Wet 'n wild

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Fifteen Disneyland visitors paddling furiously aboard a canoe kept getting wetter and wetter, apparently in the belief a good soaking was part of the adventure. Moments later, the boat sank.

As the canoe slipped into the Rivers of America lagoon Tuesday evening, about six riders swam to shore while others treaded in the 8-feet-deep water for a second canoe and a raft.

The riders didn't panic; most remained stoically in their seats as the canoe took on water.

Life preservers were stowed at both ends of the canoe, but in the confusion they weren't distributed, said Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth.

Pickens' bluff?

DALLAS (AP) — An Amarillo businessman has challenged former resident T. Boone Pickens to a $100,000 bet that Amarillo isn't headed for a "steady, rapid, downhill slide" as Pickens has predicted.

Pickens

"I sure do like this town, and I don't like anybody taking shots at it," said Jerry Hodge, who described himself as friends with the oilman Pickens.

Pickens left Amarillo last year, as both he and some top Mesa Limited Partnership executives moved to Dallas.

The departure came after years of feuding with the city's newspaper and officials.

Although Pickens never gave a clear reason for leaving Amarillo, in a letter last month to a friend who was moving back to the town, he said: "I know that there were better places to live than Amarillo. ... Probably the biggest problem the town has is no leadership."

Air Show set to take off

■ The Air Force Thunderbirds' lead solo pilot, Major Chuck Greenwood, has extensive West Texas roots, including a stint at Odessa's Permian High School.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A former Permian High student from Odessa will bring a high-flying version of Mojo magic back to the Permian Basin as the lead solo pilot for the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds, according to air show coordinator Paul Erdmann.

The Thunderbirds will be the featured performers at Sunday's Air Show '90 at Midland International Airport.

Major Chuck Greenwood, 35, will be flying the Number 5 aircraft in his second air demonstration season.

His West Texas roots include earning his pilot's wings at Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock. A 1978 graduate of the U.S. Air Force Academy, Greenwood was named "Top Gun" of his fighter training class at Holloman AFB, near Alamogordo, N.M., and began his flying career at Clovis, N.M., as an F-111D pilot at Cannon AFB.

Greenwood and the Thunderbirds — in their F-16 Fighter Falcons — are expected to fly in at 9 a.m. Sunday and perform an arrival show. At 10 a.m., fly-bys — high speed low-level passes — are to be performed by Air Force T-38s.

Although gates to the Air Show will open at 8 a.m., the show will officially begin at 1 p.m. with the Eagle's Nest

Spectators need to be prepared to take the heat

As the Thunderbirds soar, so may the heat.

And that could cause problems for unprepared — unshaded and thirsty — spectators at Sunday's Air Show '90 at Midland International Airport.

The show's highlight, the U.S. Air Force precision-flying Thunderbird squadron, is expected to attract thousands of people Sunday afternoon. And the air show's timing, at the onset of summer, may coincide with steaming temperatures.

At last year's June 17 Air Show, the temperature rose to a scorching 105 degrees. And many spectators were unprepared for the heat and suffered from dehydration and sunburn.

"Hopefully, we won't have 105 degrees this year, either," said Dr. Joseph Rhode, a Midland physician who is member-pilot of the West Texas Aerobatic Club, sponsor of the air

Bush, Gorbachev grapple with German unity

■ Although a "positive mood" dominates the summit, both leaders acknowledge problems in determining the placement of conventional forces in Europe and the future military role of a united Germany.

By Terence Hunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev grappled over terms of German unity after an opening round of summitry Thursday that set the stage for major agreements on chemical and nuclear weapons. Overall, Bush declared, "The mood is very positive."

1•9•9•0 WASHINGTON Summit

The two leaders began their talks proclaiming a new era of cooperation in spite of their differences. "The trenches of the Cold War are disappearing," Gorbachev said.

Bush saluted Gorbachev's leadership in a tacit boost for his plunging popularity at home, and vowed to end "decades of division and discord."

After nearly five hours of discussions, Bush and Gorbachev readily acknowledged they could not settle nettlesome questions this week over the shape of conventional forces in Europe or the military bearing of a unified Germany.

"It is not here that the German question will be resolved," the Soviet president told reporters. Separately, Bush said, "Certainly we're not going to solve the whole issue at this summit."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will take up the issue next week in Copenhagen during a meeting of the 35-nation European Security Conference.

There was confusion over whether the superpowers were making any progress on Germany. Gorbachev said at one point that both sides had advanced "certain ideas, certain suggestions," and White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said "new ideas" amounted "to a way to meld the concerns of the United States and the Soviet Union."

But several hours later, a U.S. official told reporters, "There are no new ideas," and let it be known that Bush would call West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and reassure him of Bush's fidelity to the new Germany's membership in the west's NATO alliance. Gorbachev favors some formula that guarantees protection against a renewed German militarism.

The impasse didn't keep the leaders from providing an upbeat view of the summit, Bush said, "I'd just say at the end of a very interesting day that the talks have gone reasonably well."

Compromise said to be near in school finance negotiations

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas lawmakers and Gov. Bill Clements, facing a court hearing today on public school finance reform, said a day of face-to-face talks Thursday put them near an elusive compromise.

"We're making great progress," Clements said Thursday afternoon after five hours of negotiations with House and Senate leaders. "I'm reasonably optimistic that we'll get it all settled tomorrow," when the talks will turn to how the state will pay for the plan.

"I think it's almost resolved," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, the Senate Education Committee chairman who had been at loggerheads with the governor's staff during the past three special sessions on school finance reform.

At a court hearing today, William Kilgarlin, a special master appointed by state District Judge Scott McCown of Austin, will unveil the school equity plan Kilgarlin drew up with two former school administrators.

Kilgarlin's associates include Jose Cardenas, former superintendent of Edgewood Independent School District of San Antonio, the lead plaintiff in the lawsuit that forced the reforms, and Bil-

Three tornadoes whip through Panhandle town

SPEARMAN (AP) — Three tornadoes whipped through this Texas Panhandle city Thursday night, damaging the downtown area and a residential section northeast of downtown, the Department of Public Safety said.

"The town of Spearman itself had three tornadoes in a time span of 8:20 to 8:50 p.m., said Trooper Wayne Beighle in Amarillo.

The storms were among 10 twisters spotted in the area Thursday night, he said. No injuries had been reported by 11:30 p.m., and no hospitals, schools or emergency facilities were damaged.

However, about 80 percent of the city was blacked out and phone service was spotty, the trooper said.

"You have a hard time getting in (on the phone)" he said.

Two buildings were listed as destroyed, the Church of Christ and the Cowboy Cafe, Beighle said. Other buildings sustained window and roof damage, he said. One resident was without shelter. The DPS sent extra troopers to assess the damage and assist local officials.

Tornado seen near Lamesa

Staff Report

Midland County was under a severe thunderstorm warning Thursday evening and a tornado was spotted in Dawson County, National Weather Service officials said.

The tornado, spotted about two miles north of Lamesa, lifted back into the clouds and apparently did no damage, meteorological technician Ron Brown said.

Brown said spotters reported another funnel cloud about 15 miles northwest of Crane, but no tornado developed. Baseball-size hail was reported in Monahans, Brown said.

Meanwhile, witnesses said lightning was the cause of a grassfire which scorched about 20 acres in northwest Midland County.

NWS forecasters at Midland International Airport say more storms may be on tap this afternoon, with a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

Today will be partly cloudy and hot, with a high in the upper 90s. Winds will be from the southwest at 15-20 mph.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-60s, and the high Saturday will be in the mid-90s.

Thursday's high was 99 degrees, compared with the record of 102 set in 1969. The overnightlow Thursday was 63. The record low for today is 47, set in 1983.

'Great day for flying' ends in disaster

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ward Bushee, executive editor of the Sioux Falls Argus Leader, was in a South Dakota Air National Guard A-7 fighter jet when it collided Wednesday with another A-7 over northwest Iowa. He gave his newspaper this account of his flight with Maj. Duncan Keirnes, of Sioux Falls, and of the crash.

By Ward Bushee

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — It was a great day for flying. My wife, my 5-year-old son and young daughter watched from the runway as we took off.

I've always been scared to fly. But the takeoff was so smooth. I was feeling very comfortable and was talking to Duncan much of the way.

We flew in formation to the tanker and practiced fueling in air. Everything was going so smoothly.

I handled the plane for a couple of minutes. Then Duncan took control for good. We took it for a roll.

Then he brought the squadron back together and began setting up for combat exercises.

We did the first exercise. It was pure Top Gun. We were moving so fast — I saw Duncan's head swinging around looking at the other planes. It was very aggressive.

■ National Guard PR policy not likely to change/4A

We were engaged in a dogfight with another plane and we were the aggressor. Suddenly, it got turned around and another pilot was the aggressor. Duncan told me on his radio, "Now we're on defense." We began going around with Greg Gore, the other pilot, in pursuit of us.

I noticed way down to the left of what I could see that Gore's plane was coming up in an arch towards us. Duncan suddenly pointed the nose higher and seemed to be backing off the fight. That is when I fixed on Gore coming at us. The pilots later said they were trying to exercise a scissor maneuver.

Those planes go so fast, a mere second makes such a difference. I said to myself, "There isn't any danger. These guys are too good of pilots. We won't collide." Then it became obvious he was going to hit us.

I saw the whites of the other pilot's eyes.

We went up, but I think we took the hit low. He hit us from underneath towards the tail section.

Gore said later he thought he was going to take it right in his canopy and he would have died instantly.

Duncan hit the ejector button as soon as we hit, sending me exploding through the canopy and him following a second later. Then everything came apart. It was just a ball of flame. Duncan later told me that if he had waited a couple of seconds longer to eject, we would have been crispy critters.

It was just a surreal scene. I was floating up in the air and my flight suit was burning like a torch. My first thought was, "I'll never see my wife and kids again. This is it."

Pieces of the plane were going by. Flames were all over me. I couldn't remember where the cord was to open the parachute, but it went open automatically.

The plane and debris were spiraling down below me in flames. It was completely silent up there.

The parachute was swinging me around. I thought, "Oh my God. I'm alive."

Then I noticed blood was dripping from my head. The only thing I could think was, "I wonder if I'm really seriously hurt." I didn't know if half my head was blown off. I looked down at my feet and saw my shoes were completely singed, but they were both there.

I saw the other guys were alive. Duncan gave me the thumbs up. I gave him the thumbs up. It was very peaceful floating down. But I kept smelling this smell and finally figured out it was my own skin that had burned.

I was trying to remember everything they told me about landing — how to avoid trees, power lines. It seemed like five minutes to get down. It was very, very slow. The whole world was sitting out there.

I saw people gathering in cars below us. There were a lot of farmers there with the wreckage off in the distance.

I just sort of floated down and hit kind of awkwardly. I thought I'd broken my leg. I couldn't get out of the chute right away and it was blowing me across the field. A farmer came out and grabbed the chute and helped me. ...

Duncan came along and asked me if I was all right. He said he was sorry it had to happen.

(From 1A)

Sky Diving Team.

Members of the U.S. Aerobatic's team and other aerobatics as well as military jet performances are scheduled to follow.

The Thunderbirds' show will begin with a ground ceremony at 2:30 p.m. followed by their air performance.

"The Thunderbirds are in high demand. We are fortunate and privileged to have them perform in our area," said Ole Olsen, schedule coordinator of the Air Show.

"Expect a lot of noise, thrilling flying, smoke and colors, a lot of interesting airplanes including the world's largest transport airplane will be here," Olsen said.

"You can put about six Greyhound buses in it," Olsen said.

About two dozen fighter aircraft, including an F-111 which flew in Thursday, will be included in the display. The F-111 is the model of jet that was involved in the bombing of Libya.

"There's well over a billion dollars worth of aircraft you can see for the price of your ticket," Olsen said.

Tickets will cost $6 in advance and $8 the day of the show; children under 12 will be admitted free.

Spectators are advised to wear sunscreen and a hat.

Last year's show received complaints about the difficulty in obtaining something to drink. Olsen said this year there will be five times as many concessions stands. A medical tent will also be available this year, he added.

Parking for the event will be free.

A stretch of Highway 80 between Coors Road and County Road 1250 is scheduled to be closed from 2:45 p.m. to 4 p.m. for the Thunderbirds show. Motorists traveling between Midland and Odessa Sunday afternoon are advised to use Interstate 20.

The Air Show is being presented by the West Texas Aerobatic Club Inc., Number 71.

Proceeds from the show will be donated to Casa de Amigos and other charities.

ly Walker, director of the Texas Center for Educational Research and former superintendent of Ector County Independent School District in Odessa.

If the Legislature does not come up with an acceptable alternative Kilgarlin has said he would have to take money from rich districts and give it to poor districts to close the gap.

Such a "Robin Hood" plan is "going to inflict some pain on some school districts," Parker said, adding that he expected the court would tie up $1 billion in state aid that was due to go to local school districts June 25.

But Parker was optimistic about the chances for a breakthrough after Thursday's session with Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker and legislative committee chairmen.

Parker said the meeting at the Governor's Mansion was "the most positive meeting I've been in to date," and he attributed the new "spirit of cooperation" to the direct participation of Clements for the first time and the threat of court action.

"I think we have addressed some of the governor's concerns and we've shown the governor where we've already addressed many of them," Parker said. "I think there's no major stumbling block. I would say it's 95 percent a done deal."

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, House Public Education Committee chairman, agreed that the education issues were nearly resolved. She was hopeful the bill would get the support of minority lawmakers, many of whom have expressed a preference to letting the court order the plan.

As a representative of a South Texas district, Glossbrenner is a member of the House Mexican-American Caucus, which met with the Black Caucus Wednesday. She said the bill still addresses their main concerns.

"I think we've got a good strong standard of equity, a tight standard of equity and I think we addressed the issues of adequacy as well," she said.

"I'm convinced the governor will work with us to get the funds to pay for it," she added. "I wish we'd had this meeting six weeks ago."

While the draft keeps most of the basic features of Senate Bill 1, which the governor vetoed in the session that ended Wednesday, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said "There has been give and take."

The bill would allow the governor to appoint the state education commissioner, subject to Senate confirmation, but it did not agree on whether the goal for equity would be the 90th percentile or the 95th percentile of the wealth of all state districts.

The bill also would keep a "hold harmless" clause that would prevent rich districts from losing state aid in the first year of the plan, Lewis said.

While the group has not addressed where the $555 million would come from to avoid cutting aid to wealthier districts, Hobby sees little choice but to return to the half-cent sales tax increase Clements has repeatedly pledged to veto.

show. "Maybe it will be just a mere 95."

It's hard to tell.

Even so, the doctor, has a few suggestions.

Wear a wide-brimmed hat, "something that shades the head," such as a floppy, all-around brim hat to cover the head and to shade the neck and ears. Baseball caps aren't as effective a shade as hats with brims.

Wear lightweight, light-colored clothing, particularly a long-sleeved cotton shirt. Cotton will reflect the heat, the ultraviolet (UV) radiation and makes for breezy wear. Some synthetic fabrics transmit heat.

Find shade, such as that provided by wide-winged airplanes. Baby strollers should have canopies to shade babies from the sun rays.

Use sunscreens to protect skin not shaded and consider wearing UV sunglasses to protect the eyes.

Drink plenty of water prior to the air show to prevent dehydration and heat exhaustion. Unlike last year's air show, there will "plenty" of portable toilets and concession stands at the 1990 show.

Spectators can feel comfortable in drinking a lot of water and knowing that they are not going to have to wait in a line forever to find relief.

Drinking water is crucial in the heat of the day.

Avoid diuretics, such as caffeine-laden drinks, including coffee and some soft-drink beverages, and alcoholic beverages.

"They should be prepared to cover up," Rhode said, "like bringing a long-sleeved shirt to put on to get out of the sun."

SUMMIT: 'Enemy image' past audience that "the enemy image is becoming a thing of the past"— sprinkled the day with a series of unexpected appearances that have become his trademark.

As he did during his 1987 visit to Washington, Gorbachev delighted a downtown crowd by hopping out of his limousine and shaking hands. The throng of about 500 people cheered and applauded. "Gorby, over here!" some shouted.

Twice, he made a beeline to reporters waiting in the White House driveway for impromptu news conferences.

After largely ceding the limelight to Gorbachev during the day, Bush made an unscheduled appearance in the Rose Garden to respond to questions. "The talks have certainly gone as well as I could have expected up to now," he said.

The White House said agreements would be signed Friday ending production of chemical weapons.

MONAHANS (AP) — Ward County grand jurors Thursday released a report condemning "secret government" stemming from alleged violations of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

"The Grand Jury finds there is substantial probability that the Monahans City Council, the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote Independent School Board and the Ward County Commissioners Court have, in the recent past, periodically engaged in violations of the Open Meetings Act," said a report signed by Don Finley, foreman of the grand jury.

The report added, "such actions by our government entities create an atmosphere of 'secret government' which results in depressing our local economy, has a chilling effect on attracting new businesses within Ward County; and, in general, makes our community a less attractive place to live."

Unofficial warnings of the violations were unsuccessful in persuading the governmental entities to discuss public business in public, the report said. In lieu of issuing criminal indictments, grand jurors decided to issue the statement, the report said.

But the report said that future violations of the Open Meetings Act should be prosecuted "to the fullest degree allowed by law."

TU Electric to refund $64.7 million

DALLAS (AP) — TU Electric will begin refunding about $64.7 million to customers next month as a result of overcharges last winter, the electric utility said Wednesday.

The utility said too much money was collected from ratepayers because of the overly mild winters. As a result, TU Electric used less of its high-priced fuel supplies to meet demand.

The refunds will come in the form of credits on June bills, and amount to about $11 per 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity.

The Public Utility Commission approved the refund May 15.

TU Electric serves about a third of the state's population, providing electricity to 2.1 million customers in 87 counties.

SUMMIT SPOTLIGHT

No Cold War chill between Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Gorbachev

By Vic Ostrowidzki
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev seemed to get along well when they met at the White House Thursday, putting an end to one aspect of the Cold War — a first-lady rivalry that had marked the chill relationship between Mrs. Gorbachev and Mrs. Bush's predecessor, Nancy Reagan.

The tone was set when President Bush welcomed the Soviet Union's first couple to the White House, thanking Mikhail Gorbachev for bringing with him a "beautiful day and Raisa Gorbachev, who brings joy to all of our hearts."

Mrs. Gorbachev smiled after the interpreter translated the president's words and appeared to thank Mrs. Bush for the president's special words of welcome.

There was an air of friendship between the two presidents' wives from the moment the Soviet entourage arrived for the start of the four-day U.S.-Soviet summit.

After the Gorbachevs emerged from their limousine, Mrs. Bush placed her hand on Mrs. Gorbachev's back and guided her to their places as their husbands took center stage.

The first ladies often laughed as interpreters translated what each said to the other.

"We had a great meeting renewing an old friendship," Mrs. Bush said afterward through spokeswoman Anna Perez. The two first ladies had first met in Washington in December 1987 when George Bush was vice president.

Perez said Mrs. Bush described her guest as "very knowledgable and very warm," as well as "very beautiful."

There seemed to be no effort of one to outdo the other, as Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev sometimes did.

While the two presidents discussed summit issues in the Oval Office, Mrs. Bush took Mrs. Gorbachev to the second-floor family quarters for tea and a brief tour of the mansion, trailed by Millie, the Bush family dog.

During tea, Millie sat on Mrs. Gorbachev's foot, Perez said. Among those at the tea were two of Mrs. Bush's daughters-in-law, Margaret Bush and Susan Bush, as well as Marilyn Quayle, wife of Vice President Dan Quayle, and Susan Baker, wife of Secretary of State James Baker.

The Soviet first lady is a doctor of philosophy who met her husband while both were students at the Moscow University. She taught Marxist-Leninist theory at the university until he became general secretary of the Communist Party in 1985. The couple have two daughters amd two grandchildren.

Mrs. Bush is the mother of five children and 12 grandchildren. She dropped out of Smith College in 1945 during her sophomore year to marry George Bush, a young Navy pilot home from World War II action in the Pacific.

After the White House session, Mrs. Gorbachev attended a luncheon hosted by her husband at the Soviet Embassy in honor of some 70 prominent Americans, including authors, movie stars, academicians, and artists. Among those present were actors Gregory Peck and Jane Fonda, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Democratic politician Jesse Jackson, broadcast magnate Ted Turner, pianist Van Cliburn and author John Kenneth Galbraith.

She became quite animated at the Library of Congress when Mrs. Quayle presented her with an old photograph of the city of Novograd in the Ukraine.

"Tell me, does the library have negatives of this," the Soviet first lady said. "It's a pleasure to have this photograph of one of the most ancient and historic Russian cities. It's a nice gift for us."

She also showed great interest when shown an original rough draft of the Declaration of Independence written by Thomas Jefferson. The document has additions and alternations made by Benjamin Franklin and John Adams.

"Eto historichesny document — (It's an historic document)," she said of the draft, which was debated and approved by the Continental Congress July 4, 1776.

Amy, who wore No. 218 — the same as last year's winner — faced off with Eric Enders, 13, correctly spelling the word that means a type of cloth, after Enders missed "douanier," a customs officer.

Amy wins $5,000, a trophy and special prizes from Encyclopaedia Britannica, a sponsor. Eric will receive $4,000 for his second-place finish.

The last Permian Basin contestant in the bee, Aimee Wiltz of Andrews, was eliminated during the fourth round of competition, stumbling on the word "carbonnade."

Crash may not change civilian policy

SPENCER, Iowa (AP) — The collision of two Air National Guard fighter jets while one was carrying a newspaper editor probably will not change Guard policy on public relations flights, a spokesman said Thursday.

But the South Dakota Air Guard will not be able to take any more civilians aloft for a while because one of the A-7s that crashed Wednesday over northwestern Iowa was the Guard's only two-seater, Capt. Reid Christopherson, Guard executive officer, said in Sioux Falls, S.D.

"At the national level, I don't anticipate and am not aware of any reason why it should change the way that program's administered," Christopherson said.

The pilots of both planes and Ward Bushee, executive editor of the Sioux Falls (S.D.) Argus Leader, ejected and parachuted to the ground.

The pilots were released from a Spencer hospital after treatment of minor injuries.

Bushee, who was invited to join the flight as part of the Guard's public relations program, was listed in fair condition at McKennan Hospital in Sioux Falls.

Bushee said from the hospital that his sixth vertebra was chipped and he suffered burns on his left arm, shoulders and knees. Bushee said he wouldn't need surgery, and expected to be released Saturday.

Bushee gave his newspaper an account of his flight with Maj. Duncan Keirnes, of Sioux Falls, saying it started smoothly and that they later went into a dogfight exercise with another jet. Then the two planes collided.

"Duncan hit the ejector button as soon as we hit," he said, "sending me exploding through the canopy and him following a second later. Then everything came apart. It was just a ball of flame.

"Pieces of the plane were going by. Flames were all over me. I couldn't remember where the cord was to open the parachute, but it went open automatically."

Small video games have big impact

NEW YORK (AP) — First came Game Boy, a paperback-size video game introduced less than a year ago by Nintendo. The battery-operated, go-anywhere toy has the potential to be a $1 billion a year business.

Then came Lynx, marketed nationwide a month ago by Atari Computer Corp. as the first hand-held game with a color screen. It's twice as pricey as the $90 Game Boy.

Now get ready for TurboExpress, NEC's flashier version of putting an arcade game into the palm of the hand. It has twice the computing power of its competitors and uses the same game cartridges in its home consoles, something its competitors can't match.

And, get this: TurboExpress comes with an option that converts the video game into a TV set. The cost per unit will be about $200 to $250, and the TV option is about $80.

"People pay for value," said Kenneth Wirt, vice president of home entertainment for NEC Technologies Inc. "If you get a lot of use out of it, they're willing to pay more. This is something you can't get from Nintendo."

It will be unveiled this weekend at the Consumer Electronics Show in Chicago and will be on the market in the fall, just in time for Christmas.

But anything that hopes to compete with Nintendo, the undisputed leader of home video games, has to be good.

About 1 million copies of Game Boy's black-and-white, 2½-inch diagonal screen were sold last year after it hit the market in August.

This year, Nintendo expects to sell 5 million sets. The hand-held business will account for nearly $1 billion of the company's projected sales of $4.1 billion, which gives Nintendo about 80 percent of the U.S. video game market.

"The Nintendo name rules," said Larry Carlat, editor of the New York-based Toy and Game Magazine. "Anything with a Nintendo name puts everything else to shame as far as the mass market goes. If you go head to head with Nintendo, you're going to lose. It's the kiss of death."

Hand-held games are the latest advancements in the video game world that Atari created with the introduction of "Pong" in 1976. The improvements are like video game plots: things get flashier and more sophisticated as the games go along.

Since going nationwide in May, Lynx has sold 90 percent of the 50,000 units it shipped and expects to sell 500,000 units this year.

Cigarette laws lax, 32 charged

ATLANTA (AP) — An estimated 1 billion packs of cigarettes are sold to children in this country each year but only three states reported citations against 32 vendors last year, federal health officials said Thursday.

Inspectors found only minimal enforcement of laws in 44 states restricting children's access to tobacco, the national Centers for Disease Control said.

The report comes one week after Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, the Bush administration's leading smoking critic, called for a ban on cigarette machines, licensing of tobacco retailers and a minimum age of 19 for tobacco purchases.

"Very few states have laws that are effective in preventing access to tobacco by minors," Sullivan said Thursday in a statement from Washington. "Effective enforcement is the key to successful efforts."

The CDC noted that 44 states and the District of Columbia have laws restricting minors' access to tobacco. Thirty-six states require cigarette buyers to be 18, three states set the age at 19, four set it at 17 and one state sets it at 16, as does the District of Columbia.

Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico and Wyoming have no minimum age for sale of cigarettes. Kentucky will restrict sales to minors under 16 beginning July 13.

Only five states — Alaska, Connecticut, Florida, New York and Vermont — could provide the Department of Health and Human Services with data on citations for tobacco sales to minors, according to the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

Of those five, only three reported any sales violations in 1989: Florida with 16, Alaska with eight and New York with eight.

"It's clear these laws are not enforced," said Dr. Tom Novotny of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

A report in the Journal of the American Medical Association earlier this year estimated the number of cigarette packages sold to minors each year in the United States at 1 billion.

Just six states — Alaska, Idaho, Indiana, Maine, Minnesota and Utah — prohibit cigarette machines in areas accessible to children or ban such machines altogether, the CDC said.

Various studies have indicated that between 3 percent and 16 percent of underage smokers get their cigarettes out of machines, Novotny said. The majority of sales to kids occur over the counter.

Sullivan has proposed model legislation for states to control tobacco sales to minors. Such laws would be "a potentially effective public health strategy to prevent tobacco use by teen-agers," said the Atlanta-based CDC, an agency of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Sullivan's proposal was criticized as too weak by the Coalition on Smoking or Health and by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass..

'Rip Van Albania' begins to stir

Now stirs Albania, the Rip Van Winkle of Europe. The stirrings are faint but heartening. Almost certainly, long-slumbering Albania will open its eyes, welcome the sunshine, rise to its feet and join in Eastern Europe's fitful but inspiring march toward democracy.

In the past several months, Albania has been trying to establish better political and economic relations with the rest of Europe — for example, proposing participation in the European Common Market. It also has sought to develop ties to the United States and the Soviet Union, and has announced measures to permit foreign travel by Albanians and allow them to practice religion.

These changes may not seem like much, and ordinarily they wouldn't be much. But in the context of Albanian politics, the are amazing. Since 1944, Albania has been sleeping deep in the arms of a communist orthodoxy created by Stalin. The country's obsession with secrecy, security and political orthodoxy has been almost pathological. Even Fidel Castro's Cuba is almost a model of progressivism by contrast with Albania.

No outsider knows what prompted Albania to initiate these small changes; perhaps officials there saw that a refusal to make such moves now would invite revolutionary reforms later on. Or perhaps they realized what they should have seen decades ago: that orthodox communism offers Albania nothing but poverty and despair.

Minor as the changes are, they are likely to inspire demands for more far-reaching reforms of the kind that have taken place elsewhere in Eastern Europe. Albania is the poorest country in Europe. But it has considerable mineral resources and the potential for developing hydroelectric power. No one can predict the pace or extent of reform in Albania, but a long-delayed, much needed beginning has been made.

State facing crisis in social services

Gov. Bill Clements last week took a moment from his naysaying over education reform and added the funding crisis over health and human services to the call of the ongoing special session.

That such an action is needed was emphasized last week when Texas Department of Human Services Commissioner Ron Lindsey released a list of budget cuts he would have to enact if his agency's $211 million budget shortfall is not addressed. ...

The DHS budget woes are not the only social service problems facing Texas. Two other agencies — the Department of Health and the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation — also face sizable budget deficits that threaten crucial services such as state care for chronically ill children...

Clements has made the right call on social services. Now the state waits to see whether the governor will provide any meaningful ideas on how to deal with the latest crisis, or if he shows a new willingness to work with leaders in the Legislature.

Colombians fighting cartel

Colombia has elected a new president, Cesar Gaviria, who is vowing to carry on the fight against the country's infamous cocaine cartels and their narcoterrorist thugs.

From the United States' perspective, the people of Colombia — to use a new cliche — did the right thing. Now the ball is in our court...

Turnout in the Sunday balloting was low, about 45 percent of eligible voters, but voters sent the drug traders a clear message: Get your dirty business out of Colombia.

And they gave Gaviria a green light to continue the policies of President Virgilio Barco, who cracked down on the cocaine traffickers last year...

Americans can help by curbing their desire for cocaine and its killer offspring, crack, and by, as Gaviria asked, ending trade barriers to legitimate Colombian exports.

S&L 'good' news still bad

The good news is the Bush administration's saying the cost of bailing out the scandal-ridden savings and loan industry may be only $6 billion more than originally estimated.

The bad news is that the cost could run as high as $59 billion above previous estimates.

Further good news is that the government's ability to calculate what we are expected to dig into our pockets and fork over is seldom very accurate.

The bad news is that if worse comes to worst, and it usually does, the total cost of halting the hemorrhaging will hit $132 billion.

That is by the Treasury Department's figures. But the Treasury is playing this thing awfully close to the vest, as we have seen.

The General Accounting Office ... sees the cost in a bleaker light: It estimates that the bailout could eventually cost between $300 and $500 billion.

The new estimates ... were received last week by a rather glum group of senators on the Senate Banking Committee. "Everybody," said Sen. John Hentz, R-Pa., "is sitting here in a state of shock."

Hostages see dark side of glasnost

WASHINGTON — Natalia and Alexander Levchenko, a mother and son living in Moscow, know the dark side of glasnost. When President Bush finishes toasting and praising Mikhail Gorbachev this week, he should take the Soviet president aside and tell him this: If Gorbachev is serious about his country's image, he must let the Levchenkos go.

Anderson

Stanislav Levchenko is a former KGB major who defected in 1979 and is currently living at an undisclosed location in the United States. He left behind his wife Natalia and son Alexander, now 25. By mutual agreement, the Levchenkos were divorced after his defection. Mother and son have paid the price for Levchenko's defection, and he is determined to get them both out of the Soviet Union.

The United States has been kind to Stanislav Levchenko. In Moscow he has been sentenced to death. He would be bound, but not blindfolded, and shot in the back of the head in a Moscow prison courtyard. But as a free man in the United States, he has published four books. He lectures extensively, consults with the Justice Department on espionage cases and is a fellow at Boston University.

Gorbachev has not been as kind to Natalia and Alexander. Levchenko had to sever contact with them for several years because the KGB was harassing his family to find out where he was. He thought he could make life easier for them if he didn't call or write.

He was wrong. Natalia has been allowed to take only low-paying jobs. Alexander was not permitted to enter college.

Levchenko contacted his family again last fall, hoping that Gorbachev and glasnost boded well for them. It did not. Natalia had the same dead-end job and Alexander was a night watchman at a dormitory, living below the Soviet poverty line.

While Levchenko had been out of touch, his son had been arrested on trumped up charges of "commercial dealings," and spent a year in jail. There he was beaten so severely that he has lost the use of his right arm and leg.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, at Levchenko's urging, has promised immediate entry into the United States as soon as Natalia and Alexander get Soviet exit visas.

Natalia was fired from her job last November when she applied for the visa. Last month, mother and son were denied visas on the grounds that they had access to state secrets — a bogus argument the Soviets also use to detain Jews.

A deputy chief of the department of visas and permits in Moscow told Natalia, "You and your son will never leave this country. You are hostages here and will remain so forever."

On May 14, another bully in that department demanded that Natalia take back the emigration applications. When she refused he told her that no one could help her, including the U.S. members of congress who have written to Gorbachev to plead her case.

Alexander's health has taken a turn for the worse. When we recently visited Levchenko, a friend of several years, he was severely depressed. He told us his son was talking about suicide, perhaps by setting himself on fire, the same method used recently by a Lithuanian who also wanted to get the attention of Gorbachev.

HEALTH CRISIS: The skyrocketing cost of health care, borne by employers who carry insurance plans, is pushing up the costs of goods and services. American firms must get top-flight health plans or they risk losing quality employees. Still, 38 million Americans have no health insurance. The White House is beginning to view health care as the overriding domestic priority for the 1990s.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The generals in the drug war are focusing too much attention on law enforcement and not enough on treatment. This year, $7 billion has been appropriated for stopping the flow of drugs and a little more than $1 billion for treatment. Every addict who can be cured is one less customer for the greedy cocaine cartels. This simple rule of supply and demand will drive them out of business faster than cops and judges.

CHARLEY REESE

We won't know what happens at summit

I can sum up the summit in one sentence. Whatever is important about it, we don't know. You see the press doesn't really cover a summit. It covers the hoopla, the coming in and the going out. But the press doesn't cover the summit because it is not allowed to be present during the conversations between President Gorbachev and President Bush. Now, they may come out and tell us, in generalities, what they talked about, but we really don't know, do we? We aren't present. The press isn't present. And if any stenographer is present, no transcript is available to the public.

Reese

In the old days, before some journalists became TV stars, the old reporters made this fact of diplomatic life clear, but nowadays, routine coverage of an event from which the press is excluded is hyped like the Super Bowl. Midst all the ballyhoo from the networks, it is easy to forget that neither the press nor the public knows what two heads of state talk about when they get together. The talks are private. The security is tight.

Don't be taken in by this "sources tell us" malarkey that has become the crutch of Washington-based journalism. Sources are usually flacks hired to transmit messages to the press for purposes of political propaganda or pols or aides doing the same thing. Neither Bush nor his Secretary of State James Baker is a brilliant statesman. They're bright. There's a difference. Unfortunately, they have no strategy and no clearly defined plan — no "vision thing" as Bush contemptuously called it.

Just as Robert McNamara thought you could manage war, they think you can manage statecraft. Doesn't work. Managers and leaders are not the same thing. Moreover, it's dangerous when your opposite is a dictator from a country with a long tradition of deception, secrecy and strategy. You can be sure Gorbachev has a clearly defined "vision thing" and a carefully planned strategy for getting from here to there. He's not concerned about public opinion polls or what today's TV newscast has to say. Gorbachev knows that on any morning, he can wake up and make his critics disappear. He just had his rubberstamps pass a law making it a crime to criticize him. That will be handy when that particular morning arrives. One difference between Joseph Stalin and Gorbachev is that Gorbachev wants his dictatorial powers spelled out in legislation.

That, by the way, may be the ultimate Orwellian evolution of the nightmare state: a manic depressive tyrant who orders the legislature to spell out the powers he already has. As the more wacko of the Roman Emperors came to insist that they be treated as gods, so Gorbachev seems to insist that he be treated as a democratically elected leader.

Gorbachev will be pushing for what every Soviet dictator pushes for in summit meetings — concessions from the U.S. He's already gotten a bunch from Baker who went to Moscow in advance of the summit. As soon as Bush fell into the trap of helping Gorbachev (as others felt we had to help Lenin, Stalin, Khrushchev, and so forth) lest someone worse come along, then, of course, U.S. leverage evaporated.

When you give away the store in advance, there is not much left to negotiate.

If you're thinking that I don't have much confidence in Bush, you're right. Bush's full resume is a list of managerial positions. Save for a short career in Congress, Bush's government jobs have always been carrying out someone else's policies.

Beneath Bush's preppie good manners and veneer of civility, there is arrogance. Both Bush and Baker are millionaire's kids with a deep-seated belief in their own superiority.

The history of Western civilization proves the axiom that humility succeeds and arrogance fails.

Ex-health nut braves death for breakfast

My friend Rigsby, the health nut, had that look in his eye.

"I did it," he said.

"Did what?" I asked him.

"I had breakfast."

"So did I," I said. "What's the big deal?"

"I had a real breakfast," Rigsby answered. "For ten years all I've had for breakfast are things that are supposed to be good for me.

Grizzard

"I've eaten enough oat bran to qualify for the Kentucky Derby. I've eaten more yogurt than a 112-year-old Russian. I've eaten so many bananas on my granola, I'm growing hair on my back and twice a day have a serious urge to go hang upside down on a tree limb."

"But breakfast is our most important meal," I said. "You should be eating healthy in the morning."

"I don't care," said Rigsby. "Man can't live on fiber alone. He must also have an occasional scrambled egg."

"You ate an egg?" I asked him in disbelief.

"Four," Rigsby answered.

I don't remember the last time I had an egg. I think it was during the Eisenhower administration.

"Aren't you afraid of getting too much cholesterol," I asked Rigsby.

"I've got to die of something, and if an egg doesn't get me something else will."

"What else did you have?"

"A Belgian waffle," said Rigsby. "With butter and syrup all over it."

"That's a lot of sugar. What about hypoglycemia?"

"What about it?"

"Well," I attempted to explain, "you could become faint, disoriented , and develop diabetes."

"Yeah," said Rigsby. "I also could get run over by a beer truck, but I'm still going to cross the street."

"Did you eat anything else?"

"I had some bacon."

"Bacon, studies show, can cause cancer."

"And I ate some white toast."

"No nutritional value there. You should have eaten whole wheat."

"And some pancakes."

"On top of the Belgian waffle? Are your affairs in order?"

"And some hashed brown potatoes."

"All that grease. Who's the executor of your will?"

"And three chocolate donuts."

"You won't live until Christmas."

"And a Little Debbie Snack Cake."

"We're going to miss you."

"And a pot of coffee."

"Decaf, of course."

"High test."

"I'm looking at a dead man."

"And you know what else?" Rigsby asked me.

"What else?"

"I'm going to do it again in the morning."

It takes a real man, I suppose, to stare death square in the eye. I think I'll go over to the Waffle House and drool.

NATION IN BRIEF

Kids' fistfight brings charges

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 9-year-old who flattened a schoolmate's nose after the boy called him "Fatso" faces a felony charge, and the father of the accused is outraged.

Bobby Woods of suburban Sunrise is charged with aggravated battery, a second-degree felony, in the fight with Khalid Fathallah at an elementary school where both were attending summer school.

"This is incredible," Bobby's father, Nolan, said Wednesday. "I think this kind of court time should be spent on kids who need it. Kids vandalizing, raping, stealing. Not over a little fistfight."

Bobby was charged partly because Khalid suffered a broken nose. "That raises it above a simple schoolyard incident," said Assistant State Attorney Gary Ford.

But defense attorney Paul Stark said he would ask a judge next week to dismiss the case.

Floods hit Vicksburg

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Flash floods fed by up to seven inches of rain forced closure of low-lying roads and chased hundreds of people from their homes Thursday, some of whom fled in boats.

Creeks that empty into the rain-swollen Mississippi River overflowed their banks in heavy thunderstorms.

"We've had flash flooding all day. It hit pretty suddenly," said Warren County Sheriff Paul Barrett. "A lot of them have lost everything they had."

No injuries were reported, the sheriff said.

Privileges suspended

RATON, N.M. (AP) — Five southern Colorado residents and five New Mexico men have lost their hunting and fishing privileges for three years for illegally killing game and other wild animals.

The 10 were arrested during a federal wildlife sting operation last year that centered on southern Colorado and northern New Mexico. During the sting, a federal agent posed as a taxidermist who bought eagles, elk and other animals from poachers.

Farmer arrested for night plowing

CHICAGO (AP) — A farmer in a once-rural area has been arrested for plowing his fields too late at night after a neighbor in an adjoining subdivision complained that the drone of the tractor was keeping him awake.

"The way I feel, he moved next to the field — the field didn't move next to him," said Ray Dettmering, who farms 600 acres about 30 miles south of Chicago.

"The only question I have is, this fall when I go to harvest it, what happens then?"

Dettmering's neighbor, Leonard Reh, said he, too, must make a living. And he can't because of the noise.

"I don't want to stop him from making his living," said Reh, a Postal Service employee. "But farming land at midnight is just a little bit too outrageous."

Reh's home is in a new subdivision in Matteson, about 30 miles southwest of Chicago. The village has seen an influx of middle- and upper-middle class commuters in recent years.

Reh and other neighbors say that since they must turn their lawnmowers off at 7 p.m. because of village ordinances, why should a farm tractor be different?

And so, about 11 p.m. on April 26, police responded to Reh's complaint. They tromped through muddy fields to arrest Dettmering as he, his wife, Kathy, and a hired hand finished plowing the land he leases.

Dettmering faces a June 11 hearing on two counts of disturbing the peace. Each count carries a maximum fine of $500 and six months in jail.

Dettmering, 28, of Peotone, has a day job and farms someone else's land on nights and weekends.

"Almost all producers depend to a certain extent on rented land," especially in rapidly urbanizing areas, said Ralph Heimlich, an agricultural economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C.

Heimlich said suburban growth areas, while attractive to the middle-class, often pose conflicts between suburbanites and their farm neighbors.

"People want to move out in the country and enjoy the open space, but some of the things that go with it aren't so pleasant, such as spreading manure from a dairy operation or ... dust and noise with a tillage operation," he said.

Marcos collapses

Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos is carried out on a stretcher after collapsing during her trial in Manhattan's federal court Thursday. Mrs. Marcos, 60, who has twice in the last month been troubled by high blood pressure, was rushed to New York Hospital after hemorrhaging from her nose and mouth. Late Thursday, doctors said she has erosive gastritis. Mrs. Marcos has been on trial since March on charges of racketeering, conspiracy, mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

NASA searchers find small leak, but not main one

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA workers found a tiny leak in Columbia's rear engine compartment Thursday, but judged it too small to have caused the hydrogen leak that delayed the shuttle launch.

"The feeling is at this point that's probably not what they're looking for," said Bruce Buckingham, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The search continued until late afternoon, then was halted so Columbia's on-board fuel tanks could be drained. Officials planned to increase pressure on the shuttle's external tank, which was filled with nonflammable helium, to find the main leak, Buckingham said.

At a news conference in Washington, NASA administrator Richard Truly said a special test — using another gas chilled to a liquid state — might have to be run "because the leak appeared only when the temperature got so cold."

The external tank was being filled with more than a half-million gallons of super-cold liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen Tuesday when the leak was detected. NASA called off the launch, set for 12:38 a.m. EDT Wednesday, and drained the explosive propellant.

Engineers believe Columbia's leak is in or near a 17-inch valve in a pipe that carries fuel from the external tank to the main engines.

'Corset kite' coming down at Museum of Southwest

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The Museum of the Southwest removed a controversial kite from a San Antonio artist's exhibit because museum officials said they found the kite — made from women's lingerie — offensive, the San Antonio Light reported Thursday.

Museum officials denied there was anything controversial about removing the display, which was due to come down to make room for other parts of the kite exhibit, "To Catch the Wind."

Artist Pat Hammond used a 1930s corset and nylon stockings to make the kite, which she calls "Of Corset Flies — But Will It Last Under Wear?"

It was part of a larger kite exhibit displayed in the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum.

"I don't know why anyone would be offended by a corset," said Jean Hagman, director at the Museum of the Southwest. "We don't have any prohibition to showing clothing. We have both ladies and childrens' undergarments in our textile collection, but in the children's museum right now the exhibition is about kites, not about historical clothing, not about puns."

A Light columnist reported that Ms. Hammond had heard one of the kites had been censored several days after setting up her exhibit. The kite in question is one of the most popular kites in her show and has been featured in Reader's Digest, the artist was quoted to say.

"If she is upset with the museum, I have not heard about it," Ms. Hagman said late Thursday. "We let the corset fly for three weeks until we got the educational components ready to go. We began taking down the visual puns as we were adding our own materials. And it seems to me the corset was one of the earliest ones that came down because of its location in the doorway into the workshop."

Ms. Hammond, who could not be reached for a comment, refers to the corset as a kite. Ms. Hagman refers to it as a visual pun and not a kite.

"The corset can be floated, but not flown and controlled, like a kite," Ms. Hagman said. "The puns are funny. The way she uses the play on words is really delightful, which is why we included the visual puns in the exhibit while we were waiting for the visual components to be completed."

The Associated Press reported that Ms. Hammond said Museum of the Southwest curator Gary Hood told her he removed the corset kite from the art show because it was "inappropriate."

"It's ladies' underwear," Hood told the Light. "Ladies' underwear ... is not appropriate for a children's museum."

"Does that mean we leave all the ladies at the front door?" Ms. Hagman said in response to Hood's statement as quoted in The Light. Hood was in New Mexico on museum business and could not be contacted.

Ms. Hagman said Ms. Hammond's collection comprises two parts — one covering the evolution of kites and the other containing visual puns.

"When Pat was here for the installation, we talked with her about how we would be removing some of the materials at two different times during the duration of the show," Ms. Hagman said. "The first was when we added the educational components for the exhibition."

The next portion will come down in August when the museum staff begins installing the dinosaur exhibit.

"In the children's museum, we evolve exhibitions one to another providing the visitor with a 'tickler' on an upcoming exhibition. This prevents us from having to close the children's museum when we change exhibitions."

Children's museum turns 1 Saturday

Staff Report

A birthday bash is planned for The Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum Saturday.

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will celebrate the first anniversary of the opening of the children's museum from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Saturday party is being hosted by Texaco Philanthropic Foundation and the museum.

Cake, clowns, magicians and prizes are part of the magic planned for this special event.

"The Children's Museum has had a good year," said Jean Hagman, the museum's director. "We are looking forward to even more enjoyable educational activities in the future."

There will be a Saturday-only special on museum memberships. Children's memberships — regularly $5 — will be $3; general memberships will be $25 instead of $35. The current Children's Museum exhibit is "To Catch the Wind."

Previous exhibits at the museum have included "My Special World," "It's About Time" and "Bubbles." Next up will be "The World Through the Eyes of Quetzalcoatlus." Quetzalcoatlus, the West Texas flying dinosaur with a 36-foot wing span, will be the central character as the Southwest of his time is depicted.

Census nears end

■ Even though Midland's response to the census outpaces the nation's, the bureau remains committed to head-counting to the very end — June 11.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland census workers will soon kick in their booster rockets for the final phase of the counting process, a Dallas-based U.S. Census Bureau official said Thursday.

Tomas Zuniga, who spoke at a Midland Complete Count Committee luncheon, said the "Were You Counted?" stage of the 1990 census is the most important.

Starting June 11, census officials will begin a 30-day campaign to give those who want to take part in the count a last chance to respond, he said.

"It's not designed to accommodate the non-respondents to the census questionnaires," said Zuniga, whose office oversees census efforts in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. "It's sort of like the last net for the person who for some reason slipped.

"This is last chance we have of counting everyone. This is very critical."

Because enumerators will not be visiting residences during the final phase, it is up to local officials to publicize the campaign, he said.

"Push as much as you can in this campaign," Zuniga said. "It's not a census unless everyone is counted."

Jose Cuevas, a city councilman who also takes part in the Midland Complete County Committee, said local census workers will publicize the campaign through the media, churches, business and civic organizations.

Those who still want to be counted will need to call 1-800-999-1990 for more information on how they can take part, Cuevas said.

"I also think we need to challenge the county to get the rural community to respond," he said. He added that committee members also plan to ask Midland County commissioners for financial help in publicizing the final census campaign.

County officials could not be reached for comment.

Linda Chavez, a census official based in the bureau's Lubbock office, commended all those in Midland who took part in the census campaign.

The percent of Midland city and county residents who have mailed back their census questionnaires has been outpacing the national average, Ms. Chavez said.

Figures as of last Friday show that 73.6 percent of city residents and 50.8 percent of rural residents in Midland County had returned their forms, with an overall 67.7 percent response rate for the county.

"It was a very good response," Ms. Chavez said. "It was because of the local effort."

Meanwhile, the nation had averaged only a 63 percent response rate.

In Ector County, only 60.1 percent of city of Odessa residents and 39.1 percent of rural residents had responded, giving the county an overall 56 percent response rate.

Ms. Chavez said some non-respondents in both counties have been less than cordial to enumerators who visit their homes.

"The enumerators are facing a lot of public resistance," she said. "People need to remember that the census is for the community."

Zuniga called local and national census awareness campaigns a success, although bureau officials had anticipated a 70 percent nationwide response rate to the questionnaires.

"I think, overall, the promotional campaign for the 1990 census was the best ever," he said. "We started earlier and we did more."

Zuniga said general census figures probably will be made public by late fall. A county-by-county breakdown must be presented to state governments by April 1, 1991, he said.

Jose Garcia, also a Lubbock-based census official, said Midland County's enumerators will be sent to Ector County next week to help officials there complete the count. The counting process should end by June 11, he said.

Garcia said the bureau still needs people to work as enumerators in the Midland area.

Applications will be accepted 10:30 a.m. Monday in the basement of Midland City Hall, 300 N. Loraine St., and 1:30 p.m. that day at the city's Texas Employment Commission office, 501 N. Loraine St. Enumerator interviews also will be held the same times and places on Thursday.

The enumerators, who will be paid $5.50 an hour, will be needed to help check addresses among other activities.

Williams raps Richards' consultant

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams on Thursday accused Democratic opponent Ann Richards' media consultant of producing racist political advertisements in the Michigan governor's race.

The Richards campaign said Williams' charge signalled the end of his pledge not to sling mud.

Ms. Richards, noting that Williams has cancelled several joint appearances with her, invited the Republican to join her for a cup of coffee to "talk about the issues" when she appears Friday in Williams' hometown of Midland.

"I'd like for Clayton to come join me. We really need to sit down and have an open discussion about what needs to be done for the future of Texas," Ms. Richards said.

■ On the last day of classes, it's anything but routine for students at Henderson Elementary School.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Summer vacation started a few hours early at Henderson Elementary School Thursday.

With pupils eschewing academic pursuits in favor of volleyball tournaments and Walt Disney videos, the last day of class was a school day in name only, teachers said.

"Since students know it's the last day, they come to school so hyper it's incomprehensible that we could keep them in the room and try to teach them anything," said fourth-grade teacher Pam Hanson, in her first year with the Midland Independent School District.

"They come to school like they've already eaten 10 candy bars full of sugar."

Ms. Hanson said that aside from last-day shenanigans, her first year has gone smoothly.

About 850 Midland youngsters may be better prepared to cope in a world where the temptation of drug use is hard to escape.

On Thursday, a group of 6th graders completed the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program. The students received a DARE T-shirt and a certificate of completion from Midland Police

DEATHS

Nelson Mahurin

Services for Nelson Mahurin, 74, are set for 3 p.m. Saturday at Primitive Baptist Church with J.E. Barrington, elder, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mahurin

He died Thursday at a local hospital.

He was born Dec. 15, 1915, in Hill County where he attended school. He married Ruby Helms Dec. 22, 1932, in Hillsboro. The couple moved to West Texas in 1941.

Mahurin served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and returned to O'Donnell after his discharge in 1945.

The couple moved to Midland in 1967 after a short time living in Tahoka.

He was a member of Primitive Baptist Church.

Survivors include: his wife, Ruby Mahurin of Midland; two sons, Coy Mahurin of Midland and Roy Mahurin of Austin; two daughters, Patsy Weir of Midland and Sue Weir of Odessa; one brother, Bob Mahurin of Andrews; three sisters, Francis Arnold of Whitney, Maxene Kirkland of Cleburne and Joam James of Baton Rouge, La.; 11 grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Julia Brim

Services for Julia Brim, 81, are set for 11 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Ben Walker officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at a local hospital.

She was born April 17, 1909 in Van Buren, Ark., where she attended school. She married Harrison R. Nott in 1926 in Goldsmith, where the couple lived until his death in 1963.

She moved to Odessa, where she married John Brim in 1964. The couple lived in Brownwood until he died in 1979. Mrs. Brim moved to Stephenville and then to Midland in 1984.

Survivors include: two daughters, Marry Nott Rogers of Midland and Elizabeth Nott McGee of Stephenville; four granchildren; six great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be directed to the American Diabetes Association, 3404 W. Illinois Ave., Midland, Texas 79703.

Earl Lonzo McBee

ODESSA — Funeral services for Earl Lonzo McBee, 82, are scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at Asbury United Methodist Church with the Rev. Will Cotton officiating. Graveside services will follow at noon at the Kermit Cemetery under the direction of Cooper Funeral Home.

He died Thursday at a local nursing home.

He was born May 1, 1908, in Eastland, where he married Angie Mae Robinson in 1927. She preceded him in death June 7, 1985.

He was a maintenance forman for Exxon for 39 years. He was a Baptist and a member of the Wink Masonic Lodge No. 1302 and the Order of the Eastern Star 937.

He was a 52-year resident of Winkler County and a four-year Odessa resident. Survivors include two sons, Earl McBee of Midland and Donald D. McBee of Odessa; a sister, Theryn Putnam of Waco; eight grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Edith O. Knowlton

COLORADO CITY — Edith Omega Knowlton, 66, died Wednesday at a Midland hospital.

Services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday at Kiker-Seale Funeral Home in Colorado City with the Rev. Ernest Bailey officiating. Burial will follow in Colorado City Cemetery.

Knowlton was born in Windgate. She married J.C. Knowlton on Aug. 3, 1948.

She is survived by one daughter, Bonnie Cearley of Robert Lee; four sons, James Williams of San Angelo, Ronnie Knowlton of Midland, Clarence Knowlton of San Antonio, and Scottie Knowlton of San Angelo; two sisters, Ruby Watkins of Big Spring, and Mary Watkins of Colorado City; one brother Jim King of Windgate; and nine grandchildren.

Justin W. Puga

Graveside services for Justin W. Puga, 4, are set for 11 a.m. Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Bill Skaggs officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday at local hospital.

He was born Aug. 2, 1985, in San Angelo.

Survivors include: his parents, Tommy and Donita Puga and brothers Thomas Puga and Jordan Puga, all of Midland; his grandparents, Toni and Bill Huckabee of Midland and Don and Hope Hall of Crane; great-grandmother Evelyn Heath of Crane; and numerous aunts and uncles.

Lena Freeman

Funeral services for Lena Freeman, 71, of Midland are pending with Baker-Jackson Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at a local hospital.

Memorial services for Stacy Dee Martin are set for 1 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

He died Thursday at a Dallas hospital.

Mrs. E.L. Everett

Services are pending at Totten-Day Funeral Home.

Dallas official cleared on defacing charge

DALLAS (AP) — Grand jurors Thursday declined to indict Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price on charges he defaced alcohol and tobacco billboards, but the district attorney says Price still faces misdemeanor charges.

Price, an outspoken opponent of cigarette and alcohol billboard ads aimed at blacks and Hispanics, was arrested in March after allegedly whitewashing billboards.

Chief Richard Czech.

The DARE program puts law enforcement officials in the classroom to teach youngsters how to avoid drug use and substance abuse. Instructors discuss drug abuse, peer resistance training, self-concept improvement and value judgements about respect for the law and personal safety.

"We're committed 100 percent to the DARE project because if your going to speak on the war on drugs, the only way to win is through education ... these kids are our future," Cpl. Jim White of the Midland Police Department said.

The program consists of lessons that last an hour once a week for 17 weeks.

Thursday's was the second class to complete the local semester-long DARE program. The program was first implemented in the fall of 1989 with the first graduation ceremony in January.

DARE's long-term goals include: a decrease in the supply of drugs as a result of a reduction in demand, a more positive identification with law enforcement officers, a increased awareness of decision-making in all areas of life and a decrease in crime.

"It's is as meaningful and good as any program that the police have put on. We'll have to look to the future, about four or five years, to see if this program works," White said.

The DARE program was first developed by the Police Chief Daryl F. Gates of the Los Angeles Police Department and Harry Handler, superintendent of the Los Angeles Unified School District in 1983.

Wyeth's work to hang in New Mexico gallery

SAN PATRICIO, N.M. — Fifty-eight sketches by renowned artist Henriette Wyeth will be revealed for the first time in an exhibit starting Sunday at Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery here.

Wyeth

The exhibit, called "The drawings of Henriette Wyeth," will begin with a special by invitation only showing at the gallery Sunday.

Miss Wyeth, who is best known for her paintings, drew the 58 pencil, charcoal and pastel sketches in the 1920s while attending the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Art. All of these original sketches as well as original art work and prints by N.C. Wyeth, Miss Wyeth, Peter Hurd, Andrew Wyeth and Michael Hurd are featured at Hurd-LaRinconada Gallery.

Both private and public collections represent the paintings of Miss Wyeth, whose works include the portrait of Mrs. Richard Nixon, White House, 1979, and of her brother, artist Andrew Wyeth, 1986. She is represented in many major private collections including those of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and Helen Hayes.

Miss Wyeth married artist Peter Hurd in 1929. She resides on the Sentinel ranch in San Patricio.

MISD: All summer, administrators busy

(From 1B)

"The year went great," she said. "I really did enjoy it — I think I learned about as much as the kids did.

"I had one of the best schools in this town, and a lot of it has to do with my principal, Mr. (Jack) Hightower. I had such a positive year, it's just increased my love of doing this."

Miss Hanson said she is leaving for Lubbock today to be reunited with her fiance, and won't be returning to Henderson next year.

Her first-year colleague Susan Brown, however, will be back next fall — with an improved attitude.

"I hated it (teaching) at first," said Ms. Brown, who is from Amarillo. "Somewhere along the line this year I kind of got a grip."

And while both Ms. Brown and Ms. Hanson plan to take summer jobs, work was the last thing on the minds of pupils about to be liberated.

"I'm going to go swimming, I'm going to go camping, I'm going to go fishing," said 10-year-old Kyle Salzman, a Henderson fourth-grader.

The great outdoors were also on the mind of 10-year-old Craig Thomson, who said hiking, swimming, fishing and a trip to Six Flags were on his summer agenda.

Patricia Candelaria, mother of two Henderson pupils, said she was looking forward to spending summer days with her 8-year-old daughter Alicia and her son Daniel, who finished kindergarten Thursday.

"This is a great day!" she said, holding up Alicia's report card. "We've got straight A's here."

Meanwhile, student parking lots at Lee and Midland high school were empty Thursday afternoon as underclassmen prepared for vacation and seniors prepared for graduation. Some 494 Lee seniors and 408 MHS seniors were scheduled to graduate Thursday night at Chaparral Center ceremonies, MISD officials reported.

Lee Principal Jack Fryar said the end of the school year is a bittersweet time.

"It is the happiest time on earth," Fryar said as assistant principals waged joyous year-end squirt-gun battles in the background. "It's always a high ... because there's a sense of completion. ...(But) some of the seniors we can hardly stand for them to leave. You have really mixed feelings because they're such super kids."

Fryar said that although this was a "marvelous" year, it was not without its crises.

"We don't expect in the people business not to have problems," he said. "But problems are often the basis of growth and the basis of learning."

MHS Principal Jimmie Kelly, meanwhile, said this year was one of the smoothest he could remember.

"Certainly in terms of student behavior we've had an outstanding year," he said. "We've had a decline in the incidence of drug abuse, and certainly that's encouraging."

Kelly said he expected this year's MHS graduates to become upstanding members of the community and the nation.

"You always feel a sense of joy at the achievements of the students," he said.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi, whose son was scheduled to graduate from MHS Thursday, said summer will be busy for district administrators.

Hiring new teachers and preparing next year's budget will be two tasks administrators must handle, Baressi said. Maintenance crews will repair district buildings and equipment, and teachers and administrators alike will receive in-service training.

"This particular summer we're going to be doing some programming and planning on possible facilities to include on the (fall) bond issue," Baressi said.

Baressi said last fall's school prayer controversy — which ended with a school board decision allowing student religious groups to meet on campus — was the most notable wrinkle in a comparatively smooth school year.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Two jailed on LSD charge

Staff Report

Two Midland men remained in jail Thursday night after being arrested for possession of 600 "hits" or doses, of LSD worth about $5,000 Thursday morning, Midland County Sheriff's Department officials said.

Jimmy Mac Haggard, 17, and Robert Shane Jenkins, 19, were both charged with possession of LSD with intent to deliver, officials said. Jenkins was also charged with possession of methamphetamines.

Jenkins was arrested at his home at a westside apartment complex and Haggard at his home in south Midland, officials said.

Also confisicated was a MAC-10 automatic weapon, officials said. Weapon charges are pending, officials said.

Bond was set at $20,000 for Haggard and $15,000 for Jenkins on both his charges by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, officials said.

Singleton given life

A jury sentenced Donnie Wayne Singleton, 31, to life in prison Thursday on each of three counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child, officials confirmed.

Assistant District Attorney Randy Fluke said Singleton also was assessed $20,000 in fines.

Fluke said Singleton was arrested Dec. 6, 1989, by Midland police in connection with the molestation of a 10-year-old girl last fall. He had been free on $25,000 bond since his arrest, Fluke said.

Singleton pleaded innocent to all charges before Judge Pat Baskin in 142nd District Court on Tuesday, Fluke said.

Singleton's three life sentences will be served concurrently. Singleton could be eligible for parole in 15 years, Fluke said.

$250,000 to be awarded

RUIDOSO, N.M. — The Hubbard Museum, located in the Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs, awards the Hubbard Art Award for Excellence, a $250,000 purchase award, this weekend.

More than 35 top masters have submitted two works each for the competition. The award will be presented in conjunction with an art show and sale which features the works of these masters.

Beginning today, the Hubbard Museum is open every race day from 8:30 to 10 a.m. for the general public and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. for Turf Club patrons. On non-race Wednesdays, the Museum is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the general public.

Included in the museum's collection are works by such artists as Charles M. Russell, Frederic S. Remington and William R. Leigh.

Drip irrigation can save up to 50 percent on water

Kiker

Drip irrigation enables home gardeners to produce maximum yields of quality vegetables with the least amount of water. Water is applied to the soil at the center of the row with greater precision and economy. It is possible to reduce water usage in a garden by more than 50 percent with a well-designed drip system. How does it work?

A system of plastic pipes with tiny openings called "emitters" delivers the water, drop by drop, into the soil at the base of the plants along the row. The water soaks in immediately when the rate of drip irrigation is adjusted correctly. Because there is neither flooding nor run-off, there is no waste. Hoe garden drip systems operate at very low pressure in the range of 4 to 10 pounds per square inch of tubing. Most gardeners quickly learn how often and how long to oeprate their drip system to satisfy the water needs of their plants.

Even when a drip system is on, the middles are dry enanough to walk on which permits harvesting and other garden work to go on during irrigation.

Sprinkler and furrow-irrigated gardens are too wet to walk in for a day or two after each irrigation. Drip-irrigated plants are more productive. What is not sprayed over the leaves as with sprinkler irrigation thus reduces the chance of disease. The soil is not waterlogged as with furrow irrigation so more oxygen is available to the roots at all times. The entire soil surface can be mulched without interfering with irrigation. This stops the flow of soil moisture by evaporation.

At the current rates for city water, saving in water cost alone can pay for drip system in less than two growing seasons. A 1,000 square foot garden, irrigated twice weekly for a month in midsummer, requires about 10,000 gallons of water via furrow irrigation. This same garden, drip irrigated, will use less than half the water for a savings of at least 5,000 gallons of water. When considering a full season of gardening, one can begin to see what conserving water by the "drip" system can mean to a budget.

Drip system costs vary widely, but they are reasonable for the home gardener. The useful life is at least four to 10 years, depending on the care given the system.

Flooded farmers, ranchers still assessing their losses

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Hot, open weather over much of Texas this past week allowed agricultural producers in areas not affected by flooding to move ahead with planting or harvesting operations, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

But farmers and cattle raisers in the path of recent floods are still trying to assess their losses, the Extension Service reported. Hardest-hit counties are in the North Central, Central, Northeast and Southeastern districts.

To date, 52 Texas counties have received disaster designations following inspection visits by federal and state officials, and more counties may be added. The disaster designation means that producers are eligible to apply for low-interest agricultural loans.

Estimates of the state's agricultural losses are still incomplete but range from $500 million to $700 million.

Final damage estimates cannot be determined until flood waters recede and owners and other agricultural leaders have time to inspect crop losses, erosion damages, replacement costs for fences and other agricultural factors, said Dr. Zerle Carpenter, Extension Service director.

Farmers of Bowie, Red River and Lamar counties, in the Red River Valley, are facing flood damages of more than $30 million, they estimate. One of the biggest problems they face is the vast amount of silt and sediment deposited on the land by the flood.

Charles Jackson, Bowie County Extension Service agent, said producers in his county face an estimated loss of $18 million from the flooding.

"We don't know how the land will respond or how it should be prepared before planting the next crop, "Jackson said. "Some Bermuda grasses that were covered with silt are beginning to come back, but it may take a year or longer to get a good stand."

Alan Albert, general manager of the Red River Hay Company, said erosion is the biggest problem on deep-plowed land.

Farm subsidies tax Congress

New report reviews impact of farm programs on rural economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — No doubt about it, farmers have an image problem with Congress over the amount of taxpayer money used to subsidize the nation's production of food and fiber.

It's an old story, and this year's version is little different. There are those who claim farmers have been on the public dole for decades and should be weaned off it.

Others, with matching fervor, say food production is so vital to the American dream that agriculture deserves the moral, spiritual and financial support of all citizens.

Net spending on farm commodity programs, including direct payments to farmers, peaked at $25.8 billion in the 1986 fiscal year and has dropped sharply because of dwindling surpluses and higher market prices.

Without choosing sides, the General Accounting Office has taken one of its periodic looks at the situation in a new report: "Farming and Farm Programs — Impact on the Rural Economy and on Farmers."

The GAO, the chief investigative arm of Congress, really doesn't plow new fields in its 43-page report. But it does provide timely figures for use by lawmakers during the current 1990 farm bill debate.

Congress hopes to agree on a new five-year blueprint in the next few months to succeed the current Food Security Act of 1985.

Although the law covers a wide range of measures such as conservation, rural housing, credit, research, international trade, food stamps, school lunches and other Agriculture Department functions, a bundle of commodity programs is its core.

Those cover price support operations for major commodities such as wheat, corn and other feed grains, soybeans, cotton, rice, dairy products, wool and mohair.

Since the early 1930s, the general thrust of government programs has been varying degrees of supply management to help prevent the buildup of huge crop surpluses and low prices.

In return for complying in the major crop programs — those for dairy and some other commodities are structured differently — farmers get federal price support guarantees, or loans that can be repaid if market prices improve.

If market prices don't improve, farmers can forfeit their commodities to the government and the debt is canceled. Taxpayers then own the forfeited crops.

Additionally, in recent times, there are direct income subsidies called "deficiency" payments to make up the difference between low market prices and "target" prices specified by law.

The differences among the programs for specific commodities are often complicated, tedious and difficult to comprehend — just the right conditions for lobbyists and politicians.

Another central theme for more than half a century holds that benefits accrue to those individual farmers who produce the most bushels, bales or pounds of whatever item is covered by a USDA program.

The worker who puts in 40 hours a week on an assembly line is going to get a fatter paycheck than the part-time employee working 20 or 30 hours.

And the bigger the farm, the bigger the production. That makes for bigger subsidies. At least, that's the way it has been most of the time, although in recent years Congress has tried to limit the amounts individual producers can collect.

Some in Congress contend subsidies should be targeted to smaller, family-type farms to help them survive.

John W. Harman, the GAO's director for food and agriculture issues, said analysts looked at farm-sector employment, distribution of payments among various sizes of farming operations and some other factors relating to the "before and after" passage of the 1985 farm law.

"In summary, the number of farming-dependent counties is decreasing, and non-agricultural employment in rural counties is increasingly important to those county economies," Harman told Congress. "Nine out of 10 rural workers are employed by non-farm industries."

More than half of the nation's farm families have one or more members working at non-farm jobs, he said.

"For the most part, the distribution of farm program payments did not change substantially after passage of the 1985 farm bill," Harman said. "During the 1985 through 1988 time period, cash grain farmers received over half of all farm payments."

The GAO report showed that in 1988, a total of 632,690 farms participated in federal commodity programs, which was less than 30 percent of the 2.2 million farms in the United States that year.

These farms averaged $14,257 each in farm payments in 1988, the GAO report said. But payments varied greatly by specialty, which was based on the kind of production that represented at least one-half a farm's annual sales.

According to the GAO report, 273,955 cash grain farmers collected an average of $18,700 in 1988, representing about 57 percent of the total payments.

Cotton farms, shown at 18,095 units, averaged $32,785 each in 1988. And 199,804 producers of beef cattle, hogs and sheep, got $10,032 each, the report said. Dairy farms totaled 69,596 and averaged $10,423 each.

The remainder of 1988 payments was accounted for by other crops and livestock operations.

Looking at farm sizes as measured by annual dollar sales, the GAO report said that regardless of the type of operation, those with 1988 sales of $500,000 or more — some 21,701 farms — had average farm program payments of $56,571.

Agency's money woes to impact poor, elderly

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's sickest children, the elderly, retarded and handicapped are most likely to suffer if the state's three largest social service agencies run out of money.

Thousands of low-income Texans may be turned away from the three state agencies if the Legislature does not allocate emergency funding for June through August.

The funding shortage is so severe at the state Health Department that Dr. Robert Bernstein, health commissioner, said his agency may run out of money within the next few days. The department, facing a $40 million budget shortfall, says it may have to turn away about 4,000 sick children this summer.

These are children who usually would be accepted into the Chronically Ill and Disabled Children's Program. They suffer from cancer, AIDS, cystic fibrosis, congenital heart disorders, paralysis and other life-threatening medical conditions.

Without the health department, these children will be forced onto the already strained services of public hospitals around the state, said Dr. Robert A. MacLean, deputy health commissioner.

There are five private, non-profit children's hospitals in Texas that take some non-paying patients. But they would be hard-pressed to take more, said Joel Allison, chief executive officer of the Driscoll Foundation Children's Hospital in Corpus Christi.

"The children's hospitals already have a large amount of uncompensated care," Allison said. "We are going to meet the needs of children with critical illnesses, but the question is, how long can we do this?"

The Legislature also must restore $3.3 million in diverted funds by Sept. 1, or the health department will be forced to cut prenatal and infant services for up to 15,000 women and children, MacLean said.

Those who can't receive services, "will have to fall back on whatever resources they have in their communities," MacLean said. "The traditional ones are the public hospitals systems, but they are already stressed out."

A continuing budget crunch has already forced the health department to enforce stricter eligibility requirements on families that need their services.

Until May 19, a family of four with an annual income of about $26,000 could apply for some services for a chronically ill child. Today, the upper income limit is $20,320.

The Department of Human Services may have to cut the budget of a Medicaid program that provides nursing home care to about 50,000 elderly and injured Texans, said Burton Raiford, DHS' chief financial officer. Many of the DHS programs have been mandated by court orders, thus limiting the department's ability to slash most programs, he said.

Asked if cuts to the nursing home program would force elderly people out of the homes, Raiford said, "That's not our call, that's a call that would be made by nursing homes."

DHS may also cut programs that provide hearing aids, eyeglasses or prescription drugs to low-income clients, Raiford said.

DHS is $22 million short this year, and Raiford predicts it will be $178 million short in the 1991 fiscal year, which begins Sept. 1. The shortage stems from federal requirements that became effective April 1 for the care of pregnant women and children and for early diagnosis and health screening programs, Raiford said.

Judge rules Moody trial was in error

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court Thursday reversed the fraud conviction of financier Shearn Moody Jr., who was accused of bilking $1.3 million from his family's charitable foundation.

Moody had been sentenced to prison, fined $500,000 and ordered to repay the money he allegedly took from the Moody Foundation in Galveston, which he helped direct for 33 years.

In a 30-page opinion, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Moody had been denied a chance to impeach hearsay evidence and rebut testimony by former Maryland Congressman Robert Bauman at Moody's trial in Houston.

A retrial would have to exclude two of the mail fraud counts in the 17-count indictment on which Moody was convicted, the 5th Circuit said.

A federal court jury in 1987 convicted Moody of defrauding his family's foundation of $1.3 million while serving as its trustee. He allegedly funneled foundation grants to unqualified organizations that then kicked back the money to Moody and others.

Prosecutors claimed Moody, 57, used the money to pay lawyers in his bankruptcy case and to bankroll investigations of enemies he believed were responsible for his legal and financial woes.

The court's decision, however, does not mean Moody will automatically be released from a federal prison near Fort Worth because he also is serving a five-year term for bankruptcy fraud. That sentence, which is being appealed, was imposed in November in a separate trial and was to run concurrently with the conviction reversed Thursday.

The charitable Moody Foundation in Galveston was created by Shearn Moody's grandfather "for the perpetual benefit of all Texans." About $460 million is held in trust by the foundation.

The foundation has given money to several charities, to homes for retarded children and to several medical schools. It also has built the Transitional Learning Center in Galveston for brain-damaged children.

In defense during the trial, Moody's lawyer argued that his client was blinded by his dislike of the legal system and easy prey for two colorful confidence men, who set up bogus charities and persuaded Moody to grant foundation funds to them.

Moody regarded himself as a victim of the justice system after his Alabama insurance company went bankrupt in 1972. In one year, 1985, he was involved in 27 law suits.

Learning of his dislike of the legal system, Vance Beaudreau and William Pabst secured an introduction to Moody, the 5th Circuit said. They represented themselves as representatives of the Centre for Independence of Judges and Lawyers (CIJL), an organization devoted to helping those oppressed by the American legal system.

The two persuaded Moody to get grants for three CIJL subsidiaries, Smith wrote.

"All grant applications were approved by the trustees, allegedly because of Moody's intense lobbying, and despite a dearth of information concerning the merit, if any, of these projects," Judge Jerry E. Smith wrote for the appeals panel.

STATE IN BRIEF

1 teen killed in shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A 15-year-old boy was killed and three other teenagers were wounded Thursday when four men with semiautomatic weapons forced the group into a bathroom, made them disrobe and then opened fire.

Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer said no arrests had been made in the case late Thursday. He said detectives believe robbery may have been the motive.

The 15-year-old died at Baylor University Medical Center about an hour after the shooting, which took place between 1:45 a.m. and 2 a.m., Detective Joe Henderson said.

Parkland Memorial Hospital officials identified the other victims as 17-year-old LaTonya Williams, who was in critical condition following surgery for gunshot wounds to the chest and abdomen; Kenneth Covington, 19, who was in critical condition with a gunshot wound to the head; and Daryl Keith Oudems, 14, in critical condition.

Henderson said seven people were inside the apartment when the gunmen forced their way inside. An adult couple that was released from the apartment before the shooting began and a fifth teen-ager were not hurt in the attack, he said.

Henderson said an Uzi machine gun may have been used in the shootings.

Bond passage urged

FORT WORTH (AP) — A citizens' group is pushing passage of $40 million in bonds to repair inner-city streets and fix up Will Rogers Auditorium.

Residents vote July 10 on the pair of $20 million proposals.

If the bond issue passes, private contributors have agreed to donate an additional $30 million for improvements to the Will Rogers Memorial Complex.

The city faces a choice between closing the historic cultural attraction or investing in desperately needed basic repairs and renovations to bring it into compliance with new city codes, city officials and those connected with the auditorium say.

Times' verdict stands

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge has denied a request for a mistrial in the Dallas Times Herald's antitrust suit against The Dallas Morning News.

State District Judge David West in Houston denied the request Wednesday and entered a judgment against the Times Herald formalizing the May 8 verdict of Houston jurors against the newspaper.

The Times Herald had accused The Morning News and its parent company, Belo Corp., of violating state antitrust laws through a transaction with Universal Press Syndicate to acquire publication rights to 26 features and comics that were appearing in the Times Herald.

The Times Herald alleged that the contract was an attempt by Belo Corp. to acquire a monopoly in the Dallas market.

Ex-mayor convicted

AUSTIN (AP) — The former mayor of a small East Texas town faces death by lethal injection or life in prison following his capital murder conviction in the 1988 shotgun slayings of his wife and her boyfriend.

Jurors deliberated three hours Wednesday before convicting Louis Talley, 45. The jury is expected to set punishment Friday.

Talley and his attorneys argued that he should be convicted of voluntary manslaughter rather than murder because the slayings May 9, 1988 at an Austin apartment were committed in the heat of anger.

Talley was mayor and a city council member in Patton Village, a town of approximately 1,000 people in Montgomery County, during the mid 1980s.

Court's art returned

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The likenesses of three former district judges that for a time decorated a sandwich shop are now back in the courtroom where they belong.

Bexar County Courthouse employee Paul W. Jackson Jr., 31, has been charged with felony theft, accused of giving oil paintings of three former district court judges to a piano-bar/sandwich shop across from the courthouse.

Another judge spotted the paintings last Friday and reported the incident to courthouse officials.

"He said he just thought they would look nice hanging there in the parlor," a spokesperson from the district attorney's office said.

The paintings of former judges are placed in the courtrooms in elaborate, solemn ceremonies conducted by the San Antonio Bar Association. The three paintings had been in storage pending a move to another courtroom.

Jackson has been dismissed from his job and is being held in Bexar County Jail under $5,000 bond on a charge of theft of property valued between $750 and $20,000.

The paintings have been returned to the courthouse.

Aftershocks hit Eastern Europe

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A strong aftershock rocked Romania, Bulgaria and the Soviet republic of Moldavia before dawn Thursday, causing people to flee into the streets a day after a major earthquake killed at least 14 people.

The 3 a.m. aftershock was the strongest of about 100 recorded after Wednesday's quake, which was felt from Moscow to Istanbul and caused serious structural damage to buildings in Romania and Bulgaria, officials said.

Romania's Ministry of Health reported nine people were killed in Wednesday's quake and 994 people injured. A ministry communique on Radio Bucharest said 207 required hospitalization. The temblor also killed one person in Bulgaria and four in southern Moldavia.

There were no reports of casualties Thursday.

The Bulgarian news agency BTA said that, like Wednesday's quake, the aftershock was centered in the Carpathian Mountain region of Vrancea, in northern Romania.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., measured Wednesday's quake at 6.5 on the Richter scale and Thursday's aftershock at 5.9.

WORLD

In Moldavia, which borders Romania, the quake left four people dead and 30 injured but caused little structural damage, the chairman of the national legislature said.

Supreme Soviet Chairman Anatoly Lukyanov said in Moscow that one person died in Moldavia after jumping out a second-floor window, two elderly people died of heart attacks and that another also died from undisclosed injuries, the official Tass news agency reported.

Damage from Thursday's Romanian aftershock appeared most serious in Vrancea County, 190 miles northeast of Bucharest, where the state news agency Rompress reported "panic and a large amount of material damage."

Severely damaged were the mayor's house, a theater, a medical center, the national bank and a building with 60 apartments in the county capital of Focsani, it said.

In northern Bulgaria, thousands of people frightened by the aftershock reportedly spent the night in the street, or fled their cities.

Cities and villages on the Danube River, including Ruse, Silistra and Svishtov "were panic stricken," BTA said.

It said thousands of people milled around city streets all night, or fled in their cars. The city of Silistra has appealed for aid, saying it urgently needed glass, cement, bricks and tiles to repair damaged homes, schools, kindergartens and the lone hospital, the agency said.

In Bucharest, people fled into the streets and stood in small groups under dim lights. In the Bucharest Hotel, about a dozen people remained in the lobby, frightened to go upstairs.

Dumitru Enescu, director of Romania's Earth Physics Institute, told Rompres 100 aftershocks were recorded in the first 26 hours after Wednesday's quake, some as high as 4 on the Richter scale.

Peruvian villages rocked by more temblors

TARAPOTO, Peru (AP) — Dozens of strong aftershocks rocked jungle villages Thursday in northern Peru, and terrified people crowded into town squares, fearful their homes would collapse on them if another killer quake occurred.

At least 135 people died when an earthquake measuring 6.3 on the Richter scale struck the area about 400 miles north of Lima late Tuesday, Civil Defense officials said Thursday.

The government daily La Cronica, however, said more than 200 were killed by the tremor, which registered 6.3 on the Richter scale. The differing figures could not immediately be reconciled.

Hundreds of people whose homes were damaged slept on towels and mats in the streets of Rioja and Moyobamba, the two largest towns in the affected area.

Peru's Geophysical Institute in Lima told The Associated Press at least 70 aftershocks had struck since Tuesday night, including one Thursday morning that registered 4.6.

All the tremors were centered around Moyobamba, a farming community of 50,000 that produces corn, rice, coffee and sugar cane.

The city has many historic colonial structures with red-tile roofs and is surrounded by deep green hills of the high jungle.

The air above nearby Rioja, a town of 20,000, was thick with smoke from outdoor cooking fires as terrified residents crowded the central square. Many held crying infants.

At least 23 people died in Soritor, a village six miles south of Moyobamba, including 15 people in one family whose two-story house collapsed on them.

Bias against AIDS sufferers called 'third epidemic'

LONDON (AP) — Public fears and harsh government controls have forced many AIDS sufferers into hiding and hampered efforts to control the disease by creating a separate "epidemic" of discrimination, a report said Thursday.

The report's author, Martin Foreman, said voluntary measures that respect the rights of people most at risk are the best way of containing the deadly disease.

The 320-page report, "The Third Epidemic," was written by the Panos Institute and the Norwegian Red Cross.

Foreman heads a unit at the Panos Institute, an international research and policy studies institute with offices in London. The organization has collected information on AIDS, particularly in developing countries, since 1986.

The report noted that Iraq requires all foreigners staying longer than five days to take blood tests, while Cyprus only tests African students and cabaret artists and other countries just check would-be immigrants.

The report cited dozens of cases of discrimination against people who have AIDS or HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus that causes it.

"In almost every country, people testing positive for HIV have been sacked from their jobs, disowned by their families, rejected by friends, refused treatment by doctors and turned down by schools and colleges," the report said.

Foreman said the hostility was the "third epidemic" after the HIV infection and the later appearance of AIDS in the early 1980s.

"(It is) a social infection ... the denial, blame and stigmatization which the fear of AIDS brings out in individuals and societies," Foreman told a news conference.

The report concluded that "HIV infection will not be eradicated as long as the stigma of AIDS remains."

He said that controls such as compulsory blood tests on prostitutes or soldiers and immigration curbs have not only failed to contain the virus but have "almost certainly had the opposite effect."

"If people who are HIV-positive are subject to a series of legal measures in addition to society's hostility, those at risk will steer clear of any situation in which they might be identified as carrying the virus," said Foreman.

The report said the most effective method of containing the virus was to "win the confidence of those most affected by the disease."

In addition to fear, the AIDS stigma often masks racism or prejudices against the high-risk groups: homosexual men, drug abusers and prostitutes, said Foreman.

AIDS is a deadly affliction in which a virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers. It is spread mainly by sexual contact between homosexual men, the use of contaminated needles among drug abusers, and transfusion of tainted blood. The report said students from Africa, reported to be the world's worst-hit region, used to be regularly abused with racist remarks in Moscow or Beijing. "Now they might hear ... the Russian or Chinese words for AIDS," the report said.

At least 24 countries now require certificates from some or all foreign visitors — mainly students and others seeking to stay more than six months — that they do not carry the AIDS virus, the report said.

The U.S. government relaxed its immigration restrictions in April to try to defuse protests, including a boycott of an international conference on AIDS in San Francisco this summer.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said foreigners can get 10-day visas to attend business, professional or scientific conferences without revealing whether they carry the virus.

U.S. agency tells citizens to leave Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebel troops advanced to within 25 miles of the capital Thursday, and the Pentagon announced that a U.S. navy flotilla with more than 2,000 Marines was off Liberia in case American citizens need to be evacuated.

President Samuel Doe Thursday refused to resign despite the advance of the insurgents, and vowed to be the last person to leave the city.

"Tough times never last. Tough people do," Doe told a group of foreign ambassadors, according to one envoy at the meeting.

His statements heightened fears of a bloody conflict if the two armies clash in the West African capital. So far, more than 1,000 people have been killed in the 5-month-old rebellion, most of them civilians slain by government troops.

Late Thursday, the State Department warned in a travel advisory that conditions in the country were deteriorating and ordered all non-essential U.S. personnel to depart immediately.

Cmdr. David Thomas, a spokesman for the Defense Department, said the U.S. flotilla includes a destroyer, an amphibious assault ship, a tank landing ship and other support vessels carrying ammunition and combat supplies.

Aboard the ships were 179 Marine officers and 2,102 enlisted men, Thomas said.

He said the U.S. ships are under orders to "be prepared to evacuate American citizens in the event that they would no longer be able to leave the country by commercial means."

About 10,000 Americans, mostly businessmen and missionaries, are in Liberia.

The 11 U.N. expatriate workers in Liberia evacuated the country Thursday for security reasons.

Terry Lewis, coordinator of the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization, said they were sad to leave. "We had a lot of work to do here. People won't starve yet, but there are going to be some very hungry people."

Lewis said they hoped to return, "possibly in a few weeks when the security situation improves."

Crude plunges

Energy futures prices plunged Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange following the release of figures showing a buildup in crude oil and gasoline stocks.

The release of the American Petroleum Institute's inventory figures Wednesday showed an increase rather than the expected decrease in gasoline and crude oil stocks.

West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled 2 cents to 68 cents lower with the contract for delivery in July at $17.40 a barrel.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar advanced Thursday against all major currencies except its Canadian counterpart amid buying ahead of a key U.S. economic report due Friday.

Nervousness about various world matters also encouraged currency dealers to buy dollars.

Selected late dollar rates in New York: 1.6965 West German marks; 1.4200 Swiss francs; 5.724 French francs; 1,248.25 Italian lire; and 1.17285 Canadian dollars.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, a troy ounce of gold for June delivery added 20 cents to close at $364.30.

Texaco transfers

Fourteen new accounting positions are being transferred to Midland announced Robert A. Solberg, division manager of Texaco's Midland Producing Division. "These moves from Houston are intended to provide our crude oil operations with accounting support as close to their actual physical location as possible," he said.

This crude oil accounting group will be responsible for recording and reporting all crude oil revenues related to Texaco's Midland Producing operations.

Prison delayed

DALLAS (AP) — The former chairman of a savings and loan often used as an example of abuse in the thrift industry will have at least another two weeks of freedom before reporting to serve a 30-year prison term for bank fraud.

Woody F. Lemons was scheduled to report to federal authorities Thursday afternoon to begin serving his prison term, but won a two-week reprieve from U.S. District Judge Robert B. Maloney. He is to report June 14 at 2 p.m.

Hearing draws lines in royalty battle

■ Royalty owners meeting in Midland, are seeking legislative relief, charging that the standard division order is being misused by crude oil buyers who apply fees and shadow charges against royalty income.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A legislative battle of major proportions may be shaping up over the oilfield division order, which has been the traditional instrument for paying producers and royalty owners for their oil.

Rep. Tom Craddick, Thursday, chaired a Texas House Energy Committee field hearing, in which battle lines were clearly drawn in the dispute between royalty owners and crude oil buyers.

The National Association of Royalty Owners (NARO), meeting in Midland for two days, has sponsored legislation in the Texas House that would severly restrict what it calls division order "abuses."

Said Grier Brunson, a Midland rancher and royalty manager, and chairman of NARO-Texas: "Wormy division orders that attempt to modify oil and gas leases is one of the biggest problems facing the 800,000 Texas royalty owners today."

The royalty association which represents 5,000 royalty owners nationwide and 1,500 in Texas has charged that changes in the traditional division order has made it a "Trojan horse" of loop holes and shadow charges that has eroded the sanctity of the oil and gas lease.

James L. Stafford, president of NARO, testifying before the Energy Committee said the royalty portion of oil and gas production has been traditionally considered cost-free, but that deductions for transportation, marketing, compression and other costs were now being passed on to the royalty owner.

Stafford said that NARO was seeking simple legislation that would prohibit division orders from amending the provisions of an oil and gas lease. Lease provisions can be modified, but a division order is not the instrument for determing terms of an oil and gas lease, says Stafford.

He said that royalty owners sign a lease in good faith which ascribes their portion of production monies, but that good faith contract is then stripped away by division orders. "If royalty owners refuse to sign the division order contract, which strips away their rights," said Stafford, "the crude oil purchaser withholds payment until they do sign, and in the process even charges a fee for withholding the royalty income and maintaining it in an suspense account."

He offered the example of an elderly couple who refused to sign a division order that altered the terms of the lease and had $22,000 in royalty payment withheld by the crude oil purchaser. The couple was told that litigation would require half the $22,000 in legal fees, and that the purchaser would appeal any adverse de-

Drivers propose Greyhound buyout

By John A. Bolt

DALLAS (AP) — Striking bus drivers have proposed an employee buyout of Greyhound Lines Inc. to rescue the company from possible bankruptcy brought on by their continuing walkout.

The buyout, proposed in a letter dated May 29 from financial advisor Brian M. Freeman to Greyhound management and creditors, "can best resolve the ongoing labor dispute, the current strike, independent and related claims and improve operations, and only this can create value through employee investment."

Freeman, also an advisor in the $4.54 billion employee buyout of UAL Corp., said Thursday a price for the buyout had not been determined, and no financing had been arranged, although he said money "should be available."

Although suggesting the buyout, Freeman said the union also is willing to discuss other alternatives.

"Within the short-term, I intend to make a specific proposal, and begin to press aggressively toward a resolution," wrote Freeman, hired by the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions.

"Please advise me immediately whether you wish to explore mutual problem solving. Otherwise I will proceed on my own," Freeman wrote. "I intend to place my client in a position so that, either cooperatively or independently, it can make a specific proposal and press forward within the next several weeks."

Most of the union's members have been without work since the at-times violent strike began March 2.

"We are surprised the group that has brought about the company's current financial crisis through an unprecedented wave of violence now proposes to profit from its own criminal activity by buying the company," said Greyhound executive vice president P. Anthony Lannie.

The company has been operating reduced schedules since the strike began, using newly hired drivers and about 500 union members who defied picket lines.

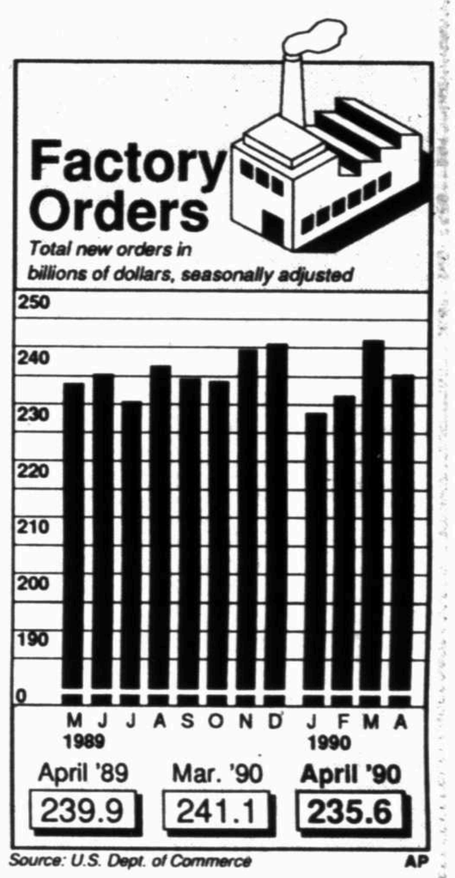
Although the company claims the strike is "irrelevant" because it has enough drivers to operate, continuing financial pressures brought on by the strike have drained cash and left the company unable to pay off creditors.

Greyhound already has missed more than $14 million in interest and lease payments since the end of April, and faces an additional $2.5 million payment Friday which it has not yet decided it can meet.

Unless those payments are met soon, creditors can force the company into involuntary bankruptcy, although Greyhound likely would file for bankruptcy itself before that happened.

Greyhound has proposed to repurchase most of its $225 million in junk bond debt at a steep discount in a restructuring the company said is a key to avoiding bankruptcy.

However the repurchase is tied to Greyhound obtaining as much as $150 million in new financing, a task some analysts have doubted can be accomplished in light of Greyhound's labor troubles and the current financial market.



Chrysler executive joins United

■ Gerald Greenwald, vice chairman and heir apparent to Lee Iacocca, resigned Wednesday to become chief executive of UAL Inc., the third executive to leave Chrsyler this month.

By Doron P. Levin
N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Gerald Greenwald, vice chairman of the Chrysler Corp. and heir apparent to Lee A. Iacocca, resigned Wednesday and is likely to become chief executive of UAL Inc., owner of United Airlines.

Greenwald is the choice of unions representing UAL employees, who are leading a $4.36 billion buyout of the airline.

His negotiations with representatives of the unions had been rumored for weeks.

But Greenwald several times denied the rumors, Chrysler spokesmen said.

A Chrysler spokesman said he did not know whether there would be any immediate changes in top management. "This is all pretty new to us," said Arthur Liebler, vice president of public relations.

The pilots, machinists and flight attendants unions have been under pressure to hire top executive management so that bankers will feel confident enough to lend the money for the buyout.

Gerald Greenwald

Greenwald, a native of St. Louis and a graduate of Princeton University, is a financial executive who has experience dealing with lenders and presumably could win their trust.

Last year Greenwald, who owns 47,649 shares of Chrysler stock, was paid $1,026,472, according to the company's proxy statement. He also has options to buy 215,625 shares at prices ranging from $13.98 to $25.88.

The departure of Greenwald, 54, is the third high-level defection at Chrysler within the last few weeks.

Last week, Frederick W. Zuckerman, Chrysler's treasurer, said he would be leaving this summer; two weeks ago, Michael N. Hammes resigned as head of the No. 3 auto maker's international operations to become president of Black & Decker's power tool business.

Chrysler public relations managers previously portrayed the departures of Zuckerman and Hammes as "coincidental."

But losing Greenwald will clearly be a blow to management at a time when Chrysler is reeling from weak sales and tight finances as a result of industrywide discounting and stiff competition from Japanese and domestic auto makers.

Greenwald was promoted to vice chairman in 1988, reinforcing a widespread assumption in the company and in the auto industry that Iacocca had tapped him as his eventual heir.

But Iacocca, 65, has been vague about exactly when he will retire.

He is now under contract to be chairman and chief executive until the end of 1991, but he has not said what he would do after that.

Orders to factories fall further

■ Government reports of a continued slump in factory orders were further evidence of a slowdown in the manufacturing sector.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories slumped 2.3 percent in April, helping to push orders for the year so far down 2 percent, the government said Thursday in a report showing further evidence of a slow manufacturing economy.

"Basically, it shows the manufacturing sector is still dead in the water," said Evelina Tainer, senior domestic economist with the First National Bank of Chicago. "It's just not going anywhere."

The Commerce Department said orders to factories for both durable and non-durable manufactured goods totaled

Handling failing insurance company tricky

By Jane Bryant Quinn

Quinn

NEW YORK–No decisions are tougher for a state insurance commission than those that surround a floundering insurance company–especially a major company like Executive Life and its subsidiaries, which operate in every state. If the commissioner talks, he or she might make the situation worse, by causing policyholders to cash in and flee. If he doesn't talk, he deprives you of critical information you need about the security of your insurance and savings.

The California Insurance Department, which is monitoring Executive Life's struggle for survival, is keeping its mouth shut. Agents and customers can learn very little. Neither can other insurance companies, which will have to help pay off policyholders (through state insurance-guaranty funds) if Executive Life ultimately doesn't make it.

But once a year, publicly held corporations have to file a status report with the Securities and Exchange Commission, known as a 10K. That date recently arrived for the First Executive Corporation, the parent of Executive Life, which in turn is the parent of Executive Life of New York. Excerpts have been published by Indiana University professor Joseph Belth, in his publication, The Insurance Forum. (For a reprint, send $10 to The Insurance Forum, P.O. Box 245, Ellettsville, Ind. 47429.)

"In my opinion," wrote Belth in his analysis, "the material paints a picture of a beleaguered organization whose survival is in doubt." Here's some of what he learned:

■ How big is the run on Executive Life? This is the critical question. In theory, an insurance company can continue in business for many years even if it writes no new policies. It simply manages the policies it has, taking in premiums and paying off claims.

But under the law, it has to maintain a certain net worth. If large numbers of policy- and annuity-holders cash in, an insurer's net worth might fall so low that it has to be put into conservatorship.

First Executive's 10K "provides some figures suggesting a sharp increase in cash outflow, but the figures are of limited usefulness," Belth says. It gives the figures for January and February. But most of the negative publicity occurred after Jan. 19, when First Executive announced huge 1989 losses on its investment portfolio (principally junk bonds). Furthermore, says Belth, it appears the company was a month or more behind in processing requests from policyholders.

So the figures suggested by the 10K were probably low. A quarterly update for March, the 10Q report, suggests that the run may have doubled from the January-February level.

■ How is the parent company doing? Theoretically, the insurance subsidiaries could continue even if the parent failed. But in practice, the bankruptcy of First Executive would only exacerbate the run. First Executive has recently been forced to pay off certain loans ahead of time. It has large amounts of debt coming due next year.

The three principal ways for First Executive to raise money are selling stock (but who would buy?), borrowing money (but who would lend?) or getting cash out of its insurance subsidiaries. The California Insurance Department permitted a payment of $45 million last August, from Executive Life (a fact kept secret until the company reports came out). The insurance companies may have to kick in again.

■ What are the policyholders learning? The head of one Executive Life group is telling agents and policyholders that "even under the most difficult of circumstances, (the company) is capable of not only surviving...but will continue to be as financially strong as its strongest competitor." He bases this statement on a report prepared by an actuarial consulting firm, Milliman &

Analysis

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices finished mixed Thursday, flattening out as traders cashed in some of the gains from the market's recent upsurge to record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 57.64 points Tuesday and Wednesday, slipped back 1.90 to 2,876.66.

That still left the average with a 219.90-point gain for May.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 6 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 801 up, 682 down and 534 unchanged.

Analysts said the market's strong showing of late had stirred up considerable enthusiasm for stocks.

But traders apparently adopted a cautious approach Thursday while they awaited Friday's report from the Labor Department on employment in May.

Bond prices rose slightly in the credit markets, lowering yields on long-term Treasuries to the 8.57 percent-8.61 percent range.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Midland operator extends Upton field

Staff Report

Reentry has added a second producer has been added to the University (Penn Strawn) field of Upton County and extending the pay 7/8-mile northeast.

T.G.B. INC., Midland, reentered the No. 1 Univeristy "22-A" and completed it to flow 106 barrels of 43 gravity crude and 24 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 9,606 to 9,756 ft., which had been acidized with 8,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oio ratio was 1,320:1.

Permitted as a 10,400 ft. wildcat, it was drilled to 10,430 ft. and plugged back to 10,127 ft. A seven inch liner was hung to 10,430 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 22, Block 4, ULS survey, eight miles southeat of Rankin.

The well was drilled as a Devonian test by Arco Oil & Gas, was farmed out to Hondo Oil & Gas and was recently temporarily abandoned.

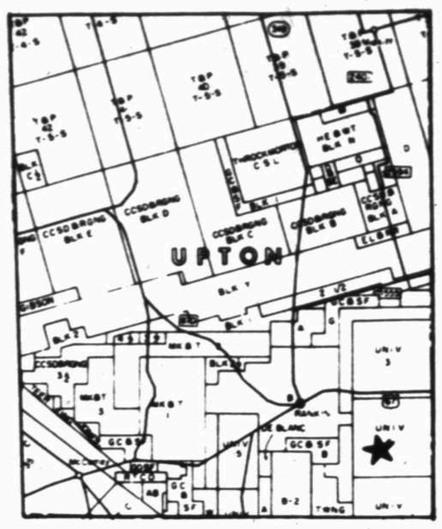
Irion County field gains 94-barrel extender

A project in Irion County has resulted in the Zan-Zan (Middle Canyon) field gaining its eighth producer, extending the pay south.

CASS OIL CO., Dallas, tested the No. 10 Joan Crews Hoyt to flow 94 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 41 barrels of water from perforations 6,017 to 6,078 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 50,000 gallons of gel and 110,000 lbs. sand.

Permitted as a 6,700 ft. wildcat, it was drilled to 6,700 ft. and plugged back to 6,154 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,200 ft.

Location is 601 ft. from south and 2,286 ft. from east lines of Section 9, Block 3, H&TC survey, five miles northeast of Mertzon.



★Upton producer

A Midland operator has added a second producer to the University (Penn Strawn) field of Upton County by reentering a temporarily abandoned well.

ROYALTY: Battle begins

appeal any adverse decision, keeping the matter in court for perhaps years. Under this economic duress they signed the division order and was promptly charged 25 percent in shadow charges against the royalty interest.

"This is extortion in the least," said Brunson, reading a prepared statement.

"Royalty owners cannot accept such tactics," said Robin Steed, a royalty attorney.

James Mann, an attorney for Permian Corp. defended the division order and Permian. "The division order is the only contract we have for buying oil." He noted that transportation charges were merely a device for pricing oil and not a charge. "There is definitely a difference in the value of a whole lot of oil real near a refinery and a little bit of oil 100 miles from a refinery, said Mann. He said transportation charges were usually noted in the company's sales bulletin and not in the division order."

He said Permian Corp. had no leases and was strictly a reseller of crude oil.

NARO legislation which upholds the sanctity of the oil and gas lease has already been passed in Oklahoma and Kansas, despite heavy opposition from major oil companies and crude oil purchasers. Independent oil and gas operators have namely been for NARO legislation, because "they must sign the same division orders," said Stafford.

He said NARO should win in the Texas legislature, because its motives are pure, but said it might be a tough battle if the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners were neutralized and did not sign on to the legislation.

The NARO bill to limit the powers of division orders was introduced late in the last session of the Texas legislature but was not acted on. The bill is now undergoing review and rewriting for reintroduction.

Scott Campbell, general counsel for TIPRO, testified at the field hearing the organization which represents both producers and royalty owners had not yet decided to support the proposed bill.

ORDERS: Report spells trouble for manufacturing

a seasonally adjusted $235.6 billion. That followed gains of 4 percent in March and 1.8 percent in February.

Despite the gains, the April decline and a 5.5 percent drop in January means factory orders have fallen 2 percent in the year's first four months. And, the department said, orders have been relatively flat since the beginning of 1989.

The January decline was the steepest since a 7 percent plunge in December 1974.

Factory orders are a key economic barometer of manufacturing industry plans for production. A decrease in orders may forecast a slump in that sector and layoffs in the future.

"The decrease in April new orders was concentrated in the durable goods sector which declined ... 4.3 percent to $123.4 billion," the department said, revising the drop in durable orders from the 4.1 percent decline first reported last week.

The largest decrease was in transportation equipment.

Baseball death

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — A teen-ager who died after being hit in the chest by a baseball apparently was distracted by infield play and was not paying attention to the batter, authorities said.

Bruce Edgerley, 16, collapsed Wednesday when he was hit in the chest by a line drive during practice. Emergency medical workers arrived on the scene within two minutes and attempted to revive him, but failed, cororner Curt Copeland said.

Copeland said Edgerley may not have been paying attention to the batter because the infielders were involved in their own practice.

The boy's death was ruled accidental. Copeland said he did not yet know the exact cause of death or whether an autopsy would be performed.

"I just decided right before the (Southwest) conference meet that, heck, for the last 43 years I've been going to a track meet every Saturday. You can't keep going forever," Thomas told the Houston Chronicle Wednesday.

"I decided it was time to do something else for a change. I'll just fiddle around and plan on going fishing quite a bit," he said.

Suns snuffed by Blazers

■ The Portland Trail Blazers knocked out the lights of the Phoenix Suns, winning their NBA playoff series 4 games to 2.

PHOENIX — Portland advanced to the NBA Finals for the first time since they won their only championship in 1977, taking advantage of a hamstring injury to Kevin Johnson to beat the Phoenix Suns 112-109 Thursday night.

The Trail Blazers, who had lost five straight playoff games on the road, including a 34-point blowout in Game 3 at Phoenix, scored the last six points of the game in the final 55 seconds to overcome a brilliant performance by Jeff Hornacek. The Suns guard scored 25 of his career-high 36 points after Johnson was injured late in the second period.

It was the first win by a road team in either of the NBA's conference finals, and gave the Trail Blazers a 4-2 victory in the Western Conference championship series.

"Everyone talked about how we can't win on the road, but we kept it close until the end," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "People should realize we can win the close games.

"We're not thinking about The Finals, we're just going to take some time off. We've played every other day and need the rest."

Johnson, who had 13 of his 16 points in the first quarter, pulled his left hamstring with 2:54 remaining in the half, and went to the locker room for treatment. But the Suns' point guard did not play again.

Hornacek gave the Suns a 109-106 lead with two free throws with 1:09 left, but Phoenix did not score again.

Terry Porter, who scored 23 points, hit two free throws to draw Portland within one with 55 seconds to go.

After an exchange of possessions, Jerome Kersey blocked a layup attempt by Hornacek, then completed a fast break with a layup of his own to put the Trail Blazers ahead to stay with 27 seconds remaining.

Tom Chambers then turned the ball over to Clyde Drexler, who was fouled and made two free throws with 6.8 seconds left and finished with 23 points.

A desperation 3-point attempt by Hornacek missed badly just before the buzzer.

Dan Majerle added 22 points for the Suns, while Chambers scored all of his 17 in the second half. But he was 5-for-16 from the field and was only 11-for-37 in the final two games.

"It's a great feeling to win," Blazers forward Buck Williams said. "Defensively we stopped Phoenix when we had to."

Portland, which meets the winner of the Chicago-Detroit Eastern Conference final, goes into the championship series with a 9-0 playoff record at home.

Portland, trailing 63-59 at halftime and 89-84 after the third period, tied the score at 89-89 on rookie Drazen Petrovic's 3-point goal and jumper 3: seconds into the fourth quarter.

The score was tied three more times until Chambers' free throw with 7:29 left put Phoenix ahead 96-95.

Chicago Bulls' team captain Michael Jordan seeks an explanation from NBA official Ed T. Rush after a foul was called on his team in Game 5 against Detroit. Jordan works again tonight.

Now the Bulls come home

■ Chicago's Bulls are 7-0 in the playoffs at home where Michael Jordan, temper and all, controls the floor.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Let's see, Detroit has won three games, all at home, and Chicago has won two games, all at home.

The Bulls are home again tonight for Game 6 of the NBA Eastern Conference finals and it doesn't take an advanced degree to figure out who has the edge.

And then there's Michael Jordan.

The Pistons held him to 54 points during the first two games at Auburn Hills, Mich., and quickly took a 2-0 lead.

Then came the now-famous temper tantrum. Jordan kicked a chair. Jordan upbraided teammates.

It worked.

In the next two games, both in Chicago, Jordan scored 47 and 42 points, respectively, and the Bulls evened the series at 2-2.

But then the Pistons went "home" — the buzzword of the playoffs. Like the East, the Western Conference final games between Portland and Phoenix are being won by the home team.

Back in Michigan, the Pistons held Jordan to a playoff-low 22 points and took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-7 series with a 97-83 win Wednesday night.

"We have to win one more game to get out of this series and that's what we're going to try and do," said Bill Laimbeer, perhaps the least favorite Piston in this city.

The Pistons know the key to doing that is controlling Jordan.

"At this point of the season, it's a war. And I think Michael's more driven than he's ever been before," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "Michael is an extreme competitor in every sense, so when he gets to this level of competition, he's not going to be Mr. Nice Guy.

"He's trying to let less and less outside stimuli bother him. I think a lot of guys on this team are at that same level," he said.

Joe Dumars, who spends most of his time trying to guard Jordan, said, "He seems to play pretty well in Chicago. It's a great crowd for the home team."

Jordan agrees.

"We're more comfortable at home than on the road," he said. "In Detroit, we have not stepped up to put out. Everybody's aggressive when you've got 18,000 people cheering you on."

The Pistons, with their tenacious defense, have more success against Jordan than almost anybody in the NBA. But there's always the chance he'll get loose for 50, 60 or, gulp, 70 points.

"More than anything, it's awareness," Pistons assistant coach Brendan Suhr said. "It's important to know where he is so you can react when he gets to certain spots. It sounds incredible, but some teams have absolutely no awareness of where he is. For us, Michael's always the focal point."

Angels rip Travs, 12-2

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

On a night when they needed it most, Midland starting pitcher Joe Grahe reared back and delivered with a tenacity that any postman would sit up and notice.

Grahe mixed 97 fastballs, curves and changeups for a 12-2 complete-game victory Thursday over the Arkansas Travelers at Angels Stadium.

Grahe scattered five hits and lifted his record to 3-4 before a paid crowd of 2,186, which sat under some of the most ominous skies to blacken the Permian Basin this spring.

It was only the second complete game for an Angel pitcher this season, and it came on a day when Midland reliever Kevin Trudeau was sent to the California Angels' Triple A club in Edmonton, leaving the Halo bullpen under-staffed.

And while Midland took 4-of-5 games from the Travelers to end their 10-game homestand with a 5-5 record, Wednesday's effort was the first of the stand that required the presence of fewer than three Angel pitchers.

"Joe Grahe did an outstanding job," Angel manager Eddie Rodriguez said. "We're short-handed now, our pen was tired and we needed it bad."

One of Grahe's few mistakes came in the first inning when Traveler first baseman Joey Fernandez banged one over the left-field fence for a 1-0 lead. Lightening filled the skies surrounding the park throughout the game, and the winds kept switching directions.

"With the weather the way it was, and then that home run in the first, I thought 'Oh boy!'" said Angel pitching coach Gary Ruby, "but Joe came back and did a fantastic job. He's really coming around."

"It's just a matter of learning how to pitch in this park," Grahe said. "You have to throw strikes and try to get ahead of the batters. I was fortunate that when I got behind batters, I was able to come back with strikes."

Grahe, who did not walk a batter and fanned three, pitched to just five Travelers over the minimum.

"I just tried to get them to hit ground balls," he said. "That's all you can ask. I'm not going to be a strikeout guy."

The Angel offense, which leads the Texas League with a .290 team batting average, did its share too. The Angels punished Traveler starter Mark Clark with nine hits for six runs before meeting his replacement in the fifth inning.

Clark, who just came up from St. Petersburg of the Florida State League, became 0-1 in his Double A debut.

Number seven and eight hitters Edgar Alfonzo and Dave Sturdivant had three hits each to lead Midland's 15-hit attack, and both scored twice with an RBI each.

"It felt great. I hit the ball to the other side tonight, and I felt good doing it," said the right-handed Alfonzo, who played second base.

The Angel offense avenged the Fernandez homer at once in the bottom of the first. Mark Davis led off with a single, and Ruben Amaro and Steve DeAn-

Robinson still waiting

NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore manager Frank Robinson appealed his three-game suspension to American League president Dr. Bobby Brown on Thursday, but a decision was not immediately announced.

Robinson met with Brown for 90 minutes in the AL offices to explain his version of the incident with umpire Drew Coble on Monday at Minnesota. Robinson was ejected from the game and later called Coble a "liar" and "a no-good human being."

The next day Robinson was suspended by the AL president for "physical contact with the umpire, use of abusive language, delay of game and inappropriate post-game remarks to the press."

After the appeal, Robinson said he did not regret the incident or his remarks. "I stand by my actions and I stand by what I said. I don't think I did anything the actions on the field didn't call for. I was in complete control after the game.

"I made them because that's the way I felt at the time and that's the way I feel now."

The Orioles are scheduled to play at Yankee Stadium on Friday, and a decision was not expected before then.

Padres edge Braves, 2-1

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Pinch-hitter Fred Lynn singled off the right-field fence to drive in the second of two seventh-inning runs as the San Diego Padres rallied to beat the Atlanta Braves 2-1 Thursday night for their fourth consecutive victory.

Loser Pete Smith (4-4) pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the sixth and took a 1-0 lead and a five-hitter into the seventh. But he walked Mike Pagliarulo to start the inning.

NL

Pagliarulo went to third on Phil Stephenson's hit-and-run single, with Stephenson taking second when the ball got away from left fielder Lonnie Smith for an error.

Pinch-runner Shawn Abner scored the tying run when right fielder Dale Murphy made a sliding catch of Garry Templeton's drive. Lynn then batted for winning pitcher Dennis Rasmussen and ripped his game-winning single off the fence, his third hit in six pinch-hitting appearances.

Twins have best May

Associated Press

Kirby Puckett and Gary Gaetti hit run-scoring doubles Thursday night and the Minnesota Twins finished their best May ever with a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Twins stopped Chicago's five-game winning streak. Minnesota won for the seventh time in eight games and wound up 21-7 in May.

Mark Guthrie (2-0) gave up two runs on eight hits in five innings. Juan Berenguer, John Candelaria and Rick Aguilera finished with scoreless relief, with Aguilera pitching two perfect innings for his 14th save in 16 tries.

Puckett and Gaetti got their RBI doubles in the first inning off rookie Jerry Kutzler (2-1). Al Newman singled with one out, scored on Puckett's 17th double and Gaetti doubled to center.

Minnesota made it 3-0 in the fourth on a throwing error by second baseman Scott Fletcher.

The White Sox scored in the fourth on an RBI single by Carlos Martinez. In the fifth, Lance Johnson singled home a run for his 16th RBI of the season, matching his career high.

Athletics 6, Royals 4

Mark McGwire doubled, singled and drove in four runs Thursday night, leading the Oakland Athletics over Kansas City 6-4 and stopping the Royals' five-game winning streak.

Rickey Henderson homered, had three hits and stole a base as Oakland won the first meeting this season between the American League West rivals. The victory in the opener of the four-game series put the division-leading Athletics 12 games ahead of Kansas City.

Bob Welch (7-2) took a three-hitter and 5-0 lead into the sixth, but the Royals loaded the bases and got three runs, including two on Bo Jackson's first inside-the-park home run.

Welch was pulled with two outs and two on, and reliever Gene Nelson retired Rey Palacios on a force out. Rick Honeycutt took over to start the eighth, but left after Jim Eisenreich's RBI single with two outs. Dennis Eckersley got four outs for his 15th save in 15 chances.

Carney Lansford walked with one out in the first and scored on McGwire's double off Tom Gordon (2-3).

After Willie Randolph walked with one out in the fourth, Henderson singled to third baseman Kevin Seitzer, whose throw to first was wild, putting runners on second and third.

Randolph scored on Lansford's grounder, Jose Canseco doubled to put runners at second and third and McGwire delivered a two-run single for a 4-0 lead. Henderson made it 5-0 in the sixth with his eighth home run.

Zimmer at loss over Chicago's dismal start

CHICAGO (AP) — Everything that went right for the Chicago Cubs last year when they won the National League East seems to be going wrong this season, and Manager Don Zimmer doesn't have the answers.

"I'm not going to start pointing fingers, but we're just not playing well," said Zimmer, who is having trouble getting the Cubs to the .500 mark.

Even the Friendly Confines of Wrigley Field have been unkind to the team. In fact, the Cubs are a respectable 13-11 on the road but 8-15 at home.

"If I knew the answer to why we aren't winning at home, we'd be winning at home instead of losing," said Zimmer.

THE BIGGEST concern is starting pitching, and the loss of Rick Sutcliffe, on the disabled list with shoulder problems, has added to the problems.

But the Cubs overcame such obstacles last season.

Locked in a tight race with Montreal and the New York Mets last year, General Manager Jim Frey stood still while Montreal picked up Mark Langston and the Mets added Frank Viola. But it was the Cubs who won the division title.

"This is the same team we have on the field as we had last September when we won," said Zimmer. "I'm looking for a good winning streak. We're one of the few clubs that hasn't had a good streak yet."

Except for first baseman Mark Grace, who is struggling at bat, some of the key players are having banner years.

Andre Dawson, a question mark during spring training because of knee surgery, leads the league with 13 home runs and 43 runs-batted-in. His .346 average has brought up some early thinking about a triple crown.

Second baseman Ryne Sandberg has broken every fielding record in sight and is hitting .325. Shortstop Shawon Dunston is among the league's leading hitters at .320.

But Frey might not be able to sit still much longer without getting pitching help.

"We have reached the point of the season where you talk about a good start and a bad start," said Frey. "It's getting to the point where you have to start to consider something. Up to now I've been talking about the pitching staff."

Unable to make any deals, the Cubs have dipped into their system bringing up Shawn Boskie and Kevin Blankenship. Both are in the starting rotation. Blankenship had one start and gave up one earned run in the loss.

Boskie went the distance and won his major league debut 5-1 on a five-hitter at Houston. He has since lost two starts but has pitched well.

"I like Boskie," said Zimmer. "In three outings I don't think he's pitched bad at all. His first one was dynamite. I like his stuff, and I like his makeup. I'm not worried about Greg Maddux (4-4) or Mike Bielecki (3-3). They'll both straighten out."

FREY ALSO is impressed with Boskie and said: "It looks like he has a future. Maybe we have to think about something else. We can't live on three or four guys hitting the ball. We have to do something about that."

The bench is not producing as it did last year. The Cubs sent catcher Rick Wrona and his .175 average to Iowa on Wednesday and called up catcher Hector Villanueva, who was batting .276 with eight home runs and 34 RBI.

SLC to explore expansion

PLANO (AP) — Southland Conference officials approved a plan Thursday to explore possibly expanding the eight-member league.

Presidents from the conference's eight institutions also discussed other issues affecting the league, including advantages and disadvantages associated with expansion.

The SLC is comprised of McNeese State University, the University of North Texas, Northeast Louisiana University, Northwestern (La.) State University, Sam Houston State University, Southwest Texas State University, Stephen F. Austin State University and the University of Texas-Arlington.

ANGELS: Home stay ends on winning note

gelis welcomed Clark to Double A ball with back-to-back doubles that gave Grahe and the Angels a 3-1 lead they kept for the duration.

Davis' RBI single to score Sturdivant made it 4-1 in the second.

Arkansas tallied again in the top of the third on a pair of singles and Grahe's three wild pitches, but not one Traveler reached scoring position between the third and the ninth innings.

Sturdivant singled home Wylie Lee in the sixth to make it 7-2. And Midland exploded for five runs in the fifth, all off Arkansas' third pitcher Jose Vargas. Mark Howie's third home run of the season, a two-run blast, highlighted the inning. And Lee and Alfonzo added back-to-back triples.

Midland has today off before beginning a 10-game road swing through Wichita and San Antonio.

HALO NOTES: Eddie Rodriguez, who only last week criticized the rock-hard surface in front of home plate at Angels Stadium, said Thursday that the grounds crew has done a great job of softening it up. "It had been like a brick," Rodriguez said. "But now the field is in great shape."

Shorin's death ends Topps era

NEW YORK (AP) — It began as the brainchild of four brothers who loved the Brooklyn Dodgers and recognized the American public's hankering for a good chaw.

Thus, in 1938, the Topps Co. Inc. was born in a tangle of obsolete machinery in a Brooklyn warehouse. In 50 years, it would become the world's largest manufacturer of bubble gum and baseball cards with record sales of $246 million last year.

On Friday, the last survivor of the four brothers, Abram Shorin, will be buried in New York. Shorin died Monday in Miami at age 91.

"He was the last of the old-time entrepreneurs," his son, Robert Shorin, said. "He was born in an era when everything was new — electric lights, TV's, airplanes. He was a visionary."

"They started from nothing with some very old machinery. They came up with modernized equipment and innovative products as well."

Along with brothers Joseph, Ira and Philip, Abram Shorin gave American consumers such tradition-worn stalwarts as Bazooka Joe and Mort, and Mickey Mantle on cardboard. And it was his love of baseball and a tip from a nephew that brought bubble gum and baseball cards together.

"It was my father's idea for the baseball cards," Robert Shorin said.

"Everybody in Brooklyn in those days loved 'Dem Bums' in Ebbets field. That's true, that's part of it. Frankly, I'm sure it seemed lucrative. And, one of his nephews came to him one day and said, 'Uncle Abe, why don't you put baseball cards in your gum?'"

Topps spokesman Kenneth Liss said it all began with just chewing gum. In 1947, Topps began marketing bubble gum, but without the Bazooka Joe comic strip character. The baseball cards, packaged with the bubble gum, came along in 1951.

"Baseball cards had been around for a long time, since the 1880's," Liss said."

CWS Thumbnails

By The Associated Press

Here is a thumbnail look at the CWS tournament teams:

Fullerton State (36-21)

The Titans are led by Rich Gonzalez' .383 batting average, Mate Borgongo's 54 RBIs and Phil Nevin's 14 homers. Borgongo also hits for a .376 average and Nevin for .361. Coach Larry Cochell's second school and second Fullerton team to qualify for the CWS hits at a .320 team clip with 49 homers and has a team earned run average of 3.85. James Popoff has 12 wins in 16 decisions on the mound.

Georgia (48-18)

Brian Jester's .391 average heads the Bulldogs to their second CWS. Georgia also qualified in 1987 under Coach Steve Webber. Jester also is the team leader in homers (17) and trails J.R. Showalter for the RBI lead 71-62. Showalter hits at a .344 clip with 14 homers for the team, which has a .307 batting and 85 homers. Eleven-game winners Dave Fleming and Mike Rebhan top the pitching staff that has an earned run average of 4.37.

Georgia Southern (50-17)

Coach Jack Stallings, previously at Florida State, brings his second school to the CWS. Rob Fitzpatrick carries a .382 average, has 21 homers and 63 RBIs. Freshman Todd Greene adds a .351 average, 26 homers and 75 RBIs. Team batting average is .314 with 88 homers. Sophomore Joey Hamilton has been the pitching ace with an 18-3 record, nine complete games, a 3.03 ERA and 134 strikeouts in 151 2-3 innings.

Louisiana State (52-17)

Paul Byrd at 16-5, Chad Ogea at 14-1 and John O'Donoghue at 11-3 are enough pitchers to make LSU foes nervous. But Coach Skip Bertman's club can hit, too. Wes Grisham is tops on the club with a .369 average, Rich Cordani hits at a .366 average, Lyle Mouton .350 and Tookie Johnson .349. As a team, the Tigers are hitting .331 with 60 homers. Grisham is the team leader in long balls with 11 homers.

Mississippi State (49-19)

Coach Ron Polk brings the Bulldogs to the CWS for the fourth time and hopes to improve on a CWS-best third-place finish. First baseman Tommy Raffo leads the club with a .364 average and trails team home run leader Tracy Echols (14) by one. Left fielder John Cohen has a .333 average and a team-high 69 RBIs, two better than Raffo.

Oklahoma State (53-16)

The Cowboys make their 16th appearance in Omaha and eighth under Coach Gary Ward. His string of seven straight was broken in 1987. OSU has won the championship once (1959), finished second four times and third three times. The Big Eight Conference champs have 12 men listed with averages of .300 or better. Danny Perez has a .390 average, Michael Daniel .360, Bobby Carlsen .355 and Mitch Simmons .350. Daniel's 20 homers and 82 RBIs are team tops.

Stanford (56-10)

Jeff Hammonds' .350 average is tops for the Cardinals, who hit at a .317 team clip. Ryan Turner (.356) and David McCarty (.351) also are among six regulars hitting .327 or better. Tim Griffin has 21 homers, Paul Carey 15 and MCCarty 12. Carey was the CWS most valuable player as a freshman in 1987. Pitching banks on 14-game winners Stan Spencer (14-1 with a 2.78 earned run average) and Mike Mussina (14-3 and 3.09 ERA). Spencer also had 133 strikeouts in 122 2-3 innings. Team ERA is 3.69.

The Citadel (45-12)

Coach Chal Port says disciplinary tradition is a reason his Bulldogs are making their first CWS appearance. The Bulldogs didn't even get beat in the NCAA Atlantic Regional. They won their fourth in a row with Tuesday's 4-1 victory over top-seeded Miami. Senior outfielder Anthony Jenkins hit .600 in the tournament with two home runs. Jenkins, who was named the regional's outstanding player, is the primary threat. He's hitting .403 with 15 home runs and 67 RBIs.

Easy touch saves Seles

French Open

PARIS (AP) — Monica Seles, the hardest hitter in women's tennis, resorted to the softest shot in the game Thursday to avoid joining defending champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario on the growing list of upset victims at the French Open.

Sanchez-Vicario, who became the youngest female winner of this Open last year at the age of 17, made history again Thursday when she lost to her close friend and doubles partner Mercedes Paz of Argentina. The score was 7-5, 3-6, 6-1.

It was the earliest a defending women's champion has been eliminated in the Grand Slam tournament. The previous record was Margaret Court's third round loss to Gail Chanfreau in 1971.

Sanchez-Vicario's loss was a new jolt to a tournament still reeling from Tuesday's upsets of Stefan Edberg and Boris Becker, the first time the men's top two seeds had been beaten in the first round of a Grand Slam event.

For a while, it looked as though the tournament also would lose the second-seeded Seles, the hottest player on the women's tour.

But the 16-year-old Florida-based Yugoslav escaped with a 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Helen Kelesi of Canada in a draining, 2-hour, 10-minute match.

"It was a fight," Kelesi said. "It was who could last longer."

Seles came into the match with 26 straight victories, including a win over top-ranked Steffi Graf in the German Open final May 20.

She hadn't even lost a set since early March. But Kelesi, a feisty 19-year-old ranked No. 19 in the world, ended that streak by breaking Seles twice to win the first set.

Seles, who is known for her squealing grunts, let out a high-pitched shriek of despair as she hit a backhand into the net after a long rally on set point.

Seles' game is built around slashing, two-fisted forehands and backhands that are the most consistently powerful shots on the women's tour.

But with her groundstrokes going astray against Kelesi, Seles turned to delicate drop shots to win key points in the second and third sets.

"She disguised the shots really well," Kelesi said. "'I couldn't see them coming. I just couldn't get to them."

Seles played perhaps the shot of the match with Kelesi serving with a game point for 4-3 in the second set. Seles wound up for what looked like a backhand blast, but cut her swing short at the last moment, kissing the ball just over the net and leaving Kelesi stranded in the backcourt.

The shot seemed to take something out of Kelesi, who made two straight errors to give Seles the decisive break and a 4-3 lead.

"That was a tough game," Kelesi said. "She played a perfect shot."

Three games later, Seles did it again, this time slicing a one-handed forehand drop shot to close out the set.

"My game from the baseline wasn't working well," Seles said. "I knew that I couldn't win just by getting the ball back. If I hit hard, she hit it back even harder. So I tried to change things up a little by hitting drop shots and making her come up."

Most other women's seeds fared better. Advancing to the third round were No. 6 Manuela Maleeva, No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami, No. 10 Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union, No. 12 Judith Wiesner of Austria and No. 16 Laura Gildemeister of Peru.

No. 14 Raffaella Reggi of Italy was ousted 6-4, 6-2 by Kirrily Sharp of Australia.

Unseeded Jennifer Capriati, the 14-year-old Floridian playing in her first Grand Slam tournament, needed just 40 minutes to beat Cammy MacGregor 6-1, 6-0.

In the men's field, advancing were No. 4 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 5 Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich., No. 7 Thomas Muster of Austria, No. 10 Martin Jaite of Argentina and No. 14 Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden.

The only seed to lose was No. 10 Juan Aguilera of Spain, beaten in four sets by Thierry Champion of France.

Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario ...defending champion falls

ESPN's cream may cost NBC

PARIS (AP) — ESPN had the French Open in the first round, NBC waits for the first weekend. If the upsets keeping coming, NBC may have little to show.

Stefan Edberg and Boris Becker, the top two men's seeds, went out on Tuesday in the first round when they were upset by relatively-unknown teenagers, Sergi Brugera and Goran Ivanisevic.

Top names, such as Ivan Lendl, Martina Navratilova and John McEnroe are not playing.

"We were lucky," said Peter Englehardt, coordinating producer for ESPN's tennis coverage. "We got lucky last year with the Lendl-Chang match and a couple other things.

"But it all evens up. Look what happened last year with the finals, you couldn't write better scripts than that," he added, referring to the Michael Chang victory and Steffi Graf loss that NBC showed.

BRIAN WILLIAMS, the on-site producer, says ESPN was "a little unlucky, too, with Becker and Edberg not playing two or three times."

"Losing Becker hurts us, too," Englehardt said. "He has a huge name recognition in the States."

David Stern returns to Paris as the ESPN driector. He was on the Tour de France last year with the ESPN crew, providing daily updates of Greg LeMond's dramatic victory in the cycling race.

Now ESPN is providing daily live tennis telecasts from Paris. Kim Prince hosts the program with Mary Carillo, Cliff Drysdale, Barry Tompkins and Fredd Stolle on the announcing team.

Carillo won the 1977 French Open mixed doubles title with McEnroe. Drysdale was a two-time French Open semifinalist.

Sharlene Hawkes provides feature reports around Paris.

ESPN is giving five hours of early round action on each of the first six days. NBC handles the first weekend, sharing Saturday with ESPN and getting Sunday to itself. ESPN returns with exclusive coverage Monday through Thursday of the second week, then shares Friday with NBC. Singles' quarterfinals are Tuesday and Wednesday, with and semifinals Thursday and Friday.

NBC gets both singles championships to itself — the women on Saturday, June 9, the men on Sunday, June 10.

The cable-network supplements the coverage of the French network Antenne 2, which provides the world feed. ESPN adds two cameras and eight tape machines for replays and recording the action on the other court, moving to any court where an important story is happening.

It is the fifth consecutive year ESPN is presenting live coverage of the French Open.

Paz changes course of French Open

Sanchez-Vicario suffers earliest exit of champion

PARIS (AP) — This year, Mercedes Paz decided to change her attitude toward her job. With it she changed the course of the French Open.

"I started to work on my tennis really hard," Paz said. "My goal was to be ready for the French Open."

She was more than ready. On Thursday, she did something no one had ever done before when she knocked out defending women's champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario in the second round.

The 7-5, 3-6, 6-1 upset marked the earliest exit of a defending women's champion at the French Open.

"I said to myself, 'You are 23 years old now and if you want to play tennis, you have to give it 100 per cent.' And since then I am concentrating on it 100 per cent," Paz said.

"This year I put everything together."

SANCHEZ-VICARIO, who is from Spain, and Paz, from Argentina, are good friends and doubles partners. They teammed for three straight wins in April at tournaments in Florida and Spain.

"We are friends and play doubles together but when you are on court, you don't think of enemies or friends,' said Sanchez-Vicario.

In fact, after Paz beat Sanchez-Vicario in the singles, they teamed on an outside court to beat Barbara Romano and Eva Sviglerova 6-2, 6-4 in doubles, where they are seeded fourth .

Paz has been known more as a good doubles player throughout her career, winning 17 titles with various partners.

But now she is starting to make a name for herself as a singles player.

"I think the most important thing was that I started training hard," she said. "I became really professional about playing, became physically fit. Then I got mentally well. I started serving better and my strokes are stronger."

She also started running a lot, up to five miles a day to lose 20 pounds.

The success of her Argentine compatriot, Gabriela Sabatini, now ranked fifth in the world, was somewhat responsible for Paz doldrums at the beginning in singles.

"I started at the same time with her on the circuit," Paz said. "Then, I may have lost a little confidence when she was moving up so fast and I wasn't."

But all that has changed. Paz credited two new coaches, Jorge Tordero and Jorge Trevisan, with her the success that has raised her ranking from 87th to 39th in the last five months.

"Last week, I won in Strasbourg and, ever since, I feel my game has finally come together," she said.

She won that warmup tournament in France without losing a set, rolling through the final four-matches dropping just 13 games.

The match against Sanchez-Vicario was not good tennis. Nine of the first 12 games were decided on service breaks and both players made a number of unforced errors. But it was still good enough to advance Paz to the third round.

PAZ HAS been this way before. She made the fourth round in 1986 and the third round in 1988.

But this time was different. "It was a dream to play on center court and to beat the champion of last year," she said.

Paz tried to stay focused on her job before the match. "When I walked on the court, I tried not to think that she was my doubles partner or friend," Paz said. "I try to remember we are professionals and I try to do my best."

At the end of the match Paz said she had mixed emotions. "When we finished I was sad because I could see how she felt about losing in the second round after having won her last year. But, I was happy because it was me that beat her."

Paz started sobbing on court when she realized what she had done.

"I am a very emotional person and I really felt all the hard work I have done was really worth it," she said.

SEC getting serious about expansion

DESTIN, Fla. (AP) — After more than a year of research and informal discussions, the Southeastern Conference is getting serious about expansion.

The presidents of the 10 member schools voted unanimously Wednesday to authorize commissioner Roy Kramer to begin formal talks with schools interested in joining the league.

"There comes a time when you have to decide if you're going to give it serious consideration," said SEC president Dr. Donald Zacharias.

"This is an ideal time," he added. "We're healthy and on the move."

KRAMER CONFIRMED this week that there have been informal discussions between the SEC and schools outside the conference but refused Wednesday to say what institutions are high on his priority list or how many teams the league is likely to accept.

"We will be in the process of discussions with a number of institutions over the course of the future and, depending on those discussions, I will make some recommendations to the presidents at the appropriate time," the commissioner said.

"There is no timetable," Kramer added. "It could be fairly rapidly and it could run its course over a period of several months, a year, or more."

The SEC has been talking expansion since last year when a committee was formed to study the issue amid reports that former commissioner Harvey Schiller was interested in putting together a so-called superconference that would include 14 or 16 teams.

Although Kramer was given the green light to talk to interested schools, Zacharias stopped short of promising the league will take the next step and actually invite teams to join the conference.

"I'd hate to say it's certain because that's like saying to a single person that it's guaranteed you'll get married," the Mississippi State president said. "What we're saying is we're interested in marriage."

ONE THING that's certain is if the league does expand it would be by at least two teams because of scheduling considerations. Divisional play in football also would be a possibility.

NCAA rules permit conferences with more than 10 teams to schedule an extra game that the SEC could use to determine the overall league champion and conference representative in the Sugar Bowl.

"That's certainly one possibility in the scenario," Kramer said, "and it certainly would be an area of consideration as we move through this process."

Kramer and other conference officials were reluctant to mention names of prospective schools, but the league reportedly has its eyes on successful independents like Florida State, Miami and South Carolina as well as members of other conferences who are interested in breaking away.

Florida State and South Carolina are both members of the Metro Conference, which does not play football but is considering adding it as a conference sport.

However, Florida State athletic director Bob Goin was adamant at the Metro spring meetings last week about keeping the Seminoles' options open.

Kramer said Wednesday that he had an informal conversation with FSU to get an update on its situation with the Metro but had not had "any type of formal discussion with any institution."

ONE POTENTIAL headache for the conference in the event of expansion would be determining when a larger SEC could begin league play, particularly in football. Schedules are set through the end of the decade and would have to be rearranged.

"It's going to take a period of time. Football schedules are not made overnight," Kramer said. "But change is a part of intercollegiate athletics, and I'm sure athletic directors will adjust as those decisions are made."

On another matter, the league has received a formal proposal from the city of Birmingham aimed at keeping the conference headquarters there.

Stanford fails to scare calm Georgia Southern

College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Georgia Southern coach Jack Stallings isn't going to be intimidated by his first-round foe at the College World Series on Friday despite Stanford coach Mark Marquess' claim that the top-seeded Cardinal team is his best ever.

"Mark Marquess is a good friend of mine and we're looking forward to playing him and his ball club. But that's not bragging or saying they don't have a good team," Stallings said Thursday.

Stanford (56-10) set a school record for wins this season and already owns two NCAA Division I baseball championships — in 1987 and 1988. Marquess said this team is better than either of the previous champs.

"This team probably has performed better than our '87, '88 teams," Marquess said at the CWS coaches' kickoff news conference. "I think the reason for that is consistency. All season long we've done a good job of throwing the ball over the plate and playing sound defense."

Stanford opens the tournament against Georgia Southern (50-17) at 3:10 p.m. CDT Friday. Fourth-seeded Georgia (48-18) follows with its fourth meeting of the year against fifth-seeded Mississippi State (49-19) at 7:10 p.m. CDT.

The lower bracket Saturday has No. 2 LSU (52-17) meeting The Citadel (45-12) at 3:10 p.m., and No. 3 Oklahoma State (53-16) going against No. 6 Fullerton State (36-21) at 7:10 p.m.

The Citadel is the only school making its first appearance at the CWS in 1990. Chal Port, who has coached at the school 26 years, felt it necessary to note that the first military school ever to qualify for the national tournament was located in Charleston, S.C.

"We have 2,000 cadets and there's not one of them can hit a curveball very well," he joked.

"I noticed that the coach of Stanford mentioned that their goal is to come to the World Series and they have that on their schedule. On our schedule every year we have a turn-in of equipment. We've delayed that."

Port said his club started the season a year ago with a hurricane named Hugo, which destroyed his baseball diamond and part of the school. This season, the Bulldogs went unbeaten in their regional, beating a Hurricane — top-seeded Miami at Coral Gables, Fla.

"I know, having been in seven regionals in Miami, including one in which The Citadel beat Clemson and took Miami to the final game, that anybody who beats Miami must have a talented and courageous club, so we're not going to take them lightly," said LSU coach Skip Bertman, a former Miami assistant.

Bertman's club also was given a pat on the back from one of the other two Southeastern Conference teams in the eight-team tournament. Georgia coach Steve Webber said his club was really rolling this season until it went to Baton Rouge, La., at the end of the regular season.

With the SEC title on the line, LSU swept Georgia in three games. Webber said the disappointment carried over to the SEC postseason tournament but new life came in the regionals at Waterbury, Conn. There, the Bulldogs won four of five games to earn the school's second trip to Omaha.

At the conclusion of his remarks to describe his team, Webber said simply, "Wait until you see LSU."

Oklahoma State coach Gary Ward said about the same about his club, but not because of its awesome power as had been typical of his past CWS qualifiers. Ward had a string of seven straight national tournament teams in the 1980s but never left Omaha with a championship.

"This ball club lends itself more to Omaha," he said. "Our clubs of the '80s were power-laden. They fit our ball park. They did not have great pitching, great speed or defense particularly."

Ward said he observed the teams that won in Omaha were ones with defense, speed and pitching .

"We run pretty good at a lot of spots, we have some speed, we execute better," Ward said. "We think we're a little more versatile to win in a ball park like this. We're fixin' to find out."

FRIDAY, JUNE 1, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Lasting success depends on your willingness to remain in one place. Count your blessings when a project pays off in September. Although short trips could be productive in October, you need to stay close to home. In December, friends will influence your financial decisions. Guard your health by refusing to go to extremes. Early 1991 is not the best time to announce changes at work. Love plays an important role in your business plans. Consolidate your resources next spring and watch them grow!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Morgan Freeman, Marilyn Monroe, Mormon leader Brigham Young, actor Andy Griffith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may not have all the information you need. Postpone any important financial moves until next week. Creative endeavors will prove satisfying, even if there is not immediate monetary gain.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make certain you reserve enough money to pay your monthly bills. Something that is developing very slowly may prove valuable in the end. Tackle a backlog of odd jobs with partner's help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Catching small mistakes at work will save money and embarrassment. Someone behind the scenes plays a major role in your professional or personal life now. Romance peaks after sunset.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): No challenge should be too great for you now. Your determination gives you a tremendous advantage. Friends prove to be good company. Romance changes certain plans. Avoid acting on impulse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not delay in following up on yesterday's success. Opening new lines of communication will benefit both your career and your social life. Rely on your own ingenuity and resources.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A "hearts and flowers" approach is best when it comes to romance. You draw strength from your loved ones. Tempers could flare at work. Keep a low profile and you will emerge unscathed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will find this a splendid day for romance. You could be on the receiving end of a special concession. An opportunity arises to take advantage of a mistake. Keep business dealings strictly aboveboard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid becoming involved with controversial projects. Solitude helps you think. Creative work progresses nicely. Your financial future appears more secure. Sign employment agreements.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give some thought to insurance and tax matters. An expert offers timely advice. Get in touch with distant contacts. Your efforts to improve communication with loved one will soon pay off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obscure knowledge comes to light at an opportune time. Good timing is the key to spectacular financial success. You recognize that speed is vital. Devote your evening hours to family matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work on one thing at a time today and heed your intuition. Higher-ups will reward your efforts with a raise or promotion. A new relationship has an excellent chance of becoming permanent.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The busier you are today, the happier you will be. Work on bringing correspondence up to date. Loans involving friends are likely to cause trouble later on. Postpone signing binding agreements.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have roving feet and will hate to stay in one spot for long. Every trip or change of scenery gives these Geminis a new lease on life. Teachers need to handle these youngsters with diplomacy. They will work very hard for those who expect the best from them. Count on them to stay calm in a crisis.

We have often written about simple pin positions. Typically, dummy at your right will have 10 x x in a suit in which you hold A J 9 x and you lead the jack, hoping to find partner with the king and declarer with the queen, thus permitting you to pick up the whole suit. Not all pin situations are that simple, however. Consider this situation.

South was just a point short of a one-no-trump opening bid, so when North was able to make an invitational raise to two no trump, South went on to game with alacrity. Against passive defense, declarer would have romped home.

West led the four of clubs, taken by East's ace. One look at dummy was enough to convince East that the club suit had little future, and that spades also offered little prospect of fast tricks. That left it as a choice between which of the red suits should be attacked.

Since South had shown no interest in a heart contract, but had accepted partner's game invitation, he had to have a reasonable diamond suit. So East decided to bank on finding his partner with the queen of hearts, and to attack that suit.

Had East routinely shifted to a low heart, declarer would have captured West's queen with dummy's king. When West gained the lead with the king of diamonds and reverted to hearts, the defenders would be able to take only two tricks in the suit. But East put the nail in the coffin by leading the ten of hearts, taken by the jack. Now, when West got in with the king of diamonds he could return the queen of hearts, and the defenders netted three tricks in the suit for a one-trick set.

Minister makes bid for PTL

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A judge accepted a California evangelist's $7 million bid for the PTL television network Thursday as the first step toward selling the rest of Jim Bakker's bankrupt empire for an additional $45 million.

The religious cable network was sold to Morris Cerullo, an Assemblies of God pastor who heads Morris Cerullo World Evangalism Inc. of San Diego. The deal must also be approved by the Federal Communications Commission.

Cerullo on Wednesday signed a $52 million contract to purchase all PTL assets if he could be guaranteed the cable network, PTL trustee Dennis Shedd told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Thurmond Bishop.

Cerullo can back out of the deal to buy the rest of PTL, including Heritage USA, a retreat and religious theme park 10 miles south of Charlotte, N.C. But Shedd expects Cerullo will make good on his offer.

"He's the only person who went through the whole process of negotiations. And he put his money on the table," Shedd told reporters after the hearing.

"This may not be the terms everyone wants but ... it's the only terms we could get," Shedd said. "It's the best thing out there."

Cerullo on Wednesday deposited the $7 million for the network in an escrow account, said Brad Leggett, an attorney representing Shedd.

Shedd said he will ask Bishop to set a date before mid-July for a hearing on selling the rest of the assets.

Newman

ALBANY, Ore. (AP) — Some timber workers have a beef with Burger King over its use of Paul Newman salad dressing.

Forty-three sales employees at Willamette Industries sent a letter to Boss Enterprises, which runs eight local Burger King outlets, asking the company to stop using Newman's Own.

Newman's company donates profits to environmentalist groups who the timber workers believe want to take the food from their mouths.

Their May 16 letter cited Newman's narration of a National Audubon Society TV special last fall on a dispute between environmentalists and loggers.

"This show was pro-preservationist and for the shutting down of all logging in the Northwest," the letter read. "We do not feel it is right that we contribute to the demise of our industry."

Boss Enterprises co-owner Bob Boss said he had no plans to discontinue using Newman's Own, which he said has a contract with Burger King.

"It's not our own personal support of his causes," he said.

Malkovich

LONDON (AP) — The British press applauded John Malkovich for his British stage debut in the Broadway play "Burn This."

Jack Tinker in The Daily Mail said Malkovich gave "a performance of wall-blasting intensity" at the Hampstead Theater.

Malkovich, star of "Dangerous Liaisons" and "Places in the Heart," is reprising the role he played on Broadway for six months in the 1987-88 season.

Lanford Wilson's play casts the 36-year-old actor as Pale, a foul-mouthed restaurant manager who embarks on a relationship with his dead brother's roommate, a dancer named Anna. She is played by British actress Juliet Stevenson.

Michael Billington in The Guardian said the star's "riveting" performance confirmed his belief that Malkovich is "the most exciting American actor to emerge since Brando."

NEW YORK (AP) — Australian rock band Midnight Oil took their music and environment theme to the streets, performing amid the skyscrapers of midtown Manhattan for a lunchtime crowd.

"We've got a megacrisis on our hands that we all have to approach," lead singer Peter Garrett said after Wednesday's performance. "We've got a crisis that our leaders, corporations and governments have a prime responsibility to address seriously."

The band is on a U.S. tour to promote their new album, 'Blue Sky Mining."

Their songs concentrate on the ecosystem, world peace, and corporate greed. At the invitation of Midnight Oil, the environmental group Greenpeace sets up information tables at each concert.

Garrett is also an attorney and president of the Australian Conservation Foundation, the country's leading advisory board on problems of national heritage and environment.

"We can't just do a one-day Earth Day," said Garrett.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Musician Duke Robillard will be taking his guitar south, replacing Jimmie Vaughan in the blues-rock band Fabulous Thunderbirds.

"It's a very comfortable situation for me to walk into," he said. "We're all excited to see how it's going to work out, what it will sound like."

Robillard is already familiar with the Austin, Texas-based band. Drummer Fran Christina and bassist Preston Hubbard of the Thunderbirds played with him in Roomful of Blues.

McGowan searches for first PGA win

Kemper Open

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Pat McGowan, striving for his first victory in 13 years on the PGA Tour, shot a bogey-free 6-under-par 65 in the Kemper Open Thursday to share the first-round lead with Ted Schulz.

McGowan birdied four holes on the front nine and had birdies on Nos. 13 and 16 to pull even with Schulz, who had reached the clubhouse hours earlier. Both players finished two shots ahead of Jim Hallet, Denis Watson and Ian Baker-Finch.

"I got off to a good, quick start today," McGowan said. "I really putted well and missed maybe three greens all day."

Schulz, seeking his first tournament victory of the year, had five birdies on the back nine and shot only one bogey over the 6,917-yard TPC at Avenel course. He finished the round by sinking 10-foot birdie putts on Nos. 17 and 18.

Hallet had three birdies over the first nine holes and finished the round with seven straight pars and Watson, who has been fighting injuries the past two years, had four birdies.

Doug Tewell, who had a hole-in-one, was among eight players who were three strokes back. Tewell aced the par-3, 160-yard 11th hole with a 7 iron.

Morris Hatalsky, who won the tournament in 1988, was among a group of 15 players who shot a 69 and Tom Kite was one of 14 players at 70.

Defending champion Tom Byrum had a 74.

McGowan, coming off a three-week layoff, said he felt refreshed and primed for his first-ever tournament triumph.

Clemson placed on probation

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The NCAA placed Clemson's football program on one year's probation Thursday after an investigation found that a coach and booster gave money to players, but the Tigers dodged serious sanctions that could have included a ban on postseason and television appearances.

"We're glad to get it behind us," athletic director Bobby Robinson said. "It's been tough on a lot of people."

The NCAA Committee on Infractions found that on at least two occasions in the fall of 1985 an athlete received and distributed cash payments from a coach of $50 to $70 to another player. The committee also determined that in the spring of 1987, the athlete received $50 in cash from a booster.

UNDER NCAA guidelines, Clemson could have been placed on two years' probation and been barred for a year from bowl game and television appearances. The program could also have faced possible reduction in grant-in-aids and restrictions on off-campus recruiting.

Clemson president Max Lennon disagreed with reporters who said it appeared the school had gotten off lightly.

"Probation is extremely serious, and we take probation at Clemson very seriously," Lennon said during a news conference. "So we are not off the hook."

But Lennon and the other Clemson officials obviously know they could have faced much more severe penalities.

"I'm breathing a lot easier," first-year coach Ken Hatfield said.

So are his players, who learned of the NCAA's decision while watching the news conference on television in their dorm.

"Me and Arlington (Nunn) were playing Nintendo and switched it over to watch," junior linebacker Levon Kirkland said. "When we heard 'probation' we looked at each other and didn't say much.

"Then, when we heard, 'No TV santions,' we jumped up and started high-fiving. I'll tell you, we really jumped up there, too."

THE COMMITTEE said it did not levy the miniumum penalties called for by NCAA policy because there were only two major violations, and they were limited in nature. The committee also found no pattern of violations.

Moreover, the committee found the violations did not occur because of a lack of institutional control and also said the university cooperated with the NCAA in its investigation.

Under the committee's ruling, however, the NCAA could disband the football program for a limited period if a major violation is uncovered at the school within the next five years.

The violations cited by the NCAA occurred under former coach Danny Ford, who resigned under pressure Jan. 19 — less than two weeks after the NCAA told the school it was conducting a formal inquiry.

Ford is scheduled to hold a news conference Friday to discuss the NCAA decision.

IT IS the second time in eight years the Atlantic Coast Conference's premier football program has been put on probation. The Tigers were hit with two years' probation in 1982 — one year after winning the national championship — for a variety of recruiting violations under Charley Pell and Ford.

ACC Commissioner Gene Corrigan said the conference could hand down additional sanctions against Clemson when the league next meets in October.

Under the NCAA ruling, Clemson must disassociate itself from the booster who is cited in the report but not identified. The school must also submit before the end of its probation a written report to the NCAA concerning the actions it has taken to ensure the school follows NCAA rules.

The NCAA originally charged the school with 14 rule violations from 1984 to 1988. Later, one of the charges was dropped and two others amended.

Palmer sued over club

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A Japanese company has withdrawn a $46 million offer to buy Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill golf club and is suing the golfer and other owners to get back its $3 million deposit.

WDI Systems Inc. said in its circuit court breach of contract suit that club buildings are riddled with cancer-causing asbestos fibers and that club owners did not file some required income tax materials, among other complaints.

"The allegations are totally devoid of merit," said William Carpenter, a lawyer for International Management Inc., an agent in the sale and one of the defendants.

"There's nothing to these complaints," Carpenter said Wednesday.

WDI agreed to purchase the club, site of an annual professional golf tournament, in February. It paid the $3 million deposit and gained access to the club and its records.

The company said the asbestos in the club restaurant, lounge, lodge and bathhouse is friable, meaning it can crumble and become airborne.

"We're going to remove it," Carpenter said of the construction material, which he said is not friable. He said the Japanese knew that, but sued anyway.

International Management, based in Cleveland, is known as the biggest sports agency in the world. It represents or has represented top athletes such as Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Chris Evert. It handles television rights to such events as the Wimbledon tennis tournament.

WDI's suit filed in Orange County Circuit Court in Orlando said club owners did not file Internal Revenue Service tax forms showing payments to contractors and other non-employees. In a letter to the club owners last month, the Japanese company said the failure to file could mean penalties of $100,000 or more for the club.

Sheehan axed from Keystone

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Patty Sheehan received quite a shock when she arrived here to register to play in the $300,000 Lady Keystone Open.

Sheehan was told she never signed the LPGA commitment book and will not be allowed to play in the 54-hole tournament which begins today.

Tournament officials would gladly permit Sheehan, third on the current money list, to play. They only have three members of the top 10 and there are three spots open in a 141-player field.

But LPGA officials said the deadline for late entries had passed and rejected an appeal to allow Sheehan to play.

"I was sure I had signed to play here," said Sheehan. "No one was more surprised than me."

Leading money winner Pat Bradley, 1989 LPGA money leader Betsy King and No. 10 Jane Geddes are the three top 10 players entered. The tournament does have 13 of the next 15 on the list, including defending champ Laura Davies and 1988 champion Shirley Furlong.

Davies dropped a 40-foot putt on the final hole to edge Bradley here last year. That sensational putt gave the British import a final round 67 and a 9-under-par 207 total.

Bradley had a final round 68 and a 208 total. King and Liselotte Neumann tied for third at 209.

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I need help from somewhere fast. I have a wonderful husband who I treated like dirt for years. I complained about his not making enough money (he always did), about his not being a real man and standing up to his boss, about his not protecting me from his family, and so on. All those years he never said a word. He would just sit and watch television.

May

About two years ago he began to work late all the time. I complained about this too but for once he didn't do what I said. He started going out of town more often and staying longer. I complained and yelled at him for not staying at home with me and the kids. I thought he was just trying to avoid me. The more he stayed out, the more angry I got. I do have a terrible temper and a tongue to match.

Last Tuesday he came home early from work and said he wanted a divorce! I was so shocked I couldn't say anything. Later that night I lost it completely. I screamed and yelled at him and said a lot of things that weren't true. He just said he couldn't take this anymore and packed a bag and left. I told him if he left he couldn't ever come back.

I didn't mean it. I've been thinking about what kind of a wife I have been and how selfish I am. I've done so many things wrong I just want another chance. The problem is that he won't talk to me. I don't know where he is staying and he won't talk to me at work. He told me yesterday when I called him at the office that he has seen an attorney already and that I would be getting some papers very soon.

He sees the boys at school during lunch to avoid having to come to the house. I tried to get the boys to invite him over for dinner and even that didn't work. I'm worried now that they might want to go with him too. They won't talk to me about him or their feelings or anything.

I don't want a divorce. I want to work this out but he won't talk. What can you do with someone that won't talk? He says we haven't talked for 19 years and there's nothing to talk about. I will do anything. I know that I've been a bad wife. I just want a chance to show him that I can be a good wife and mother to his children. What can I do to get him to give me another chance? BROKENHEARTED

DEAR BROKEN: You can only try. Call him at the office and try to schedule a meeting with him. Have the meeting neutral ground if he is worried about your temper. Talk to him about marriage counseling. Often a good place to start is with your minister or priest. If he is unwilling to see your minister, then suggest a marriage counselor.

If he refuses counseling, your options are greatly reduced. Would he be willing to give you a chance to show him you are different? If he feels more comfortable away from you, would he consider "dating" you while he lives elsewhere? Would he be willing to work with you while you two are separated?

Unfortunately, he seems to have been divorcing you for several years. Once a spouse "bridges-out" of the marriage, he or she often doesn't want to participate in working on it. I encourage you to try and talk to him about what options (other than divorce) might be acceptable to him. If talking fails, try writing. You can't make him willing to work on the marriage, but you can make it clear that you are willing.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: What you brother did was wrong, illegal and very damaging. You were only a child trying to please your brother. The fact that you were a "willing" participant doesn't alter the fact that it was wrong for him to fondle you. The fact that he gave you beer when you were only 9 years old adds to the gravity of what he did.

I strongly encourage you to call the Midland Rape Crisis Center (682-7273.). They can help you start on the road to recovery. You were a victim — please don't continue to be victimized by the past. Seek help, you're not alone!

Pets can teach boys to nurture

NEW YORK (AP) — Caring for a pet is a good way for boys to learn how to nurture, says a Purdue University researcher.

Why boys?

The researcher, Gail Melson, says girls have an ongoing interest in babies that helps develop their nurturing skills, but boys lose their interest after age 5. However, she says, early studies indicate that after age 5 boys have more ideas than girls about how to care for a pet. They also show more attachment to pets, she says.

"Perhaps, unlike caring for babies, pet care is not associated with gender and is an opportunity for boys to nurture," says Melson, a professor in the department of child development and family studies.

Melson has been conducting research for eight years on how children learn to nurture and how gender differences related to caregiving develop in childhood. Her latest study of 404 parents and 120 children sought to back the belief of many parents that caring for a pet helps a child's sense of responsibility, caring and self-esteem.

"This kind of study doesn't allow us to say that the attachment to the pet is actually causing the empathy or enhancing self-concept," she says, "but we can say there are associations."

If a pet is impractical, Melson suggests that a child tend a garden or a plant, help with a younger sibling or help care for an elderly or disabled person.

"Most children are on the receiving end of care," says Melson. "If they are to learn to be nurturing and caring of others as they become adults, we do think it's important for them to have experiences in being the caregiver."

Sibling's grief often overlooked

By Wendy Cook
N.Y. Times News Service

When Moira Dirr's sister died in an automobile accident six years ago, mourners gathered at her house to comfort her parents.

But they only asked "how school was and if I had a date for homecoming," said the 19-year-old from Dunwoody, Ga.

Psychologists say it is not uncommon for a sibling to be overlooked when a brother or sister dies because many people assume the bond is not as great as that between parent and child or wife and husband.

"Starting with Judeo-Christian times, society has had the belief that everything we get is from our parents," said Stephen P. Bank, coauthor of "The Sibling Bond" and adjunct associate professor of psychology at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn. "In the Bible there is the commandment about honoring thy father and thy mother, but things are left much more vague about siblings."

Compassionate Friends, an international organization founded to assist grieving parents, is trying to see that siblings are not forgotten. The organization offers sibling support groups in some cities and puts out a quarterly newsletter for siblings.

In August, Gwen Riley, 36, an Atlanta mother of two teenagers, lost her 32-year-old brother to AIDS. She says it was like losing half her soul.

"One minute I see things clearly, and then the next I'm confused again — I have yet to get on my feet," Ms. Riley said. "I go through different emotions. ... I didn't realize how much a part of my world he was until he died."

Diane Walker of Union City, Ga., lost her 28-year-old brother almost four years ago, but she says the loss is still painful.

"Tears come to my eyes when people ask me how many brothers I have," said Miss Walker, whose brother died in a bicycle accident.

"I don't know if I should say I have two brothers and acknowledge that Michael is dead or say I have three brothers," she said. "I don't want to ever forget my brother, and to say that I have two brothers suggests that I've forgotten my third brother — that he no longer exists or never did."

Some people never fully recover from the loss of a brother or sister because they feel they have no one to talk to about their grief, said Dr. Bank.

He said mourners must come to grips with their loss and with the fact that "the residual feelings that they may have cannot be worked out with the deceased, and that this is reality — so that they can feel like they have the right to go on with their own life."

Family ties important to teens

By Robert P. Studer

SAN FRANCISCO — Peer pressure, according to popular belief, is the strongest influence for pre-teen-agers and teen-agers. It is a pat explanation that usually is the first one offered when youngsters engage in high-risk behavior.

But according to a surprising new study by adolescent medicine specialists at the University of California at San Francisco, that is not necessarily so. Family closeness and relationships, the study found, also play a key role in teen and pre-teen behavior.

The research team found that "young people who have a balance of strong attachment to family and of parental encouragement to be independent are least likely to take part in high-risk activities that could seriously affect their health and future lives."

Based on responses from 169 sixth- and seventh-graders at an inner-city school in the San Francisco Bay area, the research results were "highly gratifying," disclosed Rebecca Turner, Ph.D., research psychologist in the university's Department of Pediatrics.

"They indicate that the family still does have an impact during the teen-age years," she said.

When a gap develops between parents and their teen-age children, Turner said, "many parents feel that there is nothing they can do and the situation is beyond their control. For parents who feel this frustration, these study findings are important because they show that emotional bonding with family members during adolescence can play a valuable and protective role in teen-age health."

THE RESEARCH showed, she added, that students with high levels of family attachment and a high level of autonomy were least likely to have sexual intercourse in the next year, to have ridden with a driver under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or to have engaged in physical fights.

Students in the high-level group also were least likely to experiment with alcohol, marijuana and cigarettes, she said, although "the correlation was less strong than with each of the other three health-risk behaviors." This finding, Turner said, was "an interesting surprise." She added that this anomaly "could be a reflection of more widespread acceptance of substance use in current society."

While peers do have a significant effect on the behavior of young people, characteristics such as attachments and autonomy appear to be two factors that help teens cope with the stress and decision-making related to high-risk activity.

The study, Turner said, found that student behavior was not affected by whether it was the mother or the father who supported the teen's autonomy. Both parents can play an important role in this regard.

Slightly more than half of the study participants were male, Turner said. As for the ethnic representation, 24 percent were white, 16 percent Asian, 19 percent black and 17 percent were classified as "other."

TYPICAL IN the study, she said, were question designed to measure attachment to family: the family's interest in doing things together and willingness of family members to ask each other for help. Autonomy, on the other hand, was measured by how frequently parents helped teens with problems involving teachers or friends, allowed them to handle their own money, and encouraged expression of personal opinions.

Further research is now under way, Turner said, to investigate the influence of different ethnic and cultural backgrounds on a teen's family attachments and autonomy.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column for years and I trust your judgment. I'm a 33-year-old woman with a 17-year-old son. I am very proud of him. He is an honor student and has never given me any trouble. We are very close.

Van Buren

My problem is that he wants to know something about his father. Who is he? Where is he? Will he ever meet him? I have refused to answer any of these questions — saying I don't want to talk about it with him or anybody else. Yet I realize that my son deserves some kind of answer.

Abby, how does a mother tell her 17-year-old son that she was raped when she was 15, and from then on, she had such a low opinion of herself, she couldn't count the men in her life? I would go on a drunk and sleep with one guy after another. I honestly have no idea who my son's father is.

When I found out I was pregnant, I agreed to put my baby up for adoption, but after he was born and I held him in my arms, I couldn't give him up. I decided to keep him and be the best mother I could be.

I feel that I made the right decision. I couldn't ask for a better son. (He's the only child I've ever had.) How can I tell him the truth? It's such an ugly story. I'm afraid he'll hate me. Please help me, Abby. — KEEPING QUIET

DEAR KEEPING QUIET: I've had some letters that were difficult to answer, but this tops them all.

You're right. Your son deserves some kind of answer, and the only answer — ugly as you think it is — is the truth. Rather than "hate" you, he has good reason to love you all the more. With all the odds against you, you kept your son and raised him to be a fine young man.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column about inferior glue on postage stamps. I would like to know: Since the cost of postage may go up soon, do people like me, who just want our mail delivered on time, subsidize the cost of artwork done to change the stamps so often? Most of us would be happy to look at the same picture forever if we could keep the cost down. Who pays for all these fancy changes?

Also, it's especially distressing to hear that they are considering putting Elvis Presley on a stamp when the world is fighting drug addiction! — FLOORED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLOORED: Who pays for all the fancy changes in postage stamps? You and I, along with the rest of the taxpayers. I was not solicited for advice concerning whose picture should appear on postage stamps, but had I been, I would gladly have gone along with the old familiar presidents and "Old Glory."

I know it costs a bundle to tool up for a new postage stamp, and I'll bet it would be enough to feed our homeless for at least a year.

DEAR ABBY: I received a form to fill out in response to having indicated that I will attend my high school's 25th reunion.

There was a space for "spouse." Abby, I have no spouse, but I have been living with a person for several years in a committed relationship, and this person shall attend with me. How should I fill in the blank? I can't very well put "live-in," can I? — GOING HOME

DEAR GOING: No. But you could write in "companion," "friend" or "significant other."

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Grandma's recipes preserve past

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Rose von Hohen kneaded and cut thousands of Hungarian noodles over the decades following a recipe that existed in her mind's eye and in her practiced hands.

Her family, like families everywhere, nagged her for years to write down the recipes before they were lost forever. She finally did, and the result is "Grandmother's Cookbook" — a folksy compilation by Mrs. von Hohen and a granddaughter, Carrie J. Gamble.

Mrs. von Hohen, 81, provides the recipes for Austrian-Hungarian dishes she learned from her mother, while Ms. Gamble illustrates the beginning of each chapter with watercolors of wildflowers her grandmother treasured while growing up in rural Pennsylvania.

Each wildflower elicits a remembrance. The wisteria that covered an arbor over the driveway, for example: "The big clusters of purple flowers looked like bunches of grapes and were so fragrant. They were always full of bees too. In fact we had a beehive in our attic because of the wisteria. I remember our neighbor helped us take it down one day and we got a washtub full of fragrant honey from it."

Mrs. von Hohen, in a recent telephone interview from her home in Hatboro, Pa., said she's mystified in the renewed interest in such traditional favorites as cabbage noodles, liver dumplings, "potatoe balls" and jelly buns.

"Nowadays they put so many flavors together, and these are so plain," she said.

MS. GAMBLE, in a phone interview from her home in Doylestown, Pa., is not so modest in assessing her grandmother's cooking: "Twenty years later people will remember a cake my grandmother made."

Mrs. von Hohen grew up on a 42-acre farm in Bucks County that she refers to as the Homestead in her book. She remembers that all the cookies she made as a child were either round or half-moon shapes, cut out using a glass because they had no cookie-cutters.

"We raised everything — homemade butter, chickens. We didn't have to skimp on what we cooked with. Things really tasted good then. I don't think butter today has any taste," she said.

When she was 16 she went to Philadelphia to cook for a wealthy family and expanded her repertoire.

"When I first came to the city I couldn't eat the chicken because I didn't think it had any taste, because I was used to fresh-killed chicken. Or eggs either, I couldn't eat them because I was used to fresh. On the farm we had an apple orchard and peach orchard and you made your own jellies and preserves."

She quit her job three years later to get married, and began cooking for her husband and his family. "There were always a lot of people to cook for," she said with a laugh.

Mrs. von Hohen has three children, 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Her husband died in 1985, and since then she has lived alone in an apartment. Her cooking these days is confined to meals for herself and Wednesday night suppers she prepares for her one of her daughters and Ms. Gamble. She also cooks special treats for holiday gatherings, like the poundcake and saffron bread she made for Easter.

ASKED IF any of her children or grandchildren are good cooks, Mrs. von Hohen said all of her granddaughters were given copies of the book and are trying out the recipes. "They've had good luck with them. Most of my granddaughters just got married," she said.

Although she never used the term, Mrs. von Hohen's kind of cooking is called comfort food these days.

Her recipes are written in a language that is usually clear if somewhat untraditional. Instructions for one dish tell the reader to cut bread into 1-inch squares and "fluff the squares" with melted margarine.

"Grandmother's Cookbook" was published by Ms. Gamble's printing company. It is available by sending $14.95 to Carrie J. Gamble Inc., 505 East State St., Doylestown, Pa. 18901.

Meal programs provide nutritious meals

By Steve Edwards

Many older people become malnourished, not because they can't afford food, but because they tend to lose interest in food when they have to eat alone.

Edwards

And many adult children are shocked to discover, when checking up on their seniors, that their elderly parents are actually poorly nourished.

Fortunately, Midland and other cities now offer both home delivery of Meals on Wheels for the frail and handicapped, and meals in social settings, such as senior centers.

Check in the telephone directory to see if these or similar services are offered in your parent's community. These programs, which bring nutritious meals to home-bound older people, are often supported by both federal and local funds. In some cities, Meals on Wheels delivers two meals at noon — one to be eaten at midday, and another for the evening meal. In Midland and most other cities, only one meal is delivered — normally a hot meal at lunch.

Meals on Wheels program is free to the participant. Other similar programs may charge a modest fee for those who can afford to pay, but no one is turned away because of financial condition.

Offered through the National Nutrition Program for the Elderly, meals at senior centers or other agencies provide not only nutrition, but social activities as well. Administrators of the nutrition programs report that about one-third of the seniors who have meals at the centers are above the poverty level — some are even millionaires. Those who are financially able may provide donations for their meals, but people who have lower incomes are not charged for their food. In most senior centers, transportation is provided.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Contras give up arms

MANAGUA, Nicargua (AP) — Nearly 500 Contra rebels surrendered their weapons on the first day of a renewed disarmament agreement, a United Nations spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman, Fernando Castanon, said the disarmament of 498 guerrillas from five security zones brings to 2,482 the number of rebels who have demobilized since the process began May 8. About 11,500 remain in the security zones policed by U.N. forces.

Also Thursday, the United States turned over to Nicaragua $60 million, the first payment of $300 million in aid approved by Congress. John Leonard, charges d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy, presented the check to Foreign Minister Enrique Dreyfus. The Nicaraguan economy is in serious financial straits.

The rebels agreed Wednesday to renew the demobilization process and to disarm the entire Contra army by a previously agreed-to deadline of June 10.

In return the government agreed to provide more than 20 "development zones in combat areas where Contras and their families can settle. It provides them with their own police forces and with voices in local town councils and government ministries aiding in the resettlement.

Belgian travel stalled

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Train traffic was disrupted throughout the country Thursday as engine drivers began a two-day strike, and air traffic controllers warned that they would also strike.

The airport workers, set to begin interrmittent strikes Friday, and the railway workers want better working conditions and more money.

Teachers, also calling for better pay, demonstrated in the center of Brussels on Thursday, adding to the traffic mayhem caused by the train strike.

Only a third of the trains were running, causing delays of up to two hours during the morning rush hour. It was the third major strike of train engine drivers since September.

Pakistan bus attacked

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Gunmen Thursday ambushed a crowded bus in this city wracked by ethnic unrest, killing at least 30 people and injuring 30 others, officials said.

The attackers intercepted the bus traveling through the city during a two-hour curfew break and opened fire with automatic weapons, according to police and witnesses.

There were no other immediate details on the attack and no claims of responsibility.

The curfew was imposed in Karachi, Pakistan's largest city, because of ethnic unrest and random attacks that began May 15. The violence has killed more than 300 people in Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's home province of Sindh, where Karachi is located, since it broke out.

Quake shakes Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An earthquake measuring 6.1 on the Richter scale shook metropolitan Mexico City early Thursday, sending frightened residents into the streets. The Red Cross reported no injuries or major damage.

The 1:35 a.m. jolt, which lasted 15 seconds, was centered about 180 miles southwest of this quake-prone capital, according to the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center at Golden, Colo.

Hotel clerks in Acapulco said the quake was felt in the Pacific resort but that there was no damage.

Beirut areas sealed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops sealed off several districts in Moslem west Beirut and seized weapons on Thursday, the second day of an operation designed to end clashes between rival Shiite Moslem factions.

"The Syrian command is determined to prevent acts of violence in west Beirut," said a police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing regulations.

HOW TO PLACE A GARAGE SALE AD

Follow these simple instructions to get the most from your garage sale advertisement.

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
We offer two types of ads: word ads and space ads.
EXAMPLE WORD AD:

1234 MAIN Street. Saturday 9:00 - 4:00. Kids' clothes: boys 2T-4T, girls 6x-14, dining room set and lots of miscellaneous.
