Health committee: 'Gulf War Syndrome' is real

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mysterious illness suffered by many Desert Storm veterans is real and serious, a panel of experts concluded Friday, but they said it is impossible to define the disorder or pinpoint its cause.

The National Institutes of Health committee said the group of disorders loosely referred to as the "Gulf War Syndrome" involves a variety of symptoms that may have been caused by any or all of a combination of stress, chemical exposures or parasites.

"There is no single disease or syndrome apparent, but rather multiple illnesses with overlapping symptoms and causes," said a committee report released at a news conference. The group called for rigorous medical research to define the illness and to establish a treatment plan.

"This is a very real condition," said Dr. Herbert H. Schaumburg, an Albert Einstein College of Medicine professor and a member of the committee. "These people are suffering. There has not been an adequate response to their needs."

The NIH committee was charged with evaluating evidence of whether Desert Storm veterans are suffering from a general disorder caused by their service in Front moves cold air, rain through area

■ Tornados, thunderstorms hit Texas due to abnormally strong atmospheric pressure.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Upper-level atmospheric turbulence characterized as "abnormally strong" is credited with causing severe weather in the Permian Basin, including a tornado that reportedly touched down briefly west of Sheffield, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

There was no damage reported from the tornado touchdown, which occurred in the early evening hours, a NWS spokesman said. After the tornado was reported, a tornado warning was issued for parts of the Permian Basin.

Snow fell across the northern Panhandle Friday, with 1 to 3 inches on the ground in some areas.

Friday's low temperatures were the result of a cold air pocket associated with the frontal system that passed through Midland earlier in the week, the spokesman said.

This frontal system, now located more than 125 miles to the southeast, carried with it a line of severe thunderstorms that extended from Texas to the nation's eastern regions.

Also in West Texas, a tornado watch was in effect for the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau through Friday night. A winter weather advisory was in effect for the Panhandle.

Rain or drizzle was prevalent across the Permian Basin, southern Panhandle, South Plains, Concho Valley, Edwards Plateau and Big Bend. Otherwise, skies were cloudy east of the mountains with mostly sunny skies in the far west.

Heavy showers were reported in South Texas Friday morning. However, these had stopped by the afternoon. Flash-flood and tornado watches continued for parts of the Hill Country throughout the night.

Temperatures ranged from the lower 30s in the Panhandle to near 80 in the far south.

Today's forecast in Midland calls for decreased cloudiness as the upper-level instability moves off. The high should be in the mid- to upper 60s with northeast winds at 10-15 mph.

Tonight should be fair in the evening then becoming mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-40s, according to the NWS.

Sunday should be mostly cloudy with a high in the upper 60s.

Temperatures could again drop somewhat on Monday, according to NWS officials.

After an overnight low of 43, Friday's high reached 60, compared to the record high of 95 set in 1947. The record low was 41 set in 1960.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly 40 percent of Texas teachers are seriously considering quitting for reasons ranging from stress to inadequate pay, according to a survey released Friday by a teacher group.

Forty-four percent of those contemplating a move cited working conditions — burnout, stress, paperwork and administrative hassles — as reasons, according to the Texas State Teachers Association survey.

A quarter cited inadequate pay, with the average salary at $30,349 a year. Twenty-three percent of teachers overall reported moonlighting at jobs ranging from massage therapist to bingo operator to waitress.

Terrorist court tries suspected 'Monster of Florence' nine years after last attack

FLORENCE, Italy — The man they call a monster weeps.

His bottom lip quivered and tears wet his weather-creased cheeks as prosecutors methodically recounted the horrors on the charge sheet: Eight double murders from 1968 to 1985. Victims shot and mutilated. Body parts cut off and carried away.

The "Monster of Florence" has been captured, prosecutors said.

Pietro Pacciani ran his fingers through his bone-white hair and cried. "I am here like Christ on the cross," he gulped on the opening day of the trial April 19. "I have never hurt anyone."

But in a special courtroom built for terrorist trials, authorities have set out to prove that the 69-year-old farm worker who enjoys playing the accordion is one of Europe's most prolific serial killers — a sadistic cross between the lovers' lane stalker David Berkowitz of New York and the fictional cannibal Hannibal Lecter of the book and movie "Silence of the Lambs."

NATION

Thunderstorms, freezing rain and snow hit parts of the Midwest and southern Plains on Friday, and showers were scattered from the Gulf Coast to the Northeast.

Sleet and snow fell across parts of the northern Texas panhandle, western Oklahoma and southwestern Kansas, the remnants of a storm system that dumped up to a foot of snow Thursday from South Dakota to Minnesota.

About an inch of snow fell Friday in Dalhart, Texas. In Oklahoma, a light coating of snow covered Laverne. Thunderstorms, as well as snow and freezing rain, rumbled across Gage, Okla.

"Gosh, it's just shocking," said Linda Woods, who works at the Last Chance convenience store in Gage. "Everyone wanted to know where it came from and who did this to us. Yesterday it was so nice. You didn't even need a jacket."

Snow also fell across much of Colorado into southern Wyoming. Four inches fell at South Fork, Colo., and 3 inches at Summitville, Colo. More snow was expected across the central Rockies and some sections of the central Plains.

Heavy rain drenched parts of southern Texas and the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, with close to an inch at Del Rio, Texas, and more than an inch in Madison County in central Kentucky.

REDUCE: Zachery family complains about bond

fessional football player.

Duann Stewart has been indicted on murder charges. Terry Stewart, who has not been indicted, began serving a one-year federal sentence Friday. He was sentenced for violating conditions of his supervised release for a federal conviction.

Stewart's bond had originally been $50,000, but was raised to $150,000 after he was indicted.

Bond is set at the judge's discretion, Gilles said.

Zachery's family called a press conference on the courthouse steps Friday evening to complain about the bond reduction and the slow wheels of justice and the police investigation. Almost a dozen family members were present, including his brothers and his mother.

During the bond reduction hearing Friday morning, Stewart's uncle, Jeremiah Worsham, said he was willing to give Stewart a place to live and a job with his lawn maintenance crew. He also said he could put up $5,000 for a bond for Stewart.

Stewart testified that he had asked friends and family to raise money to make bond and they had been unable to do so. When asked what he could afford to pay, Stewart said "I don't know. I don't got no money now."

Stewart's attorney, David Rogers, told the judge the defendant could not make bond at $150,000 and asked for an appearance bond or a bond of $25,000.

"He needs to get out to go on with his life," Rogers said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre asked the judge to consider the nature of the offense and asked that the bond remain the same.

Gilles lowered the bond to $50,000 and set a number of conditions that Stewart must meet.

If he can post bond, he will be required to submit to electronic monitoring and meet pre-trial release program mandates that include regular urinalysis, reporting in person once a day to a community supervision officer, no access to a vehicle, living with his uncle and nowhere else, staying within Midland and Ector counties, and cooperating with a weekday curfew of 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. and a weekend curfew of 6:30 p.m. Friday through 7:30 a.m. Monday.

Gilles said the purpose of a bond is to insure the defendant will appear in court. He also noted that bond cannot be considered "oppressive" to the defendant by keeping him in jail.

Zachery's family was also upset that the hearing was rescheduled. During the press conference, the victim's brother, Earl, said he was upset about the hearing time being changed because the entire family wanted to be present to let the judge know they opposed the bond reduction.

Zachery said his family was notified of the hearing 10 days ago, but didn't find out that the time had been changed until the morning of the hearing.

After the press conference, Schorre said that he had someone in his office notify the family as soon as he found out about the rescheduling. He said changing the times for hearings is unavoidable and occurs regularly, depending upon the judge's and attorneys' schedules.

Schorre said the district attorney's office is not required to notify victims of hearings "but we do our best to let them know." Earl Zachery, his wife and another family member were present for the hearing.

Zachery also complained that judges — by lowering bonds and allowing "thugs" out on the streets following the commission of crimes — are not being "hard on crime."

Following the press conference, Schorre explained that because of higher court rulings, the judge is required to reduce bond if it is proven that the defendant cannot make the bond.

"Even if the judge personally wants to keep it high, legally he can't do it," Schorre said.

He said that $50,000 is the average bond for most homicide cases and is appropriate for the defendant's circumstances.

The family also expressed its concern that if Stewart is released on bond to live with his uncle, he will be living in the same neighborhood as the victim's uncle.

"We're disappointed with the whole process. The police have not done a good job, no one has," said Carlos Zachery, another of the victim's brothers.

Schorre defended the police and said investigators have followed up leads but "gossip on Lee Street" has influenced the Zachery family.

"We want justice, just like he (Stewart) does," said Galberson Zachery, the victim's brother.

Stewart begins pre-trial hearings in May. His trial is set to begin on Aug. 22.

SERIAL: Prosecutors think they have 'monster' joined hundreds of spectators to watch on the opening day, as prosecutors carefully laid out their case against Pacciani. For years, they had to release suspects for of lack of evidence.

"Is it him?" asked Dino Foggi, whose son was slain in one of the killings in 1981. "I want to believe it. In this case, I don't know."

The former head of the unit assigned to hunt for the killer has no doubts. "It's him," said Ruggero Perugini, who called Pacciani an "expert killer ... who kills with coolness."

Perugini said the first time he interrogated Pacciani he was reminded of a quote from the philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche: "Whoever fights monsters should see to it that in the process he does not become a monster. When you look long into an abyss, the abyss also looks into you."

The killings are linked by similarities in savagery and setting. All the victims were in cars parked in secluded areas in the gentle hills and vineyards around Florence. A .22-caliber Baretta pistol was used in every rampage.

Six of the eight attacks occurred on a Saturday night. All but one of the attacks involved couples — the exception was a pair of young German men, apparently low-budget tourists sleeping in their car.

Some of the women were badly mutilated with a knife or screwdriver, and bits of flesh, often genitalia, were missing. Perugini believes Pacciani may have eaten them or could have fed pieces to his unknowing family.

A screaming Pietro Pacciani, who has been named "Monster of Florence," arrives in a Florence court Thursday.

After a double killing Sept. 9, 1985, authorities received a piece of skin in the mail. Then the violence stopped. The death count: nine men, seven women ranging in age from 18 to 36.

Pacciani first came under investigation in 1986 after police received an unsigned letter accusing him. His past record instantly made him a prime suspect.

He reportedly killed a man in 1951, although apparently was not tried. He did spend four years in prison — 1987 to 1991 — for physical abuse of his two daughters.

In 1992, a police search of his property turned up .22-caliber bullets hidden behind a cement block and some metal pieces believed to be part of a Baretta. Later, they found a soap dish and some drawings believed purchased by one of the German victims, Horst Meyer. Pacciani says he found them.

His defense attorneys say police reports concluded the killer had to be agile and strong. Pacciani, who is heavy-set, was 60 at the time of the last killing.

The only eyewitness is a 32-year-old woman who was in the backseat of a car when her mother was killed in 1968. She was six at the time. Nearly 200 other witnesses are expected to be called.

Italy doesn't have the death penalty, so Pacciani would most likely spend the rest of his life in prison if convicted. A verdict isn't expected for weeks.

In court last week, Pacciani glanced up from time to time at a large TV monitor that showed some of the blood-splattered victims.

Judge revokes release of man charged in murder of Zachery

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

One of the two men charged with the murder of James Zachery was sentenced to one year in federal prison for violating conditions of his supervised release.

Terry Earl Stewart, 25, was arrested on Jan. 29 and charged by the state with the Jan. 25 murder of Zachery, a Midland Community Theatre performer and former professional football player.

Another man, Duann Dewayne Stewart, 17, — no relation — was indicted on murder charges. Terry Stewart has not been indicted.

Terry Stewart was convicted and served prison time in the federal system for use of a communication device — telephone — to facilitate a drug transaction.

Following his release from prison, he lived at an Odessa halfway house before the supervised release, which is similar to probation.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery filed a motion on behalf of the government to revoke Stewart's supervised release because of a number of alleged violations of the release.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton sentenced Stewart on Friday to 12 months in federal prison.

Beery said the sentence was an upward departure for the offense. The normal range of punishment is four to 10 months in prison.

Stewart's supervised release was revoked for seven violations — ranging from having tested positive for cocaine in his urine to failing to report to the probation office to not supporting his common-law wife and children.

Beery said he didn't mention the pending murder charge in his motion to revoke the supervised release.

Stewart will begin serving his sentence while the murder charges are pending in state court.

ILLNESS: Experts call disorders real, serious the Persian Gulf War, of the characteristics of the condition and what might have caused it.

No clear answers were reached to any of these questions, said Dr. Gareth M. Green, chairman of the committee and a professor at the Harvard School of Public Health.

What did develop, he said, is "a feeling that there has been and continues to be suffering and a loss of quality of life by veterans of the Gulf War."

The panel said it is clear that at least 20,000 American troops, and maybe more, are suffering from some or all of these symptoms: chronic fatigue, skin rashes, inability to concentrate, muscle and joint pain, loss of memory, shortness of breath and headache.

The panel said there also have been 31 confirmed cases of leishmaniasis, including some forms of the disease not seen before. The disease is caused by a parasite carried by biting sand flies. It usually shows up as a skin disorder, but some Gulf War cases have included internal organ infestation.

Green said the committee could not pinpoint a cause for most of the illness but developed a list of possibilities.

A primary cause, he said, could have been a unique combination of stress and long months of breathing chemical smoke from burning oil wells and fumes from pesticides and burning garbage, including toxic wastes.

Green said traumatic stress and fear may have been the primary factor.

"We gained an appreciation of the climate of terror that existed there," Green said.

American war leaders were convinced that the Iraqi army would attack with chemical and biological weapons, and the troops repeatedly endured alarms that sent them scurrying to don protective equipment and wait hours for attack, said Green.

All of this was taking place in a very hot climate, infested with biting flies, and polluted with an unusual atmosphere of chemicals, he said.

Such multiple exposures make it impossible to say exactly what is causing the widespread illnesses among Gulf War veterans, Green said.

QUIT: Many teachers consider leaving profession

(From 1A)

Fifteen percent of teachers considering leaving said it was due to student discipline, motivation or academics. Others among the 38 percent thinking of going said they would retire or had other reasons.

"What the teachers are saying is, "Pay us a decent wage, stop interfering and let us teach, and we can handle the students,"' TSTA President Richard Kouri said in a statement. "Elected officials, local administrators and parents should listen to these teachers before it is too late."

Gov. Ann Richards has said she'll propose a state budget that includes a teacher pay raise for lawmakers' consideration next year, even though money will be tight.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno also has proposed an increase to attract more certified teachers into the classroom. But he was blasted by top lawmakers who said he was misleading educators into thinking they'd get a raise at a time when other needs are pressing, such as prisons and human services.

Forty-two percent of the teachers in the survey said they are the major breadwinner in their households. The average teacher was 43 with a bachelor's degree and nearly 15 years of experience. Only 16 percent of the teaching force is male.

Of those moonlighting, 73 percent said holding a second job after school hurts the quality of their teaching. To quit moonlighting, they said they would need a $5,500 raise.

Such an increase would about bring Texas teachers to the national average, the teacher group said. Texas currently ranks 34th among the states in teacher pay. It also is 36th in expenditures per student.

The survey was conducted for TSTA by professor David Henderson of Sam Houston State University in Huntsville and Karen Henderson of Huntsville Independent School District.

Teens protest release of accused killer

Staff Report

About 80 Odessa teens showed up at the Ector County Courthouse Friday to express their displeasure concerning the bail reduction of Frank L. Vargas Jr., who is accused of shooting an Odessa youth following an altercation last Saturday.

The students walked out of Odessa High School where Luis Francisco Rodriguez was a student, according to courthouse officials. The walkout began as a protest against what many students feel is a growing problem of violence against teens.

After arriving at the courthouse, the youths were taken to a courtroom where Ector County District Attorney John Smith spoke to them. He explained why a man who is suspected of murder was released.

"I explained to them about the Constitution ... They were all perfect ladies and gentlemen," he said.

The students left without incident.

Vargas' bail has been reduced to 55,000. He remains in the Ector County Jail.

South Africans cast final ballots; results possible by Tuesday

Mandela is favored to win; election remains largely peaceful, but some witnesses report voting irregularities.

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Helicopters carried ballots to remote mountain villages and trucks ferried rural voters to polling stations Friday on an improvised extra day of elections almost certain to make Nelson Mandela the country's first black president.

Some apparent vote rigging was reported, but political leaders and election officials said they had resolved the widespread ballot shortages and other glitches that marred the initial three days of voting.

The election was largely peaceful, despite fears of political violence. A string of bombings that killed 21 ended after police crushed the suspected white extremist bombers. Instead, the logistical problems posed a greater threat to the country's first all-race election.

Vote-counting was scheduled to begin this morning and final results were not expected before Tuesday.

But the widely expected winner was no secret: Mandela's African National Congress was expected to win a majority and lead the first post-apartheid government.

Outgoing President F.W. de Klerk and Mandela said the voting seemed complete and would likely be judged free and fair, enabling the nation to move forward in its transition from white minority rule to a multiracial government.

Mandela said he was "confident that we will be able to pronounce these elections as having been free and fair.

"The will is there to address these irregularities and I think that is more important than concentrating on the mistakes that have been made," he said during a series of interviews with foreign media, including The Associated Press.

"This has launched South Africa into a new era," de Klerk told a news conference.

Judge Johann Kriegler, head of the Independent Electoral Commission, which organized the vote, told de Klerk and Mandela the extension had served its purpose.

The election was extended in areas encompassing the former black homelands of Transkei, Ciskei, KwaZulu, Venda, Lebowa and Gazankulu. The rest of the country finished voting on Thursday.

Inkatha Freedom Party leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, who demanded the extra voting day in his KwaZulu black homeland after shortages of election materials and other problems caused lengthy delays, toured voting areas but made no final pronouncement. A spokesman for the KwaZulu government, also headed by Buthelezi, said voting was "much better" on Friday.

But problems remained.

Mary de Haas, a university professor and unrest monitor in South Africa, said she received reports of serious voting irregularities in KwaZulu.

"These include allegations of armed men within polling stations threatening voters, voters being accompanied into booths, lack of control over the issuing of ballot papers and inefficiency and partisanship on the part of voting officers," she said.

An Associated Press reporter saw youths who were well below the minimum voting age of 18 casting votes at the Ndwedwe polling station north of Durban, in KwaZulu.

Presiding officer Bongani Khumalo said underage youths in the Inkatha-dominated area received voting cards from KwaZulu officials, even if they lacked documents proving their age. No one was willing to brave the region's political tensions to stop the abuse, he said.

But IEC official Pieter de Bruyn, in the KwaZulu capital, said most of the voting problems in the region had been alleviated.

Helicopters carrying ballots and other supplies reached remote villages in KwaZulu, where some polling stations failed to open before Friday. At Nongoma, the home of Zulu King Goodwill Zwelethini, trucks were sent deep into the mountains to collect voters.

Soldier's death deepens dread in border town

By John Dinsmore
Associated Press

ASHKELON, Israel — Seated on hard wooden benches in the living room, the Simani family mourns its eldest son Shahar, a soldier stabbed to death by Islamic militants.

The 20-year-old was the latest Israeli victim of Jewish-Arab bloodletting that intensified after the Israel-PLO autonomy accord was signed nearly eight months ago.

For many in this Mediterranean beach town and throughout Israel, the prospect of Palestinian self-rule has engendered as much dread as hope for peace.

The dread is deep in this sun-drenched town of 70,000. A border fence with the Gaza Strip, slated for immediate autonomy, is going up 7 miles to the south. Some fear shells could fall on Ashkelon if the Palestine Liberation Organization fails to control the factions in Gaza.

"People try to avoid even discussing (autonomy), the prospect frightens them so," said Yehudity Azar, 36, a waitress at an empty cafe.

Israelis were spellbound this week by South Africa's elections, and newscasters constantly compared the two situations. But it is hard to find anyone predicting a bright future between Palestinians and Israelis.

"We are worried," said Nissim Aroush, 21, a cook and waiter at Ace Pizzeria. He doubts limited self-rule will suffice for the more than 800,000 Palestinians in Gaza.

Many Gaza refugees fled from Ashkelon during Israel's 1948 Independence War. Some can see their old property from the hovels they live in now.

Aroush thinks they probably want it all back. "Just like when the state was founded, they still want the whole country. After they establish themselves now and grow strong, then they are going to come after us again," he said.

Simani's body was found with eight stab wounds in the back a day after his disappearance on April 20, when he hitchhiked from an officer training course to his girlfriend's house near Ashkelon.

The militant Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, claimed responsibility and promised future actions.

Ashkelon residents did not riot, as has happened in the past when hometown soldiers were killed.

That may have been because of the overall rise in violence since the Israel-PLO accord was signed in Washington on Sept. 13. Since then, 160 Palestinians and 42 Israelis have died. Scores more have been wounded.

Many Israelis have grown used to war with the Arabs and believe that life will inevitably continue that way. There have been five major wars since the state was founded in 1948.

Simani's father Jonathan said attacks like the one that took his son's life "only unite us into an unbreakable wall" against the Arabs.

Jonathan Simani was wounded in the 1967 Middle East war, taking shrapnel and two bullets during a tank battle in which Israel captured the Sinai desert from Egypt.

Shahar volunteered for an elite combat unit. Islamic militants said he was in an undercover unit in the occupied territories. Friends and family members will not say which unit, hinting only it was commando work.

"Every soldier who is drafted into the army especially these days, maybe he doesn't aspire to sacrifice himself," Simani said. "But in some small corner of his heart, he knows the sacrifice could come."

Asian-S. Africans, others face discrimination

By Tom Baxter
Cox News Service

JOHANNESBURG — Henry K.H. Pon doesn't fit your image of an oppressed South African minority, but he took his place in line to vote this week, with a sense of satisfaction mixed with sadness, for the first time in his life.

Pon, 58, came here with his parents from China when he was three. He has made a successful career as an accountant, but he did so in spite of a system that frequently went to bizarre lengths to discriminate.

"We were neither here nor there. We were in limbo," Pon said of the Chinese of South Africa, who now number less than 10,000.

Puzzled with what to do with such a small group, the apartheid government briefly entertained the idea of setting up a Chinese group area to segregate them from the rest of society. Finding that unworkable, it passed the so-called Asiatic Law which established a crazy-quilt of rules for how they would live.

The last four seats in a plane were reserved for Chinese, Pon said. If a Chinese wanted to sit in a second rather than third-class seat on a train, he needed a letter from a consulate stating he was a "Chinese gentleman."

"You think about how the Chinese people struggled, quietly, gently, and we achieved freedom through perseverance. We had no mass actions, because we didn't have the masses," Pon said.

He was sad because the country's Chinese community has dwindled to half its former size. Although conditions have improved for Chinese over the years, there still is an unspoken barrier which prevents them from moving higher than the No. 2 spot on a hospital board, architectural firm or college faculty. As a result, talented Chinese professionals have been lured to Canada, Australia and the United States.

The system in which South Africans were taught the philosophy of setting apart such small groups was called Christian National Education. "It was based upon a theology that saw God as the creator of differences," said Douglas Irvine, a professor.

To some measure, Jews, English-speakers and many other groups have felt the effect of this distinction-crazed system. Nor has the discrimination been entirely on ethnic grounds.

A woman who applied for an editorial position with a South African magazine publisher recently recounted some of the questions she was asked in a screening interview:

Do you know any gay people? Have you ever had a gay or lesbian experience? What percentage of your friends would you estimate are gay or lesbian? Do you consider yourself attractive? What's your height and weight? What is your religion? (When she answered Episcopalian, she said, the interviewer said "good.")

Yeltsin's opponents blast truce, threaten rallies on May Day

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin's die-hard opponents said Friday a political truce Yeltsin signed with some of his rivals was meaningless and announced plans for huge May Day demonstrations.

The U.S. Embassy warned Americans to stay away from Sunday's demonstrations for fear of violence. Authorities said thousands of police were being brought into the city to control the crowds on the traditional Communist labor day.

A police officer was killed in a clash with protesters on May Day last year, and hundreds of people were injured as marchers armed with stones and metal rods fought truncheon-wielding police.

Yeltsin and his allies signed a political truce with some of his opponents Thursday in a nationally televised ceremony in the Kremlin. The so-called Civic Accord, timed for just before May Day, contained a pledge by all sides not to use violence for political ends.

The 245 signatories ranged from Russia's Choice, the largest pro-Yeltsin coalition in parliament, to such little-known groups as Women of the Navy and the Society of Private Detectives.

Extreme nationalist leader Vladimir Zhirinovsky signed on behalf of his Liberal Democratic Party, which won nearly 25 percent of the national vote in December's parliamentary elections.

But several of Yeltsin's bitter foes did not join the truce. Former Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, who has announced plans to form a united opposition to Yeltsin, did not attend.

Gennady Zyuganov, chairman of the revived Communist Party, appeared at the ceremony in the regal St. George's Hall but did not sign.

Both Rutskoi and Zyuganov are members of the Accord for the Sake of Russia, a loose coalition of anti-Yeltsin forces that criticized the truce on Friday.

"To join it means to agree to the destruction of our scientific and industrial complex, massive embezzlement of state funds, degradation of the people and destruction of the national culture," the group said in a statement.

"The regime wants to use this accord to protect its current policy," Zyuganov told reporters in the State Duma, the lower house of parliament.

Serbs refuse American, Russian, European appeals

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb and government officials refused to budge in negotiations Friday despite the first united appeal by American, Russian and European envoys to resolve the conflict.

Bosnia's Muslim-led government has threatened to pull out of the talks unless Serb fighters and heavy weapons are well clear of the battered Muslim enclave of Gorazde.

And Bosnian Serbs, whose leader, Radovan Karadzic, met with the envoys in Pale, reiterated their stance that a final territorial settlement hinges on lifting the sanctions against the remaining territory of Yugoslavia.

"The international community has to decide between withholding the sanctions and establishing peace," Jovan Zametica, Karadzic's spokesman was quoted as saying by the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug.

U.S. envoy Charles Redman and his colleagues were tight-lipped about the day's meeting with the two sides. The mediators are proposing a division of Bosnia that would give 51 percent to a Muslim-Croat federation and 49 percent to the Serbs.

Redman said a major issue was the duration of a future cease-fire between government troops and Serb forces. The government wants it limited to three to four months, the Serbs are seeking a permanent truce.

The government has refused a permanent cease-fire because it fears that would freeze current front lines. Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said "we will accept only a temporary cease-fire."

"We've left them with our ideas, which they're going to work on, think about, and we hope that over the course of the next week they will perhaps come to believe that some of our ideas are very good," Redman said.

He added, "I think it's too early to start characterizing the reaction of the parties because they've just heard our ideas for the first time."

Following his talks with the negotiators, who were planning to return to Sarajevo next Thursday, Izetbegovic insisted the Serbs had not lived up to the NATO ultimatum to withdraw soldiers from a 1.9-mile radius and heavy weapons from 12.4 miles around Gorazde.

Gorazde, home to 65,000 residents and refugees, was under a three-week Serb onlaught before NATO's ultimatum ended the hostilities.

Bosnian Serbs have repeatedly declared they have pulled out from the exclusion zones even before NATO's ultimatum expired, and U.N. and NATO officials say the Serbs have sufficiently complied.

Serbs continued to hinder U.N. peacekeepers on Friday, turning back reinforcements headed for Gorazde and prohibiting military observers from taking pictures of weapons still within the exclusion zone around Sarajevo.

While negotiators — three Americans, a Russian, two French, two Britons and Michael Steiner of Germany — said they planned to return next week, Steiner said it wasn't clear whether the Serbs would meet with them again.

Bosnia was generally quiet Friday with the exception of the Bihac area in the republic's northwestern corner, where an increase in fighting has been reported, said U.N. spokesman Cmdr. Eric Chaperon.

Both Bosnian government and Serbian media reported fighting around Brcko in the north, where both sides are said to be massing forces.

13 rowing clubs respond to racial charges, start minority programs

By Anne Fahy Morris
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Anthony Strickland is a strapping 16-year-old with stomach muscles that ripple like the river he stands ready to conquer with a scull and oars.

He and other inner-city youths are trying to enter the world of competitive rowing.

It's not the first time poor youths have knocked at the doors of Boathouse Row — a string of landmark, 100-year-old buildings along the Schuylkill River.

Immigrant Irish-Catholics, like the father of Grace Kelly — Princess Grace of Monaco — made it 80 years ago.

This time, some black city officials have leveled charges of racism against the 13 clubs that occupy the city-owned property along the riverfront because so few minorities participate in rowing. One threatened to raze the buildings.

"They are whites-only facilities," said Richard Gibson, until last week the City Council president's representative on the Fairmount Park Commission, which runs all city park land.

"We'll bulldoze them into the river and build restaurants and make a lot more money."

Stung by the charges, the clubs and colleges that occupy the boathouses responded in just more than a week by organizing summer minority outreach programs and special training sessions to be held May 12-15 during the Dad Vail Regatta, the country's premier college competition.

Although there are few minority members, rowers say it is not because they are prevented from joining. The clubs just attract few novices.

Strickland, doing sit-ups on the dock of the Vesper Club, said he signed up for "some kind of boat program" his gym teacher suggested because he knew how to swim.

Boat club members say that over years, they've tried to recruit minorities, but have been unable to stir interest. Public schools, recreation centers have no programs to introduce rowing.

"I knew there were boathouses in Philadelphia, but I didn't know where," said Strickland, who lives in a housing project three miles from the Tudor-style buildings of Boathouse Row.

The Vesper Club initiated its outreach program two months ago, before the controversy erupted. It will become part of the larger program the clubs adopted last week.

"It's no matter how we ended up getting here," City Council President John F. Street said during announcement of the programs. "We're here now."

Street, who is black, led the charge, shouting in council chambers that the predominantly white rowers were keeping minorities out by not actively inviting them in.

Not everyone agreed.

"Let's stop making everything race, race, race," said Councilwoman Joan Krajewski, who represents a predominantly white section of the city. "Should we demand (Temple University basketball coach) John Chaney have more whites on his team? . . . Anyone who wants to row, come and try out."

Mike Lambert, who founded Pittsburgh's Three River Rowing Association and consults with cities that want to initiate community programs, said rowers have been watching Philadelphia.

"It would be a tragedy for the rowing world to see Philadelphia trip up on this," Lambert said. "The city can duke it out on a level of ridiculous arguments or provide genuine leadership and get it to happen."

Boat club members say that over the years, they've tried to recruit minorities — without city prompting — but have been unable to stir interest. Public schools and recreation centers have no programs to introduce rowing, and it competes with other sports that hold the promise of college scholarships and big incomes.

John B. Kelly III, whose father and grandfather won Olympic medals in rowing, believes attracting minorities is not only the right thing to do but will also benefit the sport. He coaches Strickland's team from Benjamin Franklin High School.

Kelly believes rowing, more than any other sport, teaches teamwork and discipline.

"No matter how good one individual is, no one person can win the race," he said.

Kelly's grandfather, an Irish-Catholic bricklayer from Philadelphia, was barred in 1920 from competing in England's Henley Regatta because organizers thought laborers had an advantage over gentlemen.

Kelly, who went on to become a millionaire, swore his son would return to win the Henley one day. The son did.

The eldest Kelly, like Strickland, might never have known about the boathouses if not for club members who reached out to the children of poor immigrant Irish-Catholics in 1910, and that shaped the sport.

"Because of the Catholics getting involved, it's mainly a blue-collar sport, not a blue blood sport," John Kelly III said.

"It's not elitist," he said, "though it is almost exclusively white."

POLICE REPORTS

Indictments

ODESSA — Sealed indictments have been handed down by an Odessa grand jury for the arrests of 20 people who are suspected of being involved in the delivery of cocaine.

Odessa Police Chief James Jenkins said that as the rest of the nation, the use of "crack" cocaine has risen until it is the current drug of choice among the drug culture.

To combat this problem, Odessa Police Department and the Ector County District Attorney's Office launched a two-month campaign aimed at the street-level dealers, Jenkins said.

Beginning April 27, police began arresting suspects identified by undercover agents and have arrested 17 people for delivery of cocaine and one person — Leroy Hansford, 50 — for the delivery of a simulated controlled substance.

Body found

ODESSA — The body of an Odessa woman who was found recently in a burning mobile home has tentatively been identified as that of Otilia Franco Muro, 39, according to Ector County Medical Examiner Dr. Sparks Veasey.

Results from lab work are expected within three weeks. Until then, no cause of death is being released. The investigation is ongoing.

Accident

ODESSA — An Odessa man remains on life-support equipment following a car-bicycle accident in the 4200 block of East 42nd Street.

Witnesses said Johnny Lee Johnson, 40, was leaving a driveway on a bicycle at about 10:50 p.m. Thursday when he was hit by a passing car.

No charges were filed in the accident, according to police reports.

Johnson reportedly suffered head injuries when he struck the vehicle's windshield, according to the report.

Stolen

A woman's purse was stolen at gunpoint when she left Harrigan's Restaurant at 418 W. Wadley at about 7:20 p.m. Friday.

An assailant wielding a handgun and wearing a stocking over his head reportedly stepped from the passenger side of a small white car and demanded the woman's purse, according to a Midland Police Department spokesman.

Witnesses took down the license plate number and called police. Multiple police units responded to the call.

About 40 minutes later, an officer spotted a car and two suspects matching the descriptions of the assailants. Before backup officers could arrive, the passenger jumped from the vehicle and escaped on foot, according to the report.

The driver, Milton Goolsby III was taken into custody. Officers are continuing to search for the passenger.

Charges have not yet been filed, but are anticipated, the spokesman said.

Insurance pays settlement money to evangelist

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart's insurance companies paid $1.85 million Friday to settle a 6-year-old lawsuit with rival Marvin Gorman.

The settlement was far from $90 million Gorman sought in a 1987 defamation lawsuit against Swaggart. And it was well below $6.6 million Gorman won — before appeals — in a 1991 trial.

Nevertheless, Gorman lawyer Hunter Lundy said the lawsuit was a success.

"Marvin Gorman got his name restored, his reputation back and his creditors are being paid," Lundy said.

Swaggart's attorney, Phil Wittman, said Swaggart's insurance companies ordered the settlement and Swaggart would have prevailed on appeal.

The settlement was announced in February but attorneys gave no details. Details became part of the public record in the bankruptcy case of Gorman and his ministry.

The lawsuit and the trial were an offshoot of a bitter fight between Gorman and Swaggart.

Gorman said Swaggart and his allies spread false rumors of numerous affairs to destroy Gorman's then-budding New Orleans-based TV ministry in 1985 and 1986. Gorman admitted to a single case of adultery and claimed Swaggart feared competition from Gorman's ministry.

Gorman and his ministry wound up filing for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court. Swaggart fell from grace later after Gorman had pictures taken of him outside a seedy New Orleans-area motel with a prostitute in 1987.

Three children left home alone die in fire

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The mother of three children killed in an apartment fire had disconnected the smoke detector and left the stove on for heat while she went shopping and left them behind, officials said Friday.

Neighbors had to restrain Rae Libbett from entering her burning first-floor apartment when she got home Thursday night after grocery shopping. She suffered cuts on her arms after smashing a window to look for her children.

Firefighters found the bodies of Jessica Libbett, 6, Javon Libbett, 4, and Tiarria Moffett, 2, huddled in a bathroom.

Libbett, 23, told authorities she had been using the stove for heat because the furnace was broken, Fire Chief Al Conners said.

She also said she disarmed the smoke detector because it was a nuisance, according to Connors. Smoke detectors in adjacent apartments in the three-story building were sounding as firefighters tried to rescue the children.

Investigators have determined that the fire started in the kitchen-livingroom area, where the stove was, but that the exact cause may never be known because of extensive damage.

They said one of the children had a history of playing with cigarette lighters and the stove.

Prosecutors did not return telephone calls about whether they planned to investigate.

U.N. reports record exodus from Rwanda

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of refugees fleeing the terror of ethnic massacres in Rwanda have poured into Tanzania within a 24-hour period, the biggest and fastest exodus U.N. officials said they had ever seen.

The United Nations estimated that more than 250,000 people had sought refuge in Tanzania between sundown Thursday and late Friday, when lines at the border stretched for five miles.

"All we could see were rows and rows of people," U.N. emergency officer Maureen Connolly was quoted as saying after flying over the area. "It's a massive crossing and it's continuing. Thousands and thousands of people."

'All we could see were rows and rows of people. . .It's a massive crossing and it's continuing. Thousands and thousands of people.'

U.N. officer

Connolly said she saw about 50,000 people still waiting on the Rwandan side of the border to cross a bridge into Tanzania.

Fighting in Rwanda started April 6 after President Juvenal Habyarimana and the leader of Burundi — both Hutus — were killed in a suspicious plane crash in Kigali.

Habyarimana's presidential guard, some regular army troops and youth militias formed by Hutu-dominated political parties began killing government ministers, Tutsis and Hutu supporters of a plan to share power with Tutsis in a proposed new government.

That reignited a three-year war between the government and the rebels that had been halted by a cease-fire in August.

In the last few weeks, more than 100,000 people are estimated to have been killed and 1.3 million forced from their homes, mostly by marauding gangs of youths armed with guns, clubs, machetes and knives.

Reports of atrocities continued Friday.

In the southwestern Rwandan town of Cyangugu, police and militiamen fired machine guns and threw grenades at about 5,000 people who tried to force their way out of a stadium where many had sought refuge, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said.

In a statement from its offices in Geneva, the agency said relief workers had been barred from the stadium and had no way to help the injured or get an exact count of the dead. But at least 300 people were reported killed.

Most of the people in the stadium were Tutsis who had left their homes for fear of attacks by extremists of the majority Hutu ethnic group. Police later refused to let them leave the stadium, where they had only one water tap, little food and no shelter or sanitation facilities.

In Kigali, government troops and rebels of the Rwandan Patriotic Front dueled sporadically with mortars and artillery throughout the day, temporarily closing the capital's airport.

The U.N. World Food Program said it trucked 12.3 tons of food, baby food and medicines to Byumba, a rebel-held town containing tens of thousands of displaced people.

The United Nations has won the assurance of safe passage for relief convoys in rebel-held areas in the north, but has not been able to get a similar agreement from the government.

The government controls the southern half of the country and parts of the northwest and U.N. officials said they have not even been able to gain access to those areas to determine needs.

Most reports of executions and massacres are coming from areas still in government control. The British charity Oxfam has characterized the killings as a genocidal campaign against the minority Tutsi ethnic group by the majority Hutus.

UNHCR said it had reports that 40 to 50 people "from a list of educated Tutsis" were pulled out of the stadium at Cyangugu each night and executed "in what was described as an intellectual ethnic cleansing campaign."

The World Food Program said some 250,000 people have fled into the northern regions controlled by the Tutsi rebels, including 20,000 people from Kigali, where the massacres began.

UNHCR said it had enough food, medicine and other supplies along the Tanzanian border for 50,000 people. It planned an emergency airlift and overland convoy to send in more.

Israel, PLO sign landmark economic pact

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Israel and the PLO took another step Friday toward the long-delayed establishment of Palestinian self-rule in Jericho and the Gaza Strip by signing a landmark pact to establish economic ties.

U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher launched a separate peace initiative between Israel and Syria.

The economic agreement, reached after six months of negotiations in Paris, will put an end to 27 years of rigid economic control Israel has wielded since occupying the Arab territories during the 1967 Middle East war.

The pact also sustains the momentum for an overall agreement on Palestinian autonomy, apparently on track for a signing ceremony Wednesday in Cairo even though some security and administrative issues are unresolved.

"We have a date for the signing, but there are still some issues to be negotiated, formulated and improved upon," Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said.

Rabin handed Christopher a set of broad proposals for delivery to Syrian officials in hopes of advancing Israel's peace negotiations with Syria. On the third day of a Middle East shuttle mission, Christopher travels to Damascus today for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

The Israeli proposals apparently do not detail how much of the strategic Golan Heights, captured during the Six-Day War of 1967, Israel would be willing to return to Syria in exchange for peace. But the Israeli inducement includes a general offer to withdraw from the Golan Heights in stages and presents a broad outline of security arrangements.

A U.S. official sounded a cautious note about the prospects of significant headway in negotiations between Israel and Syria. "We're not on the brink of a breakthrough. A lot of decisions need to be made on both sides," said the senior official briefing American reporters in Jerusalem.

"We've got a lot of hard work ahead of us," Christopher said of his trip to Damascus. Christopher is scheduled to return to Israel on Sunday and be in Cairo next week for the Israel-PLO signing ceremony.

After long delays punctuated by violence in Israel and the territories, Israeli and Palestine Liberation Organization leaders hope to sign their agreement in the Egyptian capital next week.

The document would seal their historic accord reached last fall and clear the way for the transfer of power to the Palestinians in Gaza and West Bank town of Jericho, essentially ending Israel's 27-year military occupation. After the signing, hundreds of Palestinian police will begin taking up positions in Gaza and Jericho as Israel troops withdrawal to nearby Jewish settlements.

In Paris on Friday, Israeli and PLO officials signed a comprehensive economic agreement that provides the framework for trade, labor and agricultural cooperation.

Under the economic agreements, the Palestinians will create their own administrative boards to oversee tax policy, banking and foreign exchange transactions. They are free to assess personal and corporate taxes and will apply a value-added tax on goods, similar to Israel's 17 percent levy.

The officials put off a decision on a Palestinian demand for its own currency, a potent national symbol that some Israelis regard as tantamount to creation of an independent Palestinian state. While the issue is negotiated, the Israeli shekel will continue to serve as legal tender in the territories.

Pope fractures thigh bone in bathtub accident

ROME (NYT) — Pope John Paul II fell and fracturered his thigh as he climbed from his bathtub in the Vatican on Thursday night.

After a two-hour operation in Gemelli Hospital in Rome, in which surgeons inserted a metal replacement for part of the right thigh bone, the papal spokesman, Joaquin Navarro-Valls, described the 73-year-old pope as being in "excellent overall condition."

"The pope will heal," said Dr. Gianfranco Fineschi, who led the surgical team that performed Friday's operation.

"His hip won't be like God made it, but like a bioengineer made it. But he'll heal."

Navarro-Valls said that the pope's right femur was fractured and dislocated at the point where it joins the hip. Surgeons inserted artificial replacements for the head and neck of the fractured bone.

Emilio Tresalti, the medical director of the Gemelli Hospital, called the injury a "classic fracture" that could "happen to anyone."

The pope was expected to be hospitalized for three to four weeks and to require additional months of physical therapy, Vatican officials said.

There was no suggestion at present, they said, that the accident would force the pope to cancel a planned visit to New York in October to address the United Nations General Assembly.

The accident was the second of its kind in five months. Last November, the pope apparently tripped down the steps leading to his throne, dislocating his shoulder and fracturing a bone in his arm.

Vatican officials said the pope slipped in the bathroom of his Vatican apartment on Thursday night at about 11 p.m. His personal physician, Renato Buzzonetti, examined the pope and X-rays of his fractured thigh, and decided emergency surgery was not necessary. Navarro-Valls denied any suggestion the fall was related to any fainting or loss of consciousness.

After the pope slept for a few hours, he was moved to the Gemelli hospital, where he was reported to have quipped to staff, "You have to admire my loyalty."

His latest visit to Gemelli was the sixth of his 16-year papacy. The most serious surgery came on May 13, 1981, when doctors performed six hours of emergency surgery after a Turkish gunman, Mehmet Ali Agca, shot him in St. Peter's Square. The pope last underwent surgery in July 1992, for the removal of a large intestinal tumor.

Pope John Paul II has found his travels curtailed by health problems in recent years. After his surgery in July 1992 he cut short a Caribbean visit and his subsequent trips have been conducted at a far less hectic pace than in the early days of his papacy.

Gunmen kill Tijuana police chief

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — In another incident of election-year violence, men with submachine guns shot and killed a Tijuana police chief who had cracked down on police corruption and raised the possibility that the assassination of the country's leading presidential candidate was part of a conspiracy.

Late Thursday, unidentified armed men staged a roadside ambush of Tijuana municipal police chief Jose Federico Benitez and his bodyguard, Ramon Alarid, as they were returning from investigating a false bomb report at the airport, according to state police. Alarid also was killed.

Police in Tijuana and San Diego, California, sealed the border city in a hunt for the murderers, local media reported, but police reported no arrests and would not comment on possible motives.

In the absence of an explanation, conspiracy theories filled the void.

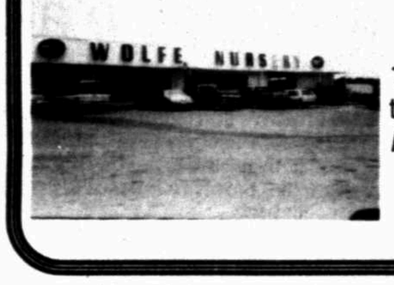

"He was determined to clean up the police force, and that could have generated internal conflict," said Antonio Garcia, acting director of the state attorney general's office on human rights in Baja California, where Tijuana is located.

But he said that Benitez also might have been killed by drug traffickers in a mafia-style murder without political significance.

The killing comes in the midst of increasing violence and unrest in Mexico as the campaign for national elections this summer begins in earnest.

Study: Many doctors fail to provide staff health insurance

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dr. John Ayers believes firmly in personal responsibility. The New Jersey obstetrician provides no health insurance for his staff, and buys coverage for himself out of his own dollars.

Most of his four full-time and four part-time employees "are married and their husbands have insurance," said Ayers. As for the rest, "I pay a reasonable salary. They buy their own insurance, I guess."

"I believe that everybody ought to be personally responsible for everything they do," said the 60-year-old solo practitioner from Wall, N.J. "That doesn't happen to be politically correct these days. Everybody's looking for somebody else to take care of everything for them. But I believe in personal responsibility."

Ayers, who delivers up to 150 babies a year, is not alone.

An American Medical Association study found that one-third of private medical practices don't offer coverage to the nurses, receptionists and others running doctors' offices.

However, larger practices are more likely to cover their employees. The AMA contends that 77 percent of all employees in medical practices are offered coverage through their jobs. That is three times the rate for other small businesses with 25 or fewer workers, said Dr. Daniel H. Johnson Jr., the speaker of the AMA's House of Delegates.

The AMA has been fighting much of President Clinton's health reform proposal and recently watered down its support for an employer mandate, requiring employers both to offer coverage and pay most of the premiums for workers and their families.

American Medical Association study finds that one-third of private medical practices don't offer coverage to nurses, receptionists, others running offices.

The AMA strongly supports universal coverage, but "physicians understand the discomfort small-business persons have with the issue of universal coverage, since so many of us are small-business persons," said Johnson, who pays for coverage for the 13 employees in his diagnostic radiology office in Metairie, La.

The National Federation of Independent Business, which has led the charge against employer mandates, counts 1,500 physicians, 3,200 dentists and 5,600 other health practitioners and businesses among its 600,000 members.

Dr. Richard Iliff, a family practitioner in Topeka, Kan., and a federation member, said an employer mandate "would be very bad for small business. It wouldn't be bad for me because I can afford it."

"My employees make enough money that if ... (the government) makes me get Cadillac medical coverage, then I'll just take that out of their salaries," said Iliff, who offers insurance but does not contribute to his employees' premiums.

"I could drop their salaries and then pretend I'm paying for the health insurance," said Iliff. He prefers to pay them "top dollar" and let them make the choice.

Iliff pays $90 a month for his own coverage — he says to qualify for a group rate for his staff he had to join, too — but he opts not to cover his wife and four children.

They are "part of the great, poor, uninsured mass out there," he quipped.

The 44-year-old physician said it makes financial sense for him to run the risk of paying his family's medical bills out of his own pocket.

"We're a very fit family and very health conscious," said Iliff, who recently ran the Boston marathon in 3 hours and 15 minutes.

Some medical workers are insured through spouses' policies or buy coverage on their own.

Overall, only 11 percent of all medical workers are uninsured, compared with 16 percent of all Americans who are too young for Medicare, according to an analysis of Census Bureau data by the Employee Benefits Research Institute.

Dr. Steffie Woolhandler, a Cambridge, Mass., physician and co-founder of Physicians for a National Health Program, said doctors experience the same troubles buying health insurance that other small businesses encounter.

"It can be extremely difficult, particularly if someone in your office has a pre-existing condition," she said.

"The private insurance market is collapsing and ... (more) Americans are either uninsured or having to rely on public insurance. Medical workers are not immune to this," she said.

Just two percent of doctors are uninsured, said Woolhandler. Nursing home workers, home health care aides and other low-paid medical workers are more likely to go without insurance, she said.

Kevorkian-trial jury continues deliberations

DETROIT (NYT) — The jury considering charges against Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who assisted in the suicide last summer of Thomas Hyde Jr., continued deliberations Friday, asking to review testimony and evidence relating to where Hyde actually died.

That request in Michigan's first assisted-suicide trial reflected the jury's apparent concern with fixing the location where Hyde committed suicide by inhaling carbon monoxide as he lay inside Kevorkian's van.

Hyde, 30, was suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a fatal, degenerative nerve disease also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, that left him barely able to speak or move.

The jury was dismissed Friday and will resume deliberations Monday.

The jurors said they wanted to rehear the testimony of a police officer who, on the morning of Hyde's death, saw Kevorkian's van on Belle Isle, an island in the Detroit River that is part of Wayne County, where the trial is being held.

They also asked to review the videotape of an Aug. 4, 1993 press conference in which Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, said that Hyde died on Belle Isle.

In contrast to that statement, on the first day of testimony last week, Fieger said that Hyde had died in back of Kevorkian's home in Oakland County. He then asked that the case be dismissed because it was being prosecuted in the wrong county.

Under a provision of Michigan law specifically aimed at determining where a case should be heard when it is unclear precisely where the crime took place, the prosecutor, Timothy Kenny, asked the state attorney general on April 21 for a decision on which county should hear the case.

The next day, Attorney General Frank Kelley issued his decision, designating Wayne County as the place where the matter should be "prosecuted and punished."

However, Judge Thomas Jackson did not allow the jury to hear that decision, and left the location of the death for the jury to determine as a question of fact.

In charging the jury Thursday afternoon, Jackson said that Kevorkian would have to be acquitted unless jurors could find beyond a reasonable doubt that the death took place in Wayne County.

In its deliberations, the jurors asked for a tape recording of the judge's instructions; for the hose, cups and string used to deliver carbon monoxide to Hyde; a letter Hyde wrote to Kevorkian, and a copy of the portion of the state's assisted-suicide law exempting those who provide medication or procedures with the intent to relieve pain and discomfort, even if the medication or procedure hastens death.

The defense contends that Kevorkian wanted to end Hyde's suffering, not necessarily cause his death.

But in his closing argument, Kenny held up the carbon monoxide canister used in Hyde's suicide and asked jurors, "What do you think Jack Kevorkian intended to do?"

NAFTA nations agree to improve transportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, Mexico and Canada have agreed to better coordinate their planning for transportation projects as the three nations mesh their economies under the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The three countries' transportation ministers met here Friday to discuss the added burdens increased trade puts on roads, bridges, waterways, railways and border crossings. It was the first tri-national transportation summit, which will be followed by a meeting in Canada next year.

In a series of loose agreements, the secretaries committed to improved communication among federal, state and local governments in planning new transportation projects. They also agreed to explore new ways of financing border infrastructure projects, primarily by trying to tap into private money.

And, the United States and Mexico committed to find ways of alleviating congestion and pollution at the crowded border crossings along the southern border in part by using new technologies to speed inspections.

"In the past there have been insufficient cooperative planning efforts involving all levels of government on both sides of the border," U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena told reporters at a midday news conference. "The one thing we agreed to this morning is to ensure that all levels of government ... are all at the table planning and making decisions about these projects."

Said Mexican Transportation Secretary Emilio Gamboa Patron: "We are trying to make the red tape easier between the three countries."

An early test of the governments' new resolve will be a plan to build a fourth international bridge in Laredo, a project pushed by local officials and Gov. Ann Richards.

Mexico will consult with U.S. officials on the Laredo project to ensure that the infrastructure on its side of the border complements that of the planned bridge, Pena said.

That could lay the groundwork for joint planning on new border crossings. Gamboa noted that Mexico and the United States share 43 border crossings and are studying plans for 10 more.

"We firmly believe that in order for all of us ... to realize the benefits of NAFTA, the real work begins now," Pena said.

Canadian Transport Minister Douglas Young cautioned that many hurdles lie ahead.

"The largest trading area in the world is going to be facing some very serious challenges," Young said.

CIA chief vows damage assessment, probe after Ames scandal

Report: Ames admits he gave Russians "the keys to the kingdom" of CIA intelligence operations abroad. . .fingering at least 1 East European, 10 Russian officials who were secretly passing information to CIA.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA is free to move "full steam ahead" with an investigation of secrets compromised by admitted Soviet spy Aldrich H. Ames, now that the sensational legal case is settled, CIA Director R. James Woolsey said Friday.

Woolsey also said he intended to punish any CIA officials who are found to share blame for not catching Ames sooner in nearly a decade of his spying for Moscow.

As a government team led by the FBI began questioning Ames Friday about the extent and details of his betrayals, Woolsey sought to highlight the importance of the CIA's work and his determination to correct its exposed flaws.

Woolsey said in a speech to an American Bar Association panel that from the time Ames and his wife, Rosario, were arrested in February to their guilty pleas on Thursday, the CIA was obligated to limit its own investigation of what secrets were lost and how Ames avoided detection for so long.

"I know there has been frustration in Congress — I certainly shared it, as have the employees of the CIA," Woolsey said, adding that the Justice Department correctly worried that a full-blown CIA probe could jeopardize the prosecution.

Ames pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage and to evade taxes, and received a life sentence. Mrs. Ames pleaded guilty to a lesser espionage charge; her sentencing was delayed until Aug. 26 to give the government added leverage in compelling Ames to fulfill his pledge to tell all he knows about his spying activities.

With the prosecution complete, "we can now proceed full steam ahead," Woolsey said.

The CIA chief said the agency would accelerate its work on two main fronts: an internal study of the damage to national security caused by Ames' betrayals to Moscow, and a CIA inspector general investigation of how Ames managed to avoid detection for so long and how CIA officials handled the case once they suspected that a Soviet "mole" had burrowed deep into the CIA.

"When the inspector general's investigation is completed, I will hold people accountable and take action where it's appropriate," Woolsey said. He said he already had frozen awards or promotions for some agency officials pending the outcome of the investigation. He did not describe the officials' roles.

■ More nation news/5B

"But I will not espouse the judicial philosophy of the Red Queen and Alice in Wonderland: sentence first, verdict after," he said. "The process we undertake will be thorough but it will be fair. Our people work hard and they often risk their lives for their country. They deserve reasoned judgment, not snap calls."

Ames worked in important CIA stations abroad, including Rome, during part of the time he was cooperating with the Soviet and then Russian intelligence agencies. He also had assignments at CIA headquarters, including a period as head of the counterintelligence division's Soviet and East European branch.

In an interview with the Washington Post published Friday, Ames was quoted as saying he had given the Russians "the keys to the kingdom" of CIA intelligence operations abroad. This included fingering at least one East European and 10 Russian officials who were secretly passing information to the CIA.

Prosecutor: Confessed serial killer is genius

MINEOLA, N.Y. (NYT) — Joel Rifkin, who has confessed to killing 17 women, was an honor student in high school, made the dean's list in college and scored in the superior category on intelligence tests, according to evidence presented Friday by the prosecution in his murder trial.

Fred Klein, the prosecutor, also produced reports by a Nassau County jail psychiatrist indicating that since Rifkin's arrest on June 28 in the slaying of Tiffany Bresciani, 22, of Manhattan, he has not been psychotic, appeared able to discern his situation without emotion and has occupied himself with his legal defense.

Klein was trying to bolster his argument that Rifkin is not insane, as his lawyer claims, but is "an intelligent, cunning man who is very capable of telling right from wrong."

The only witness for the defense, Dr. Barbara R. Kirwin, a clinical psychologist and expert on the criminally insane, was called back to the witness stand Friday by Klein to defend her testimony on Thursday that Rifkin was so mentally ill that he could not separate fantasy from reality when he killed Ms. Bresciani and his 16 other victims.

Klein produced Rifkin's academic records from East Meadow High School and the State University of New York at Farmingdale, which Rifkin attended for two semesters before dropping out. He said Rifkin got straight A's in 1987, despite his father's death on Feb. 28, 1987.

Dr. Kirwin had testified Thursday that Rifkin had gone insane after his father's death.

Rifkin, a 34-year-old unemployed landscaper who says he killed his first victim in March 1989, dismembered her body and scattered its parts in New Jersey, sat slumped in his chair at the defense table, his chin resting in his hands.

The jury must decide whether he is guilty of murdering Ms. Bresciani, whose decomposing body was found in the back of his pickup truck by state troopers who stopped him for a traffic violation, or not guilty by reason of insanity.

If found guilty, he faces 25 years to life in prison. If found legally insane, he will be remanded to a state hospital where he would probably remain for the rest of his life.

Rifkin also faces murder charges in Suffolk County, Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx, where he dumped the bodies of many of his victims along rivers, canals, dirt roads and empty fields.

The trial is to resume Monday when Klein calls Dr. Elliot Park Dietz, an expert on serial killers who has appeared for the prosecution at the trials of Jeffrey Dahmer, who drugged and killed 15 young men in Milwaukee, and Arthur Shawcross, who murdered 11 women in Rochester, N.Y.

Dietz, like Dr. Kirwin, rarely testifies for the defense in criminal cases. In fact, Dr. Kirwin has appeared four times in Nassau County Court as a prosecution witness in murder trials.

Klein mentioned all four cases to the jury Friday, inferring that Dr. Kirwin, as a clinical psychologist, was not fully qualified to be an expert witness for the defense.

Couple OKs drug program after being caught with psychedelic toad juice

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — A man and a woman charged with possessing psychedelic toad juice have agreed to attend a drug education program to avoid prison.

Charges against Bob and Connie Shepard will be dropped if they successfully complete the program and stay drug free for two years. They agreed to intervention Thursday in Tuolumne County Justice Court.

The two were accused of squeezing venom from their Colorado River toads, drying it, then smoking it for an intense psychedelic high.

Shepard's lawyer, James Webster, said his client would have preferred to go to trial to prove that neither possession of the toads nor a dime store cactus that authorities said was a source of mescaline violated the law.

Drug agents seized the Shepards' four toads in January. The couple was charged with five felony counts of drug possession, including possession of the psychedelic amphibian venom bufotenine.

Gay wedding spurs stations to pull 'Northern Exposure'

NEW YORK (AP) — Two television stations have pulled Monday's episode of "Northern Exposure" because it depicts a gay wedding.

KNOE-TV of Monroe, La., and WTVY-TV of Dothan, Ala., were the only CBS affiliates known to have pre-empted the quirky, hour-long series about the eccentric residents of Cicely, Alaska.

For the past two seasons, the show has featured companions Erick and Ron (Don R. McManus and Doug Ballard), who operate a posh bed-and-breakfast. On Monday's episode, they marry and dance together, but do not kiss.

On Friday, KNOE released a statement from general manager Dick French, in which he denied that advertiser pressure or letter-writing campaigns had prompted the pre-emption.

"The theme had nothing to do with the change of programming," French said. "KNOE doesn't duck any subject matter. We simply program our station in a way in which we feel we best serve the public."

Instead of "Northern Exposure," KNOE will air "Success through Education: A Salute to Black Achievement."

"This is a program for family viewing and more in line with KNOE's ideals," said French, who was traveling Friday and not available for further comment. "Our effort is always to inform, educate and entertain the public."

At Dothan's WTVY, station executive Donald Tomlin said he would not comment on the decision. "It's purely a community matter, not related to any pro or con interests whatsoever," he said.

CBS spokeswoman Brooks Cantini said the show hasn't elicited great protest. "They're condemning a program they haven't seen, and we think the program is in good taste," she said.

In Hollywood, series producers Andy Schneider, Diane Frolov and David Chase were variously amused and irked by the stations' decision.

"It's ridiculous! Preposterous! Is this going to bring down the Republic? I don't get it!" Schneider said. "Invariably, this means there'll be more people watching.

Dictionary records creative tongue of U.S. foot soldier

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Along with blood, sweat and tears, war produces words. A new dictionary records the words American doughboys, dogfaces, GIs and grunts have thought up in every war they fought.

The list goes beyond terms that have crept into civilian vocabularies — jeep, AWOL, gizmo and snafu — to others whose military origins may not be as obvious — scuttlebutt, goldbrick, baptize by fire, bite the dust, big wheel and Dear John, for example.

"War Slang: American Fighting Words and Phrases from the Civil War to the Gulf War" by author Paul Dickson, shows that as long as Americans have gone to war they have also taken a sardonic view of the environment of battle — the mud, the food, the enemy, the petty rules and the chances of survival.

Food, death, disfigurement and discharge, this dictionary shows, have been soldier preoccupations forever.

Chow and grub date back to the Civil War. But the GIs of World War II came up with the most slighting terms for food. Fried liver was alligator bait; corned beef was GI turkey. Prunes were army strawberries — and were also known as looseners.

Sausages were bags of mystery; beans were commissary bullets; spinach was marsh grass; toast was shingles; sauerkraut was shrubbery. In the Vietnam War, canned ground beef patties in gravy were called Gainesburgers. In the Gulf War, any unappetizing entree was camel meat.

In the Gulf War, MRE stood for Meal Ready to Eat, the successor to the C-ration of World War II. Those forced to consume MREs said the name consisted of three lies. From MREs, it was simple for soldiers to shortcut the name to simply Rees.

They also said the initials stood for Meal Rejected by Ethiopians or Meal Refusing to Exit.

Death spawned a vocabulary. Kick the bucket was used in the Civil War. In World War II, to die was to check out. In Korea, the term became to buy the farm or to go to the big PX in the sky. In Vietnam, to waste was to kill but to be killed was to be greased, as in, "Anything you do can get you greased, including doing nothing."

The body bag of Vietnam was officially called the human remains pouch in the Gulf War.

In World War I, a basket case was a soldier who had lost all four limbs and was brought home as a head and a torso in a basket. The War Department issued a bulletin on March 28, 1919, saying it had no record "of an American soldier so wounded during the whole period of the war."

Korea produced hit the sack for going to bed and hit the deck for getting up. That war also gave currency to the panic button and to a fatalistic meaning for the term had it, as in "We've had it, we're defeated." In Korea, something petty was chicken.

American soldiers have been adept at assimilating French terms. In World War I, doughboys said hello by saying barn door, a play on the French bonjour. Goodbye was bonswar, from bonsoir. And the French comme-ca was Americanized as cum-sah, meaning what's its name, what is it? Sergeants still say boo coo when they mean many; it comes from beaucoup.

A short-timer is a soldier whose tour of duty is nearing an end. Getting short was another way of putting it. In Vietnam the short-timer became a single-digit midget when he or she got below 10 days to go. The last day of the tour was known as wake-up as in, "I've got five days and a wake-up." Then the lucky soldier would fly home on the freedom bird.

■ Just weeks after the real-life scandal played itself to completion, NBC gives us "Tonya and Nancy: The Inside Story."

By Scott Williams
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Apparently it takes a made-for-TV movie to do justice to a story that was made for TV.

That's why NBC's Saturday night movie, "Tonya and Nancy: The Inside Story" is such a singular success. It opens with a TV movie screenwriter telling us the story dynamics of Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan.

The scriptwriter (Dennis Boutsikaris), is talking through the fourth wall, in extreme closeup. His face fills the screen while he addresses us.

TV airs its dirty laundry

Just in time for sweeps month, Tom and Roseanne Arnold, who both have network situation comedies, are a beaming couple again.

■ The May sweeps are here, which can only mean it's time for sleaze, big names and reunions.

By Ray Richmond
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Quick, somebody get the broom. It's sweeps time again in network television.

Menendez. Harding. Kerrigan. Serling. Gotti. Burnett. Copperfield. Van Dyke. Columbo. MacGyver. These are just a few of the names to let you know that, come next month, the networks mean business.

■ Commentary

May promises to bring horror from Steven King, new "Twilight Zone" episodes from the late Rod Serling and more retrospectives than any nostalgia fan should be allowed to watch. It also portends lots of murder and the usual number of disease-of-the-week specials.

The fun officially began Thursday, but why wait that extra day when you can experience Ray's Handy-Dandy May Sweeps Roundup today?

Nixon socked it to 'em

■ From appearances on 'Laugh In' to his memorable debates with JFK, Richard M. Nixon was television's reluctant star.

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — When Richard Nixon was laid to rest Thursday, television was there to say good bye. And with his passing, TV lost a pioneer and a reluctant superstar.

Nixon

A man not known for his live-and-let-live attitude, Nixon never liked TV, never came to terms with it. Certainly, TV never liked him back.

Still, he understood certain fundamental things about the medium: that it was enormously influential, that it could be used both to reveal and to obscure, and that, as with most things in his obstreperous life, dealing with it was a dog-eat-dog proposition.

These things he knew long before most of his fellow countrymen. And he proceeded to apply them long before most politicians.

Sure, John F. Kennedy will forever retain his title as "the first TV president." Breathtakingly telegenic, he thrilled the camera in his speeches and press conferences (and before that, in his triumphant campaign debate against a hollow-eyed, feverish Vice President Nixon).

Much later, Ronald Reagan would become what many called the first president-as-emcee, for whom politics was a midlife career switch after years spent in more conventional show-business venues.

Tillis continues to grow musically

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

With the release of each album, Pam Tillis continues to show proof that she is one of the most top-notch country artists around today.

While "Sweetheart's Dance" does not approach the overall excellence of her country debut four years ago, her third country solo effort is chocked-full of radio-friendly cuts.

And what's even better is that musically, Tillis's material continues to gain strength. Some may refer to it as an example of the slick production that has been the ruin of traditional Nashville, but not in this instance.

Her second album, 1992's "Homeward Looking Angel" was the recipient of some unjust criticism, but even it contained some of the better examples of the wildly popular new country.

Tillis opens "Sweetheart's Dance" with a rousing rendition of "Mi Vida Loca (My Crazy Life)," a song she co-wrote. With the press information that accompanies the album, it's evident that Tillis's imagination never completely shuts down. The inspiration for the opening song, Tillis says, came from "A Geraldo show about girl gangs. One very tough young lady had a tattoo that said 'Mi Vida Loca.'" Lyrically, the song is fine, but it is the strong Tex-Mex musical accompaniment that makes it such a standout, along with Tillis's voice, which is always in the finest of forms. Pounding guitar and bass lines make the melody of "Mi Vida Loca" sound like what the old Kenny Loggins' song, "Footloose" would have sounded like if it were written for the country stage.

Tillis also continues her own tradition

TV pretty bad in the dead of night

Bleary eyed, it's very often difficult to find a viewing option after 1 a.m. on a regular basis.

But hey, when you have baby-feeding duty in the dead of night, having a TV and a clicker within arm's reach is essential to preserving your sanity.

Patterson

Still, it is sometimes hard weeding through the junk that passes for late-night entertainment on the tube.

A few examples of the bad stuff, and what to avoid:

■ Any and all infomercials. Particularly that irritating ad for Gold Star Medicated Powder that begins: "Bothered by an irritating itch?" Also steer clear of ones that feature body builders and their goofy sidekicks.

Tony Little, a Florida-based strong man, sells something, I couldn't tell you what, but it is very much desirable to reach for the remote as soon as you see his hyperactive act, or the fake inquisitiveness expressed by his sidekick Earl, or whatever his name is.

I was on a plane with Tony Little once, and I was really afraid, based on having watched his infomercial only briefly, that he might accidentally poke himself and explode on the airplane, causing a sudden drop in cabin pressure. I was pretty relieved to see that he was actually a very sullen kinda guy who was quiet and to himself. Nothing at all like his info-nature, which must say something about how bored he is with whatever it is he's selling.

■ And then there's Jayne Kennedy Overton, Dionne Warwick and all their buddies down at the Psychic Friends Network, starring world renowned psychic Kenny Klingon, or something. Can't remember his last name. If I was psychic I'd be able to remember, but I'm not. But I do have it together enough to know that this Klingon guy is also about as see-thru as they come. Kenny walks into the audience, picks out a (planted) unsuspecting soul, and tells their future right there in front of ever'body.

Most anybody can be a psychic and make money at it if they give it a little effort.

"Do you have a phone?" any old psychic could ask anybody willing to give them money to have their future told.

"Uh, that's amazing, yeah I do."

"Then I predict that you'll be handing over plenty of cash if you're dumb enough to call a 900 number that'll cost you $3.99 a minute," the psychic says.

SWEEPS: King's Stand' offers usual horror fare

NIXON: President's TV archives resurfacing

(From 1B)

But Nixon was a video pol — the first, the greatest and the most enduring. His political career dawned with the television age and, albeit grudgingly, he proved quite the innovator in this suspicious new medium.

Thirty years before Candidate Clinton blew his saxophone on a late-night talk show, Nixon, not a bad pianist, was tickling the ivories on "The Jack Paar Program."

Long before self-parody became the national pastime, Nixon mocked his fuddy-duddy image on "Laugh-in" with an awkwardly inflected, "Sock it to ME?"

In 1968, he became the first politician to use televised "town meetings" as a campaign device.

And in 1977, Nixon was an early beneficiary of checkbook journalism (TV Category) when David Frost put his money where Nixon's mouth was for a series of four 90-minute interviews. For this gruelingly negotiated, much-hyped return to the airwaves after almost three years' absence, the disgraced former president reportedly earned a cool $1 million.

More than events, they were all TV events. And remain so.

In recent days, the TV networks have dug into the Nixon archives. Shown and re-shown, of course, is the clip from the 1962 "final press conference" when he swears "You won't have Nixon to kick around anymore."

And then, of course, there's the "Checkers speech."

Pre-empting an episode of a CBS series called, fittingly, "Suspense," Nixon sits at a desk in front of a busy-patterned drape in a desperate effort to save his political life.

What follows is a TV confessional that would pave the way for the "60 Minutes" appearance 40 years later by Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton, when the candidate addressed charges of marital infidelity. On that September night in 1952, Nixon presented himself to 58 million viewers with wife Pat dutifully at his side, to deny that he had misused $18,000 in political contributions.

Viewing the much-rerun clip in which Nixon defiantly refuses to give up his daughters' little dog Checkers — also a political gift — you can scarcely resist cringing at the disembodied theatrics.

But the 30-minute address, taken as a whole, is a tour de force. Step by step, exhaustively, Nixon lays himself bare.

Then, he comes in for the kill, urging his audience to "wire and write the Republican National Committee whether you think I should stay on (as the vice presidential candidate), or whether I should get off (the ticket)."

What do you know? Even without benefit of a 900 number, Nixon has just invented interactive TV.

Now, watch the 1959 impromptu exchange between the grinning vice president and Soviet boss Nikita Khrushchev at a U.S. trade exhibit in Moscow. They are in the RCA pavilion, which prompts Nixon to brag on the American-born marvel of color television.

An off-screen voice can be heard telling the Soviet premier how "this program is now being recorded on Ampex color tape, and it can be played back immediately, and you can't tell that it isn't a live program."

Nixon nods approvingly.

"Now, let's go look at our picture," he says to Khrushchev, and the two walk off-camera.

Elsewhere in television ...

"LIFETIME MAGAZINE": It usually airs Sunday nights, but tonight "Lifetime Magazine" has a special edition at 8 p.m. EDT on — you guessed it — the Lifetime cable network. Anchored by Lisa McRee, the hour will feature profiles of the actress-playwright Anna Deveare Smith and designer Nicole Miller, as well as "Why Schools Fail Girls," a report on why teachers overwhelmingly, if unwittingly, favor boys in the classroom. "Lifetime Magazine" is a production of ABC News.

SKATERS: Beautifully crafted and well-acted

(From 1B)

"Sometimes," the writer muses, "I think that this could be a fairy tale. Not the happily-ever-after type ... but one of those strange, dark tales, where monsters eat little children."

Boutsikaris' writer is our narrator, when needed, but he's also one of many "witnesses" characters, whose testimony into the camera lets us evaluate them, as well as the events in which they participate.

It's a clever device by the actual screenwriter, Phil Penningroth, whose previous efforts include "Amy Fisher: My Story." By rights, "Tonya and Nancy" should have been just as dreadful.

The potential was certainly there: A hasty "ripped from the headlines" movie-of-the-week, with cartoon characters re-enacting — and overacting — stale emotions and restating the public record. But it didn't happen.

Instead, "Tonya and Nancy" is "interpretive," with composite characters, some fictionalized, some names changed. It's a study, not an evidence photo, of two Olympic ice skaters whose names are forever entwined.

As a movie, "Tonya and Nancy" is beautifully crafted, well-acted, sometimes touching, occasionally brilliant retelling of the story that made the '94 Winter Olympics the most-watched event in television history.

It was a perfect made-for-TV artifact, a parable born out of human greed and stupidity, acted out inside the genuine ugliness of a media feeding frenzy. It was a perfect story for our media-driven age.

What story? For those of you stranded on polar ice floes for the past six months, there were these two women, world-class figure skaters destined for a showdown at the 1994 games in Lillehammer, Norway.

On Jan. 6, Nancy's leg got bashed by a mysterious attacker, forcing her out of the U.S. championships. Tonya won. Later, it came out that Tonya's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, was implicated in the scheme to harm Kerrigan.

Later still, Tonya copped a plea to conspiracy in confecting an alibi for Gillooly and his friend, the portly bodyguard Shawn Eckardt.

Those events — as well as the unraveling of Harding's career and the silver medal for Kerrigan — are the backdrop for "Tonya and Nancy." In the foreground are detailed portraits of the characters who figured in them.

You'll know the media are in for it when one expository device is a perky, teeth-and-hair TV reporter doing retakes of her banal "stand-dup" beside the Detroit skating rink where Tonya and Nancy practice for the nationals.

Yes, THAT arena. When Nancy is attacked, we see a meticulous reconstruction of the famous shot of Kerrigan, surrounded by medical technicians, clutching her injured thigh and wailing, "Why me? ... Why now?"

The same scrupulous attention was paid to costumes and scenes that echo TV news footage. All the details are in place.

So is a superb cast. Both Alexandra Powers (the cool, fundamentalist Christian, Jane Halliday, on "L.A. Law"), who plays Tonya, and Heather Langenkamp, who is Nancy, skated their feet bloody in making the film.

Her "enabler," Gillooly, is played by James Wilder ("Melrose Place"). Susan Clark ("Webster") is terrific in the minor role of Tonya's driving, much-married mother. Dan Schneider ("Head of the Class") plays the hapless Eckardt, a kingpin in a conspiracy of fools.

Compliment the director of "Tonya and Nancy," Larry Shaw, and his collaborators for making the movie so watchable. Shaw uses every lens, angle, film and video tool or technique to create a you-are-there texture.

Shaw's editors, Scott Vickrey and Terry Blythe, cut a tremendous amount of character and detail into some of the tightest montages you'll ever see on television.

Keaton's schedule hectic these days

By Michael H. Price
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — "Be sure and tell Fort Worth 'Hi!' for me," said Michael Keaton as he raced through a hectic schedule of telephone interviews.

Keaton

The news peg for his greeting is nothing more substantial than Hollywood hype, aiming to boost the circulation of "The Paper." But any opportunity to visit with Keaton is worth the time.

"The Paper" is Keaton's current starring role, directed by Ron Howard as a lifelike capsule of the pressures endured by the newsroom staff of a New York tabloid. Early returns find $7.2 million worth of seats sold in some 1,100 auditoriums in just a week and a half — but the showing lags ominously behind that of, say, Disney's "D2 The Mighty Ducks," which has pulled in $10.4 million in a shorter time.

But that's only the back-story, which has little actually to do with Michael Keaton.

"No telling when I'll be back to Fort Worth for a visit," said Keaton, who has become quite the cutting-horse enthusiast and last rode here in late 1993 in the amateur division of the National Cutting Horse Association's World Championship Futurity.

"I really don't have enough time to ride," Keaton said, "so when I show up for just one isolated event and I haven't been keeping in shape for it — well, it's like playing golf. You can't not play golf for five months or so and then show up for a tournament expecting to give a good accounting of yourself.

"Still, I may have a break coming in the riding department," he added. "Geena Davis and I are about ready to go do a new picture called 'Speechless.' off on location, somewhere, in New Mexico, and that should allow me to take my horses along — I own three cutting horses, now — and do some riding while we're working on the picture.

"That's the trouble with working as much as I've been working," said Keaton, 42, who starred in the heartbreaker "My Life" just before "The Paper." "Not enough recreational time."

Whether sharing the billing in "The Paper" with the likes of Marisa Tomei, Glenn Close, Randy Quaid and Robert Duvall, or soloing in a gag film for a David Letterman TV show in the 1980s, Keaton seems born to the craft.

"Picture-making is picture-making," he said, "no matter if you're working on a short subject or a 2 1/2-hour feature-length film. You still have to do the basic work, which never varies from job to job. You have to cast it, get it performed, light and shoot it, edit it."

This insight might explain, by extension, why "The Paper" has impressed so many newspaper insiders with its accuracy — the film's rather unrealistic ethnic homogeneity notwithstanding — and sense of intense deadline pressure.

"It's all communications," Keaton said, "what I do in the movie, and what I do in real life, as an actor."

Indeed, Keaton seems to have gravitated consistently to one form of communication or another: It's no put-on, this familiar extra-talkative style that has distinguished practically all his work since "Night Shift" a decade and a half ago.

"Well, I was a speech major for the 2 1/2 years I was in college," the Pittsburgh native said. "Took one journalism class, which I really did enjoy — but then as a kid I always used to enjoy getting the paper, feeling that joy of discovering what had just happened around me — 'specially on the sports page."

With 'Schindler,' Keneally becomes household name

By Fritz Lanham
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Thomas Keneally fairly beams with good humor. He has fathered 25 literary offspring over the past three decades, and one of them, a precocious 12-year-old named "Schindler's List," is a paperback best seller, more than a million copies having tumbled off the presses since December.

And, he happily reports, his most recent novel published in the United States, "Woman of the Inner Sea" (1993), "is being much helped by the fact that its big sister was kissed by Mr. Spielberg." Keneally, 58, has long been a successful and respected as well as prolific writer.

The hardcover version of "Schindler's List" (originally published in London in 1982 under the title "Schindler's Ark") won the coveted Booker Prize, the most prestigious literary award in Great Britain, and sold about a million copies worldwide.

With the extraordinary success of Steven Spielberg's film "Schindler's List," which dominated the Academy Awards and is being hailed as a classic, Keneally has become something approaching a household name.

Reporters seek him out, and he's tapped for speaking engagements. He was invited to be on hand at the Oscars. "I'm amply rewarded for my trouble," he says, meditating on the recent sales figures for his books.

In a recent interview in Houston, the Australian-born Keneally praised the film, which he's seen six or seven times, for conveying the ambiguity of Oskar Schindler's character.

"The more you look into the Schindler story, the more remarkable, not the less remarkable, the story becomes," Keneally said.

He first heard of the German industrialist who saved 1,200 Jewish workers from almost certain death in Nazi concentration camps in a Beverly Hills luggage shop in 1980. He'd stopped in to buy a briefcase. When the proprietor, Leopold Pfefferberg, a Schindlerjude himself, learned that Keneally was a writer, he insisted on telling the story.

In the course of researching the book, Keneally interviewed 50 Schindler survivors. Oskar himself had died six years earlier.

Keneally doubts that Schindler could have cast much light on his own motives. One Holocaust survivor, years after the war, spent a night drinking with Schindler and asked him several times why he risked his life to save the Jews. Schindler gave a different answer every time, Keneally said.

"He wasn't the sort of man who stood back and analyzed what he was doing."

Keneally would have asked Schindler about "the list." Late in the war, Schindler was ordered to shut down his factory in Poland.

TILLIS: Singer's talents blossom of recording songs with complex melody lines ("Melancholy Child," "Cleopatra, Queen of Denial") with "Calico Plains." Not at all a dance-hall-hit-in-the-making, "Calico Plains" instead is a moody, acoustical story of a friendship between two women.

"Spilled Perfume," the album's first release, has already received steady airplay on both radio and in video format. It is the most traditional of all the efforts found on the release.

"When You Walk in the Room" and "They Don't Break 'em Like they Used To" are two more that could easily find their way onto today's country radio. "When You also featured on the closer. What starts off as a classic-sounding country song swiftly moves into a foot-stompin' gospel number that Walk in the Room," and old Jackie De Shannon song from the 1960s, has easily been converted into sounding country-ish, and would prove to be a big hit if Tillis's record company decides to release it. "They Don't Break 'em Like They Used To," is a ready-made two-stepper, and will be popular probably more due to the back-up vocals by Vince Gill, Mr. Can't-Go-Wrong.

The album closes as strongly as it opens with " 'Til All the Lonely" a Tillis family reunion, featuring Pam's dad, Mel, as guest vocalist.

PATTERSON: Rhino private lives not all that appealing

(From 1B)

"That's amazing. You're a genius, 'cause that's what I wuz just fixin' to do! Pick up the phone and give you $3.99 ever' minute so you could tell me just how dumb I am."

(Some people will give money to anybody for anything. A Dallas radio station once ran a classified ad in a Dallas newspaper that read, "Now's your chance! Don't miss out! Send $20 to so-and-so address." The radio station raised something like $20,000. Incredible how gullible people are.)

■ The Weather Channel. One night last week I watched the local forecast something like 15 times during one 45-minute feeding. I was actually toe-tapping to the Weather Channel forecast music, teetering on the very brink of sound mental health.

■ MTV. Guns and Roses at 2:30 in the morning. Even our month-old kid was reaching for the remote.

■ Nickelodeon. Unfortunately, the boy has the tendency to want his formula during "F Troop" or the "The Lucy Show" or "Superman." Forget all the hype, Nickelodeon is not good 24 hours a day.

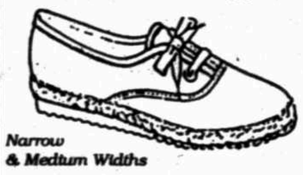

■ "Body By Jake," and "Big Brother Jake," both starring Jake something-or-other, a large goon with a thick Brooklyn accent. Give me Guns and Roses over this guy any night.

■ "Bodyshaping," on ESPN. Some of those women on there really scare me.

■ "The Balance of Nature," The Discovery Channel. Sure it's educational, but watching rhinos mating at midnight? I'll pass, thanks.

■ "World News Now," with Boyd Matson and Thalia Assuras. Proof that it's not all a vast wasteland. "World News Now" is a refreshing, offbeat glimpse of the news. These guys loosen their ties and let down their hair, kick back and go as light on the gloom and doom as possible. The next time you've got bottle duty, flip to this one anytime between 2:30-6:30 a.m. each morning.

Along grief's highway — accident raises questions

By David McLemore
The Dallas Morning News

'There's no way to explain it. How do you explain all those people dying, two whole families being wiped out in a flash like that?'

—Peggy DeSpain
store clerk

DALLAS — Five wooden crosses, each painted a brilliant white, stand amid a clutch of colorful flowers. They catch the eye only briefly as one drives down State Highway 359 near Laredo.

Some cars stop momentarily, passengers gazing at the crosses standing near a charred circle of pavement. Then they drive on. Both the flowers and the crosses are manmade. So is the cause of the grief they represent.

On March 19, on a quiet, springlike night, eight people two families, including one with three children died in a fiery explosion at this spot six miles east of Laredo.

The accident occurred when a pickup truck, believed stolen, plowed head-on into a second pickup at high speed. The impact sent both into a third pickup parked alongside the road.

"There's no way to explain it. How do you explain all those people dying, two whole families being wiped out in a flash like that?" said Peggy DeSpain, a convenience store clerk.

Dead at the scene were Jorge Javier Rangel Sr., 34, driver of the second truck; his wife Cayetana, 29; and their children, Leonor, 12, Jorge Javier, 10, and Roel, 8. All lived in Bruni, Texas, about 40 miles east of Laredo.

In the third truck were Hilario Quintanilla, 22, and his wife, Gloria, 24, of Rio Bravo, Texas, two miles southeast of Laredo.

The driver of the first truck has not been identified.

It was, by all accounts, a trick of fate. One horribly tragic turn of events led to another on Highway 359, leaving a giant hole in the hearts of at least two small South Texas towns.

"Jorge came in here every morning. He'd buy a newspaper and ask how I was doing. Every morning. I'm going to miss that," said Ms. DeSpain from behind the counter at Chato's store in Bruni, a town of 1,000 people.

In the aftermath of the crash, questions arose about the "hot" pursuit policies of the U.S. Border Patrol and Webb County Sheriff's Department, which had earlier chased the first truck down 30 miles of Highway 359 at speeds reaching 100 mph.

Border Patrol officials deny that any of their personnel violated the agency's stringent policy against chases. Although Webb County officers won't discuss the case while their investigation continues, authorities say it appears that despite initial witness statements, no law enforcement officers were chasing the first truck at the time of the accident.

The story begins about 8:30 p.m. March 19, a relatively quiet Saturday at the Border Patrol checkpoint just west of Bruni.

A pickup truck traveling east approached with only its parking lights on. Suddenly, the truck made a U-turn and sped west. A veteran Border Patrol agent, sensing something odd, jumped in a marked car and followed.

"If our agents spot someone acting evasively or suspiciously near a checkpoint, they check it out," said Alfonso Moreno, supervisory intelligence officer for the Border Patrol's Laredo sector. "That's normal."

As the truck sped away, the agent radioed for authorization to give chase, meaning he could turn on his lights and sirens. It's required by Border Patrol policy. Although no permission was granted, the agent proceeded as though it had been.

After about 10 miles, the Border Patrol agent got close enough to get the truck license number and relay it to the Webb County Sheriff's office by radio. Still not receiving authorization to continue, the agent dropped out.

"After he radioed the information to Webb County, our agent broke off the chase. Webb County picked up the chase," Moreno said. "He continued on, but not at speed. Everything was handled in compliance with policy."

It's part of the strict standards for police chases established by the Border Patrol last year after a 1992 incident near Temeculah, Calif., when a Border Patrol high-speed chase of a packed pickup truck resulted in the deaths of a dozen undocumented immigrants from Mexico.

According to law enforcement and other reports, when Webb County deputies picked up the chase, the truck already was hitting speeds up to 100 mph, heading west.

About this time, the Rangel family was driving east, heading home after a family visit in Laredo.

Things were looking up for the family. They had moved to Bruni from Laredo about three years ago when Rangel found work with a construction company. Mrs. Rangel worked part-time in the school district's two cafeteria. And the children blossomed in the full attention of the teachers in their new home.

Earlier in the day, the Quintanillas also had visited his parents in Laredo. That evening, they began the long drive out Highway 359 to Corpus Christi to attend his grandfather's funeral.

A native of Laredo, Quintanilla had moved to Rio Bravo, south of Laredo, to be closer to Gloria Vela. They had met in church, and there they were married less than a year ago.

Shortly before 9 p.m., for reasons that remain unclear, Quintanilla pulled his pickup off the eastbound lane and got out of the truck. A Webb County deputy had parked just 30 feet behind him, while another patrol car was parked across the highway.

It's unknown whether Quintanilla saw the pickup with a family of five approaching from the west, or the other truck approaching rapidly from the east, its headlights still off.

Deputy Ruben Garza, parked behind the Quintanilla truck, saw it all happen. He saw the speeding pickup approach erratically, then swerve across the center line head-on into the path of the Rangel truck. Both trucks collided in a scream of metal, then rose in the air and flew with geometric precision toward the Quintanilla truck.

Suddenly, all three vehicles erupted in a ball of fire. Fire personnel arrived from Laredo, but the heat was too intense to permit rescue. Metal parts melted into unidentifiable globs. The pavement blistered. It wasn't until late Sunday morning that the wreckage cooled enough to be removed.

Unidentified witnesses told the Laredo Morning Times that they'd seen Webb County and Border Patrol cars pursuing the pickup with lights flashing. Deputy Garza told the Morning Times he saw no one chasing the truck.

Justice of the Peace Oscar Martinez said that deputies told him that Saturday night the chase had been called off because of the erratic driving and high speeds of the stolen truck.

"They had been in pursuit, but they called it off to avoid endangering the public," Martinez said.

The body of the unidentified driver of the allegedly stolen truck was shipped to the medical examiner's office in San Antonio for forensic examination. In two other communities, they prepared for funerals.

"The whole town was shocked, just a terrible thing," said Deborah Serrano, city secretary for Rio Bravo. "They had just paid off their first home, a mobile trailer near City Hall. They were very proud of that."

In Bruni, the news came particularly hard. The Rangels were a part of the community. Their children played with everyone else's children, attended the same schools. Sunday, when the names of the dead were aired by Laredo television stations, phones began ringing incessantly.

"At 10:20 that night, a friend called me, asked if I'd heard," said Norma Flores, a third-grade teacher at Oilton Elementary. She had taught two of the Rangel children. "I haven't stopped crying yet. All I could see were those children, getting on a school bus, hugging their teachers before they left for Spring Break."

Everyone had their memories of the children. With only about 100 children in the consolidated elementary schools in Bruni and nearby Oilton, you get to know each child and each parent like family, said elementary school principal Eziquiel Lopez.

'At 10:20 that night, a friend called me, asked if I'd heard (about the accident)," I haven't stopped crying yet. All I could see were those children, getting on a school bus, hugging their teachers before they left for Spring Break.'

"They had only been in our schools about three years, but they had made such an impact," Lopez said. "Leonor had such a beautiful smile. You'd walk down the hall and suddenly, she'd be holding your hand, walking with you. Jorge was pure boy. He spent a lot of time in my office. But he was never mean. And Roel was just a great kid, always happy. See, those are my memories."

Lopez' voice breaks, and he's quiet for a moment. "It's one of those things you don't want to believe," he said. "The loss is too fresh. There's not a lot of laughter in this school right now."

On March 23, crowds filled San Vicente de Paul Catholic Church in Laredo to say goodbye to the Rangel family.

School buses brought teachers, parents and kids from Bruni and Oilton. Afterward, in a procession two miles long, five hearses bearing five caskets led the way to the cemetery.

A quiet funeral service for the Quintanillas was held March 24 in Laredo, with burial in a family plot in the old City Cemetery.

The communities galvanized in efforts to help the families. Webb County deputies launched a drive to raise money to defray funeral expenses. A Bruni seventh-grader, Tabitha Wildenborg, helped raise about $8,000 when she donated her prize-winning lamb for auction at the Webb County Fair.

The Webb Consolidated School District held a cake sale.

Meanwhile, the mourning had only begun. While dealing with their own grief, teachers and administrators knew they had to help the children deal with the loss of their classmates when classes resumed. Counselors were called in to help.

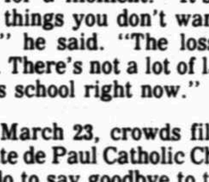

"I really dreaded that first day of school after Spring Break," Lopez said. "We gathered the children in the gym for a memorial service. We asked them to remember what they liked best about their friends. They told little stories and began to cry. We all did. It was very important to cry, to get all that out. We're still crying a little."

The hardest part, Mrs. Flores said, was walking down the halls, entering classrooms, and expecting to see Leonor, Jorge and Roel. "The other children are getting better," she said. "They're laughing more. It's getting more normal. But that hurt is still there."

Last Wednesday, the elementary grades held their Easter Party, complete with egg hunts and treats.

"Some of the second-graders seemed uneasy. The teacher asked what was the matter," Mrs. Flores said. "One of the little boys said, 'But what about Roel? He really likes chocolate.' So we made a plate for him too. What else could we do?"

U.S. buys dollars on foreign markets to reverse devaluation

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. financial authorities bought dollars on foreign exchange markets Friday in an effort to keep the greenback from skidding to a postwar low against the Japanese yen.

The action, announced in a brief statement from Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, marked the first time the Federal Reserve had intervened to prop up the dollar against the Japanese yen since last August.

The Fed's dollar buying came as the dollar threatened to go below a level where one dollar would buy only 100.40 yen, the post-World War II low that was set last August.

Traders said the Fed was not only seeking to support the dollar against the yen but also against the German mark.

In late afternoon trading, the dollar was buying 101.50 yen, up from its morning lows.

But currency traders cautioned that the Fed will have to be prepared to defend the dollar further in coming weeks, especially if markets are jolted by big increases in the U.S. trade deficit.

That deficit deteriorated sharply in February as the merchandise deficit turned in its worst showing in six years.

Since that time, the dollar has been under heavy downward pressure, a development that raises the prospect of higher inflation in the United States as imported goods become more expensive.

Analysts saw Bentsen's announcement as significant policy change by the administration, which until now has given the impression it was content to let the dollar fall as a way of bringing pressure on the Japanese to address the huge trade imbalance between the two countries.

A weak dollar against the yen makes Japanese products more expensive for American consumers while making U.S. goods cheaper in the Japanese market.

Analysts said the administration, however, was forced to abandon its efforts to lower the dollar because of growing concern that a weak dollar was beginning to push long-term interest rates higher and cause instability on Wall Street.

"There had been a concern in financial markets about the administration's dollar policy. The administration wanted to signal that they are not interested in seeing the dollar weaken further," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said the administration's decision to switch positions reflected concern that a weak dollar was making it harder to sell the U.S. government's debt to foreign investors. A weak dollar makes dollar-denominated investments less attractive.

The dollar's decline, by making imports more expensive, also raised inflation concerns at a time when the Fed has already pushed short-term rates up three times this year to counter potential inflationary threats.

"A rapid fall in the dollar is potentially inflationary and the administration doesn't want the Fed to have any excuse to raise interest rates more," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers in Boston.

Social Security workers get millions in bonuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration spent $32 million on employee bonuses last year at a time it was pressing Congress for millions more to deal with serious problems in its disability programs. The largest single award — $9,256 — went to an executive who had been on the job for less than three months.

Two-thirds of the agency's 65,000 employees got a cash bonus in 1993, according to Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino.

Records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act show that the biggest award went to Lawrence Thompson, who was named the agency's second-ranking executive by Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala on July 19.

His bonus, recommended by Social Security Commissioner Shirley Chater and approved by Shalala, was for the fiscal year that ended 73 days later, on Sept. 30, Gambino said. Thompson's annual salary is $120,594.

Social Security is not unique among federal agencies in awarding employee bonuses.

But the agency's decision to spend $32 million is striking because Social Security lobbied Congress last year for additional money to process a growing backlog of disability claims. Some ill and injured workers have died, lost their homes, or turned to welfare while they waited for their first Social Security check.

Rep. Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, the senior Republican on a separate Ways and Means subcommittee that oversees a part of Social Security, said an agency that admits to serious problems in its disability programs should not be rewarding "the people in the system."

"The money we gave them to clean it up shouldn't be going to bonuses," he said.

Congress gave the agency an extra $200 million to speed up those decisions, and Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., questions whether Social Security would have been able to finance its bonuses without that money.

Bunning, the senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Social Security subcommittee, called the bonuses outrageous and criticized the agency for giving Thompson such a large sum after such a short time on the job.

"To get $9,256 for 2½ months of service in the Social Security Administration, that is an outrage that we all ought to be made aware of," Bunning said this week.

Disclosure of the awards comes at a time of growing problems for the agency.

A record number of people are applying for disability benefits, severely straining the agency's ability to quickly evaluate their cases. Applicants have waited a year or more to learn if they will receive disability payments.

Callers complain that they cannot get through on the agency's toll-free hot line or that telephones ring unanswered.

Federal investigators have uncovered abuse and fraud by immigrants, drug addicts and alcoholics who receive Social Security disability payments. And the agency has virtually abandoned all reviews of disability recipients to determine whether they have recovered and should be removed from the rolls.

Thompson served as the agency's acting commissioner from the date of his appointment until Chater took over in October.

Gambino argued that Thompson's bonus covers both his work at Social Security and his last nine months at the General Accounting Office, where he served as assistant comptroller general for human resource programs.

The money to pay for the bonus, however, came out of Social Security's budget. And Thompson, had he stayed at GAO, would have not have received a bonus because the congressional investigative agency didn't have the money for any awards.

Gambino said the bonus rewards Thompson for his "outstanding, high-performance work at GAO and his excellent" tenure as acting commissioner of Social Security.

According to Gambino, the agency awarded bonuses to 2,891 high-level managers totaling $3.1 million, or an average of $1,060 per person.

An additional 42,727 rank-and-file workers collected bonuses totaling $29.1 million.

Report: Millions live in high air pollution zones

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Nearly 23 million people in the United States live in areas where particle air pollution violates federal standards, according to a report Friday by the American Lung Association.

The report, published by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, also estimates that an additional 92 million people live in areas that do not meet the stricter air quality standard for particles that is now law in California.

Dust and dirt are among the particles, with other sources including factory and utility smokestacks, vehicle exhaust pipes and open burning.

Data from universities and the federal government show that about 50,000 deaths each year are caused by the tiny airborne particles.

This type of air pollution, as opposed to chemical pollution, is believed to be the most deadly form, even at sites where the Federal standards are met, according to scientists at the Environmental Protection Agency. Standards Under Review

Ronald H. White, director of the Environmental Health Division of the American Lung Association, said the federal government had started a review of the federal rules to determine whether they were adequate. He said the government was likely to move toward the California standard.

The report noted that the levels of particle air pollution declined 8 percent from 1988 to 1992, but emergency room admissions that increase on high-pollution days show that particle pollution continues to be a public health threat.

Dr. Mary C. White, an epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said the data on particle pollution included some assumptions, but they were the only estimates available. Among the assumptions were that the rate of disease aggravated by air pollution in the communities was similar to national rates for the same diseases.

The data is from measurements taken by local environmental agencies and compiled for the Environmental Protection Agency. They included all particles of 10 microns or smaller, as larger particles can not be breathed.

A micron of air pollution is too small to see but they create a haze in the air. Federal law states that communities may not have more than 150 micrograms of particles in the air on more than one day a year. Sampling machines take in microns on filters, which are weighted to determine if the standard is violated.

Using the data from the communities, the lung association found that 16 counties with 22.9 million people exceeded the 150 microgram standard for at least one day in 1991, the year in which the particles were sampled.

The group estimated that in those counties, the groups at high risk for illness caused by pollution included 4.9 million children under 13, 2.7 million people 65 or older, 390,000 children under 18 with asthma, 700,000 adults with asthma and 1.2 million people with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

In California, the law does not permit communities to exceed 50 micrograms of particles on more than one day a year. Under that standard, the association estimated that an additional 92 million people, or a total of 115 million people in the United States, live in areas that have pollution above the standard.

Nixon's last book cites movie violence

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In his last words to the nation, Richard M. Nixon offered tough solutions for dealing with crime and race relations, health care and "radical environmentalists." And he complained the entertainment industry promotes violence for profit.

"Hollywood is sick," Nixon wrote in his 10th book, completed only weeks before his death on April 22. Random House rushed the book into print and said it will be in stores next week.

"Beyond Peace" urges a new path for America both in foreign affairs and at home. Nixon's observations of the national scene are rooted in conservative beliefs.

"The depiction of violence and explicit sex sells, and Hollywood is in the business of making money," Nixon wrote. "By forgoing its responsibility to observe basic standards of decency, Hollywood has accelerated the decline of these standards in the community at large."

He warned that unless Hollywood cleans up its act, it will inevitably face censoring by government.

The 37th president, whose Watergate scandals eroded trust in government, said the news media "bear a large share of the responsibility for the current loss of faith in American political institutions."

An institutional bias in the press "makes for excessively harsh criticisms of all politicians and public officials," he wrote. "Competitive pressures too often push the media past the limits of responsibility, destructively and unnecessarily undermining the authority and credibility of government."

While the news media would not have physicians certify themselves or politicians investigate themselves, "we are taught to expect that editors, reporters and broadcasters have a unique capacity to ensure that they themselves act responsibly," he said.

Nixon said he started the Environmental Protection Agency to find a balance between economic growth and protecting the environment.

Nixon calls Clinton health-care plan 'a blueprint for the takeover by the federal government of one-seventh of the nation's economy.'

"But as so often happens with government programs, the pendulum has swung too far," he said. "Measures designed to protect endangered species such as bears, wolves, and the bald eagle are now being used to force Idaho farmers off their land for the sake of the thumbnail-size Bruneau Hot Springs snail."

He called "all 1,342 impenetrable pages" of the Clinton health-care plan "a blueprint for the takeover by the federal government of one-seventh of the nation's economy."

The former president maintained that the criminal justice system "has abysmally failed to deliver what should be the first freedom: freedom from fear."

He said most political leaders, in order not to appear racist, shirk the question of race as it affects crime.

"What is truly racist is to avoid addressing the problems of black America for the sake of avoiding offending people's sensibilities," he wrote.

The nation must face up to the fact that the breakdown of the family is worst in the urban underclass, Nixon warned, adding:

"Blacks are not the only members of this underclass, but they are the largest proportion of it. In 1992, half of all murder victims in the United States were black. Ninety percent were killed by other blacks."

He said blaming crime on poverty is a copout that is "morally corrupt and intellectually vacuous."

Indians remain skeptical after Clinton promises

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton promised a new era of respect and help for American Indians on Friday, saying "we must keep faith with you." But skeptical tribal leaders said they had heard it all before.

"I pledge to fulfill the trust obligations of the federal government. I vow to honor and respect tribal sovereignty based upon our unique historic relationship," Clinton said at a White House ceremony.

"I pledge to continue my efforts to protect your right to fully exercise your faiths as you wish."

Clinton invited leaders of all the nation's federally recognized tribes to the White House and told them he was issuing a directive with new guidelines for the government's relationship with them.

"I reaffirm our commitment to self-determination for tribal governments," he said.

Earlier, Vice President Al Gore told the group: "Native Americans matter enormously to this administration. ...You no longer have to be content with photo opportunities and token representation at the periphery of policy making."

The White House said this was the first time all the nation's tribes had been invited to meet the president. More than 200 of the 545 tribes were expected.

The group was diverse, representing tribes ranging from tiny Alaskan communities and New Mexico pueblos to urban tribes that have become wealthy from gambling casinos and impoverished tribes whose large Western reservations include the nation's most remote and poorest counties.

Referring to Clinton, Marge Anderson, chairman of the Mille Lacs Band of Chippewa in Minnesota, said, "About 95 percent of Indian people went out to the polls and voted for him hoping for a change. There was hope he was going to listen to tribes."

Every recent administration has issued at least one proclamation recognizing the unique relationship of tribes to the federal government as sovereign nations within a nation.

But tribal leaders complain they are still treated as second-class citizens. They are especially angry with the administration's planned budget cuts in the Indian Health Service, which provides medical care to 1.3 million Indians.

Their frustration boiled into the open Friday morning during a question-and-answer session with Clinton Cabinet officials.

"In quite frank, plain language, the budget stinks," said Richard LaFromboise, chairman of North Dakota's Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa. The Indian Health Service built a new hospital on his reservation but cannot afford to provide the staff it needs.

"What we need is substantive relief," he said.

LaFromboise received a loud ovation when he refused the moderator's request to yield to a designated questioner.

Budget Director Leon Panetta promised to seek input from tribes in developing spending plans for Indian programs, but he refused to say they would be exempt from reductions, as some of tribal leaders have demanded.

In addition to health care, tribes rely on the federal government for education funding, housing, nutrition and economic development.

Gap widens between black, white infant mortality

ATLANTA (AP) — By the turn of the century, black babies will be three times more likely to die by their first birthdays as white babies, federal health officials said Friday.

From 1980 to 1991, the most recent year for which data are available, the rate of black infant deaths dropped nearly 21 percent, from 22.2 to 17.6 per 1,000 births, said the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The death rate for white babies fell 33 percent, from 10.9 to 7.3 per 1,000, the CDC said in its weekly report.

Overall, the U.S. infant mortality rate was 8.9 per 1,000 births in 1991, down 29.4 percent from 12.6 in 1980, the CDC said. The report didn't break the figures down into other groups.

Infant mortality rates are important because they offer health officials a window on other health issues, such as changes in lifestyle and the environment.

Just 24 years ago, the ratio of black infant mortality to whites was 2-1, said Dr. David Satcher, the CDC director. Since then, the disparity has grown, despite the ongoing drop in the overall rate.

"The good news in this report is that we continue to see significant declines in infant mortality in both whites and blacks," Satcher said. "The bad news is that infant mortality is not declining as fast among blacks."

Researchers must examine housing, income, stress and other factors as contributing to very low birth weight, said CDC epidemiologist Dr. Solomon Iyasu.

Most of the gap results from an increase in the number of very low birth weights among black newborns, Iyasu said. A very low birth weight is 3 pounds, 4 ounces or less.

In 1980, the proportion of white babies with very low birth weight was 0.9 percent, compared with 2.5 percent of black newborns. By 1991, the proportion grew to 0.96 percent for whites and 2.95 percent for blacks, Iyasu said.

The director of Emory University's Minority Health Research Laboratory, Stephen Thomas, said the persistent gap between whites and blacks is a travesty.

He said cuts in federal public health programs that provided pre-natal visits for people in the black community were to blame.

"Now, too many black women are having their first pre-natal visit in the emergency room," Thomas said.

Federal health officials expect to meet their goal of decreasing the overall infant mortality rate to 7 per 1,000 by the year 2000. But the goal of lowering the black rate to 11 by the same year most likely will not be met, Iyasu said.

The white infant mortality rate is expected to decrease to 5 per 1,000 by then.

The State in brief

■ Police charge teen in woman's murder

AUSTIN — A 16-year-old boy from Round Rock has been charged with murder after he was arrested for unlawfully carrying a handgun that has been linked to the slaying of a woman.

The youth, who police say recently moved to the area from Louisiana, was charged Thursday. He was being detained by juvenile authorities.

Bettie Gay Beall, 41, was found April 20 shot to death in her pickup truck in a downtown neighborhood in nearby Round Rock. She was shot once in the cheek.

"This crime appears to be random," said Sgt. Dan LeMay. "There is not an apparent motive and there does not appear to be any prior connection between the suspect and the victim."

■ Authorities seize 470 pounds of cocaine

BEAUMONT — Authorities seized 470 pounds of cocaine and arrested one man Friday in what police called the largest such bust in the city's history.

A Beaumont narcotics interdiction team found the cocaine after stopping a recreational vehicle for driving erratically on Interstate 10, said police Lt. Jimmy Singletary.

Charges of possessing a controlled substance were pending against a 37-year-old suspect from Richmond, Va., who was taken to the Jefferson County Jail.

After the vehicle was stopped Friday morning, drug-sniffing dogs found one kilo of cocaine hidden inside.

A full search of the RV conducted at the police department turned up 201 kilos of cocaine, wrapped in plastic and bound with tape. Singletary said the vehicle even had electronically operated hidden pockets.

■ Tornado victims should beware builders

DALLAS — The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Dallas warned tornado victims to beware unscrupulous contractors looking to cash in on this week's tornadoes in Lancaster, Desoto and Gainesville.

"People want to start rebuilding their lives as quickly as possible," HAB President Gordon Todd said Friday.

"But during a disaster such as this, it is more important than ever to do your homework and properly check out builders and remodelers," he said.

The HAB issued "warning signals" that builders may be less than honest, including contractors who won't give references, ask for payment up front or offer prices for limited times.

The HAB has established a relief center to provide counseling and information to victims at Church of Christ in Lancaster.

Zapata sheriff pleads guilty to drug charges

LAREDO (AP) — Zapata County Sheriff Romeo T. Ramirez pleaded guilty in federal court Friday to drug charges he once blamed on unspecified political enemies.

Under a plea bargain, Ramirez admitted to laundering $20,000 in what he believed to be illegal drug profits and agreed to cooperate with federal investigators.

Ramirez will pay $20,000 restitution to the U.S. Justice Department and step down as sheriff once he's sentenced. No sentencing date has been set.

He also agreed not to seek public office again and to provide federal agents with any information he has about criminal activities.

In exchange, government prosecutors dropped an extortion count and will recommend a prison sentence of 18 months to 24 months. Ramirez would have faced a maximum 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted.

The sheriff became the second Zapata County official to plead guilty in "Operation Prickly Pear" — a federal task force sting that snared three county officials.

County Clerk Arnoldo Flores pleaded guilty earlier this month to money laundering charges and agreed to cooperate under similar terms. He has yet to be sentenced.

County Judge Jose Luis Guevara, who was charged with 11 drug-related counts, has vowed to fight the indictment in a trial scheduled to begin next month.

Guevara was charged in the same indictment as his brother-in-law, Miguel Angel Rivera, who has pleaded guilty to all counts against him.

According to the indictments, an undercover informant named Ramiro G. Munoz Jr. represented himself as a drug dealer and established illegal dealings with all four defendants.

Sheriff Ramirez was accused of accepting $20,000 in cash represented by Munoz as illegal drug profits. In exchange, Ramirez gave Munoz permission to use his Falcon Lake property to import marijuana from Mexico, the indictment said.

Ramirez pleaded guilty Friday to accepting and laundering that money.

Shortly after he was arraigned on Feb. 18, the sheriff blamed the charges on political enemies.

"In some instances political opponents will use whatever resources they have at hand — up to and including the federal government — to attempt to get someone out of office," Ramirez said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Asked who the enemies were, the sheriff said: "I have no idea at this time. I've got my gut feeling, but I have no knowledge."

Judge Guevara and his brother-in-law are charged with accepting $23,000 to help arrange a flight carrying cocaine to land unrecorded at the county airport. The indictment alleges that Guevara offered his county judge's badge to ensure the safety of future cocaine shipments.

Guevara is charged with conspiracy, extortion, money laundering and possession with intent to distribute at least 500 grams.

Funding shortage affects National Guard soldiers

AUSTIN (AP) — A $93 million National Guard funding shortage due in part to a new accounting system and appropriations that were mistakenly dedicated to other branches of the military has left 773 soldiers nationwide without compensation, a newspaper reported Friday.

The Daily Texan, quoting a recent National Guard Bureau memorandum, said soldiers aren't receiving paychecks, student loans and bonus payments because of "overdisbursement" in fiscal year 1993.

As a result, the National Guard Bureau is suspending the student loan repayment program and bonus programs, along with instituting a hiring freeze for the Active Guard Reserve, the student newspaper at the University of Texas reported.

John Hoffman, a public affairs specialist with the National Guard Bureau at the Pentagon, said Friday that the shortage will affect only Army National Guard units and not Air National Guard units.

"We are working with the Defense Finance and Accounting Service to make up the shortfall and we are looking at several options," Hoffman said.

Guardsmen are outraged, and National Guard officials fear morale and recruiting may be harmed by the revelations.

"Soldiers are the backbone of this organization and we are the ones paying the price," a guardsman attending UT told The Daily Texan on condition of anonymity. "If the student loan repayment plan is there for you to use if you need it, and they withdraw it, it's a breach of contract on the part of the government."

National Guard recruiter Sgt. Craig Scrivner said the suspension of bonus programs "really hasn't affected recruiting yet, but it might once word gets around."

State Guard operations were told of the funding shortage in a memo dated March 30 from John R. D'Araujo Jr., who is major general and director of the Army National Guard.

"The only acceptable way to ensure NGPA (National Guard Personnel, Army Appropriation) remains solvent is to reduce programs," D'Araujo wrote. "Funds will be withdrawn, targets reduced and funds redistributed between the states to resource the . . . shortfall."

Cuts of $38.3 million are being made in Army National Guard training nationwide, according to the memo. Such schools as air assault and mountain warfare won't be funded.

A total of $7.9 million will be withdrawn from state Guard operations, according to the memo.

Documents from the Texas Adjutant General's office show the total funding shortfall for Texas could reach $400,000 and affect up to 130 people.

City mistakenly removes drums of toxic waste

HOUSTON (AP) — City workers have mistakenly removed hundreds of drums, including some containing toxic waste, from a vacant lot and dumped them in a landfill not certified to receive such materials.

The erroneous cleanup, prompted by citizen complaints, violated a new city policy against handling questionable drums, as well as various environmental and occupational safety laws, officials said.

The project to clear and mow the site was carried out without any knowledge that environmental officials also were conducting a criminal investigation there, Donna Kristaponis, director of Houston's Planning and Development Department, said Thursday.

A contractor to the agency crushed the drums and hauled them to a landfill in the last few days. The barrels now will have to be extracted from that landfill.

"About everything you could do wrong, and can go wrong, has gone wrong on this site," said Warren Zehner, senior on-scene coordinator for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Zehner said an EPA and state investigation over the last few weeks revealed "a substantial amount" of the 800 to 1,000 drums at the site contained at least small quantities of hazardous waste such as paints, polyurethane polymers, acids and oils.

Morales calls for attitude changes about crime victims

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Friday that changes in attitude are needed to increase the rights of crime victims.

"The last third of the 20th century will be recorded as the beginning of the movement to recognize the rights of crime victims," Morales told the Crime Victim Rights Summit.

"Few would deny that victims rights have improved enormously. And even fewer would dispute we have substantial room for improvement," he said.

He said advocates for crime victims have often overcome the lack of resources with "resourcefulness."

"Behind every gain and every accomplishment have been individuals," he said.

He said that although judges frequently order criminals to make restitution to their victims, "in all too many cases the follow through many times can be lacking."

But, he said, several agencies, including the Tarrant County probation department, try to make sure that restitution is made.

"Attitude is what makes it happen," he said.

Raven Kazen, state director of the Victims Services Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said the state has been selected to participate in a national project to improve programs and services for crime victims.

The project will help Texas develop and strengthen victim services such as notifying the crime victim when offenders are released from incarceration, and classes for offenders in which they are taught about the impact their crimes had on innocent victims.

"Through this training and technical assistant project, Texas will have the opportunity to make sure victims' needs are addressed in a sensitive manner after their offenders are sentenced to prison or community supervision," said Jeralita Costa, director of communications of the National Victim Center.

Earlier, Janice Harris Lord of Irving, national director of victims services for Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), spoke at the meeting, which was sponsored by offices of the governor, attorney general, Texas Youth Commission, Texas Department of Criminal Justice, and Texas District and County Attorneys Association.

Ms. Lord made several recommendations including screening every offender for alcohol and drug abuse and mandating treatment if it is needed.

"That's going to take some money, but I think it's going to have to happen to reduce the violence," she said.

She also said penalties should be increased for drunk drivers who have children in the car.

Dallas' curfew for teens goes into effect today

DALLAS (AP) — Teen-agers 16 or younger will have to be off the Dallas streets by midnight today, when the city's teen curfew goes into effect.

"Our philosophy is that this is an ordinance for the protection of our youth," said Sgt. Jim Chandler, a spokesman for the Dallas Police Department.

"We don't want to enforce the ordinance," he said. "Our preference is for parents to provide parental supervision over their kids and keep them off the streets."

Under the curfew, teens under 16 will have to be off the streets by 11 p.m. on weekdays and midnight on Friday and Saturday. Violations are punishable by citations of up to $500.

The Dallas City Council approved the curfew in 1991 but didn't enforce it because the American Civil Liberties Union sued.

The ACLU said the curfew violates youths' rights to free association and won't curtail crime.

City Attorney Sam Lindsay said the ordinance still is on appeal with the U.S. Supreme Court but the court probably won't hear it.

The ACLU needs to get an order from the Supreme Court if it wants to stop the ordinance, Lindsay said.

ACLU officials agree that the case probably won't be heard, but they remain skeptical about the measure.

"I believe that most of the people they stop . . . and say are in violation of the curfew are not going to be in violation," said Bruce Anton, an attorney representing the ACLU and three teen-agers challenging the law.

The ordinance has several exemptions, including teen-agers who are with their parents, going to or from work or involved in an emergency. Married students and those attending a chaperoned school, church or civic activity also are excluded from the ordinance.

"The exemptions eat up the curfew," Anton said. "We're just going to sit back and wait for the complaints to come rolling in."

The ACLU and the teens who filed the class-action lawsuit say the ordinance could be used to harass youths.

However, police said harassment will not occur and that they only will issue citations as a last resort.

Homeless woman may face charges of theft

DENTON (AP) — A homeless Texas Woman's University student who had been sleeping in the student union with her five children may be indicted on theft charges.

Denton County District Attorney Kevin Henry said Thursday that he would seek an indictment of Vicky Douglass on theft charges for renting a car then keeping it for almost a month without paying.

Henry says Ms. Douglass also is accused of writing $2,100 worth of bad checks.

Ms. Douglass' family was homeless for five months, spending some nights in their car and some in the TWU union.

"There's no excuse for writing hot checks," Ms. Douglass said. "But when I knew I didn't have nowhere to turn or no one to turn to, I had to write a check to survive."

If she's indicted and convicted, Ms. Douglass faces two to 10 years in prison or a fine up to $10,000.

After a front-page story on Ms. Douglass appeared in The Dallas Morning News, money, a job, a house and a car all were offered.

Ms. Douglass said she'll return some of the money donated to her family, but she said most of it had been spent on a deposit and first-month's rent on a three-bedroom apartment.

The family won't be able to get their electricity turned on until it pays $1,500 in unpaid gas bills.

Parishioners help renovate historic San Angelo mission

By Jenny Strasburg
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — The parishioners who've been here awhile saw it begin: the San Jose Mission, rising from wood, bricks, stucco, paint and faith.

In the 1950s, some 300 parishioners plus many others from outside the church created something not of this age.

Mission San Jose was much less a product of the 19th century than of a time some 200 years ago when friars and their followers sought refuge in the spiritual fortifications of the Southwest — the missions.

Now, standing as a terra cotta sentinel behind the modern St. Joseph Church, the San Jose Mission looks new again.

Nearly $300,000 in renovations are almost complete, with courtyard landscaping the only sizable project remaining.

The Rev. Fidelis Albrecht, a longtime pastor of the parish and its leader during the initial building of San Jose, is no less than a legend, according to some parishioners.

"The joy of St. Francis is nowhere more perfectly exemplified than in the Rev. Fidelis Albrecht," the West Texas Register gloried as San Jose grew from the ground.

"The vivacious Franciscan priest finds 24 hours not nearly enough in a day, and the hem of his habit fairly flies as he hurries from task to task with beaming face."

Albrecht died in 1973 at age 65, but not before he and his parish built a $225,000 mission for $30,000.

Some San Angeloans predicted the structure would fall before the roof was on, but the parish succeeded, and without an architect or blueprints.

Church members who knew Father Fidelis say if he were alive today to see what's happening in and around San Jose, he'd smile.

Most of San Jose's early contributors have moved on, but those who remain speak fondly of the mission's building years.

Everyone who was physically able participated, they say.

Some helped raise the mission frame; others hauled the giant logs to be stripped and lacquered and spanned across the ceilings.

Others splattered stucco on the walls in the structure's final stages, or helped dig the water well and canals that weaved their way through the spacious courtyard.

Many who worked — men, women and children — did so in addition to a full-time job and a full-time family. The church at that time was located at 12th and Randolph streets and was an extension of Sacred Heart Parish.

Sometimes the mission site, at Martin Luther King Boulevard and 17th Street, bustled until the early morning hours, according to parishioners John Estrada, Fernando Ramirez and John Rangel.

Gospel musician gets record in single chart

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — The growing popularity of gospel music has Hermon Trulove riding the wave to spread the news.

Trulove is currently on the the Christian Country Single Chart with "Come On In," according to Cashbox magazine.

"I played (country music) for a living for 15 or so years and that's all I did, with that goal of getting a song on the charts and it never did any good.

"After I started going to church, after I got my life right with the Lord, He's put a song on the charts," he said.

The musician, who plays drums, harmonica and guitar, said that since last January he has written about 40 songs.

"He gives them to me," Trulove said. "The songs just happen. I've been writing since I was 12 years old and I've probably written 200 or 300 songs. None of them, to me, were as good as what I'm writing now."

Family sees bright side of town after house fire

CLINTON, Wis. (AP) — In only a few days after Jerry and Cherry Ruston's home was destroyed by fire, the family received so much donated clothing they had to stop accepting any more garments.

"Their place burned Saturday and the First Baptist Church was taking a collection for them Sunday morning," Kay Radlinger, director of a community outreach program, said recently.

Fire broke out in the Rustons' mobile home recently while Jerry Ruston tried to thaw a frozen water pipe. The couple and their three children — ages 16, 12 and 6 — moved in with Mrs. Ruston's sister while awaiting word from their insurance company.

Meanwhile, churches, friends and residents of the village of about 1,870 stepped in.

One man is letting the couple store contributions in his shed. Churches are taking food to the family. Both banks in town are accepting monetary donations.

"There are eight churches in a little town," Radlinger said. "That may be a part of it, but when someone needs help, people are there to give it."

Catholic diocese uses ads to fight distortion

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop Michael Sheehan was given billboard space to counter recent signs by a Montana sect that featured a message referring to Pope John Paul II as a "man of sin."

Donrey Outdoor Advertising offered six billboards to the Archdiocese of Santa Fe for a free message to run through February.

Five signs erected this winter had shown a caricature of the pope along with the words: "The Bible says ... 'The man of sin shall be revealed.'"

The billboards were placed around Albuquerque in December by a fundamentalist Christian group based in Troy, Mont., called Printed Page Ministries.

Now billboards carry a message from Sheehan saying, "Let us all live as sons and daughters of God."

"I'm really happy about this," Sheehan said. "There was just no reason for the Catholic people to be quiet while the Holy Father was being ridiculed."

Minister who exposed attack on skater talks

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A minister who helped break the case of the attack on figure skater Nancy Kerrigan talked about the experience during his sermon at the Celebration Foursquare Church in Gresham.

"I talked about Matthew 5, the pearl of great price, and how it is costly. It has changed things for me," the Rev. Eugene Saunders said in a sermon last month.

Saunders went to law enforcement authorities after hearing Shawn Eckardt bragging about setting up the attack on Kerrigan.

Eckardt was the bodyguard for Olympic skater Tonya Harding and a classmate of Saunders' in a course for paralegal assistants at Pacific Pioneer College.

Eckardt and three other men are charged with conspiring to club Kerrigan Jan. 6 at a skating rink in Detroit.

Saunders said he spent a week at a mountain cabin outside his home town of Baker City in eastern Oregon to escape the attention that descended on him, but returned last week to the room he rents from a family in Portland.

Saunders said he has found strength in the support of members of his small church, which meets at the Holiday Inn.

"They were very pleased that they knew I had done everything in my power to make sure that justice is going to be done," Saunders said.

Many college students switch from beer to tea

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — When students at the University of Massachusetts want to have fun these days, they get together and rhumba. At neighboring Smith College, they meet for afternoon tea.

Campus social life is no longer limited to the keg party.

"It is definitely a very drastic change from the keg party or the bar scene," said Adrian Heng, a member of the Ballroom Dancing Club founded at UMass last semester. "You actually get to know somebody on an intelligent level, when you're sober and not slobbering away."

Dances and discussion groups are edging aside all-night beerfests as students adjust to new attitudes about alcohol, tightened enforcement of liquor laws and concern about crime, particularly date rape.

A Vanderbilt University program this year gave $60,000 to students who agree to run non-alcoholic parties.

Unemployed couple chooses adoption over parenthood

By Ronda Templeton
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — James' and Jenna's daughter was born in September. They didn't note the date, and they gave her away three days later.

Jenna is pregnant again. She isn't certain of her due date and said she'll keep this child for three days, too.

The couple — who withheld their real names — are typical of young marrieds who have chosen adoption over parenthood.

Neither has a job, and food stamps pay their grocery bill. While Jenna is pregnant, their rent is paid by the agency that will place their child with a new family.

"It happened again, and we're still not ready," Jenna said of her pregnancy.

She said she could seek employment but admitted she doesn't want to work.

James suffers from physical disabilities that prevent him from holding a job.

When he was 17, a female friend aimed a gun at him and pulled the trigger. The bullet entered his ear and lodged in his head, where the slug remains.

As a result, James suffers from severe headaches and cannot drive a car. He also has memory problems and sometimes forgets where he is and what he was doing.

Jenna and James have been married for five years. They go everywhere together — in part so Jenna will be there to assist if James has a memory lapse.

They are frank about their reasons for giving up their children.

"I don't want a baby — any baby," Jenna said. "I've taken care of little babies, and I like them when they're real, real little and they sleep all day.

"When they get older, they start teething and they're cranky and crying and sick. They cry a lot.

"I'm not ready for a baby."

James — a former gang member who has served a total of 18 months in prison on various burglary charges — said he doesn't want his children raised in poverty.

"She's going to grow up with us?" he asked. "She'll never make it."

Jenna agreed, saying: "I grew up in a low-income family, and I don't want my child to grow up in a low-income family because it's bad. It's real bad."

Jenna said she was surprised when she became pregnant with her first child because she and James had not used birth control in more than four years. They assumed she could not conceive.

Jenna said she didn't regret giving up her daughter and anticipates giving up a second child will be easier.

"I think I did the right thing last time and I feel the same way now," she said. "We're doing what we have to do."

The couple said they are keeping Jenna's pregnancy secret from family and friends.

Jenna's mother and sister strongly opposed the first adoption; she said their anger was more painful than giving up the child.

"I cried a lot because of their pressure," she said. "My family, they hurt me the most."

James said his mother offered to raise the child, "and she pressured me real, real bad. She wanted the baby, but I decided she didn't have a stable place."

Jenna and James could have selected their child's adoptive parents from descriptive portfolios provided by their agency but decided to let the agency make the choice.

Any home "is going to be better than living with us," James concluded.

Jenna didn't tell friends about the adoption, preferring to let others believe she and James kept the child.

"I fear they'll think I'm a bad person," she explained. "I don't feel ashamed of it, but sometimes I'm kind of ashamed to talk about it."

James and Jenna hope to someday raise children but want to delay parenthood until they are financially stable.

Child spacing proves to be major concern for parents

By Mia B. Moody
Associated Press

WACO — Once a toddler begins to walk and talk, people often joke that he or she is making way for a new sibling. But for many families that next infant may not come for another five to 10 years.

Spacing has always been a major concern for parents, but it may be especially troublesome for today's dual-career parents. The decision often depends on whether the mother is a homemaker or a part of the work force, said Dr. Elise Pinney, a clinical child psychologist.

"If the mother works and the couple is strapped with the high cost of child care, they may put off having children for several years," she said. "It's just too expensive to have two children in day care."

Pinney said parents should take comfort in knowing that from a psychological perspective, there is not really one better way to space children over another.

"My friend summed it best when she said, 'It's like pulling off a band-aid. Do you prefer to pull it off fast or slowly? It hurts either way,'" Pinney said.

Most research suggests that children who are spaced closely together present more challenges to parents than those who are spaced years apart, said Dr. Helen Benedict, a psychology professor at Baylor University.

The kind of attention you give to a child is maximized when they are spaced at least three years apart, she said.

"Many of the important developmental aspects of childhood happen within the first three years of life and if you have an infant with which to share your attention, you may not have the time to devote to your toddler," she said.

In addition, parents who space their children closely together should expect more problems with sibling rivalry, Pinney said.

"Kids have a harder time giving attention over to a new child when they are accustomed to being the special one," she said. "They often feel as if they are being upstaged."

But there are advantages to spacing children closely together. They will be close to the same developmental stages in life, which will make vacations and activities easier to plan, Pinney said.

Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, who devotes a whole chapter to spacing children in his book "Touchpoints," recommends that parents space children further apart.

He writes that a space of several years between children teaches the older child the value of nurturing and gives the younger child an opportunity to acquire the skills of older siblings.

"When you are expecting a new baby, let older siblings participate and identify themselves as a caregiver," he writes. "Instead of pushing him away to protect the new baby, let him learn how to be tender and gentle, how to hold and rock and feed the baby."

Pam Bailey, a licensed professional counselor at Counseling and Assessment Insights, said from a health standpoint, it is important for mothers to let at least a year go by after the birth of a baby to let their bodies recover.

Many mothers may find it difficult to put energy into taking care of a new infant when they have a toddler who is in his or her "terrible twos," she said.

"Children at this age are active and moving out into the world and it is difficult to attend to a newborn when you have a toddler who is getting into stuff," she said.

Eagle returns from brink of extinction

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

MASON NECK NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE, Va. — There are days here when the wind blows fresh, the sky is blue and the light glints in glorious flashes off the chop in the Potomac River.

These are the days to envy Deborah Melvin, a biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service whose weekly duties include piloting a battered green skiff up and down the river in search of bald eagles.

It is agreeable work on days like this, and there is an added payoff: Year after year, the job gets easier.

"There's one," Melvin shouted excitedly one day recently from her perch at the wheel of the boat. She pointed skyward and shoreward, toward the horizon above sycamores and loblolly pines.

There, an eagle looped majestically in an upward spiral. The white head and tail caught the sun; the broad, serrated wings waved slowly in silhouette.

Another followed; the two were a nesting pair. Up and up they soared, almost out of view, until it seemed easy to believe that they could gaze out over the rooftops of Washington, D.C., 18 miles north, and watch over the Capitol of the land they were chosen to symbolize in 1782.

"It's really kind of amazing," Melvin observed. "Most people don't realize we have this kind of wildlife so close to the nation's capital."

It does seem remarkable, especially considering that eagles had all but vanished here 20 years ago. But the eagle is bouncing back, not just here, in the suburban shadow of the capital, but throughout most of the lower 48 states.

From the brink of extinction in 1974, when there were fewer than 1,600 adult nesting eagles counted in the continental United States, the eagle population has more than quadrupled to more than 7,000 nesting adults today. Young birds aren't counted; if they were, the numbers would be far higher.

The revival has been so successful that the Fish and Wildlife Service is expected to announce soon that the bald eagle will be taken off the endangered species list.

The eagle would remain on the less-urgent threatened species list, but the "downlisting" would represent one of the greatest successes of the federal Endangered Species Act of 1973.

Or would it?

Most environmentalists and wildlife biologists agree that the 1973 ban on the pesticide DDT, not the Endangered Species Act, was the single most important step toward saving the eagles.

Studies in the 1960s showed that the pesticide caused birds to lay unusually thin and fragile eggs, which naturally reduced the number of successful hatchings. After the pesticide was banned, surveys showed the numbers of bald eagles and other raptors beginning to increase almost immediately.

Some opponents of the environmental movement go further and say the Endangered Species Act, which comes up for renewal in Congress this year, had virtually nothing to do with the eagle's renaissance. They say the act should be scaled back — or scrapped altogether.

"The whole notion that the Endangered Species Act did that is just baloney," insisted Ron Arnold, one of the founding fathers of the Wise Use Movement, an anti-environmentalist coalition.

The renaissance of the bald eagle, he said, "was because of the good will of just ordinary people, not because of some goody-two-shoes environmental organization."

Deborah Melvin wears heavy, mud-splattered boots, the better to navigate the late-winter muck at Mason Neck. She has ruddy cheeks, blond hair and the rugged gait of someone at home in the outdoors.

She agrees that private citizens have helped save the eagle. Every year, towns all over the country hold bald eagle festivals, raising money and awareness to help the birds survive. Private groups have set aside land; private landowners have spared nesting habitat.

She agrees, too, that the DDT ban was the critical turning point for the eagles.

Still, she argues, the eagle revival was nurtured by the Endangered Species Act and other cornerstones of environmental regulation such as the Clean Water Act and Clean Air Act.

"If we didn't have the protection of the habitat, I don't think we'd have the comeback we see today," she said. "Water quality, air quality — it all comes into play."

The Mason Neck National Wildlife Refuge was the first federal refuge created specifically to protect the bald eagle. It was established on Feb. 1, 1969, at the tip of a knobby peninsula along the Potomac's murky journey to Chesapeake Bay.

Bald eagles had been protected, in one way or another, since 1940, when Congress passed the Bald Eagle Protection Act, essentially outlawing hunting of eagles. Prior to that, "there is a lot of documentation of just outright slaughter," according to Jody Millar, who coordinates bald eagle protection in the Midwest for the Fish and Wildlife Service.

In 1966, Congress passed the Endangered Species Preservation Act, the forerunner of the 1973 act. It listed the "Southern bald eagle," a subspecies in the southern United States that is no longer recognized as separate from northern bald eagles.

Historically, bald eagles had flourished throughout the United States and Canada. (In Alaska, in fact, they remain abundant and have never been considered endangered.)

San Antonio Air Force Base tries to trim staff again

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For the fourth time in a year, Kelly Air Force Base is trying to reduce its civilian work force.

Bonuses of up to $25,000 are being offered as incentives for retirement or resignation in an attempt to avoid 265 layoffs at the Defense Distribution Depot at Kelly, a base spokesman confirmed Thursday.

The depot is an aircraft parts supply center.

A total of 645 employees at Kelly's Air Logistics Center accepted the buyout bonuses March 3, and nearly 780 logistics center workers accepted similar bonuses in March of last year.

Last summer, 143 depot workers left their jobs under a similar offer.

Those accepting the job buyouts "give the opportunity for young workers to keep their jobs," said Pedro Lozano, executive vice president for the American Federation of Government Employees local at Kelly.

Depot employees, including 24 workers eligible to take full retirement and also get the bonus, have until May 31 to accept the offer.

Incentives also were offered at two other parts depots in Oklahoma and California.

1994 REGION I-5A CHAMPIONSHIPS

Frost bites on day one

LUBBOCK — "Day One" of the Region I-5A track meet at the R.P. Fuller Track Friday was a world turned upside down, producing topsy-turvy results that matched Mother Nature's display of weather.

Oh yes, don't forget the weather, for this is what will come to mind when you call back a memory of the 1994 Region I run. The weather produced sleet, rain, wind and a chilly 36 degrees that had the wind chill factor hovering at 10 degrees. Yes, just the kind of weather for short shorts and sun-tanned bodies.

Needless to say, this was not a record setting kind of day, but it did produce its own weird set of beginnings and endings that you always have at any Region I gathering.

Midland Lee survived the day with only one lost individual — Marlon Henry in the 200, and that in itself was a little strange since that was the event that the senior won legitimate entry by placing second in the district meet.

Henry, however, qualified for the finals in the 100, an event he was al-

Mother Nature.

Heavy rains with sleet and hail and near freezing temparatures postponed the first round of the Region I-5A Boys Golf Tournament at Meadowbrook Golf Course and the Region I-5A Tennis Tournament for boys and girls being played across Lubbock.

The Midland High boys golf team will try to qualify for a trip to Austin playing 36 holes today beginning at 8 a.m.

If 36 holes cannot be played today, tournament officials said that the course is unavailable Sunday and that the region would ask for a waiver from the University Interscholastic League to finish on Monday. The tournament could also be shortened to just 18 holes.

Midland's only representative in the tennis tournament, Midland High's Bonnie Terrazas, will compete at 8 a.m. this morning in singles competi-

Cowboys travel to 'Switzerland'

■ Barry Switzer calls a mandatory minicamp and meets with the entire team for the first time.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys visited "Switzerland" Friday.

Barry Switzer, the third coach in the club's history, got the team together for the first time since Jimmy Johnson's departure with a mandatory minicamp for every player under contract.

Switzer playfully wrestled with discontented wide receiver Michael Irvin in the dressing room and said, "The next time you start throwing trash cans, I'll help you reload."

Only weeks ago, Irvin threw a fit and trash cans at a television camera crew after learning Switzer would be the new coach.

The only big-name player missing was running back Emmitt Smith, whose grandmother died early in the week. Smith is scheduled to attend the last day of the camp at Valley Ranch on Sunday.

Rain poured down and Switzer called it "a downer."

"But it's great to have everybody together," he said.

It was Switzer's first full day as a coach in the NFL and the first time he had a whistle around his neck since leaving Oklahoma under a cloud of scandal five years ago. He gave the team a rousing pep talk, then talked about getting back to the game he loves.

"I was out a long time and was getting bored," Switzer said. "Life is full of obstacles and challenges. I look forward to it as an opportunity."

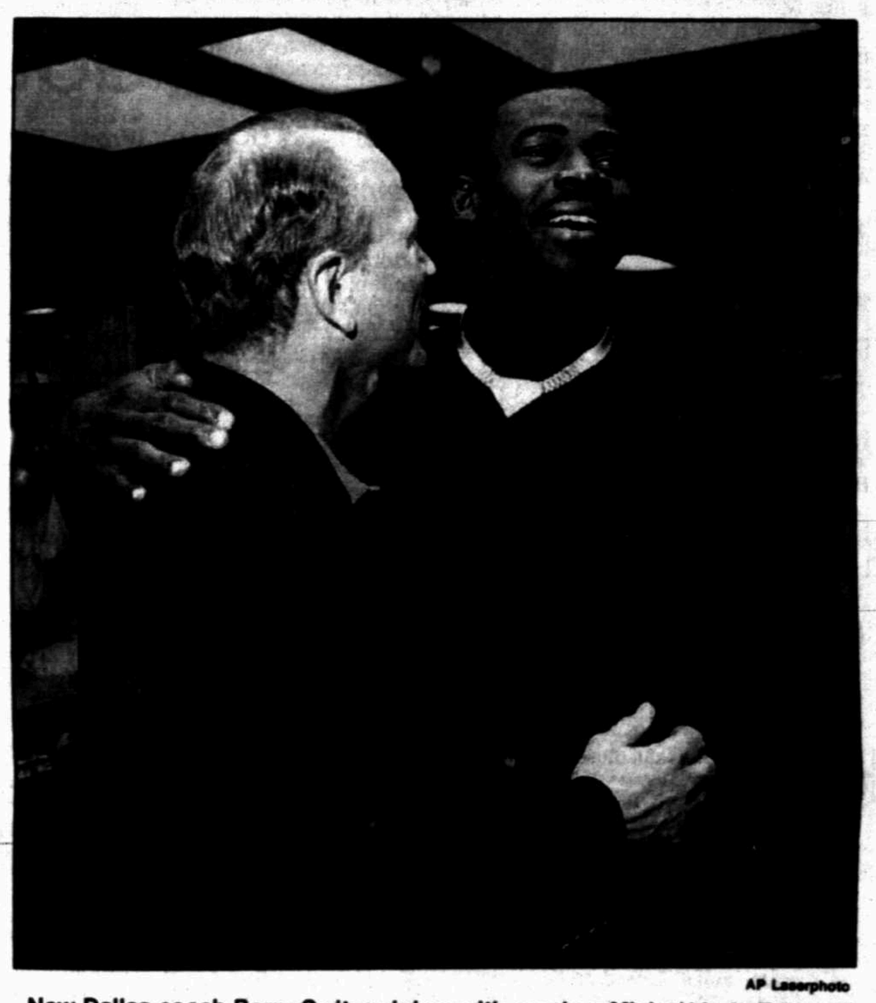

Switzer said he is willing and able to handle the pressure of getting the team to the Super Bowl.

"People ask me about pressure," Switzer said. "I don't think about pressure. My God, at my age (57) I'm not concerned. If I was 30 years old I'd be worried about it. Remember I was retired when Jerry (Jones) called."

Switzer said he's not going to change.

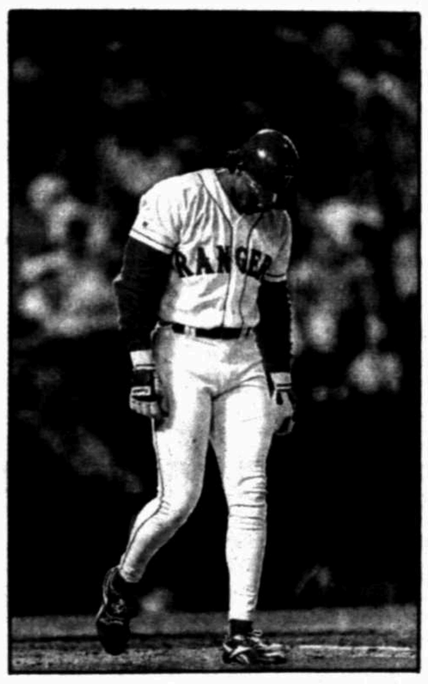

"I'll be the same coach I always was," he said. "Probably more like I was in the early '70s when I first became a head coach. That's the enthusiasm I have right now."

Rockets 'Max' out win over Blazers

■ Vernon Maxwell was volatile from field in Houston's 114-104 NBA playoff win over Portland.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — First, Vernon Maxwell got mad. Then he got hot.

The volatile Maxwell broke out of a shooting drought with 10 consecutive Houston points late in the game, leading the Rockets to a 114-104 victory over Portland in their NBA playoff opener Friday night.

"I just stopped being aggressive on offense," Maxwell said of his midgame swoon. "My teammates kept telling me to be aggressive on offense. They stayed on me the whole night."

Finally, Maxwell listened. He hit his first four shots and then made only one of his next seven before starting his game-winning surge.

"I was in a zone, I definitely felt good," Maxwell said.

The Rockets were protecting a 97-95 lead with 5:20 to play when Maxwell — who scored 24 points and hit five 3-pointers — started his decisive charge. He hit consecutive 3-point baskets and then two jumpers, giving Houston a 107-98 lead with 2:39 to play.

"He's a crunch-time player," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I know his makeup. He's a competitive guy. You can't just yank him out of the game. You have to let him stay in and work his way out of it."

It was only fitting that 3-point baskets determined the game since the 15 combined 3-pointers matched a playoff record and Terry Porter's four second-quarter 3s equaled the record for 3-pointers in one quarter.

Houston defeated Portland four straight games in the regular season, including a 119-110 victory on April 14 that clinched the Rockets' second straight Midwest Division title.

The second game of the best-of-5 series will be Sunday in the Summit.

"We need more guys to step up, not just one or two," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "Robert Horry put it to us, Otis Thorpe played great, all their starters had great games. The biggest

Awful April takes toll on Gonzalez

By Denne H. Freeman

ARLINGTON — Pressure. It comes at Juan Gonzalez from all angles.

He's trying to live up to a $45 million contract and the fame brought by consecutive American League home run titles.

Expectations are higher now. And the 24-year-old Gonzalez struggles to make the Texas Rangers fans happy.

It's only been a week since the drug-induced death of his brother, Juan "Puma" Gonzalez, and the memories are hard to shake.

HOUSTON — Sir Fitzwillie won the first-ever race at Sam Houston Race Park on Friday, hours after track officials reached the finish line for returning Class I thoroughbred racing to Texas after 57 years.

Both events were close races.

Mere hours before post time, track officials needed a late charge to be ready for the 10 a.m. opening of the $84 million facility located on the city's northwest side.

Construction crews worked feverishly right up to the opening, taking down barriers to two new streets leading into the facility at 8:30 a.m.

Texas Christian athletic director Frank Windegger and other SWC athletic directors met Friday in Dallas.

SWC directors meet to discuss next two years

DALLAS (AP) — The dying Southwest Conference will continue play as a conference in all sports in 1994-95, but athletic directors said Friday they are divided over whether to continue SWC play in 1995-96.

"There is a lot of sentiment to stay with the Southwest Conference for two years, but there are also those who'd like to split sooner. It's a mixed bag," said Texas Christian athletic director Frank Windegger.

The only sport that will definitely continue SWC play in 1995-96 is football, with the conference champion winning a guaranteed spot in the bowl coalition.

The official demise of the conference is set for the fall of 1996, when Texas, Texas Tech, Baylor and Texas A&M join the Big Eight.

Rice, TCU and Southern Methodist are set to join the Western Athletic Conference at that time. Houston's future is undetermined.

The SWC athletic directors approved sponsorship of the 17 conference championship games in 1994-95 at a Dallas meeting Friday. SWC commissioner Steve Hatchell said there never was a question of continuing play in 1994-95.

They set a July 1 deadline for deciding whether the SWC will play the 1995-96 season as a conference in all sports. Approval of a plan requires only a simple majority vote of the directors.

Hatchell said there's no way to tell if the 1995-96 conference will play all sports, no sports or a mixture.

"We didn't get into it sport by sport," Hatchell said.

Teams that play sports in which the SWC doesn't sponsor championships probably will be allowed to play elsewhere as soon as possible, Hatchell said.

The SWC athletic directors will make their decision after WAC and Big Eight meetings scheduled for this summer, said Windegger, the chairman of the SWC Athletic Directors Committee.

GONZALEZ: Rangers slugger starts slowly

(From 1D)

It's been an awful April for the foundation of the Rangers franchise.

"I need to be more relaxed at the plate," Gonzalez said. "I'm tight. I've been putting pressure on myself with men on base. I need more walks. I need to be more patient."

Pitchers pick on his anxieties. They throw curveballs outside the strike zone. Gonzalez swings anyway.

"This is the first time in my career that I've started this slowly," said Gonzalez, who is hitting in the .230 range and has just three homers and 13 RBIs. "I think because of my big contract sometimes I try too hard."

Gonzalez, who had 46 homers last year, tries to tell himself it's a long season and other big-name stars struggle.

"Rafael Palmeiro struggled in April last year and look at the season he had," Gonzalez said. "Barry Bonds is starting slowly this year."

But there are other things bothering Gonzalez. Like The Ballpark's 390-foot power alley in left center.

"The stadium is too big," Gonzalez said. "I have to go to right field here. There are a lot of extra bases but no home runs. If I hit a ball hard, there will be no question it will go out. But other balls I hit that might go out in other stadiums won't go out here."

Texas manager Kevin Kennedy has moved Gonzalez to fifth in the batting order for the first time.

"A lot of things are coming at Juan," Kennedy said. "He has the new contract and expects more of himself and he's getting over the death of his brother. He just needs to get in focus at the plate. He needs to take more balls. Until he starts walking he won't get a lot of good pitches."

Gonzalez said the drop to fifth in the lineup doesn't bother him.

"It's OK for four or five games," Gonzalez said. "It will help me relax."

Luis Mayoral knows the hurt Gonzalez is feeling. The Rangers' Latin American liaison lives in the same house with Gonzalez.

"Juan is a unique person," Mayoral said. "His fame and his money doesn't make him feel superior. But those who boo him should understand he's come a long way in four years. I think he was making about $90,000 four years ago. Now look what's he's making. He gets frustrated if he feels he isn't earning it.

"His brother's death hurt him. But he has some great friends on this team. Will Clark has been a great influence. Juan respects Clark a lot."

Batting coach Willie Upshaw said Gonzalez "is just trying too hard. He's got to clear his head. He's got to take his walks and look at pitches better."

In the dressing room, Gonzalez has a small statue of the late Roberto Clemente for inspiration.

Gonzalez is striving to be a hero of Clemente's stature in his native Puerto Rico.

But for now Gonzalez just wants to find Juan Gonzalez again. The Rangers' biggest star has been lost in The Ballpark.

TRACK: Lee's Henry surprised

(From 1D)

lowed to enter because a district runner in front of him didn't come home with the grades. Now get this. Henry not only qualified in the 100, but had the fastest qualifying time with a 10.98 seconds.

Even Henry was surprised.

"I'm the sleeper in the 100," Henry said. "I guess you could say this was a surprise. I just went into the race thinking that I wasn't going to let them all run off and leave me. I was kind of surprised to be first."

He didn't have the same luck in the 200, which he was entered for the second year, placing sixth in his heat.

Lee junior Roderick Mayfield also turned in much the same results on "Day One," but he is still alive for four events today.

Mayfield came in ranked as the third best in the 110 hurdles, but ran a relaxed heat and qualified first with a 14.82, beating both state-ranked Clayton Brookens of Trimble Tech and district foe Brandon Berger of Odessa Permian.

Mayfield was singing the praises of the foul weather after that race.

"We're used to this kind of weather," Mayfield said. "It really helped me and I've run in worse. It also says not to read the state rankings. Those guys can be beat."

Then came the 300 hurdles where Mayfield was favored going in. His weather channel was changing after placing fourth in his heat, but still was fast enough at 39.27 to get into today's final.

"My feet are hurting," Mayfield said after the second race. "I think I've got frost bite and my spikes are wet. The weather got to me on this one."

Midland High, too, had a roller-coaster ride that went down far more than up.

The Bulldogs lost state hopes in three events before its 1,600 relay team saved the day.

The MHS relay of Tim Warren, Charlie Juarez, Charles Christ and Roy Coats had the third fastest overall qualifying time with a 3:19.32. The senior Coats, who had over 900 yards rushing during the football season, ran a split time of 48.3 seconds to pull MHS from third to second on the anchor leg, finishing only behind district foe Odessa High in the heat.

"That leg felt really great," Coats said. "We've been having some great workouts for the region and this was what we wanted. We just need to come back and do it again."

But the rest of the day was meager for MHS. Christ, who was returning in the 800 meters for the second year, failed again to make the finals with a 2:02 in his race.

"He just didn't give any kick at the end. We really thought he would qualify for the finals this year," said MHS coach Monty Stumbaugh.

MHS senior Roy Ratliff, who set a school record of over 45-feet in the district meet's triple jump, could manage only 10th place with a 41-5¼, four feet under his best.

"It was so cold, I could never hit my mark just right," Ratliff said.

MHS senior Brian Danhof did make the finals in the shot put, but placed eighth with a 46-5, over four-feet below his district qualifying throw of 50-8, which would have placed fourth.

"It was not a good day," Danhof said. "I couldn't get loose, but even with the weather we had, you hate to end it like this."

Lee's sprint relay team had a 43.10, placing fourth overall and third in its heat with Jerry Stanford, Henry, Mayfield and Melvin Dunson. Dunson, who was suffered leg cramps at district, again seemed to pull up in the final stretch of this race, but it isn't expected to be serious for today.

"I can't believe we had 43 seconds," Stanford said, but Lee coach Mike Quimby stopped him with a, "That's what you can expect on a day like this. All we wanted today was to get into the finals and we did that."

District 4-5A did get its first state qualifier when Abilene High's Tasha Newman won the discus with a 134-6.

In another oddity, Amarillo High's Todd Pratt, who had a 7-1 first-place finish in the high jump at Midland's Tall City Relays, managed only 6-2 and didn't qualify for state with a third place finish.

But this was an odd day. Rain, sleet and hail greeted the early morning hours, focring postponement of all action until 3:30 p.m. Then the meet was a survival battle as 36 degree winds ripped at athletes, many of whom seemed to be thinking of a warm hideout instead of the balmy weather of Austin where state qualifiers will gather in two weeks.

Friday's Region I finals with state qualifiers and District 4-5A results:

Girls Division

Long Jump: 1. Kim Austin, Parkland, 18 feet, 8 inches; 2. Chanteau White, Allen, 18-7; 5. Vanessa Garcia, San Angelo, 17-0¼.

GOLF: Tennis, boys golf postponed Friday

(From 1D)

tion. Tournament officials have moved the tournament back one day with Friday's scheduled matches being played today and the championships and playbacks on Sunday.

The Region I-5A Girls Golf Tournament did brave the elements for nine holes Friday and will conclude with 18 holes beginning at 9 a.m. today.

"It's been a long day," said Lee girls golf coach Phyllis Sutton. "We were here at 7:30 this morning and then we were delayed three times before we played. We have made the trip to Lubbock and back about five times today."

The Lady Rebels withstood 36 degree temperatures and 10 degree wind chill factor to take second place after the first nine holes. District 4-5A rival San Angelo leads the group at 160 while Lee is at 167. Mansfield A is third at 170 with the rest of the field nine or more shots behind.

A deluge of water and foursomes backed up play. The tournament began at 2:45 p.m. with the final group ending at 6:15. As many as five groups were waiting at one tee box during the round because of slow play ahead.

Kim Fisher fired a 39 on the 5,118-yard, par-71 course to lead LHS.

"(My round) was OK, nothing spectacular," said Fisher. "It was so cold out there. There really wasn't any water standing on the course, but the wind and the cold..."

Balanced scoring was the key for the Lady Rebels in their quest for a second straight state tournament berth. Jennifer Dickson, Heather Albright and Kelly Thompson shot 43 while Kaimi Fuller posted a 42.

The medalist leader board looked liked the District 4-5A tournament two weeks ago. Defending region medalist April deVries of Abilene Cooper leads the field with a 36 while Kristin Kight of Odessa Permian and Julie McMahan of San Angelo are one shot back at 37.

Kasi Alexander of San Angelo is in fourth at 38 with Fisher and Amy Marsh of San Angelo are tied for fifth at 39.

Here are rain-shortened first round results of the Region I-5A Girls Golf Tournament played at Reese Golf Club Friday afternoon.

Team standings: 1. San Angelo Central 160, 2. Midland Lee 167, 3. Mansfield A 170, 4. Sherman 179, 5. Grapevine 183, 6. El Paso Coronado 184, 7. Amarillo High 185, 8. El Paso Ysleta Hanks 189, 9. OPENING: 57 years since last thoroughbred track

(From 1D)

"It's wild. Something that's been waiting 60 years to happen doesn't happen easily," Sam Houston vice president Ken Pearson said. "The Big Mo (momentum) is on now so you just need to get out of the way and let it happen."

Gov. Ann Richards was among the dignitaries in the winner's circle for opening ceremonies.

"Here we are opening the first thoroughbred race track in Texas," Richards said. "I think Sam Houston would have been real pleased. I believe he played the ponies a little bit."

General manager Jim Murphy estimated a first day handle of $1 million and said 16,568 fans were in attendance.

Pearson has shepherded construction of the track and was obviously proud of its opening.

"Being the first kid in your family, you are held to a different measure, because it's the first time around the block," Pearson said. "We anticipated that for this track and so we went to the extra effort to meet those expectations."

Sam Houston is the first of three Class I tracks in Texas. Others are planned near San Antonio and in Grand Prairie, near Dallas.

In Houston, fashion-conscious bettors lined up with those dressed in jeans and boots to place their wagers.

Fans watched from a three-tiered grandstand or walked outside near ground level with the horses. The infield has picnic areas and a children's playground.

"This whole place is patterned after someplace," Pearson said. "I think we can take credit, not for being great designers but great copiers. We picked the best features of about 15 tracks and put them all in a pot and stirred it."

The racing surfaces are a one-mile dirt track and a 7/8 mile turf track, that is still under construction. The airconditioned grandstand can hold 12,000 fans with a total capacity of 30,000.

There was grumbling about the opening-day admissions of $10 for general admissions and $25 for clubhouse entry for opening weekend. They'll drop to $3 and $5 next week.

Murphy said souvenir gifts and the enormity of the opening weekend, justified the added cost.

Officials also limited the opening day attendance because Murphy wanted to be sure the fans who did come were accommodated.

"We wanted to create an environment of catering to our fans," Murphy said. "We would have had problems accommodating 30,000 fans on the first day."

The first race on the 10-race program was named the Mesquite Handicap and was restricted for Texas-bred colts and geldings. Eleven horses were entered for the six-furlong event.

Sir Fitzwillie became the first horse in the winner's circle after living up to its reputation of being a late charger.

Prize Fight won the day's featured event, the $100,000 Governor's Day handicap.

COWBOYS: Switzer ready to start relationships

(From 1D)

He added, "Now, we get into what this job is all about — the coach-player relationship. That's what I've missed.

"The players have to be patient with me. I knew the names. I've got to put the faces with the names. We're looking for a comfort zone."

Switzer said the Cowboys will have as many camps as they did under Johnson.

"You practice like you play and play like you practice," Switzer said. "You bring that same level of intensity in practice that you need on Sunday. You don't go out in shorts on Sunday. You need those four or five second bursts in practice that you need in games.

"This staff knows how to work. I'm going to protect some players. If your premier players — the Emmitt Smiths, the Charles Haleys, Troy Aikmans — are going to get hurt, it's going to be on Sunday."

Quarterback Troy Aikman said Switzer has a lot to learn.

"The tough thing for him is going to be learning the NFL game," Aikman said. "It's a lot different from college. Everything speeds up. He's going to have a lot of game-day pressure on him.

"I think the players will like playing for coach Switzer," Aikman added. "He's always had an open-door policy. If you have a gripe with him, you can walk in his door and get it settled. I think his coaching style will help this team relax."

About Irvin throwing trash cans at the camera crew, Switzer laughed and said, "He'd be the first one to get mad if they didn't show him."

"Switzerland" has opened.

ROCKETS: Maxwell leads Houston

(From 1D)

problem is we got stagnant and just stood around."

Clyde Drexler led the Blazers with 26 points, including 12 in the third period when Portland got back into the game.

Houston led 64-55 at the half, but the Blazers outscored the Rockets 13-6 to start the third period, closing to 70-68 with 7:31 to go in the period.

Houston, which got 26 points from Hakeem Olajuwon, took a 90-83 advantage into the final quarter. Portland, which hadn't led since the opening basket, came back to lead 91-90 on Porter's basket with 8:42 to play.

"It was a good comeback, but we have a lot more work to do and didn't do it."

—Clyde Drexler

Chris Dudley tried to slow down Olajuwon, but it made little difference because of Maxwell's shooting.

"It's too bad the other guys came in and had wide open shots like Maxwell did," Dudley said. "You can't let him have uncontested shots from whatever distance."

The Rockets missed their first six shots of the fourth quarter, but they regained the lead on a pair of free throws by Mario Elie, setting the stage for Maxwell's spurt.

Porter finished with 21 points for the Blazers.

"It was a good comeback, but we have a lot more work to do and didn't do it," Drexler said. "He got really hot. He kind of fools you because he shoots so quick it's hard to recover. We need to stay closer to him, but I'm not sure we can."

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen scored 31 points and Scott Williams had 13 of his 21 in the final quarter Friday night as the Chicago Bulls began their quest for a fourth straight NBA title, beating the Cleveland Cavaliers 104-96.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 opening-round playoff series will be Sunday at Chicago Stadium.

The Cavaliers played without the heart of their inside game as John "Hot Rod" Williams, Brad Daugherty and Larry Nance watched from the bench in street clothes because of injuries.

And Mark Price, Cleveland's leading scorer averaging 17.3, managed just nine points. Gerald Wilkins led Cleveland with 23 points.

Pippen, who became the Bulls leader when Michael Jordan retired and then took up baseball, led a third-quarter surge and then had two spectacular baskets in the fourth quarter. He also finished with 12 rebounds. His 31 points were one short of his career playoff high.

Luc Longley's dunk, Pippen's assist to Horace Grant for a layup after a length-of-the-floor dribble and Pippen's three-point play highlighted an 11-4 run in the third quarter as the Bulls opened an eight-point lead.

Pippen finished the quarter with 11 points and Chicago led 76-71 with 12 minutes to play.

Cleveland closed within four in the final period but Williams scored eight straight for Chicago and the Bulls had an 88-79 lead with 6:44 left. Cleveland got within five but Pippen slammed home a miss by Williams and then made a steal and a double clutch dunk for a 92-83 lead with 4:51 left. He added another dunk and a driving basket as the Bulls surged ahead by 10 with 2:29 to go.

Williams' previous playoff high was 12 points.

Knicks 91, Nets 80

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing, surrounded by defenders for most of the game, led a decisive 10-0 fourth-quarter run that boosted the New York Knicks to a 91-80 victory over the New Jersey Nets in their playoff opener Friday night.

The Knicks, with Ewing missing 13 of his first 17 shots, trailed 68-64 before the veteran center started the winning burst with a three-point play. Charles Smith put New York ahead with a layup, and when he missed the ensuing free throw, Ewing made it 71-68 with an emphatic rebound dunk.

Ewing, who finished with 25 points and 13 rebounds, finished the run with an assist to a wide-open Greg Anthony for a 3-pointer, giving the Knicks a 74-68 lead with 7:03 left.

Neither team had a field goal over the next three minutes before Smith, who scored 11 of his 17 points in the final period, connected with 3:51 remaining, giving the Knicks a 77-69 lead.

Derrick Coleman scored 27 points for the Nets, who defeated New York in four of five regular-season games, although the Knicks won 12 more times overall to earn the No. 2 seeding position in the Eastern Conference.

Derek Harper finished with 14 points for New York, which plays host to the Nets in Game 2 of the best-of-5 series on Sunday. Kevin Edwards scored 15 for New Jersey, which shot 37 percent for the game.

The teams set an NBA record for fewest points in the first half of a playoff game as the Knicks took an 35-33 halftime lead. The previous mark was 69 points, by Syracuse and Fort Wayne in 1955 and Seattle and Utah in 1993.

Coleman had 16 points on 6-for-9 shooting at halftime, but his teammates had just 17 points and missed 19 of 25 shots. The Nets shot 35.3 percent with 12 turnovers in the first half.

The Knicks missed seven of their first eight shots before a 3-pointer by Harper and two left-handed layups by Hubert Davis keyed a 9-0 run that put them ahead 11-6. New York led 19-13 after one period, holding the Nets to 23.8 percent shooting.

New York started the second quarter 3-for-11, and New Jersey outscored the Knicks 15-7 for a 28-26 lead. Ewing then had two baskets as New York regained the lead at 35-31 with a 9-3 spurt.

Both teams picked up the scoring pace in the third quarter as each scored 28 points. New York made eight of its first 12 shots to take a 54-47 lead before New Jersey pulled ahead briefly with a 9-0 run.

Purdue's Robinson to make NBA decision

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Anticipating an offer he couldn't refuse complicated Glenn Robinson's decision to stay in college or go to the NBA.

It looks like he's about to take the offer and turn pro.

"There's a lot of speculation about what Glenn is going to say on Monday," said Ron Heflin, who coached Robinson at Gary Roosevelt High School.

"He's always said that he'd call a news conference if he decided to go to the NBA. He's not saying anything until then. You can read between the lines."

Robinson has scheduled a news conference for Monday afternoon at Roosevelt, the school he led to an Indiana high school championship before moving on to Purdue.

"It was a difficult decision for Glenn. There are a lot of things he had to consider. You don't know what is going to happen about a salary cap and Glenn was facing a 'Godfather' situation. It's pretty tough to walk away from an offer like people are saying he'll receive," said Heflin, who will attend the news conference along with Robinson's mother, Christine Bridgeman.

Robinson could be the top pick in the June 29 draft at the Hoosier Dome and speculated that he might sign a long-term contract worth about $100 million.

"He still wants a college degree. His parents still want him to get one, and I have no doubt that he can return to college to get his degree if he is leaving," Heflin said.

"Glenn is a special individual. He feels very close to his parents, and he's listened to them while making his decision. But, he's proven that he's the best player in college basketball and it may be time for him to move forward."

The 6-foot-8 forward, who led the nation with an average of 30.3 points and swept national college basketball player-of-the-year titles last season, declined to talk about his announcement.

"I've called a news conference. If I say now what I'm going to say, there wouldn't be any reason to have the news conference," he said.

Purdue coach Gene Keady also indicated that Robinson, who helped Purdue win the Big Ten championship last season and come within a victory of reaching the Final Four, would be wearing an NBA uniform next season.

"He's so caring about his coaches and his teammates and really wanted to stay, but he knew that wouldn't be very good for him financially or physically," Keady told The Indianapolis Star on Thursday. "If he wasn't a great person, he would have decided a long time ago or he would have gone last year. He's been a delight to coach."

Utah's Malone promises meaner attitude in next game with Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Karl Malone doesn't intend to let the San Antonio Spurs play more aggressively than his Utah Jazz.

Enough is enough, Malone declared Friday, promising to be rougher, meaner and sneakier when the Jazz face the Spurs for Game 2 in their best-of-5 Western Conference series Saturday.

"You do what you can get away with and the referees don't catch you. That's my attitude from now on," Malone said. "You can't be nice guys in the playoffs. I think you push it to the limit and see what you can get away with. You get caught, you get caught. If you don't, you keep doing it.

"That should be our attitude, because obviously it worked with them," he said. "That's the name of this game in the playoffs. Be as sneaky as you can be without getting caught."

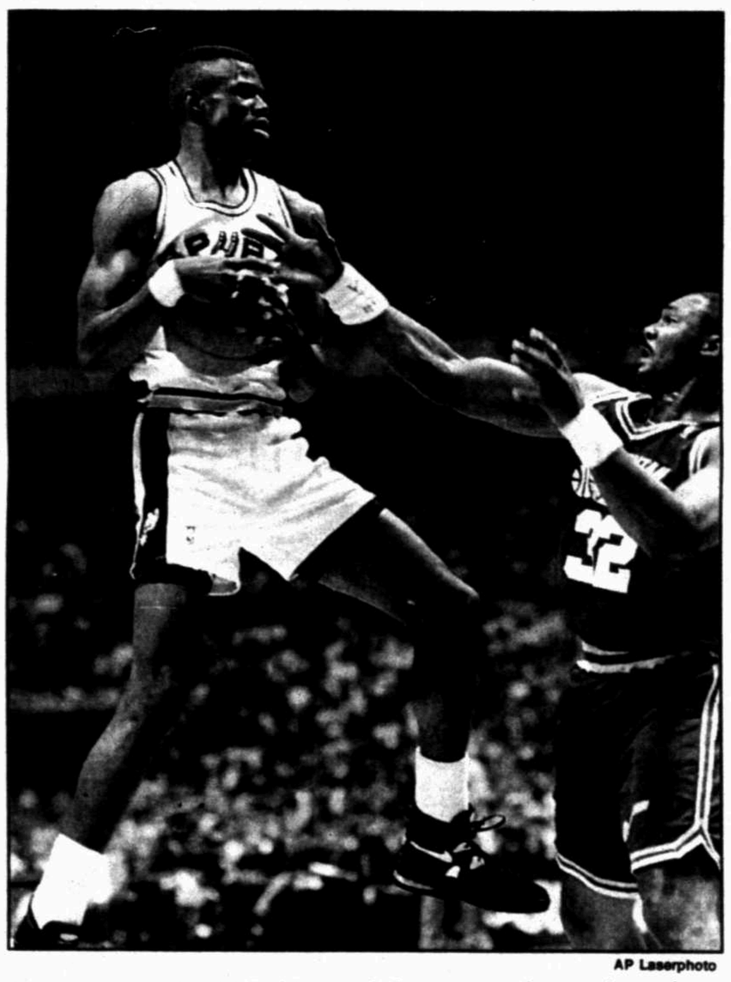

The Spurs, sneaky or not, defeated the Jazz 106-89 in Game 1 Thursday.

Malone's teammates agreed aggression is key — in addition to reducing the number of turnovers and getting more players to score more points.

"Unfortunately for us, we weren't aggressive at all. They were aggressive and they won the ballgame," Tyrone Corbin said.

Malone declined to cite specifics, but strongly suggested he wasn't pleased with some of the clashes among the players in Thursday's game.

"There are things in that game that happened that as competitors and as players we shouldn't forget that, and I know we won't," he said, declining to divulge the tactics he plans to use Saturday.

AP Laserphoto

San Antonio's David Robinson, left, goes up for a rebound as Utah's Karl Malone reaches in during the Spurs playoff win over the Jazz Thursday.

"I'm looking forward to Game 2," he said.

The Spurs say they are expecting anything but an easy game.

"Normally in these series, you have a blowout and then you have a tight game. We had a blowout. (Saturday) will be the tight game. They are going to come with a lot of aggression," Spurs coach John Lucas said.

The Spurs aren't counting on containing John Stockton the way they did Thursday, when Stockton scored a season-low three points on 1-of-4 shooting.

"They kept us off-balance and we weren't as patient with plays offensively as we could have been," Stockton said.

Spurs guard Vinny Del Negro expects Stockton to be ready Saturday.

"Sure, he's going to come back strong. He's a competitor. He's the key to their team," Del Negro said.

Jazz coach Jerry Sloan, who was ejected from Thursday's game after objecting to an offensive foul on Stockton, said he wants his team to play with more intensity and to commit fewer turnovers. The Jazz had 21 turnovers to the Spurs' nine in Game 1.

"We threw it away. We looked like we'd never seen a ball before," Sloan said.

Also important, said the Jazz, is getting more Utah players to score. Malone, the only Utah player scoring in double figures Thursday, led the Jazz with 36 points.

"You can't have one guy out there doing all the work like that. It's not fair to him," Corbin said. "We have to give him some support."

San Antonio also will look again for support for David Robinson, who had 25 points Thursday and was helped by four teammates who also scored in double figures.

Kite grabs two-shot lead over rookie in Houston Open

Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — Tom Kite used a five-hole run of four birdies and an eagle en route to a 7-under 65 Friday to grab a two-shot lead over rookie Mike Heinen after the second round of the Houston Open.

Kite was 1-under through 11 holes when he birdied No. 12, eagled the 13th and birdied the next three holes to reach an 11-under 133 after two trips through the Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

"All of a sudden the balls started going in," Kite said of his 30 on the back nine. "Why? I don't know. But I love it."

His 65 was the best round of the day.

Heinen, who opened at 67, shot a 4-under 68 in his second round. The 9-under 135 is his best so far during his first year on the PGA Tour.

First-round leader Andrew Magee, who shot 65 Thursday, soared to a 6-over 78 to put him at 1-under 143, 10 shots behind Kite.

Kite, who tops the all-time PGA money list with $8.8 million in winnings, never has won a tournament in his home state of Texas.

"Just winning means as much to me now as it ever has, probably more so because I got myself in a position to do some things that not many players have done," he said. "There's only 25 or 30 guys have won 20 tournaments. I've got 19."

As for a Texas victory, the Austin native said that too would be special.

"The people in Florida don't make a big deal out of winning Florida. People in California don't make a big deal out of winning in California. But we have our own little nation here in Texas ... and we make a much bigger deal out of it," he said. "No question I'd like to do it."

A victory by the unknown Heinen would not be unusual for the Houston tour stop. The last four winners of this tournament were first-time PGA winners.

Las Vegas Seniors

LAS VEGAS — Kermit Zarley and Larry Gilbert shot 6-under-par 66s Friday to share the lead after the first round of the Las Vegas Senior Classic.

Zarley, who led here last year after the first round, and Gilbert, coming off a victory last week at the Dallas Reunion Pro-Am, were two shots ahead of Jack Kiefer, George Archer and Raymond Floyd.

"I've been in the lead a lot of times before, including last year by four strokes, so I'm not that impressed with it," Zarley said of his first trip around the 6,963-yard TPC course at Summerlin. "I've led tournaments before out here and I've failed to win, but I'm looking forward to the future with more positive thoughts."

Zarley and Gilbert are among 56 players using the stadium layout for the first time since leaving the Desert Inn, which hosted the $900,000 tournament for eight years. They joined a field that includes all of the top 10 money-winners and 25 of the top 30.

LPGA-Sprint Championship

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Trish Johnson said she was lucky in the first round of the LPGA Tour's richest tournament. She improved her play to decent Friday and that meant a one-stroke lead halfway through the $1.2 million Sprint Championship.

Johnson's second-round 68 gave her a 9-under 135 total, one better than Michelle McGann, Sherri Steinhauer and Kelly Robbins.

"It's about time I started playing decent golf," said Johnson, who said she'd been lucky to shoot 67 Thursday.

"Today was the first day I've hit the ball like I'd like to," said Johnson, a native of England who has commuted weekly this month between the United States and Europe to play on both continents. "It was a lot tougher today because of the windy conditions."

Rangers winning streak ends

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Forget about 1993 and all the ugly years before, Kenny Lofton says. Those Cleveland Indians no longer exist.

"It's '94. A whole new year. We're basically expecting to win and not worrying about losing," Lofton said Friday night after his 12th-inning home run beat the Texas Rangers 5-4.

■ AL Roundup

It was the second time Lofton won an extra-inning game this season. He beat California with a home run in the 10th inning on April 13.

The Indians are 4-0 in extra-inning games; they were 2-12 last year.

"This team is a little more mature mentally, and they believe in themselves a little more," manager Mike Hargrove said. "That plays a role when you're trying to win close games."

Lofton stood near home plate and watched his drive off Jay Howell (2-1) sail into the right field seats. The home run, his third, came on a 3-1 pitch.

"It was 3-1, and he didn't want to walk me," said Lofton, the major league stolen base leader last year. "That's how I look at it."

The Indians, who are 8-3 on the road, improved to 5-5 at Jacobs Field. They ended the Rangers' three-game winning streak.

Jose Mesa (3-0) gave up one hit but struck out five of the other seven hitters he faced.

Cleveland starter Charles Nagy left with a 4-3 lead after limiting the Rangers to four hits through eight innings, but Steve Farr couldn't hold it. Jose Canseco started the Texas ninth with a walk and went to second on Will Clark's single, and after Farr struck out the next two hitters, Ivan Rodriguez tied it with an RBI single.

Rodriguez was booed every time he batted, because he put Cleveland shortstop Omar Vizquel on the disabled list with a hard slide breaking up a double play last week in Texas. Vizquel has a sprained knee.

Nagy hit Rodriguez with a pitch in the seventh inning. Rodriguez picked up the ball, flipped it back to Nagy and went on to first.

Tigers 4, White Sox 3

DETROIT — Kirk Gibson hit a two-run triple in the sixth inning Friday night, sending Detroit to a victory over Chicago.

Bill Gullickson (1-1) won for the second time in seven decisions against the White Sox, allowing two runs and eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. He walked four and struck out five.

Mike Henneman gave up an RBI single to Robin Ventura in the ninth but struck out Dan Pasqua with two runners on for his fourth save.

Jason Bere (2-1) lost for the first time since Aug. 8, snapping his streak of nine straight winning decisions. He gave up three runs and five hits, striking out nine in 6 1-3 innings.

Blue Jays 12, Twins 7

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Huff, subbing for Devon White, had three hits and tripled in two runs and Dick Schofield had four hits Friday night as the Toronto Blue Jays downed the Minnesota Twins 12-7.

Huff, who made his third start of the season when White was scratched just before the game with upper back soreness, walked twice and scored a run. Schofield, who entered the game batting .143, added two RBIs for the Blue Jays, who pounded out 16 hits off five pitchers.

Yankees 10, Athletics 6

OAKLAND, Calif. — Oakland matched its longest losing streak in 16 years Friday night as the New York Yankees, behind the hitting and defense of Luis Polonia, defeated the Athletics 10-6.

Polonia doubled three times, drove in three runs, scored twice, and made an over-the-fence grab in the first inning to rob Ruben Sierra of a three-run homer and extend the A's losing streak to 11. Oakland also dropped 11 straight from June 8-18, 1978.

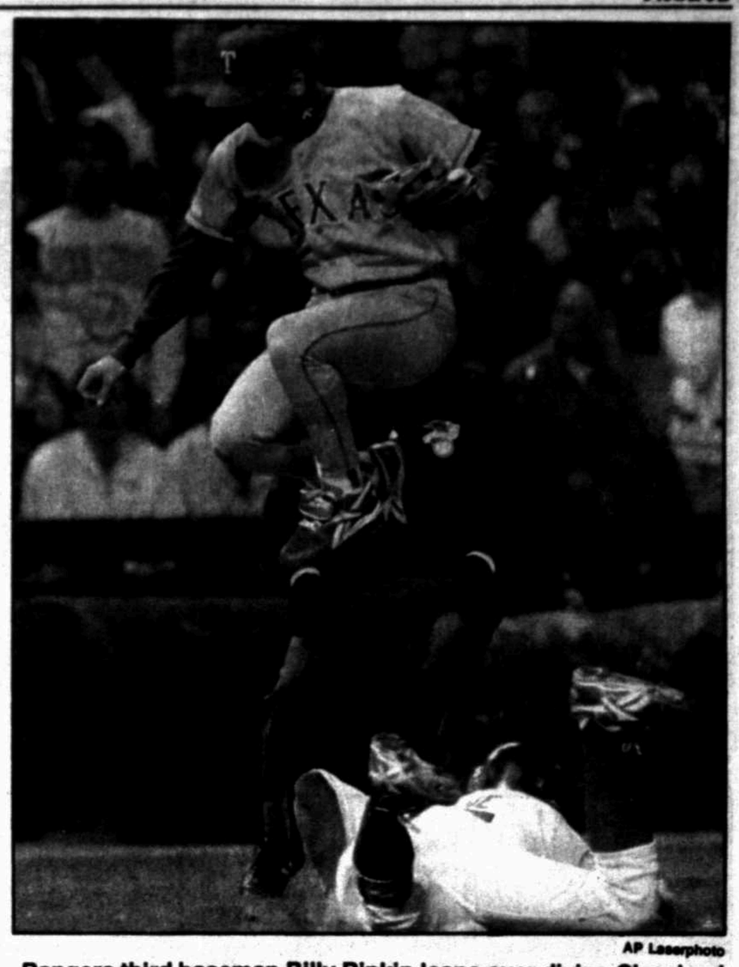

Jim Abbott (3-2) staggered through five innings, giving up four runs and eight hits. He had a career-high eight walks along with a wild pitch and a strikeout. Xavier Hernandez, the third Yankees pitcher, pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for his fourth save.

The Yankees knocked out Bob Welch (0-3) after 1 1-3 innings, his shortest start since June 30, 1984, when he worked one inning against the Chicago Cubs while with Los Angeles.

Welch lost his seventh straight, including his final four decisions of 1993. He allowed five runs and seven hits in 1 1-3 innings and his ERA ballooned to 8.18.

Polonia set the tone by doubling to open the game. Wade Boggs followed with an RBI single and scored on Paul O'Neill's single.

New York used a four-run second to open a 6-0 lead.

Bagwell double lifts 'Stros in 10th

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell doubled to the wall in left with two outs in the 10th inning, driving home the winning run in the Houston Astros' 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Friday night.

Craig Biggio walked with two outs before Bagwell lined a double over the head of Bernard Gilkey. Biggio easily beat the throw home, making a winner of Mike Hampton (1-0).

Rich Rodriguez (1-1) took the loss despite allowing only one hit — Bagwell's game-ending double.

Todd Zeile hit his seventh homer of the season and drove in all three runs for the Cardinals. The homer was his fourth in his last nine at-bats against Houston and his fifth in the last eight games. Prior to this season, only six of his 51 career home runs were hit in April.

■ NL Roundup

Pirates 8, Braves 5

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh continued to torment Atlanta, getting four RBIs from Jeff King and a strong start from previously winless Steve Cooke to beat the Braves.

The Braves are 15-7 but have lost three of four to Pittsburgh.

Phillies 6, Giants 3

PHILADELPHIA — Mariano Duncan hit a three-run homer and Ben Rivera pitched seven strong innings as Philadelphia ended its five-game losing streak with a victory over San Francisco.

Rivera (2-1) allowed only three hits, struck out three and walked four. He retired the first 12 batters he faced before Matt Williams walked in the fifth and Barry Bonds followed with his sixth homer of the season for a 2-1 lead.

Expos 3, Padres 1

MONTREAL — Kirk Rueter became the first major league pitcher since Fernando Valenzuela in 1981 to start his career with a 10-0 record, leading Montreal past San Diego.

The 23-year-old left-hander struck out seven and didn't walk a batter in outduelling Padres starter Andy Benes (1-5).

Mets 6, Dodgers 4

NEW YORK — Cory Snyder, playing out of position at second base, had an error on Jose Vizcaino's eighth-inning grounder, allowing two runs to score as New York rallied to beat Los Angeles.

Los Angeles manager Tommy LaSorda moved Snyder from right field to the infield on a double-switch, and the move ended up costing the Dodgers the game.

Reds 8, Marlins 5

MIAMI — Brian Dorsett had a pair of RBI doubles to lead Cincinnati to a victory over Florida.

Dorsett's first double came in the sixth inning and drove in Tony Fernandez to make it 5-3. After the teams exchanged runs in the seventh, Dorsett again brought Fernandez home with a two-base hit, making it 7-4 in the eighth.

All-American AT&T semifinals set

DULUTH, Ga. — MaliVai Washington beat Andre Agassi 6-4, 7-5 Friday night to reach the semifinals of the $300,000 AT&T Challenge.

An all-American semifinal round had already been assured earlier Friday when top-seeded Michael Chang, No. 2 Todd Martin and qualifier Wade McGuire advanced with victories over Swedish opponents.

Facing a tennis-style mirror image of himself, Chang defeated qualifier Christian Bergstrom 6-1, 6-3, while Martin toppled Mats Wilander 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) and McGuire rolled past Lars Jonsson 6-3, 6-2.

Washington, the fifth seed, relied on strong serves and crisp, attacking ground strokes in the 92-minute match to beat No. 3 Agassi for the first time in four meetings.

Citizens Cup

HAMBURG, Germany — Steffi Graf dropped her second set of the year as she struggled to beat Magdalena Maleeva 7-5, 3-6, 6-0 in the quarterfinals of the Citizen Cup.

Graf ran her winning streak to 35 matches, but the world's top-ranked player appeared in danger of losing her first match in 1994 after being beaten by Maleeva in the second set.

Graf's semifinal opponent will be Czech Jana Novotna, the third seed, who ousted Germany's Barbara Rittner 6-2, 6-2.

Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario also advanced by edging Georgia's Leila Meskhi, 6-2, 7-6 (7-3) and will face Sabine Hack. In an all-German duel, Hack bested Anke Huber, 6-3, 6-3.

■ Tennis Roundup

BMW Open

MUNICH, Germany — Michael Stich, the world's second-ranked player, reached the semifinals of the BMW Open by battling past South Africa's Wayne Ferreira 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 7-6 (7-1).

Korda beat fourth-seeded Sweden's Magnus Gustafsson 6-4, 6-4. Karbacher slipped past Israel's Amos Mansdorf 6-3, 7-5, in a battle of two unseeded players.

Braves outfielder Justice won't be outshined by wife

ATLANTA — Not to be outdone by his wife, Atlanta Braves outfielder David Justice made People magazine's "most beautiful" list.

Justice

When actress Halle Berry made the list last year, she talked about her 6-foot-3, 200-pound husband. "When I saw him I had cardiac arrest, he was so gorgeous," she said.

The latest "most beautiful" issue was due on newsstands this weekend. Berry said Justice's most notable feature is his legs, especially when he's wearing Mickey Mouse boxer shorts.

Justice told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution he was a skinny kid, "but I always had legs."

NEW YORK — Before her "Picket Fences" days, Kathy Baker earned an advanced degree from the Cordon Bleu school of cuisine. Unfortunately, her children are more likely to get fast food than French food.

Baker

"I get them fed," the actress says in Sunday's Parade magazine. "That's enough!"

A French major at the University of California, Berkeley, Baker studied pastry cooking at the Cordon Bleu in Paris for two years. She earned a Grande Diplome.

As star of the CBS-TV series, Baker has little time for fancy cooking these days, with two active children and an equally active career.

"I always say I have to go to work to get some rest," she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Former President Bush is an Amy Grant fan and says gospel music "brings out the very best in people."

Bush appeared on tape Thursday night during the 25th annual Gospel Music Association's Dove Awards. Grant was the host. He recounted a performance Grant gave at Camp David.

"She touched our souls and our hearts," Bush said.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Rocker John Mellencamp has a boy!

Hud J. Mellencamp was born Wednesday night at Bloomington Hospital. He weighed in at 9 pounds, 4½ ounces.

Mellencamp

Son and mother, model Elaine Irwin, were fine, said Mellencamp spokesman John Reilly.

Mellencamp, 42, has three daughters from previous marriages and one granddaughter. He married Irwin in 1992. They live part-time in the Bloomington area.

NEW ORLEANS — An exhausted Grateful Dead singer Bob Weir has stopped truckin'.

A spokeswoman says the 46-year-old Weir canceled shows through May because he was worn out by an extensive spring tour with the Dead.

Included in the cancellations were two performances at the 25th annual New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival: on Thursday with bassist Rob Wasserman, and Friday with Wasserman, Little Feat and Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown.

The Stephen Stills Band was scheduled to replace Weir in the Friday night show.

ARLINGTON, Va. — The Duchess of York says she hasn't made many friends on a trip to Washington but that's because she's been on a soapbox for people with Lou Gehrig's disease.

"All I have done is stood up after the main course and told them that they must listen," Sarah Ferguson said Thursday night at a reception for the Amytrophic Lateral Sclerosis Association. "I say, 'When you get in your car tonight, just remember how lucky you are to be able to get in your car.'"

The duchess spent more than an hour meeting and talking to people at the association's reception in this Washington suburb. Shaking hands, touching shoulders, she stopped and posed for pictures with dozens of ALS patients, many of them in electric carts.

She recalled how she became involved six years ago in helping people with ALS, a debilitating neurological disease named for the baseball great.

Boston eliminates champ Canadiens

■ NHL Playoffs

BOSTON — Boston scored three times between the pads of a shaky Patrick Roy as the Bruins eliminated the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens with a 5-3 seventh-game playoff victory Friday night.

It was the first time a defending champion was knocked out in the first round since Calgary lost in 1990.

Boston led 4-0 early in the second period and 5-1 in the third before Montreal rallied on goals by Kevin Haller with 6:48 left and Mike Keane with 5:17 to go.

The Bruins begin the second round Sunday against the New Jersey Devils, who beat Buffalo 2-1 in another Game 7 showdown Friday night.

Roy, who missed Montreal's Game 3 loss because of an appendicitis attack, had been sensational in stopping 99 of 102 shots in Montreal's wins in Games 4 and 5. But he lost Game 6 and allowed four goals on Boston's first 16 shots Friday.

The Bruins, starting more aggressively than Montreal, led 2-0 after the first period on goals by Glen Murray and Ted Donato. Goals by Adam Oates on a power play and Fred Knipscheer made it 4-0 at 4:22 of the second period.

Vincent Damphousse, who led Montreal with 40 regular-season goals, got his first of the playoffs at 5:44 of the second. Ray Bourque made it 5-1 at 5:03 of the third.

Boston goalie Jon Casey played his third straight strong game after being benched for the third and fourth games. He stopped 26 shots as Boston won its fourth straight playoff series against Montreal.

Devils 2, Sabres 1

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Devils ended four years of first-round playoff frustration by outlasting the Buffalo Sabres and Dominik Hasek 2-1 Friday night in Game 7 of a marathon Eastern Conference quarterfinal series.

Claude Lemieux, who provided the game-winner for New Jersey in Game 5, came through again by snapping a second-period tie to send the Devils into the best-of-7 conference semifinal against Boston, starting Sunday at East Rutheford.

New Jersey didn't get to the next round until Buffalo's Dale Hawerchuk was stopped by goaltender Martin Brodeur with 16 seconds to play after a fine backhand setup by Alexander Mogilny.

The Bruins eliminated Montreal in seven games with a 5-3 victory Friday night.

While the Devils won Game 7, the series may very well be remembered for Game 6. Buffalo won the game 1-0 in four overtimes to force a deciding game but in the process they may have used all their energy.

The Sabres managed just 18 shots on Brodeur and really struggled from the second period on. Only Hasek kept them in the game, stopping one shot after another in finishing with 44 saves. He had 70 saves on Wednesday night.

Irvan not trying to replace fallen Allison

■ Winston Select 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Ernie Irvan isn't trying to make anybody forget Davey Allison.

Quite the contrary. Irvan, who replaced Allison after the latter was killed in a helicopter crash last July at Talladega Superspeedway, wants the people who loved and admired Davey to be part of any success he has with the Robert Yates Racing team.

Allison lived in Hueytown, Ala., about 65 miles from Talladega, and this was his home track.

In the Yates team's return to Talladega for Sunday's Winston Select 500, Irvan, who won the race last year while driving for Morgan-McClure Racing, gave his new team's fans something to shout about by winning the pole position on Friday with a lap of 193.298 mph.

"We've got to do something to prove ourselves to the fans, to prove we deserve their support," Irvan said after taking his 13th career pole and third for this race. "Some of the most loyal fans are here."

Irvan stepped into the team's Fords last September at Darlington. Despite almost immediate success, with two victories before the end of the 1993 season, there were plenty of people who would have preferred Yates had hired another driver.

"No matter who went into this car, there would be someone who wasn't happy," said Irvan, who has added two more victories already this season and leads the Winston Cup standings. "But a lot of people are changing their minds. We're getting letters now saying things like 'Ernie was the right choice.' That makes everybody on the team feel good.

"Coming down here and getting all the fan support that's sticking with the Robert Yates Racing team is meaning a lot," Irvan added. "For us to come back down here and get the pole — I couldn't hear the crowd, but some people said they were cheering. If they were or not, we were happy.

"I know it's going to make Robert and (crew chief) Larry (McReynolds) and all the guys feel good because they've been through some tough times, just like all the people in Alabama's been through some tough times. We're going to give them something to hang on to."

Irvan's second pole of the year extended Ford's season-long string of poles to nine in a row. In fact, Thunderbirds took the top three positions and five of the top six, with only defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt's Chevrolet Lumina, fourth at 192.726, breaking the Ford domination.

"The odds are strong the Fords are going to win the poles because there's so many more of them," Irvan said.

But, using that logic, T-Birds should also be dominating the races, and Ford and Chevy have split the first eight events this season.

"We probably should have won all the races," Irvan said. "Ford's been in the hunt all the time. Basically, though, you don't know the difference. Both cars are good and both cars are fast."

Rookie Loy Allen Jr., who won poles earlier this season at Daytona and Atlanta, was the only driver close to Irvan on Friday, turning a lap of 193.193. He was followed by Todd Bodine at 192.874.

Earnhardt, who won the pole last year at 192.355, was followed by the Fords of Jimmy Spencer at 192.145 and Greg Sacks at 192.054.

Rounding out the top 10 were Ken Schrader's Chevy at 191.792, the Pontiac Grand Prix of Michael Waltrip at 191.627 and the Luminas of Dale Jarrett (191.489) and Daytona 500 winner Sterling Marlin (191.436).

Marlin is the only driver so far with at shot at the Winston Million bonus, a prize of $1 million that goes to a driver winning any three of NASCAR's Big Four events — the Daytona 500, the Winston Select 500, The Coca-Cola 600 and the Southern 500. Victories in two of those events is worth $100,000.

Among the drivers who failed to make the top 20 on Friday was Geoff Bodine, who was expected to be among the top qualifiers. Bodine's engine blew seconds after he took the green flag, forcing him to wait until second-round qualifying on Saturday to try to make the 40-car lineup.

Among the 47 other drivers who made qualifying attempts on Friday, Brett Bodine, Jeff Gordon and Wally Dallenbach Jr. were outside the top 40, while Terry Labonte, Dick Trickle and Bobby Labonte qualified 34th or lower.

The drivers who were not among the top 20 will have the option Saturday of standing on their Friday laps or trying again.

Texas tornado's survivors recall tragedy

By Tim Madigan
Associated Press

LANCASTER — As Dorothy Stricklin lay buried in the rubble of her home Monday night, she realized she was not alone.

A few feet away, a neighbor had been deposited in her living room, still in his easy chair, by the tornado blamed for three deaths. The killer storm also shattered Lancaster's historic business district, and razed the leafy neighborhood where Stricklin had lived for more than 40 years.

Stricklin's visitor was badly hurt but alive, the woman in her 80s later told friends. She consoled the man by patting his foot, and urged rescuers to dig him out before her.

"But don't let the ambulance leave without me," she reportedly told emergency workers.

Across the street, Ronnie Mitschke's late dinner of steak and potatoes was still cooking when the tornado hit, transforming the Dallas security worker's leisurely evening into one in which the unspeakable became commonplace.

Until about 9:20 p.m. Monday, Mitschke, his wife Judy and their two young children shared a yellow wood-frame home in a quiet neighborhood just off Lancaster's historic town square. Then came the storm, ruthlessly destructive even by tornado standards.

"The more I've thought about it, the more I keep seeing cars coming down on top of us," said Mitschke, who huddled in a bedroom closet with his family when the tornado turned his home into a twisted mass of lumber and broken family artifacts. Mitschke, a stout 30-year-old with red hair, suffered broken ribs and several bruises.

His family was unhurt.

"We should be dead," he said. "Tell me how four people lived?"

Similar questions were uttered up and down Lancaster's battered streets yesterday, where the hot afternoon air of The Day After smelled of dripping sap from hundreds of broken and uprooted trees, where shocked residents spoke of miraculous survivals and heartbreaking, mystifying deaths.

From another house in the neighborhood, Rable Cobb, a 74-year old woman who lived alone, told relatives in a telephone call that she was taking shelter in an interior hallway.

"I said, 'Mother, a storm's coming your way.' She said it was calm," Dorothy Aldridge said.

"I laughed about it and she did too. I asked her if she knew what to do and she said, 'Yes, I know what to do,'" Aldridge said.

A short time later, Cobb's body was found near an overturned bathtub amid the wreckage of a house a half block away. The woman's dwelling was reduced to bare concrete slab. Her new brown Ford Tempo was nowhere to be seen.

Aldridge said she learned of the devastation yesterday morning when she awoke, turned on the television and saw the grisly pictures.

She said she immediately knew her mother was in trouble. "As soon as I heard where it hit, I knew," Aldridge said.

Before the devastation began, Mitschke was waiting to eat, and for the end of the rain delay in the Texas Rangers' baseball game when news reports told of nearby tornadoes. He huddled his family in the master bedroom closet when the stormy night turned eerily quiet, punctured by wailing warning sirens.

His children, daughter K.C., 3, and son, Ronnie, 2, were covered in a mattress.

"The other times when the siren went off and we went in the closet, other people thought we were paranoid," Mitschke said. "Now we're still alive."

Mitschke had just quieted his children so he could hear the radio when the tornado hit.

"The lights went off, the train came through, the ears popped, and literally, we felt the house rolling into a ball," Mitschke said. "We were in an interior closet, and the next thing I knew, I was outside and the roof was laying across my body."

Mitschke watched a neighbor's red Camaro spin 25 feet in the air and land on top of two other vehicles, all three resting on the rubble of what had been his house. A tree whizzed by his face. His ears were clogged with flying dirt. When the tornado finished its grim business, Mitschke, his family and what was left of his home had moved 30 feet.

"It honestly probably didn't last 15 seconds, but it felt like 15 minutes," he said. "I was praying every prayer that I could think of. I couldn't see how we were going to survive."

But Mitschke was able to free himself quickly from the rubble, prying his body from beneath his roof. His wife freed herself from beneath a tree, and pulled her children from under the mattress covered by debris.

"We walked arm and arm, like we were going back down the aisle again, from the debris to the street," Mitschke said. "There were a lot of hugs and some tears."

Mitschke left his family with friends at the end of the block and returned to his darkened neighborhood, helping to pull people from crumpled houses up and down his street. Constant lightning provided the only illumination.

"We yelled and if someone yelled back, you ran," Mitschke said. "You didn't care what you were running through, just to see what you could do."

At one point, Mitschke followed voices into the rubble and found an elderly man missing much of one [illegible] flash of lightning, the rescuer saw the mangled body of an elderly woman, lying just a few feet away. Mitschke said he was certain she was dead.

"He kept asking me where his wife was," Mitschke said. "He was five feet away from her, but pretty much didn't know where she was and I pretty much didn't want to tell him."

Mitschke said he alerted firefighters to the injured man and his wife.

It was after 1 a.m. before he left what emergency workers began to refer to as the "War Zone."

He returned in midafternoon, the surreal scene around him underlining the horror of the night before.

Remaining trees had been stripped not only of their leaves and limbs but their bark. Cars were overturned and piled one atop another. Women's and children's shoes, bed springs, books, baby toys, baseball bats, afghans, umbrellas, doorknobs and T-shirts were mixed with the mud and splintered lumber.

Mitschke's dazed neighbors dug through the wreckage against the incessant drone of chain saws. The sun bore down on the neighborhood now without shade. Mitschke paused for a drink of water, pointing to two dresser drawers that he and his family had managed to fill

Childcare DIRECTORY

As a childcare provider, you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by their parents and loved ones. For this reason we will be publishing our semi-annual Childcare Directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, May 15, 1994.

Midland area parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to good, safe, quality childcare. This section focuses on just that and gives the basic "who, what, where and when" of the quality providers in our area. As a provider you can reach parents with more information about the services that you provide by placing an ad in this Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 15th.

We offer advertising packages that range from 8" to 65" and include not only your advertisement but a photo about/of your facility, a story about your facility and a dot on the area map that indicates where you are located. We also offer rates for an advertisement only without the package plan. Plan to advertise you childcare facility on May 15th. To reserve space please call:

687-8813

Deadline for this section is May 9, 1994
