Four nations won't honor pipeline ban

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German and British governments have joined France and Italy in a united front opposing President Reagan's ban on exports of U.S.-licensed equipment for the Siberian gas pipeline.

Manufacturers in the four nations hold the bulk of the $11 billion in European contracts for the pipeline, and their defiance represents a major setback to Reagan's effort to promote a European economic war against the Soviet Union.

West Germany's state secretary of economics, Otto Schlecht, said Monday that his government cannot order companies to honor their contracts for the pipeline, as the French and Italian governments did last week. But he said it will support any German businesses that violate the U.S. embargo and will protect them against American retaliation.

"The West German government welcomes any decisions by the firms that help fulfill the gas pipeline deal," he said in an interview with the newspaper Bild.

AEG-Telefunken, a giant electronics firm, has announced it will defy the U.S. sanctions imposed June 18 because of continuing martial law in Poland, which the Reagan administration blames on the Soviet Union.

AEG-Telefunken has a $225 million order for 47 turbines to power compressor stations along the pipeline. Heinz Duerr, the head of the company, said the loss of this business could put 2,000 people out of work. It would also hurt the company, which 10 days ago got a $250 million credit from the government to guarantee export contracts and persuade private banks to help restore the firm's financial health.

In London, Trade Secretary Lord Cockfield issued Britain's strongest denunciation of the embargo yet, saying it "is an attempt to interfere with existing contracts and represents an unacceptable extension of American extra-territorial sovereignty."

He told the House of Lords the government hopes the dispute can be solved in a "mutually acceptable way.... But if this proves impossible, I do wish to make clear that we are determined to defend our national interests."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said Monday the U.S. government regretted Italy's decision to ignore the sanctions, but added the United States wished "to remain in regular contact with the government of Italy and other governments involved."

The U.S. government has said it is studying the legal issues involved in rejection of the pipeline sanctions.

Reagan's action last month extended a ban on export of U.S. equipment to the Soviet Union to include goods manufactured by foreign firms using U.S. technology under American license.

In addition to the Polish situation, the U.S. government says it does not want Western Europe to become dependent on Soviet gas. It has said it also fears the Soviet military budget will benefit from the $10 billion a year natural gas sales are expected to bring in after the pipeline begins operating in 1984.

U.S. officials also see the pipeline project as a big help to the Soviet economy, which they believe is in deep trouble.

But Britain, France, Italy and West Germany consider the ban an illegal extension of American sovereignty. The contracts were signed before the imposition of martial law in Poland last Dec. 13.

They also argue that the United States has not come up with a practical alternative for them to Soviet gas supplies, that the pipeline means jobs and trade for Europeans during the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression of the 1930s, and that Reagan is in no position to ask Europe for sanctions as long as he lets U.S. farmers sell $1.8 billion or more worth of grain a year to the Soviet Union.

A critical crossroad

Betty Sheeler, coordinator of Midland County's federal rehabilitation program and director of the federal rent-subsidy program, criticizes the Midland County commissioners during their Monday meeting for their attitude toward the programs.

Coordinator confronts panel

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Betty Sheeler, coordinator of Midland County's $1.6 million federal rehabilitation program in the low-income window-pane area and director of the federal rent-subsidy program here, criticized the Midland County commissioners Monday for their blase attitude toward the programs.

Too, she effectively but tentatively rejected any offer the commissioners might have made to hire her as a consultant to keep the program afloat.

"I simply withdraw any (job) proposal," she said, and later pledged: "I'm not going to be an 8-to-5 Midland County employee."

However, Mrs. Sheeler said that she "could not have expected a more supportive coordination" from the court. Nevertheless, she expressed chagrin over the commissioners' apparent indifference to the programs.

"I THOUGHT YOU were well pleased with the work that was being done — no hint that the work was not being well handled," Mrs. Sheeler said in confronting the commissioners.

In part, she said she was responding to rumors of overpayments, to innuendoes that there was a conspiracy to purge her from her roles, which had begun in 1979 on a voluntary basis with the Midland Housing Association, and to rumors that a makeshift county staff was on hand to replace her should she opt not to administer the programs.

Furthermore, the Commissioners' Court seemed far removed from the workings of the federal program here, Mrs. Sheeler said.

"NO ONE ASKED questions about how it was being run," she charged.

Mrs. Sheeler, a chemist by schooling and profession, said she was "surprised" that her continued roles "could not be considered in executive (closed) session" last July 12, when the court openly discussed her token pay — about $600 a month — for the specialized work, which she had begun on a part-time basis, without her being there, and whether or not she would carry on with the projects.

City Hall employees, their callers 'bugged' by new phone system

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

It was a case of a storm before the calm Monday at Midland City Hall, where city employees were introduced to both the bugs and the long-range benefits inherent in a new, $199,000 telephone system.

"Getting the bugs out, that's the big problem right now," according to Fred Baker, public works director, who described instances of transferred calls that disappeared into a telephone twilight zone and a few calls which were mistakenly broadcast on the city's public works radio system.

Some callers might have had difficulty reaching City Hall also, as calls backed up on the city's new switchboard.

But Baker said that following a brief period of adjustment and fine-tuning, the system will be operating smoothly, cutting costs while making city telephoning faster and more efficient.

He said the new system offers "a lot of features that were not available on the older equipment," including transferring calls independent of the operator, conference calls and "speed-dialing" for frequently called numbers.

He said the city will be saving on telephone mileage charges because the new system is inside City Hall, closer than the old switchboard — located in the police station — to both City Hall extensions and the telephone company building.

The city decided to update its antiquated phone system about 18 months ago. The old phone apparatus required that operators manually switch calls by plugging and unplugging cords on two large boards, a process that at peak hours could resemble something akin to spaghetti juggling.

Switching is done electronically with the new Hitachi EX10 equipment, purchased from Universal Communication Systems, Inc., of Dallas.

Thus, Nancy Lambert, a city phone operator, found her fingers doing the walking over a suitcase-sized control panel Monday, a far cry from the two large cord boards she and fellow operator Patti Price struggled with during their first three years with the city.

"This one's going to be a dream," said Ms. Lambert, who remembers stiff shoulders from wrestling with the old switchboard. As she hovered over the panel of blinking lights and buzzers, electronic switches crackled like popcorn inside a large cabinet in City Hall's first floor control room.

Ms. Lambert said she is especially fond of two new features — the ability to monitor incoming calls while dialing long distance and an automatic redial for calls transferred to phones already in use.

Eighteen months ago, the city handled 325 to 350 calls every 15 minutes, Ms. Lambert said. Today, with Midland's recent growth, the number has jumped to about 450.

Nearly all non-emergency calls go through the City Hall switchboard. Baker said that while original estimates indicated that one control panel would be sufficient, the heavy call load necessitates the purchase of another.

"At peak hours, it's a definite need now," Baker said.

Transfer of telephone operations to the new system began late Friday, making Monday, a traditionally busy day, city employees' first full day with the new equipment. The problems experienced with the system Monday should be eliminated soon, said Baker, who praised the telephone company, system technicians and city employees for their work.

"There's a lot of items to be checked," he said. "In truth, it went very, very smoothly, when you consider the volume of work they had to accomplish."

Stockade project still involved in 'paper chase'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County's stockade, which has become a wandering phantom, again got shuffled on paper and by the Midland Commissioners' Court, which is sort of reneging on an earlier pseudo-commitment.

After much quibbling, the Commissioners' Court in a 3-1 vote on Monday opted to dump the initial stockade site on a 7½-acre tract of county-owned land in southeast Midland for a 40-acre plot near the Midland-Ector County line but in Midland County and on City of Odessa soil and near Odessa's sewage treatment plant.

On July 12, the court, in a 3-0-1 vote, finally — it seemed — chose the 7½-acre site near the county barn and bordering a commercial zone in southeast Midland.

But Midland businessman Ken Peeler and Commissioner Charlie Welch, who is laid up following an operation, have led a campaign to get the stockade planted on a remote site — preferably far away from Midland. Peeler says a stockade in southeast Midland would inhibit commercial growth and would depress property values there.

Initially, Welch said the Odessa site would save the taxpayers' money, but that was when Ector County was considering joining Midland County in a joint stockade venture; Ector County has since backed out of the venture and apparently perceived its taking the high side of a 60-40 split of expenses to be unfair.

After the Odessa site proposal was nixed by Ector and Midland counties, the Midland Commissioners' Court voted July 12 to build the stockade in southeast Midland if an alternate site was not found within two to three weeks. Commissioners Win Brown, who pushed for the Midland site; Durward Wright, who hinted at reservations, and County Judge Bill Ahders voted for that location despite neighborhood opposition. Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis abstained. Welch was ill.

On Monday, after going into an executive session, the court explored several alternate sites. But after reviewing a letter from Odessa's Acting City Manager Chester R. Nolen to Welch, the court in a 3-1 vote opted to give the Odessa site another shot.

"I'm violently opposed to it," said Brown. "We don't have an alternate site," which he viewed as practical.

After what seemed to be a series of thwarted motions, the one which bore through, though with an escape clause and to which Brown vehemently objected, was the Odessa site.

Before that, though, a Wright proposal, by which the stockade could be

Proposed budget reflects city's 'unparalleled growth'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Presenting the proposed 1982-83 budget for the city that reflects a 39 percent increase over the current year, Mayor G. Thane Akins today during a news conference in City Hall attributed the hike to "the unparalleled growth we have experienced in recent years."

The total budget — which is divided into three categories — hits just over $49 million, he said.

"Expansion of the areal extent of our boundaries, maintenance of the basic services to a larger number of residents, inflation and the larger debt service requirements are all major factors in the total budgeted expenditures," he said.

He pointed out that the largest increases are coming from salary hikes, hiring about 100 more employees and debt service on bond issues.

"We're spending what we've got to spend to maintain a level of services that people expect," he said. "We're trying to keep up and catch up with some of the growth in the past."

Answering a question from a reporter, he acknowledged that the city might also be playing catch up on the years during the 1970s when the tax rate wasn't raised.

Despite the increase by more than a third in the budget, Akins said the tax rate will go up 3.5 cents to 43 cents per $100 valuation. This is less than a 10 percent increase in the ad valorem tax and keeps Midland's rate "as the lowest

His name isn't in 'common usage,' but Ahders likes it spelled right

The word A-H-D-E-R-S, you can be sure, was not in "McGuffey's Eclectic Reader," is not a household word — except in some quarters in Midland — and the owner of the name wants it spelled right.

Someone goofed, and Midland County Judge Bill Ahders promptly singled out the error.

His name was spelled A-D-H-E-R-S in a letter to the judge from Sue Smith, who has succeeded Beverly Acker as the Midland County child welfare supervisor. Ms. Acker now is the Texas Department of Human Resources' supervisor of foster homes and adoptions for a 17-county area.

"If you were a patriot," the judge joshed Ms. Acker, "you'd admit doing it."

"Yeah," she replied in kind, "but I'm honest."

"We'll get it spelled right next time," pledged Ms. Smith.

"And Durward Wright's too," said the judge.

Commissioner Wright's name often gets printed as "Durwood."

Ms. Smith passed the buck.

"I'm sure that it was the secretary," she said of the Adhers-Ahders slip.

The innocuous gist of the Sue Smith letter to the Commissioners' Court on Monday was the re-appointment of three members to the county's child welfare board: Mary Frances Brown, Isabel Rey and Helen Steck Land.

Housing coordinator confronts panel

County Judge Bill Ahders had asked Mrs. Sheeler to present a proposal under which she would be hired as a Midland County consultant after the MHA, due to lack of funding and staff, removed itself from the programs. Earlier, MHA President Lynn D. Durham Jr. by letter to Ahders had commended Mrs. Sheeler and her performance. "Mrs. Sheeler...has performed singlehandedly and superbly virtually all of the services (of MHA)."

In her earlier proposal, to which the commissioners were privy prior to July 12, Mrs. Sheeler said she would be housing coordinator for $15,000 a year — $1,250 per month — under a contract-labor agreement and not as a county employee.

Currently, her office is set up in the Midland County Courthouse Annex.

In addition to coordinating the rehabilitation of the housing and the construction of paved streets and guttering, clearance of debris, deserted and weathered houses and junk cars, installation of water and sewer lines in the county's window-pane area in south central Midland, Mrs. Sheeler administers rent-subsidy funding for 62 housing units here.

She noted that Ben Wiley, the Dallas-based community development representative for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), was "well pleased with the performance thus far." Furthermore, Mrs. Sheeler said that she has "found the HUD area office knowledgeable, professional at all times, flexible and gracious.

"The Commissioners' Court has received copies of all HUD management and housing quality standard monitoring reviews and my replies to them," Mrs. Sheeler said.

"At no time has any commissioner mentioned — or hinted at — any reservation about the way the program has been handled," she said.

"Indeed, no commissioner has ever come to the office to inquire about the program or to observe the operation of any segment."

She acknowledged that an investigation is afoot over an alleged overpayment and that the court has appointed an attorney to advise on legal questions.

HOWEVER, SHE suggested that Commissioner Win Brown may have started rumors injurious to the federal programs.

"Mr. Brown mentioned other reservations he had about the program," Mrs. Sheeler said.

"In the political arena, rumor can be devastating," she said, offered "to deal with this here and now."

"My style of management is not something for which I seek approval," she said forthrightly. "I expect to make lots of kinds of mistakes, off and on."

She asked that her integrity be honored.

"Of course," she said, "I expect to handle them all (programs and details) efficiently, and I have handled them efficiently."

BROWN IN TURN complimented Mrs. Sheeler and said he had no intentions of undermining the federal programs.

"Apparently you've done a pretty good job," said Brown, who also admitted, in referring to the the rental overpayment allegations, that he will check out rumors as a matter of course. Brown, a Texas Republican leader,said that "There were some doozers (rumors) when I first ran (in 1970) for office."

Judge Ahders said that he had "no criticism, Betty. You've done a fine job."

Mrs. Sheeler expressed concern over a comment by Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer, that the programs could "get along" without her were she to decide against hiring on with the county. Mrs. Sheeler, however, volunteered that she was not indispensible.

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis said he "very much" resented a "county employee speaking for the Commissioners' Court."

In further exchange between the commissioners and Mrs. Sheeler, Brown noted that he, at the onset, was against the county's involvement in the federal program.

"Initially, I voted against this," Brown said, "because it could be bounced back into the county's lap, which apparently is being done."

Mrs. Sheeler, who gave a brief rundown of the HUD programs, said that "I happen to think it's a first-rate program."

Davis lauded her.

"I've enjoyed very much working with Mrs. Sheeler," the commissioner said, and noted that he knows and appreciates her expertise.

"I think it would be somewhat disastrous for us to change horses in midstream," Davis said in recommending that the county try to negotiate a contract with Mrs. Sheeler.

"I honestly don't know anything about Section Eight (rental subsidy)," Davis said, "and I don't know whether anybody (outside of Mrs. Sheeler) does."

"Let her have the headaches," said Judge Ahders.

Thereupon, applause broke out in the courtroom.

"She's the only one who can run it!" blurted Cookie Wetendorf, Mrs. Sheeler's daughter.

Afterward, Commissioner Durward Wright noted that there would be "no fruition unless you (Mrs. Sheeler) are there.

"As I've indicated," Wright said, "I have complete trust in you."

Brown quickly expressed his faith in her.

"I'm not questioning your integrity whatsoever," the commissioner said.

American Cancer Society needs research volunteers

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Starting Sept. 1, volunteers of the American Cancer Society will be looking for 1,450 Midland and Ector County residents to take part in a medical study, according to Jim Chase, president of the Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Known as Cancer Prevention Study II, it will be the society's second major research endeavor to learn how lifestyles and environmental factors influence cancer and other diseases.

According to Chase, the first study was done about 20 years ago which resulted in the connection between cigarette smoking and lung cancer. Chase said the study is being done again because there are many more factors today that contribute to health.

Announcement of the need for local participants was made this morning by local American Cancer Society workers during a news conference at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

One of the largest epidemiologic research projects ever to be carried out in the United States, the study will involve more than one million American men and women from all racial, ethnic and economic groups.

The task of enrolling the study participants falls to the Cancer Society volunteers, of which 96 will be doing the recruiting in Midland and Ector counties.

Carmen Edwards, chairman for the study in Midland, said 420 families are expected to be part of the study. Harriet Whiting, chairman for the Odessa study, said 550 families should be participating in the study.

Every volunteer will be responsible for selecting about 10 families in accordance with study guidelines. Each family group must have one member over the age of 45, although anyone over 30 in that family can participate. Volunteers will be given the job of explaining and distributing the study's questionnaire, retrieving the completed forms and doing the necessary follow-up work.

Study participants will complete a confidential questionnaire about their working, living and eating habits. Covered in the four-page questionnaire are such topics as low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes, birth control pills, coffee, hair dyes and saccharin. Also to be analyzed are air and water pollution, occupational exposures and low level radiation.

Once every other year for the next six years, these "research volunteers" will keep track of the study participants and report to ACS headquarters on their status and whereabouts. When study participants die, health statisticians will be able to determine how their lifestyles affected their health by referring to information in their questionnaires.

Although Ms. Edwards said the full-scale findings from the study will not be available until 1988, statistics will be comprised annually.

"It could be that habits we have will help us avoid cancer, she said, referring to questions asked about food and drug relation to cancer, occupational exposures in this area and racial, religious and geographical factors.

Though CPS II doesn't start until Sept. 1, the Midland and Odessa units of the cancer society have started recruiting volunteers. The society is particularly interested in individuals who have lived in either county for some time, are planning to remain for the next six years and have friends and relatives living close by whom they could enroll.

Persons interested in becoming research volunteers should contact their city's ACS office by Aug. 15. This will allow enough time for volunteers to attend a brief training session on CPS II. More information on the study and responsibilities of volunteers can be obtained by calling the Midland/Odessa unit office of the American Cancer Society at 683-6374 or 563-0204.

The first Cancer Prevention Study was conducted from 1959 to 1972. It identified many factors related to the development of cancer and other diseases. The link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer and heart disease was an important outcome of the study and helped to initiate the public health campaign against smoking.

The study also revealed the relationship of obesity to certain cancers, the profile of women at high risk for cervical cancer and the role of exercise in preventing heart attacks and strokes.

Stockade project site again shuffled around map

east end of the courthouse basement to an auxiliary jail after the Tax Office is relocated to Front Avenue and Pecos Street in September or thereabout.

Sheriff Dallas Smith said the old tax-office area couldn't effectively be secured and, without exorbitant costs, couldn't meet requirements set by Texas Commission on Jail Standards. Smith is a member of the commission.

Eventually, Davis made a motion that the court build the stockade on the remote Odessa site.

"I don't expect a second," he said.

He was mistaken.

After continued discusssion of virtues and liabilities of the site, Wright seconded the Davis motion but set a conditional clause: that the county could gain entrance and exit to ranch land east of the site to make a short-cut and knock off 10 miles in the otherwise 27-mile one-way trip from the Midland County Courthouse to the proposed stockade site in far west Midland County.

Ahders, too, voted aye; Brown said nay, and the motion passed 3-1.

Wright today was to contact Larry Bell, president of HBF Corp., who apparently has some control of the ranchland there.

Should Wright be turned aside, then, presumably, the vote will be for naught, and the 7½-acre plot in southeast Midland will be reconsidered as the prime stockade site.

Meanwhile, the commissioners are considering a $9 million bond proposal — by general obligation or certificates of obligation — to build a jail tower just north of the courthouse and for renovating the 1929-30-vintage courthouse. The proposed jail, which, according to architect Walter Pate, would hold up to 225 prisoners and would house offices of the sheriff, peace justices and constable, would absorb $6.8-million of that expenditure.

One form of bonding — general obligation — would necessarily go before the public for approval and would entail a tax-rate increase. The other — certificates of obligation — would not and would go through a brokerage and underwriter for sale of bonds and would stand on the economic strength and reputation of the county. The commissioners allowed E.F. Hutton, stockbrokers, at the request of Hutton representatives, to explore funding. Representing Hutton were Frank Maggio of Midland, Charles H. Ziese of Houston and Dan N. Grothe of Denver.

The stockade venture was proposed by Smith after the jail population exceeded the legal 80-inmate allowable, got up to 103 capacity and then up to a packed 120-plus. On Monday, though, the prisoner count was down to 84.

Sites proposed for the stockade have include:

—The 7½-acre site in southeast Midland — the apparent site should the Odessa proposal fail.

—The 40-acre Odessa site, which would be available to Midland County under a maximum 10-year lease. Afterward, the site would be restored to its original landscape.

—A 10-acre site south of Midland and off the Rankin Highway. Cost would be $3,000 an acre; water might not be potable.

—A split 8½-acre site, owned by the county, at Telephone Road and Andrews Highway northwest of Midland.

—Acreage at Fairgrounds Road and Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. line.

Budget proposed for 1983 reflects city's rapid growth

municipal tax rate for cities with populations over 60,000 in Texas." He added that it's not uncommon for similar-sized cities to have tax rates in the 70- to 80-cent range.

The proposed tax rate increase means an additional $17.50 per year taxes on a $50,000 house or $35 on a $100,000 home.

The General Fund, which is funded primarily through the ad valorem tax and sales tax revenues — which amounted to $8.25 million in 1981 — went up by $6,554,084, or 28 percent, to $29,938,435. "Much of the impact of the city's growth is seen in the need to add 90 new employees at a cost of $2,680,000. Most of these are in emergency personnel — 52 additional police officers and firefighters," noted Akins.

Other personnel increases will come in the Municipal Court, sanitation and traffic departments.

An additional $1.2 million is required for purchasing and maintaining vehicles and equipment, most of which will be used by the police, fire, street and sanitation departments.

In addition to the tax increase, helping to balance the General Fund will be an 85-cent increase in garbage rates, putting the charge up to $6.15 for the residential rate.

The council also plans to take $466,000 from the unappropriated General Fund balance if necessary.

The largest increase in the overall budget is coming in the water and sewer fund, which reflects an 82 percent hike. The budget for that category is jumping by $5,913,553 to $13,133,040. The mayor said most of the increase comes in debt service — $4,034,750 — for the "massive capital expenditures required for the sewage effluent disposal system and other water and sewer expansions."

The sewage disposal system and other new sewer line installations require the city to sell $23 million in bonds through the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Other increases come from water charges imposed by the CRMWD, from which the city purchases part of its water supply ($630,000) and power costs ($225,000).

To balance the fund, said Akins, will require the city raising residential sewer rates by $3 a month and commercial rates by a like percentage.

The Airport Fund, which is the third category, shows an increase of 14 percent with the final budgeted figure standing at $3.058,795. Much of the $382,825 increase is going for six new employees, according to the mayor.

"Last month was a new record in boardings and we show a surplus of $1,161,205 in this fund. This is a very desirable situation in that the airport is facing the need for large capital expenditures for parking, road systems, drainage and an additional ramp area. The surplus will reduce the amount of bonds to be sold to accomplish these projects."

Akins noted that the entire budget includes a 7 percent cost of living for all city employees on Oct. 1.

The 39 percent increase in the budget didn't surprise the council, he said. "Most of us expected it to be a sizable increase just because of what we had seen visually around the city."

Police record 1,000th hit-and-run

ODESSA — On July 21, police here recorded the city's 1000th hit-and-run accident this year. "It's the most we've ever had for that period," said one officer.

For the same period in 1981, 801 hit-run accidents were reported. All told, 3,714 traffic accidents have been recorded in Odessa since Jan. 1, compared to 3,128 for 1981.

Of the 1982 total, 660 accidents involved personal injury to 947 persons and 12 persons have been killed, one less than the same period last year. The number of car-pedistrian accidents stood at 34, compared to 45 in 1981. The number of motorcycle accidents was also down from last year: 60 in 1981, and 55 so far this year.

Odessa man robbed of $600 cash

ODESSA — An Odessa man told police he was relieved of $600 in cash after he let a woman into his apartment to use the telephone Monday night.

John T. Haarman said he answered his doorbell about 10:30 p.m. and a woman dressed in a tank top and blue jeans asked if she could use the phone because her car had broken down.

Haarman said he didn't close the door and a man armed with a blue steel revolver came in, ordered him to lie on the floor and said: "Don't move or I'll blow your head off."

Taken were a .22-caliber pistol, three sets of keys and his wallet containing $600. The man was described as 25 to 30 years old, about 5 feet, 11 inches tall, weighing 185 pounds and wearing a hankerchief as a mask. The woman was about 25 years old, 5 feet, 2 inches tall, with dark hair and eyes.

Odessa men arrested on drug charges

Two Odessa men were in custody today after being arrested early Sunday morning on felony delivery of marijuana charges, bringing to 19 the number of persons busted on drug charges in the past two weeks.

Arrested at a local motel about 2:50 a.m. Sunday were Edward Joseph Gonzales, 21, and Randall Louis Dow, 29, both of Odessa. They remained in jail under bonds totaling $75,000. The bonds were set Monday set by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

About three-quarters of a pound of high-grade seedless marijuana was confiscated, according to police, who said the investigation leading to the arrest of Dow and Gonzales was not related to a month-long undercover operation that has netted 17 persons to date, including two juveniles.

Confiscated as a result of that investigation was an assortment of drugs ranging from marijuana to cocaine and morphine. Bonds on those cases exceed $400,000.

Man reports theft of two TV sets

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Sammy Botnoch told officers two TV sets, an 8-track stereo player and assorted household goods valued at $3,275 were taken in a break-in at 1401 S. Camp St. late last week.

Melton Olgin, 602 N. Lincoln St., reported the theft of guns, knives, record albums and clothing worth $2,543. The break-in occurred Monday. Entry was gained through a window.

Residences at 905 and 901 N. Terrell St. were also reported broken into Monday. Food, jewelry and household goods worth in excess of $400 were taken. Entry was gained through windows in both of those burglaries.

Wednesday's temperature may hit 90s

Say one thing about this Midland weather, it's consistent.

A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms lurks in the forecast for tonight and Wednesday. Tonight, temperatures should drop to near 70. Wednesday's high may reach the upper 90s.

Southeasterly winds will once again caress the area at 5 to 10 mph tonight and Wednesday.

Monday's high soared to 99, but fell short of the record 105 set in 1944. The overnight low of 69 compares with a record low 60 set in 1973. Precipitation amounts for the month and year remain steady at 3.21 and 9.49 inches.

Shark chomps on surfboard

CAYUCOS, Calif. (AP) — Lifeguard Cas Pulaski says a great white shark put a huge set of teethprints in his surfboard, narrowly missing his leg. But Pulaski says he got his board back after hitting the 15-foot shark in the nose.

Pulaski, 26, a lifeguard at Cayucos Pier, said he and Terry Schubert, 29, were paddling on their boards Saturday when they encountered the shark a mile offshore near Point Buchon, in San Luis Obispo County 170 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Pulaski recalled Monday that the two friends were singing Harry Belafonte tunes when the shark chomped the board, leaving an imprint of its 14-inch jaws.

Troops not leaving Angola

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BAYAMO, Cuba — President Fidel Castro told a cheering audience Monday night that Cuban troops will not be removed from Angola until the United States and South Africa meet his conditions for withdrawal: The removal of South African troops from neighboring Namibia, the end of outside aid to rebel organizations in Angola and "the end of all danger of aggression toward Angola."

Further, he declared, if South African troops "strike deeply into Angola and reach our lines, we will fight with all our might against these parasitic, racist mercenaries."

The end of his statement was nearly drowned out by cheers as the more than 100,000 listeners at an outdoor rally in this town 500 miles southeast of Havana jumped to their feet and gave the 56-year-old Cuban leader a standing ovation.

Castro's declaration on Angola marked the highlight of a 2½-hour speech commemorating the 29th anniversary of his raid on the Moncada Barracks, the initial spark in the fight to overthrow dictator Fulgencio Batista.

Although he labeled the economic and political policies of the Reagan administration absurd, Castro was notably more restrained in his address than in the one he delivered to a parliamentary conference in Havana last September.

Then, he described the Reagan Administration as fascist and repeatedly accused it of lying about the Cuban role in promoting subversion in Central America and elsewhere.

On this occasion, Castro, wearing his customary green fatigue uniform, limited himself to attacking "imperialism" and "Yankee adventurism." He made no mention of a Cuban threat to establish a powerful radio transmitter to interfere with domestic U.S. broadcasts in retaliation for the Reagan administration's creation of a station to beam U.S. broadcasts into Cuba from Florida.

The Angolan issue is a critical obstacle in the improvement of relations between Havana and Washington because U.S. analysts consider the estimated 10,000 Cubans in that African nation Soviet pawns.

Beginning last November, when then-Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met secretly with a high Cuban official in Mexico, there have been suggestions that both sides are seeking a normalization of relations. Castro's speech, representing a reiteration of Cuba's hard-line attitude, could represent a setback to any overtures from Washington.

Castro accused the United States of promoting aggression by increasing arms shipments to El Salvador and conducting a campaign of destabilization against Nicaragua, a Cuban ally.

He referred twice to the use of Honduran territory to aid U.S. efforts both to support the army of El Salvador and to provide refuge for clandestine armies harassing the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Honduras is a U.S. ally in Central America that has, by and large, managed to avoid much of the turmoil of the region. Recently, however, Salvadoran guerrillas have warned that it will suffer retaliation for siding with El Salvador's rightist government forces.

Before launching into a review of global politics during which he accused Zionism and imperialism of carrying out a policy of genocide in Lebanon, Castro offered a long review of economic policies affecting the Third World.

"The (economic) prospects couldn't be gloomier," Castro maintained. "This is one of the worst crises, if not the worst, in the history of underdeveloped countries."

Led by the United States, Western industrial nations have forced down the price of raw materials while increasing the price of technology and the cost of borrowing money, he said. He cited the falling prices of such items as cotton, sugar and coffee as a signal of hard times in producing countries.

For Cuba, he said, the current sugar price of less than 8 cents a pound means that the country has to produce twice the output of 1970 just to earn the same amount of foreign exchange.

Cubans, he said, will have to prepare themselves for lean years by greater sacrifice and hard work because the aggressive policies of the United States and its allies show no sign of letting up.

Highway 15 — road to notoriety

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer

ALONG HIGHWAY 15, Mexico — This Pacific coastal route is rich in scenic variety and the lore of drug smugglers and highway bandits. But life, like Mexico's Pemex gasoline, is cheap on Highway 15.

Murder has been part of its legend since 16th century Spanish conquistador Nino de Guzman plundered the Patzcuaro region, through which the road now passes, and burned alive the Tarascan chief who refused to tell where his tribe's gold was buried.

Today, what happened to three American travelers — two died violently and one vanished — is worrying Mexicans who want to keep tourist dollars rolling in.

The U.S. Embassy is considering asking the State Department to renew the advisory issued against travel on Highway 15 in 1976, when at least 13 Americans and other foreigners were slain along its 1,432-mile stretch from Nogales on the Arizona border to Mexico City.

Boosters of Mexican tourism, seeking to defend the country's second largest exchange-earner behind oil, insist the latest incidents are isolated and that armed assaults on travelers are far less frequent now.

"A tourist boycott was justified in '76 but not now," said Jose H. Rico, the mayor of Mazatlan, a Pacific resort on the highway that drew 1.4 million visitors last year, more than a third of them from the United States.

Although Federal Highway Police insist their patrols are adequate, Mazatlan's hotel owners, mindful that 1976 and 1977 were their worst seasons of the decade, have started a letter-writing campaign to get the patrols increased.

Many Americans who take to the sun, surf, game hunting and fishing of Mexico's Pacific coast arrive on wheels, taking advantage of low gasoline prices — the equivalent of 46 U.S. cents a gallon for regular. U.S. officials say an average of 82 vehicles cross the Arizona border into Mexico each day on Highway 15.

From the naked desert hills around Hermosillo, Ciudad Obregon and Culiacan, the road winds across the Tropic of Cancer just north of Mazatlan and Tepic. From there it turns east to Guadalajara and across the Sierra Madres to Morelia, Toluca and Mexico City.

Most of Highway 15 a two-lane blacktop road — undivided, unlighted, full of potholes, crammed with trucks, often lacking shoulders or a center line and occasionally blocked by cattle. A hard day's drive may be 400 miles; night driving is not advised.

"After getting used to the California freeways, you lose the skill of judging when to pass on a road like this," said Alberto Carrillo, who drove his family to Mazatlan from their home in Whittier, Calif.

The highway takes tourist traffic both ways. "Fayuca" — consumer goods smuggled through customs — moves mostly southbound. Heroin and marijuana flow the other way, as do the "alambristas," or fence cutters, who slip through the chain link barrier at Nogales to work illegally in the United States.

Notable highway points like Tequila, home of Mexico's best-known brew, and Guayamas, a seaport seized by both American and French invaders in the 19th century, long have been publicized in tour books.

More obscure places are gaining infamy as scenes of recent crime and coverup:

Las Bateas is a curve in the highway where Nicholas Schrock's van was forced off and plundered June 2.

Shrock, 42, a University of Colorado professor bound for a teaching job in Guadalajara, has not been seen since. The police chief and six deputies from nearby San Ignacio are suspected of killing Shrock and hiding his body. They are in jail.

Officials are looking for Shrock in the roadside tangle of mesquite and cactus, but say the suspects may be reluctant to point out the burial site because it could contain other bodies.

San Blas, just off the highway, is a little-known tropical seaside village where Longfellow wrote his last poem, "The Bells of San Blas," in 1882.

It is also where Randall Scott Ebert, 30, of Santa Monica, Calif., was shot to death June 9 and John Mills, 34, of Phoenix, Ariz., drowned June 11. Local police ordered them buried without informing U.S. officials. After their deaths came to light last week, state police opened an inquiry, saying both may have been murdered in a single drug case.

Drug-related violence flourished along Highway 15 in the early 1970s after Turkey restricted opium poppy cultivation and the valleys around Culiacan filled the gap in production for the U.S. heroin market. After heroin traffic along the highway was curtailed by aerial herbicide spraying that started in 1976, some smugglers turned to armed robbery.

Hector Arguelles, commander of the Federal Highway Police detachment in Mazatlan, said robberies on his 156-mile stretch of Highway 15 rose to a peak average of six per week in 1980 before a doubling of patrols on the entire road brought them down.

Four patrol cars now cruise the stretch at all hours and robberies are down to an average of one a month, he said, most of them drivers who make the mistake of sleeping on the roadside."

University of Colorado professor Nicholas Schrock, seen here in a 1982 photo, was forced off Mexico's highway 15 in his van June 2.

Seven charged

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — A judge in the tiny Mexican town of San Ignacio will begin reviewing evidence today against the town police chief and six deputies charged with murdering missing University of Colorado Professor Nicholas Schrock, Sinaloa state Attorney General Jorge Chavez Castro said.

San Ignacio Judge Enrique Estrada Lopez has until Thursday morning to determine whether their is sufficient evidence to start trial proceedings against the seven suspects, Chavez Castro said.

In the charges filed Monday, the seven policemen were also accused of robbery and other offenses.

Fire strikes London

LONDON (AP) — Fire swept through one of London's biggest department stores early today, creating giant rush-hour traffic jams as more than 100 firemen fought to bring it under control. Two firemen were injured, authorities said.

The Civil Service Store in the Strand, near Trafalgar Square and the Charing Cross subway station, was closed when the fire erupted about 5 a.m., midnight EDT.

Yibang fired

HONG KONG (AP) — The Chinese Communist Party has recommended that Yang Yibang, deputy minister of chemical industries, be fired for alleged international fraud, receipt of bribes and child theft.

A news report from Peking said the party disciplinary committee suspended Yang from the party for two years.

Your horoscope

BY JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, July 28, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Kansas City Royals ace left-hander Vida Blue celebrates a birthday today. Also sharing this birthday with you: Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, U.S. Senator Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), Sally Struthers and bandleader Peter Duchin. You find new opportunities to mix business with pleasure in the months ahead. Abandon an idea or partnership that is not going anywhere and apply your talents to projects that will fatten your bank account. A lifelong ambition moves closer to becoming reality. Go slow where romance is concerned. If you continue to be impulsive in your choices, lasting happiness will continue to elude you. Family members offer advice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make a choice now or face a problem later. You find new success with an organization. A chance encounter leads to a business or career opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Visitors could be overstaying their welcome. You may have to do something you dislike. A decision based on incomplete information will not be in your best interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Investments made today will be lucky later on. Simplify your finances and then keep accounts up to date. Procrastination could be your downfall.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Proposals, extra study bring career advancement. Make up your mind to give a hundred percent at work! Do not be afraid to show your vulnerability to loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unless you admit a mistake, you will continue to flounder. A so-called friend may be after your job. Do not put yourself down. An amusing incident boosts your spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romantic companion will respond if given a chance. Do not try to rush things! Your co-workers will use any emotional outbursts against you. New partners give your fortunes a lift.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Since you are always buying people presents, why not splurge on yourself for a change? Treat yourself to some new clothes or a night on the town.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be gracious towards the visiting friends of boss or co-worker. You gain support for an idea that you cherish. Collect the facts you need to convince those in charge.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find that you have been wasting valuable time. Reorganize your daily schedule. A loved one brings you good luck. Be careful not to step on any toes today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Shyness makes you attractive to member of opposite sex. Curb spending to preserve "nest egg." Do not ignore a child's plea for attention. Complete your work on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Treat young person's suggestions seriously. Think about expanding an advisory council. Results come quickly when you emphasize the benefits of teamwork.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A surprise phone call inspires you to work ever harder. Obey all safety rules if around machinery today. You will be successful in putting a business deal together.

Neither vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH

♢ 10 9 4
♣ A K 9 7 3

WEST
♠ K 9 5
♡ K 10 3 2

SOUTH
♠ 8
♡ A Q 9 7
♢ A K 8 7 2
♣ 5 4 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♢	Pass	5 ♢	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Here's a test of your analytical ability. Would you choose to play five diamonds, three no trump or neither on this hand from a recent team match?

The auction is reasonable. North might have tried three no trump rather than four diamonds, but declarer has his problems at either contract. However, move to the top of the class if you decided that it makes no difference whether you play game at no trump or diamonds, since both can be made with careful handling after a spade lead.

Assume that you are declaring at five diamonds. Win the ace of spades and finesse the queen of hearts. West wins and returns a spade, as good as any. Ruff and cash the ace of diamonds, noting the fall of the jack.

If that card is honest, you will need some luck. Cash the ace of hearts and ruff a heart. Ruff a spade and ruff your last heart in dummy, and you are delighted when East discards on this trick. Now cash the ace-king of clubs and exit with a club. West is down to nothing but trumps, so he has to ruff his partner's winner and return a trump from his Q 6 into declarer's K 8 tenace. Declarer loses only a heart and the club ruff.

At three no trump, declarer's problem is different. He must hope that East started with six spades and that he can be kept off lead. Win the third spade and lead the ten of diamonds, capturing the jack with the king. Now lead a low club: if West plays the queen, allow him to hold the trick; if he plays low, go up with the king.

Assume West follows low and you win the club in the North hand. Run the nine of diamonds to West's queen. West might as well return a diamond. Win and lead another club. When West produces the queen, simply duck the trick. When East follows to this trick, you can claim the rest of the tricks to just make your contract.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Double-jointedness neither good, bad

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember that when I was a kid some of my friends were what we called double-jointed. For example, they could bend their thumbs until they touched the inside of their wrists. Everyone who could do this seemd proud of it, and I was wondering if being double-jointed is a good thing. — Gary, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Gary: Joint hypermobility (double-jointedness), which is found in about five percent of the general population, is neither good nor bad, but merely represents one extreme of joint motion. At one time some doctors had believed that the condition might indicate some underlying disorder, but this does not appear to be the case.

One study of more than 600 persons has shown that 4.9 percent were hypermobile. There was no apparent link between the condition and other disorders.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been able to use a lot of the information you give about older people. My mother is in her eighties and I've been helped by what you write about diets and the use of drugs for older people. Lately my mother has been a lot quieter than she usually is. I don't know if her age is catching up with her or if something is bothering her. Would you recommend that I arrange for psychological tests to show if she's depressed? — Mrs. V.Y., Augusta, Ga.

Dear Mrs. Y.: According to Dr. Carlos A. Garcia and his associates at the Cornell Medical College at the Burke Rehabilitation Center in White Plains, N.Y., the usual psychological tests that are designed to reveal depression are not very useful when used with older people. A physician who knows your mother's history and has her medical records available would probably be in a better position to make the diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that men can get the toxic shock syndrome? I thought it only happened in women who menstruate. — Sandy, Bryan, Texas

Dear Sandy: The toxic shock syndrome can occur in men, women and children, including women who have recently given birth. It also occurs in burn patients, in persons who have had surgery, and in people with infected wounds and abscesses. Finally, the toxic shock syndrome has been found in people who had no detectable underlying medical condition.

According to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, in 1981 about 13 percent of all reported cases of toxic shock syndrome occurred in individuals other than women who were menstruating.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 16 years old and have acne. My best girl friend said I have it, because I don't wash my face enough. But I do. I scrub so hard that sometimes the acne bleeds. But still it doesn't get any better. What should I do? — Cindy, Dover, Del.

Dear Cindy: It is actually possible to make acne worse with too much scrubbing. A good regular washing can help remove the outer layer of skin cells, but it cannot clean the skin follicles beneath the surface where all acne forms. Why don't you talk to your family doctor, and ask him to refer you to a dermatologist? Then go. Let him put you on a regimen that will help you to control your acne.

2,250-acre forest fire contained by break

HAPPY CAMP, Calif. (AP) — A fire that devastated 2,250 acres of rugged timberland in Klamath National Forest has been contained by firefighters who cleared a nine-mile firebreak by hand.

The blaze was declared contained by the U.S. Forest Service at midnight Monday after timber between the fire line and the fire burned out and left the blaze without fuel, said Klamath National Forest spokesman Ron Smith.

He predicted the fire would be controlled by Wednesday. It spread from a smoldering campfire July 21, fire officials say.

About 400 firefighters remained in the steep terrain early today.

The six-day battle with the fire was difficult because no roads led to the area and much of the area has a steep slope, Smith said. Eight firefighters have been hurt.

The airlines' future

Ever since the air traffic controllers' strike in the summer of 1981, the airline industry has been slogging through difficult times.

While the controllers' strike only apparently aggravated a nagging problem in the airline industry, it did focus attention on that industry's mounting financial crisis.

Numerous commercial flights were canceled nationwide during the strike by PATCO (Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization). Many more were delayed. In all, flights were cutback at 22 major airports after PATCO called a strike last Aug. 3.

It's becoming increasingly clear that no one won the air traffic controllers strike — not the fired controllers, not the airlines and not the nation's air travelers. In fact, what has been lost in the aftermath of the strike may take years to regain.

Some airlines dropped unprofitable routes during and after the controllers strike. For most of 1981 only about 75 to 80 percent of scheduled flights were operating, according to Editorial Research Reports. 1981 was not a good year for the nation's airlines overall economically and, unfortunately, 1982 doesn't appear to be much of an improvement.

Already Braniff International — one of the air carriers that served the Midland market — has filed bankruptcy proceedings, and Continental Airlines' flights to the Tall City were canceled after it was taken over by Texas International. Even so, boardings continue to increase almost monthly at Midland Regional, indicating the strong need and desire here for reliable air service.

Despite 1981's staggering $355 million loss by 10 major airlines, Federal Aviation Administrator J. Lynn Helms continues to be optimistic, pledging that 90 percent of the flights maintained in 1981 will be back in operation by this Christmas and 100 percent of the canceled flights will be back in service by next spring.

We hope so. While Midland Regional has been able to maintain a large number of its flights this year, despite the airline industry's woes, the Permian Basin is experiencing a growth trend that demands more and better flight service, not less.

Still, on a national basis, at least, the horizon isn't bright for flying's future, what with the recession, increasing fuel prices and the shockwaves of the air controllers strike.

Bad economic times demand good management practices. It's essential that the airlines develop and maintain those practices so they won't be guilty of contributing to their problems.

Facts belie killer image

In the Florida Everglades, animal lovers have succeeded in branding a group of people as heartless killers. But the facts belie that characterization, and lead one to wonder if the well-meaning preservationists lacked common sense.

As the situation unfolded before the much-publicized hunt, Florida officials reported that thousands of deer were starving in the Everglades, isolated without food or habitat on islands surrounded by floodwaters.

The state Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission authorized a hunt to thin the deer population. It was labeled a "mercy kill," but its purpose was to save the herd by allowing the strongest to survive as well as to put starving animals out of misery.

Animal protection groups fought the hunt bitterly in court, and succeeded in delaying it. Under an agreement that was reached with the state, they were given a chance to stop some of the hunting if they proved they could rescue, relocate, and save 100 deer.

In the end, nature seems to have taken her inevitable course. State game officials called off the hunt after 720 deer had been killed, saying that starvation and disease had taken so great a toll that continuation of the mercy kill would be pointless.

And what about the animal preservationists, whose court actions delayed the hunt? They succeeded in saving 19 deer — an accomplishment, but pitifully small considering the thousands involved and the stakes in the state effort to preserve the herd.

The head of the Miami-based National Wildlife Rescue Team said the group had proved that relocation could save deer, but that state officials who ordered the hunt were right in their assessment that it wouldn't work in time to ease the situation.

In short, the animal preservationists let their hearts rule their heads.

Another View:

The IRA's new terrorism

There can be only one reaction to the bloody bomb attacks in London by the skulking killers of the Irish Republican Army — renewed resolve on the part of the British government to oppose the terrorists at every level, to hunt them down and bring them to justice, and, in the United States, new conscience-searching by those misguided Americans whose contributions help support the IRA's campaign of violence.

There should be no misunderstanding here about the character or goals of this vicious organization. It is not composed of nationalist zealots seeking merely to unify Ireland. The IRA terrorists, rejected by virtually all the people of Ireland and the country's political leaders and institutions, have as their ultimate goal the forcible imposition of a non-democratic regime over all the island. Their arms come from Soviet-bloc countries and from such radical nations as Libya; their violence is directed as much against the moderates in Ireland as against the British and the Protestant majority in Ulster. They seek no peaceful solutions to the tragic divisions of the country in whose interest they pretend to act.

Prime Minister Thatcher responded with the necessary condemnation of "these callous and cowardly crimes" and promised that "we shan't rest" until their perpetrators are caught and punished. The atrocities have likewise been condemned by the Dublin government.

Now it will be the task of the political leadership of both nations to expedite negotiations on the April initiative of James Prior, Britain's secretary of state for Northern Ireland, toward an elected provisional government with a 78-member assembly proportionately composed of Protestants and Catholics. Like previous ideas for bringing peace to Ulster, the Prior plan faces criticism from both sides on the mechanisms for power-sharing; still, it may have a better chance because of the recently opened lines of communication between London and Dublin.

Disrupting that effort may well have been a prime purpose of the new IRA violence. However difficult the path ahead, one of the objectives of the moderates on all sides must be to demonstrate that those tactics will not succeed, and that such savagery has no place in Ireland's future.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Porthole of vulnerability' left open, too

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is trying to close what he calls the "window of vulnerability" that would allow the Soviets to penetrate our land-based missile defenses. But he is leaving wide open a smaller "porthole of vulnerability" that would make our carrier fleet submarines virtually defenseless against attacking Soviet submarines.

Jack Anderson

The problem is not only that a dangerous "submarine gap" is developing, but that it is caused by unseemly Pentagon squabbling. In an earlier column, I reported that the backstabbing and undercutting inside the Pentagon wastes billions of dollars and seriously weakens the nation's security.

Each weapons system is supported by a formidable lobby, composed of the military brass who believe in it, the contractors who manufacture the component parts, the workers who put them together and the congressmen whose districts enjoy the economic benefits.

A canceled defense contract will cause these disparate interests to swarm like angry hornets. They will fight bitterly for the most extravagant and unnecessary weapons. All too often, the nation's military requirements will be forgotten in the fray.

This is what has happened to a sub-to-sub nuclear missile called the SUBROC (submarine rocket). It was built by Goodyear Aerospace, which has lost the battle to replace it now that it's growing obsolete. The contract for the new missile has gone to Boeing/Gould.

Overlooked in the infighting between the two missile systems is the security of the carrier task forces which the missiles are supposed to protect. Here's what has happened:

At present, our attack submarines constantly patrol on the rim of the carrier task forces. They are equipped with SUBROC missiles that are intended to keep enemy submarines at the minimum safety distance of 20 miles or so.

The SUBROC is a 22-foot, 4,000-pound missile that is launched from the torpedo tube of a submerged sub. The missile churns through the water, leaps into the air and drops a nuclear depth charge to crush any lurking enemy subs. The charge is lethal if dropped within three or four miles of the underwater target; the SUBROC's effective range is 25 miles.

The Navy, however, has pronounced the SUBROC obsolete and has decided to phase it out by 1989, according to a top secret Pentagon report. Boeing/Gould's new, super-standoff missile is in the works.

But here's the hitch: The SUBROC replacement won't be operational until 1989 at the earliest. This is the same year that the last SUBROC is supposed to be withdrawn from service. Yet a secret General Accounting Office audit suggests that, like most Pentagon projects, the new missile will not only cost more than current estimates, but will not be finished on schedule.

This means that, for an undetermined period, our attack submarines will have no long-range weapon with which to keep Soviet subs at bay. Pentagon sources told my associate Dale Van Atta the gap between phase-out of SUBROC and deployment of its replacement could be as long as three years.

During that critical period, the Navy's attack subs would have to make do with a conventional sub-to-sub torpedo, with a range of only 10 miles. And by the time a U.S. sub gets that close to a Soviet sub, the approach will be picked up by Soviet tracking systems.

As the top secret Pentagon report puts it starkly: "If U.S. submarines are not equipped with a new nuclear-capable weapon after SUBROC is phased out, the force will have to rely on the shorter-range, conventionally armed MK-48 torpedo, whose effective use will require U.S. submarines to close with the Soviet detection envelop and within range of the existing Soviet standoff weapons."

The problem has not gone unnoticed in Congress. In 1979, a Navy official told the Senate in secret testimony that the 1989 phase-out of SUBROC would leave our subs without a long-range anti-submarine weapon. In May 1981, the Naval Audit Service recommended that SUBROC be upgraded. But the Navy decided to spend the money elsewhere.

Yet Deputy Undersecretary James P. Wade Jr., responding to the suggestion that SUBROC be upgraded and retained, complained that this would be only an "interim improvement" that would cost more than $80 million. "If the program proves to be cost effective, it will be considered," he added lamely.

Meanwhile, our carrier task forces face potential disaster at the hands of the vast Soviet undersea fleet.

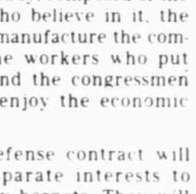
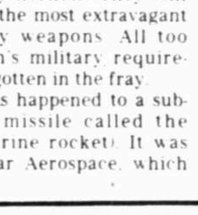
INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan enters dream world of tax reform

WASHINGTON — The transformation of Ronald Reagan into a tax reformer capable of converting George McGovern's dreams into reality was beyond doubt at 10:15 a.m. last Thursday when Republican senator Robert W. Kasten Jr. was summoned to the Oval Office to face the great communicator.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

Using all his magnetism, the president pleaded with Kasten, a 40-year-old Wisconsin conservative elected in the 1980 Reagan sweep, to withdraw his amendment to the tax bill. That amendment would have stripped the bill of a proviso to withhold taxes on dividends and interest, long the far-out dream of tax reformers now becoming reality under Reagan.

Kasten refused. But under the White House whip, 24 Republican senators who sponsored a 1980 resolution opposing a similar withholding scheme by President Carter voted for it in the Senate Thursday night as it passed, 50 to 47. One word from the president could have chilled the amendment and the bill.

Instead, the famed anti-taxer pushed for a tax increase that is not only the largest in history but that contains a generation worth of accumulated tax reform debris geared to higher revenue and soaking the rich. The late edition even includes Jimmy Carter's notorious attack on the three-martini businessman's lunch. Alternative explanations of Reagan's conduct are equally damning: that in his rush for revenue, he either did not understand or did not care.

As a result, liberal Democrats won the best of two worlds: a bill that achieves McGovern-Carter tax reform beyond their wildest dreams but that bears a Republican label. Only two other freshman senators, Florida's Paula Hawkins and Georgia's Mack Mattingly, joined Kasten to break Republican ranks on final passage. Smirking Democrats to a man voted against it, not wishing to be saddled with increasing taxes in an election-recession year.

Some administration officials who understand the debacle blamed the Treasury for giving Sen. Robert Dole a free hand in writing the 700-page bill in his Finance Committee. "We let Dole run loose, just when he was launching his campaign for president," one official told us.

But that lets the Treasury off too easily. In truth, the Dole bill emerged from the catacombs of the Treasury where holdover bureaucrats in the Tax Division unearthed their hoary "loophole-closing" schemes last September when White House chief of staff James Baker began his drive for more revenue. Their boss, Assistant Secretary Buck Chapoton, is a Houston tax lawyer congenial to cleaning up the tax code at the expense of the taxpayers.

The two main supply-side economists at Treasury, Under Secretary Norman Ture and Assistant Secretary Paul Craig Roberts, protested futilely and finally resigned. Secretary Donald T. Regan allowed himself to be swept along by the tide. On the day the bill was brought up in the Senate, Regan was oblivious to private protests from Pepsico chief Don Kendall and economist Walter Williams.

There was no voice in the administration to echo Sen. Kasten's plea that "we Republicans were not elected to raise taxes on savings and investment." Instead, Don Regan was pumping the telephone to support the interest and dividend withholding provision.

The rationale for the president to swallow a McGovernite tax bill is his belief, mocked by sophisticated opinion, that the bill will make markets soar and interest rates fall. Despite a lifetime of sermonizing against liberal tax policy, he swallowed the Dole bill as effortlessly as he had massive tax increases as governor of California.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a last remaining political asset for the Republicans, nearly saved the GOP as the Senate bill was passing by insisting that anti-oil taxes be added in the House. Majority Leader Jim Wright, understanding that the bill must retain its Republican label, quickly repaired the damage.

That leaves the fate of the bill squarely in Republican hands. "In this bill, we alienate the last constituency that has any use for the Reagan administration — business," one key House Republican leader told us. He is hard at work to expunge the anti-business provisions from the bill but retain the $99 billion in extra revenue.

However, that would mean still higher taxes for ordinary Americans. Norman Ture belives that, whatever the merit f one or two of the bill's provisions, no tax increase should be passed in today's economic climate. That credo is shared by Reaganites such as Rep. Jack Kemp of New York on the leadership and Reps. Phil Crane of Illinois and John Rousselot of California on the Ways and Means Committee. It is surely a Reaganite credo, even though Reagan himself has chose to borrow the worst of George McGovern and Herbert Hoover by pushing revenue-raising tax reform amidst an economic agony.

CHARLEY REESE

Liberalism ate 'Apple' to the core

New York City is vulnerable to the cheap shot. Almost everything that can go wrong has gone wrong in the Big Apple. Still, we have to remember that New Yorkers are like children, the most naive and provincial of all the genus homo sapiens Americanus.

Charley Reese

After all, New Yorkers live in the midst of filth, pollution, traffic congestion, crime, corruption, rudeness and advanced ripoffitis and call it paradise.

In fact, New York intellectuals in particular have adopted a defense mechanism. Unable to dim the smog, lighten the traffic, collect the garbage, clean the streets, or control crime they have simply pronounced all of these things to be chic. By definition then, clean streets, courtesy, orderliness, fair prices and safe communities are dull, boring and bourgeois.

The New York intellectual is convinced that beyond Manhattan lies only the Wilderness of Middle America inhabited entirely by boobs and nincompoops. In the meantime, of course, sophisticated New Yorkers pay four times what everyone else pays for the necessities of life.

As a result of my recent trip to the Wormy Apple, my employer paid $115 for a room decorated in modern Mafia — a couple of bulbous lamps, a peach chair with stains on it, splashy green drapes, and geeen carpet. For a cup of coffee, it was $1.15; for four ounces of obviously-not-fresh orange juice, $1.60. For a steak, baked potato, salad and a cup of coffee — available in most parts of the country for $9 to $12, sophisticated New Yorkers and newspapers which send their columnists out of town pay $37.

For that you get service with a sullen blank look or a frown. The only time they smile is when they bring you the check, and even then it's a tossup whether they are smiling or grinning.

New Yorkers have adopted another ingenious defense mechanism. Unable to correct blighted neighborhoods, they simply blighted all neighborhoods. The few remaining legitimate theaters are sandwiched in between the x-rated movie houses, porno shops, and junk stores. Pushcarts, bums, dirt, and garbage are uniformly distributed so that you can only tell whether a neighborhood is a rich one or a poor one by the price of the apartments.

On the streets, millionaires, tourists, workers, bums, hookers, cops, and presumably muggers mingle in one Mulligan stew. Mayor Ed Koch is ecstatic that violent crimes have dropped from 50,000 to 45,000 per quarter.

What's left of New York is, of course, a monument to the failure of liberalism. Never once tainted with conservative office holders, New Yorkers did everything liberalism prescribes for the "ideal society." Subsidized public transit, high welfare payments, rent control, public housing, lenient courts, urban renewal, all the poverty programs — you name a liberal scheme and New York has tried it.

The result is precisely what conservatives predicted: a collapsed society, an inefficient and virtually bankrupt government, and the flight of capital. I've heard New Yorkers defend their plight by claiming the city at least "has heart." Hogwash. What is compassionate about row after row of sweatshops, of streets no longer safe for the common folk, of taxes and prices so high that only the rich can live comfortably? What is compassionate about turning a once-great city into a jungle? What is compassionate about destroying what once was one of the best school systems in America?

New York City is the future of liberalism; let's hope the rest of the country rejects it.

Texas 'one bright star' in NCPAC sky

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A national right-wing lobby afraid of major losses in its battle to defeat political liberals in other states is looking to Texas as the place to wield its financial clout and organizational muscle.

A private document sent to "strong and concerned free enterprise-oriented individuals" detailed the National Conservative Political Action Committee's aims in Texas this year.

"To me, Texas is the one bright star which can offset major losses that I fear can occur in other states," NCPAC chairman John T. "Terry" Dolan wrote in the paper sent to a wealthy businessman, who apparently was thought to be a potential contributor.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of NCPAC's "Project Bright Star" that included this warning on the first page:

"CAUTION: THIS MATERIAL is sensitive. The contents of this paper will have a decisive effect on congressional campaigns in the state of Texas this year. Do not release. Do not publicize. Please respond; then destroy."

A spokesman at NCPAC headquarters in Arlington, Va., told the AP that Dolan does not grant interviews and would not comment on the project.

Since 1978, NCPAC has taken credit for defeating "powerful liberal" U.S. Senators Dick Clark of Iowa, Thomas McIntyre of New Hampshire, Birch Bayh of Indiana, Frank Church of Idaho, John Culver of Iowa and George McGovern of South Dakota and "scores of liberal, once powerful" U.S. Representatives.

But Dolan expressed concern in the "Bright Star" paper about conservative fortunes in the upcoming election.

"I am very worried — extremely worried — that circumstances are developing that will lead conservatives toward a devastating defeat in the congressional elections this November all across this land," wrote Dolan.

The paper states NCPAC is "dedicating at least $250,000 to take its stand in Texas" and would "put every component" of the organization "at the disposal of all free enterprise conservatives running for Congress" in Texas this year.

"FOR AN INDIVIDUAL CANDIDATE, NCPAC is like a super campaign. It has the ability, when called upon, to completely organize and guide an entire campaign from beginning to end," wrote Dolan, who said he has set up a direct consultation line for candidates.

"Project Bright Star," says Dolan, is "my highest priority."

The proposed "Bright Star" budget, however, includes only $5,000 for the U.S. Senate race, which is far short of the $300,000 Dolan has said NCPAC will spend to campaign against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

In fact, NCPAC already has run television commercials in Lubbock trying to portray Bentsen as a liberal in his race against Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas. A poll commissioned by Bentsen's campaign maintains the ads may backfire and "actually hurt Collins."

Bentsen's campaign press secretary, Jack DeVore, says the ads were a "gimmick to gain publicity" for a direct-mail campaign to raise funds for NCPAC.

In the "Bright Star" paper Dolan sketched "seven deadly threats which could destroy Ronald Reagan," including the economy and the "liberal media."

But he said union power was the "greatest danger to our newly won strength."

THE UNION MOVEMENT has targeted Houston for 1982, said Dolan.

"Union PAC's (political action committees) are richer than ever. Union members are being brought together to re-form their rusty political machines. The union leadership is more active at the center of the Democratic Party than ever before," he added.

The proposed "Bright Star" budget includes $5,000 each for U.S. House members Sam Hall Jr. of Marshall, Bill Archer of Houston, Jack Fields of Humble, Marvin Leath of Marlin, Charles Stenholm of Avoca, Kent Hance of Lubbock, Tom Loeffler of Kerrville and Ron Paul of Lake Jackson.

A total of $10,000 will be offered to incumbent Ralph Hall of Rockwall, and although no specific figure is mentioned, incumbent Phil Gramm of College Station will be offered a "maximum cash contribution," the paper says.

Contributions of $10,000 each also are budgeted for the following contested races involving House incumbents, presumably for their opponents: Rep. Jack Brooks, Beaumont, vs. John Lewis, Friendswood; Rep. Jack Hightower, Vernon, vs. Ron Slover, Amarillo; Rep. Bill Patman, Ganado, vs. Joe Wyatt Jr., Victoria; Rep. Mickey Leland, Houston, vs. Leon Pickett, Houston; Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen, Laredo, vs. Jeff Wentworth, San Antonio; and Rep. Martin Frost, Dallas, vs. Lucy Patterson, Dallas.

DOLAN SAID NCPAC also would like to "target" Reps. Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, and J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, for defeat "if significant opposition develops." Wright's opponent is Republican Jim Ryan of Euless. Pickle has no opponent at this time.

In races for open House seats, $10,000 NCPAC contributions are budgeted for the following contests: John Bryant, Dallas, vs. Joe Devany, Dallas; Ronald Coleman, El Paso, vs. Pat Haggerty, El Paso; Michael Andrews, Houston, vs. Mike Faubion, Houston; Tom Vandergriff, Arlington, vs. Jim Bradshaw, Fort Worth; and Solomon Ortiz, Corpus Christi, vs. Jason Luby, Corpus Christi.

Nation's first 'space baby' flown to neo-natal unit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The United States' first space baby, born to astronauts Dr. Rhea Seddon Gibson and Robert "Hoot" Gibson, was flown to a Houston hospital as a "precautionary measure" after developing a respiratory problem, a space agency spokesman says.

Paul Seddon Gibson, weighing 7 pounds, 2 ounces, was in stable condition Monday night in Hermann Hospital's neo-natal care unit.

The baby was born about 4 a.m. Monday at Clear Lake Hospital near the Johnson Space Center.

He began having difficulty breathing about 12 hours later and was flown by Life Flight helicopter to Hermann, about 20 miles away, said Steve Nesbitt of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Mrs. Gibson, who is a physician, remained in Clear Lake recovering from the Caesarean section delivery, Nesbitt said. She was in good condition.

Texan to get new trial, U.S. appeals court rules

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that a Texas man accused of a San Antonio holdup should have a new trial because the judge did not let him conduct his own defense.

The ruling Monday by 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Carl Edwin Wiggins should have a new trial. It reversed the earlier ruling by U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon, who had refused to overturn the state court conviction.

Wiggins was accused of a Jan. 17, 1972, holdup of a grocery store. When he insisted on defending himself, the judge agreed but appointed two lawyers as standby counsel, for advisory purposes.

Wiggins protested when one lawyer began to take an active role in the trial. The judge told him he was going to get the aid of counsel whether he wanted it or not.

"In addition to making objections too numerous to cite, counsel on several occasions cursed, argued with defendant, and moved for mistrial against the defendant's wishes," the 5th circuit said.

"By the time the smoke cleared, Wiggins had been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment as a recidivist."

The decision also said the government failed to show that the court-appointed lawyer's intervention in the trial was "harmless error."

"They were in constant disagreement over basic trial strategy and at one point counsel cursed in front of the jury," the decision said. "We fail to perceive how such conduct could have anything but a negative impact on the jury."

The case was sent back to Shannon "for the granting of the writ of habeas corpus and the entry of an appropriate judgment."

FTC funeral proposal under attack

By G.G. LaBELLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal requiring undertakers to provide customers with detailed funeral costs is coming before the Federal Trade Commission, its future in limbo after a decade of debate.

Two FTC officials on Monday recommended either dropping the rule or studying the issue further. Even if the rule is approved by the FTC, Congress could veto it.

The FTC staff that worked on the rule has called for approval, saying the evidence is "legally sufficient" for adoption.

The funeral home proposal has traveled a winding trail from the early 1970s, the heyday of the consumer movement, until now, when the trend is to curb regulatory agencies such as the FTC.

The FTC, which first raised the issue in 1972, has gathered more than 9,000 documents in the case and conducted hearings in six cities.

The proposal, tentatively adopted last year, comes before the commissioners Wednesday. It would require undertakers to draw up item-by-item price lists and answer questions about prices over the phone.

In addition, it would be illegal for them to misrepresent whether state laws require either caskets for cremation or embalming of corpses.

Proponents of the rule have argued that funeral homes take advantage of families at a difficult time by selling "package" funerals, with costly and unwanted items.

The funeral industry has opposed the rule, noting that Congress already put limitations on funeral homes in a 1980 law. An earlier version of the rule was rewritten following passage of that legislation.

The industry also contends that its voluntary program to handle complaints is sufficient.

On Monday, Timothy J. Muris, director of the FTC's consumer protection bureau, recommended further study before a rule is adopted and urged that the record in the case be reopened.

Muris said there are "some evidence of actual problems" in the industry, but added that in the 10 years the issue has been studied, "the commission did not ask relevant questions. We do not have good statistical evidence about the extent of the problems."

He said one study conducted after the record in the case was closed in 1976 found 94 percent of funeral directors were willing to discuss prices over the phone.

The study questioned 1,200 persons who had recently purchased funerals and found that 377 made the first approach to the undertaker by telephone. Of those, 74 asked about price and five were refused such information.

Robert Tollison, director of the FTC's bureau of economics, also cited that study in arguing the proposed rule should be dropped as unnecessary. He said the study showed most people make the choice of a funeral service on the basis of reputation for quality or some other factor, not on price.

He said the rule "to force price disclosures that consumers do not desire" would increase costs without adding to benefits.

Peter Hughes, a spokesman for the American Association of Retired Persons, immediately denounced the recommendations by Tollison and Muris.

The proposed rule, he said, "is a good one and is entirely supported by a documented record of well over 25,000 pages, a least 74 reports and surveys, and years and years of administrative investigations."

"It is ludicrous that the bureau's director would argue that such a record is inadequate," he added.

Terry Latonich, assistant director of the agency's consumer bureau, argued the staff's position that the rule should be approved.

He acknowledged that the evidence was not "documented in the ideal sense," but said:

"In regulatory law, you obviously have to stop at a point in time. Otherwise you never have a finale in rule-making."

He also said the study mentioned by Muris still showed that most people who telephoned undertakers did not get price information. He noted the rule would require funeral homes to mention to callers that such information is available.

All three of the FTC officials noted the possibility that Congress would veto any rule that was adopted.

In 1980, Congress also gave itself the right to veto any new FTC rule, and it used that right last May on the first major new rule it dealt with — one that would have required used car dealers to identify defects on their autos.

Last week Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., son of a mortician, said he thought the funeral rule would meet the same veto. FTC Commissioner Michael Pertschuk added, "That well may be the case."

Congressman fails to list Hunt loan

NEW YORK (AP) — An Idaho congressman failed to report a $50,000 loan to his wife from Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt in financial disclosure statements, the Wall Street Journal said today.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, also failed to report an $87,000 profit realized on the silver market in 1979 by his wife after a tip from Hunt, the newspaper said.

The omissions are possible violations of the federal Ethics in Government Act, but the House Ethics Committee has taken no action against Hansen, the newspaper said.

The Journal said Hansen's wife, Connie, has not repaid the June 1980 loan.

In addition, Hansen failed to list his ownership of a small instant printing business — Pocatello Copycat — or its gross income, or his 1977 purchase of a $98,000 townhouse in Arlington, Va., and its sale for $103,500 in 1978, the newspaper alleged.

Hansen's financial disclosure reports and Virginia and Idaho land records indicated he owed at least $300,000 to nine banks, the Journal said.

Hansen recently has refused to answer reporters' queries about his wife's financial links to Hunt, but Hansen has said he isn't required to report his wife's separate financial affairs, the Journal said.

The Journal reported that Hunt gave Mrs. Hansen the $50,000 loan to cover losses incurred in speculating on soybean futures on a tip from the Texan five years ago.

After giving her the second tip, Mrs. Hansen invested $125,000 in silver futures contracts for 625,000 troy ounces. The price of silver rose, and she gained more than $87,000 when she sold the contracts three days later.

In a futures contract, a person agrees to buy or sell a commodity later for a specified price.

During the time Mrs. Hansen made the money, the Hunt family increased its net holdings of contracts to buy silver by nearly 15 million ounces, the Journal said.

Oncologist joins staff of cancer center

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Dr. David A. Snyder, medical oncologist, has joined the staff at the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Ray Branson, MMH president, announced Snyder's arrival at a news conference this morning. He said it had been a goal of the hospital since October 1981 to recruit a medical oncologist by July 1982.

"It's with great pleasure that I introduce Dr. David Snyder as our full-time medical director of medical oncology," Branson said.

Snyder will manage the treatment of patients who are receiving chemotherapy for cancer. He joins Dr. Eric Svenson, medical director of the center and radiation oncologist.

Snyder said the physical plant is outstanding and everyone at the hospital is extremely supportive of the Allison Center.

"One of my immediate goals is to develop a good chemotherapy treatment and expand the patient number," Snyder said, adding, "I began last week seeing a fair number of patients and I suspect the 30-40 patients now seen weekly will grow."

The Allison Center has been without a full-time medical oncologist since its opening in May 1981. Since September 1981, MMH contracted with a medical oncology group — Baylor University's Sammons Cancer Center in Dallas — to have a medical oncologist come to the Center on a weekly basis.

Branson added Snyder is here full time,but he will receive assistance from the Sammons group anytime he is out of town.

According to Arlene Strickland, MMH public relations director, Snyder is an associate of the medical oncologist group which will assure necessary continuity of care for the cancer patient at the Allison Center.

Snyder completed a fellowship at the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington, Ky., in June. Prior to the fellowship, he practiced internal medicine and oncology in Brownwood for four years.

Snyder graduated with honors from the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Snyder is board-certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine and recently became eligible for board certification in oncology.

President attends Meese's son's funeral

VIENNA, Va. (AP) — With President Reagan, Mrs. Reagan and top administration officials in attendance, funeral services have been held for Scott R. Meese, the 19-year-old son of White House counselor Edwin Meese III.

More than 500 mourners, including Vice President George Bush and most of the members of the Cabinet, filled Emmanuel Lutheran Church, which the Meese family joined upon moving to this Washington suburb.

Owner of 'Annie-poo' doesn't need Midland license

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Owning a pet. Providing food and shelter, care and love for a helpless and dependent creature is an awesome responsibility. Not only are there initial costs of buying the animal, there also are vaccinations, licenses, food, medicine and other bills that will follow the animal through its life and yours.

And those expenditures are not limited to proud owners of precious puppies and frisky kittens.

Larry Hamilton paid $1,000 for his playful pet. He then had her vaccinated against distemper and rabies.

The costs didn't end there. Hamilton built a $2,000 home for her — the inside supplied with a heater to keep her warm and an outside area where she may frolic in the sunlight.

He plans to add another story to her house, complete with rocks and jungle-type foliage to make her feel more at home.

His pet, Annie-poo, is a 3-year-old, 400-pound lioness.

THE MONEY he spends to keep her exercised and housed doesn't end with the comfortable playpen-house. Or with the piece of lumber hanging from two strong pieces of wire from the top of the cage she has for amusement. Or with the bowling ball she slaps around.

Annie-poo also eats some 15-20 pounds of raw chicken or meat a day. That dramatically, and traumatically, could increase the grocery bills of any family.

"I thought about sending her to this place in California for lions," Hamilton said. "But she'd be miserable not being around people. She's used to human contact."

Hamilton took Annie-poo away from her home in a small cage where she first was kept by some Midlanders. Small children were poking sticks through the bars of the cage, he said. So he rescued her — for a small fee.

The one expense Annie-poo's owner does not have that several pet owners do is a license for ownerships.

ACCORDING TO Capt. Billy Walker, game warden on the law enforcement staff at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin, persons do not need licenses to own predators, such as lions, bobcats or coyotes.

"There are no regulations for them, unless they're set by a city ordinance or something," Walker said.

And, according to Dalton Byerly, director of the Midland Animal Control, there are no such written laws pertaining to wild animals kept within the city limits.

If the animal is housed in a facility large enough for him to have plenty of room, and as long as he is being treated properly and is no threat to the lives of others, the animal may remain in the city, Byerly said.

"We just look at them on an individual basis — when we know they exist," Byerly said. "We simply state that wild animals can be kept under conditions set by the City of Midland. It's a situation where you can go on a one-to-one basis."

BUT LICENSES are required in order to own a fur-bearing animal, Walker said.

Raccoons are fur-bearing animals. So are skunks. Skunks are illegal to own or sell in Texas; raccoons are not. Some say.

According to one raccoon owner in Midland, wild raccoons are illegal but raccoons raised in captivity and born of parents raised in captivity are not.

An employee of a local pet shop corroborates the wild vs. tame raccoon ownership theory.

But according to one of the two game wardens for Midland-Odessa, raccoons, whether raised in the woods or in a cage, are illegal to own out of season without a fur bearers' permit, period.

"You have to have a fur bearer's permit," Gary Mitchell, of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department at Midland Air Terminal, said. "You also have to be in business (of selling them). You can't have them as pets."

But according to Sec. 63.103, of the Parks and Wildlife Code, introduced in House Bill 952, legislative session unknown, provided by Byerly, "No person may sell or possess for the purpose of sale in this state a living...skunk...(or) raccoon."

"THERE WAS a new law passed during the last legislative session and the Parks and Wildlife Commission entered a repertory thing," Walker explained. "The only time a person can take a raccoon is during open season, which is January and February. Any other time it is illegal for someone to possess the animal."

Walker said it doesn't matter if the raccoon is caught in the wild or bought in a pet store, the owner must have a Fur Bearing Animal Propagation Permit when in possession of the animal during off season. The license costs $50.75 and is obtainable from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin, he said.

"I'm not sure if you can get it from the local office, or not," Walker added. "You probably can."

No one in Texas has been allowed to deal or own skunks since 1979, he said. While the Parks and Wildlife Department usually notifies pet stores about such rules, there is no regulatory agency that oversees the stores, he added.

"We try to notify them but, of course, we don't regulate pet stores. I think the fur bearing animal department regulates them but I don't know if they have to answer to anyone. I think they only have to get store licenses from the comptroller. It's one of those things that's kinda loose — like taxidermists," he said.

SKUNKS WERE outlawed as pets or for sale because they are carriers of rabies, he explained. Armadillos are illegal because they are carriers of leprosy. Horny toads are illegal to own because they are "kinda scarce. They're an endangered threat," he said.

For the owner of unusual pets, the rules vary, contradict and generally are confusing. Pet stores don't know all of the regulations, animal control officers and game wardens have differing opinions on what is legal and what is not and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin must know — it sets the rules.

But they obviously have to look it up in one of those enormous volumes of laws concerning animal ownership — because they sure don't have the answers over the phone.

More than 2,000 attend Carter funeral

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth has buried one of its leading citizens — publisher, philanthropist, businessman and civic activist Amon G. Carter Jr.

More than 2,000 people attended a funeral Monday for the publisher and board chairman of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the newspaper his father founded.

Vice President George Bush, a close friend of the Carter family, said in a telegram that Carter "cared deeply about his nation, his state and his community."

"His service to mankind in so many areas was an example to all who aspired to work for and participate in humanitarian causes," Bush said.

Carter died Saturday after suffering an apparant heart attack on a freeway in Dallas.

Carter was buried Monday afternoon at Greenwood Cemetery as Fort Worth police officers fired a 21-gun salute. The sanctuary of First United Methodist Church, which normally seats 1,500, overflowed and several hundred other mourners watched the service on closed circuit television in a nearby hall.

Carl Sykes, 75, a retired electrician who in his youth worked with Carter as a newsboy, described the newspaper publisher as "just a good ol' boy."

"He was the friend of everybody, just common as everything," said Sykes, who said years after their first meeting he met Carter again outside the newspaper plant and the publisher "was just like he always was."

Comedian Bob Hope called the Star-Telegram from Lincoln, Neb., to express his sympathy.

"We all thought he was a wonderful fellow, a great sportsman, a generous man, a fellow you hate to lose," Hope said.

Carter was a director of American Airlines, which his father helped found, and of the Texas Rangers baseball team. He also was executive board chairman of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, and a director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Members of the Texas Rangers baseball club wore black armbands during their game Monday night with the Milwaukee Brewers at Arlington Stadium.

The Rev. H. Barry Bailey said Carter "has left our city so much better...so much stronger." Bailey delivered the eulogy during services at First United Methodist.

Marine Mike Cook, center, 1982 chairman for the Toys for Tots campaign, accepts toys given by, from left, Kelly, Angie and George Jowell, children of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Jowell.

The Jowell children recently cleaned out their rooms and collected several sacks of used toys which they are giving to the Marine Corps League as Early Birds for the Toys for Tots Christmas campaign. The toys will be given to the Salvation Army in Midland.

Marines Mike Sherrod and Don Collins, other members of the Permian Detachment of the Marine Corps League, are also serving on the Toys for Tots committee.

Chairman Cook asked the public to please be as generous this year as they were last year in donating their used toys and dropping them in the collection barrels at the local fire stations after Dec. 1, in hopes that all children will have a very Merry Christmas in 1982.

Cheating is painful experience

By ANNE BEATON
Hearst Feature Service

When Wendy Leigh talks about cheating, she's not talking about the student who peeks at another's test paper or the businessman who fudges his expense account. She's talking about a man who is unfaithful to his wife, a woman who is unfaithful to her husband.

Leigh, author of "What Makes a Man GIB (Good in Bed)," will soon publish a new book, "Cheating: An American Epidemic." The book is based on interviews with cheaters, cheatees and victims (the person who is cheated upon).

LEIGH INSISTS HER BOOK is the "story behind the statistics," which at last count indicated that cheating is widespread. A 1981 study reported three out of four husbands cheat within the first two years of marriage.

"Everyone wants to be loved, to be first, best, number one," says Leigh. "Yet the statistics are frightening. I wanted to know why this was happening and how to prevent it."

According to Leigh, there are two types of cheating: The one-time hit and run affair and the long-term relationship.

MEN AND WOMEN may indulge in a one-night fling to relieve boredom, fulfill sexual fantasies they're reluctant to share with their spouses, or even to make their mates jealous. Leigh admits she once cheated on her boyfriend and told him about it "to get some excitement back" into their relationship. It worked, she said. They're still together.

LONG-TERM CHEATING, however, is a different matter altogether. Someone involved in this form of cheating usually does it because he or she is unhappy in marriage, but feels unable to get out of it. The extra-marital relationship provides the emotional fulfillment the marriage is lacking.

The person with whom the cheater cheats, however, is often someone who has trouble making a commitment and is satisfied with half a relationship. Often, he or she is a friend of the victim — that's how they met.

EVEN IF THE MARRIAGE breaks up, rarely do the cheater and cheatee end up together, usually because of bad feelings and guilt that result from the marriage's collapse.

Leigh says most people who cheat devise elaborate deceptive tactics to keep knowledge of their infidelity from their victims. They'll always pay cash (no credit cards with telltale receipts) and never use their own cars (the seat could be moved or a lipstick dropped).

THERE ARE STANDARD alibis — "Darling, I'm working late at the office." One man told his wife he was at the health spa whenever he saw his mistress. It was the perfect excuse, he said, for being tired when he got home.

Still, Leigh says, there is often collusion between cheaters and victims. For instance, a person changes her makeup or loses weight in an attempt to be more attractive to her new partner. But the victim chooses to ignore the signs, usually out of fear of losing the mate for good.

WHEN CONFRONTATIONS DO OCCUR, the behavior of male and female victims differs greatly. If a woman discovers that a man is cheating on her, she tends to attack him rather than the other woman. Jean Harris shot Hy Tarnower, not Lynn Tryforas. But a man who discovers that a woman is cheating on him usually attacks the male cheatee and not the female cheater.

Leigh believes that cheating has become common because of changing social values. She said a 32-year-old salesman who had been married for 10 years but regularly cheated on his wife in hit-and-run affairs summed up the national conscience when he told her: "If I was married to Raquel Welch, I'd still cheat. It's out there, so why not go out and get some of it?"

IS THERE ANYTHING you can do to prevent your lover from cheating? Leigh advises that you make it absolutely clear that you won't tolerate it.

"I always let men know right from the start of the relationship that if they cheat it will cause a very negative reaction in me. And I've never been a victim — as far as I know."

More women today becoming workaholics

NEW YORK (AP)—Workaholism, traditionally thought to be a male syndrome, is affecting more and more women as they break through "chauvinistic barriers" and fill increasing numbers of top executive positions, says Dr. Ethel Person, a psychoanalyst at the New York State Psychiatric Institute in New York City.

"Most women who suffer from this problem don't regard themselves as workaholics," she said. "They simply can't see how others derive any pleasure from non-work-related activities."

Workaholics tend to avoid relating to family or friends in a personal or emotional manner, Ms. Person explains. Reluctance or defensiveness in admitting any problem is rationalized by the workaholics' belief that they provide "the better things in life" for dependents, things that are possible only because of the high salaries they earn.

"Women workaholics are more noticeable now as the working wife and working mother become common societal roles," Ms. Person points out, "but females have been workaholics inside the household for centuries.

"Compulsive housecleaners and overorganizers are also workaholics," she adds. "They 'take care' of husbands and children instead of relating to them."

One way to spot workaholics is by their inability to enjoy themselves on days off from the office, the psychoanalyst says, since they can't relax and they feel guilty about not working. These guilt feelings often are unintentional smokescreens created to stave off personal contact, she says.

Frequently depressed on family outings or vacations, the workaholic may take up a leisure activity with fierce determination, Ms. Person notes.

"Playing six hours of tennis on Saturday or rigidly adhering to jogging schedules each day are simply other obsessions unconsciously used to put distance between workaholics and personal relationships."

"Years ago, I used to complain that my husband was too busy climbing the job ladder to enjoy his family," one businesswoman said. "He became a success and began to relax at the same time my career began to take off. Now he's the one who complains that I'm never around!"

Anderson named Secretary of Month

Florene Anderson, land secretary for Watson and Cox Oil & Gas in Midland, has been selected as the July 1982 Secretary of the Month by the Permian Chapter of the Professional Secretaries International. Active in the Midland organization, she has served as president of the Permian Chapter and has held the additional offices of vice-president, treasurer, recording secretary and corresponding secretary. In 1980 she was chosen Secretary of the Year for the Permian Chapter.

Mrs Andersn graduated from Gainesville Junior College in Gainesville, and completed a secretarial course at Draughan's Business College in Dallas. She has attended various classes at Midland College and the American Management Association Seminar for Executive Secretaries in Houston.

Married to Bentley Anderson for 35 years, they have a family of three children. Mrs. Anderson is active in their church, the First Christian Church, and is also a member of the Lioness 700 Club and the Desk and Derrick Club of Midland.

Tripods and vacations

By ERMA BOMBECK

For those of you who think pictures grow on postcards, I will explain that a tripod is a three-legged stand that supports a camera so it will remain perfectly still.

When fully extended a tripod will stand waist high and weigh in at five or six pounds.

Every year, five million amateur camera enthusiasts leave home WITHOUT one. My husband is not one of them.

For eight years he has dragged that tripod along on our vacation. He has yet to use it. So what good is it, you ask? For starters, it smashes down my dresses so that whatever I wear to dinner, someone will look at the permanent indentation and remark, "Oh, I see you own a tripod."

When you run your suitcase through security, bells will chime, buzzers will beep and you have to ask them when was the last time Great Britain was attacked by tripods.

It gives young cabbies and bellhops their first American hernia. Oh, and once when the towel bars were full of laundry, I hung a few socks on it to dry.

Mostly what it does is make my husband feel like Ansel Adams.

I know now I should never have married an amateur photographer, but when you're 35 and not moving, you panic. My life has been a series of, "Would you hold this lens?" "Stand still, I'm losing my light," and, "So the bus left without us. There's always another one."

Blessed are the women who marry a man who photographs the Grand Canyon from a moving car, through the windshield with an instamatic. They don't know how lucky they are.

My husband's version of the tripod is quite different than mine. He will tell you about the hummingbird he saw with crossed eyes, the sun setting over the Kremlin that looked like a hammer and sickle, and the dramatic picture of the men on Easter Island facing away from the sea. What he won't tell you is that his tripod was in the suitcase in the hotel room all the time.

We didn't take the tripod this year. I said it was either it or me. He thought about it a week before leaving it behind. The guide at Christ the Redeemer Statue in Rio said, "I assume all you serious photographers have a tripod."

I knew what I had to do. Drop to all fours, balance a camera on my head and remain still for as long as it took.

DEAR ABBY

Sex is a sparkler; love is a flame

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What is the difference between "having sex" and "making love"? — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: In "having sex," the name of the game is sexual gratification. It's a selfish exercise, a physical release in which the partner is a faceless object. (Anyone will do.)

In "making love," one is motivated by an overwhelming desire to give pleasure, express affection, communicate one's feelings of caring. It's the ultimate in sharing. In making love, the partner is a very special person. (No one else will do.)

Love is a metropolis. Sex is a whistlestop. Love is an eternal torch. Sex is a sputnik!

DEAR ABBY: I would like to make you aware of a new fraud springing up in our land. It involves dental insurance. Now that most people are getting dental insurance, it seems many dentists probe and dig as hard as they can in order to loosen patients' old fillings and crack them. That way, the filling will either fall out, or food particles and bacteria will get beneath the filling and start a new cavity.

If there is no trouble in your mouth, they will MAKE it.

The last dentist I had showed me X-rays of "my" mouth, and I noticed the teeth in the X-rays were all crisscrossed. My teeth are wide-spaced! He argued with me, insisting they were my X-rays, but I'm a nurse and I know something about reading X-rays.

Another racket is drilling too deep, damaging a nerve and then sending the patient to an oral surgeon or a root-canal specialist who gives the dentist a kickback.

My husband suffered agonizing pain, time lost from work and a lot of needless expense for root-canal work that was probably caused intentionally by his dentist.

Please print this as a warning to all people. — ON TO THEM IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR ON: If anyone suspects his dentist of unethical practices, he should report that dentist to the local county dental society. There is a dental review board that investigates every complaint thoroughly. I assure you the board will get to the root of the matter!

DEAR ABBY: We are planning a surprise 40th anniversary celebration for our parents, but we do not want the guests (most of whom will be our parents' friends) to bring presents. I was told that you printed a very beautiful and tasteful invitation, suggesting that a written recollection of a "shared memory" be the gift.

Will you please run it again? — ABBY FANS

DEAR FANS: With pleasure:

"The children of Ivar and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or event that you have shared with them, and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Catalogia: One man's answer to catalog shopping

By BRENDA FINE
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Remember the watch with all the gadgets that would be so perfect for your nephew's graduation? You saw it in one of those mail order catalogs.

That's where the problem begins. Sure, it was in a catalog. But which one? And is it still around somewhere, or did you throw it out?

The great catalog hunt frustrates lots of people. Now someone has done something about it.

Hazard Reeves, a Tuxedo, N.Y., millionaire inventor, recently unveiled his latest doohickey: Catalogia.

It works like this:

Instead of hunting through stacks of old catalogs, you simply visit your local Catalogia store. You describe that digital watch to the computer operator, who quickly punches in the information and presents you with a print-out that lists several possibilities of watches, as well as their catalogs and page numbers. You then take those catalogs and retire to a nearby comfortable chair and comparison shop the selections. Maybe you prefer it in blue; maybe one company sells it for less money.

Decision reached, you return to the clerk who punches some more computer keys to make the sale, takes your money and that's it. The watch will be mailed directly to your home by the catalog company.

O.L. "Pete" Bibeau, president of Catalogia, reports that they now have exclusive contracts with 270 different catalog companies and are considering another 360 requests to sign on. Although Catalogia is aiming for about 500 in total, they screen requests carefully, says Bibeau, weeding out those firms with less than sterling complaint or fulfillment records.

Bibeau explained that Catalogia's diversity service will allow you to "sit in the same chair and outfit an Arctic expedition or a Caribbean cruise, send a gift to your aunt in California or order a complete set of leather furniture for your den — all delivered directly to one's doorstep."

There is one catch. There are only two Catalogia stores in operation: in Tuxedo Park, N.Y., and in Montvale, N.J.

But not to worry. The company projects that there will be 10 stores nationwide by September, 35 by December, 100 by next July and 3,000 in the next three to five years.

According to Pam Cromey, a Catalogia vice president, early franchising efforts will concentrate on high-income suburban areas, staying clear of the big cities until later on.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Large ice chests can be dangerous

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm hoping that with your help, a warning can be spread across the country on the danger of large ice chests left within children's reach.

While I was working in my garage, my children were there with me. It took just an instant, but I noticed my 4-year-old daughter closing the lid of the ice chest on my 2-year-old son. I knew that she was capable of snapping the plastic lock and in a horrifying flash I saw that ice chest as a plastic coffin. I knew if I had not been so vigilant Gregory would have suffocated within minutes.

We now keep a boat strap with a latch on it to prevent the lid from being opened by small prying hands. Please, we cannot stress enough how important it is to check the garage or anywhere children play to make sure there's no danger of this happening to your children.

Thank God! We were so lucky. — Jim and Debbie Pastor

+ + +

Please parents, and all adults, read and heed. Don't be careless, it only takes a minute for disaster to strike. — Heloise

TRIPLE THE AMOUNT

Dear Heloise: Even with today's inflation, I refuse to deny myself the luxury of the expensive bath powder I have used for years.

However, remembering the smooth, cool consistency of corn starch that I used on my babies, I now take an empty bath powder box and mix one-third powder and two-thirds corn starch.

The corn starch absorbs the scent of the powder in a few days, and I have 3 boxes of powder for the price of one. — Pat Monroe

+ + +

I do the same, but I mix baking soda with my "special" powder. — Heloise

DECORATE CANDLES

Dear Heloise: You can decorate candles by melting tips of colored crayons and letting the soft wax drop on the candle in interesting designs.

Put candles in the refrigerator overnight. They will burn more slowly and will not drip. — Mrs. W. Haggard

PANTY HOSE IDEAS

Dear Heloise: Take nylon panty hose, cut around and around the leg (starting at the ankle) till you have one long string or piece.

You can do so many things with this: Crochet granny squares, knit, make a hook rug. Let your imagination run wild.

Whatever you make, it will wear very well and can be tossed into the washer. — L. Dreher

FREE BOWLS

Dear Heloise: There are quite a few uses for those 2-liter soft drink plastic bottles — the type with the hard plastic bottom.

I cut above the black plastic bottom with a razor or scissors. I use the bottoms for my kitty's food and water dishes. The insides of these bowls are rounded, which makes them easy to clean with just a whisk of a pot scrubber.

Another idea that I think is handy: They make ideal cereal and dessert bowls for camping trips. If any should get lost, they can always be replaced "free." — E.M. Brenden

RECYCLED DRESSES

Dear Heloise: When my washable dresses become worn in places or somehow become damaged, I recycle them into aprons.

To make a large half apron, cut the best part of the skirt and a strip large enough to be the tie.

Sew the tie to the waist, hem the sides and bottom. There you have it, one, two, three, it's finished. — A Thrifty Reader

Aga Khan dedicates mosque in Canada

BURNABY, British Columbia (AP) — Praising Canada for its religious tolerance, the Aga Khan dedicated the site of a mosque to be built for his Ismaili followers in British Columbia.

Aga Khan

About 400 guests sat under a blue-and-white striped tent Monday to listen to the dedication speech by his Royal Highness Prince Karim Aga Khan IV, the spiritual leader of 20 million Ismaili Moslems.

The Aga Khan said Canada is "a country of the new world which has extended the hand of friendship to countless peoples from all over the world, welcoming them when turmoil, racialism, bigotry or envy were destroying their lives."

This referred to the expulsion of Moslems from Eastern Africa, especially Uganda, in the early 1970s. Nearly 16,000 Ismaili Moslems emigrated to Canada during that time. The Ismaili community in British Columbia numbers around 7,000.

The Aga Khan, 45, who is celebrating his 25th anniversary as imam, is the 49th hereditary descendant of the Prophet Mohammed. He was born in Geneva, spent his childhood in Nairobi, Kenya, and attended school in Switzerland before studying at Harvard University.

Although a citizen of Iran, he lives most of the year in a French chateau from which he directs his spiritual and financial empire.

With the Aga Khan was his wife, her Highness Begum Aga Khan, a former English model who was raised in India.

Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says the so-called permissive society has been harmful to women.

"Parents have been told by self-appointed experts that their duties to each other and to their children should be balanced by more emphasis on self-fulfillment," she told about 500 members of a national women's group composed mainly of housewives on Monday. "Has that benefitted women? Far from it."

"I remain totally convinced that when children are young, however busy we may be...the most important thing of all is to devote enough time and care to their needs and problems," said Mrs. Thatcher, 56, who is the mother of twins.

Mrs. Thatcher also described women as emanicipated, but said men have a way to go.

"We've got emancipated. Men will take a lot longer. I have always said, if you want a speech to be made, ask a man. If you want something done, ask a woman."

Asked how she dealt with hecklers in Britain's male-dominated Parliament, she responded, "You just keep calm and get on with the job. The silliness is theirs for shouting."

Procter & Gamble Co. sues over Satanism rumors

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

According to a Procter & Gamble Co. spokeswoman, rumors linking the company and its trademark with devil worship and Satanism have reached intolerable proportions, forcing the giant corporation to file seven suits against individuals for spreading "false and malicious" statements.

Fliers calling for a boycott of Procter & Gamble Co. (P&G) products recently surfaced in Midland, coinciding with what Kathy Gilbert, company spokeswoman, said is general expansion of the rumors from the West coast to the South and Midwest.

P&G filed suit against four individuals July 20 charging that its character was libeled by the false claims. Three additional suits were filed earlier by the company, which produces a range of cleaning, personal care and food items. Ms. Gilbert said six of the seven people involved work for P&G competitors.

Ms. Gilbert said the company is mystified by the source of the rumors, which apparently originated in California, Oregon and Washington in 1980 before moving south and east and intensifying in recent months.

She said the company decided to take action after receiving more than 12,000 phone calls from consumers about the rumors in April and May and 15,000 in June. Ms. Gilbert said P&G normally receives a few hundred calls per month on a variety of topics, yet continues to receive 200-300 calls per day inquiring about the rumors.

Several P&G sales people have either been assaulted, had their cars sprayed with paint or had their tires slashed since the rumors began, Ms. Gilbert said.

"It's that kind of harrassment we don't need," she said. "The continued perpetuation of the rumor has been such a major disturbance, we felt like we had to go more on the offense."

Ms. Gilbert said the company will continue to investigate the rumors and more lawsuits are possible.

"People need to be made accountable for what they are passing off as fact," she said.

Typically, the rumors maintain that a P&G executive praised Satan on a nationally broadcast television talk show. The rumors also claim that P&G's trademark, a man-in-the-moon gazing upon a field of thirteen stars, contains Satanic symbolism.

The trademark, registered with the U.S. Patent Office in 1882, began as a series of identifying marks used by dockworkers, Ms. Gilbert said. A man-in-the-moon, a decorative doodle popular in the mid-1800s, was later added.

Ms. Gilbert said P&G received letters from several talk show producers attesting that no P&G executive appeared on their programs, nor was the subject of Satanism discussed. The company also received letters debunking the rumors from several religious leaders.

"Nobody's even seen the show," Ms. Gilbert said. "Which makes sense, because there never was a show."

The flier appearing in Midland, headed with the phrase: "In God We Trust," states that the owner of P&G appeared on the Merv Griffin Show, a claim refuted by a letter from the show's producer.

"He said he told Satan that if he would help him prosper, he would give him his heart and soul when he died," the flier states. "He gives Satan all the credit for his riches. So would you please take copies of this letter and the list of his products and pass them out so Christians will not give anymore business or money to him. Use what you have, but buy no more. All these products have a satanic insignia on them. It is a quarter moon shape and has the three 6's (666) and ram's horns which is the antichrist symbols."

The Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin has received several calls concerning the rumors and published a notice disclaiming them in its member newsletter.

P&G is headquartered in Cincinnati, Ohio, employing 40,000 people in the U.S. and 60,000 worldwide. The company markets about 58 products and recorded more than $11 billion in sales for fiscal year 1980-81.

Former postal service worker to be re-tried in businessman's death

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Testimony in Brooker T. Green's second trial for the slaying of Midland businessman R.J. Morris last Nov. 14 in the wake of a gambling quarrel was to begin this afternoon in Midland's 238th State District Court.

The case was delayed Monday after the jury panel dropped below the required 32 needed to select 12 jurors. Each adversary party — the defense and prosecuting lawyers — is allowed 10 strikes by which each attorney may reject 10 prospective jurors in reaching the 12 needed for a trial.

"We're going to have to get more people to finish this jury," Presiding Judge Vann Culp told the 40-member panel Monday afternoon.

Three panelists eliminated themselves as prospective jurors due to preconceived notions or hearsay about Green's guilt or innocence; eleven others said that they could not consider rendering the minimum punishment, a two-year probated term, for the offense — voluntary manslaughter — with which Green is charged. The law requires that a jury be able to consider the range of punishment, which in this case is two years to 20 years in the state penitentiary. The 11 panelists on voir dire — preliminary examination — said that they could not imagine a circumstance under which they could recommend a two-year probated prison term for manslaughter.

Judge Culp then told the 11 panelists to report to Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Courtroom this morning for jury selection in another trial.

Panelists in the Green case were to report to Culp's courtroom at 1 p.m. today for jury selection.

Green, a 42-year-old suspended U.S. Postal Service supervisor, is charged with killing Morris, 50, after the two had differences — squabbled and scuffled — over a dice game in the Amusement Parlor behind King's Sandwich Shop in The Flats on Midland's southeast quarter. Morris, 50, was shot moments later through the plate glass of his son's M&M Liquor Store while he was visiting with his daughter-in-law and grandchild in the store on that Saturday night.

Green, who was accused of shooting Morris with a rifle while Green stood just outside the store, claimed self-defense in his first trial, which ended in a mistrial last March 13. The 11-member jury had found Green guilty of voluntary manslaughter, though the prosecutors, District Attorney Vern Martin and Assistant DA Marian Bentley, had sought a murder conviction. The jurors could not agree on punishment.

"You can't have a conviction without punishment," defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch had explained moments after the judge declared a hung jury and dismissed the jurors.

And Green, noted Martin, had "been acquitted of murder" by virtue of the first jury's manslaughter verdict.

State statutes define voluntary manslaughter as a slaying under the "immediate influence of sudden passion arising from adequate cause," which, according to the Texas Criminal Code, could be anger, rage, resentment or terror.

The first jury had started at 12 members but one juror — a woman — reportedly suffered a broken foot in a mishap on the courthouse square before testimony had begun.

Green is accused of firing five rifle shots into the liquor store, one slug struck Morris in the heart. Green, who testified that he had gotten the rifle out of the trunk of his car which was parked near the store, claimed that Morris had threatened to kill him. He said Morris was packing a pistol.

The first jury heard testimony from 28 witnesses, including the defendant, Morris' son and daughter, other witnesses to the shooting, and fellow dice players and spectators in the gaming parlor.

In deliberating on punishment, the jurors reportedly were at extremes on punishment and could not reach a compromise.

The jurors in the second trial are not to be apprised of the first trial.

Green, a $27,000-a-year postal supervisor, has been off the job since last November; is now self-employed but is to petition for his back pay and the reinstatement of his USPS job if he is acquitted of the charges.

School-contruction policy adopted

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite dissent by some members, the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System has adopted a policy requiring state-supported schools to submit details on construction requests to the 1983 Legislature for board consideration.

Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth told the board Friday some $670 million in construction requests have been indicated by the schools in their budget requests for fiscal 1984 and 1985.

A summary of the requests by institutions received thus far by the Coordinating Board shows a grand total of $670,380,193 in requests to the Legislature for the coming biennium.

Of that, $396,372,631 is for new construction.

Those requests do not include work for Texas A&M University, The University of Texas at Austin or Texas Tech University.

GM reports second quarter profit

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

Despite the recession's deteriorating effect on sales, the nation's largest automaker has posted a profit for the second quarter, but losses more than tripled at another major car company. Meanwhile, an interest rate that affects business borrowing took another dip.

General Motors Corp. said Monday it earned $560 million in the three months ended June 30, up 8.8 percent from a profit of $514.6 million in the second quarter of 1981. Sales at the No. 1 domestic carmaker were off 4.8 percent to $17.2 billion from $18.02 billion.

American Motors Corp. lost $68.7 million in the second quarter, its ninth straight quarterly loss. The loss at the fifth-largest automaker was more than three times its $19.9 million loss in the second quarter of 1981.

AMC sales fell to $667.2 million from $721.8 million.

A study released in Washington by the National Science Foundation said domestic automakers must undergo "close to a cultural revolution" to survive against foreign competition. It said the U.S. industry may move much of its production overseas, with two-thirds of all cars sold in America possibly built abroad.

Two major banks — No. 4 Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York and No. 6 Chemical Bank of New York — cut their prime lending rates to 15.5 percent, matching the rate's lowest level since 1980. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Winston-Salem, N.C., ranked 32nd by deposits, matched the reduction, and others were expected to follow suit.

Last week, a 16 percent prime rate swept the industry. The prime is the base used by banks to calculate interest on loans to their best corporate customers.

Other short-term rates also have been tumbling. For instance, the rate on federal funds, overnight loans among banks, traded as low as 10.625 percent Monday after hovering around 14 percent earlier in the month. Since the fed funds rate reflects banks' borrowing costs, it is viewed as an indication of the direction of other short-term rates, such as those on business loans.

In other economic news:

—The National Association of Realtors said in Washington that its monthly survey showed resales of single-family houses at an annual rate of 1.95 million in June, up 2.6 percent from the May sales pace. But June resales were off 27.2 percent from June 1981 and 51.5 percent from the peak level of November 1978.

—The American Iron and Steel Institute said steel production rose to 1.292 million tons in the week ended July 24, up 3.7 percent from the previous week. But it noted that production for the year so far still is 35.4 percent below the level of the same period a year ago.

—A government study said health care spending continued to outpace inflation in 1981, growing 15.1 percent to $287 billion. The sum represented spending of $1,225 for every American and accounted for 9.8 percent of the gross national product — a measure of all goods and services produced by the economy.

—The Canadian Pulp and Paper Association said newsprint production in June totaled 652,000 metric tons, off 12.2 percent from May's 743,000 metric tons and a decline of 12.9 percent from 749,000 metric tons in June 1981. Despite the drop, U.S. newsprint inventories remained at near-record levels with stocks on hand June 30 totaling 1.564 million metric tons, or a 61-day supply.

DOE wastes tax dollars

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department allows government money to be wasted because it is not controlling spending in a $4 billion research program closely enough, the head of the General Accounting Office said today.

Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher said there are "numerous weaknesses in internal controls" in the research program.

"In some cases the control weaknesses have resulted in waste and misuse of federal funds and property, while in other cases, the potential for waste and misuse exists," Bowsher said.

He offered no estimate of the possible loss to the government.

In testimony prepared for a hearing by the Senate Governmental Affairs permanent subcommittee on investigations, Bowsher said most of the problems involved government purchases and property management. But he said there were also weaknesses in some payroll and travel areas.

Bowsher said the problems included direct contract awards; improper use of consultants to hire employees; retroactive contracts; lax controls over payment for services; and questionable hiring of former employees as consultants.

"Many of these problems are often aggravated, and sometimes caused, by DOE's practice of directing the laboratories to award contracts to firms selected by the department," Bowsher said.

The department's inspector general, James R. Richards, acknowledged problems at the research facilities, and said "substantial attention" is being given to them.

The subcommittee staff, which also has been investigating the program, said some of the problems with the research centers stem from their "university atmosphere."

The staff, in a statement, said the research centers were reluctant to clamp down because "the campus-like environment might be lost and scientists would be offended at having to open their briefcases for inspection or account for government property entrusted to their care."

The staff also said the centers were concerned that devoting more money to security would mean less money for research.

The Energy Department operates 12 national laboratories, which are owned by the government and operated privately under contract; and five energy technology centers, which are both owned and operated by the government.

Auto industry making comeback despite low sales

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Despite car sales that continue to lag behind year-ago levels, the U.S. auto industry is making a comeback into black ink, led by giant General Motors Corp.'s best quarterly showing in three years.

The No. 1 U.S. carmaker on Monday said the $560 million second-quarter profit amounted to $1.82 per share and compared with a $514.6 million profit, or $1.72 per share, in the same period in 1981, an increase of 8.8 percent.

Chrysler Corp. reported last week it earned $106.9 million in the second quarter of this year, its largest quarterly profit in 5½ years.

Ford Motor Co. earnings are due out later this week, but analysts estimate the No. 2 U.S. carmaker will show a profit of up to $120 million.

Only American Motors Corp. has reported a second-quarter loss. On Monday, AMC said it lost $68.7 million, or $1.24 per share. That compares with a loss of $19.9 million, or 35 cents per share, in the second quarter of last year.

The quarterly loss was AMC's ninth straight.

Volkswagen of America Inc., a subsidiary of Volkswagenwerk A.G. of West Germany, does not release earnings.

Combined with first-quarter earnings and excluding Ford's yet-to-be-released second-quarter report, the recent reports show the industry has earned $470 million in the first half of this year. That compares with a $25.2 million loss in the first half last year.

Yet, car sales for the first six months of this year were down 11.3 percent from 1981, from 3,308,469 to 2,934,833.

Analysts say that while second-quarter earnings traditionally are the industry's strongest, this year's profits indicate the companies' rigorous cost cutting has begun to bear fruit.

For the first six months of the year, GM earned $688.3 million, or $2.23 a share, off 2.3 percent from profit of $704.9 million, or $2.35 a share, in the 1981 first half. Sales fell 5 percent to $31.87 billion from $33.7 billion.

GM last year earned $333 million.

While worldwide car and truck sales in the second quarter of 1982 totaled 1,833,000, down from 2,066,000 in 1981, dollar sales were down just 4.8 percent to $17.1 million from 1981's second-quarter showing of $18 million, GM said.

GM Chairman Roger B. Smith and President F. James McDonald attributed the profit to cost cutting and improved manufacturing efficiency. They also said second-quarter earnings for this year and last were favorably affected by gains from foreign exchange and translation and earnings of GM's financing and insurance subsidiaries.

AMC's $68.7 million loss in the second quarter combined with a $51 million first-quarter deficit brought its losses for the first six months of the year to $119.7 million, the company said.

In 1981, AMC lost $136.6 million.

AMC said its sales for the second quarter of this year were down 7.6 percent, from $722 million in the period in 1981 to $667 million this year. Half-year sales were $1.27 billion compared to $1.32 billion in the same period last year.

Worldwide sales of Jeeps and cars in the second quarter were 66,393 vehicles. AMC said that is down 29 percent from 93,541 in the period in 1981.

AMC Chairman Paul Tippett blamed the red ink on the automaker's closing of its Jeep and car plants for model changeover, "extraordinary one-time costs" to launch its new Alliance model and devaluation of the peso in Mexico, where AMC sells cars and Jeeps.

Braniff Airways files van-full of bankruptcy papers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Braniff Airways Inc. has a net worth of $18.5 million, according to massive records unloaded from a moving van and filed in federal bankruptcy court here.

The airways subsidiary Monday was the last subsidiary of Braniff International Corp. to disclose its financial condition to the federal bankruptcy court where the corporation filed a petition May 13 asking to reorganize under protection of the court.

The records of Braniff Airways were brought here in a moving van and included 21 boxes of records showing that the airline had debts of $750.4 million and assets of $768.9 million. The records delivered here included a 20,000-page list of liabilities and assets.

The debts, according to the records, included $467.5 million secured and $258.3 million unsecured.

The records were filed with U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers who will study the data to determine if Braniff should continue efforts to reorganize and resume operations under protection of his court.

Flowers could order liquidation of the firm if he finds that a reorganization is unlikely. The judge said 10 days ago that he believes Braniff has a chance of regaining its financial health.

The judge has granted permission for Braniff Realty Co., another subsidiary, to reorganize.

Braniff International Corp., the holding company, earlier this month disclosed it owes $117.1 million in debt, $100.3 of which is unsecured.

Braniff suddenly ceased operations May 12, leaving travelers stranded and employees startled by the sudden move. The bankruptcy petition was filed only hours later by officials who awakened the judge at his home.

Records filed Monday show that the airline owes $15.1 million in wages to pilots, flight attendants, reservation clerks, mechanics and other employees. The airline said management believes the unpaid wages should be given priority over other debt.

The company also owed $7.8 million in federal taxes, records showed.

The airline's jet fleet, other equipment and supplies were valued at $508.5 million, but the airline management did not say how the value of the aircraft was derived.

In a related move Monday, the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport Board formally appealed a ruling issued July 16 by Flowers that the board could not evict Braniff from a terminal or other property the airline is leasing at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

In his ruling, Flowers stipulated that Braniff lease at least 50 percent of its terminal to other carriers. Braniff management says more than 50 percent of the terminal has been leased to other airlines.

The appeal will be assigned to a federal judge for a jury trial to determine whether Flowers' ruling will be overturned to allow the board to lease the entire terminal to other airlines.

Reagan lauds steelworkers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A union official who received a telephone call from President Reagan told him steel workers were "hanging on, hoping the economy would turn around," and in the meantime were helping out their laid-off colleagues.

Reagan telephoned the Aliquippa Pa., union local Monday to praise steel workers for contributing part of their paychecks to feed furloughed workers.

"He said it sets a good example for the rest of the country because we are helping ourselves," said Pete Eritano, president of United Steelworkers Local 1211, who took the surprise call.

"He congratulated us and said he thought that was the 'spirit of America,'" Eritano said.

Reagan had read a story about a food fund established at the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.'s Aliquippa Works, where 1,100 on-the-job steelworkers agreed to have $1 to $20 deducted from their biweekly checks.

The union says the contributions will amount to $40,000 by the end of the year — to buy $25 food certificates for furloughed workers.

"God bless you all in Aliquippa for doing such an outstanding deed," Reagan told Eritano in the five-minute call from the White House.

Mort Allen, press duty officer at the White House, confirmed the call to the union hall, where "the secretary thought it was a prank. I was caught off guard at first. I was stunned," Eritano said.

Eritano said he told Reagan about the hard times the steelworkers are having. In Aliquippa, about 3,700 of the local's 8,600 members have gotten pink slips.

Because of poor business conditions nationwide, one-third of the basic steel industry workforce, or about 100,000 people, are laid off and another 29,000 are working short weeks as mills sputter along at less than half capacity, the bleakest employment and production statistics since 1933.

"I told him we were hanging on, that we're hoping the economy will turn around and that we wouldn't be able to hang on much longer," Eritano said.

"He said he still had faith in his policies, but that they wouldn't work overnight. He said he still thinks his program will work," he added.

"After he called, there were probably a million things I could have asked him, such as foreign imports. But I was just stunned."

Eritano said Reagan "didn't hurt himself by calling. We may not agree with his politics, but just the idea that he called and cared meant something to us."

Hughes Tool reports income down

HOUSTON (SWN) — Hughes Tool Company (NYSE-HT) reported net sales of $426.6 million, down three percent, and net income of $45.4 million, down 28 percent, for the three months ended June 30, 1982, compared with sales of $438.2 million and net income of $62.9 million for the second quarter of 1981.

Earnings per share for the most recent quarter were $.81, compared with $1.13 during the same period a year ago. For the first six months earnings per share were $2.00 compared with $2.08 a year ago.

For the six motnhs ended June 30, net sales were $921.1 million, an increase of 11.3 percent over the $827.8 million reported for the same period in 1981. Net income for the six months this year was $112.8 million, down 2.4 percent from the $115.6 million for the first half last year.

Gross margin rate for the first six months this year was 36.2 percent, compared with 37.1 percent for the first half of 1981. ■The drop in North American drilling activity during the first half is the most severe decline in a six month period in the history of our company. This has resulted in severe pressure on the margins of most of the company's divisions,■ said James R. Lesch, chairman and chief executive officer of Hughes Tool Company.

The effective tax rate for the six months was 34 percent, compared with 37.5 percent a year ago, due primarily to higher relative foreign earnings, to higher investment tax credit and DISC earnings not currently subject to tax relative to lower pre-tax earnings.

The decline in U.S. and Canadian rotary rig activity continued through the first half of 1982. Although rotary rigs running in the U.S. averaged approximately the same as the first half of 1981, the activity in the second quarter of 1982 was 17 percent below the second quarter of 1981. On July 19, the U.S. rig count was 2,694, a decline of 40.5 percent from the 4,530 rigs running at year-end 1981.

Canadian rotary rigs averaged 202 for the six months, down 31 percent from the first half of 1981.

Drilling in areas outside of the U.S. and Canada remained strong, with rigs averaging 1,470 for the first six months, up 7.3 percent from the same period last year.

Economic signs; Interests down, home sales up, steel better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, banks and savings and loan associations may pay as much as 12.19 percent interest on $10,000-minimum six-month money market certificates, down from 12.7 percent.

In addition, S&Ls may pay as much as 10.559 percent and commercial banks as much as 10.309 percent interest on $7,500-minimum three-month certificates, down from last week's 11.14 percent and 10.89 percent.

The yields were set Monday following the Treasury's latest auction of securities.

About $5.5 billion in six-month T-bills were auctioned at an average discount rate of 11.378 percent, down from the 11.441 percent of last Monday. The government also sold about $5.5 billion in three-month bills at an average rate of 10.559 percent, down from 11.14 percent.

Monday's yields, a measure of the cost of government borrowing from the public, were the lowest since the Dec. 7 levels of 10.772 percent for six-month bills and 10.404 percent for three-month bills.

Also starting today, S&Ls may pay as much as 14 percent and commercial banks as much as 13.75 percent on 2½-year "small saver" certificates. Those rates change next Tuesday. Tax-exempt, one-year "all-savers" certificates issued by financial institutions through Aug. 7 will pay 9.99 percent interest when held to maturity.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Resales of single-family houses rose slightly in June, the National Association of Realtors says, but the volume still is far below year-ago levels, largely because of high mortgage rates.

The real estate group said Monday its monthly survey showed resales of single-family houses were up 2.6 percent in June from the month before to at an annual rate of 1.95 million.

Jack Carlson, the group's chief economist, said however, resales are off 27.2 percent from June 1981 and 51.5 percent from the peak level of November 1978.

Interest rates for home loans from mortgage companies and savings and loan associations have been running in the range of 16 percent to 17 percent for more than a year.

The report quoted Carlson as saying the current depressed state of housing is "easily traceable" to record mortgage interest rates.

The most recent government figures on sales of new houses showed such sales rising in May though they were still at a low annual rate. Figures for June are due later this week.

NEW YORK (AP) — Only a big government-industry project can provide the money and technology to spur production of oil from shale as a substitute for imported oil, Mobil said.

The nation's second largest oil company after Exxon Corp. issued a statement Monday proposing such a joint venture at a time when major oil companies are abandoning costly projects to develop synthetic fuel from oil-bearing rock.

Mobil said a number of companies had indicated their willingness to discuss such a venture. John Flint, a Mobil spokesman, said such a meeting could take place early this fall.

Shell Oil Co. said it had been contacted by Mobil about long-term alternate sources of energy, but that Mobil's letter was more of an inquiry of interest rather than a firm proposal.

Gulf Oil Corp. Chairman James E. Lee agreed to meet with Mobil to discuss ideas, but there has been no further communication between the companies since an initial exchange of letters in late June and early this month, said Gulf spokeswoman Susan Breon in Pittsburgh.

Flint said several companies were approached in late June, but he declined to identify them.

NEW YORK (AP) — Steel production rose to 1.292 million tons in the week ended July 24, an increase of 3.7 percent from the previous week's 1.246 million tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

The industry's production amounted to 43.8 percent of capacity during the week, compared with 42.2 percent in the previous week, the institute said Monday.

Estimated figures for the year to date showed production at 46.967 million net tons, a decrease of 35.4 percent from the 72.712 million net tons in the previous year.

Production so far this year used 54.3 percent of capacity, compared with 83.8 percent a year earlier.

Net tonnage by district for the week ended July 24: Northeast Coast 168,000; Buffalo 5,000; Pittsburgh 167,000; Youngstown 65,000; Cleveland 105,000; Detroit 131,000; Chicago 349,000; Cincinnati 75,000; St. Louis 50,000; Southern 116,000; and Western 61,000.

Abila keeps record perfect with third round KO

Hostetter captures Texas heaveyweight tiltle

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Midland bantamweight Richard Abila went into his fight against Houston's Enrique Muniz with a lot of determination. It was his first fight near home and he wanted to win it for his friends and for what it could do for his career. He also wanted the fight to end early.

"Richard was determined, being at home and against a guy who's fought some class fighters, to take the guy out," said Abila's manager Rick Fleetwood. "He was determined the guy wouldn't go the distance. Since Muniz has been in against some world class fighters (the likes of seventh-ranked Billy Robledino), it was Richard's chance to show what he could do. None of the world class fighters took Muniz out that early."

And end early it did.

With a crowd of approximately 2,500 fans rooting him on, Abila, who now sports a 7-0 record with four knockouts, came out smoking. He quickly discovered Muniz' weaknesses and proceeded to take full advantage of them.

The first thing he was able to determine was that Muniz, 17-9, was too slow. Abila moved around his opponent covering up when he was on the ropes and either ducking or picking off punches when able to move freely.

In the process he found a second weakness in Muniz' style of boxing, a lack of defense and that set the trend for the rest of the fight. Abila would duck and roll away from punches while peppering Muniz with lefts and rights.

As the fight progressed, Abila's right hand became more and more prominent until late in the third round when he got in the one punch he needed to end the fight, a straight right that caught Muniz on the jaw and dropped him to the canvas where he stayed for the count.

IT WASN'T just the right that brought the fight to an end, it was a combination of that one punch and previous tremendous pressure. Earlier in the round Abila backed Muniz into the ropes and unloaded a barrage of lefts and rights that eventually knocked Muniz' mouth piece free and knocked him down for a mandatory eight-count.

When the count was over, Muniz still didn't have his mouth piece back in and the referee delayed action for a few seconds to replace it. The extra time didn't help much. As the clock was ticking off the final seconds, Abila got Muniz against the ropes a second time and unleashed another flurry of punches. As the two boxers were coming off the ropes, he sent in the right to end the fight. The official time was 2:57 into the third round.

Going into the fight, Abila was expecting a tough opponent, a slugger who could take a punch. What he found instead surprised him.

"I thought he'd be tougher to beat than he was," said the 118-pound Midlander. "I thought he'd be real tough like (Gilberto) Villicana (Abila's last fight) was. It really surprised me. My punches were together. It was my night, one of those good nights."

And, did the partisan crowd help?

"It sure did," said Abila. "The crowd was behind me and it helped give me a little pep."

Muniz also received a few surprises from Abila. "He was way stronger than I thought he would be. Excuses aside, Richard was very strong. I'm willing to rematch him in 15 days. I don't feel that I was in that tough of shape."

Fifteen days? Not likely. According to Fleetwood, Abila will have a week of rest before returning to serious training for his next fight which could be sometime in late August.

ABILA WAS one of three boxers from Fleetwood's stable in the ring Monday night, and like Abila, the other two boxers won. "Our stable is now 11-1-1," said Fleetwood.

David Bates, an Odessa middleweight at 157¾ pounds, was even quicker than Abila in ending his fight. With 1:20 gone in the first round, he caught Dallas' Dalton Jackson, who is now 2-3, "with a straight right and finished up with a left hook," said Bates. "He looked dead on his feet from the right and then the left came in. I think he would have gone down anyway but you always follow up with something."

Bates, now 3-0-1 and fighting in only his second six-round bout, felt he was ready to go the distance if he had to.

"I went the distance in my first six-rounder so I knew that wouldn't be a factor. In the first fight I had to pace myself. Tonight I knew I could go out faster."

After taking a couple of early quick punches from Jackson and defending himself against the ropes from a flurry of useless punches, Bates decided it was time to unleash his attack and try and end the fight.

"The plan was to take it easy and work my jab," he said. "We (Fleetwood and Bates) discussed in the dressing room that if the guy was wild, which he was, then take him out so we wouldn't be taking a chance of a cut or head butt which is always possible with wild and unorthodox fighters."

"We didn't know what to expect from the fighter," said Fleetwood, "so we decided to go in and see what he was like, not hurry, but also not taking any chances."

PECOS BOXER Dan Levario, the third member of Fleetwood's stable, made his professional debut and had to go the distance against his opponent, Antonio Sanchez of Houston (3-4 with the loss), but there was little doubt which direction the decision would go. He won the four-round fight easily with the closest scoring coming from judge Richard Hubbard at 40-35 using the 10-point must system.

Sanchez displayed little ability in the ring and showed his lacking on several occasions when he ducked his head and charged after Levario throwing wild punches. Levario, a two-time Texas Golden Gloves champion, eluded the charges with relative ease and used jabs, left hooks and combinations of the two to dominate the fight.

"It was Dan's first pro fight and he was a little tenative at first," said Fleetwood. "He took his time. Later in the fight Dan didn't look like he was hitting him hard. He had some steam but didn't look like he was hitting that hard."

FLEETWOOD'S STABLE of boxers weren't the only local boys to do well. The main event on the card was the 12-round Texas Heavyweight Championship fight between Odessa's Charles "Tuffy" Hostetter and Dallas' Cookie Wallace.

Midland's baseball teams take tournament victories

Opening round games of the Hi-Junior double-elimination tournament at Cubs Stadium Monday night turned out to be a couple of blowouts, but the fans should get their reward tonight.

That's when Midland's Mustangs face Odessa El Paso Products in the 6 p.m. winner's bracket game.

Odessa scored eight runs in the fifth and six runs in the sixth to bury San Angelo, 16-1, as the losers committed 10 errors. Midland rattled out a steady tattoo of base hits to whipe CUP's Badgers, 13-0, in the nightcap.

Monday's losers play at 3:30 p.m. today and then the winner will meet the loser of the 6 p.m. game at 8:30 p.m. The final, or finals, are scheduled for Wednesday at Cubs Stadium.

Kevin Timmons was a one-man gang for Odessa, pitching a three-hitter, fanning 12 and collecting three hits in five trips for the win. Boyd Cowan hit an inside the park homer for Odessa.

Bryan Willis and Derek Westbrook combined to hold CUP, a combination team from McCamey and Crane, to only two hits. When Willis left after four innings, he had nine strikeouts and was working on a no-hitter. However, with a 7-0 lead, Manager Jimmie Wilson was looking forward to possibly three or four more games and Hi-Junior pitchers are limited to a maximum of 14 innings a week.

Westbrook surrendered a double to James Kennedy, the first batter he faced, but then pitched out of a bases loaded situation and gave up a sixth inning single to Danny Yeager to preserve the shutout.

Catcher Sergio Ochoa was the big gun in Midland's 15-hit attack with two singles, a double and triple to knock in three runs. Westbrook also batted in three runs while collecting two singles as the Mustangs scored in every inning but the second.

Michael Wilson also had two rbi with and three hits. —TED BATTLES

Sophomore Tournament

ODESSA — Two Midland teams jumped out of the starting gate in a hurry here Monday night in the first round of the double elimination Sophomore League playoff tournament at Optimist Park.

Midland's Eastern Rotary rode the shutout pitching of Anthony Dickens for a 5-0 win over Odessa Bumper while Midland's Western Trott & Company took a narrow 2-1 win over Odessa Superior Trailer with a run in the seventh inning.

Rotary dominated Bumper as Dickens allowed only three base runners in the entire game. Rodney Sims led the Rotary hit parade with a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

Rotary will now face Odessa's Northwest Wrecker at 5 p.m. today in a winner's bracket contest.

Trott & Company came up with only one hit against Superior Trailer, but it was a big one. Terry Baxter's double in the seventh inning scored David Havens with the winning run. Both teams stole home on passed balls in the sixth inning for a 1-1 tie.

Trott's George Motta pitched five innings of shutout ball, but Baxter got the win after two innings of work. The Odessa team got only three hits.

Trott drew the bye for tonight in the winner's bracket and will face the winner of tonight's Rotary-NW Wrecker game at 5 p.m. Wednesday. The winner of the Wednesday contest will move to the championship round the same night.

Senior Tournament

SAN ANGELO — Midland's Elcor Chemical scored two unearned runs here Monday night to take a 2-1 victory over San Angelo Optimist in the first game of a best-of-three Senior Teenage League playoff.

Barry Blackwell, who reached base safely in the third and sixth innings on San Angelo errors, scored both Midland runs. Blackwell scored in the third on a double by Chris Parker and again in the sixth on a single by Teddy Bartley.

The game was a pitching battle between Midland's Kerry Robertson and San Angelo's Zeke Barron. Both gave up only two hits and both KOed seven batters each. However, Elcor made the most of its two hits by taking advantage of the San Angelo errors.

The championship will be decided today. The two teams will meet again at 7 p.m. at the 29th St. Complex. If the third game is needed, it will be played following the 7 p.m. contest.

The winner will advance to the state tournament in Waco next week.

Cubs lose on early homers

SHREVEPORT, La. — A pair of home runs in the first inning turned out to be enough to beat Midland's Cubs Monday night as Shreveport went on to post an 8-2 victory.

Midland built up a 2-0 lead in the top of the first when, with one out, Mike Kelley reached first on a throwing error by Captains' shortstop Doran Perdue and came home when Joe Carter hit a line drive home run over the left field fence, his 18th round-tripper of the season.

The 2-0 lead was brief. Shreveport's Randy Kutcher punched Midland starting pitcher Doug Welenc's first pitch of the night over the right field fence to cut the margin to 2-1. It was only Kutcher's second home run of the year. One out later, Kelvin Torve connected for a double down the right field line and he came home when Bob Cummings hit his eighth homer, a towering blast that cleared the scoreboard in left field.

The Captains gave themselves a little more breathing room in the fourth inning when Dean Kornacker and Billy Heimach connected for RBI singles. The lead increased to 8-2 in the eighth when Kornacker hit a two-RBI single up the middle followed by Jeff Ransom scoring on reliever Carlos Gil's wild pitch.

Midland had chances in the seventh and eighth innings to trim the lead when, with two outs, they managed to load the bases. Frank Williams, the Shreveport starter, got Carter to strike out swinging to end the seventh and, after loading the bases again in the next inning and with two out, was pulled in favor of reliever Bob Gendron who got Mike Diaz to miss a third-strike pitch.

Williams, who upped his record to 9-6 with the victory, pitched 7⅔ innings before leaving the mound. Gendron finished the game to collect his first save of the year.

The loss dropped Welenc to 10-9.

At the plate, Midland could manage only seven hits with Kelley connecting for a pair of singles in five attempts to be the only Cub with more than one hit. Cummings was 2-for-3 for Shreveport while Kornacker went 2-for-4 for three RBI.

Tonight, Midland will close out the series against Shreveport with a 7:30 game. Randy Clark, 2-6, is scheduled to start for the Cubs against Shreveport's Larry Williams, 0-2.

On Wednesday, the Cubs will open a five-game home stand in Jackson.

Tulsa beats Dodgers as league leaders battle

Mark Johnston doubled home the winning runs in the fifth inning as the El Paso Diablos took a 4-2 Texas League baseball victory over the Jackson Mets.

In other Texas League action Monday night, Tulsa edged San Antonio, 2-1 and Arkansas blanked Amarillo, 6-0.

Johnston's double drove in Bill Foley and Randy Ready, who both singled. Jackson's only runs came on wild pitches.

Jesse Vasquez, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was John Violette, 1-3.

Dave Stockstill had a homer as the Tulsa Drillers edged the San Antonio Dodgers, 2-1.

Ed Amelung hit his 18th homer of the season for the Dodgers.

Al Lacowitz, 8-7, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Dean Rennicke, 9-5.

Jose Gonzalez and Luis Ojeda provided the hitting and Kevin Hagen provided the pitching as the Arkansas Travelers whipped the Amarillo Gold Sox, 6-0.

Gonzalez had three hits in five plate appearances and drove in three runs. Ojeda had three hits in four trips to the plate and drove in a run.

Hagen, 8-9, was the winning pitcher. Larry Brown, 3-5, was the loser.

Hu Na to get speedy action in political asylum request

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — China's top woman tennis player, in hiding in the United States, is likely to get speedy action on her request for political asylum, a U.S. immigration official says.

Hu Na requested asylum through an attorney Monday. The 19-year-old, who speaks no English, left her Chinese teammates and disappeared during the Federation Cup tournament in Santa Clara July 20.

"She is in seclusion and is unavailable for public comment at her own request," her lawyer, Edward C.Y. Lau of San Francisco, said in a statement.

"She has told me that she wants the situation to remain that way until the government has decided whether to grant her asylum application."

David Ilchert, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said he will make the final decision about whether to grant Hu asylum after he receives an advisory opinion from the State Department in Washington. The process could take several weeks, he said.

"We have 8,500 applications for asylum pending here," he said. "But in this case, because of all the publicity, it will probably be expedited."

Hu, an athlete considered to have world-class potential, vanished from the hotel housing her team during the tournament sponsored by the International Tennis Federation.

The disappearance became known Friday, but the circumstances and how Hu came to be represented by Lau have remained a mystery.

Lau said he has told Chinese officials about Hu's desire to defect. "They have known about the situation since early Wednesday morning, although for their own reasons, they may have decided not to comment on it publicly," he said.

Hu, a 5-foot-8 native of Sichuan, won a tennis tournament in Mexico last year and was the only woman selected to accompany a men's team to the United States two years ago.

She was interviewed by a U.S. immigration officer Monday, Ilchert said, refusing to disclose the location. She was asked "why she thinks she's eligible for asylum status," he said.

"She has the burden of establishing that she has been persecuted or has a well-founded fear of persecution if she returns based on race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a particular social group. One of those is enough, but you make a better case if you can prove several," said Ilchert.

"I'm waiting for my player's return," said Shen Jianqui, the captain of the Chinese tennis team, who stayed behind when the rest of the team returned to China on Saturday.

"I hope she will return to our team," Shen said Monday. "I don't know where she is now. I'm still worried about her safety. She's so young ...

Lendl wondering what it takes to be rated No. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ivan Lendl is continuing his crusade to be recognized as the best tennis player in the world. By now he must be wondering what it will take.

Lendl won his ninth tournament of the year Monday night, beating Jimmy Arias 6-3, 6-3 in the $240,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic.

In the process, Lendl pushed his earnings for the year over the $1.5 million mark. In the last 10 months, Lendl also has racked up 101 victories against only four losses in match play.

Despite his list of accomplishments, Lendl is still listed as the fourth best player in the world, according to the Association of Tennis Professionals.

The men ahead of Lendl in the rankings — John McEnroe, Guillermo Vilas and Jimmy Connors — all skipped this clay court tournament.

Going head-to-head, Lendl is 7-3 against the three in the last 10 months.

"I don't know why I'm not No.1," Lendl said the victory. "I play everyone, I win the titles and the money and everybody else is ranked ahead of me. I don't know what else I can do," Lendl concluded.

The 17-year-old Arias found out just how tough Lendl could be.

Arias, playing the best tennis of his 18 months on the pro tour, proved no match for the 23-year-old Czechoslovakian.

"I played as well as I could but he was just getting stronger and stronger," said Arias.

Arias' coach, Nick Bolletieri, felt his star pupil was close to winning but fell victim to his own inexperience as much as Lendl's superior play.

"He has to learn to get tough when he is winning. Jimmy lacks the killer instinct you need when you get ahead of an opponent on the pro tour," he said.

"I feel Jimmy can hang in there with anybody," Bolletieri added. "He just needs a little more experience. This is just the beginning for Jimmy."

Fleetwood boxers sweep

Hostetter, who entered the ring as a mere rookie compared to the veteran Wallace, maintained control of the fight throughout the night and collected the title on a unanimous decision for an 8-0 record which includes five knockouts. Wallace fell to 38-15 with the loss.

Hostetter came out in the first round and set a pace that would dominate throughout most of the fight. For every punch that Wallace was able to connect with, Hostetter would answer with five or more of his own, much to the joy of the crowd. Shouts of "Charlie" or "Charles" showed who the crowd was behind and as the fight progressed a chant of "go, go, go, go, go," came from the stands.

Long after the final bell rang, Hostetter was still standing in the ring acknowledging the cheers of his fans. At one point, while he was leaning on the ropes with sweat pouring down his face, he said, to no one in particular, "I got tired."

And, that wasn't hard to understand. Someone asked him if he'd ever thrown so many punches and he replied "No sir I haven't. I've never had to go 12 rounds before either. It was my first 12-rounder. My last fight was only six."

And then to the crowd he said, "I appreciate all of you coming out here. I'll defend it (the Texas title) well."

THE ONLY other fight of the night was also the only fight without a local boy in the ring. Richard Long, of Austin, posted a knockout victory over Dallas' Lee Myers with 25 seconds remaining in the fourth round.

Until that time it had been a see-saw battle with Myers seeming to get the upper hand. A solid right hand from Lord ended all that as well as the fight.

Ali take note: Lane is still fighting at age 50

An AP Sports Analysis
By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Their T-shirts proclaimed, "I'm a Kenny Lane Fan," — Kenny Lane's kids, ages 26, 24, 19 and 16.

They were cheering for their father who was fighting for the first time in 17 years at age 50.

Other fans were cheering Lane, too, on a recent night in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., when he fought an eight-rounder against 27-year-old Bobby Plegge of Alliance, Ohio.

Lane won a decision and boosted his record 78-5-2.

Kenny Lane, a left-handed lightweight with a crewcut who turned pro in 1953 and retired in 1965, usually won on guile. Of his 78 victories, only 16 were by knockout.

Two of his losses were on 15-round decisions in lightweight title bids against Joe Brown in 1958 and Carlos Ortiz in 1964. He won a 15-rownd decision over Paul Armstead in what was recognized by Michigan as a lightweight title fight in 1964 and he scored 10-round verdicts over the likes of Ortiz, Ralph Dupas, Glen Flanagan and two men who held the welterweight championship — Virgil Akins and Curtis Cokes.

Lane also fought several times on television, but in those days a main event appearance on TV didn't mean $100,000 or more.

"My biggest purse was $22,000 for Joe Brown in Houston," Lane said. "After it was all done, it averaged out to $8,000 a year. I would have done just as well if I had had a good job."

Lane decided he had had enough after losing a 10-round decision Oct. 25, 1965, at New Orleans to Eddie Perkins, who had been junior welterweight champion. But it was not the loss that made him to decide to pack it in.

"He got $4,000, and I got $800," Lane said. "I said, 'Who needs this?'"

His comeback purse was to be a percentage. A crowd of 1,500 showed up. So, how much did his end come to?

"So far, it's cost me $12," said Lane. "The promotion? That's another story."

"One thing that makes it fun, is that I'm not doing it for money," said Lane, who since 1969 has had his own television service business. "It's kind of an experiment. I want to see what the old body can do."

Watching an old body and a lot of young ones perform on television today got Lane thinking about fighting again.

"There is this 63-year-old basketball player who used to be a Globetrotter (Lane thinks it was Marques Haynes who has a traveling basketball team)," he said. "I saw him on TV, and I thought, 'Boy, that's great.'

"And I was watching ESPN and saw the kids fighting. They can't fight much."

So weighing 170-175 pounds, Lane started training.

"Nobody can make a comeback with 30 pounds of fat on them," he said. "I took off 20 pounds, then I started working out in the gym, and I was still too slow."

So he got down to 140, his weight for the fight, and he informed the local inspector for the Michigan State Boxing Commission of his intent.

"Every time I said I wanted to fight again, he'd laugh and say, 'You're 50 years-old.'"

That just strengthed Lane's resolve.

Rejuvenated Bench lifts Reds past Cubs

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds' No. 5 is looking more like the Johnny Bench of old than just an old Johnny Bench these days.

The man who has hit more home runs than any catcher in baseball history showed during a four-game series with the Chicago Cubs that he hasn't lost his touch.

Bench blasted a solo homer Monday night and drove in a pair of runs to help the Reds beat the Cubs 4-2. It gave him eight homers for the season, three of them in the four-game series.

"Now, for one little series, it's felt awfully good," said Bench, who came into the game batting just .229.

Reds President Dick Wagner told McNamara to play rookies Tom Lawless and Paul Householder. Bench wound up on the bench, although it's unclear who made the decision.

"That's behind me now. I don't know what the deal is," Bench said. "There were a lot of innuendos going around. I just can't let those things worry me."

In the only other National League game, the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1.

Russ Nixon, who replaced McNamara as the Reds' manager, made getting Bench back in the lineup one of his priorities.

Bench said he has made some changes in his swing that have helped.

"Right now, I'm feeling a little more patient, plus I'm getting good pitches to hit," he said. "I'm pulling the ball and pulling it with authority."

Dan Driessen led off the Reds' fourth with a homer, his 11th, off Al Ripley and Bench followed with his homer. Bench and Driessen also had RBI singles.

Bob Shirley scattered seven hits over eight innings to break his personal five-game losing streak. Tom Hume came on to post his 17th save after Gary Woods homered to lead off the ninth.

Giants 6, Dodgers 1

Bill Laskey pitched a three-hitter and Tom O'Malley keyed a five-run third inning with a three-run double as the Giants defeated Los Angeles ace Fernando Valenzuela.

With one out in the third inning, Joe Morgan and Chili Davis walked. Reggie Smith singled to score Morgan and the runners moved up on the throw to the plate. Bob Brenly was walked intentionally to load the bases and O'Malley followed with his double. Johnnie LeMaster singled O'Malley home. O'Malley's sacrifice fly accounted for San Francisco's final run in the eighth.

How To Financially Survive The 1980's

Only 3% of Americans Can Afford A Home

With high interest rates and inflation going crazy, many people are giving up on the idea of ever owning their own home, much less the chance of buying some investment property. Giving up is the worst thing you can do. There are still ways in today's economy to buy properties, it just takes some know how.

How Mark Haroldsen Can Help

A few years ago, Mark Haroldsen started buying income properties using very little of his own money. In only 48 months he had made over $1,000,000 through real estate investments. He knows how to make money in today's market too. It is really no diferent now than it was then. His methods work. Thousands of people are using them today.

Become Wealthy or Buy Your First Home

Mark Haroldsen wants to share his ideas with you. He has personally trained a group of intructors in his methods. One of these instructors, an investor himself, is going to be in your town this week. He will be giving an absolutely free 2 hour seminar on real estate investing.

During the Two Hours You Will Learn:

- ★ Why real estate instead of gold, silver or stocks
- ★ How to find bargain investment properties
- ★ How to buy properties with OPM (other people's money)
- ★ How to lower you income tax to zero
- ★ How inflation will help you
- ★ Creative Financing Techniques
- ★ Should you sell, or keep buying

Part of this free two hour seminar will be devoted exclusively to answering your questions, so come prepared to ask them. We will not try to sell you another high priced seminar. We will teach you how to "Financially Survive the 1980's." Over 50,000 people have already attended these seminars and are profiting tremendously. There is no obligation on your part and the seminar is open to the public.

Mark your calendar and plan to attend one of the seminars in your area. Bring your friends and learn together how to secure your financial future.

COM captures first place in Odessa swim meet

The City of Midland swimmers won the McDonald's OAC and UTPB Invitational meet at UTPB over the weekend, compiling 1,172 points to beat second-place Odessa.

Suzi Simpson won the individual high point trophy for Senior girls and Becky Simpson won it in girls 13-14.

"Our swimmers swan ver well," said COM Coach Hank O'Neill. "We have worked hard all summer and the time drops were well deserved. From here, the team will move on to the Texas Age Group championship meets in Houston and San Antonio and the last hurrah meet in San Angelo. The summer has been very successful and I am looking foreward to the next meet and the start of the winter season."

Midland American Bank
PO Box 8940 • 4415 Northgate • Midland, Texas • 79703 • 915/699-4411

The board of directors, officers and staff of Midland American Bank cordially invite you to visit our new banking facility during this, our first week of formal business.

We believe Midland American will answer the needs of busy Midlanders with our innovative style of banking and our "All American Service."

As you become acquainted with our bank, you'll find that our first and highest priority is serving each customer on a personal and individualized basis. We have developed a number of special services that will make your routine banking a convenience instead of a chore. And, our hours were established by our board to better meet the schedules of busy, north Midlanders. We're also pleased to announce that our drive–in facility will be open each Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon for those unable to bank during the weekday.

The staff at Midland American is dedicated to service . . . to our customers and within the community . . . working as partners for the future.

Visit our temporary quarters, at the corner of Loop 250 and Midland Drive, and let us introduce you to Midland American's All–American Service, designed to serve Midland with the best of full–service banking.

Sincerely,

Russ Richardson, President

Burton B. Jones Chairman of the Board

American League roundup

Vida gives Cleveland the Blues, Hough tough for Rangers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was Blue Monday for the Cleveland Indians, but a terrific night for a couple of veterans with the Kansas City Royals.

"I'm not throwing as hard as I did 10 years ago on a consistent basis — but I still can get good pop on my fastball when I need a strikeout," said Kansas City's Vida Blue after overpowering the Indians Monday night.

Blue gave up only four hits, struck out four and walked four in seven innings to lead the Royals to an 8-1 decision and improve his record to 8-7.

"He's struggled a little this season," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "It's not that he hasn't had good stuff, but his control has been off a little. That's the best he's been recently."

Blue, who turns 33 on Wednesday, took the spotlight with another veteran who was in good form. Hal McRae, the 36-year-old resurrected slugger, singled twice, doubled and homered to drive in three runs and boost his American League-leading RBI total to 88.

He credits his stunning run production this season to the Royals' lineup.

"To knock in runs, you've got to have somebody set the stage for you and somebody behind you, protecting you," McRae said.

Willie Wilson added two triples as the Royals collected 15 hits and made ground in the hot AL West race on the California Angels, who lost 11-8 to the Oakland A's. The Royals are now one game behind the division leaders.

Blue pitched no-hit ball through five innings before running into trouble in the sixth, when the Indians scored their only run on Andre Thornton's RBI single. Blue, however, settled down to retire the next three hitters without further damage. Dan Quisenberry finished up with two scoreless innings of relief.

The Royals took a 3-0 lead against Tom Brennan, 0-2, with the help of two Cleveland errors in the third inning, and it proved to be all the runs they needed.

Rangers 3, Brewers 1

Charlie Hough pitched a four-hitter to lead Texas over Milwaukee. Hough, 9-8, walked one and struck out four in hurling his seventh complete game of the year.

No Milwaukee runner got as far as second base until the seventh inning when Cecil Cooper singled and Ted Simmons doubled him home.

Mike Caldwell, 7-10, took the loss.

The Rangers got a run in the fourth on Lamar Johnson's RBI single and scored their eventual winning run in the fifth on Doug Flynn's two-strike suicide squeeze bunt.

A's 11, Angels 8

Rickey Henderson, who earlier hit a home run, blasted an eighth-inning double and stole home as Oakland came back to beat California in a wild game after blowing a 7-0 lead.

Henderson's double drove in the go-ahead run as the A's scored four times to wipe out an 8-7 California advantage.

Dave Beard, the third Oakland pitcher, pitched the final 32-3 innings to gain his sixth win in 13 decisions.

Reggie Jackson's two-run homer in the sixth and RBI double in the seventh had brought the Angels into the lead from the seven-run deficit.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 2

Dwight Evans scored the tie-breaking run on a double-play grounder in the eighth inning as Boston rallied to beat Toronto. The victory, combined with Milwaukee's loss to Texas, moved Boston into the AL East lead, one-half game ahead of the Brewers.

Dennis Eckersley, 11-8, going the distance for the 11th time in 21 starts, pitched a seven-hitter. Eckersley outdueled rookie right-hander Jim Gott, 1-6.

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the second on an RBI single by Al Woods and made it 2-0 in the fifth on Alfredo Griffin's home run. Boston tied the score in the fifth on Glenn Hoffman's two-run homer.

"We're winning because our pitchers are keeping the game close," said Hoffman. "We can come from behind and we've shown it by winning a lot of ballgames this year."

The Red Sox rallied to come from behind to win for the 29th time this year.

Tigers 5, Yankees 3

Lance Parrish knocked in three runs with a homer, single and a triple and Tom Brookens hit a tie-breaking, two-run double in the fifth as Detroit defeated New York.

Winner Jerry Ujdur, 4-5, gave up five hits, walked two and struck out two before needing relief help. Dave Rucker gave up an RBI single to Lou Piniella in the eighth inning before Dave Gumpert came on in the ninth to get the last two outs for his first save.

Orioles 6, White Sox 2

Gary Roenicke homered and drove in four runs, leading Baltimore over Chicago. It was the fifth straight triumph for the Orioles.

Flares dropped from Israeli air force fighter planes light up the sky over West Beirut as the jets drop bombs on PLO positions located in the area. The Monday night air raid lasted about 45 minutes.

Israel also battling feuds born differing sectarian, political views

BHAMDOUN, Israeli-occupied Lebanon (AP) — The Israelis invaded Lebanon more than six weeks ago to silence the guns of the Palestine Liberation Organization. But their introduction of Lebanese Christian militiamen into Moslem areas is drawing the Israelis into local sectarian and political feuds.

"We're here to fight the PLO, but we're becoming Lebanese policemen," an Israeli officer complained in this mountain resort town nine miles east of Beirut.

Occupying about one-fourth of the country's 4,000 square miles, the Israelis hastily set up "civilian services units" to try to keep the Lebanese from shooting each other.

Tension developed in Bhamdoun, 9 miles east of Beirut, after the Israelis routed Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas from the town, and Israel's Christian allies, Bashir Gemayel's Maronite Catholic Lebanese Forces, marched in and set up a garrison.

A majority of Bhamdoun's 5,000 residents are Druze Moslems, and the Maronites and the Druze have been bitter enemies since the Druze massacred Maronites in 1860.

"We talked to the people, the Moslems and the Christians, and told them we wanted to live in peace," said Abdo Karam, the chief of the Christian garrison.

Recently a Druze shot and killed a Christian militiaman while he was buying an ice cream cone. The Christian troops and the local Druze militiamen mobilized. But instead of rushing to their basements to wait out the violence, residents implored the Israelis to do something.

Israeli press officer Michael Kehevazi said a gun battle was averted by the local Israeli civilian services unit, headed by an Israeli Arab affairs expert, Rafi Sutton, who is a native of Bhamdoun.

"He met separately with the Christians and the Druze and then they had a meeting together," Kehevazi said. "Sutton talked to them at a fairly high level, saying it was a test case of the viability of Lebanon to survive. Neither side could let this get out of hand."

He said Sutton convinced the Christians not to demand that the killer — whose identity was known — be seized, a traditional way of evening the score in Lebanese blood feuds.

"The boy had run away," Kehevazi said. The Christians agreed to let it pass."

Kehevazi and other Israeli and Lebanese sources said there have been similar incidents throughout the occupied area. Some started with minor traffic accidents, others with arguments between two people over personal or political differences.

But a frequent ingredient is the presence of Gemayel's Christian militiamen who, under Israeli protection, have pushed south to Sidon and beyond, more than 30 miles from the Maronite heartland in east Beirut and the surrounding mountains.

When an argument starts, the Christian militiamen arrive on the scene, followed by Lebanese policemen who could belong to any one of more than 15 Moslem and Christian sects.

People who have witnessed such encounters say frequently the original argument expands as the militiamen and the police quarrel over who is in charge. Then the Israelis step in to separate the Lebanese.

Young criticized for invasion views

ATLANTA (AP) — Mayor Andrew Young, whose tenure as United Nations ambassador ended after an unauthorized meeting with a Palestine Liberation Organization official, has come under fire for his criticism of Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Young, one of 28 people who signed an open letter newspaper advertisement entitled "Must Beirut be destroyed," was accused Monday by the Atlanta Jewish Federation of practicing "a double standard" on moral issues.

"Why condemn Israel for defending its citizens and ignore the (PLO) terrorists who commit murder and mayhem the world over," federation officers said in a letter to Young.

Young on Monday defended allowing his name to be used in the ad, which appeared in The New York Times. Young said he acted out of humanitarian concern for innocent victims of the fighting.

Federation members took issue with the advertisement's depiction of Beirut as a city on the verge of being destroyed by Israeli bombs.

Insidious comparisons equating Dresden, Warsaw and Hiroshima with Beirut serve no purpose other than to incite hatred of Israel," the letter to Young said. It accused Young of "perpetuating the lies and myths of PLO propaganda."

Young, who served as U.N. ambassador in the Carter administration for 2½ years, resigned after the disclosure of an unauthorized 1979 meeting with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the Palestine Liberation Organization's permanent observer at the United Nations.

Young, answering reporters questions about the ad, compared Israel's bombing of Beirut to the PLO's terrorism. He said the "deafening" silence surrounding Israel's actions is the same silence that surrounded the Holocaust.

Young said that despite his criticism of the invasion, he considers himself a supporter of Israel.

Israeli colonel to be dismissed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli army colonel who sparked a national furor by quitting his combat command to protest the Lebanese war is to be dismissed from the army in a few days, Israeli newspapers said today.

Col. Eli Geva was relieved as commander of an elite armored brigade in Lebanon last week at his own request, because he said his conscience would not permit him to obey an order to attack Beirut, if such an order was issued.

The military command refused to confirm or deny press reports that Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan has ordered Geva's dismissal. Geva says he cannot talk to the media as long as he is still in the army.

The 32-year-old officer is now on leave. Newspapers said he was deluged with telephone calls at his home congratulating or denouncing him for his action.

Geva's action has dealt a blow to government efforts to rally the nation behind its drive to get an estimated 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas out of west Beirut. Anti-war activists here say it proves there is deeply rooted opposition to the war.

Israel has threatened to invade the guerrillas' strongholds and drive them out by force if they do not leave peacefully.

The daily Haaretz, a liberal paper which opposes government policy in Lebanon, said in an editorial that it could not condone Geva's conduct, because it amounted to a refusal to carry out an order and could have a dangerous implication for military discipline.

However, Haaretz said, Geva's action should remind the government as it pondered its next move that "the Israel Defense Forces is a very sensitive instrument, and the fighting ranks are naturally very sensitive to any operative plan they will have to carry out."

Senior Geophysicist

Your solid background in the Permian Basin can make you one of our most valued "resources."

ARCO Oil and Gas Company is one of the nation's foremost leaders in domestic oil and gas exploration and production. One reason is the consistent high quality of our seismic data interpretation. Another is our ability to recognize, develop and promote our most important natural resource–talented, creative professionals.

Our rapid growth, however, has now created more openings for senior-level explorationists than we can fill internally. This is why our district exploration management in Midland, Texas is seeking a geophysicist with 10 or more years experience. Your credentials must demonstrate familiarity with S-O-A geophysical data interpretation, and ability to apply data acquisition knowledge to help establish acquisition parameters. You also must be capable of delivering incisive oral and written presentations to management, and have clear field operations leadership potentials.

We, in turn, offer very competitive salary, outstanding benefits including incentive compensation plan, and growth prospects that few companies can match. For prompt, fully confidential consideration, please send your resume and salary history to:

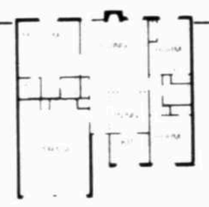
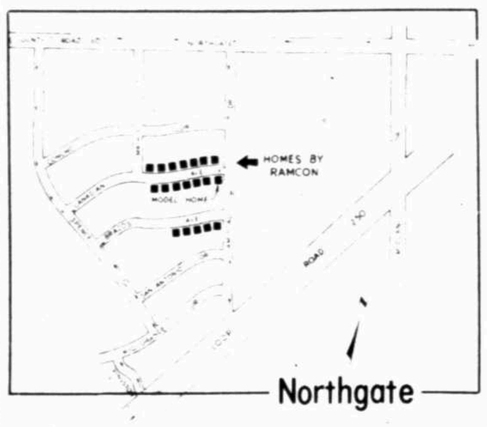
$1450 Limited Closing Costs in Northgate only

NORTHGATE $75,200

4909 Canadian

$673.30 Per Month





You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivas lent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in prlyments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2%, maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 75%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
