NationsBank to buy Barnett Banks

$14.6 billion deal to create nation's 3rd-largest bank in record takeover

■ Midland NationsBank president says merger won't impact local operations.

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — NationsBank agreed to buy Florida's Barnett Banks for $14.6 billion worth of stock on Friday to create the nation's third-biggest bank in the industry's largest takeover.

The acquisition of Florida's largest bank makes NationsBank an even stronger powerhouse in the Southeast — combined with Barnett, its Florida operations alone would rank as the country's 10th biggest bank.

The merger will have no impact on Midland's NationsBank locations, according to Larry Holden, president of NationsBank Midland.

"The fact we will be No. 1 in Florida and are already No. 1 in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma will enable us to continue developing the new products our customers demand in a rapidly changing industry. Customer service remains our highest priority," he said.

"This merger vaults us to a commanding position in the best growth markets in the United States," said Hugh L. McColl Jr., chief executive of Charlotte, N.C.,-based NationsBank.

News of the deal sent Barnett's stock up nearly 25 percent on the New York Stock Exchange. NationsBank stock fell moderately, making the all-stock deal worth just more than $70.80 per share to Barnett stockholders.

The biggest previous banking deal was Wells Fargo & Co.'s $14.2 billion purchase of First Interstate Bancorp. After the deal, NationsBank would rank behind Chase Manhattan and Citicorp, replacing BankAmerica as the No. 3 banking company in the country.

The deal came as a surprise to Florida officials, who immediately opened an investigation to make sure there weren't any anti-trust violations. The attorney general's office said NationsBank and Barnett executives should receive subpoenas by Tuesday for all documents related to the takeover.

"This combination creates a banking behemoth," said Pete Antonacci, deputy attorney general. "In some com-

Algeria massacre

ALGIERS, Algeria — Hooded men armed with axes descended on an isolated farm village before dawn Friday, slitting the throats of sleepy residents or decapitating them. Villagers and hospital workers said more than 300 people were slain. The attack appeared to be the worst carnage since Algeria's Islamic insurgency began five years ago, although it was not clear who carried it out.

AUSTIN — A new state law requiring minors to get parental consent before obtaining state-paid birth control and other prescription drugs was declared unconstitutional Friday. State District Judge F. PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Turning heads around Midland

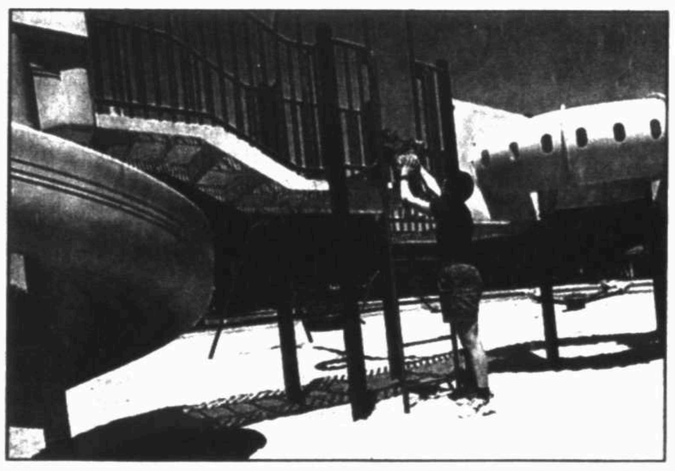

City parks see major facelifts all over Midland

Amid the many efforts by city officials to attract outside business interests by diversifying the local economy, revitalizing the loop and downtown areas and proposing an economic development sales tax, Midland's city parks also are undergoing radical overhauls in hopes of providing local neighborhoods and existing residents with better facilities.

A long-range master plan has provided for a major community park to either be created or further developed in four different geographical quadrants of the city, but it is perhaps the work being done on the smaller neighborhood parks that has turned more heads of late.

Most noticeable among those likely would be Grafa Park. Located in the high traffic area along Midkiff Road between Golf Course and Neely Avenue, Grafa is one of several examples of the cooperative effort to redevelop neighborhood parks between the city's parks department and neighborhood steering committees.

Washington and Sparks parks join Grafa as facilities currently under redevelopment. Already completed are Hill, Trinity, Cowden, Ida Jo Moore and

Neighborhoods take control of their park renovations

So, your neighborhood park needs renovating and you're wondering how to go about getting things done. It could be as easy as getting together a few concerned neighbors, raising a few thousand dollars and approaching the city with your concerns.

Julie Stevens, with the help of husband, Randy, headed up a steering committee comprised of several neighbors in what is basically the Fannin Elementary School district. First and foremost, Ms. Stevens said, is to generate neighborhood interest and raise funds.

"We contacted (former Director of Community Services) George Logan and expressed an interest in renovating the park, and he said the city was 100 per

MISD students score above average on SAT

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

The results of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) are in, and MISD administrators are pleased with the results, as Midland students continue to score above state and national averages.

"I am really proud to stand here and talk to you about this," Joe Cummins, executive director, administrative services, evaluation and planning for MISD said at a Friday press conference.

MISD students gained six points on the verbal skills portion of the test, going from 513 in 1996 to 519 in 1997.

Statewide, Texas seniors scored an average of 494 on the verbal portion of the SAT, a one-point decline from the last year's score of 495. A perfect score is 800.

The national average for verbal scores remained the same at 505.

MISD students scored an average of 522 on the math portion of the SAT, an eight-point improvement over the 1995-1996 school year. The district math scores are well above the state average 501, and the national average of 511. A perfect score on the math portion of the test is 800.

Over the past five years, Midland Independent School District math scores have improved by 14 points, while state scores have managed only a three-point increase.

"Students who score well (on the SAT) are in a very rigorous public school program," he added. "Teachers have continued to press for students to take higher level math and honors English."

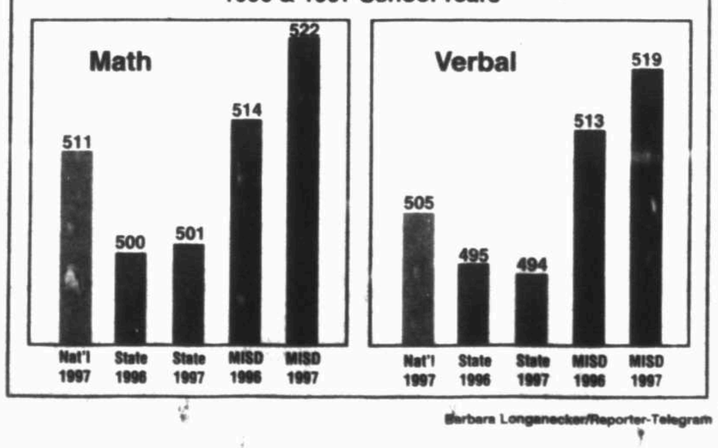

"The two high schools have a great deal of pride in these scores," Cummins said.

He said that unlike the TAAS test, the SAT

CITY: Parks all over Midland seeing improvements

(From 1A)

Fasken. Next year will bring improvements to Wadley-Barron, Ulmer, Pfluff, Hidalgo, Garrett-Brown and Taylor.

Chuck Swallow, director of Community Services, said without the help of local citizens, the improvements would not be possible.

"We have been very lucky and very fortunate to have a lot of active citizen participation, as far as the actual planning of the park, future use of the park and fund-raising," he said. "People will go out in the neighborhoods and fund-raise and bring money to the park. And we (at the city) end up matching the funds with those from the neighborhoods."

Grafa Park's upgrades, expected to be completed at the end of September, include a walking track, which itself costs an estimated $10,000-$15,000 and a fence around the park's perimeter.

THE POOL at Washington Park has been rebuilt and a walking track, playground improvements and security lighting will be added both to Washington and Sparks.

At Washington, "We've gone to more of a larger size pool that will create bigger crowds vs. the neighborhood pool concept," Swallow said. "The new pool is not what people think of in terms of a typical swimming pool from the '50s era. We do have lap swimming and a diving well and a big water slide. But it's a zero depth pool where people are able to walk into the water like they would at a beach."

Swallow said one of the most popular additions to the neighborhood parks are the walkways, necessitated by the phenomenon of fitness walking.

"It really changes the use of the park," Swallow said of the tracks. "Walking has really been pushed very hard by the medical profession and finding enough places for people to walk" is one of the reasons for the neighborhood redevelopments.

"The city was so enthusiastic about renovating the parks," said Julie Stevens, who headed up the effort to redevelop Fasken Park, located on Humble, just northwest of Garfield Street and Golf Course Road. A new playground apparatus, walking track and landscaping were completed at Fasken in the early '90s.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Rodrigo Ramirez cemented bricks in place Wednesday afternoon as he and other G & O Fence employees finish work on the new fence that will surround Grafa Park.

SWALLOW SAID the city's master plan regarding parks was completed about a year ago after sitting dormant for many years.

"Midland had a master plan originally done back in the 1970s," Swallow said. "It was approximately 20 years old and somewhat outdated. Realistically, a city ought to update its plan on park areas every five years, and we're trying to get on that kind of schedule.

"The emphasis of the master plan, short and sweet, is that we're working to get four community-size parks with 50 acres-plus in each quadrant of the city and focus on the redevelopment of the older park system."

On the community park level, C.J. Butler Park, representing the northwest quadrant, is expected to see completion in late summer of 1998; Windlands, in the northeast quadrant, is fully functional with a walking track, and houses one of the city's largest soccer/Little League complexes, and Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park, in the southeast part of town, features both athletic facilities and land for passive use such as picnic areas and walking paths.

Swallow said the city just completed the purchase of land for a community park in the southwest sector. Located on the northeast corner of the intersection of Loop 250 and Business 20, the park will feature 116 acres of park land and street improvements.

"Parks are an integral part of raising the quality of life in Midland," said Mayor Bobby Burns. "We want to take care of the older parks as much as we want to add new ones and that's what we're doing. Sometimes, just adding sidewalks and fences makes people use the parks more than before, and improving our neighborhood parks enhances the quality of life in the neighborhoods."

Additional park improvements planned include:

WADLEY-BARRON Park, or "the duck pond" as it is often referred to, will see many improvements in 1998, including re-landscaping, reworking the drainage system, and providing for a hardscape edge around the pond's edge to prevent further erosion. Security lighting will be added, as will a bike track connecting Wadley-Barron to downtown to DeZavala Elementary School; the south end of the park also will be re-contoured and drainage flumes reworked.

In what will no doubt be viewed as a highly popular move, especially for those parents who have younger children playing soccer or youth baseball, an additional entrance/exit into John P Butler Park, on Bluebird Lane, is expected to be completed by April 1998. The new outlet will connect Bluebird with the south parking lot via the east side of the facility. Additional parking also will be made available with the addition.

Garrett-Brown Park will have playground equipment and a passive use area for picnics and gatherings, while Taylor Park will receive improvements to the walkway.

cent behind the idea, but that it would be a smoother process if the neighborhood would show its support by raising some of the money."

The group's effort bordered on city budget time, limiting the time span the Fasken neighbors had to raise money for the efforts. Still, neighbors pitched in about $5,000 in a month's time after fund-raising letters were sent to everyone in the Fasken Park area.

"I never did put a pencil to it, but I'm guessing it would be 80-85 percent of the people we sent letters to sent in a donation," Ms. Stevens said.

A committee of six was formed and the letters were followed up on; then the group approached the parks department and the City Council.

"I made a presentation (to the parks department) and told them what we'd like to do there," Ms. Stevens said. "I presented the money we had raised and the city was very open to our input We had a major role in the planning of the park."

'I presented the money we had raised and the city was very open to our input.'

— Julie Stevens, head of steering committee for Fasken Park

Ms. Stevens said the next step was meeting with a playground designer, expressing to him their vision. From that plan, the current Fasken facility was conceived.

Although the group ran short of funds and was unable to add aesthetic enhancements such as hills, what exists now is a vast improvement.

Ms. Stevens said first, "create a committee, establish and prioritize what you want to see at the park, then, contact the parks department. The city was so enthusiastic about renovating the parks. They didn't have the manpower to initiate it itself. And frankly it was a relief to them (that our committee formed)."

Becky Ferguson headed up the neighborhood steering committee overseeing the renovations at Hill Park. After seeing the success at Fasken Park, and realizing Hill Park was still equipped with the playground many of them played on when they grew up, committee members sprung into quick action.

"I did not find the process to be difficult at all," Ms. Ferguson said. "The parks department was extremely responsive to our approach when we told them we wanted to make improvements to our park."

Chuck Swallow, director of Community Services with the city, encourages other neighborhoods to take action as well.

"Anytime someone wants to do a project like this, if they'll contact us, we'll have an idea what they want to do and take it before the parks and recreation commission," Swallow said. "Then we'll take it to the City Council, and the only reason it has to go before the council is to get approval for a neighborhood to raise money on behalf of the city. Then, we start the planning and design. The neighborhood committee will then raise the money, bring it back to the city and schedule the project."

Ms. Ferguson said the Hill Park renovations have helped improve the quality of life for not only children but for all age groups of the community.

"I think it's a wonderful example of how the private sector and the public sector can work together to achieve something worthwhile for the community," Ms. Ferguson said. "The most exciting thing to me has been to see how much our renovation changed the activity at the park. You rarely pass by without seeing women strolling their babies, older people walking, children playing on the playground equipment, or kids rollerblading around the park."

SAT: Midland students score above national, state average

(From 1A)

"Is more than an emphasis on basics."

The number of students taking the test also is on the rise, both at the district and state levels.

Cummins reported that 518 MISD students chose to take the SAT test during the 1996-1997 school year, as compared to 506 the previous year.

At the campus level, 217 of 464 Midland High School seniors took the test. At Lee High School, 301 of 532 seniors took the SAT test.

"Fifty-two percent of high school seniors have taken either the SAT or the ACT," Cummins said. In Texas, 48 percent of seniors took the SAT.

The other widely used college entrance exam is the American College Test (ACT).

He said the SAT is the more popular of the college entrance exams. "I would estimate 60 to 70 percent of the students here use the SAT."

Cummins was particularly proud to point to the scores of the MISD students who are ranked in the top 10 percent of their class. "The good news is really looking at the top 10 percent," he said.

Of that select group of students, the average verbal score in MISD was 609 compared with a state average of 571 for the same group.

Math scores for students in the top 10 percent of their class were equally impressive. MISD students in the top of their class scored an average of 623, vs. a score of 588 for the same group statewide.

Cummins said that many of the students in the top 10 percent of their high school classes had completed most of their freshman year in college, either through concurrent enrollment or through advanced placement.

Cummins said SAT scores were important to businesses and groups that evaluate and rank the quality of life in various communities. "The SAT is one of the indicators they ask for," he said.

"I believe the schools have been doing a good job," Cummins said, reflecting on the SAT scores. He characterized the students who took the SAT as "very goal-oriented."

He said the average student takes the SAT "once or twice" between their sophomore year and the fall of their senior year. "Any later than that and college entrance is delayed," Cummins said.

The SAT test is offered to students every quarter at Midland College, Odessa College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"As educators, the success of our students is where we get part of our grade," Cummins said. "This is a good grade in our opinion."

munities, that simply may not be acceptable from a competition point of view. We want to make sure there isn't any depositor road kill out there."

Banks have been buying each other in recent years in a flurry of deals aimed at making them better competitors with brokerages and insurance companies.

"This would allow NationsBank to come in and dominate in Florida," said Geoffrey Simon, an analyst with Robert W. Baird.

Bank mergers typically mean a loss of jobs and branch closings. McColl said it was too soon to say whether or how many employees or branches may be affected, but the company said it expects to realize $915 million in annual savings from the deal by 1999.

The merger, which faces government review, is expected to be completed early next year, the companies said.

Speculation that Barnett was shopping itself around lifted the company's stock Thursday in trading that was more than triple its average volume. On Friday, Barnett rose $13.06 per share to $67.87 1/2. NationsBank fell $3.69 to $59.62 1/2 on the NYSE.

Jacksonville, Fla.-based Barnett has maintained for years it wanted to remain independent. Its strength in Florida has made it an attractive merger candidate for years.

"It's the number one bank in the fastest-growing market in the country, so we find that extremely appealing. It will allow us to grow our bank significantly," NationsBank spokesman Scredon said.

Barnett, with $44 billion in assets, has more than 600 branches in Florida and south Georgia, and about 22,000 employees. The company offers consumer lending in 41 states, though the bulk of its business is in Florida.

It controls about 20 percent of deposits in Florida followed by First Union Corp. of Charlotte, N.C., with 17 percent, NationsBank with 12 percent and SunTrust Banks of Atlanta with 10 percent.

NationsBank operates 2,600 branches in 16 states — mostly in the Southeast and Midwest — and the District of Columbia and has assets of $240 billion. It has 80,000 employees, including 8,000 in Florida.

Hundreds of villagers slaughtered in Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Hooded men armed with axes descended on an isolated farm village before dawn Friday, slitting the throats of sleepy residents or decapitating them. Villagers and hospital workers said more than 300 people were slain.

The attack appeared to be the worst carnage since Algeria's Islamic insurgency began five years ago, although it was not clear who carried it out.

Witnesses said severed heads lay on the doorsteps of Rais, 15 miles south of the capital. Its streets were full of corpses and 20 young women were abducted.

"They took their time to cut throats and to burn the bodies," a 35-year-old man who would only give his first name, Amar, said in a telephone interview.

Algeria's military government has insisted it has the uprising under control. President Liamine Zeroual claimed only a week ago that "terrorism is living its final hours."

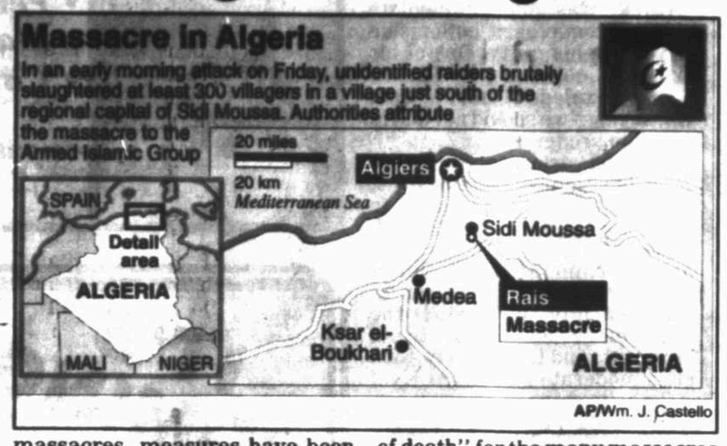

The militants want to overthrow the government and install one based on their interpretation of Koranic law. That would mean requiring women to cover their heads, banning alcohol and instituting compulsory religious education, among other things.

Such a system is anathema to many secular Algerians, who subscribe to Western ways learned during 130 years of French colonialism that ended in 1962 after a bloody, eight-year rebellion.

The government, which rarely comments on specific attacks and often seeks to minimize the death toll, gave an official count of 98 killed and 120 wounded. But hospital workers and villagers, who spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisals, said the death toll surpassed 300.

The government said it was taking measures to thwart the violence, but gave no specifics.

"In the wake of the repeated massacres, measures have been taken to protect residents of isolated regions," it said on official radio.

About 1,500 people have been killed in attacks attributed to Islamic insurgents since early June, when the military-backed government swept Algeria's first-ever multiparty elections with promises to crush the bloody insurgency.

Muslim militants have been trying to overthrow the government since the army canceled the last parliamentary vote in 1992, when it appeared the now-banned Islamic Salvation Front — a coalition of religious parties — would win. The insurgency has left more than 60,000 people dead.

Besides frequent massacres, there have been bombings. On Thursday, bombs in the port city of Oran and in Algiers took 18 lives.

Though it is never clear precisely why specific villages are targeted, the militants often want to take revenge on residents who have joined government-armed self-defense groups.

Rais is in the Sidi Moussa region, where villagers are poor and subsist mainly on tomato and potato farming. It is in the heart of what Algerians call the "triangle of death" for the many massacres that have occurred.

The area sits at the base of mountains that are home to strongholds of the Armed Islamic Group — the most violent of Algeria's armed Islamic factions.

The repeated massacres have never been claimed, but authorities have generally attributed them to the Armed Islamic Group. The attacks usually target vulnerable areas such as isolated farms and villages.

Residents in Rais said the raiders arrived in trucks and cars at 1 a.m. Friday. They stayed until 6 a.m., entering homes to wake victims and slit their throats. Many were decapitated.

Before leaving, the attackers burned many of the bodies. They also destroyed some homes with explosives after looting them of food, clothes, money and jewelry.

Journalists arriving before the village was closed off by government troops saw at least 100 bodies lying in the streets — some badly burned. In one kitchen, the table was overturned and the floor was soaked with blood.

Villagers said bodies in better condition were cleared away by rescuers and taken to hospital morgues, so they could be refrigerated and relatives could claim them. The badly mutilated bodies were set aside, under covers, in case people wanted to try to identify them.

Rais used to have about 1,000 inhabitants, but violence has driven half of them out in the past two years. After the latest massacre, none of the 200 villagers left are expected to stay.

"Where are we going to go now?" one man asked.

British invite Sinn Fein to negotiate; Protestants balk

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain invited the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party to join negotiations on Northern Ireland's future on Friday, deeply upsetting many Protestants, who balk at direct talks.

Ruling that the Irish Republican Army had not breached its 6-week-old cease-fire, Northern Ireland Secretary Mo Mowlam urged all sides to "leave the bitter past behind" and face each other at the same table Sept. 15, six days after the discussions resume.

"We've got to understand that past ... and learn lessons from it. But my goodness, we don't have to live in it," Mowlam said. She spoke at Stormont, Britain's administrative center, where talks among nine parties began in June 1996 without Sinn Fein — and have not progressed.

"This is the time for people to represent their communities and try and find a way forward, for the betterment of everybody," she said.

Mowlam's move had been anticipated since June, when she promised Sinn Fein it could join the talks eight weeks after the IRA stopped its campaign against British rule. But it doesn't mean Sinn Fein will sit down next month with leaders of Northern Ireland's pro-British Protestant majority.

Two pro-British parties said Friday they would boycott the process, which they consider driven by the need to give IRA supporters concessions and weaken Northern Ireland's union with Britain.

The Ulster Unionists, the largest pro-British party, indicated they would remain in the talks — but keep them fixed on the issue of disarming the IRA. That demand blocked progress during the IRA's previous 17-month truce, which ended in February 1996.

Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble said those who consider Friday's move historic "will end up looking very foolish indeed."

"There is no reason to believe that there is a genuine ending of violence for good by Sinn Fein-IRA. And when their quite unreasonable demands are not met by the government, they will return to violence," he predicted.

Trimble said the talks couldn't progress to a multi-party meeting involving Sinn Fein on Sept. 15 — as Mowlam insisted — until the government formally assured him that the IRA would have to start disarming in the course of the talks.

"There cannot be any move off that issue," Trimble said.

Trimble was under immediate pressure from others, both inside and outside his party. One of his lawmaker colleagues, William Thompson, ruled out meeting Sinn Fein, saying "we should not talk to those who are terrorists."

And Ian Paisley, leader of the harder-line Democratic Unionists, said Mowlam was "rushing to embrace IRA-Sinn Fein" with "obscene haste."

Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern, who came to power in June, warmly welcomed the British move. So did the Social Democratic and Labor Party, Sinn Fein's moderate and larger rival for Catholic votes.

18 U.S. soldiers in Bosnia awarded medals

McGOVERN BASE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.S. commanders awarded medals to 18 American soldiers at a rain-soaked military base Friday, a day after Bosnian Serb mobs attacked them with rocks and wooden sticks and stones. Two soldiers were wounded.

"My soldiers have shown tremendous professionalism and restraint in dealing with these orchestrated mobs and have avoided resorting to violence," said Maj. Gen. David Grange, the commander of the NATO-led peace force's Multinational Division North.

The soldiers of McGovern Base were both bewildered by their confrontation with the angry crowds and elated that they had been able to rise to the challenge.

"This has really electrified the camp," said Pfc. Todd Edwards, 24, a public affairs officer in the Army Reserve from Nashville, Tenn.

The 8,000-strong U.S.-led contingent in Bosnia is based in the northeast, straddling the former front line running between the Muslim-Croat and the Serb halves of the country. About 1,000 of the soldiers live on McGovern Base just outside hotly contested town of Brcko.

The soldiers monitor the suburbs and surrounding villages, where Muslims who fled during the 3 1/2-year war are trying to resume their lives. They also patrol Brcko itself, protecting the U.N. police and civilian agencies that are trying to ensure implementation of the Dayton peace accord and controlling traffic over a strategic bridge leading into Croatia.

NATO said the soldiers moved into position early Thursday morning in downtown Brcko, as well as the nearby towns of Bijeljina and Doboj, to head off violence. They had seen indications that forces loyal to President Biljana Plavsic would try to take control of police stations and the media, and it feared her rivals, supporters of war crimes suspect Radovan Karadzic, would react violently.

Alerted by sirens and local radio broadcasts about the foreign troop movements, furious crowds quickly formed around the peacekeepers' positions in Brcko. The mobs shouted insults, threatened the soldiers with sticks, and mimed how they would murder them with pistols or knives.

They also massed outside of international agencies such as U.N. police stations, smashing cars and roughing up foreign journalists.

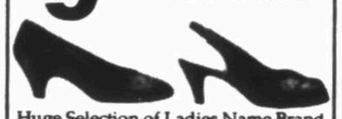

The soldiers had orders to use force if necessary to disperse the crowds, Grange said.

'My soldiers have shown tremendous professionalism and restraint ... and have avoided resorting to violence.'
— Maj. Gen. David Grange, commander of a NATO-led peace force division

FDA plans laxative ingredient ban; Ex-Lax recipe to change

■ FDA says animal studies find ingredient can damage gene that suppresses tumors, causing cancer.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The maker of Ex-Lax, the country's top-selling laxative, pulled the product off store shelves Friday after the government announced it intends to ban an over-the-counter laxative ingredient linked to cancer.

Novartis Consumer Health emphasized that after more than 90 years of use in Ex-Lax, it believes the ingredient phenolphthalein is safe, but that it would reformulate the long-standing product "to avoid consumer confusion."

The Food and Drug Administration did acknowledge that it has no reports that phenolphthalein has caused cancer in people.

But the FDA said animal studies found phenolphthalein, at high doses, could damage a vital gene that suppresses tumors, and consequently caused a variety of cancers in laboratory mice and rats.

The damage to the p53 gene was disturbing enough that the FDA concluded it posed a potential cancer risk to people who use phenolphthalein-containing laxatives for extended periods of time or at higher-than-recommended doses.

"It's very hard to draw a line" at which a laxative user could be at risk, cautioned FDA drug chief Dr. Robert Temple. "The concern is for long-term use, and it's greater the longer the use and the higher doses people use."

■ More national news/C3

The FDA's advice: "What we're saying is find another laxative," Temple said.

Although phenolphthalein is present in Ex-Lax and a host of store-brand laxatives, the FDA noted that Americans have access to more than two dozen laxative products that do not contain the ingredient. Several Ex-Lax competitors, anticipating a ban, already have reformulated their laxatives. Bayer Corp. this summer pulled off the market its one laxative brand that contained the ingredient.

If the FDA's proposed ingredient ban becomes final, any laxative containing the compound would have to be reformulated or taken off the market.

Court asked to block Proposition 209

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court justice was asked Friday to block enforcement of California's Proposition 209, the law that bans race or gender from being a factor in state hiring or school admissions.

A coalition of civil rights groups said the measure, which took effect Thursday, "strips all local and state governmental entities of their pre-existing authority to redress discrimination through even indisputably constitutionally permissible race- or sex-conscious affirmative action measures."

City officials from San Francisco also filed an emergency request.

Both went to Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who handles emergency matters from California for the nation's highest court. She has the authority to act on the requests herself, but also could refer them to the full court. No action is likely until a response from state officials is received.

Prosecutors gain in bid to see notes on travel office firings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whitewater prosecutors won a round Friday in their fight to obtain a lawyer's notes of his conversation with the late presidential aide Vincent Foster about the White House travel office firings.

A split federal appeals court panel agreed with independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr that the attorney-client privilege protecting such discussions does not always extend beyond the grave.

Starr had appealed a lower court's refusal to enforce a grand jury's subpoena for the notes, arguing that because Foster had committed suicide prosecutors were entitled to examine them.

Starr is seeking the notes as part of his investigation to determine whether presidential aides lied about any role Hillary Rodham Clinton might have had in the firings of seven White House Travel Office employees in 1993.

Mrs. Clinton has denied in sworn statements that she played any role in the firings, an assertion challenged in a memo by former White House administration director David Watkins.

In a 2-1 ruling, the panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit held that in a criminal investigation the attorney-client privilege did not always survive the death of the client.

"The non-existence of any client concern for criminal liability after death" changes the situation, Judge Stephen Williams wrote for himself and Judge Patricia Wald.

But "this exception should apply only to communications whose relative importance is substantial," Williams wrote.

The panel ordered a review of the notes taken by defense lawyer James Hamilton to determine whether they qualify for such an exception to the attorney-client privilege.

A secretary in Hamilton's law office said he was on vacation and unavailable for comment. White House Counsel Charles F.C. Ruff declined to comment, saying the decision stemmed from a private dispute between Hamilton and Starr that did not involve the White House.

"We knew nothing about it," Ruff said.

Foster, a deputy White House counsel who was a former law partner of Mrs. Clinton, consulted Hamilton some time between the May 1993 firings and his suicide in July 1993.

In previously secret proceedings, U.S. District Judge Garrett Penn had rejected Starr's argument that attorney-client privilege no longer protected the notes.

Penn also ruled that the subpoena violated an attorney work-product privilege that protects a lawyer's thoughts, impressions or opinions about a case that might be found in memos or notes.

But the panel found that Penn "read both privileges too broadly."

It instructed the lower court to read Hamilton's notes with an eye for determining if at least some portions should be given to Starr.

Midland's Stewart, defending champ Kroon advance into Pro Showdown quarterfinals

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

On Friday afternoon at the tennis courts of the Racquet Club many of the usual suspects showed up for the first round of the second annual Pro Showdown, but today some new faces should appear.

Two players who reached the semifinals of last year's inaugural tournament advanced into today's quarterfinals, but three others from last year's edition were eliminated, bespeaking of the improved quality of this year's field. And the best is almost certainly to come.

"There's not an easy match this year," said tournament coordinator Scott Stewart, who along with defending champion Niclas Kroon was a returner who won his opening round match. "I've just got to go out there and play point by point."

The points took a long time to come for Stewart, who needed only two sets to defeat Anders Eriksson 7-5, 6-3. Despite the sweep, the match took two hours and 25 minutes to complete. On top of that, Stewart — and the other seven quarterfinalists — will have to win two matches today to advance to Sunday's finals.

Things went more easily for Kroon, who defeated Tylir Jimenez 6-3, 6-4 to advance to the quarterfinals. Kroon and Stewart will face each other today at 1 p.m. at the stadium court.

Rebs find they have work to do

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

VAN HORN — Traveling all the way to Van Horn, the Midland Lee football team figured it might as well get a lot of work in. After leaving with a 4-2 scrimmage advantage over El Paso Socorro, the Rebels will need more work.

There was little celebrating for the Rebels in their scrimmage with the Bulldogs on Friday night, because with every score there was more to be critical of. And with just a week until the season opener with El Paso Coronado, there is little time and a lot to work on.

"I didn't see anything (I liked)," Midland Lee head coach John Parchman said. "As far as what I didn't like, you pick a spot. I'm glad we didn't wait until next week to see something like this. We have to go to work."

Parchman did say that he should carry a lot of the blame for the performance.

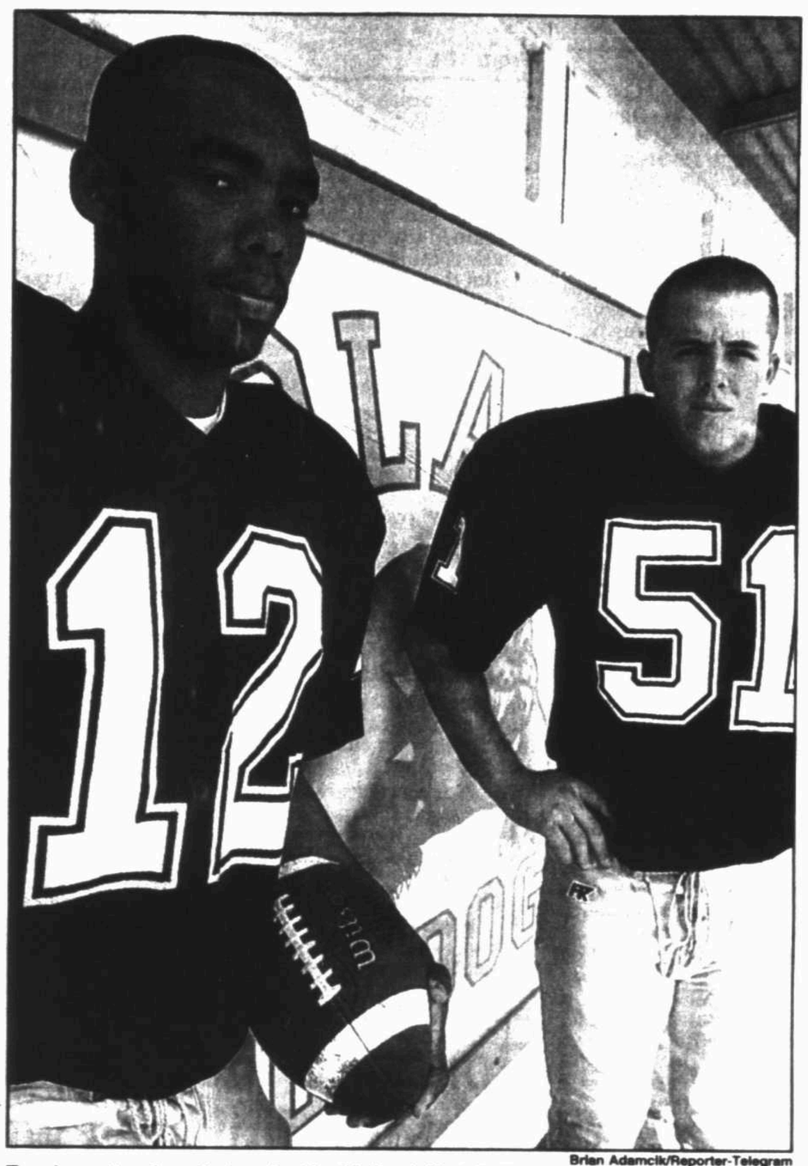

"I'm disappointed with the job that I have done here," Parchman said. "I haven't done my job of getting them ready. They are inexperienced, but we have inexperience every year."

The Rebels opened the scrimmage, which was the longest of the past three seasons, with two straight possessions that resulted in TDs. The first came when running back Josh Norman took his first handoff of 1997 and charged through the Socorro defense with a 68-yard run on the team's first set.

With more plays to run on that first set, the Rebs put it all together for a perfect six-play drive. The big plays came in the air as quarterback Jeremy Deramus, who was 2-for-7 with two passes dropped, connected with Autry Pryor for 22 yards on the drive's third play and then he hit Norman for 21 yards and the second score of the game. 'Dogs seek to move up in district

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland High Bulldogs went through a strange 1996 football season, winning their first three games before losing all six District 4-5A outings to end the year. There are major hopes that 1997 will bring better luck.

And even though MHS didn't win a district game last season, they were in most of the games, losing three (Abilene High, San Angelo and Odessa High) by eight points or less.

The 1996 campaign was the first for coach David Browning, who enters his second year with the benefit of having a full off-season program under his belt and solid spring training performance.

"I don't want to put a number on the wins, but we are a better football team this year," Browning said. "We didn't have a full off-season program with the kids last year, and I know for a fact that we are bigger and stronger than a year ago.

"I'm excited about the future. We're going to turn this thing around. I'm committed to that. This team hasn't been to the playoffs since 1951, but we have some good things going for us now. We have a new workout facility and we just completed work on another indoor workout building at the freshman school. Season ticket sales are up and the kids are excited about what is taking place at Midland High. We're going to get where we need to be."

Big Spring looks improved in scrimmage against MHS

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

With no numbers on the uniforms, watching the Big Spring Steers and the Midland High Bulldogs scrimmage at Memorial Stadium Friday night was bit like watching a rock throwing fight in the Golan Heights.

But one could look at the scoreboard to see that the Class 4A Steers owned a three touchdown to two verdict when the last rock was hurled.

It's probably not the result that the MHS faithful had in mind, considering that these Steers were 2-8 a year ago. But you can also bet that Big Spring will win more than two games this year.

Steer quarterback Gabe Mendoza completed six of 14 passes for 162 yards and two touchdowns to lead the scrimmage victory. Mendoza hit Aaron Boadle for a 70-yard TD strike and Tory Mitchell for a 53-yard TD. The one to Mitchell decided the outcome late in the scrimmage after the Bulldogs had tied the score at 2-2 when quarterback Camar Jackson hit receiver Raji Hickey for a 40-yard touchdown.

"That showed some maturity that I was glad to see," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler. "We couldn't throw the ball a lick last year and we're going to throw the ball this year. Last year, we would have ducked our heads. I was worried about how we would respond when Midland High scored to tie it up, but then again, you worry about everything when you were 2-8 last year."

Despite the loss, MHS coach David Browning wasn't too concerned.

"First of all, Big Spring is 200 percent better than a year ago," Browning said. "I thought we did some good things, considering we didn't approach this as a real game.

"I was disappointed that our execution was poor in places and I was disappointed in our tackling ability at times. We also dropped about four passes. But there was nothing in the scrimmage that happened that can't be corrected. We had a lot of

Venus upsets Huber; Kafelnikov KO'ed

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — Watch out, Martina. Move over, Monica.

Venus Williams arrived in all her red, white and blue-beaded glory Friday night, eager to become the Tiger Woods of tennis.

US OPEN
A USTA EVENT

In her first U.S. Open, the tall 17-year-old with the beaded braids notched the biggest victory of her young career with a 6-3, 6-4 upset of No. 8 Huber in a stellar show of power, poise and near perfect tennis.

Williams skipped to the net and bounced up and down like a little girl at the end, then said she'd like to do for the sport what Tiger Woods has done for golf.

"I can't play golf," she said with a laugh. "I would hope that I could do the same thing in tennis that he has done. Mostly because he's out there winning, he is something different from the mainstream golfer. In tennis, I also am (different). I'm tall. I'm black. Everything's different about me. Just face the facts. I'm just something totally different than what has been around."

Williams, ranked 66th but moving up fast, could well be headed toward the semifinals as she advances in a quarter of the draw that has no seeded players left. Her next match in the fourth round is against South African Joannette Kruger, ranked No. 45.

Crushing serves at up to 113 mph and playing smart tennis that blended deep ground strokes and soft touch, the 6-foot-1 Williams frustrated Huber until the German self-destructed with flurries of errors.

Williams, steadier and more clever than the 22-year-old Huber, came back from down a break to sweep the last four games of the first set. Huber, a finalist in the Australian Open last year, beat herself by insisting on hitting power shot after power shot that too often found the net or landed out.

"I'm not one of those players who get angry," Williams said. "I don't get angry. Some players can't stop thinking about it. I move on. I stay calm and not let up. She's the type of player that gets angry. Most of the players are like that."

Williams held easily through the second set, yielding only five points on serve, and broke Huber to 4-3 by keeping the ball in play until Huber slugged balls into the net.

Huber conceded that Williams "will be a top player in the next year," but she didn't appreciate the teen's exuberance at the end.

"That's her mentality," Huber said with a note of bitterness.

Williams made no apologies.

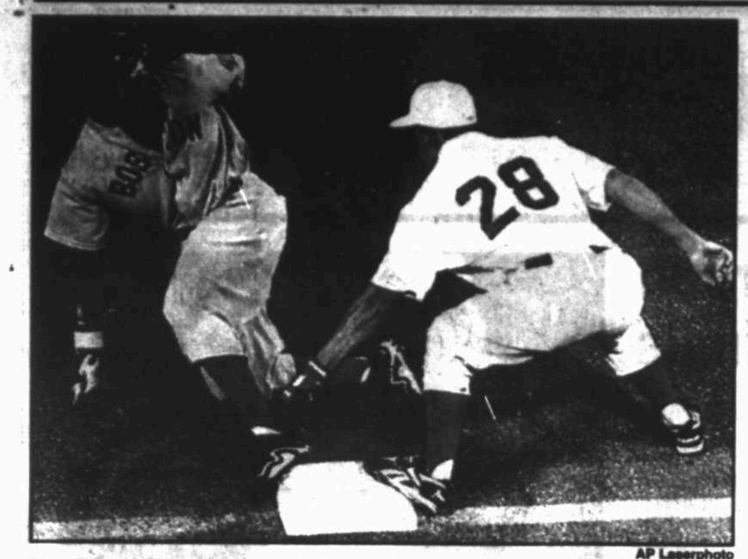

"It was a lot of fun," she said.

Vols hope to justify No. 5 ranking vs. Tech

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer has spent the summer trying to silence all national championship talk, but apparently he forgot to tell Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes.

"This is one of the better teams we've ever played, if not the best one," Dykes said as his Red Raiders prepared to play the No. 5 Volunteers Saturday night.

"I think they've probably got a chance to win the national championship. They've got a lot of good weapons and they're well coached. They play the game like it ought to be played."

Fulmer said earlier this fall he thinks the Volunteers got too caught up in national title talk last year, and has decreed there shall be none this time around. He couldn't stop Dykes from bringing it up, of course, so he countered with flattery of his own.

"First of all it's really important for everybody to understand we're playing a very fine Texas Tech football team," he said. "We've studied them all summer and every time you watch them on film you're more impressed. They know what they're doing."

Both teams enter the season with a proven commodity at quarterback, complete unknowns in the backfield and enough returning starters on defense that scoring could be difficult.

The Vols are led by quarterback Peyton Manning, already the leading passer in school history with 7,382 yards and 53 touchdowns. The Red Raiders counter with Zebbie Lethridge, an able if less prolific passer (5,167 career yards), as well as a dangerous scrambler and solid leader on the field.

"He's more dangerous when you do flush him out of the pocket and he gets creative," Fulmer said.

Tennessee returns three of its top four receivers and Tech returns its top two, so the passing games should be in good shape. But both teams have big holes to fill at running back.

The Red Raiders lost Byron Hanspard and his 2,000-plus rushing yards, and list three redshirt freshmen and one true freshman on the depth chart at tailback.

"It'll be sort of tender there for awhile, no question about that," Dykes said. He said all four freshmen will play.

Tennessee lost Jay Graham to graduation, and will probably start junior Mark Levine (43 carries for 200 yards last year) and Shawn Bryson (18 carries for 94 yards) in its new two-running back alignment.

These two teams have met only once, in the 1973 Gator Bowl. Texas Tech won that one 28-19.

In other games involving Big 12 teams, No. 6 Nebraska is a 56-point favorite over the Akron Zips, 4-7 in the Mid-America Conference a year ago; Miami plays at Baylor; and Oklahoma State visits Iowa State. Kansas shut out Alabama-Birmingham 24-0 on Thursday night.

Despite being heavy favorites in first two games against Akron and Central Florida, Nebraska figures it will need time to train a new defensive team with only three starters returning.

The Cornhusker defense allowed 334 yards and four touchdowns in a recent team scrimmage.

Both Oklahoma State and Iowa State will be putting their good record of season openers on the line Saturday when they match up. Oklahoma State is 54-36-5 in their first games of the season; Iowa State is 74-27-4. The Cowboys lead the series 21-14-3.

Miami leads the series against Baylor 5-3, including a 35-14 victory in 1995, the last time they met.

The Hurricanes yielded 78 points in their final three games last season but coach Butch Davis expects his team to improve on defense this season. First-year Baylor coach Dave Roberts plans a controlled passing game.

Braves go back home to Boston, rip Red Sox

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Braves returned to their original hometown on Friday night and confirmed what their fans here have felt since the team moved to Milwaukee in 1953: The wrong team left Boston.

Now based in Atlanta and playing the Red Sox for the first time, the Braves got strong pitching from John Smoltz and home runs by Fred McGriff and Greg Colbrunn to beat the team that chased them out of town 9-1.

Nomar Garciaparra hit in his 30th consecutive game, extending his record for AL rookies. Benito Santiago holds the major league rookie record with 34.

The Braves played in Boston from the time the franchise was formed in 1871 until the spring of 1953, when sagging attendance convinced owner Lou Perini that he couldn't compete with the Red Sox.

Cardinals 9, Royals 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Willie McGee, the only man in the game who played in the 1985 World Series, hit a bases-loaded triple in the eighth inning that boosted St. Louis over Kansas City in a lively and long-awaited rematch of their seven-game classic.

White Sox 5, Astros 4

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura hit an RBI triple in the eighth inning and scored on Mike Cameron's single as the Chicago White Sox rallied to defeat the Houston Astros.

Jorge Fabregas added a two-run homer for the White Sox. Jeff Bagwell and Craig Biggio homered for Houston.

Reds 5, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Willie Greene's three-run homer led the Cincinnati Reds over the Minnesota Twins in a matchup of two of the majors' most disappointing teams.

Greene hit his 19th homer in the fourth, two innings after Marty Cordova's two-run drive gave the Twins a 2-0 lead. The game drew just 12,155 at the Metrodome.

Brewers 4, Pirates 1

■ Interleague Games

MILWAUKEE — Scott Karl won his eighth straight decision and Jeff Cirillo hit a two-run double, leading the Milwaukee Brewers past the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Milwaukee has won seven of its last 10 games. Pittsburgh has lost three straight.

Marlins 8, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Al Leiter came off the disabled list and beat the team he played with for seven seasons, pitching the Florida Marlins past the Toronto Blue Jays.

Charles Johnson homered, doubled and drove in four runs and Edgar Renteria went 4-for-4 with a walk and drove in two runs. The Marlins improved to 7-3 in interleague play.

Indians 7, Cubs 6

CLEVELAND — David Justice capped a big night for Cleveland's ex-National Leaguers, hitting a tiebreaking, bases-loaded single in the eighth as Cleveland won the first game that mattered between the clubs in 98 years.

Expos 4, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Doug Strange reached on second baseman Rey Sanchez's throwing error and scored on Mark Grudzielanek's two-out double in the ninth.

Tigers 7, Phillies 2

DETROIT — Willie Blair pitched eight innings to win for the 10th time in 12 decisions as Philadelphia fell to a major-league worst 1-9 in interleague games.

Rockies 6, Mariners 5

DENVER — Rookie Todd Helton singled in the winning run with one out in the ninth after rookie Neifi Perez tied it with an RBI triple, giving the Colorado Rockies a two-game sweep of Seattle.

Orioles 4, Mets 3, 12 innings

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken tied the game with an eighth-inning homer and singled in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th, giving the Baltimore Orioles a victory over the New York Mets.

LEE: Rebels need to gain consistency

plays, Lee amassed 170 yards and scored twice.

For the rest of the scrimmage, the offense wasn't exactly shut down, but it did sputter. Over the last three sets with the first team, Lee gained just 121 yards — most of those coming in the 72-yard third set. But there were flashes during that time, but also plays that showed why consistency is needed. In the third set, Autry Pryor broke a run for 58 yards, however, on the play, Lee was called for a block-in-the-back penalty. Then, on the next drive of the set, Deramus got out on a run of 44 yards to put the ball on the Socorro 16. On the next play, a miscue sent a toss to Pryor on the ground and Socorro recovered.

Whether confident by their initial success, or whether they started to believe all those things written about how strong they would be or just having two starters returning from last year, there wasn't the consistency.

"I was expecting us to act like a senior football team," Parchman said. "We have to do the fundamental things like a Lee Rebel football team does."

On the defensive side, the Rebels allowed two scores on what were good Socorro drives. The first came in the first set when the Bulldogs traveled 70-yards — 40 by air and 30 on the ground. The score came on a 15-yard pass from Albert Montes to Raul Arroyo.

The second TD came in Socorro's third set as their group of little scat backs ran away from Lee defenders for most of the yards. The capper came on a 14-yard run by Murry Padilla.

For the course of the scrimmage, Lee had 472 yards, 75 of that through the air. The Rebels fumbled twice, losing one. Norman had 122 yards while Pryor, who spent time with the first and second team, rushed for 92 yards on 20 carries. Fullback Stacy Jones had 45 yards while Deramus rushed for 57 yards on eight carries.

El Paso Socorro had 145 yards on the ground and 113 yards in the air. Most of those yards came from the first team (205).

Lee's other two scores came when second-team running back Jason Hernandez scored from seven yards out. Lee's final score came as Eric Neatherlin picked off a Montes pass and ran it in for a touchdown.

This is Lee's only scrimmage prior to the season opener. In Parchman's two past seasons as head coach, there had always been two. After seeing what he saw on Friday, there will be a crash course in making the team better.

"This would be comparable to Riverside," said Parchman, referring to the scrimmage against El Paso Riverside, the first of two scrimmages last season. "After that scrimmage, we were better against Socorro. Unfortunately, we don't have another scrimmage, but the problems we have are solvable."

MHS: Bulldogs' QB tops 100 yards passing

(From 1B)

sophomores and juniors out there playing on the varsity for the first time against an outside opponent and I could tell it."

Big Spring features Mitchell, the blazing track star, at tailback this year, moving Antwoyne Edwards to fullback. Mitchell scored two TDs while Edwards set up the Steers' first touchdown with a 61-yard run.

"It was good to see the two touchdowns by Tory. We knew what Antwoyne could do. He may not have 2,400 yards rushing like Shaud Williams (of Andrews), but he has 2,400 yards in two seasons — and that's pretty good," Butler said.

It also looks like MHS' Jackson may be headed for a bigger season as he gears for his senior run. Jackson completed 10-of-19 passes for 112 yards and a touchdown. That is more than one-fourth of his total passing yards (377) of a year ago. He also threw one in the air more than 50 yards that was just incomplete. Jackson also had 52 yards rushing, including a powerful glide down the sidelines for a 29-yard TD.

MHS receiver Luke Conder caught four passes for 28 yards while Hickey caught two for 54. Sophomore Jimmy Smith also caught two passes. MHS had seven different receivers atch 12 balls in all.

"I don't think we had ar / games with that many passing yar ', in any one game last year," Browning said. "That was a lot better, but even then, we dropped about four more that could have been caught."

Big Spring's Edwards led all rushers with 64 yards and Mitchell had 58 more. MHS got 41 from junior tailback Shemond Davis and 37 from Smith. The Steers had 352 yards of total offense, compared to 294 for the Bulldogs.

Defensively, MHS lineman Melvin Jackson blocked a pass and linebacker Devin Butts had a fumble recovery. Linebacker Erik McCright opened the scrimmage with a monster hit and Nick Conder had a big night.

Midland High travels to Class 4A Frenship (just southwest of Lubbock) Friday for its first game of the season. The Bulldogs came from behind to defeat Frenship last season.

"We've spent the majority of our time preparing for Frenship," Browning said. "I think this scrimmage serves the purpose of getting a lot of kids some experience on the varsity level."

Big Spring will host Class 3A Monahans next week. The Steers lost to Monahans last season. In fact, the Steers dropped seven of their eight losses by a margin of seven points or less.

"There's not much of a revenge factor when you go 2-8," Butler said. "That was a low point for us. We've got to get better at executing. We had a fumble and a holding penalty and those are the type of things that we just can't overcome."

And, maybe, next week the fans will know the players when they touch the ball. The UIL requires that teams wear numerals on their jerseys. You can no longer hide the rest of this season.

Scoring Summary

BS-Tory Mitchell, 1-yard run
BS-Aaron Boadle, 70-yard pass from Gabe Mendoza
MHS-Camar Jackson, 29-yard run
MHS-Raji Hickey, 40-yard pass from Jackson
BS-Mitchell, 53 pass from Mendoza.

Bonanno narrowly misses shutout, finishes with win

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Midland Angel right-hander Rob Bonanno finished out the year in style Friday with a 4-1 win over the Wichita Wranglers.

Bonanno (5-10), who suffered through injuries and bad breaks this year, was one inning away from getting his first Class AA shutout. It changed with one pitch. On the first pitch to Wrangler Mendy Lopez, the shutout was broken with a solo shot over the left field wall. Lopez had three of the five Wrangler hits on the night.

Bonanno received help in the first inning when Mike Carter tripled off Chris Haney (0-1), who's on a rehabilitation assignment in Wichita from the Kansas City Royals, and then scored on a Keith Luuloa sacrifice fly to center field. Midland made it 2-0 in the fourth inning when Danny Buxbaum hit his first homer since June 27.

Carter again scored in the sixth inning when he singled and was driven in by a Luuloa triple. Carter later drove in Derek Ryder in the seventh inning on a single. Ryder singled and stole second base with two outs to set up the scoring opportunity. Carter finished the day, 3-for-4 with a triple, two runs scored, a stolen base, and an RBI.

The season ends tonight for both teams as the Angels send Kurt Knudsen (0-3, 8.83) to the mound against Wichita's Enrique Calero (10-9, 4.59).

Midland High Bulldogs

Butts

Conder

Atnipp

Coach's District Favorite: Abilene Cooper.

Key Quote: David Browning: "We are still not big, physical specimens, but we are bigger and faster than a year ago after our first full off-season program."

Returning Offensive Starters (4): Quarterback Camar Jackson (132 yards rushing, 1 TD; 377 passing, 1 TD); fullback Ryan Stewart (173 rushing, 2 TDs); tackle Stuart Atnipp; guard Kyle Nix.

Returning Defensive Starters (4): Tackle Erik McCright (moved to linebacker); end Nick Conder; tackle Joe Maxwell; linebacker Devin Butts.

New Wrinkles: MHS had trouble catching the ball last year, but the passing game should be improved this season and be more of the attack.

Biggest Rival: Midland Lee.

Last Playoff Appearance: 1951; eliminated by Breckenridge, 33-14, in Class 3A bi-district.

Last Season's Record and District Finish: 3-6 overall; 0-6 district, last place,

MHS' McCright relishes move back to linebacker

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

For Midland High varsity football fans, seeing Erik McCright at middle linebacker is going to be a new experience. For McCright, however, there isn't much new about the move.

McCright played as a defensive tackle as a junior last season, but MHS coach David Browning is moving the senior to the middle linebacking post for 1997.

"Erik did a good job for us as a down lineman last season, but we feel (middle linebacker) is where he needs to be," Browning said. "He's played there before and it's not like he's having to learn a new position."

In fact, McCright has played more at middle linebacker than he has on the defensive front.

"I've always played middle linebacker before last year," McCright said. "It's the position I've always played and I feel comfortable there."

The move to the defensive front last season, however, did not leave McCright as an unhappy camper.

"I'd always played at linebacker, but I wasn't unhappy moving to a down lineman last season because it gave me a chance to play," McCright said. "I always play were the coaches tell me to play, but I feel like linebacker is where I should be. So, I'm happy to make the switch this season."

And the switch is made with some risk to it. McCright may not have had experience as a down lineman last year, but he ended up as an honorable mention All-District 4-5A selection for his efforts at the defensive tackle slot.

McCright admits that the two positions are different in nature.

"As a down lineman, you have to be a lot more physical than you do as a linebacker," McCright said. "Also, as a defensive lineman, you don't get nearly as many big hits. That's what I like about being in the middle."

There is also a special ring to the ear at middle linebacker for Erik. His father, Gary McCright, was a linebacker at both Midland Lee and Texas Tech during his football playing days in the '70s.

"My dad played middle linebacker at Tech and that's just where I always wanted to play," Erik said. "I grew up wanting in the middle, like him."

And since dad played at crosstown Midland Lee, Erik would like nothing better than to beat Lee.

"I always look forward to playing Lee," Erik said. "I don't even think my dad would mind us beating Lee. In fact, I think he would like that a lot."

But Erik isn't the first of the McCright clan to play as a Bulldog. Brother, John, was a defensive end for MHS two seasons ago.

Erik feels like the Bulldogs will be competitive on the field of play this season. He thinks he sees a renewed attitude coming from the team.

"I think we will be able to contend with every team in the district," McCright says. "Our offseason program was really great. We have more size and speed because of our off-season work ethic. The coaches really pushed us.

"It used to be that we would barely break a good sweat, but his year, some of us felt like passing out or throwing up. It was work, but it's going to pay off.

"Also, we are just now starting to realize what the coaches have been teaching us. It's hard to go through a season with a new system, but now that's behind us. Our defense has improved and that's going to help."

And Erik McCright in the middle is also going to help.

MHS: 'Dogs plan on better passing attack

(From 1B)

And there are some major building blocks in place. The Bulldogs have four returning starters on offense and four on defense.

At the head of the class is senior quarterback Camar Jackson, who also predicts major improvement from last year. Jackson had meager numbers in 1996 with 132 yards rushing and 377 yards passing. He expects the passing numbers to improve greatly this year.

"Our receivers are 100, no 300, percent better than last year," notes Jackson. "I could see that in the spring. I think we will be able to pass more this year and we won't drop as many passes. Also, our running backs seem quicker to the hole this year."

MHS quarterback coach Wes Cope said of Jackson, "He has really come along this year and he should be much better with the year of experience. I don't think some people will recognize him. He's gained about 20 pounds."

In addition to Jackson, the Bulldogs have offensive tackle Stuart Atnipp back for his senior season and senior guard Kyle Nix (honorable mention All-District last season), which gives the line some punch. Ryan Stewart (MHS' second leading rusher last year with 173 yards and two TDs) is also back, but he is getting stern competition for the fullback slot from senior Damon Johnson.

The Bulldogs lost 1,000-yard All-District performer Sammy Powell at tailback, but junior newcomer Shemond Davis looks to have all the moves to take up that slack. Davis could be another 1,000-yard performer after a solid spring game. Sophomore running backs Jimmy Smith and Caveran Harris also show promise, keeping Davis honest if he wants to keep the tailback job.

The receivers should also mark solid improvement with speedy junior Raji Hickey at wide receiver and junior Lance King at flanker.

Joining Atnipp and Nix in the line will be senior tackle Matt Alford (260) and junior guard Rusty Reed. Two spirited battles remain up front as senior Jason Simon and sophomore Cotey Joe Cswaykus battle for the center slot while junior Luke Conder and sophomore Randy Gardner duke it out at tight end.

The defense should be improved, but there is one major change of note. Senior Erik McCright is moving from a defensive tackle slot, where he was honorable mention All-District, to middle linebacker.

Other returning starters include senior Nick Conder at defensive end, senior Joe Maxwell at defensive tackle and senior Devin Butts at the weakside linebacker post.

The defense is laced with seniors who have playing experience. Senior Melvin Jackson moves in at tackle opposite Maxwell. Senior Brandon Black will be the strong side linebacker while seniors John Reyes and Jake Menefee are set at the two cornerback slots. Senior Josh Fernau is also in the linebacker picture, a position where depth is a huge plus.

Some battles remain in the early position hunt on defense. Junior Zack Davis and senior Luke Hardaway, who missed spring training with a broken leg, are opposite Conder at end. At the free safety position, both junior Wes Solanski and junior Weldon Cooks should see action. Cooks will also see duty as a wide receiver.

The strong safety position has seniors Jason Williams and Nick Smith battling for playing time.

"It's been easier on the coaches and kids this time around," Browning said. "We had a big carryover from the fall after the kids had to go through a whole new offense and defensive package. We also feel like we have the kids in the right positions this season. We had to make a lot of quick decisions in that area last season, but we've had more time to evaluate players this time around."

MHS starts on the road in Frenship (just outside of Lubbock) on Sept. 5, but then has three consecutive games at home (El Paso Bel Air, Andrews and Midland Lee). The overall schedule is much more favorable to the Bulldogs this season.

Many feel this is the cross road year for Midland High, San Angelo, Odessa High and Abilene High since it looks like the talent level might be getting closer to the Big Three of Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian. MHS is hoping this is the year they make the turn on the right path.

Comets hope to reverse regular season trend

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Comets have been raking in most of the WNBA awards but still must prove they can beat the New York Liberty in Saturday's first WNBA finals.

Houston finished fast, winning the Eastern Conference title by one game over the Liberty, which started fast but limped into the playoffs despite a 3-1 record over the Comets in the regular season.

Comets guard Cynthia Cooper was a unanimous all-WNBA selection and league MVP. Coach Van Chancellor was voted coach of the year.

Now it's a one-game season.

"Everything that transpired before now you can throw out the window," Chancellor said. "Every team has a lull at some point in the season. They had theirs and now they're back."

The Comets rallied in the final 8: 17 to beat Charlotte 70-54 and the Liberty dumped Phoenix 59-41 in Thursday's semifinal games.

"I don't think you will see any of the players go out there tomorrow and start thinking about what we were doing back on July 1 or July 31," Chancellor said. "They'd better be think about what they're doing today."

New York won the first three game of the series. The Comets' charge came later.

"Early in the season, they didn't have Sheryl (Swoopes) and they played a more wide-open game," New York coach Nancy Darsch said of the Comets. "They don't do that as much anymore. They have more defined roles.

"They have four or five offensive calls that are their favorites."

Stopping Cooper will be the Liberty's primary emphasis.

"Cynthia Cooper can't be stopped," Liberty center Rebecca Lobo said. "We'll just have to go and do the best we can. It will have to be a team effort against her."

Darsch plans just that against Cooper, the league's leading scorer.

"We'll try to rotate our defensive people on her and try to mix who is defending her and keep our players fresh," Darsch said. "She handles the ball so much we have to keep fresh people on her. It will be team defense on Coop."

Lobo says the victory built momentum for the title game.

"We wanted to do something special," Lobo said. "We played a great game under pressure. Now we want to make history on Saturday. We're going to do the best we can. It helps that we are back to being the good defensive team we were earlier in the season."

TENNIS: Defending champ advances

(From 1B)

Eriksson. In the beginning of the second set, they took turns breaking each other's serve, but when Stewart broke Eriksson by scoring all four points of the game to go up 5-3, the match was his. He capped the match in style with a service ace.

"I didn't serve quite as well as I thought I could, although I did have some good serves toward the end," Stewart said. "(Eriksson) did a good job on returns and was real consistent."

Stewart bears the double burden of also having to coordinate who will play what matches on which court and at what times. Along with the singles, the Pro-Am doubles matches are scheduled to begin today.

The best thing about Friday's match for Stewart was the timing. It was over early enough in the afternoon for him to gain a second wind before taking the court against Kroon today. It also helped that as the head pro at the Racquet Club and the lone Midlander in the field, he has emerged as the clear crowd favorite.

"It sure did help that I had all of the members out her supporting me," Stewart said. "I saw a lot of familiar faces."

If any opponent could be expected to handle a partisan Stewart crowd, it would be defending champion Kroon. He had to defeat a game Jimenez to advance. Jimenez won the qualifier late last month to earn one of two at-large spots in the tournament.

Kroon broke Jimenez's serve once in the first set to claim victory and again in the second set. He needed to get used do being back in the environment in the Permian Basin, though.

"The altitude here is very tough," Kroon said. "It's very confusing because you miss a lot of shots you would normally make. I was playing all the important points well, though."

Like Stewart, Kroon ended his match with an ace. The two will meet for the first time today, yet Kroon says he doesn't feel as sharp as he did last year. He has been suffering from — naturally — tennis elbow.

"Last year I was playing in tournaments real often but back in January I started teaching and not playing regularly," said Kroon, a native of Sweden. "I've been a little bit injured so I haven't been playing as much."

Nonetheless, Kroon felt the pull to come back to Midland and defend his title. If he's successful, he'll take home $6,500, an increase of $2,500 over what Kroon won last year.

"If you win a tournament you have a chance to come back and play again the next year, so I was keen on coming back," Kroon said.

The player Kroon defeated, Jimenez, beat Nick Crowell in the final of the qualifier, but Crowell still got invited to the Pro Showdown. Crowell made the most of the invitation, defeating Jonas Lundblad (last year's runner-up) 6-2, 1-6, 7-5 in the day's most competitive match.

Crowell, named to the All-America team last year as a freshman at the University of Texas, wasn't landing his serve in the second and third sets, and stood on the brink of a ticket home when he trailed 5-1 in the third set. So Crowell decided to revert to subtlety.

"My first serve went nowhere," Crowell said. "It was the same thing in the third set until it was 5-1 and I started spinning (the serve) in."

Crowell finally held serve twice and broke Lundblad twice to tie the set at 5-5. He took the lead by holding serve and in the final game finally won at deuce point to complete his rally.

The reward for Crowell? Facing No. 1 seed Luis Herrera, the top Davis Cup player for Mexico, today at 11 a.m.

"I'm going to have to serve with a lot better percentage and hit more crisp ground shots," Crowell said.

Results and schedule for the Pro Showdown at the Racquet Club:

Friday's singles

Nick Crowell def. Jonas Lundblad 6-2, 1-6, 7-5; Alistar Macdonald def. Michael Westbrooks 7-6, 6-4; Chad Clark def. Iain Pound 6-2, 6-1; Niclas Kroon def. Tylir Jimenez 6-3, 6-4; Scott Stewart def. Anders Eriksson 7-5, 6-3; Damon Henkel def. Trey Phillips 7--5, 6-2.

Saturday's schedule

9:30 a.m.: Pro-Am Doubles (all courts) 11 a.m.: Quarterfinals — Stadium court: Luis Herrera vs. Crowell; Court one: Macdonald vs. Clark. 1 p.m.: Quarterfinals — Stadium court: Kroon vs. Stewart; Court one: Henkel vs. Steve Bryan. 3 and 5 p.m.: Semifinals at stadium court.

OPEN: Woodforde pulls off big upset

(From 1B)

Williams said she's ready to take her place with the other young players, like Martina Hingis, who are ruling tennis.

"You can see the change in the guard in the men's game and the women's game, even if you haven't heard too much of them," Williams said. "The younger players are coming in and taking over. It's just a natural thing."

Andre Agassi, needing all the luck he can find at this precarious stage of his career, stumbled upon two huge breaks.

The first came when No. 3 Yevgeny Kafelnikov was swept out of his path by Australian Mark Woodforde in a 6-3, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) upset before Agassi stepped on court.

The second arrived in the form of a gift from Romanian Adrian Voinea, who patted balls like a practice partner and served like a hacker to hand Agassi a 6-0, 6-2, 6-2 victory in 80 minutes.

Agassi has had tougher hitting sessions against coach Brad Gilbert than he had against Voinea, who embarrassed himself as much with his ugly play as with the way he kept flinging his racket to the court. Voinea, ranked No. 107 and capable of playing tough, chose to take the pace off the ball and let Agassi provide the power. That's just what Agassi did, drilling shots from side to side in an effortless cruise into the third round against Woodforde.

In a year when Agassi won only nine matches, no titles, and played in no other major tournaments before the Open, he happily accepted Voinea's present.

"It's beautiful preparation, as far as I'm concerned," Agassi said. "I went out there and hit the ball well from start to finish ... and had no real loose points."

Agassi hasn't played so sharply since last summer, when he won the Olympics and played well until the U.S. Open semifinals. But after two easy matches he hasn't yet convinced anyone that he's ready to launch another bid for the Open title as he did from an unseeded spot in 1994. That year, he came off wrist surgery, built up momentum, and peaked at the right time.

"This year has been more up and down, less consistent of a groove," he said. "Over the last few weeks it's starting to come together. That's a great sign.

"I size up the year by doing my best to forget about the tennis side of it, get pumped about the fact that I got married and I've had a lot of great things to feel good about this year. Professionally, I'm making strides again. I can certainly get a little something out of the rest of the year. It would be a grand slam to, all of a sudden, win this thing, no pun intended."

Agassi, 27, acknowledged that there were stretches this year when he simply didn't care about playing, though he insisted he never really considered retirement.

"There were times where the bottom line was just the struggle of wanting to play, being a little out of sync, out of rhythm, my court feet not there, finding guys controlling points against you," he said. "That's not fun when you've experienced the top level."

Monica Seles, another former champion trying to work back to the top, won just as easily, 6-1, 6-1, against Miriam Oremans to reach the fourth round. The only problem the second-seeded Seles had in the match was a brief rain delay.

In other third-round women's matches, No. 5 Amanda Coetzer beat Flora Perfetti 6-2, 7-5; No. 9 Mary Pierce advanced past Natasha Zvereva 7-6 (7-2), 6-1; and No. 11 Irina Spirlea beat Lilia Osterloh 6-2, 7-5.

There's a rush to get PCs plugged into the Internet

By Jon Swartz
N.Y. Times News Service

The number of personal computers hooked up to the Internet jumped 71 percent over the past year to 82 million and is expected to more than triple to 268 million by 2001, according to one of the most bullish and comprehensive studies yet on Net usage.

The percentage of PCs worldwide with Net access is expected to grow from 30 percent today to more than 50 percent four years from now, according to Dataquest Inc., a San Jose market research firm.

Much of the growth comes from big businesses connecting their employees to the Net.

"By 2001, it will become nearly pointless to pay for a desktop computer for an employee without including Internet access," said Kathryn Hale, a Dataquest analyst. "A PC is an information conduit, and you need a link to the outside world."

Billions at stake when Congress opens debate on 'Net copyright treaty

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Armed with a computer mouse and following a trail of hyperlinks, members of a recording industry posse hunt for copyright outlaws in cyberspace most every day.

But the information highway crosses borders where American copyright laws don't apply. The posse is powerless when, for instance, a Website operator in an online badlands puts a new CD by pop singer Jewel on the Internet version of a jukebox for freeloading fans around the world.

With the proper equipment, a cyber-fan can even buy a blank CD and make a high-quality digital copy of downloaded music, said Tim Sites, a spokesman for the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA). "One person can go into a record outlet and buy a CD that could be copied by millions of (Internet) subscribers in the U.S. alone," he said.

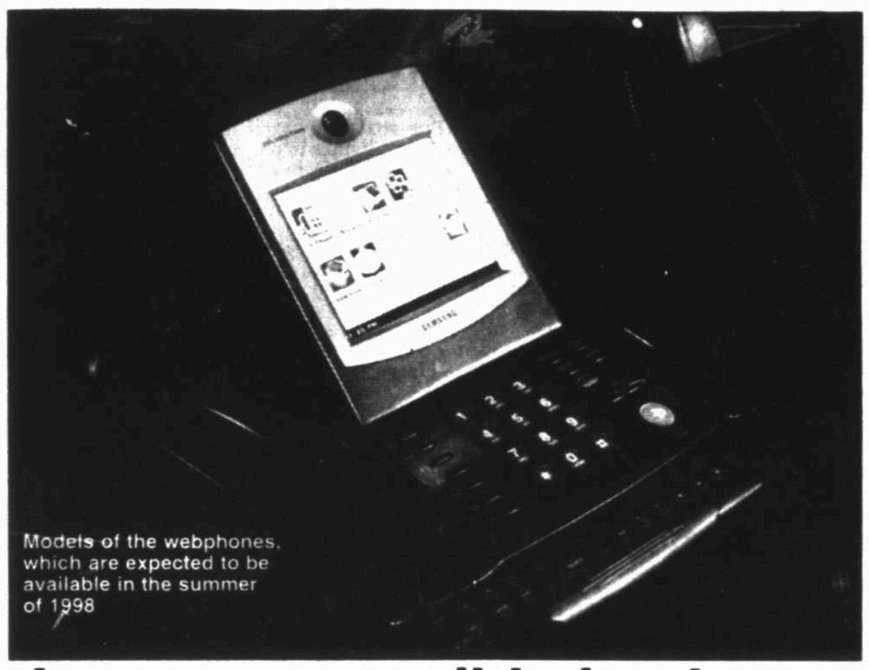

Faced with the dire implications of such a scenario, the entertainment industry is pressing Congress to quickly approve two international treaties to strengthen copyright enforcement on the Internet. At stake, say proponents, are billions of dollars in potential lost revenues for the entertainment industry, including everyone from songwriters to movie producers.

"As technology speeds forward, the day is coming when you will be able to download a movie onto your home computer," said Rich Taylor, a spokesman for the Motion Picture Association of America. "We need copyright protection so operators of foreign Websites won't be able to provide (American) movies with the click of a mouse to anyone with a computer and a credit card number."

Representatives of the United States and 160 other countries who are members of the World Intellectual Properties Organization signed treaties in Geneva last December that extend copyrights to the Internet and strengthen copyright laws in many foreign countries. Congress will debate whether to ratify the treaties when it returns after Labor Day.

Ratification would not significantly change the already stringent U.S. copyright laws. But along with the treaties, the Clinton administration

Java now possible in phones

By Heather Green
N.Y. Times News Service

Sun Microsystems Inc. said Alcatel Alsthom SA, Northern Telecom Ltd. and Samsung Corp. will use the Java language in screen phones to connect to the Internet and send e-mail, expanding the type of devices that use Java.

The three phone makers will use Java technology called PersonalJava, which is specially designed by Sun for smaller computer devices such as TV set-top boxes, mobile phones or faxes. Java can be used to write programs for a variety of devices and operating systems, doing away with the need to rewrite programs for each device.

Sun is proposing Java as a more flexible alternative to software that runs on Microsoft Corp.'s Windows operating system. Sun is pushing on many fronts to get Java adopted on a range of devices, from "smart cards" to consumer electronics equipment to heavy-duty network computers.

"All the telephone companies are looking for new ways to differentiate themselves and make it easier to deliver a wider range of devices and services," said Chris Thompson, an analyst at Dataquest Inc. "This is one of the first areas where you will see Java move out of the computing environment into consumer appliances."

For the phone makers, using Java is designed to cut down on the number of

Ask the Doctor

By Dr. Emilio Bombay
N.Y. Times News Service

Dear Dr. Bombay: What is the law regarding the viewing of sexually explicit material on the Internet? I don't want to get dragged off to jail by the cyber-police. — Not a pervert

Dear Not: Well, I'm no lawyer, but I'd say it's pretty much legal until your mother catches you. Actually, in a rebuke to all those well-meaning dunderheads in Congress who seem to think this whole First Amendment thing has gotten way out of hand, last June the Supreme Court said the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of speech extends to the Internet. But before you go shooting off any fireworks and singing "God Bless America," here's something to consider: Just because it's now a God-given right to be able to post pictures of barnyard animals in compromising positions on the Internet doesn't mean it's legal for you to collect them. If your community outlaws, say, pictures of Pamela Anderson's unnaturally large and obviously surgically enhanced lips, your collection of lip pix is contraband, and you could be looking at hard time.

Even if you don't consciously save all the dirty pictures you accidentally come across on your Web wanderings, most of them are probably still in your hard-drive cache, waiting for some ambitious prosecutor who wants to hear his name on CNN. The cache saves graphics and stuff from any Web page you visit so your browser doesn't take so long to display it the next time you visit. If you think you have things you shouldn't have in there — purely by accident, of course — it never hurts to empty it, just in case the ACLU doesn't think your case will get enough good publicity to bother with it. And don't expect Woody Harrelson to play you in the movie.

And, if you ARE a perv, and you think that ruling gives you the right to collect patently illegal smut like child porn, just send me your address and I'll come over and perform a little reprogramming your computer will never forget.

Oh, and just to heighten the paranoia level a bit, any time you visit a Web page — any page — the geeks in charge get a pretty good snapshot of who you are and where you are, and your own Internet provider probably has the capability of tracking exactly where you visit and what you look at while you're there.

And your mother knows what you're doing, too. You're not fooling anybody when you close that door.

Dear Dr. Bombay: Somehow my computer has come up with four cache files for Internet Explorer. Accessing the files through normal means and deleting them works normally. America Online said it was a Microsoft problem and had me reload MSIE three times. — Frustrated

Dear Frustrated: Maybe it was a really slow day on the tech support desk and they thought they had a live one. Did they also ask you if your refrigerator was running?

Let's give them the benefit of the doubt and just say they didn't know what they were talking about. Because everything is working the way it's supposed to, you don't really have a problem. Who cares if it's one cache file or four? I have those same four files, and I never considered it unusual. But then I always blindly accept the way any Microsoft product operates, exactly as federal law requires.

Oh, and do you have Prince Albert in a can?

QUESTION AUTHORITY

When in cyberspace, be skeptical of experts

By Dwight Silverman
N.Y. Times News Service

There's an old saying born in the rebellious era of the 1960s: Question authority.

It originally applied to "the Establishment," but in the high-tech '90s, it's time to give it a different spin.

If something is sent to you by e-mail, or posted on the World Wide Web, and it has the ring of authority, question it.

In cyberspace, anyone can be a publisher. Got a PC, enough cash for an Internet account, e-mail software, some time to kill and an axe to grind? You can reach hundreds, thousands, maybe millions.

And because what's dispatched is in written form, it can have the ring of authority — even if there's not a shred of truth to it.

E-mail has become the poor man's printing press. Like the old game of gossip, e-mail can take on a life of its own.

If you write something interesting — or find something cool — and send it via e-mail to a friend, your friend might opt to pass it on. He or she might send it to a half-dozen other people, each of whom might forward it on to more folks. And so on ...

That's what happened several weeks ago to a column written by Chicago Tribune staffer Mary Schmich. Someone grabbed a column of hers, in which she addressed college graduates in a fantasy commencement address, and dispatched it across the Net via e-mail. But before they hit the "Send" button, they stripped her name off it and added a precede indicating it was a speech given by novelist Kurt Vonnegut at a Massachusetts Institute of Technology graduation ceremony.

The column, which was very funny, was passed on in chain-letter fashion.

I even got a copy of it, but before I sent it, I put a note on it warning that it may or may not be what it appears to be.

That's too often the case with

91-year-old takes 1st computer class

By LoAna M. Gonzales

WACO — Technology and the computer age aren't leaving Bill Garrison behind.

At 91, this grandfather is taking his first computer class at McLennan Community College so he can make use of his own new computer and keep up with grandchildren who live everywhere from Louisiana to New Mexico.

"That's what I'm really interested in," Garrison said about e-mail and other Internet features.

As for returning to school after decades of not stepping foot in a classroom, Garrison had a little help from his daughter.

"It was sort of his idea," said Billie Thibodeau, 67, who is taking the class with her father.

COPYRIGHT: Supporters say Congress must ratify quickly to set example for other countries sent so-called "enabling legislation" — laws that implement the treaty — that would make it illegal to manufacture or sell devices that circumvent technology to protect copyrighted materials in cyberspace.

In early September, the House and Senate committees will hold hearings on the treaties and legislation. Supporters say it is important for Congress to quickly ratify the treaties as an example to other countries who have yet to ratify it.

Congressional approval is the "number one priority" of the recording industry, said Sites.

Copyrights provide an economic foundation for the entertainment industry. For instance, songwriters are paid royalties by radio stations for broadcasting their copyrighted musical works. Because of copyrights, it is illegal to make and sell an unauthorized audio duplicate of a commercial CD or a video copy of a movie.

Of course, illegal copies are made and sold — especially in foreign countries where copyrights are not as protective as in the United States. Such international "piracy" currently costs American creators an estimated $15 billion a year in lost sales, according to the RIAA.

The Internet takes the potential for piracy to a new level. Songwriters can easily be denied royalties when their works are played or downloaded from musical archives Websites — popular around campuses where students have access to the college computer server. Artists and record companies lose out when fans copy CDs from the Internet rather than buy them in stores.

"These treaties are crucial to promoting electronic commerce and protecting U.S. works from international piracy," said Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

However, segments of the computer industry itself are wary of the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) treaties and the proposed congressional legislation.

High-tech electronic manufacturers warn that outlawing devices to circumvent Internet copyright protections could thwart development of new products with legal uses.

Under WIPO-like legislation, the VCR would never have been developed because it could be used to illegally duplicate copyrighted movies, said Gary Shapiro, president of the Consumer Electronics Manufacturers Association, which represents the makers of high-tech hardware.

"Instead of focusing on conduct (by copyright violators), all of a sudden machines themselves are bad guys," said Shapiro.

Meanwhile, Internet access providers ranging from AT&T to America Online want to be excluded from the treaty's copyright violations, arguing that they are merely conduits and not responsible for any piracy conducted by independent Website operators.

Legislation providing such an exemption has been introduced by Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property. A supporter of the overall treaties, Coble said the bill is "in response to concerns raised by a number of online services and Internet access providers" and is "meant to be a new starting point for discussion."

Other segments of the computer industry — software creators and publishers — have joined the entertainment groups to form the Creative Incentive Coalition and lobby for ratification of the treaties and passage of tough enabling legislation.

"Strong copyright protection for creative works...is a critical component to a flourishing Internet," said Robert Holleyman, president of the Business Software Alliance, which represents Microsoft and other software manufacturers.

The entertainment industry has already begun to search the Internet for pirates.

The Recording Industry Association of America has "people on staff surfing the Net constantly" to find musical archives Websites where copyright laws are being broken, said Sites. This summer, record companies filed federal lawsuits against the operators of three such Internet sites. Illustrating the problems of tracking down Internet pirates, however, the suits were against unknown defendants — that is, the people behind the Websites who couldn't be tracked down in cyberspace.

Such Website operators "can be literally anywhere in the world," explained Sites. "There are already hundreds of musical archives sites getting thousands of hits every day."

While the principles of the WIPO treaty are widely supported in Congress, the details of implementation will likely spark conflict.

In banning devices that could be used to circumvent technology to protect Internet copyrights, the laws could prevent development of new products and hurt U.S. electronic firms competing in a global marketplace, said Shapiro.

"We don't know what will be invented in the future," he said. "I don't think it will be enacted by Congress with this type of language."

Coble's exemption for Internet access providers is opposed by the creators of software, movies and music.

"It is a bad bill," said Valenti. "It strips copyright owners of the safeguards they must have to protect their property. And at the same time, it gives the online service providers the keys to the kingdom."

With such glamorous players involved, the upcoming fight promises to be entertaining.

Educational sites abound on the Web

By Shelly Freierman
N.Y. Times News Service

It is back-to-school time once again, even for adults who have long left the classroom.

Those seeking intellectual fulfillment can look to the Internet. Start at school: Most universities and colleges offer continuing-education programs for adults who are not working toward degrees, and most have information about these programs on their home pages.

Yahoo has a subcategory for continuing education with 219 listings, but you can narrow your search. Two basic directories for university links are Ecola's College Locator and College and University home pages. Both have an alphabetical list and a breakdown by state for education pages.

Find That School is another good site, with links to adult education and business schools; music, art and culinary schools, and alphabetical and geographical directories.

But none of these directories is comprehensive, so remember to check the home pages focused on your city. Using the broad criterion of education to search a city's site should yield links to area institutions of higher learning in addition to those cultural institutions, museums, fine-arts organizations and local Y's that offer classes.

If the continuing education being sought involves nonacademic studies like garden design, ceramics or boat building, look for the home pages of associations of museums, arts organizations and botanical gardens.

One informative and fun directory is the Education Index, where the host is a cartoon Web Weasel. This site has a chat room and links to pages organized by life stages, from preschool through continuing education.

But what make Education Index special are its eclectic links to pages indexed by subject — 55 of them, from agriculture to women's studies. This may help one decide what courses to take, and in any case it makes for some very enjoyable browsing.

For instance, the literature section has links to literary reviews and quarterlies, pages devoted to C.S. Lewis and Jane Austen, translations of Greek and Roman classics, dictionaries and reference material, and of course the complete Shakespeare.

A large number of continuing-education sites on the Internet are devoted to distance learning, a contemporary Internet version in some ways of the correspondence schools of the 1950s. As with in-classroom continuing education, courses are usually offered by universities and colleges.

Many of the pages that offer information on distance learning are designed for education professionals. These include the Comprehensive Distance Education List of Resources, which has links to universities, arts organizations and private institutions offering classes in addition to reference material and educational sources, and the University Continuing Education Association page, which has distance-learning and adult-education listings by state.

Caso's Internet University has links to universities that provide online education and to related World Wide Web sites and news groups. There is also a list of courses by subject. Among the 24 courses listed under history are The History of Russia: 1825 to the Present, and The History of Aviation. When one calls up a course title, there is a description, fee information and a link to the university offering the course.

For those not quite sure that electronic-based education is for them, a worthwhile link might be on Distance Learning on the Net, under the section for colleges and universities (examples of online courses and administration).

The home page for Commentary on Art, a course offered through the Altoona campus of Pennsylvania State University and taught by Jerrold Maddox, is promoted as a service to educators. It also provides a good idea of what to expect in this distance-learning course.

There is an introduction and a link to a Rembrandt exhibition at a gallery of the Palmer Museum of Art at Penn State. The site explains the use of Internet browsers, hypertext links, news groups and a chat room that fills in as an electronic classroom. There are also lists of reading material, term-paper requirements and a schedule of Washington field trips.

Feeling a little overwhelmed? There's yet another way to learn, using slightly less technology: television. You can visit PBS Adult Service Online, which offers college and university classes built around documentaries. So grab that remote, microwave that popcorn and hit those — er — books.

programs they need to write. For Sun, wider use of Java can is expected to spur sales of servers, which are central network computers used to relay and store Java programs.

Northern Telecom, Alcatel and Samsun are expected to announce that they will introduce their screen phones with Java by the middle of next year, Sun said.

Sun will announce the use of Java in screen phones at the Java Internet Business Expo tomorrow in New York, where it is promoting the computer language to corporations, although there is still a lack of sophisticated programs written in Java.

Java programs can be stored in a central computer and sent to users over a network when needed. The language was introduced about 2 1/2 years ago.

SENIOR: Man plans to continue upgrade

(From 1C)

"Now I'm just trying to keep up with my children and my father," she added with a chuckle.

The father-daughter team is enrolled in "Keyboarding 1" through MCC's Continuing Education program. Their instructor, Pat Bliss, couldn't be more pleased to have Garrison as the oldest student she's ever taught.

"I just think he's wonderful," she said. "And I think it's awesome that he's out here doing this."

Garrison said he had heard about e-mail, but he didn't dream he'd be getting on-line with his own computer.

"I thought that was great," he said of communicating via the Internet. "But I had no idea I was gonna get a computer."

Recently, however, his granddaughter and her husband from Plano surprised Garrison with a computer of his own.

"They said, 'Now you learn how to work it,'" Garrison recalled of those famous last words.

Since then, he's been determined to learn the ins and outs of computers.

And "Keyboarding 1" is only the first in a series of classes he hopes to take.

Bliss said keyboarding is an ideal place to start because it helps students overcome any fears they might have about touching and working on computers.

"He wants to get into working with e-mail and they need keyboarding before micro-computers," Bliss said of Garrison's next class to take.

She added that more and more seniors are getting into computers and the Internet. "They've got the time and the interest is there."

And tapping into the information superhighway can be accomplished by just about anybody, regardless of age or physical limitations.

Garrison, who worked for a rubber company, then for Lewis Shoes before retiring in 1984, said he is already pretty familiar with one particular aspect of the computer world — games.

His daughter said he is especially fond of playing solitaire.

"I've got that down pretty good," Garrison said with a grin. "But that can take up a lot of time."

He plans to continue expanding his computer knowledge, and the fact that he's just nine years shy of being 100 years old hasn't stopped his quest for knowledge.

In fact, Garrison said people should never be afraid to keep learning.

"Go for it," he said. "Get all the learning you can whether you're young or old."

Thibodeau agreed. "If Dad and I can do it, anybody can do it."

AUTHORITY: MS Office documents, programs can carry fatal viruses

(From 1C)

e-mail pronouncements sent across the Net. In fact, Internet history is chock full of these incidents, and many of them seem to be reborn from time to time.

Even people who know better get taken. Remember Pierre Salinger, who last year announced that he had a document proving that TWA Flight 800 was shot down by a Navy missile? That "document" turned out to be an e-mail hoax that had been floating around the Net for weeks.

One of the most tenacious hoaxes involves a child dying of cancer. The e-mail announces that some well-known charitable group — such as the American Cancer Society or the Red Cross — will donate a small amount toward the child's treatment for each message sent to a specific e-mail address.

Not only is this not true, it can cause genuine harm if the e-mail address listed in the message exists. Imagine thousands of people, each thinking they are doing something nice for someone, sending a message to that address. The result is a fatally clogged e-mailbox.

Another common hoax is the e-mail virus. The message warns recipients not to open or read any e-mail with a specific name, such as Good Times, Pen Pal, Deeyenda, Irina and Ghost.

You can't get a virus just from reading an e-mail message, though there's an inside joke implicit here. The message itself is a virus, replicating from computer to computer thanks to the Internet clueless who pass it on.

One caveat, though: You "can" get a virus from infected programs or "Word" and "Excel" documents attached to e-mail. Don't run any programs, or launch any Microsoft Office documents, sent to you via e-mail by someone you don't know.

Sometimes urban legends get turned into e-mail hoaxes.

One message warns travelers to beware of a band of scalpel-wielding criminals who harvest organs from tourists and traveling business types.

The e-mail tells of a man who is drugged and wakes to find himself lying in a bathtub filled with ice cubes and missing one kidney.

How can you avoid being taken in by one of these hoaxes? In general, if you receive some kind of call to action that's full of e-mail headers indicating it's been passed on by lots of people, it's probably a hoax.

Either check it out before passing it on, or just delete it.

There are several Web sites devoted to debunking Net-based hoaxes. My favorite is Don't Spread That Hoax at http://www.nonprofit.net/hoax/hoax.html.

SURVEY: Software sales put at $12 billion

(From 1C)

The rush to connect to the Web also will generate $12.2 billion in software and service sales this year, up 60 percent from $7.5 billion a year ago, the study said. By 2001, this market will reach $32.2 billion, the study said.

Hordes of businesses are hooking up to the Net to buy components, sell their products and provide customer service.

For example, the automotive industry depends greatly on private networks that link the Big Three carmakers with their parts suppliers and dealerships.

Probably the biggest user of the Internet is Cisco Systems, a San Jose maker of computer networking products. Cisco sells more than $5 million worth of products a day over the Net to Fortune 500 companies, resellers and partners. That accounts for about a third of the company's $6 billion in annual sales. That's up markedly from only 4 percent of its $4 billion in overall sales a year ago.

"More than 138,000 software products were downloaded from our site in July," a Cisco spokesman said. "It is absolutely incredible. By just distributing software over the Net, we save more than $130 million in operational costs this year."

Dell Computer is on pace to sell about $500 million worth of PCs over the Net this year, out of total sales of around $10 billion.

By using the global computer network, Cisco and Dell said they are saving millions of dollars a year in customer sales and support.

While Dataquest's estimates exceed those of other recent studies, Internet experts don't doubt them. "It's not surprising," said David Simons, managing director of Digital Video Investments in New York. "The Internet brings an instant standard of connectivity that links up all machines and businesses across the planet."

Thousands march in New York to protest police brutality

NEW YORK (AP) — Waving toilet plungers and denouncing Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, about 7,000 angry but peaceful protesters marched Friday on City Hall with twin messages: zero tolerance for police brutality and justice for the Haitian immigrant allegedly sodomized by officers.

The march, organized by Haitian community groups, shut down the Brooklyn Bridge and part of Broadway as demonstrators descended on lower Manhattan to protest the Aug. 9 attack on Abner Louima, a Haitian immigrant.

The crowd waved signs demanding "Giuliani Must Go!" and called the crime-busting mayor "Brutaliani."

"We're here to make sure the Louima family gets justice," said DeLacy Davis, an East Orange, N.J., police officer. "We're here to send a message to America that people of color will not sit idly by when someone is brutalized."

There were hundreds of police officers in riot gear around City Hall, but protesters were well-behaved. Police reported no arrests.

"The problem is the police think they are the only ones that count — no one else," said demonstrator Jean Bernard, a toilet plunger in one hand and a Haitian flag in the other.

Prosecutors say Louima was beaten and sodomized with a stick — perhaps a plunger handle — in a Brooklyn stationhouse bathroom. Four white police officers have been charged in what prosecutors say was a racially motivated attack.

Giuliani, who is up for re-election in November, has rejected assertions that stepped-up policing has encouraged police brutality, especially against minorities. He has called the Louima case an isolated instance involving bad cops.

At a news conference following the protest, Giuliani praised members of the police department for showing restraint in the face of taunts from a small number of demonstrators.

"At the extreme, this became a free-for-all police-bashing rally," the mayor said.

At the same time, he congratulated the "overwhelming number" of marchers who behaved peacefully.

They were "making a point they have every single right to make," the mayor said.

Louima, 30, was "resting comfortably" Friday in the surgical intensive care unit at Brooklyn Hospital, a half block off the marchers' route. He underwent surgery late Thursday for a bowel obstruction but was "alert" when the march started, said family physician Dr. Jean Claude Compas.

Louima suffered a ruptured bladder and colon in the attack, when a stick was allegedly shoved into his rectum. It then was stuck into his mouth, breaking several teeth, prosecutors say.

He has filed a $55 million civil suit against the city, although his attorneys say they will amend that to seek $465 million.

UP locomotives removed from service

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad could face fines for violations when a 10-day investigation of its safety practices is over, federal officials said Friday.

A team of about 80 agents inspecting UP already had removed less than 10 of the Omaha-based railroad's locomotives from service because of safety violations, Federal Railroad Administration spokesman Jim Gower said Friday.

"We're seriously concerned about safety on the Union Pacific railroad," Gower said. "Our inspectors will be there over the holiday weekend. The 10-day period that ends Wednesday could be extended."

As part of the investigation, federal inspectors are talking to crew members and watching the railroad's 900-plus dispatchers in 10 cities.

The scrutiny comes after seven people died in three Union Pacific crashes in the past three months.

$5.5-million award from ABC to Food Lion cut to $315,000

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Capital Cities-ABC Inc. will have to pay Food Lion only $315,000 rather than the $5.5 million jury award for a hidden-camera expose that accused the grocery chain of selling rat-gnawed cheese and rotting meat, a federal judge ruled Friday.

In a 34-page ruling, U.S. District Judge Carlton Tilley gave the company 14 days to accept the reduction or else he said he would order a retrial of the punitive damages phase of the trial.

In January, a jury awarded Food Lion $1,402 in compensatory damages for fraud, trespass and breach of loyalty for the report that aired Nov. 5, 1992, on ABC's "PrimeTime Live." The money was for the cost of hiring and paying two ABC producers who got jobs in Food Lion stores in North Carolina and South Carolina and then wore spy cameras and hidden recorders.

The same jury awarded Food Lion $5.5 million in punitive damages because ABC representatives lied in order to videotape evidence.

"The ratio of overall punitive damage award assessed against Capital Cities-ABC Inc. to the compensatory damage award is approximately 2,857 to one. A ratio of 2,857 to one is certainly suspect," Tilley wrote.

Food Lion called the decision a victory, because "the important principles involved in this case have been upheld by today's ruling."

ABC defended its actions.

"By going undercover and telling a vital story about Food Lion's unsanitary food handling practices, we were following a great tradition of American journalism," ABC said in a statement. "We continue to stand behind the talented journalists who reported this important story."

Agriculture secretary seeks authority to recall tainted meat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman is seeking broader authority to recall tainted meat and to fine plants that violate food safety laws.

On the heels of an E. coli outbreak that forced a massive recall of ground beef, Glickman proposed legislation Friday that would allow $100,000 civil fines and improve his agency's ability to shut down plants that willfully or repeatedly violate meat safety laws.

The safety of other foods is overseen by the Food and Drug Administration, which said it will seek the same new powers from Congress.

"They're a persuasive incentive to do things safely from the start, to be extra careful to avoid the high-risk practices that trigger these actions," Glickman said of his proposals.

The Agriculture department, which oversees the safety of beef, pork and poultry, cannot order recalls under current law. Instead, it can send out contaminated-food warnings and work with private companies to encourage recalls.

The agency also can close plants by withdrawing its inspectors. But Glickman said that current "atomic bomb authority" does not allow for varying degrees of oversight.

"If the only power I have is to shut down a plant, then it will be much more difficult for me — or really for them — to work through the gradations of food safety problems that may exist at a plant," he said.

Several industry groups were quick to criticize the proposals, saying the government already has a wide range of enforcement tools, from detaining products and preventing shipments to seeking criminal penalties.

"The current system has been effective in accomplishing this for decades," said Dane Bernard of the National Food Processors Association. "USDA, as well as the Food and Drug Administration, already has all the power it needs to assure that foods are recalled if necessary."

But Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the change would improve food safety. "Closing a plant ... can leave tainted product on the shelves," he said. "Mandatory recall is the fastest way to get products off the shelves."

If Congress enacted the proposal into law, Glickman said, his agency still would try to first work voluntarily with food companies. "The difference is, in those circumstances where they refuse, we can order the recall, and that is critical," he said.

Glickman called for such authority last week after the E. coli outbreak forced Hudson Foods Inc. to recall 25 million pounds of ground beef processed at a plant in Columbus, Neb. The plant has closed temporarily.

'If the only power I have is to shut down a plant, then it will be much more difficult for me ... to work through the gradations of food safety problems that may exist at a plant.'
— Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman

Also Friday, agriculture officials said their continuing investigation of the Hudson plant indicates that some of the contamination there may have occurred earlier than previously thought.

Two of the 16 illnesses linked to the outbreak have been traced to hamburger produced sometime in early May, said Tom Billy, administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service. Investigators still were trying to pin down the exact dates, he said.

Grace Presbyterian's programs are for all ages

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Grace Presbyterian, with a congregation of 300, also takes full advantage of the faith's belief in infant baptism.

Opportunity for involvement and fellowship abounds at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield. From adult Bible studies to youth classes and five choirs, the church puts a high priority on congregant participation.

Celebration, the church's bell choir, will commemorate its 10th anniversary Sunday evening, Oct. 5, with a music program entitled, "When In Our Music God Is Glorified." All five choirs will unite for the program.

Grace Presbyterian, with a congregation of 300, also takes full advantage of the faith's belief in infant baptism.

"I think it's one of the things we value here," said Rev. Bill Clark, who has led the church for five years. "We take that pledge very seriously to raise our children in the church and to teach them about Jesus. We have a number of adults of all ages who are involved in our children's ministry."

Clark and his wife, Jill, have two children: a son, Christopher, and daughter, Annie; a third child is on the way.

Beginning next Friday, Sept. 5, the church will for the third year in a row play host to MOPS, or Mothers of Preschoolers, an organization of support and fellowship for mothers who have prekindergarten children.

"The group meets twice a month on Friday mornings from 9-11," Clark said. "It is a nationally chartered o organization and we have the only charter in Midland.

Rev. Clark said interested women can sign up at the church or call for more information. Child care is provided during the meetings and MOPS is open to anyone in Midland.

"The women meet and hear a presentation on raising children and building a stronger family. They also have a small group time, visit with one another, respond to the presentation and have a craft time."

Other opportunities for involvement at Grace Presbyterian include:

-- Adult Bible Study. A 30-week overview each Sunday morning at 9:30 a.m.

-- Youth Club Program. A program of Bible study and character building for children from kindergarten through 6th grade. The program also includes choir, crafts and dinner. The Youth Club begins Sept. 24 and will be conducted on Wednesday nights.

-- Also on Wednesday nights, an adult class taught by Jeff Hewett, who will focus on C.S. Lewis's "The Screwtape Letters," a fictional perspective of a junior devil who consults with a senior devil on how to tempt man and keep him from Christ. Hewett's discussion series begins Sept. 10 at 6:45 p.m.

-- Youth Ministry Program. Serving kids from grades 7-12, the program is Sundays from 4-6 p.m. Fellowship and devotional time is featured, plus each summer, the group travels to Camp Chimney Springs, outside of Cloudcroft, N.M.

-- A Prayer Ministry. The prayer chain ministry, which prays for the concerns and celebrations of the church, is 41 members strong.

-- Supper Club. Members meet in other members' homes once a month for a meal and fellowship.

Grace Presbyterian is actively involved in or supports mission work in Piedras Negras, Mexico; and, in Midland, St. Andrews Mission, Habitat for Humanity and Christmas in April.

"We have a congregation that is open to visitors and is very hospitable," Rev. Clark said. "We value that. Many of our members have worked in the petroleum and oil industry and they know what it's like to be in new environments. It's a wonderful ministry of hospitality here."

Church school is Sundays at 9:30 a.m. Worship services are 11 a.m.

Judge strikes down parental consent for prescriptions law as unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A new state law requiring minors to get parental consent before obtaining state-paid birth control and other prescription drugs was declared unconstitutional Friday.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown blocked Texas health officials from enforcing the law, which was tucked into the state budget passed by the 1997 Legislature.

The budget, which takes effect Monday, included numerous so-called "riders," special provisions that describe how money is to be spent.

But the parental consent provision goes beyond detailing expenditures and violates a state constitution's prohibition on amending or repealing general law through the budget bill, McCown ruled.

The state Human Resources Code requires the Texas Department of Health to seek federal funds and follow federal law, he wrote. Federal law prohibits requiring parental consent for federally funded family planning services.

The parental consent provision would have barred the state agency from doing what the Human Resources Code requires, McCown wrote. The Texas Department of Health had been advised that if the law were implemented, Texas would be ineligible for $93 million in federal funds.

His decision was cheered by Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas Inc., which challenged the law.

"We think it's a victory for teens and good medicine and good public health policy, because teens will continue to receive confidential family planning services and treatment for sexually transmitted infections," said Susan Nenney, a vice president of the group.

"That's our first priority, to get word out to young men and women they can continue to receive services," she said.

Bill Price of the anti-abortion Texans United for Life blasted the ruling.

"It's outrageous for a solitary judge to override the wishes of the elected representatives of the people, and we think that his decision will be overturned on appeal," Price said.

"This is just another example of their (Planned Parenthood's) philosophy that the less parents know about their children, the better, and we think this is a belief that most Texans reject."

Ms. Nenney said those who oppose abortion should support family planning as "the real-life way to reduce the number of abortions."

Price said, "Since 1972, Planned Parenthood has been, getting I don't know how many millions of dollars to distribute prescriptive drugs and contraceptives to teenagers, and the teen pregnancy rate in this state still is among the highest in the nation. ... Obviously simply distributing contraceptives without their parents' consent is not the answer to this problem."

Ron Dusek of the Texas attorney general's office said a decision hasn't been made on appealing. The state has 30 days to decide.

In his decision, Judge McCown called the large number of riders in the state budget a matter "of grave concern."

Allstate to refund consumers $42.7 million

■ An estimated 750,000 consumers allegedly overcharged for auto liability policies will receive checks or credits.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — An estimated 750,000 consumers will receive $42.7 million from three Allstate insurance companies in the largest refund ever ordered by the Texas Department of Insurance against an automobile insurer.

Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer signed the agreement Friday, ordering refunds for consumers allegedly overcharged for auto liability policies.

"I'm pleased that Allstate agreed to end this controversy by reducing its rates and refunding the amounts its policyholders were overcharged," Bomer said.

"I want the industry to understand clearly that the Texas Department of Insurance will be challenging rate filings which are not accurate or in compliance with the law," he said.

The refunds will range from $5 to $100, depending on the amount of premiums paid and duration of the coverage.

Customers will receive refunds either as checks or as credits against premiums for current or renewal policies. Former policyholders will receive checks.

Allstate is the state's third-largest personal auto insurance company, with approximately 14 percent of the market.

The action affects customers of Allstate Insurance Company, Allstate Indemnity and Allstate Property & Casualty purchasing auto insurance policies between June 30, 1995 and Sept. 8, 1997. In agreeing to the order, Allstate denied any violation of state insurance laws.

"Allstate believes this settlement is in the best interest of our customers, employees and shareholders," said company spokeswoman Sharon Cooper in Dallas.

"It is a clear example of why differences between insurance companies and regulators should be resolved within the (insurance department) and not through costly, unnecessary litigation. The settlement represents Allstate's strong commitment to work with TDI on issues that arise in the normal course of business," she said.

Friday's order ended a case that began when the department found what it said were discrepancies in auto liability rates filed by Allstate in 1995 and 1996.

The agency charged that the rates were excessive for several reasons, including a built-in subsidy for auto liability policies the Allstate companies issued to participants in the state's high-risk plan, and use of a smaller tort reform rate reduction factor than required by insurance department rules.

Governor's approval ratings remain high

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Most Texans still like Gov. George W. Bush, but many people didn't know enough about his property tax relief plan to know why it failed in the Legislature, the latest Texas Poll indicates.

People with an opinion blamed lawmakers more than the Republican governor for Bush's inability to trade higher state taxes for major reductions in school property taxes.

But almost half of the survey's respondents didn't know who to blame.

Bush said he didn't want to blame anybody because "we did get a $1 billion (tax) cut" with higher homestead exemptions for homeowners.

In January, Bush proposed a property tax cut worth $2.8 billion per year that would have been funded through budgetary savings, a half-cent per dollar increase in the state sales tax and a new business activity tax.

But the Legislature rejected the governor's plan and failed to agree on an alternative that would have raised state taxes. Eventually, lawmakers approved a $10,000 increase in the school homestead exemption that will save the average homeowner about $12 a month.

Legislators appropriated $1 billion in budgetary savings over the next two years to reimburse school districts for revenue they will lose through the higher homestead exemptions. Voters approved the proposal earlier this month.

Sixty-eight percent of 1,005 Texans surveyed by phone Aug. 11-25 rated Bush's job performance as "excellent" or "good." Twenty-two percent said the governor was doing an "only fair" or "poor" job, and 10 percent offered no opinion.

The survey results were similar to strong approval ratings that Bush has received during most of his administration. Only in the spring 1995 Texas Poll, conducted soon after Bush took office, was the governor's approval rating below 50 percent. It was 49 percent then, with a 27 percent disapproval rating.

The governor, who will seek re-election next year and is considered a potential presidential candidate in 2000, said he was "honored" by his continued high job-performance ratings.

"I will continue to work hard for a better Texas," he said.

In the new poll, 86 percent of Republicans, 67 percent of independents and 57 percent of Democrats approve of Bush's job performance.

Seventy-one percent of men and 64 percent of women like the work he is doing.

Bush's lowest rating — a 40 percent approval — was among blacks, compared to 71 percent among whites and 56 percent among Hispanics.

SATURDAY, AUG. 30, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 30, 1997:
You might be overwhelmed by what is on your plate. Work and daily living make unusual demands of your time. In the long run, your effort pays off. You might get a job promotion or pay raise that affects your professional status. You might be more expressive than you have been. Be sensitive to the feelings of others. If you are single, romance is more likely to occur in 1998. It could be a special relationship. If attached, make important plans for the coming year together. LEO helps you through hard times.

Groom-to-be says Streisand-Brolin wedding should be late this winter

NEW YORK — Listen for the James Brolin-Barbra Streisand wedding bells this winter, the giddy groom-to-be told the New York Post in Friday's edition.

Brolin is shooting a TV series, "Pensacola: Wings of Gold," in San Diego and told the newspaper the wedding will have to wait until he's finished.

"I'd like to make a bride out of (Streisand) ... and then go on a good honeymoon," he said. "And I don't know how we're going to do that until we wrap up here in February or March."

Streisand's publicist, Dick Guttman, said, "I fully believe they have no immediate plans, although they do have plans to marry."

Brolin, 57, said he and Streisand, 55, are inseparable.

"I feel like I've been married to her since the day we sat down together a year and two months ago," Brolin said. "The honeymoon should be over by now, but I just can't stand to be away from her."

OTTAWA — There's a new credit on k.d. lang's resume: co-writer of a Rolling Stones' song.

Lang and her writing partner Ben Mink will receive credit on the Stones' new single "Anybody Seen My Baby" after someone in the Stones camp noticed the song bears a resemblance to lang's 1992 hit "Constant Craving."

When the Stones' new album, "Bridges to Babylon," arrives in stores Sept. 30, the song will be credited as a collaboration.

Through her manager, lang said, "I've always been a fan of the Rolling Stones and I take it as quite a compliment."

Said Stones spokeswoman Fran Curtis: "The Rolling Stones wanted to make sure everything was absolutely handled properly."

Stones frontman Mick Jagger, through Curtis, said he admires lang, but added that he wasn't familiar with "Constant Craving."

James Brolin says he and Barbra Streisand are inseparable.

LOS ANGELES — Christian Slater won't face felony charges for going berserk at a posh condo after two days of drinking and taking drugs, the prosecutor's office said Friday.

"Based on the totality of the circumstances, we believe a felony filing was not warranted, but it should go to the city attorney for misdemeanor consideration," said Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for District Attorney Gil Garcetti.

The police officers who had to subdue the actor with a chokehold "concurred on this decision," she said. City Attorney James Hahn will review Slater's case for consideration of misdemeanor charges.

Slater, 27, was arrested Aug. 11 and battled so furiously with police that he had to be rendered unconscious with a control hold, according to police reports. He told police he had been drinking for a couple of days and had taken cocaine and heroin that day.

Police were called after Slater allegedly bit a man who tried to stop the actor from hitting his girlfriend.

VENICE, Italy — When he was alive, the many women in Marcello Mastroianni's life got along. Not anymore.

At the Venice Film Festival, Mastroianni's daughter Chiara, widow Flora Carabella and ex-companion Catherine Deneuve tried to block the screening of a four-hour documentary about the actor done by his companion of 20 years, Anna Maria Tato.

The festival refused and the movie was shown Friday. The three women reportedly tried to do the same thing at Cannes.

Mastroianni died last December and this year's Venice festival is dedicated to him. After he died, Tato said he had willed her all rights to his image, a potentially valuable commodity.

The Italian press suggests the others want to keep Tato from making money on Mastroianni now that he's gone.

SAN FRANCISCO — Mayor Willie Brown wasn't hurt when his limousine collided with a van as he made his way to a live TV appearance.

The limo, driven by a police officer, hit the van Thursday when the officer tried to make a left turn from a right lane, witnesses told police.

"He (the limousine driver) apparently didn't see the van, because he drove right in front of him," said Cookie Gambucci, who was driving behind the limo. "The van attempted to avoid a collision, went over a double-yellow line and braked," but the limousine "plowed into him," she said.

NEALS GARAGE

CHICAGO-You might say the truck engineers at Dodge have gone "back to the future."

By Neal White

The Ultimate Truck:
Dodge Ram T-Rex Concept Pickup

Dubbed "the ultimate Ram truck," the concept T-Rex has everything a truck buyer could ever want — and more. For example, a 500-horsepower V-10 engine powers the 6X6 drivetrain — that's right, six wheel drive. "This is the definitive example of what 'Dodge Ram Tough' is all about," said Leong C. Dong, manager of Chrysler's chassis/drivetrain advance vehicle engineering truck group. In case you were wondering how the vehicle got its name, T-Rex is an acronym for Technology Research EXperimental Vehicle. That's not to say it isn't as ominous as the "Jurassic Park" character that shares its name. "Our intention was to develop a personal vehicle that could out-tow, out-off-road, out-maneuver, out-haul and out-run anything in its class — or even close to its class — and with a lot more driver and passenger comfort," Dong added. The T-Rex is believed to be the world's first full-time 6X6 in a light truck designed for personal use, said Dong. Its performance features include:

- Improved maneuverability with a narrower track than dual-wheel vehicles — meaning its easier to park, garage and get through off-road trails. It also has a tighter turning circle (two feet less) than dual-wheel vehicles;
- Greater payload capacity (5,000 pounds);
- Potential towing capacity of 26,000 pounds gross combined weight;
- Improved off-road mobility with all six wheels driving;
- Improved handling on wet surfaces with less potential for hydroplaning;
- Better cornering stability on all surfaces;
- Ability to drive on all types of surfaces due to differentials providing full-time capability.

The T-Rex drivetrain allows the drivers to engage the rear four-wheels during regular driving, or activate the front axle by switching to six-wheel drive when needed. It also features an adaptive air-suspension system the includes automatic load leveling and driver-selectable ride control. "Delivering power to tandem rear axles in a light truck with limited packaging space was probably the biggest challenge," Dong said. The solution was a unique externally mounted transfer case mated to a pair of off-the-self heavy-duty light truck axles. A stock V-10 engine was also used, although it was modified to boost power from 350 horses to 500 and torque was boosted to 600 foot pounds.

Virtual Design Center

As it was, the T-Rex was conceived, designed and built in little more than a year with minimal investment. Most of the designing was done at Chrysler's "Virtual R&D Center." In this process, research engineers from every discipline — including Tier One suppliers — were involved in the process from the moment of conception. The R&D goal was defined for all members, with each contributing expertise to the concept's evolution. "This multi-faceted R& D effort minimizes the need for an extensive R&D Center and cuts millions of dollars from development costs," said Bernard I. Robertson, vice president of engineering technologies and general manager of Jeep/ Truck Operations. "This helps Chrysler bring affordable, advanced technology products to market as quickly and economically as anyone in the world," he added. In the case of T-Rex, it was conceived, designed and built with a minimal of investment in little more than one year. The T-Rex concept truck is currently undergoing performance tested at Chrysler's Chelsea, Michigan Proving Grounds. These tests are confirming the performance features designed into the vehicle, creating a "rolling test bed" for technological breakthroughs, Dong said.

Chrysler Sebring coupe scores with sporty moves, good prices

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

MADISON, Ill. -- A serpentine autocross course marked by orange plastic traffic cones wound around a vast asphalt parking lot at the new Gateway International Raceway, situated just across the Mississippi River from St. Louis. t

That's where a fleet of mid-size coupes, imports and domestics, awaited driving tests on a route containing hard corners, sweeping bends and chicane slalom swerves.

The last model one driver tested -- Chrysler's slick Sebring -- was steered around this pylon course only reluctantly because, despite the car's racy lines, my preconceived notion was that Chrysler's bread-and-butter coupe looks better standing still than it behaves in motion.

A spin around the lot prompted an instant revision in perceptions, though, because Sebring ended up running circles around its competitors and demonstrated in the short space of three tight turns executed with flat stance and no tire squeal that the Chrysler handles in a confident manner that matches its fluid styling curves.

Sebring's stunning shape, accented by softly curving corners and a bold strip of side cladding stretched below the door line, emerged two years back as 2-door coupe replacement for aged LeBaron in Chrysler's line.

Its bold nose with a recently revamped trapezoidal grille leads rearward over arching hoodline to a massive expanse of raked window glass.

From the side, Sebring presents a definite wedge-shaped profile, but the angular C pillar adds an assertive notched element toward the rear, where a flat decklid cascades crisply to the multi-colored cluster of lights and snug low fascia strip.

Inside, Sebring stocks comfort and convenience features to complement the exterior's fine lines, while beneath that windswept skin mechanical hardware like you'd find in an expensive sportster enables it to scream through a squiggly set of mountain curves or zip down a broad freeway slab.

All of these Sebring driving feats were revealed to me during recent tests, first at the autocross course and subsequently through a week of downhome drives while living out of the top model, Sebring LXi, outfitted with snappy V6 power and 4-speed automatic transmission.

That premium model, containing power controls and a leather-wrapped steering wheel, plus air conditioning and cool stereo sound, may look and feel like another expensive sports coupe but Chrysler's pricing strategy positions Sebring well below its imported and domestic rivals.

My tester Sebring LXi listed for $21,655. And at entry level, Sebring LX drops to $17,000.

The two trim-levels appear complete -- Sebring LX stocked with a sprightly twin-cam 4-cylinder engine and malleable 5-speed manual shifter, Sebring LXi packing the 2.5-liter V6 with 4-speed automatic.

What's the catch?

From my tests, I could find no catch, no flaw, no reason not to like this car.

Sebring in either engine format sounds unexpectedly quiet for a coupe. At freeway speed, you may detect only a hint of wind noise and virtually no sound stemming from the engine compartment. On a hill course, the smaller engine may protest more than the V6, but it's working harder.

Sebring's base 4-cylinder engine delivers 140 hp and can push to 7000 rpm.

This powertrain package delivers fuel figures as high as 31 miles per gallon.

Sebring's twin-cam V6 comes with cast iron block and aluminum alloy heads, four valves per cylinder and sequential multiport injection. It rises to 163 hp and mates exclusively with the 4-speed automatic.

Electronically-controlled anti-lock brakes rank as a standard item on LXi, but stand as optional on LX.

Inside, Sebring feels spacious and comfy.

The cockpit apparently was designed for an aggressive driver, with ergonomic arrangement of analog instruments and power control switches, a comfortable contoured bucket seat with firm edges to hold you in place, and a fat steering wheel that's gutsy and meaty, just what you need for dynamic driving.

Important incidentals enhance Sebring's user-friendly interior, such as the floormounted console with padded armrest, dual cupholders, twin storage sections, juice box cubbyhole and covered electrical power outlet, which I used to plug up my radar detector

The floor plan pegs twin buckets in front of a bench that works best for two, although there's space for three.

Unlike typical coupes, Sebring rides on a chassis that's long enough to leave room in the rear seat for legs.

To prove the point, I logged time in back and found my long legs fit neatly -- even comfortably -- behind the driver's front seatback. Further, I didn't need a hoist to haul myself out of that space, as the front seat slides forward enough to create sufficient space for an easy exit

No rival provides such rear seat leg space, but who buys a racy sports coupe for its back seat? In this class it's looks that count, and Sebring has that covered.

Sebring's trunk size also seems generous for a coupe, with more than 13 cubic feet of cargo room, plus a low entry level for the lip so you won't have to hike items aboard.

Peal away Sebring's sheetmetal and you'll find underpinnings that belong to Chrysler's Cirrus sedan.

Essential hardware ingredients -- a stiff chassis, independent double wishbone suspension and speed-sensitive rack and pinion steering -- become a core package shared by Cirrus and Sebring.

These two cars were styled at Chrysler's Michigan design studio, but unlike Cirrus the Sebring is produced in Illinois at the Diamond Star joint-venture plant of Chrysler and Mitsubishi, which also builds the Eagle Talon.

With its slick good looks, gutsy mechanicals which enable Sebring to perform surprising pavement tricks, and that affordable price plan, Chrysler's sporty car may carve a smile on your face if you test it -- like it did on mine.

The Ultimate Combination:
GMC Sonoma SLS Extended Cab Pickup

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

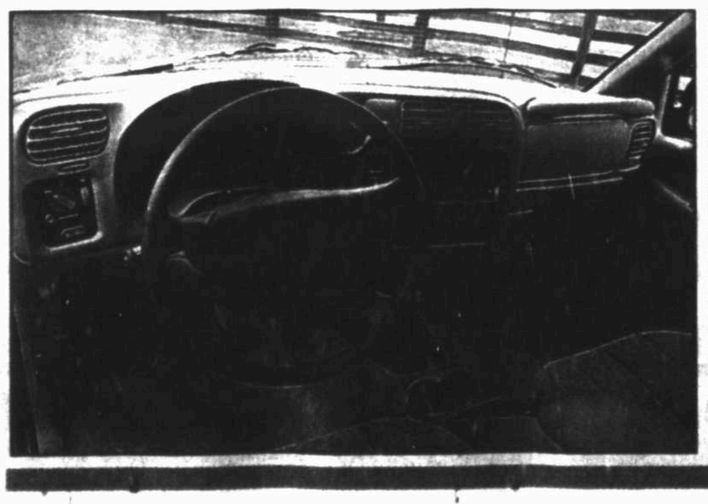

The GMC Sonoma is the mechanical twin to the Chevrolet S-10 pickup, built in GM's Linden, New Jersey and Shreveport, Louisiana assembly plants.

Wheelin'&Dealin'

Pickup trucks. The very picture of consumer utility which fueled early growth in the truck segment. With some compact trucks costing almost as much as entry level full size pickups, this part of the market has experienced softening demand. The domestic automakers, confronted with this dilemma have taken differing approaches to reignite interest in their compact pickup trucks. The folks at GMC have opted to produce and market a pocket rocket called the Sonoma SLS. If you are attracted to the utility of a compact pickup, but hanker for sports car performance, this truck is for you. I spent a week with this little wonder and was very impressed.

Steeped in Style, Fun & Fun

The rear drive Sonoma menu includes: three wheelbases, two cabs, two box lengths, three engines, two transmissions, five categories of suspension tuning and rear or four wheel drive. This truck is available in three trim levels: SL, SLS, and SLE. I drove a two wheel drive SLS extended cab equipped with the LF6 4.3L V-6 engine, bolted to a slick shifting 5-speed manual transmission. This powerplant makes 175 horsepower and 180 ft/lbs of torque @ 4,400 rpm. A 2.2L 4-cylinder engine is the base powerplant for the Sonoma line. A willing companion on long trips, this is one fun truck to drive. The powertrain was very smooth and responsive — the 5-speed manual transmission easily ranks as one of the best that I have ever driven. The suspension bits that are part of this package makes this truck a very nimble performer. The hinged third door, a $375 option, (driver's side) is a very useful device for better access to the rear of the cab. Outside, beefy P235/55R16 tires, fog lamps and air deflector coupled with the sportside body rounds out the aggressive stance. It is apparent that this Sonoma is far and away the best compact pickup setup from GM that I have ever driven. The one gripe that I have is that the molded cupholders are of limited use. Properly equipped, the GMC Sonoma can tow a trailer weighing upto 6,000 pounds.

Inside, displays and controls are excellent and easy to use, with a full set of analog gauges. The high back bucket seats are very comfortable, with the wide armrest doubling as a large covered storage are for plenty of stuff.

By the Numbers

EPA Fuel Economy for the Sonoma ranges from 23 city/30 highway for the 2.2L 4-cylinder bolted to a 5-speed manual transmission to 16 city/21 highway for the optional L35 4.3L 6-cylinder engine bolted to a four speed automatic transmission. Standard safety equipment includes: driver's side airbag, four wheel anti-lock brakes, daytime running lights, and steel side door beams. Optional safety/security items include: locking rear differential $252 and remote keyless entry $140. Restail sticker prices for the Sonoma range from $ $11,717 for the two wheel drive, regular cab to $19,864 for the four wheel drive extended cab model. Destination charge adds $510. Supplies of the Sonoma are good and GMC is offering a $1,000 customer rebate that expires on September 30th.
