Rains total 5.37 for past 2 weeks

Hereford recorded another .72 of an inch of rainfall Wednesday afternoon, extending the total to 5.37 inches of moisture since May 24, according to KPAN Radio, the official weather station here.

While an earlier forecast had called for the rainy siege to end today, a new extended forecast calls for scattered showers and thunderstorms through Monday.

The rainfall and cloud cover had delayed Panhandle farmers' attempts to harvest wheat and has delayed planting of milo. KPAN has recorded about 8.2 inches of rain this year.

Heavy thunderstorms early today forced evacuations of campers and some residents in low-lying areas of North Central and West Texas as the rain-drenched Hill Country braced for more showers.

Flash flood warnings were posted today by the National Weather Service for portions of North Central Texas and the Hill Country. Flood watches were in effect for all of North Texas except extreme southeast portions.

An Erath County sheriff's deputy said campers at a city park in Stephenville were evacuated at 1 a.m. today and a couple living near a creek were told to leave their home.

Authorities said Highway 90 west of Lake Abilene was closed because of high water from Elm Creek. The weather service said some houses at Camp Booth Oaks south of Sweetwater were evacuated because of high water. Farm-to-Market Road 208 in northern Mitchell County was closed, officials said.

Portions of U.S. Highway 67 were underwater and numerous highways and streets in Jones, Johnson and Taylor counties of North Texas were closed. Officials said U.S. 380 from Graham to Throckmorton and Highway 209 from Woodson to Graham were closed.

Comanche County civil defense officials said three feet of water was over the low-water crossing at Indian Creek in Comanche.

More than 6 inches of rain fell on San Antonio between midnight and noon Wednesday, flooding highways, low water crossings, and driving at least 2,000 residents from their homes.

Four funnels were spotted in Bonham but no damage reported, authorities said. Emergency Management Coordinator David Norris watched one touch down in front of his car as he hunted storms about 8 p.m.

"I thought it was going to take my right earlobe off," he said.

Heavy rains, which began last week, were blamed for the drowning deaths of a 5-year-old boy and a soldier at Fort Hood in Central Texas.

Most of the evacuees were in the Olmos Basin area, flood plain of the Olmos Dam.

Police spokesman Paul Buske said the dam, built to hold 30-foot waters, was overflowing at 36 feet. The flood gates had to be opened, posing the threat of flooding to area residents.

But officials allowed most residents to return to their homes (See WEATHER, Page 2)

Collision Leaves Three Uninjured

Graduates of black colleges had higher failure rate on TECAT tests

AUSTIN (AP) — Graduates of predominantly black colleges had a relatively high failure rate on the basic skills test for teachers and administrators, according to Texas Education Agency statistics.

An administrator at one of those universities said the poor showing is a result of the "oral tradition" that dominates black life.

"If you are accustomed to oral transmittal of information and then are given reading and writing exercises, you don't tend to do well on them," said Dr. William E. Moore, vice president for academic affairs at Texas Southern University in Houston.

The TEA on Wednesday released a detailed breakdown of results on the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, the basic reading and writing skills test educators must pass to keep their state certificates.

The report showed that 436 of the state's 1,073 districts had 100 percent passing rates. Most others were in the 90-99 percent range. About 45 recorded passing rates below 90 percent.

The overall passing rate was 96.7 percent for the 202,084 educators who took the exam.

The lowest passing rate was 66.7 percent in the Ramirez Independent School District in Duval County, which has about 45 students and operates only an elementary school. The TEA figures did not show how many teachers took the test in each district.

The other districts with passing rates below 80 percent included Kendleton ISD (Fort Bend County), 75 percent, 320 students; North Forest ISD (Harris County), 76.8, 16,000 students; Richards ISD (Grimes County), 71.4 percent, 130 students; Wilmer-Hutchins ISD (Dallas County), 78.4 percent, 4,300 students.

The TEA said the figures are not exact because some teachers improperly listed the district in which they lived instead of the district in which they worked.

Previously released statistics showed that 81.6 percent of the blacks who took the test passed it. The passing rate for white educators was 98.9 percent.

The Texas State Teachers Association has filed a lawsuit alleging that the exam was discriminatory toward minority teachers and administrators. State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said painstaking efforts were made to guarantee the test would not be racially biased.

The statistics on passing rate by college was compiled by matching TECAT records with state teaching certificate files. The agency said it could determine the alma maters of about 169,000 of the people who took the test.

Moore said that because of the previous report that blacks passed at a lower percentage than whites he was not surprised at the figures for his school.

"I don't know if it's meaningful in the absence of knowing what blacks did from the other schools," he said.

Graduates of predominantly black colleges and universities posted lower passing rates, including Bishop College (821 graduates took the test), 79.5 percent; Huston-Tillotson (701), 77 percent; Prairie View A&M (3,315), 78.5 percent; Texas College (646), 71.1 percent; and Texas Southern University (1,518), 72.3 percent.

Passing rates at major universities included Baylor, 99.6 percent (3,800 test-takers), Southern

Economy slump spreads in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' money problems have spread from the oil and gas industry to all sectors of the state's economy, according to Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock said Wednesday that a 4.4 percent decrease in sales tax collections in May was the first time this year that the monthly income has fallen below the same month of 1985.

"The downturn in oil has finally set in motion a wave that's soaking the rest of the Texas economy," Bullock said in a statement.

Last Friday, Bullock warned a special meeting of House members that his predicted shortfall of $1.3 billion by Aug. 31, 1987, may increase to $2 billion unless economic conditions improve.

Gov. Mark White, who was in Washington on Wednesday, has repeatedly said he does not think a special session is required before the January meeting of the 1987 Legislature.

"The governor's office has been aware of the potential downturn in state tax collections," said Bill Hamilton, the governor's budget officer, after Bullock's report Wednesday. "Several cities have told us they are fearful a downturn in their local sales taxes (which are collected with state sales taxes) so it is not quite so surprising to us.

"We will need to continue monitoring the situation but this has not changed the feeling of the governor's office that a special session is not needed," Hamilton said.

Bullock's report said May sales tax collections totaled $438.4 million, compared with $458.7 million for the same month in 1985. He said the $20.3 million drop was due to declines in retail sales, services, construction and oil and gas.

In April, taxes from retail sales were up 10.9 percent while May's collections showed a 10.7 percent decline.

Taxes from services were down 12.7 percent in May, reversing a 15.5 percent gain in April, Bullock said. Sales taxes from oil and gas were off by about 40 percent and construction was down about 18.5 percent.

Bullock told House members last week that Texas' financial woes were created largely by the worldwide plunge in oil prices and a corresponding drop in oil tax revenues. He said he will not officially change his $1.3 billion shortfall forecast until oil prices stabilize.

"There's less money for Texas," Bullock said. "The price of oil has not stabilized."

Polling places same for runoffs

All 12 voting boxes will be open for the Democratic primary runoff election Saturday, while the Republican runoff election will be held at La Plata School. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The absentee voting total was listed at 460 by County Clerk David Ruland. This included 430 personal appearances by Democrats, 4 by Republicans, and 26 mailout ballots.

Sample ballots are published as a public service in today's issue of The Brand. They can be found on Page 9.

The Democratic ballot has five statewide runoff races and three county races. The local races are for county judge, county commissioner of Precinct 4 and justice of the peace. The latter office actually has just one candidate since incumbent O.K. Neal resigned to enter private business, leaving Johnnie Turrentine as the lone candidate. Neal's name is still on the ballot, however.

Tom Simons and Dempsey Alexander are vying for the county judge's post, and the winner will succeed Glen Nelson next January since there is no GOP opponent. Incumbent James Voyles faces the challenge of Johnny Latham in the Precinct 4 race.

The Republican ballot lists four statewide races. Winners will face Demo candidates in November. All GOP voters will cast ballots here at La Plata. The Demo Runoff election will be conducted in the same 12 boxes where voters cast ballots in the May election.

County collects for bingo

State Comptroller Bob Bullock this week sent checks totaling $1.3 million to 84 cities and 58 counties that have legalized charity bingo and levy the two-percent local gross receipts tax on the game.

Deaf Smith County's check will be $1,169.98 for the five months since Jan. 1. Net payment for the same period last year was $1,144.86.

Dallas County received the largest check, totaling $115,149. The City of Dallas also led cities with a check for $71,703. A total of 1,518 non-profit organizations are licensed to hold bingo games in Texas.

400 suspected illegal aliens arrested

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Tips from American workers apparently disgruntled over the scarcity of jobs helped bring hundreds of arrests of suspected illegal aliens in Central Texas this week, but some residents say the INS victory will be shortlived.

"I bet you 90 percent of the illegal aliens will be back by Saturday," said the Rev. Frank Alvarado of Waco, where many of the Tuesday and Wednesday arrests took place.

About 400 suspected illegal aliens were taken into custody in two days of U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service activity in Waco, Temple, Belton, Cameron and other area cities, officials said.

"We've been receiving a great deal of information (on aliens' whereabouts) from local American workers displaced by illegal aliens," said Mario Ortiz, public affairs officer for the INS regional office in Dallas.

But Alvarado countered that the INS is defeating its own purpose by not giving those arrested time to contact their spouses and children so their family will not be split. If family members are left behind, Alvarado said, the deported aliens will soon be back.

The suspects were flown to Laredo, where they were to be escorted to the Mexico border by Border Patrol agents, Ortiz said.

At the Evangelia Settlement in Waco, where children of several of those arrested in the raids are in day care, other families have stepped in to help, director Jenny Reese said.

Shakeup of NASA officials continues

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The retirement of William R. Lucas as director of the NASA facility that supervises shuttle rockets continues the shakeup of top NASA officials, and agency leaders predict more changes after the Challenger commission reports on Monday.

Lucas, 64, announced Wednesday he will retire July 3 as director of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. He has headed Marshall since 1974 and had served three years as deputy director.

Since the Challenger explosion Jan. 28 that killed seven astronauts, NASA has gained a new administrator, director of the shuttle program, director at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, and has summoned the former manager of the Apollo moon program to conduct an internal review of its management structure.

The presidential commission on Monday will blame the accident on defects in one of the two solid-fuel booster rockets that were propelling Challenger.

Under Lucas' leadership, Marshall engineers supervised Morton Thiokol's development of the booster rockets.

Several Marshall managers told the commission they disagreed with Morton Thiokol engineers who opposed the Challenger launch because cold weather might impair O-rings designed to keep hot gas from escaping through booster rocket joints.

Lobbying costs $49 million in 1985

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of lobbying Congress reached $49 million in 1985, with the emotional issue of gun control and the continuing struggle over textile imports accounting for some of the biggest spending.

The price of persuasion last year was 16.6 percent higher than the $42 million the cadre of Capitol Hill lobbyists reported spending in 1984 and some 13 percent higher than the $43.3 million reported for 1983.

The $49 million amounted to an average $91,625 for each member of Congress and easily exceeded the $32.66 million U.S. taxpayers put up to pay the salaries of the 535 senators and representatives.

While the spending is rising, so is the number of lobbyists registered with the House clerk and Senate secretary. Their ranks have swollen to nearly 8,000, up from about 6,000 at the start of 1985.

Seven organizations — three more than in 1984 — reported spending $1 million or more last year to influence legislation, according to the reports lobbyists must file with Congress.

In general, the clerks' reports show the lobbying groups spend most of their money on staff salaries, office operations and direct mail campaigns designed to flood Congress with letters and phone calls from constituents.

The biggest spender in 1985 at $2,003,601 was the Fabric Fiber and Apparel Coalition for Trade, a group of U.S. clothing manufacturers trying to limit imports of foreign-made apparel.

The coalition's outlay was only slightly below the $2,067,586 spent in 1984 by the Natural Gas Supply Association — the top single-year spender since The Associated Press began keeping such totals in 1983.

Pollard pleads guilty in spy case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors who obtained a guilty plea from former Navy intelligence analyst Jonathan Jay Pollard on charges of spying for Israel say they will press forward with their investigation of an Israeli spy ring that operated in the United States.

U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova said Wednesday in documents filed in U.S. District Court that at least five Israeli citizens were involved in a spy network that used Pollard, a onetime civilian employee of the Navy, to supply classified defense documents on countries hostile to Israel.

Pollard and his wife, appearing together, pleaded guilty to espionage charges, and federal prosecutors said the Pollards' co-conspirators included an Israeli Air Force colonel and two diplomatic officials.

The Israeli citizens were Rafi Eitan, an Israeli intelligence official who allegedly directed the ring; Col. Aviem Sella, an officer in the Israeli Air Force; Joseph Yagur, a science attaché at the Israeli consulate in New York; and Irit Erb, a secretary at the Israeli embassy in Washington.

Moreover, additional documents filed by the prosecutors say that Pollard also met with another Israeli, identified only as "Uzi," at the Maryland home of an Israeli diplomat.

Vote expected close on Saudi arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outcome of the Senate vote to override President Reagan's veto and block arms sales to Saudi Arabia is still in doubt, and the final tally will be extremely close, lawmakers on both sides of the issue say.

The Senate was scheduled to vote today, ending a month of intense lobbying by opponents and supporters of the $265 million deal.

It would take 67 votes to override the veto, assuming all 100 senators vote.

"I believe we've got 66 votes for sure. The question right now is whether we've got the extra vote we need," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the leading opponent of the sale, said Wednesday.

Earlier in the week, Dennis Thomas, an assistant to Reagan, said at the White House that the administration doesn't have much "breathing room" in its efforts to win the 34 votes needed to sustain the veto.

Delinquent taxpayers net $9.1 million

AUSTIN, Tex. — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said this week that a roundup of delinquent and inactive taxpayers in April netted more than $9.1 million in back taxes for the state.

Last month Bullock refused to hand out new sales tax permits to some 150,000 businesses that owed taxes or failed to file reports last year. Of the taxpayers who lost their permits in April, Bullock has reopened the accounts of 18,787 taxpayers who have settled their debts.

"We let folks know that if they wanted to do business in Texas, they had to hold a new permit. And we weren't issuing permits to tax delinquents until they paid what was due. I guess they knew we were serious. We have $9.1 million in the bank to prove it," Bullock said.

Besides the delinquent taxpayers who paid up, another 300,000 taxpayers with clean records received new permits. The remaining taxpayers who failed to file returns are reported no sales during 1985 are considered to be out-of-business.

"Sometimes businesses fail, but the owners forget to tell us so we can take them off the books. Besides the money we picked up from back taxes, we're saving the state another $250,000 each year in paperwork, processing and postage on those 134,000 dead accounts," Bullock said. "I've got to declare this project a success."

Bullock reminded consumers to be on the look out for the new red, white and blue permit and "be aware of who you're doing business with." Businesses not displaying the new permits are operating illegally, he said. The money collected in back taxes has been placed in the General Revenue Fund.

WEATHER

Wednesday afternoon as skies cleared.

Only about 50 residents showed up at two Red Cross shelters set up temporarily for evacuees, officials said.

But National Weather Service meteorologist Stan Hall warned that residents would "be back in a crisis" if more heavy rains fell quickly.

Wednesday's rains caused nearly 120 accidents and the San Antonio police department to order 150 vehicles towed. Most of those vehicles, Buske said, were submerged in water.

"In my 60 years in the city, I've never seen water this high," said San Antonio Fire Chief I.O. Martinez.

Dozens of motorists were stranded in low water crossings and many freeways, deluged with rainwaters, had to be closed temporarily during the morning rush hour.

"We don't have enough law enforcement officers or firefighters to go around," said Buske of the rescue efforts.

Buske said city officials urged residents to stay home if possible. Trinity University, the University of Texas at San Antonio, other local colleges, offices and businesses shut down for the day.

Four volunteer firemen had to be plucked by helicopter from a tree after they tried to rescue a stranded motorist.

More than 11 inches of rain has fallen on San Antonio since May 25, NWS records show. Total rainfall each year in the city averages about 29 inches.

The afternoon sunshine helped dry conditions somewhat, said NWS meteorologist Gary Grice, but the air remained extremely humid.

"The soil is so waterlogged, if we have any rain, we're going to have problems with runoff," he said.

The heavy rains apparently claimed the life of a 5-year-old boy missing since last Thursday, police said.

The body of Joey Battista was found washed up on the banks of the San Antonio River late Tuesday, said Police Lt. Jack Summey.

He had been missing since he left home to buy ice cream at a convenience store, Summey said.

Heavy thunderstorms at Fort Hood in Central Texas were blamed for the drowning of one soldier and injuries suffered by another when he was hit by lightning, authorities said.

NEW YORK (AP) — A strike by 155,000 American Telephone & Telegraph Co. employees probably can last up to a month before the company's phone network experiences major problems, an AT&T executive says.

The world's largest telephone network is so computerized that "this strike is not going to affect us dramatically in the short run," said Frank Blount, executive vice president in charge of the network for AT&T Communications.

But he added Wednesday: "If this thing went on for a month, I think it's too long. I'm hoping it's very short."

After an hour meeting Wednesday in Washington, negotiators for AT&T and the Communication Workers of America reported little progress in ending the nation's largest strike in three years.

Managers at AT&T have been scheduled to work 12 hours a day, six days a week to fill in. The company also has hired 3,000 temporary workers as operators.

AT&T said the delay in answering calls for assistance was reduced Wednesday to 25 seconds, from 30 seconds on Tuesday and nearly a minute on Monday, the first business day of the strike. It normally takes about two seconds.

Blount said the first big problem for the network from an extended strike would be long delays in installation of private lines, which are used by businesses for such things as computer data transmission and videoconferences.

In addition to the phone network, the 5-day-old strike also is affecting the manufacturing, sales and maintenance of phone equipment to residences, businesses and local phone companies.

Thirteen of AT&T's 24 factories remained open Wednesday, the company said. Also open were 613 of its 656 Phone Centers and all its business offices, although at reduced staffing levels, spokesman Robert Musgrave said.

"We're asking customers to be patient and understand ... we have to handle the emergencies first," Musgrave said.

Analysts said the union and the company have an interest in ending the strike quickly.

Citing rising profits at AT&T, the union's president, Morton Bahr, has vowed that "this is the time and place" to break a pattern of concessionary contracts suffered by organized labor in recent years.

When is a watermelon ripe?

COLLEGE STATION — When is a watermelon ripe?

Picking a ripe watermelon is not the easiest thing to learn, but there are certain indicators to look for, says a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"Watermelons mature rapidly during hot weather. Most are ripe about 32 days after blooming," points out Tom Longbrake.

Deciding when to harvest a melon is most difficult early in the season when vines are green and healthy, says the horticulturist.

Some indicators of watermelon maturity are: tendrils or pigtales on vines change from green to brown, the ground spot on the belly of the melon turns from white to yellow, and the thumping sound changes from a metallic ringing when immature to a soft, hollow sound when mature.

"Even experienced field cutters must cut an occasional melon to check flesh quality with their judgement of rind appearance," says Longbrake.

Watermelons should be handled carefully to avoid rolling, bumping or dropping and thus prevent internal bruising of the flesh.

Longbrake suggests storing watermelons at temperatures ranging from 60 to 70 degrees F.

Temperatures below 50 degrees or above 90 degrees for extended periods will increase flesh deterioration. Once a melon is cut, it can be refrigerated in wedge form or in small chunks in plastic-covered containers.

"Good quality melons are usually firm, symmetrical in shape, fresh, attractive in appearance and of good color," the horticulturist points out. "The external rind color may vary from deep solid green to gray, depending on the variety."

The Charleston Gray and the Jubilee are the two most popular varieties grown in the South and Southwest, Longbrake points out. Charleston Gray is an elongated melon with a light green mottled color and deep red flesh. The Jubilee is also elongated in shape but has dark green stripes over a light green base. It is also deep red fleshed. Both varieties range in fruit size from 18 to 40 pounds, with an average of 20-25 pounds.

Watermelon is one of the cheapest fruits per pound that you can buy, adds Longbrake. An average wedge of watermelon has only 120 calories. Watermelon contains about 90 to 92 percent water and is 8 to 10 percent natural sugar.

Campers Galore

Camp Lani Wa Day Camp is meeting this week with campers galore pitching their tents despite the rain. The Hereford Camp Fire Council's day camp theme this year is "Day Camp Texas Style" in conjunction with Texas Sesquicentennial. Another camp date is planned for the campers, the biggest camping event of the year. Registrations for Camp Ma Kui Wa near Taos, N.M. are now being taken at the Camp Fire Lodge.

Labor union members include white collar professionals

Labor union members are not just truck drivers and factory workers anymore. They are white-collar professionals.

Texas Tech University industrial relations and manpower planning expert Joseph P. Yaney said labor unions have redirected their membership recruitment efforts and are aiming at professionals like teachers, nurses and doctors.

"Unions as a whole have decreased substantially in membership over the past several years," Dr. Yaney said. "The main industries where unions are growing now are health care and the public sector."

Yaney, who is an attorney and labor arbitrator, said unions began to grow as a result of New Deal legislation in the late 1930s and continued to prosper as World War II brought the U.S. out of recession.

"The unions grew and prospered as the country did," Yaney said. "I don't think it was ever the intent of union leaders originally to gain the kind of political power they did."

Yaney said the unions evolved into politics naturally. Because of the nature of a union, there is a strong, solid grass roots organization in place that is used to voting on union matters.

"It wasn't hard to turn people who were loyal to the union toward the politician the union was supporting," Yaney said. "You have a communications network in place and you have a tremendous feeling of solidarity among the worker/voters. So it was easy for union leadership to put into operation the political machine they had created quite by accident."

Yaney said today unions have lost a great deal of their power and political clout. As a result, unions are playing down their political orientations for fear of alienating new members.

Yaney said the decline in the traditional union-oriented smokestack industries and a general dissatisfaction with union strikes and purported illegal activities are the prime causes of union membership decline. As a result, the unions are re-evaluating their organizing methods and looking at previously non-union industries for members. Those new target groups are young, white-collar professionals. He pointed to the Texas State Teachers Association, with more than 50,000 members, as a good example of modern union members. He also said about 52 percent of all federal employees in Texas belong to unions.

"With the decline of the smokestack industries, unions are working to play down their movie image of rough talking, pension stealing, cigar smoking tough guys," Yaney said. "The unions have gotten away from their political base and returned to the bread and butter issues like pay equity that service industry professionals are concerned about."

Yaney said union organizers are more apt to be subtle about their unionization efforts when dealing with new members.

"New union members want a quiet atmosphere where they can join the union without much fanfare," Yaney said. "These new members are not the type that are apt to show up big rallies and make a big deal about their membership."

The future of labor unions in Texas depends on how the economic base changes in the state. Yaney said increases in manufacturing and the health care industry would provide favorable opportunities for the unions because labor is concentrated.

"If the industry base moves more toward service industries built around tourism, which is possible since tourism is the second largest business in the state, the unions will have a much harder time organizing because workers are in very small groups and are very decentralized," he said.

'Experts' making it tough

COLLEGE STATION — A lot of information — as well as misinformation — is going around regarding the nutritive value of beef and its fat and cholesterol content.

"We have a host of self-proclaimed food experts these days that are making it tough on consumers," says Dr. Ed Uvacek, a livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. "Consider all the TV personalities, movie stars, sports figures, singers and even politicians who are suddenly 'health experts'. Many advertise various food items, flaunting their goodness, their nutritional value, as being better than some other products."

"The truth is that not many people really know the facts," Uvacek emphasizes. "Even medical doctors have been misled by false claims from different commodity and product groups. That's easy to understand since medical schools, until recently, did not even require courses in nutrition."

For instance, there is much confusion about the effects of saturated fat and cholesterol on human health. But even if you believe the avoidance of such foods is prudent, which meats contain these products? Uvacek asks. So he offers the following quiz for "diet watchers."

Which of the following meats (equivalent cooked quantities) has the most saturated fat or cholesterol?

Shrimp or ground beef?
Roast chicken (light meat, skinned) or canned tuna?
Crab meat or ground beef?
Extra lean ground beef or roast chicken (dark meat with skin)?

In every example but the last, the first food listed is higher in cholesterol but the second item has more saturated fats, Uvacek points out. In the last comparison, however, the beef and chicken are equal in cholesterol but the chicken has more saturated fat.

Uvacek adds that beef steaks and roasts, ground beef, roast chicken and turkey all have about the same cholesterol content. The really high cholesterol foods are chicken livers, eggs, beef liver and shrimp.

Ann Landers

Battered women

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Still Reeling," the woman whose husband beats her. She stays with him because she doesn't know what else to do.

Each year in the United States 3 to 4 million women are beaten by their husbands, ex-husbands, boyfriends, or lovers. Another 3 million have been beaten in the past and remain in abusive relationships.

Women stay with these men for a variety of reasons—lack of funds, fear of retaliation, feeling that the children need a father, lack of a place to go, affection for their husbands in their good moments, and the belief that the man will change.

The battering cycle itself reinforces the belief in change because batterers often enter a honeymoon phase following the battering and lavish attention and gifts on their abused wives.

Batterers themselves have been found to have common characteristics. The abusive man often blames his wife for the violence and insists that if she would stop doing things that anger him, he would stop beating her.

Batterers blame joblessness, frustrations, alcohol and drugs. Counselors report that men who batter are usually emotionally dependent on their wives and fear that they may leave. They use violence to keep the upper hand or to get their own way.

Batterers through counseling must claim responsibility for their behavior and learn to control themselves. "Still Reeling" needs the help of a local domestic violence shelter before she is seriously injured or killed.

There are many shelters around the country that help victims and their children. They offer counseling, temporary housing and other services designed to help victims adjust to a new nonviolent life.

The phone number of the nearest domestic violence shelter can be obtained by calling a hospital or the police station. Useful information about the clergy, medical personnel and other support services that come to the rescue of battered women is available through the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, 2401 Virginia Ave., N.W., Suite 306, Washington, D.C. 20037.

There is help for the batterer, too. In fact, this is often the key to a healthier, happier, nonviolent relationship.—A FORMER VICTIM IN NEBRASKA

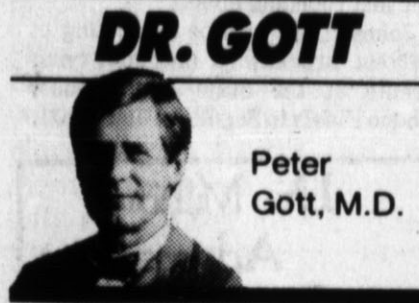

DEAR F.W.: You have done a great service to millions of women today. On behalf of them all I thank you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today, I read in your column a letter signed "Still Mourning in Norfolk, Va." (It was a warning about cocaine.)

The most interesting part of the letter was the line, "Please print this so the teens will know it is not advice from their parents. That stuff goes in one ear and out the other."

Would you be so kind as to explain why parents' advice "goes in one ear and out the other?"—GEORGE IN LAKE LAND, FLA.

DEAR GEORGE: Because most parents do not have the courage and determination, nor will they expend the energy, to see that their teenagers behave in the prescribed manner. The kids know this, so when warnings are given and threats are made, they go in one ear and out the other.

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — We are expecting our first child early next year and want to decide whether, if a boy, he should be circumcised. Can you tell us what the risks are in this surgery?

DEAR READER — Medical opinion seems to have shifted away from routine circumcisions. There is no need to circumcise healthy newborn boys, except for parental preference. Circumcised fathers ordinarily want their sons circumcised so that the youngsters will not grow up wondering why they look different from their fathers. Complications of the procedure, although rare, can be disastrous if the circumcision is improperly performed; the sensitive glands at the end of the penis are necessary for adult sexual fulfillment and can very occasionally be injured during surgery.

In the past, when performed in a hospital for nonreligious reasons, circumcision was commonly done by resident doctors or interns. This policy led to problems if the doctor-in-training made a mistake. If today's parents want their child circumcised, I recommend that the simple operation be performed by a qualified surgeon. However, for a normal newborn, there appears to be no compelling medical reason to circumcise.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 82 and in good health. I do not smoke or drink. There is blood in my urine, and today my semen was dark red. What is causing this?

DEAR READER — Blood in the urine or semen is always abnormal. It may be caused by blood-clotting problems or by irritation caused by infection, stones or tumors. I think you should see a urologist to determine the source and location of your bleeding. As a general rule, painless bleeding in the genito-urinary tract is relatively easy to diagnose and treat.

CAR TELEPHONES BECOMING COMMONPLACE
NEW YORK (AP) — In the not-so-distant future, telephones in automobiles will be as common as air conditioners and stereo equipment, notes Travel Agent magazine.

The publication reports that the cities with the greatest demand for rental cars with telephone equipment are Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and the Baltimore-Washington, D.C., area.

STUFFING

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated 100 million pounds of plastic beverage containers were recycled in 1985.

The Plastic Bottle Institute says many of these were turned into fiberfill used in ski vests, sleeping bags, pillows and all-weather coats. Two liter plastic bottles, for example, produce enough fiberfill to stuff a man's ski vest, while 36 such bottles produce enough for an average sleeping bag.

Texas Deserves an Attorney General Who is TOUGH on Crime & TOUGH on Criminals.

Texas Needs Ed Walsh

Ed Walsh understands West Texas values. Ed and his family have been ranching in Williamson County for 80 years. Ed and his wife, Lori, and their children, Kristopher, Jessica, and Jamie reside in Round Rock, Texas.

Ed Walsh is a prosecutor. Walsh has argued over eighty felony jury trials, putting hardened criminals in prison or on death row. He won seventy six cases, or ninety-five percent of the time.

Walsh has fought in court for the rights of victims and won. All three killers Walsh prosecuted for capital murder were sentenced to death. One of them was Henry Lee Lucas, the serial killer suspected in over 100 murders nationwide. Lucas sits on death row today because of Walsh's effective arguments against Lucas in trial.

There are two Republican lawyers running for Attorney General. Both of them have had prosecuting experience. But only one was recognized by the Texans War On Drugs Committee in 1983 as "Outstanding Prosecutor": Ed Walsh. And only one was a good enough prosecutor to be named "Outstanding District Attorney" by the Texas Bar in 1984: Ed Walsh. That makes Ed Walsh the most qualified Republican candidate for Attorney General.

On June 7, vote for the Republican who is tough on crime and tough on criminals... Ed Walsh.

Two Texas rookies hit homers

Rangers beat Chicago 5-2

By The Associated Press

Texas Manager Bobby Valentine likes to joke that the Rangers are keeping one of their rookie players "hot" by putting logs on the fire.

And Chicago's nearly silent bats could well be substituted for the firewood, according to White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa whose squad lost a 5-2 decision to the Rangers Wednesday night.

Rookies Pete Incaviglia and Ruben Sierra hit home runs while rookie Bobby Witt combined with Mickey Mahler on a five-hitter against the pumless Sox.

"Incaviglia is burning up the league, and we keep putting logs on the fire," said Valentine, whose Rangers led the American League West by one-half game over the California Angels.

"The good thing about our club is that nobody expected us to be in first place which is good, but nobody told our kids that they were bad and they believe in themselves," Valentine said.

In his last 31 games, Incaviglia is batting .339 and has raised his average from .127 to .266.

Incaviglia's two-run homer in the third, his 10th of the season, helped pin the loss on Tom Seaver, who had come off the disabled list earlier in the day. Seaver, 2-3, who had sidelined since May 17 with a stiff right shoulder, gave up three runs on seven hits in 4-1/3 innings.

But, the 22-year-old Incaviglia downplayed his importance.

"All I'm trying to do is help the club, and while I've got a lot to learn, it's been a great feeling to know your club is on top in the Western Division."

LaRussa said he was bothered most that "we got nobody on base in the last three innings."

"We couldn't even get the tying or leading run out of the on-deck circle," LaRussa said.

It was the sixth straight loss to the Rangers in a week for the White Sox, who have won only two of their last 13 games overall. In those 13 outings, they are hitting just .187 and have been outscored, 55-31.

Witt, 3-4, gave up four hits and walked six in five innings. Mahler allowed one hit in earning his third save of the season.

Sierra hit a solo homer in the second, his second. Oddibe McDowell hit his seventh homer in the ninth inning.

Chicago came back to take a 2-1 lead in its half of the second after Witt walked leadoff batter Jerry Hairston. Hairston was wild pitched to second, and two outs later, scored on Joel Skinner's double. Julio Cruz singled home Skinner.

McDowell singled in the third and scored on Incaviglia's upper-deck homer to left.

Texas took a 4-2 lead with a run against reliever Gene Nelson in the sixth on Gary Ward's leadoff double, an infield out and Orlando Mercado's groundout to short.

In other American League games, New York shut out California 11-0, Boston beat Cleveland 6-4, Minnesota ripped Toronto 10-4, Detroit bopped Oakland 8-5, Kansas City defeated Milwaukee 8-6, and Seattle stopped Baltimore 5-1.

Yankees 11, Angels 6

Joe Niekro made the decision early. If he was going to lose his no-hitter, he would lose it throwing his best pitch.

"We said in the sixth inning if they were going to get a base hit, it was going to be a knuckleball," Niekro said after Gary Pettis doubled with two outs in the eighth inning for California's only hit Wednesday night in the New York Yankees' 11-0 rout of the Angels.

Niekro, at age 41 trying to become the oldest pitcher in major-league history to throw a no-hitter, said Pettis pulled a 2-2 knuckleball into the right-field corner.

"I'm sure they were looking knuckleball in that situation," Niekro said. "You can second-guess yourself. But if you throw a fastball and they get a base hit, it's not your best pitch. If they were going to get a hit, I wanted it to be on my best pitch."

"I had a good slider and a pretty good fastball, but when I needed to make a pitch, I did it with a knuckleball."

Pettis, a switch-hitter, was batting just .202 from the left side when he doubled at Anaheim Stadium.

Niekro left after eight innings. Al Holland pitched a hitless ninth.

Dave Winfield hit two homers, sparking an 18-hit attack for the Yankees.

Red Sox 6, Indians 4

Don Baylor, Bill Buckner and rookie Rey Quinones hit home runs and Boston won its fifth straight game by beating visiting Cleveland to complete a three-game sweep.

The Red Sox, in winning for the ninth time in 10 games, raised their record to 36-15 — their best start since going 41-9 on the way to the AL pennant in 1946.

Joe Carter of the Indians stretched his hitting streak to 18 games, tops in the AL this season.

Twins 10, Blue Jays 4

Tom Brunansky and Roy Smalley hit two home runs apiece and Jeff Reed also homered, pacing visiting Minnesota past Toronto.

Brunansky and Smalley each hit a two-run shot and a solo homer. All four homers came against Dave Stieb, 1-7, who tied a Blue Jays' record for most homers allowed in a game.

Mariners 5, Orioles 1

Spike Owen went 4-for-4 and drove in two runs while Alvin Davis and John Moses continued the home-run barrage against Baltimore starter Ken Dixon as Seattle beat the host Orioles.

Davis hit a solo homer, his 10th, and Moses added a solo shot, his first, in the seventh inning off Dixon. Davis' homer was the 16th home run allowed by Dixon in 57 1-3 innings, including 11 in his last 17 1-3 innings at home.

Royals 8, Brewers 6

Steve Balboni kept up his extra-base streak with a home run and a double and Hal McRae added a two-run homer that led Kansas City over Milwaukee.

Juan Nieves, 5-2, took the loss, ending his personal five-game winning streak.

Tigers 8, A's 5

Darnell Coles homered, doubled twice and drove in three runs and Lance Parrish and Lou Whitaker also homered, powering Detroit past Oakland.

Oakland rookie Jose Canseco had a two-run homer in the first, his 17th, and upped his major-league-leading RBI total to 50 with a bases-loaded walk in the seventh.

Hereford cowgirl aims for TSHSRA season titles

It's roundup time for the Tri-State High School Rodeo Finals which begins tonight at 7 p.m. at the Fairpark Coliseum in Amarillo.

The rodeo finals will continue through Saturday and at 6 p.m. on June 7, the coronation of the rodeo queen will be held.

Participants in this year's rodeo total approximately 100 finalists including three Hereford rodeers—Jana Johnson, who will be competing for all-around cowgirl honors; Dusty Wells, competing in steer wrestling, and Michelle McCormick, competing in breakaway roping.

Johnson, up for all-around, explained that the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association sponsored nine rodeos in the fall and eight this spring.

Area high schools hold the rodeos at their local arenas and other high schools send a team to compete. The school hosting the event can also enter in the competition.

According to Johnson, contestants compete for individual and team points. "The association takes the top 15 people that scored the highest in the past rodeos held, and this qualifies them to compete in the Tri-State Rodeo" explained Johnson.

Johnson explained that girls can participate in barrel racing, pole bending, goat tying, and breakaway roping.

The boys events include bareback riding, calf and ribbon roping, steer wrestling, team roping and bull riding.

At the Tri-State High School Rodeo, year-end and all-around awards will be given to the boy and girl who receive the most points for the entire year.

Tonight, Johnson has a good chance of winning the all-around award and she is presently standing in first place in the state in the goat tying event.

In both breakaway roping and barrel racing, Johnson is in second place for year-end totals and is sitting in fifth place in pole bending.

A recent graduate of Hereford High School, Johnson said she likes the event she does the best in.

"I've been roping seriously for about a year, so it's kind of new and I'm enjoying it," commented Johnson. "I'm not as good in roping as I am in the other events."

Goat tying and barrel racing make a close match for competition in Johnson's events. She said the roping practice hasn't been as often as she'd like it to be.

"These past few months, since we've had a rodeo nearly every weekend, I've probably spent two to four hours every day practicing. But the rain—it hasn't really helped me any lately," she laughed.

Johnson mentioned what it felt like to be riding tall in the saddle. "It's different this year because I've never been sitting this high. This year I'm leading in all-around and I'm used to being the underdog," Johnson said.

"I'm not there yet but I'm really not sure if the pressure is going to be more or less," she added. "I feel pretty confident in my all-around and goat tying, but I'll have to come out from behind in the breakaway and barrels."

The young rodeo girl explained that she is five points behind in the breakaway competition and is three points behind in the barrels.

With the scores from the year already tallied in her head, Johnson is ahead of her points. She knows this is only one of two chances to meet her last rodeoing goals.

Johnson also will be competing in barrels, breakaway, and goat tying events at the State High School Rodeo Finals in Seguin on June 15-21.

JANA JOHNSON... Ready to compete

Expansion idea by players association director

3rd major league proposed

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Fehr, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, is calling for all the cities seeking expansion franchises to form a third league if baseball refuses to give them a team or even a definitive answer, according to published reports.

"I would like to see these cities and people come together, talk to one another and, in essence, make the decision that ought to have been made long ago," said Fehr, who was quoted in Thursday's editions of USA Today.

Fehr said the cities should take an attitude of: "We'd like to do something with major-league baseball if that's possible. But if it isn't, there are enough cities out there, we don't need you (Major League Baseball)."

Several cities including Washington, Denver, Indianapolis, Miami, Buffalo, N.Y., Tampa, Fla., and New Orleans have expressed interest in obtaining a club in the past.

A few baseball executives, such as National League President Chub Feeney and Philadelphia Phillies President Bill Giles — a member of baseball's long-range planning committee — said little or refused comment.

But New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, chairman of the long-range committee, discounted Fehr's statements.

"Don Fehr is a bright young man and that's what you'd expect a union man to say," Steinbrenner said. "The one basic thing a union guy has to rely on is his members, because from his membership come dues and from that his livelihood."

"He's not looking from the perspective of what's good for everybody," Steinbrenner continued. "He's only looking at getting more players."

Fehr's comment's come following last month's meeting of player agents Tom Reich and Dick Moss, who suggested forming a third league for unemployed players.

UIL reviews proposal on football overtimes

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposed overtime plan to break tie games in Texas schoolboy football games has been aired at a meeting of the University Interscholastic League athletics committee.

Richard Tatro, an assistant football coach at San Antonio Burbank, who previously coached 14 years in Oklahoma and Kansas, where overtime periods are used to settle tie games, briefed the five-member committee this week on the mechanics of the 10-yard overtime procedure.

Tatro also showed film of a game in which each team ran one overtime series from its opponent's 10-yard line to settle the tie.

Bailey Marshall, UIL director general, said the committee listened attentively to Tatro's presentation. Three other presentations were made during the meeting, Marshall said.

One was from baseball coaches asking for the reinstatement of mandatory best-of-three state playoff series in Classes 4A and 5A; another was from basketball coaches seeking a coaching box in front of benches rather than the no-standing rule used in the 1985-86 season; and the final was from soccer coaches asking that varsity players be allowed to play on club teams in addition to their high school squads.

Marshall said UIL staff members will make some proposals to the committee Tuesday and the five-member group then will consider all items presented and make recommendations to the UIL's 20-member Legislative Council, which meets this fall.

Walton nears 2nd NBA title

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Nine years ago, Bill Walton was the bearded, counter-culture basketball star of the NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers.

Today, after a career that has seen saw injuries overshadow his talent, the clean-shaven Walton appears on the verge of a second championship ring, this time with the Boston Celtics.

"The Celtics took a big chance getting me," Walton said Wednesday of the offseason trade that brought him to Boston from the Los Angeles Clippers. "I am the most injury-plagued player in the NBA and I have to thank them for taking me."

Walton played only 14 games in the four seasons between 1979-80 and 1982-83, primarily because of foot injuries.

But he appeared in 80 games for the Celtics this season, 13 more than his previous career-high. He gave enough rest to starters Robert Parish and Kevin McHale that they show little of the exhaustion they experienced in Boston's loss to Los Angeles in last year's finals.

"Coming to Boston is all that I expected it would be," Walton said. "It's a great feeling to be winning games again. There's a lot of the same feeling on this team as there was in Portland the year we won the title. Every night we go on the floor, we think we're going to win. I love that kind of feeling."

Walton has been a model of consistency in the final series against the Houston Rockets, scoring exactly 10 points in three of the four games and twice going 5-for-5 from the field.

On Tuesday night, his offensive rebound and tip-in with 1:39 left gave the Celtics a 106-103 lead and forced the Rockets to go for three-point baskets in the final seconds.

His crucial shot turned out to be the final points of the game as the Celtics took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 series. They could win their 16th title with a victory in Game 5 tonight.

"Bill's on a mission for us," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "He went up for that rebound with passion."

"I think we could be here (in the finals) without Bill, but we wouldn't be as good," Celtics forward Larry Bird said. "I thought in the offseason that we would get Bill or Maurice Lucas, and I think we benefitted most from getting Bill. We needed a backup center."

Walton said his experience in the playoffs this season is a sharp contrast with his role at Portland in 1977. He was clearly the Trail Blazers' key player, but he averaged less than 20 minutes a game for Boston.

"When you're playing most of the game you get into more of a rhythm; in fact, you're setting the rhythm," Walton said. "Now I come off the bench and have had to learn to follow the rhythm of the game."

"This year is not as physically or emotionally draining as 1977, but I'm having as much fun winning. But I liked the pressure of carrying the burden of the team, of knowing I have to come through for the team to win."

McHale and Bird said that Walton's first-year status on the Celtics and his checkered past make him the object of verbal barbs from his teammates.

"He's kind of like an antique car," McHale said. "He's good for 1,000 minutes or 80 miles, whichever comes first. We walk by him going 'tick tock, tick tock' because he's a walking time bomb."

But Walton takes the abuse in stride.

"I like being part of a team," he said. "I can't think of a better team to be a part of."

SCOTCH
Long-aged Scotch whiskies are not necessarily better Scotches. Whiskies may have been aged longer simply because it was fuller to begin with and needed the extra time. Light-bodied, light-flavored Scotches are most popular among American drinkers. A pale color, however, is not an indication of light body or light flavor. Whiskey color only reveals the amount of caramel used for color uniformity. Almost all Scotch sold outside Scotland is blended. However, the other one percent, however, is worth looking into. Straight, unblended Highland malts or blends or only malt whiskies usually are excellent and full-bodied. Scotch liqueur is not a sweetened after-dinner drink. It is a rare older whiskey that has been carefully aged and blended to extreme mellowness. It is worth the price.

Low-profile campaigns characterize runoffs

AUSTIN (AP) — Voters return to the polls Saturday to settle several runoff races, including contests that could give the Democratic and Republican parties nominees to become the first Hispanics elected to statewide office.

But with neither party holding a gubernatorial runoff, most of the other campaigns have been low-profile and marked by what party officials say may be voter confusion over some candidates' names.

One Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, David Davidson, says he hasn't even seen his opponent, Aaron Bullock.

Davidson, 47, a non-denominational minister from Gonzales who is establishing himself as a management consultant in Austin, has charged that Bullock "is hiding out."

Bullock, 41, a Houston-area lawyer whose only prior political experience was as a precinct chairman, did not return repeated calls from The Associated Press.

Probably the most attention has been centered on the Democratic runoffs for the Supreme Court, campaigns that have been waged in an unusually nasty tone.

In the Place 1 race, veteran state Sen. Oscar Mauzy of Dallas faces San Antonio appeals court judge Shirley Butts, while incumbent Justice Robert Campbell faces 3rd Court of Appeals Judge Jim Brady for the Place 2 nomination.

The Place 3 runoff pits former state Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa against Justice Raul Gonzalez, the first Mexican-American to serve on the Supreme Court.

Gibson has accused Gonzalez, an appointed justice, of being too closely aligned with defense lawyers, a charge the justice denies. Gonzalez has the support of the party leadership and, if elected, could become the first Hispanic to win a statewide race.

Democratic voters will choose a nominee for Place 1 on the Court of Criminal Appeals. Denton lawyer Rusty Duncan is in a runoff with Dallas lawyer George Martinez, who also could become the first Hispanic elected statewide.

A Republican also might claim that distinction.

In the GOP runoff to challenge Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox, San Antonio district judge Roy Barrera Jr. faces former Williamson County district attorney Ed Walsh.

Walsh, who switched from the Democratic Party to the GOP last year, has waged a law-and-order campaign and notes that he won the only death sentence against confessed killer Henry Lee Lucas.

Barrera, also has emphasized a law-and-order theme, has served as a criminal district judge since 1980.

Two little-known candidates are vying for the Republican land commissioner nomination.

M.D. Anderson Jr. of Kemp is a dance hall operator, while Grady T. Yarbrough is a Tyler high school teacher. Anderson's name is similar to the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, while Yarbrough's last name is similar to that of former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarbrough.

Name confusion surfaced in the Democratic runoff for Railroad Commission, where Sen. John Sharp of Victoria faces Dallas oil and gas consultant P.S. "Sam" Ervin.

Sharp has said that much of Ervin's primary vote came because of his name, which voters may have confused with the late U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina, who chaired the televised Senate Watergate hearings.

Ervin's real name was Percival Strother Ervin, and Democratic Party officials ruled that he couldn't appear on the runoff ballot under the nickname Sam Ervin. The candidate then formally changed his name to P.S. "Sam" Ervin, saying his original name had brought him "years of unhappiness and mental anguish." Too late, the ballots already were being printed, party officials said.

On the Republican side, the Railroad Commission runoff candidates are John Thomas Henderson of Austin, a perennial candidate, and state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston, a petroleum engineer.

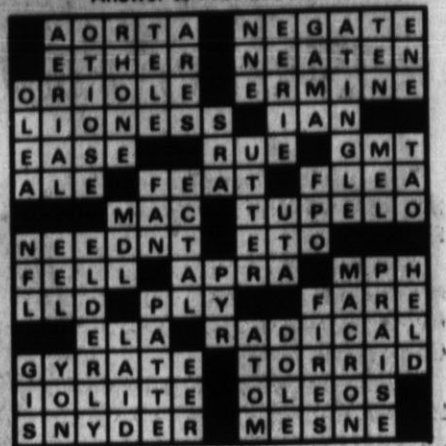

A runoff also is being held in the sprawling 21st Congressional District, where two Republicans are hoping for the nomination to the U.S. House seat being vacated by Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt. Loeffler gave up the seat to make his unsuccessful bid for governor.

The contest pits former San Antonio city councilman Van Archer against Lamar Smith, a lawyer and rancher from San Antonio.

To wrap up nominations for seats in the 1987 Legislature, two Democratic runoff races will be held for the Senate, while six Democratic contests and two Republican runoffs will be held for Texas House seats.

Pitching has been key to Astros' 1986 success

Houston defeats St. Louis, 4-2

By The Associated Press

Bill Doran says hitting performance in the Houston Astros is beginning to approach the success the team's pitching staff has enjoyed.

"We're showing signs of coming out of it. We stunk with the best all season long," Doran said after the Astros defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 Wednesday night.

"Our pitching has been outstanding, and our defense has been outstanding, but we're just playing well enough to win. When our bats come around we're going to be tough," Doran said.

The Houston pitching staff boasts a 3.13 ERA, tied with the New York Mets for the best in baseball, while the Astros' team batting average is 10th in the National League at .240.

Mike Scott, 5-4, the National League strikeout leader with 106, was the winner, going eight innings and giving up two runs on six hits.

"Scott really challenged them tonight," Houston manager Hal Lanier said. "This is the first time in a long time we've gotten him any runs."

Dave Smith came on to pitch one inning of scoreless relief and recorded his National League-leading 13th save.

Ray Burris, 2-2, was the loser, going 4 1-3 innings and giving 4 runs on six hits while walking four and striking out two.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the first. Doran started things off with a leadoff homer, his second of the season. Craig Reynolds then singled, but was forced out when Glenn Davis reached on a in field ground ball.

Davis scored off Jose Cruz' double to center.

The Astros added two runs in the fifth after Denny Walling singled with two out and Davis walked. Cruz singled in Walling, and Kevin Bass' single drove in Davis.

The Cardinals cut the Houston lead to 4-1 in the sixth on singles by Mike LaVallere and Vince Coleman and an RBI single by Willie McGee.

The Cardinals scored again in the eighth when Coleman doubled and scored on McGee's single.

In the rest of the National League, Cincinnati shut out Chicago 2-0, New York defeated San Diego 4-2, Philadelphia beat Montreal 4-2, and Pittsburgh clobbered Atlanta 12-3.

Reds 2, Cubs 0

For some reason, Tom Browning had forgotten how he became the first rookie 20-game winner in 31 years.

In his sophomore season, he lost his first four decisions. He was off to a junk start, throwing junk.

"I don't know what it was," the Cincinnati Reds left-hander said. "I can't pinpoint why I wasn't aggressive. I started thinking I was a pitcher who could work the outside part of the plate instead of going right at 'em."

Wednesday night, Browning went back to the fastball, his primary weapon when he went 20-9 last year. He struck out nine, a career high, and pitched the first one-hitter of his career in beating the Chicago Cubs 2-0.

"The whole game it looked like he went to his fastball, and he had a good one," Cubs Manager Jim Frey said. "In fact, we were talking about it on the bench."

Mets 4, Padres 2

Kevin Mitchell broke a 2-2 tie with an eighth-inning double, and Tim Lincecum drove in an insurance run with a fielder's choice grounder as the Mets extended their lead in the NL East to 7½ games over Montreal by beating San Diego.

Bruce Berenyi and Roger McDowell combined on a two-hitter for the Mets. McDowell pitched three hitless innings in relief to up his record to 4-0.

Giants 4, Expos 2

The Giants had to rally for three runs in the eighth inning to beat Montreal and win their fourth straight. Chili Davis' two-run triple gave San Francisco a 3-2 lead, and Luis Quinones drove in the insurance run with a suicide squeeze bunt.

Jeff Robinson, 3-1, pitched three innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

Candy Maldonado doubled and Jeffrey Leonard singled before Davis, hitless in his 13 previous at-bats, tripled off a Jeff Reardon changeup.

Glenn Wilson and Von Hayes had two RBI apiece to pace the Phillies over the fumble-fingered Dodgers. Los Angeles committed five errors, leading to four unearned Philadelphia runs, and lost despite outhitting the Phillies 15-7. The Dodgers increased their major league-leading error total to 67.

Kevin Gross got the victory despite allowing 10 hits and five runs over six innings.

Pirates 12, Braves 3

Barry Bonds, playing in only his sixth major league game after coming up from the minors last Friday, hit his first homer and drove in four runs for the Pirates. Right-hander Mike Bielecki, another rookie, got the victory by working the first 5 2-3 innings, and Jim Winn pitched 3 1-3 hitless innings for the save.

Tape indicates drifter to die

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — A drifter who was being shocked with a cattle prod begged to die and complied with orders that he say he enjoyed being tortured, according to a tape recording of a torture session at a Hill Country ranch.

The tape was played Wednesday in an organized crime trial in connection with the death of drifter Anthony Bates.

The state claims Bates was tortured to death in March 1984, then his body burned at a ranch owned by Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55.

Ellebracht, his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33, and hitchhiker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21, are charged under the state's organized crime statute with conspiracy to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder in Bates' death.

The state claims Bates, like other hitchhikers, was lured to the Ellebracht ranch with the promise of work, then was forced to stay.

Prosecutors Wednesday played a 45-minute tape of a torture session involving Bates, Ellebracht Jr., ranch worker Mark Hamilton and an unidentified person.

"Please kill me," said a voice identified as Bates.

"No, I wouldn't kill you 'cause then I'd never get any work done," said a voice identified as Hamilton.

Prosecutors said the tape recording was found at the Ellebracht ranch after the property was raided by law enforcement officers in April 1984.

Prosecutors said the 45-minute tape recording of a torture session was the last made before Bates died.

"Say I'm a woodyard slave," a voice identified as the junior Ellebracht said.

"I'm a woodyard slave," Bates mimicked.

"And I enjoy being tortured," said an unidentified speaker.

Bates repeated the state-

Junior: "If I've got to cut you up it's going to take all day..."

Bates: "All day long..." Junior: "All day long..." Bates: "Oh..."

Junior: "And then we won't get no work done. We want to kill you for good reason."

During the tape, the tormentors said they shocked Bates' tongue and eye socket.

As the tape was played, three of the jurors wept, many spectators left or covered their ears and others were crying.

The elder Ellebracht stared at the ceiling and his son sank low in his chair and scribbled on a notepad. In another development, an attorney for prosecution witness Marty Miller said she has received
