A story about the Midland Independent School District bond election in Sunday's Midland Reporter-Telegram incorrectly reported what the resulting tax increase on an average $53,210 home would be. The actual increase would be $17.16, the MISD business office reported. The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

'Miss Saigon' hits

NEW YORK — "Miss Saigon" and "The Will Rogers Follies" — one a big British musical and the other a lavish American song-and-dance extravaganza — each received 11 Tony Award nominations Monday. The two shows dominated the musical categories for the awards honoring the best of the 1990-91 Broadway season.

MCI: No '900' lines

WASHINGTON — MCI Communications will no longer handle the billing for "900"-number telephone sex lines, the nation's second largest long-distance company said Monday. MCI was the only one of the big-three long-distance companies that still offered billing for the calls, and its decision could cut deeply into the sex-line business. In short, such services must now either rely on smaller carriers or handle their own billing for calls routed through major carriers. American Telephone & Telegraph said that company has not handled the billing for adult phone lines since 1987.

Bing's son dies

NOVATO, Calif. — Dennis M. Crosby, one of Bing Crosby's twin sons by his first marriage, has died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, authorities said Monday. Crosby, 56, was found dead in his home late Saturday by his roommate, said Marin County Sheriff's Lt. William Donovan. A 12-gauge shotgun was found near Crosby's body. There were no signs of foul play, and case is being treated as a suicide, Donovan said. Dennis Crosby was the second of four sons born to Crosby and his first wife, Dixie Lee (Wyatt) Crosby, to commit suicide.

Bush's back in saddle

Irregular heartbeat is brought under control

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush returned to work at the White House on Monday after almost 40 hours in Bethesda Naval Hospital, his erratic heartbeat apparently brought under control by two drugs.

Bush vowed to resume his break-neck working pace, even though he had experienced some irregularity in his heartbeat early Monday morning. After more than seven hours of normal beating overnight, Bush's heart suddenly resumed an irregular rhythm at about 4:45 a.m. on Monday, his doctors said.

Bush, 66, was still experiencing irregular heartbeats at 9 a.m., when he was discharged from the hospital. But at 9:45 a.m., when he was already back in the Oval Office, his heartbeat was normal and at 5:30 p.m., the White House said in a written statement that it had remained that way all day, a strong indication that the drugs were having their intended effect.

During a full day of meetings and public events, the heartbeat had "shown no signs of returning

Quayle's 'rep' a bad rap, president says

By Andrew J. Glass
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The president's heart flutters. Or he heads off to a rendezvous in drug-ridden Colombia. Or he bobs in a small boat on stormy seas off Malta.

Each such event raises fresh doubts whether Vice President Dan Quayle is fit to assume the nation's highest office. The weekend hospitalization of President Bush with a minor heart problem caused financial jitters as investors feared an untested Quayle might move into the Oval Office.

From his onset in the vice presidency, the 44-year-old Quayle has had a constituency of one. "Hey, he has my full support and he's doing a great job," Bush said Monday after leaving the hospital.

Among other Americans, Quayle's political stock has failed to rise since 1988, when Bush plucked him out of relative obscurity as a two-term Indiana senator and made him

CARING ALTERNATIVES

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Life-care communities become viable choice for many seniors

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

At 83, Ona Burns has more energy than most people half her age.

When Mrs. Burns isn't teaching piano at Midland College, she is taking an aerobics class at Trinity Towers — one of two non-profit retirement communities operated by Midland Presbyterian Homes.

"The other day, when I told my oldest son I was taking art lessons, he said, 'Mother, I hope that won't interfere with your hang-gliding course at the college,' " she said jokingly.

Mrs. Burns is one of a growing number of independent retirees who live in a setting that the American Association of Homes for the Aging identify as life care communities (LCC) — also known as continuing-care retirement communities (CCRCs).

Such communities, which took off in the late 1970s, provide living arrangements from housing, meals, housekeeping and social activities to personal-care assistance with medication and hygiene and other health-care services.

Nationally, it is estimated there are between 680 and 850 such communities serving about 150,000 households.

"For the longest time, we considered long-term care as nursing-home care, but it's really much broader than that," said Trinity Towers Administrator Laura Lyons. "Most older people are not in nursing homes. . . . I think the evolution of CCRCs is going to help."

The establishment of Trinity Towers in the late 1960s, followed by the construction of Manor Park in the 1980s set the stage for Midland's first alternative-lifestyle communities.

The two differ in costs and available living arrangements from apartments to townhomes.

Manor Park is licensed as a CCRC under the Texas Board of Insurance, requiring a one-time refundable entrance fee, ranging from $34,000 to $200,000, along with a monthly maintenance fee used to offset operations.

"Here, their total service goes beyond brick and mortar," said William Saxton, chief executive officer of Midland Presbyterian Homes/Trinity Towers-Manor Park. "We provide comprehensive services — housekeeping, security, an emergency medical alert system and other amenities."

Although most CCRCs are private, non-profit organizations, as is the case with Presbyterian Homes, experts say there's a growing interest in such arrangements on the part of corporations from hotels chains to insurance companies and banks.

Dr. Guy E. Shuttleworth, an expert in long-term care administration at the University of Texas at Austin, is a proponent of LCC and CCRCs — but with reservations.

"I think the concept itself is good.

■ Odessa advertising executive dies in skydiving accident.

Staff Report

Womack

A Stanton police spokesman said the Federal Aviation Administration is conducting an investigation into the accident that claimed the life of the president of Womack Kleypas Advertising Network and critically injured Midlander Brent Berry, 39, an employee of Dave Leonard Contruction Co.

The accident occurred at about 6:40 p.m. when the two men and a woman, Jennifer Christon, an employee of Thriftway Grocery in Stanton, were filming an advertisment while parachuting at the airport, located about 17 miles north of Stanton, according to Martin County Sheriff's Office officials.

Ms. Christon had begun her descent when her parachute failed to open completely. She was forced to cut it loose in order to release the reserve parachute.

Womack, who was descending above Ms. Christon, dodged the discarded parachute and in doing so, turned and became tangled with Berry's parachute, witnesses told officials.

The collision of the two men took place about 1,000 feet above the ground, officials said.

Both men, entangled, fell to the ground.

Womack and Berry were both transported to Martin County Hospital where Womack died. Berry soon was transfered to Memorial Hospital and Medical

Grant to pay prosecutor, officials say

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A federal grant will pay for a special prosecutor to handle many of Midland County's felony drug cases beginning next month, officials announced.

District Attorney Al Schorre, whose staff applied for the money in March, said he received an approval notice for the grant from the governor's office Monday.

The money — $63,832 in federal funds supplemented with a $21,389 contribution from Midland County — will pay the salary and administrative expenses for a specialized drug offense prosecutor.

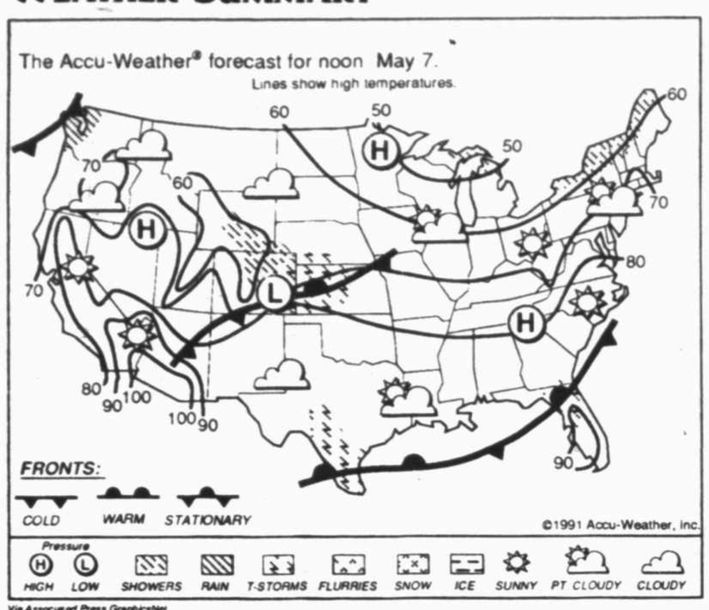

Current Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams is expected to fill the new position June 1, Schorre said.

Ms. Sams was ill Monday and could not be reached for comment.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-50 and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Wednesday is expected to be decreasing in cloudiness with a high in the lower 80s and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

STATE

A high-pressure system continued to hang over Texas Monday, providing most of the state with sunny skies and warm spring temperatures.

There was some high cloudiness over North Texas, but mostly clear skies prevailed. Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 70s and ranged from 70 at Stephenville to 80 at Abilene.

Winds were generally from the east and southeast at less than 10 mph, except in the southeast corner of the region, where gusts topped 20 mph.

South Texas skies were fair to partly cloudy, with some low cloudiness over the extreme southern tip of the state. Showers were reported in Mexico just south of Brownsville. Winds swept the area at 5-15 mph, with stronger breezes along the coast.

There was some increasing cloudiness over West Texas early Monday afternoon, leaving most areas under partly cloudy skies. Temperatures were mostly in the 70s, but El Paso recorded the state's high with 84.

Southeast and southwest winds were recorded at 25-35 mph in some portions.

The forecast called for increasing cloudiness across much of the state today. In North Texas, there is a slight chance of thunderstorms, with highs in the upper 70s and low 80s. Lows tonight are expected to dip into the 60s and upper 50s.

In South Texas, mostly cloudy skies were expected through Wednesday with an increased chance of showers and thunderstorms. Highs were to reach into the 80s in the far south with overnight lows in the 40s across the Hill Country.

Increasing clouds and isolated showers were predicted in West Texas with highs in the 70s in the Panhandle and the 80s elsewhere.

NATION

Rain was scattered east of the Mississippi on Monday, with some thunderstorms carrying high wind and hail. The western Plains had a record-tying chill.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over northwestern Florida and the state's panhandle, southern Georgia, western West Virginia, Pennsylvania, central and eastern New York state, New Jersey and southern New England.

In West Virginia, wind blew to 60 mph at Elkins and 66 at Kingwood, and one-inch diameter hail fell at Sissonville. In Elkins, the temperature dropped 17 degrees in one hour to 55 when the storm hit, but heavy wind gusts made it feel like 36, the National Weather Service said.

About 10,000 customers of Monongahela Power and Appalachian Power Co. in West Virginia lost power temporarily, utility officials said.

Rain fell across southern Lower Michigan, northeastern Indiana, eastern Kentucky, east-central Alabama, western Upper Michigan, northern Wisconsin, east-central and northern Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

Rain changed to snow over northwestern Minnesota.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

to fibrillation," the fast, irregular rhythms that struck him on Saturday while he was jogging at Camp David, Md., the statement said.

Bush immediately resumed his normal workload, with a stream of Oval Office meetings, including one with the former Soviet foreign minister, Eduard Shevardnadze. The president also moved quickly on a political front to quash the debate over the qualifications of Vice President Dan Quayle, which had flared anew when Bush was hospitalized on Saturday, even though the president's condition was not immediately life-threatening.

"He has my full support, always has, and he's doing a first-class job," Bush said on returning to the White House about 9:30 a.m. after doctors decided to continue his medication and not take the next step of using an electric shock to restore the normal beating of his heart.

White House officials were clearly relieved that Bush did not have to undergo that treatment, which would have required putting him under a general anesthetic and would have made Quayle acting president while Bush was incapacitated.

That prospect served to intensify the public discussion about the vice president's ability to succeed Bush, but the president's doctors said it had nothing to do with their decision to release him.

The doctors said John H. Sununu, the White House chief of staff, had been consulted about the decision, but had mainly listened and taken notes.

"Under no circumstances were any political considerations ever added into the equation whatsoever in the treatment of the president," said Dr. Burton Lee, the president's personal physician.

Quayle himself tried to deflect the questions with humor by comparing himself wit Nolan Ryan, the Texas Ranger pitcher.

"Nolan Ryan, 44 years old, same age that I am, throwing another no-hit game," Quayle said in a speech. "And I love it when I hear the media describe someone 44 years of age as mature and well-seasoned."

Still, Quayle and his political future were a constant undercurrent of speculation at a meeting of conservative and centrist Democrats in Cleveland.

"I think it may make the president think twice about just automatically putting him back on the ticket," Rep. Vic Fazio of California, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, told the meeting of the Democratic Leadership Council. The meeting in Cleveland began Monday with a moment of silent prayer for Bush's health.

But Paul E. Tsongas, the former Democratic senator from Massachusetts who is the only declared candidate for president, warned the same meeting not to indulge in what he called "Quayle bashing."

And the White House shrugged off the talk about Quayle and the 1992 ticket. "It's a passing fancy," Ron Kaufman, the White House political director, said in an interview with The Associated Press. "By six months from now, everyone will have forgotten it."

Bush has not announced his candidacy for 1992, but has said that if he does run — as he is universally expected to do — he will retain Quayle on his ticket.

It was still not clear Monday precisely what caused the president's irregular heartbeat, and his doctors said they may never know for certain.

Dr. Allan Ross, chief of cardiology at George Washington University Hospital, who is a member of the medical team treating Bush, said: "It's really quite impossible so early in this go-round to firmly predict for you whether there'll ever be another episode. Certainly, it's possible."

Lee said it was also possible that Bush had the arrhythmia before Saturday. Bush has complained of fatigue while jogging at least twice in recent weeks.

"He has said to me in the last couple of weeks, 'Gee whiz, maybe I'm getting older,'" Lee said. But the doctor said he discounted that remark because the weather was hot and Bush "was completely normal."

QUAYLE: Hospitalization causes financial jitters

his running mate. A recent poll taken for Cable News Network and Time magazine found that 67 percent of Americans regarded Quayle as unqualified to be president while that only 19 percent felt he could cope with the task.

Meantime, Quayle jokes ripple through Washington salons before being picked up by TV hosts. Anti-Quayle humor turns on his relative youth and alleged dimwittedness. It evokes signs seen during the 1988 campaign that read: "Very Pretty But Can He Type?"

David C. Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary and a former White House correspondent for Time, sees the jokes and the polls as a self-reinforcing spiral that probably cannot be halted without some major intervening event by which Quayle can "prove himself."

But he adds: "I challenge you to produce any Republican who on the record will say that Quayle ought to be dumped."

Quayle gets scant coverage in Washington, especially from the TV networks. As a result, the public gets little information on Quayle's duties and how well he is doing his job.

"The Vice President meets with us several times a week," said Sen. John H. Chafee of Rhode Island, a veteran moderate Republican. "He's on top of the issues. He is knowledgeable and forthright. Based on what I have seen, he is eminently qualified to assume the duties of the presidency. I have never understood the (low) rating he has gotten."

Chafee is not alone in arguing that Quayle gets a bad rap from the press. Says New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a potential 1992 Democratic presidential candidate, "You shouldn't even be pursuing it. For those who ... question whether Quayle (could be president) a lot of them probably thought Bush couldn't do it. And a few weeks ago, he was at 91 in the polls."

Actually, Quayle has worked hard to try to make the president look good, both in the capital and in his frequent trips around the country and abroad. In public, he appears unfailingly loyal and deferential to Bush. But such unswerving public loyalty may foster the kind of lap-dog image that plagued Bush during most of his eight years as Ronald Reagan's No. 2.

Behind the scenes and away from the cameras, Quayle tends to speak his mind — more so than Bush did during the Reagan era.

Bush included him in the inner councils — "The Big Eight" — that shaped policy in the Persian Gulf war. He has argued, unsuccessfully, against raising the minimum wage, favoring instead tax cuts for the poor.

Still, Quayle's constitutional duties are skimpy: to preside over the Senate and to vote in case of a tie. His delegated executive duties are also light: a government-wide coordinating role on space policy and chairmanship of the Council on Competitiveness, a Cabinet-level review body that reviews federal rules.

Center, where he remained in critical but stable condition Monday night, hospital officials said.

Ms. Christon was uninjured in the accident.

In addition to his work with Womack Kleypas, Womack was the secretary/treasurer of Womack/Kleypas/Gette Advertising, San Angelo, and a partner in Finished Art Services, San Antonio/Odessa.

From 1975 to 1985, he worked with Womack/Claypoole/Griffin Advertising as a broadcast manager, assuming the role of vice president in 1978.

Before joining the advertising agency, he was a cameraman for KMID-TV from 1968 to 1969; a cameraman/video-tape operator for KTVT-TV from 1971 to 1973; and a production/operations manager for KMID-TV from 1973 to 1975.

Womack graduated from Texas Christian University with a bachelor of business administration in 1973. He did post-graduate work in marketing at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

He was a member of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Advertising Federation, the American Management Association, and served on the board of directors of Permian Basin Advertising Federation.

From 1975 to 1989, he won more than 200 local and district Addy awards. He won the 1971 International Broadcast Awards honor as a video commercial cameraman and a 1980 national merit award for logo design and a 1983 television production from the American Advertising Federation.

Womack served on the executive committee of the Boy Scouts of America Buffalo Trail Council, on the communications committee of the United Way, on the advisory board of the Odessa College Business Incubator, and as community service director of Odessa Downtown Rotary.

He also was a member of the Odessa Information & Discussion Group, the Midland/Odessa Media Coalition, the Midland International Airport Task Force, the Odessa and Midland chambers of commerce and the Odessa Committee.

Womack was born May 31, 1950, in Lubbock. He married Catherine Cahill Oct. 27, 1973, in Fort Worth. They have two children, William Kyle Womack and Amy Leigh Womack, both of Odessa.

Womack also is survived by his parents, T.W. Jack and Mary Womack of San Antonio, and his brother, Robert Kyle Womack of Midland.

Memorial services will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday at First Baptist Church, Odessa, with the Rev. H. Bailey Stone officiating.

Contributions may be sent to the television ministry at First Baptist Church.

GRANT: Prosecutor to handle county drug cases

(From 1A)

Schorre said the district attorney's office will hire a new prosecutor to fill her present job, bringing the number of assistant district attorneys to eight.

"We already have someone lined up to fill that slot," Schorre said.

Ms. Sams' new position will pay about $42,000 a year — the standard for a Midland prosecutor with five years' experience. The rest of the grant, which is administered by the governor's office, will go toward renting downtown office space and purchasing supplies.

According to the terms of the grant, Ms. Sams will handle cases involving drug deliveries, defendants with prior drug convictions, and drug-related violent crimes. She also will be responsible for large-scale drug possession cases.

Other prosecutors will continue to handle less-serious drug-related offenses, Schorre said.

He said the specialized position is necessary "because of the significant increase in our case load, particularly in our drug-related cases."

According to state figures, there were 37 drug sale or manufacturing cases filed in Midland County's state district courts in fiscal year 1987. That compares with 119 in fiscal year 1990. There were 78 drug sale or manufacturing cases filed locally in fiscal year 1988 and 187 in fiscal year 1989, figures show.

Schorre said his office needs an additional prosecutor, regardless of the availability of federal money.

"We are in a personnel crunch," he said. "We needed an additional assistant desperately. So had the governor's office not approved the grant, we would have had to request (that) the (county) commissioners undertake the financial burden of an additional prosecutor themselves."

Schorre said the one-year grant will postpone such a request for the time being.

"What the state is doing is just allocating out federal funds for the war on drugs," he said. "Hopefully, that will be approved again by Congress so that we can re-apply and get it (the grant) again next year."

If the federal money dries up, Schorre said, he hopes the county will continue to pay for the new drug prosecutor's position.

"If for some reason we don't get that grant at some point, we're going to have to ask the commissioners to pick it up," he said.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia said it is too early to predict whether the county will be willing or able to fund an additional prosecutor, should that become necessary.

"If we get another district court, we will have to hire more prosecutors," she said, referring to Midland's bid in the state Legislature for a fourth state-level court.

But Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty said that the district attorney's office will be understaffed even if the new district court is not approved.

"We need about two more prosecutors up here to adequately handle the work," Petty said.

Meanwhile, he said, he welcomes the addition of a drug case specialist to the prosecution staff.

"Felony drug offenders commit crimes other than drug-related offenses," Petty said. "We're going to be able to move these cases through the system more quickly, with the result that we will be able to clear not only narcotic type crimes but also burglaries that are associated with narcotic offenses."

California college offers courses on homelessness

By Carol Ness
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — For three hours, 18-year-old Corina Beczner hung out on Haight Street, picking through rags and fending off a man who figured that since she had no home she was easy prey. "It was," she said, "so degrading."

Then she abandoned her pose as a homeless waif and fled to her dorm to shower off the grime.

What didn't wash off was a new, profound understanding of homelessness — and a determination to try to do something about it.

That is precisely the point of the experience, a central part of a groundbreaking academic program at San Francisco State, where students have dressed in old clothes or blankets to beg for money, spent hours trying to get government help, and volunteered at a shelter.

Since San Francisco State started offering homelessness courses for credit in 1989, some 80 students have learned firsthand what it's like to be homeless and how they can help solve the seemingly intractable problem.

The courses are just part of the school's participation in the San Francisco Bay Area Homelessness Project, which has hundreds of students on 10 campuses tackling the problem in their communities. At the University of California-Berkeley they started a health clinic for the homeless; at California State-Hayward they volunteered more than 600 hours in just one semester.

The phenomenon is spreading nationally.

Raising students' consciousness, helping them develop as leaders and trying to prevent homelessness are the program's goals, said coordinator Bev Ovrebo, a public health professor at San Francisco State. Ovrebo built the first course, "Homelessness and Public Policy," around the idea of real-life experiences.

"Students come into class saying, 'I don't know what to do, I don't like the homeless, I don't want to look at them, I'm not sympathetic,'" Ovrebo said. But they also wonder why this is happening and what they can do about it.

"Almost all of them become deeply involved," she said.

Henry Ostendorf, an industrial design student, took a one-credit spinoff from Ovrebo's course because he saw homeless people every day, was scared of them and didn't know what to do — and because he needed the single credit to qualify for financial aid.

"I saw things I didn't know existed — families and people exactly like me who have fallen homeless because of a bad turn of luck," said Ostendorf, who went on to teach the spinoff class "Outta Control."

This semester Beczner, an environmental science freshman from Hayward, was one of his students.

"Before, I would tend to block (the homeless) out and walk by," she said. Then a homeless woman came to class and told her story.

"She had been homeless for a long time. She had three children -one is in college now. She's a normal woman," Beczner said.

"When I had thought of homeless people I thought they were crazy or had something wrong psychologically — this wasn't the case with the people I met in class."

The class required four forays into the world of the homeless, first to observe, then to try to get into a shelter (it was full), to act homeless and then to help.

Beczner didn't take a shower for three days, then put on an old T-shirt and jeans and headed for the Haight, feeling vulnerable without any ID or money. People kept staring at her.

Her first real crisis was finding a bathroom.

"I really freaked out. I thought, How do these people take care of themselves?" A sneak trip into McDonald's solved the problem.

It wasn't until a homeless man she befriended became too forward that Beczner got scared.

"I said, 'No I'm not that kind of person.' He kept insisting that I was because I was homeless. It was so degrading."

She was shaken by the sight of homeless people her age. "I wondered, Where are these people's parents?" She said she learned no one would choose to live that way.

A visit to a shelter with fellow students this month taught Beczner another lesson, she said: that it's tremendously hard to get out of homelessness, but the right kind of help can make a difference.

Recycled trash is put to good use

NEW YORK (NYT) — The country's first building that uses blocks made from recycled incinerator ash is being built in Stony Brook, N.Y., on the campus of the State University of New York there.

The 8,100-square-foot building, a boathouse for the Long Island university's Marine Sciences Research Center, has 300 tons of blocks made of 67 percent ash and 33 percent sand, said R. Lawrence Swanson, director of the center's Waste Management Institute.

The ash comes from a trash-burning plant in Peekskill, N.Y., operated by Wheelabrator Technologies, where 2,250 tons of garbage burned every day generate 675 tons of ash. The ash is mixed with sand and cement. The result is a block that is at least as durable as standard cinder blocks.

The technology has been used in Europe for years but is only now being tested in this country under strict regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency, said Ross M. Patten, Wheelabrator's senior vice president for project development. There has been concern that the blocks could leak toxic waste chemicals or emit poisonous gases.

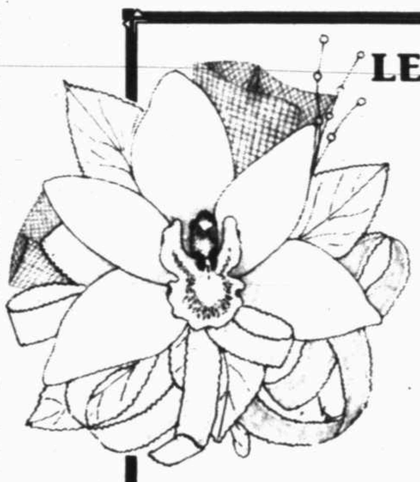

"Universities are now developing data that say it should not be a health hazard, and eventually it will be widely adapted," Patten said.

Swanson said the long-term applications for solid-waste ash residue included use in roads (the material is called "ashphalt," which several states are testing), seawalls, highway dividers and sound barriers, landfill cover and virtually any type of building.

Another benefit is that space is saved in landfills, where the ash would ordinarily be buried.

DIFFERENT DIRECTIONS FOR AGING AMERICANS

Booming home health care field gives elderly what they cherish

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

The prospect frightened her.

Ann Burgess said if she hadn't gotten help at home she probably would have ended up in a nursing home.

"I was scared. I didn't want to go into a nursing home. No one does. You live in constant fear that if you break a hip, you'll have to go," said the 70-year-old Midland resident.

Mrs. Burgess didn't break a hip, but she did require surgery in March that rendered her unable to take care of herself.

With the assistance of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's social service department, Mrs. Burgess' two daughters were able to line up help through We Care Home Health Agency — an in-home nursing and personal care service.

"These people have been wonderful. If it hadn't been for them, I don't know what I would have done."

A resident of Langtry Village, a low-income, high-rise retirement complex for the elderly, Mrs. Burgess received day-to-day assistance in her recuperation from Billie Fulcher, a licensed vocational nurse with We Care.

We Care, one of a number of growing home health agencies, was founded in 1983 by Ann Popejoy, chief executive officer of CareTeam Health Care Serivces.

Like other home health care agencies, CareTeam was established to bridge the gap created by early release of patients from hospitals due to federal ceilings placed on Medicare payments.

That gap was created when Medicare's perspective payment system imposed limited in-patient payments based on diagnostic-related groups, which in turn pushed many hospital-related services to outpatient settings.

Nationally, the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration estimates there are 11,000 home health agencies that now provide out-patient care.

The growth of the industry is not surprising.

Analysts estimate that for every person 65 years of age or over who live in a nursing home — about 1.3 million — two others require assistance with outside daily living.

According to the National Center for Health Statistics estimates, 70 percent — 3.2 million — rely solely on non-paid sources of home assistance such as spouses, children or other informal support.

But not all elderly have that kind of access to those kinds of help.

Fortunately for Mrs. Burgess and others, like A.D. Smith, a retired postal employee, assistance is provided through Medicare, the federally funded health insurance program.

Smith joked that he died twice following two complicated operations over a period of a few months — the last coming in February.

Today, he's thankful to be home and thankful to have someone with him.

"The Irish are tough," said the 86-year-old. "But the only reason I'm here today is Dora."

Dora is Dora Arevalo, a We Care companion sitter who helps him with day-to-day activities.

Both Mrs. Burgess and Smith are looked in on a regular basis by a nurse who is on call 24 hours a day in case of unforseen difficulties. Both also have relatives nearby who drop in from time to time.

But some don't have even that.

"We deal with a lot of cases involving families who don't live here," said Jan Rippee, We Care's administrator in Midland. "A lot of the time we deal with problems over the phone, and that's difficult for children."

Ms. Rippee said home health care services provide families with assistance in cases that just a few years ago would have required hospital care.

"But if we can go out on a daily basis, it's going to save the system a lot of money," she said.

Home health care costs about 25 percent to 50 percent less than hospitalization, with the average home-care bill running between $50 to $350 a day compared with $600 to $800 bill charged by hospitals, statistics show.

What goes into the "home or hospital" decision?

"Boy, a lot," Ms. Rippee said. "There's a lot of family interaction on any case we take . . . so you're dealing with the physician, the patient, the spouse and the children, many of whom have to assume the role of parent."

We Care, like other services, provides assistance from companion sitters, like Dora, who will shop, cook and clean, to nurses who provide skilled care.

In Smith's case, Dora was a blessing.

"When I came out of intensive care, I didn't give a damn about anything. I just figured this was it. But that little gal got me rolling again and it was so underhanded how she did it."

While laid up in bed, Smith said Dora convinced him to get up and help her around the house or accompany her to the grocery store.

"She babies me so I don't fall on my face."

Teresa Crosby, Smith's nurse, said home health care is for those who want to stay at home, but just can't quite do things the way they used too. "Our function is to encourage independence while seeing that they're safe and comfortable."

Ms. Crosby said in many cases family members have too many daily obligations to look in on loved ones. "They have jobs. They have children and they're uncomfortable with the fact that they can't do as much as they'd like to. . . . That's what we provide."

That was certainly a factor in the case of Mrs. Burgess, according to her nurse, Donna Hayden.

Although Mrs. Burgess had two daughters living in Midland, neither was able to be with her during the day.

Daughter Betty said, "I work two jobs, so it made me feel better, knowing someone was coming in and checking on her."

"I'm not a morning person," Mrs. Burgess said. "I don't like to get up early. But Billie (her LVN) gets me up, bathes me, changes my bedding and anything else I need done. As bad as I was feeling, I was tickled to death to see them. They're not strangers to me. They're friends."

Ms. Hayden said that while the arrangement is nice, it's not forever under Medicare certification rules that vary from case to case.

"As she (Mrs. Burgess) progresses, our visits will begin to taper off, but she'll always know ahead of time. If there's a problem, she'll always have someone to call, because we're a lot easier to get a hold of than a doctor. Yet we can still make that connection if she needs us."

But leaving also can be difficult.

Patients "get very attached to these people. Sometimes we're the only ones they see. They look forward to us coming, so when it's taken away, it's very difficult to cope with," Ms. Rippee said.

Jackie Rodriquez, service director for Nurses Unlimited Inc. in Odessa, a home health care agency servicing Midland and surrounding communities, agreed.

"They bond. They can't help it. You try to maintain a certain amount of distance but it happens."

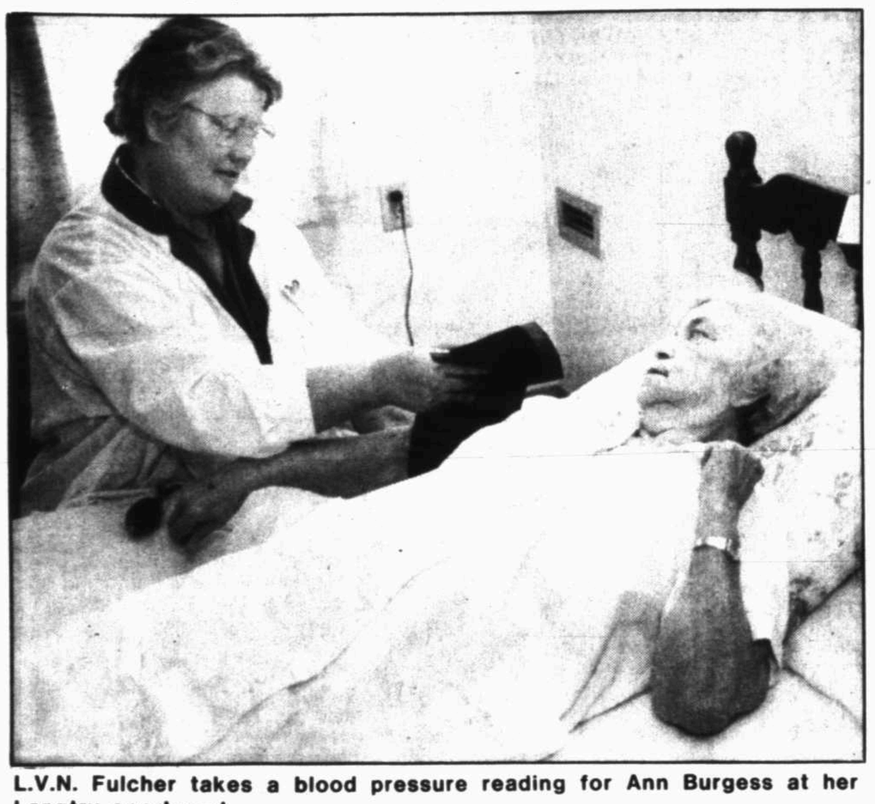

From a nurse's perspective, "if they die or run out of money or something like that, you grieve. It's a loss for you and a loss for the family."

Still, some patients, like Smith, are glad to have the service — even for a short time.

"When you've been through what I've been through twice, you realize what a fragile thing is between you and trouble. . . . The care is worth every nickel to me."

IN THIS SERIES

Sunday 5 — For millions of Americans no longer able to care for themselves, the future will include a nursing home stay, but that is not the dreary life sentence it once was. Nursing homes are an industry in evolution and revolution.

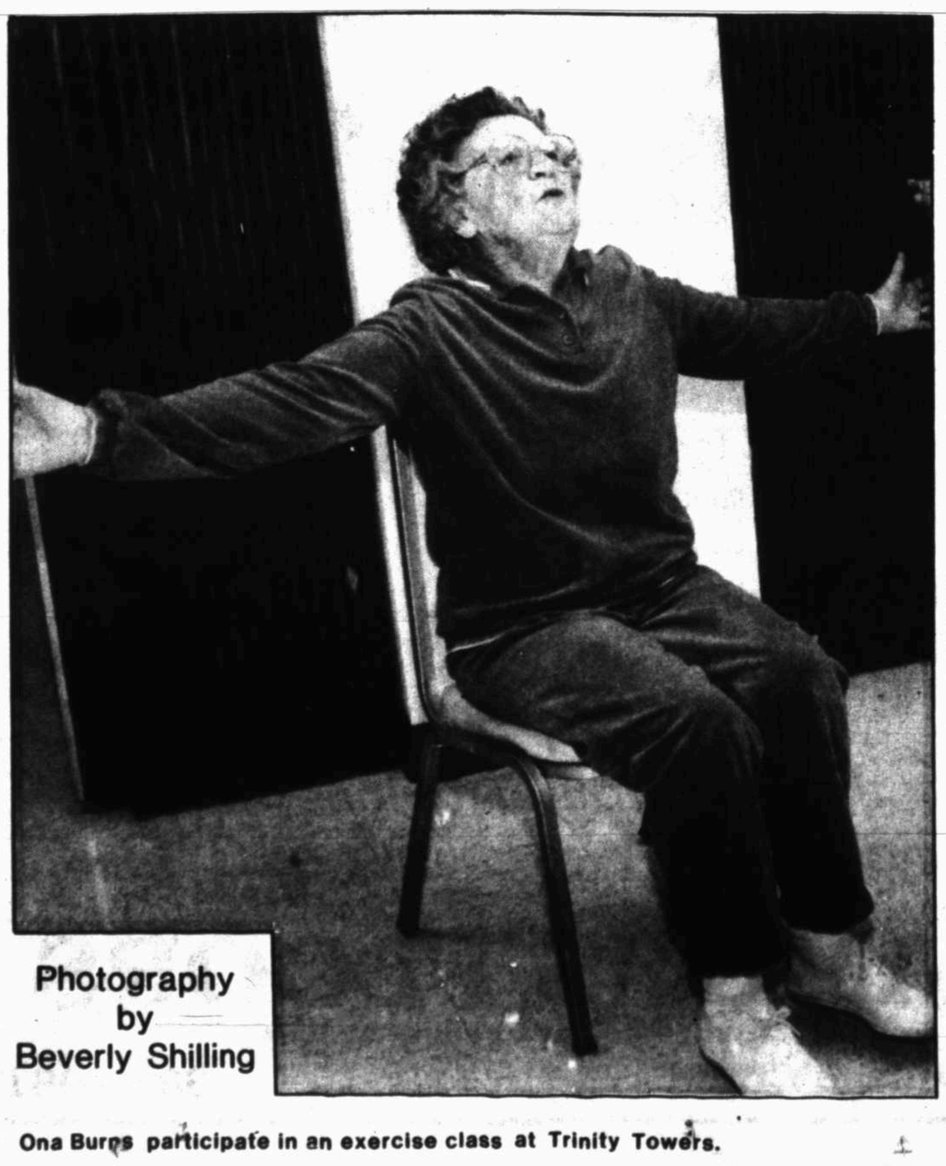

Monday 6 — Selecting the proper care setting for an elderly loved one is as individual a decision as the family facing it. But guidelines and the lessons of those who have gone before can prove helpful for those grappling with the serious questions that lie ahead.

Today 7 — Life-care communities integrating independent living with more supervised settings and long-term skilled nursing are one care choice for the '90s. Home health agencies and day care centers are other emerging options to full-time live-in facilities.

Wednesday 8 — For growing numbers of elderly and their families, private payment is no longer an option in seeking care. That means a trip through the federal government's Club Med -- Medicaid and Medicare -- that is no easy exercise.

Thursday 9 — As the Baby Boom generation marches relentlessly toward the geriatric wards of the 21st century, health care-delivery and financing systems are in peril. All approaches to long-term care will likely be stretched to their limits.

TO READERS: You are invited to SOUND OFF on long-term care issues and options in our reader-participation feature. Letters received by May 28 will be considered for SOUND-OFF. However, it's a case of who can afford it — usually the middle class and upper class. People who are poor don't have access."

That view is shared by others in the industry who claim entrance fees plus monthly fees make such an option largely inaccessible to a growing elderly population.

However, proponents note that while one-time fees can be large, many older citizens can gain based on the buildup of equity in their homes over the years.

According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, of the 18.9 million homes headed by older persons, 73 percent have a median equity value of $46,000 — with 80 percent of those people owning their homes outright.

For the most part, CCRC concepts are a form of long-term care insurance, in that residents pool their resources and share the risk of future costs of long-term care services.

A portion of entrance fees and monthly fees paid by all residents is used by the community to pay for health and long-term care costs of a small number of residents needing more extensive care — sort of an insurance premium.

But that's where LCCs and CCRCs differ, according to Saxton.

"The difference with a life community is, you guarantee to take care (of that person) for life. We don't lock ourselves into a situation where those needs can't be met."

For example, Midland Presbyterian Homes provides nursing-home care to those living at Manor Park and Trinity Towers, but is not equipped to provide skilled nursing associated with tube feeding or other special treatment for Alzheimer's patients.

"We're not equipped to take care of severe cases. That's why we're careful not to make reference to a lifetime arrangement. . . . A lot of places have gotten into trouble by doing that," Saxton said.

Despite the pros and cons, Saxton said he believes CCRCs are the wave of the future. "It has been and will continue to be the trend

Day care for adults

Much needed relief for troubled families

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Bill Sparks snatched up a golf ball from a cup at the 26th green at Hogan Park. "That's the first par I've had all day," said the 77-year-old Midland resident, grinning.

Sparks, along with weekly playing partner Norman Olsen, is out for a day of golf. It's the only day these men get to themselves each week.

Sparks and Olsen are caregivers, a 1990s coinage for the primary person on whom a patient depends — typically a family member — for daily care.

Both men's wives suffer from Alzheimer's disease — an incurable, degenerative disease that attacks the brain, causing its victims to become disoriented to the point where they don't recognize themselves or family members.

Each Monday at First United Methodist Church, Sparks brings his wife Helen; Olsen, his wife June, to the Alzheimer & Related Disorders Adult Day Care program started eight months ago by concerned church members.

"The primary goal has been to give these caregivers a day off," said Carol Hall, the church's care coordinator. "This is a very happy place. Part of it is because we accept them with a whole lot of love."

First UMC's program is a example of what adult day care should be.

Currently, there is only one other program in Midland that accepts adults — Pal Adult Day Activity and Health Care Center at Golden Park.

Soon, there will be another.

According to Priscilla Hammer, vice president of program services for Lutheran Social Services of Texas Inc., plans to open the Good Shepherd Day Care Center for adults are running on schedule.

"We did a feasibility study and determined through the Department of Aging that there was a need for this kind of care," Ms. Hammer said.

However, unlike those programs, First UMC's is the only one of its kind totally geared toward dementia clients and their families.

"We've seen some things here that we never expected," Ms. Hall said, adding that clients are learning to do things they haven't done in years — from singing to catching a ball. "It's really exciting to see."

The federal government apparently hasn't recognized the benefits of such programs.

For example, of the $837 million allocated in 1989 under the Older Americans Act Title III program, 67 percent of funds were appropriated for nutrition services, leaving just a third for programs such as adult day care, respite care, home-health aide, in-home services, chore services, and the list goes on.

States receive an allotment of funds based on their elderly population, which in turn is divided again among area agencies on aging. And that leaves little, if any, for respite care — a chance for a full-time family caregiver to take a break from their care-giving responsibilities, even for a few hours.

"Right now, the concept is ahead of most families," said Steve Edwards, executive director of Community and Senior Services of Midland Inc. "But I think it's something that will become the norm in 10 or 15 years."

Edwards said sheer cost is one reason adult day care has been slow to catch on — running an average of $18 a day, based on government estimates.

Still, attempts are being made, mainly out of community concern.

For example, Lutheran Services made its determination on an adult day-care program based feedback from local congregations in the area.

"We had operated a nursing home (in Midland) before and wanted to get back into the area," said Ms. Hammer, who is awaiting license approval from the Texas Department of Health.

Good Shepherd, which is expected to open by July 1, plans to accept those on Medicaid as well as private-pay clients in need of relief. The program will operate five days a week.

It will do so with the aid of a $15,000 grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation and a $15,000 allocation through United Way of Midland.

First UMC and Pal Adult Day Care haven't been as blessed.

According to Hall, First United has depended on contributions in the form of money and furniture. "So far, it's worked out. Our operating budget right now balances. The only person we pay is a director."

In the case of Pal, Director Lenard Leftwich depends on state funding as well as donations and paying cleints.

Leftwich, a former Baptist missionary, said the reason he opened Pal was to help fill a void. "I'm retired now, but I knew there was a need. These people have very little to offer except love and they have a lot of that."

Pal's goal is to move into a larger facility, but like other social services, money is tight. "I have plans for something larger, but it's hard to find a place that doesn't need remodeling. Our big problem is lack of space, but that takes capital, and we don't generate a lot of that."

Still, that appears to be almost a secondary concern to those running these programs, like Karen Reed, First UMC day care's executive director.

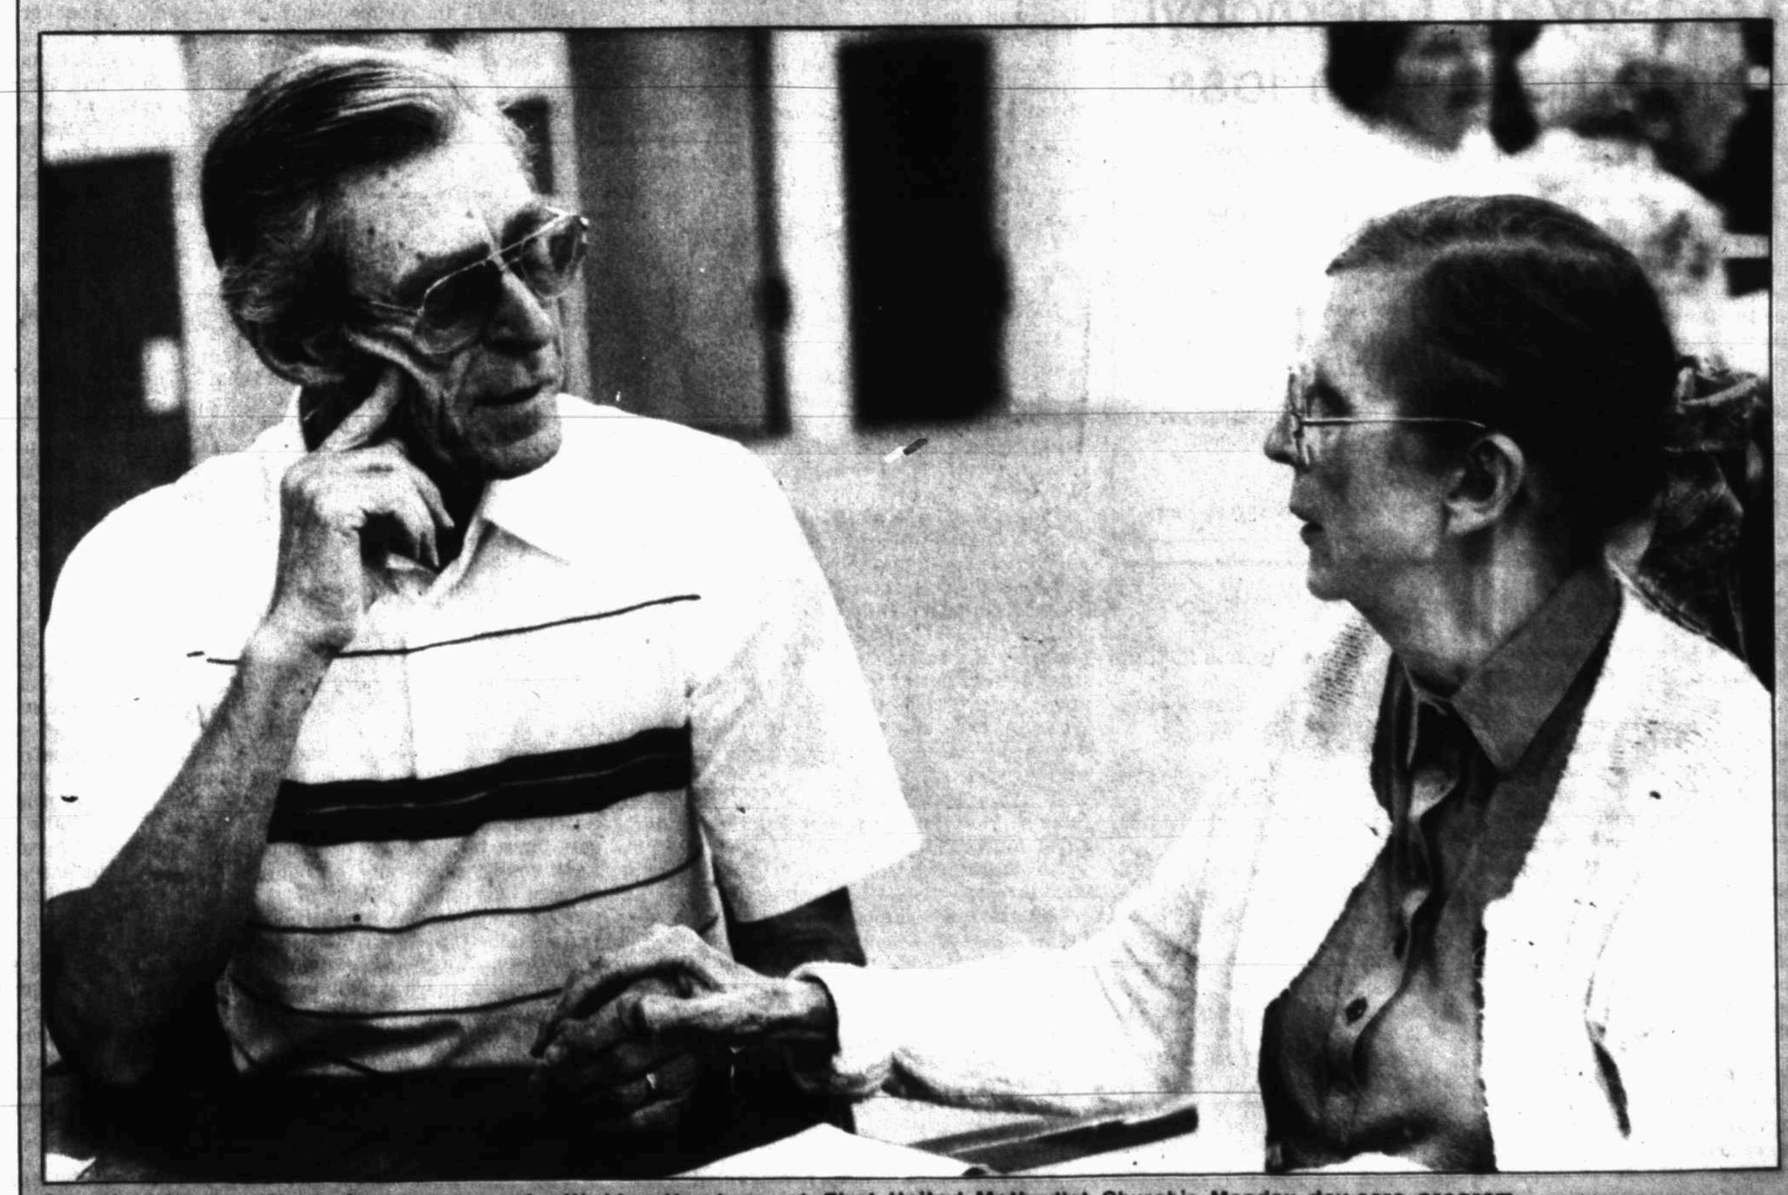

"You would think this is depressing, but it's not. They're very aware of what's going on, even though the words they use don't always make sense. People think they're crazy. Violent. But it's not like that at all. If you came down here you would think it's nothing more than a bunch of older adults socializing."

That's what Norman Olsen found when he brought his wife June.

"The first day was tough. It was hard for me to leave her there. I wasn't sure she would enjoy it and if she didn't enjoy it, it wouldn't be a day off for me. In the end, it all worked out. They do a good job."

Volunteer Mary Hannon, right, gives a hand to Alzheimer's patient Helen Sparks at the First United Methodist Church.

Unlike Manor Park, Trinity Towers does not require an entrance fee, and depends mainly on monthly fees ranging from $882 to $1,521 a month for apartment living, which includes housekeeping, utilities (except telephone and cable) and three meals a day.

Trinity also provides independent living arrangements in low-rise apartments at a cost ranging from $506 to $612 a month. Residents in those situations pay their own utilities and provide their own meals.

In Mrs. Burns case, Trinity has worked out just fine.

Having worked her way back from a fall, Mrs. Burns said it was difficult to adjust at first, having lived on a 3,000-acre ranch in Brownwood all her life. "I think I've worked through it. People my age are no different from any other age group. . . . Adjustments are always hard always difficult."

After her accident, Mrs. Burns said she could barely walk — getting around on crutches.

Election results reflected import

The results of Saturday's city, school district and hospital district elections constituted a pleasant surprise in several regards. Here's our impression of the outcome:

— First, Midland voters turned out in surprisingly strong numbers — a total of 11,488 voted in all the elections — which reflected their understanding of the importance of the issues being decided at the ballot box.

— The two bond issues presented to Midland Independent School District voters both passed by large margins. School trustee Ken Marks echoed the sentiments of thousands of Midlanders when he said following the election, "I will sleep a lot better now knowing that those kids won't be trying to learn in such crowded conditions." Crowded conditions were one of the main reasons MISD had sought approval for the bond proposals, which had been turned down in an election last year.

— Voters may actually be finding early voting a stimulus to going to the polls. Turnout Saturday, the last day to vote, was actually so heavy that the Midland County Elections Office ran out of optical scan ballots for some precincts. "Everyone got a ballot, they just didn't get a ballot which could be scanned by machine," noted elections administrator Bettye Calvert.

Granted, there were more issues present in these elections to attract voter interest — crowded schools, taxpayer concerns, the quest for an adequate educational environment, patient health care and others. But voters responded in admirable fashion.

The winners of respective races are to be congratulated, but that sentiment must also be extended to all those who sought political office and all those who worked toward the successful completion of the election. They are all critical to the success of our system of government. They are all deserving of our thanks.

Gonzales' way will avoid FDIC bailout

Every message from the government's own auditors tells us that the bank deposit insurance fund — the money available to close failing institutions and pay off their depositors — is almost broke. ...

Where have we heard this before? In the case of the late, lamented Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., that's where. No one wants a repeat of the S&L bailout.

An S&L fix was put off and put off until it was too late. So now, not later, is obviously the time to act to prevent the bank deposit insurance situation from the same fate....

But there is another way to do this. House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, has introduced a bill that would let the FDIC borrow now ... apart from any reform of the banking laws.

Reform will require careful deliberation. It is this generation's chance to construct a stronger and more stable system for the future. It is not a thing to be rushed through. Providing money for the FDIC is an emergency project. Do it Gonzalez's way.

Tragedy of Chernobyl concerns human loss

The tragedy of Chernobyl endures five years after reactor No. 4 showered radiation on the Ukrainian countryside. The human costs are still being paid, as cancers appear among the early rescue workers and surrounding farms remain closed, perhaps forever.

But the tragedy does not serve the aims of American anti-nuclear activists, who like to see in Chernobyl a "metaphor" for technological hubris. Nor is it a cautionary tale for the U.S. nuclear power industry.

In fact, the practical lessons learned from Chernobyl are few. Its reactor could never had been licensed in the United States. ...

The only lesson of Chernobyl, then, is really rather banal: Stupidity and indifference don't work. But nuclear power, managed with intelligence and care, does.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 7, the 127th day of 1991. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 7, 1945, Germany signed an unconditional surrender at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters in Rheims, France, that was to take effect the following day, ending the European stage of World War II.

On this date:

In 1789, the first inaugural ball was held in New York in honor of President and Mrs. George Washington.

In 1812, the poet Robert Browning was born in London.

In 1825, Italian composer Antonio Salieri died in Vienna, Austria.

In 1833, composer Johannes Brahms was born in Hamburg, Germany.

In 1840, composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky was born in the Ural region of Russia.

In 1847, the American Medical Association was founded in Philadelphia.

In 1915, nearly 1,200 people died when a German torpedo sank the British liner Lusitania off the Irish coast.

JACK ANDERSON

Sergeant court-martialed for request

WASHINGTON — When U.S. troops invaded Panama in December 1989, everything Air Force Sgt. Delphyne Bruner and her family owned was destroyed in the fighting. These things happen in war time. But what happened to Delphyne Bruner after the fighting stopped is not so easily explained. She was court-martialed when she asked the U.S. government to cover her losses.

Anderson

Bruner was not in Panama at the time of the invasion, but nearly all of her worldly goods were. She had just been transferred from Howard Air Force Base in Panama to Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C. The government had not yet shipped all of the family's belongings to her new post. They were stored in a warehouse in Panama, and that warehouse went up in smoke.

In the months since the invasion, Bruner has lived with the possibility of spending years in the stockade and seeing her husband and two daughters only from behind bars, all because the Air Force thought she was lying about the value of her goods. "When I went to bed at night, I was staring at 45 years in prison," Bruner told our associate Scott Sleek. "I cannot put into words the trauma on this family."

After the invasion, the Bruners were still reeling from the shock of losing everything in the warehouse fire. They were told to file a claim for compensation, but were warned that the government limit was $40,000. When they made an inventory of their possessions, their bottom line was $90,000. The Bruners knew they would not get full compensation, but they turned in the full claim anyway, just for the record.

The Air Force paid them $15,000 up front, and then launched a six-month investigation that ended with a court martial of Bruner last October for submitting what the Air Force said was $22,000 worth of fraudulent claims.

Bruner was stunned. She had juggled her family and an Air Force career for 16 years. Her performance evaluations were exemplary. When she left Panama she was in line for a promotion.

Bruner realizes that $90,000 in household goods seems unusual for an Air Force staff sergeant, but she said she and her husband, Jesse, an Air Force retiree, saved to buy top-of-the-line furnishings. They also had unique items from overseas tours and a valuable collection of china, some received as a wedding present and some inherited from Bruner's mother-in-law.

As the trial date approached, word spread around Bolling Air Force Base among Bruner's co-workers. She felt humiliated by the scornful reaction of some.

After a six-day trial, the Air Force court found her guilty of only one of 17 counts — misrepresenting the brand of her china and overvaluing it by $4,189. The punishment was to have $75 deducted from her paycheck every month for one year. Bruner said the china pattern was no longer sold so she had to base her estimate of its value on a comparable brand. For that, the Air Force took her to the mat.

Bruner, who is black, suspects that her race may have had something to do with her ordeal. She believes some Air Force officials became suspicious of her claim because they didn't think a black family would have such fine things.

The Air Force has refused to pay the rest of her claim despite the outcome of the trial.

The Air Force declined to tell us how much it spent prosecuting Bruner to find out that she had overvalued her china by $4,189.

CHARLEY REESE

True gun control must begin with police, FBI

The real answer to the gun control debate is to lead by example. If these inanimate objects are the cause of public mayhem, then let's disarm the police and the FBI.

Reese

Gun control advocates are saying that private citizens don't need firearms for protection. Okay, if the people live in such safe neighborhoods that they have no need for personal defense weapons, then why do the police need to go about armed in the same neighborhoods?

A place safe enough for unarmed citizens surely should be safe enough for unarmed police officers who, after all, have the advantage of being generally young, in good physical shape, and trained in unarmed combat. Why do they need guns? It's a fact that police officers have been shot with their own guns.

Isn't that what the gun controllers say? Buy a gun and chances are you'll hurt yourself or someone in your family? Well, isn't that true of police officers, too? I personally knew one police officer who made the mistake of leaving his service revolver within reach of his angry wife. He took a bath and she took careful aim. He died with his boots off.

As for the FBI, they spend most of their time wearing business suits in nice offices, poring over documents or interviewing witnesses. Why should FBI agents walk around with great big semiautomatics if our communities are so safe that no private citizen needs a hand gun?

For that matter, if our cities are so safe that ordinary working men and women shouldn't be allowed to have guns, then all these big shots with doormen, bodyguards, security gates, and, yes, pistol permits, should shuck all that stuff and share the peaceful life with us common folk.

The police naturally can keep firearms under lock and key back at the station. If an emergency situation develops, they can call the station and ask for armed help.

That's the advice the gun control people offer private citizens. You don't need a firearm, they say, because if some emergency threatens, you can call the police and wait until they arrive. Well, the police could do the same thing. Why should they live any differently than the rest of us?

Gun control advocates love to point to the example of Great Britain. Well, okay, point. The cops in Great Britain don't pack heat. They go about with a little truncheon and a whistle and, I guess now, a radio.

Well, you say, suppose an unarmed police officer finds himself confronted by an armed criminal. What would he do? The same thing private citizens do when they are confronted by an armed criminal — whatever the criminal tells them to do.

If you think carefully about the gun control movement and analyze its positions and tactics, you will see that it has a great deal more to do with the elitist distrust of the people than it does with firearms.

Let's have a little equality. Whatever the government wants us to do, it should do. Whatever one citizen can do, all citizens should be able to do. And vice versa. If Congress wants gun control, then get rid of its armed guards and metal detectors. We live and work unarmed and unprotected. Why shouldn't they?

If the politicians are all that frightened of the American people, we'll let them carry straight razors in their socks.

Of course, they'll have to wait seven days for a background check before they can take possession of their razors. One or two of them might not be a millionaire and we don't want any armed ordinary people in America.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Democratic 'salesmen' invade GOP territory

Paul Tsongas, the first announced Democratic presidential candidate, says he is for targeted cuts in capital gains taxes. That is not all. He is for nuclear power and for the proposed free trade agreement with Mexico.

Murchison

That's still not all. Flinging his hat into the ring a few days ago, the ex-Massachusetts senator paid glowing tribute to "the values of our ancestors." He talked of intergenerational responsibility: "In the Apache tongue, the word for grandfather and grandson is the same. They understood linkage. They understood honor. They understood mutual obligation."

"In Washington," he continued, "there is no such wisdom. It is all here and now."

This reminded me of how, in that very city of Washington, a couple of weeks earlier, I read in a local gazette Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder's ruminations on the black community's moral crisis.

Wilder, a black, is sizing up his own chances for the Democratic presidential nomination. "Too many young blacks," the governor said, "have trouble doing hard, honest work and staying out of jail, but no problem making illegitimate babies."

"Family values," Wilder explained, "are what we've lost. They're what sustained blacks when everything else was against them ... The family and the church transmitted values of honesty and hard work for us from generation to generation."

What about sex? "(Young people) should embrace the ultimate precaution, abstinence ... "

Free trade, nuclear power, sexual abstinence! Stop me before I quote again! The entrancing thing is, these people are Democrats. They are running for president. They're not saying a blessed thing Ronald Reagan could disagree with, and therein lies the wonder and the mystery.

Is the Democratic Party moving, God save the mark, rightward? Or is all the foregoing just political atmospherics — winds and lightning emanating from backstage? Do Tsongas and Wilder, in other words, mean what they say? If so, how deeply do they mean it?

California Gov. Jerry Brown, of post-Watergate fame, taught many of us a lasting lesson: Look coolly, skeptically, on political "truths" uttered by unlikely people; never, never confuse shining words with realized deeds. Gov. Brown talked in some respects a good conservative game; he governed as a flaky California liberal. Then there was Jimmy Carter. Quod erat demonstrandum.

Let us recall, for the sake of perspective, what Tsongas and Wilder are doing: namely, positioning themselves for the top national office. This does not mean we should disregard what they say. What they say is fascinating as all get-out.

A presidential candidate tries to tap into the national mood. It is useful to know that two Democrats, members of the party that built the gimme-gimme welfare state, regard the national mood as favorable to moral and governmental restraint.

Tsongas calls himself "unabashedly pro-business," and Wilder urges government to live within its means. Both men talk about concepts dusty as a family Bible — duty, honor and the like.

Their talking this way does more than shed light on the political situation. It puts pressure on the gimme-gimme crowd either to defeat them (with what — promises of more welfare?) or to compete on their terms. It could even — fasten your seat belts — invigorate the Bush people, so philosophically droopy they put themselves to sleep when they talk of ideas.

Who knows that the Democrats, with a little help from the Tsongases and Wilders, couldn't outflank the Bushies on the right? Wouldn't that be something to see — Democrats forcing the party of Goldwater and Reagan into impassioned defense of old-fashioned values? Bush could be responding even now, with his advocacy of school choice, good pro-family issue that it is. For the moment he isn't even talking of raising our taxes.

No party has a monopoly on sound ideas. If the Democrats invade GOP neighborhoods. peddling ideas that Republicans have forgotten about, who's the worse for it? Only those who shouldn't have forgotten in the first place.

■ '50 worst oil spills lost 13.4 million gallons'

WASHINGTON — The 50 worst oil spills in the United States last year poured 13.4 million gallons of crude oil and petroleum products into the environment, the Wilderness Society said Monday.

The spills, according to a Wilderness Society tabulation, ranged from 4.3 million gallons of crude oil from the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg off the Texas coast last June to dozens of much smaller spills caused by pipeline ruptures, barge accidents, overflowing storage tanks and other incidents in 21 states.

The 50 spills reviewed by the society involved the release of both crude oil and refined products such as jet fuel and gasoline. Many of the spills involved releases in the range of 35,000 to 100,000 gallons from ruptured pipelines.

Between 25 and 30 oil spills occur daily, the group estimated.

■ Scandal looms at nuclear weapons plant

WASHINGTON — Westinghouse and Bechtel, the companies that operate the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant in South Carolina hid huge cost overruns by unlawfully transferring tens of millions of dollars in and out of a $400 million account meant for new construction, the Energy Department's inspector general has reported.

The report, coupled with a separate inquiry ordered by Energy Secretary James D. Watkins, resulted in the department's issuing of a stop-work order last weekend at two new buildings designed to produce radioactive materials for nuclear weapons.

■ Officers in beating case file 30 motions

LOS ANGELES — A superior court judge began Monday to work his way through a four-foot stack of 30 legal motions that try to dismiss, delay, transfer or modify the case against four white police officers charged with assault in the videotaped beating of a black motorist.

At the first of what he said would be several days of pre-trial hearings, the judge, Bernard Kamins of Los Angeles County Superior Court, expressed exasperation at the attempts of defense lawyers to obscure what he called "not a complicated case."

■ Iacocca rejects offer of Heinz's seat

PHILADELPHIA — Under pressure to appoint a strong Democrat to replace the late Sen. John Heinz, the governor of Pennsylvania offered the post to Lee A. Iacocca, a political independent. But Iacocca, who has never held political office and lives in a Detroit suburb, turned it down.

An aide to Gov. Robert P. Casey of Pennsylvania said Monday that the offer had been made, and Iacocca, chairman and chief executive officer of Chrysler Corp., "would have been a strong advocate for jobs and economic growth in Pennsylvania."

Police break up 2nd night of D.C. violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rock-throwing youths attacked police and property for a second straight night in a Hispanic neighborhood of the nation's capital on Monday, and authorities responded with tear gas in an attempt to quell the disturbance.

Overturned trash cans, piles of burning garbage and smouldering tear gas canisters littered the Mount Pleasant neighborhood two miles from the White House. One car was set afire, windows of a fast-food restaurant were smashed and the driver and a dozen passengers were chased from a commuter bus.

Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon visited the neighborhood after giving police officials authority to use increased force if necessary to restore order.

"We do not intend to have a repeat of last night," said the mayor. That was a reference to a night of violence sparked by the shooting of a man during an arrest.

The man whose shooting sparked the violence, Daniel Gomez, 30, remained hospitalized in critical condition with a gunshot wound in the chest.

Community leaders said Monday they had long been worried about smoldering tension between neighborhood residents and the police.

"We are very quiet, but when we go to the line, it really explodes," said Victor Lilo Gonzalez, a counselor at the Latino American Youth Center in the neighborhood.

Small knots of officers in riot gear fired tear gas several times during the evening, trying to clear crowds in a two-block stretch of Mount Pleasant Street.

Youths, some wearing bandannas over their faces, pelted police with rocks and bottles. Some threw from rooftops. A few youths laughed and jumped in the air between attacks. Others chanted and heckled police.

Deputy Chief Edward Spurlock, commander of the police in Mount Pleasant Street, conferred with a group of community residents while people in a crowd nearby shouted at police: "Assassinos! Assassinos! Assassinos!"

Before the first volley of tear gas, community leaders had linked arms in a line between police and the crowd.

"We tried to form a peace line to come between the two problems," said former City Council Chairman Dave Clarke. "Unfortunately the line dissolved."

Residents said community leaders had asked city authorities to minimize the police presence. At first officers stayed out of the two-block heart of the riot area, not interfering, for example, with the attack on the fast-food outlet, a fried chicken shop.

But they soon moved in, ordering the crowd to disperse.

The riots rocked a neighborhood that has become home to many of the city's estimated 33,000 Hispanics. There may be thousands more — many of them illegal immigrants who are jobless, some say.

Many of the young men spend their days drinking in the area's parks and sidewalks.

"We knew something was going to spark this because there's a tremendous amount of frustration in the Hispanic community," said local activist Rudy Arredondo. "If we don't address these issues, there will be more trouble."

"This community has been a ticking bomb," said activist Elena Rocha.

Mayor Dixon toured the neighborhood earlier Monday, saying police had been "reasonably restrained" in the violence that broke out Sunday night after a police officer shot a man during an arrest.

Even as the mayor pledged more Spanish-speaking officers for the force, Hispanics called for an independent investigation of the shooting.

At a meeting with Hispanic community leaders, Dixon said she would consider creating a commission to look into problems with job opportunities, discrimination, housing and drug abuse.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (NYT) — After a last-minute diversion from its normal landing site, the space shuttle Discovery touched down here Monday afternoon, ending an eight-day mission devoted to Star Wars research.

Piercing a bright, slightly cloudy sky with twin sonic booms, the spacecraft landed here at 2:55 p.m., about five minutes later than its scheduled landing.

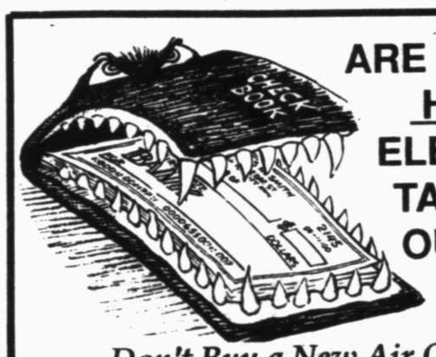

"Welcome to sunny Florida and congratulations on an outstanding mission," Ken Bowersox of Mission Control told the eight-member crew as the craft touched down.

The landing was only the seventh time in 40 shuttle missions that NASA has decided to land a shuttle at the Kennedy Space Center instead of the normal landing site at the Edwards Air Force Base in the Mojave Desert in California.

The transfer of the striking Siberian, Rostov and Komi mines means that for the first time a major portion of a Soviet industry will get the chance to run itself as a private, profitable business.

At the same time Monday, Yeltsin signed a deal with the leader of the Soviet KGB allowing creation of a special security agency within his Russian republic. Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

Taken together, the two agreements marks an unprecedented movement of political and economic power away from the Kremlin.

Yeltsin had promised miners earlier that his government would let them run the industry. That means the industry may also keep most of the hard currency it earns for investment and salaries.

The historic concession by Moscow was expected to end a nine-week-old strike by coal miners which has virtually sapped the last bit of life from the suffering Soviet economy. Miners were expected to decide Tuesday on officially ending the strikes, but even as the transfer documents were being signed in the Kremlin on Monday there were indications from strike leaders that they would go along.

"The mining industry is in working condition and that will allow a quick end to the strike," Yeltsin told parliament.

Other industries were certain to demand similar freedom from the Kremlin — notably the oil industry, whose workers have been threatening to strike.

Although Gorbachev has pledged to introduce free market principles into the operation of Soviet industry, he has dragged his feet due to resistance from hardliners. Moreover, the Soviet leader never planned to allow big money earning industries such as coal and oil to have such freedom.

So far, Gorbachev has permitted only small scale service industries — clothing shops, grocery stands and restaurants — to operate privately.

The agreement Monday was also a major political victory for Yeltsin over Gorbachev. Yeltsin has been battling all winter to stop Gorbachev from going backwards under pressure from conservative Communists who want to stop and even undo political and economic reforms.

Two weeks ago Gorbachev signed a deal with nine of the nation's 15 republics agreeing to give them much greater freedom to govern their states in return for their help in stopping the economy's collapse.

Yeltsin had the power to wrangle such an enormous concession from Gorbachev because the miners were on the side of the populist Russian republic leader and workers from other vital industries were threatening to join the coal strike.

1st mass repatriation plan: 200,000 Kurds home in 2 weeks

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — Allied troops expanded their security zone in northern Iraq again Monday to prepare to move up to 200,000 Iraqi refugees home from mountain camps in a huge truck convoy, officials said.

Army Maj. Gen. Jay Garner said the military would rent dozens of Iraqi trucks to move Kurds now living along the Turkish border. He said he hoped the move could be completed within two weeks.

The security zone established to protect returning Kurds was expanded 30 miles east, toward the Iranian border, when French, British, U.S. and Italian airborne troops landed in the town of Suriya, Garner said.

The expansion will help the return of refugees from remote camps in eastern Turkey, he said. It was the third time the coalition has expanded the protected zone. Garner said he expected it to be the last.

He denied there had been any decision for the allies to occupy the Iraqi-controlled city of Dohuk, where many of the refugees lived before they fled Saddam Hussein's crackdown on the Kurdish rebellion that followed the Gulf War.

Dohuk, once home to 380,000 people, is under the control of Iraqi troops, and allied forces stopped about three miles short of the city on Sunday, Garner said. Allied commanders said then that the decision to take Dohuk was imminent.

Lt. Col. Gary Goff, an operations officer under Garner, confirmed Monday that Kurdish leaders had asked the allies to take control of Dohuk, but he said that decision will have to be made at a level higher than the military.

Goff said the security zone in northern Iraq now was 120 miles wide and 30 miles deep, reaching from the Turkish border to north of Dohuk.

In other developments Monday:

—U.N. spokesman Majed Fayad said in Kuwait City that United Nations peacekeepers were fully deployed at 15 observation posts along the 120-mile-long Iraq-Kuwait border. U.S. Army Lt. Col. John Kalb said 2,400 troops from the 3rd Armored Division — the last American troops in southern Iraq — would withdraw Tuesday. The Americans have been policing the area and operating refugee camps since Iraq's defeat in the war.

—Ron Waldman of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said cholera has been confirmed at the Cukurca camp in Turkey, but officials weren't certain of how many refugees have died of the disease.

—Iraq lifted censorship rules imposed on foreign journalists at the start of the war.

—Kurdish leaders arrived in Baghdad to resume talks begun last month on their demands for an autonomous region in northern Iraq.

More Texans live in non-traditional households

■ Number of traditional, 'married, with children' families is down, a census bureau profile of the state reveals.

By Jennifer Dixon
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More Texans than ever are deciding the married-with-children lifestyle is not for them.

But if you're interested in marriage, you might want to know Texas had 254,584 more women than men in 1990.

That's according to a Census Bureau profile Monday of the way Texans live: increasingly in non-traditional households with fewer members.

The Census Bureau also found more empty houses and apartments across Texas in 1990 than in 1980, that 61 percent of the state's housing units are owner-occupied and that renters last year paid a median $328 a month rent.

According to the Census Bureau, 56.6 percent of the state's households were traditional "married-couple" families in 1990, down from 63.4 percent in 1980.

At the same time, the Census Bureau found "non-family households" accounted for 28.4 percent of the state's 6 million households in 1990, up from 21.5 percent a decade ago.

The Census Bureau said nearly 1.5 million Texans were living alone last year, including 472,029 people 65 and older.

The size of the average household, meanwhile, shrank from 2.82 persons per household in 1980 to 2.73 in 1990, the Census Bureau said.

Steve Murdock, professor of rural sociology at Texas A&M University and chief demographer for the Texas State Data Center, said the trends in Texas mirror the national decline in traditional families.

"You have more people who are not marrying at all, more people who are going through the dissolution of a marital relationship — through divorce or separation — and all are factors that lead to fewer traditional, married couples with children," Murdock said in an interview from College Station.

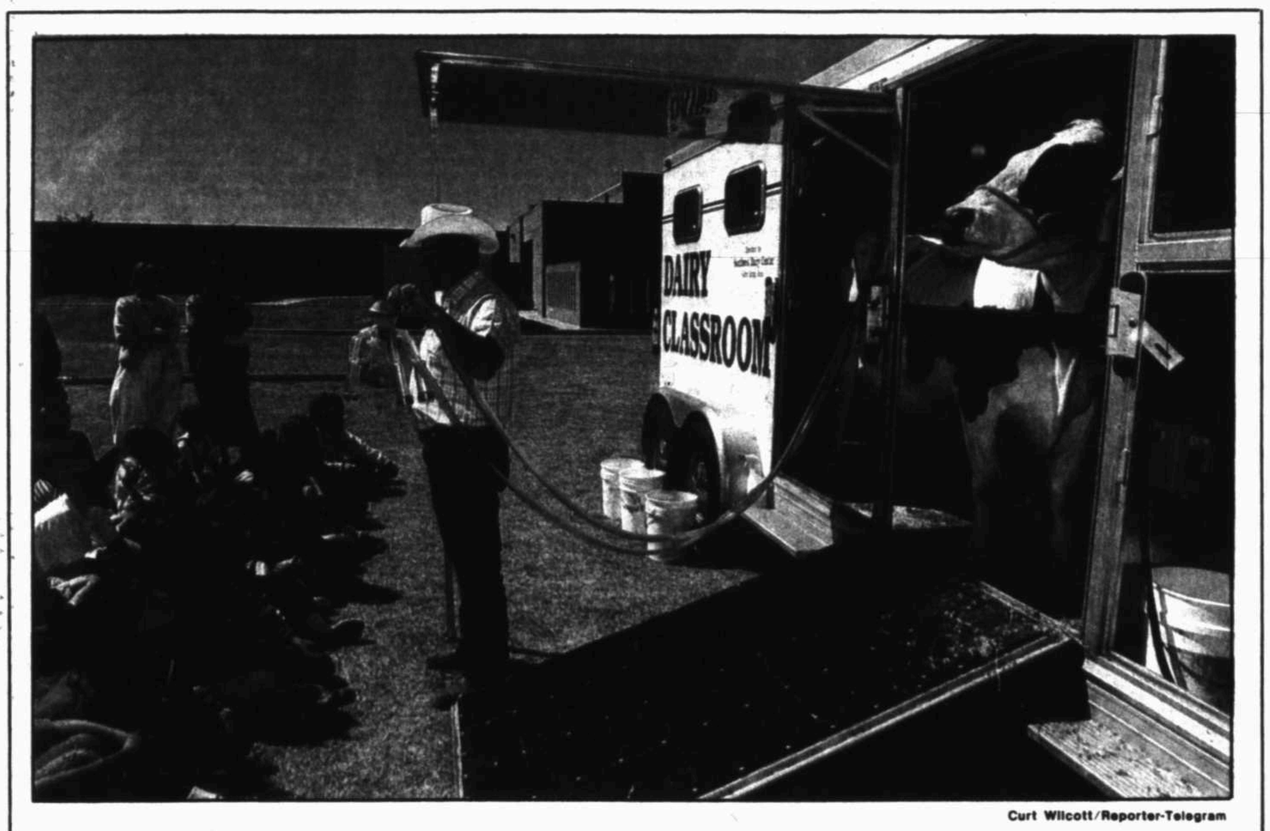

The Census Bureau's findings also indicate Texas has a younger and more racially diverse population than the nation as a whole, Murdock said.

The median age in Texas is nearly 31, while nationally it is expected to be 32 or 33. The national numbers, however, have not yet been released.

Despite its youth, Texas, like the rest of the country, has an aging population. Ten years ago, the state's median age was 28, nationally, it was 30.

On the housing side, the Census Bureau said Texas had an overall vacancy rate of 13.4 percent in 1990, compared with a rate of about 10 percent in 1980.

Dairy group churns up interest in milk

By David Morris

She works seven days a week, 10 months a year to bring fresh dairy products to your table — and udders nary a word of complaint.

Demonstrating her technique to pupils at Santa Rita Elementary School on Monday, Annie Belle chewed contentedly on a mouthful of hay and showed the children that milk doesn't start off in the carton.

It starts off in the innards of cows like her — a 1,500-pound Holstein from Midland's Roy & Roy Dairy.

But don't be deceived by her bovine demeanor. Beneath that barnyard exterior lurks a cultured creature. According to Wayne Setzler, the Southwest Dairy Center representative who brought Annie Belle to school in his mobile dairy classroom, her productivity is best when she's listening to classical music.

Annie Belle traded the strains of Chopin for the snickers of school children Monday, but she didn't seem to mind — not even when Setzler hooked her to a milking machine and turned it on.

"We try to follow it from the cow to the table for them," Setzler said after completing his milking demonstration. "Everything we're getting back in terms of feedback is that this is definitely working for us."

"Us" is the Associated Milk Producers Inc., which subsidizes the Sulphur Springs-based Southwest Dairy Center. The center, with membership in eight states, has three mobile classroom trailers like Setzler's that travel to schools, fairs and scout camps to show youngsters where milk comes from and why it's good to drink.

If they're aware of such things,

Undercover drug probe in Odessa leads to arrests

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Law enforcement officials Monday began serving warrants to 15 juveniles and four adults on 24 charges of delivery of drugs following a three month undercover investigation at Odessa's two high schools, said Odessa District Attorney Gary Garrison.

As of Monday evening, two adults and eight youths had been arrested, jail officials said.

Joe Willie Kendrick Jr., 18, remained in Ector County Jail Monday in lieu of $7,500 bond for delivery of cocaine, jail officials said. Kendrick was arrested at Odessa High School.

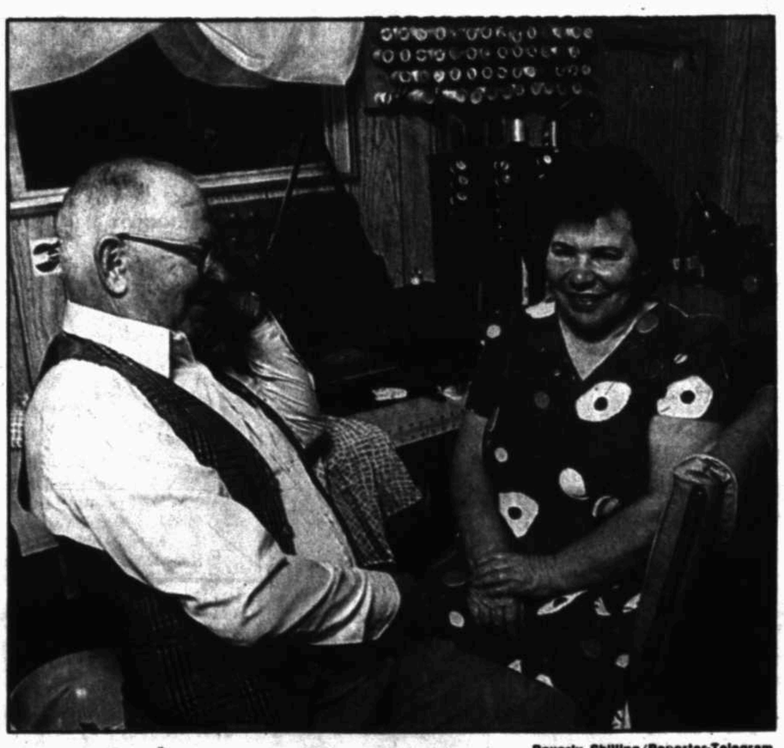

William Cranford, 49, remained in jail on a $25,000 bond for delivery of marijuana, officials said.

Eight juveniles — four from Odessa High School and four from Permian High School — were also arrested on campus.

The minors were taken to the Ector County Youth Center following their arrests, Garrison said. A spokesman for the center said all the youngsters were released into the custody of their parents Monday.

INTRODUCING ...

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

He's a tailor by trade, but a survivor above all

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Ananiasz Kochaniuk is a genteel master tailor whose path to the West Texas desert and to Midland followed a long and twisting course.

His life here was preceded by his tilling of rich farmland in his native Poland, working as a forced laborer in a German aircraft plant in World War II and by mending and modifying military arctic gear in Canada in the post-war years.

Kochaniuk's old "breadbasket country" is in a region around Malov in old Poland that, in 1945, became part of the Soviet Union's Ukraine.

The fertile countryside is graced with trees and hills and would grow "just about anything that weather would permit," said Kochaniuk, who lives in Midland with his sister, Rachel Kochaniuk, a dressmaker.

West Texas is "different," said the humble tailor.

"We accept it. It has to be that way, because God created it, and that's it. Would you say differently?"

That's Kochaniuk. He speaks with gratitude rather than the bitterness of a man who was enslaved by the Nazi war machine in Hannover and whose economic freedom was stymied by communism.

"Communism, we didn't like it," said Kochaniuk, who "always had dreamed" of being a tailor. "You could hardly make your living."

World War II began in 1939 when Germany's warplanes and ground troops invaded Poland.

And when the Germans brought supplies by rail for their occupying troops in Poland, they would not send the trains back empty.

"They would take the earth (from Malov, Poland) just for use in their gardens back at home," lamented Kochaniuk, 69.

In 1942, at age 20, Kochaniuk was among the Polish work force that was rounded up for shipment to Germany to work in industrial plants to produce war materiel.

"They (Nazi Germany troops) would come Sunday to the church, surrounding it, get out all available people right to the train, just ship (them) straight to Germany," Kochaniuk recalled.

SURVIVOR: Tailoring was man's 'life dream'

"If I wouldn't go that time," he said, "they would come and kill everyone, and burn everything to the ground," Kochaniuk said. "It happened time and again. That was nothing new. People had to be obedient."

For three years, he made airplane parts for the German Luftwaffe.

Allied bombers repeatedly bombed the Hannover factory, which shifted production to undamaged parts of the factory and repaired the bombed out areas.

Instead of returning to his homeland after the war was over in 1945, Kochaniuk immigrated to Canada, where he cut logs in a paper mill in Ontario and got married in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, he worked as a tailor in the United States Arctic Test Center in Fort Churchill on the western shore of Hudson Bay.

Kochaniuk repaired and modified arctic military gear at the test site, which also was set up for cold-weather testing of the M-60 battlefield tank and the Hawk anti-aircraft missile.

And it was his friendship with the fort's headquarters commandant, Kenneth Herring of San Angleo, that routed Kochaniuk to West Texas and into the tailoring business that had been his life's dream.

"Ananiasz is one who is very independent and able, in a very short time, to become completely self-supporting," said Herring, a retired U.S. Army colonel. "Ananiasz is a good person."

It was in that frigid, isolated country around Fort Churchill that Herring and Kochaniuk developed their friendship. They attended church together. "We had singing and talked and read the Bible," Herring recalled.

Kochaniuk had "left Europe with just the shirt on his back," Herring said of his friend. "He has built an awful lot, and a lot of the things he has built has been lasting friendships."

Herring's father-in-law, Reuben Stanley, now an 80-year-old minister and farmer, sponsored Kochaniuk's move to the United States and helped him set up a tailoring shop in San Angelo in the early 1960s.

"He's one real fine 'Christian gentleman," Stanley said of Kochaniuk. "He is one of the greatest characters I've ever known. He is a very devout man, but more than that, he is a sensitive and a very, very talented individual" who fluently speaks several languages — Czechoslovakian, Polish, Russian, and English.

In the 1980s, he was a Polish-English interpreter in the federal court of U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who presides in Midland and Pecos.

Kochaniuk moved to Odessa in the 1960s, where he clerked in a grocery store and tailored.

Then Kochaniuk moved to Midland, where he became master tailor for the old S&Q Clothiers.

After a few years he left S&Q Clothiers to do tailoring work in Cleveland and returned to Midland's S&Q Clothiers in 1977.

Today, he and his sister do their tailoring work in their Midland home.

"I have plenty of work — as much as I want to do," Kochaniuk said.

In his work at the clothiers, Kochaniuk "became acquainted with a lot of very high-class professional people, (including) lawyers, doctors, judges," Herring said.

"He always did a superb job. He was such a modest, meek, and unassuming person" who "has always been a very competent person and a person of his word."

His "quiet modesty," Herring said, "is very becoming to a person of his stature."

Other than his competency in his work, Kochaniuk's trademark was — and is — his word, Herring said.

"He would give a very proper estimate for tailoring jobs," he said. "Many of the people were embarrassed because he would have such a modest fee for his tailoring."

Kochaniuk is a precise, exacting person in his work and devotion.

"You cannot miss anything," he said. "You have to be very punctual."

And he does not allow himself to be trapped by "catch phrases" so common in the English of Americans.

A favorite phrase he shuns goes something like this: This is "the best" ever job of tailoring.

"Of course," Kochaniuk said, "Texans always say that ("the best"). You hear preachers saying that. You're saying that yourself: 'That's the best I've ever seen; this is the best I've ever heard.'

"Is that true? It's not," asserted Kochaniuk who, at least, ranks among "the best" at tailoring. "But you have to get used to it."

Kochaniuk said his sister, Rachel, who came to the United States from the Ukraine 4½ years ago, "always complaints because I don't brag enough with (on) her, that I should flatter her more and say nice things. And I just don't."

MORE: Non-traditional family is national trend

(From 1B)

Murdock blamed the increase in part on the fact that Texas was still pulling out of a recession last year. But the aging of the baby boom generation has also lessened the demand for housing, Murdock said.

The Census Bureau also said renters were paying a median $328 a month while the median value of a owner-occupied unit was listed at $59,600.

But Ted C. Jones, senior research economist at the Texas A&M Real Estate Center, said the figures may belie a steady and gradual recovery in the Texas real estate market over the past four years.

"We think we have an actually healthy market, and it's a little bit more recovered than the typical homeowner believes it is," Jones said.

Homeowners were responsible for listing the value of their homes on the Census Bureau survey last year, which Jones said could have driven down the median price. He said the median sales price in Texas was $73,300 over the past 12 months.

And while the volume of homes listed for sale has remained static over the past two years, Jones said sales jumped from 88,000 in 1989 to 97,000 in 1990.

"We actually expect some healthy price moves in the market in Texas in the next couple of years," Jones said. "And as prices rise ... we also expect rents to rise over the next couple of years, and rather dramatically."

Jones cited a decline in construction of rental units would help drive up rents, coupled with the increase in housing prices.

"It's just a matter of time," he said. "It's a real important time for renters who are considering becoming homeowners to consider that — housing affordability in Texas is very good now."

Warrants issued were for charges of delivery of cocaine, marijuana and methamphetamines.

The warrants came after a investigation in which two agents of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force went undercover for three months as students at the schools, according to Tom Finley, commander of the task force.

The agents — one at each school — purchased user amounts of drugs while undercover. About $1,500 was spent in drug purchases.

The investigation, a joint operation of the Ector County District Attorney's Office, the Ector County Sheriff's Office and the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, was prompted by an Ector County grand jury investigation last fall into drug use at Odessa high schools.

A grand jury released a report in November, after a nine-month investigation, that claimed that about 40 percent of Odessa high school students used drugs on a regular basis.

chamber.

The show comes from Austin, which is presenting the black juried art show for the eighth year. Mrs. Fuller said she anticipates Midland becoming a regular stop for the exhibit in coming years.

This year's presentation in Midland is being sponsored by the Black Arts Alliance, the black chamber and the McCormick Gallery.

The chamber also discussed other cultural events at Monday's meeting, including this year's June 19th Celebration and "Les Ballets Africains," coming to Midland this fall.

Plans to form a trade show in conjunction with the June 19th Celebration were discussed. The show would be set up near the celebration grounds in Washington Park.

The chamber announced that tickets for the nationally renowned "Les Ballets Africains" will go on sale June 15.

"Les Ballets Africains" is the ballet troupe of the Republic of New Guinea, featuring 35 dancers performing traditional dance, music and storytelling.

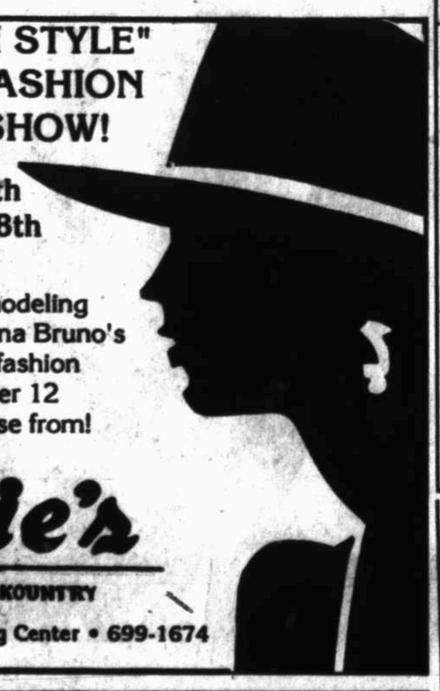

The show will be held at the Yucca Theatre on Nov. 20.

Also on the chamber's agenda was the introduction of a new project director, Thelma Poole.

Odessa man jailed on burglary charge

Staff Report

ODESSA — Police arrested a 34-year-old Odessa man Sunday for burglary after a witness saw the man take property from an apartment and followed him to a bar, police said.

Johnny Lee Wells was jailed in lieu of a $15,000 bond by Municipal Judge Otis Moore.

A witness, who was a friend of the woman robbed, called police about 9:15 p.m. after reportedly seeing Wells leave an apartment at 1705 N. Texas Ave. with property and go to the Bamboo Room, 608 W. 10th St. The property was recovered from Wells' car.

Mayoral losers reflect on defeats

Associated Press

In the end there is always hindsight, and as winners in three Texas mayoral bids celebrated, the losers in the El Paso, San Antonio and Fort Worth races began retracing steps, sorting out futures and offering advice.

In El Paso, the city's first female mayor, Suzie Azar attributed the admittedly shocking loss to challenger and career diplomat, Bill Tilney, to overconfidence.

"It hurt. I didn't expect to be seriously challenged by someone who only lived here two and a half years," said Ms. Azar.

Two months ago, Ms. Azar's supporters had talked of stockpiling some of her campaign money because they were confident that Tilney posed no real threat.

By about 9:30 p.m., MDT Saturday, Ms. Azar conceded the race.

"It's been an honor serving two years as El Paso's first women mayor," Ms. Azar said. "They can't take that away."

Tilney had 27,870 votes, or 60 percent, while Ms. Azar mustered 15,041 votes, or 33 percent, in unofficial returns. Challengers Mark Lozano and Sandra Theodore garnered 1,460 votes, or 3 percent, and 549 votes, or 1 percent, respectively.

The election changed the makeup of the El Paso City Council from being led by a woman and including one female council member to being an all-male panel.

San Antonio's Mayor Lila Cockrell, who lost her re-election bid Saturday to two challengers, who face a May 25 runoff, said her loss is not the end of her career.

"I know that out there there is another opportunity for me, and I'll find it," Mrs. Cockrell said, conceding the race.

Mrs. Cockrell was third with 26,939 votes, or 21 percent. She said it was clear San Antonio citizens want a change. Councilwoman Maria Berriozabal led the 11-candidate field with 40,319 votes, or 31 percent, followed by councilman Nelson Wolff, who had 34,075 votes, or 26 percent.

"In all of the polling that we saw, it indicated I would be first or second. But obviously in the final poll that mattered, I was third," she said. "I don't feel that it's anti-me. It's just another direction that the people wanted to go."

Meanwhile in Fort Worth, Ben B. Boothe, one of two challengers to the heavy favorite Kay Granger, applauded her victory with cautious praise.

"I congratulate Kay Granger. She will make a good mayor," said Boothe, who added that the taxpayers expect changes, strong ones, with the city's first female mayor at the helm.

Boothe, the self-styled voice of the "common people," received 7,139 votes, or 33.5 percent votes to Ms. Granger's whopping 61.7 percent or 13,123 votes.

Ms. Granger's other challenger, George McCurley, a bar owner who did little active campaigning, received 921 votes or 4.3 percent. McCurley did not immediately return phone calls Sunday to The Associated Press.

In other races, Amarillo Mayor Keith Adams defeated two challengers, unemployed handyman R. Michael Hopkins and car salesman Bobby Cash. With all 22 precincts reporting, Adams had 7,521 votes, Cash had 652 and Hopkins had 306.

MISD board accepts election results

Staff Report

The Midland Independent School District Board formally approved the results of Saturday's school district election Monday.

The board unanimously accepted the passing of Propositions 1 and 2 and the tallies for the races in Districts 3, 5 and 6.

Voters approved Proposition 1 with 7,134 out of 10,980 votes; Proposition 2 was passed with 7,058 out of 10,939 votes.

Jack Hightower took 579 votes or 83.4 percent in District 3 over opponent Leon Keller, who got 115 votes. George Staley, the lone candidate for District 5, recieved 1,179 votes.

Board members recognized a run-off election for District 6 between Gary Willis, who had 1,142 votes or 46.8 percent, and Jerry Weant with 804 votes or 33 percent. Lex Crawford received 494 votes or 20.2 percent.

The run-off election between Willis and Crawford will be on May 18. Absentee voting will begin Wednesday and end May 14.

Fire forces evacuation at San Jacinto JHS

Staff Report

A fire Monday in a locker room at San Jacinto Junior High School, 1400 N. N St., appeared to be intentionally set and is being investigated as arson, Midland fire officials said.

The fire, which occurred about 10:30 a.m. in the gymnasium, caused moderate fire and smoke damage.

Clothes and other items that had been piled up apparently were set ablaze, fire officials said.

The building was evacuated temporarily, school officials said.

5 Texans in Congress back 'Brady bill'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Michael Andrews had always supported the National Rifle Association 100 percent.

But he knew it was time to buck one of the most powerful lobbies on Capitol Hill when a distraught father killed each of his four children with a shot through the head and when a convicted felon opened fire on a Houston police officer.

Andrews realized the time had come for a 7-day waiting period for gun buyers.

The father bought his gun after being served with divorce papers, went home, lined his children for photographs, then killed them and himself. The felon had purchased his semi-automatic while on probation.

"Texas has a long and proud tradition of gun ownership ... but we also have a long tradition in the state of law and order, and this is a common sense approach to a real serious problem," says Andrews, one of five Texans in Congress who say they support the Brady bill.

The legislation establishes a 7-day "cooling off" period for gun buyers, and allows police time to determine whether a purchaser has a history of felonies or mental illness. It does not require such background checks, however.

The legislation is named for former presidential press secretary James Brady, who was wounded in the assassination attempt on President Reagan. Assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. had purchased the gun in Dallas.

A vote on the bill is expected Wednesday.

"I think it is ridiculous that a felon or drug addict can walk into a gun store (in Texas) and lie on a form and walk out with a handgun," Andrews said. "This is a moderate proposal, it's a common sense proposal, and I hope Texans understand that."

Some Texas congressman, however, say calls to their offices are overwhelmingly in opposition to the Brady bill. And even though calls to his office are running 100-to-1 against the legislation, Rep. Charles Stenholm, a gun-owner and sportsman from Stamford, says he supports the legislation.

Three other Texans who have also declared their support are all big-city Democrats — Craig Washington of Houston, John Bryant of Dallas, and Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio.

Eight Texans, including the state's two senators, say they're undecided, and 15 are opposed. There is one vacancy in the 29-member delegation. Several Texans say they instead support legislation by Rep. Harley Staggers Jr., D-W.Va., which calls for an instant records check on gun buyers. Questions, however, have been raised about whether such a system is technologically feasible, at least immediately.

Stenholm said he supported the National Rifle Association on 24 out of 25 votes during the last session of Congress. This time, however, he decided that while a waiting period for gun buyers is a small step toward getting tough on crime, "it is a step in the right direction."

"Do you believe it is constitutionally right for any mentally incompetent person, a convicted felon or fugitive from justice, to be able to fill out a form and walk out with a handgun, without any questions? You have to answer 'no,' and 99.9 percent of the people I talk to agree," Stenholm said Monday.

But opponents say the bill would not have prevented the wounding of Brady or hundreds of other tragedies.

"The Brady bill is like a gun without a trigger. It may look good on the wall, but it won't work," says Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio.

Opponents say the bill comes up short because there is no national criminal records system for conducting background checks; almost all criminals buy their handguns from individuals, not stores, so there is no background check, and the bill would not apply; and, according to Smith, less than 1 percent of people who commit crimes with handguns purchased them within a week of the offense.

"At best, the Brady bill is a make-believe solution," Smith said, calling it instead a small infringement on individual rights.

"A seven-day waiting period for the purchase of a handgun will not make a difference," added Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock. "John Hinckley Jr. bought his gun in Dallas and had five months to wait, thinking about the assassination attempt."

A head of a statewide association representing city and county law enforcement associations around Texas, the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas (CLEAT), has not taken a position on the Brady bill.

CHURN: Youth learn about nutrition also

(From 1B)

If they're aware of such things, AMP spokeswoman Miriam Curry said, they're likely to drink more. And the more milk they drink, the happier the nation's dairy operators will be.

"We do not promote just dairy products," said Ms. Curry, who attended Monday's demonstration at Santa Rita. "Our program promotes the whole spectrum of nutrition."

But milk took center stage Monday, and most of the children interviewed after Setzler's demonstration — like 8-year-old Ivette Tercero, a Travis second-grader — promised to ingest more of it.

"Cause it'll make you healthy," she explained.

'Royal rat pack'

Tabloids scramble for tidbits on royal family

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — "Separate Homes," screamed the front-page headline in The Sun two weeks ago.

The story — "an extraordinary series of disclosures," in the tabloid's understated prose — was presented as an inside account of prickly and distant relations between Prince Charles and Diana, the Princess of Wales, provided by a former security policeman, whose post was outside the gates of Charles's country house in Gloucestershire.

The story included the kind of intrusive details, real or invented, about separate households, the bedroom decor, waking hours, eating habits, likes and dislikes of Charles and Diana, that feed the public obsession with the British Royal Soap Opera. The Sun ran the security guard's tale for a few days ("Tomorrow: More Amazing Revelations"), while the other Fleet Street tabloids scrambled to follow.

Last week, the royal road show was off to Brazil for an official visit and upbeat headlines. The image polishers at Buckingham Palace concede that these appearances are stage managed.

The most popular set piece in the royal repertoire is Diana hugging children, "preferably black or AIDS victims or both, to put it cynically," says John Haslam, a palace press officer. And Diana did precisely that at a hospital in Sao Paulo. Again, the Royals were plastered all over the front pages of the tabloids for another solid week.

ON MAY 14, the head of the House of Windsor, Queen Elizabeth, or "The Boss," as the tabloids sometimes call her, will arrive in Washington for a state visit. For Britain's mass-circulation tabloids, the Queen's trip to America should be something of a breather since the sovereign is the least-controversial member of the royal family and treated reverently by the press.

But this is shaping up as a rigorous year for the reporters the palace refers to as the "royal rat pack," and The Sun's security-guard saga was just an early salvo in the fight for stories and readers.

Royal milestones loom: the family's biggest star, Diana, turns 30 on July 1; and the 10th wedding anniversary of Charles and Diana is on July 29. Other subjects with the ability to rouse readers look scarce. Now that the gulf war is over, the "salute to our heroes" genre of tabloid pieces is gone. And with Margaret Thatcher gone from 10 Downing Street, the political story is less colorful and spirited.

Prince Charles | Queen Elizabeth | Princess Diana | Duchess of York

Much of the royals coverage seems little more than trivial gossip. But to the big London tabloids, it is a grimly serious business, journalistically and financially. Stories on the royals are a crucial element in the tabloid formula.

Michael Shea, the former palace press secretary, recalled that he was once asked if he kept clippings of the tabloid stories. "I said that if you clipped out the royals stories, there would be nothing left of the tabloids," he said.

And for all the fabrication, there are old-fashioned scoops: advance word of engagements, pregnancies, divorces or family traumas like Prince Edward's decision in 1987 to drop out of the Royal Marines.

THE FINANCIAL stakes in the royal rat race are high. Despite the recession, Rupert Murdoch's paper The Sun (circulation 3.7 million) makes an operating profit estimated at more than $100 million a year, and the Sunday tabloid News of the World (circulation 4.8 million) is another moneyspinner that depends on royals stories.

Robert Maxwell, the new owner of the Daily News in New York, is the other big tabloid proprietor on Fleet Street. His leading titles — The Daily Mirror (circulation 3 million), The Sunday Mirror (circulation 2.8 million) and The People (circulation 2.4 million), also a Sunday paper — serve up a steady stream of royals stories.

The royals press includes not only newspapers but also a corps of authors and magazines, both specialized titles such as "Royalty" and "Majesty" and general magazines such as Time Warner's "People." Diana holds the all-time record for People cover appearances at 44, eight more than her closest rival, Elizabeth Taylor.

But the real cutting edge of royals coverage is the "rat pack," the 30 or so reporters and photographers who do the shoe-leather work. They scoff at the kind of "whither the monarchy" pieces the grayer, broadsheet newspapers occasionally run. They regard most book and magazine writers as parasites who feed off the tabloids, clipping their stories and rewriting them.

Come rain or shine, when the royal roadshow is in motion the rat pack is there, often jockeying for position behind police barricades. The veterans have traveled the world, from the Australian Outback to the White House. They cover the daily stories and stalk the manifold layers of palace sources, armed with guile and cash. (The tabloids have been known to pay tens of thousands of dollars to palace employees for information.)

For a decade, the acknowledged master of the craft was Harry Arnold, the senior royals reporter for The Sun, who last year jumped to The Daily Mirror. Arnold's credits include a string of exclusive stories dating to the days when Charles started going out with Diana.

ONE SCOOP was about the conversation that led up to the wedding kiss on the balcony of Buckingham Palace watched by millions: Prince Andrew encouraging Charles to do it to please the half-million people assembled below, Charles resisting, then asking the Queen's permission, and finally ...

Competing tabloids hired lip readers to review the video, hoping to discredit the Arnold story. But they merely confirmed its accuracy. "My mole was on the balcony with them," Arnold confided.

The palace tends to regard the press with upper-class disdain. But the royals also recognize the monarchy must be accessible and seen to be serving the public or it could be dissolved. So with a carefully calculated blend of mystery and accessibility, the royal family poses, performs and keeps the soap opera going. "They're helping us to help them — there's no question of that," said Arnold.

Bushes not accompanying queen to Texas

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Queen Elizabeth II and her courtiers, still taken aback by the circus-like visit to California hosted by the Reagans eight years ago, have decided to go to Texas without the Bushes this month, a White House source said.

The White House professes to understand and concur in the decision, made at Buckingham Palace and the British Embassy in Washington. But a Bush administration official said, in fact, that the queen never asked President Bush or his wife, Barbara, if they would like to join in any of her tour of their home state.

"You always wait to be asked," an administration official said. When an invitation from the queen was not forthcoming, the White House did not suggest that the president or first lady accompany or host the royal couple on any of their Texas stops.

The queen and Prince Philip are scheduled to visit Austin, San Antonio, Dallas and Houston — the Bushes' hometown — after beginning their U.S. tour in Washington and Florida.

One reason that the Bushes were not included in the Texas events, an administration source said, was that the queen and her advisers wanted to avoid any possibility of a repeat of their 1983 visit to California, the Reagans' home state.

That trip featured lavish, star-studded dinners in Los Angeles and San Francisco engineered by Nancy Reagan. The Los Angeles event, held on a 20th Century Fox soundstage, was marred by a mumbling, off-key performance by Frank Sinatra, whom Mrs. Reagan had retained as producer for the evening, and off-color jokes by George Burns.

The queen was not amused by either the humor or the widely reported scramble by the Reagans' rich friends for invitations to the dinners, according to officials who planned the trip and journalists who covered it.

During the California visit, the queen also endured a rough ride in bad weather to reach the Reagans' hilltop ranch for a taco lunch.

"There was a great sense of relief when we got to Vancouver," for the succeeding visit to Canada said a British journalist who was along.

A trip organizer said the British officials recognized the difference in the styles of the two first ladies and had no concern that a dinner in Houston planned by Mrs. Bush would resemble the Hollywood extravaganza put on by Mrs. Reagan.

The Bushes will host the queen and Prince Philip when they arrive in Washington next Tuesday with a traditional arrival ceremony on the White House lawn and a state dinner that night. Bush is also expected to accompany the queen to a baseball game in Baltimore on May 16 between the Orioles and the Oakland Athletics.

The tentative schedule calls for the queen and her husband to go to Texas on May 20, stopping first in Austin where they will be greeted at the capitol by Gov. Ann Richards.

"How many noses do you think are going to be out of joint?" a Bush aide asked, indicating that some Bush loyalists may perceive the failure of the queen to include the Bushes on the Texas tour as a royal snub.

The organizer said British officials did not want to make it look like they were trying to compel the Bushes to join the queen in Texas after hosting her in Washington for 3½ days.

A Bush aide praised the decision of the queen to include a number of "real people" events on her nine-day U.S. visit.

The British Embassy describes the queen's schedule as tentative and has asked that its details not be disclosed, in part because of security considerations. Already, however, there have been published references to her plan to attend the baseball game and to address a joint session of Congress on May 16 — becoming the first British monarch to address the body.

Concern mounts that electromagnetic fields could be dangerous

EDITOR'S NOTE — The harnessing of electricity has caused profound changes in the environment, bathing modern society with invisible forces called electromagnetic fields. But only in recent years did scientists start to suspect these fields might promote cancer and perhaps other health problems. The first of a three-part series, "Fields of Peril," examines this emerging environmental concern.

By Lee Siegel
AP Science writer

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. — In the basement of a Pacific Bell telephone office, 11 of 65 workers developed cancer in recent years, and three died. Yet on the second floor, not one of 75 employees had the disease.

Some of the stricken staffers suspected their cancers might be caused by electromagnetic fields — invisible forces produced by anything electrical, from workplace equipment and power lines to hairdryers and can openers.

They feared dangerous doses of electromagnetic radiation were emanating from an adjacent power room where incoming electricity was converted to run phone systems.

"There was so much paranoia going on in the office," said Judy Parker, a 47-year-old data processing worker with breast cancer. "People were asking 'Who's next?' One after another after another of us kept coming down with cancer. I do believe these electromagnetic fields could very possibly have something to do with it."

A company investigation failed to implicate any environmental cause, including asbestos recently removed from the building. But Pacific Bell says it didn't think to measure electromagnetic fields, either from the power room or employees' computer video screens.

AS IN A growing number of cases across the country, people concerned about the fields were left to wonder.

Inconclusive but increasing evidence from a number of studies suggests workers in electrical industries develop cancer at unexpectedly high rates after prolonged exposure to electric and magnetic fields, known collectively as electromagnetic fields, or EMFs.

Yet the possible hazard isn't limited to the workplace. Virtually everyone is bombarded with EMFs — at home, at the mall, even outdoors. Power lines, home appliances and office equipment all emit the fields.

Studies have associated prolonged EMF exposure with higher rates of cancer in children. Inconclusive studies also link EMFs with other health problems, including birth defects, miscarriages, nervous system and behavioral problems, and possibly immune system disorders.

Some scientists consider the studies linking EMFs and health problems badly flawed. They say it's ridiculous to believe human lives are endangered by radiation that is weaker than the Earth's magnetic field or the natural electrical activity in the human body.

Skeptics also note that research has failed to reveal a biological explanation of how EMFs could promote cancer. And if such a risk does exist, they say, it is much smaller than other environmental hazards such as smoking.

BUT EVEN "low risks applied to a lot of people are unacceptable," said Raymond Neutra, chief of special epidemiological studies for California's Department of Health Services.

The potential consequences reach beyond human health.

If researchers eventually determine electromagnetic fields are harmful, it could cost industry billions of dollars to fight lawsuits and redesign electric power facilities, appliances and workplace equipment.

"We're talking about rewiring America," said Ram Mukherji, an electromagnetism expert at Southern California Edison, a power company. "We may have to reduce our standard of living."

The potential costs of personal injury lawsuits filed by cancer patients and others against utilities and other companies "are just incredible," said San Francisco attorney Stephen M. Snyder. "They would dwarf things we've dealt with so far like Agent Orange, the Dalkon Shield and asbestos."

But so much about EMFs and their effects is unknown.

Unlike cigarette smoke and toxic chemicals, there is evidence that electromagnetic radiation may not be worse in larger doses, so government agencies say they can't yet determine what levels are safe or unsafe.

The Environmental Protection Agency abandoned its research into EMFs a few years ago for budgetary reasons, leaving it in large part to the utility industry, which has the most to lose if the hazard proves real, Seattle lawyer Michael Withey said.

THE INDUSTRY'S Electric Power Research Institute funds about half the $15 million spent annually on EMF research, said Greg Rauch, an institute project manager. The EPA resumed a small amount of research — $750,000 worth — during the current fiscal year, agency spokesman Dave Ryan said. The federal Energy Department also is financing studies.

Scientists say it's unclear whether EMFs generated by common household current, which is measured at a frequency of 60 hertz, pose a peril.

A 1990 draft EPA report identified 60-hertz magnetic fields from power lines and perhaps other sources in the home as a "possible, but not proven" cause of cancer in humans.

The agency said studies were inconclusive as to the dangers of electromagnetic radiation in the higher, so-called radio-frequency fields, such as radio and television signals. It did, however, urge more study of elevated rates of leukemia discovered in recent years among amateur radio operators.

Radio-frequency fields are generated by radio and TV transmitters, cordless and cellular phones, microwave communication equipment and cooking ovens, and a variety of medical devices.

The EPA staff initially recommended classifying 60-hertz fields as "probable human carcinogens" and radio-frequency fields as "possible" carcinogens.

BUT THOSE recommendations were deleted by Dr. William Farland, director of EPA's Office of Health and Environmental Assessment, because he felt existing evidence didn't justify the conclusions.

While scientists sort the evidence, the EMF issue is appearing more frequently in power line construction battles, personal injury and other lawsuits, and in government.

Citizens worried about fields have gone to court or regulatory agencies to fight planned or existing power lines and other facilities in Seattle, Los Angeles, Boca Raton, Fla., Houston and elsewhere.

Florida has adopted standards limiting magnetic field intensities near transmission lines. The issue is being studied by officials in California, New York, Oregon and Maryland. Restrictions on new power lines were imposed last year in Whatcom County, Wash., and East Greenwich, R.I.

In one notable case, the Klein Independent School District in Texas forced Houston Lighting & Power to spend $8.6 million to remove a transmission line from school property.

Because electromagnetic risks remain debatable, utilities are winning most lawsuits in which workers or others blame cancer, miscarriages and birth defects on EMF exposure, said Tom Watson, a utility industry lawyer in Washington.

But there are exceptions.

LAST YEAR, Boeing Co. worker Robert Strom won a $500,000 settlement in Seattle after arguing his leukemia was caused by occupational exposure to electromagnetic pulses used to test missiles. Boeing agreed to monitor 700 exposed workers.

New York attorney Stanley J. Levy said plaintiffs receiving settlements in radio-frequency electromagnetic cases included a civilian Navy repair technician from Connecticut who blamed his pancreatic cancer on radar exposure, a New York phone repairman who attributed his cancer to radar transmitters, and military personnel who developed cataracts after working on radar equipment.

And even if the utility industry wins most of its EMF battles, the victories do little to alleviate public fears that these invisible waves are responsible for cancer hot spots — clusters of cancer cases in workplaces or neighborhoods, reported in cities ranging from Darrington, Wash., to Rochester, N.Y., to Portland, Ore., to Guilford, Conn.

In virtually every cluster, health investigators couldn't establish any link to the fields. Instead, they attributed the disease to other possible factors such as toxic substances or said the seemingly high numbers of cancer cases weren't excessive or happened by chance.

IN THE GARDEN Grove phone company case, investigators noted the sick workers faced several health risks, including asbestos plumbing insulation. Truck exhaust was sucked into the basement by faulty ventilation. Some lung cancer patients smoked cigarettes. Others had family histories of cancer.

"I don't think working in that office had a thing to do with it," said Jim Stout, Pacific Bell's safety director.

EMFs pervade everyday life

Associated Press

Earth is bathed by all sorts of electromagnetic radiation: X-rays, ultraviolet and visible light, radiant heat, microwaves and radar, television and radio signals, and electromagnetic fields. These latter forces are produced when electricity moves through power lines, appliances or anything electrical.

Each type of radiation has its own distinct wave. These waves are identified by their "frequency," or how many times they go through one cycle of up and down movement (oscillation) in one second as they travel along.

Radiation frequency is measured in units called "hertz." A wave with the frequency of one hertz, for example, oscillates at one cycle per second.

The highest-frequency radiation, traveling in waves that oscillate at the fastest rate per second, include gamma rays, X-rays and ultraviolet light. These waves are called ionizing radiation because they can ionize, or break, chemical bonds.

As a result, ionizing radiation can cause mutations in living organisms, spurring cancer and birth defects.

Microwave radiation oscillates at a much slower rate, but its frequency still is fairly high in the electromagnetic spectrum — about 1,000 to 1 million megahertz. Microwaves have the power to make water molecules vibrate, which is why they can be used to cook food. They also can cause heat damage to living tissue.

Moving down the scale, FM radio signals lie between about 88 and 108 megahertz, and AM radio signals range from 540 to 1600 kilohertz. One kilohertz equals 1,000 hertz.

The electromagnetic fields generated by electricity traveling through wire or anything electrical emit extremely low-frequency radiation. Under U.S. utility standards, EMFs from power lines and most household appliances, for example, are measured at only 60 hertz.

Earth, buildings and even skin block most electrical fields. But magnetic fields can penetrate most matter. Recent studies also link cancer more strongly to magnetic fields than to electric fields.

Houston inmate lone woman in boot camp

Yvonne Rebouche, 23, works under the watchful eye of Texas Department of Criminal Justice guard Shanna Butler in Gatesville. Ms. Rebouche is the first woman sentenced to the boot camp to experience the intense work and exercise program.

AP Laserphoto

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Of the 46,802 inmates in the Texas prison system, no one gets more attention but at the same time may be more isolated than a tiny 23-year-old Houston woman.

When Yvonne Rebouche walks down the hall to her cell in the reception center of the Gatesville Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, the corridors are cleared and inmates peak through windows or from nearly closed doors to get a glimpse of her.

When she eats her meal in the lunchroom, the other dozen tables in the room are empty and she sits alone at her four-seat table.

When she's in the prison dayroom watching television or outside in the recreation yard, she's alone.

She has no cellmate.

She runs two miles at the crack of dawn, marches in cadence in the afternoon and works outdoors in the morning, all in the company of a corrections officer whose sole duty is to watch her and tell her what to do.

"Yeah, I'm lonely," she says. "I'm by myself. Everything is by myself. It's no fun. But I'm learning a lot of things that you can't learn in the county jail."

Ms. Rebouche, convicted of possession of cocaine, is the lone inmate in the prison system's new military-style boot camp program for women.

Given a choice between a 10-year prison term and the 90-day boot camp stay, she said the decision was easy. She already had been on probation for a 1989 robbery in Houston and had outstanding warrants for not reporting to her probation officer.

"I don't think I want to be there," she said, nodding to the women's prison across the road. "But I was a little scared. I didn't know what to expect. Everything was new to me."

It also was new to the prison system.

Ms. Rebouche was sentenced to the camp by State District Judge Joe Kegans in Houston who last year ruled that two similar camps for male offenders were unconstitutional because the corrections department had established them only for men.

Although one other woman inmate preceded her in the boot camp, the intense work and exercise program was not yet in place, so Ms. Rebouche is the first to have the experience.

"I love the program and I love the boot camp atmosphere," says Shanna Butler, one of two officers who have continuous custody of Ms. Rebouche. "It took some getting use to, but her attitude is really good. I've seen a change, very physical and mental. Even if no one else comes in, it's been a real good experience. You feel like you might make a difference."

The program is open to first offenders or those who have never served prison time. They have to be at least 17 but no older than 25 and have no physical or mental handicaps that would block them from strenuous physical exercise.

Asked what the program needs, Ms. Butler says: "Inmates."

Ms. Rebouche is awakened at 4:30 a.m. An hour later she raises the flag in front of the unit, then heads for two miles of running and exercises with Ms. Butler.

After breakfast it's time for work for the remainder of the morning. She does yard work, weeding, fixes potholes or mows grass. Most of her duties are outdoors and they are different each day.

She takes classes in "life skills training" for a couple of hours after lunch and then marches and does extra work until 4:30 p.m. She takes the unit flag down an hour later. Everything is in the company of an officer.

"It used to irritate me real bad. They used to stare at me at the (meal) table. I didn't want to eat any more," she says. "But now it doesn't bother me and I don't feel like somebody is staring at me."

As for the commotion when she walks down the hall of the prison unit, "I used to take it personally. Everyone scatters or they get in trouble," she says. "I think it's funny now."

She says she has learned to ignore the other prison inmates who view her as a curiosity.

"I walk down the hall and they say 'That's the boot camp girl,'" she says.

But she says the program has done her good. "I'm learning to take my GED (she left school after the eighth grade) and they're teaching me how to apply for government grants and different ways to get a job."

Asked what she misses from the outside, she says, "Walking to the store when I want to, being able to do what I want to without being told. When you're locked up, you miss things like that, like buying a soda."

When she gets out later this month, she wants to go to school, maybe at a community college in Houston, and study interior design or computer repair.

"I feel better. I'm getting in shape and getting my act together now," she says.

Stanley Smith Security provides professional training for its officers and guards through an extensive, in-house training program. "Our people, although they are not law enforcement officials, are knowledgeable in all aspects of security," assessed Owens. "All of our personnel undergo recurring training every six months."

Added Jim Nicholson, regional vice-president of the Southwest division, "We have spent a large amount of money to initiate a nationwide guard and security officer screening process. We consider our psychological profile test, which was developed with our in-house psychologist, Dr. John Hezel, Ph.D., to be the newest in the industry."

The test is administered to all new hires before employment. "It gives us indicators for such conditions as proneness to drug and alcohol use and accidents, as well as information about long-term interests," he noted. "The test is ours alone and is unique to Stanley Smith Security."

Not just a knife store anymore, The Cutting Edge's expanded inventory includes a variety of collectibles and home decorating items.

The Cutting Edge is perhaps best known for its big line of all types of knives, ranging from hunting knives to small pocket knives. All are impressively displayed for easy selection. Select from such brand names as Buck, Case, Schrade, Cold Steel, Puma, Swiss Army, Camillus, Eye Brand, Explorers, Kershaw, Gerber and Boker.

Mom likes knives too! Why not get her a pink, yellow, green, black, blue or red Swiss classic knife. Each comes with scissors, a toothpick and tweezers for her key chain. A nice line of collectible knives, sharpening stones and steels complete the inventory.

For your kitchen or for a thoughtful, practical wedding gift, select kitchen cutlery from The Cutting Edge.

The store carries fine lines such as Henckels, Gerber, Case, Forschner and others. Knives may be purchased separately or in boxed sets. Chinese cleavers are in supply at The Cutting Edge, as are a number of kitchen tools and gourmet baking items, such as cookie sheets.

Sewers and crafters will appreciate the fine selection of quality sewing scissors and pinking shears by Gingher. Gingher also makes garden nippers for rose bushes, and they would make a great Mother's Day gift.

To keep your knives in peak operating condition, take advantage of The Cutting Edge's sharpening service for sewing scissors and knives.

The Cutting Edge is also an excellent source for collectible items such as candles, Windstalker pottery, mandelas, arrowheads, trade beads, Native American artifacts and Tuf Times, the whimsical Western hand painted carved art statues by J.B. Taylor. A new addition to Tuf Times is "I Are One," with its own diploma for you to personalize for that special grad. A new line of collectible pottery is in at The Cutting Edge. The new Raku pottery by Paul Fleming is available in foil or matte colors. You must see it to truly appreciate the color density and texture dimension. These exclusive to Midland pieces are signed, dated and categorically numbered and come with a certificate of originality.

Also new to the store are handpainted bell windchimes, from 18 to 50 inches long. Choose from such great decorating colors as blue, terra cotta and white.

Be sure to see the new line of antler artwork — beautiful decorations for the home which feature genuine antlers. The antler candelabras and bowls are absolutely stunning.

Plan for Mother's Day and stock up on wooden music boxes or a large variety of delightful miniatures for printer's boxes and shadow boxes.

Another great gift idea are Coaster Stones — boxed sets of four coasters in a nice variety of Southwest and Texana, along with beautiful wildflowers and bluebonnets. Also available for men's gifts are ducks, cars and quail.

The Cutting Edge is also the home of Water Dawg and Bandito products.

Father's Day will be here soon, so come in now and browse for Dad.

Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Gift wrapping is free. MasterCard, Visa and American Express cards are welcome. Call 694-8346 for more information.

Lewellen Construction continues to gather repeat business

Lewellen Construction Company enjoys a reputation for earning repeat business. Many satisfied customers return to Bill Lewellen to work on their additional in-town and out-of-town properties because they can depend on his experience and fair pricing. Since 1982, when Bill opened his business in Midland, Lewellen Construction has professionally administered some 1280 remodeling jobs.

Two of those jobs were for O.C. Collins, who has just contracted Lewellen Construction for a third job. Collins accepted Bill's bid to add fascia and steel siding to a lake house near San Angelo.

In addition to the work for Collins, Bill recently completed a full steel siding job in Bandera County for a repeat customer who has out-of-town property. Out-of-town clients are encouraged to give Lewellen Construction a call at 686-8007 or 563-4520 for a quote.

It's quality at a fair price that Bill can offer to Lewellen Construction clients. It's also experience and longevity from a company which has served the Permian Basin for nearly a decade. Bill has specialized in siding and windows since 1976.

"Our value is built on your satisfaction," said Bill. "You have our personal pledge that we will stand behind the quality of our materials and the integrity of our workmanship."

Bill will be pleased to tell you about Lewellen Construction's 10 year written warranty on workmanship. "It's as good as the company that stands behind it," he said.

Lewellen Construction Company does not and will not sell on price alone. Bill's experience, quality products and solid reputation are all known by satisfied customers in every Midland neighborhood. "If all someone is looking for is price, they need to go somewhere else."

You can depend on Lewellen Construction for custom built replacement windows, offering ease of operation, and a variety of styles, in vinyl or aluminum. Another Lewellen specialty, custom built storm windows, are energy efficient, offer noise reduction and come in a variety of colors.

For steel or vinyl siding, Lewellen Construction uses only the best siding. Alside, a supplier of home improvement products for more than 40 years, comes with a lifetime warranty. Also new to the market and available from Lewellen Construction is a strong new line of steel siding products — Rollex steel siding.

Lewellen Construction just completed a siding, soffit and fascia job at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Moffit. Mrs. Moffit reported that she and her husband were "very pleased" with the work. She added that her husband had considered the imporvements on their home several times, but contracted Bill recently when Mr. Moffit saw Bill's work.

Make an important phone call to Lewellen Construction Co. at 563-4520 or 686-8007 for a free estimate on vinyl or steel siding or storm windows. Bill Lewellen can readily answer any questions you may have.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nolan Ryan's seventh career no-hitter enabled him to edge record-setting baseball stealer Rickey Henderson for American League player of the week honors on Monday.

Ryan

The Texas Rangers' right-hander pitched a 16-strikeout no-hitter against Toronto last Wednesday to extend his own major league mark for career no-hitters. It came hours after Henderson broke Lou Brock's career stolen base record with his 939th steal in Oakland's victory over the New York Yankees.

'He's the toughest player I've ever seen'

■ Dee Brown's description sums up Larry Bird — especially after what was perhaps the most unforgettable performance of No. 33's career Sunday.

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — The season was on the line, and Larry Bird's battered body was sprawled, face down and motionless, on the court.

It must be his back again. Hadn't it been killing him most of the season? Wasn't it finally time to carry out the Boston Celtics' hopes for a 17th NBA championship on a stretcher?

Not so fast. This time it was his cheekbone. There was no homecourt advantage for Bird when it smacked into the parquet floor. He was woozy and there was no guarantee he could finish the game.

Not so fast. This was Larry Bird.

"I knew he'd be back," Celtics rookie Dee Brown said. "He's the toughest player I've ever seen."

When dramatic moments and great players collide, it takes more than painful injuries to keep them apart.

Go all the way back 21 years to May 8, 1970 when Willis Reed limped on a banged-up knee onto the court and inspired the New York Knicks to the NBA title in the seventh game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Bulls win fifth straight

■ Philadelphia plays better Monday night than it did in the series opener, but still comes up short against Chicago, which has yet to lose a playoff game.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen dominated the scoring Monday night but the Chicago Bulls were talking about Horace Grant's offensive rebounding in the closing minutes of their 112-100 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Grant made the key play after the 76ers, who had trailed by as many as 14 points early in the fourth quarter, had cut the deficit to 103-98 on a pair of free throws by Hersey Hawkins.

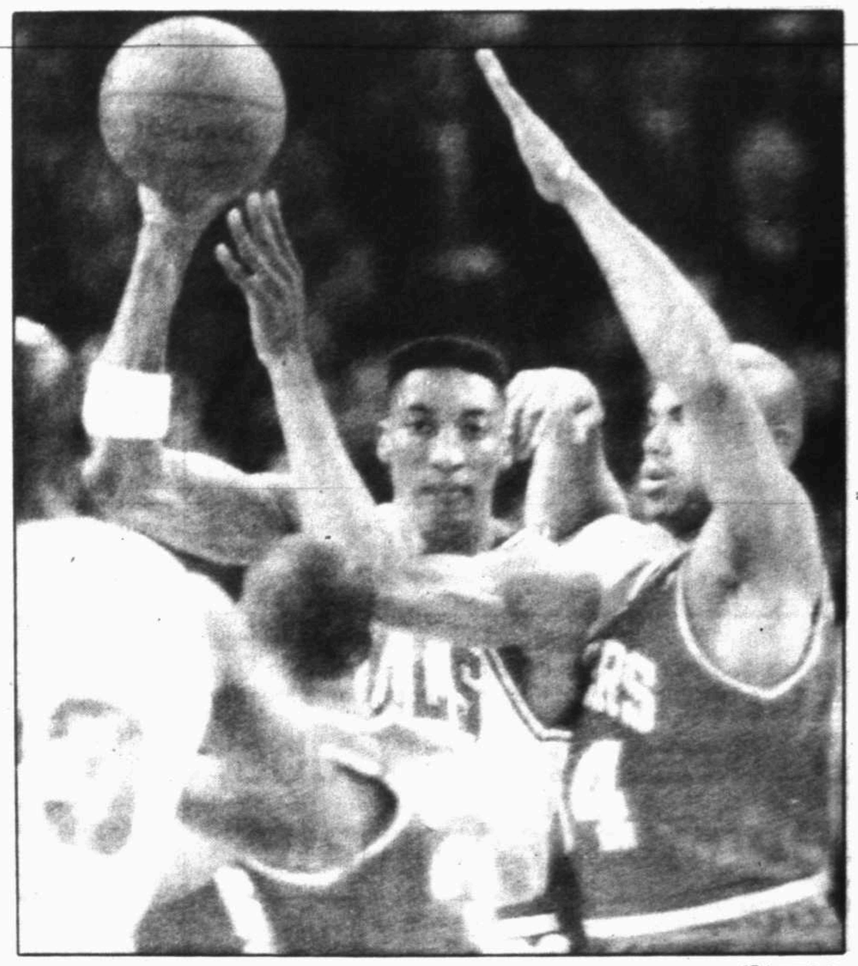

Jordan, who finished with 29 points, missed a long jumper but Grant got the rebound and scored to start a 6-0 run that put the game away, giving the Bulls a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal series that moves to Philadelphia for games Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

"We didn't fold down the stretch and one reason was Horace's three offensive rebounds," Jordan said.

Grant, who had seven of his 10 rebounds on the offensive boards, said on the big play, "I went to the opposite side, tipped it to myself and then tipped it in."

"Horace's play on the offensive boards was excellent but our defense also stayed in the game," said Pippen, who

Rebels honor top athletes

Midland Lee named Reggie Webb and Andrea Armstrong as its Outstanding Athletes of the Year Monday night to conclude the Spring Sports Banquet at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Webb, an All-District 4-5A halfback in football, led the Rebels in scoring with 76 points while rushing for 943 yards and an additional 244 yards receiving. He also was a three-year letterman in track and will attend Sul Ross to play football next year.

Armstrong played three sports during her high school career. She lettered three years in volleyball and track and also played basketball. Armstrong is a member of the National Honor Society and will attend Southwest Texas State next fall.

Four athletes were also named as recipients of the Army Reserve's Outstanding Scholar Award. They were Monita Poudyal (tennis), Becky Duran (golf), Jason Gooch (tennis) and Mike "Burr" Vogel (football and soccer).

The banquet turned out to be a celebration of success. Lee won the district championship in baseball under first-year head coach Jesse Benavides. Lee also won the girls district swimming title while the soccer team made the school's first playoff appearance. The girls track team placed second in the district meet and tennis won three of six spring tournaments.

It was also a big year for individuals.

Juniors Traci Logan (300 hurdles) and Jovan Tellez (shot put) won state berths in track and will compete in Austin this weekend. Juan Arguello was a state qualifier in diving, finishing 12th in the state.

Sophomores played a big role for Lee this year as Tekeira Strambler won district titles in both the long jump and triple jump and just missed a state berth in the long jump with a third place. TaNisha Mills also set a district record in the 400 and just missed a state berth in the region meet. Scott McLeod won the district title in the shot put.

Ginger Brininstool won district titles in three events while Jesse Nattrass and Carey Forsythe also won individual district titles in swimming. Tennis qualified Antwine Smith in singles and Ben Bacon and Jason Gooch in doubles for the region meet. Sophomore Paula King was the district golf medalist runner-up and had a Top 10

Mavs won't jump to conclusions

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas Mavericks officials said Monday they'll withhold judgment on Roy Tarpley's status with the team until charges that he beat a woman who claims to be his girlfriend are settled.

Tarpley

Tarpley was released Sunday from the Houston City Jail on $500 bond after being charged with assaulting Ardia Preston, 30. If convicted he could face up to one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Mavericks' General Manager Norm Sonju said Monday team officials would stand by their troubled player.

"I was more encouraged talking to Roy last week than I've been since he won the Sixth-Man Award (in 1988)," Sonju said. "If it's true what happened this weekend, it just flies in the face of all that. I can't even think about that. When that happens, we'll be able to comment."

Sonju said owner Don Carter was dedicated to helping Tarpley overcome his troubles.

"Roy has some problems and we've been trying to work with him," Sonju said. "Working with a man like Mr. Carter, it's always been our feeling that you just work with that asset first to make him a productive member of society then a contributing member of the team."

Tarpley was in Houston where he had been seeking aftercare at the John Lucas Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Clinic on an outpatient basis for the past two weeks, Sonju said.

Police said the altercation began when Preston told Tarpley that she planned to move back to Dallas.

Athletes and driving drunk: a bad mix

By Hal Bock

An AP Sports Special

The casualty count continues to climb.

Billy Martin, Pelle Lindbergh, Robbie Moroso and Fred Washington are dead. So are two Boston University students as well as a couple of Florida teen-agers. Bill Shoemaker is paralyzed. And still, the roll call of athletes and alcohol-related accidents goes on.

■ Phillies teammates hospitalized/2C

Blood tests determined Dykstra, the driver, was legally drunk, with his blood alcohol content exceeding the state's legal limit of 0.10 percent, said acting Radnor Township Police Chief Henry Jansen. Dykstra will be charged with drunken driving, Jansen said. No tests were conducted on Daulton because he was not driving, Jansen said.

"It's appalling," said Micky Sadoff, national president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD). "Anybody who would drink and drive, knowing what we know. And especially athletes who are role models. I have two sons who love sports figures. They are saddened when they hear these stories. We're not anti-drinking.

"Get into a limo. Get a taxi. Just don't drive."

The Dykstra-Daulton crash is not the first time that the mix of athletes, alcohol and automobiles have spelled trouble. Just the latest.

The crash occurred less than a month after Shoemaker, the winningest jockey in thoroughbred racing history, was paralyzed in an alcohol-related accident. The description of his injuries was chillingly clinical.

"Mr. Shoemaker suffered a severe fracture of the cervical spine and a spinal cord injury," doctors said. "He has no motion or sensation below his upper chest and shoulders. Prospects for a neurological recovery are poor."

His blood alcohol level was 0.13. The legal level in California, where the accident occurred, is .08.

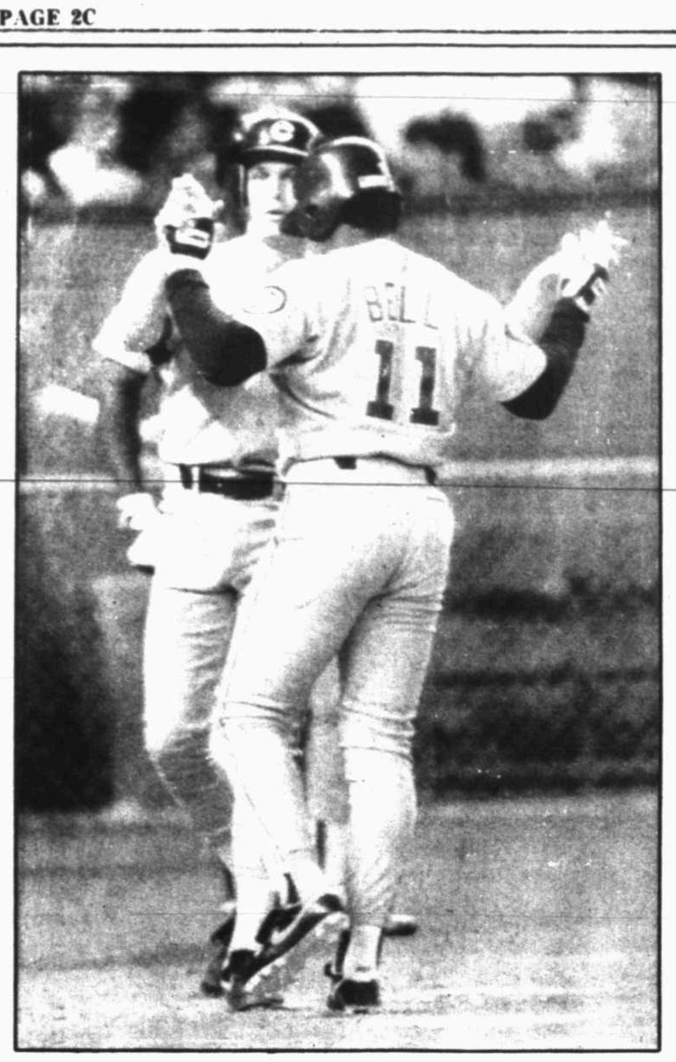

Hall of Fame pitcher Don Drysdale's blood alcohol level was .19 when he was stopped on Jan. 21. He pleaded no contest was fined $2,350 and sentenced to 200 hours community service.

Ex-Los Angeles Ram lineman Doug France's level was at .13 when he suffered a concussion and broken pelvis in an accident that killed a neighbor, Maria Conception Contreras last year. He pleaded innocent to gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated.

Chicago's George Bell (11) meets fellow Cub Mark Grace (17) after Bell's two-run home run in the fourth inning Monday.

Astros fall to Cubs, former teammate

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Dave Smith got a save in his first game back at the Astrodome and George Bell hit a two-run homer in Chicago's four-run fourth inning as the Cubs beat Houston 4-3 Monday night.

Smith, who signed as a free agent with the Cubs, pitched 11 seasons in Houston and is the Astros' all-time save leader with 199. He received a polite ovation while taking the mound in the ninth inning and retired the side in order for his sixth save, striking out one.

Greg Maddux improved to 4-1, allowing three runs and four hits in seven inning before Paul Assenmacher relieved.

Mark Grace led off the fourth with a single off Jim Deshaies (0-4) and scored on Bell's homer to left field. It was Bell's seventh homer of the season and his third in four games.

Andre Dawson ended an 0-for-14 slide with a double and scored on Hector Villanueva's double. Villaneuva went to third base on a fly ball and scored when Maddux reached base on first baseman Jeff Bagwell's fielding error.

Pirates 3, Reds 1

PITTSBURGH — Vicente Palacios gave up one run in seven-plus innings, Eric Davis' homer, and Bobby Bonilla drove in two runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Cincinnati Reds.

Orlando Merced was 3-for-4 and scored a run and Jay Bell homered as the defending National League division champions played in Pittsburgh for the first time since last season's playoffs. They split a two-game series in Cincinnati last week.

Palacios (2-0), a major reason the NL East-leading Pirates have withstood Doug Drabek's 1-5 start, survived seven walks and a pair of bases-loaded jams to one-hit the Reds for seven innings. He left after Davis broke up his shutout bid with a solo homer and Hal Morris singled to start the eighth.

Palacios was trying for his second shutout in three games. He pitched a four-hitter in an 8-0 victory April 25 over Montreal, his first major league complete game.

Expos 10, Giants 4

MONTREAL — Delino DeShields, Marquis Grissom and Tim Wallach each hit home runs in the fourth inning, leading the Montreal Expos past the San Francisco Giants 10-4.

Kevin Mitchell hit two homers for the Giants, giving him a major league-leading 10 for the season. San Francisco has lost six of its last seven games.

Don Robinson (0-1) was roughed up for seven runs and eight hits in three-plus innings in his first start of the season. The Expos scored five runs in the third inning.

Starter Dennis Martinez (4-2) opened the third with a double and moved to third base on Grissom's single. Both runners scored on Wallach's double.

NL Roundup

Dykstra, Daulton injured in accident

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Outfielder Lenny Dykstra and catcher Darren Daulton of the Philadelphia Phillies were injured in a car accident early today and were being treated for multiple injuries, hospital officials said.

The two were injured when their car struck a tree in suburban Philadelphia, Radnor Township police said. Blood tests determined Dykstra was legally drunk, with his blood alcohol content exceeding the state's legal limit of 0.10 percent, acting Radnor Township Police Chief Henry Jansen said. He declined to specify the exact percentage.

Dykstra will be charged with drunken driving, Jansen said. No tests were conducted on Daulton because he was not driving, the chief said.

Neither Dykstra nor Daulton were wearing seat belts, and the air bags in the car did not inflate because the impact came from the side, Jansen said.

Phillies spokesman Larry Shenk said the two had attended a bachelor party for teammate John Kruk and were on their way home.

Dykstra sustained multiple fractures, including a broken right rib cage, broken right collarbone and a broken right cheekbone, Bryn Mawr Hospital spokeswoman Ellen Mattes said. Dykstra, 28, also was being evaluated for chest injuries, she said.

Both men were given CAT scans to check for head injuries, but the results were not yet known, Mattes said. They were in stable and fair condition, the spokeswoman said. Neither player lost consciousness, she said.

Jansen said Dykstra was driving his red 1991 Mercedes Benz when he lost control of his car and crossed the dry road, striking two trees shortly after 1 a.m. Jansen said the car was severely damaged. He said Dykstra was traveling at an excessive speed.

The two men were dazed, but able to get out of the car before police arrived on the scene. After filing an accident report, they requested hospitalization, Mattes said.

Phillies manager Jim Fregosi joined the players in the emergency room where they were being treated by Dr. David Rose.

DWI: Too many tragic examples ignored

(From 1C)

Smith was arrested following the hit-and-run deaths of Boston University students An Trinh of Placentia, Calif., and Michelle Dartley of Ridgewood, N.J. Smith was charged with manslaughter, motor vehicle homicide, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and negligently operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol. He was indicted by a grand jury and is scheduled to be arraigned next week.

Olympic diver Bruce Kimball was legally drunk when he hit a group of Florida teen-agers. Robbie Bedell, 19, and Kevin Gossic, 16, were killed and three others were injured in the Aug. 1, 1988 accident. Kimball, a silver medalist in the 1984 Olympics, was allowed to try out for the 1988 team — he didn't make it — before being sentenced to 17 years in prison. He is now scheduled to be discharged Nov. 23, 1993.

"If he serves 100 years, it's not going to bring back the lives of those two young people," said Florida Parole Commissioner Anabel Mitchell, explaining the early release.

The list goes on.

■ Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis faces a May 20 trial in Houston on drunk driving charges. He was arrested Jan. 11 and failed a field sobriety test.

■ Jim Rooker, a former Pittsburgh pitcher and now a broadcaster for the team, faces a 90-day jail sentence after being removed from a probation program for drunk drivers because he had already been on probation for drunk driving in Florida. He was arrested Oct. 13 in Pittsburgh when he crashed a friend's car into a utility pole after the Pirates lost the NL playoffs to Cincinnati. On Dec. 12, he was arrested in Manatee County, Fla., which he failed to report when he applied for the probation program.

■ Dale Ellis, then with the Seattle SuperSonics, suffered three broken ribs and a collapsed lung when he crashed into a divider on the interstate highway in downtown Seattle Jan. 12, 1990. He was charged with drunken and reckless driving and King County Prosecutor Norm Maleng said Ellis had consumed at least four double shots of vodka in mixed drinks at a downtown bar before the accident.

■ Former Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer is due in court Tuesday in Orono, Minn., facing driving while intoxicated charges for the third time in 11 years following a March 19 arrest. He underwent alcohol rehabilitiation after being arrested for DWI in 1987, a charge of which he was later acquitted. He was arrested for a similar offense in 1980 and underwent chemical dependency two years later in California. Over a stretch of four years, there were 12 alcohol-related arrests of Viking players.

The Dykstra-Daulton accident disturbed baseball commissioner Fay Vincent. "I was very sorry to learn of the serious injuries to Len Dykstra and Darren Daulton," he said. "The only proper concern is for their well-being. I wish them well and hope their recovery is both quick and total."

In 1985, Lindbergh, the MVP goalie of the Philadelphia Flyers and Vezina Trophy winner, missed a turn and drove his Porche 930 turbo into a concrete wall next to an elementary school in Somerdale, N.J. His blood alcohol level was .17, well over the legal limit in New Jersey of .10.

In 1989, Martin, the frequent manager of the New York Yankees, was killed in a one-car accident near his home in Binghamton, N.Y. William Reedy, the driver, was convicted of driving with a blood alcohol content above the state limit of .10 and fined $350.

In 1990, Moroso, a rookie NASCAR driver, was killed when he lost control of his car in a curve and slid into the path of another vehicle. The other driver, Tammy Williams, was also killed. Police said Moroso, who had four previous drunk driving convictions, was drunk at the time, driving with a blood alcohol content of .22, more than twice the legal limit of .10.

Three months after Moroso was killed, Washington, a rookie with the Chicago Bears, and a female passenger were killed when he crashed into a tree. Both were legally drunk at the time.

"Sadly, 62 people a day die and one is injured every minute from drunk drivers," MADD's Sadoff said.

Griffeys beat Yankees, 4-2

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Sr. hit a home run and Ken Griffey Jr. had three hits as the Seattle Mariners beat the New York Yankees 4-2 Monday night to take three of four games in the series.

AL

A crowd of 24,210 watched the Mariners even their record at 13-13 to bring the attendance of the four-game series to 125,240, a single-series record in the Kingdome. The Mariners are 13-7 since an 0-6 start and have won nine of their last 10 at home.

Griffey Sr., 41, batting cleanup for the first time this season, hit his 152nd career homer and first of 1991 off starter Tim Leary (2-2) in the sixth inning to make it 3-0.

Eric Hanson (3-1) took a four-hit shutout into the eighth inning when the Yankees scored two runs on Don Mattingly's sacrifice fly and pinch-hitter Hensley Meulens' RBI single. Rob Murphy got two outs in the eighth and Billy Swift finished for his first save.

Strawberry returns to Shea

■ For the first time since he signed with the Los Angeles Dodgers, the former Met slugger returns to his old stomping grounds, and its oftimes fickle fans.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dar-ryl ... Dar-ryl ... Dar-ryl.

The chant of Darryl Strawberry's name echoing through a ballpark means different things at different times. It can be done mockingly when he misplays a fly ball, or it can be in tribute after a booming home run.

Strawberry

At Shea Stadium on Tuesday night, the chant may mean a little of both. It just depends on what Strawberry does in his return to the stadium he dominated for eight years.

The New York Mets expect a near sellout for Tuesday's game against the Los Angeles Dodgers. What the Mets can't anticipate is how Strawberry will be greeted.

"Personally, I'm not really concerned," Strawberry said. "The New York Mets are another ballclub now. Whichever way the fans respond I'm just going to respond by doing what I have to do, which is to play hard for the Los Angeles Dodgers."

He may be playing hard, but he's hardly producing. So far, he's not doing what the Dodgers had in mind when they signed him to a five-year, $20.25 million contract last November.

He is hitting .214 (16-for-84) with one home run and seven RBIs. In his last 21 at-bats, Strawberry has one hit and 12 strikeouts, including a record-tying, five-strikeout performance against Montreal last week.

It may not get easier against left-hander Frank Viola.

"He's going through a bad stage right now," manager Tommy Lasorda said. "He needs encouragement more than anything. He's trying so hard, in fact he's trying too hard and it's eating him up."

In addition to his five strikeouts last Wednesday against the Expos, he also had two errors, including a dropped fly ball for a three-base error.

"My job is to get him back where he belongs," Lasorda said. "His attitude has been great, he just has to get back in the groove. I just want him to clear his head of negative thoughts and get some positive thoughts in there."

Strawberry's miserable start, and his return to New York, has created a lot of discussion about what's bugging Dar-ryl. And everyone has an opinion.

Pitcher Bob Ojeda, who also left the Mets to play for the Dodgers, thinks Strawberry needs to play in New York before he can really let go and become a true Dodger — a catharsis of sorts.

Both coaches agreed that Grant's rebounding was a key.

"The three offensive rebounds by Grant late in the game made a big difference," Chicago's Phil Jackson said.

Both sides agreed that the 76ers played much better than they did in the opening game on Saturday, when the Bulls coasted to a 105-92 victory.

Hersey Hawkins scored 30 points, Armon Gilliam had 22 and Charles Barkley added 20. But the Bulls countered with five starters scoring in double figures. Bill Cartwright had 13 points, Grant added 11 and John Paxson had 10.

"We came out and played better offense tonight," Lynam said. "But we missed too many second shots. We have to play better defense if we want to beat these guys."

The victory was the fifth without a loss in the playoffs for the Bulls, who swept the New York Knicks in three games before taking two straight from the 76ers.

The Bulls trailed 37-33 early in the second quarter before a 7-0 run put them ahead to stay. Jordan scored five of the Bulls' last seven points as they opened up a 62-53 halftime lead. He and Hawkins each had 18 first-half points.

Chicago led 84-73 after three quarters and opened a 14-point lead when Craig Hodges opened the fourth quarter with his second 3-pointer of the game.

Hawkins' three-point play and a free throw by Barkley cut the deficit to 10 and Andre Turner kept the 76ers in the game with a pair of 3-pointers, but each time Jordan came back to score to keep the Bulls comfortably ahead until Philadelphia's final surge.

"We had trouble stopping them," Lynam said. "Every time we'd score, they'd come back with a basket."

"I don't think we played a great game but we played a good enough game," Jackson said. "We did not shoot particularly well and the game kind of lost its flow in the third quarter."

Lakers still subscribe to Showtime

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The following headline has appeared in newspapers in virtually every NBA city this season: Showtime replaced by Slowtime.

And while it's true the Los Angeles Lakers have been decelerating steadily over the past three or four years — a trend that predates defensive-minded Mike Dunleavy's arrival this season — games like Sunday's 126-116 triumph over Golden State in their Western Conference semifinal series point out that the Lakers may be at their best when they've got their track shoes on.

While the basic game plan against the Warriors was to take the ball low and take advantage of an overwhelming size advantage, the Lakers never resisted the temptation to push the ball when the opportunity arose.

"We don't want to resist. We want to run," James Worthy said. "It's their style, but it's part of our style, too. Once we were able to stop them from scoring a little bit we were able to get out and get a few easy buckets."

Which suits Dunleavy just fine.

"All I preach is, get out and go," Dunleavy said at Monday's practice at Inglewood High School. "We do it more in spurts now, but it's been a very effective weapon for us. It's broken open a lot of games for us."

BIRD: Larry had even Indiana's Chuck Person in awe

(From 1C)

Go back to Sunday when Isiah Thomas, playing with a surgically repaired wrist that was swollen and a pulled left hamstring, led Detroit over Atlanta.

Had the Pistons lost, their quest for a third straight NBA title would have ended in first-round failure. Had the Celtics lost that same day, they would have sustained their third straight first-round elimination.

Instead, they will meet in the next playoff round starting Tuesday night.

There's little doubt that Bird, who saved Boston's season, will play.

"He's probably the ultimate definition of desire," said Dave Gavitt, the Celtics senior executive vice president. "He's just unbelievably focused."

"You don't worry about it (pain) when you're on the court," Bird said. "You just go out there and play as hard as you can."

His teammates came out for the second half without him. But with 6:46 left in the third period, the same crowd that fell into a worried silence when Bird was hurt erupted in a deafening celebration.

Is that Bird coming through the runway? It is Bird!

With 7:02 left, Boston led 112-96 and Bird went out of the game. Indiana came back.

So did Bird.

He re-entered the game with the score 116-107 and 4:12 left and hit the game's next basket. The Celtics held on for a 124-121 win and a three-games-to-two series victory.

"We knew we didn't have Larry and we didn't expect him to come back at all," Boston's Reggie Lewis said of the halftime mood. "But Larry blocked out all pain and took his game to another level and then everyone else did."

Bird's status for the opener against the Pacers had been uncertain. He missed seven of the last eight regular-season games. But his brilliant performance down the stretch led Boston to a 127-120 victory.

He spent the night after that game in traction but played the entire series.

Going into Sunday's game, he had practiced just once in more than a month.

"We're thankful that he's there when the game starts," Boston coach Chris Ford said. "It's amazing to see what he's accomplished this last month without practice."

Bird long has been lauded as a player who makes his teammates better.

He draws defenders to him, opening up shots for others. He makes passes that point guards dream of. He grabs defensive rebounds and hurls pinpoint floor-length passes for easy layups.

He also makes teammates better through example. Their intensity grows when they see him perform through the pain.

"Absolutely," Gavitt said. "You hope when he retires, whenever that is, he can pass it on to the next group of young players."

The fans "were pumped up," he said. "I wasn't going to let them down."

After the game, after a series in which he and Bird traded baskets and barbs, Indiana star Chuck Person was compelled to visit the Celtics' locker room.

"I had to offer a hug and a handshake," Person said. "Today he added one more big, fat chapter to the legend of Larry Bird."

Bird scored 32 points. He won.

Mullins dies of complications from blood clot

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Chucky Mullins, the University of Mississippi football player who was paralyzed after making a tackle in a game two years ago, died Monday of complications from a blood clot in his lungs. He was 21.

Mullins, who became an inspiration for his team and university, died at 2:35 p.m. CDT at Baptist Memorial Hospital, according to hospital spokesman Michael Calhoun.

Mullins, who had regained some movement in his upper chest and hands, passed out and stopped breathing last Wednesday while dressing for class. The problem was diagnosed as a blood clot that moved to his lungs. Blood clots are common among paraplegics because of inactivity and poor circulation.

He was moved to the Memphis hospital from Oxford, Miss., last Friday.

"Physicians said the damaged suffered Wednesday (May 1) was extensive and unfortunately too much for Mr. Mullins to overcome," the hospital said in a statement.

"This is a tremendous loss for all of us," coach Billy Brewer said. "Chucky was a very special human being. He fought long and as hard as humanly possible. He never gave up."

Brewer said Mullins' courage and determination "are unequaled. We are better people for having him and we thank God for sending him to us, even though it was for a short time. We shall miss him, but we will never forget him and what he has meant to us."

"Chucky has given something to each of us, and we will remember and appreciate him for many different reasons," school chancellor Gerald Turner said in a statement from the Oxford campus.

"It is always difficult for Ole Miss to lose one of her students. This is especially so in our loss of Chucky, because we have all grown to feel very close to him through his tragedy. In the same way that words failed us when he was paralyzed, we cannot now express the extent of our sorrow."

NASCAR

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Harry Gant outfoxed the field — traveling the final 56 laps without a fuel stop — for his 12th NASCAR Winston Cup career victory in the crash-marred Winston 500 on Monday.

Gant, a 51-year-old grandfather from Taylorsville, N.C., beat his own record in becoming the oldest driver ever to win a Winston Cup event. It was the first victory for the Oldsmobile driver since the Miller 500 last year at Pocono, Pa.

After starting from the outside of the front row, Gant moved into the lead with 10 laps remaining when Ken Schrader went to the pits in his Chevrolet. Gant drafted behind teammate Rick Mast — who was not on the lead lap — until the next-to-last trip around the 2.66-mile Talladega Superspeedway oval, when Gant moved past and cruised to victory with Mast right behind him.

NASCAR officials reviewed the television replay of final lap and said there was "no conclusive evidence" that Gant got any assistance from Mast, which would have been a rules violation.

A massive wreck on the 71st lap knocked polesitter Ernie Irvan out of contention and forced officials to halt the race for 33 minutes to clean the track. The only serious injury was to Kyle Petty, whose left leg was broken.

NHL Playoffs

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Dave Gagner had three assists and Bobby Smith scored the winner on a fine individual effort as the Minnesota North Stars took a 2-1 lead in the Stanley Cup semifinals with a victory over the defending champion Edmonton Oilers.

Brian Bellows twice for Minnesota, which is 18-2-2 at Met Center since Jan. 17 and hosts Game 4 Wednesday night. The North Stars' first home playoff victory ever against Edmonton gave them a 6-1 record at Met Center in this year's playoffs.

Trying to reach the Stanley Cup finals for the first time since 1981, the North Stars have already beaten Chicago and St. Louis, the NHL's top two regular-season teams. Minnesota had the 16th-best record and finished 12 points behind No. 11 Edmonton.

After going 4-0-2 at Minnesota from 1986-90, the Oilers are 0-3 at Met Center this season and have been outscored 17-5. Edmonton, 6-0 in Campbell Conference championship series and winner of five of the last seven Stanley Cups, needs a victory Wednesday to avoid falling into a deep hole.

Only eight teams in NHL history have rallied from 3-1 series deficits.

For the ninth time in 15 playoff games, the North Stars scored in the first five minutes. Of Minnesota's 57 postseason goals, 26 have come in the opening period.

Crude gains

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 31 cents to close at $21.68.

Local crude buyers such as Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 50 cents to $20.50.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks recovered from initial lows to close mixed Monday after traders extracted gains from earlier rallies and kept an ear out for reports of President Bush's health.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 2.78 to 2,941.64. But the broader market didn't fare as well. Declining issues edged advances, with 793 down, 741 up and 532 unchanged in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar closed lower Monday after fluctuating in a session driven by concerns about President Bush's health and interest rates.

The dollar, seen as a safe haven during times of international strife, was further boosted by reports of unrest in the Soviet Union. But concerns about interest rates drove the currency back down.

The dollar fell to 1.7325 marks in New York from 1.74825 late Friday.

The financial markets were closed Monday in Tokyo for a national holiday, but the Japanese yen was traded in the United States and Europe.

The dollar fell to 138.185 yen in New York from 138.85 yen late Friday, and in European trading, the dollar was quoted at 138.70 Japanese yen.

Markets were also closed for a holiday in London. The British pound gained ground in U.S. and European trading, rising to $1.7100 in New York from $1.6940 late Friday. On the continent, sterling was quoted at $1.6990 compared with $1.6965 in London late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.4675 Swiss francs, down from 1.4760; 5.8625 Swiss francs, down from 5.9125; 1,282.25 Italian lire, down from 1,294.75; and 1.15055 Canadian dollars, down from 1.15125.

AT&T, NCR agree on merger

NEW YORK (AP) — AT&T and NCR Corp. announced today that the computer maker will merge with the long-distance telephone giant in a deal valued at about $7.4 billion, capping one of the biggest takeover battles in several years.

The deal gives American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a major new thrust into the computer business. NCR shareholders will get $110 worth of AT&T shares for each NCR share.

NCR, the nation's fifth largest computer maker, had long resisted AT&T, which first expressed an interest late last year. At several points in the maneuvering, NCR said it would never agree to a takeover but agreed to negotiate nonetheless.

"The company that will emerge will be uniquely equipped to meet what customers will need in the future — global computer networks as easy to use and as accessible as the telephone network is today," AT&T Chairman Robert Allen said in a statement.

NCR Chairman Charles Exley said in the statement: "Both sides anticipate a high degree of cooperation during the interim period. I have no doubt that together we can do what needs to be done."

NCR stock rose 50 cents a share to $103.50 on the New York Stock Exchange after the late-morning announcement. AT&T stock fell 37½ cents a share to $36.75.

AT&T first publicly offered to buy NCR for $90 a share in stock in December and Exley rebuffed the proposal, saying NCR was worth $125 a share or about $8.5 billion.

AT&T called the price too high and began what NCR considered a less-than-friendly campaign to buy the company with strategies that included a direct pitch to NCR's shareholders in a tender offer, lawsuits against NCR's anti-takeover protection and a proxy battle to oust the company's directors.

At a special shareholders meeting in late March, the telephone company won four seats on NCR's board, giving AT&T some additional leverage.

NCR, based in Dayton, Ohio, was founded more 100 years ago as the National Cash Register Co. and remained a dominant force in the automated cash register business, as well as a leader in computerized operations such as automated teller machines for banks. NCR will be absorbed into AT&T.

AT&T, the nation's biggest long-distance company, has been seeking for years to gain a competitive foothold in the computer industry, with poor results.

OXY, Dallas group strike new venture

■ Deal is first of Occidental's major assets to be sold in a $3 billion debt reduction program, company's CEO says.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas investment firm has teamed with Occidental Petroleum Corp. in a $700 million deal to acquire the natural-gas liquids business of OXY USA, Inc. a subsidiary of the Los Angeles energy giant.

Hicks, Muse and Co. and Occidental said today they had agreed to form a 50-50 venture, Trident Energy Co., to take over OXY's natural-gas liquids business, based in Tulsa, Okla.

The deal is the first of Occidental's major assets to be sold in a $3 billion debt reduction program, said Ray R. Irani, the company's chief executive. The company has made some smaller sales already.

"This transaction allows us to take a significant amount of case out of the natural-gas liquids business while retaining a 50 percent ownership position," Irani said.

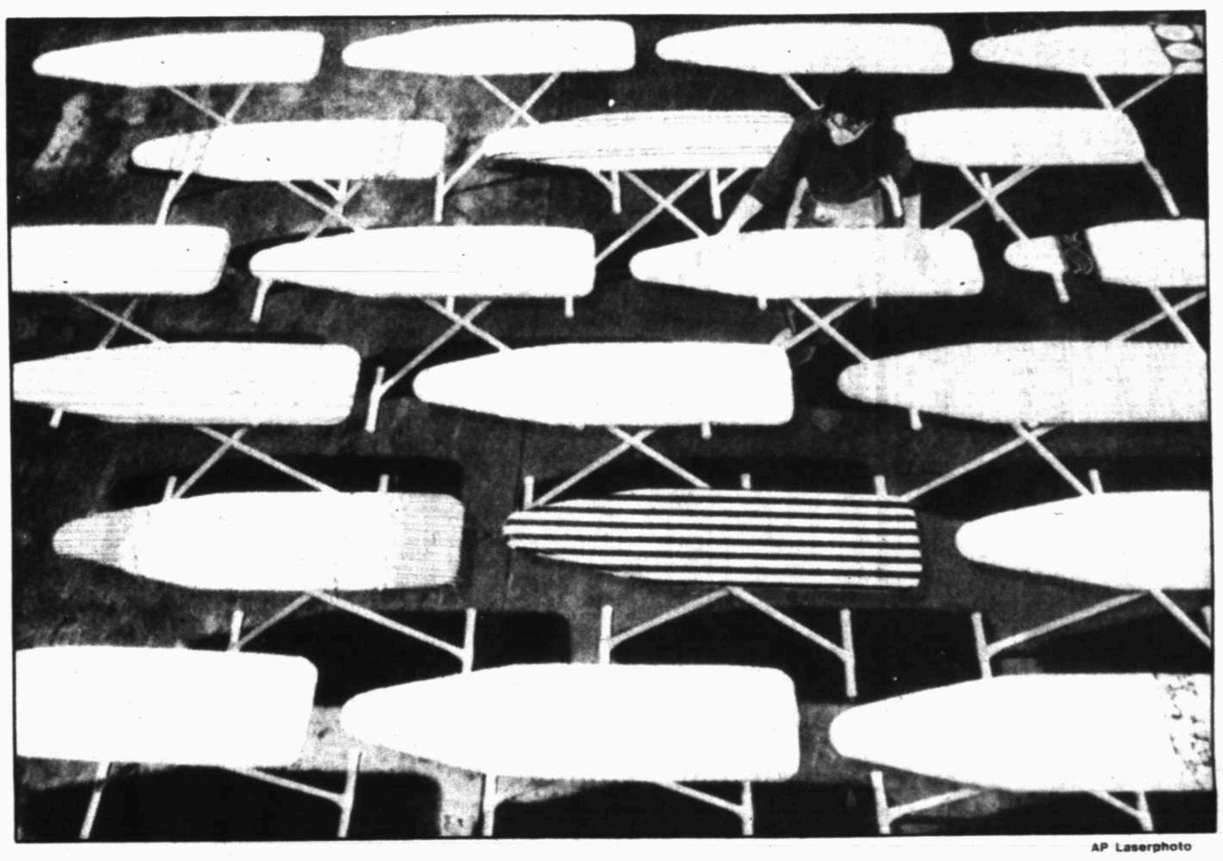

Hicks, Muse said both it and Occidental would invest $100 million in equity for the Trident venture. The rest of the purchase would be debt financed.

"We identified gas liquids as an attractive niche business a year ago," said Thomas O. Hicks, chief executive of the Dallas investment company.

John Muse, the company's managing director, said OXY USA's natural gas liquids assets are "strategically well positioned and will enable Trident Energy to grow from a strong base."

The liquids OXY USA's natural gas business produces and sells include propane, ethane, natural gasoline, butane and isobutane.

The business has a stake in 40 gas processing plants and facilities, four pipelines, storage facilities and a deep water import terminal.

USX shareholders OK 2-class stock plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Stockholders of USX Corp., the nation's largest steel maker, overwhelmingly approved a plan Monday that creates two classes of stock.

The plan by the Pittsburgh energy and steel giant ends a five-year effort by USX's largest single shareholder, financier Carl C. Icahn, to boost USX's stock price by separating the cyclical steel business from the conglomerate's energy unit.

The plan, voted on by stockholders at the company's annual meeting Monday in Houston, passed with 96.4 percent approval. No one at the meeting spoke in opposition to the plan.

Last year, stockholders meeting in Findlay, Ohio, defeated Icahn's proposal to spin off 80 percent of USX's steel unit.

Changes at USX come against a backdrop of increasing shareholder activism, particularly among pension funds and other institutional investors. The investors used to dump their stock when they were unhappy with a company's performance. Now, they are using their stakes as leverage to bring about change.

"What's happening at USX is reflective of what's going to be happening more and more," said John Pound, a Harvard University professor and expert on corporate governance issues.

Pound was one of five members of Icahn's USX Shareholders Advisory Committee. Icahn subsidized committee members and threatened to run them as a slate of directors unless USX took steps toward restructuring.

Apple to offer extensive upgrading to the Macintosh

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — System 7, the long-awaited upgrading of Apple Computer Inc.'s Macintosh operating system, is scheduled to be introduced next Monday.

By offering Macintosh users new abilities to exchange data between computers and between different programs, the new software could lift sales of Apple's more expensive machines, just as those machines have begun to lag.

Apple, which had long emphasized expensive machines, shifted last October toward lower-priced machines to gain market share. Its cheapest machine, the Macintosh Classic, has been a rousing success, but analysts say Apple needs to beef up the upper end of its line.

The Cupertino, Calif., company shocked Wall Street last week by announcing it would have lower profits than expected in the current quarter, in part because its sales mix shifted more quickly than expected toward the lower-priced machines, which have lower profit margins.

For that reason, System 7, which was announced two years ago and is more than a year late in reaching the market, is coming at an advantageous time. It will provide Macintoshes with advanced abilities that will appeal mainly to users whose Macintoshes are connected to networks in big corporations.

Some of these features have started to show up in operating systems.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Despite falling rates, Treasury note wise buy

By Bill Doyle

Q. We have an $80,000 U.S. Treasury note at 9.125 percent interest due to mature in September. We will need to reinvest the money at that time. Since we cannot afford to lose any of this, as it is a big portion of our life savings, should we reinvest in another Treasury note or something else?

Doyle

We also have approximately $40,000 in individual retirement accounts, which we don't need to draw on at this time. Social Security benefits, a small pension and interest from the Treasury note pretty well cover our living expenses. I am 68 and my wife is 65.

A. There are many places you could reinvest the $80,000 come September. Considering your overall financial situation, however, a Treasury note will be a wise choice. No one can tell you, for sure, it will be the best choice. But, assuming you hold it until maturity, it will be rock-solid safe. And it will pay reasonably good interest.

At this point, it's impossible to guess what interest rate the U.S. Treasury will have to pay on notes, bonds and bills issued in September or any other future time to finance the horrendous national debt. Nevertheless, considering the fact that interest rates have come down during the past couple of years, it's most unlikely you'll get 9.125 percent.

My advice is to be satisfied with whatever rate is available on Treasury notes when yours matures. The psychological value of safety in Treasury securities is worth more than somewhat higher interest on less safe investments.

Q. I am a single, 62-year-old woman planning to retire in three years. I have no relatives and I live a very conservative life style.

My net annual income, which includes interest on $140,000 of certificates of deposit and dividends on $1,700 of stock, is approximately $32,000. I also have $28,000 in an individual retirement account and $114,000 in my company's savings plans, including a 401(k).

It has been suggested I invest part of what I have in CDs in U.S. Treasury bills to help alleviate my tax situation. What suggestions do you have?

A. Interest from U.S. Treasury securities — bills, notes and bonds — is subject to federal income tax, but not to state and local income tax. CD interest gets nicked for all income taxes. Because you didn't list your address, it's impossible to say whether a move to T bills will save tax dollars. It does for folks in high-tax states.

Although there have been times when the situation has been different, most CDs usually pay higher interest than T bills of similar maturities. T bills come due in either 13, 26 or 52 weeks.

My suggestion is to go for somewhat longer term investments. Treasury notes, which are available with maturities ranging from two to 10 years, seem suitable for you. By spreading $120,000 around in two-, three-, four-, five-, six- and seven-year notes — $20,000 in each — you will have a conservative investment program providing good interest.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock traders turned their attention elsewhere after President Bush returned to the White House today. Stock prices continued heading lower as the market consolidates past gains.

Declining issues led advances by a ratio of about 3-to-2, with 870 down, 553 up and 569 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks initially edged lower following President Bush's weekend hospitalization for treatment of a rapid heartbeat. Traders turned their attention elsewhere once the president was discharged from the hospital and returned to the Oval Office.

Analysts said stock prices were falling victim to a period of consolidation, an effort to distribute the gains following a brisk rally that began Jan. 17.

Traders also are cautious because of several key economic events developing this week — the auction of $37 billion in new U.S. Treasury securities and release of April's report on producer prices.

AT&T and NCR Corp. announced a merger today under which the computer maker will be absorbed into the long-distance telephone giant in a deal valued at about $7.4 billion. The announcement sent AT&T's stock down ¼ to 36⅝; NCR's shares were unchanged at 103½.

American Express was down ¼ at 25⅝ following its discussions with California insurance regulators about supporting First Capital Holdings, which American Express owns a 28 percent stake.

Active issues included Alcan Aluminum Ltd., down ⅛ at 20⅝; Blockbuster Enterprises, down ½ at 10; and RJR Nabisco, down ¼ at 10⅞.

Japanese appear to withhold technology, Bentsen charges

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Monday that Japan appears to be withholding some of its leading-edge electronics technology from American companies.

Bentsen said those protectionist actions clearly show the need for government-business partnerships such as the Sematech semiconductor research group.

"The Persian Gulf and (Operation) Desert Storm showed our dependence on electronics in modern warfare to the security of our country. It's essential that we have the capability of doing these things," the Texas Democrat said.

After touring Sematech's Austin headquarters, Bentsen said he has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate charges that the Japanese are withholding key technology.

"One of the things that concerns me, in the reports that we've seen, is that some of the Japanese industry is withholding some of the best of their electronics, as far as basic supplies and parts, and not making them available to United States markets," Bentsen said.

"And when we finally do get some of that available, we find a markup of 20 and 30 percent above what they offer it to Japanese companies. That, of course, makes if very difficult for us," he said.

Sematech is a consortium formed by 14 American semiconductor manufacturers and the federal government, started in 1988 to regain the world lead in microchip manufacturing technology for the United States.

The group includes the top seven suppliers of integrated circuits for the U.S. Defense Department, which supply about 80 percent of the department's needs.

"Sematech helps ... in seeing that we don't have such reliance on some of these (Japanese) breakthroughs, that we do it on our own," Bentsen said.

The senator and Sematech officials cited several examples of semiconductor manufacturing technology being kept from American companies.

They said Japanese suppliers are reluctant to sell some of their newest equipment to U.S. companies as part of a strategy for worldwide domination of the industry.

"I think it shows that they are going to do everything they can in the way of national objectives to see that they continue to improve market share around the world," Bentsen said.

"You're seeing a very close cooperation between government and finance over there and the private sector. I think it's imperative that we see more of that in this country," he said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

Sematech, which receives $100 million a year in federal funds, is on course, Bentsen said, adding that he expects to see government funding continued after 1993.

"The idea that you could turn it all around in five years ... I think is not realistic. It has been productive enough, we're making enough headway, that I think it justifies continued support. I'll be working very hard to do that," Bentsen said.

Southwest introduces 'kids fly free' promotion

DALLAS (NYT) — Southwest Airlines, which began business 20 years ago by saying it wanted to compete against the automobile for business travelers, says it hopes to compete this summer against the family car for vacationers.

The Dallas airline on Monday introduced a "Kids Fly Free" promotion that it said is aimed primarily at the family that ordinarily would take a driving vacation to a destination a relatively short distance away from home.

But it remains to be seen whether Southwest's new "Kids Fly Free" promotion will stir the kind of widespread interest among consumers that a very different, industrywide promotion by the same name did two summers ago.

Southwest's new promotion, unlike the 1989 Kids Fly Free program — in which Southwest did not participate — ties the free tickets for children to the use of full, unrestricted coach fares by the adult accompanying them. In 1989, kids flew free even if the adult with them was traveling on the lowest-priced discount fare available.

Wage gap a major concern in free-trade pact

By Bill Mintz
and Dudley Althaus
Hearst News Service

MEXICO CITY — Bringing home just $50 a week from his assembly line job at Ford Motor Co.'s sprawling plant on the northern edge of Mexico City, Jose Sanchez sees his family slowly slipping into the poverty and despair that engulfs many Mexicans.

More than half his earnings go to pay rent on a cramped apartment near the plant, Sanchez says. What is left goes for food for his wife and two young daughters.

"Meat, what's meat?" Sanchez, 24, asks with a sarcastic chuckle. "We're eating beans in my house because that is all we can afford. The pay doesn't go very far."

About 2,000 miles away, Jean Layne lives with her 4-year-old son, Matthew, in a pleasant neighborhood of brick and frame homes in Ypsilanti, Mich., a Detroit suburb a few miles from her job at Ford's Wayne assembly plant. Layne earns $16.60 per hour, or about $660 per week.

"I have to say yes, I get a pretty good wage. But we work hard," said Layne, 36, who has worked at Ford for 17 years. "I'm a single mother, and I own my own house. There aren't many jobs like that."

The stark differences in living standards between Sanchez and Layne have become one of the pivotal issues in the debate over a proposed North American Free Trade Agreement.

Critics — including the United Auto Workers, Layne's union — say the agreement will only accelerate the exodus of U.S. jobs to Mexico, where labor rates are much cheaper. And, they say, the promise of economic benefit in some other sectors of the U.S. economy offers little solace to manufacturing workers thrown out of work.

But Bush administration officials say that a free-trade agreement is essential to economic progress in Mexico and a higher standard of living for workers like Sanchez. They say increased trade among the United States, Mexico and Canada will bring added prosperity – and more job opportunities – in all three nations.

Last week, Bush pledged to include a strong job security program in the final trade accord.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills argues that jobs won't flee to Mexico en masse because the difference in wages between the two countries is a reflection of differences in productivity.

But even Ford officials say the auto assembly operations at modern plants like those in Hermosillo, Mexico, and Wayne are almost identical.

In 1989, Ford officials judged that the Mercury Tracer subcompacts produced at a Ford plant in Hermosillo were the company's highest quality product. The Hermosillo plant also produces Ford Escorts — the same model made by Layne and her co-workers in Wayne.

Both the Wayne and Hermosillo plants represent $1 billion investments for Ford. The Hermosillo plant was built about five years ago, when Ford was pressured by the Mexican government to increase its exports from Mexico as a condition for selling cars in the country.

At the Wayne assembly plant, the parking lot is filled with pickup trucks and other Ford products, purchased with the help of a company discount.

But the Ford workers in Mexico still live far below the standard set by Henry Ford in 1915, when he doubled wages paid his Detroit workers to $5 a day. Ford said his company had to pay workers enough to afford to buy the cars they produced.

That apparently didn't translate to Mexico. With new car prices about the same as those in the United States and annual wages peaking at about $6,000, few of Ford's Mexican workers can afford to buy their own product. Most workers either walk to the factory or arrive in public or company buses.

Wage and price controls begun three years ago have kept working-class salaries tightly in check while only slowing the rising costs of food and clothing.

Consequently, money doesn't stretch much further in today's Mexico than it does in the United States. While a working class apartment can be had for $100 a month, food in many cases has become at least as expensive as it is in Texas.

Prices for rice, beans and tortillas are controlled by the government and are still affordable. Those commodities remain the staples of the lower-class diet.

"No, you can't live well on these wages, but they are good in relation to other factories," admits Ricardo Chavez, a leader of the National Union of Ford Motor Company Workers, the government-approved union for the company's 7,000 Mexican workers.

But the wages remain shocking by U.S. standards. Nearly half the plant's 4,100 workers earn the plant's basic wage of $58 a week. Only 300 workers – the well-trained maintenance technicians – earn top scale of $120 a week. Taxes take at least a 15 percent bite of the paychecks.

Ford pays an additional 12 percent of the monthly wages – between $30 and $63 – into a special savings plan for each worker, which can be drawn on immediately, union official Chavez said.

Mexican labor unions have not helped much in boosting workers' wages.

Workers' efforts to organize dissident unions in the past 18 months have led to violent confrontations at Ford's Cuautitlan plant, at the giant Modelo brewery in Mexico City and several copper mines around the country. In each case, the union bosses sided with the companies against the workers and government sent in police or troops to end the labor strife.

The Cuautitlan plant was the scene of a bitter dispute 15 months ago between the "official" union linked with the government-controlled Mexican Workers Confederation, or CTM, and a dissident workers group.

Some 750 workers were fired by Ford and replaced with new hires. Those workers still picket outside the plant's front gate, trying to stop the second shift from entering the plant. Their efforts are always broken up by riot police.

Some observers say that it will take more than Mexico's low wages to capture jobs from the United States.

Christopher M. Bates of the Motor and Equipment Manufacturers Association, an auto parts industry group, says that if Mexican trade barriers are dropped, jobs will go where production is most efficient.

Mexico's local content rules for cars sold there result in inefficient production. He predicts low-skilled, labor-intensive jobs, such as assembling wire harnesses for auto electrical systems, would be performed in Mexico, while higher-skilled jobs would remain in the United States.

Ford spokesman Peter Olsen says the experience in the integrated market of the European Community shows that wages are only one factor in investment decisions.

"The wages in Spain and Portugal are only a fraction of wages in Germany and the United Kingdom," he says. "If wages were the primary driving force, you would have a tremendous exodus out of Germany and the U.K. Obviously, other factors – the work force, proximity to markets, investment climate – go into the decision."

But Harley Shaiken, a professor at the University of California at San Diego, disagrees.

"The quality and productivity in Mexico's high-technology, advanced manufacturing plants is often equal to or higher than quality and productivity in U.S. plants," he says.

Shaiken says some of the most advanced jobs could end up in Mexico. That prospect is particularly worrisome to the UAW in the United States, which has fought for job and income security for auto workers.

Greyhound: Union pushes company to bankruptcy

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. violated federal labor laws in its bargaining tactics with a union for bus drivers, a government attorney alleged Monday in opening arguments of a labor hearing.

Benjamin Mandelman, an attorney for the National Labor Relations Board, said Greyhound's tactics were aimed at breaking Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local, the sole union for its drivers.

But company attorney Rosemary Collyer said the union planned a "campaign of violence and intimidation" to force concessions from Greyhound. She said the union was to blame for the bitter 14-month strike and never intended to negotiate a fair contract.

"The strike was on automatic, the strike was also very effective," Collyer said in opening statements at a hearing that formally began in January but was delayed four months.

The violence-marred strike included several sniper attacks and 40 shootings on buses. Though the company is based in Dallas, the union filed its complaint in Milwaukee, where it is being heard by NLRB Administrative Law Judge Robert Giannasi.

When the strike began, Greyhound continued normal operations with 3,000 replacement workers but filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in June.

The union filed a complaint alleging that Greyhound bargained unfairly with its bus drivers, illegally fired them after the strike began and threatened strikers with loss of jobs and seniority.

A ruling against Greyhound could win back wages for 6,000 striking drivers and force the company to sell its assets to a group that has already signed an agreement with workers, union officials said.

Mandelman said the company violated federal labor laws when it declared an impasse March 2, 1990, and implemented its own contract proposal without union consent.

"The union clearly states that it would alter its proposal if any movement was seen on the part of the employer," Mandelman said. "The union had no plan to drive this company into bankruptcy, the union wanted a contract."

But Collyer said the union was unrealistic about what the company could afford to offer. She said the company proposed a three-year, $63 million pact, which was rejected by the union. Greyhound said the contract would boost the average annual salary of its 1,500 highest-paid drivers from $33,218 to $40,725.

When talks broke down, the union and Greyhound were $172 million apart, and the two sides were never closer than $100 million, she said.

"There was no more money to offer then and the union to this day continues to refuse economic reality," she said.

Harcourt Brace to merge its college divisions in Texas

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., one of the nation's top textbook publishers, plans to merge its two college divisions and move editorial and marketing employees from California and Illinois to its existing operations in downtown Fort Worth.

The exact number of new jobs that will be added here is still unclear, but a spokesman for the publishing giant said on Monday that a majority of its nearly 170 college textbook employees now working in San Diego, Calif., and Hinsdale, Ill., will be asked to make the move.

Harcourt, which is headquartered in Orlando, Fla., already employs about 100 at its Holt, Rinehart and Winston college division in City Center Tower II.

The relocation continues the company's migration to Sun Belt states and is expected to give the publisher a stronger presence in what has become a fiercely competitive college textbook market, said C. Anson Franklin, a spokesman for Harcourt. Harcourt moved the headquarters of Holt, Rinehart and Winston to Fort Worth from New York in late 1988.

"It will be a significant expansion of our operations in Fort Worth," Franklin said.

The transition is expected to be completed by the end of September, he said. Although he said Harcourt should gain some cost savings from the move, he stressed the consolidation was driven by strategic reasons, not a desire to trim expenses.

"This was not a financial decision," Franklin said.

Last year, Harcourt reported a loss of $81 million that was due, in part, to heavy interest expense. The company amassed nearly $2 billion in debt fighting off a 1987 takeover bid by British publisher Robert Maxwell.

Overall, its various publishing companies contributed about $936 million in revenues last year, compared with $886 in 1989. In addition to its publishing interests, Harcourt is an underwriter for life, health and accident insurance.

To help pay down its debt, Harcourt has looked at a number of alternatives. Earlier this year, the company was negotiating a $1.4 billion merger.

DEAR ABBY

Kids need prayers, and more, to break cycle of abuse

DEAR ABBY: As staff of the Exchange Club Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse of Southern Minnesota Inc., we would like people to know that America's national disgrace and most chilling crime is turning into an epidemic! A total of 2.4 million reports of child abuse and neglect were recorded by the nation's child welfare system last year. Child abuse continues to get worse, and our response as a nation has not always been the most effective. According to recent estimates, up to 5,000 children die each year as a direct result of abuse by a parent or guardian. More than 50 percent of the victims are less than a year old!

Van Buren

Abby, please publish this prayer to show that child abuse is everyone's problem, and that we need to work together to break the cycle.

A PRAYER FOR CHILDREN

"We pray for children who put chocolate fingers everywhere, who like to be tickled, who stomp in puddles and ruin their new pants, who sneak Popsicles before supper, who erase holes in math workbooks, who can never find their shoes.

"And we pray for those who stare at photographers from behind barbed wire, who can't bound in the street in a new pair of sneakers, who never go to the circus, who live in an X-rated world.

"We pray for children who bring us sticky kisses and fistfuls of dandelions, who sleep with the dog and bury the goldfish, who hug us in a hurry and forget their lunch money, who cover themselves with Band-Aids and sing off-key, who squeeze toothpaste all over the sink, who slurp their soup.

"And we pray for those who never get dessert, who have no safe blanket to drag behind them, who watch their parents watch them die, who can't find any bread to steal, who don't have any rooms to clean up, whose pictures aren't on anybody's dresser, whose monsters are real.

"We pray for children who spend all their allowance before Tuesday, who throw tantrums in the grocery store and pick at their food, who like ghost stories, who shove dirty clothes under the bed and never rinse the tub, who get visits from the tooth fairy, who don't like to be kissed in front of the carpool, who squirm in church and scream in the phone, whose tears we sometimes laugh at, and whose smiles can make us cry.

"We pray for those whose nightmares come in the daytime, who will eat anything, who aren't spoiled by anybody, who go to bed hungry and cry themselves to sleep, and who live and move, but have no being.

"We pray for children who want to be carried and for those who must, for those we never give up on and for those who don't get a second chance. For those we smother ... and for those who will grab the hand of anybody kind enough to offer it." — Ina J. Hughes

Abby, please help us erase this national tragedy of child abuse by urging your readers to get involved in their local child abuse prevention effort. Help us to help others to see that a child is too great a gift to abuse. — PATRICIA KNIEFEL, DIRECTOR

AT WIT'S END

You can buy this lifesaver for a song

Modern-day Americans can lose their teeth, their spouses, their jobs or their will to live, but most of us go nuts if we misplace our credit cards.

Bombeck

Lost-credit-card anxiety has afflicted everyone I know at one time or another — especially those who can't claim a package and a credit card at the same time. Every time I shuffle through my stack of plastic to make a purchase, I have a fear of not having a full deck.

At night I used to lie in bed and hear water running under the house or worry about the front door being unlocked. Those things aren't important to me anymore. Now I wake up in a cold sweat and announce, "Get dressed! I think I left my credit card at Sears."

You can imagine my accelerated heart rate when I was reading through a magazine recently and saw that the Japanese have created an ingenious solution to keeping your plastic intact. It's a device that attaches to the card. As long as it's in the dark, nothing happens, but when you expose it to light it plays a tune like "Ave Maria" or "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

(Don't laugh. My mother has a toilet seat that plays "Lara's Theme" from "Dr. Zhivago." And that serves no purpose whatsoever. What are you going to do — ask someone to dance?)

The idea was hatched by a Tokyo man, Hiroshi Majima, while he was on vacation and a fellow traveler lost his passport, causing delays for the entire tour group. He is now president of the company that manufactures the device.

If I didn't know better, I would have thought he was traveling with my husband. On a trip a couple of years ago, in one day he left his passport on a London hotel TV set and had to pay $50 to put it in a cab to the airport. Then, hours later, he left his camera in an X-ray machine. And when we got to Naples, he forgot his credit card at the car rental counter.

Frankly, if I attached a little card-sized lyrical microchip to every item he has been known to leave in hotel rooms or lose along the way, I might as well travel with the New York Philharmonic. It would be quieter.

Even with a selection of 100 tunes for your various credit cards, there could be problems at the cash register between customer and salesperson:

"That's not my 'Ave Maria,' dear. My Saks card plays 'The Impossible Dream.'"

"No, you gave me the 'Ave Maria.' The woman over there gave me 'Row, Row, Row Your Boat.'"

Group acquires waterfowl site

SAN FRANCISCO (HNS) — One of the most important wintering sites for migratory waterfowl in the Western Hemisphere, 14,000 acres abutting the Sacramento River in Butte County, has been acquired by a public-private consortium for $13.7 million.

The Nature Conservancy joined with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the state Department of Fish & Game and the Wildlife Conservation Board to preserve the wildlife habitat on the Parrott Ranch beteen Chico and Willows, Calif.

Up to 150,000, or 30 percent of all mallards wintering in the Central Valley, have been sighted on the property at one time. Twenty percent of all wood ducks in California, about 10,000, also winter on the ranch, along with thousands of sandhill cranes.

California Nature Conservancy director Steve McCormick said the Parrott Ranch property is "the largest remaining unprotected block of valley oak and cottonwood forest along the Sacramento River."

"I've never seen such a wide variety of waterfowl," U.S. Fish and Wildlife realty specialist Steve Dyer said Tuesday in an interview.

Under the complicated agreement announced this week, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will own 9,300 acres and the Nature Conservancy and the Department of Fish and Game will own the rest.

Study: Kansas ranch suitable as national prairie monument

WASHINGTON (AP) — An 11,000-acre ranch in the Flint Hills of Kansas is suitable for establishment by the government as a tallgrass prairie preserve, the National Park Service concluded in a study released recently.

The study said the Z-Bar Ranch "depicts significant natural history, architectural and historic themes which are not adequately represented elsewhere" in the national park system.

The agency said the ranch near Strong City, Kan., about 130 miles southwest of Kansas City, could be designated a national historic landmark or national natural landmark.

Most of the area from central Texas to southern Saskatchewan, covering all or part of Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and the Dakotas, was tallgrass prairie when Spanish explorers in the 16th Century came across a "sea of grass." Settlers put the land under the plow and little original prairie is left.

"When traveling to the Z-Bar Ranch, a visitor is exposed to some of the most dramatic landscapes of tallgrass prairie that exist anywhere," the study said. "Seemingly endless miles of rolling grasslands stretch out to surround the visitor from horizon to horizon."

The study said the Flint Hills region contains the most extensive segments of undisturbed tallgrass prairie on the continent.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., has said he will introduce legislation seeking money to buy the ranch and establish it as the Prairie National Monument.

However, a group of local ranchers and landowners oppose the park proposal. Opponents object to government ownership of the property and say it could lead to federal controls on surrounding private ranch land.

The National Park Service did not formally propose the ranch be immediately acquired, but said it "will consider pursuing" specific proposals when money becomes available.

TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The tough decisions you make now will have a far-reaching effect on your career. Let business developments unfold naturally in September. A raise or promotion will give you greater financial security in November. Tie up loose ends at year's end. Travel for both work and pleasure in February 1992. A close relationship will benefit from reassessment next March.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball manager Dick Williams, actor Darren McGavin, quarterback Johnny Unitas, composer Johannes Brahms.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The urge to travel is almost irresistible today but can you really afford it? Know your priorities. A phone call from someone at a distance could disrupt your social plans. Guard valuables.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day to start something new. Homemakers discover ways to make money from their creative and artistic talents. Approach a potential romantic partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A "crisis" is not as bad as it seems. Although you now assume more control in a relationship, this could have its own pitfalls. A major purchase will ease your office or domestic workload.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Protect your reputation by guarding your business secrets. Accepting a challenge boosts your status. A hostile co-worker will leave. You need not prove yourself to a current love.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be preoccupied with a problem that will solve itself. A friend that you help will return the favor. Begin a home improvement project. You hit on a clever way to save money.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although an apology could convince a former love to return, you may not be interested! Essential work deserves top priority. Avoid spending too much time on minor details.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Go the extra mile in love, business or friendship. A last-ditch effort will succeed. Follow up a hunch — it could lead to new clients. Profits from a recent investment brighten your afternoon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick to a timetable and your productivity will double. A favorite hobby may be very costly; find someone to share expenses. Physical activity will make you feel better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your earning power is enhanced by your ability to learn quickly. Family traditions may hinder your personal growth; reconsider them. Others may not be as practical or punctual as you are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Confidential information could reach you through unusual channels. Doubt its validity until you have checked it out. Lower your expectations and a current romance will go more smoothly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your forthright manner convinces others that you are right. Make an inquiry regarding an overpayment. Although a message buoys your spirits, it may not help a relationship the way you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your loyalty may be torn. Try to stay neutral. You must take the initiative where romance is concerned. An associate's criticism will only intensify your desire to succeed at work.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are slow to anger, quick to forgive. Loyalty and hard work are their hallmarks. A vivid imagination gives these Taureans a leg up in the creative arts. They are great storytellers and should be encouraged to write down the tales they invent. An interest in cooking could lead to a weight problem unless they develop the habit of exercising regularly. A tendency to spend money too freely can be nipped in the bud if the parents of these children put them on an allowance.

Opening lead: King of ♡ Times have changed. Many years ago players cited as gospel: "Never lead away from a king." We know of a defender who, forced to launch the attack and looking at all four kings, refused to get the game started! Nowadays, when an aggressive opening lead is required, most experts will prefer to lead away from a king than from many "safer" holdings.

Note North's second double. Since his first double was for takeout and South had not yet spoken, the second double is still for takeout. Once a spade fit was located, North needed so little from partner to make game that the jump to four spades cannot be faulted.

West led the king of hearts, and the sight of dummy brought little warmth to the cockles of the defenders' hearts. Obviously there were no tricks to be had in trumps, and the fact that the queen of clubs was destined to drop meant no tricks from that suit either.

If the contract could be defeated, the defenders were going to need three tricks from the diamond suit. Since declarer was missing at most the ace-king of the suit, the third trick would have to come from a defensive ruff. Only one lie of the cards offered any chance of that—East would have to hold specifically a doubleton ace of diamonds.

Having worked that out, West wasted no time, shifting at trick two to a low diamond. East rose with the ace, returned the suit to partner's king, and a diamond continuation permitted East to ruff for the setting trick.

Attorney: Cantinflas settles lawsuit with former girlfriend

HOUSTON — Comic actor Mario Moreno, who portrayed David Niven's faithful companion in "Around the World in 80 Days," settled a lawsuit filed by his longtime girlfriend, his attorney said.

The Mexican film star popularly known as Cantinflas had a relationship with Joyce Jett of Houston for 22 years, but Moreno said they never married.

In June 1990, a Harris County family court judge awarded Jett a $26 million settlement as Moreno's common-law wife, but Moreno refused to pay and countersued in Mexico, accusing Jett and her attorneys of blackmail and claiming common-law marriages are not binding there.

Moreno's lawyer, Arturo Mora Saavedra, said Sunday the out-of-court settlement disposes of all legal action in the case. Jett already had taken possession of a condominium in Houston and several automobiles.

Moreno participated in a Cinco de Mayo celebration Sunday in Houston, but he wouldn't comment.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Country singer Johnny PayCheck, who served two years in prison for wounding a man in a barroom shooting, will play a trailer park resident in a new movie, the producer said Monday.

PayCheck

PayCheck's character in "Paradise Park" is quick with a joke, said producer Daniel Boyd.

The movie is about life in a West Virginia trailer park where God is scheduled to appear on a certain day and grant each resident a wish.

Country singer Porter Wagoner will appear in the film as the governor of West Virginia and will make the movie's soundtrack with PayCheck, Boyd said.

Boyd has produced the movies "Chillers" and "Strangest Dreams: Invasion of the Space Preachers."

PayCheck, best known for the hit "Take This Job and Shove it," moved to Craigsville, about 60 miles east of Charleston, after his release from an Ohio prison in January, when Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste commuted his 7-to-9½-year sentence.

PayCheck was convicted of aggravated assault and tampering with evidence in the 1985 wounding of a man in a Hillsboro, Ohio bar. Celeste ordered him to perform 200 hours of community service and remain alcohol free.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Pat Boone warbled the 1950s gospel hit "Wonderful Time Up There" as a replacement for daughter Debby at a church convention.

Miss Boone appeared on videotape before more than 5,000 people Sunday at the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel in Portland.

A conflicting obligation prevented her from appearing and she explained on the video that she asked a "friend" who needed a break to sub.

To the delight of the audience, Miss Boone introduced her father, who appeared live.

The song, about preparing for Judgment Day, preceded a sermon from Boone's minister, Jack Hayford, pastor of the Church on the Way in Van Nuys, Calif.

LONDON — The queen and her husband later this month will make their first official visit to the United States since 1983, Buckingham Palace said Monday.

Queen Elizabeth

Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, will fly in a Concorde jet May 14 to Washington D.C.

Two days later, the queen will make an unprecedented address before a joint session of Congress.

The visit is viewed by the palace as a reaffirmation of Anglo-American friendship following the successful conclusion of the Gulf War.

After leaving Washington, Queen Elizabeth II will visit Miami and Tampa, Fla., then the Texas cities of Austin, San Antonio, Dallas and Houston.

Her American tour will end with a three-day private visit to Kentucky. The queen, an avid horsewoman, has made several trips to Kentucky since 1983 to view and purchase stock.

She is to return to London May 26, a palace spokesman said.

RED CLOUD, Neb. — Writer Willa Cather wouldn't have been fond of a new movie adaptation of her novel "O Pioneers!" starring Jessica Lange, a Cather expert said.

"I don't think she would like it much — not at all," Susan Rosowski, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln English professor, said in an interview last week.

The Hallmark Hall of Fame production is being filmed in Nebraska, where Cather lived. The movie is scheduled for broadcast next year on CBS.

Rice student's 'port-a-home' gives homeless man privacy

By R.A. Dyer
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Frank Garner lives in the Salvation Army's Harbor Light Center for the homeless.

And he likes it just fine.

"I'm going to stay here as long as I can," Garner said with a smile. "I've got my room and my privacy. As long as I have this, there's no reason for me to go anywhere."

Garner, 38, is the first, and so far only, resident of Harbor Light to live in an experimental structure created by a Rice University graduate student. Built within a six-man ward of Harbor Light, the structure has a bed, a fan, a desk, shelves and drawers — and all within 42 square feet.

He's the envy of residents. He's a king with a castle.

"It's quieter and more secluded here — I can read now and I won't be interrupted," he says proudly. "About two weeks ago I saw them building it and I asked if I could be the first to live inside. Now I can close my door and people don't even know I'm here."

The structure — dubbed a "port-a-home" by Harbor Light residents — is the brainchild of Rice graduate student Steve Mayman, 27, who spent $900 designing and building it for his master's thesis.

Although free-standing, the invention would not withstand the elements, Mayman says.

"It's designed to go into a larger space," he said. "It wouldn't work outside because it is not insulated and it doesn't have a roof, so the rain would filter in. . . . But it does have a vent and a window and it simply exchanges air with the rest of the room."

Measuring about 6½-feet across and 8-feet high, the structure is about the size of a walk-in closet. It has a desk pushed across one wall and a single-bed pressed against another. Beneath the bed are plywood boxes that double as chairs and storage bins.

Garner keeps a Bible and other books on shelves over the desk and hangs his four suits on a pole over the foot of his bed.

The walls — constructed of plasterboard and plywood — are pocked with small, round holes. Many of the holes are fitted with pegs, which support shelves or clothes. A fan blows from the ceiling, above a light suspended over the bed by chains. The floor is carpeted and there are four electrical sockets.

Mayman acknowledges the building could be a fire hazard, but he says he installed the four sockets to discourage residents from using extension cords and electrical splitters. Sprinkler systems would also help guard against fire, he said.

The building will last about 10 years, said Mayman, with much of the interior easily repairable. He said it can be constructed in two hours and taken apart in 45 minutes.

AP Laserphoto

Although a hit with shelter residents, the port-a-home may have few real-world applications. Harbor Light director Fred Smith said the building would add to the cost of housing the homeless and would be an inappropriate option for those transients who require supervision.

But Mayman said states such as New York, facing court action for not providing adequate public housing, could construct the buildings. He also said the structures could have commercial applications.

"One possibility is that private developers . . . could build these things and charge rent to homeless people and make a profit," said Mayman.

But saying "the potential for abuse is tremendous," Mayman acknowledged that unscrupulous developers could construct the buildings as part of low-rent, low-maintenance shanty towns.

"My aim in doing this experiment is to show what we've reduced our standard of living to," he said. "It shouldn't be a long-term solution." And while the port-a-home has been greeted enthusiastically by many residents at Harbor Light, there are detractors.

County to capitalize on past notoriety

By Joel Williams
Associated Press writer

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — George B. Parr controlled a South Texas political machine for decades, doling out favors in exchange for votes.

He also is credited, or blamed, for Lyndon B. Johnson's tainted 1948 election to the U.S. Senate.

Yet by the time the so-called "Duke of Duval" killed himself in 1975, he had become an embarrassment for Duval County residents weary of scandal and corruption. It was no accident that the Duval County Museum created in the early 1980s contained no trace of the family that ruled the area for six decades.

Now that more time has passed, though, community leaders finally want to take another look at their history. They plan to capitalize on Parr's notoriety with a museum exhibit to attract tourists curious about the "Duke of Duval." The George Parr room is scheduled to open next month.

"The concept is we're trying to turn something negative into something positive," said County Judge Gilberto Uresti, a reformer first appointed by a state district judge in 1975, when courts temporarily took over the scandal-plagued county government. "The positive aspect is attracting tourists. My position is we cannot ignore the past."

The exhibit may even feature the infamous "box 13" that contained just enough missing votes to propel LBJ to the Senate.

Lydia Canales, chairwoman of the Duval County Historical Commission, said tourists from time to time visit and wonder why the museum has nothing on George Parr.

"They're shocked that we don't have it," Mrs. Canales said. "We've been so much in the news."

George B. Parr was "El Patron," the boss. He could get you work, groceries and cash if times were tough.

Political cronies in courthouses and school districts spread public money around like butter in exchange for loyalty to handpicked Parr candidates at election time.

They also had more than charity in mind with schemes such as a phony "general store" that did thousands of dollars worth of county business, control of county construction contracts and bank accounts that kept the money flowing.

The Parr family rose to power in Duval and surrounding counties during a 1911 political feud in which three Anglos from Alice shot three Mexican Americans at the Duval courthouse in San Diego. George Parr's father, Archie, the county's Democratic leader, sided with the Mexican Americans and won over the predominantly Hispanic South Texas brush country.

Archie became the first "Duke of Duval," building a political machine by doling out political jobs and providing doctors for the ill, lawyers for the jailed and food for the hungry.

In exchange, come election time Parr candidates almost invariably won, including Archie, the area's state senator for 20 years.

George Parr, the second "Duke of Duval," continued the family's rule by serving terms as county judge and sheriff and making sure his people stayed in power.

He killed himself April 1, 1975, as a federal judge prepared to send him to prison for income tax evasion. He was found dead in his car on the family's ranch, a self-inflicted bullet wound in his head. President Harry Truman had pardoned George Parr of a previous tax-evasion conviction in the 1940s.

The previous month, his nephew, Archer Parr, the former heir-apparent to the political dynasty, was removed as county judge after 16 years in office. He lost his job after a federal perjury conviction for lying to a grand jury about more than $120,000 paid to him by a county agency he created.

The family political machine gained national notoriety in 1948 with the "box 13" incident in the city of Alice in neighboring Jim Wells County, part of the Parr stronghold.

The ballot box at Precinct 13 cleared Congressman Johnson's path to the U.S. Senate with a mysterious re-count six days after the Democratic primary runoff.

Former Gov. Coke Stevenson appeared to have beaten Congressman Johnson in the runoff by just over 100 votes on Aug. 28, 1948.

But on Sept. 3, a recanvass found 203 votes cast in Alice's Precinct 13 that had not been counted. All but one of the votes was for Johnson as the party's candidate for Senate. The final tally gave Johnson the victory with a statewide margin of 87 votes out of nearly 1 million cast.

Precinct 13's final 200 voters' signatures were in alphabetical order and written with a different pen from the previous signatures on the list. Some of the names on the list belonged to dead people or living people who did not vote, witnesses testified at subsequent hearings.

Stevenson later accused Parr of directing ballot fraud in Jim Wells County. Others have alleged that Johnson devised the scheme and had his ally Parr carry it out. Parr denied having anything to do with it.

State and federal investigators dogged the county for its spending habits for years afterwards.

So far, the historical commission's exhibit has obtained George Parr's old county desk, his hat, wallet and other personal items, historical photographs, mounds of newspaper articles reporting on Duval's political scandals, and reams of documents to be included in a research library.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
