But rainfall needed...

Cotton planting date due Monday

Monday is the scheduled uniform planting date for Scurry County cotton farmers, but unless the weekend produces needed showers the majority of local producers are expected to find it "to dry" to plant.

As of Friday, County Agent Marvin Ensor noted that only select areas — primarily the northeast portion of the county — have had sufficient rains to insure top soil moisture for planting.

"I'd guess only areas north of the Camp Springs Road are ready to plant," Ensor said. "By far the majority of the county is still too dry."

He added a few farmers might try "dry planting," but speculated most will likely wait.

Local ASCS officials now estimate some 64,000 acres of Scurry County land will be planted in cotton this year.

ASCS Director Joe Hefner couched his estimate also with the comment, "if it rains."

If this estimate proves true, it will mark a slightly increased production over 1985. Last cotton season, county farmers planted some 58,000 acres and harvested almost 55,000 of these.

The final count for 1985 was 36,439 bales.

A May 19 uniform planting date was set here to guard against summer outbreaks of the boll weevil.

Ensor noted that the mild winter has contributed to one of the largest pre-summer counts of boll weevils in several years.

The dry weather, however, has aided this situation. "The weather has helped with the delayed planting date. If farmers can't plant before June 1, a lot of the cotton won't be in the squar-

Both sides now awaiting 1611 vote

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Those opposed and those in favor of the proposed extension of FM 1611 are looking toward a meeting this week — its exact day and time undecided as of Friday — to answer a major question related to the road's construction.

When answered, it will decide if county commissioners wish to proceed with a lengthy legal process related to the road's construction or, in effect, shelve the idea.

The decision now rests with one man, County Judge Preston Wilson. He is the tie-breaking vote to decide if the county will accept a state proposal to build a 3.7 mile stretch of road to complete a western truck route around Snyder.

Wilson tabled his decision last Monday after the court's four commissioners split regarding a motion to deny the proposal.

Some day this week — either Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, he said — he will call the court back into session and reveal how he will cast his ballot.

The county must act by May 26 to meet a state-required deadline for the project.

In related matters last week, the county commissioner whose precinct the road would be located in estimates its construction might save the county some $340,000 in road repairs and another $17,600 in annual maintenance costs.

Owners of the property on which the road would have to be built have also restated their point that a provision in the will which passed ownership of the property legally prohibits them from selling a right-of-way unless the county initiates condemnation proceedings.

"All in all, you could say I've had comments offered from both sides of the fence," Wilson said Friday.

He noted he has received numerous letters and phone calls from county residents. And he says their opinions are "running about 50-50."

Most of those opposed to the road point to the county-required expenses and the troubled economic conditions now present, he said.

"One fellow who I didn't know walked into my office and said just one thing, 'Vote for it.' Then he turned around and walked out," Wilson said.

The vote last Monday saw Commissioners Ted Billingsley and Duaine Davis "against" and Commissioners Hassie Sneed and C.D. Gray Jr. "for."

It was Gray who last week estimated construction of the road might actually save the county money.

"It was a comment I made at the meeting Monday, and didn't have my figures together at that time to back it up," he said Friday.

In a letter included in this issue of the SDN, Gray notes that constructing a portion of FM 1611 would replace a two-mile stretch of road now under the responsibility of the county.

If built as proposed, he notes all portions of FM 1611 would come under the maintenance responsibility of the state.

Gray also contends this section of road is now in need of repair and, if initiated by the county,

Kidney transplant gives renewed life for Snyder woman

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

After a successful kidney transplant, Mrs. Bobby (Vickie) Jones of Snyder says she is happier and more energetic than she has ever been in her life. And she says she owes it all to her sister, Carol Waid of Austin.

The close relationship between the two Chandler girls (they are the daughters of Doyle and Peggy Chandler of Snyder) took a special turn in February, when Carol donated one of her kidneys to Vickie.

"At first I was against it," Vickie said. "I did not want a transplant because I was afraid of the surgery. But now that I have had it and realize how much better I feel, I have no regrets about my decision. I also feel so much closer to my sister since I now have a part of her inside me."

"The biggest plus is realizing that I'm not sick anymore," she said.

She said she can think clearer and faster and function much better than she did before the transplant.

Before, she said she would be tired most of the time and it was not unusual for her to take as many as three naps a day. She was also having a hard time dealing with the housework and raising her family which consists of step-son, Casey, and sons, Nicky, 4, and Brady, 2.

"I never realized then how bad I was feeling until after

Panhandle reports tornadoes

By The Associated Press

Nearly a dozen tornadoes touched down in North Central Texas and four twisters were spotted in the Panhandle, but no serious damage was reported from storms marching across the state, officials said.

Several tornadoes were reported touching down Friday evening, although all retreated into the clouds without causing damage, officials said.

Tornadoes reportedly touched down in Cottle, Foard, Hardeman and Wilbarger counties late Friday night, prompting forecasters to issue tornado warnings for most of North Central Texas.

Some Quanah residents took cover at the Hardeman County Courthouse after a tornado hit south of town about 9:15 p.m., according to a Hardeman County Sheriff's dispatcher.

A tornado was spotted near Lockett, eight miles south of Vernon in Wilbarger County, at about 9:45 p.m.

Criminal trial due in 132nd

A jury call is on tap Monday in 132nd District Court for criminal proceedings here.

Jury selection is scheduled to get underway shortly after 9 a.m.

First on the docket is the trial of 24-year-old Carson Whitney Blackwell of 2603 Ave. B.

Blackwell was arrested in March for one count of delivery of a controlled substance. He was indicted that same month by a Scurry County grand jury.

His arrest was one of several which reportedly occurred as a result of a four-month undercover investigation conducted by the Scurry County Sheriff's office, Snyder Police Department and Texas Rangers.

SHL absentee ends Monday

Monday will be the final day individuals age 60 or older may vote absentee for representatives to the Texas Silver Haired Legislature (SHL).

The ballot will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center. The SHL election will be held May 30.

Local seniors will vote for two candidates to the SHL, one elected at-large and one elected to represent District 3.

Delbert Downing of Snyder is a candidate for the District 3 seat.

There are 563 candidates statewide, with a total of 116 representatives to be elected. Downing seeks to represent the

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It's better to appreciate things you don't have than to have things you don't appreciate."

Folks out at Western Texas College are scratching their heads concerning last week's fish kill. Literally thousands of fish floated at the top of the golf course lake.

Everybody had a theory about what happened. Some said there were too many fish for such a small lake, but the size of some of the whoppers discounts that theory. A few bass fishermen would love to catch some the size that floated to the top.

Others contended the kill was the result of fertilizer and other chemicals used on the golf course that washed into the pond.

Our theory is the fish consumed too many golf balls. We can just see the government regulations coming out of this. Each ball will have to carry a warning label: "Caution, swallowing a golf ball may be hazardous to your health."

Last week, City Manager John Gayle brought in a magazine he had received and Gayle doesn't know why he was put on the mailing list. The magazine is called "The Animals' Agenda," an animal rights news magazine.

Articles include "What's Wrong With Zoos?," "Ethics and Eating," or why one should be a vegetarian, a section on why animals should not be used for research, and a blast at dog racing.

Animal rights–we wonder if it's okay to slap a mosquito? Only if it bites you first...oh brother!

House members to question Deaver again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Testimony by former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver put to rest some — but not all — of the allegations that he improperly used old White House contacts for his lobbying firm, a House investigator says.

House members, who questioned Deaver in closed session for more than five hours Friday, plan to hear more testimony from the former White House deputy chief of staff, said Michael F. Barrett Jr., majority counsel of the Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee.

Deaver called "groundless and impertinent" the accusations that he has used his 20-year friendship with President Reagan to help clients of his lobbying firm, Michael K. Deaver and Associates.

The criticism is "not only mean-spirited, but ... also an implicit attack on the integrity" of Reagan, Deaver said in a statement released to reporters as he was delivering it to the panel.

"I have never traded on my relationship with the president for any client — and I never will," he said.

Barrett said Deaver "was able to lay to rest" allegations that his role in selecting U.S. ambassadors to foreign countries before leaving the administration last year proved useful when he signed up several of those nations as clients.

But the panel plans to spend another day, possibly Monday, questioning Deaver about a number of unresolved issues, including his efforts to help Canada obtain an agreement with the United States for a joint effort to combat acid rain, Barrett said.

The General Accounting Office reported to the panel last Monday that Deaver "may have violated" the Ethics in Government Act by lobbying for Canada on acid rain, which he discussed while still an aide to Reagan.

Deaver maintains he did not participate in any substantive discussions about acid rain while he was at the White House so his lobbying for Canada on the issue did not violate the law.

The law forbids former federal officials from ever representing anyone before the government on a matter in which the ex-aide participated personally and substantially.

In his statement, Deaver said the charges that he is improperly trading on his influence in the Reagan administration were "obviously politically motivated and calculated to damage me and my former colleagues and friends still in government service."

But Rep. John D. Dingell, chairman of the subcommittee and the full Energy and Commerce Committee, disagreed.

Jury selection begins in trial of slain schoolteacher, son

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Jury selection begins Monday in the capital murder trial of a 22-year-old man accused of killing a Brenham schoolteacher and her young son and stuffing their bodies into a car trunk.

Washington County District Attorney Charles Sebesta said authorities already have a confession from Kavin Wayne Lincecum of Ledbetter.

The bodies of Cathy Coppedge, 35, and her 11-year-old son, Casey, were found dead in the trunk of her car 11 hours after they had attended Sunday church services on Aug. 11.

Lincecum's trial was moved by State District Judge John "Jack" Placke from Brenham to Angleton, about 50 miles south of Houston, because of publicity surrounding the case.

The trial is expected to last three to five weeks.

The case had authorities baffled until Lincecum and two others were arrested in Halletsville on Dec. 3 after the robbery of a LaGrange tavern.

It was then that Lincecum, also charged with a Washington County rape, told investigators about his part in the abduction-slayings in Brenham, a community of 11,000 about 70 miles west of Houston, authorities said.

Lincecum is the only one charged in the slayings, said Sebesta, who will prosecute the case.

"It's really not complicated," Sebesta said of the upcoming trial. "We had a lengthy hearing and the judge ruled it (the confession) admissable. There will be no plea bargain in the case."

Lincecum's court-appointed attorney, Bob Kuhn of Austin, tried to have the statement thrown out.

In the statement, Lincecum told investigators he forced his way inside Mrs. Coppedge's car and drove the vehicle west on U.S. Highway 290 before turning off on a gravel road between Brenham and Burton.

"I went through her purse and got what money she had," according to the statement. "I told the boy to get in the back seat and he asked me not to hurt his mama and I told him I wouldn't hurt her."

Lincecum said he ordered Mrs. Coppedge to get out of the car and undress. An autopsy report showed the woman may have been sexually assaulted.

"She picked up my knife and stabbed me in my left side," he said. "I took the knife from her and folded it up."

Lincecum said he used her purse straps to tie up the boy and then put him in the trunk, where he suffocated. He said he used Mrs. Coppedge's panty hose to choke her, but claimed she was still alive when he forced her in the trunk.

Sebesta said, however, that tests prove Mrs. Coppedge was dead before she was put in the trunk and that the hose wasn't the weapon used.

Noah Project sets garage-bake sale

The Noah Project in Snyder, a shelter for victims of family violence, will be having a combined garage sale and bake sale next Saturday beginning at 8 a.m. at the Fire Station located at 34th Street and El Paso.

According to Linda Scalf, director, the public is asked to donate items for both sales. Furniture etc. is needed for the garage sale, but she stresses that clothes are not since they have an ample supply of used clothing to sell.

Since the bake sale is not being sponsored by any organization, Scalp said the public is also being asked to donate baked items for the sale.

Items for the garage sale can be delivered to the fire station from Monday through Thursday of next week.

Baked goods items are asked to be delivered to the Colonial Hill Baptist Church kitchen on Friday. Items are asked to be placed in disposable containers, wrapped in plastic wrap and labeled.

Scalf said the garage/bake sale has been organized to help defray the cost of operating the local shelter. Due to budget cuts the shelter no longer receives either state or federal funds, she added.

Noah Project is a non-profit shelter which houses an average of four families per month. From 8-10 families are also served on an outreach basis. The special hotline number--573-1822--also receives from 20-30 calls per month.

Justice Dept. won't probe pupil's death

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Department of Justice has declined to investigate the 1984 death of a Nigerian student who suffocated during a struggle with city police, the director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union says.

"They studied it for over a year before deciding not to investigate," Gara LaMarche said Friday. "Of course, we're disappointed. It obviously closes the door on some kind of independent oversight into this matter."

LaMarche said the federal investigation was requested by the civil liberties union and Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox after Mattox's office concluded that Austin police were negligent in the case.

LaMarche said the TCLU still is waiting for a written copy of the Justice Department's conclusion. The group will decide whether to challenge the department's decision after reviewing it, he said.

Evans Ekiye, 28, died in December 1984 in a fight with four police officers who had been sent to his north Austin apartment after receiving a report that Ekiye was beating his wife.

Economist: agriculture may be cut 'to the bone' in 1987

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Spending cuts in federal farm programs this year pale in comparison to what may be in store for 1987, says the chief economist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

This year's 4.3 percent across-the-board cuts would "seem like nothing," said Robert Thompson, the USDA's assistant secretary for economics, who lectured at Texas A&M University Friday.

Another year of budget cuts mandated by Gramm-Rudman legislation, he said, and "we'd be cutting to the bone."

Thompson said USDA's best estimate is that the bill will require another 8 to 12 percent cut next year, which could make it difficult to maintain some of the farm programs provided for in the 1985 Farm Bill.

But if Congress can reach a budget compromise that will meet the deficit reduction target of $144 billion next year, agriculture would fare a lot better, he said.

"Surely, Congress will restore extension and agriculture programs and take more from defense," he said.

Gramm-Rudman this year requires a 4.3 percent cut from every office of every USDA agency. USDA's deficiency payments to farmers will be 4.3 percent lower than the advertised rate, as will its loan rates, Thompson said.

The dairy industry's powerful lobby pushed special legislation through Congress that exempts dairy support programs from Gramm-Rudman, Thompson said. Instead of cuts, the dairy industry is assessing itself an extra 12 cents per hundredweight to be put into its own support program.

Vigils wane as executions become common

AUSTIN (AP) — Gara LaMarche, who attended candlelight vigils at the Capitol during past executions, lit candles again this week as murderer Jay Kelly Pinkerton was put to death in Huntsville.

It was no vigil.

A midnight storm knocked out power in LaMarche's Austin home as he was watching television.

Anti-death penalty groups no longer gather at the Capitol on execution nights to light candles.

"It doesn't mean we don't wish we could be out there, but it's a matter of burn-out. You can only expect a handful of people to do so much," said Rita Williamson of Austin, an Amnesty International official who helped organize previous Capitol vigils.

Pinkerton was the third Texas inmate executed this year, bringing the total to 13 since the death penalty was reinstated in Texas in 1982.

Vigils at the Capitol and demonstrations near the Huntsville death chamber began with the Charlie Brooks execution in December 1982, and continued for several more.

The liveliest outburst at Huntsville occurred in November 1983 when the execution of J.D. "Cowboy" Autry was halted with a last-minute stay, prompting hundreds of spectators to stage a near-riot as Attorney General Jim Mattox announced the reprieve from the steps of the prison administration building.

Security was stepped up after that, with spectators restricted to areas away from the prison. Corrections officers were lined up, shoulder-to-shoulder, around the prison.

But spectator interest and security have dropped. Only a handful of guards were stationed around the prison.

Civil War buff, prairie Santa adding color to wagon train

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A Confederate soldier and a prairie version of Santa Claus are among the sights and sounds of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train rumbling across the state.

The sight of wagoneer Jim Sayler dressed in creased Confederate Army uniform, peering from under the canvas cape of his Conestoga wagon, brings a glimpse of Gettysburg to the High Plains.

And Macy L. Nelson, a 64-year-old former submarine machinist, adds festive note with his red T-shirt and red floppy hat.

"I've been playing Santa Claus from the beginning of the trip and can't wait to see the light in the kids' eyes when they see me running down the road," says Nelson, who joined the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train in Sulphur Springs in January.

As part of the Sesquicentennial wagon train tracking across the state, Sayler's wagon has been voted "Most Authentic" more than a dozen times.

"I became a Civil War buff in 1963 when I was a part of a reenactment of a battle near Fredricksburg, Md.," says Sayler, an aviation machinist from New Windsor, Md. "Most folks here know me as Confederate Jim."

Sayler is a founding member of the First Cavalry Company in Maryland, an organization dedicated to studying and recreating famous Civil War battles.

"I've fired everything from muskets to cannons," he said, adjusting the brim of a cowboy splotched with dime-sized replicas of Civil War medals.

"The great thing about those battles and this wagon train is that you're living the history and that's something no book can ever do for you."

Sayler estimates the wagon was built in the mid-1700s. The Ohio woman he bought it from said the wagon had been in her family for 150 years.

It was used to transport one year's worth of groceries from Baltimore, Md., to their village 10 miles south of Gettysburg.

Its shell of yellow pine hasn't been changed much since then, Sayler said, pointing to the hand-crafted metal hasps and pins that hold the planks in place.

This isn't Sayler's first trip on a wagon train. He toured in the 50-state Bicentennial Wagon Train in 1976.

"After that I was hooked," says Sayler, who plans to leave the wagon train in Turkey. He joined up near San Angelo.

According to Nelson, his son and daughter, Gaylon and Glenda, would install a phone in his mule-drawn wagon if they thought it would work.

But since they can't stretch a phone line from Sulphur Springs to Fort Worth, the geographical bookends of the train tour, Nelson does the next best thing.

"Every day I talk into my tape recorder and tell them what's happening on the train — who is riding with me and what the weather is like," he said. "My fondest memory of the trip was in San Diego, when my sister met me there after traveling from San Diego, California.

"First off, there was about a half-mile of school children lining the streets, shining their faces at me and screaming for Santa to wave at them, and at the end of the line was my sister."

Testimony resumes Monday in trial

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — The first week of testimony in the organized crime trial of two ranch owners and a former ranch worker ended with the jury hearing the tape-recorded screams of a man being tortured.

Prosecutors played the tape, which was recorded as a mock radio show complete with a narrator, on Friday in the trial of Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr. and former worker Carlton Robert Caldwell.

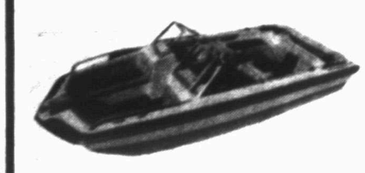

The three are charged with conspiring to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder in connection with the March 1984 death of Anthony Bates. Prosecutors contend Bates was forced to work at the ranch against his will before he was tortured to death with a cattle prod.

Bates' body was later burned, prosecutors allege.

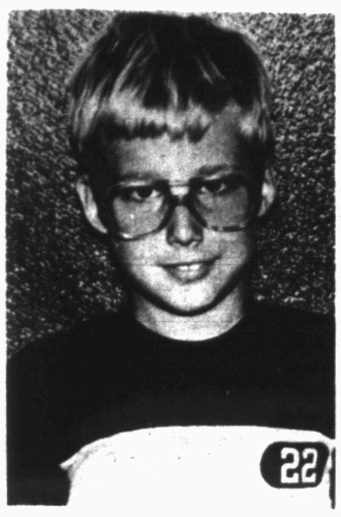

Former ranch worker Daryl Hunsaker, 23, testified he was present when two tapes were made of Bates' torture in early 1984. Prosecutors say the tape includes the voices of Bates and Hunsaker, who was granted immunity in return for his testimony.

The tapes played Friday started out with a voice announcing, "Live from the bunkhouse, it's shock time."

Hunsaker said the tape was one of five or six torture sessions that lasted about an hour.

Flame may be revived

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University's Eternal Flame has turned out to be more occasional than eternal, but work is under way to revive the flickering font.

The flame, at the north end of A&M's Kyle Field, was dedicated by the A&M Class of 1983 "to symbolize the undying spirit all Aggies have for Texas A&M."

But the torch, plagued by mechanical problems, hasn't been so hardy. The maroon-and-white-tiled pool at its base is covered with algae and gook, and the water jets that were intended to spray a mist around the marble monument produces only a half-hearted trickle.

Last year during football season, Warren Llado read a newspaper column about the flame's decline, and he decided to take action. He suggested to class agents Ann Horne and Hank Roraback that the class try to salvage and arrange regular maintenance for the class gift, which had become an embarrassment.

Llado was familiar with the flame.

A construction science major, he had originally been a part of the Class of 1983 before dropping out of school briefly to work for a local construction firm. He had helped install the original gas jets for the monument and understood the mechanical difficulties involved.

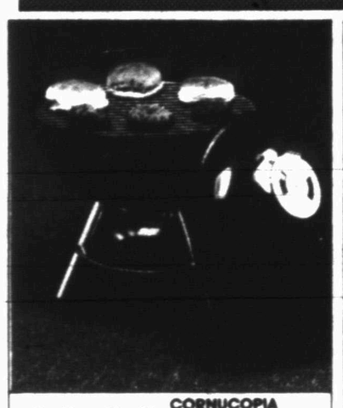

There was also a financial problem: The university had agreed to pay for the cost of the natural gas, but a misunderstanding between the class and the university left no provision for maintenance.

In the January edition of the class newsletter, Horne and Roraback issued an appeal for donations, and the class is working to raise a $6,500 endowment to pay the costs of cleaning and maintaining its gift.

Man-made fires 'a problem'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fire intentionally set in a farmer's woodlot to burn out some old brush can sweep out of control and burn thousands of acres, destroying homes and costing lives, says a senior Forest Service official.

Moreover, even if no evil is intended, the burning and the damage it causes can be arson, says Allan J. West, the agency's deputy chief for state and private forestry.

For some years, arson has been the leading cause of forest fires started by humans, and the number of cases has jumped further this year.

Nationally, more than 63,000 fires have occurred on forests and grasslands in the United States so far in 1986, damaging more than 1 million acres and causing losses estimated at more than $100 million, he said. Of those, 38,000 involved arson.

One reason arson has caused such a high percentage of fires so far this year is that historically there are more manmade fires in the East than in the West, which has its prime fire season later in the year.

"It's been a problem in the East for many, many years," West said Friday in an interview. "People have started fires in the East for many other reasons than just mischief. Some of it is for improving game habitat for hunting, or they want to rid the woods of pests, ticks, that kind of thing."

But fires started intentionally are still arson, even if the intent is not malicious, he said.

"The problem is that these fires are very damaging, and we need people to recognize that this is a growing, major problem that is damaging natural resources," West said.

Many professionals think stiffer penalties could help tame the arsonists. Too often, if a fire is deliberately set but not started maliciously, the offender is let off with probation or a reduced sentence, West said.

Currently, firefighters are mopping up after a 10-day fire in North Carolina that engulfed 73,000 acres. Investigators are trying to determine if arson is the cause.

Droughts have brought added danger to tinder-dry forests, and the 30-day outlook is for potentially severe wildfire conditions across much of the Southeast. West said the fire potential is also very high from the Southeast across the South to the Southwest.

Will 1986 end up as the worst year this century for forest fires?

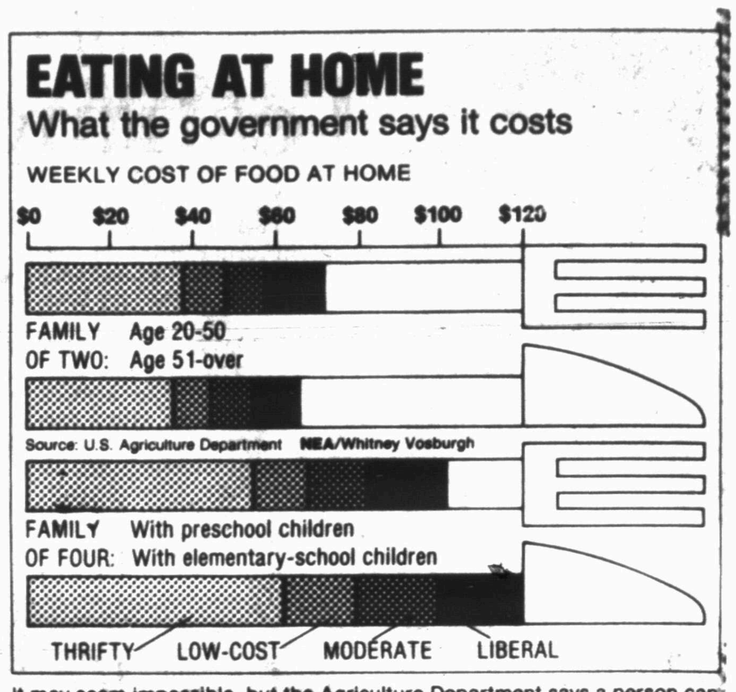

"It's starting out that way in the East," West said. "But it's just too early to say what's going to happen in the West."

If this year turns out to be the worst, it will have to surpass the losses of 1985, recognized by the Forest Service as the worst of the 20th century so far. Last year, according to the agency, more than 83,000 wildfires burned almost 3 million acres, destroyed or damaged more than 1,400 structures and dwellings, and caused 44 deaths.

The costs to federal, state and local fire agencies and private industry was more than $400 million in firefighting expenses alone.

Fires started by people account for about 60 percent of the nation's wildfires, West said. Natural causes — such as lightning — account for the rest.

Of the fires caused by people, according to a 10-year average compiled by the Forest Service for 1974 through 1983, arson was blamed for 32 percent; debris burning, 24 percent; smoking, 10 percent children, 9 percent; equipment, 6 percent; railroads, 5 percent; campfires, 3 percent; and miscellaneous, 11 percent.

It may seem impossible, but the Agriculture Department says a person can eat "thriftily" for only $2 to $3 per day — or about $40 a week for a two-person family, and $54 to $62 for four people.

China, Taiwan hold first direct meeting in 37 years

HONG KONG (AP) — Representatives of capitalist Taiwan and communist China met face-to-face Saturday for the first time in 37 years to negotiate the return of a Taiwanese cargo plane whose pilot defected to China.

Hong Kong's Cathay Pacific Airways, which has acted as intermediary between the two country's state-run airlines, issued a statement after the meeting saying another round of talks was necessary to settle differences over the Boeing 747's delivery.

The two sides have had no official contacts since the Nationalists fled the mainland of China for Taiwan after losing a civil war to the Communists in 1949.

Sources said representatives of Taiwan's China Airlines and the Civil Aviation Administration of China may hold separate news conferences later on the talks.

Hong Kong's Asia Television reported that the two delegations met for one hour and 15 minutes at a country club, and had agreed to hold their second session on Sunday.

It quoted Zhang Ruipu, head of the Chinese delegation and CAAC's Hong Kong manager, as saying no final agreement was reached because "each side held firm on its own views." He did not elaborate.

Asked what subjects were discussed, Zhang was quoted as saying, "Locations and time, where and when the plane should be returned and other procedural matters."

The defecting pilot, 56-year-old Wang Hsi-chueh, was flying a cargo of food from Bangkok to Hong Kong on May 3 when he diverted the plane to Canton in southern China, 60 miles northwest of Hong Kong.

Wang, who was born on the mainland in central Sichuan province, told a news conference in Peking last week that he was homesick, tired of corruption in Taiwan and wanted to be reunited with his 82-year-old father on the mainland. He joined China Airlines in 1967, and has a wife and two sons on Taiwan.

Sen. Gramm slates Tyler office opening

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who never seems to do things the easy way, announced on Friday that he is opening a new office in Tyler — not Sulphur Springs.

On Thursday, Perry Bradley, vice chairman of the Texas Democratic Party, told the Dallas Morning News that he believed Gramm, a freshman Republican, had opened an office in Sulphur Springs, hometown of Democratic Rep. Jim Chapman, for political purposes — that is, to aid Chapman's 1985 Republican opponent in a bid this year for state Senate.

In a special election last year, Chapman narrowly defeated Gramm's candidate, Edd Hargett, for the congressional seat. Hargett has not announced, but there is speculation he will run this year in a special election for Texas Senate.

The News said Gramm denied having a Sulphur Springs office but that directory assistance gave out a number for Gramm's office in Sulphur Springs and that the phone was answered, "Senator Phil Gramm's office" by Steve Moss, county Republican Party chairman and adviser to Hargett in the congressional election.

Moss, in fact, is running Gramm's new office, said Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal. But next month the new office will begin operations in Tyler, not Sulphur Springs. That's why Gramm denied he had a Sulphur Springs office, according to Neal.

He said Moss was maintaining an office temporarily in Sulphur Springs "until he could make arrangements personally to move to Tyler and locate appropriate office space in East Texas."

Neal said Gramm was not trying to play politics with the placement of the office.

In a news release announcing the opening of the Tyler office, Gramm said, "Through this office, I hope to give the people of East Texas expanded access to their federal government.

WANTING TO BUILD?
"SAVE MONEY" "SAVE TIME"
PREPLANNING is the FIRST and MOST IMPORTANT STEP to cost effective, successful completion and ultimate self satisfaction of a building project. Times have changed, construction and energy costs are too valuable to rely on "sketches and verbal descriptions" as the basis for in-place construction.
Advantages of preplanning/professional guidance is realized very quickly with the "Independent Designer" working to the best interest of his client, with guidance, leading to an energy efficient well thought-out set of "custom plans and material specifications," the basis whereby the client is then able to acquire "competitive" bids from several contractors with "everyone bidding the same thing." This basis provides a firm contract price and eliminates "overlooked items" by the client and/or contractor, which can break a building account or cost the contractor. A quality set of "Custom plans with material specifications" can eliminate "unforseen extras" and the need for the contractors to include a comfortable dollar figure for "the unknown."
All of the above go toward a smooth, well coordinated effort on the part of the client, his designer and the contractor in order to put cost effective, energy efficient construction in-place, within a budget and time frame. Allow me to be of service on your one-time or next lifetime investment.

Surviving students are still critical following blizzard

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — With two survivors of the Mount Hood climbing tragedy still fighting for life Saturday, trustees of the private school that sent them up the mountain say they remain committed to the school's wilderness program.

The two are the only survivors of a group of eight found Thursday huddled in a snow cave on the mountain where they had spent three days since a blizzard ambushed their climbing party. Three others died earlier.

Both students were in critical condition today. Doctors said the condition of 16-year-old Giles Thompson of Longview, Wash., worsened Friday afternoon due to bleeding in areas that were most exposed to the cold. However, a few hours later, doctors said he was responding to treatment and they remained optimistic he would survive.

"The problem was his inability to clot blood in tissues injured by the cold," Providence Hospital spokeswoman Marian Massey explained.

The second survivor, Brinton Clark of Portland, was rescued on her 16th birthday, Emanuel Hospital officials said. She showed no signs of frostbite and she recognized her parents Friday morning.

"The parents were sobbing with great relief that their daughter was whole and intact," said Dr. William Long, head of the hospital's trauma program.

The nine people who died represented the worst climbing disaster on Mount Hood since the first recorded death on the mountain 90 years ago.

But the 21-member board of trustees of the Oregon Episcopal School met for three hours Friday and said in a statement: "We are committed to our school and all of its goals, philosophy and curriculum, including our longstanding wilderness program."

As part of the wilderness program, sophomores are required to either climb 11,235-foot Mount Hood or do 40 hours of community service work.

Meanwhile, authorities speculated on why Thompson and Miss Clark were able to survive. Thompson's size may have had something to do with his survival. "He's a big husky fellow, solidly built," said Dr. Duane Bietz.

Greek patriots rose up against the domination of the Ottoman empire in 1821. The uprising eventually led to the establishment of an independent kingdom.

In 1783, the first of a series of six earthquakes struck southern Italy and Sicily Feb. 5, and by March 28 some 50,000 persons had been killed.

Radio Moscow: no sign of radiation sickness in people

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow Saturday said all evacuees from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster zone had been checked for radiation sickness but that no symptoms were found. A U.S. doctor said the medical crisis is past, but that some victims now hospitalized may die.

amined the 92,000 people evacuated from the areas adjoining the nuclear power plant," Radio Moscow said this morning in its latest report on the aftermath of the April 26 accident.

The medical personnel, Radio Moscow said, reported that "none of their patients have any signs of ailments connected with the increase of radiation at the time of the accident." It did not elaborate further.

Soviet authorities have said they moved people from within an 18-mile radius of Chernobyl once the magnitude of the accident at the nuclear power plant 80 miles north of Kiev became known.

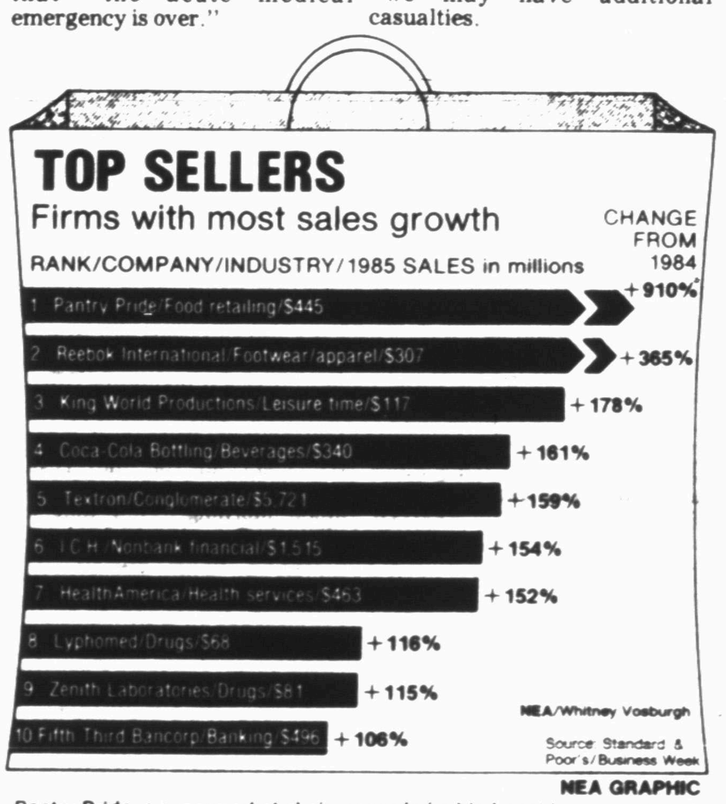

Nevertheless, hundreds of people absorbed doses of radiation following an explosion and fire in one of the plant's atomic reactors, and 35 were "highly exposed individuals," said Dr. Robert P. Gale.

Gale, a U.S. bone marrow expert who treated the victims, returned late Friday to Los Angeles, where he told reporters that 11 of the 35 severe exposure cases had died to date. Two other plant workers were killed the day of the accident, he said.

Gale also said that doctors believe they have isolated the most seriously injured victims, and do not expect many more cases of radiation sickness beyond about 300 people who already have required hospitalization.

Before leaving Moscow, he told U.S. television correspondents that "the acute medical emergency is over."

Of the 35 severe cases, he said "we may have additional casualties.

Beat Brenham by 15 strokes...

Lady Tigers claim state golf championship

AUSTIN -- Going into the state golf tournament if you would have asked Snyder's Lady Tigers what the chances of them finishing in the top three were, they'd have said they thought they could.

But first? Number one in the state?

"I didn't think we would," admitted Lea Ann Thompson, whose career-low 83 help Snyder win the Class 4A state crown here Friday afternoon. "I was just hoping we would get second or third."

Snyder had taken a four-stroke lead after Thursday's round and not only kept it, but expanded it. The Tigers shot a 362 Friday for a 736 total, winning the two-day tournament by 15 strokes over Brenham, which turned in a 751. Andrews fell to third with a 759 after shooting a 381 on Friday.

Only Xalyn Harris, the only senior on the squad, felt confident Snyder would take the team championship.

"Before we teed off today (Friday) I was sure we would win," she said. "I knew by the 11th hole Thursday we had the lead and Friday, before we teed off, I knew we would win. I felt it. I guess it was senior intuition or something."

The realization that they were about to become state champions came much later for most of the squad, however.

LEA ANN THOMPSON

'I knew we would win. I felt it. I guess it was senior intuition or something.' Xalyn Harris

"I kind of hinted to myself that we might have won but I didn't want to think about it," said Leslie Light, who shot an 87 Friday and took fourth place medalist honors with her total 171. "After the turn, everybody told us we were 11 strokes ahead. I knew if we kept playing well we were going to do it."

Light tied for third place medalist but lost a sudden death playoff to Suzy Davis of Carthage. The two-time District 2-4A medalist, who along with Harris was also a member of Snyder's 1984 state runnerup team, had hoped to finish in the top two individually. She will be content, for now, with a team championship.

"This is great, winning the team championship. I had wanted to finish higher and I thought I could, but we'll get them next year," she laughed.

Meanwhile, Thompson's 83 was 13 strokes lower than her 96 on Thursday. Combined, she had a total 179 and was sixth overall among the field.

"I just concentrated and kept my short game where it was supposed to be," she said. "I played it one stroke at a time and didn't worry about the one before it or the next one coming up."

Harris shot a 92 Friday for a 186 while Michelle Holder had a 202 total and Angie Lay a 212.

Kellie Keifer of Seagoville won medalist honors with a 158. Neisy Rodriquez of San Antonio Alamo Heights was a distant runnerup with a 169.

Snyder stairstepped its way to the top, placing fifth in 1982, second in '84 and first in '86 under Coach Jan Kruse - who was just as excited and nervous as the players.

"I kept telling myself not to get excited. I was getting sick with nervousness. I knew we had a real good chance but at the same time I kept telling myself that we would probably finish second or third," she said. "The girls did a fantastic job. They knew what they had to do and they just decided to go out there and do it. I'm very proud of them."

XALYN HARRIS

Needless to say, the girl's were still excited about the championship late Friday evening.

"All the hard work paid off. It was worth it," said Lay. "I just can't describe the feeling."

"I was so excited. I couldn't cry enough," laughed Holder. "We're still all just excited. We set our goals and accomplished them. It's a great feeling."

Williams, who has been to state twice before and is just a junior, defeated Rutherford in quick, 6-1, 6-1, fashion.

Also advancing to semifinal action were both girl's doubles teams from District 2-4A.

Thompson places 4th

AUSTIN -- Snyder's Karlene Thompson took fourth place at the Class 4A Track and Field Championships here Friday, sailing 37-feet, 6¼-inches in the triple jump.

It was Thompson's third straight trip to the state relays in the triple jump, and her best finish.

"Most everybody got their best jump in their first or second jump of the prelims," said Snyder Coach Patty Grimmett.

Rain fell during the entire competition, which took two and a half hours to complete.

"They ran the 3A and 4A at the same time so instead of having to wait for seven others to jump before her, Karlene had to wait for 15 each time," said Grimmett. "I was proud of her. She's had an incredible season and a great track career."

Thompson placed seventh here as a sophomore and fifth as a junior. An all-state choice in volleyball, Thompson has already signed a volleyball scholarship with Texas Tech University. She was also selected to at least one all-state basketball team.

"It's pretty awesome when you write down all of what she's accomplished. It's a big, long list," said Grimmett.

Cynthia Rhodes of Terrell won the competition with a jump of 38-6. Second was Starlie Graves of Brenham with a 38-4½, followed by Stephenville's Yolanda Phillips, who jumped 37-6¾.

Court says colleges must release reports

AUSTIN (AP) - A federal judge ruled Friday that the records of the Southwest Conference and the NCAA are subject to public disclosure under the Texas Open Records Act.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge James R. Nowlin was described as "highly significant" by attorneys who said its implications could reach beyond Texas to other states with similar laws.

The Dallas Morning News, the Dallas Times Herald and Belo Broadcasting filed suit against the NCAA and SWC after officials for those organizations declined to release information obtained in investigations of SWC football programs.

George Gangwere, chief attorney for the NCAA, said he was "disappointed" by the ruling and fears it will hinder future investigations by the association.

Gangwere said he believes the NCAA will appeal the order "if we can find some reason for doing so, because this is a significant issue."

The SWC and NCAA maintained that they are private associations and, as such, their proceedings and official acts are not subject to public scrutiny.

But Nowlin rejected that argument, saying the athletic associations not only receive state funds but provide no "specific measurable service" in return, thus putting them under the Open Records Act.

Rockets outlast LA Lakers

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets have beaten the Los Angeles Lakers two straight games to take a 2-1 lead in their NBA playoff series, but they're not pounding their chests and proclaiming themselves Western Conference champions.

"Right now, in my mind, it is still 1-0 at home and the monkey is still on our backs," Rockets guard Robert Reid said after Friday night's 117-109 victory. "They can win here Sunday and still go back to Los Angeles with momentum."

The Rockets actually lead the best-of-seven series 2-1 following Friday's victory behind a 40-point performance by Akeem Olajuwon.

But the Rockets know the defending NBA champions will be well prepared for Sunday's fourth game, also in The Summit.

"There was no quit in them tonight and there won't be any Sunday," Olajuwon said. "The pressure is still on us because we can't afford to lose a game at home."

Olajuwon's dominating performance helped the Rockets overcome 33 points by Kareem Abdul Jabbar and a comeback 29 points by James Worthy.

The Rockets battled for a 60-59 lead at the half and fought back from a one-point third-quarter deficit when Lewis Lloyd hit the first two baskets of the fourth period.

The Lakers tied the game four more times, but they never led again. Ralph Sampson's basket with 4:15 to play broke the final tie and gave the Rockets a 107-105 lead.

The fifth game in the series is scheduled Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Worthy's performance was an encouraging sign for the Lakers - he averaged only 13.6 points in the first two games of the series.

"Jabbar is still one of the greatest, but when it came down to the end, our big guys came out and took it to them," Rockets guard Robert Reid said. "It just went back and forth until we got the edge."

The Lakers had won 14 of their last 15 games in The Summit.

"The 14 losses weren't involved with everyone on this team, only two or three were involved," Houston center Ralph Sampson said. "This is the team of the future."

The Rockets' and Lakers' big men finished the game in foul trouble. Sampson, Olajuwon and Abdul Jabbar all finished the game with five personal fouls.

Rangers homer past Boston

BOSTON (AP) - Oddibe McDowell, rookie Pete Incaviglia and Steve Buechele backed Jose Guzman's seven-hit pitching with solo home runs Friday night, powering the Texas Rangers to a 4-1 victory over Boston despite a career-high 14 strikeouts by the Red Sox' Bruce Hurst.

Guzman, 3-5, who snapped a personal five-game losing streak last Sunday, walked four, struck out one and lost his shutout bid on Steve Lyons' pinch homer with one out in the ninth.

McDowell led off the game by lifting a 2-0 pitch into the right-field stands for his fifth home run of the season. It was the first homer off Hurst, 3-3, since the season opener April 7.

Incaviglia led off the sixth with his seventh homer, a mighty blast over the high screen atop the left-field wall. Buechele started the seventh with another screen-clearing shot for his sixth homer.

The Rangers also picked up an unearned run in the fifth as Buechele reached on a fielding error by Dwight Evans in right, stole second and scored on McDowell's single.

Hurst reached double figures in strikeouts for the fourth time this year and the ninth of his career. His 14 strikeouts gave him 71 and moved him ahead of teammate Roger Clemens for the major league lead.

Portrait master hits on hard times now

DALLAS (AP) — Dmitri Vail, who earned the title of "Painter of the Stars" by stroking the likenesses of movie stars, politicians and business executives onto canvas, is trying to overcome legal problems, debts and deteriorating health.

Twenty years ago, Vail's celebrity portraits were featured in Dallas hotels and busy centers. He once had exclusive clientele ranging from actor Maurice Chevalier to former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

But on Friday morning, 17 portraits seized by court order, including those of Sophie Tucker and Mickey Rooney, were auctioned in Irving to raise money for a $5,200 default judgment against Vail.

The judgment stems from Vail's failure to answer a lawsuit alleging that he substituted another artist's work for a portrait he had contracted to paint, court records state.

A second lawsuit alleges Vail, 83, broke a contract to paint two portraits for a family that made a $10,000 deposit. The suit is scheduled to be heard in June.

Vail also faces a misdemeanor trial on charges that he wrote a bad check for $250. An arrest warrant for Vail was recalled last Tuesday after his lawyers entered an innocent plea for Vail, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Vail denies wrongdoing and says he has consulted attorneys.

"I've never lied," Vail said in a recent interview. "I've had many lawsuits filed. They are just things from lawyer's desks."

Vail said the root of his problems is linked to a former employee who forged checks.

On Dec. 16, then-State District Judge Sidney Fitzwater entered the $5,200 default judgment against Vail that ended in confiscation of his paintings. The suit alleged that the portrait was improperly done.

In another suit, a Dallas family claimed to have received a portrait "of such poor quality that it was unacceptable," said the family's attorney, Sam Bonney.

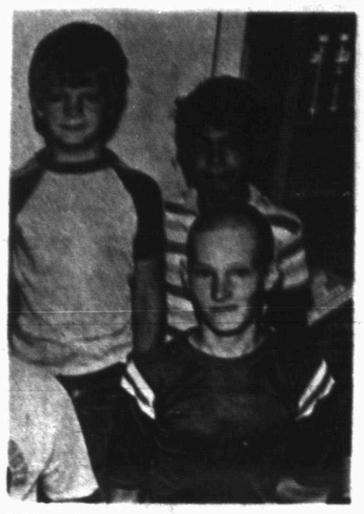

"The complaint is ridiculous," said Jack C. Pate, Vail's attorney. "I don't know how you measure a great artist. He's quite an extraordianry individual and quite an extraordinary man. He's one of a kind."

Despite legal and financial problems, Vail plans to franchise his art school and sell some expensive antique furniture to raise some cash.

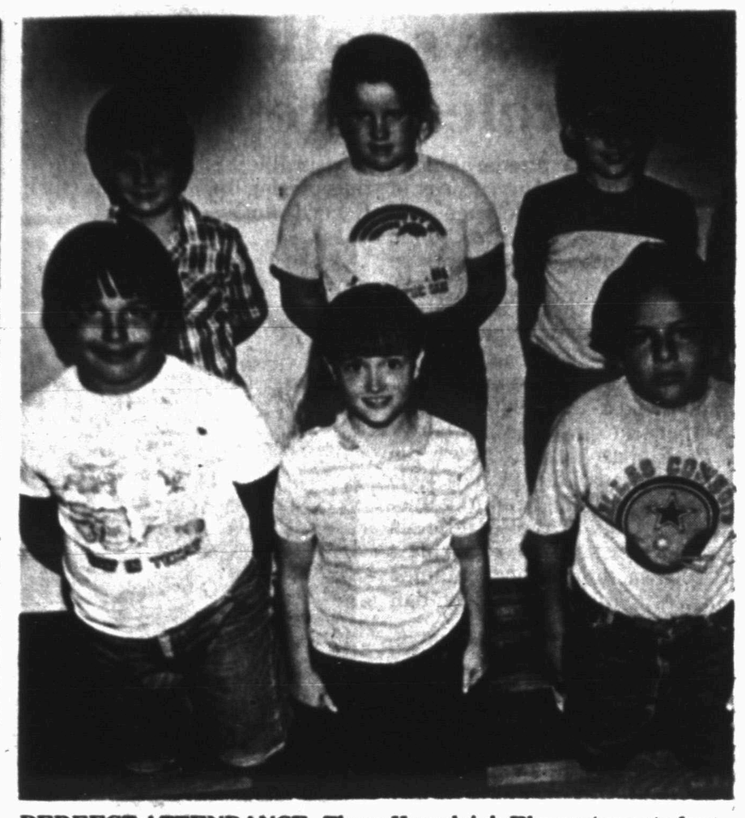

"I want to sell these so this will put me on my feet again," Vail said.

Foot surgery has temporarily hampered his mobility and his painting, but Vail remains undaunted.

"I love myself. I don't hate myself. I would describe myself as a complete and total artist," said Vail, who is temporarily unable to walk or paint.

Argentine junta members are given stiff prison terms

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The three military rulers who started and lost the Falkland Islands war with Britain in 1982 were convicted of negligence Friday and given prison terms ranging to 14 years, a court source reported.

The Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, a panel of nine retired generals that is the nation's highest military tribunal, was expected to announce the verdicts and sentences officially later.

The source, who is attached to the council, confirmed that Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, the army commander who served as president, was sentenced to 12 years in prison; Adm. Jorge Anaya, the navy commander, to 14 years; and Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo, chief of the air force, to eight years.

Time bombs exploded at eight ward offices of civilian President Raul Alfonsin's Radical Civic Union party Friday. There was no evidence linking the bombs to the verdicts, but Cesar Jaroslavsky, party leader in Congress, attributed the explosions to "extreme rightist groups with very presumable connections to the ousted dictatorship."

Galtieri, Anaya and Lami Dozo were convicted of violating Article 740 of the Code of Military Justice, which covers "the military crime of negligence."

Proceedings in the court martial, which began in November 1983, were held in private for what was called "reasons of national security."

According to periodic leaks from the trial, the general serving as prosecutor said the three men led the country into a war for which it was not prepared.

Gen. Hector Canale charged that the commanders were negligent in preparing defenses after invading the British-held islands 250 miles off the Argentine coast on April 2, 1982, because they did not think Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government would fight.

Britain sent a naval task force. The war lasted 74 days, costing the live of 255 Britons and 712 Argentines.

Galtieri was ousted two days after the surrender.

More than 40 farmers' marts are set to open

AUSTIN (AP) — Farmers' markets will be opening this spring in more than 40 Texas cities and towns, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Friday.

"Many of the new markets this season are sprouting up in the West Texas-Panhandle area and along the Gulf Coast," Hightower said.

He said eight smaller markets are already open and five more are scheduled to open this Saturday. The others will open in late May through June.

"The recent rains should really improve both the quality and the quanity of the fresh produce that is available at markets opening in the weeks ahead," said David Currie, TDA's farmers market specialist.

Unfortunately, Currie said, "because of the mild, dry winter, this season's peach crop won't be as large as it was last year."

Flying dinosaur replica crashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $700,000 flying replica of a giant pterodactyl, making its first public performance with more than 100 news cameras watching, turned a flip-flop today in its early moments of free flight and crashed unceremoniously to the ground.

"Now we know what happened to the dinosaurs," said a colonel at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, where the demonstration was held.

The pterodactyl, built for a starring role in a new large screen movie "On the Wing," for the Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum was towed for 2,000 feet with a high speed winch.

At that point, on schedule, a rudder dropped off and the tow line was released. The pterodactyl, did a 360 degree turn and headed for the tarmac. It seemed to right itself for a moment, then took the plunge.

A small blue parachute, designed for such disasters, popped out but it was too late. The creature's long neck was broken.

"The head, which controls the yaw, seemed to deflect in the right turn so it acted like a speed brake slowing it down," said Steve Fitch, technical manager for the Air and Space Museum.

The real pterodactyls were winged reptiles that lived in the age of dinosaurs 65 million years ago. Its replica has a wingspread of 18 feet and it is controlled by radio.

The demonstration was held in conjunction with Armed Forces Day.

ing stage until these weevils are deceased," Ensor said.

Young weevils feed on the "square" stage of the cotton plant. If the timing of the weevil hatch and this early stage of the cotton plant fall simultaneously, the result is a substantial loss of emerging cotton plants.

Ensor estimated cotton farmers have until June 10 to safely plant this year's crop.

"We're up to the time when we get nervous. But we've still got plenty of time," he said.

"Any farmer will tell you what we really need now is a good 2 or 3 inch rain."

Banned college yearbook is published 20 years later

GRINNELL, Iowa (AP) — It was the turbulent 1960s. John, Paul, George and Ringo were all the rage, college students were questioning authority when they weren't driving it crazy, and where have all the yearbooks gone, long time passing?

At Grinnell College they haven't been blowing in the wind.

Publication of the 1966 yearbook was banned by then-president Glenn Leggett, who said he found 30 potentially libelous items in it. For 20 years, the photographs and type have been sitting in a bank vault.

But that was then. This is now.

The Grinnell College 1966 Yearbook finally was published this week — every word, every photograph that gave offense then. And the fabric of the republic is still intact.

School president George Drake, who ordered it published, said, "The book is not, from the point of view of 1986, a very controversial document."

Drake, who has been Grinnell's president since 1980, said he decided to have the book published because of the quality of the photography and because, "You see the tremendous range of an institution at a point of change."

The book appears just as it was laid out by editor Henry Wilhelm. Only a new introduction by Grinnell history professor Joseph Wall and a statement by Wilhelm have been added.

Wilhelm, who still lives in Grinnell, said Friday he wants the book itself to be noticed now, not the controversy.

He said he has lived 20 years with rumors about what got the book banned, rumors including graphic nudity, sex and drunken brawls. "It's been awful and it still is," he said.

But Drake said, "I think there's less skin in this book than in any Grinnell yearbook I've ever seen."

Leggett, who also still lives in Grinnell, has declined comment.

The photographs and captions place Grinnell College in 1966 in a world where not many people seem concerned by the Vietnam War — the book mentions that a faculty-staff study group on Vietnam was formed but quickly disbanded — and one in which the administration kicks coeds out of school for being out of their rooms after hours.

It also was a time that prompted such passages as this:

"If you don't want to risk getting caught sleeping with a girl in the dorm you can borrow a car and go to one of the motels around town. They usually don't ask if you're married and even if they do you can always lie about it."

FM 1611 vote still not set

would cost local taxpayers some $340,000.

He estimates the annual cost of maintenance to the two-mile stretch at some $12,800 annually. He estimates another $5,000 in saved maintenance expenses based upon the reduced truck traffic load to other county roads.

In another letter to the editor included with this issue, one of the heirs to the affected property, Sam Joyce, notes the family could not grant right-of-way because of will provisions which state "none of the Winston Brother's estate property can be divided or sold."

Joyce also notes his objection to the project due to "the havoc it will play" in their ranch operations in addition to the expenses to be borne by taxpayers.

If built, the highway would divide a portion of the Winston family ranch.

The proposed $1.2 million extension of FM 1611 would be paid for by the state. The county must provide any right-of-way expenses related to land purchases — an unknown factor at this point — plus other expenses now estimated in excess of $43,000.

No estimate has been given for the land purchase since a condemnation board would be required to set a value.

Regarding the $43,000, this would entail such items as lowering pipelines in the affected area and building fences adjacent to the highway for the current property owners.

If the county opts to accept the state's offer to build the highway, a series of public hearings are still required. Those would seek final approval from other governmental entities to include an environmental impact study of the area.

Public comment would be a factor in the outcome of these hearings.

Transplant gives new lease on life

not have the transplant.

The surgery was performed at Lubbock General Hospital under the supervision of Dr. Neal Glass, head of the hospital's transplant program. Dr. Lynn Avant assisted by removing the kidney from Jones's sister.

"I was in pain, but Carol hurt worse than I did and it took her longer to recuperate." The process involved more surgery on the donor than the recipient, she said. "But she is okay now and back in Austin."

Vickie spent 10 days in the hospital in Lubbock, checking in Feb. 5 and undergoing the transplant Feb. 7.

Since her release, she has had local bloodwork done twice a week. This is necessary to determine if her body is accepting or rejecting the new organ.

She also has to take anti-rejection medication--something she must do the rest of her life--and bladder medication since the new kidney is attached to her bladder. She also takes medication to suppress her immunization system so that it won't reject the new kidney and a liquid to protect her stomach from the other medications.

more to come

She said rejection episodes are common and that they are treated by increasing the anti-rejection medication.

Even with all the pluses in her life, there is a negative side, she said. The medication has increased her appetite and to date she has gained 13 pounds.

She is controlling her diet and exercising three times a week to offset this. Before surgery she said she barely felt like eating one meal a day. Now she easily eats three.

"But I feel so good now I can stand a little weight," she said.

She emphasized that she is very grateful to all the people who supported her and to those who contributed to the special account set up for her.

Medicare and Kidney Health Care are paying for the bulk of the medical costs and travel expenses to and from Lubbock. Each blood test costs $85 and the medication costs several hundred dollars a month.

She said she has no regrets about the transplant and said she is willing to talk to anyone facing this same problem.

Now she said she enjoys going back to the hospital and visiting with future transplant patients. "They are usually scared," she said, "just like I was. We all form a close relationship."

Her experience has also made her keenly aware of the need for donors. To that end, she has indicated she wishes her organs to be donated.

"It's such a wonderful thing to do for someone. I encourage anyone to do it."

To The Palm Reader

NEVER MIND, GOD

Elaine Toussaint

God, our child needs some milk today,
Therefore to you I humbly pray.
O God, thank you, but never mind;
A neighbor who's so very kind,
Dropped by with all the milk we need,
Saving us with her good deed.

God, sorry to bother you again,
But now my child needs medicine.
She's got this awful cough and flu;
I really don't know what to do.
O God, thank you, but never mind.
Now she's playing and doing fine.

God, I have this to ask of thee,
I need a job immediately.
O God, thank you, but never mind.
Even though jobs are hard to find,
A friend from church stopped by to say
His firm could use me right away.

God, if I have some other woe,
I'll be sure to let you know.
But situations up to now
Just seemed to solve themselves somehow.
It does seem strange how things worked through,
Right after I had prayed to you.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

A slightly different walk, and a slenderness unlike most teens his age are clues that one Snyder High School junior has muscular dystrophy.

But for DeWayne Mauldin — "Peanut" to friends and family — the as yet incurable disease hasn't slowed his dreams and plans. "I look at it this way. It's going to take its toll sooner or later, but I'm going to do everything in my power to slow it down. Sometimes I just ignore it and try to live life as it goes," he earnestly explained.

He admits that the adjustment at first was difficult. "It was hard at first because I wanted to ask "Why me and why now?"

Although the family knew that a problem existed when DeWayne was as young as 10 years old, the final diagnones did not come until last November. "I knew something was happening to me when I was 10. I seemed to lose my strength and I was becoming kinda awkward," he explained.

When DeWayne developed pneumonia last August, his local physician noticed his difficulty in movement and suggested he be seen by a specialist. After a series of tests, his doctors diagnosed the problem as limb-girdle dystrophy - a muscular disease that effects primarily his limbs and his midsection as the name implies.

DeWayne attributes his change in attitude to his parents and to the treatment he has received in the Snyder school system. Ray Courtney, high school principal, arranged for football trainer "Doc" Clark to set up a physical therapy program for DeWayne. "He also got me interested in training and has helped me with life in general. He and Mr. Courtney both told me, 'If you have the heart and courage to do it, you can do it.' That has helped me quite a bit."

He admits that administrators, teachers and students alike have supported him since the disease was discovered. "I'm proud of this school — very proud. They have helped me tremendously. Mr. Courtney and Mr. Short helped me work out a schedule so that I have a period to work out and to rest so I can be ready for the rest of the day. Teachers have been lenient as far as homework because they know I've been out a lot of days to go to the doctor. They have been very supportive. This is the best school system I've ever been in.

"The students help me out quite a bit, too. I have a lot of friends that support me."

Because muscular dystrophy is an incurable disease, many groups try to raise funds to support research and to provide needed services to families. The most public of those groups is the Muscular Dystrophy Association with its annual Jerry Lewis telethon.

Among the corporations that traditionally contribute to MDA is the Town and Country Food Store chain. DeWayne's mother, Kay Hendricks, happens to manage the local outlet. For her, raising funds helps in two ways — the store's image and her son. "For us, its one way of repaying them (MDA) for the help that we've gotten," said DeWayne's stepfather, Scott.

"Each store chooses its own form of fundraising," Kay explained. "We've been recognized the last three years as raising the most funds of any store our size."

One major fundraising event for the local store will be a softball tournament June 6-8 with all proceeds to benefit MDA. Kay and Scott have worked many hours over the past few months working out the details.

The tournament will follow United States Slowpitch Softball Association rules and will be governed by certified umpires. A $100 entry will be required for each participating team. Deadline for interested persons is June 1.

PREPARING TO BE A TRAINER—DeWayne Mauldin and head football coach, Dennis Tomlin, examine a first aid kit. If DeWayne is chosen as a trainer, he will help prepare kits like this one for road trips. (SDN Staff Photo)

The Hendricks explained that all monies raised can be given directly to MDA because many business persons and others have donated food, drinks and other items and services to the cause.

In conjunction with the tournament, a dunking booth and other activities will be held at the store.

Last year, the district that includes the local store raised the most funds. For that honor, the district manager went to Las Vegas, where Lewis' show originates, to present the check from the corporation.

DeWayne hopes that someday he has the opportunity to see the show live. "It would be real neat to go see the show. I'd like to go if I could get away."

But more than that, DeWayne would like to assist with fundraising. "Like I told Mom, I'd be willing to raise funds in any way possible while I still can because it will benefit me and others."

His doctors have explained that DeWayne must keep a balance between activity to stimulate his muscles and rest to prevent overdoing. "I enjoy working. It's hard for me to sit down and do nothing." So, the high school junior works hard at school in order to be accepted at Texas Tech to major in computer engineering. "I can do it if I try," he emphasized. And he certainly plans to try, just ask him.

Many pecan growers in Scurry County have contacted my office regarding when to treat for Pecan Nut Casebearer. At this time we are expecting the spray schedule to begin around May 21. This is still an estimated date and the pecan growers should be prepared to treat their trees a few days earlier if needed.

Inspections made in Scurry County on May 15 found a very small number of eggs.

To spray applications for casebearer control, first check for eggs on a daily basis. Eggs are usually found on the tips of nutlets and are about the size of the ball-point pen. The eggs are white when first laid, then turn red over a three-to-five day period before turning white again after they hatch. Apply an insecticide the third day after the eggs hatch so as to kill the larvae before they enter the nutlets. Since the larvae will hatch over a week-long period or more, a second spraying may be necessary.

Insecticides recommended for casebearer control include Zolone, Guthion, Malathion, and Sevin. Homeowners may want to include a fungicide such as Benomyl for scab control and NZN should be added for growth and control of rosette.

A good mixture for the homeowner would be four tablespoons Zolone, three tablespoons Benomyl and six teaspoons NZN for three gallons water. Other insecticides can be substituted for Zolone, three tablespoons Benomyl and six teaspoons NZN for three gallons water. Other insecticides can be substituted for Zolone according to the manufacturers label recommendations.

The most important part of this mixture of course is the insecticide for the control of the pecan nut casebearer, the other ingredients can be added at the discreation of the homeowner. But the timing of the application should be delayed until after the eggs have hatched.

The County Extension Office will maintain a current status report on this insect during the next few days and will notify the news media as soon as it is time to spray.

Determining where you stand

By James Jacoby

Terence Reese's reputation as the complete bridge writer is well deserved. Today's North-South hands are from his 1978 book, "The Most Puzzling Situations in Bridge Play," and I have exercised a little imagination of my own to construct the East-West hands. As declarer in six hearts, South receives the normal, expected opening lead of the spade king. So how do you plan the play?

The deal comes under the chapter heading of "Which Suit First?" and the answer is to first see if the diamond king is favorably located. So declarer sheds a diamond as he wins his spade ace, plays king of hearts and then the A-Q, and then takes the diamond finesse. When the queen holds the trick, declarer is not yet completely home, but he does know that he no longer needs four club tricks to make his contract. However, he does need more than just the ace and king of clubs to come to 12 tricks. The safest play is the king of clubs and back to the ace, and then up to the jack. Because East holds the queen doubleton, that play makes the contract. Had South played to the jack on the first or second round of the suit, the contract would have failed. Nevertheless, if the diamond finesse had lost, he would have had no choice except to play all out to make four tricks in clubs.

We thus see the answer to which suit first. Try the diamonds, and let your success or failure there determine how you play the clubs.

WATER PARTICLES

DENVER (AP) — Within the last 10 years, scientists have been able to detect particles in water to the billionth — even trillionth — degree.

That technology has led to their discovery of infinitesimal amounts of known carcinogens — cancer-causing substances. But, there's no crisis at hand, according to the American Water Works Association. It says biochemists have shown those minute amounts detected are inconsequential to the causes of human cancer. Carcinogens, in fact, are found in many basic foods and beverages at much higher levels than in water, says the association.

Compared to many of the foods and beverages people consume, drinking water is, by far, the safest, it concludes.

SELECT FROZEN MEALS FOR NUTRITION

People who are trying to cut back on salt and fat in their diets should carefully read the labels on the frozen plate dinners and entrees they buy.

A recent study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that store-bought frozen dinners and entrees have high levels of fat and sodium.

Sodium content ranged from 900 to 1164 milligrams in the five national brand products tested, while 1100 to 3300 milligrams of sodium is estimated to be a safe and adequate daily intake for adults.

The fat content of frozen dinners included in the study ranged from 14 to 24 grams per serving for dinners and 2 to 16 grams per serving for the entrees. The lighter entrees contained 2 to 5 grams of fat per serving.

This amount of fat in frozen dinners and entrees represents a substantial part of the recommended 65 to 75 grams for persons consuming about 2000 calories a day.

Judging the nutritional adequacy of frozen plate dinners and entrees is no easy task, even with the help of nutrition labels. It's especially important that people on low-sodium or low-fat diets make the effort.

Consumers can use nutrition labels to make comparisons among the products.

Look for those that contain higher percentages of the Recommended Dietary Allowances for the most nutrients. Also look for products that contain fewer grams of fat, or a lower percentage of total calories as fat, and fewer milligrams of sodium.

When you buy a convenience product that is low in certain nutrients or higher in fat or sodium, you can compensate by adjusting what you eat during the rest of the day.

The consumer can also compare the nutrient content of the frozen meal to the foods you typically eat.

If the convenience product contains about the same amount of meat, vegetable or fruit, and rice or pasta you normally eat at a meal, it probably will make a similar nutritional contribution to your day's food intake.

Greenway has H.E. program

Getting rid of the junk, litter, and clutter in your home will simplify house cleaning, June Greenway told members of Patchwork Squares Extension Club when they met at her home Tuesday. In the program on "Housework Made Easier" she recommended using four boxes when cleaning closets. Items removed should be categorized as—1) junk, 2) suitable for charity or garage sales, 3) things to resort later because you simply can't decide now, and 4) "emotional withdrawal" items, those things you know you should discard, but can't bring yourself to do it yet. Go through this box in a few months and see if you can part with it then.

Mrs. Greenway recommended the use of mats at all outside doors to catch dirt being brought in on people's feet. She also said that by spending 3½ minutes a day a bathroom can be kept odor and germ free. Several hints on being better organized was discussed.

Ruby Clark, president, conducted the meeting. Eight members answered roll call by telling their favorite cake. Sharon Fulton was welcomed as a new member, also welcomed were three guests, Viola Livesay, Frances Loyd and Valeta Wheeler.

Joyce McCoy and Peggy Remington reported on the District II meeting held at Floydada in April. The next district meeting will be held in Post in the spring.

Anita Matthews reported on the Council Meeting. The March bake sale was reported successful. A Christmas craft day is planned for late October. Two members, Ruby Clark and Freida Dever participated in the Healhfest Saturday.

A salad luncheon followed the business meeting.

"Rangeland Inventory" is the subject of a new fact sheet released recently by the USDA Soil Conservation Service. The leaflet suggests items livestock producers can inventory to determine the condition of their range resources.

One of the first steps in developing or updating a rangeland management plan is an inventory of resources. Before livestock producers make plans to improve or better use rangelands, they need to know exactly what resources are available and their condition. A detailed inventory can provide this information."

Items to be inventoried can include range sites, range condition, forage inventory, fence locations, water supply, erosion, brush control, grazing distribution patterns, wildlife and recreation potentials, location of corrals, and the location of salt and feeding areas. Soil Conservation personnel assisting the local Upper Colorado Soil & Water Conservation District can help landowners or operators make rangeland inventories.

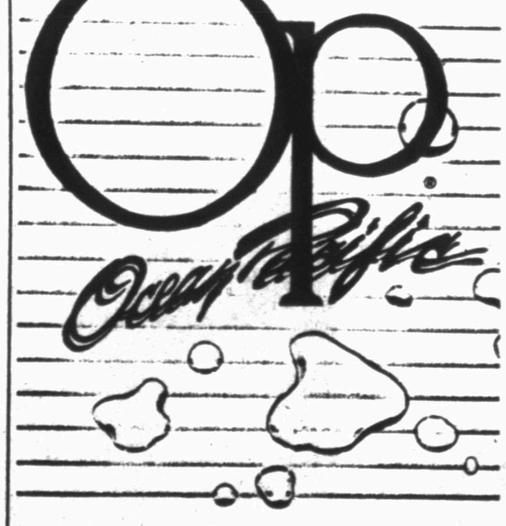

Single copies of "Rangeland Inventory" are available free at the SCS Office located at 3423 Ave. T.

Pipeline work to be delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge accepted an agreement to delay construction of a heated oil pipeline until an environmental impact statement is prepared for the section that would cross the Edwards Aquifer recharge zone.

Residents of Travis, Hays and Gillespie counties opposed the last leg of the All American pipeline. The pipeline, with a proposed route over the recharge zone in Central Texas, would carry crude oil from California.

"Hopefully this will resolve all the concerns about the pipeline," Jim George, an attorney for All American, told Judge James Nowlin.

Under the agreement, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management will study the route over the recharge zone as well as alternative routes. The agreement between Texas, All American Pipeline Co. and the Bureau of Land Management also calls for public hearings during the study process.

Officials said the data-gathering process will delay for almost a year construction on the 460-mile Texas segment, east of McCamey, of the 1,650-mile pipeline.

Work on a small portion of the pipeline in Texas, west of McCamey, will continue because that section was included in a previous environmental study, officials said.

The state of Texas sued the pipeline company and the bureau in federal court. The state said an environmental statement was needed for the pipeline from McCamey in West Texas to the Gulf Coast.

The state has agreed to raise further objections, if any, during the review process. The state also has agreed not to challenge the adequacy of the study once it is completed.

The federal bureau, under the settlement, did not admit that a federal environmental study was required for the lower Texas portion of the pipeline. The company, a subsidiary of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., will pay for the review.

The pipeline company may continue condemnation proceedings already started. The company also may enter people's land for archeological, environmental or historical preservation surveys, officials said.

The agreement does not allow the pipeline company to survey for construction purposes.

Nowlin first called the agreement "a fair settlement of the issues before the court."

In 1692, the chieftain of the MacDonald clan of Glencoe, Scotland, and 40 of his men were massacred by British soldiers led by a member of the Campbell clan. The Campbells were hereditary enemies of the MacDonalds. The pretext was that MacIan of MacDonald was the only chief not to take an oath of allegiance to the British king. In fact he had, but the oath was kept secret by the king's agent.

'Ghost' said to hover over convention

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Despite his death 10 months ago, a politician has been unanimously elected to represent a precinct at the El Paso County Democratic convention Saturday.

The choice seems in keeping with politics in this border city west of the Pecos, where candidates in the May 3 primaries included one who was dead, two who posted bail to get out of jail and promptly resumed campaigning and another two who set up campaign headquarters in a psychiatric ward and a local bar.

"His spirit will be there, by God," said lawyer Bob Neill, who helped choose Woodrow Bean during the primary to be among the 18 delegates for Precinct 14.

"I wouldn't be surprised if Mr. Bean made it all the way to the state convention," scheduled for June in Austin, Neill added.

Bean, the dean of El Paso Democratic politics for more than 50 years, died July 13, 1985 of lung cancer. He was 67.

Always controversial, Bean was "an old stand-by, dyed-in-the-wool, yellow-dog Democrat," said Harry Guilford, party secretary in El Paso County.

Bean was first elected to the Texas Legislature in 1940 and to county judge in the 1950s and 60s. He ran for office more than a dozen times.

"He was an extremely colorful person, not bashful or shy about his point of view," said Neill. "It was never boring when Mr. Bean was around.

" This Democratic campaign was boring."

Boring? Candidates running for office in the May 3 primary included:

—State District Judge Edwin Berliner, who died after the deadline for removing names from the ballot, leaving contender Peter S. Peca Jr. conducting a lonesome campaign. Peca was elected to the judgeship.

—County Attorney Danny Anchondo, arrested April 15 on cocaine charges. On the Tuesday before elections, Anchondo was indicted, booked into the county jail and released on $5,000 bond. He claimed the arrest was politically motivated and hit the campaign trail running. Anchondo lost to his opponent.

—Michael Webster, who ran for a seat on the county commission and claimed that his arrest on the same day as Anchondo's was also political. Webster's former campaign manager turned him in, claiming the candidate hit him over the head when he tried to retrieve a stove, refrigerator, washer, dryer and television set. Webster was charged with felony theft, booked into the county jail and released after posting $5,000 bond. Webster lost.

—Hoss Garvey, who had set up temporary campaign headquarters at the psychiatric wing of the county hospital. He was later transfered to a state facility after his mother had him committed for dangerous behavior, including throwing two bowling balls through a neighbor's window. Garvey received a mere 513 votes.

—Veteran Justice of the Peace Walter McGhee, whose choice of the Incredibles bar as campaign headquarters prompted opponents to call for his resignation. McGhee, who declined to resign, will be in a runoff set for June 7.

Edward Kennedy, Jr. speaks out

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy Jr. told graduates of a college program for learning-disabled students to strive to conquer any challenge.

Kennedy, son of U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., told the 16 graduates of the Threshhold Program at Lesley College, "There were times in my life when I felt isolated and alone and I felt that no one understood the problems that I faced. But like so many of you, it was my family who made the difference by refusing to treat me as special."

After losing a leg to cancer at age 12, Kennedy helped develop programs for the handicapped.

The Threshhold Program, which includes 40 students between the ages of 18 and 26, trains students in academic, vocational and social skills.

Chinese try Vodka Bronx under watchful eye of aged bouncers

PEKING (AP) — Patrons more accustomed to Chinese beer, wine and spirits are warily bellying up to what's being billed as the first cocktail lounge for Chinese.

Sixty-year-old bouncers watch for rowdies and Jin the bartender mixes Western-style drinks at the newly opened Modern Times Restaurant, an intimate little watering hole some Chinese visitors find puzzling at first.

Most Chinese restaurants serve beer and a choice of Chinese wines and spirits, but Western-style cocktails are all but unknown.

"Some customers ask our opinion about what to order," said Jin Yansheng, 29, a former pastry chef and Modern Times star bartender. "We also have some customers who try different drinks one by one."

The menu offers 16 cocktails, including Vodka Bronx, Manhattan, Old Fashion, Rapture, Saucy Sue, Whip, Honolulu and Cuba Libre. Jin also is working on perfecting his piece de resistance — the Rainbow-1.

The idea for the cocktail lounge, which shares premises with a coffee shop, a Western restaurant and pastry shop, came from leaders in Peking's No. 2 Commercial Bureau, said manager Zhou Zheng.

"There was much debate about this," said Zhou. "Some worried that since it was the first one, there would be few customers. Others were afraid of hooligans and drunks."

No, or low, carbohydrate diets may temporarily lose weight (water) but surely lose your health. By burning more fats and protein for needed energy, this overloads your kidneys with ketone bodies and nitrogen - very damaging to kidneys. Clements manager resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — The manager of former Gov. Bill Clements' victorious primary campaign, Ed Cassidy Jr., has resigned, a campaign spokesman says.

Clements press secretary Reggie Bashur, in a telephone interview from Dallas, said Cassidy "has some possibilities he wants to explore."

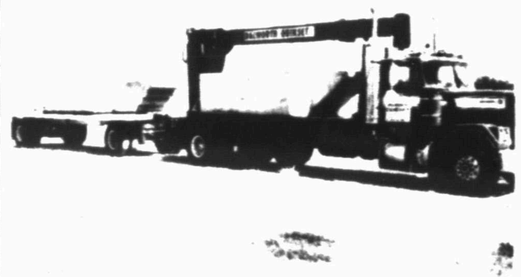

Bashur said Thursday that the decision to leave was Cassidy's, and he emphasized that Clements was happy with the work Cassidy had done.

"Not at all. We won," Bashur said when asked if Clements was displeased with the campaign manager's performance.

Clements received just over 58 percent of the vote in the May 3 Republican primary, defeating U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt and former congressman Kent Hance of Lubbock.

He said the campaign plans to move its headquarters from Dallas to Austin.

Big Spring police chief resigns post

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — City council members pressured Police Chief Rick Turner into resigning because he was politically "volatile," three board members said.

And the council asked City Attorney Doyle Curtis to quit because the city needed to save money, acting City Manager Hal Boyd said Thursday.

Turner said he was leaving with regret, but added, "I feel that my resignation would benefit a political atmosphere in our city."

Boyd has appointed Capt. Lonnie Smith as acting police chief until a successor is named.

The turnover comes three months after the resignation of City Manager Don Davis, who was then hired on a 60-day consulting contract that expired April 30. Shortly after Davis resigned, administrative assistant Pat Hardy resigned his post for a job in Minnesota.

The call for the police chief and city attorney to resign follows a three-hour closed door meeting of the City Council Monday in which all city directors were evaluated. Boyd was excluded from the meeting.

Boyd said he asked for the resignations on unanimous advice from councilmen.

Casey recants threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William Casey has retreated from an earlier threat to seek prosecution of major newspapers and magazines for disclosing information about U.S. intelligence capabilities.

Casey, in a luncheon address Thursday at the American Jewish Committee's annual meeting, said he did not favor prosecution now that "the milk has been spilled." But he said the law must be enforced in the future.

"Where there already has been public disclosure about communications intelligence, the law has been violated but the milk has been spilled," he said. "I would not, therefore, at this time favor action for these past offenses.

"But I strongly believe that if we are to protect our security as a nation and the safety of our citizens ... the law ... must now be enforced."

Radio contest disrupts

AUSTIN (AP) — A $10,000 radio giveaway contest had telephone service disrupted over most of the city for nearly an hour, Southwestern Bell Telephone officials said.

The crisis came Thursday when radio station KEY-103 offered a $10,000 cash prize to the 103rd caller after the announcement was made.

"We know our call volumes were up about 100 percent but that's just the one's that got dial tones," said Paul Paulsen, Southwestern Bell district manager. He said dial tones were delayed up to three minutes while the 45-minute contest was on. "Virtually every part of the city showed some service impairment."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your confidence in your abilities is a trifle fragile today, and this could cause you to neglect doing something for fear of failing.

Kidnappers give up; kids ok

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two young boys, "dirty but happy," were recovered unharmed in Mexico after being kidnapped from their home by gun-wielding men who gave up trying to collect an estimated $500,000 ransom, the FBI said.

Ben Bohannon, 4, and his 2-year-old brother, Matt, were found shortly before 8 p.m. MDT Thursday inside a blue Ford parked on a street corner in Ciudad Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from this border city, said FBI spokesman Gary Webb.

No ransom was paid and no arrests had been made, but the FBI was continuing the investigation, he said.

The boys are the only children of Tom and Susan Bohannon, owners of Bohannon Development Corp. Mrs. Bohannon is also the daughter of Charles H. Foster, a wealthy El Paso builder and contractor.

Webb said the children apparently had been taken to Juarez after the Tuesday morning abduction from their home in an exclusive El Paso neighborhood. The kidnappers, brandishing .38-caliber handguns, burst into the house, handcuffed the maid and left a note warning the family not to contact authorities.

They were unsure whether the kidnappers, described as Hispanic males, had used a blue pickup truck with Chihuahua, Mexico, license plates as a getaway vehicle.

The family received several calls in the following days with instructions.

Although the FBI declined to reveal the amount of ransom demanded, Webb said $500,000 was "in the ballpark."

"At about 7:25 p.m. (MDT Thursday), they received another call from the kidnappers and, basically, what the kidnappers said is, 'We give up, there's more of you than there's of us. You can have your kids. They'll be at this intersection. Don't leave your kids there,'" Webb said. "The kids were dirty but happy."

Webb speculated that the kidnappers may have been discouraged by the presence of agents from the Direccion General de Investigaciones, a Mexican federal agency whose duties include kidnapping investigations. The Mexican agents "aren't that hard to spot and don't play around," Webb said.

The FBI usually does not become involved in kidnappings for 24 hours after they occur, but since there was a strong suspicion that the children had been taken into Mexico, the FBI joined the investigation immediately, he added.

A call to the family Tuesday night instructed them to "Get the police and the press out of there," Webb said.

"The kidnappers said that if authorities were contacted, the two kids would die on the spot, no questions asked," Webb said.

Wednesday night, Bohannon checked into a motel with three FBI agents, one of whom posed as his brother-in-law, Webb said. The kidnappers called Bohannon at the motel and let his son, Ben, speak to him briefly.

"Ben said, 'I'm eating ice cream next to a McDonald's and I'm with the big boy Jack in the pickup,'" Webb said. "He also said Matt had gone somewhere else, that the two had been split."

Thursday, the kidnappers made several calls telling Bohannon to stand at certain street corners, then to go into a shop and buy an item, and finally to take a taxicab across the border into Juarez, bringing the ransom money with him, Webb said. The FBI agent posing as Bohannon's brother-in-law went along.

"They stood around for two hours and nothing happened, so they went back to El Paso," at about 4:30 p.m. MDT, said Webb. "They cleared up the motel room and went home."

In the final call Thursday evening, the kidnappers told the family, "We give up. You can have your kids. It's like they threw their hands up in the air and gave up," Webb said.

City council upsets people by not hiring police officer

DAWSON, Texas (AP) — City Council has hired a new night watchman to replace an elderly man who was slain, but some residents of this Central Texas community would rather have a police force.

Those who packed three council meetings in 10 days reacted angrily to last week's 3-2 vote not to hire a policeman for the city of 750, about 60 miles south of Dallas. Some said a police presence is needed to combat a drug problem.

The three council members who voted against the measure cited the expense of an officer's salary, police car and liability insurance.

The two councilmen who voted in favor and Mayor Robert Holder, who votes only in case of a tie, argued that the money could be raised.

"We've got a couple of hardliners around here that don't want law enforcement brought into this town," Holder said. "I'm an American, and I believe the majority ought to rule. When you have a large majority of the town saying they are concerned about something like they are, someone ought to take a little deeper interest in it."

Councilman J.C. Slater, who voted against hiring an officer, said the reasons are strictly financial.

"It's not that any of us are against having a lawman," he said. "All of us want one, but you've got to get the money."

Several residents who want a police officer, including Holder and Councilwoman Rita Shankle, said Dawson has a drug problem far beyond those of other small towns.

Some suspect that drugs might have been involved in the killing of Calvin Atchley, the 74-year-old man who made late-night rounds to check on businesses and homes.

Atchley was shot twice by surprising burglars in his home May 5, sheriff's department officials said. Authorities added that Atchley had received several threats, possibly from people he had angered on his beat.

And after Atchley's house was burglarized in April while he and his wife were away, a man claiming to be one of the burglars called Atchley's daughter in Hubbard and said the house would be broken into again when someone was home.

Holder said rumors that drugs were involved in Atchley's killing are hearsay, but he said Atchley "was very efficient in his duties, and he knew what went on. They said it was a burglary, but if I was going to rob somebody, I'd take the guns. But the guns were still there."

Gas production said shut down

HOUSTON (AP) — Coastal Corp., which shut down about 53 percent of its gas production in South and West Texas because of declining oil and gas prices, also is studying whether to cut production in other areas, a corporate official says.

Though the company's producing operations are profitable, it was "imprudent" for Coastal to produce at "today's distress prices," Oscar Wyatt Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said in statement released Thursday.

Wyatt predicted oil and gas prices would rise soon.

"The action of foreign producers to depress prices and our administration's apparent approval of this action means shortages and higher prices are inevitable and will occur sooner than many people think," he said.

Coastal's South and West Texas gas production was cut off when wellhead spot market prices fell below $1.50 a thousand cubic feet, at least partly because of "competition from depressed fuel oil prices resulting from existing OPEC marketing policies," Wyatt said.

The company is now studying which operating wells can be shut down without damaging the producing reservoir or violating lease provisions, he said.

Coastal recently reported its operating profit from production operations totaled $10.5 million for the three months of 1986 on total production from all areas, which averaged 12,000 barrels of oil and 223 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

The company, a diversified energy company based in Houston, has total assets of about $7.7 billion.

NASA said probing shredding allegation

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA said today it is investigating an anonymous allegation that copies of weekly notes in some files at the Marshall Space Flight Center were discarded or destroyed after the space shuttle Challenger exploded on Jan. 28.

"The office of inspector general and the presidential commission are investigating the allegation and appropriate action will be taken as soon as the facts are ascertained," the space agency said in a statement.

NASA said it was informed on Thursday by William Rogers, chairman of the presidential commission probing the accident, that the commission had received an anonymous letter alleging that the destroyed material consisted of "documents pertaining to weekly engineering reports on solid booster problems."

The receipt of the letter was first disclosed by the Chicago Tribune, which said the commission's investigators confirmed that some documents had been destroyed long after NASA ordered all accident-related documents impounded.

The Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., has charge of all propulsion systems for the shuttle.

Money laundering not involved in growth

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Cash flow at the only bank in this West Texas border town has doubled since 1982, but the bank president says it is not because of drug money laundering.

Since Mexican banks were nationalized in Sept. 1982, Mexicans are not allowed to have accounts in U.S. dollars and have turned to banks north of the border to conduct business in foreign currency, said Richard Slack, president of First Presidio Bank.

Slack, who's been president of the closely held bank since its establishment 11 years ago, said he was angry at allegations made by U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab in Washington on Tuesday.

Von Raab told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that, as an example of the effects of drug smuggling and money laundering along the border, the bank in this town of some 2,000 residents had become the sixth largest in Texas. Customs spokesman Jim Mahan later said that was erroneous.

The bank, with total assets of $11 million, is among the smallest state banks in Texas, said Texas Banking Commissioner James Sexton. The median total assets among the state's 888 banks is $45 million, Sexton said,

"Where they picked that up, I don't know. We may be the sixth smallest," Slack said Thursday, calling the allegations unfair.

Cash flow through the bank, about 150,000-160,000 a week, has doubled in the last 3½ years, Slack said.

"There may be some dope money in the money that comes across," Slack said. "But every bank up and down the river has quite a cash flow. We didn't have this until they nationalized the banks."

Personnel in the Texas Banking Commission are currently being trained by the Internal Revenue Service and the U.S. Treasury Department to spot money laundering, Sexton said.

Recycled Wedding Gift Creates a Family Stink

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My brother's daughter (I'll call her Melanie) sent us an invitation to her wedding, which was to take place last June (1985). We were unable to attend, but my husband and I sent her an expensive gift.

Around the middle of May (of last year) my brother called to tell us the wedding had been called off, and he asked if we wanted our wedding gift back. I said yes we did, and he promised to pass the information on to Melanie. Well, it's been nearly a year and we still don't have that gift.

Here's the big problem: Last winter Melanie's sister, Judy, sent us an announcement of her marriage, which took place in Las Vegas. We immediately sent word to Melanie asking her to send the wedding gift she received from us to her sister who was really married. Then we wrote a letter of congratulations to Judy telling her to expect our gift soon.

As of today we have not heard a word from either Melanie or Judy.

Should we write to Judy and ask her if she ever received our wedding gift? If she says no, should we contact Melanie and remind her again to send Judy the gift? Or should we contact my brother and ask him to handle it?

DISGUSTED AUNT

DEAR AUNT: Melanie should have returned your gift as soon as the wedding was called off. Failing to do so showed very poor taste. But your asking her to hand over the gift to her more deserving sister showed equally poor taste.

If you want to give Judy a wedding gift, forget the one you gave Melanie, and buy one for Judy. Don't ask your brother to run interference for you. He must have enough headaches.

DEAR ABBY: Can you advise me as to the difference between borrowing and begging?

We have a good neighbor who has "borrowed" everything from the proverbial cup of sugar to kindling. Among things borrowed from us are garbage bags, hair combs, six eggs, a quart of milk, bread, garden tools, a tire pump and shampoo. Nothing was returned except the garden tools, and we had to go and get them ourselves.

I have always thought that when people borrowed things they returned them. Since we are senior citizens and these neighbors are young, I'm wondering if the younger generation may not know the difference between begging and borrowing.

My question: What can I say that will not hurt the feelings of the children who are always sent to do the borrowing?

BORED WITH BORROWERS

DEAR BORED: The next time a child is sent to "borrow" something, don't be sharp, simply say, "Not right now, but please have your mother call me." And when she calls, tell her that when one borrows something there is an expressed or implied intention of returning the same or the equivalent. Some good people need to be reminded.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I can't resist adding my two cents in answer to "Wedding Ruined," because a child's voice could be heard throughout the ceremony, and God forbid, was "forever recorded on the video."

Abby, since when is a child's voice an irritant? Couples today make such a production of their weddings, they lose sight of what it's all about.

My husband's brother and his fiance planned one such "production." On the eve of their wedding, the bride-to-be announced that our 3-week-old son would not be welcome at the wedding. The ensuing controversy led to the cancellation of the wedding.

JOAN S.

DEAR JOAN: Some people welcome children everywhere and some do not. It's neither right nor wrong; it's a matter of personal preference.

Calling a wedding off on the eve before is costly, inconvenient and embarrassing, but if this could occur because the groom's brother and his wife were asked not to bring their 3-week-old child to the wedding, then perhaps it's just as well that the wedding was canceled.

Unwed mother wins belated tryout date

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — A 17-year-old unwed mother was allowed to compete for Plainview High School cheerleader after a month of legal wrangling, but she was not selected.

The school's cheerleader corps was chosen earlier in the year, but May 1 the school board ordered tryouts re-opened Wednesday and two more cheerleaders selected. The board took the action after Ramona Gamboa complained that she was improperly denied a chance to try out because she is an unwed mother.

Miss Gamboa said after the tryouts that she thought they were judged fairly and she was glad for the chance to make the squad.

Two students who participated in the original tryouts but were passed over were selected the second time around.

The school board, after granting Miss Gamboa a hearing, adopted a resolution ordering the tryouts be redone, but rejected the notion that her status as an unwed mother had any bearing on her chances of becoming a member of the squad.

Trustees said they decided that Miss Gamboa, after counseling from high school principal Jerry Don George, reasonably concluded that it would have been futile to try out for the squad.

Miss Gamboa's attorney, J. Pink Dickens, said as far as he knows the matter is finished. Dickens said the school board handled all the issues that were raised concerning Miss Gamboa during the hearing to his satisfaction.

School board president Neal Burnett said the board will look into a policy concerning the rights of unwed parents to participate in extracurricular activities. Currently, there is no policy concerning unwed parents participating in extracurricular activities. Married students are allowed to participate.

Positive step sought

MOSCOW (AP) — American industrialist Armand Hammer says he hopes the opening of his private art collection in Moscow "will be another positive step toward the long-sought goal of improving" super-power relations.

Big band tradition living on

WACO, Texas (AP)— Waco has a deep and abiding Big Band tradition. Under the tutelage of legendary band director Kyke Skinner, young Waco musicians once fanned out across the country to meet the needs of Big Bands everywhere.

Forty years later, an intriguing combination of old-timers and new-timers have gathered together to re-create that sound. They call themselves the Waco Jazz Orchestra.

Mike Jacobson, assistant professor of music and director of jazz studies at Baylor University, heads up the new WJO, with an assist from Dave Hibbard from the McLennan Community College music department, and says the enthusiasm and skill of the players invigorates him each week.

"In the eight months since we've been rehearsing, I've been impressed with the caliber of musicians locally. There's an outstanding soloist on just about every instrument," he said.

Jacobson said Waco ans Thomas Riggs, Bill Haskett, Al Newman and Hibbard began discussing the idea of a community jazz orchestra last year. At first the informal group met at a hotel. When that was eventually closed to them, they approached Baylor. The university made the orchestra part of its Continuing Education Program, offering it as a not-for-credit class.

The group rehearses from 1 to 3 p.m. Sundays in the band hall at Waco Hall on the Baylor campus.

"We've got about 30 regulars in the band," Jacobson said, "and they range from music professors to accountants to housewives to students at Baylor and MCC."

The standard instrumentation for a Big Band is a four-piece rhythm section, five trombones, five trumpets and five saxes (some of whom double on other wind instruments).

"Right now we've got more musicians than the standard Big Band instrumentation, which means we do a little rotating of personnel," Jacobson said. "It's really too big for one band, but not quite big enough for two yet."

Being a community band, some players are more proficient than others. But Jacobson says he likes it that way.

"We've got everything from professional musicians down to people where music is their avocation and they want to keep their chops in shape — but have no other outlet. The organization is open to anybody who wants to come and participate. If we get enough for a second band, we'll probably break up by proficiency, but we're not going to discourage anybody from coming."

Presently, the band has about 30 tunes in its active repertoire, with 10 of those being prepared for upcoming concerts.

Baylor and MCC, along with donations from individuals within the band, have provided the charts for these songs. The continuing education course costs $15 per semester, which helps pay for sheet music.

The WJO repertoire includes standard Big Band numbers in addition to some original arrangements and songs provided by the band's musicians. Jacobson said the WJO goals include performance opportunities and providing an outlet for talented local arrangers and writers.

"We do standard tunes like Duke Ellington's 'It Don't Mean a Thing If It Ain't Got That Swing' (arranged by former Wacoan Charles Burleson), 'September Song,' a couple of Latin things like 'Speak Low' and more contemporary charts like 'Fat Mama's Revenge,' which we got from the Dallas Jazz Orchestra," Jacobson said.

As the band continues to grow, Jacobson said they may set up a staggered rehearsal schedule for musicians who can't come on Sunday afternoon. He also wants to make it more active.

Bad land practices make new deserts

RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas (AP) — In the newly-formed South Texas desert, cows fall dead from starvation and sand dunes bury fences.

Drought, indiscriminant brush clearing and poor range management have turned 15,000 acres of Starr County pasture into a vast wasteland, said Dario Salinas, a range conservationist with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

During the late 1960s and early 1970s — when the price of grain approached $7.50 a bushel — would-be farmers cleared native brush from pastures and sowed their oats.

Grain prices dropped, and the land — which couldn't be irrigated anyway — was abandoned.

Over the next few years, wind and rain carried away top soil, and exposed rocks, pebbles and sand to the hot South Texas sun.

On a drive through the new desert, Salinas pointed out the tops of fence posts which poked through drifts of sand.

"Sometimes during midday, when I drive down this road, I have to turn my pickup headlights on because the blowing dust is so bad the visibility is down to nothing," Salinas said.

"We have had over six months of drought, and poor range conditions have increased the problem."

When it does rain and the grass does grow, ranchers overstock their pastures, Salinas said.

"Soon the excess cattle overgraze, and the range condition rapidly deteriorates," Salinas said.

One South Texas rancher said his cattle had eaten all the vegetation on his ranch.

"We don't dare drive into the areas where these cows are because they're too weak to move away from our truck," the rancher said.

"The other day when I blew my truck's horn so a cow would get out of the way, it simply collapsed. We could not get it up, so we just had to shoot it and drag it off to burn...."

In some areas, the soil is in such poor condition that a heavy rain would only further damage it, Salinas said.

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters

It's the season for our annual warning to the world regarding May time.

May of 1986 is particularly crucial since it has produced the most worrisome stuff in recent memory.

Just the mention of oil prices and the farm situation sends most folk's spirits sputtering like a dud roman candle.

Some people are worried about paying this month's bills, and that kind of a thinking will eat a hole plumb through you.

The threat of losing a job is a disaster akin to divorce and death. And its threat has raised up this May time like dadgum dandelions.

So why else is this spring so volatile? We'll pitch out a few factors which have made this one egg-shell-walking time. To include OPEC, the space shuttle tragedy, Daffy Khadafy, the world's worst-ever nuclear disaster, ordered executions of dairy cattle, adjacent tornadoes, sliding farm commodity prices nationwide, contested elections (local and state), pending lawsuits (a bunch of these), the rumors and realities of job layoffs and hay fever.

The weather has been stormy but dry. And when it hasn't been thundering, lightning or not-raining, the dust has blown. All in all, the thorns of West Texas weather without benefit of the rosy smell.

Mix the storm scares and the occasional duster in with the three "biggy" disruptions this spring — oil price declines, oil value losses and 200-plus teachers and their families worrying about TECAT results — and you have a volatile situation indeed.

We think all of us have a universal case of the heebie jeebies.

This plus our normal reservations about the month — a time when folks have sufficiently thawed from winter to feel their juices flowing again.

To many, this creates spurts of energy that result in buried garden seeds and cleaned out garages. To others, it just makes urges.

These few folks seem all itchy to either kiss someone else's wife, punch their buddies in the honker or maintain a permanent mad at their neighbors for just being there.

To greater or lesser degrees, these guys will be guilty of moving violations this May. Count on it.

Come the summer, the inclination toward fast travel will be curbed by the summer heat.

For the present, though, forewarned is forearmed.

Speaking for ourself, we've made a resolution to militantly steer clear of problems this May time. We WILL be agreeable with people, we WILL not overreact to the stupid bunglings of others; and we WILL not fall victim to the season's enticements.

Anybody that wants to get us riled had better bring their lunch, because it will take them the better part of the afternoon.

One other word of caution, or rather advise. Anyone not prepared to do likewise is respectfully requested to stay out of our face.

Have a nice day.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

There's nothing like out-of-town company to cause a massive sprucing-up around a country home. Most country families, at least those who are the most isolated, tend to be rather laid back about such things as lawns and hedges. Some of us were lucky to get a yard at all, in and amongst all the sowing and reaping and cattle-working and all.

In fact, some country homes have that all-out "natural" look. You know, cactus and rocks and stuff. I haven't taken the trouble to research this, but I gather that those homes belong to those weary souls who spent many years in town mowing, fertilizing, watering, and babying lawns.

The thing is, when you live in town, that little square of grass in front and in back of your house is your whole world, your IDENTITY. In fact, the whole identity of a neighborhood can be tied up in yards and porch trims. There can be a lot of pressure to get the laziest soul to see to it that his little square of grass looks ever-so-perfect...a competition, in fact, to see if his little square can outimpress his neighbor's.

Don't think farmers don't have that same kind of competition. Only it's not lawns, it's fields. A farmer can be disgraced among his peers by having one cotton patch with too many weeds. With ranchers, it's cattle. Does his herd look "poor"? Has he overgrazed that pasture? When you come up on a pickup on the highway going five miles an hour, containing two men in gimme caps with their heads swiveled in all directions but up front, you can bet The Judgement is being passed on some poor guy's fields.

Needless to say, the front yard can take a beating. Why get all excited about it? If it rains, the grass grows, but as everyone knows, it's been a great year for not having to mow. Anyway, the sheep keep the back yard trimmed very nicely, thank you.

The exception comes with those compulsive types who want a showplace. You'll drive down this winding road through a perfectly plowed field without a single weed, passing fat cows in a lush fertilized pasture, and arrive at a color-coordinated house with razor-edged lawns. (If you went looking too far, you might find a few weeds in the back forty.)

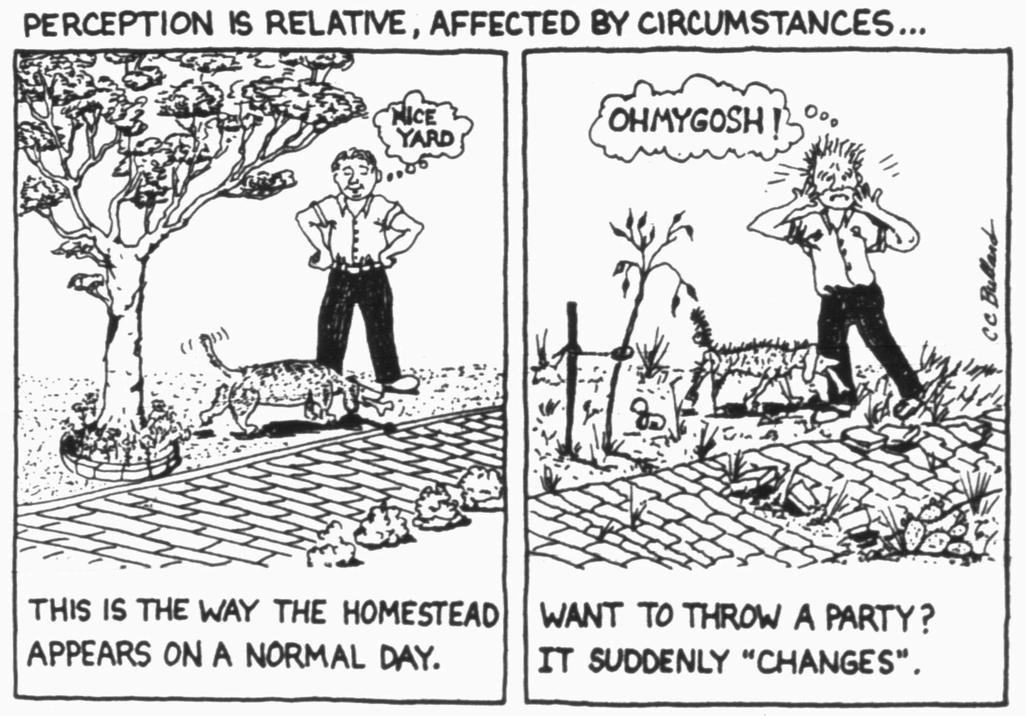

Most country folk, though, are kind of like us. We don't have any neighbors to bug us about our yard, and what little time we do have to work on it has to go to things like barns, fences and animals. So most people who drive up figure they've arrived at Slob City.

This usually causes no problem, because nobody ever drives all the way out here anyway except a few friends and the mail carrier.

But like I said, along comes some out-of-town company, some out-of-town company WHO HAS NEVER SEEN YOUR PLACE, and suddenly you start looking around with, shall we say, newborn eyes. I mean, after it rained here lately, we were used to chopping our way through the grass with a machete; no problem, we just kept it by the door. And it's true that the paint on the trim of the house looks as though it's been sandblasted, but hey, it gives it that weathered look that's so chic now. And those lawn chairs that look as though they survived the Sweetwater tornado...well, it all adds to that lived-in charm of Rafter-M Farm.

Then we get this visit from city friends who've yet to enjoy our down-home hospitality...and we got to thinking we might pick up a couple of gallons of paint next time we went to town...some gasoline for the lawn mower...What the heck, we might get really swanky and wash the car.

Good thing we don't have that much out-of-town company.

SUNDAY
May 11

Snyder's one-act play "A Man for All Seasons" was chosen first runnerup and student actor John Hamlett was named "best actor" at the State UIL Class AAAA One-Act Play Contest, it was reported Sunday.

Critic-judge Pam McDaniel of Tarrant County Junior College chose the comedy "The Desk Set" presented by Gregory-Portland High School as the AAAA Champion of 1986.

Legal documents have been filed here contesting the will of a Scurry County woman who has bequested one-quarter of her estate to Western Texas College and another quarter to the First Presbyterian Church of Snyder.

The estate in question and the will which dictates how it would be divided were left by Edith Whatley McKanna, it was reported Sunday.

For the second year in a row, rainfall postponed the proceedings for 123 students set to receive associate degrees from Western Texas College, it was reported Sunday.

The ceremonies were originally slated for 7:30 p.m. Friday in the central courtyard on campus. Rain flurries forced the event indoors as college officials, graduates and guests moved to Worsham Auditorium at the high school.

MONDAY
May 12

County Judge Preston Wilson will cast the deciding vote in one week to determine the fate of the proposed FM 1611 project here.

In a 2-2 split decision, county commissioners Monday failed to decide whether to sign a minute order as proposed by the State Highway Department to spend some $1.2 million in state appropriated funds for the project.

Rather than exercise his option to break the tie, Wilson said he would table the matter and make his decision in one week.

The economic profile provided by state sales tax returns for Snyder indicate local sales are running well ahead of last year through March, it was reported Monday.

The one month sales tax return for March produced a whopping 46.9 percent jump — raising the cumulative figure for the year to a plus 15.6 percent.

Five new residences applied for during April accounted for more than 61 percent of the month's new construction total as building here continues to lag far behind 1985, it was reported Monday.

The value of these residences was estimated in excess of $256,075, part of April's total building estimate of $419,550. This brought the year's count to some $2.5 million.

TUESDAY
May 13

A new concept in pay for Snyder school teachers and administrators was unveiled Tuesday by the school board — one which eliminates the old "step schedule" which locked in annual raises tied to years experience and advanced degrees.

Tuesday's implementation included also an "average" 3 percent pay raise for teachers and administrators for next school year.

THURSDAY
May 15

Next Sept. 17, Snyder will be visited by the second of two state-sanctioned Sesquicentennial wagon trains, it was reported Thursday.

On that date, the Lone Star Sesquicentennial Wagon Train is scheduled to make an overnight stop in the city.

FRIDAY
May 16

Plans were being finalized Friday for the Scurry County Senior Centers ninth annual May Day due Saturday in the Scurry County Coliseum.

Quilt makers have been working since last May creating the 30-odd quilts which will go on sale at auction beginning at 6:30 p.m.

A special offering this year was to be a Sesquicentennial quilt pieced in red, white and blue and quilted in a star pattern.

American Food Management, which contracts with Snyder ISD for its cafeteria food service, has indicated it will introduce new policy next school year to both encourage student customers and to allow more local input into menus.

One of the new ideas — a noon meal "western cookout" — was to have its initial test run Friday.

In addition, school officials plan to initiate next year a food service committee to be comprised of one teacher, student and parent from each campus.

This committee will have the opportunity each month to review proposed menus and to offer its comments to the regional supervisor for American Food Service.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

The FM 1611 story in the May 12 issue of your paper contained a comment that I would like to clarify.

Your article stated, "If the property owners refused this offer—and Sam Joyce speaking on behalf of the family said that any offer will be unacceptable—condemnation proceedings would have to be filed in 132nd District Court."

The reason that condemnation proceedings will be necessary is because my late mother-in-law's will states that none of the Winston Brother's estate property can be divided or sold. For that reason the issue would have to go to court even if Scurry County made a very generous offer if the project should come to pass.

In no way do I mean that I am in favor of the project. Personally, the owners are against the road because of the havoc it will play in running the ranch.

I am also opposed to the proposed road because of the heavy tax burden that it will put on the taxpayers of Scurry County. Even though the State of Texas is paying for the road, I feel like it is too much to ask our citizens to pick up the tab for the right-of-way, fences, pipeline lowering, damages, court costs and other miscellaneous items that Scurry County will have to pay for with the taxpayers' dollar.

I realize that the difficult decision is left to County Judge Preston Wilson since the commissioners court vote was a tie. I trust Judge Wilson will do what is in the best interest of the residents of the county.

To the editor,

A preliminary study on the cost impact of the proposed extension of FM 1611 indicates that Scurry County will save in excess of $17,600 per year in county road maintenance, as well as save a minimum of $340,000 in needed road rebuilding.

Included in the state highway department's $1.2 million estimated construction cost for the extension is to take over responsibility for a two mile stretch of existing County Road 333.

This two miles of road ties existing FM 1611 from the point of intersection with FM 1607 down to the proposed FM 1611 extension.

I feel that due to heavy wear and water seepage, this two mile stretch will need major rebuilding that will cost the county some $340,000. Current costs to maintain this two miles has been in excess of $12,800 per year.

With the state taking over this portion of the road, the highway department will be required to bear the cost of its maintenance, as well as any necessary rebuilding.

An additional bonus for Scurry County taxpayers will develop due to lessening heavy truck traffic on the remaining six miles of County Road 333.

The six miles referred to begin at the FM 1611 extension moving south to FM 1606. If the heavy truck traffic is decreased by as little as 25 percent, the county will reduce its maintenance costs by almost $5,000 a year.

There will be additional figures from the state highway department. These should further illustrate the financial impact of the proposed extension of FM 1611. These figures will be reported when they are received.

Blood problems and childbirth

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I was 19 I gave birth to my first child. I had no problems during my pregnancy or delivery. Two weeks later I hemorrhaged severely (I needed eight pints of blood). The doctor said my condition was "disseminated intravascular coagulation." I am now 24 and want very much to have another child. Is there a chance this could happen again? My doctor did not explain the condition very clearly.

DEAR READER — Disseminated intravascular coagulation (DIC) is a serious blood disturbance characterized by two phases: Disease or injury triggers clotting within blood vessels; then this mechanism cascades into the production of anti-clotting substances. The end result is inability of the blood to clot; transfusions (to replace clotting factors) are usually necessary for treatment. Childbirth can cause DIC in young mothers.

No one can predict if, during another pregnancy, you would develop DIC again. The risk is always there. Nevertheless, doctors can more readily recognize early DIC than they could five years ago, when you had your problem, so I think it would be safe for you to become pregnant. Check with your obstetrician for specific advice.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When there is too much calcium in the blood and a loss of calcium in the bone, are there ways to correct this other than removal of the parathyroid glands?

DEAR READER — Hypercalcemia (too much blood calcium) can be caused by bone tumors and Paget's disease, as well as parathyroid tumors. Therefore, the answer to your question is "yes." The specific cause of excessive blood calcium must be determined before appropriate treatment can be given. Because hypercalcemia can result in confusion, abdominal pain, shock, kidney failure and death, doctors will often use cortisone, diuretics and intravenous medications as temporary methods of lowering blood calcium, until more permanent therapy can be administered. If parathyroid tumors are the cause of the problem, surgical excision will usually cure it.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What's the difference between TIA and transient global amnesia?

DEAR READER — Transient ischemic attacks (TIA) are short-lived neurological malfunctions that resemble strokes. They can cause speech difficulty, confusion and weakness. They are thought to be due to momentary interruptions of brain function from small blood clots or arterial spasms. One form of TIA is called transient global amnesia. In this instance, the temporary nerve malfunction involves the higher brain centers of memory. Although the disorders are basically identical, global amnesia is considered to be a specific manifestation of TIA.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Over several years, I lost a great deal of weight due to anorexia. Now I'm trying to get it back, but I wonder — will the flesh or the muscle improve first?

DEAR READER — You will tend to gain fat first. If you are physically active, muscle growth may accompany the gain of fat.

I'm often critiziced by colleagues for exposing the negative qualities of doctors. I'm told that what I write is unfair; it characterizes only a small portion of the medical community. My writing is said to sensationalize a black-sheep minority. My associates sometimes would like to shear me for grazing on a plot of grass that doesn't represent the whole pasture. They tell me that the overwhelming majority of physicians and surgeons are caring, skillful, compassionate and more dedicated to diagnosis than to the dollar.

I used to admit that this was true. I'm not so sure anymore.

Medical journals devote increasing space to editorials headlining the fact that doctors are in deep trouble. Dr. George Lundberg, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states: "Never in modern history has the medical profession been weaker. To a great extent, physicians are becoming seen as highly successful businessmen who are functioning with the business ethic rather than the professional ethic." In a 1985 AMA study, 67 percent of the public believed that doctors were too interested in making money; only 27 percent thought that physicians' fees were reasonable. More than 50 percent said doctors were deficient in explaining things.

Dr. David Hilfiker, author of "Healing the Wounds: A Physician Looks at His Work," claims that "we physicians have been seduced by money; we have been bound to it. Money has become the measure of what we do, the yardstick of our work. In a consumer society such as ours, we doctors are not alone in our idolatry, but our seduction is such a major change from the roots of our profession that it should not go unnoticed."

You bet it hasn't gone unnoticed. Most patients have noticed it. As doctors have become more knowledgeable about disease, they've also become more conspicuous in their devotion to money. Perhaps it is this conspicuousness that rankles the public.

Dr. Hilfiker suggests that physicians should "base their income on their own need rather than on what the market can bear." This argument is flawed. Doctors have many needs and, for some, financial needs are paramount. That's the issue. How much is enough?

Dr. Lundberg urges physicians to follow 11 steps, including being more open about explaining medical fees, exercising better office management and trying to change their image — "thereby becoming viewed again primarily as pro-active rather than reactive and as promoting rather than opposing progress."

This sounds reasonable. The trouble is that greedy doctors are precisely the ones who are least likely to be influenced by such appeals.

I think that conspicuous avarice is a major character flaw in many of today's M.D.s. Somewhere along the line, we get our priorities mixed up. If we are, indeed, in trouble as a profession, it may be because we want the best of two worlds. We want to be seen as financially comfortable — even affluent — yet we also hanker to be perceived as dedicated, sympathetic and understanding. Our profession contains a wide divergence of outlooks. Some doctors want above all to help the sick and infirm; others, quite frankly, look on medical practice as a way to become wealthy. I don't believe that we can have it both ways.

Corporations are being raided and destroyed; towns and municipalities have difficulty finding insurance; farmers are desperate. I think that we doctors would feel better about doctoring if we worried less about ourselves and paid greater attention to more seemly conduct. The world is fundamentally hostile to doctors, as well as to truckdrivers and teachers, but this is no reason to be piggy.

The answer won't come from the ranting of medical leaders or the raving of government bureaucrats. You, the consumer, can make the choice between the Honda-healer and the Mercedes-MD. For our part, we physicians have to acknowledge which flag we follow: ministry or materialism. Do we administer caring with our care or, on the other hand, do we regard patients as things to be fixed for a service charge?

In reality, doctors rarely embrace one extreme or the other. We vacillate and try to grope our way in the gray area in between. We want our children to be well-educated. We want to be able to afford vacations. We expect fair remuneration for our 60-hour workweeks. We hope to have an adequate retirement income.

However, none of us, during our training years, could have predicted the many ways in which financial concerns corrupt our altruism. Experience teaches us to walk a fine line. Apparently, for increasing numbers of doctors, that fine line is becoming less distinct. Therein may lie the problem that must be addressed by each practitioner in the quiet solitude of his or her own conscience.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Treasury secretary says good memory is important quality

NEW YORK (AP) — A good memory is the most important quality for a father, said Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III as he, comedian Soupy Sales and 11 other notable dads were honored as "Fathers of the Year."

"If you can remember what it was like when you were a kid, you'll be a better father," Baker said Thursday as the 13 were honored by the National Father's Day Committee for the example they set as fathers.

Baker and Sales were joined by Gov. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey; Arthur Levitt Jr., Chairman of the American Stock Exchange; William Webster, director of the FBI; Maxwell M. Rabb, Ambassador to Italy; Lou Piniella, New York Yankees manager; Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals; Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders.

First Lady to 'listen' to teachers' thoughts

AUSTIN (AP) — First lady Linda Gale White will be dispatched to meetings across the state to hear teachers' ideas about improving school reform efforts.

Gov. Mark White, hoping to shore up support among angry teachers, made the announcement Thursday, saying his wife will "report directly to me the suggestions she gathers."

White said he hopes to clear up misunderstandings with teachers and improve the sweeping 1984 school reform legislation.

"I think you mend fences by going in and taking appropriate action to solve problems. I think that's the real thrust of what we're trying to do," White told his weekly news conference.

During the May 3 primary, many teachers cast protest votes for White's Democratic opponents or Republican candidates. White won less than 54 percent of the vote, narrowly escaping a runoff.

Teacher organizations complained that they felt the governor wouldn't listen to them while he pushed the school reform legislation — House Bill 72 — or since it has taken effect.

Teachers have voiced anger over the mandatory TECAT competency test, the career ladder system of merit pay raises, paperwork and other problems.

Mrs. White, a former high school teacher in Houston and Austin, acknowledged that hard feelings run strong among teachers. During the last month of the campaign, she met with a number of teacher groups, she said.

"I got very emotionally involved in those meetings because I sensed the frustration of teachers ... They felt like they were not being listened to," she said.

"I think the total problem was a lack of communication from a number of agencies, including our office, the TEA (Texas Education Agency) and the state (teacher) associations on down to the local associations and down to the superintendents and princpals," she said.

Mrs. White said many teachers don't understand the reforms.

"There is a tremendous amount of misinformation that exists within the state regarding requirements and provisions of the current law," she said.

Congress approves military pension cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress overwhelmingly voted to reduce the retirement pay of future recruits, rejecting Pentagon claims that reducing pensions will hurt the nation's ability to attract and keep people in the military.

The Senate gave 92-1 approval Thursday to its version of a retirement bill, three weeks after the House voted 399-7 approval of a slightly different package of changes. The lone opposition vote Thursday was cast by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who did not explain his reasons.

The Senate vote moves the issue to a conference committee, which will put together a single bill to be voted on again in each chamber.

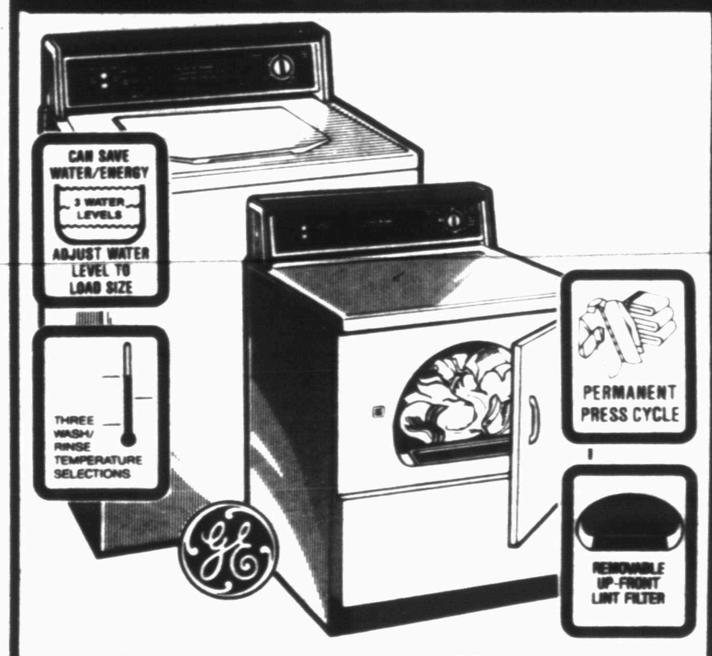

Neither version affects the checks now received by 1.4 million retired personnel or the potential pensions of the 2.1 million people in the armed forces. Only pensions earned by those who enter the service after the bill's effective date would be changed.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and all five members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's top military officers, had strongly opposed any changes in the current system.

They argued that pensions are a prime draw in attracting people to the military, particularly since the draft ended and the nation moved to an all-volunteer force.

Overhaul to include engines

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA intends to make costly changes in the space shuttle's main engines, steering system and brakes as well as redesign the faulty booster rocket before permitting the orbiter to fly again next summer, agency officials say.

But the changes are not likely to include installation of a system that would permit crew members to escape emergencies such as the one that blew up the Challenger last Jan. 28.

Arnold Aldrich, a senior space shuttle official with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, told reporters at a congressional hearing Thursday that while NASA engineers are studying designs for such a system, "I wouldn't conclude it would be successful."

Asked to estimate chances for including such an escape system on the three remaining shuttles, Aldrich replied, "slim."

The issue could become a contentious one in Congress, where some influential lawmakers have said they hope the agency can produce such a plan before the shuttle flies again. NASA Administrator James Fletcher was noncommittal when asked about it at a Senate subcommittee session.

"There's a lot of pros and cons," he said.

Aldrich made his comments during a break in testimony before a House space subcommittee, while in the Senate, the Appropriations Committee was taking the first congressional action toward providing funds to restore the shuttle to flight status.

The GOP-controlled Senate committee approved $526 million for shuttle redesign as part of a $3.9 billion omnibus spending bill covering a variety of government programs for the balance of the fiscal year. None of the money would be for construction of a replacement for the lost Challenger, a subject expected to be debated in Congress later in the year.

The measure now goes to the Senate floor.

Panel unveils new education reforms

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Unless Americans are willing to pay for a drastic reorganization of public education, they will have to reconcile themselves to "a massive decline in our standard of living," a blue-ribbon panel says.

Hundreds of educators and politicians Friday are discussing the radical blueprint unveiled Thursday by the Carnegie Corporation's Task Force on Teaching as a Profession, which includes the heads of both teachers' unions.

The report signed by all 14 panel members calls for abolishing undergraduate education degrees, creating a board to certify top teachers, and pegging teachers' salaries in part to their students' performance.

It demands more power and autonomy for teachers, and even suggests that some schools do away with principals and be run instead by a committee of "lead teachers" earning salaries of $65,500 a year or more.

The 78-page report, "A Nation Prepared: Teachers for the 21st Century," said bolstering the profession is the key to turning factory-like public schools into places where children will learn to think for themselves.

To avert "a massive decline in our standard of living" and the growth of a permanent underclass, it said, "our schools must graduate the vast majority of their students with achievement levels long thought possible for only the privileged few."

The Carnegie Corporation announced today it is giving Stanford University $817,000 to develop ways to measure teachers' skills for the proposed national certification board. Stanford education researcher Lee Shulman said teacher tests now used in most states are "a travesty."

The task force, whose chairman is IBM chief scientist and vice president Lewis M. Branscomb, said that in exchange for greater autonomy, local teachers must be prepared to accept greater accountability if pupils fail to learn.

The panel called for establishing a new pecking order within the profession, with "lead teachers" working year-round; advanced certificate holders earning $42,000 for 10 months' work, and certified teachers — the majority — earning $35,500 for 10 months.

The average teacher now earns around $25,000.

PR man was Reagan representative

WASHINGTON (AP) — While drug enforcement officers are trying to stem the flow of illegal narcotics across the border, Peter D. Hannaford is battling a different flood — the recent spate of anti-Mexico publicity.

Hannaford is Mexico's public relations man in Washington.

At a widely reported Senate hearing Tuesday, U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab complained of "ingrained corruption" in Mexico "all the way up and down the ladder."

At the same hearing, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said the United States must "tell the Mexicans in no uncertain terms that we are deeply troubled by widespread, drug-related corruption."

Mexico filed a complaint with the State Department after the hearing.

Earlier in the week, von Raab had been quoted in a front-page New York Times story as saying Mexican officials were "doing nothing" about the drug problem and that they were "inept and corrupt."

"If he was quoted accurately, his sweeping statement about Mexican officialdom was simply, really not the kind of statement a government official makes about officials of friendly governments. It was quite outrageous," said Hannaford, whose Hannaford Co. Inc. recently signed on to handle public relations for Mexico.

The 58-year-old Southern California native is not accustomed to being at odds with the Reagan administration, where he has many friends. Ronald Reagan used to be his client.

Hannaford was director of public affairs for Reagan during the last year of Reagan's term as California governor, and Hannaford's firm handled Reagan's public relations until he was elected president in 1980.

Hannaford's partner then was Michael Deaver, who became Reagan's White House chief of staff. Deaver left to form his own PR firm and now is embroiled in a controversy over conflict of interest due to his representation of Canada.

No such questions apply to Hannaford since he was never a member of the administration.

Mexico's relations with the United States were publicly damaged after the 1985 kidnapping and slaying of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Since then, U.S. drug enforcement officials have accused Mexican drug enforcement officers of protecting and assisting drug dealers.

Mexico admits some corruption, but says it is trying its best to combat the problem, compounded by the lure of drug money in a deprived economy.

Hannaford said he learned from business friends in Mexico City that Mexico was interested in hiring a PR firm in Washington. Hannaford said he felt he was a natural for the job, being a Californian.
