He was a member of the jazz band all through high school at Muleshoe.

A seven-year band member, Robert Orozco was very active with DECA while at Muleshoe High School.

He is the son Joe and Dolores Orozco.

Daniel Receives 3-Year Sentence For Burglary

Following a two-day trial, with one full day being spent in deliberation, a criminal jury found Luis Daniel "guilty" of the April 10, 1985 burglary of Hurst Department Store.

On Monday, a jury was chosen and seated, with testimony getting underway in the afternoon.

All witness testimony was completed Monday afternoon, and the jury was charged Tuesday morning.

After a break for lunch, jurors continued deliberation until late Tuesday afternoon. It was reported at one point that the jurors asked for testimony of two of the witnesses, and asked several questions before coming to a decision on Daniel.

Daniel's attorney, Larry Elms, of Lubbock, asked for District Judge Jack Young to sentence Daniel after the 'guilty' verdict was returned.

Judge Young sentenced the offender to three years in the Texas Department of Corrections, with no probation.

Judge Young remanded Daniel, who had a prior criminal record, to the custody of the sheriff's department.

Armed Robbers Caught After Allsup's Robbed

Around 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, a customer entering Allsup's Convenience Store on West American Blvd. in Muleshoe, found the store had just been robbed by a man wearing "some type of hood, or covering over his face."

Jay Livingston, Muleshoe City Police Officer was the first officer responding to the armed robbery call, and asked for additional assistance.

Aiding in the initial search for the suspected robber were Lt. Wayne Holmes; Sgt. Richard Bonham; Detective Julian Dominguez; and City Patrolman Gary Maddox.

Radio messages were relayed to surrounding towns and cities, and approximately one and a half hours later, three suspects were in custody by Clovis City police.

Clovis officers reported having charges on the same suspects, and planned to release them to the custody of Muleshoe officers.

According to reports, the clerk at the store was robbed of between $200-$300 by a knife-wielding suspect.

Other reports indicated that items had been recovered from the Muleshoe trio by Clovis City officers which possibly tied them in with the early morning robbery.

At presstime, investigation into the armed robbery was continuing.

The young, female clerk, was uninjured in the robbery.

Wednesday Snow Breaks Drought; More Expected

Wednesday morning, a 52day drought was broken in the Muleshoe area, when at presstime, heavy snow was falling in Muleshoe.

Early reports indicated .02 had been recorded, with additional moisture predicted during Wednesday and Thursday.

Prior to Wednesday morning, the last measurable moisture in this area was recorded on December 14, 1985, when .3 was recorded.

The Wednesday snowfall was melting in Muleshoe as it fell on sun-warmed pavement and sidewalks, but an accumulation was reported in the Lazbuddie area, as well as in the Clovis area.

National Weather Service predicted one inch could be measured on Wednesday, with another inch expected through Wednesday night and early Thursday morning.

Tuesday morning, the first action by the Muleshoe City Council during a special meeting, was to pass an order and give notice for a general election to be held on Saturday, April 5, 7 a.m.-7 p.m. at the Muleshoe City Hall.

The absentee voting will be March 17-April 1 at the Muleshoe City Hall, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m-5 p.m.

Immediately following the city council meeting, incumbents Tommy Gunstream and A.V. Wood filed for re-election, citing the ongoing airport project, and other projects as their major interest in retaining their current seats on the board. Both terms were due to expire this year.

Meeting with council members were Jerry Trujillo, from FAA and Earl Cook, an engineer. They reported on the environmental hearing conducted at the City Hall Monday night.

Trujillo said the objections to the airport location, the KCB Ranch east of Muleshoe, were negligible, although the objection from Southwestern Public Service Co. represented a 'first.'

"This is the first time I ever attended a meeting and a power company objected to an airport location," he commented.

However, Trujillo said funding for the new airport looked very promising, although he cautioned, "funding looks good, but I can't promise," with the new fiscal year coming up in October, 1986.

Cook reported that the aeronautical air space is in full compliance or exceeds minimum FAA requirements as far as the proposed airport site is concerned.

Although representatives of AMRAC telecommunications were expected to meet with the council, the representatives had advised they would be unable to meet at this time, so the item was 'scratched' from the agenda.

In other action, council members discussed appointing a redistricting committee to recommend changes in the atlarge voting procedure to the City Council, in an attempt to ward off future litigation.

City Manager Marr explained that several cities, some comparable in size to Muleshoe, had lawsuits filed by minority groups claiming the at-large voting procedures 'discriminate against minority groups, who cannot have adequate representation.

The city manager and city secretary, Mary Hicks, were instructed to prepare a list of 25-30 people, from which a redistricting committee will be

Conservation Program Affects Bailey County

A number of farmers in Bailey County may be eligible to participate in the Conservation Reserve Program of the recently passed farm bill.

The program is aimed at taking erodible cropland out of production and planting it to permanent cover, such as trees and grasses, points out Spencer Tanksley, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The Extension Service will be working with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in conducting a series of regional meetings across the state in late February to help farmers better understand opportunities in this program.

Farmers whose land qualifies for the program (as determined by land classifications by the SCS will be eligible for annual rent payments over the 10-year life of the contract and cost-sharing on cover establishment practices, Tanksley points out.

According to SCS records, some 14.5 million acres of Texas cropland will qualify for the Conservation Reserve Program. However, only about 700,000 acres of that will be included in the program this year.

Farmers can check with their local ASCS or SCS office to determine if any of their crop acreage is eligible for the program. A 10-day sign-up period is tentatively scheduled to begin in early March.

Once a farmer determines that his cropland is eligible for the program he must submit a bid for the annual rent payment on the designated acres, Tanksley explains. Bids will be reviewed by county and state ASCS personnel, and farmers will then be notified as to whether or not they have been accepted. Annual payments will be limited to $50,000 per producer.

To qualify for the program, farmland must be classified as highly erodible (as determined by the Soil Conservation Service). Farmers with eligible land will then be able to enter those acres into the program, which includes cost-sharing for establishing permanent cover and annual rent payments over a 10-year period.

More details about this new program also are available at the local SCS or ASCS office, says Tanksley.

FIREMEN DON'T JUST FIGHT FIRES--Just in case you thought members of the Muleshoe Fire Department 'just fight fires,' you couldn't be more wrong. All the men you see here with hoses, and especially brooms, are busy washing diesel off an already rain-slick highway last Sunday afternoon following a truck accident. The jackknifed truck in the background is from Georgia, and the driver received very slight injuries when it slid from the roadway approximately seven or seven and a half miles east of Muleshoe on Highway 84.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

Ther appears to be some misconception that Governor White proposes to initiate drug testing for teachers. I am enclosing transcripts of the Governor's remarks for you to see exactly what he said and in what context he discussed the issue.

As you can see, Governor White did not even use the word "teacher" during his testimony before the U.S. House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control on January 13 in El Paso. He certainly did not single out any group or suggest blanket testing. The question raised by a reporter during the Governor's press conference on January 16 inplied more than the governor had actually said. The Governor's response was that we have a right to expect a drug-free work place. The Governor further clarified his stand on the issue in a release January 20 and at his January 23 press conference.

By no means does the Governor believe that there should be wholesale drug testing of Texas' teachers. At one points, in fact, he said:

"I want to make it clear that, in Texas, we have no drug abuse problem among our teachers. Not only do our teachers do an outstanding job in their subject areas, but they serve as excellent role models for our children and have been front-line advocates in the war against drug abuse. As I said earlier, I see no need to require drug testing of teachers, except in those infrequent instances where there is some obvious outward evidence of drug abuse imparing job performance. I do stand by my statement that Texans demand and deserve a drug-free work place--whether that be in private industry, a state agency or a school."

I hope this information clears up any misunderstanding about the Governor's stand on this issue.

If I or my office can answer any further questions or be of assistance, please do not hesitate to call on us.

Yours truly,
Ann Arnold
Press Secretary

SNOW HERE WEDNESDAY

Following a considerable drop in temperature during the past 48 hours, snow began falling in the Plains area sometime during Tuesday night, and Wednesday morning as citizens in and around Muleshoe rose from their downy cots of sweet repose, many were surprised to find the ground completely covered with a mantle of whiteness.

As the newspaper goes to press, approximately five inches of snow have fallen, making a total of 10 inches of snow for Muleshoe.

SNOWSTORM CLOSES SCHOOL; MAKES HAZARDOUS ROADS IN AREA

Muleshoe and the West Plains country shivered in the midst of the coldest winter weather of the year at press-time, with high winds from the north bringing blowing snow, icy streets and a mercury reading of nine degrees at near noon Thursday. The wintery weather moved into the area Wednesday on the wings of a cold front that blanketed at least one third of the nation with icy and snow.

More than six inches of snow had been recorded at noon Thursday, and although the long range area forecast called for clearing skies there seemed little prospect for anything but more snow at noon.

WINTER BLARES INTO MULESHOE DUMPING SNOW

Winter stabbed twice at the Muleshoe area this past week, the first a mild, glancing blow to be had, but the second a full scale, knock-out haymaker.

Welcomed by farmers (except the few who still have staggly cotton in the fields), the four inch cover laid a badly-needed blanket of moisture over the entire Muleshoe area Thursday night and Friday.

Added to this was the early-in-the-week snowfall, the trail balloon weather maker which amounted to only one inch.

The Thursday and Friday snowfall was the heaviest of the season and the first major moisture of any kind to strike here since early in the autumn.

Store Tofu Safely

Tofu is one "health" food that may not be healthy if it is prepared, packaged or stored under unsanitary conditions.

Tofu -- or soybean curd -- is a bland, cheeselike food high in protein and low in fat. Once used primarily in Asian and vegetarian cooking, tofu has become popular with dieters and is now found in most supermarkets.

Because tofu is rich in protein and moisture, it's also susceptible to the growth of harmful microorganisms, says nutritionist Marilyn Haggard.

Contaminated tofu was blamed for a recently reported outbreak of food poisoning in Washington state which afflicted 50 people with gastrointestinal infections. Investigators believe the tofu probably became contaminated with bacteria after it was packaged with contaminated spring water.

"This doesn't mean that consumers should stop eating tofu," says Haggard, a specialist in food safety for the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"But it does suggest that they should take the same kinds of precautions they would in buying, preparing and storing any protein food," she adds.

When buying tofu, note how it is stored. It should be refrigerated in the same type of case as dairy products. If the tofu is stored in a fresh produce case, it has probably not been kept at a cold enough temperature to prevent the growth of bacteria, Haggard says.

Check the "use by" date and abide by it. Also avoid buying tofu in a package that is bulging, since that may be a sign of growing bacteria, she cautions.

At home, keep tofu refrigerated until you use it. When you can't use the whole amount right away, submerge the remaining tofu in water inside a clean container. Then change the water every few days.

The specialist notes that while it is generally safe to eat uncooked tofu, cooking will kill most organisms.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED---Mr. and Mrs. James Withrow of Sudan announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Rozella Marie to John Lance Corley, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pyle of Clovis, N.M. Vows will be exchanged at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 15 in the Sudan Church of Christ. The bride is a graduate of Sudan High School and is enrolled at Lubbock Christian College. Corley is a graduate of Clovis High School and attends Eastern New Mexico University in Clovis, N.M

Red meats are not high-calorie foods. For example, a three ounce serving of lean roast beef contains 169 calories, while a similar serving of baked chicken, without the skin, contains 174 calories.

But, if you are on a low-calorie diet, you will want to make sure that you prepare meat dishes so they contain as few calories as possible. Here are some suggestions from the American Meat Board and the Beef Industry Council for cutting calories in red meat dishes:

1) Select lean beef cuts, such as top round, top loin strip steak, top sirloin, eye of the round, flank, tip and extra lean ground beef.

2) Choose lean pork cuts, including tenderloin, fresh ham and loin chops.

3) Select lean ham and reduced fat luncheon and processed meats.

4) Trim the outside fat from meats before cooking and trim any separable fat before eating.

5) Bake, broil, or roast meats on a rack so they will remain above the drippings.

6) Remove the drippings after browning meats for stews, pot roast, or ground meat.

7) Pan broil rather than panfry. In pan broiling no fat is added and drippings are removed as they accumulate.

8) Remove the layer of fat from stews or soups after cooling.

Red meats provide a lot of nutrients for their calories especially when you prepare them using these methods.

Making Sense Of Meat Labels

The meat in your supermarket may carry names like "extra lean", "gourmet lean" and "super trim," on the label. But what these terms mean depends on the butcher.

"Because there's no mandatory system for naming beef once it reaches the market, extra lean might mean 85 percent lean to one butcher and 75 percent lean to another," says nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten.

But the beef industry does have a voluntary standard limiting lean ground beef to 24 percent fat and extra lean to 15 percent fat, she adds.

According to the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist, the only time you can be certain about the names of beef steak and roasts is when they're called "prime" "choice," or "good."

Only meat graded at the packinghouse using U.S. Department of Agriculture guidelines can be labeled with these words. Government graders assign these designations on specific criteria, such as age and the degree of fat marbling.

The beef with the most fat marbling tends to be the most tender and is the most likely to be called "prime."

Recent USDA figures show that about half the markets in the country do not use the federal grading terminology exclusively.

"If your supermarket doesn't use the federal terminology, become familiar with the labeling terms they do use by asking the butcher what they mean," Sweeten advises.

Consumers can also get nutrition information on labels or at the meat case in many Texas stores, says the specialist.

Many supermarkets are using "Meat Nutri-Facts," a program supported by the red meat industry to inform consumers about the nutritional composition of meat.

Large Nutri-Fact cards displayed in the meat case show the amount of calories, total fat, cholesterol, sodium, protein, iron, zinc, thiamin, niacin and vitamin B-12 contained in a cooked, trimmed, three-ounce serving of a particular cut of meat.

"This information can help consumers select meat cuts according to nutrient needs, and may be of great use to shoppers on special diets," notes Sweeten.

Consumers who pay attention to both the grading of meat and its nutrient content can make better decisions about getting the most for their meat dollar, says the specialist.

Seasonless Wardrobe Saves Money

Although the stores may be filled with "spring" clothes, you can save money by thinking in terms of a seasonless wardrobe.

Seasonless wardrobe planning simply means buying items you can wear year-round, says clothing specialist Becky Saunders. This maximizes the wear you get from each item and expands your wardrobe.

A seasonless wardrobe is built on clothes made of fabrics appropriate for different climates, says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Lightweight wool, for example, is comfortable in spring and early summer as well as fall. Linen fabrics that were once worn in the summer only can also be used throughout the year.

Loose knit sweaters made from natural fibers can be worn by themselves in the summer an by themselves in the summer and over other clothes during cool weather.

The specialist points out that "layering" light- to medium-weight clothes over one another and mixing different prints and textures are fashion trends that make it easier to develop a seasonless wardrobe.

"When shopping for year-round clothing it's important to avoid extremes and choose basic clothing in medium color tones, print sizes, fabric weights and textures for maximum wear," says Saunders. "You can always add a seasonal fashion touch with an inexpensive item or accessories."

It also pays to buy clothing you can mix and match with items already in your wardrobe, she adds.

Think about both your work and leisure clothing needs as well. "Typical wardrobe needs will vary seasonally for some special activities, such as sports, but for everyday activities most our clothing needs are remarkably similar year-round," says Saunders.

Removing Smoke Damage From Fabric

Studies on the removal of smoke damage from washable clothing indicate the best procedure may be washing them at home, says clothing specialist Dr. Ann Beard.

Tests on cotton, polyester and cotton/polyester blend fabrics show that washing removes smoke damage more effectively than dry cleaning, says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Both visible smoke damage and odor may be successfully removed from washable fabrics using the following laundry procedures:

- Use the normal or regular cycle with warm wash and warm rinse. Keep the load small so fabrics have room to move easily in the water.

- Use a liquid laundry detergent, following the manufacturer's recommendations for amount. If you don't have liquid laundry detergent available, use a powdered detergent containing phosphates and liquid chlorine bleach. Use the amounts recommended on the label. Be aware that the bleach may cause some fading or other damage to the fabrics.

- Repeat the washing from three to five times until all smoke odor is gone. Avoid drying the fabrics between launderings if possible. If the fabrics must be dried, use no heat in the drier since heat may inhibit the removal of smoke damage.

Special Education brochures completed and distributed; Federal Application-EHA-B Funds; Special Olympics and S.O.S. Week.

Upcoming events discussed include: Leadership Training; Early Childhood Brochure; and Special Olympics.

Committee members were shown the newly completed SERS catalog, the Policies and, Procedures notebook, new state forms and the Special Education scrapbook.

Also discussed were plans in the near future to keep the Special Educational Management System (SEMS) records in the Special Education office instead of the Educational Service Center.

Contracted services as well as the consultants and services provided by the Education Service Center were discussed at length, to give a better idea of what the Special Education Department offers.

Special Education support services were described, as well as specific cases in which the Special Education Department has provided very specialized and unique needs to some special students during the fall.

OUTLOOK POOR FOR STATE BUDGET

AUSTIN – Less than a month ago we predicted dire consequences for the state budget if world oil prices continued to drop. It's still way too early to hit the panic button, but our fears unfortunately seem to be coming true.

A decision by the Oil Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to flood the world market with oil indeed is taking its toll on oil prices. As we feared, the world price for oil is beginning to slide toward the $20-per-barrel mark.

News reports this week indicate contracts for February delivery of oil have dropped to a little more than $21 per barrel. Contracts for April crude are trading for between $19.25 and $19.50 per barrel.

Those prices obviously aren't etched in stone. A surge in demand between now and the delivery date could send oil prices back up.

All this talk of cheap oil is good news for the consumer, of course. Lower oil prices eventually translate into lower prices at the gas pump. But, we also have noted how these lower oil prices eventually will do more harm than good to Texans.

Economists say $20-per-barrel oil automatically guarantees a recession for the state. Oil production traditionally generates numerous jobs in Texas, and low prices obviously discourage production. The lower the oil price, then, the higher our unemployment rate.

Our problems don't end there, either. We all are painfully aware of our state government's reliance on the oil production tax. As production curtails so do tax revenues.

If oil had remained at about $24 per barrel, as State Comptroller Bob Bullock initially estimated, the Legislature still would face a $3 billion revenue shortfall when it reconvened in January of next year. With oil at less than $20, the possible shortfall staggers the imagination.

Comptroller Bullock officially has not revised his preliminary revenue estimates to take into account the declining price of oil. We commend his decision, because much could happen between now and next January. There is no need to panic yet.

Still, it is not too early for some careful consideration of the dilemma we could face. When OPEC first announced its intention to flood the market, we asked you to consider the potential ramifications for our state budget.

We're going to reitterate that request now. The Legislature is going to have to make some very hard choices next year, and there's no way we can do it without your input.

Think about the services you receive from the state. Balance them against the budget constraints we likely will face. Our job is to represent you, to abide by your wishes. That's why we need your input on this most critical of issues.

Please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Kasey Whatley, son of George and Jackie Jean Whatley, will participate in the calf scramble on March 1 in the Astrodome.

He will be competing for one of the 264 calf purchase certificates to be awarded at the 1986 rodeo. Additionally, as many as two youngsters from each rodeo performance are awarded a "hard luck" certificate for their strong efforts in attempting to catch a calf, resulting in 32 more certificates given.

"Although we have a truly international livestock show, we probably take the most pride in the thousands of youngsters who come to our livestock show each year," said Don Jobes Jr., assistant general manager.

"They've shown that they're the hope for the future of our agriculture by committing themselves to a long year of hard work raising their animals," said Jobes.

Junior show and open show exhibitors will compete for millions of dollars in prize monies and premium auction prices.

Long before the show starts, committee volunteers contact auction buyers to guarantee that each animal sold at one of the four junior auctions will bring a price above the current market value.

Junior exhibitors show a variety of animals, including beef and dairy heifers, breeding sheep, goats, commercial steers, breeding rabbits and market lambs, steers, poultry and barrows.

The 1986 show will have two new breeding beef heifer classes, Red Brangus and Maine-Anjou, as well as three new open cattle shows, which are Blonde d'Aquitaine, Salers and Simbrah.

Red Poll and Saler/Braler cattle sales will also be on the schedule for the first time in 1986.

By Spencer Tanksley County Extension Agent

As vegetable gardeners in Bailey County prepare for spring planting, their first step should be to control soil insects.

Soil insects can reduce vegetable quality and yields if left uncontrolled, points out Spencer Tanksley, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

For effective control, mix insecticides into the soil at a depth of 4-6 inches at least two weeks before the garden plot is planted, suggests Tanksley.

Among destructive soil insects are wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, cabbage maggots, mole crickets, sowbugs, slugs, snails and cutworms. Some destroy plant seed, roots, tubers and underground stem parts while others cut off young plants at or near the soil surface.

Most soil insects can be controlled with diazinon 25 percent liquid concentration or Spectracide 6000 applied as a 5 percent granule. Granules usually give the best control, says Tanksley. If cutworms or sowbugs become a problem after the garden has been planted, broadcast 5 percent Sevin bait over the soil surface. This bait containing metaldehyde will also control slugs and snails. However, it is not formulated to be mixed into soil.

Garden sites planted for the first time or those previously in grass or weeds are more likely to harbor damaging numbers of soil pests. Before treating with an insecticide, inspect the garden site by taking soil samples at several locations to a depth of 5 to 6 inches. Remove one square foot section of soil from each location and record the number of soil insect pests present. As a general rule, an average of one or more soil insects per sample suggests the need for insecticide treatment.

Before applying any pesticide always read and follow label instructions, adds the county agent.

Fire Department Chief Re-Elected At Lazbuddie

Members and wives from the Lazbuddie Fire Department met Saturday, January 25, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nicky Nickels of Lazbuddie, for a buffet supper and business meeting, followed by games and snacks. A total of 35 persons attended the combined meeting.

Glen Lust was re-elected fire chief; Nicky Nickels, assistant fire chief; Hoppy Jennings, secretary/treasurer; Doug Rice, reporter; Bart Burnett, training officer; Orin McBroom, Mike Goodnough, Rick Copp and Bob Davison, captains. A gift certificate from Poor Boy's Steak House was presented to Glen and Barbara Lust "for their outstanding contributions to the department."

It was announced an Emergency Care Attendant (ECA) course, sponsored by the department was due to get underway on Monday, February 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the Lazbuddie High School library.

Local Youth Exhibit Stock At Fort Worth

Several 4-H youth attended the Fort Worth Livestock Show, and brought home ribbons, despite very heavy competition. For instance, many of the beef cattle were European Cross, and Spencer Tanksley, Bailey County Extension Agent, said 77 head were shown in each class.

He also said the youth sold eight of the 15 head of cattle shown, with the rest to be shown at other Texas livestock exhibitions.

Exhibitors and their placings include:

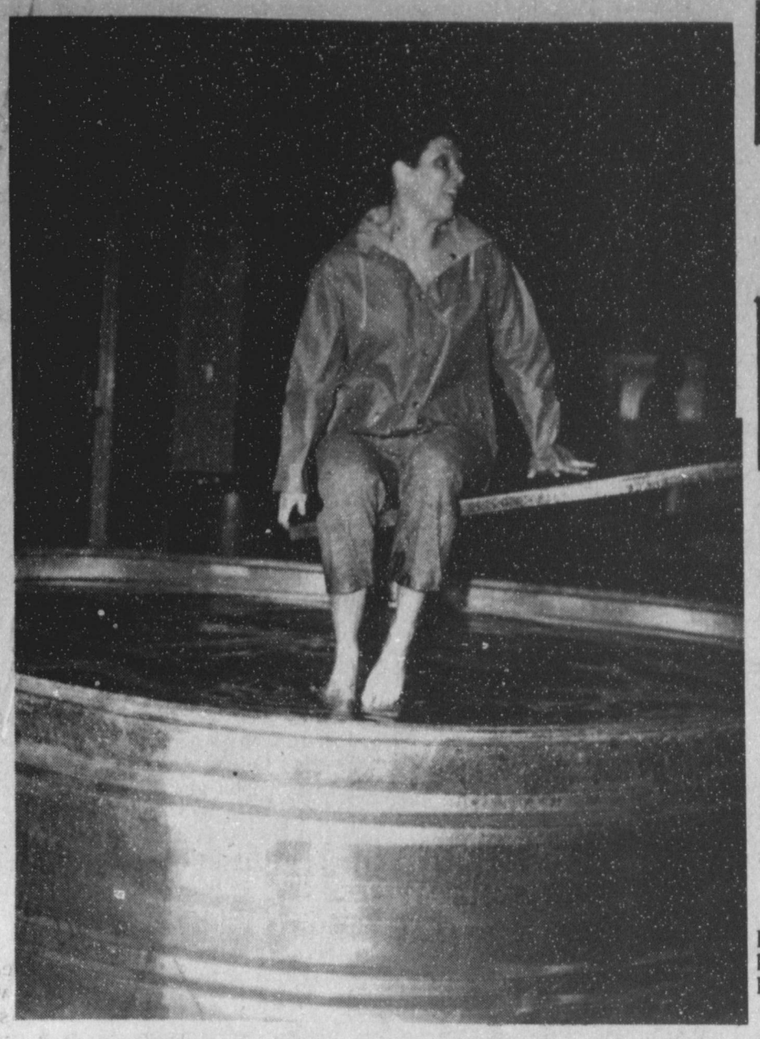

Courtney Tanksley, first, middle weight Hereford; Colin Tanksley, fourth, middle weight American Cross; Jodie Wheeler, fourth, light heavy weight European Cross; Jodie Wheeler, fifth, light heavy weight European Cross; Colin Tanksley, seventh, light heavy weight European Cross; and Todd Bessire, tenth, light weight Hereford.

Also, Greg Young, tenth, heavy weight Angus; Greg Young, eleventh, middle weight Polled Hereford; Todd Bessire, sixteenth, middle weight European Cross; Chris Young, twentieth, heavy weight European Cross; Wade Wheeler, twenty-first, light heavy weight European Cross and Wade Wheeler, twenty-fourth, heavy weight European Cross.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Crude oil's price slide on the world market last week had state government leaders worried about the Texas economy, but Texas Gov. Mark White's re-election campaign felt slippage on another front.

Leaders of the state's second largest teacher group called on their 45,000 members to vote against Mark White after his remarks favoring drug tests of teachers.

White immediately issued a statement saying there was no drug problem among teachers, but the damage had already been done. Teachers worked to elect White in '82, but a number of issues he favored in the Legislature have caused him to lose some support, a crucial amount that pollsters wish they could determine.

Meanwhile, The Quorum Report, a political newsletter, released their poll results which indicated White would beat both Bill Clements (58-42) and Tom Loeffler (52-48) but lose to Kent Hance (45-55) if the election were held in January.

Clements, however, is given a solid name ID lead in the four major media markets which produce most Republican primary voters.

In A Nutshell

The news breaking around the Capitol complex last week covered lots of different ground, but the highlights included:

• A scrutiny of state government's "air force" reported that more than $10 million in tax money supports some 38 state planes and nine helicopters, more than the Honduran Air Force.

One knuckle-rapping report alleged that Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower flew himself and five staffers in his state plane to Amarillo to see the movie "Country," at a cost of about $4,800.

• A Republican switched to the Democratic Party to run for governor, San Antonian contractor Bobby Locke, who twice won a GOP congressional nomination there, planned to start his campaign when he crossed a Houston marathon run finish line.

• Texas Republican Party chairman George Strake surprised everyone last week by opining that GOP state Sen. Buster Brown was not eligible to run for attorney general this year. Brown's challenge of that issue is in the Texas Supreme Court.

• The Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan wore his hood at a Capitol steps announcement of his write-in candidacy for governor. Later he stood on an Austin highway and waved to passing cars; one reportedly tried to run him down.

• The Capitol's new Goddess of Liberty statue will be forged out of recycled aluminum cans.

• A spokesman for the Panhandle "white oil" operators, Ron Slover of Amarillo, said he has given up his idea of running for governor, but urged producers to ignore a recent Railroad Commission directive on crude oil reporting.

• The U.S. Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruiing requiring the governor to seek U.S. Justice Department clearance before setting the date for special elections. The issue reached the courtroom last year in the special election called by Mark White to fill a vacated congressional seat.

YOU CAN SPARE YOUR BACK FROM PAIN

Sometimes after a long day at work I experience painful backaches. What can I do to cope with this situation?

It is estimated that some 20 million visits to doctors each year in this country are prompted by back pain. Nearly everyone at one point in their lives complains of backaches and related problems. Often these problems are resolved with conservative treatment, but they can become recurrent.

The back is part of the support structure of the human body, and is made up of 33 bones. The spinal cord and nerves pass between the vertebrae, all but the last nine separated by collagen disks. Pain can occur along any part of the spine, espceially if a disk ruptures and presses on spinal nerves. This pains is referred to as sciatica and is felt most keenly in the leg.

The lower back is a complex of muscle and ligaments which stretch to the abdomen. A strong set of supporting muscle has been shown to be protective against back stress and pain. You can begin the process of strengthening those back muscles by paying attention to your posture both while standing and sitting.

One of the easiest ways to protect your back is to sit correctly, especially if your work requires long stetches of sitting. The normal posture of the lower back is a slight forward curve, and the curved area often is referred to as the small of the back. You should sit in a chair so the small of your back can be pressed against the back of the chair. your feet should be flat on the floor and your knees at hip height. Any office chair that hugs the small of your back is both comforable and an aid to good posture.

When standing for long periods, it helps to keep the pelivis tilted back to avoid a swayback, or lordosis, which exaggerates the natural curve in the lower back. High-heeled shoes and a protruding abdomen tend to promote lordosis. You can support the lower spine and avoid an aching back when standing by placing one foot on a stool or other object about four to six inches off the floor.

Waking from a night's sleep can be a painful experience if your mattress does not provide sufficient back support. Sleeping on your side is far better than on your stomach, a position that places stress on your back.

Treatment of back pain should be considered only after careful evaluation by a medical doctor. Diagnosing the problem, and its cause, can avoid unnecessary, an often expensive, procedures and care. Back pain is often a result of soft-tissue injuries, especially in younger adults. X-rays will not reveal the injured muscle or ligaments. Treatment for this and other acute back pain includes complete bed rest, aspirin, and heat applied to the painful area. Your physician may prescribe muscle relaxants and pain-killers on a short-term basis for patients with serve, restricting pain.

Surgery for chronic symptoms may be suggested but only after all other available therapies have been exhausted. Some patients find effective the non-surgical techniques such as biofeedback and muscle relaxation exercises. It is important to learn how to do these exerceises properly to gain maximum benefit. Adding strength and flexibilty to muscles in the back and abdomen can help to prevent the occurence, and re-occurence, of back problems.

Brent Black And Susan Lunsford

Lunsford, Black Crowned At Festival

With the setting of a "Winter Wonderland" at the Fine Arts boosters Sweetheart Festival, Susan Lunsford and Brent Black were crowned queen and king, they represented the speech department. The winning candidates were chosen based on the amount of money raised by each department through various fund-raisers held the last two weeks.

The coronation highlighted the evening's events. Candidates entered the Winter Wonderland, complete with snow-blanketed trees and starlights reflected against a blue snow scene. Centering the state was the eye-catching red sleigh, complete with everything but the horse. As the crowns were awarded, the king and queen made their way to their "thrones" in the sleigh.

Events for all ages and a variety of interests were available throughout the evening. The excitement of the occasion was reflected in the eyes of a child as he walked for the "umpteenth" time in the junior cake walk and finally won HIS cake. Fortunes were told in the freshman booth, and time will reveal the "truth" of these predictions. For those who have always wanted a different image, seniors offered to take pictures, using a variety of props, including a portrayal of Rambo and his "Girl Friday."

Sophomores sponsored a basketball throw with such prizes as dinner for two, football jerseys and savings banks. Children and adults alike enjoyed the dart throwing board. For those who wanted to relax and enjoy a hayride, the art club made such an event available; also, for a small fee, art students would created washable masterpieces on various parts of the anatomy. Drawing one of the largest crowd of participants was the dunking board, which allowed students to "take out" revenge on teachers, coaches, and various other "suckers". By the way, Coach Robinson, did you find a gold fish in your Sunday suit? Throughout the evening, students and adults found themselves repeatedly redeeming themselves out of jail.

Thanks go to the Fine Arts Boosters for an evening of fun.

Making The Grade

It's not easy getting by these days.
There is a new law our state has made.
It has to do with making the grade.

It affects all our lives;
It is called the "no pass, no play" rule.
It has to do with making the grade.

If you don't learn to cross your T's and dot your I's.
If you don't learn to add 1+1=2.
It has to do with making the grade.

If you don't learn all they throw your way, you don't get to play.
Football, basketball, band and all.
It has to do with making the grade.

Is it fair in any way?
That's what we would all like to know.
It has been cussed and discussed by one and all.
It has to do with making the grade.

We don't all agree but it is the rule.
We all hope there is a way to get it changed.
It has to do with making the grade.

A Storm of Emotions
By: Kenneth Maxwell

Jealousy strikes,
envy is close behind.
Blood boils, temperature rises.
Hate wells up inside,
ready to burst forth in an instant.
The clouds of anger gather,
ready to unleash
their hellish fury.
They release their energy in a tremendous burst.
Then...
A soothing voice thins the clouds of anger.
The hate within is replaced by regret.
Blood cools, temperature returns to normal.
A smile erupts;
love begins to blossom.
The storm has passed.

Bradley 'Citizen' Of Month

Leal's was the site of the Scac meeting held January 23rd. President Loy Triana called the meeting to order. Stacy Smith gave the treasurers report and Sherri Stovall read several letters of correspondence. Stacy Smith then introduced R.A. Bradley as the guest speaker.

Mr. Bradley spoke of his early years in Muleshoe. He spoke of the BAC (Business Activities Committee) which was formed after the Chamber of Commerce dissolved. When the Chamber of Commerce reformed, R.A. Bradley was elected president. Mr. Bradley also served as parade president for seven years and really enjoyed helping the ambassadorettes with their floats.

Bradley was also a major force in the formation of the Mule Putt golf course. Presently, Bradley serves on the boy scout board, the girl scout board, and the Muleshoe Heritage Foundation board. After Mr. Bradley finished speaking, Loy Triana announced that Mr. Bradley had been selected as Citizen of the Month for January. Stacy Smith presented him with a boutonniere. The group then signed up for concession stand duty to be held on February 7th during the Muleshoe-Idalou varsity basketball game. Loy adjourned the meeting and everyone enjoyed a delicious meal.

CRUISE IN THE OFF-SEASON

Although most people prefer to take their cruise during the peak of the season for all the glamour, excitement, and crowds it offers, others enjoy the quiet and restfulness of the off season cruise. Tourists are not present in such great numbers; interesting places can be visited more leisurely and at greater length.

Some people prefer to pray only when they are in church or at some great public gathering where the prayers are led for them. But our Lord said to pray in the "off-season." He said, "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." The real joys of prayer are truly found when you are praying alone with God. The scripture says to be instant in season and out of season.

The church would encourage you to pray both in church and at home. Prayer can uphold, support, and strengthen our churches, ourselves, and our country.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Seed Tests Help Farm

The Texas High Plains cotton harvest is virtually completed and farmers are looking ahead to the next planting season. Last year's erratic growing season makes it more important than usual that they take a close look now at the quality of seed they intend to plant, advises a cotton specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

A key factor in obtaining a healthy, uniform stand of early cotton--which contributes to successful production--is the use of good quality planting seed of varieties with established production records in the immediate area, said Dr. James R. Supak, Extension cotton agronomist at Lubbock.

This season's erratic weather patterns not only created problems with disease, stand, maturity, harvesting and fiber quality in various parts of the High Plains, but also raise some serious questions regarding quality of 'farmer caught'' seed for planting, Supak noted.

Whenever possible, the use of certified seed is recommended, he said. But he noted that a large percentage of the cotton acreage on the Texas High Plains is planted with ''caught'' seed.

''By taking into account the conditions under which seed produced, stored in the field and processed, and by using available test procedures, producers can obtain a reasonably good assessment of their planting seed quality,'' Supak said.

Certified seed provides the producer genetically pure seed of varieties with proven yielding ability, needed levels of disease resistance, desired fiber properties and other traits essential to successful production. Certified seed producers specify on the seed tags such information as standard germination rates and purity, and can usually provide buyers additional information about the quality of a given seed lot.

Quality testing of ''farmer caught'' select seed, however, is usually limited to the determination of the standard germination rate, to establish what percent of the seed in a given lot are alive. Occasionally the free fatty acid content is tested to determine if the seed are undergoing accelerated deterioration. Typically, seed with free fatty acid levels in excess of one percent should not be used for planting seed.

''These are important tests,'' Supak said, ''but they provide growers little information about how these seed are likely to germinate and emerge under actual field conditions. To date, there is no laboratory test available that is absolutely reliable in predicting planting seed performance in the field.'' However, a relatively simple technique for establishing a cotton seed vigor index has been developed by Dr. Norman Hopper of Texas Tech University, Supak said. Hopper is a professor of plant and soil sciences.

The Extension cotton agronomist said Hopper's index sorts seed lots into poor, fair, good and excellent categories. It provides an indication of how each seed lot is ant to germinate and em... typical High Plains co...

Using Hopper's syste... are subjected to two tests: standard germination te... (SGT), and the cool germination test (CGT). The percentage values obtained are then added together and the ''Vigor Index'' is determined from the chart in Figure 1.

For example, if a given seed lot has an SGT value of 80 percent and a CGT of 60 percent, the vigor index would be 140, or ''fair''.

What does the ''Vigor Index'' value or category represent? Based on Hopper's studies, the index provides indications of germination rates, emergence rates, and final stand establishment. The relationship obtained in 1984 between Vigor Index and final stand establishment is shown in Figure 2.

''This relationship is important because it tends to predict the percentage of seed planted that are likely to develop into viable plants, barring uncontrollable hazards such as hail,'' Supak said.

For example, under planting conditions similar to those encountered on the High Plains in 1984, approximately 65 percent of the seed from a lot with a Vigor Index of 175 are likely to develop into viable plants whereas only 45 percent of the seed can be expected to survive from a lot with an index value of 110.

''Survival percentages will vary somewhat with seasonal conditions but in general, the seed with the higher index value will produce the better stands,'' the Extension cotton agronomist said.

How well does the test work? In 1985, three seed lots of the same variety but variable quality were used in the establishment of cottonseed quality tests in six counties. These tests were conducted by county Extension agents in cooperation with cotton producers in these count... a... and vi... seed us... summarize... results of the... at the six te... shown in Table 2... six weeks, the final ... averaged 60,000 plant... for the ''good'' seed, 47... the ''fair'' seed and 31,00... the ''very poor''seed.

''As with all qualitative tests, the seed testing procedure described here cannot precisely predict the performance of a given lot of cotton planting seed for all planting conditions,'' Supak said. ''Its main attributes are simplicity and affordability.''

Most seed testing laboratories are already set up to run both the SGT and CGT and both are performed at reasonable cost. On the negative side, the inherent limitations of these procedures remains unresolved, the cotton specialist said.

''The CGT is especially finicky and on occasion discriminates heavily against partially dormant or slow germinating but otherwise acceptable seed. Usually, the seed technologist performing the test can spot this condition and will report it to the customer.''

Despite its limitations, the test can serve as an important management tool in selecting seed lots for use as planting seed, adjusting seeding rates and selecting seed for planting at different time periods, Supak said.

Whites Auto Stores, Inc. has been in business since 1930. In 1980, Canadian Tire Co., purchased Whites from Household Finance Co. For the 1st time in their history Whites Auto began to lose money. Finally, in January 1985 Canadian Tire Co. announced it's plans for Whites Auto to close the doors and go out of business. This, however, will have no effect on Poynor's Home and Auto. We will continue to honor all of our warranties. We are finding new suppliers and will continue to do business as normal. During this time of transition we will be able to offer super close-out prices. For the next several weeks we will be advertising these specials so keep your eye on the Journal for our Super Closeouts.
