Texas education funding may be $1.6 billion short

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas faces at least a $1.6 billion shortfall in public education funding before the next century, $400 million more than the governor's figures which also call for a tax refund, the state comptroller says.

"We have to be looking at $1.6 billion going into education.... I think the Legislature is going to have to do that," Comptroller John Sharp said Monday.

Sharp, a Democrat, and Republican Gov. George W. Bush have sharply differing assessments of school funding. Bush last week urged a $1 billion tax rebate, saying $1.2 billion more would be available for Texas education, enough to cover 115,000 new students expected to enroll in public schools in 1998-99. But Sharp and Education

Commissioner Mike Moses, a Bush appointee, said $1.2 billion is not enough to fulfill court-ordered measures to maintain financial equity among school districts and construct school buildings estimated to cost between $354 million and $400 million.

"You've got to do the equalization - otherwise (the state) could end up in court," said Sharp.

Earlier, teacher groups questioned whether the tax relief plan would jeopardize education programs. Texas is projected to spend $18 billion on public education in the 1996-97 budget cycle.

Karen Hughes, Bush's press secretary, said the governor cited budget figures provided by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Rob Juncell, D-San Angelo, that did not account for court-ordered funding equalization.

The governor's tax rebate proposal fulfills two campaign promises he made in 1994 - to shift the burden of paying for public schools from local taxpayers to the state and to provide tax relief, said Ms. Hughes.

Governor Bush, when he campaigned, said he thought the state should be the primary funding mechanism for public schools," she said. "The intention of special interests is to spend that money on additional programs when government has a surplus and the economy is growing."

Sharp, during a news conference to promote the prepaid college tuition plan he supervises, said he intends to release a list of budget savings within the next three weeks equal to the $1 billion Bush wants to return to local property taxpayers.

Ms. Hughes did not say when Bush would release details of how $1 billion would be refunded. Sharp said his plan, unlike Bush's, would contain specific budget cuts and savings totaling about $1 billion.

"Ours is real," said Sharp, whose Texas performance reviews have been used previously to help balance the state budget.

CSF to take applications

Applications for help from the Christmas Stocking Fund are being taken this week at the Hereford Community Center from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. each day.

Any legal resident of Deaf Smith County is eligible to apply for assistance.

Applicants must provide Social Security numbers and valid proof of residence, such as a driver's license or current utility bill. If an individual is requesting aid with medical or utility expenses, account numbers must be provided. Request for aid does not guarantee that help will be provided.

The Christmas Stocking Fund is administered by an anonymous committee of local volunteers. These volunteers screen applications to determine the most needy residents. Aid is provided in the form of food baskets, vouchers for children's clothing, and assistance with medical and utility bills.

Clinton cuts back size of military force to Zaire; plans $140 million for relief

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration has scaled back plans to send a large military force to aid relief efforts along the Zaire-Rwanda border but is weighing a smaller contingent, U.S. officials said today.

The United States also plans to provide $140 million to help the refugees.

Military planners and diplomats from more than a dozen nations will meet Thursday in Stuttgart, Germany to discuss their options, officials said.

Officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said President Clinton has not made a final decision on the size of the U.S. military force.

"We're still going to be part of an aid operation," a senior U.S. official said. "But clearly there is no need now to maintain an armed corridor out of the country. That problem is solved."

Rwanda insisted today that an international force of soldiers no longer is needed because hundreds of thousands of refugees had returned from their 2 1/2-year exile in Zaire.

Still uncertain is the fate of as many as 700,000 refugees in eastern Zaire who face death, international relief agencies said.

The Clinton administration had been considering sending about 1,000 ground forces to Zaire backed by as many as 4,000 support troops.

The United States initially resisted prodding by France and other European nations to move quickly to commit American troops. But last week Clinton offered to contribute U.S. troops to a multinational force led by Canada.

On Monday, U.S. officials announced plans to provide $140 million for the relief effort.

J. Brian Atwood, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said the money would be used primarily in Rwanda to support programs helping unaccompanied children, as well as supplying food, medicine and trucks to transport refugees.

He said a USAID disaster team has been assessing needs for several weeks and will make grants to humanitarian organizations and U.N. agencies in the region.

An estimated half-million refugees have poured across the border from Zaire to Rwanda in recent days, easing the crisis.

Atwood said that not all the refugees in eastern Zaire were heading home.

Building code revision planned by city for '97

Building codes for the City of Hereford will be revised to conform with the Uniform Building Code by early next year.

Pete Wilt, chief building official for the City of Hereford, reviewed the reasons for changing from the Standard Building Code to the Uniform Code, at a Monday evening meeting of the City Commission.

During the 45-minute meeting, the commission voted to cancel the regular Dec. 2 meeting and heard a report from Mike Hatley, executive director, Hereford Economic Development Corporation.

Wilt said the Uniform code is "more in plain talk English," allowing better understanding of requirements. He pointed out that most cities in this area adhere to the Uniform code and that opportunities for testing and training are more readily available for cities using the code.

Wilt also gave commissioners examples of permit fees that could be implemented if the new code is implemented.

Mayor Bob Jossander asked Wilt to work with City Attorney Terry Langehennig on material for the commission to study at a planning session on Dec. 16.

The regular Dec. 2 meeting was cancelled to give commissioners an opportunity to attend a special program in connection with the lighting of a community Christmas tree in Mothers Park.

The event, sponsored by the city with cooperation of other organizations, will begin at 7 p.m.

In Hatley's report to the commission, he explained the need for sugar beet growers to make commitments by Dec. 15 for acreage in 1997. A significant increase from the 14,000 acres this year is being asked by Holly Sugar, he said.

Illegal aliens swept in gulf

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - As many as six people remained missing today after high waves swept a group of men, women and children into the Gulf of Mexico during an attempt to cross illegally into the United States.

Authorities suspended their search for victims Monday afternoon after recovering three bodies and spotting a fourth that washed back out to sea. They were to meet this morning to decide if efforts will be continued.

Witnesses reported seeing 10 men, women and children trying to cross from Mexico into the United States at the mouth of the Rio Grande Sunday when a large wave swept them into the water.

"They were walking on a sandbar on the Mexican side. When they got to the end of the sandbar, this large wave came in and swallowed them up," Chief Sheriff's Deputy Joe Elizardi said.

Elizardi said the victims were believed to be illegal immigrants.

Three bodies were recovered Sunday. A fourth washed ashore but was taken back out by the tide.

Two of the bodies were identified as men ages 49 and 19, believed to be from Lahore, Pakistan, Elizardi said. They were carrying Pakistani passports and business cards suggesting one was an engineer, the other a printer, he said.

Their identities were withheld until relatives could be notified. The third dead man was not carrying identification papers.

The mouth of the river is a popular crossing spot for illegal immigrants and narcotics traffickers, authorities said. It is generally shallow, with shoals and sandbars that prevent large ships from entering, although in places it's too deep for wading.

Housing starts dip in October

WASHINGTON (AP) - Housing starts fell 5.1 percent in October to the lowest level in a year, the latest sign of a moderating economy. The West registered the only gain. The Commerce Department said today construction of new homes and apartments totaled 1.37 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, smallest since 1.35 million in October 1995. It was the second straight decline. And, the report showed, the 6.1 percent drop in starts in September was even weaker than the 6 percent initial estimate. The 1.53 million total in August was the highest since March 1994.

Columbia prepared for 16-day mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - NASA began fueling space shuttle Columbia as it prepared to lift off on a mission delayed 11 days by bad weather and concerns over booster rockets.

Columbia will carry into orbit a pair of science satellites and astronaut Story Musgrave, who at 61 will be the oldest person ever in space.

Musgrave also will be the first to fly six times on space shuttles and the first to fly on all five of NASA's shuttles. Only one other person, moon-walker John Young, has flown so many times in space.

Good weather was forecast for the 2:53 p.m. liftoff. Dangerously high wind prevented Columbia and its crew of five from launching last week.

NASA's oldest shuttle was supposed to take off on the 16-day mission Nov. 8, but managers postponed the flight a week so engineers could complete an investigation of the solid-fuel booster rockets.

Critical thermal insulation in the nozzle of one of the boosters used on the last shuttle flight was damaged by hot gases. Shuttle program manager Tommy Holloway said Monday the damage was rare but even if it happened again there still would be plenty of insulation to ensure a safe flight.

The astronauts' first job in orbit, seven hours after liftoff, will be to release an ultraviolet telescope to observe newborn and dying stars, the moon's atmosphere, and the northern and southern lights on Jupiter.

The crew will retrieve the telescope 14 days later for return to Earth. About $93 million has been spent on the U.S.-German project.

The astronauts also will deploy a saucer-shaped spacecraft for three to four days of free flight. Scientists will try to grow extremely thin semiconductor film on the satellite, in the ultrapure wake created behind the craft, for potential use in transistors.

This so-called Wake Shield Facility flew twice before on space shuttles and, each time, encountered technical trouble. Altogether, $29 million has been spent on the experiment.

The astronauts also will conduct medical experiments. NASA on Monday loaded equipment and 14 rats aboard Columbia.

Later in the mission, two astronauts will spacewalk to test new tools, including a crane that will be used on the future international space station.

The flight will be the first under the new shuttle operations program. To save money, NASA on Oct. 1 began turning over day-to-day shuttle operations to United Space Alliance, a joint venture of Rockwell International Corp. and Lockheed Martin Corp.

Democratic leadership features familiar faces

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dick Gephardt and a familiar team will again lead House Democrats in the new Congress, and signs of conflict with Republicans abound despite post-election talk of moderation and compromise.

Gephardt, D-Mo., chosen by acclamation Monday to be House minority leader, said if there is "lock-step voting" by a conservative-dominated GOP next year, bipartisan agreement on budget, campaign finance and other issues will be hard to reach.

As for Democrats, Gephardt said, "I think we've been in the middle" on welfare, raising the minimum wage and other issues.

"It takes two to tango," Gephardt told reporters after House Democrats met behind closed doors to select their leadership team. "And if they are willing to come to the middle and work towards a consensus, we'll achieve it. If they aren't, we will continue to stand and fight for what we believe in."

The comments suggest that if there is to be accommodation on key issues next year, minority Democrats will be demanding major concessions from majority Republicans. They also point to the continued contrasts Democrats wish to draw with the GOP over such issues as education and the environment in hopes of regaining the majority in 1998.

Gephardt's remarks came two weeks after an Election Day on which Democrats picked up about eight seats in the House for the 105th Congress, fewer than half what they needed to control the chamber. With a few races still not finally decided, it appears likely the House will have 228 Republicans, 206 Democrats and an independent.

Despite falling short of capturing a majority, Democrats rewarded their old leadership team by unanimously, and without opposition,

Autopsy ordered in baby's death

An autopsy has been ordered in the death of a six-month-old baby who died at the home of his parents late Monday.

Diamond Selezt Marquez, born April 28, was playing with a five-year-old when he died, said Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine.

She was unable to attribute cause of death although X-rays were taken at Hereford Regional Medical Center because the children had been playing with balloons.

Emergency medical personnel were called to the home, 127 Ranger, and the baby was taken to HRMC, Judge Turrentine said.

She said she would withhold a formal ruling in the death until autopsy reports are received.

Parents of the baby are Jessica Luna, 16, and Rafael Marquez, 17.

Catholic leader accepts invitation after meeting with Cuba's Castro

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Cuban leader Fidel Castro and Pope John Paul II met today in a historic first encounter, and the pontiff accepted Castro's invitation to visit Cuba.

Both sides expressed hope that the visit could happen in 1997, papal spokesman Joaquín Navarro-Valls told reporters after the 35-minute meeting.

Cuba is the only Latin American country that the 76-year-old pope has yet to visit.

Navarro said it was too early to give a date, but that a Cuban stop in October during a previously scheduled trip to Brazil was a possibility.

The Brazil trip is the pope's only scheduled trip to the Western Hemisphere next year.

Quoting Castro at the end of the meeting, Navarro-Valls said, "Your Holiness, I hope to see you soon in Cuba."

Vatican Television showed Castro, wearing a dark suit, shaking the pope's hand and then sitting opposite him at a narrow table.

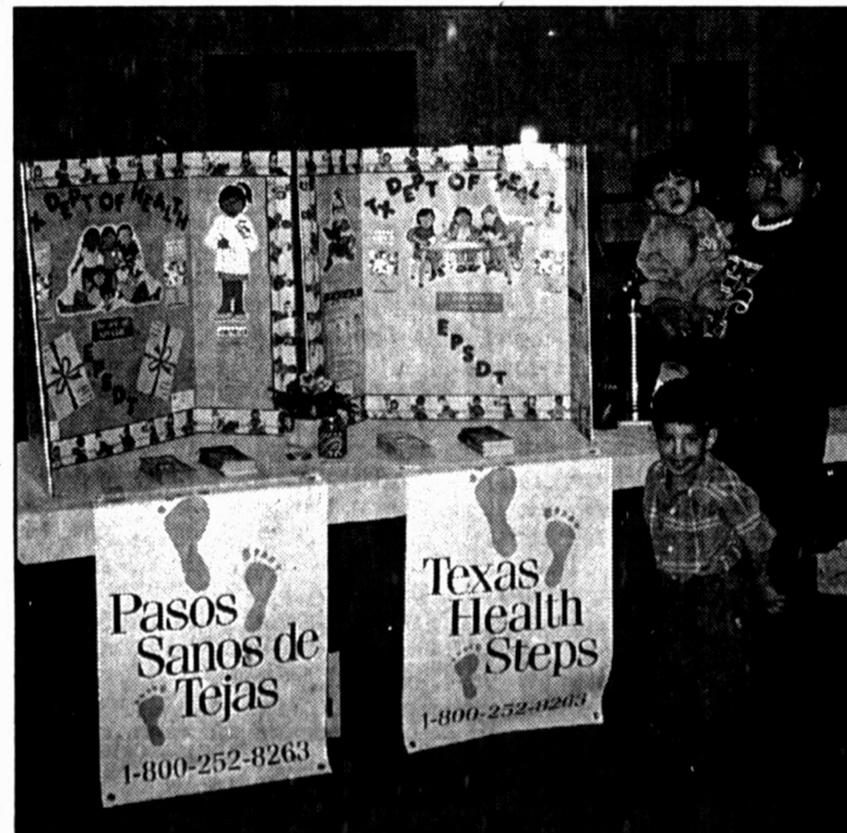

Earlier in the day, Castro's motorcade drove through St. Peter's Square on a damp, chilly morning, with a machine-gun poking through the sun-roof of an Italian security car. He was greeted by a honor contingent of Swiss Guards.

Immediately after visiting with the pope, Castro met with Cardinal Angelo Sodano, the Vatican's secretary of state.

Just an hour before Castro's arrival, the Vatican press office said in a change of plans that no reporters or photographers could be present when Castro arrived inside the Vatican for the audience.

The decision was to make the Castro meeting no different than audiences the pope held last week with other world leaders who attended the U.N. Food Summit in Rome.

In the meeting the pope was expected to push for greater political liberty and more freedom for the church, such as better access to the media and permission for foreign priests to work in Cuba.

Ann Landers

Dear Readers: Because you are my friends, over the last 40 years, I have shared many private moments of my life with you. Today, with a heavy heart, I am writing about the loss of a very special friend. I called him Joe. The world knew him as Joseph Cardinal Bernardin.

On Thursday, Nov. 14, the phone rang just past midnight. This was not unusual since family and friends know I'm a night owl. I was at my typewriter, in my standard work attire, a nightgown under my wool bathrobe. My favorite beat-up bedroom slippers were somewhere under the desk. I recognized the voice at once. It was Kevin Dowdle, a good friend of Monsignor Ken Velo. Both men live in the cardinal's residence. "Ken asked me to call you," Dowdle said. "Your friend Joe is sinking fast. If you want to come over, we will send a car for you."

"I'll be downstairs in the lobby in five minutes," I said. And I was.

The cardinal's residence is about seven minutes from mine, and because of the hour, there was virtually no traffic. As we approached the residence, I could see media trucks parked on both sides of the street. The reporters, however, had the good grace to stay away until there was some "news." Huddled in front of the residence were six or seven sad, middle-aged faithfuls, some holding lighted candles, others with small bouquets of flowers. They had come to express their devotion to their priest, and as one woman said, "We just wanted to be near him."

Monsignor Velo, a much-loved Chicagoan, was like a son to the cardinal. He met us at the door and escorted me to the second floor, where I was greeted by the cardinal's sister, Elaine Addison, and the cardinal's personal physician, Ellen Gaynor of Loyola University's Medical Center. He then led me to the cardinal's bedroom, where I was offered a chair beside the bed. I sat there for a long while, in prayer -- mostly thanking God for the gift of this extraordinary man. There were no signs of anxiety or discomfort. He looked totally peaceful. I thought, "If anyone deserves a painless exit, this man surely does."

When I finally left the cardinal's residence and arrived home, I tried to work on the column, but it was impossible to concentrate, so I turned on the TV. The first words I heard were "Joseph Cardinal Bernardin died at 1:33 this morning."

Joe was an intellectual giant. He was also a man of tremendous courage. He spoke out against injustice wherever he found it, and he was responsible for "The Challenge of Peace," a pastoral letter against nuclear war which was approved by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. When he spoke, people listened.

Joe thought of himself as a priest, and he performed the everyday, unglamorous tasks that he signed on for at the beginning. He visited the sick, quietly, anonymously, and showed up unannounced and unexpected at the bedside of cancer victims. He spoke of death as a friend and somehow made us all less afraid to die.

The cardinal visited his mother in her nursing home near his residence every day without fail until he became bedridden. She would always ask him, "What are you doing now, Joseph?" and he would reply, "I'm working for the church, Mother." She would say, "That is lovely. Keep it up." He never told her he was a cardinal. She had no idea.

Joe taught us how to live, and he taught us how to die. Dear God, please take good care of this remarkable man. The likes of him will not soon pass this way again.

'Bataan and Beyond' topic for Los Ciboleros program

Lennie Lou Sims of Wellington was introduced by Argen Draper as speaker for the Los Ciboleros Chapter NSDAR when it met in the home of Patricia Robinson for the November meeting.

Sims' topic was "Bataan and Beyond," a book on the experiences of her father, Major John Coleman, who was among those captured by the Japanese after the Battle of Bataan in World War II. A video showing footage from the National Archives of the battle scene, the death march to the Prisoner of War camps and of those camps, as well as an interview with Major Coleman, enhanced the presentation.

Regent Juanita Brown led the Opening Ritual assisted by chaplain Ruth Knox.

Among reports given it was stated the American history essays from local schools will be picked up on Dec. 9 and the judging will be Jan. 3.

The National Defense report was a resolution adopted at the last Continental Congress titled "De-federalize Education."

LENNIE LOU SIMS

Hostesses Robinson and Draper served refreshments to guests Sims, Pet Ott, Nadine Lance and Troyce Hanna and members Margaret Bell, Jean Beene, Ruth Newsom, Nell Norvell, Helen Rose, Donna Smith, Mary Williamson, Brown and Knox.

Any girl's dream

A Christmas tree decorated with handcrafted porcelain dolls would be any little girl's dream -- or any big girl's dream. Such a tree will be featured at the Festival of Trees auction at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Senior Center. The tree titled "Cherub Serenade" is sponsored by Hereford Senior Citizens and was decorated by the "Living Dolls". The porcelain dolls were crafted by the HSCA doll class with the help of special friends.

Herd spikers drub Dumas, earn Austin trip

Jump for joy

Danielle Cornelius (15) flies into the arms of Kendra Wright after Cornelius' kill ended Saturday's Region I-4A final. Hereford defeated district rival Dumas, 17-15, 15-6, at Caprock Activity Center, earning the right to compete in the state tournament later this week. On the left, Julie Rampley (13) hugs Kari Barrett.

The Hereford volleyball players beat their biggest rival and beat 'em bad, and now they're going back to state.
Hereford survived three game-point situations to win the first game of Saturday's Region I-4A finals, 17-

15, and went on to stun the Dumas Demonettes 15-6 in the second game. The victory sent the Lady Whitefaces (32-1) back to the state tournament in Austin, where they lost last year in the Class 4A championship match. Their semifinal match on Friday will be against Red Oak (34-7) - the same team that beat Hereford last year.

If Saturday's match is any indication, the Lady Whitefaces are ready.

"That's the way we needed to go to state: beating Dumas and beating them in two," senior Danielle Cornelius.

"I don't think there's any better feeling than this," said Cassie Abney, also a senior. "All the emotion that builds up when you play Dumas - there's no better feeling than to beat Dumas, especially in two games."

When Hereford and Dumas get together to play big matches - like Saturday - they always go three games and last an hour and a half. Saturday's match lasted about an hour, and most of that was the first game.

Hereford scratched out a 13-8 lead in the first game, but Dumas scored six points in a row - three on Hereford errors - to take a 14-13 lead.

Dumas couldn't get the 15th point, though. Abney got a kill for a sideout, but she hit the ball long to give Dumas the ball back. Meredith Tabor got the ball back for Hereford, first making a nice dig, then overpowering Dumas' Keva Glover at the net for stuff block.

Hereford Julie Rampley got a stuff on the next volley, tying the score at 14-14. Dumas' Julie Williams got a kill for a sideout, then Hereford's Katie Betzen tipped the ball just outside the line for Dumas' 15th point.

Hereford coach Brenda Reeh called a timeout.

"We just had to swing aggressively," she said, denying that she made any brilliant pep talk. "Our three various hitters were making three different kinds of mistakes. We just had to get things corrected. We had to earn our points, rather than wait for Dumas to mess up."

Ironically, what happened next was Dumas messed up.

The Demonettes wasted their third game point when the ball just rolled off the net and onto the floor on Dumas' side. Hereford then scored three points in a row: Rampley served an ace to tie the game at 15-15;

Primal scream

Hereford's Julie Rampley tips the volleyball over the reach of Dumas' Keva Glover (24) during the Herd's 17-15, 15-6 win over Dumas Saturday in Amarillo.

VOLLEYBALL

Dumas' Williams hit the net with her attack; and Rampley served another ace for the win.

The second game was over quickly as the Demonettes seemed to fall apart.

"I felt like whoever came out winning that first one - as close as that one was - that winner would have a big advantage for the rest of the match," Reeh said. "We just wanted to go after them with all our cylinders firing. We wanted to dominate in the second game once we had them down."

Hereford jumped out to a 4-0 lead on two kills by Cornelius and aces by Rampley and Kendra Wright, but Dumas rallied to tie on three straight Herd errors.

Then everything went sour for Dumas. In the next six volleys, Dumas committed two hitting errors and a double-hit violation. Abney's ace made it 8-5. Moments later, another Dumas double-hit and another Rampley ace made it 10-6.

Fittingly, the game and match ended with a battle between the teams' 6-foot senior big guns: Hereford's Cornelius and Dumas Mindy Ratliff. The last seven volleys were decided by those two, and Cornelius got the best of Ratliff.

Ratliff stuffed Cornelius for Dumas' last sidout, but she also had two hitting errors in the run. Cornelius had two stuffs and two kills, including the one that killed Dumas.

HERD VOLLEYBALL STATS

Great dig

Hereford's Cassie Abney gets low to dig a Dumas attack during Saturday's match.

Hernandez wins contest

James Hernandez missed only five games out of 25 to win the Hereford Brand Football Contest.

Hernandez edged three contestants who missed six games, so he can collect $35 from the Brand.

Blake Busby was one the three who missed six, but he was the only one who picked River Road to beat Littlefield in the tie-breaker game. Busby takes second place and $25. Regina Lewis and Kenny Miller both missed six and picked Littlefield to win, but Lewis' total score of 48 for the tie-breaker was closer than Miller's (55). River Road won, 19-6, Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

Hernandez, Busby and Lewis joined the list of winners who will compete next week for the $1,000 grand prize. Contestants who haven't finished first, second or third yet this year have one more week to qualify.

Harmon sparks freshman boys

Jerry Harmon scored nine points in the fourth quarter to lead the Hereford freshman boys' B basketball team to a come from behind win over Pampa Monday in Whiteface Gym.

Pampa led 30-22 going into the fourth quarter, but Hereford outscored the Harvester freshmen 19-5 the rest of the way and took a 41-35 victory.

Harmon finished with 11 points in the game, including two three-pointers in the fourth-quarter comeback. Rodey Wilson led Hereford with 12 points.

Pampa won the A game that followed, 49-26. No one scored more than four points for Hereford.

Pampa also won all four junior high girls' games, which were played across the hall in the Hereford Junior High gym.

The closest one was the eighth grade A game, which Pampa won, 23-21. Bethany Williams and Tessa Baker each scored six points to lead the Hereford team.

Pampa won the eighth grade B game, 21-10. Ashley Bridge scored six for Hereford.

In the seventh grade games, Pampa won the A game, 41-19, and the B game, 22-17. Jessica Stubbs and Elisha Huseman each scored five points for Hereford's A team, and Kali Hall and Holly Coneway each had six points for Hereford's B team.

The HJH boys and freshman girls played in Pampa, and the sophomore boys played in Hereford, but no scores were reported for any of those games.

When Green Bay defeated Oakland, 33-14, in the 1968 Super Bowl, Bill Miller scored both touchdowns for the losers.

Christmas arrives outside

At least, the look of Christmas has arrived at the E.B. Black House. Members of the board of directors of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society dressed the historical site in Christmas splendor -- indoors and out. Board members decorating with greenery were, from top, Betty Kriegshauser, Carmen Flood and Paula Edwards.

Floral design is theme of video presented to Bud to Blossom

The theme for the Bud to Blossom Club's recent meeting was Beauty in Floral Design in Our Home and was carried out in the video program by Mani S. Miller titled "New Dimensions in Floral Design."

The meeting was held in the home of Mildred Fuhrmann.

Roll call was answered with "a favorite design."

Phyllis Brown and Wilma Bryan gave a report of the Northern Zone meeting held in Amarillo.

Plans were completed for decorating Golden Plains Care Center and Westgate Nursing Home.

The December meeting will be an old-fashioned Christmas dinner and program in Brown's home.

Members attending were Louise Hall, Fuhrmann, Bryan and Brown.

Kingdom Seekers SS Class hears devotional at November meeting

Pauline Landers gave the devotional when the Kingdom Seekers Sunday School Class of Avenue Baptist Church met for its November meeting.

Dorma Kirby led the opening prayer and Rosie Wall conducted the business meeting.

Projects for Thanksgiving and Christmas were discussed.

Trudie Gray read the poem "Only Trust Him" and Nancy Duncan gave the closing prayer.

Co-hostesses Gray and Erma Bain served refreshments to Luella Thomas, Perry Keyes, Rubie Skelton, Velma Carroll, Dorothy Sargent, Wall, Landers, Duncan and Kirby.

Members display collectibles for meeting of Alpha Iota Mu

Carol Moore, vice president of Alpha Iota Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, gave the program at the recent meeting in the E.B. Black House.

Moore's topic was "Whimsical or Down-to-Earth Decorating." Members brought items they collected. Marie Leverett brought angels, Kathy Gallagher brought cows and Moore brought Santa Claus.

This was the model meeting. Seven members and five new members were in attendance.

Items discussed during the business meeting were decorating the tree during the Festival of Trees, a fund-raiser selling Tupperware and a report of the Rush Party on Oct. 24.

Enjoying the show

Employees of St. Mary Family Healthcare Center attended the Winter and Christmas Style Show recently at the Hereford Country Club. The style show was sponsored by the Retail Merchants Division and the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Local retailers presented the newest styles for the upcoming holidays which are available in Hereford.

Tips on selecting, caring for poinsettia

PHOENIX (AP) - When selecting a poinsettia this Christmas, look for an abundance of lush, green foliage, a balanced appearance and evidence of a healthy plant.

The colorful part, the bracts, should be thoroughly colored and expanded. They really aren't flowers but modified leaves, so a lot of green around the edges means they won't color much more in the home.

The true flowers are the little yellow or green berries, called cyathia, found in the center of the colored bracts. Make sure a tight, fresh-looking cyathia is in each center.

Red remains the most popular color and Freedom the most popular choice, says spokesman Thom David of Paul Ecke Ranch of Encinitas, Calif., the world's largest breeder and propagator of poinsettias. Introduced a few years ago, Freedom has deep ruby-red bracts, very dark green foliage and stays compact and bushy while holding the bracts and foliage over long periods. David says it now represents 50 percent of the market.

In general, the larger, more developed the plant the higher the cost. Since poinsettias are the nation's No. 1-selling potted plant and most of the estimated 50 million sales come within six weeks of Christmas, there should be bargains.

Plant height and pot size can be critical to appearances. The standard formula is based on the height of a plant from a pot's rim. It should be about twice the height of the pot. So an 18-inch poinsettia in a 4-inch pot will appear too tall while the same size plant will look fine in a 6-inch pot.

A wilted plant is a possible sign of irreversible root rot. Likewise, if the growing medium seems overly wet, it is wise to make a different selection. Stems should be strong and stiff.

Poinsettias need about six hours of bright, indirect light daily. A good gauge: is the room's natural light bright enough to read fine print? A sunny spot near a window is great. Avoid hot afternoon sun directly on bracts.

Keep plants away from drafts, radiators and hot-air registers. It's best if temperatures do not exceed 72 degrees in the day and 60 degrees at night. In mild climates, they often are left outside in a sheltered patio during daytime.

Another caution: protect the plant when bringing it home. Chilling winds or temperatures below 50 degrees Fahrenheit are potential killers. A large paper bag is enough protection for a short trip in a car. Remove the covering when home.

Then start with a thorough watering. Saturate the growing area so water barely seeps through the drain hole. Discard the excess water. Thereafter, check daily and water only when the growing medium feels dry to the touch.

Be careful of plants displayed in paper, plastic or mesh sleeves. This may appear as convenient as cellophane-wrapped produce. However, experts say the sleeves are for shipping only and should have been removed once in the store. Plants left too long in shipping sleeves develop epinasty, a disorder characterized by contorted and drooping stems, leaves and bracts.

Like fruitcake and eggnog, poinsettias seem to disappear after the holidays. But they will thrive year after year with proper care. Cut back and repot in the spring. They will color again only after experiencing long-night conditions, sheltered from all light for about 14 hours a day. So place them in a warm, dark closet for 40 days or so starting in October.

Don't be concerned that they're poisonous. That was disproved years ago. The sap is irritating to some people.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Family farm adapts to changing technology

By BEN DOBBIN
Associated Press Writer
CASTILE, N.Y. (AP) - Calvin DeGolyer savors memories of his boyhood on the family farm, back when horses pulled every plow, cows were milked by hand and caring for 200 chickens was his 4-H Club project.

Farmers like his father raised a variety of livestock and crops and sold surplus meat, eggs and cream in the village. Neighbors relied on neighbors and the Fourth of July celebration started with a community prayer.

Then Calvin and his two brothers went off to fight in World War II, the eldest never to return. When he and Avery came home in 1946, the first signs of the monumental change in agriculture over the next 50 years awaited them.

"Dad had a little tractor and a milking machine," DeGolyer, now 74, recalls with a soft chuckle.

"We kinda hooked our tail to a wildcat. Mechanization was what really changed things. We had to learn to adapt to it and go with it and not let it get the best of us."

The drift toward bigger, fewer and more specialized farms, driven by rapid advances in science and technology, carried the DeGolyers along with it.

At crucial points along the way, three generations of the family tried to steer an innovative route at Table Rock Farm. Sometimes that meant latching on to new ideas - planting corn in narrower rows, injecting manure in the soil, more judicious use of pesticides - that strike a balance between conservation and commerce and invoke the common-sense practices of a long-ago era.

It was 1915 when C. Scott DeGolyer, an engineer for the U.S. Geological Survey, fell in love with the 600-foot-deep gorge near this western New York village and bought a tract of gently rolling upland nearby.

The old 115-acre spread - an apple orchard, wheat, alfalfa and bean fields, 30 ewes, 10 cows, four horses and a chicken flock - is now a 1,020-acre, high-tech dairy with 900 Holsteins, a dazzling array of harvesters and milking gear and more than $2 million in annual sales.

"In my grandfather's time, the concept was, 'Don't put your eggs in one basket!'" says Calvin's nephew, Willard. "Now, you put your eggs in one basket, but you make sure it's a pretty good basket."

Even here in the forward-leaning, big-farm country of Wyoming County, Table Rock Farm stands as a model of efficiency. Each cow delivered 24,000 pounds of milk and each acre produced 22 tons of corn silage last year, both one-third more than the statewide average.

Hybrid crops, fertilizers and pesticides have sent yields way up, just as artificial insemination, computer-calculated diets and airy, stall-free barns designed to minimize stress have transformed animals into superperformers.

In New York, half as many cows (703,000) are producing twice as much milk (11.6 billion pounds) as a century ago.

Because only the best farmland is needed, each year some 100 square miles of land revert to forest or wilderness or are gobbled up by urban encroachment. Half of New York was farmland in 1956; now, just a quarter is.

Although dairying accounts for 60 percent of the $3 billion in annual sales, farming remains diversified here. New York is the nation's cabbage and cottage-cheese king and trails only Michigan in harvests of tart cherries.

But while most farms remain small or medium-sized, big is winning out: Of 7.9 million acres, 4.2 million belong to farms with at least $100,000 in sales.

As productivity improves, prices climb slowly. Milk has gone up less than 75 cents a gallon in 20 years. Thus, farms are having to become ever more efficient to stay ahead.

All too often, those that fail to invest heavily in new technologies, and get bigger, are failing.

"I don't know how much harder it can get," laments Ed Wright, whose 550-acre dairy and maple syrup farm is hemmed in by hills in Cattaraugus County south of here.

"You've got to work just about every minute to get your money to pay the expenses."

"There's more of a spread between the top and the bottom," said John Lincoln, president of the New York Farm Bureau.

In the next decade, however, the deregulation of global markets could slow or even reverse the precipitous slide in the number of New York farms - from 136,000 in 1950 to 36,000 today, Lincoln says.

Similarly, the gradual elimination of federal subsidies, a legacy of the Depression, could invigorate agriculture by giving farmers a better chance to make more money.

"It throws them back on their own capabilities and hard work should always be rewarded," concurs Calvin DeGolyer.

Although he still helps with bookkeeping and buying supplies, DeGolyer leaves his nephew to manage an enterprise that resembles an industrial park. The barns take up a dozen acres; the milking parlor is used round-the-clock.

In the 1960s, soon after the DeGolyers gambled all on dairying, theirs became one of the first farms in the nation to try group feeding: distinguishing the diverse nutrient needs of cows at different lactation stages.

Lately, using sophisticated manure spreaders, they've been injecting the herd's manure in the soil before spring planting, virtually eliminating the need for fertilizer and thwarting complaints about odor.

Most farmers till in manure or lay it on top, even in winter, losing valuable nitrates to the air and increasing the risk of runoff that pollutes streams.

Last year they planted corn in 15-inch instead of 30-inch-wide rows, and expect the higher yield to quickly pay off the costly adaptation of planters. Extra ground-cover also reduces soil erosion, but weeds are a problem because of the difficulty of spraying in the narrower rows.

The new practices "make not only environmental sense but tremendous economic sense," says Willard DeGolyer, 49, a father of five whose eldest, Meghan, returned home this summer to try agriculture as a career.

The DeGolyers want to do their part to avert the need for stricter environmental regulations by trying out ecologically sound practices that might catch on everywhere.

"Almost all the larger farms that are going to survive are taking this kind of attitude, which it seems is very important for all of us," says Bernard Stanton, an agricultural economist at Cornell University.

"Most farmers are not exploiters, they're stewards. And they're learning to become better stewards."

Every day demands flexibility, business acumen and a degree of risk-taking. Increasingly, farmers are relying on outside specialists - breeders, extension agents, crop scouts - to get it all just right.

Agriculture is running headlong into another revolution: In the 21st century, every aspect seems likely to be transformed by computers, portending change on a scale likely to surpass even that of the past 50 years.

Whatever the future holds, Calvin DeGolyer knows he must embrace the changes, and mold them.

"I look back on my wonderful childhood and try to apply the principles to our present living," he says. "Family and faith in God are stabilizing influences, really more important than how big an operator you are."

Man uses age-old tools to craft items

By JOAN MORRISON
Muskogee Daily Phoenix
TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) - To Dean Renfrow, trees are more than providers of shade.

Especially the bois d'arc and dogwood so plentiful in northeastern Oklahoma. In these trees, Renfrow sees traditional American Indian bows and arrows. In stately walnuts, he envisions gun stocks for conventional and primitive firearms. Chunks of flint rock covering the Cookson Hills are knife blades and arrow points.

In his workshop at Williams Shooting Supply and Gunsmithing here, Renfrow builds bows and arrows for hunting and display. He also builds muzzleloader rifles, repairs guns of all kinds, and gently shapes hardwoods into new stocks for rifles. In his spare time, he knaps flint into points and blades.

Each is built by hand using tools and techniques that have been used by American Indians for centuries.

Renfrow is a craftsman who takes his art to the woods and prairies for use in traditional hunting.

"I've always been fascinated by Native American tools and their use," he said. "I learned to do these things through independent study."

Though Renfrow, 45, of Wagoner, carries a Certificate Degree of Indian Blood Card from the Cherokee Nation, none of his ancestors were instrumental in teaching him the timeless crafts.

It takes Renfrow about an hour to make a single arrow that someone might use for display purposes. Hunting arrows take more time because a set is needed.

"What you do is make up several more than you will need, then shoot them," he said.
