But, It's My Jail !

Obscene Phone Calls on Rise

By GAIL FIELDS
Staff Writer

There is more to an obscene phone call than just heavy breathing, and recently Hereford Police have been receiving a more than an usual amount of such calls. The Texas Penal Code defines an annoyance or harassing call as one which a person intentionally communicates over the phone in vulgar or obscene language, or makes anonymous calls at an unreasonable hour or in a repetitious manner. Hereford Police further classify these calls.

A call is obscene if the caller uses profane, or obscene language. Detective Sergeant Vernon Hope said that most often an obscene caller doesn't know who he is calling. Chances are, he just picked up the phone and dialed some numbers. "The majority of obscene phone calls are male, and not surprisingly, the majority of the recipients of these calls are female," Hope said.

A harassing caller either hangs up the phone as soon as someone on the other end answers, or lets the person on the other end listen to silence.

Hope said that eight out of 10 times, a person making a harassing phone call is not pleased with the person he is calling; he knows the person and he wants to harass him.

A threatening phone call is just that: a person threatens another over the phone.

Hope said that persons making harassing phone calls can be anyone, and although most are male, Hope has come across a few female

Internal Strife Shakes Country

Bangladesh President Killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President Ziaur Rahman of Bangladesh, a war hero who came to power in a series of coups, was killed early this morning in the port city of Chittagong by assailants described only as "miscreants," Bangladesh Radio said.

Vice President Abdus Sattar, who is also chief justice of the supreme court, took control of the government and placed the impoverished Asian nation under an "internal emergency," suspending all civil rights. Sattar said in an official broadcast the country's security "has been shaken by internal disturbances." He did not elaborate.

The government-controlled radio, in broadcasts monitored here, provided no details of President Zia's death beyond Sattar's statement that he had been "killed at the hands of miscreants." It warned the population of 90 million not to listen to rumors and to stay tuned to the Dacca station for "correct and authentic news."

The radio said soldiers were deployed in Dacca and elsewhere to guard vital installations, but mentioned no acts of violence.

Sattar appealed for calm, announced a 40-day period of national mourning and promised a full investigation of Zia's death.

Radio Bangladesh said the 45-year-old Zia — remembered as the man who read the nation's declaration of independence from Pakistan over the radio in 1971 — died sometime after 4:30 a.m. local time, or 7:30 p.m. Friday EDT. He was visiting Chittagong, a port city on the Bay of Bengal some 120 miles southeast of the capital, Dacca.

The Bangladesh Embassy in New Delhi said it had

County Wheat Harvest Down

Wheat harvest in Deaf Smith County should begin in the next two or three weeks but due to dry weather, only about 50 percent, or 70,000 of the 150,000 acres of dryland wheat will be harvested according to ASCS Director John Fuston.

However, the irrigated wheat harvest doesn't look near as bleak as Fuston estimated that 95,000 of the 100,000 acres of that crop will be harvested.

Fuston estimated that corn planting is at about 95 percent, and should be completed by June 10. Milo planting was estimated by Fuston to be about 60 percent underway and should be complete by June 20.

Hot, high winds have hindered the milo crop somewhat. Cotton is looking good with about 90 percent of the planting finished. Fuston said that the area vegetable and sugar beet crop also are looking good.

Demos Want Reagan To Meet Them Halfway

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic leadership will compromise with President Reagan on tax cuts, but the president needs to try to meet them halfway, House Majority Leader Jim Wright says.

After demanding on a 30 percent tax cut applied across the board over three years, the White House indicated it would accept a 25 percent cut suggested by Republicans and conservative Democrats.

"Obviously 25 percent is not halfway. It's one-sixth of the way, exactly," Wright said Friday in a news conference.

It had appeared a compromise along those lines was approaching, but the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee shot down those hopes Thursday by labeling them unacceptable.

"I haven't yet completely given up on achieving a mutually acceptable compromise," the Fort Worth Democrat said. "Things don't look all that rosy, but we are going to try."

Wright said House Democrats might go along with a two-year tax cut if the White House will adjust the cuts to give greater benefit to the middle and lower income families instead of giving equal percentage cuts to the wealthy.

But Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, said after a meeting at the White House Friday he is pessimistic about agreement along those lines.

If the percentage is tilted toward the less affluent, the White House will insist on a three-year package, Hance said. Or it will accept a two-year tax cut with taxes cut across the board.

"Both sides are going to have to give up something, but the White House is not going to give up both," Hance said. "I think there's an outside chance of a compromise, but it's going to be tough."

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, were picked up by the same Treasury Department vehicle and driven with Hance to the White House Friday morning.

Stenholm said after the meeting that "no deals were cut or agreements of any kind made. Personally, I still feel, the ingredients for a bipartisan tax proposal are there," he said.

Gramm warned, however, that if the House leadership is unwilling to compromise, conservative Democrats are ready to build another coalition with Republicans behind a three-year tax cut. "We may well come to that," he said.

House liberals are preventing the leadership from compromising, Gramm said, suggesting that the issue is not really the tax cut. Liberals want to spend the money rather than let the people spend it, he said.

Hance, who has sought to stay within the party on the tax cut issue, preferred not to discuss the prospects for another coalition involving Republicans and the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum, which Stenholm heads.

"That's just speculation, something that could happen," Hance said.

Hance told me the White House asked them if they thought there was any possibility of achieving a compromise. They encouraged (the White House) to keep trying," Wright said.

"That and the fact the president asked me to meet with him Monday makes me feel it is not a forlorn hope. To do that, the Democrats are going to have to give to the point of accepting some form of multi-year cut," he said.

Asked if his party could win a floor vote in which conser-

Coal Settlement Still Uncertain

By The Associated Press

The tentative soft-coal industry accord which could bring an end to the nationwide strike by some 160,000 United Mine Workers faces an uncertain fate as it heads to the coalfields.

"I'm glad we have an agreement, though I don't know just what it is yet," said Maynard Daniel, secretary-treasurer of Charleston, W.Va.-based District 17, the UMW's largest local. "I just hope it's something the members can live and work under."

Rank and file miners rejected a pact the UMW leadership brought home in March. The strike went on and entered its 65th day today.

International Executive Board member Vernon Massey of District 17, who opposed the last agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, said he is pleased with the new pact.

"It's a lot better than people are saying. It's a decent agreement for our people," he said.

Miners turned down the last contract proposal by more than a 2-1 margin March 31, despite the high praise it received from many union leaders, including President Sam Church, who

Hereford Receives .51 Inches of Rain

The city of Hereford received .51 inches of rain over the past 24 hours, more than the total which had fallen here the first 28 days of the month.

The half-inch of precipitation raised the May total to .94 inches officially. Friday night's "deluge" was preceded by a light shower Thursday which produced .13 inches locally.

Other reports from within Deaf Smith County showed higher totals. The Bud Paetzold place Southeast of town recorded .90 inches of rain, while other reports showed an average of some .30 inches falling during the night.

The forecast called for about a 30 percent chance of more showers in the area Saturday with a clearing trend expected today. The high today was expected to be near 80 degrees.

Scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms were forecast for Monday, with warm temperatures in the Northern Panhandle and hotter conditions to the south.

In other parts of the Lone Star State, unrelenting rains

Raisin' A Ruckus On Stage Tonight

The Hereford Lions Club will present the South Plains College road show, "Raisin' A Ruckus," beginning at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Whiteface Stadium. Proceeds from the show, which is in its fifth year, will go to help rebuild a dormitory destroyed by fire at the Whiteface campus of Gristown, U.S.A. a few weeks ago.

Tickets for the show are priced at $3 each with children six and under admitted free. Tickets will be available at the gate prior to the show.

"Raisin' A Ruckus" is a 90-minute extravaganza featuring nearly 50 current and classic country music hits. "We'll feature the Grand Ol' Opry and its earliest stars in the first half, plus country music in the movies," noted show director Helen Roberts, SPC professor of speech and drama. "In the second half we'll focus on country music superstars like Eddie Rabbit and Barbara Mandrell, and Texas superstars like Willie Nelson."

"The show has so much energy," noted show fiddler Ed Marsh, an instructor in SPC's

The annual Mid-Plains Pioneer Day Celebration was being held Saturday, and we join others in welcoming former residents back to the city for a visit. The event provides an opportunity for friends and acquaintances of earlier years to get together and talk about "the good old days."

Plans for Hereford's big Town & Country Celebration are rolling along, with a variety of events scheduled for the August observance.

The latest project, handled by the Rotary Club, is to serve as a police force for the Brothers of the Brush. Rotarians will be selling shaving permits, starting Monday, and clean-shaven men will risk an hour's jail time if they don't have a permit.

Harold Hudson, publisher of The Perryton Herald, had some thought-provoking ideas about the plight of the farm and ranch economy in his column this week.

"Over the holiday weekend," wrote Hudson, "we had to make some sandwiches at our house and we used whole wheat bread. We were impressed when Jane told us that the whole wheat bread now costs $1.49 per loaf. This same loaf of

Four Wounded In Shootout

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials were trying today to sort out the details of an apartment complex shootout that left four people wounded, including a Harris County deputy constable.

Police said one man apparently began chasing another with a gun after an argument about money.

They said Deputy Constable Patrick Lennon, 24, tried to intervene and the shootout began. Lennon was off-duty and apparently was working as a security guard at the complex.

Lennon was hospitalized with a head wound. He was first listed in stable but critical condition, but later was taken off the critical list.

A 28-year-old suspect was in fair condition after seeking treatment at Parkway Hospital. No charges have been filed.

Hal Norwood, a 41-year-old bystander, was in critical condition at Ben Taub Hospital with gunshot wounds in the chest and leg. The other bystander, Maurice King, was treated at the scene for a gunshot wound in the leg.

Police said both were apparently caught in crossfire.

Laser Weapon

Prototype Tested

WASHINGTON (AP) — While a practical laser weapon which could revolutionize warfare is years away, the Air Force will try, possibly this weekend, to destroy an air-to-air missile with a beam of light.

Pentagon sources said the killer beam will be aimed from a modified KC-135 plane, which the Air Force calls an Airborne Laser Laboratory, at a fast missile released by another aircraft at the Naval Weapons Center at China Lake, Calif.

The upcoming test, reflecting advancing development, would be the first from an air platform against a very fast air-to-air missile, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The Air Force has conducted previous high-intensity laser device tests from the ground and in 1973 shot down a winged drone at Kirtland Air Force Base, N.M.

Research looking toward possible laser weapons has been under way since the early 1960s in both the United States and the Soviet Union. Since light travels at 186,000 miles a second, a laser beam can strike a target almost instantaneously without any necessity to lead it.

Last January, then-Air Force Secretary Hans Mark witnessed the first test of a full-power laser aboard the laboratory jet on the ground. "We can now think about shooting down the other fellow's missiles without using nuclear warheads," he said.

Technicians had hoped to conduct the airborne test this week, but weather conditions have not been just right for it, officials said.

'Scalping' Bill

Takes Effect Sept. 1

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ticket "scalping" would become illegal Sept. 1 if the Texas House approves an amended bill passed Friday by the Senate.

Scalping is the practice of buying tickets to sporting or entertainment events and reselling them for a profit.

A law that existed from 1941 to 1975 allowed people who were licensed to scalp tickets, but that law was repealed.

The Senate proposal would prohibit anyone from buying, selling or offering to buy or sell a ticket to an amateur athletic event for more than its printed price. Violators could be fined $1,000 and sentenced to 180 days in jail.

Another provision would make it a crime to sell or offer to sell a ticket to a professional event if the sale is within 1,000 yards of the event or ticket office and the price is more than $3 over face value.

A first offense could be punished by a fine of up to $200, and repeat offenders could be fined $1,000 and sentenced to 180 days in jail.

ap-dn-05-30-81 0710cdt j075hn PM-Head Shops,239

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has approved and sent to the governor a "head shop" bill that would make it a crime to possess or sell drug paraphernalia.

The bill cleared the Senate on voice vote without debate Friday and was sent to Gov. Bill Clements.

The bill was originated by H. Ross Perot's Texas War on Drugs Committee, which Clements appointed. The governor had included the proposal in his anti-crime legislative program.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, said the bill was aimed at stores that sell items that "entice people into the drug culture."

It would provide fines of up to $200 on first offense and up to a $1,000 fine and 180 days in jail on subsequent offenses for possessing drug paraphernalia.

West Texas: Considerable cloudiness today with a chance of thunderstorms most sections. Locally heavy rain possibly producing flash flooding east portions today. Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday. A chance of thunderstorms mainly central and south portions tonight. Warmer most sections Sunday. Highs today mid 70s Panhandle to near 103 Big Bend. Lows tonight low 50s Panhandle to near 70 extreme south. Highs Sunday near 80 Panhandle to near 103 Big Bend.

Coal

stumped the coalfields seeking endorsements.

Ratification usually takes about 10 days, and Church said he expects a vote on the new pact by a week from today, and he has scheduled another whirlwind six-day tour through the Eastern coalfields, beginning Sunday.

"It's too early to be celebrating yet," said Jerry Miller of Fairmont, W. Va.-based District 31.

"When they went to bed last night there was no contract," he said Friday. "Then they wake up and here's an agreement. They just want to wait and see what it says."

The accord was reached in Washington early Friday after intense bargaining between Church and his team and the BCOA, led by Bobby Brown, president of the Consolidation Coal Co.

Don Leonhardt, local president of Indiana-based District 11, said, "Wonderful! Wonderful!" when he heard of the new accord and said, "at least we'll have something to vote on; that's more than we've had for two months."

Union negotiators block one of the key stumbling blocks during the contract talks was the industry proposal to remove a $1.90-a-ton royalty on non-union coal purchased and processed at union mines. Church said the new agreement raises the royalty to $2.23 a ton.

"We had to have that royalty," said Local 2261 President Harlan Hall in Virginia. The money goes into the union's health and retirement fund.

obscene callers in his 13 years in law enforcement.

Hope said that neither he nor the callers themselves really knew why they made the calls, but he did offer some suggestions for handling the calls.

"The best way to handle a harassing phone call is to slam the phone down," he said. "This should inform the caller that no one wants to talk to him. Above all, don't talk to the caller; that's what he wants. Also, a good listener is good encouragement to an obscene phone caller. He might even decide to pay the person who listens a visit."

Hope said all harassing calls should be reported to the police. If a person receives at least three calls, the Police Department works with the phone company and installs a polarity trap on the phone. If at least three more calls are made to the phone with the trap, the caller can be located. Once located, a caller is not treated lightly by authorities. Harassing phone calls are a crime and those guilty of making the calls are subject to a fine not to exceed $1,000 and/or a jail term not to exceed 180 days.

country-bluegrass music degree program. "We open up at top speed and continue the pace throughout the entire show."

"It's kinda like tuning into some of the most popular hits playing on the radio today. Country music has gotten so big in the past two years, with the release of the movie 'Urban Cowboy,' that it's not difficult to pick out enough top songs to fill a two-hour show," he continued.

An album-length tape of selected songs from the show will also be on sale during the performance. Recording of the music was done in SPC's own professional recording studio.

Mike Kerr, of Hereford, is among the featured performers in the show this year. Kerr will perform vocal selections as well as play the guitar during the show. The show also features 11 other seasoned performers.

and thunderstorms dumped gallons of water. Several roads were immersed, with some electricity knocked out and funnel clouds appearing.

The storms blitzed West and South Central Texas, peppering the air with golfball-sized hail and whipping up funnel clouds.

Heavy rains prompted flash flood warnings across the thunderstorm band, showering Haskell with 1.75 inches in a span of just 30 minutes, putting several roads near Dumas under water and closing some streets in San Angelo.

A tornado touched down near San Angelo and another was reported near Dalhart, according to the National Weather Service.

Temperatures ranged from the upper 50s in the Panhandle to the upper 70s along the Gulf Coast. The morning temperature extremes were 56 degrees at Dalhart and 79 at Brownsville.

Crewman: USS Nimitz Fire Equipment Faulty

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — As the USS Nimitz prepared to sail on the midday tide, a crewman complained that the jet crash and fire that killed 14 aboard the aircraft carrier would have left fewer men dead if fire equipment had worked.

Two investigations of the crash, which injured 48, were under way.

The $2 billion nuclear carrier came home to Norfolk on Thursday with a grim cargo — seven mangled jets and the bodies of 13 of the dead. One body has not been recovered.

But the ship itself showed little evidence of the crash of the Marine EA-6B that rammed through rows of parked planes and set off explosive fires.

Andy Pickens, a 21-year-old boatswain's mate who helped fight the fire, said a sprinkler system on the flight deck barely worked. He said a firefighting vehicle he drove into the blaze balked, its hoses jammed and the vehicle finally stopped completely.

"If everything would have worked right, we would have had half the casualties and injuries," Pickens said Friday. "We would have had the fire out in no time."

"If everything worked as perfectly as the Navy said it did, I wouldn't have had friends now," Pickens, a Charlotte, N.C. native stationed on the Nimitz for 3½ years, said in an interview with the Charlotte Observer.

With 60 days left in the Navy, Pickens said he decided to tell his story "because people need to know exactly what happened there."

Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Tom Connor of the Air Atlantic Fleet said in Norfolk he could neither confirm nor deny Pickens' account of the fire because the matter is under investigation. He said no official information would be released for several months.

Around the Christian city of Zahle in eastern Lebanon — where fighting between Syrian troops and Phalangist militias led to a Syrian-Israeli confrontation and the threat of a new full-scale war — fresh artillery and rocket duels were reported Friday night. There were no immediate accounts of casualties.

In Beirut, police reported four civilians killed and 40 wounded Friday in an eight-hour exchange of gunfire across the Green Line dividing the capital in to Muslim and Christian sectors.

The text of Arafat's remarks was prepared and delivered to reporters by the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist organization which is one of eight groups that make up the PLO.

The front's leader, Nayef Hawatneh, said the guerrillas would cut off Mideast oil supplies to the West if Israel tries to wipe out the Palestinian forces in Lebanon.

"The Mideast oil wells will go up in flames," Hawatneh said. "This is not a hollow threat."

Briscoe Plans Taking Campaign Contributions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe has taken a step that allows him to start taking contributions for a 1982 campaign if he decides to attempt a political comeback.

Briscoe filed a one-page form with the Texas secretary of state earlier this month designating a campaign treasurer — himself.

Under Texas law, a politician may not raise or spend money until he or she has designated a campaign treasurer.

Jess Hay, a long-time Briscoe campaigner and fund-raiser, said Friday he believed the former governor filed the papers in "an abundance of caution" since Briscoe might spend money to "explore the possibilities" of running for office.

"As he has indicated before, should an opportunity present itself, he would be interested in further public service," Hay said in a telephone interview.

Briscoe himself could not be reached immediately for comment. A secretary at his Uvalde ranch said he was out of state.

Hay said the only office

The skipper, Capt. Jack Batzler, said he had been worried about the ship's No. 2 catapult — the device that flings planes off the deck to achieve takeoff speed. But Navy officials said Friday it seemed to be working well enough to allow the ship to depart as scheduled.

The pilot of the crashed jet was Marine 1st Lt. Steve E. White, a 27-year-old Houston native married to an Air Force captain. He recently was selected for promotion to captain, and the Marine Corps put the promotion through immediately after his death.

The wreckage of the EA-6B Prowler and three F-14 Tomcats was pushed over the side, and seven other planes were taken off the ship for repairs after the return home. Nine other planes sustained minor damage.

Briscoe was considering "for the moment" was governor.

Chairman Bob Slagle of the Texas Democratic Party said "it wouldn't shock me" to see Briscoe run for the party's nomination for governor in 1982.

Slagle said he understood that Briscoe filed the campaign treasurer designation because he was "going to spend some money to see what the possibilities of running were. It would be preliminary work to see about the viability of his candidacy. He and his advisors felt if they didn't file the designation, he might be in violation of the law."

Briscoe was defeated in the 1978 Democratic primary by former Attorney General John Hill, who lost the general election to Gov. Bill Clements.

A number of Briscoe advisers and campaigners joined the Clements campaign after Briscoe's defeat in the primary, and some remain either on the governor's staff or in his political organization. Clements recently appointed Briscoe's wife, Janey, to the University of Texas Board of Regents, a coveted position.

Slagle said that despite those connections, he would not be too surprised to see Briscoe run for governor.

"He really doesn't like Republicans. He thinks Democrats should be more conservative but he has no use for Republicans," Slagle said.

For two years after his defeat by Hill, Briscoe made few public appearances. In recent weeks, however, he was the principal speaker at a governor-for-a-day ceremonies for Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, and stood up in the House chamber for Speaker's Day festivities honoring Bill Clayton.

Bodies of Servicemen To Be Identified

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-man U.S. team is in Hanoi discussing the technical aspects of identifying bodies of possible U.S. servicemen found in areas where there was fighting during the Vietnam war, the State Department says.

State Department spokesman David Passage discussed, but could not confirm, reports Friday that the Vietnamese government has turned over the bodies of three U.S. servicemen to the American team.

"We have seen the reports but we can't confirm them," said Maj. Andrew Coffey, media officer for the U.S. Pacific Command in Honolulu. "Our people are still there. They're due to leave Hanoi sometime today."

The U.S. team is headed by Lt. Col. Joe Harvey, assigned to the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hawaii. The two other members of the group were said to be a civilian official and a military officer, both from the U.S. embassy in Bangkok.

It is the second time since 1977 that a such U.S. team had been admitted to North Vietnam. Pentagon officials said. The Defense Department says 2,528 Americans are unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, including 1,237 listed as missing in action.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor, I would like to express my appreciation to all the parents of seniors who worked to help make our senior prom and all-night party the great success they both were.

It was a real pleasure to work with such a great group of people, and the end of the year activities were just super because of the many hours given by so many people.

Let me take this opportunity to say a big thank you to all the seniors and their guests who attended the prom and all-night party. They are a great group of young people, and we as parents should be proud of the way all those who attended conducted themselves.

It was a real joy to me to see once again that our young people are a great, great group; criticized by many, complimented by few.

Seniors, please accept my congratulations. I think you're great.

Arnold Schwarzenegger has won more bodybuilding titles than anyone else in the world. He is the author of ARNOLD: THE EDUCATION OF A BODYBUILDER and ARNOLD'S BODYSHAPING FOR WOMEN, both national best sellers. Schwarzenegger's latest book entitled, ARNOLD'S BODYBUILDING

FOR MEN, shows you how to get into the best physical shape of your life through the most effective conditioning program ever developed.

Arnold shows why weight-resistance training is the single most effective way not only to get into the best physical shape possible, but to reshape the body and maintain muscle tone. He also describes all the equipment needed to embark on a serious weight-training program.

ARNOLD'S BODYBUILDING FOR MEN will not help you build a condition your body for maximum strength and health—it can help you win at life too. Stephen King's stunning success as a novelist just may be unrivaled in publishing history. Other writers in their early twenties have been acclaimed, but few have reached sales figures of over 25 million books a decade later, and none save King has staked such a solid claim as undisputed master of a very special literary genre—the horror story.

DANSE MACABRE is his analysis of horror—"as a moving, rhythmic search ... for ... the place where we live at our most primitive level." Also, King in DANSE MACABRE establishes a dialogue with the thousands of fans who've wondered about his strange control over a basically uncontrollable emotion. How can he do it? DANSE MACABRE is a unique collection of a colloquium, autobiography, and critical evaluation of films, TV programs, and books which shaped his career and perhaps altered the tastes of readers the world over.

Other new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library are XPD by Len Deighton, FAMILY AFFAIR by the grand master of mystery and suspense, Mignon G. Eberhart, and THE PRITIKIN PERMANENT WEIGHT-LOSS MANUEL by Nathan Pritikin, the man who revolutionized America's eating habits.

The Newspaper BIBLE

HE EVEN ATE WITH THE PIGS!

To illustrate His point, Jesus told this story: "A man had two sons. When the younger told his father, 'I want my share of your estate now, instead of waiting until you die!' his father agreed to divide his wealth between his sons."

"A few days later this younger son packed all his belongings and took a trip to a distant land, and there wasted all his money on parties and prostitutes."

"About the time his money was gone a great famine swept over the land, and he began to starve. He persuaded a local farmer to hire him to feed his pigs. The boy became so hungry that even the pods he was feeding the swine looked good to him. And no one gave him anything."

"When he finally came to his senses, he said to himself, 'At home even the hired men have food enough and to spare, and here I am, dying of hunger! I will go home to my father and say, "Father, I have sinned against both heaven and you, and am no longer worthy of being called your son. Please take me on as a hired man."'"

"So he returned home to his father. And while he was still a long distance away, his father saw him coming, and was filled with loving pity and ran and embraced him and kissed him."

"His son said to him, 'Father, I have sinned against heaven and you, and am not worthy of being called your son.'"

"But his father said to the slaves, 'Quick! Bring the finest robe in the house and put it on him. And a jeweled ring for his finger, and shoes! And kill the calf we have in the fattening pen. We must celebrate with a feast, for this son of mine was dead and has returned to life. He was lost and is found. So the party began.'"

Boys Are...

With high school graduation just behind us and with two boys heading the honor graduates, we thought it might be an appropriate time to pass along an article we clipped from Bill Howe's column in The Shamrock Texan:

"After a male baby has grown out of long clothes and triangles and has acquired pants, freckles, and so much dirt that relatives do not dare to kiss it between meals, it becomes a BOY. A boy is nature's answer to that false belief that there is no such thing as perpetual motion. A boy can swim like a fish, run like a deer, climb like a squirrel, balk like a mule, bellow like a jackass, according to climactic conditions.

"He is a piece of skin stretched over an appetite. A noise covered with smudges. He is called a tornado because he comes at the most unexpected times, hits most unexpected places, and leaves everything a wreck behind him. He is a growing animal of superlative promise, to be fed, watered, and kept warm; a joy forever, a periodic nuisance, the problem of our times, the hopes of a nation. Every boy born is evidence that God is not discouraged with man."

"Were it not for boys, the newspapers would go bankrupt. Boys are useful in running errands. A boy can easily do the family errands with the aid of five or six adults. The zest with which a boy does an errand is equaled only by the speed of a turtle on a July day."

"The boy is a natural spectator. He watches parades, fires, ball games, automobiles, boats, and airplanes with equal fervor but will not watch the clock. The man who invents a clock that will stand on its head and sing a song when it strikes will win the undying gratitude of millions of families whose boys are forever coming to dinner about supper time."

"Boys faithfully imitate their dads in spite of all efforts to teach them good manners; a boy, if not washed too often, and if kept in a cool, quiet place after each accident, will survive broken bones, horns, swimming holes, fights, and nine helpings of pie."

Guest Editorial

Our Social Security

Newspaper contest judges make a big thing about editorial writers sticking to local subjects and tend to grade down any editorial that has an opinion about things beyond the county line.

But Social Security and its problems are local and deserve some attention by everybody with a stake in it, and that includes just about everybody.

President Reagan has come out with a set of proposals to salvage Social Security from bankruptcy and yet you would think he has suggested bayoneting the old folks.

The Senate voted 96-0 a resolution guaranteeing that no American who retires at 62 will have his benefits cut. The Senate, and the House as well, is in a turmoil about any suggestions of trimming some of the cost of Social Security and cutting back on its benefits.

Nobody in public office, least of all the President, wants to court political suicide by mistreating the people drawing Social Security. Yet it is agreed by Republicans and Democrats alike, and by all of the assembled experts in finance from the entire nation that Social Security faces a very real prospect of not having enough money to pay its claims by 1983 unless something is done about it.

While politicians have been broadening the Social Security benefits faster than taxpayers can refuel its bank account, nobody wants to take the responsibility for cutting back so that bankruptcy can be avoided.

A coalition of Democrats and Republicans have come up with a plan that is more or less painless. This plan would encourage workers to stay on the job longer by reducing early retirement benefits but it would postpone these cuts for at least 10 years. This presumably will give everybody time to think up a plan to get the money.

Another plan would strip out the money in the Medicare trust and spend it on Social Security general benefits.

Those advancing this plan say they will worry about the Medicare deficit later.

Another plan, and one that is likely to be adopted, would leave Social Security benefits as they are and take the deficit out of the general tax revenues. This way the average taxpayer won't be as aware of the tax bite and life can go on as usual.

Congress will likely take the easy way out and defer the inevitable day when the truth of fiscal responsibility must be faced.

We admire President Reagan for putting his proposal squarely up to Congress and the people. His proposals are not shattering, by any means, but surely the American people can stiffen their backbones and get by with a program that will insure that Social Security will remain alive. —The Perryton Herald

Horoscopes Redux

There is a lady in my town who was born on the same day and same year as I. Though she looks alot older than I, we are exactly the same age (see Editor's note). She is a sweet, happy thoughtful, considerate, beautiful and elegant lady.

There is a retired gentleman in my town who also shares the same birthday with me. He is kind, cultured, compassionate, considerate and gentle.

Now, I discover that the Pope also shares my birthdate. He is deeply religious, concerned, compassionate, intelligent and aware.

If all of this does not blow the horns off of the horoscopes, nothing will. If we all have basically the same signs, how come they are they and me is me? Maybe I am the exception that proves the rule.

Several years ago a friend decided to run my charts. This evidently involved much more than a casual reading of the newspaper. Detailed information about exact time and place of my birth had to be gathered. Deep study had to be made. When the chart was finished, there was great detail available but my friend would not explain very much of it.

I am a Taurus, the sign of the bull. I do not know whether that relates to my personality or my speaking. I have an Aquarius in some house. I do not know which house. I did not know I had a house. As best as I could find out, Aquarius in this house relates to mysticism.

I have a Scorpio moon. My friend would not tell me what this meant. She just raised her eyebrows and said, "You have a Scorpio moon, very interesting!" I got the idea that a Scorpio moon meant that I was not going to be a boy scout all of my life.

As best as I can figure from the chart, I was destined to be a mystical sex maniac. Now they tell me, after I am already a Baptist preacher.

Warm fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Legislating Morality Futile

My schedule requires that I retire before television's sex, violence and swear words come on.

Perhaps that's just as well. Highly impressionable as I am, a steady diet of such could not be constructive.

And cable TV means more of the same — for better or worse.

The other day I broadcast an obituary for a virile lion named Caesar. This mighty lion of the Winston, Oregon, Wildlife Safari had died at the age of 23 having left a potent legacy.

I mentioned Caesar's reputation for mating 150 times a week; for fathering more than 110 cubs.

Then gratuitously I added, "Caesar will also be remembered for his smile."

The number of people who were offended by that remark surprised me. The innuendo seemed so innocent by contemporary standards.

That, my critics, including my wife, explained, is precisely the point.

When traditional values are no longer held sacrosanct by anyone, then all of us become what Dr. Karl Menninger calls "smoking lamps" — where the smoke obscures the light.

He says clergymen must remain aloof to this erosion of absolutes. Perhaps we all must.

So now how are we going to respond to the intrusion of cable TV into our homes with their already demonstrated proclivity for pornography?

Cable TV has introduced

X-rated movies to the Bible Belt.

Already there are a half-dozen cable services that deal exclusively with hard-core material.

Cable operators in sections of the country where you would least expect an appetite for pornography report that the so-called "adult services" are attracting more customers than any other kind.

Local standards may keep "adult" movie theaters and bookstores off the street — and yet cable TV is allowing local people to circumvent local standards by inviting counterpart entertainment into their homes.

And in Utah, where they passed a state law barring "indecent" material from home television channels, a federal judge is preventing enforcement of that statute.

In Mesquite, Texas, religious leaders demanded dirty movies be put to a vote — and the dirty movies won, three-to-one.

Cable companies cite the ready availability of sexually explicit video cassettes and protest that restrictions on cable would be unfairly discriminatory.

Legislating morality always has been an exercise in futility.

Indeed, it can be argued that ideals are meant to be unattainable; that ideals serve best as a kind of moral alarm clock which goes off at the right time, whether we heed it or not.

It's My Turn

It's hard to believe that school is already out for the year. Local youngsters will now have about three months to enjoy their "freedom" before school begins again in August.

School being over made me remember some of my days spent during summer vacations as a youth while growing up in Oklahoma City.

The neighborhood lacked any organized activity, but there were plenty of other kids around to join my two brothers and I in keeping things hopping.

We lived near a railroad track, which passed over a large nearby creek, making it necessary for a trestle to be in place. Needless to say, when other activities lulled we could always find some action at the massive, pitch-covered bridge.

I remember one time we were taunting a snake that had surfaced in the creek near the trestle. We found a glass jar and decided to try and put the reptile in it, thinking it would be great for show and tell to the other kids.

After a steady showering of rocks and countless jabbing with sticks and other pointed objects, the snake finally succumbed enough to be coaxed into the jar. Of course, by that time it had been so terrorized that it died shortly thereafter.

It wasn't until later that we showed the snake to some "adults," who quickly let us know that a Water Moccasin wasn't an item to be messed with.

We're always hearing folks talk about the "good old days." Those lazy days spent listening to the locusts buzzing in the elm trees, and cool nights brightened with armies of fireflies, will always remain fond memories.

Let's hope our kids will look back on their yesterdays with such fondness.

Somehow I think they will.

Bootleg Philosopher

Designated State

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek tries to tackle a big problem this week.

Dear Editor:

As I understand it, the difference between a nuclear power plant and a fireplace is that ashes from the latter can be disposed of wherever it's handy without endangering future generation or blowing onto your neighbor's yard, but with nuclear waste it's a different matter.

You leave that stuff lying around and you may build up a world full of freaks who spend two-thirds of their money preparing to exterminate each other.

On the other hand, since nuclear bombs can't be invented and other countries now have them, I'm in favor of us having some too.

But the problem of nuclear waste still hovers over us and nobody has come up with a handy place to put it. It's like the M-X missiles. People argue we need those underground weapons but we need them in some other state, not Texas. You build the system in our state and it'll become the most bomb-worthy spot the Russians have their eye on and their guided missiles aimed at.

I have given this matter considerable thought. And this is no time for petty selfishness. Any of the 50 states has as much right as any other not to want the thing within its borders, and the matter calls for level-headed cooperation.

The answer is simple. We need a 51st state designed solely for storing nuclear waste, the M-X missile system, chemical waste, old pesticide cans, city garbage, etc.

I can hear somebody saying, "Yeah, but where are we going to put that new state?"

That's out of my province. I just think up the main solution and leave the details to others. It's like the Federal budget. Once you point out it needs cutting, it's up to somebody else to find out where. That's where that 51st state could come in handy. We could chop off aid to it.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Law of the Sea Treaty Leaves Us Nowhere

WASHINGTON — Throughout history, the world's oceans have provided man with an endless source of mystery, adventure and folklore — not to mention food, energy and other natural resources.

But the economic importance of the seas has never been greater than it is today, and as an exploding global population depletes known land-based resources, all nations will turn increasingly to ocean beds for essential mineral and energy supplies.

Recognizing the inevitable international rivalry which these vast underwater treasures have generated, 163 nations, including the United States, have engaged in almost eight years of multilateral negotiations. The result: A Law of the Sea Treaty, a 183-page document with over 300 provisions governing the health, navigation, fishing and mining of the ocean.

From the start, the professed intent of this herculean effort was to establish some international guidelines so that a resource — starved world can, in an orderly, secure fashion, tap this incredible potential in a way that benefits all the peoples of the world.

That's a laudable goal, but there's just one problem: as it is presently written, the treaty will not only fail to achieve those aims, but it runs counter to the economic and national security interests of the United States.

This was all but acknowledged by the Reagan administration when it ordered our negotiators at the latest round of treaty talks to express our government's "serious problems" with the final draft of the treaty, and to announce that the U.S. will conduct a thorough review of the document to determine how its inadequacies could be corrected.

This dramatic policy reversal made the treaty's advocates hopping mad. And in their anger, many critics decided it was time to blame the world's favorite whipping boy — business. The President's action, some charged, demonstrated that he was in the pocket of the mining industry.

Never mind that the treaty provides no incentives for the exploration and mining of deep seabeds which are teeming with rich deposits of critical minerals such as cobalt, copper, manganese, platinum and nickel. In fact, it does even worse.

Marie A. Dubs, director of corporate technology for the Kennecott Corporation, stated it bluntly — and correctly — in a recent broadcast of "It's Your Business," the weekly public affairs television discussion program produced by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "The treaty is basically anti-production," Dubs said. "There is not only no incentive, there is disincentive to mine the oceans, and it is doubtful anyone would mine under the present treaty."

Wonderful. At a time when both our industrial base and defense capability depend upon imports of precious minerals, we are out-negotiated into an agreement which would forfeit our last best chance to break that dependence.

Is that too harsh a judgment? Consider this: The treaty would create a beast called the International Seabed Development Authority which would exercise virtually total control over mining licenses and charge payments for that mining in the form of profits, technology and the minerals themselves.

Well, if you have found the recent policies and ideologies which have been emanating from the United Nations hard to digest, wait until you see how this seagoing U.N. would make decisions on dividing the booty over which it would be given control. At the beginning, the United States would not be guaranteed a vote on the council which would dispense mining permits. But the Soviet bloc would get three, and the remaining votes would be held by the same Third World coalition which now controls the U.N. And as the council membership rotates, the United States still would not be guaranteed a vote.

Do you think an authority of this ideological complexion is going to lose much sleep over concern about the interests of the American people and the American business community? Fat chance!

Few people dispute the need for some form of international agreement covering the mining of the seabed. Industry would welcome the security that a properly devised agreement would give to their long-term investments. But the present treaty fails to recognize that the risk, the investment and the technological ingenuity it takes to get these precious resources out of the seas or out of the ground are just as important as the natural resources themselves. One without the other leaves us nowhere. And nowhere is where we will be if the current treaty is ratified and business is forced to make the judgment that mining of the seabed under those conditions is just not worth the risk.

It's time to go back to the drawing board.

Army Suffers Personnel Equipment Shortgages

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — America's military could not respond adequately to several different trouble spots around the world simultaneously because of personnel and equipment shortages, says the commander of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force.

"The whole defense posture, including surface combatants, naval deployment and airlift ability, is very stretched. We'd like to have two carriers in the Mediterranean and we have only one," said Lt. Gen. Paul X. Kelley of the Marine Corps.

"The number of ships and deployment patterns are not adequate for worldwide (combat) simultaneity. We have a problem," he said at a news conference Friday.

Kelley is based at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida, headquarters for the task force that ultimately would command 200,000 American troops of all four services if deployed to the Middle East or other world trouble spot.

He soon will leave that position for Washington as assistant commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The 31-year Marine veteran was in South Texas for ceremonies at the Marine Military Academy, a private preparatory school, where he also conducted a news conference.

Two carrier battleships cruise the Indian Ocean as part of the nation's military strategy in the Middle East, he said, but improvement is needed in overall airlift ability and naval deployment.

"We still have a long way to go, but I'm very much impressed now," he said.

American troops could reach southwest Asia, including the Persian Gulf, within 36 to 48 hours after the task force was deployed, he said.

The task force's shortcomings only point to a general lack of military manpower that Congress must face, he said.

Return to a peacetime draft may not be necessary, he added.

Kelley said he would favor conscription "if that is absolutely necessary to man the force, if it comes to that. I certainly think there are a lot of steps to explore before then."

The general also took part in ground-breaking ceremonies for an Iwo Jima memorial at the private school.

The academy is scheduled to receive the original concrete and plaster cast of the Iwo Jima statue in November. The bronze statue by sculptor Felix De Weldon depicts the famous World War II flag raising by Marines.

De Weldon is donating the full-size cast, which is in his Newport, R.I., studio. It will be transported by train and finished with bronze epoxy to resemble the original sculpture.

Air Force Sergeant Discharged to Recover

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Air Force has granted Sgt. Jeff Kennedy, 26, time off to recover from physical and psychological problems caused by the Sept. 19 Titan II explosion near Damascus.

John Rabb, an aide to Rep. David Emery, R-Maine, said Tuesday in Washington, D.C., that the Air Force gave Kennedy an extended temporary retirement. Kennedy suffered a broken leg when he was thrown 150 feet by the blast. He has since had respiratory problems and nightmares.

Rabb said Tuesday that Kennedy was delighted with the decision. Kennedy, from South Portland, Maine, was stationed at Little Rock Air Force Base at the time of the explosion. He now is stationed at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, and will return to Maine.

Kennedy originally was recommended for a medical discharge, but a higher review board said Kennedy was in good health and should remain on duty, Rabb said.

The final ruling is that Kennedy should remain off duty until he recovers. He will be examined every 18 months and can be permanently discharged after five years, if he does not recover, Rabb said.

One Air Force sergeant died and 21 others were injured in the explosion at the central Arkansas missile silo. Kennedy and Sgt. David Livingston, 22, who died in the accident, were thrown from the missile silo by the blast.

The explosion occurred just after the two left the silo where they had taken readings of volatile fuel vapors in the silo. The fuel leaked after a workman dropped a wrench socket and it punctured a fuel tank.

The explosion shattered the silo and the 740-ton silo doors. The Air Force announced earlier this month that the silo would not be rebuilt. It will be filled with rock and gravel.

There are 17 other silos in Arkansas and 18 each in Kansas and Arizona.

Kennedy was reprimanded earlier this year for entering the silo alone to record pressure readings. The readings were taken about six hours before the explosion. Air Force safety regulations prohibit airmen from entering the launch area alone.

On Friday, Kennedy and seven others who volunteered to enter the silo received the Airman's Medal by the Air Force.

Emery, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, is investigating the Titan accident and Kennedy's treatment by the Air Force.

The West Texas wind grabbed me and made me do the Tumbleweed Promenade. It's this dance that sort of has this rolling along effect, and it really doesn't do very much for your hair-do. I mean, I shouted till I was hoarse, for some help. Finally a cowboy stopped me with his rope and his horse took this picture. I thanked the cowboy, the horse and for coming to my rescue in the disaster. The cowboy kept me from hitting a fence tumbleweed style, the horse turned out to be a great photographer and 9 to 9 gave me a hair-do that bounced right back as if nothing had ever happened. It was another happy ending.

Jackson Finishes 29-Year-Career

Henry Jackson claims it wasn't really his idea to quit working. He says the government "encouraged" him to retire. Jackson, who turned 80 this month, put in his last hours of a 29-year career at Big T Pump Company Friday.

Jackson began working at Big T in 1952 when the company was just about six years old. He moved to Hereford in 1952 from Erick, Oklahoma but he says his father lived in a dugout in this area before Hereford was even a town.

Jackson has worked on irrigation wells all over the Panhandle area but his most recent job has been running a bailing rig at Big T.

Jackson said good health and good behavior had a lot to do with his long working career.

"The jail and the hospital are two places I've never been," he said.

Bilingual Program On Holding Pattern

DUMAS — Dumas school trustees Monday evening put the district's bilingual education program in a holding pattern, maintaining the present language development program but going no further until learning if the State of Texas will appeal a federal judge's orders.

In a short discussion of a directive from the Texas Education Agency, board members agreed to ask the school attorney to seek information from the Texas attorney general before taking action.

The TEA last week sent notification to Texas school districts that bilingual education must be provided in kindergarten through fifth grade next fall.

DUMAS — Lions Club queens, a Marine color guard, and an Old Timer of the Year will head up the 1981 Dogie Days parade Saturday, June 13, to signal the final day of the annual Dogie Days town celebration.

The Dogie Day event, sponsored by the Dumas Noon Lions, will run for three big days this year, June 11-13. Kickoff is an old West barbecue in McDade Park.

CANYON — Taxpayers here may soon send their city and school tax payments to the county tax collector if Canyon and the Canyon Independent School District contract with Randall County for tax collection.

Talks are underway now to combine all the tax collection in the county into one office, said county commissioner Gene Klein Jr. The arrangement, if it is agreed upon, will not take place in time for a single collection this year.

DIMMITT — Returning to his alma mater 20 years after his graduation, Congressman Kent Hance told Dimmitt High School's seniors Sunday night to fix their goals, develop positive attitudes, and "always be proud that you're Dimmitt Bobcats."

Hance, a 1961 DHS graduate, was the baccalaureate speaker Sunday evening in the high school auditorium. "Dimmitt and Dimmitt High School have done a lot for me," Hance commented.

PERRYTON — After nearly three hours of discussion, the Perryton school board Tuesday turned down a motion to put the fate of the proposed PHS addition to a bond question. The board voted 5-2 against a motion by Bob McCutcheon to go the bond route, which would have put the issue back before the people to decide.

Instead, the board is proceeding with plans to build the physical education - activities center.

TULIA — About a half-inch of rain was received in Tulia Saturday and Sunday, but it may have been too little, too late to aid the fast-ripening wheat crop.

The Vigo community received little or no rain, but there were some scattered showers east and southeast of Tulia. Damaging hail hit areas east of Claytonville in Floyd County.

SHAMROCK — Memorial Day services were attended Monday at Shamrock Cemetery by more than 100 persons.

The ceremony was dedicated to the dead of all wars and particularly to those 316 veterans buried here and in nearby cemeteries.

L'Allegra Makes Donation

L'Allegra Study Club recently held a plant sale in Sugarland Mall with proceeds going to buy a digital thermometer for Westgate Nursing Home. A check for $330 was presented by Kathy Allison, right, the club's retiring president, to Rose Ann Smith, registered nurse and director of nursing at Westgate Thursday afternoon. According to Mrs. Smith, "the digital thermometer will be more efficient in taking the patients' temperatures."

Council Receives Donation

L'Allegra Study Clubs retiring president, Kathy Allison, right, presented the Hereford Camp Fire Council with a check for $300 Thursday afternoon. Accepting the donation for the Council was Helen Langley, president. The donation was raised through a recent plant sale in Sugarland Mall sponsored by the study club. The donation according to Mrs. Langley will go toward program developments.

Coalition of Republicans, Conservatives Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats could develop behind President Reagan's proposal for a multi-year, across-the-board tax cut, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, says.

"I don't know what will happen. It's still too early to say," Hance said after an unproductive two-hour caucus with other Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I was hoping we could finalize something we could take to the president that he could accept or that Danny had something from the president we could accept," an obviously disappointed Hance said. "But it looks like it will be a long, drawn-out thing."

Instead of a compromise that accepted most of the president's proposal, as had been widely speculated, things ended up back at square one.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, emerged from the meeting to say Democrats can't go along with the president's proposals.

"A multi-year tax cut is not acceptable at this time," Rostenkowski told newsmen. The Democrats on his committee are solidly behind a tax cut of no longer than a year and for a bigger tax cut to those who make from $20,000 to $50,000 a year, he said.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, had hinted earlier that Republicans would seek another coalition with conservative Democrats if Rostenkowski didn't agree soon to a compromise.

Hance, a leader in that earlier coalition — which gave the president an overwhelming victory in his first major legislative test — has been trying to work within the party on the tax cut issue.

Hance said, "But I felt all week that the speculation in the press was too optimistic (about chances for a compromise). I've never been that optimistic about it, from the word go."

"I'm still going to wait a while. Danny's going to continue to talk to the White House, and I'm going to wait and see what happens."

The second-term congressman from Lubbock was one of four conservative Democrats who met with administration officials in the White House last week and won concessions from the tax cut bill Reagan had been assisting on.

The four then went to Rostenkowski with the grounds for possible compromise, rather than pushing the proposal as their own.

Others accompanying Hance to the White House meeting were Rep. Charles Stenholm and Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas and Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi. Gramm was the spearleader for the bipartisan budget effort.

Republicans could live with the recommended compromise, Dole said Wednesday. Rostenkowski had added after meeting with Dole and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan Thursday morning that they found more things to agree about than to disagree about.

Rostenkowski said after Thursday's committee caucus, "I'd say my membership is narrowing its views down to a one-year tax cut. There wasn't any enthusiasm for a multi-year tax cut."

Hance wasn't the only one to speak for a multi-year tax cut, he said.

Medical Practices Bill Gets A Final Vote in House Today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton gave up on negotiating with doctors Friday night and gavelled through a medical practices bill the Texas Medical Association dislikes.

The measure gets a final House vote today, which would return it to the Senate. A conference committee is likely, and there is a chance no bill regulating physicians will pass before the Legislature adjourns at midnight Monday.

If lawmakers fail to renew the Medical Practices Act before September, the Texas Board of Medical Examiners will "sunset" out of existence, and there will be no regulation of medicine.

Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, the sponsor of the bill, said if that happens, Texas doctors could not write prescriptions because of federal requirements that only doctors under state regulation may prescribe drugs.

The bill continues the Board of Medical Examiners, guarantees osteopaths three of fifteen seats and allocates another three to laymen. It also defines the practice of medicine and lays down numerous rules for doctors and the board to follow.

Messer and Clayton said it was some of those provisions that brought medical lobbyists to Clayton's office Friday.

Messer said the main objections of the Texas Medical Association were to provisions that would:

— Prohibit hospitals from excluding osteopaths from their staffs.

— Allow optometrists, who do not have MD degrees, to administer drugs and medications in treating their patients.

— Require doctors to give patients their records unless there would be an imminent risk of physical or mental harm to the patient or others.

Clayton emerged from his backroom talks with medical lobbyists, huddled with a large group of House members and got an agreement from Messer and Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, not to offer an amendment addressing some of the doctors' concerns.

Then he laid out the bill. Messer moved its initial approval, and it was OK'd on voice vote in a matter of seconds, surprising some who expected hours of wrangling. "The speaker told me that either I could have passage without amendments or somebody else could," Messer told reporters later.

Clayton said the doctors "sho' don't like to give."

"We tried everything in the world to offer compromises and offer some reasonable ground. There were some provisions they wouldn't come off of. ... I'd say there wasn't much negotiation," Clayton said.

The medical association supports the Senate version of the bill, and Messer suggested the legislative session might end Monday night without passage of a compromise.

But he said he strongly believes there will be a special legislative session this summer, when the whole medical regulation fight could start over.

"Not to pass a bill before September would be horrible," Messer said.

What Do You Tell a Child When Teacher Dies?

MARLBORO TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Karen A. Costello is well-remembered at Marlboro Elementary School, where some children call her their "music angel." Some youngsters also routinely mutilate pictures of the man accused of killing the 23-year-old teacher in a $3 robbery-abduction.

The 500 children at Marlboro share a common grief with 27 third graders in Pleasantville and 40 pupils at Piscataway's Wee People Pre-School: Their teachers were slain. And psychologists say the children are among the often overlooked victims of violent crime.

Ms. Costello was a popular singing teacher who was known to nearly all the students at Marlboro. In hundreds of letters to her parents and in interviews, the first through fifth graders revealed poetic recollections of the young woman and anger toward her alleged killer. "When a friend called me and told me she was shot, I made my Dad get me a paper. I couldn't believe it. I couldn't get to sleep that night," said 9-year-old Elise Labott. "I still feel like shooting him (the suspect)."

Fifth grader Kim Kaufman said she felt "nauseous" after her teacher was slain Feb. 21, and Rachel Werlin wrote that she had visions of Ms. Costello as "an angel watching us cry."

In a common reaction, Cindy Redmin said she told her parents: "You don't expect it to happen to you where you live, maybe in New York, but not somebody you know."

Dr. Arnold Lazarus, a Rutgers University professor and founder of the Multimodal Therapy Institutes in New York and Princeton, said the impact of a teacher's slaying would vary, "but, clearly, it has an impact on most children; some can switch it off, others will carry scars for a long time."

Educators at the three schools said they were surprised at how quickly word spread of the killings — and their grisly details.

Barbara Zitomer, director of the Wee People Pre-school, said all the 4- and 5-year-olds in 26-year-old Deborah Friedman's class knew she had been killed Jan. 4 when they arrived at school the next day. Prosecutors called her playing a "Looking For Mr. Goodbar" case. A man has pleaded guilty in the killing.

In Pleasantville, Rose Quarles' third graders came to Main Street School with tears in their eyes April 16, aware their 47-year-old teacher had been slain the night before and that her son was charged with her shotgun murder.

"She used to look like Wonder Woman sometimes," lamented 9-year-old Lamont Richardson. "I tell you, she made us learn. I couldn't believe...she was shot in the head."

Trudie Humley, who took over Mrs. Quarles' class, said she tried to talk to the children about the killing. At the Wee People school, a developmental psychologist was called in to speak to parents. And at Marlboro, there were memorial services and many discussions.

"I think talking about it is necessary," said Dr. Edward Docherty, another Rutgers psychologist. "Kids spend a good deal of their time in school and teachers are like parent figures to them."

"Many of our children already have a sense of pervasive fear because of what is happening in Atlanta. For these children (in New Jersey), there are some who can dismiss the deaths with what we call the magical thinking of children. But the death of a teacher forces them to deal at least with the reality that death brings absence, loss," said Docherty.

He said the children's reactions could include fear of being alone, an increased sense of vulnerability and anger.

"This is an area we need to talk more about," Docherty said. "But I think it is very important that we do not, as we often do, deny the children an opportunity for an outpouring of grief..."

Some of the children's reactions were still apparent months after the deaths.

"A friend of mine brings in pictures (of the suspect) and puts it on the floor and jumps on it, and then cuts it up," said Elise. "I know that's not right, but it hurts so much."

Or, as fourth grader Raj-havan Nagarja wrote to Ms. Costello's parents: "Sometimes I wonder why it happened. From time to time I feel so sad, I feel like breaking something."

Not all educators feel frank discussion is necessarily the best thing for children. Barbara Zitomer, the pre-school director, said she was content that "simple terms, such as it was an absence that would be final," was sufficient explanation for most children.

But, said Lazarus: "You have to keep in mind that even adults have difficulty coping with these things. For children, who do not have as much experience, it can leave a variety of scars. Death is all around us, and those who don't talk about it are asking for trouble."

Senator Wants Bill Rejected

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, says there is no way he can accept the House's version of a bill stepping up Texas' bilingual education effort and he hopes the full Senate will reject it too.

The House added an amendment Friday night that could have the effect of limiting bilingual instruction to four years of a pupil's schooling.

A final House vote on the bill comes today, and Truan said he would ask senators to call for a conference committee to negotiate differences between the House and Senate versions.

The sticking point is an amendment by Rep. Milton Fox, R-Houston, which the House adopted, 77-55.

Fox's amendment says if a student is not proficient in English after four years of bilingual instruction, a school may place him or her "in an alternative transitional language program, such as English as a second language."

"The goal is to prepare a child for the mainstream classroom, which is in English. If after four years, they are not capable of exiting the program, we should try something else," Fox said.

Truan said the Fox amendment would return Texas to the present program that requires bilingual education for four years — kindergarten through third grade.

The bill says that starting this fall, every school district with 20 students of limited English-speaking ability in the same grade must offer bilingual education or special language programs.

Schools would have to offer bilingual education through the sixth grade, with additional language training for those who need it through the eighth grade, and instruction in English as a second language in grades 9-12.

The bill allocates $50 per child for bilingual education, increasing state expenditures by $4.1 million in 1982 and $4.4 million in 1983.

Truan said this is not enough and that he would work for a higher figure. House members turned down Garcia's attempts to increase the funding level to $150 per pupil.

Schools could use several methods for deciding whether a child needs bilingual education and would test children each year to determine whether they are ready to transfer to regular classes taught only in English.

Always in the background was the ruling by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice giving Texas six years to make bilingual education available to all students who need it — and through high school if necessary.

Brady Treated For Pneumonia

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady, shot during an assassination attempt on President Reagan, is being treated with an antibiotic for pneumonia in his left lung, a George Washington University Hospital spokesman says.

Brady, recovering from a gunshot wound in his brain, has been running fevers reaching between 103 and 105 degrees since Tuesday.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a hospital spokesman, said the viral-like pneumonia was discovered through X-rays Thursday when Brady's fever "was starting to inch back up."

There was "a rather striking difference" in pictures taken Wednesday and Thursday, O'Leary said. Although doctors remain unsure whether a virus or bacteria is causing the pneumonia, they are treating it with an antibiotic used in viral cases, he said.

"Anytime you're dealing with a pneumonia, that's a serious infection," O'Leary said. But he added that "this kind of pneumonia is more like a pneumonia you might walk into a doctor's office with." He described it as "a highly manageable situation" and said doctors were relieved that the fever was not associated with Brady's head wound.

O'Leary said Brady "has a pretty good tolerance for temperature elevation" and "looks much better than someone with a high temperature should look."

El Paso Private Eye Uses James Bond Style

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Eat your heart out, James Bond.

In El Paso, there's a real-life private eye with the electronic gadgetry, firepower and imagination to make Dr. No quake in his boots.

His name is Jay J. Armes and he claims he's never left a case unsolved.

"People say, 'you're just like 007,'" Armes said. "I say, 'No, 007 is like me.'"

Armes, who lost his hands in a childhood accident, wears pincher-like hooks which he says are no handicap to his work.

His chauffeur-driven limousine has a video camera built into the trunk that allows Armes to see up to 17 blocks behind the car on a small television screen in the back seat. The limo is bullet-proof and has three telephones.

Armes is accompanied by a grim-faced bodyguard in military garb, including a pistol prominently displayed in a white shoulder holster. The bodyguard passes his time by reading books on kung fu.

Armes' home is surrounded by a 20-foot wall and dozens of surveillance cameras. Inside, African animals like cheetahs and zebras roam free.

Stepping into his office is like walking onto the set of "Goldfinger," the movie based on Ian Fleming's spy novel.

After passing through a steel door and by surveillance cameras, a visitor is greeted by a giant badge on the front door that bears the name of Armes' company — "The Investigators."

Plush carpeting leads past stuffed ostriches — former pets — and into an elevator. Steel doors slide out of the way as the visitor enters Armes' huge private office, dominated by a curved desk covered with buttons that operate all of the electronic gadgets.

At a push of a button, the room's three video screens show different parts of the office building. Bookshelves slowly turn to reveal a non-alcoholic bar, camera equipment and a collection of automatic weapons.

A briefcase on the desk holds a submachine gun with a silencer.

"I'm known all over the world as the top in my field," Armes said. "It's a heck of a role to play."

And Armes plays it to the hilt — from the bulletproof vest he says he always wears to the tales of attempts on his life and fast-paced investigations.

Armes became a private eye after putting himself through law school while working as an actor in Hollywood. He says he appeared in more than 30 films in a six-year career in the 1950s.

"I went to work in the picture business when I was a youngster," he said. "I didn't like it. It's the flashiest career anyone could have."

If being an actor was too flashy, being a lawyer wasn't flashy enough.

"I decided against it because when you're a lawyer, there's a little narrow path from the office to the courtroom and from the courtroom to the office," he said. "I wanted more than that. I came up with the idea of being a private investigator."

That was 19 years ago. Since then, Armes says he has solved case after case, building a fortune and a reputation to match.

"I engineer every case," Armes said, as he waved paychecks worth thousands of dollars. "By engineering the case, I mean that I plan every investigation and I'm responsible for the final conclusion no matter how it comes out."

His best-known case came in 1972 when he located Christian Brando, the son of actor Marlon Brando and actress Anna Kashfi, in hiding in Mexico. The boy had been reported missing by Ms. Kashfi during a custody battle with Brando.

Armes found the boy after three days of scouring the Mexican coast in a helicopter.

"It's probably the case everybody's heard the most about," Armes said. "But it's really not my best case. There are some that have never come out in public that were really something."

The publicity in the Brando case led to bigger things for Armes.

He appeared on television and wrote a book called "Jay J. Armes, Investigator" that he says has been printed in 30 languages.

The Ideal Corp. produced a doll modeled after Armes, complete with different sets of prosthetic hands and a secret agent car.

He also opened a school to train private investigators in the dark ways of surveillance, electronics and self-defense.

Six years ago, he signed a $200,000 contract with Universal Studios for a television series based on his real-life investigations — a project that still hasn't gotten past script difficulties.

"Under the contract, I've got script approval," he said. "Some of scripts portrayed Jay Armes like he was the '66 Million Man.' I wanted them changed to show me like I really am."

That included, he said, filming the series in El Paso and showing him as a religious, dedicated man who works hard for his big fees.

"I've always been in the public eye," he said, "but to me, it's just a regular job."

His latest project is an Investigator magazine scheduled to hit the newsstands next month. The magazine is a joint effort with investigative journalist Jack Anderson, who will be chief investigator for the glossy monthly.

Plans call for Armes to write a feature story on an investigation each month and for Anderson to write two columns that Armes says will "dismantle a government agency."

"Once the magazine comes out, I'm going to be a household word," he said.

Although Armes enjoys the glamor of the cloak-and-dagger life and the fame he expects to achieve, he insists that he is not that different from other people.

He says the gadgets, the guns and the danger are just part of his business.

"People don't know the hassle you go through just to lead a normal life," he said.

Condos Boom on Mexico Gulf

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Neither inflation nor erosion nor hurricanes have kept the giant cranes and bulldozers from their appointed rounds in this resort's building boom of expensive condominiums on the Gulf of Mexico.

Local officials expect to issue permits this year for $100 million in construction projects compared to $42 million last year.

"Everytime I turn around there's something else going up I never heard of," said City Manager Kirby Lilljedahl.

Investors from Mexico and Canada have joined Texans and others in buying condominium units as second homes or for lucrative rental income.

With nautical names like the Sunside, Surfside and Sea Vista, the high rises command prices of up to $190,000 for a three-bedroom unit.

When beachfront space dwindled, developers turned to the side of this barrier island fronting the Laguna Madre.

One bayside development calls for two, 28-story towers and two, 19-story ones.

When the town of South Padre Island incorporated in 1973, six years after Hurricane Beulah ravaged the Rio Grande Valley, building along the five-mile town beach started its dramatic increase.

Pessimistic soothsayers said, "Just wait till the next hurricane. There won't be anything left."

Last August, Hurricane Allen threatened to pound the beach with its full force — 190 mph winds — but the giant storm floundered offshore, and lost power.

Meteorologist Richard Hagan of the National Weather Service in Brownsville said the storm's center never crossed the developed part of the island.

"From the height of the tides, it was ranked as a major hurricane fitting category three on a scale of one to five (the most powerful) but just barely into category three," Hagan said.

Allen's top winds at landfall swirled at 130 mph, hitting the fishing village of Port Mansfield and the King Ranch the hardest.

Property damage in the resort area came to $40 million and millions more lost in tourism revenues.

Hurricane Allen was not a true test of the island construction, said Bob Morton of the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology in Austin.

The storm's rains soaked through some roofs and damaged interiors but damage to larger buildings seemed limited to some seawalls. The 10-foot tides sullied ground level interiors and wiped out many sand dunes.

"The area very definitely is still hazardous," he said. Low elevation and erosion are the reasons, he added.

The larger buildings, of cinder block construction, set on 10-foot driven pilings, probably would never collapse in a hurricane, he said.

Seawalls can protect property behind them from the ocean's fury, he said, but studies show beaches in front of them will erode faster.

Morton said he resents developers taking advantage of the national flood insurance program to risk ventures on the coast.

"I'm enough of a free enterprise person that if people want to build on the beach, that's their business but I take great exception to our (taxpayers) underwriting it with the flood insurance program," he said.

Developers say that without federal government-backed flood insurance, they could not obtain financing.

Local officials say they've heard dire predictions before, and after Allen, they like to brag they've been through a hurricane.

The storm may have boosted investor confidence in the area although most of the 18 projects under construction and 10 others planned were envisioned before it blew in from the Gulf.

George Hamilton Takes One Last Shot

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A couple of years ago, George Hamilton decided to put together "one last shot" in an attempt to revive his waning movie career. The result: "Love at First Bite."

"I went from $30,000 a picture — I deferred another $50,000 — to a million dollars plus a percentage of the profits," he observed with obvious delight. "Even Jimmy the Greek wouldn't give you odds on that happening."

The first result of the Hamilton turnaround can be seen this summer in the 20th Century-Fox release, "Zorro, The Gay Blade." Once again Hamilton takes a classic movie figure and plays him for self-deprecating laughs.

The actor, slightly greying but still boyishly slim at 41, has always maintained a sardonic view of the public George Hamilton, as though it were something he invented. Which may be true.

"In a sense I am very schizophrenic," he said over lunch in one of Beverly Hills' most stylish restaurants. "I can look at George Hamilton as though he were a client, someone whose career I had to promote. I could see how he was marketed in the '60s and the '70s, and I wondered whether he would be able to make it into the '80s."

"Could he stay alive? Or would he simply flicker out, like many actors who stay around too long? You can see it in the later performances of Errol Flynn and Clark Gable: there comes the time when the light goes out in the eyes. That magnetic quality that had made them stars now was extinguished, and they were simply doing work."

After 20 years in films, George Hamilton found himself working harder than ever, "taking any jobs that came along and not making much money." With Dracula movies on the ascendancy, he decided to take a comic look at the old bloodsucker with "Love at First Bite." Only the Indianapolis plunger Melvin Simon would take a chance on the project.

"I got the money, helped with the casting and writing, even did the costuming myself," said Hamilton.

He also emerged with a brand-new career and more money than he had ever earned in films. "Love at First Bite" cost "between $2.9 million and $3.4 million, according to which accounting you use."

Edwards Tops Kemper Golf

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Danny Edwards says he believes he finally has rediscovered the groove to his golf swing.

"This is the third tournament in row that I have done something different in trying to hit the ball," Edwards said Friday after the second round of the $400,000 Kemper Open. "I've been in a little bit of struggle trying to find it."

Edwards, whose best finish this year was a third in the Bob Hope, shot consecutive 67s over the famed 7,054-yard, par-70 Congressional Country Club course for a two-day total of 134, two strokes ahead of a group of five, including first-day co-leader Jack Newton.

Edwards and 75 others made the cut of 145 in the chase for the $72,000 first prize.

"I'm just trying to find some consistency," said Edwards, who finished tied for 41st last week and tied for 51st the week before. "It seems like a long time since I had the consistency I had earlier in my career and in college. Even though the statistics look pretty good, I haven't hit the ball that good."

Edwards, who also races cars and will miss the U.S. Open in three weeks because of his other profession, has made 11 birdies in two days to take the lead over Newton; Tom Weiskopf; Craig Stadler, who finished second a year ago; Howard Twitty, and Jim Simons.

Three strokes behind Edwards were John Cook, who shared the first-day lead with a 65, Dan Pohl and Van Heafner, a first-year pro.

Scott Hoch, Andy North and Tommy Valentine were 2-under-par at 138, and Hale Irwin and Lon Hinkle, along with Edwards' younger brother, Dave, were in a group of six at 1-under-par 139.

Tom Watson, the No. 2 money winner and player of his decade, and Tom Kite are among the seven who have shot even par for the first two days.

"I've hit the ball well," said Edwards of his two rounds. "I've just managed the course well. I'm trying to work under the ball better. I'm trying to do things you would not normally notice, but the feeling is different."

Weiskopf, who picked up two strokes Friday, played the tough Congressional course with two birdies and no bogeys.

"I have played well for the past two months," he said. "I just haven't been making a lot of birdies, but I haven't been making a lot of bogeys. Anytime you play a round on a good golf course without a bogey, it shows you are playing well."

Among the better know players who did not make the cut were Japan's Isao Aoki, who finished second to Jack Nicklaus in last year's U.S. Open, J.C. Snead and Lanny Wadkins, all at 6-over-par 146.

Connors Confident In French Open Tourney

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors moved into the third round of the French Open tennis championships today against a Frenchman who he encountered last year in one of the most astounding comebacks in the 90-year history of the clay court tournament.

"If I were betting, I'd bet on me," a confident Connors said after a hard-fought 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4 victory Friday over little-known Gabriel Urpi, a 19-year-old Spaniard who has never won a professional tournament.

Connors, No. 2 seed at the two-week, $610,000 tournament, was predicting he would win his next outing against Jean-Francois Caujolle, 28.

A year ago, Caujolle nearly eliminated Connors in a second-round match. The Frenchman was leading 6-3, 6-2, 5-2 with a 40-30 edge before he lost match point on a backhand passing shot.

Connors clawed back to take the match and reach the semifinals.

"Have I heard of Caujolle?" the 28-year-old American asked Friday. "Yeah, sure. Me and about 16,000 fans remember him."

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the favorite to win the title for an unprecedented sixth time, was idle Friday but was scheduled to play today against unseeded Paul Antoine Torre of France.

No. 3 seed John McEnroe of the United States turned back Chile's Jaime Fillol 6-3, 6-0, 6-1 Friday, the first day without a rain interruption since the tournament began Monday.

American Chris Evert Lloyd faced West Germany's Eva Pfaff in another third-round match today. Lloyd, who is expected to win the women's title for a fifth time, had no trouble downing Argentina's Claudia Casablanca Friday 6-4, 6-0.

Project Underway

The Kids, Inc. fund-raising project is underway and Stewart Bigham is shown selling a coupon book to Speedy Nieman, Hereford Brand, the sponsor of his Oriole Minor League baseball team. Some 1,200 boys and girls in the baseball and softball programs will be selling the books through June 10. The books are priced at $5 and have some $350 in value from local merchants. Proceeds provide Kids, Inc. with uniforms, equipment and maintenance of the parks.

Rice Quarterback Candidate Not Bothered With Putdowns, Letdowns

HOUSTON (AP) — People keep telling Rice's Michael Calhoun he can't play quarterback, that he doesn't even look like a quarterback. Calhoun calls them the letdowns and putdowns.

Putdown: "I don't know what people think I'm supposed to look like but they keep saying I don't look like a quarterback. I just tell them to watch me perform. That's what gives me the momentum and pride of playing the position because people didn't think I could play it."

Letdown: "I felt I had a bum deal in the all-star game in my home town (1979 Oil Bowl at Wichita Falls.) I thought sure I would play quarterback but they put me in the secondary. I've played in the shadow of a lot of guys that I felt equal to in talent."

Spurred by the putdowns and letdowns, Calhoun transferred to Rice from Taft, Calif. Junior College in January, had the best spring practice of his career and has emerged as a strong starting quarterback candidate for Coach Ray Alborn this fall.

"The players immediately respected him because they saw he was a good athlete," Alborn said. "He came in with a build up but he hadn't done anything on the field. Kids are concerned. If a guy comes in with a build up they want to see him perform. They are not just interested in reading press clippings."

Alborn may even encourage more putdowns and letdowns if it inspires such performance, although Calhoun feels he has enough to last a lifetime.

Calhoun decided to return to Texas after he was shunned by major west coast schools.

"I was disappointed that schools like USC and UCLA didn't come around because I felt I could play there," he said. "It boiled down to Rice and Oregon."

"So many people kept telling me they could see me in two or three positions and that really turned me off," Calhoun said. "If I get to the pros, I don't care what they draft me as, but as long as I'm in college, I feel it's my priority to play quarterback."

Because of his determination to remain at quarterback, Calhoun said he couldn't understand Texas quarterback Donnie Little shifting to receiver.

"I feel he has the same qualities and talent as Mike Mosley (Texas A&M quarterback) and Mosley played quarterback his senior year," Calhoun said. "Playing receiver won't make him (Little) any better than what he could be at quarterback."

The Owls already had depth at quarterback with sophomores-to-be Doug Johnson and Phillip Money scheduled to battle for the starting position. The challenge didn't bother Calhoun.

"They didn't tell me anything was guaranteed," Calhoun said. "They told me I'd have to come in and fight for the job. I knew what I was coming into."

Assault on Mt. Everest Planned by 'Old Man'

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — At 53, an age when many men are thinking about retirement, Dave Mahre is planning the most dramatic climb of his life — an assault on Mount Everest. If he succeeds, the father of World Cup skiing stars Phil and Steve Mahre will be 55 and the oldest man ever to conquer the world's highest mountain.

"I may be kidding myself, thinking I can make it, but I don't think so," Mahre said.

BOWLING
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Spigner captured the top seed for the finals of the $95,000 City of Roses Open Bowling Tournament.

Spigner, with a 9,547 pin total after 42 games, beat Paul Moser by 135-pins in gaining the top spot for today's step-ladder finals.

Mark Williams, Jeff Morin and Marshall Holman are third, fourth and fifth, respectively.

after it was announced he would join an expedition up the unclimbed Chinese north face of Everest next summer.

"My doctor says, 'Hell, Mahre, you're 15 years younger than your age. You shouldn't worry about it.' This is probably my last chance. I doubt I'd be asked again," he said.

Mahre, who has nine children, including twins Phil and Steve, has been hooked on climbing since he scrambled up a rocky hillside as a boy and saw a panoramic view of fruit orchards stretching out 3,000 feet below.

While his children were learning to ski, Mahre was scaling sheer ice walls and pushing himself up routes in the Northwest that others called unclimbable.

He was one of about a dozen state climbers who dominated the sport in the 1950s and 1960s. He's scrambled up Mount Rainier more than 60 times and has climbed Mount Tahoma and other Cascades peaks.

But family responsibilities and limited income kept him from challenging the world's tallest peaks — mountains battled by climbing partners such as Lou and Jim Whittaker, Chris Chandler, Jim Wickwire and the late Willie Unsold.

Finally, in the 1970s, when Mahre decided he could leave his family for a four-month expedition, his applications were politely refused.

"It's nice to hear from you," Mahre recalled the letters saying. "But we're looking for someone 10 or 12 years younger."

Veteran climber and guide Lou Whittaker changed all that when he stopped last winter at the White Pass ski area Mahre manages and asked, "How about Everest?" Whittaker is leading the expedition.

"I pretty near cried," Mahre recalls. "Why now? After that rejection?"

After consulting his family, Mahre said yes.

"It's one of those things I've always wanted," he says. "My boys said, 'Man, you don't have to prove anything to us.' I know that. I don't have to prove to anyone. What I have to prove is to myself, that I'm still capable of doing it."

At 29,028 feet, Everest is twice the height of Rainier, the highest peak Mahre has climbed.

But Mahre says he's not going to Everest to risk his life.

"I want to come back with all my toes," he says. "You can't risk everything to make it. Mountains ... could care less. I've had a lot of friends who aren't here now who didn't remember that."

"Climbing to me is respecting the mountain ... and mental drive," says Mahre. "It takes soul searching. You finally make your peace with your God and self and you do it. You face death, proving to yourself you are not afraid to die."

Texas Bows in 12; Giants Defeat Houston, 3-1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Gene Mauch's debut as manager of the California Angels was rained out Friday night but it's doubtful if he could have done anything to top the show put on by Oakland's Billy Martin.

Billy the Kid may not have punched that dogie, as he says in the popular beer commercial, but he gave umpire Terry Cooney a pretty good bump in the A's 6-3 loss to the Toronto Blue Jays. Luckily for the quick-tempered Martin, Terry Cooney wasn't Gerry Cooney.

What got Martin's dander up was a request by Toronto's Ernie Whitt in the fourth inning that Cooney inspect the ball being thrown by Matt Keough.

With the Blue Jays leading 3-0 on Whitt's two-run double in the second inning and Barry Bonnell's solo homer in the fourth, Martin was in no mood for any more of the season-long complaints that his pitchers were doctoring the baseball.

Otto Velez led off the Toronto fourth with a double and, one out later, George Bell walked. After the first pitch from Keough, Whitt asked Cooney to check the ball. Martin started to get on the umpire from the dugout and when a warning was ignored he was thrown out of a game for the first time this year.

Martin came out of the dugout on the dead run and bumped Cooney with his chest, knocking him backwards. Martin then kicked dirt on Cooney's shoes and when the umpire turned and walked away, Martin scooped up two handfuls of dirt and threw them on his back.

After Martin's exit, Whitt walked and Alfredo Griffin followed with a two-run single to give the Blue Jays all the runs they needed as they defeated the A's for the first time in 10 games dating back to last season.

The A's, who have lost three in a row and 11 of 16, saw their lead in the American League West shrink to 1½ games over the Chicago White Sox, who were rained out of their game against the Angels. It's Oakland's smallest lead since the early days of the season.

In other AL action, the defending champion Kansas City Royals won their third in a row for the first time all season, defeating the Minnesota Twins 3-1; the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Detroit Tigers 6-5; the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Boston Red Sox 5-4; the New York Yankees downed the Cleveland Indians 5-2 and the Seattle Mariners shaded the Texas Rangers 5-4 in 12 innings.

Whitt said he asked Cooney to look at the ball Keough threw "because it was a spitter. I've caught spitballs before. I know what they look like."

Martin, who was unavailable after the game, didn't take kindly to the inspection.

"He had already complained about some calls before," said Cooney. "I told him if he was going to argue about balls and strikes not to do it from the dugout. He kept on hollering, so I unloaded on him."

And vice versa as Martin raced from the dugout and crashed into the umpire.

"It was like a freight train ran into me," said Cooney. "I've never been run into that hard in my life, not even in college when I played football. I'd say his actions warranted a severe penalty."

Rich Gale and Dan Quisenberry continued their comeback from early-season pitching miseries by combining on a seven-bitter, while Willie Aikens drove in two runs.

Mariners 5, Rangers 4

Jerry Narmon led off the 12th inning with a solo home run off Bob Babcock to decide a see-saw battle in which the lead changed hands five times. Narmon entered the game in the ninth inning as a pinch hitter and singled home the first of two runs that snapped a 2-2 tie. Julio Cruz hit a sacrifice fly for the second run in the inning, but Texas tied the game in the bottom of the ninth on RBI singles by Mark Wagner and Bump Wills. Lenny Randle homered for Seattle's first two runs.

Orioles 6, Tigers 5

Rich Dauer drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and Doug DeCinces hit his seventh home run of the season, all in the last seven games. Dauer, who also walked and scored two runs, doubled one run home in the first inning against Dan Schatzeder and hit a two-run double in the fourth off Dave Rozema as the Orioles won their fourth game in a row and the 14th in their last 17. DeCinces, who did not have a homer until last Saturday, blasted his solo shot off Rozema in the seventh.

Brewers 5, Red Sox 4

Ted Simmons belted a two-run homer in the ninth inning off Boston reliever Tom Burgmeier, offsetting a two-run shot by Joe Rudi in the bottom of the eighth off Rolfe Fingers that gave the Red Sox a 4-3 lead. Milwaukee won its fourth consecutive game after being held to three hits, including solo homers by Robin Yount and Roy Howell, for eight innings by Mike Torrez. Burgmeier started the ninth by hitting Cecil Cooper with a pitch before Simmons hit his seventh homer of the season.

Yankees 5, Indians 2

New York rookie Dave Righetti fired a two-hitter for eight innings and beat Cleveland for the second time since being recalled from the minors last week as the Yankees snapped a four-game losing streak. The 22-year-old left-hander needed help from Rich Gossage in the ninth after an error and Bo Diaz' double. Cleveland's third hit, Rick Cerone drove in two runs for the Yankees with a grounder and a double, while Graig Nettles and Jerry Mumphrey added RBI singles.

Narmon Unlikely Hero for Seattle

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Jerry Narmon was an unlikely hero.

He was hitting .233, with only one home run and just seven runs batted in before Friday's night marathon, 12-inning contest with the Texas Rangers.

And even after he decided the game with a solo home run for the 5-4 Seattle victory, Narmon modestly brushed aside post-game congratulations.

"I was just trying to shorten up my swing and make contact, and that's what I did. I hit it with a good, short stroke and it just went out," Narmon said. "I should have more than two home runs by now. I'm disappointed that I don't."

The other Seattle hitting star was third baseman Lenny Randle, a former Ranger who had three hits in five times at bat, including a two-run homer in the sixth that gave the Mariners a brief 2-1 lead.

"I don't even know what kind of pitch I hit," Randle joked after the game. "It could have been a curve, it could have been a cut fastball — I don't know. I'm just going to pretend it didn't happen."

The Rangers blew several opportunities to score the game winner, including a ninth-inning flurry that died when John Grubb — batting for Bill Stein, the team's hottest hitter — grounded out feebly to first base with the winning run at third.

Texas Manager Don Zimmer, asked why he did not order Grubb to bunt, said heatedly, "I'll tell you something, there is never a 'must-bunt' situation. It is the most overrated play in the world. We must have had 10 bunts tonight that failed."

Texas left 10 men on base in the game.

The Rangers scored a single run in the fourth when Al Oliver dashed home from third as John Ellis grounded into a double play. Seattle turned three double plays in the game and Ellis hit into two of them.

After Randle's homer, Texas tied it again on Stein's solo home run in the eighth. It extended his hitting streak to 17 consecutive games, the longest in the American League this season.

Narmon opened Seattle's ninth inning rally with a pinch-hit single to score Dan Meyer and move Dave Henderson, who had walked, to third. Henderson then scored on a sacrifice fly by Julio Cruz.

Texas knotted the score in the bottom of that inning.

Leon Roberts singled, advanced on an infield out, and scored on Mark Wagner's single to left. Wagner moved to second on an infield grounder and scored when Bump Wills singled to right.

'Players Have to Turn It Around, Say Mauch

CHICAGO (AP) — Not even such famous managers as Connie Mack or John McGraw could turn a team around, says newly named California Angels Manager Gene Mauch. "The players have to do it."

Appointed Thursday to replace Jim Fregosi as manager of the Angels, Mauch said Friday: "My enthusiasm has a positive effect. It would be great. But nobody knows a team until you have lived with it."

Mauch had been director of player personnel with the Angels.

"I've watched about 20 games, I think I know what's going on and I hope I know some of the personnel," he said.

The 55-year-old Mauch has had plenty of managerial experience, managing the Philadelphia Phillies from 1960 until midseason of 1968, the Montreal Expos from 1969 through 1975 and the Minnesota Twins from 1976 until his resignation last August.

Asked why he left the Twins, Mauch replied, "That was the thing to do."

As for taking the job with the Angels, Mauch said, "This was the thing to do for the greatest number of people involved." He admitted being approached for managerial jobs as early as the end of last season and also this year.

Buzzie Bavasi, executive vice president of the Angels, said that one reason the Angels made the move from Fregosi to Mauch was, "Three clubs have expressed interest in Gene since the season began."

The New York Yankees were among those interested in Mauch's services as a manager, Bavasi said.

Pedro Guerrero hasn't been able to find a home in the outfield — but he's been doing all right at home plate.

The ultimate utilityman, Guerrero has filled in for Reggie Smith in right field, Ken Landreaux in center and even Ron Cey at third. But all this moving around obviously hasn't bothered his hitting.

He's currently batting .313 with nine home runs and 26 runs batted in, including four Friday night in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"I like playing center," said Guerrero, who was filling in for Landreaux. "The balls come straight at you. But I don't care where I play — as long as I play."

Along with his homer Friday night, Guerrero punched out two singles, one of them an RBI hit off Mike LaCoss.

"I've been hitting against LaCoss since 1976 and all he throws are sinkers and sliders," Guerrero said. "I know him pretty well by now."

In other National League action, San Francisco beat Houston 3-1; Montreal edged Pittsburgh 3-2; New York trimmed Chicago 6-1; St. Louis routed Philadelphia 11-4 and Atlanta turned back San Diego 7-1.

Guerrero singled home a run in the fourth inning off LaCoss, 2-5, and then followed singles by Steve Garvey and Cey with his homer in the sixth.

The Dodgers, expanding their lead over the Reds in the NL West to 5½ games, added another run in the seventh off reliever Doug Bair when pitcher cher Bob Welch tripled and Derral Thomas singled him home.

Welch, 3-3, blanked the Reds on six hits through the first seven innings, but Ken Griffey led off the Cincinnati eighth with a double and, one out later, George Foster slugged his 10th homer.

Steve Howe took over for Welch and recorded his fifth save.

Giants 3, Astros 1

Jack Clark singled home the tie-breaking run and scored an insurance run in the bottom of the eighth inning, leading San Francisco over Houston.

Clark, hitless in three previous at-bats, lined a base hit to left field to drive in Dave Bergman, who had walked to lead off the inning and moved to second on a sacrifice by Bill North. Derral Evans then drew an intentional walk, and Jerry Martin singled, scoring Clark and knocking loser Don Sutton, 3-6, out of the game.

Vida Blue, 5-3, worked the first eight innings for the victory.

"With men on base, he's going to go to his best stuff, and that's the curveball," said Clark of Sutton. "I was looking for it, really. It was a good pitch, down low, but I got good wood on it."

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Pitcher Scott Sanderson

drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk and Tim Lincecum followed with an infield RBI single as Montreal scored twice in the fourth inning to break a 1-1 tie and beat Pittsburgh.

Sanderson, 5-2, pitched 52-3 innings to gain the victory but was forced to leave after spraining his right ankle when his spike caught in the artificial turf during a delivery. Bill Lee yielded four hits and one run over the final 31-3 innings to collect his fifth save.

"He had been quite wild most of the night so when he fell behind on me I decided to wait," Sanderson said of his walk off Pittsburgh's Jim Bibby, 3-3.

Mets 6, Cubs 1

Mike Scott's nine-hit pitching and Dave Kingman's three-run homer led New York over Chicago.

The Mets scored a pair of runs off losing pitcher Randy Martz, 2-3, in the third. Scott, 2-4, led off with a walk and took third on Mookie Wilson's double, one of four hits for him. Bob Bailor hit a sharp grounder towards short and the ball took a bad hop over Ivan DeJesus' head, scoring two runs.

The Cubs came back with a run in the fourth before the Mets boosted their lead to 5-1 in the fifth on Kingman's three-run homer. Kingman has now hit a homer in four straight games.

Cardinals 11, Phillies 4

George Hendrick slammed three hits, including his seventh home run, and drove in three runs as St. Louis snapped a four-game losing streak by beating Philadelphia.

Winner Bob Forsch, 5-2, pitched five innings before leaving with a blister on his middle finger. Mark Littell protected the lead with four innings of one-hit relief.

Hendrick's homer in the first following a single by Gary Templeton and walk to Keith Hernandez gave the Cardinals a 3-0 lead and they were never headed. Dane Iorg also homered for the Cardinals.

Braves 7, Padres 1

Glenn Hubbard hit a two-run homer to trigger Atlanta over San Diego. Phil Niekro, 3-3, surrendered an unearned run in the sixth inning, while scattering seven hits in seven innings.

It was the 236th career victory for Niekro. After singling in the eighth, the 42-year-old pitcher left the game for pinch-runner Jerry Royster. Rick Camp pitched the final two innings to earn his fifth save.

After Dale Murphy singled in the second, Hubbard stroked his third homer of the year to give the Braves a 2-0 lead and their eventual winning run off Rick Wise, 2-4.

Strike Delay Annoys Some Players

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

A last-minute delay in the threatened baseball strike seems to have annoyed some major leaguers, while bringing a warning from a club owner that players have opened "a wound that can only fester in the future."

"Let's get it solved," pitcher Larry Gura, the Kansas City Royals' alternate player representative, said Friday. "I guess it's better for us," said Pittsburgh third baseman Bill Madlock, "but in a month, we'll probably have to go through this again and then again in two years when the (basic) agreement comes up again. If that happens, it'll take two more years for the fans to recuperate. I don't know how much more they'll put up with." Calvin Griffith, the Minnesota Twins' president, said he was relieved a strike had been averted but, like the players, wished the dispute had been resolved. "This free-agent compensation issue should have been settled last year," Griffith said. "I wish the air could be cleared and we could concentrate on baseball."

"Fans are still somewhat in doubt, as I am, about what's going to happen over this strike issue, and that doesn't lead to buying many tickets in advance." The strongest reaction came from John McMullen, chairman of the Houston Astros. "I'm sure the Players Association believes it has scored a great victory, but I believe they'll find out otherwise in the long run," McMullen said. "They've opened a new wound, a wound that can only fester in the future." Baseball's first midseason strike ever and its third walkout in nine years was averted close to the deadline Thursday in a deal between the Major League Players Association and the Player Relations Committee, the owners' bargaining group.

Negotiations are to resume in New York Monday, two days before scheduled court hearings in Rochester, N.Y., on an injunction request from the National Labor Relations Board.

U.S. District Judge Henry Werker will hear arguments on the NLRB's petition to have the owners rescind the free-agent plan they unilaterally implemented last February.

That plan, providing a major league player plus an amateur draft choice as compensation for the loss of a "ranking" free agent, sparked the players' strike threat.

The basic agreement, which averted a strike a year ago, gave the players until June 1 to strike over compensation. The two sides agreed Thursday, however, to postpone the deadline until 48 hours after Werker rules on the injunction request. So, the earliest the players could strike would be next Friday.

If Werker grants the injunction, the situation basically would return to the status of a year ago. The two sides would be given time to try to reach a compromise. If that failed, the owners could implement their own compensation plan between Feb. 15-20, 1982, and the players would then have until June 1, 1982 to strike.

NBA Votes to Redefine League's Zone Defense

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — In an attempt to clear the air, as well as the area of the court near the basket, the Rules and Competition Committee of the National Basketball Association has voted to redefine the league's rule against zone defenses.

"The principle is to keep the 'paint' open," said Joe Axelson, the NBA's Director of Operations, referring to the painted area of floor within the foul lane.

To achieve this, the committee voted Friday to recommend the adoption of six "guidelines for defensive coverage," which define precisely what is prohibited. The guidelines are technical in nature, but league officials hope the overall effect will be to clarify the anti-zone rule.

"Our zone enforcement situation was in a shambles last year," said Axelson. "We want to enter next season with everyone clear about what a zone is and what it isn't. And our referees will be instructed to enforce it 100 percent."

The guidelines will be tested in the Southern California Summer League and, if there are no problems, the committee will ask the Board of Governors to adopt them for use in the NBA next season.

The committee's recommendations came at the end of the first phase of the NBA's annual summer meetings. The governors, who have the final say on all rule matters but usually follow the committee's wishes, will begin their meeting in Cambridge, Mass., Tuesday.

Although it did not approve any major changes, the rules committee did vote to recommend:

—Lessening the penalty for zone violations, so as to encourage referees to strictly enforce the rules. No free throw will be shot until the second violation.

—Further testing of a collapsible rim this summer. If there are no problems, Axelson predicted, the rim, which is designed to prevent shattered backboards, would be in use in the NBA next season.

—Eliminating penalty free throws, thus giving players only one or two shots and not 2-for-1 or 3-for-2. This was in response to a widespread sentiment that pro players should not need such bonuses.

—Treating backcourt fouls as common fouls, with no shots taken unless a club is over the penalty limit.

—Placing the ball in play as soon as an offensive player jumps out of bounds to get it, instead of waiting for the defense to set up. This is a modified version of an international rule and will apply only after a violation in the frontcourt.

The committee voted down proposals for a no foul-out rule, extending the shot clock from 24 to 30 seconds and widening the foul lane.

Meanwhile, it was announced that the annual Hall of Fame Game at Springfield, Mass., would be played Oct. 26 between the Boston Celtics and Denver Nuggets, and that the NBA would hold a tryout session to showcase collegians and free agents prior to next June's draft.

YOU CAN BANK ON IT!

by Jeff Carlile, President Hereford State Bank

Q. In the longrun, what would be the best inflation-fighting investment - gold or savings accounts?

A. Although basically sound in terms of safety, the problem with investments in gold or collectables such as uncirculated stamps is the fact the money invested is not available to the nation's economy for the expansion of industry and the creation of jobs. Only money which goes into savings accounts, common stocks, corporate bonds and other financial assets is capable of providing business with the one commodity necessary for growth: Cash. A second aspect, detrimental to the economy, is large sums are being borrowed to finance purchases of collectables, taking additional capital out of the business investment marketplace. A turnaround in the economy requires a joint effort between investors, large and small, private and commercial.

Pat Walker's deserves a bouquet—they helped me lose 24 pounds!

Becky Hendricks' True Story:

Me, hiding in my oversized raincoat.

It seemed like everyone who came into my family's store asked me if I was putting on weight. That hurt my feelings, but I knew I had gained too much. Although I'm tall (5'10"), I couldn't excuse 164 pounds.

When I saw a newspaper ad for Pat Walker's salon close to my Stockbridge, Georgia home, I went in for a complimentary treatment. From my very first visit, I liked the encouraging attitude of the counselors. They taught me so much about how to eat sensibly, without denying myself my favorite foods.

I really like relaxing on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, too. Those sessions (2 or 3 times a week) kept my figure smooth and firm while I lost 24 pounds and a total of 30 inches.

Now, everyone compliments me on how good I look. I tell them I couldn't have done it without Pat Walker's.

Make an appointment now for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's. We'll explain how our program works, from the no-muss, no-fuss passive exercise treatments to our belief in your right to privacy. Marianna Barkley, Duncan Repeat Vows in Palestine

Marianna Barkley of Royce City and Keith Duncan, formerly of Hereford, were married recently in the presence of family at the First Methodist Church of Palestine.

Mrs. Duncan is the daughter of the late Mr. C.W. Barkley and Mrs. Janet Barkley of Royce City. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Duncan of Hereford.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple was honored with a wedding breakfast in the dining room of the Holiday Inn.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Royce City High School and attends Texas A&M University, where she will graduate in August with a bachelor of science degree in Range Management.

The groom is a 1970 Hereford High School graduate, and a graduate of Texas Tech University with bachelor of science and masters degrees in Forestry. He also will graduate from Texas A&M University in August with a doctorate degree in Range Management.

The couple will reside in College Station until August. Family members present were Mrs. Janet Barkley of Royce City, Debbie Barkley of Houston, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Melloy and Candon Melloy of Dallas, and Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Duncan of Hereford.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband recently had a severe stroke. He is paralyzed on his right side. His speech is slurred but comprehensible.

Our happily married daughter has two children and lives in Baltimore. I have pleaded with her to come and see her father, but she refuses. She says she can't face the fact that he is crippled and will never be the same daddy she used to know. Her dread is understandable, but her obstinance is killing me.

I offered to pay her plane fare (we live in California and it is an expensive trip), but it didn't change her mind. I know she really loves her father, and he is crazy about her.

Please tell me if I should stop begging her to make the trip. Also, is she wrong for refusing to come? I will be watching and waiting for your answer. — Heartbroken Mother

DEAR MOTHER: This isn't a matter of "right" or "wrong." It's a matter of emotional maturity.

I hope your daughter gets some counseling immediately. She needs to become adult enough to accept her handicapped father as he is. If she is unable to deal with this situation during his lifetime, she will carry a load of guilt to her grave.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have you to thank for helping make my life miserable. My husband and I are getting on in years. We both read your column, and once or twice you have said, "If you don't use it, you'll lose it."

Well, my husband thinks you are talking directly to him. Even though he is less and less able to perform sexually (in fact, he is darn near impotent), sex is all he thinks about. I really do enjoy it now and then (once a month is OK), but I could live without

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the call is heard in a few weeks, "Ladies ... start your engines," 85 million women will wheel their lawn mowers out of the garage, turn on their motors and be lost until October in a cloud of blue exhaust.

There is no such thing as a unisex lawn - either the husband cuts it or the woman cuts it - but whoever starts it is committed to it for life.

We bought our first lawn mower the first summer we built the house. I said, "It's cute, but what does it do?"

"It cuts grass," said my husband.

"We don't have any grass."

"I'm going to fix that," he said, and proceeded to plant grass seed.

I yelled after him, "Hey, don't do this for me. I can keep busy washing, ironing, cooking, flushing, dusting, marketing, waxing, scouring and trying to keep awake."

When the grass started to grow, he made a speech to the kids. "Look, this is your mother's mower and I don't want to catch any of you trying to start it. Do you hear? Your mother is the only one allowed to cut the grass."

Somehow that speech was funnier when Tom Sawyer first used it.

My friends tried to persuade me to hold out. They said, "If you start that motor you will cut grass the rest of your life."

The grass grew around the base of the trees and over the sidewalk. It grew beyond the shrubbery and tickled the flag on the mailbox. The house was dark even on days when the sun shone. He was faking me out.

Finally, one morning, I started the mower and cut the grass. I found a sled, a Pinto and three pre-schoolers.

It also marked my enslavement to that lousy lawn mower. I wouldn't get it cut before he'd be out planting more seeds to make it thicker, fertilizing it to make it grow taller, and rolling it to make it look like a green carpet.

I had broken my first rule of marriage ... if you can't do it sitting down, wait until you can afford to hire someone to do it.

One day, my daughter brought me a glass of water as I walked and sweated guiding my mower through the tall grass like a horse at a plow. "Just think," I said, "one day all of this will be yours."

I never saw her again.

Louise's Latest

The End of a Long Nine Months

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent
It takes nine months to get the youngsters through a school year, or to bring a child into this world. Honestly, I believe pregnancy was easier.

My three little ones and especially the oldest son are tired and ready for the summer break. It seems since daylight savings time, no one gets to bed early enough and no one gets enough sleep before the old alarm clock chimes, (if that's the word you call it). The thing they're looking forward to is being able to sleep late. Camp Fire Day Camp and Cub Scout Day Camp will take care of their sleeping late the first two weeks.

Then off to Arkansas, two kids out of three will go. That's what summer means to my children. Grandmother lets them sleep as late as they want and also stay up as late as they want. It's just like eating at a restaurant each meal. She prepares exactly what they want. And she cooks their breakfast eggs just right each time. I either get them too hard, too soft, too dry, too watery, or there's too much white showing. Picky, picky kids!

Grandmother folds their clothes, and makes their beds, and they never have to dust or water the house plants. Now can you see why life's so great at grandmother's?

Also, they can farm with Grandpa. There'll be tomatoes, peppers, watermelons and cantelopes to harvest. And there'll be irrigating. They all think it is fun to move water pipes.

Our only problem with going to Granny's is that she will only take two at a time. It's unanimous that Sis get to stay all summer. The boys half their time. It seems two children get along quite well, but three make too much interaction, or should I say they argue and two frame up against one.

Having only one child home helps Mother also. Things are so quiet. It seems there's no feuding with one. The sore throat I have from yelling gets a chance to heal. My nervous system has time to recuperate.

And the best part about summer is when we all get back together in August to start a new wonderful, exciting year of school!

Freshman Orientation Sessions For Fall Scheduled By WTSU

Students who plan to enter West Texas State University in the fall semester as beginning freshmen will have several opportunities during the summer months to participate in orientation sessions and to take college entrance examinations.

Five orientation sessions for beginning freshman students have been scheduled at the WTSU Activities Center. The sessions, which will begin at 8 a.m., will be on Friday, June 12; Friday, June 19; Friday, June 26; Friday, July 3; and Monday, July 27.

During the sessions, students will become familiar with the student life office, University Counseling and Testing Center, financial aid, registrar's office, the placement service and other aspects of university life.

Students also will receive academic advisement and plan schedules for the fall semester. The pre-enrollment process will eliminate beginning freshman students from participating in registration.

College-Level Examination Program examinations or CLEP tests which allow a student to receive course credit if a satisfactory score is achieved on the exam, will be given on campus on three Thursday mornings preceding Friday orientation sessions.

CLEP tests will be available on June 11, June 18 and July 2 at the Classroom Center. The first test costs $22 and $18 is charged for each additional test.

The American College Testing entrance examination or ACT will be administered on Wednesday, July 8, beginning at 8 a.m. in the Classroom Center for entering freshmen who have not taken the entrance exam. Cost of the exam is $10 and students must bring an identification with photograph, such as a driver's license.

Additional information about orientation and tests may be obtained from the University Counseling and Testing Center located on campus.

Popeye's Spinach Diet Low in Vital Minerals

All Popeye has to do to get enough iron in his diet is squeeze open a can of spinach. But the rest of us need a varied selection of basic foods to provide our daily intake of minerals.

There are approximately 50 nutrients needed by the body everyday. Eight nutrients (protein, vitamin A, vitamin C, Thiamin, Riboflavin, Niacin, Calcium and Iron) are called leader nutrients because selecting foods that meet the Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) for these will provide the other 42 nutrients that follow. But numerous trace elements are just now beginning to be identified as important to human nutrition says Dr. Walter Mertz, director of the Nutrition Research Center and the Chairman of the Nutrition Institute of the United States Department of Agriculture. He has researched the nutritional aspects of liver disease and the trace element chromium.

The relationship between trace elements and proper diet is a crucial one, Mertz stressed. "There are elements we know we need that we can't make in a laboratory because we haven't yet been able to isolate them," Mertz said. "The only way we can get them is in food."

"Trace minerals are unique," he continued. "In many cases we are talking about elements which occur in the body at the rate of one part per billion. That's equivalent to one drop in about 15,000 gallons. However, consider this: 15,000 gallons of jet fuel will carry a Boeing 707 from Dallas to Rome, Italy. But in terms of nutritional needs, that one drop of jet fuel, which we pointed out as representing a trace element, will make the difference in whether that plane makes it to Rome or not."

'Another Life' Comes to Cable

"ANOTHER LIFE," CBN CONTINENTAL'S LONG-AWAITED "SOAP OPERA" HAS JUNE 1 PREMIERE ON CABLE SYSTEM SERVING Hereford Cablevision, which provides cable television to the Hereford area, will bring "Another Life" to its viewers twice daily starting Monday, June first.

The program, currently well into production at the CBN Continental Broadcasting Network studios in Virginia Beach, Va., makes its debut Monday, June 1st at 10:30 a.m. and again at 6:30 p.m.

"The production facilities at this remarkable television plant are second to none," Robert Aaron, executive producer said.

"They are the equal of, or better than, anything the three major networks currently have," he pointed out. Aaron is a Harvard-trained veteran of 17½ years at NBC, including six years as director of daytime programming.

Dubbed a "soap with a new scent," the program offers what Aaron called a message of faith and a positive outlook on life that can overcome the difficulties in an increasingly frightening world.

"That message is one which we believe millions of serial viewers throughout the United States and other parts of the world will eagerly embrace," said Aaron.

"ANOTHER LIFE" will not avoid dealing with the provocative subject matter of promiscuity, adultery, child abuse, aberrations of personality, jealousy, pride, fierce ambition and lust—all of which lure over 100 million people every week to view some form of "soap" opera.

"The difference between our serial and others is that Scott and Terry Davidson will demonstrate that they have the courage and inner strength to handle whatever life visits on them," said Aaron. "The source of their strength is God."

The locale of "ANOTHER LIFE" is Virginia.

The central family is the Davidsons, who live in Richmond. Scott Davidson is a newscaster; his wife, Terry, is a practical nurse. Their daughter, Lori, 19, is a college sophomore in love with the football hero. Their son, Peter, is 16 "trying to act 30."

Another family, the Cummings, lives in a Richmond suburb. Jeff Cummings, an entrepreneur looking to make his million, is presiding over a failing marriage, a sliding sales career, and unadmitted alcoholism. He and his wife, Liz, have a daughter, Jennifer, 6.

The third major family in the plot, the Carpenters, lives on Chicago's "gold coast" in Lake Forest. Charles Carpenter, a wealthy shipping and import executive, dotes on his married daughter, Marian, a spoiled scheming wench.

Miriam is linked in a stormy marriage to Paul Mason, an associate English professor at a scholarly Virginia school, Kingsley College. The Masons have a son, Frederick, 9.

These are real-life people, confronted with real-life situations—no holds barred. But on "ANOTHER LIFE," ultimately characters will "evidence love instead of ugliness, hope instead of despair, solutions instead of nothingness—and real peace of mind to replace fears and anxieties," which provides a key to "ANOTHER LIFE."

ROOTS: THE NEXT GENERATIONS

Henry Fonda is a political leader who is forced to disown his son when the boy marries a black schoolteacher in the opening episode of "Roots: The Next Generations," which will be rebroadcast on ABC-TV, SUNDAY, MAY 31 through Sunday, July 12.

"Roots: The Next Generations" is the continuation of Alex Haley's landmark saga of the triumph of an American family, "Roots." This epic drama traces the later descendants of Kunta Kinte through nearly 100 more years of turbulent and emotionally wrenching American history.

Episode 1 begins in 1882 (12 years after the concluding episode of "Roots") when relations between the races in Henning, Tennessee, are peaceful but strained.

CHECK LISTINGS FOR EXACT TIME.

Allan Melvin in 'Archie's Place'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Allan Melvin has played Archie Bunker's best friend since 1972, but it didn't start off as a chummy relationship.

The very first time Melvin appeared on "All in the Family," it was not as Barney Hefner, best friend, but as Sgt. Pete Pulaski of New York City's finest.

"The fun of that episode was that Archie came down to the police station and was making remarks about the Polish," he recalled. "Somebody says, 'Oh, yeah, tell that to Sgt. Pulaski'—and I throw Archie into the can."

It was a few months after that that Melvin was reincarnated as Barney Hefner. He remained with the CBS show when it was changed to "Archie Bunker's Place," and only Carroll O'Connor, as the irrepressible Archie, has been with the series longer.

Melvin, who got his start as a stand-up comic and mimic and then played on Broadway in "Stalag 17," has had a long and profitable career in television as the foil to the leading man.

A lot of that time was spent in uniform. On "The Phil Silvers Show" he was Cpl. Henshaw, who was Sgt. Bilko's partner in his attempts to bilk the other soldiers. He was Dick Van Dyke's old Army buddy on his show and Sgt. Hacker on "Gomer Pyle." He also had recurring roles on "The Joey Bishop Show" and on "The Andy Griffith Show."

Norman Lear and Bud Yorkin at "All in the Family" were familiar with his work even before Sgt. Pulaski. A few years before that, he and Sorrell Booke had starred together in a pilot adapted from the "Barnaby and Mr. O'Malley" comic strip, which Lear and Yorkin had produced.

"I went in the same season from Pulaski to Barney Hefner," he said. "I think they make allowances for the fact that the audience will accept certain changes. I guess they figure since it was a one-shot I wasn't that established. I've been Barney ever since."

Melvin is also well known as Al the Plumber, a character he has played for 14 years on the Liquid Plumber commercials. Less well known is the fact that he does many cartoon voices. He has been the voice of Bluto on the "Popeye" cartoon for the past four years. He's also done the voice on "Magilla Gorilla" and has done many impressions for "The Flintstones."

Melvin was born in Kansas City, but was raised in New York and New Jersey.

Miss U.S.A. Pageant Boosts CBS Up to No. 1

NEW YORK (AP)—More people watched CBS' broadcast of the Miss U.S.A. Pageant than any other program in the week ending May 24, and the big audience helped the network regain first place in the weekly ratings race, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

CBS, in fact, listed five of the week's 10 highest-rated prime-time shows, including two movies—the theatrical film "Silver Streak" in second place and a made-for-

TV movie, "The Violation of Sarah McDavid" in fifth—and compiled a rating for the week of 16.5.

ABC, which grabbed first place from CBS the week shows among the five lowest-rated, "The Incredible Hulk" on CBS was No. 52 for the week, followed by a movie on NBC, "National Lampoon's Animal House," a CBS before, registered a rating of 14.3, with NBC third at 13.9. The networks say the figures mean in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.5 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were watching CBS.

The rating for CBS' broadcast of the beauty pageant was 22.8. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, 22.8 percent saw at least part of the show.

The 1980-81 TV season was won by CBS, and the network now has been first in the weekly competition four times in the five weeks since the season ended.

All three networks got help from movies and specials, with much of prime time taken by reruns.

"Bitter Harvest," an NBC movie, was No. 10 for the week, with an ABC film, "She's In the Army Now," tied for 11th and another movie on ABC, "Freedom," 21st. A CBS film, "Rivkin: Bounty Hunter," finished in a tie for 24th place.

CBS and NBC each had two special called "Fog," "NBC Magazine" and a special on ABC, "Mysteries of the Sea."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Miss U.S.A. Pageant," with a rating of 22.8 representing 17.7 million homes, ABC; "Silver Streak," 21.1 or 16.4 million, and "M-A-S-H," 20 or 15.6 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 19.7 or 15.3 million, ABC; Movie—"The Violation of Sarah McDavid," 19.3 or 15 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 19 or 14.8 million, and "Too Close for Comfort," 18.7 or 14.5 million both ABC; "The Jeffersons," CBS, and "Laverne and Shirley," ABC, both 18.2 or 14.2 million, and Movie—"Bitter Harvest," 18 or 14 million, NBC.

The next 10 programs:

"Dukes of Hazzard," CBS, and Movie—"She's In the Army Now," ABC, tie; "House Calls," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; "Real People," NBC, and "Hart to Hart," ABC, tie; "Facts of Life," NBC, and "That's Incredible," ABC.

'South Pacific' To Air Monday

Bristol Myers Theatre presents SOUTH PACIFIC, the film version of Rodger's and Hammerstein's Broadway musical about World War II action and romance on a tropical island, Monday, June 1 at 8:00 p.m. (Eastern) on SuperStation WTBS, Atlanta. The movie will be fully sponsored by Bristol Myers and will air with limited commercial interruptions.

Starring Mitzi Gaynor and Rossano Brazzi, SOUTH PACIFIC sets a charming love story and 17 sparkling songs against the backdrop of war to create such unforgettable numbers as "Some Enchanted Evening," "There's Nothing Like A Dame," "Bali Hi Hi" and "Younger Than Springtime."

Based on James A. Michener's "Tales Of The South Pacific" and filmed on exquisite Kauai, Hawaii, the story centers on the love that grows between Nellie Forbush, a sweet young Navy nurse stationed on the island, and Emile De Becque, a rich, charming French planter who came there to escape his past, and who ends up a hero when he leads the troops to a remote outpost overlooking the Japanese fleet.

SOUTH PACIFIC also stars Juanita Hall as the fiery native peedler known as Bloody Mary, a woman renowned for her ability to procure any commodity. France Nuyen appears in her film debut as Liat, Bloody Mary's pretty daughter, who finds herself falling for a young military man named Lieutenant Cable, played by John Kerr.

SOUTH PACIFIC was directed by Joshua Logan (Bus Stop, Ensign Pulver, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, etc.), with musical direction by Alfred Newman.

Sound Country

Barbara Mandrell proves she is still very much "in the country."

with her newest MCA single, "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool." Barbara, with some help from George Jones, sings about being country way back before the "Urban Cowboy" days and being proud of it. And to the folks who ask if that isn't someone imitating George Jones on the record... it's Jones for sure!

The recent "Pioneer Award" presentation made to Ernest Tubbs during the Academy of Country Music Awards show has prompted Tubbs fans to clamor for his product. And the first item to come to mind is his Legend & Legacy album, which was most successful.

HBO starviews

By Jennifer Wood

When New Jersey-bred John Travolta roped his starring role in Urban Cowboy (appearing on HBO this month), he didn't reckon on the rough treatment he got from one of his "co-stars": a mechanical bull. As the honky-tonking Bud, Travolta is called on to dance, fight and ride the bull in what he calls "my most physical picture to date. I'm sure I was on that bull for a month," says the man who turned from disco king to a down-home, contemporary cowboy. Spending hours at Gilley's famed Texas boots-and-beer club to make his portrayal authentic, he learned how to handle the rigors of bull-riding. "Travolta got so good," says the stuntman who coached him, "that we decided to use him in all the stunts rather than have a double."

Robert Redford once took a sabbatical from stardom, and it looks like he may have to do it again. The magnetic star of The Electric Horseman (on HBO this month) is even more sought-after now that he's won an Oscar for directing Ordinary People, and he finds his superstar status difficult to handle. Just before filming the modern-day Western, he abandoned movieland for over three years. "I was frightened by the size of the image emerging at that time," he confesses. "My name would pop up on 'Hollywood Squares.' My face appeared in comic strips. I began to feel like a cartoon-celebrity figure." Not until he was hooked by what he calls the "fairy-tale kind of charm" of Electric Horseman did he reenter the spotlight. Can another sabbatical be far behind?

It was a cinch for Shelley Duvall to beat out the competition for the role of Jack Nicholson's wife in the horror hit The Shining (on HBO this month). There wasn't any. "She was my first and only choice for the part," says director Stanley Kubrick. Not bad for a lady who had no intention of becoming an actress. She got into movies accidentally, meeting director Robert Altman through a former artist-boyfriend. Altman was making Brewster McCloud at the time, and asked her to join the cast. "I really began to get suspicious," she remembers, "but when Mr. Altman asked me for my telephone number, I gave it to him, figuring I was safe. After all, my father is a lawyer." And the rest, as movie fans around the world know, is history.

As the elegant hustler in American Gigolo (on HBO this month), Richard Gere is sexier and more compelling than ever to the delight of his millions of fans. Very few people would probably guess at the traditional background he brings to untraditional roles, stretching from Looking For Mr. Goodbar to Blood- Brothers and now Gigolo. Bachelor Gere prepped for movie stardom on the theatrical stage, triumphing in two Shakespeare productions — Taming of the Shrew and A Midsummer Night's Dream — before he hit Hollywood. And contrary to his image, he does have a lighter side: in 1973, he was a star in the Broadway musical smash Grease playing heartthrob Danny Zuko.

New Book

'I've Heard Those Songs Before'

By MIKE COCHRAN

Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In 1942, America was at war. Manila, Bataan and Corregidor fell, and marines were fighting at Guadalcanal.

Back home, women were becoming WAACs, WAVES, SPARs and WASPs.

Gasoline, tires, sugar and coffee were obtained with ration stamps and the wartime tunes included "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree" and "This is Worth Fighting For."

But Bing Crosby had the nation dreaming of a "White Christmas."

It was the runaway hit song of the year and would, of course, become an American classic.

Nothing, it's been said, brings back a memory like a song.

In fact, Elston Brooks says so in the forward to his book, "I've Heard Those Songs Before," published recently by William Morrow & Co.

Called the ultimate guide to popular music, the book is the only known compilation of the Top Ten songs since 1930, listed week by week.

Hardly earth-shattering perhaps, but "Songs" is almost as much fun as it is informative.

And, as Brooks, longtime show biz columnist for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, says: "At least it will eliminate all those I am bar-room bet phone calls..."

In case you've ever wondered, the song longest on "Your Hit Parade" was

"People Will Say We're in Love."

The year was 1943 and the record was 30 weeks. But the tune that remained No. 1 the longest was "Too Young," Nat King Cole's lilting love song of 1951.

It was No. 1 for 12 weeks.

You may be surprised to learn that "Stardust" never made it to the top.

Even stranger, the No. 1 tune of the depression year 1930: "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Fifty years later, a group called Air Supply recorded something called "Lost in Love" and, with six weeks as No. 1, it ruled as the top song of 1980.

But how about 1969, when Americans were putting footprints on the moon? Or 1974, when President Nixon resigned? And 1956, the year of Elvis Presley?

In 1969 it was "Aquarius" and in '74 it was "I Honestly Love You."

Elvis was all over the 1956 Hit Parade with such tunes as "Heartbreak Hotel," "Blue Suede Shoes," "Hound Dog," and "Love Me Tender."

But the winner, with seven weeks as No. 1: "Canadian Sunset."

Elvis never had a single song dominate the charts long enough to win yearly honors but the Beatles did. It was "I Want to Hold Your Hand" in 1964.

Incidentally, it was "Goodnight, Sweetheart," and "All of Me" that monopolized the top spot during the 1931-1932 origination year of "Stardust."

Some oddities (and not-so-oddities):

— "Lost in a Fog," which even Brooks didn't remember, was the top tune of 1934, beating out such standards as "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "Let's Fall in Love."

— In 1935, radio recognized the top songs of the week with the first broadcast of a new weekly Saturday night network show, "Your Hit Parade." The first song to be No. 1: "Soon."

— 1936 was the "year of the ultimate love story," when a king, England's Edward VIII, surrendered his throne to marry the woman he loved, Wallis Warfield Simpson. The top songs: A tie between "Did I Remember" and "The Way You Look Tonight."

— In 1941, "I Hear a Rhapsody" became the first song to hold the top spot for 10 weeks, a record matched a year later by "White Christmas."

— The top songs of the war years included "You'll Never Know," "My Heart Tells Me," "I'll Be Seeing You," "Don't Fence Me In," "That Old Black Magic" and "As Time Goes By."

— Broadway's "South Pacific" provided the runaway hit, "Some Enchanted Evening," in 1949, followed in 1950 by "My Foolish Heart" and the 1951 biggie, "Too Young."

— Dwight Eisenhower won the presidency in 1952 but it was Pfc. Eddie Fisher who made the most noise: "Tell Me Why," "I'm Yours," "Anytime," and "Lady of Spain."

— The 1950s produced such hits as "You Belong to Me," "Song From Moulin Rouge," "Hey There," "It's All in the Game" and, in 1959, "Mack the Knife." But a movie called "The Blackboard Jungle" and a tune called "Rock Around the Clock" arrived in 1955. "It signaled the beginning of the end for an entire era of popular music," wrote Elston Brooks. "The Big Beat had a foothold."

— Elvis and the Beatles and rock 'n' roll were the cornerstone of the 1960s, but remember these: "Moon River," "More," "The Shadow of Your Smile," "Gentle on My Mind" and Sinatra's "Strangers in the Night?"

— Still, no amount of music or miniskirts could overshadow the madness of that decade: Vietnam; the murders of JFK, RFK, and Martin Luther King; the University of Texas sniper; the massacre of the Chicago nurses.

— Somehow the decade ended on a high note. Apollo 11 flew into the history books, sending home a recorded melody from space. It began: "Fly me to the moon..."

— The '70s included such songs as "For All We Know," "Watching Scotty Grow," "Rainy Days and Mondays," "Superstar," "American Pie," "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," "Song Sung Blue," "Alone Again," "Brandy," "If I Could Reach You," "And I Love You So," "Angie Baby," "After the Lovin'," "Just the Way You Are," "Time Passages," and the tune that became symbolic with the anti-feminist movement, "I Am Woman."

That's pretty much it for this half century. If we missed your songs, don't worry. As Elston says, "They're all inside, too. Have fun."

Nashville Sets 10th Fan Fare

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)

— Yee-haaa!

That's the password in Nashville this coming week as 15,000 rabid, clamoring country music fans swamp the self-proclaimed Music City USA for the 10th annual Fan Fair.

For $35 a person, fans get to attend four days of concerts, a celebrity softball tournament, a fiddling contest and stroll through Municipal Auditorium and its 274 exhibition booths.

It's a party with plenty of country music. And bluegrass music. And Cajun music.

There are three concerts Wednesday totaling five hours, four Thursday covering eight hours, five Friday for 7½ more hours and two Saturday for 4½ more hours.

That's 25 hours of music for $35, a bargain considering country music concerts around the country average $8 per person for two hours or so.

It's such a bargain that fans from as far away as Australia, Ireland, Scotland, Japan, Switzerland, Canada and England had registered by April.

Among the performers appearing at the various concerts will be Barbara Mandrell, Patti Page, Ray Price, Marty Robbins, Dave Dudley, Earl Thomas Conley, Freddie Hart, Sammi Smith, Shelly West, David Frizzell, O.B. McClinton, Janie Fricke, Mickey Gilley, Ronnie McDowell, Alabama, the Oak Ridge Boys, Susie Allanson, Johnny Carver, Jimmy C. Newman, Tammy Wynette, Patsy Montana, Stonewall Jackson, Webb Pierce, Grandpa Jones and Kitty Wells.

Although not an official part of the event, the nationally televised Music City News awards show is Monday night at the Grand Ole Opry House, with Tammy Wynette, Roy Clark and the Statler Brothers as hosts. The winners are picked by readers of the Music City News, a Nashville music publication.

A main point of interest is the booths at the Municipal Auditorium where last year fans could buy Merle Haggard plastic discs, Helen Cornelius cameo pins and Ernie Ashworth paperweights. For the frugal, Barbara Mandrell crackers and Archie Campbell golf tees were free.

One of the exhibits last year was a rose garden, complete with a life-size gazebo, in honor of Lynn Anderson's hit song "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden."

Another attraction is the downtown Ryman Auditorium, home of the Grand Ole Opry until 1974, when the long-running country music show moved to the Opryland USA amusement park northeast of Nashville. The Ryman Auditorium is now used for tours, except for occasional TV shows.

At Bushland Wheat Hybrids Shown At Wheat Field Day

Checking Wheat
Dr. K.B. Porter, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (left), and Gary Gunter of Claude look over a plot of TAM 105 at the Annual Wheat Field Day at Bushland Thursday.

Wheat hybrids were featured during the Annual Wheat Field Day Thursday at the USDA Conservation and Production Laboratory near Bushland. Over 60 hybrids were being evaluated in two irrigated experiments by Dr. K.B. Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Wheat Breeder.

Many of the hybrids being tested were produced with a chemical hybridizing agent. This chemical is sprayed on wheat at the correct stage of growth to produce male sterility. Hybrids are produced by growing sterilized strips between desirable pollinators. Some of the hybrids are expected to produce close to 100 bushels per acre.

With male sterile wheat lines, poor pollination and seed set has made production of wheat hybrids difficult. "The new chemical hybridizing agent is a big breakthrough that will speed development of hybrid wheat," Porter said.

There were also over 200 pure line varieties and experimental lines being evaluated under irrigation. TAM 105 which was released two years ago is still the top yielder according to Porter.

Experimental lines of wheat being tested for resistance to greenbug and wheat streak mosaic. The wheat breeder hopes to have resistant varieties available to growers in three to four years.

Jack Musick, USDA Irrigation Engineer described research evaluating limited irrigation and plant water stress on water use efficiency on TAM W-101 and Post barley. There are eight water treatments receiving none, one, two or three spring irrigations. Musick said, "During the past two good wheat years, we produced from 90 to 100 bushels per acre with two spring irrigations." "This year it will take a third irrigation to produce top yields," he continued. The tests were planted on fallowed land and received one irrigation in the fall. The most important irrigation was late boot to heading. Irrigating early spring growth did not have much affect on yield according to the engineer.

Because new wheat varieties produce up to 100 bushels per acre, Dr. Harold Eck, USDA Scientist, is determining the interaction of irrigation level on fertilizer requirement. Similar research was conducted over 10 years ago when wheat yields were less than 50 bushels per acre. This study also is a small part of the Agriculture and Resources Inventory Surveys through Aerospace Remote Sensing (AGRISTARS program) with NSAS.

The ultimate objective of this part of the study is measuring crop condition from satellites. Eck says, "We are relating reflectance of difference light wavelengths to the amount of green material and general condition of plants."

Dryland alfalfa seed production was described by O.R. Jones. In 1980, a very dry summer, his test yielded 200 pounds per acre of seed. He planted the alfalfa in rows at 0.5 to 6 pounds of seed per acre.

Dr. Noland Clark described wind machines being tested at the Research Laboratory. There are vertical axis wind turbines that generate from 5 to 100 kW. There is a horizontal axis wind machine that generates 20 kW in a 30 mph wind. He says the will produce electricity at about 6 cents per kilowatt.

Other side trips available to visitors were a Whole Wheat Bread Making Demonstration by Ms. Irene Keating and Ms. Barbara Fowton, Home Economists from Randall and Potter Counties. Visitors also viewed a dryland wheat nursery, furrow diking and a demonstration of no-tillage sorghum planters.

Cheese may be the traditional bait for rat traps, but scientists say rats have a passionate preference for gum drops.

GSPA, TGSPB Offices To Be Moved to Abernathy

The offices of Grain Sorghum Producers Association (GSPA) and Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board (TGSPB) will be relocated in Abernathy, Texas on June 1. Announcement of the move was made this week by Albert Harp, Executive Director of both organizations.

Grain Sorghum Producers Association, founded in 1955, is the only national organization of sorghum producers. It has approximately three thousand members with state organizations in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas. Its president is Mabry Foreman, a farmer and rancher who lives in Felt, Okla.

GSPA is dedicated to its original goal - to strengthen the economy of grain sorghum production through research, market development and legislation. Since its inception, GSPA has been the voice of the grain sorghum industry where legislative representation is needed.

Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board was established by a referendum of grain sorghum producers in 1969. It represents a 29-county area of the Texas High Plains. It is supported by a voluntary assessment of 5 cents per ton collected by the elevator. Checkoff programs are in effect on other commodities in most agricultural states. A

U.S., Worldwide Cotton Stocks to Dwindle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cotton stocks both in the United States and worldwide will dwindle this season, the Agriculture Department reports.

But production should outstrip consumption again next season, largely because of improved prospects for American producers, analysts predict.

"If these early forecasts of production and use are realized, world stocks could increase slightly next year," department analysts said in summarizing their cotton outlook report Thursday. The report itself will be published in two weeks.

Despite record crops in China and Russia, the report said world cotton production for the year running through this July will be only 65.5 million bales while demand will hit an all-time high of 66.2 million bales.

Demand on the U.S. crop, cut 25 percent to 11.1 million bales because of adverse growing conditions, likely will force American cotton stocks to 2.5 million bales Aug. 1, the lowest level in three decades, the analysts said.

"Although total use (in the U.S.) will likely be 25 percent below a year earlier, it still could exceed production by about 700,000 bales," the report predicted.

The general state of the American economy drove domestic cotton use down 15 percent in the first three months of this year, and the report said, "A slow recovery from 1980's recession continues to affect mill use."

Overall, it said, mill use probably will hit 5.8 million bales by the end of July, down from last year's 6.5 million. Somewhat offsetting that are greater-than-expected cotton exports, the report said. While still well behind last year's record, exports commitments at mid-May totaled 6.2 million bales compared to initial projections for about 6 million bales.

But, according to the report, the "supply and demand situation could ease slightly during 1981-1982 ... primarily because of a larger U.S. crop."

Favorable weather so far this year has bolstered prospects of a 13.8 million bale crop for American producers, pushing world production next season to 68.9 million bales.

Export and mill demand for U.S. cotton next year should run about 13.1 million bales, the report said, and world consumption, while expected to set another record, will rise to only 67.9 million bales.

U.S. cotton prices, which had been up earlier this season because of the tight supply, have begun falling off, partly in expectation of improved supplies next year, the analysts said.

They emphasized the uncertainty of projections made now but said, "Mill use and production could increase next season, with the gap between them expanding slightly."

That, coupled with the larger U.S. crop next season, the report said, improves prospects for higher exports, possibly about 7 million bales.

Food For Thought

Gerald McCathern

It is surprising the kind of information you can glean by reading the newspapers. For instance, last week I was reading my local newspaper, the Hereford Brand, and came across a very interesting article with a Washington date-line.

"The government's eight prison farms," it said, "encompassing some 63,000 acres, will be shut down later this year," officials of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons say.

"They really don't make very much and they don't cost very much," bureau spokesman Michael Aun said Wednesday. "Our best analysis is that they are marginal operations and may be costing us up to $200,000 a year more than they bring in."

Glory be! And with free labor and using tax dollars, the government admits that farming is a losing proposition!

It reminds me of former Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland's statement when asked, after the election, if he intended to return to his six hundred acre farm in Minnesota. "No," he said, "there is no way I could make enough money on that farm to live and send my kids to college!"

This is the same government and government employees who are telling farmers that they can't have increased commodity prices because they will price themselves out of the world market.

At least President Reagan recognizes this sad shape of agriculture because shutting down the prison farming operations is part of his budget reductions. "It has all been worked out with the Justice Department. The budget cutters are counting on it," said Aun.

I thought it was interesting to note that the closing of the prison farms on only 63,000 acres is going to destroy the jobs of 69 supervisory employees and 314 working inmates. Now if we can just convince the policy makers that closing down family farms thru bankruptcy destroys a like amount of jobs, perhaps they will become concerned.

The loss of 2000 farmers per week (USDA statistics) during the past ten years could relate to an additional unemployment rate of 10,000 farm workers per week, using that same ratio. Of course, the prison, being a part of the government bureaucracy, will be able to just transfer those displaced persons into another area of government work, making new jobs for them.

"The other prison industries, which employ some 6500 federal inmates will be unaffected by the budget reductions," he said. Those industries, which Aun said were profitable, include furniture manufacturing, metal working, and electronic data processing."

Well, the article really didn't tell me anything I didn't already know about farming. I've known for several years that it was very difficult to do anything in agriculture that would make a profit.

However, I did learn, by reading the article, that you can make a profit manufacturing furniture, metal working, and data processing. My advice to you farmers who are struggling to make ends meet, get your hammers and saws and start building furniture, your cutting torch and welders and start doing metal work, and trade that old worn out adding machine and typewriter in on some data processing equipment and start processing some data. If the government can make a profit doing it, even with free labor, I know that farmers can!

Now that is food for thought.

Ethyl Alcohol, Alternate Fuel

COLLEGE STATION — When the availability of fuel becomes more important to agricultural producers than the price, Texas A&M engineers will be able to tell them all about an available alternate fuel — ethyl alcohol or ethanol.

The engineers have been running a research and demonstration ethanol production plant for the last five months. It produces 184 proof alcohol from grain through a series of fermentation and distillation processes. It's just a matter of cooking the alcohol up, as Henry O'Neal explains.

"To this point we have used only grain sorghum and corn as the feedstock for making alcohol," O'Neal says. "The general process is to, first, grind the grain, put it into a cooker, add water and add an enzyme to keep the mixture liquid during the heating process."

"This mash is heated to just below boiling and cooked for about an hour. Then it is cooled down to between 95 degrees and 100 degrees F. Another enzyme is added to change the starch to sugar, then yeast is added to begin the fermentation of the sugar."

It's allowed to ferment for three to four days, after which we have an alcohol concentration of about 10 percent," explains O'Neal. "Finally, the alcohol is distilled so we can get a high enough proof to use as fuel."

The production plant at Texas A&M is a small-scale model and has less cooking and fermenting capacity than an actual on-farm plant would have. The demonstration model has four cooking tanks, each with a 12½-bushel grain capacity, which gives the plant a 30-gallon per day production rate. Its distillation capacity is 10 gallons per hour.

"There are some residues left which are a good protein source for feeding livestock," O'Neal says. "We are easily recovering 8 pounds of 27 to 28 percent protein per bushel of grain that went into the cooker."

Many products can be fermented to produce ethanol, including wheat, potatoes, sugar cane, sweet sorghum and sugar beets. The engineers plan on testing the production potential of several feedstocks. Thus far, they have found that grain sorghum and corn both produce 2½ gallons of 184 proof ethanol per bushel.

"We will be using the alcohol we produce in a 1,000-hour engine test," O'Neal says, "so we can get a feel for an out-of-the-ordinary wear or maintenance that might have to be taken into account if we're going to use this alcohol as a fuel under long-term conditions."

The energy requirements of the plant and environmental and safety aspects of alcohol production are also being studied.

Research and demonstration data are available to the public, and tours of the plant can be arranged through your local county Extension agent.

Increased Graduate Fund Announced

HOUSTON — The announcement of an increase in funding to graduate assistants, upcoming scholarship presentations totaling $600,000 and major scheduling changes beginning in 1982 highlighted the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Annual Membership Meeting held Wednesday in the Astrohall.

Show President Allen H. Carruth announced that the Show is increasing the value of individual graduate assistantships from $4,800 to $5,400 annually. Each year, the Show funds about 20 graduate assistantships as part of our total scholarship program," said Carruth. "With this increase, the amount available in this area is $108,000."

This funding is only a small part of the Show's renowned scholarship program. "In the next six weeks, the Show will present 100, four-year scholarship valued at $6,000 each. These annual grants are divided evenly between 4-H and FFA recipients and represent a commitment of $600,000," noted Carruth. The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo is the nation's largest donor of agricultural scholarships with total commitments for 1982. "By eliminating the rodeo's opening at a Friday matinee and by increasing the number of evening performances, we are giving more people the opportunity to come to the Show," he said. Carruth noted that all changes were in response to public demand.

"With horse show activities in full swing the first weekend, plus the Bar B Que, Fiddlers and Hay Hauling contests, there's always been a lot to see on the show grounds. Now, the carnival and all commercial exhibits will be open too, and livestock in excess of $2 million.

Carruth then announced major changes in scheduling that will take effect with the 1982 Show, the 50th Anniversary event.

"We are moving the date of our big rodeo kick off parade to the first Saturday of activities, February 20. Livestock judging will begin on Monday, February 22, allowing for two extra days of competition. The rodeo will open on Wednesday night, February 24, rather than on the first Friday of livestock judging."

He emphasized that there will be 16 rodeo performances will be arriving to fill the barns, giving spectators a full house of stock show fun."

The longer livestock show judging will enable the Show to handle its heavy schedule, as well as add new events. Carruth noted that the Show has been able to grant breed association requests for new shows. "In 1982, we'll have Chianina and Pinzgauer shows for the first time."

He also indicated that there would be more sales than ever in 1982. "Right now, we are scheduling some 27 auctions to be held in conjunction with our Show. These include independent breed association sales, as well as our own record-breaking junior market auctions."

To facilitate the changes, some junior livestock show judging has been moved to the first week of competition.

"The first week used to belong exclusively to the professional stockman," Carruth said, "but, for the past two years, entries have forced us to schedule some junior show competition earlier. We anticipate moving all junior dairy show competition into the first week and going to a staggered arrival and release program to take full advantage of the barn space. These changes add up to something the exhibitors will welcome."

Corn Yield Contest Information Available

Information concerning the 1981 Corn Yield Contest sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association is now available, according to William R. Mullins, NCGA President Shabbona, Illinois, and Roger Kreutz, Chairman, NCGA Corn Yield Contest Committee from Giltner, Nebraska.

There will once again be three contests in which both irrigators and non-irrigators can compete:

- 1) Class A Non-Irrigated Division
- 2) Class AA Non-Irrigated Division
- 3) Class A Irrigated Division

The Class AA Non-Irrigated Division is restricted to producers residing in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio and Wisconsin. The Class A Non-Irrigated Division consists of producers in the remaining states while the Class A Irrigated Division is open to corn farmers in all states.

Entrants must be members of the National Corn Growers Association and members of the state association from the state in which they reside, if that state is affiliated with the National Corn Growers Association. Approximately 1,000 corn farmers participated in the 1980 Corn Yield Contest and, by all indications, 1981 entries will exceed the levels established last year.

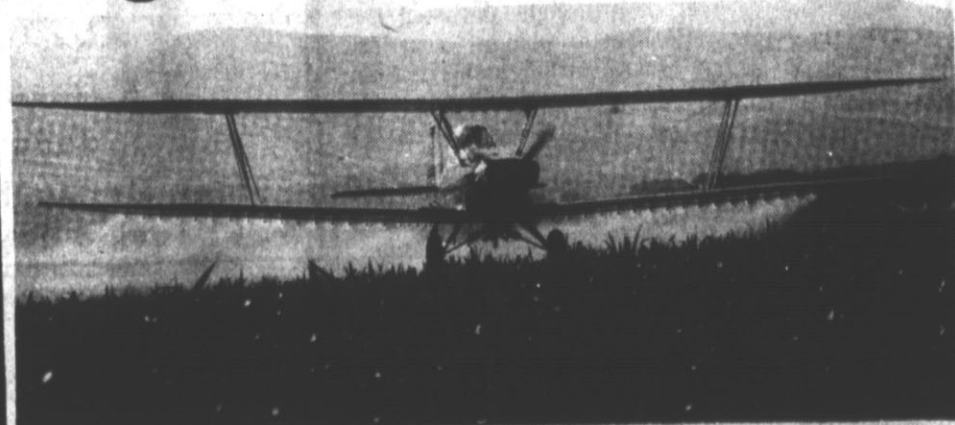

Application forms, copies of the rules, and additional information can be obtained by calling or writing:

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is made up of corn producers from 16 states, with the purpose of promoting the general welfare of U.S. corn farmers by maintaining and developing domestic corn production and price and income support programs consistent with a market-oriented grain economy. The activities of the organization are conducted through two offices, located in Des Moines, Iowa and in Washington, D.C. State members of the National Corn Growers Association include Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Marketing Options Available to Fruit Growers

COLLEGE STATION — With the season for fresh fruits and vegetables at hand, growers may want to consider some of the newer marketing options, says Gordon R. Powell, economist —

Besides traditional marketing systems — and the popular roadside markets — other options include the farmers' market or community produce market, self-serve selling, rent-a-tree, mail order gift baskets, and selling from a truck, Powell explains. Consumers and growers often benefit from the direct sales.

"The farmers' market has as its primary function to bring together two or more producers to provide and sell locally — grown produce to consumers in a specific area. This type of marketing system offers advantages to both producers and consumers," Powell says.

For the producer, he explains, collective selling attracts more customers because of the variety of products offered for sale. The product mix and number of sellers also offers consumers a greater variety of produce which is usually fresher and may be less expensive than in some local stores.

"To some, the farmers' market provides an opportunity to special order produce in quantities for home preservation directly from producers. Other advantages include the opportunity to attract customers to a less known business area within a community — or even a declining business district — and to improve farmer — consumer understanding through this direct contact," Powell says.

Disadvantages of a farmers' market need to be considered, too. Selling through this system requires producers to absorb the cost of transportation and selling their product. Time spent in selling means time away from the farm and limited productivity when business at the market is slow. It also may be difficult to find good market managers at an affordable salary level, the specialist says.

Self-serve selling has been successful for some smaller operators when sales volume does not warrant full-time sales personnel. With this system, the operators stock the sales rooms or outlets with available products, and consumers buy on a self-serve basis and leave payment. The system reduces labor requirements but also increases the risk of theft. The "rent-a-tree" option allows the consumers to make a contract with growers for the yield of a certain fruit tree or row of field produce. The growers do all the cultural operations to produce the product and supply the equipment for the harvest. This method has been successful in many European countries, says Powell.

Gift baskets which are sold by mail orders are popular with products which can be packaged attractively and have limited perishability. This marketing option works well for citrus, fruits, herbs, holly and flowers. Success is generally limited to specialty products and is usually seasonal.

Another direct marketing option is selling from a truck or "peddling." Here, producers sell and deliver to retail stores, institutions, restaurants and other customers. Advantages of this system, Powell explains, are low overhead, easy entry into the business when a product surplus exists, and easy exit from business when product supply is short.

Some of these selling options are often combined with other marketing alternatives to increase sales, Powell emphasizes. In every instance, producers who plan to sell direct to consumers need to determine if they will be required to have a permit or license to operate an off-farm market, he adds.

$113,731,850 in Ag Products Bought in Texas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Goods and agricultural products totaling $113,731,850 were purchased in Texas last year for the United States foreign assistance overseas programs by the Agency for International Development.

The United States furnishes assistance to about 100 countries to help improve standards of life. Most have populations plagued by disease, illiteracy, malnutrition and lack of economic opportunity. Many supply raw materials for U.S. industry and are growing U.S. export customers.

In Fiscal Year 1980 Texas farmers and food processors received $96.3 million for grain and other agricultural commodities provided in the Food for Peace program administered overseas by AID. Manufacturers and businesses received $17,431,850 for goods and commodities used in development programs.

AID spent a total of $726.8 million with U.S. suppliers from virtually every state for goods and services. Purchases of agricultural products totaled $1,252,100,000.

AID also negotiated technical service contracts totaling $10,992,563 as of Sept. 30, 1980 with Texas universities and other private institutions for research or services of development experts overseas. Technical research and service contracts across the country totaled $628,301,493.

The U.S. also benefits from assistance programs of the multinational development organizations, such as the World Bank and the United Nations Development Program. Purchases of goods and services in the United States by these organizations were approximately $500 million in 1980.

AID supports overseas programs to increase agricultural productivity, slow population growth, raise the level of education, and improve health in developing countries on the premise this is an investment in "human capital," one of the basic steps toward economic growth.

The $726.8 million spent in Fiscal Year 1980 included $300.6 million for raw materials and semi-finished products such as fats and oils, chemicals, tobacco, iron and steel, textiles, and paper products. Machinery and parts accounted for $197.9 million, transportation equipment and parts for $107.9 million, foodstuffs $68.8 million and fertilizers and feed $47.3 million.

A large segment of the U.S. support is aimed at a group of countries threatened by political and social turbulence, whose stability is considered vital for regional and world peace and U.S.

security. Example: large amounts of support for Israel and Egypt while they develop stability in the Middle East.

In the past 12 years more than 5,000 manufacturers and suppliers in the 50 states and District of Columbia have received AID-financed orders totaling $9.1 billion.

In the same period more than $14.350 billion in U.S.

agricultural commodities were shipped to poor nations under Food for Peace programs.

Since 1969, the first year that detailed records were kept, AID has spent $457,352,600 in Texas for manufactured goods and services. No similar record of state allocations is available for Food for Peace.

Local Student Wins Essay Contest

Anjani Wuerflein, a fifth grade student at West Central Elementary School is the county winner of the Conservation Essay Contest which is sponsored by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District.

Miss Wuerflein, 11, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wuerflein of 136 Oak.

The winning essay follows: CONSERVATION - OUR BEST INSURANCE

Conservation is everybody's business. To the hunter, conservation is wildlife. To the farmer, conservation is controlling soil erosion. To the housewife, it means better food. Most of the food that supports living things comes from the soil.

Soil forms a very thin layer on the surface of the earth. If erosion is permitted, fertile soil may be blown away or washed away. Rotation of farm crops is a good method of conserving the soil. Yet soil may be blown away in a few years. This happens if erosion takes place.

Erosion has ruined 50 million acres of land. Another 50 million acres has been partially ruined. Our country's yearly loss was 40 million dollars.

To keep this from happening, soil-building elements should be added when needed. Crops with small roots should be planted on level land. Such crops form a network of roots which help hold the soil. Rain washes away much of our soil, but cross slopes allow rain to soak into the ground instead of running off.

Another way to control erosion is by returning as much humus bearing material as possible to the land.

The humus acts like a blotter and holds the water for some time. Plants and animals add this humus, a rich plant food, to the topsoil.

Actually, the very thin layer of soil on the surface of the earth averages only two or three feet in thickness, compared with the earth's diameter of 8,000 miles, while the topsoil is usually in inches. This topsoil is so precious because most of our food comes directly from the soil.

Even though the forces of nature are constantly at work making soil out of rock. It takes several hundred years to build an inch of topsoil by natural means.

That's why we must conserve our land.

Wheat Must be Checked to Determine Eligibility of Disaster Payment

1981 Disaster Program

We don't like it, but we have got it. The dry weather has taken its toll on our dry land wheat crop. Let me just remind you, if you want to be eligible for any disaster payment, we have to look at the wheat before you make other use of the land.

Payments are figured just like in the past, at 60 percent of your yield. That is, if you have a 20 bu. yield - 20 bu. x 60 percent equals 12 bu. x $1.91 payment rate equals $22.92 - if you do not make any wheat. If you make 6 bu. of wheat you would get paid on 6 bu. x $1.91 which would equal $11.46.

We also have a good deal if you want to plow up your dry land wheat that is burned up and summer fallow the land. We would pay you the full payment, so long as you agree not to plant back to any other crop for 1981.

Changes in Storage Loans:

The interest rate on 1981 farm storage loans has been increased from 12.5 percent to 14.5 percent. The provisions of the farm facility loan program were changed to help cut Federal spending.

The maximum loan amount was lowered from $100,000 to $50,000.

Farmers will be required to make a minimum down payment of 25 percent instead of 15 percent and to repay the loan in five years instead of eight. A producer's storage needs will be based on one year's production instead of two, and all existing storage space will be considered in determining the storage capacity.

If this program does not sound too bad and you want to build some grain storage, we will try to help you.

Deadlines

The final date to request a loan on your 1980 crop corn, grain sorghum, soybeans and cotton is May 31, 1981.

The final certificate date for all summer seeded crops will be September 1, 1981. As soon as your crops have been planted and you have a good stand, come on in and report your acreages. That way you won't have to stand in line like you did to certify your wheat, and we can do a better job for you when we are not rushed.

U.S., Soviet Union Have Scheduled Talks in June

LONDON (AP) —

The United States and the Soviet Union will hold talks in London in early June on new sales of American grain to the Soviets, U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block said this week.

Since President Reagan lifted the partial U.S. grain embargo against the Soviets April 24, representatives of the two countries have had a series of meetings to discuss the resumption of sales under an existing five-year agreement that expires at the end of September.

Block, on a two-week European tour, told reporters the London talks will take place June 8 and 9 and will focus on "additional sales of grain" under the current agreement.

He said it was "entirely possible" the two governments would also discuss a renewal of the long-term bilateral grain agreement.

No decision has been made about how much grain would be made available to the Soviets, Block said, but he added, "We obviously have a lot of grain to sell," including a large surplus of wheat and corn.

The embargo was imposed by President Jimmy Carter after the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979. The existing agreement provided for the sale of 8 million metric tons a year to the Soviet Union, but the embargo ruled out additional sales that otherwise would have been allowed.

The agriculture secretary said the U.S.-Soviet trade picture "changed abruptly when the embargo was imposed. Now that it is lifted, the United States will have to prove that it is a reliable supplier."

The U.S. government's Joint Agriculture Weather

Facility reported Wednesday that cold, dry conditions in the Soviet Union threatened this year's crops in the Ukraine. Western analysts expect a Soviet grain crop of about 210 million metric tons, better than last year but well short of the goal of 236 million metric tons.

Canada, which observed the U.S.-led embargo for much of its duration, announced Wednesday it will sell the Soviets at least 25 million tons of grain over five years beginning Aug. 1.

Block, 45, a successful western Illinois farmer and former Illinois agriculture secretary, arrived in London on a seven-nation tour that has already taken him to Yugoslavia and Belgium. He goes to Paris Friday, then Bonn and Hamburg in West Germany, and to The Hague, Netherlands, before returning to Washington June 4.

Woman Gets 4 Marriage License

HOUSTON (AP) — Repeat business is rather unusual for a marriage license bureau.

But Wilma Harris, a deputy clerk, became suspicious when she saw a 31-year-old woman at the counter a second time within eight days.

A check of records indicated the woman received licenses over that short period of time to marry two Nigerian nationals attending Texas Southern University. She had married a man from the African nation of Cameroon on March 26, and had married a Houston man in 1970.

Before Ms. Harris and others could talk with the latest bridegroom, a marriage had been performed by Justice of the Peace Laurence H. Wayne. It was the woman's second appearance before Wayne in eight days for a marriage ceremony but Wayne said he did not remember her because he performs 30 to 40 marriages a week.

"I do it on the way into court or on the way to lunch," Wayne said.

The woman said Wednesday she believes she is married only to her latest bridegroom. She said the 1970 marriage ended in divorce several years ago, that the March 26 husband promised he would file for divorce, and the May 18 bridegroom told her he would not file the marriage license.

Husband No. 3 said he learned of the earlier marriages only on Tuesday.

"Yes, I love her, but now I am having second thoughts," he said. "I resent it. She embarrassed me."

Husband No. 4 said he was "real surprised."

"I couldn't believe it," he said, adding he plans to have his lawyer void the marriage.

Meanwhile, the woman said she has hired a lawyer to straighten things out. She said she had not been paid to get married and had not petitioned the Immigration and Naturalization Service for permanent resident status for her husbands.

County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver said the woman used the same name for each marriage license and on each occasion swore she was not married and had not been divorced within 30 days.

Paul O'Neill, district INS director, said his office will investigate, adding that fraudulent marriages to help someone remain in the United States are not unusual.

"LET'S MAKE THIS SNAPPY. I TEE OFF AT ELEVEN SHARP."

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

● WELL VERSED! Ponder this enigmatic verse written by Lord Macaulay: "Here's plenty of water, you'll all of you say; and minus the H a thing used every day; and here's a nice beverage; put them together—what is it with claws, but with never a feather?"

THAT'S THAT —OR IS IT?

Originally, this poser of the 1800s contained two more "thats":

I saw that C saw that that that that that I saw was so.

At first-reading, it appears not to make any sense. But, with commas and certain emphasis, it does suggest:

I saw that C saw. C saw THAT that I saw.

I saw that THAT that C saw was so. C saw that, that THAT that I saw was so.

I saw that, that THAT that that C saw was so.

I saw that, that THAT that that C saw was so.

● Safety First! Safety at the wheel is the keynote when one word (the same word) is placed before both UP and DOWN to form two phrases with the same meaning. What word?

● Geometrick! Without bending or breaking them, form six ordinary toothpicks into four triangles of equal size. How is it done?

● Riddle-Me-This! Why is sugar above reproach? It's sucrose-santi. Why is it every man's right to throw open the windows? To air is human. How is gossip spread in Venice? Via the gondol-ears.

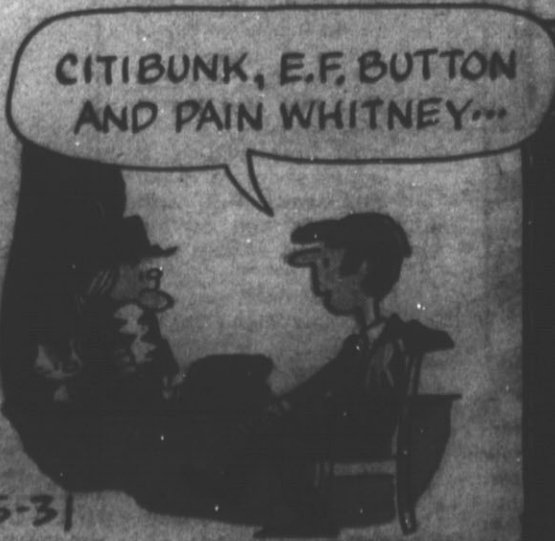

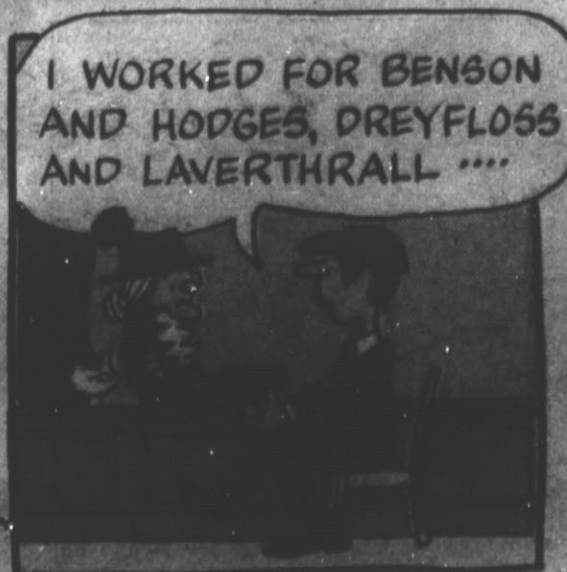

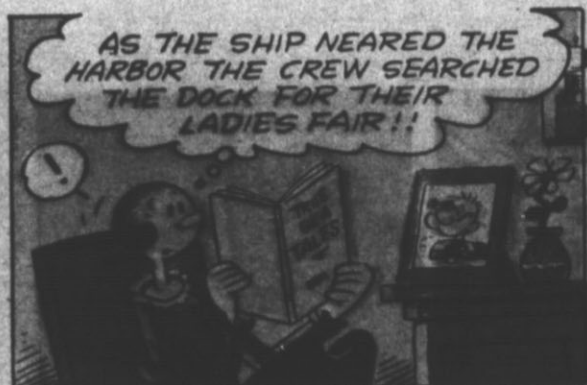

HELD OVER! True or false—our young friends above are waving both arms? False. Draw lines to see what's up.

AGATHA CRUMM

REDEYE

by Gordon Bess

Prince Valiant
CREATED BY LAL FOSTER

Our Story: WANDERING THROUGH THE PALACE OF TARA, GALAN IS SEIZED BY THE ANKLE. "YOU MUST HEAR MY STORY," COMES THE THIN, RASPY VOICE. "YOU MUST TELL THE WORLD." BUT AS GALAN BENDS TO HEAR, RORY MOR ENTERS SUDDENLY AND PULLS HIM AWAY. "WHAT DID HE SAY?" THE HIGH KING DEMANDS.

"NOTHING," GALAN ANSWERS TRUTHFULLY. BUT RORY MOR DOES NOT BELIEVE HIM. "I WILL SEE YOU AT THE HUNT," HE SAYS FINALLY.

A FINE DRIZZLE SPARKLES IN GASPS OF SUN AS THE HUNTING PARTY SETS OUT. MILES TO THE NORTH, PEASANT 'BEATERS' DRUM THEIR POTS, DRIVING GAME TOWARD THE MEADOWS OF TARA. SOON THE FIRST RODENTS CRASH THROUGH THE BRUSH, THEN FOXES, THEN DEER.

RARELY HAVE KAREN AND VALETA HAD SUCH FUN, AS THEIR MOUNTS CHEERFULLY INTERFERE WITH THE BUSINESS AT HAND. BUT GALAN, THE YOUNG WARRIOR, DESIRES A TROPHY. A BUCK SURPRISED IN THE OPEN, DARTS FOR COVER. GALAN FOLLOWS, HIS KNEES TIGHTENING IN EXCITEMENT.

BUT GALAN'S ARROW FLIES AIMLESSLY INTO THE SKY AS HIS MOUNT, WITH A WHINNY OF SHOCK, COLLAPSES BENEATH HIM.

"WHAT A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT," SAYS RORY MOR. "ONE OF MY MEN MUST BE A BAD SHOT INDEED." KAREN AND VALETA SHOO HIM AWAY.

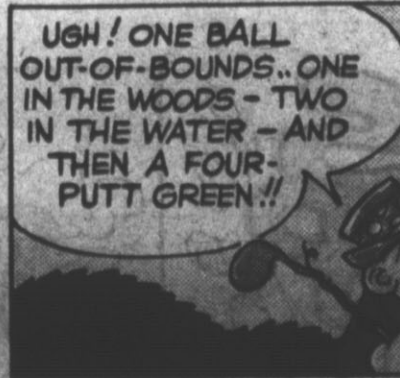

"THAT SHOULD FRIGHTEN THE BOY," THINKS RORY MOR AS THE PARTY RETURNS TO TARA. "GODS, BRING NO MORE THINGS INTO MY LIFE."

NEXT WEEK: The Brehons

Hi Lois

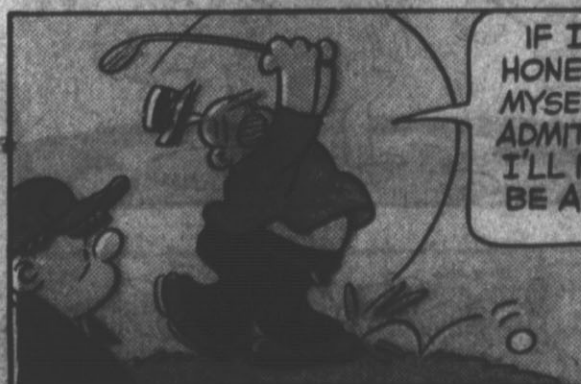

UGH! ONE BALL OUT-OF-BOUNDS.. ONE IN THE WOODS - TWO IN THE WATER - AND THEN A FOUR-PUTT GREEN!!

CHEER UP - YOU'VE ONLY HAD ONE BAD HOLE

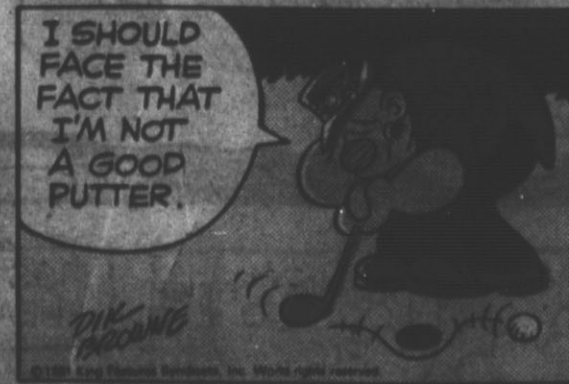

THAT'S BECAUSE I'VE ONLY PLAYED ONE HOLE!!

IF I WERE HONEST WITH MYSELF I'D ADMIT THAT I'LL NEVER BE A GOLFER

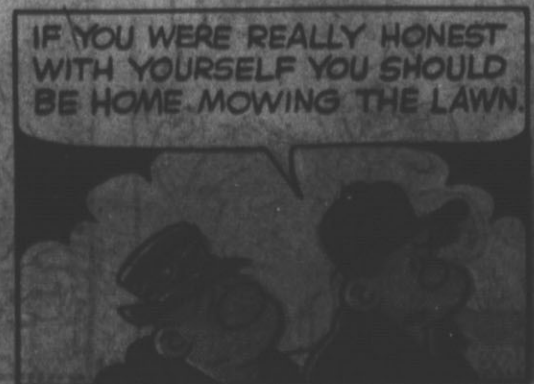

I SHOULD KNOW BY NOW THAT I CAN'T DRIVE THE BALL FAR ENOUGH.

I SHOULD FACE THE FACT THAT I'M NOT A GOOD PUTTER.

I HONESTLY DON'T HAVE ANY PART OF THE GAME PERFECTED.

IF YOU WERE REALLY HONEST WITH YOURSELF YOU SHOULD BE HOME MOWING THE LAWN.

THAT'S WHY I'M NOT HONEST WITH MYSELF.
