Hail storm

A thunderstorm rolled into Midland County rather suddenly Sunday evening bringing hail reportedly as large as one inch in diameter, according to Midland's National Weather Service officials. The hailstorm was preceded by an hour of lightning, NWS officials said. Hail was also reported in Ector and Howard counties, but weather officials expected the storm to subside by midnight. Midlanders should expect more inclement weather today as NWS officials are predicting 30 mile per hour winds and rain to occur throughout the day. /2A

Siblings shot

GEORGETOWN — A 12-year-old central Texas girl and her 8-year-old brother were fatally shot Sunday by a teen-ager who reportedly told authorities he was out looking for someone to shoot. George Luis Vasquez was arrested and charged with one count of murder, after confessing to the crime, said Det. Richard Elliott of the Williamson County Sheriff's Department. Bail was set at $200,000 late Sunday. Williamson Peace Justice D.W. Hayes identified the slain girl as Casey Shoecraft, but couldn't release the boy's name. Elliott said Vasquez entered the children's house after telling them he was going to fix their air conditioning filter. The children's mother was taking a shower when Vasquez arrived, Elliott said. Both children were shot in the back of the head shortly before 11 a.m., Sheriff Jim Boutwell said. The girl died immediately; the boy was taken to Brackenridge Hospital, where he died at 5:45 p.m. Elliott said an additional murder count will probably be filed in the boy's death.

Pro-communists clash with police

Riot police confront pro-communist supporters Sunday in Moscow.

■ Demonstrators protest hardships they blame on Yeltsin's economic reforms.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — In the most violent unrest in Moscow since the Soviet Union's demise, thousands of pro-communist demonstrators rallied Sunday, clashing with police and angrily pelting them with near-worthless kopeck coins. At least 30 people were reported injured.

"Down with the Russian government!" shouted some protesters. Waving red Soviet flags, they tried to break through police lines to march toward the Kremlin in defiance of a ban on such gatherings in the city center.

Several policemen were knocked down and demonstrators' faces were bloodied by police with truncheons. One protester tried to jab a helmeted policeman in the head with a flag pole, and another policeman was seen with blood streaming down his face.

At one point, angry demonstrators pelted police with thousands of nearly worthless kopeck coins to protest hardship they blamed on Russian leader Boris N. Yeltsin's economic reforms. Children scurried to pick up the coins under the feet of police.

"Yeltsin is destroying Russia!" read one sign held by an elderly woman.

About 10,000 police were deployed, and the crowd of 7,000 demonstrators eventually grew to about 15,000, the Interior Ministry reported. Reporters on the scene, however, estimated the crowd swelled to 7,000 at its highest.

The anti-government rally adds to pressures on Yeltsin, whose economic re-

Tsongas, Brown tied

■ Maine caucuses end in virtually a dead heat for Jerry Brown and Paul Tsongas.

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine — Paul Tsongas and upstart Jerry Brown battled to a virtual dead heat in Maine's caucuses on Sunday in an improbably close contest that reflected the wide-open race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

First one, then the other, held the lead during a long count — but never by much. With 645 of 665 precincts reporting and the tally halted, Tsongas had 29.5 percent support and Brown had 29.3 percent.

An uncommitted slate of delegates had 16 percent, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton had 15 percent, and the rest of the field followed.

Predictably, Brown and Tsongas each claimed success. The former California governor, who refuses contributions larger than $100, claimed his showing proved that "grassroots citizens can take back this country."

Tsongas was the favorite in advance by virtue of his victory in last week's New Hampshire primary. Sunday's results gave him less to boast about.

He brushed aside a suggestion that the Maine results were a sign of a fragile candidacy, saying, "My fight is with Bill Clinton at this point." Brown had finished last in New Hampshire.

Maine voted as the campaign moved on relentlessly. All five of the Democratic contenders — plus candidate Larry Agran — participated in an evening debate in South Dakota that generated sparks two days before the state's primary. That balloting shapes up as a struggle for survival for Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey and Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin.

After that, the race explodes with 24 primaries and caucuses over two weeks that will award 1,287 delegates of the total 4,287 delegates at the Democratic

Some lawyers dissatisfied with job

FORT WORTH (AP) — Boredom, burn-out and mounting pressures have caused growing numbers of dissatisfied attorneys to quit their profession, observers of the legal profession said.

"It's more difficult for a lot of lawyers than it was five years ago," said Helen Harkness, a career counselor in Garland.

Ms. Harkness is to teach a Southern Methodist University short course in March titled "Running from the Law."

The course is geared to lawyers considering quitting their jobs or changing their legal specialty.

When she taught the same course in November, it drew an overflow class of 34 students.

Texas' attorney population has jumped 59 percent in the past decade, to 49,737.

3 candidates seek Baskin's seat on bench

Three Midland attorneys have aspirations to preside over the 142nd District Court, a position currently held by Judge Pat Baskin, who will hang up his robe after 12 years of service.

The candidates, all Republicans, are: Thomas M. Bruner, 48, of the law firm Boldrick & Clifton; George D. "Jody" Gilles, 40, an independent attorney; and Robin Malone Sams, 33, an assistant District Attorney. Ms. Sams' legal background is predominantly in criminal law while Bruner and Gilles are more versed in civil law.

Bruner and Ms. Sams differ strongly on which background best prepares someone to serve on the bench.

"I'm the candidate with trial experience, with lots of trial experience... and that's the work of the court. Being able to effectively conduct jury trials is a very important part of the court's work," Ms. Sams said.

"I don't think they (Bruner and Gilles) have the extensive trial experience I do," she said.

Ms. Sams said she has prosecuted more than 50 criminal cases before a judge or jury but has never argued any civil cases.

Bruner said he has been involved in "several dozen" civil trials but has little criminal courtroom experience. He recently asked to have his name placed on the court-appointed attorney list to gain greater experience in criminal law.

Gilles, who has argued civil cases and handled some criminal cases that involved only guilty pleas, said he does not keep a record of the number of cases he has argued before a jury or judge and chose not to give an estimate.

Bruner said his extensive civil and appellate experience overshadows that of both his opponents. And a good civil background is more useful to a judge than a criminal background, Bruner claims.

"The court's time is much more taken up with civil cases," he said. "What does a judge do? He spends three-quarters of his time on civil matters."

"And it's easier to go from civil to criminal because of the complexity of the cases you handle (in civil law)," Bruner said.

Bruner supplied statistical reports that show civil trials (excluding family law and tax cases) outnumber criminal trials roughly two to one in the district courts.

Ms. Sams claims those numbers are not representative of the court's work because more time is spent on criminal cases in other areas in addition to trials such as revocation hearings and guilty pleas.

Gilles declined to give an opinion about which background best serves a judge.

"I have the ability to do both," Gilles responded.

MAINE: Caucuses end in a tie

(From 1A)

National Convention.

In all, Sunday was a second remarkable night for the nominating fight in less than a week. Tsongas' victory in New Hampshire had been unthinkable until less than a month before the voting, when Clinton was hit with allegations of womanizing and Vietnam-era draft-dodging that he strenuously denied.

Whatever the final outcome in Maine, the results were a blow to Tsongas, a former Massachusetts senator struggling to maintain the momentum he gained with his New Hampshire victory.

His campaign worked to the end in search of an elusive victory, as his wife Niki attended a caucus in Gorham, a town of 12,000 outside Portland. "Every vote counts," she said after he topped Brown at the caucus she attended.

It was the first time in 20 years that the winner of the New Hampshire Democratic primary didn't follow up with a clear-cut victory in Maine.

The results were also an embarrassment for Clinton, who was credited with a solid organization and finished a strong second to Tsongas in New Hampshire.

Brown was the big winner. He finished last among the five major contenders in New Hampshire and has been derided as a gadfly making a hopeless quest for the nomination.

Kerry, running last, said the "larger story is Brown doing extremely well. ... That's a pretty fragile mandate coming out of New Hampshire" for Tsongas.

"It's certainly an upset," Brown said. "It has to be a shock to the pundits in Washington, who early on believed that only $1,000 checks and obscene campaign war chests could propel a candidacy."

"The people of Maine proved them wrong and demonstrated that grassroots citizens can take back this country."

Tsongas, struggling to nurture his momentum, congratulated Brown on "a very aggressive effort" in the state. "Caucuses are not my strong point," he said.

One Brown supporter, Geraldine Tukey, said, "He's kicking butt. ... This is not surprising."

She was right about the first; not about the second.

The former California governor campaigned energetically throughout the state for five straight days, reaching out to disaffected voters and opponents of nuclear power.

He said he was the first contender to win outside his home region and said, "This is a testimony to the strength of people who are tired of being manipulated."

Democratic Party activists in Maine gathered in hundreds of living rooms, schools, town halls and fire houses to begin the two-step process of choosing 23 delegates to the national convention.

Republicans have until April 1 to hold their caucuses, although several precincts were doing so on Sunday. The delegates selected in these meetings were unpledged, but GOP challenger Patrick Buchanan made little effort to contest President Bush in the state.

Citing unofficial tallies from 200 communities that have voted in recent weeks, the state Republican Party gave Bush 875 of the first 990 delegates chosen.

Tsongas and Brown made last-minute campaign stops in the state during the day. Clinton mounted a strong organizational effort. Harkin and Kerry had less intensive campaigns.

In the race for 23 national convention delegates, Tsongas led for 8, Brown for 7, uncommitted for 4, Clinton for 3 and Harkin for 1.

Harkin's delegate is a matter of dispute for the national party, whose rules require 15 percent of a caucus vote before a national delegate is awarded.

News Election Service, which was tabulating the caucuses, ended its count without results from 20 precincts, some of which may not have held meetings.

Brown won the balloting in Portland, the state's largest city. He and Tsongas split the vote evenly in Lewiston, the second largest. But Tsongas won Bangor, the state's third-largest city, handily.

Brown had only 8 percent of the vote in the New Hampshire primary. But he quickly set out for Maine the morning after. He spent the rest of the week campaigning throughout the state in an effort modeled after the one Jesse Jackson used in 1988 to finish a strong second.

At a stop Friday at Colby College, he said Clinton and Tsongas were both "more Republican than Democratic in many things." Neither of them will be able to bring about change in Washington, he said, "because they're here with the permission" of the political establishment.

Elsewhere, there was fresh evidence of the momentum that Tsongas received from his New Hampshire victory last Tuesday.

In Colorado, which holds its primary on March 3, a Denver Post poll showed Tsongas running ahead of the pack with Clinton a close second. A similar survey taken late last month showed Tsongas at the bottom of the heap.

Three other states hold primaries on March 3, including Maryland, Georgia and Utah. Three others, plus American Samoa, have caucuses scheduled, with a total of 383 delegates up for grabs that day.

Even as the caucuses were convening, Tsongas' camp sought to minimize his chances for victory. A month ago, Tsongas barely registered in the preference polls around the country. But after his victory in New Hampshire, anything less than an outright triumph in Maine was sure to be seen by his rivals as a setback for the former Massachusetts senator.

Clinton, with the strongest organizational and financial resources in the race, has questioned Tsongas' appeal outside New England. The runner-up in New Hampshire, his strategy is to rebound when the primaries move South next month.

Clinton paid a last-minute visit on Saturday in hopes of maximizing his support. He was credited with a strong organization throughout the state.

Tsongas stressed his pro-business economics policy in recession-wracked Maine. He opposes a middle-class tax cut in favor of tax incentives to create jobs.

Brown appealed to disaffected voters, and criticized Tsongas' backing for nuclear power in a state with a strong environmental bent.

"The support has been building, building, building and building," said Ken Dean, the Maine campaign manager for Brown. "I know that we gave this everything that we had."

State party leaders were predicting about 15,000 Democrats to attend the caucuses.

The caucuses represent the first step in a two-tier process of selecting delegates to the national convention. Caucus participants were choosing up to 3,566 delegates to the Democratic State Convention in May, based on presidential preference.

RUSSIA: Several police, demonstrators injured forms have sent prices soaring across the Commonwealth of Independent States. It also illustrated the increasing boldness of pro-communist and hard-line groups.

Such protesters have staged rallies in the city center nearly every weekend since shortly after the August coup, demanding restoration of Soviet power and removal of Yeltsin's government. But this was the first rally that sparked serious clashes.

About 17 policemen were injured, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported, quoting the Russian Interior Ministry. The city ambulance service said a similar number of protesters were injured, the report said.

The rally fell on the former Army Day, commemorating the first victory by the first regular Red Army unit, in 1918.

Yeltsin marked the occasion, now known as the Day of the Defenders of the Fatherland, by laying flowers on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the Kremlin wall. Protesters clamored to be allowed to lay wreaths too, and eventually authorities agreed to escort some on to the site.

"They are letting the country fall apart!" said demonstrator Anatoly Panin, a teacher. "Look where the democrats have led us. We want to demonstrate peacefully and they bring out riot police and trucks!"

But Yeltsin insisted authorities were not acting undemocratically.

"Neither I nor the government intended to prevent the opposition from holding meetings. But we are not going to put human lives at risk," the Interfax news agency quoted him as saying.

The protesters were kept from the city center under a ban by Mayor Gavril Popov. Police had also blocked marchers from the center during a largely peaceful protest by tens of thousands of people last month.

At Sunday's rally, several groups gathered spontaneously in opposition to the hard-liners, but no clashes between the groups were reported.

Sunday's pro-communist demonstrators called for restoration of the former union, which was dissolved in December; release of the coup plotters; and the prosecution of Yeltsin and former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on criminal charges.

Interfax said the protest was organized by the Labor Moscow movement, the recently formed Union of Officers and the Socialist Party of Workers, among others.

The demonstrators first gathered at Mayakovskiy Square, about 10 blocks north of the Kremlin, then surged toward the Kremlin. They managed to break through some of lines of riot police, but were mostly turned back.

Hundreds of riot police stood ready in trucks on Red Square and along Tverskaya Street, a main thoroughfare running toward the Kremlin.

Another pro-communist demonstration was held in St. Petersburg Sunday, where about 2,500 people gathered on the central Palace Square. Several hundred protesters also criticized Yeltsin's government in the Siberian cities of Irkutsk and Krasnoyarsk, Russian media reported.

Children take ailing toy animals to clinic

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Children hugging torn and tattered teddy bears and other stuffed toy animals that needed mending flocked into Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center on Sunday for the biannual Teddy Bear Clinic sponsored by the hospital's auxiliary.

"We had stuffed critters of all sorts," Kim Modisett, director of the volunteer-supported auxiliary, said. "The kids enjoyed it. They went home with smiling faces, hugging their bears."

And the teddy bears and other stuffed toy animals, such as dogs, cats and elephants, fared at least as well as the 750 children.

Standing by were 23 volunteers who played doctor by mending the ailing toy animals.

"Some of them needed a little mending, and some needed a lot," Ms. Modisett said. "Some had broken arms and torn ears." And there was a teddy bear which had been ripped by a pet dog.

"One bear got a purple heart," Ms. Modisett said. The clinic, which was designed for children between the ages of 4 and 10, offered the children a tour of the hospital, Jackie Ingram, chairman of clinic, said.

The children toured the hospital's Operating Room, Testing and Diagnostic Center, and Emergency Room and examined an ambulance.

"They were pretty excited about it," Ms. Ingram said. "It was fun."

Nurses from the hospital's education department provided a sun-screen education program for children called "Slip, Slap, Slop."

"You are going to slip into T-shirt, slap on a hat, and slop on some sun-screen," Ms. Modisett explained.

The Teddy Bear Clinic was "geared for education for children," Ms. Modisett said.

The children's exposure to the hospital and its functions was to teach the children "not to be afraid when they come (to the hospital) as a patient," Ms. Modisett said.

About 50 junior and adult auxiliary volunteers worked in the Teddy Bear Clinic.

Working with the auxiliary volunteers were members of the 911 emergency group, Child Abuse Protection Program (CAPP), Permian Basin Rape Crisis Center, Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE), the hospital's Dietary Department, and the hospital's Nursing Education Department.

Debate participants spar over taxes, health care

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Democratic presidential hopefuls preached the virtue of the family farm and sparred over taxes and health care Sunday in a curtain-call debate for a South Dakota primary that could winnow a candidate from the field.

New Hampshire winner Paul Tsongas drew early fire from the two Midwestern senators who need good showings in South Dakota, Tom Harkin of Iowa and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska.

Harkin hit Tsongas for favoring a gas tax increase; Kerrey said Tsongas' votes in the Senate proved he was no friend of farmers.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, the New Hampshire runner-up, accused Kerrey and Harkin of distorting his record on agriculture during the South Dakota campaign, reminding them: "I've been a farm state governor for 11 years. I've always supported the family farm."

Tsongas conceded from the outset that he could not match the agriculture expertise of his farm-state rivals. But he said: "I know how to listen. I know how to learn." He also reminded voters that his father-in-law was from South Dakota and that his wife and three daughters "have South Dakota blood."

Former California Gov. Jerry Brown said he "wouldn't give a penny in foreign aid" unless American farmers and small businesses were getting all the help they need.

The focus on agriculture and Indian affairs was a big switch from debates in advance of New Hampshire's leadoff primary that were dominated by discussion of the economy. Another new twist was the presence of long-shot candidate Larry Agran in the debate. Agran, the former mayor of Irvine, Calif., has been excluded from past forums.

The candidates were debating as Maine Democrats held caucuses in which Tsongas and former Brown battled throughout the day for the lead. Clinton was vying with uncommitted delegates for third place.

South Dakota's primary on Tuesday is the next event, with 15 delegates at stake. It is a critical survival test for Kerrey and Harkin, who finished a distant third and fourth in New Hampshire. For Tsongas and Clinton, South Dakota offers a chance to fare well far from home.

The winner will get a boost heading into March 3 primaries in Colorado, Maryland, Georgia and other states.

Agran wasted no time stirring it up, accusing Brown of hypocrisy for railing against monied politics as a presidential candidate after raising millions in campaign contributions as governor and state party chairman.

"You have come lately to campaign reform," Agran lectured Brown, who shouted back that it wasn't so. Agran boasted that he alone was talking about major defense cuts to fund domestic priorities. Again, Brown said that wasn't so; that he, too, favored big defense cuts.

Agran then retorted: "Jerry you're the one who was for the B-1 bomber. It cost us $50 billion for a plane that doesn't fly." They did have one thing in common: both broadcast their toll-free fund-raising numbers.

The debate, carried on South Dakota public television and nationwide on the C-SPAN public affairs network, was testy at times, humorous at others.

When moderator Ken Bode was trying to restore order at one point, Clinton told him: "I've got a whip and you can lash all of us."

Harkin, lagging in a state where he needs to do well, was again a debate aggressor. In addition to hitting Tsongas' plan to raise the gas tax, Harkin waved a newspaper article in which he said Tsongas had called President Reagan's 1982 budget "good for business."

"Well it wasn't good for our family farmers," Harkin said. Kerrey repeatedly promoted his national health care plan. He also steered several questions into the foreign policy arena, arguing that "global prosperity means American prosperity" and would boost farm exports.

"We have an historic opportunity today to turn old enemies into new customers," Kerrey said.

Clinton boasted that South Dakota had copied an Arkansas program to help family farmers avoid foreclosure, and promised national bank reform he said would help farmers and small business owners. A Clinton administration, he said, would "make Washington different and new and vital and alive again."

Like Harkin, Clinton hit Tsongas' gas-tax idea, saying it should not be the centerpiece of any energy policy. "There are other ways to do it that don't burden the middle class," Clinton said.

Tsongas has proposed increasing the gas tax 5 cents a year for 10 years to encourage the use of alternative fuels and to decrease dependence on foreign oil. He promoted himself as the field's economic realist, saying, "I've been the candidate of fiscal discipline."

From agriculture, the debate shifted into more familiar ground, with the candidates all promising universal health coverage and sparring over how to pay for it — and bring quality care to rural areas.

"If you want health care, you're not going to get it under George Bush," Tsongas said in speaking for the field. "You're only going to get it if one of us is president of the United States."

Clinton, Kerrey, Harkin and Tsongas said they would not support legislation that would return former tribal lands in South Dakota to the American Indians. But they said the Indians deserved apologies for past treatment — and immediate help with education, health care and training on Indian lands.

Brown and Agran said the land should be returned. Brown said American Indians "suffered a horrible genocide. There is no question about that. We have to own up to that."

JUDGE: Three candidates vying for Baskin's position

Memorial Hospital's board of trustees for 11 years.

Ms. Sams received her law degree from Baylor School of Law in 1982 and attended the University of Durham in England where she studied international law. She served as a special assistant to secretary of state David Dean and later as a legislative assistant to Rep. Ashley Smith of Houston. In 1985, Ms. Sams joined the Midland County District Attorney's office, where she has held the position of trial chief and currently chief prosecutor for narcotics crimes.

In terms of practical experience for the position, Bruner spoke of a "well-rounded background, my background as a businessman, my background with trial law, and my background with community involvement."

"It comes with age and maturity ... and gives me more credibility as a candidate for judge," he said.

Bruner said within his legal expertise, he has extensive appellate experience which is important because it reviews the work of the court, he said.

Gilles described his experience as "well-rounded" as well, citing his past work.

"I think experience is a factor in a variety of situations ... a judge sits not only to apply the law, to apply equity to a situation, a judge will hear a large variety of cases dealing with a lot of matters," Gilles said.

Ms. Sams said her practical experience to be judge comes from working in the courthouse daily.

"Aside from my jury trial experience, I have one other asset that the others don't have: the intimate knowledge and understanding of the court," she said. That includes such things as docket management, how to qualify a jury and working with the clerk's office, she said.

JOB: Pressures driving them from profession, lawyers say as veteran Fort Worth trial lawyer Kleber Miller, 67, who says he's "happy as a lark" at his firm.

But even Miller says there are "unquestionably more lawyers now who are dissatisfied" with their jobs.

Pressures on lawyers have increased because "there has been such a push to get billable hours," said Don Akins of Dallas, president of Hildebrandt Inc., management consultants to the legal profession. "If you don't have enough work and enough hours, concern and fears naturally set in."

Veteran Fort Worth trial lawyer Dick Griffith laments that law practice has become a big business where you have to account for "every little last dime of time."

Brooks Harrington, 43, was a successful Fort Worth trial lawyer until he abandoned the legal profession 14 months ago. Looking for a greater sense of personal fulfillment, he now attends Perkins School of Theology at SMU and serves as pastor of Diamond Hill United Methodist Church. He also leads a Cub Scout troop.

"I was not satisfied with using whatever talents I have just for myself and the interests of whatever client I happened to have, whether my client was on the right side of the lawsuit or not," Harrington said.

He grew weary of lawsuits that inevitably centered on a fight over money.

"I feel like lawyers for the most part serve money," he said. "I just got tired of focusing so much attention on money."

Navy dismantles Subic base

SUBIC BAY NAVAL BASE, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of tons of floating drydock were heading to Guam Sunday after the U.S. Navy removed the structure in its first major step to dismantle Subic Naval Base.

The salvage ship USS Brunswick left Subic Bay Saturday with the drydock in tow on a 12-day journey.

It was one of three drydocks at Subic, scheduled to shut down by the end of this year after nearly a century of American operation. Last September, the Philippine Senate rejected a new 10-year lease for Subic, 50 miles west of Manila.

Subic was the largest naval base in Asia, and America's last military base in the Philippines.

The Americans abandoned Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila, last November because of damage from the June eruptions of Mount Pinatubo volcano, which also heavily damaged Subic.

Filipinos who had worked on the facility stood on the pier, watching the drydock sail away and contemplating their uncertain future.

The 4,000 Filipino shipyard workers are expected to begin receiving layoff notices next month.

Frederick Oril, 50, the drydock foreman and a shipyard worker for 24 years, said he will probably take his severance pay and open a business.

"We are very sorry about this because we have no more jobs and I am of retirement age," Oril said.

Some equipment has already been removed from Subic, but the drydock was the first major structure to leave.

Judicial races merit scrutiny

Most judicial officials and candidates agree that Texans are scrutinizing their judges more closely now. That's important because in years past not enough attention was paid and Texas ended up paying a big price as the result of a scandal in the Supreme Court.

There's no question that voters still need to give ample attention to races on this year's primary ballots. Listed below are the recommendations of the Midland Reporter-Telegram:

TEXAS SUPREME COURT

(Democratic Primary)

Place 3 — Although his opinions sometimes leave court-watchers wondering where he stands, Jack Hightower is well thought of in legal circles and should be re-nominated to the court.

Now completing his first term, Hightower previously served as a state senator and also as U.S. representative.

(Republican Primary)

Place 1 — Craig Enoch has been consistently among the highest-rated judges in Dallas and now serves as chief justice of the 5th

Circuit Court of Appeals. He is an outstanding jurist who would bring a quality record of service to the people of Texas on the Supreme Court.

Place 3 — Now serving as judge of the 309th State District Court, John D. Montgomery has earned a reputation for fairness, innovation and scholarship. He's offering to bring those qualities to the Supreme Court.

Montgomery appears to have the judicial experience and temperament for the high court. He should be nominated.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS

(Democratic Primary)

Place 1 — Charles F. "Charlie" Baird is completing his first term on the court and gets basically good marks from the legal community. He has won a number of endorsements for re-nomination and should get the nod from Democrats.

Place 2 — Another newcomer to the court, Morris Overstreet, has served well and also is deserving of the nomination. Overstreet already has helped bring some beneficial changes to the court, instituting a post-submission conference to gain input on how the other judges on the court would rule on a case and requesting oral arguments on particular cases that they need more information on. The result is more cases being set and heard.

Overstreet is now seeking a rule which would require judges on the court to issue their opinions on cases within 180 days. That's effective work intended to give both sides speedier and more certain justice.

(Republican Primary)

Place 1 — Jim Vollers is highly qualified and no doubt would serve the court admirably. He has a wide range of legal experience, previously serving as an assistant district attorney, an assistant attorney general and a judge. He should be nominated for the bench.

Place 3 — Although both men seeking this post appear qualified, Lawrence "Larry" Meyers, appears to hold the edge because of his current service on the court of appeals in Tarrant County and his wide reputation for fairness. Voters would be wise to nominate him for this seat on the court.

8TH COURT OF APPEALS

(Democratic Primary)

Justice — Jerry Woodard, the incumbent, drew two opponents in this race, both Democratic. Woodard has served well, and some fear that his opponents may be seeking to oust him only to serve their interests and not the cause of justice.

Voters should cast their ballots for Woodard.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 24, the 55th day of 1992. There are 311 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Fifty years ago, on Feb. 24, 1942, the Voice of America went on the air for the first time.

On this date: In 1582, Pope Gregory XIII issued a Papal Bull, or edict, in which he outlined his calendar reforms. (The Gregorian Calendar, as it became known, is the calendar in general use today.)

In 1803, in its Marbury v. Madison decision, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that it was the final interpreter of constitutional issues.

In 1821, Mexico declared its independence from Spain.

In 1863, Arizona was organized as a territory.

In 1868, the U.S. House of Representatives impeached President Andrew Johnson following his attempted dismissal of Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton. Johnson was later acquitted by the Senate.

In 1903, the United States signed an agreement acquiring a naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

In 1920, a fledgling German political party held its first meeting of importance in Munich. The organization became known as the Nazi Party, and its chief spokesman was Adolf Hitler.

In 1942, 50 years ago, the Metronome All Star Band, featuring Harry James, recorded Irving Berlin's "Easter Parade" in New York for Columbia Records.

In 1945, American soldiers liberated the Philippine capital of Manila from Japanese control during World War II.

Army runs drug-busting boats aground

WASHINGTON — Part of America's costly arsenal in the war against drugs — five high-tech boats that fly radar balloons like kites over the Caribbean — have been docked in Key West, Fla., since New Year's Eve. Instead of tracking drug smugglers, the crews spend their time painting the boats, checking the fancy computers and looking for things to fix.

It's an impressive sight for the tourists to see the fleet in port all at once. But, as one crew member told us, "We are wasting money, time and resources. These vessels should be out fighting the drug war, not in port fighting the bureaucracy."

The bureaucracy in this case is the Pentagon, which last year inherited the balloons from the Coast Guard and gave them to the Army. Now, millions of dollars worth of interdiction equipment is bobbing in the harbor while drug smugglers ply their trade.

In recent years, the radar balloons, called aerostats, have played a vital if controversial role in the drug war. They fly at 2,500 feet, tethered to 195-foot boats, scanning for traffic. The Coast Guard takes the information and nabs the smugglers. The boats watch over six choke points in the Caribbean. There are 10 similar land-based balloons along the U.S.-Mexico border and in the Bahamas and Puerto Rico.

The balloons have had their share of bad press. For a while it seemed as though they spent more time in the shop than in the air. They are susceptible to bad weather and easily spotted by smugglers. But, the sea-based balloons have played a role in forcing drug traffickers to shift from the Caribbean to routes along the U.S.-Mexico border. And they are more cost effective than any comparable surveillance system on the high seas. At least they were before they were ordered into the dock by the Army.

Last summer, Congress told the Pentagon to take over all the land-and sea-based aerostats from the Coast Guard and civilian law enforcement agencies. The switch of the sea-based balloons, "happened so suddenly there wasn't enough time to plan for an efficient transfer," one administration official told us.

The Army was given $19.4 million to take over the fleet, and promptly ordered it into port. Documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd show that the Army planned to operate only one boat and put the rest of the money into three more expensive radar boats of its own. Two of those Army boats already had other funding from Congress. Bottom line: With creative bookkeeping, the Army wants to spend more money to operate fewer boats.

In January, the Army told the boat crews to deflate and pack up three of the balloons. The crews — civilian contractors — protested to whomever would listen, including some members of Congress. And the Coast Guard sent a memo to the Army reminding them that just because they had taken over the boats, it didn't mean the drug war had any less need for them.

The Army agreed to test their own preferred radar boats against the aerostats, but then cut the tests short, put their own boats out to sea and left the aerostat boats in the dock. Today it seems the Army is just beginning to figure out what it should do with what it has. Joint meetings with all the angry parties are planned in Norfolk, Va., to sort it out.

In the meantime, the drug lords have not declared a cease-fire while the Army counts its ducks. Administration officials say they are covering for the aerostats with other radar, but they admit it might not be the "right" mix. Aerostat operators go further. They say several channels of the Caribbean may be left open for smugglers, especially since the Coast Guard has been preoccupied with rounding up Haitian boat people.

One technician told us, "We're not being allowed to do our jobs, and I think it's a field day out there for smugglers because of it."

DEATH AND TAXES — If you are an American living overseas and you want to bring guns back home, you must fill out a government form, of course. This particular form, from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, includes an agency phone number if you have any questions. But until recently, anyone who called that number was more likely to connect with an expert on taxes. The number rang in elevator 18 of the Internal Revenue Service headquarters in Washington. One anonymous IRS staffer told us he had been riding elevator 18 for years and answering the phone. Over the years he had talked to gun owners from as far away as Germany who wanted him to answer questions about their machine guns and other assorted toys. After two years, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms recently corrected the number on its forms. We trust they do a better job keeping track of Uzis.

CHARLEY REESE

George Washington's words ring true today

It's just as well nobody pays much attention to George Washington's birthday. Too much attention on our first president and some people might get an inkling of what a bunch of mental and moral midgets occupy public offices these days.

Washington, for example, would not have had to consult his attorney for a reading of a thick pile of bureaucratic rules to determine if he was ethical or unethical. Washington was a devout Christian and a moral man. He relied on his conscience. A conscience is as rare in Washington today as it is in Hollywood, America's other capital of make-believe.

Nor would the Virginia planter have needed a pollster to tell him what needed to be done. Today's mice masquerading as men can hardly determine if they need to empty their bladders without first consulting pollsters, lawyers, schedulers, and liars-for-hire, sometimes known as campaign consultants or public relations counselors.

"If I was to be called upon to draw a picture of the times and of men from what I have seen, and heard, and in part know, I should in one word say that idleness, dissipation and extravagance seems to have laid fast hold of most of them," Washington once wrote to a friend. "That speculation — peculation — and an insatiable thirst for riches seems to have got the better of other considerations and almost every order of men. That party disputes and personal quarrels are the great business of the day whilst the momentous concerns of an empire — a great and accumulated debt — ruined finances — depreciating money — are but secondary considerations and postponed from day to day and week to week."

Washington wrote and spoke as he lived. He refused any pay to command the army during the Revolution and when he was elected our first president, he instructed the first Congress to set what pay they thought appropriate for other offices but only enough to cover his out-of-pocket expenses.

Today, among the many millionaires in public office, there is not one that I'm aware of who does not covet every public penny he can get his mitts on and who is not incessantly seeking to add to his worldly treasure. Washington, unlike the servants of speculators and profiteers who inhabit government today, hated profiteering. In a letter of blazing anger to the Continental Congress, Washington said of the war profiteers, "... I cannot conceive that they, in direct violation of every principle of generosity, of reason and of justice, should be allowed, if it is possible to restrain them, to avail themselves of the difficulties of the times and to amass fortunes upon the public ruin."

Washington warned against overgrown military establishments as a threat to liberty, he warned against habitual fondness or enmity toward foreign nations, and he warned against lobbyists, now nearly 80,000 strong in the decaying ruins of the empire on the Potomac.

Washington also predicted a United States of Europe, a prediction which just this year is taking formal shape. That vision thing again.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Movie critics ignore enjoyment factor of films

I've always been a little wary of movie critics both in print and on television. The problem with most movie critics is they look at movies with an eye that often is too technical. They get all heated up about photographic angles, weaknesses in the script, believability of the actors and actresses and whether or not they can convince their bosses to send them back to the Cannes Film Festival this year, with the economy the way it is.

I see a lot of movies. Basically it's because I like popcorn.

I know I could have popcorn at home but there's no place where the aroma of popcorn nails you right in your olfactory like a movie theater.

Most everybody liked "Fried Green Tomatoes," even the harshest of critics.

I heard a grown man who went to see it, say, "I cried like a baby."

I enjoyed it, too. My grandmother used to cook fried green tomatoes.

But let's look at movie critics and two other movies, which critics always refer to as "films."

I read ten reviews that said "Grand Canyon" was a wonderful movie, and also I read several reviews that said "Shining Through" was a piece of cinematic garbage.

Rarely if the critics praise a movie do I like it. The critics thought "Kiss of the Spider Woman" was a good movie. I hadn't even finished my popcorn when I got up and walked out on that dog.

And rarely if the critics pan a movie do I not think it was terrific.

I tested this theory by going to see both "Grand Canyon," which the critics loved, and "Shining Through," which they thumbed down.

Nothing had changed. "Grand Canyon" was sort of a "Kiss of the Spider Woman" from hell.

Here are a few of the things that were wrong with it.

It was boring.

It was depressing.

It was about how awful it is to live in Los Angeles.

When I attend a movie, I don't want to be bored nor depressed and I already knew everybody in Los Angeles would be a little happier if they moved to Whistletop, Ala., and ate some fried green tomatoes.

Not even Kevin Kline nor Danny Glover, two of my favorite actors, could keep me from an occasional doze.

Then, I went to see "Shining Through" with Michael Douglas and Melanie Griffith.

What a great movie. Nazis. Spies. Mystery. Intrigue. Blood. Trains. A surprise ending. The critics said Melanie Griffith was terrible in her role as lover and fellow spy person of Michael Douglas.

If I were looking for a lover and a fellow spy person, Melanie Griffith would be my very first choice.

I suppose you might be saying, "Well, by expressing such thoughts, doesn't that make you a movie critic, too? Why should I believe you and not full-time movie critics?"

I'll tell you why. Unlike full-time movie critics, I only look at the enjoyment factor. I don't care how well-crafted a movie is. If it's not enjoyable, it's a dud in my book, not to be confused with Milk Duds, which I sometimes buy to eat with my popcorn.

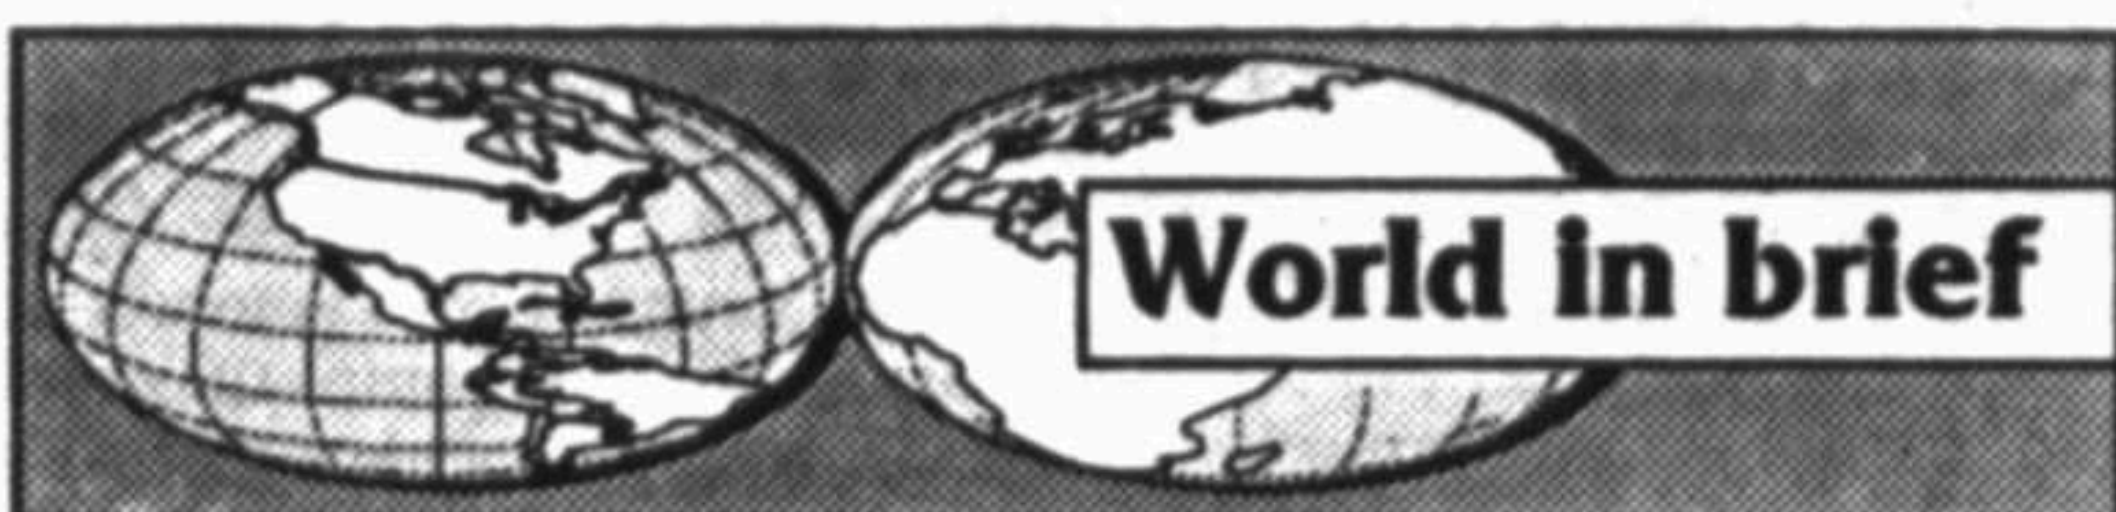

That's usually the problem with experts in any field. They are too picky and too hard to please.

Go see, "Shining Through." Avoid "Grand Canyon" like the heartbreak of psoriasis.

Meanwhile, I'm off to the Spantaburg Film Festival. A report on Francis the Talking Mule's comeback attempt when I return.

■ De Klerk warns of chaos if vote fails

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk, in an interview published Sunday, said South Africa will be thrown into chaos and returned to international isolation if he loses a referendum on his moves to end apartheid.

De Klerk has staked his future on a referendum next month that will ask white voters to support or reject his efforts to end racial separation and to share power with the 30-million black majority.

The independent South African Press Association said Sunday that the ballot would be held March 17. De Klerk, who spent the weekend meeting with his top officials, is expected to formally announce the date and the wording of the referendum today.

In an interview in the Afrikaans-language newspaper Rapport, de Klerk warned of a "huge crisis" if whites reject his policies. He has promised to resign and call a whites-only general election if he loses.

■ U.S. aid lands in secret Russian city

CHELZYABINSK, Russia — A U.S. Air Force jet emerged from the polluted clouds above this frigid Siberian outpost Saturday, and became the first American plane ever to land at a city that had been closed to Westerners for decades.

The C-141 jet carried a cargo of donated food, part of an intensive American effort to ship 5,000 tons of relief aid to the former Soviet Union over a 15-day period. Saturday's shipment included some American standbys — granola bars, Campbell's Vegetable Beef Soup and Kellogg's Frosted Flakes.

Chelyabinsk is one of more than 20 cities receiving food aid, and until recently, one of the least known. The reason is that Chelyabinsk-70, a complex on the outskirts of the city, was for many years a top-secret center for atomic research and for the production of advanced weapons.

■ Serb leader agrees to U.N. peacekeepers

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A major obstacle to the United Nations peacekeeping plan for Yugoslavia appears to have been removed with the decision by the hard-line leader of Croatia's main enclave of ethnic Serbs to cooperate with U.N. troops and monitors likely to move in next month.

Under pressure from Serbian leaders in Belgrade, Milan Babic, leader of the Krajina region of Croatia, has reversed his opposition, bringing Krajina into line with enclaves of Serbs in eastern and western Slavonia.

Both regions have now agreed to accept peacekeeping forces to monitor parts of Croatia that were home to about 600,000 Serbs until refugees fled the civil war there.

While many problems remain before the deployment of U.N. peacekeepers can begin — approved by the Security Council on Friday — Krajina's acceptance was a breakthrough.

■ Famous Dutch World War II nurse dies

OOSTERBEEK, Netherlands — Katie ter Horst, the volunteer nurse known as the "Angel of Arnhem" to hundreds of wounded British soldiers in World War II, has died at the age of 85, police said Sunday.

She was hit by a car that swerved off the road as she walked with her husband near her home in this eastern Dutch town Friday night, said police spokesman Peter van Drunen.

Her husband, also 85, suffered broken knees, Van Drunen said. It was at that same house that Mrs. Ter Horst tended to hundreds of British soldiers during the Battle of Arnhem in September 1944.

Mrs. Ter Horst's actions figured in the movie "A Bridge Too Far," in which her character was played by Liv Ullman.

U.S., Israel remain firm in positions on loans

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Chances are fading that Israel will receive $10 billion in loan guarantees from the United States to house Soviet immigrants, a government minister and confidante of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said on Sunday.

In a veiled threat to the peace talks, Zalman Shoval, Israel's ambassador to the United States, said it was unfortunate that the United States had chosen to link both the talks and the guarantees to expanding Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank.

These comments support the views of other several Israeli officials and of Western diplomats in Jerusalem that Israel won't get the guarantees anytime soon. A delay seemingly serves the policies and political needs of both the Bush administration and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's hard-line government.

Both governments are engaged in election campaigns. For either side to change its position on the guarantees and on the settlements would create major campaign problems, diplomats and Israeli officials said.

At Sunday's cabinet meeting, Health Minister Ehud Olmert blamed the Bush administration for the failure of the two countries to reach a compromise.

He said President Bush and U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III were no longer disposed to seek an agreement on the guarantees. At a meeting on Friday, Baker and Shoval failed to close the gap between the two countries.

Congress, also caught up in election-year politics and a sour economy, appears to be turning against additional foreign aid. That makes rejection and delay even more probable.

Olmert said every time Baker and Shoval talk Baker changes the conditions concerning settlements that Israel would have to meet to obtain the guarantees. By pressuring Israel to freeze settlements in order to receive the guarantees, Olmert charged, the Bush administration is trying to slowly push Israel back to its 1967 borders, with only minor modifications.

In a clear reference to the Israeli election, Olmert said, the Bush administration showed no understanding for the views of the Shamir government.

Israelis, Arabs prepare for talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Putting aside several explosive distractions, Israeli and Arab negotiators were poised Sunday to resume Mideast peace talks today under the supervision of an increasingly restless Bush administration.

The fact that Israel, Syria, Palestinian Arabs, Lebanon and Jordan all agreed to send their delegations here indicated a joint commitment to keep negotiating even though their talks until now have been inconclusive.

Arriving in Washington late Sunday, Ely Akim Rubinstein, head of the Israeli delegation dealing with the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, said the recent violence along the border between Israel and Lebanon was "irrelevant" to the peace talks.

Seconds later he rethought the word he used to answer a reporter's question and elaborated: "The atmosphere is important and the events in which civilians in our country have been killed are not irrelevant, but we hope to concentrate on the peace process."

Rocket lifts military satellite into space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A Delta rocket lifted off Sunday with the 12th in a series of advanced military navigation satellites, ending a half-year hiatus in building the orbiting network.

The unmanned rocket blasted off from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station at 5:29 p.m. The 12½-story booster climbed through a sky streaked with wispy clouds as it headed out over the Atlantic Ocean.

It was the first time the Air Force sent up a Navstar satellite since July. The $65 million satellite was supposed to be launched into a 12,500-mile-high orbit last August, but the flight was put on hold because of flawed positioning mechanisms in other Navstar craft, including one in orbit.

Court denies Duke spot on Georgia ballot

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Sunday denied former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke's latest attempt to get on Georgia's presidential primary ballot.

On Friday, Duke filed an emergency petition seeking to force state election officials to put his name on the Republican presidential primary ballot or halt the March 3 election.

Sunday, Justice Anthony Kennedy asked the full court to consider the appeal, but the justices denied it.

Justices Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Study: Workers overexposed to radiation

WASHINGTON — Workers at an eastern Idaho nuclear engineering facility and people living nearby have been exposed to excessive doses of radiation, the General Accounting Office said in a report released Sunday.

GAO said the findings were based on an analysis of 115 known episodic radiation releases to the atmosphere from the Energy Department's Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, plus data on annual exposure.

It said two of the episodic releases would have exceeded present radiation protection standards for the public, although they did not exceed the standards in effect at the time.

The GAO — the investigative branch of Congress — also said 240 workers received annual doses above the current exposure limits, although not above the more lenient limits in effect from 1951 to 1985. It said this was the most recent data available.

Officials intercept Taiwanese fishing boat

HONOLULU — A Taiwanese fishing boat carrying more than 50 suspected illegal aliens from China was intercepted offshore in the second such seizure in five days.

Fifty one passengers and a crew of four were found aboard the ship Saturday when it was stopped about two miles from shore by immigration, customs and Coast Guard officials.

The captain said he had rescued the 41 men and 10 women in the South China Sea, but the explanation was discounted by John Radcliffe, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Navy works to rid ships of tactical nuclear weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has removed short-range nuclear weapons from all but "a handful of ships" in line with President Bush's sweeping arms control initiative of last fall.

The Navy's Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Frank Kelso II, confirmed in a recent AP interview that the service has moved more quickly than first thought and pulled the tactical nuclear weapons from its vessels ahead of schedule.

"We're moving right along," Kelso said. "We're getting pretty close to having most of them off-loaded now."

"I don't think every one of them is gone yet, but I think we are down to a handful of ships" that still have the weapons, said the four-star admiral.

In September, Bush announced a package of sweeping arms control steps that included the elimination of all ground-launched, short-range nuclear weapons from posts around the world, amounting to about 2,100 warheads.

The easing of tensions between the United States and the former Soviet Union had removed the reasons to hold onto the short-range weapons, which were first developed in the 1950's to offset a possible invasion by the overwhelming number of Warsaw Pact troops against the West.

Mark Hartman, director of the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, poses against a screen with Aquarius and Pisces.

THE STARS ARE BRIGHT TONIGHT

A time exposure records stars as streaks in the night sky. The stars are not actually moving, but leave a trail as the earth rotates.

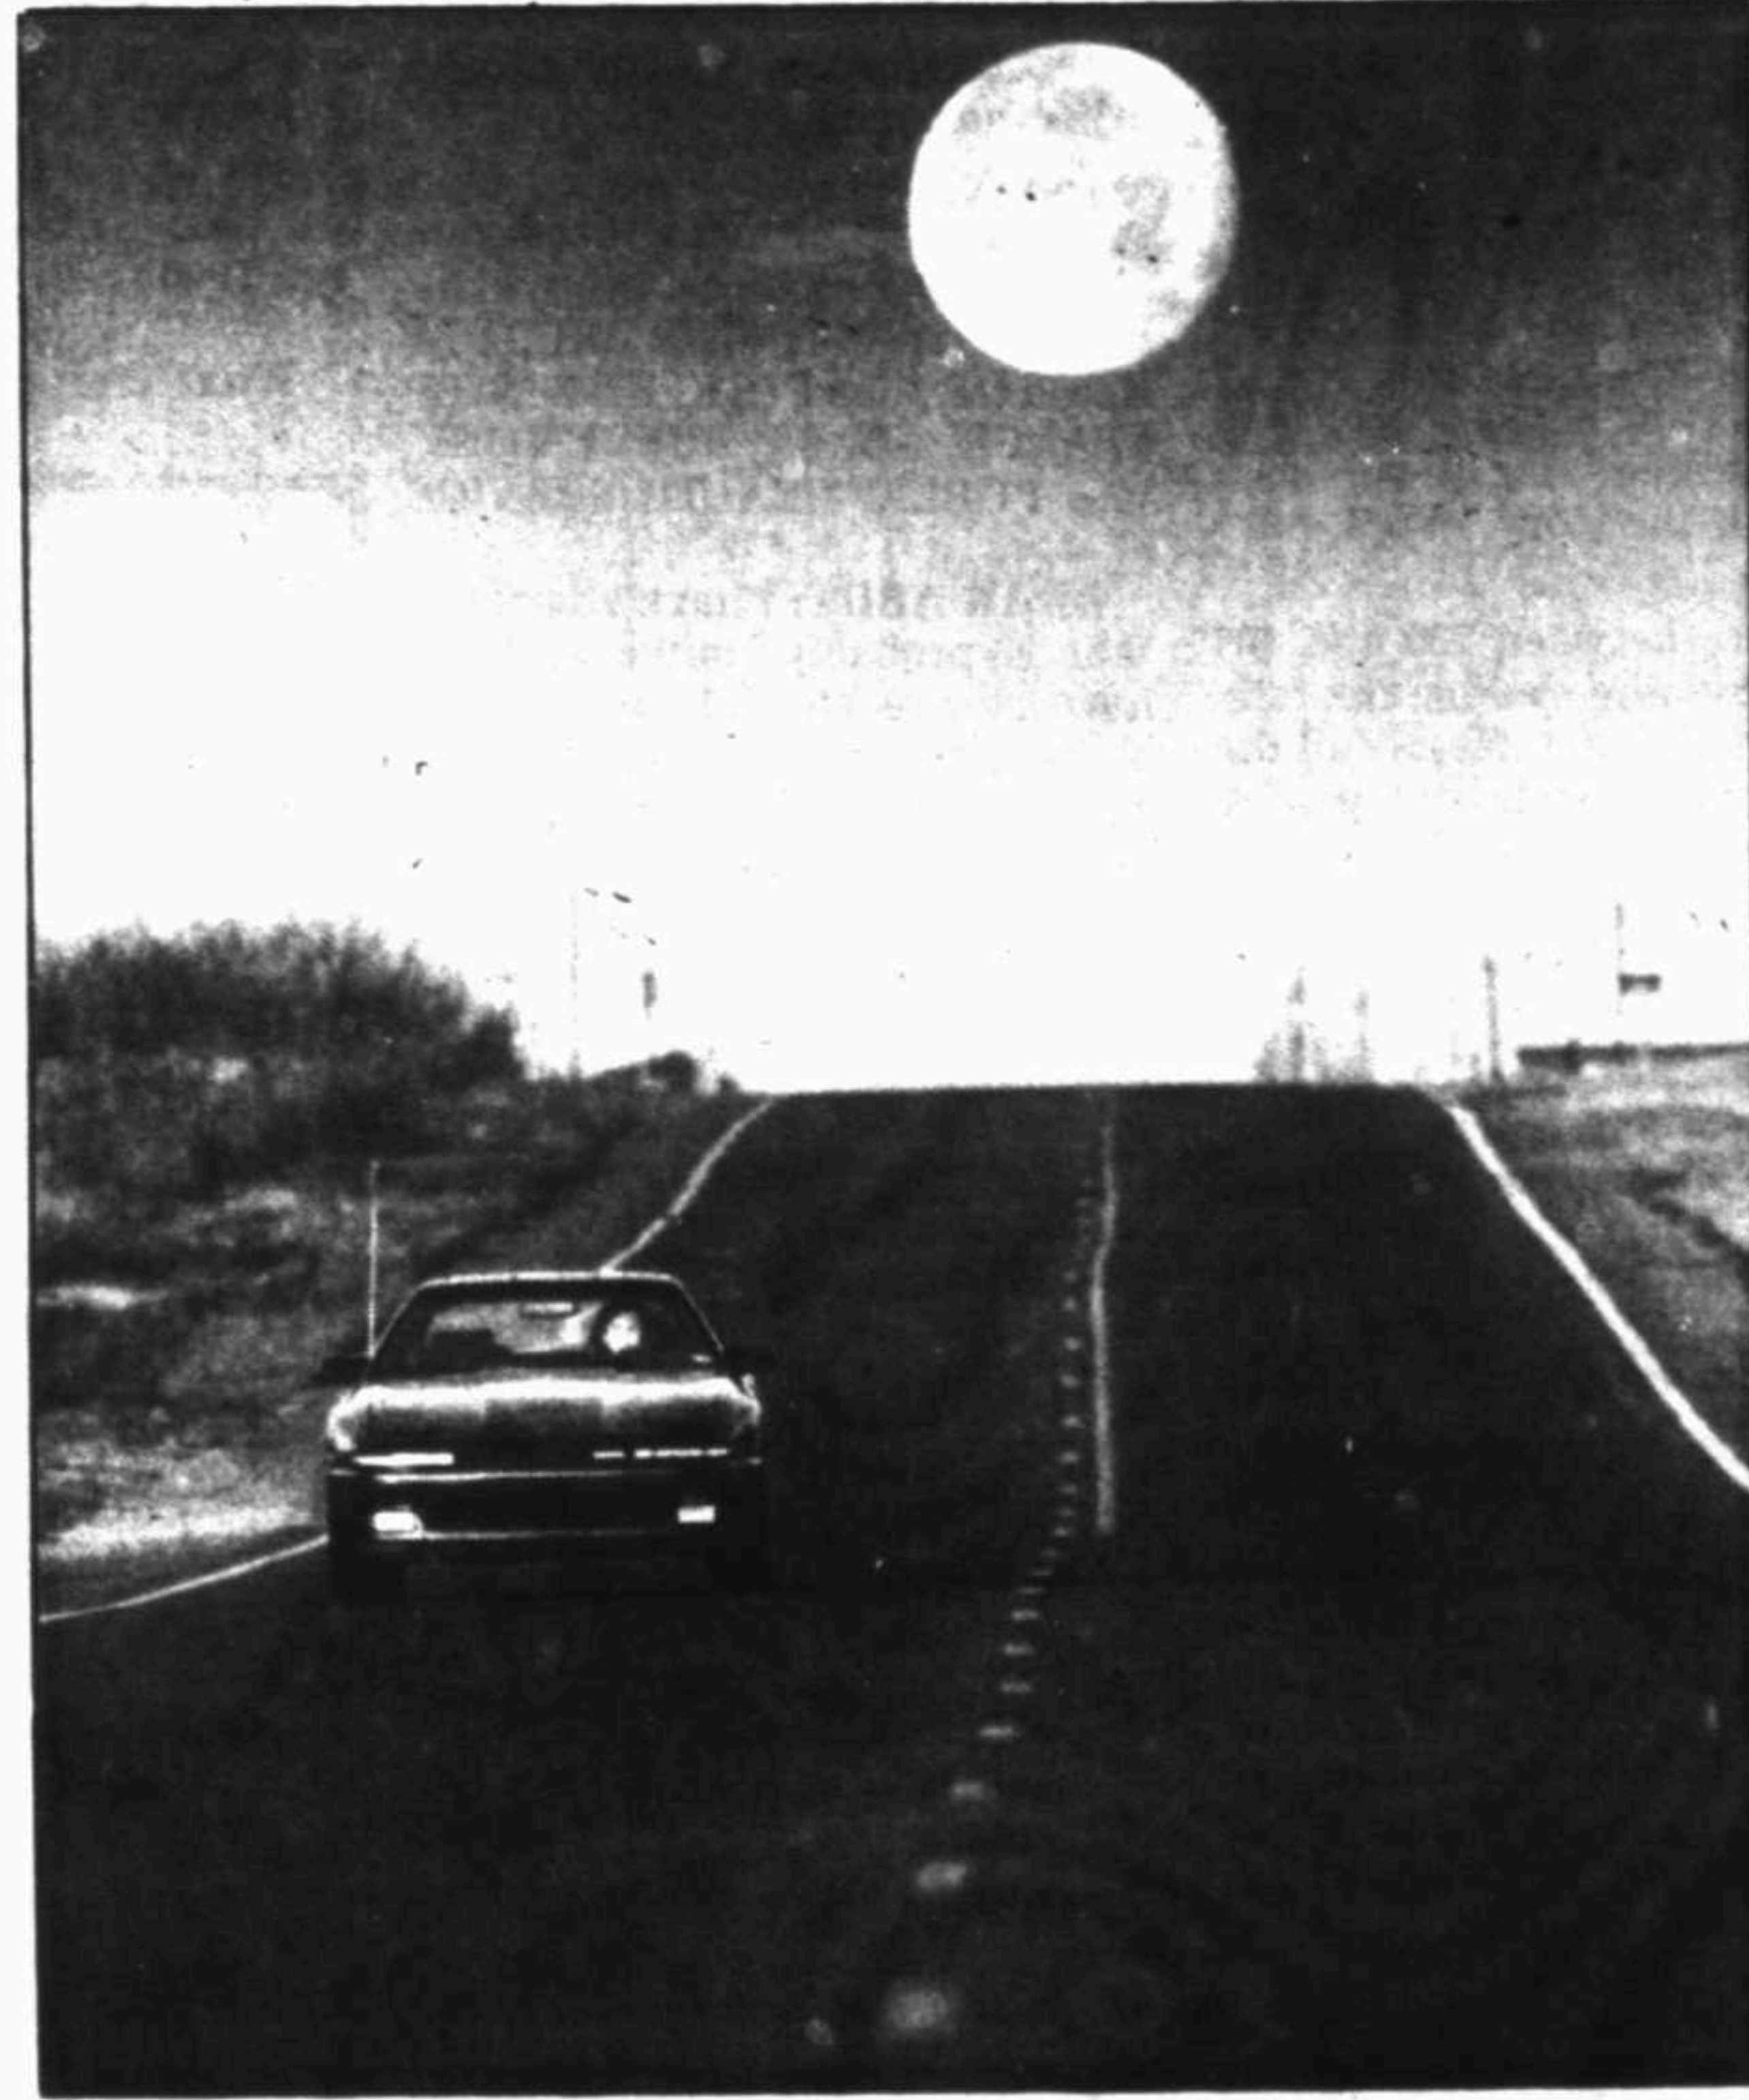

Nightly, high above Midland and the Permian Basin, an awesome and wondrous spectacle unfolds.

As the sun quietly eases below the horizon line, and as the last rays of sunlight begin to fade and lose their intensity, the quests of honor - the stars - begin to flicker against the backdrop of the darkening sky and slowly become visible to the human eye. Thus begins one of the most incredible shows provided in nature, and stands as a testament to the unseen power that holds the universe together.

The solar system continues to capture the interest of stargazers as it has in the past. Today one has as much information about our solar system as they could want right at their finger tips.

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium, located behind the Museum of the Southwest, offers spectacular slide shows of the stars and planets showing their positions in the West Texas skies. Three shows are offered weekly. Tuesday's at 7:30pm, and Sunday's at 2pm and 3:30pm. During the month of March the planetarium is featuring "Skywatchers of Ancient Mexico". For more information call Mark Hartman, 683-2882.

Robbers target Mr. Gatti's

Smith County officials review 1977 murder case

TYLER (AP) — A man once considered a prime suspect in a 1977 mutilation slaying for which another man eventually was sentenced to die is again being questioned in the murder, a published report says.

James L. Mayfield, 56, of Houston, was questioned by Smith County prosecutors in December and has agreed to take a lie-detector test, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Smith County Assistant Criminal District Attorney David Dobbs said he wanted to question Mayfield and "he voluntarily came up and met with us (and) cooperated with us."

Kerry Max Cook, now 35, was convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of Linda Jo Edwards, an employee at the University of Texas at Tyler library. Cook, who remains on death row, has always maintained his innocence.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in September reversed Cook's conviction and ordered a new trial after ruling that his rights had been violated during the first trial.

Meanwhile, Dobbs and others are interviewing Mayfield for the possibility that he actually murdered Ms. Edwards. Mayfield once headed the library where the victim and he acknowledged in a 1978 sworn statement that he had an 18-month relationship with her.

Mayfield was a suspect immediately after Ms. Edwards' mutilated body was found on June 10, 1977.

U.S. warns Mexico lacks adequate drug regulations

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Five years after U.S. officials halted the flow of Mexican diet pills across the border, medical officials are still fighting health problems because of easy access to this nation's prescription drugs, experts say.

In 1987, the Food and Drug Administration ordered U.S. Customs officials to halt the flow of Mexican diet pills linked to four deaths in Texas. Since then, U.S. Customs has also prohibited entry of all steroids into the United States. But that drug and others can easily be bought in Mexican pharmacies.

And the lure of cheaper prices has many U.S. residents crossing the border have their prescriptions filled at Mexican pharmacies.

"Part of our problem right now is that patients are going across the river to be treated for various ailments — infections or whatever," said Ed Woodruff, a pharmacist and administrative assistant at Mercy Regional Medical Center in Laredo.

"And they are using these high-powered antibiotics for some of these infections, and what we are coming up with now is some resistant strains of bacteria."

These resistant strains are forcing American physicians to use more expensive drugs.

Woodruff and others warn that Mexico's drug manufacturing standards are not tightly controlled. So information, such as the dosage amount may not be accurate.

San Antonio goes all out for international drug summit guests

By Kelley Shannon

Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — Civic leaders have wanted it for years.

They wanted the 1990 Economic Summit, but Houston got it.

They wanted an Olympic Festival, and they're getting one. In 1993.

But now, this Wednesday and Thursday, San Antonio at last will grasp a coveted prize — an event attracting world attention. It takes the form of a drug summit hosted by President Bush for six Latin American presidents.

"It will be dateline San Antonio that a major international event is here. The exposure is tremendous," said Steve Moore, executive director of the San Antonio Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Since the summit site was announced a month ago, city leaders have worked feverishly to ensure San Antonio is portrayed in the best possible way, particularly as a place with close business and cultural ties to Mexico and Latin America.

"There is a large number of people participating in this," said Mayor Nelson Wolff, adding that he wants to dispel any notion that San Antonio is a "little sleepy town in the deserts of Texas."

"We are evolving into a major international city focusing south," he said.

City boosters consider the so-called San Antonio Summit a bonanza for tourism and convention business and say it will prove the city can host important political events.

San Antonio lobbied hard to get the summit.

When it appeared as though San Antonio might be passed over for cities in Florida or California, Wolff fired off a letter accusing then-White House chief of staff John Sununu of "politicizing" the process. The mayor also tried to apply pressure through the city's congressional delegation.

When the announcement came Jan. 22 that San Antonio would be the place, civic leaders quickly formed volunteer committees to handle everything from translations to medical care to gifts for dignitaries.

The Convention and Visitors Bureau put a hold on downtown hotel rooms — there are about 6,000 in the central city — to make sure the leaders and their entourages had places to stay. There already were four conventions scheduled here this week.

"It was a tight fit, but it was a fit," said Moore, of the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

A local advertising and public relations firm, with the direction of the White House, designed a logo for the summit for free. The word "drug" doesn't appear anywhere on the emblem, which features the San Antonio skyline and the names of the countries participating in the summit.

"All along I've been giving my vision of San Antonio being an international city ready to take its position and its place in the universe as a good location to do business, and this certainly does represent that," City Councilwoman Yolanda Vera said, unveiling the logo.

No one could accuse city summit organizers of holding back.

Vera, who chairs the city's international relations committee, and her posse of volunteers proposed fireworks and a river parade and, like Houston did in 1990, set out to woo the out-of-town news media.

Volunteers have prepared press kits on San Antonio in English and Spanish for the estimated 800 journalists expected to cover the summit. The volunteers also have organized press tours of the city. A press "resource room" will offer information and video on local businesses and tourism. A press hospitality room will feature Southwestern food.

A $100,000 news media party in front of the Alamo is planned for Wednesday night — complete with mesquite-roasted tenderloin, fajitas, ice sculptures, bandanas for all and entertainment by cloggers, Mexican dancers and country music artist Hal Ketchum.

In the midst of the hoopla, Mayor Wolff is quick to point out the city hasn't forgotten the reason of the two-day summit — illegal drug trafficking. He said summit planners are trying to balance their excitement with the sober nature of the meeting.

"We think there is that balance," he said. "The talks are serious. They're going to affect our community."

Racism is again on the rise in U.S., Barbara Jordan says

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Former Texas Congresswoman Barbara Jordan says racism is again on the rise in the United States.

"I believe that has come about because of a perception on the part of the majority community that we have solved the race problem in America and we don't need to do anything else," Ms. Jordan told Concerned and Caring Educators of Omaha Saturday.

The group was organized among Omaha Public Schools administrators to help provide scholarship assistance to students.

Ms. Jordan, who served three terms in the House of Representatives in the 1970s, was on the House Judiciary Committee that voted to impeach President Richard Nixon during the Watergate scandal. She now serves on the faculty of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

She said the nation's black citizens are having the hardest time with recent economic hard times.

"Recessionary hard times always have inherent within them conflict between people vying for pieces of a shrinking piece of the pie," Ms. Jordan said.

DEAR ABBY

Teens should know alcohol can kill you

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In January you printed a letter from "Arizona Grandmother," who expressed her concern at hearing of the death of a 21-year-old University of Florida junior who died as the result of consuming 23 shots of liquor. You hoped that some reader might tell you the "rest of the story." Well, here it is:

Van Buren

There are between 200 and 400 alcohol-poisoning deaths annually in the United States. Nearly all the victims are children and adolescents. Often these tragedies result from "chug-a-lug" contests, where kids compete to see who can down the most alcohol in the shortest time.

Rapid drinking, particularly in large amounts, is one of the most dangerous ways to consume alcohol. It is almost certain to induce severe illness, coma or death. Anyone who indulges in this kind of drinking needs immediate medical attention.

Some young people might experiment with other drugs, but it's doubtful that minors would engage in contests to see who could consume the largest quantity of any other drug in the least amount of time. Nor are adults likely to endorse such obviously dangerous and illegal behavior.

Concerned readers like "Arizona Grandmother" can help to prevent future tragedies by telling young people that alcohol is a DRUG. Adults 21 and older who choose to drink should limit their consumption to no more than one drink per day for women, and no more than two drinks per day for men. This is based on the "Dietary Guidelines for Americans" published by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Underage youth should drink no alcohol.

Thank you, Abby, for your long-standing commitment to discourage drinking by those under 21. — ELAINE M. JOHNSON, PH.D., DIRECTOR, OFFICE FOR SUBSTANCE ABUSE PREVENTION, U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is probably unlike any you have ever received. I am a 26-year-old woman who is about to be married. I have never had sex, but when I was 24 years old, I agreed to be artificially inseminated and gave birth to a child for a couple who wanted one, but the woman was not able to have a child.

Now here is my question: Am I still a virgin? My husband-to-be is well aware that I want to wait until our wedding night to make love, so he has never pressured me. I need to know if I am still a virgin. — YES OR NO?

DEAR YES OR NO: Since you have never had sexual intercourse, you are still a virgin. If your fiancé is not aware that you have given birth to a child, I suggest that you tell him.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been dating for about 2 1/2 years, but we've been living together for eight months.

We've decided to get married next year. The problem: He says the bride's parents should pay for the wedding. Abby, I am 32 years old and have not been living with my parents for 15 years.

I told him that since I do not live with my parents, I do not think they should be expected to pay for my wedding. However, if they offer to help, it would be fine with me. What do you think? — ATLANTA COUPLE

DEAR COUPLE: Parents are never under any obligation to pay for the wedding of a son or daughter. If they do pay for it, it's a gift.

The McNay Art Museum, site of this week's international drug summit in San Antonio, is a Spanish Mediterranean-style mansion that sits secluded on a quiet hilltop, as shown in this Feb. 13 photo. White House officials said they chose the museum from among several other of the city's historic sites because of its enclosed "campus" atmosphere.

Internal squabble brews at ACLU

HOUSTON (AP) — A rather uncivil war is rocking the American Civil Liberties Union in Houston and across Texas, pitting the national ACLU against some Texas members.

Barry Steinhardt, the ACLU's assistant national director, said the conflict stems from the fundamental question of how the organization will protect civil liberties in Texas.

Steinhardt said the national office is moving to curb damaging infighting among its Texas members and resurrect a state organization destroyed by an "implosion."

The ACLU's old state affiliate, the Texas Civil Liberties Union, collapsed under the weight of controversy and debt. It has been replaced by a new organization, the ACLU of Texas, and the state headquarters has been moved from Austin to Houston.

Some local ACLU leaders contend the national organization wants to centralize its control just when the times are demanding that it build greater grassroots support, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

In a legal skirmish spawned by the conflict, the Houston-based Clark Read Foundation, which provides financial support for the local ACLU chapter, is battling to keep the national ACLU from gaining control of its assets.

The foundation has asked a state district court to rule that neither the national ACLU nor the newly reconstituted state affiliate has a legal right to take its property, which include an old house that serves as ACLU headquarters, and an undisclosed sum of cash.

Those directly involved in the case declined to discuss the issues, the Chronicle reported. But Joe Cook of Dallas, ACLU's North Texas regional director, defended the national organization.

The ACLU "has a policy that money raised in the name of the ACLU belong to the ACLU," he said. "We can't have the anarchy when an individual chapter decides what it wants to do without regard to (ACLU) policies."

Libel trial of former OU coach to start today

AUSTIN (AP) — A news reporter's $30 million lawsuit over a book by former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer is scheduled to go to trial today.

Jack Taylor Jr., former reporter for the Dallas Times Herald, has accused Switzer of libel, slander and invasion of privacy in the former coach's autobiography "Boo-Legger's Boy."

In the book, Switzer says that Taylor took part in a failed scheme to plant drugs on an unnamed Oklahoma football player after the 1988 Orange Bowl.

Taylor, now a reporter with the Los Angeles Times, had written several articles about the then-troubled Oklahoma football program.

Switzer resigned from OU in June 1989 following off-the-field problems with some of his athletes. Two football players were convicted in a rape; another player shot a teammate; and quarterback Charles Thompson was convicted on cocaine trafficking charges.

Switzer's book was published in September 1990.

Taylor and his wife, Myrna Lee Taylor, seek $5 million damages and a $25 million punitive award.

Other defendants are Austin writer Edwin "Bud" Shrake, who co-wrote the book, and publisher

William Morrow & Co. Inc. The Taylors allege that Switzer "knowingly published falsehoods" in the mention of Taylor in the drug-planting scheme.

The defendants have stated "the specific facts set out" in the chapter about which Taylor complained "are literally true or at least substantially true." They also claim Taylor's wife had no cause of action because Switzer's book did not mention her.

The defendants also say that Taylor was a public figure. Such a designation would require a more difficult test for Taylor to prove libel or slander.

The trial is expected to last about a month, said T. Randall Sandifer, an attorney for the Taylors.

The first days of the trial will be devoted to preliminary motions and jury selection, Sandifer said. Pre-trial maneuvers have been ongoing since last year, and have reached the Texas Supreme Court.

Attorneys for Switzer tried to force Taylor to name what he claimed are confidential sources.

Without comment, the Texas Supreme Court ruled earlier this month in favor of Taylor by refusing to allow Switzer to seek a court order directing Taylor to turn over the names.

Galveston looks to tourism to salvage city's economy

GALVESTON (AP) — One-third fewer revelers than last year attended the first weekend of Mardi Gras in Galveston, but officials said they were pleased with the turnout considering the bad weather.

About 160,000 people came to the island city Friday and Saturday, compared to 240,000 last year.

But the test of Mardi Gras appeal will be next weekend, when officials hope to surpass the 500,000-person crowd that packed the island last year.

Amid the brilliant colors, bright lights and fantastic sights, Galveston is launching its Mardi Gras celebration with a fervor that disguises a deadly serious wrestling match.

It's a fight between this city and the hard times that have kept it in a steady economic decline during recent years.

Tourism is a $400 million-a-year business for Galveston.

Trial to begin for East Texas' largest cocaine group

TYLER (AP) — Two men accused of participating in East Texas' largest cocaine organization go on trial Monday.

Prosecutors say Gustavo Bedoya Naranjo, 39, of Gilmer, and Andy Restrepo, 52, of Live Oak, are connected to 2,400 pounds of cocaine seized in November 1991 in the Longview area, and about 15 tons of the drug confiscated in Miami.

Naranjo is charged with five counts of possession with intent to distribute cocaine. Restrepo — also known as Anibal Restrepo — is charged with two counts.

The indictment seeks the forfeiture of various properties used as part of the conspiracy or obtained in illegal activities, including 126 pre-Colombian Indian artifacts, a 1989 Ford Bronco and about $1.8 million.

Three other men pleaded guilty Jan. 14 to participating in a cocaine and marijuana conspiracy over at least six years.

Prosecutors say the five are connected to an estimated 15 tons of cocaine seized in November and December in Miami. The Miami bust on Nov. 26 resulted in the seizure of 12 tons of cocaine, the second-largest such bust in U.S. history.

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell modestly Friday, wrapping up a week that saw crude take its biggest one-day plunge since the Gulf War.

Things got so dull that some oil traders spent part of Friday watching Olympic hockey, with the U.S. team losing to rivals from the former Soviet Union.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $18.66 per barrel, down 8 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

For the week, crude oil fell 80 cents per barrel on contracts for next-month delivery.

The big fall, of about $1.30 per barrel, came Tuesday, as the market opened after a three-day weekend in which OPEC agreed to cut 1.2 million barrels from its daily production in an attempt to prop up prices in the spring. Oil traders decided the cut was not big enough, so they staged a massive sell-off.

Oil partly recovered Wednesday, then seemed to stall in a narrow price range amid an absence of news, rumors or anything else moving the market for the rest of the week.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in March settling at $1.249 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 10.4 cents.

That was a huge move for natural gas, which has generally been depressed in recent weeks, but traders attributed it to the expiration of the March delivery contract, which can often bring on brief, excessive volatility.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — Israeli military clashes in southern Lebanon, economic problems in Germany and rising interest rates in the U.S. combined to boost the dollar against major foreign currencies on Friday. Gold prices fell.

The dollar was quoted at 1.6590 German marks in late New York trading, up from 1.6450 late Thursday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7470 from $1.7505 late Thursday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday's rates included: 1.5020 Swiss francs, up from 1.4865; 5.6390 French francs, up from 5.5950; 1,243.75 Italian lire, up from 1,234.00; and 1.18675 Canadian dollars, up from 1.18365.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 128.65 Japanese yen from 128.60 yen at Thursday's close.

Market eases

NEW YORK — Stock prices pulled back a bit Friday, unable to extend Thursday's upsurge to record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .45 to 3,280.19, finishing the week with a net gain of 34.22 points.

GM's Stempel to talk to workers

■ Speech by General Motors chairman expected to include list of doomed plants.

By Frederick Standish
Associated Press

DETROIT — When the messenger is also the chairman, General Motors Corp. workers fasten their seat belts.

The last time Robert Stempel delivered a satellite-fed speech to GM's 390,000 employees, he said 74,000 jobs would be cut and 21 plants shut down by 1995. Today, analysts said Stempel will reappear with the specifics: $3 billion in losses last year and, possibly, a list of doomed plants.

Combined with reports earlier this month from Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., the Big Three automakers will have 1991 losses approaching $7 billion, easily their worst year in history. During the 1980 recession, the three lost a combined $4.5 billion.

In a Dec. 18 speech to GM's workers, Stempel didn't specify which plants would be closed. Among them, he said, would be either an Arlington, Texas, factory or the Willow Run assembly plant outside Ypsilanti, about 30 miles west of Detroit.

Communities that rely on GM plants for jobs and taxes were left shuddering. Cities with GM supplier companies wondered if they would be able to find new business if the plants they supply closed.

GM has shut down plants before. In the 1980s, it opened 10 U.S. assembly plants and closed nine, sometimes inflicting deep pain in towns heavily reliant on the nation's No. 1 automaker.

GM workers have been through layoffs and recessions before, but the indecision about plant closings has left many skittish.

"You ought to get all these poor people off the rope and tell them what's going to happen to them," Alvin Dunn, a Willow Run worker for 23 years, said in a letter Sunday in The Detroit News.

"There's a lot of stress on a lot of families. We're all waiting for word," he said.

A companion letter from Earle Holston, who has worked for 27 years at the Arlington plant, talked about the tension building since Stempel's disclosures in December.

"I just plead with you to make your decision known as quickly as possible," Holston said. "The workers, the families — we want to know so we can get on with our lives."

By shutting down factories and downsizing the corporation, GM is shucking the excesses of salad days in the 1980s and acknowledging it never will consistently command 40 percent to 45 percent of the U.S. car and truck market.

Its market share recently has been about 35 percent as Japanese automakers carve out a wider niche among American consumers.

In addition to GM's expected loss last year of about $3 billion, the company was likely to report a one-time pretax charge of about $3 billion more for shutting down plants.

Just when plants would close remained uncertain. Many states require advance notice for plant closings of 30, 60 or 90 days.

More U.S. companies challenge Japanese firms

By James Sterngold
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — After spending much of the 1980s struggling to survive against its Japanese competitors, Harley-Davidson Inc. has joined hundreds of U.S. companies in doing something that would have seemed unthinkable a decade ago: it is challenging the Japanese manufacturers that almost put it out of business by revving up its sales on their home turf.

Following an increasingly familiar pattern, the motorcycle maker has acquired the Japanese firm that distributed its products to take a stronger hand in expanding its sales network.

It has beefed up its staff and it is concluding a deal to market a line of clothing to the Japanese who, despite growing disillusionment with the United States, still have a romantic attraction for the kind of muscular American image the Harley-Davidson name still evokes.

"If you want to be competitive in this day and age, you have to be a competitor in Japan," said Jeffrey Bleustein, Harley's executive vice president.

"It's the most difficult market in the world, and we have some real challenges there, but you have to do it," Harley's sales here have increased to 3,000 motorcycles a year, Bleustein said, with the number still rising slowly.

President Bush's ill-starred visit earlier this year, the carping by U.S. automakers about their modest exports to Japan and the increasingly bellicose rhetoric from politicians on both sides of the Pacific have heightened trade tensions between Japan and the United States markedly in recent months.

But the bitter sniping and complaints about the closed nature of the Japanese market have obscured an important fact: a growing number of U.S. companies have decided that the best way to compete with their Japanese rivals at home is to compete with them in Japan.

These companies are becoming more assertive here not because it will correct America's $43 billion trade deficit with Japan — few believe that will happen anytime soon — but because it is good business.

"If you can compete in Japan you will be competitive anywhere," said James C. Morgan, chairman of Applied Materials Inc., which has successfully established itself here as a leading producer of equipment used to manufacture computer chips. "And this is the time to do it."

■ An Analysis

The opportunities have gotten much better.

The attractions are simple. With roughly 125 million generally affluent citizens, Japan's market consumes large amounts of imports, and the once-frugal Japanese are becoming increasingly acquisitive, wanting many of the things they did without during years of sacrifice.

"The Japanese have become voracious consumers of imported luxury goods, and we've been able to do well partly because we are an imported luxury good," said H. Chris Killingstad, managing director for the Far Eastern operations of Haagen-Dazs ice cream, whose sales here have been soaring following big investments by the company.

And while the United States is languishing in a recession, the Japanese economy is expected to grow by close to 3 percent this year — a significant slowdown by Japanese standards. Some executives add a more strategic reason for the need to increase their sales in Japan.

"Japan is not only a big market, but it is also a very important market in that you can't allow the Japanese to nurture their products there without being challenged, as a kind of sanctuary," insisted Arnold Brenner, executive vice president in charge of the Japan business of Motorola, the electronics and telecommunications giant. "That's why it's so important to crack the barriers that exist and make the effort."

Although it can take years to build a significant market presence, most agree that the payday can make it worthwhile — eventually.

"Generally profit margins are quite good if you can make it through the first seven years or so and work your way into a solid position," said William J. Best, managing director here for A.T. Kearney International Inc., a consulting company. "Once you get to that point, it's almost obscene what some people make."

What the trend underscores is that the long-debated question of whether the Japanese market is open or closed is far more complex than it has often been made out to be, and should not by itself discourage companies.

Unquestionably, foreign businesses here still face some unfair barriers trying to build their operations.

Nebraska generates most jobs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska generated more jobs per capita than any other state last year, but economists said many appeared to be part-time and low paying.

"I definitely think we ought to put more emphasis on creating jobs that pay good wages," said Professor Keith Turner, an economist at the University of Nebraska.

The state Labor Department said Nebraska gained about 30,400 jobs in 1991, a 4.1 percent growth rate that led the country.

Service industries accounted for 11,700 of those jobs, more than any other sector, the Omaha World-Herald reported Sunday. Such jobs include waiting tables and working at telemarketing companies and customer service centers, often at the low end of the pay scale.

Service is also the fastest-growing kind of employment nationally. But the state's service jobs grew 6.2 percent, more than triple the 1.8 percent nationwide.

Firm numbers on part-time work are unavailable, but other figures suggest a shift toward more of them, said Charles Lamphear, head of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The state added nearly 62,000 jobs in the past two years, but the state's population grew by only 8,600 people in the past decade, Lamphear said.

The 1991 Census counted 1,578,385 people in Nebraska. That means people must be holding more than one job, Lamphear said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Exercising stock option can be risky

By Bill Doyle

Q. I work for a medium-size company and have options on 6,000 shares of the company's stock at $7 to $10 per share. The company plans to go public this year at $50 per share. Everyone says employees should buy the stock before the company goes public and then sell in the market.

How do I proceed to do that? Do I borrow the money to purchase the stock? What are the factors to consider on buying and selling the shares? What are the risks?

A. Assuming your numbers are correct, by all means exercise your options and buy those shares. Borrow the money any legitimate way you can. But a word of caution. Make sure the company, indeed, will go public — by selling a large number of shares to the investing public — thereby establishing a ready market for its stock. Until that happens you might not be able to sell the 6,000 shares you purchase.

You can reduce your risk of that unfortunate happening by waiting to exercise your options until after the sale to the public or, at least, until the public offering is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The key factor to consider, and perhaps worry about, will be the price at which the stock is sold to the public. That's determined just before the public offering is made. The $50 number might be a pipe dream. However, if it's true, you stand to make a bundle.

The risk is that the stock's price might fall after the public offering is made. But if the offering price is higher than your option prices, you'll be in good financial shape.

You evidently have a number of employee stock options. Each such option gives you the right to buy a certain number of shares at a fixed price for a set period of time. Some companies use such options to provide extra compensation — especially to corporate officers and key employees.

Employee stock options come in two basic forms — nonqualified stock options and incentive stock options. Neither is taxable to you at the time it is granted. Past that, the tax rules get complicated. Check yours with your company's personnel department and/or a good accountant.

Q. The quarterly report of a company in which I own stock contained the following: "P-E 16." What does that mean?

A. That, on the final day of the three-month period covered by the report, the company's stock had a price-earnings ratio of 16-to-1. Expressed another way, that stock was trading in the market at "16 times earnings."

This is a relatively simple calculation. Let's say the stock was trading at $32 per share and for the 12 months prior to the report date, the company's net earnings amounted to $2 per share. The P-E was 16-to-1.

Q. What is the difference between "primary" and "fully-diluted" earnings per share?

A. Primary earnings are based on the number of shares of common stock currently "outstanding" — owned by investors. Fully-diluted earnings assume additional shares will become outstanding as the result of exercise of stock options and conversion of convertible securities.

If XYZ Corp. reported net earnings of $100 million and had 10 million shares of common stock outstanding, its primary earnings per share amounted to $10.

Now, we'll say XYZ has issued options giving the option owners the right to buy 500,000 shares of common stock. We'll also say XYZ has convertible bonds and preferred stock outstanding, giving the owners of those securities the right to exchange them for 500,000 common shares.

If all the options had been exercised and all the convertible securities turned in, the company would have had 11 million common shares outstanding. That would have diluted the common stock's earnings to $9.09 per share — $100 million divided by 11 million.

Tark says he'll stay

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, claiming a cloud had been placed over his head by recent accusations against his troubled basketball program, said Sunday night he was rescinding the resignation he submitted last June.

The withdrawal, announced at the end of a 2½-hour hand-clapping, hymn-singing rally, came 10 days before Tarkanian was scheduled to step down as head coach of the Runnin' Rebels.

Tarkanian, 61, is completing his 19th season with the Rebels, who are ranked 12th nationally with a 24-2 record.

Most of this year's players and assistant coaches were in the audience at a church on the city's west side when he made the announcement.

"We got torn up from the inside," Tarkanian said. "We got dismantled from the inside. It's totally unbelievable."

TSN drops boxes

The Sporting News is making a change that might be considered the media equivalent of installing lights in Wrigley Field.

The sports weekly, which began running baseball box scores in 1886, its first year of publication, will eliminate them in favor of additional coverage of baseball, football, basketball and hockey.

"As times change and tastes diversify, we must reinvent ourselves to stay alive," John Rawlings, editor of the Times Mirror Co., publication, wrote in a letter to readers that will appear in the March 2 issue, due out on Wednesday.

Box scores were not in the weekly's first issue, dated March 17, 1886, because the baseball season had not yet started. But once the season began, the box scores appeared, Rawlings said in a telephone interview on Friday from St. Louis, where The Sporting News is based.

"More than 90 percent of our current subscribers say they rely on other sources for their box scores," he said.

Rawlings noted that owners of personal computers could get box scores "within minutes after a game is over."

■ The Chaparrals have been in first place all season, but now find themselves teetering as New Mexico Junior College breathes down MC's neck.

A week ago at this time, the Midland College Chaparrals were like birds on a wire. From a lofty perch known as first place they sat, overlooking the remainder of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and its small collection of wanna-bes.

But after two straight losses, MC finds itself tied for first place with tonight's Chap Center visitor, New Mexico Junior College. Both teams are 11-3 in conference play with two games remaining.

Not only is it possible that, if they lose tonight, the Chaps could surrender first

Four-way tie for first possible

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

It boggles the mind to think of all the different ways the Western Junior College Athletic Conference can come to a close this year.

There can be an outright champion, a two-way tie and a three-way tie. This season, the possibility even exists of a four-way tie.

With just two games remaining in the season, the conference race has seldom been this jumbled this close to the end.

Midland College can win the conference outright by winning its last two games, tonight against New Mexico Junior College, and Thursday at Odesa. NMJC can win the race outright if it wins its final two.

But the stage will be set for a four-way tie beginning tonight if MC defeats NMJC. OC beats New Mexico Military and South Plains beats Howard. The four-way tie would consist of MC, NMJC, OC and South Plains, all Region V tournament-bound teams.

"A tie would almost be worth it just to see the great minds of our confer-

In other words, the conference race is a big mess (See related story).

"Every game we play from here on out is the biggest game of the year for us," MC head basketball coach Steve Green said.

The first time the Chaps and T-Birds met at the Caster Activity Center in Hobbs, N.M., MC held a one-game conference lead over NMJC. Both the offensive and defensive effort of sophomore Chris McKinney in the final minute proved the difference as MC won, 92-90.

Can the Chaps afford to count on such last-minute heroics again tonight? Not on your life.

"I think we go in with a kind of let's-see-what-happens attitude," Green said. "The first go-around, things were going good and we kind of felt like we were in charge. Now, we're more in a react mode instead of an act mode."

Olympic torch extinguished

■ In a party void of the futuristic artsiness that accompanied the opening ceremonies 16 days ago, Olympic athletes bid France farewell.

By Terril Jones

Associated Press Writer

ALBERTVILLE, France — The French bid a reluctant goodbye to the Winter Games Sunday, with a down-to-earth festival of square dancing, accordion music and fireworks.

The Olympic stadium crackled with flash bulbs, as athletes whooped it up and three Canadians even did backflips.

When it was time to extinguish the Olympic flame, the crowd booed and whistled and shouted: "NO!"

"The Olympic torch will thus be put out. However, there is no doubt that a little ray resembling it will shine within us for a long time," said Michael Barnier, one of the organizers of the Winter Games.

The closing ceremony, which lasted about 1¼ hours, was much different than the surreal opening one held 16 days ago that included eerie music and people dressed as winged creatures suspended from overhead wires.

Sunday's party required less imagination. It was just full-speed-ahead fun.

The show was full of the impromptu, from athletes high-

Albertville had something for everyone

Allow me a few moments of your time to pontificate on the recently completed XVI Winter Olympics in Albertville, France...

■ Everyone has an opinion, but the one in this corner is that figure skating is a sport. This from a guy who bruises easily — and frequently — when he laces on roller skates...

■ A USA Today columnist put it best when he wrote that figure skating is the perfect blend of art and athleticism. Which is maybe why some people don't consider it a sport, because art is involved.

■ Ever seen so many hockey fans come out of the woodwork as you've seen in the last couple of weeks?

■ With a couple of exceptions, CBS did a fine job covering the Games.

Exception No. 1: The American viewing public certainly would've survived coverage without the weak Pat O'Brien, host of something called "Late Night." Couldn't they come up with a more original name? And what was that segment called "Rock and Roll Highlights"?

Nothing was as uncalled for as the blatant match-making attempt CBS made by re-acquainting Italian skier Alberto Tomba and figure skater Katarina Witt. Why was this necessary and how could anyone possibly care?

■ Scott Hamilton was criticized for not being critical enough during his figure skating commentary. But Hamilton's been there and knows what goes into the skaters' preparation. For him to overly criticize at this point would've been uncalled for. Something ABC commentator Dick Button has forgotten in his years.

■ The best women's skater was obviously Kristi Yamaguchi. But the most elegant was Nancy Kerrigan. The most charming, Ito.

■ Best human interest stories: Men's figure skating silver medalist Paul Wylie, and Kerrigan's legally blind mother, Brenda, who sits inches in front of a TV screen just to see her daughter's image...

■ Runner-up: The blue-collar figure skating pair of Calla Urbanski, a waitress, and Rocky Marval, a truck driver. ... And then there was the Senegalese downhill ski team. Little known fact: Midland College has just as many Senegalese tennis players — Myriam Berthe and brother Fadel — as Senegal had athletes at the Olympics.

■ Most painful moment: Watching French figure skater Laetitia Hubert finish her program despite numerous falls and miscues...

■ Best example of courage: See above...

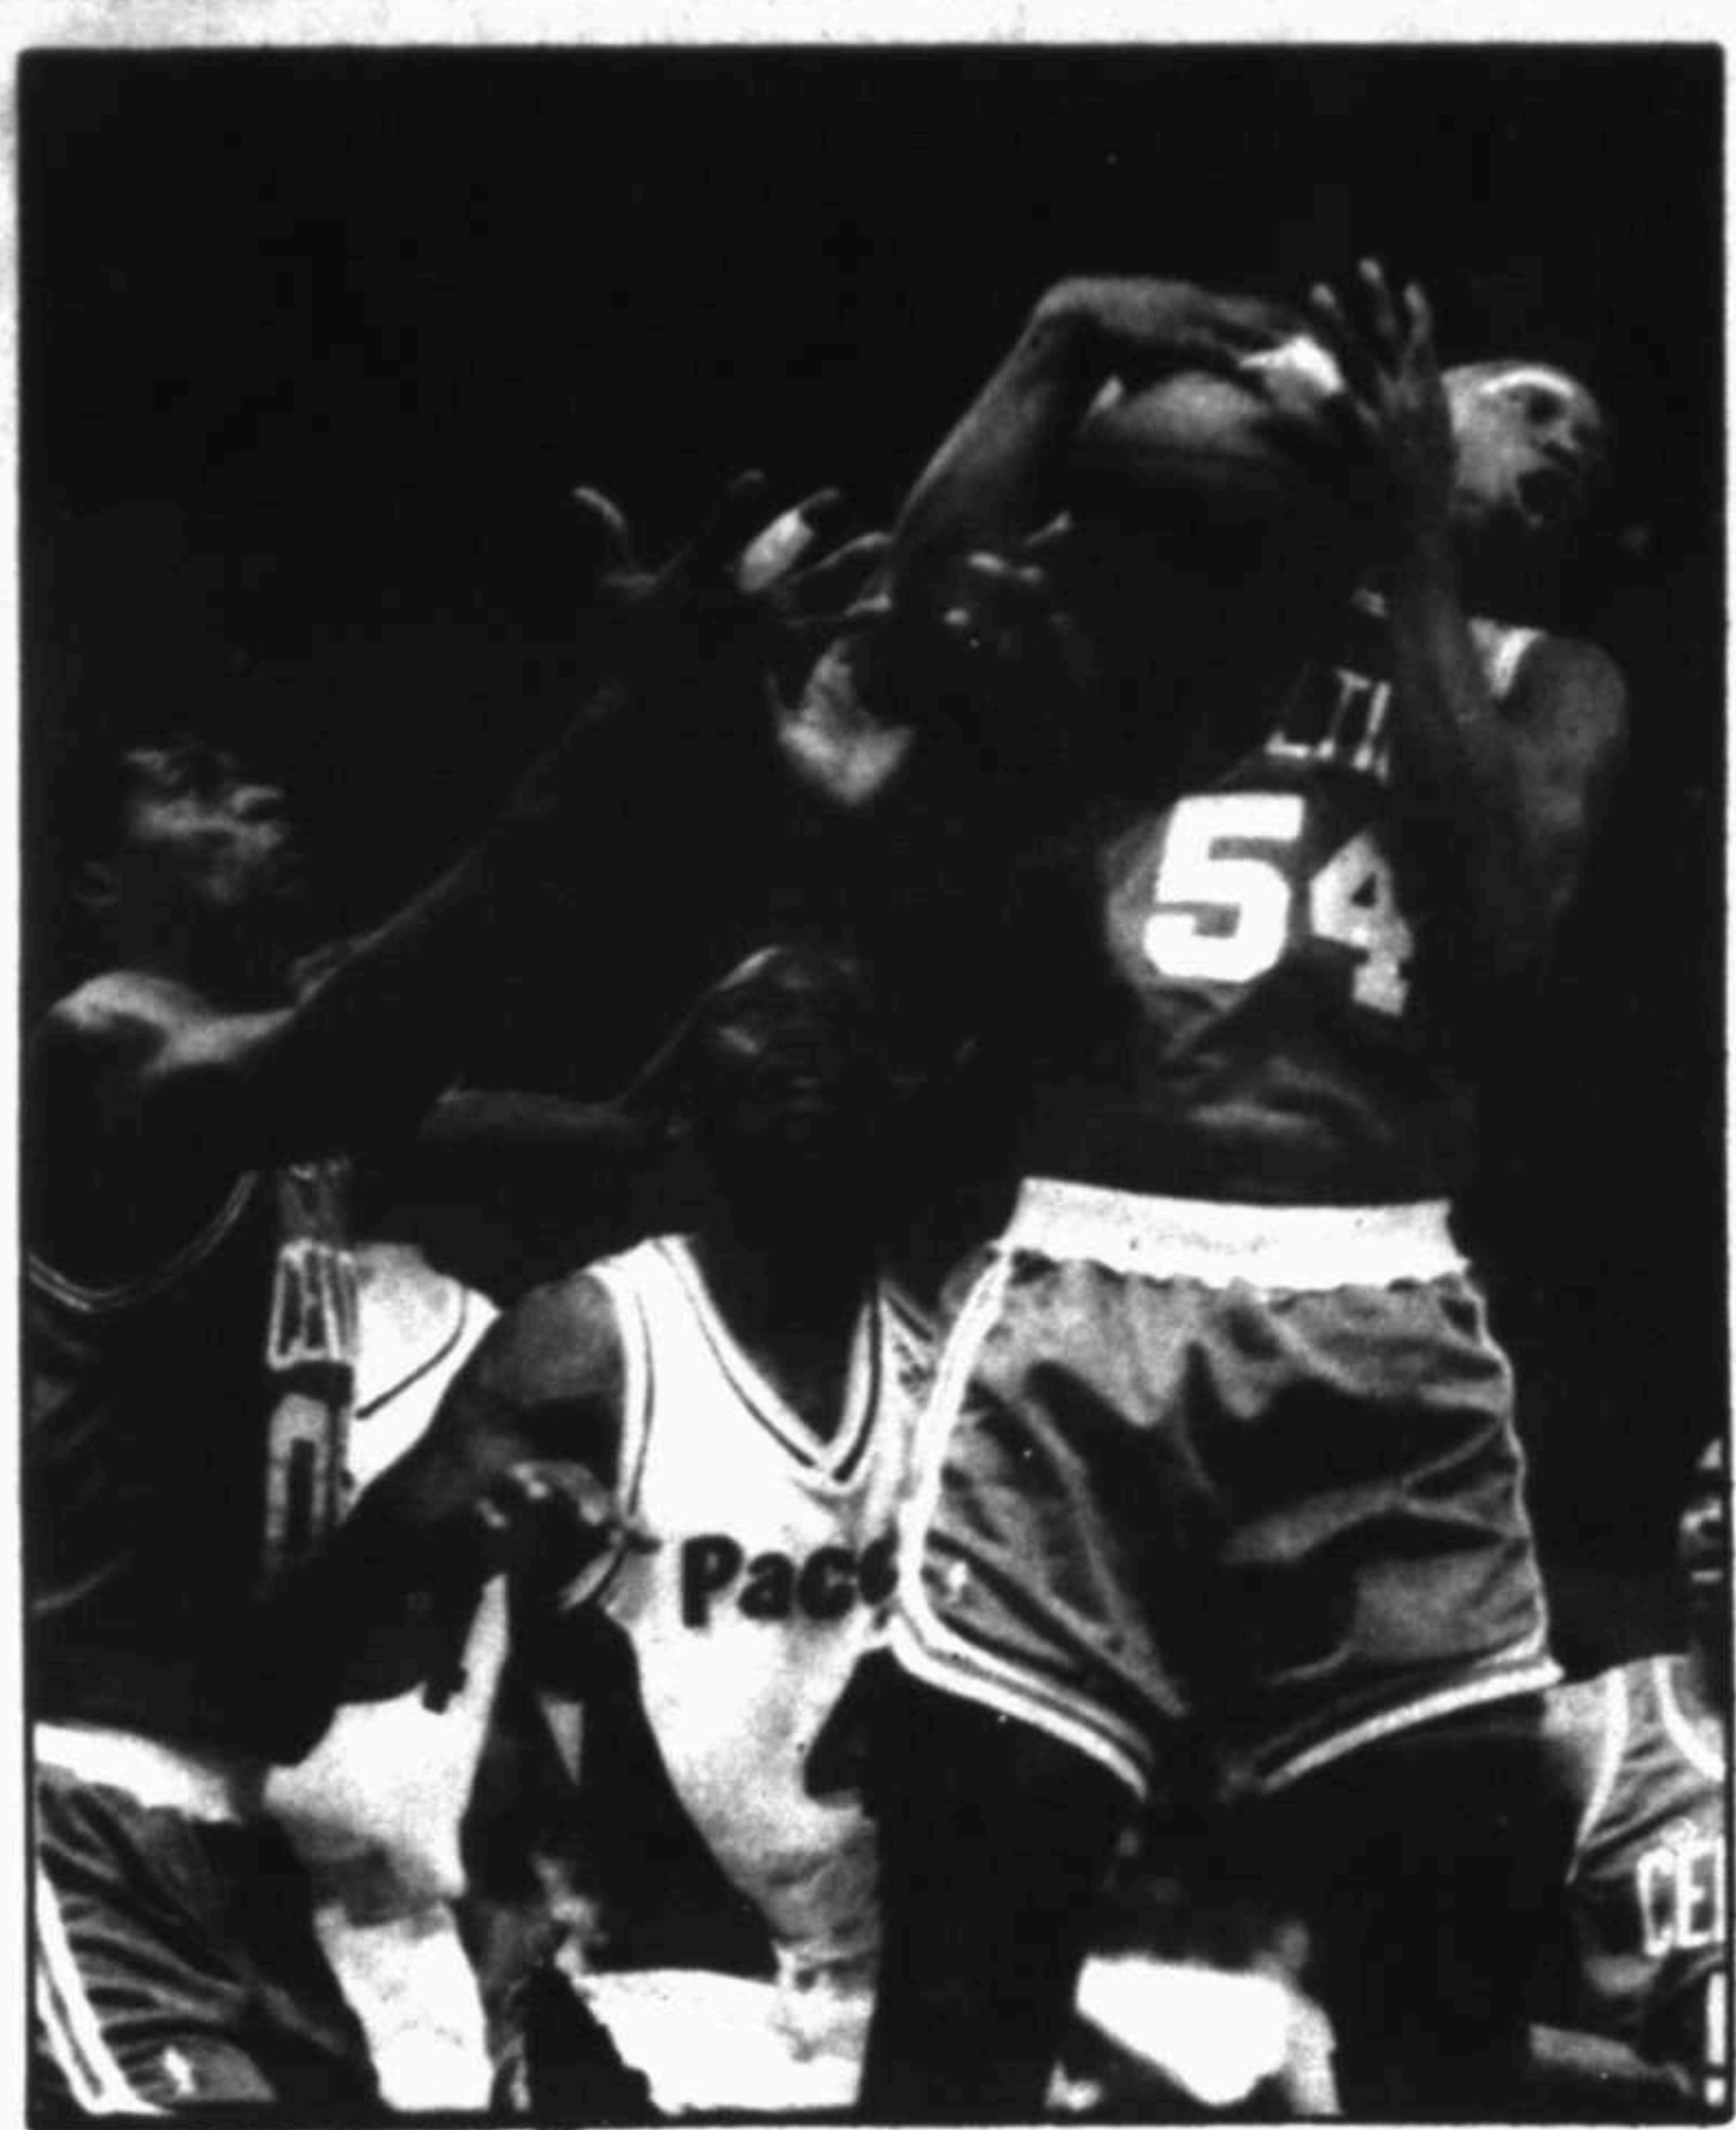

■ Worst example of the pressure the Japanese put on their people to succeed, no matter the cost: After figure skater Midori Ito stumbled to fifth-place after last Wednesday's original program, Ito felt it necessary to call her homeland and issue a public apology for her performance.

■ Best news for the future: Only a two year wait before the '94 Winter games in Lillehammer, Norway.

■ Idle speculation: With the exception of figure skating, men's downhill skiing, and the U.S. hockey team (when it's winning), popularity of Winter Games will never amount to much in these parts.

■ Best quote, from anonymous athlete last week: "I'm so homesick I miss my ex-wife."

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell scored 14 points in the final 4:17 of the third quarter, sparking a 16-5 scoring run that carried the Houston Rockets over the San Antonio Spurs, 90-83.

Matt Bullard sank a pair of crucial baskets in the final minute to preserve the victory.

Maxwell finished with 25 points, followed by Hakeem Olajuwon with 18 points and 14 rebounds, Kenny Smith with 17 points and Bullard with 15 points.

Olajuwon had 7 blocked shots for a career total of 2,006, becoming the sixth player in NBA history to block 2,000 or more shots.

Kings 124, Bulls 117
LANDOVER, Md. — Sacramento snapped a five-game losing streak and won on the road for only the fourth time this season, as Dennis Hopson scored a season-high 26 points, helping the Kings beat the Washington Bullets.

Sacramento came into the game with the NBA's worst road record (3-25), while the Bullets have the league's poorest record at home (8-19).

Pacers 102, Celtics 95
INDIANAPOLIS — Micheal Williams made six consecutive free throws in the final minute, helping the Indiana Pacers beat the Boston Celtics.

Chuck Person led Indiana with 23 points. Reggie Miller scored 18 and Williams finished with 17. Detlef Schrempf had 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Cavaliers 103, Bucks 89
RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty outscored Moses Malone 25-11 and Larry Nance had 21 points and 12 rebounds as the Cleveland Cavaliers sent the Milwaukee Bucks to their 11th straight road loss.

onds to Howard (74-73 last Monday), and to Western Texas (71-70 last Thursday).

MC hasn't exactly lit up the scoreboard for three games now, starting with its 70-66 win at South Plains, Feb. 13. Green says the Chaps' "inability to score easy points" is to blame for the current rut.

"We're just an offensive terror, aren't we?" Green said. "We have to work so hard each and every time down the floor. We're just not getting any breakaway points, and our defense is not creating any baskets."

"I have sympathy for our guys. When you hold a team to 70 points, you ought to be able to win. It's frustrating. I feel sorry for all of us."

In the last three games, MC has combined to hit just 73 of 188 shots from the field (39 percent).

What doesn't help much is that NMJC is coming off the third-highest point total by a WJCAC team this season with last Thursday's 131-94 win over New Mexico Military. The T-Birds shot 61 percent from the field in that game. That, though, shouldn't be much of a factor in tonight's game, Green said.

"I don't think it'll make that much of a difference," Green said, "because South Plains scored 144 against Frank Phillips, and then only 66 against us."

Blaming injuries for the two-game losing streak, Green said, would be a crutch.

"The two games we've lost, I don't think the injuries have played that big of a part," Green said. "I think injuries would play a part against NMJC."

Shawn Morris, Kelon Haynie and McKinney have all been slowed. Reserves Mauricio Gutierrez (blister on foot) and Danny Pearson (family illness) have also missed games. Fabian Mina has had trouble with a recurring infection atop his head.

NMJC head coach Ron Black said his team has "worked all year to get themselves into this position." A win would make the T-Birds odds-on favorites to win the conference with only a home game remaining against Frank Phillips Thursday.

What hurt NMJC in the earlier contest was the limited play of forward James Inman, who was hampered by a jammed finger. Inman, kicking in unison as they marched to Dutch speedskater Bart Veldkamp running into the stands to offer Barnier and co-president Jean-Claude Killy each a pair of wooden shoes.

There were some familiar scenes from the opening ceremony, though, like dancers dressed as trees, skiers and skaters in elf-like costumes, and human mobiles.

A silver skater kicked off the ceremony, entering the stadium under the banner, "Arrivee." The "bubble girls," whose costumes resembled snow-filled crystal balls, returned from the opening ceremony to lead each of the 64 nations into the stadium.

Then came the giddy athletes. The Mexicans in serapes, the Americans carrying a huge U.S. flag, the Japanese handing out small Japanese flags, the Canadians handing out Olympic pins. Three of the Canadians did back-

Unified Team wins hockey gold

MERIBEL, France (AP) — The Unified Team continued the Soviet Union's Olympic hockey supremacy Sunday, winning the gold medal with a 3-1 victory over Canada.

Viacheslav Boutsavov broke a scoreless tie at 1:01 of the third period, and Igor Boldin connected with 4:06 to go. Chris Lindberg cut the lead to 2-1 with 2:40 left, but Viacheslav Bykov scored with 1:09 remaining.

Canada ended its streak of 24 years without a medal but couldn't end a 40-year drought without a gold.

The Soviet Union won the previous two gold medals and seven of the last nine. It won a silver medal in 1980 and a bronze in 1960.

flips as they entered.

Some of the members of the French team climbed on each others' shoulders and clamored onto the stage where, a few minutes later, Albertville Mayor Henri Dujol passed on the Olympic flag to international Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch.

A huge bear made of ice was escorted by Vikings — on skis — who formed the shape of a ship whose sail bore a symbol of the next Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, in 1994.

The rhyming narration that was everywhere in the opening ceremony only made a few appearances Sunday.

"Before we close these Olympic Games,

"Let's hear again those famous names ..." went the introduction of Killy and Barnier.

"I would like to offer my warmest thanks most particularly to 22,000 people. These are the people who brought off the Games we had promised: dedicated volunteers, the military and security forces, all smiling and efficient," Killy said.

Killy at one point quit as Olympic organizing committee president because of a squabble over which resorts would serve as hosts for the different events. He rejoined as co-president about a year later.

Folk dancers in lederhosen danced traditional Tyrolean folk dances, then racers on roller blades sped around the stadium spouting fireworks from their blades.

That was the cue for a thunderous pyrotechnic show, just before athletes and spectators alike were called down to the grounds for a final dance.

"Long live the polka! Long live the Olympics," the announcer cried as he beckoned the audience to the towering maypole in the center of the stadium.

TOP 25: Oklahoma State, FSU also upset came 24 hours after the defeat of No. 2 UCLA, which lost 84-71 at Notre Dame for its second loss of the season.

(From 1C)

No. 4 North Carolina, Duke's only other conqueror, was upset Saturday by North Carolina State, leaving third-ranked Kansas as the only one of the nation's top four to escape the weekend — and the Jayhawks barely got by Kansas State.

In other Sunday games, it was fifth-ranked Arizona 66, Temple 60; No. 7 Indiana 86, No. 6 Ohio State 80; No. 9 Missouri 66, No. 8 Oklahoma State 52; No. 13 Kentucky 84, Georgia 73; De Paul 85, No. 16 Florida State 75; No. 25 Georgetown 72, No. 17 Syracuse 68.

Saturday was marked by Notre Dame's upset of UCLA and North Carolina State's 99-94 win at Chapel Hill that broke a nine-game losing streak for the Wolfpack.

In other games it was No. 3 Kansas 54, Kansas State 52; No. 10 Arkansas 90, No. 14 Alabama 87; No. 11 Michigan 30, Purdue 68; No. 12 UNLV 69, New Mexico State 58; No. 15 Southern Cal 73, Stanford 72; No. 19 Cincinnati 104, South Alabama 78; No. 20 Michigan 76, Northwestern 63; No. 21

Connecticut 94, Providence 73; Villanova 74, No. 22 Seton Hall 59; Nebraska 80, No. 23 Iowa St. 70, and No. 24 St. John's 71, Pittsburgh 65.

Duke's problem without Hurley was exemplified by its 15 turnovers.

"I have no problem with losing," Krzyzewski said. "I do have a little bit of a problem with these give-away games."

Rodney Rogers, who was 5-for-5 in the second half, added 18 points for the Demon Deacons (16-7, 7-6), who trailed by 10 with nine minutes left.

But it was Tucker, who was the catalyst.

"Maybe I just get up for these games," said Tucker, the Georgetown transfer who made 9 of 15 shots. "I went out being aggressive. Against Duke you can't be passive because of the way they pressure the ball. If you are passive they will take it from you."

Instead, it was Wake Forest who took it.

Sunday Games

No. 7 Indiana 86,

No. 6 Ohio State 80

Calbert Cheaney scored 28 as Indiana hit 10 straight shots during a 26-8 mid-game run and ended Ohio State's 30-game home winning streak. Indiana (20-4, 11-2) extended its Big Ten lead to 1½ games over Ohio State.

Ohio State (17-5, 9-3) had not lost at St. John Arena since an 84-75 loss to Michigan State on Feb. 10, 1990.

Jim Jackson had 24 points and Mark Baker 22 for the Buckeyes, who led 36-32 with 2:50 left in the first half. The Hoosiers then made their 10 straight, closing the first half with a 12-2 run, including a 29-foot off-balance 3-pointer at the buzzer by Damon Bailey.

No. 9 Missouri 66,

No. 8 Oklahoma St. 52

Jevon Crudup scored 19 points and Jamal Coleman 18 for No. 9 Missouri as both teams' standouts sat out. Oklahoma State made only one basket in the first 8½ minutes and was held to its lowest total of the season while losing for the first time in six games after a 20-0 start.

Missouri was without Anthony Peeler, suspended for skipping classes, and Oklahoma State lacked Byron Houston, out with a sprained ankle. Peeler averages 22.8 points, and Houston averages 20 points and nine rebounds.

No. 5 Arizona 66, Temple 60

Matt Othick tied a school record with seven 3-point baskets, six in the second half, as Arizona overcame a sluggish start. The Wildcats (20-4) trailed 30-27 at intermission but Othick began the second half of the made-for-television matchup in the Florida Suncoast Dome by hitting four consecutive 3-pointers.

Aaron McKie led Temple (14-10) with 23 points, 14 of them in the second half. Eddie Jones added 14 for the Owls, who led most of the first half.

No. 13 Kentucky 84, Georgia 73

Jamal Mashburn scored 26 points and pulled down seven rebounds as Kentucky used a 15-1 second half-run to win its fifth straight game. Kentucky (20-5, 9-3 in the Southeastern Conference) never led until that run, which started with 14:33 left.

Georgia (12-11, 5-7) led 39-38 at halftime and scored the first six points of the second half, taking a 45-38 lead off a Kendall Rhine tip in with 17:47 remaining.

DePaul 85, No. 16 Florida St. 75

Stephen Howard scored 20 of his 27 points in the second half, and DePaul made six free throws in the last 1:34. That extended the Blue Demons' (18-6) winning streak to seven.

Howard and Terry Davis, who had 23 points, took up the slack when David Booth, DePaul's leading scorer, left the game with an ankle injury with 16 minutes left. Doug Edwards scored a career-high 34 for Florida State (18-8).

No. 25 Georgetown 72,

No. 17 Syracuse 68

Alonzo Mourning scored 27 as Georgetown (17-6, 10-4) held off Syracuse and held on to first in the Big East. Sophomore guard Joey Brown added a career-best 23 points as Georgetown beat Syracuse (16-7, 8-6) for the first time in six games.

TIE: Top 4 WJCAC teams in late season jumble

(From 1C)

ence get together and try to figure it all out," MC head coach Steve Green joked. "It'll take a group of Philadelphia lawyers to straighten it all out."

NMJC head coach Ron Black said he thinks a four-way tie is "a strong possibility," and has already figured out his Thunderbirds would be at a disadvantage should one occur.

Should MC beat NMJC tonight and the race end with four teams tied atop the conference, seedings for the Region V tournament would be determined by using the power rating system. Normally, nine points is given to a team for a win over the first place team, eight for a win against the second place team, etc. But this year, any win against MC, OC, NMJC or South Plains would be good for 7.5 points should the four-way tie occur.

In the four-way scenario, MC would finish with 51 power points, and would receive the No. 1 seed. Here's how the Top 4 teams would shape up power-rating wise in a quad-championship situation (Point system also based on a two-way tie for fifth place between Howard and Western Texas, both of whom will likely finish with 8-8 records):

■ Midland College (51 points): Would contribute to four-way finish with win against NMJC, and loss against OC. Has two wins against South Plains (15 points), NMJC (15), New Mexico Military (6), Clarendon (4) and Frank Phillips (2). One win against both OC (7.5) and Howard (4.5).

■ South Plains (48 points): Would finish 12-4 with a season-ending win tonight against Howard. Has two wins against NMJC (15), Western Texas (9), NMJC (6), Clarendon (4) and Frank Phillips (2). One win against both OC (7.5) and Howard (4.5).

■ Odessa College (48 points): Would contribute to four-way tie with wins against NMJC tonight, and MC Thursday. Would have two wins against MC (15), Howard (9), NMJC (6), Clarendon (4), Frank Phillips (2), and one win against both South Plains (7.5) and Western Texas (4.5).

■ NMJC (45 points): A 12-4 finish would occur with a loss to MC tonight and a win Thursday against Frank Phillips. The T-Birds would have two wins against OC (15), Howard (9), Western Texas (9), Clarendon (4), NMJC (6) and Frank Phillips (2).

South Plains would apparently be the winner of the second seed based on the WJCAC's Constitution and By-Laws (1990-91 edition). The two teams split their season series, and the third tiebreaker is head-to-head competition against the team finishing immediately below them (NMJC). SPC defeated NMJC twice; OC lost twice to NMJC.

The four-way tie is just one of several ways the conference could end up. The only thing for certain is all four teams are headed for post-season. The power-rating system would be used only to decide seedings at the Region V tournament March 6-10 in Waco.

Your HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will finally get the praise and financial rewards you deserve. Be on the lookout for exciting new business opportunities between now and early May. Family ties grow stronger throughout the spring. Handle practical matters with dispatch in June. Being independent will bring you wonderful benefits next August. Personal research pays off big where an employment search is concerned. A promotion or raise is possible in October. A family reunion leads to an overdue reconciliation as Christmas approaches.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: newscaster Paula Zahn, actors Barry Bostwick and Edward James Olmos, baseball star Eddie Murray.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get down to brass tacks in business negotiations. Handle routine affairs carefully to avoid making costly mistakes. Your interest in mystical matters balances your shrewd, meticulous style.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stormy weather is possible at work. Keep a low profile in all employment affairs. Even minor errors could lead to major complications. Let sleeping dogs lie.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Innovative ideas abound. The trick is turning them to practical use! Seek new clues to a loved one's recent behavior. You may be overlooking something vital.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to let someone ruffle your feathers this morning. A measured response is essential even if your patience is running short. Afternoon is the best time for negotiating and signing contracts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The travelers among you will delight in finding interesting places to visit now. Listen to your inner voice if uncertain what to do about romance. A newcomer makes your heart skip a beat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to cultivate the ambition that has been growing within you. Now is the ideal time to intensify your studies. Seek family members' cooperation before revising a budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for making new business connections and expanding your social horizons. Do not be shy about describing your talents or an exciting opportunity could pass you by.

(F) your personalized daily Jeane Dixon horoscope, based on your own date of birth, call 1-900-988-7788. Your phone company will bill you 95 cents a minute.)

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your inventive streak helps you turn a job site into a smooth-running operation now. Be very careful if tempted to start an office romance; there is more at stake than you realize.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Clinging to fixed ways could create problems at work or home. Give yourself room to grow. A new business venture could be touch and go for a while. Skip the long-distance calls.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A day when pent-up energy could get the best of you. An exercise class or brisk walk will do you a world of good! The evening looks festive and romantic. Dress up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your popularity is on the rise at work. Your good humor and common sense win accolades from associates of the opposite sex. Good vibrations are centered at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You bask in the spotlight at a business meeting or social event. The eyes of love are also upon you. Secret negotiations could lead to new career success. Use your shrewd insights.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1— Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♠J7652 ♦Q54 ♣AK73
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass

Q.2— Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ65 ♥QJ5 ♦Void ♣AQ105
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North

Q.3— Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♥6 ♦AKJ62 ♣AKJ1054
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club! What action do you take?
A.—The problem with a one diamond overall is that you will be stuck for a rebid on the next round. Should partner bid a major, you now cannot bid clubs because that would be a cue-bid in support of his suit. Therefore, we would rather pass to see how the auction develops.

Q.4— Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK1063 ♥Q76 ♦85 ♣A83
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—The main goal of an auction is to locate a trump suit as soon as possible, to allow for orderly investigation. Here, you know the hand can play in clubs, so why not clue partner in on your support? Bid three clubs.

Q.5— Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠984 ♥6 ♦AQ1063 ♣J763
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 2 ♦ ?

What action do you take now?
A.—Yes, we would like to defend two diamonds doubled. No, we would not double two diamonds, even if this would be for penalties. Pass, and be content with a sure profit. If partner re-opens, your holding in spades should protect you from any subsequent dramatic actions partner might take.

Q.6— As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K65 ♥974 ♦KJ3 ♣AK102
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—We have no objection to raising partner's major-suit response with only three-card support, but not when we hold a perfectly balanced minimum—even without a stopper in one of the unbid suits. The hand is no-trump oriented, so there's no reason not to rebid one no trump.

Magazine posthumously publishes Haley article

RADNOR, Pa. — Alex Haley reminisces about the impact of "Roots" in a story to be published posthumously in TV Guide.

"I think that, without my intent, the book awakened a worldwide perception that genealogy isn't reserved for royalty," Haley wrote. "Quite to the contrary, the peasant's family line is probably stronger than the prince's." Haley died of a heart attack Feb. 10 at age 70. His novel "Roots: The Saga of an American Family," won a Pulitzer Prize in 1977 and was the basis of a TV miniseries watched by 130 million viewers.

He wrote the story for the Feb. 29 TV Guide for Black History Month.

"People seemed to recognize that 'Roots' symbolized their own ethnic struggles," he wrote. "In Beijing, 'Roots' and I were feted by lineage masters who had traced families as far back as 1,000 years."

He said one of his most gratifying experiences was use of the book in West African classrooms.

"My best hope is that 'Roots' will find new viewers in future generations," Haley said.

MOSCOW, Idaho — Clint Eastwood made it into a hall of fame for his love of jazz.

The actor, who directed the movie "Bird" about jazz legend Charlie Parker, was inducted Saturday into the Hall of Fame of the Lionel Hampton-Chevron Jazz Festival.

"I always felt sorry for young people who didn't grow up the swinging generation," Eastwood told an audience of 5,000.

Eastwood, better known as the "Dirty Harry" tough guy than a jazz fan, won a Golden Globe as best director for "Bird."

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — Bruce Willis shed a little light on his part-time hometown.

The actor played harmonica and sang the blues recently at a benefit to help raise $15,000 for a lighting system at the Sun Valley Repertory Company's new theater.

"I like Sun Valley and I think it should have a nice theater," he said. "And I thought it would be a good reason to throw a party."

Over the last five years, Willis and his wife, actress Demi Moore, have lived part-time in the ski resort town 85 miles east of Boise.

BAYREUTH, Germany — Tenor Plácido Domingo will sing the title role in "Parsifal" at the Richard Wagner music festival this summer.

Domingo has never appeared at the festival, organizers said Saturday.

He will sing the German composer's last opera on Aug. 17 and Aug. 20. The festival at Bayreuth, 40 miles northeast of Nuremberg, will run from July 25 to Aug. 28.

Wagner, who was born in Leipzig, moved in 1872 to Bayreuth, where he built a theater and first presented his completed four-part opera, "Der Ring des Nibelungen."

JERUSALEM — Avot Yeshurun, a major Israeli poet who wove Arabic and Yiddish idiom into a unique and influential form of Hebrew verse, is dead at the age of 88, his family announced Sunday.

Yeshurun died Saturday. No cause of death was given.

Born in the Ukraine as Yehiel Perlmutter, he immigrated to Palestine in 1925, worked as a laborer and began publishing poetry. His family perished in the Nazi holocaust.

After Israel was established in 1948, Yeshurun was one of its first literary figures to acknowledge the plight of the uprooted Palestinians. He saw the Palestinians and the Jews of Europe as having endured a common tragedy, and sought to fuse their experience in the language of his poetry.

Although long ignored by the establishment, Yeshurun became a guru to the younger generation of Israeli poets. His stature was finally recognized one month ago when he was awarded the prestigious Israel Prize. He died before the award ceremony.

Yeshurun's wife, Pesia, died six weeks ago. He is survived by a daughter, Helit Yeshurun.

HOUSTON — E.A. "Bud" Olson, a lifetime vice president and director of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, has died. He was 77.

Olson died Friday at Twelve Oaks Hospital.

Services were scheduled for today at 3 p.m. in the chapel of Settegast Kopf Co. funeral home. The burial will be at Forest Park Westheimer Cemetery.

Olson, the retired president of Olson Food Co., was a member of the Poor Boys, a group that has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars over the years to buy the champion animals displayed by youngsters.
