Several days ago we passed along some information concerning medical specialists which came from Virginia Knauer, the President's Director of Consumer Affairs.

Now, Ms. Knauer has followed up with similar information concerning dentists. And first off she sent us to our dictionary. In one place she referred to a "prostodontist" and in another place she called it a "prostodonist." Webster said neither of these spellings was correct. It is "prosthodontist," which means that Ms. Knauer is a mere human being like the rest of us and-or has more human beings doing her typing and typesetting.

But, so much for the spelling. Here are the dental definitions Ms. Knauer provided:

Dental Assistant–Works closely with the dentist, often serving as an extra pair of hands.

Endodontist—treats the tooth pulp and tissue at the root of the teeth; performs root canal therapy.

Hygienist—cleans teeth and teaches home hygiene.

Laboratory Technician–Makes dentures, crowns and other dental devices.

Oral Surgeon–performs extractions and other surgical procedures in and around the mouth.

Orthodontist—Braces and moves teeth to prevent or correct bad "bite" (crooked or badly spaced teeth).

Pedodontist–treats children.

Periodontist—Treats gum problems.

Prosthodontist–Designs and fits replacements for lost teeth or parts of the mouth, jaw and face.

Ted Crenwelge passed along this story to illustrate the current status of the cattle business.

He said a stockman loaded an old cow in his trailer and went to the auction sale. He soon learned that the market for old cows was depressed. So, he decided to bring the animal back home and keep it a while longer. But en route home, he had a flat tire on his trailer. He unhooked his pickup and drove into town to get the flat fixed, leaving the old cow in the trailer at the side of the road.

When he returned, he found that some unscrupulous cattlemen had come along and dumped four more old cows into his trailer. We suppose you would call this reverse rustling.—WACIL McNAIR.

Wholesale Prices Decline Largest Of 3 Months

By R.GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by lower prices for farm products, wholesale prices declined in February for the third straight month, the government reported today.

The Labor Department's Wholesale Price Index for last month was eight-tenths of one per cent below January, the biggest monthly drop in the decline that started in December.

The February report provided additional evidence of a cooling off of the nation's inflation rate at the wholesale level, although wholesale prices in February still were 14.6 per cent above a year earlier.

The index was released as Congress considered President Ford's latest proposal to spur employment. An additional 760,000 youths could get summer jobs and up to 310,000 adults could get six month's more work if Congress approves the Ford proposal.

Ford asked Congress Wednesday for $2 billion to fund the summer job program for youths and extend the public-service job program for adults beyond its scheduled Dec. 31 expiration.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford acted after the Labor Department advised him it would have to begin phasing out public service jobs on July 1 in order to terminate the program by the end of the year.

The February decline in the Wholesale Price Index was led by a 4.6 per cent drop in prices of farm products and a 2.8 per cent drop in prices of processed foods and feeds. The over-all index stood at 171.3 per cent of the 1967 average of 100, meaning it cost $171.30 to buy a statistical set of goods that cost $100 at wholesale in 1967.

The decline in wholesale prices has yet to be reflected in lower consumer prices. Administration economists are hopeful that lower prices for farm products will begin showing up at the supermarket in weeks and months ahead.

The Labor Department said prices for consumer foods at the wholesale level fell one per cent in February. Meats, sugar and candy, fresh and dried vegetables and processed poultry were lower.

Those declines were partially offset by higher prices for fish, eggs and cereal and bakery products.

The 2.8 per cent decline in the index of farm products largely reflected lower prices for grains, cattle and soybeans, the Labor Department said.

Ford's request for more job money matches a proposal already being shaped by the House Appropriations Committee.

Reaction Varies On Jobs Plan

By The Associated Press

Big city mayors seeking more federal money for summer jobs for young people are pleased with President Ford's announcement that he will ask Congress for additional funds. But they say the $412.7 million Ford is requesting is not enough.

"Ford's figure is too little and will cause problems when we line up people for jobs," said Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, N.J., a Democrat. "There won't be enough jobs to go around."

"It isn't as much as we asked for, but it's a step in the right direction," said Mayor Lee Alexander of Syracuse, N.Y., also a Democrat and co-chairman of the legislative committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Gibson, Alexander and other members of the committee met in Washington, D.C., earlier this week and urged an additional appropriation of $706 million to provide employment for young people this summer.

Several mayors, including Abraham Beame of New York City, warned that failure to provide jobs could lead to increased crime among the young.

The House Democratic leadership said Tuesday that it will try to push through Congress this month a special $5.9 billion appropriation designed to create up to 3 billion jobs in a variety of areas.

Ford said Wednesday he will seek an extra $2 billion to extend the public service jobs program and provide more employment for young people this summer.

John Gunther, executive director of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said the cities got $385 million for summer jobs last year. He said he welcomed the announcement by the Ford adminstration, but added: "The only problem is they're not acting big enough."

Gunther said a survey by the conference showed the cities need $706 million to provide more than 1.2 million summer jobs.

San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, president of the conference, said the mayors were pleased with the proposals by Ford and the House Democratic leadership but said they don't "move far enough and fast enough.

BY HOUSE VOTE OF 78-49

DST Referendum Advances

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Just 11 days after daylight Saving Time sent children trudging to school an hour earlier, the Texas House today approved a bill setting up a statewide referendum on the controversial issue.

The bill advanced on a 78-49 vote. One more vote is necessary, and probably will come next week, to send the measure to the Senate.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, the sponsor, declared, "The issue needs to be settled once for all, and I know we would have the biggest voter turnout in the state up to that time."

There was no debate before the House voted.

House members passed to the Senate, 102-34, a bill halting state funding—now totaling $3.4 million a year—for county school superintendents' offices.

Also sent to the Senate, 74-67, was a bill allowing "points" or brokerage for real estate loans to be spread over the life of a loan for the purpose of determining whether the loan exceeds the constitutional limit of 10 per cent. The points are paid at the beginning of a loan, but would be spread only for making that calculation.

The daylight saving time bill would enable Texans to declare their opinion of DST, which now starts in late winter as an alleged energy saving measure. They would do so at the November 1976 general election.

But the referendum would amount to only an opinion poll, since it would not change the law or even mandate legislative action on DST.

The DST bill was laid out Wednesday, but was postponed after it was learned that the original did not have attached to it the required fiscal note showing the cost of the election.

Before that discovery was made, Rep. Abraham Ribak, D-San Antonio, spoke out against the bill, saying he did not believe in the referenda, particularly non-binding ones.

"Why do we need the time and expense of conducting a referendum when all of you know how your constituents feel. I think all of us should have the backbone to vote for or against," Ribak said.

DST used to extend from late April to late October, but Congress last year bought the Nixon administration's argument that it would save energy, and ordered it to begin in late February. Dst this year started at 2 a.m., Feb. 23.

In Wednesday's debate on the county school superintendents bill, Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, said there was no reason why a county could not continue to have one if voters thought it worth the expenditure of local tax money.

"It is unfair for the people of Dallas and Harris Counties, who have abolished their county superintendents, to have to pay their tax dollars to support the Orange County superintendent," Peveto said.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, agreed.

Ford On Radio, TV Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will hold a news conference at 7:30 EDT tonight in the auditorium of the Executive Office Building.

The session, his 11th since taking office last August, will be broadcast live on radio and television by ABC, CBS and NBC, network spokesmen said.

In a public appearance Wednesday night, Ford reaffirmed his intention to run for another term in the White House in 1976.

He told an audience of the annual congressional dinner of the Univerity of Michigan Club of Washington that he wants to go back to Michigan, but "I would like to do it in 1981."

Ford, a 1935 graduate of the university, joked about his college days and recalled that he washed dishes to earn money in his sophomore and junior years. "I was the only athlete who ever had a football knee and dishpan hands at the same time," he said.

Eighth Terrorist Seized In Bombing Of Hotel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli soldiers captured an eighth Arab terrorist and saved him from an angry mob today hours after he and his comrades blew up part of a small Tel Aviv hotel, killing at least nine other persons, the Israeli command said.

Seven hours after troops stormed the seafront Savoy Hotel near the U.S. Embassy and killed seven guerrillas, soldiers searching through the explosion debris flushed out the eighth terrorist and seized him after a brief exchange of gunfire.

A mob of Israelis enraged over the latest terrorist attack, the biggest ever in the heart of a major Israeli city, tried to break in the doors of the ambulance to get at the captured guerrilla, but the vehicle sped away.

The latest shooting flared minutes before Premier Yitzhak Rabin inspected the hotel, where Israeli troops stormed the building before dawn following a six-hour siege. Two of the dead were reported to be Israeli soldiers. There was still no identification of any foreign casualties.

The guerrillas had held at least 30 hostages in the hotel, but it was not known if there were any Americans among them.

"I saw two men on a rooftop about 150 yards from the hotel, shooting into the street," said a woman who had been looking out of her kitchen window before the second outburst of gunfire broke out. "One of them was wearing a khaki shirt, like a military shirt."

The Israeli cabinet said in a communique that the guerrilla attack, mounted by Yasir Arafat's Al Fatah, was aimed at damaging Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Middle East peace efforts.

"This murderous terrorist infiltration was synchronized for a political purpose - to foil any chance of progress toward reaching a political settlement through negotiations," the communique said.

But it said the terrorist action would not deter Israel and "it will not move the Israeli government from its policy, which combines the safeguarding of its citizens with its political efforts toward peace."

Kissinger, in London, condemned the raid as "a senseless act of violence."

"We hope that we can continue," he said when asked how the terrorist assault might affect his mission. He added that it underlined the importance of making progress toward peace in the Middle East.

Abu Iyad, the No. 2 man in Al Fatah, asked to comment on the raid, said in Beirut, Lebanon, "The only comment I have is that there can be no peace in the Middle East without the Palestinians. This is what Kissinger should fully realize."

Kissinger Jeered By Cypriots

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger ran into a hostile demonstration by jeering Cypriots today during a side trip to this Welsh coal port. The secretary is in Britain on the way to the Middle East, where he hopes to arrange a broad Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai peninsula.

About 400 demonstrators carrying banners reading "Kissinger-warmonger" and "Kissinger — Hands off Cyprus" shouted obscenities at him and his wife Nancy as they left ceremonies honoring British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan at the City Hall.

Officials said the demonstrators were mainly young Marxists and Cypriots who blame the United States for the plight of their divided island.

Security officials kept the demonstrators far from the official party.

On Friday, Kissinger planned to meet Greek Foreign Minister Dimitrios Bitsios in Brussels seeking a way to reopen negotiations between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

Then he flies to Egypt, guardedly optimistic that he will be able to arrange terms for a broad Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai Desert. However, U.S. officials in Kissinger's party stressed that neither Israel nor Egypt has given him a formal position.

VIEWPOINT

Big Oil's Little People

"Big Oil" is bigger than most people, including its critics, may realize.

According to a survey released by the American Petroleum Institute, more than 14 million Americans are direct or indirect shareowners of the six largest U.S. oil companies—Exxon, Gulf, Mobil, Standard of California, Standard of Indiana and Texaco.

The survey found that, after the elimination of all duplication, 2,300,000 people distributed throughout the 50 states are direct shareowners. More than 11,750,000 other persons were counted as indirect shareowners because of their purchase of mutual funds and insurance stocks, through participation in pension and profit-sharing or retirement plans, through life insurance annuities, etc.

Altogether, these individuals own nine-tenths of the common stock of the companies and represent more than 6.5 per cent of the nation's total population.

In addition, shares in the six companies are held by 91 colleges and universities and about 1,000 charitable organizations.

In releasing the study, API president Frank N. Ikard said that millions more individuals would be involved if data were available for the hundreds of smaller oil companies in this country. The institute sponsored the study, he said, "to correct the notion that the oil companies are owned by a handful of millionaires."

There are, to be sure, some millionaires in the group. The median family income of direct shareowners, however, is about $16,400 a year.

The survey discovered these other facts about direct shareowners:

They are significantly older than the rest of the U.S. population. Half are over 60 years of age; eight out of 10 are over 45 years of age.

Women outnumber men, 54 per cent to 46 per cent.

Retired persons make up 46 per cent of the total with a median age of 70.6 years and medain family income of $14,100.

Of the 53 per cent of shareowners who are employed or whose spouses are employed, eight out of 10 are white-collar workers, mostly in professional, technical or managerial jobs or as proprietors of businesses.

In a third of the employed households, more than one person works either full or part-time.

AAA Has Alternative

Americans have established an unchallenged reputation for over-reacting to situations that annoy them, or threaten them, which often leads to ill advised efforts to implement corrective measures.

Take the current proposals to ration gasoline, for example. The American Automobile Association calculates that it would require a bureaucracy of 1,700 persons and a federal payroll of $1½ billion to put a gasoline rationing program into operation—without any assurances that it would solve any of our energy problems.

The AAA is not one to offer criticism without advancing an alternative, however. It has launched what it calls "Gas Watchers," a voluntary, nationwide gasoline conservation program in which licensed drivers pledge to make five gallons of gasoline do the work of six by practicing proven fuel-saving measures. And the AAA has a rebuttal for those who would write off voluntary conservation efforts.

"Claims that voluntarism isn't working fail to reflect the fact that there has been no real program to make it work," says J. B. Creal, AAA Executive Vice President.

So, AAA is promoting its "Gas Watchers" program among its 226 local motor clubs and 16½ million members. If a majority of them cooperate, the results will be significant.

Letters To Editor

To The Daily News:

If there is any way that the people of Snyder can help in an attempt to save our oil depletion allowance, please let us know what it is. There are many royalty owners and others in Snyder benefiting from the oil industry. We do not need to lose the depletion allowance.

There is drilling going on in Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota. This is wildcat oil territory. Will oil companies want to take the chance of drilling there if the depletion allowance is stopped? The United States needs oil any place it can find it.

Friends, we may not be able to win the oil depletion battle, but let's put up a fight.

Briscoe Asks Hearing On Proposed Gas Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe has requested a hearing to be held on a bill before Congress dealing with natural gas allotments.

Briscoe wrote Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., that his subcommittee was trying to railroad the bill through Congress without marking it up for a public hearing.

"It is unrealistic to believe you would not give the public a chance to comment on pending proposals which might have as disastrous on effect on our economy as the legislation you are expected to propose," the governor wrote Stevenson.

He questioned the constitutionality of the proposed bill, which would extend federal pricing authority to the intrastate market. He accused Stevenson's subcommittee of planning a "congressionally mandated recession" for Texas.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., and John Tower, D-Tex., both sent letters of protest to the subcommittee.

Bentsen also asked for hearings on the issue. The panel held 17 hearings last year and Bentsen was one of 180 witnesses to testify.

He said if federal authority includes jurisdiction over the price of natural gas sold in the intrastate market, as the bill proposes, Congress would be contributing to the present shortage of natural gas.

Federal jurisdiction over the price of natural gas could bring a breakdown in the private transportation system relaying fuel from one part of the country to another, Bentsen claimed, and said it could result also in "the gross discrimination against regions of the country that are dependent on natural gas and without an available substitute."

Bentsen wrote that the Southwest is as dependent on natural gas as the Northeast is upon imported fuel oil.

"Any legislation which denies natural gas to the Southwestern states would have the same economic effect and meet the same political opposition as would depriving the northeast of oil imports," he said.

Tower said he was preparing to announce formation of a coalition of oil-states congressmen and senators to fight the anti-oil legislation.

Attention of the oil states turned to the natural gas bill after a showdown on repeal of the oil depletion allowance was temporarily diverted Tuesday.

The price of natural gas varies from an average of 30 cents per thousand cubic feet (MCF) in interstate sales to up to $1.80 MCF for regulated gas sold in Texas.

The Federal Power Commission has recommended the "new" gas be deregulated to allow forces of the freemmarketplace to work.

Air Force Cuts 800

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has announced a cutback of 800 jobs at its San Antonio bases as part of a move aimed at reducing 3,675 civilian jobs at five military installations.

Air Force spokesmen said Wednesday the cuts will be carried out before July and will lead to annual savings of $47 million.

Hardest hit will be the Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center, where 1,150 jobs will be eliminated.

The other three air logistics centers affected by the cutback are Sacramento, Calif., 700; Warner Robbins, Ga., 550, and Ogden, Utah, 473.

The Air Force said about 2,000 of the job eliminations will come about through normal attrition and 1,300 more will result from firing temporary jobholders. This indicates that the remainder of the job losses will come from longer-term employees.

"These reductions, in conjunction with current over-all Air Force realignments and cost-reduction action, will enable the Department of Defense to reach ceilings established by Congress for the current fiscal year," the announcement said.

The Air Force said reduced manpower requirements stem from cutbacks in Air Force flying hours, previously announced elimination of 400 support aircraft, improved depot maintenance and some consolidations of work load.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

★★★

Q. Are utility taxes deductible?

A. Utility taxes imposed under state or local law are not deductible if the rate differs from that of the general sales tax in your area.

Q. I bought a new car recently for personal use which developed so many mechanical problems that I had to get rid of it. I traded it in for less than what I paid. Is this loss deductible?

A. No. A loss from the sale or exchange of personal property is not a deductible loss, unless it results from casualty or theft. However, don't forget that your state or local sales tax on the purchase of your new car or the part of the tax you paid that is equal to the general sales tax is deductible from your Federal income tax.

Q. Don't I have to show exact amounts to the penny of deductions, income, etc., on my tax return?

A. No. Taxpayers may round off such amounts to the whole dollar. This means that you may eliminate any amount less than 50 cents and increase any amount from 50 to 99 cents to the next dollar.

Q. How can I determine whether to use Form 1040 or 1040A to figure my tax?

A. Generally, the Short Form 1040A is used by a person who does not itemize his deductions and whose gross income consists only of wages, salary, tips, and dividend income or interest income of $400 or less. But, taxpayers who have other types of income, gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets, investment tax credit, sick pay exclusion, etc., should use Form 1040 and the appropriate schedules to determine their tax. The instructions for each form explain in greater detail which form is appropriate for you to use.

Issues Are Unresolved Despite Call For Unity

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Time after time the nation's leaders have called for unity in the battle against the economic demons, but if anyone is listening, apparently they can't do much about reaching agreement.

Perhaps it signifies the momentous size of the problems that must be resolved. Maybe there's a real need to discuss and comment and argue about issues that are little understood. But things aren't coming to a head.

The country still doesn't know whether it really wants foreigners, notably the Arabs, to buy into the American economy. A Senate bill would empower the President to block such investments. The President doesn't like the idea.

Does the country really know whether it's still in love with automobiles? The car is denounced as a terrible waste of money that could better be used elsewhere. It is a polluter. It is a maker of urban congestion. An energy waster.

But now that the industry is hurting, it seems to have become necessary again. Cars mean jobs. It is patriotic to encourage automobile sales. Federal highway funds are released, and private enterprises offer bonuses to car buyers.

Should the federal government run the railroads? That issue is still open as it was 20 years ago.

What about energy? Should the country seek to be self-sufficient? Can it become so? Should imported fuel be taxed?

And the so-called central market place that the Securities and Exchange Commission has been seeking for so many years? Will there ever be a central market for stocks? Will stock market officials cooperate in merging their separate identities into a national exchange? It's still unresolved.

For the moment, all these disputes fade into the background. The big dispute now is over the Federal Reserve Board.

Should the Fed, or more precisely its chairman, Arthur F. Burns, retain the independence of decision it now enjoys? Or, in behalf of the national good, should the Fed be made more responsive to its creator, the Congress?

Perhaps no one person has more power over the condition of the economy than Burns, who often is described as a devoted public servant, but a servant who sets his own standards on how the household should be run.

Congressmen, labor leaders, economists and businessmen have been highly critical of what they feel has been an autocratic, misguided monetary policy over the past few years.

They blame Burns for having operated an inflationary policy until late last summer and then a highly deflationary policy thereafter, starving the economy for funds and driving up interest rates.

While criticisms differ, there is a prevailing feeling that Burns should be more responsive to Congress and what Congress determines is the national interest, the national goal, rather than what Burns interprets the need to be. But Burns feels that monetary integrity demands he protect the independence of the Fed.

Like other disputes, this too seems destined to be put to rest unresolved rather than fought to a verdict.

Temple Banned On Children's Hour

LONDON (AP) — Shirley Temple films will not be shown during the children's hour because they are irrelevant, says Britain's independent television network.

The Independent Broadcasting Authority, which regulates commercial television, says the old Shirely Temple movies are "more likely to appeal to the nostalgia of older people than to the sophisticated children of today."

The gold-ringleted moppet and her escapades "have no relevance to modern children," a network spokesman said.

Shirley has not been banned from television — but her films will not be shown during the hour set aside for children's programming.

Denver City Oil Project Shut Down

AUSTIN, Tex. AP) — The oil well pressurization project that leaked toxic hydrogen sulphide gas near Denver City, killing several persons in a nearby house, has been shut down, the Texas Railroad Commission said Tuesday.

Atlantic Richfield shut down the project voluntarily, and the commission followed up with a letter ordering the company to keep it out of operation until further notice.

The commission set a March 13 hearing Monday on the overall problem of injecting toxic gases into wells to rebuild their pressure and produce more oil.

Family Jinx Is Broken

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Al Hansen of San Antonio says he finally got the boys he had always wanted after six daughters including quadruplet girls born four months ago.

Hansen and his wife Shiela now have quintuplets to raise as well. Their dog "Matasha" gave birth to a litter Monday.

"There's always been a jinx in our family of having all girls. But now our dog out did us and even gave us two boys," Hansen said. "So it's still fertility row out here."

Meanwhile, he reported the quads weigh more than 15 pounds each and "are getting chubby."

Mrs. Hansen gave birth to the four identical girls Oct. 24. Each scaled more than four pounds except Darcie, who weighed 3 pounds 10 ounces.

The other quads' names are Alison, Brooke and Claire.

Training Session To Be Held

A training session for volunteers for the Snyder Family Planning Program will be held this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the Snyder Child Day Care Center building at Thirty-fourth St. and Ave. K.

The purpose of the training session is to acquaint volunteers with the goals, purposes and services of the Snyder Family Planning program. The role of volunteers in the program will be explained.

The session will be directed by Mrs. Gladys Gerst, executive director of Community Action Council of Nolan County, and Mrs. Kay Eaton, R.N., and staff nurse of the Snyder Family Planning Program.

If you would like to learn more about how you can serve in the Family Planning Program, attend the session for an informative two hours this Saturday morning.

When a bathroom, kitchen or laundry room gets steamed up, close it off. Where there's no built-in exhaust system, place a fan by the window to push moist air out, suggestt Mrs. Doris Myers, home management specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

DONATE FUNDS—Mrs. George Mott, Jaycee-Ette project chairman, left, presents Joy McGlaun, program director of the Snyder Annex of the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, and Cindy Durham, right, secretary and therapy aide, with a check for the proceeds of the Valentine bake sale held by the Jaycee-Ettes to benefit the center. Plans Underway For ACS Crusade

The Scurry County Unit of the American Cancer Society met Monday at Carlos's Restaurant for a luncheon with sixteen members and one guest present. H.W. Cargile gave the invocation.

David Walch of Abilene, executive director for District XVI presented the program, an ACS educational film entitled "Michael and Me." The theme, lukemia was discusses. The disease, long considered primarily a disease of children, actually strikes many young people and adults. There is no cure as yet for the disease, but some cancer experts believe the latter may be emminent. Through early detection and drug combination, many leukemia patients lives have been prolonged. The ACS has long been in the forefront of the leukemia fight and has supported much research directly and indirectly over the years, with more than 100 grants last year.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. H.F. Clark, president. She gave a resume of the "Apple Tree", a new title for the ACS mobile unit that has been so successful in distributing life saving educational pamphlets and showing slides on various phases of cancer research.

At this point, Mrs. Ruby Anderson, local education chairman, presented ways and means of reaching the schools of the area and the public in general with pertinent ACS literature. She stressed the idea that an interested public would participate.

Buford Browning, vice-president, reported on the ACS Workshop held in Ft. Worth in early April. The upcoming crusade and public education were stressed at great length.

Mrs. W.D. Sims, District XVI crusade chairman, was also in attendance.

The president gave a report on the tri-county crusade workshop held at the Snyder Savings and Loan. Counties represented were Mitchell, Nolan and Scurry. Delegates shared their ideas on organizational matters pertaining to the upcoming ACS crusade, and the distribution of educational literature. Delegates attending from Snyder were Dr. and Mrs. Carl Dillaha, Mrs. W.D. Sims, Mrs. H.F. Clark, Helen Hatter, Jane Crenwelge, Don Wooten and Buford Browning. Delegates from Colorado City were Joy Piland and Joe Conners and from Sweetwater was Rigdon Edwards.

April 6 to 8 has been designiated a Crusade week. Mrs. Clark presented her corp of workers: Dr. Carl Dillaha, general crusade chairman; Mrs. Carl Dillaha, house to house; Don Wooten, business; Mrs. Helen Hatter and Jane Crenwelge, advanced gift; Rev. Loren Gorden, special events; and Buford Browning, rural. All anticipate a thorough, coordinated crusade.

Bicentennial Projects Discussed

Delbert Downing, chairman of the Bicentennial and Centennial Commission in Scurry County was guest speaker at a regular meeting of Beta Sigma Phi, Lambda Kappa chapter, held Tuesday night at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. The organization of the Bicentennail and Centennial Commission in Scurry County was explained and the three aspects of the project discussed. The three aspects are Heritage, Festival, and Horizon. Heritage will be concerned with presenting the history of the United States and Scurry County, Festival includes all activities and projects to be held, and Horizon will deal with projects that will continue in the community at the close of the year. Mr. Downing pointed out that the Board of Directors of the Commission represents different areas of the community and will serve as a policy-making body. Heading the Bicentennail division of the Commission is Dr. Ben Brock of Western Texas College, and the Centennial division will be directed by Mrs. Jess Everett. A public meeting will be held on March 20, at Trinity Methodist Church, in which all members of the community will be encouraged to voice their opinions and ideas for the 1976 celebration. Mr. Downing urged the public to attend this meeting, and stressed that each organization in Snyder will be encouraged to take part in Bicentennial-Centennial projects.

Following Mr. Downing's address, refreshments of chocolate pie, coffee, and tea were served by the evening's hostesses, Carolyn Limmer and Donna Cullar. Special guests were Mrs. Downing and Betty Clayton, a former Snyder resident and member of Beta Sigma Phi.

Billie Smith, president, presided over the short business meeting which followed. Seventeen members answered the roll call and minutes of the last meeting were read by Carolyn Limmer. Various committee chairmen reported on activities. Mrs. Smith read several communications and the meeting was adjourned with the closing ritual.

Artists Give Insight

COLLEGE STATION—Artists often try to give insight into objects or experiences by communicating with viewers' emotions, according to one specialist.

She's Anna Marie Gottschalk, housing and home furnishings specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The artist expresses his message by the way he chooses and uses several means of communication, she said.

—Subject matter: is the object the artist is representing.

Paintings of recognizable objects are called "realism." "Abstract" paintings begin with a recognizable object, but in the final form, the organization may have been changed. "Non-objective" art expresses emotion and exists for the appreciation of color, shape, texture and lines in a particular organization.

—Content: refers to the meaning the artist trys to express—sadness, happiness, strength, excitement—and can be found in realistic, abstract or non-objective subject matter.

—Media: refers to the actual materials the artist uses. Watercolor, acrylic or oil paint; pencil, chalk, ink or charcoal; canvas or paper; and stone, wood or plastic.

—Style: is the characteristic way the work of art is created. Groups of work with similar characteristics are usually classed together according to the time they were done—Renaissance or Victorian, for example.

You remember NANCY SINATRA. She's the one that Daddy spent all the money on but still she came out looking like a "pizza waitress". Well, she's suing comedian MORT SAHL for payment of the remainder of a 12-year-old debt. According to the suit, Mr. Sahl allegedly signed a promissory note for $20,000 in January 1962, and still owes $8000 to Frank and $500 to Nancy, as well as $1500 to City National Bank of Beverly-Hills. Comedian Sahl hasn't made any comment on the suit – but you can be sure it's no laughing matter to him.

BOB HOPE can't give up working because his real estate tax bill every year is allegedly some $2 million dollars. But please don't hold any charities for Rapid Robert. Real estate reporters say he just sold a parcel of land to the United States Government for some $6 million dollars. I understand his land was adjacent to California's Los Virgenes Mountains. What I really want to know is how did Bob always know what pieces of property to buy?

M-A-S-H Goes to Wall Street: WAYNE ROGERS is turning into Hollywood's TV tycoon, showing he's not only a fine comic actor (as trapper John) but also some kind of whiz-kid in stock dealings. In fact, PETER FALK and JAMES CAAN, a couple of guys who have a few bucks on their hands these days, look to Wayne for financial advice. One of his personal investments is a vineyard in Pasa Robles, California. And just about the only thing he won't invest in is show business, or, as Wayne puts it, "Show business is no business."

KARL MALDEN was thrilled when a fan called to tell him that "Streets of San Francisco" is one of his TV favorites. The name of the fan was President GERALD R. FORD.

...And another source tells me that former President RICHARD NIXON is also a crime show fan. His favorite is "Kojak."

What strong, virile, butch actor had to have a vaccination prior to his trip to Africa, and fainted? Would you believe RYAN O'NEAL? What's Up Doc.

Don't wait for the "Miss Congeniality" award the next time BERT PARKS hosts the Miss America Pageant. Sponsors have decided to drop the award for a reason insiders have been giggling over for years. One winner had all of three votes, for the simple reason that most of the Miss America contestants vote, for themselves!

Heeeerrrreeee's one JOHNNY CARSON didn't expect. His wife JOANNA is being sued by an ex-boyfriend for over $150,000. The ex claims that sum represents the total amount of loot he spent on her during the days she allegedly promised to marry him. Mrs. Carson's lawyers contend it was all a gift.

I asked ELLIOTT GOULD what happened to his romance with JENNIFER O'NEILL, but as usual, Elliott wasn't talkative. The way Jennifer moves around you'd think she was on skates. After leaving Elliott, she reconciled with hubby Joe Koster in time for their first wedding anniversary (she was gifted with a gold and diamond bracelet). Then Jenny left Joe for frozen food heir Nelson Peltz. Well, he'll keep her in string beans anyway...

May I Quote You? According to AL PACINO: "I never wanted to be an actor and I don't particularly enjoy it!"

Is HOWARD HUGHES alive or dead? Sources close to the big man himself are saying that Howard, himself, personally okayed JULIET PROWSE's new multi-million dollar contract at the Desert Inn. That one night, disguised as a waiter, Hughes caught Juliet's show and advised his people that as long as he lived at the Desert Inn he wanted Juliet to play there. And I though Hughes was living in Costa Rica. That fella sure do get around. In fact, he gets around so good, his Summa Corporation recently purchased every inch of footage that was ever taken on him. Obviously, Mr. Hughes plans for making money extends beyond his demise. The footage will be worth millions when Howard joins his other Gods in the Holy Heaven of Billionaires.

While chatting with FRED GWYNNE (The Munsters)-backstage he confessed to me that he broke his smoking addiction by going to a hypnotist – the same hypnotist who saved JASON ROBARDS from alcoholism. Was Fred really hypnotized? Fred told me he didn't think he was but when the hypnotist asked him if he thought he had been, he replied, not wanting to hurt the hypnotist's feelings, "I wouldn't know because I've never been hypnotized before." If he weren't whatever happened, sure did work.

Time was when a custom Caddy or Rolls were the things to score as status symbols on the movieland scene, but SHIRLEY MACLAINE has turned this somewhat around by driving a little Japanese Subaru that runs for days on what the Detroit dinosaurs burn at a stop light.

Speaking of gambling (well, kind of!), ex-gambler WALTER MATTHAU admits "I know it's a disease. I don't want to wallow in it because I think it's worse than alcoholism. I think it's worse than cancer!" He should know.

Coast Gets Rain

By The Associated Press

Drizzling rain spread from the Lower Texas Coast inland as far as Austin and the Central Texas Hill Country as thick clouds covered the south central and east parts of the state today.

Except for occasional high clouds it was clear across most of West Texas.

Mild weather prevailed in all sections despite the arrival of another weak cold front in the Texas Panhandle. Early morning temperatures ranged from 38 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle up to 70 at Brownsville on the south tip of the state.

Other points receiving rain in the forenoon included Alice, San Antonio and Del Rio.

Official forecasters looked for more moisture by Saturday in West and North Texas and by Monday in the south central and southeast parts of the state. Except for a little cooling by Monday in northern areas, little change in temperatures was expected.

Warm air flowing inland routed chilly weather from most sections Wednesday, sending afternoon temperatures as high as 81 degrees at Wink and 82 at Childress.

The ancient Greeks played with a toy they called the "diskos," and a painting on a vase from about 500 B.C. shows a youth spinning what we today call the yo-yo.

Lady Bird Receives AL Award

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson has been cited by the American Legion "for her dedicated efforts to beautify America" as the nation's first lady.

The honor, presented two years late, was the Legion's national public relations award of 1973. The press of business after the death of her husband, former President Lyndon B. Johnson, kept her from getting it award earlier.

The Legion's national commander, James M. Wagonseller, in presenting the award said of Mrs. Johnson, "She was one of the very earliest people in high places to put a high priority on restoration and preservation of the natural beauty of America. It has been said, and we believe rightly so, that she put our environment on the national political agenda."

Wagonseller said that during her late husband's time in the White House, Mrs. Johnson "saw him sign into law more than 100 major conservation laws. He always was the first to say that it was Lady Bird Johnson who sparked his interest ..."

The Legion gave Mrs. Johnson a $500 contribution toward her latest conservation project, the creation of the LBJ Memorial Grove between the Pentagon and the Potomac River.

The grove of white pine trees and other greenery will be in 15 acres designed for this in Lady Bird Johnson Park.

Mrs. Johnson was accompanied at the luncheon ceremony by her and daughter, Charles and Lynda Bird Robb.

Parfitt Named To Panama Canal Post

DALLAS (AP) — President Ford has nominated Maj. Gen. Harold R. Parfitt, former Corps of Engineers Southwest Division Engineer here, to be governor of the Panama Canal Zone.

Marty Feldman Has 'Fortune-Ate' Face

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD - (NEA) - If you've seen "Young Frankenstein" you've seen one of the funniest films in years. It's an ensemble hit but one reason for its success is the work of Marty Feldman as Igor, the Baron's hunchbacked assistant.

Feldman's face is his fortune. And he says it's more than that- "It's a map of my past."

He explains that his bulging eyes are the result of a sailboat accident that left him hyperthyroid. The broken nose comes from his having been a terrible boxer. And the scar on his forehead comes from his having been a rotten cricket player. Put them all together they spell Feldman.

MARTY FELDMAN: Late bloomer.

Feldman is one of those late-bloomers. He started out to be a musician (trumpet and drums) but he wasn't very good at that, either. Then he was an artist; same result. He finally found his niche as a writer and he wrote and ultimately produced David Frost's English show.

When he was 32, he started performing. He says he has only one regret about starting out so late.

"I didn't learn how to fall as a child," he says. "My idol, Buster Keaton, learned to fall when he was four. My comedy is mostly visual, so I fall a lot and, until I learned how, it was disaster-I've broken several bones and been laid up for many months at various times."

Next for Feldman is another part with Gene Wilder, who was in "Young Frankenstein." They'll both appear in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother." One of this season's TV smashes was NBC's special, "The Law," which has spawned a three-part mini-series which the network will air air March 19 and 26 and April 2. If this goes, too, there will be a full series next fall.

The star of the show is Judd Hirsch, a New York actor who faces the Hollywood future bravely. He took the part originally because acting jobs were scarce in New York and still considers himself primarily a New Yorker.

What made the special such a hit were three tenuous elements-writing, direction, acting. It remains to be seen whether those three can be recaptured in the mini-series. Hirsch is, naturally, optimistic.

He grew up in New York, wondering what to do with his life. In high school, he took an aptitude test and was told he was extremely mechanical. Obediently, he went to CCNY, as an engineering major. Later, he switched to physics.

"But I knew all along," he says, "that those weren't right for me."

For a while, he thought of being a comic. He and a friend used to do routines together. But the life of a comic-the road, the dingy clubs-didn't appeal to him. So eventually he zeroed in on acting.

Now he's on the threshold of major stardom-if the series sells and if it works. If it was only in New York he'd be a happy man. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

The stranger's lunch made her sick

By Abigail Van Buren

©, 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Syndi., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: An incident happened about two months ago, and I can't seem to get it out of my mind. In fact, when I think of it, it still repulses me, and I'd like to know if you think I'm wrong to feel this way.

My mom and I were eating lunch during the rush hour at a fairly nice restaurant. A man and a young boy entered together. The man had no arms, just stumps, hanging in full view of all. They sat near us, and ordered their lunch. The man's plate was placed in front of him, and he proceeded to knock it into eating position with his stumps. Then he put his face down into the plate and proceeded to eat just like a dog. I was so nauseated, I couldn't finish my lunch.

I honestly felt sorry for the man, but I also felt that he should not have exposed the people to that kind of scene. Please tell me how you honestly feel about it. It bothers me how much his looks and eating habits repulsed me. Thank you very much.

NO NAME OR PLACE

DEAR NO: You ask: "Am I wrong to feel this way?" Consider this: The armless man had to overcome his self-consciousness and learn how to handle the stares and looks of revulsion from strangers in order to eat in public. (A major victory for him!)

It takes a mature and compassionate person to handle unesthetic situations with grace. I hope you learn to do so because you will need it to deal with life realistically. And if you don't, it will be YOUR problem.

DEAR ABBY: There is this guy who is a year older than me, and a whole lot bigger. The other day he gave me a black eye. I would like to get back at him, but I don't know how to do it.

Have you any ideas?

BLACK EYE

DEAR BLACK EYE: Stay out of his way, or you might end up with a matched pair.

DEAR ABBY: I met a man about a year and a half ago, and I really think he is the man for me. The only problem is that he is very set in his ways, and one of his faults is always being late. If he says he is going to call me at 6 PM, he doesn't call until 7 PM. And if he says he is coming over at 8 PM, he never gets here until 9 PM. He is always about an hour late.

I have talked to him about this, and he says he's always been that way. It really infuriates me. I want to marry him, but I'd like to break him of this habit first.

He treats me very well, and he is the nicest man I've ever met, but his constantly running an hour late all the time is something I can't stand. How can I change him?

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Don't try. In the future, when you want him to come over at 8 PM, ask him to come at 7 PM. Just set everything up for an hour earlier, and when he's an hour late, he'll be on time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO " LOVED AND LOST": It's not always better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. It depends upon what you've lost.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

VN Students Seek Funds

Vocational nursing students at Western Texas College are undertaking a series of fund raising projects aimed at raising $2,000 to pay their expenses to the National Association of Practical Nurse Education and Service Convention in New Orleans April 21-24.

A bake sale is planned on March 8 as the first of the activities. On March 15, the students and instructors, Winifred Poyner and Sandra Galyean, will participate in a 16-mile Walkathon. They will be seeking sponsors who will contribute an amount for each mile walked by one of the participants, and anyone who would like to sponsor a walker may contact Miss Poyner or Mrs. Galyean to arrange the sponsor agreement.

Other fund raising activities being planned include a second bake sale and a garage sale.

"We need to have the money by April 1 so we can make reservations," Miss Poyner said. "Student Day will be observed on the first day of the convention, with roll call by schools planned during the opening session. We will appreciate the cooperation of the community in our fund raising projects."

WTC Students To Convention

Phi Theta Kappa members at Western Texas College will be among those from two-year colleges throughout Texas attending the state convention in Corpus Christi this week end.

Phi Theta Kappa is the only nationally recognized honor fraternity for two-year college students.

WTC students planning to attend the convention are Jill Chenoweth, Sonja Davis, Moirae Derringer, Michele Graves, David Higgins, Hector Hinojosa, Nancy Matteson, Karen Morris, Tom Murphy, Robbie Panter, David Posey, Ricky Price, Kevin Ross and Debbie Stephens.

Eight persons--five adults and three juveniles--were arrested at 12:17 a.m. Wednesday in the 2400 block of Anunue N. In connection with this case, charges of illegal possession of marijuana were filed in county court against Felipe Gutierrez, 19, Miguel Herrera, 20, Elma Saenz, 17, Carmen Cervantez, 17, and Refugio Hermosillo, 19. OPEC Meet Said Success

ALGIERS (AP) — Ending their first summit conference, heads of state of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries offered today to negotiate conditions for the stabilization of oil prices, but said these prices must be linked to the cost of manufactured goods, services and technology.

The three-day OPEC summit meeting ended with formal adoption of a "solemn declaration" to govern long-term relationships between the oil producers and consumers.

The chairman of the conference, Algerian President Houari Boumedienne, who provided many of the ideas in the declaration, called the summit "a historic success."

In addition to oil matters, the conference also provided the opportunity for Iran and Iraq to sign an agreement resolving their long-standing border conflict.

On oil prices, the declaration asserted that, "in spite of the apparent magnitude of the readjustment," prices have lost a large part of their real value because of inflation and currency depreciation.

Furthermore, the document declared, "The current price is markedly lower than that which would result from the development of alternative sources of energy."

Nevertheless, it said the OPEC countries "are prepared to negotiate the conditions for the stabilization of oil prices which will enable the consuming countries to make necessary adjustments to their economies."

Delegation sources said earlier the OPEC leaders had approved Boumedienne's proposal for a five-year freeze in the "real" price of oil, that is, in terms of its purchasing power, provided their Western customers make a large contribution to development of the Third World.

Testifies For Voting Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, former chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, said today progress made by blacks under the Voting Rights Act will be wiped out if the law is allowed to expire.

Father Hesburgh testified before a House subcommittee as the Justice Department threatened legal action throughout the South and in scattered localities elsewhere to combat widespread disregard of the Voting Rights Act.

Asst. Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pottinger told Congress on Wednesday that department lawyers are examining legislation enacted in nine states during the past five years in search of federal violations.

Father Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and chairman of the civil rights commission from 1969 to 1972, told a House judiciary subcommittee that gains made by blacks are "limited and fragile."

The subcommittee is hearing testimony on legislation that would extend the Voting Rights Act through 1985. Unless Congress votes an extension, the 1965 law expires in August. The legislation also would permanently ban literacy tests as a prerequisite to voting.

Woman Hurt In Elevator

Mrs. Lee Sutton, wife of an Odessa attorney, was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Galyean Ambulance Service about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon following a mishap involving the elevator at the Scurry County Courthouse.

Courthouse employes said she and about three or four other persons were on the elevator when it failed it stop at the first floor, went on down and hit the springs at the bottom of the courthouse. Hospital Authorities this morning said she was no longer in the hospital and had either been released or transferred to another hospital.

Employes also said Mrs. Sutton's husband and two other men, Joe Morgan Simmons and a brother, John Simmons, were also on the elevator. John Simmons complained of back pains, employees said.

WOMAN JUDGE FACES POSSIBLE OUSTER— The California Commission on Judicial Qualifications has recommended removal from office of Los Angeles Municipal Court Judge Noel Cannon, shown in this 1967 photo. Among accusations is that the 48-year-old jurist advocated that women carry derringers and hat pins to protect themselves against attacks by men. (AP Wirephoto)

Cattlemen Testify In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattlemen testifying here Wednesday told the government "thanks for buying $1 billion to $2 billion in meat products but it won't help much."

Cattlemen and farmers conceded, however, that such large government purchases are a beginning on the road to their economic recovery, the Dallas News Washington bureau reported.

"We've got to get our supplies (cattle) back to manageable level and this is one way to do it," said C.W. McMillan, vice president of the American National Cattleman's Association.

McMillan and others testified before a House agriculture subcommittee.

Jury Returns Guilty Verdict

A Scurry County jury comprised of six men and six women returned a verdict of guilty against Joe Morgan Simmons in 132nd District Court about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Presiding Judge Wayland G. Holt entered a judgement providing for a six-months' prison term.

Simmons had pleaded innocent to a charge of driving while intoxicated, and he had asked for a jury trial. The offense occurred Nov. 29, 1974. Trial had begun three days previously, and the defendant was represented by attorney Lee Sutton of Odessa. The case was prosecuted by District Attorney Pete Greene.

Snyderite's Father Dies

Funeral service was held at 10 a.m. today at Idabel, Okla., for Givens C. Miller, father of Frank Miller, principal of West Elementary School.

The elder Mr. Miller died Tuesday in a hospital at Houston where he had undergone surgery.

Graveside rites and burial have been set for 2 p.m. Friday at Marathon.

In addition to Frank Miller, survivors include his wife, two other sons and a daughter.

National Energy Policy Is Urged

HOUSTON (AP) — The head of one of the world's largest oilfield machinery firms said today the nation needs a 10-year governmental commitment that would provide industry with the economic environment needed for solving the domestic energy shortage.

"Political loose talk is destroying the confidence of the American people," said Robert H. Etnyre, president of National Supply Co., a division of Armco Steel.

"It seems to me the time has come to declare a moratorium on loose talk."

Etnyre told the International Association of Drilling Contractors the lack of a national energy policy has inhibited the search for oil and gas and the production of equipment.

"We are so far from such a policy that would allow our free enterprise system to do what it does best that it's scary," he said."

"Every day I read in the paper that someone in Washington is playing political word games with the oil depletion allowance or writing a new excess profits tax bill, or planning new controls on the oil and gas industry. The overall result is that no one is sure what he can count on."

Etnyre said there is need for a federal mandate similar to the one President Kennedy established for placing Americans on the moon.

"But we're not looking for a government program that is going to sperid billions on a single program," he said.

"We're looking for a commitment from our government that the nation's energy goals can be reached by the free enterprise system and that the ground rules will not change."

Etnyre said Chase Manhattan Bank estimates the petroleum industry's investment needs between 1970 and 1985 will approximate $1.4 trillion.

GOP Panel Compromises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Setting aside its wrangling, the Republican National Committee reached a compromise today on what state parties will have to do to show how they are broadening GOP ranks.

The compromise, worked out by rival factions after Wednesday's meeting ended in chaos, retains a requirement that state parties submit by Feb. 1, 1976, examples of how they are creating broadened opportunities for participation by all.

However, the compromise provides that the Republican National Committee would review and comment on a state's program only if the state requested it, easing the fears of some that the national party might end up monitoring and supervising state efforts. The effect of the provision had previously been diluted by language that said, in effect, nothing could be done to the state which don't comply.

The compromise carried on an overwhelming voice vote. However, at least one committee member, Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, said he opposed watering down the proposal.

GOP reform advocates said they were satisfied.

The action came after party leaders tightened their procedures to avoid a repetition of Wednesday's confusion.

Suspect In Robbery Held

A half million dollar diamond robbery in Lubbock a couple of months ago may have been solved, or at least partially solved yesterday afternoon, with the arrest of David Elton Owens, 25 of Lubbock, 2½ miles northeast of Ira on State Highway 350.

Highway Patrolmen, who made the arrest, filed a charge of driving while intoxicated against Owens in county court, and he was remanded to county jail in lieu of $1,500 bond, which had been set by Justice of the Peace Bobby Goodwin.

City Police said they recovered some credit cards from Owens that are believed to have been taken in an armed robbery in Lubbock.

Action Threatened To Enforce Voting Rights

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is threatening legal action throughout the South and in scattered localities elsewhere to combat widespread disregard of the federal Voting Rights Act.

Assistant Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pottinger told Congress on Wednesday that department lawyers are examining legislation enacted in nine states during the past five years in search of federal violations.

The federal voting rights law prevents six states and parts of 12 others from changing voting districts, polling places and other election rules without the department's prior approval. The department must determine whether the proposal would have the effect of stripping blacks and other minorities of the right to vote.

The department has asked the FBI to search for similar violations in the legislation passed by hundreds of cities and counties, he added.

"Where such changes have been made, we intend to seek ... compliance where necessary," said Pottinger, head of the department's civil rights division. The department could seek a court order requiring compliance with the law.

Although the law has been on the books for 10 years, many state and local officials still ignore it, Pottinger said.

"We have undertaken a number of programs to uncover such changes and to obtain their submission," Pottinger told the House civil rights subcommittee. The panel is conducting hearings on whether the voting rights act should be extended past its Aug. 6 expiration date.

In a review of Alabama statutes enacted in 1971, the department last year uncovered 161 voting changes implemented without department approval, he said.

The department now is reviewing 1970-74 legislation enacted in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, New York, North Carolina and Arizona.

Pottinger said the current probe already has turned up 158 voting changes passed by the Georgia legislature without department clearance.

Georgia officials were notified of the findings on Feb. 25 "and appropriate letters are now being prepared to the other eight states involved," Pottinger said without elaboration.

In Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia, any voting change affecting the state as a whole or any part of it is subject to department review. The federal law applies only to certain parts of the other three states, so only the legislation affecting voting in those parts would be involved.

Pottinger said there is ample evidence that many proposed changes are "clearly discriminatory."

He cited a proposed district change in Orleans Parish, Louisiana, which turned out to be a "racial gerrymander resulting in an extraordinarily shaped 19-sided figure that narrows at one point to the widthof an intersection, contains portions of three present districts, and suggests a design to consolidate in one district as many black residents as possible."

GIVES ADMINISTRATION VIEWS ON TAX CUTS—Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, right, goes over notes as he appeared before the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday. He said the $21.3 billion tax cut approved by the House provides too much relief for lower income families. Fred L. Webber, an assistant to Simon, appears with him. (AP Wirephoto)

Firms To Fight For Reserves

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Three South Texas utility company's still have legal avenues open to them in their fight for a bigger share of natural gas reserves despite an adverse Texas Supreme Court ruling, City Public Service general manager Tom Deely says.

Supreme Court justices ruled unanimously Wednesday that the Texas Railroad Commission was warranted in refusing to apportion gas in Lo-Vaca Gathering Co.'s pipelines.

CPS, Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority had told the Railroad Commission that Lo-Vaca favored other customers while at times curtailing deliveries in South Texas.

Chief Justice Joe Greenhill wrote in his opinion that the Railroad Commission "was justified in leaving to the courts ... the past, with the slumping economy apparently a greater the judicial resolution of just how much gas was available for commission disposition."

Deely said CPS has an intervention order in a lawsuit filed by Entex Oil Corp. in Houston which "raises the same questions as CPS."

"Hopefully, we'll get some relief from that particular suit," he said.

Regardless, natural gas supplies to the utilities will not be adversely affected by the Supreme Court decision.

"It will be the same amount of gas that we have been getting as long as their (Lo-Vaca) contracts hold and as long as they get their deliveries because we're not getting that gas anyway," Deely said.

He added the utilities had hoped the justices would view Lo-Vaca's reserves as belonging equally to all its customers.

"That is, that it would be subject to the Railroad Commission's jurisdiction; that it would be subject to curtailment when gas that we get is subject to curtailment; that it would command the same priorities that the gas we get does; and so forth," Deely said.

Private Pension Plans Folding At Higher Rate

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private pension plans are folding at a slightly higher rate than in factor than the strict new federal pension law.

In the first six months since the new law took effect last Sept. 2, a total of 879 plans have ended operation, according to their notifications to the new Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp.

That's an annual rate about one-sixth higher than the number of plan terminations in 1972 when the labor and treasury departments studied previous plan shutdowns.

That study of what happens to workers' benefits when their pension plans fold was one element leading to passage of the pension revision law last year.

The law established the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. to insure worker benefits and set stricter standards in a number of areas.

For example, the new law requires that an employe receive rights to some or all of available pension benefits after fewer years of service than had previously been the case.

The person who acts as the fiduciary or manager of a pension plan must meet stricter standards for managing the plan. The law also requires employers to set aside funds for future pension payments as soon as the employes earn pension credits. It also mandates extensive reporting to the Labor Department.

There are about 350,000 private pension plans in the United States.

Before the law was enacted, there was some speculation that the tougher standards would lead some pension plans, particularly those of small employers, to shut down rather than improve operations.

A random selection of termination notices filed with the pension guaranty corporation, however, mostly put the blame on economic conditions.

For example:

—A Connecticut mechanical contractor cited "adverse business conditions" for the demise of a 5-year-old pension plan.

—A New York clothier's notice said the plan sponsor is in the hands of creditors.

—A Georgia auto dealer cited economic conditions and possible corporate bankruptcy.

Legislators Working On School Finance Reform

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Legislators have begun work on the session's biggest issue, public school finance reform, with a description of what is wrong with the present system.

The House Public Education Committee and the Senate Education Committee, began their efforts with a joint hearing Wednesday.

A major problem, which the committees probably can't do much about, is the state's property tax administration system.

Lynn Moak, former school finance director for the Texas Education Agency and now an assistant state comptroller, said:

"Reform and equalization will never take place until the property tax is straightened out. Texas has one of the worst property tax administrations in the United States."

All school finance reform bills, including Gov. Dolph Briscoe's would base state aid on a school district's taxable property values. But market values are unknown, and only estimates are available now, Moak said.

Asked which of the two sets of data now available is best, Moak replied, "Neither."

Both sets are based on information from country tax rolls. Briscoe is having some data prepared by a private firm, but it not yet available.

"The total system of school finance is far from equalized, because of the enormous variation in property values per student,"

Moak said. He said the range is from $5,000 to $10 million.

Dr. L.D. Haskew, University of Texas education professor and a consultant to the Gilmer-Aikin Committee that rewrote the school finance laws in 1949, said the present system is inadequate.

"It does little more than build a very, very low floor under the kind of education everyone gets," Haskew said.

Several plans to revise the school finance system include basing state aid partly on total enrollment in a district instead of on average daily attendance. Haskew said ADA was adopted "to get children into school who ought to be taught." Before then, school districts were motivated to ignore absences, or even failure to enroll, because if a child failed to show up, "they wouldn't have to spend any money on him."

He said the present school finance system's state-set floor on teacher salaries has been beneficial.

"Every time teacher salaries have jumped, we immediately saw an influx of higher ability people who wanted to be teachers," Haskew said.

Carter Asks Dam Be State Project

COOPER, Tex. (AP) — Joe Carter, chairman of the Texas Water Rights Commission, suggested today that the Cooper Reservoir Project be converted to a state project because of federal inaction.

"In my view Cooper Dam is an absolute necessity as a means of supplying the burgeoning water demands in this vibrant and growing area of Texas," Carter said in a statement read at a meeting to discuss the fate of the project. Carter said he could not attend because of a hearing in Houston on land subsidence.

Carter said he was "increasingly concerned in recent years over the many delays and obstacles which have frustrated efforts to develop this essential water supply. I realize that some of the delays were of the state's own making through its insistence that the site be developed to its optimum potential ... I recognize further that the project has been stymied by a lawsuit brought by those interested in the environment."

"However," Carter said, "I get the uncomfortable feeling that the New Orleans district of the Corps of Engineers is not pursuing this project with the fervor and enthusiasm normally found for projects within the jurisdiction of a Corps of Engineers district ... with a lapse of 20 years since the chief of engineers of the Corps recommended to Congress that Cooper Dam be constructed and to date not a spade full of dirt has been turned, one is led to the inescapable conclusion that forces are at work to allow the Cooper Dam and Reservoir Project to die a slow and certain death.

"For these and other reasons ... I have now come to the conclusion that the State of Texas should move to build this project on its own through the efforts of the present local sponsors and the Texas Water Development Board. The latter has ample funds and legal authority to either take the lead in this endeavor or to assist the local sponsors in doing so," he said.

Carter suggested that Texas congressmen be asked to sponsor necessary legislation to deauthorize Cooper Dam as a federal project and to provide for transfer of the lands to the local agency.

Murder Charges Dismissed

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Murder charges against an Abilene man have been dismissed because the State Comptroller was unable to pay the statutory allowances for travel for two key witnesses.

Charges were dropped Wednesday against Phil Ford Jr., 57, at the request of Dist. Atty. Ed Paynter.

He said the state's case was dependent on the testimony of two eye witnesses who have since moved to North Carolina and California. Both testified in the trial in 1974 and have yet to be reimbursed for their travel expenses.

The first trial resulted in a mistrial after the jury deadlocked on the issue of guilt.

Paynter said he didn't feel it would be fair to ask the witnesses to come again at their own expense.

After dismissing the charges, 104th Dist. Court Judge J. Niel Daniel called the problem of insufficient travel funds for witnesses "ridiculous" and added it is nothing new to Texas.

The Legislature provides for such payments in the budget of the Comptroller of Public Accounts in the appropriations bill every two years.

The current biennium doesn't end until Aug. 31 "and they've already been out of funds for months," Judge Daniel said. "They didn't appropriate enough funds for one year, much less two."

Judge Daniel presided over the trial of former House Speaker Gus Mutcher and two associates in connection with the Sharpstown stock fraud scandal of 1972.

Controversy Evident On Utility Panel

By DAN McDONALD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Before the current session of the legislaure started, lawmakers agreed the possible creation of a state utilities commission would be one of the session's most controversial issues.

If the more than seven hours of testimony Wednesday before the Senate State Affairs Committee is any indication, they were right.

Dick Gregg, the Nassau Bay city attorney, said "I think it is criminal to hold out to the cities and consumers of Texas that there is regulatory power when there isn't."

Gregg, speaking in favor of a bill by Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland, one of three bills before the committee, said his city had been told by a state appeals court in December 1974 that it could not regulate the Continental Telephone Co.

According to Gregg, the court said Nassua Bay, a suburb of Houston, fell under intrastate regulation because the city received phone service that allowed subscribers, for the same monthly fee, to call throughout the Houston metropolitan area.

Under current law, telephone companies are free to set any rate for intrastate long distance calls.

"I'm mad and I'm going to stay mad until we get a bill like Sen. Clower's," Gregg said.

Clower's bill would set up a three-member elected commission and order that rate increases be based on original cost rather than fair value.

Use of the fair value rate base, which is based on current replacement cost of equipment, allows utilities to inflate their costs when asking for a rate hike, Clower said.

John Childs, of New York City, a financial advisor, said, however, fair value rate base is the best way to regulate utilities.

"If you regulate utilities on original cost value, then you regulate them out of the current price market," Childs said.

Childs said Texas utilities are "outstanding in their financial strength."

"Many utility companies in the country are in serious trouble because they can't sell their stocks or bonds," Childs said.

"The situation is so delicate now that if you put in a regulatory system it is going to add to your current problems," Childs said.

Clower said the creation of a state utility commission will not solve all the consumers' problems with utility rates.

The committee recessed until Monday when it plans to hear more testimony.

Med Scholarship Plan Discussed

Cy Miller brought the program at the regular meeting of the Noon Kiwanis Club, held Wednesday at the American Restaurant.

Miller, administrator of Cogdell Memorial Hospital and a Kiwanian, introduced Billie Mills, Mildred Tracey and Wilma Dillard, members of the Women's Auxiliary of Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

They said the Auxiliary has started a scholarship fund to bring a physician to Snyder with a $2,500 donation. They asked the Kiwanians and "The entire community" to help with their Medical Student Scholarship Fund, explaining that a sophomore at the Galveston Medical School will agree to practice at least three years in Snyder after he finishes medical school and his residency if the community will finance his schooling.

Miller reminded Kiawanians that the youngest practicing physician in Snyder is 50 years of age, and that the community urgently needs more doctors.

He said the student contacted is Stanley Allen of Clyde, and that there is another one from Memphis, Tex. who also expressed an interest in the same arrangement. Miller said the scholarship is similar to the one offered by the military services with the difference that the graduate would practice in Snyder for three years rather than obligate himself for three years of military service.

Bobby Beard, vice president, presided over the meeting in the absence of Dr. Jim Tully. Beard read a letter from Tomibeth Hunt expressing her appreciation to the Kiwanis Club for its scholarship during her study at Western Texas College. He also read another letter from Joe Roemisch who expressed appreciation to the Club for purchasing his animal at the Junior Livestock Show sale.

Bob Goodson of Lubbock was a guest of the Club.

Kiwanians were reminded of the annual Pancake Supper to be held Friday, March 21, at West Elementary cafeteria. Tickets, at the rate of $1, can be purchased prior to the supper from any Kiwanian. At the door, the rate will be $1.50 each. Children under six years of age will be admitted free.

Gas To Go Up 4-Cents

HOUSTON (AP) — Elimination of oil's depletion tax allowance would cause gasoline prices to increase about four cents a gallon, a Texas Inc. official says.

The House vote to kill the allowance contained nothing to make consumers happy, William K. Tell Jr. said Tuesday.

Tell, Texaco vice president for governmental affairs in Washington, talked with newsmen prior to addressing the Houston chapter of the American Petroleum Institute.

The House voted last week to eliminate the 22 per cent oil and gas depletion tax allowance which Tell and other oilmen estimate would cost the industry an additional $2 to $3 billion.

Oil Imports Set Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States imported a record 285 million barrels of oil during January at a cost of $3.3 billion, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

The import figure amounted to some 9.2 million barrels of oil a day, or roughly 50 per cent more than the average 6.3 million barrels which the United Sates had been importing daily in recent months.

The record January oil imports appeared to have been spurred by the desire of oil buyers to avoid the $1 per barrel tariff placed on imported oil Feb. 1 by President Ford.

Ford has postponed for 60 days imposing the next two stages of his oil tariff plan, which otherwise would have pushed the levy up to $3 per barrel by April 1.

The Commerce Department figures were considerably higher than an estimate by the Federal Energy Administration that January oil imports would average out at 6.3 million barrels a day.

LTV Honors Two Employes

DALLAS (AP) — Two employes of the LTV Areospace Corp. were given the company award of honor for helping save the life of an injured motorist.

J.B. Andrasko, vice president of administration, presented the award to Sally and Glenn Harwell for saving the life of Frank Guzman.

Congress Skeptical On Emission Proposals

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A skeptical Congress is unlikely to move for at least a year on two separate administration proposals for a five-year delay in stricter auto pollution standards, Senate sources say.

The sources said that chances for eventual congressional approval of such a pause were only slightly improved by the announcement Wednesday of a one-year delay in the antipollution program.

Environmental Protection Administrator Russell E. Train said he was postponing for one year the higher emission-control standards due to take effect with 1977 models. He said the decision follows evidence of high levels of sulfate emissions from catalytic converters. The converters were designed to reduce other harmful auto emissions.

Train, who has no authority to order a delay longer than one year, said he would ask Congress to change the law to delay enforcing tougher standards for an additional five years.

President Ford has proposed a similar but not identical plan for a five-year pause based on his desire to achieve greater fuel efficiency in the nation's cars.

Senators familiar with the problem said Congress is unlikely to accept long delays in improving auto emissions without guarantees that giving up some time will produce results in other areas.

No decision on the five-year pause proposal will be needed from Congress for at least a year because of the one-year EPA moratorium.

Train said, "I have reached the difficult but inescapable conclusion that the nation faces an unpleasant choice ..." He said the choice was sticking to the previous schedule and risking increased levels of sulfuric acid mist in the air or minimizing that risk by stretching out time schedules for reducing emissions of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide.

Train said that to meet the original 1977 standards the nation's auto makers would have been compelled to rely heavily on catalytic converters.

A car equipped with such a converter emits 35 times more sulfuric acid than one without, while the addition of an air pump to increase the converter's efficiency would have caused 70 times more sulfate emissions, Train said.

The EPA director said he made the decision only on the sulfuric acid question and "with a great deal of reluctance and with full awareness that I may be erring on the side of caution."

A source familiar with the thinking of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, author of the principal pollution control legislation now in effect, said lawmakers "will go tediously over the problem to see what our options are and this will take some time. We've got a long ways to go to justify this kind of proposal."

As a result of Train's action, emission standards will remain at 1.5 grams per mile of hydorocarbons, 15 grams per mile of carbon monoxide, and 3.1 grams per mile of nitrogen oxides compared to the previously scheduled 1977 model standard of .41 gram per mile of hydrocarbons, 3.4 grams per mile of carbon monoxide and 2.0 grams per mile of nitrogen oxides.

PAU Closer On UT Merger

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — Pan American University was a step closer today to becoming part of the University of Texas System after a special committee voted for the merger of the South Texas school into the system.

The 6-3 committee vote came shortly after University President Dr. Ralph Schilling announced that students had voted against the merger by a margin of 2,205 to 1,685. But only 54 per cent of the school's approximately 7,000 students voted. The final vote count meant that only 31 per cent of the total student body voted against the merger, Dr. Schilling said.

The committee was appointed by the Pan American regents and was to report to the regents their recommendations concerning the possible merger. The committee is to make a favorable report at a meeting of the board of regents here March 12. The next step would be for the regents to vote to request permission from the Texas Legislature for approval of the merger.

The committee was composed of regents, faculty members, students and two persons from the Lower Rio Grande Valley community. Some criticism had been voiced earlier because the committee had until last Sunday always discussed the merger in meetings closed to the public and the news media.

Last Sunday, the committee held a televised and broadcast question-and-answer session where students or any one concerned could telephone questions to the committee.

Committee members voting in favor of the merger were Dr. Schilling, J.C. Looney of Edinburg and Al Cisneros of Brownsville, representing the general public, Dr. Frederick Vone Ende and Dr. Amilda Thomas, representing the faculty and regent Ruben Cardenas of McAllen.

Voting against the measure were regent Moises Vela of Harlingen, Pan American student body president Eddie de la Garza and student representative Cynthia Mata.

Regent Morris Atlas of McAllen, committee chairman, did not vote, explaining later that the committee chairman had to vote only in case of a tie.

About 50 students watched silently as the committee held some final discussions and then voted.

If the merger is finalized by legislative action, Pan American will join the University of Texas System with no guarantees whatever, Atlas said.

Kuhn Has Pact With American Broadcasting

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball has been married to the National Broadcasting Co. for years. Now the sport also is going to set up housekeeping with the American Broadcasting Co.—and NBC is going to have to share its loaf.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday that Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has reached an agreement with the American Broadcasting Co. for ABC to televise Monday night baseball games starting in 1976. ABC also will alternate with NBC—starting the same season on the World Series and All-Star Game, just as NBC and the Columbia Broadcasting System do with pro football's Super Bowl.

There's one hitch, but apparently not a major obstacle.

NBC, so industry sources in both New York and Los Angeles say, hasn't reached a new agreement with Kuhn. Some network brass are upset about the baseball commisioner offering half the loaf to ABC.

But NBC, so these sources say, isn't ticked off enough to tell baseball to pack its bags and move out.

The network will accept half the loaf, if it has to, and the only thing holding up a new contract is money.

Kuhn, it was learned, initiated talks with Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports. The commissioner, so it was said, told Arledge that ABC could have the Monday night games and a share of the World Series and All-Star telecasts for a certain amount of money.

There was no haggling. Arledge accepted the deal.

Just how much money is involved could not be learned, but the knowledgeable guessing among television insiders Wednesday night was "it's got to be at least $10 million a year."

NBC had no comment about the situation Wednesday night. Kuhn wasn't reachable for comment, nor was Arledge.

NBC's present contract with baseball, which ends after this season, gives the network both the Saturday and Monday national telecasts of baseball plus the World Series and All-Star Games. This pact is believed to pay $18 million annually. NBC has telecast the Monday night games since their inception five years ago and always has had the World Series and All-Star Game.

Kuhn's cutting of the loaf calls for NBC to continue to televise its Game of the Week on Saturdays, plus the World Series one year and the All-Star Game the next.

And baseball then would have its wares displayed on two national networks—still one less than the National Football League.

ANGELS FINE FATTIES $100 FOR EACH POUND

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Just when the price of beef was supposed to be going down, along come the California Angels, charging the inflationary rate of $100 a pound.

That may be good news for the Angels' treasury, but it puts a dent in the economy of catcher Tom Egan and pitcher Andy Hassler.

Dick Williams, manager of the Angels' consumer affairs bureau, announced during the winter that the cost of easy living was going up and any overweight player would be assessed at the rate of $100 for each excess pound.

So when the Angels, who often were called butchers when they finished last in the American League West in 1974, held their first full spring training workout Wednesday, there was Williams testing for excess fat. He found three pounds of it on Egan—$300 worth—and one pound on Hassler—$100.

Then, Williams put the Angels through a 3½-hour drill which stressed fundamentals and conditioning.

"We're gonna make sure you're in shape," he told the players.

Williams might have quite a job if George Scott were an Angel. The Milwaukee Brewers didn't consider Scott an angel when the big first baseman, listed on the roster at 210 pounds, reported at a big, BIG, 230.

Manager Del Crandall socked it to Scott's wallet but the amount of the fine was not disclosed.

The Angels continued their fine start by slapping catcher Ellie Rodriguez an undisclosed amount for being five days late. AWOL pitchers Horacio Pina and Barry Raziano also face fines unless they have a good explanation for being among the missing, Williams said.

In another development, one-time slugger Tony Conigliaro, attempting a comeback with the Boston Red Sox after being out of baseball for 3½ years, was signed to a minor league contract with Pawtucket of the International League.

The contract means little. If the 30-year-old Conigliaro can do the job, he'll be in Boston in 1975. Conigliaro, who led the American League with 32 home runs when only 20 years old, was nearly blinded when hit on the left cheek by a pitch from California's Jack Hamilton Aug. 18, 1967.

In the Cleveland Indians' camp, Manager Frank Robinson and pitcher Gaylord Perry buried the hatchet...again.

"Everything is fine as far as I'm concerned," Perry said. "Sure, I wasn't happy about certain things, but I wasn't trying to cause any trouble for Frank."

On Tuesday, Robinson had urged Perry to work harder and set a better example for the team's younger players

Legalized Gambling Opposed

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Horse racing, in the fashion of the professional sports of football, basketball and baseball and collegiate athletics, doesn't want federal intervention in its activity.

The other sports told the National Gambling Commission two weeks ago they could live with illegal betting as it exists today but legalization of sports wagering would be disastrous. Likewise, horse racing's comments.

For two days, representatives of the horse-racing industry told the commission that they were aware of illegal gambling on their sports but that legalization of interstate off-track betting would prove to be disastrous to their sport.

"The general feeling among the witnesses was that there was no necessity for federal involvement," James Ritchie, commission executive director, said Wednesday at the close of the hearings.

"But the arguments they make against it, clearly indicates that if the industry, through the various states, does not take steps to eliminate what appears to be disturbing economical problems, federal involvement may be necessary."

The Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling has been holding hearings on betting in the United States and must make a report to the President and Congress by October 1976.

The 15-member panel, which was down to two commissioners by the end of the day Wednesday after starting with eight, held hearings on lotteries last fall and on sports gambling two weeks ago.

The commission will travel to Boston April 9-10-11 for hearings on organized crime, return to Washington May 6-7 for testimony on off-track betting and then go to Philadelphia May 21-22-23 for more hearings on organized crime and its relationship to gambling.

It also plans trips to Detroit, Chicago, Arizona, California, Florida and Nevada.

Ritchie also said the commission plans to hold further hearings on horse racing. Attempts will be made to bring in persons who bet to learn what they think of the sport's integrity and the effect of off-track wagering and tax surcharges, he said.

Thirteen witnesses and their associates testified during the two days of hearings with little difference in their basic arguments — anti-federal intervention, anti-off-track betting and anti-state taxation, or at last further taxation.

Most witnesses opposed federal regulation because, they testified, it would surely lead to a federal tax on horse racing.

Opposition to legalization of off-track betting stems from the belief that it would reduce attendance and thus lessen revenues from concessions and parking and also from the fact that the tracks would receive no proceeds from the OTB parlors.

Two Join Boston Bolts

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Johnston of the Toronto Tomahawks and forward Paul Murdock have been signed to one year contracts by the Boston Bolts of the National Lacrosse League.

The club says both players are expected to report in time for the April 28 opener against New York at Boston Garden.

Cincinnati, 22-5 this season and the winner of the NCAA tournament in 1961 and 1962, accepted a bid as an independent and will participate in the tournament's Midwest Division.

Kentucky and Alabama, ranked sixth and seventh respectively in the Associated Press basketball poll, are locked in a race for the Southeastern Conference basketball race. If Alabama, 22-3, wins its final game Saturday night, the Crimson Tide will be the SEC champs and will participate in the Mideast Region.

In that case, Kentucky, 21-4, will play in the Western regionals. If Kentucky wins the SEC, the Wildcats will go to the Mideast division and Alabama to the West.

The NCAA also announced that it will invite a second team from both the Big Ten and Atlantic Coast Conferences to its expanded, 32-team tournament.

The Big Ten champs, Indiana, are already set in the Mideast Regional. The second invited team—Minnesota, Purdue or Michigan—will participate in the Western Regional.

The winner of this weekend's ACC tournament will participate in the Eastern Regional. The second invited team from the ACC will participate in the Midwest Regional, the NCAA said.

The NCAA was announcing all the bids to its tournament today. The announcements were to be made in four sections, each an hour apart. This was the first announcement.

Diabetes can cause impotence

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D

DEAR DR. LAMB- I'm in the state prison. I'm 45 years old, six feet tall and weigh about 175 pounds, but I have both diabetes and gout.

I developed burning in my feet so severe it felt like a cigarette lighter was being held to my toes. I couldn't stand the touch of a sheet or blanket. I'm now taking additional pills for this. My eyesight has also been failing.

My main concern is that when I go to church and hear the choir sing I cry real tears. Just hearing the other people around me caused me to cry. I cry when someone comes to visit me, even when I'm happy.

I'm not particularly unhappy here as I have a college background and have an office job. But when I am paroled this problem could be detrimental to my earning capacity. Is this a middle-aged liability I will have to live with the rest of my life?

I also notice the medicine is affecting my sex life. I'm impotent but happily married to a beautiful woman. What can I do for her when I get out?

DEAR READER- Your primary concern, the tendency to crying, is related to your own emotionality. It is not restricted to middle age or old age. Men do have feelings and you are probably very sensitive. Your experiences in life may have caused you to have some depression that you don't recognize. Some professional counseling would help if you are having too much of a response, as you seem to think.

Those painful, burning feet may be a response to your diabetic condition. Involvement of nerves, called diabetic neuropathy, will cause this condition.

The impotence problem may not be from your medicine at all, but rather another manifestation of your diabetes. Involvement of nerves in diabetes can, and in diabetic males sometimes does, affect the nerves necessary for normal sexual responses. I would be very suspicious that this is your problem in view of your history of feet burning, which also may mean nerve involvement.

The best approach to treating both the feet burning and the impotence is good control of the diabetes. Eye difficulties can also be a complication of diabetes. I do not think oral pills for diabetes in the presence of your problems is adequate treatment. The Food and Drug Administration, The Diabetic Assn. and The American Medical Assn. have all recommended treatment by diet or by insulin, not by pills. In view of your probable complications, I think you need to see a diabetic specialist, one who recognizes the benefits to be derived from a form of treatment directed more toward replacement of insulin deficiency, the cause of diabetes.

Good control of your diabetes may help with your problems, but they may not be corrected entirely even with good treatment. If your impotence persists after parole, you may be able to get some help from a urologist. There are now some satisfactory splint implants being used in selected cases. You are young and may be a candidate then. Some of these devices are rather ingenious.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on impotence, send 50 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to the same address and ask for the "Impotence" booklet.

President Of CC Guest Of Motel Assn.

Joe Williamson, president of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, was special guest at a meeting of the Snyder Motel Association held at the Pal-O-Mar Motel.

Williamson, who displayed drawings of the proposed new Chamber of Commerce office building, discussed "dreams for Snyder" and how they are becoming reality. Motel Association members express their support for the Chamber programs and their desire to work for mutual goals.

Plans were made for a joint meeting with restaurant owners in April. It was noted that motels and restaurants sometimes are the only contact tourists have with Snyder, and they hope to develop a program to encourage visitors to stay longer and to return for future visits.

Art Feinsod, president of the association, reported that bids had been submitted to the city to install reflector tape on "Welcome to Snyder" signs on highways leading into the city.

The March meeting of the Motel Association will be held at 2 p.m. March 16 at the Beacon Lodge. Hostess for the event will be Mrs. Ruth Anderson, who is a new resident of Snyder.

Greek Forces Quell Unrest

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek navy and air force were called in to quell unrest at an army and marine camp near Athens on Wednesday and the disturbance quieted after destroyers and jets made a show of force, a navy source reported today.

The reports came less than two weeks after the seven-months old civilian government foiled a plot by army officers to restore the ousted military dictatorship. Thirty-nine officers are under arrest.

The navy source said three destroyers sailed from their base at Elefsis to Salamis Bay, off the coast near Megara. Marines and parachutists are trained at the Megalo Pefko army camp nearby.

The destroyers had orders to fire on the Megalo Pefko camp if the unrest continued, the source said.

As the destroyers steamed off Megara, air force jet fighters made low passes over the army camp, the source said.

Reports of a navy and air force alert on Wednesday were denied by the Defense Ministry, which said they were only conducting smallscale maneuvers.

The air force and navy are considered loyal to the civilian government of Premier Constantine Caramanlis, which is attempting to purge the armed forces of officers still loyal to the military dictatorship that ruled from April 1967 to July 1974.

The navy source said the destroyers returned to their home port after five hours. There were no further details available on the incident.

The Greek marine corps was founded by Constantine Papadopoulos, brother of ex-strong-man George Papadopoulos, shortly after the 1967 army coup. The marines were considered completely loyal to the Papadopoulos family.

The unrest at Megalo Pefko followed a government move to shake up the army, including the retirement of 22 generals and transfer of scores of other officers.

Since the plot was uncovered Feb. 24, there have been reports of widespread unrest in the army. Officers claim morale has been undermined by a "witch hunt" started by the civilian government.

Cogdell Memorial Hospital's Women's Auxiliary has started a Medical Student Scholarship Fund to help a needy medical Student or students.
The first medical student needing help has visited Snyder, likes the community and is willing to sign a contract for the following terms:

$500.00 per month for remaining time he has in school (3½ years)

$1,000.00 per year for books and tuition. Also an amount will be advanced each year to cover an insurance policy on him so that money will be repaid if something happens to him.

His contract calls for him to come back to Snyder and practice in the community for 3-years after he has finished Medical School and Residency. If he fails to finish school or does not come back to Snyder to practice the money that has been advanced will be paid back within one (1) year to athe Auxiliary with an interest rate of 6 per cent per year.

A complete 3-years will be required to practice in Snyder to protect his loan.

Each month a note will be signed by him for amount advanced.

If we can raise enough money there are also other students that are interested. We are presently recruiting physicians to help the community now. This will be a way that the community can help also because of the age of our physicians are such that any help we can get in the next ten (10) years is needed.

This is a COMMUNITY EFFORT AND A COMMUNITY NEED and any money donated to the Auxiliary for this fund is tax deductible plus it is a very worth cause as it may be your health that is at stake.

We have to depend on contributions, we do not get help from anyone. We are a service organization and our motto is "SERVICE FIRST". Members of the community will profit. We have never before asked for help.
