Administration plans sanctions on Brazilian products

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan toughened his stance on trade Friday by revoking duty-free privileges enjoyed by South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong and Singapore, and the administration drafted plans to slap $105 million in sanctions on Brazilian products.

Trade preferences for the four Asian nations will be removed on Jan. 2, 1989, affecting nearly $10 billion in imports sent to the United States annually.

"This move should not be interpreted as penalizing" any of the nations, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "On the contrary, it reflects the great economic successes they have had. All four are good friends and valued trading partners."

However, he said the system of trade preferences is designed to help emerging economies, and when they no longer need assistance, they should be removed.

The United States ran a $28.8 billion trade deficit with the four nations in the first 11 months of 1987, rivaling the $30.4 billion deficit for the same period with western Europe, according to the Commerce Department.

By country, the deficits were: Taiwan, $14.7 billion; Korea, $6.7 billion; Hong Kong, $6.0, and Singapore, $1.4 billion.

Trade preferences had already been removed for many of the four countries' products, such as automobiles. The president's move takes away remaining preferences.

The step was criticized in advance by the Computer and Business Equipment Manufacturers Association. "We are losing a value tool in negotiations on intellectual property rights," said association official Charlotte LeGates.

The industry group wants guarantees of greater protection of U.S. copyrights for computer programs and other high technology in the Asian nations, particularly South Korea where piracy has been a problem in the past.

Imports from these four Asian nations have spiraled because of lower labor costs there and because the U.S. dollar has not depreciated against their currencies nearly as much as it has against the Japanese yen and European currencies, trade officials say.

A weaker dollar makes imports more expensive and U.S. goods cheaper overseas. Recent exchange-rate changes have, for instance, driven up the cost of many Japanese goods. However, imports from the other four Asian trading partners generally have not seen such price rises.

For more than a year, administration officials have pressed the four Asian nations change their currency and trade policies.

The action was the first time that any nation had been removed from the system for trade reasons. In the past individual products have lost their special status, and some nations have had their privileges revoked for political or workers' rights issues, such as Nicaragua or Chile.

Under the system, countries automatically lose the special privileges when their gross national product, expressed on a per capita basis, reaches $8,500. However, all four nations involved have per capita GNP levels below that threshold: Taiwan, $4,000; South Korea, $2,370; Hong Kong, $6,800; and Singapore, $7,200.

U.S. officials said that the action could cost importers bringing products into the United States from the four countries between $400 million and $500 million in duties not currently collected. Products affected range from toys to computer parts.

The system of trade preferences permits the specified nations to export certain products into the United States either duty-free or at reduced duty. Some 141 countries now receive such treatment for over 3,000 products.

Other administration officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Reagan likely will act next week on $105 million in proposed sanctions against Brazil.

Bond issue to be decided today

From Staff Reports

Midlanders today will decide the fate of a $3.8 million bond election to construct a 192-bunk downtown Midland County Jail. Polls across the city opened at 7 a.m. and will close at 7 p.m.

The proposed jail would be built to ease overcrowding in the existing jail, located on the fifth floor of the county courthouse.

If approved, officials hope to lease space in the new jail to the U.S. Marshals Service, the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, the city of Midland and other Texas counties.

— Precinct 101 — Airline Mobile Home Park, Texas Highway 80 West.
— Precinct 102 — Alamo Junior High School, 3800 W. Storey.
— Precinct 103 — Bonham Elementary School, 909 Bonham St.

Survey shows misinformation about AIDS still exists

ATLANTA (AP) — A new survey has found widespread misinformation about AIDS, with 26 percent of the respondents thinking they likely would get the disease from giving blood and 36 percent believing they could get AIDS by eating at a restaurant where the cook has it.

"There continues to be a great deal of uncertainty about the causes of AIDS," the National Center for Health Statistics said in a report distributed this week by its parent agency, the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control.

Some of the misinformation may be because the public has not been given enough detailed information to be convincing. "If we want people to believe they can't be infected (by casual contact), we have to start giving them some technical information about why it can't happen," said Dr. Deborah Dawson, an NCHS researcher who worked on the survey report.

"For the most part, the lowest levels of general knowledge are found among adults 50 years of age and over," NCHS researchers said.

That confirms the self-assessment of that age group, 54 percent of whom said they knew little or nothing about the deadly disease. Overall, 63 percent said they knew "some" or "a lot."

The report details responses to a survey conducted among 3,097 Americans over 18 in September.

Knowledge of the existence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome was more than 99 percent. However, the survey found some respondents who said they never had heard of the disease which has, according to the latest CDC count, struck more than 51,000 Americans and killed more than 28,000.

Eighty-six percent of the respondents knew that there is no known cure for AIDS, 78 percent knew anyone with the virus can transmit it through sexual intercourse, and 73 percent knew that an infected pregnant woman can infect her baby.

Each of those responses was 3 to 4 points higher than a survey conducted in August.

"There are signs that the U.S. public's knowledge about AIDS increased slightly," the NCHS said. "There were small but significant increases...in the proportions of adults answering (some questions) correctly."

Ninety-four percent of the respondents said it was "very likely" that a person will get AIDS through sex with an infected person, and 93 percent said it was "very likely" that a person would get it through sharing drug needles with an infected person. Those are the two chief modes of transmission.

But "the level of misinformation about (other) modes of transmission, particularly from casual contact, continues to be high," the NCHS reported.

Twenty-six percent said it was somewhat or very likely that someone would contract AIDS from donating blood. That is a misconception the American Red Cross and other agencies have fought hard to defeat, pointing out that sterile equipment is used in blood donations and that a donor comes in contact only with his own blood.

Thirty-six percent of the respondents thought it very or somewhat likely that a person would get AIDS from eating at a restaurant where the cook had AIDS, 18 percent believed working near an AIDS patient is a threat and 69 percent said kissing with saliva exchanged is likely to transmit the disease.

AIDS experts say the disease is not spread through casual contact, and while transmission during "French kissing" is theoretically possible, it never has been reported.

Thirty-five percent in the survey said the disease is likely to be transmitted by mosquitoes or other insects, another assertion AIDS experts dispute.

In a more personal question, 7 percent said they have known a person with AIDS.

CDC estimates that 1 million to 1.5 million Americans have been infected with the AIDS virus, and of that total, 20 percent to 30 percent will develop AIDS by the end of 1991.

The disease, caused by a virus that destroys the immune system, has struck most often among homosexual males and injectable drug abusers.

Rucker will assume Culver's judicial seat

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Rucker

Long-time Midland County Republican party head Dean Rucker has been named to replace Judge Barbara Culver on the bench of the 318th State District Court, the governor's office announced late Friday.

Rucker, 32, was among six other local attorneys considered for the post until the governor made the final choice Friday morning, said James Huffines, Clements' appointments secretary.

"The governor always takes into consideration the qualifications and track record of an individual," Huffines said of the choice. "The governor feels he (Rucker) is an individual who will represent the people in a fair and judicious manner."

Clements appointed Culver to the Supreme Court on Jan. 8, and she is scheduled to take the oath of office on Feb. 1.

"I heard this afternoon" of his appointment from Huffines, Rucker said from his law office. "I am thrilled."

Rucker said he would assume his new duties in the next 10 days to two weeks.

As a sitting district judge, Rucker will have to resign as head of the local Republican Party, a post he has held since February 1986. The GOP executive commitee will meet soon to consider a replacement, he said.

Rucker said he plans to run for the post when Culver's term expires on Dec. 31, 1990.

A Midland native, Rucker attended St. Andrews High School in St. Andrews, Tenn. He attended Trinity University and St. Mary's University School of Law.

He currently serves as director of the Midland Apartment Association and president of Community and Senior Services, Inc. He was vice-president of Midland County Young Republicans in 1983 and has been on the state republican executive committee for Senatorial District No. 25 since May 1987.

Former justices advocate election of judges

By JEANETTE ALLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Non-partisan election of judges would be an essential step toward improving the the Texas judiciary's tarnished public image, two former state Supreme Court chief justices told a special committee Friday.

"I would support non-partisan elections because it would be a stepping stone to merit selection," former Chief Justice Joe Greenhill told the Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary, which met for the first time Friday.

Former Chief Justice Jack Pope said he also favored non-partisan elections, adding that the Legislature should outlaw excessive campaign contributions to judges from parties involved in ongoing lawsuits.

"If you really want to break up the love affair between the donor and the (recipient), disqualify the donor from appearing before that judge if he gives more than $3,000 or $5,000 within 24 months of the time he makes the donation," Pope said.

Chairman Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, said the committee will meet monthly to tackle problems discussed at Friday's meeting, namely election vs. merit selection of judges, campaign contributions and judges' compensation.

Hury said the committee would consider Pope's suggestion concerning campaign contributions, but he would not say whether it would be a viable solution.

"I hope that we will come up with a solution and it would be as much of a consensus as possible because it would take a consensus from this committee as well as from the governor," Hury said.

Pope said the Legislature might want to consider imposing criminal penalties on judges who violate the canons of judicial ethics. Under both the state and federal judicial conduct codes, judges may be censured, reprimanded or ousted from their courts for ethical violations, he said.

University of Texas Law School Professor Pat Hazel said the state needs to raise judges' salaries to retain and recruit the best ones. Particularly in urban areas where lawyers earn $100,000 salaries, good judges are difficult to keep, Hazel said.

Pope, Greenhill, and Hazel agreed the state must first solve the compensation question before tackling the politically sensitive issue of judicial selection.

"There are more problems to the judiciary than that (the method of selection)," Pope said. "When I was a judge I went after things that were achieveable."

Revamping the election system will prove difficult since Texas is increasingly becoming a two-party state, Hazel said.

Pope said the courts do not have adequate funding to handle the increasing case load and conflicts between Austin and regional court leaders over jurisdiction are strangling the state's judiciary.

Philanthropists fly around the world for charity

SEATTLE (AP) — Breakfast was served in Europe, lunch over Asia and nightcaps over the Pacific as a rollicking band of philanthropists hurtled around the globe Friday trying to set a speed record.

The Boeing 747SP, dubbed Friendship One, was on track to break the record of just over 45 hours as it flew about 200 miles off the coast of Bombay, India, at 4 p.m. EST.

The jet picked up a strong tailwind on the first leg of the journey, touching down in Athens 18 minutes ahead of schedule to refuel, said Jack Garman, a meteorologist with Universal Weather and Aviation of Houston.

But refueling took 61 minutes, far longer than the 25 minutes scheduled, when about 20,000 pounds of extra fuel was loaded due to greater-than-anticipated consumption on the first leg and the resulting need to reprogram the plane's computers, Garman said.

Back in the air, the jet regained its record-setting pace en route to a planned return this morning to Seattle's Boeing Field. The plane left the county airport Thursday night.

"If they keep it up they'll beat the old record by five hours," said Alexandra Hubbard, a spokeswoman for the Friendship Foundation, which organized the flight to benefit children's charities.

The 100 passengers, who paid $5,000 each, were keeping their time according to Pacific Standard to lessen the effects of 'jetlag, she said.

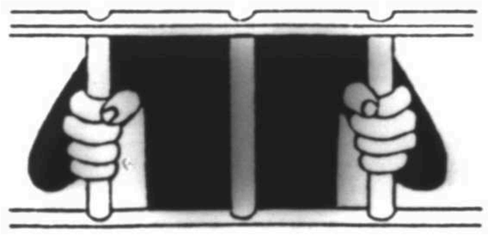

Reports from the flight, received at a command center at Boeing Field, indicated the passengers did not get much sleep Thursday night, Ms. Hubbard said. They blamed the excitement and the abundance of food and drink donated by United Airlines. The passengers, plus a half-dozen journalists and 18 volunteer United crew members, also had movies, board games and exercise bicycles for diversion.

Dallas police department stung by criticism, officer says

By JENNIFER DIXON

DALLAS (AP) — Praised four years ago as the best in the nation, the Dallas Police Department has since been scrutinized by congressmen, criticized by City Council, chastised by a state judge and demoralized by the brutal slayings of two officers.

"I don't know of any organization that could undergo the criticism that we have over the past year, many of which are not justified, and not feel it very deeply," Capt. John Holt says.

Officers on the street say morale hit rock bottom a week ago today, when the second officer to die in as many weeks was gunned down in front of a crowd by a deranged transient.

A group of three to six young black men waiting at a downtown bus station egged the vagrant on as he shot officer John Glenn Chase in the face three times, despite the 25-year-old newlywed's pleas for mercy, Lt. Jerald Calame said. The vagrant, Carl Dudley Williams, was then killed after he fired at pursuing officers.

Chase's death brought to the surface simmering anger among police officials against the department's most vocal critics — two minority City Council members whose strident calls for change in the deadly force policy brought congressional investigators to town last year.

Police Chief Billy Prince blamed the constant "bashing" for helping incite the crowd Saturday. Mayor Annette Strauss in turn blasted Prince for saying elected officials were partly at fault and called the shooting an isolated incident that had nothing to do with city politics.

Prince, however, refused to back down.

"The feeling and atmosphere of controversy and criticism that permeated this past year...you take someone a little mentally deranged, and the circumstances are just right and they're on the edge, it makes them just bold enough to attack an officer," he said.

Black council members Diane Ragsdale and Al Lipscomb — who refused to return repeated calls from The Associated Press — have long lobbied against the predominantly white police department and accused it of racism in hiring, promotions and the use of deadly force.

Their criticism hit a fevered pitch when 70-year-old Etta Collins, a black woman, was shot to death at her home by police investigating a burglary in October 1986. A grand jury declined to indict the officer.

Ms. Ragsdale and Lipscomb helped bring members of a House subcommittee to Dallas in May for a day-long congressional hearing led by Rep. John Conyers of Detroit.

Days later, an 81-year-old black crime watch volunteer, David Horton, was shot to death by police called to his high-rise retirement complex after he allegedly pointed a gun at officers.

Problems continued to dog the department throughout 1987, and the year ended with several officers fired for misconduct and the city fined $93,250 and cited for contempt of court by a state judge who accused it of being dilatory and obstructive.

"I think it goes in cycles," said Raymond Hawkins, deputy chief of the southeast substation. "At the Republican Convention (of 1984) we were touted as the best in the country. This is in fact the same police department. What has changed is some key individuals' attitude and some rather unfortunate instances.

"Our mistakes are much more final. As a result, the fallout from a police mistake is much greater."

Mistakes that tattered the department's image were widely publicized in November and December, when the internal affairs division concluded several investigations that resulted in disciplinary action.

— An off-duty officer was fired for driving off in an ambulance responding to a sick-person call.

— One officer was dismissed and another disciplined after a handcuffed prisoner was physically abused.

— Two officers were dismissed for allegedly urging motorists stopped for driving while intoxicated to not take an Intoxilyzer test and referring them to a specific attorney.

— An officer on probation was fired for physically abusing a prisoner at the city jail.

— Two officers were fired and a reserve officer relieved of his duties after an unarmed 16-year-old was shot when she opened the door of her apartment.

— A cocaine-intoxicated man died after officers tried to restrain him with a neck hold and a 62-year-old man was fatally shot at his home when he allegedly pointed a gun at officers serving a search warrant for bootlegging.

State District Judge Joe Burnett added his voice to the ruckus late last year in a hearing on whether police should produce psychological records in a wrongful death lawsuit brought by the wife of a slain suburban police officer.

"The city has not been cooperating," Burnett said in a hearing.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Windy, mild conditions forecast for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Windy conditions and continued mild temperatures are expected in the Permian Basin throughout the weekend, according to National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

On Saturday fair skies and warm temperatures are expected, with a high in the mid 70s. Winds will be from the south 15-25 mph and gusty. Saturday night is expected to be fair with a low in the 40s.

Sunday will be partly cloudy and cooler, with a high expected in the mid 60s.

The record high temperature for Friday's date was 78 degrees, set in 1967 and 11 degrees warmer than Friday's high. The record low of 8 degrees, 29 degrees colder than the low of 37 degrees, was set in 1951.

STATE

Strong southerly winds raked most of the state Friday amid unseasonably high temperatures.

Generally wind speeds ranged from 15 mph to 25 mph, but gusts of 30 mph and 35 mph were recorded in parts of North and West Texas where lake wind advisories remained in effect.

Meanwhile warm moist air continued to spread across the coastal plains into Texas from the Gulf of Mexico.

But the air was much drier over the Panhandle and far West Texas in the vicinity of the low pressure zone. Skies were partly cloudy over the greater part of the state.

Considerable cloudiness was expected today over parts of North and South Texas, but elsewhere skies will be fair to partly cloudy.

Overnight low temperatures were expected to fall into the 30s in the mountains to the 60s along the lower coast before reaching the 60s and 70s again today.

NATION

Most of the nation enjoyed mild temperatures Friday, and precipitation was scarce from coast to coast.

International Falls, Minn., often the coldest spot in the nation, had a record high of 32 degrees, surpassing the mark of 31 set in 1974.

Precipitation was confined to the Northwest and the West Coast, most in the form of rain, with some snow at higher elevations. Roads became slippery due to freezing rain near Pocatello, Idaho, on Friday morning.

Snow advisories were in effect for the Olympic and Cascade mountains in Washington, the northern Sierra Nevada in California and the Lake Tahoe area in Nevada. A gale warning was in effect on the Washington coast.

In Southern California, large breakers were expected on westward-facing beaches.

Gusty winds kept the air from feeling as mild as the temperature indicated. At Grand Rapids, Mich., the temperature was up to 39 degrees, but a south wind at 16 mph made it feel like 21. At Rochester, Minn., the temperature was a mild 36 degrees, but a 19 mph wind produced a wind chill reading of 13.

While the north-central part of the nation was enjoying mild temperatures, cold arctic air lurked over Canada to the north. Much colder weather was expected to move into parts of Montana and North Dakota by this afternoon.

Today's forecast called for rain showers from northern New England across northern New York, the Great Lakes, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Dakotas to the northern Rockies, with snow near the Canadian border; snow showers over the Great Basin and a few rain showers over the Pacific Northwest.

Police hunt for man with boy on leash

WEST BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — Police and FBI agents are looking as far away as California for a scruffy man who led a young boy by a dog collar and leash but have not come up with a single solid lead, an investigator said Friday.

Detectives are not sure if the case was child abuse or abduction, said Sgt. Ronald Nelson of the Suffolk County Police Department.

But he added: "There is no doubt in my mind that we have a child who is being severely abused."

He said more than 20 teams of detectives and agents were "exhausting every avenue" in the search for the boy, who was last seen Sunday.

The boy was taken into the Che Lalo Deli in West Babylon, led by a dirty-looking and unshaven man who held a tan dog leash attached to a blue vinyl collar around the boy's neck, said detective George Bodenmiller.

The boy cried and pleaded with the store clerk, a teen-age girl, to "Get my mommy and daddy." At these words, the man punched the boy in the face, told him to shut up and dragged him from the store, said Bodenmiller.

The clerk called police and told them the man sped away in a large brown 1970s model car with a white license.

Detectives have been checking brown, tan, or gold sedans on Long Island that have New York plates, which are white.

"There are 26 other states that have white license tags but we started here on the island and will then widen our circle," Nelson said.

Detectives also were looking at lists supplied by the National Center of Missing Children in Washington D.C.

They checked recent traffic summonses across the country and responded to hundreds of telephone calls from people who thought they may have spotted the man.

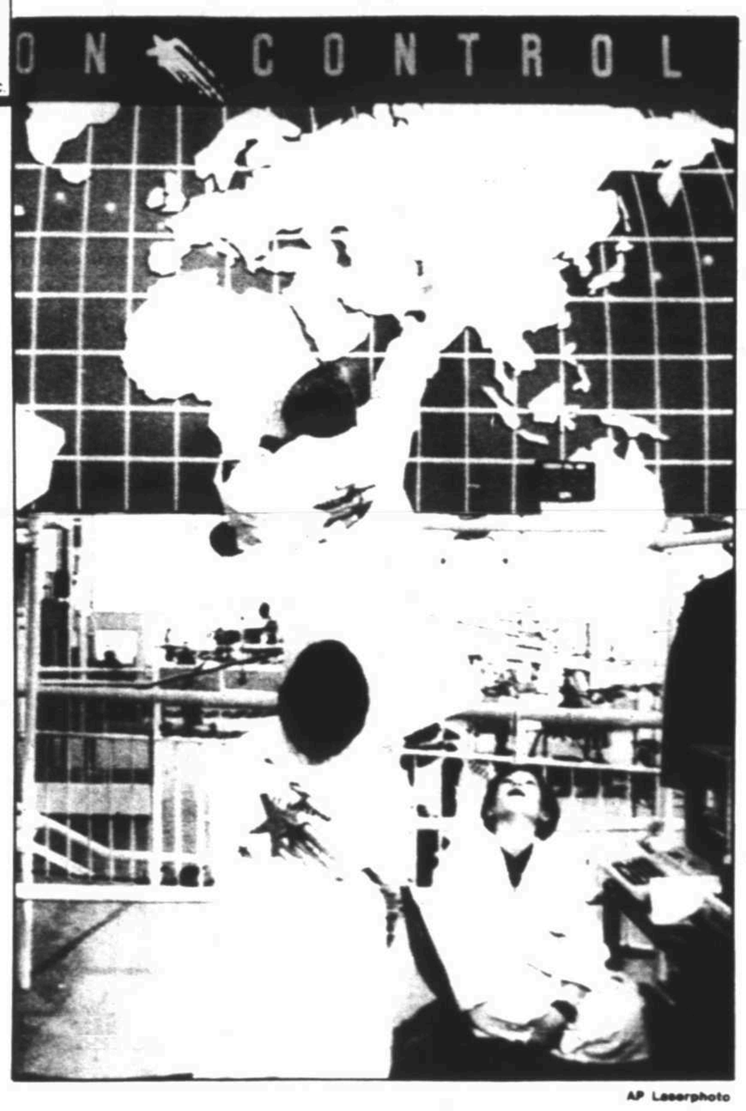

Calls have been followed up as far away as Kansas, California and Florida with the assistance of local law enforcement agencies, Nelson said.

The man was described as white, in his late 40s or early 50s, with a salt and pepper mustache and brown, graying hair. He was gaunt, about 6 feet 1.

The boy appeared to be 4 or 5 years old, dirty and sickly looking and had brown hair and a dimple on one cheek.

An anonymous donor put up a $10,000 reward for information leading to the man's arrest.

"We should have been able to come up with something by now," said Bodenmiller. "Every day that passes it is more unlikely that we will find him."

FLIGHT

From Cairo, the jetliner's route took it over Saudi Arabia, across the central portion of the Persian Gulf and on to Bombay en route to Bangkok and Vietnam. It was to take a slight southern detour over part of the Middle East to avoid Iranian airspace, Garman said.

The flight previously passed over Denver, Washington D.C., and Portugal.

"The weather's going to be good," Garman said. The jet was traveling at 32,000 feet, high enough to maneuver around spotty thunderstorms in Southeast Asia before a planned refueling stop at 11:47 p.m. EST in Taipei, Taiwan, he said.

Ms. Hubbard said the $500,000 raised from passengers' donations was augmented by contributions from United, Boeing, Pratt & Whitney and Volkswagen-U.S., which had donated a car that was aboard the plane and would be raffled off afterward.

The trip was sponsored by the Friendship Foundation to benefit, among others, children's hospitals in Seattle and Los Angeles and the City of Hope children's charities in Los Angeles. The foundation was formed by Capt. Clay Lacy, the United senior pilot flying the plane.

With a speed averaging 650 mph, the flight would take 36 to 40 hours, depending on winds, and consume 140,000 gallons of fuel worth $172,000.

Prior to leaving, Lacy said conditions were excellent and the flight could travel as fast as 800 mph, taking only 35½ hours.

The trip must cover at least 20,000 nautical miles, or about 23,000 statute miles, to establish a record, said Bruce McCaw, a Seattle businessman who helped organize the flight. The actual flight is expected to cover 21,735 nautical miles, or about 25,000 statute miles.

A record of 45 hours and 32 minutes was set in February 1984 by Brooke Knapp, who flew a twin-engine Gulfstream III jet and raised nearly $1 million for UNICEF.

Last June, Gulfstream executive Allen Paulson flew around the world in a Gulfstream IV jet in 45 hours, 26 minutes and 55 seconds. That flight was westbound and is distinct from eastbound records.

The 747SP is a smaller version of the 747 that can fly 7,700 miles without refueling, the longest maximum range of any commercial airliner.

TRADE

The sanctions are in retaliation for Brazil's refusal to permit imports of U.S.-made computer software. Administration officials have said in the past that the possible list of products to be slapped with tariffs include Brazilian-made shoes, automobiles and electronics equipment.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter has recommended imposition of the sanctions, but a final White House decision is being delayed because of sensitive negotiations in New York between Brazil and some of its creditors on refinancing its huge debt, the sources said.

The more aggressive policy toward Brazil and the Asian nations comes as a House-Senate conference committee resumes work on tough trade legislation and as government statistics suggested the 1987 trade deficit would soar to $173 billion or more, up sharply from the previous record $156.2 billion deficit in 1986.

The administration is seeking to soften provisions of the legislation which it considers too protectionist and to meet congressional criticism that it has not been tough enough on trading partners.

In a related development, the administration reacted unenthusiastically to Japan's announcement that it would extend for a seventh year its "voluntary" restraints on auto exports to the United States at the same 2.3 million-car level as last year.

The old agreement expires March 31.

"We haven't asked them to do it. In fact, since 1985, we have been urging them not to put on automobile export restraints."

Magistrate Smith resigning position

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Smith

United States Magistrate Darrell Smith of Midland is resigning the part-time magistrate's job he has held since July 1983 to devote full-time to his private law practice.

He was appointed to the post in 1983 by judges of the federal-court system's Western District of Texas, which spans from the Waco-Austin-San Antonio area westwardly to El Paso.

Smith, 44, serves under U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who presides over the Midland-Odessa and Pecos Divisions of the Western District of Texas.

Smith on Friday said that he had talked to Bunton about his resignation plans and that the judge had "asked me to stay on" until a replacement magistrate is appointed and sworn in later this year.

"I have asked to be allowed to return to the full-time practice" of law, Smith said.

Bunton was in San Antonio on Friday for court proceedings.

When Smith was appointed to the post almost five years ago, he succeeded then-Magistrate J. Michael Cunningham, 37, who had been magistrate since 1979.

"I consider it a privilege to have the opportunity to serve under one of the ablest jurists in the country," Smith said of Bunton in 1983.

Bunton had nominated Smith for the part-time post. Subsequently, Smith was reviewed by and selected by the Merit Selection Panel of federal judges in the Western District. The part-time magistrate's job currently pays $21,225 per year.

The magistrate's term of office is for four years. Smith was re-appointed to the post last year.

The magistrate's roles include receiving and initially processing federal indictments, hearing federal misdemeanor cases, setting bail in the initial appearances of defendants in misdemeanor and felony cases, reviewing habeas corpus motions by prisoners, holding arraignments, and conducting hearings on illegal aliens.

Smith, who is a native of Freer in Duval County, is a Texas A&M University graduate who holds the law degree from Baylor University. He has practiced law in Midland since 1974.

Democratic candidates say workers rights not protected

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Democratic presidential contenders flayed the Reagan administration in unison Friday night for failing to protect the rights of workers as they met in campaign debate for the final time before the caucuses and primary elections begin next month.

"Has anybody heard from the antitrust department of the Justice Department lately?" asked Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in the opening moments of the 90-minute debate.

Tennessee Sen. Al Gore Jr. blasted the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which is supposed to oversee safety on the job. In the last seven years, he said, there have been 50,000 deaths in the workplace, 10,000 of them related to serious safety violations. Yet, Gore said, OSHA has brought only two criminal indictments.

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri took a shot at Attorney General Edwin Meese III, saying the United States needs an attonrey general who spends time in the courtroom as a prosecutor, rather than as a witness in criminal cases.

The other candidates at the debate, Gary Hart, Sen. Paul Simon and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt made similar charges against the president. Only the Rev. Jesse Jackson of the seven contenders skipped the event because of the deaths of two close friends.

The contenders aimed their fire at Reagan rather than at one another in the opening moments of a debate.

When it came to Reagan, the Democrats blasted away.

Dukakis and Gephardt both spoke out against the administration's call for additional aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

"We're going to defeat Contra aid oncce and for all," said Gephardt.

Dukakis said he wanted "not one dollar more" for the rebel cause.

The Democrats blasted the administration for failing to aid the homeless, as well. Hart struck one jarring note when he said that Democrats have lost the White House in four of the last five elections because voters don't think they know how to solve problems like homelessness.

"We can have all the compassion in the world," he said. "Unless we start winning elections, it won't do us any good."

Correction

The Higher Education Coordinating Board has recommended a 35.5-percent budget hike for Texas public colleges and universities for the 1990-1991 budget cycle. The recommended $3.72 billion budget, which will serve as a starting point for legislative deliberations later this year, would provide a $975 million increase over the 1988-1989 biennium. About $845 million of that money would come from state tax dollars, while tuition and student fees would supply the rest. The plan does not include medical and dental schools.

The Reporter-Telegram Friday incorrectly reported that the Coordinating Board had recommended a 52-percent increase that would provide an extra $1.27 billion over the 1988-1989 biennium.

Witnesses confirm crowd yelled 'shoot him' before officer killed

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities released statements from four witnesses Friday who confirmed hearing shouts of "shoot him, shoot him" before a mentally ill vagrant gunned down Dallas police officer John Chase last Saturday.

All week, police investigated conflicting reports over whether young black people in the crowd had yelled "Shoot him, shoot him" as Police Chief Billy Prince claimed immediately after the incident.

Dallas Times Herald columnist Laura Miller, quoting two witnesses who said they did not hear those urgings, went so far Friday as to label Prince a "fibber" and say Dallas could not breed "a jeering crowd of cop killers."

Capt. John Holt said he took the unusual step of releasing parts of the witnesses' statements because of the reports disputing Prince's account that several people in a crowd of about 15 to 20 egged on the killer, Carl Williams.

Williams, 34, a homeless black man, was shot and killed shortly after he killed Chase, a 25-year-old white officer, and then shot at two off duty officers who pursued him.

Holt noted that several other witnesses told police they did not hear those urgings, "but that doesn't mean it didn't happen."

One witness told police that "a young woman jumping up and down was shouting 'shoot him, shoot him'," while another said several people were encouraging the man to kill the officer.

Another witness told police that after Williams shot Chase, several people in the crowd were "screaming 'shoot him, shoot him again,'" Holt said.

One witness said he got on a bus with some of the people in the crowd and that he heard them say Williams should have shot two or three more police officers.

Dallas police Lt. Ron Waldrop said authorities have not been able to identify the people who urged Williams on, but that if they are found, they could be charged with murder.

Waldrop said police now believe between two and six people were involved in the shouting. He said police were still interviewing witnesses in the case.

Reports the crowd egged on the killer were carried across the nation; early Monday, The New York Daily News carried the front-page headline "Shoot him! They Yell, and Derelict Kills Dallas Cop."

Chase, who was buried Thursday in his native Iowa, had stopped another black man on a routine traffic violation when Williams approached, verbally abused him and snatched his gun.

One of the four witnesses Holt quoted Friday said Chase pleaded, "please don't shoot," before Williams fired. That pleading, too, was the subject of contradicting reports this week.

Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss said Friday night that the city stands behind its police department and noted that "a lady came into my office and said she was at the bus stop and heard nothing."

Mrs. Strauss denied there was any widespread ill-will against the police department that could have nourished such an incident: "This is not a city where that climate exists."

University of Northern Iowa creates scholarship in slain policeman's name

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — At the request of the family of slain Dallas police officer John Chase, the University of Northern Iowa announced on Friday the creation of an annual scholarship to criminology majors in honor of the Iowa native.

William Calhoun, the university's development director, said the scholarship will be awarded to juniors and seniors who have a cumulative grade point average of 2.5 or better on a scale of 4.0. The scholarship also will be awarded on the student's academic ability and solid leadership skills displayed on campus and in community service.

Chase, 25, graduated in 1985 from Northern Iowa. He was buried Thursday in Des Moines in an emotional service attended by hundreds of police officers from Dallas and others from Iowa and throughout the Midwest. Chase was killed Jan. 23 by a vagrant who had taken the officer's gun.

Perot: Board to hinge on race for president

DALLAS (AP) — State Board of Education members will be elected in November on the basis of who the voters in their regions chose for president, Dallas billionaire and education reform advocate H. Ross Perot said Friday.

"Nobody knows who the state board is when you go back to an elected board — it's a bottom-of-the-ballot item," said Perot, who spearheaded landmark public education reforms in Texas three years ago and who lobbied unsuccessfully last fall to keep the state board appointive.

"The tragic thing is this next November our state board will be determined by (state) region in terms of whether or not that region goes Democratic or Republican for the president," he said. "It won't have anything to do with who's running."

Speaking at the 41st Annual Midwinter Conference of the Texas Press Association, Perot said education reform required "world-class supervision to make sure the money was spent to educate the children."

Texas public schools are big business, he said.

"Unfortunately the vested interests around the schools is the superintendents, the principals, the teachers and the coaches," he said. "The kids get lost in divvying up the money."

But the kind of people who run multimillion-dollar businesses and could manage the schools properly won't run for the state education board at the bottom of the ballot. They're the people who run for senator and governor, he said.

The unanticipated huge voter turnout in the constitutional amendment last fall came because Texans wanted to vote on pari-mutuel betting for horse and dog racing, Perot said, and it hurt his efforts to convince voters to approve a permanent change to an appointive board.

"They didn't care about this issue, they didn't know about this issue," he said.

The $1 million ad campaign Perot bankrolled succeeded everywhere it was shown, but in all other places, mostly rural areas, the appointed board was defeated by a large margin, he said.

Superintendent and principal associations, vocational education supporters and teachers unions are hard at work to get their candidates elected to the state board in November, he said.

"Do the kids have a lobby? Do the parents have a lobby?" he asked.

Overemphasis on sports and neglect of academics is the root of many problems in Texas public schools, Perot said. The majority of school administrators are former coaches who don't know anything about education, he said.

"Do you want them (students) to win on Friday night in high school, or do you want them to win all through their lives?" he asked. "... You've got 3 million lives at stake."

*Due to overcrowding *($20/day/inmate)

These figures are based on a Midland county jail capacity of 85 inmates.

THE CURRENT $1,500,000 JAIL RENOVATION WILL INCREASE THE CAPACITY OF THE PRESENT COUNTY JAIL TO 104 INMATES.

FACT:

We have been spending approximately $50,000 per year to house prisoners out of the county (above the cost of housing them in Midland county) while our jail capacity has been 85 inmates instead of 104.

QUESTION:

WHY WOULD WE SPEND $3,800,000 (PLUS $228,000 PER YEAR INTEREST) FOR WHAT HAS BEEN COSTING APPROXIMATELY $50,000 PER YEAR WHILE WE'VE BEEN LESS THAN FULL CAPACITY?

Hereford heifer decked out from horns to hoof for stock show

By TOM BOONE

FORT WORTH (AP) — Bonnie is simply beautiful. She's been bathed with dishwashing detergent, she's had a blow-dry and a brushing, her feet and horns have been polished, and her tail has been, well, nicely glued in place.

Bonnie is the sweet 16-month-old Hereford heifer Ryder Appleton has brought to Fort Worth to show at the annual Southwest Exposition and Stock Show. Ryder, 15, lives on his family's farm outside the community of Sardis near Waxahachie.

And like the thousands of other youngsters who show their livestock at the show, Ryder was hoping for the best but ready for a disappointment, too.

"You never can tell about the judges," he said before the stock show's opening-day competition last week.

But how could any judge fail to see Bonnie's quality points?

Ryder's father, Ron Appleton, said of the 925-pound calf, "I wish she had about this much more height on her." He held his hands 8 inches apart. "She's going to be a good brood cow. She has good depth in her body, and good width, but she's not a first-class show animal."

The knock on Bonnie, then, is that she's too short.

Still, Ryder points out she was breed champion at the Ellis County Junior Livestock Show in September, and she was reserve champion at the Johnson County Livestock Show in July.

Besides, Bonnie has spunk, because she has something the other 15 calves in her class don't have. Bonnie has horns.

Bonk. Bonnie butts heads with the calf in the next stall. Bonk, bonk, bonk. Ryder whacks her on the rump until she stops.

"You know we had those horn weights on her to make her horns turn down and look nice," Ryder says of the leaded weights that fit over the tips of her horns. "Well, we took 'em off this morning, and now she knows she's got horns. She's been pokin' at everything. It don't matter if it's a 2,000-pound Brahma, she'll be pokin' at him, trying to start a fight."

Ryder's sister, Ronda, 19, an agriculture major at Tarleton State University in Stephenville, was at the stock show to help her brother. Her specialty is tail-dos.

Ronda shrugs and grins and says, "I just call it putting her tail up in a ball."

Ronda rats the switch in Bonnie's tail and sprays an aerosol adhesive over it until she can mold it into a cocoonlike thing. All the other heifers in Bonnie's class have tail-dos, too.

Much of the day is devoted to pampering Bonnie — it takes two hours just to bathe her and give her a last-minute haircut, for instance.

Ryder isn't the slightest bit nervous.

"The judges usually are going to pick the animals on the basis of size," Ron Appleton says. "Usually they'll stair-step 'em down the line, with the biggest first."

What he means is Bonnie is maybe going to get her clock cleaned. There are some big heifers in her class.

Finally Ryder enters the ring with the 15 other youngsters. The judge studies the heifers fore and aft, left and right, up and down. He folds his arms, rubs his chin, walks up and down and around and then, just like that, waggles his hand at the biggest heifer in the class — the champion.

The second-biggest is the reserve champion. The third-biggest is next.

Bonnie places 12th. "I'm not disappointed," Ryder says. "Not very, anyway. I got a ribbon."

'Owl Men' cutting down India's trees

CHAMBA, India (AP) — Illegal woodcutters, called Owl Men because they work only at night, are a major factor in the denuding of 3.7 million acres of India's forests a year, environmental experts say.

Around this Himalayan hamlet Owl Men operate in groups of six with axes and saws, cutting down a tree in return for a homemade brew called "kachi," roasted goat meat and 2,000 rupees ($154). They start the job with prayers to a local diety called "Surkhanda Devi," — the Headless Goddess.

Similar groups work throughout India's mountains.

The newsmagazine India Today said recently the destruction of forests has brought India "to the brink of an environmental holocaust."

The newspaper Hindustan Times, in an article headlined "There is only one Himalaya to lose," blamed the loss of woodlands for an increase in the number of landslides in the mountains.

Experts also say a drought affecting nearly half the country's 780 million people is caused in part by the loss of woodlands.

The Owl Men are usually paid by organized gangs who smuggle wood to the plains, where it fetches a high price since lumber is scarce in India.

It is estimated that at the current rate of deforestation, India will lose woods in areas equal in size to Massachusetts and New Hampshire combined in the next five years.

Alarmed by the fast disappearing forests, the Indian government is drafting a law to increase the penalty — now a 500-rupee ($38) fine — for unlawfully felling a tree.

The proposed law calls for three years' imprisonment and a fine of 10,000 rupees ($770). For a second offense, it dictates a seven-year prison term and a fine of 100,000 rupees ($7,700).

The entire Himalayan ecosystem is threatened by the loss of forests, as snow-lines move higher and freshwater springs dry up.

"Before we could get drinking water from a natural spring we had near our village, but now we travel up to three kilometers (1.8 miles) to get the water," said Padam Singh of Nelbagi village, near Chamba.

The area is 125 miles south of the nearest Himalayan mountain snow lines and about 250 miles north of New Delhi.

Vanishing forests also affect wildlife. Government reports say some of the 350 species of mammals, 1,200 species of birds and 2,000 species of insects in India are threatened. Some may have been lost already.

"At the rate we are destroying our forests we will not have to wait for long to see India becoming the biggest desert in the world," the environmentalist Mohan Dharia said in a report to the government.

Satendra Coomar Singha, a former administrator of the Garhwal hill district near the Himalayan foothills, said trees are illegally felled and their leaves cut for three reasons.

"Wood sold in shops is costly and the rural Indians need fuel to cook and fodder for their livestock," he said.

Karamveer Singh, a villager in Rausilikhal near Chamba, put it more simply. "We cut trees because we need wood. The government does not give us cooking gas."

The need for firewood and fodder is about 133 million tons a year, but only 36 million tons are available in state-run stores.

"The rest comes from the Owl Men and villagers who go to the forest and take what they want," said Singha.

The Owl Men are in high demand and make a good living by Indian standards.

"We do not feel guilty as we consider this our business," said a crew leader, who refused to give his name.

"We can cut, chop and make planks in just 10 hours time from a tree...and deliver them at your doorstep.

"You call it the death of a tree," he added. "We call it a service to the needy."

fez

Institute of Technology and The Detroit News

fez — (noun) A "fez" is a cone-shaped hat with a flat crown, generally made of felt and usually having a long tassel attached. It is worn by men in Eastern Mediterranean countries. Fez is also a city in Morocco and is probably the origin of the hat's name. Perhaps you've heard the old pun about a man, who, trying to remember meeting another man long ago in Turkey, commented, "I don't remember your name, but your 'fez' is familiar."

Clements says commission will keep gambling 'squeaky clean'

AUSTIN (AP) — Four members of the new Texas Racing Commission were named Friday by Gov. Bill Clements, who vowed the regulators would keep race track gambling "squeaky clean."

"With them, there will be no question or doubt as to the integrity and credibility of pari-mutuel wagering in Texas," Clements said.

Clements announced four of his six appointments to the panel and said the commission would start work immediately, although pari-mutuel horse and dog racing won't begin for some time.

"It's important for the commission to get under way. They have a tremendous job to do here for the next year or 18 months," he said. "It's a big, big job. The sooner we can start down that road, the better."

Named to the commission were:

— James H. Clement of Kingsville, chairman of the famed King Ranch. The governor asked Clement to serve as interim commission chairman until the panel elects its own leader.

By law, the panel also includes as voting members state Comptroller Bob Bullock and Ruben Cardenas, chairman of the state Public Safety Commission.

Clement and Fitzsimons were appointed to represent horse racing interests, while Mangham is to represent greyhound interests. Another dog racing appointee and a large-animal veterinarian still must be named. The governor said he planned to make those appointments within several weeks.

Race track gambling last was legal in Texas in 1937. Voters last November approved a referendum to bring it back, and Clements said finding the commissioners he wanted has been a difficult task.

"It has been a chore sorting out some 250 names (of applicants)...in an investigative sense and interviewing and putting together the type of panel that all of us in Texas can be proud of," he said.

The new commissioners said they planned to visit other racing states as they prepare to regulate racing in Texas.

They must organize, hire an executive secretary and staff, write rules and regulations, and prepare to license tracks and participants. They also will need to determine sites for the major Class 1 tracks to be built in the Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio areas.

Racing likely will begin first at smaller, existing tracks, experts say. But the commissioners, who hadn't even met before Friday's announcement, said it was too early to predict exactly when gamblers could start placing the first bets.

"To try and name a date at this time would be very premature. The problems of starting from scratch are mind-boggling. We're going to put everything in order before we make any decisions," Fitzsimons said.

"Certainly, all of Texas wants good, clean racing facilities run by the rulebook," Mangham added.

Ms. Frey said the commissioners would take whatever time is necessary to make Texas horse racing safe, humane and profitable.

"We're going to build it and build it right, so it stays here and is glorious and beautiful," she said.

In drafting the state racing laws, the Legislature sought to include protections against involvement by organized crime.

Clement said that in his experience, "It was always stressed to me that the key to successful racing was an honest, capable commission."

That's the goal of this panel, he said, adding: "Racing is a natural and important for the state of Texas."

AFL-CIO endorses 10 candidates

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ten statewide candidates, including a San Antonio attorney working to oust an incumbent Democratic Supreme Court justice, Friday won the unanimous endorsement of the Texas AFL-CIO for the spring Democratic primary.

The state labor convention made no endorsement in the presidential race, a decision President Harry Hubbard said was made at the national level. Hubbard said all of the seven Democratic presidential hopefuls "have some pockets of support."

The endorsement of Art Vega over Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez proved surprising, even to Vega himself. "It translates into tremendous credibility for my campaign," the 35-year-old attorney said, adding that he hopes to parlay the labor endorsement into $800,000 in campaign contributions over the next two weeks.

Vega's campaign manager said he wants to begin running statewide television advertisements early next month.

Gonzalez, who drew labor's support in his 1986 race for the high court, said that he was disappointed by the move but that it was not a setback for his campaign for the Democratic nomination. "I have a lot of broad-based support and I'm confident of victory," he said.

Dally Willis of the Communications Workers of America, who supported Gonazalez in discussions among AFL-CIO Executive Committee members, said the incumbent lost support with "just a bad presentation" to that committee Wednesday. Rank-and-file union members, however, said they were concerned about some of Gonzalez' anti-labor decisions from the bench.

"I think we made some very good decision, good for the state and good for labor," said Steve Lovelady of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 479 in Beaumont.

In other contested races on the March 8 primary, the convention endorsed: incumbent U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen; incumbent Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent; Supreme Court Justice Ted Robertson, who is running for chief justice; former Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who is running for Robertson's seat on the court; incumbent Supreme Court Justice Bill Kilgarlin; and Judge Ron Chapman, who is running for presiding judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Bentsen received a standing ovation from the crowd as he asked them to work for a Democratic sweep in 1988.

New keeper of National Archives is a believer in brevity

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — When Don Wilson was a freshman in graduate school, the future historian and archivist was stunned to receive a D-plus on his first midterm examination in European history. He had earned straight A's in his undergraduate studies and had filled two blue books answering the questions in the examination.

"You can write all day and not say anything," his professor told him. "On your next exam, I want you to think for 10 minutes, write an outline, and then write a one-paragraph introduction, one paragraph thesis, three supporting paragraphs, and a one-paragraph conclusion."

"I don't want to read anything more than six paragraphs," the professor concluded.

Wilson said he hoped such brevity and focus would become the hallmark of his tenure as the seventh Archivist of the United States, the keeper of the nation's memory.

The 45-year-old historian took office last month as overseer of 3.5 billion goverment documents dating to before the American Revolution, including eight presidential libraries and 14 federal record centers. All executive, judicial and congressional documents are part of his domain.

The National Archives became an independent agency in 1985 as a result of a controversy surrounding the release of Richard M. Nixon's Watergate tapes. The agency was previously part of the General Services Administration, a political entity.

In the years since receiving his Ph.D in American history, Wilson has worked with Gerald R. Ford and Alf M. Landon, the late Kansas governor and presidential candidate, written papers on pioneer Jews and Western editors, solicited memorabilia and written historical roadside markers. He said his new job was all a historian turned archivist could hope to expect.

"Anything of significant value more than 30 years old is supposed to come to the National Archives," Wilson said.

This includes White House records, agency documents, treaties, diplomatic materials, Supreme Court decisions and congressional bills and committee documents. Then there are pension files, military records from the Revolutionary War and the Civil War, captured German and Japanese military documents, and even records of World War II concentration camps.

Wilson was President Reagan's second choice for the $82,500-a-year post. Reagan at first nominated John T. Agresto, deputy chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, a protege of Education Secretary William J. Bennett.

Agresto was opposed by 16 major scholarly organizations as not qualified for the post, amid fears that he would use the position to espouse a conservative ideology. The Senate failed to act on the nomination.

By contrast, Wilson's appointment was seen as nonpolitical, and was hailed by both academics and Capitol Hill.

"Don Wilson is a very highly respected member of the archivist community," said Leonard Weiss, staff director of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Not that Wilson, a native Kansan, lacked political clout. His nomination was supported by the two senators from Kansas, Bob Dole and Nancy Landon Kassebaum.

Wilson met Kassebaum in a previous post as archivist of the Kansas State Historical Society, in his dealings with her father, Alf Landon, who carried the Republican presidential torch in the 1936 campaign swept by Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Secret Service helps with more than protection

INDEPENDENCE, Iowa (AP) — Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was philosophical when he saw a small knot of supporters in a tiny courtroom being increasingly squeezed by stern-looking men who talked into their sleeves.

"It helps to pay for the airplane," Gore chuckled as he was questioned about the latest addition to his campaign entourage — the Secret Service.

Secret Service protection has good points for a candidate. Gore's reference to paying for airplanes is a case in point.

When Gore — or any candidate with protection — rents an airplane for a campaign swing, the agents pay for seats on the plane that might otherwise be empty, helping to defray the cost.

But some are reluctant to accept protection, because it makes it harder to get close to the voters.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole made a point of telling reporters he didn't want the Secret Service following him around, saying he didn't want to burden taxpayers with the extra cost.

Dole's main campaign theme in Iowa is that's he's a Midwesterner who is "one of us." His down-home campaign style wouldn't square with an entourage of armed guards.

But there are advantages — for one, the attention a motorcade draws as it races through town. At one Mason City stop, several hundred of the curious showed up at the airport the night before Vice President George Bush arrived. Their reason? To watch the unloading of his armor-plated limousine.

Bush gets the protection by virtue of his office, and not his status as a candidate. Former television evangelist Pat Robertson and Jesse Jackson sought protection because of threats, and were among the first of the candidates to receive it.

Gore picked up protection the first week of January and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon's Secret Service entourage signed on a week later. Simon initially resisted the idea of protection, but aides say family pressure prevailed.

Gary Hart was given protection last week, and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt also started traveling with agents last week.

The practice of protecting the nation's political candidates began with the 1968 assassination of Robert Kennedy. Secret Service agents don't like to talk much to reporters or anyone else, but their operations are fairly straightforward.

The Secret Service is under the umbrella of the Treasury Department. During each campaign cycle a committee of Republican and Democratic congressional leaders meets under the leadership of the Treasury Secretary.

"They sit as a group and set certain guidelines and criteria," spokesman Richard Adams said.

While he won't talk about the specific criteria for offering protection, Adams said that in general terms "it depends on being a major candidate, able to get matching funds and so forth. They determine each election year what the criteria will be."

Some campaign aides concede privately that the addition of Secret Service protection is a boon, because an otherwise rag-tag, underfinanced effort simply looks more impressive with a retinue following along.

And, they note, the Secret Service is legendary in its efficiency at doing advance work. One aide to Hart, who declined to give his name, said the candidate's supporters hoped the Secret Service would bring some order to the occasionally chaotic Hart effort.

"The sooner the better," the aide said.

Adams declined to disclose the cost of protecting the candidates, saying the information would inevitably give away security details such as staffing that could compromise the efforts.

Pat Mitchell, who runs Simon's Iowa campaign, says now is a good time to get used to having the Secret Service around. If Simon does well in the Iowa caucuses, his effort will suddenly shift into high gear, with a big press contingent and the other trappings of a front-running campaign.

"It's a complex drill," Mitchell says. "We want to try it out a few times so we can hit the ground running."

Denver's Three Amigos— Ricky Nattiel, Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson.

Super Bowl shootout forecast

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The number keeps coming up with a "3" in it. Like 30, 31, 34, 35, 37, 38.

The predictions for Sunday's Super Bowl between the Denver Broncos and Washington Redskins are for a shootout, something like the 31-30 Denver victory at the end of last season, the last time the two teams met.

The two coaches agreed Friday — with qualifications — that the predictions are pretty accurate.

"The only basis I have is the last game we played," said Washington's Joe Gibbs as both coaches faced the media for the final time before the game.

"I'd say that if you go off that, you've got to say it could be the same. But it could depend on individual plays. We missed a couple against Minnesota that we should have made and it was the difference between scoring 17 and scoring 31."

"I'd say if you had to choose betweem a defensive game and shootout, I'd choose a shootout," said Denver's Dan Reeves, whose team is favored by 3½ points — another "3."

The reasons for the predictions are more apparent than just the game last season. The most apparent are the Denver offense and defense.

The offense averaged 28 points a game as the Broncos won eight of their last nine games, and put up 72 points in two playoff games. In five of those nine they have scored more than 30.

The defense, quick but small, other hand, has shown a tendency to wilt, particularly in the face of larger teams — and Washington's offensive and defensive fronts outweight the Broncos by nearly 20 pounds per man.

While it shut out San Diego — in the snow — it surrendered 30 points in the second half against the New York Giants in last year's Super Bowl and allowed Cleveland to score touchdowns on the first four second-half possessions in the AFC title game two weeks ago.

"I don't know if you can go by that," Gibbs said. "I think it depends on how it goes up front. If one team's defensive line or linebackers dominate, then there will be less scoring. If it's even, then you'll probably get a lot of points."

But Reeves cited the New York and Cleveland games as precedents.

"We couldn't stop the Giants and we had the same problems in the Cleveland game," he said. "That concerns me a little."

Reeves, who described Thursday's practice as "terrible," said team doctors still haven't determined the extent of the injury to starting right guard Stefan Humphries. Humphries bruised a thigh at the end of Thursday's practice.

Bulldogs beat Rebels in heart-stopper

Win gives MHS series sweep

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It had to come down to the final seconds.

When crosstown rivals Midland High and Midland Lee butt heads on the basketball court, it's almost always a nailbiter. Friday's opener of the second half of the District 4-5A season was no exception.

This time it was decided at the free throw line where the Bulldogs' Kyle Lusby coolly canned a pair of free tosses with :04 remaining to give MHS a 56-54 win over the Rebels. It completed a season sweep by MHS over Lee, the first time that has happened since the 1984-85 season when Lee turned the trick.

The Bulldogs remain in the race with the win, two games behind the leaders, at 4-3, 13-13 overall. Lee fell to 3-4, 13-12.

"It doesn't happen very frequently. I know this is only the second time I can remember in my nine years that we've beaten them twice," Bulldog Coach Jack Stephenson said. "And that was when we had Herbert Johnson (a college star at Tulsa).

"I was asked before the game how hard it would be to win two, and I said it would be awfully tough. It was."

So tough, the outcome was still in doubt after 31.56 had been played and Lusby was stepping to the free throw stripe. Lusby had been slumping, failing to reach double figures in his last four games, but he hadn't missed all night, hitting three field goals and three free throws.

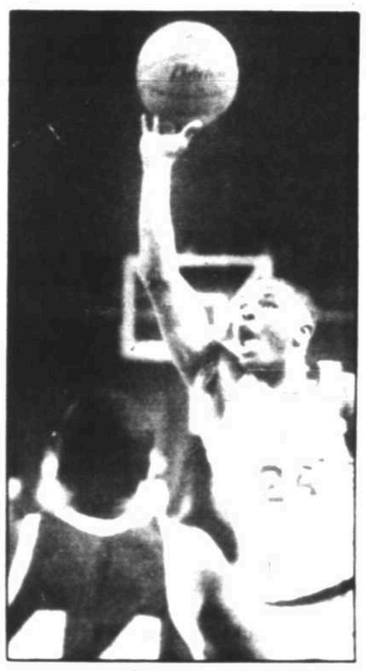

BUT THE Rebels were hoping to ice him, calling a pair of free throws for him to think about the game on the line. But rather than cool him down, it seemed to improve Lusby's concentration.

"I just tried to concentrate on my form and my follow through," Lusby said. "There were a lot of people making a lot of noise on that end, but I hit four in a row in the fourth quarter of the first game and I just thought about that."

But even after Lusby's free throws, Lee's Nicky Sanchez nearly broke the Bulldogs' heart with a desperation three-pointer that rimmed out at the buzzer.

It was a fitting end to a game that saw 12 lead changes and seven ties before it was over. But that's nothing unusual, this rivalry brings out the best in everyone, and that always means close games. Most years it means a split in the series, especially in years when the teams are evenly matched.

This year, with both teams at 3-3 in the district going in, it looked like prime time for a last-second gut check. It was.

George Wolf Reporter-Telegram

Midland's Bart Saddler opens up for a jumper.

"I don't have the records, but it seems the only times a team gets a sweep is when one team has a dominating center," Lee Coach Paul Stueckler said. "And it's pretty obvious that Greg Lewis was the dominating player on the court tonight."

Lewis pumped in 20 points to lead all scorers and was the Bulldogs' rock. Lewis spread his points almost evenly through each period, never taking over the game, but always making his presence known in the low post. The 6-4½ junior also grabbed a team-high 11 rebounds and never let the Rebels take him out of the contest.

But in the first half, even Lewis wasn't able to keep the game under control for MHS as the momentum swung wildly from side to side.

FIRST THE Bulldogs grabbed a 12-7 lead on a Lusby three-pointer. Then it was Lee reeling off 10 straight points for a 17-12 lead early in the second quarter.

But the 'Dogs clawed back with a seven-point run and another modest lead before the Rebels turned up the throttle by scoring the final 10 points of the half and a 31-25 lead at intermission.

"They were beating us pretty badly on the boards in the first half," Stephenson said. "We felt like if we couldn't win the board game we couldn't win the ballgame. We seemed to turn that around some in the second half."

Lee clung to its lead until the final minute of the third quarter when Tracy Bascus put back a rebound for a brief 42-41 lead. But in the fourth, it bounced back-and-forth again, with the Rebels opening up a 51-46 edge with 5:34 to play.

That's when the 'Dogs began mounting their final comeback. Varrick McDonald sank two free throws and Bascus put in a lay-up off a McDonald feed. It was 51-50 Rebels and the crowd of 1,900 braced for the typical Lee-MHS finish.

With the teams tied at 54 and :42 to play, the Bulldogs held on to the ball, looking for the last shot or a chance to win it at the line.

"We were looking for a one-on-one situation to take the ball to the basket," Stephenson said. "We felt we had better quickness than they did on the floor and we could drive to the basket if we had a one-on-one. Kyle got that chance and the foul. It was a close call, but I've had those calls go both ways on me."

This time and this year, the call and the ballgames went to Midland High.

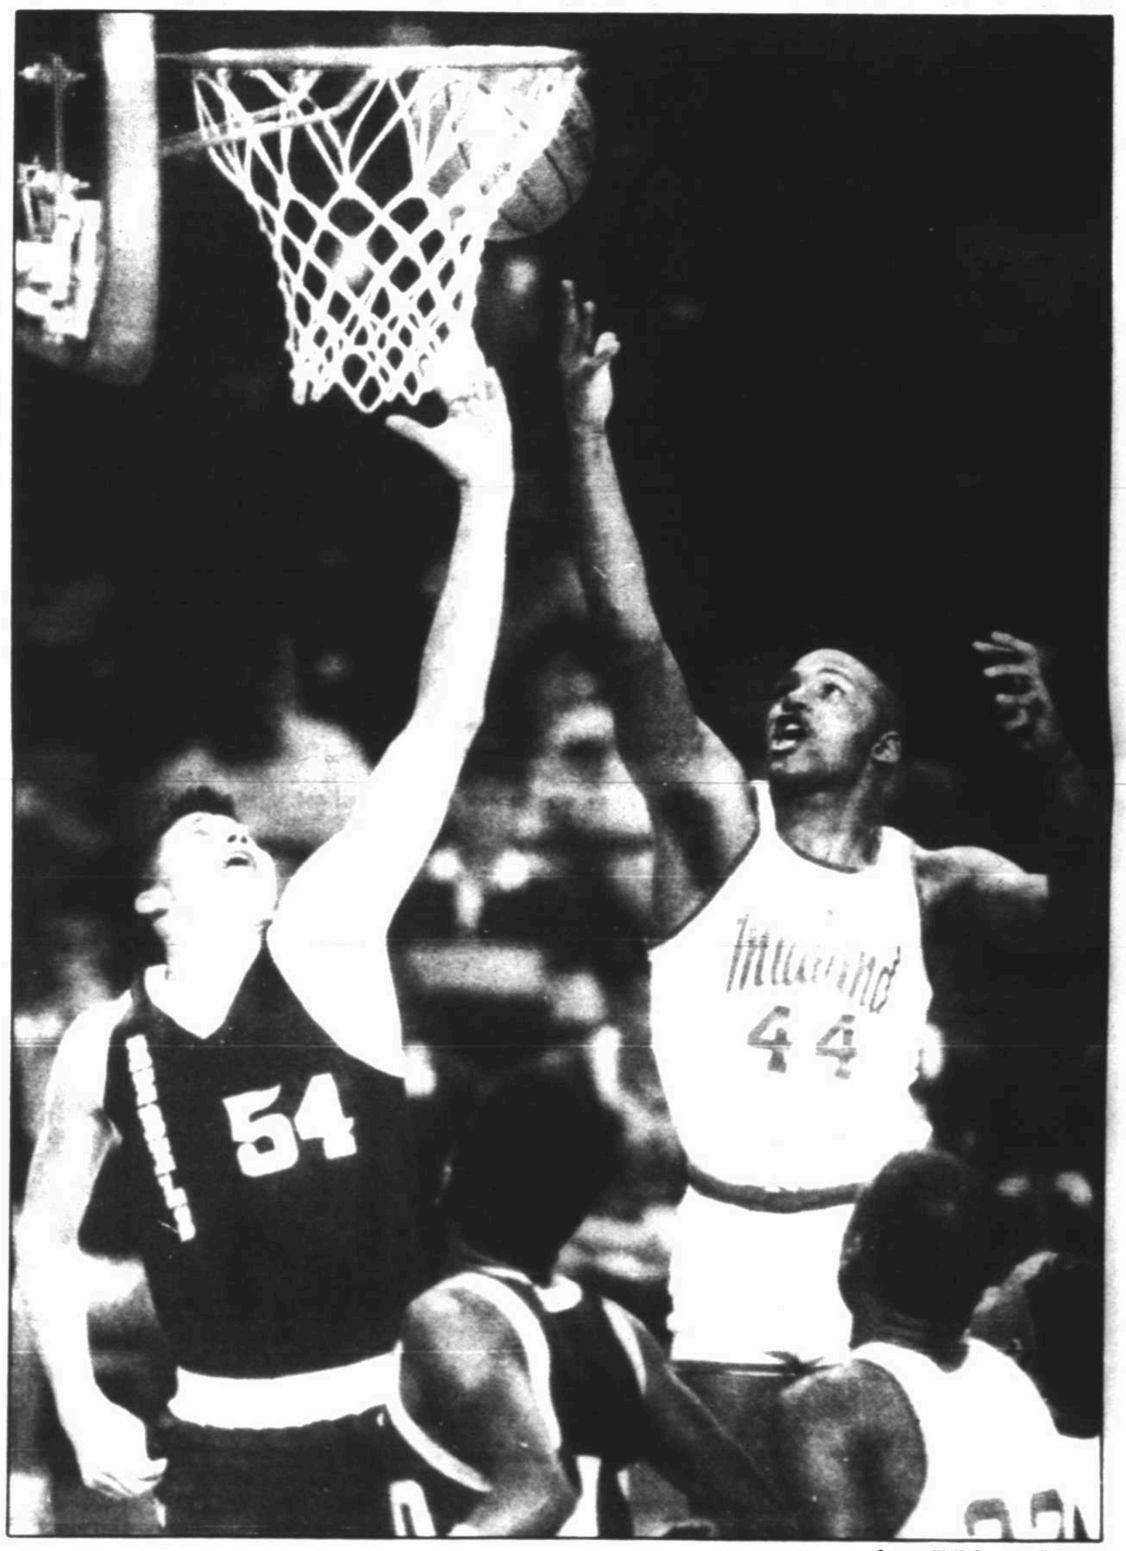

"We've only got four seniors and that was one of our major goals, to beat Lee twice this season," Lusby said. "It was a big one tonight, but we're still shooting for the playoffs. We control our own destiny if we can win the rest of our games, but it will be tough."

Plager to shun tumor treatment

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Barclay Plager, a former St. Louis Blues defenseman and coach, is hospitalized with inoperable brain tumors and does not want to undergo further experimental treatments or rely on life support systems.

Plager, 46, has battled the tumors since late 1984.

In each of the past two summers, doctors were able to shrink the tumors with experimental treatments. But recently, he suffered rapid new tumor growth, and doctors said further treatments would have been so extensive as to cause brain damage.

Plager was twice St. Louis' coach and has been an assistant coach since 1984. He spent his entire NHL career with St. Louis

Quickie quiz: Who was responsible for the longest touchdown play in Super Bowl history? Need a hint....a- Tony Dorsett. b- Marcus Allen. c- Lynn Swann. d- Fulton Walker. e- Daryle Lamonica.

Before picking a Super Bowl winner, you should know that the AFC holds a 12-9 lead over the NFC in victories since the warring pro football leagues buried the hatchet back in the 1960s.

Now, don't you feel more comfortable with your choice of John Elway and the Denver Broncos to win Sunday's game with the Washington Redskins?

Maybe, you should also know that the NFC has won five of the last six. Well, maybe Doug Williams and the Washington Redskins don't look so bad after all.

JUST SO YOU can project a winner, the 14 teams to score first in the game went on to win and on first scores for all Super Bowl games, touchdowns outnumber field goals, 11-9.

But don't rush out after the first points go up on the board to place a bet. The last three teams to score first in the Super Bowl have lost and four of the last five have been losers. And, remember, for years they labeled the Rose Bowl game as a gross mismatch and recommended that the Big Ten-Pac-10 agreement be abandoned.

It seems that the Pac-10 couldn't beat the Big 10 and usually couldn't even make it close.

Same thing happened when they started the major league all-star game. The American League dominated the first couple of decades, but then Ted Williams, Mickey Mantle, Bob Lemon, Bob Feller, Luis Aparicio, Minnie Minoso and Dario Lodigiani retired and look what has happened.

The point is that trends change.

ONLY FIVE teams that have led at halftime have failed to win. Twice it has been Dallas, V and X, and most recently it was Denver, 10-9 over the Giants last year, and a 39-20 loser.

In Super Bowl XVII, Miami led Washington 17-10, but the Redskins won 27-17.

That's the only time the Redskins have won in three tries. Denver has appeared in two Super Bowls and lost both. This one isn't exactly vintage Pittsburgh vs. San Francisco, who are a combined 6-0 in Super Bowl games.

But that doesn't mean that this one won't live up to SB tradition. This one, as usual, whets the appetite like a juicy filet, which doesn't mean it won't be as palatable as an old boot.

In past SB's, the second and fourth quarters have produced the most points, unfortunately, the winning team usually scores most of those fourth period points.

Joey Meyer to start Strickland anyway

CHICAGO (AP) — DePaul Coach Joey Meyer, ignoring pressure to oust or suspend Rod Strickland, said the troubled point guard will be in the starting lineup for Sunday's nationally televised game against North Carolina State.

Strickland's latest woes include a speeding ticket for driving 60 mph in a 45 mph zone on Chicago's Lake Shore Drive Wednesday morning.

Meyer didn't learn of the ticket until a few hours before DePaul's 81-68 win over Marquette Wednesday night at the Rosemont Horizon, and kept Strickland out of the starting lineup.

Strickland came in later in the game and scored 13 points in 28 minutes.

Lee girls keep 4-5A hopes alive against Bulldogs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's 59-39 victory over the Lady Bulldogs of Midland High at Chaparral Center Friday night was much like the story itself for these two teams.

The Lady Rebels kept their slim District 4-5A playoff hopes alive while running the season record to 14-10 and 6-3 in loop play. On the other hand, Midland High sunk to 7-18 for the year and a basement owning 1-8 record in 4-5A action.

The Lady Bulldogs are probably tired of learning court lessons with a lineup that features mostly sophomores and juniors, but these lessons may become valuable stepping stones down the road when experience finally gives them a kick in the right spot.

But for Lee, this was an important game, and after a sluggish start, put that contest in the hip pocket to keep playoff fires burning in the mind.

"All our games are big ones right now because we can't lose another game and hope to get into the playoffs," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "There is a lot of talk about our game at home against Abilene Cooper Friday, but it won't mean anything if we lose to Odessa High Tuesday. We can't look past OHS or anyone else at this point in time.

"I'm just happy to win one. We're sweating all of them out. We just came alive in the second half and I think Midland got a little tired because they came out snorting at us early just like we knew they would."

MIDLAND HIGH was game enough, but you don't win many games shooting with a 21 percent shooting eye from the field. Lee hit only 33 percent from the floor, but the Lady Rebels never quite dropped to the depths of two-of-13 and two-of-15 like the Bulldogs did in the second and third periods that netted only 12 points in two quarters of play.

Lee post Monica Ramirez, saddled with foul trouble most of the game, had 12 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out early in the fourth period.

"It's a good thing Monica had a lot of fouls because she really hurt us," said MHS coach Jane Young. "She's a good player and we just didn't stop her at all. The third quarter was a nightmare. It's been a hard season for me and the kids, too."

THIS WILL be Young's first losing season since taking the Midland High job some 11 years ago. "We're just not hitting. We've been a poor shooting team all year, but I keep thinking these same girls are going to come through before they are through at this school."

Lee's Khristie Davis hit for 12 points also while Leah Brunett had 11 points, despite a three-of-16 effort from the field. Midland High was led by Kim Jackson and Patricia McMaryion with 11 points each. McMaryion started the season on the junior varsity and Jackson is MHS' only returning starter.

Even though Lee has a date with OHS Tuesday in Odessa, the Lady Rebels were already thinking about the date with Cooper Friday in the Lee gym.

"We can still pull this thing off," said Ramirez of Lee's chance to get into the playoffs. "We lost by 27 to Cooper the last time, but we can turn it around. I had three fouls in the first quarter down there and that's not going to happen again.

Davis countered, "Anything can happen and we think it can. If we play as a team and keep hustling like we did in the second half tonight, we can do it. It will be a very big game Friday with Cooper.

"We started slow against Midland High. We thought we were hustling, but we weren't. We talked with each other and did what we knew we could do in the second half."

Lee did get off to a slow start, but Davis had eight of her 12 points in the first quarter when no other Rebel could find the basket. Ramirez scored all her points in the second and third period while Mary Ann Isom came off the bench for six points in the fourth quarter.

Midland High will host Odessa Permian Tuesday before meeting league leading San Angelo on the road Friday.

Cooper defeated Odessa High Friday, 57-49, to move to 8-1 in league play.

From Staff Reports

District 4-5A basketball leaders Odessa High and Abilene High didn't make things any easier on the rest of the league Friday night by both winning at home.

Abilene High, who lost to Permian in the first half, got a taste of revenge with a 62-50 win over the Panthers in Abilene. Andre Davis had 19 points to lead the Eagles. Permian lost despite a 22 point night from Chris Englert.

Lee, MHS in swimming tuneup

By PETE HERNDON
MRT Correspondent

The end of January may not be the time most people would recommend taking a dip in the pool.

With the District 4-5A swim meet a month away, however, Midland Lee and Midland High swimmers began tuning up for the title chase Friday against teams from across West Texas in the prelims of the Midland Invitational Swimming and Diving Championships.

"They should be showing something right about now," Midland coach Jesse Marsh said of his team in reference to the upcoming district meet. "They better. If they haven't got it going by this time, they probably won't."

Several MHS swimmers responded to the challenge with personal-best peformances. Kristen Henry posted a 1:15.53 in the girls 100-meter butterfly to qualify sixth as well as earning the top spot in the consolation race of the 200-meter individual medley with a 2:46.14. Meredith Secker added to the MHS girls' point potential by earning the third seeds in the 100-meter free style (59.68) and in the 50-meter free style (27.41).

Michaela Hasek earned the Lady Bulldogs a pair of top seeds with a 1:04.86 in the 100-meter back stroke and a 2:25.37 in the 200 individual medley. MHS earned a third top slot as a team with a 4:05.78 finish in the 400 free style relay.

Overall, the Lady Bulldog swimmers posted 19 qualifying positions, as well as earning early points in the diving finals when Hollie Schmidt turned in a sixth-place, Beth Rhamey an eighth-place and Kerstin Crall a ninth-place finish at the Lee High pool.

FOOTBALL FACTS

EVERYBODY HAS A BAD DAY

Strange as it seems, in four of the last five seasons, a team that lost a regular-season game by 40 or more points has made the National Football League playoffs. This year it was Chicago, which got blown out by San Francisco, 41-0, but still won the NFC Central Division. This also was the fifth straight season a playoff team had been outscored by its opponents. Houston had that distinction (replacement games not included).

Playoff teams with a 40-point regular-season loss

Year	Team (Record)	Lost to, Score	Margin
1969	Cleveland (10-3-1)	Minnesota, 51-3	48
1967	Cleveland (9-5)	Green Bay, 55-7	48
1977	Chicago (9-5)*	Houston, 47-0	47
1985	Dallas (10-6)	Chicago, 44-0	44
1964	San Diego (8-5-1)	Kansas City, 49-6	43
1986	N.Y. Jets (10-6)*	Miami, 45-3	42

1970	Dallas (10-4)	Minnesota, 54-13	41
1961	San Diego (12-2)	Boston, 41-0	41

The girls take off during prelims for the 200-medley relay in Friday's Midland Invitational high school swim meet at COM pool. Finals begin at 10:30 a.m. today.

SWIM

The Midland High boys earned 11 return trips to the COM pool. Matt Seay led the Bulldogs with a second seed time of 2:09.49 in the 200 individual medley, and a second qualifying spot in the 100-meter breast stroke with a 1:05.44.

FOR THE LEE boys, it was a typical qualifying day, according to coach John Bettina.

"My better kids backed off a little today," Bettina said of the qualifying action at the City of Midland swim team building. "They pretty much knew they were going to be in the finals. I think you'll see some super swims (today) when it gets down to the nitty-gritty in the finals."

Lee finished the prelims with a total of 21 qualifying spots in the finals and consolation rounds, paced by earning seven places in the 500-meter free style.

Matt Stelling led the pack in the 500 with a 5:09.92 immediately followed by Brad Purple with a 5:27.81. Cary Tomlinson added to the title chase in the event by qualifying sixth (5:42.51), one spot in front of team mate Stephen Ochsner (5:42.86).

Lee divers Amy Palmer and Ann Sullivan pushed the Lady Rebels off to a good start. Palmer finished second in the diving competition while Sullivan completed the event one place behind.

"Girl-wise, we swam real well today," he said. "I don't have any idea how we're going to do as a team in the finals. I'm hoping for a finish in the top six."

THE ANDREWS boys represented District 2-4A well in the opening round, earning 13 qualifying spots for the finals in the 5A-packed field.

"We had a few good performances, and a few bad performances," Andrews coach Beth Barber said. We had a big performance in Monahans last week where we finished second to San Angelo. I think we came back a little flat in some of the events because of that."

Peeping fans upset Broncs

Anyone can watch practice

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The view from the roof of 5454 Mary Lane Dr. overlooking San Diego State's practice field is as good as that from any upper-level end-zone seat for Super Bowl XXII in San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

And that's what disturbs the Denver Broncos.

"Those guys are really stressed out," said Mark Dowling, a finance major at San Diego State, while looking down upon the Broncos' afternoon practice session from across Montezuma Road. "It was like they wanted to raise the fence so we couldn't see. Hey, you don't have to watch them to know John Elway is obviously going to throw the ball; they don't have a running game."

EVERYONE knows that, of course, but would the Redskins be so bold as to infiltrate Mary Lane Drive and spy on the Broncos?

"If Washington coach (Joe) Gibbs is going to give Christian testimony at Saturday's chapel service, it's hard for me to believe that he could look himself in the mirror and be so underhanded as to spy on us," said Broncos running-back coach Nick Nicolau.

"With Joe Gibbs being a good Christian, there is nothing to be worried about," said Denver defensive coordinator Joe Collier. "But I'm not saying that's the same with all coaches."

The Broncos, who were alarmed by the more than 50 people perched across the road with an unimpeded view of practice, attempted at least to discourage the makers of home movies.

"THAY WERE very nice, but the video cameras drive them crazy," said Jim Douglas, who resides at 5454 Mary Lane Dr. "They've been over here about three times; they said they don't mind us watching, it's just that they get nervous when they see the cameras.

"You could tell they were scared to death," added Douglas. "The coaches all got up on the fence the other day and were staring at us. Just staring at us. I mean, we're not going to tell anyone about their plays; we're Broncos fans."

After watching practice earlier this week, Douglas called his father in San Francisco and advised him of his vantage point.

"He grew up in Colorado, and he went nuts when he heard," said Douglas. "He thought about coming down here with some of his friends to watch the Broncos."

The practicing Broncos, clearly visible and identifiable from both the roof and ground level behind Mary Lane Drive, attempted to hide their seven-on-seven workouts by running plays under the trees. That just meant that the binocular brigade on top of 5454 Mary Lane Dr. had to move its party from one side of the roof to the other.

"YOU CAN see how 'on' Elway is," said Michael Olson. "He rolled out to the right, stopped and threw the ball a good 45 yards to Clarence Kay. It knocked Kay 5 yards back."

"Elway was bombing to both sides of the field to Ricky Nattiel," said Dowling. "A lot of timing patterns into the corner of the end zone."

"I felt they were practicing the run more than the pass," said Tim McDonald, a speech communications major.

Broncos head coach Dan Reeves, asked about the scouts up on the hill in Thursday's morning's news conference, said, "There were an awful lot of people watching practice, and a couple of them looked like Joe Gibbs' brothers and I don't know if he has any brothers or not. We ran a couple of trick plays to throw them off, but we didn't change the numbers on our jerseys or anything like that.

"I never have, never intended to, never will (spy)," said Reeves. "I guess I'm naive. I accused some of my assistant coaches because there must have been a lot of cheating going on in college because they worry about it every day."

Alex Gibbs, one of those former college coaches who is now offensive-line coach for Reeves, said, "Coming out of the Southeastern Conference, it scares me to death. When I go out on the field, I'm looking every day for spies. But if you can see somebody, they are the amateurs. You're not going to catch the good ones."

Maybe that's why no one really noticed the man in the light blue shirt in the bushes alongside the practice field.

If Humphries is unable to play, Reeves said Larry Lee would replace him. Reeves also said he could activate offensive lineman Jim Juriga if necessary.

As many as six of the Broncos' defensive backs refused to show up for or departed early from Thursday's mandatory media briefing. Dennis Smith, Mark Haynes and Mike Harden were no-shows, and Randy Robbins, Bruce Plummer and Tyrone Braxton left early.

An irritated Clarence Kay made an appearance at Thursday's media briefing but left later, saying, "If this is the only thing you are going to ask me about, I'd rather go back to my room and hide out."

It had been suggested a day earlier that Kay had missed a morning news briefing because he had spent the previous night at a Pacific Beach night spot. Kay, "sober for one year and 44 days," as he said Thursday, criticized the Denver media for "betraying him and insinuating" he had fallen off the wagon.

Pippen replaced in NBA Slam Dunk

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Greg Anderson of the San Antonio Spurs will replace injured Scottie Pippen of the Chicago Bulls in the NBA's Slam-Dunk Championship Feb. 6 at Chicago Stadium, the league announced Friday.

Anderson, a 6-foot-10 forward drafted on the first round by the Spurs, is averaging 9.6 points per game. He will be the only rookie in the Slam-Dunk Championship, to be held as part of the NBA's All-Star Game weekend festivities.

Pippen, also a rookie, withdrew because of a back injury.

The Broncos' Mr. Everywhere

Murray

SAN DIEGO — What's a Karl Mecklenburg?

Wait a minute, don't prompt me.

It's a — gate in East Berlin? A Beethoven concerto? A small town in Iowa? The sound a plate glass window makes breaking?

If it's a person, what is he? The conductor of the Chicago Symphony? Inventor of the dirigible? A Roman Catholic prelate? A Bavarian count? Is there a Baron in front of his name?

Well, Karl Mecklenburg plays football for the Denver Broncos —but even they are not too sure what he is. Neither is the rest of the league.

Let's see, is he a defensive end? A linebacker?

THE CONFUSION does not stop there. No matter what he plays, where does he line up? The only thing for sure when the game starts is that Mecklenburg will be in it. Where is another matter.

Mecklenburg is so flexible, sometimes you expect him to line up with the other team. Or to have his startled teammates turn and say to him, "What are you doing here?"

Football has had its Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside. Mecklenburg is its Mr. Everywhere.

Every quarterback in the league wishes he would stay put. They would like to lock him in the game plan once and for all. Come up to the line of scrimmage knowing where Karl Mecklenburg is going to be for the next few seconds so they can design a play around him.

Instead of that, Mecklenburg turns it into a Tom & Jerry cartoon. "Yoo Hoo! I'm over here!"

MECKLENBURG'S stock-in-trade is confusion. He wants to get the opposing quarterback to audibilizing In football, you are said to audibilize when you can see the play you drew in the huddle isn't going to work. Usually, when you play the Broncos, that's because Mecklenburg isn't where he's supposed to be. Where you hope he'll be.

Audibles are not as reliable as predesigned plays. For one thing, 11 players have to detect the change in signals and the substitution. This gives you 11 opportunities to mess up. Mecklenburg likes to mess you up.

If this is hard on enemy quarterbacks, it's hard on Mecklenburg's teammates, too. "You have to remember when I move over, all the other guys have to move over, too — take another rush or zone," he reminds.

It's not that easy for him, either.

"The hardest thing to remember is what I am," he notes. "If you're playing defensive line, you take long steps. If you're playing linebacker, you take short steps."

THE OTHER thing opposing coaches have to figure out about Mecklenburg is how many there are of him. More than one coach has studied films and come away with the positive belief he comes in quadruplicate. The Broncos clone him before every game.

The image of the Denver Broncos in this Super Bowl XXII is that of a doughty little band of outweighed, out-manned opportunists —the professional equivalents of the "gutty little Bruins" of West Coast legend. They come into focus as dauntless little kids in coal-scuttle helmets and floppy socks, playing the big bullies from the other side of the tracks.

They have to play the kind of game where they run around saying, "Ha! Ha! You missed me!" while the Redskins reply "Think so? Let me see you try to nod your head."

Mecklenburg personifies this mental image of the little kid tiptoeing through the land of the giants, 11 Little Red Riding Hoods trying not to notice the wolf's teeth.

A 230-pound inside linebacker is not an offense against football's paramilitary psychology but a 230-pound defensive end is. Mecklenburg is both.

At 6 feet 3 inches, Mecklenburg is hardly your basic redwood-tree-with-cleats defensive end. He relies on quickness, not strength. When he goes up against 6-7, 315-pound Joe Jacoby, a lot of people will want to cover their eyes.

Not Mecklenburg. "A guy carrying that much weight has trouble changing direction," he says, sunnily.

Mecklenburg has always had trouble getting football to take him seriously. He was such a smallish defensive end, the only school that would even let him on its field was little Augustana in South Dakota.

"I was a 6-foot 2-inch 190-pounder who thought he was Deacon Jones," he says. "They thought maybe they didn't have any mirrors down where I came from."

HE TRANSFERRED to Minnesota, where they didn't want him either. "I was a walk-on," he explains.

In football parlance, a walk-on is an uninvited, even unwelcome guy who doesn't realize a football squad is as hand-picked as the college of cardinals. Most walk-ons become carried-offs by the first scrimmage. But, Mecklenburg began producing his own limp-offs and got clear up to second-team All-Big Ten before he left Minnesota.

The pros were still not impressed. Guys his size who thought they could stop the Chicago Bears were not people you send cars for. The Broncos drafted Mecklenburg in the 12th round, the last one, which is football's way of telling you to find another line of work.

Mecklenburg didn't even look like a defensive end. He was white, which was all right, end being an equal opportunity position, but calling Mecklenburg white is like calling water wet. Mecklenburg is so white, he's transparent. He's an X-ray in cleats. He makes Larry Bird look swarthy. If he put on a white helmet, he'd disappear.

Even his eyes are white-on-white. "When his eyes roll up in his head and he jumps into that line, you might as well throw that play out the window," rival coach Chuck Knox said of him.

It is said the Denver Broncos are a one-man team. And so they may be. But it may not be that one with the football, old what's-his-name?

The Broncos' one-man team may be a guy so invisible that when the quarterback says, "Did you see Mecklenburg on that play?" the Redskin lineman will be moved to answer, "Which one? There's three of them, aren't there? At least."

UT ladies top SWC at gate

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas Lady Longhorns lead all Southwest Conference teams — male and female — in average home basketball attendance this year.

The No. 5-ranked Lady Longhorns have averaged 7,885 fans over seven home games, slightly ahead of Arkansas' men, who have averaged 7,868 over 12 home games in Pine Bluff, Little Rock and Fayetteville.

On its main home court, 9,000-seat Barnhill arena in Fayetteville, Arkansas has averaged 8,363 fans a game, the Austin American-Statesman said.

This weekend the Lady Longhorns travel to Texas A&M, which was the last SWC school to defeat them, and the University of Texas women's athletic department has already chartered eight buses for about 350 who are making the trip.

Judge refuses to act

Delays NFLPA injunction request

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge on Friday delayed judgment on a request by the NFL players' union for a preliminary injunction that would have granted immediate free agency to one-third of the league's 1,600 players.

U.S. District Judge David Doty agreed with the league that the contract should remain in effect, and urged both sides to continue bargaining on the free agency issue.

He said he couldn't determine if an impasse existed until the National Labor Relations Board rules on allegations by the union that the owners didn't bargain in good faith.

Both sides declared the ruling a victory. The union said there is no doubt that an impasse will ultimately be declared and its injunction granted; management said it thought the ruling would force the union back to the bargaining table.

"Whether the parties have, in fact, reached impasse as to the free agency issues is not clear," Doty wrote. "Even if the evidence were clear, however, the court could not make the impasse determination at this time."

The union had argued that since there is no basic agreement between the players and owners any player whose contract expired this year should be free to sign with any team.

The injunction would have allowed 527 of the league's 1,600 players to negotiate with any team when their contracts expire Monday. Among the players effected are 220 starters and 37 with Pro Bowl experience.

"We believe it's a great victory for the union," said Doug Allen, assistant executive director of the NFL Player Association. "We're very comfortable with this. We think management has to be very unhappy with it."

Allen said there was no obligation by the union to resume bargaining on free-agent issues unless management changes its position.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said from San Diego, site of Sunday's Super Bowl, that he hoped the judge's decision would "drive the parties back to the bargaining table, not away from it."

"... This decision clearly should encourage good faith bargaining by both sides, and I applaud that. I believe bargaining can produce a far better solution than antitrust legislation, and the judge's decision appears to support that," Rozelle said.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said, "The union was hoping to get a lot of leverage. Now, I think they've got to bargain. "The union said this was an antitrust issue; the judge said it was a labor issue," he said.

Perennial bridesmaid takes Phoenix lead

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Chip Beck, a seven-time runner-up but a non-winner in his first nine years on the PGA Tour, compiled an 8-under-par 63 and took the second round lead Friday in the $650,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"The key to my round today was that I took advantage of my opportunities. At this level, that's the name of the game," Beck said after making five of his eight birdies on putts of three feet or less.

Beck completed two trips over the TPC Course in 129, 13 shots under and two in front of runner-up Davis Love III at the halfway point of the chase for a $117,000 first prize.

It's a position with which he's familiar.

"Who knows how many times I've been there?" asked Beck, whose list of near-misses includes a second-place finish in the 1986 U.S. Open.

"I've been in the position where I really felt I was going to win. A lot of times I beat myself. That's the most disappointing thing.

"I can recall as vividly as yesterday tournaments I should have won. But I didn't have the level of skill I needed at the time.I kept getting there and kept getting knocked down because I didn't have the mechanical skills I needed.

"I have tried to assess my game and grow from it. I think I have. I am not burdened by the failures of the past. I'm moving in the right direction.

"I look forward to the challenge over the next two days. If I keep getting there, eventually I'll win," Beck said.

Love, the first-round leader, had a 68 and drifted back to second at 131.

Fred Couples shot a 65 and was at 132.

UTPB among colleges hit by suspension

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Four colleges have been suspended and declared ineligible for postseason competition for failing to comply with the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' substance abuse policy.

The NAIA identified the schools Thursday as Florida Memorial College, Sangamon State University in Illinois, University of Texas-Permian Basin and West Coast Christian College in California.

During a meeting last summer, the NAIA established a Jan. 1 deadline for all member shcools to submit a substance abuse education and evaluation plan to the association for approval.

"It made sense to approach this serious problem of substance abuse through an educational effort rather than some program to try to catch offenders," Farris said. "Testing just proves we have a problem with substance abuse, and I think we already know that. Our priority should be prevention, not detection."

Farris said the suspensions will be lifted by the NAIA when the schools comply with the policy and and file acceptable plans with the national office in Kansas City.

Stewart defends UGA from charges

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Former Georgia teammates of Clarence Kay, now with the Denver Broncos, said if Bulldogs Coach Vince Dooley had known the tight end had used drugs while in school he would have taken immediate action.

Kay, who played at Georgia from 1980-83, said Wednesday while practicing for the Super Bowl that he felt Bulldogs' coaches were aware he used "marijuana and things of that nature" while in school.

Kay underwent a rehabilitation program last season for cocaine and alcohol abuse.

"Coach Dooley would not put up with that," former running back Ronnie Stewart said Thursday. "If he had known, drastic action would have been taken. I don't know if Clarence left the university with any animosity, but for him to make a statement like that is unfair."

Dooley, who denied knowledge of Kay's drug and alcohol abuse while at Georgia, instituted a drug-testing program in 1983, one of the first of its kind in college football.

"When you have to go to urinalysis every Sunday, it's pretty hard to be doing drugs," said kicker Kevin Butler, a teammate of Kay's who now is with the Chicago Bears. "I think Clarence is trying to put the blame on other people for what he did. Drug use is a personal thing. Nobody can force you to do it."

Arn's famous charge is fading into history

HONOLULU (AP) — Arnold Palmer's famous charge seems to be fading quietly into history.

But Palmer, whose golf frustrations seem typified by his failure to win a single hole in the recent Skins Game events, could end that frustration in a this weekend.

The 58-year-old Palmer, Gary Player, 52; Chi Chi Rodriguez, 52; and Sam Snead, 75, compete in the inaugural Senior Skins Game Saturday and Sunday, a tailored-for-television event in which lots of money can be made in a very brief period.

Palmer has played in all five of the regular Skins Game competitions. He won $100,000 on a single hole by ramming in a 40-foot putt during the first year and has collected a total of $245,000 in the Skins competition.

But although he often has played well enough to tie a hole and make the purse carry over, he recently has had to watch someone else rake in the money.

"Frustrating? Darned right it's frustrating," he said. "It seems like that has happened to me quite a few times.

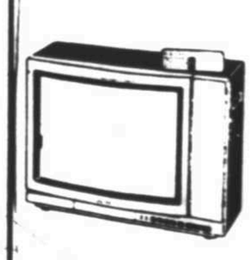

"Things can happen quickly in the Skins."

The first edition of the Skins Game for seniors, golfers 50 and older, is being held at the Turtle Bay Resort on the north shore of Oahu.

SEVEN DEATHS, SEVEN DEALS

What started as a homicide in Detroit triggered an investigation into the inequities and injustices being committed in the courts throughout the state of Michigan.

Records showed similar crimes did not receive similar punishment. And proved punishment rested more on a judge's philosophy than on the crime committed.

Within days after the publication of a story that documented this information, the Michigan Supreme Court made some changes.

Changes that wouldn't have occurred if a few reporters at a Detroit newspaper hadn't been looking for a story.

Redskins game plan: Keep Elway, Amigos on bench

By DAVID GINSBURG

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Washington Redskins figure John Elway and the Three Amigos can't hurt them while they are watching the Super Bowl from the sideline.

Elway's ability to get Denver into the end zone is a given. Washington's battle plan is to keep such occurences to a minimum.

"Our offense has to keep their offense off the field. It's that simple," said Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs. "The way we see it, if he doesn't have the ball they can't score."

Ball control. Convert third downs. Field position. The best defense is often a good offense.

"If they're able to control the ball, we'll have a long day," said Denver defensive end Karl Mecklenburg.

Since Washington's offensive line is far bigger than Denver's defensive front, the Redskins will likely depend on their "Hogs" to try to bully their way forward.

"I figure that the best way to try to beat us is to come right at us, given the size difference in the lines," said Broncos safety Tony Lilly. "You know, rear your ears back and charge."

Washington hopes its line will be able to open holes for power runners George Rogers and Timmy Smith. Of the last 16 Super Bowls, 14 were won by the team with the most rushing yardage.

Washington may not be able to win if quarterback Doug Williams has another 9-for-26 game, as he did in the NFC title game against the Minnesota Vikings. But this time the Redskins will have wide receiver Art Monk, who missed six weeks with a knee injury.

When the teams last met in December 1986, Monk caught six passes for 129 yards and touchdown. Monk, Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders gives Washington a trio of receivers that is as potentially dangerous as their reknowned counterparts.

"Art adds another dimension to our passing game," said offensive tackle Mark May. "He has the size that our other wide receivers don't have. If all three of our guys are on, nobody can stop them."

When Elway does get his hands on the ball, Washington will likely gamble in an effort to keep him from scrambling out of the passing pocket. The Redskins are expected to blitz often, putting added pressure on their defense to contain Denver receivers Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson and Ricky Nattiel.

"We might not be able to stop them all the time," said cornerback Barry Wilburn. "A big play or two might get in there, but we have to pretty much control them and not let them get too many of them."

Said Gibbs: "There's going to be some big plays in there. We hope to get most of them."

Williams said the key to winning the game is scoring more points than Denver. He was making a joke, but the game could be a battle of offenses.

The Broncos scored 72 points in its two playoff victories, while Washington did not score less than 20 points in any game, excluding those played by replacement players.

As in most games, the outcome should be decided on the line of scrimmage. The Redskins are larger on both sides of the line, a fact that has not gone unnoticed by Denver Coach Dan Reeves.

"We have to try to use our size and quickness to offset their size and strength," Reeves said.

Said Redskins defensive end Dexter Manley: "If we don't do the job up front, there's no question that Denver will be the world champions. It's in the trenches where the game is won or lost."

Sometimes, after all the hours of planning, the game is decided by something that had nothing to do with the game plan. Denver narrowly avoided going in overtime in the AFC title game when Jeremiah Castille stripped the ball from Cleveland's Earnest Byner with 65 seconds left.

"You never know in a game like this," Gibbs said. "It may not even come down to Elway or Williams. The key could be a guy who's in there for only five plays, or one play."

As a security measure, many of Washington's offensive drills this week were run with 13 players in order to confuse anyone who might be spying. Center Jeff Bostic sort of liked the idea, and said it was one sure way to assure a victory.

Elway must have time to throw

By JOHN MOSSMAN

SAN DIEGO (AP) — To win Super Bowl XXII and thus avoid the stigma of becoming the AFC version of the Minnesota Vikings, the Denver Broncos have to do two things on Sunday: Give John Elway time to throw and stop the Washington running game.

And those two things really boil down to one: Keep the ball in Elway's hands.

"Our offense is the key to winning this game," said Broncos defensive coordinator Joe Collier. "As a defense, our job is to get them back on the field as fast as we can."

Adding the shotgun to their conventional arsenal, the Broncos had more offensive plays this season than any other NFL team — 1,040. In two playoff games, the Broncos scored 72 points, with Elway throwing for five touchdowns and running for a sixth.

WHEN Elway is on the field, good things happen to the Broncos. For him to stay out there, the Denver offensive line must give him at least a semblance of protection. Elway will buy time with his scrambling and his Houdini-like knack for escaping the certain sack.

But if the Washington defense, particularly ends Dexter Manley and Charles Mann, are constantly in his face and prevent him from roaming outside, Elway will be less effective.

"That's the game," said Broncos offensive line coach Alex Gibbs. "If we can control them (Manley and Mann), then we've got a good chance. If we don't, we're going to get beat."

DENVER does not lack for offensive weapons. When Elway isn't throwing to The Three Amigos — deep threats Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson and Ricky Nattiel — he will go to tight ends Clarence Kay and Orson Mobley. Tight ends, who have hurt the Redskins this year, could be the difference. The Broncos also can line Steve Sewell up in different positions and use him like an extra tight end or wide receiver.

Running backs Sammy Winder, Gene Lang and Sewell tend not to have flashy numbers, but they are solid and versatile.

When Washington is on offense, Denver must prevent the Redskins from controlling the ball on the ground.

"If the Redskins are able to handle us with their running game — to string together a bunch of seven and eight-minute drives — it's going to be an uncomfortable afternoon for us," Coach Dan Reeves said.

WASHINGTON has the tools to pound Denver on the ground all day. George Rogers, Kelvin Bryant and Timmy Smith will operate behind a huge offensive line that outweighs Denver's defensive line by an average of 24 pounds a man.

Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs preaches a balanced offense, but his is a team that clearly prefers to run the ball.

"If they have 60 offensive plays, they'd like to run it 45 times and throw only 15," Collier said. "If they're able to run it that much, it would mean they're controlling it and throwing when they want to, which would make them even tougher to defense."

Denver did not have a good statistical rating in run defense during the regular season, ranking 20th in the 28-team league by allowing 134.5 yards per game. On a positive note, however, the Broncos did not allow a 100-yard rusher all season.

To stop the run, the Bronco linebackers, especially Karl Mecklenburg and Ricky Hunley, must have standout games.

"We don't want to be the Minnesota Vikings of the AFC," Collier said, referring to Minnesota's 0-4 Super Bowl record and Denver's 0-2 mark. "They came in here four times and lost, and we know that can be a terrible feeling."

SUPER——

Gibbs' main concern is the tender ankle of George Rogers, his starting running back. "But I expect that he'll be able to start," Gibbs said of Rogers. He usually gives way in the second quarter anyway to rookie Timmy Smith.

Gibbs, whose team will change hotels Saturday in accordance with its regular season routine, will spend the next two days with his assistant coaches, scripting the offensive plays for the first part of the game.

DANGEROUS EXPLOSIVES!

The little mining town was intent on building a church building. Good lumber was hard to come by, so they used whatever scrap lumber they could find.

Each month the mining company shipped in supplies, usually crated in scrap lumber. This they used for many parts of the building.

When they finally finished their little church, they noticed that over the entry door on a piece of lumber from a box of dynamite were the stenciled words: Dangerous Explosives.

Most appropriate! That's what church is. That's the power it possesses. It's interesting to note that the New Testament word for "power" comes from the Greek word "dunamis" — the same word from which we get our English word "dynamite."

Worship this Sunday. Experience the power — the explosive power — that can lift you into the orbit of God's will for your life.

Kelview Heights Baptist hosting Walk Thru the Bible

Kelview Baptist Heights Church is hosting the well-known "Walk Thru the Bible Seminar" from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 6.

Auxier

The seminar will be taught by John Auxier. Born in Washington, D.C., Auxier has also called North Dakota, Illinois, Arizona, New Jersey and Maryland home. After making a personal commitment of his life to Christ at a Young Life Camp in Colorado, Auxier continued his education at the University of North Dakota, Princeton Theological Seminary and Trinity Evangelical Divinity School.

"They will no longer need read the life of Christ as a number of unrelated and isolated activities, nor will they be able to read Acts without realizing there is a chapter still to be written — theirs," he says. "And no longer will they fumble to find topics in the epistles because they will have the key concepts of the epistles locked in their memory system. Because of this, according to Walk Thru officials, hundreds of New testament alumni have exclaimed, 'I can't believe what I didn't know about the New Testament.'"

The seminar is for ages junior high through adult. For more information or to register call the church, 682-3842. The registration fee includes a notebook.

LIFESCOPE

Peace On Earth, Goodwill Toward Men! Lifescope Says, "If You Have None You'd Better Check Your Life Style!"

There is no peace, says the Lord, for the wicked. Peace! peace! to those afar and to those near, says the Lord; and I will heal them. But the wicked are like the troubled sea; it cannot rest and its waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, says my God, for the wicked.

The way of peace they have not known, and there is no justice in their ways; they have made themselves crooked paths; whoever takes that way shall not know peace.

The stork knows the time of her migration, as does the turtledove, and the crane, and the swallow. They all return at God's appointed time each year; but not My people! They don't accept the laws of God. The wise men are put to shame, they are dumbfounded and trapped; since they have spurned the word of the Lord, what kind of wisdom is there in them? They dress the wound of My people as though it were not serious. "Peace, peace," they say, when there is no peace.

Peter said, "I most certainly understand now that God is not one to show partiality, but in every nation the man who fears Him and does what is right, is welcome to Him."

Therefore having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom also we have obtained our introduction by faith into this grace in which we stand; and we exult in hope of the glory of God. The mind of sinful man is death, but the mind controlled by the Spirit is life and peace, because the sinful mind is hostile to God. It does not submit to God's law, nor can it do so. Those controlled by the sinful nature cannot please God. You, however, are controlled not by the sinful nature but by the Spirit, if the Spirit of God lives in you!

Midland group attends gathering in Abilene

The principal address of the assembly was delivered by E.R. Brandt, a traveling representative of the Watchtower Society serving the San Antonio area. His topic was "Jehovah's Organization Is On the Move." He cited examples of the growth of Jehovah's Witnesses, such as in Japan, where congregations have grown from nine in 1949 to 122,000 today, and in Italy, from 100 in 1945 to 150,000 now.

White House still backs Meese despite payoff memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House on Friday continued to publicly support Attorney General Edwin Meese III, despite the disclosure that he was sent a memo citing a plan to pay off a top Israeli official in connection with a proposed $1 billion Iraqi oil pipeline project.

Independent counsel James C. McKay, who is investigating Meese, is focusing on the memo, which sources familiar with McKay's investigation say was written in 1985 by longtime Meese friend E. Robert Wallach.

In response to reporters' questions, McKay said that "we have been investigating the matter for some period of time. We are continuing to investigate it and we hope to complete it in a reasonable period of time."

The Los Angeles Times, which disclosed the existence of the memo in Friday editions, said some sources identified Shimon Peres, Israel's prime minister in 1985 and now the foreign minister, as the official targeted for the bribe plan.

Yossi Gal, a spokesman for the Israeli Embassy in Washington, called the memo "a wild fantasy that is not even worthy of comment."

Meese's attorneys issued a statement Friday that appeared to reject the idea that Peres was the target of a payoff plan.

"It is irresponsible to publish these erroneous allegations when they involve the delicate subject of foreign relations and impugn the integrity of respected foreign leaders," the statement said. Meese's lawyers weren't immediately available for elaboration.

The statement said information in the Los Angeles Times story is "false in important respects," but that the subjects of the allegations cannot respond because of McKay's probe and "because relevant information is classified."

Wallach, an attorney who has known Meese since the two attended law school at the University of California, Berkeley, is under indictment in the Wedtech scandal. McKay has been looking into Meese's ties to scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., a Bronx, N.Y., defense contractor, for nearly nine months.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Reagan "has full confidence in Ed Meese." Fitzwater said Meese has never offered to step aside because of McKay's investigation.

Meese's lawyers denied that the attorney general had done anything wrong and declined to discuss whether Meese had read the memo when it was sent to him. They refused even to confirm the memo's existence.

Friday morning, Meese avoided reporters who were waiting to question him about the memo, leaving the Justice Department building for a meeting by a different entrance than he ordinarily uses.

Because Israel and Iraq are longtime enemies, Wallach and others involved in the project allegedly sought to bribe a top-ranking Israeli official both as a means of defusing Israel's opposition to the proposal and of keeping the Israelis from launching a military attack against the pipeline, said sources familiar with McKay's probe who refused to be identified.

The proposed 540-mile pipeline, which was never built, was to run close to the Israeli border and carry oil to Jordan's Red Sea port of Aqaba.

Wallach was representing Bruce Rappaport, a wealthy Swiss oilman, in the project. Rappaport was a partner with the Bechtel Group, the San Francisco construction company bidding to build the pipeline.

Sources have said Wallach used his ties to Meese in 1985 to obtain a meeting with then-White House national security adviser Robert McFarlane about the pipeline.

"Since the...pipeline project was principally a subject involving foreign relations, Attorney General Meese had very limited involvement in discussions concerning it," Nathan Lewin, one of Meese's attorneys, said Friday.

Meese "acted correctly and with full and proper execution of his duties in this regard," Lewin said. "No actual or potential violation of law was brought to Mr. Meese's attention during his limited participation in discussions regarding the project."

Lewin said Meese had told the independent counsel everything he knows about the project and has answered all questions on the subject.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act bars U.S. citizens from bribing foreign officials. It specifies that the attorney general may take file a civil suit to stop a violation whenever it appears that the law is about to be broken by an individual or a company.

Wallach's attorney, George G. Walker, declined to comment.

Wallach, who was Meese's lawyer during a 1984 probe of Meese's finances, was indicted by a federal grand jury in December on racketeering charges involving Wedtech.

He and two associates, including Meese's former financial adviser, W. Franklyn Chinn, were accused of illegally siphoning hundreds of thousands of dollars from Wedtech as part of a plan to influence federal officials, including Meese, to assist the company.

Abandoned girl to be fitted with artificial legs

CHICAGO (AP) — A 9-year-old girl armed with bags of toys from well-wishers entered a clinic Friday to receive artificial legs replacing those amputated because of frostbite she suffered in a locked, abandoned house.

A judge in neighboring Indiana, where Darlwin Carlisle was found, said Friday he will rule next week on a request to release the girl's mother, charged with felony child neglect, without cash bond.

The girl will be fitted with artificial legs at La Rabida Children's Hospital and could learn to balance herself in a couple of weeks, doctors said.

"She seems to be in good spirits, but she's still got a long road to go," said Dr. Paula Jaudes, chief of medicine at the rehabilitation hospital, shortly after Darlwin's arrival from Wyler Children's Hospital.

The girl's daily routine will include attending a special public school at the hospital and hour-long sessions with a psychologist, depending on her needs, Ms. Jaudes said.

La Rabida's medical director, Dr. Victoria Dvonch, said Darlwin was asked where she would like to be, "thought for a moment and said, 'If I'm going to get my legs there, I'm going to La Rabida.'"

Meanwhile, a 7-month-old baby found lying on frozen rags in an abandoned apartment building after at least two days was put Thursday in the temporary custody of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

The infant's mother, 18-year-old Carolina Starns, said she had felt besieged by pressures at her home.

"The walls were closing in, like a panic," Ms. Starns, who was charged with felony child abandonment, said after the baby, Dominique Starns, was found.

The frostbitten infant was in fair condition Friday at Mount Sinai Hospital Medical Center, said a nursing supervisor.

Darlwin Carlisle left Wyler Children's Hospital on Friday with three bags of toys sent from well-wishers, said Wyler spokeswoman Gretchen Flock.

The spunky little girl wore a green and black coat with a matching hat and mittens that also were donated.

"She seemed very happy this morning. There were several people either employees or visitors in the hospital who waved to her," Ms. Flock said. "One woman said, 'God bless you, Darlwin.' She gave a big smile and said, 'Thank you.'"

It may take three months for Darlwin to adjust to walking with protheses that will allow her to "run, jump rope and be a very active little girl," Ms. Flock said.

Hundreds of packages and letters have poured in to the hospital since Darlwin was admitted with severe frostbite two weeks ago.

She was found in a cold, filthy Gary, Ind., apartment on Jan. 17. Her legs were amputated below the knee four days later.

A construction worker found Darlwin while nailing plywood over an attic window of the empty brick house. Jeff Griffin said he heard a child's voice say, "Please don't board me up."

Griffin removed a six-foot refrigerator from the top of the stairway and kicked open a padlocked door to rescue the child.

Lake County Criminal Court Judge Richard Maroc said Friday he will consider a request to release Darlwin's mother, Darlwin Britt, on her own recognizance. She remains in the Lake County Jail, unable to post a $50,000 bond.

Lake County Deputy Prosecutor Karen Coulis said the state will vigorously oppose any reduction in bond.

Ms. Britt was charged Jan. 20 with neglect of a dependent, a felony which carries a maximum 20-year prison term. On Jan. 22, two more neglect charges were filed against her. She could receive a maximum 60-year sentence if convicted.

Mubarak: West Bank settlementceases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said Friday that Israeli officials have told him Israel has ceased all new settlement activity on the West Bank.

Winding up three days of talks here, Mubarak spoke on PBS' "MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour" about the settlement of Israeli Jews on the West Bank where about 96 percent of the inhabitants are Palestinian Arabs.

"Settlement activity is being ceased now," Mubarak said. "There is no activity now as far as I heard from some Israeli officials."

Besides, Mubarak said, Reagan administration officials informed him "this could be managed, this could be stopped."

The Egyptian leader did not identify which Israeli officials had spoken to him about the settlements.

However, Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said in a separate interview that he was "unaware of any plans" for new settlements in the coming months. "This is a decision we have taken ourselves," Rabin said on the TV program.

An end to further Jewish settlement of the West Bank and Gaza is one of the proposals Mubarak brought to President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

He also called for a six-month cooling-off period in the territories and an international peace conference.

U.S. officials readily welcomed the cooling-off idea. As for a peace conference, Mubarak said "they are now keen on trying to put any kind, some kind of a proposal to push the peace process."

Earlier, Shultz said the United States was prepared to "pursue any avenue" — including an international peace conference — to bring about direct peace negotiations between Arabs and Israelis.

In a luncheon toast to visiting Mubarak, Shultz said he is open to new approaches for achieving a Middle East peace settlement, suggesting that old formulas are no longer workable.

"I believe we've come to a point where illusions about the past and old approaches to resolving new problems need to be tested against new realities," Shultz told the State Department luncheon.

"We must find a way to take what's best from past experience and what's imaginative from the present and create a new blend of approaches to pursuing peace in the Middle East."

But he said that good ideas will be useless unless they are transformed into concrete steps that will bring a better life for Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, ensure Israel's security and well-being and point the way to a final settlement between the Arabs and Israel.

"We remain convinced that direct face-to-face negotiation is the best way to achieve results, and we will pursue any avenue to get to that point, including an international conference," Shultz said.

Mubarak, who was winding up his three-day visit to Washington Friday, made no substantive comments in his remarks at the luncheon. In his earlier statements, Mubarak reaffirmed his call for an international peace conference as part of a multifaceted plan for easing tensions in the region.

Before the luncheon, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States will explore the possibility of finding practical solutions to violence in the Israel-held West Bank and Gaza Strip.

On economic issues, Mubarak met Friday with Alan Woods, the director of the U.S. aid program. This year, the United States is providing Egypt with more than $2.2 billion in military and economic assistance. None of it has to be repaid.

But Egypt owes $4.8 billion for past military aid. The interest rate has been lowered, but Mubarak is seeking additional relief.

FDA giving top priority to drugs to fight AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is putting a top priority on development of drugs to combat AIDS, even if it means delaying the processing of applications for other types of pharmaceuticals, the FDA commissioner said Friday.

Commissioner Frank Young said the agency was putting "the highest possible priority" on clearing candidate drugs for treating acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but he said the war on the fatal disease will be a long and difficult one.

"We're leaving no stone unturned and using whatever resources we need" to help pharmaceutical companies develop drugs that can battle AIDS and the diseases that often go with AIDS, Young said.

He said the concentration on AIDS has caused a backlog in processing applications for some other types of drugs, but this was unavoidable.

"We feel it's important that people have access to drugs as soon as possible," he said. "We view the FDA as a munitions factory turning out safe and effective bullets as soon as possible in this war on AIDS."

Young said the FDA granted approval for azidothymidine, the first drug developed for specific treatment of AIDS, within 107 days of application, an agency record. There now are 164 candidate drugs in clinical trials for the treatment or diagnosis of AIDS, or for the treatment of AIDS-related disease complexes, he said.

Of these candidate drugs, 49 are immunity modulators that would tend to dull the effect of AIDS on the immune system. Forty-one of the drugs are proposed as anti-viral agents, 36 for diagnostic tests and four for treatment of a cancer often caused by AIDS. Only four of the drugs are candidates for AIDS vaccine studies, he said.

Dr. Peter Fischinger, the Public Health Service AIDS coordinator, said vaccines against AIDS will be extremely difficult to develop, but there is a hope for such a preventative because of recent advances in microbiology.

"The base of knowledge is so intensive we would like to think in an optimistic way," he said. "But this (AIDS) is about as tough and a difficult agent as we have seen."

AIDS is an incurable disease that usually is spread through sexual contact, sharing of intravenous drug needles or from use of infected blood products. It is caused by HIV, or human immuno virus. The disease attacks the immune system and destroy's the body's ability to fight infection. As a result, death often results from opportunistic infections.

According to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, as of Monday there have been 51,916 patients in the United States diagnosed has having AIDS since 1981, and 28,965 of them have died.

Authorities know who shot officer in stand off with clan

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Prosecutors met Friday to prepare evidence for a grand jury on a lengthy standoff with a polygamist clan, and authorities said they know who killed a state officer during the bloody climax of the confrontation.

The Legislature on Friday unanimously passed a resolution honoring the slain officer "for his courage, his dedication and his great sacrifice," and observed a moment of silence.

Even the children in the clan, whose leader believed his father-in-law would be resurrected during the 13-day siege, remained defiant in surrender, said FBI agent Cal Clegg.

"The kids were using...very unreligious epithets. It surprised us, too. They're not the family they've been portrayed to be," Clegg said.

He said authorities who pored over every inch of the rural log house after the confrontation ended Thursday could not believe the mess where nine children and six adults had been living.

U.S. Attorney Brent Ward met Friday with federal, state and local authorities to prepare evidence to present to a federal grand jury next week and for possible state charges in the death of the officer.

The standoff began Jan. 16 after a Mormon chapel was bombed in Marion, nestled in the mountains 50 miles east of Salt Lake City, and police surrounded the clan's nearby compound.

Addam Swapp, charged with the bombing, has said that act was revenge against the Mormon Church and the state for the 1979 slaying by police of polygamist John Singer. Swapp claimed a violent confrontation would bring Singer's resurrection.

Early Thursday, the FBI tried to isolate and capture Swapp, who had left the main house to go to a goat pen. But a police dog hesitated in its attack and its handler, state Department of Corrections Lt. Fred House, 35, was killed by a bullet fired from the compound's main log home, authorities said.

Investigators are certain they know who shot House, said Tom Wittman, of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. He declined to reveal an identity, but ruled out the clan's women — matriarch Vickie Singer, the slain Singer's wife, and their two daughters married to Swapp.

Also in the house at the time were Mrs. Singer's wheelchair-bound son, John Timothy Singer, 21, and the children, including two Singer sons ages 17 and 15. Outside the house with Swapp was his brother, Jonathan, 21.

An FBI source said Friday that a member of the agency's SWAT team had his rifle trained on the person sitting at a window who shot House, but the agent didn't fire because of a standing order not to shoot into the house for fear of hurting children.

"Our SWAT team member had the crosshairs of his scope right on the individual in the house before and after the officer was shot, and he didn't pull the trigger," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Swapp, 27, shot in the forearm and chest, was in serious but stable condition Friday at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center.

"He's a nice person to be around. They (nurses) feel comfortable around him. He's not surly, mean, or antagonistic like some criminals who come to the hospital are," said hospital spokesman John Dwan.

He said the prognosis for recovery was good.

The children were released to the care of Swapp's parents, Ramon and Harriet Swapp, after a closed juvenile court hearing Thursday. Six of the children are from Swapp's polygamous marriages to Heidi and Charlotte Singer, and three are Vickie Singer's.

"They're doing very well this morning," Mrs. Swapp said by telephone Friday, trying to make herself heard over the children's din in her home in the small central Utah town of Fairview. "But we don't want to make a statement yet; maybe later, but not now."

Swapp and Mrs. Singer are charged with malicious damage with an explosive device, use of a destructive device, possession of an unregistered destructive device and aiding and abetting in armed assaults on federal agents. Mrs. Singer pleaded innocent Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Ronald Boyce.

Jonathan Swapp; Charlotte Swapp, 19; Heidi Swapp, 23; and John Timothy Singer were charged with one count each of accessory after the fact. They entered no pleas. They and Mrs. Singer were being held without bail pending a Monday detention hearing.

Woman rewards dogs who kept her warm while she was stranded

WAURIKA, Okla. (AP) — It was a proper reunion when Mary Gladys Baker came home from the hospital this week to see the heroes who had kept her warm as she found herself stranded outside for 15 hours in near-freezing weather earlier this month.

Little Bit and Scout, the two Labrador retrievers who protected the 84-year-old woman, were there with tails wagging.

And Mrs. Baker passed out Oreos and Vanilla Wafers.

"I give them cookies every night," said Mrs. Baker, who returned from the hospital in Wichita Falls, Texas, on Wednesday.

She broke her hip when she fell on the patio of her home on Jan. 11. She expects to be walking without the aid of a walker in four to six weeks.

Mrs. Baker said the dogs kept her warm by lying next to her. She said Scout also brought her a quilt and she pulled it over her head and body.

Of the dogs, she said, "I was glad to see them and they were glad to see me. They have their cookies for dessert each night. Scout won't eat chocolate cookies, but Little Bit will eat anything he can get."

She said the cookies weren't the secret to her dogs' heroic rescue, though.

"I love 'em," she said. "That's all. And they love me."

Bus carrying 35 students overturns

SHERRODSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A school bus carrying 35 high school students on a field trip slid off a highway and overturned Friday, the State Highway Patrol said. Nine students were hospitalized, one in critical condition.

The accident occurred about 8:30 a.m. on Ohio 39, one mile west of this eastern Ohio community, state Highway Patrol Trooper Tom Yurich.

The bus slid to the right side of the road and the driver, trying to right the vehicle, oversteered and the bus went off the left side of the road, where it struck a tree and overturned, Yurich said.

Role of forensic science questioned

New York Times News Service

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — As laboratory analysis plays an increasingly important role in law enforcement, there is growing concern about the professionalism and impartiality of the laboratory scientists whose testimony in court can often mean conviction or acquittal.

It is an issue being played out across the nation, highlighted by a controversy that has simmered here over the last few months. And it seems certain to grow as new forensic technologies, like DNA typing that can potentially identify a suspect's unique genetic coding, become a part of the judicial system.

To critics, the work of the 3,500 or so forensic scientists in police crime labs is plagued by uneven training, a lack of certification and professional standards and questionable objectivity. The scientists, who usually have bachelor's degrees and training at professional institutes like those operated by the FBI, analyze specimens like hair, clothing fibers, drugs, blood or semen in criminal investigations.

"There is gathering momentum, almost a tidal wave of concern, over the general question of professional training, ethics, conflict of interest, that whole ball of wax," said Dr. James E. Starrs, a professor of law and forensic science at George Washington University. "Most often what you find is that forensic testimony is much too new and incomprehensible for the legal community. The courts will rubber-stamp what the experts say."

Law-enforcement officials say the majority of forensic scientists are competent, impartial professionals, whose work is beyond reproach. Even critics agree the field has enormous potential for law enforcement in helping to determine guilt or innocence. But they say that, given the influence crime lab experts can have in the courtroom, the professional standards in the field need to be improved.

The controversy here has centered on Joyce Gilchrist, a forensic chemist with the Oklahoma City Police Department. Critics, including local defense attorneys and other forensic scientists, say she has crossed the line from science to advocacy in her testimony in a number of criminal trials.

A Kansas City forensic chemist filed a complaint with the regional professional association saying she persisted in "rendering scientific opinions from the witness stand which in effect positively identify the defendant based on the slightest bit of circumstantial evidence."

Ms. Gilchrist herself would not discuss the complaint, noting that some of the cases are under appeal. District Attorney Robert Macy and her supervisor, Capt. Harold Campbell of the Police Department, say they stand behind her work and view the complaints as political sniping from defense attorneys.

The Southwestern Association of Forensic Scientists, which reviewed the complaint against Gilchrist, cited the importance of distinguishing "personal opinion from opinions based upon facts derived from scientific evaluation." It took no action against her and said that, while she may have violated the letter of the group's code of ethics, "This was not a violation of the spirit of our Code and was made without malice or intent."

Even some of her critics say the real issue is not Gilchrist but the potential for abuse within the forensic science field. Skeptics here do not have to look too far to find abuses far more serious than those alleged against Gilchrist.

Dr. Delbert Lacefield, the former supervisor of the forensic toxicology at a research laboratory operated by the Federal Aviation Administration here, pleaded guilty in Federal District Court this year to having falsified drug test results on personnel involved in train crashes. He admitted he never did some of the work for which he provided results.

Studies indicate the evidence can be extremely convincing for a jury, and most experts agree that forensic science is likely to become increasingly important as new technologies evolve. It is estimated that about half the nation's 320 crime laboratories were established between 1968 and 1978. Studies show forensic evidence is used in from one-quarter to one-third of felony cases and virtually all murder cases.

A recent study conducted for the National Institute of Justice found that the police were three times as likely to clear a case when forensic science is involved. Prosecutors are less likely to enter into plea bargains if they have access to strong forensic evidence, and sentences tend to be more severe when forensic evidence is presented at trials. The study also said jurors ranked forensic experts as the most persuasive witnesses.

To law-enforcement officers and prosecutors, advances in forensic science have enormous potential by offering increasingly concrete physical evidence. Of particular interest is DNA typing, which so far has been used largely in paternity cases, but could add an unprecedented dimension of precision in using blood or semen to identify a suspect's unique genetic coding.

"The idea of the system is to convict the guilty and acquit the innocent," Macy said. "If DNA can almost give a blood fingerprint, then that's a tremendous step forward in identifying the guilty and exculpating the innocent."

But defense lawyers and some professionals in the field say the expertise of forensic scientists is very much in question. There are no national accreditation requirements, academic degree programs, or recognized standards.

"You know who the first expert witness was?" said Robert A. Ravitz, who heads the county public defender's office here. "It was a doctor in the 1600s who testified a woman had been bewitched and was guilty of witchcraft. As a result, she was sentenced to death and executed.

Increase in cremations attributed to desire for 'simpler' funerals

Hearst News Service

The yearning for simplicity, those in the funeral business agree, is a primary reason why cremation has become an increasingly popular way of dealing with human remains in this country.

According to the Cremationist Association of North America, slightly more than 13 percent of the nearly 2.1 million people who died in the United States in 1986 were cremated. That's more than double the number of cremations a decade earlier.

Hawaii leads the nation in cremations at 43.5 percent, says the association, followed by Nevada at 40.1 percent. California is third with 35.1 percent.

A study conducted last year by the University of Notre Dame shows that those who choose cremation are generally professional people, both well-educated and well-paid. The study also reveals that pro-cremationists typically live in urban areas and are less religious than those who choose burial.

"There was a time in the ancient days, of course, when the whole practice of being cremated was reserved for the very wealthy," says Kim Launter, a sociologist at the New School for Social Research in New York. "Now, it's pretty much found its way into the mainstream."

Nonetheless, Ronald Hast, past president of the Los Angeles County Funeral Directors Association, says that people living in smaller cities still cling to the notion of a traditional burial. In such places "you have people whose parents and grandparents lived there," Hast says. "It's almost an obligation to have a (family burial) plot."

Hast says blacks, Hispanics and Jews are most disinclined to be cremated – with their percentages ranging around 10 to 12 percent.

It's not mere economics that has propelled cremation as a burgeoning trend in the funeral business, Hast stresses.

"Simplicity is what's big now. And it's because society is no longer as fearful about death as it once was," says Hast.

"Every year, the number of cremations in the country goes up about 1 to 1.5 percent," says Mary Kelting, director of Vital Statistics Analyses, a clearinghouse for statistics on cremation.

The average cost of a no-frills cremation (without memorial service) costs between $300 to $500. The average funeral service and burial can cost upwards of $3,000, Hast explains.

"Funerals are like wedding ceremonies," Hast adds. "You can go to a justice of the peace and be done with it or you can have an elaborate reception."

Whatever the case, some people still suffer pangs of guilt when they forgo the more expensive funeral for cremation. As Hast puts it, "A lot of people need the funeral to really say a proper goodbye to the deceased. For them, cremation, more inexpensive as it may be, does not fulfill that need."

Andrew Bliss, a Los Angeles county medical information officer, says it takes about 3½ hours to cremate a 200-pound corpse, which yields about 5½ pounds of ash.

Pope tells Ortega democracy vital in any settlement

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II coolly welcomed Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on Friday and in a private talk indicated democracy was imperative in any settlement of Central American conflicts.

"Buenos dias," the pope said as he greeted the leftist government leader with a stiff smile, shook hands, turned abruptly and strode into his library, leaving Ortega to follow. Ortega came to the audience he had requested wearing a dark suit and tie.

After they emerged from the 30-minute meeting, the pope wished "peace for all Nicaraguans," and Ortega followed with "I believe we must make peace."

Ortega told a news conference the talks were "constructive and frank."

The two men spoke in Spanish in private without interpreters.

A communique issued after the meeting said the pope and Ortega discussed the Central American peace plan that won its chief architect, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias the Nobel Peace Prize last year. It covers El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras as well as Nicaragua and calls for cease-fires and the end of aid to rebels as well as amnesties and democratic reforms.

Face-to-face cease-fire talks between representatives of Nicaragua's Sandinista government and U.S.-funded Contra rebels began in Costa Rica on Thursday.

Church-state relations in Nicaragua have been tense since Ortega's regime came to power in 1979. The Sandinistas have expelled priests and closed down the radio station that broadcast the Sunday homilies of a chief Ortega critic, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo.

To comply with a regional peace plan under discussion, Ortega allowed the radio station to reopen and several priests to come back, including the cardinal's spokesman.

A Vatican communique issued after the meeting said Ortega "revealed the prospectives which are being developed according to the proposals of the Arias plan for peace in the region and has called on the Holy See to encourage this process."

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro declined to say if Ortega asked the pope to put pressure on Washington to stop aid to the Contra forces.

The pope told Ortega he hoped the Central American peace plan "might find an effective application in all its points, without overlooking any element, and in particular the right of the populations to live in a political regime according to the principles of a true democracy," the communique said.

"In this regard the encouragement of the Holy See and of all the church can not be lacking, as the role of mediation which Cardinal Obando y Bravo and other pastors have accepted to play demonstrates," the pope was quoted by the communique as telling Ortega.

Obando y Bravo has served as a mediator between the government and the Contras.

The greeting the pope gave Ortega was in contrast to some of the warmer welcomes the pope has accorded special visitors, such as the embrace he gave in June to President Reagan, with whom he walked arm-in-arm.

When Ortega and John Paul last met, in March 1983, it was the Nicaraguan who greeted the pope. The revolutionary leader turned that occasion, the welcoming speech during the pope's Central American tour, into a 15-minute attack on U.S. "imperialism."

Ortega rebuffed questions by reporters about whether they discussed church-state relations and the issue of three priests serving in his government, which the pope contends violates church law, saying he went to the Vatican to talk about peace in Central America.

One of those priests, Miguel D'Escoto, is Nicaragua's foreign minister and is traveling with Ortega. He did not attend the papal audience and declined at the news conference to say why.

La Stampa, an Italian newspaper, reported Thursday that Ortega planned to tell the pope the priests would resign their government posts. The newspaper cited unidentified Nicaraguan diplomatic sources.

Ortega also met Friday with Premier Giovanni Goria. The government head expressed Italy's willingness to take part in verifying compliance with the Central American peace plan provided such a process was agreed upon by all the parties involved, according to Goria's office.

Police uncover assassination school

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Police and army troops looking for the killers of Colombia's attorney general stumbled onto an assassination school run by drug traffickers and discovered plans to kidnap other government leaders, an army source said Friday.

Police in Medellin also arrested two men in the murder of the attorney general, Carlos Hoyos, the government said.

In raids on known drug locations, security forces found weapons caches, including anti-tank rocket launchers, clandestine prisons to house government officials and plans to train a small private army.

Hoyos was kidnapped in a submachine gun attack near Medellin on Monday and was murdered later the same day.

Drug traffickers said they executed Hoyos because he wanted to extradite Colombians to the United States to face drug charges. After his death, they announced a war on all those supporting extradition.

The police and army found the assassination school in one of more than 100 raids on drug traffickers' houses and farms, an army colonel, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press.

WORLD

Col. Eduardo Arevalo of the Defense Ministry's public affairs office said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

The source said written instructions from suspected drug trafficker Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha were found at the assassination school.

There were dossiers on Justice Minister Enrique Low Mutra; the president of the house of representatives, Cesar Perez Garcia; and Medellin Mayor William Jaramillo. The aliases of gang members assigned to abduct them were also included.

The weapons found in another Medellin raid included 40 assault rifles, infrared telescopes for nighttime snipers and two U.S.-made rocket launchers designed to blast through bullet-proof vehicles popular with government officials here.

In a third raid, according to the national news agency Colprensa, police found plans to train a private army of 300 men in the Andes mountains.

The two men arrested Thursday in the attorney general's murder were being detained in Medellin for a preliminary hearing, said the minister of government, Cesar Gaviria Trujillo, in a broadcast interview with the Colombian radio network RCN.

The two are brothers, Alejandro Duque, 19, and Ernesto Duque, 21, the Medellin police said in a statement. The date for the hearing has not been set.

Police arrested them at a billiards hall after they received a tip, police Maj. Orlando Parra said in an interview with the Medellin radio station Todelar.

Witnesses to the kidnapping picked the two men out of a lineup, Parra said.

Hoyos' body was found in a wooded area about nine hours after he was kidnapped. He was handcuffed, blindfolded and shot 12 times.

Hoyos had called for renewing extradition of Colombians to the United States after the Colombian supreme court struck down the 1979 U.S.-Colombia extradition treaty.

Colombia and the United States are now dicussing how to go about resumption of extraditions, a diplomatic source with the U.S. Embassy said Tuesday.

Before his death, Hoyos, 45, ordered an inquiry into the sudden release from prison of reputed cocaine baron Jorge Luis Ochoa Vasquez in December.

The investigation resulted in the firing of two judges and four government officials for their role in the Ochoa's release.

The United States has been trying to extradite Ochoa, believed to be the second-in-command of Medellin, the most powerful drug cartel in Colombia.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration estimates the Medellin cartel controls 80 percent of the cocaine entering the United States.

Americans buy up supplies of 'wonder' cream

The "turistas" hoping to regain younger-looking skin, have exhausted the supply of Retin-A cream since release of reports that the acne medication can help restore wrinkled, sun-damaged skin, prompting pharmacies to order more.

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. shoppers seeking a cure for wrinkled skin have bought up all of a prescription acne cream available without a prescription in this border city, drug store operators say.

The "turistas," hoping to regain younger-looking skin, have exhausted the supply of Retin-A cream since release of reports that the acne medication can help restore wrinkled, sun-damaged skin, prompting pharmacies to order more.

"We have been out of stock of Retin-A since Sunday," said a clerk at Calderoni Pharmacy in Matamoros, "but we hope to get more sometime before the weekend."

A 10-gram tube available over the counter was going for about $1.20 when the acne medication sold out.

The prescription drug sells for $12 to $15 for a 15-gram tube in the United States.

The clerk, who declined to give her name, said most recent buyers of the cream are elderly U.S. tourists, known locally as winter Texans. Previously, she said, Retin-A buyers were parents purchasing the cream for their teen-age sons and daughters.

Ramon Esquivel, a clerk at the Farmacia Jardin, said the Matamoros store also has been sold out of the cream since Sunday, but he hoped to have a new supply by the weekend.

"Some of them come in asking for the pomade, some of whom called it the wonder cream," he said.

A U.S. Customs inspector at Brownsville's Gateway International Bridge, however, said not everyone will be able to bring the cream into the United States.

"If a prescription is required here and someone brings it across, we will require a prescription, too," said Fred Drew, a Customs inspector. "If someone brings it over and does not declare it, we will seize it."

University of Michigan researchers reported last week in the Journal of the American Medical Association that the cream repaired sun-damaged skin in 30 patients who used it daily for four months.

U.S. human rights activists see re-evaluation of Soviet policies

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. human rights activists said Friday they sensed a "terrific self-examination" of Soviet policies under way, but learned that authorities were listening to their conversations with dissidents.

Officials of the U.S. Helsinki Watch group who were invited to Moscow by the government, also called on the Soviet Union to release more than 300 political prisoners they say still are being held.

Asked by about the reforms of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, U.S. Helsinki Watch Chairman Robert Bernstein said, "I think it has to be something serious...It's a terrific self-examination of a nation."

Bernstein and about 20 other members of Helsinki Watch groups from the West met with dissidents, government ministers and held a joint session with an officially sponsored human rights group.

Among the officials they met were Deputy Foreign Minister Anatoly Adamishin, Interior Minister Alexander Vlasov, Justice Minister Boris Kravtsov, and Rudolf Kuznetsov who heads the government office that oversees visas and emigration.

The Western groups monitor compliance with the 1975 Helsinki agreement that defined basic human rights that should be observed by all signatories. They previously had visited the Soviet Union in the 1970s, but had been denied visas since 1979.

Officials told the group that reforms will take time because they are rewriting more than 100 laws.

They accepted information from the group on specific human rights cases, but provided no details about them or about what legal changes will be made, said Jeri Laber, executive director of the U.S. Helsinki Watch Committee.

Despite the legal review under way, Bernstein said Soviet officials could immediately release the remaining political prisoners and clarify its regulations on limiting emigration because of access to state secrets.

"It's a long, cold winter in a labor camp for someone they now say 'We were mistaken to put you there,'" Bernstein said. "They've got to clear this up."

At the Wednesday meeting with the officially sponsored Social Committee for Human Rights, the Western delegates demanded that their Soviet affiliate, Press Club Glasnost, be allowed to participate.

The chairman of the club, former political prisoner Lev Timofeyev, urged the committee to work for the release of other political prisoners.

Ms. Laber said the officially sponsored Soviet committee must protect unofficial groups such as Timofeyev's in order to ensure that human rights are being protected in the Soviet union.

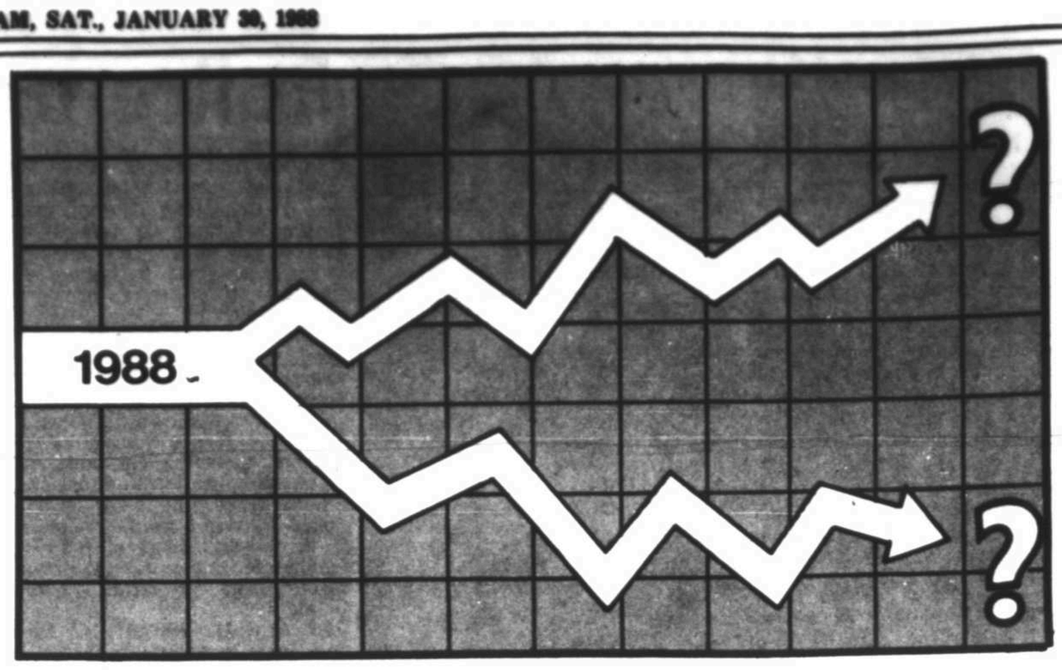

Gorbachev's reform program cannot go forward unless Soviet officials come to grips with the past, she said.

She said at the Wednesday meeting the Western delegates were "impressed that a pluralistic society seems to be developing in this country."

Bernstein said the group met Timofeyev on Monday in his apartment and learned that authorities were listening to the conversation.

He said Giorgi Edelshtein, one of the Soviets who was meeting with the Helsinki group, heard the conversation in Timofeyev's apartment being transmitted to a car parked outside.

Several minutes after Edelshtein returned and told the group what he heard, police called Timofeyev to ask him if he had a job and how he was supporting himself, Bernstein said. Soviet citizens can be prosecuted for not holding an officially approved job.

WHAT'S THE OUTLOOK FOR 1988?

What's the outlook for 1988? That's the question many readers ask this time each year.

To help answer it, The Reporter-Telegram each year publishes an annual OUTLOOK.

OUTLOOK 1988 offers a comprehensive look at indicators that can provide a fairly predictable overview of the economy for the coming year.

Conducted by the business-oil staff of The Reporter-Telegram, it involves almost 100 interviews with executives of both major and independent oil producing companies and organizations.

We asked them about increases or decreases in capital budgets -- about drilling programs and oil price projections -- about planned enhanced oil recovery projects.

And we also sought to determine oilpatch opinion on such timely issues as U.S. presidential races and energy policies.

Faked kidnapping raises anti-Semitism issue in the Netherlands

By PAUL VERSCHUUR

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Jules Croiset, a Jewish actor, didn't think a local theater group was listening closely enough to his complaints that its latest production contained anti-Semitic elements.

So, by his own admission to police, he faked his own kidnapping by purported anti-Semites to emphasize his point, but in doing so he raised a sensitive issue for Jews in the Netherlands.

The hoax drew intense newspaper coverage and editorial comment with the central theme that the incident was the misguided work of one man and should not reflect upon all Dutch Jews.

The media coverage reflected the sensitivity born of history with which the Dutch approach issues having to do with the Jewish community and anti-Semitism.

The history of Dutch Jewry began with the broad tolerance that attracted Jews to the Netherlands beginning in the 13th century, and almost ended with the mass roundups and deportations of Dutch Jews to Nazi concentration camps during World War II. Only 6,000 of the 150,000 Jews in the Netherlands when the Nazis occupied the country were left after the war.

What led up to the kidnap hoax began in November, when the burly, 48-year-old Croiset was a key figure in protests by Jewish activists against the planned performance here of "Garbage, the City and Death," by the West German playwright Rainer Werner Fassbinder.

Croiset and the others claimed the play had clear anti-Semitic passages and characterizations.

As a result, the Amsterdam Theater School canceled its production of the play following dress rehearsal Nov. 18, despite allegations that hypersensitive Jewish interest groups were in effect trying to censor Dutch theater and limit freedom of speech.

Croiset then went on tour in Belgium, where he is also well-known.

On Dec. 2, Croiset called police in the Belgian city of Charleroi to report that he had been kidnapped by anti-Semites but had just freed himself from a drainage pipe where they abandoned him with his hands tied.

He had not appeared to deliver a lecture in the nearby Belgian city of Bruges that day, and told police that he had been abducted from Bruges by four Dutch neo-Nazi youths in retaliation because of his protests of the Fassbinder production.

Then, in the first week of January, Croiset admitted he faked the kidnapping. A statement issued by his lawyer, Luuk Hamer, said the kidnap hoax was "exclusively inspired by the fact that the Amsterdam Theater School was not accessible to warnings that their Fassbinder project sparked classical anti-Semitic prejudice."

AP Laserphoto

Jewish actor Jules Croiset, center, holding a microphone, recently admitted to authorities that his "kidnapping" last December in Belgium by anti-Semites was false. Croiset is shown here during a November protest against the performance of Rainer Werner Fassbinder's play "Garbage, the City and Death" which was being performed in Rotterdam's Lantern Theater.

Croiset's actions should not reflect Croiset himself was not available for interview. Hamer said the actor had sought psychiatric treatment.

Newspapers and Jewish community figures alike hurried to say that on all Jews.

"What this Jewish actor has done is criminal, but above all it's sick," said the Rotterdam newspaper Algemeen Dagblad. Its editorial comment was typical of others.

"Croiset fought a ghost that turned out to be none other than he himself," said De Volkskrant of Amsterdam.

But De Volkskrant struck another note in the Croiset episode by saying the hoax occurred against the backdrop of the "china shop of (Dutch) wartime history."

Rabbi Avraham Soetendorp, the nation's most prominent Jewish activist, claims there is a wellspring of guilt in the Dutch population because it did not prevent the Nazis' deportations of Jews to extermination camps during the war.

"Certain issues relating to the struggle against anti-Semitism still cause enormous emotion," Soetendorp said in an interview.

"Emotionally, both Jews and non-Jews still...haven't dealt with World War II."

"We (Jews) are continually being confronted with what happened," while among the Dutch, "there is always something of an extra...exaggerated response when the Jewish community takes...a tough public stand," Soetendorp added.

However, Frieda Menco, chairwoman of the Dutch League of Liberal Jews, said that after the protests against the Fassbinder play, "non-Jews may well say that Jews are over-sensitive, and...I'm sure that's true."

That sensitivity has its corollary in the general population, which constantly seeks to avoid any hint of tolerance for anti-Semitism, and there was some evidence of this after Croiset admitted the hoax.

On Jan. 8, for example, the Rotterdam suburb of Schiedam announced it would close an exhibit on the 19th-century French author Joris-Karl Huysmans after allegations in a local newspaper that he was an anti-Semite.

Dutch TV reported in a news program that the University of Amsterdam had canceled a symposium on the German philosopher Martin Heidegger and his role in Nazi Germany because of his Nazi sympathies. The university, however, denied the TV report six days later and said the symposium would go on as scheduled.

De Groene Amsterdammer, a leftist weekly run by the Jewish journalist Martin van Amerongen, devoted an entire issue to Jewish life and anti-Semitism in the Netherlands.

Italians consider commuting sentences of jailed terrorists

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

ROME (AP) — A decade after the killing of former Premier Aldo Moro by the Red Brigades, some leading Italian politicians are talking about commuting the sentences of terrorists.

The intent would be to close the books on what Italians call their "years of lead," an allusion to bullets and the widespread terrorist violence of the 1970s.

From their prison cells or their places of exile, a number of convicted urban guerrillas have been sending signals that the "armed struggle is over," although some hardliners among them refuse to renounce their past deeds.

For the first time, leading politicians who refused any deals with the Red Brigades kidnappers and killers of Moro speak openly about amnesty.

"An act of clemency on the part of the state...does not mean offering the political recognition to the armed party that we previously denied," said Flaminio Piccoli, a successor to Moro as president of Italy's long-dominant Christian Democrat Party.

According to official figures, 841 people are under arrest or in prison on terrorist charges, including 442 people for leftist terrorism. Among the others are 58 right-wingers and 23 foreigners. The remainder have not been classified as yet by the Justice Ministry since their cases are still to be adjudicated.

With a new attitude toward terrorists taking shape, one of Italy's most-wanted fugitives, Franco Piperno, returned to Italy Jan. 17 from seven years of exile in Canada to appeal his conviction of forming a leftist subversive organization, for which he was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Piperno, a 44-year-old physicist and former leader of a Marxist group called Workers Autonomy, said he tired of life in exile and hoped to receive fair treatment in Italy.

"In the past 10 years we have lived through an extremely intense period," he said in an Italian television interview. "I think that all of us understand many things and that an amnesty would allow us to start over, undoubtedly in different conditions."

Moro was abducted in Rome on March 16, 1978, in an ambush in which his five bodyguards were killed. Moro's bullet-riddled body was found 55 days later in the back of a car parked around the corner from the headquarters of both the Christian Democrat and Communist parties.

At the time of his kidnapping, Moro had just negotiated an agreement for the Communists and Christian Democrats, the leading political forces in Italy, to collaborate.

The kidnapping and slaying stiffened Italy's resolve to fight domestic terrorism, and though there have been other killings and terror acts, such as the kidnapping of Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier of the U.S. Army, it marked the beginning of the end for large-scale urban terrorism.

At a mass trial of suspected Red Brigades members for the Moro killing in 1983, 32 defendants received life terms and 27 others received sentences ranging up to 30 years. Italy does not have the death penalty.

The state's tough stance appeared to begin to soften a year ago when two Red Brigades terrorists convicted in the Moro slaying were given a New Year's furlough from prison for cooperating with investigators.

In early January, former Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro went to Rebibbia Prison in Rome to meet with two Red Brigades hardliners, Renato Curcio and Mario Moretti, who have been pressing for a "political solution" that would free convicted terrorists.

Both Curcio, one of the founders of the Red Brigades, and Moretti, given the maximum life sentence in the Moro slaying, have both declared that armed struggle is over but refused to repudiate their past deeds or join the ranks of "pentiti" — terrorists who have turned state's evidence.

Debate over the future of the imprisoned terrorists has been sharp, and no immediate decision is expected.

"The 'years of lead' cannot be erased from the history of Italian democracy," said former Premier Giovanni Spadolini, who is opposed to any sweeping laws to favor the imprisoned terrorist. "Like Nazism, terrorism cannot be considered a parenthesis to close and forget and remove from the collective conscience."

Lesotho finds peace has its price

By LAURINDA KEYS

Lekhanya

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Surrounded by South Africa and economically dependent on it, this tiny black nation lives in peace under a military government that has cut past links with communist countries and takes pains not to antagonize its big neighbor.

The military took over a nation in political and economic disorder two years ago from a leftist civilian government whose lenience toward black South African guerrillas resulted in South African military raids and blockades.

The military has restored calm to the mountainous country. Lesotho's economic dependence on South Africa is as strong as ever now, but it remains one of the world's least developed countries.

The monarchy and its power, dismantled by the previous civilian government, are back in place and the nation seems headed toward a more traditional system under which decisions are made by the king and tribal chiefs after consultations with their subjects.

But the military government has given no indication it soon will step aside and restore civilian rule. Asked in an interview if that could happen be in five years time, Maj. Gen. Justin Metsing Lekhanya, the nation's leader, replied: "It's difficult to set a time. We wouldn't want to rush things."

Lekhanya is chairman of the Military Council, the ruling body, which bans political activity, maintains control of the news media and has briefly detained those who call for restoration of the constitution drawn up after independence from Britain in 1966.

The military, nevertheless, keeps a relatively low profile. No soldiers patrol the streets, and opposition political figures, while banned from activity, are allowed to speak out within certain parameters.

The military has been in power since January, 1986, when it overthrew the government of Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan.

Jonathan had scrapped the 1966 constitution after the first post-independent elections went against him in 1970. He also banished King Moshoeshoe II until the monarch promised to stay out of politics.

Jonathan brought in North Koreans to train the youth wing of his Basotho National Party, and they served as paramilitary enforcers. Gunfire was common at night in Maseru, the capital.

Jonathan's close ties with communist countries and his leniency toward South African black guerrillas strained relations with South Africa and contributed to the military coup in 1986.

The presence of the guerrillas or their sympathizers brought South African military raids in 1982 and 1985.

A raid in December, 1985, was followed a few weeks later by South African blockades at all 12 of the country's border posts. Lesotho relies on South Africa for 75 percent of its food and 95 percent of imports.

Nearly 100 members or sympathizers of the African National Congress guerrilla organization were flown Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe in the next few weeks and the South African blockades were lifted.

Jonathan died of natural causes last April.

Lekhanya nowadays regularly addresses the people on Radio Lesotho and in village meetings, and in the interview he maintained that the process of a return to civilian rule has begun, although it remains some ways off.

He noted that village council elections have already been held and they will lead eventually to the choosing of a national council to advise the king and the Military Council.

"The reinstatement of the 1966 constitution is a matter for the people to decide, but my colleagues and I are not convinced that the 1966 constitution, as it stands, is the best for this nation," he said.

Whatever new form of government is devised, it is not likely to be referred to a national vote and will probably reflect a traditional Basotho political style, with chiefs and the king making decisions.

In the Basotho style, local chiefs decide who can till the soil, who can graze their livestock on the communal lands and who can travel to South Africa to get jobs.

Charles Mofeli, leader of one of the six political parties allowed to exist but not to act, wants constitutional democracy returned to Lesotho.

"We were given a Western-type democracy when the British left and that's the kind of democracy we want," he said. He added that the village council system entrenches the power of the chiefs "who have been around too long and do not benefit the people."

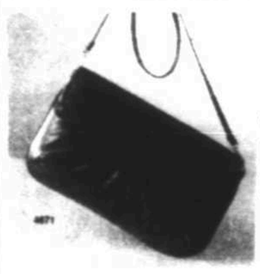

But the government said in answer to a recent petition demanding restoration of the constitution: "It is beyond any resuscitation."

Lesotho, known as Basutoland while a British protectorate from 1868 to 1966, is a mountainous country about size of Maryland. Less than 13 percent of the land is arable, and the remaining soil is washing away due to dry-land farming on steep hillsides and overgrazing by too many goats, sheep and cattle. It is one of the least developed countries in the world.

More than 85 percent of the 1.6 million Basothos, as the people are known, live in rural areas. Most women seek out a living in the mountains while 40 percent of the adult male labor force (120,000) work in mines and on farms in South Africa.

Although sensitive about how South Africa might react, Lesotho remains a beacon for South African government opponents and refugees, but they now are sent on to third countries after they get here.

One of those refugees was the white South African newspaper editor Donald Woods, who fled her with his family in 1977. Woods' story is told in the Richard Attenborough movie, "Cry Freedom."

Perot says GM management system should be 'nuked'

Perot

DETROIT (AP) — H. Ross Perot, the billionaire who received $700 million to leave the General Motors Corp. board of directors, says in a magazine article that the GM management system should be "nuked."

In the four-page article in Fortune magazine, the former GM executive made some candid suggestions on how to improve the company, including eliminating such perks as heated garages, chauffeur-driven limousines and executive dining rooms.

He also repeated a statement he made shortly before he left the car manufacturer, saying, "We've got to nuke the GM system."

The magazine devoted one page to comments by GM Chairman Roger Smith. However, GM said in a statement that Smith didn't know he was rebutting statements by Perot, a Texan whose Electronic Data Systems Corp. was bought by GM.

Fortune spokesman Gary Belis said the issue contained an in-depth story on GM's outlook and that the magazine's reporting was balanced.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — President Reagan will visit the University of Notre Dame to mark the issuance of a U.S. Postal Service stamp commemorating Knute Rockne, the school's legendary football coach.

The March 9 visit will make Reagan the first sitting president to visit the university twice, Notre Dame spokesman Richard Conklin said Friday.

In 1981, Reagan delivered the commencement address at Notre Dame and received an honorary degree. The president shared the platform with the late actor Pat O'Brien, who played the title role in the 1940 film "Knute Rockne — All-American." Reagan, then a young actor breaking into films, played the role of a doomed star halfback, George Gipp.

Rockne died in a plane crash in 1931.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dynasty" vixen Joan Collins and ex-husband Peter Holm are slated to square off across a negotiating table Feb. 5, the day a judge has set aside to try to settle their property dispute before it goes to trial.

Ms. Collins' attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, and Frank Steinschriber, representing Holm, met Thursday but failed to reach a settlement that would ward off a Feb. 10 property settlement trial.

Judge Kenneth Black ordered the attorneys to bring their clients along to the next negotiating session.

"My client's position is that she doesn't want to give Mr. Holm one penny more," Mitchelson said. The 54-year-old actress claimed she paid Holm more than $1 million during their 12-month marriage.

Steinschriber said he offered to settle for less than the $220,000 Holm claims is owed him under the couple's prenuptial agreement. "What Marvin is saying is that Joan wants Peter's underwear."

The 40-year-old former Swedish rock singer once sought $80,000 a month in spousal support.

PARIS (AP) — Cicciolina, the pornography star elected last year to the Italian Parliament, says she once worked briefly for the Hungarian secret police as a "Mata Hari" using sex to try to elicit secrets from a visiting American politician.

Ilona Staller, who was born in Budapest and took the stage name Cicciolina when she moved to Italy, says in her autobiography "Confessions" that the episode lasted just a few days and ended with the man's suicide.

"That night I cried with anger and shame," she writes in the 155-page book. She identifies the politician only as a senator — it is unclear whether he was a U.S. or state senator — and says she did not know his real name.

Cicciolina, 32, elected last June as a Radical Party member of Parliament, celebrated the French publication of her autobiography with a party at a Paris nightclub Thursday night. She carried her trademark stuffed bear and a banana onstage for a 12-minute show as hundreds of admirers crowded around.

A spokesman for publisher Michel Lafon said negotiations were under way for Italian, English and other language editions of the autobiography.

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP) — The mother of the Duchess of York said she is thrilled that her daughter, the former Sarah Ferguson, is pregnant.

Susan Wright de Barrantes, in her first remarks since Buckingham Palace announced this week that the Duchess of York is expecting her first child in August, said: "How did I receive the news about my next grandchild?

"I was thrilled, enchanted, of course. All mothers are happy when they learn their daughter has become pregnant," said Mrs. Barrantes, who is staying at her husband's ranch just outside this popular beach resort.

Her second husband, Hector Barrantes, is a wealthy Argentine businessman who raises polo horses and is active on the international polo circuit.

Mrs. Barrantes has two grandchildren from another daughter, Jane, who lives in Australia.

MOSCOW (AP) — Julian Lennon, U2 and the Scorpions are among the rock acts who have expressed interest in participating in a series of benefit concerts in the Soviet Union to fight drug addiction worldwide, organizers said Friday.

Artists are expected from the Soviet Union, Eastern and Western Europe and the United States, and the first concert is planned for March 26 in Moscow's Olympic Stadium, which seats 30,000, said Vitaly A. Korotich, editor of the weekly news magazine Ogonyok and one of the organizers.

Belka International, a New York-based firm specializing in Soviet trade, is in charge of booking American artists for the show. Intershow, a Hungarian firm from Budapest, is responsible for the securing artists from Europe. Korotich's group will supply musicians from the Soviet Union, officials said.

All proceeds from the concerts will go to a United Nations fund for the struggle against drug addiction and to the Soviet Health Ministry, said Korotich.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution acquired 8884,000 things last year, from a gorilla named Gus to Groucho Marx's striped pants and cutaway — not to mention an artificial heart, a 65 mph bicycle and a collection of 38,745 wasps.

Officials said new additions to the Smithsonian's inventory of 134 million objects also included a rare, 5.03-carat red diamond, one of band conductor John Philip Sousa's batons, a 220 million-year-old dinosaur skeleton, 1,098 masterpieces of Asian art and a 1939 Maytag washing machine.

Most of the items acquired in 1987 were scientific specimens placed in the National Museum of Natural History for study by scholars. These include the nearly 39,000 wasps from Asia and 9,000 butterflies and moths from Honduras.

Body in Dumpster identified as Odessan

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The body of a man found in a Lubbock Dumpster has been tentatively identified as Jack Doherty, who was reported missing to Odessa police Jan. 7.

An autopsy is being conducted to positively identify and attempt to determine the cause of death of the body believed to be that of Doherty, according to Odessa police Det. Sgt. Kevin Begley.

The severely burned body was discovered Jan. 19 in a trash Dumpster by Lubbock police. The Lubbock department was contacted by Odessa police investigators and tentative identification was made pending autopsy results.

Both departments are investigating the death as a homicide. A person has been questioned in connection with the case, but no arrests have been made, Begley said Friday.

Doherty, who was last seen Dec. 12, 1987, was reported missing Jan. 7 by his landlord. The search for Doherty led investigators from Odessa, to Amarillo and then to Lubbock.
