SCURRY ASKED ATTITUDE IN NEXT PRIMARY

Anti-Smith Leaders Discuss Split in Ranks With County Chairman

PLEDGE GUIDES PARTY

Conference Here Opens Way to Restoration of Demo Harmony

Judge Edgar Scurry, chairman of the Wichita county Democratic executive committee, Tuesday afternoon told a committee of anti-Smith Democrats that it was his opinion that any qualified voter who entered the Democraitc primary and declared himself a Democrat and accepted the pledge required by law should be permitted to vote in that primary, and that it was his opinion the same rule would apply to any person desiring to become a candidate before the primary. He said he felt sure the county executive committee would support that opinion.

The committee was comprised of W. B. Corlett and J. R. Ogle of Wichita Falls and R. H. Henry of Burkburnett, all of whom had been active in opposition to Smith in the last campaign.

They said that they did not ask the conference as suppliants; that they were not asking for anything but that they would like to know the chairman's attitude. They said they felt and had always felt that they were Democrats, but wanted to know if there was any disposition of intention of kicking them out of the party

Court Decision on Ouster

Judge Scurry told them that he did not believe that anybody could be kept out of the primary if they declared themselves Democrats and accepted the pledge to support the nominees of the primary.

He was asked what would be his attitude toward reinstatement of certain deposed precinct committeemen who had been deposed because of their opposition to the head of the ticket in the 1928 campaign. He replied that this was a matter that was in the courts and that he would be governed by the courts. The question, he explained, was now before the state supreme court on a writ of error, and that if this court ordered the reinstatement of the deposed committeemen, he would promptly reinstate them.

Judge Scurry was asked by Mr. Corlett to write the chairman of the Democratic state executive committee to learn the views of that party official on the questions brought up. Judge Scurry said that he would gladly do so.

The conference was conducted in good humor. Mr. Corlett said others from Iowa Park and Electra had planned to attend but were unable to be present.

The executive committee question was first brought up by Mr. Henry. He recalled that "some of us were kicked out of the party because we were not pleased with the chosen candidates."

He added: "We are satisfied with being out, and we are not begging to get back. We are Democrats just as much as we ever were, and what we want to know is just how Judging of the exhibits will start Wednesday at 10 a. m. and last probably though the next day. Observers have expressed satisfaction at the representative agricultural, livestock and poultry exhibits which have been brought here from every part of the county.

Approximately 2,000 people were on the fairgrounds southwest of the city today. Among the attractions Wednesday will be automobile races, which will be held each day of the fair. A carnival got into full swing today, and the shows will be a big feature of the event.

After leaving Burkburnett, the caravan will go to Devol, Grandfield, Loveland, Hollister, and Frederick, arriving at the latter city about 1 p. m. for dinner.

The afternoon and evening are to be spent at the Tillman county fair at Frederick, in celebration of Wichita Falls day. Fair officials in communication with the local chamber of commerce Tuesday gave assurances that elaborate plans have been made to welcome the Wichita Falls delegation there Wednesday.

MORE TROOPS ARE ORDERED TO JERUSALEM

Soldiers Called From Egypt And Jaffa as Riots Spread

PEACE EFFORT FAILS

New Menace Feared as Band of Bedouins Is Said To Be on War Path

JERUSALEM, Aug. 27. (UP)—Spread of rioting throughout Palestine became so grave tonight that additional troops were ordered from Egypt to cope with the situation.

At least 1,000 more troops are expected from Egypt and 800 more soldiers will be landed from the H. M. S. Barham at Jaffa," it was learned from reliable sources.

In the face of increasingly serious disturbances in the outlying areas, the first effort of British officials to bring an end to the Moslem raids failed completely.

550 Reported Killed

Reports received here said that casualties throughout Palestine in the last four days amounted to 550.

H. C. Luke, acting high commissioner of Palestine, called upon Hajj Ami, mufti of Jerusalem and upon the president of the supreme moslem council, to request the tribesmen to cease looting.

Luke asked the leaders to go to the neighboring villages accompanied by armored cars and appeal to the religious instincts of the villages to halt the rioting. It was understood that the mufti refused to comply with the request, explaining that the villagers are still too excited.

The unsuccessful move followed action of consular representatives here calling upon the authorities to take "stringent measures" to end the rioting.

ARMED BAND MARCHES ON HOLY CITY

HEBRON, Palestine, Aug. 27. (US)—Intense excitement is rife here tonight following fragmentary but insistent reports from the district of Beersheba that bands of several hundred well armed Bedouins are en route to Jerusalem.

Advices from Amman, in trans-Jordania, indicate that numerous Arab camps are seething with excitement as the Moslem outbreak continues to gain impetus.

Other reports from Jerusalem state that several British police officials have been wounded in the sporadic engagements staged by the Arabs.

BREAKS FEARED SPREADING OUTSIDE OF PALESTINE

TEL-AVIV, Palestine, Aug. 27. (US)—Gravest fears were expressed here tonight that the Moslem-Jewish outbreak is spreading through the Moslem world outside Palestine.

The extension of hostilities was indicated in a report that Bedouin Arabs from the trans-Jordania districts had crossed the frontier and burned the old Jewish colony at Afula.

Seven victims of the riots were burned here today. Tel-Aviv is quiet and no serious disturbances are reported.

Advices from Hebron state that the death toll there has reached 80. Many Americans and other students who were wounded in the recent Moslem attack on the Rabbinical seminary at Hebron have since died.

Reports from the Mikweh colony tonight carry the news that 22 Jewish students at the government experimental station there were wounded in a clash with the Arabs.

Survivors of Attack on Jews Describe Butchery

Correspondent Visits Hebron After Assault by Arabs to Get Eye-Witness Account of Slaughter

By JACOB SIMON
(Copyright, 1929, by United Press)

JERUSALEM, Aug. 27.—An attack by a band of Arab tribesmen who fought residents of Hebron with knives, axes and clubs was described to the United Press correspondent by survivors.

The Hebron refugees broke into tears as they described the horrible scenes resulting from what they described as a pre-arranged assault.

Among the refugees are 15 Americans who said their lives were saved by a miracle.

Americans Killed

I visited the health department at Hebron, where the bodies of dead and wounded were gathered. I counted 58 dead. At least a dozen Americans were killed in the fighting.

I went to Hebron in a convoy of 17 busses and two armored cars. We halted at Yalpiot, in the suburbs south of Jerusalem, and saw a large number of looted houses. The armored cars started firing at scattered looters.

About 66 wounded Hebrews were being cared for at Hebron. They emphasized the brutality of the attack, saying that no revolvers or rifles were used by the Arabs.

I talked to Rabbi Epstein, head of the Solvdka Talmudic school, whose nephew, Aron David Epstein, was killed, and to about 50 other refugees. Aron-David Epstein was from Chicago.

Rabbis Killed

In the Jewish ghetto there were about 50 Spanish-Jewish families who had lived peacefully and were completely assimilated with the neighboring moslems, since the Jewish exile from Spain in 1493. Despite this fact, 14 of them were killed, including Rabbi Meyer Rastell, and Rabbi Rabenou Hasson, heads of prominent Palestine families.

At the synagogue, I saw burned phylacteries or amulets, and prayer shawls. I also saw eight houses which had been completely looted. At the Hadassa hospital all windows had been smashed and surgical instruments broken.

A physician at the Hadassa hospital said that he witnessed the indifference of Arab police forces to the looting. His statement was strengthened by the fact that Arab police are now disarmed on order of the British military administration. The authorities also refrain from calling on the trans-Jordan frontier force, consisting of 98 Arabs, for assistance.

Soldiers on Duty

There were 100 soldiers from Jaffa on duty. They arrived this morning and 20 were put on guard at the police station where 400 Jews were given refuge.

Slonim, the chief rabbi of Hebron, whose son, the son's wife and family and 16 other refugees in his house were killed in the assault, was heart-broken as he told of the attack.

On behalf of the American consul-general at Jerusalem, I urged the American refugees in the police station to join our convoy, but they firmly refused, saying they would leave only with the rabbi and all of his colleagues. They probably will join the next convoy.

The American students expressed a desire to sail for home on the first boat.

Two hundreds refugees returned here with our convoy, arriving in Jerusalem at 7:30 o'clock.

POWERS AGREE ON REPARATION

Knotty Problem of Payments Appears Solved

THE HAGUE, Aug. 28. (Wednesday) (UP)—The German delegation to The Hague reparations conference announced this morning that the five powers reached an agreement which is expected to solve the deadlock raised by Britain's demands for revision of the Young plan.

The German delegates were called back to the conference room where the delegates of Great Britain had been discussing the situation with the French, Italian, Belgian, and Japanese delegates throughout last night and early this morning.

It was said officially that the new accord grants Great Britain 78 per cent of her demands. The British delegation, however, stated that they will receive an even higher percentage.

The official information from sources other than the British said that Britain would be granted a total of 37,440,000 marks (about $9,360,000) out of the 48,000,000 marks which Phillip Snowden demanded as an increase in the British share of reparations. The British statement said it had been decided to grant 40,000,000 of the 48,000,000 marks demanded.

Rudolf Hilferding, Dr. Julius Curtis and Joseph Wirth of the German delegation rejoined the five powers at 1 a. m. It was understood that the Germans were to be informed of the situation before the press was informed definitely by the delegates.

Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, who was taken suddenly ill at the meeting last night, was unable to attend the morning meeting.

Drouth Threatened By Light Showers

The first indications that the severe drouth that has beset Northwest Texas for weeks will be eventually broken came Tuesday when slight showers fell in Wichita Falls and in several Northwest Texas towns.

Other towns reporting slight precipitation included Seymour, Henrietta, Electra, Tolbert, Holliday, Goree and Spur. Railroad dispatches also reported a slight fall south of Decatur.

WORLD CRUISE CARRIES SHIP TO WEST TEXAS

Exact Course to Be Followed Depends on Location Of Storm Area

NORTHEAST ROUTE

Fort Sill, Okla., Operator Picks Up Air Liner's Radio Message

(By The Associated Press)

CLOVIS, N. M., Aug. 28. (Wednesday)—The Santa Fe train dispatcher's office here received word that the dirigible Graf Zeppelin passed over Abernathy, nathy, Texas at 12:25 a .m. today.

Thousands of North Texans eagerly watched the skies Tuesday night or waited the coming of day Wednesday in the hope of sighting the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin, on the last lap of a round the world cruise which is scheduled to end at Lakehurst, N. J.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Wednesday morning the exact route of the giant air liner was still uncertain, but indications were that its often changed course would lead the big ship somewhere between Amarillo and Wichita Falls and across Oklahoma. Reports Monday night indicated that the Graf should be over this area late Tuesday afternoon, but heavy winds so retarded its course that it reached El Paso late Tuesday, and Dr. Hugo Eckener announced that it would take a southern course across Texas to Fort Worth and Dallas and into Arkansas.

Course Changed

As reports of the progress of the ship came in later Tuesday night, it appeared that the commander of the dirigible had decided to change his course, and for several hours it followed an erratic and difficult course across West Texas and the border of New Mexico. The Lawton, Okla., correspondent of The Record News notified this newspaper that the army radio station at Fort Sill had been in communication with the Graf shortly after 10 o'clock, and that Dr. Eckener had announced that he would take a course toward Clovis, N. M., instead of the Dallas-Fort Worth route, in order to avoid storms over the more southern and eastern area. The next reports from the Associated Press placed the Graf over Levelland, Texas, near Lubbock, and it was indicated that the ship was then headed in a northeasternly direction which would carry it between Amarillo and Wichita Falls and across Oklahoma if its course should be held.

Escort Planned

The Record News correspondent at Lawton reported that orders had been issued by Col. G. P. Tyner, acting commandant of Fort Sill, and Captain Reighton, acting commandant of Post Field, for Lieutenant Bleakely of Fort Sill to take the air at daybreak to locate the Zeppelin and escort it across Oklahoma. Officials of the army post said that apparently the liner would pass in the Fort Sill area unless its course is again changed.

Lieutenant Bleakley will be accompanied by a radio operator equipped for both Morse code and phone communication with the Zeppelin and for reporting its progress. The army plane has been instructed to report the course of the dirigible to the army post at Fort Sill and to Oklahoma City, it was said.

Incessant telephone inquiries to the editorial offices of The Record News and Daily Times throughout Tuesday attested to the keen interest of residents of North Texas and Southern Oklahoma in the prospective "visit" to this section of the huge airship.

Long distance calls from Lawton, Frederick, Altus, Waurika and other Oklahoma cities and from Archer City, Electra, Iowa Park, Burkburnett, Vernon, Memphis, Crowell in Texas were scarcely less numerous than those from persons in Wichita Falls who anxiously awaited an opportunity to glimpse the world's most famous flying craft.

Plans had been completed in Wichita Falls and other cities in this territory to extend a rousing welcome to the Graf but Tuesday night the enthusiasts had become

Shamrock Acquires Oil Properties In Panhandle Valued at $2,000,000

Transfer of oil producing properties in the Panhandle with daily production of about 3,000 barrels and about 20,000 acres of gas lands in the same district, both representing a valuation said to be more than $2,000,000, was involved in a deal announced Tuesday in which the Shamrock Oil company purchased holdings of C. H. Clark, who was its president and of the Mellroy Oil company, Plains Drilling company, and Gardner Brothers and Collins.

The properties involved are located in Moore and Hutchinson counties, it was stated, and are all located in the same district. Through the acquisition of Mr. Clark's interest in the Shamrock Oil company, James Baldridge of Dallas and John Sherrin of Amarillo assumed control of that concern. Headquarters will be maintained in Amarillo, it was indicated.

The holdings of Gardner brothers et al., including J. Alvin Gardner, C. T. Gardner, William Lincoln, C. E. McCutchen, R. O. Harvey, and Guy Brown, represented an 80-acre lease with one 900-barrel well, a 68-acre lease with a 150-barrel well, and a 49-acre lease with one gas producer. These properties were understood to have sold for about $500,000.

Plans of the new Shamrock Oil company call for an extensive campaign of drilling in the Panhandle area, it was said.

Youth Fined $1 for Failure to Wear Shirt; Attorney to Appeal Case

The fewer clothes movement began this summer received a blow Tuesday when one of four boys arrested near Iowa Park Friday night while riding about sans shirts was fined $1 and costs, amounting to $17, in justice court at Iowa Park.

Raymond Myers, Wichita Falls attorney, who is representing the boys, appealed the case to the county court at law in Wichita Falls. The case will come up in the September term, he said. Mr. Myers stated that he was prepared to go to the highest court in support of his contention that the boys were not guilty of indecent exposure if they chose to ride about without shirts on a hot evening.

The charge of indecent exposure, according to Wayne Somerville, county attorney, and the arresting officers, C. L. Bradford and Jess Leverett, was based on the fact that the youths had made an indecent display of their persons in a public place, "to wit: a public highway." The arrest was made by the county traffic officers following several complaints that a group of boys were riding about "without any clothes on." They found the four repairing a tire on the Iowa Park road, clad only in pants and shoes. They were lodged in the county jail overnight and released on bond Saturday morning, after the complaints had been filed.

GRAF SIGHTED IN WEST TEXAS

Zep Believed Headed For Oklahoma

reconciled to an enforced wait to view the flying cruiser or possibly another one of its type.

LUBBOCK, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—According to a telephone call from Levelland, Texas, to the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, the Graf Zeppelin passed over that town at 11:55 p. m. headed northeast. Levelland is about 30 miles west of Lubbock and about 90 miles south of the Texas-Oklahoma border.

ROSWELL, N. M., Aug. 27. (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin was reported to have been sighted over Tatum, N. M., at 11:15 C. S. T., traveling northeast in a line with Clovis, N. M.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 27. (AP)—The Associated Press was informed by the Texas and Pacific railroad operator at Odessa, Texas, that the Graf Zeppelin passed over there shortly after 10 p. m., plainly visible. She turned slightly in the direction of Big Spring, evidently continuing on its announced route to Fort Worth from El Paso.

BIG SPRING, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—The dispatcher for the Texas Electric Service company at Wink, Texas, approximately 100 miles west of here reported that the Graf Zeppelin passed over that town a few minutes before 10 o'clock tonight.

Wink is about 200 miles from El Paso but about 250 miles by the route the Graf took.

DALLAS, Aug. 27. (AP)—The Texas and Pacific railway here was informed by an operator of the Santa Fe lines that the Graf Zeppelin passed over Loving, N. M., just over the Texas-New Mexico line at 9:35 p. m.

The Zeppelin had been reported hearing to the north away from the Texas and Pacific tracks, from the last two previous towns it had passed over.

It therefore was assumed that it shortly would begin bearing eastward as that course would be necessary in the most direct route to Fort Worth.

SIERRA BLANCA, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin passed 40 miles north of Sierra Blanca tonight. It was following the pipeline which serves West Texas' big oil fields and was traveling, according to estimates from the ground at between 40 and 50 miles an hour.

EL PASO GIVES SHIP WELCOME

EL PASO, Aug. 27. (US)—Swinging doggedly by here tonight at 5:16 p. m. (8:16 Eastern Daylight Time) facing a strong head wind, the Graf Zeppelin turned its nose to the northeast and made for Fort Worth, Dallas and Little Rock with better flying weather reported over the central part of Texas.

There was a mild furor in El Paso when just before five this afternoon, the German world-girdling airship was reported over Napra, 10 miles away. Crowds began to gather and when the ship passed over the city it was given a rousing welcome.

Eckener Sends Message

Earlier in the afternoon the chamber of commerce had received a radio from Commander Eckener saying that he would pass over El Paso and continue eastward by way of Fort Worth to Little Rock.

It had been planned originally to go through the pass through the Southern California mountains, but it would have been necessary to attain altitude of 9,000 feet.

When the Zeppelin rose from the field in Los Angeles, it narrowly escaped an accident of catastrophic proportions when, failing to get sufficient altitude immediately, it brushed its tail fin again a high-tenson wire.

But ballast was dumped and the bag, containing highly inflammable hydrogen gas, rose above the deadly wires and went on. Dr. Eckener then turned south, to obviate the necessity for great altitude, and went directly to the international line near San Diego.

Here he turned east, keeping on against head winds along the tracks of the Southern Pacific railroad to El Paso.

At El Paso, he was to plot the remainder of the flight, whether he would continue through New Orleans, Birmingham, Atlanta, Washington and Baltimore, or whether he would veer northeasterly through Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, to St. Louis, Chicago and Cleveland.

All the way from Los Angeles, on the first 700 miles of her journey, the Zeppelin fought heavy head winds that resisted her advance and cut her speed down to an average of about 60 miles an hour. Leaving Los Angeles at 12:14 a. m. Pacific Coast Time (4:14 a. m., New York Daylight Time), Captain Eckener turned his ship southward with her 16 pasengers, to avoid the heights of Gorgonio Pass.

To Cleveland Today

According to an announcement in Cleveland last night by the national air race committee, Captain Eckener made his decision while over San Juan, Ariz. The committee announced receipt of a wireless message from the commander declaring the round-the-world cruiser would circle over the Cleveland airport, probably about noon Wednesday.

At the start of the epic flight from Las Angeles, Dr. Eckener declared he hoped to reach Lakehurst in 47 hours, which would bring him in at 3:14 a. m. Thursday (New York Daylight Time).

Two hours after leaving Los Angeles, at the end of a 19 hour visit following its flight from Japan, the Zeppelin passed over Coronado, heading toward Mexico, at an altitude of about 1,500 feet.

Mexicali, Lower California, on the border, sighted the world-circling air liner at 7:51 a. m. (New York Daylight Time).

Progress seemed a little slow, but when the great ship reached Yuma, Ariz., it had speeded up.

Hazardous Flight

The Graf Zeppelin reached El Paso at 5:16 p. m. (Mountain Standard Time), successfully completing the most hazardous portion of its flight across the United States.

Close check on this portion of the world flight was maintained by Southern Pacific telegraph operators. Although flying at a low altitude over a large part of New Mexico and when entering Texas, the Graf apparently was never in a difficult situation.

Skirting the storm area in Arizona, with a light head wind, and 38 minutes after leaving Yuma was sighted passing over Mohawk, 55 miles away.

At Phoenix, however, a report was received from a telephone operator in Aztec, 128 miles southwest, declaring that the Graf was moving very slowly when it passed over there at 11 a. m. (New York Daylight Time). The operator declared the Zeppelin was going at not more than 50 miles an hour and flying at about 1,500 feet.

The 30 miles from Aztec to Gila Bend, Ariz., were traversed in 38 minutes, despite a persistent, but light head wind. From Gila Bend, it flew 40 miles to Marcicopa, Ariz., in one hour and 17 minutes. This was a startling reduction in speed, but there was no indication the Zeppelin was having any difficulty except from head winds.

Pastor Shows Influence of "Wrong Crowd" in Story of Samson's Fall

"The mighty Samson became associated with the wrong crowd, committed the sin of indulgence, and in his acceptance of the lowest standards of his time, found complete ruin," declared Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, in his sermon Tuesday night before more than 200 persons present at the citywide young people's revival meeting at the First Methodist church.

The attractive features of Samson's personality were described by the speaker as including a magnificent physique, abundant humor, and unfailing courage.

"Could we have seen him, we should have said, 'There goes a man'," said Reverend Moreland; "and the encounter between Samson and a Nubian lion is given as an illustration of his fearlessness."

Accompanying Samson's association with the Philistines was a growing indifference to moral and religious standards of life, the speaker said, the great Jew sinking slowly into depravity, and finally becoming the companion of Delilah. Following his betrayal to the Philistines, Samson found that he had lost something of his native strength, and was held blind and helpless.

"A good man is the highest handwork of God," said Reverend Moreland, "but our sins make us blind to God as Samson was blinded to the light of day. He perished in the wreckage with which he destroyed his enemies."

The musical program for Tuesday night's service included a solo by Ted Williams, baritone, "Behold, There Shall Come a Day," by Alfred Wooler, and following the sermon, a number by W. E. Young, musical director of the First Baptist church, who sang "Call Unto Me." Miss Mildred Anderson and Miss Elizabeth Wright, respectively played their accompaniments. Mr. Young also conducted the congregational song service, with Miss Anderson, Miss Wright, and Durwood Park, violinist, accompanying. Dr. E. R. Barcus assisted in the service.

Realtors Discuss Road Advertising

Reports of the annual state convention of real estate boards held recently in Amarillo and recommendations of more attention to highway advertising were heard at the weekly meeting of the Wichita Falls Real Estate board at the Kemp hotel Tuesday noon.

Roscoe Staton discussed the matter of endeavoring to change the routing of the Washington and Lee highway to pass through Wichita Falls en route to Oklahoma. The road now turns north at Oklaunion, Mr. Staton said, while by coming through Iowa Park and Wichita Falls and into Oklahoma by way of Burkburnett, 75 miles of pavement would be substituted for the same amount of dirt road.

Mrs. B. W. Cain and C. R. Seals spoke in favor of erecting signs along highways in this section of the country advertising Wichita Falls, and the board voiced its recommendation of such a program on the part of the chamber of commerce.

J. M. Baber, A. L. Huey, W. S. Curlee and T. S. Gibbs of Chillicothe spoke briefly at the meeting.

Arrest of Dallas Business Man For Bank Robbery Shocks Associates

DALLAS, Aug. 27. (UP)—Business friends of Kirby E. Davis, 35, expressed surprise tonight when they learned of the arrest of their prosperous and respected friend, "J. H. Harris," held in the $95,000 robbery of the First National Bank of Angola, Ind.

Davis, alias Harris, vice president of the recently formed health and hospital accident service, was placed under arrest by federal officials as he was walking in the downtown district here last night.

Warrant for his arrest had been in their hands several months. He, with three other men, one of whom is now dead, is under indictment in Steuben county, Indiana, for the robbery.

He is also said to be wanted in Canada for a mail train robbery of $120,000 June 18, 1928. Other indictments charge him with the theft and interstate transportation of an automobile stolen in Indianapolis.

"I can't believe that that man committed a bank robbery," John W. Russell, manager of the health and accident company of which Davis is president, said today.

"I met him last January when he was manufacturing a medicine called 'hydroxsun' at his laboratories here and I got interested in his product.

"I did not see him again until May of this year and we formed this company soon afterward. He seemed to have plenty of money, but he always got it by wire. I never did see any checks and don't know what his business connections were.

"Harris, or Davis as they say his name is now, is of the fat, jolly type. I can't picture him robbing a bank."

Body and Engines by Pierce-Arrow—and Pierce-Arrow in every part!

PIERCE-ARROW builded better than it knew when it produced the new Straight Eight. For this ultra-modern creation revolutionized the fashion in fine cars—and established a demand almost overnight which took months to meet.

Before the new Straight Eight's arrival, bulkiness was accepted as a necessary attribute of bigness in automobiles. But Pierce-Arrow created a long, slender, low-swung car that combines grace with every essential to capacious comfort. Besides, it has the added distinction of being the car for which America was willing to wait.

No one could have foreseen the demand for the new Straight Eight—and it took nothing less than a great automobile to sustain it. Today, however, the chances for early deliveries are excellent—including a number of the most favored models in the new Straight Eight line.

HIGHWAY GROUP MAPS PROGRAM

Beautification of Spanish Trail Planned

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 27. (AP)—Beautification of the old Spanish trail from Orange to El Paso is the major project to be undertaken by the Southeast and West Texas association, recently tentatively formed at Galveston and permanently organized here today.

Called the most unique organization in the South by Mayor Walter E. Monteith of Houston, temporary president, the membership will be limited to city and county officials interested in permanent highways and civc groups and associations whose eligibility is sanctioned by the executive committee.

The organization is not political in the slightest and will strive only to "safeguard and protect" the interests of the section represented by its membership, speakers emphasized.

"Any section can get what it wants if it wants it bad enough," Mayor C. M. Chambers of San Antonio, one of the originators of the organization, stated in delivering the address of welcome to some 100 delegates, mostly county judges and commissioners along the route of the Old Spanish trail. Southeast and West Texas, and the section adjacent to San Antonio, particularly, are suffering for want of organization and cooperation."

He said he had noticed signs along principal highways traversing the state directing traffic by way of Fort Worth and Dallas.

"This is unfair to South Texas," he said.

He said San Antonians could not get to Laredo, to Corpus Christi, or to Kerrville without the necessity of traveling over unpaved gaps in the highways.

Mayor Monteith pledged not only the support of Houston but the fullest cooperation of Harris county.

"We have banded together to promote friendship and if we cooperate properly this organization will grow into one of the most useful in the state, he said. "It is the only one of its kind in the South."

County Judge Perry S. Robertson of Bexar county and Ed H. Klfer, president of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, seconded Mayor Chambers' address of welcome.

Some criticism of the state highway engineer and the highway department cropped out when round table talks were called for.

James M. Taylor of Corpus Christi, county attorney of Nueces county, said the county officials should not always submit to the ideas of the highway commissioners, and Judge Leo Wallace of Kerrville, county judge of Kerr county, said his county had lost considerable money by following recommendations of the highway engineer.

Mayor P. G. Lovenskold of Corpus Christi was named chairman of the committee of organization. Other committee chairmen were: Officers and members, Judge, Lee Wallace, Kerrville. Policy; Judge C. R. Wilson, Liberty, and Finance Judge J. B. Williams, Seguin. The chairmen were authorized to pick their own committeemen.

WOMEN PILOTS USING POWDER

Lady Birds Wield Cosmetics at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 27. (INS)—It was called a "powder puff" derby.

Although they looked anything but "powder puff derbyists" when they dropped out of the skies from the west, tired, greasy, grimy, and oilstained, it was plainly evident today that that little article of feminine toiletry had at least been brought along and put to use—belatedly, of course, but better late than never.

What a transformation a little puff and powder can make!

These hardy, daring women of the air—masculine-like in appearance—led by Mrs. Louise Thaden of Pittsburgh, who skimmed down from the skies to be given a tremendous ovation, today were gorgeous creatures, mincing their way daintily about the Cleveland municipal airport—the scene of the 1929 national air races.

WINNER BARRED

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27. (INS)—After officially declaring Phoebe Omlie of Moline, Ill., winner of the special women's race of 30 miles here, national air race officials disqualified her for foul tactics on the second day. Amelia Earhart was also disqualified for the same reason. Mrs. Keith Miller of Buffalo, originally declared winner of second place, was designated the victor. Lady Mary Heath of England was second and Miss Blanche Noyes of Cleveland, third.

Last night they were the guests of the National Exchange club at an aviation achievement dinner. And they looked anything except fliers there. That is, all except Bobbie Trout of Los Angeles. Her powder puff and baggage got lost en route, but she admitted she felt confortable even in her "flying tog evening gown."

Today, these women derbyists, trim, hardy, athletic-figures, were the headliners on the air race program designated as "Kiwanis day." While they were not staging a veritable "aviation style show," they were sporting about in the clouds.

Ireland's famous aviatrix, Lady Heath, was here along with America's most popular lady-bird, Miss Amelia Earhart, and the women derbyites.

Thea Rasche, the German aviatrix, and Frances Howell will race against each other in the first closed course contest for women to be held at the air races.

Miss Earhart, Mrs. Blanche Noyes and Lady Heath will fly Cleveland-made ships, and Mrs. Phoebe Omlie will race in her monocoupe against Mrs. Rasche and Mrs. Thaden.

Although the women's derby is over, there is still more "feminine interest." A rather well-known woman, Congresswoman Ruth Bryan-Owens, makes her entrance on the air race show today by coming as a passenger from the South in the Miami-to-Cleveland derby.

Belgium exported fruit valued at $4,000,000 last year.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

In Wichita, Kan., a militant old lady wished recently to drag stockingless women into court and declared their mothers should turn them over matronly knees and spank them. But on the morning of Aug. 26, we went shopping and met an elderly woman shopping with unstockinged limbs. Before we reached home, we had seen three with bare limbs. The only complaint we have to make is that it wasn't started early in the spring and a great economic movement established.

◇ ◇ ◇

We have read that in 1857 the Tribune in Chicago shrieked "The city is at the mercy of the criminal classes!"

Chicago has changed a great deal in the last 72 years, but it seems that the city is still somewhat at the mercy of the criminal classes.

◇ ◇ ◇

By the way, John Dos Passos, who is in Chicago, says that city is a "swell" summer resort. J. D. P. was a soldier once and knows what makes a summer resort.

◇ ◇ ◇

The case of Manhattan's Albert Dreyfuss seems to us rather pitiful thing. His own family, (very wealthy), have had him in several different asylums; he was moved last time because his artist friends were seeing him without permission. The artist friends asked for a trial by jury. The magistrate who tried him sent him back to the asylum. All Dreyfuss said in a calm, plaintive voice, was, "I am 49 years old. I can never regain these days I am losing. I harbor no ill will toward anyone. My only desire is to work and live at peace with the world."

◇ ◇ ◇

Once upon a time Rousseau was thought to be of unsound mind; Cezanne was said to be mad. Their works today, run into five figures. Coleridge was in an insane asylum for a time. Lamb spent a short time incarcerated and Mary Lamb, between intervals of insanity that grew sadly shorter and shorter, wrote some of the charming "Tales From Shakespeare."

◇ ◇ ◇

Artists are said to be temperamental and many of them indulge themselves that way. So far as that goes, we have seen many people who were temperamental though they were not artists. But it is a sad truth, that many geniuses are so enwrapped in their visions, they walk apart from the world and are called queer, sometimes "mad."

◇ ◇ ◇

They have what we might call "ingrowing" dispositions. But ingrowing dispositions are dangerous and a genius is not the only one to have that mental disease. It's ingrowing dispositions that make utter selfishness; and though they may not be as painful to their possessors' as ingrowing nails, they cause pain to those with whom they come in contact.

WHAT KISSES TELL MOTHER

Keeping children well is easy when mother can read the early symptoms of childhood's ills.

If little ones are fretful, pale, languid, won't eat and want to be mothered; when they often get colds and sore throat and seem feverish, depend upon it the bowels are sluggish. You notice unpleasant breath when you kiss them—sure sign of constipation and a sour stomach.

Give a little California Fig Syrup to purify the system and see how quickly it restores strength, appetite and joyous spirits. It acts without pain and gently cleanses the bowels of constipated waste which causes feverishness, sours the digestion and keeps the little one sickly and backward.

If you suspect measles or some other children's disease, give a dose of California Fig Syrup without delay. The doctor will praise your forethought. California Fig Syrup is the finest laxative in the world for children. It suits them perfectly and they love its delicious taste. For a child who is habitually constipated there is no other remedy to equal California Fig Syrup for coaxing the bowels back to healthy regularity. If you have a child who is troublesome in this way try California Fig Syrup. Get a bottle today. All drug stores have it.

California Fig Syrup has been trusted by the World's mothers for over 50 years. That is why the word "California" should be emphasized when buying.—Adv.

Marriage Graft Found Too Often Writes Miss Dix

How Can Marriage Be a Success If One Member of the Partnership Takes All the Perquisites For Himself and Leaves Only the Work and Sacrifice for the Other?

We often hear it said that in married life there must be give and take. This is a fine theory, but the way it works out with most married couples is that one of them does all of the giving and the other does all of the taking.

The trouble with marriage is that there isn't enough reciprocity in it. If it was a fair trade in which each party gave the other a square deal and in which they vied with each other in generosity, there would be no disgruntled husbands and wives crying out that marriage is a failure and no more unhappy homes.

But as it is, marriage is only too often a skin game, in which a man and woman each deliberately set out to get the best for himself or herself and to monopolize all of the pleasures and perquisites of the holy estate and invariably the one wins out who is the hardest boiled, who is the most selfish and grasping and who has the least heart and conscience.

In many households this struggle for supremacy precipitates a civil war that lasts from the altar to the divorce court or the grave, but not infrequently there is a man or woman who, in the Wilsonian phrase, is "too proud to fight," and then we have those two most pitiful and forlorn of all human creatures, the henpecked husband and the doormat wife.

Sometimes it is the man who grabs off all the best for himself and who apparently thinks marriage should be all beer and skittles for himself and all work and sacrifice for his wife. We all know men who always go to the most expensive tailors and who are the glass of fashion and the mold of form, while their wives are so shabby they are ashamed to be seen out with them. We all know men who smoke the finest cigars, who belong to good clubs and who rejoice in the reputation of being good spenders, who open champagne for chorus girls, but who howl over the bill for the baby's milk, and whose wives have to chloroform them to get the price of a new dress out of them.

We all know men who never think of spending an evening at their own firesides, yet who grow eloquent on the subject of the woman's place being in the home, and who raise Cain if their wives step out to the movies with a neighbor woman. We know men who chase every petticoat that crosses their path, but who would consider themselves grievously ill-used if their wives looked at another man. We know men whose sole contribution toward rearing their children is to find fault with the way their wives are doing it.

We know men who consider that home is just a place where they can vent all of the bad temper and nerves and rudeness and general cussedness that they are afraid and ashamed to show the outside world; men who never pay their wives a compliment, or show them any affection or do anything to make them happy and yet who think that their wives should meet them with a glad, sweet smile and be bright and cheerful and down on their knees thanking Heaven for having got such husbands.

Just as often the wife is the greedy one who sticks her thumb in the matrimonial cake and pulls out all the plums. Good gracious, don't we see them on every side? The wives who are dressed like Solomon in all his glory and who have a dozen pairs of imported French hats and 20 pairs of variegated shoes a season, while poor old husband wears his year-before-last lid and has his brogues resoled for the fourth time.

Don't we see thin, round-shouldered overworked men who haven't had a vacation since they were married, toiling in hot offices through the heat of summer, and shivering on the cold winter mornings as they catch the 7:45, while wife disports herself in Europe, or writes back from the mountains about sleeping under blankets or about how beautiful the palms are in Florida?

Don't we see the delicatessen stores filled with wives who feed their husbands out of paper bags and tincans because they are too lazy to cook them good meals?

Don't we see wives who lie abed of a morning and let their husbands get their own breakfasts, and who expect their husbands to come home and help with the housework after they have done a hard day's work?

Don't we see wives who refuse to have babies; or who, if they do have children, turn them over to the street to mother them? Don't we see wives who let themselves get slovenly in person and dull and stupid in mind, wives who do nothing toward making a comfortable home, or being helpmates to their husbands, or even being pleasant and agreeable, and yet who expect their husbands to go on supporting them and being faithful to them?

Yes, we do. No spectacle is more common than the grafting husband and the wife. The grabbers who take all and give nothing. No wonder so many women fall out of love with their husbands. No wonder so many men come to loathe their parasitic wives.

And the pity of it is that these greedy husbands and wives in trying to get everything lose all. For no man and woman can have a more bitter disillusionment than to find out that the hero of their romantic dreams is nothing but a pig, with all the instincts of its species. Selfishness blights love as frost does a flower, and while we may find a sublime and altruistic happiness in offering ourselves up as a sacrifice to a beloved one, it is not in human nature not to resent our husband or wife making us the family goat.

Only those homes are happy in which the husband and wife put each other's good before their own, in which they find their own happiness in seeking the other's happiness. It is when each is willing to defer to the opinion of the other, to consider the taste, the habits, the little idiosyncrasies of the other, that the dove of peace takes up its permanent abiding place upon their hearthstone.

It is only when a man cuts down on his cigarets to bring his wife a box of candy on Saturday night and the woman does without a new hat so that her husband can buy the fishing rod he craves, that marriage is really a fifty-fifty proposition and a success.

Oh, yes, there should be give and take in marriage. But it should be mutual.

SUGAR MAKES FOODS PLEASANT

Good Cooks Learn to Use Nature's Supreme Flavorer

No wonder sugar used to be considered a luxury of the rich. No wonder a noted scientist says that sugar is the greatest condimental food in the world.

Sugar's supreme importance to health is that it makes foods pleasant. No man, woman or youngster can live on one food alone. To eat a great variety of foods daily the year round is to promote health, and sugar adds flavor and delight to nearly every known food. As a noted scientist says, to try to eat most foods "straight" would result in a monotonous, unpalatable diet, and you simply can't get people to eat things they don't like.

Try a dash of sugar on your favorite cereal. Eat healthful blackberries and other fresh fruits made delicious by a sprinkling of sugar. Profit by the experiments of four well-known women cooking experts in New York who recently rediscovered the old art of using a dash of sugar in vegetables while they are cooking in a small amount of water. Note how the vegetable colors, freshness and flavors improve. This little added sugar makes eating vegetables a joy. Remember the value of custards, milk shakes, ice cream and other milk desserts in helping your family to eat enough milk. Remember stewed fruits, candy and cookies for the end of the meal.

Slimness is no longer stylish. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Holding a Wife

When a man deserts his wife the world looks very wise.

"How could she expect to hold him?" remarked all their friends. "She never bothered to keep up her looks. She was so wrapped up in her children that she didn't care whether he was there or not. She took no interest in golf and golf, as you know, is his passion!"

We have all heard the world's tongue wag on these occasions and we know what it says.

But let a woman desert her husband and there is a different story to tell.

Unless that husband is known to be a drunken brute or something equally reprehensible the world's judgment is far from tolerant.

The wife may have spent evening after evening, year in and year out, with a man who sat morose and silent behind the screen of a newspaper. She may have longed for gaiety as a desert-lost traveler yearns for a draught of cool water, and have had for diversion nothing more satisfying than a weekly movie show.

She may have suffered the same dull stories, which became duller with each repetition, and were repeated ad infinitum. She may have seen the spruce, well-groomed man whom she married evolve into a careless, baggy-kneed unshaven scarecrow.

But the world never asks: "How could he expect to hold her?"

Apparently wife-holding is not regarded as one of the essential arts.

A woman should be thankful for a roof over her head and bread in her mouth and a husband who doesn't mistreat her!

Let her ask more of her marriage than that, let her refuse to abide by a contract more honored in the breach than the observance, and she's set down as a no-good, a flighty, flip bit of unimportance of whom her husband should be glad to be rid.

Quite a lot of men hold their wives because they are immune to the fatty degeneration, which attacks so many married males.

Quite a lot of men who love their wives could hold them if they were not above the exertion of an effort to keep themselves as attractive, as entertaining and as well-informed as they were during the days of their courtship.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (US)—There is a story out of China about a Chinese general who shot and killed a Chinese prince for fooling 'round "one of his 40 wives."

That's the furthest south in jealousy.

And about the furthest north in nerve, according to B. Werner, is the man who divorced his wife for learning to smoke cigarets while he was serving a term in jail for forgery.

The Kansas state reformatory announces that women going through the jails on tours of inspection will be barred unless they wear stockings. "The prisoners all stop and stare," says the jailor.

And I suppose worry about their women at home!

A lady has rented a duplex apartment stating that one thing New York has not done to her is take away the old fashioned idea that people should go upstairs to go to bed.

An English woman arises to remark that she can't understand the way in which Americans drink. "They never sip any drink, even brandy or champagne," says the lady, who has been wined and dined for some time by American society. "They gulp drinks, in barbaric fashion," says she.

"How would you have us drink?" asked an interested gentleman, to which the lady replied. "Follow the advice of Talleyrand. He told one of these barbarians who asked him that:

"You should hold your glass in the hollow of your hand, warm it, turn it round and round, then raise it reverently to your nostrils."

"And then?"

"And then," said Talleyrand, "you should put the brandy down again and talk about it."

Lip sticks are advertised as poison. At least New York's health commissioner found nine out of nine poison. But it won't be because the coloring is harmful to their skin that women won't use them, now that the news is out.

The health department advises health instead, to make lips red. The trouble being, you can't go into a store and buy fifty cents worth of it to make your lips red right off.

What we want is bigger and better lipsticks.

WILLEBRANDT EXPLAINS ENFORCEMENT CENTRALIZATION PLAN

FINDINGS OF EXPERTS TOLD

Former Official Concludes Series of Articles

By MABEL W. WILLEBRANDT

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Willebrandt concludes her series of articles, "The Inside of Prohibition," with today's installment).

I have been accused of resigning my position in a pique because, so the report goes, the president refused to concentrate all prohibition enforcement activities in the department of justice and under my immediate supervision. Those who want to believe such a story can do so. I have never thought it worth while to deny all the baseless rumors about prohibition and prohibition enforcement that have gained circulation during the eight years that I was connected with the work. I most emphatically do believe responsibility for prohibition policies should be centered in some one place in the government, and have long both so stated publicly and privately.

But there's nothing original with me about that idea. More than five years ago a committee of experts, appointed under congressional authority, made a report to congress on reorganization of government departments in the interest of efficiency. One of the six major recommendations of that committee was "the elimination of all non-fiscal functions from the treasury department." And there was specific recommendation by the same experts that the prohibition work be taken away from the supervision of the secretary of the treasury.

Treasury Has Its Own Worries

Furthermore, as long ago as 1920, a secretary of the treasury, David S. Houston, specifically recommended in his annual report for that year that the prohibition unit should be taken from the treasury department. He said that the treasury department and its officials had enough to do to take care of the tremendous fiscal responsibilities growing out of the war. Yet in a hit-or-miss manner, the responsibility for prohibition enforcement has been delegated from time to time to the secretary of the treasury with an utter absence of logic or sound reason.

But, regardless of what the experts say, the reader will want to know the "why" of the proposal to centralize prohibition enforcement authority somewhere else than in the treasury department.

The "why" as I see it is that with responsibility divided as it is at present, there is no way for the president, congress, or the people to put a finger on the weak spot in enforcement. Even this discussion of mine, showing up weaknesses in efforts so far, although I have tried to make it definite, is bound to leave the reader with a feeling of, "Well, to whom can I look to clean out politics from dominating United States attorneys' offices, raise civil service standards for agents, compel co-ordination of border forces, tighten up on permits, and improve regulations?" And the answer is, "A dozen different people." The result is constant buck-passing between them so fast that a person gets as dizzy trying to secure improvements as though watching a toe dancer whirl. The heads of the prohibition unit, customs service, coast guard service, and the prosecution division in the department of justice spend much of their time saying, in effect, "It wasn't I, it was the other fellow who fell down on the job and let the bootleggers slip through."

Not More Money but Better Men

No great additional sum of money is needed to improve prohibition enforcement. There is plenty of man power, though not all of the right kind. But the man power isn't made to work to the best advantage. For instance, there are six separate investigation units of the treasury department, besides one in the post-office department, one in the immigration service, and one in the department of justice. If they were made to work together in the right way, with the proper exchange of information and personnel, there would be more of the Remus type of bootlegger caught and convicted: the men at the head of the big liquor rings.

Right in the treasury department itself, there is a scattering of responsibility that encourages "buck-passing" when anything goes wrong with prohibition enforcement. The secretary of the treasury necessarily must occupy most of his time with the financial affairs of the country. If he is really wrestling with problems of international finance, prohibition is bound to hit his blind spot!

The real solution of the enforcement problem is to secure the close grouping and proper coordination of the various evidence collecting branches of the treasury department with the prosecuting agencies under the department of justice. There should be one head to determine policies. It doesn't have to be the department of justice, but certainly control should be centralized somewhere.

It is essential that bootleggers be cut off from their supply of industrial, or specially denatured alcohol. Previously, I have stated in detail what the alcohol leak amounts to, and how it can be plugged by rewriting regulations and tightening up on permits. That the leak is a big one and that it can be stopped is amply proved by the work of Maj. Chester P. Mills, former prohibition administrator of the metropolitan district of New York. He resigned, he said, because political influence disrupted his force and his work. In presenting "the best and most practicable plan to make the 18th amendment effective," which won the $25,000 Durant prize award, Major Mills said:

"In March, 1926, the withdrawal by such 'alcohol' permit holders in the second federal district was 660,000 gallons of specially denatured alcohol a month. By increasing vigilance and supervision of the activities of these permittees, their number was materially decreased and this volume was reduced within a year to approximately 351,000 gallons a month, a reduction of 309,000 gallons a month, representing alcohol previously diverted into illegal channels."

When the alcohol leak is plugged, there will be vastly less bootlegging in the United States of America than there is at present.

Another method of improving prohibition enforcement will be to cut off the flow of liquor from Canada and other points outside the United States. First, it will be necessary to convince the Canadian authorities of the honest intentions and integrity of our own officials, in order to secure more effective aid from Canada. A good start has been made in recent changes in the customs service at Detroit. Second, it will be necessary to strengthen our border patrol.

There are now two patrol organizations which might be coordinated or consolidated. There is a border patrol operating under the commissioner of customs in the treasury department, composed of about 700 men. This service is disorganized and decentralized, operating in local units under the political domination of the various collectors of customs.

There is another unit under the secretary of labor known as the immigration border patrol. It consists of 400 men and operates under the direct supervision of the commissioner of immigraton. A consolidated border patrol, or one coordinated by a capable administrator familiar with the border liquor situation, and working with the department of justice, could greatly lessen the smuggling of liquor into the United States.

Civil Service Personnel Needed

The fifth step toward making prohibition enforcement effective is complete elimination of political appointees from the enforcement organization. As long as one-third of the prohibition force is made up of people who have not qualified under proper civil service examinations, and political pull and influence are instrumental in keeping dishonest, untrained or stupid men in the service, there will be little possibility of the kind of enforcement that is required.

Securing civil service qualifications has not been wholly free from political influence. One western attorney failed on the character examination for obvious reasons. After a number of political forces, including a dry senator, had pleaded for him, he was reinstated and given a grade of 99—the highest on record! The first grading was correct. So politics must be kept away from the civil service commission, and standards for civil service qualifications materially raised.

To local communities must be left responsibility for the kind of police work that will detect the half-pint and quart liquor peddlers. When the majority of federal prohibition agents are men whose honesty and integrity are amply vouched for and who have brains and judgment as well as special training for the collection of legal evidence by means that will not endanger lives or outrage the feelings of law-abiding citizens, prohibition enforcement will gain 100 per cent in effectiveness. It really takes only the "will to do it" by some one person in authority to accomplish that. Alf Oftedal has built up that kind of a small group of trained agents under him. His methods might be extended.

Nation Must Help Washington

And, finally, when the United States district attorneys and their assistants are appointed principally on the basis of legal fitness, integrity, and willingness and determination to enforce all the laws, instead of on the basis of political influence, which "seeks selective law enforcement," another 100 per cent will be added to the effectiveness of prohibition enforcement!

All these men, however, will have to be kept alive and faithful to their duty and responsibility, not alone by competent direction and supervision from Washington, but by alert and ever vigilant, politically-organized public sentiment for law enforcement in their districts.

On this last point, let me say again that prohibition will never be successfully enforced from Washington alone. It simply cannot be done. It is local opinion and vigilance that will bring about effectiveness in the districts throughout the country. I well recall the difficulties that I had in directing prosecution of an important conspiracy case involving local officials at Mobile, Ala. The United States district attorney was a man who believed in prohibition enforcement, and was honest in his efforts. The liquor ring, however, secured his indictment by a state grand jury, and while that indictment (subsequently dismissed) was pending, we could not use him to prosecute the bootlegging ring. It was necessary, therefore, to secure the services of a special prosecutor.

We had the utmost difficulty in securing a competent lawyer, and one who could be depended upon to prosecute fearlessly and vigorously. I insisted on naming a Democrat (which in a Republican administration is supposed to be a capital offense). Hugo Black, a young man of vigor and courage and since elected senator from his state, was chosen. But weeks were consumed in finding a man of his type, and then more time was consumed in arranging details of his compensation.

In the end, a special prosecutor was put at work, and the cases were carried to a successful conclusion, with the conviction of a number of the conspirators, including local officials. But these incidents (and there were many more of a like nature) have convinced me of the difficulty of doing the actual prosecuting from Washington. The responsibility is local for prohibition enforcement, and only the general direction must be centralized and responsibility for policies accurately fixed in Washington.

Enforcement Possible

I believe, based on my often disillusioning but illuminating experience and knowledge of the liquor situation, that prohibition can be enforced, and now. I was born in Kansas on the western plains near the Panhandle of Texas. That strip of Texas territory was then a "No Man's Land." It had not been brought under the authority of state law, and no law was enforced there. It was a harbor for criminals. Just a few months before my birth, my father was almost killed and my uncle was slain in the defense of their homes from a lawless band that swept over from that law-defying area. The stories that my mother and father told concerning the situation had a deep influence on my life.

And so it seems to me that we now have throughout the country a "no man's land" which is the refuge for the dregs of society; the bootleggers, the thugs, the potential murderers, the bribers, the grafters and criminals of every description who live by preying on honest men and women. We have not effectively organized against them. These lawless elements took full advantage of the disorganization of governmental agencies and the relaxed grip of local communities on sturdy and normal enforcement of law during the confused period following the world war. Various legal phases of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act had to be tested in the courts, with uncertainty and confusion, until the points were settled. The force of prohibition agents created under the Volstead act was untrained, incompetent and sometimes dishonest. All these things were circumstances the bootlegger was not slow to turn to his advantage. Liquor violators were therefore entrenched and in strong position for several years before enforcement activity was even fairly well organized. The bootleggers and their allies still have much of the initial advantage. But they can and will be routed!

Centralization Essential

If one person is given centralized authority to coordinate forces and establish policies, if he is willing to face the difficulties and the infinite details of the task, and if he will stand up and take punishment and keep fighting he can carry the work on to success. He will have the backing of a president who has spent his life doing what timid men said was impossible.

It is a hard, thankless job. No one knows that better than I. But I have the comfort of knowing, too, that I have served in its most difficult period, and enforcement has made some advance.

There are some who will count me just another "out" in the game; others will say, "She made a sacrifice hit." What is said matters little because of my sure conviction that the man who follows me will advance the policies in which I believe.

In one sense I am sorry to leave, even on the wings of the challenge of aviation law. For in looking back over the past eight years (the full measure of public service for any lawyer who doesn't want to get "governmentitis") I realize that I have had a lot of fun in the struggle itself, because, as President Roosevelt said:

"Aggressive fighting for the right is the noblest sport the world affords."

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (INS)—Alexander Legge, chairman of the new farm board, "can't be bothered" when it comes to the problem of his social status in Washington, he revealed here today.

Hostesses at Washington, alarmed over the question of Mr. Legge's place in the social swim, will get little sympathy from him, he said.

"We farmers are busy and don't hanker after any social functioning. We respectfully ask that we be given places in the kitchen with the rest of the help, and if that interferes with culinary operations we'll wait for the second table."

THEORY, the Attic philosopher, still clings to the obsession that want and despair are the mainsprings of crime—an analysis descended from obsolete authorities, by way of pre-revolutionary France, medieval England and other oppressive phases of European civilization.

Wherever men do not equally share the rights of opportunity and education, necessity will provoke unlawful trades and drive them to prey upon discriminatory systems.

Masses, born in the tradition of inferiority, mire-bred, mentally and morally dulled by environment, logically produce bandits, burglars, petty thieves—and brutes.

The earlier political economists considering poverty from cause to effect, were therefore certain that jails would decrease with the spread of schools, and violence diminish as democracy adjusted social inequalities.

But recent experience is compelled to reject their conclusions.

For instance, there are no fixed inequalities in America. We are all free to elect and follow preferred bents.

The same chances are open to every citizen, and constant example assures ambition that neither origin nor background can lastingly thwart or short-change ability.

The spawn of drudges and dullards hold as many positions of authority and posts of distinction in these United States as the throw of scholarship and aristocracy.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who grieves for the dead lacks knowledge."

There is no death. What we call death is only a change from one life to another. Do not bury your love in the grave of the body; let it go on to the real person and receive the returned love from the departed one, who is now a free soul, immortal and fully conscious, with new problems to solve and new work to do.

The Prince of Wales says the diplomats of the future will be golfers. Probably because they always try to find the fairway.

Once upon a time a man received a postcard which said, "Wish you were here," and hurried right there at once.

New Names for Infants in Bolshevik Russia

SINCE the bolshevik revolution, patriotic Russian parents have taken to naming their children "Revolutzia," to signify their faith in the great social upheaval that was to provide a new life for millions of Russians.

Now, however, a writer in the Review of Reviews points out that a new name is being given Russian infants—"Electrificatzia"—which means, when translated, nothing more or less than "electrification." And the shift is rather significant.

It indicates, perhaps, that whereas it was once the revolution that seemed to be the great harbinger of hope to all Russians, it is now electricity that occupies that position. Electricity, to be sure, is in its essence even more mysterious and incalculable than the forces of revolt; yet it is something that can be harnessed, controlled and put to work—which all too often is not the case with a revolution.

The Soviet leaders themselves seem to recognize this. They have an elaborate water power program under way; by the end of the year they will have increased their nation's electrical output 800 per cent over that of six years ago, and the Dniepner river hydro-electric plant, now under construction, will be the largest in all of Europe.

So "Electrificatzia" replaces "Revolutzia" as the popular name for the children of forward looking Russians, and the land of the bolsheviks gets a new symbol of hope.

The mass of Russians were miserable under the czar, and are just about as miserable under the Soviets. Yet their country, potentially, is one of the richest in the world. The water power program symbolizes the beginning of the development of that richness—which probably will do more for the comfort and happiness of the average Russian than a dozen revolutions.

We in the United States have the same attitude, whether we know it or not. In a presidential election, what sort of man do we look for? One who is, above all, "safe"; one who will be busy and efficient but who will make no innovations, inaugurate no new and startling policies, cause no upsets in the things that are. Yet which of our great corporations would look for a man with just those qualifications? Not one. They want doers—men who have new and surprising ideas and who are not afraid to put them into practice.

In other words, we realize that business and industry are more important than statecraft. We can worry along with an inactive president, but not with an inactive industrialist. Which, boiled down, means that we look for our advancement in the field of business instead of the field of politics.

Probably we are right. Machines have remade our world. Our salvation, or a good part of it, must come from them. Long live "Electrificatzia!"

Will There Be a New Tariff Bill?

IT'S NOT in Washington and elsewhere and the new tariff bill which was to bring prosperity to the farmers appears to be wilting away.

Republican senators and representatives from the cities and the industrial sections have little interest in tariffs unless it is a case of higher tariffs for industry. They lost interest in the bill when they found that the congressmen from the South and West and other agricultural sections were not disposed to give manufacturers higher rates in trade for some kind of an agricultural schedule. If the new tariff is to be held to agrcultural they were not interested.

It is now reported that President Hoover, who called the special session of congress because he had been forced to make a promise to do so during the campaign, is himself losing interest in the tariff bill because of the political dynamite in it.

The Democrats have been having a merry time over Republican discomfiture and quarrels over the tariff. They are in a position where their votes are necessary for almost any tariff bill that can pass and yet the responsibility must be on the Republicans. It was Democratic ridicule that stopped the tariff bill passed in the house. For the political benefit of their party, it would have been better for the Democrats to have kept quiet and have permitted the house bill to have gotten through both houses, but it would have been hard on the country. No the Democrats have saved the country and have deprived themselves of a big issue. But there are issues left in the tariff bill, whether one is passed or not.

That Strong Parental Arm

AN INDIANA JUDGE, before whom appeared two small boys charged with the theft of $18 from a filling station, waxed eloquent on the decay of parental discipline. Said he:

"What you boys need is more rigid discipline at home. If you were my boys I'd get a 18-foot elm pole and I'd wear it off clear to the handle on both of you."

This judicial dictum, doubtless, will strike a popular chord. Yet it occurs to us that the judge is a bit confused. Proper home discipline does not, by any manner of means, go hand in hand with corporal punishment.

All that any man has to go on in this connection is his own memory. And we can recall many boyhood playmates who were extremely well-behaved but who were not paddled from one year's end to another; and we also remember that the worst boy in our town was a lad who was soundly whipped for the slightest infractions of the parental code.

It takes more than a strong right arm to make a good father. It is about time to stop insisting that all our ills would be solved if more children were only flogged.

CHATTY—GODDESS OF CAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1928, CENTRAL PRESS ASS'N INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, through a wealthy customer gets Chatty a position as telephone operator at the Van Nuys Co., bonds. Chatty, with her incessant chattering and gossip, creates havoc. She falls in love with one of the up-and-coming bond salesmen, David Jordan. He is interested in her, but when gossip causes Agnes Herford to lose her position David passes her up. Later Chatty listens in on all of David's phone conversations and he finally "calls" her down in front of the office people. Chatty's girl friend, Billie Langenau, a file clerk, and Winnie Talcott, Mr. Van's secretary, have some lively parties. Chatty has dates with a newcomer to the office, Bryant Dunning, who is married but says his wife has left him. Chatty goes with Bryant more to spite David.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER XXXVII

Chatty crept home, fairly crushed. She entered the apartment slowly, dropped her bag in a chair, and sank into another wearily, her soul as tired as her body.

"Why, daughter! You look tired out!" cried Mrs. Chatterton, putting down her sewing to come to her. "Has anything happened?"

Chatty had not intended to say anything about her experience at home. But at the sympathy in her mother's voice, and the anxiety on her tired face, Chatty opened her heart and told her mother what David had said.

Unfortunately, she didn't tell it the way it really was, but the way she wanted to think it occurred.

"And I hadn't done a thing—really, mother, I hadn't! He just talked to me terribly, terribly!" Chatty's voice was a wail. "And I—I just hate him, hate him! But I'll get even with him—you'll see—"

Mrs. Chatterton was quite sure that the real trouble with Chatty was liking David Jordan too well, not in hating him. But she, herself, was tired and worn; the sewing was eye straining, and paid very little. Pud was a continual anxiety, and Chatty's late hours, non-committal explanations of where she had been, and certain circles under the girl's eyes, not altogether explained by too little rest, all took their toll from the hard working mother.

So just now she was not very wise.

"It's your tongue, Chatty—the unruly member, as the Scriptures put it—that you can't control! Its talked you into trouble time after time! Why can't you learn to keep it beneath your teeth?"

"Oh, you, too!" cried Chatty. "Everyone is against me!" And in a passion of tears, Chatty flung herself into her own room and shut and locked the door.

She did not come out for supper.

In her heart began a wistful little wonder as to whether her mother might be right; Billie said the same thing, and Winnie had said it, and Mr. Van Nuys told her so, and David Jordan—the girls who had not openly condemned her looked sympathetic with Winnie—

"I do not gossip!" Chatty assured herself. "It's just my hard luck! And that sneaking David Jordan to listen to me talking to the girls!"

Chatty didn't stop to think that what David had done openly she had done secretly, when she listened into his telephone conversation with the girl whose "sticky mouth" he had said he liked to kiss.

At half past nine that evening she slipped out of her room, went to the corner grocery and telephoned Bryant Dunning.

"For the love of Mike, come and get me! I need you!" she cried into the phone. "Don't come to the house—meet me on the corner!"

She shrank a little at his exclamation of delight.

"But I won't go to his rooms again!" she assured herself. "I'll just—just have another automobile lesson!"

But her automobile lesson that night consisted largely in parking in a lonely road, resting in Bryant's open and welcoming arms and being kissed. Chatty was openly "necking" with him now. It was not until nearly 11 at night that she remembered Winnie had asked her to bring Bryant to her apartment.

"Let's go!" she exclaimed, as she told him. "We'll have a drink and a dance and another drink—"

"Don't you like this—petting?" asked Bryant. "Let's stay here!"

"Oh, Bryant, I'm all kissed out!" answered Chatty. "The day was too much for me."

"I should think it might be." Chatty did not catch the dry note in Bryant's voice. "Did Mr. Van get that 'daughter' stuff over to you?"

"You know better!" Chatty laughed. "Daughter, indeed! But what flapper did he have?"

"You tell 'em kid, I stutter!" Bryant ended his ancient slang with a kiss. "Come on, if we've got to go—"

Chatty did not have a good time at Winnie's until she had absorbed some drinks. Dave's reproachful, angry, level eyes looked into hers until they became misty with the alcohol. But with the fight heartedness that followed the fourth cocktail, and the somewhat vapid but apparently funny jokes of the "Famous Four," regret gave way to a harder feeling. Anger came back. Dave Jordan couldn't bawl her out and get away with it, like that!

She said so, appropos of nothing, suddenly.

"I'll say he can't!" Winnie's share of cocktails had made her completely forget how she had "bawled out" Chatty, herself. "Chat, you ought to get even with him, easy! With all that telephoning he does!"

"I'm going to!" cried Chatty. "I'm—oh, the floor is going up and down like a sea! Funny floor, you got, Winnie! Give us another—another—you know—er—cocktail!"

Every one laughed. It was too funny, not knowing that a cocktail was a cocktail! And thinking a floor was a sea! Chatty chuckled. She felt happy. She didn't mind the hard day or the harder words now! But she was going to get even with Mr. David Jordan. He'd see!

Chatty awoke with a headache, and cross. She always did after a "wild party" with Winnie, when the drinks flowed freely. She still didn't like the taste, but she had come to look for the effect. But the "morning after the night before" was always disagreeable.

Chatty wouldn't admit that she felt mean from too much drug store alcohol. Oh, no! The trouble was the way she had been treated.

David Jordan was at fault! He had bawled her out! Well, he could just watch his step! She'd fix him—ritzing her and calling her names and listening over her shoulder—

She watched him, unobtrusively, for several days; she listened in on his telephone calls, but could make nothing of his talk with his customers of bonds and quotations, prices and fluctuations. She hoped she might get inside his desk, some time, by some such piece of luck as had attended her burglarious entry into Agnes' desk. Maybe David kept a diary, too!

But if he did, he never left his keys around.

Yet the chance came. Three days later Chatty stopped, half way home with Billie Langenau, to gasp: "My pay! I left it on my desk! Did you ever know anything so stupid! I must go right back—"

"Oh, that's too bad!" cried Billie. "Chatty, I'd go back with you, but I've got to get supper for sister tonight—"

"Sure," agreed Chatty. "I know—oh, what a stupid thing to do!"

She condemned herself all the way back to the office. But when she let herself into the silent rooms and discovered her money untouched on the desk, she felt better. Then she heard a voice she knew and told herself she hated—in the next room, telephoning. She was glad, then, that she had forgotten her money.

David Jordan was talking over the telephone in the deserted office. She didn't have to listen in on a wire to overhear. He spoke loud enough for anyone in the next room to hear.

"All right," she heard him say. "That will be two weeks. I sort of hate to leave here, though—yes, yes, of course. I mustn't stand in my own light. And it is a wonderful chance. No, I won't say a word about it, of course! 'Bye, Knowlton."

Chatty slunk out of the room as she heard the phone hung up. David Jordan was going to leave Mr. Van Nuys! In two weeks! To go with a man named Knowlton! A man who would pay him a great deal more money—probably three times as much! What else could "wonderful chance" mean?

He wasn't going to tell Mr. Van Nuys! He was going secretly.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The boys are beginning to trickle back from Hollywood. The talkie gold rush, which started a throng of twenty-niners from the theatrical emporiums of New York to the film factories of California, has abated somewhat. Some of those who went out there first have ended their tasks, or have quit voluntarily.

One of the latter, a stage director, relates the story of the missing author. It appears, according to this story, that a certain film needed a certain author to write its dialogue; none of the large staff of fictionists and dramatists at hand would do quite as well as Mr. X.

Word went out to hire Mr. X at any cost, and ship him, prepaid, to the film studios. But he could not be found. He wasn't in New York, he wasn't studying cafe conditions in Paris, he wasn't anywhere. The film couldn't be delayed longer, and the big minds of the business concluded that some of the current shipment of writers would have to do.

A census of those at hand in Hollywood was taken, and, as you must have guessed, Mr. X was found there, where he had safely been contracted, but idle, for some time.

Clipping Collectors

Normally retiring persons who have achieved passing mention in the press, and have subsequently been deluged with requests for business from clipping bureaus, may be surprised to learn that the bulk of the clipping business is done for large commercial organizations. The big steel companies, the public service corporations and such institutions as the theater guild receive clippings in wholesale lots which make the accounts of all but a few invididuals seem small in comparison. Those who are most frequently met mentioned in the press, are, as like as not, so tired of it all that they refuse to subscribe to clipping services. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is one of these.

Among the individuals, actors are the most vain. Recently burglars entered the apartment of one of Florenz Ziegfeld's glorified girls and stole everything movable. Fur coats, expensive gowns, jewelry—all was gone. But more than anything else she minded the loss of her scrapbook, which contained clippings showing her history from the present back to the time she won her first neighborhood beauty contest.

One of the current wonders of the actor world is Eddie Foy Jr., son of the late Eddie Foy. The youth recently achieved prominence in a musical comedy—it was his first important part—and he was mentioned by the reviewers. In a day or so several clipping bureaus were bounding him for his business. "What," Foy asked a friend, "do these people mean? What do they do? Do you think I ought to hire some of them?" That is what makes him one of the current wonders of the actors' world.

Authors, on the other hand, are almost indifferent to the mention they get in the press. Many do not subscribe to a clipping service. Others do, but they shove the newspaper paragraphs into a drawer unread.

One author, I know, was an exception to this generalization. He was Anatole France. I had the very impressive experience of seeing the great Frenchman on his deathbed in the beautiful house at La Bechellerie. It was the day after France had died, and I was allowed to go alone to his room. It was just as he had left it during his last hours alive. A desk was littered with papers, as if some important task had been momentarily interrupted, and among these was a large pile of newspaper clippings, dealing with France's last illness.

Traffic Worries

There is a tradition that the criminal element of New York bears a fierce, burning hatred for the police force that keeps it from having things its own way. That may be so. But I do know that there is a real, personal hatred borne by taxi drivers for traffic policemen. Most of these drivers feel that a patrolman will go out of his way to make conditions uncomfortable for them and that theirs is a persecuted profession. After some years of taxi driving, I am convinced that this belief is unfounded. In this city, where clumsy, inexperienced "Sunday" drivers jam the traffic lanes, the taxi pilot shines as a marvelous driver, and the police recognize him as such. To prove it, try driving a private car as fast as a taxicab goes. You'll rue it. The police will be after you in no time. Yet the cabs speed merrily along, unmolested—for the police know that these drivers are competent and careful.

The other day I was talking with a traffic policeman at the Times square, and I asked him about the supposedly troublesome cab pilots. "Why" said he, "I'd rather handle a hundred taxicabs at my corner than try to get three or four giggling girls across the street. If these chauffeurs weren't wide awake every minute people would be killed by the hundreds in this neighborhood. It isn't these taxi fellows that go around murdering people just for the fun of it. It's the pedestrians trying to commit suicide that make things bad."

Dry Weather Damages Kansas Corn Crop

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 27. (AP)—Additional loss to the Kansas corn crop due to dry weather and high temperatures the past week was reported today by the state board of agriculture and other agencies. The report did not take account of rains over much of the state yesterday and last night.

Hadn't he agreed he wouldn't say a word about it?

Chatty smiled to herself as she hurried home; "Bawl me out, will you?" she admonished an imaginary David Jordan. "Get me in Dutch with my friends, will you? Give me the go by, will you? All right for you! I know something about you you don't want known! And it's my duty to tell it. I must be loyal to my employer. The truth never hurt anybody! And—"

A glorious scheme flashed into Chatty's mind. A scheme which would at once "get even" with the man she told herself passionately she hated, and "put me in right with old Van Nuys!"

For once Chatty did not tell what was in her mind, either to her mother, to Billie, or to Winnie.

"They'll know soon enough! Maybe I'll get a raise," thought Chatty. But there was less comfort in the thought than she expected. For Dave was going to leave!

WHY PULLMAN TOURISTS GO MAD

(Scene: A parlor car. A highly inquisitive youngster of about 7 years has been placed in one of the chairs by a mother who has gone into another car for some peace. A gentleman who boards the train finds his chair in back of the child.)

Child (on knees in chair facing the stranger): Has this train got one engine?

Man (a little surprised): Yes, I think so.

Child: Has it got one engine or two engines?

Man (opening a newspaper): One engine is all on a train of this kind, my boy.

Child: I was on a train once that had two engines.

Man (attempting to read): Were you?

Child: What kind of trains have two engines?

Man (a little annoyed, but trying to be tolerant): Heavy trains, I guess.

Child: Heavier than this one?

Man: Heavier than this train, yes.

Child: How heavy is this train?

Man (rattling his paper): Quite heavy.

Child: Is it heavier than a freight train?

Man (frowning): I dunno, son.

Child: I know what runs this train.

Man: Do you?

Child: Yes. Electricity. It runs half-way by electricity and then they change to steam-engines. Why do they change to steam-engines?

Man (trying to hide behind paper): I haven't any idea.

Child: I know what it says on those signs out there. It says "Danger. Live wires." My mother told me if anybody touched the wires they would get killed. If you touched 'em would you get killed?

Man (irritably): Yep.

Child: I betcher I could touch one and not get killed.

Man (now quite hot and bothered): I'm afraid so.

(The man changes his seat to one across the aisle. The child pursues him.)

Child: Ooh, we're going over a trestle now. Can two trains go over this trestle at once?

Man (sharply): No.

Child: Why not?

Man: They just can't. Here, take this paper and see the funny pictures.

Child: I don't like funny pictures. Can a train like this go off a trestle into the water?

Man: Yeah.

Child: Was you ever in a wreck?

Man: Never.

Child: My father was in a wreck.

Man (sliding down in seat quite dejected): I'm glad of that.

Child: I was never in a wreck, though.

Man: No such luck.

Child (standing in seat so he can look down into the passenger's face over the top of his newspaper): What does it mean when the man blows the engine whistle like that? Are there cows on the track?

Man (desperately resolving to get rid of the infant): Now look here, I don't want you to ask . . .

Mother (sweeping into the car suddenly): Oh, has little Roscoe been annoying you? He makes friends with everybody and asks so many questions. Has he bothered you?

Man (trying to be nice): Not at all, not at all.

Mother (leading the boy away) You come right over with mommer and be quiet.

Man (behind his paper): Idiot!

REBELS STEAL RELIEF FUNDS

Money for Quake Sufferers Taken by Insurgents

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug. 27. (UP)—The band of Revolutionists who seized the town of Cumana, state of Sucre, two weeks ago, suffered a disastrous defeat by federal troops on Aug. 23 at Santa Ana, according to an official dispatch received today by Gen. Juan V. Gomez, commander in chief of the army. Fifty rebels, including a number of generals, were taken prisoner.

The Revolutionists, about 400 strong, landed from the German steamer Falke at Point Cumana Aug. 11 and attempted to seize the town of Cumana. They were repulsed after a pitched battle with the small garrison, but returned two days later and succeeded in gaining possession of the town.

They withdrew after seizing $60,000 collected by local authorities for earthquake relief and after freeing a number of prisoners taken during the first attack. Government troops pursued the revolutionists, engaging in minor skirmishes, until Aug. 23 when the decisive engagement took place.

The dispatch to General Gomez stated that the rebel band was routed.

Eight rebel generals were taken prisoner, while many, including a number of the leaders, were wounded.

Part of the earthquake relief fund was recovered and a large quantity of arms and ammunition were also seized.

Desert Charley Proves to Court He Possesses Eagle Eye

Aged Wanderer 'Shoots to Wreck' Bold Photographer's Camera

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 27. (UP)—Somewhere out in Kansas, along the Victory highway between Tonganoxie and Kansas City, Desert Charley and his four-pack burros made their bed beneath the stars tonight—as free as the sparkling water that made the town of Tonganoxie famous.

Desert Charley probably would not have become involved with the town's authorities had he not grown too active at the business end of an ancient rifle, which, in turn, was pointed with deadly precision at the tiny recording lens of a camera in the hands of H. G. DeMerritt, Tonganoxie photographer.

Mr. DeMerritt, it seems, attempted to take an impromptu photograph of the picturesque, erstwhile St. Louis carpenter, without the usual proffered fee of 50 cents, to which Desert Charley objected, much to the chegrin of DeMerritt and the utter demolition of the camera.

When called before Acting Judge Glynn in city court at his preliminary hearing to determine whether Charley shot with murderous intent, the court made it plain that if the desert wanderer shot only with intent to wreck and if Charley had an "eagle eye," he only need to prove his marksmanship.

"Forty years ago," pleaded Charley, "I could drive a pin at 50 paces. And I can do it yet."

"When that photographer said he was going to take my picture whether or no, I just up and aims. The lens splattered all over the ground.

"It'll cost you 50 cents, pardner," I told him and pointed to the inch high letters to that effect on the burros trappings.

"He sets up the camera. I warned him again and then I shot."

The judge pondered and Charley waxed eloquent.

"Fifty cents to me, Judge, is three meals. It's my livelihood—pictures of me and them four burros is. I live on 18 cents a day—salt pork and bread and taters. That's all I eat. When that feller puts his hand on that camera bulb, I seen them taters flickerin' away in the distance. I just shot."

DeMerritt said he thought Desert Charley was, to say the least, a wee bit impetuous. He might have, he said, paid the required 50 cents had Charley given him time. He was busy, however, making arrangements to take the pictures.

So the decision whether Charley should be bound over to district court on a charge of murderous assault revolved around the intent with which he shot.

"He's got an 'eagle eye' I believe," Judge Glynn said deliberately. "Case dismissed."

A conference was arranged between Charley and DeMerritt following the court session. They shook hands, smiling awkwardly.

Charley, plodding contentedly behind his four burros, departed later for Kansas City, serenely happy in his court, as well as moral victory.

Heir to Meat Fortune Fined $5,000 For Driving Car While Intoxicated

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27. (UP)—Michael Cudahy, young heir to the Cudahy Meat Packing fortune, paid a $5,000 fine today after a recent conviction of driving an automobile while intoxicated.

In addition to the fine, Cudahy's driving licenses in California was suspended for one year.

Cudahy was given an alternative of spending one day in jail in lieu of each $14 of the fine and his attorney left the court room for the money as soon as sentence was pronounced.

The jail sentence would have totaled 356 days if the young millionaire had decided not to pay the fine.

Cudahy said he planned a honeymoon in Honolulu with his recent bride, Muriel Evans, screen actress.

HUMAN LIVING BARELY BEGUN

So Speaks Henry Ford in New Interview

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (US)—People are just beginning to live, in the opinion of Henry Ford who recently confided some of his views on life and work to B. C. Forbes. The remarkable interview is printed in Forbes Magazine released today. In discussing the world's affairs, death, electricity, flying and other interesting subjects, Mr. Ford said:

"I believe that a man's experience is not confined to a man's brief appearance on this earth, that we are given millions of opportunities in the course of our evolution onward and upward through eternity. It has taken us a long time to bring us up to where we are. But we will go on and on until we can create things now utterly beyond our ken. As we grow, we will find the universe contains more and more.

"What we call death doesn't end all for us by any means."

The world's greatest industrialist has this to say about opportunity, the subject that interests every person:

"Young people say there are no opportunities. Why, the world's opportunities are only beginning to break. Every generation leaves more opportunities than it found. Compared with today the opportunities 50 years ago were startlingly few.

"Think of the airplane, electricity, motor transportation, radio, distributing, merchandising — everything that enters into modern life. As Mr. Edison says, we don't yet know one millionth of what there is to be known. Practically every field of human endeavor is hungrily demanding research.

"Opportunity! It beckons to the earnestly-minded youth on every side."

This is what Mr. Ford thinks about sleeping and thinking:

"People who have no time, don't think. The more you think the more time you have.

"The more alive you are, the more eagerly interested you are in what you're doing, the less sleep you need.

"I know that when we were working at full tilt to get our new car just as near perfection as we could make it before going into production, I needed even less sleep than usual—and my normal night's sleep is only six hours. I am usually up before 6 o'clock.

"Someone asked me recently if I had got back into my stride. I never was out of my stride. As a matter of fact, I am constantly trying to improve my stride—as every sensible person is.

"To accomplish things, you must first feel that you are capable of accomplishing them. To achieve, the thing and the time and your mind and yourself all have to be right."

Dallas Rallies In Eighth To Trim Buffs Behind Frasier's Great Pitching

SULLIVAN AND FITZ SET PACE

Andy Yields Only 5 Knocks To Best Jim Chaplin

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 27.—Andy Messenger faced his old Indian teammates today, and thanks to his superb chucking and timely hitting of his new pals, the Spudders won. Subway Andy bested Tiny Jim Chaplin in a corking pitchers' battle, 3 to 2, and the Spudders increased their lead to two games over the Houston Buffs, who were losing to Dallas. The Steers, incidentally, are only three games back of Wichita Falls.

Messenger allowed only five hits and except for his own error, the only misplay of the fast contest, would have had a shutout. Chaplin gave up eight blows, with Fitzgerald and Sullivan the batting leaders with two hits each.

Spudders Score in First

The Spudders tallied a run in the first inning. Stapleton led off with a single to right, Sullivan walked, and Bud scored on Fitzgerald's slashing hit to center.

San Antonio took the lead in the fifth with its brace of tallies. Shacht and Meyers singled, the former going to third. Chaplin hit to Messenger and Andy threw wild in an effort to catch Schacht scrambling back to the bag, Schacht and Meyers scoring.

Won in Sixth

Wichita Falls won in the sixth with the last two runs of the pastime. Sullivan singled to center and sped to third on Fitzgerald's hit to the same outpost. Benton also whanged a hit to the middle garden, scoring Sullivan and advancing Fitzgerald to third. Turgeon singled to left, scoring Fitzgerald.

Harold Wiltse probably will oppose the Indians tomorrow in the second game of the three-game series. Johnny Tobin, veteran outfielder signed Monday by Pres. J. Alvin Gardner of the Spudders, arrived today.

West Texas Series Starts Tomorrow

COLEMAN, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—A seven-game playoff for the West Texas league flag between Coleman, winner of the first half, and Midland, second half champs, will open here Thursday, D. L. Snodgrass, announced tonight.

The first two games will be played here, with Saturday an off-day for the team to travel. The third and fourth games are scheduled at Midland Sunday and Monday.

If more games are necessary to decide the pennant, a fifth will be played here Tuesday, a sixth Wednesday, and a coin toss will decide the site for a possible seventh.

Bobby Jones Ties Course Record at Pebble Beach

DEL MONTE, Calif., Aug. 27. (UP)—Apparently without trying very hard, Robert Tyre Jones equaled the record for the Pebble Beach course in his first trip over the greens today where he will defend his national amateur golf championship next week.

Jones was playing in a foursome and turned in a card of 73, one over par. George Von Elm, Charles Black Jr., Atlanta, and Howard Hughes, of Los Angeles, were his companions in his practice here.

MONEY HELPS WIN PENNANTS

But Not All Athletic and Cub Stars Are Costly

United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—In view of the careless but persistent assertion that major league pennants are purchased, rather than won, these days, it is interesting for baseball fans to delve into the expenditures of the Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics, who are about to appropriate the flags in their respective circuits.

There is little doubt about the axiom that to make money in baseball, you must spend it. The New York Yankees became the most profitable of all major league ventures by expending money freely for players—Babe Ruth, in particular. Col. Jake Ruppert and Capt. Tillinghast L'Hommediu Huston, joint owners of the world's champions a few years ago, took the rubber off their bank-roll in the interest of a winning percentage, and several seasons later the circumference of said bank-roll took on the proportions of a world flight itinerary.

Hornsby Most Costly

In the case of the prospective pennant winners of the current major league races, plenty of money has been paid out for players. Yet some of the men who have been most valuable in assisting the Cubs and Athletics to the top this year cost practically nothing.

William Wrigley began to spend money to build up the Cubs at just about the time owners of other clubs in the National league were retrenching. The result was inevitable. The chewing gum magnate topped off a series of judicious purchases by spending some $200,000 for Rogers Hornsby. One-half of the world series next October will be played in Chicago, as a result.

For all Wrigley's willingness to spend freely with an eye to future profits, however, his pennant is not costing him as much as many people think. Riggs Stephenson, Hack Wilson and others instrumental in keeping the Cubs out in front, were inexpensive and have proved worth many times their purchase price.

Mack Spends Freely

The Chicago Cubs now are making more money than any club in the National league. Baseball has rewarded Wrigley's faith in his ability to own a winning machine, and has proven a most profitable venture for a man who didn't really need the money.

As for Connie Mack, who won so many pennants a score of years ago with players picked up for a song, it is several seasons since he decided to open up his pocketbook and buy himself another flag. His original purchases were costly and useless. Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Zack Wheat and other old timers tried out by Mack were unable to produce either a pennant or dividends.

DORFMAN WINS FIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (AP)—Sammy Dorfman, New York lightweight, won on a foul in the second round of his ten-round match with Augie Pisano of New York, at Dexter park, Brooklyn, last night. Dorfman weighed 133 pounds, Pisano 136½.

YANKEES BLANK ATHLETICS, 2-0

Pipgras Bests Grove to End Champs' Losing Streak

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (AP)—The Yankees broke a five-game losing streak here today, defeating the Athletics 2 to 0 in a brilliant pitching duel. It was the sixth defeat for the Athletics in seven games and their second successive shutout.

Philadelphia has failed to cross the plate in 19 consecutive innings. The lead of the A's was reduced by one game, but measured 12 contests at nightfall.

George Pipgras turned in a brilliant three-hit game against George Earnshaw and Bob Grove, who hurled the final inning.

After striking out in the first inning, Babe Ruth retired from the game due to a cold in his back. He expects to return to the lineup tomorrow. Score:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. (AP)—Sam Rice's triple in the fourteenth inning followed by Buddy Myer's single gave Washington a 5 to 4 victory over Boston today in the first game of their home stay.

The Senators grabbed an early lead off Danny MacFayden but Boston chased Sam Jones in the eighth inning to knot the count at 4-all. Braxton pitched the remainder of the game for Washington and allowed but four hits.

"Goose" Goslin hit his fifteenth home run of the season. Score:

Oklahoma Aggies To Play at Night

Flood Lights to Be Installed On Grid Field

STILLWATER, Okla., Aug. 27.—Night football games for the Oklahoma A. & M. college became an assured thing when E. C. Gallagher, director of athletics, signed a contract with a New York firm for the furnishing of the flood lights. The company is a pioneer in the matter of lighting fields for night games, having furnished lights for the New York Polo grounds and about a dozen football fields in various parts of the country.

Under the contract the firm furnishes only the reflectors, the A. & M. college athletic department being required to supply the 40,000-watt bulbs, erect the poles, put in the transformers and make all connections.

Twelve 55-foot poles have been purchased from an Oklahoma City concern. These poles, weighing 5,000 pounds each, will stand 47 feet above the ground. Special equipment will be required to erect these poles.

20 Lights on Each Pole

These 12 poles, six being located on each side of the field, will support 20 lights. Under the plan of construction being followed by the A. & M. athletic department, these lights will make it so light on the field that it will be possible to play even with a regulation colored football. Gallagher thinks, however, that footballs to be used for night games will be covered with white shoe polish.

Actual work of putting in the flood lights will start in about two weeks so as to give the football team an opportunity to practice at night under artificial lights.

When the Oklahoma A. & M. football team starts practice Sept. 15, six coaches will be on hand to give instruction and work out plays.

Three will devote all their time to the varsity team and the other three will be coaching the freshman squad.

New Coaching Staff

Lynn Waldorf will be head coach and in charge of all football activity. A. A. Exendine will be an assistant for the varsity, as will Roy W. Kenny, who has been an Aggie mentor for several years.

The head freshman coach is Harold James. He will be assisted by Dr. D. C. McIntosh, head of the agricultural education department, and George A. Bullock, Y. M. C. A. secretary.

Dr. McIntosh has been helping coach football at every institution with which he has been associated. He coached Herbert Joesting, the all-American at the University of Minnesota, when he was a freshman.

Old Man Par

No, I never met him.
Old Man Par, I mean;
Hear about him often,
When I'm on the green.

Many times I've seen him,
As he walked away,
But I never met him,
Never heard him say:

"That's the stuff, old topper,
Glad to see you win;
Shots like that are rarer
Than a slug of gin."

Nothing but a buzzard,
When I sink the pill—
No, I never met him
And I never will.

Tilden and the Title

An old tennis gentleman by the name of Bill Tilden was supposed to be all through some time ago, but in spite of this there is an exceedingly good chance that he will be the next national tennis champion of the United States.

This, of course, is no certainty. It would be a certainty if Tilden could meet the best men in the field on any given rate. Whether he can stand up after a week's hammering from the hand of youth is something else. Tilden would have had little or no chance if Cochet or Lecoste had come over. But they are not coming and no one has accused Bill of asking them to stay away.

So he now has a chance to show what middle age, in a tennis sense, can do against younger years. It will be Tilden on one side with Lott, Van Ryn, Allison, Bell, Mercur, Austin, Cram, Grant and a number of others from the younger set lined up against him. Six or seven years ago and it would have been a romp or a walkover. It won't be today, but some youngster still has to prove that he can stop Big Bill under heavy fire. It all gets down to a question of standing up through a week's play.

Michigan's Pygmies

Dear Sir: A recent issue of the Michigan Alumnus carries the names and weights of the 1929 Michigan football squad. A tentative team from last year's vets and the most promising sophomores shows possibilities of one of the heaviest Michigan aggregations in years.

From tackle to tackle the "first guess" line averages 191 and then comes the bomb shell. The ends and four backs put these gaunt, puny, emaciated youths to shame with an average poundage of 196. Captain Truskowski and the veteran Draveling are fairly certain at the flanks at 200 and 205 pounds respectively. Gembis and Simrall, of last year's team, could be augmented by Hudson and Morrison in the backfield with weights of 200, 163, 195 and 210.

Certainly few teams have ever boasted two ends and four backs of these breath-taking proportions. Average poundage is often given a false color by the presence of a fatty weighing 250 or 260, but the heaviest man on the team above would be Maynard Morrison at 210. Simrall at 163 should be prohibited by law from disporting himself in this field of giants.

Incidentally, the Michigan coaching staff should hasten to acknowledge their indebtedness to this correspondent for disposing easily of a problem that will keep half a dozen of 'em up nights for two months. Names of the balance of the team furnished on application.
WOLVERINE.

Firpo and Schmeling

Luis Firpo blew into New York without a manager and it took him no great while to get his shot at the championship and clear up enough light change to carry him in comfort for the rest of his life.

Max Schmeling has had enough managers to handle all the fighters in the game and with a great chance to clean up and stand as the new heavyweight champion. It will be a long while now before he even gets a crack at the title. Schmeling, the outstanding challenger a few months ago, has been managed into near obscurity. He had only Phil Scott and Jack Sharkey in the road and a prospective champion who couldn't hurdle these two obstacles isn't going far, anyway. As it is now, you rarely hear any one mentioning the German's name. His only chance is to fight his way to the position he allowed his managers to yank from under him. Back in June he was leader of the pack and now he is just one of the mob. All of which proves again what a smart gent Luis Angel Firpo was.

It is no certainty that Schmeling would have beaten Sharkey. But he could have walloped the whey out of the Sharkey that met Heeney, Risko, Christner, De Kuh and Stribling—who happened to be an entirely different Sharkey from the one who fought Wills, Maloney and Dempsey. Maybe he is two other fellows.

BLAKE PITCHES 4 TO 1 VICTORY

Hornsby's Batting Marks Defeat of Reds

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (AP)—Rogers Hornsby's big bat and Sheriff Blake's effective pitching today gave the Cubs a 4 to 1 victory over the Reds in the closing game of the series.

The Chicago victory, coupled with the defeat of Pittsburgh in Philadelphia, lifted Joe McCarthy's club's margin to 14½ games, the greatest lead any National league club has enjoyed at this stage of the season since 1906, when Frank Chance's immortals won 116 victories to defeat the Giants by 20 games.

The Cubs open a five-game series in Pittsburgh tomorrow with a double-header.

Hornsby collected four of the seven hits the Cubs obtained from the deliveries of Adolfo Luque and Pete Donohue, enjoying a perfect day at bat.

Blake held Cincinnati to six hits and was scored upon only through Curt Walker's fourth inning homer, which tied the count for two innings. Score:

Singer-Chocolate Go Eyed by Fans

Thursday's Battle to Draw Record Crowd

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (UP)—Shady figures out of the fistic past will be recalled when Kid Chocolate, Cuban negro, meets Al Singer, Bronx Hebrew, in a 12-round bout at the Polo grounds Thursday night.

A combination of George Dixon and Joe Gans, Chocolate is hailed as the greatest negro fighter of the new era. He has never been beaten in 154 matches.

Born on the east side and raised in a similar environment, Singer is called a "second Benny Leonard." Up to now their careers are singularly similar.

To Draw 50,000

Not since the lightweight championship bout between Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler, which drew more than $400,000, has a contest between the little fellows attracted as much attention. With seats scaled from $1 to $13, the match is expected to draw a crowd of more than 50,000 and gate receipts of more than $200,000—a record for a non-championship fight among other than heavyweights.

On the strength of two sensational two-round knockouts, Singer has swung the betting odds to his favor. In his last two appearances in the ring, Singer knocked out featherweight Champion Andrew Routis in a non-title bout and Gaston Charles of France. The betting odds have been ranging from 6 to 5 to 2 to 1 on Singer.

While Chocolate has yet to lose, Singer has lost three times and been knocked out once in the two years he has been fighting in the professional ranks. He later reversed the three decisions on the men who beat him.

K. O. Good for Al

Ignacio Fernandez, hard-hitting Filipino, knocked out Singer May 17 in Madison Square garden. Singer took the match at a set-up, little thinking it would mark the cross-roads of his career. The knockout actually made Singer.

"Fernandez's knockout of Singer was the best thing that ever happened to him," says Benny Leonard. "Before I was knocked out by Joe Shrugue I always feared a knockout. It shackled me, prevented me from opening up. For a long time my main object was to avoid being knocked out instead of doing my best.

"When Shrugue stopped me early in my career I found out that being knocked out wasn't such a terrible experience. It was nothing more than going to sleep and waking up again. Stopped being "knockout shy" and began to concentrate on fighting. I improved 50 per cent, and I believe the same thing has happened to Al Singer."

Daily Dope

By LARRY DAILEY

JOHNNY TOBIN is going to be lots of help to the Spudders, unless the little man has gone 'way back—which J. Alvin Gardner says he has been informed is not so. More than 10 years of pounding around major league baselines and outfields of course exacted their inevitable toll; else he still would be up there in the fast time. But Tobin was a regular big league outfielder until a couple of years ago and J. Alvin's operatives in St. Louis tell him that Johnny still retains much of the speed and batting eye that made him a foremost outfielder for 10 years.

◇ ◇ ◇

WRITING OF little men, a couple of them are to battle tomorrow night in a mill that looms as one of the outstanding fights of the year. They are Al Singer, the Bronx Hebrew and Kid Chocolate, the Cuban negro, and their fight has attracted greater attention than any non-title mill for many a moon. Not since Benny Leonard fought Lefty Lew Tendler has there been a meeting of the little fellows to attract interest of ring enthusiasts as the Singer-Chocolate go.

Singer's knockouts of Al Routis, featherweight champion and Gaston Charles, with his advantage in weight will make him a favorite over Chocolate. But the Kid has NEVER lost a fight in 157 starts and it would not be surprising if he wins tomorrow night. Singer will be called upon to make 128¾ pounds, which may weaken him, and the tigerish attack of the dynamic Chocolate may bring down the Bronx boy, as it has practically every adversary he has faced.

◇ ◇ ◇

SOME DAYS ago I wrote in this column that baseball is becoming too much of a pink tea; that the players, hampered by fear of drastic penalty, are too docile and do not show the fighting spirit in a way to please the fans. While not advocating a return to the days of rowdyism in baseball, it is insisted that the customers like to see the athletes display some spirit toward the umpires and other tossers. The crowds at recent Cincinnati-Chicago games bear out that belief.

◇ ◇ ◇

MORE THAN 35,000, the greatest throng that ever jammed Redland field at Cincinnati, saw the Cubs and Reds play a double header Sunday, and another 35,000 gathering attended the pastime at the Bears' park Monday. The reason?

Several weeks ago Hack Wilson of the Cubs swung on the jaws of Pitchers Kolp and Donohue of the Reds. So refreshing was that display of spirit that the fans eagerly availed themselves of the opportunity to see the clubs play again, doubtless holding the secret hope that there would be a resumption of hostilities.

That was not to be expected, however, as ball players who fight in the heat of conflict on the diamond usually immediately forget their differences and seldom carry their grudges further. But at least, it greatly enriched the coffers of the Chicago and Cincinnati clubs.

◇ ◇ ◇

ALONG THOSE lines, I offer the following suggestion to club owners, gratis: If the attendance at the ball games is not satisfactory, slip a player $50 and tell him that you'll pay his fine if he'll start a fight with an athlete of a rival club.

I guarantee that will bring out the customers through the turnstiles.

Rosenthal's Batting, Fielding Feature 4-2 Win

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—Behind Frasier's great three-hit pitching today, the Dallas Steers rallied in the eighth to drive out a 4 to 2 victory over the Buffs.

Rosenthal started the eighth with a single and in Houston's half of that inning took the heart of the Bisons by robbing Mancuso of an extra base wallop.

In the ninth Rosenthal slammed the ball over the right field fence. Score:

SPORTS WIN AND TIE

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—Beaumont and Shreveport battled four hours here Tuesday afternoon, the Sports capturing the first game, 4 to 2, and coming back to scrap the Exporters to a 4 to 4 deadlock in the seven-inning nightcap, which was called on account of darkness.

Parks' fluke home run inside the park with two men aboard helped the Sports to knot the afterpiece, the ball bouncing through Easterling and rolling to the fence. Score:

Home Canning

The housewife can put up almost any kind of fruit or vegetables in cans, which can be kept for many years without spoiling if it is really properly canned. In home canning it is economical to use glass, since it may be used year after year. The principal point to remember is that heat is the main thing in preserving. Also that the entrance of any air whatsoever will cause spoilage. Bacteria in the food must be killed by heat and then no more air allowed to enter the jar. The food will then keep for as long as 15 or 20 years, and comes out perfectly fresh and attractive.

The cold pack method of canning is no doubt the best, both for home use and for factory canning. In homes the advantage of the cold pack methods are that it saves the time which used to be spent bending over a hot cookstove, and saves labor since the foods are handled only once—the time they are packed into the jars—and it results in a food which is more wholesome and has a better form and flavor. It is both an efficient and satisfactory method, and the only two vital things to be watched are that the food is thoroughly sterilized, that is, heated through, and the cans are thoroughly sealed. The can should always stand the test of standing inverted without leakage.

Another point to remember is that the storage of canned foods is important. When the commercial label says, "Store in a cool dry place," it is also a good rule for the home canner to do the same. Our grandmothers understood that food kept cool down in the cellar was less likely to "work" than the food which was kept on the shelf in the warmth of the kitchen. Bacteria do not grow well in cool places, so if any bacteria do remain in the jars the food is more likely to spoil in a warm place than if the canned goods are kept cool.

Canning is especially profitable if the foods processed are grown at home. For the city dweller, canning offers a chance to buy food by the box when it is abundant and cheap and to save it over until the winter months when it is expensive to buy fresh.

In canning vegetables, the thrifty housewife is able by this method to serve vegetables and fruits in the season when they are too expensive to buy and thus she serves the roughage and the vitamin foods through the very months when they are most likely to be scarce.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Stomach Ulcers

Question: Mrs. U. H. J. writes:—"My little boy is quite sick with ulcers of the stomach. He is 13 years old. Should he go on a diet?"

Answer:—If he does not go on a diet he will surely go on the operating table. I hope by the time you read this answer you have already placed him under the care of a diet specialist who understands how to treat stomach ulcers so that the case does not develop into one which requires surgical intervention.

Snoring

Question: J. K. writes:—"I am 35 years of age and have never snored before, but it is becoming something regular with me the last year or so. I shall appreciate it very much if you will advise me in regard to your treatment of fasting and dieting.

Answer: — Snoring is usually caused by inability to breathe freely through the nose while you are sleeping. This is because of an inflamed condition of the membrane inside of the nose which is engorged with catarrhal mucous. As soon as you get rid of your catarrh through living on the proper diet, your family will be delighted to notice that you are no longer snoring.

Roquefort Cheese

Question; K. L. asks:—"How did Roquefort cheese get its name?"

Answer:—This cheese is named after the French village of Roquefort, where special herds of sheep that supply the milk are pastured. Much care is given to the diet of these sheep, and even the water that is supplied them is whitened with barley-flour. Roquefort cheese itself, goes through a very long process of preparation before it reaches the market. It is, however, a very good protein food when used in proper combination with other foods.

Hyperacidity

Question: H. K. D. writes—"So much saliva comes from my stomach it irritates my mouth and it is always sore. What should I eat to prevent this acid stomach?"

Answer:—Saliva is formed in the mouth, and does not come from the stomach. The gastric juice of the stomach is acid and will irritate your gums if it comes into the mouth. Live on good food combinations to overcome the hyperacidity of the stomach.

Treacherous Strip Of Road Improved

BIG SPRING, Texas, Aug. 27. (AP)—A mammoth celebration incident to the paving of the highway through Iatan flat, heretofore described as the most treacherous strip in the broadway of America or Bankhead highway, was held last night at Iatan, western Mitchell county.

Four thousand persons, representing many sections of West Texas, stood with bared heads while speakers addressed them and a battery of old fiddlers played the funeral dirges of the famous mud strip, featuring "Arkansas Traveler."

Traffic over the recently completed pavement through the flat was allowed several days ago. Before being paved the strip, 10 miles long, was widely known for the grasping qualities of its mud.

Standard Oli Company Increases Capital Stock

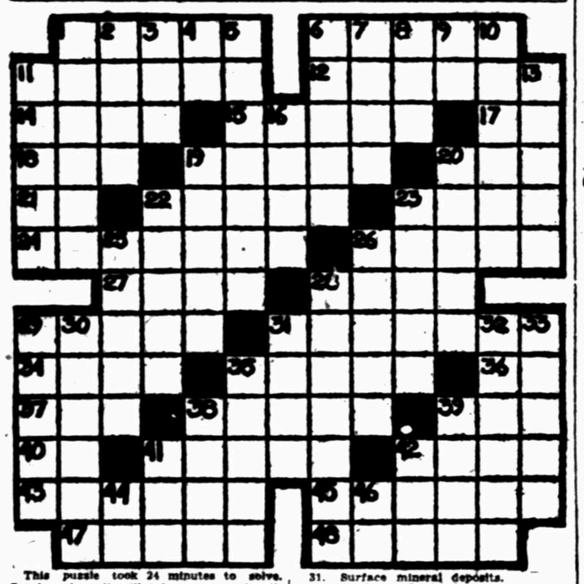

WHITING, Ind., Aug. 27. (UP)—Increase in the authorized $25 par capital stock of the Standard Oil company of Indiana to 18,000,000 shares from 15,000,000 shares was approved by the stockholders at a meeting here today.

Subsidiary Paper Totaling $31,000,000 Redeemed

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (INS)—The United States Steel corporation has called for redemption of two issues of subsidiary company bonds aggregating a face value of $31,770,000, it was announced today by Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the corporation.

Discussing this action, Taylor said it was important as it reflected the first step toward discharging the indebtedness of subsidiary companies. He admitted that the corporation had been buying some of the bonds in the open market.

It is estimated that through the retirement of these two issues of bonds the net cash saving in interest and sinking fund requirements will amount to about $730,000 annually.

Manufacture of copper, wire, cable, rubber covered wire, flexible cord non metallic sheath cable, armored cable steel conduit and enameled cotton and silk covered magnet wire is the field of the Anaconda Wire and Cable company. It was formed in February 1929 to take over the wire and brass manufacturing properties of the Anaconda Copper Mining company and its subsidiary, the American Brass company. The new concern operates seven factories with an aggregate annual capacity of 500,000,000 pounds of wire and cable and 1,000,000 pounds of yarn for insulating purposes. The plants are at Great Falls, Mont., Kenosha, Wis., Hastings, N. Y., Sycamore, Ill., Pawtucket, R. I., Anderson, Ind., and Muskegon Mich. In 1928 the combined earnings of the companies merged in the consolidation amounted to $1,942,875, a gain of 62 per cent over those of the previous year when net was $1,193,705.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of 404,378 shares of common stock of no par value. Fifty-seven per cent of this is owned by the Anaconda Copper Mining company. An Initial dividend of 75 cents a share quarterly was paid May 6, 1929.

As of Jan. 1, 1929, the pro forma balance sheet giving effect to the organization and acquisition of component companies showed total current assets of $12,0008,917, total current liabilities $3,648,819, net working capital of $8,360,098 and book value applicable to the capital stock outstanding $46.95 a share.

Terrible Housewife

LONDON—A Tottenham husband didn't want to work, so he stayed at home and attempted to do the little woman's housework while she earned the daily bread. But the little lady thought not so much of the idea, so she hied friend husband before Magistrate Platten. The latter decided that the husband's housework was terrible and that he had to either pay board or get a room in the jail.

DEMO LEADERS CONFER HERE

Move May Restore Peace To Party Ranks

our party is going to be regarded in the next campaign."

Judge Scurry answered that the anti-Smiths had been excluded from the executive committee by him because they refused to sign the pledge, and that it was now up to the courts to sustain or condemn his action, the injunction restraining him from excluding the faction now being before the supreme court on a writ of error.

Welcome Return

"But as for the coming primary," he said, "there is nothing for your group to do but judge for yourselves whether or not you are Demcrats. The Democratic party, of course, would be glad to have you. All that is necessary is that you sign the pledge. And there will be no row. If there is any row brought up, you will cause it, not me."

In the course of the conversations, several of the anti-Smith delegation recalled the bitter fight that ensued last fall when some of the precinct chairmen bolted at the meeting of the executive committee here. Judge Scurry commented on the fight, stating that "if I had been opposed to the Democratic candidate, I would have promptly offered my resignation from the executive committee, thereby stating my position clearly and avoiding a conflict such as that which resulted."

"Well," said Mr. Corlett, "I agree with you. I wanted to resign my place on the committee at the time, but your bunch wouldn't give me time. You kicked me out before I could resign."

Mr. Henry then wanted to know if any such "tactics" would be repeated next year. "If there are going to be tactics we don't like, we don't want to be in. We'd rather be out than fighting like that."

Harmony Sought

"Now, gentlemen," the judge interrupted. "you are raising those questions and not me. It all goes back to what I said before. If you are Democrats, nobody can keep you out. Nobody under the law can keep you out. We are not trying to exclude you from the party. And I am sure the Democratic executive committee will take the same attitude as I do.

"As for my personal opinion," Judge Scurry continued, "I think the Democratic party should have some sayso as to who enters the ranks. There might be some persons we would not like to have among us. But the law controls those things. The law bars no one so long as they sign the pledge."

"Well," said Mr. Corlett, "We've been run over once, and we just wanted to know whether we are going to get run over again."

There was a wave of mirth when Mr. Corlett added in impromptu fashion that "I'm a Democrat, and have always voted the Democratic ticket except last year, and I think I did Texas a wonderful lot of good when I changed."

Mr. Corlett then changed the subject.

"You know," he said, "it takes a lot of courage for us to come up here and try to straighten this thing out when you consider all the abuse we took. After being abused and kicked around it takes courage for us to come here on a peace mission."

All the members of the delegation then joined in a last statement to Judge Scurry, the statement being a repetition of the purpose in holding the conference. "We merely wanted to straighten things out and see where we stand," they said. And then it was agreed to ask for Mr. Wilcox' opinion.

Members of the delegation said they were satisfied at having held the conference.

Chicago Plane Still Up After New Record

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (UP)—The monoplane Chicago We Will, a Stinson Detroiter, droned along its way today, having entered the second hundred hours in quest of a new refueling endurance record.

The two pilots, C. E. Steele and Russell Moseman, have been promised the airplane if they break the record of 17½ days, established recently in St. Louis. They passed their 100th hour at 3:30 p. m., today.

Immediate Settlement Of Boundary Row Unlikely

AUSTIN, Aug. 27. (UP)—Immediate settlement of the Oklahoma-Texas border dispute seemed unlikely today with the Texas legislature determined to lay the case before a special session of the state legislature. Oklahoma offered $150,000 for the disputed strip. Members of the Oklahoma delegation today expressed the opinion that the deal would not be consummated.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Aug. 27. (AP)—The position of the bright 64's and finer fleeces are very strong as compared with a few months ago, instead of being a drag on the market. Ohio and similar fine delaines is now one of the most active sales being closed readily at 38 to 39 cents in the grease for the graded wools.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (AP)—Cotton was comparatively quiet again today, but prices ruled generally higher on covering or rebuying by recent sellers who appeared to be influenced by the failure of weather reports to show any adequate break in the southwestern drought and bullish private crop advices. December contracts sold up from 18.76 to 18.93 and closed at 18.85, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 9 to 25 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 10 to 15 points in response to relatively steady cables from Liverpool.

Private reports of showers in the Southwest encouraged selling on this initial advance and the market reacted several points during the early trading. October contracts for instance, sold off from 18.58 to 18.45, while March reacted to 19.07.

October sold up to 18.60 and March 19.20 making net gains of 14 to 18 points on the active positions. There was enough realizing to check the advance of these figures, while there also seemed to be a little southern selling, but closing prices were within a few points of the best on most positions.

Liverpool cables reported covering and local buying in that market.

Exports today 5,861, making 169,618 so far this season. Port receipts 27,404. U. S. port stocks 575,528.

By the end of the first hour October traded at 18.83, December 18.90 and January 18.86, or 10 to 12 points above the previous close.

Under pressure of offerings active positions sold off 10 to 11 points from the top with October at 18.42, December 18.70 and January 18.75.

From these levels the market rallied under a demand stimulated by a private crop report making the condition of the crop only 58 per cent of normal, and the failure of the expected rains in the drought section to materialize. October advanced to 18.58, December 18.86 and January 18.93, or 16 to 18 points above the lows.

Rail Shares Lead Way When Huge Earnings Are Published

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (US)—Railroad shares forged ahead again when the Industrials turned soft in another quiet market, today. Advancing call money influenced heavier realizing in the Industrial list so that practically all recent leaders lost for the session. Rails enjoyed increasing demand, however, and finished near the best price levels with Atchison gaining 4¾, Erie 1¾, Delaware and Hudson 4⅞, Pennsylvania 2⅞ and Union Pacific 1⅛. Hudson and Manhattan jumped over 3 points while a few specialties continued to advance with Columbia Carbon gaining 10¾, U. S. Freight 3⅜ and Macy 8 points. Oils continued firm and fairly active but the coppers suffered from the general irregularity. The call rate was pushed up from 7 to 9 per cent, with higher rate indicated at the close. Turnover fell under the 4,000,000-share level.

Banks have been making their usual income from the money market recently so were quick to take advantage of the approach of the month-end to jack the rate higher. There is no real reason for the advance. There is plenty of money available. Sept. 1 payments are not overly large. Furthermore, there has been no material increase in public participation in stock market dealings to cause increased demand. Important traders welcome the higher money rate as they feel it will tend to keep the market orderly. They have no fear of money conditions at all. They realize the banks will probably jack rates to 11 or 12 per cent over the next week and to 15 per cent or so about the middle of September. Having no difficulty in arranging their credit privately the charge to the ordinary trader does not affect their operations.

When the industrials started to give the rails were brought forward again. With record breaking earnings and car loadings pointing to even higher revenues the rails comprise the best means of sustaining bullish sentiment in times of trouble in other parts of the list. Delaware and Hudson stood out again as the First National people are keenly interested and there is increasing talk of the closer affiliation with Lackawanna that is in the offing. Whether it will be brought about by investment trust active or otherwise is not considered important. New Haven increased its dividend and the Pennsylvania should be next.

Recent buying of Cannon Mills has been due to belated realization of improving earning power and premier position in its field held by the company. It makes more than 50 per cent of the towels sold in this country, being the largest organization of its kind in the world. In addition to forthcoming favorable report on Montgomery Ward sales the bulls on the stock are looking for announcement of acquisition of control of another company soon. Pan American's strength was in response to activity of the group that has played important part in the market for other leading stocks recently.

It is expected that the month of September will bring announcement of several important deals. One of the first, it is stated, will be in connection with General Gas and Electric expansion plans. In addition to acquiring new property the management is said to have plans for recapitalization that will prove of benefit to stockholders. At least a five to one split up is looked for. International Superpower is expected to offer new stock before long.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Aug. 27. (AP)—(USDA)—Sows, yearlings, bulls and calves were steady here today. The supply of steers was more liberal and trading was very slow with evidence of a narrow demand at a little lower level.

Around fifteen loads of steers arrived. Due to sell from $8.25 to $12.75.

Very few bulls were received, most of them were common lights that sold at $5.50 to $6.50, with a few heavy bulls around $7.00.

Slaughter yearlings and heifers were scarce and unchanged. A package of desirable well-finished yearlings sold at $14, with most of the packages of the common kind selling at $6.50 to $8.50.

Cows were comparatively scarce and steady. One load of good fat cows sold at $8.50, with most of the canners and cutters at $4.25 to $6; butchers and beef cows at $6.25 and $7.

Calves about steady. Order buyers paid $10 to $11.25, with a few of the best light calves up to $12.50.

Trading was slow in the hog division, with bids 10 to 15c lower. Best bid during morning in rail division $10.80; truck top was $10.25.

No early sales of sheep with very light supply.

MID-WESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 27. (AP)—(USDA)—Fat lamb trade around the 11-market circuit was moderately active at steady to strong prices today. Closely sorted native lambs in Chicago realized $13.90 and choice rangers made $13.85. The supply approximated 69,300 as compared with 68,477 last Tuesday and 57,955 the corresponding day a year ago.

The hog market was very slow, at prices unevenly 10@40c lower. Chicago had a top of $11.55. Total offerings were around 18,600, a decrease of 1,500 from a week ago but 17,000 heavier than the same day last year.

Aggregate receipts of cattle were estimated at 36,300 against 45,858 a week ago and 46,350 a year ago. Considerable unevenness prevailed on beef steers and yearlings. Better grades of light weight steers and yearlings were on a firm to 25c higher basis. Packers continued bearish on western grass steers and only a limited supply prevented their enforcing price declines. Choice grain fed steers in Chicago reached $17.00 while long yearlings cleared at $16.75.

Wichita Man Hurt In Fall From Freight Car

Falling about five feet to the ground from a freight car and landing with several lengths of heavy pipe on top of him, Howard J. Kitchens, 306 Webster street, suffered painful injuries on the face and body about 9:20 o'clock Tuesday morning while loading pipe at the rear of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing company warehouse, 1400 Scott avenue.

The injured man was taken to the Wichita General hospital in an Albert's company ambulance. Examination of his wounds revealed no fractures or internal injuries, physicians stated, and he was released after first aid treatment had been administered. Mr. Kitchens had been an employe of the Standard company only two days.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (AP)—Wheat buyers took courage today as prices swung upward. All grains were up at the finish.

Wheat gained ¾ to 1⅛c for the day and corn ⅛ to 1⅜c. Oats steadied up to ⅛ to ½c higher while lard and bellies weakened, lard ending 5 to 10@12c down.

Estimates of 1,000,000 bushels sold for export in Monday's late day business bolstered the market today. Little likelihood of strong purchases by the continent was seen as late reports confirmed good crops in Europe and large carryovers.

While Canadian spring wheat reports continued pessimistic, the rate at which the new crop is moving to market is threatening to tax storage capacity earlier than usual. The visible supply at Canadian points decreased only 409,000 bushels, and today's receipts at Winnipeg included 419 cars of new wheat.

Corn followed the trail of wheat, its buoyance at the end being ascribed to disappointment over the weather reports from the West. It was thought the recent rains had been too light and spotted to be of much benefit to the firing corn fields. Oats rallied with the leading grains. Provisions were lower and hogs were depressed.

Curb Sales

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. (AP)—Bullish operations on the New York curb exchange received a decided setback today as a result of the flood of selling released by the raising of call money rates from 7 to 9 per cent. The abrupt advance, coming on top of unofficial assurances that no month-end credit pinch was likely, took traders by surprise, and they hastened to unload their holdings.

Selling pressure was particularly effective against some of the recently organized investment trusts, such as Blue Ridge, Interstate Equities, Shenandoah, and Tri-Continental Allied certificates. Electric investors, Third National investors and Trans-America corporation also were heavy.

Public utilities were mixed. American Superpower was turned over in large volume, but closed with a net loss of 1⅞ points. Electric Bond & Share closed 26 points over. Cities Service crossed 51 to a new high. Southwest Gas Utilities and Dixie Gas & Utilities also reached new high ground.

Dubilier Radio, which recently won a patent infringement suit against the Radio corporation, was under steady accumulation all day, touching a new high at 16.

Oils were mixed. Imperial of Canada crossed 37 to a new high record, and International Petroleum was marked up close to the year's high. Gulf dropped nearly 3 points and Vacuum 1⅞. Most of the Standard Oil issues improved fractionally.

COTTON CROP CUT IN HALF

Prospective Yield Reduced by Heat Wave

Prospective cotton production in Wichita county and surrounding territory has been reduced almost 50 per cent during the last month, according to statements made Tuesday by local cotton buyers.

This county early in July had one of the finest crops witnessed here in years, it was said, with promises of at least a 70 per cent normal crop. The continued excessive temperature prevailing for almost five weeks, with recent epidemics of worms in the irrigated section, has caused much premature opening of bolls and the loss of many plants, it was reported.

Estimates given Tuesday placed Wichita county's probable production at between 15,000 and 17,000 bales, as against more than 21,000 bales in 1928, when the crop generally was a month later than that of this year. Buyers in Henrietta predicted that not more than 12,000 bales will be gathered this year in Clay county, which produced about the same amount as Wichita county in 1928. Reports from Wilbarger county, it was said, anticipate a yield of about 40,000 bales. This would exceed last year's yield, for in 1928 much of the cotton around Vernon had to be planted the fourth time as a result of frequent windstorms, and the county harvested only about 32,000 bales. In 1927 Wilbarger county ginned more than 65,000 bales.

Little picking is being done thus far in the Wichita Falls area, and few of the gins are running, it was said.

Cabinet Crisis in Mexico Is Denied

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27. (AP)—Rumors of a cabinet crisis, which were prevalent here, have been denied by Felipe Canales, acting secretary of the interior, who declared that the only secretary likely to retire in the near future is Marte R. Gomez, who holds the agriculture portfolio.

Gomez, it was explained, is considering abandoning his job in the cabinet temporarily to resume his seat in the chamber of deputies for the purpose of defending the projected national labor law, up for discussion at the session opening Sept. 1.

General Joaquin Amaro, secretary of war, has returned from Coahuila, where he spent a two weeks' vacation, and Dr. Puig Casaurano, chief of the federal district government, is back from a trip to Los Angeles, Calif.

Simultaneously with Canales' denial of the likelihood of a cabinet crisis the federal district military authorities announced that persons caught spreading alarmist rumors would be arrested and severely punished.

Sprint Blamed for Speed Plane Crash

BOSTON, Aug. 27. (INS)—The sudden burst of speed to more than 180 miles per hour in an effort to cut down the time at the finish line, this afternoon was believed to have been the reason for the weakening of the ailerons of the Cessna monoplane which crashed at the East Boston airport with the loss of two lives, and serious injury of a woman.

D. J. Devereaux of New York, flying for the Curtiss Air service, was instantly killed, as was E. J. Reis, of the Kendall Oil company, of Ohio. Mrs. Devereaux was perhaps fatally injured.

J. L. McGrady, employed also by the Curtiss service, whose Cessna plane was disqualified by judges because of the collapse of the ailerons, stated he believed the high speed of Devereaux's Cessna plane caused the two ailerons to tear off.

A turkey hen owned by W. J. Patterson of Sullivan, Ind., laid 63 eggs in one season, three times the average production.

BOY KILLS MAN OVER GIRL

Bickering Results in Fatal Shotgun Shooting

UNION, Mo., Aug. 27. (INS)—A 16-year-old boy was held in this little Ozark town today after killing a man in what police believe was a row over a girl.

The bickering between the two which had been proceeding for several days culminated tragically at the railroad station at Pacific, Mo., near here last night when Chester Lynch shot Lafe Jett with a shotgun, according to Will Rowden, an eye witness.

Lynch, after being arrested at the home of his father, refused to disclose the reason for the shooting.

It was learned by the authorities however that Lynch and Jett quarreled after the older youth had criticized Lynch for snapping a handkerchief at the back of a local school girl.

Third, furniture merchants hold advance sales of new Fall creations to attract the better class of buyers, and those people who have completed their new home during the summer season.

Fourth, the June bride and bridegroom return from their honeymoon and immediately make preparations to settle in their new home—naturally they need furniture and the necessities for housekeeping. So there IS NO SUMMER SLUMP in the furniture business. And the dealer who announces seasonable offers through the Classified advertising columns of this newspaper secures the business from this newspaper's readers. # BUTLER TO GO TO TRIAL HERE

Wichita Officials Expect Return of Prisoner

Hugh Butler, held on murder charges in Hill county, and wanted here and in Dallas on burglary and robbery counts, will probably be brought back to Wichita county in time for his trial on Sept. 9, Sam Spence, district attorney, announced Tuesday. Butler is under two indictments charging burglary and robbery in connection with the loss of $700 from the Silver's store here last June.

The defendant was re-arrested in Dallas after he made bond here last July. A few weeks later he escaped the Dallas county jail and his recapture was announced by Hill county officials Monday. He is charged with murder in Hillsboro in connection with the shooting of two men at the Groesbeck fair in 1927. Butler has been acquitted on one of the charges and his trial on the second is pending, Hill county officials explained.

Wichita county officials who aided materially in locating Butler at Shamrock, Texas, after the jail break, believe the prisoner will be transferred here soon. Hub Stanley, indicted on the same charges in connection with the Silver store robbery, is also to be tried during the week of Sept. 9.

"I Will Praise It As Long as I Live"

Iowa Park Woman Advised by Relatives to Take Orgatone Gains Daily

"My brother-in-law never did me a greater kindness than when he gave me a bottle of Orgatone, for now my troubles are all gone and I am feeling like a different woman," said Mrs. M. A. Whitaker, residing near Iowa Park, Texas, who is the wife of a well known farmer.

"I was troubled for about six months with a disordered stomach and was in such a low-spirited, run-down condition my life was made miserable," she continued. "I had no appetite and what I did eat caused me more harm instead of nourishing and doing me good. I was so nervous and had severe headaches, so bad I never rested well and would wake up in the morning all tired and worn-out and hardly able to get up.

"When my brother-in-law told me about the good Orgatone had done him and gave me a bottle, I decided to try it. Before I had finished my first bottle I felt like a different person, and my troubles began leaving me. I will praise Orgatone every day just as long as I live and I am telling all my friends about it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy, but a new scientific preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison Drug store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

Another little candle of hope now throws its gleam through a knotty cinema world. It now appears that Edward Everett Horton, whose scintillating performances in short talking-film comedies have enriched recent local programs, is to contribute indirectly to major sound-picture productions. In this fashion:

◇ ◇ ◇

Lois Wilson is credited with admitting that with the last few silent films in which she starred, there was a noticeable diminution in the popularity which she formerly had enjoyed. Miss Wilson attributed the change of heart largely to the productions in which she had been cast—an opinion in which the movie public probably will concur. Seeing a new field opening through "sound photography," Lois made an early morning call at the home of Edward Everett Horton. The result was an arrangement whereby Lois played opposite Mr. Horton in short comedies on the speaking stage for a considerable period. Reports from Hollywood now indicate that she is in demand for stellar talking roles.

◇ ◇ ◇

If Miss Wilson's engagements with Mr. Horton enabled her to absorb even a small part of his histrionic proficiency, and to talk before a recording microphone as though she had heard her voice somewhere before, a calling of extensive possibilities has been opened to Mr. Horton. Talking picture performances during the first year of really regular production have supplied a respectably long list of names whose owners could profitably register at once in Mr. Horton's school.

◇ ◇ ◇

Second to Alice White, none among those who have appeared here in recent months can lay better claim to top position in that list than Rod LaRocque—and Miss White's margin was by a very small nose. Rod's lines in "Man and the Moment" are nothing less than cruel betrayal of the late Eleanor Glyn. The burning, frenzied ardor of love words as prepared in Miss Glyn's crucible gave way in Rod's bewilderment to a monotonous intonation almost identical with that used by Jean Arthur at the Majestic while spooking about under Dr. Fu Manchu's hypnotic spell. Those who have tried the old stunt of rubbing the scalplock and patting the belt-buckle at one and the same time know just how Rod felt and acted when commanded to talk and act simultaneously.

◇ ◇ ◇

Professor Horton's class probably will include Richard Dix, too, for while Richard's voice appears to have a very nice recording quality, in "Wheel of Life" he seemed sorely taxed to remember just where those bothersome mikes were hung. Position first, speech afterwards, regardless of continuity. Among the ladies, put down Billie Dove herself, and Mary Brian. "Billie, take it easy," Mr. Horton will say. "And get that throaty sob out of your voice." Mary will be assured that the microphone is not a police sergeant, and that smiles are quite permissible while before the camera.

◇ ◇ ◇

The old western two-reeler is coming back—at least once. The two-gun gold diggers of Red Gulch and Devil's canyon who featured the big weekly attraction at the old nickel show are to be burlesqued in an all-talking version of "Faro Nell." Louise Fazenda has been chosen for the title role. Hardened bartenders in the "Last Chance" saloon will wipe furtive tears from their sandy moustaches as the hero feels the rope tighten about his neck—but Nell, the true-hearted child of nature, will come galloping through the sagebrush just in the nick of time with salvation.

No Bride Workers

LONDON—The association of ex-civil servants is against a recent proposal to allow typists and women officials remain in their positions after they are married. "Marriage," the association says, "in the majority of cases implies future parenthood and it is better for a married woman and for her employers that she is untrammelled by the exigencies of office attendance.

Fireworks which will include a specialty called "Night in Holland" have been provided for the night performance. Various circus attractions and a 20-voice minstrel also will be included in the day's features.

Miss Co-ed, with a $100 prize offered to the first person identifying her, has not yet been apprehended. If not found by Labor day, she will be introduced from the stage at Lakeside park that night, it was announced, given a five-minute start, the award going to the first captor of the young woman. The finder must be carrying a copy of The Record News or Daily Times, it was announced.

Man Jailed Here On Charge of Forgery

Charges of forgery and of car theft, growing out of an alleged transaction with the City garage at Iowa Park are pending here against Marvin Monroe, transferred here after a forgery conviction at Paducah, according to information given Tuesday by Sheriff W. G. Bralley.

According to the complaint on file against Monroe he is accused of having given a forged check to the garage company for an automobile which he drove away and later sold, the sheriff said.

Monroe was given two two-year sentences by juries in the Paducah courts last week, the sentences to run concurrently, Mr. Bralley was informed.

DAMAGE SUIT SEEKS $3,581

Auto "Side-Swiped," Petition Here Claims

Damages aggregating $3,581 are sought in a suit filed Tuesday afternoon by K. A. Knowles against Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hall in connection with an automobile accident on the Electra highway last July.

The petition filed with Miss Eunice Jackson, district clerk, Tuesday afternoon describes an alleged collision between the automobile which Mr. Knowles was driving and a machine operated by Mrs. Hall on July 25. The plaintiff alleges that his arm was broken when the car in which he was returning from his work in an Electra oil field was "side-swiped" by the Hall car.

Entertainment for the program will consist of vocal solos by Ted Williams, baritone, and novelty songs and dances by Misses Lonita Smith and Katherine Keller.

Stolen Autos Returned To Wichita Owners

Recovery of two automobiles recently stolen from Wichita county was announced Tuesday afternoon by Sheriff W. G. Bralley. A sport model Dodge touring car, rented from the Yellow Cab company and driven out of the district last week, has been found at Big Spring, Texas, Mr. Bralley said, and a Pontiac coupe belonging to W. F. Matthews, manager of the City garage at Iowa Park, has been discovered in Mansfield, La. Both machines had been abandoned, the sheriff was told.
