Puritans Open 1st State Church Here

The first Puritan church to be established in Texas, and probably anywhere in the south, held services in its new building last Sunday at 2701 Buchanan street. This religious sect has a following of some thirty odd members here and is thoroughly organized. Their little church was finished last week and their pastor, the Rev. Sanford Owen, administered the services to his flock for the first time Sunday morning.

Since Plymouth days when a few hardy and venturesome Britishers landed on New England's shores in search of religious freedom there have been Puritans and Puritan churches close about the original landing places of the pilgrims, but their little flocks have grown but slightly and the old mother church has not progressed as rapidly as have other creeds. However, there are still many of the old faith and as they migrate further and further away from the mother churches they organize into small organizations.

Only a few Puritans have ever located in Texas and this city probably boasts of more than any other city in the state. The structure on Buchanan street is the first church building for Puritans ever built in Texas, it is declared, and is probably the first in the entire south.

Even the Puritan faith, however, has progressed with greater spiritual concentration, and today the modern Puritan believes in the doctrine of 'Jesus in the Flesh" and is reincarnated in the bodies of the Christians of the world.

Services will be conducted at the church every Sunday morning and evening and on Tuesday and Thursday nights of each week. Mrs. S. H. Norris, 2615 Buchanan street, is one of the first members of the church and has issued an invitation to everyone to attend their services.

Cyrus Bettis, Plane Crash Victim, Trained For Air At Call Field In Early Days

Army Airman Who Died Wednesday Known in Wichita Falls

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The army lost one of its crack aviators today when Lieutenant Cyrus K. Bettis died as a result of injuries received last week in an airplane crash, meningitis, which developed yesterday, preventing his recovery.

The accident in which Bettis, winner of the Pulitzer trophy high speed race last year, was injured occurred August 23, when he was on his way from Philadelphia to Selfridge Field, Mich. In a fog his plane crashed into a mountain near Bellefonte, Pa.

Cyrus K. Bettis, famed army aviator who died Wednesday in Walter Read hospital, Washington, from the effects of injuries sustained in a plane crash, was stationed in Wichita Falls for about eight months in the spring and summer of 1918, it was learned here yesterday.

Bettis received much of his early air training at Call field, now the fair grounds and which during the war was one of the government's large aerial training schools.

C. E. Clough of this city, who, during the war time training period was an officer staffoned at Call field, said yesterday that Bettis was one of the most popular and well-liked men at the field and that even then he showed evidence of the aviation ability that later lifted him to the front rank of military airmen.

Bettis, Clough asserted, was well known to a number of Wichitans, especially those who had any contact with the government's military operations at Call field.

M'FARLANE IS FIRST LOSER IN VOTE CASE

His Exceptions to All Plaintiff's Action Are Overruled

W. D. McFarlane of Graham lost the first round in his battle to keep his name on the general election ballot in November in the 78th district court Wednesday when District Judge W. W. Cook and P. A. Martin overruled his exceptions to the plaintiff's action, and declined to honor a plea in abatement filed by the secretary of state, Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg of Austin. Trial of the quo warranto proceedings instituted with allegations made against MacFarlane and their consequent effect under the law will be held Friday in the 78th district court, it was announced immediately following the ruling of the judges. This setting was made in order to expedite trial of the case and put it through trial and appellate courts as quickly as possible.

Case Transferred

The quo warranto proceedings were instituted by the county attorney of Wilbarger county, O. O. McCurdy, last week upon a complaint filed with him by W. R. Moore of Vernon, it was alleged that MacFarlane exceeded in his campaign expenditures the limit allowed by law. The case was transferred to the 78th district court Wednesday afternoon upon agreement of attorneys. The proceedings, if successful, will enjoin the secretary of state, Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg, from placing the name of MacFarlane on the general election ballot in November as the democratic nominee for the state senate, 23rd Texas district.

The efforts to quash the suit Wednesday afternoon were based first upon a plea that the suit was without the jurisdiction of a district court in that it sought to enjoin a state officer, second that the act requiring the filing of campaign expenditures and limiting such was unconstitutional; third that there had been no filing by the plaintiffs of the specific amounts which McFarlane is alleged to have spent in excess of his allowance; and fourth that the complaint filed with the Wilbarger county attorney was based on information only and not an actual knowledge of the facts.

All But One Overruled

Of the exceptions all but the third were overruled by the two district judges, and it was disposed of when counsel for the plaintiffs stated they would file a statement specifying the alleged excessive expenditures this morning.

A plea of abatement by Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg, made by Cecil and John Storey of Vernon, as they said on telegraphic instructions from her, was also overruled by the two judges. The secretary of state sought to dismiss the suit as to herself on the ground that she had never been officially notified of MacFarlane's nomination and that thus the action sought to enjoin her from doing something which she had no intention of doing or instructions to do, as yet. The plea was dated August 24, four days before the district conventions which certified MacFarlane's name to her as the nominee of the party in this district.

The defendant MacFarlane was represented Wednesday afternoon by R. E. Taylor, C. O. Taylor, Leslie Humphrey, John Storey of Vernon, and W. D. MacFarlane Sr., of Graham, his father, J. S. Dickey acted for the plaintiff.

THEFT FAILS AS 2 YOUTHS ARE CAUGHT

Elizabeth Street Woman Scares Invaders From Her Residence

A man's hat and a smoking pipe thwarted a bold day-light robbery on Elizabeth street shortly after four o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. M. Gamble, residing at 1703 Elizabeth street, hearing a noise in the front of her house, entered a front room and found herself face to face with two men, one of whom stuck a gun in her face and told her not to scream and to hand over her money and jewelry.

Mrs. Gamble didn't scream, but she did call to her husband, "Will, are you there?" The remark made the two look around, she told police, and they saw her husband's hat and a smoking pipe that he had left there not so long before. The sight apparently frightened them and they left the house, running out the front door.

Some small boys, made curious by their unusual demeanor, followed them for a while and when Officers Persky and Bentley drove up after a call a few minutes later told him that the two had gone to Collins street. They were picked up here and taken to the police station, following a partial identification, which satisfied the officers that they were the two sought.

They will be transferred to the county this morning and charges of robbery with fire-arms filed against them. Police Chief George Hodgins stated.

35 Cent Bottle of Acid Makes Thousands Of Fake Bills, Police Find

DALLAS, Sept. 1.—(AP)—With the apprehension here Wednesday of two men suspected of counterfeiting, Dallas city and county officers have run down operators responsible for the making of thousands of dollars worth of illegal money.

The counterfeiters printed blank paper direct from United States bills by use of a chemical. The counterfeit bills cannot be distinguished from real ones except for the texture of the paper, Assistant Chief of Police A. H. Dellinger, who took part in the arrest declared.

The counterfeiters were arrested at a hotel after attempting to get B. L. Walkup, prominent Mexia citizen, in their schemes. One of the men printed a bill for Mr. Walkup, who pretended to accept the offer. Walkup was led to the counterfeiter's partner, whereupon the Mexia man later brought about the arrest.

The operator who demonstrated the process to Walkup, took a new $5 bill and a blank sheet of paper the exact size of the bill. Pressing the two together upon a sheet of glass, he sprayed a chemical upon the bills and rubbed them. When he removed the real bill, an exact duplicate was found printed on the paper.

The man told police that a 35-cent bottle of the chemical would make thousands of dollars worth of bills.

At this time she is having the first real love affair of her life. The man in the case is TONY GAINES, a sober-minded young lawyer, who wants to marry her. Merry goes out with other men, during their engagement; and the engagement is broken. Tony goes to Montana to practice law, and Merry sends his ring to him.

HELEN, the oldest sister, marries BILL HEPWORTH. They settle down in a modest little home and have a baby. CASSIE, the second oldest sister, marries her employer MORLEY KAUFMAN. They do not get along and Cassie is always quarreling with Morley about the sly flirtations he has.

JINNY the youngest sister, becomes engaged to DERRICK JONES, one of Merry's old beaux, under her very nose. Through Cassie, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a bachelor. He makes her wonderful gifts, lends her the money to buy a share in the beauty shop, and Merry decides that he would make her a good husband. Glimpses of Cassie's idle life have made her want to make a rich marriage. But Bill keeps putting off the wedding day.

During one of his absences in Florida where his sick father lives, Merry meets CABBY MARSH, a friend of Morley's sister, MURIEL KAUFMAN. Then LESTER PURCELL, the man with whom she had her first puppy-love affair comes back into her life. One night he comes to see her, and just as Merry is going to let him kiss her, something in his face makes her think of Tony Gaines, and she pulls herself away from him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

On week days the Locke family always had breakfast in the big, bright, cheerful kitchen.

But the next morning, which happened to be Thursday, when Merry ran downstairs she found the dining-room table all decked out in silvery white linen and the best Indian Tree china.

There was a glass bowl of velvety dahlias in the center of the table, and at one end of it stood Moms' silver-plated percolator, bubbling and steaming for dear life.

Behind the percolator sat Moms, herself, in a clean lavendar linen dress.

It was the first time since dad's death that she had worn anything but black, and Merry stared first at the table and then at her.

"Who's coming?" she asked. For there was an extra place set at the table, too.

Moms did her best to look innocent. "Why, Mr. Hefflinger's going to have breakfast with us, if you don't mind," she answered in an ordinary tone. But her face flushed a little.

Merry sat down and unfolded her napkin.

"What's the big idea? He never did before," she said. "It's bad enough to have Lillie in the family circle without taking in Hefflinger, too! Why can't he go out for his breakfast now, just as he always has—"

Moms held up a warning finger.

"Sah!" she hissed. "He's coming. Do be polite to him. It never does us any harm to be kind to a person, Merry—"

She stopped talking, as the door opened and Mr. Hefflinger came in, and sat down in Dad's old place at the head of the table.

"Good morning," he greeted Moms, who was beaming coyly at him from her end of the long table.

"Good morning," he said then, turning his heavy face to Merry.

Merry's smile was gone almost as soon as it came to her face. It made her bitterly unhappy to see this stranger sitting in her father's place, taking his napkin out of her father's silver ring, leaning back in her father's old carving chair.

She drank her cup of coffee as quickly as she could, and got up to go.

Before she reached the door it opened and Jinny came down. Jinny was always late for school. She breakfasted in her hat and jacket, and with one eye on the cuckoo clock between the windows.

But this morning she did not even sit down at the table. She stood, for a second, just inside the door, glaring at Mr. Hefflinger.

Then, with a toss of her red head, she marched aaround the table and kissed her mother.

"Goodby, Moms," she said gruffly.

"Aren't you going to have your breakfast? Haven't you time for just a glass of milk?" Moms asked nervously.

"No, thanks."

"Aren't you going to say 'Good morning' to Mr. Hefflinger?" Moms' voice shook a bit as she asked that question.

"No, thanks!" and Jinny was through the room like a baby cyclone. The dining-room door slammed behind her. A second afterward the slamming of the big hall door shook the house.

That night she did not come home to supper.

"I suppose she's trying to punish me because I gave Mr. Hefflinger his breakfast this morning," Moms made up her mind, as she and Merry sat down alone. Lillie was still at the beauty shop, giving a permanent wave to a customer who worked in an office during the day.

Moms was looking rather down at the mouth tonight, and she was wearing her black dress again. She seemed depressed.

The table had lost its festive look, too. The flowers were gone from it, and so were the Indian Tree dishes.

Moms had not even gone to the trouble of making the pot of tea that they always had with the evening meal.

"I can make some in five minutes, if you want it, Merry," she offered, in a low-spirited way.

But Merry shook her head. "No, thanks," she answered. "I'd rather have water. It's better for my complexion."

"I had a letter from Bill Erskine today," she said, after five minutes of silence. "The last time he was here we had a little spat, and I was surprised to hear from him so soon."

Mom's lips twisted. "He didn't say anything about getting married, did he?" she asked, with sarcasm in her voice.

"Oh, Moms, don't ding-dong at me all the time for not getting married!" Merry cried impatiently. The sudden anger that came over her like a wave was as much a surprise to her as it was to her mother. "It isn't my fault that Bill's father is sick. It isn't Bill's, either. He had to go down to Florida!"

Moms sniffed. "He could have married you, and taken you with him!" she replied, "not that I want to see you marry him, Merry, because I don't!—But I hate to see you wasting the best years of your life waiting for him to make up his mind whether he wants you or not—isn't that the telephone?"

They listened. From the hall came a faint tinkle, followed by a loud ringing.

"I'll answer it," said Moms, and jumped up. Her face was eager and flushed, as she hurried out into the hall.

"I'm going out for a little while," she said breathlessly, when she reappeared in the doorway. 'Will you stack the dishes, and put something on a plate in the hot-closet for Jinny?"

Without waiting for Merry to answer she turned and went. Her footsteps were almost as quick and light on the stairs as Jinny's tread.

When she came down again, she was dressed for the street, and she had dabbed some powder on her aristocratic nose.

She poked her nose in at the dining-room door and glanced up anxiously at the cuckoo clock—the only clock in the house that kept time.

"Half-past seven, and that child not home yet!" She shook her head. "Now, where do you suppose she's gone? I wonder if she really was upset because I asked Mr. Hefflinger to have breakfast with us this morning?"

"Why, of course, she was!" Merry let her have the truth. "You know, it's not pleasant for her, or for me either, to see him taking Dad's place in this house! You'll be marrying him next, I suppose."

Her mother's thin lips set themselves in an even firmer line.

"Hmm!" she snapped. "What if I do? I'm only forty-six years old. I'll have you remember! I'm entitled to live my life as I want to live it, without asking your permission, or Jinny's either, I guess!—Goodnight!"

She turned and hurried through the hall, and as she went Merry noticed that she had shortened her skirt a full two inches!

"How silly a middle-aged person is, in love!" she said to herself, and then remembered that Bill Erskine was almost as old as Moms was!

She was sitting under the sitting-room lamp, thinking about Bill Erskine and trimming a new hat-shape that she had bought, when the front doorbell rang sharply.

"Who's there?" she called, and the voice of Derrick Jones' mother answered her.

"Open the door, Merry!" she called in a high, excited voice, and the girl let her in.

Mrs. Jones was a small, nervous woman who jumped about as if she were strung on wires. Moms often spoke of her as "that bag of nerves next door."

Merry had never seen her so nervous and excited as she was now. She fairly shook, and her eyes seemed to snap as she began to talk. As she talked she kept waving her hands up and down and nodding her head.

"They've done it! They've done it at last!" she said, halfway between a gasp and a shriek, "they've just called up to tell us about it! Think of it! And neither one of them old enough to have any sense, or know what they're doing! Where's your poor mother?"

"Mother's gone out," Merry answered quietly, "What's happened, Mrs. Jones? Have Derrick and Jinny got married?"

"Didn't I just finish telling you so?" asked Mrs. Jones, looking exasperated. "They just telephoned us from Cooper's Ferry to break the good news to Mr. Jones and me. At least they called it good news. It's pretty bad news, it seems to me—where did you say your mother was?"

"She's gone out," Merry repeated, and then added as if to herself, "Jinny must have fibbed about her age, again. She's only seventeen—"

"Yes, she's only seventeen, but she's wise as a serpent, for all that!" Mrs. Jones broke in, "She's been after Derrick for months to get married—"

"And he's been after her to get married, too!" Merry came back at her. Her tone was low, but it was firm and convincing. She wasn't going to let anyone say a word about little Jinny, and besides she knew a thing or two about Derrick, herself!

"He used to want me to run away and get married, before he and Jinny started to go round together," she went on, with dignity, "he was always teasing me to go with him for a license—I don't believe you can accuse Jinny of roping Derrick into marrying her, Mrs. Jones. I think it was six of one and half a dozen of the other."

Derrick's mother shook her head violently. "No, no," she said, Jinny was over at our house the other day, talking about this Mr. Hefflinger who's boarding here. She told me your mother was shining up to him—and she said if he didn't leave the house pretty soon, she was going to! And I notice he's still here!"

When she had gone, Merry sat very still under the lamp, thinking over what she had said...Had Jinny really run away because of Moms and Mr. Hefflinger?

Merry could not believe that she had. She had very little to say about Mr. Hefflinger, and had been perfectly polite to him until that very morning at the breakfast table.

Still, it was hard to tell what was on Jinny's mind, sometimes. For all her frankness, she did not talk much.

"But, anyway, she and Derrick were going to get married, sooner or later," Merry mused. "So, what's the difference?"

She snipped off a piece of sewing silk, put her mending basket in order and went upstairs to bed.

"No use to wait up for Moms," she said to herself. "She may not be in until midnight. And I've got to get my beauty sleep."

On the nights when Merry stayed in she always went to bed early. Lillie said there was nothing so [illegible] the skin as late hours, and Merry listened to her advice as if she were the oracle at Delphos.

The door of Mr. Hefflinger's room stood open...the room that had belonged to Helen.

Across the hall the door of the room that had been Cassie's stood open, too. And from it came the heavy scent of the "Kiss Me" perfume that Lillie habitually drenched herself with.

Merry turned into her own room. It was hers now.

Jinny's red head would never again rest on the pillow of the little bed under the south window. The military brushes that she used would soon be gone from her side of the big, old-fashioned dresser. So would the home-made radio set on the writing-table.

"And I'll have the closet to myself, too," thought Merry, turning to look at the row of hangers that held Jinny's sweaters and short skirts.

It came to her, all at once, that she was the only one of the Locke sisters that was left!...All the rest of them had married the men they had set their hearts upon marrying! And she, the prettiest one of the four, was still here in the shabby old house!

"Uncalled for," she said aloud, trying to smile at herself in the mirror. But her voice broke, and there was a shimmer of tears in her eyes as she turned away from the glass.

(To be continued.)

The first man who ever kissed Merry comes to call. Merry gets a mysterious phone message from Tony in Chapter 38 of "The Petter" tomorrow.

DAVIS ON THE RACK

JAMES J. DAVIS of Pennsylvania is secretary of the department of labor. He is a cabinet officer. He was appointed by Warren G. Harding and is a holdover from the Harding administration. Secretary Davis is a native of Wales. He is strong for the immigration act. This act permits the coming of Canadians to the United States and also the coming of Mexicans if they register and pay the head tax.

Secretary Davis would change all of this. That is he would shut out the Mexicans. He would repeal the head tax provision of the law and would apply the quota provision as it applies to aliens from European and Asiatic countries. This does not appeal to the planters and farmers of the coast country or the Rio Grande country. It does not appeal to the commercial organization of these counties.

Secretary Davis had a pointed article in a recent issue of the Liberty magazine in which he said more stringent immigration rulings will be made by the next congress with particular emphasis along the border of the United States and Mexico. This cabinet officer was born in Wales, is not calling for a shutout of the Canadians. He is after the Mexicans.

Now that the representatives of the commercial and farm organizations of the coast country and the Magic Valley have notified the secretary of labor that there is no friction along the border between the American and Mexican people but on the contrary the two people have learned to live in harmony and the Mexican people are necessary to the future development of the Magic Valley.

Secretary Davis, in his Liberty magazine article, referred to ports on the Atlantic ocean board as Uncle Sam's front door and the Mexican border as Uncle Sam's back door. This aroused the ire of leading men of the valley and the coast country and in their reply to the Davis article this point was made, addressing the gentleman from Wales.

"In one of the paragraphs of your article you mention that further stringent restrictions along the Mexican border will tend to curtail immigration from Mexico and will also tend to eliminate the growing social problem arising out of disproportionate immigration from Mexico. We are sure that all of us living on the border will wonder just how you arrive at you conclusion relative to our social problems. We, in this section, were well acquainted with the Mexican people, know them to be, generally speaking, industrious, hard working and peaceful. When they come into our country most of them, of course secure work as laborers ,and, to be frank with you and ourselves, we must realize that if it were not for the Mexican labor the wonderful development that we have enjoyed in the lower Rio Grande Valley section could hardly have been possible. In addition to this some of our best business men along the border is of Mexican parentage."

Secretary Davis is reminded that at the present time while the cotton picking season is at its height there is a dire shortage of labor in the field; that the planters and farmers have been forced to import negro labor from other sections and in spite of their efforts as well as the efforts of the labor department of the United States government they have been unable to relieve the labor shortage, to the effect that cotton farmers will this year lose thousands of dollars due to unpicked cotton in the fields that has fallen from the stalk or is otherwise deteriorated that it has become unprofitable to harvest same.

In addition to this the secretary of labor, the gentleman who was born in Wales is reminded that if the federal government continues with its present stringent policy relative to Mexico it will seriously handicap the development of what is known as the Magic Valley of Texas and the Texas coast country. This is not all. These Texans flatly told the secretary of labor that the Mexicans in their part of the United States do not form a social problem, that they are being educated in the valley and form a very desirable class of people, causing no trouble and filling an important need while benefitting themselves.

The reader is reminded that Secretary James J. Davis should come to Texas and then perhaps he will make the discovery that the Rio Grande border country is not the back door of the United States; that it is the winter garden of America and a veritable paradise of the Lord.

Rene B. Creager is the republican leader of Texas. Brownsville is his home. He knows Texas and Mexico. He should be able to give Secretary of Labor Davis a few valuable pointers.

BANISH THE SPOKESMAN!

MR. COOLIDGE'S "spokesman" was annoyed this week when the newspaper printed certain dispatches from Europe to the effect that Old World nations were in a mood for economic bargaining with Uncle Sam on American reservations to the world court protocol. The "Spokesman" thought that these suggestions, printed in American newspapers, might give offense to European powers and that such reports should be verified before publication.

The rebuke to the press comes ill from the president. He and his official circle have made frequent use of the newspapers through their "Spokesman," watching the public response to their veiled utterances and repudiating their words when circumstance seemed to warrant it. The press bore the responsibility for the original reports and the ignominy of official rebuke for a fault not its own.

Surely the "Spokesman's" privilege of anonymity is not to be denied to foreign officials. Without doubt, the "spokesmen" for some European leaders launched the trial balloon to which Mr. Coolidge objected, and without doubt, the same leaders will deny the authenticity of the report if Mr. Coolidge's objection is strenous enough.

If the president sees the product of the system as evil and generative of international ill-will, he has it in his power to start the reform. Banish his White House mouth piece! Domestic rule and diplomacy by flitting spectres may jibe with the kaleidoscopic governments of the Balkans, but they have no place in the United States if it is to remain of the people, for the people, and by the people.

THE HUMAN IRONING-BOARD

OF all the labor-saving devices lately perfected none amuses more on first hearing than the new flat iron which presses clothes on the wearer while he waits. Steam is generated by electric heat, and comes through small openings in the canvas bottom of the strange iron. This steam, it is said, removes every wrinkle and raises the nap of the garment. The wearer experiences no discomfort, and in a few minutes his suit is renewed and once more beautiful.

Perhaps this is the kind of thing used in the gas station with the tailor shop attachment of which rumor hath spread abroad. The weary traveler, in the new fashion, while he alights to gas and oil his steed, may have his clothes pressed while his family consume their orange pop, sweet chocolate and ice cream cones.

All of which does very well. And there can be no doubt about the potential value of labor-savers. The only doubt arises when one considers the problem of what is going to be done with all the saved time and labor. If the human ironing board is going to use his extra minutes in a quiet and restful contemplation of nature and the universe, good enough. If he is just going to run around and burn up some more gas and add some more noise to an already noisy universe—but who has any standards of values nowadays, anyhow?

U. S. MONEY AND ROYALTY

FIGURES of the estate of the late Princes Anastasia of Greece are intriguing, as a literary person would say.

The aforesaid princess, it will be recalled, was the widow of William B. Leeds, the American "tin plate king." Turning from our crude industrial royalty in quest of the genuine article, Mrs. Leeds took with her $40,000,000 contributed distantly by American tin plate consumers, and used it in maintaining her position at the Greek court and trying to keep a faithless king on the Greek throne during the World war, and saving the Greek royal family from the wreckage afterward.

At the death of the princess, three years ago, it now develops, there were left less than three millions out of the 40 mostly in jewels.

Possibly the princess had the worth of her money while she lived. And perhaps she was conscientious in spending her wealth as she did, in behalf of the family she had connected herself with. Any loyal wife would do the same thing. But the effort failed, because there are things that American money cannot buy.

A Romance In Old Brandy

By Michael Arlen.

"Oh, go and make love to the girl!" snapped Mr. Lapwing.

"And forget that a clergyman ever told you that she must obey you."

The state of Valentine's mind as he ascended the stairway of his house is best described by the word "pale." He felt pale. What made him feel pale was terror. It was past one o'clock in the morning. He had thundered out of the house at about half-past eight. And the house was now as still as a cemetery. The conclusion, to Valentine, was obvious: the house was still as a cemetery of love. He saw Valerest waiting, waiting, waiting for him to return; he heard the clock striking ten, eleven, midnight; he saw Valerest flush with a profound temper, hastily pack a few things and—stamp out of the house, never to come back!

Within the bedroom all was dark, silent. Very dark it was, very silent. Valentine stood just within the doorway, listening very intently. He could not hear Valerest breathing. There was no Velerest to hear.

"Oh, God!" cried Valentine.

"Yap!" said Mr. Tuppy.

"Oh, dear," sighed Valerest from the darkness. "What do you want to go and wake me for when I have to be out riding at eight o'clock!"

Valentine said: "Valerest, thank Heaven you are here! I got such a shock."

"Here?" said Velerest. "Shock?"

Valentine switched on the lamp by the bed. It was Valerest's bed. Valentine's bed was in the dressing-room. That is called hygiene. Our grandfathers never knew about that.

Valerest stared up at him with sleepy bewilderment. Her curly hair was all over the place. Valentine made it worse by running his hands through it. Valerest said severely:

Valentine, what are you talking about? Why shouldn't I be here? And where have you been all this time? Why do you look so pale? Have you been drinking? Why did you get a shock?"

Valentine said violently: "I love you, Velerest."

"Yap!" said Mr. Tuppy.

Valerest laid the tips of her fingers on his eyes, and she passed the tips of her fingers over his lips, and she said: "But I hate you!"

"You just wait!" said Valentine.

Valerest pulled at his ears with her fingers and defended her attitude with irresistible logic. She cried. "I don't want to love anyone! I don't want to love anyone! I don't want to love anyone!" I want to be free!" And she bit his ear.

Now there are writers who should think nothing of ending this chapter with a row of dot, viz:... The author of this work, however, while yielding to no one in his admiration of a dexterous use of dots, cannot but think that the increasing use of dots to express the possibilities of love has become a public nuisance, and that the practice should be discouraged by literary subscribers as dishonest, since what it really comes to is selling a dud to readers just when they are expecting something to happen. There are undoubtedly occasions, as when a writer is plumbing the bestial abysses of illicit loves, when a pudicious sprinkling of dots must be held to be proper, in the interests of decency and restraint. Yet even then it is to be deplored that the exploitations of dots so readily lends itself to the artfulness of suggestion. And the author of this work, which is written throughout under the government of martial virtue, cannot think that it is his part to hold his pen while he asks himself whether he shall dot or not dot. Has mankind, he asks himself, lived through all these aeons of time only to find now that it cannot serve the decencies without the artificial aid of dots. Must, then, our dumb friends be neglected, while we needs must resort to these bloodless dots? For dogs are infinitely superior to dots as a means of describing the indescribable. The writer is, of course, referring particularly to Mr. Tuppy. Poor Mr. Tuppy.

"Yap!" said Mr. Tuppy. "Yap, yap, yap, yap!"

"What are you doing to Mr. Tuppy?" cried Valesest.

"Nothing," said Valentine. "Only putting him out of the room."

"You've kicked him, you beast!" wailed Valerest.

"Only once, sweet," said Valentine; "for luck."

"I hate you!" she cried.

"I love you!" he whispered.

"Darling!" she sighed. "But remember I have to be out and riding at eight."

"This is no time to talk of dogs and horses!" cried Valentine, and Valerest was so surprised at such blasphemy that—Oh, well, dots.

As Valentine left the house in Cadogan gardens, Fountain entered the dining-room. Fountain was very old. He had been kept up very late. He was tired. He drooped across the room.

"Shall I shut up now, sir?"

Mr. Lapwing said: "Yes, do. But just give me a drop of that brandy first, will you?"

"Yes, sir. The candles are burning low, sir. Shall I remove the shades?"

"Fountain!"

"Sir?"

"How long have you been with me?"

Fountain stared at his master, very old, Fountain was. "Why, sir, I was with your father! I've known you ever since you was born—as you know as well as I do, sir, if I may say so."

"Ah! But did you ever know, Fountain, that I had been married twice? And that my first wife had divorced me?"

Fountain lost patience. He said severely: "I never seen you like this before, sir. Not all these years. I don't know what you are talking about, that I don't. You married twice! Once was enough for you, sir, if you will permit an old man the liberty. And you divorced! I never heard of such a thing! I'd like to see the woman fit to divorce a Lapwing, that I would! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Ah," said Mr. Lapwing. "Well, have it your own way, Fountain. But it made such a thundering good story that I was near believing it myself. All in a good cause, Fountain; to teach that boy a thing or two. One likes to see children happy, Fountain. And his mother won't mind, not she. A good, sensible woman, she was, if on the plain side. And, d'you remember, Fountain, she always wanted a drop of romance in her life? Well, she's got it now, poor dear. But her son will appreciate it for her, won't he? And just give me another drop of that brandy, will you? That's very fine brandy, that is."

"The bottle," said Fountain bitterly, "is empty, sir."

"Drat that boy!" said Mr. Lapwing. "Come here looking for romance and laps up all my brandy!"

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

The Wise Girl Who Broke Her Engagement to the Man Who Mistreated His Mother—Will the Advent of Children Cure a Drunken Husband?——Shall She Be Wife No. 4?—Why He Doesn't Kiss Girls.

Dear Miss Dix—I was engaged to be married to a young man who was everything that was charming and chivalrous to me, but I broke my engagement to him on account of the cruel way he treated his mother. She is sick a great deal of the time, and in my presence he insulted her, and ordered her about. Do you think I did wisely? ELEANOR

Answer:

Did you do wisely, oh daughter of Solomon? You did the most intelligent thing that any woman could possibly do. You took a tip on the sort of man your fiance really was, and saved yourself from a lifetime of sorrow. For no bad son ever yet made a good husband. No man who is insulting to his mother will be courteous to his wife.

Any man can be lovely and chivalrous and gentle and affectionate and considerate to the girl he is in love with, and whom he is trying to "sell" himself to, as the commercial phrase goes. His winning her depends upon his making a good impression, but it is a different story after he is married, when he no longer has to court her, and when she is in his power.

Then he will treat her just as he did his mother.

If he was tender to his mother, he will be tender to his wife. If he was regardful of his mother's feelings, he will be of his wife's. If he tried to make life soft and easy for his mother, he will try to make things soft and easy for his wife, and the reverse of this is equally true. If he was in the habit of running roughshod over his mother, of talking to her as he would to a dog! if he treated her as if she were a domestic slave, that way also would he treat his wife.

There are many times in every woman's life she is sick and nervous and tired and discouraged and her lot is a hard one, indeed, if she is married to a man who has no sympathy for her sufferings, no understanding and no pity for her weakness.

The things that make a woman's happiness in marriage are little things—her husband's gentleness, his kindness, his attitude toward women, and all of these every girl could find out beforehand by observing the way the man she is about to marry treats his mother. What a pity that more girls have not your wisdom and courage and do not break off their engagements when they find that their fiances are bad sons.

PROBING DEATH MYSTERY

Ranger Captain Makes Inquiries In San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 1.—(AP) Frank Hamer, ranger captain, is in San Antonio from Austin endeavoring to clear up the two-year-old Corpus Christi bombing mystery. J. A. Barnes and his 12-year-old son were killed when an infernal machine, sent from San Antonio by express, exploded in their home.

Hamer said he was in possession of clues that promised "unusual developments" but Wednesday he had no further statement to make.

The package containing the explosive was traced here and a small boy was found to have delivered it to the express office, but the man who, the boy said, paid him to deliver it could not be located.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

A PRETTY GOOD DAD

He never has told his dad about it
(For dads must worry along without it),
But he's decided, as youngsters will
When they're all alone and the house is still,
That Dad (though in lots of ways he's funny
Concerning dancing, and cards, and money,
And lots of things that he thinks are bad)
Is, after all, a pretty good dad.

He didn't exactly think it over,
For a youngster's mind is a vagrant rover,
But once, one night when he couldn't sleep,
It sort of hit him all in a heap
That he has to work quite hard, a father,
And kids are more or less of a bother,
And he sighed a bit, but his heart was glad
That his old dad was a pretty good dad.

He never has said a word to Mother,
Though he thinks he will some day or other,
And of course he couldn't tell Father now,
He wouldn't know when, he wouldn't know how,
But his bed seems good in the rainy weather,
And it's nice to be living here together,
And he'll tell the world—but not his dad—
It's a pretty good father he has had!

What Do You Know About It?

DAILY SCIENCE SIX

1. Where did a great hurricane occur recently?
2. Where did it originate?
3. Where did it go?
4. What causes hurricanes?
5. Do hurricanes move rapidly?
6. How does a typhoon differ from a hurricane?

Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.

A STIFF GALE

Just as a soldier may refer to a big battle as "quite a skirmish," so the weather bureau is very restrained in its terminology. When a hurricane is sweeping up the coast it is generally forecase and broadcast as "a stiff gale," or "high winds," or "high gale winds." A "high wind," which most people would call a tornado, that swept the Mississippi valley about ten years ago played many freaks that were thought by those not present to be newspaper exagerations. Towever, the force of the wind is probably the most powerful force on earth, and there is scrucely anything it cannot shake. Before a meteorological society a scientist who was present in this tornado showed photographs of straws driven into the sides of houses by the storm, and a steel railroad bridge tied up in a bow knot.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to yesterday's question:

1. Some substances are explosive because the molecules composing them consist of very loosely linked atoms; hence a slight jar to dynamite by disassociate the atoms, causing explosion.
2. Gun cotton is fibre conbined with nitrogen.
3. Camphor is indispensible in high explosives because it alone of known substances will form the highly explosive celluloid.
4. The camphor supply is chiefly from the camphor forests of Formosa (Japan) and China (groves owned by Japan) and from synthetic camphor, made chiefly in Germany.
5. A disastrous explosion occurred last month in the naval stores at Denmark Lake, N. J.
6. The explosion was caused by lightning.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE

VIRGO

Today's planetary aspects are variable. In the early hours and until about 11 a. m., they are quite adverse. Immediately thereafter, they become favorable and actively so, and these beneficient conditions continue until about 5 p. m. They then revert to the adverse stage although, at brief intervals, there wil be sensed vibrations of a stimulating character. In a day, marked by such diversity of influences, there can be very little done along lines of constructive effort and, if any such work should be considered essential, it should be carried out between the hours of 11 a. m. and 5 p. m. It would be more advisable, however, to confine your attention to rountine duties and your chief care should be to maintani, in the face of contrary inclination, general cheerfulness of mind and consideration for others.

Children born today will, in order to pass unscathed through the dangers of early infancy, require very careful nutrition and wholesome environment and, on this more than on doctors' remedies will depend, to an unusual extent, their later physical development along normal lines. Their characters will be dominating and strong; their dispositions, kindly and affectionate; their temperaments, erratic and uncertain. They will always be in evidence. Their ambitions will be reasonable, but not exalted. Their ideals will be high, and their progress through life will be marked by orderliness and conservatism.

If today is your birthday, you possess an amiable disposition, with a desire to please, and never to offend. You are naturally bright and witty, but although the temptation often presents itself to do so, you never intentionally say an unkind word, or commit an uncharitable act. You are a pleasnig conversationalist and enjoy the regard and sincere esteem of your friends. Your adaptability enables you to mix freely, and congenially with all classes and change of environment never disturbs your equanimity.

You are full of vitality and energy, and there is always "something doing" when you are around. If you could only devote the same amount of vim and "pep" to the prosecution of your own affairs, as you do to the entertainment of your friends, your success would be immediate and sure.

You are domestic, true-hearted and loyal, and you are capable of a great and an enduring love.

Some Reasons to My Prince Charming For Taking a Vacation.

All books and pamphlets that advise
I've freely read,
And every author claims it's wise
For those who'd wed
To prove, by means of separation,
If love is on a firm foundation.

As for myself, this much I know,
I need no rest;
'Tis not for pleasure that I go—
I think it best
To prove, dear Prince, by a vacation
The depth of your infatuation.

I will not test you too much, dear—
Just fourteen days!
But all that time I'll live in fear
Lest some girl's ways
Divert your thoughts from my direction
To hers, and capture your affection.

If such a fearful thing as that
Should come about,
I'll show the world that I'm SOME cat!
I'll seek her out
And when I get through with that Cutie
You'll have a girl but not a beauty!

Clifford: H'm, how do I know that you can support Mildred and me? How much money do you make? Will you move out of your house and let us have it? I want to take the car, too.

Girl's Father: I'll give you everything I've got, and you can take the car and the house. I know where I can borrow three thousand more if you'll just take it.

Billie Tucker Is Bride Wednesday Of Earl Statton

A wedding that came as a surprise to a number of their friends was that Wednesday evening at 9:30 when Miss Billie Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Tucker, was married to Earl W. Statton at the Highland Heights Christian church. Dr. Paul Henry Packard, pastor of the church, read the ring ceremony.

The marriage took place following the mid-week services at the church which was decorated in palms and autumn flowers. For the pre-nuptial solo, Miss Harriet Bradley sang "I Love You Truly," with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Joe Crouch. The young people entered from the pastor's study, coming into the main auditorium while Mrs. Crouch played Lohengrin's bridal chorus. During the ceremony she played the "Flower Song," and for the recessional, Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Mr. and Mrs. Statton left immediately after the ceremony for their honeymoon which they will spend in Galveston, Houston and Corpus Christi. They will be at home in this city after September 15.

The bride is a graduate of the class of 1924 of the Wichita Falls high school and is a popular member of her group. Mr. Statton is connected with the Texas company where he has been for the last three years.

At The Theatres

"Sweet Daddies" At the Olympic

Charlie Murray, famous screen comic, who has one of the featured roles in M. C. Levee's new First National release, "Sweet Daddies," first saw the light of day in 1872 in the town of Laurel, Ind. He is one of the few real "old timers," not only as far as the screen is concerned, but in other branches of the theatrical business. The picture appears at the Olympic today.

The circus, vaudeville, tab show andn musical comedy—Charlie tried them all. The team of Murray and Mack was considered for years the premier comedy act in vaudeville. In 1912 Charlie decided that he would take a flyer at "them there nervous photographs," as he humorously called them, and joined the Biograph studios. There, in company with Gloria Swanson, Jack Mulhall, Marshall Neilan, Lew Cody and Wallace Beery and other embryonic celebrities, he worked as an "extra."

Then came Murray's long engagement with Mack Sennett, extending over a period of ten years. Last year Murray, while enjoying a two months' vacation, was invited to play a part in a dramatic picture for First National.

After it was completed Murray decided that his place as a comedian was in the dramatic photoplay. He signed a five-year contract with First National and was loaned recently to M. C. Levee to play one of the feature roles in "Sweet Daddies," soon to be released.

HATCHER THANKS FRIENDS

AUSTIN, Sept. 1.—(AP)—W. Greogory Hatcher, state treasurer, nominated in the recent democratic run-off election for re-election, issued a statement Wednesday thanking the people of Texas for their support. He said that it was the ideal he represented and not himself personally, was responsible for his nomination.

Tom Santschi, in the role of Patrolman Danny Moore, scores to great advantage in "The Pride of the Force," the new Gerson melodrama released through Rayart Pictures, which began a 3 days' engagement at the Palace today.

Danny Moore is one of those "ideal" policemen, which movie directors seem to take such delight in putting on the screen. There have been a number of photoplays of this type in which the hero cop in question was almost too good to be true. Danny Moore does not present this saccharine quality, however, for which we were duly grateful. Duke Worne, who directed "The Pride of the Force," has done a very good job with his hero policeman. We suspect, however, that all the credit should not go to Mr. Worne, for Arthur Hoerl, who wrote the story for the screen, has evolved a very real person out of the redoubtable Danny, and Mr. Santschi, who plays the part with admirable sincerity, has made of him a character with whom you are in instant sympathy.

Mr. Santschi is not the only member of the all-star cast who deserves mention for his work. Francis X. Bushman, Jr., presented a fine type of upstanding young Americanism, and Gladys Hulette was charming as the daughter of Danny. Crauford Kent gave his usual convincing portrayal of a villain, and James Morrison as a weakling was very good indeed.

Professor W. J. N. Van Eysinga, Dutch member of the court, was elected president of the conference.

Girl Married In Jail By Parson

NACOGDOCHES, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Rev. R. H. Shelton of Woden, near here, by turns a blacksmith and country preacher, is out on $1,000 bond today on a charge of having married a 13-year-old girl and a prisoner in jail here.

Heburn Cook of Wooden is in jail charged with a statutory offense. Sheriff T. G. Vaught prevented previous attempts to marry Cook and the girl, who is the complaining witness.

Sunday, while Sheriff Vaught was attending the sheriff's convention in El Paso his deputy, Carl Butler, was prevailed on to permit Cliff Cook, the prisoner's brother, to enter the jail to shave him. Rev. Shelton and the girl accompanied the brother, and while the brother was shaving the prisoner, the blacksmith parson married the couple through the bars.

Deputy Butler thereupon obtained a warrant for Shelton's arrest, charging him with being an accomplice to the offense charged against Cook. Shelton remained in jail Sunday and until 9 a. m. Monday. His case will be considered by the grand jury next week.

Lemon Juice Whitens Skin

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchid White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you will have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.—Adv.

BEFORE HER BABY CAME

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adkins, Texas.—"Before my baby came I was so weak I had to stay in bed most of the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My mother-in-law, who is a midwife, told me it was all foolishness for me to stay in bed. She told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it would help me. She handed me one of your little books and I read it and was interested in it. I went to a drug store that night and got a bottle of your wonderful medicine. I took it until the baby was born and was able to be up and do my work. Baby is 4½ months old now and weighs 14 pounds. I have plenty of milk for her and she gains steadily. I recommend it. I am willing to answer letters and will do anything I can for any woman, for I know how I suffered."—Mrs. A. H. Tschirhart, R. No. 2, Box 39, Adkins, Texas.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use by women for over fifty years. It is a vegetable tonic made from roots and herbs and is sold by all druggists.

Murder Suspect Gives Self Up

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 1.—(AP) Luis Contreras, charged with slaying Reyes Silvia at the San Pedro ranch above Brownsville last March, and who fled to Mexico after the shooting, walked into the sheriff's office last night and surrendered. Contreras stated he wanted to come back to the United States; that there had been extenuating circumstances in connection with the shooting, and that he wanted the case cleared up. This is the first time that a person wanted on a murder charge in Cameron county surrendered after having once gained the safety of Mexico.

PARTNERS IN DEATH

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 1.—(AP) An extraordinary coincidence in connection with the drowing here Monday of two boys, Edward Collins and J. Jones, Jr., is the fact they were both born on the same day May 23, 1915. They were in the same class at school and attended the same Sunday school, and their homes adjoined. When their bodies were removed from the lake their arms were locked around each other.

BLONDS BACK NUMBER ON STAGE BUT NOT IN SPORTS

A noted theatrical producer created quite a furore the other day by "canning" all the blond chorines of his famous show. The brunette, it was explained, was the type most entertaining to his public. Hence the only creature of the sort, just now, that he could relish on his payroll. No such weird discrimination could ever be practised in the realm of sport, were there such a lordly director to pick the performers for John Q. Public. The towhead has done too well, proven himself too frequently the master of all colored heads, to warrant such an indictment.

Baseball, for instance, has been cluttered with white and near white heads that have projected themselves into the spotlight of diamond glory. As a matter of fact, the greatest ball player of them all was and still is a blonde. Ty Cobb by name, and no brunette, red or brown head ever made the Georgia Peach ashamed of the hue of his locks. The complete list of those who might be considered blonds, or near-blonds, in baseball would be one of staggering proportions, much too long for space in this story. However, a few will suffice merely to give some color, so to speak, to the claim.

The Blond Box Triumvirate.

Walter Johnson, "The Big Train" perhaps the greatest boxman of them all is one of the tribe. Old Cy Young, "Uncle Cy," who starred for twenty-two years in the box, bore light-colored hair. Young may not have been the greatest twirler, but he was certainly one of them. Few, however, will dispute after digesting his amazing record on the mound, that he was the most durable. Young, in his whole career, never once complained of a sore arm. He passed his forty-fifth milestone on life's journey before deciding to hang up his glove. Before quitting Denton Tecumseh Young marked up 508 victories—the only twirler ever to pass the 500 mark. Big Six registered 372 wins before his twirling fin gave way under the strain.

Dazzy Vance is another famous pitcher whose blonde dome attests to the ability of others than brunettes and varying hues of hair to attract attention on the diamond. Dazzy never had to dye his top to work up blinding ("smoke" on his deliveries. There are quite a few others whose work has caught the favor of the fans despite pale thatches. Drifting leisurely into one's thought on the subject are Freddy Lindstrom, of the Giants, Rube Bressler, heavy-hitting outfielder of the Reds; Whitney Witt and Burleigh Grimes of Brooklyn; Friegau, of the Cubs; Gautreau, of the Braves; Heline, Mokan and Ce Williams, of the Phils; High, Critz and Carl Mays, of the Reds, and George Grantham of the pesky Pirates.

On the running path the blond seems to have been able to more than hold his own with the rest. Paavo Nurmi's record-breaking legs carried a blond head, held high with the majesty of one who realized he was the greatest runner in history. Joie Ray, Nurmi's keenest American rival and immortal among the miles of all time, possessed stubby hair of light shade.

Same Famous Queensbuy Blonds.

Blond heads are not waving so heroically in the ring today. In days gone by there use to be some rough customers among the breed, particularly in the heavier class. Georges Carpentier was the last blond to make any sort of a commotion in the heavyweight ranks. Carpentier fashioned his American reputation by knocking out a decrepit brother blonds. Battling Levinsky, in four rounds. This perched Gorgeous Georges on the pinnacle of the world's light-heavyweight boxer.

Before accomplishing this, Carp gained questionable renoun by flattening Joe Beckett, a curly haired brunett, who could also flash a tincture of saffron on occasion. Carp was later hammered helpless and, as it developed, pugilistically hopeless, by the well known brunette, Jack Dempsey. Still later a whole-souled and whole-bodied brunette of deep dye made life miserable for the beauteous French blond. He was Battling Siki, the first honest-to-goodness brunette to slap his way to the light-heavyweight summit.

About a dozen years ago it appeared as if a blond heavyweight had arrived who was good enough to be the first of his type to filch the heavyweight bauble. This fearsome gentleman was Al Palzer, a whale of a giant from the farmlands of Iowa. Palzer, a picturesque human ox with a shock of yellow-white hair flopping over his eyes, wasn't much of a boxer. But he could slug, and the delights he experienced when leather was carving the air! Al whipped some fair heavies in rather convincing style—Tom Kennedy, Al Kaufman, Bombarier Wells—an then set sail for the white heavyweight title preparatory to seek a match with Jack Johnson for the world's crown.

However, an able black-locked gladiator, Lute McCarty, proved blond Al's undoing. Palzer and McCarty engaged in a desperate battle on the coast. Lute knocking out the blond colossus in eighteen fierce rounds. That was the end of the colorful Nordic blond who aspired to dominion over the fistic universe.

Where Are The Blond Bruisers?

The blond heavyweight of formidable calibre is just about extinct today. There are no Frank Morans, with sweeping "Mary Anns" to bring thrills to the fans, to charge the ringside atmosphere with knockout expectations. No Charlie Weinerts with dazzling skill and neat footwork to recall the days of Corbett when brute force was jabbed and hooked into the shadows. The blond fighter, now a weak fistic threat, was a real menace a few years back when Billy Papke was giving the immortal Stanley Ketchel tronble aplenty in the middleweight world and Battling Nelson was enthroned on the lightweight dias as the roughest and toughest 135-pounder the lightweight division had ever produced.

The golfing world is not without its quota of blond talent, even unto great champions. Bobby Jones, Jess Sweetser and Chick Evans will do for the nonce. But forgetting, in the sphere of the green braize, Willie Hoppe, greatest of billiardists and as pronounced a blond as he was a genius of the cue.

ALL SET FOR FINISH BATTLE

Gorman Says Mantell Will Not Catch Him Off Guard

THE CARD.

Jack Gorman, San Angelo, versus Dutch Mantell, Amarillo. Welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Bill Kendall, Los Angeles, versus Yaqui Joe, Sonora. Welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Time: 8:15 tonight.

Place: Eleventh and Ohio arena.

All was declared in readiness last night by Matchmaker Alec B. Ross for tonight's long awaited battle-to-a-finish, scheduled between the formidable Mantell and his ancient enemy, Jack Gorman.

The principals were said to be in the best of condition and rearing, as it were, to get at each other. Gorman has sought a match with Mantell for more than five months. Having finally gained his point, the San Angelo grappler declares he's going to make the best of it and at no stage will Mantell catch him off guard. Dutch has beat several wrestlers here by trickery, by sneaking a fall on the break-away or by grabbing them from behind as they turned to speak to the referee.

Yaqui Joe says he is confident that he will erase that defeat registered here against him by Kendall.

A heavy advance sale of tickets is reported.

SOX WALLOP INDIANS

DETROIT, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Woodall's wild throw to first in the eighth which hit Mostil the runner, in the back permitted three runs to score and contributed largely to Chicago's 11 to 7 victory over Detroit today. The bases were filled with two out when Mostil ducked the ball in front of the plate, and when Woodall threw to first the ball caromed off Mostil's back into right field, all the runners scoring. The Tygers had held a lead up to that point, having scored five runs when they drove Edwards from the box in the third inning. Manush hit his 14th home run of the year inside the playing field and Sheely dropped one over the left field wall.

DEPUTIES OPEN WAR ON GAME LAW VIOLATORS.

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Receiving reports of hunters "gone wild" and slaughtering doves by the hundreds in the zone south of the I. G. N. tracks, in which the season has not yet opened, deputy sheriffs Wednesday afternoon conducted the first "roundup" of the season.

War against hunters who violate the game laws, a yearly occurence, this year will be prosecuted with extra vigor, Sheriff James Stevens said Wednesday, the opening day for dove hunting in the north zone.

American Netters Successfully Repulse First of Three Thrusts By French Davis Cup Players

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 1.—(AP)—America today repulsed the first of three thrusts by France at her international tennis supremacy with two crushing triumphs in the quarter finals of the national doubles championship.

Sweeping back the tri-color attack with racquets which neither gave nor asked quarter, R. Norris Williams and Vincent Richards, defending title holders, rode over the Wimbledon champions Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, to win impressively at 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, in the first of the battles.

William M. Johnston, veteran California star, then fought back from a first set route with his collegiate partner, Edward C. Chandler, to complete America's day of victory by overwhelming Jean Borotra and Rene LaCoste with a sensational finish, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Thus for the second time in consecutive years in the national team event the drive of France was checked before the semmi-finals by American players and for the first time since Borotra and LaCoste amazed netdom by stopping William T. Tilden and Richards in the national indoor championship last winter, followers of the net game on this side of the Atlantic were given definite assurance that America's Davis sup' defenders still retain all the commanding power and skill under which they swept to decisive victory a year ago.

The two greatest tests are still to come. Next week the international rivals lock at Philadelphia in the five match struggle for possession of the Davis cup held in this country since 1920. Immediately afterward Tilden will take up defense of his national singles title against the third and final attempt of France to terminate the six year reign of world tennis by members of the "big four."

Earning the right to face Richards and Williams on Friday in the upper half of the draw Lewis White and Louis Thalheimer of Texas for the first time since the opening of the tournament came through with a straight set victory today defeating the young New York combination, Kenneth Appel and John Van Ryn, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

In the lower half, Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., crached through the far west defense of James Davies and Phil Neer to win at 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. The victors will oppose Johnston and Chandler tomorrow for a place in the finals.

VERNON, Calif., Sept. 1.—(AP)—Ed. "Strangler" Lewis won his match here Tuesday night with Mike Romano when the Italian grappler crashed to the mat by a series of head locks, was unable to continue.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

We have with us the interesting rumor that, when Ty Cobb feels that he wants to lay aside his baseball duties Dan Hawley, manager of the Toronto International league club will succeed the great Georgian as manager of the Detroit club.

This thought will be mighty pleasing to those who know Howley and something of his work. He deserves a chance to manage, unfettered, a big leabue ball club. He has proved himself one of the most capable minor league pilots in the game. That he has been the one to dethrone Jack Dunn, once holder of a monopoly on the International league pennants speaks well for his ability as a manager. He has given Toronto the best baseball it ever had and has developed some sweet ball players.

If Owen Carroll, Holy Cross star, comes through for the Tigers next season it will be to the credit of Howley who has given the lad an intensive training course for the Detroit club. Carroll, given a tryout with the Tigers last spring, showed need of more professional experience. Howley took him and promptly made a winning pitcher out of him. This despite the fact that there are some mean hitters lurking around the Int home plates.

Howley is a close personal friend of Ty's and has had a close and pleasant business relationship with Ty and the Detroit club for several seasons.

Incidentally he is a popular man with players and fans.

Walter Johnson, never given to idle chatter, comes out with the frank statement that the other seven clubs in the American league might well be willing to "chip in" to pay the handsome salary Babe Ruth will be offered in his new contract, which will be hung on his Christmas tree, if not delivered before.

Johnson points out that Ruth's drawing power helps swell the gate receipts at every park when the big boy steps along at his normal gait.

This is a clever idea except for the fact that, were it to be worked out, the other six clubs would ask for arebate every time Babe socked an extra homer in one of the ball parks.

Granting that Ruth was worth $125,000 as a gamble when the Yankees swapped a mortgage for him some years ago, what would his market value be about now?

About half what the American tourists spent abroad this year while getting razzed in France and England for refusing to kiss the war debt goodbye.

* * * *

Recently came word from Brooklyn that Max Carey, ousted from the Pirates for his part in "objecting" to Fred Clarke's presence on the players' bench, is to be made manager of the Dodgers next season.

This report is interesting in itself. Whether or not Carey is the man slated for the management is unknown, of course. The rumor, however, would indicate that Wilbert Robinson is still considering possibilities for his job.

And the general feeling is that Zack Wheat is to be left out in the cold when such a selection is made.

This is to be regretted, if true.

There are few players in the game who have been of greater value to a single team over a long period of years than Wheat. He labored diligently for Robinson through lean and hungry years when the case seemed hopeless.

However, Uncle Robbie has always been fair with his players and it's a good bet will take care of Wheat.

PACK FLASHES IN FIRST DRILL

Ray Stacks Up As "Find" At Passing Game in Trials

Wichita Falls high school moleskinners opened pre-season training with a rush yesterday on the Junior college field, approximately 25 athletes turning out and charging through preliminary exercises enthusiastically.

With yesterday's showing, Coach Bud McCallum probably is more optimistic about the outlook than at first it appeared he would be.

The boys looked so good in the initial drill that before the two-a-day sessions had been finished the coach started them in on a couple of plays. Rather unusual for the opening drills.

Fundamentals took up the bulk of both sessions with passing, kicking and running to the fore. Defensive tackle and guard work along with shifting of the backfield came in for a share of attention.

Perk Ray, judging by initial appearances, may prove a real "find" at the aerial game. Ray slung the oval in near mid-season form.

Allred, McKinney, Mitchell and Rayzor stack up nicely in the backfield. Brown and Edmondson have the appearance of two potentially good linemen. These fellows probably will make their letters in the forward wall this year if they hustle.

ROSS HURLS GREAT GAME AS STARTER

Turgeon and Lapan Slam Apple Hard and Often

BEAUMONT, Sept. 1.—Beaumont and Wichita Falls divided a double bill here today, the visitors taking the opener 10 to 1 and the home club copped the second 14 to 2. The first found Diviney and Burleson ineffective and their support was none too good which coupled with a lot of timely hitting piled up a big margin for Buster Ross who was tight in the pinches. The second was a rout with a lot of distance hitting. Hansen had two doubles and two home runs while Jones had a pair of circuit wallops and Oliver tripled twice. The 20 Beaumont hits were good for 41 bases.

Ross lefthanded the Exporters to death in the opener while the Spudders tore into Diviney in the third for three runs, came back in the fourth for two and four in the fifth, pummeling Burleson and Buckley at a hard gait before the battle was over.

Turgeon with four hits out of six, was the hero of the first game. The Spudder battery teamed up with the stick, too, Ross and Lapan each getting three hits, one of Lapan's blows being a triple.

Tom Ross, Beaumont pitcher, was right in the second game and held the Wichita Falls team to five safeties. Lapan slammed three of these.

YANKS CHASE SLUMP

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The Yankees emerged from their slump today by defeating the Athletics in the second game of the series, 6 to 4, it was New York's third victory in the last 14 games with Philadelphia. Dutch Ruether, veteran left hander, recently obtained on waivers from Washington made an auspicious start with the Yankees, holding the visitors to three hits up to the ninth when he weakened and Shawkey replaced him as relief hurler. The Mackmen used five pitchers, Lefty Grove, New York's jinx being charged with the defeat. Grove was handicapped by a sore finger. The Hugemen lead was advanced to six games as a result of the triumph.

TOP O'MORN STUFF
BY BLONDY CROSS

Stumbled into Jean Montgomery the other day down in front of a scoreboard just as the opposition got to one of our pitchers and shot him full of holes, so to speak.

"Ain't it tough," or something similar, moans Jean, "how our team just can't get started?"

"Listen, Bud," gurgles this eminent scrivener, "I've been here three years waiting for that team to get started. R. O. Harvey and Jabes Gardner have been waiting seven years for the same thing. And Jabez is out hunting help now, so let's talk about something pleasant."

"Huh, all right," shrugged Jean, "For instance take the noble showing Jimmy Allred made in the attorney general's race * * * ah uh, by the way, that's pretty good political dope you've been writing * * *"

"Whoa! Don't ring me in on this politik stuff! Never clicked a line of it!" I interrupted (if I do admit it) with a display of anguish that would put any movie sob sister to shame.

Can you ima-a-a-gine that? Just what DO some people think about a plain and undisguised sports reporter, anyway?

Nossir none of that racket for little yours truly. Lemme stick with these here now crude but honest wrassling gentlemen, punch-drunk but big-hearted prize fighters, spavined but earnest ball players.

Well, after I finished telling Jean just how great an injustice he had done a member of Wichita Falls' energetic sporting fraternity, if any, he became so miffed, evidently at injuring a fellow creature's feelings that he took me and Yaqui Joe, the wrestler, into his store and let Joe gape at all the fall merchandise, just arrived, while he argued me into taking an awfully nifty new Knox hat and wearing it out before the unsuspecting populace gratis as a peace offering or something.

And that's what I meant to tell you about at the beginning. Jean and Johnny Riggs are popping up in the public eye today with a sharp array of fall apparel, featuring in their formal style opening the three-button sack suits made famous by the well-known Mr. Kuppenheimer, or what do you crave.

Not being a trained advertising man, which I am proud to admit, incidently, having no patience and nothing in common with these ad persons, I can't tell you much about Kuppenheimer's clothes. But I know a good suit when I see it, having worn good suits off and on for a number of years. Kup's garments will catch your purse if you'll give 'em a chance.

In the headgear, Jean's throwing the spotlight on Knox's stuff, including the kind of a hat on which I stumbled into a lucky break and copped as a gift. And there's Thompson Brothers' shoes. The type that appealed to me the most is a light tan with saddle stitching, if you know what I mean, and you probably don't. Anyhow, it'll DO.

THE FAN

Jackie Gorman, idol of a host of Wichita Falls wrestling fans and a pleasant little fellow, at that, when not irritated, squares off against the veteran Dutch Mantell, our bouncing boy playmate of some 20-odd years torrid mat campaigning, tonight in the feature embroglio of the weekly card at the legion arena. Need other comment be made? If so use your own judgment.

There will be quite a jam, including the sportsmen (yes, sportsmen sometimes do attend these animalistic melees), the woof-woof boys, the razzers and the boxcar athletes, the latter denomination being in the majority.

WOOF-WOOFERS

There is no need to define a sports man. A woof-woof boy generally is a full-grown man (?) who attends athletic events, be they wrestling, boxing, baseball or anything similar and inevitably finds fault. He voices his complaint in as nearly a deep basso as possible. All is wrong with this gink. He knows everything and the rest of the populace, if it doesn't agree with him, is a bunch of saps. In a fight, the contestants may all but murder each other. The woof-woof boy calls it a frame-up. And if there is the slightest miscue in promotorial plans old woof-woof howls long and lustily. In baseball, he's the grandstand manager, the second guesser who calls the real manager a chump when strategy goes awry, when a pinch hit or bunt fails, when a player boots one or the pitcher falters. So much for the woof-woof boys.

THE RAZZERS

The razzers are a little different. There are two kinds. One type consists of the good-natured bozos who mean no material harm. They shoot quips and quaps at the principals, kid the customers and the performers all in fun and enjoy themselves the more if the butt of their vocal horseplay isn't sport enough to take a joke, isn't man enough to stand the gaff.

* * *

The other razzer class is composed of the "small" type of human beings who amount to very little face to face with the rest of the world, but who in their "littleness" and meanness sit back in the protection of a large gathering or, if at the ball park safely behind a wire netting and yap furiously at the better men in action before them. They delight in ridiculing and making loud remarks in a crowded arena to and about the athletes, remarks of a nature they would not dare to speak to other than a cripple or physical weakling were they unguarded and alone by those upon whom they heap their acid tirades. So much for the razzers.

BOXCAR ATHLETES

The boxcar athletes are an unusual type, a type due to the location of the boxing and wrestling arena peculiar to Wichita Falls. A few sports lovers are included in this class who lack sufficient cash to pay at the gate and enter with heads up. But the greater number are too cheap, too "tight" to pay off. Yet just recently, these fellows upon finding no boxcars on the tracks near the back fence of the arena, expended more energy than they ever would burn up in earning the price of admission, by ganging together and with man power alone pushing a boxcar several hundred feet up the track to an advantageous point by the fence. Then they perched on top and enjoyed the show far more than does the average ringsider. And so goes it.

2 Die From Gas In Amarillo Well

AMARILLO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Two men were asphyxiated early today in the cellar of the Bay Shore Petroleum company's well in Gray county. They were H. B. Hawk, a driller from the California fields, and A. C. Underwood, tool dresser, said to be from West Virginia. Their bodies were found by a fellow workman in the cellar of the well. A fog of heavy wet gas filled the room. The Bay Shore well is said to be producing more gas than any well so far drilled in Gray county.

Steers Hit Ball at Heavy Clip, Bear Defense Blows

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Dallas dashed the Bears' pennant hopes and boosted their own considerably by defeating San Antonio 10 to 2 in the opener of the important two-game series. Every player in the Steer lineup tallied at least once, Dallas getting 12 hits off Couchman, Williams and Kaiser. Four errors by the Bears contributed to their defeat.

Pence was hit hard for 11 safeties, but the bingles materialized into runs only in the seventh and eighth. The big trouble of the Bears all season, that of failing to hit with men on base, was their chief weakness again today.

Rain interrupted the game temporarily in the fourth inning, and rain before game time made the field very heavy.

By winning today, Dallas increased its lead to four and a half games.

WACO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Jimmy Priesmuth, Waco's left hander, held the Shreveport Sports to six scattered hits here today and the Cubs took the opening game of the series 6 to 1. The locals got to Adkins in the first inning for three runs, enough to win with Priesmuth pitching shuteut ball. The Sports could get only two hits up to the sixth inning. Hits in the eighth by Kirke, Woehrs and Wilder gave the visitors their lone tally.

HOUSTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Dickie Kerr allowed the Buffs but five hits here today and the Cats won the first game of the series 5 to 0. Until the ninth inning Carlisle Littlejohn had pitched almost as well as Kerr, but he weakened in the ninth.

Both hurlers were aided by great support. It was the Buff infield which materially aided Littlejohn, while the Cat gardeners turned in frequent catches of unusual merit.

Quaker City Gives Tunney Big Ovation

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, who fights Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title here on September 23, received one of the greatest receptions of his life today when he came to Philadelphia to look over the battle ground.

Tunney was on his way to his new training camp at Stroudsburg and stopped here to pay his respects to Mayor Kendrick and look over the Sesquicentennial stadium where the arena will be pitched. From the moment he arrived by train shortly after noon until he left by automobile late in the afternoon he was in the midst of a swirl of enthusiastic admirers.

From the big concrete structure Tunney was escorted to the marine camp in the exposition grounds, where he received another big ovation. The marines cheered him again and again, finally carrying him on their shoulders around the camp.

Referring to Dempsey, Tunney said the champion is a gymnasium fighter.

"He likes to knock out his sparring partners," he said. "I don't. They are human and I like to have them come back to my camp again."

Asked how long it would take him to win, Gene smilingly said "about half a round." Later he soberly said he thought he would win in two rounds.

How Fast Can the Channel Be Crossed Only Query Now As German Sets New Time

At what speed is it possible for a human being to swim across the English Channel?

This question is raised by the recent word that Ernest Verkoetten, German swimmer, performed the feat in the incredible time of 12 hours and 35 minutes—

This time cuts the record held by Gertrude Ederle one hour and 57 minutes.

It is 3 hours and 57 minutes faster than that set by Tiraboschi Argentine, and the man who held the record for speed up to Verkoetten's feat.

The distance, by air, from Cape Griz Nez on the French coast, to Dover, England, the goal, is 20 miles. The actual distance covered by swimmers attempting the crossing varies from 25 miles to 35, according to the success in meeting the tide and benefiting by it.

It is estimated that Verkoetten swam approximately 25 miles—that is, his attendants estimate he averaged two and a half miles to the hour.

This speed is more than remarkable in view of the fact that the best record for the mile swim (in a short course) as recognized by the International Amateur Swimming Federation, is 23 minutes 4 5-10 seconds or approximately 24 minutes.

At the rate of a mile in 24 minutes Verkoetten would have covered his 25 miles course in an even 10 hours. This, however, is based on the speed set by G. R. Hodgson, Canadian and record holder in negotiating the mile. Hodgson, of course, gave his all in that mile. Verkoetten had to husband his strength for a stretch 25 times as long and not sacrifice it for speed.

"Trudie" Changes Type.

Until Miss Ederle swam the channel in 14 hours and 32 minutes the mark set by Tiraboschi was considered marvelous and—probably the best that would ever be made, considering the choppy sea, chilling temperature of the water, fog and mist that usually haunt the water.

However, at that time endurance had seemed to be the main essential. The four men who had preceded the Argentine across the channel had been mammoth in build. They carried rolls of fat on their bodies as protection against the biting cold.

Miss Ederle, first of the fair sex to cross the channel, added weight for the event, but not to the extent of "going to fat." Regular training while taking on the extra poundage helped her retain her speed. A heavy coating of hard grease over her body before she enterd the water acted as added protection.

British authoritis belittled Miss Ederle's feat by pointing out that she swam "under the lea" of a tug which broke the choppy water. The later accomplishment of Mrs. Cleminton Carson proved the absurdity of this criticism.

German Huge in Build.

But now comes the newest conquerer a man, built on the old type, so to speak, with generous flesh on his bones and large in frame. After failing in his initial effort he plows his way across the straits in less than 13 hours.

Instead of bobbing up at Dover at night he arived in mid afternoon in time to enjoy the setting sun.

His feat practically ends the interest in channel swimming except in so far as efforts to lower still further the time in crossing.

And in the meantime some enterprising channel boatman might do well to establish regular bus service for the benefit of tourists who would like to follow one or two of the swimmers every afternoon.

Hornsby Struts Stuff With Home Run And Triple

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals tightened the hold on first place in the thrilling National league pennant race by knocking Ray Kremer out of the box in the seventh inning today and taking the final game of the series from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 2.

Manager Rogers Hornsby regained his batting eye, smashing out a home run and a triple.

This was the fourth consecutive victory of the Cardinals over the Pirates. The Cardinals thus increased their percentage to .585, seven points above Cincinnati, who did not play today, and twelve points above Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals finished their final stay at home with a record of fifteen games won and five lost. They left tonight for Chicago, where they play a double header tomorrow and will not play again on the home diamond this season unless it is in the world series.

Hornsby's men knocked Kremer for eleven hits before he was taken out in the seventh. The Pirate ace apparently was still tired after Monday's game in which he held the Cardinals to two hits and shut them out. Arthur Reinhart, southpaw, held the visitors to six scattered hits. The Cardinals scored two runs in the sixth on singles by Bell and O'Farrell, aided by Dawlings' error.

Hornsby started the scoring in the seventh by a tremendous drive into the right center field pavilion for a home run. Bottomley singled and scored on Bell's double. Then Hafey singled, scoring Bell. The Pirates scored the first run of the game in the third when Southworth dropped Traynor's fly and it went for a two-base hit, scoring Mueller who had singled. Pittsburgh's other score was in the ninth, Spencer doubling and scoring on a sacrifice by Murphy.

The paid attendance was 24,354, making a total of 113,133 for the series and establishing a new record for St. Louis.

Agent Held For Liberty Slaying

LIBERTY, Texas, Sept. 1.—(AP)—L. Peeler, special agent of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, who also holds a commission as a state ranger, was to be given an examining trial here today on a charge of murder in connection with the killing Monday of J. A. Thibodeaux, tenant farmer at Double Gum bayou, near the intersection of Liberty, Hardin and Jefferson counties. Peeler, who said he was searching for cattle thieves, declared he shot Thibodeaux after the latter had fired a bullet through his right ear.

Thibodeaux's two sons, Albert and Elton, 14 and 13 years of age, respectively, were arrested when their father's body was lowered into the grave here on a charge of cattle theft and will be given an examining trial later.

HOWARD RELEASED.

DENTON, Texas, Sept. 1.—(AP)—C. J. Howard, charged with the murder of his wife, who died last Friday of concussion of the brain, was released yesterday on $2,500 bond. Mrs. Howard, who was 50, was found unconscious on the highway here several weeks ago. She died without regaining consciousness. Her funeral was yesterday.

A REGULAR PART OF THE SERVICE

According to a Boston authority a little lad in a pious New England home was learning from his aunt something about the history of his own country.

She came to the time of the Civil war and began naming the great leaders on both sides—Sherman, Lee, Grant, Jackson and the rest.

The young pupil halted her.

"Say, Auntie," he demanded, "is that the same Grant that we pray to when we go to church on Sunday?"

"Oh, no," she said, "you must be mistaken."

"Oh no I'm not, either," he insisted. "Because the minister always says: 'Grant, we beseech Thee, to hear us.'"

BOARD LISTENS TO DOHERTY

New York Oil Man Gives His Views to U. S. Committee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—President Coolidge's oil board received today a statement from Henry L. Doherty, New York oil magnate, in which he took sharp issue with contentions of former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, now counsel for members of the American Petroleum Institute, who held the nation's oil industry will be best served by self-regulation and avoidance of government interference. The Roherty statement, made public by Secretary Work, the board's chairman, was offered in rebuttal to views of Mr. Hughes, given at a public meeting of the board in May.

Counselling the board against either delay or "an attempt to prematurely issue a report," Mr. Doherty advocated a conference of "from 10 to 20 of the leading petroleum technologists of the country in connection with the government experts to fully discuss and agree if possible upon the advantages which will be gained and the savings which will be made by changes in our present methods." He also suggested a round-table gathering to "get down to brass tacks as to just what is true," in an oil report of the committee of eleven of the institute and in the Hughes statement.

Nigger Creek Still Increases Output

The Nigger Creek field, west of Mexia, in Limestone county, East Central Texas, continues to increase in output. Tuesday it was making 20,228 barrels a day from 23 wells, compared with 20,178 barrels from 22 wells Monday.

The Transcontinental Oil company has 11,624 barrels from 12 of the wells. It has two wells shut down for repairs. Its No. 1 Rossen, the discovery, made 438 barrels, its highest output since August 10, when it went dead, to be later revived.

E. L. Smith No. 1 Rossen, that made 26,870 barrels the first 24 hours from 2,814 feet, did 2,146 barrels for Monday's gauge.

Nigger Creek has swelled Mexia's position with the Woodbine sand pools of East Central Texas. Mexia made 32,160 barrels from 458 wells, a gain of 6,740 barrels and six new wells. Powell did 27,750 barrels from 827 wells, a gain of 100 barrels and two new wells; Wortham made 6,890 barrels from 290 wells, a loss of 10 barrels; Richland made 1,570 barrels from 97 wells, a gain of 120 barrels and one new well, and Currie made 800 barrels from 51 wells.

New Record Set For Crude Output

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—A new record for crude petroleum production was established in the United States last year when 763,743,000 barrels were taken from the ground. This figure, the bureau of mines reported today, was an increase of 7 per cent over 1924 and exceeded by more than 30,000,000 barrels the previous record output of 1923.

Final figures for refined products showed a run to stills last year of 698,582,000 barrels of domestic crude petroleum and 41,338,000 of foreign crude, a total of 739,920,000 barrels, or an increase of 96,201,000 barrels.

An understanding of Spindletop field operators not to crowd the output of this Gulf Coast pool, thus allowing the pipe lines to handle the production, appears to have been broken by the Yount Lee Oil company drilling in Nos. 9 and 10, McFadden, for 12,000 barrels initial.

Nearly two weeks ago the Texas company, Texas Pipeline company, Humble Oil and Refining company paid their taxes which had been withheld as a result of the dispute.

OIL MARKETS STEADY NOW

Advent of September Finds Refinery Conditions At the Best

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 1.—(AP)—The advent of September finds Mid-Continent refinery markets steadier and possibly stronger. The strength is due to the return to the market of many jobbers, who anticipate an extraordinarily heavy gasoline consumption during the Labor day holiday.

United States motor grades are still held as low as 10 3-4 cents, but the maximum is now at 11 1-8 cents, especially for the 58-60, 437, grade. Demand in the different centers is reported to be good. The higher gravities are also steadier. The continued consumption and declining stocks in the Mid-Continent have had something to do with the new life to gasoline.

Burning oils continue strong.

Natural gasolines are reported advancing by manufacturers, with "A" grades 10 to 10 1-8; "B" at 9 1-2 to 10, and "C" at 9 3-4 cents. Stocks are low all over the Mid-Continent.

COTTON MILL LIKELY HERE

Chamber of Commerce Says Project Step Nearer Attainment

Plans for the construction of a $350,000 cotton mill in Wichita Falls came a step nearer reality this week with the order for plans for the structure given to an architect and other details completed. B. C. McIntyre of the Western Textile corporation has been in conference with the industrial department of the local chamber of commerce for several days and has already purchased a site for the proposed plant.

The new mill will have a capacity of 10,000 spindles and will normally employ about five hundred persons. As is the custom with textile mills the location of a plant is one of the most important matters to be settled and just at present the exact location of the new plant cannot be ascertained, but it will be well outside of the city limits.

Nothing definite in the way of building arrangements have been settled and there will be several days of activity before a definite statement can be forthcoming, it was stated at the local chamber of commerce yesterday evening.

Four Mexican Orchestra Artists

One of the important features of the Imperial Symphony orchestra of Mexico which appears here soon in concert is the trombone quartet, pictured above. All four men are artists in their own right, and long playing together has developed them into one of the finest entertaining units in the country.

Mexican Orchestra To Be One of City's Most Famed Entertainers '26

It is the one opportunity of a lifetime for the people of Wichita Falls and surrounding country to hear an original Mexican symphony orchestra, touring the largest cities of the United States on their winter swing. Professor Roberto S. Rechi, Mexico's greatest director, who is now leading the Imperial Symphony orchestra, is alive and prospering today, because, like all the musicians of his native country, he is too shrewd to mix in politics. Great factional leaders of Mexico have been his friends in the last twenty years of Mexico's history. Generally, when those men fell from power, their friends fell with them, but not so Roberto Rechi. In spite of the fact that he has been the favorite of all of them, probably the most pleasing thing about the symphony orchestra leader is his desire to please. It is that which caused him to adopt American music as part of his work and he has grown to like it. Professor Rochi has refused to have anything to do with the business end of his organization and devotes his entire time to the musical direction.

One may search the world for something new in music all the years of a long life, and never find anything sweeter or that is as rhythmical as the harmonies of these native Mexican artists.

In addition to the orchestra proper, the symphony party includes a number of prominent soloists of Mexico. Felix Martinez, first violinist, a graduate of the conservatory of music of Milan, Italy, is receiving the acclaim of American audiences wherever the symphony orchestra appears. The repertoire of the violins, cellos, bass violins and saxophones in their solos is well adapted to the demands of American music lovers. The enthusiasm which audiences have displayed for this great company of Mexican artists is due, not only to their music, but to the fact that they are always ready to yield to the demands of their audiences and will play encore after encore when their listeners are with them. The orchestra will appear in Wichita Falls on September 14, under the auspices of the Kiwanis club and the Federated Missionary societies for the benefit of the Day Nursery.

OPEN SERVICE AT TEMPLE

Phillips Back to Town to Resume Work for Winter

Services at Temple Israel which have been suspended during the summer will reopen this week beginning Friday evening. It is the annual procedure to resume services the first week in September, Rabbi Samuel Phillips said yesterday. He will preach the sermon on "Anti-Semitism and Its Cure."

This is the Friday before the Jewish new year which falls Wednesday evening, September 8, and a large crowd is expected to attend the services, Rabbi Phillips said.

The rabbi has recently returned from an extended trip in the east during which he visited many of the larger cities. "I was most impressed with Cleveland which has one of the finest residential sections of any of the larger cities," he said. He was in Philadelphia and attended the sesqui-centennial which he enjoyed and expressed the belief that it is worth any one's time to visit it. Dr. Phillips also visited his home town in Easton, Pa., where he attended high school and also Lafayette college.

"Of all cities the size of this one, Wichita Falls appeals to me most. In proportion to its population, it has more life and looks more like a business city than the others. One can enjoy all the benefits of a great city here. In large places like New York and Philadelphia the people are like human flies rushing in the subways and suffering from congestion.

"I have lived in those cities several years, but after living in Wichita Falls under spacious skies, I would under no condition care to live again in those large centers. One who becomes a part of the great west, to him the east can have no attraction for him at all but a brief visit.

Mrs. Phillips and two small daughters will arrive here about the latter part of September to join Rabbi Phillips in the new bungalow near Temple Israel.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The cotton market today was less active than it has been during any recent session although the trend was downward, the fluctuations were comparatively narrow. The influence of the triple holiday at the end of the week and the approaching government report was plainly felt in the growing indisposition to enter upon new commitments and the tendency to even up accounts. Although Liverpool came in better than due, the market here opened three to six points down and continued to ease off during the morning, due to New York advices claiming another storm in the West Indies until prices showed losses of 18 to 19 points around mid-session. The market fluctuated narrowly during the afternoon within the earlier range, even the official confirmation of evidences of a slight disturbance near the Virgin Islands failing to exert any sustaining influence. The close showed net losses for the day of 13 to 14 points.

First trades showed losses of three to six points and 17.84 for October and the same price for December at the opening proved the highs for the day. Prices gradually eased off with October rallies until October traded down to 17.69 and December to 17.67, or 18 to 19 points under the previous close. The market rallied some from the lowest during the afternoon.

Exports for the day were large totaling 97,470 bales.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP)—A more favorable view of weather conditions in the south and slightly higher crop figures were reflected in declines in the cotton market during today's earlier trading. After selling off from 17.88 to 17.60, however, December rallied to 17.83 and closed at 17.78, compared with 17.93 at the close yesterday. The general market closed steady at net declines of 10 to 15 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of two to seven points in response to relatively easy late cables from Liverpool and a continuation of the selling movement which had been noted in the market as prices approached the 18-cent level late yesterday.

A favorable view of the weather map which showed very little precipitation in the south and the eastern belt forecast for generally fair except local showers in North Carolina and Florida, evidently increased the disposition to liquidate or take profits on long contracts.

Selling became a little more active when bullish features in the weekly report of the weather bureau failed to bring in fresh buying and the decline extended to 17.68 for October, while January sold off to 17.75 or about 20 to 24 points net lower. These figures evidently attracted covering by recent sellers while some traders thought they saw indications of price fixing or a little investment demand and the afternoon market stiffened up. Rallies of some 10 to 15 points from the lowest were not fully maintained, however, and some hedge selling was reported in late trading as well as renewed realizing or liquidation.

Three more private end-August crop reports were issued, with condition figures ranging from 57.5 to 60.3 and figures on the crop indication from 14,694,000 to 15,153,000 bales. The latter was considerably above the low report of the previous day and may have lended to unsettle sentiment as to the probable showing of the government report next week.

Private cables reported heavy speculative buying of Egyptian futures in Liverpool owing to unfavorable crop reports.

Exports today 97,470 bales, making 400,874 so far this season. Port receipts 23,561; U. S. port stocks 594,327 bales.

The weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showing another increase in crude oil production last week tended to restrain bullish activity in the oils although Phillips Petroleum and Shell Union broke through to new 1926 high levels. Wall Street bears persistent, but unconfirmed reports, that the reorganization of the Texas company will be followed by a merger of one or two large independent companies with the new Texas organization.

Domestic consumption of gasoline in July reached the record breaking total of 1,014,804,000 gallons, an increase of 45,000,000 over June.

Among the many specialties which were bid up to new top prices for the year were American Sumatra Tobacco, American Tobacco, Commercial Solvents "B," Congoleum, Cusanman's Bakery, Union Tank Car and R. H. Macy, the last named responding to the announcement that the company would retire its preferred stock.

An unexpected jump of over half a cent in Italian lira, which were quoted around 3⅞ cents at the close, and a further rise in French francs, which carried them across the three-cent level, featured the firm foreign exchange market. Demand sterling ruled ¼ of a cent higher around $4.85.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

"I have the honor, referring to yours of the 27th, to inform you that Mexico has not any connection whatever wit hthe league of nations and to thank you for your attention," the reply said.

Gorgeous Pageant Planned For Fair This Year

CITY HISTORY TO BE SHOWN

Hal Worth Engaged To Stage Huge Affair At Exposition

"Wichita Falls portrayed in a giant Pageant of Progress will be the biggest attraction ever staged in this city, and the result of my greatest effort in this line."

Such were the promises given the Texas-Oklahoma Fair association yesterday by Hal Worth, promoter and producer of municipal entertainment who has been engaged to stage the pageant at the fair this year. Mr. Worth arrived in the city Wednesday and began active preparations toward getting the affair started. He visited the fair grounds and spent the entire afternoon looking over the grounds with a view to taking advantage of every possibility there.

This huge event will have more than one thousand participants and will demand the use of hundreds of different kinds of costumes and settings. The history of Wichita Falls will be displayed in actual minature of the different eras of its entire existence, and all the little details of interest will be realistically protrayed in actual life.

"The history of Wichita Falls is such that there will be many different angles on which to play and there are a number of incidents that will provide subject matter of several dramatic scenes which alone will be worth the entire time and effort consumed; and these events will bring back to old residents reminiscences of many long forgotten days when Wichita Falls was a little cowtown and later a little oil town," Mr. Worth stated. He added that he would have to study this history most closely before he could arrive at an actual working plan for the pageant.

Several important announcements will be made in regard to the pageant within a few days, and several leading characters will be chosen for the different spectacles.

In the coronation of the queen it is planned to have the co-operation of a number of cities and towns in the trade area and these will be called upon within the next two weeks. Hundreds of other participants will be needed and there will be ample room for all to enjoy taking part in the pomp and pageantry of make-believe.

DARE ACCEPTED BY AMARILLO

Says it Can Get More W. T. C. Members Than Wichita Falls

The challenge has been given and accepted, and now local chamber of commerce officials have a job on their hands to show up a thriving neighbor on the west.

Monday when local committees were conducting their drive for memberships in the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, a telegram was sent out broadcast over this fruitful section of Texas, challenging the entire field to equal this city in the matter of memberships in the West Texas organization.

Only one city in the entire area, which included Fort Worth and San Antonio among many other smaller cities, accepted the challenge. It was Amarillo, and that newly born oil city thinks that it can produce more real members to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce than can Wichita Falls.

Now it is up to the Wichita Falls organization to show them something in the way of real civic activity by "snowing them under" during the year and open up the new year with the huge convention here and a thousand of home members to welcome them, officials say.

Swarts' Entertain In Honor Of Son

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Swarts entertained at their home on Tenth street Wednesday evening with a 6 o'clock dinner honoring the twenty-fourth birthday of their son, Gaylor Swarts, who leaves soon for Baylor Dental college at Dallas to complete his senior year's work.

The white birthday cake resplendent in its lighted candles formed the centerpiece for the table.

Places were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Swarts, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryle and Dr. and Mrs. Swarts.

Studio Open

Mrs. W. L. Underwood, instructor in voice, announces that her studio at 1805 Polk is now open for enrollment of classes. Mrs. Underwood is a graduate of Grinnell conservatory of music, the Horner institute of fine arts, and is a pupil of Arch Bailey. She has a contralto voice of rare quality, and is proficient in accompanying and composing as well as concert work, and her interest lies not only in the line of vocal culture but in choir direction also, it is said. Friday of each week is to be reserved for Electra pupils.

BUYS FURNITURE STORE.

Recent announcement has been made of the purchase of the Home Furniture company by E. C. Dillon. Mr. Dillon was formerly associated with the E. F. Riley Furniture company of this city, and is well known locally.

Milton E. Price has gone to Clarendon to visit relatives.

Stores To Close

According to an announcement made Wednesday by the Retail Merchants association, all stores will be closed Monday, September 6, for the annual Labor day celebration. This is in keeping with the local custom as observed in former years, it was said.

Affray Ends Eventful Day For Husband And Wife Seeking Divorce

An agreement to disagree apparently prevailed in at least one Wichita Falls family Wednesday afternoon. Attorneys for the husband filing a divorce in his name found themselves preceded at the district clerk's office not more than five minutes by an attorney representing the wife, asking a divorce in her name. The allegations in the two petitions are almost identical. Husband alleges that his wife has repeatedly threatened to kill him and that he is fearful lest she carry out her threat. Recently, he alleges, she threw his clothes on the floor, which act is said to constitute cruel and harsh treatment.

Wifey also is afraid of death, it appears in her petition, the allegation being made that her husband had repeatedly threatened to kill her also. He absolutely refused to work, she alleged, stating that it had been necessary several times to run him off the place.

Both husband and wife appeared on the police docket at the city hall Wednesday night for affray earlier in the evening. They were released on $10 cash bonds to appear in corporation court this morning.

Damage Suit Names Two Dairy Owners

A damage suit asking $3,519 as a result of an alleged withholding of furniture and household fixtures after a dray had been sent after them was filed by L. B. Martin and his wife Wednesday in the district court, naming A. G. and Vernon Short, operating a dairy near here, as defendants. The plaintiff in his petition alleges that he moved from a house owned by the defendant leaving word that he would send out for his household goods, and that when the draymen went after them the defendant refused to deliver them to him. As a result he was forced, he states, to buy certain new furniture and undergo certain difficulties during a period of illness for his wife, as a result of which the damages are asked, $2,500 exemplary and $1,019 actual.

Lions Plan To Promote Band For Boys Of The City

As a part of their constructive work of the year, the Lions club members voted Wednesday in their weekly meeting at the Kemp to foster the organization of a boy's band in this city. Committees working on the matter reported favorably concerning the band and plans are under way at the present time to finance the new organization.

"It will require $500 or $600 to take care of the band," B. G. Ripley said, "and of that amount, instruments will be bought and a director for six months may be secured."

Announcement of the first event in the form of a benefit for the boy's band will be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the Electric Light and Power plant at the end of Burnett street if the weather is favorable, and should it rain, the entertainment will be at the Wichita Falls Electric company. This is to be a feature fight between a badger and a vicious dog, according to announcement at the club. A fee of 50 cents will be charged for admission, the Lions agreed.

A deviation from the regular meetings will be made, the club voted yesterday, when on one night in each month, the Lionesses will be guests. The first meeting of each month is to be turned into a business meeting in the interest of the club.

Wednesday's get-to-gether took the form of an experience meeting, and Lions spoke of what and what not the club should do. Among those voicing opinions were Joe S. Dickey, C. V. Millican, Dr. R. H. Graham, B. G. Ripley, Frank Cripliver, A. B. Maples, L. H. Franks, T. R. Wynn, Sam Gose, Jr., and Joe Harris.

President Joe B. Hatchitt presided at the meeting.

SMALL FIRE LOSS

Fire loss for Wichita Falls during the month of August, 1926, is $2,550 less than the loss for the same month in 1925, according to a report given yesterday by Fire Chief J. L. McClure. The total loss for the month just passed was $5,150, and for the month of August, 1925, totaled $7,700.

Bradford Files "No Expense" Account

The second "no expense" account was filed Wednesday with the county clerk and county judge by a candidate in the last primary election. The expense account was that of C. L. Bradford, candidate for constable, and lists no expenses or receipts between the first and second primaries. The first account was filed Tuesday by Frank Morgan.

Miller Speaks To Optimists Club

Claude Miller, who recently returned from an extended trip to the northeast, was the principal speaker at the Optimist club luncheon Wednesday at noon at the Kemp hotel. According to Mr. Miller, the sight of the saloons and intoxicated persons in Montreal is testimonial evidence in favor of the 18th amendment. One drunken person in New York as compared with a large number of inebriates in Canada "would make anybody proud of being from a prohibition country," he told the Optimists.

The tour of Mr. Miller and his family included a special sight-seeing tour in Richmond, Va., a visit to the Sesqui-Centennial in Philadelphia, and an automobile drive through the White mountains and the Green mountains in New England, to the Catskill mountains, and into Canada as far as Montreal.

Bert King told of interesting incidents on his vacation trip through the northwest.

Big Pumpkins On Display At Stehlik's

Four pumpkins, whose total weight reaches 184 pounds, are on display this week at the office of Otto Stehlik, local realtor, in the Kemp hotel. The pumpkins, whose respective weights are 62, 57, 43 and 22 pounds, were grown on J. L. Downing's irrigated farm, five miles east of town.

Missouri-Pacific Executive In City

H. R. Stafford, active vice president of the Gulf Coast and Missouri Pacific lines, was a guest of Frank Kell for a short time Wednesday while on his way to St. Louis. Although he had not been in Wichita Falls for two years, Mr. Stafford expressed appreciation for the remarkable growth which this city has experienced in this time.

He inquired into the development of the Wichita Irrigated Valley and evinced interest in water conservation and its effect on agriculture. Mr. Stafford said that business has been gratifying throughout the country, and indications are that another year of prosperity is being entered. He expects to return here at some future date to remain for a longer visit.

3 MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

There were three marriage licenses issued Wednesday at the county clerk's office, these going to Aaron Kriss, Wichita Falls, and Miss Etta Mae Levinson, Dallas; Earl W. Stratton and Billie Margaret Tucker; R. T. Geen and Miss Gussie Jarvis.

PRESENTING THE RECORD NEWS REVIEW OF FALL FASHIONS

The MODE for AUTUMN

BOOTH TARKINGTON has predicted that in fifty years or so, we women will have forgotten that such an encumbrance as a skirt ever existed. Fifty years is a long time, and for a mere man to predict what we will wear in half a century, when the foremost fashion experts can't predict five years ahead, is rather 'know-it-all'. However, we won't quarrel with Mr. Tarkington—let him have his pipe-dreams—in the meantime, all we are concerned with is where fashions are going at the present time.

Are they going up or down? Well, they can't go up much further and still deserve the name of skirt, and it doesn't seem as if they will go down. Even midwinter probably won't tempt the younger woman to drop her skirt one inch below fourteen or sixteen inches from the ground. And in doing that, she will be following the dictates of fashion from Paris for those of her age and sex. Of course, women who desire to present a more dignified appearance, and slightly older women, will wear moderate length dresses—it is a matter of "suit yourself and your figure."

There really isn't a reason in the world, outside of the strange vagaries of fashion, why skirts should come down. We all admit that short skirts are more comfortable than long, especially when pleated and full as they are now. They are certainly more hygienic than the dragging, dusty-trained skirts of late Victorian days, and there is nothing immodest or improper about them when a woman takes into consideration the proper length for her age and figure. Although I should be sorry to see women adopt knickers, trousers, bloomers, or any skirtless mode, as Mr. Tarkington predicts, I say long live the present style of hygenic, comfortable, and really esthetic short skirts!

"Dear me, we are becoming quite strenuous in our defense of short skirts, aren't we? Can we grow as enthusiastic over the balance of the indications for fall and winter? We certainly can, because there never was a season when there was as much chance for every single woman in the United States to be really beautiful! (And every married one too.) The sole cause of our present enthusiasm is the blouse! Yes, the blouse has returned—not the blouse skirt—but bloused effects, in back, in front, or all the way around. If you are inclined to be over-plump, a slight bloused effect in back will hide the fact—if on the other hand you are rather slender, a blouse all the way around lends fullness to the figure. And if you are just right, a bloused effect will certainly be becoming to you.

Of course the blouse is always placed rather low—and so is the belt or draped sash which will be so popular. The natural waist-line has given up the ghost and left the field entirely, and so has the beltless dress, leaving as I said, the waist-line perched at about the hips. A literal-minded person would take exceptions to that last statement, I suppose, and demand how the waist-line could be at the hips, but I would explain the fact to him in very simple language. I would say, "Sir, of course this is not within your province, but if your wife, daughter, sister or sweetheart hasn't a naturally long waist, it will be necessary for her to wear a corselette or girdle, or some such contrivance. That will give her the figure which fashion demands, and really bring her waist-line to her hips."

And that is all there is to it—it will be almost impossible to be fashionable this winter and not wear a corset. All the fullness in both dresses and coats will be above the hips, but below that point it will be necessary to have an absolutely smooth, flat back. So all you who have signed the declaration of independence from the corsets, prepare to give up your present freedom.

Two-Piece Dresses.

First one declares that the two-piece dress will be out except for sports, and then another. But one and another are both wrong, because there are still countless numbers of them in sight. Of course they are by no means as predominant as they once were, but there are enough of them to say that they are correct for afternoon wear and even for evening wear. Those which are designed for evening wear, however, are quite deceptive, as one can't tell until one examines them closely, that they are two-piece dresses.

The gilet, the bolero, the peplum, the tunic, tiers, the redingote—all, all will have their moments this season. If a man were ever to read this article, he would certainly scratch his head and ask what in tarnation all those words mean—perhaps, oh, perhaps, there even are those among the gentler sex who are not familiar with the terms. For their benefit, I shall explain.

The gilet, in a more understandable but less Parisian term, is a vest—of flesh or white with black or navy blue, and of self color with more vivid colors.

The bolero—ah! just picture a handsome wary-eyed Spaniard in the conventional costume. The short jacket he wears is a bolero. Of course the bolero we will wear will be quite different in that it will be in one with the top of the dress — and often the little jacket will appear only in front or in back. With the bolero the draped sash and the gilet are very good.

The peplum is a single flared tier just below the waistline — sometimes it may also be a flat tier. As for the redingote, I'll wager that even the cleverest of you are rather hazy as to its meaning. The origin of the word is peculiar — it is a French corruption of the English word riding coat, and was at first applied to a coat open in front. In its present application it means a dress open in front to show a full length vest of a lighter color.

Besides the tunic and tiered treatment just commented upon one sees skirts varied by draperies, circular fronts, shirring, pleating, and occasional godets.

Of the newest is the practice of draping the skirt. The fullness may be trained from side to side, or it may be drawn up to one side—on this latter method of draping one frequently sees a buckle, or rhinestone or green or red galalith or bakelite.

One formerly thought of pleats as belonging entirely in the world of sports, but this year one finds afternoon dresses of even the most informal type using pleats. Two French imports I say at a recent showing of advance models used box pleats in tiers. One, with a surplice effect bodice, had but two tiers—the other, subtly bloused with a large satin bow in back, had three tiers of box pleats, terminating at the sides and leaving the back straight. Both these dresses were developed in Chanel red crepe, with satin bindings and trimmings.

As more and more pleats are used each year, designers have gotten the knack of inventing sorts which will not "unpleat," or else they put them in spots where they are not likely to be wrinkled or otherwise injured. There is something fascinating in the new tiny, indestructible knife pleats. One may pull on them, and they snap back into place undisturbed, as if some charm had been placed upon their power of resistance.

Red Is a Favorite

The red end of the spectrum is in for it this season—from all shades of pink for evening wear to a deep wine for coats, dresses and hats (especially good in velvet). Channel red is a new shade—one of the deep, dull reds. Most of the reds are of a dullish nature.

Green comes next in point of popularity—black we will have with us relieved by touches of white or pink, as well as navy blue.

Moire! Moire! Moire! A new star appears upon the horizon. It remains to be seen whether moire will take hold, or whether it will be a brief fad like taffeta was last spring. White moire loks stunning upon either the older, more mature woman or the young girl as an evening dress. Green, black, navy and red in deep shades of moire looks tunning upon either the dresses, and a great many black cloth dresses are seen trimmed with moire.

All that glitters is not gold, but a great deal of the glitter which I see is gold—gold cloth and ribbon collars, cuffs, vestees, bands, pipings—we shall scintillate this season what with all this gold, &

Hate Goes With Removal of Scar; Hubby Would Free Wife Who Made It

Darby Day, well-to-do Chicago sportsman, left no stone unturned to help convict his wife and send her to prison when she threw nitric acid in his face in a fit of jealousy, a year ago in Los Angeles. Now he has announced he will seek to obtain her pardon from the San Quentin, Calif., prison where she still is. The scar made by the acid has been removed by plastic surgery and Day has forgiven his wife for the act. Photos are of Day and Mrs. Day.

another will declare the only real sport is she who actively participates in the game. (Not as a halfback or a jockey, of course, but in the fall as a golfer or an enthusiastic walker.)

Because of the two kinds of sporting life—that of the onlooker and that of the participant—it is necessary to divide sport clothes into two different categories. One is the region of the rather plain, tailored dress that we have been wearing for so long in the business office, at home and as "the onlooker," and the other is the dress designed to give all possible freedom to the sportswoman.

Let us consider the first class first—is there any decided change notable this year in its general appearance? To be truthful, one can hardly tell the difference between last year's sport frocks and this year's. Two-piece dresses are still in the lead, the materials are much the same, one finds just as many pleats and the same neckline—either convertible collar or high standing collar.

For the fall and winter, one finds the light weight woolens by far predominant. Checks, tweeds, kashas, occasional plaids, and fine novelty weaves in practically any color desired are obtainable. Jersey is still in use—often combined or trimmed with another frabric.

If you would really be chic, adorn your sport dress with a monogram—embroidered in some harmonizing or contrasting shade. That clever little note lends just the air of distinctness to a sport dress which saves it from being one of many.

These monograms appear both on the first class of sport clothes and on the second—those designed for practical use. Especially does one see them on the golf links, where woman have grown tired of wearing what practically amounted to a uniform—a two-piece dress of jersey, knitted material or wool, with box—or kick-pleated skirt. This year, to depart from this type, one sees quite a number of one-piece dresses, cunningly designed to give just as much freedom as the two piece, by the insertion of box pleated panels at front or sides.

The culotte skirt is one of the most blessed inventions of man for woman—for the original conception can be traced to a man designer. It usually consists of a pair of long, loose trousers, skirt length, having a panel in front and back, attached to the trousers on one side and buttoned down on the other. The effect is of a straight skirt. In this manner is convention satisfied, and comfort achieved at the same time. I have worn this culotte skirt both for golf and for long tramps in the country, and find it ever so much more comfortable than knickers—and I look perfectly respectable when I come back to town.

To look ahead a bit, to winter sports, one finds women and girls of all ages at the "snow" resorts, favoring more and more the knitted suits consisting of tight breeches, sweater, woolen socks and cap. For skiing and skating, this costume gives the most freedom, and what is most important, is warm and at the same time light in weight. This trend seems to be an indication of what will be worn this winter. Of course, there are still plenty of skirts in evidence—however the other fashion is less cumbersome and more convenient.

New Coats In Review.

The big change in the dress silhouette, of course, is the blouse—the big change in the coat silhouette is the inclination toward large or dolman sleeves.

This is more noticeable in coats meant for dress occasions than in sport coats. Everything is seen from the real dolman sleeve, with deep armhole reaching the waitaline, to the set-in sleeve with armbole cut just a little deeper than last year.

Of course, the dolman or wrappy coat is more suitable to the figure not so slim, for the soft folds of the fabric help to give the impression of slimness. The more youthful type will still prefer the straight, severe type of coat.

Coats are bloused too—sometimes all around, sometimes only in the back. Often a belt is worn with the bloused coat—and the belt is more and more noticeable on the straight-line coat.

Both the dolman and the blouse tend to give a coat a more formal feeling—make it more for dress wear than the straight line coat. There seems to be a conspiracy afoot to make women wear less sport clothes—and to my mind it is a worth-while movement. With sports wear correct for practically any occasion, you and I and every other woman have been less careful in our choice of clothes—more likely to wear just what everyone else is wearing and not to choose our own individual types. Now, however, with the renaissance of the more feminine type of clothes we will have to choose more carefully—and perhaps we will not look so "all in a mold" as artists have been complaining we do.

The tendency now is to have two entirely different categories of clothes. It is as if one were to take a partition and divide one's wardrobe in half. On one side would go a coat for wear to tea, luncheon and informal evenings, together with all one's "frilly, feminine" dresses—on the other would go a rougher type of coat, of tweed or some heavy material for wear to business if one does go to business, and for "run-about" use if one doesn't, together with sport dresses.

Although it may seem rather extravagant to have two coats, it is economical on the contrary. Wearing the sport coat for every day rough use keeps the more dressy coat in good order and makes it look practically new for a second season. And if one chooses a really practical sports coat, it too will be just as wearable a second season as it is the first. It is by planning ahead in this fashion that the woman with a moderate clothes budget can make it go just as far, and be as well-dressed, as can her more fortunate sister. Let her choose clothes not too extreme, which will be wearable for quite some time to come, and

This gold trimming is not the only trimming in evidence—braid is in use quite frequently, colored fur is used for banding, velvet frequently makes its appearance upon a silk dress as trimming. For the more tailored trimmings, one sees grosgrain ribbon and reptile leather oftentimes.

Why did I speak so lightly of velvet just a moment ago? I can't imagine, because it promises to be very important this season. A revival of velvet evening dresses is promised, followed by corresponding interest in velvet afternoon frocks—and velveteen will be used for sport dresses.

A compromise seems to have been reached by the couturiers. Faced with the problem of choosing between the dull crepes and the satin crepes, they have decreed, "Lustrous fabrics and dull fabrics will divide the honors, and many dresses will wear both." So we see flat crepes and crepe de chine, and crepe satin used on both sides.

Several afternoons at tea in the Plaza and at Sherry's have led me to conclude that for afternon wear in the cooler weather, really smart women prefer the heavier silks to the sheer silks, although, of course, I saw some crepe roma and georgette in navy blue and black. And I saw a great deal of these two colors in every fabric!

"Navy blue and black," deplores the woman who would like to wear bright shades always, 'why, oh why, must we always be visited by these spectres of the night?' Be calm, do not become unduly alarmed—they are almost never seen untrimmed. Pink, flesh or white gilets, collars and cuffs make them exceedingly festive in appearance, while the gold embroidery and gold metal ribbon trimming I remarked upon are still brighter.

Most necklines are collared. Remember I say most, and if you see an occasional round neck or V neck collarless, do not pride yourself on having found at least one point to refute me upon. The truth of this style business is, if you want it from one who has really studied it, is that at no time can one say "they are wearing," or "they are not wearing." Somewhere, somebody—smart or otherwise—is usually wearing almost everything. The most a fashion expert can do is point out the most prominent features of the mode, and leave it to you to choose your own particular favored points.

Most necklines are collared, I reiterate—some are adjustable, looking equally well when worn open in a V or closed high at the throat. Double collars are quite smart—tie collars of all sorts and descriptions are often seen. Pleats, frills, tucks, lace, embroidery, all combine to make the neckline a most entrancing, not to-be neglected feature of the mode.

The newest innovation is pleats in fur—because the circular cut and godet of the last year are passe, and something is required to give fullness.

One of the smartest things I have seen this year (something of course, which will be very difficult to obtain)—was a mink coat with wrap lines dyed WINE RED! It was really the only one of its kind I have seen, but it leads me to speculate whether we shall not see hues of the rainbow in furs—green, blue, orange—who knows? Perhaps some day, if not now.

Matrons and older women, of course, pay very little attention to such fads. They have been sticking pretty closely to the old reliable Hudson Seal—and the clever furrier can make a coat or wrap of this fur exceedingly smart-looking. Being black, it is of course slenderizing, and skin arrangements help to give slender effects. Deep V's, hip sections narrowing downward to a point—all these are worthy of thought for the older woman who plans to remodel her old coat or purchase a new one.

The Evening Mode Is All Aglitter.

Aglitter—yes, with crystal beads, and bugles, and gold cloth and paillettes (spangles, my dear, in case you don't know)—rhinestones and metal thread embroidery. The stars themselves will look down and sigh in despair of ever achieving such brightness. For the stars have only their own light to rely upon, where womankind have the crystal mirrors and brilliant lights of evening to aid them. Nowhere was the brilliance of the coming season more accurately forecast than at a recent affair in the Crystal room of the Ritz Carlton. The room is not large, as ball rooms go, but it is lined with mirrors, and the crystal chandeliers contrive to give it the effect of a vast space.

And in this seemingly vast space, wove too and fro a galaxy of the most elaborate, the most carefully planned evening gowns I have seen in many a year. Simplicity may be the note for street clothes and sport clothes and for some afternoon frocks, but no one can deny that this year evening wear is designed to dazzle, to entrance by its intricate design.

Formerly one saw the matrons and women of more than middle age in subdued colors—most often in black. But not this year—in the choice of colors and in the preference for daring styles they rival the youngest deb out. Snow white hair was not a bit abashed by appearing in a frock of brilliant red or green, and the pastel shades were also seen quite often on these older women. Their decolletage was quite low—even lower than that seen on the younger woman, and of course much lower than that seen on any of the very young girls. The neck most often seen was oval in front and back—high in front, but daringly low in back. Square decolletage front and back is also quite smart.

Of course the beaded gowns, and those variously adorned with rhinestones and paillettes and otherwise resplendent, were fashioned of chiffon or georgette (once in a great while of tulle). They were slim and straight to the knees, where various methods gave them fullness—godets—circular flares—tiers—oh, yes, some were draped to one side. This movement to one side is rather pronounced this season—one sees the side draping on afternoon frocks too.

In spite of my emphasis of the elaborate mood of the season, I do not want to give the impression that the gown dependent only upon its lines and the fine fabrics of which it is fashioned, is passe. Quite the contrary—especially in the velvet and moire evening gowns which are both so prominent at all the evening affairs. Sometimes velvet may be em-

FALL Fashion highlights which come as news from the Paris openings are represented in the collections at the Orchid Shop. This close affiliation of our Fashion experts with the style trends more firmly entrenches our leadership in Fashion—permitting our clientele to dress as smartly and in as good taste as the woman who shops in the establishments of Fifth Avenue or Paris.

See Our Window Tonight

ON EVERY OCCASION

A woman's clothes make up a part of her charm—therefore the absorbing question.

"WHAT SHALL I WEAR"

Though just one year old, well dressed women of the south, in ever increasing numbers, have found the Orchid Shop to furnish a service that most completely meets this very important question.

The favorable verdict, thus rendered by a host of customers, clearly places a growing responsibility.. How well the call to greater service has been met will be best emphasized by the splendid styles, large proportion and price reasonableness reflected in the superb collection of Orchid Shop merchandise offered for fall, 1926.

Quite naturally the rapid fashion tendencies of today interest and inspire women who make the needs and possibilities of style a careful study, and to their requirements we are dedicating the best efforts of a well-equipped and ambitious organization.

THE ORCHID SHOP

Back to College or School

—Via the ORCHID SHOP—the safe and satisfactory route to good taste, good style and good sense in school wardrobe.

Clothes go to college the same as their wearers, and of course you'll want yours enrolled in a smart course. The Orchid Shop has the sort of clothes that young daughters demand—youthful chic, the last moment thoughts of fashion for sports wear, for classroom and evening wear.

SPORT COATS

The college girl will want a sports coat in her wardrobe, that's certain—because sports coats were never smarter, in rich looking plaids, tweeds, ombre plaids and solid color effects. Meeting every demand of the smartly dressed Miss going away to school. Some have fur linings, the latest fad for sports wear—others have silk and kasha linings. Many are featured with beautiful fur collars and cuffs of wolf, badger, fox and squirrel.

DRESSY COATS

Rouvelaine, the new guaranteed spotless pile fabric, leads among the materials used in dressy coats—black, gracklehead, reds and greens lead in the colors.

Chic, strictly youthful individualized effects feature our new coats for Misses—blouse backs — clever new lines in wrappy models with the smart Vienese sleeves, etc.

Squirrel, beaver, fox and wolf in increasing shades from collars, cuffs and pockets, adding a luxurious touch to the coats.

Evening Frocks

Velvet, fluffy chiffons, beaded georgettes, taffeta—in the clever basque styles that are so flattering to Misses. The most charming collection of evening frocks that it has ever been our pleasure to offer. In colors of white, flesh, blue and nile green.

Dresses for Travel and Sport Wear

Chic new flannels, repps and jerseys with the various wool, leather and painted adornments—lead for sports wear, while the ever popular black satin or crepe for travel wear predominate. Many are basqued and boleroed—the Misses' most becoming Frocks and styles that lead the autumn mode—other smart treatments will be found, including Vienese sleeves, blouse backs and appliqued embroidery.

For Street and Afternoon Wear

Satins, crepe faille, canton crepe, velvet and crepe roma are the materials used to fashion these smart Frocks for Misses.

Boleros and blouse effects are seen on many of the models — the basque style takes its place prominently in the mode for Misses—many two-piece Frocks are shown. Black, chanel red, Valencia and green are the leading colors.

There are so many styles that every Miss will find a frock to her liking.

Pointing the way to SHOE SMARTNESS

I BELIEVE it was Max Beerbohm who said that woman's attraction was in direct proportion to the height of her heels. If that is the case, la femme américain will indeed be beautiful this autumn. Her heels, if she is really in the know, will be extremely high, whether she wears spike or Cuban heels. Spike heels will be seen on shoes for evening, afternoon and "trotteur" wear — high Cuban heels for the latter two.

After one has become accustomed to them, these high heels are as comfortable as any other sort, although of course there are women whose feet are so formed by Nature that they find it impossible to wear the very high heels. For these there are Louis and Spanish heels of a more moderate height, so cleverly designed that they look higher than they really are. There are also some Cuban heels are not quite so high. Flat heels are unquestionably passe now. The only place one sees them on smart women is at the golf links, although even there some women prefer to wear Cuban heels.

So Many, Many Slippers!

Once there was a time when you wore gold brocade or silver brocade slippers for evening wear—that was all there was to it. Not now! There are countless materials to choose from—slippers of gold and silver kid—brocade slippers in every pastel shade as well as gold and silver—Paisley slippers—embroidered and painted shoes.

Everywhere too, one can have satin slippers dyed the exact shade of the evening gown. In that event it is more artistic to have the stockings of a slightly lighter shade than the shoes and dress, in order to provide sufficient contrast. Velvet is another smart fabric for evening slippers, if one chooses it in a pastel shade.

The great majority of evening slippers have one strap, although one sees some opera pumps, both plain and gored. Jeweled heels, buckles, buttons—all lend dash and contrive to give an air of brilliance which is so essential in the evening ensemble.

One Strap Slipper

Just as one finds the majority of evening slippers bearing one strap, so are a great many smart women wearing one strap afternoon shoes. The oxford has declined slightly in favor. Not so many of them are seen with formal afternoon wear—they are now relegated to their proper place as accessories for the tailored frock. And too, those which one sees are all cut rather high—they have fewer cut-outs, and more trimming is applied upon the shoe.

A snake in the grass is a fearful, loathsome thing (as Eve can testify) —but a snakeskin shoe upon the foot is fascinating and to be envied. All the reptile leathers—snake, lizard, alligator, are still being worn—not so much now to form the entire shoe, but more for trimming—as straps or appliqued upon patent leather or brown or tan kid.

Black suede and brown suede, of course, return with winter, and with the threatened revival of velvet afternoon dresses, there is some talk of velvet shoes—trimmed with gold kid. It remains to be seen whether they will take. However, the important point in shoes this year is—wear either shoes to harmonize with the costume, or use sharp contrasts.

let her make her motto "quality rather than quantity," and she will come out ahead in the end.

To return to the topic under discussion—coats—I must tell you that it will be an easy matter to keep warm this winter. For the coats now are so luxuriously fur-trimmed—many coats which masquerade under the name of "cloth coats" are fashioned almost half of fur. The upper part of the coat in its entirety may be of fur, or there may be a deep band of fur at the bottom, reaching almost to the waistline.

To keep the wind from whistling down your back, there is the large shawl collar. You may snuggle up within its protecting depths and never even feel the keen thrusts of Boreas. But the shawl collar does not stand alone—there are so many variations of the neckline that it is useless to attempt to name them all—however they are all so contrived that they may be drawn quite high in back and protect one from the wind. Honors are equal in trimming between the flat furs and the long-haired furs—squirrel, mink, kolinsky, beaver and other flat furs vie with wolf and fox. The very naturalistic imitations of these furs are also all good.

Smooth and flat-surfaced are the materials for this year's coats—whether they are lustrous, like broadcloth, or dull like duvetyn. Of course there are uncountable different types of fabrics in use for coats, but they more or less resemble either of those two fabrics.

Pony Skin a New Fur

Shades of my childhood! My earliest memories date back to a black pony coat which was the pride of my mother's heart—for at least three or four years. Then it was cut down to fit me, and how proud I was the first Sunday I walked to church in my fur coat. When I outgrew it, it descended to the next sister. If we hadn't run out of children in the family and given it away to Amanda, the cook, the pony coat would probably be alive yet.

Pony wears like iron, and is really inexpensive. It was adopted, I imagine because of the smooth, satiny appearance it makes, and because of its lack of bulk. In spite of the fact that it is very light in weight, it is as warm as almost any other kind of fur. For the most part one sees it in very trim, tailored looking coats—and it is always trimmed with another fur or a bright suede, sometimes both.

Antelope is another smooth, sporty-looking fur, and that is developed in the same models as pony —narrow, notched collars, almost always straight line. The suede that I spoke about above is used as revers—sometimes it forms the whole lining and the coat is reversible and quite snappy-looking on the inner side.

Racoon and beaver finish the list of furs which make good sport coats. Racoon of course, because who ever heard of a college football game without its "big bear" coats.

Fur coats for dress are more elaborately made. Many of them have huge dolman sleeves, bloused backs, or both. Broidered in gold thread, but more often it is subtly draped in high shades and brilliant colors, with but a single flower for decoration.

Moire is seen in white and in pastel shades for the most part; and besides the draped note I spoke of above, one sees many tiered moire dresses.

Many young girls—debutantes and those out two or three seasons, wear these moire dresses, but their attitude seems to be one of amusement with the situation. "Let mother wear the brilliant colors and do the dazzling—we'll go in for demure simplicity." And the frock which provides this note of youthful innocence is usually the "robe de style."

Of taffeta usually with long tight bodice, and full skirt—exaggerately long, sometimes reaching almost to the ankles, it gives the youthful wearer a quaint picturesque appearance.

She wore a pale gray taffeta robe de style hand painted in a chintz-like design. At the left side of the long bodice was a large rosette of narrow blue velvet from which streams hung to the bottom of the skirt. This skirt showed one tendency of the robe de style—it was several inches longer in back than in front. Her slippers were of blue velvet of the same shade as the streamer and the painted flowers, and a blue flower nestled just above one ear.

The wraps, worn, of course, reflect the choice of the wearer in dress. With the robe de style, wraps of shirred and pleated velvet in simple style are worn—with the more elaborate gowns, the wrap is correspondingly elaborate. Last season many evening wraps partook of the nature of the straight line coat—this year a marked preference is noted for wraps of more voluminous lines—coats with dolman sleeves, or the true cape. The evening wrap of fur—ermine usually—of course, never loses its smartness.

In Conclusion

The most important trend is the growing practice of differentiating between sports clothes and more formal clothes. The definite abanonment of the perfectly straight silhouette, the more elaborate styling and trimming of dresses all are contributory factors. Greater variety will be placed before you when you choose your fall wardrobe, but that will make it all the more imperative that the choice be unhurried and weighed in the balance —may these few words of wisdom help you chart your course!

REBELS ARE DEFEATED.

Nicaraguan Forces Suffer Heavy Losses in Fight.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Government forces are declared to have inflicted a severe defeat on a revolutionary force in the vicinity of Goseguina, on the western coast near the Gulf of Fonseca.

The battle, described as the bloodiest of the present revolution, lasted eight hours. The government losses are placed at 60 killed and the rebels' at 40. The number of wounded has not been determined.

The rebels after a bitter fight were cut off from their base of communications and fled, leaving five machine guns, 500 rifles, a quantity of provisions and important documents showing the revolutionary plans. Surgeons and Red Cross workers are ebeing rushed to the scene to care for the wounded.

SOVIETS' FAIL

No Word Reaches Washington From Russian Capital.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—If the Russian soviet government is prepared to move toward settlement of the Russian war debt to the United States, as indicated yesterday by a Moscow foreign office spokesman, it has failed so far to give Washington officials any intimation of such an intention.

Should a formal overture be made, decision would rest with the American debt funding commission whose members now are nearly all absent from Washington. Any soviet commission probably would be denied entry to this country unless its proposals had been examined in some detail and found promising in advance of its arrival.

The Little things that count

on the fourth finger of the left hand, even though it weighs as much as four carats, is relatively small in size, but oh how much it counts! Of course there isn't another piece of jewelry which counts as much as that particular kind of diamond and its accompanying circlet, but what jewels lack in size this fall they make up in importance.

Nowadays there are two classes of jewelry—there are the really good pieces that may be worn for years, and the novel, ingenious fancies of the moment that come and go with the wind—that is, the wind of fashion. In this latter class at the present moment are the various slave chains and neck chains that one sees on so many smart women. Originally they were true slave chains—heavy links of one metal alone—now they are more dainty in appearance, utilizing smaller links, interspersed with links of colored galalith, or set with brilliants. With four, five and even six of these slave chains upon one arm, the concerts and opera may perhaps be neglected this winter—enough different tunes can be played by the jingling jangling arm bands to place the fair wearer in competition with the Philharmonic.

Everything seems to come in sets this year—the latest is a jeweled cigarette case and matching heels for one's evening slippers! Earrings, rings neck chain, slave chain, brooch—all may be alike.

Lingerie Is Fetching.

They are wearing them shorter and shorter—I mean every conceivable kind of undie comes in very short lengths this year. It seems a shame too—why should girls of long ago have been permitted to reveal their lace-edged pantalettes, and we never be allowed to bring the light of day to the dainty, adorable confections we wear? Filmy lace, exquisite embroidery and hand work—even if they remain hidden under our outer garments, they give us a delightful feeling of being really well-dressed.

The very newest sort of step-ins have a flat waistband, instead of the elastic we have been accustomed to see. They may button at the side or in front—they may even be tied with tiney little ribbons. Under a tight dress this may be an improvement on the elastic, which often bunches up and looks lumpy at inopportune moments.

Reptile Leather Seen.

The snake from the garden of Eden has planned another sortie upon the heart of Eve. Not content with forming her shoes, we have snakeskin pocketbooks and gloves with snakeskin cuffs. In fact, one often sees matching sets of this sort—shoes, pocketbook and gloves all repeating the same note, in snake, lizard or alligator skin. Belts, collars, cuffs, trimmings, everything has succumbed to the lure of the snake.

The new pocketbooks are almost overnight cases, they are so roomy. They take all sorts of queer shapes—like miniature hat boxes, or with oval bottom and top. Evening bags, on the contrary, grow smaller and smaller, and contrive to gather as much brilliance and sparkle into their small compass as possible.

Scarfs are important to keep fur collars from chafing or annoying the fair white neck. With sport coats a great many square scarfs are worn, knotted at one shoulder. The long scarf becomes narrower and narrower, but makes up for it by being most fascinatingly painted or printed. Hankies, too are many of them hand painted this year, sometimes repeating the design on the scarf.

Scarfs, hankies, gloves, pocketbooks, lingerie, jewelry—these are the "Little things that count" so much in the entire ensemble. Just one touch of color and the entire costume is made—so let us not overlook the little things in our eagerness to keep up with fashion's march.

DIVES FOR WHISKEY

Chief Borrows Living Suit and Rescues Liquor

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 1.—(AP)—An attempt of Glen Moran of Glenndale to destroy the evidence by throwing a jug alleged to contain moonshine whiskey in the Ohio river when officers arrived at his houseboat to arrest him for possessing liquor, was frustrated when Chief of Police A. K. McCluskey borrowed a bathing suit and dived eight feet of water to bring the jug to the surface.

Moran was arrested yesterday and held for the county grand jury charged with possession of liquor. He was released in $5,000 bond.

COMPETITION GROWS.

LONDON. Sept. 1.—Australia is trying to provide some of the roast beefe of old England that now comes largely from Chicago and Buenos Aires. A shipment of 69 tons, chilled by the circulation of cooled aid during a 53-day voyage has been put on sale. There's to be competition for Dixie also. Former English army officers are sailing shortly to attempt to grow cotton in Bolivia.

THE REAL ISSUE.

QUEBEC, Sept. 1.—One of the attractions of the city just now is August snow, but it is not the greatest magnet for Americans.

GENERAL GIVES WARNING WORD

Hines Addresses Incoming Class of Officers At Washington

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff of the army, welcoming the new class of army officers to the war college here today warned them that the needs of the army required an understanding by officers of the "supremacy of the dollar in time of peace."

"In most respects," General Hines said "our peace organization has been the result of a compromise between military expediency and cost with cost usually in the role of dictator. Therefore before you make recommendations for changes in the peace structure, I would advise that you consider the limitations imposed by appropriations and be sure that you fully understand the procedure involved in the operation of the budget system.

"A regular army of 150,000 could be organized, in my opinion, into a well balanced, modern defense establishment. But economic conditions dictate a minimum strength considerably below that figure. Current appreciation would maintain larger numerical force than at present if we neglected the allied questions of supply and training. Men without weapons only make an immediate military value.

"The depletion of our World war reserve of material has been so rapid in recent years that the war department found it necessary to request increased appropriations from the last congress for partial maintenance of the reserve at the expense of a reduction by 1,285 of the total number of non-commissioned officers and specialists. The loss of these grades will seriously affect the training of the organized reserves, the national guard and the reserve officers' training corps.

He Waits For 50 Years, And Then Gets His Kick

WASHINGTON. Sept. 1.—(AP)—Jeremiah Clifford, blacksmith, waited 59 years to get a kick out of life. Forty-two years he had fitted iron shoes to horses and mules and still no kick. It remained for a diminutive but cocky Rhode Island red roosters to furnish the kick that paralyzed.

Clifford told today how after having shod an estimated hundred thousand four-footed animals, he was attacked a few days ago by "Red," the guardian of his flock of hens, while he was throwing them food. "Red" for no apparent reason suddenly after a violent windup and several contortions lifted himself into the air and landed a sharp two-inch spur in the knee-cap of the blacksmith. The leg was paralyzed for two days and today Clifford was using both crutches and a cane as he hobbled about.

The kick from the rooster caused the first interruption, due to accident, since Clifford at the age of 17, started the trade of blacksmith.

PAY DAY COMES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Dividend checks in today's mail will be right handy for many returning vacationists, 268 publicly owned corporations paying a total of $7,000,000. In addition bond coupons are negotiable for $10,000,000.

WHAT TO EAT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The "R" months having returned, the oyster growers announce that specialty is 200 per cent stronger in iodine content than eggs, milk or beef steak, besides having various other merits.

Ponzi's Mother To Seek Aid Of Italian Leader

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Mrs. Rose Ponzi and her mother-in-law sailed for Italy today with the avowed intention of enlisting the aid of Premier Mussolini in saving her husband, Charles Ponzi, from prison. They were second class passengers on the liner President Wilson. Ponzi, now held in Texas for the Massachusetts authorities, is under sentence of seven to nine years as a common and notorious thief in connection with his finance operations i this state.

A commotion, caused by weeping friends and a denunciation by Charles D. Malaguti marked their departure. Mrs. Malaguti provided the $10,000 bail that enabled Ponzi to leave the state pending an appeal. When Ponzi failed to return for re-sentencing forfeiture proceedings were begun.

ANOTHER THREAT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Elbert H. Gray's Fifth Avenue home is threatened by the apartment house invasion to which Vanderbilts and Morgans already have yielded. Negotiations are in progress for it.

Kicks On a Tax Assessment And Gets Soaked Hard

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 1.—(AP)—William Riddle, former mayor and Atlantic City's largest individual taxpayer, was today ordered to pay taxes on an assessment of $1,200 for a set of platinum false teeth by a ruling of the Atlantic county board of taxation.

The former mayor was protesting against an assessment of $958,000 on Boardwalk property when in the heat of the argument he removed the glittering molars.

"I move you, Mr. President," said Walter McDevitt, an Atlantic City assessor, "that we assess the teeth at $1 200."

The question of jurisdiction arose as the former mayor is now a resident of Ventnor City. The board walk adjourned to think it over and after a recess decided that Atlantic City was entitled to the assessment since the teeth had been found here.

HATS that head the Procession

The Woolworth building is the tallest in the world, but now comes the word that Detroit plans to top New York's "topless tower" with an 85- story building. Every real estate operator, builder and architect in the world gasps and throws up his hands in despair—there is no possibility of defying gravity to a much greater height than that for some time to come.

Not so the French hat designers, though. They say, "Let detroit choose stone as the medium to reach unimagined heights—we shall use more pliable mediums. We shall use velvet and felt, and satin and moire and grosgrain, and build the highest crowned hats that have been seen for many a year." And higher and higher they build each one.

Square crowns, casquettes, berets, dented crowns, all become increasingly higher. What looked extreme last season is now quite moderate—our eyes have become accustomed to height now, and more and more we are realising that a few soft pokes, a little dent here and there, and presto! the high crown is made becoming to the most stubborn conservative, and she is forced to admit it herself.

Drape shir, poke ad dent: those are the watchwords of the millinery designers. Even our little felt hats have had to submit to the ignoble draped treatment—they who have weathered so many storms with just a dent here and there! About the only shape which is never draped is the high square crown—the crown that tried so hard last spring to gain entry into the lists of American fashion, and which is only succeeding, little by little, now.

And the nature of these drapes Mon Dieu! (as the Frenchman says)—they are barbaric, they are unheard of! Barbaric indeed—one of the extreme turbaned models I have seen is drawn backward and upward to a round swirl at the peak, with just the tiniest suggestion of a brim over the face. They are a far cry from the turbans I remember of two or three years ago—round, closely draped to the head, possibly up, up and up. Of course it goes without saying that these are French hats—American women never have, and never will, go in for such extremes. They will have to be toned down and modified to a great extent before the American woman will even touch them.

One of the felt models shown by a French designer is cone shaped—again high, drawn to a point at the top. It is not as bad as it sounds—no, really, it does not in the least resemble a dunce's hat, as it is more rounded below and not quite so pointed above. Then too, it has quite a brim in the front, turned up at the back.

Velvet Will Outshine Felt.

So they threaten us, at any rate. Felt is threatened in that manner every year, but each year finds its staunch supporters rising to the banner and refusing to allow its downfall. Felt, it is claimed, does not fit although we have been seeing it there for the past two or three winters. This winter though, I really believe that velvet will turn the trick. With the growing tendency of "sports wear only for sports, dress wear for dress," we will find the felt hat relegated to companionship with the rougher coat, and velvet accompanying the more elaborate, luxurious coat.

Will we see large shapes this winter? I hardly think that there will be many of them, because with large fur collars the large brim is very, very inconvenient—close up one's coat and one is likely to find one's hat rising upon one's head in horror? And even though the crown be abbreviated in the back, with heavy clothes there is not enough white space between the hat and the shoulders—the face looks sunken in and drawn—mind, though I do not say that none will be worn—there are always brave souls who will wear a becoming style, no matter how uncomfortable.

There will be more moderate size hats, with more of a brim than the tiny little hats we have been wearing—these in velvet, as well as felt and velour. I should hazard a guess that the small hat and the medium hat will divide the field, with a negligible corner to the large hat.

Formality descends upon us, and envelops and renders us powerless, willy nilly or no! Embroidery in colors and in gold and silver gives many hats a "no, thank you, we just came to call," air in marked contrast with the informal, free and easy air of heretofore. And feathers! Aigrettes and ostrich plumes. Paris threatens, though I doubt their gaining a strong hold in the states.

Still, formality does not prevent gayiety—it rather encourages it. Metal ribbons of a new type—soft in weave and not so harsh-feeling, are being utilized on velvet and felt hats.

As a compromise between velvet and felt, there is batter's plush—and several new types of felt—like soleil, and antelope, which has the lustrous appearance of velvet.

The darker colors will be the favorites, as always in fall and winter—black and dark blue, with dark shades of red and green. However, unlike last year, there will be more freedom in the choice of millinery colors—the hat may match the fur or the hosiery, instead of the coat, as it did last year.

So far there seems to be no outstanding model, like the "Gigolo" of last year—at least we shall be spared the horror of seeing every other head crowned with the same "Ford model" with no regard for its becomingness to the wearer. Let us praise the Lord for this one small mercy—and now armed with advice, we may depart and seek to find our new chapeaux—hoping that this time, at least, we shall find the exclusive, the becoming, the smart, hat for which we search!

STILL MAKE MONEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Valentino films are making $30,000 a day for his estate.

Loeb, Leopold Have Chance At Release Some Day

CHICAGO, Sept. 1—(AP)—Attention was directed again today at Chicago's most sensational criminal case when it became known that existing statutes might be construed as permitting the parole from Joliet of Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb when they had served 11 years and three months.

The legal twist under which the "thrill" slayers of Bobby Franks might be freed in 1935 was brought to theattention of state's attorney, Robert E. Crowe by Hinton G. Clabaugh, newly appointed state supervisor of paroles, after he had checked over the records of inmates at Joliet. The Chicago slayers were sentenced by Judge John R. Caverly to serve ninety nine years for kidnaping Franks and were given life terms for murdering the youth, but Mr. Clabaugh said the jurist had failed to specify whether the sentences run concurrently or consecutively.

"Under the law," he explained, the judge specifies they should run

This, Clabaugh said, would mean that Leopold and Loeb would be eligible for parole at the end of twenty years and three months if the life sentence is considered the longer or thirty-three years if the ninety-nine year term is held the longest.

With time off for good behavior and the merit system of awards, Leopold and Loeb might automatically become eligible for freedom in eleven years and three months from the date of their commitment—or nine years and three months from this September 11.

"Of course, I don't want to be misunderstood," Mr. Clabaugh said. "You may be sure that as long as I have anything to do with the pardoning or paroling of Leopold and Loeb, they will be required to stay in the penitentiary for the very maximum of years legally possible.

"But who knows what the situation might be nine years hence?"

State's Attorney Crowe said that he could not discuss the technicalities involved at this time, but he added:

"I will say that I think Loeb and Leopold to be two of the most vicious criminals I ever handled, and any direct move whatever to free them will be strenuously opposed by me as long as I'm in office."

THE U. S. BRAND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The American brand of socialism: Wall Street statistics are that 315,470 employes hold stock valued at $455,000,000 in 22 representative corporations. One estimate of the total stock holdings by corporation employes is $700,000,000.

The ART of being BEAUTIFUL

Beauty is relative—and Eskimo would probably consider our prize beauties the ugliest women he ever saw. However there are two requisites of beauty recognized the world over—these are a clear, youthful complexion and well-kept hair.

The color of your eyes, the shape of your face, the size of your mouth—these you cannot change, and you must be content to take these gifts of nature as they are. But skin and hair are sensitive and easily affected. Through neglect natural beauty may be lost, and through proper care and watchfulness unknown possibilities may be developed.

The care of the hair is a more simple matter than care of the skin. First, of course, absolute cleanliness is a necessity. Hair inclined to be oily may be shampooed once a week, or twice in three weeks, with absolute safety—if a pure mild soap is used. In fact, the oftener such hair is shampooed the healthier it grows.

Dry hair, of course, requires different treatment. Once every two or three weeks it should be washed—in the interim it may be given a "dry shampoo," with one of the preparations obtainable at any good beauty parlor or drug store.

The shampoo, however, should not be merely a "head-wash." At the time the shampoo is given, and oftener if possible, one should endeavor to massage the scalp. Strong, tireless fingers are necessary for that task, and it is rather difficult to do it properly oneself. It is the wise woman who, even though she washes her own hair, goes frequently and receives a stimulating and vigorous scalp massage. Brushing the hair every night and morning also helps to make healthy hair—which is the only beautiful hair.

So many times have I heard the question. "Will marcel waving hurt the hair?" The answer is no, if it is not done too frequently (once a week is not too often) and if the attendant is careful not to use too hot an iron. The hair is dead tissue anyway, and if it is too dry, the application of a little brilliantine or oil before the wave will take away all danger of its becoming brittle and easily broken. The same answer can be given in regard to permanent waving—an experienced, careful operator can never harm your hair. Of course water waving can never do any one any harm—on the contrary it is beneficial. That method of waving, however, can only be used upon slightly curly hair.

There is no gainsaying the fact that bobbed hair is easier to care for—but sometimes the added care of long hair is worth while. The secret of having pretty hair is, first of all take care of its health, and secondly choose a becoming style and keep it. Do not change the manner in which your hair is cut or dressed every other week. Experiment until you find the proper frame for your face, and then let no amount of persuasion tempt you. If you feel that it looks best long, do not cut it—and vice versa, if it is really most becoming bobbed, let it remain so.

The Care of the Skin.

Care of the skin is a more complicated matter than that of the hair, but like the hair, there are two different types to consider.

In winter a dry skin will chap easily. Avoid anything which will make the dry skin dryer—that is, hot water and soap. To cleanse the skin a good cold cream should be used once a day. The cream should be gently patted on the face, then removed by means of a soft damp cloth. It is very important that this cloth be always clean—do not use one which has been previously used without washing it. The squares of cheesecloth that are sold in sanitary packages now are very convenient for that purpose.

Take care to remove all grease and dirt—then splash the face with cold water. Although ice packs are good for the dry skin, they should not be attempted at home but administered only by a beauty specialist. A vanishing cream or face lotion to soothe the dry skin is good after the treatment I have described.

This treatment should never be used more than once a day—before retiring is the best time. During the day, wash the face often with cold water.

The woman with an oily skin has a different problem to face. She has to combat the tendency of the oil to gather and clog up the pores, enlarging them and often forming blackheads. The treatment which she must use once a day is opposite in effect and intention to that given a dry skin.

First soak the face in hot water until it becomes crimson. This opens the pores. Then lather the face with a good mild soap, rubbing the lather in well with the tips of the fingers or a complexion brush. Rinse the soap off thoroughly with hot water—then use cold water for the final touch, to again close the pores. For a moderately oily skin it may be well to follow this with a light vanishing cream, as otherwise the skin may be left in too dry a condition.

In choosing lotions, soap, vanishing and cold creams, it is well to obtain the advice of an experienced beauty specialist. Dry and oily skins, fine and coarse skins—each requires a different preparation. More harm can be done by using the wrong sort of soap or lotion than by using none at all.

Cosmetics should be chosen with like precautions. In this connection, the beauty specialist can give advice not only on the proper brand of powder and rouge, but also upon the proper shade which should be used by each individual.

Protecting the Hands.

Beautiful hands are an accomplishment. No woman ever had beautiful hands unless she consciously tried to make them so especially if she was a resident of the temperate zone, where changes in the climate force the skin to adjust itself to different temperatures.

What happens when you go out into the cold? If you wear thin gloves, the blood vessels contract, making the skin feel cold and shriveled. Simultaneously, the secretion of perspiration is stopped, causing the skin to become dry. Continued exposure to the cold causes the skin to become habitually dry and horny—eventually leads to chronic chapped hands.

How can this condition be prevented? First, always wash the hands with warm water—not hot. Be careful to rinse off all the soap used, especially if it is liquid soap. Then be sure to dry the hands thoroughly afterwards, for a wet skin is a cold skin and a cold skin chaps. Paper towels are very bad for the hands in winter, but if it is absolutely essential that you use them, a good plan is to keep a tube of cold cream handy, or a bottle of lotion and rub this into the hands after each washing. Almost any preparation on the market is good—some are better for one skin than others so it is better to purchase trial sizes until you find one satisfactory for your skin

If your skin is vxery sensitive a good plan is to use the cream or lotion not only after washing, but both before and after going out into the cold It is better to use a little very often than to use a great deal once or twice a day. If you are not blessed with beautifully shaped hands, at least by using such methods you can acquire skin of a fine, smooth, white texture, which is half the battle.

Spain's Request for Tangier Threatens Europe's Peace

International disputes of a potentially grave nature may arise from Spain's formal request that the present International Zone of Tangier, Morocco, directly opposite Gibraltar, be put wholly under Spanish control. At present England, France, Italy and Spain are actively interested in the situation at Tangier, each nation maintaining that monopoly of the zone by any other nation is dangerous. Britain and Italy are expected most actively to oppose Spain's request, which is to be presented formally at the impending meeting of the League of Nations. Above is a panorama of the city of Tangier. The map indicates the strategic position of the city.

MAN HELD ON MANN CHARGE

Oklahoma Engineer Jailed After Girl Makes Statement

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 1.—(AP)—William P. Lear, who described himself as a radio engineer of Tulsa, Okla., is in the Erie county jail here facing a charge of violating the Mann white slave act, growing out of a romantic trip he is said to have made from Tulsa to points in Texas with pretty Madeline Benson of Tulsa, as his companion.

Lear, who is 24 years old, was arrested at a hotel here on a Mann act warrant issued after his indictment by a federal grand jury in Oklahoma. He will be arraigned before a federal commissioner here at an early date.

In an interview here last night Lear blamed his plight on his frequent visits to a Tulsa drug store, lured by his fondness for malted milks. He said it was while paying his checks in the store that he met Miss Benson, cashier in the establishment. He confessed that from then on he devoted little time to his wife and family. He said he "threw his love at the feet of the girl."

The romance is said to have reached a climax when Miss Benson's relatives took her to Kansas City. Lear followed her to Kansas City, he said, where he encountered the relatives and met with vigorous treatment. He finally fled east, he declared, only to be arrested here.

Lear said he refused to believe the girl had gone before a grand jury and given testimony which resulted in his indictment. He exhibited a 16-page letter he had just written to her.

BETTIS DIES IN HOSPITAL

Noted Army Flyer Is Victim of Crash On Mountain

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Lieutenant Cyrus K. Bettis, army flier injured in a crash in Pennsylvania last week, died today at Walter Reid hospital.

Death resulted from spinal meningitis which developed after the injured flier was believed to be on his way to recovery. He was brought to Walter Reid hospital several days ago in an ambulance airplane from Bellefonte, Pa., where his injury occurred.

Lieutenant Bettis gained outstanding prominence as a flier by winning the Pulitzer air races in 1925 at which time he set a record of 248.99 miles per hour. In capturing the trophy for the army that year he defeated Lieutenant Al Williams, navy flier for a long time holder of the air speed record.

Entering the army during the war, Bettis served with the American air corps in France and since its close participated in a number of prominent army air maneuvers.

His work in the Pulitzer races, coupled with his record in war and peace time flying in the army resulted in his selection as a member of the corps of fliers detailed for exhibition work at the Sesqui-Centennial exposition in Philadelphia. This was his last assignment.

Leaving Philadelphia August 23 in company with two other planes for Selfridge Field, Mich., he became lost in a fog and crashed into Seven Sister mountain. He was unconscious for an hour and a half after the crash.

Unable to summon assistance or water to attract the attention of planes sent to look for him, Bettis with one leg broken and both jaws fractured dropped and crawled several miles through the mountains to a road near Bellefonte, Pa., where he was found and taken to a hospital in that city.

He was missing for more than 43 hours during which time he was without food, and had only the rain water that he caught in his hands.

Theatres Closed As Men Walk Out

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—All but one of the San Antonio theaters were faced Wednesday with the possibility of a walkout of stage hands and operators following a demand for more pay and more employes. Contracts with the employes of most of the leading theaters expired Tuesday night and in houses where the contracts had not been renewed, to meet the demands, stage hands and operators did not appear at the regular opening time of 11 o'clock Wednesday.

Early morning theater-goers and those who utilize the lunch time to see a picture, surprised by the sudden action, lined the sidewalks in front of vacant box offices.

Farmers Plan Cotton Co-op.

OLNEY, Sept. 1.—Farmers in the vicinity of Olney will meet at the Lakeside school house, five miles southwest of here Monday night to perfect an organization to promote the cotton growing industry in this section of the state, and to set a standard price for cotton pickers this year, it has been announced.

STEAL CASTOR OIL

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Liquor thieves apparently do not stop at stealing anything that their suspicions lead them to believe is alcohol. Early today they broke into a chemical wholesale warehouse and hauled off four gallons of castor oil. As flavoring they took along $400 worth of alcohol.

Blow On Head Wakes Him Up

DALLAS, Sept. 1.—(AP)—A blow on the head with a peg leg has brought memory back to a mystery man in jail at Waco and enabled Dallas police to identify him.

The man was placed in jail at Waco on August 26. He was unable to tell his name and for several days remained "unknown." Last Monday, according to reports from Waco, he was struck on the head with a wooden leg when a fellow prisoner stumbled and fell. The leg knocked the mystery man unconscious.

When he regained consciousness, he remembered an accident in 1920 at Burkburnett in which he received a blow on the head. After this blow, he said, he could remember nothing of his past and that he had been wandering about for six years.

The blow from the peg leg enabled him to remember the Burkburnett accident and he told officers about it. The man's finger prints were then taken and compared with finger prints here and at Huntsville and it was discovered that his name was William Lewis Warren. He had been sent to Huntsville penitentiary in 1924 from Wise county for forgery.

DAIRY PLEA FOR ELECTRA

County Line School to Show How to Gain Milk Profits

ELECTRA, Sept. 1.—A dairy meeting is planned by the chamber of commerce for next Tuesday night at which time a comedy sketch will take place of the lecture at the County Line school. "We are assured of the dairy meeting we have been expecting for several weeks, "was the announcement of the agricultural committee of the Electra Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture, issued today. The meeting is billed for 8 o'clock at the County Line school house eight miles north of Electra.

The correspondence which the manager of the Electra chamber has had with Mrs. A. H. Leonard of St. Louis informs him that in place of the contemplated lecture there will be substituted a play, "Joe Guess Wins $1,000." The purpose of the play is identical with that of a lecture, namely, to arouse an interest in better feeding methods among the farmers and dairymen and to show each dairyman how he can produce milk at a lower rate per gallon. But the facts are dressed into an interesting form with plenty to make it really an evening of entertainment as well as information.

Mr. Leonard will take the part of Bob Profit, the leading character in the play. The other characters are Joe Guess, Bill Know and Mr. Shaw, the banker. Joe Guess, the dairyman who does not believe in better dairy methods, is the chief comedian with the laughable comments each time Know and Profit attempt to show him better methods.

The play is given here under the management of the chamber of commerce and agriculture. The performance is free.

FARM COTTON MEET CALLED

Electrans to Organize To Combat Ravages Of Leaf Worm

ELECTRA, Sept. 1.—A mass meeting of farmers has been called by the agricultural committee of the Electra Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture to meet at the chamber of commerce hall at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a campaign to control the cotton leaf worm. The principal speaker at this meeting will be Mr. Caperton, district representative of the Farm Bureau Cotton association, who has been doing some very valuable work in directing the campaign against the leaf worm in Wilbarger county.

Reports from local farmers indicate that due to the recent heavy rains, the prospects are that the leaf worm may very seriously damage our cotton crop unless steps are immediately taken to control them by poisoning.

Rural Schools Of Electra To Open

ELECTRA, Sept. 1.—The Beaver Creek, Clara, Sunshine Hill, Fowlkes, Rocky Point and Barwise rural schools, together with the Electra city schools will open Monday, September 6. These communities are in Electra's trade territory, as is County Line, where the school has been in session for a week past, having begun its term two weeks early in order that a recess could be declared during the cotton picking season.

Three school districts, Fowlkes, Barwise and Rocky Point, have purchased trucks during the summer and will place them in use at the opening of the term. Beaver Creek and Electra already own and operate trucks for school purposes.

Vacancies in the rural and city school lists of teachers have all been filled, signed contracts having been obtained by the trustees of the respective districts in all instances.

The very thought is a burden—but it needn't be! Use Savex—use it in a washing machine, use it at tub and washboard, use it for hand-bowl pick-up pieces—it will be equally successful. No boiling or bluing is ever necessary, and only when clothes are badly soiled need you soak or rub.

Washed with Savex, cottons and linens become dazzling white, colored things remain bright and silks and woolens retain their textile beauty. Of course, care must be used with delicately tinted fabrics.

There is a delight in using Savex, too. Besides being safe and easy for washing, its qualities of good soap, water softener and bleach will also protect and improve the looks of your hands.
