Direct Tax On Payrolls Now Looming

Production Boost Is Considered To Hike Employment

Cost-Plus Purchase Idea Advanced In Some NRA Quarters Is Borrowed From Wartime Experiences; General Program For Speeding Production Is Given Support Of A. F. Of L.

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. — NRA may suggest, as one phase of an attempt to meet demands for the employment of millions now idle, that the federal government buy some industrial goods for which there is no immediate market.

Such a plan, it was disclosed today, is being studied although it has not yet reached the ruling recovery board. Under the proposal, the government would contract to accept on a cost-plus basis excess inventories piled up over specific production periods.

Employ More Men

Meanwhile, factories would be able, theoretically at least, to employ more men, thus creating more purchasing power and an eventual market for the goods.

The federal purchase proposal is being studied only on an emergency status. If favorably matured, it would supplement other NRA efforts to accelerate industrial output by releasing code restrictions on production.

A general program for speeding production, of which this may be a part, already has received the support of the American Federation of Labor, among other organized groups. William Green, president, has said a national 30 per cent increase in production levels would put labor to work and "create income to buy the product of all."

Being Frowned Upon

Such a blanket effort, however, is frowned upon at NRA. The recovery administration's advocates of the boost-production plan believe it must be developed industry by industry and largely through codes which provide checks for immediate application should a runaway threaten.

The cost-plus purchase idea now advanced in some NRA quarters was borrowed from wartime experiences. It probably would apply only to products which the government could use. But its advocates contend the range of federal industrial consumption, especially in such activities as federal relief, the Tennessee valley authority and similar agencies, is sufficiently broad to offer a real production stimulus.

Store Reports Sales

One of the NRA advocates of a production lift said today a New York department store in two days sold 185,000 suits of men's clothes which had been purchased on a cost-plus basis. He argued that if the price went low enough, anything could be sold.

It is after this trend gets under way and consumption begins to stiffen that these economists forecast the general price rise desired by President Roosevelt.

Opponents of the boost-production theory contend the cycle will not work to the degree necessary to supply the needed buying power and also that its employment benefits may be counteracted by the elimination of less efficient plants.

Local Citizen Badly Hurt In Sunday Affray

O. R. Davis Near Death In A Sanitarium; Son Surrenders To Officers After Shooting; No Charges Filed

O. R. Davis, 66-year-old realtor, remained near death in Lubbock sanitarium as a result of a shooting at his home at 1923 Main street late Sunday. His eldest son, Howell Davis, 42, of Plainview, was in county jail.

The shooting evidently was a result of ill feeling about division of family property.

Son Gives Self Up

The son, who admitted shooting his father in the latter's home about 6:30 o'clock Sunday, voluntarily appeared at the sheriff's office soon afterward. He took his gun, a .38 caliber hammerless revolver, there with him and surrendered it.

Filing of a charge against the younger Davis is pending outcome of the realtor's wound, said District Attorney Daniel A. Blair. A 99th district court grand jury, now in session, likely will investigate the case.

Mrs. Davis died Jan. 21, 1934, and antagonism had arisen between the children and the father regarding division of the estate, investigators said. A court contest resulted.

Charge Of Murder Is Filed Against Convict In Slaying

HUNTSVILLE, Oct. 29. (AP)—District Attorney Max Rogers tonight filed a murder charge against Pete McKenzie, West Texas killer, and said he would request another sanity hearing for the outlaw, who for seven years has avoided a previous death sentence on the grounds of insanity.

The latest charge was in connection with the stabbing to death Saturday of Ted Rogers, convict, who attacked McKenzie with a stick of cord wood in the state prison here. In 1927, McKenzie was sentenced to death for murder of Sam Street, chief of detectives at San Antonio, but escaped the chair in 1929 when a jury found he had become insane because of numerous postponements of the death sentence.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29. (AP)—Lou Tellegen, actor and former husband of Geraldine Farrar, opera singer, was found dead today in the bathroom of his home. Police said he had been stabbed five times in the breast. A pair of scissors lay nearby.

Police said Tellegen died from apparently self-inflicted wounds. The blood-stained scissors were near the right outstretched arm.

Mrs. J. P. Cudahy, in whose home Tellegen lived, said the actor had been despondent recently over failing health and had expressed fears his sickness would affect his mind.

Strike Areas More Settled

Clouds Lift Slightly Monday Night On Three Disputes In Nation; Thousands Ready To Resume Their Jobs

(By The Associated Press)

Clouds lifted slightly on three major labor disputes last night as hopes rested on conferences scheduled for the next 24 hours.

A wide-spread strike of private utility electrical workers in Indiana was called off two hours before the deadline pending efforts of a mediation board to be named by Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

The Cleveland situation, where 300 food stores were closed and 2,200 workers left jobless, will be discussed with the national labor relations board today in a meeting which representatives of unions and of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. will attend.

Demands Are Modified

In the east leaders of a silk and rayon dyers union prepared modified demands to be presented to employers in the hope that 20,000 workers may resume their jobs.

One of the strikes affecting Milwaukee's food supply was settled late yesterday when the Kroger Grocery and Baking company reached an agreement with the butcher's union. The same union continued its strike in 38 Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. store meat markets, picketing some of them, while commission row truck drivers patroled railroad yards where fruit and vegetables were arriving in car loads.

Striking county relief workers in Denver and Arapahoe county, Colo., marched to the state capital in protest against the relief director and relief budget reductions.

Harmony After Election Is Plea Of Mayor

Eight Persons Candidates In Today's Ballot

Polls Will Open At 8 O'Clock This Morning; Successful Candidate Will Take Post Vacated By Bacon

Appeal Is Issued

Full Cooperation Of Citizens Of Lubbock Urged; Edwards Declares This Is No Time For Strife In City

"FULL co-operation" after today's election in which a City commissioner will be named, was the appeal last night of Mayor Ross Edwards.

The successful candidate will take the post left vacant by John F. Bacon, who resigned because he disapproved of policies of the present commission.

Eight Are Candidates

Eight persons, seven men and a woman, are candidates. They are:

Frank A. White, electrician; Walter F. Taylor, retired architect; Mrs. Chas. F. O'Neall, who has been active in political campaigns in this area; W. D. McClain, wrecking company operator; H. H. Halsell, retired rancher; W. R. Pickas, druggist; M. C. Butler, architect; George E. Benson, banker.

The polls will open at 8 a. m. and close at 7 o'clock.

Cooperation Is Urged

"I am not so much interested in who is elected as I am on how he or she is supported after the election," the mayor said. "I hope whoever is successful in the race will have the full co-operation of each and every citizen of Lubbock.

"Now is no time for strife and all who are good Democrats will fall in line after the election, regardless of whose candidate is elected, and work for the common good of our city," Mr. Edwards continued.

"In other towns about us we see the effect of factions and discord. We do not believe that our citizenship will permit personal ambitions to hinder the welfare and progress of Lubbock. The old boys who started our city, away back yonder, might have fussed and fought a little between themselves, but when the showdown came, and Lubbock's interest was at stake, they fell in love again and stood shoulder to shoulder for Lubbock. Let's keep this example before us and all stand by for the best city in the West."

Election judges will be W. E. Ballew, John F. Turner, and R. Bush Smith.

Showdown On Centennial Is Seen In State

Proponents And Opponents Of Plan To Impose Additional Taxes For Celebration Are Mustering Forces

(By The Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Oct. 29.—Advocates of a state appropriation to aid in financing Texas' 100th birthday party prepared for a showdown in hearings starting tonight before the house committee on revenue and taxation on bills to levy taxes for the centennial.

Both proponents and opponents of the plan to impose additional taxes to support the centennial mustered their forces for what were expected to be stormy hearings.

To Present Views

Many members of the house have contacted "the folks at home" to sound out sentiment on the proposition and planned to present views of a cross section of their constituency to the committee. The members of the centennial commission marshalled facts and figures to support their request for a sizeable appropriation for the celebration, the main unit of which would be held in Dallas with lesser observances in other historic cities.

R. L. Young, sr., of Abilene came to Austin with a petition signed by 511 Abilene citizens protesting any centennial appropriation and advocating that it be paid by "those who are to benefit in dollars and cents."

Bills Are Pending

Pending before the revenue and taxation committee are several bills to provide state funds for the centennial, the group including an omnibus measure proposed by the centennial commission.

Widow Named As Sheriff By Dickens Court

Mrs. W. B. Arthur Will Serve Unexpired Term Of Husband; Write-In Campaigns Expected In Election

(By The Associated Press)

DICKENS, Oct. 29.—W. B. Arthur, sheriff of Dickens county, was buried here today while officers in this sector interrupted the hunt for Virgil Stalcup and Clarence Brown, his slayers, to attend the services.

More than 5000 persons from West Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma came to Dickens and 50 officers were required to control the traffic. Mrs. Arthur permitted all prisoners in the jail to attend the funeral.

Widow Is Appointed

Mrs. Arthur late today was appointed by the commissioner's court to serve her husband's unexpired term, ending Jan. 1. Sheriff Arthur was the Democratic party's nominee for re-election to the post and his name is on the ballot to be marked in the general election Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Alton B. Chapman, county attorney, said if Arthur's name receives a plurality of the vote cast, the court will appoint a sheriff to serve the next two years. Several persons likely will conduct a "write-in" campaign. John Koonsman, who was defeated by Arthur, already is a candidate. George Sloan, a Spur ginner, is running and indications were there would be others.

Manhunt Extended

The manhunt extended over a wide area during the day as reports filtered in that Stalcup and Brown had been seen. Dewey Ball of Olton reported to the Plainview sheriff that he saw an automobile he believed contained the fugitives west of Plainview. Ball said he knew both Stalcup and Brown.

Amarillo officers kept a sharp lookout because the men were acquainted with that area and they considered it possible they might seek a hideout. Stalcup lived at Amarillo formerly and his wife lives there now.

Destitute Texas Citizens Swear To Starve Or Obtain Relief As They Camp At Capitol Entrance

Leaders Circulate Through City's Poor Sections Trying To Recruit New Strikers; Austin Labor Worker Declares He Will Starve In Sympathy With Cause; Order Promised

(By The Associated Press)

AUSTIN Oct. 29. Destitute men, women and children of Travis county camped on the Texas capitol entrance tonight in a "starve or get relief" strike.

Only 14 were in the main group, although their leader said many others strolled around the spacious capitol grounds. Still others circulated through the citys' poor sections recruiting new strikers.

They Swear To Starve

The destitute swore they would starve in public until sufficient rations were given them.

Protests were directed to a recent elimination of 1,700 cases from county relief rolls and sharp reductions made in rations allowed those deemed worthy of state and federal relief.

The strike started early today. About thirty were present at its inception, but some left during the day.

Promise Not To Eat

Those not keeping vigil at the state house promised not to eat. Others were confident they would keep their promise, asserting there was no food in their homes.

Whites, negroes and Mexicans comprised the group. All of the men said they would abandon the strike to accept any work offered.

Last week another group of dissatisfied recipients of relief staged a one-day strike in the chamber of the Texas house of representatives. It terminated when they were promised their cases would be investigated, and after custodians of the capitol warned them they would not be permitted to stay inside.

Removed Without Cause

Several negro strikers said they were removed from relief rolls without cause and without investigation. A white man said $5.60 allotted his family of three for sustenance this month was exhausted several days ago. Until Wednesday, he asserted, his family would be without food.

An orderly assembly was promised by W. H. Roberts, local labor worker, who said he would starve with the group in sympathy for their cause. He said he was not an applicant for relief, however.

Roberts asserted 250 families in Travis county were "starving to death on relief rations," and predicted twice that number would be "on starvation" within 10 days, unless allottments were increased.

Daring Fliers Beat Elements On Long Jaunt

Kingsford-Smith And Navigator Speed Through Seeming Certain Disaster To Reach Shores Of Hawaii

(By The Associated Press)

HONOLULU, Oct. 29. — Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, daring Australian flier, sped through seeming certain disaster today to reach Honolulu and complete the second leg of a projected perilous flight from Brisbane, Australia, to California.

Sir Charles and his navigator, Captain P. G. Taylor, disclosed they had fought torrential equatorial rain into which they flew at midnight on their hop from Suva, Fiji Islands.

Indicator Is Clogged

The rain clogged the air speed indicator on the leading edge of the plane wing, making it impossible to tell whether the ship was maintaining sufficient speed to give it headway. This instrument failure nearly spelled disaster, Kingsford-Smith said. He was fumbling in the cockpit, trying to get the indicator into action, when he accidentally released the retractable landing gear.

Since the usual compensation for the lowering of the gear had not been made, the shock threw their blue and white monoplane into a spin from which the pilot pulled it only with difficulty.

"We lost lots of height," Kingsford-Smith related. That was the first time he ever had encountered enough rain to stop the indicator, he said, adding, "it just goes to show how dense the rain was."

Knowing their course from Fiji here left them for the most part miles from land, and that they would be forced to fly the 3,197 miles practically without weather reports, the fliers were prepared against disaster. There were tools to loosen the engine, and a small still to transform sea water into a drink-

Unemployment Insurance For Nation Sought

Amount Of Tax, Method Of Application And Channels For Its Diversion Are Undetermined By Sponsors

Proposals Varied

Fund To Be Derived From Tax Would Be Used For Benefit Of Those Who Lose Jobs After Plan Is In Effect

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—A direct tax on industrial payrolls as the heart of the new unemployment insurance plan now being worked out for presentation to the next congress.

The amount of the tax, the method of application and the channels through which it would be diverted to those who lose their jobs were said today to be still undetermined, but all the plans being considered by the president's economic security committee were described as hinging upon a payroll tax.

Most Equitable Plan

One of those familiar with the course of the study said the payroll tax had been regarded as the most equitable manner of obtaining funds for the operation of an unemployment insurance system.

Within the next two weeks the plan will be put into shape by the committee for presentation to President Roosevelt and subsequent transmission to congress. Senator Harrison (D-Miss), after a talk with the president today, said the finance committee, of which he is chairman, would convene early in December to begin work on the bill.

Confident Of Passage

"I am confident that the next congress will pass an unemployment insurance bill," he said.

Since taxation is involved in the bill, however, it must be considered by the house ways and means committee and acted upon by the house before going to the senate. Any action by the senate committee prior to the assembling and organization of the house in January would be in the nature of a preliminary study. The ways and means committee cannot take any formal action until after congress meets.

Various preliminary studies of taxation are contemplated by a ways and means sub-committee before the session opens. This subcommittee, given special investigative authority by the expiring congress, will assemble within ten days after the Nov. 6 elections to begin seeking new taxes that may

SINCE writing about all of these Hallowe'en parties we have wondered if there have been any premature Hallowe'en celebrations staged by youngsters in town. Oliver Roberts Barton, who is an editorial writer for NEA service, is quite steamed up over the situation. We mean she is filled with indignant rage when she thinks of all that the dear little vandals do when this occasion rolls around. Listen to her:

IN ANCIENT DAYS

"IT is a good thing that Hallowe'en comes only once in a blue moon. Literally that, because the October moon was called the "Blue Moon" by the Indians, due to the colorful haze over the mountains and valleys in the fall season.

They celebrated it. The pagans celebrated it for another reason. The Christian faith has for centuries been identified with a festival season before All Saint's Day. Yet, although celebrations are good for the soul and carefree fun is still better for the health, by no stretch of the imagination can we call our Hallowe'en a care-free interlude. It has resolved itself into a defensive war of nineteen-twentieths of the population against the smaller fraction of the score.

One wonders just how much the statisticians would figure in dollars and cents the damage of one Hallowe'en season amounts to, allowance made for the inconvenience time and trouble of the persecuted. Recently, too, it has become a grand alibi for more serious offenses.

THE DEAR DEAD DAYS

IN SHORT words, our dear, sweet, prankish old Hallowe'en, when children dressed up and rang doorbells, pulled taffy and bobbed for apples, has become a licentious orgy of alarming proportions.

How useless it is to shout, "There ought to be a law." There are laws. But the entire army, constabulary, and local police could not enforce them.

Children will be children, of course. On Hallowe'en night we have to haul in the dog house and the garbage can and possess ourselves in peace. We even have to coax a smile when we think the porch has fallen in and the house will go next, and murmur sweetly, "The little dears—let them have their fun."

What we didn't do was to torment our neighbors for days ahead of time. If we had done so we would have been whipped and put to bed for a month.

The responsibility of the pre-Hallowe'en nuisance rests with parents and with them alone, I am sure. If things have reached a stage when a boy won't stay in the house when he is told, this itself is proof of utter defeat. It calls for absolute autority and certainly such authority should be exercised.

Why do we make some of our most delightful holidays menaces and riots? Most assuredly it will have to stop sometime."

HOW ABOUT IT?

WE MAY be far off, but we are under the impression that local celebrations thus far have been mild. We know of parties given by and for eight, nine, twelve and fifteen-year-olds and while the parties may have been rather noisy—even terribly noisy—we believe that the homes and yards were left intact.

Please, you younger generation, don't go wild tonight and Hallowe'en and spoil all of our good impressions.

Eckener Seeks Ocean Service

Commander Of Graf Zeppelin Says That Line Would Prove Profitable; He Will Place Dirigible In Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (AP)—Establishment of a world-wide transoceanic dirigible to connect Germany, the United States, South America and the Dutch East Indies was proposed today by Dr. Hugo Eckener, who has flown over a large part of the world as commander of the Graf Zeppelin.

Eckener, who has crossd the Atlantic in an airship 72 times, testified to the president's aviation commission that he could train the American personnel for the North Atlantic line.

Seeks Permission

He came to the United States, he said, to obtain permission to use a mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J., for test flights next year.

"The airship which is now able to render transocean service is already here and it is only necessary to take hold," he said. "Why does one hesitate?"

He added that helium would be desirable for such a service, and said that "it is therefore imperative that in a future combined service of domestic and foreign airships, helium be made available to all countries who will participate."

Monopoly On Helium

The United States has a monopoly on helium, and none may be exported without consent of the president.

"It would seem to me desirable and advantageous" Eckener said "to change the existing regulations concerning helium to provide for this contingency."

Eckener cited figures to show the German-South American derigible service was profitable, and said he probably would place a large dirigible now under construction into service on the line next year.

TURN COAL TO OIL

MELBOURNE (AP) — The Australian government, seeking a domestic source for oil and gasoline, has an offer from the Imperial chemical industries of England to build a $30,000,000 hydrogenation plant to handle 1,000 tons of coal daily and produce 30,000,000 gallons of oil yearly. Victoria, with 37,000,000,000 tons of lignite deposits, is the likely site of the plant.

He Had A Cipher

Modern Codes Are All Very Simple

LYON, France, Oct. 29. (AP) — Modern secret codes are clear as crystal compared with Louis XIVth's "grand cipher," a specimen of which, believed unique, has been added to the Lyon police museum.

It is a plan of battle drawn up by Marshal Catinat entirely in the cipher.

Louis and his officials made a special study of codes and built up combinations said to be far superior to those employed nowadays by diplomacy and spies.

The "grand cipher" was known only to the king, his minister Louvois, the Marshals Catinat and Turfenne, and Vigenere, the inventor. It was not until 1900 that it was solved by Major Bazenes, French foreign code expert.

Hitherto only reproductions of documents drawn up in the "grand cipher" have been found. The Catinat plan, being an original, is of special interest to historians and cryptographers.

If you tire easily—

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve.

S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin up-building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

AUSTIN, Oct. 30. (AP)—Members of the Texas legislature were initiated into high finance, governmentally speaking, when Congressman J. P. Buchanan, chairman of the appropriations committee of the national house, spoke before a house committee in support of the CVA bill.

The Texas legislature is used to dealing in hundreds and thousands of dollars and infrequently, in millions. Any appropriation carrying more than five digits is carefully investigated while those proposing millions are scrutinized minutely.

Buchanan, however, spoke without hesitation of hundreds of millions and billions. He himself was confused at the size of the figures and admitted a state deficit of some $14,000,000, a paltry sum compared to the federal deficit of more than 25 billions of which Buchanan spoke. When he said the federal deficit would be 32 billions by next June and might reach a peak of 41 or 42 billions before the depression is whipped, Texas legislators gasped.

One member remarked, sotto voce, "I don't believe there is that much money."

As chairman of the house appropriations Buchanan has one of the hardest, yet most important, positions in the national government. His committee must pass on the hundreds of millions appropriated annually for the ordinary operations of the government. During the crisis it has been called upon to deal in dizzying figures.

Buchanan, by virture of his chairmanship, is reputed to be the third most important cog in the federal machine, second, only to the president and the speaker of the house.

He plans to leave his Brenham home soon for Washington to start a series of conferences looking to ways and means of meeting recovery demands.

Soil Erosion Work Started

Eleven Landowners In Texas Panhandle Sign Contracts To Put Land At Disposal Of The Government

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (AP)—The soil erosion service disclosed today that 11 land owners in the Texas Panhandle had signed contracts with the government agreeing to place their land at its disposal in the newly-established wind erosion control program in that area.

The sign-up figure was described as "encouraging" in view of the fact the service was able only recently to begin the actual offering of contracts by which the farmer agrees for a period of 5 years to furnish as much labor and material as possible for the experiment, to rotate crops as directed and even to retire land permanently from cultivation if that course is deemed necessary.

Soil erosion officials said other land owners would be signed rapidly.

First Direct Effort

Te Panhandle project, the first direct effort at halting the destruction of land by high wind, will cover 15,000 acres of land similar to that in all the so-called high plains area covering parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico.

The principal purpose is to find a means applicable to all the plains section, of halting such fierce sand storms as swept the area during the drouth last summer.

After a preliminary examination soil experts reported to Washington there was sufficient moisture if properly conserved to "bridge" virtually any drouth.

No estimate could be obtained as to the amount of land in the project area that may be returned permanently to grass.

The flag on the White House in Washington, D. C., does not fly when the president is away from the city.

Later the plane, "The Irish Swoop," was flown to Croydon, where it will be overhauled.

Zivley was killed in an automobile accident.

IS THIS TOO GOOD FOR YOUR COUGH?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known. (adv.)

Phillips Petroleum Heads Are Hurt In Train Mishap

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 29. (AP)—Harry A. Trower, vice president of the Phillips Petroleum company, Russell M. Riggins, comptroller of the company, Mrs. Trower and Mrs. Riggins, all of Bartlesville, Okla., were seriously injured when a motor car in which they were riding crashed into a Missouri-Kansas-Texas motor train near Riverton, Kan.

Riggins apparently did not see the approaching train until within a short distance of the crossing. He applied the brakes but was unable to stop his car.

The train, which was traveling about thirty-five miles an hour, knocked the motor car, a large sedan, into a ditch. The car caught fire but the blaze was extinguished. The accident occured yesterday afternoon.

Bucky Harris May Boss Senators; World Series Cash Mailed To Champions

Griffith Still Silent; Wants Bench Manager

Harris Said To Have "Inside Track" On Job; Shake-Up In Senator Lineup Is Assured With New Skipper

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (AP)—As President Clark Griffith continues his enigmatic silence as to his choice for the Senator's baseball manager, Washington fans are fairly certain of three facts:

Stanley (Bucky) Harris now has the inside tract for the job; the new manager will not be a playing boss, and a shake-up in the Senator lineup is assured.

Myer And Sewell Out

Griffith has said he would prefer a bench manager, who would not have to wear himself out on the playing field. Unless the Old Fox changes his mind this statement would eliminate a number of the present Washington players who have been mentioned in the speculations, among them Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Catcher Luke Sewell.

It is known that Griffith highly regards Harris and that they are close personal friends. Harris has applied for the job and his candidacy has been supported by baseball critics on capital newspapers.

It's Shopping Time For Players' Wives

CHICAGO, Oct. 29. (AP)—Wives of the Detroit and St. Louis Cardinal ball playing regulars, managers and coaches can start their big shopping tours at once. Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis has mailed their husbands' World Series checks.

Taxes reduced the players' pool from the original, unofficial estimate, but the players received some good sized checks. The Cardinals received $137,739.19 as the winner's share, cutting their melon in 25 full shares of $5,389.57 each and dividing $3,000 among eight members of their baseball family. Charley Gelbert, whose baseball career was halted by a hunting accident, received $1,000 from his liberal mates.

Tigers Get Well, Too

The vanquished Detroit Tigers received $91,826.13 of which 26 players, coaches and Manager Mickey Cochrane received full shares of $3,354.68 each.

Joe Medwick, Cardinal outfielder, and third Baseman Marvin Owen of the Tigers, who stopped the final ball game with their big battle around third base, each received full shares from the commissioner, indicating that the commissioner had decided to let the incident drop without plastering either or both with fines.

Tech Faculty And Students In Golf Joust This Week

An even sixteen had registered last night for the Texas Tech faculty and student golf tournament at Meadowbrook Golf club this week, and approximately that many more were expected to qualify before Thursday.

Officials said yesterday that qualifying would be held open through Wednesday in order that additional entries may be favored. Today was the day originally set for qualifying deadline.

Of the sixteen who have registered, more than half have completed the 18-hole qualifying round. Scores ranged from a 74 to a 105, indicating the flights will be wide open.

Those registered so far are: Godecke, McRee, Buller, Street, Helwig, Shelton, Galbraith, Kleinschmidt, Atchison Root, Woodberry, Heard, Horne, Brant, Langston and Eaves.

Coach And Three Players At Texas A. & I. Injured

HOUSTON, Oct. 29. (AP) — Bud McCallum, coach of the Texas A. and I. Javelinas who will meet the Rice gridders here this week, was painfully injured, along with three star members of his team as they were driving to Houston Saturday to scout the Texas-Rice game, according to word received from J. R. Manning, chairman of the athletic council of the Kingsville school.

McCallum's neck was injured. Lowell Ramey, backfield ace, and Jimmy McMillan, quarter, were thrown through the top of the car, and Eugene McCormick, center, was thrown through a window. Ramey and McMillan were badly bruised. McCormick was cut severely and three bones in one foot were broken.

McCormick is out for the rest of the season, according to Manning, but hte other players are expected to be ready by Saturday.

The California Ramblers, made up of football players who can't quite make the varsity and spend the season meeting elevens from smaller institutions, dropped the convention blue jersey this fall and are wearing white uppers with blue stripe on front and around the sleeves.

Tech Matadors Start Work Today For Game With Texas Miners Here Friday

Directs Muckers

Quarterback for the Texas College of Mines Muckers who play the Matadors here Friday night is a youngster by the name of Cody Jondren, pictured above, who is considered quite a boy.

Monday Is A Day Of Rest After Trip From The Coast

Still smarting under the sting of defeat suffered in Los Angeles last Friday night at the hands of Tom Lieb's Loyola Lions, the Texas Tech Matadors take to the home field this afternoon in their first workout in anticipation of the invasion this week by Texas School of Mines.

Tickets for the contest are now on sale at the J. & J. store.

Yesterday was a day of rest and relaxation, not because the Matadors take lightly their Friday night tilt with the Muckers, but because they may feel more like getting down to work after a rest from the arduous round trip to California.

McElroy Is Out

Coach Pete Cawthon brought his warriors home yesterday morning after a two-night and one-day ride on the rails from Hollywood. With the exception of D. M. McElroy, fleet halfback, the boys are in fair physical condition, but could use the rest allowed yesterday. McElroy may not play any more football for Texas Tech. A broken collar bone and a bunged up shoulder may keep him out. There is a possibility that he'll play on Thanksgiving day against University of Arizona, at Tucson. He was a standout performer in the Loyola game.

The coming of the El Paso team to Lubbock means the renewal of hectic rivalry between the Matadors and the Miners. Coach Mack Saxon of the Muckers has promised that his team will surely defeat Tech, although he is aware of Matador power. Saxon was a gridder under Cawthon at Austin college, but he is now one of the Tech coach's most deadly rivals.

Weak In Early Games

Saxon will bring a team here which hasn't been going so hotly this season. The Muckers have defeated Daniel Baker and N. M. M. I., but have lost to West Texas Teachers and University of New Mexico. Nevertheless, the wily Mucker mentor predicts a Mines victory here Friday night.

Texas Tech can number its victories over Mines on the thumb of a halfback's left hand, and use the thumb only once. Saxon defeated Cawthon's first Texas Tech team, 31 to 0, again in 1931, 14 to 12, a third time in a spring practice game at El Paso. The Muckers were not on the Tech schedule in 1932. Tech won its first game over Mines last year, 12 to 0.

Running Threat

Here is Clarence Walker, halfback for the pupils of Mack Saxon, and one of the greatest threats on the Texas College of Mines team. He'll be one of the men to watch here Friday night.

Detroit Tiger Meets Detton

Sam George To Tangle With Tex Watkins In Semi-Final Here Wednesday Night; Perkins Is On Main With Dory

For the main event on this week's grappling card at the Auditorium, Promoter Sled Allen has succeeded in matching Dory Detton, local idol, with Are Perkins, a Detroit earwringer.

Perkins, who designates himself as the Detroit Tiger, put on a slow mill in the semi-final last week, but displayed a feline-like nimbleness which may stand him in good stead when he faces the equally nimble Detton.

Perkins will be out to halt a Detton winning surge that extends back a month ago since Charley Carr defeated Dory by hurling him over the ropes and across a ringside chair.

Watkins vs. George

Sailor "Popeye" Watkins, the tough nautical man who once was supreme in the middleweight division of both the Atlantic and Pacific fleets, meets Sam George, Corpus Christi in the semi-final.

At Amarillo last week Watkins defeated Danny McShain, performing in such villianious fashion that Danny seemed a hero by contrast.

O. H. "The Great" Britain, former, Lubbock High gridman, opposes Lobo Brown in the prelim.

Mrs. Edmisson Is City Open Champ; Defeats Mrs. Key

By defeating Mrs. Olan Key, 6 up and 5 to go, Mrs. John Edmisson continued to sweep golfing honors among local feminine exponents when she won the annual women's City open tournament Sunday.

Previously Mrs. Edmisson had annexed the Country club and Ruidoso invitation tournament titles.

Mrs. Edmisson won the first hole with a par, Mrs. Key the next hole, also with a par. They halved the third hole which evened the match. Mrs. Edmisson took the fourth hole with a birdie three.

Both had trouble on the long fifth, Mrs. Key conceding it to Mrs. Edmisson. Mrs. Key took the sixth with a par and also the seventh, placing them even again. Mrs. Edmisson won the eighth and parred the ninth to be two up at the turn.

Mrs. Key's par on the tenth was not good enough against Mrs. Edmisson's birdie three. The eleventh also went to the champion. Mrs. Edmisson's fourth shot to the long 12th was a beautiful approach to the pin which easily won that hole with a par five. The thirteenth ended the match when Mrs. Edmisson won that hole.

Mrs. W. F. Helwig won the first flight, defeating Mrs. C. F. Hagler, 3 and 1. Mrs. Cliff Dean defeated Miss Lois Thompson, 3 and 2, to win the championship consolation. First flight consolation honors went to Mrs. J. E. George who defeated Mrs. J. P. Giles, 3 and 2.

Chevigny Says Inexperienced Men To Blame

Longhorns Fooled By Rice Owl Passing; Steers Get Ready For Important Battle With Methodist Mustangs

AUSTIN, Oct. 29. (AP)—Jack Chevigny and his coaching staff today held a post-mortem over the defeat administered their University of Texas Longhorns by the Rice Owls at Houston Saturday and came to the conclusion that an inexperienced backfield was to blame.

"Inexperience of my backfield, particularly in the fourth period when Bill Wallace tossed the winning touchdown pass to Ray Smith, was the cause of our defeat," Chevigny said. "Instead of looking for a pass, as they should have, my backs were 'sucked' in as Wallace faked an offtackle play. When the Owls player actually passed, his receiver was out in the open for a touchdown." Texas was leading 9-7 with three minutes to go when Wallace uncorked his now famous pass.

Quick Kicks Helped

The Longhorns mentor attributed Rice's success in getting away numerous quick kicks over the head of his safety man to the same cause, pointing out that most could have been handled had his backs played their positions correctly.

The Longhorns emerged from their losing battle with Rice without serious injuries, and began pointing for their second conference game with the S. M. U. Ponies here Saturday.

Bohn Hilliard, star back and Jack Gray, end, who were injured prior to the Rice game, will in all probability be unable to play against S. M. U., Coach Chevigny said.

Light workouts, featured by polishing up on pass defense are scheduled for this week, since the squad is already in excellent condition.

Aggies, Cheered By Victory, Meet Hogs

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 29. (AP)—Cheered not only by the Texas Aggies' 10 to 7 victory over Baylor, but also by an increased drive and blocking effectiveness, Coaches Homer Norton and Cal Hubbard prescribed more blocking practice for the Cadets today.

That workout was topped by a scrimmage in preparation for the invasion of the Arkansas team Saturday.

Commenting on the Baylor game, Norton said he felt his players showed improvement in play for the fourth straight week. He seemed particularly pleased with the work of Doc Pitner of Denton, a halfback, and Selmer Kirby of Amarillo, a tackle. He also commended the work of Bill Kimbrough, the Aggies' leading ground-gainer against Baylor, and Taylor Wilkins, an end.

Injury List Mounts On Porker Squad

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 29. (AP)—An alarming list of injuries prompted Coach Fred Thomsen to send his University of Arkansas Razorbacks through a light drill today in preparation for their Saturday Southwest conference game with the Texas Aggies at College Station.

Ralph LaForge, diminutive ace back of the team, suffering with a bruised shoulder, and Mark Sherland, center, laid up with a slight concussion, were added to the disability list today. They were injured in the Missouri Mines game Saturday.

SOME RECORD

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP)—During the 40 years that the University of Alabama has been represented in football, the teams have won 207 games, lost 80 and tied 20, and scored 6,229 points against 1,985 for opponents.

A story is going the rounds at Stanford that William Hunter, Southern California graduate manager, attended a Stanford alumni barbecue in Los Angeles and before he left was assessed $12 to go into the Stanford-Buck-of-the-Month club which goes to pay tuition for Indian athletes.

Federal Officers Counter With Subpoenas For Ohioans

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 29. (AP)—Federal authorities, who were denied permission by Wellsville, O., officers to bring Adam Richetti here as an accused killer of five men at the union station, countered with three subpoenas late today.

Police Chief J. H. Fultz of Wellsville, who was criticized recently by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal division of investigation, was named in one subpoena. Fultz arrested Richetti Oct. 20 after a gun battle near Wellsville.

The subpoena and another issued for Mayor William H. Daugherty of Wellsville directed them to appear before a federal grand jury here which is investigating the station slayings. A third subpoena requested them to bring a sub-machine gun and a pistol seized during the arrest of Richetti and the slaying of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, another accused station slayer, near East Liverpool, O., October 22.

COACH IS NEW PAPA

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Although hoping for a quarterback, Paul Burnun, Alabama freshman football coach, will have to be content with a girl cheer leader. An eight pound baby girl was born to Mrs. Burnun recently.

The Boyd cousins—Jim and Jack—were star players on the Willows, Cal., high school team for four years, but they parted company this fall with Jim going to California and Jack to Stanford university to try out for the freshmen football squads.

Coach Takes Westerners To Clovis Friday

Lots Of Trouble In Store For Lubbock High On New Mexico Grid This Week; Team Points For Amarillo Contest

Having kept the home gridiron fires burning for the past three consecutive weeks, the Lubbock Westerners hit the road this week for their first out of town game since October 5 and the jaunt to El Paso.

Again the Westerners travel west, but not so far. They engage the frightfully large and imposing Clovis High school gridders Friday on the Clovis clover.

On the Clovis team are many big and powerful men, some of whom are old enough to have families, many of whom were members of New Mexico's state championship club last season.

Coaches Weldon Chapman and Berl Huffman probably will use reserves much of the time, although they are facing a risk at that. The Clovis game was not on the original schedule for 1934, being added since the season opened. The New Mexico team has made one mark in District already, power-housing Plainview's Bulldogs, 53 to 6, or some such score. A Westerner defeat is not unlikely, since nothing but exercise is at stake for the Lubbock schoolboys. They are thinking more seriously of their forthcoming combat with Amarillo's Sandies one week from next Monday at Tech field.

Lubbock's 43 to 2 victory over Sweetwater last week, while impressive enough in its bulky score, may not be construed as meaning the Westerners are extra-super gridders. Sweetwater is undeniably weak, and there was not much glory to be gained by riding the Mustangs.

Thirty-Two Teams Still Undefeated In Grid Campaign

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Thirty-two college football teams of the nation remain unbeaten and untied at the season's halfway mark, an Associated Press compilation today revealed.

Mexican Held For Shooting

Gumescindo Rivera Is Gravely Wounded In Mexican Cafe Sunday; Condition Reported As Satisfactory

Gumescindo Rivera, 22, a Mexican who was shot and gravely wounded in a Mexican cafe here early Sunday night, was reported to be in a "satisfactory condition" at Lubbock sanitarium last night; Rivera nearly bled to death.

Lorenzo Vargas, 24, husband of Maria Vargas, who operates the cafe at 217 Avenue K, was held in county jail without charge awaiting further investigation of the case.

Holdup Attempt Claimed

The Vargases said Rivera had asked for a cup of coffee and then attempted to rob the cafe at pistol-point, Grady Harrist, assistant police chief, said.

One bullet from a .38 caliber breach revolver struck Rivera in the left thigh near the groin and nearly emerged from a buttock after ranging downward about six inches. Large blood vessels were ruptured. He was taken to Lubbock sanitarium at 9 o'clock by a Rix-Bynum ambulance. An attending physician Monday said Rinvera probably would recover:

The sheriff's department arrested Vargas and the police department Joe Rosa, 22, a companion of Rivera, in the Mexican quarter. Rosa said he believed Rivera did not attempt an armed robbery.

"Not With Rivera"

Rosa, in city jail, this morning said he was not with Rivera when he was shot, that he found him on the ground in front of the cafe. He was bleeding profusely.

Bedford Carpenter and Parum Posey, deputy sheriffs, and Jim Robinson, night police chief, and O. E. Rush, patrolman, made the arrests. Burton S. Burks, assistant district attorney, began an investigation of the case.

Well Driller Uses Irrigation To Whip Drouth And Depression On Truck Patch

W. D. Muncey grew Indian corn like this on his irrigated farm in the drouth-stricken Texas Panhandle near Amarillo.

By LEWIS T. NORDYKE

AMARILLO, Oct. 29. (AP)—W. D. Muncey whipped the depression, profited by the drouth and proved irrigation practicable on the Texas plains by putting in his time on a 25-acre patch near Amarillo.

An experienced gardener and well driller, Muncey in 1931 set out to make a living despite depressed economic conditions. He bought his small plot of land and started an irrigated truck farm.

When the drouth came along, Muncey intensified his efforts to give his onions, tomatoes, corn and alfalfa enough water from his well to withstand the heat and lack of rainfall.

Vegetable Shortage Boosted Price

His venture was so successful that Muncey made more money this year than he would if rainfall had been normal. A shortage of fresh vegetables boosted the price, and it was not unusual for a long string of cars to line up at his vegetable stand each afternoon.

Muncey's crop this year will net several thousand dollars. He harvested three cuttings of alfalfa, will make 65 bushels of corn an acre and expects to get 15,000 pounds of onions from four acres. In addition, Muncey sold cucumbers, tomatoes, okra, squash and other vegetables. His farm provides work for about 30 persons who otherwise would be unemployed.

Power Cost Is Stickler

Water for irrigation was pumped from a 195-foot well with a motor from an automobile that cost $15, and power costs were low.

The success of Muncey's experiment revived interest in possibilities of irrigating the dry plains. The chief problem, according to John E. Hill, president of the Panhandle Development company, who has made a close study of plains irrigation, is power cost in lifting water from wells.

"The greatest benefit of irrigation on the plains," Hill said, "would be that farmers could grow their own living. Possibilities of irrigating large fields do not look good, but the plains country can grow fruit by irrigation."

Water Preferred

Americans Pass Up Wines In France

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AP)—A French hotel director, who has made a study of drinking habits, says ice water is the favorite drink of Americans who come to France, and not cocktails or wine.

As an example, he cites a group of Americans from 25 states who stayed at his hotel for a week. Out of 125, only 15 drank anything but water, he says, and some of these took iced tea.

"During prohibition," he says, "many Americans believed it their duty to experiment with the wine card. Now that Americans can legally drink whatever they wish in their own country, they have relapsed into their water-drinking habits.

"When Americans dine alone in Paris, water is usually the beverage on the table, although you see milk and iced tea occasionally. When they are accompanied by French friends, a bottle of wine is ordered, but the Frenchmen usually drink it alone."

False Property Appraisal Draws Fire Of Commission

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (AP)—The securities and exchange commission, as an offshoot of its campaign against stock swindling, today cracked down upon the allegedly false appraisal of property in connection with the issuance of stock.

An order was issued by the commission stopping the sale of the stock of the Haddam Distillers company, Moodus, Conn., on the grounds that its appraisal, made by Standard Appraisal company of New York, was "inexcusable careless." The commission added:

"The testimony impels toward the view that there was a dishonest attempt to inflate values beyond any maximum that differences of opinion might condone."

School Teacher Sighs Over Pupils With Identical Names In Minnesota; Have The Same Monickers And Street Address

HIBBING, Minn., Oct. 29. (AP)—Minnesota, known for its population of Scandinavian extraction and similarity of names, is apt to create problems for school teachers and census takers.

Just ask Miss Sadie Silverman, a teacher here.

Seating pupils in a study hall, she asked a youth his name.

"Robert E. Johnson," he answered.

Miss Silverman assigned him to a seat.

She asked the next pupil his name. "Robert E. Johnson," he replied.

Miss Silverman felt a bit exasperated.

"Are there," she queried, "any mare Robert E. Johnsons in the room?"

"Yes, teacher, my name is Robert E. Johnson," a third scholar ventured.

Miss Silverman thought she might seat them according to their middle names.

"What is your middle name?" she asked the first.

"Eugene," he answered.

"And yours?"

"Eugene."

Miss Silverman sighed.

"And I guess yours is Eugene, too," she addressed the third.

"Yes, teacher, my middle name is Eugene, too."

When Miss Silverman made a final effort to seat the Johnson's according to their home addresses and found that two of them lived in the same house—she was ready to let the matter drop.

"B. C." Relieves Your Headache In 3 Minutes
Realizing that no one drug can relieve all headaches, as they come from so many causes, a North Carolina pharmacist has developed a combination of several ingredients, so blended and proportioned as to relieve almost any headache in a few minutes. You can get this formula wherever drugs are sold under the name "B. C.," 10c and 25c packages, and when you have one of those violent nerve-racking headaches, from inorganic causes, "B. C." will give you soothing relief in three minutes. "B. C." should also be used for the relief of muscular aches and pains, common colds and neuralgia, reducing fever, and for quieting a distressed nervous system without opiates, narcotics or such habit forming drugs. Go To The Polls Today

LUBBOCK today makes an important decision. It selects, in a special election, a new City Commissioner — a person who will help shape the policies of the City and aid in conducting the city's business.

Few municipal campaigns in recent years have created so much interest as has the present one. Lively interest in one's civic affairs is laudable, and in most instances brings about a healthy condition of city government.

Selection of a member of the City commission is a question that should interest every citizen of Lubbock. It should be not only the duty but the desire of each voter to march to the polls and cast his ballot for the candidate he thinks most qualified to fill the position.

In today's election, eight persons — seven men and a woman—are seeking the place made vacant by the resignation of John F. Bacon. The candidates are Frank A. White, Walter F. Taylor, Mrs. Charles F. O'Neall, W. D. McClain, H. H. Halsell, W. R. Fickas, M. C. Butler, and George E. Benson.

If a large vote is cast today a wise decision undoubtedly will be made. No matter which candidate you favor, go to the polls and voice your opinion. And, after the election, be a good Democrat, forget whatever animosities might have been created in the campaign, and support the winner.

But, by all means, vote!

WITH OUR CONTEMPORARIES

"Another thing we are unable to understand," confesses W. R. Scott in the Olton Enterprise, "is how in samhill an amendment that calls such a vast army of voters to arms ever gets the approval of our state law making bodies."

"The latest fashion fad to interest Talkative Tillie," says the Scurry County Times, "is the wearing of half-hose by men who ought to know better—and by women who do."

"Many well-intentioned people, among whom may be classed Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Professor Tugwell of the well-known brain trust, profess to wish for a censorship of advertising under some branch of the government," Homer Steen observes in the Floyd County Hesperian.

"This day and time any Muleshoe girl is old-fashioned if she thinks eight people can't ride in a coupe," Jess Mitchell, mayor of Hurley, observes in the Muleshoe Journal.

"To a great many Americans, Americanism is just a word," says Otis D. Carter in the County Wide News of Littlefield. "They pay it lip service—but they have a very poor knowledge of its actual meaning."

"Well, the fall missed us this time," H. G. Richards points out in the Anton News. "But this is a great 'next year' country and we West Texans are a great 'next year' people."

"Now that 'Pretty Boy' Floyd, John Dillinger and other bad men are out of the way, we suppose the federal men can rest quite a spell," E. F. "Hunt" Huntsucker surmises in the Amherst Argus.

"If young men — and young women too—yes, boys and girls, knew what a mess crime really is they wouldn't entertain the idea of becoming involved even in a small way," Morley Drake observes in the Lamb County Leader.

"As a result of the drouth of the present year and the observations made of irrigation in the Lockney country where conditions are very similar to that found here, much interest is being taken by farmers and buisness men in supplementing the rainfall in this section by water pumped from wells," W. J. Baldwin says in the Hockley County Herald.

"Legislative tinkering with time-tried and efficient marketing machinery, including the grain exchanges, has been a detriment to agriculture instead of a help," Eddie Atom Warren observes in the Post Dispatch.

Today's One-Minute Sermon

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold.

"The rich and poor meet together: the Lord is the marker of them all.

"A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished.

"By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honour, and life." Proverbs 22, 1-4.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By George Durno

WHEN spokesmen for the United States, Great Britain and Japan first assembled at London a week or so ago it was advertised as a preliminary get-together to the 1935 World Naval conference.

Since Japan announced flatly that she wants no more of the 5-5-3 naval ratio, insisting that any future treaties limit navies on a basis of total tonnage, world leaders know that the big conference is on right now. If no Anglo-American-Japanese agreement is reached at London there won't be any 1935 conference.

The Japs made their move for naval parity in bold fashion. Usual diplomatic finesse was lacking, apparently deliberately.

On the evening of the day Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira privately made known his country's demands to Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald—and 24 hours before the same ultimatum was lodged formally with chief delegate Norman H. Davis—certain newspapermen were summoned to the Japanese Embassy in Washington.

There, these correspondents were informed bluntly that Japan's insistence on parity was a take-it-or-leave-it proposition. Should it not be accepted by England and America, the Japs would go home and start building a navy just as she saw fit. It was obvious that evening that the Japanese diplomat was speaking a piece sent out from Tokio.

When the Washington newsmen returned to their offices they discovered the same procedure had been followed at London. Dispatches had already arrived in the identic tenor of what they had just been told.

Our officials regard Japan's threat to go home and start an unlimited building program as 99 per cent bluff. They recognize, however, that the current London session is going to devolve into a long drawn-out affair.

Don't be surprised to see some American experts hopping out on the next trans-Atlantic liner to give Norman Davis and Admiral William H. Standley aid and comfort. What was to have taken place next year very definitely has been moved up for a showdown.

Naturally, the United States isn't going to take kindly to Japan's proposal doing away with major battleships and airplane carriers. Neither are our naval experts anxious to see any agreement which would permit Japan to build a huge flock of submarines, destroyers and light cruisers.

AIR: It didn't take the London-Melbourne air derby to awaken our military aviation experts to the crying need for dependable increased speed in pursuit planes but the success of that long flight did serve to accelerate their experimental work.

In time of war flying craft such as successfully negotiated the hop from England to Australia would be bombers. To combat ships of such proven speed and flying range attack planes vastly faster than those now in commission would be necessary.

Exhaustive experiments in this connection have been under way for some time. Aviation engineers the world over apparently are struggling with the same problem. It is easy enough to build planes with great speed but when machine guns and other appliances of war are attached it makes a difference in wind resistance which vitally affects dependability of performance.

Our experts are deriving much satisfaction from the fact the planes which finished second and third in the London-Melbourne derby were stock American models whereas the British-built winner was a special speed job.

NOTES: FDR really owned about a third of his banker audience the other night. . . . RFC stock brought in by Jesse Jones gives any such gathering a friendly tinge. . . . The President was polite to the book publishers who presumed to select volumes for the White House library but privately he prefers to make his own selections. . . . A ghost writer furnished the same speech to two New Dealers by mistake and they nearly spilled the beans. . . . Congressmen are sore because the Public Works administration has taken jurisdiction over river and harbor projects—the famous old "pork-barl.". . . "Pretty Boy" Floyd didn't have to confess his identity—his fingerprints told the story. . . . China fears that the Russ-Jap understanding means a new Japanese drive below the Great Wall.

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

THE best financial sources rate Ambassador Bingham's advocacy of a British-American monetary agreement as a highly-significant stalking-horse. They interpret the official denials as part of the technique. By disclaiming authorization the government keeps a free hand either to adopt his proposition as its own if public response is favorable or disavow it as an expression of purely personal opinion if it draws more raspberries than roses. You can make a memo right now that Mr. Bingham will not be rebuked for his "rashness" and also that Washington is far more active in currency stabilization than it cares to let on just yet.

New York insiders learn from their European contacts that informal views on monetary matters have already been exchanged between Washington, London and Paris and that the groundwork for an understanding has been laid. Reports are current that more pointed discussions are scheduled soon with our unofficial ambassador-at-large Norman Davis—who clings to his job as chief liaison officer despite Congressional opposition.

The dope is that Davis will be allowed considerable freedom in his unofficial but authoritative presentation of Washington's views. He will of course not be empowered to conclude any definite arrangements. His assignment is to find out whether Europe—and especially Britain—is ready to play ball on terms satisfactory to the administration. It's understood that actual stabilization depends chiefly on whether London is willing to cooperate without trying to run the show.

ADVANTAGES: Shrewd observers believe that America and England have much to gain by making common cause on monetary matters.

They point out that the pound and the dollar are now at virtual parity—so that neither the British nor the American price level is being undermined by the other through abnormal cost disparities due to exchange differentials. On the other hand the depreciated Japanese yen is a threat to the trade of both countries.

They note Neville Chamberlain's protest about keeping Britain off gold but the fact is that the pound is already indirectly tied to gold through its use by the British Equalization Fund. It is less difficult than it appears for Washington and London to find a common denominator.

An Anglo-American combination could easily dominate world exchange. France and her gold bloc allies would practically be compelled to join the party as a matter of self-preservation.

HARMONY: New York gets word that Francis M. Law—recent president of the American Bankers' association—almost had the heebie-jeebies on the opening day of the bankers' convention.

His well-laid plans to create an atmosphere of sweetness and light were nearly knocked cockeyed right off the bat by several small-town bankers who insisted on airing their grievances against the administration. That wasn't on the program at all but the boys simply refused to be steam-rollered.

CONTEST: Meanwhile Robert Moses' outspoken campaign methods are giving his supporters heart failure. He refuses to heed orthodox political advice. It's generally agreed that he picked the worst possible time and place to come out for a sales tax.

A keen observer remarks: "This New York election is an unpopularity contest. The victor will simply be the one they dislike least."

EXPLANATION OF LAST SATURDAY'S CARTOON

THE ROMAN SALUTE

The Italian Fascisti and the German Nazis now use the so-called Roman Salute, in which the right arm is raised palm outward. This salute has been misnamed, there being not the slightest historical justification for calling it Roman. Mussolini first saw it in the movie version of "The Eternal City" and earmarked it for future use. This was revealed by Major Rossi, who is now serving a 30-year sentence for turning on the Duce, his former friend.

The misconception is due to the fact that a few of the statues of the ancient Roman Emperors present them in the attitude of adlocutio. The adlocutio was the address to the Roman troops delivered by the Emperor as his exclusive prerogative at his inauguration. In this position the Emperor casually raised either arm, fist half clenched and index pointing upward in a gesture commanding silence and attention.

The ancient Romans saluted by handshaking (dextras jungere) or embracing between equals, while inferiors bent their knees before their superiors and kissed their hands (ad dextram regis). Soldiers used the same military salute that is used today. Sometimes the salutation consisted of a measured repetition of a certain phrase not unlike the action of a cheering team.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

By Mabel McElliott

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS RAEBURN, 18 and pretty, is openly snubbed by SYLVIA RIVERS, the richest girl in Larchneck, fashionable New York suburb. Sylvia fails to ask Boots to a party at the Yacht Club, Boots accepts a belated invitation from MRS. WATERMAN, one of the elderly social lights.

HARDY WHITMORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking, puts Boots in an embarrassing situation and she is escorted home by RUSS LUND, swimming instructor. The malicious Sylvia seizes this opportunity to hurt Boots and persuades MRS. FERNELL of the Woman's Club to ask Boots to resign from the Juniors.

Hardy calls to apologize and Boots accepts his invitation for a date that evening. In a spirit of recklessness she asks him to take her to "The Barn," a questionable dance resort.

Young MRS. GEORGE, a neighbor asks Boots to luncheon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

Boots traced the pattern of the blue damask cloth with her finger. "So that's the way it happened," she said, looking straight into her companion's eyes. "And I'm elected. . . . I'm the goat. You see that." There was an imperceptible sob in her voice although her eyes, bright and dry, belied it.

"My dear!" The other woman smiled at her encouragingly. "You're taking all of this too seriously. Believe me, it isn't important. Oh, I know," she went on swiftly at Boots' gesture of dissent, "I know it seems so to you. At the moment it swallows up—doesn't it?—everything else in the world. You can't read the morning papers, can't be interested in floods or plagues or world shaking discoveries because Mrs. Alice Dofunny Fernell, or whatever her name is, has decided you misbehaved and don't rate a ticket to the Christmas Assembly, or whatever the darned thing is."

Boots laughed hysterically. "That's exactly it," she said.

"D'you like this boy — Hardy?" Frances George wanted to know.

Boots stared out of the window past the cool green of the chintz draperies, past the pen where Gwen George frolicked and the shaded pram where Perry George, Junior, slept.

"He's—he's attractive," she said. "Last week I thought—well, I was crazy enough to think I really was in love with him. You know—I'd seen him in a crowd and he was so good-looking and he never knew I was alive, I'd made a sort of hero of him, I suppose."

Mrs. George nodded, understandingly.

"Well, then I found out since that he's really pretty dumb. He has charming manners when he wants to use them but he's not terribly amusing. He says the same thing over and over again. I know most girls don't mind that—it's sort of having a line—but it gets on my nerves," Boots confessed ingeniously.

"I thought he'd be like someone in a play—that he would say the most interesting things and be, well, different. He isn't. He's just like everybody else. Of course if he dates a girl she's noticed. Everybody thinks she must have something because he has the reputation of being awfully smooth. But even that won't do me much good now that Mrs. Fernell is down on me."

"You're what—almost 19?" Mrs. George wanted to know. "Not going to college?"

"Can't," Boots admitted. "Daddy's business."

"Of course. Well you don't want to hang around the village for ages, waiting for the old ladies to smile at you again," opined Frances George shrewdly. "You want to marry — later, of course. But not necessarily the first blond he-man who gives you a kind word."

"I thought if I could get away," Boots said, sipping her iced tea and relaxing for the first time in days, "I thought I might really do something. But Mother doesn't seem to want me to. She's very old school, Mother is. She says a girl ought to stay at home until the right man comes along. What did you say?" as her hostess choked violently over her glass.

"Nothing. Went down the wrong way," muttered Frances George, sputtering and mopping her eyes. What she had said, involuntarily and with horror, at Boots' description of the program which had been laid out for her was, "In this day and age!"

Gwen created a diversion at the moment by falling down and barking one plump knee. By the time colored Louise had brought the mercurochrome and peace had been established Boots discovered it was three o'clock and time to see to her marketing.

"I must go. You were grand to ask me and I feel better already." She meant it. The older woman's matter-of-fact acceptance of her situation had helped her to see it more clearly.

"I wish I could do something, really." Frances George told her sincerely. "When your mother gets back perhaps we can cook up something for you to do. I could give you a letter to some friends on 'Womanhood,'— the magazine, you know."

"Oh, would you, honestly? I'd never be able to thank you." Boots was almost incoherent.

"Well, we might see what could

Letters To The Editor

Local Citizens Give Views On Today's Special Election

HOWARD MAKES ANSWER

Editor, the Avalanche-Journal: Your papers carried a letter signed by R. L. Ewing, to the effect that Mr. Ewing had had some association or meeting with me concerning city politics. I expect for you to carry a correction of this item.

I have never associated myself with R. L. Ewing in any matter or manner. My acquaintances and associates are high-class in every sense.

Nor am I in any manner trying to dictate to the people of Lubbock who they shall elect as their City Commissioner. However, my advice would be if sought, not to follow any candidate sponsored or supported by R. L. Ewing, or a paper that would carry as a news item, as your paper did, a letter reflecting upon a private citizen of this town.

I have no political ambitions for myself or any other person nor am I interested in trying to control the City of Lubbock, directly or indirectly; this matter was known to you and to R. L. Ewing at the time Ewing's letter was written and published.

You may carry this letter as a correction if you will.

L. A. HOWARD, Lubbock.

Editor The Avalanche: Are we to be permitted to pursue the even tenor of way, living as we wish and voting as we please or are we to be forced to align ourselves with one or the other of these two mighty militant forces known on the streets as the Ewing clan and the Turnerites? Who are these two doughty inkslinging warriors, whose slogan is ever "lay on McDuff?" Are they more proficient with the Conklin self-filler, Parker Lucky Curve, or the Claymore? Are they the swash-buckling heroes that public opinion seems to proclaim them to be, battling for the downtrodden masses without hope of future reward, or are they just two more manikins or puppets messing up a lot of good air with an inferior grade of wind and in for their own personal aggrandizement? The man on the streets, of whom I am one, would like to know these things.

Capt. Turner, grand sachem of his faction, in a recent issue of the Avalanche, asked in an austere and stately mien and sonorous voice, that we vote thus and so, or dire calamity was lurking in the next ravine, in other words, he could see our finish.

Now Col. Ewing arises from his ashes, with a blast and polishes off this jewel with these words, "I want you to march to the polls Tuesday and vote thus and so." Is this a command or a request? Wouldn't the word-wish have fitted in there somewhere?

Now my friends, who compose all the users of electricity, gas and water in the city of Lubbock, the logical, the sensible thing for us to do is to proceed boldly down to the city hall and vote for our own interest (any person, man or woman who hasn't the sense and the nerve to vote for his own interest, should be disfranchised.) Vote for the man that believes as we do and is not afraid to say so, a man that has a platform and covers that platform with all four of his paws. William J. Bryan always contended that there was no twilight zone, no middle ground, that you're either there or you are over here. Truer words have never been spoken.

So let's all go to the polls and cast our votes for the man with a platform, the man that speaks our language, the man that knows our ills, has the remedy and is rearing to make the application, M. C. Butler.

A. S. JACKSON, 1615 Ave. Y.

Editor, The Avalanche: I am just an old country boy and I positively don't know a thing about politics or banks, but whats the difference? Besides no one will read this anyway. Well, there seems to be quite an interest in the commissioners race, and some little scattered excitement. Yes, I heard one fellow say "Why the Citizens National bank is going to take over the city government—"you know the bank has got $180,000 of the city's money over there and the bank's lawyer is looking after the city's legal affairs and an ex-vice president of the bank is city secretary and now I hear that the bank is going to send their vice president over to be a city commissioner."

Well I said, "What are you hollerin' about? Who could run a city better than a bank?" Now if I had a city and was looking for a nice bank to run it for me I wouldn't pass up the Citizens National bank.

But, seriously now, here is the way I look at it: Here is the bank looking after all of our money for us, never complaining and not even charging us a cent for it and then they are furnishing us a good lawyer to tell us when we can spend it and how—and on top of that the poor old bank lets us have a secretary to keep our books straight. Well, now as if that wasn't a plenty, John Turner thinks we ought to go over to the bank and ask them to please come over to the city hall and make our ordinances and maybe a few contracts for us. Now that would be imposing on good nature and it just ain't fair. You know, a lot of us, when we have a hard job staring us in the face, are inclined to say, "Ah heck let George do it." But shucks, John, there is a limit and you know it just ain't right. Now you all leave George be.

La Verne Kershner.

To the Editor, Lubbock Morning Avalanche:

"Concentration is the secret of strength in politics, in war, in trade. In short all management of human affairs," says Ralph Waldo Emerson. As I have previously stated, if elected I shall concentrate on a Municipal gas plant for Lubbock.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." There cannot be found a gem of thought with such intrinsic value. If elected to the city commission I shall try to live by this rule, or code of ethics. It is a sure road to justice and equal rights.

Driven by necessity, women have been forced to enter into all fields and in the face of severest criticism plead for justice. Women have made good . . . their power has been felt throughout the world.

Legislation moves slowly. Someone has said, "The wicked flee when no man pursueth," but they make better time when someone is after them. So with our city legislation. With a woman they might move faster for "when a woman wills she wills and you may depend on it and when she won't she won't and that's an end on't."

"The home is the strength of the American republic." Let's endeavor to help the home by reduced prices in all utilities. Unity, charity, and temperance would be a splendid motto for our City of Lubbock. These are links of pure gold that bind us together and to God.

My experience in civic work and in dealing with the public has shown me the likes and dislikes of the people, and if elected to City Commissioner of Lubbock, I will try to transact the duties of the office efficiently and impartially.

TARZAN AND THE LOST EMPIRE, No. 38

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

By the light of the torch that illuminated the interior of the dungeon into which he had been thrust by his captors, Tarzan saw a white man and several blacks chained to the walls. Among the blacks was Lukedi, the Bagego, but when he recognized Tarzan he evinced little interest. Confinement had gradually numbed his brain.

The ape-man was chained next to the only other white man in the dungeon, and he could not help but notice the keen interest that this prisoner took in him. As had been his custom while in the house of Praeclarus, Tarzan had worn only his loincloth and leopard-skin, with a toga and sandals, but in the fight that ensued the toga had been torn from him.

Now his appearance was sufficient to arouse the curiosity of his fellow prisoners, and as soon as the guards were out of hearing, they greeted him as a hero for carrying Sublatus out of his palace. The white man explained that he was a prisoner of war from another Roman colony in the valley, the city-kingdom known as Castrum Mare.

Their conversation was interrupted by the arrival of a detachment of soldiers, and as they halted before the entrance of the dungeon and threw the gate open, Tarzan saw, in the light of their torches, that they were bringing in another prisoner. As they dragged the man in, he recognized Maximus Praeclarus.

Stocks

WALL STREET REPORT

BY FREDERICK GARDNER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Stocks retreated a little further today in the face of scattered liquidation but trading was the smallest in nearly a month. After the market had displayed firming tendencies, traders shied away from the share list in late dealings as wheat tumbled sharply.

Despite reiteration of inflation fears in some quarters, the general pattern of financing markets did not bear them out.

Traders in stocks had their eyes focused toward the quarterly meeting of the United States Steel Corp. directors tomorrow. The genetal expecation of a poor third quarter earnings statement from that source, together with an uncertain business picture, contributed to an atmosphere of hesitancy.

Turnover decreased to 428,470 shares, the smallest since Oct. 3, compared with 889,850 Friday. With trading so restricted, the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 socks was only four tenths of a point lower at 69.4.

Cotton

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Cotton futures continued to move and finished a shade lower. In the early trading March contracts sold at 12.36 early or 9 points het higher. Later the prices eased to 12.25 and closed at 12.26. The general market ended barely steady at net declines of 1 to 8 points.

After the close of Liverpool the demnd for contracts tapered off and the market sagged during the late trading under comparatively light offerings.

December sold off to 12.26 and July to 12.33 in the late trading, making declines of 12 to 14 points from the high levels of the morning and closing quotations were at the lowest on most positions with the late months relatively easy.

Exports today 37,779 making 1,197,856 so far this season. Port receipts 38,234.

Grains

FORT WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, Oct. 29. (AP)—Fair demand for wheat and fair for other offerings was reported today on the grain market here. Estimated receipts were: Wheat 2 cars, corn 26 cars, oats 7 cars, barley none, sorghums 1.

Wheat No. 1 hard 108 1-2 to 109 1-2; barley No. 2 nominally 91-93; No 3 nominally 90-92; sorghums No. 2 milo per 100 pounds nominally 1.95-2.00; No. 2 milo nominally 1.93-1.98; No. 2 kaffir nominally 1.85-1.90; No. 3 kafir nominally 1.83-1.88.

Corn No. 2 white 1.03 1-2-1.03 1-2; No. 2 yellow 97-98; oats No. 2 red 61 1-2-62 12; No. 60 1-2 to 61 1-2.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, Oct. 29. (AP)—Wheat collapsed 2 3-8 cents a bushel maximum here today largely owing to reports that premier Bennett of Canada would recommend restricting Winnipeg grain exchange speculation.

With many stop-loss orders being executed, wheat in Chicago closed weak at prices ranging all the way from 1 cent to 1 7-8 cents under yesterday's finish, May 94 1-4-3-8, corn 3-8 to 3-4 off, May 75 7-8 to 76, oats 3-8 to 5-8 down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

The prices are furnished by the following Lubbock firms: Poultry—Lubbock Poultry and Egg company, delivered Lubbock; Grain—S. E. Cone Grain and Seed company following prices being bid by Lubbock grain dealers; Cotton—Plains Cotton company. All prices subject to change during day.

KANSAS CITY REPORT

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 29. (AP)—Cattle receipts totaled approximately 97,000 at 11 markets today against actual arrivals of 106,517 last Monday and 102,361 the same day a year ago. With the dressed beef trade sluggish and prices lower at eastern centers and fairly liberal supplies of beef steers and yearlings in the west, most livestock markets reported these classes weak to mostly 15-25 under last week's closing levels. Some key points estimated a shrinkle carry-over. Most other killing classes went unchanged except beef cows which cashed at slightly lower rates. Replacement stock in short supply at several principal markets held steady with instances stronger. At Chicago, 1367-lb. beeves scored 9.25, the day's best price, with slight steers at 9.00 and choice heavy heifers at 8.00.

Around 88,000 hogs were yarded today, a decrease of 8,000 under last Monday's figures. Sales were largely steady to 10 lower than Friday's quotations although closing rounds were more active with weights below 200 lbs., which broke sharply last week, regaining 10-15 of the loss. Averages below 200 lbs. continued to arrive in large numbers with the quality only medium to good. The circuit's best price was 5.65 paid at St. Louis and Chicago.

Slaughter lambs ruled generally steady to 25 lower while sheep held steady and feeding lambs were quoted weak. Small killers at St. Louis selected native lambs upward to 7.00 while most sales of good and choice slaughter lambs ranged from 6.50-75. Majority of desirable feeding lambs turned from 5.25-85 at Omaha and Chicago with nothing strictly choice on display.

Davis Shooting

ter he went to his father's home the father cursed him and accused him of attempting to sell family furniture. The son said he fired twice. His gun had three empty cartridges when he gave it to Deputy Sheriff Cap Moore at the sheriff's office.

The father was struck once, in the upper right abdomen barely below the ribs, and the bullet emerged from the same side about 2 inches above the hip. A large hole was made in an intestine. It was sutured in an operation made immediately after a Sanders ambulance took the wounded man to Lubbock sanitarium at 7 o'clock Sunday night.

Condition Critical

His condition was critical from the beginning and was without appreciable change last night. An attending physician said the aged man's chance of recovery was remote.

The assistant prosecutor said that Howell Davis related that when he entered the house in which his father lived the latter was washing his face in the bathroom after shaving, that he went there and spoke to him, and that after a short casual conversation the father began to berate him.

The son said he drew his revolver from a hip pocket and fired twice.

"Grapples With Son"

After the elder Davis was wounded, he grappled with his son and the struggle carried them into the living room, it was said.

Two women were in the kitchen, Howell Davis said. His father had rented or leased part of the house. The women were members of the family so living there.

When peace officers arrived, the younger Davis was not there. He soon appeared at the sheriff's office.

He said he was a farmer, formerly had lived here, and the last 15 months had resided near Plainview. He had hitch-hiked here from Plainview, he said.

Opponents In Contest

Davis and his children were aligned against each other here in a court contest over the estate of Mrs. Davis. The widower had been granted the estate when a will, purportedly drafted in June, 1918, and subsequently lost, had been probated as a lost will.

Records of county probate court showed the estate of Mrs. Davis individually was valued at about $4,000, representing property owned in Lubbock. The community estate was appraised at about $12,000, including 320 acres of land in New Mexico.

Application Filed

Frank Davis, a son, had filed application for letters of administration. Records in the case showed children were Mary Davis, Howell Davis, Frank Davis, Obbie Davis, Owen Davis, P. B. Davis, Mrs. P. B. Wright, Mrs. Eddie Burton, and Mrs. W. H. Tilson.

Davis, once a wealthy merchant in Angelina county, was convicted in federal court of defrauding a bankruptcy court there and sentenced to a federal penitentiary. He came here in 1928, before his appeal from the sentence had been denied, and went fro mhere to a federal prison, from which he returned here.

NEWS BRIEFS

County court records show that Judge E. L. Pitts yesterday fined Willard Stevenson $50 and sentenced him to 30 days in jail in each of two cases, one involving theft and second involving theft by bailee. Stevenson pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Chas. Berg of Royse City is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Chas. B. Metcalfe, 2005 Fifteenth street, and Mr. Metcalfe. The Metcalfe's went to Dallas last week and Mrs. Berg returned with them. Mr. Metcalfe is district courts clerk.

Joe Stephenson, charged with disturbing the peace by shooting pigeons, was acquitted by a jury in Justice of the Peace J. T. Trigg's court Monday afternoon.

To attend a biennial meeting of the state board of education, President Bradford Knapp and Business Manager W. T. Gaston are in Austin today.

O. A. (Otto) Carlton, 38, of the Blue Front cafe, 900-block Main street, charged with selling whisky, was released on $750 bond Sunday. The complaint was filed in Justice of Peace J. J. Dillard's Court. Police confiscated 24 pints of bonded whisky at the cafe Saturday night, they said.

Daring Fliers

able fluid.

Landing at Wheeler field here, the fliers completed in 25 hours and five minutes the second leg of what is generally conceded the most hazardous over-water air course in the world.

They took of from Naselei Beach, Fiji, at 6:05 a. m., Monday, Fiji time, (1:05 p. m. Sunday, eastern standard time.) Crossing the international dateline they returned to Sunday time, and hurried on into the night that returned them to Monday and brought them out of a cloud-clustered dawn, to a happy landing at 8:40 a. m. Hawaii time (2:10 p. m. eastern standard time.)

In all the trip they sighted land only once—the Phoenix Islands, which lie comfortably below the equator west of the 17th meridian. They saw no ships—no ships saw them. Their only contact with the world was their short-wave radio.

Sir Charles gave high praise to Navigator Taylor, who he said was right on top of his course when they sighted the island of Molokai.

committee went ahead with its plans for hearings on the tax bills. Representative Harold Kayton of San Antonio succeeded in putting new life into a resolution to request the centennial commission to abandon a commercialized exposition and confine the centennial to a series of historic pageants. The resolution was reported unfavorably last week by the state affairs committee but Kayton took advantage of a technicality to have the resolution transferred to the highways and motor traffic committee, of which he is chairman.

Kayton raised a point of order that a quorum did not vote when the resolution was defeated, five to two.

Activity Suspended

Activity of the senate centennial sub-committee was suspended pending results of an election at Dallas tomorrow on the question of issuing $3,000,000 city bonds to finance its share of the proposed centennial cost.

The senators rejected a proposal to advise the house committee of a tentative estimate of how much state funds the senate bill would propose appropriated, and decided to transmit its entire file of requests to the house committee. The requests exceeded $12,000,000.

The senate delayed until tomorrow debate on merits of a conference committee report on an emergency bill to remit penalties and interest on delinquent taxes in hopes of obtaining sufficient votes to make the bill effective immediately. The conference report was adopted in the house last week.

She Says Adventure Only A Pastime

Marina Yurlova, still in her twenties and pretty, served as private in a Cossack regiment throughout the World War, accounted for her quota of destruction among the enemy, was only survivor of thirteen deputed to blow up a bridge, nearly lost a leg from one wound and an arm from another, and was decorated several times for bravery. She declares that adventure is merely a pastime and maintains that only art is real and worthwhile. She hopes to start an art revolution in America, her adopted country.

J. J. Farmer, building superintendent, ran into the street immediately below Betts and in a high voice pleaded that the manufacturer pull himself back.

"Please get out of the way," Betts shouted back.

Insurance Tax

be substituted for old ones that will expire early in the next year.

Amounts Are Varied

Amounts that have been discussed in connection with the taxing of payrolls for unemployment insurance have ranged from one to five per cent. Burdett G. Lewis, director of the American welfore associations told a state meeting in Denver a few days ago that one per cent would be the figure. He estimated it would raise $200,000,000. Secretary Perkins recommended a five per cent tax to the last congress.

The fund to be derived from such a tax would be used for the benefit of persons who lose their jobs after the insurance plan is put into effect. Those now unemployed would not benefit under present plans.

Stalcup And Brown Are Reported In Olton Area

CLOVIS, N. M., Oct. 29. (AP)—Clues which apparently placed Virgil Stalcup and Clarence Brown, outlaws who escaped from the county jail at Dickens, Texas, Saturday after slaying the sheriff, definitely in the region about 100 miles west of Dickens and 75 miles southeast of Clovis, brought renewed activity on the part of officers here tonight.

Persons who knew both men said they saw Stalcup and Brown drive through Plainview and Olton today. They were headed west, and although there was some discrepancy in the description of the car, Plainview officers said they believed the men were still using the slain officer's car.

The reports were broadcast over the police radio station here and radio equipped cars were moving late this afternoon along the trails over which the men are apparently trying to escape.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—At Chairman Nye's specific direction, the senate munitions committee today made public incomplete reports which showed political and campaign contributions of $432,000 by 25 officers and directors of the Du Pont company from 1919 to 1934.

There are about 15 officers and directors yet to report, among them Pierre DuPont, chairman of the board; John J. Raskob, and Alfred P. Sloan, jr., directors. Senator Nye (R-ND) wished the data gathered thus far to be made public before the elections on Nov. 6.

be done, anyhow," said Frances judicially. She had Gwen on her lap now and was tousling the brown curls absently. It was just a shame, she told herself, after Boots had gone, that those terrible women were able to do such a thing to a child like that. Why, that morning Boots had had a wounded look in her eyes. She was like some wild creature stalked from ambush.

"When you grow up, lamb-pie," she muttered into the ear of the small one in her arms, "we're going to manage differently for you."

Boots went back to her tasks in a more cheerful frame of mind. But it was lonely the next few days. The telephone rang only once or twice and then it was the cashier at the market, asking for an order. Johnny went to the mountains and Hardy called to say he would be at the family's Maine camp until August.

"Oh, well," Boots said, hanging up, "I wouldn't have seen him much anyway. That was just a flash in the pan."

When she went to the club she avoided "the gang" coolly. Pride held her back and she imagined slights where slights were not. Isabel wanted to talk to her one day but she brushed by with such a strained and artificial smile that her friend withdrew, feeling inexplicably hurt. She fell into the way of choosing odd hours to swim, times when only "the kids" with their nurses were on the sand or old ladies, napping with their crocheting, under the awnings.

In this way she came to see rather a lot of Russ. He was always there, big square-shouldered, smiling. He didn't bother her. He talked a little, fragmentary bits of idle conversation which didn't require an answer, and Boots found him oddly restful sympathetic. His mood fitted hers. She did not realize that the man was watching her keenly, measuring her moods, adapting his stride to hers. Thus she fell into the way of accepting him as a friend, telling him little amusing things, watching for his big smile and his hearty laugh.

And it was summer—warm, glorious, impetuous summer when young things grew and flourished under the sun and of nights the white moon shone down on a world embroidered with a tapestry of beauty. The blue stalks of delphinium in the garden were ghostly in the moonlight, the roses had never seemed so luxuriant. There was scent everywhere — the good smell of earth under swift summer rains, the perfume of moonflowers in the dusk. Boots felt it — the spell of summer was on the land. Every open car, brimming with light frocks and lighter laughter, had a touch of magic. Every radio played love songs and the summer nights were lovely as one drowsed in the porch swing. . . .

Her father had gone to the Hartses for a game of bridge one evening and she was half-sitting, half-lying in a deep chair when she heard a car stop at the hedge, heard hard, masculine steps on the walk. She sat up suddenly.

"Oh, you."

It was Russ, brave in new white flannels and a dark blue coat. He looked big, masculine, dominating.

"Hello. Thought you might be around. Want to go down on the rocks for a while?"

She hesitated. Now was the time, if ever, to snub him, to make him realize the difference in their respective positions. But why should she? She was young, pulsing with life; she was lonely. He had been kind to her.

"All right," she said impulsively. "Just wait until I powder my nose."

She wondered, as she hastily ran a comb through her gilt curls and fluffed a bit of scented powder on her face, why her heart was beating so fast and furiously. Why, it was only Russ Lund! Surely she couldn't be excited about the prospect of going out with him.

She came to the screen door and something blocked it. His big shadow, looming almost menacingly, shut out the moonlight.

"I'm ready," she said, confused.

He was at her side and, almost before she knew what was happening, his arms were around her, crushing her in a grip at once tender and triumphant; his face was very close to hers.

"Don't. Don't." Her tone was almost pettish.

In an instant he released her. Panting, not knowing whether to laugh or cry, she stared at him. Oh, she had been kissed, inexpertly enough, before. But this was different. Russ wasn't one of the "crowd." He was a man grown. Everything about him was different. She—she almost liked it, but of course he mustn't know that.

"I'm sorry," he said, but his tone didn't sound in the least bit regretful. "You're so—so darned cute."

She laughed hysterically.

"Promise to behave or I shan't go down on the rocks with you." The rocks formed a sort of promontory on the shore. All young Larchneck gathered there on these warm, moonlight nights. She would be seen with Russ . . . the tongues would start gabbling . . . but she told herself she didn't care.

"I promise."

The water lapped in ceaselessly. Russ brought a rug from the battered car and spread it for her to sit upon. In her transparent frock, with her hair a bright halo about her small, pointed face, there was something almost unearthly about Boots tonight. The man settled himself rather awkwardly beside her. All about them, at discreet distances, little groups, couples, were gathered. Somewhere a boy's voice was raised in song. Far out on the water the lights of little boats winked on and off. A bell-buoy sounded eerily far to the north.

"Pretty," Russ said inadequately. But he was looking at Boots, not at the view.

"Oh, isn't it?" She leaned back, her chin tilted at the stars. Russ said fiercely, "Come along. You look so darned sweet I'm certain to kiss you again if we stop here."

City Editor Now Author; Writes Newspaper Credo

Stanley Walker, city editor of the New York Herald Tribune, has a home on Long Island, but he "lives" in the city room of his paper. Still, he found time to do a book about New York night life some time ago, called "Night Club Era," and now, in "City Editor," he sets down his newspaperman's credo.

By JOHN SELBY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Stanley Walker is the boy from Lampasas Tex., who has proved that a city editor can write.

From Lampasas Mr. Walker went to the University of Texas, and after a period spent on the lesser jobs of journalism arrived on the New York Herald Tribune as a rewrite man. It was not long before he was city editor, and finally one of the best known city editors in the land.

He does on occasion sleep in his home in Great Neck, L. I. But he lives in the city room of the Herald Tribune.

Mr. Walker is a man of, to use one of the cliches Mr. Walker disapproves violently, "middle height." He walks rather slowly, softly, and because he carries his head somewhat forward, he gives the impression of looking up at persons with whom he talks.

Hates 'Stuffed Shirts'

As ruler of one of the busiest city desks in the world he is deceptively calm. His reporters may fear him, but if so they conceal the fear nobly. He speaks quietly, often in such a low voice he can only just be heard. He hates "stuffed shirts", professional reformers, and endures press agents because he can't think up a scheme to get rid of them.

A year ago this literary city editor wrote a book called "Night Club Era," which told the story of New York's now dimmed night life. Now he has written of something much closer to the Walker heart in "City Editor."

See Changes Coming

It is his newspaper credo; also, it is a history of recent journalism and a textbook for young newspaper people anxious to solve the mysteries of the editorial mind. But Mr. Walker, for all his pronouncements, does not claim to be an oracle.

"Obviously there are big changes coming to the newspaper world," said he when the copy flowing over his desk eased off for a moment. "The present set-up is not going to continue forever. But most of the changes seem to be hiding, with television perhaps, behind the mythical corner. But I do know one immediate problem.

"It is that the Saturday paper is a dead loss. The 'newly leisure' has killed it; people don't work Saturdays, they play. Business being dead, advertising is likewise dead. My own solution would be to cut the paper to the bone, print only the essential facts, and not fill it up with material written obviously as filler.

"Fact is, we are publishing too much about everything. For example, perhaps a few lawyers and nice old ladies in homes for the aged read every word of the transcripts of evidence now so fashionable. Who else has time?"

Lions Club Party Set For Tonight

One feature of tonight's Lions club Hallowe'en party will be a "duckin' board" on which prominent members of the club will sit 10 minutes each while celebrators try to duck them by hitting a target with a baseball.

The program will be in the Auditorium and is open to the public.

John Mitchell, H. C. Pender, Victor H. Lindsey, Dr. Marshall Harvey, Hurley Carpenter, and Burnie Phillips will be among those who perch on the board.

It is suspended from two ropes over a tank of water. When a ball hits the target the ropes are released.

The "red bat," "missing link," "IPTA" and other attractions are promised. Games, hamburgers and hot dogs, and soda water will be available.

The carnival will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Jack Oakie Listed In Hollywood's "Who's Who" Of Pugilistic Circles

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29 (AP)—Jack Oakie, screen comedian with a penchant for wise-cracks, was alleged to have spoken out of turn with the result that today he was listed in Hollywood's notorious pugilistic "Who's Who."

The Comedian, so it appears from the best ringside information available, early yesterday in a night club engaged in a one-punch encounter with Rex Lease, also of the films.

The encounter, witnesses said, came shortly after Oakie entered the night club alone and sat down to a table occupied by Lease, another man and two young women. The comedian was said to have made some sort of wisecrack.

"There was nothing to it," said Oakie. "I dont know what I said to hurt Rex's feelings—if I said anything—but anyway he suddenly told me to cut it. Then he gave me a kind of push, so I just left. I made a practice, you know to steer clear of all arguments. Got to protect my 'kisser' you know. Besides I'd already had my glass of beer, it was time for me to scram anyway."

WANT TO RELIEVE TIREDNESS? . . .

GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

● Bill Miller, famous all-around athlete and 4 times National Single Sculls champion, explains in this way the "lift" he experiences from smoking a Camel: "Many people have commented on how quickly my energy seems to come back after a hard race. The secret is, I think, that it is my custom to smoke a Camel after a race. With me, as with other smokers, Camels quickly refresh me and revive my energy. And Camels never upset my nerves."

ARCHITECT. W. R. Ballard says: "When business makes heavy demands on energy, smoking a Camel smooths the way—restores my energy. My mind is clearer and more alert."

YOUNG SOCIETY MATRON: "Camels are a grand-tasting cigarette," says Mrs. Allston Boyer of New York. "They are so mild! And it's marvelous how smoking a Camel revives my energy."

TOBACCO MEN ALL KNOW:

"Camels are made from finer, More Expensive Tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."
