The fossil, with a dime

Fossil find

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The discovery of part of a tiny fossilized skull by paleontologists from the New Mexico Museum of Natural History has pushed back the record of mammals worldwide by 10 million years, a scientist said.

The fossil could be the world's oldest, most primitive mammal, said Spencer Lucas, curator of paleontology at the Albuquerque museum and head of the team that found the fossil in Texas.

The cranial casing, smaller than a dime, apparently belonged to a 220 million-year-old shrew-like mammal that would be a key link in the evolutionary chain between reptiles and mammals.

New translation

LONDON (AP) — The New Testament of the Christian Bible has been translated into Mongolian for the first time, and 5,000 copies are printed and awaiting distribution, the United Bible Societies said.

The translator is a 45-year-old Englishman, John Gibbens, who became interested in the project when he visited the communist Mongolian People's Republic in 1972. He spent 18 years on his self-appointed task.

Gibbens was helped by his Mongolian wife, Altaa, whom he met on his second visit in 1978. He is now working on a Mongolian translation of the Old Testament, Steven Downey, information officer for the United Bible Societies, said Wednesday. The societies coordinate worldwide Bible translation, publishing and distribution.

Program change

DALLAS (AP) — A spokesman for Gerald Rivera says a TV station caved in to a Fort Worth mother of two in dropping his afternoon talk show.

Rivera

But Joe Bell, program manager for KDFW-TV, said a drop in ratings was the main reason "Gerald" was not renewed.

Lynda Beams has campaigned for nearly three years to have the syndicated show moved from its after-school time slot, complaining the program was unsuitable for children because it sometimes dealt with sex and violence.

Soldiers dig into position

■ Mideast watches and waits as American troops take position, Arab leaders delay their summit.

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press Writer

American GIs dug into position in Arabia's searing sands Thursday while American diplomats worked the air-conditioned corridors of power, both tightening a vise, step by step, on an increasingly isolated Iraq.

The dangerous U.S.-Iraqi standoff in the desert rattled nerves across the Middle East.

Israel fired off a test missile as a warning to the Iraqis. Air raid sirens wailed mysteriously in Jordan. Turkish villagers said Iraqi tanks had rumbled into position near the Turkey-Iraq border. And Iraq closed its frontiers for foreigners, heightening concerns about hundreds of Americans stranded in Iraq and Kuwait.

The tension reached as far as the hills of Tennessee and farms of Wisconsin, where local Air National Guardsmen were hurriedly called from their civilian jobs to help ferry U.S. troops and gear the 5,000 miles to Saudi Arabia.

A Pentagon source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the United States was prepared to put "many divisions" in Saudi Arabia in the face of a continued Iraqi buildup in Kuwait.

"We have contingency plans that could result in the insertion of up to 200,000 to 250,000 ground forces before it's all done," said the source, who spoke on condition that further identification be withheld. Such moves could take up to two months, the source said.

The Pentagon earlier reported that 50,000 Iraqi combat units were moving south inside Iraq, and that if they entered Kuwait, the total invasion force would number "about 170,000." Only a day earlier, the intelligence estimates had put the Iraqi force at 100,000 men.

American leaders believe the Saudi oil kingdom could be the next target of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, whose invasion force conquered Kuwait last week.

Arab leaders, desperate to defuse the explosive crisis, gathered in Cairo in search of a peaceful resolution — possibly an all-Arab force to act as a border buffer between the Saudis and Americans on one side and the Iraqis on the other.

The summit was postponed a day until Friday. The official reason for the postponement was some late arrivals.

But unconfirmed reports said the summit hit a snag because the Iraqi delegation brought its own representative for the new Baghdad-installed Kuwaiti government. The Iraqis, according to some reports, refused to accept the presence of Kuwait's emir.

Taha Yassin Ramadan, the leader of the Iraqi delegation in Cairo, asserted that the U.S. force in Saudi Arabia would be used to attack Iraq.

Any such move "will be answered decisively," he said. Iraq's ambassador to Greece suggested the Iraqis would unleash poison gas on any attacking American troops.

While the Arab presidents and sheiks marked time in Cairo, American diplomacy pressed forward in world capitals.

■ Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in Ankara, told Turkish leaders they could depend on their NATO allies in any showdown with neighboring Iraq.

Movement of U.S. troops stirs varied responses in Midland

By David Morris

As far as David is concerned, the U.S. decision to send troops to Saudi Arabia to defend against a possible Iraqi invasion does not go far enough to address the menace represented by Saddam Hussein.

"The U.S. should attack this guy all the way to downtown Baghdad," said David, who asked that his last name not be used. "The United States should get that guy before it's too late or he will become the Hitler of the Middle East."

David, a 32-year-old Midland businessman, is an Assyrian native of Iraq who came to the United States with his father, mother and nine brothers in 1975.

"I left Iraq because of the Saddam regime," he said, adding that many of his friends and relatives were killed in Iraq's war with Iran. He said President Bush acted wisely in sending American troops to Saudi Arabia.

"They did the right thing," he said. "If Saudi Arabia were to fall into the hands of this dictator, the Middle East would be in big trouble. The whole world would be in big trouble."

The Associated Press reported this week that thousands of Iraqi troops have massed on the border between Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, which Iraq invaded last week and annexed Wednesday.

On Tuesday, President Bush dispatched U.S. troops and warplanes to Saudi Arabia to defend the oil-rich kingdom against a possible Iraqi invasion.

'Ambitious' goals set for next decade

■ "Excellent participation" may be the hallmark of Objectives 2000, a community goal-setting forum of the Midland Chamber of Commerce funded by Junior League and Forward Midland.

Staff Report

Guided by a broad base of citizen input, the Objectives 2000 steering committee has set forth an ambitious agenda of proposed community goals for the next decade.

"Our participation has been excellent and the dedication of citizens exemplary," said program co-chairwoman Darlene Gifford.

The committee, sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce with funding from Forward Midland and the Junior League of Midland, began its work in January.

The 31-member board developed a list of challenging objectives ranging from education and youth development and economic development to health and safety and leisure and the arts. The complete text of all 42 proposed objectives, with brief explanations, will appear in a four-part series beginning in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

"This program has a tradition of fostering good ideas and focusing attention on needs and opportunities. This year's effort has certainly been worthy of that tradition," Ms. Gifford said.

Objectives 2000 has its origins in 1967, when a group of citizens developed Objectives for Midland at a time when the community was struggling. As Midland entered the 1970s, economic opportunity began to improve and as the decade progressed, many of those original goals were realized.

The first program was the "original catalyst for many important endeavors that have greatly improved life in Midland: the development of Midland College, the construction of Midland Center and the Lamesa Road project among others," Ms. Gifford noted.

The program was re-initiated in late 1979 and by the end of 1980, a new agenda — Objectives for the '80s — was established. At the time, the community was experiencing phenomenal economic growth and prosperity, driven by intensive oil drilling activity. But the acceleration of the economic rise in the early '80s was equaled only by the speed of the fall later in the decade.

The economic expectations on which the Objectives for the '80s had been based changed dramatically. To some extent, this hampered achievement of many of the objectives, although noteworthy progress was made.

Diversification center opens

A dream that began in 1985 became reality Thursday with the official opening of the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

Several hundred community leaders from Midland and Odessa, state and industry leaders and officials of the University of Texas witnessed the opening of the facility, located at the intersection of Farm to Market Road 1788 and State Highway 191 near Midland International Airport.

Louis A. Beecherl Jr., chairman of the UT Board of Regents, compared the dedication of the center to the plugging of the Santa Rita No. 1 earlier this year.

"The plugging of Santa Rita marked the end of one era, and the development of this facility marks the beginning of a new era," said Beecherl. "I hope that the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification means as much to this area in the 21st century as Santa Rita did in the 20th century."

Duane Leach, Ph.D. and president of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said the center was the result of cooperative efforts between education, foundations, corporations and private citizens. He said it would be a resource center for the Permian Basin and act as a conduit for new research, economic diversification and technical business assistance.

Hans Mark, Ph.D. and chancellor of the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System, said the center would be a focus for developing many programs in energy and diversification.

"We feel the facility has great potential, that's why the University of Texas System has invested here. We have invested for the long term and are here for the long term."

The center will have classrooms, a 100 seat auditorium and will be linked by satellite to other UT campuses for teleconferencing purposes. It will also house a 10,000 volume library with direct access to the card catalog at

GOALS: Work began in January

(From 1A)

Encouraging much of the progress was the recognition by leader of the importance of long-term planning. For institutions and enterprises with hopes of survival and success, planning for the future has become essential, noted Objectives 2000 executive director Guy McCrary, who served in the same capacity for the '80s project.

"Of particular value to this year's program was a series of citizen discussion group meetings conducted to identify and explore concerns, needs, and opportunities perceived by members of the community-at-large," McCrary said.

The proposals are a result of considerable research, study and discussion by the Steering Committee and its various subcommittees.

"Each sub-committee did considerable research and called on a number of consultants in its study. We are very pleased with their work and vision," Ed Runyan, co-chairman of the project.

The steering committee organized into four sub-committees after identifying key issues for study: Education and Youth Development; Economic Opportunity; Health and Safety; and Leisure, Culture and Beautification. According to Runyan, the sub-committee process was extremely fruitful.

In addition to the co-chairs, Objectives 2000 Steering Committee members are Larry Bell, Ron Boren M.D., Bettye Calvert, Cyn Choate, Nadine Craddock, Joe Cummins, Aaron Dillard, David Diaz, Rhonda Durham, Candy Ebeler, Arden Edgar, the Rev. Hadley Edwards, Gary Gilliam, Don Hellinghausen, Leon Jeffcoat, John Lane, Cadell Liedtke, George Logan, Dolores Medrano, Pat Paxton, Orland Purcell, Bill Sewell, Bob Solberg, Bill Stovall, Jack Swallow, Tony Valadez, Mark Welton, Jim Welsh, M.D., and Kyle Womack.

The committee will solicit comments from the public before they begin the final drafting process.

Said Runyan: "Objectives has given us a unique opportunity to think about the future and to dream a little."

CEED: Many backers honored

UTPB and the 5 million volumes at the University of Texas at Austin. It will also be linked to the U.T. System's two Cray Supercomputers at Balcones Laboratory in Austin.

Mark said the center would be an important national energy research center because 25 percent of the oil in the continental United States was within 100 miles of its location. He noted that he had been in discussions with Secretary of Energy James Watkins and was hopeful of receiving Department of Energy research funds for the facility.

Mark, Leach and Beecher praised the efforts of Odessa businessman Bill Roden, a member of the UT Board of Regents, for having the vision of the Permian Basin facility and making the motion that led to its approval.

Others mentioned as prime backers of the project were: The Davidson family, Wagner and Brown, the Scharbauer family and Abell-Ranger Foundation. The Odessa Industrial Foundation provided the original study grant for the project.

"It has been a great cooperative effort bringing it to this point. Now we need to get it into action," said Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas. He said the center would not only be a busy research facility for the energy industry, but would also serve as a facility for growing new business.

In addition to housing offices and laboratories for modifying and developing field equipment, it will also house a small business incubator, which Thomas described as one of the best methods to bring new business to the area.

Robert Souther, division manager for Texaco in Midland, said the center would have great potential to deal with the environmental issues of this decade. Tom Hyde, Ph.D. and professor of engineering at UTPB, agreed that the center could be a valuable and neutral forum in which industry and government could work out environmental concerns.

REACT: Oil needs seen as factor

(From 1A)

Arabia Wednesday.

Like David, many Midlanders expressed support Thursday for Bush's decision to send an expeditionary force to Saudi Arabia. Most cited American dependence on foreign oil as justification for the move.

"If Iraq gets control of the oil supply, then we won't have enough oil for our needs," said 63-year-old Douglas Rice, a retired Midland petroleum engineer. He said the Middle East crisis points up the need to develop alternative energy sources such as nuclear, coal and solar power.

"We're too dependent on foreign oil. I think this could open some eyes in Washington," he said.

Darron Anderson, 22, a University of Texas at Austin petroleum engineering student, said the United States might not have felt compelled to intervene in Saudi Arabia if this country was not so reliant on foreign oil.

"This, I believe, is a classic example of what happens when you're dependent on foreign oil," he said. "One person's actions could devastate another country's economy."

Anderson, who is completing a summer engineering internship in Midland, said it would be worth a fight to protect Saudi oil fields from coming under Hussein's control.

"I would support (the use of force) if it was a joint effort with other countries," he said. "I think what Hussein is doing is affecting not only the United States but the other countries and I think it's the responsibility of all of us to participate."

According to news reports, Egyptian and Moroccan have so far declined to join U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia.

Other locals expressed hope that U.S. soldiers would not become involved in a "shooting war" in the Middle East. Some suggested that the mere presence of American troops in Saudi Arabia would deter further aggression by Hussein.

"I think it'll stop them because they're scared of the United States — they're not as powerful as we are," said hairdresser Gloria Cordova, 35.

Jim Williamson, 69, a sales manager at Selman and Associates Mudlogging Co., said he thought Hussein would respect a show of force.

"They tell me that Hussein recognizes that kind of strength," he said. "Hopefully it will be enough to deter him."

Others, meanwhile, seemed confident of a U.S. victory in any war that might erupt in the Middle East.

"I heard that they had, like, a million soldiers," said 24-year-old Dennis Miles, a retail sales clerk, of the Iraqi army. "I think we can handle them if it came down to it. I'd rather go over there and stop them now than have them come over here and start a bunch of trouble."

Odessa Ace Swinney, meanwhile, seemed almost eager for U.S. involvement in a Middle East war.

"I'd go," said the 22-year-old, who operates automobile-glass replacement businesses in Midland and Odessa. "I'd go in a minute. I think we ought to go over there and kick their tail."

But self-described peace worker Kathryn Bowers of Midland said deployment of U.S. forces in the Middle East is unwise and ill-considered. Talk of "kicking tail" is irresponsible, she said.

"The only justification that a military presence would have would be to airlift people out of danger if that were necessary," she said.

President Bush did not explore enough alternatives before he dispatched troops, she said, adding that a large U.S. military presence will only serve to aggravate tensions in the region.

"The display of force in Saudi Arabia right now is provocative," she said. "It's almost like two neighborhood bullies trying to bully one another. If one of them backs down, its going to mean shame and humiliation before the entire world. It's going to be one of those 'saving face' things."

She said the United States should try to achieve a peaceful solution to the Middle East situation by forcing Hussein to come to the negotiating table.

"There are pressures that can be brought to bear that are not violent, such as sanctions," she said, but conceded that the situation is "ripe" for development into full-scale war.

"Hussein is going to cross the line, chances are," she said. "It's just a real inflammatory situation, and we don't need to be fanning the flames."

David, the Iraqi expatriate, said the figurative fire Hussein represents may already be burning out of control.

"He's going to invade other countries," David predicted, adding that the development of an Iraqi nuclear capability is an especially frightening prospect. He said Hussein should be stopped now before he becomes an even bigger threat to world peace.

"It's going to get worse and worse. I hope they get him today before tomorrow."

IRAQ: Arab leaders mark time

ton would tap its huge emergency oil stockpile if the crisis causes shortages. France promised to send an aircraft carrier to the gulf and strengthen its naval and air forces there.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, the United States helped shepherd a resolution through the Security Council rejecting Iraq's announced annexation of Kuwait. On Monday, the council ordered a worldwide economic embargo against Iraq.

The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 was rooted in grievances over oil, money and land.

Saddam complained that Kuwait overproduction of petroleum had driven down world oil prices and Iraq's oil revenues. He also rejected Kuwait's demands that Iraq repay an estimated $15 billion in loans. And he reasserted longstanding claims on Kuwaiti territory.

On Thursday, a day after "annexing" the wealthy emirate, the Iraqis announced they were "canceling" their debt to Kuwait.

World opinion, led by the United States, has almost universally condemned the invasion. Iraq's neighbor and longtime enemy Iran joined the chorus Thursday, declaring it "will not tolerate" the Kuwait annexation.

On Wednesday, President Bush announced the deployment of U.S. troops to buttress the outmanned Saudi military and declared, "We must resist aggression or it will destroy us." An Iraqi takeover of Saudi Arabia, a key source of U.S. oil, would endanger the U.S. economy, he said.

On Thursday, however, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the Iraqi troops in Kuwait "seem to be in a defensive posture."

At least 2,300 American soldiers, mostly from the 82nd Airborne Division's "ready brigade," were flown to Saudi Arabia on Wednesday. Pentagon sources said elements of two other divisions — the 101st Airborne and the 24th Mechanized Infantry — would be among the units to be sent.

The United States also was dispatching some 140 F-15s, F-16s and other warplanes, including "tank killer" A-10s, Pentagon and other sources reported.

Sources in the Middle East said the U.S. units were being deployed at strategic airports and bases across Saudi Arabia, but the main grouping was in the remote northeastern region of Haifa al-Baten, near Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

Travelers leaving Saudi Arabia, and speaking on condition of anonymity, said the flow of American forces to the border region appeared to be increasing Thursday.

The dimensions of the global U.S. operation — many of whose details were being kept secret — could be seen Thursday at the Lajes air base in Portugal's Azores islands, where eyewitnesses reported 17 U.S. Air Force aerial tankers lined up on the runway at one point.

On Wednesday, diplomatic sources said hundreds of U.S. Marines had been flown to Saudi Arabia's northeast corner and deployed at Khafji, just seven miles from Kuwait. But on Thursday a Pentagon source denied that, saying no Marines were in Saudi Arabia "at this time."

Besides the ground forces, powerful Navy units were converging on the tense Persian Gulf area.

Fifteen vessels, the biggest of them the aircraft carrier USS Independence, were in the gulf or near its entrance. About 20 more will be in Mideast waters by next week, including the battleship Wisconsin, bristling with cruise missiles programmed for targets in Iraq.

In addition, Air Force and other sources reported that B-52 bombers were available at Diego Garcia, a U.S. island base in the Indian Ocean, and F-111 bombers at a base in Turkey.

Villagers near the Turkish-Iraqi border told Turkey's Anatolia news agency they saw Iraqi reinforcements, including armored units, moving up to the border. Turkey's defense minister said he had no such information.

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd went on national television Thursday to explain to his people that he had called in U.S. military help only because he was faced with "this bitter reality" — the 120,000-man Iraqi invasion force next door in Kuwait.

His hand now strengthened with American men and weapons, the king for the first time demanded publicly that Iraq end its "horrible aggression," withdraw from Kuwait, and allow the deposed al-Sabah family to return to power.

The Saudis and Americans have sought a truly "multinational" emergency force for the desert showdown. But only Britain heeded the U.S. call for help and is sending warplanes and ground-to-air missiles, with about 1,000 men.

A few thousand troops from the smaller emirates along the gulf would also probably be brought under the multinational umbrella, said U.S. congressional sources.

It would be extremely difficult for the forces in Saudi Arabia to rid Kuwait of its Iraqi invaders, who are backed up by a million-man army at home. Bush described the Saudi operation as wholly defensive, and he seemed to consider the U.N.-ordered economic embargo the preferred weapon against Iraq, whose economic survival depends on oil exports.

But gaps were appearing in the embargo — the latest an announcement by Sri Lanka that it would continue trade with Iraq. A tough, multinational naval blockade looked more and more like the most effective weapon.

'Pulse of America' city favors Bush action

By Chip Brown

Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — The folks in Lubbock say if George Bush decides to use military force to drive the Iraqis out of Kuwait, that's OK with them.

In the latest "Pulse of America" survey conducted in Lubbock County — Bush's adopted soundboard for America — the president received high marks for his response to last week's Iraqi invasion.

Sixty-four percent of the 400 people surveyed said they would support the president if he opted for military force to push Iraqi soldiers out and return the Kuwaiti government to power.

Twenty-one percent did not support military use; 12 percent were undecided; and three percent gave no answer. The survey was released Thursday.

But, if given the chance to personally advise Bush, 45 percent said they would prefer he use economic sanctions and a blockade against Iraq instead of military force or staying out of the conflict.

Twenty-five percent said they would advise Bush to activate troops; 17 percent said the United States should stay out of the situation; eight percent were undecided and five percent had no answer.

American troops deploy in heart of Saudi oil region

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of American combat troops took up defensive positions Thursday in the heart of Saudi Arabia's vital oil-producing province. The Pentagon said it saw no sign of an imminent Iraqi invasion.

The Bush administration kept its official silence on details of the U.S. troop deployment, code-named "Desert Shield." President Bush ordered the operation Monday, saying he hoped to deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from sending his million-man army into the kingdom, the world's largest oil exporter.

At least 2,300 American ground troops landed in Saudi Arabia on the first day of the deployments Wednesday, and Pete Williams, the chief Pentagon spokesman, said "there's much more to come" over the next several days and possibly weeks.

"This is an operation that is going to continue for several days — one might say many days," Williams told reporters.

The spokesman said U.S. intelligence reports from the Middle East indicated that Saddam was sending additional troops into Kuwait, the tiny but oil-rich country his forces seized a week ago, prompting international sanctions and the U.S. military response.

Williams added, however, that there were no signs of offensive operations by the Iraqis, who now number about 120,000 in Kuwait. "They seem to be in a defensive posture," he said. "They're holding on to what they've acquired." Williams also said he could not confirm reports that Iraq had readied chemical weapons in the border area.

The U.S. forces, though greatly outnumbered by a battle-hardened Iraqi army, have sophisticated air and naval weaponry designed to shatter advancing armored columns that would have to cross desert wastelands to reach Saudi oil fields.

Diplomatic sources in the Middle East said elements of the U.S. 82nd Airborne Division, after arriving Wednesday at the Saudi air base at Dhahran along the Persian Gulf coastline, headed for a remote military installation near the Iraqi border.

Williams said American troops were spending Thursday unloading their equipment, preparing their defensive positions and planning unspecified joint maneuvers with Saudi soldiers.

In addition to a nine-ship U.S. navy armada plying the Persian Gulf, two American aircraft carrier battle groups were stationed nearby; the USS Independence, with six accompanying combatant and supply ships, was patrolling the Arabian Sea at the mouth of the gulf, and the USS Eisenhower, with three combatant and two supply ships, was in the Red Sea near the end of a Saudi pipeline that carries Iraqi crude.

Williams said the three warships accompanying the Eisenhower included one that was added on Thursday. He also said the USS Saratoga aircraft carrier battle group, including nine vessels, was headed for the Mediterranean Sea.

The Pentagon spokesman said five U.S. Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft were in place in Saudi Arabia, as well as an unspecified number of F-15 fighter jets from Langley Air Force Base, Va. The F-15 contingent was believed to include two squadrons, or about 46 aircraft.

The Middle East diplomatic sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said at least portions of the American ground force were settling in at the remote military installation at Hafir al-Baten just south of the Iraqi border.

Housing costs keep society 'shelter poor'

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Even in their good times, Sandra Merritt and Darryl Hall were not what government and society view as people "making it." Though his take-home pay was about $2,200 a month, they were paying nearly half of that for rent and utilities.

Russell David Holman hasn't really had any good times since he returned from Vietnam two decades ago. He's unemployed and gets $341 a month in welfare; $300 of that goes for a tiny hotel room on Polk Street here.

They are among the burgeoning number of "shelter poor" — the 78 million Americans who, a new report says, "face so great a squeeze between inadequate incomes and high housing costs that, after paying for their housing, they are unable to meet (other) needs at even a minimum level of adequacy."

The inability of one out of three Americans to buy adequate food, medical care and other basics hits hardest at the poor, blacks and Hispanics, the report by University of Massachusetts housing policy expert Michael E. Stone says.

But a growing number of the middle class are also suffering, and the American dream of owning one's own home is fading for millions — 42 percent of all renters and one of every five homeowners are shelter poor.

In a report for the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal Washington, D.C., think tank, Stone said the average shelter poor household faces a gap of nearly $290 between what it pays for housing and what it can afford.

By conventional standards, housing becomes "unaffordable" when a renter or homeowner pays more than 30 percent of his or her income for it.

Pogie kill in Maine

Problems still persist in Watts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anger and frustration still simmer in Watts, 25 years after a week of rioting reduced entire blocks to charred ruins and seared black rage onto the American conscience.

But Watts today is not the powder keg it was when the streets of Los Angeles exploded on Aug. 11, 1965, and burned for six nights and days, according to residents, community activists and academics.

Some people say such post-riot developments as a new shopping center and a health clinic have improved the community. Others contend that negative forces are responsible for keeping the lid on any more riots.

In recent years, gangs and drugs have joined the longtime problems of crime, joblessness and despair, making the area both violent and stagnant. Watts today directs its rage at itself, rather than at society, reducing the risk of another riot but doing nothing to solve the community's woes.

"Drugs are a deterrent, a lazy deterrent," said Ted Watkins Jr., president of Watts Labor Community Action Committee, a leader in the effort to rebuild the area. "I don't think that in 1990 the will is here" for another riot.

Watts became a symbol of inner-city anger, sparked by an event that didn't even happen inside the community of 30,500 people eight miles due south of downtown Los Angeles.

Four blocks west of Watts, two white California Highway Patrol officers stopped a 21-year-old black motorist for investigation of erratic driving.

A scuffle started between the patrolmen and the motorist. A crowd gathered and quickly grew angry. Rocks were thrown. More police arrived. The crowd swelled.

In about an hour, the disturbance spread to surrounding communities, including Watts. Rioters torched buildings, looted stores and pulled white drivers from their cars and beat them. Snipers took to the rooftops.

A 50-square-mile area became a combat zone. National Guard jeeps with machine guns patrolled the streets.

When it was all over, 34 people were dead, 4,000 others arrested, and damage was estimated at $40 million. A stretch of 103rd Street was lined by burnt-out skeletons of buildings, giving it the name Charcoal Alley.

The McCone Commission, named after Chairman John A. McCone, former head of the CIA, issued a 101-page report, finding that the cycle of poverty and despair gripping the area set the stage for the riot.

The report recommended a series of ambitious reforms, from job training to efficient public transportation.

Many community activists and politicians say some important reforms went into place and made Watts a better community.

Charcoal Alley has become a pleasant street with a post office, city council field office, shopping center with a bank and supermarket and a station on the city's new Blue Line light rail system.

Relations with the Police Department are the best ever, many say, thanks in part to increased minority recruitment, community outreach and the common enemies of drugs and gangs.

Ola Mae Toler, a Watts resident since 1947, said Watts has improved to the point a riot could not happen today.

"I don't think people are thinking of that anymore," she said. "There's a lot of people who want progress. I know I do. But I have never thought that Watts was the worst place to live."

Storm catches Atlantis outside

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A thunderstorm accompanied by lightning and hail trapped Atlantis outside the hangar on Thursday during a launch-pad swap involving the newly repaired Columbia.

NASA planned to move Atlantis into the hangar Thursday night, several hours later than planned. It was not immediately known whether the storm caused any damage to the exposed shuttle.

Atlantis' 3½-mile trip back to the hangar for repair of a hydrogen leak took nearly six hours and ended around 4 a.m. Thursday just outside the doors of the crowded Vehicle Assembly Building. Shortly before 6 a.m., Columbia was rolled from the structure and out to the pad.

It was the first time two shuttles had passed one another in upright launch positions.

Drug program success

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal effort to reach drug addicts, born out of the AIDS epidemic, has recorded success rates as high as 47 percent in getting junkies to quit, health officials said Thursday.

The programs, aimed at studying and changing the behavior of intravenous drug abusers and their sex partners, were launched in 1987 in 41 communities by the National Institute on Drug Abuse. More than 30,000 people who were not in drug abuse programs were enrolled in the NIDA projects.

Follow-up interviews in five cities including Houston found between 16 percent and 47 percent "stopping all use of IV (intravenous) drugs," the national Centers for Disease Control said in reporting the results.

Barry juror in hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in Mayor Marion Barry's trial was excused for the day on Thursday when a "deeply depressed ... overwrought" juror was hospitalized.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told prosecutors and defense attorneys that he expected the juror, 34-year-old Deborah Noel, to return Friday.

"It is my suggestion that we allow her to remain in the hospital and await her return tomorrow," Jackson said.

S. African clash vital to freedom

While most of the world is riveted to the conflict occurring in the Arab states, to which much of the industrialized world turns for oil, another conflict is taking place inside South Africa that holds as much, if not more, importance for the United States.

The struggle involves two groups vying for control of South Africa — one headed by Mangosuthu Buthelezi, leader of both Inkatha and the Zulu homeland, and the other, the South African Communist Party, Nelson Mandela and the African National Congress — a communist organization. Caught in the middle is the government headed by President F.W. de Klerk who has been working toward the dismantling of the apartheid system.

At stake is the fate of government in South Africa and its political alliances throughout the world. Traditionally, the government has been friendly to the United States, which obtains much of its strategic minerals there, but if the South African Communist Party wins the upper hand, that could spell disaster for that relationship — and, potentially, the U.S. role as world defender of freedom.

Communist states in Eastern Europe have surprised the world in the past couple of years by throwing off the shackles of totalitarianism and beginning to move toward democratic government. But how far that political mood extends is questionable, as is its sincerity.

Only recently did Mandela disavow violence as a means of bringing about changes that would permit blacks a say in the central government, and even that assertion must be tested over time.

In July, Buthelezi opened the doors to whites joining the Zulu political organization — a step that should lead to eventual full integration of the South African society.

Although Buthelezi has been leading the Zulu homeland toward the end of apartheid, he and others in South Africa have agreed that to hasten black majority rule at this time would be disastrous.

At that time he said, "We will just not allow the ANC and its South African Communist Party to crush all opposition to it and emerge as the only viable political party."

"Nothing that the ANC can do will shake Inkatha's resolve to come out as a new Inkatha and a political party to claim its rightful place at the negotiating table."

Buthelezi's stance is vital to the future well-being of his people and to the ability of the United States to continue to support freedom-loving nations around the globe.

'Campaign reform' wings its way through Congress

Finally we know what the shining words "free speech" mean to the U.S. Senate. Henceforth, when a senator makes a speech, it's free.

A Senate vote this week to abolish speaking fees for senators is a kind of down payment on a long-running bid for higher salaries and federal financing of national elections.

The House followed up a couple of days later with its own version of "campaign reform." Both bills are high-minded as all get-out. Our appointed spokesmen promise to liberate federal politics from the influence of filthy lucre.

"There is a growing perception," says Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., "that money... influences our daily activities and decisions once we are elected." Senate Democrats, as Oklahoma's David Boren puts it, want to end "the money chase," and thereby "make the voter the driving force of our electoral system."

The reform bills — which go now to conference committee — provide for partial federal subsidies to political campaigns. The House bill would limit to $275,000 the amount a candidate could receive from political action committees, those ad hoc enterprises that direct millions each year to candidates of both parties.

The Senate would abolish such committees outright. So much for "free speech" of the First Amendment variety. It is hard to know why Americans should be barred from banding together and supporting whomever they want to support.

Another loss to free speech came when Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., tried writing into law the principles of the Supreme Court's landmark 1988 decision in Communications Workers of America v. Beck.

Beck, which arose out of a Texas labor dispute, allows union members to stipulate that their dues money shall be used solely for collective bargaining and not for politics.

Labor unions, with the National Labor Relations Board sitting silently on its haunches, have made the new right hard to exercise; McConnell sought to turn this wretched state of affairs around. The Senate shot down his amendment, 59-41. Indeed, language in the bill probably makes it harder than before for individual members to protect their dues money from abuse.

What a stew of contradiction and disguised motive! What are our appointed representatives up to anyway? What they are up to, the majority of them, is elbowing their way to the public trough. Democrats and "progressive" Republicans have long hoped for near-total federal funding of campaigns. Ronald Reagan wouldn't hear of it, and though George Bush warns of a veto — on the reasonable grounds that federal financing would entrench incumbents — sponsors hope their time has come. They've gotten pretty far along, come to think of it.

Campaign reform is not the most entrancing of subjects, but, then, it's not entrancing to think of taxpayers funding the career aspirations of their would-be spokesmen. If politicians feel called by the Lord to serve America's destiny, let them get out and raise the wherewithal.

Or, wait a minute. Let them address the underlying problem with political money. You bet elections are expensive! House candidates spent almost 50 percent more in 1988 than in 1980. Still, that's not the underlying problem.

What's really the matter here is that the federal government has too much power to do too many favors for too many people. This is where corruption and abuse set in — wherever special interests try to buy government favors. If there weren't so many favors, there wouldn't be so much buying.

Washington, D.C., must be the lobbying capital of the world. Every sizable organization in the land maintains an office there, from the Sierra Club to the Southern Baptist Convention. The objective is to influence government favorably — through subsidies, contracts, regulations, tax breaks, whatever.

Libyan terrorism rose after '86 raid

WEST BERLIN — Former President Ronald Reagan got plenty of mileage out of his 1986 bombing raid against Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, his "mad dog of the Middle East." Reagan had blamed Gadhafi for the bombing of a West Berlin disco, La Belle, that killed two U.S. servicemen. And the United States retaliated with a strike against Gadhafi's headquarters in Tripoli.

Anderson

But the raid, despite Reagan's boasting, was a failure in both of its missions — to end Libyan-sponsored terrorism and to kill Gadhafi.

The lesson for President Bush is one that he already privately knows — that military action against terrorists (Saddam Hussein of Iraq being the mad dog du jour) only escalates the violence.

Reagan was able to strut his victory over Gadhafi because Gadhafi covered up his tracks when he made terrorist strikes after the Tripoli raid. He simply hired foreigners to do his dirty work.

The classified history of Libyan-sponsored terrorism reveals that until 1986, Gadhafi made few serious moves to harm Americans. But that changed after Reagan sent 18 warplanes to bomb Tripoli. Their mission was to bomb Gadhafi and his family. When they failed, he came out fighting.

Libya has attempted to kill hundreds of Americans since the raid, beginning on the day of the raid, April 15, 1986, when Libyan agents shot a U.S. Embassy communications officer in Khartoum, Sudan.

Top secret reports indicate that it was Gadhafi who paid a Lebanese group as much as $1 million to kill American hostage Peter Kilburn two days later. Three days after the raid, Turkish police caught two Libyans with hand grenades on their way to a U.S. officers club in Ankara, Turkey, where a wedding reception was going on.

Ten days after the raid, Libyan agents wounded a U.S. Embassy communications officer in North Yemen. Three months later, nine people were arrested in a Libyan-sponsored plot to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Lome, Togo. Four months after the Tripoli raid, Libyan-sponsored terrorists hijacked Pan Am Flight 73 in Karachi, Pakistan, killing 21 people, two of them Americans.

In May 1987, Egyptians with ties to Libya tried to murder three U.S. Embassy workers in Egypt.

Two days before the second anniversary of the raid, a Japanese Red Army terrorist was arrested with a bomb on the New Jersey Turnpike. He was on his way to blow up the United Nations. Other anniversary attacks in 1988 included a car bomb that killed an American outside a USO club in Naples and bombings of U.S. government facilities in Colombia, Spain, Costa Rica and Peru.

A Libyan-backed group remembered the third anniversary last year by trying to bomb the U.S. Information Service center in Peru.

Gadhafi announced last October that he was weary of the terrorism business and worried that he couldn't control his hired help anymore. In an interview with a Cairo magazine, Gadhafi blamed Reagan for "muscle flexing," and said Libya was now more inclined to negotiate. "We are prepared for relations based on mutual respect and common interests," he said.

"Mutual respect" is the correct term. Gadhafi has about as much respect for America as America does for him. Intelligence experts say he is really driven by changing world alliances. The warming of relations between the superpowers has left him feeling more left out than he wants to be.

VETS BETRAYED — The Centers for Disease Control spent $60 million studying the Vietnam War defoliant Agent Orange, and concluded it was impossible to determine the health effects on veterans. Perhaps not coincidentally, secret White House documents show that the Office of Management and Budget panicked when the Agent Orange study was in progress. OMB concluded that the cost of compensating vets exposed to Agent Orange would run into the billions of dollars. OMB hinted broadly that the federal budget would be better off if the government didn't blame Agent Orange for death and disease.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The attorney for a former airline pilot on trial for flying while intoxicated recently offered a defense more suited to "L.A. Law." He said his client wasn't drunk because the pilot is an alcoholic and it takes a lot of booze to get an alcoholic drunk. We're reminded of the boy who shot his parents and then threw himself on the mercy of the court because he was an orphan.

ART BUCHWALD

Why don't women seek restroom rights?

My wife is a strong women's rights advocate. She will fight for any kind of equal opportunity, except when it comes to larger public restrooms.

The other evening we went to see a hit Broadway show. After the first act, she excused herself to wash her hands.

When she failed to return to her seat 20 minutes later, I decided to look for her. She was in line on 52nd Street slowly wending her way toward the washroom.

"What do you think?" I asked her.

"I'm not going to make the second act."

"Why?"

"Because I never make the second act when I go to the washroom. I don't even know how 'Phantom of the Opera' ends."

"You're a pessimist," I told her. "As I see it, there are only another 100 yards to the restroom door. All you need is a few breaks, and you'll be home free."

"Why do they build a theater for 2,000 people and a women's restroom for two?" she wanted to know.

"I think it's because theater owners have to put their money where it will help the show — in the scenery. As far as they are concerned washrooms are a waste of space. They would rather have the square footage for standing room only."

My wife said, "If I don't make it, brief me about the second act on the way home."

"You'll make it. Remember when you were waiting at 'Chorus Line'? Despite your doubts, you got back for the final curtain."

"That's because I went to the restroom at the beginning of the first act. I missed the opening and all the scenes that followed."

"Look, you just moved up three places. This could be your night."

She said, "Why don't you find someone to sit with in the second act — then my seat won't be wasted."

"Nosirree. I came with you and I won't let anyone take your place. I can't understand why women don't raise more hell about the restroom facilities of our theaters and sports palaces. They will protest every indignity heaped on their sex except what architects are doing to cut down on their washroom rights. If you don't raise your voices, you're going to be standing in line for the rest of your lives."

"It's undignified to make a fuss over those rights," she explained. "We do have pride." "Maybe so — but that doesn't mean you're going to see the big finish of this performance."

"What do you suggest women do?"

"Take over the men's john for starters and lock them out. If males can't get back for the second act, they will be the ones to let management know it."

My wife was in tears. "The last time I saw an entire show was when I was 6 years old."

"I hear music. I think I'd better go back to my seat."

"Au revoir," she said.

I told her, "It isn't your fault that the theater owners won't build decent facilities for their customers."

The lady behind my wife asked me, "Are you in line?"

I told her I wasn't.

"Good," she said. "That means I can still catch the midnight local to Stamford."

LEWIS GRIZZARD

It's time again, America — let's go get 'em

What this country has needed for a long time is to kick butt.

The last time we did it was in World War II. We showed 'em back then. With some help from our friends, we brought Hitler down and then we dropped a couple of big ones on Japan.

I still enjoy seeing the film of the Japanese officials signing their country's surrender.

Hey, guys, what did you expect? You sneaked in at Pearl Harbor and you bombed our Navy and you killed our people and you thought you were going to get away with that?

No way. We didn't pussyfoot in those days. You started it, we finished it, and I always get angry when I read about commemorative protests against the U.S.'s decision to dispatch the Enola Gay with its surprise. We were tough back then. Mess with us and you'll be immensely sorry.

But then came Korea. And then came Vietnam. Two dirty little wars that ended in scoreless ties. We've seen our country scorned. We've seen our people taken hostages. We've seen our young soldiers die at the hands of terrorists with bombs.

Grizzard

Oh, we've issued a few sanctions here and there. We've warned our enemies that if they take one more step we're going to intervene militarily, but we rarely do. Recall the phrase "paper tiger." That's us. We've been all hat, no cattle.

But now's our chance. Iraq needs to go down in the worst sort of way. Iraq is a bully of a nation that engulfs its neighbors. It encourages terrorism. It uses poison gas. It is run by a devil.

In Europe they are calling Saddam Hussein "the new Hitler."

Hitler first bullied Austria and Czechoslovakia and nobody did anything. So he kept up his threats until the rest of the world finally figured out they were dealing with a bloodthirsty despot who eventually would try to take over the entire world if somebody didn't act to stop him.

Now, there is Saddam Hussein and Iraq. First, Kuwait. Who's next? Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel?

Nobody could imagine Hitler going any further after he humiliated the British and the French in the Munich Agreement of 1938, but he did. He was a bud begging to be nipped, as is Hussein in Iraq.

Let's go get 'em. Get the Soviets to help as they did in World War II. Get the Israelis. Talk about a fighting machine. Israel, when it fears it is being threatened, wastes no time. It shoots first, asks questions later.

Let's go into Iraq. Let's send a message that says we're back, and we won't tolerate such aggression.

Over There, Pal. That's where we need to be. Send in the Marines. Put our top guns in their jets with orders to shoot to kill. Teach Iraq a lesson we taught the Germans and the Japanese.

They are just sitting over there asking for it. So let's answer back. Let's kick butt and take some names.

The world would be a safer place as a result. And whatever is left of Jimmy Carter's malaise would be swept away by our flag hanging high in Baghdad.

AIDS-infected couple to appeal judge's marijuana ruling

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) — A judge Thursday rejected the medical-necessity defense of an AIDS-infected couple who say marijuana is the only drug that will overcome the side-effects of their medications.

Kenneth and Barbara Jenks of Panama City Beach said they will appeal the verdict of Circuit Judge Clinton Foster, who found them guilty of possessing and growing marijuana.

The ruling was tempered with mercy.

Foster withheld adjudication and put the couple on a year of unsupervised probation, meaning they will have no criminal records if they stay out of trouble during that time.

He also ordered them to perform 500 hours of community service by taking care of and comforting one another.

"The events of this case are horrifying, and evoke sympathy and compassion for the defendants by all persons acquainted with the facts," said Foster, who held a non-jury trial last week. "There is no cure for this disease. It is terminal."

Jenks, 28, is a hemophiliac who contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a tainted blood transfusion. He passed the disease to his 24-year-old wife before he was aware he was infected.

The couple argued they need marijuana because drugs they are taking for AIDS induces nausea and vomiting that keeps them from eating.

They turned to marijuana when

'It's not up to cops to prescribe medication; it's up to doctors to prescribe medication.'

— John Daniel, attorney for Jenkses told by another AIDS sufferer that it would alleviate the side-effects. "We could have given up a long time ago, but I believe we wouldn't be here today," Jenks said after the verdict.

The couple declined to answer questions about their health and whether they have used marijuana since their March 29 arrest or will in the future.

Their lawyer, John Daniel, also did not directly respond but said, "They have only one recourse: quit eating."

Foster noted that a Broward County judge in Fort Lauderdale accepted a medical-necessity defense in a case involving another disease. But Foster said the parameters in that ruling are vague and ill-defined, more the subject of law review articles than of judicial opinions.

"Whether the evil sought to be avoided by the defendants' action is less than the evil inherent in their unlawful act is a matter of great public concern which should be addressed by the Legislature as a matter of public policy instead of the courts," Foster said.

It should be a matter for both the Legislature and the courts, Daniel told reporters after Foster read the verdict.

"With all due respect to Judge Foster, I'm going to get a second opinion," said Daniel, a private lawyer donating his time.

He said he will ask the 1st District Court of Appeal in Tallahassee to expedite the case because the disease is terminal.

Although disappointed by the verdict, Daniel was pleased with the sentence.

"I've never had that sweet a sentence in my 20 years of practicing law," he said.

The Jenkses also have asked for a permit from the federal Food and Drug Administration and Drug Enforcement Agency to legally use marijuana under the government's little-known Marijuana Investigational Drug Program.

The couple said neither they nor their doctor knew about the program before they were arrested.

Bob Randall, president of the Washington, D.C.-based Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics, said only five people, including two in Florida, can legally smoke marijuana. Randall is one of the five, using the drug to treat glaucoma, a disease that causes blindness.

Daniel said marijuana should be made a prescription drug, pointing out that doctors are allowed to prescribe much stronger medications.

"It's not up to cops to prescribe medication; it's up to doctors to prescribe medication," Daniel said.

Balky dads can 'plead or bleed'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said 40 men summoned to a special mass paternity docket in Laredo can either "plead or bleed."

Over the past month, 40 alleged fathers from the Laredo area have received notices ordering them to appear in court.

Those who fail to appear could receive orders declaring them to be the legal fathers. Those who show up may either sign the paternity papers or submit to scientific paternity blood tests, he said.

"We'll have technicians standing by at the courthouse to draw blood. They can either plead, or bleed," Mattox said Thursday.

The attorney general's office said it has increased paternity actions with "plead or bleed" programs in Houston, San Antonio, Victoria, Paris and the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Trouble brews at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — An avowed witch who is the target of an Oklahoma church's wrath says Southern Methodist University officials continue to support her despite the furor over a presentation she made to students.

A Ketchum, Okla., church has filed a complaint against SMU's Perkins School of Theology, charging that the seminary allowed the witch to discuss her beliefs during a conference on religions.

The charges were filed July 27 by the administrative board of the 425-member First United Methodist Church.

Ms. Fennell's presentation was made during the annual Women's Week conference, sponsored by a student organization. Women of diverse religious faiths, ranging from Christianity to Buddhism, Hare Krishna and Islam, were invited to discuss their beliefs, rituals and traditions.

Dr. Stanley Menking, associate dean of external affairs at Perkins, said Thursday that Ms. Fennell was invited to address the group as part of a forum on women's spirituality, but the university did not endorse her views or invite her to perform a service.

Gap should be filled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said President Bush should fill a gender or racial gap when he selects someone to sit on the Federal Reserve Board.

"With rare exceptions through the years, the Federal Reserve Board has been dominated by white males," Gonzalez said. "It is time for the Federal Reserve to join the 20th century."

Two blacks and two women have been appointed to the board during its 77-year history, Gonzalez said.

No shoes, no service

TYLER (AP) — A man was arrested for apparently reacting violently to a Smith County Court-house rule: No shoes, no legal service.

Tyler police arrested a 61-year-old man for allegedly assaulting a bailiff who confronted him when he entered the courthouse barefoot.

"I guess they have a code over there that you have to wear shoes," police investigator Doyle Lynch told the Tyler Morning Telegraph. "What we saw was, (the suspect) was swinging at the bailiff, so we went over there and restrained him."

Lynch said the man will be charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer because Court Bailiff Chuck Campbell is a sheriff's deputy. The man had not been arraigned late Wednesday.

There was no apparent motive for the attack, Lynch said.

Hillander School likely to fight City Hall

■ A school official expects a battle over yet another city-generated plan to abbreviate Hillander's crossing zone hours.

Midland City Council may soon push the municipal pedal to the public metal and put an end to the mid-day crawl of vehicle traffic through The Hillander School speed zone on Wadley Avenue.

Zone hours, which go from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on school days, may be cut because the number of pupils crossing there doesn't justify eight hours of 20 mph speed, Councilman J.D. Faircloth said Thursday.

Speed in the zone, which surrounds the I Street intersection, is 40 mph during non-school hours.

But one Hillander official said school representatives will likely fight to maintain the zone hours, a touchy subject for years for parents and administrators of the school.

Faircloth said city councilmen, as early as their Aug. 28 meeting, will look at changing the zone hours to conform with pupil arrival and departure times at the 1600 W. Wadley Ave. school.

"I think the council is pretty determined to do that," he said. "I don't see any pervasive evidence to make that school zone full time.

"We're just trying to make it relatively compatible with the other school zones in town."

A majority of Midland Independent School District elementary schools have reduced speed zones running from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Those and a number of other MISD schools also have nearby streets with 20 mph zones for only early morning and late afternoon hours.

However, MISD schools have more students crossing streets, Faircloth noted. The vast majority of the Hillander children are picked up by parents in front of the school, he said.

A school-crossing study conducted in May shows that only two Hillander pupils crossed Wadley during the morning and afternoon hours.

But John Hendricks, a Hillander board member, called the study results "ludicrous."

"That's utter nonsense," Hendricks said, adding that numerous children cross Wadley before and after school. "That's the most absurd thing I ever heard."

He said he expects Hillander officials, as they have in the past, to publicly oppose plans to change their school zone. Councilmen have backed off past zone proposals after Hillander representatives rallied against them.

"The parents will have a lot of concern over this (proposal) also," Hendricks said. "I'm sure it will get a good airing."

Motorists pass by one of the school speed limit signs on Wadley Avenue near the Hillander School. The City Council is considering cutting the hours of the 20 mph speed zone.

A Hillander board member says he expects students' parents to voice their opposition when the matter comes before council again.

Trust key to childrens' bilingual strength

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Watching native Spanish speaking youngsters converse in Spanish and English is not a startling experience, unless two of those children happen to be Japanese.

Junyong Chan, 5, and his brother, Junwei, 7, both spoke only Japanese when they enrolled in Midland school district's summer bilingual school for children with limited English proficiency. Today they are attending their class for the last time, and already are speaking complete sentences in English and Spanish.

Although the class was intended for 5- and 6-year-olds eligible to enter into kindergarten or first grade in the fall, an exception was made for Junwei.

"Junwei's English was so limited, we decided to take him, too," said Irma Medina, instructor for the program. "And Junyong could only speak about three English words," she said.

About 21 eligible children attended the eight-week course at DeZavala Elementary School, from 8:30-11:30 a.m. five days a week.

Many of the children were bused from residential areas near the school. Surprisingly, the bus ride to and from school was one of the highlights of the learning experience for most of the children.

"Riding the bus was a new experience for many of these children," Ms. Medina. "They arrived at school extremely excited after riding the bus. And they were always excited about taking the bus ride home again."

Trying out new experiences was what the class was all about, according to John Martinez, coordinator of bilingual education for Midland Independent School District.

Bilingual summer school teacher Irma Medina displays a pineapple to Ivon Villa, left, and Arturo Alvarez Jr., right. The children participated in learning experiences which appealed to all the senses in the eight-week bilingual program at DeZavala Elementary School.

"We try to stimulate more than just the visual sense," Martinez said. "When you are unfamiliar with a pineapple, seeing a picture of one doesn't mean much."

Instead of showing a flashcard of a pineapple to the children, Ms. Medina brought a fresh one to class. Children were allowed to touch its rough skin and spines.

They learned how it grew, saw what the fleshy inside looked like when it was cut, smelled it and then — in the final examination — each child tasted a slice of pineapple. The pineapple was just one of many fruits and vegetables brought to class for examination.

"The conceptual experiences are designed to elicit oral language and vocabulary," Martinez said. "We teach the children to describe their experiences, share them with others and develop their own internal oral structure."

Children also learned a sense of rhythm while dancing to such time-worn American favorites as the "hokey-pokey" and "Pop, Goes the Weasel." The first day of class, the Chan brothers attempted to imitate their classmates' movements while dancing the bunny hop or counting on their fingers to 10 while reciting the numbers in Spanish. Looks of confusion often crossed their faces, but they gamely attempted every lesson.

By the last week of class, Junyong was speaking sentences in Spanish and English, leading the class from one activity to another and happily working on a book by himself.

Ms. Medina said, "Many of these children don't have the advantages at home to allow them to experience what they did in class — everything from tasting honeydew to taking a field trip to the dinosaur exhibit at Dellwood Mall."

Ms. Medina said she incorporated hand signals along with her verbal instructions during the first day of school.

"Now the children do whatever I ask, no matter whether it's in Spanish or English. We have developed a trust between us," she said.

Class activities have included discussions of zoo and farm animals, family members, numbers, shapes, colors, sounds and "community helpers" such as nurses, police officers, fire department workers and cooks.

"We updated the lessons somewhat," Ms. Medina said. "For example, no one sees a milkman any more, so we called him the Coca-Cola man and everyone understood that his occupation is delivering drinks."

The children also made finger-paintings and personal books to take home as class mementoes.

Ms. Medina said the most difficult part of the program will be watching the children get on the bus for the last time today.

"I will miss them," she said. "But I know they will all be waving and saying goodbye, in Spanish and English."

Officers' names added to suit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A $10 million lawsuit against the city of Midland and a Midland police detective for the shooting of a local man on Aug. 6, 1988, has been amended to include two other police officers and a Midland County Sheriff's Office deputy as defendants.

The amendment to the civil action was filed Monday in U.S. District Court; the original lawsuit was filed on July 17.

The amendment comes less than two weeks after a jury found Midland tool shop owner H.L. Mitchell — the plaintiff in the civil suit — innocent of assaulting police Detective Brian Bogart on the night of the shooting. Bogart is the officer named in the original civil suit.

A cause of action for malicious prosecution was also added following the outcome of the criminal trial.

Named in the amendment were Midland police officers Bobby Sanders and Elias Hernandez; and Midland Sheriff's Deputy Scott McKnight. Mitchell is seeking $500,000 for each additional plaintiff named as punitive damages on top of the original $10 million.

"They (the plaintiffs who were added) were among the people that kicked the hell out of him (Mitchell) ... beat the hell out of the guy (who was) virtually bleeding to death," said Willie Schmerler, the attorney who is representing Mitchell in the civil suit.

The beating is alleged to have occurred following Mitchell's being shot twice while in his car by Bogart outside Bojangles lounge, 3709 W. Wall Ave.

Bogart was looking for burglary suspects the night of the incident when he spotted Mitchell in his car with a .38-caliber revolver on his lap.

At the criminal trial, Mitchell testified that Bogart — who was in plain clothes — spoke with hostility, causing Mitchell to doubt that Bogart was an officer.

Mitchell was shot when he attempted to drive away from the scene.

Bogart testified that he shot Mitchell as he was driving away, when he saw Mitchell's gun come to an angle about 45 degrees away from him; Mitchell testified that he just raised his arm in a cautionary farewell motion.

The beating is alleged to have occurred after a subsequent chase that ended at the parking lot of Peerless Tyre Co., 2804 W. Wall Ave.

"It's the first time (from testimony) we ever knew ... who was involved in the physical abuse," Schmerler said.

The criminal trial was held in Austin after Mitchell's attorney in that case, Tom Morgan, requested a change of venue and was granted one by Judge Pat Baskin of the 142nd State District Court.

In addition to the assault charge, Mitchell was found innocent of resisting arrest while carrying a firearm and possessing a firearm on premises licensed to sell alcohol.

The pending civil suit states that "Bogart unlawfully shot him (Mitchell) repeatedly with his service revolver ... Defendant officers then pounced on plaintiff and physically abused him. The officers then wrongfully sought criminal complaints against him in an attempt to cover up the officers' wrongdoing."

The lawsuit also claims the city is liable for permitting and tolerating illegal shootings and failing to properly investigate such incidents and take disciplinary action against officers involved.

The suit seeks $2.5 million from all defendants named, including the city, for compensatory damages and $7.5 million in punitive damages from Bogart.

City Attorney David Reagan declined comment because of the pending litigation.

The law firm of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson have been retained to represent the city of Midland in the lawsuit.

Pecos hoping call of its river may not be denied

■ Perennially inventive Pecos officials are hoping for renewed interest in the Pecos River Yacht Race.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

PECOS — Pecos, which historically celebrates ranching and rodeos and then brags a bit about its early-day Old West rowdiness, is touting tourism and Pecos River yachting, which seems a tad odd for an inland city of 12,500 people.

But touting is nothing new for inventive West Texans, who have much to offer tourists and hometown folks: The Cantaloupe Festival and cantaloupes on and off the vine; wild-horse racing and other rodeo events in the West of the Pecos Rodeo; and, among other attractions, the Pecos Country State Fair coming up early in October; the World Championship (beef brisket) Barbecue Cook-Off in late October; and fun racing, by yacht or raft, on the Pecos River in late August.

This town's bid for the tourist's dollar has been expanded to include the Pecos River Yacht Race, which is open to just about anything that will float on the Pecos River, which flows out of Santa Fe Mountain range in New Mexico through West Texas and merges with the Rio Grande. The river race is set for Saturday, Aug. 25.

"Inner tubes, canoes, kayaks, rafts, anything that can float, are invited to get in the water," said Bob Ghormley, the Pecos Chamber of Commerce's executive director whose is out to increase Pecos tourism and to beef up the economy.

Even sailboats, including yachts and catamarans, are eligible to dip into the Pecos waters.

"Any craft which can be paddled, pushed, pulled, or self-propelled without a motor is qualified to enter the race," which, Ghormley noted, is "set on rugged river terrain" just under a hundred miles west of Midland and between the prairies and the foothills of the Davis Mountains.

The price for entering the race, which is in two divisions, fast and slow over 7.5-mile and 3-mile stretches, is $20 per craft — home-made or store-bought. Another requirement is wearing shoes, since, Ghormley said, there's no telling what's on the river's bottom — broken glass, tin cans or sharp rocks and living things with teeth, fins, fangs or even claws.

Race-day Yacht Race headquarters will be at the Plaza Inn at Interstate Highway 20 and U.S. Highway 285 to Fort Stockton and Carlsbad) in Pecos. Additional details, including safety tips and life-jacket requirements for boaters under 18 years old, may be obtained by telephoning the Pecos Chamber of Commerce at 95-445-2406.

The Yacht Race, now in its sixth year, got statewide attention when it was first launched due to the novelty of the event, Ghormley said. Since then, interest has waned somewhat, but Ghormley and other Pecos promoters are campaigning to attract many spectators and river people, including those who float by inner tube, canoe, kayak, raft, fishing boat, sailboat or yacht.

In the immediate "Pecos Country," the river is "not large enough to handle major traffic," Ghormley said. But the Pecos gets almost Rio-Grande big, as it meanders on its southeastwardly route to Langtry and then to the Rio Grande.

The Yacht Race, Ghormley said, is a "sort of fun thing."

Counties' waste site trial delayed

EL PASO (AP) — Trial of a civil lawsuit filed by Hudspeth and El Paso counties against the state to block a nuclear waste site near Fort Hancock has been postponed until Sept. 6.

The trial, set to begin Monday before State District Court Judge Bill Moody, was delayed because Moody is still recovering from an automobile accident in late July, county officials said.

The counties allege in their suit that the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority didn't follow its own standards when it decided to consider the Fort Hancock waste site. No other location is being considered by the state.

"I think they (city officials) need to stick to what they've agreed to in the past. It's for the safety of the children, plain and simple."

Trinka Taylor, a Hillander board member for 14 years, said the school's staggered class hours make it difficult to have intermittent reduced speed times for all of the school's 350 pupils.

Classes for 3, 4 and 5-year-olds are held from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., while some 5-year-olds attend school from 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

First- and second-graders go from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., while third-graders attend from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Fourth- through sixth-graders go from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Mrs. Taylor said the hours are staggered to prevent traffic congestion on Wadley.

"The school has bent over backward to minimize traffic," she said.

Harvey Hansen, the city's director of engineering and traffic, said it may not be until the fall before a recommended zone change proposal goes before city council. A recommendation would be made based on results of a fall school-crossing study, Hansen said.

Faircloth said he expects at least some outcry over the proposed change.

"We're quite aware that certain groups have complained in the past," Faircloth said. "We realize there are going to be folks upset, but we're ready."

Abilene man 'lost count' of DWI convictions

ABILENE (AP) — A man who says he can't even remember how many times he has been convicted of drunken driving will have a lot of time to think about it — serving a life sentence in prison.

Mayhall was sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty on two counts of involuntary manslaughter in the deaths of two people killed in an accident while he was driving drunk.

Alleged drug lord indicted in multi-state operation

HOUSTON (AP) — The alleged kingpin of a drug ring authorities call "one of the most efficient pipelines" between Mexico and Chicago was in custody Thursday on a 57-count federal indictment.

Manuel Jaramillo, 59, of Mission, has been charged along with a dozen others accused of smuggling narcotics, including marijuana and cocaine.

The indictment also charges them with conspiracy, possession with intent to distribute narcotics, manufacture of methamphetamine, money-laundering, hostage-taking, and the use of communication facilities for narcotics deals.

Jaramillo also faces a charge of operating a continuing criminal enterprise, described under the so-called "drug kingpin" statute.

A federal grand jury in Houston returned the sealed indictment Monday. It alleges the ring smuggled drugs by land and air from Mexico through the Rio Grande Valley to Yoakum and then to Houston. There the drugs allegedly were repackaged and sent to Chicago Heights, Ill., for distribution.

The grand jury also ordered the seizure of $2 million in real and personal property assets accumulated by the organization. Authorities said the group tried to hide drug profits by investing in businesses, real estate and aircraft in Texas and Chicago.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Shelby said the operation is believed to have smuggled more than 10,000 pounds of marijuana and cocaine the past three years.

Shelby called the group "one of the most efficient pipelines we

BIG SPRING — One man died and another was injured in a one-vehicle accident that occurred about 3:45 a.m. Thursday, Texas Department of Public Safety officials reported.

Brenton Eliot Hartfield, 19, of Big Spring was pronounced dead at 8:45 a.m. Thursday at Scenic Mountain Hospital in Big Spring by Howard County Justice of the Peace Willie Grant.

Franklin Scott Hardy, 19, of Big Spring, the driver of the vehicle, remained in Scenic Mountain Hospital late Thursday in critical condition suffering from internal injuries.

According to DPS, Hardy was driving down Midway Road, about a third of a mile east of Farm to Market Road 700 when the accident occurred. The vehicle, a 1990 Chevrolet pickup, was traveling west on Midway Road at a high rate of speed when it ran off the road onto the north soft shoulder.

Hardy attempted to re-enter the roadway, ran off the south side of the road and struck a culvert causing the truck to become airborne for about 25 feet. The truck then hit a barbed wire fence and turned over end over end three times before hitting another barbed wire fence and a utility pole.

Both passenger were ejected from the vehicle.

Arrests

BIG SPRING — Two men arrested in connection with a spree of rural burglaries stretching across five counties remained in jail Thursday evening, Howard County Sheriff's Office officials said.

Bennie Garza, 40, and Billy Lee Green, 45, were arrested Wednesday in connection with about $20,000 to $30,000 worth of property believed stolen in Howard, Dawson, Borden, Scurry, and Mitchell counties.

Bonds totaling $92,500 have been set for Garza and a total of $85,000 for Green.

Howard County Justice of the Peace William H. Shankles set bonds on three counts of burglary of a habitation — $15,000 each — totaling $45,000 for each suspect.

Bonds for Garza also included $7,500 for felony possession of a sawed-off shotgun in Howard County; a $5,000 bond for a charge of theft out of Scurry County; and from Mitchell County, a $15,000 bond for burglary of a building and $20,000 for criminal attempt to commit burglary.

Additional bonds for Green include $5,000 from Scurry County for theft; and $15,000 and $20,000 bonds from Mitchell County on the same charges as Garza.

Sheriff's officials expect more charges to come in for the two men.

Sexual assault

A Midland man was arrested Wednesday in connection with an attempted sexual assault one week ago, police said.

Herman Lee Harris III, 23, remained in jail Thursday charged with burglary of a habitation with intent to commit sexual assault. Bond was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Harris was arrested at his Junction Apartments residence, 1902 N. Midland Drive, in connection with the attempted rape of a 25-year-old woman on Aug. 3 at The Lakes apartments, 516 W. Loop 250.

According to police reports, the victim was taking a shower about 7 a.m. when she noticed movement through the frosted shower door.

Believing it was her live-in fiancée, the woman left the shower and was confronted by a man. The man approached the victim and a struggle ensued. The man left the apartment after the woman began screaming.

Robbery

A 22-year-old Midland man told police he was beaten and robbed of $200 in cash about 4:45 a.m. Thursday, officials said.

Joel Galindo was reportedly going into Red's Drive In, 1807 E. Front Ave., when four men in a car called over to him. Galindo then walked over to the car and talked with the men before they attacked him without provocation.

The victim struggled free and asked the men why they attacked him and if they wanted his wallet. The men then attacked Galindo again and took his wallet, according to police.

Galindo was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Three of the men that attacked Galindo were described only as Hispanic. The fourth was described as black, 5 feet 6 inches tall, about 160 pounds, and a medium build. No description of the car was available.

Robbery

A Midland convenience store was robbed of a $10 roll of quarters and $25 in cash about 5:35 a.m. Thursday, Midland police reported.

According to Rex Armstrong, 21, a clerk at the 7-Eleven, 4400 W. Wadley Ave., a man came in the store, purchased an ice cream, which he said was for his girlfriend, and said he would be back if it wasn't the right type, police said.

About five minutes later, the man returned, jumped over the counter and ordered the clerk to give him all the money from the register. The robber then forced Armstrong to open the register so he could take the money before fleeing the scene.

The suspect is described as a black male, in his 20s, about 150 pounds, 5 feet 11 inches tall, with short black hair. He was wearing a navy blue shirt and jeans, and a blue cap.

Guilty plea

PECOS — A Kermit tax return specialist pleaded guilty to one count of tax fraud Wednesday in U.S. District Court, the United States Attorney's Office reported.

Charles David Costello, president of Costello Tax & Professional Service in Kermit, admitted filing a falsified income tax return with the Internal Revenue Service.

Costello prepared false W-2 and 1099-R forms for himself and falsely reported both his 1985 income and withholding taxes. An IRS investigation revealed. He reported that he had overpaid his withholding taxes and received a $60,228 refund which was not due him.

Costello, who pleaded before U.S. District Judge Walter Smith, faces up to three years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Lyme disease showing up in areas all over the state

Precaution is the best defense against a public outbreak in Lyme disease.

Lyme disease, once thought to be a problem only in the northeastern United States, has been reported in Texas.

The incidence of the disease is still low in Texas, however it is causing concern because it's popping up randomly all over the state.

Eighty-two cases of the disease were reported in 1989, up from 25 cases in 1988. Eleven cases of Lyme disease have been confirmed in the state thus far in 1990, according to James Perdue, public health technician with the Texas Department of Health in Austin.

Even though that might sound like a major public epidemic, actually the numbers are reflecting more public awareness.

One of the hotspots for the disease is northeast Texas, in the Dallas area. Experts are stumped as to the exact reason the disease incidence is higher there, but said it could be because of a higher number of campers than, for instance around Houston.

Symptoms of the disease were first reported in Sweden in 1909 and the disease still exists in that country. The disease remained a mystery and was first reported in the United States in Connecticut about 1975.

Numerous cases of a strange, new disease manifested as rheumatoid arthritis near Lyme, Conn. prompted researchers to search for the organism responsible for the malady. Intense investigations finally culminated when Dr. Willie Burgdorfer discovered very tiny spirochetes in deer common to the northeastern states. Ixodes ticks infested with the spirochetes (were found guilty) of transmitting the disease organism, from field rodents to man through their bite.

Lyme disease is caused by certain bacteria called spirochetes that are carried by the deer tick. The deer tick is a small, eight-legged relative of spiders. During the stages when it most likely will bite people, it is only about 1 millimeter across or about the size of a sesame seed.

If the tick attaches to a human for 24-48 hours, the bacteria may enter the human's bloodstream and cause infection. It is not possible to catch Lyme disease by contact with another person.

These ticks feed primarily on rodents, birds and certain lizards while immature. The adult tick feeds primarily on white-tailed deer. The species can occur in large numbers on deer that are sickly or malnourished, but also can attach healthy deer. Hosts for the tick also include man, dogs and cats, cattle and horses.

Disease symptoms generally occur in three stages. Symptoms in the first stage include lesions on the skin and joint pains. Flu-like symptoms of fever, nausea, headaches and aching muscles may also occur.

The second stage may include neurological symptoms such as meningitis and muscular pain.

During the third stage, which may occur within several months to several years, chronic skin disorders and central nervous system disorders occur. Extreme arthritis inflammation may be present in knees and elbows.

Symptoms in stage one and two will respond to antibiotics, but once the disease progresses to stage three, it may not be treatable, according to current medical reports.

The entomologists recommend that anyone who is bitten by a tick should watch that spot for several weeks.

All ticks should be removed with tweezers or small forceps only. Grasp the tick as close as possible to its mouth, or the part that is sticking into the skin. Pull the tick out in smooth, steady upward motion.

After the tick is removed, the bite should be treated with rubbing alcohol or iodine. Ticks can be disposed of in alcohol or by flushing them down the drain.

If a rash appears, call your physician immediately. Other precautions include not handling sick deer or rodents and keeping family pets free of ticks.

Further information is available from an Extension publication entitled "Preventing Lyme Disease" number B-1660.

Recent rains bring drought relief

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Widespread rains over the past several days have brought quick and welcome relief to drought-stressed South Plains crops and ranges, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported this week.

The moisture will help much of the district's dryland cotton, especially that portion not too badly damaged by a long spell of dry, hot weather, said Dr. John Gannaway of Lubbock, cotton breeder with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"If cotton was severely stressed, most of the rain will not be beneficial unless we have an extended fall favorable for plant growth. Cloudy weather, for example, could slow growth after the rains," Gannaway said.

The rain will help other cotton farmers cut back on expensive irrigation, he said.

Dr. James R. Supak, Extension Service cotton agronomist, said the 1.9

million acres of dryland cotton in the 25-county area surrounding Lubbock had barely been clinging to life before the rains came. Another 1.3 million acres of irrigated cotton was growing normally but farmers were obliged to apply water as early as May instead of July, when the practice usually starts.

Rick Baker, agricultural research technician with the Experiment Station's Soil and Water Laboratory at the Texas A&M University Center at Lubbock, said Lubbock received 3.9 inches of rain during the past weekend. That area measured only 5.79 inches for the entire month of July.

The big rains in the South Plains follow on the heels of heavy downpours during the past two weeks in the dry Coastal Bend, where as much as 22 inches over several days were gauged in Refugio County.

Dr. Zerie L. Carpenter said the rains refreshed Coastal Bend ranges and pastures but were too late to help much of the dryland corn and sorghum. Cotton harvesting, halted by the wet weather, is just now resuming.

He said cotton is generally in good condition in the district and the commercially important pecan crop is expected to respond soon to the increased soil moisture. Pecan nut shedding has been a problem.

Out in Far West Texas, as much as 8 inches of rain fell in some areas during the past week. Carpenter said the town of Sanderson recorded 7 inches.

Midland County Extension Service Agent Earnest Kiker said 3 to 4 inches fell in the Midland area.

"About 30,000 acres of dryland cotton will be helped by the rains but they came too late for the crop to reach its full potential," Kiker said.

Greg Jones of Stanton, Martin County Extension Service agent, said the county's estimated 200,000 acres of dryland cotton will see limited benefit from a half-inch to 3 inches of rain.

"The rain will help the cotton but our season has only about 45 days of growing weather remaining, so it came too late to boost yields to their maximum," Jones said.

Elsewhere in the state, soil moisture varies from short to adequate in the Rolling Plains and North Central and Northeast Texas, Carpenter said. The Panhandle has received scattered rains but could use more. Much of East Texas, despite rains of up to 3 inches, remains hot and dry overall.

District Extension Service directors reported the following specific crop, livestock and weather conditions for the past week:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is improved but still short overall. Cooler temperatures have favored corn pollination and sorghum growth. Cotton is growing and fruiting well. Onion, cabbage and potato harvesting is progressing. Land preparation is under way for fall wheat planting. Ranges are greening and keeping cattle in good shape.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture was short to very dry before soaking rains fell during the weekend. The rain will help surviving dryland cotton and enable farmers to reduce irrigation demands. Cloudy, cool weather could hinder cotton development. The district has averaged about 3.5 inches during the past several days, with Lubbock getting 3.9 inches. Corn is doughing, cotton is setting bolls and late sorghum is heading. Maintenance feeding of livestock is still fairly active.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture is generally short, although rains of up to 8 inches have fallen. Sanderson received 7 inches, the Midland area reported traces and up to 3 and 4 inches and Martin County measured from a half-inch to more than 3 inches. Ranges are improving and cotton growth is good overall. Maintenance livestock feeding continues. Goat shearing has begun. Onion and cantaloupe harvesting is active, tomatoes are setting much fruit and birds are damaging ripening peaches.

Seedless melons from Vincennes sent nationwide

VINCENNES, Ind (AP) — Eater-friendly seedless watermelons grown in Knox County are gaining a national following from a supply arrangement with a California produce dealer.

Sun World, based in Indio, Calif., grows and markets about 100 varieties of fresh fruits and vegetables throughout the United States, the Pacific Rim and Europe. It is marketing the seedless melons to the Midwest, the Eastern Seaboard and other parts of the country.

Field Farm Produce in Vincennes is the company's sole source for seedless watermelons in the Midwest.

Anita and Curt Field started growing melons about six years ago and last year contracted to grow seedless for Sun World.

"We have 60 acres of seedless," said Mrs. Field, president of the newly formed Indiana Watermelon Association. "Five other growers in the area grow for us and bring melons to us. We have the central packing for Sun World."

Seedless watermelon seeds were developed in 1937 by O.J. Eigsti, a Midwestern geneticist, said David Margules, vice president of Sun World. Eigsti's discovery originally was applied to watermelons in Japan, then introduced to the United States in 1948.

FAMILY MATTERS

Husband's gifts to wife are inappropriate, unwanted

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband keeps "surprising" me with gifts that I don't want or need. Then he gets mad when I don't act like I like his surprise. My mother says that I should be grateful that he thinks enough of me to bring me presents, but after almost 12 years of marriage, I'm not so sure.

In the past he has bought me purses that don't match anything, dresses that just didn't look good on me, and things like that. Each time I have had to keep the gifts because he gets very hurt if I try to take them back. He says that he makes a real effort to shop for things that he thinks I will like. I have told him over and over again that I will be glad to go with him to shop for dresses. He says that it wouldn't be a surprise then.

The reason that I'm writing is that yesterday he surprised me with a box of Godiva chocolates. I have been on a diet for almost three months and am finally seeing a difference. I love chocolates and my group said that this is just like giving an alcoholic a drink.

I told him when I started the diet that I needed his help to stick with it. When he brought the chocolate I got so mad at him I started yelling. He was surprised and hurt this time. Later he said that he thought that I deserved a treat for dieting so hard!

For the first time I made him take one of his surprises back, but I want this to stop. He has been sulking around ever since. What can I do to get him to stop this? I am appreciative of his thinking of me, but having a closet full of things I can't wear just doesn't seem right to me. — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Congratulations on making him take the chocolates back! That's the first step in modifying this pattern. When you accept gifts under these circumstances, you continue to play the game even though you want to change the rules.

Object to such unwanted gifts. Thank him sincerely for the thought and his consideration, but insist on exchanging the gift for something that you want. Often someone behaves this way because of his or her fantasy about what the other person needs or wants. Unfortunately such behavior overlooks the real desires of the other person. Stick to your guns, but respectfully and with love.

DEAR FAMILY: We have just moved here and don't really know anyone, so I'm writing you for help. My 3-year-old is having a difficult time adjusting to his new home. We have bought a lovely home with a nice yard, but the neighborhood doesn't have kids his age in it. He wants me to do everything with him, and I am still trying to get the house organized. I try to spend time with him like before, but he demands more and more of my time. I don't feel like I'm getting anything done.

I know that he is insecure, but I have to get the house in order. What can I do to help him? — UNPACKING

DEAR UNPACKING: Try to make him feel more secure by setting his room up first. If you haven't already finished unpacking his room, let him help you and let him put his things in their places. Try to arrange his room in a way that is familiar to him, in order to give him a safe refuge while you are busy elsewhere.

I encourage you to slow down. Instead of trying to unpack and get the entire house arranged at once, you and your son could take some time to start exploring Midland. Find the parks; see which one he likes the best. Take him to the library and check out some books for him, take him to a toy store and to different supermarkets. Look for a church home; Midland has lots of churches and friendly people. Start the "door-knocking" process to find new friends for your son and to meet your neighbors.

At home, leave night lights on so that your son can see at night. Waking up in strange surroundings is very scary. Don't be surprised if his sleeping and eating habits change. Chances are these behaviors will go back to normal soon. Try not to hurry him or yourself, and welcome to Midland!

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

DEAR ABBY

Keeping grandfather's secret perpetuates cycle of abuse

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Bitter Memories" felt that her deceased grandfather didn't deserve to be well thought of after having sexually molested her repeatedly as a small child. You counseled that no good purpose would be served in telling her mother what her deceased grandfather (her mother's father) had done.

That advice will certainly protect her mother, but it will devastate "Bitter Memories." You've convinced her that her emotional needs must take a backseat to her mother's comfort — her feelings simply don't count. Her grandfather taught her the same thing by denying her the right to privacy of her body.

"Bitter Memories" will have no trouble finding a husband who agrees that her function in life is to be used and abused. And that's the message they will probably pass on to their children.

Abby, our society can't afford to continue to protect the tender sensibilities of family members at the expense of abused children who become mixed-up adults. Such secrecy simply protects abusers from discovery. The fact that an abuser was abused as a child might explain the behavior, but it does not excuse abusive behavior. It's always hard for families to deal with conflicting loyalties, but incest survivors of any age desperately need validation from their families.

Parenthood stress afflicting dads too

Copley News Service

Working fathers are catching up with their spouses in feeling the stress that comes from trying to successfully juggle career and family.

Although working mothers traditionally have felt the brunt of this burden, a study by Boston University finds that 36 percent of working dads now report "a lot of stress" in trying to balance home and work life.

Meanwhile, 37 percent of women feel the same way.

ately need validation from their families.

As you advised, "Bitter Memories" needs professional counseling to prepare her for the hostility and rejection she will face from most of her family.

I'd like to tell "Bitter Memories": "You didn't deserve to be sexually abused, and it certainly wasn't your fault that you were. It was the ultimate betrayal, and you have every right to be angry. And should others try to blame you for their discomfort when you tell them what happened, recognize that such illogical responses come from their pain. It's sad, but it's not your responsibility to protect the world, or your family, from unpleasant truths."

"You will find people who will wholeheartedly support you. Sorting it all out is not a do-it-yourself project. Get help, and learn how to deal with the consequences of your abuse now. It's never too late." — BEEN THERE IN THE '20s

DEAR BEEN THERE: Thank you for an enlightening response that came out of your own painful experience. It was far better than mine.

DEAR ABBY: Last week at a fast-food restaurant, I was seated near a plump woman who had ordered a regular (not diet) cola. After the woman left, the young girl who had served her giggled as she told another server that she had given the woman a diet cola, "because she was too fat and would never know the difference, anyway." I told the young girl that I thought her action was reprehensible, and why.

Since then, I have worried that substitutions may occur frequently. Abby, people need to know that some people have a metabolic abnormality called phenylketonuria (PKU), which makes it dangerous for them to consume aspartame, the artificial sweetener found in many diet drinks. Some people (and I am one of them) develop severe headaches after drinking diet drinks for this reason.

Please tell your readers who are food servers never to make substitutions without first checking with the customer. — DELAWARE READER

DEAR READER: Thanks for the enlightening tip. I'm sure that many servers underestimate the importance of making no substitutions without notifying the customer. Should an unsuspecting diner have a seriously bad reaction to an unannounced substitution, the restaurant owner could find him/herself facing a costly lawsuit.

Aging should be taken in stride

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Historically speaking, stress has been a stimulating factor in the physical and mental development of mankind. As a disquieting and disruptive influence, it hones the edge of mental and emotional growth.

Page

Our distant forebear, the antediluvian caveman, on confronting a sabertoothed tiger, responded to the alarm with an abrupt increase in circulation to all parts of the body, including muscles, nervous system and brain. In addition, his endocrine system increased steroid production for quick easy energy in the form of sugar, digestive enzymes, and acid and muscle strength. All this enabled him to overcome the obstacle at hand.

Luckily, we all have inherited this alarm response — a fact that has helped us survive life's trials and tribulations. But alas, unluckily, this protective alarm syndrome can sometimes tire under unrelenting, repetitive insults and finally manifest itself negatively. This can take on many forms, such as depression with concomitant food and drug abuse; fatigue; symptoms mimicking heart, gastro-intestinal or skeletal disease, or actual disease itself. Therefore whether stress is good or bad for you depends on one's ability to cope. It can not be avoided, because it is essential for growth and development, so remember that life without any stress becomes a meaningless vacuum terminating in a hollow whimper.

Aging itself constitutes a profound form of stress — but then, how lucky we are to be in a position to complain about it! There are innumerable negative factors; one, being able to accomplish only half as much in twice the time. Another factor is loneliness due to the loss of family and friends. Lord Byron expresses this in "Child Harold." "What is the worst of woes that wait on age? What stamps the wrinkle deeper on the brow? To view each loved one blotted from the page and be alone on earth as I am now."

A litany of other aggravations might consist of thin hair, impaired sight, diminished hearing acuity, lower dental plates that rattle, unsteadiness and a losing battle with the law of gravity, stiff, aching joints, poor urinary control and diminished vitality, to mention only a few. I can't remember the rest! No wonder the alarm system frequently fails to cope. But the good news is that with proper management it can cope. In a study at the Lankenau Department of Research on Aging in Philadelphia, the great majority of 100 superiorly aging individuals leading happy, positive lives had overcome all health, social or economic adverse experiences in early or middle life. This apparently enhanced their ability to cope so that they took the obstacles of aging in stride. Next month's chapter will go into more detail as to how this can be accomplished.

Be optimistic — remember: "The optimist believes we live in the best of all possible worlds; the pessimist is afraid this is true."

Book features interviews with 100 centenarians

By Carrie Figdor

SEATTLE (AP) — Why do some people live to be 100?

"I have nothing to do with this getting old," protested Mary Wallace, 106, a child of slaves in Georgia who raised white children as well as her own family of nine.

Here's the secret from Palmina Canovi, 101: "We're so old because we haven't died yet."

Author Jim Heynen and photographer Paul Boyer spent 1987 through 1989 traveling the United States and Canada to talk with centenarians about their lives.

The result is "One Hundred Over 100," a book of interviews with 100 North Americans in their second century of life.

Heynen, 49, got the idea for the book while jogging and thinking about aging. Boyer, 45, joined later to take the black-and-white portraits that accompany each brief interview.

"I think most people do not respond well to old people. ... Most people equate growing old with growing sickly," Heynen said in a joint interview with Boyer recently.

"May this book diminish your fear of aging," he wrote in the introduction.

AP LaserPhoto

Ruth Austin, 102 years old, is an unsung American heroine. She made an impact on Chicago life during her career in social work from 1914 through 1947. She is one of a 100 North Americans interviewed for "One Hundred Over 100," a book written by Jim Heynen and photographed by Paul Boyer.

THE 100 SUBJECTS are not a representative sample of the 54,000 Americans that the U.S. Census Bureau estimates will be at least 100 years old in 1990.

Heynen sent news releases to about 100 newspapers seeking nominees for the book. He also sought out minority centenarians.

The interviewees include 10 blacks, two Hispanics, three American Indians, and three Japanese-Americans. Some of the remaining whites were immigrants. Women outnumber men by 3-to-2.

Still, there is something of all of us in each of them, the authors found.

Some had survived cancer, bad hearts and life-threatening diseases. Many married several times and divorced. Some smoked and drank. Some broke all family records for longevity. Some were worrywarts. Some loved salt.

The authors also found that many of the men were Masons. Two bald men began growing their hair back after age 100.

THE LONGEST-LIVED group were single women without children, but common traits appeared to be no children or one child, a careful diet all their lives, and a lot of caring for others, both relatives and strangers, Heynen said.

"Many of these people have lived altruistic lives," Heynen said.

Many attributed their long lives to hard work, but that didn't always mean physical labor. Heynen and Boyer often took it as, "I was seldom bored."

David Kane, a 102-year-old painter whose portrait of Henry Clay Folger, founder of Standard Oil, hangs in the Folger Library in Washington, D.C., is the Greater Miami American Heart Association's leading door-to-door fundraiser. Kane has died since the book was published.

Rosa Mae Wolfe, who never married, was involved all her life in church work in Idaho and helped found Boise Bible College.

Kisa Iseri, 102, a Japanese immigrant in Ontario, Ore., is a busy gardener. She grew marijuana 20 years ago without knowing what it was, and her daughter used it to improve the flavor of sukiyaki.

About 40 of the interviewees were in nursing homes. Others lived with relatives, but some were still on their own.

Meeting the centenarians caused Heynen to stop smoking and drinking, and Boyer to give up coffee. They also learned to savor life more.

"Knowing you could die any moment gives the sense of living for the moment," Boyer said of the centenarians. "We didn't start imitating their lifestyles. Where we did change was in being at peace with the moment."

It's YOUR LIFE

Fulfill potential during retirement

By Steve Edwards

Retirement no longer limits activities to such pastimes as table games. Americans are living longer and healthier lives, and activities in retirement will reflect these changes. Retirement is becoming more gratifying.

Edwards

People have always worked, but industrialization of the workplace and a longer life expectancy have reduced the average percentage of lifetime spent working. In ancient times, work time took up more than 33 percent of a lifetime. By 1900, American males were working 24 percent of their lives. Today, the average citizen works less than 14 percent of his or her lifetime.

The average work week has dropped from 70 hours to 37. Play, rest and education time takes up almost as much time as work.

Once-rare leisure time is now common. Retirees can now expect to have decades of retirement.

But while retirement has become commonplace, most Americans don't know how to best utilize it. In fact, finding a new point of view about leisure time is a growing challenge.

In the average American's work-ethic background, leisure was thought of as the opposite of work — the opposite of being productive — which meant leisure was thought of as unproductive. Retirees, who were told they had worked hard and had earned their leisure time, received a mixed message because they felt leisure time was unproductive time.

But now, many seniors are learning to enjoy their leisure time. The ancient Greeks believed that leisure was time to be spent in personal growth, contemplation, self-expression and self-realization — the fulfillment of one's higher potentials. Work was only the necessary means of getting to leisure.

Many retirees are enjoying doing the things they didn't have time to do while they were young.

ger. Many enjoy an active lifestyle, running in triathlons or expanding their education or learning to rollerskate. In the past 20 years, social clubs, cultural activities and travel opportunities for retirees have increased.

Since retirement can be almost one-third of a person's life, a positive attitude toward leisure time is refreshing. Retirees, who have successfully completed their work life, should feel a sense of personal well-being and freedom as they fill their lives with productive, fulfilling and expressive activities.

Leisure has always been meant for fulfillment of one's higher potentials, and all retirees are encouraged to move in this direction.

'Real life poverty' affects millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The official U.S. government poverty line understates the number of Americans who live in poverty, a report by the Families USA Foundation says.

The report estimated that 45 million people live in "real life poverty" in the United States, significantly higher than the 32 million counted by the government.

The report is based on an analysis of 3,511 responses to four Gallup polls conducted between July and October 1989.

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices sank and stocks advanced for the second straight day in the absence of fresh shocks from the Persian Gulf.

The September contract for U.S. crude oil lost 29 cents to settle at $25.67 per 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Meanwhile, more big oil companies froze or trimmed gasoline prices, with some cutting nearly a nickel a gallon, amid public outcry over alleged price gouging following tensions in the Persian Gulf.

Texaco Inc., BP America Inc. and Conoco Inc. said trimmed gasoline prices from a penny to 4 cents a gallon. Those announcing temporary price freezes included Amoco, Chevron Corp., Unocal and Getty Petroleum Corp.

Lorenzo leaves

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Lorenzo announced Thursday he was getting out of the airline business. Lorenzo's Continental Airlines Holdings Inc. said he was selling most of his stake in the company, formerly known as Texas Air Corp., to Scandinavian Airlines System.

He also will quit as chairman and chief executive. Lorenzo, 50, said he will be replaced as chief executive by Hollis L. Harris, president of rival Delta Airlines.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance in U.S. trading Thursday after moving mostly lower in earlier dealings abroad.

The dollar's trading day began in Tokyo where the currency fell to 149.66 Japanese yen.

In London, sterling rose to $1.8720 from $1.8680.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's late quotes, included: 1.5965 German marks, up from 1.5920; 1.3435 Swiss francs, down from 1.3380; 5.3510 French francs, down from 5.3365; 1,168.50 Italian lire, up from 1,165.00; and 1.14695 Canadian dollars, down from 1.14785.

Higher degree ready for Basin

■ Jet-commuting professors will soon bring a master's program in petroleum engineering to the Permian Basin.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Preachers on horses once brought religion to many remote areas of Texas, now high-flying professors are bringing higher education to the oilpatch.

Thanks to a new concept in knowledge transfer based on the circuit-riding preacher and Southwest Airlines, petroleum engineers in the Permian Basin will soon have an opportunity to pursue a Master of Science degree in Petroleum Engineering.

"It will be the first time petroleum engineering has taught in this part of the oilpatch," says Tom Hyde Ph.D., a professor of engineering at the University of Texas Permian Basin. Hyde said the program would bring the finest minds in field of petroleum engineering to the Permian Basin, by flying visiting professors from the University of Texas at Austin to Midland for scheduled classes.

Professors, teaching such courses as well testing, enhanced recovery, environmental safety and reservoir engineering will fly into Midland in the afternoon, teach an evening class and return to Austin early the next morning. "I don't know of any other part of the country that has an arrangement like this," said Hyde.

Classes for the program begin in September with two courses: Natural Gas Reservoirs and Petrophysics. The following semester, however, the number of courses per semester will expand to four. Those who successfully complete the program will receive a Master of Science degree in Petroleum Engineering from the University of Texas Austin.

Williams vows to fight suit against Clajon

■ Clayton Williams says he won't settle a suit filed in April against him and Clajon Gas by 64 natural gas producers.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams said he has no intention of settling out of court a lawsuit filed against him and his former gas pipeline company by 64 natural gas producers.

The lawsuit, filed in April in state district court in San Antonio, alleges that Williams and Clajon Gas coerced natural gas producers in Lee and Burleson counties into cutting prices so that Clajon could boost its profit margins by 75 percent.

The lawsuit alleges that because of that move, Williams was able to sell Clajon Gas for a premium price, $230 million, to Wesray Capital Corp. of New Jersey.

Williams, in an interview published by The Dallas Morning News Thursday, termed the lawsuit blackmail.

"They are trying to make me settle out of court," he said. "I won't do it. I am going to tack them to the wall."

He declined to discuss the details of the lawsuit.

Analysts say the 1987 sale of Clajon Gas, one of Williams' most successful companies, helped him bail out of his oil drilling debt of $500 million.

Champlin Exploration Inc. of Enid, Okla., filed the lawsuit, on behalf of a group of natural gas producers.

Champlin was the operator of gas-producing wells. The other plaintiffs had working interests in the wells in the Giddings Field in East Texas. After being pulled out of the ground, the gas was then sold to Clajon.

Williams' Democratic opponent, state Treasurer Ann Richards, issued a statement blasting the oilman over the case. It said the lawsuit could cost utility customers in San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

"Once again, we find Clayton Williams manipulating his companies for his benefit at the expense of the taxpayers of Texas," said Ms. Richards' spokesman, Bill Cryer.

Wall Street veteran elected head of NYSE

By Stefan Fatsis

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange Thursday elected Wall Street veteran William H. Donaldson as chairman and chief executive officer, replacing retiring head John J. Phelan Jr. The exchange's board also expanded President Richard A. Grasso's duties to executive vice chairman. Both appointments take effect Jan. 1.

Donaldson, who first came to Wall Street 35 years ago, called the appointment "a tremendous homecoming."

The announcements came after a special board meeting to select a new leader for the nation's largest and the world's second-largest stock exchange.

Donaldson, 59, founded Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc. in 1959 with two college friends one year out of Harvard Business School. He was tabbed by a nine-member search panel appointed after Phelan in February announced plans to retire at year's end.

Grasso's additional responsibilities were described by people familiar with the selections as an inducement to keep him at the exchange. It was widely known that he had wanted the chairman's job.

Donaldson left his firm in the early 1970s to serve as an undersecretary of

He founded and still operates a money management and merchant banking firm, Donaldson Enterprises Inc. in 1980.

Isotrol considering stepped-up expansion

■ Isotrol Systems owner Steve Schwab faces a hard decision — whether to keep his business expansion plans slow, or accept a contract that would quadruple sales.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Steve Schwab is a cautious businessman, a believer in slow, steady growth and using his own capital. He doesn't believe in borrowing a lot of money.

Yet he wants to take advantage of every opportunity he has.

Which makes a decision on a contract he's been offered difficult. He is president and owner, with wife Laurie, of Isotrol Systems, which recently moved to Midland from Visalia, Calif. Isotrol manufactures and sells isolated power centers for surgery and delivery rooms and the headwalls of hospital beds.

A subsidiary, Isoduct, manufactures customized metal wireways used in high-rise buildings, commercial plants and laboratories.

Schwab has been offered a contract worth $27 billion that would require the hiring of a large number of employees, also require him to establish credit lines and borrow more money. He has to make a decision by the end of August.

He's weighing his options carefully. He's met with local officials to see what assistance they could provide, and he said he's meeting with state officials in Austin to see what help would be available from the state, because Isotrol is the only Texas firm in the running for this contract, and it could help both the Midland and state economies if he accepted it.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Funds' 'total return' calculations imperfect

By Bill Doyle

Q. "Total return" on a mutual fund supposedly tells an individual how well or how badly his investment in that fund fared over a period of time, assuming he reinvested all dividends and capital gains distributions to purchase additional shares. Usually, most of the positive or negative total return results from an increase or decrease in fund's per share value. The rest comes from reinvestments.

I feel this concept is deceptive because it does not take into account taxes the investor must pay on reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions. What is the investor's after-tax (net) return?

A. That depends on investors' income tax brackets and for which it is impossible to come up with a blanket answer because everyone does not pay tax at the same rate.

There now are three federal income tax brackets of 15, 28 and 33 percent. And that might change by the time the White House and Congress come up with a federal deficit reduction package. Besides that, most states and many cities levy income taxes at far from uniform rates.

There is no way to put all the different income tax rates into a formula to calculate an after-tax mutual fund total return figure.

Rather than call mutual fund total return calculations "deceptive," will you settle for "imperfect"? That method remains the generally accepted way of measuring the investment performance of mutual funds and comparing one fund against others.

Q. Recently, I invested $5,000 in a mutual fund and signed up for its reinvestment program. Now, I am shocked to learn I will have to pay income tax on the dividends and capital gains distributions I reinvest.

I have researched this carefully and know I won't even see those payments. They will be added to my mutual fund account to purchase additional full and fractional shares. Isn't this unfair?

A. There are many unfair things in this nation's Internal Revenue Code but that isn't one of them.

You say you won't "see" your reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions. Aw, but you will. Every time such a payment is made, you will receive a statement from the mutual fund showing the exact amount of the payment and the number of shares it purchased.

As far as the Internal Revenue Service is concerned, this will be just as if you took the dividend or capital gains distribution by check, deposited that check in your bank account and then wrote a check to buy more fund shares.

Q. I'm told that a person who has a mutual fund individual retirement account and who reinvests his dividends and capital gains distributions does not have to pay income tax on those payments. True or false?

A. True, of course. Earnings on IRAs and other tax-deferred retirement accounts remain free from income tax until withdrawn.

This should come as no surprise. All such earnings are tax-deferred. If you have your IRA in certificates of deposit, you don't pay tax on that CD interest until you take money out — usually after retirement.

Q. My husband and I are interested in tax-free income. He will be 70 soon and we would hate to invest unwisely. We are looking at a tax-free mutual fund that has been endorsed by a senior citizen organization.

Is it federally insured? Is there a risk in it?

A. No mutual funds are federally insured. There is risk in all mutual funds except money market mutual funds. Tax-free mutual funds such as you are considering invest in municipal bonds, whose prices can rise or fall in value — taking fund share values up or down.

You shouldn't even look at tax-free investments unless you are in the 28 or 33 percent federal income tax bracket.

Landry in Ring?

DALLAS (AP) — Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said he very much wants to induct former Cowboys coach Tom Landry, who was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame last week, into the club's Ring of Honor this year.

But Jones said the induction depends on Landry's schedule. It also will depend on Landry, who was fired by Jones when he purchased the club in February 1989. Landry coached the Cowboys for 29 years.

Mavericks mum

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks weren't saying Thursday whether they'd outbid the Utah Jazz for free agent Alex English.

Both Dallas newspapers said English, late of the Denver Nuggets, has agreed to a contract with the Mavericks.

"We're out of it," Scott Layden, Utah Jazz director of player personnel, said Wednesday. "We were outbid by Dallas."

Licenses here

AUSTIN (AP) — The new state hunting and fishing licenses are on sale at retail outlets and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department offices, with no change in cost this year.

Trivia Teaser

Friday's Question — Name the only native of New Mexico to be in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Thursday's Answer — Former Pittsburgh Pirate third baseman Pie Traynor received only 98 votes by the BBWAA in 1948, but was still elected to the Hall that year.

Course wins first round

■ Racial controversy took a back seat to Shoal Creek's weed-like rough in the first round of the 72nd PGA Championship Thursday.

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Give Thursday's first round of the 72nd PGA Championship to Shoal Creek not for its racial record, but for its rough.

Straying into it meant bogey at best. Staying out of it meant survival on a day when some of golf's most famous names saw their hopes buried in it.

Bobby Wadkins, a non-winner in 16 years on the PGA Tour, did just enough of the former to teach him the importance of the latter and finished with a 4-under-par 68 that was good for a one-stroke lead over Fred Couples and Mark O'Meara in the last of the year's Big Four championships.

Scott Verplank and Billy Mayfair were another shot back at 70, with Masters and British Open champion Nick Faldo and defending PGA champion Payne Stewart heading a large group at 71.

This PGA was marked by weeks of turmoil after the Shoal Creek founder vowed not to be pressured into accepting black members. Once the club relented and took an honorary black member, it was left to the course to generate the trouble, specifically the rough.

There, at least, Shoal Creek didn't disappoint.

"When you get it in the rough here, you're just hoping you can find your golf ball, never mind being able to hit it," Wadkins said.

He knows. He missed the fairway by a foot on the fourth hole, tromped into the deep, tangled bermuda rough and took a mighty swing.

"The marshal moved about 10 feet away, in even deeper rough, pointed down and said, 'Here it is again,'" Wadkins said.

He made double bogey on the hole, but came back from that unhappy adventure with a 31 on the back nine that, he said, "is as good as I can play."

"I learned not to get in the rough," Wadkins said. "In '84 and here is the worst I've seen in 16 years."

Not coincidentally, 1984 was the last time the PGA was played at Shoal Creek.

Davis tries hand at pros

■ Former Midland High and TCU standout Darrell Davis wants to put off a hoped-for criminal justice career in favor of a stint in professional football.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Most National Football League hopefuls have an alternate plan all mapped out in the event of a higher-up's decision to sever ties by way of the all-too-possible career-ending roster cut.

Darrell Davis definitely does. But before jumping into a criminal justice career that lacks three hours of higher education, Davis, the Midland High standout and TCU pass rusher, is seeking justice of another sort.

Davis, procured by the New York Jets in the 12th round of the 1990 NFL draft, wants a chance to punish the league's quarterbacks before tackling the problems of its drug offenders.

And helping to tip the scales in the Jets' decision on the league's 306th overall draftee could actually be his weight.

Davis, drafted as a linebacker, is being tried at defensive end despite his 249-pound, humidity-reduced frame.

"They want me to gain more weight," Davis admits. "But it's been more humid than I ever thought possible up here," he described the climate at the Jets' training facility on the campus of Hofstra University in New York. "There's nothing to compare this weather to."

"They're giving me a chance to rush the quarterback from the defensive line, and they're looking at me at outside linebacker," he said.

"I'm trying my best to keep my weight up and get stronger. If I do that I think I can handle it."

Certainly the Jets hope somebody can. New York slumped to the league's third worst record in 1989, 4-12. They did not beat a team with a winning record.

The Jets finished dead last in the NFL with a paltry 28 quarterback sacks, and their 411 points allowed was the second-worst effort among teams in the American Football Conference.

But one thing is certain, the Jets will field a young team this season, especially on defense.

New York's average NFL experience among its veteran defenders is a mere 3.6 years. Take away 12-year veteran defensive lineman Marty Lyons and the average drops to 3.3 years of experience per veteran. Coincidentally, the team's No. 2 elder on the starting defense is TCU product Kyle Clifton, an eighth-year linebacker.

Lions skate through porous Oiler defense

HOUSTON (AP) — Detroit's versatile scoring attack, including a 23-yard interception return by Terry Taylor and Mel Gray's 73-yard punt return, led the Lions to a 34-10 NFL exhibition victory over Houston Thursday night.

The Lions, who won their final five games last season, dominated the battle of the run-and-shoot offenses, taking a 24-7 halftime lead.

Detroit's defense mauled Oiler starter Warren Moon, who completed four of four passes for 57 yards but was sacked three times for losses totaling 24 yards in his brief playing time.

Houston's offense didn't get a first down until the final 34 seconds of the first quarter.

NFL

As a team, the Lions had eight sacks for 60 yards in losses, including three for Mark Brown and two for Michael Coffey.

Rodney Peete, who played the first half, completed 14 of 25 passes for 173 yards.

Peete threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Richard Johnson, Barry Sanders ran two yards for a touchdown and Taylor's interception return and Wilson Hoyle's 19-yard field goal provided the Lion's halftime margin.

Cowboys break camp; team California-bound

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys completed their first Texas training camp Thursday, with Coach Jimmy Johnson calling the fans "fantastic" and the workouts just what were needed to teach new players the Cowboy offense.

The Cowboys, who have been training in Austin since July 19, will fly to San Diego on Friday to open the exhibition season Saturday night against the Chargers.

The camp drew 97,647 for 36 practices, according to the team's count, including more than 2,000 for the final session in 94-degree heat.

Dallas trained in Thousand Oaks, Calif., for 27 years before owner Jerry Jones shifted summer camp to St. Edward's University, a 105-year-old Catholic school with an enrollment of just under 3,000.

"We really feel good about what's taken place here in Austin," Johnson said after practice. "I think a lot has been said about the camp itself and the people. And I'm going to keep on saying it — it's been fantastic the way we've been treated here and the way people have responded."

"Not just the Austin people, because I know a tremendous amount of fans came down from Dallas and from other parts of the country."

Johnson said with so many new players, especially on offense, the Cowboys needed "to get all those people thinking the same way and all on the same page — it was an important training camp — and I think we've got them going that way. I think they're all on the same page."

Also, he said, "I think we really have transformed this team from one lacking in speed to one I feel like can go out and compete speed-wise."

"I think we're a much faster football team."

Asked if any players had surprised him with their performances, Johnson listed three free agents — running backs Timmy Smith, formerly of Washington and San Diego, and Tommie Agee, who has played with Kansas City and Seattle; and receiver Rod Harris, who played last year with New Orleans.

"Those three had camps above expectations," Johnson said.

Defensively, Johnson said, rookie cornerbacks Kenneth Gant of Albany State and Stan Smagala of Notre Dame "performed above expectations," and veteran tackle Mark Whalen from UCLA "showed some things."

The only serious injury in camp, Johnson said, was to running back Keith Jones' knee.

The Cowboys will spend next week training at the University of California at San Diego, scrimmaging twice against the Chargers. Then they will fly to Los Angeles for their second pre-season game, Aug. 18, against the Raiders.

New Mexico lineman dies

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico defensive lineman Chris Cooper died of a rare muscular disease Thursday two days after he collapsed during a football workout consisting of an 850-yard run, Coach Mike Sheppard said.

The 270-pound, 6-foot-1 senior from Houston died at 4:59 p.m. Thursday at University Hospital of complications from rhabdomyolysis, a rare disease in which dying muscles secrete poisons that attack other organs in the body, Dr. Howard Levy said at a University Arena news conference.

Sheppard said football practice was halted Thursday with the news.

"The players were told of their team-mate's death on the field ... and were asked to take some time by themselves to go and grieve in their own way," Sheppard said.

He said Cooper had been an outstanding junior college football player, "an outstanding person first."

"I would suggest that Chris is the type of person that, if he wanted to do something and his body was telling him 'hold up just a second,' that he'd argue with his body. And I sense that might be, in layman's terms, what I saw happen," Sheppard said.

Levy said Cooper had been stable through the night and had shown improvement earlier Thursday.

1. Chlorophyll a (Chl a) is the primary photosynthetic pigment in most plants and algae. It is a green pigment that absorbs light energy in the blue and red regions of the visible spectrum. Chl a is essential for the light-dependent reactions of photosynthesis, where it converts light energy into chemical energy in the form of ATP and NADPH.

When you've only got 47 guys on the roster, if one or two get hurt you can get in trouble fast. It's kind of similar to TCU, where we had a lot of good players but couldn't keep them all healthy."

If Davis makes the Jet roster, he knows it will be one day at a time. He also knows the pink slip could come in an instant. Either way

"I feel good about the opportunity they (Jets) have given me," he

An effective Pittsburgh running attack set up three Gary Anderson field goals as the Steelers breezed to the win.

Anderson, who had missed a 46-yard field goal attempt in the first quarter and had a 27-yarder blocked later, hit a 47-yarder with 3:04 left and a 25-yarder as time expired to give Pittsburgh a 16-0 lead at intermission.

Competition stiff for Bears' job

Associated Press

Two competitions are going on in Platteville, Wis., the southwestern Wisconsin town where the Chicago Bears train. Othello is battling Iago and Mike Harbaugh is fighting Mike Tomczak.

Drama is not confined to the local Shakespeare festival. Harbaugh started in the Bears' 13-0 victory over Cleveland in last Saturday's Hall of Fame game and Tomczak starts Saturday night against Miami.

"I think to be a successful team, both of those kids are going to have to play and play well this year," Coach Mike Ditka said.

"The thing to do is not to make mistakes," Harbaugh said.

Tomczak started 11 games last year and Harbaugh five. Offensive coordinator Greg Landry, a former quarterback himself, said he knew what Harbaugh and Tomczak must feel like.

"As a player I was involved in that situation," he said. "It's frustrating for the guy who doesn't work out."

Tomczak, with the Bears since 1985, is unhappy having to share the spotlight each season, usually with the flamboyant Jim McMahon, traded to San Diego last August.

"I've been willing to accept that, but I'm not in favor of it," he said. "This is a profession where there's not much job security, and whatever security you do have you've got to bottle it up and go with it."

Broncos Coach Dan Reeves was hospitalized after he suffered chest pains

NFL Camps

Wednesday night Reeves is in good condition, his daughter, Laura, said.

Her father was taken to North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley when the problem occurred about 6 p.m. Wednesday. She said the family believes Reeves can receive better care in California.

"This morning, he is just fine. We have discovered blockages in arteries supplying blood to the heart," cardiologist Dr. Randall Marsh said.

Wade Phillips, the son of former NFL coach Bum Phillips, was named interim head coach.

Joe Montana negotiated one of the richest contracts in NFL history, agreeing during lunch to four-year deal worth about $13 million. Montana, 34 years old and entering his 12th season, said he hoped the contract wouldn't be his last.

"I hope I make it four more to make another one," he said. "But I might have a gray beard."

Montana will make approximately $4 million this season, $3.5 million in 1991, $3.0 million in 1992 and $2.5 million in 1993.

Cardinals

Running back Stump Mitchell is a... that Phoenix released him. He walked out of the Walkup Skydome in Flagstaff when it became apparent the Cardinals would not play him in a scrimmage against San Diego.

"Even after I walked out Saturday, Coach Bugel looked me in my face and promised I would be starting Saturday," Mitchell said.

"Everything I've been taught is to take a man at his word. I should have read into it a long time ago that he would not give me an opportunity."

Cowboys

Linebacker Jesse Solomon has told Dallas he wants to be traded. Solomon, fed up with his 18-day holdout and an unwillingness by the Cowboys to negotiate, gave the club's chief negotiator the message on Wednesday.

"Jesse Solomon wants the heck out of there. I don't fit their scheme. I don't fit their financial plans," Solomon said. "If I'm going to play the game of football, my future is somewhere else and I need to go find it."

Johnson predicts '92 win

TORONTO (AP) — Ben Johnson, given a second chance by the Canadian government, predicted Thursday he'll win the 100-meter gold medal for his country at the 1992 Barcelona Olympics.

"I'll win the gold medal for sure," the sprinter said at a news conference held on the driveway of his home. "I have to prove to myself all over again that I can do it without drugs."

Sports Minister Marcel Danis announced earlier that Johnson's lifetime ban from federal funding would remain in effect, but the government would leave the question of competitive eligibility to national sports federations.

Minutes after the Danis announcement, Athletics Canada president Paul Dupre said his organization was prepared to welcome Johnson back after his two-year suspension expires Sept. 24, provided he can meet team standards.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation suspended Johnson for two years after he tested positive for steroids at the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

Yanks wipe out outmanned South Koreans

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Things looked a lot different on Thursday for the U.S. basketball team — on both sides of the court. The United States routed South Korea 146-67, a far cry from the harried, overtime victory over Greece in Wednesday's opening game.

Granted, South Korea had no

More Sports, 8D

player on its roster over 6-foot-6 and the United States often had four players on the floor as tall or taller than that. But the U.S. team still looked impressive.

"We have more talent than South Korea and should win," U.S.

coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "But in winning today we played well. You can win and play poorly."

That was a reference to the 103-95 victory over Greece, a game that seemed long forgotten by the time the rout of South Korea had ended.

Alonzo Mourning had 29 points in less than 19 minutes to lead the United States, which shot 73 percent from the field and outbounded the South Koreans 54-17.

"You learn from games like this, and we learned a lot today," said Mourning, who was 11 of 14 from the field and blocked four shots. "The guys were hitting their shots and got their shooting eyes back. This could be a start for us."

The up-and-down U.S. team would clinch a berth in the quarterfinals if Spain beats Greece in Thursday's late game. Even if that doesn't happen, the United States can advance to the quarters by beating Spain on Friday.

In other action Thursday, Italy beat Australia 94-89.

Non-winners take first-round lead

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Cindy Figg-Currier and Nancy Harvey, without a tour victory between them, finished with a flourish Thursday to tie for the lead after one round of the LPGA Stratton Mountain Classic.

Figg-Currier leaped into the air after dropping a 25-foot eagle putt on the last hole for a 4-under 68.

About one hour later Harvey sank a 2-footer on the 18th for a birdie.

Amy Benz and Karen Davies finished at 69 and five others were tied at 70 over the 6,229-yard Stratton Mountain Country Club, still drying from six inches of rain this week.

Figg-Currier, winless in seven years on the tour, made the turn in 3-under without a bogey, and then covered the final nine holes with four bogeys, three birdies, one par and the eagle. At one under after 16 holes, she sank a 40-footer for a birdie on the 17th, and holed the eagle.

In contrast, Harvey turned in four birdies without a bogey to lead a tournament for the first time in two years on the tour. Harvey, a non-exempt player who did not make the cut in nine straight tournaments before the U.S. Open last month, only reached the Stratton event when several others withdrew.

"I was thrilled just to get here," Harvey said. "I really didn't think I would get in."

But by the final hole, she "sensed the leader board behind me" and then sank the putt.

"I kept it in play all day. I set myself up well," Harvey said. In fact, she thought she had legitimate tries for two or three more birdies.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Lasting success depends on your reining in some of your natural exuberance. In October, be much more practical in your work. Romance could contain both excitement and danger in November. Be discreet. A concerted effort to make new contacts this coming winter will pay off handsomely by spring. Employment opportunities abound next April. Polish your high-tech skills before summer rolls around.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: sausage king Jimmy Dean, singer Eddie Fisher, actress Rosanna Arquette, President Herbert Hoover.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look for ways to build financial security. Go over your bank statements. Any mistakes should be corrected immediately. Review insurance and pension plans. A better deal may be available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Any disagreements are apt to center on the right way to disburse funds. A compromise is advised. Questions of personal prestige take precedence now. Do not be afraid to toot your own horn.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Requests for favors and loans will probably be granted. Pay careful attention to detail to prevent costly mistakes. Sharing your aspirations with loved one brings you close.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Joint efforts to please higher-ups could fall short of the mark today. Concentrate on solo projects. Your mate or partner can be a tower of strength. Refrain from issuing an ultimatum.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your financial situation is affected by a stroke of good luck! A co-worker's pessimism will not dampen your spirits. Romance moves in a new direction. Water sports are favored this weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All low things to settle down before you take a stand on a work issue. Modify your plans if you feel you are being overconfident. A money situation will improve by evening. Curb spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put a big job aside and tackle those little ones that have been piling up. Your colleagues can speed your career rise. Show them what you can do! Group activities are favored tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial backing for a pet project is available. Someone at a distance could play a major role. Embrace the great outdoors with open arms this coming weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid taking any financial risks that involve a cash outlay. Luxury purchases could put you in the red. Relax at home. Spend more "quality time" with your loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Indecision could call a halt to your progress. Calm your nerves before making a final choice. Romance will take a turn for the better if your show more initiative.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid making any sudden moves. Step back and maintain your equilibrium. Going out of your way to be considerate will pay big dividends. Gradually widen your social circle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Launching new projects takes hard work and self-discipline. Fortunately, you will reap big financial benefits in the near future. Pay bills promptly. Romance responds to careful nurturing.

TODAY'S CHILDREN can be easily guided if approached in a positive manner. They are eager to help around the house and show respect for their teachers. Often shy with members of the opposite sex, these Leos can be brutally frank with their own gender. They guard their privacy zealously while asking others probing personal questions! They respond best to expressions of appreciation and are easily embarrassed by public criticism. These Leos make devoted spouses and parents, wanting only the best for their loved ones.

It's bad enough when you are dealt a yarborough and the opponents rack up slam against you. But it really hurts when you hold a reasonably good hand and they make a slam because you hold too much! Here's an example.

Once North had the values for a cue-bid in the enemy suit, there was no way South was going to stay out of slam. North-South got there via a fairly direct route. Incidentally, note that six spades, on the 4-4 fit, would have been a better contract as long as trumps were not 4-1. Even then declarer would have had good play.

West led the king of diamonds, and it did not take a genius to work out declarer's problem. The overall virtually marked West with the ace of clubs, so South was in danger of losing two club tricks. Since one discard would not help, declarer followed low from dummy and ruffed in hand. To bring home the slam, West would have to be trapped in an endplay.

Declarer ran all five of his trumps, discarding a club from dummy. Next came four rounds of spades; ending on the table. West was forced to hold onto queen and another diamond, otherwise both the ace and jack would be good, so he had to come down to a bare ace of clubs.

There was no way for declarer to go wrong. Dummy's club was led and West had no escape. With only the queen and another diamond left, West was forced to lead that suit. The finesse was marked, and 12 tricks were duly scored.

Bail lowered for Brando's son

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Bail for Christian Brando has been lowered to $2 million after a judge agreed with the lawyer for actor Marlon Brando's son that the previously set $10-million bond was excessive.

Prosecutors argued Thursday before Superior Court Judge David Perez in suburban Santa Monica that the younger Brando, charged with the murder of his sister Cheyenne's lover on May 16, had told his father he had wanted to flee and should not be allowed bail.

But Christian Brando's attorney, Robert Shapiro, contended that the $10-million bail was unreasonable because no bail bondsman would post such a high bail regardless of whether Marlon Brando could back it up with collateral.

Shapiro offered to use an electronic monitoring system on Christian Brando so that authorities would be assured that he would not flee, but Perez said that step was unnecessary.

Trial is set for Oct. 9.

CARL'S CORNER, Texas (AP) — Willie Nelson is organizing a concert at the famed Longhorn Ballroom in Dallas on Aug. 27 to help rebuild Carl's Corner, a landmark truck stop destroyed by fire this week, its owner said.

Carl Cornelius estimated his loss at $1,750,000 from the Monday night fire. Nelson, a native of nearby Abbott, held an Independence Day concert at Carl's Corner on July 4, 1987, that attracted about 8,000 fans.

"Lord, I need all the money I can get. I didn't have any insurance. But if I'd had insurance, I wouldn't have been in business five years ago, as expensive as it is," Cornelius said.

He said last week he'd rebuild if possible and noted that the planned supercollider would be nearby.

Joyce Thomas, an employee of Longhorn Ballroom in Dallas, confirmed Thursday that plans for the Aug. 27 benefit were proceeding.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush returned to the White House Thursday after 12 days apart from President Bush in Maine.

She brought the family's English springer spaniel, Millie, with her. The dog has been recovering from acute lead exposure after ingesting paint remover used in White House restoration work.

The first lady planned to head back to the family's oceanfront retreat in Kennebunkport Friday with President Bush, who is planning a 3½-week stay in Maine.

The White House said Thursday that Bush still intends to go on vacation, despite the ongoing crisis in Kuwait and his decision to send American troops, ships and warplanes to defend Saudi Arabia.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Weary Mel Gibson, squeezing his last ounce of energy for interviews promoting his new film "Air America," is taking a year off.

After his fourth movie without a break, the warrior has tired of the road.

"It gets to a point where your work suffers. I've got to go away and learn some new tricks. I've got to replenish my creative energy because I'm out of it," he said in an interview this week.

Gibson said he reached the burnout stage near the end of filming the fourth movie, "Hamlet," in which he co-stars with Glenn Close.

"Frankly, I didn't think I'd make it to the end of the movie. I simply ran out of gas, and when that happens it's a good idea to just go away for a while," said the star, who gained fame in "Road Warrior."

Gibson's other recent films include "Lethal Weapon 2" and "Bird on a Wire." He doesn't think the vacation will hurt his career.

"I don't pay much attention to that movie star stuff. And I don't pay much attention to that kind of the hill stuff, either," Gibson said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan says even he was taken aback by the $2 million the Japanese paid him to make two speeches, but he doesn't consider it improper.

"I didn't have a fee; it was their offer," the former president said in the Aug. 12 issue of Parade Magazine. "But I have to say this: Yes, it sounds a little out of line, even to me, that that much money was offered."

"But it wasn't cashing in on the presidency. If I'd been of a nature to cash in, I would have returned to the industry that I left," he said. "I'm quite sure that there would have been some healthy fees offered me if I agreed to play a part in the movies."

The 79-year-old Reagan said he plays golf once a week with actor friend Tom Selleck and has added four inches to his chest since leaving the White House.

He's also started going to church, saying he has "great faith in the man upstairs."

Rangers close in on ML record

Associated Press

Texas scored nine runs in the sixth inning on nine straight hits, one short of the major-league record, and Bobby Witt won his eighth consecutive decision as the Rangers beat the Cleveland Indians 13-5 Thursday night.

Four National League teams and two American League teams have had 10 straight hits, most recently Detroit against Baltimore on Sept. 20, 1983.

The nine hits equalled Texas' team record for one inning. In all, 11 straight Rangers — nine on hits and two on walks — reached safely in the sixth against three Cleveland pitchers. Walks do not break up a consecutive hits streak. Texas finished with 21 hits.

Ruben Sierra, whose 15-game hitting streak ended the previous night, had four hits for Texas, which has won nine of its last 13 games. Pete Incaviglia had a two-run homer in the second and a two-run single in the sixth.

Witt (11-8) is 8-0 in his last 10 starts, matching the 10-year-old club record of Danny Darwin. Witt struck out 10 while allowing three runs on five hits in seven innings.

Royals 5, White Sox 3
George Brett drove in three runs for Kansas City, dropping the White Sox four games behind Oakland in the American League West.

Kevin Appier (7-4) went 6 1/3 innings, allowed nine hits, struck out three and walked none as the Royals won for the fourth time in five games. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his first save.

Bill Pecota tripled off Adam Peterson (2-4) with one out in the Kansas City first and scored when Brett grounded out.

Kevin Seitzer singled to start the Royal third, took third on a one-out hit by Brett and scored on a single by Gerald Perry.

Tigers 5, Blue Jays 4
A three-run homer by Larry Sheets wiped out a two-run deficit and led an 11-hit Detroit attack.

With Detroit trailing 3-1, Sheets connected off Todd Stottlemyre in the sixth inning for the Tigers, who had lost four of their previous five games. The loss prevented the Blue Jays, who had won two in a row, from gaining a share of first place with Boston in the American League East.

Athletics 5, Orioles 2
Dave Henderson drove in three runs and Mike Moore became the fourth 10-game winner on the Oakland staff.

Moore (10-10) allowed six hits in 5 2/3 innings, struck out three and walked four. He joined Bob Welch (18-4), Dave Stewart (15-8) and Scott Sanderson (11-7) to form the only major league staff with four 10-game winners. Dennis Eckersley, the fifth Oakland pitcher, got three outs for his 37th save in 38 opportunities.

Henderson hit an RBI double in the first and a two-run homer in the sixth, his 19th home run of the season.

Yankees 1, Mariners 0
Tim Lary allowed two-hits in 8 1/3 innings to beat Matt Young, who gave up only three, and the Yankees won their fifth straight game.

Lary (6-14), 0-5 in June, allowed a double to Jeffrey Leonard in the second inning and an infield single to Harold Reynolds in the sixth. Lary struck out eight and walked four to lead the Yankees to their 10th victory in 13 games.

Lee Guetterman got the last two outs, retiring Ken Griffey Jr. on strikes and Alvin Davis on a grounder with two Mariners on base.

Mets slug out win over combative Phillies

Associated Press

The New York Mets, charged up by a wild fight in which Dwight Gooden, Darryl Strawberry and five others were ejected, rallied past the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 Thursday night.

The brawl began in the fifth inning with Philadelphia leading 3-1 when Gooden was hit by a pitch above the left knee from Pat Combs. Both benches and bullpens immediately emptied and twice fights broke out after order seemed to be restored. The entire melee lasted eight minutes and spilled all over the infield, and it was 20 minutes before play resumed.

Expos 7, Pirates 6
Montreal's Andres Galarraga scored from second base in the 10th inning on Mike Fitzgerald's bad-hop grounder when catcher Don Slaught didn't cover home plate.

The loss cut the Pirates' lead over the second-place New York Mets in the NL East to a half-game. The Mets beat Philadelphia 5-4 in New York.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 1
Ken Hill pitched eight strong innings and Lance Dickson lost in his first major-league appearance as St. Louis snapped the Cubs' five-game winning streak.

Hill (3-1) didn't allow a hit until Joe Girardi's single in the sixth and had a shutout until Jerome Walton's leadoff homer in the ninth, Walton's first home run in a year.

Hill gave up four hits, struck out five and walked one. Lee Smith finished the five-hitter for his 20th save in 23 opportunities.

Dodgers 10, Reds 3
Ramon Martinez won his sixth straight start and Los Angeles battered Jack Armstrong for five first-inning runs to crush the reeling Reds.

Martinez (15-4) scattered six hits in eight innings to remain unbeaten in his six starts since appearing in the All-Star game. He walked one and struck out 10 to raise his National League-leading strikeout total to 174. Jay Howell pitched the ninth.

Padres 7, Braves 0
Bruce Hurst scattered six hits and drove in the first run of his major league career in a five-run first inning for San Diego.

Hurst (7-8) struck out seven and walked two as he pitched his second shutout of the season and 17th of his career. The Padres won for the sixth time in eight games on their current road trip. It was Atlanta's 13th loss in 15 games.

U.S. denies charge Marines attempted to kill Liberian leader

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — A presidential spokesman said U.S. Marines fired from a helicopter at President Samuel Doe on the porch of his executive mansion Thursday in an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate him.

In Washington, the State Department denied the charge. Doe spokesman Selly Thompson, speaking in a radio telephone call with the British Broadcasting Corp., said a Doe adviser, former Justice Minister Isaac Nyapiu, was hit in the chest and neck and was hospitalized. The incident came as West African peacekeeping troops headed for a showdown with rebels, who battled Doe's troops and fought to within a mile of his mansion in a bid to take Monrovia before the African task force arrives. Rebels loyal to former bureaucrat Charles Taylor pushed into eastern Congo Town suburb, where they ransacked the Nigerian Embassy and attacked the Guinea Embassy. Thousands of Mandingo refugees at the Nigerian Embassy were forced into the streets, where battles raged. The Mandingos were hiding from rebels who killed their fellow tribespeople, accusing them of supporting Doe. In alleging the U.S. assassination attempt, Thompson asked the international community to pressure the United States to stop "excessive harassment" to remove Doe.

Kohl abandons push for all-German vote

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl dropped plans Thursday to advance all-German elections by six weeks, a major political defeat for the leader who until now had set the pace of German unification.

Kohl

Still uncertain, however, was whether formal unity would proceed on Oct. 14 apart from parliamentary elections, now set for Dec. 2. Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere had wanted to hold elections and declare unity the same day.

Kohl's decision followed a day-long parliamentary debate in which the opposition Social Democrats insisted they would not give him the two-thirds majority necessary for a constitutional change needed to move up elections.

In addition, the East German parliament failed Thursday to approve new electoral rules for an Oct. 14 election.

Also Thursday, Kohl said the cost of bailing out beleaguered East Germany is exceeding expectations.

Up until Thursday, Kohl had been able to set the pace of unity more or less according to his own plans to ensure continued control for his conservative coalition in the new Germany.

Interior Minister Wolfgang Schauble announced Kohl's change in position during a meeting of the "German Unity" committee of government ministers, according to participants who spoke later on condition of anonymity.

The West German Social Democrats welcomed abandonment of what they termed Kohl's and de Maiziere's "nonsensical" plan for elections and unity Oct. 14.

A spokesman for the East German Social Democrats said the party was "pleased to see Dec. 2 confirmed as the date for all-German elections."

"It is not an earlier election date but quick unity that creates the necessary framework... for secure investments," said Social Democrats spokesman Juergen Itzfeldt.

The Social Democrats demand unity first, then elections Dec. 2. West Germany has previously said that unity should not occur before the Sept. 12 meeting in Moscow of the four World War II allies and the two Germanys to wrap up the "two-plus-four" talks on international aspects of German unity.

The two Germanys are finishing work on a unification treaty that paves the way for the legal merger of the two countries. It is expected to be finished by late August or early September.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Armenia given time to disarm

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin has agreed to let Armenian authorities try to disarm thousands of militants in the republic and will not resort to sending in troops, the new president of Armenia said Thursday.

Levon Ter-Petrosyan also said it is time to "expand state sovereignty" of his republic, and he said he is ready to negotiate with neighboring Azerbaijan over the bitter dispute involving control of the territory of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Speaking at a news conference in Moscow, Ter-Petrosyan said he had "positive" talks with Soviet KGB and Interior Ministry chiefs Wednesday about thousands of Armenian National Army volunteers defying President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's order to turn in their weapons and disarm.

Gorbachev had threatened to send in Soviet Army and Interior Ministry troops to forcibly disarm militants if they did not turn in their weapons by Thursday.

Tanker, truck collide

MURCIA, Spain (AP) — A gasoline tanker truck collided with another truck Thursday, veered off a highway and burst into flames, killing eight people and injuring 12, police and radio reports said.

The truck smashed through a line of people waiting for a bus before crashing next to a residential building, Spanish National Radio reported. Most of the victims were waiting in the line, said a police official. He said 12 people were injured, seven of them seriously.

The police officer said the truck apparently lost its brakes and went out of control on Highway 301 heading south out of Murcia.

Staircase race held

MUELENEN, Switzerland (AP) — The world's longest staircase has six times as many steps as the Empire State Building and is nearly twice as long as its nearest rival in China. But it is virtually unknown, even in Switzerland.

In a bid to end its obscurity, local enthusiasts this week staged the first official race up the 11,674 steps of Mount Niesen, in the Swiss Alps.

Organizers say the "Niesentreppe" run will be an annual event, attracting the world's top racers in a test of stamina and skill up a hodgepodge of concrete, wooden and metal steps.

Early wedding serves as soldier's send-off

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Thursday was supposed to be the wedding day for Eddie Granado and Janie Valles.

But wedding bells rang two days early when Granado, a U.S. Army airborne soldier, got orders to head to Fort Bragg, N.C., on the double.

Granado was to be flown to Saudi Arabia as part of the U.S. forces dispatched there to guard against an invasion by Iraq.

Granado's family says the Brownsville man was on leave Tuesday when military officials from Fort Bragg telephoned at 7:30 a.m.

"We knew he was at South Padre Island, but we didn't know where, so one of his sisters went looking for him," the soldier's mother, Carolina Granado, told the Valley Morning Star on Wednesday.

"She found him at 10:30 a.m., and he called Fort Bragg. They told him to be back at the base by midnight," she said.

Mrs. Granado said the family began moving quickly to try to get the two 20-year-olds married before her son left.

"The priest was so nice, he talked with the kids and said he would perform the wedding. They got married at 2 p.m.," she said.

Mrs. Granado said the wedding was a spectacular, formal-dress event.

"It was a full Catholic wedding service. It was all like a dream, and there were 50 to 60 people there, even on such short notice," she said.

Mrs. Granado said that after the wedding, the priest blessed her son. Then, the couple and part of the entourage headed for Harlingen, where Granado caught an evening flight out of Valley International Airport.

"There Janie was, still in her wedding dress. People came up to her and said, 'Are you going to get married?' and the ticket people thought she was going to go with Eddie and were going to sell her a ticket, too," Mrs. Granado said.

Mrs. Granado said her son also had served a tour of duty last year in Panama.

Texas National Guard participating

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas National Guard personnel will be used to support the deployment of troops to Saudi Arabia, Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday.

Clements said he approved a Pentagon request to allow the participation of 11 personnel of the 136th Tactical Airlift Wing, based at Hensley Field in Grand Prairie.

"These troops volunteered to participate in activities supporting the movement of U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf to help the armed forces of Saudi Arabia enhance their defensive capabilities," Clements said.

Thousands of American combat troops took up defensive positions Thursday in the heart of Saudi Arabia's vital oil-producing province.

President Bush ordered the operation, saying he hoped to deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from sending his army into the kingdom, the world's largest oil exporter.

Iraq has amassed its forces on the border following its invasion of Kuwait last week.

Clements refused to disclose any details on the duration, location or missions of the 11 personnel.
