant women if it includes milk, cheese, nuts, cereal, nuts, seeds, fruits and vegetables. However, even if your diet does include all these elements it must be planned very carefully. It would be a good idea for any woman on a vegetarian diet to discuss the subject with her physician.

NEW YORK (AP) — With his Democratic opponent still uncertain for the 1984 presidential race, President Reagan is using the Democratic administration he replaced as the target of his campaign rhetoric.

Reagan said Tuesday that his administration has restored the nation's confidence and there is "no way we are turning back."

Although he acknowledged the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon was unable to fulfill its mission, Reagan defended the role of the Marines he sent there, saying, "It was not from lack of trying or an absence of responsibility on our part" that the mission failed.

And, he contrasted that effort with the seizure of American hostages in Iran, a foreign policy crisis that preoccupied Jimmy Carter's presidency for his last 444 days in office.

"It wasn't just our economy that seemed to be going haywire four years ago," Reagan told a $1,000-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Tuesday night. "The images of American hostages and burning American flags will not be forgotten. Our friends and adversaries alike seemed to be counting us out."

And laying the blame at Carter's feet, Reagan said, "We were not, as some suggested, a nation in decline. Instead, we were being led by a team of people with good intentions and bad ideas — people with all the common sense of Huey, Dewey and Louie."

Hammering on his thesis that Carter crippled the nation's defenses, Reagan said, "In 1981, we went to work repairing the damage done by those who believed a weaker America is a safer America...Wearing love beads and touting our sincerity will not make this a safer world."

Carter, in an interview with reporters a few hours before Reagan's latest attack, said his successor repeatedly makes such charges "when he knows them to be untrue."

Hart can collect delegates despite lack of organization

ATLANTA (AP) — Although Gary Hart largely ignored the South before his presidential campaign caught fire last month, he can still win a significant number of Democratic delegates in Tuesday's primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

The vote will distribute a total of 245 delegates to the Democratic National Convention among the presidential candidates — 123 from Florida, 70 from Georgia and 52 from Alabama.

Hart initially was seen at a disadvantage because he did not field full slates of delegate candidates in the three primaries.

But Democratic Party officials in Georgia and Alabama say each candidate will be awarded the number of delegates he wins in the primary, regardless of whether he has supporters running for those delegate slots.

That is not the case in Florida where delegate candidates will be listed on the ballot as committed to certain presidential candidates and selected by a vote in each congressional district.

But with former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and California Sen. Alan Cranston out of the race, delegate candidates formerly committed to them in Florida now are up for grabs.

Hart has 34 candidates on Florida's ballot for the 84 delegate positions that will be determined directly by Tuesday's vote. But his campaign staff has been actively wooing the Askew and Cranston delegates.

Senate GOP leaders push prayer compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, seeking to find a version of a constitutional school-prayer amendment that can win the needed two-thirds support in the Senate, are pushing a proposed compromise that would permit silent as well as public prayer in public schools.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., chief architect of the proposed compromise, said he would seek a quick vote on the measure today. But opponents vowed to block it.

Unanimous consent of senators would be needed to take up the new proposal. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., leading the opposition, said he would formally oppose Baker's attempt.

"I would certainly not expect to see a vote on any constitutional amendment for the next several weeks," Weicker said.

The offer of a compromise came late Tuesday in the second day of Senate debate on the emotionally charged issue.

The proposal now before the Senate, supported strongly by Baker and by President Reagan, would authorize institutional, spoken prayer throughout the nation's public schools. The new version, which Baker called "a synthesis of ideas," would also permit local school authorities to allow time for silent prayer — which Baker has opposed.

Meese to answer new questions on civil rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin Meese III will answer new questions in writing from a Senate committee about his role in Reagan administration civil rights policy, even though the panel has finished its public hearings on his nomination to be attorney general.

Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee demanded the chance to pursue questions involving Meese's role in altering an 11-year-old ban on federal tax exemptions for racially discriminatory schools, his deals with lenders who got federal jobs, and his ability to remain independent from the president.

Although these questions have been the focus of four days of hearings already, obtaining written responses is expected to delay a formal committee vote until next week.

Even Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who has lead the assault against Meese on the issue of his finances, concedes it will be difficult to block the confirmation.

Military machine 'ready'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says the nation's military machine is "far more ready" to fight now than four years ago when readiness was a presidential campaign issue, though the Pentagon's own ratings say some units are less capable than in 1980.

Although there are still problems, reports of lowered readiness are due largely to a confusing rating system, Gen. John W. Vessey Jr. told reporters Tuesday.

He spoke a day after published reports that Army and Air Force units were rated less capable than they were in 1980.

Shady case goes to court

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — In what might be called a shady case, two neighbors are going to court in a clash between one family's right to enjoy the sun and the other's desire to keep its trees.

The problem started in 1972 when trees planted by P. Herbert Leiderman, a Stanford University psychiatry professor, and his wife, Gloria, began blocking the sunlight into the yard and home of Rudolph Sher, an engineering professor, and his wife, Bonnie.

Both sides say the Santa Clara County Superior Court suit, which asks that the Leidermans be ordered to cut down some of their trees, trim others and pay $53,000 in damages, could set a legal precedent.

These favorites have been streamlined for easy preparation. Uniquely highlighted with herbs, these savory entrees capture the delicate flavor of seafood from Alaska's icy blue waters to bring dining excitement to the table.

Heat to simmering; simmer uncovered 15 minutes. Cut halibut into 1-1/2-inch pieces. Stir halibut, peas and green pepper into vegetable mixture. Mix 1 cup baking mix, milk and parsley until soft dough forms. Heat halibut mixture to boiling over medium heat. Drop dough by 6 spoonfuls onto boiling halibut mixture; reduce heat. Simmer uncovered 10 minutes; cover and simmer 10 minutes longer. 4 to 6 servings.

from "Where the Sidewalk Ends"

By TONI GRIFFIN
Copley News Service

We were talking, this 12-year-old and I. He told me of his life and important people like his dad and his best friend Eric. And he shared his secret desire to pitch this spring on his Little League team.

And then he said it. In one philosophical sentence, he zeroed in on two basic worries which weigh upon kids in general. He looked at me directly as he declared, "School is like eggplant; it's good for you, but it makes you want to throw up."

Knowing that the kid was sharing his sincere feelings, I asked if eggplant were his most detested food.

"You bet!" he threw back at me, swifter than a fastball. "All those seeds crunching in your teeth, and that weird, grayish color."

He neared me, as if to block out the world, as he carefully chose his next words. "That is the yuckiest food my mom makes me eat."

We have talked since then, and each time I am curiously haunted by his statement. Maybe I feel sorry for him. Maybe I remember this little girl staring down at tomatoes on the dinner plate, wishing they'd vanish.

My curiosity has me asking friends and strangers if they had a "hated food" during childhood. I have yet to meet a person who doesn't immediately wince and then, without a second thought, recall the grief-causing food.

In order to capture the feelings of today's youngsters, I asked Jim Riley, teacher of the fifth/sixth grade class at MacDowell Elementary School in San Diego what his students think of their least-favorite foods. He turned the question into an assignment.

Following are impressions of some of those students. Their comments will be followed by recipes of some of their favorite foods.

While reading the candid observations below, think back. What was the "yuckiest" food of your childhood?

"There are many kinds of food — some good, some bad. The problem is the bad category has more awful things than the good category has wonderful things.

"For example, if you can name one good way to prepare lima beans, you're a genius! ... It's not the taste that's so bad, it's the texture — that dry, rough texture. It makes me sick just to think about them." — Alison Henyey

"Take a bite of your broccoli for Mommy," Julie Novak seems to be telling her son, Nicholas, 2½. Meanwhile, 6-year-old brother Andrew tries his innovative solution to the "do-I-have-to-eat-it?" problem common to most children.

"Broccoli is the most dreadful food in existence. ... There is also the possibility that the reason I don't like broccoli is that my parents are always emphasizing its nutritional values.

"If you ask me, one of the symptoms of broccoli is death." — Marc Dionne.

BASIC MEATBALLS

1 lb. lean ground beef
1 egg
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 small onion, chopped
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Salt

Mix ingredients well. Shape into 1¼-inch balls and place in baking pans. Bke, uncovered, in 450-degree oven 15 minutes or until meatballs are well browned and slightly pink in center when slashed. Makes 4 servings.

SPAGHETTI SAUCE

1 large carrot, finely chopped
1 large green pepper, seeded and finely chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced or pressed
2 tbsps. olive oil or salad oil
1 (1-lb.) can tomato pure
3 (8-oz.) cans tomato sauce
½ cup dry red wine
2 tsps. salt
1 tbsp. sugar
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. each dry rosemary, oregano leaves, and dry basil
1 bay leaf
2 lbs. lean boneless pork shoulder, cut into ½-inch cubes
¼ lb. mushrooms, sliced
1 lb. spaghetti
Boiling salted water
Grated Parmesan cheese

In a 6- to 8-quart kettle over medium heat, cook onion, carrot, green peppe, and garlic in oil until vegetables are tender. Add tomato pure, tomato sauce, wine, salt, sugar, pepper, rosemary, oregano, basil, bay leaf, and pork, bring to boil.

Reduce heat; cover and simmer until pork is fork-tender (about 1½ hours). Add mushrooms and simmer, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Remove bay leaf.

Cook spaghetti in large kettle of boiling salted water; drain. Toss with cheese to taste. Arrange spaghetti on a serving dish, ladle some sauce over it, and serve. Freeze any remaining sauce. Makes 6-8 servings.

GRASSHOPPER PIE

30 large or 3 cups miniature marshmallows
½ cup milk
¼ cup green creme de menthe
3 tbsps. white creme de cacao
1½ cups whipping cream, whipped

Make pie crust. In medium saucepan, combine marshmallows and milk. Heat untl marshmallows are melted, stirring constantly. Stir in creme de menthe and creme de cacao. Chill until thickened but not set. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into cooled crust.

Refrigerate 3 hours or until set. Serve garnished with whipped cream, chocolate curls, pistachio nuts. Makes 9-inch pie.

Chocolate Cookie Crust: Crush 20 chocolate cookies to make 1½ cups crumbs. Melt 4 tablespoons butter or margarine and blend with crumbs. Press firmly into bottom and up sides of pie dish. Refrigerate.

SPINACH QUICHE

9-inch baked pastry shell
1 (10-oz.) pkg. frozen chopped spinach, thawed
½ cup cottage cheese
6 green onions (including tops), sliced
1 tbsp. olive oil
1 tsp. dry basil
½ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. garlic salt
4 eggs
½ cup milk

Prepare and bake pastry shell. With hands, squeeze as much moisture from spnach as possible; set spinach aside. In blender or food processor, whirl cottage cheese, green onions, oil, basil, pepper, and garlic salt until smooth. Add eggs and milk; blend well. Pour into a bowl and stir in spinach. Pour into baked pastry shell or greased 9-inch pie pan.

Bake in 325-degree oven 35 to 40 minutes or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting. Makes 6 servings.

Americans' appetite for lamb growing

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Americans' appetite for lamb has climbed from a record low of 1.3 pounds per person in 1979 to 1.6 pounds per person in 1982. This trend is likely to continue as diet and nutrition-conscious consumers select leaner and lighter foods.

Lamb does not have marbling (fat) within the meat and the thick layer of fat on the outside can easily be trimmed away. The cuts also tend to be smaller, making the size of the portions easier to control.

In addition, the American Sheep Producers Council is encouraging butchers to cut lamb differently so it is more suitable to today's lifestyle and smaller family sizes.

If they succeed, consumers will be seeing shorter, easier to carve leg roasts of 5 to 7 pounds, instead of 7 to 10 pounds, at the meat counters. The new cutting techniques will also result in longer loin roasts — and more chops.

During the winter months through the first of March, lamb is especially abundant and a variety of meaty, juicy cuts are available. The best cuts of the winter season are the cuts found in the forequarter area — the shoulder, neck and shank cuts.

If you haven't included lamb in your menus lately, this winter would be a good time to try this economical and nutritious meat.

When buying lamb, you will need one loin chop, sirloin steak, shoulder chop (round bone or blade), shank or pattie per person. But plan on two rib chops, or four spareribs or riblets, per person for adequate servings. A leg of lamb, whether bone-in, boneless, rolled or butterflied, serves about six to eight people.

Use lamb within two or three days of purchase. Leave it in the original wrapping in the coldest part of the refrigerator. If the meat is to be frozen, wrap it in freezer wrap, mark and date it. Ground lamb, like all ground red meats, should be used within one to two days or frozen.

Lamb can be cooked by a variety of methods including broiling, barbeque, roasting and braising. But whatever cooking method you select, don't forget to enhance the naturally good flavor of lamb with herbs or spices.

Some of the herbs and spices that go well with lamb include rosemary, marjoram, oregano, mustard, mint, coriander, paprika, garlic, ginger and allspice.

Chenin blanc grape versatile

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

It doesn't seem to mind at all being coaxed into an aperitif-style beverage, with 2 or 3 percent residual sugar and barely enough staying power to make it into the next year without falling apart and tasting like some sweet, clumsy oaf of a wine.

In the sweeter style, it has been accepted widely. It is sipped on terraces at Sunday brunches, before luncheons, and in late afternoons as the sun sets. It is not a "serious" wine.

Some wineries have treated it with more respect and gone in the opposite direction, trying to make it bone dry. Wineries such as Chappellet, Chalone and Burgess, to name but three, challenged connoisseurs in the early 1970s with nosugar versions of Chenin Blanc, but the attempts were not met by the public with open arms. Burgess and Chalone in fact eventually turned their backs on the variety.

CHAPPELLET PERSISTS

Which is as it should be. Donn Chappellet is a self-assured, but quite phlegmatic man given to making changes about as fast as it takes to get to his hilltop winery — which is not very fast at all.

Chappellet sits on Pritchard Hill, which is a lot covered in gnarled oak and madrona on the eastern flank of the Napa Valley. High atop Pritchard Hill, some 1,600 feet above the valley floor, due east of the Robert Mondavi Winery in Oakville, roosts Donn and Molly Chappellet's pyramidal winery, far from the rest of the grape world below them.

The climate is warm on the hill, but cooling afternoon breezes help to drag out the growing season. And the vines are planted on a ski-slope angle, making the drainage so good that the vines struggle to yield three or four tons of chenin blanc grapes per acre. That is about one-third of its normal yield in valley floor areas. And viticulturalists will tell you that the smaller the yield of a plot of grapes, the more intense its flavor will be.

The chenin blanc grape yields very little natural, identifiable "varietal character" — aromas that verify what it is on first whiff. When the grapes are picked young, there is a hint of unripe grapefruit in the scent. As the grapes mature a bit, the aroma becomes somewhat "leafy," as what one might discover if a leaf were crushed in the palm of the hand. Later in the season, as ripening proceeds, chenin blanc can take on hints of peaches and figs, a sort of fruit salad aroma.

ON PRITCHARD Hill, those later-season aromas would be possible if Donn Chappellet permitted. Instead, he hews to a house style of bone-dry Chenin Blanc that requires the grapes be picked early. But instead of allowing the grapefruity scents to remain by themselves, Donn prefers to age the wine in French oak barrels.

The result is a wine that resembles Chardonnay, which also has some grassy hints when it is young. But Chappellet Chenin Blanc also has a lushness of mouth feel combined with a lean austerity that makes the wine not only a fine match for light hors d'oeuvres, but also a magnificent accompaniment for seafood dishes.

Many Chenin Blancs on the market contain just the barest amount of residual sugar. Hacienda, Dry Creek, Callaway, Preston, R&J Cook and Kenwood make delectable Chenins this way, with residual sugar levels of between 1 percent and 2 percent.

These wines are effectively dry for most people, yet they accentuate the fruit; they are not aged in wood.

Dill pickles sweet

SWEET DILLS

1 quart (1 jar) dill gherkins
2 cup sugar
1/4 — 1/2 tsp. dried red pepper flakes

Drain pickles, discarding liquid and any spice. Slice pickles crosswise about 1/4-inch thick. Layer in a shallow refrigerator container, sprinkling layers with sugar and pepper flakes. Cover tightly and refrigerate, stirring lightly occasionally, until the sugar liquifies — may take overnight or longer. Serve drained and chilled. —(AP)

Man learns life without butter still worth living

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - In retrospect, says Ted Feuerbach, life without butter is easy. Ten years ago, though, he was following a virtual diarycase diet. Seven or eight eggs a week. Three glasses of whole milk a day. Chocolate ice cream for dessert. Cheese before bed.

Then in 1974, after a routine medical check-up, he was told the news: his blood cholesterol count was high. Very high. Feuerbach had to adapt.

Now the 68-year-old retired aeronautics engineer (who does 90 percent of the cooking in his suburban Virginia household while his 64-year-old wife Eileen attends college) has a refrigerator that looks like a low-cholesterol showcase. Stockpiles of margarine packages, containers of low-fat yogurt and cottage cheese, a mayonnaise jar that has stayed full for weeks.

Feuerbach didn't lose his enthusiasm about food, nor did he switch to a dull and deprived eating regimen. In adapting, Feuerbach learned that stubborn taste buds can be retrained, that lifelong habits can be reversed — and turned into new ones.

But it took time, and he had help. A week after he was informed of his blood-test results, Feuerbach heard about the cholesterol research being done by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. He applied to be a candidate.

THE OBJECTIVE of the study was to find out if lowering blood cholesterol would lead to lower risk of heart attack. George Washington University's Lipid Research Clinic was one of the 12 medical centers around the country NIH financed for the study, and after extensive questions and tests, Feuerbach became one of 236 test subjects chosen by George Washington University.

During the 7½ years he participated in the study, Feuerbach was advised to follow a diet of "moderation," which limited his intake of fat and cholesterol, but was not as restrictive as the current American Heart Association recommendations. He was told not to keep a daily log of what he ate; program leaders wanted to ensure that participants were adapting "naturally." "He made the type of changes that the general public could be making," said Anne Molofsky, a nutritionist who did dietary counseling for the study.

Every two months, when Feuerbach went to George Washington University to have his blood cholesterol count taken (never nowing the results), he filled out a form estimating what he ate the previous week — including how many eggs, how much meat, dairy products, margarine, oil. He would see a doctor, a nurse and a nutritionist.

LAT Photo

Ted Feuerbach, 68, who was a test subject for a study on the effects of lowering blood cholesterol, learned that stubborn taste buds can be retrained.

IF ANYTHING, Feuerbach developed more interest in cooking. He enrolled in cooking classes at Arlington, Va., adult school, started sending recipes to George Washington university for the clinic's handouts, and when he went for his check-ups, he'd bring the doctors and nurses samples of his efforts — such as homemade pickles made from cucumbers in his garden.

Feuerbach eased into food changes slowly. From eight eggs a week, he gradually reduced to three — in about three months. When he switched from butter to margarine, he would use only a little at first, to get used to the taste. Dietary adaption was now new for Feuerbach. About 30 years ago, he used two teaspoons of sugar in his coffee. Every morning, he would put less and less sugar in his drink until after several months, unbeknownst to him, he was drinking it with no sugar. Coffee (decaffeinated now) with sugar "tastes like candy" to him.

He conducted his own taste tests. Even though the diet called for low-fat milk and margarine instead of butter, he still had flexibility. After tasting and cooking with various brands of margarine, Feuerbach found one that "didn't smell" during frying. Similarly, in switching from whole milk to a less fatty milk, he started from skim and worked his way up the fat percentage scale. Now Feuerbach prefers skim for drinking and has settled on 2 percent for cereal. Whole milk now "tastes like cream" to him.

HE CHANGED the way the food was cooked, without eliminating the food. For soups and casseroles that contain meat or poultry, Feuerbach cooks them the night before isolates the meat and refrigerates it separately. The next day, the fat is skimmed off the top of the casserole and the meat is returned. Gravies are made from meat juices, not fat. And fried chicken is oven baked: skinned, coated with flour, salt, pepper and curry powder and baked with about 1-4 cup of melted margarine in the bottom of the pan.

Feuerbach made substitutions. He used to think that "nothing else" went with baked potatoes except sour cream. Now he uses plain yogurt. Instead of pork chops, he uses pork tenderloin.

He adapted old recipes. The heavy cream in creamed spinach became low-fat milk and margarine, skim milk and margarine found their way into once-rich creamed eggs in curry sauce.

FEUERBACH WAS recently unblinded about his results. During the study, all of the participants had been following a recommended diet. In addition, half of them had been given a cholesterol-lowering drug, the other half were given a placebo. Feuerbach was in the drug group. After 7½ years, his blood cholesterol was lowered 18 percent, and his risk of heart attack reduced by almost 40 percent.

As his cholesterol lowering was due to a combination of diet and drug, said Molofsky, the specific benefit that Feuerbach derived from the diet is not known because of the powerful effect of the drug. But according to Molofsky, approximately 95 percent of the population who find themselves with high cholesterol do not need a drug. They can reduce their cholesterol to a normal level simply by following the American Heart Association diet. As for those with normal cholesterol levels, said Molofsky, "it (the AHA diet) is a basic, good, healthy diet for anyone."

Here are some of Feuerbach's recipes, along with those from "Modified Magic," a cookbook compiled by the 12 clinics participating in the study:

TED FEUERBACH'S SALMON MOUSSE

2¼ ounce packages gelatin
½ cup boiling water
Juice of 1 lemon
1 cup mayonnaise (preferably low-fat)
1 cup evaporated milk
1 teaspoon dill
1 teaspoon paprika

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Soften gelatin in liquid drained from salmon and dissolve in boiling water. Add lemon juice and blend in blender with salmon until smooth. Add mayonnaise, milk, dill and paprika. Blend thoroughly and pour into a 1-quart mold. Refrigerate until set. Makes one quart.

FEUERBACH'S COLD CUCUMBER SOUP

3 tablespoons margarine
3 cups cucumbers, peeled and chopped, plus sliced cucumbers for garnish
6 cups chicken broth
1½ tablespoons wine vinegar
¾ teaspoon dill
4 tablespoons cream of wheat
2 cups low-fat yogurt
Salt and pepper to taste

Cook onion in margarine until tender. Add cucumbers, chicken broth, vinegar and dill and bring to a boil. Stir in cream of wheat. Lower heat and simmer for 20 to 25 minutes. Allow to cool slightly and puree in blender. Refrigerate. Before serving, add yogurt and stir until blended. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Decorate with sliced cucumbers. Makes 8 servings.

CHICKEN FRICASSEE

1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium carrot, pared and thinly sliced
1 stalk celery, thinly sliced
Salt to taste
6 peppercorns
4 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
3 tablespoons margarine
1 teaspoon basil, crumbled
6 tablespoons flour
10-ounce package frozen peas

Cornmeal dumplings:
1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup yellow cornmeal
1 cup skim milk
2 tablespoons oil

Place first 8 ingredients in a dutch oven with water to cover. Bring to a boil, cover, lower heat and simmer 2 hours. Remove skin; set chicken aside. Strain stock; discard spices, reserve vegetables. Measure stock and either add enough water or condense by boiling to yield 4 cups stock. Cool stock until fat solidifies; skim fat and discard.

In stockpot, melt margarine, add basil and 2 cups stock. In remaining 2 cups cold stock, disperse flour by adding slowly and stirring with fork. Add to pot, stir and cook until gravy thickens. Boil 2 minutes. Place chicken in gravy; add vegetables and frozen peas. Heat slowly to simmering while preparing batter for dumplings.

To make dumplings, sift flour, baking powder and salt together in a medium mixing bowl. Add cornmeal; mix well with other dry ingredients. Combine milk and oil. Stir, adding all at once, into flour mixture, just until liquid is incorporated. (Dough will be soft.) Drop batter in eight mounds on top of chicken. Cover and steam 20 minutes on low heat until dumplings are puffy-light. Makes 8 servings.

Animal adoption fund pays for pet protection

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: If you're not an animal lover, skip this letter.

Every year, millions of dogs and cats are abandoned because they're either too expensive or too much trouble to keep. A few of the more appealing strays are taken in by kindhearted strangers, the rest are picked up by local animal shelters, or the city or county animal regulation department, and taken to the pound where they are eventually destroyed.

Adoption Fund, a charitable non-profit California organization that takes in homeless dogs, cats, puppies and kittens, and cares for them until someone adopts them. It NEVER puts an animal "to sleep," and many animals have been rescued from shelters and pounds.

Everyone who adopts a pet must sign a pet adoption statement that he or she realizes that it is not to be used for experimental research — that will result in its destruction.

If you live in the Los Angeles area and want to adopt a pet, write Pet Adoption Fund, 7315 Deering Ave., Canoga Park, Calif. 91303.

If you live elsewhere and want to start a similar organization, write to the above address and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for the Fund's booklet. It's free, but please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

And when your ship (or your horse) comes in, be a sport and send a few dollars to this wonderful agency. Like the animals whose lives it saves, it can't live without people who care.

DEAR ABBY: Assuming you were correct in stating that a pet takes on its owner's religion, you advised a cat owner who was half-Christian and half-Jewish to have her cat cremated, then divide the remains equally, giving one half a Jewish funeral and the other half a Christian funeral.

Abby, you should know that cremation is prohibited by Jewish law. — LIVING AND WELL IN INDIAN WELLS, CALIF.

DEAR LIVING: Although Jewish law prohibits cremation, only Orthodox Jews (who constitute a very small percentage of the Jewish population in this country) adhere to that law.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the man who didn't know how to handle his bigoted father-in-law who enjoyed telling "jokes" that put down some ethnic group:

Whenever I hear an ethnic "joke," I say, "That's very funny. I heard the same joke, only the person was (), then I insert the ethnic background of the person who told it.

It works every time. — C.G. IN HARTLAND, MICH.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Majority of the public equate risk with danger, poll shows

By The Associated Press

Some of the risks are tiny. They are measured in parts per billion and in terms of what might happen 20 years from now.

Other hazards — illness, crime, accidents — are more common and more immediate, and a new survey shows the public believes the individual is responsible for avoiding these risks — even though people often do little to put their beliefs into practice.

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associates, which looked at public perceptions of risk in connection with a project for the Insurance Information Institute. The survey was based on telephone interviews with a national sample of 1,255 adults last August.

The poll, released last week, shows that more than four people in five look on risk as synonymous with "danger." But 50 percent also say that a risk can be a challenge and 41 percent see it as an opportunity.

More than half of those questioned — 51 percent — said they agreed strongly with the statement that "avoiding risk is mainly the responsibility of the individual," and two-thirds — 67 percent — agreed that "most accidents happen because people are careless or don't pay attention."

At the same time, however, Americans feel government has a major role to play in helping people help themselves. Sixty-four percent said government regulation is needed to protect people from dangerous products.

The survey respondents do not feel that business is doing its share to reduce risks. According to the Harris findings, only two people in 10 — 21 percent — agreed strongly that "on the whole, business does a good job of protecting the public from dangerous products."

Exposure to environmental and technological hazards ranks high on the list of risks. Almost six people in 10 — 59 percent — said the areas in which they lived were subject to air or water pollution; 45 percent said they were exposed to tornadoes or hurricanes; and 35 percent said they faced possible toxic chemicals.

"Perceived exposure to strictly environmental hazards seems to be related to geographic region," the Harris researchers noted, "while exposure to technological hazards seems tied to how extensively the region has been developed or industrialized. However, air and water pollution are seen as potential hazards by approximately one-half or more of all Americans, regardless of region."

Cecilia Hellmann

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — Championed by a middle-aged nun, some residents of this poverty-stricken city say a nuclear-power company is wrong if it thinks they are too busy trying to survive to concern themselves with the uranium warehouse next door.

"Everybody dumps on East St. Louis, and they're not going to continue to do it anymore," said Peggy Monroe, a mother of four who joined the Save East St. Louis Coalition after learning she had a uranium warehouse for a neighbor.

The coalition is demanding that the Washington, D.C.-based Edlow International Co. close the facility on the edge of town. The group says uranium stored at the warehouse is a threat to residents' health and safety. The building caught fire Dec. 7, there were no injuries.

Ninety-eight percent of the city's 55,200 residents are black and some believe that was a factor in choosing the site of the warehouse.

Mrs. Monroe said outsiders are more likely to put such facilities in poor, mostly black communities rather than in richer, white ones.

But company president Jack Edlow said race was not a factor in the selection of East St. Louis. The site was chosen four years ago because of its central location and access to river and rail transportation, he said.

Now, he said, uninformed residents "have been frightened and... duped by certain individuals" — chief among them Sister Cecilia Hellmann, co-principal of St. Patrick's Catholic School, a block from the warehouse.

The sister is probably "well-meaning" but has "gone around and scared a lot of the parents," Edlow said.

Edlow cited the 49-year-old nun's decision to lead about 190 schoolchildren, chanting "We want life!" to the fenced-in warehouse recently. The action was "exploiting kids," he said.

Sister Hellmann says she believes the radioactive materials should not be kept so close to a populated area, but says she doesn't "do much scaring at all."

"The community seems to believe that I'm for them," she said. "I certainly wouldn't be speaking about this at all if I didn't have deep concern about the community and the children."

Jan Strasma, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Chicago, said the uranium, processed elsewhere into nuclear power fuel, is not explosive.

"It is the NRC's position, that the storage of the uranium is a safe activity at that site," he said.

"If I had known that, I never would have moved here," she said.

Deputy Fire Chief Leverse Brooks said residents are overreacting out of fear and ignorance.

"They think of an explosion, and they're afraid of radiation," he said. "It raises fears in just about everybody, especially ones who don't know too much about it."

Edlow said warehouse safety features include outdoor storage of uranium hexaflouride, electronic security, a watchman and radiation monitoring devices. No radiation leakage has been detected, he said.

The warehouse benefits the city, which had a 12.5 percent unemployment rate in January, by providing six permanent jobs, some day labor and tax revenue, he said. Before the warehouse was set up, he said, city officials were "pleased...to have our business."

But Mrs. Monroe said the city now has "a new generation of people" who won't "sit still and be dumped on."

Linker stars on HBO

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Amy Linker, who portrayed an ungainly schoolgirl in "Square Pegs," blossoms in a contemporary drama that closely parallels the star-crossed lovers in "Romeo and Juliet."

"When We First Met" inaugurates a series of a dozen 60-minute shows called "HBO Family Playhouse" on the pay television network. The series, a mixture of new and old programs, is aimed at viewers 12 to 18 years old.

"As soon as I read the script I saw that it was 'Romeo and Juliet,'" said Miss Linker, "but it took me a while to notice that our characters, Rob and Jenny, had the same initials. Rob's last name is Montana, like Romeo Montague.

"Zeffirelli's 'Romeo and Juliet' is my favorite movie. I'm a romantic. I like romantic stories, romantic novels, romantic movies. You can't always live romance, so that's why I'm an actress."

The drama was filmed by the Learning Corp. of America in Toronto, and young Canadian actor Andrew Sabiston plays Rob. Future dramas, which will debut on the first Monday of every month, will star Kristy McNichol, Maureen Stapleton, Amanda Plummer, Barbara Feldon, Scott Baio, Scatman Crothers and Glynn Turman.

In "When We First Met," Jenny and Rob are two high school students who meet and fall in love, unaware that their families are enemies. Rob's mother was the driver who struck and killed Jenny's sister and a bitterness has grown between the two families. It's not giving away any secret to say this story does not take the tragic turn of "Romeo and Juliet."

Miss Linker, 17, got her start in the TV movie "A Time for Miracles" and moved from New York to Los Angeles for the "Lewis & Clark" series in 1981. But she's best known as Lauren, a high school student in the "Square Pegs" TV series, who waged a constant struggle for popularity and acceptance. For that she wore braces on her teeth and padding around her waist to make her look plump.

She's also the voice of Robin on the NBC animated series "Mr. T," has made several appearances on "Fantasy Island," and sings on "Hedva's Gang" for the Jewish Television Network. (She sings "Chicken Soup with Rice.")

"One thing I liked about 'When We First Met,'" she said, "is that it allows me to show some versatility. It's such a contrast both emotionally and physically from Lauren."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

If you are shown a bridge hand where the low cards are signified by an 'x,' you might be looking at a misleading situation. To illustrate, on this hand it is the six and seven of spades that are the key to the winning line!

With seven tricks in hand and his side not vulnerable, South's opening bid of four hearts was eminently correct. North could hardly do less than raise to slam.

West led the queen of clubs, and a casual look at the hand diagram might lead you to believe that the best chance for slam is to try the spade finesse first. If that fails, you can next hope for a 3-3 spade division and, should that suit not split favorably, you can still fall back on a diamond finesse — a combined chance of about 84 percent.

Pretty good odds, but doomed to failure as the cards lie. Declarer looked deeper into the position, and saw that he had a foolproof line as long as East had no more than four clubs.

Declarer won the ace of clubs and ruffed a club high. He crossed back twice to the table with the eight and ten of trumps, each time using the entry to ruff a club high. In the process he drew the outstanding trumps and stripped East of clubs. Now declarer led a spade. Had West played low, declarer intended to put in the board's six, forcing East to win and end playing him. However, West was awake and inserted the nine. Declarer won the king, returned to hand with the ace of trumps to bring about this position:

NORTH

South led a spade and, when West followed low, he inserted dummy's six. East won, but he was faced with losing options. Whether he returned a spade or a diamond, it would be into the table's major tenace and the slam would be home.

Note that declarer would make his contract even if West played a high spade on the second round of that suit. Declarer would finesse the jack and a similar end play would exist.
