Four-year-old Sherie Shelburne points to her picture on a poster being distributed nationally by the Department of Health and Human Services. Sherie has biliary atresia, a rare liver disorder, and is currently on a waiting list to undergo liver transplant surgery. She is the daughter of Richard and Judy Shelburne.

Midland girl on organ poster

A Midland girl will be featured on a poster to be distributed nationally as part of a public education campaign by Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler, said Richard Shelburne, the girl's father.

"We just received the poster Wednesday," said Shelburne. "We also got a letter from Heckler's office telling about the campaign."

Richard and Judy Shelburne are the parents of 4-year-old Sherie, who is awaiting a liver donor for a transplant operation at Dallas' Childrens Medical Center. According to Shelburne, President Reagan's efforts in locating a donor for a 14-month-old Florida boy, Ryan Osterblom, spurred him to write the president to bring attention to the hundreds of other children also in need of an organ transplant.

"The letter was sort of a spur of the moment thing," said Shelburne of the April 10 correspondance. That letter resulted in a reply from the White House and lead to Shelburne's involvement with the national education program and a chance to testify before a national task force set up to investigate organ transplantation. Sherie is one of 28 children pictured on the poster to be distributed to U.S. senators and representatives and to hospitals, libraries and other public places.

THE LETTER READS: "It was very nice of you to ask your press secretary to make an appeal for a liver to be donated to the child in Florida, recently. However, it was very thoughtless of you to ignore the hundreds of other children needing liver transplants in the next 12 to 18 months, and many are needing transplants very badly or they will die soon. The child in Florida is just one of many. Please do not overlook many other children needing transplants. Consider the possibility that one of your grandchildren may some day need a transplant. God forbid, but if it does occur, you too, will want any help you can get.

"Please help the hundreds of children suffering needlessly. A few words from you could mean life and death for these kids. Literally. Please don't turn your back on these children desperately needing your help. Please help these children, Mr. Reagan."

Roswell bank now open after failure

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

ROSWELL, N.M.— Moncor Bank of Roswell reopened with a new name and new ownership this morning after being declared insolvent Thursday by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The bank's closing followed by two weeks the failure of the much larger Moncor Bank of Hobbs, N.M. The two banks' holding company, Moncor Inc., filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in Albuquerque on Aug. 29, the day before the Hobbs bank was declared insolvent.

At its closing, the Roswell bank had $31.5 million in assets and $32.2 million in liabilities. Of its $22 million in loans, about $6.5 million were classified as problem loans by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

"No money was lost through this transaction by any depositors," said Closing Manager John Vella, who is supervising a task force of about 50 FDIC employees, mostly from Midland. The group will work through the weekend, then a staff of five will remain for about two months to complete the work, Vella said.

The $24 million belonging to the bank's 1,400 depositors was guaranteed by the FDIC, including $466,000 in uninsured funds from the 25 depositors with more than $100,000 in their accounts, Vella said.

Rio Grande Bancshares of Las Cruces outbid four other institutions, paying a $505,000 premium for the Moncor bank, which reopened as First National Bank of Chaves County.

Vella attributed the bank's failure to "depletion of capital due to non-performance of loans." The Hobbs bank's failure had been attributed in part to bad energy loans, but the Roswell bank's loan portfolio was not heavily dependent upon any one area, he said. And while the Hobbs bank lost $42 million in deposits during its last week, "There hasn't been a serious run" in Roswell, Vella said.

According to one of the bank's directors, Moncor Bank was under too much pressure from Moncor Inc. to expand as rapidly as possible.

"A lot of it (the bank's problems) was from the holding company," said Loretta Mathis. "We're not unique - we just happen to be smaller and couldn't take the loss."

Moncor's employees seemed unsurprised by the bank's failure.

"They knew it's been coming for a long time," said one woman who declined to give her name. "It was just a matter of when."

Since the bank was among the smaller of the city's nine financial institutions, its failure wasn't expected to have much of an impact on the local economy, according to Janet Seagrave, director of economic development for the Roswell Chamber of Commerce.

She said Moncor "has been an extremely aggressive bank in our community," and added its failure may be less due to its own management than to "having to carry the ticket" for Moncor Inc.'s problems with its Albuquerque bank.

Moncor was once the third-largest bank holding company in New Mexico, with banks in Ruidoso, Rio Rancho and Carlsbad as well as in Albuquerque, Hobbs and Roswell. Thursday's action left it without a single bank, though it retains four other subsidiaries: Moncor Real Estate Investment Corp., New Mexico Trust and Financial Services Inc., Moncor Mortgage Co. and Moncor Life Co.

The closing attracted no crowds of worried depositors, though one woman who worked next door asked a man leaving the bank if her money was safe.

"It's an unusual situation," said Jane Miller after being reassured about her account. "Moncor was spreading kind of fast - maybe too fast."

Rainfall totals 1.13 inches

From Staff Reports

More than an inch of rain was reported around the city during a heavy thunderstorm that passed through Midland Thursday evening, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

"The highest amount recorded fell right here at the airport," said a spokesman for the NWS. "We received 1.13 inches of precipitation."

The deluge, which left many residents driving through deep water, accounted for 86.2 percent of this month's precipitation, bringing the total to 1.31 inches. The average amount for September is 2.08 inches, according to the NWS. "It would only take one more good one like last night to put us past the norm," said the spokesman.

The storm was the result of a cool front that came through during the evening, according to the spokesman. "We've had the moisture hanging around for the past week, but the cool front from the west triggered the storm."

The NWS also predicted that continued humidity combined with warm temperatures may produce scattered thunderstorms during the weekend.

According to Texas Electric Service Co., there were no major disruptions of service due to the storm, although "normal lightning-related" incidents were reported.

Ariane rocket destroyed as it veers toward crash

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — An Ariane rocket from the European Space Agency's launch site in South America veered downward toward a populated area minutes after take-off, forcing technicians to destroy it, officials said.

The Ariane-3 rocket was carrying one American and one European communications satellite insured for a total of $145 million. Both of them were destroyed along with the launcher late Thursday.

The explosion marked the Ariane's third failure in 15 launches, and was a setback for the European challenge to the U.S. space shuttle as a means of placing commercial satellites into orbit.

Ariane had been successful in its previous nine launches, and had placed 14 satellites in orbit since June 1983.

"It's obviously a great disappointment," said Frederic d'Allest, president of Arianespace, the commercial arm of the 11-nation European Space Agency.

Space center technicians said their radar screens detected a change in Ariane's trajectory and a slow drop in its altitude beginning about seven minutes after take-off.

About three minutes later, the rocket was ordered destroyed.

D'Allest said a combustion problem had apparently developed in the third-stage engine. He said technicians would sift through computer data to determine why the rocket failed.

"We have had nine successive successes. The tenth launch was a failure and we are going to quickly set about determining the causes," he said.

The ruined satellites were the ECS-3, belonging to the European Communications Satellites series and insured for $65 million, and the American Spacenet-3, built by RCA for GTE Spacenet and insured for $80 million.

European Space Agency officials did not provide details of how the rocket had deviated from its prescribed course or how far it had dropped before it was ordered destroyed.

Steep decline felt in August wholesale prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by falling food and fuel costs, wholesale prices skidded down 0.3 percent in August, the steepest drop in more than 2½ years, the Labor Department said today.

The decline in the Producer Price Index — the fourth in the last 12 months — means wholesale prices have risen at an annual rate of just 0.8 percent so far this year.

Some analysts are starting to hold out the prospect of plunging commodity prices holding the final 1985 wholesale inflation rate even below the 0.6 percent increase in 1983 — which was the smallest since 1964.

One analyst, Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University, is now forecasting a 0.5 percent wholesale-price inflation rate for all of 1985.

Prices at the wholesale level rose 1.7 percent last year. As for last month's drop, prices overall have not fallen at such a pace since the 0.7 percent decline registered in January 1983.

The August index showed food costs dropping 0.7 percent, following a 1.3 percent increase in July that was the sharpest rise in a year. That big July increase was due largely to a 22.2 percent rise in fresh vegetable prices. By contrast, fresh vegetable prices declined 14.8 percent last month.

Gasoline prices, down 1.4 percent in July, fell 2.1 percent last month.

Changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. However, the Consumer Price Index, due out later this month, checks a broader range of items.

Inflation at the retail level is running at an annual rate of 3.7 percent so far this year, compared to a 4 percent increase for all of 1984.

The index for consumer goods other than food and energy showed no change, after three months of modest increases.

Magazine pulls officer's account of crash

IRVING (AP) — A police officer, shaken by the experience of pulling bodies from the wreckage of Delta Flight 191 after the Aug. 2 crash at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, sat down and wrote a gripping, first-person article that Texas Monthly magazine immediately bought and accepted for publication.

The story won't be published in the October issue as planned, however, a Texas Monthly editor said Thursday, because of the officer's distraught plea that the article be scuttled.

"It's an excellent article — one of those pieces you read and you don't forget. It's very honest, very close to his own voice," executive editor Dominique Browning said.

The article was killed at the last minute because it apparently violated Irving Police Department policies, the magazine's editors and Irving police officials said.

Editor Gregory Curtis said officer Roy Burson submitted the article, but later learned that publication would subject him to punishment.

Lt. James Simon of the internal affairs division of the Irving Police Department said Burson failed to receive advance permission before submitting the article. Publication would violate a policy that prohibits officers from using information acquired from their job, Simon said.

"An officer can't write about things he is involved in, whether it be in the criminal, civil or administrative vein," Simon said.

After submitting the article and having it accepted, Burson was denied permission to get it published, Simon said.

Texas Monthly could have published the 45-inch article anyway, but chose to comply with Burson's wishes, Curtis said.

"He was distraught and upset and wanted to know if I could please not print the story," Curtis told The Dallas Morning News. Burson called last week as the magazine was being sent to the printers, Curtis said.

Burson said Thursday he had nothing to say about the article or the situation.

"I'm not hiding anything. I just can't talk," Burson told the News.

SHERIE

Shelburne stated that he didn't actually expect to hear from the president, but did get a reply in early July. The White House response follows.

"Thank you for writing to President Reagan about the pleas recently made on behalf of individual Americans in need of liver transplants. Please understand that although these pleas are made on behalf of a particular child, the intent is to focus awareness of the general public on a personal level to the need for organ donations to help save precious lives. For example, publicity from the most recent plea led directly to the donation of a liver for another child. We have found that when appeals are made on behalf of an individual, organ donation goes up.

"We, too, are interested in improving the effectiveness and fairness of the organ donor networks. Toward this end, we are currently implementing the National Organ Transplant Act which has established a Task Force to look at the various networks, and to provide advice and guidance on how they might be improved to make them more efficient and effective to serve all Americans — young and old — in need.

"Again, thank you for your interest in the many children needing organs for transplantation. Please be assured that special appeals for organ donors for specific recipients are intended to be used as symbols for all our citizens awaiting needed donated organs for transplantation."

THE LETTER was signed by Anne Higgins, special assistant to the president and director of correspondence.

As a result of Shelburne's letters, which also includes several to other legislative and governmental leaders including Ms. Heckler and State Rep. Tom Craddick, Sherie was picked to appear on the poster along with 28 other children from around the country who are currently awaiting organ transplants.

Sherie has biliary atresia, a destructive disease of the bile duct system that occurs in one out of every 10,000 births. She is "at the top of the list" to receive a liver transplant at the Dallas facility, according to her parents.

According to Kathleen J. Robichaud, of the Health and Human Services pediatric program, the children were chosen by the American Council on Transplantation and the Children's Transplant Association to appear on the poster. It will be distributed through the assistance of the American Association of Critical Care Nurses and "other committed groups," including the Boy Scouts of America, National Association of School Nurses, as well as the families in their own communities.

"Please feel free to use your ...posters to increase public awareness for the issue and for your own child," wrote Ms. Robichaud to Shelburne. "The children on the poster will become national symbols of the many children waiting now and in the future for transplantation surgery."

According to a report by the Health and Human Services department, more than 308 people received liver transplants in the U.S. by the end of 1984 with 300 more awaiting the surgery. The transplants averaged between $135,000 and $238,000.

The public education campaign is in conjunction with the formation of a 25-member task force appointed by Ms. Heckler recently, whose purpose will be "to help make available human organs for transplantation."

"THE FACT that we currently have over 8,000 people on waiting lists demonstrates that the system of procurement needs to work better," wrote Ms. Heckler in a recent governmental publication. "I am confident that in the not too distant future, we will have recommendations by the task force to significantly increase the availability of human organs."

The task force, which includes "nine physicians or scientists eminent in specialties related to human organ transplantation, three non-physicians representing the field of human organ procurement, four non-physicians with expertise in law, theology, ethics, health care financing and social and behavorial sciences, three members of the general public and two health insurance representatives," will be meeting Sept. 30 to Oct. 1 in Dallas. Several hospital leaders, doctors and family members of children in need or organs, including Shelburne, will testify.

'Pass law' proposal praised

By TOM BALDWIN

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Critics of apartheid today praised the government for proposing changes in its race laws, but asked for more. Sources said three top businessmen were meeting with black guerrillas in an attempt to find common ground.

A government panel proposed Thursday that the "pass laws" that keep blacks out of white areas be repealed. A day earlier, the government announced it was willing to grant South African citizenship to some blacks.

"This is the beginning of the end of apartheid," said Sheena Duncan, the white president of the Black Sash women's movement, which opposes the nation's system of racial segregation. "I really do think it means something. They are not playing around with words this time."

Helen Suzman, a white member of Parliament and veteran anti-apartheid campaigner, called proposed changes in the pass laws "probably the most important step forward in 30 years."

Opposition newspapers today welcomed the news of the proposed reforms, but asked for more. "Don't stop now," urged the business newspaper, Business Day.

The Afrikans-language newspaper Beeld, which often reflects the thinking of President P.W. Botha's National Party, said that the pass laws had never worked, and that they should be scrapped.

Business sources said three top South African businessmen flew to Zambia to meet with the exiled African National Congress guerrilla movement. Botha had said such talks with the black group would be "disloyal."

The sources identified the businessmen as Gavin Relly, head of the giant mining conglomerate, Anglo American Corp.; Zac de Beer, an Anglo American director, and Tony Bloom, head of Premier Group, a food and retailing group.

All three have been critical of what they say is the white-minority government's refusal to consider an end to discriminatory race laws.

More than 700 people have died in a year of violence against white-minority rule, and the violence has eroded the confidence of the international business community in South Africa's stability.

The African National Congress is the largest black guerrilla group fighting South Africa's government. Outlawed in South Africa, it was headed by Nelson Mandela, now jailed for life on a conviction of plotting sabotage.

Residents reported more trouble in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg, on Thursday. They said police rounded up as many as 600 students near a high school and held them in Diepkloof Prison under the state-of-emergency regulations that forbid gatherings outside school buildings.

Police said they opened fire with shotguns on "unruly" students, wounding a 50-year-old white teacher and 10 black students. The school where they gathered, Hlengiwe High, has been a center for students advocating school boycotts.

Witnesses said police did not hold students under age 12. The White City Jabavu neighborhood, where the arrests took place, has been the hardest hit in Soweto during the 13 months of unrest that has resulted in more than 700 deaths nationwide.

Rioting also swept the Cape Town area on Thursday, and police shot and killed three black men, they said.

Britain threatens more explusions

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. said today that Britain has threatened to expel 20 more Soviet agents if Moscow retaliates against the expulsion of 25 Soviets exposed by a KGB defector as spies.

The Foreign Office said Thursday the 25 had to leave Britain by Oct. 3 after being exposed by Oleg A. Gordievski, the KGB spymaster for Britain who defected and was granted asylum.

The Danish government revealed Thursday night that Gordievski had been supplying information to the West since the 1970s. His double agent role was hailed as a major coup for British and Western intelligence.

When Lev A. Parshin, the Soviet charge d'affairs, was called into the Foreign Office Thursday, he was handed a list of the 25 diplomats, business representatives, journalists and other Soviets in London ordered expelled and was warned against retaliation by Moscow.

John Simpson, BBC Television's diplomatic correspondent, reported today, "If this (retaliation) happens, the Foreign Office has a list of at least 20 more Soviet officials with KGB (Soviet secret service) connections who could also be thrown out."

He said Parshin was handed the second list and told that "if there is anything more than a token response by Moscow in terms of expulsion of British people ... everyone on this list will be thrown out, too."

The Foreign Office had no comment on the BBC report.

Parshin asked permission to meet with Gordievski, but the Foreign Office said today it was "entirely up to Gordievski whether he would see Parshin." The Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, meanwhile said Gordievski defected to Britain "some weeks" before Hans-Joachim Tiedge, a top West Germany counterintelligence official, defected to East Germany last month. Quoting diplomatic sources, the agency said it thus was not true that Tiedge had blown Gordievski's cover, as some had speculated.

In Bonn, West Germany, Interior Ministry spokesman Hans-Guenther Kowalski said today it was "absolutely ridiculous" to conclude the two defections were connected.

Denmark's minister of justice, Erik Ninn-Hansen, said Thursday night in a Danish television interview that Gordievski's defection meant that "probably the most important source of information" on Soviet spying has been lost to Western counter-intelligence.

Officially the political counselor at the Soviet Embassy in London, Gordievski had served at the Soviet Embassy in Copenhagen in the 1970s.

Ninn-Hansen said Gordievski established contacts with Denmark's counter-espionage at that time and had been "an extremely important source of information to our (Denmark's) security."

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe called Gordievski's defection and the subsequent dismantling of the Soviet spy network in Britain "a very substantial coup" for British intelligence, repeatedly rocked by treachery within its own ranks since World War II.

A Foreign Office statement said Gordievski, 46, had pointed out the Soviet spies and had been granted political asylum because he "wished to become a citizen of a democratic country and live in a free society."

Friday the 13th not unlucky for Houston man

HOUSTON (AP) — For Don Curtis and his family, Friday the 13th is not a day of superstition or bad luck.

Not only is today Curtis' 56th birthday, but his father also was born on Friday, Nov. 13, 1908, as was his son, Deryl, born Oct. 13, 1967, another Friday.

"We'll hang a ladder and walk right under it," Don Curtis says.

The number 13 also has other significance for him. Curtis, an inventor, received a patent on a golf ball retriever on July 13, 1972. His application was submitted two years earlier on June 13.

Third world suffering Bible shortage

NEW YORK (AP) — Bible translators printed 25 million copies of Scripture in African and Asian languages last year but said that was still not enough to keep up with the explosive growth of Christianity in the developing world.

In Africa, some converts are buying the Bible on the black market, said John Dendor-Samuel, who spent 22 years in Africa helping translate the Bible into African tongues. The Christian population there is growing by "leaps and bounds," according to the World Council of Churches.

"At least in one case, I know a person paid the equivalent of 40 British pounds (about $55) for a copy of the Bible," said Dendor-Samuel, vice president of the Summer Institute of Linguistics in Dallas.

The Institute is one of several church organizations in the United States dedicated to translating the Bible from the original Hebrew and Greek texts into other languages.

The institute has some 2,000 linguists and 3,500 supporting personnel currently working on translating the Bible into 200 African languages, Dendor-Samuel said.

John Erickson of the United Bible Societies, an umbrella organization of 100 Bible societies around the world, said his group supplied 7.7 million Bibles, both full texts and separate New Testaments, last year to Christians in countries from Papua New Guinea and Indonesia to India.

The biggest challenge may come in China, where authorities have recently permitted the publication of Bibles and other Christian literature for the first time since the communist takeover in 1949.

"We could have printed and distributed twice as many Bibles worldwide last year, if we had sufficient resources — more money and manpower," Erickson said. "We spent $26 million set aside as our 1984 budget, but we needed another $7 million just to carry out all specific programs."

The Bible societies face financial difficulties partly because churches and Bible groups in many developing countries cannot pay for the Bibles, "even though they are offered at highly subsidized prices," Erickson said.

The United Bible Societies donated millions of Bibles last year in half a dozen African countries, he said. Each Bible costs $3 to $4 to print and distribute.

In Africa, the financial difficulty is compounded by translating into languages that do not have alphabets.

"The translators have to go into a tribal village in Africa and live there with the natives four or five years before starting to devise phonetic signs and establishing grammatical rules," said Dendor-Samuel. "Only then can we think about translating the Bible into that language."

Students find dress-code compliance 'hairy'

ROSENBERG, Texas (AP) — Two sisters at Lamar Consolidated High School thought their hair cuts were stylish but school adminstrators say the styles are extreme and distracting, and violations of the school's dress code.

The sisters, Suzanne and Laura Emerson, were among about 60 students last week who were cited by school officials for dress code violations.

"They were told their hair was excessively short — it was extreme," their mother, Maria Rocha Emerson, said Wednesday. "Never have we had a problem with them in school. Now they hate it."

But prinicipal Raymond Watson said, "This is nothing new. Our kids know what the dress code is, and they know it ahead of time. As they come in to get their schedules, the ones we have some doubts about we'll put in the gym."

Parents this week gathered at a special meeting to protest the dress code, which requires the school's 1,375 students be neat, clean and well-groomed "while at the same time allow for current styles as long as they are not disruptive to the school environment."

"I think a lot of what the parents are complaining about involves interpretation," Watson said. "When you use words like extreme, they say, 'What is extreme?'

"As an administrator, it is my resonsibility to interpret."

The sisters are back in school now, but not before sophomore Suzanne, 15, and freshman Laura, 14, restyled their looks.

Suzanne's inch-long spiked haircut is gone and Laura's bangs, which fell across her right eyebrow, now are slicked back.

"It's all a result of mishandling that first week on behalf of the administration," Mrs. Emerson said. "It's been very hard on both of them. For kids, their appearance is so important. To them it's a matter of identity."

Another student, Stephanie Lindsey, was sent home because school officials did not like the color of her auburn hair. When she tried to dye it back to brown, it turned burgundy.

Church members seem to accept confession of bogus MS victim

CLAYCOMO, Mo. (AP) — After 4½ years of pitching in to help wheelchair-bound David Mott, most of the people who donated time and money weren't upset when he got up in church and said, "It's not a miracle that I'm standing here."

But federal authorities aren't so forgiving and say they'll investigate reports that Mott, 38, a former hospital technician, took $40,000 to $50,000 in Social Security benefits during his feigned multiple sclerosis and blindness.

"I don't regret what we did for him," said the Rev. Terry Rhoads of the Northside Christian Church, whose members widened a door at Mott's home and once raised more than $400 for him in a special "love offering."

"I'm sure if the situation would repeat itself with another sincere case, we would do it again," Rhoads said. "It has not destroyed my faith in people. And now there is a need to be more understanding."

Mott said he is talking to a psychiatrist and friends about what he did.

"I'm a person who made a big mistake and owned up to it," he said in an interview published Thursday in The Kansas City Times.

Correction

A letter to the editor from Ed A. Vogler of Midland published in the Wednesday Reporter-Telegram incorrectly identified a sum of money spent by Midland Memorial Hospital.

The letter indicated: "The tax increase recently voted upon the property owners may not have been necessary had the administration of Midland Memorial Hospital not exercised their right to defeat Parkview and the other private facility in their desire to construct a chemical- and drug-related facility. This action alone cost some $3,000 of hospital funds."

The $3,000 amount was erroneous. Vogler's letter had properly identified the sum as $300,000.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error and any inconvenience it may have caused readers.

Herbicide applications needed for weed control

Now is the time to get serious about perennial weed control in row crops. Johnson grass, silverleaf nightshade, bermuda grass, blueweed, field bindweed all are controlled best by fall applications of Roundup and/or Banvel in combinations.

FORAGE SORGHUMS

Livestock producers should be aware of prussic acid and nitrate poisoning from stressed forage sorghums. With the dryness and plant stress that is caused, we may see some problems in livestock.

HOUSEHOLD AND YARD INSECTS

Brown dog ticks have been very difficult to control this year. To fight brown dog tick, a person must control them on the pet, in the yard and in the house (if they are present there). Insecticide-treated dips and shampoos are recommended for the dog, and Dursban is still the best compound for the yard.

HORSES

Western enquine encephalitis is suspected of killing three horses recently in the Balmorhea area. This disease is mosquito borne and is likely to occur anywhere mosquitoes are plentiful. Persons in areas such as this should have their horses vaccinated as soon as possible.

PECANS

Now is the time to spray pecan trees for hickory shuckworm. The trigger as to whether to spray is if 20 percent or more of the nuts were infested last year — spray. Hickory shuckworms tunnel in the shucks, causing the nut to fill poorly and stick in the shuck.

Aphids continue to cause problems on area trees. Yellow pecan aphid is getting harder and harder to kill. Zolone and Pydrin still work, although not as well as they used to.

MORE DRIP COTTON

Are you farmers interested in drip irrigation? The Dawson County farm tour is Friday, Sept. 20, and a highlight of the tour is the Don Love farm with 60 acres of drip-irrigated cotton.

Boll counts last week by John Farris, CEA-AG/Dawson County, estimate a 3.8 bale/acre yeild. Also, the system is a relatively low cost one. At Love's farm there is also an excellent variety trial under drip.

The tour starts at 9 a.m. from the Dawson County Community Building.

The Midland County Horse Committee, Midland College and Desert Wind Equestrian School have planned a Horse Seminar on September 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Emery Henderson, horse psychologist and trainer of Phoenix, Arizona will present the clinic. His horse Buddy, who was Grand National Champion Working Horse at the A-Z Show this year in Arizona, will also be here.

Henderson's psychology training has won him many trophies, ribbons and awards in pleasure classes, trail, halter, futurities, carriage, etc.

Whether you are a beginner, oldtimer, spectator, rider, trainer or back-yard owner — this seminar is for you. There will be psychology training, kindergarten and up training, line driving, trail and packing, plus a question and answer period. There will be a charge of $8 for 4-H members and a $12 charge for the general public.

Please call 684-7851, Ext. 147, or 697-4701 for more information. Deadline for registration is September 18.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

AGRICULTURE

Corn harvest now expected to exceed USDA predictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are headed for an even larger corn harvest this fall than had been expected by Agriculture Department crop experts.

In Iowa, the leading corn producer, state agriculture secretary Robert Lounsberry said, "Every farmer likes to have a full granary, but (USDA's) forecast holds mixed blessings."

Based on surveys made on Sept. 1, the crop is expected to produce 8.47 billion bushels, up 2 percent from the forecast a month ago and 11 percent more than last year's 7.66 billion bushels.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said in Wednesday's report that bumper harvests of some other 1985 crops also are indicated, including soybeans, cotton and wheat.

Consumers can look forward to the large grain supply as yet another hedge against food price inflation. Corn is the most abundant and valuable of all U.S. farm crops and, as livestock feed, helps turn out the meat, dairy products and poultry consumed by Americans.

But farmers have seen commodity prices and incomes sag, partly because of rising surpluses and the inability to sell the extra production to foreign customers.

"There's probably no other way to look at it except disastrous," said C.H. Fields of the American Farm Bureau Federation's Washington office. "If we were moving it in the international market, it could be a plus."

At the National Farmers Union, Bob Mullins expressed similar views about the bumper harvests. "I really don't see anything good about it," he said.

Mullins said about 360 NFU members from across the country are in Washington this week and that "I have yet to have one of them tell me there is any good news" in this year's crop production.

Last month, the department's initial production estimate of the season showed the corn harvest at 8.27 billion bushels. But the latest report said, "Near-ideal growing conditions throughout most of the country during August greatly improved yield prospects of corn."

Soybean production was estimated at 2.06 billion bushels, up from 1.96 billion bushels indicated in August and 11 percent over the 1984 harvest of 1.86 billion bushels.

The cotton harvest was estimated at 13.7 million bales, down from 13.8 million bales forecast last month but 5 percent more than the 1984 crop.

Wheat production this year, indicated at 2.4 billion bushels, is up from the August estimate of 2.38 billion bushels but down 8 percent from the 1984 harvest.

ASAT weapon to be tested, as congressmens' suit fails

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of a new U.S. anti-satellite weapon failed in last-ditch efforts to halt the Reagan administration's plans to begin final testing of the device.

A federal court on Thursday turned down a suit by four Democratic congressmen seeking to block the test, and later in the day the Senate voted 62-34 against a proposal to delay the operation.

The test was scheduled for today, according to sources speaking on condition they not be named. Officially, the Pentagon will say only that the test date is classified.

The test involves an attempt to knock out a seven-year-old scientific satellite, Solwind, as it orbits above the Pacific Ocean.

The 18-foot-long U.S. weapon, first developed in 1978, is a two-stage rocket capped by a coffee can-sized "homing vehicle" which is intended to slam into the target.

The anti-satellite, or ASAT, weapon will be carried to about 90,000 feet by an F-15 fighter and then launched to try to track down the satellite.

Both superpowers are heavily dependent on satellites for spying, communications and early warning of attack.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson refused a request for a restraining order to block the test. The suit was brought by Reps. George Brown, D-Calif.; Matt McHugh, D-N.Y.; Joseph Moakley, D-Mass.; and John Seiberling, D-Ohio, along with the Union of Concerned Scientists.

She listened to 30 minutes of oral arguments before ruling that the issue was a political one "that should not be decided in this forum."

Later Thursday, Moakley and 97 co-signers sent Reagan a letter asking that the test be halted because "the informal U.S.-Soviet ASAT test moratorium that has been in effect over the past two years has contributed to our national security and we appeal to you not to break the moratorium."

The letter said, "Since the United States is more dependent on satellites than is the Soviet Union, we see serious risks in allowing ASAT weapons to proliferate."

Late Thursday, Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., offered a proposal delaying the test, but it was killed on a 62-34 vote.

Kerry offered his ban as an amendment to an unrelated immigration bill. It would have delayed the test until after the U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in Geneva on Nov. 19.

Kerry called his proposal "a straightforward attempt to enhance the climate for fruitful discussions at the summit by preserving the status quo on ASATs for nine more weeks" until the summit.

But Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., offered a successful motion to table, or kill, the measure. Goldwater explained that "we should not care about what the Soviets think. We should have the attitude that whatever we have to do to make this country strong, we're going to do it."

The U.S. weapon has been tested in stages, but there had not yet been an attempt to actually hit an object in space.

The Soviet ASAT, which has been operational since 1971, is a small satellite atop a ground-launched rocket. It then hunts down its target within two or three orbits and explodes, destroying both satellites.

The United States first developed ASAT weapons in the early 1960s, but those crude systems were dropped in 1975 and the Reagan administration says the U.S. weapon is needed to offset the Soviet ASAT.

The Soviets have not tested their weapon for three years.

Nuclear WW III would produce world famine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aftermath of nuclear war would look a lot more like today's famine-blasted Ethiopia than a picture of devastated buildings and radiation-scarred humans, says a scientist who believes starvation would be the No. 1 killer in post-World War III.

The study, released Thursday by a committee of the International Council of Scientific Unions, supports the theory that even a limited nuclear exchange would create great spreading clouds of black smoke that could shield the Earth from the sun and plunge the world into a crop-destroying "nuclear winter."

The report estimates famine could kill as many as 1 billion to 4 billion of the world's 5 billion people after much smaller numbers were wiped out in the explosion and radiation of direct attacks, said Dr. Mark Harwell of Cornell University, one of the study's co-leaders.

"The main mechanism by which people would die after a large-scale nuclear war would not be blast effect, would not be burns, would not be radiation but rather would be mass starvation," Harwell told a news conference.

"We are left with images of Ethiopia and the Sudan as being more representative of what the world would look like after a nuclear war for most of the people than the sorts of images we have of Hiroshima and Nagasaki," he said.

The report, produced by scientists from 30 nations including the Soviet Union and United States, says a huge nuclear attack would be unnecessary.

Even selected targeting of urban areas and burning of fuel sources — something the authors assume would happen — would create enough smoke and other chemical effects to lower temperatures and drastically reduce light in many parts of the world, even in nations far from the main combatants, the report suggests. Rain patterns also could be interrupted, causing severe agricultural problems.

A temperature drop that sounds relatively minor — perhaps 5 degrees to 10 degrees Fahrenheit over several months — could "essentially eliminate agriculture production in the Northern Hemisphere," Harwell said.

And he and others said such a temperature decline was at the optimistic end of most estimates, some of which say summer could actually be turned into winter in some locations.

Soviets take lead in exporting arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — After trailing the United States in 1983, the Soviet Union regained its role as the world's leading arms exporter last year with sales of $9.4 billion, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency says.

U.S. sales for 1984 totaled $7.7 billion, according to a new report, "World Military Expenditures and Arms Transfers."

The report, released Thursday, also said the U.S.-Soviet share of arms sales worldwide dropped below 50 percent for the first time ever, with the United States accounting for 22 percent and the Soviets 26.9 percent.

The declining share of the two superpowers reflects the increased arms-selling role of Soviet allies in Eastern Europe as well as France, Great Britain and Italy. Although the report did not provide figures, it said France for the first time sold more weaponry to developing countries last year than did the United States.

For many years, the United States ranked at the top of the list of arms exporters. But the Soviets have outstripped the United States in five of the past seven years, according to the study.

The report also said:

— The Soviet Union, with 4.4 million, and China, with 4.1 million, had by far the largest number of military personnel worldwide in 1983. The United States was third with 2.2 million. The global total was 28.4 million.

Sakharov's stepson ends hunger strike with demands ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexei Semyonov, the stepson of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, says he is continuing the struggle to aid his parents, even though he ended a 14-day hunger strike that sought to pressure the Soviet Union into letting him talk to them.

"My demands at the outset of my hunger strike were not satisfied," Semyonov told a news conference Thursday. "Thus, this is not the end of the struggle. My parents remain completely isolated and their fate is uncertain, governed by the whims of the KGB." The KGB is the Soviet secret police force.

Semyonov said he ended his hunger strike after being assured by the State Department that it is "a high priority issue for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow to find the whereabouts of my parents and to re-establish communications with them."

The State Department also said it would try to resolve the case of his parents before the November summit meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Semyonov said.

"At this time, I think the continuation of my fast will not serve the purpose of helping my parents," he said. "Indeed, it could perhaps hamper the efforts of the State Department."

Semyonov, a thin man at the outset, lost 25 pounds during the two weeks he subsisted on carbonated mineral water. He spent the daylight hours of the fast on a Washington street corner near the Soviet Embassy, talking to passersby and asking them to sign petitions on behalf of his parents.

Semyonov, 29, of Newton, Mass., said at the start of the hunger strike that he would end the fast if he felt it was no longer the best way to help his parents.

"If they are not willing to make a humanitarian gesture of releasing my parents, living symbols of the struggle for human rights in the Soviet Union, then they are not interested in results at the Geneva talks. It will, in fact, be useless to accommodate them," he said.

In a statement Thursday, the State Department said, "Our embassy in Moscow is making a high-priority effort to locate the Sakharovs." It said the issue has been raised in high-level meetings with Soviet officials in the past few days.

Semyonov met Thursday with Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, who again reassured him of the department's concern.

At the news conference, Semyonov's grandmother, Ruth Bonner, who is in her 80s, appealed to the Soviets to allow her to communicate with her daughter, Elena, and son-in-law, Sakharov, before she dies.

Semyonov said he began the hunger strike because the Soviets had not allowed him, his grandmother and his sister, Tanya Yankelevich, to contact Sakharov and Elena Bonner.

He said the last communication was a post card from Mrs. Bonner in July which made no mention of Sakharov, a nuclear physicist who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975 for his human rights activities.

Alexei Semyonov, stepson of Nobel Peace Prize-winning Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, and his grandmother Ruth Bonner, 85, talk to reporters on Capitol Hill after he ended his 14-day hunger strike.

NATION in brief

'Order' trial begins

SEATTLE (AP) — Eleven members of "The Order" facing federal charges that include armored car robberies and murders were motivated by a loose set of principles based on hatred of Jews, blacks and other minorities, prosecutors said.

Testimony from the first of at least 100 witnesses against members of "The Order" was to begin today before U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern.

Peter Lake, a freelance journalist who infiltrated the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations), the Idaho-based group from which The Order apparently sprang, was expected to be the first witness.

Members of The Order are accused of crimes including two armored car robberies in Seattle, one near Ukiah, Calif., bank robberies, an attempted arson at a Boise, Idaho, synagogue, and two murders, including that of Denver radio talk-show host Alan Berg.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Ward said in an opening statement Thursday that members of the group founded by Robert Mathews "all viewed as common enemies Jews, blacks, who they called mud people, and other racial minorities."

GOP eyes Senate spot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans have begun operating on the assumption that an ailing Sen. John East of North Carolina is unlikely to seek re-election next year, sources say.

That normally would be good news — politically speaking — for the opposing Democrats. But on Thursday, Democrats were stunned when their No. 1 challenger for East's seat, former North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, announced he had decided not to run.

The developments presented the likelihood of a wide-open Senate race in 1986 in North Carolina, the state that saw the most expensive political race ever last year when Hunt failed in his bid to unseat East's mentor, GOP Sen. Jesse Helms.

Poll: Teachers leaving

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid predictions of a massive teacher shortage, a new poll finds that more than a quarter of the nation's teachers say low pay and poor conditions are likely to drive them from the classroom within five years.

And while a majority of teachers support most aspects of education reform, such as tougher training standards, nearly two-thirds say their views haven't been reflected in reforms sweeping much of the country.

Sixty-four percent of teachers polled in the second annual "Metropolitan Life Survey of The American Teacher," released Thursday, felt the reforms reflected the views of administrators, not teachers.

The survey added weight to recent federal studies that have predicted the nation will have 34 percent fewer teachers than it needs by 1992. It suggested that most teachers feel current reforms have helped students, but haven't done much to upgrade their profession.

Plant Studio seized

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Plant Studio, one of the top 10 music recording studios in the nation, has been shut down by government agents who said it was purchased with money earned through drug trafficking.

No arrests were made in Thursday's seizure of the studio, known as "The Plant," a hangout for two decades of jazz and rock stars. It has recorded such stars as Huey Lewis and The News, Journey and Jefferson Starship.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Nancy Simpson said Stanley Forbes Jacox, 36, of Mill Valley, bought the studio last year with at least $300,000 made from the production of methamphetamines and methaqualone from 1982 to 1984.

In addition to closing the studio, U.S. Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force agents also seized Jacox's Maserati sports car, said U.S. Attorney's Office spokeswoman Mary Kay Farmer.

Church fears AIDS

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Conflict over ordination of homosexuals and fear that AIDS can be transmitted through the communion cup have risen as Episcopal Church leaders struggle to establish church policy.

Debate over the issue of homosexuality surged Thursday in the House of Deputies, the lay-clergy branch of the denomination's bicameral legislature, and results of a ballot vote were expected today.

Work together

Midland City Council members and the Midland County commissioners have been embroiled in a bit of a disagreement of late because of services the city apparently has been providing to county residents and the county's nonpayment for those services.

The disagreement apparently centers around ambulance service the city has been providing to county residents. The dispute arose after the City Council had submitted a list showing the county owed $57,330 to the city for providing health care and ambulance services from the fire department.

But the county countered by noting that it had not received a bill and that if it isn't billed correctly, it simply doesn't feel obligated to pay. One commissioner even branched into a discussion of where cities and counties get their revenue, indicating the need for a better understanding between Midland and Midland County. In the joint city-council meeting Tuesday, the city assured the county it would receive a bill.

There may be more than meets the eye in this situation, but the "community's" taxpayers, which include both city and county residents, likely will agree to some basic guidelines for the city and county to follow when providing services to the other political entity. They're the simple rules most households follow:

— Handshake agreements are fine, but where money changes hands (even tax money) it's a little risky to operate without paper documentation. So the city should definitely send the county a bill for services rendered.

— Although most taxpayers probably would agree that the county should not be held accountable for any bills it has not received, it certainly should pay any bills it owes, once it gets proper notice.

— While there certainly appear to be a number of details that need to be worked out between the city and county, most Midland residents don't want to see their county "cousins" left without basic modern services such as ambulance transportation and other health-related services. So, if arrangements to provide such services for a given fee are not now in existence, that should be the topic for another joint get-together.

Life's too short to bicker. Shake hands and come out working together.

Hear it for 'hustle'

It was just a matter of time — and it happened Wednesday night. Charlie Hustle with the muscle — Cincinnati's Pete Rose — got a base hit against the San Diego Padres and at the same time put himself in the record books for keeps.

It was Rose's 4,192nd hit in a major league baseball career that spans 23 years. It beats Ty Cobb's record of 4,191, which stood for 57 years.

The countdown on hits has been going on all season in Cincinnati, and with baseball's millions of faithful followers. When there was only one hit to go, more than 52,000 fans filled Riverfront Stadium to watch. They wanted to be part of history.

Major league baseball is a sport that lives and breathes statistics, but the one Rose captured Wednesday night is possibly the most impressive. It takes stamina, dedication, and ability to stand in that batter's box night after night, season after season, and to continue getting the hits.

They're going to name a street after Pete Rose in Cincinnati. They might even name the stadium for him. He deserves those honors.

Pete Rose is a prime example of an average athlete who became a great ball player, manager and leader in the big leagues through sacrifice, hard work, hard practice — and hustle.

Another View:

Reagan's 'problems'

There are two fundamental problems with President Reagan's tardy and reluctant turn to sanctions against South Africa:

— His plan is not as good, not as effective as the program put together by the House and Senate conference committee.

— His motive, turning to soft sanctions just to try to head off the more effective legislation in Congress, will communicate a message to Pretoria of continued ambiguity in the White House.

In his message Monday, the president said that "there is no time to waste," and on that there can be no disagreement. But the fact is that a good deal of time has been wasted, the better part of five years, while he has played with "constructive engagement." That has encouraged a stubbornness in South Africa that has set back internal reforms and delayed independence for Namibia, the last of the African colonies.

Condemning and deploring apartheid is not enough. The white rulers need to be shown as well as told that apartheid has to be abandoned if they are to continue to enjoy the advantages of open relations and trade with the Western nations.

The president fumbled when asked why he could not support the congressional legislation. He seemed unsure of the content. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said subsequently that the principal White House reservation had to do with the "overhang" of what Congress had devised — that is, the threat of stepped-up sanctions if the modest initial measures failed to produce constructive change. That is a weak argument. The strength of the congressional legislation is the clear picture that it provides of the consequences of continuing apartheid — a mandated incentive for action. The vital weakness of the president's proposal is the absence of any message on what he intends next if South Africa clings to its odious policies.

At least Reagan has embraced a number of the proposals made by members of Congress, including limits on bank loans and on nuclear and computer technology sales, and incentives for American companies respecting the Sullivan Code of just practices in South Africa. The president has proposed a multi-million-dollar expansion of scholarship and human-rights programs in South Africa. And he has proposed a citizen committee that could, if made up of experts, accelerate development of a better government policy toward South Africa.

The president suggested Monday that he is reshaping his policy of constructive engagement into a policy of active engagement. That will be useful only if a new policy is reflected in the letter that he is sending to South Africa with his returning ambassador. That letter will be effective only if it overcomes the impression left by the president Monday that he is only reluctantly, only defensively being forced into a somewhat tougher policy.

"There is no substitute for statutory action which has the full support and prestige of both the legislative and executive branches of government," Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, commented. He is correct. And that is why Reagan's determination to veto the proposal supported by the vast majority of both House and Senate clouds communication when the United States should be speaking clearly and unambiguously.

Inventor claims DOE crossed him

WASHINGTON — Larry Penberthy says he can save the taxpayers $1 billion a year in disposal of nuclear waste but, he says, the Energy Department won't listen to him.

Jack Anderson

The 69-year-old Penberthy is a Seattle physicist, as well as a chemist and an electrical and mechanical engineer. There was a time when the Energy Department thought highly of him, but those days are apparently gone. He's suing the department, and the department is suing him.

The bone of contention is the glass furnace Penberthy built for the department to demonstrate his proposed method of disposing of radioactive wastes — "vitrification," or the sealing of the deadly stuff in glass rods, which would then be wrapped in lead and stored underground.

Under a $920,421 DOE contract, Penberthy built the furnace on the grounds of his Seattle company, Penberthy Electromelt International, in 1980-81. The 25-ton furnace could process 6 tons of glass and waste a day.

For five weeks, Penberthy demonstrated his furnace, melting 200 tons of glass and using simulated waste from the Energy Department's disposal site at West Valley, N.Y.

Despite the department's earlier enthusiasm, Penberthy said, officials ignored his repeated invitations to come and watch the operation. Instead, they ordered work halted, and in January 1982, personnel hired by the department showed up to dismantle Penberthy's furnace and take it away.

Penberthy blocked this move temporarily because the wrecking crew had nothing in writing. But after extended negotiations with the Justice Department, Penberthy was presented with the proper document and the wreckers returned in May 1983.

According to Penberthy, they used sledgehammers and cutting torches, removed transformers and electrodes, and dropped most of the stuff off at a local junkyard.

The problem appears to be a difference of opinion over exactly what Penberthy's role in the project was to have been. He thought he would be wrapping the hot wastes in glass and another firm would handle the lead encasement and technical details of disposal. But Energy Department documents indicate that the DOE expected him to do more.

An independent investigative panel, acting at the behest of the Energy Department, concluded that Penberthy was "an extremely creative person with a wealth of practical knowledge in the science and engineering of glass making." But radioactive waste disposal, the panel said, "is dominated by complex, exacting nuclear technologies for which glass-making expertise alone is not sufficient preparation" and Penberthy was "unsuited to perform the full scope of work required."

There is no question that Penberthy's idea is sound. The French have been vitrifying their nuclear waste since 1978. The British, West Germans, Belgians and Japanese are also using vitrification. Said James Turi, program manager at the Energy Department's West Valley disposal site: "In the field of nuclear waste disposal, glass is the way to go."

In fact, Turi disclosed, the disposal site at West Valley later contracted with DuPont (the current contract is with Westinghouse) to vitrify nuclear waste and store it under water in lead canisters. This is particularly infuriating to Penberthy because he was supposed to work with DuPont, and 28 usable parts taken from his furnace are being used in the glassification project at West Valley.

Penberthy is convinced that department officials improperly cut him out of the contract. He insists that he could handle the department's entire waste-disposal program for less than $600 million — compared to the $1.6 billion department officials say they'll spend on it next year alone.

Meanwhile, Penberthy is suing the department for $226,638 for standby and termination costs on the furnace contract, while the department is countersuing him for $100,497 in alleged overruns.

Repudiating Hussein unwise

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is moving to take the advice of his chief diplomat, Secretary of State George Shultz, and ask Congress for a billion dollar-plus arms package for King Hussein, despite predictions of a smashing rejection by Congress that could force Hussein into a deal with Soviet-backed Syria, transforming Mideast politics.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Shultz knows Reagan feels that he has a personal commitment to the staunch, longtime friend of the U.S. in Amman who has risked much trying to build a political bridge between the U.S. and leading Palestinians as a prelude to West Bank peace. But if Reagan makes the fight and loses, leaving the king high and dry, it is known Hussein will come under heavy pressure to turn away from the U.S. and start dealing with Syria's Hafez al-Assad, Shultz's nemesis in the Middle East.

That seemingly improbable switch by the moderate Arab leader would have incalculable repercussions on American policy. It would nudge Hussein into U.S.-Soviet neutrality and make the security of his kingdom more dependent on Assad than on the U.S., ending his peaceful flirtations with Israel.

Despite predictions by congressional leaders, led by Chairman Richard Lugar of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that Congress would flatten any big Jordan arms package, Shultz leans strongly toward making the effort. Last week a sudden course correction on the South African sanctions bill transformed an entrenched administration policy, and it could happen on arms for Jordan. But White House insiders are betting that Reagan and Shultz will be hard to switch.

Signals have been sent to Washington for months that Hussein cannot afford another public humiliation at the hands of his most important benefactor, the U.S. The arms deal was originally targeted for transmission to Congress months ago, but got derailed by a State Department "review" that affected all Mideast arms deals, except for Israel and Egypt.

Completion of the review brought two conflicting decisions by the administration: deny Saudi Arabia the new squadron of F-15s it has urgently requested — but at the same time persuade the Saudis to finance the sale to Hussein of both the aircraft and the mobile anti-aircraft systems he has been seeking for more than two years. When Saudi Ambassador Prince Sultan learned his country was ticketed to roll over and be the fall guy, he quickly vetoed the deal.

Without any other political burdens, the lack of Saudi financing would appear by itself to doom the Jordan deal. The pro-Israel lobby, which has a high record of success in blocking Arab arms, has mustered overwhelming support for Republican Sen. Bob Kasten's proposal to bar any U.S. funds from being spent for the Hussein package.

The king's move toward Syria — if he becomes once again the victim of ever-stronger U.S. political ties to Israel — has been carefully prepared in advance to give him a new diplomatic base designed to cover his treatment by the U.S. Unable to convince Washington to dare even a single meeting with the Palestinian-Jordanian delegation (no matter how carefully sterilized against PLO infection) that he put together months ago, Hussein and his top political advisers now worry that the U.S. is slowly withdrawing from the king's peace plan for the West Bank.

What Hussein wants more than American arms is evidence to counter that worry. What he really needs is a decision in Washington that would give his Palestinian delegation a chance to be heard. To Hussein, a U.S. decision to go for the arms package presages a U.S. decision not to face down Israel on the West Bank peace deal and not to meet with the king's Palestinian delegation.

Hussein

That explains Hussein's predictable move toward Syria if his arms package is killed in Congress and his peace plan goes nowhere. The PLO's Yasir Arafat, hated by Assad, would become the first casualty, a price Hussein would have to pay Syria for reconcilliation a dozen years after Assad came close to sending his troops into Jordan to topple Hussein.

Today Arafat is being treated like a potentate in Amman, surrounded by Bedouin bodyguards and driven by the king's chauffeurs. He would be expelled — and with him the remaining moderates of the PLO — as the cost of a new Jordan-Syria entente. Hussein would also be pulled towards Moscow by the centrifugal force exerted on Damascus by the Soviets. The intimacy between him and the Labor prime minister of Israel, Shimon Peres, would abruptly end.

That is the bitter movement in prospect if Congress or the administration ends up repudiating King Hussein. It is because repudiation by one or both looks so likely that Hussein is making his plans.

Changing opinions isn't easy

It's a bad thing for a writer to admit but people are mostly impervious to arguments about anything which effects their own lives. To put it another way, you aren't likely to convince anybody of anything unless it's about something irrelevant or immaterial to their lives.

Charley Reese

I long ago observed the phenomena of more or less permanent opinions. It's one reason I never suffered the illusion of being a world-changer which afflicts some journalists. Still, it's only recently that I've come to understand why people grip their opinions so tenaciously.

Truth, for nearly all people, consists of their own experience. You can, for example, argue that the nation is no longer racist until you turn blue. You can present 18 tons of facts to back it up. Yet, for each individual, the only valid answer will be their own experience. If their experience contradicts the facts, then too bad for the facts. They won't believe the facts; they will believe their own experience.

Once you understand this human characteristic then you can understand why so many of the world's problems seem to be insolvable. You can, for example, make a convincing argument, based on facts, that Palestinians have no valid claim to the land of Israel. To a Palestinian who grew up in a refugee camp, however, such an argument has no meaning. The chain of title transfers from the Ottoman Empire to the League of Nations to Great Britain to the United Nations to modern Israel is — to him — so much blather.

What is real to him is where he lived and what his mother and father told him and what has happened to him and to his family. Ten thousand international lawyers will never convince him to erase his own experience and the beliefs those experiences created.

Thus rationalism and its offshoot, legalism, are always at war with human nature — and they always lose. It's utopianism to suppose that you can construct a society based on reason. People are not sitting around with open minds waiting to be persuaded by reason and logic. Reason and logic are like Sunday clothes — only used for special occasions. This is as true of scientists as it is of carpenters.

To the everlasting frustration of would-be human engineers we humans are each and every one unique individuals with a non-duplicable set of genes and experiences. Usually, by 18 at the latest, we have reached a state of permanency. If we change at all, it will be little and slowly and self-generated. Despite the fact we make many adaptations in superficial matters, most of us die the same boy or girl we always were. All our lives we know only the truth of our own experiences.

The practical value of this is that if you want to change people's opinions, you must change their experiences. If you want to predict what they will do, you'd better look at their experiences and not need arguments and theory. Ronald Reagan proved, among other things in 1984, that present, positive economic experiences outweigh future, theoretical problems of the deficit. As both penologists and wives have discovered, rehabilitation seldom works. Deep disputes and enmities are rarely resolved except by the passing of several generations.

Some people call me cynical but they are wrong. I just accept human beings as they are. I never expect a human to be more than a human. That's plenty good enough for me. I never have cared for robots or for people who aspire to be robots. Variety and contrast appeal to me more than uniformity. To paraphrase Rudyard Kipling, a robot's just a robot, but a human being is a lot of fun.

I recognize, of course, that if what I just wrote contradicts your own experience, you won't believe me. That's okay. I get paid to persuade you to read, not to believe. If you don't like it, you can put me under the puppy or in the canary cage. That's the ultimate utilitarian value of being a newspaper columnist. You can't do that with a TV commentary you don't like.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight...cloudy..with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Lows in the lower 60s. Wind east 5 to 10 mph.

Saturday...mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon thunderstorms. High mid 80s. Wind southeast 5 to 10 mph.

RAIN—

Tonight will be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorm activity, low temperatures in the low 60's and easterly winds at 5 to 10 mph.

Cloudy skies are predicted for Saturday with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, highs in the mid-80's and southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph.

The record high temperature for Thursday's date was 92 degrees set in 1930. A record low of 49 degrees for today's date was set in 1959.

STATE

A high-pressure ridge extending into East Texas brought isolated thunderstorms across the state today and forecasters predicted more scattered precipitation would develop through this weekend.

The rainy weather was sandwiched between the front, which extended from the Great Lakes, and a weak trough of low pressure over the far west.

Rainshowers and isolated thunderstorms were scattered over the south plains, the Big Country near Abilene, along the Coastal Bend and Rio Grande valley near Del Rio. Skies were mostly cloudy statewide, with fair skies in the lower valleys the only exception.

Winds were light and variable across most sections. But a south wind of 10 miles an hour was noted in the northwest.

Low temperatures before sunrise cooled into the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 62 degrees at Marfa to 79 degrees at McAllen.

Also, it was 70 at Stephenville and San Angelo; 73 at Austin, San Antonio and Dallas-Fort Worth Airport; 72 at Abilene and Wichita Falls; and 71 at Waco.

Additionally, Amarillo had 66 degrees; Brownsville, 77; Corpus Christi, 76; El Paso, 69; Lubbock, 68; and Midland, 67.

NATION

Cool and dry weather prevailed across the Northeast and Rockies today but thunderstorms rumbled across the Plains after downpours dumped as much as 10 inches of rain on some areas and prompted flash flood warnings.

The temperature dipped below freezing early today in Michigan as a massive high pressure system over Ontario lowered temperatures and cleared skies in much of the Northeast. Early-morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s to 40s from the upper Mississippi Valley through the Great Lakes, upper Ohio Valley, central Appalachians and New England.

Cool, clear weather also settled over the central Rockies early today.

Andrews, MHS could roll up big numbers

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

An impressive herd of Mustangs from Andrews will prance into Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m. today with high hopes of pulling off an upset stampede over 5A's rowdy band of Midland High Bulldogs.

Both teams are coming off impressive victories and both squads showed some offensive firepower a week ago. Expect the scoreboard to have light strain as the numbers roll.

The Bulldogs stung Lubbock Monterey by a 27-19 count at Memorial Stadium last week while Andrews bombed Brownfield to the tune of 34-15. If the defenses don't come prepared to play in this outing, the numbers could soar.

It's a matchup that has Midland High coach Doug McCutchen on his guard.

"Basically, Andrews is the same type team as last year, but they are doing what they do better," notes McCutchen. "They throw a lot of misdirection plays at you and run the boot-leg pass effectively with thier quarterback (Danny Neighbors), and they are effective with their sweep. There is no Brooks or Pearcy like in the past, but their backs run hard.

"Defensively, Andrews doesn't give you a lot of looks, but they do a good job of playing techniques and they are aggressive. We better be ready to play because we will be meeting a fine football team."

DAVID VISENTINE, coach of the 4A Mustangs, also knows his team is in for a challenge, playing a team up in classification.

"Midland High is a good football team and they execute so well offensively that it presents a real problem for us," said Visentine. "The key to Midland High is Matt Marcum. He can throw and run and that will put a lot of pressure on our secondary to figure out which to play — the run or pass.

"We've always felt at Andrews that this is a pivotal game for us because everytime we play against the Bulldogs well, we seem to go on and have a good season. It's a good test for us. There's no question about that."

With both coaches placing a great deal of emphasis on each other's quarterback, tonight's QB's will see a lot of pressure. Last week's performance by both schools' quarterback is reason enough to gear defenses in that direction.

MHS' Marcum vaulted to the top of the 4-5A passing list last week with an awesome 217 yards passing, hitting on 12 of 22 attempts and connecting on one for a touchdown. His main target was tight end Bobby Williams, who caught four passed for 96 yards. Only Odessa Permian's Marcus Lott had a better opener, catching four passes for 105 yards.

Andrews' Neighbors, who was considered one of the state's top safties last year, proved he can move the Mustang offense. Neighbors scored three touchdowns and passed for another in the victory over Brownfield.

Midland High defeated the Mustangs by a 20-7 margin last year in Andrews, but the troublesome Mustangs hold a 3-2 advantage in the current series. And the Mustangs aren't exactly playing out of a weak league. District 2-4A has to be one of the toughest 4A football districts in the state with the likes of state-ranked Sweetwater as a member.

Carrollton's Lindy Miller chips to the 17th green at Mission Country Club Thursday on his way to winning the NTPGA Sectional golf tournament by three strokes.

Miller claims second NTPGA title

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Lindy Miller birdied the final two holes to snatch the North Texas PGA Sectional tournament title from the clutches of Floydada's Gene Mitchell at Mission Country Club Thursday. It was his second straight NTPGA Sectional title.

The West Texas pro contributed no little amount to his own demise by taking a double bogey six on the final hole and rimming the cup at 16 on a birdie putt that would have been demoralizing, if not fatal, to Miller.

The 29-year-old Miller from Carrollton, where he is an assistant pro, shot a final round 69 to go with opening rounds of 72-71 for a 212 total, three strokes better than Mitchell.

"That bunker shot on 18 was the difference," said Miller. "His lie was impossible and it cost him two strokes."

Miller, a veteran of six years on the pro tour, started out fast, with birdies on two, three and five. "Then I had a string of pars before bogeying 13 and 15" and at that point it looked like Mitchell's match.

But Miller, who won last year at Holly Tree in Tyler, rallied to become the first multi-winner since former Midland Country Club pro Rives McBee won at Green Tree three years ago, his third in a row.

McBee finished in a tie for fourth with a 217, sharing the spot with Midland's Terry Lester and Fort Worth's Steve Crain. Billy Harris, Dallas, was second at 216.

"I made some putts the first few holes and dropped a 15 to 20 foot birdie on 18," said Miller, a graduate of Oklahoma State, "but for the most part it was a routine round. I had some four or five footers to save pars."

Miller, who will play in next week's Southwestern Classic at Abilene, has been an assistant at Carrollton for six months. "No, this doesn't give me the urge to return to the pro tour. I just want to get some experience and hope for a head pro's job."

On tour, Miller rates a second at Tallahasee, a fourth at Hawaii and a tie for eighth at Colonial, all in 1979, his first year, the high points of his pro career.

"This is an excellent course," he praised, "I know they've really moved some dirt, because I know how flat the desert is out here."

In an 18-hole consolation for players who failed to make the cut after the first 36 holes, Midland Country Club's George Clark took first with a 73, one stroke in front of Odessa's Doug Smith.

Chiefs throw haymaker at Raiders' strength

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs elected to throw their haymaker at the strongest facet of the Los Angeles Raiders. And it was the Raiders who blinked.

"We decided to go right at their cornerbacks, the strength of their team," said quarterback Bill Kenney. "The strength of our team is our wide receivers. We wanted to go right at them."

And that is exactly what the resurgent Chiefs did in a convincing 36-20 conquest of their longtime rivals Thursday night. Kenney, who had passed for 397 yards against New Orleans the week before, hit 18 of 38 for 259 yards and two touchdowns.

And when the offense bogged down, Nick Lowery was there to kick five field goals, tying the single-game club record which Jan Stenerud achieved three different times.

"Our offensive line gave us time to work on the corners," said Carlos Carson, who atoned for dropping a touchdown pass in the second quarter by catching a 25-yard scoring strike in the third. Carson, Kenney's favorite receiver, wound up with five catches for 118 yards.

"In the early part of the game we tried to speed off the ball but that didn't work out," he said. "So the receivers got together as a group and decided to make their cornerbacks commit."

Carson had words several times with Lester Hayes, the Raiders' All-Pro cornerback.

"We had a couple of altercations. He grabbed my facemask and I told him I didn't appreciate that," said Carson. "But he apologized. That's all part of the game."

The Raiders got on the board first with Frank Hawkins' one-yard touchdown plunge capping a 63-yard drive. Todd Christensen, following a Kansas City turnover, made a remarkable catch of a 3-yard scoring strike in the second period. But by then, Lowery was at work. His field goals measured 39, 22, 42, 58 and 21 yards. His 21-yarder 4:59 into the third quarter gave the Chiefs a 15-14 lead they never relinquished. His 58-yarder with :43 to go in the first half tied a career-longest.

"I noticed how well the ball was carrying," said Lowery. I said to Coach Mackovic, 'Coach, let's try it.' He said, 'We will, we will.'"

John Mackovic, 2-0 two games into his third year as Chiefs' coach, credited the defense.

"I thought the game boiled down to how the defenses played," he said. "Everything was hard-earned during the night."

The Raiders, 1-1, killed themselves with two turnovers deep in their own territory.

4-5A appears on schedule

After one week of football action, District 4-5A teams own a 6-2 record against outside opponents. That's pretty much to form, but we're still wondering how 4A Snyder scored 42 points against the Big Spring Steers.

Snyder, down on its football luck the past few years, haven't scored 42 points in the last three seasons — have they?

The other 4-5A team to lose was Abilene Cooper, but it was a 27-14 loss to Brownwood as Gordon Wood keeps on truckin' down the road, adding victory to victory.

This corner picked Big Spring to finish last and Cooper to finish seventh in the eight-team league this year, so the news doesn't burn any ears. Really, the district is moving along about as expected.

I'm sure Andrews coach David Visentine, who visits Memorial Stadium tonight with his Mustangs, didn't like to see the 2-4A results with the likes of downtrodden Lamesa and Snyder winning. He's got enough problems with the likes of Sweetwater, Monahans, Lake View, etc.

San Angelo's Don Hall turned in the most impressive rushing performance during Week No. 1, rushing for 181 yards on 15 carries in a 26-13 victory over Hereford. However, the best one-two rushing punch came from Abilene High in a 24-6 victory over Wichita Falls Rider Saturday. Abilene's Junior Bell had 103 yards rushing and George McFarland added 91.

Midland High's Matt Marcum, with 217 yards passing on 12 of 22 efforts, vaulted the Bulldogs to a league leading stat while Odessa Permian's Marcus Lott leads all receivers with 105 yards on just four catches.

Marcum got double honors after the first week as the senior added 15 yards rushing to his passing total to take the early lead in the total offense category with 232 yards.

Midland Lee's Rodney Sims leads district runners in scoring with 18 points and is tied with Abilene's Bell for second in rushing with 103 yards. Sims, however, got his 103 on 15 carries while Bell carried 19 times. Still, both are 78 yards behind Hall, who took the big early lead.

Lee, as you would expect after a 42-0 opener, leads both the offensive and defensive team statistics. The Rebs had 456 yards on offense and allowed only 119 on defense. Lee was the only 4-5A team to post a shutout on opening night. Lee was also the least penalized team with only 25 yards charged against them.

Odessa High's Jeff Wright took the punting lead, averaging 45.4 yards on five punts. That's the one area where MHS and Lee hold up the rear, but MHS punted only three times (one returned for a TD) and Lee punted only once.

We were 6-2 in the picking column last week and here's a look at tonight's games involving teams from District 4-5A.

Midland High 28, Andrews 19: Andrews was tough in its opener, but with seven underclassmen on offense and the same on defense this may be too young a team to grapple with the Bulldogs. Still, expect some points to be scored.

Midland Lee 21, Temple 7: Oh no! I'm not going to be stupid again this year. I don't want For Sale signs in my front yard Saturday morning. Temple may want revenge, but I want to forget last year's prediction. It still haunts me.

Odessa Permian 40, El Paso Hanks Zippo: Are you kidding me? An El Paso team in Permian's home opener. This is where you play the theme from Jaws. The team from Hill Street Blues will investigate.

Odessa High 24, El Paso Austin 10: Coach Jerry Millsaps is crying over the long trip to El Paso by bus, but that won't make much difference unless the Bronchos are psyched out already over the prospects of travel.

San Angelo 18, Killeen 7: This won't be the easiest test of the year for the Bobcats. Hall will probably be held to 120 yards rushing.

Lubbock Estacado 38, Big Spring 18: I'll bet Midland High coach Doug McCutchen would almost miss tonight's game with Andrews to see this one. The Bulldogs play both in the next two weeks. Estacado already owns a win over a solid Plainview team.

Wichita Falls 14, Abilene Cooper 7: Moving from 4A competition to 5A may be a blessing for the Cougars after last week's loss to Brownwood, but it still counts as another loss.

Sweetwater 22, Abilene High 16: Sweetwater is for real no matter what class you put them in. If Abilene High wins this one, the sweat you see will be coming from Permian's John Wilkins, who catches the Eagles in the first week of district play.

BULLDOGS

"Andrews always has been a tough test for Midland High," says McCutchen. "And it worries you some when the kids come out flat on Monday. We had one of the worst practices we've had this year on Monday. Monday is our learning day and Andrews can really confuse your defense with all the misdirection they run."

VISENTINE ALSO noted a "Blue Monday" after the Brownfield victory, but was pleased with what he saw against Brownfield.

"We felt good about last week," Visentine said. "We were a little worried about the early season since we have such a young and inexprienced team. We felt like we could be better than last year, but it looks like our whole league is going to be better."

Visentine is working with a young team that is off to a fast start. Six juniors and a sophomore dot the offensive starting lineup while seven juniors are starting on defense. The Mustangs could be awesome in another year with the playing experience being gained in this campaign.

MHS, on the other hand, has only split end Robbie Harkrider starting on offense and cornerback Anthony Adkinson starting on defense as juniors. All the rest are seniors.

The two quarterbacks on the field tonight won't be the only offensive weapons. Midland High's Jake Madrid, returning for a second year at halfback, had 91 yards rushing, averaging over 10 yards per carry. That was the sixth best performance among 4-5A teams in last week's openers.

Andrews tailback Ruben Salcido, who once attended Midland High as a sophomore, gained an impressive 168 yards rushing against Brownfield.

Defensively, McCutchen was pleased with the play of tackle James Campbell and strong safety Ben Grimes. Campbell had the most first hits while Grimes led the tackling chart.

Still, McCutchen sees some room for improvement on defense. "Ben played a great game against Monterey, but we aren't where we want to be on defense when your safety leads the team in tackles."

Andrews does have a slight advantage over MHS as do all 4A schools early in the season. The Mustangs were allowed to start in pads a week earlier than the 5A schools because they don't have spring training. Andrews also was allowed to have two scrimmage sessions (against Crane and Borger) while the Bulldogs had only one scrimmage against Lubbock Coronado.

Friday the 13th will prove to be lucky for one of these two teams when the battle of unbeaten teams end tonight. Both teams, however, realize that tonight's game doesn't count in district standings and doesn't make or break a season. Still, fireworks always seem to fly when Andrews meets Midland High. It's been a good rivalry.

New names surface in drug trial

Milner links Mays to 'red juice'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Milner, a former New York Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder, says he discovered a "really nasty" stimulant nicknamed "red juice" in the locker of Willie Mays when the Hall of Fame outfielder played with the Mets in 1973.

Milner, testifying Thursday in the U.S. District court drug trial of Philadelphia caterer Curtis Strong, said he never saw Mays use the purported stimulant.

Mays, reached at his home in Atherton, Calif., said he didn't recall "having anything in my locker like that. ... It's just hearsay, as far as I'm concerned. I'm saying I don't know what he found in there, because I don't know what he thinks was in there. I don't do that (drugs). I never get involved with that."

MILNER SAID the use of amphetamines was once so common that the drug was regularly left in his Pirates locker. Two other former Pirates, Dave Parker and Dale Berra, also testified in federal court this week that the drug was readily available to players.

Milner was the seventh current or former player to take the witness stand in the trial of Strong, who is accused of dealing drugs to major-league players in Pittsburgh on 16 dates from 1980 to 1984.

The top pinch hitter on the 1979 world champion Pirates, Milner was expected t be the last player called to testify by the prosecution. Strong's attorney, Adam O. Renfroe Jr., has promised to call more players as defense witnesses next week.

Milner said he didn't know who distributed the amphetamines. "I just know I took them," he said.

"They'd always be in my locker. Not every game; usually games in the second half of the season when the players are worn out and a little tired," he said.

Parker, testifying Thursday, backed up Berra's statement of two days earlier that former Pirate captains Willie Stargell and Bill Madlock dispensed the stimulants. Both Madlock and Stargell denied the allegations.

"It's obvious he (Parker) is lying," Madlock told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. "I don't know what kind of a friend I'd call him, but he is lying."

Milner said he used cocaine on a regular basis during his 10 seasons in the big leagues — and, he said, apparently so did many other players.

THIRTY CURRENT or former players have been tied to drug use or knowledge of its use through testimony in the trial, which began Sept. 3.

"You saw guys playing baseball who used cocaine, and their performance would speak for itself," Milner said. "On the field and at the plate, there just wasn't a natural reaction. (A player) would think the reaction was natural, but it wasn't.

"When you were using cocaine, you'd stay up all night, until 3 or 3:30 a.m. and then you'd sleep until 2 or 3 p.m. and it would be time to go to the ballpark," he said. "It would really tear your body down. There was no time to relax. So you'd take a few greenies and some coffee and then before the game you'd take a few reds. The guys who snorted cocaine before a game, the performance just wouldn't be there. They'd think that it was there, but it wasn't there."

"Greenies" and "reds" are commonly used terms for various types of narcotics, including amphetamines, which stimulate the central nervous system and cause rapid heartbeat. Another type of "eal potent speed," Milner said, was a drug he called "red juice."

Milner said he became familiar with the stimulant when he found it in Mays' locker when the two were New York Mets teammates.

"I tasted it one time during his last year (1973) and it was really nasty. Willie had this red juice ... I guess the pharmacist made it for him. I don't know what kind of speed it was but it kept your eyes open," Milner told a federal grand jury earlier this year.

Asked by Renfroe who "Willie" was, Milner replied: "Mays, Willie Mays. The great one. Yeah."

Milner's reply brought several gasps and a few groans from spectators packed into the wood-paneled courtroom.

Mays, who joined the Mets in 1972, said that his locker "was an open book. Anybody could go into my locker because I never had anything to hide."

As to whether he ever used "red juice" or any stimulant, Mays said: "My record speaks for itself. I never missed a game for misusing my body. ... I'm 54 right now and I'm in fairly good shape. I could never have played like I did if I'd misused my body."

MAYS WAS upset that his name came up at all.

"I don't think I'm involved in any of the issues in the case in Pittsburgh," he said. "I'm against all that, very much so. ... This is a trial of a different meaning. These guys are into hard, hard drugs.

"Why am I going to be on trial for what he says he thinks he saw in my locker? It's a shame a man can be crucified for one statement, to play all those years and have one statement crucify me. I hope the people won't take that one statement and crucify me."

Renfroe said pharmacists told him "red juice" is made by breaking an amphetamine capsule into water or another beverage and that it is sometimes used by college students to help them study long hours.

"You could tell if someone is speeding on drugs," Milner said. "I wasn't speeding as much because I didn't play that much."

Milner, now unemployed, said he found it much easier to hit off former National League strikeout leader J.R. Richard when the pitcher was using drugs.

"He wouldn't be as fast or as sharp," Milner said. "He made a lot of mistakes. You could tell a lot of difference. A few times you knew he had used it (cocaine) the night before."

Not only did big-leaguers play after using cocaine, they even bought it at the ballpark, Milner said.

Milner said he was sitting in front of his locker during a Pirates-Astros game on June 13, 1980, when Strong entered the Pirates clubhouse and the two began chatting. At the time, Milner said, "the clubhouse was pretty wide open."

"I asked him if he had some stuff. He said, 'Yes.' We went back to the restroom and the money exchanged hands. (Dave) Parker and I drove around after the game and used it."

Milner said he purchased two grams of cocaine for $200.

"He had pretty good stuff," Milner testified of the cocaine allegedly supplied him by Strong. "It was better than the stuff I got in Pittsburgh."

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner said he "had no idea" there was a drug deal going on a few feet away from his dugout.

"I was out there managing a game," Tanner said. "What am I supposed to do? You know I didn't know about it. Don't even ask that question."

Tanner said that if he had known the Pirates had a drug problem, "We would have done something about it."

MILNER, PARKER and Berra have testified they used cocaine on a regular basis. Pirates pitcher Rod Scurry entered a drug rehabilitation center last season and former Pirates outfielder Lee Lacy, now with the Baltimore Orioles, has also been named in testimony as a cocaine user.

Tanner said he didn't do anything about the cocaine deals Strong and Shelby Greer, 29, of Philadelphia, are said to have made in and around Three Rivers Stadium because, "I didn't know them."

Springs hopes to sign with Bucs after trial

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys running back Ron Springs said he hoped to sign a contract with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers after his sentencing today for resisting arrest in a topless nightclub early this year.

Springs, 28, whose career in the National Football League has been put on hold because of charges he assaulted a female police officer, was convicted of the lesser charge on Thursday.

Jurors were to return to state district court this morning to decide on a sentence for Springs, who admitted that he resisted arrest during a scuffle with two police officers at the Million Dollar Saloon on Jan. 18.

Thursday, the jury of nine women and three men returned after just under four hours with the verdict that Springs was guilty of resisting arrest, a Class A misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Springs trial stemmed from an incident with two officers who tried to remove the 244-pound athlete from the bar. Police had been called to the bar by the day manager, who said Springs was causing a disturbance and refused to leave.

Following closing arguments, the state district court panel began deliberating about 2:45 p.m. CDT. It emerged once to hear the record of Springs' testimony concerning his initial reaction to being handcuffed by police and returned the verdict about 6:35 p.m.

"I really feel that we won because as I told you I felt I did resist arrest but I didn't assault any police officers," Springs said. "I just want the people to know, the people of Dallas and the people of the nation, that I did not by any means hurt any police officer."

Defense attorney Richard Corbitt said he considered the jury's decision to convict Springs of the lesser offense "a victory."

Corbitt said the key to the jury's decision was Springs' statement about two months ago admitting he resisted arrest.

Trying to knock down Springs' claim that he hit the officer accidentally, Fitzpatrick told the jury in his closing arguement, "Come back and tell this man something he already knows, that he's guilty as sin of that offense."

Mets, Yankees both victorious

Associated Press

New Yorkers in the throes of pennant fever had nothing to complain about Thursday, as the Mets edged the St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 to reclaim first place in the National League East and the Yankees closed the American League East gap to 1½ games with a 7-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Both games were played in New York, the first time in recent memory that the city played host to dual pennant races in one day.

The Yankees were behind 4-1 in the first game of their series with the Blue Jays. But Ron Hassey blasted a three-run homer to cap a six-run outburst in the seventh inning.

Toronto led 4-1 in with one out, but two errors by shortstop Tony Fernandez helped New York rally against Blue Jays starter Dave Stieb and a pair of relievers. With one out in the seventh, Stieb walked Willie Randolph and Bobby Meacham hit a grounder up the middle to shortstop Tony Fernandez.

Fernandez fielded it cleanly and appeared ready to get a forceout himself, but suddenly flipped the ball past startled second baseman Damaso Garcia. Stieb then loaded the bases by walking Rickey Henderson.

In came Gary Lavelle, 4-7, and Randolph scored to make it 4-2 on a forceout at second. Don Mattingly's single to right cut the deficit to one. Dave Winfield followed with a game-tying infield single and reached second on a wild throw by Fernandez.

Then came Hassey's 12th homer of the season, a drive into the third deck in right field that gave Ron Guidry his 19th victory in 24 decisions.

At Shea Stadium Thursday afternoon, Keith Hernandez singled in the bottom of the ninth and Mookie Wilson sprinted home from second to propel the Mets back into first place. It was Hernandez's 22nd game-winner, tying a major-league record set in 1963 by Harold Baines of the Chicago White Sox.

New York, now up by one game, meets the Cards in a three-game series in St. Louis next month.

Reliever Jesse Orosco, 6-5, was the winner despite surrendering Willie McGee's game-tying home run in the top of the ninth.

The Mets chased 20-game winner Joaquin Andujar in the second inning, scoring four runs in the first and two more in the second for a 6-0 lead.

Angels 5, Rangers 3

Ruppert Jones tripled in Rod Carew for the winning run in the seventh inning for Mike Witt's fifth straight victory in a 13-7 campaign.

Former Midland Cub Donnie Moore worked the final two innings for his 26th save of the year, breaking a club record set seven years ago by Dave LaRoche. Bobby Grich also etched his name in the team's record book with his 146th career homer as an Angel, and 10th this season, breaking Don Baylor's mark.

Baseball Roundup

Jones, who had been mired in a 1-for-24 slump, also doubled in Carew in the first inning for the Angels' first score.

"The odds were with me," Jones said. "Things haven't been going that well for me lately."

The triple helped spark a two-run rally that overcame a 3-2 deficit.

"Coming back from that was a big feather in our cap. It showed a lot of our character," Jones said. "It was a big comeback for us tonight."

White Sox 4, Twins 2

Greg Walker tripled in two runs off Mike Smithson, 14-12, in the third inning, then scored on a single by Ron Kittle, for Chicago's winning margin.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 1

Floyd Rayford's two-run homer in the third was all rookie Ken Dixon needed for his seventh victory in 10 starts, and Rick Dempsey singled in an extra run for the Orioles in the ninth.

Reds 2, Padres 1

Buddy Bell and Tony Perez knocked in runs in the first inning and Jay Tibbs scattered seven hits in eight innings.

Reds player-manager Pete Rose sat out the game, saying he didn't sleep enough after breaking Ty Cobb's all-time hit record Wednesday night.

Andy Hawkins, 17-6, took the Padres' 10th loss in 13 games.

Braves 11, Dodgers 6

The Braves, down 5-0, scored six runs in the third inning. The Dodgers, NL West leaders, won the first four games, scoring 48 runs.

Brad Komminsk capped the Braves' rally with a three-run homer.

Expos 6, Phillies 3

Hubie Brooks, snapping an 0-for-13 slump, hit a grand slam in the fifth inning. Winner Floyd Youmans, 3-2, gave up two runs and four hits in five innings, and Jeff Reardon notched his 34th save with relief in the last two innings.

Pirates 10, Cubs 2

R.J. Reynolds hit a three-run homer, Mike Brown added a solo shot and reliever Don Robinson chipped in a grand slam homer in the Pirates' six-run eighth inning.

Robinson relieved Rick Rhoden, 9-3, in the eighth and personally put the game out of reach. He then finished his third save of the year.

Astros 5, Giants 2

Kevin Bass doubled and tripled, scored one run and drove in another as Houston won its eighth over the last nine games.

Rookie Charlie Kerfeld gave up a lone run on six hits in seven innings of work. Dave LaPoint, 7-13, was the loser.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 14, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Variety adds needed spice to your business and personal life. You feel inspired and produce better work. Financial pressures subside. A happy family life is a top priority. Listen to an associate with more experience. You may not be getting the most for your money. Review investments. Romance can be a roller coaster for those who do not want to get serious. Devote some of your leisure time to career-related activities. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: newscaster Hughes Rudd, teacher's union leader Albert Shanker, film producer Hal Wallis, actresses Zoe Caldwell and Mary Frances Crosby, the Montreal Expos' Tim Wallach, baseball announcer Jerry Coleman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to spring a happy surprise on a special friend or relative. Try to break away from your regular routine. A change of scenery gives you a whole new perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Praise a youngster for having done a wonderful job. The response you get will warm your heart. Your cup runneth over with joy when family members get together this weekend. Be affectionate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A message from someone at a distance is music to your ears. Mate or partner can be very convincing. Be sure you have all available information before making a big decision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is no compelling reason for you to do something that doesn't interest you. Make a polite excuse and slip away for some rest and relaxation. A change of scenery works wonders.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Channel your energies into helping others. A young person learns from your example. Be patient with someone who is shy or hesitant. Music helps you set the mood for romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The success you want will never come unless you work at it. Refuse to do less than your best. Judge for yourself the quality of a new product. Your instincts are correct.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get an opportunity to meet someone you have long admired. Put your best foot forward and refrain from gushing. Your dreams can come if you really believe. Be more practical in money matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): See exactly what someone has done before making judgments. Romance is almost magical now. You find challenging new hills to climb. Focus on what really means the most to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is possible to have a great time without spending much money. Be imaginative when planning entertainment. Your good memory saves you from making an embarrassing observation. Get out and socialize more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A personal relationship improves when someone keeps his or her word. Let nothing come between you and your ultimate goal. Heed your intuition and you will avoid costly mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Know when you are under attack and be prepared to fight back. Set your own terms before agreeing to accept a new responsibility. Certain financial questions must be answered.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may prefer watching a sporting event to playing in it today. A phone call confirms the wisdom of a financial or romantic decision. Be on your best behavior at social gatherings.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

An epidemic of flu had wreaked havoc with the members of the club's team—so much so that, in desperation, they had to call on Trump Coup Tommy to complete the squad. They did so reluctantly, for they were well aware of Tommy's predilection for butchering hands unless there was a bad trump break.

Not even the fact that the match was being played on Friday the 13th could dampen Tommy's ardor. After going down on a couple of hands that were made easily in the other room, Tommy had an opportunity to display his unique talent.

In both rooms the final contract was seven spades. North's five no trump bid was the Grand Slam Force, requesting South to bid seven if he had two of the top three honors in his suit.

In both rooms the opening lead was the queen of clubs. The opposing declarer won and cashed the ace of spades to learn of the bad trump break. He cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart, to reduce his trump length to that of East. Now he crossed to the jack of trumps and started to run hearts. East and declarer both discarded three diamonds and a club. When declarer tried to cash the ace of diamonds, East ruffed for down one.

Tommy saw this line would fail. He also realized that he could not afford to cash the ace of diamonds early, because East would ruff the third round of hearts and Tommy would have no entry back to the table. After ruffing the heart, Tommy found a neat solution to his problem. He first cashed the king of diamonds from hand! Now he crossed back to dummy with a trump to run his hearts, and East was helpless. Whenever he ruffed, Tommy would overruff and claim the rest of the tricks.

Show goes on for Miss New Jersey

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss New Jersey Toni Georgiana, who hurt her knee during a dance routine in the Miss America pageant talent preliminaries, walked down the runway in the swimsuit competition Thursday night, showing no sign of her injury.

Miss Georgiana, who twisted her knee during a dance performance, did not limp or hobble during her presentation.

She was the first contestant in pageant history to injure herself during competition.

Earlier Thursday, Miss Georgiana said she would continue to compete in the pageant "on my high heels" despite the injury.

"I've gone this far. I'm not stopping now," she said, her left knee wrapped in a bandage.

The 21-year-old professional dancer said she lost her balance Wednesday night at the end of her performance of the jazz ballet "Slaughter on 10th Avenue," a demanding sequence of stretches and high kicks.

"It's been a trying summer," said the contestant who survived a court challenge to her state title.

The first runner-up in the Miss New Jersey pageant, Laura Ann Bridges, had charged that Miss Georgiana did not meet the state contest's eligibility requirements.

Miss Georgiana entered the Miss New Jersey Pageant while a Pennsylvania resident by registering for a two-week summer course at Trenton State College. She moved to New Jersey several weeks ago.

LAKENHEATH, England (AP) — Prince Charles sat in the cockpit of an F-111 fighter-bomber during a visit to Britain's largest U.S. air base.

Prince Charles

The 36-year-old prince, visiting the U.S. air base at Lakenheath, in eastern England, said Thursday he wanted to take a close look at the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing, NATO's largest unit for the F-111, which is capable of carrying nuclear weapons.

Capt. Ron Kurjanowikz of New York demonstrated the plane's terrain-following guidance system and explained the aircraft's complicated instrumentation to the prince.

Charles also delighted his American hosts when he stopped to speak with a crowd of more than 1,500 American children.

• • •

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme has agreed to help defected film director Andrey Tarkovsky try to persuade Soviet authorities to let Tarkovsky's 15-year-old son leave the Soviet Union.

The Soviet director, who has been shooting "The Sacrifice," his first film in exile, in Sweden this summer, delivered a written appeal to the prime minister's office and was told by an aide Thursday that Palme, campaigning for Sunday's general elections, would receive him today.

Since their defection early this year Tarkovsky and his wife, Larisa, have solicited the help of the presidents of France and Iceland and the foreign minister of Italy to gain the release of their son, Andrey, and Larisa's mother. Their intervention with Moscow was fruitless.

Provided the election returns Palme to office he is expected to travel to Moscow soon at the invitation of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

DENVER (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen is suing a tavern in Grand Junction over copyright infringement, claiming that a band appearing there sang "Dancing in the Dark" without paying the required copyright fees.

Miss New Jersey, Toni Georgiana, gives the thumbs up sign on stage at the Miss America Pageant Thursday after injuring her foot during the talent competition.

The federal court suit maintains that Charles Exner, owner of the Outpost Saloon, failed to pay the fee to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Such actions are common in the music industry.

The lawsuit asks that Exner be barred from playing the song and that he pay damages of $10,000 to $250,000.

Exner said he said he made out a check for more than $100 as first-quarter fees last winter after a visit from an ASCAP agent, who never returned to pick it up.

"There ain't no $10,000 problem here," said Exner. "I don't even make $10,000 a year. I have a little bitty club."

• • •

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Bob Newhart, hospitalized for nearly a week because of a nosebleed, has been released to continue his recuperation at home, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Newhart, the 56-year-old star of the television series "Newhart," left St. John's Hospital on Monday, hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller said Thursday. He was admitted Sept. 3.

Production on the CBS-TV series is scheduled to resume Sept. 23, said Larry Bloustein, a spokesman for Lorimar Productions, which produces the show.

Newhart is nominated for an Emmy for best actor in a comedy series, and Bloustein said he expected Newhart to attend the 37th annual Emmy Awards ceremony Sept. 22.

• • •

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Terry Linkert's father says his son's visit to Disney World was a dream come true for the 10-year-old Canadian, who died on the plane trip home.

"I am so happy he got the chance to go to Disney World," said Terry Linkert Sr., at his home in Barrie, Ontario. "It was better than he expected. Everyone was so nice. They made a dream come true."

The boy's long fight against bone cancer ended Sunday when he died in his sleep only 45 minutes before his plane home landed at Toronto airport. He and his family had visited the Magic Kingdom with the help of well-wishers in Toronto who raised the money to send him and his family.

Redskins draw nod over Houston

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The people who make point spreads don't think much of the first week's results in the National Football League. Why else would they make the Washington Redskins, 44-14 losers to Dallas Monday night 9½-point favorites over the Houston Oilers, who beat the AFC champion Miami Dolphins 26-23?

A few guesses.

1. The Redskins are home and their pride is on the line.

2. The Cowboys intercepted Joe Theismann six times last week, something that may make Joe more careful this week.

3. Dan Marino, a holdout for 39 days, was rusty and the Dolphins had nine new starters.

4. The Redskins were 11-5 last year, the Oilers 3-13 and nobody turns around that quickly.

5. All of the above, which adds up to:

6. The Redskins are a better team.

... REDSKINS.

Seattle (plus 3) at San Diego.

How could the Chargers score only 14 points against Buffalo?

How could the Chargers hold Buffalo to only nine points?

They may score just 14 points again, but they sure won't hold Seattle to nine.

...SEAHAWKS.

Dallas (minus 4½) at Detroit.

Tom Landry worries about a letdown after the pasting the Cowboys gave the Redskins. They may let down, but they won't collapse.

... COWBOYS.

Indianapolis (plus 17) at Miami.

Beware the high-priced spread. Beware Don Shula teams when aroused.

...DOLPHINS.

Atlanta (plus 14) at San Francisco.

See Dolphins. Beware Bill Walsh, too.

...49ers.

New York Giants (plus 1) at Green Bay.

The Giants had eight sacks against the Eagles, the Packers allowed seven against New England. Lynn Dickey is even less mobile than Ron Jaworski. Irresistable force meets movable object.

...GIANTS

Pittsburgh (minus 2) at Cleveland (Monday night)

The Steelers ran it up a bit on the Colts. They won't have that problem in Cleveland, where they haven't won since 1981.

...BROWNS.

New England (minus 4½) at Chicago.

If the New England offensive line blocks, Tony Eason can pick on a depleted Chicago secondary. New England's line will block some.

...PATRIOTS.

Niekro has more riding tonight than just 300th victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Sure, said Phil Niekro, tonight's start against the Toronto Blue Jays will be special, and not just because a victory would be the 300th of his pitching career.

"I will not have gotten to the top of the hill until I get into the World Series," said the 46-year-old knuckleballer, whose only experience in post-season play came with Atlanta in the 1969 and 1982 National League playoffs. The Braves lost to the New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals, respectively.

"Day in and day out, people bring it (No. 300) to my attention, and I can't help but think about it," Niekro, 15-9, said Thursday. "But I am putting the pennant race before this game. This ballgame is a lot more important to a lot more people than myself."

Indeed, after New York's 7-5 victory over Toronto Thursday night, the Yankees were only 1½ games back of the Blue Jays with three more games remaining in the weekend series.

In 22 major-league seasons, Niekro has seen a lot of history made, and that has helped him face this moment, he said.

"I saw what Henry (Aaron) went through in Atlanta (on the way to his record 715th home run)," Niekro said. "I guess I saw this (attention) coming."

Niekro had a ringside seat earlier this season when Tom Seaver of the Chicago White Sox won his 300th game by beating the Yankees.

Niekro also noted that, like Seaver, No. 300 will come for a team he joined late in his career. The 300th for Seaver, a longtime Met, was only his 27th for the White Sox. Niekro pitched 20 years for the Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves before being traded to the Yankees after the 1983 season.

Teaff thinks Georgia game bad on timing

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor doesn't care for the timing of his team's 1985 battle with the Georgia Bulldogs.

"We catch them at a bad time because they're coming off a loss," Teaff said. "They're not used to losing in Athens."

The Bears and Bulldogs square off at 11:10 p.m. CDT Saturday in a game that will be televised nationally on cable (WTBS).

Georgia has lost only seven regular season games in the 1980s and owns a 29-3 record in Sanford Stadium during that span. However, the Bulldogs are mired in a four-game regular season losing streak, including two on their home field.

"It's a challenge to play between the hedges over there," Teaff said. "They have a great winning tradition."

Georgia, 0-1 after dropping a Labor Day night battle to Alabama 20-16, is a one-touchdown favorite to down the Bears, who opened last week with a 39-18 triumph over Wyoming.

It will be the third meeting between the teams. Georgia has won twice previously at Athens — 24-12 in Teaff's first game at Baylor in 1972 and 16-14 in 1978.

Baylor turned back Wyoming last week with a big-play offense and defense. The Bears struck for touchdowns on a 75-yard punt return by Thomas Everett, a 77-yard run by Jackie Ball and scoring passes from two quarterbacks — Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke. Baylor also stopped three scoring threats inside its 10 and forced Wyoming to settle for a field goal on another penetration of the 10-yard line.

"It's obvious from the Wyoming game that Baylor has a lot of weapons and a lot of ways they can hurt you," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said. "They have tremendous speed which always means big play potential.

"You are going to see the ball in the air," Dooley said. "I would not be surprised to see 40 passes. Why not? They have great, great receivers, two great quarterbacks."

Exxon celebrating 50 years in Midland

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Exxon U.S.A., Corp., today, celebrated its fiftieth anniversay in Midland, and in honor of the occassion Midland Mayor, Thane Akins, proclaimed the day as Exxon Day in Midland.

One of Midland's oldest and largest employers, the company which employs 780 in the Midland-based office, will celebrate half a century in the Tall City with a gala birthday party tonight at Midland Center for employees and invited guest. The fare will be Exxon-sized steaks and hamburgers, according to one employee.

"Midland has always proven to be the logical choice for our Mid-Continent Division, which serves 16 states," said Courtney Clark, director of personnel for Exxon in Midland. "To my knowledge there has never been any plans to relocate from Midland to someplace else."

Clark said that in the last round of restructuring of production, Midland had survived in tact, and may have even had a net increase of employees.

Exxon has had a strong presence in the Permian Basin since 1925, when it was known as the Humble Oil and Refining Co. Humble was involved in the discovery and development of the McCamey field, and prior to that time had completed the first major pipeline in the area, connecting the Big Lake field to the company's North Texas to Baytown pipeline. To supply fuel oil for railroads, Humble built a refinery at McCamey, and bought crude oil from local fields.

By 1926, Humble had created a permanent operating unit and employee camp at McCamey, and the same year built the firm's second major trunk line from McCamey to Corpus Christi. It was in 1927 that Humble entered the wholesale and retail end of the business by opening bulk distribution plants and service stations to serve the expanding oil field.

As Humble's involvement in the development of the Permian Basin oil industry expanded from the Yates, Sand Hills, and Big Lake fields to Ward and Andrews counties in Texas and Lea County in New Mexico, it began to seek an ideal spot to locate its Permian Basin headquarters. The company was attracted to Midland, according to reports, by its far-sighted and strong local leadership, and, in 1935 moved 40 Humble employees into offices on the 10th floor of the Petroleum Building.

As operations expanded and grews they required more space and Humble moved to the Midland Tower building in 1948, and finally Division officers were located in the newly constructed Humble Building in 1952.

It became the Exxon Building in 1973 when Humble changed its name to Exxon Company USA. Today only one-quarter of the 780 Exxon employees are housed in the building, with the remainder scattered among six other buildings. As headquarters for Mid-Continent Division, another 670 employees in areas as far flung as Glasgow, Montana; Pocatella, Idaho: LaBarge, Wyoming and Vernal, Utah report to the Midland office.

"Through both lean and boom years, Exxon has maintained a major presence in West Texas," said Dan Mendell, division production manager. "As the company celebrates its 50th anniversay in Midland, We look forward to a deeping interaction with and support of the community. We want to be good corporate citizens."

Humble's presence in Midland was sealed in 1952 with the dedication of the at 615 Missouri. Midland Mayor, Perry Pickett, cuts the ribbon assisted by Johnny House, Manager of Humble's West Texas Division. Hines Baker, President of Humble, (behind House) looks on with an unidentified field hand who was picked at random to represent the Humble field workers of the division.

Economists divided on when Fed will halt money growth

Associated Press

Economists are divided about how long it will take before the Federal Reserve Board intervenes to stop the rapid growth of the nation's money supply, which grew by another $1.4 million in late August.

Interest rates rose and bonds fell following the Fed's release of its newest report late Thursday.

The increase left the measure well above the upper limit of the Fed's growth target and disappointed traders who generally had expected it to remain unchanged.

Economists said they did not expect the Fed to take any immediate action to tighten credit in an attempt to rein in the money supply, which would push up interest rates.

The Fed tries to supply enough money to ensure steady economic growth without fueling inflation.

The Fed said M1 rose to a seasonally adjusted $609.8 billion in the week ended Sept. 2 from $608.4 billion the previous week. M1 includes cash in circulation, deposits in checking accounts and travelers checks.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $598.4 billion, a 15.1 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate of gain from the previous 13 weeks.

The Fed has said it would like to see M1 grow between 3 percent and 8 percent from the second quarter of this year through the fourth quarter.

Meanwhile, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., told a news conference that wide concern at home over imports has created "an appetite on Capitol Hill for a tough trade policy."

Rostenkowski, whose tax-writing panel is also the top trade committee in the House, said that by Sept. 26, he expects to start the final drafting of a major measure to impose strict quotas on imported textile goods.

He said the bill, which is the spearhead of a wave of protectionist legislation in Congress, should have little trouble in winning approval.

Rostenkowski also said the Ways and Means Committee expects to begin work next month on a more comprehensive trade measure to impose tariffs on imports from nations guilty of unfair trade practices.

Agency wins injunction against ex-Southwest Bancshares officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission on Thursday accused three former officers of Southwest Bancshares Inc., a bank holding company since taken over by another Texas firm, of filing false and misleading reports with the federal regulatory agency.

The SEC complaint, followed by a settlement, said the holding company, which owned all of the stock of 38 Texas banks with combined assets of $7.6 billion, filed a variety of misleading reports for periods in 1982 and 1983 concerning loan losses and projected loan losses.

Defendants held responsible for the allegedly improper filings were Charles E. McMahen, who was Southwest president and chief operating officer; John T. Cater, Southwest's chairman of the board and chief executive officer; and Joseph J. Whiteside, an executive vice president and chief financial officer.

The defendants, without admitting or denying guilt, consented to a series of injunctions entered in U.S. District Court here that barred them from future activity of the type alleged in the SEC complaint. Cater is president and chief operating officer and McMahen is vice chairman of administration of McCorp, formed by the merger of Southwest and Mercantile Texas Corp.

The complaint says the holding company, at the direction or with the knowledge of the three defendants, failed to follow generally accepted accounting principles and made improper decisions during some quarters based on "a desire to maintain earnings at certain levels."

The commission said some of the skewed accounting came to light during talks leading to a merger with Mercantile Texas Corp. and was corrected before the merger went through last summer.

FirstCity's new Private Line will allow customers to purchase high ticket items, on credit, by check.

FirstCity introduces new credit system

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

FirstCity National Bank, Midland, has introduced a new credit checking writing convenience, Private Line, for its Midland customers.

Private Line is a credit system designed to fill a niche between the credit card and the conventional, fixed-term consumer loan by allowing the customer to write checks on a line of credit, using a typical-looking checkbook.

The system provides a service to middle and upper income customers who don't want it known that they are buying on credit, according to Jerry King, senior vice president of marketing for FirstCity. He sees it being used in the following situations:

- When purchase need exceed the credit limits of the customer's Visa or MasterCard.
- Where payment in cash can be an added price negotiation tool.
- When needs or opportunities arise too suddenly to arrange for conventional financing.
- Private Line credit limits will be considerably higher than bank credit card lines and customers may utilize it for high ticket items such as automobiles, boats or vacations.
- The customer does not want another party to know he is being paid by loan.
- As an interim credit convenience in effect until more conventional financing can be arranged.

To activate the Private Line the borrower will simply write what appears to be an ordinary check, which will be specially encoded and routed directly to the line-of-credit account where it will be paid with a credit advance.

All activity on the Private Line account will be detailed on the borrower's monthly bank statement. The customer will have the option of paying 5-100 percent of the outstanding balance on the statement. King says there will probably be a minimum of $3,500 on a line-of-credit up to limits of a $100,000 or more, depending on the financial strength of the customer.

"Private Line will serve a need that credit cards do not match by providing higher dollar limits and lower interest rates," said King.

Donoghue's Money Fund Av. (tm) (Averages for all 260 taxable funds) 30-day average yield 7.08		46	7.05	7.30

Yield columns represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (r) -restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 260 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $41 million to $198.5 billion during the week ended Sept. 10, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 7.05 percent from 7.07 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield remained the same at 7.08 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity remained the same at 46 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Taxable money fund yields continue to hover around 7.05 percent, while the tax-free money fund yields have increased from 4.22 percent to 4.66 percent since July 23, 1985. Assets of tax-free money funds increased by $487 million this week, an indication that savvy investors are taking advantage of the opportunity to earn greater after-tax returns. Investors in 34 percent or higher marginal tax brackets can reap these benefits."

Teamsters union makes three-year contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union apparently has a new three-year contract with the carhauling industry, after a three-week strike and the rejection of an earlier agreement by a discontented rank and file.

The Teamsters union has narrowly ratified a three-year contract with the carhauling industry, a group of union dissidents said late Thursday.

The apparent ratification came after a three-week strike led to renegotiation of an earlier tentative agreement.

Nearly complete vote tallies showed 8,792 favored the pact and 6,808 opposed it, said Steve Kindred, a member of Teamsters for a Democratic Union. The Detroit-based group is made up of 8,000 Teamsters seeking to oust the union's leaders.

Attempts to reach several union spokesmen at their homes early today to confirm the TDU vote tallies were unsuccessful.

The 20,000 Teamster carhaulers went on strike July 26, shutting down deliveries of new vehicles to auto dealerships across the country. The union pulled down its picket lines Aug. 18, four days after reaching a tentative agreement with the industry, which is almost 100 percent unionized.

The agreement that was apparently ratified removes three objectionable provisions from an earlier version that was rejected by the rank and file by a nearly 5-to-1 margin.

In the newly ratified offer, management backed off its proposal to cut drivers' mileage rates — now about 65 cents a mile while delivering cars — in half for return trips. The companies also agreed to abandon a proposed two-tier wage system in which newly hired drivers would have received 80 percent of the wage rate for experienced drivers.

Thirdly, the carhaulers' contract traditionally has contained a provision saying that if the industry needs economic relief, the Teamsters national bargaining committee can grant concessions without a vote of the membership. That provision was reworded in the latest offer, requiring a vote for those affected by any changes.

However, the dissident group urged rejection of the latest agreement, saying it contains a number of concessions. TDU organizer Ken Paff said the contract would allow freight to be diverted from terminals where there have been layoffs, making permanent a concession granted due to the economic recession in 1982.

Carhaulers operating in the western United State also would get pay increases that are slightly less than the rank and file elsewhere, Paff said. Newly hired officeworkers in Michigan and new mechanics working in the West would be paid less than veteran workers, as would newly recruited yardmasters working anywhere in the country under the new contract.

"With a bargaining committee headed by officials in tune with management thinking, a majority of members resigned themselves to settling for second best," said Jim Carothers, chairman of the carhaulers contract group for TDU. "This contract still contains concessions and is far from what could have been achieved."

According to Tim O'Neill, a spokesman at Teamster headquarters in Washington, the new contract generally calls for a 60-cent per hour pay increase during each of three years of the agreement. Car haulers now are paid about $13 an hour. Similar wage terms were included in the previous contract that was voted down. For drivers being paid on a mileage basis, increases under the new contract, as well as the earlier rejected proposal, are 3.5 cents per loaded mile in each of the next three years.

The earlier contract rejection and the renegotiation have provided a boost in prestige to the 8,000-member TDU.

Teamster leaders initially had praised the earlier tentative contract as the best deal available and urged the members to accept it. But TDU capitalized on widespread discontent over the agreement and urged its defeat.

After the rejection, talks resumed, but then broke down and union leaders finally sanctioned the strike.

Carhauling, unlike many other segments of the trucking industry, is profitable. The National Master Freight Agreement negotiated earlier this year with the rest of the unionized portion of the trucking industry contains numerous concessions by the Teamsters, including a two-tier wage scale. Under the national trucking agreement, new hires and part-time workers, for the first time, are paid less than veteran employees.

Palo Verde reactor shuts down in 'unusual event'

WINTERSBURG, Ariz. (AP) — The Unit 1 reactor at the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station has shut itself down, promting plant operators to declare an "unusual event," a spokesman says.

Dan Canady, spokesman for the Arizona Nuclear Power Project, the plant operators, said the reactor automatically shut itself down during routine testing at about 10 p.m. Thursday.

"Part of the checkout process, one of the checks that we have to do, is that while we are running at a certain power rating, we in essence remove the turbine and generator, take it totally out of service," Canady said. "When that happens, certain non-safety related equipment that has been drawing power from the generator is supposed to switch and start drawing power from the plant switchyard."

For some reason, Canady said, that did not happen and the equipment shut down. He said the reactor "sensed an imbalence in the plant" and automatically turned itself off.

"The reactor is designed and constructed to protect itself," Canady said. "That's exactly what it did. It performed exactly as it is supposed to."

Canady said an unusual event is the lowest of four levels of incidents that must be reported to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission. There have been four unusual events at the plant this year, he said.

Technicians were working Thursday night to determine what caused the malfunction, Canady said. He could not say how long the reactor would be out of service, but estimated it would be several days.

"We were operating at 50 percent of capacity," he said. "We were within a couple of days of purposly shutting down (as part of the testing process). What we probably do is bring it back up, then shut down again."

Canady said the reactor had been operating at 50 percent of its capacity for about 2½ weeks, the logest sustained period that it has been held at that level.

The power plant, located 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix, achieved its first nuclear chain reaction in June. The Unit One reactor is scheduled to be operating at 100 percent of acpacity by the end of this year.

Mattox to investigate plant

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Attorney General Jim Mattox says he will look into allegations of a cover-up of a massive cost increase and schedule delay at the South Texas Nuclear Project in 1978.

"I think it's relatively clear that there was a good bit of deception," Mattox said Thursday after meeting with members of Communities Organized for Public Service, a San Antonio-based group.

"It's obvious the public was not fully informed of the problems, and I think the matter does merit a review," Mattox told the Houston Post.

The nuclear plant — a joint project of Houston Lighting & Power, Central Power & Light and the cities of Austin and San Antonio — is under construction near Bay City. The plant is several years overdue and more than $4 billion over initial cost projections.

The coalition asked Mattox to investigate published reports that the four owners of the project ordered critical statements about the project removed from the minutes of a July 1978 meeting.

"There appears to be a strong indication of a pattern of deception on the part of the management team. This pattern of deception should be looked at closely," said group spokeswoman Helen Ayala.

HL&P spokesman Bob Waldrop said the utility company has not been advised of any action by the attorney general's office.

But Waldrop added, "We welcome the opportunity to clear the air ... We have nothing hide."

The group also raised concerns that a $750 million proposal by the plant's one-time builder, Brown & Root Inc., to settle a lawsuit with the four plant partners is too low, said Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for Mattox.

American builds Ferrari look-alike

MIAMI (AP) — It looks like a Ferrari, it drives like a Ferrari, but it doesn't cost like a Ferrari. And the newly-developed Machiavelli GTS 305 plus 2 isn't European, either.

"I'm building a European-styled car, with European interior and a European look but with an American engine and reliability," said Cuban-born Robert Henderson, designer, maker and distributor of the sleek car.

Only five Machiavellis exist so far. They feature General Motors chassis, a European suspension system, a hand-finished wood dashboard and a fiberglass body.

"It's designed for the guy who is in his 30s and has made a place for himself," Henderson said. "He's too old for a Trans Am ... but can't afford a Porsche."

Henderson, a developer, took profits from real estate projects and funds from a group of German investors and spent more than $500,000 to design and develop his car.

So far, car dealerships in New Orleans, Houston, Pensacola and Fort Worth have agreed to stock the Machiavelli, he said.

The car, which gets 17 to 24 miles per gallon, costs about $27,995, or half the base price of a Ferrari.

Henderson's 50-employee factory on Key Biscayne is assembling car parts, and he said he expects to produce 200 Machiavellis during the first year of production. On Oct. 1, he said he will begin taking orders for 1986 models.

MISD enrollment up to almost 19,000 pupils

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A large number of new students and new teachers populated Midland public schools the first two weeks of classes, the board learned at its Thursday meeting.

Enrollment was up nearly 750 students over the same time last year. On Thursday it was 18,903 compared to 18,156 the second week of school in 1984.

Peak enrollment is expected to exceed 19,000, according to Assistant Superintendent Garland Chapman. Last year, a maximum of 18,158 students attended Midland schools.

And a total of 179 new teachers reported to classes the first two weeks of school as well. Last year 97 teachers were hired over the summer. The board also on Thursday authorized the district to hire seven additional teachers, five more than had been budgeted.

The percentage of first year teachers dropped from 36 percent last year to 35 percent, according to Human Resources Director Dr. Thomas Holland. Many of those were recruited from out-of-state.

About 7 percent of those newly hired were minority employees, compared to 4 percent last year. Holland called that statistic disappointing, but said it represented a significant improvement over the 1984 figures. He cautioned, however, that minority employment next year could be worse because Midland's salaries aren't as far above those of other school districts.

People aren't the only changes in the Midland schools this year.

Two programs were approved for the coming year. Trustees voted to allow students to participate in an Artist in Education Program and to expand the Coronado Mathematics Program at Burnet and South Elementary schools.

Artist in Education will be offered as a six-week unit to Gifted Education Midland, fourth-grade music and possibly in physical education classes. At the secondary-school level, MISD may include it in drama, dance, physical education and athletic classes.

The program will utilize artist Susan Clark, who has been assigned to Midland through a grant provided by a cooperative program of the Texas Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Under the terms of the grant, Ms. Clark will devote 10 hours per week to community service, 10 to her sponsor, Ballet Midland, and 20 to her own personal development. She should begin working with the schools later this month.

Trustees also came to terms with KTPX Television of Midland to televise live coverage of the Lee-Permian football game on Oct. 10. Kickoff will be at 7:35 p.m.

KTPX offered to pay MISD and Ector County schools $4,500 each for exclusive rights to cover the game. Other prospective bidders included KMID-TV of Midland and Eddie Clinton, owner of Clinton Video Productions of Dallas and producer of the syndicated Friday Night Magic, a weekly roundup of high school football highlights from across the state.

In addition to the exclusive rights, KTPX earned all rights to the sale of the telecast in other markets. However, no coverage or footage may be televised until the game's completion, MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi said.

Baressi said KTPX assured both schools that it would provide certificates of liability insurance and a letter of credit in addition to a $1,000 down payment.

The board also:

— Approved the junior high school study skills and secondary music curriculum guides.

— Appointed members of the 1985-86 Career Ladder Level II Advisory Committee. They are: Chapman, assistant superintendent; Holland, director of human resources; Joe Cummins, Parker Elementary School principal; Bob Watkins, Bowie Elementary School principal; Jimmie Kelly, Midland High School principal; Bob Cox, Goddard Junior High School principal; Elidia Carrasco, Crockett Elementary School teacher; Laura Malone, Travis Elementary School teacher; Lucinda Windsor, Lee High School English Department chairperson; and Linda Ingle, Alamo Junior High School teacher.

— Adopted amendments to the MISD Defined Contribution Plan (Annuity Plan).

— Authorized Youth on the Move to rent Carver Auditorium for a youth service program.

— Approved the Midland Jaycees 1985 football concession prices.

'Strong Israel helps strong America become stronger'

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

"A strong Israel helps a strong America become stronger," said the executive director of a group promoting American-Israeli relations in Midland Thursday.

Thomas Dine of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee spoke Thursday at a luncheon encouraging local residents to become involved in the Permian Basin Committee for American Israel Public Affairs.

Dine said relations between the United States and Israel are important because there are not many democracies in the world with which the United States can side.

When the United States chooses friends, Dine said it should, "start with those that are functioning democracies first."

The Middle Eastern country's combat ready military and its anti-Sovietism are important to relations between the two countries, said Dine, who heads the Washington, D.C.-based committee.

The committee lobbies Congress for military and economic aid to Israel and opposes arms sales to Arab countries hostile to Israel. Nationwide the group has about 50,000 members. Locally, there are 20 members in the Permian Basin, said Stanley Saikin of the 10-month-old Midland-Odessa group.

Thomas Dine

The Jewish community and the conservative movement are the two most anti-Soviet groups in the United States, Dine said.

Israel saves Americans money by providing the United States with a combat ready group in the Middle East, while the U.S.government spends annually about $125 billion to support troops in Europe and $59 billion for a military presence in East Asia, he said.

This year Congress has allocated Israel $1.8 billion for military aid, $1.2 billion in economic aid and $1.5 billion in emergency economic assistance, said a national American Israel committee spokesman. About $13.9 billion in military and economic aid has been given to Israel by Congress since 1979.

Dine said U.S. arms sales within the next several weeks to Saudi Arabia, Oman and Jordan will not help the peace process in the Middle East.

"America is selling arms to Israel. America is selling arms to Israel's enemies," Dine said.

Israel has asked for direct peace negotiations with Arab leaders, Dine says, but so far all have refused. (Egypt, however, did sign a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.)

Before he became director of the American Israel committee in 1980, Dine worked in the U.S. Senate for 10 years as deputy foreign policy advisor to Sen. Edward Kennedy, SALT advisor to Senator Edmund Muskie, director of the nation security staff of the Senate Budget Committee and legislative assistant for foreign affairs to Sen. Frank Church.

Firefighters investigate cause of blaze which damaged bedroom

From Staff Reports

Fireman are investigating the cause of a house fire Thursday that resulted in heavy damage to a bedroom and hallway, according to Midland Fire Department and Midland County Sheriff's Department reports.

Firefighters reported the blaze originated about 4 p.m. Thursday in a bedroom of the Jimmy Henson residence, County Road 1140 North.

Heavy damage was reported to the bedroom and to an adjoining hallway. Slight damage was reported to the living room while heat and smoke damaged much of the rest of the house, according to the report.

Henson, his wife, Ginny, and granddaughter, Jennifer Gallagher, all were inside the residence when the incident occurred. However, no injuries were reported.

Fireman also are investigating the cause of an early morning fire at Brooks Barbecue, 501 E. Texas Ave., that resulted in heavy damage to an area surrounding a barbecue pit and moderate smoke damage to the interior of the building.

Investigator Eric Metzger said the fire broke out about 7:30 a.m. today when the barbecue pit caught fire and spread to the ceiling and to the roof.

Wilbert Phillips, an employee with the restaurant, was inside the smokehouse when the incident occurred. "I tried to put it out, but it got away from me," he said.

Midlanders can have 'a whale of a time' at Saturday air show

From Staff Reports

A supersonic jet fighter flown by a Midland airline pilot will be streaking into the West Texas sky Saturday while a "whale" of an airplane will have its mouth wide open.

Airplane buffs will be taking strolls in the belly of the world's largest operational aircraft as if it were a wide-mouthed beached whale.

The occasion will be the International Aerobatic Club Air Show at Midland Regional Airport. Gates open at 9 a.m. Saturday, and the show begins at 10 a.m., according to Paul Erdmann, president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club — Chapter 71 of the IAC. The club and the Purple Sage Chapter of The Ninety-Nines, international group of women pilots, are sponsoring the show.

The jet fighter, the F-4 Phantom with its drooping tail fins, swept-back wings and sea-monster look, is assigned to the Texas Air National Guard at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio. The aircraft flies at Mach 2.5 — 2½ times the speed of sound.

"The Phantom was...the fastest, most powerful jet fighter in the sky" for more than 20 years, according to Texas Air National Guard, which still flies the McDonnell Aircraft Corp. plane. Today, the Phantom is flown by air forces of many nations.

Guard Maj. Burt E. Ballentine of Midland will be making high-speed fly-bys at the air show and will be virtually out of sight before the sound catches up with the spectators.

He will be flying a Phantom 62829, which the U.S. Air Force has designated as "historic" and will soon be retired and displayed in the U.S. Air Force Museum at Dayton, Ohio. The Phantom was flown by Col. Robin Olds when he commanded the Eighth Fighter Wing in the Vietnam War. Olds led the famous raid on North Vietnam's steel mills.

Ballentine, who flies the Boeing 727 for American Airlines, flew 208 combat missions in the F-4 Phantom and earned many combat awards, including the Distinguished Flying Cross and 16 air medals.

The huge cargo transport, the four-engine Lockheed C-5A Galaxy, almost spans the length of a football field and can carry virtually "any piece of the Army's combat equipment," including tanks, helicopters, scissor bridges and self-propelled artillery.

Last year, the Galaxy transported "intact" from the United States to Europe the nine mono- and bi-wing aircraft flown by the United States World Aerobatic Teams — which included Midlander Gene Beggs — in international competition in Hungary.

The Galaxy, which recently has been making practice landings and takeoffs at Midland Regional Airport, is to make low-level passes over the Midland-Odessa area this evening. The transport, which has a maximum takeoff weight of 769,000 pounds — 384.5 tons — can fly about 500 mph for more than 5,000 miles. Each of its four turbofan engines produces 38,800 pounds of thrust. The aircraft is assigned to the 433rd Military Airlift Wing — the Alamo Wing — at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio.

The air-show fanfare will include aerobatic maneuvers by Beggs; Dr. Julie Pfile, the IAC's champion woman pilot and a member of the 1984 U.S. World Aerobatic Women's Team; Pat Day, Ole Olsen and James Jones.

Parachutists from Eagle's Nest Airport will be jumping into the airport under direction of Jim Fowler, master-rigger and master-chutist.

Aircraft on display will include the Galaxy; the Phantom; the F-15 Eagle, the T-38 Talon, the T-37 Tweety Bird and a squadron of aerobatic airplanes.

The Galaxy will be parked near Memphis Aero at the airport and will be available for tours from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Cap Rock Electric Co-op gets $9.27 million loan from REA

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Cap Rock Electric Co-operative has been granted a $9.27 million loan from the Rural Electrification Administration to finance 371 miles of additional power distribution lines, sub-station facilities and system improvements, according to an announcement by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

At present, Cap Rock, which buys its power from Texas Electric Service Co., has 4,812 miles of power lines and serves 7,000 co-op members in mostly rural areas of 13 West Texas counties, said Rodger Burch, co-op manager. Burch said 16,000 meters are on Cap Rock's lines.

The expansion is to be completed in a two-year period.

"It gives us the capability of serving additional loads," Burch said, "and improving the service reliability to existing customers."

He noted that all utility companies borrow money for capital improvements and "set their rates to repay the loans over a 30-year period."

"They can't generate enough money to make the multimillion-dollar investments."

Cap Rock's primary service is to Martin, Midland, Howard, Glasscock, Reagan, Upton and Ector counties, Burch said. Singing sawbones cut their own records

By MARCIA SMITH

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas' singing sawbones won't give Hall and Oates any sleepless nights, but then, if Wayne "Buzz" Burkhead and Fred "Doctor Doctor" Lester don't make it in the music biz, they have something to fall back on — their patients.

The doctor duo has released a 45 rpm — "Summer Clothes" and "Tan Lines" — on their own Bonetone Records label. It is, they readily admit, a modest achievement. The lyrics, set to a rock 'n' roll beat, tell the story:

Baby ain't got no tan lines. Baby she's looking real fine
She ain't got no hang-ups 'bout lying in the sun.

"We have a realistic view of our talent," says Burkhead, an orthopedic surgeon at the W.B. Carrell Memorial Clinic. "We don't have what it takes to be big stars."

On the flip side of "Tan Lines" is "Summer Clothes," a paean to winter weight gain:

I can't get in my summer clothes
Taking a shower, I can't see my toes
Chasing girls and 12-ounce curls
Don't get you in shape for poolside

Songwriting is a hobby for the 32-year-old doctor pals. Burkhead is the lyricist and vocalist; Lester, who studied piano for 12 years, composes the tunes. They write, rehearse and record when their schedules permit.

"We're sort of like the Beatles," says Lester of recording sessions, "We just do it once and touch it up later."

If one of their songs made them famous, the docs insist, they would never abandon the medical profession. After all, notes Lester, a plastic surgeon and assistant professor at Southwestern Medical School, "No one puts 10 years post-college into medicine and walks away form it.

"(Songwriting) just isn't as important as taking care of folks."

Besides, adds Burkhead, "After you listen to our songs, you'll know there's no danger we'll have to get out of medicine."

The doctors met in 1980 when both were residents at Baylor University Medical Center.

"We'd had a particularly hard night on call," says Lester, "and thought it would be fun to be rock stars."

Burkhead had started writing ditties during his internship at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Occasionally, patients inspired him: After treating a woman whose husband had beat her, Burkhead wrote "No Broken Bones, Just Broken Feelings."

Global concerns sometimes provide material, as in "Armageddon in Amarillo." And, former Secretary of the Interior James Watt inspired one tune:

I never did like the taste
Of radioactive waste
But I'll be glad to serve
A double up for you.

After collaborating on 15 songs the two decided to form a record company (their label is bone-colored) and release the most marketable songs.

"Not many of them are marketable," concedes Burkhead. "Five years and one record — that says it all."

Lack of evidence prompts judge to dismiss drug case

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Lack of sufficient evidence against two men charged with drug possession prompted 161st District Judge Tryon Lewis to dismiss jurors and end the state's case Wednesday.

Lewis' action came after prosecutors had presented evidence against Jose R. Olivares, 29, and Jesus A. Santana, 23, both of Santa Ana, Calif. The judge's action also caused District Attorney Eric Augesen to ask 70th District Judge Gene Ater to dismiss a possession of marijuana charge against 25-year-old Armando C. Ramos of Kermit in connection with the December 1984 arrest of the three men.

Augesen had considered the trial of Santana and Olivares a "test case" for the pending Ramos trial because of the similarity of evidentiary elements and the difficulty in proving drug possession charges.

Search warrant-armed DPS officers and Odessa police entered a house in the 6600-block of Austin Ave. in North Odessa, seized about $65,000 of a substance believed to be cocaine and arrested Santana, Olivares and five other people.

Ramos and two Odessa men, Jesse S. Ramos, 32, and Franco A. Loera, 36, were arrested Dec. 15, 1984, west of Odessa by DPS officers, Odessa police and Ector County sheriff's deputies traveling on Interstate 20 in a pickup truck.

Executing a search warrant, officers searched the truck and found 150 pounds of suspected marijuana in a false fuel tank on the truck and the three were subsequently charged with possession of marijuana. The truck did not belong to any of the men.

The district attorney's office dismissed the charge against Loera last July and Augesen has indicated he'll seek dismissal of the charge against Jesse Ramos also.

According to Augesen, had his office been able to successfully prosecute the case against Santana and Olivares it could have provided the basis for prosecution of comparable cases.

One of the problems in prosecuting drug possession cases, as in the case of the three men in the pickup they didn't own and the discovery of hidden contraband, is it is very difficult to prove the men actually had knowledge of the hidden drugs, Augesen said.

Midland students named semifinalists

From Staff Reports

Eight Lee High School and four Midland High School seniors were named semifinalists in the 31st annual Merit Scholarship competition.

National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the competition, recognized Lee High School students Kreg F. Bailey, Jenni V. Clark, Stefan M. Evanoff, Craig E. Gifford, Chris R. Kennedy, Millard J. Kimery, Jay L. Laengrich; and Midland High School students Paige L. Black, Michael W. Pine, Terry W. Walker and James A. Wells.

Also recognized was former Lee High School student William D. Paxton, who died from injuries he suffered in an accident last spring.

The semifinalists have completed the first step in the competition for about 5,800 Merit Scholarships, worth nearly $21 million, to be awarded next spring.

More than one million juniors attending some 19,000 U.S. secondary schools entered the competition by taking a qualifying test, the PSAT/NMSQT, in October 1984. The top scorers in each state, or less than half of one percent of each state's high school senior class, are included in the nationwide group of semifinalists.

To advance in the Merit Scholarship competition, a semifinalist must qualify as a finalist by documenting high academic performance, be recommended by the high school principal, confirm qualifying test performance on the Scholastic Aptitude Test and submit information about school and community activities, personal interests and goals. Over 90 percent (or 13,500) of the 15,000 semifinalists will meet the rigorous standards of the program and be informed next February whether they qualify for finalist standing.

Death penalty properly fits the crime, White says

AUSTIN (AP) — Even if the death penalty doesn't deter others from committing murder, it does properly fit the crime, Gov. Mark White says.

"I support it in and of itself," White said.

Whatever deterrent effect executions may have "is some added value to the death penalty...not the sole basis for the death penalty. The death penalty is an appropriate punishment for someone who commits a capital crime in Texas," he said Thursday.

The governor referred specifically to Charles Rumbaugh, 28, who died by lethal injection early Wednesday after spending nine years on death row. Rumbaugh was executed for killing an Amarillo jewelry store owner during a robbery.

"I don't think anyone would suggest that what Mr. Rumbaugh did should be punished lightly. I think he is a very good example of the appropriateness of the death penalty," White said.

The state has executed 10 prisoners since resuming use of the death penalty in 1982, six of them this year. White never has granted a stay of execution.

Many criminal justice experts say there is little evidence to show that using the death penalty keeps others from committing murders.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who has witnessed nine executions, on Wednesday said he doesn't believe the death penalty prevents crime.

"The fact is, it probably does not serve as a general deterrent to other individuals. I think there are very few people involved in the criminal justice system who believe it is an overall deterrent to criminals as a whole," Mattox said.

White said that doesn't matter, because the death penalty fits the crime.

Texas teachers sign up for test review course

AUSTIN (AP) — As many as half the 210,000 educators who must take the competency test are expected to sign up for a one-day review course to brush up their skills and relieve exam anxiety, says a state teachers group.

The six-and-a-half hour course, complete with 350-page study guide, will be offered Saturday for the first time.

The competency test, mandated as part of the 1984 public school reform package, will be given March 10. Teachers must pass it to keep their jobs.

"We feel TCTA is offering all Texas educators a professional and reasonable approach to the competency test by concentrating our efforts on reducing, rather than exploiting, the anxiety factor and focusing on preparing educators for the test," said Susan Crocker, a Grand Prairie teacher and TCTA legislative chairperson.

TCTA does not like the test, but has decided not to mount a court challenge. The Texas State Teachers Association has filed suit against the test.

The exam will quiz educators on basic skills.

The TCTA course was developed by The University of Texas at a cost of about $500,000, according to Thomasine Sparkes of Kingsville, TCTA president.

State Education Commissioner William Kirby said Thursday the course and study guide would be "very helpful" to teachers.

"While we are confident that the vast majority of our teachers will have no trouble demonstrating their reading and writing skills, we believe that early preparation for the test will result in an even higher passing rate that will contribute to greater public confidence in the teaching profession and our educational system," Kirby said.

About 210,000 educators are expected to take the exam. TCTA expects as many as 100,000 people to take their review course.

DISD superintendent upset by report of court's auditor

DALLAS (AP) — School Superintendent Linus Wright says a court-appointed desegregation auditor exceeded his responsibility in a report that prompted a federal judge to threaten the district with a contempt citation.

Wright on Thursday criticized the report, which blamed the district for not making needed repairs at A. Maceo Smith High School, a shopping center that was converted into a school, and North Dallas high schools.

Don Hood, the auditor, denied Wright's claim. He said he was not surprised Wright criticized the report.

Smith High has been plagued with structural problems ever since it opened in 1978. The school's first floor floods every time it rains and the basketball court has concrete posts jutting out of the floor. There are no walls or windows.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders on Tuesday ordered a written response to Hood's annual report and asked why the repairs had not been made.

"Would a contempt citation to the appropriate official be helpful?" Sanders asked.

Board members of the Dallas Independent School District were told by Wright on Thursday that Hood "visited North Dallas in August a year ago, but he wrote the report as if it happened yesterday."

Hood said he visited both schools last May. He criticized the facilities at A. Maceo Smith, located in a renovated shopping plaza. He said the basketball court was too small and had support columns in the middle of the court.

"What the auditor is talking about is a difference in philosophy," said Wright. "He is telling us what we should put in a school. We made the decision that there would be competitive athletics at Smith, and he is telling us the gym should be fit for competitive athletics. That's not his responsibility."

TDC warden no longer seeking TYC position

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Texas Department of Corrections warden who was expected to be approved Thursday as superintendent of the West Texas Children's Home in Pyote withdrew his name from consideration for the postion.

James A. Collins, who is warden of the Beto One unit at TDC, had already been approved for the superintendent's job by the staff of the Texas Youth Commission, and was expected to be confirmed by the TYC board at a meeting Thursday.

But Collins, who has worked for the TDC since 1972, asked that he not be considered for the job, TYC spokesman Joan Timmons said. He did not give a reason for the action, she added.

"It was not discussed during the board meeting," Timmons said. "It didn't come up at all."

Timmons said the board will be searching for a new replacement for former West Texas Children's Home superintendent Allan Spearman, who has transferred to the TYC's central office in Austin as assistant director of institutions.

"We'll be starting from scratch," said Timmons, adding they would like to have the job position filled as quickly as possible.

White: Democrats 'won't have to worry' about Hance after primary

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White predicts that Kent Hance, who switched parties earlier this year but hasn't declared his candidacy for governor yet, may lose next year's GOP gubernatorial primary.

Hance earlier this week charged that the Texas prison system "is in disarray" because of White.

Hance, a former congressman who switched to the GOP in May, told a Republican group that White's appointments to the prison board and his involvement in choosing prison administrators has caused chaos.

At his news conference Thursday, reporters asked White about the charges.

"I don't know that we'll have to worry about him after the primaries," White replied.

Hance plans to announce his candidacy for governor next month, aides say. He will face former Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler in the GOP primary.

White also said Hance's 10-year career in Washington has left him out of touch with the state.

"I think it (the criticism) probably can be accounted for by his absence from the state for a long period of time," White said.

"If he were more aware of what was occurring today in Texas, he would recognize we have increased the number of people who are employed (by the prisons). Our prison administration...is doing an extraordinarily good job," White said.

White also denied playing politics with the Texas Department of Corrections board, saying Hance is guilty of making prisons a political issue.

"You'll find that we have tried to work together over the past several years with the Republican leadership that was left over from my predecessor," he said.

"I don't know that it's a Republican problem or a Democratic problem. It's really a problem I think we share in the whole state."

Krueger considers run for Loeffler's seat

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former congressman Bob Krueger says he is getting a lot of encouragement to run for the U.S. House again, and he is willing to consider a race.

Krueger said most of the calls he has been receiving have been urging him to run for the 21st District.

He held that seat for two terms until 1978, when he ran unsuccessfully against John Tower for U.S. Senate. He also waged an unsuccessful attempt last year for the Democratic nomination for Senate.

He said he also has been encouraged to run for the 14th District, now represented by freshman David McCann Sweeny, a Republican.

"Until about six weeks ago I told people I'm not in a position to think about it," he told The San Antonio Express-News.

"Then I told them if they want me to run to show me some numbers indicating it is a district that can be won by a candidate drawing support from Democrats, Republicans and independents," he said.

Krueger said he now is "willing to look at it."

The 21st District seat is now held by Republican Rep. Tom Loeffler, who has announced he will run for governor in 1986.

A former U.S. ambassador at large to Mexico, Krueger teaches a graduate course on U.S.-Mexican business and government relations at the LBJ School in Austin.

Mattox: Police 'negligent' in man's death

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police were "negligent," but did not intend to kill a handcuffed Nigerian who suffocated after being held face down on a waterbed, Attorney General Jim Mattox said after a special investigation.

Mattox Thursday sent local prosecutors his report on the Dec. 5, 1984, death of Evans Ekiye. His report was confidential, but Mattox released the cover letter.

The four officers involved were "no-billed" by a grand jury. A spokesman for Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said the Mattox report offered no new information, and Earle would not ask a new grand jury to look at the case.

Mattox began his investigation after requests from the U.S. State Department, the Nigerian Embassy, the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the Black Citizens Task Force of Austin.

"After reviewing all the evidence available to us, we do not believe that the officers intentionally caused Ekiye's death, nor did they intend to cause him bodily harm," said Mattox. "In our view, it does appear from the evidence that the officers were negligent in causing Ekiye's death."

A spokesman for Earle said Mattox's report shed no new light on the case.

"It is the opinion here that none of these conclusions contain any new evidence and that the Travis County grand jury did hear two days' worth of testimony and considered all possible criminal offenses," said Assistant District Attorney Kent Anschutz.

He said it would be a "fair inference" to conclude that Earle would not urge a new grand jury to review the case. However, grand jurors are free to investigate.

Grand jurors who investigated the Ekiye case "specifically focused on criminally negligent homicide and in their judgment no crime was committed," said Anschutz.

The attorney general was very critical of the four officers' handling of the situation. They had been called to Ekiye's home to investigate a domestic disturbance.

The officers grabbed Ekiye while checking to see if he had a weapon. He was handcuffed and held face down on the waterbed under the "full weight" of the four policeman, Mattox said in his letter.

After Ekiye lost consciousness, the police called for an ambulance.

"There is evidence that when EMS personnel arrived at the Ekiye home, they found the police officers still holding Ekiye down," Mattox said.

The officers could be guilty of "criminally negligent homicide," a misdemeanor, according to Mattox.

Lawyer: Ramirez's public defender mishandling case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Texas lawyer asked by the family of "Night Stalker" defendant Richard Ramirez to check into his case accused Ramirez's public defender Thursday of mishandling the case.

"I'm making sure he gets a fair trial, then I will drop out," said Manuel Barraza of El Paso, who isn't licensed to practice law in California.

Barraza said that when he returns to Texas he will advise Ramirez's family to retain a private California attorney for Ramirez.

Ramirez, 25, a drifter from El Paso, has been charged with one of 14 serial killings linked to the Night Stalker in the Los Angeles area and San Francisco. He is being held without bail at Los Angeles County Jail.

Deputy Public Defender Allen Adashek is assigned to Ramirez's case.

Anti-communists honor 'freedom fighters'

ADDISON (AP) — The World Anti-Communist League has presented its "Freedom Fighter of the Year" award to two men who led guerrilla attacks this summer in Afghanistan and Nicaragua.

At a banquet Thursday night that wrapped up the organization's four-day, 18th international conference, retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub lauded the efforts of Wali Khan in Afghanistan and Hubert Rodriguez — also known as "Sierra Tres" — in Nicaragua.

Singlaub, chairman of the league, said Khan organized and trained guerrillas who went in and cut power lines that blacked out Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, in July.

Rodriguez launched an attack last July 19 that knocked out a 50-caliber machine gun that had stopped his unit, Singlaub said. He was wounded, and doctors had to amputate one of his legs after gangrene set in.

A special citation was given to Ellen Garwood of Austin, who purchased a helicopter for use by guerrillas in Central America.

The conference drew 470 delegates, observers and newsmen from 74 countries and territories throughout the world.

Thursday night's banquet was billed as an "International Freedom Fighters Dinner," with leaders of guerrilla efforts around the globe seated at the head table.

A letter from President Reagan, which urged those favoring democracy to "persevere and never falter," was read at the start of the dinner. Singlaub read the letter in its entirety, saving the name of the sender for last, and delegates stood and cheered when they learned it was from the president.

"Our admininstration is commmitted to promoting freedom and democracy. So we are committed to maintaining a strong defense. We are also giving humanitarian aid to the forces who are fighting to avert a new round of human suffering in our own hemisphere," Reagan wrote.

"I commend you all for your part in this noble cause. Our combined efforts are moving the tide of history toward world freedom. We must persevere and never falter. I send you all who help in your crusade for liberty my best wishes," the letter said.

Main speaker for the banquet was U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt.

Hunting 'buried treasure' popular pastime

Copley News Service

Buried somewhere in the continental United States is a tiny horse made of 24-karat gold and weighing 2.2 pounds. Inside it is a key to a safe-deposit box that contains a certificate for $500,000.

Sheldon Renan knows where it is — he put it there; but he's not talking.

"Bribe offers? No more than about 2,000 so far," he said, smiling broadly. "They're always the same: 'Let's split it.'"

Renan is the creator of "Treasure," a puzzle/hunt that offers clues in a videocassette movie and in a book leading to the "spot of public land accessible round the clock" where the precious horse waits.

"It's a weird project. It is for people who like fantasy and who really like puzzles," said Renan in a recent interview. "And it appeals to everyone's desire to get rich quick.

"It's a new definition of interactive media. This is a story you can actually be part of if you find the horse — the person who finds it writes the ending."

THE BOOK AND MOVIE each contain all the clues needed to find the horse (although more clues are obtained by buying both). Together they have the potential to net Renan and his associates far more than a half million dollars.

"Treasure," the book, was published last September by Warner Books and sells for $12.95; "Treasure," the video, also released last fall by IntraVision, sells for $29.95 and has been airing in installment form on cable-TV's "Showtime." Like the book, the 63-minute film is broken into 21 chapters; "Showtime" airs an average of two chapters per week.

"Treasure" is a fairy tale about Amanda, a 6-year-old girl who travels the country in search of her stolen horse. The book, filled with lavish drawings, offers this principal guideline:

"Find, link and follow the clues that lay hidden in this tale, and you will come to understand the map ... for it shows you exactly where to dig. But do not dig too deep. Break no law. Take no risk. It is in a safe place."

RENAN, WHO WROTE the book and directed and produced the movie, patterned "Treasure" after "Masquerade," a British puzzle book in which a golden hare worth $35,000 was buried in the English countryside. It took 2½ years before "Masquerade" was solved. Americans bought more than 500,000 copies of the book, which was a best-seller here for 43 weeks.

"Treasure" has yet to enjoy similar success, according to IntraVision's Barry Grieff, who is in charge of marketing the project.

"It's selling steadily, but we haven't received the kind of national exposure we had hoped for," said Grieff from his New York office. "But we view it as creating its own cult following. We planned 'Treasure' to have a five-year life span, to build on itself and be more popular the second year than the first, and the third year than the second."

Grieff said more clues will be released — in the form of another video and book — should the horse go undiscovered. Under the rules of "Treasure," if no one finds the horse and claims the $500,000 (which will be paid at $25,000 per year for 20 years) by May 26, 1989, the money will be donated to charity.

RENAN, 43, A FILMMAKER who has concentrated on documentaries and commercials and who operated a movie archive in Hollywood for many years, settled on a burial spot and then enlisted the mysterious Dr. Crypton to devise the puzzle. Dr. Crypton is the pseudonym of a 28-year-old Harvard Phi Beta Kappa alum who writes a puzzle column for Science Digest.

"I thought I would have to go to the CIA or hire a retired cryptographer, something like that," said Renan. "Then somebody brought me his column and I said, 'Get me this guy.' Thirty-six hours later he was getting on the plane to meet me.

"He has this extraordinary mind and he's a lot of fun."

Renan, Dr. Crypton and an official of the D.L. Blair Corp., an independent judging organization, are the only people who know where the horse is buried, said Renan. As is common with public contests, he said, an independent source must be contacted to guard against fraud — and to ensure that the puzzle is solvable.

"He's very cautious," said Renan of the judging official. "The day I took the puzzle to show him, he took me up into a room and I started to explain something and he said, 'No, write it down' in case the place was bugged.

"When he finally put down the puzzle, he said, 'Dr. Crypton has a very interesting mind,'" Renan continued. "But you don't have to be particularly brilliant to solve it."

AFTER NEARLY A YEAR of trying, some among the growing cult of "Treasure" hunters are certain they are very close to finding the horse.

Paul Klasky, a 29-year-old unemployed roofer from Longmont, Colo., was given the "Treasure" book by his brother last September.

"I'm obsessed with it, I dream about it," said Klasky, who said he spends hours each day studying Renan's film which he videotaped from "Showtime." "Twenty-five grand for 20 years — a man could get married and raise kids in that time; a man would be set for life."

In addition to the $500,000 and 35-ounce horse (gold is selling for about $318 per ounce), Renan said investment in the film and book totals about $500,000, while $350,000 has been spent on promotion.

SINCE HIS NUMBER is listed, Renan said he gets about a call a week from people thinking they've found the burial spot.

"One guy from Pepperdine University had spotted a map in the film — it's only on for three frames — of a certain location and went up there in winter with a metal detector and found a buried metal box.

"He was sure that he had it, he was really excited. But the box was empty. I didn't bury it in a metal box, so there's another clue."

No extra charge.

Fly-in communities unusual

Copley News Service

First it was boat-in communities, where residents could step from their house into a private boat secured in their own adjacent slip, leading to major boating waters.

Now it's fly-in communities, where private runways extend to individual houses and condominium developments.

For example, in VanAire, Colo., a Denver suburban community, most homes not only have a two-car garage but also a private runway strip leading to a takeoff runway. Many also have a small hangar for one or two planes.

When hubby comes home in VanAire, he has a bird's-eye view of his entire community as he prepares to land. If it's dark, he snaps on the radio-controlled runway lights, as he carefully scans the concrete landing strip for traversing rabbits or an occasional deer.

After landing, he quickly taxies to his own strip where he secures the aircraft and steps into the house for dinner.

There's a strong sense of neighborliness in VanAire. All residents have a common interest in aviation, and many joint projects are planned.

These residents are not flying junkies, with no interests other than flying and tinkering with their planes. Many are doctors, teachers — a wide variety of business and professional men and women.

It takes a sizable income to support this special kind of lifestyle. The smallest new planes today carry price tags that start at about $70,000. Then there is the cost of training and licensing to be considered, as well as construction of the runway strip and possibly a private hangar.

Annual maintenance and inspections, to comply with directives from the Federal Aviation Administration, probably will cost at least $1,000.

'Limo' business shows signs of upward automobility

Copley News Service

According to Gene Sculatti's bible, The Catalog of Cool, "Cool people and cool cars have always had eyes for each other. Kookie Byrnes parked them, James Dean and Jayne Mansfield drove them to their death."

Who can forget Paul Newman's Hud-mobile, the '58 Caddy convert? Surely, cars and culture have always snuggled up close, but there's a new gourmet lifestyle growing that's made the love affair almost pornographic.

CALL IT AFFORDABLE chic. New York magazine hinted that mid-'70s college grads thought multiple degrees meant multiple achievements in the finance and success department. It hasn't, but that doesn't mean they're not living well.

Today more than ever living the good life (substitute the high life or rich life) means pate rather than chopped liver, vintage private cellar Sonoma reds rather than Gallo hearty burgundy, a polo shirt rather than a T-shirt and pasta al forno rather than fortuitous spaghetti. Poseur is cool, and with bargain-basement upper-class living comes the return of the limousine.

They're not just for the very rich movie producers, the president or rock stars. Anne Marshall, a former advertising account executive in San Diego, touted her final departure with a rousing wheeled Linale. Husband Bob had just finished his doctorate at the University of California at San Diego and the happy couple were on to Oxford's hunting grounds and a teaching position at Duke University.

SAID ANNE, "Why not travel romantically to LAX (Los Angeles International Airport) in style? I rented a limo, arranged for croissants and coffee to be picked up and surprised Bob.

"Being an economist Ph.D. he was worried that we had just blown a British wad, but the cost of the limo to LAX was less than the price tag for two flights from San Diego to LA."

Around the country, nightclubs that hop have seen an increase in limos bringing groups of youngsters 18 to 30 to party the night away. Some clubs look like limo leasing lots on Fridays. Said one club owner: "They can drink in safety, return to the limo for some quiet or necking or whatever and then get home without a 502."

Leslie Bruce, a political assistant, recalled last Halloween when nine friends took a limo around to different clubs so they could drink without demise.

"It was great," she said, affecting a snooty air and rolling her eyes. "Everyone was trying to figure out who we were. We would stop at liquor stores and pick up another bottle of champagne, sending in the driver. For one night, we felt like kings."

LIMO SERVICES are being challenged more and more by recent upstarts who see the return of wheeled chic.

One limo service's brochure suggests executive travel, wedding and prom travel, shopping tours, executive protection and the like as reasons for renting.

Most provide mobile telephones privacy windows, color television AM-FM, cassettes, wet bar, air conditioning, tinted windows and a sparkling bottle of champagne.

The limo can be a Rolls-Royce, a Lincoln Continental or a Cadillac, depending on the vendor. The symbol of distinction is the impenetrable metallic armor of the rich, presided over by the driver, guardian of etiquette and connoisseur of cool.

JEFF MAYNE, president of Mayne Limousine, moved from an opera study at the University of Minnesota in Duluth to driving and then managing a limousine service. He started his own firm in 1983, and has a roster of accounts that includes Mobil Oil, Reader's Digest, Marc Berman and Orville Redenbacher.

Mayne thinks the corporate use of limos is on the rise as well as the new chic with teenagers and young adults. Mayne says his luxury condos on wheels, or stretch limos, are in actuality regular cars remodeled by one of the 10 quality coach builders across the country. His fleet of pristine white limos ("White is the most popular color ... and it always excites the people from New York or Washington, D.C., who are familiar with dark blue or black limos) comes from Springfield, Ill.

THE FANTASY of being rich, however, goes beyond the car's exoskeleton. There's a driver etiquette that some customers demand, though Mayne says his drivers can be less formal. He listed some of the rules:

"No, sir, or yes, sir, always open the door for the lady, pour the champagne," he says. "Oh, yes, no speaking unless spoken to (a crime in his case). Mobil Oil, for example, gave our drivers strict orders not to open their mouths at all."

Yes, Miss Manners, his drivers in charcoal-gray suits and caps will even wear white gloves.

Wally Schlotter, director of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce's motion picture bureau, is an avid limo lover, but is quick to point out that the stereotype about Hollywood using limos as mass transit is ill-founded.

"THE PRODUCER is still impressed when we go location hunting in a limo," says Schlotter, who, when asked how he uses limos personally, quipped, "Which time, last week or next week?"

Schlotter is the bon vivant of the affordable chic, and knows all kinds of reasons friends are now using limos.

"Someone I know brought their first baby home in a limo. Another limo service has a contract with a major department store to bring wives of visiting corporate executives to the shop for a VIP tour. A limo will always get you to the door of a rock concert."

That's style, 1985.

Business is booming for limousine rental services. The luxury automobiles are leased for everything from a night on the town to bringing a newborn baby home from the hospital.

Artful auto causes comment

Hearst News Service

Like a fantasy heroine on MTV, few men can say no to Yes. She's as alluring as a fashion model, but behind the wheel of her lace pattern-painted Porsche 911S mean machine, she becomes Dr. Yes, shifting gears like one born to drag.

Phyllis Yes, 44, holds a doctorate in art history from the University of Oregon. With 11 one-person exhibits behind her, and a work in the permanent collection of New York's Museum of Modern Art, she set out earlier this year to prove a point.

To affirm her convictions about how U.S. culture "goes out of its way to put people in those familiar little boxes," she transformed her 1967 Porsche from racy to lacy, and drove it coast to coast.

"It was also a neat way to meet men," she says. "Nobody paid much attention to me when I was standing by my old Honda.

"I painted the lace on my Porsche to make people laugh at all this gender identification stuff," said Yes, who was born in Red Wing , Minn., where her father worked as a sausage-stuffer. "It's sheer nonsense that certain everyday objects in this country are thought of as strictly masculine and others feminine. It happens elsewhere, but the United States is the biggest offender. When I was with the Peace Corps in Brazil, for instance, in the rural region I was assigned, only the women smoked pipes and only the men sold fabrics."

Poking fun visually at sexual stereotypes has been her preoccupation since the '70s, when Yes dropped her real name (Dankers) in favor of Yes, "because it sounded more postive."

The hand-decorated Porsche, which a passerby dubbed "a Faberge egg with plates," was created for Yes' recent show at New York's avant Bernice Steinbaum Gallery.

"It cost me $4,000 to ship the Porsche from Portland to New York, but it was worth every nickel," she says. "It was too big to put inside the gallery, so I had to park it nearby. It attracted so much attention, my show (11 pieces on the sexual stereotype theme) was a sellout." The car also captured the attention of The Wall Street Journal, which headlined a story: "Either That Car Is a 1967 Porsche Or the Quickest Doily on Wheels."

Yes purchased the Porsche in Portland for $15,000. She spent 700 hours, with the aid of two assistants, to transform it into "a performance piece" she values at $100,000, and has turned down "two firm offers of $50,000."

Yes first gave the Porsche's standard silver paint job an overspray of white paint airbrushed through a fine-patterned mesh screen; creating a delicate, shadowy fabric effect. Next, using a template cut from a lace tablecloth, she meticulously stenciled the pattern over the entire car. To create a three-dimensional illusion, she outlined the scalloped edges of the design in pink acrylic paint, using a device similar to the canvas tube pastry chefs use to frost cakes. The final step was the application of a coat of pearlescent polyurethane that not only weatherproofed the finish, but created an overall shimmering patina that is highly visible at night.

The paint job survived the drive-and-park rigors of New York traffic and the cross-country haul, in large part, Yes said, because she usually parks on the sidewalk. "It's rarely ticketed. The policeman thinks for some reason it's OK for it to be on the sidewalk."

Yes is unhappy about her Oregon license plates, which are pumpkin in color and clash with her artwork. She considered painting the plates, but Oregon's DMV discouraged her —"actually, they threatened jail."

In her paintings and mixed-media works Yes has "laced" a panoply of traditional male-associated objects, among them an army cot, a helmet, a variety of weapons, ladders and paint brushes, but the Porsche piece has by far provoked the most questions.

"I loved the input in New York so much, I couldn't resist the impulse to drive it back home to Portland gather regional response. In New York, it seemed the traffic parted like the Red Sea. Bus drivers and cabbies left their vehicles at stoplights to get a closer look, and touch. It's very tactile, but in Dallas people were reluctant to lay on hands."

On the freeway, she said, people would roll their windows down and carry on a conversation about the car at 70 mph. In Chicago, somebody left a big lipstick red kiss on the windshield. In Los Angeles, she found a note tucked under the windshield wiper blade: "If this car reflects your personality, call me."

"A man in New York wanted me to do his Rolls-Royce, but I turned him down. On a Rolls, it would be just another paint job. I wouldn't mind doing a Ferrari as my next project. In fact, I've worked it out in my mind, sort of black lace on black on black. Deadly stuff. Right? But I'll settle for an exciting tractor."

Early bird catches flack, not worms

LONDON (AP) — The Archaeopteryx fossil has long been considered the earliest known bird.

A few scientists contend the fossil, locked away in the British Museum of Natural History, is a 19th-century hoax. A far larger number support its authenticity.

Archaeopteryx has the body and teeth of a small dinosaur and the feathered wings of a bird. The first specimen was found in 1861 in a German quarry whose limestone was about 150 million years old. Since then, four other specimens have been found. Archaeopteryx means "ancient wing."

American plastic used in Japanese cars

BORGER, Texas (AP) — The popularity of Japanese cars in the United States also is paying off for some American firms.

Phillips Chemical, for instance, makes a plastic which Japanese car makers use instead of stainless steel for some parts.

Phillips says it ships thousands of pounds of the plastic to Japan each month for emission control valves and other engine parts.

Obscene calls can be frightening

Copley News Service

There are few moments in life creepier than returning home late at night, picking up the phone and realizing that you have an obscene caller on the line.

Worse still is being the victim of repeated calls.

Because many women experience this problem, the Sex Assault Coordinating Council in San Diego — a group of professionals working in law enforcement, legal services and counseling for sex assault victims — has developed the following guidelines for dealing with these calls.

For the one-time call, the rule is simple: Hang up. As soon as you realize it is an obscene phone call, break contact.

Obscene callers get gratification from responses that show you are afraid or upset, so it is important that you terminate the conversation and give them nothing to relate to.

There are three strategies to follow if the calls repeat:

- The bluff technique. If you have a push-button phone, hit the buttons, which will make a beeping sound as though the operator is coming on the line. On a dial phone, hit the receiver lightly. Then say, "Operator, this is the call I want you to trace," and hang up.
- Have the calls traced. Ask the phone company for a complaint form and keep a log of the calls.
- When all else fails, have your telephone number changed to an unlisted number.

Study links autos, aggression

Associated Press

Few men are rational about their cars. In the car culture that is America, the prosaic vehicle that takes a man to work also doubles as his symbol of status, machismo, freedom and identity.

It's not surprising, then, that cars and aggression often seem to go together.

Violent incidents on the highway have become commonplace, according to an article in the August issue of Science Digest, which cites some examples: A deadly game of leapfrog begins when one car cuts off another on an interstate highway. A yelling match erupts when an impatient driver honks his horn. Or one driver shoots another over a minor fender bender on a city street.

But does the incident produce the aggression or vice versa?

A recent study published in Developmental Psychology suggests that the person who uses his car as an instrument of aggression is probably aggressive in other areas of life.

L. Powell Huesmann and Leonard Eron, of the University of Illinois, Chicago, followed 632 people for 22 years, beginning at age 8. The more aggressive 8-year-olds, they found, were almost invariably the more aggressive at 30, as measured in such areas as self-reported aggression, spouse abuse — and moving traffic violations.

"Aggression is a characteristic that seems to display itself in many ways," said Huesmann. "It seems to establish itself early in life and not change much thereafter."

But if an aggressive personality is more likely to provoke an incident, anyone who's been stuck in rush-hour traffic knows that driving provides special opportunities for almost anyone to become truculent.

"When you're in a hurry, on someone else's schedule, you don't think rationally," said Rick Jacobs, Pennsylvania State University psychologist who has studied stress in bus drivers for the U.S. Department of Transportation.

A mismatch between goals and reality — what you want and what you've got — engenders frustration. That's a first step, says psychologists, toward anger and irrationality, which often trigger aggression. Advised Jacobs, "If you have to drive across L.A. at 5 p.m., don't schedule a dinner date for 6."

A driver's reading — or misreading — of the situation can also provoke aggression.

Arnold Goldstein, director of the Center for Research on Aggression at Syracuse University, explained, "You can't ever say that something causes someone to commit an act of aggression. What's important is how it's perceived. If someone cuts in front of me near a hospital, for example, I might think he's sick and not get angry. But if I see it as a deliberate act of aggression, I might be inclined to respond the same way."

A man who sees his car as an extension of himself, Jacobs pointed out, is likely to interpret a minor dent as a major attack on his personal dignity — and respond with violence.

DEAR ABBY

Happy couple bridges enormous generation gap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you three years ago, telling you that a couple can be happily married even if there is a big gap in their ages because that is what happened to us. I was 14 and Jack was 61 when we married 10 years ago. We still love each other dearly, and he treats me like a queen.

We now have a son named Andrew Jackson. When I found out I was pregnant, we were so surprised we could hardly believe it. And yes, Jack is Andrew's father. I have been faithful to my husband all these years and will continue to be.

So you see, Abby, two people can be happy together regardless of their ages. I am enclosing a picture of Jack, the baby and me. — JANE McCARTNEY, DENISON, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Thank you for the progress report. The baby is beautiful, and you and Jack radiate happiness.

Not every 14-year-old bride can live happily ever after with a husband 47 years her senior.

Congratulations to your Jack who treats you like a queen, and is able to deal you a full house.

DEAR ABBY: I am sick and tired of hearing that alcoholism is an "illness." It isn't; it's a vice, a moral weakness and a lack of self-control. Although chronic excessive drinking can cause a number of diseases, it is not in itself a disease.

I wish someone who insists that alcoholism is a disease would tell me what virus, bacterium or other micro-organism causes it. Or is it a genetic disorder, inherited at birth?

Obviously, to classify alcoholism as a "disease" portrays the drinker as a "victim" who is not responsible for the damage his drinking does to himself and others. Granted, this is very kind, but it is an undeserved kindness, having no basis in fact.

The fact is, everyone has a choice. He can either choose to drink or choose not to drink. And the person who chooses to drink more than he is able to handle is not an innocent victim of a "disease." He is a selfish drunk of his own making.

It's time we called a spade a spade. Thanks for listening. — HAD MY SAY

DEAR HAD: Because I "listen" doesn't necessarily mean I agree.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 19-year-old college student, and I've slept with a baby blanket for as long as I can remember. I've taken it to summer camp with me since I was 10, and now I have it at college. I am ashamed to say I am still very much attached to it. I've tried to sleep without it, but I feel like something is missing, and I can't sleep.

Do many adults have this kind of silly attachment to a childhood thing? And what do you recommend? — LOVES MY BLANKET

DEAR LOVES: I recommend that you continue to sleep with it as long as you feel the need. Yes, many adults have that kind of attachment to a childhood thing. (It's not silly; old familiar things offer security.)

A 30-year-old married woman once wrote to say she couldn't sleep without her tattered baby blanket and felt sufficiently ashamed to see a psychiatrist about it. He asked her three questions: Is it hurting anyone? Is it harming you? Do you enjoy it?

The psychiatrist assured her that if it didn't hurt anyone, harm her and she enjoyed it, it was OK. I would add, "Is it legal?"

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Food indestructible

By ERMA BOMBECK

All my life I have been told the only thing that will survive after the earth has gone down in defeat is the cockroach. He alone will remain to give testimony that there was life on earth and it was just one Roach Motel after another.

However, I have evidence to prove that the cockroach is not the only earthling that will outlive humans. In my refrigerator, as I write, are three foods that have refused to die: a leftover bowl of split pea soup, a Christmas fruitcake and a bag of hard rolls.

You don't want to know how long these foods have been in my house. Suffice it to say they have survived two moves, three power outages, a blizzard, a 100-year flood, three teenagers and an exorcist.

The split pea soup was a gift from my mother. She made a quart of it one day, and after she and my dad had eaten on it for three months said, "Why don't you take some of it home with you?"

Ordinarily, I do not eat anything that turns green when you cook it and takes off your lipstick when you eat it, but I felt sorry for her. She seemed so desperate. It would be kind to say the split pea soup grew in the refrigerator. It festered! It won't die and it won't live.

The fruitcake was also a gift. It was from a woman who asked me if I wanted one of her homemade fruitcakes for Christmas and I said, "No, I do not like fruitcake." Later, everyone said this is like throwing down a gauntlet for fruitcake people. You may not like fruitcake, but you will love their fruitcake. She picked up the challenge and said, "I use 135 fruits in mine and it's moist and heavy and it will last for months." She got that right. I've served that fruitcake at every picnic, Christmas dinner, Thanksgiving and birthday celebration since 1979. It's too sticky for a doorstop, too big for a paperweight, too young to petrify and too old to eat. Some of the fruits in it have become extinct.

I've done some checking around and cannot find three people who like fruitcake, yet every year at Christmas hundreds of them are baked and distributed. This is scary.

The kids got the hard rolls one night in a doggy bag. I was against it from the beginning. I've always had a theory that some hard rolls have been recycled for as long as a decade. If a bite is out of them, they heal themselves. The recycling ring isn't just domestic, it's international. A few years ago when my husand and I went to Africa for the fist time, we must have been served the same hard roll 15 times. Finally, on a flight over Nairobi we initialed it, and sure enough, it showed up in a small restaurant in South America.

The sneaky thing about hard rolls is they feel soft when you take them out of the refrigerator for dinner, but seconds after they're put on the plate, they turn to stone, so you keep saving them.

Life on earth without people is going to be real interesting ... with the split pea soup, the fruitcake and the hard rolls holding forth.

I'm willing to bet those cockroaches won't stand a chance.

Power rules different

Associated Press

There are different rules for men and women in the corporate games played for pfofit and power and it is a wise woman who knows her way around them.

Men who attain corporate power are looked at with respect and admiration, Mary E. Cunningham wrote in an article in the September issue of Harper's Bazaar, while women tend to evoke reactions of jealousy, suspicion and anger.

Women too often are perceived as having achieved power by manipulative, coercive and even unethical behavior rather than by competence, hard work and ability. Their power is regarded as a "favor" granted rather than something earned by merit.

Cunningham learned the hard way — after a meteoric rise to a corporate vice presidency of Bendix Corp. while still in her 20s, she was forced out by rumors about her relationship with board chairman William Agee. They eventually married and today she is president and chief operating officer of a venture capital and strategy consulting firm.

Cunningham offered her advice to women executives as part of a special section on "Women and Success: Are You a Power Failure?" Following are "steps to power" that can lessen the chances of unfair treatment.

• Know your accuser. "Since the generic response to powerful women has been to perceive them as 'manipulative, domineering and shrewd,' avoid any language, gestures, clothing or external props that would play into this caricature,' Cunningham said.

You may still get the label, but at least you won't supply the evidence.

• Don't overreact. "The first time you sense your abilities or power progress are setting off threatening alarms," she said, "do not immediately revert to the polite, self-deprecating, apologetic behavior women were taught to display as little girls." That signals your vulnerability to bullies.

• Read the signals accurately. Communicate with those from whom you sense negative reactions. Try to correct legitimate grievances. If it is a form of power prejudice, treat those people warily and with kid gloves. Avoid direct combat.

• Build a power base. "Develop relationships with colleagues who can attest to your competence and defend your credibility should the need arise," she said.

• Cultivate more than one mentor. "Never allow yourself to rise to a position of visible power under the endorsement of just one boss, mentor or friend," Cunningham said. "No matter how powerful his or her position may be, virtually no individual can offset the ferocity and duration of attacks that can be directed against you by someone who feels personally threatened."

• Sharpen your skills of detection. If a campaign to bring you down is gaining momentum you have to judge its effectiveness from day to day.

• Understand the game. "Become more savvy about the games people play in the name of corporate politics," she said, "but don't feel compelled to become a player yourself." Cunningham pointed out there is a difference between being more astute about being used as a pawn in someone else's game and playing a game yourself.

A few shopping tips...

Nothing matches the beauty of fur. No other garment offers so much romance, character, and practical warmth. Unlike mass-produced coats, each fur is unique, an expression of individuality. Because differences are subtle, you may find it difficult to judge quality. But there are ways to make your final decision easier:

Choose a reliable furrier.
If you don't know furs, get to know a furrier. That's the first and most important step you can take. Ask your friends or business associates who own a fur for advice. You may well benefit from another's experience.

A professional furrier can answer your questions, recommend furs that fit your taste and budget, tell you which labels are most respected and why, and assist you in your final selection. And a reliable furrier will back each sale to every customer's satisfaction.

See that skins are matched correctly.
Look for overall consistency of color and pattern. A quality coat will be pleasing to the eye and free of blemishes. If pelts have not been properly matched in the manufacturing process, differences in color, height of hair or fur, or shading will be readily apparent.

Brush the coat gently, in the direction the fur grows.
The fur should feel soft and silky, not rough. Long guard hair should be glossy and the underhair dense. If the fur is flat, the guard hair should be full; if it is curly or has a pattern, the curl or pattern should be uniform.

Fold or squeeze the coat to test the suppleness of the leather.
Fur should be soft and pliable. A properly processed fur will have enough oil to keep the fur lustrous and the leather supple. The coat should not feel stiff, or have any bulky seams where pelts are joined.

Take care to get the proper styling as well as the right size.
No matter how beautiful a fur looks on the rack, you must try it on to see if the style and fit are right for you. A quality fur, properly styled and fitted, will immediately "feel" right.

Our professional furriers have a combined total of more than 300 years experience in the business of fine fur fashion. We'd be happy to answer any questions you have and show you the latest fur styles... including selections from our Grosvenor, Black Willow, and exclusive Cameo Collections.

A coalition of state and national groups announced support for reforms which would make firms share more of the tax burden. Holding a press conference at the Capitol in Austin Thursday are, from left, Carolyn Farrow-Garland of Washington, D.C., Brad Weivel of Texas Consumer Association and Charlotte Flynn of Austin Gray Panthers.

Groups unite to propose tax reform

AUSTIN (AP) — A dozen organizations scheduled a strategy session today to reverse what they call a dramatic shift in taxation that favors corporations and penalizes low- and middle-income people.

"This will be a grassroots organizing meeting with the goal of restoring the concept of taxing according to ability to pay," says Brad Weivel, president of the Texas Consumer Association.

The association is part of a coalition of local, state and national organizations that supports the proposal that corporations must pay more taxes so low- and middle-income people can pay less.

Fritz Wiecking, national organizing coordinator for Citizens for Tax Justice, said, "We can get a good tax reform bill this year, and a tax reform bill — a good one — would be premised on closing the major corporate tax loopholes in this country and using the new revenue from that to reduce taxes on middle- and low-income people."

"There's the money to do that. There at least is the political strategy that would make sense out of doing that, and all that's lacking is enough will and enough strength of the members of the House Ways and Means Committee to get that done," he said.

Weivel and Wiecking were joined at a news conference Thursday by Carolyn Farrow-Garland of the Coalition on Block Grants and Human Needs, Eliseo Medina of the Texas State Employees Union and Charlotte Flynn of the Gray Panthers of Austin.

Statistics collected by Wiecking's organization showed that for the first four years of the Reagan administration, 50 of 275 profit-making companies surveyed paid no federal income taxes. Despite $56.9 billion in pre-tax profits, the 50 companies received net tax refunds from the federal government totaling $2.4 billion, according to Citizens for Tax Justice.

Ms. Farrow-Garland said, "Last year, working families with incomes below the poverty line paid 9 to 12 percent of their income in federal taxes, and taxation of lower-income people is now near historic highs."

She said President Reagan's tax plan would exempt virtually all working in poverty from federal income taxes and would offset a portion of Social Security taxes as well but "does not go far enough."

To restore tax equity, she said, corporate loopholes should be closed, the earned income tax credit should be raised to $800, and families making up to $16,000 should be eligible for the tax credit. Also, she said, the standard deduction should be raised to $7,000 for all households.

Medina said, "This gravy train is costing Texas millions in lost federal revenues at a time when we need them most, and corporations get a double break in Texas because we levy no state corporate profits or income tax."

Wiecking said, "The president doesn't have a tax reform plan. The president has a tax regression plan that's a lot like the one he gave us in 1981 that will further reduce the taxes on American corporations by another 9 percent, that will make some modest but not enough change in the way low-income people are taxed, further raise taxes for many middle-income people and further lower taxes for the wealthy in this country."

Judge orders psychiatric tests for Lucas

EL PASO (AP) — A state district judge's decision that convicted killer Henry Lee Lucas should undergo psychiatric testing before dismissing two court-appointed attorneys has prompted an Oklahoma lawyer hired by Lucas to consider resigning.

Gary Richardson of Tulsa announced the possibility of withdrawing Thursday during a two-hour hearing to determine who will represent Lucas when he goes to trial for the 1983 ax slaying of a 72-year-old El Paso woman.

The lawyer said that if he does step down, Lucas probably will choose to act as his own attorney.

Lucas, who had confessed to hundreds of murders but has since recanted, "feels that that's the position he's being put into," Richardson said.

Last October, State District Judge Brunson Moore appointed state Sen. Tati Santiesteban of El Paso as Lucas' attorney. Another local lawyer was appointed earlier this year to help Santiesteban in preparing Lucas' defense.

Lucas, however, has said he does not want either of the court-appointed attorneys and in August asked Moore to dismiss them, saying he had hired Richardson.

Moore said Thursday, "I intend to have Mr. Lucas make a decision concerning the counsel in this case."

But he told Richardson, "I'm merely saying that I think it behooves me to make sure that Mr. Lucas understands what he's doing and I think Mr. Lucas should have some sort of psychiatric evaluation before he makes that decision."

Lucas, however, said he neither wants nor needs an examination.

"I have been examined by top psychologists throughout the country and I have always been found sane," he said. "I feel I am capable of making my own decision here."

Lucas, who has been convicted or who has pleaded guilty to the slayings of 10 people, said that by not dismissing the court-appointed attorneys, Moore was violating his constitutional right to hire the lawyer of his choice.

Moore, however, said Richardson, Santiesteban and his assistant all would remain on the case until the psychiatric testing has been completed, at which time another hearing would be held.

The examination "is going to be done. It has to be done. It's very necessary that it be done and it will be done," Moore said.

Moore also admonished Richardson for considering withdrawing from the case.

"For you to even to suggest that you might drop out of the case...is wrong," he said. "I want him to have a fair trial."

In the past, Lucas has claimed to have killed nearly 600 people in a 10-year nationwide crime spree. He recently has recanted most of the confessions.

He is awaiting execution for the 1979 slaying of an unidentified female hitchhiker, whose body was found near Georgetown.

In the 1960s, Lucas spent 10 years in prison and mental institutions after being convicted of killing his mother.

In El Paso, Lucas is charged with killing Librada Apodaca with an ax May 17, 1983. The trial, slated to begin in November, will be the first for Lucas since he began to repudiate his confessions.

Moore said that through the evaluation, he hopes to ensure Lucas understands that "there are situations when a contract between a person accused of a crime and his lawyer could create problems in the representation."

Richardson said he is "under some type of contract" with Lucas, but declined to specify the terms.

White's press secretary has baby

Lemon Law puts squeeze on auto manufacturers

AUSTIN (AP) — Thanks to the state's new Lemon Law and a Motor Vehicle Commission that sided with consumers, a leaky Buick, a smelly Dodge, and a balky Chevy and Chrysler are going back from whence they came.

In the first Lemon Law cases to reach their desk, commission members Thursday ordered automakers to make refunds to four Texans who soured on their new cars.

"We want to get the message out to the manufacturers and to the dealers that there are problems and these problems need to be promptly attended to," said commission Chairman Robert Hoy of El Paso.

"We are going to see to it that the manufacturers live up to their responsibilities," said Hoy, an auto dealer who sells Mercedes-Benzes, Volvos, Volkswagens and Subarus.

The 1983 Legislature enacted the Lemon Law as a last recourse for new car owners who become fed up with attempts to fix their vehicles. A court challenge by Chrysler held the law in abeyance until April of this year.

Under the law, purchasers can seek refunds if the car has been in the shop for a total of 30 days or more during the warranty period. The law covers only new vehicles.

Six cases went to the commission Thursday. Four refunds were offered. Another case was continued. In the sixth case, the commission denied a refund but kept the case open to look at new problems with the car.

In a Longview case, the commission voted 4-2 to order a refund on a 1984 Buick Century with a persistent coolant leak.

"There was no more than one cubic centimeter of liquid on the ground," General Motors' lawyer Dennis Helfman of Detroit told the commission.

The car's problems fell far below the "substantial impairment" requirement set in the Lemon Law, Helfman said. He predicted the commission's decision could lead to "horror stories" involving customers who want refunds because of minor problems.

He mentioned "the consumer who just goes nuts with a leaky windshield."

"It may be repaired, but not to their satisfaction," he said.

GM wanted another chance to repair Larry Miley's Buick.

After 23 trips to the dealer, however, Miley said GM had enough chances to plug the leak.

"I bought the car with the intention of using it. I haven't used it to the extent I had planned on using the car," he told the commission.

Commission member George Miller of Lubbock agreed with Miley.

"The coolant may be a minor problem but it becomes a major problem when it can't be repaired after seven times," he said.

The commission ordered a full refund, minus 20 cents a mile for the 2,895 miles put on the car before Miley complained. The panel turned down the examiner's recommendation that Beavers Buick of Longview cover 25 percent of the refund on the car it sold Miley.

Longshoremen load grain for Ethiopia

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Thirty-four longshoremen from the Golden Triangle area are providing free labor this week as they help load 3,800 tons of wheat onto a ship destined for Ethiopia.

Members of the International Longshoremens Association in Port Arthur, Beaumont, Orange and Lake Charles, La., will offer free labor during the next four days to load the grain for Project Tejas, a food assistance program started by the Farmers Association of Texas.

"All we have is our labor, and we're giving it free," said W.P. Doucet, Port Arthur ILA Local 25 president. "We're trying to show the world what union means."

The longshoremen left Port Arthur Wednesday night enroute to Corpus Christi where the grain will be loaded.

James Reed, a Beaumont Local 21 member, said: "We don't have any work and it's a good cause. I'm going to ride over and give my day's work."

Judge delays hearing

DALLAS (AP) — A federal magistrate has delayed until Monday a bond hearing for six people accused in a cocaine-distribution business that authorities alleged was in control of 25 percent of cocaine traffic in the Hispanic community.

Federal prosecutors asked U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle for the postponement to allow them time to obtain additional information and complete their preparation for the case.

A grand jury indicted 15 people on Tuesday on drug charges.

Nicaragua feels Contadora peace plan favors U.S.

By THOMAS H. BROWN

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Nicaragua says a new plan designed by the four-nation Contadora group to bring peace to Central America is overly favorable to the United States.

The new proposal, presented at a meeting of Contadora and Central American foreign ministers Thursday, follows a year-long debate on the original plan that was rejected by U.S. allies in the region.

It reportedly differs from the previous plan by allowing foreign military advisers to remain longer in Central America.

The Contadora group, comprising the foreign ministers of Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela, has been trying since January 1983 to negotiate a peace treaty for Central America. The group takes its name from the island off Panama where the ministers first met.

Miguel d'Escoto, Nicaragua's foreign minister, criticized the proposal as "something that defends totally the interests of the United States."

D'Escoto declined further comment on the new proposal, but added: "Not everyone who says they're interested in an agreement is really interested. And the United States is fundamentally uninterested, except in an agreement that legalizes North American intervention in the region."

But some of the diplomats said the new plan should help move the governments of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua toward agreement on a treaty.

The Panamanian foreign minister, Jorge Abadia Arias, had predicted Contadora's demise if the current meeting failed to produce "substantial advances."

Abadia said Thursday's session "surpassed expectations and presages a favorable conclusion" to the search for peace.

He said the Central American governments would be asked to attend another meeting in Panama in two to three weeks to propose revisions to the new plan, and then would have another 45 days to comment.

Bernardo Sepulveda, the Mexican foreign minister, said the new plan achieved "balance and symmetry" among the objections and suggestions of the Central American governments.

Nicaragua alone endorsed the original plan offered by the Contadora group in September 1984. That plan called for immediate removal of foreign military advisers from the region, including U.S. personnel who are training the Salvadoran army.

The new plan calls only for the gradual removal of the advisers, said a diplomat close to the two-day meeting that ends today.

An internal briefing paper obtained by The Associated Press also omits an earlier proposal for a freeze on new arms purchases. It calls instead for a "reasonable balance of forces and the establishment of maximum limits on military development."

Further details of the plan were not immediately available. But the diplomat, who spoke anonymously for protocol reasons, said it marked a "softening" of the original treaty proposal.

The Contadora effort faltered last year when Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras, reportedly at the urging of the Reagan administration, rejected the first treaty proposal. Guatemala had taken no public position.

The United Nicaraguan Opposition, or UNO, said it had written to the foreign ministers of Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras asking permission to attend the next Contadora session.

WORLD

NATION IN BRIEF

Passengers still missing

VISEU, Portugal (AP) — State railroad officials investigating the head-on collision of two trains were quoted today as saying that some passengers still were unaccounted for, and that the toll may increase beyond the 49 known dead.

Only 18 of the 49 bodies have been identified and many of those reported missing were likely to be among those unidentified, Portugese newspapers quoted the investigators as saying. Up to 60 people are unaccounted for, the investigators were quoted as saying.

"Still, what this means is that the toll is likely to go up.... We just hope some of the claims (about the missing) will turn out to be false," an unidentified official was quoted as saying.

Militiaman executed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Shiite Moslem Amal militia announced that one of its members was convicted by a militia court of killing two men and was executed.

A statement from Amal on Thursday identified the man as Farkad Alaedine. It did not give his age.

It said he was tried by an Amal tribunal and convicted of murdering Hussein Atrash and Jad Kazma. It did not say whether they also belonged to Amal.

Amal promised to "pursue all those jeopardizing the security of citizens."

Return of ships sought

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister David Lange said Thursday he hoped the deadlock with Washington over his anti-nuclear policy could be resolved and U.S. warships would start making port calls in New Zealand again next year.

Lange would not predict during a news conference when a U.S. Navy vessel might visit New Zealand, but said if port calls are not resumed by the end of 1986, "we are certainly going to be disappointed."

He raised the prospect of renewed port calls on the eve of talks in Washington between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Geoffrey Palmer, New Zealand's deputy prime minister.

Lange said the talks could open the way for a resumption of port calls.

Greek captain convicted

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — A freighter captain was found guilty of forcing 11 African stowaways into the shark-infested waters of the Indian Ocean at gunpoint and has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Antonis Plytzanopoulos, 44, skipper of the Garifalia, listened silently as the guilty verdict was read in a crowded courtroom in this port city near Athens on Thursday.

"I hope such an incident will never happen again," Judge Zisis Kottis said. The case shocked Greece's shipping community and sparked noisy debate about racism in Greek society.

The court accepted a last-minute defense plea to reduce charges against the captain and 10 crew members to misdemeanors.

Dachau guide printed

DACHAU, West Germany (AP) — Town officials said Thursday they will print a new color guidebook to improve the image of this Bavarian town, best known as the site of a Nazi concentration camp.

The camp was established in 1933. Thousands of Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime were killed in the camp before American troops liberated it in 1945.

A statement by the city administration said the new book will be distributed free of charge to about 1 million visitors who tour the camp site camp annually.

Deng encourages retirement from party

PEKING (AP) — Having dismantled Mao Tse-tung's communes and opened China to the West, Communist Party leader Deng Xiaoping is set to embark on his boldest initiative yet — the peaceful retirement of 20 percent of the party hierarchy.

Diplomats and Chinese sources said they expected the 12th Communist Party Central Committee to begin its fourth plenary session in Peking today prior to a 1,000-delegate party conference next week.

The 81-year-old Deng's closest supporters have spent the summer mapping out generational changes to end the life-tenure system for party bosses and ensure the continuation of Deng's open-door policies.

This month's meetings will have "great importance in laying a solid foundation for China's economic take-off," 56-year-old Hu Qili, already picked to become a member of the Politburo, said Thursday.

Chinese sources and Western and Asian diplomats who were briefed by Chinese officials spoke about the changes on condition of anonymity.

Both friends and foes of reform will be "handing in their resignations and getting their golden handshakes," said one diplomat. Asian diplomats said at least seven and possibly 10 changes are anticipated in the 24-member Politburo, where the average age is 75.

Honorable retirement bress the pattern of 36 years of communist rule in which change at the top came "with a coffin or a coup," as one diplomat put it.

"It's one of the greatest contributions Deng has made," said another envoy.

Qiao Shi, head of party organization, told Japanese visitors that about 20 percent of the 346 Central Committee members and alternates would be replaced, and a similar percentage would change on the 172-member Central Advisory Commission and 132-member Discipline Inspection Commission.

He said Politburo members in poor health would retire.

When it comes to carrying cargo, you won't find a more royal wagon than the remarkably posh Electra Estate Wagon.

Actually, it's more like the quintessential luxury car with a rather roomy trunk. The accommodations are exquisite, the standard features list as long as a chauffeur's arm, and the cargo capacity truly astounding —almost 88 cubic feet with the second seat folded down.
