Emergency Medical Technicians Russ Banks, left, and Marion Oliver transport injured firefighter Larry Green from the scene of the Wednesday afternoon accident involving a firetruck and three automobiles. Green and another fireman were treated and released, while the driver of one of the cars involved in the mishap is in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital. The firetruck, with a value of at least $75,000, was a total loss. See story, Page 2A.

Jobless rate drops 0.3%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell an unexpected 0.3 percentage point in June, breaking a pattern of rising joblessness that coincides with the end of the school year, the Labor Department reported today.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said last month's unemployment rate was 7.3 percent of the national workforce, compared to May's 7.6 percent.

The decline returned unemployment to the range that had prevailed in February, March and April.

"Unemployment traditionally rises in June, coincident with the closing of schools and the entrance of many young people into the labor force in search of jobs," the department said.

"This June, the increase was less than usual and, as a result, unemployment increased on a seasonally adjusted basis to 7.8 million."

The department reported that unemployment among blacks rose by 0.6 percentage point, from 13.6 percent to 14.2 percent.

The department says the labor force overall grew by 1.3 million last month, but that the rise was only about half the amount expected "based on patterns which have occurred in recent years."

Total employment fell by 840,000 in June, however, as the government reported 98.4 million people holding jobs.

The department also reported an increase of 100,000 people in its "discouraged worker" category — people who have given up their search for jobs because they can't find one.

The department reported these other changes in unemployment rates:

—Adult men declined from 6.3 percent to 6.1 percent.

—Adult women declined by 0.3 percentage point to 6.5 percent.

—Teenagers declined by 0.5 percentage point to 19 percent.

—White workers declined from 6.8 percent to 6.4 percent.

—Hispanics remained at 10.2 percent.

Due to the settlement of the coal miners' strike, mining jobs increased by 150,000, returning the total to just above the pre-strike level of March.

Construction employment, which had shown steady growth in the last half of 1980 and modest increases in the first four months of this year, declined by 60,000 in June to 4.3 million.

Manufacturing employment was unchanged over the month. The average workweek of production workers on non-farm payrolls edged down 0.1 hour to 35.3 hours in June.

The 7.6 percent unemployment rate in May returned to the peak level recorded in May, July, August and October of last year. The previous high monthly figure was 7.8 percent in December 1976.

Private analysts say the nation's unemployment rate is expected to remain relatively stable despite indications of an economic slowdown say.

Several forecasters agree with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan's assertion Wednesday that there is little likelihood the jobless rate will reach or top 8 percent as business activity weakens during the summer.

In an interview, Regan said that it appears the United States has halted double-digit inflation. But he acknowledged that the immediate result will be an economic slowdown, accompanied by higher unemployment.

State unemployment rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department today reported seasonably adjusted unemployment rates in June, as compared with May, for the nation's 10 largest states. They are as follows:

California: 6.7 percent in June, up from 6.5 percent in May.
Florida: 6 percent, down from 7.3 percent.
Illinois: 7.7 percent, down from 8.7 percent.
Massachusetts: 6.1 percent, up from 6 percent.
Michigan: 10.6 percent, down from 11.3 percent.
New Jersey: 7 percent, down from 7.8 percent.
New York: 8 percent, up from 7.5 percent.
Ohio: 7.9 percent, down from 8.2 percent.
Pennsylvania: 9 percent, up from 8.7 percent.
Texas: 6.6 percent, up from 5.3 percent.

Way cleared for housing bond issue

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

With the signature of Gov. Bill Clements on HB 2350, the way is cleared for the Midland County Housing Finance Corp. to proceed with another bond issue for single family housing.

Harry Clark, chairman of the Housing Authority, county finance corporation and Midland Housing Finance Corp., related progress on the single-family bond issue to the Housing Authority. The board met Wednesday in a regular session in City Hall Council Chambers.

It marked the last meeting for Clark, who has retired from The First National Bank of Midland and will be moving to San Angelo in August.

Guidelines for the new low-interest loan program will be more stringent than in the past because of federal regulations, Clark said. The new requirements say no one can apply for the money who has owned a house in the past three years, the mortgage can't exceed 90 percent of the average mortgage for the prior year and assumptions won't be allowed.

The average mortgage in Midland for 1980, said Clark, was $57,500.

Under the new guidelines, however, there would be no limit on a family's income. This had been one of the regulations imposed on previous Midland single family bond issues.

Before the county proceeds, a market study has been commissioned to determine the exact need for single family housing in Midland. That same group also will look at the need for additional apartments, according to Clark.

Ray Moudy of Citizens Savings & Loan Association and also on the Texas Housing Agency board told the Housing Authority the state is preparing for another housing bond issue, possibly in the amount of $500 million.

Last year when the state sponsored a bond issue, only one Midland lending group tried to obtain funds and that was Citizens Savings & Loan, said Moudy. But it was disqualified for conflict of interest.

The city is progressing with a multi-family bond program in which developers may obtain low-interest money to construct apartments, according to Clark. So far, applications have been approved for six developers and this would bring 1,664 units to Midland. Two more applications have been submitted — one from Dinerstein, Inc. of Houston for 276 units and another from a different Houston developer for 218 apartments.

The upper limit for apartments under this program was set at 1,600, said Clark, and the corporation is refraining from making a decision on the latter two applications. The market study will determine if there is a need for more apartments.

"I personally feel there's a need for 2,000 apartments here," Clark added.

Gene Abbott, who was absent for the first 10 minutes of the meeting, was elected chairman to replace Clark.

"Is this what I get for being late?" he asked when told of his election.

Before adjourning the meeting, Abbott questioned the possibility of more public housing units coming under the Housing Authority's jurisdicition.

Fred Kester, authority secretary, said the City Council was considering a 50-unit complex for elderly one year and another the following year, in addition to some public housing for low-income families.

"You think of public housing as something that will deteriorate," noted Housing Commissioner Ruth Wenck. "But I saw some in El Paso that weren't that way."

"I don't think we'd have that kind of experience in Midland," remarked Kester, referring to public housing which has become dilapidated in a short period of time in some cities.

"I've come to the conclusion it depends upon the administration," Clark said.

Odessa woman surrenders on charge of aiding escape

A 25-year-old Odessa woman surrendered to U.S. Marshal Gail Boggs in Midland Wednesday evening, bringing to four the number of people arrested on charges of aiding in the escape last month of four federal prisoners from Midland's federal jail facility.

Mildred Sue Pittenger surrendered about 8 p.m. Wednesday on a federal charge of aiding and assisting escape. She is being held in jail in lieu of $50,000 bond and is scheduled to be arraigned before U.S. Magistrate J. Michael Cunningham later today.

Arrested earlier this week and charged in connection with aiding in the escape were 26-year-old Tommy Dwayne Crosson, 29-year-old Donna Dotson and 21-year-old Kathy Havner, all of Odessa.

All are charged in connection with the escape June 11 of James Monroe "Cowboy" Crosson, 36, of Odessa; David E. Wallace, 35, William Anthony Dugan, 36, and Glenn Eugene Stewart, 37. The four escaped their second-floor cellblock after sawing through heavy screen wire covering windows. They apparently used a makeshift rope to lower themselves to freedom.

Morning edition planned Friday

The Midland Reporter-Telegram will be published as a morning newspaper Friday in keeping with the general observance of the July 4th holiday on July 3.

The newspaper will be closed on Friday with the exception of the Circulation Department which may be reached for service calls at 682-5311. Hours are from 8 to 10 a.m.

The Classified Advertising Department will be closed Friday but will be open Saturday from 8 to 10 a.m. to receive cancellations and corrections. That number is 682-2222.

Israel may get U.S. jet fighters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration tentatively plans to resume shipments of sophisticated jet fighters to Israel later this month, White House officials say. In the process, it may release four warplanes held up after Israel's raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

White House officials said Wednesday that unless the raid is found to have violated an agreement not to use American-made weapons for offensive purposes, six F-16 jets due for delivery July 17 will be shipped to Israel.

And although deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the June suspension of four F-16s to Israel had no direct impact on the July shipment, other officials said it was unlikely the administration would go ahead with one and not the other.

In any case, Speakes said today, the review of the Iraqi raid "is expected to be completed prior to any decision which is necessary on the future shipments of F-16s."

One official who requested anonymity pointed out that if te four panes schedule for Junedelivery are eleased, 'then the si are obviusly going."

Likeise, he added, if the six are sent, there would be no point in holding up the first four warplanes any longer.

Speakes said Wednesday that no final decision has been made, but he gave every indication at the daily White House press briefing that the plan as of now is to proceed with the July shipment.

Asked whether the July shipment would not be affected by the June suspension, Speakes said: "You're right, they're not." Pressed about whether he was sure of his answer, he replied: "Yes."

"Any change in those plans would have to be a result of that review, but I would caution you not to interpret that as an indication other shipments are likely to be affected," he said.

Later, in a telephone call, Speakes hedged slightly.

"Once the review is completed on the four, it will affect the others," he said. "Everything is under review. All things are possible. No decisions have been made."

While Speakes said there was no timetable on the suspended F-16s, CBS, ABC and The Washington Post reported that the planes will be released soon.

Carpenters continue strike for second day

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The strike by union carpenters in Midland and Odessa for benefits and cost-of-living pay increases has entered its second day.

Building construction virtually was shut down on Wednesday by union carpenters who set up picket lines, which are being honored by other union craftsmen, including electricians, plumbers and iron workers.

However, work at construction sites today is being carried out by non-union craftsmen and laborers.

"There are some non-union men (on the job sites)," said Mike Dooley, president of the 350-member Carpenters Union 1428 in Midland. "We don't have any control over those men, and we don't want any."

Journeyman carpenters, whose pay is pegged to $11.55 an hour, are seeking enough pay increase to afford a cost-of-living raise and to pay for benefits, such as health insurance and pension plans.

Initially, the carpenters had sought a $3.85 hourly pay increase, which J.W. Cooper, an Odessa contractor who is spokesman for the negotiating Associated General Contractors, has termed unrealistic.

The carpenters have dropped their pay-raise demand from $3.85 to $3.40 an hour, and AGC has upped its offer from $2.40 to $2.80 an hour.

"It's not like the twain never shall meet," said Dooley. "We've got good relations with them (management). "We're down to $3.40, and they're up to 2.80."

Dooley said management has complained about lagging and ineffective work, "but we (union people) have always maintained that if you've got a man on the job" who's loafing or otherwise not doing the work, then he should either be fired or his work brought up to par. He said management's handling of workers has much to do with on-the-job efficiency.

Midlander dies after being shot by Odessa policeman

ODESSA — Samuel Charles Brooks, 37, of Midland died after being shot once in the head by an Odessa police officer Wednesday afternoon at an Odessa food market.

According to Lt. K.R. Jones of the Odessa Police Department, the police were notified at 2:18 p.m. Wednesday of a suspicious person, possibly armed, at an Odessa food market.

When Officer John H. Ellen reached the scene, he noticed Brooks, a black male, outside the market. Brooks had a coat over his left arm with his right arm positioned under the coat.

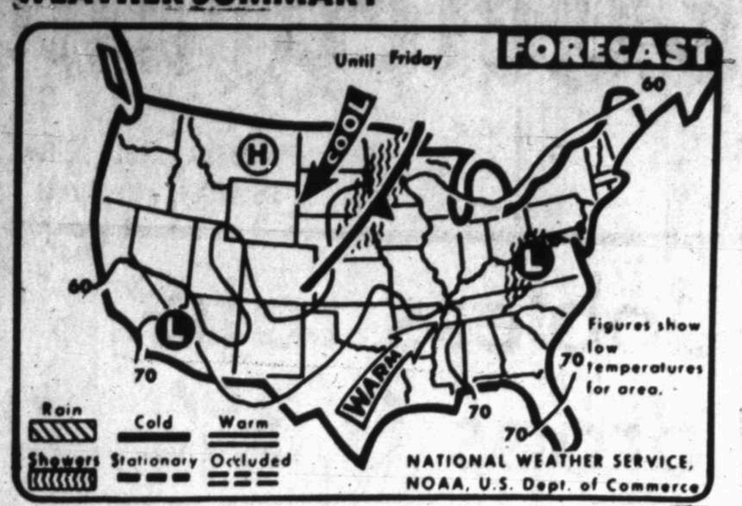

According to police, after being ordered by the officer not to move, Brooks produced a pistol from under the coat.

Officer Ellen fired one shot, striking Brooks in the head. Brooks was transported to Medical Center Hospital where he was prounounced dead by Justice of the Peace Charles Gee.

An autopsy was being performed this morning and the case will be submitted to the Ector County Grand Jury, a police spokesman said.

Brooks' body was taken to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in Odessa where services are pending.

No rain expected

Fourth of July celebrants will have no rain on their parade, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and warm afternoons through the weekend.

Friday's high should be in the mid-90s after an overnight low in the upper 60s.

Winds will be out of the south tonight at 5-10 mph.

The low this morning reached 66 degrees. The record for this date is 60 degrees, set in 1936.

Wednesday's high was recorded at 96 degrees, far from the 1964 mark of 105 degrees.

No developments in two Sears' fires

Midland Fire Marshal Herb Bloomer said this morning there are no new developments in the investigation into two fires at the Sears store in Midland Park Mall Tuesday morning.

Bloomer said investigators do suspect the fires were set, but noted at this time there are no suspects and no arrests have been made.

The first fire at the store broke out in a rack of clothes. The second occurred in the store's brick warehouse and also involved clothing.

Midland firemen used 2,000 gallons of water to extinguish the second blaze, but the first was put out by store employees.

Major motion picture may be filmed here

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

The possibility a major motion picture will be filmed in Midland exists. But, at this time, nothing is certain.

Wednesday's news that stunt man and director Hal Needham has been in Midland on several occasions scouting filming locations set off a rash of speculation and calls to Austin to the Texas Film Commission in the governor's office.

Needham is perhaps best known for directing Burt Reynolds' films "Smokey and the Bandit II" and "Cannonball Run."

Those who called discovered the Texas Film Commission didn't know exactly what Needham's plans are. Although the commission was contacted by Needham and, since being here, he has said Midland suits his filming needs, he has not obligated himself in any manner to film in Midland.

The commission knows the project is a legitimate one and has been referred to as such in Hollywood Reporter and Variety; it is supposed to be a contemporary western called "The Texans"; and the tentative budget is $8 to $10 million. And that's all that's known right now.

Another name associated with the project, Al Ruddy, helped secure a few more missing pieces to the puzzle. Ruddy was the executive producer of, among others, "The Godfather" and "The Longest Yard." It was the commission's understanding that Needham is doing the project for Ruddy. The understanding was correct.

When contacted Wednesday, Ruddy's assistant, Adele Nadel, said, "Chances are it will be done there (Midland), but not right away."

Ruddy has two major films planned for 1981 and it was thought "The Texans" would be filmed first, but it will be the second of the two, Ms. Nadel said.

Both will be done independently of a studio, she said. The film Ruddy is doing first is "Megaforce."

This switch in filming has postponed "The Texans" to the end of the year and, as of now, Ruddy will know nothing certain about filming locations until October or November, she said.

"Needham said almost every kind of location we could need would be found in Midland," Ms. Nadel said, adding, "There has been no casting. Nothing has been done on it" besides scouting possible locations.

Ms. Nadel was hestitant to say anything about the script other than it is an original John Milius screenplay which is in the process of being rewritten.

Approximately two months ago one of Needham's aides contacted Randy Hicks at the Midland Chamber of Commerce. At that time, Hicks said, they were looking for a large ranch style estate in West Texas surroundings.

Hicks and the Texas Film Commission both said it was their understanding that if Midland is chosen as the site, the actual filming will include the Midland-Odessa area and some locations around Abilene.

Sellmeyer selected new professor of journalism

Ralph L. Sellmeyer, professor of journalism at Texas Tech University, has been selected as the Allison Professor of Journalism at Midland College. His appointment is effective Aug. 1.

The Allison Chair of Journalism is an endowed position, established in 1978 by Helon Y. Allison in memory of her late husband and son, James N. Allison Sr. and James N. Allison Jr., both former publishers of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and The Plainview Herald. The Allison Fine Arts Building on the Midland College Campus was named in honor of the Allison family shortly before Mrs. Allison's death in 1980.

Sellmeyer replaces Jim Patten, who resigned the position to accept an appointment as journalism professor and coordinator of the news-editorial sequence at The University of Texas at El Paso.

"We feel Ralph Sellmeyer is an ideal choice to head this very unique endowed journalism department at a two-year community college," said Dr. Al G. Langford, president of Midland College, "He has a long and distinguished career in journalism education at Texas Tech, is well-known by Texas and New Mexico newspaper publishers and high school journalism teachers. He brings both knowledge and enthusiasm, plus a great awareness of West Texas to Midland College. We feel he can build on the excellent program which Jim Patten began during the past year.

Sellmeyer was selected unanimously by a review committee that includes representatives from Midland College and The Reporter-Telegram.

"I think I am one of the luckiest persons in the world," Sellmeyer said during a recent visit to the MC campus, "My wife and I have always enjoyed visiting Midland, we know a lot of people here, and I feel the opportunity to build a first-rate journalism program at a community college is almost unlimited. We are really excited about everything."

Sellmeyer earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in journalism from the University of Missouri. He came to Texas Tech in 1960 and has been serving as associate chairman of the department for the past 12 years. The Texas Tech journalism and mass communications prgram has more than 1,200 students, making it the nation's ninth largest in enrollment among 300 such programs in United States colleges and universities.

Seven years ago, Sellmeyer began a public relations sequence at Texas Tech that now has more than 200 majors enrolled. For some ten years, he was director of Tech's high school newspaper and yearbook seminar, which is the oldest continuing workshop in the state.

Ralph L. Sellmeyer

He has worked extensively with the Texas Tech journalism recruitment program and has taught more different courses in the department than any other faculty member.

Sellmeyer also has spent many of his summers working on area newspapers, serving as editor of a large circulation annual magazine, "The Parade of Progress," and as an editorial, photographic and advertising consultant to area papers.

His professional experience also includes editorial and advertising positions with several newspapers, plus service in the U.S. Navy during World War II and the Korean War. Sellmeyer has authored many magazine articles and is co-author of three books: "The Professional Approach to Journalistic Photography" with Moore; "Advertising/Business Guide for School Publications" with Ross; and "The Red Raiders" with Davidson.

Sellmeyer received the Seventh Degree Key, the highest national award given by Alpha Delta Sigma, in 1973; two departmental teaching innovation awards; and selection as "Communicator of the Year" by the Department of Mass Communications Student Advisory Committee.

He was president in 1980 of the Texas Public Relations Association; 1981 president of Sigma Delta Chi, Society of Journalists; 1979 president of the Texas Journalism Educators Association; and has been a long-time member of the West Texas Press Association, Panhandle Press Association and Texas Press Association.

He served as board member and public relations director of the Caprock Girl Scout Council for six years, and as public relations chairman and member of the Lubbock United Way. He also is active in church activities.

He and his wife, Millie, have four daughters.

Pool reopened

Hogan Park swimming pool reopened today with swimming allowed only in the shallow end. The pool had been closed due to a shortage of lifeguards.

As soon as additional lifeguards are acquired the deep end will be opened, a Midland Parks and Recreation Department spokesman said.

The pool will be open from 1 to 6 p.m. six days a week, closing on Sundays.

16-year-old gets 20 years in aggravated rape case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The 16-year-old youth who was accused of raping a Midland woman while her baby cried has been meted a 20-year sentence by the jury which found him guilty of aggravated rape on April 3 in east central Midland.

The defendant, Finn Lee Patton, is also indicted for assault with intent to commit rape in Hobbs, N.M., earlier this year.

In the Midland incident, the 22-year-old mother said Patton, who lived next door to her and her husband's house, had come over to inquire about a refrigerator and stove she had had for sale, left and came by with a butcher knife and assaulted her amid her protests and the crying of her 2-year-old daughter.

The women sobbed and cried on the witness stand in 142nd State District Court, as she related the moments prior to the rape and the rape itself. She said that Patton had threatened to kill her and the baby.

Patton, who testified in his own defense, however, said that he did indeed have sexual intercourse and oral sex with the woman but that she was a willing partner.

He testified that in his initial visit to his neighbor, the woman had brushed up against him and they touched hands. The defendant said he interpreted the contact as friendliness and an indication that the woman wanted to have sex with him.

The defendant said he left her house, went to his parents' home, and returned to the woman's house.

But under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Jim Rex, Patton said "I just can't explain why" he had carried the kitchen butcher knife with him and into the woman's home.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated about an hour before finding Patton guilty of the crime and spent about two hours in the closed jury room before settling on a 20-year prison sentence as his punishment. Range of punishment for aggravated rape is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

Joining Rex in prosecuting the case was Midland County Attorney Robert Rendall. Rendall's primary role was questioning the victim, with whom he had dealt in hearings before Juvenile Court Judge Willie DuBose. In those hearings, Patton was certified as an adult and his case was transferred from Juvenile Court for trial in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

Rex said Rendall was brought in because the victim was familiar with him from the earlier hearings, likely would be more comfortable with him than with other prosecutors and the trial might be somewhat less traumatic for her under Rendall's questioning.

The court-appointed defense attorney in the case was Les Acker, a former county attorney whose terse cross-examination of the woman in questioning her motives and actions had drawn the woman to anger and to increased sobbing.

Man struck, killed north of Odessa

ODESSA — A 34-year-old Odessa resident was struck and killed by a vehicle early this morning as he attempted to cross U.S. 385 just north of Odessa.

Investigating officers for the Department of Public Safety said Cruz Hernandez Gonzales was struck about 2 a.m. today by a car driven by 35-year-old Rosie Ann Majors of Odessa. Officers indicated Gonzales was crossing the roadway from east to west at the time of the accident. Ms. Majors' vehicle was southbound.

The force of the impact knocked Gonzales' body more than 100 feet from the point of impact. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Charles Gee Jr.

Investigating the accident was Trooper Gerry Villalobos of Odessa.

Carlsbad, Alpine planning special holiday activities

Carlsbad, N.M., and Alpine, Texas, are both planning special activities for Saturday.

Carlsbad's festivities will be held at Lake Carlsbad recreation area beginning at 3 p.m. with a performance by the Flying X Chuck Wagon Band. At 4 p.m. the Sunland Skiers of El Paso will perform. The Cinderella Girls will present a program at 5:15 p.m. followed by Ken Nelson's Next to the World's Greatest Jazz Band at 5:45 p.m.

The College of Santa Fe will present a melodrama at 6:45 p.m. and the Cavemen Band will perform at 7:45 p.m. Continuing the celebration will be a Spirit of '76 Parade at 8:15 p.m. and a boat and flag parade at 8:30 p.m. The 8:45 p.m. fireworks display will conclude the evening's festivities.

All performances will take place in the band shell area with the exception of the water activities. All are free to the public. For more information contact the Carlsbad Chamber of Commerce.

Alpine's celebration will be held on the Alpine County Courthouse lawn beginning at 10 a.m. with a parade. Following the parade, over 20 booths will be arranged on the courthouse lawn. Everything from chocolate cake to handmade shawls will be exhibited for sale.

Those interested in evening entertainment might want to attend the Friday night street dance at Alpine, featuring music by the Charlie McDaniels Band, or Sul Ross State University's production of David Grote's "The Medicine Man," a two-act farce. The cost of the street dance is $3 per person. For more information contact the Alpine Chamber of Commerce.

Other area activities being held this week include a Collector's Preview Tuesday, which is the night before the beginning of the 51st annual Texas Cowboy Reunion in Stamford. The preview features the works of 36 western artists. Presented by the Stamford Art Foundation as a benefit for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, this is the 8th annual Western Art Exhibit and Sale held in Stamford.

The Collector's Preview is set for 6:30 p.m. with sales to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the John Selmon Memorial Gallery on the Texas Cowboy Reunion Grounds. The exhibit will be open to the public Wednesday and will remain open throughout the Texas Cowboy Reunion. For more information call 1-773-3614.

Odessa man struck, killed near Barstow

BARSTOW — A 22-year-old Odessa man was struck and killed by a car as he stood beside his own vehicle 6.4 miles east of here on Interstate 20 Wednesday night.

Antonio Lopez Busso was pronounced dead at the scene by Judge L.A. Wester of Monahans. His body was taken to Wilson-Miller Funeral Home in Monahans.

Investigating officers said Busso had legally parked his vehicle beside Interstate 20 about 8:45 p.m. Wednesday and was standing on the passenger side, putting oil into the engine, when the mishap occurred.

A westbound car driven by 33-year-old Ernesto Salcido of Pecos ran off the roadway, struck the right rear of Busso's vehicle and then ran over the Odessan, DPS reports indicated.

The accident was investigated by Trooper J.F. Woodhall of Pecos.

Midland firemen kept busy with fires throughout city

Midland firemen were kept busy Wednesday responding to major and minor fires throughout the city, including a fire that caused heavy damage to a bedroom of a mobile home.

Firemen responded to the blaze at 4:14 p.m. Wednesday and used 300 gallons to extinguish the fire. The fire was in the Carol Miller mobile home at 2200 S. Lamesa Road, No. 112.

Besides the heavy damage to the bedroom at that residence, the fire caused heavy heat and smoke damage throughout the home, fire reports indicated.

Two Midlanders were burned in a fire earlier Wednesday and one of them remained hospitalized this morning for treatment.

According to reports, Michael Schmidt, 23, and Sandra Schmidt, 24, were burned shortly after 9 a.m. Wednesday at their residence at 507 Parkwood Drive after a child set a wall decorator on fire with a cigarette lighter.

Occupants of the house were able to get the decorator outside the residence before it caused serious damage, but the two were burned in the process. The woman was treated for burns to her arms and face, and then released. Schmidt is in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital where he is being treated for first and second degree burns over 30 percent of his body.

Police this morning were investigating the theft of a tool box and $2,000 worth of tools from Thrifty Auto Parts, 3401 Thomason Drive.

The theft was reported by Eddie Owens, 3420 Baumann Ave., who said it occurred sometime Tuesday or Wednesday. There was no sign of forced entry to the business. The tool box taken was valued at $150 while the assorted tools were valued at $2,000.

Joe Carnes reported the theft of an electric guitar from Little Rock, 2401 W. Front Ave. He said the theft occurred between June 24 and 28, and the guitar was valued at $1,000.

Ben Pate of 5100 N. A St. reported the theft of two staple guns, valued at $300 each, from that address.

Midland man injured in collision

A 75-year-old Midlander injured Wednesday afternoon when his car was involved in a collision with a Midland firetruck responding to a fire call remained in satisfactory condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Two firemen injured in the mishap were treated and released.

Marion Overton Hines of 1007 S. K St. was turning left from Big Spring Street onto Florida Avenue at 3:15 p.m. Wednesday when he was involved in the collision with a firetruck, driven south on Big Spring by Jerry Dean Flippin, 34, of 4602 Versailles Drive.

Reports indicated the firetruck first struck Hines' vehicle, knocking it into two vehicles in line behind it, then struck the second of those vehicles and rolled over.

The other two vehicles were driven by Antonio Villagran, 23, of 1607 W. Kentucky Ave. and George Sherman Smith Jr., 39, of 2305 Culpepper Drive. Neither man was injured, reports indicate.

Fire Chief Raymond Lewis said this morning that the firetruck involved in the collision was a total loss. The truck, a 1973 model, cost $30,000 to $35,000 when purchased, but Lewis estimated it would cost $75,000 to $100,000 to replace it.

Alternative flight delights traveler

By BETTY PEACH
Copley News Service

Quick decisions to take an alternative route when traveling have led to some unusual encounters or delightful experiences.

Faced with a $27 taxi ride into Boston's Logan Airport and a three-hour wait for a TWA flight to San Diego, I chose an alternative. Rode with a friend south to Hyannis airport, where she caught a plane to Nantucket and I flew north to Boston's Logan Airport.

The flight ticket was only $4 more than the cab fare. And infinitely more fun.

THE DeHAVILAND Twin Otter, workhorse of the commuter airlines, lumbered down the runway at Hyannis and slowly lifted into the air. It flies the 30-minute scenic route into Logan, and on that clear, sunny day, provided a glorious view of Cape Cod, a curving finger of land beckoning the Atlantic.

The plane's crew consisted of a pilot and first officer, both visible in the doorless cockpit.

Passengers squeezed into child-size seats in one row down the port side, a double row down the starboard, no armrests anywhere.

It's a high-wing plane, making for unobstructed visibility downward. For economy of construction, the wheels do not retract, and since the Otter was planned as a commuter plane, it rarely flies high.

FROM HYANNIS on the south coast of Massachusetts to Logan is about 60 miles as a gull flies, and we flew only a little higher, passing gulls going the same way not far below us. A few sailboats dotted Cape Cod Bay, but the water was rough, the weather windy.

The chatty pilot pointed out Provincetown on the top of Cape Cod, and provided much informal information about the area. He must double as public relations man for the line, for he bubbled with tales of what is obviously his favorite place in the world.

With that, he explained a turn inland and a slow descent to avoid turbulent winds over the water. From about 700 feet over the low country, we could count windows in the stoic New England houses -- huddled together for warmth in small villages -- and count the lakes, ponds and streams that make silver confetti on the forested land.

THERE WAS A LONG, gradual descent across Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor, where piers were plunged like protective bayonets into the water's edge. The harbor is sprinkled with islands, some connected tenuously to the mainland by a narrow thread of roadway.

The view of Boston as we approached the airport was the best I had all week. Its high-rise buildings give it a skyline that looks like dozens of others in the world. But it's comforting to know that tucked down among them still stand some of the shrines of American history.

Landing at Logan is always fascinating. Like San Francisco Airport, it is built on a finger of land poking into the harbor, and not an inch of runway is wasted. The terminal at Logan, like terminals almost everywhere, is expanding.

IN THE NEW WING where TWA departs, something akin to a shopping center has been established. Departing passengers may buy live lobsters to take home, eat clams at stand-up fast-food stalls, look at new automobiles on display, browse through two well-stocked bookstores, or buy clothing made in the many factories that dot Massachusetts. High-fashion things at that. Prices to match.

'Meddler' kicked out by Nicaraguan leader

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government is expelling an American it says urged coffee growers to support an uprising.

Mario Mejia, director of immigration, said Tuesday that Frank Bendana, 48, would be put on the next plane out of the country because of his "meddling in the internal politics of the country."

The Nicaraguan government is controlled by the Sandinista National Liberation Front, which overthrew rightist dictator Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Bendana, whose hometown was not available, reportedly denied saying anything political.

Cezanne landscape brings $1.3 million

LONDON (AP) — A landscape painted by Paul Cezanne in 1876 sold for $1.3 million to an anonymous buyer, the top price paid in an auction of 116 impressionist and modern paintings and sculpture.

The auction at Sotheby's Tuesday night took in a total of $16.8 million.

A Fernand Leger picture of trees and houses sold for $880,000 dollars, an auction record for the artist. An auction record for Alfred Sisley was achieved when $615,000 dollars was paid for a painting of one of his favorite views of the Seine river at Argenteuil.

A New York dealer bought a 1914 Pablo Picasso cubist work, "Homme Assis au Verre," for $865,00.

Troops fighting Soviets

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's Islamic insurgents, known for their internal feuds, have united to battle Soviet troops in Paghman, the old summer capital outside Kabul, according to an Afghan source.

The source, who has been accurate in the past, said Tuesday the battle for Paghman has raged for seven straight days with heavy casualties. He said rebel bands from Bamyan, 75 miles west of Kabul, and Panjsher, 60 miles to the northeast, have joined the fighting. The report could not be independently confirmed.

Pilot to test the 'flying scissors'

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — For about an hour a week, the strangest thing in the California skies is most likely an experimental airplane with a rotating wing that looks very like a pair of airborne scissors.

The white-on-blue AD-1, with its top-mounted wing swiveled until the right wingtip reaches nearly to the plane's sleek nose and the left wing even with the tail, almost looks broken. A laymen might wonder that it flies at all.

But test pilot Thomas McMurtry proves that it will fly, and he had a straightforward assessment after a recent flight: "I like it."

Once envisioned as a quiet and highly efficient supersonic transport, the "oblique wing" concept now exists only as this one small test plane that periodically astounds bystanders by circling over the dry lake bed that was the space shuttle's landing strip last April.

"This is something that is so different (from any other plane that has ever flown) that you've got to show some real advantages before anybody will give you a second look," said William Andrews, the plane's test manager at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center here.

He said continuing tests of the AD-1 hint that the radical departure from conventional design may offer some major advantages, but its very uniqueness may stifle funding and condemn the plane toa useum of aeronautical curiosities.

Andrews said the idea, which has been kicked around by air engineers for decades, is to get maximum lift for take-offs by leaving the wing at a normal right angle to the fuselage.

But as airspeed increases, the wingspan adds drag that makes the plane work harder. So the pilot hits a toggle switch marked "skew," and the wing, mounted on a high-tech version of a Lazy Susan, begins to pivot.

It can rotate from zero to 60 degrees or stop anywhere in between, "so you can optimize efficiency for whatever speed range you're going to be flying," Andrews said.

Andrews is enthusiastic about the concept behind the $240,000 turbojet, which was custom-built of fiberglass to a des8gn by NASA's Ames Research Center at Mountain View.

If the concept is applied to a supersonic aircraft, he said, "it would certainly be 25 to 30 percent (more fuel efficient than conventional SSTs), and if we can realize that it would be very attractive."

Besides cutting fuel costs, he said, the oblique wing would use shorter runways and, by running on smaller engines, make less noise than standard planes. The unique aerodynamics, he said, should even reduce or avoid the thunderous sonic booms that have created a public relations pr⅞blem fjr supersonic transports.

"It sure looks like it has promise," he said. "But the manufacturers feel the risk (of investing in the concept) is too high. They don't have any confidence at all that the goals we proposed can be met."

He said the benefits should be greatest at supersonic speeds. "That's the theory; now it has to be proven."

But proving the theory may be impossible.

The little AD-1 is limited to a bit over 150 mph and, Andrews said, "We may not be able to do anything more because there may not be any money available."

Since last December, the AD-1 has made about 26 test flights of an hour or so each and "we've got another 10 or 15 flights to go," he said. Then, he added, "We'll put out our technical reports and ... after that, it's pretty much up to the manufacturers."

The AD-1 tests "will have demonstrated that this configuration can be flown." But, Andrews said, "I don't think you can reasonably extrapolate too far" from the little low-speed AD-1 to the performance of a full-size jetliner at supersonic speeds.

Andrews has proposed since 1972 that an F-8 jet be modified — its conventional wings replaced with a scissor wing — to test the concept at transonic speeds. That plan is at least s far from funding now as it was nine years ago.

Test pilot McMurtry estimates that the conversion would cost $6 million to $10 million and says, "I truly think it would be a good idea to pursue this into the transonic range, where the performance benefit would really be seen — or where we'd find that the benefit really isn't there after all."

French president critical of Central America policy

PARIS (AP) — Socialist President Francois Mitterrand has "serious reservations" about U.S. plicy in Central America and believes the West should help the oppressed people of the region rather than support oppressive regimes, according to an interview published in today's Le Monde.

"The people of the region want an end to the oligarchies which, enforced by bloody dictatorships, exploit them, force them to live in unbelievable conditions," Mitterrand told the respected French newspaper.

"A minority of the ation con⅘rols most of the wealth. How can we be surprised by popular uprisings?

"It is not a question of communist subversion," he continued, "but a refusal to put up with misery and subservience. The West would be better advised to to help these people rather than to try to contain them under the boot of repression.

"When they cry for help, I would prefer it if (Cuban President Fidel) Castro were not the only one to hear them," Mitterrand said.

He said he had "serious reservations about American policy in Central America," but added he believed "in the capacity of American leaders to rethink their positions."

Peace Corps sending volunteer to China

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Ole Anderson was disillusioned with the prospect of a "9-to-5" existence. But when he volunteered for the Peace Corps, he never expected to wind up in China.

"It was a shock. I really had no idea China was being considered," the 26-year-old Anderson said in an interview shortly before the Peace Corps announced the assignment Wednesday.

Anderson, a computer expert from Corvallis, Ore., volunteered for the Peace Corps several months ago and was told two weeks ago that the agency had recommended him for an assignment with an international group of volunteers sponsored by the United Nations.

"I was getting restless, and I wanted to do some more traveling," said Anderson, who is single. "I sort of became disillusioned with the 9-to-5 system where a third of your existence is owed to somebody else."

Officials told Anderson that he would participate in a program called the United Nations Volunteers. That group has 1,000 people from around the world assigned to countries that request particular types of expertise. The group is similar to the Peace Corps, but its members come from all the world instead of just the United States.

The Chinese requested a computer expert, and Anderson filled the bill. Until recently, Anderson worked in Hewlett-Packard Co.'s personal computer division at Corvallis, earning almost $30,000 a year.

He said he would be a consultant at the Peking Institute of Computing for two years, teaching computer theory and English. The institute is installing and programming a new mini-computer.

"There seems to be a massive program (in China) to catch up with Western technology — the high-technology areas, like electronic and computer engineering, aerospace engineering," said Anderson. "Those are the few areas where America still has the lead in the world.

"They're primarily interested in solving economic problems — doing statistical analyses of their economic progress."

A U.N. Volunteers spokesman in Washington said Wednesday that 30 to 50 members of the group would be assigned to China within the next year.

Anderson has taken a leave of absence from his job and traveled from Washington state to Florida before settling here for an intensive, 10-week course in Chinese. He listens to tapes and studies the complex language at least five hours a day in preparation for his move to Peking, which will occur before March.

Anderson, who earned a master's degree in computer science at the University of Southern California in 1977, said he lived in France for a year during high school and has wanted to visit other countries ever since.

The bearded man, who wore a headband at the interview, said he had not decided whether he would abandon his "sort-of-protester" appearance before going overseas.

"The way the country has been closed for the past years, any foreigner (in China) is unique and strange," he said. "Actually, I don't think they're going to pick up on how I compare with other Americans because they don't have anything to compare it with."

Economic meeting opens

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The 10 premiers of the Soviet bloc's economic alliance opened a three-day conference here today with the perils of Poland high on the agenda.

The delegates are expected to focus on Poland's economic problems, and the problems its independent trade union movement are posing for other COMECON members.

Poland's Solidarity union, born out of a nationwide labor rebellion last summer, is the only independent labor organization in the Soviet bloc.

The labor and political unrest that led to the creation of Solidarity also has caused Poland to fall behind in delivery of vital coal and other goods to fellow members of the economic alliance.

Czechoslovak officials said before the opening of the session that they would seek a tightening of sanctions for non-performance in COMECON agreements, a references to Polish shortfalls.

New evidence of Poland's desperate economic situation came from an official of the National Bank of Poland. The official, quoted by Warsaw Radio, said production has fallen 12 percent in the past six months while wages continue to climb.

"The imbalance between incomes and supplies of goods to the market is getting worse," causing more severe shortages on store shelves, the official said.

East European sources said some members of the group also wanted discussion of problems with food production and arrangements for producing modern electronic goods within the alliance.

Child with birth defects survives

GUTHRIE, Okla. (AP) — Sue Diane Fry plans to write a letter of thanks to the Miami judge who rebuffed two parents and ruled that a hospital could operate on their deformed baby, born with her spinal cord exposed.

Miss Fry has an intense interest in the case of 19-day-old Elin Daniels. She was born with the same condition — 22 years ago. She is now a junior majoring in special education at Central Oklahoma State University.

"He did the right thing," Miss Fry said of the judge. "It's time we realize that you don't just have to put these kids in an institution or let them die."

Elin's parents, Albert and Jennifer Daniels, originally opposed all efforts to prolong her life. They argued that whatever happened to Elin should be allowed to occur naturally.

Variety Children's Hospital in Coral Gables, Fla., went to court seeking the right to operate without parental consent. Dade County Circuit Judge Ralph Ferguson ruled for the hospital, and the surgery to enclose the baby's spine was performed June 24. Elin was reported in stable condition Wednesday.

The condition Sue Fry and Elin Daniels share is called myelomeningocele, a severe form of the birth defect called spina bifida. Such defects affect about 5,000 of the 3 million babies born in the United States each year. New techniques and antibiotics have increased survival chances from highly unlikely to 20-40 percent.

When Miss Fry was born in California, her mother, Shirley, had already lost a daughter at birth to myelomeningocele. But she recalls there was no hesitation that she and her husband, Jim, would try to save their child.

"Our pediatrician came in and said if we didn't get her to San Francisco within a matter of hours she would die of meningitis. When the doctor held her up, the spinal fluid dripped out," Mrs. Fry said in an interview at her apartment here north of Oklahoma City.

The Frys got the baby on a plane and into San Francisco's Children's Hospital, where her spine was closed and covered. But then spinal fluid began collecting in her brain.

"They told me they could operate for this, but that she might not live through the operation," Mrs. Fry said. "I asked if she could live without the operation and they said no, so I told them to go ahead.

"They put a shunt in her head so that when the pressure builds up the fluid is drained... " Mrs. Fry said. The shunt is still there.

The girl had had five major operations by the time she was 6.

"I don't remember the operations at all," Miss Fry said by telephone Wednesday from Candler, N.C., where she 2as visiting her 82-year-old grandmother, Eula Wickman. "All I have to remember them by are the battle scars."

During the Miami court case, doctors testified that the Daniels baby would never be able to walk on her own or control her bladder or bowel movements.

Miss Fry has no bowel or bladder control. She wears two bags to collect her wastes. Although she did not walk until she was 3, and wore braces for years to straighten her legs, she now walks without even the aid of crutches.

She is the first to admit that her physical disability is noticeable. "I have what most people call a funny walk — a kind of crooked gait. I have a slight deformity of myf' she said.

But there is no spinal deformity and she walks upright.

"There are a few things I can't do, like ride a pogo stick, but then I don't want to. I drive a car. I can shoot pool and play table tennis. I just can't do the strenuous physical sports. ... I don't feel like I'm handicapped — that's in the eye of the beholder."

Talking of Elin, Miss Fry said, "They can't expect her to be completely, visually normal. People expect a thousand miracles all at once, but it's going to take a long time. There will be long periods of physical therapy, like I had.

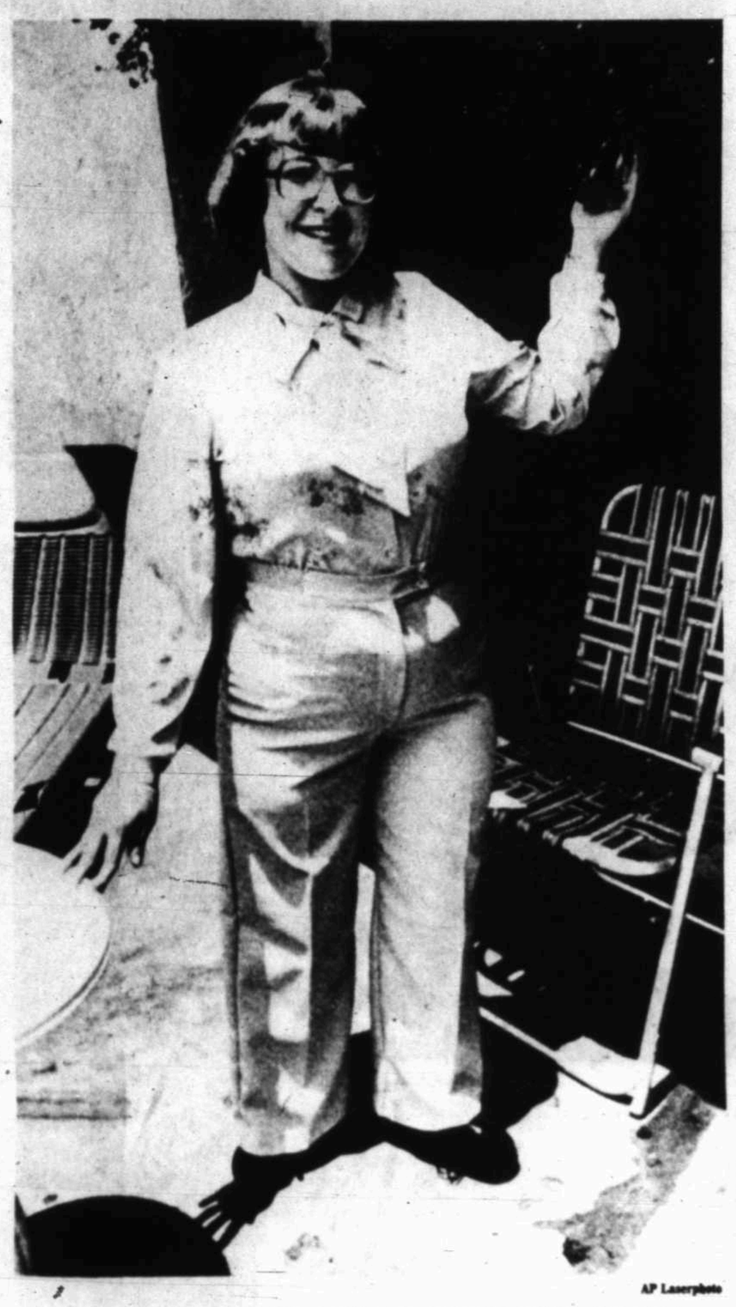

"But the one thing they have to remember is to treat her like a human being, not to dwell on her physical problems. They have to deal with her mind, and when she is about 2 or 3 let her explore and be inquisitive like other children. They have to let her grow as noy as she is able to."

Mrs. Fry says the first 10 years of her daughter's life "were pure hell."

"If I had to do it over again, I'm not so sure I would," she said. But she added that the rewards of seeing her daughter grow ntsr college and live on her own for a year have made it worthwhile.

Her daughter would certainly concur.

"I'm so glad the judge ruled the way he did in Florida," Miss Fry said. "So many people feel that nothing can be done when a child is born like this, that you just have to let them die. But you should give them a fighting chance."

Sue Diane Fry was born with an exposed spine, the same problem suffered most recently by a Florida baby whose parents opposed all efforts to prolong her life. But a Miami judge ruled that a hospital could operate on the child, and Miss Fry plans to write the judge thanking him for the decision.

Dental X-rays aren't needed on every visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — X-rays of teeth are generally safe and useful but shouldn't be taken routinely on every visit to the dentist, dental experts say.

The panel, drawn together at a three-day government-sponsored conference on dental radiology, concluded Wednesday that X-rays should be taken only when there is an indication that exams are needed.

The new recommendation springs from increasing public concern about the risk of radiation and the cost of health care, says Dr. Robert A. Goepp of the University of Chicago, who chaired the meeting.

But it runs counter to the practice of many dentists who have been taught to routinely give X-rays during the recommended yearly tooth examination.

"We have now refined the procedure," Goepp said. "The application of X-ray exams randomly probably is not a good thing. If there is no problem, X-rays are not recommended."

The panel, convened by the National Center for Health Care Technology to look at the X-ray question, stressed that some patients require more frequent X-ray exams and should rely on the recommendations of their dentists.

But many adults with healthy teeth and a low risk of dental disease can go two or three years between X-rays, the experts said.

Tooth decay and cavities can progress more swiftly in children than in adults, so healthy youngsters may need more frequent X-rays than adults, they added.

In another recommendation that runs counter to the practice of some dentists, Goepp said patients should have access to copies of their X-rays, either to keep for their own records or to give to another dentist. To keep the X-rays from being lost, the originals probably should stay with the dentist, he said.

The group estimated that almost half of all Americans visit their dentist each year. According to a recent study, about 80 percent of them receive dental X-rays.

The panel, which included dentists, researchers, radiation experts and health care officials from across the country, said X-rays should be ordered only after a thorough review of the patient's dental health.

This includes observation and examination of the teeth and gums, taking a history of previous dental care and determining the nutritional status of the patient, which can affect the condition of the teeth.

Dr. Priscilla W. Laws, a physics professor at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., who has studied dental radiation, said radiation from dental X-rays is minimal and should pose little risk.

Public concern has arisen from studies showing that excessive radiation can cause cancer, birth defects and other problems.

"People should question a dentist who routinely X-rays every six months or a year without giving a reason or an interpretation of the findings," Ms. Laws said.

Deformed baby doing very well

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — A deformed 2-week-old girl was "doing very well" after surgeons closed a hole that exposed her spine in a court-ordered operation, a spokeswoman for Variety Children's Hospital said.

Elin Daniels' parents initially opposed medical intervention and remained in seclusion. Doctors said the baby's vital signs were stable and that Elin might be able to go home in one to three weeks.

Following the delicate 3½-hour operation Thursday, Elin's physician said her prognosis was uncertain.

"The very best we can hope for is for this child to walk with a brace and have continent bladder and bowel movement," said Dr. Glenn Morrison, the hospital's chief of neurosurgery.

Limestone County deputies accused of cover up in deaths

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Houston lawmaker says Limestone County deputies were seen pulling two handcuffed bodies from Lake Mexia, taking the handcuffs off and dumping the bodies back into the lake.

Rep. Ron Wilson said Wednesday the deputies were trying to cover up "their mistake" in a June 19 incident that killed three arrested youths. Wilson said the bodies later were "rediscovered" without the handcuffs.

Wilson, D-Houston, went to Mexia Monday to look into the June 19 drownings of Carl Baker, Anthony Freeman and Steve Booker. The three youths were arrested for alleged drug violations at an Emancipation Day celebration and taken into a boat that capsized. Three oficers swam to safety while the youths drowned.

One of the issues in the case is whether the youths were handcuffed while in the boat.

"Most importantly, there is at least one person who viewed sheriff's deputies combing the lake after the drownings and locating two bodies that were handcuffed together at the wrists," Wilson said. "This person then saw the deputies remove the handcuffs and dump the bodies back into the lake."

Wilson told reporters the Limestone County sheriff's department is "directly responsible" for the deaths.

An autopsy report said there were no indications the youths were handcuffed while in the boat.

Wilson said his trip to Mexia left him "firmly convinced" that the sheriff's office is trying to cover up "their mistake."

Several witnesses with information about the case have been afraid to go to local officials, according to Wilson.

"They are afraid if they did come out in the open the Limestone County sheriff's department may try to take some action," he sad. "Hav you ever been in Mexia, Texas? ... It's not even close to being progressive. These people are still living in the 1930s. The witnesses are black and afraid."

Attorney General Mark White has assigned an assistant to look into the deaths, according to Wilson. The Houston legislator will travel to Washington next week to talk with Justice Department officials about the case.

Wilson said Lake Mexia is small and shallow in the area where the boat sank. He contested officials' statements that the handcuffs were removed from the youths before they were put in the boat.

"Experts who know the lake say they drowned in five feet of water. There's no way they could have drowned if they weren't handcuffed," he said.

"If you bound Daffy Duck's two legs he could still swim out," he added.

Authorities say goal is second arrest

ATLANTA (AP) — Officers investigating the slayings of 28 young blacks say their goal, now that an arrest has been made in one of the killings, is another arrest.

They say they don't believe one person committed all the attacks.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said Wednesday that making a second arrest is the "object" of a special police task force investigating the killings and the disappearance of one black child over the past two years.

But Brown told reporters that there is "no consideration right now for making an (additional) arrest."

Wayne B. Williams, a 23-year-old free-lance photographer and entertainment promoter, was arrested June 21 and charged with the murder of Nathaniel Cater, a 27-year-old day laborer who was the most recent victim in the string of slayings.

Since that arrest, there have been reports that several of the jurisdictions involved in the task force investigation have withdrawn or are considering withdrawing their officers from the probe.

Brown said Wednesday, however, that "no one is pulling out. Individuals come and go all the time, but the overall staff has not. Tactics change, but commitment does not change."

DeKalb County Public Safety Director Dick Hand said Wednesday that about one-third of the 30 DeKalb officers assigned to the five killings of young blacks in that suburban county have been transferred to other cases.

But Hand said the transfers resulted from manpower problems within his department because of three other unsolved homicides in recent weeks. "You've only got so many people to work the cases," he said.

Officials close to the task force probe, meanwhile, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that they are examining derogatory remarks about the victims that have been attributed to Williams as part of their effort to determine a motive for the killings.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said Williams had called the victims "little prostitutes" and other unflattering names in conversations with "two or three" people.

One of those people, the officials confirmed, was Los Angeles record producer Wade Marcus, who told The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution that Williams had tracked him down to show him a teen-age singer Williams was promoting.

After that encounter, Marcus said, Williams called him frequently and once, when the subject of the Atlanta slayings came up, Williams told him the victims were "just little prostitutes hanging around all night long."

Both before and after Williams' arrest, authorities armed with search warrants went through his northwest Atlanta home and confiscated numerous items, including carpets, towels and shoes.

Brown said Wednesday that police would repair any damage done during the searches of the house, where Williams lives with his parents. The elder Williams has complained that lawmen did considerable damage to his furnishings.

"We will restore Mr. Williams' home to its original state," Brown said. "Anything that was taken will be replaced, anything that was damaged will be replaced."

Jordan calls for unity among blacks

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Black civil rights groups must forge a new interracial civil rights movement, says National Urban League President Vernon Jordan.

"Widespread black and white deprivation must be the context in which we respond to the (Reagan) administration's radical budget proposals," Jordan told a youth rally of the 72nd NAACP Annual Convention here Wednesday night.

"I maintain that our nation's problems can be solved by interracial cooperation and by the recognition that our destinies are interdependent and intertwined," he said.

Jordan, who has headed the Urban League for 10 yxears, said the budget proposals supported by President Reagan and the Republican Party are based on "the big lie."

"The big lie blames social programs for inflation and economic stagnation," he said. "But they are the result, not the cause, of our economy's problems. If we had a full-employment economy with affirmative action, we would not need the program of that name."

He said many of the programs slated for elimination or reduction in the budget package approved by the House last week working and that their beneficiaries cannot afford to lose even $ small amount&of funding.

"It is impossible to equate slashes in export subsidies with cuts in food stamps," Jordan said. "Pennies taken from poor people mean that in the winter they must choose between food and fuel. Dollars from the rich mean they must choose in the summer between going to Martha's Vineyard or staying home."

The annual convention of the 400,000-member National Association for the Advancement of Colored People began Monday and runs through today.

During Wednesday's session, the 4,000 delegates waded through a stack of about two dozen resolutions intended to chart the group's course over the next year.

Faulty light switch said to cause mine explosion

CARBONDALE, Colo. (AP) — An explosion that killed 15 coal miners at a mine near Redstone in April may have been caused by a spark from a faulty light switch, according to a report in a newspaper published by the company that owns the mine.

The Mid-Continent Miner, published periodically by Mid-Continent Resources in Carbondale, said that a light switch on a continuous mining machine was not properly sealed from contact with the outside air.

The company newspaper suggested that methane gas had built up in the mine, and that miners were trying to clear out the gas when someone turned off the switch, which threw off a spark and ignited the methane gas.

The U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration tested the switch in an explosive environment and found that it would ignite gas an average of once every 10 times, the newspaper said.

The Mine Safety and Health Administration is investigating the explosion, and federal officials have said that a final report on the disaster probably will not be released until this fall.

But a daily newspaper, the Glenwood Post of Glenwood Springs, has reported that the federal agency apparently has already advised the company of some of its findings.

gas accumulated in the mine because of a "push" at the face of the Dutch Creek No. 1 mine, the Mid-Continent Miner said. A push occurs when pressure outside the mine isgreater tan inside, forcing methane gas to fall back toward the miners.

The company newspaper said that the explosion and the investigation by the federal officials will result in changes at Mid-Continent mines, "especially pertaining to underground use of electrical equipment, not only in the Coal Basin mines (near Redstone, 120 miles west of Denver), but in gassy mines across the nation."

The changes will include tougher and more frequent safety and maintenance checks of enclosed switches, the newspaper said.

Methane monitors also will be installed at power stations to cut off electricity at the source when gas is found to be approaching dangerous levels.

The newspaper also said that warning lights will be improved on the methane monitors. It said the company plans to petition the Mine Safety and Health Administration for permission to cut down on the installation of extra electrical equipment, such as area lighting at the face of the mine.

Delicate surgery cures rare disease in children

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — University of California doctors report "very positive results" in treating a rare but devastating disease in children with delicate microsurgery that burrows to the base of the brain to remove tiny tumors.

"From these very positive results, we have concluded this procedure is the best method for treating young patients with Cushing's disease," if an experienced neurosurgeon is available, said Dr. Dennis M. Styne of the University of California-San Francisco.

Cushing's disease usually is associated with a tumor on the pituitary, a master gland that produces and controls hormones. Such tumors rarely are malignnt.

The isorder can strike at any age, but children are especially devastated because "they stop growing almost immediately" and often become obese, with round faces, plump bodies and skinny arms and legs, Styne said in a telephone interview.

"We had patients who hadn't grown in five or six years, and if it's (gone on) that long then that growth is lost," leaving the child permanently stunted, he said. "It can change your mental state, too. Two of our patients were quite depressed."

THE UCSF TEAM used the procedure on about 70 adults during the past 10 years but not on children. After treating eight youngsters with the surgical procedure, Styne outlined results at a recent meeting of the American Pediatric Society and Society for Pediatric Research.

He said seven of the children were cured after tumors were located and removed. No tumor was found in the eighth child, for whom other treatment was required. Styne said such tumors are often too small to be spotted in X-rays.

The team also includes surgeon Charles B. Wilson and Drs. Felix Conte, Selna Kaplan, Blake Tyrrell and Melvin Grumbach.

Styne said the surgeon b by opening an incision through the gums, beneath the upper lip. He then drills through the sinus cavities and opens a tunnel to the pituitary gland, a pea-sized organ tucked beneath the front of the brain. Looking through a microscope, the doctor finds and removes the tiny tumor.

Although skin and muscle, including the lip and nose, are pushed out of the way during the urgery, he said, there is no disfigurement — "just a little suture line under the lip.

"IT'S REALLY a straight shot (to the pituitary), and we don't interfere with any vital organs. It's a very easy operation as far as the patient is concerned. They're up and around after a few hours."

Until this technique was developed elsewhere more than a decade ago, about the only surgical route to a pituitary tumor was through the skull and much of the brain had to be literally moved aside with obvious risks, Styne said.

Whether the tumors or the symptoms will return remains uncertain, although, with adults, "there has been an exceedingly low incidence of recurrence, less than 2 percent."

The disease develops when the pituitary secretes too much of a hormone called ACTH, which, through complex chemical interactions, causes the adrenal glands on the kidneys to produce too much of another hormone, cortisone. The excess cortisone causes the problems.

Traditional treatments have included removing or chemically deactivating the adrenal glands. But Styne said that leaves the tumor in place and growing, which can lead to vision problems, changes in skin color and other effects.

Recording of own crying can dry up baby's tears

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Tired of staying up all night with a baby who won't quit crying?

Psychologists Russell D. Clark III of Florida State University in Tallahassee and Grace B. Martin of Armstong State College in Savannah, Ga., say they have found a sure-fire way to dry up those tears.

Just play a tape recording of the baby's own crying, they recommend.

The psychologists say they stumbled upon the solution while conducting research into why people become distressed when they are around other people who are upset.

"The implications are enormous," Clark said Tuesday. "It's incredible an infant as young as 20 hours can discriminate his own cry from that of another, especially when most adults don't recognize their own voices on tape.

"We believe the findings prove babies are more sophisticated and complex than we ever could have imagined," he said.

The psychologists initially were trying to find out if showing sympathetic distress to another person's distress is a learned or instinctive response.

Clark said they tested babies under a day old at Savannah's Memorial Medical Center because newborns "couldn't have learned very much and probably never heard another baby cry."

The researchers recorded different infants and then played the tapes to babies who were both calm and already crying.

The results supported the theory that sympathetic distress response is instinctive because the babies cried when they heard another baby cry and infants who were already crying cried even more.

The psychologists expected this response but they were surprised to find that babies who heard their own wails played back on the tape recorders immediately stopped crying.

Calm infants who would cry when they heard other babies remained calm when they heard their own weeping.

Clark said that the discovery will be published later this year in "Developmental Psychology," a professional journal.

Only four flights delayed by action

NEW YORK (AP) — Only a handful of Pan American World Airways flights have been delayed and none were canceled in a threatened sickout by the carrier's flight attendants concerned about their contract, airline spokesmen said.

Absenteeism by attendants increased from an average of 5 percent to 10 percent systemwide by Wednesday, but only four flights failed to depart on time since the job action began Monday, the airline said.

Pan Am has 425 daily flights serving 300,000 passengers in 74 cities around the world.

The longest delay waiting for an attendant replacement Wednesday was for Flight 404, which left Guatemala two hours late for Miami, said airline spokesman James Arey. Shorter delays were experienced in Seattle and at Tokyo's Narita Airport, he said.

The airline obtained a 10-day restraining order against sickout action by any of its 6,000 flight attendants in federal court here Tuesday.

The dispute stems from National Airlines' recent merger with Pan Am. The airline and the Independent Union of Flight Attendants have been negotiating toward a single contract covering attendants who formerly had separate contracts with the two carriers.

Pan Am said the previous contracts remain in effect. Despite its reassurances, some individuals in the union have expressed concern about possible layoffs and loss of seniority.

Officials at the union's headquarters in Burlingame, Calif., have refused comment. Union members said their leadership would not openly sanction a job action even if it was supported.

Pan Am has assigned supervisory personnel to take over for flight attendants if the restraining order is defied.

Four-year crime spree ends

NEW YORK (AP) — A four-year spree of murder, arson and extortion has ended with the arrest of nine Croatian nationalists, the FBI says.

The nine were arrested Thursday at separate locations in four states and Canada on federal charges of conspiracy and racketeering. An indictment unsealed in New York alleged they had participated in two murders, three acts of arson and more than 50 acts of extortion between January 1977 and December 1980.

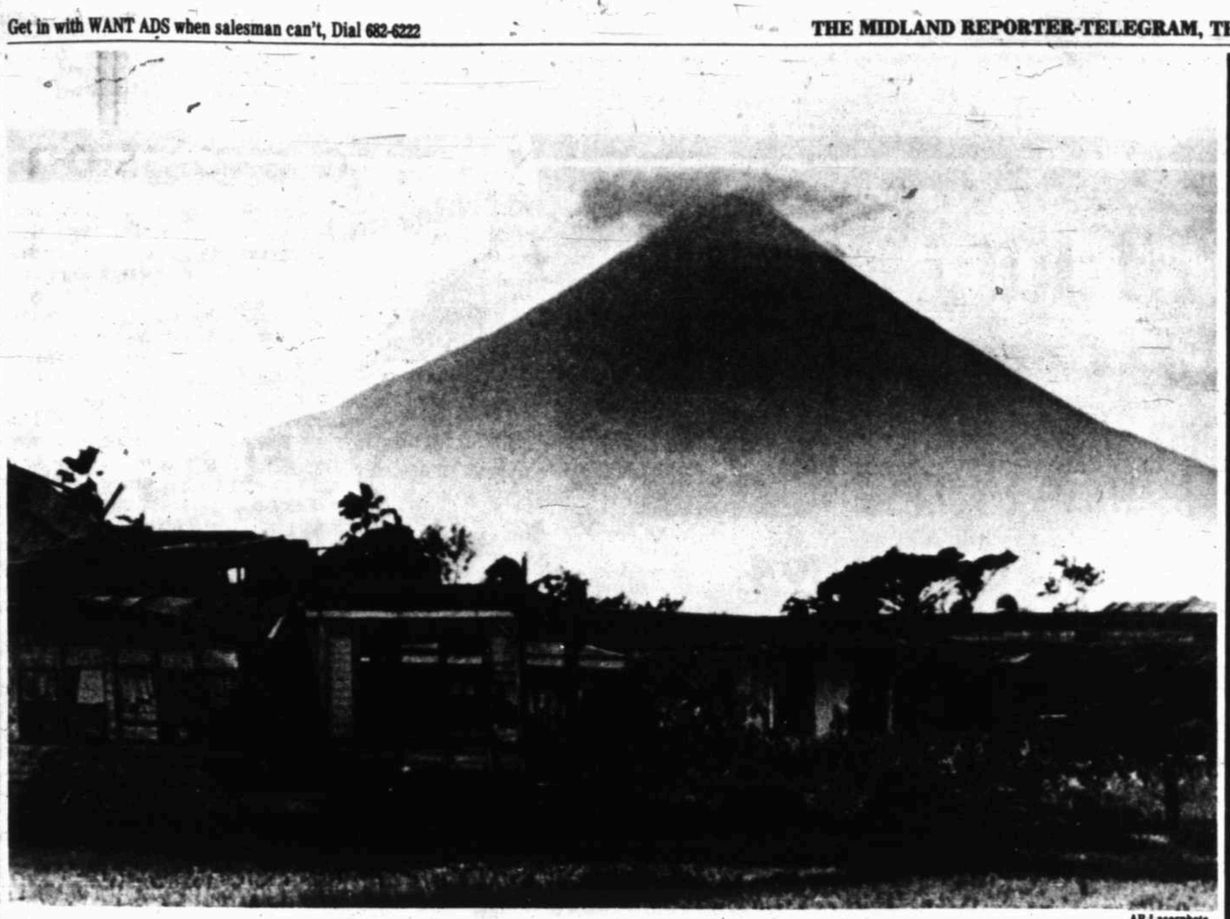

The nine were the hierarchy of the Croatian National Resistance, which seeks Croatia's independence from Yugoslavia, said Lee Laster, head of the FBI's New York office.

Mayon volcano rises above wind-damaged buildings in the southern part of the Philippines' main island of Luzon where tropical storm Kelly cut a wide swath of destruction and killed at least 116 people. Water carrying mud and debris swept down the volcano's slopes, washing out parts of several villages around its base. The storm had passed by this morning when cleanup operations started.

Storm kills more than 100

LEGASPI CITY, Philippines (AP) — Tropical storm Kelly left 103 people dead, nine missing and 3,602 homeless in the farming villages around the base of Mayon volcano, officials said today.

Constabulary Commander Mariano Manlangit said the death toll could go higher as rescue workers clear away the mud and debris in the nine towns around the base of the scenic volcano, famed for its near-perfect cone.

Most of the dead drowned when they were caught in their sleep by torrents of water and mud cascading down the mountain Tuesday night as the storm crossed the Luzon island with winds of up to 60 mph.

Skies were clearing today after the storm moved off the coast. As the cleanup began, Mayon's pointed peak could be seen through the light clouds. The 8,125-foot mountain is about 210 miles southeast of Manila.

The Red Cross said 597 homes were destroyed. Red Cross worker Jorry Tamparon said the flood also destroyed a 990-foot section of the main pipeline supplying the province with drinking water. He said 90 percent of the ricefields in four of the nine municipalities affected were still under water today.

Holy month begins for many Moslems

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Saudi Arabia and the oil sheikdoms of the Arabian peninsula are trying to outdo Iran's ruling Islamic zealots in religious orthodoxy during Ramadan, the holy lunar month of daylight fasting and nightlong feasting that began for much of the Moslem world today.

Seeking to counter Ayhatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's attempts to export his Islamic revolution beyond Iran's borders, officials and religious thinkers along the western side of the Persian Gulf accuse the Iranians of "irresponsible violence" that is un-Islamic and "consumes friend and foe alike."

"Islam is peace, and all Moslems including Iranians must make Ramadan an occasion for peace and devotion to Allah," said one preacher in Qatar.

Ramadan, the ninth month in the Moslem lunar calendar, celebrates the Prophet Mohammed's month of fasting in a cave near Mecca 14 centuries ago. It was then, says Islam, that Allah designated him his prophet to the Arabs and began to reveal the Koran, the Moslems' holy book.

Turbaned, robed sheiks in more than 40 countroes scafned the sky at sunset Wednesday for the first sighting of the new moon. The Saudis saw it, and they and the gulf sheikdoms started Ramadan at dawn today. But Iraq said it would wait untid@y because there had been no crescent in its sky.

From sunrise to sunset, Moslems abtain from food, drink, smoking and other pleasures of the flesh. Restaurants and coffee shops are closed until nightfall, when the fast is broken. The men pack the mosques for the five daily prayer sessions.

The Saudi government, the guardian of Islam's holiest shrines at Mecca and Medina and the most widely accepted "defender of the Islamic faith," prescribed severe penalties for violators of the prohibitions: public whipping and prison for Moslems, fines and -eportation for foreigners. Squads of morality police were ordered to enforce the traditions.

The Saudi interior minister, Prince Nayef bin Abdel-Aziz, warned foreign companies to alert their employees to the "necessity of respecting Moslem feelings during the holy month."

Foreigners were warned not to eat and drink in public during daylight hours, since that would "encourage Moslems to ignore the fast and break it," the Interior Ministry said.

Hotels were ordered to serve foreign guests their morning and noon meals in their rooms. Hotels, embassies and foreign companies were told to hold no cocktail and dancing parties during the month.

Supervised by the Information Ministry, Saudi radio and television programs will consist mostly of religious plays, game shows and hymns. Prjvate companies seeking favorable publicity contributed $5.5 million in prize money for one quiz show called Ramadan Riddles.

Similar observances were planned in the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar, Iraq, North Yemen and Oman. In Lebanon, a half Moslem-half Christian society, the decision to fast was left to the individual. Turkey and other secular Moslem countries have no official policy on the fast.

The Ramadan fast is one of the "five pillars" of Islam, the others being that Allah is the one God and Mohammed is his prophet, the five daily prayers, alms giving and at least one pilgrimage to Mecca in a lifetime.

Learned sheiks along the gulf caution their people against "squandering the fast" by turning the holy month into one of feasting rather than fasting. They say the people fast during the day but gorge through the night. Food consumption is sai be more than double during Ramadan.

Moslem doctors say the fast can cause physical debility. Industrial planners complain that the Moslem world works at half speed during the month. Government offices and private businesses practically come to a standstill during the month. Contracts, regardless of importance, are deferred.

Ex-wife of former Aussie tennis player killed by lover

ROME (AP) — Rosella Labella, 31, divorced wife of former Australian tennis player Martin Mulligan, was shot dead by her Italian lover in a fashionable Rome apartment, police reported today.

Mulligan, a finalist at Wimbledon in 1962, now lives in San Francisco where he represents Italian sportswear companies in the United States.

Police said the killer, identified as Lucio Sbardellai, 45, a buiding contractor, pumped five pistol shots into the head and chest of the daughter of noted Italian film producer Vincenzo Labella.

Police quoted Sbardellati as telling them he killed Miss Labella because she intended to leave him after three years together.

"She had told me that I was too old to continue our affair," police quoted Sbardellati as telling them after he was arrested and charged with murder.

The couple has a 9-month-old boy, Simone. Sbardellati has four children from a previous marriage.

Mulligan and Miss Labella married in Rome in 1969. Two children, Monica, 10, and Martin Jr., 8, were born to the Mulligans during their short-lived marriage. The two children were living with their mother.

Mulligan, a three-time winner of the Italian Open Championships in Rome, became an Italian citizen and a member of the Italian Davis Cup team.

Arthritis alert

ATLANTA (AP) — Arthritis affects over 31 million Americans, more than any other disease. Yet public support for the fight against the disease is comparatively low, reports the Arthritis Foundation.

Last year the public contributed $18.8 million or 58 cents per patient to the Arthritis Foundation. In the same year, the American Cancer Society, representing 3.9 million patients, received $142 million, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, with 200,000 patients, received $64.1 million and the American Heart Association, representing 4.3 million patients, received $79 million.

House may be spared

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy's plush tri-level playhouse may continue to stand tall, despite criticism from the county building department.

"I think he's going to be able to keep it, perhaps with some modifications," attorney Edward E. Willey Jr. said.

Willey was hired by Robby Van Pelt's mother, Betty, to preserve the backyard palace from the Henrico County building officials, who contended it violated building codes.

After meeting Tuesday with Joseph E. Bartell, a building department official, and John L. Knight, an assistant county attorney, Willey said, "I think they're going to go back and take another look at it."

"I'm not suggesting there has been a violation," Knight said after the meeting. "No legal action is being contemplated by the county at this time."

Bartell had told Mrs. Van Pelt more than a week ago that the playhouse violated county building codes because it was built on a property line.

Neighbors had complained, he said, and the playhouse would have to be torn down.

Willey said the unidentified neighbors who complained "may have exaggerated their complaints, and the county went to extremes in reacting to them.

"I think the whole thing has been blown out of proportion," he added.

None of the Van Pelt's nearby neighbors has acknowledged making any complaint.

Robby was prepared to tear the structure down, but "I told him he didn't have to. So he has started adding more rooms," his mother said. "This is just a child's fantasy that just kept growing."

The fantasy has wall-to-wall carpeting, electricity via a cord from the Van Pelt house, some old furniture and dishes.

Robby sleeps in it often, and he rents out part of it for 25 cents a week to another boy.

Caper at the capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is a story about house hunting, crowded neighborhoods, a well-dressed man with a gun and a disappearing baby. It all takes place at the White House.

Alongside the Rose Garden, two cardinals decided to build their summer nest.

It was a safe spot. The foliage was just right. And the traffic was light, except for a elderly gentleman who walked past every once in a while.

So the cardinals pulled together bits of twigs and other tidbits from the well-manicured garden and built a home among the blossoms of a rose tree.

And, as birds will do, they produced two eggs, one of which produced, eventually, a baby cardinal.

But last week, when the gentleman who worked in the nearby Oval Office left town for a few days, a terrible commotion arose.

Painters arrived and spread dropcloths all about. They carefully avoided the nest as they spruced up the area. Workmen came in to remove two trees blocking the view of the garden from the Oval Office and Cabinet Room. Other men set to work on the lawn.

A White House aide, discovering the work, peered toward the nest and looked at the baby, lying very still while the summer sun beat down. Its eyes and beak were closed. "Oh, it's dead, it's dead for sure," she said.

But a painter gently poked the nest with the long handle of a painting roller and the bird popped open its mouth, expecting a feeding.

Then, over the weekend, before the gentleman returned, the cardinals and their offspring disappeared.

Museum will celebrate anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Air and Space Museum, Washington's most popular tourist attraction, celebrates its fifth anniversary today with the opening of a new gallery depicting the history of jet aviation.

Among the 27 jet-age planes featured is a German Messerschmitt Me262, the world's first operational jet fighter first flown in 1942.

Also displayed are the Lockheed XP-80, flown in 1944 as the prototype of the first U.S. operational jet fighter, and a McDonnell FH-1 Phantom, the world's first operational shipboard jet fighter.

The museum opened July 1, 1976, and has attracted 45 million visitors to see exhibits ranging from the Wright brothers' 1903 pioneer plane to the Apollo 11 spacecraft that carried the first men to the moon.

Workers still trying to recover boy

FRASCATI, Italy (AP) — It will take another two weeks to recover the body of 6-year-old Alfredo Rampi, still stuck in the deep well he fell into while playing June 10, a fireman said.

Workers finished digging a 220-foot shaft parallel to the well Monday night. On Tuesday, they dug out a small work room at the base of the shaft and reinforced it with steel poles to prevent cave-ins. They also began installing electrical lines and air tubes for the miners who will dig a 50-foot tunnel to retrieve the body.

Riccardo Massari, a fireman at the site of the accident, said digging the horizontal tunnel would take about two weeks because miners must bore through volcanic rock and dense material.

Alfredo survived the fall, but rescuers were not able to free him in three days of feverish efforts before he died.

D.C. council kills measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sex between children under 16 will continue to be a crime in the Nation's Capital, the District of Columbia City Council has decided.

The council Tuesday killed a controversial proposal which would have legalized sex between consenting minors 12 and over as long as their age difference did not exceed four years.

The proposal, which drew public outcry and brought an angry crowd of more than 100 to Tuesday's hearing, was part of a bill by Councilman David A. Clarke to legalize many forms of sex, including sodomy, between consenting adults.

With the child-sex language removed, the bill was approved on a voice vote. It needs to pass the council one more time to go to the mayor's desk.

Mark White disappointed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White said Thursday he is "extremely disappointed" that President Reagan has broken his campaign promise to end the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980.

White said considering the campaign promise he was shocked and amazed that the U.S. Justice Department had opposed Texas' motion to intervene in the lawsuit challenging the tax.

The suit was filed by the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

"I assumed that the Reagan administration would take immediate steps to call for repeal of this onerous law," White said in a statement.

'Baby Face' won't be freed now

NEW YORK (AP) — A teen-age killer who gunned down two strangers in a subway "for the experience" thought he found a legal loophole that would let him walk out of prison next month after serving less than 3½ years.

But Willie "Baby Face" Bosket Jr.'s plan apparently didn't work out.

After an outraged reaction by Mayor Edward Koch and other officials to word that Bosket could be paroled Aug. 19, a spokesman for the State Division of Youth said Wednesday that Bosket's interpretation of the law was wrong.

He can be kept in jail at least another year, and possibly as long as 4½ more years, officials said.

Koch said Bosket, now 19, is a "willful, mad-dog" murderer.

"It's an outrage that in this town you can kill, you can murder and you can do it a second time and not get the death penalty," Koch exclaimed Wednesday.

Bosket's case did much to put through a new state law treating juvenile murderers as adults.

At age 10, Bosket, of Manhattan, was convicted of attacking a younger child with a knife. At 15, he was convicted of putting a gun to the heads of two strangers in a subway and shooting them dead.

"He got a kick out of blowing them away," said a 17-year-old cousin who was with Bosket during one of the March 1978 shootings.

Bosket said he committed the slayings "for the experience."

After the killings, he got what was then the maximum Family Court sentence: five years in the custody of the youth division, with a maximum of 18 months in a "restrictive," or maximum-security, youth facility.

Gov. Hugh Carey said at the time, "This type of offender should never be allowed back on the streets," and the next year the Legislature passed a law treating youthO aged 13 to 15 as adults when harged with rape or murder.

After Bosket turned 16 — six months after he began serving his sentence — he broke out of the state facility at Goshen and a short time later gave himself up on an escape charge. He was tried as an adult because he was 16 and was sentenced to four years.

He later said in a prison interview that he surrendered because he thought the district attorney would have to dismiss the juvenile murder charges to try him as an adult on the escape chargehe laws are all botched up," he then.

Because of good behavior, he is due to get out of prison Aug. 19.

But youth division spokesman Paul Elisha released a statement Wednesday from the division's director, Frank Hall, saying in a case of escape from a secure youth facility and subsequent adult trial for the escape, the defendant "is required to serve the balance of his court-ordered secure facility sentence after his release from the adult prison." That would mean at least one more year.

The statement said it was against the law for Hall to comment on a specific case, however.

Elisha said lawyers for the division believed that such a defendant must "finish whatever sentence he owes" under jurisdiction of the division.

Connecticut Republicans cross swords in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before the 1976 election, Malcolm Baldrige hosted a fund-raiser at his Connecticut farm for Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, who called Baldrige "my kind of Republican."

But times change and a sharp policy difference has strained the friendship between the two strong-willed Connecticut Republicans.

Baldrige is now President Reagan's secretary of commerce. Weicker is chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that oversees Baldrige's budget.

The issue that sparked their dispute was this: How many federal employees should be fired from Commerce's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration?

The grounds for disagreement were simple: Baldrige is part of an administration that is committed to sharp reductions in the size of government; Weicker, concerned about the oceans as a future source of food and energy, has been a friend to NOAA since 1975.

The two men described their positions in separate interviews.

Weicker: "I have guided, protected and fought for NOAA for six years. I carried the ball for funding and programs when there wasn't any great demand by the public or Congress. ... It was sort of a single-handed effort."

Baldrige: "My job is to manage the Commerce Department the way the administration wants it managed to carry out the mandate of the election."

The conflict began when President Reagan called on the Commerce Department to reduce its v8,000-person workforce by 4.8 per cent.

"I recognized that NOAA is a good department by cutting its personnel by only 3.6 percent compared to 6.1 percent for all the other agencies," Baldrige said.

Weicker realized that the 3.6 percent reduction mealt 4AA emploeis would be fired this year; that two NOAA research vessels would be put in drydock; and that the nation's three aquaculture research laboratories — in Milford, Conn.; Galveston, Texas; and Charleston, S.C. — would be shut down.

Weicker introduced an amendment to prevent Baldrige from dismissing more than 1 percent of NOAA's approximately 12,700 employees.

Baldrige did some arithmetic.

"I have to cut an overall figure," he said. "If we were restricted to cutting NOAA by only 1 percent, I would have had to cut the rest of the department by 7.6 percent. That was too much."

He does not dispute the value of NOAA's vessels and aquaculture labs, but "you've got to set priorities and do some tough things."

Weicker and Baldrige met privately, but there was no compromise.

Baldrige then spent a day and a half visiting 16 members of Congress, including Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, the ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee.

Conte introduced an amendment to counter Weicker's and assert Baldrige's authority to make the cuts he deemed necessary.

The House vote was 195-178 for Conte's amendment.

"I'm sorry I had to do it," Baldridge said, "but, by God, I'll do it again if I have to."

Weicker asserted: "I didn't lose. NOAA's the loser."

Miss Lillian recovering

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter is reading and watching television as she recovers from cancer surgery, hospital officials say.

Mrs. Carter, mother of former president Jimmy Carter, was "looking extremely well after a good night's sleep," Jo Collins, director of nursing at Americus-Sumter County Hospital, said Wednesday.

"She looked like a queen this morning and was watching television and reading a mystery novel in her bed," Mrs. Collins said in a prepared statement.

Mrs. Carter, 82, is expected to be released from the hospital early next week, Mrs. Collins said.

During the surgery Monday, a tumor was removed from Mrs. Carter's left breast for examination and, after it was found to be malignant, surgeons performed a modified radical mastectomy, said hospital administrator James Griffin.

Barty, whose motion picture career spans some 50 years, was honored for his contribution to the entertainment industry and his philanthropic work with the Little People of American Foundation which he established in 1957.

Tiny entertainment giant gets Hollywood star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Billy Barty, who stands 3 feet, 9 inches tall, had to stand on a box to say thanks for being chosen the first "little person" to get a star on Hollywood Boulevard.

"Being honored by a whole city is really a thrill," said the entertainer, who clambered on a box Wednesday to speak into a microphone perched on a podium near the star, located on the sidewalk across the street from Mann's Chinese Theater.

To the delight of several hundred passersby, Barty later got some helpful hoists actors Lou Ferigno and Pat MacCormack, his two tall and hefty co-stars in the forthcoming film "Under the Rainbow."

"I just want to say he (Barty) has nothing to worry about because he's got a full-time life bodyguard," said Ferigno, who played television's well-muscled "Incredible Hulk" and had little trouble scooping up both Barty and a plaque from the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

"Despite his diminutive stature (he) is truly a giant in the entertainment world," said William F. Hertz, chairman of the Walk of Fame Committee, which was dedicating its 1,733rd star to Barty.

"I've been here in Los Angeles since I was ... well, I guess I haven't changed much in height," the 56-year-old Barty joked before posing for photographers with his parents, sister, wife and two children.

He later added: "Height does not mean anything. The only space barriers you maybe have to conquer is the one between your' ears. '

Barty has been acting, singing and dancing for more than half a century in some 150 films and several hundred television shows. He appeared in the movie, "Day of the Locust" and in the more recent "Foul Play" and "Hardly Working," in addition to making television appearances.

In presenting him with the star and plaque, the Walk of Fame Committee also noted his work for the Little People of America foundation, which Barty helped establish in 1957.

Guards overpowered; 12 escapees at large

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Twelve of 14 prisoners who escaped from a county jail in eastern Pennsylvania after two inmates overpowered guards remained at large early today, authorities said.

One escapee turned himself in shortly after the jailbreak late Wednesday night at the Northampton County Prison, according to Easton police; another was recaptured early today in nearby Phillipsburg, N.J.

No hostages were taken, and the prison was secured about an hour after the disturbance began, he said.

The dozen men who were still on the loose had been jailed for what police called "a wide assortment of crimes."

"I've been around here 26 years and something like this never happened, as far as I'm concerned," said Warden A.S. DiGiacinto.

The disturbance broke out at about 11:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday in the jail's maximum security section while prison guards were trying to secure the cells for the night, DiGiacinto said. The inmates took keys from two guards and released the others.

Two of the overpowered guards were locked in a cell while a guard supervisor, Phil Ruggiero, was locked in a supply closet, DiGiacinto said. Ruggiero was taken to Easton Hospital after suffering heart attack symptoms, but later was released, prison officials said.

The inmates broke into the prison's commissary and the infirmary before letting themselves out the front gate, DiGiacinto said, adding that both areas were damaged and some drugs were taken from the infirmary.

Several inmates were offered the chance to escape but declined, the warden said.

Most of the escapees were from the eastern Pennsylvania area, but DiGiacinto said Michael Lloyd, 32, of Staten Island, N.Y., may have been the instigator.

Lloyd, who was awaiting sentencing on an attempted bank robbery conviction, was believed to be armed with a revolver, police said.

A man claiming to be an inmate telephoned the Allentown Morning Call newspaper and said the disturbance was prompted by bad treatment, but the warden said escape was the only motive.

Artukovic loses 20-year fight, ordered deported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrija Artukovic, an 81-year-old California resident accused of overseeing the massacre of Serbs and Jews in Yugoslavia during World War II, has lost his 28-year fight against deportation.

The U.S. Board of Immigration Appeals ordered the expulsion Wednesday, reaffirming a ruling made April 3, 1953, that Artukovic be sent back to Yugoslavia, where he was the Nazi puppet government's interior minister in charge of public order and safety.

The postwar Communist government of Yugoslavia charged the Seal Beach, Calif., resident wth responsibility for the killing of 7505000 Serbs and 20,000 Jews during the war.

In a complex legal battle, the case was brought back to the Board of Immigration Appeals by the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations, which hunts Nazi war criminals in this country.

The board said in 1953 that the Nazi puppet government enacted laws providing for imprisonment and summary executions of Jews and Communists and that Artukovic, as interior minister, decided who should be punished and what should be done with their family members and property.

Because of a legal battle over his return to Yugoslavia, he was not immediately deported. A regional immigration commissioner granted him a stay on May 22, 1959, on the basis that Artukovic would suffer persecution if deported.

In lifting that stay Wednesday, the board noted that the Refugee Act of 1980 forbids granting a stay of deportation to any alien who as a member of, or in conjunction with, the Nazi government of Germany ordered, assisted in or participated in the persecution of any person because of race, religion, national origin or political opinion.

The board denied Artukovic's request to reopen his hearing on the basis of new evidence. The board said the only new evidence involved the family ties he now has in this country, which the board said were not relevant to the case.

Artukovic entered the United States illegally in 1948 by means of a false passport.

The Justice Department's Office of Special preparing a letter to Artukovic giving him 72 hours from the time he receives it to report to the Los Angeles office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service for deportation.

Artukovic has the right to appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. His lawyer was out of the office and could not be reached for comment and no one answered telephone calls to Artuko-

Scoutmaster dead at 101

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sidney Loman, the world's oldest active scoutmaster, has died at the age of 101.

Loman, who attended his last scout meeting three months ago at his neighborhood church shortly after celebrating his 101st birthday on February 28, died Tuesday in a local hospital. Services were pending.

Scout officials said Loman was the world's oldest active scoutmaster and had received the Boy Scouts' highest award, the Silver Beaver.

He once said gratitude was his reward for the 60 years he devoted to scouting.

Santa Fe Opera opens 25th season

SANTA FE, N.M. — This week marks the opening of Santa Fe's 25th opera season and its first fully professional repertory theatre company's season.

Giacomo Puccini's "La Boheme," sung in Italian, will be the Santa Fe Opera's opening night production Friday. It will have have eight more performances throughout the anniversary season, on July 11, 15, 24, Aug. 6, 11, 18, 26 and 29.

Soprano Faith Esham will sing Mimi and baritone Brent Ellis will sing Marcello. Both are former apprentice artists with the Santa Fe Company.

Ms. Esham has recently made her European debut in "Gianni Schicci" and her Paris debut at the Theatre Musicale in the title role of Jules Massenet's "Cendrillon."

Ellis appeared in the Metropolitan Opera telecast of "L'Elisir D' Amore" with Luciano Pavarotti this past season and with the Opera Company of Boston in the title role of Rigoletto.

Also returning to Santa Fe will be soprano Mary Shearer, tenor Vinson Cole, bass-baritone Joseph McKee and baritone William Workman. John Crosby, general director, will conduct this revival and tenor Ragnar Ulfung will direct and appear in the cameo role of Benoit.

The theater's box office is open for in-person sales Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Phone orders, using VISA or Mastercard only, are accepted during those same hours by calling 1-505-982-3855.

The Santa Fe Festival Theatre, New Mexico's first fully professional repertory theater, opened this week and runs through Aug. 23, at the Armory for the Arts, 1050 Old Pecos Trail.

The season opens with "The Front Page," by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. It is a classic 1920s American comedy about the shenanigans of an unscrupulous publisher and his ace reporter.

The role of Walter Burns will be played by John Randolph. Randolph co-starred in the movies "Serpico" and "Heaven Can Wait." He was in the original Broadway productions of "Paint Your Wagon," "The Sound of Music" and Arthur Miller's "The American Clock."

David Garrison, a Tony nominee for "A Day in Hollywood-A Night in the Ukraine," will appear as Hildy Johnson.

The second production, opening July 13, is a new play, "Terra Nova," by Yale playwright Ted Tally. It is the true story of five Englishmen who sought to conquer the last uncharted frontier on earth — Antarctica.

"Terra Nova" will feature Michael Tolaydo in the role of British explorer Capt. Robert Falcon Scott. Tolaydo recently toured the country with "The Gospel According to Saint Mark" and is presently playing Hamlet at the Folger Theatre in Washington.

Post office criticized

HOUSTON (AP) — That perennial butt of jokes and source of aggravation — the post office — was the target of Houston residents who got a chance to air their gripes at a public hearing.

Congressman Mickey Leland, chairman of a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee on postal personnel, convened the half-day forum Wednesday to hear complaints about Houston postal service.

Saying he has lived in the same house for 40 years, Joe D. Thomas told the forum he discovered in the spring of 1979 that some of his mail, including dividend checks, was being returned to senders, stamped "undeliverable."

Though he has complained numerous times and been assured the problem is solved, Thomas said, he still can't depend on the mail.

Businessman Jim Reed said he sent his complaints about service and delivery to the postmaster, only to be told the postmaster receives so many complaints he can't answer them all.

"You can take the biggest companny in Houston and I can write the chairman of the board and I'll get a reply," Reed said. "I can write my congressman and I get a reply. But I write the postmaster and my letter self-destructs."

Animals to be sold at auction

HOUSTON (AP) — A herd of horses and a goat found starving to death at a La Porte stables will be sold at auction, a Harris County justice of the Peace ordered Wednesday.

The 27 shetland ponies, four horses and a goat were confiscated from County Stables June 24 after patrons of the stables who keep their own horses there reported the animals were starving.

One of the ponies died.

Evaristo Garcia, 26, was arrested and charged with cruelty to animals. Garcia is free on $400 bond. He was scheduled to be arraigned Thursday. Garcia failed to appear at a Wednesday civil hearing.

Precinct 8 Justice of the Peace Larry Wilson set the auction for August 3rd at the Rodeo Stables in south Harris County, where the animals have been cared for since their removal.

"This case is important because it is the largest confiscation (of abused animals) in Harris County," said Precinct 6 Justice of the Peace George Huebner, who ordered the confiscation.

"It's also the first time in Harris County that we have won a confiscation," Huebner said. "There have only been four confiscation cases filed, although we have gotten some convictions for animal cruelty."

What's cooking? An authentic Mexican feast

Between running her own insurance agency and being active in various community affairs and organizations, it's a wonder that Oralia Corrales ever finds time to cook.

"I make time to cook," says Mrs. Corrales.

She is the owner of Oralia Corrales Insurance Agency. She has served on a number of civic councils and committees including the Mexican American Advisory Council, Human Relations Council, Hospital Advisory Council, United Way, the Parish Council of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church and the Objectives for Midland. She also belongs to the Altrusa Club.

Mrs. Corrales, a native Midlander, and her husband, Jesus, have been married for 27 years. Jesus is employed by M System Food Stores in the produce department. The couple has four natural children and two adopted children. They also raised seven other children, and have three grandchildren.

Mrs. Corrales says her hobbies include cooking, gardening, dancing and reading. "My main hobby is making people happy."

One way she makes people happy is by cooking meals from authentic Mexican recipes. Following are a few of her favorites.

Oralia Corrales

CARNE GUISADA

This is a fried meat mixture used for burrito filling

1 3-pound arm roast
2 tblsp. oil
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped bell pepper
1 teasp. garlic powder
1 teasp. cumin
1 tblsp. flour
3 cups water
Flour tortillas

Trim roast of all fat and cut into small cubes. Heat oil in large pan and sear meat. Add onion and bell pepper to meat and saute in garlic powder and cumin. Add flour and water and simmer mixture for 30 minutes. Place about 3 tblsp. of filling in each tortilla and roll up. Makes about 30 burritos.

RED CHILE SAUCE

This sauce is used in several of the recipes that follow.

15 dried red New Mexico chile pods, medium or mild
Water for boiling
4 large garlic cloves
4 teasp. whole comino
1 cup water
Salt to taste

Wash chile pods and place in sauce pan. Cover with water and boil for ten minutes. Drain water and remove stems. Put chiles in blender and add cloves, comino and 1 cup water. Blend for about four minutes. Add salt to taste.

ASADO

3-4 pound pork roast
Red Chile Sauce

Trim all fat from roast and cut into bite-sized pieces. Brown very slowly in large skillet. Remove all grease and add Red Chile Sauce. Cook over very low heat for one hour.

CHILE CON CARNE

4 pounds chili meat
Red Chile Sauce
3 cups water
Spices to taste

Brown chili meat in skillet very slowly over low heat. Remove all grease. Add Red Chile Sauce and water and simmer mixture for three hours. Add salt, pepper, oregano and comino to taste.

ENCHILADAS

12 corn tortillas
1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped bell pepper
½ cup chopped tomato
½ teasp. garlic powder
½ teasp. cumin
½ pound longhorn cheese, grated
Enchilada Red Sauce*

Brown meat in skillet over low heat; add onion, bell pepper and tomato. Simmer mixture for about 15 minutes. In a separate skillet, heat 1 cup of oil. Soften tortillas by placing them one at a time in the oil for one or two seconds. Place tortillas on a plate. Place 3 tablespoons of the meat mixture in each tortilla. Roll tortillas and place in a baking dish. After all tortillas are assembled, spread Enchilada Red Sauce evenly over top and sprinkle with cheese. Bake in 350 F. oven for about 10 minutes.

*Enchilada Red Sauce is a variation of the basic Red Chile Sauce. Blend 1 teasp. oil and 2 teasp. flour and cook in skillet until flour is brown. Add the Red Chile Sauce and cook for five minutes before pouring over enchiladas.

MEXICAN RICE

In large skillet, heat 2 tblsp. oil. Add ½ cup rice and brown very slowly. When rice is dark brown, add ½ cup chopped onion and ¼ cup chopped bell pepper and saute for one minute. Add 1 can tomato sauce or ½ can of stewed tomatos. Fill skillet to top with water. Cover and do not stir. Cook until rice is tender. Season with garlic, salt and pepper.

Cooking corner: Good food, ethnic style

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

As Mary Poulus grew up in an Italian neighborhood in the coal-mining town of Hanna, Wyo., she never thought she might become a chef and ethnic food authority.

She intended to be an opera singer, and music was the great interest in her life until she married Larry Wilde, a performer and humor writer.

They had a tiny apartment in Los Angeles and many friends. Larry loved to entertain.

"That was when I began to pull out family recipes," said Mary. "My father was Greek, my mother was Swedish and she had a fine collection of Danish recipes as well as Swedish."

She decided to put the best recipes in a cookbook.

The finished product is "The Best Of Ethnic Home Cooking" by Mary Poulos Wilde, published by J.P. Tarcher Inc. It has 336 pages, and is priced at $15.

A "lovely and refreshing" menu for a summer picnic or backyard buffet could be Jamaican fried chicken, tropical fruit salad with chili and lime dressing, and banana bread. These are her recipes.

TROPICAL FRUIT SALAD WITH CHILI AND LIME DRESSING

2 large, ripe but firm papayas, peeled, seeded and cut into cubes
2 large greenish bananas, peeled and sliced
One and one-half cups fresh pineapple
1 large orange, peeled, seeded, white membrane removed and coarsely chopped
One third cup peanut oil
3 to 4 tbsps. fresh lime juice
2 tbsps. chili powder
Salt to taste
Sugar to taste

Combine fruit in glass salad bowl. In a blender whirl peanut oil, lime juice, chili powder, salt and sugar until smooth and thick. Pour immediately over fruit and toss gently. Chill before serving. Makes six to eight servings.

JAMAICAN FRIED CHICKEN

2 fryers, 2 to 3 lbs. each, cut in eighths
One-fourth cup dark Jamaican rum
3 tbsps. peanut oil
One-fourth cup dark soy sauce
1 egg white
2 slices (one-fourth inch thick) fresh ginger, minced
Flour for breading
Peanut oil for frying
Shortening

Wipe the chicken pieces with a clean damp towel and place them in a deep, glass mixing bowl. Combine the rum, peanut oil, soy sauce, egg white and ginger and pour over the chicken. Cover loosely and marinate for about two hours, turning pieces once or twice. Drain each chicken piece momentarily. Roll pieces in flour and shake off excess. Fry in about 1 inch of hot oil with a little shortening added, until the chicken is tender and nicely brown on all sides. Serves six to eight.

CARIBBEAN-STYLE BANANA BREAD

One-half cup of butter
One-half cup well packed brown sugar
1 egg, well beaten, at room temperature
One-fourth cup Jamaican rum
1 tsp. vanilla extract
2 cups all-purpose flour, unsifted
1 tsp. baking powder
One-half tsp. soda
One-half tsp. salt
Three-fourths tsp. grated nutmeg
One and one-fourth cups mashed, very ripe bananas
One-half cup coarsely chopped walnuts
One-half cup white seedless raisins (optional)
One-half cup fresh, shredded coconut (optional)

Cream butter and sugar together. Beat in the egg until light and fluffy. Stir in rum and vanilla. Sift all dry ingredients together. Add to the butter-sugar mixture, alternately with the mashed bananas, mixing well after each addition. Fold in the nuts and either coconut or raisins. Pour into a well-buttered and floured loaf pan and spread batter evenly. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for about one hour and 15 minutes, until the bread shrinks from the sides of the pan and a straw inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool for about 30 minutes in the pan, then unmold and completely cool on a rack. Wrap tightly in plastic wrap or waxed paper and foil. Serve at room temperature with plenty of sweet butter. Makes one loaf, 9x5x3 inches.

AMERICAN ASSN. OF RETIRED PERSONS

American Association of Retired Persons met for a regular meeting and dinner at the Senior Center.

Bill Ward, field manager for Prudential Insurance Company, underwriters for the group's insurance, explained the change-over to Prudential and answered questions from association members.

Mrs. Neuman of Odessa announced that a defensive driving course will be held July 6 and 7 at the Senior Center.

Next meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Fruit soda

Perhaps you shouldn't mix apples and oranges in logic, but you can team pineapples and oranges in a wonderful soda.

Combine two tablespoons each crushed pineapple in unsweetened juice with frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed, and a scoop of ice cream in a 12-ounce glass. Gradually add one-half cup ginger ale, stirring to combine. Top with another scoop of vanilla ice cream. Add more ginger ale, if needed to fill glass. Serve at once. Makes one soda.

Try poached fish for an unusual twist

By MERLE ELLIS

Cooking a whole fish is an intimidating task for many people, and most of us tend toward fish filets or steaks. Yet whole fish of all kinds are readily available and often at much better prices.

Salmon, sea bass, rock cod, red snapper, wall-eyed pike, sand dabs and sole, to name a few, are always less expensive if you buy them whole. Of course, you're paying for the bones and the head, but the price usually is better even accounting for that. And, there are those who find parts of the head the best part of the fish.

To the Chinese, a whole fish head intact is more than just good food; it has symbolic significance. In the Chinese tradition, fish means good fortune, happiness, safety, "a good beginning and a good end." When honoring a special guest, Chinese hosts serve the whole fish with its head pointed toward that honored guest.

At our wedding dinner in Hawaii, over 20 years ago, the ninth or tenth course was a beautifully presented poached fish. I was discretely informed (by more than one newly acquired relative, including my lovely Chinese bride) that certain morsels of the fish were traditionally reserved for Grandfather. No one need have worried about any possible impropriety on my part.

To the Chinese, at least to those in my family, a fish isn't really fresh if it isn't still wiggling. When Grandma Aki comes to visit, hours are spent shopping in San Francisco's Chinatown and always the last purchase made is fresh fish selected from a school swimming in a tank in the merchant's window.

You'll very likely not find fish that fresh in your neighborhood market, but most areas of the country offer fresh whole fish of some kind, if not wiggling. Check your fish dealer for information on when and what to buy. Different varieites of fish are abundant at different times of the year and communication with a good fishmonger is well worth developing.

When buying whole fish, look for bright clear eyes, reddish-pink gills and bright scales adhering tightly to the skin as your best indicators of freshness. The flesh should be firm and elastic (spring back when pressed gently) and there should be no objectionable odor. There should, in fact, be very little odor at all.

Cooking a whole fish need not be intimidating. Nothing could be simpler, if you combine Grandma Aki's Chinese recipe with the Canadian method of cooking fish. The Canadians discovered a few years ago that any fish can be cooked to perfection by almost any means if you first measure the fish at its thickest point and then cook it 10 minutes per inch of thickness. This method works marvelously well for almost any kind of whole fish.

POACHED FISH CHINESE STYLE

1 whole small salmon, wall-eyed pike, rock cod, red snapper, sand dabs, trout, etc.

1 large piece fresh ginger root

1 bunch green onions

1 cup peanut oil

1/2 cup soy sauce

Bring to a boil in a large pan enough water to cover the fish. Add a few thin slices of fresh ginger root to the water. Peel the remaining ginger root and slice into very thin julienne strips, like little toothpicks. Cut the green onions into three-inch lengths and slice those into thin julienne strips.

When the water comes to a boil, turn off the heat, put in the whole fish, cover and let sit 10 minutes per inch of fish. Thin fish, such as sole or sand dabs, may take only 4 or 5 minutes.

In the meantime, put one cup of peanut oil in a saucepan, add a few slivers of ginger root and heat until good and hot but not smoking. When the fish is done, remove it from the water, drain well and place on a warm serving platter. Sprinkle the slivers of onion and ginger root over the fish; pour the hot oil over all. The oil will quickly cook the ginger and onions slightly and make the base for the sauce, which you finish off by pouring the soy sauce over the whole works. Nothing could be simpler.

New salad: Chicken plus pesto

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

We constantly find, as you may, how thrifty it is to copycat dishes served in restaurants or bought at "take-out" shops. A recent example turned out delightfully.

A food store near my house in New York City's West Village offers everything from fine produce to take-out salads. One of their salads new to me is made with chicken and cherry tomatoes and mayonnaise flavored with pesto — the Italian sauce made with fresh basil that usually goes over pasta. At the store, the salad costs about $8 a pound. Yes. $8. We found it easy to concoct at home — and at much, much lower cost. The only ingredient we didn't have to buy was the basil; this spring one of my recipe testers grew it indoors from seed so I could have a big pot of it on our terrace this summer.

For the chicken, we used a 3½ to 4-pound fryer or roaster and cooked it in the solid-bottom upper part of a steamer along with an onion, a celery rib, a pared carrot and some peppercorns. The chicken cooks in about 45 minutes and is delightfully juicy and tender when you bone and skin it. The defatted natural broth that accumulates from the chicken and vegetables is rich and jellied and can go into the freezer for use in a dish other than this salad.

CHICKEN SALAD WITH PESTO AND MAYONNAISE

¼ cup commercial mayonnaise

4 teaspoons pesto

1 cup cooked chicken, cut in 1-inch pieces

2 or 3 cherry tomatoes, halved if small or medium and quartered if large

Salt to taste

Salad greens

Whisk together the mayonnaise and pesto. Add the chicken and tomatoes; mix well. Just before serving, add salt. Serve on salad greens. Makes 1 large serving. Increase proportions as needed.

PESTO

Large clove garlic,

½ teaspoon salt

1 cup knife-shredded (about ¼-inch wide) fresh basil leaves

1 cup olive oil

1 tablespoon pine nuts

1-3rd cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese, not packed down

In a food processor with the metal blade and the machine running, drop the garlic through the feed tube and process until finely minced. Stop machine and uncover; add salt, basil, oil, pine nuts and cheese; process until a paste forms. Store in the refrigerator. Stir thoroughly before using. Makes about ½ cup.

ONE HEFTY FOAM PLATE

Hefty disposable plates are made of tough foam plastic. They're safer than paper because they're stronger! As many as 3 plain paper plates can't hold what one Hefty plate holds. You can heap HEFTYWARE high with hot, juicy food and it still stays safely rigid. Won't soak through, either. Yet even though one Hefty is stronger than 3 plain paper plates, it costs about the same.

'Best Bets' a good bet

For parents, life with a baby is filled with excitement and bewilderment: wonder at the child's chubby smiles, frustration at its tears, and the plain old exhaustion from all-night bouts with common diaper rash.

In July, Dell makes life with a baby easier and much more fun with the publication of "Best Bets for Babies." At $5.95, it is a one-of-a-kind infant care guide by Brooke McKamy Beebe.

The books comes in an overside Dell Trade Paperback edition and is complemented with illustrations by Denise Fiske and a foreward by pediatrician Rose C. Ames, M.D., and backed with a national author publicity tour.

The book is a compendium of time-saving, trouble-saving, money-saving tips for a baby's first two years from the real experts—parents. Based on three years of research and interviews, the book provides countless, invaluable tips on baby care from the mother's first trip to the hospital to suggestions for hiring baby sitters.

It includes advice, solicited from hundreds of parents, on every aspect of baby-care from feeding, bathing, and travel with the baby, to health care, and suggestions for games and amusements.

Each "bet" has been approved by a licensed pediatrician and each section provides several alternative suggestions so parents can choose the one most suitable to their own needs.

Here's a peek at these best bets:

CLEANING, WIPING, POWDERING

● The pop-up, premoistened baby wipes are impossible, because you have to hold the container with one hand and pull with the other, which leaves no hand for baby. And more often than not they rip.

● Warm those disposable wipes between your hands before you clean baby.

● Soak a roll of toilet paper in a shallow bowl containing about 6 ounces of baby oil. Wait until it's absorbed, and presto—you've got baby wipes that destick anything. The toilet paper should be fairly strong; don't use the soft, fluffy kind.

BUYING CLOTHES

● Pants with elastic waists droop with diapers, get soaked easily (they can act like a wick), hang down below fat tummies, and generally look sloppy. Buy them only for toilet-trained children. Overalls look best on diapered babies.

SIBLINGS: STARTING OUT RIGHT

● Never walk in carrying the new arrival. Always be free to greet the older child.

● Involve the older child in the baby's life right from the beginning. Have him select the homecoming outfit, ask him to help strap baby into the car seat on the way home from the hospital, etc. Remember, you are helping to form a lifetime relationship, and if you can make an older sibling feel good about the new baby, you are helping to lay the groundwork for a smoother relationship.

These are all good tips, some which parents can use, some which they will discard. The only complaint this reviewer found with the book is that it seemed too "pat;" the answers seemed too easy. The book was written as if its answers were the only solutions to any problem. But as a guide, especially for new parents, it can serve as a useful tool.

Measure Sew-How

Sewing problems will get extra attention in Midland County with a free educational program, "Measure Your Sew-How" starting July 10.

A four-part weekly letter series, the program is available to all county residents from the Midland County Extension Office.

"Measure Your Sew-How" will answer questions about today's threads, sewing tools and pressing equipment.

It will discuss sewing machine adjustments and offer solutions to common sewing machine problems.

To enroll, write Cindy Mann, county extension agent, P.O. Box 1070, Midland, 79702 or call 682-9481, ext. 433.

All educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, regligion or national origin.

A Bulgur Salad from Oklahoma

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Tabbouleh is a Middle Eastern bulgur salad once infrequently encountered in America. Now its popularity in the United States keeps growing.

Friends pass along word of it to one another. Vegetarians sing its praises. In the past 10 years more and more recipes for it have appeared in newspapers, magazines, cookery pamphlets and cookbooks.

But our interest in tabbouleh is probably mostly due to the fact that bulgur — wheat kernels that have been parboiled, cracked and dried — is more widely available than it once was. These days it's sold not only in specialty food stores but in many supermarkets. Be warned, however: You may not always be able to put your hands quickly on bulgur that is as coarsely or finely cracked as you want it.

When Marilyn Dabner, a friend who lives in Tulsa, Okla., comes to New York City, she's likely to bring me a packet of bulgur that is finely cracked and in a see-through bag. It's specially packaged this way by a company in her home state that supplies some chains of supermarkets with it and, I believe, also fills mail orders. Marilyn likes this bulgur, as do I, because it's perfect for making an Oklahoma version of tabbouleh.

The recipe Marilyn uses differs from others: it calls for soaking the bulgur in vegetable cocktail juice rather than in the traditional water. It also adds such non-traditional ingredients as coarsely grated longhorn cheese and lettuce leaves.

Here is Marilyn's formula, just as she jotted it down. Don't hesitate to make changes. As one Middle Eastern culinary expert said: "The preparation of tabbouleh is highly individual. Cooks vary the quantities of ingredients, but always use parsley abundantly."

MARILYN DABNER'S BULGUR SALAD

Open a 12-ounce can of vegetable cocktail juice and pour it over a cup of finely cracked bulgur. Let the bulgur stand at room temperature until it absorbs the juice. Use a big bowl because the quantity of this salad grows and grows.

Stir in ¼ cup of olive oil (or more if you like) and the juice of a couple of lemons, plus a very little vinegar from a jar of green olives. Let this stand about an hour.

Then add loads of finely chopped parsley — so much that the salad really takes on a green hue — and enough scallions (including their green tops) to suit your own taste.

Just before serving add chopped celery, coarsely grated longhorn cheese, lots of tomato wedges, a handful of green olives and a generous number of coarsely torn lettuce leaves. Toss well and serve at once.

Unusual milk facts

The total yearly U.S. milk production in 1980 of 128.4 billion pounds would fill almost 2,000 buildings, each one the capacity of Dairy Center with its 1 million cubic feet. It would take the daily output of more than 2 million cows to completely fill the Dairy Center in Rosemont, Ill.

Considering the dairy cattle population — if all 10.815 million cows in the U.S. would stand side by side in a continuous straight line, it would stretch 3½ times from Boston to San Diego.

If you stand the 10.815 million cows nose to tail, the line would stretch almost twice the road distance from Boston, along the East Coast to Miami, through Texas to San Diego, to Seattle, along the West Coast and back to Boston along the Canadian border.

Get an earful of flavor

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

The corn is as high as the proverbial elephant's eye and those who don't count a barbecue complete without a few golden ears have reason to celebrate.

This is the start of the summer fresh corn season, and there's a bountiful crop at good prices.

Our fondness for corn can be traced back to natives of the New World, as described by Christopher Columbus, who wrote of a "sort of grain they called maize which was well tasted, bak'd, dry'd and made into flour."

We still use this most versatile grain in those fashions.

People in the Old World had used the term corn to describe any type of grain but it was thanks to explorers who came to this continent that corn as we mean it traveled to Europe and beyond.

Maize had an important place in the religious ceremony of the natives, as well as in their cuisine, for good reason — if the corn crop failed, they starved.

Natives grew the corn in combination with pole beans which climbed the stalks, and with squash which surrounded the stalks to keep down the weeds.

The combined vegetables made a complete protein for a population which didn't get to eat very much meat.

COLACHE (Mexican Succotash)

2 med. tomatoes
2 tbsps. butter
One-third cup chopped onion
2 cups corn kernels
2 cups sliced zucchini
Salt, pepper to taste

Peel the tomatoes by holding them on a fork over a gas flame until the skin wrinkles and splits. Pull off the skin. Cut them in half and squeeze each half to remove the liquid and seeds.

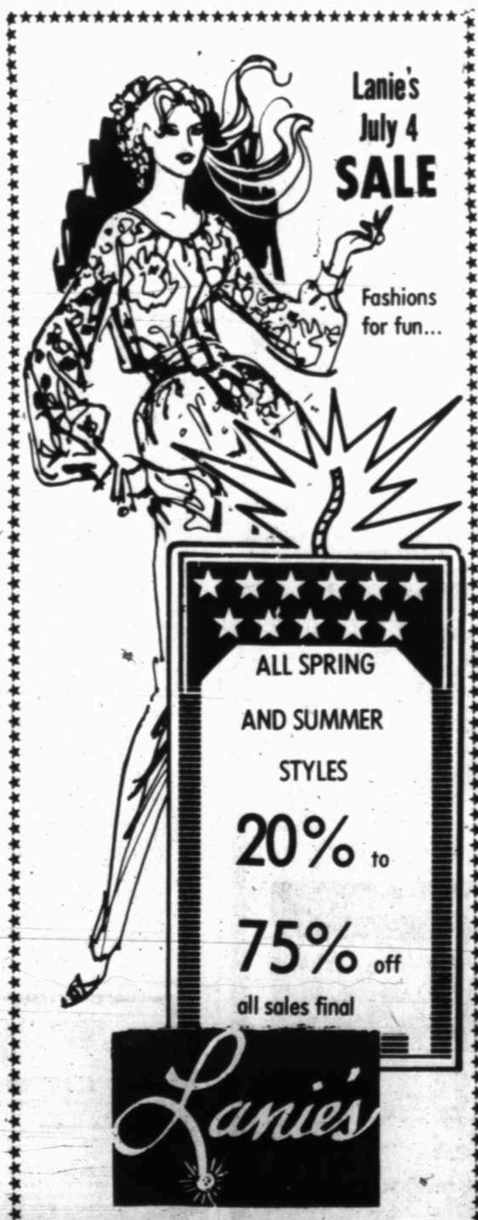

Chop the tomatoes coarsely, to make about one cup.

Saute the onion in the butter until tender, then add the tomatoes. Bring the mixture to a boil. Add the corn, zucchini and salt and pepper to taste. Cook the mixture over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, until the corn and zucchini are tender. Makes four to six servings.

CORN CHOWDER

2 small onions, sliced
One-and-one-half-inch cube salt pork
2 cups potatoes, diced
One and one-half cups boiling water
2 cans cream-style corn
2 cups scalded milk
3 tbsps. butter
2 tsps. salt
Pepper to taste

Heat the salt pork in a fry pan to release the fat, then saute the onions in it. When they are soft, add the potatoes and boiling water. Simmer until the potatoes are soft, then stir in the remaining ingredients. Heat the soup through and serve. Makes three to four servings.

DEAR ABBY

Giving means taking in mother's mind

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm tired of hearing that unwed mothers give up their babies because they want them to have a better life. Here's what happened in my case:

When I was 15, I was raped by my brother-in-law. (My sister was pregnant with her fourth baby in five years.) I was afraid to tell anyone the truth, so I lied and said I wasn't sure who the baby's father was.

My parents called me a "whore," and when they dropped me off at the home for unwed mothers, they gave me orders to "get rid of the bastard or don't come home."

From the minute I arrived at the home for unwed mothers, everyone started to work on me to give my baby up for adoption. "You can't earn enough money to care for it properly. Who will take care of it while you work? You'll be branded as 'immoral' and no decent man will want to marry you. You owe it to the child to give it a home with two parents."

I had this drummed into my head until I finally signed the adoption papers. The very next day I changed my mind, but they said it was too late.

It's been 22 years, and every day of my life I think about that beautiful little boy I supposedly "gave away." But God knows I never gave him away. He was taken from me. — EMPTY ARMS

DEAR ARMS: Unfortunately you (and your child) were born too soon. Today, no woman is "worked on" to give up her child. In fact, counseling is available in order to help the unwed mother make a choice she can live with. And in many states, the adoption is not final until six months after the papers have been signed.

DEAR ABBY: My son is getting married, and the bride's parents are paying for the wedding. The bride's mother asked me to please keep my guest list down to 30 people because of the cost, so I did.

Now I have a lot of people mad at me because they weren't invited. We have a large family, Abby, and 30 people won't even cover all our relatives, let alone some friends we would like to invite.

I always thought the groom's side was entitled to have as many guests as the bride's, even though it's customary for the bride's family to pay for the wedding. I heard they have over 100 guests from their side. Is this fair? We know that the bride's family is not rich. Neither are we, but we would gladly help out by paying for about 50 more guests. Do we dare suggest it? — GROOM'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Why not? It's a silly, unfair, outdated custom that makes no sense today. Tell the bride's mother that you'd like to invite more people and you will gladly pay for them. How can she refuse?

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter in your column about a man who made love with his socks on. It interested me because my husband always comes to bed with his socks on. It's no earth-shaking problem, but I find it rather annoying. I've tried to break him of the habit, but so far I haven't had much luck.

Could it be a regional thing? My husband is from Kansas. — DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE: Possibly. I checked with some Midwesterners and was told that the men who come to bed (and make love) with their socks on do so only during the winter months. And in the summer, they sleep in their shorts.

DEAR ABBY: This question has been on my mind for years. How can you discourage people who seem unable to talk to you without grabbing, touching or patting you? I find this very irritating. — H. IN BLUFFTON, OHIO

DEAR BLUFFTON: Most people who grab, touch and pat do so unconsciously. If your unreceptive reaction and drawing away don't communicate your irritation, try the more direct route — the verbal one.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Want to see a mother fall apart before your eyes?

Just watch her when she asks a child what he is doing and he answers, "Nothing."

Children usually do "nothing" in a room where the door is shut, a dog is barking, water is running under the door, a sibling is begging for mercy, there is a strange odor of fur burning and there is the sound of a thousand camels running in place.

Most mothers refuse to face whatever it is they're not doing so they simply yell, "Do you want me to come up and see what you're up to?"

Surprise! The answer is always "NO!"

Some of the more famous children who were doing "nothing" when they were asked are Damian in "The Omen" when he was riding his tricycle on the balcony, Patty Duke Astin in "The Bad Seed," Lizzie Borden, who just wanted to go to the orphans' picnic and Cain when he was annoyed with his brother Abel for "stealing" the banana out of his school lunch.

There is possibly only one thing that is more frightening than a room with children and noises. That is a room of children in silence.

When a child whispers behind a closed door, get a SWAT team and be prepared for anything.

Among the more memorable times my children were doing "nothing" were:

The time they dressed a stray cat in my mink hat and I was the only woman in town who wore a flea collar for costume jewelry.

The time they floated a miniature navy in the bathtub and it floated to the kitchen before it sunk.

The time they ironed a sheet for home movies and burnt a hole in the rug and we had to live with a small table in front of the closet door.

The time they opened all their Christmas presents on Dec. 19.

The time they direct-dialed grandma in Ohio and got a shoe store in Mexico.

Motherhood is not for sissies. Oh sure, it's easy when you can open a door and in a glance assess the damages. But it's when you hear two voices and a hammer behind a door and they swear they're doing "nothing" with "nobody" that makes your blood run cold.

Vegetarian television programs sprouting up

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

This summer, more than 76 public television stations, plus dozens of cable stations, will offer viewers a chance to learn the art of vegetarian cooking in the comforts of their own home.

Viacom, an industry leader in the cable TV field, recently completed a 13-part series called "Cooking Naturally."

Featuring Jenny Raymond as the show's host, the show's first segment explains the basics of vegetarian nutrition and offers practical advice on dietary improvement: avoiding too much salt, sugar and fat.

Subsequent segments take the viewer through meatless ethnic dishes and other cooking specialty areas (breads, party favorites, etc.).

In addition to the "Cooking Naturally," which will be shown only on cable, another meatless cooking show called "Kathy's Kitchen" began airing recently on 76 public television stations nationwide.

Both "Kathy's Kitchen" and "Cooking Naturally" offer companion cookbooks to viewers. Containing the same recipes as are featured on the show, the books enable the viewers to watch the presentations without having to take notes.

The following recipes were provided to me by the people at "Cooking Naturally."

SPICY CARROT SOUP

2 tbsps. olive oil
1 onion, chopped
1 lb. carrots, chopped (about 4 cups)
2 cloves garlic, minced
One-half tsp. mustard seed
One-half tsp. turmeric
One-half tsp. ginger
One-half tsp. cumin
One-fourth tsp. cinnamon
One-half tsp. salt
One-eighth tsp. cayenne
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 cup water
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
4 cups milk
1 tbsp. honey
Yogurt

Saute the onion in the olive oil until golden. Add the carrots, garlic, spices, salt and lemon juice. Cook two to three minutes, stirring constantly.

Add the water, cover tightly, and simmer until the carrots are tender, about 20 minutes.

Puree the mixture in a blender or sieve, adding a small amount of the milk if necessary. Be careful to fill the blender no more than one-half full. Start it on a low speed, and hold the top on tightly. Otherwise, the hot mixture can explode and splatter you and everything in sight.

In a saucepan, melt the butter and add the flour. Cook for two to three minutes, stirring often. Add the milk, stirring constantly with a whisk. Cook the sauce over medium heat, stirring fairly constantly, until it is very hot.

Combine the sauce with the carrot puree, and heat until very hot, about 10 minutes.

Serve hot with a spoonful of yogurt on top.

AVOCADO-STUFFED ZUCCHINI

6 medium-small zucchini
2 ripe avocados
1 tbsp. fresh lemon juce
1 tbsp. wine vinegar
1 tbsp. fresh basil
One-half to 1 tsp. salt
Paprika

Trim the stems off the zucchini and cut them in half lengthwise. Steam them for five minutes, until they are just barely tender, then plunge them into ice water for a minute.

Scoop out the pulp with a spoon, leaving a shell about one-fourth inch thick. Allow the pulp to drain in a colander for 10 minutes.

Mash the drained pulp, along with the avocado, then mix in the lemon juice, vinegar, fresh basil and salt.

Spread the mixture in the zucchini shells and sprinkle with paprika. Chill for one to two hours before serving.

BROWN RICE PIZZA

Crust:
3 cups cooked brown rice
1 cup grated mozzarella cheese
One-half cup sesame seeds
2 eggs, beaten

Sauce:
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. whole-wheat flour
One and one-half cups milk
One-half tsp. paprika

Topping:
One-half lb. Muenster cheese, sliced
1 cup broccoli, steamed
1 cup mushrooms, sliced and sauteed
1 cup zucchini, sauteed
2 tomatoes, sliced
One-half tsp. oregano

Allow rice to cool, then combine with remaining crust ingredients. Pat into a greased 12-inch pizza pan, and bake at 400 degrees F. for 20 minutes.

To make the sauce, melt the butter, then add the flour and stir over medium heat for a minute. Whisk in the milk and paprika, then continue stirring over medium heat until sauce thickens. Spread sauce over baked crust.

Prepare topping vegetables as indicated. Arrange, along with Muenster cheese, on top of pizaa. Broil for five minutes, until cheese melts. Serves four to six

German wine being promoted

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

German winemakers must be a hardy lot, considering what they must go through year after year.

First of all, most of the great German vineyards are planted on slopes, some so steep that it's treacherous just pruning and harvesting grapes.

Second, the weather is rarely ideal. Mostly, the sun remains a rumor, a rarely seen visitor. That grapes ripen at all is a minor miracle.

It is, therefore, rather special to taste the great Rieslings of the Mosel and the Rhine from a good vintage, since there are so few good vintages.

The recent news is that the 1980 vintage was a small disaster. The flowering of the vines was two weeks late (early flowering is the sign of a longer growing season and thus riper grapes making for fuller wines).

In spite of that, there's been a great push in the last year to generate enthusiasm for German wines in the United States.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Mildewed tiles

DEAR HELOISE:

How do you remove mildew between the tiles and around the top of the tub? Please hurry with your answer 'cause my bathroom looks awful! — M.M.

+ + +

Hurry is a dirty word, luv, when used in connection or in any shape, form or fashion, with bathroom walls (tiles) and tubs.

If you will get into the habit of taking the time (all of 60 seconds) to wipe the water residue from tiles and rims of tubs after showering or taking a tub bath, you'll never have to cope with that black horror again.

In the meantime, to help you with your mildew problem which already exists, do this:

First wash the tiles and grout with a detergent and a scrub brush. Then apply a solution of three tablespoons liquid chlorine laundry bleach to a quart of warm water.

If possible, keep surfaces wet with this solution for five minutes. Rinse and dry.

Should the mildew really be entrenched, you may need to apply a stronger solution of bleach and water, but avoid letting the mixture run down the walls onto the bathtub.

As mentioned earlier, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure (in this case, a pound of elbow grease) so start wiping those walls down after each bath.

You'll be glad you did... — Hugs, Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Here's a hint to help not only your handicapped friends but youngsters or others who are just plain too short to safely remove the drip tray after defrosting the refrigerator.

One of those very inexpensive hand siphons does a great job fairly easy and quickly. The long hose often reaches from refrigerator to sink. If not, it will reach a bucket sitting on the floor or in a kitchen chair, etc.

Such a siphon is a very versatile tool and can be found in most variety stores, etc. — James Morris

PIE PATTER

Dear Heloise: I have baked a lot of pies in my day and have used numerous pastry cloths, etc., to roll the dough on, but now I have discovered the best thing of all. Freezer wrap paper! I use the side that is waxed!

After rolling the piecrust just wipe the paper off or throw it away. Great for rolling cookie dough too. — Mrs. Billie Apt.

SMOOTHER SEWING

Dear Heloise: Use the dusting attachment on your vacuum cleaner to suck the lint and fuzz out of your sewing machine. (Remove the spool of thread, bobbin and face plate first.)

It's amazing how much accumulates out of sight and can build up between working parts on your machine until the lint is like layers of felt. — Ruth Barker

LETTER OF LOVE

Dear Heloise: I've been wanting to let you know how much your column means to me...

I had let my plastic laminated counter tops get quite stained — anyway they were an ugly, dark color and I just couldn't get them to look clean no matter what I used on them.

Then, one day someone wrote in with the same problem I was having and you told them to use baking soda. I did and with the baking soda and a lot of elbow grease, I got all that stain off. Now, my counter top shines like a new one.

I want to thank you and all those who write in hints. Please, keep up the good work, as it sure is a great help to all of us folks out here in the world. — Maxine Hauversburk

You're a luv and I thank you from the bottom of my heart. — Heloise

Strawberry Nut Bread recipe

The Los Angeles Times

DEAR SOS: I have a recipe for Strawberry Nut Bread that I think you might like. I serve it with slightly sweetened cream cheese and sometimes add nuts, lemon or orange peel, coconut, raisins or cinnamon.

—VICKI

DEAR VICKI: It's the best Strawberry Nut Bread we've tasted, too. And thank you.

STRAWBERRY NUT BREAD

1 cup pureed strawberries
1 3-4 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1-3 cup water
1-2 cup chopped walnuts

Heat strawberry puree in small saucepan to boiling. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Combine flour, soda, baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Cream together shortening and sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Alternately stir in flour mixture and water. Stir in cooked puree and nuts. POUR BATTER INTO GREASED LOAF PAN. Bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour, or until loaf tests done. Remove from pan to cool. Wrap and store overnight) before cutting for best flavor. Makes 1 loaf.

DEAR SOS: My daughter is getting married and we need some champagne punch for 150 guests that's not too complicated.

—MRS. H.G.

DEAR MRS. H.G.: Here's one that serves 35 guests so you'll have to triple the recipe. Leave the ice ring out if you don't want to fuss with it.

CHAMPAGNE WEDDING PUNCH

3 pints strawberries
1-2 cup sugar
1-2 cup orange liqueur
1 (4-5-quart) bottle light rum
1 (46-ounce) can pineapple juice
2 (4-5-quart) bottles champagne, chilled

To make ice ring, toss berries with sugar and orange liqueur. Place carefully in bottom and sides of 8-inch ring mold and freeze. When berries have frozen completely, fill spaces in mold with cold water and freeze until serving time. Combine rum, pineapple juice and chill. Pour into punch bowl, float frozen berries on top. Add chilled champagne. Makes about 35 servings.

Crime in the oilfields

Oilfield theft is no laughing matter and the establishment of a new theft reporting system revealed statewide by various law enforcement agencies and oilfield associations emphasizes that fact.

On Wednesday officials from six oil and gas trade organizations began utilizing the new theft reporting system, under which individuals telephone a Wichita Falls number collect to report a theft or relate information concerning a theft.

But Ed Thompson with the Permian Basin Petroleum Association noted Tuesday that the theft reporting hotline got an early workout. Thompson said Tuesday that shortly after the (817) 723-1114 number had been published, the first telephone call — concerning an $80,000 oilfield theft — was received in Wichita Falls.

That's indicative of the gravity of the situation involving theft of oilfield equipment. It's not a minor problem any longer. Thompson indicated that in the Permian Basin alone equipment thefts may amount to $25 million a year. That's a lot of money and the loss impacts the consumer as well as the company that falls prey to thieves. The consumer ultimately pays for the criminals activities.

Thompson noted that a lot of the equipment "has not been reported as being stolen" but that "we just felt that now was the time to implement this, when everyone was in agreement that the situation had gotten serious enough."

The key to success for this new oilfield theft reporting system will be public awareness and involvement. Taking a moment to pick up the phone and report a theft will make all the difference in the world, vastly increasing the chances of recovering the stolen equipment, involved law enforcement agencies agree.

This new system is a first for the oil industry and can go a long way toward breaking the ever-increasing oilfield theft trend. The oil industry merely is doing what every individual should do: Making a life of crime a little more risky.

Polish shoving match

The announcement that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko will visit Poland means that another skirmish is about to be fought on the Polish political battleground that has been aflame for nearly a year.

During that year the rebel workers under the leadership of Lech Walesa have been sparring with the Communist rulers in the Kremlin. In a long series of pullings and haulings, each has been testing the other's strengths.

The labor union known as Solidarity has won a lot of victories since it first struck for more food and freedom, but it has stopped short of the kind of provocation that would invite a full-scale Soviet take-over. The Soviet gauleiters have done their share of threatening just to let the poor Poles know who is ultimately in charge, but they too have handled themselves with a measure of restraint.

But the shoving match continues, as evidenced by the decision to send Mr. Gromyko to Warsaw. His journey in early July is described by Tass, the Soviet press agency, as a "brief friendly visit." It may be brief, but we will leave it up to Mr. Walesa and the oppressed Polish workers to decide just how friendly it is.

Poland's freedom fighters do not give up easily. A surprising total of 150,000 turned out the other day to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Poznan riots, the first great anti-Communist demonstration after the end of World War II. A monument was dedicated to those who died on that fateful day.

The significance of the Poznan-riot celebration lies in the fact that the Communist government agreed, albeit reluctantly, to let the Poles exert their civil rights in the form of public demonstrations.

The battle for Poland continues. While Mr. Gromyko's presence in Warsaw for a few days will remind the world that the Kremlin is still in the driver's seat, it also will remind the world that Poland's rebellious spirit is very much alive.

ART BUCHWALD

U.S. policy won't allow arms misuse

When President Reagan was asked at his recent press conference why he had not made a speech on foreign policy, he took the question as a criticism, and replied to the effect that just because he hadn't made a speech on foreign policy, didn't mean that his administration didn't have one.

Art Buchwald

I never doubted he did. But because I wanted to be accurate about it, I called a friend at the State Department who is assigned to the desk which briefs other foreign service officers on what our foreign policy is.

"Where do we stand on China?" I asked.

"Our foreign policy is to sell them arms so they can defend themselves against the Soviet Union."

"And where do we stand on Taiwan?"

"We have a treaty with Taiwan to sell them military equipment to defend themselves against China."

"Suppose the Chinese use the arms we sell them to attack Taiwan instead of threatening the Soviets? What is our policy then?"

"One of strong condemnation."

"What is our policy toward Israel?"

"Our policy toward Israel is to sell them planes, tanks and other military hardware to protect themselves against their enemies in the Middle East."

"Saudi Arabia is an enemy of Israel. What is our policy toward that government?"

"To provide them with sufficient equipment to defend themselves in case they are attacked by the Soviet-supplied Arabs."

"What if Saudi Arabia gives the military equipment to the PLO instead of using it to save themselves from the Communists?"

"Our policy is to take a dim view toward such action and have our ambassador advise of our displeasure."

"Can we move on to Pakistan? Do we have a policy toward Pakistan?"

"Of course we do. It's to provide them with our latest fighter planes to protect them against Afghanistan. This is a signal to the Soviets that hasn't been lost on them."

"Pakistan is building a nuclear bomb which is being financed by Libya. How do we feel about that?"

"Lousy."

"Do we have a policy toward Iraq?"

"Yes. Although we condemn their attack on Iran, which violated the United Nations Charter, we support their resolution in the U.N. against Israel for knocking out their nuclear fuel enrichment facilities in Baghdad."

"Do we have a policy toward Europe?"

"Our policy toward Europe is one of friendship and cooperation, despite the fact they won't pay their fair share for the defense of their own countries, or allow us to place neutron bombs on their soil to use against the Soviets if and when they invade Western Europe."

"Where are we on Africa?"

"We plan to get tougher with Angola and softer with South Africa. But we can go either way with the rest of the continent, providing they stay out of the Soviet camp."

"Do we have a South American policy?"

"We certainly do. We will supply any authoritarian government with arms to defend themselves against a Marxist takeover by Cuban-supported rebels and their Soviet masters."

"Then can I assume that our foreign policy is one based strictly on military security around the world?"

"That is correct. The only way to bring about peace is to see that every nation in the Free World is sufficiently armed to defend themselves against Communism."

"But suppose they use their military might to settle scores with their old enemies?"

"We don't need any policy on that because it could never happen."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Royalty cheaters' pilfering public's oil

WASHINGTON — With earnest zeal, Interior Secretary James Watt is moving to open up more federal land for oil exploration. His intention is to spur domestic energy production.

Jack Anderson

But it will also spur something else — the theft of billions of dollars' worth of the public's oil by drilling companies that cheat on the royalties they're supposed to pay.

Extracting oil and gas from federal land is no Mickey Mouse operation. About 15 percent of our domestic crude oil and 30 percent of our domestic natural gas are taken from public acreage leased to private companies. Last year alone, nearly $2.7 billion in royalties was paid to the government for the privilege of pumping oil and gas from public land.

But because of mismanagement by the U.S. Geological Survey dating back at least to the 1950s, as much as 10 percent of the royalties owed to Uncle Sam go uncollected each year, government auditors estimate. The Geological Survey concedes it's even worse, estimating that more than $1 million a day in royalties is lost.

If Secretary Watt wants to find out about this sorry situation, he might talk to George Kinsel, an engineer in the USGS office at Thermopolis, Wyo., until his retirement last year. Kinsel monitored the collection of royalties in the Thermopolis district, and in a series of internal memos he warned that the collection problem was getting worse.

One big reason is that the information the government uses to calculate royalty payments is unverified data from the oil companies that is rarely audited. With a touch of sarcasm, the frustrated Kinsel wrote in one memo last August:

"Perhaps we are not smart enough to get proper information from the royalty statements which we got from the accounting section ... Therefore, we cannot tell if royalty was paid."

It's more than just sloppy paperwork, Kinsel indicated in a complaint about the way oil was handled in the field. "The industry field people have gotten into bad habits and the USGS has not kept on this field problem consistently over the years."

One of these "bad habits" is the under-reporting by company employees of the amount of oil waiting to be transported from field tanks to pipelines. As far back as 1972, another USGS engineer, R.L. Alexander, at Newcastle, Wyo., complained about this problem.

Alexander noted wide discrepancies in the amounts of oil he measured and the amounts recorded just 40 minutes later of the same oil by an employee of a pipeline company. "Assuming this is company policy, and I am assured by numerous pumpers and other personnel that it is, the total loss annually from the hundreds of tanks they gauge is quite large," Alexander reported.

Alexander wrote that he hoped to "obtain more evidence of this common type of larceny." But instead he was transferred. Investigators for Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., told my associate Tony Capaccio the problem has gotten worse since Alexander's complaint.

It's obvious that if the Geological Survey has been unable to deal with royalty cheaters for the past 20 years or more, the situation can only deteriorate if Secretary Watt opens up still more federal land for exploitation. With even looser supervision, the royalty cheaters will be able to steal far more of the public's oil without getting caught.

●

GETTING PERSONAL: Washington catchwords like "Reaganomics," "safety net" and "truly needy" have taken on a frightening personal meaning for Olymphia "Mickey" Davis of Fairmont, W.Va. Disabled by cancer and barely able to survive on Social Security and Medicaid payments, she sees federal assistance as quite simply a matter of life and death.

The 53-year-old Davis had worked all her life — as an office clerk, school janitor and factory hand — until the ravages of cancer finally disabled her eight years ago. She underwent a radical mastectomy in 1973, followed by five years of chemotherapy, with its excruciating side effects. In March 1979, she was switched to cobalt treatment, then four months later to safer electron treatment. Last year she needed surgery three times to remove recurring tumors.

"I can't tell what treatment I'll need in the future," she told my reporter Ben Lay, "but I am certain that my life depends on my ability to receive prompt medical treatment for whatever form my cancer takes."

Davis is currently taking six different prescription drugs costing nearly $100 a month. She also needs frequent examinations by her doctor as well as blood tests and bone and liver scans. Her sole income is her $283-a-month Social Security pension.

How does she manage to live with all these expenses? It's not easy. In 1974, she began receiving Supplemental Social Security Income benefits, which included a Medicaid card. But six months later, when her disability pension began, it put her $13 over the SSI limit, and she had to surrender her Medicaid card.

West Virginia provides optional Medicaid through its Medically Needy Program. But what frightens Davis is the administration's plan to cut back on the federal contribution to state Medicaid programs. West Virginia could lose about $7.5 million a year. It might have to pare many of its optional services, like the Medically Needy Program that keeps Mickey Davis alive.

"President Reagan promised not to abandon the truly needy," Davis said. "If those of us who are on Medicaid are not truly needy, then who is?"

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1981. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 2, 1881, President James Garfield was shot by Charles Guiteau, a disappointed office seeker. Garfield died 1½ months later.

On this date:

In 1890, the Sherman Antitrust Act was passed.

In 1926, the U.S. Army Air Corps was created.

In 1937, American pilot Amelia Earhart Putnam was last heard from on a flight over the Pacific.

And in 1968, a London judge agreed to an American request to extradite James Earl Ray to stand trial for the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Five years ago: North and South Vietnam were reunited officially after more than 20 years of war.

One year ago: The Supreme Court expanded its support of affirmative action when it ruled that Congress had the right to set aside 10 percent of federal public work grants for minority-owned businesses.

Today's birthdays: Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall is 73. Playwright Ed Bullins is 46.

Thought for today: Noble deeds that are concealed are most esteemed — Blaise Pascal, French scientist-philosopher (1623-1662).

BIBLE VERSE

GEORGE F. WILL

Jonathan made July Fourth a sacred day for Israelis, too

WASHINGTON — Five years ago, while the Tall Ships, as buoyant as the Republic, converged on New York harbor, an Israeli force swept into Entebbe airport. July 4, 1976, was a great day to be an American, and a great day to be Jewish, and was, I am assured, an absolutely sensational day to be American and Jewish.

George F. Will

As Shimon Peres, then Israel's defense minister, wrote about the rescue of the hostages held in Uganda, Entebbe "proved that Israel is capable of maintaining not only defensible frontiers but also a defensibly erect stature....At a distance of over 4,000 kilometers from home, in one short hour, the posture of the entire Jewish people — in fact, the posture of free and responsible men all over the world — was straightened."

Only one Israeli soldier — the leader of the storming team — died in the rescue mission now known as "Operation Jonathan." So let us now praise Jonathan Netanyahu.

You can get to know him in "Self-Portrait of a Hero," a collection of his letters written between 1963, when he was 17 and studying in America, and 1976. The impact of these letters is related to the fact that, as novelist Herman Wouk says in his introduction to the book, "Like Anne Frank's Diary, it is a fortuitous, not a deliberately created, work of art." These letters also have a tragic fascination for the reader, who knows from the start that the destination is death at an early age.

Jonathan's temperament, like that of the Zionist movement that founded Israel, was an extraordinary mixture of philosophy and fierceness — especially fierceness turned inward as he drove himself through a life of ever-more-demanding dedications. It does not derogate the virtues he exemplified or the nobility of his death to say that Israel will be a happy nation-made happy in security by men like Jonathan — when it no longer so desperately needs so much exhausting intensity from its best citizens.

In an age when a subsidy forgone is called a "sacrifice," Jonathan's life, as told in his letters, is an antidote to the exhaustion of the vocabulary of civic virtue. And some letters illustrate today's headlines. As the noose closed around Israel before the Six Day War in 1967, Jonathan wrote:

"We sit and wait. What are we waiting for? Well, its like this: An Englishman, an American and an Israeli were caught by a tribe of cannibals in Africa. When they were already in the pot, each of them was allowed a last wish. The Englishman asked for a whiskey and a pipe, and got them. The American asked for a steak and got it. The Israeli asked the chief of the tribe to give him a good kick in the backside. At first the chief refused, but after a lot of argument he finally did it. At once the Israeli pulled out a gun and shot all the cannibals. The American and the Englishman asked him: 'If you had a gun all the time, why didn't you kill them sooner?' 'Are you crazy,' answered the Israeli, 'and have the U.N. call me an aggressor?'"

Israelis live life in extremes, and Jonathan's life was a distillation and intensification of Israel's experience. His last letter, written six days before his death, just before the Entebbe operation was planned, expresses his relentless self-reproach. But the last words of that last letter are, "It'll be okay." We shall see.

When just 17 he wrote, "There's no reason why the tower I build around myself, around my person, whatever it may be, should not stand forever." Nothing stands forever, but legend comes close. Jonathan was not only Achilles, he now is, through his letters, his own Homer. The tower he built is the imperishable example of the compatibility of the civilized virtue of reflection and the martial virtues that stand between civilization and its multiplying enemies.

Ours is an age of anti-heroism, eager to define away heroism, or to dissolve it through analysis, psychological or sociological. Heroism expands mankind's sense of possibility, and therefore destroys alibis and creates duties. But for Israel especially, and for all challenged nations, much depends on the power of heroic example to elicit more such examples.

The motto of Israel's office corps is "After me." The point of the Fourth of July, here as there, is to remember that we come after heroes. Because of Entebbe, Israel and the United States, linked in so many ways, now share a sacred day.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Differences in aspirin and acetaminophen explained

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please discuss the difference between aspirin and acetaminophen? I recently accompanied my mother to her doctor, and he suggested that she use acetaminophen even though she had been using aspirin all her life. Does that mean that one is better than the other? — Mrs. B.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.: In general, both aspirin and acetaminophen are safe and effective when used to relieve fever and in the treatment of mild to moderate pain. However, as I've noted on a number of occasions, even the most innocuous drug can cause problems if used indiscriminately, and these are no exceptions to the rule.

Some physicians prefer acetaminophen because it produces fewer side effects than aspirin. Aspirin may cause some gastric irritation, which may be a troublesome factor in elderly patients, although studies have failed to demonstrate that aspirin taken in low doses leads to serious disturbances of this kind. On the other hand, aspirin is considered preferable in rheumatic and other diseases where its anti-inflammatory effect is important. The anti-inflammatory effect of acetaminophen is quite low.

In general, it would be difficult to prove any real superiority either in effectiveness or safety of one of these valuable drugs over the other.

Dear Dr. Solomon: While waiting for my father to finish dressing after his physical examination, I noticed the letters "COPD" in his folder. Can you tell me what this means and what the significance is? I know it has something to do with the lungs because my father was a heavy smoker until recently, and as been having problems with his breathing. — Lou

Dear Lou: COPD stands for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, which includes chronic bronchitis and emphysema. They are grouped under the one heading because they almost always occur simultaneously. According to a report by the National Institutes of Health, COPD is the sixth leading cause of death in the United States, and the second largest cause of disability.

In patients with chronic bronchitis, the walls of the airways become inflamed, triggering the production of mucus. Eventually, the inflammation and mucus develop to the point were they partially obstruct the airway, causing the patient to suffer from shortness of breath. To some extent, chronic bronchitis is a reversible condition.

Emphysema, on the other hand, attacks the walls of the alveoli (air sacs), causing an irreversible destruction of much of the elastic supporting structure of the lungs. This reusits in the collapse of airways, interfering with the flow of air. Moreover, the reduction in alveolar wall area lessens the gas-exchanging capacity of the lungs. Eventually, as the disease progresses, a point may be reached at which the remaining walls can't absorb sufficient oxygen.

Most people with COPD are men, and half of them are under 65 years of age.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Government files suit to halt concert on Indian land

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Contending that a July 10 outdoor concert featuring Barbara Mandrell and other country stars would violate restrictions on use of Indian land, the federal government has filed a Aederalt suit to block the concert.

The government's petition, filed Tu in U.S. District Judge Fred Daugherty's court' asks the court to enjoin Oceanside Oklahoma from conducting a concert on Indian land and from "introducing, attempting to introduce or possessing any intoxicating liquors, including beer, in Indian country."

Kathleen Flanagan, assistant U.S. attorney, said "The 1981 Music Explosion" is to be held 14 miles east of Norman on land the government holds in trust for Indians."

Norman lawyer Lee Cate, representing concert promoters, said the problems can be solved and the concert will go on as planned.

He said his clients had not been served with copies of the petitions.

Cate said promoters of the concert are plannnng to buy the property held in trust for a Kiowa Indian named Elliott Gallagher as soon as restrictions can be lifted through action of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The government contends a lease agreement executed with Indians for restricted land isn't valid unless the Interior Depirtment approves it.

Ms. Flanagan said such approval has not been obtained for the property where the concert is to be staged, although "Oceanside Oklahoma," a corporation promoting the concert, has obtained a proper lease for nearby land to be used for a water-oriented amusement park it plans to open.

Crum will participate

ODESSA — Jane Ann Crum, director of theater at Odessa College, has been selected to participate as actress and singer with the Kalamazoo Festival Playhouse in Kalamazoo, Mich. The run ends Aug. 8.

Crum has been cast in the musical revue, "Side by Side by Sondheim" and "Strider," a new off-Broadway musical.

Mummering madness strikes again as, from left, Patricia Pushover (Karen Haskell), Ivan the Obnoxious (Bill Shaner) and Elsa Easymark (Jan Swinehart) prepare for the 8:30 p.m. Friday opening of the 33rd annual Summer Mummers. The Mummers will run every weekend through Sept. 5 in its new home, the Yucca Theatre downtown. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office at 682-4111.

Celebration planned

The public is invited to join the staff of the Nita Stewart Haley Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., at 2 p.m. Sunday for a celebration of the library's fifth anniversary.

To commemorate this occasion the library will present a special program with guest speakers beginning at 2 p.m. Also a retrospective exhibit of works by Southwestern artists Wilson Hurley and Bettina Steinke will be hanging at the library. This exhibit goes up Saturday and stays through July.

J. Evetts Haley, noted range country historian and founder of the library, will be among the honorees. Sunday is Haley's 80th birthday.

The library's collections represent more than a half century's efforts on the part of Haley. The common themes that run through the more than 12,000 items at the library are the life and times of the cowboy and the range cattle industry.

World Music Festival tickets selling fast

HOUSTON — Tickets for the 4th annual Texxas World Music Festival are selling fast with only about 95 left for sale in the Midland area, Dale Adamson of the Houston based-PACE Promotions told The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Adamson wanted to ensure that those who wanted to attend and were unable to secure tickets here called the ticket office at 1-713-799-9555 before sending money for tickets to Texxas World Music Festival, P.O. Box 1699, Houston, Texas 77001. The Houston ticket office may be sold out shortly, he said.

In the past this event has been held at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. This year's crowd will certainly beat the heat inside the Astrodome in Houston.

Headlining the event will be REO Speedwagon, Heart, Foghat, Blue Oyster Cult and the Rockets. The show is set for 3 p.m. July 18.

Along with the concert portion of the show, which is also referred to as Texxas Jam, the festival will feature the Rock'n' Roll Supermarket, two-days of rock'n'roll-related exhibitions and activities, including sound equipment displays, a beer garden, a T-shirt shop, live bands, movies and a roller rink. These activities will be held in the Astrohall adjoining the Astrodome July 17 and 18.

Concerts slated

The Midland Community-College Band will offer two free concerts Saturday in celebration of July 4th.

At 9:45 a.m. the 60-member group will perform at the annual Daughters of the American Revolution's Bicycle Parade, being held this year at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

At 7:30 p.m. the group will perform at the new downtown park, corner of Loraine and Wall, west of the Midland Center. The evening concert will feature patriotic music and popular selections. This is the first time the downtown park has been used for a concert.

Concertgoers are urged to bring picnic dinners, blankets and lawn chairs as there is no permanent seating.

The MCCB was formed in June by Dan Green, a Midland businessman and former Midland public schools band director. The band includes musicians from local high schools, Midland College, other area colleges and adults from the general community.

The public is invited to attend.

Show includes MC faculty

SNYDER — Fiber works by Sara Gilstrap and watercolors by Warren Taylor, faculty members at Midland College, are included in a July showing of contemporary art at the Diamond M Museum in Snyder. The showing opens Sunday and runs through July 23.

Also included in the show will be paintings by Pamela Price, assistant professor of art at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin; drawings by Delmos Hickmott of Odessa College; paintings by Brent Green of Abilene Christian University; paintings by Ted Rose of ACU; works by sculptor Art Williams of ACU; enameling by John Crump of Western Texas College; ceramic sculpture by Mike Thornton of WTC; and jewelry by Steve Stephen of Texas Tech University.

A public reception honoring the artists will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the museum, 909 E. 25th St., Snyder.

Museum hours are 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Handbell Choir to perform

The public is invited to attend Midland College Handbell Choir's first performance slated for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Allison Fine Arts Building's recital hall at Midland College.

Formed this summer, the handbell choir, directed by Dr. Charles Lawson, will perform a wide range of compositions. The processional number will be "Festival Peal" by Richard Proulx. Other selections include "The Lord is My Shepherd" by Judy Hunnicut; bell music from "The Magic Flute" by W.A. Mozart; "All Hail the Power" arranged by Chaz Lawson; "O Divine Redeemer" with Jane Vitrano as soloist and Mona Ruth Dickson as accompanist; "Panis Angelicus" by Cesar Franck, Chaz Lawson as arranger and soloist Ms. Vitrano accompanied by Ms. Dickson; "Canon" by Johann Pachebel, arranged by Hal H. Hopson; "One Heart, One Hand" from "West Side Story," arranged by Chaz Lawson; and "Materna (America the Beautiful)" by Samuel Ward, arranged by Betty Garee.

Students who have prints in the show include Barbara Anderson, Brent Cavanaugh, David Doryland, Donna Haynes, Rebecca Seitz, Mary Shave and Georgia Tatum.

The free showing may be viewed between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

'Genesis' examines test-tube baby issues

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Genesis" is a movie that raises questions about the conception and development of a "test-tube baby" completely outside the mother's womb.

The man posing those questions is Jerry McNeely, writer and executive producer of the two-hour film to be telecast next season on ABC.

The movie is not science fiction, but it is not science fact, at least not yet. There is no known case of extracorporeal gestation of a human being, but McNeely said his research indicates it's only a question of time before it does become fact.

"The ethical, moral, legal and emotional questions are so incredibly complex that I think we should start thinking about them now rather than letting events happen and reacting to them," he said. "These questions need to be dealt with."

He said part of the advance experimentation involves fertilizing embryos that doctors know cannot be brought to full term. At the same time, anti-abortion forces are attempting to have Congress declare that life begins at conception. "Obviously," said McNeely, "if that happens you couldn't carry on such research. It's possible that by the time the technique is developed it may be against the law."

The movie stars Stephanie Zimbalist as the woman whose baby grows in a laboratory, William Atherton as the father, and Arthur Hill as a retired doctor who tries to talk the couple out of the experiment. Joseph Sargent directed for 20th Century-Fox.

McNeely talked abut his picture in a tree-shaded area on a hot day as Sargent directed Miss Zimbalist in a classroom scene at Everywoman's Village in Van Nuys. Until a few years ago he divided his time between writing and teaching drama at the University of Wisconsin.

"I got the original idea for 'Genesis' about 10 years ago," he said. "I was researching another project when I stumbled on a little data about in vitro fertilization, which means in a solution. I took a few notes. The notion crossed my mind that if the baby was grown in a laboratory how would the parents feel?"

The premise of the story is that Miss Zimbalist is the young wife of one of the laboratory doctors who is suddenly thrust into the experiment when the woman carefully chosen to be the mother is drowned.

"It's a story about a normal woman with no scientific training whose life runs smack into a scientific experiment that changes everything," he said.

"She wears an appliance that makes her look pregnant."

Cory man of many voices

CHICAGO (AP) — Joel Cory is a master of disguise. Some days he's a white-haired munchkin cavorting around a cereal bowl. Other days, he's an amorous ice cube or an eager kitchen helper hiding on a cabinet shelf.

Cory has no trouble changing identities — sometimes he makes the switch as often as seven times a day — because it's part of his job as a television and radio voice, a man who's heard but seldom seen.

His voice is sandwiched between Saturday morning cartoon programs, afternoon soap operas and evening radio talk shows.

For television viewers, Cory is the voice of Pop for Rice Krispies, the helping hand for Hamburger Helper, the sun for Raisin Bran, and cricket for Cricket cigarette lighters.

In the past decade, he has worked on thousands of less-known commercials, disguising himself as a warbling space creature, a Truman Capote-sounding elephant, a drawling cowpoke, a hip polar bear, a crusty prospector, a fresh head of lettuce and a chatty spot on a lottery card.

Changing voices "is like an out-of-body experience," he said. "It's like standing off and watching yourself ... You have to forget what is you."

Cory, 44, sings and announces, too. Clients include Flintsone Vitamins, Kraft, McDonalds, Kleenex, Oscar Mayer, Hubba Bubba Bubble Gum, Oldsmobile and Dial Solid Anti-Perspirant. They keep him busy — and well off.

He's uncharacteriscally silent when asked his salary, although he does admit it's more than $20,000 a year.

Not bad for a former coffee house singer, calculator salesman and computer programmer who never found success in those careers.

When he worked with computers, he said, the programs he designed were inefficient as "walking around the block to get to the house next door ... "

About 10 years ago, he decided to make a full-time career as a voice-over announcer. 'I quit all of my straight jobs, he said, "... actually I was asked to leave."

Now, "He's really in demand," said George Fels, assistant creative director for the Leo Burnett advertising agency. "His instinct and his timing and his delivery are top-notch."

Cory "is one of the best if not the best," added Larry Cohen, a co-pywriter at Needham, HarpSteers, Inc. "He's relentless in his search for perfection and for the right sound."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, July 3, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Today marks the beginning of an interesting, action-packed and mostly successful year for you. Property investments could lead to substantial financial gain. Do not be so quick to relinquish your role of leader to others. Too much modesty can be just as harmful as too little where career goals are concerned. Employment questions receive better answers now. Do not underestimate the value of your contributions to a join effort. Now through November will be a highly rewarding period for Cancerian parents and their children. And any babies born today should grow into sensitive, generous adults. Romance becomes deeper and more delightful now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can learn a lot today by simply observing and listening to what is going on around you. Plan a celebration. Choose social activities the entire family will enjoy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An important research project cannot be neglected now. Common sense will help you reach a correct financial decision. Plan a weekend surprise for loved ones!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on your strengths and career goals will come into clearer focus. You need to know yourself before you can understand others. Good news comes your way this evening!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): With a little extra concentration and effort, your plans should work out even better than expected. Seek more input from co-workers to boost profits. Your love life is in the spotlight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Resist a tendency to daydream. Do not misunderstand others. Double-check any directions or instructions you are given. Marital ties are strengthened now. Greater tact will win you new friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refuse to listen to gossips who claim to have "inside information." Concentrate on adopting a constructive approach to a ticklish problem. Progress can be made in the financial area.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your personal charm wins you valuable new contacts or clients. Make a special effort to move ahead of the competition. A temporary job could lead to permanent employment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Original ideas abound today, but you must be practical. Use greater diplomacy when dealing with an opinionated older person. Your social life is sparkling but could prove expensive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A better day for love may not come along for a while. Make the most of it! The atmosphere is ideal for taking positive action. Your perceptions are acute.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An unexpected message gives you inspiration. Strike a balance between two extremes and your effectiveness will increase. Be careful about the tactics you use to attain a special objective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Prepare for unforeseen eventualities. It is better to be safe than sorry. If you wore yourself out working this week, plan a restful weekend. Romance needs more time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refuse to be drawn into a conflict that does not concern you. Play the role of mediator only if asked. A lack of enthusiasm may slow your efforts to resolve a dilemma.

If there is one trait that distinguishes the expert from the average player at the bridge table, it is his pessimism. The expert believes in Murphy's Law: "If anything can go wrong, it will!"

If the average player declared today's hand, he would reason: "If the queen of spades drops, the diamond finesse succeeds and the clubs are 3-3, I will make all thirteen tricks." Now watch former world champion Lew Mathe of Los Angeles play the hand. His line is predicated on the assumption that none of the above will happen.

Four spades was a perfectly respectable contract, and West made his natural lead of the queen of hearts. Declarer won the ace and led a low club to the king. He crossed back to his hand with the king of spades and led another club toward dummy—that was to protect against the possibility that West held a singleton club.

When the ace of clubs won and both defenders followed to the trick, Mathe continued by ruffing a club with the jack of trumps. It would not have helped West to overruff with the queen, cash two hearts and shift to a diamond, for dummy's nine-eight of trumps would then have been the entries Mathe needed to set up a long club for a diamond discard. Therefore, West elected to sluff a diamond.

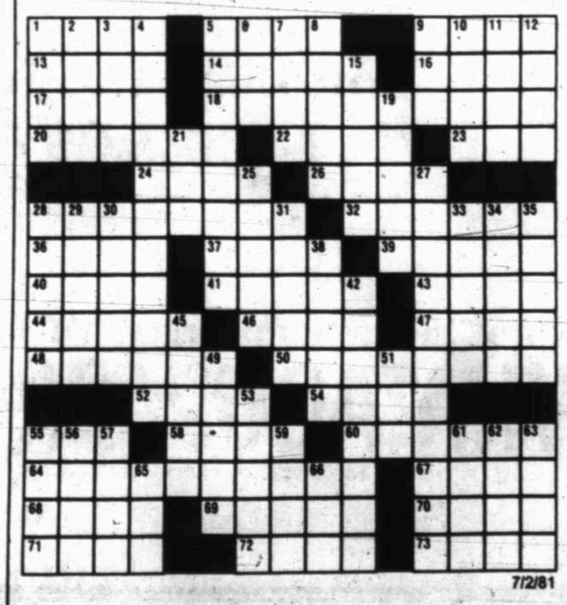

However, that proved to be no better, for Mathe's next play was a low spade! West was forced to win the queen; otherwise he would lose his trump trick. The defenders took their two heart tricks, ending in the West hand, and the diamond shift was automatic. Mathe rose with the ace of diamonds and ruffed a club with the ten of trumps to establish the fifth club. A low spade to the nine drew the last outstanding trump and provided the entry to the table to cash the thirteenth club, on which declarer sluffed his remaining diamond.

Note that, had declarer cashed the ace-king of trumps, he would have had no way to get back to dummy after establishing a club trick. Declarer would have lost two hearts, a trump and a diamond for down one.

Main Street Project attacks downtown decay with dose of preservation

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — So grass is taking over the pavement of your town square, and downtown merchants spend more time playing dominoes than waiting on customers?

Maybe what your city needs is The Main Street Project, which attacks downtown decay with an unorthodox blend of historic preservation and hardheaded business advice like keep dead bugs out of your display windows.

Nostalgia is good for business, say the Texas Historical Commission folks who run Main Street.

THE PRIVATE National Trust for Historic Preservation selected Texas last year as one of six Main Street states, and the historical commission chose Hillsboro, Plainview, Seguin, Eagle Pass and Navasota as the first cities to benefit.

"This is where we think preservation is right now. We are moving away from the time when you pickled buildings and made museums of hem. We'v pickled all we need. ... We are now at the stage where economic vitality is what makes preservation go," commission director Truett Latimer said in an interview.

Five cities of under 50,000 population will be selected each year through 1990, and 100 communities have shown interest in being picked for 1982.

UNLIKE MOST government efforts, Main Street does not throw tax dollars at a problem.

"Primarily, it's technical assistance. ... We are helping them help themselves," Latimer said.

Latimer's budget includes no funds earmarked for Main Street, and he makes do with the staff he had before. He does seek foundation grants, however, and has begun asking corporations to donate $1,000 a year for three years.

A city picked for Main Street takes on a bunch of responsibilities, including hiring a project director and persuading businessmen to cooperate. Then there's the effort of talking lenders into offering low-interest loans for restoring the facades of historic buildings in the business district.

WHAT A CITY gets is plenty of expert advice, with the commission and the National Trust for Historic Preservation footing the bill.

There are parking experts, restaurant experts, marketing experts, architects, historians and tourism consultants, plus assigned helpers from 25 state agencies.

Cities also share experiences and ideas. The Main Street Newsletter for June advised merchants that better window displays mean a better downtown image.

"Dead insects in windows are an immediate 'turn-off,' " said one tip.

Top objectives of Main Street include "visible change" in downtown appearance, organization of a strong downtown association, reduction in downtown vacancies and nomination of downtown areas to the National Register of Historic Places.

"We try to teach them the same things that have made the malls successful and apply the same principles to downtown," said Latimer.

HE READILY admits that the "bottom line" is different for the historical commission and Main Street businessmen.

"We think the bottom line is the retention of most of the basic fabric of many of the great downtowns that exist throughout the state and include late 19th Century and early 20th Century architecture. ... For the Main Street people, the bottom line is increased business, increased profits," Latimer said.

Often, he said, it doesn't take much to return a building to its turn-of-the-century appearance.

"Many times, buildings have been 'slipcovered,' and it's just a matter of removing the slipcovers — restoring windows, repointing the brick and doing some painting," he said.

ALTHOUGH MAIN STREET didn't get started in Texas until early this year, Latimer says each of the five local programs already has success stories to tell:

-Eagle Pass has its first active downtown merchants association. The University of Texas architecture school has completed a survey and plans for the historic buildings in the central business district. The second story of M&M Supply is being converted to a 2,600-square-foot apartment at a cost of $12 a foot and will be shown as a model.

-Hillsboro merchants attracted 15,000 visitors with a two-day sidewalk sale and joint promotion. Four historic buildings are in various stages of restoration. Four lenders are making 8 percent loans for rehabilitation. Safeway is building a large supermarket a block from the square as a result of Main Street's efforts.

-Navasota lenders have created a $60,000 loan pool for downtown revitalization, and a Main Street Committee has been organized. A commission architect spends four days a month in Navasota and helped one owner get a tenant for a vacant historic building, which is to be restored.

Hana Mandlikova defeated Martina Navritlova to earn Wimbledon finals spot against Chris Evert Lloyd on Friday.

Shriver pulling for Chris Lloyd

By WINSOR DOBBIN

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pam Shriver was outplayed by Chris Evert Lloyd in the Wimbledon women's singles semifinals Wednesday and then explained why she wants her conqueror to win the tournament.

"I think it means a lot to Chris to win this time," said Shriver, who was beaten 6-3, 6-1.

"She's 26, and it would be a great way for her to finish before fading out of tennis. Then maybe she could start a family, which I know she wants to do. I'm rooting for her."

Lloyd, who has played in seven Wimbledon singles finals and won only two of them, faces the remarkable Hana Mandlikova in Friday's final.

The 19-year-old Czechoslovakian won a bitterly contested baseline slugfest with Martina Navratilova to post a 7-5, 4-6, 6-1 victory in the other semifinal.

MANDLIKOVA, the reigning French and Australian champion, served brilliantly to outlast the 24-year-old Navratilova, winner here in 1978 and 1979.

"The final is all in Hana's hands," said Shriver, 18. "If she plays a good match, she will win because she has an advantage on grass. But if she plays only a fair match, and Chris plays it as smart as I know she will, then Chris will win it."

Shriver said that losing the last three Wimbledon finals will be Y motivating facztor for Lloyd.

"I think Chris really wants to win this final and go out in a blaze of glory," Shriver said. "It has to be a fairy tale end, and to come out a loser in four straight finals would be sad."

Lloyd watched some of the Mandlikova-Navratilova semifinal and was impressed with the way Mandlikova played.

"Hana certainly played well; she has all the shots," said the top seed. "She can be brilliant, but is a bit moody. On her off days she can lose to a number of players."

However, Lloyd refused to comment on Friday's match.

"I don't want to look ahead. It has hurt me too much in the past," she said.

IN CONTRAST, Mandlikova was looking forward to the arrival of her parents — former Olympic sprinter Vilem Mandlik and his wife, Hana — from Czechoslovakia.

"They went to watch today's match on television near the German border," she said. "I had told them on the telephone that I wanted them to come over if I reached the final, and they will be here," said the delighted Czechoslovakian teen-ager.

Lloyd has a 5-2 head-to-head advantage over Mandlikova, but Hana has won two of their last three matches.

"It is easier to beat Chris on grass than clay, but I know she wants to win so badly," said Mandlikova.

Mandlikova's victory Wednesday again set the pundits talking about her chances of completing the Grand Slam, although there is debate as to what constitutes the Grand Slam: winning all four major championships — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens — in the same year or consecutively. But that's something Mandlikova is not yet prepared to consider.

"It is important, of course, but at the moment it is not in my head," she said. "I am trying to take it one tournament at a time."

Cook stews Cubs, 6-2

El Paso hurler 4-0 against Midland

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If the Midland Cubs were Wimbledon, then Tim Cook must be Bjorn Borg.

All the righthander from Charleston, S.C., has to do is throw his racquet, err glove, on the pitcher's mound and he's got an automatic win.

Going into Wednesday's game at Cubs Stadium, Cook had beaten the Cubs in straight sets, 5-4, 5-2, 5-4. So he added another one for good measure, 6-2, which ought to give him permanent possession of the Cubs. It did give the Diablos a 3-1 lead in the Texas League series with games left tonight and Thursday.

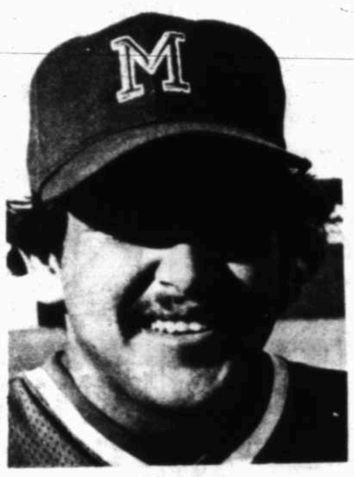

Cook received relief help the final two innings from Larry Montgomery, but had long since established, by allowing one earned run in the first seven innings, that he still owned the Cubs. If Midland wants them back, they'll have to negotiate with Tim.

IT'S LITTLE wonder Cook loves Midland. He's 6-2 for the season, but might be back in Stockton if it weren't for Midland, against whom he is 4-0. If he'd go the Cubs would take up a collection to send him there.

Cubs at home

THURSDAY—El Paso (Bob Candiotti 5-1)-Cubs (Mike Thompson 3-1) 7:30 p.m.
FRIDAY—El Paso at Cubs Stadium, 6 p.m. Kiwanis fireworks after the game.

El Paso scored a run in the first when the game's "one-for-the-book" play occured. Eddie Irvine and John Skorochocki opened the game with singles. Then, the finally-arrived

Javier Fierro
...streak reaches 13

John Hanson grounded to short. Javier Fierro shoveled the ball to second baseman Craig Kornfeld, who was put on crutches by Skorochocki's slide as Irvine moved to third. Base umpire Jerry Madsen called interference and ruled a double play.

Then big John Evans, who has hit 18 homers, nine against Midland, had the outfielders' backs rubbing against the fences and the infielders feeling with their back foot for grass as he approached the plate waving the stump of a tree. So what does John do, he dumps a bunt down the third base line to score Irvine.

THE CUBS got two back in the home first when Dave Owen reached on an error and Mel Hall, Javier Fierro and Jack Upton followed with singles to produce two runs and the Cubs had visions of tying the series at 2-2. But, as it turned out, that was the offense for the night, although Fierro, hitting safely in 13 straight games, and Upton each had three hits.

Jerry Lane singled, stole second and scored on an error to tie it in the second and it remained that way until seventh when Nastu got one out and then suddenly lost it. Willie Lazodo singled, Al Manning walked and Bill Schroeder doubled into the left field corner for two runs. When Irvine followed with a single, lefty Norm Churchill replaced Nastu, who pitched well enough to win against anybody but Cook.

The Diablos added two more in the eighth as Evans singled, Jerry Lane doubled and the runs scored on Lazodo's loft to center and another error.

Nastu gave up eight hits and three earned runs in his 6 1/3 innings and the way he has pitched in his last two outings makes one wonder why we haven't seen more of him this spring. Still, he suffered his second loss in five decisions.

Cub nemisis Cook was a No. 5 draft choice out of Newberry, S.C., College three years ago and spent a season and a half at Holyoke of the AA Eastern League where he compiled an overall 7-17 record. Last year he was 8-6 with a 3.14 ERA at Stockton in A ball.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Tom Candiotti, a 23-year-old righthander from Concord, Calif, will face Midland lefty Mike Thompson, 3-1, in tonight's game...Candiotti is 5-2 with a 1.76 ERA beat the Cubs 6-3 in the recent series at El Paso...Jon Perlman rejoined the Cubs from Iowa, American

Cage touney may expand

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The proposed expansion of the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament from 48 to 64 teams is gaining support, says an NCAA official.

"There is considerably more interest than a year ago, and there have been a lot of people who have flip-flopped on the issue," Tom Jernstedt, assistant executive director of events, told The Kansas City Star in an interview published Wednesday.

The NCAA tournament was expanded from 40 teams to 48 teams two seasons ago, and the Division I basketball committee will discuss the proposed expansion to 64 teams at a meeting July 10-14 in Chatham, Mass. If the committee approves the expansion, the NCAA Executive Committee, which meets in August in Gleneden Beach, Ore., would make the final decision.

The proposed expansion has been endorsed the last two years by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Ron Davis serves celebs in posh restaurant during strike

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball strike or no, former Midland Cub Ron Davis still has his eye on the plate.

Instead of throwing for the New York Yankees, the right-handed reliever is doing his pitching these days at tables in a fashionable Upper East Side restaurant, where he is working as a waiter.

A waiter?

"Yes," says the affable Davis. "I always wanted to do interesting things, get a chance to do different jobs and meet different people. I've never been a waiter before — so I decided to come here while the strike was on."

Actually, Davis did have some restaurant experience some time ago in a "barbecue place" in Houston, his hometown, but "it was nowhere nearly as elegant as this place. We just carried the plates to tables and didn't serve any liquor."

The job at Oren and Aretsky, an establishment frequented by movie stars, models and athletes, pays pretty well in tips, according to Davis. And it was waiting for him anytime after the major league baseball players went on strike June 12.

The restaurant's owners, Oren Stevens and Ken Aretsky, have been close friends of Davis' ever since he started eating there with his Yankee pals a couple of years ago.

"They just asked me if I wanted to work here and I said, 'yes,'" says Davis, who started in his new occupation Tuesday night and seems to be adjusting to it quite well.

In this new white apron job, the 6-foot-4, 205-pounder certainly isn't asked to tax his physical strength more than he does on the mound for the Yankees. "I could do this all day and not get tired," he points out.

But there are little sophistications that Davis hasn't picked up yet — like "remembering the kinds of glasses that go with different kinds of drinks and knowing where the tables are. There are 30 here and we sometimes have to help out other waiters."

As for Davis, who pitched in Midland before being traded to the Yankees for Ken Holtzman, his station consists of five tables, near the back, and he continues to see a lot of actio. The reaon is obvious.

"People saw me on the TV news shows after my first night and now when they come in, some ask for me," says Davis. "I'm kind of glad. I enjoy talking to people and like to sign autographs."

While Davis may be the object of people-gawking, the pitcher himself likes to rubberneck himself. As he explains, "New Yorkers may be used to it but back in Texas, we don't get to see too many movie stars up close. Another reason why I like working here is that I can see a lot of famous people. Farrah Fawcett has been in here, Miss USA, as well as television soap opera stars and athletes from other sports. I'm a big soap opera fan; I watch them every chance I get."

Since the baseball strike started three weeks ago, Davis has been pretty active on the sidelines. Before he took the waiter's job, he went home to Houston to visit his wife and newborn son and talked at Little League gatherings.

He's also been throwing and running, "but there's just so much you can do. It isn't the same as game situations, of course. If the strike lasts much longer, I don't think any of us will be in shape to finish out the season."

"I thought perhaps it would last a week at worst," he says. "I really feel the owners are trying to break the players' union. But if the strike goes as far as the All-Star break (July 14), I don't see baseball coming back this season. There are too many factors involved."

No optimism for strike

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball strike marked its three-week anniversary today. And although stalemated negotiations have resumed, both sides agreed there was no cause for optimism.

The casualty count added 10 more canceled games today, pushing the total to 261 since the strike began June 12. And from the tone of both sides' observations Wednesday, when talks resumed for the first time this week, the toll will go considerably higher.

"AM I optimistic?" management representative Ray Grebey asked — rhetorically — following the three-hour session. "No."

It was a position with which Marvin Miller, executive director of the striking Major League Players Association, could not argue. "If Mr. Grebey said there was no progress," Miller began, "I find nothing to disagree with there."

Management used Wednesday's session to alter certain aspects of their last proposal on compensating teams who lose ranking free agents in the re-entry draft — the only issue in the strike.

The major revision involved the formula used for determining the number of Type B or second-level free agents who would require professional player compensation. Type B free agents are identified as those falling between the top 25 and 40 percent statistically of all available re-entry draft players. Type A players fall in the top 25 percent.

UNDER THE revised plan, a limit of eight Type B players would require compensation in the form of a professional player and that number could be reduced based on the number of Type A players (all of whom would require compensation) available. The number of Type A players in the draft would be subtracted from 12 (reduced from last week's 14) to produce the number of Type B's requiring compensation. For example, if there are nine Type A's, then three Type B's would generate compensation. If there is one Type A, then eight Type B's would require compensation.

Miller was unimpressed.

"They revised their formula ever so slightly," he said. "The gap is so wide it defies my vocabulary to describe it."

Grebey agreed with the latter comment, too. "There are wide differences between us still," the management representative said.

Amarillo rallies for two in 9th to sink Dodgers

By The Associated Press

A single and a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning gave the Amarillo Gold Sox two runs and a 4-3 come-from-behind Texas League baseball victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Wednesday night.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Midland, 6-2, Shreveport defeated Arkansas 5-2, and Tulsa edged Jackson, 2-1.

WITH AMARILLO trailing 3-2 in the ninth inning, James Steele singled and moved to second on a grounder by Aaron Cain. Frank Castro singled, driving in Steele. The next two batters were walked, forcing in the winning run.

Dave Dravecky, 7-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Tom Niefenfuer, 8-1.

Jim Rothford had a two-run homer, a triple and a single in four plate appearances as the Shreveport Captains beat the Arkansas Travelers, 5-2.

PEACHY GUTIERREZ had a solo homer for Arkansas.

Greg Moyer, 4-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Ralph Citarella, 4-7.

Ron Carney gave up only one hit in eight innings as the Tulsa Drillers edged the Jackson Mets, 2-1. Carney tired and Jack Lazorko came on in the ninth inning to finish the game.

Bobby Ball scored both Tulsa runs.

Watson feels he can still win

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf admits his old competitive fire has dwindled, but still believes he can break a three-year victory drought in the Western Open.

Weiskopf, 38, has collected 13 titles in 18 professional golf seasons. Yet, he hasn't won since the Doral-Eastern in March 1978.

And he thinks he knows why.

"I don't think my day-to-day, week-to-week intensity is as good as it was 10 years ago. It's probably a little lack of motivation," he said before teeing off today in the first round of this $300,000 tournament. Weiskopf continued with his self-analysis.

"I don't think my short game is as good as it's been. I don't spend as much time at it as I used to," he said, lounging in the clubhouse of Butler National Golf Club. For example, Weiskopf did not touch a golf club for the last two weeks. Instead, the tall, erect Ohio native went fishing and horseback riding near his home in Paradise Valley, Ariz.

Since his last victory, Weiskopf's best finishes have been fourth in the U.S. Open in 1978, second in the Southern Open in 179, fourth in last year's Memorial and two second places this season.

His 1981 financial figures, $107,260 for 19th place, are not significant to Weiskopf. Afterall, he has won $1.8 million playing this ancient sport.

Family ties mean nothing at trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles Sullivan and Joseph Alioto may be family to each other, but they're on different sides of the fence in the antitrust trial between the Oakland Raiders and the National Football League.

Sullivan, executive vice-president of the New England Patriots, testified Wednesday in U.S. District Court that Al Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, warned him against standing in the way of the Raiders' proposed move to Los Angeles.

SULLIVAN SAID Davis approached him at an NFL meeting in March 1980 in Dallas and said both he (Davis) and Alioto, attorney for the Raiders and Sullivangs brother-in-law, were "concerned" at Sullivan's opposition to Davis' plans.

Sullivan testified he recalled Davis saying, "If you don't lay back, we're going to have to go after you."

The Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission have sued the NFL over the league's refusal to allow the team to move to Los Angeles. The trial is in its eighth week.

After the day's testimony, Davis refuted Sullivan's testimony, saying: "I've never thought of Mr. Sullivan as someone I'd go after. I don't give him that much credibility. Mr. Sullivan is very young; he's immature."

Sullivan insisted there were no bad feelings between himself and Davis. "I don't have any personal animosity toward him," he said. "I do feel that what he is doing here is wrong."

SULLIVAN SAID he opposed the move because Oakland fans were avid supporters of the Raiders. He also said Davis was attempting to move without the approval of the rest of the league, in violation of the NFL's constitution.

"If we have people who want to violate the rules, then the time will come when we won't have a league."

Sullivan said he wanted to file suit against Davis in March 1980 to prvent the Raiders from moving to Los Angeles. Sullivan said he was concerned that Davis was ruining his franchise and that there would be no fans to watch the Raiders in Los Angeles.

Sullivan also told the jury of seven women and three men that Dsvis "us in the lurch" in the Darryl Stingley case. Stingley suffered a broken neck in an August 1978 preseason game between the Raiders and Patriots after a tackle by then-Oakland defensive back Jack Tatum.

AM coach to be in Midland

Association, and didn't seem to have any regrets. "I've been on relief for the last four weeks and wasn't much more than a weekend pitcher. I'm glad to be back in Midland, Cubs Stadium and the Texas League. It looks like we have a contender and I want to make a contribution." Jon will give the Cubs a change of pace in the starting rotation which has a portside list with Thompson, Nastu, Mike King with Randy Clark the lone righthander...The stands have been loaded with scouts during the series. The Yankees have both Jack Bloomfield and Harry Craft scribbling notes on Texas League talent...Fierro raised his average to .323 with his three hits. For the streak Havey is 21 for 56 for .375...Carter showed pretty good foot in the fourth when he beat out an infield hit and then stole second on a pitch out...

Department deserves pat on back

KENNY REDIN'S
Fin & Feather

Texas fishermen, give a great big pat on the back to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (Fisheries Division). These folks are honestly doing something that will benefit Texas anglers. Not only are they working on great game fish species for the present, but their studies and research probes into future Texas fishing generations.

I'VE BEEN studying several other state game and fish agencies and have yet to find one that is working as hard as ours. I'm proud of their accomplishments, you should be too.

We've printed a countless number of works on their latest accomplishments, the striped bass, striped/white hybrids, Florida bass, northern pike and walleye. These are just more species for us fislermen to take after, but they didn't quit at that point. They are now working on more species for the betterment of Texas sport fishing. Let's take a look.

THE FISHERIES division is currently working with a fascinating array of unusual and exotic fish which they hope will made dramatic contributions to the future of sport fishing in the Lone Star State. They range from large tackle-busting bruisers such as the Nile perch and peacock bass to hybrid sunfish and blueback herring. Headquarters for these studies is the Heart O' Hills research facility near Ingram in the Texas Hill Country.

To help keep abreast of research developments here is a brief status report on the various species now under stages of study.

NILE PERCH: As the name suggests, these fish are native to the Nile River drainage in North Africa. Some strains have been known to reach weights in excess of 100 pounds. While this kind of growth is not expected from the perch currently being held at Heart O' Hills, they have considerable potential if the proper warm-water environment can be found for them. About 80 Nile perch in the three-to-six pound class were stocked in Lake Braunig near San Antonio two years ago, and while returns were limited, a San Antonio resident managed to set the current state record of 12 pounds, one ounce, with a fish he caught there in February, 1980.

Several power plant lakes or reservoirs around the state are under consideration for stocking, but none has been selected yet. Nile perch require warm water similar to their natural tropical habitat, and powe plant cooling ponds are the only Texas impoundments which offer year-round warm water.

PEACOCK BASS: Perhaps no other exotic fish under study can match the South American peacock bass for beauty and sporting qualities. However, the peacock is the most delicate of all in terms of its water temperature requirements. Unlike Nile perch, peacocks will spawn in hatchery ponds, building nests similar to native largemouth bass.

Stockings of the peacock bass in public waters has been in Lake Bastrop and Coleto Creek Reservoir, but the fish were lost when the power plant's capacity was not sufficient to maintain warm water temperature.

FIREHOLE TROUT: The department has already been successful at establishing production put-and-take rainbow trout fisheries at several locations across the state, but the rainbows cannot reproduce an have difficulty surviving higher water temperatures during the summer. The Firehole rainbow comes from the river of the same name in Yellowstone National Park. This fish has evolved in an environment of warmer water than what is considered normal for most trout.

While biologists cannot realistically hope for a trout which will reproduce consistently in Texas streams, they believe the Firehole trout may be hardier strain which will grow faster and survive summer temperatures better than the standard hatchery-strain rainbows.

BROOK TROUT: The same procedures being used to test Firehole trout are being applied to brook trout to determine if they would be able to tolerate temperatures ranges found in Texas waters.

FLORIDA BASS/SMALLMOUTH BASS: Illinois biologists created a stir recently when they bred smallmouth with northern largemouth bass. The resulting hybrid was labeled "meanmouth" and was reputed to be vigorous and aggressive. The department's version of the meanmouth is different in that it results from a cross between smallmouths and the Florida strain of largemouth bass.

Adult fish are being compared to native fish in station ponds for catchability, growth and other criteria. Also, one small lake will be stocked next week in an experiment to learn what happens to the hybrid's characteristics after several years of reproduction in a lake environment.

HYBRID SUNFISH: Another successful program in the past has been the hybrid cross between the green an redear sunfish. The hybrid is a fast-growing sunfish which resists the usual "stunting" characteristics seen in many sunfish populations. Experiments now are being conducted on a number of hybrid crosses in attempts to find a sterile hybrid which grows rapidly.

BLUEBACK HERRING: The blueback herring is a forage fish rather than a sport fish, but its potential excites biologists. It is found along the Atlantic seaboard, and it is anadromous like the striped bass. That is, in its normal environment it lives in salt water an swims into fresh water rivers to spawn. However, the blueback, like the striper, has demonstrated the ability to reproduce in landlocked reservoirs.

In effect, the herring could replace the threadfin shad as a forage species in the northern half of Texas, where threadfins often suffer winter kills. Bluebacks have slow growth which allows them to remain at a usable forage size for a longer time. Biologists brought a shipment of bluebacks from North Carolina by air this year, and the fish have already spawned. The offspring are being raised as brooders to supply fish for experimental stocking in Mackenzie Reservoir near Plainview.

Easley inks

SEATTLE (AP) — Just one week ago, All-America safety Ken Easley's agent was talking about taking him to Canada.

Los Angeles lawyer Leigh Steinberg went public and said the Seattle Seahawks were in danger of losing their No. 1 1981 draft pick.

On Wednesday, the Seahawks announced Easley — thought to be far away from terms with the National Football League club — has agreed to a four-year contract.

Easley was the No. 4 overall pick in the April NFL draft.

Weaver gives into WBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Weaver will defend the World Boxing Association heavyweight title against James Tillis — just as the WBA has directed — in September, with the winner fighting top-ranked Gerry Cooney in February, promoter Bob Arum said Wednesday.

ARUM SAID that Cooney would fight a yet to be named opponent on the undercard of the Weaver-Tillis fight, and that show plus the winner against Cooney would be co-promoted by Sam Glass of Tiffany Promotions and himself.

Glass, Arum, and representatives of Tillis and Cooney will meet in Los Angeles Friday at the invitation of Gwen Reese, Arum said. The promoter said that she is an advisor to Weaver, who is managed by Don Manuel. Weaver, who said in Los Angeles again Wednesday that he would fight the No. 3-ranked Tillis, described her as a personal secretary.

MEANWHILE, LARRY Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion, said he wanted to fight the winner of Weaver-Tillis, not Cooney, who is ranked No. 1 by the WBC as well as the WBA.

"Why should I want him when they (the Cooney camp) were ducking me?" Holmes said in a telephone interview from his Easton, Pa., home.

"They want more (money) than me. Cooney's not the champion. I don't want to fight him under their conditions. I'll fight the winner of Weaver-Tillis. Now, they (Cooney's camp) have no where to go."

Cooney had signed to fight Weaver for the World Boxing Association title, but the WBA Executive Committee has ruled that Weaver must first defend against Tillis, who was the leading available contender last March when Weaver was supposed to sign for a mandatory title defense.

"THE WBA is right," said Holmes. "They let Weaver or anybody dictate to them, they're in trouble. They made a decision, and they got to stick to it."

Holmes recalled he got a shot at the WBC title when Ken Norton became champion in March, 1978, after Leon Spinks was stripped for signing with a rematch against Muhammad Ali instead of a defense against Norton.

"I want Greg Page to fight Cooney," said Holmes, who said he would like to fight Cooney after meeting the Tillis-Weaver winner.

"The champion is right, and I'll back him 100 percent, but I'll try to change his mind," Don King, who promotes Holmes' fights, said from his farm near Cleveland.

Earnhardt will swim if he wins

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Maybe it's the heat and humidity, or perhaps it's just the latest fad, but Dale Earnhardt says he'll dive into the nearest body of water if he wins Saturday's Firecracker 400 Grand National stock car race.

Earnhardt, the defending Winston Cup champion, was talking about golfer Jerry Pate, who dived fully cothed into a nearby lake to celebrate ending a long winning drought with a victory at Memphis last weekend.

"IT WORKED for Pate, so maybe it'll work for me," said Earnhardt, who has not won a race in 16 tries on the 1981 Grand National circuit.

Earnhardt reached the pinacle of the NASCAR world a year ago in only his second full season on the Grand National tour. He did it driving for a team owned by California businessman Rod Osterlund, who last week sold his team, lock, stock and barrel, to Kentucky coal-mining baron Jim Stacy.

Immediately there were rumors that Earnhardt was on his way out as driver for the team, to be replaced by another veteran driver. But both Stacy and Earnhardt said Wednesday those rumors were just that — rumors.

EARNHARDT, A 30-year-old from Kannapolis, N.C., said he had a verbal contract with Osterlund. When asked if he would seek a written pact with Stacy, the mustachioed driver replied, "That's between him and me. That's business."

Political instability biggest threat in Mideast

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political instability in the oil-rich Middle East poses more of a threat to American interests there than the possibility of Soviet military intervention in the region, a new foundation report says.

Nonetheless, the staff report by the Carnegie Endowment's panel on U.S. security concludes that the Soviet Union could, over a few weeks, move more divisions, tanks and planes into the Persian Gulf than the United States.

In the short run, the report said, "Soviet forces have a limited ability to project power well beyond northern Iran."

"Moscow could not count on a successful attack, let alone a swift or easy victory" in the southern half of the region, where the United States has a tactical air superiority, according to the study.

The United States can best deter an attack on its Middle East allies by providing military assistance, making a show of force and "having the ability to send in some troops and overwhelming air power," the panel said in the report, released Tuesday.

Additional sealift and storage capabilities scheduled for completion by 1985 will enable the United States to deploy two divisions to the Persian Gulf region in about two weeks, double the current reaction time, the report said.

But "unless Washington develops a strategy to give shape to the buildup of its military capabilities in the area, the credibility and utility of its forces will be in question," it said.

The panel recommended against the United States and other Western nations making any move to seize the region's oil fields to deal with a threatened or actual cutoff.

"Western military capabilities would not likely be able to secure Persian Gulf oil fields in the face of local resistence without major damage being done to oil facilities," the report said. "The West, then, would still have to cope with a major shortage of oil supplies for more than a year."

The panel noted that the Reagan administration has a tendency to view Moscow as the major threat to the region. But it gave more credence to the alternative view that internal political and economic problems in Middle East nations form the major challenge to stability and the security of the oil fields.

"This judgment assumes that Moscow will be deterred from taking military action by the prospective costs of intervention more than by the threat of American military reaction," the report said.

"Moscow is already having difficulty occupying Afghanistan," it said. "Soviet difficulties in bringing Afghanistan under control would be multiplied in Iran or Pakistan."

The report said it is difficult to assess the balance of U.S. and Soviet forces worldwide but concluded that "troublesome trends" exist, primarily because of Soviet procurement "of more, newer and betmer weapons."

Warsaw Pact forces have a numerical advantage in manpower and weapons in the European Theater but "Moscow, nonetheless, would face high costs and great risks in contemplating any attack against NATO," it said.

The panel said NATO nations must develop a new concept of sharing the defense burden not only in Europe but also the Persian Gulf. And, without a unified commitment to modernizing long-range theater nuclear forces, political cohesion within NATO could be eroded, it said.

Faulkner's Office Machine Corp. introduces the Royal Model 5010 All-Electronic Typewriter with Print Wheel. Stop by Faulkner's at 2612 W. Front or call 684-6625 or 563-0030 for an in-office demonstration or free trial.

Faulkner's Office Machine Corporation of Midland introduces the new Royal Model 5010 electronic typewriter.

The 5010 electronic typewriter has a 132-character correcting memory which complements the many microprocessor-controlled automatic functions offered by this advanced electronic unit. This memory makes it possible to delete automatically any or all of two lines of typing or up to 132 characters, including programmed functions.

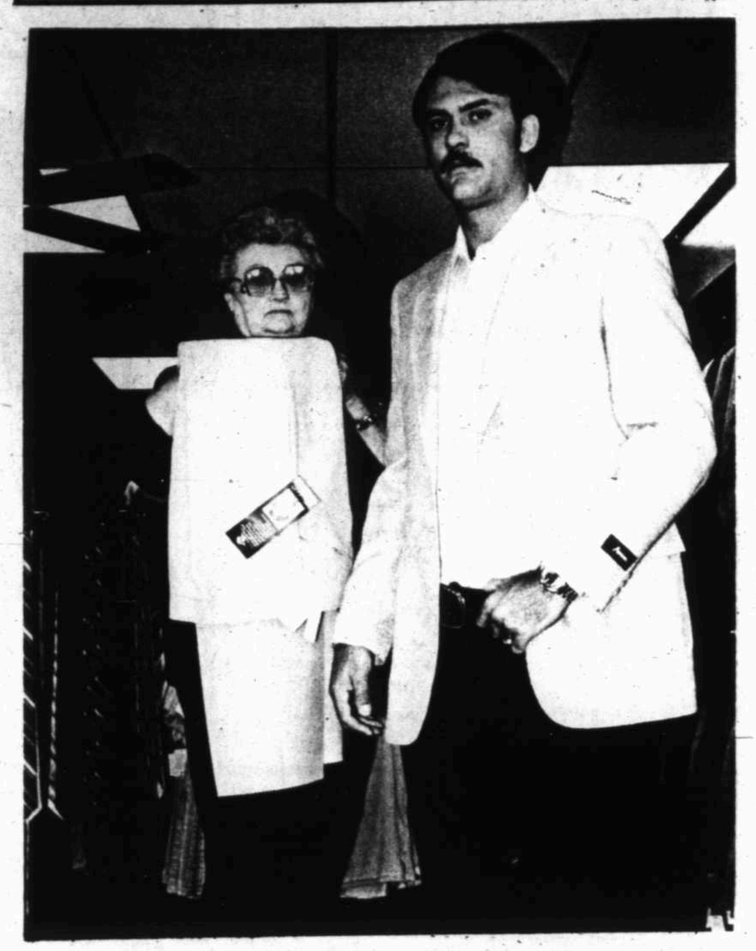

To simplify daily typing, the Royal 5010 permits the operator to control virtually all machine functions directly from the keyboard. The versatile microprocessor circuitry enables the typist to select either 10,12, or 15 pitch, as well as proportional spacing. It also permits programming for automatic columnar decimal alignment, vertical spacing, paper insertion and removal, margin settings, impression control, four selections of line spacing, pre-selection of tab stops, and single and total tab clearance. Indicator lights show which of the following functions are in use: impression control, pitch, line spacing, shift lock, and half-space key.

The Royal 5010 utilizes exceptionally durable print wheels that are capable of producing 17.5 characters per second in perfect alignment. Despite this speed, ultra-quiet operation is possible due to the stabilized vibration-free print wheel combined with electronics and an insulated housing and keyboard.

Other Royal 5010 features include an end-of-page indicator and a paper size guide imprinted on the paper support in a scale up to the 15½-inch paper width capacity of the 5010. All 48 typing keys, as well as the keys for correction, forward and backspacing, and up/down indexing may be used for repeat action simply by depressing the special "R" key. Vertical spacing for 1, 1½, 2, and 2½ spaces may be programmed directly from the keyboard.

Because the Royal 5010 incorporates a modular design and a self-diagnostic system, it can be serviced simply and rapidly.

Call Faulkner's Office Machine Corp. at 684-6625 or 563-0030 for an in-office demonstration or free trial. Or stop by their offices at 2612 W. Front Street. The experienced people at Faulkner's will be happy to demonstrate the Royal 5010. They also offer prompt delivery and service on the Royal 5010, as well as on the other items in their full line of typewriters and calculators.

Helen McMahon at Ray's Big and Tall, 35 N. Village Court, in The Village, fits 6-foot-11-inch tall Darrell Ward.

Size and fit are no problem at Ray's Big and Tall Shop

Tall and big men have many advantages. They always run off with the leading lady, they're welcomed by the Dallas Cowboys and the Houston Rockets, they make good Marshall Dillons and Buck Rogers...we'll all agree that big and tall men are much in demand.

But there is a distinct disadvantage to being king sized, as Darrell Ward points out. Where do king-sizes go to get clothes? Needed are shirts with long tails, slacks with super long inseams and a selection of sportswear that is cut full to fit.

Darrel Ward is most appreciative of Ray's Big and Tall Shop, where size and fit is no problem.

Ray's Big and Tall is the only shop in Midland that caters only to the king-sized man. It had dress and sports shirts in tall sizes from 15½ through 18½ with sleeves up to 36 inches and big cuts shirts from 17½ through 20, also with sleeves up to 36 inches. Slacks and jeans start from 30-inch waist through 60, with super long inseams. Suits and sports coats are carried in extra-long, long and regular through size 60.

Ray's Big and Tall works at an up-to-date stock in all sizes with the latest fashions and sportswear. Come by and visit Ray's Big and Tall ant 35 N. Village, in The Village in Midland.

Boy survives after being swept into sewer

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A 10-year-old boy, swept into a flooded storm sewer and carried two blocks underground, reached the surface of a nearby lake naked but alive, authorities say.

Patrick Taylor was in fair condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Taylor was sucked into a manhole by a swirling whirlpool Tuesday afternoon while playing across from Fire Station No. 7, where his father, firefighter Richard W. Taylor, works, according to fire Capt. Robert Stellhorn.

Moorings weighing 100 pounds floated off the manhole and others in the city as heavy thunderstorms brought two inches of rain and flash flooding.

Stellhorn said the child was dragged at least two blocks underground before surfacing in a lake at St. Francis College.

The rushing water tore the boy's clothes off, and when he surfaced, his body was covered with cuts and bruises. But the boy was conscious and able to drag himself to the bank, Stellhorn said.

In what Stellhorn called a "miracle," the child said he was able to hold his head above water at least part of the time he was trapped in the sewer.

Ron Sweet of Arlington, Mass., seen in a time exposure photograph, calls forth 1-million-volt bolts of static electric discharge Wednesday from the Van de Graaff generator at Boston's Museum of Science. Sweet, safe inside a protective Faraday cage, tripped the camera's shutter. Given some long-range forecasts, this may be the only thunder and lightning that New England sees during the July 4th weekend.

Amtrak survives battle

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a frontal attack by the Reagan administration, Amtrak is a survivor of the battle of the budget, but the victory couldn't have come without the help of some staunch Reagan loyalists.

While the administration wanted to cut Amtrak's subsidies next year to $613 million, the House and the Senate recently approved $735 million after strong pressure from congressmen who have trains running through their states.

the budget battle not only demonstrated Amtrak's ability to withstand the attack from the White House, but it also put focus on the pressures and compromises that often shape legislation and decisions on Capitol Hill.

"A great many members of Congress had Amtrak trains running through their states," said one House transportation subcommittee staffer interviewed this week. "And I don't think many of the members wanted to be blamed for the trains no longer running."

The dilemma clearly left some senators, such as Alabama Republican Jeremiah Denton, in a quandary. Denton, a fiscal conservative and loyal supporter of Reagan's budget cuts, also faced stacks of letters from constituents fearing their train, the "Southern Crescent," might be scrapped.

"He wanted to support the president but also support a passenger railroad system," explained Donald Ubben, an assistant to Denton.

Other senators faced the same problem of trying, as one Senate aide said, "to serve two masters."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Commerce Committee, which handles Amtrak legislation, made clear his determination to support Reagan's budget cuts. But he also wanted Amtrak's Seattle-Los Angeles "Coast Starlight" and the Seattle-Salt Lake City "Pioneer" to survive.

Conservative Republicans, including such vocal supporters of Reagan's budget as Sens. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Dan Quayle of Indiana and David Durenberger of Minnesota, also wrote Packwood urging him to find additional money for Amtrak. They, too, had trains to protect.

Last March, the administration and Amtrak were far apart on how much money to provide, and the Senate clearly seemed to favor Reagan's $613 million figure over the railroad's already reduced $834 million request.

But by mid-June another $122 million had been found in the Senate, matching the House figure, and Amtrak president Alan S. Boyd said that was enough to run 85 percent of the railroad's national system.

The additional $122 million was found through a complicated shuffling of figures within the Reagan administration's proposed ceiling for all transportation funds, making the Senate subsidy the same as the amount already moving toward approval in the House.

How did Amtrak escapd the most severe budget slashes in memory?

First came the letters, thousands of them from constituents from such places as Altoona, Pa., Whitefish, Mont., Albuquerque, N.M., and Thief River Falls, Mont. State legislators, business leaders and governors also made their views know to congressional delegations.

Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., faced hundreds of letters expressing concern in Nebraska about the possible demise of the Chicago-San Francisco "Zephyr," including a petition of 8,000 signatures gathered by an Omaha disc jockey — a figure more surprising since the "Zephyr" stops in Omaha in the middle of the night.

In Montana, both the Whitefish and Kalispell chambers of commerce send Democratic Rep. Pat Williams petitions containing 3,000 names in support of the "Empire Builder," which runs through the two communities. A Montana ski resort asked 4,500 patrons to write their congressmen.

But many of the letters expressed sentiment similar to that of a woman from Thief River Falls, Minn., who said eliminating trains like the "Empire Builder" would mean losing "one of the few ways left for people to travel cheaply and very comfortably throughout the U.S."

With the $735 million in subsidies, Amtrak executives says a national rail system would be maintained, although two marginal Washington-Chicago and Washington-Cincinnati trains would be eliminated and a Chicago-Texas train would be curtailed. Personnel cuts already have been announced and some additional route reductions also may be necessary.

Church ends synod

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The United States should work to ban nuclear weapons, even if it has to start by unilaterally disarming, the 13th General Synod of the 1.8 million-member United Church of Christ says.

The synod also reaffirmed the church's liberal outlook on such issues as abortion and federal spending before adjourning Wednesday.

The 705 voting delegates — among 2,000 people attending from around the world — decided Wednesday to make "peace" and "family life" top priorities of church activity during the next four years.

"We need to cry out for peace and stay on the peace case," said the Rev. Avery Post, who was re-elected to a second term as president of the church.

Some delegates opposed abortion, but their motions for the church to go on record favoring family planning and adoption were rejected.

Scientists probing fish kill

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Marine scientists puzzled by a tide of dead adult redfish washing ashore on Gulf Coast beaches are planning a series of tests in an effort to determine what is killing the fish.

"It's just redfish — that's the strange thing," Dr. Pat Parker of the University of Texas Marine Science Institute said Wednesday after officials found remains of the kill along a 140-mile stretch of the coast between Port Mansfield and Brownsville.

Parker said samples of the dead fish have been sent to laboratories at Texas A&M where tests will be conducted to see if scientists can determine how the fish died.

Officials said they did not know when the tests might be completed on the fish that is caught and sold commercially and also is popular with sports fishermen.

Parker said he flew over beaches between Port Aransas and Brownsville Wednesday, and that "there was a dead redfish about every 300 feet."

Tom Hefferman, director of the Coastal Fisheries Division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said he counted more than 1,100 of the dead fish to the north between Port Aransas and Port Mansfield.

That area includes the Padre Island National Seashore.

Hefferman most of the fish spotted along the beach weighed from 30 to 40 pounds and were as much as 4 feet long, adding that experts are puzzled because the kill seems to be affecting only adult redfish.

Officials said they have tentatively ruled out a "red tide" effect because no other fish are involved, and a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said there were no indications that any toxic spills had occurred in the area during the past three weeks.

Scott and Joan Holt, a husband and wife research team at the Marine Science Institute, also were planning to net live redfish and study water conditions to see if it could be learned how the fish were being killed.

Mrs. Holt said another puzzling aspect of the kill is the fact that the fish are in fairly shallow water, where they generally come only in the fall to spawn.

Now the revolutionary Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account® offers tax-free income too!

The Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account, a truly unique financial service, now offers a tax-exempt money trust in addition to all its many other attractive features. This important new service gives the Cash Management Account a new dimension that will appeal to investors seeking tax-free income.

The CMA™ Tax-Exempt Trust gives you the benefit of professional management of a diversified portfolio of tax-free high-quality short-term municipal securities with the aim of providing maximum stability and liquidity and preservation of your capital. And, there's a constant net asset value of $1 per share.

With the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account service you can write checks as you need. And you get this special advantage: your cash continues to earn tax-free* income, compounded daily, until the checks actually clear. Merrill Lynch is not a bank. Your checks are cleared through Bank One of Columbus, N.A. You never have minimum-balance problems. And your money is kept working full time until the last possible minute.

"Idle" funds are invested automatically. The proceeds of any security sale will automatically be invested in your CMA™ Tax-Exempt Trust on settlement date. Credits of $1,000 or more will automatically be invested in shares of your CMA Tax-Exempt Trust the following business day. Credits of under $1,000 will automatically be invested the first business day of the following week. So, even if you forget, we don't. Your money is kept working—tax-free—full time!

There is also a CMA Money Trust, which invests for higher, taxable yields. You always have the option of switching from one trust to the other, or to use both at the same time.

Instant loan availability. Suppose there's no cash invested in your Tax-Exempt Trust but you have securities in your CMA account. Then, you can continue to write checks up to the loan value of your securities. You have an automatically approved line of credit. You can pay the loan back whenever you wish. There is no time limit and there are no monthly payments. The cash that flows into your account from dividends, interest, sales proceeds, etc., automatically goes to reduce the principal amount of your loan.

Special VISA® card. As part of your CMA account, you are issued a special VISA card by Bank One of Columbus, N.A. It is honored everywhere VISA cards are accepted. In addition, it can be used to obtain instant cash at 80,000 banks worldwide.

Once a month, you get a comprehensive statement listing all security transactions, interest and dividends, check-writing and VISA card activities and a reconciliation of your total account, day by day.

No wonder CMA is attracting attention—and investors—everywhere. You can see that CMA is a truly revolutionary way of managing your money in a productive and efficient way while maintaining immediate access to it at all times. That's why Fortune Magazine devoted most of six pages to it (October 20, 1980 issue) and claimed that "The Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account...may be the most important financial innovation in years." You can use as many or as few of its features as you like. The point is, if you're about to commit funds to short-term tax-free investments, why not do it in a way that will make all these other valuable services available to you?

Write or call now. With the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account service, you get all the advantages of a tax-free money trust, plus so much more. It's a major step forward in financial services and it's exclusively Merrill Lynch's. And now it is available right here to anyone with securities and/or cash totaling $20,000 or more. Why not send for more information now? Just call toll free or mail the coupon.

*A portion of the income may be subject to state and local taxes.

Call toll free, Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Eastern Time, 1-800-221-1840, ext. 783.

The Cash Management Account program is proprietary to Merrill Lynch. U.S. Patents Pending

Mail to: Merrill Lynch, P.O. Box 27448, Philadelphia, PA 19150

I am interested in the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account® service and its new Tax-Exempt Trust feature. Please send me more complete information about your CMA™ Tax-Exempt Trust and the other features of the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account, including a Prospectus containing all sales charges and expenses. I will read the material carefully before I invest or send any money. CMA and the Tax-Exempt Trust are not available in all states.

Matchmaking can mean fun, profits

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Richard H. Oakland runs a sort of municipal dating service, a lonely hearts club for cities that want "sisters."

About once a week, as membership director of the non-profit Sister Cities International, he matches U.S. towns and counties with counterparts abroad. The unions can mean economic and cultural profits for both parties.

"It's getting to be so big it's a computer operation to match up everyone," said Oakland.

At any given time, there are about 100 American cities looking for mates abroad. In Columbus last week, Oakland and his cohorts talked to scores of foreign mayors at the 25th Congress of The International Union of Local Authorites.

Some of them, like Cecil Charlton, the mayor of Mandeville, a modest Jamaica town of 40,000, were not bashful about seeking a twin city.

"We're not capable of making machines. We're not capable of making autos. But we're capable of making friends," he said, adding with a smile, "And we're capable of making love."

Charlton and Parnell Charles, Jamaican minister of local government, have just lined up Dade County, Fla., as a "sister" for Kingston, Jamaica's capital, through SCI.

Charles says he's not at all afraid to ask for help for a nation hit until recently with recession and political uncertainty.

"We understand that some American cities have laws prohibiting use of fire trucks beyond two years or so. We're not in such a privileged position to throw away a 2-year-old vehicle," Charles said. He said Jamaica would be happy to "store" them.

The matchmaking session was about the hottest thing at the IULA conference, which otherwise discussed world cities' problems.

SCI, founded in Washington in 1956 at the height of post-Korean war tensions, has registered more than 730 U.S. cities as sisters for more than 950 cities in 77 other countries. About 85 million Americans live in cities in this nation with such arrangements.

Los Angeles and Cleveland are the champion U.S. sister cities. Because of their ethnic diversities, they each have official ties to 12 cities abroad.

There are 148 Japanese cities linked with 155 American cities, and in Mexico, 106 are tied to 136 cities north of the border.

Post-World War II programs for international pairings of cities also have sprung up in Europe, Great Britain, Canada and Japan. The Joint Twinning Center in London and the United Towns Organization of Paris each have paired more than 1,000 cities in the past 20 years. The object: peace and understanding.

Cities adopt each other either by City Hall fiat or through citizens' groups. Cooperation, participants say, can mean millions of dollars of trade or exchange programs involving hundreds of citizens. It can be as big or as small a tie as desired.

"There are things you can say to a friend that you cn't say t a stranger," said Wylie Williams, city manager of Inkster, Mich., who was involved in the program years ago as an official at Charlotte, N.C.

He recalled that a resident of Charlotte's sister city of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, became sick on a trip to North Carolina. Charlotte medical experts diagnosed the illness as sickle-cell anemia, treated the man free of charge and sent a team of doctors to Haiti to set up a sickle-cell screening program.

Reasoning gets lost in rhetoric

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I love being a member of Congress," House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza mused one day. "It beats picking asparagus."

Just how the Texas Democrat didn't say, which goes to show that the reasoning often gets lost in the rhetoric when a congressman is trying to make a point.

Rep. Jim Collins, D-Texas, for instance, gave this reason for why Congress should cut federal funds to public broadcasting:

"If I asked the mayor of New York City what was the most important thing in New York City — was it the sewer, the garbage or public broadcasting — he will tell you that the most significant problem is what to do about the sewer system and mass transit."

Another example:

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, complained recently that the Sequoia, the presidential yacht sold by Jimmy Carter, had returned to Washington and that its present owner intended to make it available to Ronald Reagan.

Gonzalez told the House that the yacht had returned "like Banquo's ghost" in Macbeth.

"I do not begrudge the president perks," Gonzalez said. "I do wonder, though, if he would deign to give a ride, maybe a berth, perchance even a swabbie's job to people who are losing their jobs and their hopes in the budget bloodbath."

Usually written statements placed in the Congresssional Record are more to the point and more calculating than floor statements. But not always.

Pressure drives youngsters to suicide

HONG KONG (AP) — Clutching a Bible, 12-year-old Yung Wai-Kai hurled herself from a 24-story building on June 4.

A month earlier, two other girls — Kwan Wai-Chee, 13, and Fung Sheung-Kun, 14 — bound their hands together with rope and leaped to their deaths from the roof of a 26-story apartment complex. Two Bibles were found nearby.

Police said the two girls had left a suicide note, explaining they had killed themselves because they could no longer cope with pressure from their school and families.

The three were the latest victims of what some social workers and teachers say is mounting pressure from increasingly keen scholastic competition, high parental expectations and changing family patterns.

Venda Scott of the Hong Kong Samaritan Befrienders said the incidence of suicide among youths in Hong Kong is on the rise.

In an interview, she said that among some 11,000 telephone calls for help and advice the organization received last year, 18 percent came from people aged between 10 and 19, compared with 4 percent in the previous year.

"We often received calls from young children who cried for help because they couldn't keep up with their school work, and just as often we received calls from desperate mothers who wanted to know how to make their children work harder," she said.

As schools set higher acadamic standards, she said, parents demand more from their children. "Many Chinese families just can't accept failures (of their children)," Mrs. Scott said.

In addition, she said, Western influence is eroding the traditionally tight-knit Chinese family structure. She said the number of divorces among Chinese couples has increased, sometimes resulting in the neglect of children.

Official statistics showed the number of suicides among youths under 20 jumped 43 percent in that period, from 21 in 1979 to 30 in 1980, and the English-language South China Morning Post reported six students killed themselves between May 1 and June 4.

The Rev. John Collins, a Jesuit priest and teacher-turned-social worker, blamed the deaths mainly on Hong Kong's school system.

Collins said pressure is applied from the day children enter kindergarten, where 5-year-olds often have to undergo weekly tests. He said many teachers believe tests are necessary for kindergarten-age children because many schools impose tough entrance examinations for first graders.

And, Collins added, the academic pressure continues until the children leave school.

A spokesman for the Education Department said no entrance examinations are needed for students entering the government-run and government-aided grade schools, although interviews are required.

But even the interviews can be stressful. One mother, Ellen Mao, told a reporter that her 6-year-old daughter was asked to solve arithmetic problems and read difficult Chinese characters in her interview for grade school.

In Hong Kong, school is compulsory only through the ninth grade. Pupils who fail to reach certain standards for admittance to the government-run and government-aided high schools must either drop out or try their luck in the private schools, which are considerably more expensive but also much less prestigious.

Out of 95,000 ninth graders in Hong Kong last year, only 20,000 were eligible to enter government-run or government-aided senior highs. An education department spokesman said the number of seats in these schools will be significantly increased this fall.

Mrs. Scott said her organization will step up its work among Chinese children this year by sending more representatives to schools to listen to their problems.

She said there was no way to pinpoint the reasons for the increasing numbers of suicides among children, but added: "All we know is that they are under heavy pressure and we are trying our best to see how we can ease their tension."

Where will the MX be based—land, sea or air?

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Where should the planned, multi-billion-dollar MX missile system be based---on land, sea or in the air?

The question is expected to be answered soon by a panel of experts appointed to study the problem by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

"I ordered that no pressures be put on the members of the committee," Weinberger said recently. "We gave them a broad, single issue as a frame of reference. Assuming we need the MX, which I'm convinced we do---where should we put it?"

The expected report of the 12-member panel, headed by Dr. Charles Townes, a professor of physics at the University of California, will undoubtedly underscore major controversies surrounding the siting of the MX system, described by one expert as the "largest and most visible project in the history of the U.S."

THE MX SYSTEM---designed to counter a growing Soviet capability of destroying America's present land-based Minuteman and Titan missile system---so far has been largely discussed also in a land-based context.

Present Reagan Administration plans call for shuttling 200 nuclear-tipped MX missiles among 4,600 concrete shelters, largely in the Utah and Nevada deserts. The missiles' mobility is considered essential in order to minimize their destruction if they are attacked by Soviet missiles.

The cost of the system in this form has been estimated at between $40 and $100 billion. It has also been attacked by environmentalists, who have attracted the support of Utah's powerful Mormon Church and otherwise pro-Reagan politicians like Sens. Paul Laxalt (R.-Nev.) and Jake Garn (R.-Utah).

The Laxalt and Garn statements on the issue, considered made under strong local political pressures, have aroused the ire of Sen. John Tower (R.-Tex.), the chairman of the Senate Armed Services. Tower criticized his colleagues for not waiting for the Townes panel report.

"THE SENATORS offer no clear program for ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile) survivability," Tower said. He disparaged statements by Garn and Laxalt that advocate placing MX missiles in existing, non-mobile silos and which "invoke the hope that space lasers be developed" which will make nuclear weapons obsolete.

A wide and exotic variety of basing systems for the MX system has been discussed by competent authorities, nevertheless.

These include launching MX missiles from conventional and vertical takeoff aircraft, seaplanes, airships, submarines, ocean-going vessels, barges on inland canals, the sea bed, an underwater floating position, satellites in orbit, trucks and railroads.

"The search for survivable ICBM basing concepts...started in the mid-1960s when technology pointed to the eventual vulnerability of fixed targets," the Defense Department says.

IN ALL, 30 MX basing concepts have been advanced, with detailed listings of their advantages and disadvantages. The congressional "Office of Technical Assessment," however, has condensed this list to what it perceives to be five feasible alternatives.

(1) The currently planned system, which envisages the construction of "multiple protective shelters," about 9,000 miles of roads, the acquisition of major new water sources and other huge engineering projects. Advocates of this system mode say the project will vastly stimulate business and other growth in the development areas.

(2) A less-mobile system which would rely for its protection on a still-undeveloped anti-ballistic missile (ABM) system.

(3) The placing of MX missiles in existing Minuteman silos under a system that would provide for immediate "launch-under-attack" as a form of protection.

(4) Basing the MX on "relatively small" submarines.

(5) Air-mobile basing, in which MX missiles would be dropped from wide-bodies aircraft and launched while falling.

THE FIRST SYSTEM, the O.T.A. said, has the advantage of being compatible with the existing structure of U.S. forces, but might prove inadequate if the Soviet Union substantially increased its own missile capability.

But, the O.T.A. added, it would have "severe impacts" on the areas in question and "thousands of square miles of rangeland" could become "permanently unproductive."

Relying on a future ABM system would reduce costs and environmental impact, the O.T.A. said. But this would require U.S. amendment of or withdrawal from the existing ABM treaty with the Soviet Union reached under Salt I, and the possibility that the U.S. would have to cope with a future Soviet ABM system.

The use of existing Minutemenan silos would be the "cheapest" MX system, the O.T.A. observed. But it might necessitate semi-instant launch of the system based in information from "remote sensors." A failure of the system could lead to a Soviet first strike or an accidental nuclear war, the O.T.A. said.

THE "SMALL SUBMARINE" concept would probably be the "most survivable," the office said. But deployment of such a system could not begin before 1990, it was added, which is "several years" beyond other options.

The "wide-bodied aircraft" launch system woould be "highly survivable," it was determined. But the system would share a "common failure mode" with U.S. strategic bombers, it was noted, and would be vulnerable to a massive Soviet strike against U.S. airfields.

The O.T.A. did not recommend a specific MX basing system.

Sen. Mark Hatfield (R.-Ore.), however, expressed an infrequently-heard view of the current Reagan Administration concept, i.e. the mobile mode in the Utah and Nevada deserts.

"Such an enormous system would constitute an overwhelming first-strike threat against the Soviet nuclear arsenal," he said. "It would prssure the Russians into launching their missiles first in time of crisis."

Yachtsman to sail with aging wine

By NICOLE MARTICHE
Agence France-Presse

MARSEILLES, France — An amateur yachtsman is building a three-masted sailing ship for unusual around-the-world voyages — made solely to mature wine. The ship will in fact be a floating wine cellar.

The 135-foot long ship will make two trips annually, carrying 300 barrels of wine in the hold on each trip.

It will be named "Bandol" after the wine-growing region near here.

The Bandol will make its maiden voyage next year, sailing through the Mediterranean, Suez Canal, Indian Ocean, and across the Pacific to San Francisco, where it will sell its wine.

The idea is to take advantage of a custom started in the 17th century, when wine growers discovered that wine matured much faster on a sailing ship at sea than in a cellar on land.

Christian Ries, an amateur yachtsman and wine expert, noticed on a recent trip to the West Indies that the wine he took with him had matured much faster and better than normal.

Bank gives premium to new branch

By WILLIAM SEXTON
Newsday

PEKING — American banks frequently give premiums when they open a new branch, and Chase Manhattan is no exception.

Bank chairman Willard C. Butcher launched his new Peking representative office last week by treating 535 Chinese and American quests to dinner and a concert by China's most famous symphony orchestra, The Central Philharmonic.

The Chase Manhattan bash, probably the most sumptuous, the most ornate since American business returned to China after nearly three decades of exile, signaled the bank's firm intention to become the No. 1 financial institution here as trade develops. Two other banks, First Chicago and Bank of New York, are in the race.

China seemed to send equally enthusiastic signals on U.S. trade by inviting Butcher and his delegation of bank officers to private conferences with Senior Vice Chairman Li Xiannian, who ranks immediately after Deng Xiaoping in the national leadership, and Vice Premier Bo Yibo, who oversees foreign trade. The unusual talks between top Chinese officials and one of America's premier capitalists, were front page news in Saturday's issues of People's Daily, the national organ of the Communist Party.

Doctor aiming for Brady's release from hospital by end of summer

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — White House press secretary James S. Brady is making what his pleased doctors call "extraordinary progress" toward an "essentially normal" life, despite the bullet that irretrievably destroyed more than a fifth of his brain.

"We are very optimistic," his George Washington University surgeon, Dr. Arthur Kobrine, said Tuesday, in an almost entirely rosy assessment of Brady's condition three months after he was shot March 30 by the gunman who wounded President Reagan.

"We plan if all goes well" to let Brady go "on an outing," a few hours' auto ride within the next few days, Kobrine said, then start "sending him home for some weekends" sometime this month. The aim is to release Brady from the hospital by the end of the summer, the surgeon reported.

Brady remains a severely wounded man "still in the relatively early post-injury phase" of neurological recovery — a kind of recovery that typically takes a full year — Kobrine emphasized in an interview.

"We're still not out of the woods," he added. The brain tissue contaminated by bullet fragments could still harbor silent focuses of infection that could break out anytime. "Once we make it six or eight months down the pike, I'll feel a lot easier," he said.

A neurosurgeon accustomed to seeing brain-injured patients make slow, bit-by-bit recoveries described the improvements he has been seeing in Brady as "dramatic."

His physical condition — his ability to move and walk — remains more seriously affected than his mental condition, Kobrine said. Mentally, "I think he gets more and more like the old Jim Brady every day."

Brady's left arm and hand and his left ankle and toes remain affected — his main injury was in the right side of the brain, which controls the left side of the body. He cannot use his left hand but he can move his left leg forward and back. He has two-hour sessions of physical therapy twice a day, walking and practicing standing and balancing between parallel bars.

"He still can't walk without the support of the bars," Kobrine said. "But I have little doubt now that ultimately he will be walking with a cane, maybe with a little brace on for a while. He will certainly walk enough to function normally, probably with a little limp."

Kobrine said, "His intellect, his intelligence and memory and wit and humor and personality are pretty darned close to normal, and he continues improving. I'd say he's normal the overwhelming portion of the time. Sometimes he gets pretty tired and doesn't do quite as well, but that's to be expected at this point."

As to facial movement, "it's essentially normal," and "his speech is fine, absolutely normal." Normally loquacious, Brady until recently was abnormally brief, the surgeon said, "but that's changig every day, and conversationally he's improved dramatically in the last three weeks. Before, he answered appropriately but didn't initiate much. Now he will sit and kid around for quite a while."

Credit card high-rollers jailed

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Three men and two women who lived lavishly in a rent house for nearly three months were held in custody in the Fort Bend County Jail today accused of financing their expensive tastes with 50 stolen credit cards.

Detectives said they were so reckless with their credit card purchases that they never washed their clothes — they simply put on brand new garments whenever the ones they were wearing got dirty.

Sheriff's Detective Jackie Wilke said Wednesday the five defendants in jail could be part of a much larger ring of credit card thieves reaching from California to Alabama.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," she said. She theorized the suspects bought the credit cards from someone who stole them from a post office in Los Angeles.

Doctor rescued from Mexican hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Anthony Wheeler says his experience should serve as a lesson to other American tourists in Mexico — even poor medical care may not be available at some vacation spots.

Wheeler knows. He has massive chest injuries, four broken ribs, a mangled left arm and an assortment of lesser wounds from a motorcycle accident in Cozumel, Mexico. The hospital he was taken to had virtually nothing needed to diagnose and treat his multiple injuries.

"I'm just lucky to be alive," the 30-year-old neurologist said from his intensive care bed at The Methodist Hospital.

Wheeler says he owes his life to three vacationing Baylor College of Medicine residents who heard a rumor that he had been badly hurt and came to his rescue about five hours after the wreck.

The trio — Drs. Ken Gibbs, Tom Marinelli and Emelio Torres — arranged for Wheeler to be flown out of the country Friday aboard Hermann Hospital's Life Flight Lear jet.

Wheeler and his wife, Joyce, 29, were in the second day of their long-planned "first real vacation" Thursday when the motorcycle they were riding blew a tire, throwing both of them over the handlebars.

Mrs. Wheeler, an attorney, was only slightly injured, but Wheeler was badly hurt.

Three Americans picked them up a few minutes after the wreck.

"They took us to one hospital, about 20 minutes away — Tony was bleeding a lot — but no one spoke English," Mrs. Wheeler said. "Finally, I talked to one man in French and he told us where to go."

Wheeler needed X-rays, intravenous solution, blood, drugs and surgery. None of these services could be provided at the hospital to which they were sent — although it had one X-ray machine, there was no technician to run it.

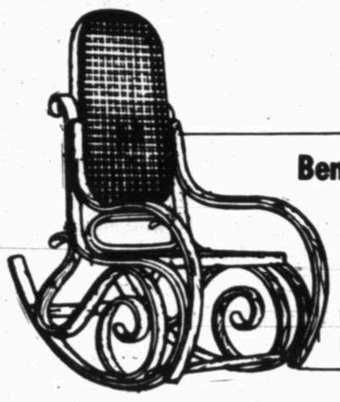

"One of the most incredible parts of the horror story," Wheeler noted, "was that no one ever tried to clean me up. There were flies and mosquitoes everywhere and I can remember trying to brush the bugs out of my wounds."

The three Baylor residents knew Wheeler had lost a lot of blood.

They eventually persuaded Mexican doctors to let them treat Wheeler as best they could. They devised a makeshift intravenous tube and inserted a "too-small" needle into his chest in an attempt to treat a collapsed lung.

Eventually, one of them reached one of Wheeler's friends in Houston who arranged for the Lear jet flight.

Permian Basin counties activities filed

The Permian Basin Counties of West Texas and New Mexico have announced several projects and completions.

STERLING COUNTY

Durham Inc. of Midland has scheduled a 9,600-foot wildcat in Sterling County, 13 miles northwest of Steling City.

Designated the No. 1 Stewart, location is 467 feet from the north line and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 8, block 30 of the W&NW RR survey.

Drillsite is 3,000 feet northeast of Col-Tex Reed, abandoned April 3, 1943 at 9,587 feet.

PECOS COUNTY

A. G. Hill of Dallas will drill a 6,000-foot field test in the AGH Cherry Canyon field of Pecos County, 7.5 miles northeast of Coyanosa.

Location is 660 feet from the north line and 2,000 feet from the west line in section 46, block 8 H&GN Co. survey. The site is 1,700 feet southeast of this loccation is another active wildcat. It is the No. 1 Trees State "46".

MENARD COUNTY

Morrow Resources Inc. of Odessa has completed the No. 2 Callan (formerly John & Judith Callan), as a Palo Pinto lime gas discovery, one location north of the two-well Callan (Cisco oil) field of Menard county and seven miles northeast of Menard.

Finaled for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,008,000 cubic feet of gas daily, production was through perforations at 1,620 to 1,640 feet which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons.

Drilled to 1,780 feet, 4 1/2 inch casing was set at 1,775 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from the south line and 660 feet from the east line of section 6 of the Cornelia L. Decker survey.

IRION COUNTY

Simpson-Mann Oil Producers of San Angelo will drill the No. 1-A Reva McMillan, a 6,800-foot wildcat in Irion County, four miles southeast of Mertzon.

Location is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 28 of the GC&SF survey. Ground elevation is 2,398 feet.

NOLAN COUNTY

Strobe Exploration Inc. of Abilene completed as a Canyon sand re-opener of the depleted Maryneal (Ellenburger, Cisco sand, Canyon sand and 5500 Canyon) field its No. 1 Brooks, 6 1/2 miles west of Nolan.

Potentialed to flow 182 barrels of 42 gravity oil plus 114 barrels of water, through perforations at 5,495 to 5,520 feet which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons and fractured with 54,600 gallons and 75,000 pounds of sand.

Drilled to 5,825 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,825 feet, it is plugged back to 5,782 feet.

Location is 660 feet from the north line and 1,860 feet from the east line of section 70, block X of the T&P survey.

SCURRY COUNTY

Westland Oil Development Corp. of Houston will drill the No. 1 Dan Whatley, an 8,400-foot wildcat in Scurry County, 1 1/2 miles southeast of Fluvanna.

Location is 660 feet from the north line and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 428, block 97 of the H&TC survey.

The site is one location south of production in the Fluvanna, south, (Strawn) field.

LUBBOCK COUNTY

Hunt Energy Corp. of Dallas has completed the No. 1 Ercell Givens as a Lubbock County Abo oil discovery, 3.6 miles northwest of New Deal.

Potentialed to pump 27 barrels of 27 gravity oil plus 130 barrels of water, production was gained through perforations at 6,105 to 6,146 feet which had been acidized with 4,000.

Drlled to 6,500 feet, 5 1/2 inch casing was set at that depth.

Location is 1,980 feet from the south and west lines of section 6, block D of the L&SV survey.

CHAVES COUNTY

Phillips Petroleum Co. of Odessa will drill the No. 1-26 New Mexico State, a 5,500-foot wildcat in Chaves County, 11 miles southwest of Roswell.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 26-township 12 south, range 23 east.

EDDY COUNTY

Bliss Petroleum Inc. will drill the No. 1 Federal "DB", a 1,915-foot Seven Rivers wildcat in the Dublin Ranch (Morrow, Atokam and Strawn gas) field of Eddy County, 19 miles southwest of Loco Hills.

Location is 2,310 feet from the south line an 330 feet from the west line of section 22, township 20 south, range 29 east. Ground elevation is 3,274 feet.

Hoaxer arrested at mental clinic

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — An ex-roustabout wanted for posing as an oil executive and announcing a fake rig disaster in Morgan City was arrested Wednesday, authorities said.

"We're booking him now," said Lafeytte Parish sheriff's deputy Leopold Lege.

Barry Allen Richardson, 28, turned himself in at Acadiana Mental Health Center in Lafayette for mental treatment, deputies said.

His mother, Mrs. Allen T. Richardson of Monroe Tuesday described her son as a former psychiatric patient in need of medical help.

"He's sick and I hope he gets the help he needs," she said.

Richardson is accused of being the man who, calling himself Allen Richardson of Shell Oil Co., set up a bogus "disaster center" at a Morgan City hotel and called authorities and news media to announce a major rig accident.

He also had local firms place helicopters, boats and trucks on standby to assist in the disaster before skipping town without paying any bills.

Attorney represents Delta, department

By The Associated Press

Arkansas Gov. Frank White has ordered an investigation into an alleged conflict of interest involving a Little Rock attorney who worked for the state Department of Pollution Control and Ecology and Delta Specialty Co. of Houston.

White said in a prepared statement Wednesday that Jarrell Southall's job as director of the department hinges on the outcome of reports he ordered the state Pollution Control and Ecology Commission and Bob Harrelson of his office to prepare.

The 'onflict of interest allegations involve Charles R. Nestru Little Rock and the hazardous waste landfill that Delta Specialty wants to build near Emmet in Hempstead County.

The Hope Star reported Wedjesday that Nestrud had been the contract attorney for the mining division of the pollution control agency since the summer of 1978 and took on Delta as a client earlier this year.

Nestrud, whose contract with the state expired Tuesday, said he did not think his position was a conflict of interest. Southall said he wasn't sure that the conflict of interest allegation was justified.

"I think it's a point one could challenge on appearance," Southall said. "We recognize that, and that's why we've been trying to build up an in-house group of attorneys to avoid the potential of a conflict."

Big coal reunion planned for the 4th

BARBOURSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Arella Muncey is planning a big bash for the Fourth of July weekend. She's invited folks from Maine to California, and, while she hasn't met all of them, they do have something in common.

They're all from Sharples, a West Virginia coal camp that is now only a shadow of its former self.

"This started out as a high school reunion, but it's turned into a community reunion because so many people heard about it and wanted to come," Mrs. Muncey says. "I've sent out well over 300 invitations. And I've gotten m8re th0 replies."

So, on the evening of July 3, residents and former residents of the small Logan County community and several surrounding towns will congregate at a Barboursville motel. And for the next 24 hours they'll relive the days they spent together in the tiny coal camp midway between Madison and Logan.

"We've got people coming all the way from California and Texas," said Mrs. Muncey, who attended Sharples High School in the early 1940s. "I've been working on this reunion for more than a year now."

She said most of the people who'll be attending the reunion no longer live at Sharples.

"No, the people have scattered everywhere. Sharples isn't much anymore, but it used to be a great community."

Mrs. Muncey has regaled her friends and family with stories about growing up in Sharples. She recalls vividly the weekly dances and movies at the community center, about the friendliness and warmth that existed in the tightly knit community.

Omah Mae Ziler also has warm memories of Sharples. The St. Albans resident, who taught at the high school for nine years, has prepared a history of the school.

"It was created in 1922 by an act of the Legislature, but it wasn't until 1924 that they got around to building a building," she said. "The first graduating class had seven members."

She said she had talked recently with one of the early graduates.

"There weren't many roads in that area back then, and she told me how some of the kids rode the train that ran down the Coal River from St. Albans to Sovereign. They'd get out of school earlier than anybody else because they had to catch the train back at one o+clock.' Mrs. Ziler taught at the high school for seven years and was principal during her last two years.

"I especially remember the war years. By then we had 300 students in the school, but so many of the boys had gone off to the war we didn't have enough for a football team."

Like Mrs. Muncey and the others, Mrs. Ziler said she is looking forward to getting together with her old friends and pupils.

"Yes, indeed," she said. "Much of Sharples has been torn down since those days, but you've almost had to have lived in a coal camp to understand what a great time we had."

Mexico emerging as oil producer

By MIKE LAYTON
Hearst Feature Service

CUERNAVACA, Mexico — At a new office building being constructed along the busy Avenida Plan de Ayalla, a worker packs wet concrete into a 10-foot-high form with a pneumatic tamping machine.

But when the next batch of cement is mixed, on the floor with a shovel, another worker scoops it into a five-gallon can, hoists it onto his shoulder and climbs a ladder to the top of the form and dumps it in.

The sight epitomizes the Mexico of 1981.

New ways, new technologies have come to Mexico. But the old ways still prevail; raw manpower provides most of the energy going into the nation's constant new construction.

Mexico never was the land of dusty little villages, peons sleeping off a tequila jag in the shade, that so many Americans picture in their minds. Its people work very hard.

Now an oil boom has combined with that human energy to make Mexico a nation to be reckoned with by the United States and everyone else. It is emerging as a leader, economically and potentially politically, in the Third World.

Mexico's economic growth rate is about 8 percent (compared to the United States' current 1.5 percent). Unfortunately, its population is growing almost as fast.

Modernization does not necessarily mean that Mexico is any less attractive to a visitor than it was decades ago. Poverty may be colorful but it is as demeaning to the viewer as to the person trapped in it.

Downtown Mexico City has been cleaned up and it is far more beautiful now than when it was covered with grime. The Palace of Fine Arts has been scrubbed till it shines and the nearby marble monument to the great Juarez gleams in the sunshine like a polished pearl.

That's in downtown Mexico City, however. Here in Cuernavaca, "the land of eternal springtime," potentially one of the most beautiful cities in the world, a magnificent gorge bisects the city.

Mexicans, a private people who build lavish homes and then hide them behind ugly stone walls and locked iron gates, take their garbage to the gorge and throw it in. The sight is sickening but a local newspaper is campaigning to make Cuernavacans sensitive to the litter problem and city officials in the beautiful city hall are hoping that prosperity will pave the way to civic pride.

Mexico, which fought a revolution as violent as any in the world, has been stable now for 50 years. Its quasi-socialist government — public ownership of transportation, steel, communications, much of the banking, 14 percent of the economy — leaves room for private aspirations.

A middle class is growing, enticed into being partly by consumerism of the sort that tantalizes insecure Americans: men's perfume, rotgut in fancy bottles, clothing with someone else's name on it and anything that makes noise.

Super mercados are replacing the old system of market stalls where the farmer sells his produce, but only for the affluent. One suspects government encouragement of the trend; the housewife pays no tax on the meat or vegetables she buys in the colorful if somewhat noisome public markets, but in the super mercados a stiff impuesto is added to the sales price.

Mexico is paying other prices for its prosperity.

One familiar to Americans is smog. The air over Mexico City, nestled in the Valley of Mexico, has always been dirty, probably dating back to Aztec temple fires. But now, with vast numbers of automobiles, you nearly choke walking down the street.

During the rainy season — summer — which got underway in earnest with vicious but short-lived tropical showers, the air is cleared almost every day.

Nevertheless, Mexicans told me, emphysema is becoming a national problem and they worry about the lungs of their children. That's one reason many wealthy Mexicans maintain weekend homes here in Cuernavaca, 50 miles from the capital. But the smog is apparent even here.

Mexico's bus system, once one of the best in the world, shows signs of neglect. The reason? More affluent members of the Mexican society are buying cars and leaving buses to the poor who are not so demanding.

Travel is still incredibly cheap. But even the first class Estrella dode Oro buses, a decade ago as good a travel bargain as any anywhere, are shabby now; their windows cracked, seat covers torn and ragged, the air conditioning inoperable. They're still clean and safe, however, and you can enjoy the scenery in slightly scruffy comfort on the toll freeway from Mexico City to Cuernavaca for a little over a dollar.

At certain times, here in Cuernavaca, you can literally stroll along the street faster than a car or bus can move as Mexicans express their oil independence in nightly drives.

This is the Mexico represented by President Jose Lopez Portillo. Always proud, Mexico now is showing evidence of a growing self-confidence.

Millions of its people have no jobs or they work at trivial and low-paying tasks, however, and the money that workers in the United States, legal or illegal, send home is an important part of the national economy. Americans worry about the balance of trade with foreigners, but Mexico, in spite of its new prosperity, is in hock to the U.S. to an even greater proportion of the national wealth because of money it spends on American imports.

Lopez Portillo's six-year term ends this year and he would like to finish it with some kind of solution to the emigration problem although Mexican officialdom is ambivalent on the question since employment in the United States, hazardous as it is for many Mexicans, helps to relieve the jobless crush.

Whether the Mexican president also expressed his doubts to Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig about their fears of communist penetration of Central America was a question Mexicans were asking themselves. Most Mexicans are skeptical of the Red scare and they believe their president is also.

Travel glamorous, but wearying

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Some air lines offer benefits to frequent travelers — unlisted reservation numbers, that sort of tidbit. These are deserved. Frequent travelers, these days, get few breaks.

The few they get are often short-lived. Have you tried to find a road map at a filling station lately? You're lucky to find an attendant at a filling station. Both have become as rare as the snail darter.

Or take wash-and-wear shirts. These were once a blessing. Rinse one in the motel sink and hang it over the tub on a wooden coat hanger. That small convenience has long since ended.

It ended when they took the hooks off the coathangers.

If this is a conspiracy, it is, in turn, the dream of every frequent traveler that someone will discover a use for a hookless coathanger and they will all be stolen.

It seems glamorous, doesn't it, spending half your time on the road, traveling to America's less-traveled places, meeting the people, discovering their regional folkways and customs, all expenses paid. And glamorous it certainly is, but wearying.

That was my assignment the past five years, as a reporter. I have no regrets. It is given to few Americans to see their country that close up. The view is rich, the discomforts rewarded.

If you should choose such a life, though, be forewarned: the travail of the traveler doesn't end with uncharted by-ways and hookless coathangers. (Not to mention one-handled showers; what was wrong with "hot" on the left and "cold" on the right?)

The travail of the traveler continues all along the Interstate Highway system and off it, north and south, east and west.

Now there is a blessing, the Interstate Highway system. (At least, it is widely considered to be.) But north and south? East $nd west? Cast your gaze on those green signs and try to divine which is which.

You get off at your appointed exit and want to go, say, north. The exit ramp divides. You must choose. Quickly.

Are you allowed to choose between north and south? Nothing so logical. You must choose between Wakefield and Newton. Or Fairlawn and Eagle Butte. You, a stranger, have no idea which is north and which is south, only that neither is the town you're bound for.

You long to pull over and consult a map. There is no place to pull over. You have no map.

Strangers seem to be the last considered when signs are put up.

Have you ever noticed how signs to the airport always seem to run out before they get there? Or else change the rules at the last minute? You follow arrows that say airport...airport...airport, and then, suddenly, Appleton Field the airport or is it where the Little League plays? Only the local folks know.

If all of this sounds petty it is because, really, the frequent traveler doesn't ask for much.

Let him get through the airport frisker without removing his watch, belt buckle and class ring, let him find the promised rent-a-car actually there, get him in a motel with a dial-out phone and a working ice machine, and you will see a satisfied man.

When all these things happen on the same trip, travel is a joy. A rare joy. Like hitting the lottery.

It is this possibility that keeps the traveler on the road.

Ask any credit-card hobo (easily spotted in airports: the oneith carry-on luggage) wh thinks of traveling. He will tell you there is only one thing worse. Not traveling.

Sheila Holzworth, a blind member of Project Pelion set on reaching the summit of Mount Rainier on July 4, gets a goodbye kiss from her mother, Martha. The team of 11 handicapped climbers trudged to Camp Muir at 10,000-foot level of Rainier Wednesday and hoped to reach the 14,410-foot summit sometime Saturday.

Disabled climbers inch way up Mount Rainier

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — Eleven disabled climbers, seven of them blind, sang and joked as they and their guides inched up 14,410-foot Mount Rainier in a conquest they hope will show the handicapped can surmount any obstacle.

The party, led by Jim Whittaker — the renowned mountaineer who was the first American to scale Mount Everest — reached Camp Muir at 10,000 feet Wednesday night. The camp, served as the base for rescuers searching for the 11 climbers who were buried under tons of ice and snow that fell from a glacier on the mountain June 21.

The 20-member party began its assault on the summit shortly before noon Wednesday amid near-perfect climbing conditions.

In addition to the seven blind climbers, two are deaf, one has epilepsy and another is a Vietnam veteran with an artificial leg. Each is accompanied by a guide.

Leaders of the expedition, nicknamed Project Pelion after the Greek mountain said to be the gi$nts' stepping stone to heaven, said the group may try to reach the summit by Friday and return Saturday, the Fourth of July.

Phil Bartow, leader of Project Pelion and president of the Pennsylvania-based Institute of Outdoor Awareness, said the goal of the climb is not only to reach the summit, but to destroy the image many people have about the limitations of the handicapped.

The expedition is one of the projects being recognized nationally by the White House to mark the International Year of Disabled Persons.

Svein Gilje, a reporter for the Seattle Times who is accompanying the party, is sending back reports of the expedition via radio. He described the climbers' mood during the first day of the ascent as jovial and enthusiastic.

"They forget how tired they are, and they breathe deeply when they sing," he said. "It's good for them."

As the climb began, Paul Stefurak, 35, a deaf climber from Federal Way, Wash., who has trouble speaking, grabbed a pen and wrote in a reporter's notebook: "I can hardly wait to reach the summit. I want to go now. I feel so great and ready to climb. Apparently all of us feel that way, too."

"Let's go for it!" shouted Sheila Holzworth, a 19-year-old blind woman from Des Moines, Iowa.

During a break for candy and water, blind climber Raymond Keith, 41, of Arlington, Va., left one of his ski poles behind. When reminded of it, he quipped, "Out of sight, out of mind."

All members of Project Pelion have learned sign language, so they can communicate with the two deaf and mute members of the team.

The group spent last week in Colorado working on climbing techniques and altitude adjustment. They climbed up on Nisqually Glacier on Mount Rainier Monday, stayed overnight in tents and then practiced techniques Tuesday under the watchful eyes of Whittaker, his brother, Lou, and their guides.

They practiced ice climbing, rope work and a suspended traverse, in which they hooked a climbing harness onto a rope stretched over a deep gully and were pulled across by their guides.

After the day-long session in a cold rain, wind, and visibility that ranged from 10 to 100 yards, the party was briefed on what to expect on top of the mountain.

Dr. Judith Oehler, 34, a blind diabetic from Hingham, Mass., at first quit the party because her blood sugar level was high but later decided to make the ascent after all. Whittaker said he will decide during the climb whether she is fit to continue to the summit.

No criminal charges filed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The district attorney says no criminal charges will be filed against Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green over a cash gift of $4,775 Green admitted he accepted from a paving contractor.

Riley said there is no evidence Green made any promises in exchange for the gift and said "no criminal offense appears to have been committed ... and no criminal charges appear to be appropriate."

Green declined comment Thursday.

Murder charges filed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Texas man has been charged with murder in the beating death of a New Orleans man that resulted from an argument over money after a homosexual encounter, police said.

Robert W. Byrd, 22, of Boerne, Texas, was arrested Wednesday in the slaying of Emmett Gereighty II, 34. Detectives said a maid found his body, clad in socks and undershorts, at his home near the city's affluent lakefront area on Tuesday.

New Orleans police spotted Byrd riding in Gereighty's stolen 1981 Cadillac shortly after midnight, said Detective Marvin Cook.

"Mr. Byrd was reported to have been engaged in a homosexual act with the victim," Cook said. "After a discussion of money, a fight ensued, resulting in the death of Mr. Gereighty."

Police said Gereighty's home had been ransacked.

With Byrd in the car was Joseph Flawn, 23, of Chicago, police said. Both Byrd and Flawn were charged with possession of a stolen vehicle.

Cash ignored by killers

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Three gunmen who shot down three men gangland-style at a local bar bypassed "several thousands dollars carried by the victims, according to a homicide detective.

Lt. I.L. Alardin said Wednesday that investigators had ruled out robbery as a motive for the triple slaying because no effort was made by the gunmen to take "several thousands" of dollars found on the three dead men.

However, Alardin would not elaborate on police theories about the motive for the killings.

Witnesses told police that three armed men walked into Jeanie's Bar late Tuesday night and fired at least 13 shots, killing Daniel Fuentes Martinez, 50, Olivido Ortiz, 44, and Ramiro Ortiz, 36.

Alardin would not say whether Laredo police suspect the killings were narcotics-related, but in response to a question he said that the federal Drug Enforcement Agency had been consulted. "That angle has been covered," he said.

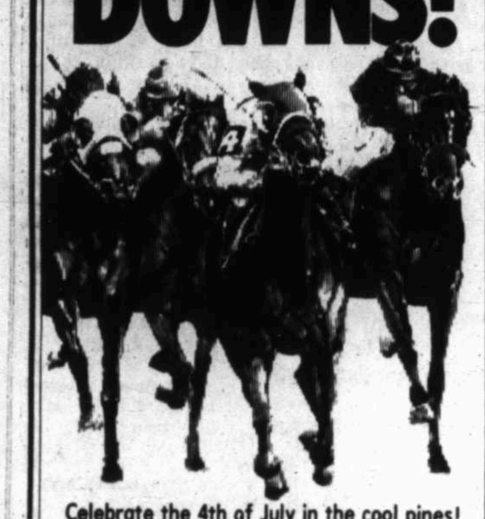

"We've been in contact with several cities for background information," he added.

Martinez and Ovido Ortiz were identified as living in Corpus Christi, and although Ramiro Ortiz had a Laredo address, he had moved to this border city recently, the detective said.

"The case is still under investigation," Alardin said. "We're checking several motives."

Justice of the Peace Raul Vasquez, who pronounced two of the victims dead at the bar, said officers found at least 13 shell casings on the floor.
