Fighting Ends As Truce Signed

East Germans Cross Border To Gain Food

BERLIN, July 27 —UP—An estimated 100,000 hungry East Germans poured across the border into West Berlin Monday to get "forbidden" food offered under President Eisenhower's relief program.

Residents of all parts of the Soviet zone crossed the open East-West city border and entered West Berlin by foot, railway and subway on the first day of the two-week program.

They lined up by the thousands before 11 West Berlin borough halls to get the food packages.

The West Berlin city government set aside a million packages valued at $1,250,000 under the program to carry out President Eisenhower's relief offer. But the flood of applicants was so great it was believed the number of packages might have to be boosted.

The Communists had warned East Germans not to accept the packages on the grounds they would be recruited as spies and saboteurs. But the Reds did not close the East-West city border or interfere with the flow to the west and back.

Trains arriving in Berlin from the Soviet zone were jammed to capacity with persons seeking food that was not available at home. East Germans started to cross the border hours before the food distribution began at 8 a.m. (1 a.m. est), and kept it up all day.

In East Germany, the Communists fired two members of their politburo and a member of their central committee in a sweeping purge.

They formally ousted Control Commission Chief Franz Dahlen from the politburo, dropped former Secret Police Chief Wilhelm Zaisser from the politburo and central committee, and fired Rudolf Herrnstadt as editor of the party newspaper Neues Deutschland and from the central committee.

Red Cross Names New Chairmen

A Red Cross executive board meeting was held Monday at 7 a.m. in the Schneider Hotel dining room. Chapter chairman Ross Buzzard was in charge of the meeting.

Committee was named to select a fund chairman for the coming year consisting of Ed Myatt, Mrs. Jack Foster, and Quentin Williams.

A committee was also named to meet with United Fund: chapter chairman, Ross Buzzard; treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Turner; E. B. Bowman; the fund chairman when named; and the executive secretary, Mrs. F. W. Shotwell.

The following committee chairmen were appointed to serve the coming year: Blood, J. N. McKean; Blood recruitment, Irvin Wall; Service, Mrs. Harry Hoyler; Public Information, Mrs. Rufe Jordan; Disaster, Rev. Dick Crews, and assistant, Erwin Thompson; Home Service, Mrs. Ray Rodgers; Home Nursing, Mrs. W. F. Walsh and assistant, Mrs. Smith B. Sypert; Water Safety, E. B. Bowman; First Aid, J. M. Hodges; and Junior Red Cross, Homer Craig.

There were 10 members present at the meeting. A financial report was given by Mrs. J. M. Turner, new treasurer.

$100 In Change Stolen From Car

It doesn't pay to carry too much change around — especially if it's left under the car-seat.

At least, that's what Roy Lewter, 217 E. Kingsmill, must think. At 2:30 a.m. today he reported to city police that more than $100 in change had been taken from under the seat of his car, parked in front of the Highway Cafe, 103 N. Hobart.

Proprietor of Roy's Drive Inn, on the Amarillo highway, Lewter had just ducked into the cafe to eat, then returned to find the money gone, according to Police Chief Jim Conner.

FRONTLINES SILENT

Cease-Fire Sent In 9 Languages

SEOUL, July 27 —UP— The shooting in the 37-month-long war ended at 10:00 p. m. Monday night — 7 a. m. CST — with the smell of death and of cordite from high explosive shells still heavy in the strangely silent frontline positions.

Intense artillery barrages rumbled across the western front until almost the last minute of the cease-fire. United Press staff correspondent William Miller described the shelling as the heaviest in several days.

Death continued taking its toll until shortly before Eighth Army Commander Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor broadcast the official cease fire order. Men fell to mortar shells and the raking fire of machine guns.

Order in Nine Languages

As the cease-fire order was broadcast in nine languages over the armed forces radio station, the bugler of the first U. S. Marine Division played taps over the silent lines. Marine searchlights lit up the sky to signal the beginning of the long-awaited armistice.

Colored flares burst in the brilliant light of the full moon which bathed the scarred hills, the bunkers and the fox holes in which prayerful men sweated out the last hours of the war.

Then there was silence.

But the stillness was broken soon after by the muffled roar of explosions as United Nations forces began the demolition of their front line bunkers.

Ready to Move Back

Troops promptly began preparing to move back 1 and 1-4 miles from their positions to create the 2 1-2 mile demilitarized zone separating the UN and Red lines.

A first Marine Divison spokesman said the division would work around the clock if necessary under searchlights to complete the demilitarization job within the required 72 hours.

"I just hope the Chinese got the word," said a Marine staff officer. He said the demilitarization order was unprecedented in Marine Corps history.

UN President Issues Call For Meeting

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 27 —UP—The United Nations General Assembly is on call to meet Aug. 17 and set up the Far Eastern political conference which may determine the success or failure of the Korean truce agreement.

General Assembly President Lester B. Pearson of Canada issued the call to the 60 member nations by cablegrams Sunday night. He acted within moments after he had been notified officially by Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., chief delegate of the United States, that the truce had been signed at Panmunjom.

"The signing of the armistice," Pearson said in a statement, "is the end of one chapter — of bloodshed and conflict — but it is only the beginning of a new and difficult one — the making of peace."

Only 3 Weeks Away

Lodge delivered the official notification of the truce to UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold and Pearson at 7:47 p.m., in a letter addressed to Hammarskjold.

Pearson promptly notified the UN's 60 members that the General Assembly would meet at 3 p.m., three weeks from Monday.

The assembly will set the actual date and site for the political conference, which the truce agreement specifies must begin within 90 days (by Oct. 26). It will also designate the countries to participate in the conference and it is expected to set up at least a general agenda, the specific terms of which may be left to the conferees themselves.

'Number of Decisions'

"There are a number of decisions that will have to be made by the assembly before this political conference meets," Pearson said.

"There is also the need for further UN action to aid the Korean people in the restoration and reconstruction of their ravaged land. . .

"This new chapter can only be completed successfully in Korea if the armistice terms are faithfully and scrupulously observed by all concerned.

"If this is done, we can move on to the next stage toward political settlement and reconstruction in a free, democratic and United Korea — a goal which the Korean people have fought so valiantly to reach. Such a settlement could in its turn lead to a solution of outstanding issues in the whole of the Far East.

Scout Leadership Meeting Tomorrow

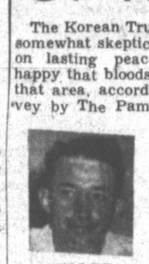

A Santa Fe District Scout leadership training meeing has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the city commission room.

Originally, the get-together had been slated for tonight, according to Phil Pegues, district Scout executive.

Purpose of the session is to lay plans for 30 sessions of formal training for the coming year, Pegues said today, adding that actually the training is of both "formal" and "informal" variety.

Pampans Skeptical Of Korean Armistice

The Korean Truce finds Pampans somewhat skeptical as to its effects on lasting peace but extremely happy that bloodshed is to cease in that area, according to a spot survey by The Pampa Daily News.

MILLER

Earl Miller, 1120 Garland, doesn't feel that any lasting peace will be effected until all the Chinese Communists are run out of Korea. Nevertheless, he stated, he can appreciate efforts of leaders to stop the fighting and bloodshed in Korea, even if it's just temporary.

WILSON

J. B. Wilson, 1317 Duncan, doesn't have any confidence in the truce; he feels fighting will break out there or somewhere else. But he feels the truce is at least a step in the right direction toward world peace among all nations.

ROMING

Jim Roming, 2229 Hamilton, concurred with Wilson. Although he thinks an outbreak will occur in some other section, he's glad to see the truce "happen." Asked if he felt the Korean action had helped the situation any, Roming said if we hadn't gone in when we did, the Communists would probably have gained a much greater foothold.

MRS. ANDERSON

And Mrs. Ethel Anderson, 610 N. Russell, is "tickled pink" over the truce. Her son, Kelly, is on his way to Korea now and even if it weren't for this personal feeling, she's glad for every other mother and relative of US boys that fighting is to stop. She can only hope it will help toward lasting peace.

PW Exchange Due To Begin Immediately

PANMUNJOM, July 27 —UP— The Communists disclosed Monday they are holding 12,763 Allied war prisoners — including Major Gen. William F. Dean and 3,312 other Americans—and some will begin returning to freedom this week.

All of them were expected to accept repatriation and be released in the "Operation Big Switch" prisoner exchange. In two months, the gigantic operation must be completed.

For some of the prisoners, "Big Switch" will end a three-year-or deal of captivity in North Korean prison camps where thousands died of malnutrition, neglect and brutality in the war's first winter.

74,000 Communist Prisoners

The United Nations command has promised to repatriate approximately 74,000 Communist prisoners.

Communist authorities said they would repatriate about 300 Allied prisoners per day, indicating it would take 42 days to complete the operation.

But UN negotiators asked them to increase the speed of delivery and the Reds said they would take the request under consideration.

According to the transcript of truce negotiations, the UN said it would return 2,160 Red prisoners daily through the Panmunjom exchange point, including 360 sick and wounded daily, until all of the incapacitated have been repatriated.

Three-Week Cruise

The U. S. Army announced plans to return American prisoners home by ship on a three-week cruise from the port of Inchon, giving

5 Pampans Are Injured In Oregon

Five Pampans are still in the hospital at Grants Pass, Ore., following an accident last week just inside the Oregon state line.

In serious condition are M. L. Chandler, who suffered a broken leg, severe cuts and loss of blood, and Mrs. Anna Balch, with a broken ankle and broken jaw. Mrs. Chandler and daughters, Parilou, 5, and Patricia, 8, were bruised but otherwise not hurt.

Their car rolled down the side of a mountain as they tried to dodge a boulder which was falling from the top. The occupants were thrown clear of the car which rolled on 175 feet and was demolished.

The Chandlers, 414 Doucette, and Mrs. Balch, 1424 E. Francis, Mrs. Chandler's mother, were on their way to Gold Hill, Ore., to visit Mrs. Balch's son, R. L. Balch.

Word of the accident was received Saturday by Mrs. J. E. Flynt, 1329 Williston, Mrs. Chandler's sister.

TEC Expects Farm Job Requisitions

Some 20-22 jobs — the same number processed last week — were on tap this morning in the local office of the Texas Employment Commission.

That was a slight pick-up from the activity of previous weeks, according to Bill Ragsdale, head of the local office.

Area farmers were expected to begin bringing in orders for farm jobs about Wednesday, Ragsdale said, pointing out that by that time last week's two rainfalls should have soaked into the ground and tractor operators should be needed.

Those farmers would have been filling jobs the end of last week if it hadn't been for the mid-week rain, the TEC official added.

Rodeo Directors To Meet Tuesday

Directors and committee chairmen of the Top o' Texas Rodeo Association will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the chamber of commerce office to complete details of this year's show which gets underway Aug. 4.

This will be the final meeting of the group before the show starts. Paul Crouch, association president, will be in charge of the meeting.

Odd Silence Over Korea

SEOUL, Tuesday, July 28 —UP— The uncertain and uneasy quiet of a negotiated truce settled over the Korean battle lines Tuesday.

The armistice documents ending the bitter, stalemated efforts of the Communists to seize all Korea by force were signed at 10:01 a. m. Monday — 7:01 p. m. CST, Sunday — in the "truce village" of Panmunjom.

Exactly 12 hours later official orders for a cease-fire were broadcast to troops on both sides of the battle lines. The war was over after 37 months. The last Red artillery shell of the war burst on the eastern front 10 minutes earlier. South Korean troops on the central front continued a rattle of small arms fire almost to the moment of the deadline.

Then the strange silence of the cease-fire settled over the moonlit lines.

But the end of the military phase of the long and costly United Nations collective efforts to end aggression must be followed by a delicate political conference to start within 90 days. And this will in the end determine whether the truce will last: Whether the cease-fire can be extended into a genuine peace for Korea.

The truce and the cease fire wrote the end to a "police action" which developed into one of the longest and most costly wars in American history.

It was entered upon under a United Nations pledge to halt aggression and it ended almost where it began — in a specially constructed "peace pagoda" in the little mud hut village of Panmunjom just below the 38th parallel.

As war merged into truce, American warplanes turned back to their bases with bomb loads still undropped and Allied soldiers dug in, alert against a surprise last-minute Communist attack but under orders not to start a fight of their own.

Must Withdraw Thursday

By 10 p.m. (7 a.m. cst Thursday), each side must withdraw two kilometers leave a two and a half mile "demilitarized" zone between then.

Within that same time the first of 12,763 Allied prisoners held by the Reds may be on their way home. Approximately 3,000 of the prisoners are American.

As the war ground to a halt, the Communists threw one last punch.

Make 250-Man Attack

They made a 250-man attack against South Korean troops on the central front Monday morning but were turned back with at least 140 men killed. And at exactly 10 a.m., when the armistice was signed, the Reds opened up with 20 rounds of mortar and artillery fire

Ike Observes Truce Is Not World Peace

WASHINGTON, July 27 —UP— President Eisenhower, sounding the keynote of the Korean truce, said it was "an armistice on a single battleground — not peace in the world" and America must keep up its guard.

At the same time, in a radio and television talk an hour after the truce was signed, Mr. Eisenhower pledged the nation to make the Korean armistice a step toward a greater goal of a world at peace.

He called on Communist.. to use the conference table, rather than "brutal and futile battle," for settlement of differences.

And he promised in the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln — "with malice toward none" — that the United States seeks to achieve a just and lasting peace with all nations.

Speaking soberly and mindful of his own son in Korea, he expressed the nation's prayerful thanks and "solemn gratitude" for an end to the Korean fighting which cost this country and its United Nations Allies thousands of lives, billions of dollars, and "incalculable tragedy."

'Glorious Victory' Claimed

Even as the President spoke of how the United States and its Allies of 15 nations met and stopped the challenge of Red aggression, the Communists began trumpeting claims of a "glorious victory."

Mr. Eisenhower was well aware that the truce was a tenuous thing — one which South Korean President Syngman Rhee regards as only a prelude to more war.

Congressmen generally welcomed the truce that ended 37 months of warfare which started as a "police action," but many cautioned against letting up on the arms buildup. Some influential congressmen criticized the truce terms.

Practices Set For Kid Pony Entries

Practices for the Kid Pony Show, scheduled at 8 p.m. Aug. 4 to set off activities of the annual Top o' Texas Rodeo Aug. 5-8, have been set for 7:30 p.m. today, Wednesday and Friday.

All entrants in the show are urged to be present at Recreation Park arena for these practices, acording to Mrs. Bill Ragsdale, rodeo headquarters official.

Scouts Due Home Tuesday Morning

Pampa's Scout delegation to the National Boy Scout Jamboree was scheduled to get back home at 8:40 a.m. Tuesday when the special Scout train completes its three-day trip from San Francisco, Calif.

The Jamboree was held July 17-23 on the Irvine Ranch, Santa Ana, Calif., where an estimated 50,000 Scouts from over the nation and the world were on hand.

Itinerary for the Pampa group was to include a day in San Francisco, a two-hour stop in Ogden, Utah; a four-hour layover in Salt Lake City, Utah; an hour in Pueblo, Colo., and Amarillo.

Truce Is Ignored By Stock Market

NEW YORK, July 27 —UP— The stock market scarcely noticed the Korean truce Monday.

Prices started out a little lower at the opening. A few more stock issues were traded. But then, after a few minutes, trading fell off sharply and prices wavered but a little up or down just as they have in all the recent sessions.

Wall Street simply shifted its worrying over a Korean truce to what will come now that a truce is signed.

Traders had anticipated the news last week and they had been inured to truce talk for two years. Hence when it came it was no shock such as the start of the war 37 months ago. The day after it started—June 26, 1950—the industrial average fell more than 10 points and sales approached 4 million shares.

Child Drowns In San Jacinto

HOUSTON, July 27—UP — Don Earl Ross, 3 1-2, drowned late Sunday in the San Jacinto River, a half mile east of the Humble Road bridge, as more than 300 persons swam and picnicked in the area.

The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Ross of Houston, waded into the river about 25 feet from his father and stepped into an eight foot deep hole.

County Tax Panel Meets

Seventeen oil and gas corporations and allied industries registered this morning before the county Board of Equalization for hearings on their real and personal property valuations.

The annual session between the Board of Equalization and county taxpayers this year is being combined instead of divided between the oil and gas and regular tax roll properties.

County Judge J. B. Maguire told the tax men this morning the county commissioners are attempting to give every taxpayer a "dollar's worth for every dollar invested in the county's business."

The judge also told them "a commissioners' court is faced with economizing on one hand and progress on the other. But money must be spent for a community or county to go forward and to maintain present services."

Maguire said that so few general property taxpayers had been raised this year that the hearings on them have been combined with the oil and gas roll hearings. He and the commissioners expect the entire week to be used in hearing each valuation case.

Immediately following judge's opening talk, oil company representatives began to approach the valuation working bench to review and settle property valuations with representatives of the county's tax appraisal firm of Thomay Y. Pickett, of Dallas. Pickett himself, however, did not come up for the hearings. He was reported as recovering from an operation by county officials.

FIGHTS POLYGAMY

Arizona Raids Desert Hamlet

SHORT CREEK, Ariz., July 27 —UP—The State of Arizona, determined to blot out polygamy in this desert hamlet, Monday began Solomon-like proceedings to decide the futures of 36 men, their 86 wives and 263 children.

More than 100 state policemen swooped down on the lonely community, isolated from most of the state by the Grand Canyon, in a pre-dawn raid Sunday and arrested most of the town's adults. Gov. Howard Pyle said Short Creek was the scene of an insurrection and that all teenage girls had been forced into plural marriages before their 15th birthdays.

Some of the men had six wives and almost all marriages were plural. But few of the wives, in conversations with newsmen, condemned polygamy.

Wait in School Yard

The Short Creekers, secretly warned the police were coming, were waiting in the school yard singing "America" beneath a waving flag as the authorities arrived.

Pyle said the raid, planned for 26 months, was necessary to protect the lives and futures of children he described as the "product and victims of the foulest conspiracy you could imagine."

Leaders of the colony, which calls itself the United Effort Plan, called the raid "persecution." Colony leader LeRoy S. Johnson said it was "the most cowardly act ever

Man Killed In Gun Battle With Police

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., July 27 —UP— A Fort Worth man shot it out in the dark with police Sunday night after he had killed a bar owner but was killed himself in the exchange of bullets.

Police identified the bar owner as Griffin Arnold Heath, 48, and the Fort Worth man as Ernest Dexter Skipper, 22, a merchant seaman stationed in Corpus Christi.

James H. Avant, assistant police chief, reconstructed the scene:

Skipper had gone to the bar and apparently became involved in an argument with Heath. Skipper left and returned with a rifle and fired one shot, killing Heath.

Four-Time Ex-Convict Blamed For Houston, Ennis Murders

DALLAS, July 27—UP—The solution of two unsolved murders in Houston and Ennis, Tex., appeared near Monday after a redhaired woman placed the blame on a four-time ex-convict.

The ex-convict, Wayne Martin (Red) Walker, Fort Worth, released only a month ago from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., was in the Dallas county jail awaiting transfer to Houston.

Walker is being questioned in the shooting death of Staff Sgt. Julius W. Pruitt of Sheppard Air Force Base, Wichita Falls, Tex., and the beating death of Eugene Sullivan of Lipscomb, Ala. Pruitt was from Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Arrested in Texarkana

Arrested last week in Texarkana, Walker, 34, was taken to Oklahoma City along with his woman companion, who lives in Houston.

The couple was brought to Dallas Sunday night and the woman related a series of events that led to the killing of the two Alabamans.

Sheriff Bill Decker of Dallas county and Sheriff C. V. (Buster) Kern of Harris county heard her story and planned to remove Walker to Houston Monday.

The woman said she and Walker, in a stolen car, had picked up Sullivan near Woodward, Okla. Sullivan had been working in the Kansas wheat fields.

Met in Cafe

She said they came to Fort Worth and met Pruitt in a cafe. The four left Dallas with Sullivan riding with Pruitt. Pruitt was en route to Houston to get his family where they were visiting relatives.

New Petition Asks Drainage

Two petitions, instead of one, will be presented to the City Commission Tuesday, the latest one dealing with drainage along S. Tignor.

The latest petition, City Manager B. H. Cruce reported, was presented him late Saturday and was signed by 29 residents in the area of S. Tignor and E. Frederic.

The petitioners asked that the approach of Tignor to E. Frederic be lowered and that culverts be furnished and installed by the city at each private driveway and at each intersection of Tignor with another street.

Of the 29 signers, 10 are not residents of the city, Cruce observed, looking over the addresses on the petition. Nine of the 10 live on E. Frederic, east of Tignor, which is outside the city limits and one lives on the side of Tignor which is outside the city limits.

The city manager said the area is so flat water from the recent rains had drained into some of the houses. He said the city had attempted to grade the bar ditches on each side of Tignor — an unpaved street — so the water would drain off into a draw south of the city. What has happened, Cruce estimated, was that some of the culverts of private driveways have been stopped up.

So far as the culverts at intersections are concerned, they may eventually go in, but the city

Senate Feud Renewed With McCarthy Jibe At Monroney

WASHINGTON, July 27 —UP— The Senate's liveliest feud of several years was renewed Monday when Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) charged Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D-Okla.), with doing "an evil service. . . to the Communist party," by attacking him.

Monroney said Sunday on a television show that the new Republican administration has produced "molehills of legislation and mountains of McCarthy."

The two have been trading sharp, angry jibes for a week, both on and off the Senate floor.

Stung by Criticism

Apparently stung by Monroney's new criticism, McCarthy read to newsmen Monday a statement saying Monroney "should be earning his salary working for the people of Oklahoma and America instead of taking over the job of whitewashing and covering up communism and corruption."

Monroney was not immediately available for comment.

"I feel no personal ill will toward Monroney," McCarthy said. "I don't think he realizes the evil service he is rendering to the Communist party."

Welcome to Megaphone

McCarthy said Monroney was welcome to the job of becoming a "megaphone on the Senate floor" through which "fellow travelers and Communists. . . could spew forth their smear and character assassination against anyone hurting the Communist cause."

But he said Monroney used the Senate floor "for smear and character assassination against members of our staff who cannot in turn use the Senate floor to fight back."

McCarthy's mention of "our staff" was in reference to Monroney's Senate speech, deploring the activities of Roy M. Cohn and G. David Schine, counsel and consultant respectively for the permanent investigating subcommittee of which the Wisconsin Republican is chairman. Monroney called them "Keystone Cops."

FIGHTING ENDS

on an American heavy mortar company just behind the ROK lines.

There were no American casualties.

Thus the war which began with a surprise Communist attack against the South Koreans on June 25, 1950, ended three years and 32 days later.

Took 24 865 American Lives

The war had taken 24,865 American lives, and had resulted in 101,368 wounded and more than 10,000 others captured or missing. It had cost the United States around $15 billion.

As the truce goes into effect, one of the first newly created bodies to go into action will be the Military Armistice Commission, charged with overseeing th truce and watching for violations. It is scheduled to meet at 11 a. m. Tuesday. It is composed of 10 members from each side, and, on the UN side, is headed by Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, former commander of the 24th Division.

The war was ending on a somber note.

'Prayers of Thanksgiving'

In Washington President Eisenhower offered "prayers of thanksgiving" for the truce, but he also warned that "an armistice on a single battleground" is not "peace in the world."

Two ceremonies attended the signing of the historic truce documents.

Three hours after the Allied and Communist negotiators had signed the bulky documents in the ceremony at Panmunjom, supreme commander Gen. Mark Clark affixed his signature in a special ceremony at nearby Munsan.

Clark said:

"I cannot find it in me to exult in this hour. Rather, it is a time for prayer that we may succeed in our difficult endeavor to turn this armistice to the advantage of mankind."

South Korean Looks On

Looking on was South Korean Gen. Choi Duk Shin, personal representative of President Syngman Rhee who opposed and almost scuttled the truce and who still opposes it.

The South Koreans boycotted the Panmunjom ceremony.

The Panmunjom signing was carried on with clock-like precision and in stony silence.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, chief Allied negotiator, signed for the United Nations.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il signed for the Communists.

Neither spoke to the other.

Negotiators 'Lock' Eyes

At the end, at 10:11 a. m. when he had finished signing his papers, Nam Il glanced anxiously at his watch and then for a long moment locked eyes with Harrison.

Then he got up and strode stiffly from the building. Clark signed nine copies of the three-language armistice accord, and nine other copies ware dispatched to the Red commanders—North Korean Marshal Kim Il Sung and Chinese Gen. Peng Teh-Huai.

A proclamation from Kim and Peng, broadcast by Peiping Radio claimed the armistice was a "glorious victory" for the Communist forces and opened the way toward "settlement by peaceful means of the Korean question."

In contrast, Clark warned that the armistice does not guarantee either peace or early UN troop removal from Korea.

"It is my fervent hope," he said, "that this suspension of the fighting will lead to peace. But experience has taught us that we must be prepared for any eventuality."

PAMPANS IN IDAHO — Mr. and Mrs. Loyal Davies, Pampa, receive congratulations and a gift from Alex D. Creek (center), chairman of the Idaho Falls, Idaho, Chamber of Commerce tourist committee, on being the 2,000th recipient of tourist service this summer.

Pampans Honored As Tourists In Idaho

(Special to The News)

IDAHO FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Loyal Davies, 1910 Hamilton street, Pampa, were jointly honored last week as the 2000th tourists of the 1953 summer season to be helped by the Tourist Aide Service of the Idaho Falls, Idaho, Chamber of Commerce.

Actually, one of the couple was the 1999th and the other was the 2000th recipient of Idaho Falls hospitality, but the honors were evenly divided between them.

Chairman Alex D. Creek of the chamber's Tourist Committee handed them a package of souvenir items, including some indicative of eastern Idaho's industry. These included a miniature sack of beet sugar, a jar of cheese and a small box of dehydrated mashed potato.

The Davies' came to Idaho Falls by way of Yellowstone national park and the nearby fishing area of Island Park. Mrs. Davies reports that they became interested in this general area as a result of a travel article in a national magazine, but they stopped at Idaho Falls.

Davies is district superintendent of Cities Service Oil company.

manager emphasized, the city does not install culverts for private driveways.

The other petition will be the request by property owners around Rham and Wells that the zoning ordinance making that area strictly residential be enforced, and that no building permits be issued for structures other than residential. That petition came in early last week.

Other items coming before the commission tomorrow will be the third and final readings on the three ordinances affecting keeping of livestock, fowls and dogs within the city limits; awarding the contract for extension of the box culvert at Almeda Park on N. Duncan; and further discussion of the requested deed for 10 acres of land at Recreation Park to the Texas National Guard.

The latter will be taken up only if City Atty. Bob Gordon is back from his vacation.

Further discussion on the underpass at Hobart and the new roof for City Hall will be postponed until after Aug. 1, when James H. Cowan the city's new director of public works, reports for duty.

perpetrated in the United States."

The United Effort group claims to follow the original tenets of the Mormon Church, but officials of the recognized Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) Church, which repudiated polygamy 63 years ago, said all Mormons in Short Creek had been excommunicated for violation of the faith's moral code.

'Need Two Wives'

One girl, dressed plainly like all the others, said she had been told since she was "three or four" that all men had to have at least two wives to get to Heaven.

The raiders found fantastic geologies among the cultists. Some men are married to their wives' daughters, and one three-year-old son of an 80-year-old father is the great-great uncle of a baby his own age. The old man has five wives and more than 28 children.

By nightfall yesterday 33 of 36 male cultists had been arrested and the state was prepared to extradiate those who fled to nearby Utah.

Rep. Rogers Won't Vote For Refugee, Postal Rate Bills

Rep. Walter Rogers will not vote for the increased first class mail postal rate or the bill authorizing 240,000 refugees to enter the United States.

The Pampa congressman, in his weekly newsletter, said the two bills will be the primary factors in delaying the adjournment of the 83rd Congress because of the hot opposition to both.

The admission to America of the refugees will be supported, he said, by the liberal elements of both parties and "those who feel constrained to follow the President's recommendaiton, regardless what they might be." The Southern Democratic bloc, he said, will oppose legislation almost to a man. This solid opposition plus the general scattered opposition over the country will make the vote very close, and probably defeat it in the House.

The same type of legislation was losing ground during the Truman administration, Rogers said, and its opponents then are not likely to change their views now simply because it is endorsed by President Eisenhower.

Rogers termed the bill "risky legislation which could cause much trouble to this country if passed."

Many members of Congress feel the average "John Q. Citizen" is being called upon to subsidize the second, third, and fourth class mails which have never paid their ways. While the bil is highly controversial in the House, Rogers predicted it would have even tougher sledding in the Senate.

A substitute bill, which Rogers sees little chance of passing, would place mail rate fixing in the hands of the postmaster general.

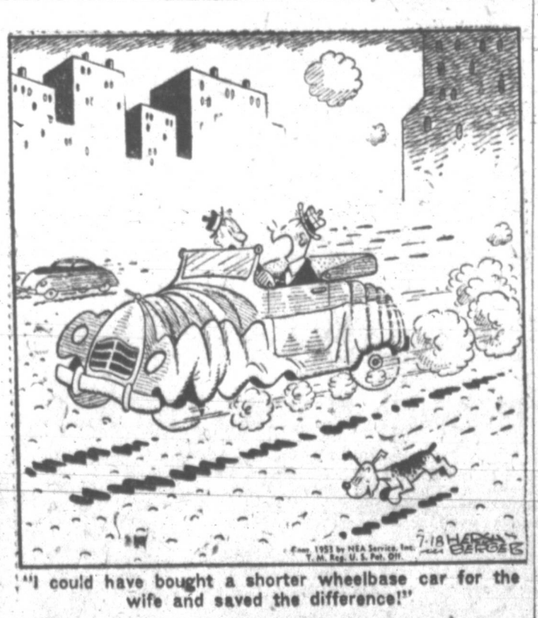

"Since first class mail is used by Mr. Average Citizen, who does not have a lobby in Washington, vocal opposition to this added tax on him has come from many members of the House who realize what is going on," Rogers continued.

The big argument, Rogers said, for the mail rate increase is the $700 million deficit of the Post Office Department.

He flayed the action of Congress in allocating more than six billion for foreign aid—nine times the postal deficit—which now makes a total of $14 billion of tax money going over seas.

"The big question is," he concluded, 'are we going to increase the tax burden on the average citizen by a postal increase while sending billions overseas?"

"Not by my vote," he declared.

"I could have bought a shorter wheelbase car for the wife and saved the difference!"

Expert Advises Antique Hunters To Get Acquainted With Item Before Buying

This expert advises antique hunters to get acquainted with the subject before doing any reckless buying. He is Charles Duveen, shown here pointing out finely carved detail on William and Mary side chair, formerly in the collection of Lord Sandys, Ombersley Court, England, and now in his own collection.

By ANNETTE JEWETT
NEA Staff Writer

Is tracking down antiques part of your vacation fun?

"Every woman to her own taste," says Charles Duveen, expert and lecturer on antiques, "but don't think you're getting an 'antique' when you're merely getting something old. In other words, buy with your eyes open."

Speaking on his favorite subject, that which he knows most about, this expert held forth from one of his Charles II chairs, dating from 1670. His feet rested on an antique Kirman rug. The bases of the lamps in his home are Chinese porcelain vases from the 18th century. When he wants to look at his television set, he opens the door of an elaborately carved cupboard dating from the reign fo Elizabeth I.

"An antique is not any old thing out of your grandmother's attic. The customs department says that it must date prior to 1830. Why? Because roughly then the Industrial Revolution was ushered in and furniture was no longer handcrafted."

Asked for some advice to pass on to women who like to hunt for antiques, Duveen replied, "When you're dealing in antiques, you're dealing in beauty. That's why it's so difficult to advise anyone who's trying to get a sure guide to the real things."

But, nevertheless, he was able to give the antique fancier some helpful hints.

He advises, for instance, that you put the burden of knowledge on yourself and not on the dealer. If you're putting money into stocks and bonds, for example, you investigate beforehand as thoroughly as possible. It should be the same with antiques. You can visit your local museums and study good examples so that you'll have standards for comparison. You can become to some degree an authority simply by reading and looking at plates. Above all, if you're visiting areas where genuine indigenous antiques abound, you'll have best chance of all to see and get to know them, in homes.

"According to my personal definition," says Charles Duveen, "an antique must be contemporary with the designer. If the piece is said to be a Sheraton, for example, it must date between 1770 and 1810 and absolutely no later.

"To my way of thinking, the piece becomes a copy even a few years beyond that period, for it cannot possess the spirit of the original. Decorative details become merely laid on, like an afterthought, in the copy. Even in the restored piece, the restoration must have taken place within that same period if there was more than about 40 per cent damage. Or else I'd no longer call it an antique.

"You can look at the interior construction for signs of machine work, which immediately make the piece not an antique. About the hardware, I'd say that needn't be contemporary. It would be impossible not to have to replace the hardware through the years. You have another clue in the size of the piece. Genuine antiques are on the colossal side to go with the type of homes they were designed for."

Mr. Duveen comes by his knowledge quite naturally. His grandfather founded the famous firm of Duveen Brothers. His own father was a pioneer in modern interior decoration. He, himself, has held much experience in the field.

If your dubiousness knows no limits, you can have your antique laboratory analyzed. It won't help you, however, after you've bought it, to know it's spurious. Take counsel, then, and learn something about the subject beforehand.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Miss Friend

I am the daughter of parents who drink. My friends don't have parents like that and it embarrasses me awfully when they drop in before dinner and find my father and mother having a cocktail.

I don't want you to think that my folks are drunkards because they are not. They just like to have a cocktail or two before dinner in the evening. But I can't believe it does them any good and I think that as long as it proves embarrassing to me and my friends it is their duty as parents to change their habits.

I can't tell you how horrible it is to have my friends look at them in amazement. I know they go home and tell their parents and no doubt they think that I am not good enough to be with their daughters.

I feel that this thing is going to ruin my whole life if you can't help me solve it. What shall I do, Miss Friend?

Ruth

Dear Ruth

In order to live with people in this world you have to learn to be tolerant of their habits. You have to realize that they have a right to live their lives as they choose even if they aren't along the lines you would prefer them to follow. This is true of your relations with your parents as well as with other people.

If they have decided that they can meet their obligations and care properly for their family and still have a cocktail before dinner, that is their privilege. You don't have to emulate them. You just have to learn that they think their way is right and perhaps it is right for them.

The fact that your friends return to your home and that their parents welcome you to their's shows that you are over emphasizing their reaction to your parents' cocktails. In this day when cocktails are drunk in many homes and at most parties for adults they undoubtedly have seen them other places than in your home.

Your parents have lived a lot longer than you, and have learned a lot more from experience. Undoubtedly they can be trusted to make their own decisions concerning their habits just as you will want to do when you reach their age.

MATURE PARENT

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Recently in this space, I discussed the problem of a mother whose nine-year-old son is abusive to her. It has attracted the intense interest of a father of seven children.

He writes to me: "I could reform this boy in 12 hours. His mother just has no backbone. Nature often fails to provide one. I never allowed one of my children to cry or even pucker the lips to cry. They were never allowed to speak a word after going to bed. They knew who was boss in their home—ad they worshipped me."

That's too bad. I'm sorry to hear it. In America, we are not supposed to train children to worship their ancestors, near or remote.

Nor does Nature withhold a backbone from any of us. We're each born with one. If they don't hold us up straight and strong, Nature is not accountable.

We've just not had any exercises in holding them up straight and strong. We've had a near ancestor who demanded obeisance and kowtows. We may have had a "boss" who stifled our cries of outrage and sadness because he wanted no "backtalk."

I am suspicious of people who take great pride in their backbones. They are fond of boasting about them whenever we are struggling with a problem of a bullying child. They are treating us with contempt, of course. When they urge us solicitously to acquire a backbone like theirs, we are just on the receiving end of more bullying.

We shouldn't take it.

"My wife had no backbone," confides my correspondent to me. He doesn't report on the state of his children's vertebrae.

Perhaps it's too depressing a subject.

I bet his daughters have bullying children. For that's how it goes. When we've taken great pride in bossing our family, our old age is not apt to be as peaceful as it should be.

We may often have to sake our heads over the defiant goings-on of grandson Bill and granddaughter Mary. We may be very depressed indeed over the bullying treatment they give to the children whom we have cowed into submission.

If we have been such parents, we should have the grace to keep our alarms to ourselves. We seldon do. To the grownup child who is struggling with his inheritance of submission, we give no grace.

We're the very ones who protest, "What's the matter with you? Why don't you put your foot down with those youngsters? Haven't you any backbone?"

You can whip evaporated milk easily this way: Partially freeze a can of evaporated milk in your refrigerator. Then pour the milk into a very cold bowl, add one tablespoon lemon juice to each 2-3 cup milk, and whip.

Fashions Set Pattern On Runway At Amon Carter Field Style Showing

DALLAS, July 27 —UP— Traffic By ANNE LEE cut an interesting pattern on both fashion runways and airfield runways at the new Amon Carter Field midway between Fort Worth and Dallas this past week. Another "first" was thereby marked in Southwest style showings.

In the plush setting of the new field's restaurant, enthusiastic audiences glimpsed styles with a "south of the border" flavor from racks of the field's smart flight shop.

The good neighbor styles traveled to the United States from Mexico City, tagged by Maya De Mexico. And Sherwood of California told a story of equal color.

HEADQUARTERED IN DALLAS

The stacks of sparkling imports and the California line are headquartered in the foreign trade exchange of Dallas' big merchandise mart.

That pair of black velveteen torreador pants shot with black sequins — atop of which was poised a soft white silk blouse — turned heads of both local and traveling spectators at the unusual showing. In addition to its glamour, the costume promises to be a mainstay in the coming season's fashion picture by reason of its practicality in wear for evenings at home.

There was a hand painted and hand sequired costume — in yellow gold and black — destined to sparkle through the cocktail hour in any setting. Designs of Mexican landmarks splattered its fabulously full skirt. Over the total went an elegantly hand loomed goid wool stole.

AFTER FIVE FASHIONS

Although the showing featured mostly "after five" fashions, definite star was the sporty hand loomed cotton skirt and matching box jacket, coupled with its own cotton feed bag purse which was cleverly accented with leather. All the color and line of interesting Mexican lore was reflected in its all-over embroidered design, executed in white with typically bright touches.

A handsome black ribbon taffeta frock, an ensemble with coronation red velvet top and soft black skirt, a hand woven cotton accordion pleated skirt shot with gold and topped by a black halter — all stood out in the pattern at the airport showing.

SEWN BY HAND

And as the sparkle of the heavily sequined imports caught the eye, 'twas difficult to realize each tiny piece of glitter was actually sewn by hand. Equally miraculous was the fact that the beautifully decorated cottons were hand touched by brush.

Both lines of ready to wear, principally distributed to the South west market by the foreign exchange, have reached out to give the country a touch of real southwestern lore.

And the flight shop has plans on tap for additional showings at the new field, giving airbound passengers and local visitors a sample of southwestern know-how in smart women's wear.

Methodist Youth Caravan To Help With Church Work

A Methodist Youth Caravan will work with youth and adult workers at the Pampa Methodist churches this week. The caravan will lead discussion groups, share in the fellowship experiences with the youth of the community and church, serve as resource persons in planning the youth program, assist in leadership education, set up workshops from practical experience in youth work and be available for service in the church.

This caravan consists of three students and an adult conselor who work as a team. Included in the work is Miss Delane Adams of Olton. She attended Texas Tech and is a second grade teacher.

Misses Nancy Bonhannon of Moreland, Ga., Joan Davis of Houston and Florine Dougan of Oklahoma City are also team members.

Manners Make Friends

It's nice to have country cousins if you're a city dweller, but don't impose on their hospitality. Some people who wouldn't think of descending uninvited on city friends or relatives will invite themselves to spend a month with a relative who lives on a farm.

A safe rule is to be as considerate of your country as of your city cousins, and to be just as meticulous about returning their hospitality.

RUTH MILLETT

A wife inquires: "Why don't you print a letter about the in-laws who are good and kind, but expect to be repaid by spending all their time with their children?

"My husband's parents have a home of their own, but never spend an evening in it.

"Practically every evening they come to our house and stay until bedtime. My husband and I are so tired of it we don't know what to do. We don't want to hurt their feelings, but I feel they should have enough common courtesy to realize that we would like a little privacy.

"They always say: 'When you folks are ready to go to bed just say so and we will go home.'

"This has gone on for several years, ever since we have lived near them.

"None of our friends ever come to see us any more and I know it is because we are never alone and they don't feel fre to come.

"What can we do about a situation like this? I'm afraid if my husband says anything to them they will feel they are not welcome to come at all and I don't want that. All we ask is a little consideration on their part. But how can we get it?"

MAKES DIFFICULT PROBLEM

What makes your problem so difficult is that you have let a situation go on so long that it has become routine.

It is always easier to prevent that kind of routine from being established than to try to change it after it has become habitual.

But you might try this:: Make a real effort to change your own routine enough so that your parents-in-law will have to change theirs.

Start going out to movies in the evening or visit the friends who have been drifting away. Go bowling or to ball games, or whatever your town offers in the way of recreation. Get so busy doing things that you can't sit at home entertaining your in-laws night after night.

If you keep that up for a few months, perhaps they will be forced to make friends of their own and to find some kind of activity to fill some of their eveninga.

You've made it too easy for them to spend every evening with you. Now you'll have to do just the opposite to break the pattern.

Is It Necessary

The federal government is in the coffee roasting business; the box-making business; the rope making business, and about 100 other commercial and industrial-type activities.

To what extent are these activities — supported by taxpayers' money — in unfair competition with private business which produces tax revenue?

How many of these activities are essential?

That is what a House Government Operations subcommittee headed by Rep. Cecil Harden (R-Ind.) is endeavoring to find out.

A vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Clem D. Johnston of Roanoke, Va., has suggested to the subcommittee that it apply a five-point "necessity test" to each "business activity" of the federal government:

1. Is it essential that the government carry on this activity? In the military establishment is it affirmatively demonstrated that such activity is absolutely required for military effectiveness?

2. If a government enterprise carries on this activity, could it not be provided by private enterprise? Does the government operate the activity more efficiently and economically than other available sources?

3. Is the government peculiarly fitted to perform this service? Why? Precisely how?

4. Is there continuity of demand for this product or service such that private risk capital could reasonably be expected to take on the activity?

5. Are these accurate records of all elements of cost?

Johnston said that in most government business-type activities, complete and accurate costs are not kept. "Rarely is any charge for interest on government funds or investment made. In many cases, only direct material and labor costs are charged against production — thus leaving out all overhead items which private competition must cover to stay in business."

We would like to suggest to Johnston and the United States Chamber of Commerce that a re-examination of the purpose of government be made. Rather than a necessity test of such governmental programs as are being operated in competition with private enterprise, the real test ought to be based on the assumption that the prime function of government is the protection of the lives and property of citizens from those who would initiate force against them. Such a government of course would be operated at a minimum with definite limitations upon its power. With such limitations it follows naturally that the cost of government would be minimal and with the consent of the governed. Could such an optimum be reached, then the producers of the nation would be free to continue to add to the wealth and progress of all of us, freeing us from the dead hand of government that now is a constant and steady drain on our resources, energy and production.

What Is Strategic?

In the discussions during recent months of the propriety of the actions of certain of our allies in the Korean war in trading with the Chinese Reds, it has been brought out that such trade is confined to "non-strategic" items. For some reason, though, the list of items considered "strategic" has been a well-kept secret.

A clue to this puzzling matter was revealed in a recent wire service dispatch which reported the Peiping Red Radio as announcing that Britain and Red China have signed an 84 million dollar agreement. Terms of the agreement, which as this is written, has not been denied by the British government, provide that Britain will sell China metal and metal products, machines, electrical appliances, chemical materials, tools, instruments, medicine, surgical equipment, communications and transport equipment.

Now we know, at least, what "strategic" is not. And although inclusion of some of the items on the list may surprise us, we can be gratified that atom bombs apparently are still considered strategic, anyway.

Our Gal Bobo

To inveterate soap opera listeners, the story of Bobo Rockefeller's encampment in her husband's New York penthouse while the husband is in Arkansas seeking a divorce on grounds of desertion is a natural. One can almost hear the announcer asking: "Can this simple small town girl, daughter of a Lithuanian-born coal miner, find happiness married to the scion of one of America's wealthiest families?"

Bobo can't see why not. She say she doesn't believe in divorce where children are involved. She doesn't want a million dollar settlement; she just wants to stay married. And she adds, she sees "no reason why an oil digger should be any better than a coal digger."

Will Winthrop stay in Arkansas? Will the Park Avenue penthouse be sold out from under Bobo? We can't predict what will happen when you tune in tomorrow, but of one thing we're reasonably sure: Bobo's got an awfully smart publicity agent.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

A Libertarian's Approach To The Highway Problem

Everyone certainly realizes that the highway problem is getting more serious all the time with more accidents and more congestion.

Undoubtedly this was the reason that the General Motors Corporation offered very liberal prizes on the subject "How to Plan and Pay for the Safe and Adequate Highways We Need."

A libertarian friend of mine from Canton, Ohio, sent me a copy of his entry on this subject. He knows that I am a libertarian because he invited me to one of their meetings when I was in Canton, Ohio, where libertarians meet weekly and discuss questions on government and moral and economic problems. That is one advantage of being a libertarian — you get acquainted with libertarians all over the world.

In writing me, he explained that he did not expect to win any prize in this contest because three out of the five judges were employees of the government, and since he believes the governmenet should stay out of business, they of course would not have the same basis from which to reason as he has.

He said that he had used his article as the basis of two talks to civic clubs during the past week and surprisingly "it was received better than I had expected it to be received, and if anyone thought I was cracked in the head he was courteous enough not to say so."

Then he says: "As one libertarian to another, I thought you might be interested in reading my attempt."

Then he invites me to let him know the next time I am in Ohio, which I certainly will try to do because I enjoy very much meeting with this libertarian group.

"Out Of The Dilemma"

He explains that every productive attempt made by the government always faces a dilemma as to the kind of service and its inability to make it self - supporting. Then he remarks:

"When the highway problem reaches the impasse which it is even now approaching, one can be certain the government will not look to itself to discover the rascal of the dilemma. The government is not so constructed. It is then that restrictions will be placed against either the improved quality or number of conveyances. The blame will be on private industry and individual citizens. One need only look into other fields where government has encroached to support this prediction. Witness the home building industry where the inflation (government produced) caused increased costs and where government rent control discouraged investment building thereby bringing about a shortage of houses at a low cost (again a figure determined by the government as a desirable cost). The rascal in the predicament was obviously government. What was it government proposed as a solution? Did it propose to stop causing inflation? No! It proposed to go directly into the housing business itself or to indirectly accomplish the same by issuing edicts deciding for the builder what kind of house he should build, what materials he might use, to whom he might sell, and by whom the house - purchase should be financed (frequently by government - guaranteed loans)."

Then he points out that the last part of his article will be concerned with:

1. The principles underlying the determination of right powers vs. wrong powers of government.

2. The alternative to government-built, owned and operated highways.

3. Evidence to support this alternative.

Then he states:

"The founders of our country said the just powers of the government are derived from the consent of the governed. The source of government is from each individual person who with other individuals came together to form the government. Therefore, the government can be proper only when it confines its activities to those rights of individuals properly delegated to it. When we explore the rights of man, one must of necessity go to the source of man's rights — God.

"The Ten Commandments deal with the proper relationship between God and man, and the proper relationship between man and man. The first commandment says God is supreme and no one else should enter between man and God. Therefore, man has a right from God to live his life as he wishes subject only to the will of God. This right properly includes the right to own property as an extension of the right to live. The right to own property is supported again by another commandment which restrains one from stealing another's property. The first four commandments emphasize man's subservience to no one but God. The fifth commandment is a special exception for children, for it assigns to parents the responsibility for their children. The last five commandments spell out each man's right to his life, his property, his reputation, and the sacredness of marriage. As a result, each man has a right to his life, freedom to live his live as he wishes, and the right to sustain his life with the products of his own labor. These rights did not come from governments. They came from God, as an essential part of His great purpose.

"Since each individual man has the God - given right to his life, liberty, and property, it logically follows he also has the right to protect them. However, one man may be more capable of protecting his rights than another, just as one man is more capable of growing wheat, and another man more capable of manufacturing shoes. Because of this men found it desirable to join together and appoint an agent (government) to handle the protection of these rights for them while they went about the particular skill to which they were best suited. The method used by the agent to protect these rights is the use of force, restraining or punishing those who violate these rights. This means the government should have in its power a force greater than the force of the violator, or the government would be inadequate. But since the government requires this greater force, it also means that is has the power to violate even to a greater degree the rights of its people than any violator from whom its people have sought to be protected. The danger lies in the government itself taking away the right of a man to his life by becoming a murderer, or the right of a man to his freedom by becoming a monopolist, or the right of a man to his property by becoming a robber. Or, as in this case, the government enters into and monopolizes by law a field which thenceforth is doomed to be static or at best mediocre in its achievements."

Japanese People Getting Tired Of American Occupation Army

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — While Japanese infantry trainees shout such orders as "Ki o tsukero" (Take cover) at the Army's crack infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., their civilian brothers at home shout "Go home, Yankee" at almost every appearance of American troops on the streets of Tokyo, Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Our belated attempt to rearm an embittered populace has raised another Far Eastern problem at the very time when the Korean difficulty promises to diminish.

The prospect of a settlement on the nearby peninsula accounts for our current program of Japanese remilitarization, even though the MacArthur Constitution forbids forever any resort to war by the vanquished nation.

If American troops eventually withdraw from Korea, Washington does not believe that such key positions as the Japanese islands, Okinawa and Iwo Jima, can remain exposed to possible Russian or Chinese attack. Full reliance cannot be entrusted to Syngman Rhee's native force, especially as the Koreans and Japanese are historic enemies. They could never cooperate.

Military Plans

Following the recent exchange of notes between Premier Yoshida and the White House, the United States and Japan are now engaged in negotiations for military rebuilding of Japan. It is planned tentatively to increase the National Safety Corps from 100,000 to 300,000, to create a 1,500-plane air force and a naval complement of 200-300 destroyers and submarines.

Pending measures appropriate about $200,000,000 for weapons, training and offshore purchases of equipment. Ironically, the military rearmament document may be signed on or about Sept. 2, which was the day in 1945 when the Japanese surrender was accepted on the deck of the U.S.S. Missouri.

Although Japanese Socialists and Communists have capitalized on talks and plans, the protest against American occupation and our demand for a national security establishment is both popular and general. It has become even more violent within the last few weeks, and the Yoshida government, strangely, makes no effort to suppress it or punish the more extreme offenders.

Pride And Nationalism

Japanese discontent, as is true in Germany and France, derives from the rebirth of a spirit of pride and nationalism. The dull acquiescence to the acceptance of ever-present occupation forces in early postwar years have disappeared. The natives want to run their own affairs, whereas alien soldiers appear in the guise of receivers for a bankrupt nation.

They maintain that the Americans are responsible for a great increase in vice, although statistics do not support the charge. They also complain about our use of land, buildings and facilities needed for residential, farming or industrial purposes. A rapidly expanding population intensifies these anti-foreigner pressures.

The government's attitude in the face of an almost indecent condemnation of the Americans is especially disturbing. It makes no move to censor theaters which portray a Japanese girl in the act of killing two U.S. soldiers in defense of her sister's honor—a scene which always draws heavy applause. There is no action against "true" or "confession" magazines cluttered with similar themes by alleged victims.

False Charges In Press

Japanese newspapers have begun to level the same indictment against Franklin D. Roosevelt that has been heard in recent presidential campaigns here. They charge that he "deliberately" provoked the bombing of Pearl Harbor in order to engage the U.S. in the war on the side of the Allies. Not even that accusation brought any sign of dissent or displeasure from Yoshida, although the files of the War Office disprove it.

Diplomats returning from Tokyo give a logical but sinister explanation for the government's indifference. The anti-American prejudice is so deep and widespread, according to this theory, that Yoshida would jeopardize his tenuous control, if he were to oppose it.

Indeed, there are forecasts that he may fall, if and when he signs a formal agreement for continued American occupation and Japanese rearmament. This explains why the negotiations are now being conducted with a maximum of secrecy.

The problem becomes more complicated and dangerous because, barring permanent peace with Moscow and Peiping, we must always retain Japan as an American Gibraltar in the Far Pacific.

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

The easiest way to describe cataracts is to liken them to what happens with a camera. When the lens of a camera is badly smudged, the picture which it takes will be cloudy. A cataract is that part of the eye which serves as a lens. Objects viewed through a clouded lens are no longer clear and sharp.

Cataracts usually develop in the later years of life. A cataract is one of the difficulties with vision which tend to occur with advancing age. Occasionally one can be present at birth and sometimes it it connected with certain diseases.

The amount of disturbance in sight depends on whether all or only a part of the lens is affected, and also on the degree of the clouding. For this reason persons with cataracts do not all have the same amount of difficulty. Also, cataracts vary in the speed with which the clouding of the lens progresses.

It is common to speak of a beginning cataract as "incipient" and, when it is full grown and not getting worse, as mature, or "ripe." The general opinion is that there are no medical treatments, that is, drugs, which can be used to dissolve the material which clouds the lens and to restore normal vision. This may come some day and promising work in this direction has been reported.

At present, the preferred treatment for cataract is an operation. Results are usually good. Formerly, it was necessary to wait until a cataract was mature, or ripe, before it could be removed. Now surgical methods are available which make it possible to remove a lens with a cataract on it any stage. This is a tremendous advance as it may prevent years of poor vision.

CAUSES NOT KNOWN

The causes of cataract are not known, but certainly age plays a part and in some cases, diabetes, occupation, injury, or perhaps heredity.

There is no reason to believe that eye strain leads to the development of cataract, though of course it can lead to other disturbances of the eye. The most encouraging developments regarding cataracts are those in surgery, which often makes possible their removal before being ripe.

Jones came back from his vacation proud of his bulging muscles.

Jones — (bragging) Look at these arms.

His co-workers admitted his muscles and asked if he got them from rowing.

Jones — (scornfully) From rowing? I got them from pulling fish into the boat.

'Harmless' Disclosure Moves CIA To Twitch In Every Fiber

By WESTBROOK PEGLER
(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The very spirit and substance of the Central Intelligence Agency are so flagrantly un-American that it is frightening to find the President joining in the abuse of a man who merely said Congress had a right to examine one of its favored employees regarding a gift of money for the defense of a proven traitor. I note that the President upheld those who have maneuvered him into a fight with Joe McCarthy which may split the Republican party into hostile halves.

It is not a harsh generalization to say that West Pointers are less sensitive than enlightened civilians are to the danger of secret authority over the people. West Pointers can operate only by unchallenged authority. No officer can let any subordinate dispute him. If two or more subordinates combine to disobey him that is mutiny.

President Ike's war-time chief of staff, Bedell Smith, who rose from the rank of major to that of lieutenant - general, notwithstanding the unexplained lapse of eight hours in handing to Gen. Marshall the message which "meant war," was director of the CIA under Truman. With the gentlest personal sentiments toward Smith, I must insist, on the basis of some experience among investigators, detectives and "intelligence" people, also called spies, that he is not a great "intelligence" man. Whether he was at all responsible for the failure to find Marshall and the fatal delay in shoving the word along to Kimmel and Short in Honolulu, he has never been called upon to say under oath. In 1944 the Germans scraped together an army and slugged Eisenhower and Bradley with a surprise at the Bulge which impelled old Gen. Peyton March, of World War I, to exclaim that there had been a disgraceful failure of "intelligence" in the American Army. That "intelligence" was Gen. Smith's responsibility as chief of staff.

I knew no more about the CIA than most of our people know right now until one day last fall some seemingly harmless information fell into my hands which caused the CIA to twitch in every fiber. I learned that an important general of ours had been a guest, free, in an expensive suite in the Waldorf maintained permanently by a rich New York manufacturer who, as I was told later, made a hobby of "collecting" generals. This seemed unimportant, but you would have thought I had sprung the time-lock on the CIA's inner vault.

I have learned that this New York manufacturer, with the hobby of "collecting" generals, let in five of them, including Ike and Smith on a stock proposition which has increased ten-fold and that during the presidential campaign of 1952 the manufacturer got ready a careful audit so that he could spring it instantly if the Democrats should try to make anything sinister of the deal. I sent a cable to the manufacturer who was then in London, but got no answer.

I don't make anything sinister of it myself, but I do note that the merest mention of the man's hospitality to a general touched a hot nerve in the CIA. My limited information indicates that Ike, Smith and the other generals wouldn't get rich even if they were to sell out now. But I recall the furor over the disclosure by Judge Ferdinand Pecora in the Wall Street investigation early in the New Deal that J. P. Morgan included John Pershing in a list of public men who were let in on a distribution of stock below the market because, the House of Morgan wanted them to know it was thinking of them. Pershing had done nothing for J. P. Morgan and Co., unless you want to say that he bailed them out by saving their greatest debtor, the British government, from defeat and bankruptcy, I am not suggesting that Ike and these other generals did anything for this manufacturer, but the CIA was so touchy that I wonder why. This man spent some time at Ike's headquarters at Rheims during the drive to Germany and enjoyed further hospitality at his headquarters in Germany after the victory. But I am told, on authority which I accept as truthful, that although his line of business parallels one of Germany's historic specialties, the New York figure scrupulously refrained from exploiting his position for profit.

Since then I have received from several sources a great deal of information about the CIA, most of it unpleasant, which may have been planted on me by the CIA, itself. This nasty business is contrary to the character of American civil government as we knew it before the long, relentless course of brain-washing under the Roosevelt-Truman regime robbed us of our old concepts and some moral principles.

No government bureau can be trusted absolutely to refrain from stealing, misappropriating or throwing away our money, and to keep Communists and other traitors and alien spies out of its own ranks. In fact Smith once admitted that there might be Reds right in CIA with him. Not even Edgar Hoover and his bureau enjoy the weird sanctity with which its own CIA. No group of men in all our functionaries have invested the country is that good.

INVISIBLE COMPROMISE
(The Chicago Daily Tribune)

Sen. Knowland, the Republican floor leader, has stated that Mr. Eisenhower, who formerly had registered his opposition, now supports the objectives of the Bricker amendment. But, according to the senator, Mr. Eisenhower is troubled by the language of the amendment, especially by what he calls "the 'which' clause."

The Bricker proposal would amend the Constitution to provide that there shall be no impairment of American sovereignty or of the supremacy of the Constitution or domestic law as a result of any treaty undertakings. The "which" clause is found in this sentence: "A treaty shall become effective as internal law in the United States only thru legislation which would be valid in the absence of a treaty."

Now, of course, this is the heart of the amendment. If Mr. Eisenhower proposes to compromise his differences by trying to persuade Sen. Bricker and the majority of senators in agreement with him to eliminate this provision, he is, in essence, proposing to render the amendment meaningless.

The President confirmed this impression at his press conference Wednesday when he said he would never agree to anything that interfered with the separation of powers reposing in the executive and in the legislative branches. Thus he indicated his implacable hostility to the "which" clause.

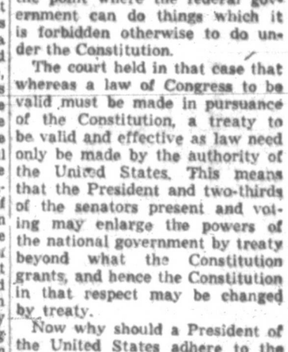

This clause was intended to deal specifically with a pernicious doctrine enunciated in 1920 by the Supreme court in the migratory bird case, where the court held that, under treaties, the law can be endlessly expanded, even to the point where the federal government can do things which it is forbidden otherwise to do under the Constitution.

The court held in that case that whereas a law of Congress to be valid must be made in pursuance of the Constitution, a treaty to be valid and effective as law need only be made by the authority of the United States. This means that the President and two-thirds of the senators present and voting may enlarge the powers of the national government by treaty beyond what the Constitution grants, and hence the Constitution in that respect may be changed by treaty.

Now why should a President of the United States adhere to the idea that it is a good thing to have an expansible Constitution, and why should he insist that the particular clause in the Bricker amendment which prescribes a rigid obedience to the limitations of the Constitution be stricken?

The President is the principal agent in exercising the treaty power, and if he is of the mind, he can use it to accomplish results which are not otherwise possible to him under the Constitution. The question naturally arises: What, on this order, does he want to do?

"Oh, well," remarked Jack, "old Mrs. Brown wasn't born when that was written."

Henson's Four-Hitter Stops Pioneers 3-0

Oilers Score All Runs In 1st Frame

CLOVIS, July 27—Big Jake Henson won his fourth game and second shutout for the Pampa Oilers here Sunday night when he set the Clovis Pioneers down on four hits — all singles—for a 3-0 Pampa victory.

The Oiler win moved them within 1½ games of the first division as the fourth place Plainview Ponies bowed to sixth place Amarillo Sunday, 7-4.

Henson was never in serious trouble from the first inning on after his mates had given him a three-run margin to work on. Henson, who brought his record to 4-4 for the season, walked only one Pioneer and struck out five.

The Oilers went to work quickly on Pioneer pitcher Roy Parker. Deck Woldt and Ben Felder drew successive walks to get the Oiler offensive moving and Woldt scampered across with the first run on Doug Lewis' single. Felder and Lewis took an extra base when Paul Flores bobbled Lewis' hit. Quincy Barbee then singled to score Felder and Lewis. That concluded the nights' scoring but Henson didn't need any more as he turned in his top performance of the season.

Pampa filled the bases in the fourth inning on Henson's single and walks to Molberg and Woldt. Parker tightened to retire the side on a pop foul.

George Lambrinos, Pampa, left fielder, doubled in the ninth inning. The hit was the only extra-base blow of the game. He advanced to third on an infield out but that ended the threat.

Virgil Richardson, Clovis first baseman, singled past second in the second inning. Ben Felder got a late start on the ball and it just got past him for a single. After that, Clovis had to wait until the seventh inning for a hit.

Frank Benites singled sharply past shortstop for the second Clovis safety.

Pete Carmona drilled a pitch down the left field foul line in the eighth, but he was thrown out attempting to stretch the hit into a double. Don Moore had the fourth single for Clovis.

Dukes To 1st In WTNM Race

By UNITED PRESS

The Albuquerque Dukes ended Lubbock's reign over the West Texas - New Mexico League at least temporarily Sunday night by trimming the Hubbers 4 to 3 and taking over undisputed possession of first place.

Seventh place Borger kicked Abilene deeper into the cellar by "edging" the Blue Sox 20 to 19 in a 44-hit affair. Amarillo beat Plainview, 7 to 4 and Pampa blanked Clovis, 3 to 0.

The Borger Gassers crossed the plate nine times in the opening frame and eight more times in the second inning and then settled down to what they thought would be an easy victory. However, Abilene picked away at the lead with a run in the first, one in the second five in the third, four in the eighth and a big eight in the ninth stanza. One run by Borger in the eighth frame saved the game.

The Dukes scored three runs in the first inning and added an important tally in the second to nip Lubbock. Each team got six hits.

The revitalized Amarillo Gold Sox trailed 4 to 2 in the eighth inning and then quickly took control of the game with five runs. The Gold Sox got six hits compared to Plainview's 14.

Pampa opened its game with Clovis with three runs in the initial frame and then coasted the rest of the way.

Braves Not Through Cholly Grimm Says

BROOKLYN, July 27 —UP—A defiant Charley Grimm, stubbornly refusing to admit his Milwaukee Braves are "through" despite a virtual rebacle in Brooklyn, hustled his team homeward Monday in hopes of finding a new winning touch.

"We're not through yet," trumpeted Grimm in the gloom that hung over the Braves' dressing room after their doubleheader loss to the Dodgers Sunday.

"The only thing we need are some base hits," said Charley with his usual win-or-lose good humor. "And maybe we can get 'em when we get back home. Why, we could have won these two games instead of losing them if we had just got a couple of hits at the right time."

Trucks Out in Lead

CHICAGO, July 27—UP—The American League had a new earned run leader among pitchers Monday—Virgil Trucks, who only last month was traded by the Browns to the White Sox, By recording his second straight shutout Sunday. Trucks reduced his ERA to 2.50.

Work on New Fight

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 27 —UP — Promote Norman Rothschild began negotiating Monday for another title fight between New York State Welterweight Champion Carmen Basilio and veteran Billy Graham, who fought to a 12-round title draw Saturday night.

TV Bout Set

NEW YORK, July 27 —UP—Walter Cartier, New York middleweight, returns to the ring Sunday night, after a three-month suspension, to fight Garth Panter of Salt Lake City, Utah, in a television 10 rounder at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena.

'Is This Trip Necessary?'

BROOKLYN, July 27 —UP— Pitcher Clem Labine of the Dodgers wonders if it's really worth the effort of carrying a bat with him up to the plate. He's struck out 11 times in his 13 at-bats this season.

Logan vs. Bickford

Milwaukee Teammates In Big Fight

NEW YORK, July 27 —UP— Teammates Johnny Logan and Vern Bickford of the Milwaukee Braves engaged in a fierce fist fight in midtown New York early Sunday morning.

The winner, according to witnesses, was Logan, the team's flashy shortstop, who left Bickford beaten and bloody outside a restaurant only a half block from the team's hotel.

The fight started inside the restaurant, was carried out into the street and later was resumed inside the restaurant. It lasted about 30 minutes, witnesses said.

Employees at the restaurant admitted the fight took place but would not comment further. A bartender who witnessed it from across the street, however, said "it was a real knock-down, drag - out affair."

One witness of the battle, which may have revealed deep dissension within the ranks of the second-place Braves, commented that he "was surprised at the game Logan played Sunday after such a fight."

"They went at it real good," said the bartender. "I had the wrestling matches on television, but everybody cleared out of my joint to watch the fight."

The Braves lost to the Dodgers, 7 to 0, Saturday afternoon at Ebbets Field and then took a doubleheader pounding from the league leaders Sunday. It was over that Saturday setback that Bickford and Logan had words that led to the brawl.

Bickford, the Braves' veteran pitcher who has won only one game against five setbacks this year, reportedly hurled the fight's first challenge and Logan accepted it. During the brawling inside the restaurant, Bickford was said to have been bleeding profusely, spattering some of the diners.

Top Teams Win In Longhorn Play

By UNITED PRESS

The top three teams picked on their lower brothers Sunday night in the Longhorn League. Pacesetting San Angelo tallied three times in the 10th frame to bat Roswell and set the pattern for the second and third place teams, Carlsbad and Artesia.

Carlsbad's Potashers scored six times in the sixth inning and sent 12 men to the plate to trim Midland, 9 to 1. Artesia had little trouble trimming Odessa, 11 to 3 and last-place Big Spring was idle.

Artesia is at Midland, Carlsbad at Odessa and Roswell at Big Spring for Monday's games.

For the second straight night, the San Angelo Colts had to go extra innings to beat Roswell. All three 10th inning runs came after the first two men had gone out.

A three-run homer by Joe Bauman in the sixth inning and another homer by Ike Jackson in the seventh led Carlsbad to its easy, 9 to 1, triumph. Midland Manager Jay Haney and one of his players were ejected from the ball game.

The Artesia Drillers pushed across five runs in the seventh inning to be sure of their 11 to 3 triumph over Odessa. The game was played under protest from the seventh inning on. Odessa Manager Bob Martin alleged that Artesia was not carrying the prestribed number of rookies on its team.

Stretch Lead To 7½ Games

Dodger Pitching Perks Up As Bums Down Braves Twice

NEW YORK, July 27 —UP— Charley Dressen decided Monday that his Dodgers can win the National League pennant without any trouble if they have a successful road trip through the West in the next two weeks.

He also thinks the pitching is strong enough so that the Brooks won't have the trouble they did out there the last time.

Dressen was especially elated over the comeback of little Carl Erskine who won his fifth straight game Sunday as the Dodgers twice defeated second place Milwaukee to take a commanding lead of 7 1-2 games in the National League race. The Brooks took the opener, 3 to 2, by coming from behind to score three runs in the eighth inning off tiring Johnny Antonelli, and took the second 2 to 1 as Erskine pitched a five-hitter and struck out 10 men for his second game

Giants Fourth

The Giants took a firmer hold on fourth place, 9 1-2 games back of Brooklyn, by defeating Cincinnati 10 to 6 and 5 to 1 as Daryl Spencer drove in five runs with a pair of homers in the opener and Larry Jansen pitched a strong six-hitter in the second game. Al Dark hit a second game Giant homer.

Lefty Curt Simmons again was cuffed roughly, losing his fourth game against one victory since he mowed off part of a big toe cutting grass, the Cardinals taking an 8 to 6 decision over the Phillies as Ray Jablonski and Stan Musial hit three run homers. Del Ennis hit two homers for the losing Phils.

The Cubs trounced Pittsburgh 7 to 3 with an 11-hit attack that was paced by two doubles and a single by ex-Pirate George Metkovich, after the Bucs won the opener 3 to 2 with two runs in the last of the ninth. Danny O'Connell tripled to start the winning rally and he scored on a single by Paul Smith. An error by Roy Smalley with two out let in the other run.

Yankees, Others Split

In the American League, the Yankees stayed 5 1-2 games in front by splitting with Detroit as all teams divided doubleheaders. The Yankees won 14 to 4 with 19 hits in the second game, after dropping the opener 5 to 3.

The Indians topped Washington 7 to 6 after Washington put over two unearned runs in the ninth to win the opener 4 to 3. The second place White Sox lost their fourth game in a row, 4 to 3 to Philadelphia, but stopper Virgil Trucks came through with his second straight shutout and his eighth straight victory to win the nightcap 4 to 0, yielding only four hits. The Red Sox beat St. Louis 7 to 5, then lost the second game 8 to 5.

Homers by Walt Dropo and Ray Boone were the big factors in Detroit's opening triumph as Billy Hoeft struck out two Yankees with the bases loaded in the eighth to preserve the winning margin. The Yankees made four homers by Billy Martin, Yogi Berra, Mickey Mantle and Andy Carey to breeze through in the second game. Mantle also homered in the opener.

Homer Brings Victory

Bobby Avila's homer in the eighth gave Cleveland its victory as Wally Westlake also homered and added two singles. Washington took the opener when Joe Ginsberg's throwing error set up two unearned runs in the ninth. Bob Porterfield went the route to score his 11th victory, scattering nine hits.

The athletics put over two runs in the eighth on a bases-loaded single by Gus Zernial to give Bobby Shantz his fifth victory of the year, but Trucks was the whole show in the second game, taking over the American League earned run leadership at 2.50 with his shutout. Ed Robinson hit a first game Philadelphia homer. Minnie Minoso and Jim Rivera homered for Chicago in the night cap.

Jim Dyck hit a three-run homer in the seventh to give St. Louis the second game after Boston won the opener with three unearned runs on two errors by Hero Dyck and one by Bobby Young. Dyck also hit two first game homers while Sammy White and Billy Goodman homered for Boston.

Porky Oliver Wins Kansas City Open

KANSAS CITY, July 27 —UP— Ed (Porky) Oliver of Palm Springs, Calif., clowned his way to a sizzling seven-under-par 65 to win the Kansas City Open golf tournament Sunday with a fourday total of 269. The $17,500 title gave him $3,000 to bring his yearly earnings to $12,326.

Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill., took second with a 271 and earned $1,900. Earl Stewart Jr. of Dallas was third and earned $1,400.

Defending Champion Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, who the past two years, finished with a 287 and out of the money.

Oliver, in his fourth bid for the title, beat Middlecoff's last year total by three strokes.

But the hottest round of the day —and the tournament—was posted by Dick Mayer, St. Petersburg, Fla., who had an eight-under-par 64, just two strikes higher than the record 62.

Mayer had 10 birdies, but they were offset by three bogies and a double bogie. He came in with five under on the first nine and three under on the back nine.

Oliver, probably the most popular winner in the tournament's history, clowned through his final hole after he learned that Furgol had already recorded a 271.

The rotund Palm Springs pro had the ball 45 feet from the cup in three, and then lagged to within four inches of the cup.

The crowd laughed as he whirled his putter around in the cup to make sure it was empty, and put on a clowning exhibition.

Wesley Ellis Wins Plainview Tourney

PLAINVIEW, July 27 —UP— Wesley Ellis had two legs up on the championship cup of the Plainview Invitation golf tournament Monday. He won the championship a year ago.

The San Antonio golfer played 10 strokes under par for 29 holes to wallop Raymond Marshall of Lubbock 8 and 7 in the scheduled 36-hole finals Sunday. He was four up at the 18-hole point and six up after 27 holes, then birdied the next two holes to close out the match.

November is one of the best months for observing meteors since, each year during this month, we pass through several swarms of these particles.

Shantz Recovering

CHICAGO, July 27 —UP—Little Bobby Shantz may be recovering the form that earned him the American League's most valuable player award in 1952. The 147-pound southpaw of the Athletics, beset with injuries most of the season, scored his second straight victory Sunday when he downed the White Sox 5 to 3 in the first game of a doubleheader. In his previous start Shantz went the distance to beat the Browns 11 to 1.

Rumble seats are so called because, in olden times when coaches were used, servants rode on the open back seat of the vehicle, which rumbled constantly while the coach was in motion.

How To Play Par Golf

7, 8, 9 Bogie, Par Birdie Irons

Nineteenth of a series
By JULIUS BOROS
U.S. Open Champion

Switching from the woods to the short irons, you move from your longest swings to your shortest.

You should have a definite line of demarcation between the two. They are different types, so take no chance of confusing the mechanics of one with those of the other. Learn to execute each entirely removed from the other, rather than move from one club to the other through the full run of woods and irons.

Because they generally determine into which category your score will fall, the 7, 8 and 9 might be called the bogie, par and birdie irons. They are referred to as the shot irons, however, and have much to do with the number of putts.

The stance for the short iron is somewhat different from that for medium irons and woods, although basically it requires the same fundamentals of weight distribution, toes pointing out, etc.

You may use a somewhat open stance for the first time because short iron shots are strictly a matter of accuracy. Opening the stance, you get a more complete view of the target. Because there is less pivot, or body turn, to short shots, you do not require as wide a stance. So pull the feet closer together as you open your stance. The feet now may come as close as six inches apart—depending on what is the more comfortable and affords the best balance.

Using a 9 iron, for example, the feet are closer together in a slightly open stance. The ball is played a little closer to avoid reaching for it.

Because of the short shaft, the hands and club are closer to the body.

NEXT: The swing pattern with short irons.

SHORTENING — Using a 9 iron, Julius Boros' feet are closer together in a slightly open stance. The ball is played a little closer. Because of the short shaft, the hands and club are closer to the body. (NEA)

Cardinal Scout Heaps More Praise On Pat Lorenzo Than Windy Eldridge

IF YOU HAD YOUR PICK of all the Borger Gasser players, who would you pick?

Well, undoubtedly Windy Eldridge would be selected by most. But Pat Monahan, a major league scout for 36 years and who is now scouting for the St. Louis Cardinals, believes centerfielder Pat Lorenzo of the Gassers is the best prospect.

Monahan made this statement at Lubbock last Thursday where all the league officials and sports scribes had gathered for the all-star game.

Monahan, incidentally, is a long time friend of Oiler business manager Jimmy Hamilton. These two veteran baseball magnates engaged in a two-hour bull session in the Caprock Hotel lobby Thursday talking over old times. Monahan has bought several players from Jimmy down through the years.

The aging Cardinal scout hasn't seen the Oilers play since he's been in this territory but will likely do so before he takes off for other parts.

Monahan was moaning the fact that young ball players are much harder to get these days than several years back. These youngsters are "bonus minded" and they generally hold out for the highest bid.

Monahan told of signing several young prospects for $100 and sometimes even less but he adds that was during the BB (before bonus) days. "Now, you can't hardly talk to a prospect for less than that," the veteran scout added.

We didn't see Monahan after the all-star game and so didn't get a list of the players he thought might go up in the diamond sport from the WT-NM.

Monahan, prior to the all-star classic, had seen Borger and Albuquerque in series at Lubbock.

POSSIBLY THE MOST unhappy scribe at the sports writer's meet held at Lubbock in connection with the all-star game was Bob Carroll of the Plainview Herald.

Carroll, of course, was down in the dumps from the blow the Ponies received when their manager, Jackie Sullivan, was sidelined for the season with a broken arm just prior to the all-star classic.

This is a severe blow, to be sure, for the Pony followers, but they really don't have as much room to moan as some of the other clubs in the league along the line of injuries, especially the Albuquerque Dukes who have lost three players for the season with broken bones.

Sullivan is the first real casualty for the Ponies. The Ponies were fortunate enough in having a couple of guys who can play several positions, Frosty Kennedy and Jim Calahan. This is something some of the other teams didn't have when unexpected injuries occur.

Kennedy, a fair hand at any of the infield positions, is playing second base for the Ponies in place of Sullivan and Calahan has taken over the first base where Kennedy has been most of the season.

This weakens the outfield somewhat with Calahan moving in to the infield but most of the teams in the league anyhow have been playing pitchers in the outfield so they aren't any worse off than some of the other clubs.

The Oilers have been without its leading homerun hitter for about a month now in the person of John Sanderson. While Sanderson can't be considered in the same class as Sullivan defensively, his hitting will just about equal that of the Pony manager.

When Sanderson was put on the inactive list due to his injured ankle, he was batting .340, had hit 15 homers and had driven in 66 runs. Sullivan was hitting .342 at the time of his injury and had the same number of homers that Sanderson had and had 73 rbi's. The latter two figures can't exactly be compared with Sanderson's because Sullivan had about 20 more games under his belt.

The point we're trying to get over is that when your team comes up with one of its star players getting injured, don't feel individual about the whole thing.

Oklahoma City Clips Sports Twice To Near First Division

By UNITED PRESS

The fast-climbing Oklahoma City Indians were only a half game out of first division in the Texas League Monday following a clean sweep of their doubleheader with second - place Shreveport Sunday night.

The Indians collected 28 hits in the twin bill, taking the seven-inning opener 13 to 2 behind Vern Kennedy's five hitter, then coming up with three runs in the ninth inning to win the nightcap 6 to 5.

Dallas' league - leading Eagles split a twin bill with Houston, but nevertheless added a game onto their Texas League margin over Shreveport. The Eagles dropped the first game, 6 to 1, and came back with a late-inning rally to win the final game by the same score.

Cats Win Doubleheader

The Fort Worth Cats took their doubleheader opener 3 to 2 from San Antonio as Carroll Beringer pitched a five hitter, but lost the nightcap 3 to 2. In the other game, Beaumont defeated Tulsa, 3 to 1.

Making his first start after 32 relief stints for Oklahoma City, Kennedy had little trouble with the Sports. He gave up a home run ball in the first inning to Les Layton, but for the rest of the way was almost invincible. Russ Burns hit a homer for the Indians in the third inning of the opener, after they took a 7 to 1 lead in the first frame.

Hugh Sooter came close to victory in the second game, but again the Indians put on a last-ditch rally, pushed across three runs and took both games. Ernie Groth, third Indian hurler, got the victory.

Houston Scores Early

In Dallas, Houston took a liking to the pitching of Jodie Phipps and Pete Mazar in the first game of its doubleheader and got four runs in the first inning. Jim Atchley limited the Eagles to only five hits as he stopped their seven game win streak.

Floyd Wooldridge rocked along fine until the seventh frame of the second game when Dallas scored three runs, enough to win the game. However, the Eagles made sure of victory by gaining three more in the eighth to give John (Red) Murff the triumph.

Beringer held San Antonio to only five biggies while his teammates pounded out a 10-hit, 3 to 2 victory in the opener of the twin bill at Fort Worth. Irv Nedlinger, with some help from Russ Bauers, took the measure of the Cats in the second tilt.

general. It has become even more violent within the last few weeks, and the Yoshida government, strangely, makes no effort to suppress it or punish the more extreme offenders.

Pride And Nationalism

Japanese discontent, as is true in Germany and France, derives from the rebirth of a spirit of pride and nationalism. The dull acquiescence to the acceptance of ever-present occupation forces in early postwar years have disappeared. The natives want to run their own affairs, whereas alien soldiers appear in the guise of receivers for a bankrupt nation.

They maintain that the Americans are responsible for a great increase in vice, although statistics do not support the charge. They also complain about our use of land, buildings and facilities needed for residential, farming or industrial purposes. A rapidly expanding population intensifies these anti-foreigner pressures.

The government's attitude in the face of an almost indecent condemnation of the Americans is especially disturbing. It makes no move to censor theaters which portray a Japanese girl in the act of killing two U.S. soldiers in de-

Firestone Has First Tubeless Tire Developed With Strong Nylon Cord

The first tubeless tire has been developed with high-strength nylon cord thus combining the safety features of tubeless tire construction with the extra strength of the nylon cord.

Rubber compounds and new construction features which this year proved themselves capable of withstanding the hottest and one of the fastest 500-mile races ever run at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway have been incorporated in this tire which has been appropriately named the "Firestone 500."

"The new 'Firestone 500' is definitely the safest tire ever developed with nylon cord," said Mr. Osko, manager of the local store. "And it is the first tire specifically designed for continuous high speeds with long wear and greater safety."

This is the third of the tubeless passenger car tire lines which Firestone has introduced. The "Firestone 500" will be offered at a price slightly above that of the lowest-priced rayon DeLuxe Champion tubeless tire which Firestone has been producing for the last year.

Exhaustive road tests indicate the "Firestone 500" will provide an extra safety margin of 10 to 15 miles an hour at top driving speeds, according to company engineers.

By using the race tire construction principles and the new rubber compounds proved in this year's Indianapolis race, which was won by Bill Vukovich at 128.74 mph on the new-type Firestone race tire, the "Firestone 500" will run at much cooler temperatures at high speeds.

Firestone heat-tempers the nylon to very exact specifications and this specially treated nylon cord makes the tire up to 90 per cent stronger than a regular tire cord body. It is also stronger and lighter in weight than any other tubeless tire, or any other tire and tube combination of comparable size or quality. Cooler running and lighter weight results in longer tread wear and greater mileage.

The tire is on low-pressure, super-balloon construction. Instead of an inner tube, it has a safety liner bonded to the inside of the tire. This liner protects against punctures by clinging to penetrating nails or other sharp objects to prevent loss of air. The great strength of the cooler-running nylon cord body and the fact that there is no tube to tear or explode gives the new tire protection against blowouts.

The tire has a newly designed tread with built-in rib stabilizers and specially cut traction slots to reduce the noise on curves and turns and to increase the traction of the tire on all road surfaces.

See these new tires at your local Firestone Store, located at 117 S. Cuyler, your tire headquarters.

Associated with Hawkins in the radio and television laboratory are:

Mrs. Hawkins who works with her husband in the parts department.

William F. Hawkins Jr., a top Armed Forces radar man in World War II who taught radar and other electronic work in Armed Forces schools after the war. He does most of the two-way radio service and works on other repair and installation jobs.

Ronald E. (Red) Hawkins, television technician.

Leaton Dale Hawkins, a general technician.

Otto Riemer, general technician.

Carl Sivils, general technician.

William F. Hawkins was listed as a pioneer in radio in the Texas Encyclopedia.

He began his radio work here 27 years ago in a combination radio and barber shop. (Hawkins was working as a barber to earn money for his education when he became interested in radio.) With the help he acquired in the barbering he was able to devote more and more time to his radio work.

For two years he had a shop in downtown Pampa. Then he opened a shop at 917 S. Barnes, the location he has occupied for 25 years.

In the quarter century he has enlarged the shop five times. The latest addition houses an expanded service shop. It houses the parts and supply departments, several work benches, tools and instruments needed for fast, accurate repair work.

"We guarantee our work," Hawkins stated. "We can, because we know it is right before it leaves here. All the men are interested in the work, have had training in it, keep on learning new developments that come along.

"We don't have to watch them. They keep working on a job after an unskilled man would think the machine is working perfectly. And they keep right on working at it until they know it is right.

"The men are interested in electric and electronic work and in the jobs they are doing. They are not satisfied with a job until they have the machine working just as well as it can work."

Another point: when Hawkins Laboratory men return your radio, television set or record player they add the "extra" to their service by placing it where you want it without scratching floors, bumping your furniture or walls.

They explain that courtesy by saying no housewife wants to spend extra time covering up scratches after she has her television set returned to her.

She won't after Hawkins' men return it.

And she won't have to clean her floors after they leave either. The treat - each - home - with - respect attitude is an essential part of the Hawkins service.

William F. Hawkins attributes a great deal of his success to the conscientious service and to the attention to consideration for his customers.

"After 27 years in business in Pampa we know that every person who deals with us wants us to do his job just as well as we can, and wants us to treat his machine and his home when we call for and deliver the machine just as carefully as he does."

"We are in business because we try to treat others the way we want them to treat us," Hawkins said.

Television is the big electronic medium in the public mind, the radio and television man said.

The radio business, which used to dominate the field, has been pushed into the rear by television.

Hawkins Radio and Television Laboratory has Admiral radio and TV sets. The TV screens vary from 17 inches to 27 inches. All present clear images with sharp contrast.

Now short wave stations constantly beam their programs for people thousands of miles away. There have been nmttooooooooo

There have been many changes, Hawkins said, and "I've enjoyed seeing all of them come.

"I'm anxious to find out what's coming next, and how it works.

"You know the more we learn about electronics, the better service we can give.

"I'm glad I'm working on something I'm really interested in . . . And that goes for all of us here."

In Holland the newly married woman feeds her bridegroom a traditional mixture of brandy and raisins as part of the ceremony.

New Brush-On Liquid Kills Roaches, Ants And Other Pests

What sabotages a housewife's morale more than the sight of a roach or ant in her kitchen? Probably nothing is more capable of putting a damper on her day. With Johnston's NO-ROACH, however, a house can be kept clear of ants and roaches for months, with just a few brush strokes. . . a few minutes of easy, simple applications.

Just brush this colorless, odorless, stainless coating on the kitchen cabinets, baseboards, near the stove, icebox, sink, etc. Brushed across window sills and dor sills NO-ROACH kills the ants and insects that crawl into the home from the outside.

Insects that walk across the invisible coating slowly become paralyzed and die, then this application stays effective for months to kill the strays that wander in.

Johnston's NO-ROACH contains no DDT, no sodium fluoride and no phosphorous. You apply it just where you want it, without having to move all your dishes and pots and pans. No more messy powder sprinkling, or all - over spraying, when you start controlling roaches, ants and waterbugs, this modern NO-ROACH way.

NO-ROACH is on sale at Cretney's, Perkins Drug, Clyde's Pharmacy and Furr Food. Prices are 8 ounces for 89 cents, pint for $1.69 and quart for $2.98.
