Congress To Vote On Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-Senate negotiators today pieced together a fragile compromise that could end an impasse that already has put 1.3 million federal workers on half pay and threatens the paychecks of 2 million others.

The agreement calls for the Senate to accept the House-passed pay raise, a proposal that would add $3,200 a year to current congressional salaries of $57,500.

It also calls for both the House and Senate to accept a modification in existing language limiting federal funding for abortions.

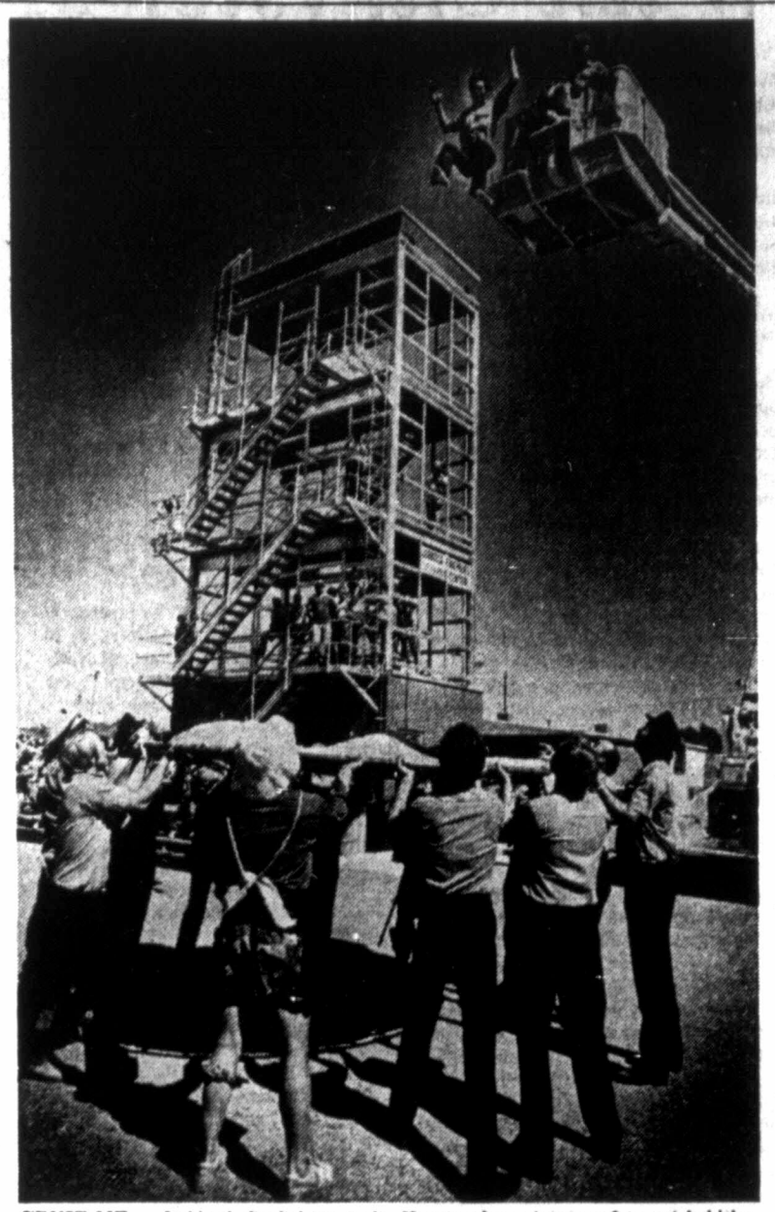

Both House and Senate negotiators expressed hope that their respective chambers would accept the bill. But they announced they would reconvene to consider a stop-gap measure if either chamber rejects the proposal.

That fallback measure would make no mention of federal funding for abortion or of the pay raise. It simply would provide continuing funds for the operation of the government through Nov. 1.

Agreement on the compromise came after less than 30 minutes of open debate. Leaders from both sides earlier huddled in a private chamber to discuss the situation.

And, in a reference to Thursday's action in which a compromise appeared to be reahed only o fall apart at the last minute, Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., closed the conference by saying: "Before we change our mind, we'll recess."

If no compromise is reached by Saturday, 116,000 workers from the departments of Agriculture and Housing and Urban Development will get short pay next week.

Castro Demands World Changes

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Fidel Castro, addressing the U.N. General Assembly for the first time in 19 years, lashed out today at Western "imperialism" and "exploitation" and demanded establishment of a "new world order." But he said he would refrain from direct attacks on the United States.

The bearded Cuban president, whisked into the United Nations under tight security, said he was speaking to the 152-member Assembly not as the representative of his country but as the current head of the movement of nonaligned nations.

Referring to the United States, he declared in the first few minutes of his speech he was not here to "wound with unnecessary adjectives our powerful neighbor to the north in his own house," or to speak of "the attacks on our small but noble country for the past 25 years."

Instead, Castro said, he was speaking on behalf of a Third World that is "struggling for an eradication of poverty, of hunger, of disease, of illiteracy, from which hundreds of millions of human beings suffer."

He demanded establishment of a "new world order based on justice, on equity on peace" to replace 'the unjust world system that exists today."

Under the current system, he said, "wealth is still concentrated in the hands of a few powers" who profit from "exploitation" of the Third World.

Earlier today, Castro emerged from almost 36 hours within the iron security of the Cuban Mission today and rode by car to the United Nations.

He had been expected to report on the stormy Havana summit of nonaligned countries and address the economic issues dividing the world's rich and poor.

Wearing his customary green fatigue uniform, he was greeted at the delegates' entrance by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, who escorted him to the secretary-general's 38th-floor office for a private talk before Castro's late-morning speech to the General Assembly.

Castro was welcomed by a few shouts of "Fidel! Fidel!" and light applause from U.N. personnel in the lobby. He and Waldheim strode off under the protection of a phalanx of security guards.

There were no demonstrators around the mission on East 38th Street as cars departed, first a decoy motorcade and then Castro's, for the seven-block ride to the U.N. site along the East River. The motorcade threaded through a secure zone of five blocks between two areas set aside by police for demonstrators.

Anti-Castroites were permitted no closer than Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, at 47th Street, four blocks north of the U.N. entrance, and supporters of the Cuban president were confined to a site one block south of the entrance, at 42nd Street.

Only a handful of anti-Castro protesters were gathered when he arrived, but the number grew to a few thousand by 11 a.m., a half-hour before the speech was scheduled to start.

The cleared five-block area in front of the United Nations was eerily quiet, the only sounds the clop of police-horse hooves and the clicks of police hand radios. The sound of police helicopters overhead carried away in the wind.

Following his speech, Castro had a lunch date with U.S. Ambassador Donald McHenry and 90 other dignitaries.

Businessmen Back Tough Fed Policy

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The Federal Reserve's new credit-tightening strategy has won the endorsement of U.S. business leaders who see it as strong medicine that may, at last, begin to cure inflation.

"I have yet to meet a single businessman who is not supportive of this move," said Reginald H. Jones, board chairman of General Electric Co.

Jones spoke to reporters Thursday night at the start of the fall session here of the Business Council, a prestigious group of corporate executives that was formed in the 1920s as a forum for business comment on government policy. Jones heads the group.

The endorsement from Jones and other business leaders came as President Carter appeared to reverse his earlier backing for the central bank's boost in interest rates and other moves.

"Interest rates are too high, inflation is too high," Carter told a labor convention in San Diego Thursday.

The president's statement was the opposite of what business leaders had hoped to hear from him.

"Given the need to reduce inflation, as well as the many uncertainties in the near-term .. outlook, there is a strong case for steadiness of policy and avoidance of sudden shifts in priorities," Clifton C. Garvin, board chairman of Exxon Corp., said today.

Jones and other council leaders agreed that the nation's families and businesses would have to tolerate high interest rates, some shortage of loan money and a slowdown in overall economic activity now if they hoped to see price increases slow in the future from their current, record 13 percent annual pace.

That is just what the Federal Reserve hopes will happen as a result of the policy adopted Saturday. The central bank, in an unprecedented maneuver, boosted its key loan rate, increased bank reserve requirements and redirected efforts to control the money supply.

The actions, designed to fight inflation and prop up the dollar, will proba-

House Approves End To Controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House today narrowly approved immediate removal of price controls on gasoline.

The 191-188 vote came on an amendment to a House version of a bill authorizing $6.9 billion in appropriations to the Department of Energy for fiscal 1980.

Rep. James Courtier, R-N.J., said a chief objective of his amendment is to remove the department's control over gasoline distribution, which he blamed for gasoline lines in California and the Northeast, but not in other areas.

"The allocation formula created the gas lines," Courtier said.

"Six years of control have curtailed investment in new refineries and diverted crude oil to other petroleum products," Courtier added.

Courtier also argued that controlling gasoline prices without controlling heating oil prices means big oil companies will take their profits from heating oil.

The vote followed a 257-135 vote Thursday against a proposal to halt President Carter's gradual decontrol of crude oil prices.

In the decisive energy victories Thursday for the president, House members solidly rejected arguments by liberals that the administration's deregulation policies were lining oil industry pockets at the expense of American consumers.

The House first voted 257-135 to let stand Carter's plan for allowing the price of domestically produced crude oil to rise to world market levels by mid-1981. Then it turned down a plan to reimpose price controls on heating oil and diesel fuel for the coming winter.

Following three hours of debate, the House in effect told President Carter to continue his gradual phaseout of price controls, which end entirely Sept. 30, 1980.

Stock Mart Edging Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market pushed higher early today, indicating the convulsive selling spree has cooled off. Trading was trailing the record levels of earlier in the week.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had fallen 52.99 points the first four sessions of the week, was ahead 3.50 points to 848.12 at 10:30 a.m. By noon, however, the average was up only .60 over Thursday's close.

The closely watched average lost 4.70 points Thursday, but advances edged declines by about an 8-to-7 margin, making the overall market performance a mixed one.

The trading pace was less that that which produced a 47.5 million-share turnover Thursday.

Hospital Loan Extension Not Ruled Out By HEW

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Government officials are apparently skeptical that Health Sciences Center Hospital will ever pay off its multi-million dollar loan — but they're still willing to talk about an extension on that loan after Thursday's negotiations.

Hospital administrators and county hospital district board members met in Dallas with representatives from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to present the teaching hospital's 1980 budget. Hospital district officials agreed to present the budget several months ago when HEW officials visited Lubbock.

The HEW representatives were in town in July to negotiate the hospital's overdue July 1 payment on an $8 million loan for the hospital's construction. The government representatives agreed then to give the hospital 90 days to prove they needed — and deserved — a loan extension.

HEW officials have also been holding the last installment on a $120,000 construction grant — pending a payment from the hospital on the $8 million loan. Hospital administrators and board members have protested the withholding of the grant, calling it unfair.

Hospital district board chairman Jack Strong said the HEW representatives immediately said "No," when asked to give up the last installment on the grant. But administrator Bob Berryman reminded the government officials of their pledge for cooperation in July, adding that the hospital desperately needs the money for costs already incurred.

"It is a serious matter in regard to the cash flow of this hospital," Berryman said this morning. "That's half a payroll."

HEW officials reportedly softened after Berryman's plea for help. The government representatives agreed to let the hospital know within a day or two of the meeting whether they had decided to mail out the last installment on the grant.

Hospital representatives re-emphasized the need for an extension on their loan payment, Berryman said, even though part of the 1980 budget has been set aside for debt service. He explained to the HEW officials that some things

Cool Front May Dent Area Heat

A-J News Services

For the second time this week, a cold front is expected to drop South Plains temperatures sharply after a day of record-breaking heat.

A new front is predicted to reach the Panhandle tonight and push southward through the South Plains by Saturday, holding temperatures here to the upper 70s Saturday afternoon.

Meanwhile, the mercury today is due to hit the middle 90s this afternoon, with a good chance of setting another October heat record on the heels of Thursday's all-time Oct. 11 mark of 93 degrees.

The previous record was 90 degrees in 1947. The record for today also is 90, a mark almost sure to fall before the day is out.

Saturday's forecast promises fine football weather for the Texas Tech-Arkansas game here Saturday afternoon. Temperature at the 2 p.m. kickoff should be in the upper 70s with easterly winds at 10 to 15 mph and fair skies.

Although Thursday afternoon's temperature was a record for the date, it was even hotter at many points on the South Plains.

Jayton, Matador and Spur tied for the highest reading with 98 degrees. It was 96 at Seminole and 95 at Big Spring, Lamesa, Paducah and Post.

All 28 South Plains reporting stations had highs of 90 or more, with Dimmitt's even 90 the coolest reading.

Member Of Bandidos Tells Of Sex, Drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For 12 years, Mary was the "old lady" of a member of the Bandidos, one of the nation's biggest motorcycle gangs. She has a message for young girls who might be tempted to take a ride with a tough-looking biker:

Don't go.

"In a crowd of young teen-age girls, there is always at least one who will want to go for a ride on a motorcycle," Mary calmly told a hearing by House Republicans Thursday on the growing criminal activities of outlaw motorcycle gangs.

"This is the first mistake. When she does that, she becomes involved in a white slavery market. Often that first ride with a biker will take the girl to a club meeting where she will be sexually abused by each club member."

Mary didn't give her last name or show her face to the cameras. She's 28, from Houston, and has been under police protection since she escaped from her husband in February.

Her tale was sordid: sexual favors bought and sold by gang members, brutal sexual assaults on women, severe beatings and forced involvement in prostitution and drug dealings.

At the time of her escape, Mary said she was being beaten daily by her husband because she had refused to participate in a wife-swapping arrangement with another Bandido couple.

"I was bound with tape around my wrists, elbows, knees and ankles and then my wrists and ankles were bound for five days. Each day I was beaten when my husband woke up. I was kicked until my entire body was swollen," she said in a rich Texas drawl.

"I was told I would not see the sun come up the next day. He was going to kill me," she said.

Once a young woman joins a gang, she has the responsibility of bringing in living expense money, Mary said. Most often, the women work as topless dancers or waitresses in bars, being paid in cash to avoid income taxes.

When more money is needed, they are forced to become prostitutes or sell the drugs Mary says bring in millions of dollars of profits to motorcycle gangs each year.

The worst part, Mary said, is a procedure known as "the train" where a woman is sexually abused by from 50 to 200 gang members "in any way they want for two or three days at a time."

The young girls stay with the bikers out of fear, drug dependency and the "security" of knowing they will be protected, Mary said.

Her voice broke only once during her testimony — when she was asked by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., why she came forward "at great personal risk" to testify.

"I want to stop it from happening to some other girl," she replied. "They're afraid to leave, but there's always somebody out there to help them. I want to help them if I can. I want the public to know, to be aware of what these people are doing. They can brainwash little kids. That's what they are, 14-or 15-year-old girls."

Comedienne Says Reading Fun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comedienne Carol Burnett says reading is fun, and to prove it she imitated her favorite childhood literary figure with a piercing scream of Tarzan's jungle cry — in the East Room of the White House.

CAROL BURNETT

"You see what you can get out of reading," she told children Thursday at a White House ceremony. "It's terrific."

Her performance, which brought laughter from the children, was part of a promotion of "Reading is Fun Day," a nationwide event to promote reading among youngsters by giving them free books.

The hostess was President Carter's daughter Amy.

After speeches by first lady Rosalynn Carter, NBC News anchorman John Chancellor and others, the 200 or so children who were the guests were invited to the State Dining Room for cookies, then out to the South Lawn for balloons and, of course, a free book.

Prison Term May Be Extended

FRONTERA, Calif. (AP) — Wendy Yoshimura, arrested with Patricia Hearst in 1975 and convicted of possessing explosives, could find her two-year prison term extended.

The state Community Release Board at the California Institution for Women here was scheduled today for a "serious offender" hearing, at which it could add one or two years to her sentence if it finds that her crimes warrant a longer term than the trial judge gave her.

The 36-year-old artist began serving her term July 17. With time off for good behavior, she is scheduled for release next September.

Picasso Exhibition 'Staggering'

PARIS (AP) — "If you're not here, you're no one," a critic from the Louvre Museum commented at an invitation-only opening of a government-sponsored exhibition of some 800 works by the late Pablo Picasso.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing formally opened the exhibition Thursday. Most of the works were taken by the government to settle Picasso's inheritance taxes.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman and his wife Donna, both avid art buffs, were there. American pop art painter Jasper Johns, incognito, studied canvasses and muttered "beautiful" and "wonderful."

Onomatology Can Be Fun

CHICAGO (AP) — A man who comes across thousands of names while doing his job says some names can be amusing, and some amazing.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

An Ardmore, Okla., woman who had tonsillitis and a baby at the same time named her child Tonsillitis Jackson, says Wilfred Brand, title operations officer of the Chicago Title Insurance Co. A brother was named Meningitis and three sisters were named Appendicitis, Laryngitis and Peritonitis, said Brand.

Brand, who has access to 1.2 million names in the company's computerized judgment index file, says his work qualifies him as an amateur onomatologist (one who studies the origins of proper names).

A routine part of conducting title searches is keeping close tabs on what people call themselves, Brand sid. Although a name may be spelled differently, if it sounds the same it is considered to be the same under law, he said.

Lear Jet designer William Powell Lear called his daughter Chanda Lear, said Brand. And Judge Learned Hand spent 40 years on the bench.

UAW To Resume Talks With Chrysler Monday

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union resumes bargaining at Chrysler Corp. on Monday, and it could be the toughest in years. Instead of taking, the UAW will be giving.

It's been clear since the formal opening of talks in July that Chrysler, the nation's No. 3 carmaker, would get concessions because of its shaky finances, though the union has not said so flatly.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser has said several times the union would "live up to its responsibilities."

That does not mean a two-year wage freeze, as the company suggested in an opening bargaining proposal personally delivered by Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca. Iacocca, who is expected to get into the talks in person again, has been meeting privately with Fraser.

Fraser said in delivering the rejection that economic issues at Chrysler could not be negotiated until after agreements were reached with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. — settlements now completely in hand, except for ratification by Ford workers.

The two settlements are similar. Though GM has not given a figure, there have been published estimates that the agreement will boost GM's labor costs by 33 percent over three years, if inflation runs at 8 percent per year.

Chrysler workers average $9 an hour, compared with $9.05 at GM and $9.03 at Ford.

"Imagine," said a union official after the Ford settlement, "having to negotiate our own takeaways."

But the reverse bargaining is not new. American Motors Corp., was given an easier contract years ago when it was having trouble and now is back in rough parity with the Big Three companies.

The negotiations will be closely watched in Washington. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller has made clear that any rescue plan for Chrysler will have to involve sacrifices by everybody concerned with Chrysler — workers, banks and suppliers.

Chrysler, the world's 14th largest industrial corporation, lost a record $207.1 million in the second quarter of this year and asked the government for a $1 billion tax credit. Miller turned down the tax credit, but said the Carter administration would consider loan guarantees of $500 million to $750 million. The Senate Banking Committee is holding hearings in Washington on what kind of government assistance, if any, should be given to Chrysler.

Some Chrysler workers already are sacrificing — the approximately 28,000 on indefinite layoff, about a quarter of the production work force.

One option to watch for is the possibility of deferred wage increases. Iacocca is working at a $1-a-year salary for two years, with the possibility of earning it back if Chrysler' stock is selling in August 1981 where it was in August this year. If the stock goes up, the chairman earns more.

Some 1,700 executives were handed pay cuts of 2 percent to 10 percent under the same earn-back scheme.

Steelworkers Ready To Negotiate Pact

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Steelworkers union leaders say they are ready to negotiate a contract with Newport News Shipbuilding following a federal court decision upholding the union's right to represent 17,500 blue collar workers at the world's largest private shipyard.

The unanimous decision Thursday by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond affirmed the National Labor Relations Board certification of the United Steelworkers of America as bargaining agent for production and maintenance workers at the Newport News, Va., yard.

Shipyard spokesman James Griffith would not say whether the company will begin negotiations with the Steelworkers, declining comment on the ruling until company officials have seen the decision.

Jack Howar, USWA sub-district director, said Thursday night the union "will be calling a membership meeting, probably next week," to discuss the court decision, and added he hoped soon to be "sitting down at the bargaining table to negotiate a contract."

Asked if he thought the shipyard would honor its promise not to carry its case to the Supreme Court, Howar said, "Well, that's what they said. It's now just a matter of waiting and finding out. It is hoped they will abide by it and sit down and bargain and reach an agreement by which both parties can live."

The company had challenged the January 1978 union election in which the Steelworkers ousted the independent Peninsula Shipbuilders Association, which had represented yard workers since the 1930s.

The shipyard contended there was widespread voting fraud and asked the appeals court earlier this year to overturn the election. The court instead ordered the NLRB, which had supervised the election, to conduct hearings on the allegations.

The Steelworkers, weary of being rebuffed, struck the yard that builds many of the Navy's nuclear ships on Jan. 31, 1979, but called off the strike April 23 with no resolution of the controversy.

Security Guards Seek Support To Close Schools

DETROIT (AP) — Union leaders representing some 400 striking security guards said they would ask boiler and furnace operators to honor their picket lines today in an effort to shut Detroit Public Schools.

"I doubt the schools could stay open if they were cold," Teamsters Union Local 214 President Joseph Valenti said Thursday.

Robert Ross, business agent of Local 547 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said his workers have not been formally asked to honor picket lines.

However, he said, "we've been known to honor legitimate picket lines. I'm sure the Teamsters will be in touch."

Weather forecasts call for highs in the upper 40s in Detroit today.

Thursday's walkout by the guards was the third for the 213,000-pupil Detroit district this school year. Local 214 led 700 bus drivers, food handlers and warehouse workers out when their contracts expired. That strike entered its fifth day today.

The district's contract with the security guards expired at midnight Wednesday.

Local 214 met Thursday morning with the school board in an effort to hammer out new contracts to replace those that expired at midnight Wednesday. But talks were fruitless, the union said, and leaders walked out of a night negotiation session.

Classes have continued through the Local 214 walkouts, unlike the teachers' strike which closed the schools.

Teachers, administrators and aides walked the halls Thursday, taking over for the guards, whose hall patrols supplement the beats of city plice. No rouble was reported.

"Precincts will be notified and they'll give special attention to the schools. That's just normal procedure," a city police spokesman said. Most of the 23 uniformed officers were assigned to junior and senior high schools, he said.

The walkout by bus drivers, food handlers and warehouse workers halted bus service for about 30,000 students.

Meanwhile, strikes by more than 8,000 teachers disrupted classes for pupils elsewhere in Michigan and in San Francisco and smaller districts in Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Carter Gains Momentum In Cross-Country Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's latest cross-country "non-political" tour seemed to net him political gains with two important groups — Western governors and representatives of unionized construction workers.

Carter ended his two-day journey Thursday with a brief stop in San Diego where he got a rousing reception at the annual convention of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department.

The president, who has stepped up his travels in advance of formally announcing his candidacy for re-election, said earlier Thursday in Albuquerque, N.M., that a two-hour meeting with eight Western governors Wednesday night was a success.

At a reception attended mainly by New Mexico Democrats, Carter said that at the end of the session "differences among us were almost non-existent" — a sentiment that mirrored the governors' own public assessments of the meeting.

The politically uncommitted AFL-CIO group — made up of 16 craft unions representing nearly 4.5 million members — repeatedly interrupted Carter's remarks with applause and at one time gave him a mid-speech standing ovation.

Speaking inside a yellow-and-white-striped tent on the shores of Mission Bay, the president drew an enthusiastic reaction when he declared: "I reject the advice of those who think the only way to cure inflation is to throw millions of people out of work. I guarantee you that I will not fight inflation with your jobs."

Without explaining how he would accomplish it, Carter told his audience he will preserve more than a million construction jobs created in the past 30 months and add some more.

Most economists believe the construction industry will be one of those hardest hit jobwise because of an increase in interest rates set in motion by the Federal Reserve Board last Saturday.

The president departed from his prepared text to identify soaring interest charges as having been caused by "decisions made by the Federal Reserve Board." On other occasions, Carter has applauded the actions of the central bank.

As he boarded Air Force One for the return to Washington, the president said he does not believe the country is headed for a worse recession because of higher interest rates.

"The degree of recession has been less than we had anticipated earlier this year," he told reporters. "We've done everything we could in spite of high interest rates to hold up employment in the construction industry."

Plugging for adoption of his energy program and an excise tax on oil industry revenue, the president appealed to the economic interests of his audience by declaring that the tax "will finance one of the biggest construction projects in world history — a brand new American industry, with American technology and American jobs, on a scale which even exceeds the construction of the interstate highway system."

He said money from the excise tax would spawn energy-related construction, creating 145,000 jobs, in an effort to reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

Carter also argued at length for Senate ratification of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union.

Talmadge Plans To Continue Senate Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within moments of being overwhemingly denounced by his Senate colleagues for "reprehensible" financial conduct, Herman E. Talmadge started beating the drums for his re-election.

"I intend to serve as the senior senator from the grand state of Georgia for a number of years to come," Talmadge said Thursday, shortly after the Senate vote to denounce him.

Talmadge, serving his fourth term, is the first member of the Senate to be disciplined by his colleagues in more than 10 years.

Senate Majority Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said as far as he is concerned, the 81-15 vote to denounce Talmadge ends the case.

"I think we should put this matter behind us," Byrd said. "The senator has accepted the Senate's decision."

As chairman of the Democratic caucus, Byrd would play a critical role in any possible further disciplinary action against Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Although such action is considered unlikely, Senate Democrats could vote to strip Talmadge of his 23 years of seniority and remove him as head of the Agriculture Committee.

In denouncing Talmadge, the Senate accepted the unanimous recommendation of the Senate Ethics Committee, which had rejected the more traditional penalty of censure.

Only two of the seven senators who have been censured in Senate history have been re-elected.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, one of the 15 senators who voted against the resolution of denunciation, urged the Senate to "consider more fully the career of the senator from Georgia before we take action that could bring it to an end."

However, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a close friend of Talmadge, said, "The people who know Herman know he is no crook. They know he is ethical."

Talmadge himself declared the Senate's vote a "personal victory" and said he had been vindicated of allegations of intentional wrongdoing.

After leaving the Senate floor, Talmadge acted more like a man who had been cleared than one who has been punished by his peers. With several staff aides in tow, he walked across the Capitol grounds waving to bystanders and tourists.

Talmadge voted "present" on the resolution to denounce him, as did fellow Georgia Democrat Sam Nunn and George McGovern, D-S.D., and Walter Huddleston, D-Ky. McGovern and Huddleston said their decision to pass was prompted by their membership on the agriculture committee chaired by Talmadge.

Talmadge and his supporters in the Senate, mainly southern Democrats, conceded that Talmadge made errors, but insisted he was innocent of any intent to break Senate rules or federal law.

The resolution approved by the Senate found that Talmadge falsely claimed $43,435 in Senate expenses and failed to report more than $10,000 in campaign contributions.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., chairman of the Senate ethics committee, conceded that the panel did not conclude Talmadge knew $39,000 in campaign contributions and Senate expense funds were funneled through a secret bank account.

However, Stevenson said, "I did not say there was no evidence of such knowledge. That is for other agencies to decide."

The Senate vote came one day after Daniel Minchew, Talmadge's former administrative assistant and chief accuser, was sentenced to serve four months in federal prison on charges similar to those made against the senator.

Minchew testified under oath that Talmadge was part of a scheme to use campaign contributions and Senate expense funds as source of personal funds for both of them.

Talmadge denied the charge and denounced Minchew as a "liar, thief and embezzler."

In its final report, the committee said it had found eight possible violations of federal law during a 16-month investigation and had turned over all its files to the Justice Department.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Undeclareds Play Unfair

BY REMAINING "an unannounced candidate" for President, Sen. Ted Kennedy has made a fool of those who thought he was sincere in promoting public financing of Presidential campaigns.

Until he formally throws his hat into the ring—a formality, nothing more; he's running—Kennedy doesn't have to abide by the same rules that a formally announced candidate must observe.

"Draft Kennedy" committees can raise and spend funds in his behalf without violating the limits on private contributions that an announced candidate must stay within in order to qualify for a tax handout.

"IT'S PATENTLY UNFAIR," straightforward candidate John Connally says of another privilege Kennedy enjoys by being coy about his candidacy.

Connally cited a five-part television series on Kennedy by CBS News as an example of the way unannounced hopefuls are getting millions of dollars worth of free publicity.

CBS not only refuses to give him free equal time, it won't even sell him more than a few five-minute spots, Connally complained in an address to Texas newsmen.

The "equal time" doctrine is another example of the way federal controls can be used to impede the free flow of information on public issues while ostensibly "protecting" the public by requiring balanced presentations of political issues.

In this case, though, Connally says the doctrine is being used against him as an announced candidate.

"IF WE'RE GOING to have federal financing of campaigns, the FCC has a responsibility to see that equity is maintained," he said.

"There is a double standard for compliance," he added, pointing not only to Kennedy but also to Ronald Reagan who, as an unannounced candidate, can distribute newspaper columns and radio commentaries without the campaign spending rules applying.

Likewise, Kennedy and other Congressional incumbents can use taxpayer-paid staffs to grind out publicity and position papers for them without the campaign financing law coming into play.

All in all, public financing of political campaigns is a travesty, impossible to administer fairly, and a waste of public funds that should be outlawed.

John D. Lofton:

'Susies' Not Worth Plug Nickel

WASHINGTON—Contemplating the things that go on in this city, I frequently wonder how the great English satirist Jonathan Swift would have made a living if he had to top today's news.

For example, how would Swift have reacted to the fact that your government and mine has spent $150,000 of our money to hire a New York public relations firm to sell us: the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin.

The press kit promoting this new coin is professional. There is a sheet of quotations from famous people praising the "Susies," as they are called. President Carter likes them.

So does the secretary of the Treasury, the director of the U.S. Mint, the head of the National Automatic Merchandising Association, and a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

REP. PATRICIA SCHROEDER, D-Colo., says jubilantly: "We've had eagles on our coins and live buffaloes, but we've never had a live woman...We've got her now." This last statement is puzzling, since Anthony died in 1906.

There is a list of 14 "project ideas" suggesting ways of publicizing the new currency. One idea: "Stage a Susan B. Anthony party to brighten up the summer...ask your friends, neighbors to come wearing their red shawls or red ties. (Miss Anthony often wore a red shawl while speaking for the right of women to vote.) Wow, sounds like real fun, right?

In addition, the PR kit contains a 2½-page biography of Miss Anthony, a legislative history of the new coin, a photo of the coin, a release about the coin, and a brochure about "the dollar of the future," aimed at the retail community, the financial community and the consumer.

A fact sheet about the Anthony dollar asserts that it is "quick and easy" to identify, that it's "larger than the quarter," that it has a "unique" 11-sided inner border on both sides, and it is "easy to insert and withdraw from a cash register drawer."

BUT THE ONLY problem is that while all of these things may be true, rational arguments simply are not working. By all accounts, the Anthony dollar is a resounding flop. Too many people are confusing it with a foreign coin or are afraid to take it because it is not easily distinguished from a quarter.

Mint Director Stella Hackel says of the negative reaction to the Susies: "The confusion is more perceived than real. The Anthony dollar bears the same relationship to the quarter that the quarter does to the 5-cent piece."

Besides, she points out, it is possible to tell an Anthony coin from a quarter by touch, while in the dark there's no way to tell the difference between a one- and a 10-dollar bill.

REP. TOM EVANS, R-Del., a member of the House Banking Committee, says: "The American people don't think the new dollar coin is worth a plugged nickel.

"Based on the results of my office's informal national survey of merchants, banks and consumers, it is evident that the American public is resisting the use of the Anthony coin.

"Many refuse to accept the coin as change, merchants fear using them, and bank vaults are filled with this quarter look-alike."

Rep. Frank Annuzio, D-Ill., angry because the Treasury Department is spending tax dollars to promote the Anthony coin, says:

"It may be all right for Col. Sanders to spend millions a year promoting his chicken, but I don't want to see the Treasury spending taxpayer dollars to promote its turkey."

I'm sure it's true, as Mint Director Hackel says, that the Susies are cheaper to make in the long run because they last longer than a dollar bill. Perhaps it is also true that the replacement of dollar bills by Susies could save up to $50 million a year.

BUT THE FACT remains that there has been no real clamor for a new dollar coin. There has been no real dissatisfaction with the dollar bill.

The government has an ace in the hole, however. A Treasury Department task force has recommended that the dollar bill be phased out and the Anthony coin substituted for it. A bill has been introduced to forbid such action without congressional approval.

The Susan B. Anthony dollar adds insult to injury. Having caused an inflation which has reduced the value of our dollar to a quarter, the Feds are now trying to ram down our throats a dollar that even looks like a quarter. But a lot of Americans aren't swallowing it.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

Freedom To Fail

HAD HE NOT been born into the freedom to fail, Eddie Chiles could not be the success he is today.

And he would not be taking to the hustings to warn that the U.S. Government is out to destroy that freedom for those who come after him.

"Our government has been getting more socialistic, or more liberal, every day," the Fort Worth businessman said at Lubbock Christian College this week.

It's a battle between "the socialists and the good people, their team and ours," the outspoken conservative said in urging right-thinking Americans to get involved in politics before it is too late.

"Government," he said, "has a stranglehold on free enterprise" through over-regulation and "I think we need to fight another revolutionary war...with ballots instead of bullets. We have an election year in 1980..."

CHILES FOUNDED the Western Co., an oil-well service firm, in Seagraves in 1939. Last year, it had revenues in excess of $215 million.

As a businessman who started on such a shoestring that his first adding machine was a second-hand model he bought from Lennis Baker for $60, Chiles plainly is a success in the best American tradition.

He believes a man, whether employer or employe, should be free to enjoy the fruits of his success or be tempered by the taste of defeat without excessive government concern for him.

"There are only three things I want our government to do," Chiles says. "Protect our shores, deliver our mail and leave us alone."

Instead, he laments, "Eastern liberal intellectual elitists" are running the country and doing a poor job of it.

"WE JUST DON'T HAVE very many competent people in government," Chiles told those attending the LCC Board of Governors banquet.

"If he (a federal official) had known anything they wouldn't have let him have the job in the first place because they don't want anybody who knows anything about what is going on," he added.

When he was appointed to the Board of Regents of North Texas State University last spring, for example, opponents darkly suggested that some sort of reactionary poison ivy was about to cover the halls of one of the state's major institutions of higher education.

Unable to find anything more sinister in his views than a healthy expression of his right to believe in what the Founding Fathers believed, they then promptly confirmed him.

But the experience demonstrated why so many businessmen refuse to "get involved" publicly in public issues. They are scared to death that some customer or client might get mad, or that some government official or bureaucrat might take offense.

To risk "losing business" or being harassed by a regulatory agency for speaking their minds is more than weak-kneed owners and managers of businesses and industries can bring themselves to do.

Yet, Eddie Chiles' resounding success is proof that it is not economically suicidal to speak out forcefully on issues of vital concern.

In fact, if more would follow his example (he spends about $200,000 annually in company advertising to promote the free enterprise system), employers and employes alike would stand to benefit handsomely from the turn-around in government policies.

"FOR OVER 40 YEARS," Chiles said, "our national priorities have been directed toward social programs. We need to change our priorities...We must stop this trend and we must do it by getting involved in politics."

He pointed to Chrysler as an example of a company in which mismanagement and governmental control of the means of production leads toward bankruptcy, followed by calls for federal grants and, ultimately, by nationalization of industry and the end of free enterprise unless the trend is stopped.

In something of an aside, Chiles said, "If we can get the federal government out of our school systems, we might get God back in there."

Clearly, he has more faith in God than in Government.

Holmes Alexander:

Caucus Chamber Breeds Disaster

WASHINGTON—The famous marble Caucus Room of the U.S. Senate has a deadly fascination. Here Joe McCarthy put his neck out too far and got the axe on the Senate floor.

In the Caucus Room, the Kennedy brother, the senator and the committee council, hung it on Jimmy Hoffa. Later, Jack Kennedy announced his fatal presidential candidacy, and a few years later, so did Bob.

In the summer and autumn of 1979, two Senate committees have used the Caucus Room to hear testimony and quiz witnesses on the disarmament pact called SALT II.

I sense some creeping catastrophies if this treaty becomes law of the land.

TREATIES ARE BAD for America, and should be kept to a bare minimum. SALT is doubtless the worst of all. It is being negotiated with an enemy nation which is not to be trusted, and the negotiations take place at a time of history when we are too weak and irresolute to enforce the bargain.

Rabbits in clover don't produce offspring faster than a military treaty. Last August Vice President Mondale virtually made a unilateral treaty with Red China.

In a Peking address he threw the arm of comradeship around this Asian Marxian and announced that the U.S. viewed "any attempt to weaken or isolate China as contrary to its own interests, particularly strategic ones."

This can be construed as making Red China our de facto "strategic" ally. Shall we protect the Chinese tiger until it's strong enough to devour us?

FOR SALT II to pass the Senate supposedly means that in SALT III, the two parties would slow down the R&D on nuclear weapons. Nuclear research and development only draws big investment and makes giant strides with military technology.

The Minuteman nuclear missiles are far more advanced than puny power plants like Three Mile Island. In an address before the Edison Electric Institute, Dr. Chauncey Starr recently stressed a self-evident fact—technology is humanity's prime renewable asset, and technology will thrive best on the military dollar because there will always be the spur of warlike rivalry in every nation.

If SALT is defeated and an arms race is accelerated, there will be greater feats in technology, and the greatest beneficiaries will be the peoples who need it most—the nations of the Third World. This is how Dr. Starr puts it:

"When we examine social groups with very low energy supplements, we find they are frequently on starvation's edge, ridden with malnutrition, endemic disease and physical misery.

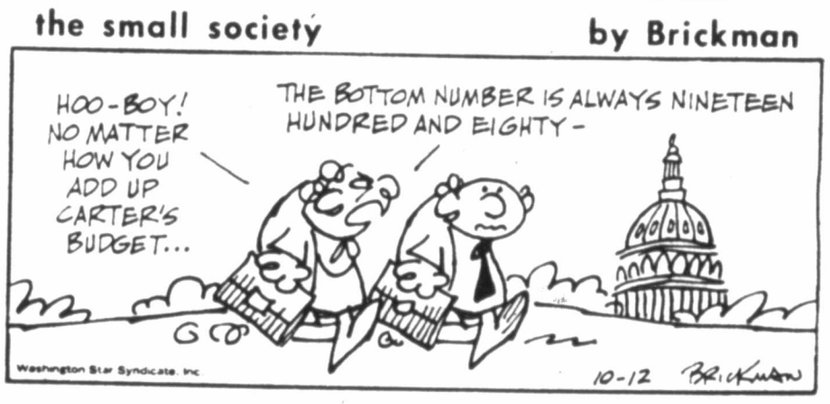

"It has been estimated that one-fourth of the world now lives on this edge of survival. Given a free choice, such groups avidly seek more energy. The vehicle for energy to improve the quality of life is technology. And this is intuitively understood by the world's people."

Another irony: while the superpowers are playing at the notion of reducing arms, the Third World is driving in the opposite direction. A Georgetown University study recently showed the military-mindedness of the "developing" countries.

More than 30 Third World states, this study finds, produce weapons of some sort. The same warlike spur for military world prestige pricks them on.

The poverty belt nations cannot much improve their lot without the by-products of munitions-making. Technology is energy, and it wears a soldier-suit. Who knows what unexpected results will evolve in the Senate Caucus Room?

Sylvia Porter:

Image Of Credit Unions Tarnished By Pressure

WASHINGTON—Credit unions—non-profit savings and lending organizations owned and run by their member-customers—have for years thrived under a special reputation as the consumer's financial friend.

If you needed to borrow, credit unions frequently would extend a loan to you when no one else would and often at lower than average rates, too.

Free from federal controls on interest rates, credit unions have been able to pay as much as 7-9 percent on savings accounts, while banks and savings institutions have been prevented from paying more than 5.25 or 5.50 percent.

These extra attractions along with the CUs' new powers to offer savings certificates, 30-year mortgage loans, interest-bearing checking accounts (known as share drafts) and credit cards, have made them the fastest growing of financial institutions.

OF EVERY SIX Americans, one belongs to a credit union.

But beneath the shiny surface, problems are emerging—for many informed sources both inside and outside the credit union movement fear CU managers have become so entangled in the technical aspects of running their organizations that they have neglected their consumer service and education responsibilities.

Faced with stiff competition, surging interest rates and new electronic technology, they contend credit unions are forgetting their traditional goals as "people oriented" cooperatives.

Credit unions have been criticized for a wide range of practices in recent speeches both by Lawrence Connell, head of the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) and consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

INCLUDED AMONG THE condemned practices: asking loan applicants to sign a form waiving consumer protection rights provided them by state or federal law; and speeding up loan repayments when a borrower loses his (or her) job.

Some CUs ask member-borrowers to sign contracts which give the credit union the right to take their last paycheck if they become unemployed. One man recently complained to NCUA that his last paycheck of almost $1,000 (including vacation pay, sick leave, Christmas bonus, etc.) went to the credit union after he lost his job because he still owed $50 on an installment loan.

Other critics, such as House banking chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., have suggested that CU ads may exaggerate how much members actually can earn on money they keep in share-draft accounts, credit unions' version of interest-bearing checking accounts.

A RECENT SURVEY by the credit unions' chief trade association showed that while the declared rates on share draft accounts averaged 5.6 percent in the early part of this year, the average effective rate on what the typical share draft account yielded was about 3.4 percent.

The difference is attributed to the fact that most credit unions calculate interest on a quarterly (not daily) basis and at that, only on the lowest monthly balance. These facts may not be spelled out clearly in ads.

Potentially, the most damaging action of all has been the endorsement of cancer insurance by credit union leagues.

These leagues are state trade associations and technically seem to fall outside the credit union regulatory structure. But NCUA head Connell told my associate, Brooke Shearer, that a study is underway to discover if the leagues are profiting from the sale of cancer insurance—a product sharply denounced by the Cancer Society, the Federal Trade Commission and Nader, among others.

IT IS "THE most egregious affront to CU principles to endorse or to recommend a service to members that preyed upon their deepest fears," says Connell—though league spokesmen continue to defend the insurance and push its sale.

Of course, not all credit unions follow such practices. Many remain devoted to the initial goals. But the pressures of the marketplace are tarnishing the long cherished image of CUs as "people banks."

BOILERMAKER BABE — Debbie Blue, 26, Of Huntington, W.Va., is the first woman to graduate from the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers' apprenticeship program. Mrs. Blue, the mother of a 4-year-old son, says she loves being a boilermaker and also likes what the demanding physical labor has done for her figure. (AP Laserphoto)

Young Woman Proud Of Accomplishments

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Debbie Blue was talking about her job and watching her arm jump as she flexed her muscles. The brown-haired, blue-eyed young woman grinned as a visitor felt her bulging bicep.

"I worked hard to get it," she said. "I'm proud of what I've accomplished in the past three years."

There's a definite connection between Mrs. Blue's pride, her muscles and her job. The 26-year-old woman is a boilermaker. She spends her days rigging and welding huge boilers at electric power plants around West Virginia.

"I'm a certified welder and I just got my journeyman's papers in field construction," she said. "I'm the first female in the country to graduate from the union's apprentice program."

An official of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers in Kansas City confirmed Mrs. Blue's story.

"She's the first female to graduate from our program," said David Lewis. "We have about 25 female field construction apprentices around the country now. Our first one was killed three years ago while working on the Alaskan pipeline."

"I grew up in Moundsville," Mrs. Blue said. "My father is a boilermaker. I was job-hunting three years ago and he told me to go down and sign up for the union's apprenticeship program.

"To complete the program you must pass 48 study lessons and put in 6,000 hours of on-the-job training. The study program usually takes four years but I finished the lessons in 18 months."

In addition to the study program and rugged work schedule, Mrs. Blue, who has a 4-year-old son, said she has had to endure the taunts of many of her male co-workers.

"It's been about 50-50," she said. "Some of the men I work with are friendly and helpful and some of them still don't accept me, even after three years. They'll ask me why I don't go back to the kitchen where I belong."

Mrs. Blue's home is at New Martinsville. At present, however, she's staying with her brother in Huntington and commuting to the Appalachian Power Co. generating plant at Glasgow, in Kanawha County.

"I ride to work with my brother and sister," she said. "We've got a lot of boilermakers in my family. My father's a boilermaker. My husband's a boilermaker. I'm a boilermaker. My brother's a boilermaker. And my sister's a boilermaker trainee."

Her sister, Tammy, 21, sat nearby. She said she earned $23,000 last year as a trainee.

"A boilermaker's pay is $12.20 an hour," she said. "A lot of men don't like it that women are making that kind of money. They say we're taking their jobs."

Union officials, under pressure from the federal government to have more minority-group members and women, say they are trying hard to recruit women. Mrs. Blue is skeptical.

"I've worked at power plants all over the state and I'm the only female journeyman in field construction around here," she said. "I really don't think they want a rush of females applying."

But if the money is attractive, a boilermaker's trade also can hazardous.

11 States Need Aid To Upgrade Water

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study indicates $25 billion or more in federal assistance is needed to upgrade urban water supply and sewage treatment systems in 11 Northeastern states.

The study released this week says the states don't have the money to do the work themselves. The report, sponsored by the Consortium of Northeastern Organizations, concludes that lack of concerted effort by government officials in the 11 states "has meant that national policies have been skewed in favor of the claims pressed by other regions."

Drug Traffic-Slaying Link Seen

AUSTIN (UPI) — U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd believes the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. and the ambush of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr are linked to illegal drug trafficking, and that a new "full scale grand jury investigation" will expand on new leads in both cases.

The federal grand jury will interrogate 26 persons next week in the renewed effort to obtain evidence in the May 29 slaying of Wood and the attack last November on Kerr, Boyd said Thursday.

The massive investigation undertaken by the FBI after Wood was gunned down as he left home for work has been hampered by a lack of evidence, Boyd said.

"After the crime occured all there was was a dead person and a small pellet out of a 243 rifle. That makes it very difficult to start with when you have so little evidence to go on."

Boyd declined to identify the individuals to be questioned by the grand jury but members of the Bandidos motorcycle gang, a friend of fugitive drug smuggler Jamiel Chagra and a Boston man the FBI says has organized crime connections have been subpoenaed by federal prosecutors to testify Oct. 17-18.

"There are many leads that the FBI has developed that need enlargement," Boyd told the Austin Young Lawyers Association. "Beginning next Wednesday we will begin a full scale grand jury investigation into the matter, to continue indefinitely."

Boyd said he believes the judge's assassination and the machine gun ambush of Kerr are tied to illegal drug trafficking.

"I'm afraid it might not just be an isolated incident," Boyd said. "This drug problem, you have to deal with it before you understand, these people can get anything done they want."

The witnesses summoned to testify next week include Bandidos Richard Paul Ricks, Adams Otis Fisher, Edgar Allen Crochet and Jay Layne Roberts.

Ricks, of San Antonio, was subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury before Wood was killed. He also participated in a lineup viewed by Kerr. Crochet, who was seriously wounded in a shooting incident in Houston last month, is vice president of the Houston chapter of Bandidos.

Fisher is scheduled to go on trial in New Orleans later this month on federal drug charges, and Roberts pleaded guilty to a a federal firearms charge Monday and faces a Dallas County murder charge in connection with the death of another Bandido last year.

Also among the witnesses subpoenaed are Peter Lynn Krutchewski, part owner of a Boston restaurant that was the scene of a gangland-style slaying of five men in June 1978, and Salvatore Michael Caruanna of Boston.

Krutchewski was identified at Chagra's federal drug smuggling trial in Austin during August as the owner of a plane used on a flight to Mexico to set up a marijuana smuggling operation.

Chagra fled after his conviction.

FBI agents testified at a federal bond hearing for Chagra that Caruana is an organized crime figure who reports directly to the reputed leader of the New England mob. Caruana was charged with assaulting a federal officer in Boston when his doberman pinscher bit an agent serving him with the subpoena.

Boyd said the interrogations beginning Wednesday will take three to five days and will constitute the first phase of the grand jury investigation into the attacks on the judge and federal attorney.

The U.S. attorney said he is prepared to provide immediate protection and an offer of immunity for anyone providing information to solve the cases.

"Our best hope is that someone will be lured forward by the reward offer of $125,000," Boyd said.

35 Subpoenaed In Investigation Into Judge's Assassination

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Houston man convicted in a 1968 murder-for-hire trial is among 35 witnesses subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating the May 29 assassination of a federal judge and the assault last year on a federal prosecutor.

The witness, Charles V. Harrelson, 41, of Houston, was sentenced in 1973 to 15 years in prison in the July 6, 1968 slaying in the Rio Grande Valley of Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. The first trial ended in a hung jury.

Harrelson and the other 34 witnesses have been subpoenaed to appear Wednesday and Thursday before the federal panel investigating the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. and the attempted assassination last Nov. 21 of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

Other persons subpoenaed to testify next week include: members of the Bandidos motorcycle club; Peter Krutchewski, a friend of fugitive drug smuggler Jimmy Chagra, and Salvatore Michael Caruana, a Boston man the FBI has said in court has direct links to New England organized crime leaders.

The subpoenas do not mean Harrelson or any of the witnesses are targets of the Wood or Kerr investigations, only that investigators feel they can shed light on the cases.

Kerr, who had been heavily involved in a massive federal investigation of an international drug smuggling ring centered in El Paso, escaped serious injury when his car was riddled by bullets.

Wood, 63, was known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, including some arising from that investigation. A sniper cut down the judge with a single shot as Wood climbed into his car to leave for work.

No arrests have been made in either case.

Harrelson, a dental supply salesman from Houston at the time of the Degelia shooting, completed his parole Oct. 24, 1978, according to the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Testimony in the 1973 trial revealed that Harrelson shot Degelia twice in the back of the head with a .25-caliber pistol at the request of Degelia's partner, Pete Scarmado.

Jurors Ponder Wallace's Fate

EL PASO (AP) — The fate of a 20-year-old Army soldier accused of killing flamboyant El Paso lawyer Lee Chagra was in the hands of a jury today, after testimony that took less than two days.

The panel got the case Thursday afternoon but retired without a verdict. It returned at 8 a.m. today to continue its deliberations.

Much of the defense effort for David Leon Wallace was aimed at convincing the jury that Chagra was killed during a cocaine delivery, not an armed robbery.

Chagra was shot to death last Dec. 23, a Saturday morning, in his plush, tight-security office in downtown El Paso.

Defense attorney Michael Gibson ended his testimony Thursday by asking the jury to consider reducing the verdict from capital murder to simple murder, which does not carry the mandatory death or life imprisonment.

Assistant District Attorney Gary Weiser called the argument "a fairy tale" and told the jurors, "David Wallace has not been on trial. Lee Chagra has."

Weiser noted that Wallace testified he removed Chagra's boots looking for money. The prosecution contended Wallace and another soldier, Donald White, were robbing Chagra's office at the time of the shooting.

White has pleaded guilty to murder, and another man, Louis Esper, has been convicted of conspiracy in the case.

After his arrest in California last March, Wallace signed a statement saying White shot Chagra during a robbery.

But Wallace testified Thursday that he gave the statement under duress and made no mention of the cocaine because he had received an anonymous telephone call warning him against it.

He said Esper offered White and him $5,000 each to deliver 10 pounds of cocaine to Chagra. He said the shooting occurred when Chagra took the package of cocaine to a locked part of his elaborately protected office. He said White shot Chagra when it appeared the lawyer was reaching for a gun.

Chagra's brother, Joe, had testified that Lee was a gambler who used cocaine openly.

Chagra had successfully defended numerous defendants in narcotics cases.

Sandy Messer, Lee Chagra's secretary, testified Wednesday that she saw about $200,000 in Chagra's office the day before he was killed.

State Prosecutors Win Rulings In Davis Murder-For-Hire Case

Gray said state attorneys could show that a key defense witness was declared legally insane in 1975. Jodie Mack Oliver had testified that he felt he was in danger from Pat Burleson, who defense attorneys say conspired with Davis' ex-wife and FBI informant David McCrory to frame their client.

In a separate ruling, Gray said prosecutors could try to show through cross-examination of Davis that he did not tell an attorney friend about a purported call from an FBI "agent" instructing him to play along with McCrory.

Thursday, chief prosecutor Jack Strickland rattled off a long string of obscenities and asked Davis if he had ever used them to describe District Judge Tom Cave to a reporter.

Davis conceded he had, but insisted he was only joking.

"That is Judge Tom Cave, against whom you have no animosity?" Strickland asked sarcastically.

"That's correct," Davs replied

"No ill feeling."

"Oh, he's not one of my best friends," conceded Davis, testifying Thursday under cross-examination.

"Apparently not," snapped Strickland, who is trying to convince a jury that the 46-year-old industrialist plotted to have Cave and 14 other persons murdered.

Davis is specifically charged with soliciting the murder of his divorce judge, Joe Eidson. No one was harmed.

Vaccine To Be Offered By Lubbock Physicians

Influenza immunizations in the Lubbock area will be available within the next week from public health clinics and private physicians.

The vaccine to be distributed this year, under the auspices of the Texas Department of Health, will be a trivalent preparation to protect against the A-Brazil, A-Texas and B-Hong Kong influenza.

Federal health officials have underwritten a $6.2 million program to protect individuals in high risk groups during the 1979-80 influenza season.

Jim Wolfe, of Public Health Region 2 in Lubbock, said that although the vaccine for infants has been distributed to local clinics and physicians, the adult variety has not yet been made available. He said the vaccine is expected to be sent to Lubbock from Austin within the next few days.

Individuals 26 years old and under are urged to get two doses of the vaccine, spaced by at least one month, because they have no natural protection against the type A influenza viruses which were widespread in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

Only one dose of the vaccine is recommended for persons over the age of 26.

Anyone who received the 1978-79 influenza vaccine need only receive one dose this year, regardless of age, Wolfe said.

Two viruses, A-Texas and A-Brazil, caused flu cases last year in many parts of the nation, and both are expected to return, according to the State Health Department.

The vaccine is recommended for all individuals with chronic illnesses such as heart and lung disease, kidney disease, diabetes, cancer and other diseases of a serious nature, and for all persons age 65 and older.

To receive the vaccine free in a public clinic, proof of chronic disease is required of anyone under 65 years of age. Those over 65 will be required only to show proof of age.

Cross Convicted Of Perjury

EL PASO (AP) — A federal jury convicted Ransom Patrick Cross of two counts of perjury before a grand jury investigating the attempted assassination of former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

The panel took six hours Thursday to decide that Cross lied to the San Antonio grand jury when he said he knew nothing about the weapon used in the attack and knew nothing about who was involved.

Kerr dived beneath the dashboard of his car on a San Antonio street last November and escaped a hail of gunfire.

FBI agents had testified that Cross told them he knew what kind of weapon was used and its whereabouts.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions set sentencing for Cross on Nov. 2. Cross could receive five years in prison on each count of perjury.

Suspects Deny Bomb Charges

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Two white supremists pleaded innocent today to charges that they plotted to bomb an elementary school attended by the daughter of the federal judge who ordered desegregation of Columbus schools.

John Gerhardt, 28, and his brother, Edward Gerhardt, 26, were arraigned today in U.S. District Court in Columbus before Judge Joseph Kinneary on charges they conspired to violate the civil rights of Columbus school children, they maliciously attempted to damage an institution receiving federal financial assistance, and they obstructed justice.

They were also indicted by a Franklin County grand jury on state charges of conspiracy to commit aggravated arson and attempted aggravated arson.

Kinneary set Oct. 27 for a hearing on all motions involving the federal charges and set a Nov. 12 trial date.

City Man Held For Burglary

A 22-year-old Lubbock man, who allegedly was burglarizing a 50th Street nightclub about 3:15 a.m. today when he was surprised by police, surrendered peacefully and was taken to the county jail.

Officers answering an alarm at the 3838 Club, 3838 50th St., found the man in a freezer vault inside the building, according to reports. The suspect was ordered out of the club and taken into custody.

Club owner James Griffin said the only loss he suffered in the break-in was about $50 damage to the freezer lock.

In another arrest, a teen-aged Lubbock woman apparently was in the wrong place at the wrong time about 10:20 p.m. Thursday when she asked several men if they wanted a date.

The proposal was made to undercover police who arrested the 19-year-old woman for suspicion of prostitution. Reports indicate the suspect was seen in the 700-block of 13th Street flagging down cars containing only men.

When the plainclothes policemen drove up, the woman reportedly stopped them and asked, "Are you looking for a girl?" The teen-ager allegedly said the date would cost $25 plus another $3.25 for a motel room.

After the small blaze was put out, it was learned the vehicle belonged to the manager of a nearby club. The manager told police the fire apparently was set by a woman he had ordered out of the club earlier that night because she was carrying a pistol.

The woman was located and questioned by police before being released. The weapon was turned over to the investigating officer.

The George Washington National Forest in Virginia's Blue Ridge has 1 million acres.

Suspect's Wife To Take Stand

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Prosecutors say it is time to reveal their most damaging evidence against murder defendant Roger Dale Stafford.

Verna Stafford, whose statements to investigators precipitated her husband's arrest on six counts of first-degree murder, was expected to testify today that she saw her 27-year-old husband shoot six Sirloin Stockade restaurant employees to death June 16, 1978.

The employees' bodies were found stacked upon each other in pools of blood inside the south Oklahoma City restaurant's meat locker about 30 minutes after a robbery. Mrs. Stafford has testified in pretrial hearings her husband and his brother shot the workers, most of them teen-agers, at point-blank range.

Defense attorney J. Malone Brewer has said discrediting Mrs. Stafford's testimony will be the single most important key to an acquittal for Stafford. He also has called Mrs. Stafford a "confessed murderer who is free walking the streets.

McInnis Jury Votes For Disbarment

EDINBURG (AP) — A state jury found for the State Bar of Texas today on all counts of its civil suit seeking the disbarment of veteran South Texas prosecutor Oscar McInnis.

Actual punishment will be decided by State District Judge Joe Evins, who set a hearing for Thursday on that phase of the trial.

Attorneys for McInnis said they would appeal, regardless of what punishment Evins decided.

McInnis said he would run for Hidalgo County sheriff if removed from office by Evins. "We need a sheriff," McInnis told newsmen. Reporters asked him why. "Why not?" he responded.

Capitol Quiet Place This Fall

The days are hot but the nights are cool.

A few leaves are falling. The squirrels have started burying pecans. And all state parking places are filled on Saturdays when the University of Texas Longhorns play at home.

Fall visitors to the old pink granite Capitol will see little change from previous visits. Austin is reaching the 350,000 population mark but the Capitol looks the same.

One thing, the Capitol wildlife population is probably larger than ever. There have been no opposums and raccoons reported recently but there are squirrels, pigeons and grackles — commonly called unprintable blackbirds — everywhere you look. If you have a freshly washed car, don't park under a tree.

The hive of wild bees that has populated a crack over a lintel, high in the north portico, for many years is still there. Even the flight of the "Killer Bees" during the legislative session did not disturb them.

As far as anyone knows there are still wasps in the feminine statue that tops the dome.

The strain of albino squirrels seems to be spreading. The palomino creatures have been spotted on both north and south lawns recently. Another one gathers nuts on the Governor's Mansion lawn.

Some pigeons are tame enough to take tidbits from tourists' hands. One of the veterans, "Old Spot," will light on the outstretched arm of a parking guard when enticed.

The fireplugs on the Capitol drive are still painted red, white and blue, left over from when they were decorated by school children for the 1976 Bicentennial.

There are still regular customers for the old mineral water fountain just outside the front door. Some bring 5-gallon jugs. The fountain also attracts unwary tourists who find out later about the laxative qualities of the water.

There's a new brick hut with copper roof near the rear door. It looks like a deer blind. Actually, it is to protect Capital security guards while they oversee parking.

The few changes that are obvious are at the Mansion and the governor's office.

The Mansion will be closed for months of renovations, including some structural repairs. Rita Clements, the new first lady of the state, also wants to be sure the furnishings of the Mansion are fitting for the 123-year old building.

One of the planned changes will be to paint the red brick fence that surrounds the Mansion.

When the fence was erected, during the time Nellie Connally was first lady, it was painted white to conform with the buildings. Then during Janey Briscoe's tenure the state spent $5,300 to sandblast the fence back to its natural red brick color. Now, Mrs. Clements' architect says, the fence must be repainted "off white" to be historically correct.

In the governor's reception room, where most public ceremonies are held, the rich red carpet has been replaced by an "oatmeal" floor covering. Unverified sources say the Clements did not care for the "Janey Briscoe red" color.

There has been a switch of some furniture too.

The Stephen F. Austin desk in the Secretary of State's office in the Capitol, has gone to the Mansion.

In turn, a large glass front cabinet containing gifts made to the Mansion by departing governors has been moved to the reception room of Gov. Bill Clements' office in the Capitol. Some of the hard wood wall moulding had to be trimmed to make it fit, but it's there now for tourists' benefit.

New Fields Attract TV Promoter

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — When people ask Sam Phillips why he combined two such seemingly dissimilar businesses as potato chips and cable television, he answers: "They go together; the customers munch the potato chips while they watch the programs."

But for a while, Wall Streeters and people in the television world were convinced Phillips was getting out of television because he sold off $31 million worth of CATV Systems and used the money to buy potato chip and other snack food businesses.

"The CATV systems we sold off were mature and fetched high prices," he explained. "It was time to sell them and reinvest the money."

In the three years this process went on, Phillips built Acton, which is named for Acton, Mass., where it is based, from a $3.5 million deficit on sales of $10 million (the company was called Vikoa in those days) to earnings of $4.9 million on sales of $96.81 million in 1978.

Then this year, Phillips confounded observers who thought he was just building a snack food empire. He bought a telephone interconnect company, National Telephone at Windsor Locks, Conn., which was bankrupt but had 35,000 subscribers, and then BFM Cable Co. of Greenwich, Conn.

BFM manages 40 CATV Systems with 16,000 subscribers in California, Florida, Utah, Colorado, Michigan and South Carolina and has a potential market of 345,000 homes to nibble at. The systems are owned by limited partnerships. But Acton has to provide the management to make them pay.

Since Phillips had reduced Acton's CATV subscribers from the 100,000 on which Vikoa was losing money to 22,000, this new acquisition did surprise people but he said, "I never had any intention of getting completely out of cable TV. It's a good business when run properly."

Nevertheless, Phillips' next move was in the food field. Acton bought DeCoster Egg Farms of Turner, Me., the second largest egg producer in the country with annual sales of $60 million. For this business, Acton paid only $17.5 million, taking advantage of depressed egg prices. But he is interested in more than eggs.

"Higher beef and pork prices are changing American eating habits and per capita egg and poultry consumption is slowly going up," Phillips observed.

Frank Perdue and the redoubtable Colonel Sanders of Kentucky Fried Chicken have been telling Americans that for years.

But the humble potato chip has been Phillips' most potent growth product. He has bought at least half a dozen potato chip companies, also makers of tortilla, corn and cheese chips and other snack foods. All are consumed in vast quantities by people watching TV.

Phillips makes no secret of his long-range intention to challenge the dominant position in the potato chip business of Pepsico's Frito-Lay division, which sold an awesome $1.2 billion worth of potato chips and other snack chips in 1978.

Group Claims World Lap Sitting Record

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — More than 5,000 Ball State University students have claimed the world record for lap sitting.

The throng gathered on the school's intramural field this week to form what they said was the world's largest unsupported circle.

Lynn Houston, chairman of special events for the school's homecoming, said 5,069 persons formed the circle and remained in the "lap sitting" position for 60 seconds.

She said the feat beat the record claimed last month by nearly 3,600 students at Michigan Tech.

Wright To Be Honored At Dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) Jim Wright likes to recall the one vote that won his election by secret ballot as House majority leader in 1976.

"The vote was 148 to 147," the Fort Worth Democrat said in an interview at his Capitol office. "There are about 227 of them who have come and said how happy they were that their vote made the difference."

But he is quick to add to his story developed through innumerable appearances on the political banquet circuit, "Of course, that's a joke."

Wright's increasing clout since that tight victory will be one of the causes for celebration Saturday night in Fort Worth at an appreciation dinner to mark 25 years in Congress.

More than 5,000 tickets have been sold at a $25 ticket price determined by the theme.

"They had one for me after about 10 years; they had one after 15 years; and they had one after 20 years," Wright explained. "And now they're having this."

Three Cabinet members, White House aide Sarah Weddington, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and a good part of the Texas congressional delegation including Sen. Lloyd Bentsen have said they planned to attend.

Wright, speaking softly and slowly, recalled that he never planned to spend a long enough time in the House to gain a top leadership position.

"I never supposed that I would have the patience," he said.

Wright was a member of the Texas Legislature when he was 23, became mayor of Weatherford at 26 and began his House tenure at the age of 33.

The House was then under the rule of the late Sam Rayburn of Texas.

"He was a splendid man who was kindly," Wright said. "He had a reverence for the spoken word; he had no tolerance at all for someone who would break his word."

Wright said the House structure has changed considerably since the days when Rayburn could steer legislation by consulting about a dozen committee leaders.

The majority leader traditionally moves on to become the Speaker of the House, but Wright said he would not feel deprived if for some reason he did not succeed O'Neill.

"I don't have any hard and fast plans," he said. "That (becoming speaker) is the natural apex of one's ambition in the House."

Wright said he has no regrets about spending almost his entire adult life in public office.

"I wouldn't trade careers if I had the option. There is nothing else that can excite me or fulfill me as this has done," he said. "Of course, I'd do some things differently."

Wright said he finds no tension between the demands of a national leadership position and the requirements of his Tarrant County district.

Disheroon Handed 99-Year Sentence

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 237th District Court jury this morning deliberated only 36 minutes before returning a 99-year sentence against Joe Allen Disheroon in the April 30 holdup of Twin Oaks Pharmacy.

Disheroon, 34, of Dallas was found guilty in August of a May 2 robbery in which he was shot twice by a policeman at Chris' Rexall Pharmacy and was sentenced to 33 years in the penitentiary.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford asked a 99-year sentence in punishment arguments, picking up the .357-magnum pistol used in the holdup and telling the jury at one point, "Take this back there and heft it around and think about the terror he inflicted on your fellow citizens last April 30."

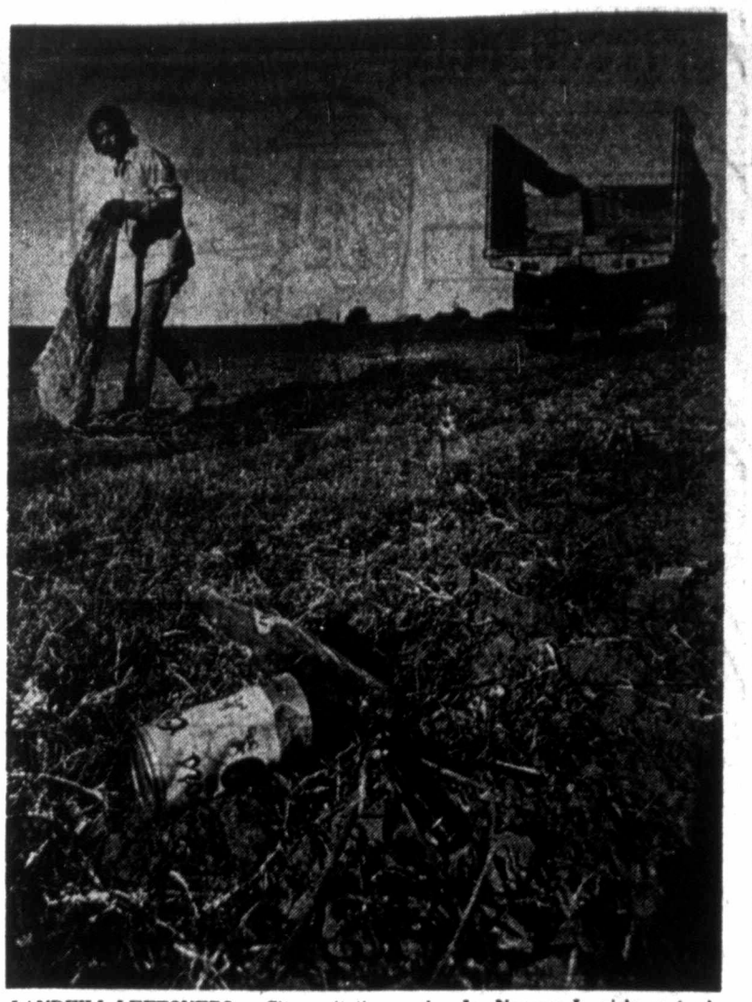

Disheroon took the stand in the punishment phase of the trial and asked for a light sentence on the basis of his addiction to morphine, which he has attributed in both trials to his participation in a voluntary drug testing program while he was in federal prison in the early 1970s.

Twin Oaks pharmacist Charles A. Curry and pharmacy employee Betty Lamb Thursday identified Disheroon as the man who robbed the pharmacy at gunpoint and escaped with a sack of drugs.

Disheroon admitted under questioning by Montford that he was convicted of writing a bad check in Taylor County in 1965, of carrying a prohibited weapon in Dallas and burglary in Collin County in 1969 and of interstate transportation of stolen securities in 1970.

Of the past 14 years of his life, he said to a question by defense attorney Floyd Holder, he has been free for only about two years.

"Most of my life is already gone," he told the jury. "I would like to go into a drug clinic and have an opportunity to be released drug-free. That was the only reason I committed the robbery."

Judge Orders Company To Make Disclaimers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Federal Trade Commission judge ruled today there is no evidence that Bufferin works faster than aspirin or that Excedrin is a better pain reliever than aspirin.

In an order that still must face review by the the commission, the judge said Bristol-Myers should make disclaimers in any future advertising involving unproven claims. The disclaimers would state that the products have not been proven safer, faster or more gentle than plain aspirin.

Bristol-Myers had no immediate comment on the ruling.

In addition, the administative law judge, Montgomery Hyun, found that doctors do not recommend Bufferin more often than aspirin or other pain relievers, and said that Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin P.M. do not relieve tension.

The decision is the latest development in a case which began in 1972 when the FTC accused the nation's leading analgesic manufacturers of false and misleading advertising.

A year ago, the same judge issued a similar order against American Home Products Corp., which makes Anacin and Arthritis Pain Formula. That case has been appealed to the full commission.

In addition, a third case against Sterling Drug, makers of Bayer, Cope, Vanquish and Midol, is still pending.

Hyun, however, scrapped a controversial FTC staff proposal contained in the original complaint that would have required Bristol-Myers to devote 25 percent of its future advertising to confessions that earlier ads about speed and effectiveness were deceptive.

The FTC said Hyun found there is "not sufficient evidence in the record to show that consumers believe Bufferin and Excedrin have been proved more effective or safer than aspirin." And he said Bristol-Myers stopped making tension relief claims for its products a decade ago.

He did, however, order the company to disclose in all future adversiting that Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin P.M. contain aspirin — a fact which he said a "substantial" number of consumers don't realize.

Hyun found "it has not been scientifically established that the speed of relief provided by Bufferin is significantly greater than that provided by plain aspirin. There are no well controlled clinical studies demonstrating that buffered aspirin, such as Bufferin, causes stomach distress less frequently than plain aspirin."

Hyun also said that while Excedrin contains a combination of pain relievers, it actually possesses "a smaller amount of proven anelgeic ingredients than a five-grain aspirin tablet."

Jury Unable To Decide Brown Case

A 137th District Court jury late Thursday night announced it was unable to reach a verdict in the aggravated robbery trial of Joe Lee Brown, 30, of 1607 Ave. D, No. 4, who was accused in the June 5 robbery of an elderly Lubbock man.

The jury deliberated from 4:15 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. Thursday before a mistrial was declared.

Jurors reportedly deadlocked over whether Brown should be convicted of robbery or aggravated robbery.

Jerry L. Timmons, 29, of 2801 E. Fifth St., the other man Dyer identified as one of the robbers, was found guilty in the case last month and sentenced to six years in the penitentiary.

Both Brown and Timmons claimed that they were incorrectly identified.

Because of a 1978 burglary conviction, the minimum Brown could be sentenced if found guilty is 15 years. The maximum is life under the first-degree felony charge. The minimum is five years without a prior conviction.

Brown and his attorney, Mary Anne Wiley, elected to go before Judge Robert C. Wright for sentencing rather than to the jury if a guilty verdict is reached.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Hollis Browning prosecuted the case.

Birds Removed For New Homes

LEAGUE CITY (UPI) — A developer is matching his wits against those of the Attwater prairie chicken, which is in the way of a housing project. But he says outsmarting them won't be difficult.

The birds are feisty but not clever, according to agriculture officials. They will will fly only when flushed and even then only for short distances.

Eden Corp., a subsidiary of General Homes Inc. of Houston, began moving about 40 of the endangered species — which in adulthood are brown, about 14 inches long and weigh about two pounds — to rural land in Victoria County.

Eden's southern division manager, Ken Belanger, obtained the assistance of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Texas A&M University. Eden plans to spend up to $15,000 removing the chickens to make way for about 1,500 homes.

The relocation team is using helicopters equipped with large nets. The helicopters fly over the tract and, when chickens are spotted, land quickly, trapping them in the net. Then the birds are trucked to their new home.

"I've seen them attack cars. They see their own reflection in the hubcaps," said project coordinator Nova Silvy of Texas A&M.

City To Crack Down On Trash Haulers

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City officials launched a campaign today against persons who haul trash to the city landfill in uncovered vehicles.

After receiving several complaints from business owners and residents of the area around the north Lubbock landfill, city public information director Vaughn Hendrie said the city decided to combat the problem.

This morning a three-man sanitation crew was picking up debris from the uncovered vehicles along FM 2641 between the Amarillo Highway and University Avenue.

But, Hendrie said the city wants to keep the problem from occurring again.

He said persons should be aware there is a $5 charge, in addition to regular fees, for persons hauling waste which is uncovered or unsecured "in such a manner to prevent the loss of such waste during transit."

Also, such haulers are liable to receive a ticket from Lubbock police, who are stepping up their patrols around landfill approach roads, Hendrie said.

He said a ticket can be written if the police see materials blowing from a truck or trailer along the roads.

Normally, persons who pay a garbage charge and haul their own waste to the landfill are not charged a fee to use the landfill, Hendrie said.

However, commercial haulers are charged a fee.

Henrie said he plans to print a leaflet listing landfill charges and regulations in the future and eventually place a notice in water bills about the use of the landfill and dumpsters.

Not only is the trash unsightly, Hendrie said, but a potential traffic hazard as well.

If a piece of metal falls onto the street, it could cause a flat, damage to a car or cause an accident, he said.

The landfill is located almost due west of the airport east of University and west of the Amarillo Highway on Avenue P, he said.

Texas Students Allowed To Stay In Barracks

DALLAS (UPI) — Apparently sensitive to the pleas of budget-conscious married students at the University of Texas at Austin, the Board of Regents has postponed razing the World War II barracks in which the students now live and hired a firm to study low-cost replacement housing.

For the second time, the regents Thursday delayed action on a recommendation to demolish the rows of barracks that serve as low-rent housing for many married students.

The regents did, however, decided to hire an architectural firm "to conduct a fullscale feasibility study on low-cost replacement housing," said Ronald Brown, UT vice president-student services.

"They made a decision not to make a decision," he said. "But let's be more positive.

"They have mandated this study be available by the February meeting of the board and to not make a decision to phase out the facilities (barracks) until such time they have in hand a decision regarding the alternatives."

Married students say the time-worn frame structures located in a picturesque area along Lake Austin Boulevard provide a "supporting community" and are easy on student budgets.

A delegation of students appeared at the regents meeting in Dallas to oppose the demolition. Student opposition had already prompted the regents to vote in July to delay any action until Thursday's meeting.

"We feel that if they could get the information that we've got, they would vote for us," Erica Luckstead of the Brackenridge Neighborhood Council, had said at that time.

After UT regents ordered an investigation of the condition of the Brackenridge and Deep Eddy apartments earlier this year, UT officials recommended demolishing the structures.

"This is a very supporting community, people watch each other's children so we can attend school," said Kelly Saenz, a leader of the neighborhood council. "The university and the board of regents do not understand that we love this place."

UT officials have revised upwards their estimates of the cost of replacing the 569 existing apartment units and the rent increases that would be necessary to cover construction costs.

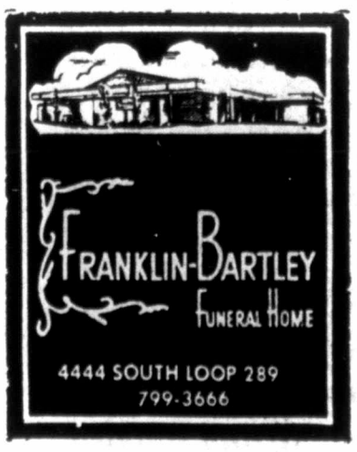

Constructing 500 one-story units would cost $21.3 million and require monthly rents of $336 for a one-bedroom apartment and $504 for a two-bedroom apartment, officials said.

Current rents range from $85 for a one-bedroom apartment to $175 for a four-bedroom apartment.

UT officials have expressed concerns about fire hazards and complained the frame barracks are expensive to maintain and energy inefficient.

The barracks were moved to Austin from Wichita, Kan., in 1946 to help provide housing for the flood of veterans entering college after World War II.

The Irish consume 317 million pounds of potatoes annually, more than any other people in the world.

Presidential Backers Woo Florida Voters

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Saturday's county caucuses of Florida Democrats have turned into a pressure-cooker of presidential politics, even though the only thing at stake is delegates to a state convention.

"It's like the movie Superman," says Democratic National Committeeman Sergio Bendixen, head of the Florida movement to draft Sen. Edward Kennedy. "Everybody knew it was superficial and meaningless, but they went anyway."

President Carter's supporters and insurgent Democrats backing Kennedy's undeclared candidacy today wind up statewide campaigns with all the earmarks of powerhouse electioneering.

The Carter administration sent speakers to stump the state, made astute use of patronage powers and wooed potential delegates intently. Federal grants to local governments blossomed, and one even went to a man who asked Carter for help in designing a solar home.

One woman joined the Carter camp after she said she got about 35 phone calls. The callers, she said, ranged from Carter Press Secretary Jody Powell and former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young to local officials who back Carter.

The caucuses, held in each of Florida's 67 counties, will select 879 of the 1,717 delegates to the Democratic state convention scheduled Nov. 18 in St. Petersburg. The convention agenda includes a nonbinding but psychologically important presidential straw vote.

Overall, about 50,000 Democrats are expected to gather around the state Saturday. The delegates they elect will join 838 others appointed by part leaders and elected officials.

Neither the caucuses nor the straw ballot directly affects selection of state delegates to the 1980 Democratic National Convention. They will be chosen in the state's March 11 presidential primary.

But both sides have approached the caucuses as the first test of the 1980 political season, giving the struggle the look of a presidential campaign.

"It is certainly a test of support and intensity of support, and a test of organizational ability," White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan said in Washington on Thursday.

Some examples:

— Carter staged a "town meeting" in August in Tampa, focus of the pivotal central Florida contest. He sent first lady Rosalynn Carter and top aides on numerous Florida trips. Mideast envoy Robert Strauss, wearing a yarmulke, tried to cut into Kennedy's strength in heavily Jewish southern Florida. Carter's mother, Lillian Carter, will campaign in Tampa on Saturday.

— Using his appointment powers, Carter named former Gov. Reubin Askew as his special trade representative, a move that would give ambassadorial status to the popular former chief executive. The president also focused attention on Florida's 400,000 black Democrats: Two blacks were named to federal judgeships, state Rep. Carrie Meeks of Miami was part of the official U.S. party to Lord Mountbatten's funeral in England and former Miami City Commissioner Athalie Range was named to the Amtrak board.

— The White House has increased federal aid to Florida, awarding $31 million for housing units for the elderly across the state and $20 million for public housing projects in Miami, plus a loan guarantee for an electric cooperative in Palatka.

— During the Tampa town meeting, John Craig complained to the president that his effort to develop a solar house wasn't getting enough support from the government. Craig was later invited to the White House to meet with Carter. On Thursday, he said he'd been told he will receive a $10,000 Department of Energy grant.

The Kennedy campaign does not have similar resources, but has had help from out-of-state Kennedy supporters. More than half the $190,000 the Kennedy group has raised has come from outside Florida.

Draft Kennedy leaders acknowledge they are the underdog. They announced Thursday that they had secured delegate candidates for 843 of the 879 to be chosen Saturday, but an Associated Press spot check of 40 of those listed showed four uncommitted and one supporting Carter.

In recent days, the Carter campaign has deployed government figures, state staffers and pro-Carter officials to entice local opinion leaders into their camp, especially blacks. A black dentist heading the Kennedy campaign in Pensacola defected to the Carter campaign Monday.

Jay Hakes, the Carter campaign manager, estimates he sent the names of 50 to 70 delegate candidates to national campaign headquarters for telephone calls from Washington leaders.

Jordan Nervous About Outcome Of Carter-Kennedy Showdown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan considers Saturday's Florida county caucuses an important test of President Carter's strength and says he's nervous about the outcome.

Jordan said Thursday it will be "very bad" if Carter loses the caucus elections. Delegates elected Saturday will go to November's Democratic state convention where Carter will be challenged in a straw vote by Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Jordan and other administration and campaign aides met with reporters to discuss their effort versus the one being made by the draft-Kennedy organizations in Florida. It was Jordan's first meeting with the press to discuss the 1980 election.

"In any caucus there's always a big unknown, and I'm nervous," he said. "If people on both sides aren't nervous, they're wrong."

Jordan said Florida represented a "test of the intensity of our support and a test of our organizational ability."

"Winning would be very good, losing would be very bad," Jordan said, adding that he defined winning as "getting one more delegate than anyone else."

"If it's true that Senator Kennedy is ahead in the polls he should win all these contests, so if we finish first we'll be very pleased," said one high administration official.

Carter campaign officials said they estimate the draft-Kennedy movement will spend between $250,000 and $300,000 on the Florida caucuses, while they plan to spend less — between $200,000 and $250,000.

"Senator Kennedy's forces have made at least as much effort in people and resources as we have and probably more," said the administration official who did not want to be quoted by name.

Campaign officials said they believe the Kennedy backers have spent between $50,000 and $75,000 on media alone during the last week of the campaign.

Man Believes Caucuses Violate Jewish Sabbath

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Florida's Democratic caucuses will go on as scheduled Saturday, despite a Hebrew teacher who says they fall on the Jewish Sabbath.

David Kaufman had filed a federal court suit seeking to delay the caucuses, claiming they violate constitutional guarantees of religious freedom.

But the petition was denied Thursday by U.S. District Judge George Young, who said the caucuses are non-binding and not funded by state, local or federal governments.

"I think any exercise of participation in government is important," Kaufman, a teacher at Temple Israel in Orlando, said after the ruling. "I think provisions should be made" for Jews not willing to vote Saturday.

He wanted the caucuses rescheduled or open to absentee ballots because Saturday is also is the final day of Sukkot, a remembrance of the Biblical Jews' 40 years of wandering during the exodus.

Young downplayed the importance of the caucuses, saying their effects are more of a "public and psychological reaction."

Rabbi Chaim Rozwaski of Temple Israel argued it would be "impossible" for Orthodox Jews to vote Saturday because Jewish law prohibits work, writing, driving and other activities on the holiday.

"There is no constitutional issue here," said Terry Hadley, attorney for several state party officials, in closing arguments. "It is political. The Democratic Party excludes no one knowingly."

Miller Promises Victory Over Inflation

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States will overcome its inflation problem, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller promised delegates to the meeting last week of the International Monetary Fund in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

Almost as he delivered the assurances, Washington was announcing a 1.4 percent increase during September in the producer price index, a rate that if continued for a year would amount to 17 percent or so.

There is nothing unusual any more in such sequences of promise and disappointment, since the administrations of Presidents Johnson, Nixon and Ford preceded President Carter in the practice.

But, after four presidencies and a decade-and-a-half of promises, some people are wondering if any administration can deliver on the promise of maintaining prosperity while lowering the rate of price increases.

A recognized academic was musing about the matter a few days ago. His thoughts, he said, weren't yet conclusive, and so he asked anonymity for the moment. But he was, he said, tending in this direction:

Bad as life might have been for many people before the turn of the century, prices had remained stable. In fact, they declined. Generally, he observed, prices in 1900 were actually lower than in 1800.

The reason, he said, was that benefits of rising productivity, of greater efficiency resulting from mechanization, were being distributed to the population. Lower production costs meant lower selling prices.

The trend ended in the 1920s. During that decade, said the professor, productivity increased twice as fast as wages. He conceded that his figures were generalities, but he asked that the thesis be accepted.

Corporations, he said became flush with funds which they put into short-term savings. And when they sought to retrieve the funds they helped bring on a crash that changed the economic world.

One affect was to initiate a readjustment of the fruits of production. Labor, he said, was given increased powers that soon developed into a monopoly. Wages were expected to grow even if productivity did not.

Analysis

Now, he said, we have a situation opposite to that of the 1920s; we have wages increasing twice as fast as productivity growth. And that, he maintains, simply cannot continue any more than could its opposite.

We — including the highest leadership of the country — usually give the wrong reasons for inflation, he said. We overlook this basic change in wages and productivity. And thereby, he claims, delude ourselves.

The popular explanation for inflation is that we have maintained a too easy money policy, flooding the world with dollars and thereby lowering their value, and that we have been too prone to big budget deficits.

It isn't so, said the professor. The dollar flood and budget deficits, he said, are a consequence of rising unit costs of production. "Easy money and deficits merely validate increased unit costs," he said.

If this is so, it makes suspect the promises to overcome inflation that have been made by the past four administrations. If true, the professor's thesis means we are dealing merely with superficialities.

Any administration, whether it be that of President Carter or a successor, probably has less control over inflation than it likes to admit.

Washington currently has very little control over energy costs, less than it wants over wages and, because of the compromise of politics, less than it is willing to admit over its own self.

Lawyers Slash Divorce Fees

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Breaking up may be hard to do, but it is getting cheaper in Nashville.

Over the past two years, some Nashville lawyers have slashed by up to 250 percent the price they charge for a divorce.

"There is a lot of competition," said attorney Mike Starling of Starling and Kral. "I don't know if the price can go much lower, though."

Mark Schneider, a partner in another firm that advertises regularly, said he used to charge $250 for an uncontested divorce.

"I was in court one day and Starling was there and he had about a dozen divorce cases," he said. "They had lowered their price to $88 for an uncontested divorce, so I decided to lower our price to $99 to increase our volume."

Schneider said he now handles about three divorce calls per day and litigates about five divorce cases per week.

The advertising trend and price-cutting, however, has some members of the legal community concerned.

"I've observed the prices going down and I really wonder about it," said Nashville Bar Association President Richard Bird. "But I really don't have anything to say about it."

In 1978, an earthquake in northeastern Iran destroyed entire cities and villages and killed more than 25,000 people.

Computer Forecasts Harsh, Snowy Winter In East

CHICAGO (UPI) — A computer analysis of the past 40 years indicates the coming winter will be milder than last in the Midwest, but the East could be in for big trouble — or big snow.

The computer survey showed Midwest cities can expect less snow than last year, but more snow than the average for the previous 40 years.

In much of the East, the computer predicted snowfalls exceeding both the norm and the year-ago level.

Predictions for Pittsburgh, Boston, New York and Buffalo, N.Y., all called for more snow than last year and more than the 40-year norm.

The general snowfall forecast for the nation indicated most cities will have a little less snow than last winter.

The Old Farmers Almanac notwithstanding, the study is the first scientific attempt to predict weather from historical data. Analysts said they hoped to achieve 66 percent accuracy — and that the computer had reached that accuracy level in a test run.

"I can say, if you talk about the severity of winter in terms in snow, in general, it looks as though each city will get less snow than last year, but more than their historical average based on 40 years," said Pennie du Pont, snow information specialist for the snowblower company that commissioned the computer study.

The severity of the season, she said, depends on "whether it stays until April or whether it melts in a week."

The computer had some bleak tidings for the East.

Buffalo, N.Y., the computer said, can expect 111.76 inches — well over last year's 97.3 inches and the city average of 92.9 inches. It set Buffalo's first snowfall for October 9. The first snow of the season fell in the Buffalo area Thursday — just two days behind the computer's schedule.

Of the cities surveyed, Erie, Pa., was second only to Buffalo in total snowfall predicted. The computer forecast 100.65 inches for Erie — which got 76.5 inches last year and has averaged 83.6 inches the past 40 years.

The computer estimated New York City's snowfall this season at 35.73 inches — higher than both the norm of 29.3 inches and last year's total of 29.4 inches. It also set the first-snow date for New York at November 8. The city had its first snow — just a trace — Wednesday.

Boston, which skipped through last winter with only 29.5 inches of snow, can expect 54.14 this season, and Pittsburgh, hit with 40.8 inches a year ago, can plan on 50.28, the computer said.

The computer projections were encouraging for much of the Midwest.

Chicago, buried by the heaviest snows in its history last winter, will get a break this winter, if the computer is right. Its forecast is for the snow to begin November 15 and end April 2. Between the two dates, the computer says, 59.02 inches will fall — far short of the record 89.7 inches piled on the city last year but still higher than the 40-year average of 42.6 inches.

The forecast for Milwaukee — laden with 80.5 inches a year ago —is for 60.22 inches this winter — comparatively light, though quite a bit over the norm of 46.6 inches.

NATO Arms Plans Hinge On SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate reluctance to approve the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty is endangering President Carter's drive for new and more powerful U.S. nuclear weapons in Europe.

The State Department re-emphasized the administration's stand Thursday: Nearly 600 Pershing II and ground-to-ground cruise missiles, capable of hitting the Soviet Union from Western Europe, need to be installed to counter the Soviets' new SS-20, which can hit any target on the European continent or in Britain.

But several European leaders are on record as saying they want SALT II ratified before they accept the new missiles on their soil.

Much of the difficulty in the Senate is over a Soviet combat brigade in Cuba, and the desire of some senators for more U.S. spending on defense.

In Europe, where there is little concern about Cuba, support for SALT is partially related to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's speech last Saturday in East Berlin.

He offered to remove some Soviet missiles if Western allies would promise not to put in any new ones of their own. And he sweetened the offer with an announcement that he was withdrawing 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from Central Europe.

Such leaders as West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Belgian Foreign Minister Henri Simonet have to worry about left-wing groups inside their own parties who are strong for SALT and strong against both nuclear weapons and any increased military spending.

Carter noted the situation Tuesday at his news conference:

"I might point out that Chancellor Schmidt said, I believe yesterday or day before, that a prerequisite to a decision by our NATO allies to take these steps which he considers to be so vital for the security of NATO is the passage of SALT II."

Simonet, who was visiting Washington, told The Associated Press shortly afterward:

"I personally will not accept the idea of a NATO decision in December if there is no guarantee that SALT is to be ratified."

In the Netherlands, Prime Minister Andreas van Agt said his government "would not bind itself unconditionally" to the decision on the missiles as long as there is no decision on SALT.

Any of these three governments could block a decision on the new missiles at the Brussels, Belgium, meeting of NATO in mid-December, which Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Secretaryof State Cyrus Vance are scheduled to attend.

Maj. Gen. Robert Close, who heads the Belgian government's Commission on Defense Problems, suggested in a speech in Washington Wednesday that it was the influence of the European anti-nuclear groups now pushing SALT that led to indefinite postponement of the neutron warhead.

Trustees Nominate Two For Appraisal Positions

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock public school trustees today nominated two candidates for the five-member board of directors that will govern the countywide tax appraisal district mandated this year by the state legislature.

Board members unanimously approved trustee Lynn Stafford and Mabry Brock, president of First State Bank of Shallowater, as nominees for the governing positions.

The appraisal district, mandated by S.B. 621, is aimed at consolidating the numerous taxing entitites of each county into one district in order to achieve uniform assessment and taxation.

The city Thursday nominated Joe Horkey, independent oil company executive and a former school board member, and Ray Diekemper, Lubbock homebuilder and a former city councilman

Only one other nomination to the governing body has been submitted to County Clerk Frank Guess. Bill Nelson was nominated by Frenship school district and the City of Wolfforth.

Although the legislation does not become fully operational until Jan. 1, 1982, participating taxing units have already begun implementation of the legislation.

Each voting unit has until Monday to submit its nominations for the governing board. Units will vote on Nov. 15, with the elected directors scheduled to take office Jan. 1.

In determining election of directors, each taxing authority in a county is allowed a number of votes based on the amount of taxes it levies annually.

According to that formula, the Lubbock Independent School District and the City of Lubbock will be entitled to 80 percent of the votes in the county and can elect four of the five directors.

A breakdown shows the Lubbock school district with almost 49 percent of the votes and the city with 35 percent.

The other taxing units in Lubbock County will elect a fifth director with their combined votes.

Mrs. Stafford said today that the job of establishing such a district "is going to be grueling." She added she does not look forward to the task if elected, but acknowledged that other candidates probably feel the same way.

Mrs. Stafford said her father is employed with a Texas tax appraisal firm and that he has "kept me up to date a lot. I've followed it (legislation creating the district) with him for several years as it's gone through the legislature."

She said she is "no expert" on the bill, however, and said she still has much to learn.

Mrs. Stafford said she believes representatives of the Lubbock county taxing units "have made a wonderful start. We could have had a hassle over the election of directors."

Disagreement among the taxing authorities in other counties has marked the implementation of the legislation, with rural officials claiming a lack of representation in electing directors.

However, Lubbock taxing authority officials have pledged cooperation, with Lubbock city and school officials making it clear they do not wish to dominate the district.

Mrs. Stafford said that funding could arise as a problem for the board of directors, as taxing authorities in 1981 must begin financial support of the district based on their share of the taxes collected in the county.

At an initial meeting of taxing units of Lubbock County in August, several officials complained of taxation without representation in reference to the requirement that even non-voting special districts (such as hospital and water districts) must share in the funding of the appraisal district.

However, Mrs. Stafford said that complaint was the only "negative comment" she has heard. "I think we're more informed now. I think everyone understands more how it's (the district) going to operate."

She said she hopes that taxing units will look at the funding as payment of appraisal services and that they will be getting "something for their money."

Cuban Missile Boats Sighted Close To Guantanamo Base

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cuban missile boats have appeared at a Cuban port about 50 miles from Guantanamo, the U.S. naval base where about 2,200 Marines soon will stage a reinforcement exercise, according to administration sources.

Although Soviet-built Komar boats are not usually seen in Santiago, the sources indicated no concern that the craft, armed with Styx missiles, might try to interfere with the Marine landings next week from three Navy amphibious ships.

Cuban President Fidel Castro has taken a low-key approach to the impending Marine operation, telling one journalist, "I'm not worried about the maneuvers."

Reports reaching here say the Cubans have increased aerial observation of the 45-square-mile U.S. base on the eastern end of Cuba, but that Cuban air force planes have approached no closer than 20 miles from Guantanamo.

The base is said to be under 24-hour surveillance from posts in the low, scrub-covered hills overlooking it.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said there have been no unusual Cuban troop movements in the vicinity of the base. An infantry brigade there was said to be following its normal pattern of activity.

Newsmen who visited Guantanamo last Friday found a relaxed atmosphere. Commanders said there was no tension among the base's 6,000 military and civilian inhabitants because of the diplomatic flap over the presence of a Soviet brigade some 500 miles to the west.

The temporary reinforcement of the 420 Marines normally guarding the base will be the biggest since 1975, according to Marine officers who described it as "a typical amphibious exercise."

The Carter administration bills the landing as a demonstration of U.S. ability to protect its vital interests in the Caribbean area.

To assure maximum attention, the Navy will fly 70 or more reporters and TV crews to witness the landing at the base, which usually is out of reach of reporters.

Pentagon officials said a vanguard of 10 Marine A-4 warplanes will fly to Guantanamo Sunday from Cherry Point, N.C.

Under present plans the Marines will go ashore about mid-week in amphibious vehicles over a small, rocky beach and from troop-carrying helicopters.

Texas Porno Law Upheld

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court refused today to step in and block a stiff new anti-pornography law in Texas pending a full scale appeal of charges that it is unconstitutional.

Ruling on separate cases consolidated into one, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the plaintiffs in the legal fight did not meet the necessary requirements.

A temporary stay imposed by the 5th circuit while it pondered this plea was dissolved.

To win a stay pending the outcome of an appeal, applicants must show that they are likely to win a decision in the trial, and that they would suffer "irreparable damage" if such a stay were not granted. The ruling did not specify where these applicants fell short.

Plaintiffs remain free to pursue an appeal. However, the new amendment to the anti-pornography law may be enforced in the meantime.

The amendment makes it a felony crime, instead of a misdemeanor, to promote books, materials and sex devices defined by the law as obscene.

Red Bluff Drive-In Inc., and Starbase Publishing Co., Inc., went to court last August in Houston, claiming the law violated constitutional rights, and won a temporary injunction against the law.

Door Remains Open On Loan Extension

HEW should inform the hospital on their decision to extend or demand payment on the loan by mid-November, Strong said.

The discussion on the HEW negotiations came after an uneventful meeting of the hospital district's administrative committee this morning. Committee members discussed the hospital's travel policy, making several suggestions as to how the policy could be tightened to save money.

Committee members will examine the county's travel policy before making any decisions on the hospital's policy. A suggestion was made for the board to approve all travel requests, but several board members feared such a move would tie the board into the day-to-day administration of the hospital.

The group also discussed again the hospital's paid leave policy, but still seems confused as to just what that policy is. Board members are afraid the policy is too liberal in light of the hospital's financial problems, but agreed to study the policies of other community hospitals before making a decision to change the Health Sciences policy.

Administrator Berryman made a last-minute report to the group, saying there has been a large increase in the amount of X-rays and lab work done in Thompson Hall — an extension of the Texas Tech medical school on the campus proper. The traffic in Thompson's ancillary services has increased tenfold, he said, without a proportionate increase in revenue. Thompson Hall does not use the cash-only policy on ancillary services developed for the out-patient clinic at Health Sciences.

Berryman agreed to present more information on the Thompson Hall situation when the full board meets Monday at 1:30 p.m..

Business Leaders Support Fed

bly result in some liquidation of business inventories, less capital spending, fewer home sales and slower growth in consumer borrowing and spending, the businessmen said.

"The inflation disease in our society is so virulent that the medicine you take to cure it is not very pleasant," said Walter Wriston, chairman of Citicorp., the nation's second largest bank.

Added Irving S. Shapiro, chairman of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.: "The sooner we suffer the pain, the sooner we will be through."

The "pain" was reflected in the council's economic forecast released today. It foresees "a moderate recession in line with average post-war experience" but a slower recovery than previously expected.

The council's 20 economic advisers, all of them corporate analysts, prepared the forecast before the central bank's monetary policy change. But Garvin of Exxon said "a majority had anticipated some sort of action from the Federal Reserve in their forecasts."

The report, bleaker than one issued by the council in May, says the nation's economic output probably will fall about 2 percent by the end of March. That would make the recession about half as severe as the 1974-75 downturn.

The economists' predictions ranged from a decline of 1.3 percent to 3.5 percent, Garvin said today. "Even a 3.5 percent drop would be well below the 5.7 percent experienced in 1974-75, the most severe decline since the 1930s," he said.

"Barring further shocks, the economists project recovery to be under way by mid-year 1980, albeit at a fairly modest pace," the report said.

The council's analysts believe that unemployment will climb by more than 1.2 million people by mid-1980.

"Even the most pessimistic of the economists project a peak rate of 7.7 percent, well below the 8.9 percent peak of 1975," Garvin said.

Inflation, however, should drop from its current double-digit pace to an 8 percent annual rate by next year, the council predicts.

The unemployment and inflation projections are about the same as those anticipated by the Carter administration, but the recession forecast is a bit deeper than official government figures.

Garvin said the majority of the council's economists anticipated that the administration would cut taxes by up to $25 billion next year. The administration now opposes such a move.

Garvin said the Federal Reserve's credit-tightening was "entirely appropriate and long overdue."

Citicorp's Wriston agreed. He predicted that the prime rate, the interest banks charge their most credit-worthy customers, was "close to the top" at the 14.5 percent level it hit Tuesday.

The Federal Reserve's new monetary policy will produce "two weeks of chaos in the marketplace, and then it will settle down," he said.

Each of the businessmen admitted that his industry would suffer some setbacks because of the higher interest rates.

"You have to endure these kinds of dislocations to get from here to there," Shapiro said of the inflation goal.

Woman Leaps Into Traffic

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A young woman leaped off a freeway overpass Thursday,was struck by several autos and dismembered, causing a four-hour traffic jam during the morning rush hour.

Deborah Marie Dennis, 25, jumped off the West Boulevard overpass onto the westbound lanes of the Santa Monica Freeway shortly before 5 a.m., the Highway Patrol said.

Her body, struck repeatedly by cars, was knocked to pieces which were scattered for about a quarter of a mile along the freeway.

The police search for body parts, and congestion caused by drivers slowing to gawk, caused a traffic jam that did not clear until 9:15 a.m.

Police said they were investigating to determine whether the death was suicide, accidental or murder.

Chinese Keeping Vaudeville Alive

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

KWEILIN, China (AP) — Vaudeville isn't dead.

It's alive and politically aware and touring the provinces of the People's Republic of China like a remnant of the old Orpheum circuit sold for scrap in a favored nation deal.

Mulligan's Stew

We went along because our hosts from Xinhua, (Hsinhua) the China news agency, had programmed a theater visit into our itinerary and the locals had even gone to the trouble of cleaning out the first two aisles — literally hosing down the seats minutes before the curtain went up — to accommodate 15 round eyes.

Frankly, there isn't much else to do on a rainy night in Kweilin or any other Chinese city, since the Gang of Four and the cultural revolution all but wiped out Chinese opera, theater and the movie industry. The nightlife is still a long way from normal, unless you dig party political discussions.

Because of the dearth of live entertainment in this pleasant southern city on the banks of the River Li, the house had been sold out two weeks in advance. Ticket scalpers were working the crowd outside trying to get two yuan ($1.40) for a 4 jioa (28 cent) seat right under the nose of the keeper of public order. In case you've never been in China, she's the one in the blue Mao suit with the red armband and the bullhorn tucked under her arm.

The show began with the mistress of ceremonies stepping out from behind the curtain in a shocking pink cocktail dress and announcing the first act in a shrill, shrieking voice that sounded like Madame Schumann-Heinke swallowing her first Chinese sea slug.

A clarinet player and a pianist, both male, made a dignified entrance and rendered a Rachmaninoff rip-off entitled "Generation After Generation Remember Chairman Mao" and then broke into a series of fast polkas that were pure Lawrence Welk. For an encore, they more or less combined on a folk song that our interpreter thought was "The Production Brigade Celebrates the Arrival in the Hills of the Manure Collectors," but she wasn't sure.

Madame Compere came out again, smileless as Ed Sullivan but executing a neat little buck and wing step to introduce the big production number, the Dance of the Lotus Blossoms, a traditional Chinese dance done to taped music by a chorus of a dozen lovelies with Dragon Lady fingernails. Actually it was very charming. The dancers in long lotus blossom skirts seemed to be gliding on skate boards, but the audience chattered all through the act and laughed derisively when one of the girls tripped on her hem and another lost a hair comb.

Evidently, Kweilin is a tough town to play. If you make it there, you're ready for the Jade Palace in Peking.

There were no comics, jugglers or animal acts, but "Excerpts from Swan Lake" by the local ballet troupe filled in the gaps between assorted operatic tenors, folk singers and a glum-faced virtuoso on the one-stringed Chinese violin who delivered something resembling the "Flight of the Bumble Bee" burning itself out in "The Ritual Fire Dance."

Anyhow, in the days when they were friends, Russia inflicted on China a passion for ballet and bouncy classical music along with those ponderous wedding cake skyscrapers done in Ivan the Terrible Gothic.

Chinese ballet is somewhat lacking in visual grace because the boy dancers wear brightly flowered boxer shorts under their tights and the girls seem to be gifted with the muscular legs of the now-banned rickshaw pullers.

Sex appeal does not seem to have much place in the Chinese entertainment package. An attractive young lady came out and did a coy fan dance that would have had them tearing up the seats at the Old Howard in Boston. She flitted about the stage for 20 minutes and never removed a glove.

But the star of the show and obvious favorite with the audience was a captivating young tenor in a western suit with lapels wide enough to paste wall posters on and a polka dot tie borrowed from a stranded burlesque comedian. He looked and sounded like an Oriental version of Julius LaRosa, especially when he sang "O Sole Mio."

"It means 'my only brother,'" my interpreter informed me. Marco Polo evidently had arrived here with more than macaroni.

Later, the star reappeared in a Mao suit sprinkled with gold dust and did a duet with a dimunitive soprano who could out-screech the master of ceremonies.

The last act, which threatened to go on forever despite murmurs of rebellion in the house, was a ballet version of Hans Christian Andersen's "Little Match Girl" done around cardboard lamppost that kept bending in half whenever the shivering prima ballerina embraced it. There was also a cardboard Christmas tree that was given the bum's rush offstage by a couple of burly stage hands before it figured in the plot. Anyhow, long before the heroine froze to death, half the house was rooting for arson and self-immolation.

I caught up with Chinese vaudeville again in the remote mountains of Tibet. A People's Liberation Army troupe in Lhasa put together a patriotic blood and guts theatrical package, replete with backdrops of jet fighters and women waving submachine guns. It would have made Irving Berlin's "This is the Army" seem like a piece of pacifist propaganda.

But the real show stopper was a barefoot Nepalese dance, done by some cute and curvy girl soldiers in tightly wrapped sarongs who knew how to inflame the passions of the Autonomous Region with a rear guard action that owed more to Minsky than Mao.

Even when the sound track went out of sync, the act drew more encores than "We Shall Move Ahead For the Good of the Motherland" or the head tenor's surprise delivery in English of "Do, Re, Mi," from "The Sound of Music," which at the moment is leading the charts on Radio Peking.

Like the Japanese soldier who came out of his cave on Iwo Jima decades after World War Two ended, a Major Bowes unit may surface one of these days in Inner Mongolia or Outer Tibet playing to appreciative audiences here in vaudeville's ever-ever land.

Company Hikes Coffee Prices

By United Press International

General Foods Corp., the nation's No. 1 coffee roaster, raised the wholesale price of its Maxwell House ground coffee this week by 15 cents to $3.33 a pound.

General Foods' Maxwell House Division also boosted the list price of Yuban, Sanka and Brim ground coffees by 15 cents a pound.

Consumers should find the price increases, which took effect this week, reflected on supermarket shelves within a month — the current lag period before changes at the wholesale level are passed along to the shopper.

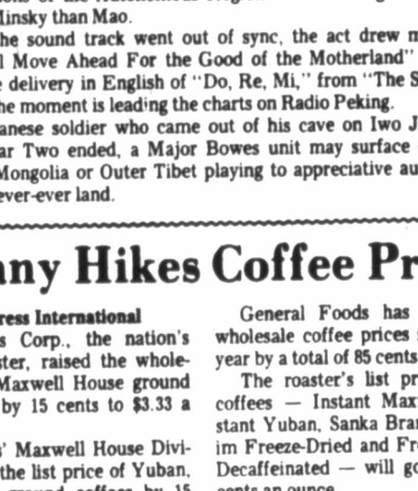

General Foods has marked up its wholesale coffee prices seven times this year by a total of 85 cents a pound.

The roaster's list prices for soluble coffees — Instant Maxwell House, Instant Yuban, Sanka Brand Instant, Maxim Freeze-Dried and Freeze-Dried Brim Decaffeinated — will go up by 2 to 2.5 cents an ounce.

General Foods attributed its latest pricing move to "the continuing high cost" of purchasing green coffee beans.

Folger's ground coffee, which was not affected by the latest price change, has wholesaled at $3.18 a pound since July 11.

Ford Foundation Cuts Grants

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — To more than 250 urban community groups, legal clinics, universities and minority action organizations, Louis Winnick is the man with the money.

Winnick's job, as deputy vice president of National Affairs and officer in charge of Urban and Metropolitan Development at the Ford Foundation, virtually gives him the power of life and death over hundreds of budding urban enterprises — a power second, perhaps, only to the federal government.

The Ford Foundation has played a pivotal role in starting and supporting all kinds of urban projects since the 1960s.

The impact of seed money from the foundation is unmistakable. The foundation's landmark effort, The Bedford-Stuyvesant Restoration Corp., has provided jobs, housing and new business for New York City's largest black community since 1967.

Groups like the Vera Institute for Justice, the Urban Institute, and at least seven community development organizations are among more than 250 urban groups receiving foundation money this year.

Even before it was fashionable, the foundation's guiding philosophy for its city projects has been "towards a high reliance on local initiative, self-help and community development," said Winnick in a recent interview.

For that reason, the foundation's financial problems since the mid-1970s — due largely to overspending in the '60s and bad stock market investments in the '70s — have had wide implications for the many urban enterprises that rely on its funding.

Winnick said the bottom line is that city-related projects can count on only about $40 million in grants and investments from the Ford Foundation in the current budget — down from more than $60 million just five years ago

"Most of our program support has been cut: the NAACP, the Urban League and others have suffered. Academic urban research groups centers are virtually out," said Winnick.

Without foundation money, many of those urban groups have been forced to turn much more to the federal government for funds, a development which Winnick fears may compromise those groups' ability to act freely and be critical of government.

And local self-help groups searching for funds must convince Winnick and others at the foundation that they can be self-sustaining once a grant expires. Usually, that implies backing from Washington.

Does that mean that the Ford Foundation will no longer go where Washington is reluctant to tread? Not exactly, said Winnick.

Most often, he said, Ford officials work so closely with federal or local authorities that a Ford-funded project will eventually prove to be the start of a larger federal effort. A leading example has been the Neighborhood Housing Services in more than a dozen cities which bring together banks, brokers, community spokesmen and Washington officials to work out local housing plans.

"When I first came to the foundation 16 years ago, we were so flush, so rich, that we were giving out perpetual grants, like the one to the Police Foundation," said Winnick.

Now, "it's a rare grant by the Ford Foundation that doesn't include a federal partnership."

The combined gross domestic product of all Latin American countries increased by 4.3 percent during 1978, a rate termed "unsatisfactory" in a report of the Inter-American Development Bank.

City Council Votes No On Pay Raise

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Saff

As expected the City Council rejected the request of Lubbock firefighters for a 15 percent pay raise Thursday, setting the stage for a Jan. 19 election on the issue.

Luther Dean, president of the firefighters association, urged the council to approve the raise as requested in petitions signed by more than 7,000 Lubbock voters.

The economic problems faced by firefighters when the petition drive began last month now are even worse, Dean said, with the inflation rate increasing from more than 13 percent to the current 16 percent.

"We need the problem settled for the continued well-being of the department," Dean said. "If it continues, it will become a morale and efficiency problem and cause us to lose good firefighters."

"The firefighters don't look upon this as an increase in pay," he said. "They look at it as a way to stay even."

Finally Councilman Bill McAlister moved to deny the requested raise "in light of the budgetary process we already went through."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan seconded the motion explaining the council did not oppose the pay raise but felt it could not afford to grant such an increase.

A prior request for a 12 percent raise for firefighters was given "a lot of thought in terms of what we could afford," she said.

The council is being pressured by city employees for higher salaries and by citizens who want the tax rate kept low, Mrs. Jordan noted.

"It's not a question of whether we wanted to grant (the raise) or not, it's a question of whether we could afford it," she said.

"It was the consensus of the council we couldn't."

The council was unanimous in denying the pay request.

Now the firefighters have 20 days to notify the council if they still want an election on the pay issue and the council can call an election at its next regular meeting.

City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga told council members the pay raise petition contained 7,366 valid signatures, higher than the 4,581 required to have an election called.

Lions Club Sets Auction

Everything from bicycles to bird cages will be sold to the highest bidder during the Lubbock Lions Club's annual auction, which will be broadcast from 7 p.m. until 11 p.m. Saturday on KLBK-TV, Channel 13.

Mark Stiff, general chairman for the auction, said a Toyota automobile will be the biggest item up for bids at the auction to be held in the Municipal Auditorium on the Texas Tech campus.

Stiff said the car is being donated by Brunken Toyota, Plains Body Works and B&M Trim. All the items to be auctioned are being donated by other area merchants, he said.

All the items will be on display from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday for persons wishing to pre-bid or to look them over, Stiff said.

The Lions Club hopes to raise between $15,000 and $20,000 for the Eye Bank, West Texas Boys Ranch, Girls Town, Crippled Children's and Diabetes camps, Good Will, Big Brothers and Sisters and the Boy Scouts.

Stiff said Jimmy Gary and George Jackson will serve as auctioneers.

Tech Students Told To Restrict Rallies

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Texas Tech University officials Thursday urged students to restrict pep rallies to the Texas Tech campus after learning that last week's impromptu street rally may cost the City of Lubbock and University Avenue businessmen almost $20,000 in expenses and damages.

Texas Tech interim president Lawrence Graves warned that "students who persist in breaking the law may expect both city and university action to be taken."

Graves's and Alley's comments are in reference to the gathering of approximately 1,500 Texas Tech students along University Avenue late Oct. 5 for a street pep rally before the Texas Tech-Texas A&M football game.

University Avenue, from Main Street to 13th Street, was closed to traffic by police barricades in an effort keep the students in a confined area and protect them from traffic, Chief Alley said. But before the group broke up about 4:30 a.m. Saturday, $640 in barricades had been broken and some set ablaze, $300 in damage had been done to police vehicles and $15,000 worth of damage had been done to the roof covering the block of businesses just south of Main Street.

Police Information Officer Bill Morgan said city policemen were paid $2,630 in overtime and the city was charged about $300 to clear University Avenue of broken beer bottles and litter.

"If they want to have any more pep rallies, let them stay on the Texas Tech campus," Alley said. "We were just trying to protect them, but the students acted like we were the enemy and they were trying to conquer us. We will use whatever it takes — Sheriff's Department, Department of Public Safety, Fire Department or Canine Corps — to keep the students from interrupting traffic on University Avenue and damaging any of the businesses located across from the campus," he warned.

Although no pep rally is formally scheduled for tonight, officials believe chances are good that Tech students may rally because of the traditional football rivalry between Tech and the Arkansas team it will meet Saturday afternoon in Jones Stadium.

"Almost everything those kids were doing last Friday night was illegal and we could have arrested quite a few," the police chief said. "But if they try the same thing again, we will not hesitate to make what arrests we can." Only three students were arrested for minor incidents during the Oct. 5 street rally.

In his statement released Thursday, the Texas Tech president cautioned Tech students against spirited demonstrations on city streets and emphasized that disruptive behavior is not condoned by the university.

Although pep rallies have been a routine part of campus life at Texas Tech, many believe the impromptu street gatherings began last October before the Texas Tech-University of Texas football game. A traffic signal at the corner of University Avenue and Broadway fell victim to that group of late night cheerleaders.

An overabundance of school spirit landed 25 Texas Tech students in jail 24 years ago. Newspaper accounts indicate the students were gathering wood for a pre-game homecoming pep rally and were arrested for tearing down part of a fence at a 23rd Street residence.

Businesswomen Voice Travel Demands

NEW YORK (AP) — The rapidly growing number of women who travel for business have the same general concerns as do their male counterparts, but in some specific areas their requirements are different, a recent survey shows.

In the study just completed by Western International Hotels, 53 percent of the group of women who travel regularly in connection with their work indicated their needs were "somewhat" or "very" different from those of men.

Limousine service from airports was mentioned as a requiremnt by the women, since most said they tended to fly, rather than drive or rent a car, so that getting fom the airport to the hotel with luggage easily is essential.

Security is a much higher priority for women than for men, the research by a hotel-management company revealed, with 60 percent of the women preferring downtown locations, as opposed to only 43 percent of the men.

This may indicate a feeling of greater safety in having controlled access through a lobby and elevators, rather than having a room door opening directly to the outside as in a motel, the report notes.

Among the special needs mentioned was room lighting, especially good lighting near a mirror — preferably in the bathroom — and desk lighting, since 75 percent said they worked in their rooms in the evenings.

Women also considered the availability of room service important, since many said they liked to get the day off to an unhurried start by ordering breakfast in their rooms.

Although some women mentioned tipping as a major stumbling block, most of the women surveyed said entertaining men at business meals in restaurants was not a major problem. But they suggested that making reservations and making it clear before being seated that they were the hostess helped eliminate difficulties.

Having an after-work drink alone was still an uncomfortable experience, many of the women surveyed noted, but 90 percent said they had used a hotel bar.

The typical traveling woman, says the report, is 38 years old, compared with 44 for a man; 71 percent are in "business," though sales, administration and personnel are major areas of concentration. She takes 10-12 trips per year, each averaging seven nights. Men take more trips — up to 19 annually, but stay fewer nights on each.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Hey, Mom. You with the neglected roots who has to take a glycerine pill before you go into your son's bedroom...who has spent a lifetime of shouting, "We'll see," and wonders if a convent will take a woman who considers Sara Lee a god.

I want you to imagine for a moment what it is like to be a child. It might help.

Suppose you were so insecure about yourself that you had to call your neighbor each morning to find out if she's wearing a skirt or jeans that day.

Suppose you thought you'd flatter your child by imitating his spitting, using slang and belching openly and he said to you, "That's disgusting."

Suppose your children never caught you "being good."

Suppose you had to eat a "good breakfast" while your children dieted and when you said you weren't hungry they said, "That's different."

Suppose your children forbade you to touch their games, bedroom, toiletries, clothes, or hair dryers, but when they borrowed your things told you, "If you don't share, you're selfish."

Suppose the child you loved asked you for the truth and when you told her the truth she said you were lying and believed a woman she had never seen before and whose name she couldn't pronounce.

Suppose you told your child something very personal in strict confidence and later overheard her telling it to her girlfriend on the phone.

Suppose your child dragged you away from your favorite TV show to visit a friend and told you and the friend's mother to go off and learn to know each other until it was time to go home.

Suppose a child named you "Larkspur" or "Unplanned." Would you be forgiving?

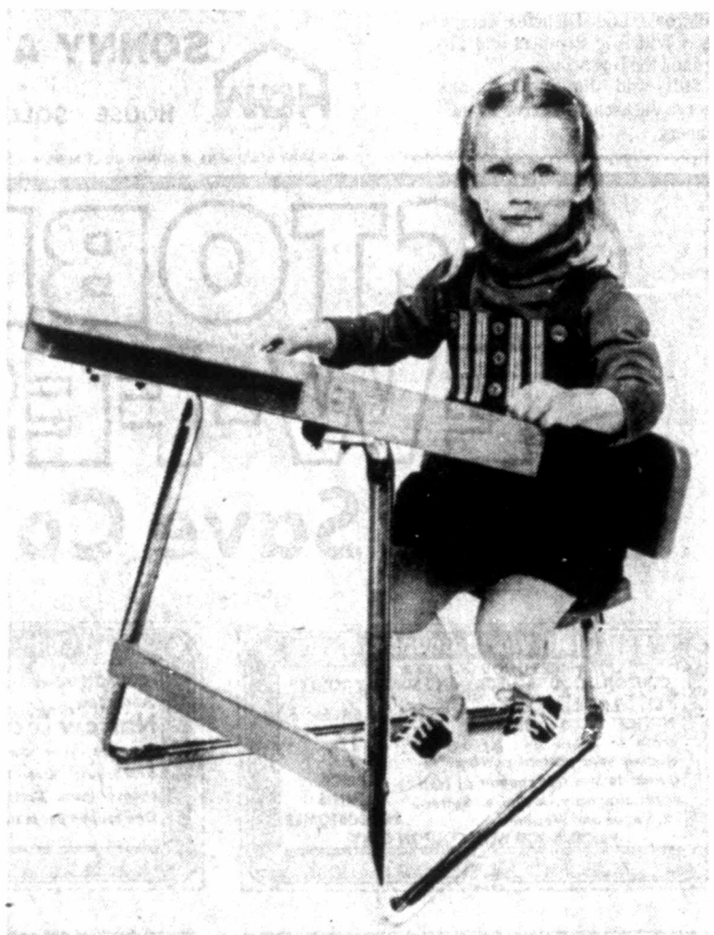

Suppose you lived in fear because an English teacher told you you'd never amount to anything unless you could diagram a sentence.

Suppose someone said, "You're all grown up, aren't you?" and you still didn't know what you wanted to be.

But worse...suppose everyone told you these are the best days of your life.

PROPER PROTECTION

Outdoor furniture should be cleaned and stored before the chill sets in, if you live in a variable climate. Wash wrought iron with suds and water. Dry completely and apply a coat of rust-inhibiting paint. Wipe clean and repair loose and broken wooden furniture. Wash plastic chairs and chaises, removable vinyl cushions; rinse and dry. Keep cushions off the ground or floor. Redwood in good condition may be left outdoors. A covering is advisable.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old divorcee with a 10-year-old son. I desperately want another child. I have noticed that in the last few years more single women are having and keeping their babies. I know I could manage another child myself. I have been the sole support of my son, who is a happy, well-adjusted child despite having no father in his life. I have saved enough money, so another child will not be a financial burden.

My problem is my family. I'm sure they wouldn't approve of the idea, and I hate to hurt them. But I am not getting any younger, and if I don't have another child within the next couple of years it will be too late.

Also, I do not have a special man in mind to father my child, but there are several who would do me the favor. I don't want to marry again, and I have made that plain.

I'm sure my family will think I got "caught" because the idea of having a baby outside marriage would be totally unacceptable to them. I hate to embarrass them.

I just know that I desperately want another child. Please advise me.

LONGING FOR MOTHERHOOD

DEAR LONGING: A woman sufficiently mature to handle single parenthood, as you insist you are, would not (a) seek my advice or (b) need her parents' approval. If I were you, I would scrap the idea.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am having a friendly argument with someone and hope you can settle it. I say that, according to law, a male doctor may not give a female patient a complete physical examination unless there is a female nurse in the room. My friend says I am mistaken.

Can you help us!

FRIENDLY ARGUMENT

DEAR FRIENDLY: Whether or not a male doctor has a nurse present while examining a female patient is up to the doctor, the patient, or both. If there, is a state law setting a different standard, I would be surprised.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: This letter may be of interest to those who are constantly complaining about rising food costs.

I am a clerk in a chain grocery. Yesterday I spent three hours picking up items off shelves where they didn't belong, because somebody decided they didn't want them after all and just put them down any old place.

Now just who do you think is paying me for three hours labor to do this? You — the consumer, that's who!

All right, forget the wages. Let's talk about the TV dinner someone left in the cereal aisle. When found, it was partially thawed out and not fit for resale. Or the carton of milk that was left standing out of the cooler for half a day. Or the cellophane-wrapped pork chops someone had put on top of the spices. These items are spoiled and must be thrown out.

But who pays for them? YOU DO! I would guess that about one out of every 10 shoppers has been guilty of the above, at least occasionally.

So, the next time you go marketing, please put those unwanted items back where they belong, and help keep prices down. And it might not be a bad idea for grocery store managers to post this on the cash register. It may help.

FOR LOWER PRICES

DEAR FOR: It may NOT help. But it can't hurt.

Career Consultant Outlines For Women Steps Necessary For Job Advancement

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — Every day you type Mr. Igor's letters, file them, take his messages, make his calls and wonder why. You've got a college degree or a voice inside that says you can do more, but no one in your position ever got promoted in this company.

"You're a secretary in a dead-end job," says Darlene Orlov. She's a private career counselor who has been personnel manager and career consultant for divisons of Gulf and Western, and American Home Products.

And she knows how you can kick up enough gravel into a bypass out of that dead end.

First of all, "You must have a vision of where you want to be. If you don't, assess your skills alone or with a professional. Do you want to supervise people, are you good at detail work, do you enjoy giving presentations, etc.? Talk to people in jobs that interest you and say, what do you do all day and how did you get there?"

No matter what they do, their jobs have three elements in common with all others: even yours: title, salary and scope of responsibility. "The best job, I think, has the title you want, the salary you think is fair and the level of responsibility you can handle. And it's challenging. That's the ideal but you don't always get it," she says.

For a secretary on the move, title probably counts most. "You may have to negotiate away money to get a quasi-professional title, but that title takes you away from the machine (with luck) and from the stigma of being a secretary. This, of course, isn't addressed to professional secretaries who are crack typists and stenographers and are justifiably proud of that," she adds.

Those who want out, though, must aim at becoming a "something" assistant, coordinator or specialist; a marketing assistant, a publicity coordinator, an information specialist, etc. And there are at least three ways of getting there.

If you and Mr. Igor get on well and you're due for a raise, go in and say, "I know I've performed admirably for you and I want you to either make me a full-fledged assistant or find me an assistant position in the company. In return, I'll find and train another secretary for you."

He may say no. He may want to say yes but can't. "Employees have to understand," she says, "that companies have manpower plans, formal or not. In any fiscal year, there are only going to be so many assistants. Many companies are financially unwilling to create positions and that's not wrong. No company should make a bad business decison because an employee says I must be promoted. There has to be a time for the contribution you want to make and a place for it."

And "contribution" is precisely what she means. If no assistant opening exists with the sales or personnel manager, etc., you can get on-the-job training there anyway. "Volunteer every free hour after five to do any non-secretarial work for that person. Make yourself valuable to someone in the company who can help you, but choose your mentor carefully," she says. "You can learn personnel work very well by volunteering, but if you offer your services to the chief engineer, no amount of assistance without the proper education or experience will turn you into an engineer."

And don't be put off if your target already has an assistant. "She or he may want to go home at five and, besides, the manager has to decide if he can use more help.

So approach him and say, "I'm willing to make a greater contribution to this company in my free time on a trial basis to see if I can really do this kind of work."

Still, that doesn't guarantee anything in the end. "You may spend six months doing this and a job may not materalize. But if you really want to become, say, a personnel assistant, these six months will help. You can legitimately say you spent six months functioning as one and back it up with examples and a verifiable reference. That's important because no company wants to hire an assistant who hasn't been one before."

Suppose, though, Mr. Igor doesn't cotton to your taking advantage of a "learning opportunity," or there's no one to volunteer to. "Then you have to leave the company," she says. "Remember, your objective is an assistant's job, not to stay with the company forever, especially one you feel isn't utilizing you to your capacity."

Step into Mr. Igor's office again and say, "I've actually been functioning as an assistant to you (assuming you have) and I'd like to use that title when I look for a new job. If he says no and the only obstaclto an assistant's job is your secretarial title, capitalize on your experience on your resume but have your title conform to the actual job."

Now you're halfway out the door and Personnel says, wait six months. Something may open up here. "You can wait for a specific time," she says, "but what is the wait predicated on? Someone terminating, increased profits to create a new position, a budget approval? Know what you're waiting for and three months into the period say to Personnel or whomever, regarding that dicussion we had: Do things still look as promising? Depending on the answer, you decide what to do, stay or move on."

One way or the other, move you must because no one's going to blast that dead-end job open for you now. You file too well.

NEW GLASSES

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — New sunglasses from a Rochester manufacturer combine two techniques — changing colors and a mirror finish. The mirror coating and automatic adjustment of color depth provide protection for all types of glare conditions, the manufacturer says. The lenses, amber colored on overcast days, turn brown on warm, sunny days and gray for peak protection on cold, brilliant days. The precision ground lenses are made from optical glass, treated for impact resistance.

Opening lead: Five of ♠

When we were 9 years old, bridge meant "Golden Gate" or "Washington." But 9-year-old Doug Hsieh of New York City is already a veteran of several national "bridge" (the other kind) championships. His performance on this hand from the Summer National held at the Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas during July and August would have pleased most experienced players.

The opening bid showed 15-17 points and North's response was a transfer bid. South obliged and North, for reasons best known to himself, launched into Blackwood with a void, and then subsided in five hearts. Now Doug recounted his points and found that he had more than he had promised, so he chose to go on to six hearts.

West was quite delighted about his defensive prospects. The opening lead of the five of clubs was covered by the jack, king and ace. At trick two Doug led the nine of hearts and let it run, getting the bad news of the 5-0 trump break. That alone might have unnerved the average declarer, but Doug never lost his cool.

He switched to the king of spades. West covered and dummy ruffed. Declarer returned to his hand with the king of diamonds, cashed the queen of spades, discarding a club from dummy, then ruffed a spade. After cashing the queen of clubs, Hsieh won the next two tricks with the queen and jack of diamonds.

Now West was down to nothing but four trumps, and declarer already had nine tricks in the bank. He led his last spade. West could only ruff helplessly and dummy overruffed. The last diamond in dummy was ruffed with the king of trumps, and declarer still had to score the ace of trumps for his twelfth trick.

Not bad at all. Watch out for this kid when he turns 10!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Grandmother's Albums Provide Link To Past

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

I've just received in the mail a magnificent idea from a 71-year-young lady in North Dakota.

Mrs. Cornelia Fatland Widmer, of Oakes, N.D., had read in the Fargo Forum one of my earlier columns on family photo albums. Her letter goes that column one better. I'd like to pass her suggestion along to you.

"I have 22 grandchildren," Cornelia wrote, "and decided to make an historical family album for each one.

"So far I've made seven albums, and they have been received with great appreciation and enthusiasm.

She starts each album with an original poem dedicated to the grandchild for whom the album is intended, and a picture of herself as a child of five with her parents and grandmother.

"I add pictures through the years, including some from my own 20 or so albums, up until the present time.

"I write comments under each picture and put dates on each one so they can see how we lived and grew and prospered.

"Then I end the book with another original poem called 'Grandma's Brag Book,' which contains one verse for each grandchild."

Cornelia is working on the eighth album now and is determined to complete all 22 despite recent open-heart surgery.

"Pictures are a big part of my life," Cornelia said. "I also have my mother's Kodak Brownie and it still takes beautiful pictures!"

What a great idea. And what a magnificent time to start such a project, what with all the interest in our roots. Cornelia's project takes in five generations!

I wonder whatever happened to photos of my grandparents, parents and my brothers and sister as children. I'm sure that, if I ever have any grandchildren, they would like an album such as Cornelia's and would probably build on it to pass on to their grandchildren.

Eastman Kodak celebrates its 100th anniversary next year. George Eastman popularized photography in America with the introduction of the first dollar Brownie camera in 1900. A roll of film costs 15 cents then.

As early as 1896, the 100,000th Kodak camera had been manufactured and film was being produced at the rate of about 400 miles monthly.

"You press the button. We do the rest," was the Kodak slogan of the time.

Many of those early cameras are items eagerly sought by collectors today. But what of the millions of picture that must have been made by the time most of us were born? How many are lying in attic trunks, in albums such as those discovered by Cornelia?

I don't know how Cornelia is dividing up the photos in the albums she found. One suggestion I might make, to insure that everyone has a complete collection, is to make copies of the photos that you want to include when more than one album is being given away.

There are inexpensive copying devices to fit most cameras, ranging from extension tubes to close-up filters that fit over the lens of the camera. Ask at your local camera store. To simplify things even further, make your copies on color-print film so that you wind up with album-sized prints.

Little Decorative Dolls Represent Heritage

These little dolls are great decorating items because they're inexpensive, unusual, and represent our heritage (early settlers fashioned them after Indian cornhusk dolls). Use doll heads, hands, and feet along with cornhusk bodies to create this adorable grandma & grandpa pair. All the materials you'll use are available at your local hobby shop . . . even packaged cornhusks should you need them!

Kids enjoy creating their own dolls for holiday display. Witches for Halloween, elves for St. Patrick's Day, bunnies for Easter and more. Clancey the Clown would love to appear at your next child's birthday party. And how about a pink angel for your tree at Christmas time?

This 15-page instruction booklet includes step-by-step pictures and directions for each character. You will even learn how to wrap the cornhusks to form a skirt or an overblouse.

Textured Paint Covers Small Plaster Cracks

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — The wall plaster of one of our rooms has a number of cracks in it. I have been told that I can avoid patching them if I use a textured paint. Is this true? Also, what can you tell me about the kind of paint?

A. — Textured paints will cover small cracks in plaster, but large cracks or other defects should be patched first no matter what kind of paint is used. So-called sand or other texture paints create interesting walls, since you can make almost any kind of finish you want, depending on what the paint is applied with and how it is done. In fact, it's a good idea to do some testing on some scrap material. Consider the use of texture brushes, rollers, sponges, bristle brushes and almost anything else you can think of that will produce interesting designs. When you have the effect you want, repeat the process on the walls to be finished.

Q. — I soon will install insulation blankets in the ceiling of our garage so cold air won't go upstairs. I know I have to put the vapor barrier facing upstairs. Do I put them between the floor joists or over them and how do I estimate how much I need?

A. — Put the blankets (or batts) between the joists. To know how much insulation you will need, multiply the length of the area to be covered by the width. If the joists are 16 inches apart, multiply by .90. If they are 24 inches apart, multiply by .94. The answer is the number of square feet of insulation you will need.

Q. — Why is insulation given an R number? Does it show how thick the insulation is?

A. — R numbers stand for resistance to heat loss during cold weather and heat gain during warm weather. One brand of insulation might be slightly thinner or thicker than another with the same R number, but they will resist heat flow equally well. Generally, R-22 and R-19 mineral-wool batts will be between 5 and 7 inches thick; R-13 blankets 3½ to 3⅝ inches; R-11, 3 to 4 inches.

(Where and how to insulate are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Save Money by Insulating," available by sending 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Dallas City Hall May Be Violator

DALLAS (AP) — The first victim of a brouhaha over the city's sign ordinance may be the City of Dallas seal that illegally decorates the front of the Dallas City Hall.

A consultant hired to review the city's sign code said Tuesday that the seal is too close to the right of way and too large to comply with the ordinance.

Kevin Lynch, whose company spent 10 months studying the ordinance, said the city should never have been granted permission to install the seal at its present location.

Councilman Steve Bartlett, who favors easing the ordinance, quickly used the seal as an example to prove his point.

"Do you see anything about the location of the city seal that is disruptive to traffic?" he asked Lynch.

Patchwork Quilts Now Sought At Markets Across Country

Quilts today are much more than bed beautifiers. From its humble origin as a simple and practical bed covering, the applique or patchwork quilt has risen in social stature and is now an eagerly sought-after item in many fine arts and antiques markets across the country.

Early day quilters sought inspiration for their patterns in familiar everyday objects and events, and for many years quilters relied on those design ideas and patterns from the past. However, with the recent revival of interest in crafts, needlework is again considered an art form and modern-day quilters search ever farther afield for new designs.

Contemporary quilt designers have created magnificent works of hand-stitched art on such subjects as traffic lights and tall buildings. More often than not, the quilters of today may never intend for their applique or quilted piece to rest quietly upon a bed, but rather view it as an innovative wall hanging.

Before you create a quilt of your own design, you may first want to try a variation of a traditional pattern. It's a good way to learn basic design principles and quilting techniques. Also, for many novice quilters the first project seems a huge task. Begin with a small or simple project, a mini-quilt or wall-hanging, perhaps.

Look to the world around for inspiration. Enlarge a child's drawing or browse through the pages of a coloring book for your first design. It's best to invest in a basic "how-to" book on quilting and follow it closely in your initial efforts. Or seek out a commercial pattern with detailed step-by-step instructions and add your own personal touches.

The quilted stand-in for a brass headboard and whimsical window landscape here are the type of projects both beginners and more experienced quilters alike will enjoy. The easty-to-follow patterns and instructions allow the novice to try a new craft with rave results and challenge the pro in the choice of fabrics and innovative skills. When completed, the quilted brass headboard measures 45 inches square and the window scene is 30 by 45 inches.

For the Brass Bed quilt, order Pattern No. 01007 for $3.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling. Order Pattern No. 01008 for Window quilt for $4.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to pay and collect sale tax in Texas.

New Stamps Honor Aviation Pioneer Wiley Post

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Aviation pioneer Wiley Post, who was killed in a 1935 plane crash with humorist Will Rogers, is honored with a pair of 25-cent international airmail stamps scheduled for issuance Nov. 20. First-day site will be Oklahoma City.

Post received worldwide acclaim for making record flights, for scientific research and for his design of a pressure suit with helmet for high-altitude flights.

The double stamps are vertical. Both designs feature likenesses of Post and views of his famous plane, the "Winnie May." The lower stamp shows Post wearing the altitude suit and holding the helmet he had designed. In three lines of blue type at the top of each stamp is "Wiley Post Aviation Pioneer." Across the bottom in one line is "US Airmail 25 cents."

The new stamps are the third issue in a Pioneer Aviation Series of international airmail stamps which began with the Wright Brothers set of 1978 and continued with the Octave Chanute pair this year.

Wiley Post was born Nov. 22, 1898, in Grand Saline, Texas, but moved to Maysville, Okla., in 1907 and considered that as his hometown. He lost the sight of his left eye as a young man working in the oil fields of Oklahoma, but was determined to fly and strengthened his right eye to meet the flying requirements.

He achieved national prominence by winning the Los Angeles to Chicago Air Derby in 1930, flying the "Winnie May." The following year he flew around the world with Harold Gatty. In 1934 he successfully penetrated the stratosphere, wearing a pressure suit he had designed which has been called "the world's first practical pressurized suit — an important step on the road to outer space."

On Aug. 6, 1935, Post and his friend, Will Rogers, flew from Seattle to Fairbanks, Alaska. From Fairbanks they headed for Point Barrow and were only 15 miles from their destination when they were killed in an accident on Aug. 15.

Collectors may order their first-day covers by following the usual two procedures.

You may purchase the stamps from your local post office and affix them to your own envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed and peelable, return-address labels are recommended. No remittance is required. Forward your envelope to: "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73125." It must be postmarked no later than Dec. 5.

Should you prefer the USPS to affix the stamps, follow the same method but enclose a remittance in the form of a money order of 25 cents per stamp. Address the outer envelope to: "Wiley Post Stamps, Postmaster, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73215" prior to Dec. 5.

Last week we mentioned the U.S. pair of Christmas stamps soon to be released. On this Yule note, the International Stamp Collectors Society has prepared a special Christmas-souvenir card. Appearing on the card will be the two new 1979 Christmas issues, the first of this country's Christmas stamps (1962), the 1969 Currier and Ives stamps plus six foreign Christmas adhesives. Each of the new Christmas stamps will carry a first day of issue cancellation, dated Oct. 18. The cards measure 6 by 9 inches. They are available at $4.95 each from: "Christmas, International Stamp Collectors Society, 6253 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

HOW TO DO IT

Regilding Of Old Book Pages Possible

Q. I have several old volumes, bound in leather, which have the top and one edge of the pages gilded. I want to regild these if possible. How is this done? Manley Post, Pittsburgh.

A. By a professional bookbinder, if your books are heirlooms or otherwise valuable. But if the volumes are not so choice, you might try this method: Protect the edges of the book and binding with masking tape, clamp the book between two pieces of plywood and spray the exposed edges with gold paint, the type sold in aerosol cans.

Q. I have a sectional bookcase of the type seen in offices some years ago. One door lacks the fixture, or guide. I can find no name of the maker on the case. Is there some way to fix this door so it will open easily and without jamming? O.N., Md.

A. It should be possible to duplicate the guide, assuming that the other sections of the case have the door guides, one of which you could use as a pattern. Usually these are of 3/8 X 1-16 in. flat steel, and typically, two pieces of a given length are riveted together at the approximate center. One piece is usually drilled near the end to take a small staple which is driven into the back of the compartment, permitting this piece to pivot. The opposite end of this member is bent to a long radius and passed through a screw eye turned into the back face of the top rail of the door. The second member has both ends bent to a long radius. These bent ends also pass through screw eyes, one turned into the back of the compartment, the other into the the back of the top rail of the door. The location of the members in relation to the door, the location of the screw eyes and the staple, and the radius of the bends all must be determined from one of the original guides. The bends should be easy to make in a vice if you are careful not to kink the material.

Q. I planted everbearing strawberries a year ago on a "mound" or "tower." I got one crop this spring but there are no signs of a second. The plants don't look too healthy to me, but I'm no green thumb. I keep them watered regularly and pull out all invading weeds and grasses. What might be wrong? C.O., Ala.

A. Perhaps you're a bit too anxious and the plants are holding out on you. Also I'm not sure what you mean by "mound" and "tower." First, are you sure you have everbearing plants? If so, there could be other causes for their lack of cooperatiion. By this time in your locality you should have a second "set" of blossoms. But if berry production doesn't follow, the causes could be lack of proper soil — strawberries like a loose, airy loam — a lack of soil fertility, improper or inadequate watering, insufficient sunlight or improper planting. Strawberry plants should be set at proper depth — with the crown, or bud, above the surface and the root spread a little, but entirely below the surface.

If you check these possibilities, the chances are you will isolate a cause. However, you may be expecting too much of your plants too soon. Give them a little more time.

Q. I want to locate several furring strips under insulated planking in order to anchor screws which are to hold a wall cabinet. I tried tapping with a hammer but was not successful. Is there any other way you know of to locate the strips with some certainty? A.D., Me.

A. If the planks are nailed to the strips — and generally they are — a permanent magnet will usually "draw" when it passes a nail. Of course, you have to use a fairly strong magnet as otherwise you cannot "sense" the nail. Start at any convenient point on the wall and move the magnet slowly over the surface, keeping it in very light contact with the wall. It's likely you will have to cover a considerable area before locating a nail. When you do, mark the point very lightly with a soft lead pencil; you can erase the mark after it has served its purpose. Then move the magnet horizontally about 16 in., locate the nails in the next stud and mark its location. Continue in this manner until you've located as many studs as necesssary.

Another method is to drive an ordinary pin through the planks until you strike a strip. If you use care to tap the pin straight, you won't deface the planks. A light pressure over the hole with a fingertip will close it so that it is not noticeable, even on close examination.

Oil Price Hike May Hurt Fed's Inflation Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another sharp price rise by OPEC could seriously damage the Federal Reserve Board's efforts to dampen inflation, warns board member Emmett J. Rice.

The board's tight-money policies should convince the oil producing cartel that it "isn't necessary to continue raising prices," Rice said Thursday in an interview.

OPEC nations have claimed that past price increases were needed because inflation was eroding the dollar's value.

Earlier this week, Kuwait ad Mexico increased their crude oil prices, generating concern about price leapfrogging by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Mexico is not an OPEC member

Rice also said:

—"People should not look for loopholes" in the board's sweeping anti-inflation steps. "There are no loopholes. As long as the inflation rate stays in the range it is in today, board policy will have to remain very restrictive."

—The board's actions would particularly hurt minorities, the elderly, and blue-collar workers. "But if we didn't act, the same group of people would be worse off further down the road."

—Balancing the budget within the next year or two may not be necessary, but seriously heading in that direction is crucial to the inflation battle.

Rice, recently appointed to the board, joined his six colleagues Saturday in a unanimous vote to increase the Fed bank lending rate from 11 percent to 12 percent and to dramatically alter the way it controls the availability of money and credit.

"We are determined to do all we can to break the inflationary psychology," he said, repeating a theme made by board chairman Paul Volcker.

Rice said oil price increases contribute heavily to this expectation, creating a "vicious cycle" that could jeopardize the board's new initiatives.

"To the extent you can dampen inflation, you can much better dampen the pressure for oil price increases," he said.

OPEC oil ministers meet in Caracas, Venezuala in December.

Since the cartel raised the average price of oil from $17 to $21.50 a barrel in July, OPEC revenues have declined in real terms by about 5 percent because of the dollar's decline, say some OPEC officials.

OPEC currently has a $23.50 price ceiling.

Rice said he hopes OPEC nations will wait to see the impact of the board's anti-inflationary actions.

"To the extent the policy is successful," he said, "it should reduce the pressure for increased oil prices."

A "big increase" in oil prices "could cause an awful lot of damage," he added.

Rice said Americans must be patient in coming months and ride out the impact of the board's tight money policies, which some economists believe will deepen an anticipated recession.

"I have to emphasize that to the extent we are not successful (in dampening inflation), the worse it will be later on" for those that can least afford it, he said.

"These things take time. It is not realistic to expect overnight results," he cautioned.

Earlier Thursday, another board member said recovery from an expected recession should be purposely slow to avoid refueling inflation.

API Says Fuel Stockpile Nearing Barrel Target

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Petroleum Institute says the nation's stocks of home heating oil and other distillate fuels reached 230.8 million barrels last week — less than 10 million barrels short of President Carter's 240 million barrel target for Oct. 31.

Other published reports said Energy Department statistics show the oil industry already has stockpiled 240 million barrels of distillate, used for home heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene.

Oil industry analysts, however, said government statistics normally run higher than the API figures, which are based solely on supplies in primary storage before they move out to the distributor and the consumer.

The DOE calculates inventories by taking into account fuel in primary storage, the dealer's tank and the consumer's home, analysts said.

After home heating oil stocks plummeted to record lows last spring, President Carter urged the oil industry to rebuild inventories to 240 million barrels by Oct. 31 to insure adequate supplies for the winter.

In the week ending Oct. 5, distillate stocks rose by 3.8 million barrels to 230.8 million barrels, according to the API, the oil industry trade association. A year ago refiners had 217.6 million barrels of distillate in stock.

Distillate stocks surged by a record 8.5 million barrels two weeks ago after increasing by an average of 6 million barrels for more than a month.

Solar House Designer Thankful To Carter For $10,000 Grant

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — John Craig says he has President Carter to thank for a $10,000 check he's getting from the federal government to help build his energy-saving solar house.

Craig, 24, learned Thursday from the Department of Energy the check will be in the mail within 30 days. The money is for him to use to complete drawings for the prototype of his passive solar home design.

News of the grant came six weeks after Craig asked Carter for help at a town meeting in Tampa — and two days before Democratic caucuses around the state where Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., are competing for delegates to the state convention next month.

"If it wasn't for President Carter and the town hall meeting I feel government wouldn't have dealt with this at all," Craig said. "I'm very happy the president went as far as he did. But I'm disappointed, too."

Craig told energy officials he needed $48,000 to complete the first phase of his estimated $150,000 project. The $10,000, he says, will only cover cost of the drawings.

"The Department of Energy said we were lucky in getting $10,000 in 30 days — that usually it takes 12 months because of red tape," Craig said. "Why can't they eliminate the red tape for people like me?"

On Saturday, Florida Democrats will elect 879 delegates, with no presidential affiliations, to attend the party's state convention Nov. 16-18. At the convention, they and 838 other delegates picked by party leaders and elected officials will vote in a non-binding straw poll on presidential hopefuls.

The poll has no actual significance, since Florida's delegates to the Democratic National Convention will be chosen in a primary next March 11. But it is expected to have some psychological effect.

Craig's home county — Hillsborough — is considered a key battleground for central Florida. North Florida is generally thought to be in the Carter camp and South Florida in the Kennedy column.

White House press secretary Jody Powell has been quoted as acknowledging reports government agencies were directed to speed up federal grants earmarked for Florida.

In recent weeks, the federal government has announced grants of $31 million for housing for the elderly across the state and $20 million for public housing projects in Miami and a loan guarantee for an electrical co-op in the town of Palatka.

In Washington, Energy Department officials said the $10,000 grant had received priority handling because of Carter's personal assurance to Craig and not because of the approaching caucuses.

Clark Promises Oil Pipeline Talks

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark promises to discuss the routing of a proposed Alaskan oil pipeline when President Carter visits Canada Nov. 9-10.

It will be the first visit by a U.S. president to Canada in seven years, and energy and environmental issues are expected to dominate the talks.

Clark said he will ask Carter to address a joint session of Parliament during his stay.

Clark told Parliament Thursday in announcing the visit he would consider asking Carter to extend the deadline for selecting one of several competing U.S. and Canadian applications to move Alaskan oil south to the lower 48 states.

But in Washington U.S. officials doubted the president would agree to the delay because of the importance of moving the oil, particularly to the Midwest states.

Carter is to recommend to Congress by Dec. 6 which proposal he favors. There are signs of growing support for an all-American route, using tankers, over competing Canadian proposals.

The front-runner in the United States is the northern tier proposal that would move oil south by tanker along Canada's West Coast to Port Angeles, Wash., from where it would be piped 1,600 miles inland.

Clark's government supports an all-land route proposed by Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. of Calgary to pipe Alaskan oil through the Yukon, British Columbia and Alberta to the lower 48 states.

The Canadian announcement of support last month followed a request from the United States for Canada to state its preference. Canada says its aim is to minimize risk of environmental damage on the West Coast from oil tanker traffic.

A second Canadian application is from Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. of Vancouver. The firm proposes to pipe oil transported by tanker to a port in Washington state to hook up with existing facilities in Alberta.

The government has made no comment on the Trans Mountain bid. Both applications are before the National Energy Board and hearings are not expected to conclude much before Carter's Dec. 6 deadline.

Other bilateral energy issues include progess on the $14 billion natural gas pipeline. The project is already two years behind schedule, due mainly to regulatory delays in the United States. Carter pledged this summer to try and cut red tape to speed construction.

Lurking on the sidelines is the potentially explosive issue of a continental energy policy. Some U.S. political leaders have been urging such a policy which would give the U.S. freer access to Canadian resources. But Canadian leaders have gone out of their way to dismiss the idea.

Official Says Cities Losing Federal Jobs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal jobs are abandoning the central cities of New York, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Houston and Los Angeles for their surrounding suburban areas, says city Comptroller Harrison Goldin.

Goldin, detailing the loss in a letter Thursday to President Carter, said the flight of federal jobs "fly directly in the face of President Carter's stated policy" to try to keep them in inner cities.

Carter issued a 1978 directive instructing federal agencies to "encourage the location of federal facilities in urban areas," the comptroller said. Since then, however, Goldin said the flight has continued.

New York was hardest hit of the six cities, he said, losing 5,100 federal jobs from 1974 to 1978. Chicago was next, with 3,083 job losses in the same period, followed by Boston with 2,803, Houston with 2,547, Los Angeles with 1,184 and Detroit with 1,077.

In the 1974-1978 period, he said, total federal employment levels rose 29,000 to 2,758,000.

Goldin said figures for 1979 were only available for the first four months of the year. In that time, he said, federal employment as a whole increased by 71,000 jobs, while New York City lost 400 federal jobs during the four-month period.

Goldin said he could not cite specifically the development of any facilities that had contributed to the inner city job losses.

Royal Assent was given to the Act of Union in 1840 to unite Upper and Lower Canada under a single government.

POPE AND NUNS — Nuns stretched out their hands to touch the hand of Pope John Paul II as he stood on an open vehicle upon his arrival in St. Peter's Square at Vatican City in Rome for his general audience this week. This was the first one following the pope's nine-day trip to Ireland and the United States. During his speech, the pontiff told the Roman Catholic nuns to be "sensible and illuminated mothers and never irritated or embittered." (AP Laserphoto)

Church Official Favors More Action On Unity

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

The movement toward church unity has come to the point where concrete actions in addition to theological dialogue are called for, according to a top World Council of Churches official.

"On the basis of the theological work already done, countless steps could even now be taken towards the goal of visible unity," said Dr. Lukas Vischer, head of the WCC's Faith and Order Commission.

He said theological agreements once considered impossible 'are presented today as if they had been obvious for a long time."

"But church structures seem incapable of absorbing them," he added. "They richochet off the churches as they are and even if they do manage to penetrate beneath the surface they are sooner or later expelled as if they were some dangerous virus."

Vischer said the need for the churches today, if they are to remain serious about the oft-professed goal of visible unity, is to enter "a common process of decision making."

"But the existing structures are so difficult to move they instinctively shrink back from this this step," he said.

Vischer told his audience that the first step in the process would be to move toward what he called "conciliar fellowship," meaning that the churches will visibly be one "when they are in a position to hold a council which is recognized by all churches in all places."

He cited four requirements for such a council to take place:

— the explicit cancellation of the condemnations churches have pronounced on one another in the past.

— the ability to celebrate the eucharist or communion together.

— the ability to consult together and make agreed decisions together.

Vischer noted that the different structural forms of the church — hierarchical, synodical, congregational — pose difficult issues for moving into a shared decision-making process.

But he said they could tackle with "greater determination" the task of speaking together.

"The churches are still inclined to speak separately, even where they are really in agreement," he said.

He cited as an example Pope John Paul II's first encyclical, "Redeemer of Man," issued shortly after the new pontiff was elected.

Much of what the encyclical says about the the relationship of the gospel to men and women in the contemporary world, he said, "can be said and has been said by other churches as well."

"It could be said by them together today, even if saying it together requires a far greater effort," he said.

At the same time, Vischer stressed that the theological agreements already reached needed to be taken to the parish and congregational level.

"Not much progress will be made if the churches want to continue making decisions in their own different ways," he said. "They will constantly find themselves confronted with the fact that the congregations are not yet ready for union and will then immediately use this as an excuse for inaction.'

Only when the local congregation is treated as a mature partner by all the churches, he said, will the "log jam" of theological agreements be broken and be set moving forward toward visible unity again.

Movie Heralded As Authentic Rendition On Life Of Jesus

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most authentic motion pictures ever made on the life of Christ is being released next Friday, Oct. 19, in 600 cities in the Southern and Western parts of the United States.

It's to open elsewhere later, with blanket showings by next Easter.

Called simply "Jesus," it is a tightly paced, gripping and exactingly accurate film rendition of the New Testament book of Luke.

"A masterpiece," says Roman Catholic Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, one-time famed television preacher and author of numerous books on Jesus and the historical-cultural atmosphere in which he lived.

The movie, produced at a cost of $6 million by the Genesis Project and being distributed by Warner Brothers, sticks precisely to the Scriptural dialogue and action as well as to historical settings.

"The Bible comes alive and walks into the 20th century," says the Rev. Buckner Fanning of San Antonio's Trinity Baptist Church.

Unlike other films about Jesus which have toned down scriptural material, often subordinating substance and mystery to spectacle, the new one stays with the original script, and does it with dramatic impact.

"A first century 'docu-drama'," noted British producer John Heyman calls it. "It is realistic and sometimes grubby. Unlike other film versions, our temple has sheep dung and garbage in the courtyard, because that is the way it was.

"Jesus and the disciples did not walk around in pristine robes with halos over their heads. When you see Christ in this film, you can believe that he is a man who spent 18 years in a carpenter shop before he started his ministry.

"None of the reverence and respect have been sacrificed but we are dealing with a Jesus who is strong and has muscles. He is a man who can smile and laugh and share his emotions with people."

Five years of research by archaeologists and historians went into the production, with special workshops set up to turn out accurate replicas of first century pottery, clothes and artifacts, such as the alabaster flask used by the woman who anointed Jesus' feet.

The film was made in Israel with an almost entirely Israeli cast of 5,000, and with villages, temple, synagogues and other settings constructed to match first century styles.

The lead role of Jesus, however, is played by British actor Brian Deacon, who Heyman says was chosen because he "so simply and effortlessly" portrayed the Jesus described in Luke.

Luke, the only non-Jewish author in the entire Bible, was a gentile physician and historian who accompanied the missionary-apostle Paul on his travels and who himself investigated the Jesus events first-hand before writing his book.

It is considered by many the most complete, literary account of Jesus' life among the four gospels.

The movie dialogue is taken straight from Luke's account, as well as the miracles, the crucifixion and bodily resurrection, which are presented as fact, not symbol.

Today's English Version of the Bible is used, except for some particularly familiar passages, such as the Lord's Prayer and the Beatitudes, for which the King James version is used.

The Genesis Project which produced the film is a 20-year undertaking to render the entire Bible into film, the "New Media Bible." Two parts, dealing with books of Genesis and Luke, are now complete.

More than 1,000 subscribers of 35 denominations are using the films in educational work as they come out.

Simultaneously with general release of the two-hour movie, a book based on the research, "Jesus, His Life and Times," with color illustrations from the movie, is being issued by two publishing houses, Fleming H. Revell Company and William Morrow.

Half the profits from North American showings of the movie will be used for mobile projection units to show it in remote areas abroad, with the rest to help finance continuing work of the Genesis Project.

Legislators Ponder Bill Honoring King

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee approved a bill this week that would honor the slain civil rights leader on his Jan. 15 birthday. Similar legislation is being considered by the Senate.

Professor Raps U.S. Human Rights Efforts

WASHINGTON (Special) — The United States could transform the face of the earth for the benefit of human society if it spent its energy toward human rights instead of speeches about human rights, according to a Notre Dame professor.

John J. Gilligan, former Ohio governor and former administrator of the Agency for International Development, told participants at a conference on "The Church, the State and Human Rights" in Washington that "we lost more on the gambling tables in Las Vegas last year than we spent to feed the hungry in other nations."

That kind of commitment to Third World development, in light of America's claims of devotion to the starving, brings only curled lips of contempt from starving people, said Gilligan, who currently holds the Thomas A. White Chair of Law and Public Policy at Notre Dame University.

"Our effort to advance the cause of human rights would be more convincing and more effective if we were to back our words with deeds," said Gilligan, "and if we were as ready to take the lead in devoting our resources to the task of global development as we are to take the lead in making speeches about human rights."

Gilligan told the primarily Baptist participants that the U.S. is spending less than one-fourth of 1 percent of its gross national product to help Third World nations develop. Thirty years ago, the U.S. devoted 3 percent of its GNP to help rebuild Europe, he said.

Even when help is given, Gilligan said, westerners too often believe that the rest of the world wants to be just like industrialized nations of the west.

"It must not be forgotten," he said, "that to many millions of people in Asia, Africa and Latin America...the industrialized countries still represent the awful and disfiguring forces of imperialism, colonialism, racism and militarism."

Gilligan told participants in the conference, held in conjunction with the 40th anniversary of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, that government policy toward the Third World should be three-pronged — to help nations feed themselves; to assist them in developing educational systems; and to help them put together health programs.

He called on the church to reaffirm that all of mankind is created in the image of God and "that men are no less human because they spring from a different race, reside in another part of the world or profess another religion."

"We are further taught...that to mistreat or abuse another human being is to so treat Christ himself."

He indicated that the will of a nation can be discerned in the expenditures on human resources. He said the main economic competitors of the U.S. are Japan and West Germany, which the U.S. forbade to re-arm after World War II.

Consequently, they devoted their resources to technological advancement while the U.S. continued to pour its resources into the maintenance of a gigantic military machine.

SWEET COMFORT BAND

Breakaway Programs Scheduled

Lubbock Youth for Christ and its Campus Life clubs will sponsor special programs Monday and Tuesday as part of Breakaway '79. The programs will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Highland Baptist Church, 34th Street and Quaker Avenue.

Mark McBrayer, director of the local Youth for Christ program, announced that the Sweet Comfort Band from Riverside, Calif., will play at both meetings. The group is among the top Christian rock bands in the country and will come to Lubbock as part of a tour of southern states.

A special guest speaker, Greg Laurie, also from California, will conclude each evening's program.

McBrayer described Breakaway '79 as a mixture of music, media and speaking. Although this is the first time for such a program in Lubbock, McBrayer said they are popular events in Youth for Christ programs all over the United States.

Lubbock Youth for Christ operates under a local board of directors and is part of Youth for Christ International.

Grant Funds Ministry Training Program

AUSTIN (Special) — The Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwast here will be headquarters for a major program for training for ministry among Mexican-Americans, to be made possible through a $750,000 grant from the Brown Foundation, Inc. of Houston.

Receipt of the grant was announced recently during the 66th General Convention of the Episcopal Church by the Most Rev. John M. Allin, presiding bishop, and Paul N. Howell of Houston, national chairman of the church's Venture in Mission program.

The Brown Foundation has long been known for its generous support of charitable works, mostly in the field of higher education and specialized ministries to handicapped people.

"This substantial and generous grant is further evidence of the commitment of the Episcopal Church to strengthen its minority ministries through the Venture in Mission program," Bishop Allin said.

The Very Rev. Gordon T. Charlton Jr, dean of the Seminary of the Southwest,said, "I am, of course, delighted that the Brown Foundation has agreed to support this imaginative and important program.

"I see it not only benefiting the Seminary of the Southwest, but as a sign of commitment to the Hispanic ministry of the Episcopal Church and to the vital role of the accredited seminaries in the church's mission."

The Training for Ministry Among Mexican-Americans program was proposed to the national Venture in Mission program by the Church's Seventh Province, made up of 11 Episcopal dioceses in the Southwest.

The Rt. Rev. A. Donald Davies, president of the Seventh Province and Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Dallas, said "We are giving high priority to our work in ministry with Mexican-Americans. We realize that we must act at once if we are to reach this rapidly growing community."

Although still in the planning stages, it is anticipated that the new program will provide linguistic, cultural and ministerial training, as well as personnel and resources for the development of congregations.

There are now 20 million Mexican-Americans in the United States. It is estimated that within 10 years they will comprise the largest minority group in the nation.

FAMILY WEEKLY

TV's Wacky, Wild, Wonderful Taxi

What's different about television's smash hit, Taxi? It's not the run-of-the-mill sitcom so commonplace throughout the channels. Its strength lies in plotting that allows the characters to grow and develop, episode by episode. Its producers, who come proven from The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Rhoda and Phyllis, have given Taxi the best of their experience and talents. Marilu Henner is the only woman (a taxi driver) on the show that includes Judd Hirsch, Tony Danza, Danny De Vito and Jeff Conaway. Read about their diverse characterizations in a "Grand Hotel" of television entertainment this week in FAMILY WEEKLY.

Glowing Years

It was their Golden Anniversary. And, as Granddad placed his arm around Grandmother he said, "The years have been good to us."

"You have been good to the years," someone replied.

What a perfect description of their marriage. They cherished each day and filled it with love. They faced every week as a new adventure in useful living. They counted the months with patience and crowned them with firm commitment. They made the years glow with their confident trust in God.

Long after our grandparents are gone, the years will still glow with the faith they kindled in a dozen other hearts.

Experts Claim U.S. To Stop Gold Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some gold experts are predicting the Treasury Department may end or at least suspend its monthly gold sale after next month.

The Treasury sells 750,000 ounces of gold each month, but there is growing speculation it may hold future sales at its own discretion. Many gold officials believe the sales feed rampant speculation.

'CAT' Scanner Praised By Medical Profession

NEW YORK (AP) — An X-ray technique that enables man to peer more clearly and safely than ever into the body has won eager acceptance from the U.S. medical profession, and now has won a Nobel Prize for its developers.

The technique, introduced in this country six years ago, involves the use of a machine called a "CAT" — for computer assisted tomography — scanner. More than 1,300 of the machines have been installed in hospitals and doctors' offices.

The groundwork for the technique was developed in separate efforts by physicist Allan M. Cormack of Tufts University in Medford, Mass., and Godfrey Newbold Hounsfield, a research engineer with the British firm EMI. Cormack, 55, and Hounsfield, 60, were awarded the Nobel Prize for medicine Thursday and will share a record $190,000 award.

The cost of installing the machine, estimated at $500,000 each, is passed along in the form of higher hospital bills and health insurance premiums.

The cost to patients is about $245 for a head scan and $275 for a body scan, including radiologist's fee.

Radiologists say the CAT scanner revolutionized their practice. "Modern neurology and neurosurgery couldn't be done without it," said Dr. Ronald Evens, head of the Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology at Washington University in St. Louis.

But critics say hospitals have rushed to buy more CAT scanners than they need, and that the equipment will soon be outmoded.

"The question is, are we willing to pay a large amount of money to find a few medical conditions. I think we're spending money that could be better spent elsewhere," said Dr. David Bata, managr of health programs for the Office of Technology Assessment of Congress.

Banta said a survey he conducted in February found that 227 machines were owned by private U.S. doctors — more, he said, than the total number installed in any other country in the world.

He said there's also concern that CAT scanners, although they give about the same radiation dose as a normal X-ray, may boost the total dose to the population, pushing up the likelihood of cancer.

To buy a scanner, a hospital needs the approval of its regional health planning agency. Since March, these federally funded agencies have been under instructions not to allow a new scanner unless the hospital will perform more than 2,500 scans a year.

But machines already in use across the country perform an average of only 1,500 to 2,000 scans a year, Banta said.

Evens said he believed the CAT scans would help pay for themselves by replacing other kinds of diagnosis. He predicted that the medical value of the machines would eventually override any objection to their cost or proliferation.

The machine uses a rotating X-ray machine that scans a cross-section of the body through all angles. The electronic information produced is used by a computer which compiles a detailed picture, displayed on a television screen, of the "slice" of the body being examined.

RECORD COLLECTION FOR SALE — One of the largest private record collections in the world, conservatively valued at $750,000 to $1 million, is about to be sold. The collection is the lifetime accumulation of the late Verne Todd who died three years ago at the age of 83. Todd had filled the entire basement and garage of his Seattle home with the estimated 250,000 recordings. Todd's sons, Verne, left, Judson, right, and John and his daughter, Virginia, hope the collection can be purchased intact by a university that will make the music available to the public. Charges Still Stand Against Bert Lance ATLANTA (AP) — A federal magistrate has refused to throw out bank fraud charges against former budget director Bert Lance, recommending instead a Jan. 14 trial date.

Magistrate Allen L. Chancey Jr. filed Thursday his first rulings on part of a thick pack of motions filed by Lance and three co-defendants. Chancey's decisions can be overruled by U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye, who has been assigned to preside at the trial.

Chancey rejected a motion by defendants Thomas M. Mitchell and H. Jackson Mullins for dismissal of the case for violation of the federal Speedy Trial Act.

The magistrate denied a motion asking that Moye, the chief judge in the northern district of Georgia, be replaced by another judge with more time to devote to the case.

Chancey also recommended that the case be designated "complex," which would exempt it from the Speedy Trial Act's restrictions.

Government attorneys say it will take at least two months to present their case alleging that Lance, Mitchell, Mullins and Richard Carr violated and conspired to violate federal banking laws when they arranged loans to themselves, their families and friends.

Mitchell was Lance's trustee during the eight months that Lance was director of the Office of Management and Budget. Lance resigned in September 1977 amid controversy about his banking practices. Mullins was a Calhoun druggist and old friend of Lance's. Carr was president of a bank in Ringgold, Ga.

If the trial begins as scheduled in mid-January, news reports of the trial of Lance, one of President Carter's close friends and high appointees, will extend well into the presidential primary season.

Most of the transactions involve two banks Lance headed before going to Washington: First Calhoun National Bank in Calhoun, Ga., and the National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta.

After filing his recommendations, Chancey conducted the first hearing on pre-trial motions in the Lance case, but deferred a decision. Attorneys for all sides presented arguments on defense motions asking for hundreds of clarifications and explanations of the charges in the indictment.

Voluminous Record Collection Valued At Almost $1 Million

SEATTLE (AP) — From Enrico Caruso to Elvis Presley, Verne Todd's voluminous record collection filled every shelf in his garage and basement and spilled over onto the floor.

By the time he died three years ago at 83, Todd had accumulated one of the world's largest record collections — about 250,000 recordings, of all types of music, that may be worth $750,000 to $1 million.

"I sometimes wondered at my father's taste in music," said Judson Todd, riffling through a pile of Elvis Presley 45 rpm records. "But he'd always say, 'Caruso wasn't the only singer in the world, you know.'"

The collection's worth will be determined when it is sold sometime "in the immediate future," hopefully to a single buyer, Judson Todd said Thursday.

He said the family was negotiating with three prospective buyers, who he declined to name. Todd's sons, Judson, Verne and John, and his daughter, Virginia, hope the collection is bought intact by a university that will make it available to the public.

Narrow aisles in the basement are stacked floor to ceiling with 78 rpm discs, thick old Edisons, 8-inch foreign platters and 4-inch Little Wonders that sold for a dime.

Cabinets contain 10,000 cylinder records, some made from beeswax. Rooms are crammed with albums, Armed Forces Radio Service recordings and 45s in original jackets.

Todd, founder of the Todd Chemical Co., collected records incessantly for 45 years, starting when an aunt and uncle gave him an old Edison cylinder record player in 1907.

He enjoyed mixing artists on the "Antiquarian Discotheque" show he used to do weekly on radio. A Yogi Yorgensen tune would be followed by Kate Smith, Les Paul, Prince's Band, the Hoosier Hotshots or Peggy Lee.

He also loved playing records into the wee hours of the morning, often inviting friends and relatives for basement music parties.

Answers Sought In Balloon Tragedy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Federal investigators say it will take at least a month to learn the cause of the fiery crash of a hot-air balloon that killed a California man and woman.

Verlin Tranter of the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver was called in Thursday to coordinate the investigation.

The victims plunged to their deaths Wednesday while flying over the 10,378-foot-high Sandia Mountains in an attempt one balloonist described as "foolhardy."

James Valentine, an investigator with the local Federal Aviation Administration office, said the investigation would take at least a month, and that tests, such as checking the balloon fabric for air worthiness, will probably be done in Denver.

Valentine told balloonist Alfred K. Bacon that it was "stupidity" for the 20 balloonists in the mountain flight to make the attempt in such windy conditions. But Valentine declined to comment on the flight to reporters.

The balloon, "Jonathan Livingston Seagull II," encountered a sudden shift in winds while at an altitude of 1,500 to 2,000 feet.

Winds over the mountains just east of Albuquerque were reported at about 30 mph at the time of the flight.

Witnesses said the balloon collapsed and was ignited by its propane burner. The balloon crashed in flames behind a ridge near a picnic area as about 100 persons watched in horror.

The dead were identified as Richard Temple, 31, of Cucamonga, Calif., and Cathy Wylie, 35, of Palmdale, Calif.

Father Wants To Adopt Loving Grandparents

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Wanted: One grandmother, about 5-foot-4, 125 pounds, gray hair and glasses.

And it might be nice if grandfather were "bald-headed and a little porky," says Bob Gohl, who is advertising in the Denver Post for grandparents for his 4-year-old daughter, Melissa.

"I'm a father, not a grandfather," explained Gohl, 44. "I can give her all the affection in the world — that's easy. What I'm saying is kids need someone they can call grandfather and grandmother. It's an image, is it not?"

Although he has envisioned prospective grandparents for his daughter "to adopt," Gohl said Thursday he won't mind if they don't match that description. The advertisement he placed merely states: "Grandparents Wanted for Adoption."

What he is really after, said Gohl, a furniture-store owner from this community just east of Denver, is an "everyday American sort of couple" who will visit Melissa regularly to provide a particular kind of warmth."

Gohl said his parents died when he was young, and his wife, who left him shortly after Melissa was born, is an orphan.

Three couples have responded to the ad, which has run for several days. But Gohl has not made up his mind whom Melissa will adopt.

City Tightens Grip On Money For Home Loans

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Home loans will be almost impossible to obtain in Texas by the end of the year, savings and loan industry officials warned Thursday, but some Lubbock lenders say they already have stopped making any new home loans.

"Money for home loans has been tight in Lubbock for the past six months, it's just getting tighter," said Derrell Jones, president of the Briercroft Savings and Loan Association, who added that his firm was not making any new home loan commitments "until we can make sure we can handle our present ones."

"Actually we've restricted our lending for the past few months," Jones said, "but the recent announcement by the Federal Reserve Board to drive up interest rates has made money even tighter."

The Federal Reserve Board announced Tuesday that the prime interest rate — the rate savings institutions pay to borrow money to lend for mortgages — increased to 14.5 percent. Texas' usury law currently limits mortgage rates to under 12 percent, and lending institutions say it is unprofitable for them to lend mortgage money because they must pay even higher interests rates to borrow.

Charley Pope, executive vice-president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association, said Thursday that his institution has been giving home loans on a limited basis.

"Although we have not cut off home loans at this point, we are considering it because of the high cost of money," said Pope.

Jones explained that his money sources (savings deposits, prepay loans and out of state markets) were drying up and the federal government's tight money policies are making it almost impossible for his institution to make any home loans.

But Jones sees no simple answer to remedying the situation in the near future.

"What the feds are doing is driving up the rates to curb inflation," Jones said. "We'll definitely see higher rates until we win the battle of inflation and who knows how long that will take."

It probably will be the first quarter of next year before we see any change in home loans, he added.

Despite the pessimism of local lenders, the president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors said people still are buying homes.

Darryl Berry contends that even though mortgage money has been hard to get, "business has been good."

"There is still a strong demand for housing, and tight money just causes people to be more creative in their financing," Barry said. Even if savings and loans are reluctant to give out home loans, he noted, home buyers still can use FHA and VA financing and second liens involving the seller.

However, Sonny Arnold, a local Realtor and home builder, says the demand for new houses exists, but there is limited money for financing.

"The only solution is for the state to raise its usury limits or for the federal government to reverse its monetary policy," Arnold said. "We plan to hold our own for another 90 days and see what develops."

Mortgage money is extremely scarce and expensive across the state, says Jerry Knippa, president of the Texas Savings and Loan League in San Antonio.

Knippa said that to remedy the home loan situation, the national market rates must come down or the state's rates go up.

"Until those two rates meet, we are going to have a decline if not a stoppage of home loans," Knippa said.

Texas' usury ceiling is based on recent interest rates on 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds. The rate is 11 percent and will increase to 11.25 percent on Nov. 1, according to the Texas savings and loan commission.

Home loans will be extremely difficult to obtain in Texas under the current usury ceiling, Durward Curlee, executive director of the Texas Savings and Loan League, said.

He said home mortgages will be almost impossible to obtain in Texas by the end of the year unless something occurs to relieve the credit crunch and lower interest rates.

"There'll be some building by people who move into the state with equities to put into a house or who can work out special deals, but it's going to severely decrease home building," Curlee said.

The money shortage will come despite an increase from 11 to 11.25 percent in the maximum lenders in Texas can charge as interest on home mortgage loans, he said.

He said savings and loan institutions cannot borrow at 14.5 percent and lend the money to home buyers at a lower rate.

Steps taken by the Federal Reserve Board to reduce the amount of money in circulation by requiring banks to hold more money in reserve will have almost as serious an impact on lending as the skyrocketing interest rates, Curlee said.

"What they've been doing to this point is raising the cost of money. What they did last weekend, they not only raised the price of money but they took very strong action to reduce the amount of money available."

Curlee said he expects the mortgage situation to be worse than occurred during the 1973-74 recession.

Few Attend Community Funds Meetings

By TRAVIS BROWN and RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The first in a series of neighborhood meetings seeking opinions on how $3.3 million in federal Community Development funds should be spent attracted only a handful of residents to schools in central and east Lubbock Thursday night.

Only three persons showed up at the Wheatley Elementary School cafeteria Thursday night, while five residents attended a similar meeting at Bean Elementary.

More sidewalks and a community center were the top priorities for federal funds recommended by central Lubbock residents at Bean elementary.

At Wheatley, on East 28th Street, one of the three people attending spoke on behalf of Yellowhouse Canyon Addition residents. The other two represented residents who want improvements to public housing in Lubbock.

Residents at both meetings were asked to comment on the proposed uses of funds approved last year by the Community Development Advisory Committee and the City Council.

At the Wheatley-area meeting, Willie Stewart, vice president of the Yellowhouse Canyon Community Association, asked that the federal funds be spent to provide city water and sewer service for the addition, which was annexed to the city this year.

"We need everything out in Yellowhouse Canyon," Stewart said.

Earlier this week, residents of the addition approached the City Council with complaints about the private water system that serves the neighborhood.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram explained that no Community Development funds are targeted to be spent in the Yellowhouse Canyon addition, but that both the City Council and the Community Development Advisory Committee are considering including the addition in the CD program and bumping another project.

D.C. Fair, director of the Housing Authority, asked for federal funds to continue security patrols in the Hub Homes and Green Fair Manor housing projects. "With the security program, Green Fair Manor is a quiet, decent and safe place to live," Fair said.

Fair also asked for funding to landscape grounds at the housing projects, to build sidewalks and to renovate irrigation systems.

During the meeting, Bertram explained that plans for use of CD funds in the Phyllis Wheatley Redevelopment Area include spending $400,000 to continue the city's efforts to buy houses in the area that are substandard and targeted to become sites for light industry.

At the Bean Elementary meeting, resident Letta Stephenson told CD coordinator Vicki Foster that children "in the immediate neighborhood need a community center." She said the nearest center was located across 34th Street, a major thoroughfare most children are not allowed to cross.

Another neighborhood representative, Mary Bragg, requested that the funds be used to continue constructing sidewalks within the area. She said elderly persons living in the area walked daily to maintain their health, but were forced to walk in the streets because no sidewalks existed.

Thursday night's meetings were the first of eight throughout the city. Other meeting dates and their locations are:

Texas Tech Launches Fund-Raising Drive

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal

The wheels are in motion for Texas Tech University to gear up for a fund-raising campaign and interim president Dr. Lawrence Graves is drumming up support by speaking engagements both on and off campus.

His message has been delivered to three groups in two days this week, plus other speeches earlier this fall. Wednesday he addressed a Rotary Club meeting and the Tech Faculty Senate. Thursday he spoke to the Tech chapter of American Association of University Professors, of which he is a past president.

All groups received the same message. "The university is in basically sound condition," Graves said, but added that strong private financial support will be needed in the coming years to provide items not covered by state legislative appropriations.

One of the needs of the university, Graves said, is to increase faculty salaries, which have not kept pace with inflation.

Fund raising could provide money for endowments and scholarships, he said, and that would free the state-appropriated salaries of those faculty members who were named to the endowed chair positions.

"That would spring the state money loose for (other) faculty salaries, faculty travel and equipment," he said.

Graves told the AAUP that an endowed chair of $500,000 to $600,000 would provide interest to pay a $40,000 faculty salary.

The fund-raising campaign, which probably will be launched in November, involves a university-wide effort, solicitation of exes by individual colleges and departments, and the Ex-Students Association.

Graves said the last Tech president, Dr. Cecil Mackey, "worked to improve relations with the Ex-Students Association," because he said in years past there "had been a gap between the university and exes."

Another step in gearing up for the campaign, which was not mentioned by Graves, was a policy adopted by the Tech board of regents last week.

The policy, regarding coordination of development of private sector support, was needed because Tech "needs an orderly, systematic procedure to coordinate efforts," Dr. Clyde Kelsey, vice president for development and university relations, told the board.

A consultant from the University of Michigan was used, Graves said, for advice in planning Tech's first major fund-raising campaign. A computer program was purchased from Iowa State University for alumni development in record keeping.

Firefighters' Pay Hike Rejected By Council

gaining rights for firefighters has not been validated yet, she said.

The council set a 10 a.m. public hearing on Oct. 25 to get citizen input on a Human Relations Commission recommendation that Quirt Avenue be renamed in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

If the street is renamed, it will require an amendment of a city ordinance setting criteria for street names east of Avenue A.

However, council members decided the renaming of Quirt as well as other ways of honoring the slain civil rights leader should be discussed at the hearing.

Mrs. Jordan said she had received "quite a bit of input" that the street should not be renamed.

Council members accepted an Electric Utility Board recommendation that an interconnect be constructed between Lubbock Power and Light and Southwestern Public Service.

The council instructed the city staff to find a way to finance the additional $1 million needed to complete the $1.8 million project.

Despite opposition from one Tech Terrace resident, the council accepted the recommendation of a committee of residents to install semi-permanent barricades on two streets around Tech Terrace Park at an estimated cost of $1,200 to $2,000.

Also at the meeting, council members:

— Nominated Joe Horkey and Ray Diekemper to the board of directors of the Lubbock County tax appraisal district and approved a resolution of financial support for the district.

— Accepted construction of Fire Station No. 12 at 79th Street and Slide Road which cost more than $300,000 to build. The fire department is expected to occupy the building later this month.

— Approved changing 15th and 16th Streets between Avenue Q and University Avenue from one-way to two-way.

Visitors To Netherlands Enjoy Acres Of Flowers

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

As we toured the vast Keukenhof gardens of bulb flowers at Lisse in the Netherlands, we jotted down the names of tulips, narcissus and hyacinths that struck our fancy, to consider for fall planting at home. This didn't last long; it would have taken too much time. There were so many.

Despite the heavy rain during the first of our three visits, the 10 miles of paths were crowded with viewers. The bulbs were at their peak, generally, and there was a triple holiday — Queen Juliana's 70th birthday observance, Memorial Day, May 4, and World War II Liberation Day, May 5.

We were introduced to other magnificent bulb flowers, the spectacular amaryllis, pretty freesia, dainty scilla, attractive cineraria in lavender and white, pink and deep orange, the showy, capped fritillaria imperialis with its bell-like hanging blooms, colorful anemones, little crocus, muscari.

There were other bulb flowers and blossoming trees along the winding walkways and in the greenhouses — the latter especially popular during the rain. In the glasshouses, attractions besides the major bulbs were lilies, cymbidium orchids, iris, multi-headed tiny narcissus of yellow with orange centers, and flowering trees.

Keukenhof not only has big, formal and informal displays near its ponds and streams but it is developing small displays to show what you can do with as few as five flowers. There is also a room at the Queen Juliana pavilion where expert flower arrangers demonstrate placing flowers and tree branches to decorate the home.

On a typical, busy day during the seven or eight weeks the Keukenhof gardens are open, there are 40,000 to 45,000 visitors.

Keukenhof, 30 years old this year, is a cooperative venture, set amid vast fields of flowers grown for shipment of bulbs to far corners of the world. It is a monument, developed in 1949 by a group of prominent Dutch bulb growers toshow off the varieties and splendor of their products, many in natural surroundings. It was also intended to create a contrast with the rectangular forms of the famous bulb fields in the Lisse region.

Kees Freriks of the International Bulb Institute explained that the founders of Keukenhof had realized the existing bulb fields could show their beauty only during a relatively short period, since the flowers were quickly removed for the sake of developing the bulb itself.

They wanted visitors to be able to enjoy the beauty of the bulb flowers during their entire flowering period.

The original site was the property of the Countess Jacoba van Beiren from 1401 to 1436. The countess' vegetables and herbs were grown there, hence the Dutch name, keuken, meaning kitchen, and hof, for garden. The area has been expanded through the years, now covers 70 acres displaying between six and seven million bulb flowers and has 5,000 square meters of greenhouses for indoor spring gardens.

Freriks noted that each of the many gardens in Keukenhof had a character design of its own.

"Some gardens specialize in great selections of tulips, some in massive beds of hyacinths, others present almost the whole family of narcissus," he said.

At one end of the gardens is a tall corn mill, a giant windmill which visitors may climb for a spectacular view of Keukenhof and surrounding bulb fields. The number of visitors has grown from 230,000 in 1950 to more than 940,000 in 1978. The non-profit Keukenhof is controlled by a board of 10 members whose president is Dr. A.J. Berends, burgomaster of Lisse.

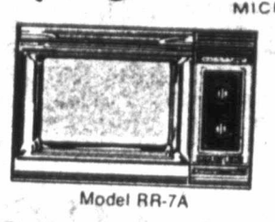

Keukenhof has an additional 30 acres of dune and forest in an area where bulb flowers have been growing in the sandy soil for 400 years. The gardens are less than an hour's ride from Amsterdam and the Hague.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial aspects will be very promising tomorrow, but there is also a possibility you may not take the fullest advantage of your opportunities because of your indifference.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends will find you a very enjoyable person to be around tomorrow, provided you share the limelight. Scene stealing won't win you many points.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will be lucky tomorrow, principally through the efforts of others. Keep out of the way if someone is trying to do you a favor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In social situations with friends tomorrow where someone has gone to great pains to make all the arrangements, don't suggest last-minute changes. It could spoil all the fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Diplomacy is a must tomorrow when dealing with persons who could either help or hinder your career. A lack of tact could leave a bad impression.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will have no trouble finding assistance tomorrow if co-workers see you doing your share. Should you lay down on the job, they'll follow your example.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Where material things are concerned tomorrow you should be rather lucky, especially in situations where you need help. Don't, however, expect too much.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're more than entitled to have a good time tomorrow, but try not to overindulge in the good things of life. Later on you could regret it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others will appreciate you more tomorrow if you are frank and forthright rather than falsely flattering. Say nice things, but don't lay it on too thick.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you decide to go on a shopping spree tomorrow, stay away from stores which offer items you presently can't afford. The temptation could be too strong to resist.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Should you find yourself among persons tomorrow who are less fortunate than you, underplay your affluence. They'll resent it if you make them feel inferior.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Members of the opposite sex will find you even more appealing than usual tomorrow, so take care you don't come on too strong with one whose adulation you don't wish to encourage.

Landlubbers Get Taste Of Sailing

By PETER MATTIACE

ABOARD THE YOUNG AMERICA (AP) — The onshore breeze is cool and the blue-green sea is strangely silent aboard the wide, open deck of this sailing vessel just a few miles off the boardwalk of Atlantic City, N.J.

"Stand by to raise the mainsail," barks First Mate Lou Buck from the foredeck as his young crew scurries among the 66 wide-eyed tourists sitting amidships.

"Raise the mainsail!" Buck commands, and the weathered canvas slowly unfurls in the breeze.

The mainsail, and the other sails, of this 130-foot brigantine are set twice daily on weekdays and three times daily on weekends for landlubbers who seek a three-hour taste of what it was like to sail the sea by the wind.

The Young America, the largest American-built square-rigger still sailing, as its crew proudly boasts, is a modern replica of an old-time sailing ship working the Atlantic for $10 a passenger off the New Jersey gambling resort.

And although she is only 4 years old, not 100, and her hull is reinforced concrete, not wood, the Young America plies the sea in the tradition of the great sailing ships of old.

"When you get out here and you shut the engine down, it's just peaceful and quiet," says Buck, 27, in an easy moment near the wheel. "It's as quiet as you can get. You're just moving along with the wind.

"There's no other place you can take a ride like this," he said. "We're not out here with a microphone and stuff like that."

The 96-ton brigantine was built in 1975 in Port Jefferson, N.Y., by a contractor who dreamed of running charters around Log Island Sound.

Last year the contractor, foiled by bankruptcy, sold the ship, then called The Encantress, for $417,000 to the Oceanic Society's Mid-Atlantic Region and historic Gardner's Basin maritime park in Atlantic City, the vessel's home port.

Her crew of a half-dozen young men and women sleeps and eats aboard the ship. It's not unusual to smell the appealing scent of the crew's dinner, perhaps clams and marinara sauce, mixed in with the salt air on an afternoon cruise.

Twice as long as Columbus' Santa Maria and about the size of the old New Bedford whaling ships, the Young America spends her falls in Long Island, hopping from port to port with maritime exhibits. She travels to Miami in the winter, sailing Atlantic and Caribbean waters as a trainer for young Scouts.

Although its charm is in the sails and the silence, the brigantine uses a 250-horsepower diesel engine to keep her moving on windless nights and in ticklish ports.

Appraiser Helped By Inflation

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation is so good for the appraisal business that Wayne Georgeson sometimes feels a bit guilty about it.

With prices and the value of everything going up steadily, his American Appraisal Co. of Milwaukee, a leader in the field, is so busy that, although he has relinquished the presidency, Georgeson still will travel 100,000 miles this year on important jobs.

"Our biggest business this year," he said, "has come from firms trying to keep their insurance in step with inflation."

"Although we've been exceptionally busy," he said, "we haven't had such unusual cases this year as in the past — the 'droit au bail' on Parisian office space, for instance."

"Droit au bail" is key money, what in America would be called "under the table" payments over and above the legal rent on strategically valuable office space. It's not exactly illegal in France and Georgeson's firm has appraised the right to collect droit au bail for various French clients.

Nor has the company had so many urgent jobs appraising foreign ventures of American companies for losses and claims in the event of nationalization or expropriation.

If the Cuban government ever should decide to compensate American companies reasonably for the properties expropriated when Fidel Castro came to power, Georgeson's company has appraisal reports on most of those properties sitting in its vaults waiting for the happy day.

It has done a lot of appraisal work for American companies in Mexico, the Philippines and other countries that insist foreign ownership of business within their borders be 49 percent or less. This was for a considerable period one of American Appraisal's most profitable activities and it helped keep Georgeson on the road 95 percent of the time.

He also has had to appraise major league baseball teams for prospective buyers.

Georgeson said the appraisal companies get a lot of extra business these days as a result of the Securities and Exchange Commission's ruling three years ago requiring the use of replacement costs as well as original costs in the accounting of some 1,000 of the country's biggest companies.

Georgeson considers replacement cost accounting a step towards fairer valuation, but said present requirements are too rough approximations to be very accurate or valuable to companies. He said they also are more or less useless to investors in trying to determine stock and bond value.

Another thing Georgeson regards as more or less useless is "book value." He says nobody in his right mind would sell a company for book value today. He cited one firm that had a book value of $48 million yet his firm's appraisal showed the liquidation value of inventory alone was $45 million.

Woman Keeps Things Rolling At Mall

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Don't ask Pat Kolodich if business is picking up.

"I get all sorts of cracks," said Miss Kolodich, a combination gumscraper, direction-giver and local trivia treasury who helps keep things rolling on the Portland Mall, for a salary of $15,000 per year.

Miss Kolodich, who has been on the job only a short time, is the first of the city's mall attendants. The 29-year-old explained that her work was part street cleaning, part public relations.

"For the most part, people have been really marvelous," she said, parking her two-wheeled, trash can-laden dolly near a hot falafel stand. "I think it freaks people out when I pop up and ask if I can help them."

A job attached to the city's Bureau of Public Works, the mall attendant's position created earlier this year spurred some uproar when several city employees objected to the salaries that would be paid.

"I was working as a janitor at the police station when an officer stuck the civil-service flier under my nose," said Miss Kolodich, the first of two attendants to take to the streets. "He said 'Look, you can make as much as we do.'"

The Newark, N.J., native's journey to Portland's street corners has taken some odd routes. She is an East Indian scholar and former clerk in the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. She has also been a saleswoman and restaurant cook.

Miss Kolodich has visited India and says she likes to travel. Her job helps, taking her the length and breadth of the mall each day.

"I try to make the whole circuit each day, just to get a look at things," she said. "The dirtiest spots are at the bus stops on both sides of Meier and Franks, and around the Pioneer Courthouse — that's where we've got the most foot traffic."

And where feet are found, gum invariably is discovered. Miss Kolodich keeps a sharpened metal scraper in her tub of tools to take care of the congealing mess, a sticky problem for the mall's expensive brickwork.

"That's not so bad," said Miss Kolodich. "The rotten job is cleaning the ashtrays in the bus shelters. People leave yogurt containers, banana peels and all kinds of things in there. I use rubber gloves."

State Official Renews Battle Against Roloff

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Mark White has reopened the state's long-standing feud with evangelist Lester Roloff by suing once more to impose state child care standards on Roloff's children's homes.

He filed a state district court suit requesting an injunction against unlicensed operation of the Rebekah Home for Girls, Lighthouse Home for Boys and Anchor Home for Boys.

Roloff closed the homes this summer rather than obey a court order that he obtain licenses for them from the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The Rebekah Home recently reopened under the auspices of Roloff's People's Baptist Church in Corpus Christi. Thursday, Roloff announced a radio campaign to raise $5 million to $10 million to rebuild his Anchor Home for Boys in Corpus Christi. The home was formerly operated in Zapata.

He said he intends to begin construction on the new boys' home within 30 days on a 550-acre tract near the People's Baptist Church.

The church, along with eight parents of former Rebekah Home residents, two girls and four staff members, filed a federal court suit last week alleging regulation of the homes by the state would be unconstitutional.

The plaintiffs said the Department of Human Resources had deprived them of their constitutional rights of religious freedom and due process of law.

White said in a statement "legislative initiatives" are under way to change the 1975 state law placing child care homes — including those operated in the name of religion — under state regulation. The efforts, he said, are pointed toward developing "a more appropriate certification plan" for such homes as Roloff's.

He said he believes "the courts are the appropriate forum" to resolve the constitutional issues raised in a continuing series of court battles between Roloff and the state.

The Texas Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court already have ruled state regulation of the homes does not violate the constitutional right to the free exercise of religion.

The attorney general's suit seeks a new injunction prohibiting Roloff, his Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises and the People's Church from operating child care institutions without a state license.

It seeks penalties of $50 to $1,000 for each day a child care home is operated without a license.

Group To Recognize Past Museum Chief

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"A history of the West Texas Museum is the history of a man who has devoted his talents untiringly to the development of a dream...a dream which is now a reality, and of which we on the South Plains are very proud."

It was October 1966, and the West Texas Museum Association was honoring Dr. William Curry Holden, recently retired after 36 years as museum curator and director.

The facility which Holden, who signed the WTMA charter, had helped build was bulging at the seams and plans for a new museum were underway.

Tuesday, the association, celebrating its 50th anniversary at 7 p.m. in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, again will honor Holden — for his efforts toward the new multi-million dollar complex, The Museum of Texas Tech University, at Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue.

The old structure on Texas Tech's Memorial Circle was named Holden Hall in honor of the man lauded as "director and creator of the musem" by Tech regents in a resolution noting his "more than 30 years of dedicated service to Tech." A legislative resolution broadened the field by mentioning the "great distinction" with which he and Mrs. Holden "have served the City of Lubbock and the State of Texas."

Holden credits three men with the museum's giant progress steps — A.B. Davis, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce manager, and two Tech presidents, Dr. Clifford B. Jones and Dr. Grover E. Murray.

Davis led a 1935 "march on Austin" by 67 West Texas counties to secure a share of Texas centennial celebration funds which put the museum in a "half-dugout" basement.

Jones secured use of Tech funds amassed during World War II through "astute financial dealings of Dr. W. A. Wyburn "for the museum building fund.

When the two floors were added to the basement, Jones dedicated the museum "to the enjoyment, enlightenment and culture of the people of West Texas...a place to broaden the horizon, culturally, of the Southwest."

Murray entered the picture with his plans for an International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) which boosted to new building. He also came up with the outdoor concept of the museum's Ranching Heritage Center to show how ranchers adapted to arid land. The Holdens received the Texas Historical Commission's highest honor or for their part in bringing the ranch museum into being.

Holden got into the museum business by accident, as an extra responsibility while professor of history at McMurry College.

College students, chaffing at rules covering everything but chicken stealing, were preying on the Abilene countryside for supplies for weekend chicken roasts.

Assigned to stop the practice, Holden set them to scouring the area for materials to convert an old building to a museum, then sent them out to find donations.

The resulting museum, produced at a cash outlay of $1.95 for three sacks of cement, opened to publicity reaching Lubbock where Holden was to become history professor.

When Lubbock efforts to raise funds to get the museum out of the basement failed, Holden reverted to his McMurry scavenging idea, launching a "Give A Brick" campaign that raised a mountain of bricks and $50,000 (at $12 for 1,000 face bricks) where two years before all-out efforts had failed to bring in the $12,000 it would have cost for the Works Project Administration to complete the museum.

Not until a young legislator named Preston Smith got the museum on the budget were there any funds for museum salaries which still did not include Holden or his wife, Frances, lauded in the 1936 honor as having "labored by his side without receiving compensation...for her influence and efforts which launched many of the activities of the museum."

Holden's academic duties at Tech enriched the museum with facts and artifacts with each added responsibility — archaeological excavations in New Mexico, anthropological studies among the fierce Yaqui in Mexico and research into Lubbock Lake Site.

Today, when time can be found from writing that stacked up over the years, Holden ponders the museum future, the future for which he, at Tech regents' request, researched a book yet unpublished — "Water and Man," which was to set the theme of the new museum. Land and energy have been added to the manuscript recently in a rebirth of interest in the water and arid land theme.

Medical Technician Stops Runaway Car

LAREDO (AP) — Officials were unsure at first what to do about a driverless car that was running in circles backward, bouncing over curbs, smashing mailboxes, knocking over trash cans and scattering garbage.

They rejected as too risky a suggestion to shoot out the tires.

Finally, an emergency medical technician dived into the speeding car through the passenger door and turned off the engine. No one was hurt.

The owner had been outside the car repairing the ignition just before the incident. It worked.

Moon Rocks Missing

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA officials are "uncertain" about the whereabouts of nearly 25 pounds of moon rocks, the chief auditor at Johnson Space Center says.

Claude Lynch said Thursday that officials at Johnson Space Center "do not know what quantity of lunar material was brought back."

Lynch was told last week to retire or transfer after his office charged that irregularities were found in an audit of the lunar material.

In a memorandum to NASA's inspector general, Eldon Taylor, Lynch said one of his auditors was told that an individual in the building where the moon rock is stored was stealing samples of it.

He said the theft had been reported to a NASA inspector, but no investigation was being made because the inspector didn't believe the report.

Lynch wrote to Taylor in Washington, D.C., after NASA officials said only 17 ounces of the moon rock is unaccounted for.

Michael B. Duke, chief of the planetary and earth sciences division, said virtually every speck of the lunar rock has been accurately and carefully measured many times.

Suspects Held

NORMANGEE (AP) — Five suspects were being held today on armed robbery charges in connection with the holdup of a Normangee bank in which masked bandits escaped with $96,000.

Four bandits, wearing nylon stockings over their faces, entered the Normangee State Bank Thursday, according to Centerville police. After herding employees into a vault, the robbers fled in two vehicles, investigators said.

An bank officer who hid in an office during the robbery telephoned authorities shortly after the holdup.

Central Texas authorities caught the suspects at a roadblock near Bryan several hours after the holdup. Officers said they recovered the money taken in the robbery.

Justice of the Peace T.R. Rodell ordered the five held under $50,000 bond each on armed robbery charges. They were identified as Jesse Noble, 22; Theotis Stephens, 22; John Lee Moore, 25; Larry Harrison, 25; and Tommy Banks, 27.

Assault Reported

DALLAS (AP) — Two Bishop College coeds from Iran say they were sexually assaulted at gunpoint by another student Wednesday but were told by officials of the financially troubled institution not to report it to police.

At the urging of friends, they said, they went to Dallas police separately Wednesday and Thursday to report the incidents.

Dr. Harry S. Wright, acting president of Bishop College, denied the claims. He also denied telling one of the girls he wanted to "let the school work out this problem and not have the police involved," as she told officers.

A detective contacted college officials Thursday and said they told him the 19-year-old suspect had been suspended.

The coeds, both 22, said they identified their assailant to school officials after campus security officers took a suspect to an administrator's office.

One coed told police she was on an elevator with the suspect when he stopped the elevator and forced her to commit sodomy. The second coed said the suspect held a revolver to her back and marched her into an empty classroom between classes.

New Technique Makes Math Easier

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With the aid of some numbered wooden and plastic blocks, a group of elementary school students Thursday discovered a world of mathematical concepts normally beyond their grade levels.

The children — six third graders and six kindergarten students — participated in a demonstration of a unique new technique in math education for a gathering of primary school teachers.

Stan Glassman, representative of Great Ideas Inc., a New York firm that publishes math materials, demonstrated the technique that utilizes "Arithmablocks" and fraction rods which are concrete models of math concepts.

Although the children learned concepts that normally are taught in higher grade levels, Glassman cautioned the teachers he is not trying to change the schools' curriculum through the new technique. He said that the presentation of more complicated concepts simply showed that "you can take a child and teach him anything if you make it simple enough."

The colored blocks and fraction rods are used "as a clear way of seeing abstractions," explained Glassman.

The third graders, for example, were instructed to place a block numbered "one" on the table. They then were told to place on top of that block as many of the proportionately smaller blocks numbered "one-fourth" as would fit. The youngsters could then visualize that four fourths are equal to one.

Similarly, the kindergarten students were able to visualize that three plus two equals five by manipulating colored blocks.

Glassman explained that through use of such concrete examples of math problems, students will then be able to use their problem-solving ability learned in that manner and apply it to problems using only written symbols on the blackboard or in textbooks.

"You can get a child to generalize to the abstract if they understand what it's about," he said. "Once it hits, then they can extrapolate."

He said that Great Ideas proposed that the method be used in order to keep children "functioning up with their textbooks — to keep them from falling behind."

He said that teachers are provided an in-depth in-service training period if a school chooses to purchase the block kits. He explained that teachers need detailed lesson plans that give them step-by-step procedures in the instruction of the math technique.

The kits are meant as a technique for use with small groups of about six students. Other children in the room, however, are provided with drill books so that they might continue work on the math lesson on their own.

Glassman sees the technique as a way of "restructuring" the students' thinking and added that all children, from those with the most learning difficulties to the brightest, will benefit from the method.

"A child can learn arithmetic rapidly if they can see what you're talking about," he said.

Glassman said the technique has been implemented in San Antonio, Dallas and El Paso and that the feedback has been positive.

Ila Curry, elementary math consultant for Lubbock public schools, praised the technique as a method of building a foundation of math concepts. She said that with use of the method "our problems (in teaching math) would be over. The students just wouldn't know failure."

16 West Texas Counties Declared Disaster Areas

Sixteen West Texas counties have been declared disaster areas by the Small Business Administration because of crop losses suffered during recent hailstorms and other severe weather.

The declaration makes farmers, ranchers and crop producers who had crop losses in those counties eligible for low interest loans from the agency.

West Texas counties include Castro, Hockley, Hale, Martin, Lamb, Dawson, Parmer, Gaines, Cochran, Yoakum, Deaf Smith, Bailey, Terry, Lubbock, Midland and Andrews.

The loans are available at either 5 percent or 7 3/8 percent interest, depending upon the applicant's ability to obtain credit from other sources, and are repayable depending on the ability of the applicant. Up to half of the loan may be used for 1979 operating debt repayment with the balance to be used for crop production next year.

Applicants may borrow only up to the amount of actual loss as verified by the county ASCS committee and loans approved by other agencies cannot be duplicated.

The agency will open offices in the following communities on Monday through Oct. 20:

•Littlefield, Security State Bank, Mark Bradley and Ned Brown.

• Dimmitt, First State Bank, John K. Sowers and Steven Wurtz.

Loan applications must be submitted by April 10, 1980 on physical losses, and by July 10, 1980 on economic injury disaster loans to agricultural related businesses suffering losses because of disaster.

Savings of more than $5,500 in auto repair bills over five years have been realized by Kester.

In addition to the savings, Kester's skills have enabled him to obtain various jobs dealing with automotive and tractor repair. He also started a 4-H "wheels" program to help other members learn about autos and auto safety.

Kester has participated in state and national 4-H events and was Hockley County Gold Star Boy last year. He has held offices on the local and county level and has had projects in foods and automotive repair.

A graduate of Whiteface High School, Kester is currently working for Cactus Operating Co. He is the son of Mrs. Alice P. Kester.

Soil preparation, variety selection, insect control and harvesting were part of the winning state gardening program by Burress.

Burress will receive a $50 U. S. savings bond from the Ortho Division of the Chevron Chemical Co.

As an eight-year member, Burress has competed in the state 4-H Roundup and participated in leadership labs, electric camps and the Texas 4-H Congress.

He has had projects in horticulture, foods and nutrition, wildlife, conservation of natural resources, plant and soil sciences, entomology and leadership.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A PRIVATE CROP ESTIMATE COMPILED here this week pegs cotton production in the 25-county High Plains area at 3,011,900 bales, up from the independent projection a month ago of 2,914,200 bales.

This still is well below the U. S. Department of Agriculture's September forecast. The last USDA estimate, adjusted to compensate for geographical differences between the government's High Plains crop reporting districts of 1-North and 1-South and the 25-county area, projected the Lubbock territory's crop at an all-time high of about 3.4 million bales.

Private crop forecasters said September weather, which featured above-average temperatures and sunlight and below-normal precipitation, was more beneficial than detrimental. They said at least a "normal" October — with no early freeze, especially in the northern areas — will be needed for the private crop estimate to be achieved.

The acreage standing for harvest has been revised slightly upward to 3,764,900, compared with 3,730,200 a month ago. Measurement services now have been completed in many counties, resulting in adjustments in some acreage estimates.

A particularly puzzling aspect of the yield outlook is the micronaire situation. Micronaire affects the weight of the bolls and the number of bolls required to make a bale. Normally, around 156,000 bolls per acre will make a bale. This year, some experts believe, a larger number may be required in many fields, especially where cotton has been opening prematurely and where it has shown evidence of heavy stress.

This view is based partly on preliminary results of mike sampling and testing procedures. Private crop analysts say early projections point to an average mike of only about 3.2, down from last year's 3.7 and the average two years ago of 4.3. It currently is indicated that only about 35-40 percent of the crop may be in the base mike range of 3.5-4.9, against 52 percent last year.

Not enough cotton, representative of the area, has arrived for USDA classing to support pertinent pertinent mike analysis. Besides, it is remembered that some people got excited in 1973 when some prematurely desiccated cotton produced official mike readings in a few early USDA classings of around 2.9. The final areawide average for the 1973 crop was 4.1.

BUT IF THE INDEPENDENT MIKE ANALYSES are indeed reflective of the crop as a whole and an accurate indication of what is to come, some experts say, it may be difficult to reach the projected yield of 384 pounds.

And yet there also is the perplexing thought of what happened in 1972, when the average mike was 3.1 and the yield reached 457 pounds per acre. If that crop had miked an average of 3.5 or better, with heavier bolls, the yields would have been of whopper proportions.

The 1979 crop set a heavy fruit load in a short time — beginning about the first of August, since comparatively little cotton was set in July — and still is carrying in many fields a large number of bolls. This, however, is a highly variable crop.

In portions of northern Lamb County, for example, prospects are bright. There is talk there of potential yields in the area of two bales per acre. Elsewhere in the county, however, the crop is described as "very poor."

Some cotton in southern Floyd County may yield an average of around a bale per acre, some reports indicate, while farmers in northern sections of the county would consider themselves "lucky" if they made half that. A big crop is in prospect in eastern Dawson County, but cotton in western areas of the county — although improved from a month ago — is described as generally "sorry."

And on it goes.

THIS CROP VARIABILITY MAKES representative sampling difficult and yield and production projections hazardous. Yield uncertainties are compounded by questions on boll size.

If the bolls in general turn out to be on the small side, as some specialists believe may be the case, boll counts could prove deceptive. Some crop scientists, noting fairly widespread evidence of cotton stress at a time when many bolls still were immature, say the principle is somewhat similar to that of a heavily laden apple tree. A tree with a large number of apples will tend to have smaller fruit. Conversely, the apples tend to be larger, other factors being equal, when they are fewer in number.

In any event, few cotton experts feel comfortable in assessing this crop. On top of bollworm damage reports and everything else, the acreage for harvest remains a little on the cloudy side, although this appears for the moment to have come into reasonably sharp focus.

Weather in October of course could affect the final crop outcome. The National Weather Service, in a longer-range forecast issued earlier this week, predicted much-below-normal temperatures for West Texas for the five-day period ending Oct. 19 and above-normal precipitation. Forecasts for much-below-normal temperatures in mid-October or later tend to conjure up speculation about a possible freeze or frost in the northern areas, although this wasn't mentioned by the NWS.

One thing that bothers private crop estimators is that they may have to contend in their November projections not only with assessing the effects of October weather but also with dealing with the possibility they may not have been on-the-mark in the month-earlier appraisals.

IT IS BELIEVED THIS MAY HAVE happened to the USDA in its September crop report. The USDA estimates, it was believed, were high on both acres for harvest and yields, based on Sept. 1 conditions.

A new USDA crop estimate will be released today after the market closes. Many expect it to show a reduction from the month-earlier estimate for the High Plains, despite the belief here that the crop, on balance, improved during September. But the government estimate is beleived highly likely to remain considerably above the new private forecast.

The USDA may wait until more complete figures are available before revising its acreage estimate. The Crop Reporting Board, however, still could temper the possibility that the current acreage estimate may be high through a certain degree of offsetting adjustments in the yield and overall production projections.

It is thought in some quarters the Texas estimate may be slightly below 5.5 million bales, down from 5.6 million in September. A guess on the U. S. crop is around 14.1 million bales, down from more than 14.2 million last month. There are expectations for a small increase in the Far West, a modest decrease in the Southwest, and little change in the Mid-South and Southeast. A slight increase in the Mid-South and a slight decrease in the Southeast wouldn't be surprising.

If achieved, the 25-county estimate would be a big jump from last year's 2,049,100 bales and would compare with the all-time high of 3,215,400 bales in 1977. If accurate, the estimated acres for harvest would be an all-time high, topping the previous record of 3,638,800 acres harvested two years ago.

LIGHT COMMISSION HOUSE SELLING at the close edged cotton futures slightly off gains of as much as 45 points in nearbys Thursday as the three front months finished up 43 points to virtually unchanged.

The firmer market was the result of continued morning trade buying and afternoon local short covering, brokers said. Rather quiet market conditions prevailed, they added, in anticipation of today's USDA crop report.

A good portion of the trade buying was thought to have reflected hedge purchases in futures against fresh forward sales of U. S. cotton in the export market.

The USDA reported after the close that U. S. cotton export sales activity continued strong in the week ended Sept. 30. For the current marketing year, sales increased by 212,000 running bales and included 52,900 bales to South Korea as well as smaller amounts to Taiwan, Indonesia, Hong Kong, Bangladesh and Italy.

Export shipments eased to 81,600 bales, of which 79 percent was destined for Asian countries and 12 percent for European nations.

Livestock Futures Mart Drops Via Unexpected Dip In Demand

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 45 to 125 points lower on 31,355 cars Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Weakness in beef at noon and an expected slowdown in cattle demand as a result put pressure on futures as did weakness in gold. There was also profit taking after Wednesday's sharp gains. Trade was again fluid with locals and commission houses on both sides of the market.

Deliveries total 1,737 thus farm. Wholesale beef was off 1 to 2 at 100 to 101 cents a pound, f.o.b river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 25 cents with the best top $68 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 125,000 head. About 7,950 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed unchanged to down the 150 limit level.

The market fell in hectic local and commission house activity after limit level gains Wednesday.

Prices slumped on weakness in live cattle futures and lower beef and cash feeders.

There have been 86 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $3 with the best top $98 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 6,650 head.

Hog futures closed 65 lower to 20 higher on 4,572 lots.

December was off the most with distant October the only gainer. Prices slipped as much as 95 in early trade before stiffening.

Increased hog arrivals and mostly lower cash prices combined with weakness in gold and other meat pits to trigger selling after Wednesday's sharp advance. The heavy pace of kill this week easily offset some higher pork prices at noon and discount of futures to cash.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up ½ at 66 to 77 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $1 to up 75 cents with the best top $37.50 per hundredweight. Kill was 370,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 25,300 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed unchanged to off 70 led by August. Volume was 4,609 contracts.

The market tumbled as much as 112 after a brief early gain of 10 lacked follow through.

The slump in gold and weakness in other meat pits touched off selling.

Traders also noted heavy hog runs and kill which easily offset heavy belly storings out of town last week and firmer cash product.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 at 31½ to 33 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures edged higher Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade amid brisk commercial business and talk of possible dry weather damage to young winter wheat.

Commercial grain firms were both buyers and sellers of wheat, an analyst said. There also was talk that dry weather might impair development of the recently planted winter wheat crop in some Great Plains states.

The exchange reported that wheat trading both Tuesday and Wednesday shattered a previous volume record set in 1933. The new record set Wednesday was 39,070 contracts, or 195,350 bushels of wheat, traded in a single session.

Stock Market Dispute Spreads In Magazines

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's most prominent business magazines have been engaged in an unusually noisy debate lately about the stock market.

It started out as a simple, if somewhat heated, argument about the investment outlook. But it soon spread to another highly touchy issue — whether it is possible, or even worthwhile trying, to figure out where the market is headed.

Business Week started it all at midsummer with a cover that proclaimed "The Death of Equities." Inflation and other economic ills, the magazine concluded, have pretty much wiped out stocks as a place for corporations to raise capital and investors to make money.

A month later, Forbes magazine fired back with a report suggesting that stocks were not only still breathing, but potentially ready for a booming bull market.

Fortune magazine seemingly was then in the position to cast a tie-breaking vote. But as it turned out, it disagreed with both sides.

"Fortune, in case you are wondering, has a third position," the magazine said recently in its "Keeping Up" commentary section. "We don't know what the stock market will do.

"If we did, we'd tell you — honest, we would. Unfortunately, however, stock prices are a random walk. They cnnot be predicted.

"The prices on Wall Street today already embody what is known, suspected, hoped and feared about the the direction of the economy and the outlook for individual corporations, and those prices will change only when something new comes along, i.e., something that is not already known, suspected, hoped or feared."

This random-walk doctrine, or the "efficient market" theory, as it is sometimes called, naturally has few friends among the security analysts, chartwatchers and portfolio managers of Wall Street. After all, it strongly implies that much of the work they do is pointless.

Of course the future is unknown, they say. But they contend that the efficient-market theory begins to fail when one considers that stock prices often reflect a "conventional wisdom" that is exaggerated or even totally off base.

"The accepted wisdom — what is known, suspected, etc. — tends to outlive its original validity (whatever that may have been in the first place," wrote long-time market analyst John W. Schulz of Brean Murray, Foster Securities, in a recent rebuttal to Fortune's argument.

"Witness, for example, the one-decision concept of investing in major growth stocks that drove the truest blue chips to insanely high prices, from which they collapsed in 1973-74."

Occasions when the market's process of "discounting" what is known, hoped and feared among investors goes to extremes "can be recogized and therefore exploited," Schulz argued.

In addition, he maintained, the pure random-walk case ignores the potential effect on the market of fluctuations in the amount of buying power investors have in reserve — cash, money parked in short-term investments, and available credit.

"Sooner or later, after stock prices have fallen sharply and-or for some considerable period of time," Schulz said, "a growing volume of sidelined buying power will begin to burn a hole in bargain hunters' pockets and flow back into the stock market.

"Conversely, after a sharp and-or lengthy advance in stock prices, surplus buying power normally will have been depleted, if only in the sense that a given number of dollars will buy ever fewer shares as prices rise."

Pirates Rebound Behind Sanguillen

WINNING HIT — Through the rain, Pittsburgh pinch hitter Manny Sanguillen swings and sends a single through the infield, and the hit brought in the winning run in the Pirates' 3-2 win over the Baltimore Orioles Thursday night. The action came in the ninth inning of the second game of the World Series. Catching for the Orioles is Rick Dempsey, and watching from his umpire's position is Bob Engel. Rain dampened the game through the late innings. (AP Laserphoto)

BALTIMORE (AP) — The two men involved in one of baseball's most unusual trades combined Thursday night to tie the 1979 World Series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Baltimore Orioles at 1-1.

give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Only two years ago, the Pirates felt the aging Sanguillen from Panama was expendable. They shipped him and a reported $100,000 to Oakland for A's manager Chuck Tanner, who replaced the late Danny Murtaugh as Pittsburgh field boss.

After one season in Oakland, Pittsburgh reacquired Sanguillen for three players. He was relegated to bullpen work and pinch-hitting.

"Anything we do in this Series," said Sanguillen in his halting English, "we are doing for (the late) Roberto Clemente."

Clemente is a Hall of Fame outfielder who was the most valuable player in the 1971 Series for the Pirates in a seven-game triumph over Baltimore. He died in a plane crash while on a mercy mission Dec. 31, 1972.

In the ninth inning Thursday night, with rain sweeping across Memorial Stadium, Tanner called upon the craggy veteran who had helped make a Tanner dream come true.

Tanner wanted to manage the Pirates ever since he was a boy in New Castle, Pa., near Pittsburgh.

The Pirates had runners at first and second with two out and the score tied 2-2 on the cold, wet night. Tanner told Sanguillen to grab a bat and go out to face ace Orioles reliever Dan Stanhouse.

The Pittsburgh runners were Ott, who had singled, and Phil Garner, who had walked. Stanhouse went to one ball and two strikes on Sanguillen before he threw a pitch out of the strike zone.

Ott never stopped as he lit out from second and just slid under the tag of Orioles catcher Rick Dempsey on a relay from outfielder Ken Singleton to first baseman Eddie Murray to the plate.

In the bottom of the ninth, Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve, who saved 31 games during the regular season, came in and did his act. He retired the side in order, striking out two, and the Pirates headed home for three games in Three Rivers Stadium.

Sanguillen was asked what pitch he was looking for from Stanhouse.

"I just tried to make contact. I don't try to pull the ball with two strikes. He made a good pitch, but it was outside. I don't think it was a strike," Sanguillen said.

The Pirates built an early 2-0 lead in the second inning behind starter Bert Blyleven. Willie Stargell, John Milner and Bill Madlock singled in succession, Stargell scoring, and Ott delivered a sacrifice fly to send home Milner.

The Orioles pecked away at Blyleven, scoring a run in the second on a home run by Murray, who has four hits and three walks in the two games.

In the sixth, Ken Singleton singled and Murray doubled him home to tie the score.

Baltimore manager Earl Weaver refused to second-guess Murray on cutting off Singleton's throw trying to cut down Ott in the ninth.

"The third base coach sent him home. We were trying to force the play. They (the Pirates) won the National League pennant and are probably going to make the play more than they won't. When you shoot craps, sometimes you lose," Weaver said.

Tanner was asked if he was playing a hunch when he pinch-hit with Sanguillen.

"No, I wasn't," Tanner replied. "I know Sanguillen can handle the bat, and with the type of pitcher Stanhouse is, I felt he could do the job."

Ex-Baylorite Files Suit Against School

WACO (AP) — Former Baylor quarterback Sammy Bickham Jr. has filed a $2 million lawsuit accusing the school of fraudulent recruiting practices, broken promises and causing physical injuries.

Bickham complained he suffered "irreparable physical damage" after he was given pain-killing drugs and sent back onto the field "without appropriate medical supervision." Bickham played football and baseball for Baylor before transferring to SMU in 1977 during his sophomore year, and played baseball last season at SMU.

The suit claims Bickham, 21, suffered "a severe injury to his left knee in the course of a football game which has left him permanently disabled and which has required extensive medical and surgical treatment."

Bickham and Baylor head coach Grant Teaff both declined to comment on the suit, which was filed Wednesday by attorneys Richard "Racehorse" Haynes and Sam D. Rhem of Houston.

The action also accused Baylor of "fradulent tactics" in recruiting Bickham in the fall of 1975 and the spring of 1976.

Bickham contended he came to Baylor on the strength of several unfulfilled promises made to him by Teaff and baseball coach Mickey Sullivan.

The suit alleged that Baylor recruiters told Bickham he was "the best athlete and. . .they would provide him with the best football team in the state to complement his passing ability and to protect him from being hurt. . .that they would look after (Bickham) as if he were their own son."

Herbert Reynolds, Baylor executive vice president, said he would meet today with other university officials to "review the details involved in the suit."

"I naturally feel that we tried to work with Sammy as best we could. We paid his medical expenses until the time he stepped on the mound for SMU. We encouraged him to stay at Baylor and pursue his education," Reynolds said.

Charles H. Samson Jr., president of the Southwest Conference, said he could remember no hard feelings between Bickham and Baylor when the player requested his transfer to SMU.

"This is the first case of this nature I've ever heard of in my 10 years on the (SWC) council board," he said.

Estacado Hosts Lamesa; Ponies Head For Pampa

By CHUCK McDONALD

When you're down — it always seems like somebody wants to kick you.

And the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes are definitely down. So when the 0-5 Tors meet Estacado tonight at Lowrey Field, they enter as prime candidates for a good kicking from the Matadors when they two teams meet at 7:30 p.m.

EHS coach Louis Kelley said that tailback Kelvin White and fullback Alvin Davis will both start against Lamesa.

And that's not good news for the Tors. White, who hasn't played since the Matadors' second game of the year, is averaging 6.3 yards a carry while Davis, who missed the Monterey game, is piling up the stats at an average of 6.9 yards a whack.

Monterey and Coronado are also in action tonight, but they travel in different directions. The Mustangs will be in Pampa to face the Harvesters and the Plainsmen journey to Carlsbad, N.M., to do battle with the Cavemen.

Lubbock High will face Amarillo Caprock Saturday night at Lowrey Field in the the Westerners' homecoming game.

It's also homecoming for the Matadors tonight. Estacado was off last week and should be rested and healthy. The Mats are 3-1 on the year, with only a 7-0 loss to Monterey to blemish their slate.

"We're in pretty good shape physically," said Kelley. "We were pretty beat up after that Monterey came but the off week helped us.

"This is a big game for us since district starts next week. We want to get our offense in gear."

Although the contest looks like a mismatch, Kelley said that he expected a tough battle from the Tors.

"We played them in a similar situation two years ago," said the EHS coach. "And we were only ahead 6-0 at the half — so we'll have to be ready for them."

But right now, the Tors are reeling like a punch-drunk fighter. Against Dunbar last week, Lamesa only had 21 players suited up for the contest.

And with so many players forced to go both ways, the Estacado speed could take its toll on them.

The Lamesa offense is led by quarterback Joey Froman and fullback Tony Maxwell. Defensively, noseguard Brent Jackson is the key to the Lamesa success.

The Matadors are currently the No. 7-ranked AAA team in the state.

Another NBA Season

THE GAME — MUCH LIKE a ski trip to the Grand Tetons — has a character all its own. The sights and sounds are unmistakable; its variety of flavors would embarrass Campbell's soups.

Long, lean bodies sprint and shuffle across the hardwood surface in frantic rhythm, raw energy packaged in grace. One leather ball is to be batted, bounced and catapulted in a hundred different ways by 10 men, professionals, each an expert in a field exclusive of amateurs.

It is both a corporate enterprise and pure show biz; a little of Wall Street and a lot of Broadway; dollar bills stacked higher and higher to reach the goal of a world's championship.

It is the special world of the NBA, the National Basketball Association, a land motivated by profit and ruled by fantasy.

Best of all, another season is upon us: Rush a fresh supply of adrenalin into the bloodstream of each and every fan.

THE FIRST 24-SECOND clock has yet to elapse and already the tempo is set. Another rip-roaring, unpredictable War of the Basketball Worlds is about to be waged.

The NBA, to an overwhelming extent, has offered the fan of professional sport an item that major league baseball and the National Football League have sadly discarded.

It gives us the possibility of rags-to-riches, Sylvester Stallone's "Rocky" still on his feet after the final bell, the Amazin' Mets of 1969 transferred to sneakers and trunks.

When was the last time that the baseball pennant races were not predicted with reasonable accuracy in April by the "fortune tellers" in Las Vegas? Think about it.

How long has it been since either Pittsburgh, Oakland or Dallas has not dominated a Super Bowl? Think some more.

Now, consider the recent championship history of one National Basketball Association. Five — count 'em — five full seasons have come and gone since a magnificent (and favored) Boston Celtic team conquered the Milwaukee Bucks and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for the 1973-74 crown.

THAT CELTIC TITLE WAS then followed by a series of astonishments that were performed by squads whose preseason prospects seemed as favorable as those of Patty Hearst becoming the first woman President of the United States.

Fans, from the least initiated to the wisest veteran, were stunned to see the Golden State Warriors, after only slightly better than a .500 record in the regular-season, dry-gulch the powerful Washington Bullets in a four-game sweep in '75. Who would've expected it?

There was an even greater note of incredulity, not to the championship won by Boston in '76, but because the opponents in the final series were the then-anonymous Phoenix Suns, a team with only the eighth-best record among 18 NBA teams prior to the playoffs.

And, then, the '77 surprise package, the Portland Trail Blazers, disposed of the more talented Philadelphia 76ers in a masterful six-game exhibition of clockwork offense and raging defense. At season's outset, Portland had not been expected to win half its games.

THE CAVALCADE REACHES the present with the Seattle SuperSonics, who won only eight of their first 24 games two years ago before their inheritance at

SWC Basketball Coaches Point Fingers At Ags

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf didn't mind it a bit Thursday when the other Southwest Conference basketball coaches tabbed his heavily favored Aggies as the team to beat. He just hopes those opposing coaches know what they're talking about.

SWC basketball teams can't even begin practicing until next week, but SWC coaches were already applying the pressure on Metcalf and the Aggies in a luncheon here to kick off the 1979-1980 season.

The season culminates here in late February, with San Antonio hosting the SWC tournament for the first time. The tournament had a successful two-year run in Houston.

To a man, the SWC's other eight coaches were saying the experienced Aggies were the team to beat in the SWC — especially when they could needle Metcalf in front of the large luncheon crowd.

"I think Texas A&M is the team to beat. I think they are a possible Final Four team. So, Shelby, the bug is on you,' quipped Baylor coach Jim Haller.

"I think it will be the best race in the history of the Southwest Conferece, other than A&M going through undefeated and winning it," said Houston coach Guy Lewis.

"Metcalf will beat you as bad as he can beat you. It shouldn't be called the Southwest Conference tournament. It should be called the A&M Invitational." said Rice coach Mike Schuler. "If he doesn't win it all, you Aggies can fire him."

Southern Methodist coach Sonny Allen, whose Mustangs are expected to be one of the SWC's top teams this year, didn't let up on Metcalf: "We feel that if we play up to our potential, we have a chance of finishing second behind the Aggies."

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers, who was in Metcalf's position when he had 6-foot-8 star Rick Bullock, noted that Metcalf returns 6-foot-11 star Rudy Woods and told the Aggie coach, "Shelby, it's the big price you pay when you have the big man."

Metcalf was one of the last coaches to address the crowd. When he reached the podium, his eyes searched the crowd for Dr. Charles Samson, the SWC president and chairman of the powerful A&M athletic council.

"I want to get something straight here," said Metcalf, who is entering his 17th year as the Aggie head coach. "I want you to know, Dr. Samson, that these people are just kidding."

In a later press conference, Metcalf said, "I just hope the other coaches know what they're talking about. I just hope they're right."

The Aggies finished 24-9 last season as Texas and Arkansas tied for the title. But the Longhorns and Razorbacks each lost several key players, while the Aggies return all five starters.

Woods, only a sophomore, leads tha group.

Astros Sign Star Pitcher

HOUSTON (AP) — Major-league strikeout king J.R. Richard is staying in Houston.

Astros general manager Tal Smith announced Thursday that Richard has signed a four-year contract extending through 1983. Smith did not disclose the financial details of the contract, however.

Richard led the National League in strikeouts this season with 313 and became the first NL pitcher to fan 300 or more batters in consecutive seasons since Sandy Koufax did it in 1955-56.

He struck out 303 in 1978 to become the first right-hander in the league to break the 300 mark.

Richard also led the league with a 2.71 ERA while chalking up a season record of 18-13, giving him 74 wins in the last four years.

midseason by coach Lenny Wilkens. As quickly as it takes to say "Mirror, mirror, on the wall" the Sonics advanced to the title series that year. They duplicated the feat last season, despite the free-agent departure of center Marvin Webster, and defeated the Bullets in a five-game rub-out.

That brings us to the NBA for 1979-8C. Which team will leap from the magician's hat to topple the odds this year?

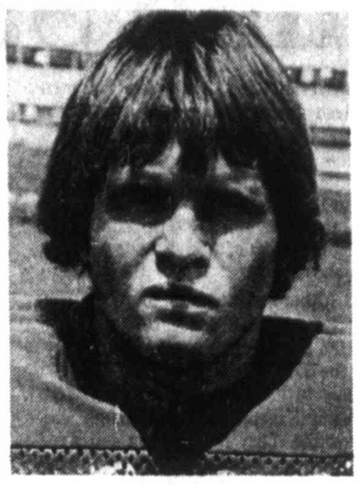

Which team will rub an Aladdin's lamp and see its wishes become headlines? Whose fingers will trade a basketball for the ring of world's champion seven months from now?

It may be the San Diego Clippers, with vegetarian Bill Walton breaking his fast long enough to devour an opposing center each game.

Beware the Houston Rockets, with Moses Malone playing Cyclops to Calvin Murphy's lightning-quick sniper.

Let's not overlook the Kansas City Kings, with the game's finest young backcourt of Phil Ford and Otis Birdsong, and the Los Angeles Lakers, and Denver Nuggets, and Atlanta Hawks, and San Antonio Spurs.

The list is longer than a Lloyd Free jump shot. It's anybody's guess because it's anybody's ball game.

Western Hills Tries NM Team

It has been more than five consecutive defeats that plagues Western Hills Baptist Academy football coach Jim Briggs.

The margins of victory have been less than encouraging as in each of the Eagles' last three games, the six-man football rule that terminates a contest when one team falls behind by at least 45 points has been invoked.

Western Hills, 0-5, lost to Cotton Center 53-8 last Friday and takes on Lake Arthur, N.M. on the road Saturday at 2 p.m.

Briggs said, "but I know we're going down to Lake Arthur to beat 'em.

"They're 3-2 but haven't played near the competition we have. We're ready."

Western Hills has lost four of its five games to teams of the powerful District 3-B. That will work to Western Hills' advantage, Briggs believes.

"All those 3-B teams are state-ranked," he said. "Those are some fantastic clubs. I've never seen so many schools with fast boys.

LCC Hosts Sul Ross In Season Rematch

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It was tough going for the Chaparrals back in September.

They had played — and lost — their school inaugural football game to McMurry the previous week, when they took the field at Alpine against Sul Ross.

When it did, finally, the scoreboard was akilter: Sul Ross 47, LCC 0.

Saturday, the Chaparrals will be playing Sul Ross again, and they're hoping more then the site will be different. The two teams will collide at Coronado High School stadium beginning at 2 p.m.

"I'm sure it won't be like last time," admitted Sul Ross coach Joe George this week. "That was about as well as we could play. I know that LCC has improved since then. It won't be like that (47-0 margin) again. We just hope we can play well."

The Lobo coach observed that it's easy for the losing team to get "up" for a return game, and hard for the winning coach to convince his players that a rematch won't be an automatic carbon copy.

The Lobos will come in with a 2-3 record, against LCC's 1-5. However, last weekend, the Lobos fell to Austin College 31-10. That same night, the Chaparrals lost a 35-8 verdict to Trinity.

"We played pretty good for a while," commented George. "But, they got the momentum and we couldn't get it back. They threw a couple of passes where we would intercepted or they would catch it. Both times, they caught it."

The Lobos will have an altered lineup from the first time they played LCC. In the backfield will be a new quarterback, freshman Larry Hill who played more than a half against LCC in backing up Dean Herbort. However, Herbort has quit the squad, and "We knew that Hill would be our No. 1 quarterback all along," said George.

Also, moving into the lineup is tailback Troy Peoples. The fullback is unchanged, however. Freshman Willie Rodriguez (210) muscled his way past the Chaparrals earlier, and he is now the No. 2 rusher in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association, with a 70.2-yard, per-game average.

Hill has hit 51 of 116 passes for an average og 118 yards per game.

However, Sul Ross will try to run more than throw: "We threw 30 times against Austin College, and that's too much," said George.

The Chaparrals will be working Pat Worthey and Ted Thornton in the backfield this week, with freshman Kent Allison at quarterback. The running back situation will be stronger, however, with the return to action of Marvin Wiley. Thornton was the rushing leader in last week's game against Trinity.

Wiley, a sophomore from Crosbyton, has been idled two weekends by injuries, but he will be used in a backup role Saturday.

LCC coach Jerry Don Sanders plans to use Allison for about half the offensive plays, with his backups, Curtis Dean and Paul Elkins, to work about a quarter each.

"We want to give our players a chance to play, the ones who maybe haven't had a chance to get in that much this year," said Sanders. "We are thinking about next year and want to get some experience for the ones who will be playing for the next few years."

The TIAA has tri-leaders now, with McMurry, Austin, and Tarleton State sharing first with 3-1 records.

Sul Ross is 1-3 in conference, Trinity 0-4.

This weekend, Austin College will play at Tarleton, and McMurry goes to San Antonio to play Trinity.

Coronado Captures District VB Win

Coronado notched a 15-5, 10-15, 15-4 win over Plainview in its first District 4-AAAA volleyball game of the season Thursday night.

High-point servers were Laura Richardson and Tammy Edmonson with 9 points each as the Mustangs advanced their record to 14-6 on the year.

Monterey ran its District 4-AAAA record to 1-0 Thursday night by defeating Hereford 15-9, 15-13. The loss leaves Hereford with a 0-1 mark.Leading the Plainsmen were Janice Rhea and CArla Hamlet. The win gives MHS a 9-8 won-loss mark on the year.

In another volleyball game, Dunbar beat Brownfield 15-13, 15-2 to advance its record to 6-14. Lisa Caviel was the high-point server in the first game with 6 points while Linda Flowers had five in the second.

The Panther junior varsity also won, 15-12, 15-7.

VICTORY LEAP — Willie Stargell, the Pirates' captain, leaps for joy after getting the last out at first base and giving Pittsburgh a 3-2 win over host Baltimore in the second game of the World Series Thursday night. A peg to Stargell at first had gotten Baltimore batter Al Bumbry, left, for the final out. Umpire Russ Goetz made the call. Tech, Hogs Vie In Key SWC Tilt

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Unbeaten, untied and untested, the Arkansas Razorbacks venture forth onto the South Plains of West Texas for their second Southwest Conference contest of the 1979 season — a Saturday afternoon confrontation with the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Variable winds, clear skies and temperatures in the upper 70s are expected for Saturday's 2 p.m. kickoff. A crowd in the vicinity of 50,000 is expected to watch the matchup between the Hogs and the Red Raiders.

Arkansas enters the game with a perfect 4-0 record and ranked 12th in the nation by the Associated Press. The Razorbacks' victories have come against Colorado State, Oklahoma State, Tulsa and TCU.

"We know this is going to be another tough game, but we had some positive things happen against A&M that hopefully we can carry over now," Tech football boss Rex Dockery said earlier this week. "A lot of people were predicting that Arkansas would be down this season and already they are back in the Top 20 and pointing toward a great season."

The Raiders are coming off their biggest victory of the season, a 21-20 come-from-behind triumph over Texas A&M last Saturday. That win evened Tech's conference mark at 1-1 and pushed the Red Raiders to 2-2-1 on the season.

The Razorbacks scored a 16-13 last-second win over TCU a week ago in Fort Worth to go 1-0 in SWC action. Ish Ordonez booted a 44-yard field goal with seven seconds showing on the clock to provide the Hogs with the margin of victory.

Saturday's matchup between Tech and Arkansas is pivotal for both squads. The Raiders need a victory to remain in the running for the conference championship. The Hogs want the decision to keep their SWC record unblemished and to find out if that 4-0 record and 12th-place ranking are deserved.

Arkansas and Tech mirror each other in many ways on the field. Both teams run out of the split-back veer offensive formation and both practice the five-man front defense. Both squads have excellent kickers and outstanding players at the skill positions.

"Rex Dockery is a heck of a fine football coach and he has great talent in Ron Reeves and James Hadnot," stated Arkansas head coach Lou Holtz. "I think Tech's offensive line is greatly underrated. Hey, they have a great offensive football team."

Reeves had his best game of the season last week against the Aggies. The 6-2, 210-pounder from Monterey was on target with seven of 10 passes for 57 yards and one touchdown, but more importantly rushed for 84 yards on 26 carries.

Many of Reeves' runs kept Tech's two fourth-quarter scoring drives alive and his leadership was essential to the Raiders' offensive success.

Hadnot is currently the second-leading rusher in the conference and 10th-ranked runner in the nation with 125.2 yards per game. The 6-2, 230-pound bruiser is good for 4.9 yards every time he touches the pigskin.

The Tech coaches beefed up the offensive line last week by putting senior Joe Walstad at strong guard and moving sophomore Denny Harris to center. Walstad had started at center in Tech's first four games of the season, but Dockery cited Harris' improvement as the reason for the change.

When the Razorbacks have the football, one of two quarterbacks may be directing the offensive show for Holtz.

Senior Kevin Scanlon is the SWC's leading passer this week with 156.4 points. Scanlon has completed 17 of 25 passes for 287 yards in three games. Scanlon's most impressive figure is only one interception in those three games.

The Razorbacks also have the No. 2 passer in the conference in freshman Tom Jones, brother of Baltimore Colts quarterback Bert Jones.

Jones has connected on 23 of 35 passes for 303 yards and two touchdowns. Like Scanlon, Jones has only been intercepted once this season.

If the Hogs need to run the ball they like to give it to senior fullback Roland Sales, the hero of Arkansas' Orange Bowl victory over Oklahoma two seasons ago. Sales is ranked sixth in the SWC in rusher with a per-game average of 82.2 yards. He has scored three touchdowns this season.

Outside linebackers play an important role in both Tech's and Arkansas' defensive schemes. The Raiders received a tremendous effort from their duo of junior Jeff McKinney and sophomore Lewis Washington last week against A&M. Washington started in place of the injured Roger Jones and played well enough to be named the Avalanche-Journal's Defensive Player of the Week.

Ordonez is the third-leading scorer in the SWC with 7.2 points per game, having booted six field goals and 11 extra points.

When it comes to punting, Saturday's contest will feature the top two punters in the conference in Arkansas' Steve Cox and Tech's Maury Buford. Cox is averaging 43.3 yards a punt, Buford 42.9 yards.

Monterey Heads West

asked his feelings about traveling to Carlsbad. "They (New Mexico teams) play by (U.S. High School) Federation rules. That means they can pick up fumbles and run. . .things like that."

The Plainsmen enter the 8 p.m. CDT contest with a 4-1 mark. It will also be the second straight week Monterey has tackled a New Mexico school. Last week MHS nailed down its fourth win with an easy 49-0 win over Hobbs.

The Cavemen, paced by 9.4 sprinter Kelly Johnson, sport a 1-4 won-loss record. But Odom, as expected, said Carlsbad isn't that bad. "They've scored lots of points," said Odom. "But they've given up a lot, too."

CORONADO AT PAMPA

Of all the city schools, Coronado takes on the toughest foe tonight when it travels to Pampa at 7:30 p.m.

Pampa, a favorite along with Amarillo High to win the District 3-AAAA title, enters the game with a 4-1 won-loss mark. PHS could have easily been 5-0, but it forfeited a game to Dumas after officials learned an ineligible player had been used. Pampa had won the contest, however, 22-7.

So how are the Mustangs, 3-2 for the year, going to win the game, Quarles was asked?

"Well," quipped Quarles, "I guess we'll just have to outcoach them."

If that doesn't work, though, Quarles said Coronado will "have to control the ball on offense. If we do that we can play with them."

The Mustangs are coming off a 9-7 win Palo Duro last week. In that game, CHS had to march 73 yards with time running out before kicker Darron White was called on to kick the winning three points.

"That was really a bright spot," said Quarles. "I was pleased with the way we were able to move the ball when we had to."

Scalpers Eye Big Payoffs As Texas, OU Collide

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma has the offense. Texas has the defense. This one should register on Richter scales as far away as Alaska.

It's always been no place for the weak and meek but there is something special about the 74th renewal of the Oklahoma-Texas rivalry Saturday in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

Both schools are unbeaten and unscared. Oklahoma (4-0) is No. 3 ranked and averaging a nation-leading 45.5 points per game. Texas (3-0) is No. 4 and leading the country in total defense and third in points allowed.

Heisman winner Billy Sims of Oklahoma is leading the country in scoring with 11 touchdowns for 66 points. Barefoot John Goodson of Texas is leading America in field goals with 12.

But Texas also can be explosive offensively. Sophomore A.J. (Jam) Jones is third nationally rushing with 138 yards per game.

Oklahoma can also be stingy defensively. The first team has yet to allow a touchdown.

This game is as close as the series has been since World War II. Both teams have won 16 games a tie.

"We're not quite as good as we've been," says Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer but the Sooners have been good enough to beat Iowa 21-6, Tulsa 49-13, Rice 63-21 and Colorado 49-24.

"We're going to have to be improved offensively," says Texas coach Fred Akers, but the Longhorns have been improved enough to beat Iowa State 17-9, Missouri 21-0 and Rice 26-9.

The nationally televised meeting will get underway at 2:50 p.m. CST with 72,032 fans in the Cotton Bowl. The game has been sold out every year since 1946.

Scalpers have been asking and getting more than $100 a ticket in Dallas. The price is expected to go up as the kickoff nears. Scalping is legal in Texas.

Switzer and Akers, teammates in college at the University of Arkansas, have faced each other three times as head coaches. Switzer's Oklahoma team defeated Akers' Wyoming club 41-7 in the 1976 Fiesta Bowl, and the Sooners won 31-10 last year with Akers at the Longhorn helm for the first time.

While the eyes of Texas and Oklahoma are on the annual Red River roughhouse between the two state schools in the Cotton Bowl, there will be some vital Southwest Conference football matchups Saturday — particularly the joust between Baylor and SMU.

And the Methodists can stretch their SWC ledger to 3-0 with a victory over the Bears.

Baylor could make its record 3-1 with a win before an expected 60,000 fans Saturday night in Texas Stadium an hour or so after the Longhorns and Sooners battle it out across town.

Rice and winless TCU play for cold scraps in Houston, but defending champion Houston puts its unblemished bib on the line in College Station against the frustrated but talented Texas Aggies.

Baylor has burning memories of blowing a 21-point lead to the Mustangs in Waco in 1978 before losing 28-21.

"SMU sure did humiliate us last year," said Baylor coach Grant Teaff. "They had a chance to go under but never did. I would think if I was a (Baylor) youngster that would mean something. We're much better than we were a year ago, but so is SMU."

SMU was idle a week after losing to Tulane.

"These next four games will determine what kind of a season we have," said SMU defensive tackle Harvey Armstrong. "It will tell us how we finish in the conference and whether we go to a bowl game. We know how tough Baylor can be."

Baylor cornerback Howard Fields said, "We've got something to prove to SMU this week. Last year they beat us because our secondary let down and allowed four touchdown passes."

In other games involving the Top Ten teams, No. 1 Southern Cal plays host to Stanford, No. 2 Alabama visits Florida, Kansas plays No. 5 Nebraska, No. 6 Washington tackles Arizona State, No. 7 Houston plays at Texas A&M, Indiana visits No. 8 Ohio State, No. 9 Florida State is host to Mississippi State and No. 10 Notre Dame plays Air Force.

Elsewhere, it's Minnesota at No. 11 Michigan, No. 12 Arkansas at Texas Tech, No. 13 LSU at Georgia, Wake Forest at No. 14 North Carolina, Oklahoma State at No. 15 Missouri, No. 16 BYU at Utah State, Maryland at No. 17 North Carolina State, Vanderbilt at No. 18 Auburn, No. 19 Michigan State at Wisconsin and Illinois at No. 20 Purdue.

Southern Cal coach John Robinson is concerned with Stanford's air attack, among other things.

"They pass the ball and have good quarterbacks and good receivers," said Robinson. "And, as usual, they're hard to figure out. When they played Army, you wondered if Stanford even realized it was a real game. Then they came back and played good against UCLA."

Stanford lost to Tulane and Army, then beat San Jose State and Boston College before upsetting UCLA 27-24 last Saturday to put the Cardinals' Pac-10 mark at 1-0. Southern Cal is 5-0, 2-0 in the conference.

"If we had a healthy team, some momentum going and hadn't missed part of our spring and fall practice work, there would be room for a lot of special feelings," Florida coach Charley Pell said. "But with the problems we're concerned with, we don't have time for special feelings."

Hoople Foresees Longhorn Win

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE
Gridiron Wizard

Egad, friends, there are so many fantastic matchups on this week's card, your Fearless Forecaster hardly knows where to start — kaff-kaff!

Highlighting the Saturday festivities will be the contest pitting the Oklahoma Sooners, pride of the Big Eight, against the Texas Longhorns, the pride of the Southwestern Conference, in neutral (?) Dallas.

Getting together for the 74th time, it will be the Sooner offense, led by Heisman Award winner Billy Sims, against the swarming defense of the Longhorns.

The Hoople nod goes to the defensive stalwarts of Texas. In a down-to-the-last-whistle affair we confidently predict a Texas triumph 28-22. Harrumph!

Now, how about some of these other classic pairings:

Southern California hosting Stanford in their 58th renewal; Nebraska entertaining Kansas at Lincoln, Neb., the 86th repeat in this Big 8 series; Alabama at Florida, the 19th contest in their Southeastern loop rivalry; and Houston vs. Texas A&M and Arkansas vs. Texas Tech in a pair of sure-fire crowd pleasers in the Southwestern Conference.

Other highly rated contests: Florida State vs. Mississippi State; Missouri vs. Oklahoma State in another Big 8 meeting; Michigan vs. Minnesota in a Big 10 affair; and Ohio State vs. Indiana, also a Big 10 fray.

Then what about North Carolina State vs. Maryland and North Carolina vs. Wake Forest? All of 'em battling for the top spot in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference.

And still some others of more than passing interest find Notre Dame invading the nest — heh-heh — of the Air Force Falcons; the Arizona State Sun Devils entertaining Washington in a Pac 10 hoedown; and rugged LSU taking on Georgia. Jove! This will be a Saturday to remember!

The USC Trojans will vanquish Stanford 28-7. The high-scoring Nebraska Cornhuskers will roll over Kansas 49-14. Alabama, another potent offensive aggregation, will romp over Florida 44-12.

The Houston-Texas A&M contest will be very close all the way, with the Cougars finally taking charge for a 21-18 win over the Aggies. As evidence of how intensively these teams battle each other consider their all-time record in head-to-head competition: 7-7-3. You can't get any closer than that. Um-kumph!

The Florida State Seminoles, who have been moving up ever since Bobby Bowden moved to Tallahassee from West Virginia, will continue their climb in the ratings as they topple Mississippi State 38-21. Missouri will stop Oklahoma State 35-10.

And in the pair of Big 10 contests we call 'em: Michigan 27, Minnesota 12; and Ohio State 21, Indiana 20, in a barnburner.

There's been fireworks in the ACC all season and Saturday will be no exception. Watch for the North Carolina State Wolfpack to take the Maryland Terps 17-14 and for the resurgent Tar Heels of North Carolina to trim the surprising Wake Forest Demon Deacons 28-21.

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish have never lost to the Air Force Falcons. And appear to be a safe bet to run their record to 9-0 in this series as they take home a 42-14 victory.

Frank Kush's Sun Devils are now back on track after a couple of disappointing efforts and will pull a mild surprise as they defeat Washington 35-24. And LSU, which nearly pulled the upset of the year against Southern Cal, will add to the Georgia woes as they whip the Bulldogs 36-14!

Now go on with my forecast:

Arkansas 33, Texas Tech 16; Auburn 21, Vanderbilt 0; Boston College 14, West Virginia 10; Bowling Green 39, Kent State 20; BYU 37, Utah State 20; Brown 39, Penn 6; Bucknell 18, Lafayette 7; California 26, Oregon State 7; Clemson 23, Virginia Tech 14; Colorado State 21, UTEP 17; Cornell 17, Harvard 14; Duke 20, Richmond 13; East Carolina 38, Citadel 9; Florida A&M 40, Morris Brown 12; Grambling 29, Miss Valley State 10; Hawaii 22, Santa Clara 12; and Holy Cross 29, Colgate 15.

Also Iowa 27, Northwestern 13; Iowa State 35, Kansas State 8; Louisville 16, Tulsa 15; Massachusetts 36, Boston U. 6; Memphis State 21, NE Louisiana 14; Miami (O) 38, Ohio U. 27; Michigan State 37, Wisconsin 13; Mississippi 21, Kentucky 6; Navy 32, William & Mary 14; New Mexico 17, Nev-Las Vegas 10.

Oregon 24, Arizona 20; Penn State 27, Army 16; Pitt 23, Cincinnati 17; Princeton 15, Columbia 13; Purdue 42, Illinois 24; Rice 28, TCU 6; Rutgers 27, Conn 21; San Jose State 19, Fresno State 9; San Diego State 25, Miami (F) 12; SMU 21, Baylor 14; Southern Mississippi 38, Tulane 21; Syracuse 42, Temple 12; Tennessee 27, Georgia Tech 20; Villanova 22, Delaware 14; Yale 24, Dartmouth 21.

Johnson Brings Magic To NBA

By United Press International

For the past few years, the NBA has been suffering from what might be called a popularity crisis, with such remarks such as "you only have to watch the last two minutes of the game to catch the essence of it," and television ratings falling to new lows.

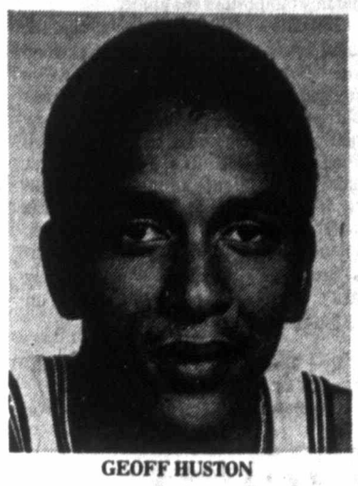

In an attempt to reverse that trend the league owners have instituted several new rules for the 1979-80 season opening tonight. The most important innovation is the adoption, for a one-year trial, of the three-point field goal.

In other changes, the season has been compressed with each team continuing to play 82 games but the regular season being shortened one week. Also, the shift of the New Orleans Jazz to Utah has necessitated a slight alteration in the divisional alignment. The Jazz and the Indiana Pacers have switched places, with Utah moving to the Midwest Division and Indiana transferring to the Central.

Tonight features a nine-game slate, and the two best known college stars from 1978-79 will make their debuts. In Boston, Larry Bird, college basketball's Player of the Year at Indiana State, will take the floor with the Celtics against the Houston Rockets.

Later in the evening, the Los Angeles Lakers' Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who led Michigan State to the NCAA Title last year, will be on display against the new-look San Diego Clippers. Besides Johnson, basketball fans will be treated to the sight of the Clippers' Lloyd Free — who will most likely join sharp-shooting backcourt mate Freeman Williams in taking full advantage of the three-point rule.

Bill Walton, who moved down the coast from Portland to San Diego in May, is not expected to play because of a sore ankle. He eventually will combine with Sidney Wicks to give San Diego decent rebounding strength.

GEOFF HUSTON

Wicks probably will be matched against the Lakers' Spencer Haywood while Johnson, a 6-foot-8 guard with deft play-making ability, will team with Norm Nixon to make a fleet backcourt.

In other games tonight, Cleveland is at New Jersey, Philadelphia at Washington, New York at Atlanta, Indiana at Detroit, Milwaukee at Kansas City, Golden State at Phoenix and Utah at Portland.

The game at Atlanta will see former Texas Tech guard Geoff Huston in action.

Huston, the first Raider to make an NBA team roster for the regular season, impressed Knicks' officials with his ball-handling.

"He gives us a lot of leadership on the floor, too," a New York spokesman said. "Also, when he's in there, we have a little more speed at guard."

Sanguillen Remembers Roberto, Dedicates Game-Winning Hit

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BALTIMORE (AP) — "I carry the memory of Roberto Clemente in my heart," said Manny Sanquillen, sweat dripping from his shaggy black beard and another kind of water oozing from his flashing dark eyes. "I dedicate my winning hit to Roberto. I hope we play the whole series for Roberto."

Baseball is a sentimental game and sentiment prevailed Thursday night when this 35-year-old third-string catcher with an anemic .230 batting average was called out of the bullpen to strike the blow that sends the 1979 World Series to Pittsburgh tied at a game apiece with the Baltimore Orioles.

"Roberto, he was always an inspiration for me," the bench-warmer said afterward. "I never forget the 1971 World Series. Roberto, he tells everybody, 'Get us in the World Series and I hit .400 and win it for you.' That's what he did."

The 1971 Series between these same two teams went seven games, with the Pirates rallying from an 0-2 deficit to win it. Clemente batted .414, hit two home runs and pulled off spectacular fielding plays to dominate the series.

It became known as the "Roberto Clemente Series." Spurred by his baseball idol, a younger Sanguillen himself got 11 hits in the series and batted .379.

Sanguillen is a bear of a man — six feet tall and 195 pounds — with a marshmallow heart.

"I work for the Lord," he says softly to waves of reporters seeking more baseball details. "I pray before every game. I pray none of us get hurt. I pray that we win this one for Roberto."

The aging Panamanian catcher fails to get upset when the postgame grilling turns to questions about his reputation for swinging at bad balls, the fact he played in only 56 games this season and batted in only four runs — not counting the most important one of his 15-year professional career.

"I have five RBI," he insists, correcting the printed record. "I pinch-hit against the Phillies in the last series and I knocked in two runs."

On the suggestion that he swings on bad balls, he said: "That is not true. I go to bat, I look for a good pitch and I swing."

Sanguillen was catching in the bullpen when the telephone rang. Ed Ott had singled and Phil Garner had drawn a walk off Baltimore's game-saver, Don Stanhouse.

"Tell Sanguillen to get over to the dugout," barked Manager Tanner. Manny put on three layers of sweaters to ward off the chilly rain and responded.

"I thought he could handle Stanhouse," the skipper said. "I told him if he got an inside pitch to jerk it out."

Sanguillen got a curve, a slider, a fast ball and a slider, in that order, the count going to 1-2 with one foul. Then he lashed out the winning hit.

"I follow the ball. It is a low slider, a good pitch. But I get all of it," he said. "It makes me very happy."

Raiders' Enthusiasm Impresses Arkansas Lineman

Arkansas tackle Greg Kolenda and Houston guard Dennis Greenawalt accept the plight of the offensive lineman — a lot of work and very little recognition. They also accept that things still need improving on the offensive line, though the stats don't bear that out. Arkansas and Houston are 1-2 in Southwest Conference total offense after four games and both are undefeated with tough opponents coming up Saturday. Arkansas travels to Texas Tech Saturday, and UH helps the Aggies open remodeled Kyle Field in College Station. Greenawalt, a senior from Baytown Lee, and Kolenda, a senior three-year letterman from Kansas City, talk about their teams and upcoming opponents:

Q — How about rating your offense?

Greenawalt — So far this season we haven't actually played a complete football game. We've shown the ability to move the football, but we haven't done it consistently. We've let little mistakes hurt us. We've had a lot of little penalties here and there that kill drives. The fumbles are just coming from our running backs who are new this year. But they are still trying hard and putting forth a lot of effort. If you watch them run you can see that they really give their all every down and as long as you can get that, the fumbles are things you can overlook. Sometimes they get a little carried away and just start throwing their body around and not looking at what they are doing with the ball. That's hurt a lot of our drives. We've fumbled the ball four or five times into the end zone. The rest of our problems are a little bit mental. We're hoping to try to get rid of a lot of the problems this week and get a little more jelled. I think that we are progressing.

Kolenda — Up until the TCU game last week I would have said we were ahead of schedule on offense. But TCU played us hard and threw some stuff at us that we hadn't seen. We just weren't really sure what to do and that's pretty much why we didn't play that well. TCU played us the hardest that anyone has so far. I would still say that overall we are ahead of last year on offense.

Q — How about your running backs?

Greenawalt — Of course, Randy Love and Emmett King had been around for a long time but at the first of last year, I wasn't used to them, either. We started out slow with them last year and by the third game we were pretty well together. If we had Love and King back I'm sure that we'd be better off now because of the confidence factor. The running backs we have now, John Newhouse and Terald Clark, are going to be as good if not better than King and Love. They really have the dedication and most important the ability.

Kolenda — We have new running backs what with Cowins and Eckwood gone but that doesn't mean we've changed things for anybody. We expect that our runners are going to follow their assignments and they have been doing a good job of it. Now it doesn't make any difference to me if I'm blocking for an Earl Campbell or a fourth grader, I still have to do the same job. Roland Sales is running well and Thomas Brown is coming on well. It really hasn't taken any kind of adjustment on my part blocking for them.

Q — Does the lack of attention bother you as an offensive linemen?

Greenawalt — I tell you what: For me it's just gotten to be something I accept. Sure it would be nice to see in the paper that so-and-so had a great blocking game and led the backs into 150-yard games or something like that. I don't think any of us are really bitter about it. We're going to get our recognition if the team does well. So we just try to perform as best we can so the backs can perform as best they can and that makes us look good. I get really excited when they do well; it's the measure of my performance.

Kolenda — It doesn't really bother me. When I first came here I knew I was going to be an offensive lineman. I knew then that there was no glory in it. I got my glory from the backs. When Ben Cowins gains over a thousand yards in each of three years, that's my glory right there. When you help somebody like that, you know that you're a part of it and that's all you need in the way of recognition.

Q — How about your Saturday opponent?

Greenawalt — This is going to be the wildest banzai attack we've faced this year. They get total dedication from the people at A&M. I think they're going to be prepared and give it their all. We are going to have to be totally prepared if we are going to stay in the game. We've watched them play and sometimes they play so good it's unbelievable. I think they'll be ready this week, because anytime they play at home with all those fans, the A&M fans always get so together in their support. I look forward to games like that because it pumps me up when the fans are wild. I know when I look up in those stands and see all those people rocking back and forth, it's going to fire me up something fierce.

Kolenda — We've watched Tech on film and they play a similar defense to TCU. We watched the personnel in the Baylor game and the main thing about Tech is their enthusiasm. Everytime a guy makes a big play he's mobbed like it was the play of the year. So you can figure that they aren't letting down on any play. I took a close look at their freshman, Gabriel Rivera. For a guy who weighs 300 pounds it's unbelievable how quick he is. There were a lot of plays where he was tackling the quarterback from behind. You'd think a guy that big couldn't do that. He's a fine athlete. But overall, Tech is a fine team. I don't think we'll be looking ahead to Texas, not after last week. They do it at any given time. Take away that interception by Mike Massey and it would have gone the other way. It certainly it something we'll learn from.

Q — Do you see your team as SWC champions?

Greenawalt — I definitely think this year's team is as good as last year's team and maybe better. I think the start of any good offense has got to be up front on the offensive line and we're all back this year except for (center) Chuck Brown. And the one we have this year (Randy Swisher) is stronger but maybe not as quick. Our defense played its best game against Baylor. If they can play consistently and we can quit putting the ball on the turf, we will be better. We have a great start this year and things are going well. We're pleased but not satisfied. The championship is at stake and if we keep it up against several very good opponents, who knows, we might be back in the Cotton Bowl. What happened to us in the Cotton Bowl last year certainly stays with me, especially when someone brings it up. People asked all summer why we blew the Cotton Bowl. It's something that helps us get it in gear a little more, just thinking about it.

Kolenda — I think we can do it. The backs are coming on and getting a little better each week. The line and the receivers are all back and have the experience, plus we have two great quarterbacks in Kevin Scanlon and Tom Jones. I don't think we'll have any problem staying in the picture.

Annual Shrine Game Looms

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Followers of Texas Tech football will have an opportunity to see the Red Raider stars of the future in action Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium when the junior varsity squad — the Picadors — hosts the University of Houston JV in the 13th annual Khiva Shrine Bowl.

The yearly contest is sponsored by the South Plains-Panhandle area Khiva Shriners and proceeds from the game go to the Burns Institute in Galveston. The hospital is one of 22 Shrine hospitals in North America that treat children with orthopedic problems or severe burns who might otherwise not be able to afford proper care.

The Picadors have won eight of the previous 12 games, including last year's 22-19, last-second victory over the West Texas State junior varsity.

"Our players consider it an honor to play in a game that aids such a worthy cause," said Tech JV head coach Jerry Bomar. "The junior varsity program at Tech allows some of our younger players the chance to play in a game situation. This game not only helps the football program at Tech, but it gives our players the chance to help others who are less fortunate."

The Tech junior varsity squad is made up mostly of freshmen who have not had the opportunity to see varsity action. There are also some sophomore and junior scout squad members on the team.

The Picadors played their first of three games three weeks ago against the University of New Mexico JV and emerged with a 10-8 victory. Tech's junior varsity ends its season Oct. 25 when it hosts Ranger Junior College.

Houston's Kittens come into the Shrine Bowl with a 1-1 record. The Kittens lost a 23-7 decision to the LSU junior varsity three weeks ago but rebounded last Monday and defeated the University of Texas JV 24-6.

The last time Tech and Houston junior varsity squads tangled was during the 1977 season and the Kittens took a 21-15 victory.

"I think we'll be a little more prepared for this game than we were for New Mexico," Bomar added. "We've had a little more time to work with the players than we did before the New Mexico game. Our players are very excited about playing, especially since this will be the first time many of them have played at Jones Stadium."

Defensively, freshmen Jeff McGowan and Rob Wills will open at outside linebackers. Another pair of rookies, Stan Williams and Greg Chafin, will start at the inside linebacking slots.

Four first-year players will make up Tech's secondary. They are cornerbacks Steve Heniford and Calvin Wilke and safeties Keith Davis and Jerry Hatchett.

The Shriners hope that football fans across the South Plains will turn out for Monday's game to support the Picadors. Shrine Bowl chairman Irving Skibell said that no one wishing to see the game would be turned away at the gate.

All area youth-league participants (Youth Football League, Lubbock Soccer Association, etc.) will be admitted to the game free if they wear their jerseys.

Ex-UT Guard Cut By San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have waived rookie guard Johnny Moore of Texas — the last of numerous roster moves that leave the Spurs with three rookies and two other newcomers on their 11-man roster for Saturday night's season opener.

The NBA's defending Central Division champions open here Saturday night against Detroit with last year's starting lineup intact, but with a host of new faces on the ench.

49ers, Bengals Seek First NFL Victories

By United Press International

Now that there are no unbeaten teams remaining in the NFL, the question is whether the Cincinnati Bengals and San Francisco 49ers can join the rest of the league in the victory column.

Last Sunday, the previously winless New York Giants disposed of the last undefeated club, Tampa Bay, and will host the 49ers Sunday at Giants Stadium. The Baltimore Colts also snapped a five-game 1979 losing streak last week with a 10-8 victory over the New York Jets.

So now there are two.

The 49ers, directed by rookie coach Bill Walsh, have come close to giving their coach his first NFL triumph on several occasions but have blown fourth-quarter leads a number of times and stand 0-6.

"We feel positive about the players giving such an outstanding effort," he said of last week's 35-24 loss to Seattle. "They're not giving up."

While the 49ers have a good shot at capturing that elusive first victory against the Giants, the Bengals face a slightly more difficult task when they entertain the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

But Cincinnati defensive coach Dick Modzelewski says, "I'm glad Pittsburgh is coming in now. The way I look at this game is that we'll find out how many true bloods we have."

That will probably be the case since Pittsburgh, with quarterback Terry Bradshaw at the controls, leads the league in scoring with 160 points.

But Bengals' coach Homer Rice says his club's record can not be attributed to lack of effort.

"You can't resurrect Knute Rockne," said Rice. "If it were a matter of lack of effort (by the players) and if yelling would get the job done, I'd be out there yelling at them every day. But there's not a guy here who's not busting his gut to win football games."

The surprising Chiefs are out to keep their share of the AFC West lead when they host the Broncos.

Off to its best start since 1971 when they won the Western title, Kansas City is tied with Denver and the San Diego Chargers for the division lead and a crowd of 78,000 — the first sellout at Arrowhead Stadium since 1973 — is expected for the game.

Tech Women Set Cage Clinic

The Saturday session will begin at 9 a.m. following a one-hour late registration period. Saturday's program will end at noon because of the Tech-Arkansas football game.

The clinic resumes at 9 a.m. Sunday and runs through 5 p.m.

The program has been designed specifically to allow area basketball coaches (both men and women) to benefit from the latest trends in coaching and conditioning.

Clinicians will include Tech men's basketball coach Gerald Myers, Texas A&M women's cage coach Cherri Rapp, Wayland Baptist College women's basketball coach Cathy Wilson and Tech strength-training coach Russ Polhemus.

Early registration will conclude at 5 p.m. today at the women's gym. The cost of the clinic is $15.

Expert Expects U.S. Recession

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — In the past few days Americans learned that September unemployment declined to 5.8 percent from August's 6 percent, consumers added to their debt and purchasing agents expressed optimism.

Taken together, these bits of intelligence hardly convey the idea of recession, which some economists maintain already has us in its grip and which many more say will pounce upon us before the end of the year.

Alert Cox J., president of Merrill Lynch Economics and former White House economist, is among the latter.

Did the news in recent days shake his recession theory? "No," he replied. "If anything, it strengthened my conviction that the recession will wind up deep and long."

Analysis

In fact, said Cox, he was already writing a report raising to 60 percent the likelihood of a severe downturn. He said it will come by year-end, and reach its depth in the first half of 1980.

By the third quarter of next year, he maintains, unemployment will have reached 8.9 percent, and retail sales will be off badly. It will, he said, be "pretty wicked," almost as bad as in 1974-1975.

What is it that makes men such as Cox so concerned? "The underlying trends," he said. Factors such as the flattening out of employment increases, sluggishness in productivity, consumer buying weakness.

"The trend is weakness," he said. "Inflation is eating away at incomes and confidence." September's figures mightn't look bad now, he said, but over the long term they'll be seen as oddities in a pattern.

Cox believes they might even deepen the recession by giving business and consumers a false sense of hope. Purchasing agents, for example, might be inclined to build up inventories, which then cannot be sold.

That situation occurred in 1974. During the first six months of the year companies built their inventories to "wildly excessive" levels. "I fear it is happening again," he said. During July, he points out, inventories grew about about $90 billion, the biggest ever for a month.

Cox blames what he sees as a worsening situation on some of the earlier forecasts in which the word "mild" was repeated over and over by economists, Cox included. He said it may have lent false hope.

As he sees it, the recession will be in two stages. The first part, in which we have been for the past six months by Cox's reckoning, will be mild, its impact scattered rather than pervasive.

The second part will be "wicked," a word he used several times in an interview. Unemployment, traditionally the measure of severity used by millions of Americans, will spurt. Everyone will feel the impact.

Cox concedes that unemployment in recent years does not produce the level of hardship it once did, partly because of jobless benefits. But 8.9 percent of a 104-million-person labor force is still severe.

Is there anything to be gained from a recession? Apparently. Cox's economic forecast through 1989 is quite the opposite of his short-range outlook. He foresees real economic growth and only moderate inflation.

He is optimistic that the United States will overcome many of the factors he feels have produced such a chaotic economy in the 1970s. And his forecast is based on assumptions that:

1. "Government spending, especially for social welfare programs, will slow substantially.

2. "Economic growth will be powered by an acceleration in business investment, reflecting the reduced role of government and increased investment-oriented changes in our tax structure.

3. "Government regulation will be reassessed, sharply curtailed, and in some cases rolled back or abolished."

In the meantimen he said he was more convinced than before that the nation will have to wrestle with a severe recession, second in the post-World War Two era only to that of 1974-1975.

Prison Escapee Apprehended

GRAPEVINE (UPI) — A prisoner who escaped from San Quentin prison in California wearing women's clothing, has been captured in Texas while on his way to visit his sister in a hospital, authorities said.

Prison spokesman Mike Madding said Tutheir Danowski was apprehended Wednesday while driving to a Grapevine hospital where his sister was a patient.

Police said they tried to stop his vehicle but Danowski drove away. He was captured after he lost control of the car and ran off the road.

Danowski, 24, escaped last Sunday shortly after his wife came to visit him. He apparently slipped into some clothes she left in a restroom and walked to freedom.

He was serving a life term for a conviction in California of kidnapping and extortion.

Congressmen Still Swayed By Personal Letters From Voters

By DON PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Write your congressman. It actually works; at least it works most of the time.

At a time when government seems to be responding less and less to individual citizens and their problems, Congress still listens.

You may get a carefully worded non-answer which tries mightily to sound as if it is actually saying something. But at least your view will be known to someone who may soon be voting on the issue you mentioned.

Contrary to what you may believe, your letter probably will be one of only a few dozen "personal" letters your congressman receives in any month. When hundreds or thousands of letters pour into a congressman's office, it is a safe bet that they are easy-to-recognize organized campaigns by lobby groups.

Therefore, your letter probably will carry more weight than you think because it is from a truly concerned voter and not from an organization.

And if you have a problem, most congressmen will assign a "case worker" to do everything possible to get action. Most congressmen learn very early that

Washington Window

In some cases — if you are lucky enough to have such a congressman — case work is handled by staff members who take joy in browbeating the bureaucracy. In some cases, case workers work under a time limit for handling problems.

How do you write your congressman and what happens to your letter?

First, find out who your congressman is. That's fairly easy. Just call the local library or look in the phone book under "U.S. Government." Almost any agency listed there would know.

Usually you will get faster action on a particular problem from a House member, but letters stating an opinion should go to both the House member from your district and to both your senators.

The address usually is "The Hon. (name); House (or Senate) Office Building. Washington, D.C. 20515 (or 20510 if the letter is going to a senator).

Your letter probably will be opened by a secretary who then will route it to the proper staff member. Therefore, it is good to get the subject of the letter as high as possible.

If your letter expresses an opinion, you will receive a reply — often a form letter — saying whether the congressman agrees or disagrees, or talking around the subject so well that you may not be able to figure what he thinks.

Whatever the answer, your opinion will be taken into account when your congressman wants to know what the "folks back home" think.

If your letter is about a problem, a case worker may make some phone calls and answer you directly.

But with most problems, or with letters asking information about some subject, a staff member probably will simply staple a form post card to your letter and send it to the proper agency in the bureaucracy. You will almost always get through to the proper agency faster through your congressman than through writing the bureaucracy yourself.

Agencies and departments consider these letters from congressmen a top priority, and you will almost certainly get a quick answer. If you aren't satisfied with the answer, write again.

DR. LAMB

Inherited Tendency

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband died after having angina pectoris and enlargement of the heart. He had this five years beginning when he was only 46. His mother died of heart attacks and his grandfather and one aunt and a cousin. Now our son is 35 years old and I worry about him inheriting this same thing. He is so like his father in looks and character. Is this an inherited trait?

DEAR READER — You're wise to be concerned. There is an inherited tendency to have heart trouble early in life. With such a family history, all family members should be evaluated for blood fats and cholesterol and blood pressure. If any of these is out of line, it's important to follow a preventive program.

Heart attacks are one of the leading causes of death in young men in the United States. The likelihood of heart attacks increases markedly after age 35, although they can occur even before that age.

I've heard people comment that a preventive program didn't help a person if he died from a heart attack in his middle 50s. However, if he comes from a family with a history of dying from heart disease in their middle 40s, living 10 years beyond his inherited characteristics is pretty good.

If your son checks out well on a medical examination — has a low normal cholesterol, doesn't smoke and has normal or low normal blood pressure — his outlook is quite good. If any of these is altered, appropriate measures should be taken to bring them to optimal levels if possible.

You'll want to know more about the factors that determine his risk so I'm sending you The Health Letter numnber 13-2, How To Measure Your Risk of Heart Disease. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Lately many people have been talking about the loud volume of musical bands and its effect on your hearing. Are human ears greatly affected by loud musical noise? If so, what is the right volume for normal listening pleasure without harming the ears? Is there anything one can do to prevent the loss of hearing in such cases?

DEAR READER — As far as the ears are concerned, all sound is noise whether it's musical or a cannon blast or the loud roar of a jet engine. If the noise is too loud, it definitely can damage the hearing. Exceptionally loud or prolonged noise can cause permanent hearing loss.

There have been a number of studies showing that the loud music associated with modern music trends can cause ear damage. Loudness is measured in decibels and you'd have to have specialized equipment to measure the noise level around you.

You can protect yourself by wearing earplugs or earmuffs. These are used in industrial situations where workers must be exposed to loud noise as around aircraft.

Wearing Of Masks Requires Caution

By SHARI LEWIS

Have you noticed how some little kids become terrified as soon as you put on a mask? And if you try to put the mask on them, watch out! They often truly panic.

If this is true of your little sister or brother or the tiny children in your neighborhood, here's how you can handle the situation: Don't walk toward them — rather, back away so that they can see that the monster (you in the mask) isn't coming to get them. Take off the mask so the little one can clearly understand that it's you underneath. Then put the mask over your face and take it away. Put it on again, and take it off.

Now slowly, hold the mask out to the child. Maybe he or she will want to touch it or even put it on and look in the mirror!

And if you have to take a kid like this trick-or-treating, you might make a mask that doesn't have to be worn.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: In a family where each son has twice as many sisters as he has brothers, and each daughter has the same number of brothers as sisters, how many boys and how many girls are there in this family?

Answer: There are four girls and three boys.

Today's Brain Twister: Some African proverbs are handed down from generation to generation. Here's one such: What looks down on the valley but can never go into it? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Berlin Launches Drive For New Industry

By RICHARD M. HARNETT

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Berlin, the historic capital of Germany, is launching a major effort to lure new industry and has its eye on America's high-technology industries.

"Many people don't realize that Berlin is the largest industrial city between Paris and Moscow," W. F. Robinow told UPI in an interview on his arrival in San Francisco. "We also offer a number of unique cash incentives to new industries."

Robinow is one of a small team of highly experienced businessmen recruited by the new Berlin Economic Development Corporation to comb the United States and Europe for new industries for Berlin. He was born in Germany but fled in 1938 and returned there as a U.S. Army officer in World War II.

"When some people think of Berlin, they think of spies being exchanged, or armed Russian and American soldiers passing each other in jeeps," said Robinow.

Actually, he said, West Berlin, with a population of 2 million, "is probably the safest city in Europe.

"It is to the Russians what Hong Kong is to the Chinese. There are just too many advantages for them. It would be foolish to close it up."

Since the four-power agreement in 1971, he said, Berlin has experienced "no nasty things from East Germany.

"Productivity has increased. There is no longer a 'frontier' spirit. Public buildings are being repaired. The city has become what it was in the 20s and 30s, the cultural center of West Germany."

Berlin is integrated in the Bonn government and in the Common Market. Its factories ship 85 percent of their products — such as all the crankshafts used in Mercedes Benz vehicles — to other cities in West Germany. But the city is still heavily subsidized by the federal government.

Because of Berlin's political importance, the West German government is willing to grant industries settling there remarkable concessions. A new business moving to Berlin can lease land at 3 percent of its market value, can get cash grants of 15 percent for buildings, 25 percent for production machinery, 10 percent for office and business equipment, and up to 40 percent for research and development assets, Robinow said.

"Another unique thing we offer," he said, "is 100 percent financing of the investment at a cost of 4 percent or less." This is accomplished through the grants and loans from the European Recovery Program (Marshall Plan).

"In addition, Berlin industries get a 10 percent break in the value-added tax," Robinow noted, "adding 10 percent to gross profits, year after year."

Individuals working in Berlin have eight percent of their income tax-free, he said.

The biggest task of the new development corporation, Robinow conceded, is winning over businessmen who still have the image of Berlin as a 'hostage' city. The image is outdated, he said.

"It is a job of education. We can show the figures. We have the highest productivity in the world. The city will recruit the employees throughout Germany for specific jobs in Berlin. It has excellent transportation, theaters and schools. One-third of its 230 square miles is water or green area. There are 36,000 boats registered.

"When I tell that to people here, they wont believe it," said Robinow.

University Offers Course On Business End Of Music

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Music students trained in the business end of the music industry can look forward to a healthy job market, says the director of the recently established music-industry program at Syracuse University.

Stephen F. Marcone, assistant professor in Syracuse University's School of Music, says music-industry executives have long been aware that many of their employees, although well trained in music, have no knowledge of business, while those handling business affairs often know very little about music.

Marcone says he discovered the need for a program that would cover both areas while traveling as a musician.

"I was on the road in the early '70s with a CBS recording group and realized that even with my traditional master of music in music education, I still had very little training in survival in the business," Marcone said.

"I thought that since most young people were listening to jazz rock music at that time, and many undoubtedly planned to enter the field, universities and colleges should not continue to neglect educating students who want to pursue a career in the music industry. With skills in both music and business, graduates of a program like ours have an excellent chance at making a success in the field."

The bachelor in music industry program at Syracuse University includes internship work in recording companies and publishing houses as well as courses in the legal and business aspects of the industry. Top industry executives are brought to the university to lecture on the realities of "making it" in the music industry.

FBI Statistics Show Rise In Crime Rate

Civiletti spoke as the FBI reported this week that serious crime in the nation rose 8 percent in the second quarter of the year as compared to the same period a year ago. The increase was 11 percent higher in the first three months of this year than in the comparable period last year. "The current statistics indicate crime continues to be one of Americans' most serious national problems," said FBI Director William H. Webster.

Stock Market Problems Unlike Those Of 1929

By JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — High interest rates, a sharp break in stock prices on record volume, large credit extensions and assurances by economists that current conditions are temporary — it all sounds depressingly familiar.

The description is Wall Street Wednesday, but coming on the 50th anniversary of the Crash of 1929, parallels are inevitable — and wrong.

Nearly every facet of the economy and the financial markets that provide funds to make it work has changed since the start of the Great Depression that wiped out U.S. economic growth in the 1930s.

The changes have taken many forms: regulation over stock trading, banks and credit; shifts in the work force to include many families with two wage-earners; insurance covering unemployment, old age and bank deposits; farm price supports and myriad other alterations.

Clearly, none of the advances in the structure of the economy and in monetary and fiscal policies has avoided persistent peacetime inflation — today's gravest threat that was little noticed even 20 years ago.

Because of inflation, the Federal Reserve Board has been willing to drive interest rates to record levels and lead the economy into a deeper slump. The Fed's weekend credit-tightening actions also sent financial markets into turmoil this week.

The situation was quite different in 1929 when inflation was miniscule. The Fed followed an easy credit policy into 1929 to please European nations but then became alarmed at raging stock speculation. It tightened credit prior to October and then loosened it with the crash.

The money supply, however, continued to contract. Analysts still debate if the decline in the money supply was the cause or a result of the Great Depression. Today money supply growth is galloping and the Fed now is giving top priority to efforts to reverse the flow.

No orgy of stock market profits led up to the current fall in prices. All analysts believe stocks are severely undervalued today, just the reverse of the house of cards built up on Wall Street in 1929.

The 1929 tidal wave gained momentum because stocks were bought for as little as 5 percent cash, with the rest borrowed. Uncontrolled stock credit meant a decline in prices forced investors to come up with more cash or have their shares dumped on the market.

Today, federal law requires at least 50 percent of the stock purchase price to be in cash and many brokers require even more cash.

Individuals have long since been displaced as the dominant forces on Wall Street by institutions — investment firms, insurance companies and pension funds — which have strong capital resources.

The Securities and Exchange Commisssion, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and the Securities Investors Protection Corp. all were created after 1929 to provide protection against fraud, manipulation and the collapse of financial institutions.

Inmate Eyes Notoriety

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — "Grandma Marijuana" says she is doing just "splendidly" in jail and has used her time to meditate, thinking up ways to cash in on her notoriety.

Lois Faulkner, 68, says she plans to go on a college campus speaking tour and "make a fortune from Grandma Marijuana T-shirts, pants, hats, caps, belts and other paraphenelia."

Mrs. Faulkner will be released from the Ventura County Jail Oct. 28, after serving a 53-day jail sentence for selling and giving marijuana to school children. She said she distributed the pot because it was good for the children.

The woman disclosed her future plans in a letter to the Simi Valley Enterprise.

Mrs. Faulkner wrote that she is "withstanding the ordeal of incarceration splendidly."

"Prison walls do not a prison make," she said. "I am made of steel, so to speak."

She said she is proud of her "Grandma Marijuana" nickname and plans to use the publicity to full advantage.

Writers have been contacting her about book and movie rights and she plans on a lecture tour of college campuses, campaigning for legalization of marijuana, she said.

Mrs. Faulkner, however, has promised never to sell marijuana again.

Northeast Railroad Considers Layoffs

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Delaware & Hudson Railway, the last major privately owned Northeast railroad, may lay off about 10 percent of its 2,100-person workforce to try to obtain additional federal funds.

The layoffs will include seasonal furloughs and could save the company about $1 million over four months, a company official said Wednesday. The line hopes to get $4 million in federal loans, half of which is tied up by a law requiring the company to set up an employee stock ownership program. The D&H has discussed cutbacks with the U.S. Railway Association, an agency that subsidizes carriers. The D&H has received the full $30 million in loans allocated by the agency.

Writer Rates 'Miracle Worker' One Of TV's Best Productions

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Anyone who can walk away from "The Miracle Worker" with dry eyes must be even more deaf and blind than Helen Keller — deaf to a heart-rending, uplifting story and blind to tautly compassionate performances.

"The Miracle Worker" goes on NBC Sunday, 7-9 p.m., Central time, with Melissa Gilbert in the role Patty Duke Astin portrayed 20 years ago on Broadway as the young Helen Keller, and the now grown Mrs. Astin taking over the part of Annie Sullivan, Helen's teacher, orginally played on stage by Anne Bancroft.

The drama is one of television's finest productions, an emotionally wringing experience that the entire family can enjoy — and that means the men and women as well as the children toward whom "family" entertainment most often is aimed.

The story of "The Miracle Worker" tells how an Irish orphan girl, cured of blindness herself but still with impaired sight, is hired by a well-to-do Tennessee family as governess to their unmanageable blind, deaf and mute child who the world came to know as Helen Keller.

When Annie arrives, she finds Helen living behind the impenetrable wall of her afflictions, a wild and primitive being who may be institutionalized if she can't be controlled. Her parents' pity and guilt about their feelings toward Helen have sealed her isolation.

Annie tells the Kellers that Helen is a badly spoiled child and asks, "What good will your pity do her when you're under the strawberries?"

In a war of wills, fierce little Annie Sullivan forces Helen into obedience and — finally, blessedly — understanding. The tension, the despair, the frustrations aud the hope, are beautifully portrayed by Mrs. Astin. In beautiful counterpoint to Mrs. Astin's tough, practical Annie is Miss Gilbert's groping, stubborn, valiant and oddly graceful Helen. Miss Gilbert so far has been best known for her role as Laura in "Little House on the Prairie."

"The Miracle Worker" began life on television as a "Playhouse 90" in 1957, starring Teresa Wright and Patty McCormack. William Gibson adapted it for the stage in 1959, starring Miss Bancroft and Patty Duke, and in 1962 it became a movie, again starring Bancroft and Duke.

"The Miracle Worker" is more than good television — it is powerful, moving and superb theater.

Pentagon Allows NJ Base To Stay Open

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's recruiting center at Fort Dix, N.J., has a new lease on life.

The Pentagon said this week it had changed its mind and decided not to close the base as planned. The planned closure, which was a hot political issue in the region, was reversed because Army officials said they hope to increase recruiting efforts and will need the facility.

Prominent New York Politicians Attend Opening Of 'Potholes'

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The governor and three former mayors went out in the rain recently to an off-Broadway opening in Greenwich Village's small Cherry Lane Theater.

Gov. Hugh Carey, Robert Wagner, John Lindsay and Abraham Beame were there because "Potholes" has book and lyrics by Elinor Guggenheimer, former commissioner of the city's Department of Consumer Affairs. A TV crew went up and down the aisle, photographing the politicians in the audience.

To state the best feature of the show first, Mrs. Guggenheimer writes terrific lyrics. A funny cab driver, pushing the cardboard side of a taxi warbles, "It's really a pity I don't know the city." A TV producer sings, "When CBS fires me, ABC hires me. Network musical chairs."

Other lyrics, too long to quote, were pithy and perceptive, making a better impression than Tim Simons' music.

Mrs. Guggenheimer doesn't have to worry that people will complain to the present Consumer Affairs commissioner that they stepped into a pit when they went to her "Potholes." But the evening, while it has its up moments, also has its dull ones. It doesn't fly as one would wish.

"Potholes" is a "warts-and-all" show about New York for an audience who lives here and loves it. The form is almost a revue, one song following another with a general theme. However, it is a bit more a "book show" than that, and this unifying architecture doesn't have nearly the originality that individual song lyrics do.

"Potholes" starts exceptionally uninterestingly, with shopping bag ladies and subway scenes seemingly presented for their recognition value. But act one ends with a lively, funny "in" scene with the mayor asking how he's doing, the female city council president wanting his job and a borough president wanting federal office.

Gaudy Revue Startles Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — With toe-tapping Ann Miller, 27 supporting players, a squadron of white doves, a sad-faced dog and 25 song, dance and joke routines, Mickey Rooney and "Sugar Babies" have arrived.

This gaudy caper, marking Rooney's Broadway debut after 57 years in show biz, bowed this week. The more tender patrons of theater will call it inane, vulgar and loud. Some may even emit a discreet boo.

But "Sugar," by Ralph Allen and Harry Rigby, makes no bones that it's just the lavish, cutie-filled old kind of burlesque revue that clergymen once denounced, cops raided and Jimmy Walker inhabited.

It opens with a bit of song and cheery gab by Rooney, closes with a rousing, flag-waving finale featuring Miss Miller, clad as a gold lame Statue of Liberty. Anything modern in it is purely accidental.

Alas, there are times you don't need the pastilles. The blackout skits are yawn fare. So are the so-called comedy classics, like the courtroom sketch with the lecherous judge (Rooney) and pretty defendant (Miller), or the tired, wheezy "Meet Me 'Round the Corner" routine.

But there is something to be said about a show in which Miss Miller will ask why hummingbirds hum and Rooney will brightly reply, "Because they forgot the words." A groaner, you say?

Well, try the sales spiel of old pitchman Sid Stone, who touts a perfume thusly: "I guarantee you, ladies, your boyfriend will bite your ear off. But I warn you — you can only use it twice."

No? To artistic matters, then — like the dreamlike salute to Sally Rand, in which one, then a score of lovelies essay a stunning version of her fan dance with blue feather fans. It is very inspiring.

So are the singing and looks of tall, blonde Ann Jillian, Rooney's protege (that's what the playbill says). She sings "Warm and Willing" in a Greek garden and winds up draped in white doves.

It is mighty impressive. So is the sight of the show's 14-girl chorus line, all good singers and dancers, dressed in violent orange top hats and tails, doing a sprightly minstrel turn in black light.

Miss Miller, who arrives singing "I Feel a Song Coming On" while perched atop tasteful zebradskin luggage, is superb. She has 42 years in show biz, but her gams, bouffant hair-do, and tap-dancing ability are as sturdy as ever. And she can still belt a song.

Of course, it helps that there's great belting material throughout the show, both ballads and up-tempo wares by such masters as Jimmy McHugh, Jay Livingston, Ray Evans and Arthur Malvin.

And old pro Rooney, 59, is just brilliant, a marvel of nifty hoofing, infectious good humor and timing so sharp he makes you laugh even at material so old it stays put while its grave turns over.

He and Miss Miller get fine support from another old pro, Ernest Flatt, who staged this yesteryear epic quite briskly. His dancers leap, bound and tap-dance with a cheery gusto that's a joy to watch.

But the greatest joy comes when the two stars adjourn to the piano (which Rooney plays very well), and romp through a five-song medley with such skill and spirit you hate to see it end.

It's near the close of the show and makes the old-fashioned, flag-waving grand finale almost an anti-climax, no mean feat considering the finale's color and energy and the fact four chorines even wear model ships — both steam and sail — atop their wigs.

Go see "Sugar Babies." Yes, it's flawed. But it also is — don't tell this to anyone who demands taste, subtlety or sophistication — great old-style fun.

Walter Kerr, New York Times — The occasion is essentially a Rooney occasion ... and the indefatigable Rooney is exactly as energetic and exactly as talented as he was when, at the age of 3 or 4, he rammed a cigar into his mouth, raked a derby over his brow, and made a star of himself.

Douglas Watt, New York Daily News — Everybody grins, smiles, struts and walks happy, but it's mostly in vain. Try as they will, "Sugar Babies" ... refuses to budge most of the time. ... Some art forms are deservedly forgotten.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

Elmer Sperry, American inventor and electrical engineer, was born Oct. 12, 1860.

On this date in history:

In 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered the new world known as "America." The first landing is believed to have been made in the Bahamas, southeast of what now is Florida.

In 1960, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev removed one of his shoes and pounded on his desk with it during a speech before the United Nations. General Assembly President Frederick Boland lost his Irish temper and split his gavel trying to restore order.

In 1973, President Nixon nominated House Minority Leader Gerald Ford for the vice presidency to replace Spiro Agnew who resigned two days earlier.

Drexler Termed Father Of Art Dreco

By TERESA CHUH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paul Drexler's parents once dreamed their Ivy League-educated son would land a high-paying job as a lawyer or a regional planner. Somewhere, something went wrong.

Dashing their fondest hopes, Drexler emerged from the hallowed halls of Cornell and Amherst not as Paul Drexler, Attorney at Law, but as Paul Drexler, Gourmand of the Grotesque, Epicure of the Eccentric — Father of Art Dreco.

Art Dreco? The dictionary says the word "dreck" comes from the Yiddish "drek," slang for trash or rubbish.

By Drexler's definition, Art Dreco comes in many forms.

It's a jar of Killer Bee honey from Brazil.

"It is art that shines and stinks, like a rotten mackeral by moonlight," the 31-year-old Drexler says. "It repels and attracts at the same time. It has a fascination that draws one beyond the ecstacy of loathing."

The soft-spoken, scholarly looking art patron — clad in classic Art Dreco shirt splattered with a lurid cowboy and Indian pattern — says he coined the concept seven years ago while working as an antique dealer in Massachusetts.

"I saw pieces at auctions there that I just couldn't categorize," he says. "Pieces so ugly that they were beautiful."

Drexler brought Art Dreco to the West Coast from Amherst less than a year ago because "Massachusetts was too constrained — life was like a Norman Rockwell painting."

In the back of the shop — away from scads of postcards, trinkets and other Art Dreco paraphernalia for sale — are nearly 50 pieces of Drexler's priceless permanent collection.

And the list goes on.

Drexler explains that Art Dreco is not the merely grotesque or ugly, but "works done with a purity of intent. If it's intentionally offensive, it's kitsch.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Did Bob Hope take a crash course in Chinese for his NBC-TV special, "The Road to China?" And were the magnificent sets real? — Mrs. L. O'Brien, Alberta, Canada.

A: The "sets" weren't sets. Nature and non-union laborers spent centuries creating them. As far as Hope taking a "crash course in Chinese," he had so little dialogue to handle what critics could criticize him?

Q: Now that "Edith" (Jean Stapleton) is divorced from "All in the Family," what is she doing for a living? — Mrs. Melvin Cohen, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A: The veteran actress is not "divorced" from the Carroll O'Connor family. She'll be making six or more visits to "Archie Bunker's Place" this season. Actually, no one will have to run a benefit for her. She'll be seen on tape or film in the syndicated reruns of the original series. Meantime, she'll return to her first love — stage appearances — in such road company attractions as "Daisy Mayme." Also, after working as a housewife through the run of "All in the Family," Miss Stapleton couldn't be better off financially if LA divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson handled her "case!"

Q: Has Andrew Young confided to intimates whether he'll remain in politics or enter the business world? — D.P.R., Atlanta.

A: The competent but controversial young Andy told all in a private luncheon interview with his journalist friend, Robert E. Johnson, associate publisher and executive editor of Jet magazine. Johnson revealed excerpts of the conversation with a banner blurb: "Andy Young Talks About Things He Couldn't Talk About Before Now."

It has been rumored that Andy has his eyes on a U.S. Senate seat or, perhaps, the Atlanta mayor's office. But on his future plans, he told Johnson: "I'm not going to start a new civil rights organization. I'm going to get up a consultant service called Young Ideas, Inc., to help the existing black organizations and black businesses...

"For instance, the Nigerian government is spending $5 billion or $6 billion a year to develop a new education system. There is no need for them to go to Harvard or London to get consultants when black American educators know the most about educating black children and dealing with cultural diversity...

"I see Young Ideas, Inc., as merely an extension of the civil rights movement to help black people..."

Note: On blacks and Jews, Young conceded he created an incident with the PLO talk that was in danger of splitting the blacks and Jews, but added: "In spite of our differences ... we have helped each other." He pointed out that Nigeria (the second largest supplier of oil to the U.S.) was arrogant when it was a poor nation. "And now that it is rich in oil, white folks are going to have to get used to dealing with rich, arrogant black folks because this country will never be self-sufficient in energy resources."

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Police Locate Crash Victim

MIAMI (UPI) — The body of a woman involved in an auto accident on a causeway between Miami and Miami Beach was found more than two miles from the site of the crash.

"It's unreal," Miami Accident Investigator William Glaister said Wednesday. "It's unbelievable. We're not going to charge anybody with anything, we just want to know how she got there."

The woman, Sevanda Margarita Hernandez Pancheco, 53, was riding in the back seat of car with two friends Sept. 29 when their vehicle was struck by another car.

The other women told police Miss Pancheco had been riding in the back seat. Her white shoes were found there and her pocketbook lay 25 feet from the wreck — but there was no sign of the woman.

A short time later, Miami Beach police were notified there was the body of a woman lying in a street 2.2 miles from the scene of the crash.

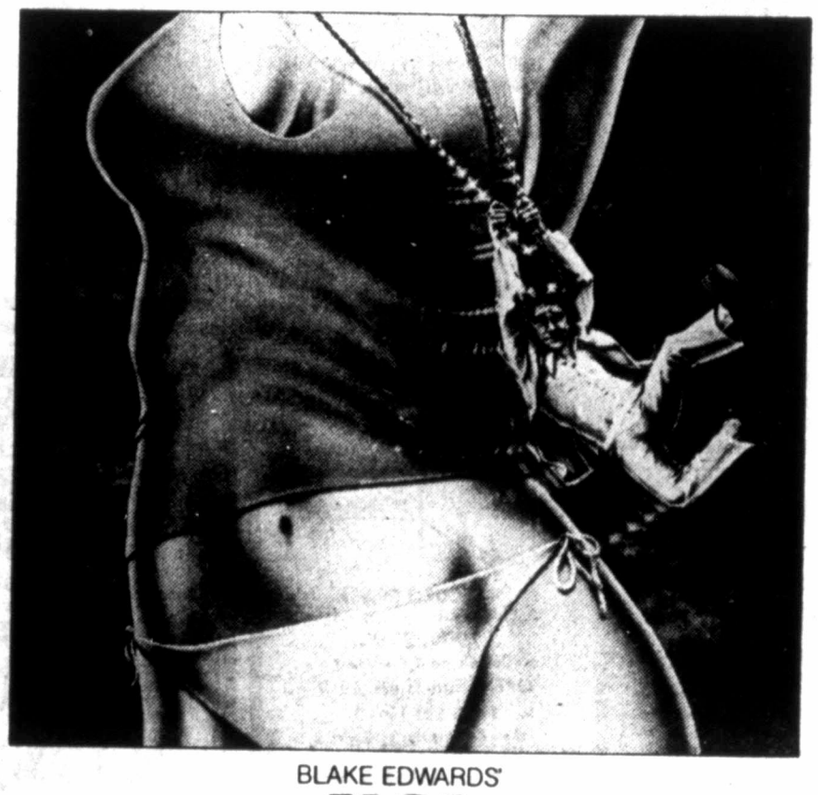

Officials speculated the victim had been killed by a hit-and-run driver.

Glaister said he checked with the medical examiner's office and found the only accident victim that day was Miss Pancheco.

"The real puzzle is how she got from the auto accident to the beach, 2.2 miles away, in a few minutes," Dade County Medical Examiner Joseph Davis said.

Commercials Boost Mariette Hartley's Career

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mariette Hartley is NOT Jim Garner's wife, although she constantly is mistaken for Mrs. Garner thanks to 30 bantering TV camera commercials they've done together the past year and a half.

But Mariette's domestic exchanges with Garner in the 30-second commercials have done more for her career than the Shakespearean roles she's played on stage, her movies and dramatic TV appearances put together.

The tall (5-foot-8), blonde, freckled actress — who won an Emmy award this year for her one-shot appearance on "The Incredible Hulk" — has been inundated with offers to play comedy roles since the blurbs began.

"It's the most amazing thing that's happened to me professionally," said Mariette, an unprepossessing, lighthearted woman. "I've had a lot of fun with people who confuse me with being Jim's wife."

She ordered a batch of T-shirts, one of which is emblazoned: "I Am Not Mrs. Jim Garner." Her infant son wears another reading: "No, I Am Not Jim Garner's Baby."

Mariette had never met Garner before they were signed to portray husband and wife in the commercials.

"It was a fluke," Mariette said. "We were signed for just one commercial. After they'd filmed the spot Jim and I giggled a little and then improvised a couple of lines. Our ad libs added an extra dimension.

"The sponsors liked what we did and used the improvisation. It came out so well they signed us for a flock more. Recently they renewed our contracts for another 19 months."

Curiously, Mariette had done 100 other commercials in the past without creating undue excitement among Hollywood TV and film producers.

"We've even been praised by reviewers, one of whom said our commercials were better than any entertainment show on the air this season," she said.

"I don't understand why Jim and I come off so believably as a married couple. I guess it's because a man and woman don't give each other that much sass unless they've enjoyed a long relationship.

"The spots bring to mind the same sort of man-woman kinship shared by Hepburn and Tracy, Gable and Lombard or Myrna Loy and William Powell. Jim and I feel comfortable with each another. We're relaxed and enjoy working together."

Mariette is a serious actress who began acting lessons as a teen-ager with Eva Le Gallienne in New York and with John Houseman, founder of Stratford's famed Shakespeare Festival in Connecticut.

She came to Hollywood bent on playing substantive roles in movies and TV, not considering for a moment the possibility of working in commercials.

But the blurbs have brought Mariette more attention than 36 segments in the defunct "Peyton Place" series, "The Hero" series and her role in the classic western movie, "Ride The High Country" in which she starred with Randolph Scott and Joel McCrea.

"Back in 1966 my career wasn't going well and I worked as a saleslady in several stores," Mariette recalled. "I was down to my last $1,000 after many years of hard work, and didn't know where to turn."

Vandals Enter Ferrari Tomb

MODENA, Italy (UPI) — Vandals broke into the tomb of the son of automaker Enzo Ferrari in what police said could have been an attempt to kidnap the body and hold it for ransom.

Officers said the marble cover on the tomb of Dino Ferrari was smashed with a hammer this week and the coffin pried open.

They said the vandals had prepared plastic bags to wrap around the body, but fled for unknown reasons.

In the past two years, kidnap gangs in Italy have twice taken bodies from graves in attempts to extort ransoms from relatives. In both cases, the families refused to pay the money and the kidnappers abandoned the bodies.
