HIGHWAY CONTRACT 'SPLIT' DESCRIBED

ATTORNEY SAYS PARTNER ASKED TO ENTER DEAL

TELLS OF TRIP TO AUSTIN WHEN "REMUNERATION" PLAN WAS OFFERED

By the Associated Press
AUSTIN, Oct. 29.—Judge H. F. Weldon of Wichita Falls testified today before the house investigating committee about conversations with his former law partner, C. C. McDonald, in which he said McDonald mentioned division of highway contract profits three ways, one share to James E. Ferguson, one to McDonald and one to himself. He did not indicate whose idea the division was and said that he declined to enter into the proposed deal.

Says Jim Suggested Move
Weldon said that early in 1925, McDonald went to Austin and upon his return told him that Ferguson informed him he felt grateful for McDonald's work in political matters and that he felt he owed him something. McDonald told him Weldon said that Ferguson said he believed it could be worked out some way so that McDonald could be substantially repaid and suggested that he associate himself with some road company. The purpose of the former governor's conversation, Weldon explained, was to see that McDonald got road contract business.

McDonald asked Weldon about the Callahan Construction company, which was doing irrigation work west of Wichita Falls, as he knew some of the engineers, but he was informed by E. S. Heyster, then of the company, that the Callahan company was not interested in road building. Weldon said. In Dallas, later Heyster told Weldon, so the testimony went, that he was going to sell out his interest in the Callahan company and he would be interested in roads contracts but he did not believe that Ferguson would give him contracts because he had opposed him politically.

Had Larger Figures
"I had some figures in my mind, that about 4 cents a square yard could be made on the work but when McDonald returned from another conference with Governor Ferguson, I mean former Governor James E. Ferguson, the only governor I recognize—he had much larger figures in his mind," Weldon said. He explained that they had discussed profits, but could not remember whether he obtained his figures from Heyster or McDonald.

Weldon said "McDonald came back with much larger figures in his mind and said we ought to be able to make a great deal of money but we had to cut the earnings three ways, a third to me, a third to him and a third to James E. Ferguson and we had to agree to pay the income tax."

The witness said he told McDonald that he never split fees with anyone.

WILL ROGERS IS DONOR TO BAND

Wires $200 Donation Today To Assist Tech Musicians Of Fort Worth Trip

"Hokey for Will Rogers," was the cry of the Texas Tech band following receipt of a telegram today from Amos G. Carter of Fort Worth, president of the Tech Board of Regents, to John Young, manager of the band, stating that Will Rogers, the great humorist, will personally pay $200 to take the full eighty piece band to Fort Worth for the T. C. U. game Saturday. Earlier in the day, Carter wired $100 himself, followed by the $200 from Will Rogers which made it possible to take the band to Fort Worth.

Will Rogers is for the Matadors and says he is sorry he cannot be in Fort Worth to cheer them on to victory over T. C. U. Saturday. Following is the telegram received:

"Will Rogers is here and insisted on subscribing two hundred dollars to help pay for bringing the full eighty piece Texas Tech band to Fort Worth Saturday and says it is a pleasure to give Fort Worth a treat of this kind. On his arrival, they met him with a hick band and naturally he thinks Fort Worth is entitled to a glimpse of a real band. He further states that he is sorry he is not going to be able to be here and root for Freeland's Matadors on Saturday so bring them all."

(Signed) AMOS G. CARTER
Will Rogers, who is now touring Texas will be in Lubbock, Thursday, November 4, under the direction of the Morning Avalanche and Daily Journal.

By special arrangement with the Avalanche-Journal, the Tech band will make up a large part of the reception committee when Rogers arrives in Lubbock and in that way show their appreciation for the sportsmanship of the cowboy humorist.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP)—Wireless advices to the Tropical Radio company said the passenger liner Crocody of New York went aground in a dense fog today at South Pass near the mouth of the Mississippi river.

MUST FACE DUAL CHARGE, RESULT OF BIG RAMPAGE

BONDS SET AT $2,000 FOR ASSAULT AND $1,000 FOR DRUNKEN CHARGES

Grady Burch and Si A. Hamilton, two Lubbock young men arrested Sunday by members of the police department on charges of assault with intent to murder, were re-arrested Friday morning by members of sheriff's department and lodged in the county jail. The young men were given an examining trial Monday afternoon by Justice W. S. Clark, and their bonds, which guaranteed their appearance before the grand jury, were set at $2,000 each.

Two Indictments Returned
Thursday the grand jury investigated the case—examined a number of witnesses and then voted two indictments against each of the young men. One of the indictments charged them with assault with intent to murder, while the other charged them with unlawfully driving a automobile while intoxicated.

Friday morning they were re-arrested and carried before Judge Gordon B. McGuire, who is this week serving on the district court bench, and the judge set their bonds at $2,000 each for the assault with intent to murder case, and $1,000 for the offense of driving a car while intoxicated. The boys were immediately remanded to jail, but both expressed a desire to give bond.

Says Didn't Strike Man
Hamilton, who until recently was employed by a local drug firm, stated to a Journal reporter Thursday that he did not strike the aged filling station operator, though he witnessed the assault. Other witnesses hear out this statement, but say Hamilton aided Burch in that he refused to allow others to go to the aged man's rescue.

Both of the indicted men will likely be given trial of this term of court, it is thought.

George Machinery company, Dallas, and had drunk liquor taken from the closet. He said the room was rented for months on a stretch by Clark, though Clark did not live here.

Says Bought Tractor
"The only equipment bought by the highway department from Clark's company since I have been equipment engineer was one $6,000 tractor, and the stuff in the closet, as far as I know, was not used as a species of slush fund," Estes testified.

"When I went to the room, as I did several times, I obtained the key to the room from the hotel clerk in the lobby. Several times I went up the cupboard was bare."

EVERYBODY TRAVELS NOW

Just see what Mr. Huxley says: "People travel for the same reason that they collect works of art—because the best people do it."

With all respect to Mr. Huxley, I wish to asseverate that they do not. There never was born a child who did not have a love of travel and adventure in him. It develops as soon as he can use his little legs. He slides down the front steps and beats it to the corner the first chance he gets, and you may finally have to resort to punishment if you are unable to impress it on his mind in any other way that he must stay at home.

The human animal has to be disciplined into staying in one place. His inclinations inherited from his antediluvian ancestors is to roam, free, over the face of the earth. Besides, we love mystery and there is always mystery around a corner. People are not traveling now by the hundreds of thousands, nay millions, because they think it is fashionable. They are traveling because they love to travel.

It is no crime to travel. If one can afford the time and the money there is no more delightful pastime and elevating influence in the world. But it is a crime to travel and make oneself obnoxious to others all along the line. The very fact that travel is heavy and that other people are taking advantage of the times as well as ourselves, makes it more imperative that each sets out with a fair-and-square sporting mind, willing to take what he must and give what he may.

One unpleasant tourist can crowd the joy out of a golden October day for a countless number of people. He may be a road hog, a speaker who crowds every one off the highway, a hotel crank, a Pullman car nuisance—the first person invariably to annex a porter or a taxicab while the crowd waits a lot of things he may be.

Travel is like life. It is a case of live and let live with a sense of fairness toward the other person.

Several Robberies Mark Trail Of Men After Recent Escape

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 29.—Four convicts who escaped from the Harlem state prison farm near Here Thursday morning, apparently turned highwaymen in Houston, under cover of night and robbed six persons on the streets here. They secured about $50 in cash and took three diamond rings valued at $1,000 from a woman in a residence section.

The police threw out a drug net when reports of the robberies began to filter into the police station and at daybreak today had two suspects in custody.

Growing Bold.—Flushed by the success of their escape from the penitentiary, camp, the convicts are believed to have started a trail of hi-jacking which grew bolder as they eluded capture.

Police picked up their trail when Mrs. Roy Baker, reported she had been robbed of three diamond rings valued at $1,000 while enroute to a neighbor's house. She said a man walked up to her on the street, drew a pistol and said: "Now just keep on walking and don't say nothing." He commanded her to take off her rings and hand them to him. He also took her purse. Then he slowed down and ordered: "Just keep on walking straight and don't look back 'till you get a block away."

When Mrs. Baker did look back there was no sign of the man.

Rob Filling Station.—Later in the night, four unmasked men answering the description of the convicts drove into a filling station on North Main street. They not only refused to pay for ten gallons of gasoline but robbed the cash register of $11.50 as well.

About mid-night E. J. Schwarmer and a woman companion were held up when they stopped on the outskirts of Houston to fix a flat tire. Schwarmer handed over $4 in cash and a diamond pin which he valued at $25.

Later Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Metz were stopped by two men as they were driving about three miles from the city. One of the men jumped on the running board of the car with a pistol in his hand while the other robbed Metz of $29 in cash.

They secured about $50 in cash and took three diamond rings valued at $1,000 from a woman in a residence section.

The police threw out a drug net when reports of the robberies began to filter into the police station and at daybreak today had two suspects in custody.

Growing Bold.—Flushed by the success of their escape from the penitentiary, camp, the convicts are believed to have started a trail of hi-jacking which grew bolder as they eluded capture.

Police picked up their trail when Mrs. Roy Baker, reported she had been robbed of three diamond rings valued at $1,000 while enroute to a neighbor's house. She said a man walked up to her on the street, drew a pistol and said: "Now just keep on walking and don't say nothing." He commanded her to take off her rings and hand them to him. He also took her purse. Then he slowed down and ordered: "Just keep on walking straight and don't look back 'till you get a block away."

When Mrs. Baker did look back there was no sign of the man.

Rob Filling Station.—Later in the night, four unmasked men answering the description of the convicts drove into a filling station on North Main street. They not only refused to pay for ten gallons of gasoline but robbed the cash register of $11.50 as well.

About mid-night E. J. Schwarmer and a woman companion were held up when they stopped on the outskirts of Houston to fix a flat tire. Schwarmer handed over $4 in cash and a diamond pin which he valued at $25.

Later Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Metz were stopped by two men as they were driving about three miles from the city. One of the men jumped on the running board of the car with a pistol in his hand while the other robbed Metz of $29 in cash.

Wherein A Struggling "Tenderloin" Musician Wins A Footlight Princess And Lives Happily Ever Afterward

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—David Mannes believes in fairy tales.

He knows that a poor youth sometimes does with the hand of a princess and live with her happily ever after—for he himself has lived that good old story.

David Mannes is not a celebrated violinist and educator, conductor of the winter concerts of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, head of the famous David Mannes Music School, and one of New York City's most beloved musical philanthropists.

But he has not forgotten that he was once a poor and friendless youth, jousting against all the obstacles that New York offers to the unknown artist without resources—and that Clara Damrosch, a daughter of America's royal family of music, loved and married him.

Learned In Hard School

Years have passed since Mannes knew the sunny side of life in this big city—since he lived in a tiny apartment in the old Tenderloin, earning a meager living by playing his violin at tough dance halls, and at Hudson River excursion boats, where every trip meant at least one drunken fight, and murders were not infrequent.

But not enough years have slipped between to veil the struggle with romance. He still shudders at the thought of those early days, the brutality and sorrows of the scenes he witnessed as a child, the heart-breaking struggle for a musical education, and the hardships of physical frailty.

One of the great tragedies of his childhood turned out to be a blessing in the end. When he was five years old, David Mannes fell into a boiler of scalding water, and was so burned that for years he was not expected to live to grow up.

But because he was ill, his family protected him from the hardest demands of poverty, and let him spend his time in study and music lessons, until he had completely recovered his strength.

After the first years of playing round-about humbler New York, Mannes found a place in a theater orchestra.

He Got His Chance

One night, the leader was absent, and Mannes was told that he might conduct the orchestra that night. But at the last moment, someone else was given the honor, and to appease him, the manager of the theater asked him to play a violin solo between the acts. Here again, his lucky star reigned. For in a box that night sat Walter

Pro Football Offers Big Chance For College Star

BY ERNIE NEVERS
All-American Fullback, 1925
(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

When a college star ends his athletic career through graduation, his first thought is how he shall earn a livelihood.

The diamond and gridiron stars have by far the better possibilities to get the money.

For years, professional baseball has been a strong lure for college stars. More recently football has offered fancy inducements.

In my final article I will air my views on professional football, also touching slightly on baseball.

While I wouldn't for a minute recommend professional football as a career, yet I am strong for it as a foundation.

The game is far too strenuous for a player to last very long after he gets out of college. He might get away with it successfully for say three years, but after that it would get more difficult each year to keep up with the profession.

As a collegian, I showed enough stuff as a ball player to attract the attention of several major league baseball magnates. I signed with the St. Louis Browns and met with varying success.

From my short experience in the majors, one year spent in the American League, I would say that a college star able to make the grade in the big leagues would make no mistake in playing the game professionally.

Three years would give him a bank account that would enable him to take up a business career and weather some of the tough luck that usually besets every college man.

If an outstanding star like Collins or Sisler, he might continue in the game indefinitely, or until such a time as he could no longer deliver.

But, unless a college player is able to make the grade as a big leaguer, I would say the time spent in baseball is wasted.

The successful football star loves the game. He gets only three years of it at college. That doesn't quite satisfy his appetite for the sport.

Professional football offers him the opportunity of continuing the game for several years and incidentally makes it possible for him to realize handsomely on his gridiron ability.

I tell that I am conservative in saying that out of two years of professional football and one year of big league baseball, I have made more money than the average collegian with no athletic ability would be able to make in five, perhaps 10 years.

Success in business is measured by one's earning capacity. That is why I recommend professional football strongly as a good foundation. It gives one a working margin when he sets out to revolutionize the business world.

I think every college football star has the right to and should capitalize.

Retort Courtesy
Donnie Bush, former Detroit star, new Pirate manager thrown out of many a ball game during his big league career.

Therefore, getting the gate from an umpire is nothing out of the ordinary for Bush.

However, he hands the pain to Umpire Magerkuth of the American Association, for sending him on his way in a somewhat different manner.

According to Bush, as he rushed to the plate to dispute a decision, Magerkuth "knocked" him entirely, turned to the grandstand and disposed of him for the day thusly:

"Manager Bush will now broadcast then gracefully retire to the showers."

All of which he did.
Shocking Tunney
Now that Jack Sharkey has disposed of Harry Wills, we may shortly expect the big ballyhoo for a Tunney-Sharkey bout.

Such a meeting would bring together two fighters differing widely as to the use of the king's English.

Any reporter interviewing Tunney has failed in his purpose unless the champion makes him look up at least three new words. Rumor has it that Tunney developed his vocabulary pondering over crossword puzzles with a dictionary close at hand.

Sharkey, on the other hand, is very fond of descriptive adjectives, with a preference for the profane rather than the sporting. He cusses beautifully.

When asked to speak a few words to radio listeners, just before the start of the Wills bout, he is reported to have spoken thusly:

"Hello, folks! Sorry I must say goodby, but I have an engagement to knock 1-1 out of Harry Wills and I don't want to disappoint him."

Cobb And Speaker Adept With Guns
CODY, Wyo., Oct. 29. (AP)—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker have proved themselves as adept at handling big guns as big clubs in the major leagues.

The two American League managers returned here yesterday after almost a month spent in the wilds of North-western Wyoming. Each killed the state game bag limit in moose, elk, deer and mountain sheep.

They also exhibited several bear pelts.

During their hunting trip, they were nearly a hundred miles from the nearest telegraph or telephone communication and depended on a radio set in their camp for world's news reports.

Walker Signs For Bout With Flowers

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. Art Fletcher Signs As Coach With Yanks

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Arthur Fletcher, former manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, has signed as a coach with the New York Yankees, the club announced today.

The Yankees also announced the acquisition as scout of Gene McLean, manager of the Springfield, Mass., club of the Eastern League last year and a former major league pitcher.

Tunney Is Guest Of His "Buddies" At New York Feed

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Representatives of the army, navy and marines at last have had their chance to have Gene Tunney all to themselves and tell him just what they think of a fighting marine who is heavyweight champion of the world.

At the Hotel Commodore, last night 500 of his American Legion "buddies" gave Tunney a suit case and roared their approval when Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who made the presentation, declared him a man of fortitude and "a square shooter from the word go."

300 Amarillo Rooters Here For Grid Game

Three hundred football fans from Amarillo are in Lubbock today for the purpose of witnessing the clash between the Westerners and the Golden Standstomers which gives promise of being one of the best games of the season.

The visitors began arriving in Lubbock at an early hour today. Amarillo banners are to be seen all over the city. The pep squad has been on the job and it did its duty in the parade.

It will be remembered that the last game resulted in a score of 30 to 3, and the Westerners hope to walk off with similar honors today.

Leads Formidable Eleven

University of West Virginia, always rated among the country's leaders in football, promises to live up to past reputation this season.

Under coach Ira Rodgers and captain McHenry, the Mountaineers are cutting up as usual, Washington and Lee, which held Princeton to a 7-7 tie, was decisively defeated by West Virginia.

In its game with Georgetown, the West Virginians also upset the dope by winning 13-10, in a last minute rally. Eastern experts had made Georgetown a strong favorite.

WESTERNERS TO MEET AMARILLO THIS AFTERNOON

BATTLE FOR SUPREMACY IN PANHANDLE DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOLS

The Westerners and the Amarillo Golden Standstomers will meet here this afternoon on the Texas Tech gridiron to play out the Panhandle supremacy of the grid. Interest is being manifested in the game to a great extent. Some three hundred fans of Amarillo will journey to the South Plains for the game here today.

Both clubs have battled for the past few years and the Standies have had the bigger "end of the clashes. The game last season was played on the Amarillo gridiron with the score of 50 to 3. So for this season the record of the Westerners is far more better than that of the Standies; the Westerners have not lost a game and the Standies have lost two. Lubbock won from the Clovis high school club by a score of 4 to 0, while the Standies were defeated by the Clovis team by a count of 29 to 9. Comparative results indicate the Westerners the stronger eleven.

A good showing made by the "bull-fighters" against the Frogs will give them much roadwork to the conference entrance.

Mysterious Trunk Holds Spotlight In McPherson Case

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29. (AP)—A mysterious trunk, said to be the property of Kenneth G. The evangelist now awaits the decision of Municipal Judge Samuel Blake, who will determine next week whether she must stand a formal trial for bringing her kidnapping story before a grand jury.

The trunk, seized recently by the police in New York, is said to contain articles of women's wearing apparel bearing labels indicating they had been purchased here. It was located after having been traced across the continent at the instance of District Attorney Asa Keyes, who says it contains "important documentary evi-

CAMPUS REBELS

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE ERIC WATERS, young student radical, and DR. PETER DORN, astronomy professor, are rivals for the favor of JUDITH MARTIN, who is teaching her first year in Pendleton University.

MYRA ALDRICH, in love with Eric tries to prejudice Dorn against Judith by hinting of the night which Judith spent in a cabin, while Eric walked back to town for his car, after a raid in which Eric and Judith escaped from the roadhouse in which they were dining.

Eric takes Judith to dinner at his fraternity house, and afterwards on a moonlight picnic with EVE GERHART, fascinating town widow, WILL WETHERELL, student possum, and others.

Angered by Wetherell's attentions to Judith, Eric wanders off from the party. Eve Gerhart and the rest start down from the bluff, calling to Judith and Eric to follow.

A rough-looking man steps from between the trees. "Your friend Waters is drunk under a tree back there," he says.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

A cloud passed over the moon and darkness closed them. Judith stood for one frozen minute on the brink of the

At last the man spoke. "I'm Kitty Shea. Guess you can see me in the party tonight. But I came along to bring the liquor. I'm always a welcome visitor, I am. Say, you'd better get that young fool home somehow. Can you help me drag him down the hill? I've got a bus waiting at the top of it."

She laughed unpleasantly. "All right. But they're out of shot now."

It was probably true, for Eric and the others must be by now. Judith pulled herself together. "If you'll try to help me, I'll wait for you here," she said, more steadily.

She chuckled. "Thought maybe you'd have to help me get him up from that tree trunk he's twisted around. When she made no move to accompany him into the tree trunk, Judith ran to the fire, which she had been tinkling out."

The path which Eric's party had taken was quite black with mud. There was nothing to do but stand waiting for the omnibus black jowl and vulgar necktie to emerge from the trees.

After a time shuffling footsteps among the trees warned of her return, and she could dimly discern his figure. Eric hanging limply upon his arm. "Come along," he called to her and set out on the path leading away from the tree trunk.

They were forced to walk slowly, for Eric was a dead weight upon Shea, dragging his feet and taking a step only occasionally. Judith walked close behind, too nervous to speak.

At length they came out into the big pasture that lay beyond the Granville road. Here and there spots of dwarfed trees stood out against the sky, which was now radiant with moonlight. Shea laid his burden down and straightened his shoulders. "God!" he exclaimed. "Wouldn't think he was so heavy."

She spoke up anxiously. "Do you think you can carry him the rest of the way?"

"Sure thing. But I've got to rest a minute." He sat down beside Eric's prostrate figure. "Look here, kid, you seem to realize how lucky for you it was that I started out to help you home with him. What'd you have done there alone with him snoring drunk?"

"Perhaps he wouldn't have been drunk if I'd been alone," she said with emphasis.

Shea was untroubled by the thrust. He only laughed and said, with significant intonation, "Perhaps not." Judith shivered and pulled her coat close around her. "At" asked Shea. "A shot of this will warm you up." He pulled a whiskey bottle out of his pocket. Judith shook her head.

"Can't we be starting now?" she said. "It's getting very late." Shea grunted and rose to his feet. He had some trouble in dragging Eric to a standing position, and Judith was obliged to help.

Together they brought the unconscious man to a position in which he could be dragged on toward the road. They set off across the pasture, skirting the dwarf trees and making for the place where the road should be. At last they could see the moonlight glimmering on a stretch of white road beyond a fence. Judith breathed a sigh of relief and began to walk more rapidly. "Hi, there," called Shea. "What's the hurry? You can't go till I get there to drive the car, you know." She fell back again and walked beside him. She was helpless to defy him.

The automobile was a battered and mud-encrusted thing, with a missing door and two doors. Shea propped himself against the running board and stood puffing for breath. Judith was looking up and down the road, but no headlights were visible.

Shea observed her gaze and smiled sardonically in the moonlight. "He began to thrust Eric's feet into the doorless tonneau. Then he hoisted his body upon the back seat and propped his feet against the back of the front seat. When he had accomplished this, he turned to Judith. She took a step toward the back seat, but he laid his hand on her arm, and gave a little cry.

"No room for you back there," he said calmly. "You'll have to ride with me."

Shea did not demur. She crawled into the front seat and waited while Shea cranked the car. It took several attempts to turn the motor-over and he cursed volubly and noisily as he did so.

When the motor began to chug he brushed his hands on his trousers and lumbered toward the driver's seat. On the running board he paused a moment to light a cigarette. His red glow made his purplish face visible again. Judith shrank back.

The movement seemed to anger him, for with a snarling cluck he seated himself and grasped the wheel. Judith felt the shock of the starting but it was some seconds before she realized that the man was turning the car directly about in the wide road to head away from town.

"What are you doing?" she cried. But something else caused Shea to pause. A groan came from Eric's parted lips and he stirred heavily in the back seat. In a flash Shea and brought the car back into line and started for home. Judith sank back against the seat. After some moments the driver spoke. "Thought the other pike would be better driving and not much farther." But his words sounded forced.

The old car made good speed over the road, roaring at sleeping farms and over thunderous wooden bridges. They shot from billows into dark trees, mist-filled glows, where the frogs croaked, and out again into long stretches of level white road, where the car gathered speed noise.

When the first scattered houses of the town were in sight, Shea drew the car to a stop and turned to face Judith. "What'll we do with him?" he asked. "Take him to that house?"

Judith considered for a moment. "Yes," she said. "I'll take him home first and then we must hurry to the road. It is past one o'clock."

The houses of fraternity row were all quiet and dark as they raced down the street. In front of the Sigma Psi house Shea drew up without directions from Judith. He had evidently been there before. She glanced wonderingly at the man, but did not question him. He climbed out of the car and began the arduous task of awakening Eric.

"Hi, there, Waters, come in. You're home. Wake up!" Eric's head only wagged pathetically as Shea shook him and his limbs remained limp. Judith turned away from the sight with a grimace of disgust.

"Here he comes," said Shea, as the inert body stiffened and slipped from the running board to the sidewalk put an arm under Eric's and started up the walk with Judith waiting impatiently. Finally the front door of the house opened and she saw someone taking Eric out of his arms. The man turned back toward the car.

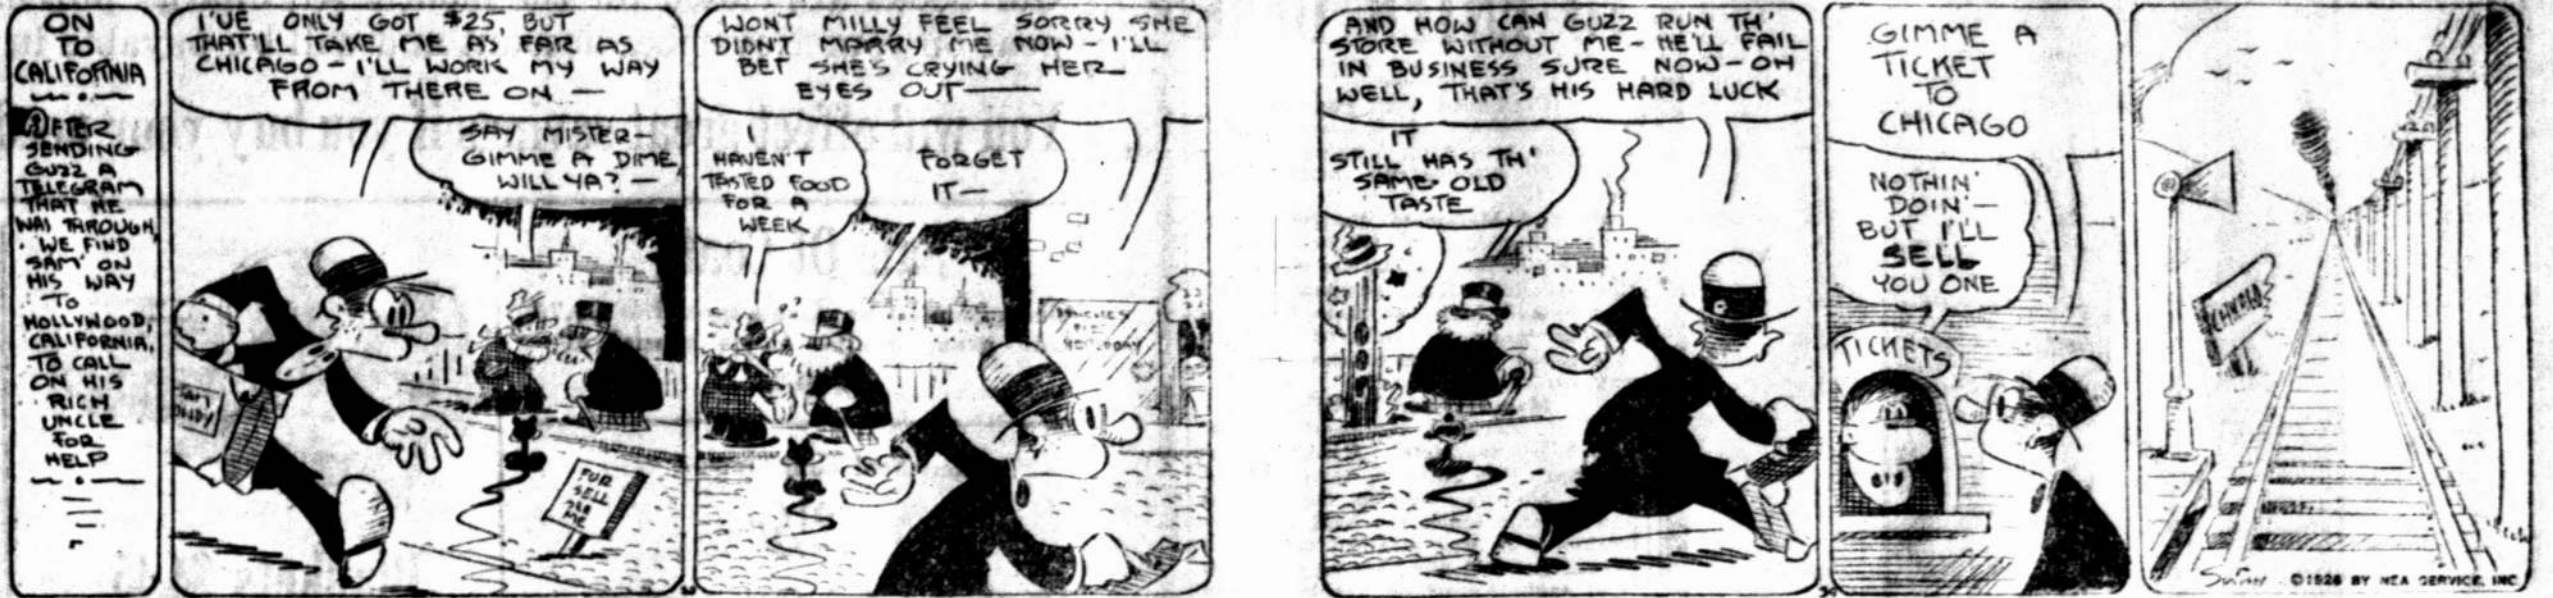

"Fine little job," he commented as he started the car. "Never saw Waters go under like that before." Judith maintained silence. She was sitting very straight on the edge of the seat.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 29 (AP)—A drizzling rain which started falling yesterday turned to snow overnight in Wyoming and parts of Colorado and continued unabated today. Weather forecasts, however, were that the storm would be of short duration.

Body of Youth Is Found On Island

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 29 (AP)—Authorities continued search today for a clue to the identity of the slayer of Joe Hays, 20, whose body was found yesterday on a sand bar near an island in the Mississippi river, his head battered and chest pierced by a bullet.

"Bootleggers murdered him and threw his body in the river," Jack Davis, prohibition agent, declared. "Joe had lots of enemies."

Hays once worked for a bootlegger, trading a still. Several months ago he appeared at the offices of the federal prohibition bureau here and announced he would give information against bootleggers. His tips resulted in a number of raids.

The informers' limbs were wrapped in barbed wire when his body was found and officials believed his slayers had attached weights to his body and had thrown it into the river after killing him.

Oklahoma Oil Man Offers $1,000,000 Loans On Cotton

(By The Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 29.—An offer to lend $1,000,000 without interest, and to underwrite a like sum to finance an organization to stabilize the Oklahoma cotton industry was presented here today to a group of government officials, state bankers and business men by Lew Wentz, Ponca City oil operator.

The plan of Mr. Wentz was approved at a conference here attended by Eugene Meyer, chairman of the cotton relief commission recently named by President Coolidge.

To Retire 400,000 Bales

Mr. Wentz proposed the formation of a corporation which will arrange for the retirement of 400,000 bales of Oklahoma cotton from the market until conditions improve sufficiently to dispose of the product at a profit to the producer.

He agreed to let the corporation have $1,000,000 of his funds, without any rate of interest or profit to himself, for a loaning period of a minimum of 18 months.

The other million would be subscribed by country banks.

In addition to working out the details of the Wentz proposal, the conference went on record as favoring a movement to reduce the state's cotton acreage 25 per cent in 1927.

HERRIN GANGS STILL HOLD OFF

Leader Of Shelton Faction Is Said To Be Visiting Sick Brother In Arkansas

(By The Associated Press)

MAHON, Ills., Oct. 29.—Three Southern Illinois counties today wondered what the next move would be in the latest demonstration of animosity between the Birger and Shelton factions, with reports current that Carl Shelton, one of the leaders, had gone to visit a sick brother in Arkansas and that another of the trio was ill at his home in East St. Louis.

The death of two members of the Birger gang, the burning of a deserted road house formerly frequented by the Birgerites, and expulsion of the Sheltonites from Franklin county by Sheriff Dorris and state's Attorney R. C. Martin were events that marked the trend of an anxious four days.

Threats Continue

Meanwhile, Charles Birger, former United States army cavalry man, continued with threats that his men were going to "get" the Sheltonites, while Carl Shelton was reported to have said that Birger's threats were the "nonsense of a mad man."

Speculation and rumors continued rife among residents of the three counties while four national guard officers resumed their tour of the "battle front" and their conferences with peace officers. Lieut. Col. R. W. Davis of Carbondale, who has been service in previous uprisings in the territory, last night declared, "we have no authority to make arrests here or to administer the law. We are here simply as observers for the adjutant general."

Mayor Enters Picture

Mayor Joe Adams of West City, reported to be the former headquarters of the Shelton gang, last night entered the picture in the role of a peacemaker, but with the threat that he also might become militant if necessary.

"I'm after peace," he declared. "I am trying to keep out of this trouble, but Birger can not drive me from the town I was born and raised in. He has forced me to send my family away but I will stay and guard my home."

The statement, inspired by a reported threat by Birger to "leave town within a week or get killed," brought about the assignment of two deputy sheriffs to guard the Adams home. Adams admitted the presence of Shelton gangsters at his home prior to their expulsion yesterday.

James Rankin Dow, Avalanche-Journal sports editor, will be on the sidelines and C. W. Ratliff, a member of the Avalanche and Journal editorial staffs who is also president of the Texa student association, will also cover the trip for the papers.

BODY OF YOUTH IS FOUND ON ISLAND

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 29 (AP)—Authorities continued search today for a clue to the identity of the slayer of Joe Hays, 20, whose body was found yesterday on a sand bar near an island in the Mississippi river, his head battered and chest pierced by a bullet.

"Bootleggers murdered him and threw his body in the river," Jack Davis, prohibition agent, declared. "Joe had lots of enemies."

Hays once worked for a bootlegger, trading a still. Several months ago he appeared at the offices of the federal prohibition bureau here and announced he would give information against bootleggers. His tips resulted in a number of raids.

The informers' limbs were wrapped in barbed wire when his body was found and officials believed his slayers had attached weights to his body and had thrown it into the river after killing him.

SAINT AND SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

COPYRIGHT 1925 NEA

By four o'clock that Saturday Faith realized the thoroughness with which Joy had played town crier. Neighbors for blocks up and down Myrtle street—neighbors who had long since grown weary of Mrs. Lane's recital of her symptoms and ailments and had ceased to call—came singly and in groups of two and three, ostensibly to pay a neighborly visit, but in reality to confirm the amazing report that the Myrtle street flapper beauty was engaged to be married to a rich old man, nearly four times her age.

The austere Miss Peabody, principal of Joy's school, had been but the vanguard of the curious. Old Mrs. Talbot, who lived next door on the left, and who had been nursing a grudge against Mrs. Lane for more than two years, arrived first, rustling and amiable in the black silk she reserved for weddings, funerals and church services.

"How's your Ma, Faith? I declare, time does fly! I been tryin' to get over for a month o' Sundays, but something always comes up to keep me home. I brought her a jar o' my new piecilli that I put up Wednesday. I always think of you Ma when I put up piecilli. Poor thing! She taught me how to make it, but I guess she won't put up any more herself."

Mrs. Asbell and Mrs. Purdy arrived before Mrs. Talbot had finished her greetings. Faith accepted their gifts of grape jelly and blueberry jam for the invalid with embarrassed thanks, then hurried away to tell her mother the astonishing news. It seemed a shame to arouse her from her deep afternoon sleep.

"Joy's been tattling at school and all up and down the street," Faith whispered breathlessly, as her mother stared at her in bewilderment. "How in the world am I going to get all my Sunday work done? Do you feel like tackling them, Mother? They're all swelled up with curiosity."

"Well, Cherry's been raised on Myrtle street, and I don't see nothin' out of the way in our old neighbors takin' an interest in her bein' engaged to get married. Are they all dressed up? My land! I ain't got a thing to wear! I guess I'll put on that blue dotted foulard. Just hand me my new shoes, Faith. They pinch my feet something terrible, but—oh, Lord! There's a runner in the only decent pair of black silk stockings I got to my name! Just catch it up for me, Faith. There's a needle and black thread stuck in the end of that dresser scarf."

Ten minutes later, when Mrs. Lane, puffing from her exertions but her broad red face abeam with pleasure and welcome waddled her slow way into the living room, she found five neighbors instead of three, Mrs. Parsons and Mrs. Elvins having arrived while Faith was assisting her mother to dress.

"Just thought we'd drop in and see how you are, Martha," Mrs. Asbell spoke for herself and Mrs. Purdy. "I'd been fidgetin' up and thought this must be your birthday—remember that surprise party we gave you when you first moved to Myrtle street? Let's see—that must be ten—no, eleven years ago! Lordy, but time does fly!"

"My birthday ain't till the first of November, but I must say you come pretty close to it," Mrs. Lane was deeply gratified. "And here Faith thought all you girls had come to ask about Cherry. Eleven years! It don't seem possible we been here that long. But I guess you're right. We bought this house in the fall of '11, and here it is 1926 already. Cherry was just a baby, about as old as Joy is now. And now she's goin' on nineteen and all grown-up—in her own estimation, and thinkin' about gettin' married."

"Married!" Mrs. Purdy exclaimed, with an admirable affectation of surprise. "Well, I can't hardly say an I'm surprised. The Belle of Myrtle street, that's what we call her. And boys as thick as flies about her since she was fourteen years old. Who's the lucky young fellow, Martha?"

The five visiting neighbors exchanged glances of sly amusement, which made Faith, hesitating awkwardly in the doorway, flush with anger.

"I guess Cherry's kinda fed up on boys, as the sayin' is now," Mrs. Lane smoothed the lace fichu on her vast bosom with hands that trembled slightly. "She's doin' real well for herself, and I guess all us older girls—her troubled eyes shifted from one sharp eyed, middle aged face to another, as if praying for understanding, "know what it means to carry poor men that talk big and mean well, but tie us to the wash tub and kitchen stove."

"I married for love, and if I had it to do all over again, I'd marry Hose Asbell, money or no money," Mrs. Asbell interrupted tartly. "But it's real nice for Cherry if she's managed to fall in love with a rich young man. Seems like I've seen that Prutt boy hangin' around considerable lately. Well, the Lincoln Prutts have certainly got the dough—"

"Faith," Mrs. Lane looked over her shoulder at her daughter, with desperate, haunted eyes. "Supposin' you fix up a little snack for the ladies. Some of your raisin rocks, and some homemade bread sandwiches, and some hot tea. You can use some of that Chinese tea George Prutt brought me. Oh, no, girls, it won't be a night of trouble! Faith always bakes up a big batch of bread and cakes and cookies and pies on Saturdays."

She waited until Faith had gone, reluctantly, rebelliously, to the kitchen, then she made her difficult confession. "I guess maybe it won't be such a surprise to some of you, seem as how Joy's been spreadin' the news at school, but Cherry's goin' to marry Mr. 'Chun—you know—Mr. Ralph Chun, the biggest criminal lawyer in the state."

When Faith brought in the "little snack" on an enormous painted tin tray, she found her mother the center of a close drawn circle of hypocritically congratulating neighbors, who now numbered seven.

"Are you goin' to make him call you 'Mama, Martha'?" old Mrs. Talbot cackled out suddenly in the midst of the polite babble.

"When's the wedding going to be, Martha?" Alma Purdy demanded, her small black eyes greedy with interest. "Thanksgiving day?" Mrs. Lane's voice trembled as if she sensed for the first time the enormity of the thing to which she had given her consent. The eyes of seven women betrayed their scorn of her, the unholy glee with which they tasted the delicious thought of the popular and beautiful girl, who had scorned Myrtle street, yoked to decaying old age.

The shrilling of the telephone took Faith away from the painful contemplation of her mother's bewilderment. "It's for you, Mother," she returned in a few moments. "Some woman insists on speaking to you. She wouldn't give me the message."

When Mrs. Lane left, seven women drew together in a tight, cruel circle and in the center of the circle the reputation of Cherry Lane was tossed and bandied and snatched at and torn, until it burst like an overinflated, glittering toy balloon.

Lubbock Is Asked To Boat Ceremony

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce was yesterday extended an invitation to be represented at the christening of the Southern Steamship company's new steamer, The West Texas, at Houston on November 6. It was announced today. Due to the distance from Lubbock the invitation probably will not be accepted.

Miss Frances Long, of Abilene, has been chosen to break the bottle over the bow of the new ship, which will be the largest of the Southern line. Mineral water, however, will supplant champagne in the ceremonial, which is under the direction of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Negress Makes Cops Hustle To Jail Her

Showing surprising ability and forcing her official pursuers to run in relays to catch her, a negress, giving the name Viola Jameson, was yesterday lodged in the county jail. Retailers Back Of Lubbock High Team

When Lubbock high school's scrapping Westerners lined up against Amarillo's Golden Sanderstorm at Tesh park this afternoon there were many people on the sidelines pulling for the locals who would not have been able to be there were it not for action of the Retail Merchants association.

Members of the high school athletic association appealed to the organization to order all members to close their doors between three and five o'clock this afternoon but when that was found to be impracticable it was decided that every merchant would permit as many of his employees as possible to attend the game.

Third Autopsy Of Mills Body Seeks To Determine If Tongue Cut Out

(By The Associated Press)
SOMERVILLE, N. J., Oct. 29.—Determination whether the tongue of Mrs. Eleanor Mills was cut out after she was slain with the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, engaged the attention of investigators today.

Mrs. Mills' body was removed yesterday from its four year old grave in order that an autopsy might be performed to gather evidence for the trial next week of the slain clergyman's widow and her two brothers, who are accused of the double murder.

Throat Slashed
Dr. Otto Schulze of the New York district attorney's office, discovered at an autopsy four years ago that the slain singer's throat had been slashed. Recent rumors have it that her tongue was also cut out. The third autopsy was ordered by the state to learn if this were so. Dr. Schulze has charge of it also.

"I can't say just now whether the tongue was cut out or not," he declared. "There must be an analysis to determine that definitely, but it seems very likely that it may have been done. I don't know, however, and will not know until I complete an analysis of organs which I am taking to laboratories in New York."

Three Bullet Wounds
Dr. Schulze said he found one bullet wound in the forehead, one in the right cheek near the eye and one in the right temple. He saw the slashed throat and a knife cut on her chest.

Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, has submitted an order to the district attorney of New York county for the exhumation of Dr. Hall's body, which is buried in Brooklyn. The order requires the signature of a supreme court justice to be honored.

Mrs. Mills' body was returned to the grave shortly after 8 o'clock this morning in the presence of a small group of newspaper men and authorities.

A PROBLEM FOR US ALL

A Cincinnati girl, 16, eloped with a 19-year-old boy the other day. The two were married, and came back to face the world together in all their youthful, helpless ignorance.

The girl's mother, while refusing to interfere with the match once it was accomplished, was bitter against the public schools.

If the schools, she said, would devote less time to "eye and ear" stuff and more time to teaching children and young people how to live, her daughter would have realized that she wasn't ready for marriage yet.

Perhaps she's wrong in placing all the blame on the schools. It's possible that parents, too, have a responsibility there. But her main point is correct. Our children aren't being taught how to live.

To be sure, imparting that bit of information is rather a large task. Perhaps there are very few of us who really know how to live ourselves. But it's something that must be taught. You can always learn it by bitter experience, but that's a hard way, and your life is apt to be just about over by the time you've learned.

To learn how to live is to learn the meaning of life, how to reach the world, how to bring reality to those shifting, subtle visions that youth engenders. How to make life something rich and full and complete, instead of letting it become a mere process of eating and sleeping and working and getting to learn that life may be joyous and exuberant instead of cramped and narrow.

We all know that life was meant to be beautiful, free and brimming with zest. Yet somehow it so often fails to become any of those things. And the fault—nearly always—lies in the things that the older generation chooses to teach to the younger.

We were stunted against in our youth, and we in turn are sinning against our children. We don't really mean to, and we try to teach them the best we can.

Maybe the remedy is simpler than it seems. Maybe it's the old-fashioned, old-fashioned way of teaching. Maybe it's the old-fashioned, old-fashioned way of teaching.

WASHINGTON AND HUGHES Rupert Hughes, in a biography, pictures George Washington as a young man unlucky at cards, love, war and politics. The father of his country was "a swell" from his 16th year on, Hughes writes, and no youths of such fame took his puppy loves more seriously than Washington.

The only lesson we can draw from Hughes' picture of the father of his country is that we are all human, after all. We had always looked upon George Washington as a time to weep, and a time to dance.—Ecl. 3:1, 4:1. I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.—Shakespeare.

LINES FROM THE Old Masters

Does the road wind uphill all the way? Yes, to the very end. Will the day's journey take the whole long day? From morn to night, my friend. But is there for the night a resting-place? A roof for when the slow dark hours begin. May not the darkness hide it from my face? You cannot miss that inn. Shall I meet other wayfarers at night? Those who have gone before. Then must I knock, or call when just in sight? They will not keep you standing at that door. Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak? Of labor you shall find the sum. Will there be beds for me and all who seek? Yea, beds for all who come. —C. G. Rossetti: Uphill.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING UP and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—It is one of the many paradoxes of the city that New York, which tears down its landmarks and erases without hesitation its historic spots, also celebrates, upon the slightest provocation, the birth-dates of its many traditions.

Thus, passing along one street I note the historic "Spanish flats" surmounting the wrecking crew, while Broadway makes ready for a parade, and the waterfront flies banners in celebration of the completion of the Erie Canal by which the Hudson and Buffalo became linked and water commerce to the west was opened to the port of Manhattan.

In their time, the "Spanish flats" were the last word in American luxury. New York always has set the luxury pace, even back in 1882 when the Spanish consul to New York erected the first fashionable flat dwellings America had seen. They were in the upper fifties overlooking Central Park and were built at the then colossal cost of $1,900,000. Today the land on which they stand is worth several times that amount.

Just back of Greenwich Village a little city of 20,000 persons or more is thrust overnight into the streets, while business places and dwelling places are torn down to make way for a subway extension.

Whole blocks will vanish within a few weeks and one of the most colorful sections of "little Italy" will pass that subway trains may roar and rattling away below the ground.

For weeks the streets have been vivified with chatter as the former children of Naples and Sicily protested and frantically went about in search of new tenements. Pushcarts have crowded the street, piled high with furniture, babies and provisions.

The activities have been communal. Family groups unite to help another group get moved. Four and five families are moved during the night, after Giuseppe has finished his day's toil. None can afford a mover's van. The cost of a single hour is more than most of the pushcart drivers make in a day.

Merchants go about with forlorn looks upon their faces. Businesses that have taken them years to build are wiped out as though by fire. There's nothing to do about it but wring their hands and look about for a way to start all over.

But Manhattan is too big, too busy to think about such things. The cry for speed and service is heard above all other sounds of the city. Twenty thousand people—a very comfortably sized little city—must start life anew, just as though a hurricane had swept across their path and by some miracle, left lives and possessions intact.

GILBERT SWAN.

A THOUGHT

To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven: a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance.—Ecl. 3:1, 4:1. I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.—Shakespeare.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

KEEP YOUR SWORD OUT OF YOUR MOUTH IF YOU GET CHANCE TO DINE WITH QUEEN

BY CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—If Queen Marie of Rumania comes to your town or her son, Prince Nicholas, or Princess Ileana, or all three, or any combination of them, and you see them, don't forget the rules laid down by Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright for your behavior in the presence of royalty.

Wright is the government's super-authority on all such problems, its social court of last resort, its final arbiter and questions of etiquette, national and international.

Pay heed to his dictum unless you want to be regarded as a hoodlum by one of the few post-war princesses left on the job in Europe—that is to say, in Europe except when they are visiting on this side of the water.

You won't be slammed in jail if you make any bad breaks, short of bomb throwing, as you might be in Europe, but you don't want to be considered a roughneck, do you?

While royalty is in sight nobody toward royalty. After royalty has thrned the corner or faded over the horizon or made its exit otherwise, then you can go about your business headfirst, as usual.

Royalty can leave you no royalty. Royalty can't be given away, and you must do it "savant" bowing, or edgewise with your head turned over your shoulder, facing royalty, or somehow so that you don't turn your back on it and walk off, as if royalty were of no consequence.

As for raiment, wear the fullest kind of full dress, depending on the hour.

In the daytime—for a man—so-called morning clothes—cutaway, gray striped pants, spats, patent leathers, high silk hat, gloves and a walking stick, preferably.

For a woman, afternoon dress—whatever that is for a woman. For a man, take your hat off, of course, even if you're bald and a cold wind's blowing. For a woman, keep your hat on, though its indoors and you'd like to get rid of it.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

European Starling AN ALIEN USURPER IN OUR MIDST

BY ARTHUR N. PACK President, American Nature Ass'n About the year 1890 some well-meaning misguided person, with that combination of genius and indifference to consequences which characterize those who persist in mixing brooms, brought a few starlings to Brooklyn from Europe.

Nevertheless the starlings were turned loose, and, like the sparrows and some other of our immigrants, found the land good. So they waxed fat and multiplied, and, as the time went by, found themselves crowded in the section about Brooklyn bridge.

These millions of starlings have not occupied the country without competing with, and in many cases defeating, our own native species. Our woodpeckers and other native nesting birds have been the chief sufferers, and many have been dispossessed of their hard-earned homes by these aliens.

Helpful Health Hints

HEADS UP, CHIN IN!

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

A healthful child stands correctly in the upright position the head is erect, the chin held in and the shoulders even. The shoulder blades will be flat against the back and not projecting in a winged type, such as is associated with round shoulders and improper development.

Normally the back or spine has two curves which should not, however, be exaggerated. The abdomen, when the child stands erect, should not extend in front of the line of the chest.

Infrequent Condition This condition is infrequent, particularly in healthful children of from two to four years of age. In its development two factors seem to be important. The abdominal muscles are usually not well developed early in life, and the cure of the back is accentuated.

Furthermore, the liver, stomach and intestines are much larger at birth and early in life in relation to the rest of the body than they are later in life.

As the body grows and these factors change, the abdomen will tend to become less prominent. A prominent abdomen, persisting beyond the age of six or seven years, may be associated with internal derangement or faulty posture.

Most schools nowadays have exercise periods or calisthenics. Teachers, during this period, may well emphasize posture as a portion of the training.

As the abdominal muscles are drawn in and the back muscles contracted, the abdomen will assume its proper form.

Correct Position When the head is thrown back and the chin held in, this movement helps to fix the upper part of the back in correct position. Constant practice of these exercises will serve to maintain a graceful, easy and natural carriage of the body.

It is a significant observation that a child who stands well and carries its body in the manner mentioned feels more energetic and healthful than one who stands in the round-shouldered and relaxed position.

Some physicians are convinced that different modifications of the disposition are the result of nervous stimulation coming from organs held in proper or improper positions.

lovers of football. Centenary now being under probation. These same fans, many of them, wonder if there isn't a possibility within the next few years of Texas Tech becoming a member of this conference. There's no good reason why she can't do it. She has the material and will produce the teams. Northwest Texas fans would come from miles around to see the games on the Tech field.

Why not boost for Tech as a member of the Southwestern Conference?—Plainview Herald.

The Herald and the Journal, together with all other supporters of Texas Tech have the same idea concerning the Mt. Stators and while we're on the subject the people of Lubbock should appreciate the kind of support for Texas Tech that is being offered by the Plainview paper. All we West Texans can work together for Texas Tech and for everything else of benefit to the country and when we do we can work wonders.

NO WORRY ABOUT PANHANDLE STUDENTS There has been much discussion recently about the young people in colleges, their preference of academic studies, their drinking, campus flirtations and so-called fast life in general. The charge has been made that going to college today is a lark for the majority of the students, an opportunity for a general good time for four or five years, without the restraint of parental influence.

The charge will not stand up among Panhandle students. Sons and daughters of Amarillo, and Panhandle families still have that desire for training, for honest-to-goodness education that will make of them men and women to go out into the world prepared for success. Take the case of the West Texas State Teachers at Canyon, whose classes are made up principally of West Texas students.

One-third of all students at Canyon are earning their way through school. Needless to say they are not attending college as a lark. Deeper motives prompted them to enroll. Whenever students wash dishes, mow lawns, work at nights as clerks and do other odd jobs in order that they may have an education, they are in earnest.

No need to worry about Panhandle students so long as that condition exists.—Amarillo News.

BACKING THE TECH How long Centenary College will last in the Southwestern Conference is a question in the minds of many.

School banks may be 'safe' and then again they may not. But as far as the practice for the pupils is concerned they are good things for any school. School banks have been instituted in many of the larger institutions of the country and before long we'll probably have them in this section of the country. Then we'll have an opportunity to view them first hand.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION THE STATE OF TEXAS. County of Lubbock. By virtue of an order of sale issued out of the District Court of Lubbock County, Texas, on September 21, 1926, on a judgment rendered in said Court on the 18th day of August, 1926, in favor of M. T. Buxton, against Lena M. Walton and P. Walton, for the sum of $2288.10, with interest thereon from the 18th day of August 1926, until paid, and against Lena M. Walton, P. Walton and O. R. McEvey, foreclosure of a Vendor's Lien on lots Nos. 23 and 24, in block No. 22, of the Overton addition, to the town of Lubbock, Lubbock County, Texas, the said suit being numbered 2543 on the docket of the said Court, I did, on the 5th day of October, 1926, at 10 o'clock a. m., levy on the said property and will on the 20 day of November, 1926, the first Tuesday hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Lubbock county, to be held at the Court House thereof, in Lubbock, Texas, on the 2nd Monday in January, A. Sessom and U. H. Helm, are defendants, said petition alleging:

That heretofore, on Dec. 31, 1925, the defendant, U. H. Helm, conveyed by warranty deed, lots Nos. 3 and 4, of the Garland sub-division of the Roberts and McWhorter addition to the town of Lubbock, Lubbock county, Texas, to W. L. Garland, retaining a vendor's lien therein to secure the payment of one promissory vendor's lien note, for the sum of $1500.00, bearing date thereof, payable on or before 6 months from date of deed, bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, providing for the usual 10 per cent attorneys' fees, etc. That said note has been fully paid off and discharged, both principal and interest, but no formal release shows of record in the deed records of Lubbock County, Texas; by reason of such, said property, plaintiff also alleges that if the aforesaid note has not been paid, it is now barred by limitation.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION THE STATE OF TEXAS. County of Lubbock. By virtue of an order of sale issued out of the District Court of Lubbock County, Texas, on September 21, 1926, on a judgment rendered in said Court on the 18th day of August, 1926, in favor of M. T. Buxton, against Lena M. Walton and P. Walton, for the sum of $2288.10, with interest thereon from the 18th day of August 1926, until paid, and against Lena M. Walton, P. Walton and O. R. Youth Hanged For Policeman's Murder

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (AP)—Richard Evans, 19, paid with his life today for the murder of a Chicago policeman. He was hanged at the Cook county jail at 7:10 o'clock.

Before going to the gallows Evans confessed that he, and not a drunken companion, as he had steadfastly maintained, shot and killed Patrolman Edward Finnegan last March after the officer arrested the two for speeding.

Evans remained composed during the final hours before the death march, devoting the latter hours in the death cell to writing notes, one to the mother who, with his father, mortgaged a home to obtain defense funds.

He walked unaided to the gallows outwardly calm, and his only statement was "I will have paid my debt to God and society."

SCHOONER BURNS TO WATER EDGE

EUREKA, Calif., Oct. 29 (AP)—The steam schooner Everett continued to keep its fire-eaten hulk on the water just outside Eureka harbor early today despite its abandonment last night as a total loss.

Having caught fire early yesterday, the ship drifted aimlessly for hours while the crew of 28 fought to save her.

They tried to beach her, and, failing to open boats, with the arrival of the coast guard cutter Cahokia they boarded the Everett again and raced for Eureka, then thirty miles distant.

Cathedral Damaged By Dynamite Blast

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29 (AP)—For the third time in about 10 months, St. Peter and St. Paul's Catholic church here was bombed early today. A dynamite blast set off at the door of the edifice shortly before worshippers began to arrive for early mass did several thousand dollars damage to the structure.

The Rev. Father D. I. Martini, who was sleeping in the building, was only a few feet from the exploding bomb, but was unharmed.

The oak doors were blown off, stained glass windows were shattered and a hole was made in a granite stairway. Nearby houses were shaken.

Because of the two previous explosions the church had been under guard until a few days ago when police watchmen were called upon to hunt bombs.

Four pieces of fuse were found by Father Martini, who also reported that before the explosion an automobile had been parked near the church.

CITY DADS FOR PROGRESS THEY SHOW IN MEET

OFFICIALS PLAN BETTER THINGS FOR LUBBOCK IN FUTURE

More paving, more protection against fire and more water mains were decided upon yesterday when Mayor Pink L. Parrish and members of the city commission gathered together in the city hall in one of the busiest official sessions in the history of the city.

Chief among the matters to receive official endorsement was the building of a second fire station. The commissioners were unanimous in their belief that a new station and more equipment should be arranged for the fire department although they have not made recommendations for the location of the station.

May Wants More Help Chief of Police T. E. May made a plea for additional help on the police force during the fall and winter months and the commission ordered Police Commissioner J. O. Jones to confer with the Chief and make what ever additions he deemed necessary.

The salary of the city electrician was boosted from $175 per month to $200. Charles F. O'Neill, local realtor, offered to deed property worth $1,000 to the city providing the officials favored the laying of larger water mains to Elmwood place.

He pointed out that Elmwood place was rapidly building and that larger mains were necessary for protection against fire. His proposition will be accepted by the commission, indications are.

Contrary to earlier announcements, no attorney was appointed to take over the collection of the city's delinquent taxes although it was decided to open a campaign against tax debtors in the near future. Many citizens have been complaining of high water bills and in many cases they are being caused by leaks in the lines. The commissioners said adjustments would be made whenever the city was found to be in error.
