TDCJ seeks 4,000 more CO's by Fall

Even as correctional officers are arriving at the soon to be completed 80-John Wallace Unit to learn of their assignments here, the State of Texas has put out a call for an additional 4,000 correctional officers by this fall.

Mike Thornton, Western Texas College's dean of continuing education, said WTC is currently trying to set up academies in Breckenridge and Brownwood due to prisons nearing completion in those communities.

"We're going at full force," said Thornton, who said the job market for correctional officers has never been better. "The state needs 4,000 CO positions filled by fall and individuals should obtain almost immediate employment."

The next class scheduled at WTC is for July 6-29. Applications will become available on May 1 and are due by May 20. Tuitions and fees are $300.

The application period for the Fort Stockton academy opened Monday and will run through April 20. Class dates are June 6 through June 29. Tuition fees will be $380, higher than in Snyder because it is an extension center.

Thornton added that the Texas Department of Criminal Justice will be testing 225 candidates for the already-full May class at WTC on April 19. Because the cutoff number for applicants is 225, over 100 candidates had to be turned away. Those applications will be forwarded for consideration in the July 6 class in Snyder.

Applicants must be at least 18 years of age and have a GED or high school diploma. Thornton added that TDCJ has waived all height and weight restrictions.

"Poker Run" set for Ruddick Park

The Mitchell County Law Enforcement Association and the Strongheart Motorcycle Club will jointly sponsor their first "Poker Run and Bar-B-Que" on Saturday, April 16 at Ruddick Park.

Registration begins at noon with the first bike out at 1:00 p.m. and the last bike scheduled to be in at 3:00 p.m. There is a $10 entrance fee for all the events including a volleyball game between the "Pigs" (cops) and the "Hogs" bikers. This will include a brisket and bar-b-que goat super served from 5:30 until 7:00 p.m. - or until the food is gone. Tickets for the meal only are $3. Organizers are asking that no alcoholic beverages be on the premises during this sponsored event.

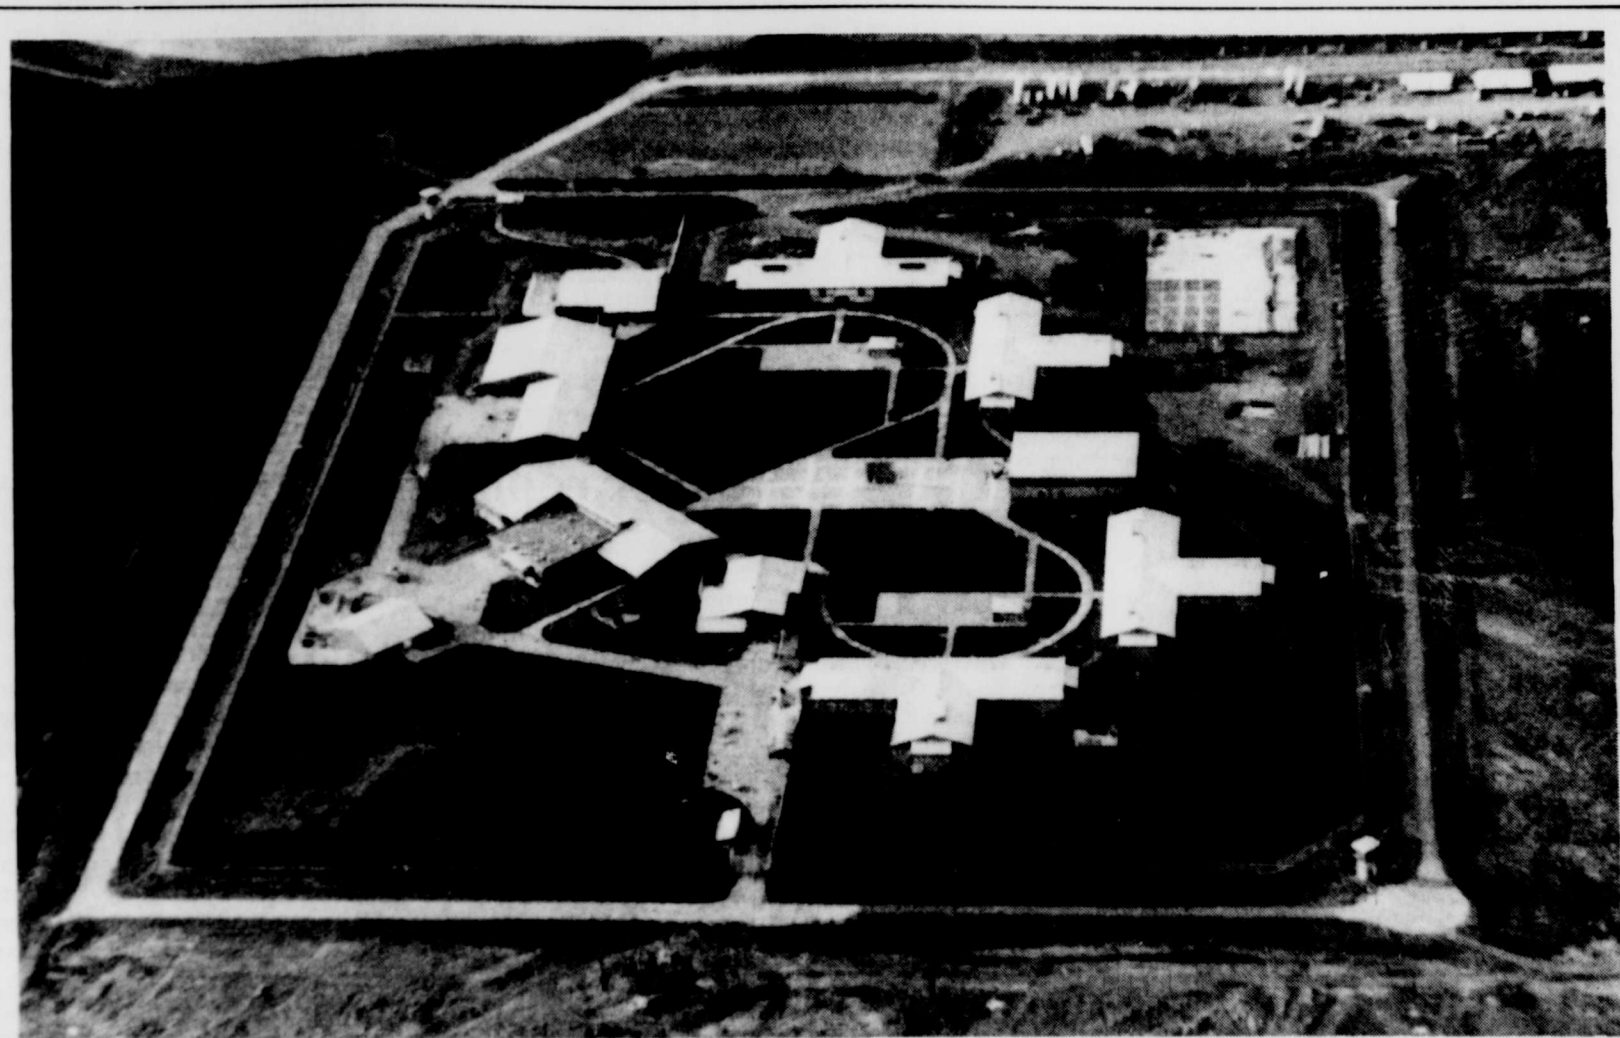

Proceeds will benefit the Youth Center and local scholarships. For additional information, contact Harry Dalton (728-8672) or Randy Bullard (728-2365).

Five candidates seek three places at MCH

There will be five candidates for three places on the Mitchell County Hospital Board as Dale Geiger and Robert Holman filed Tuesday. Also, the three incumbent members - Fred Thompson, Vergil Stone and Gene Parker have filed for the May 7 election.

In the runoff elections Tuesday, Richard Fisher gathered in 306 votes to lead over Jim Mattox's 118. Fisher also won state-wide. He will now oppose Republican Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison in the November general election.

Raul Gonzalez amassed 228 votes locally in the Supreme Court race. He also won state-wide defeating Rene Haas who received 187 votes in the county. Betty Marshall won here and across the state in the race for a spot on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

CLOSE TO COMPLETION: This aerial view of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice 80-John Wallace Unit shows just how near the project is to completion. The T-shaped buildings are the housing units and will house

Abateements equal drop in state funds No more abateements from CISD

The next business that seeks a tax abatement in Colorado City will have one less government entity to persuade because as of Monday night - the Colorado Independent School District officially got out of the tax abatement business!

After granting a 10-year, 100% tax abatement to McCormick Marketing for a proposed $750,000 facility here, the district learned that its actions will cost the district in state funds close to $4 000 yearly.

A couple of sentences in the infamous Senate Bill 7 allows the district to grant abatements but the state will still base its funding to the district on the total tax base and the McCormick facility would be counted - thus less state funds funnelled back to the district.

"I apologize to the board and the public - I recommended the abatement to the board," said Supt. Don Nimmo. "I felt we were doing the best thing for the district and the community in the long run."

Nimmo added that prior to May 31, 1993, - and Senate Bill 7 - the board's action would have had no effect on state funding.

Mike Dennis, who has presented his company's abatement request and received okays from the school district, commissioners' court, Mitchell County Hospital District and the City Council, said Monday that "it was never our intent to become a burden upon any board."

"We are embarrassed about this as we can be - we have received nothing but helpful input from all the governing bodies."

Dennis added that "it is our desire to see this school district receive all the money they have coming to them."

Nimmo stated that "legally, they have us. But they (McCormick Marketing) have indicated that somehow they will make up what the state holds out."

Nimmo added that he would probably know by Wednesday the exact loss and that he and Dennis would be meeting to figure out how to offset it.

No decision from city yet Parks seeks abatement

The city council took no action Tuesday night on a tax rebate request from Bob Parks representing Parks Fuels, Inc., of Big Spring on a convenience store facility currently under construction on the service road on the north side of I-20 and Highway 208.

Parks stated the facility's cost at around $280,00 - not including approximately $50,000 to get the land ready for construction which included removing the old fuel storage tanks - and expected to employ six to eight full-time employees.

In answering a question from councilman Walt Staats on why he (Parks) waited so long to ask for the abatement, Parks replied that the abatement was not a deciding factor in us building the store.

Parks added "if the abatement is available, then we would like to take advantage of it."

Bob Reilly, noting the abatement request had been approved by the abatement screening committee in the form of 100% for 5 years, made a motion to approve the request. Brian Bassham seconded the motion but it was followed by an amendment by Staats to table the request until certain guidelines could be drawn up by the council.

The request to table the motion

Interviews conducted

The city council began interviewing candidates for City Manager Monday night and they have additional interviews scheduled for April 14, 18, 19, 21, 25 and 26. All these meetings will start at 6 p.m.

On the original short list of sixteen candidates contacted last week, thirteen indicated they were still interested in the position.

GOING UP IN A HURRY: This standpipe - which will eventually reach 120' in height - is reaching that elevation in a hurry. The tank will hold over 470,000 gallons and will serve primarily the Texas Department of Criminal Justice facilities although it is looped into the city's water system.

St. Ann's Family and Community Education Club joins other F.C.E.'s

St. Ann's Family and Community Education Club became Mitchell County's fifth F.C.E. Club in February of this year. The club was formed through the joint efforts of the Mitchell County Home Economics Expansion Task Force and the Mitchell County F.C.E. Council.

St. Ann's is welcomed by Buford, Fairview, Looney and North Loraine F.C.E. clubs. The club joins an F.C.E. Council representing 68 years of F.C.E.

work. Buford and Fairview Clubs were established in 1926, with Looney following soon after and finally the "youngest" club, North Loraine, was founded in 1946.

Sister Guadalupe Rodriguez serves St. Ann's as president and attended the District 2 F.C.E. Spring Meeting in Crosbyton on April 7. Sister has also agreed to train as a Master Clothing Volunteer for Mitchell County. The members of St. Ann's look forward to a productive year.

was voted for by Staats, Gary Redwine and Jim Baum while Bassham and Reily voted against it. Baum told Parks that he felt the council would give him some kind of abatement but "we feel we have to have a formula to work on."

The council had previously given McCormick Marketing a 10-year, 100% percent abatement for a $750,000 facility directly across the Interstate.

The council approved the writing off of some $35,539 in bad debts as a result of non-payment of water bills. This figure had been accumulating since January 1, 1989. The council asked City Secretary/Interim City Manager Glenna Garrett if the city had safeguards in place to prevent anyone of the list from getting water service without first paying the old debts and she replied that they did.

There was also a discussion on allowing a water bill to get only two months behind before it will be disconnected.

City National Bank was approved as the depository for the city as they outbid First National Bank by .01 percent on interest rates. CNB is the present depository for the city.

Weaver reports on food service

Ken Weaver, ARA food service director, gave the Colorado ISD trustees a year-to-date look at the department Monday night and figures indicate that while the program is still operating at a loss - it is $10,000 less than the same time last year.

The amount subsidized by the school system in 1993 was $47,819 while this years' figures stand at $37,719 - counting state funds yet to be received.

He also noted that the total cost of putting a meal on a table in September was $1.68 but had dropped to $1.39 by the end of February.

Clean-up week was tabbed for the first week in May and it will coincide with new landfill hours. James Rich recommended to the council that the landfill be open six days per week with the hours being 9 to 5 on weekdays and from 9 to 3 p.m. on Saturday. During cleanup week, which will be a joint effort with the Chamber of Commerce, it was noted that the city will not pick up items from alleys as in the past but will not charge landfill fees during the week.

In other action, the council considered these items:

- A request to name a softball field in memory of Sonja Lawson will be referred to the Parks Board for their consideration before opening ceremonies for the U.G.S.A. softball league in early May.

- Approved bids from Martin Construction for roofing the residence and the chlorine building at the water treatment plant.

- Voted to purchase a blade machine that will be used to smooth alleys for $2800.

- Approved a car allowance for Buz Rich in the amount of $300 for additional work he is doing for the city. His present contract called for $1000 per month with no car allowance.

Four Big Spring residents injured in two accidents

Four Big Spring residents were injured in two separate accidents near Lake Colorado City Saturday night according to investigating Department of Public Safety Trooper, Robert Maldonado.

Christi Devore drove a 1981 Jeep into the water on the west side of the lake just off Cherry Creek bridge on F.M. 2838 around 9:45 p.m. traveling north.

Shortly thereafter, three men were injured on the east side of the lake as their vehicle failed to negotiate a curve near Cooper's Cove.

The driver of this vehicle, Ronnie Miller, was issued a citation for operating a vehicle at an unsafe speed and may face other charges said Maldonado. The most seriously injured man, Jeffrey Roberts, was transferred to an Abilene hospital.

Maldonado said the occupants of both vehicles knew each other and the jeep was apparently trying to catch the other vehicle when the accidents occurred. He also said that none of the parties were wearing seat belts and alcohol was a factor in both accidents.

PCCA announces progress payment

Plains Cotton Cooperative Association (PCCA), a farmer-owned cotton marketing cooperative serving 26,000 members in Texas and Oklahoma, has announced a progress payment on the 1993 West Texas/Oklahoma marketing pool totaling approximately $15 million. Checks to individual pool members were distributed April 5.

The progress payment follows a cash distribution in March to marketing pool members totaling $8.8 million in premiums for strength on the 1993-crop pool, and $1 million for participation in the pool's Timely Delivery Program. An additional progress payment on the 1993 pool is anticipated in June, along with a patronage dividend after the close of the cooperative's fiscal year on June 30.

The sign-in period for PCCA's 1994 West Texas/Oklahoma marketing pool is the month of April. Cotton producers seeking more information about participating in PCCA's marketing programs should contact a cooperative gin in their area or PCCA headquarters in Lubbock.

Public Notice

On February 22, 1994, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company ("Southwestern Bell" or "Company") filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("Commission") to restructure the Company's Local Transport and Directory Transport categories of its Switched Access Service. This matter has been assigned to Docket No. 12784. The tariff sheets in Southwestern Bell's application, if approved, will bring the Company's intrastate Access Service Tariff into structural parity with the Company's interstate Tariff No. 73 for Local Transport. Southwestern Bell's companion interstate tariff became effective on January 1, 1994.

The transport rate elements provide for the transmission facilities between the customer's premises and the end office switch(es) where the customer's traffic is switched to originate or terminate the customer's communications.

Southwestern Bell proposes to implement the revised tariffs on a revenue neutral basis. Although the proposed tariff changes will affect all customers subscribing to Switched Access Service, the Local Transport and Directory Transport categories of Southwestern Bell's Switched Access Service is primarily for interexchange carriers. If approved, this application will result in an increase in Southwestern Bell's revenues of approximately $1682.00 during the first year. Southwestern Bell proposes that the changes be effective on December 1, 1994.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 for text telephone. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is May 6, 1994.

OUTDOORS

BY RANDY BULLARD

Ron Baxter, cousin and longtime fishing buddy, recently sent me this amusing account of his most recent fishing trip.

The Rio Grande River, as it flows between sheer cliffs and past the Old West town of Langtry, is a favorite fishing spot for those who prefer a truly remote setting. For several years, my dad and I, along with a brother-in-law, have made this three-day trip an annual event. We usually spend the entire time without encountering another fishing party.

Recently, the time came for our excursion and all the preparations were made. At the last minute, however, my brother-in-law had to cancel. Even though it meant that we'd be traveling alone into remote country, Dad and I never thought twice. We knew the risks of taking only one boat, but the thought of all those catfish just waiting for us to drop a line outweighed the concern.

By early Friday afternoon, we had made the 45-minute upriver run, set up camp, gathered firewood, rigged and set two trotlines and caught several nice channel cat on jugs. Friday evening became more interesting as several thunderstorms moved through the area. Just before each storm struck, we would pull anchor and run for shelter, noting each time that as the storm approached and increased in ferocity, so the biting ferocity of the fish also increased. It was with this in mind that we finally returned to camp well after sunset with high expectations for the coming day's fishing.

Saturday morning found us hustling through camp, slurping coffee and hurrying to get started. Our immediate plan was to check the two trotlines and then return to camp for breakfast. We would be gone about thirty minutes.

The first thunder rumbled in the distance as Dad climbed into the boat and took his place near the 65-horse Johnson outboard. I released the tie-rope from its willow and began to shove the boat into the water. Suddenly, a four-foot-long black snake slithered directly between my feet. I crow-hopped like the best cowpony and catapulted backwards.

In my fear, I shoved the boat well out into the swift-flowing stream. As I came to my senses, I realized that the keys were in my pocket, not in the craft. Worse still, I knew that my dad, who is an avid bank fisherman, had never driven a motorboat. I quickly tossed the keys to him across an ever-widening ten-foot gap.

"What now?" Dad asked. "Now, you get a long-distance lesson on boating," I replied. The situation seemed under control, but in my concern, I later realized that it never occurred to me to advise him to drop the anchor. The next few steps went well; kill switch located and cleared, ignition found, keys inserted, gas line squeeze-bulb gently massaged. "Okay, try to start her up," I yelled across the 50-yard gap. Dad complied, and the old Johnson fired up and idled perfectly. "She's a little touchy on the throttle," I coached, "so give it to her slow and easy." I had yelled these last instructions to him as the boat was now well out into the current and moving rapidly downstream. Dad slowly throttled the engine, but just as I had feared, it died. "Try it again," I echoed over the 75-yard distance, "like I said, she's a little touchy at times." He calmly restarted the engine but again, under throttle, it died. I yelled to Dad that I'd had this problem before, but that the motor had always responded after two or three tries. He grumbled something about kick-starting the #@% thing.

After the fifth try, even though we were now separated by some 500 yards, I could hear the old man losing patience. Our camp was at the base of one of the cliffs and I could not follow along bank-side and shout directions. Boat and captive were drifting, free-style, back to Del Rio.

Suddenly, many thoughts converged on me at once. Why hadn't I taught him to drive the boat earlier? When startled by the snake, why had I jumped away from the boat instead of into it? Then it occurred to me that Dad, who was now about 700 yards away, had no food or clean water with him, no flashlight and no raincoat. There were two paddles in the boat, but I knew he'd not use them to row to shore. Instead, he'd continue cranking that old engine and trying the throttle until he was either successful or the battery went dead. I was safely stuck in camp, sheltered from the threatening storms and with enough food to last a week. On the other hand, Dad, who was now disappearing around the first bend almost a mile away, was adrift in one of Texas' wilder rivers. Lightning flashed in the distance. The wind picked up and my knees weakened. I prayed, "Dear Lord, please protect that old codger."

I am always moved by how thick the silence is on this stretch of the Rio Grande. With civilization so many miles away, a man's ears ring in the quiet. Sounds travel into camp from many miles away. Doves called from their mesquite thrones and fish rippled the water's surface. I found myself straining to hear the far-off grumble of that old Johnson. It was then I realized that Dad had restarted the engine and was allowing it to idle as he drifted. "Good man," I whispered, "keep that battery charged." The grumbling ceased abruptly. I slowly paced through camp, hoping to dream up a solution to this frustrating turn of events.

Minutes seemed like hours. Thirty minutes passed. Then finally, resounding out of the silence, I heard that beautiful old Johnson screaming its way upstream. I jumped and danced, howling like a coyote. Even from afar, I could see Dad braced against the wind and the lightning. But he was coming on strong and he was smiling! As he pulled into camp, I yelled out, "How can you be smiling, old man, after a deal like that?" "Ah, heck," he laughed, "that was nothin'. Besides, you know that first trot-line we set about a mile and a half back down river?"

Well, as I drifted that way, I worked the boat over to the bank, checked the line, and look here, a nice fat yellow cat. I'll bet he goes fifteen pounds. With a catch like that, I knew I'd make it back. Something to brag about.

"You beat all," I laughed. "Maybe, but I'll tell you something," he stated seriously, "when we get back home, we're gonna tune up that motor."

And tune it we did. Not only that, we now carry on hand, at all times, a waterproof flashlight, rain slickers, a small stash of food and a sealed container of clean water. Old Mother Nature is not always so forgiving, so these remain in the boat, just in case. We also make sure each person is a competent pilot. Finally, we've agreed to go fishing in a more civilized location if only one boat is available. Most importantly, this incident has made us more cautious and more responsible as sportsmen.

Who saved the mural that used to be in the Baker Hotel? That painting is now in the Colorado City Civic Center and was done by an artist named Jack White. The work was commissioned by Ed L. Baker, one-time owner of the Baker Hotel. In November of 1959 the mural was placed in the Baker Club at the hotel. In 1975 White was officially named by the Texas Legislature the State Artist of the Year.

When the Baker Hotel closed in the late 1960's, the painting was moved to the civic center. White's mural depicts the history of Colorado City with such recreations as Indians, buffalos, cowboys, cattle, the St. James Hotel, cotton, the Col Tex Refinery and the Baker Hotel.

Undoubtedly, if the 128-square-foot mural had been allowed to stay in the abandoned hotel, it would have been destroyed by vandals. Today's story identifies the man who saved Jack White's masterpiece.

The Baker, which had struggled financially for a number of years, was forced to close its doors in 1968. At the time, Sefton Pickens was manager of the local chamber of commerce. Now a resident of Nocona, Texas, Pickens told us he remembered how the mural came to be saved.

"Yes sir, I sure do. There were two or three holes in the mural and they [the Baker management] said it was going to be damaged and they would like to give or loan it to the civic center."

Pickens says he remembers Porter Richardson "filled up the holes that were in it." Richardson says that he and John Tom Merritt, as well as several other men, removed the mural from the Baker Club. "It was on the east wall and the north wall," Richardson recalled. "It was split in the middle at the corner. It's made out of four sheets of 4 by 8 upon board."

Richardson said when the Baker closed, vandals frequently entered the building and caused damage. It was he and Merritt who put the frame around it which is still used today.

Getting back to Pickens, he was personally contacted by a representative from the Baker who offered the mural to the civic center. "I'll tell you why they contacted us," Pickens explained. "This fella from Houston said, 'Now, I don't believe the company would ever want it back,' but he said, 'It's going to be ruined over here [at the Baker] and you're perfectly welcome to move it over there [to the civic center].'"

Pickens also remembers "this fella from Houston" later gave the Baker's dishes to the civic center. "They said if we could use the dishes and cookware we were perfectly welcome to take them," the former chamber manager told us.

"He said, 'Now, we may have to come back to you and get them,' but he said, 'You just take your time and move them over there because they're going to get stolen or broken.'"

Margaret Oyler was manager of the civic center at the time and she confirms Pickens' statements. "That's right," she told us. "I remember moving the dishes and all that stuff. I'll tell you who helped me get them, Lee Jones." Mrs. Oyler says Jones even brought a little wagon to haul the dishes in.

"He stood right there at the back door of the civic center while I moved that stuff!"

She says Pickens went with her over to the dark kitchen of the Baker Hotel. "Everything was turned off; lights, water, gas, everything. We crawled around in that dirt and I picked out the dishes I wanted. And they're still in use right down at that civic center!"

Mrs. Oyler said the civic center had some mighty fancy plates to serve meals on, some of which even had a "B" painted on them for Baker.

So, now that we know how the mural got to the civic center (and the dishes to the kitchen), who gets credit for saving the Jack White mural?

How about Junior Sadler, who was city manager at the time. "I asked Junior," Pickens told us, "if we could put it [the mural] in there because I had no authority to do it without permission from the city manager."

"We asked Junior what he remembers about saving the mural. 'I'm sorry, I just don't remember it,' he replied."

When we told Pickens that Sadler didn't recall details of the mural being moved, he laughed. "Well, he should!"

Back to Margaret Oyler. Are you sure it was Junior who saved the mural? "It was Junior," she said, rather emphatically.

One last chance, Junior, the mural. Remember? "Just doesn't ring a bell," he said.

So there you have it. The story of a mural, painted by a one-time state artist of Texas, rescued from an abandoned hotel, now proudly displayed in our civic center. City Manager Junior Sadler approved the transfer.

And he doesn't even remember it!

Academy Day event set for San Angelo

Congressman Charles W. Stenholm announced last week that he will co-sponsor an "Academy Day" event in San Angelo on Sunday, April 24, 1994 along with U.S. Representative Lamar Smith.

The Academy Day program will include a brief introduction of the Congressional staffers and academy representatives who will work with the students during the nomination process, a discussion of procedures to obtain a nomination, videotapes of life at each academy and comments by academy representatives. There will also be refreshments and an opportunity for students and parents to have one-on-one discussions with all of those involved in the program.

The event will be held at the Houston Harte University Center Ballroom at Angelo State University from 2 to 4 p.m.

The U.S. academies offer young people an excellent education while also developing skills in leadership and self-discipline. It is a one-of-a-kind opportunity to earn a bachelor's degree and earn a salary for doing so. An education at an academy also guarantees a career upon graduation as an officer in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Cotton Leadership Applications need to be in

Members of the U.S. cotton industry between the ages of 25 and 40 who would like to be considered for selection to the 1994-95 Cotton Leadership Program must turn in an application to The Cotton Foundation by July 1.

Application forms must be sent to Janice McRae, The Cotton Foundation, Box 12284, Memphis, TN 38182. Forms can be obtained from Ms. McRae by calling (901) 274-9030.

The Foundation program, which has trained 110 producers, ginners, merchants, warehousemen and other industry members since 1983, is funded by a grant from DuPont Agricultural Products.

Each August, an industrywide selection committee chooses 10 members of the U.S. cotton industry to participate in the program. Four producers, one from each major cotton-producing region in the United States, are selected, along with one member from each of the other six industry segments. Participants receive 30 days of training in six week-long sessions, beginning with the National Cotton Council's fall board of directors meeting in September in Memphis.
