SYRIA IS TO FIGHT IF SHE IS ATTACKED

BRUT, Syria, June 3.—French officials declared today that Syria will be defended with the greatest determination and charged that any reports of German troops being in Syria were being circulated to provide a pretext for invasion.

Henri Dentz, high commander of Syria, formally declared that any German troops having entered Syria and French officials asserted angrily that German troop debarkations at Latakia were "impossible."

These officials claimed that Germans could not land troops in Syria because of British control of the seas. They pointed out that Latakia was located near the coast, where the British control of the seas is particularly effective.

While it was reported that other quarters that British, French and Axis forces were racing to control the French mandate country in Vichy, France, French cabinet met in its important session since the crisis, for discussions led to deal with the defense of the mandate in France's African colonies.

It appeared that the British were moving rapidly toward occupation of Syria to prevent the eastern country from being taken by the Germans as a base to attack Cyprus and Syria.

London press continued to such an extent vigorously, but government was quiet on the subject.

Axis commentators insisted the new Axis offensive, probably in the Eastern Mediterranean, would get under way immediately.

Midst reports that Mussolini had discussed means of bringing the United States into the war before he was well armed, discussion was supposed to occur at their meeting at Pass yesterday. An Italian spokesman declared the Axis made plans for dealing with any possible United States intervention in the war and added "this is the moment for action."

spotlight was on Vichy yesterday, however, but there were few hints as to the progress of cabinet meeting. The cabinet members were pledged to stay and correspondents were off by censors.

Merchants To Hear Discussion Of Cotton Plan

Merchants in Eastland County are interested in qualifying cotton goods to farm families the Cotton Stamp Plan meet in the County Court house, Eastland, at 10:00 a. m. Tuesday, June 11 to hear the explanation by Miss Maurine Extension District Agent Claudius B. Hodges, District Director, Surplus Marketing Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Arrangements for meeting are being made by V. Cook and Miss Ruth County Extension Agents, will assist the county land use committee in an educational program in the county on the use of the Cotton Stamp.

A maximum of 275 farm families in Eastland are eligible to receive thousand dollars in stamps, according to an act by E. E. Powell, AAA Administrative Officer, who will be responsible for issuing the stamps to eligible families in the county.

Stamps are eligible to be used on cotton acreage of their 1941 cotton acreage. Merchants may accept the stamps in exchange for goods if they carry on the business of selling cotton to buyers for their use and resale. Retail stores wishing to take part in this must form a Surplus Marketing Administration with a completed application known as a "Retailer's Plan."

Following the meeting on the day assisting in getting in stamps to merchants and farm will be the cotton subcommittee of the Eastland County Planning Committee. Committee is composed of W. C. Carbone, I. S. Mann, M. M. Farmer, E. Blackwell, Ranger, and R. Hart, Rising Star.

President Pro-Tem of Senate To Be An Important Post This Year If Gov. O'Daniel Goes To Senate

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Texas.—Selection of a "President Pro Tem Ad Interim" by the Texas Senate will be one of the Senate's interesting tasks just before the 47th Legislature is gavelled to a close.

The election, ordinarily confers an honor rather than an active office. It takes on particular importance this year, because the man who is chosen may have considerable official business.

If Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel is elected U. S. Senator on June 28, Lieut. Gov. Coke R. Stevenson of Junction, who now presides over the senate, will become governor the moment O'Daniel is sworn in as U. S. Senator. The President Pro Tem Ad Interim of the Senate will then preside at any session of the Legislature that may take place, and, if Stevenson leaves the state at any time, he will become acting governor.

Sen. Clay Cotten of Palestine was elected President Pro Tem, and serves as presiding officer of the Senate when Stevenson is unable to be present. If Governor O'Daniel had resigned when he announced he was a candidate for the U. S. Senate, Cotten would have become permanent presiding officer for the balance of the session. His term as President Pro Tem will end with the final gaveling of the present session.

Sen. Rudolph Weinert of Seguin was rival nominee for President Pro Tem when Cotten was elected and some of the observers think Weinert will be chosen when the Senate elects at the close of the session.

Governor O'Daniel, never has given Lieut. Gov. Stevenson an opportunity to be governor as he would be during any period when the governor left the state.

Some thought that this reticence of the governor was due to the

Martin Dies Is Speaker Here

Speaking to an ever increasing crowd from the south steps of the Eastland courthouse this morning, and later in the day in Ranger, Martin Dies of the Second Congressional district of Texas, and Chairman of the Dies Committee for the investigation of un-American activities, brought his candidacy for United States senator to succeed the late Morris Sheppard, to the voters of this section.

"I am proposing," the speaker said, "that first there be a joint congressional and senate Dies committee appointed; second that all agents of Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini employed by industry in this country be fired immediately and third that all aliens in this country owing allegiance to their dictator master be deported immediately Madame Perkins notwithstanding to the contrary."

Dies said that old age pensions and farm legislation were not issues in this campaign and that he believed his record of achievement in these matters as well as his experience in congress should entitle him to the support of Texas voters for promotion to the senate.

"This is no time to send an inexperienced man to congress," Dies declared. He also declared that we do not need "Yes Men," "Showmen," nor "New Hands" in congress in perilous times such as we are facing at this time.

Threatening rain caused the crowd to gather slowly, but before he had finished his address several hundred people had gathered and were listening attentively.

Dies was frequently applauded and the expression "I have made up my mind that he is the man for that place," was heard often.

Eastland Boy Is Graduating At T.C.U., Ft. Worth

Robert Earl Sikes, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Sikes, is graduating from Texas Christian University at Fort Worth taking his Bachelor of Science and Business Administration degree. Also he was among those on the honor roll at T. C. U. the past term. Young Sikes is a graduate of the Eastland high school.

Graduating exercises at the Fort Worth university were attended by P. E. Day and wife and Eugene Day of Eastland.

The Sikes family, who have been living in Fort Worth for some time, plan to return to Eastland in the near future. It is stated.

Lightning Causes Man's Eye Injury

By United Press
CARLSBAD, N. M.—Jimmy Green is having a lot of trouble explaining his bandaged eye to friends.

"Stepped in the way of one, eh?" his friends inquire and when he tells them the truth they laugh. You probably would laugh, too, but his excuse is authentic.

He was injured by a lightning bolt, he says, and that's what happened. Recently a bolt of lightning struck a fence post at this side of a highway on which he was driving. So strong was the flash that Green was temporarily blinded and his doctor advised him to bandage his eye to prevent sight impairment.

"CHUB" HAS BECOME NEW WORD IN TEXAS LEGISLATURE WITH ALL DOING PART OF CHUBBING

By Harry Bengt Crozier
AUSTIN, Texas.—Legislatures make legend and language. The legends become nebulously thin clouds to color the thought of those who come after. The new language sometimes bolsters a people because it becomes intense, vital and meaningful. Language is built word by word and the English language, whether in bomb ravaged London, the border counties of Texas (where the Latin exercises influence) or in the remote sheep outposts of Australia, is given new energy with every added word that gives meaning expression.

Let us let legend be. The governor more than the legislature has furnished legend for the last two sessions of the legislature and he is not a very definite person, concealed as he is from old folk's gaze 99 per cent of the time behind a microphone.

A word; one single word has been a sort of talisman for this legislature in its own proceedings and in its relations with the modest executive. It is a word that may, and decidedly ought to become, a part of the language of Texas; if for no other reason because of its display of potency in an hour when a word was needed.

There has been a lot of chubbing going on in the legislature since January 13. The House of Representatives has chubbed the governor right smartly, and he has chubbed them right back. The House has chubbed the senate, and vice versa. The oil men have chubbed the legislature and right now are in a likely position to get chubbed by the legislature. The truck operators chubbed the railroad—oh, very definitely; or was it the governor. It is in this time ever to credit the legislature with any accomplishment, for it may turn out that promptly at one o'clock the next afternoon the governor will go on the radio and accept full credit for that thing that had been attributed to a legislature.

He has made it clear already that the truth comes out of the radio if his voice be at the microphone. So that makes any God fearing news writer leary of crediting the legislature with anything until the executive has put in his claim.

It ought to be sometime yet, what with a senatorial campaign and a lot of things before the governor elects to claim coinage of the word "chub." So with some boldness we give you the story of a brand new word.

Chub; to chub, to beguile an individual while a confederate empties his pocket—and legislatively, perhaps his immortal soul.

Sam Hanna, the perennial chub representative from Dallas, brought it to the legislature as an anecdote. Last year when he was on the grand jury in Dallas County, a negro came to tell a story on how his person had been robbed by three other negroes. One held him close and in confidential embrace poured words into his ear. While the words were pouring in the other two took money from his pockets. And mournfully, the negro told the grand jurors: "All he said was 'chub, chub, chub, chub.'"

No day passes but someone at the microphone complains: "Mr. Speaker, you and the members are chubbing me."

The legislature has got to cease functioning sometime. The date is by no means certain. Legislators have a good deal of interest in the chub, chub, chubbing that is going on in the senatorial race.

The principal appropriation bills have yet to be passed. Oil proration, now that federal control is more than a threat, is likely to receive some definite attention in the senate and quibbling over revenues from the 1 cent gasoline tax in the highway department now in conference committee is apt to keep on being chubbed.

The legislature will chub, chub on through this week and perhaps another at least before adjourning.

Britain Begins to Reform Schools

By United Press
LONDON.—Poor boys from the east end of London are to have their own preparatory school, the first of its kind, so that they can enter public schools without feeling any embarrassment.

The plan is part of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's policy of "establishing a state of society where the advantages and privileges hitherto enjoyed by the few should be far more widely shared by the men and youth of the nation as a whole."

The experiment is being made by Oxford House, Bethnal Green—one of the poorest parts of London. The boys are becoming accustomed to the new school in a beautiful 17th century farm house among the hills of Montgomeryshire, near the village of Donagay.

"The aim is to make it possible for slum-born boys to enter public schools with no embarrassment due to speech, manners and general background," said the head of Oxford House. "To send a boy straight from an elementary school to a public school means mutual misunderstanding between the social classes."

"By defying social and economic difficulties, Donagay may show a way of overcoming them."

Owing to the expense, numbers are to be kept small at first—it will cost $400 a year to keep each boy. But help is pouring in, and public school headmasters are offering to lend their best masters for a year. The entire of Donagay is being equipped with people to whom it is "an act of faith."

"A small start now is worth an ambitious one after the war," the Oxford House head said.

"There is a wonderful amount of talent and energy in the slums, but for generations we have been throwing it away."

"It now seems incredible that we should have allowed this waste of our children—our most precious possession to go on."

Great importance is to be attached in the new school to the use the boys make of their leisure hours. Botany, music, farming and architecture are being included in the curriculum.

Readers Paraphrase Book Titles But That Is Librarian's Least Worry

By United Press
ALBANY, N. Y.—A good librarian recognizes immediately that a reader who calls for "The Gong Rings for Everybody," really wants Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

But that is an easy request in the opinion of State Librarian R. W. Vail. Could you give the answer if somebody wanted to know "How Can I Become a Werewolf?"

In his experience the book "To Have and to Hold" has been described as "When You Get It, Keep It." He says that every librarian knows that "O Boy" is only another name for "My Son, My Son!"

Some of the tough questions for which he had to ransack his million volumes, were: "What was the color of Washington's horse at the battle of Monmouth?" "How do the South American Indians shrink the heads of their captives?" "Can you prove my Aryan ancestry for me?"

The last question was written to the State Library by an American woman who had married a German citizen in Germany. She feared she would go to a concentration camp unless she got the answer. A few days research showed the woman's ancestors had been Aryan Americans for more than six generations.

"One of the most interesting questions I ever received was asked by a group of newspapermen who wanted to find out something about the skull of the Sultan Akawa," said Vail.

"One of the terms in the treaty of peace between Germany and Britain after the last war was that the Imperial German government turn over to the Imperial British government the skull of the Sultan. I suspected the question had something to do

Alameda H-D Club Entertains Ladies Of the Community

The Alameda Home Demonstration club was hostess to the ladies of their area Thursday. At this meeting, Miss Ramey gave a lecture on Producing, Storing and Using Good Eggs. Those hearing the lecture were members of the Ranger and Alameda Home Demonstration clubs, four non club members, and Miss Wheatley.

She said that in order to have good eggs one must first take good care of the hens. Miss Ramey showed a chart with actual photographs of eggs stored in a warm place for two, four and six days—then an egg stored for a week in a cool place. Eggs that have been washed have lost much of their natural protective coating and lose flavor much faster. She showed the group how to candle eggs and grade them on size, interior quality, and condition of the shell.

One delicious salad with an egg base was made and served at the meeting.

These area meetings are a National Food Defense program and all ladies are invited to attend. The exact date and place for the June meeting will be announced later, Miss Ramey said.

DUTCH IN EAST EYE JAPANESE CHESS BORAD

By JOHN M. RALEIGH
United Press Staff Correspondent
BATAVIA, Java.—Recent events in the Far East have produced repercussions in the Netherlands East Indies unrivaled since the German invasion of Holland.

Previously the Dutch press and general opinion could have been labelled "mild" toward Japan, but since Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's startling statement questioning whether the Dutch government in London held full power of administration over the East Indies, a new attitude of determination has become evident.

The average Dutchman realizes that danger to the north has not become a thing of the past, though at present the situation appears fairly calm on the surface.

"We believe the day is coming—and soon—when we will have to defend our birthright here in the Indies," say many prominent Dutchmen throughout the archipelago.

Frank Discussion Grows
The Dutch and native press, taking their cue from public feelings everywhere, have adopted a rigorous platform of frank expression concerning Japanese policies in China and the mediation conferences held in Tokyo between French Indo-China and Thailand.

The Netherlands Indian paper Locomotief commented: "The Netherlands Indies holds the same objections to a Japanese drive southward as Britain and the United States. If Japan became Singapore's neighbor through the mediation in progress in Tokyo we should consider this highly dangerous in every sense of the word."

Japanese Press Critical
Business men from Batavia, who have been ordered home by their concerns have remarked upon how flagrantly the Japanese press derides the Netherlands East Indies. Another situation arousing considerable attention of Dutch visitors to Nippon has been reports that Tokyo's German Embassy now has a staff of more than 30.

Japan's movements everywhere are being closely watched by the Dutch government here, and although most authoritative sources believe that trouble is not as imminent as it was a few weeks ago, few think that the Indies have been left out of Japanese plans for the future.

"We were caught unprepared once," said a high official, "but that will not happen again in the press here. Where hitherto the Indies have remained quiet, now they have advanced far enough in their preparations for all eventualities to speak up and let neighbors understand that they will tolerate no overt moves to the south."

Pig In a Box Is Saved from a Flood

LUBBOCK, Tex.—For many hours, a pig on the L. C. Boyd farm, 10 miles southeast of Lubbock, stood on a wooden box just tall enough to let its snout project above flood waters.

Boyd rescued the animal, unharmed. He took another pig from the top of a tractor.

Most of his chickens turned up on lofty perches. Some 30 hogs and 120 chickens were drowned.

Carbon Boy Buys Fine Prize Ram

William Eakin, of the Carbon 4-H Club, has recently acquired a prize Rambouillet Ram from Roland Downtain of Eastland.

According to John A. Wright, assistant county agent, the ram is of the best type available and out of Mr. Downtain's best breeding herd. The ram is approximately six months old, and has very good prospects.

Mr. Downtain, who is especially interested in boys 4-H Club work, let William have the ram under a very attractive agreement.

William is one of the leaders in the Carbon club and is very interested in the feeding of livestock. He is also the owner of a few sheep and plans to feed some out this year as his 4-H demonstration. It is Williams plan to enter the ram in the local Livestock Show this fall.

Three More Initials to Learn: OCD

It will be a long time before the initials OCD are quite as familiar to Americans as the initials ARP are to Britain. We hope they may never be. Yet it is time to learn them, and to know them as well as circumstances dictate.

OCD is the Office of Civilian Defense headed by Mayor La Guardia of New York. It is roughly to the United States what the now-famous ARP (Air Raids Precaution) is to Britain. It is the organization which will set up the means by which civilians defend themselves and their cities against air raids.

There is nothing hysterical about setting up these techniques in time of peace. They are as much a part of national defense as the training of an army. Modern war attacks civilians and cities as viciously as it attacks armies. If the civilian is unprepared to resist, an army, even a good one, may be suddenly left without the back-home support which it must have to function.

Certainly one of the factors which brought about the capitulation at Munich was the defenseless state of London. People who were in London at that time can tell of the conditions: No anti-aircraft guns; no air-raid shelters; no adequate evacuation arrangements for women and children; no proper fire-fighting setup; nothing to prevent the city becoming an immediate shambles under a quick raid. This must have been one of the thoughts in Chamberlain's mind when he flew to Munich.

We have Warsaw, Rotterdam, Coventry and London before us. Their lessons are written for all to read. Mayor La Guardia begins with the estimate that "it is 95 per cent probable at this time that we will never get into action. But the country cannot take a chance on that 5 per cent."

That is the thought behind the organization which La Guardia is now setting up. Big cities, vulnerable to air attack, will be tackled first, others later. Most cities will be entirely unaffected, at least at first.

It took months of preparation, for instance, to stage Seattle's first 15-minute blackout. Should an emergency confront the country, it might come suddenly. Then it is too late to improvise.

With the experience of Europe before us, it should be possible to lay the groundwork of effective civil defense without disrupting at all the normal life of communities. That, we take it, is the aim of the OCD, to lay a basis for civilian defense, a phase of all-out defense that is 100 per cent defensive in nature, and as important a part of national defense as the armed forces themselves.

Americans have the right idea—using gliders on their front porches for peace and quiet.

A Georgia man put gasoline in a wood stove. It made a nice fire. So did his home.

The Beach Season

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY CRAYSON

NEA Service Sports Editor

JOHNNY GRODZICKI has a perfect right to ask: "Just what does a young pitcher have to do to stay in the major leagues?"

Grodzicki, hard ball hurler from the hard core country, was the outstanding star of the Cardinals' spring exhibition games. The 6-foot 1 1/2-inch, 200-pound right-hander continued to be stingy with his hits when the athletes started playing for keeps. He was credited with two victories and charged with one defeat.

Gus Mancuso, veteran St. Louis catcher, said the 24-year-old Grodzicki was the fastest of five recruits who performed so brilliantly during the Red Birds' 10-game winning streak.

Yet with five National League clubs and all American League outfits crying for pitching, Grodzicki finds himself returned to the minors—the Cardinals' Columbus subsidiary.

THIS is exactly what Commissioner Landis was hitting at last winter when, in a move against the farm system, he threatened to put through a rule demanding that a major league club ask waivers on minor leaguers brought up for trial.

Had it been impossible for the Cardinals to return Grodzicki to a AA loop without first obtaining waivers, the big boy with the swift one and sharp-breaking curve would still be in the big show.

The Cardinals this spring had one of the finest groups of young pitchers ever assembled at a training camp.

They sent out two or three who will be heard from later, and hooking up with Grodzicki in eliminations which failed to eliminate were Spud Krist, Hank Gornicki, Sam Nahem and Ernie White.

The Cardinals had so much outfield talent that they could afford to peddle Ernie Kay to Cincinnati for $25,000 and infielder Floyd Young and return Harry Walker, considered a sure shot at the outset, to Columbus.

IT is such a monopolization of talent that enables Messrs. Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey to keep the far-flung St. Louis chain considerably more than solvent by the sale of ball players. Since the close of last season, the St. Louis ivory dealers have taken something like $200,000 from other clubs without weakening the Cardinals and gathered useful material to boot.

The enterprise of the St. Louis National League outfit is commendable, but Judge Landis is on the right track in his fight to make it impossible for a baseball organization to impede the progress of a player.

That is not only unfair to the player but to any club that could make good use of him in company in which he has demonstrated he belongs.

Drug Store Now Sells Wild Animals If There Is Demand

SANTA FE, N. M.—Modern drug stores which deal in few if any drugs at all are a sad commentary on American mankind, sociologists have waited for the past decade.

If science has been disappointed in modern drug stores, just wait until it hears about this new ultra modern drug store which handles all the latest breeds of all types of animals.

Along with its usual line of prescriptions and fountain drinks the Capital Pharmacy carries a catalogue of wild animals and, on order, can obtain anything in the animal line from a baby Indian elephant to a worm.

A baby Indian elephant will set you back $2,000—papa and mama elephants cost lots more, the catalogue states. The rhinoceros has a price tag reading $3,500 and lions are priced "according to size, type, age, condition, etc.," the prices ranging from $100 to $500. Bengal tigers are worth $1,000 but you can have a friendly Sumatran tiger by forking over $850.

Pythons are sold like rope at $5 per foot. However, you can get "special pits of ten large assorted snakes" at $25 per pit—minus the pit. You furnish it.

An "unarmed" tame skunk—recommended as a playing the kiddies—comes at exact and no scenic.

The catalogue says monkeys are cheap and easy to care for, give them a handy chandling on and plenty of "at and companionship"—alone food and water twice daily range from $12 to $450, ing on whether you want mosette, Gibson, baboon, cee, macaque, mangub sapajous.

Maybe these sums are for you. Perhaps you want thing cheaper. Well, y order meal worms in smat tiles at $2 per thousand o sale at $5 per pound.

● SERIAL STORY

FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1941,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Deborah Lovett, attending the spring term in a California university, meets a strange young man in the fog. She is charmed by his manner, his Continental accent. He invites her to dinner, but she refuses. At home, her roommate, Angela, accuses her of having met a most interesting man. Deborah admits it, knows she shall see him again. But she seems to hear a warning.

CHAPTER II

ANGELA dropped the subject—to Deborah's immense relief. Somehow she did not want to talk just now about the young man she had met in the fog.

"Well," Angie told her with an air of satisfaction, "it may interest you to know that I, too, have not been idle. I ran over to the university this morning to pick up an outline of Doctor Brooks' Shakespearean seminar, and I stumbled over a lad on the same errand who isn't too hopeless—one Sam Lindstrom, by name. He fancies himself beyond any justification that appears to the naked eye—but he's amiable. Oh, by the way, I've a parcel from home for you, Deborah."

Angela's nimble coral-tipped tongue was darting inconspicuously here and there, in happy oblivion of the one-sidedness of the conversation.

"On the desk there," she pointed. "I'll bet dollars to doughnuts it's that old woolen dress you hid so I'd see wouldn't make you bring it."

Deborah strolled over to the desk.

"Give you one better," she said, poking the bulky parcel under the desk. "It's my new Bridgie's put in a pair of hip boots and a kerosene heater for good measure."

Deborah's widowed mother had it was Bridgie.

Lanahan, for years the Lovett housekeeper, who had decreed that the old Cape Cod home should be kept open, and that she should remain there as custodian during the rest of Deborah's school days.

Since there was no one to object except Deborah's guardian—who welcomed the plan with obvious relief, and Deborah—who hadn't a Chinaman's chance against Bridgie's naive assumption that she was not only as inalienably a part of the front door of the house, but also the divinely appointed watch-dog of her health and morals—and after eight years, Bridgie was still in office.

ON the first day of the special session at the university, Deborah lingered so long over the morning radio broadcast of European news that she barely missed being late for Doctor Brooks' seminar.

Slipping as inconspicuously as possible into the room—for Doctor Brooks had a widely publicized reputation for being temperamental about tardiness—she was conscious at first only of relief that there was an empty chair at the end of the long table nearest the door. Then she realized that beside her a tall young man was on his feet, and clicking his heels together in a precise little foreign bow, was placing the vacant chair for her.

It was only as she was about to sit down that she recognized him. In the bright morning sunshine, he was not quite the shining figure out of some old heroic legend which, for that first moment, the theatrical alchemy of the fog had made him seem the evening before. Yet even now, there was about him a fleeting suggestion of the young Siegfried on a holiday.

"So?" he said softly, while Deborah, mindful of Doctor Brooks' restive glance at his watch, slid her slim length into her chair with as little ostentation as possible. "It is not only the fog that is kind to me. When I go again to England,

"So you've landed our visiting Storm Trooper," Angela said. "It's even rumored that he boasts a title."

"I don't believe it," Deborah countered.

I shall hang a wreath on Shakespeare's tomb—something really snappy in wreaths."

"They'll be hanging wreaths on your tomb if you don't sit down," Deborah murmured, smothering a laugh. "Dear Teacher is glaring this way with murder in his eye."

His name, she learned after several surreptitious glances at his notebook, was Stephan Stryov Ley von Thalmann. . . . Cautious as she had been about her peeping, she knew from the almost imperceptible quiver of his right eyebrow that he had caught her at it, and was amused.

In spite of the arrogant set of his head and shoulders and his reckless blue eyes, she decided that he did not look at all like the swashbuckling, bully boy young German so commonly exploited by current journalism. She rather liked the freshly scrubbed look of him, and the sensitiveness of his cleanly chiseled mouth and chin.

After all, she told herself with a half-admitted flicker of regret, she should probably have been entirely safe in going to dinner with him last night.

IT is possible that they might have gone on uneventfully through the spring—just sitting beside her a tall young man was on his feet, and clicking his heels together in a precise little foreign bow, was placing the vacant chair for her.

Several times when young Von Thalmann offered an opinion, a murmur of antagonism edged with derision ran from chair to chair about the seminar table. The first time, he glanced about him as if unable to believe that any one could intentionally have been so rude. Later, Deborah noticed that although he always went on with flawless self-possession and good humor, he sometimes crimsoned to the line of his fair hair, and that his eyes were the hurt, bewildered eyes of a snubbed small boy.

She found herself amused, and unexpectedly touched at finding that, for all his cocky little air of knowing that the world was his own particular oyster, he was so vulnerable. Perhaps that was why—although she told herself that it was her Yankee love of fair play—when he asked her again to have dinner with him, she accepted.

WHILE Deborah was dressing for the occasion, Angela perched on the foot of her bed, watching her with amused speculation in her bright black eyes.

"So you've landed our visiting Storm Trooper?" she began as Deborah ran a comb lightly through the amber cloud of curls at the back of her neck.

"Storm Trooper? . . . What on earth are you driving at, Angel?" Deborah asked absently. "That's what every one's saying." Angie's pointed coral tongue seemed fairly to savor the spice of her titbit. "Oh, well—not exactly a Storm Trooper, perhaps."

"Sam Lindstrom knows some German refugees; and he says they told him the beautiful Stephen is an officer in the German army—one of the bright young men in official circles. It's even rumored that he boasts a title—not to speak of landed estates all over the map of Europe—if Europe can still be said to have a map."

"I don't believe it," Deborah shrugged. "He's just another homesick boy who wants some one to dance with him."

Nevertheless, she went downstairs a little uneasily.

Crater Is Clew To A Big Meteorite In Colorado Hills

DENVER, Colo.—Discovery of a huge crater in southwestern Colorado has revived the story of a night nearly 50 years ago when the sky roared and burned with witches' fire, the earth shook and animals howled in terror.

The story—which almost had been forgotten—has been making the rounds of old timers in the San Luis Valley for nearly half a century and Dr. H. H. Nininger, curator of meteors at the Colorado Museum of Natural History, believes he has the answer.

From his preliminary investigation he believes the odd formation is a meteorite crater—fourth discovered in the United States and first in Colorado.

The crater which may mark the earthly resting place of a huge meteorite is roughly 300 feet in diameter and 30 feet deep. It is heavily overgrown with scrub sage and Spanish bayonet and is in a remote section at the western base of the Sangre de Cristo mountains.

Old timers are a bit vague about the exact date but they remember seeing weird flashes of light in the sky. Livestock and animals were terror stricken as the sky roared and the ground shook.

Scientists at the time presumed it was a meteor but the location was so remote no one was able to find the crater.

A few weeks ago, however, the word passed through the hills that "a funny looking hill" had been found.

Dr. Nininger, an outstanding authority on meteors, was notified and had a pilot fly him to the remote sector.

"We could make it out clearly from the air, so we took our bearings and landed," he said.

He and the pilot made their way to the crater by automobile and horseback.

It is a roughly elliptical depression, completely surrounded by an upheaved rim about 20 feet high. The hole bears every characteristic of a meteoric crater and there is no possibility it is of volcanic origin and is what is commonly known as a sink caused by subterranean caverns or washouts.

The next step in checking will be with magnetic instruments. If these show the presence of a meteor he plans to excavate for it next year.

Mosquito Control Could Be Means Of Saving Of Lives

AUSTIN, Tex.—"A marked saving in human lives and improved health conditions may be obtained in large measure by an educational program for the control of the mosquito," suggests Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Malaria is transmitted to humans," he said, "by the bite of the Anopheles mosquito. This mosquito acquires the malaria parasites by biting a person who has the parasites in his blood. She (it is the female who transmits this disease, then bites a well person. The parasites enter the blood, grow, and multiply there. Poisons are formed and carried in the blood stream to all parts of the body. The person bitten by the carrier mosquito begins to shiver with chills, burn with fever, and to have a headache.

"Prevention of malaria should start with the protection of humans from the bite of the infected mosquito and continue through to the elimination of the mosquito.

"The protection of humans may be accomplished by screening all houses to prevent the entrance of mosquitoes. A 16-mesh wire screen should be placed over all openings. Be sure that all chimneys, cracks and other openings are covered.

"The malaria mosquito breeds in still water and the pools and grassy edges of running water, as well as in many places where water is allowed to collect or stand. The female mosquito then lays her eggs on the surface of the water, where they float, and in a few days hatch into 'wiggle-tails.' These live in the water and in time turn into mosquitoes. The change must take place in water and require twelve to fourteen days in summer to complete the cycle.

"In order to prevent the malaria mosquito from breeding, destroy their shelters by removing all brush and weeds; and drain or otherwise control their breeding places in water by spraying the surface with oil or putting top-feeding minnows in waters where oil or drainage cannot be used. Such a campaign will be waged around all military areas in Texas."

Egg Shipments Are Up By 71 Per Cent

AUSTIN, Tex.—Texas kept its poultry shipments largely in the shell during April, current reports of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research show.

Shipments of dressed chickens to Texas and out-of-state points were four carloadings less than last April's total of 47, while dressed turkey shipments totaled
