Hispanics take election spotlight

As election draws closer, both parties seek ethnic vote

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Whether it's President Clinton campaigning in El Paso or Republican Sen. Phil Gramm in San Antonio, candidates from both parties have honed in on a common audience as Election Day nears: Hispanic voters.

Clinton finished a two-day campaign swing through El Paso and San Antonio on Saturday, with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and key Hispanic cabinet members making additional stops in Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Del Rio and Laredo.

Gramm, facing Democrat Victor Morales in the U.S. Senate race, campaigned in San Antonio on Friday and Sunday and made appearances in McAllen, Laredo, Del Rio and El Paso on Saturday.

The last-minute push signifies the increasing importance of the Latino electorate in Texas, and its potential for dramatically altering the outcome of Tuesday's election, analysts said.

"The Hispanic vote in Texas is a sleeping giant," said Joe Cutbirth, spokesman for the Texas Democratic campaign.

Republicans and Democrats alike agree that Hispanics could provide the swing votes in both the presidential and Senate races.

Polls show Clinton and Republican nominee Bob Dole in a statistical dead heat in Texas, with Dole holding a slight edge. But some analysts contend Clinton has a shot at the Lone Star State if Hispanic voters make a huge showing at the polls.

"Texas is competitive, and both parties are looking at how either Dole keeps it or Clinton takes it. The Latino vote is going to be the deciding factor," said Lydia Camarillo, executive director of the San Antonio-based Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project, a nonpartisan voter registration group.

Hispanic voter registration is at an all-time high in Texas. This year, 1.6 million Hispanics are registered to vote, compared with 1.2 million in 1992, Ms. Camarillo said.

Four years ago, when Clinton lost Texas to George Bush, 666,000 Hispanics voted, 76 percent of whom chose Clinton. This year, 1.1 million Hispanics are expected to vote, again with as much as 80 percent expected to back Clinton, she said.

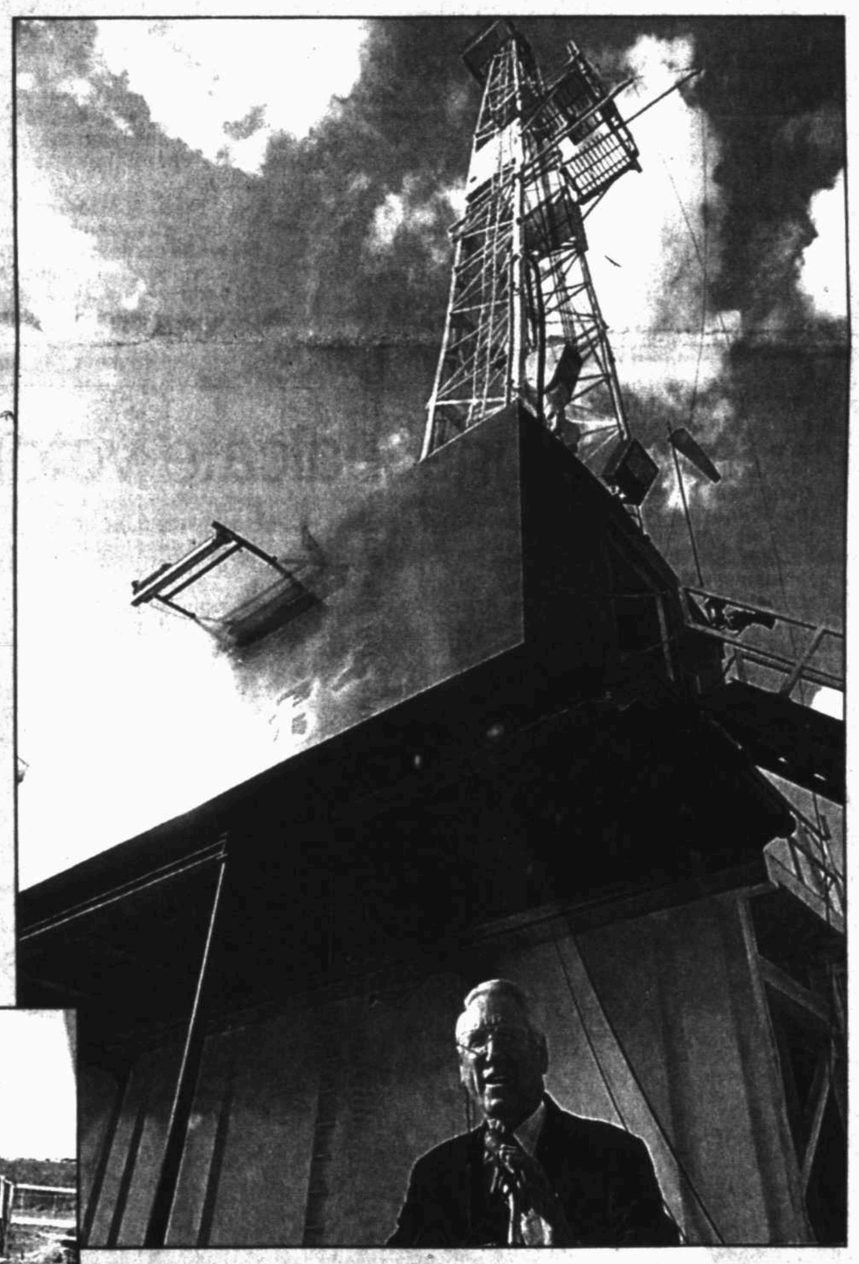

Nationwide, a record 6.6 million Hispanics are registered to vote, a 28 percent increase over 1992, Ms. Camarillo said.

Several factors have contributed to the

New exhibit dedicated at museum

While the 500-ton rotary-drilling rig, a symbolic stalwart of the West Texas petroleum industry, shot its derrick 148 feet into the sky, Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews saluted the oil-and-gas industry and deemed the rig a "great testimony to the oil industry in Midland and (elsewhere) in West Texas.

"This is a great example of the industry working together with the community to tell the good story of the oil-and-gas industry," Matthews said Sunday afternoon at the dedication of the million-pound rotary rig on grounds of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library, and Hall of Fame.

Dole campaigns for Californians' votes one-by-one

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — After a six-hour pause in his "nonstop" juggernaut to Election Day, a refreshed but hoarse Bob Dole hit the phones Sunday to rally voters one by one. To weary campaign aides, he offered this advice: "Keep your fingers crossed."

Ratcheting up the stakes in this election, the Republican challenger cast Tuesday's balloting as a referendum on the integrity of the very office of president of the United States.

"I believe the election will determine character does count," Dole told a GOP picnic in this inland area east of Los Angeles. "In 1992, Bill Clinton wanted to be president in the worst way, and now he is."

After attending church services with his wife, Elizabeth, Dole basked in the sun of this must-win state and assured supporters that everywhere, "the polls are moving our way."

Trying to nudge the numbers further, Dole rolled out his maximum star power and was joined at the picnic by vice presidential running mate Jack Kemp, singers the Oak Ridge Boys, actress Bo Derek and the Osmond family singers.

But for all his talk of building momentum, Dole still was not drawing the crowds of thousands that a presidential campaign might expect in its fevered final days. Just 300 or so supporters turned out for his sunny midday appearance outside the San Diego GOP headquarters.

"With your support and your dedication these next two days, it is going to happen," Dole said to a rustle of pompoms.

Inside, the Doles joined 21 volunteers who were working the phones. Dole, who won pledged votes from a man, his wife and daughter, held on to optimism. "That's three already. We're ahead," he quipped.

Making his final 48-hour push to oust President Clinton, Dole planned to spend all of Sunday mining California for its 54 electoral votes — key to his longshot hopes of victory.

His campaign boasted of a quick GOP poll taken Saturday morning that found Clinton's lead in the state shrunken to 5 points. Democrats and others involved in California races put Clinton's lead at twice that. Dole himself acknowledged that the handful of points being claimed by Ross Perot would help the GOP ticket.

"Perot doesn't want Clinton elected, I know that for certain," Dole said. "If you're a Perot supporter and you want GISENYI, Rwanda — In the shadow of towering Mount Nyiragongo volcano, a seemingly endless line of refugees trudged north Sunday from the Zairian city of Goma to escape advancing Tutsi rebels and their Rwandan allies. From a hillside across the border in Rwanda, it was impossible to see a beginning or end to the stream of people heading past the once teeming Kibumba refugee camp in the valley below.

LONDON — British Telecommunications PLC said Sunday it will buy MCI Communications Corp. in a $20 billion-plus deal that would be the biggest foreign takeover of a U.S. corporation in history. The deal, formally announced after boards of both companies approved, caused concern at fellow phone superpower AT&T Corp., which stands to lose the most from the marriage. The companies promised a "communications powerhouse."

'Down-ballot' candidates help add spice to mostly dull race

Associated Press

Space aliens have not kidnapped President Clinton. Bob Dole has not offered to pose nude in Playgirl. Ross Perot is not transsexual.

This election season has been perfectly normal — at the top of the ballot. Some might even call it dull.

But lurking elsewhere on the ticket, and around the country, are unusual, interesting or downright weird races, contests that put the camp back in campaign and the crass in democracy.

Consider the campaign for Volusia County Council in New Smyrna Beach, Fla. Nothing unusual here, except that incumbent Lynne Plaskett said she was rousted from her bed one night by space aliens, who levitated her and cured her of cancer. Her opponent says he's glad she was cured.

Or the race for Maryland's 4th Congressional District, where Republican John Kimble, running in heavily Democratic territory, said he'd pose nude for Playgirl if radio shockmeister Howard Stern would help him raise $1 million. The response was uncharacteristic silence from Stern.

Or Southern California's 27th Congressional District, where Libertarian Elizabeth Michael is trying the scattershot approach to identity politics. She

Clinton administration to announce cabinet departures early this week

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Although they're not calling it a major shakeup, aides to President Clinton said Sunday they expect several Cabinet secretaries to announce this week that they won't be part of a second administration.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he expected four to six secretaries to announce plans to resign, though their departures may not be immediate.

Stressing that it is too soon to predict who will be on the list, the official said he wouldn't be surprised if any of the following leave: Defense Secretary William Perry, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Commerce Secretary Mickey Kantor, Attorney General Janet Reno, Energy's Hazel O'Leary, Transportation's Federico Pena and Housing chief Henry Cisneros. Other officials said Education Secretary Richard Riley is considering leaving.

The White House plans to announce in one swoop which Cabinet secretaries won't stay for a second Clinton term if he wins re-election on Tuesday, according to another administration official; he said the list will include those who are departing on their own terms and those whom Clinton wants out.

"The idea is to preserve their dignity and give (the president) the flexibility he needs" to form a new Cabinet, said the official, who gave no numbers but said it would not be a major shakeup. The new batch of secretaries will not be named.

WEATHER WATCH

Today's high to be around 70

Staff Report

Today, on eve of Tuesday's general election, the weather is to be mostly sunny and mild with a daytime peak temperature in the lower 70s, and winds are to be westerly at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Tonight's temperature should be between 40 and 45 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

On election day, the temperature is to reach a comfortable mid-70s.

Sunday's high temperature was 68 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 43 degrees.

Midland's record high temperature for Nov. 3 is 86 degrees in 1988. The record low temperature for the date is 22 degrees in 1991.

Nov. 4's record high temperature was 89 degrees in 1988. The record low temperature for the date is 18 degrees in 1991.

STATE

An upper-level system brought showers to the Panhandle and Northwest Texas on Sunday, with the rainfall expected to continue through the beginning of the week.

The showers developed along a trough that stretched from Midland through Lubbock, Amarillo and Childress, including the Permian Basin and the South Plains, the National Weather Service said.

Departure of a cool surface high-pressure system from Texas into the eastern United States combined with the trough to produce southerly flow. It brought low-level Gulf moisture and low clouds to coastal sections and South Texas.

Winds were mainly southerly at 10 to 15 mph, with easterly to southeasterly gusts to 25 mph in South Texas and generally low humidity.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 54 degrees at Dalhart to 75 at Cotulla and 77 at Harlingen.

More scattered rainfall was expected through Tuesday across the state as a Pacific cold front moves through the region.

Daytime highs should range from the high 60s and low 70s to 80s after morning lows from the 30s in the Panhandle and West Texas mountains to 40s in the Hill Country and 60s along the coast.

NATION

Snow fell in parts of the Great Lakes and Northeast on Sunday as an autumn chill moved in. Cold rain showers moved toward the Plains, and snow fell across the Rockies.

About 6 inches of snow was on the ground in Jamestown in western New York, and Cleveland picked up 2 inches. In Mount Washington, N.H., 4 inches of snow fell and the temperature dropped to a record 1 degree.

Other cities with record cold temperatures for the date included Bluefield, W.Va., at 21 degrees, and Bristol, Tenn., at 23.

An arctic front was draped from northwestern North Dakota to westcentral Montana.

Scattered snow showers were falling across the Rockies in New Mexico and Colorado, extending into Arizona and Utah, and numerous snow advisories were posted for higher elevations.

Up to 7 inches of snow was possible for southern Utah and southern Colorado, and mountainous areas could get a foot.

Colder air was moving across the Pacific Northwest, with scattered showers over Washington and Oregon. Snow was expected in higher elevations in the Cascades.

Sunday's temperatures around the Lower 48 ranged from low readings of 13 degrees at Eveleth, Minn., Jackson, Wyo., and Big Piney, Wyo., to a mid-afternoon high of 82 at Homestead, Fla.

RACE: Strange candidates help add spice to campaign

identifies herself as a transsexual and lesbian of black, white and American Indian ancestry, and a practicing Jew who accepts Jesus as the Messiah. Her heroes include Margaret Thatcher and Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Elsewhere on the campaign trail:

THE SMELL-O-RAMA CAMPAIGN — In Alabama, a 30-second TV spot for state Supreme Court incumbent Kenneth Ingram makes a judicious, reasoned argument against his opponent. It opens with an image of a skunk and a narrator intoning, "Some things you can smell a mile away."

BUT THE PERSONAL TOUCH MEANS SO MUCH MORE — Mickey Conroy, a candidate for board of supervisors in Orange County, Calif., made an obscene hand gesture when he spotted his GOP runoff opponent at a rally.

NO-JACK CITY — In the 9th Congressional District of Texas, G. Jack Brooks dropped out of the race after a judge refused to allow him to appear on the ballot under that name. Actually, G. Jack is no Jack at all. He is Gary A. Brooks and no relation to the district's former 21-term congressman ... drumroll, please ... the Hon. Jack Brooks.

THE NAME GAME — Famous names on Tuesday's ballot include Harry Connick Sr., father of Jr., running for re-election as district attorney in New Orleans; and Steve Keillor, brother of Garrison "Prairie Home Companion" Keillor, running for the Minnesota state Senate.

THE NAME GAME, CONT. — The most widely recognized name may be that of stock-car king Richard Petty, who is running — perhaps a little too fast — for secretary of state in North Carolina. Petty was charged with reckless driving and hit and run after he allegedly bumped a car from behind on Interstate 85 as he drove home from the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

THE NAME GAME, IT NEVER ENDS — Famous political names on the ballot include Phil Willkie, grandson of 1940 GOP presidential candidate Wendell Willkie, running for Congress in Minnesota; John E. Sununu, son of the former New Hampshire governor (and CNN "Crossfire" wit) John Sununu, running for Congress in New Hampshire; and Winthrop Paul Rockefeller, need we say more, who has outspent his Democratic opponent for lieutenant governor in Arkansas by almost 7-1. (Rockefeller, for those who have lost their Rocky family tree, is the son of former Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller, the nephew of former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, and the great-grandson of John D. Rockefeller.)

YOU THINK THAT'S OUTSPENDING — Winthrop Rockefeller apparently never attended the Kennedy School of Campaign Finance. In Rhode Island, Rep. Patrick Kennedy is outspending his opponent, Giovanni Cicione, by roughly 62-1. In Massachusetts, Rep. Joseph Kennedy has raised so much money — $1.7 million — in a race he could have won on a dime that Republicans are beginning to grumble that his GOP opponent is little more than a fund-raising gimmick for Kennedy.

NOW TANGERINES, THAT'S ANOTHER STORY — Finally, there's the race for public weigher in Lubbock County, Texas. The public weigher is strictly charged with weighing locally grown oranges, but there's a catch: Oranges don't grow around Lubbock. Libertarian Michael Rubin, demonstrating no understanding whatsoever of the American political system, says if he wins, he'll eliminate the job because it's pointless.

PLAN: Clinton administration to announce Cabinet changes

immediately.

The news is expected to be announced after a Cabinet meeting late this week. White House chief of staff Leon Panetta has been quietly feeling out Cabinet members about their prospects.

The first official also confirmed reports that Panetta is leaving his post sometime after the inauguration. He planned to make the decision official in conjunction with the Cabinet announcement, the aide said.

No candidate to replace Panetta has emerged as a clear frontrunner, though North Carolina businessman Erskine Bowles and deputy National Security Adviser Sandy Berger are considered top prospects. Other candidates include Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, top political aide Harold Ickes and Kantor.

Clinton is not expected to pick Panetta's replacement in time for the announcement next week, the aide said.

VOTE: Both parties want Hispanic votes

increased participation by this traditionally quiet electorate, Ms. Camarillo said. Among them is a sense of a growing anti-Latino sentiment, exhibited by new laws cracking down on illegal immigrants and restricting welfare benefits for legal aliens.

"They understand that their vote is going to be a ticket to ensuring that we are going to be treated with respect and dignity," she said.

Sandra Huron, 38, of San Antonio is one of those newly registered voters.

"Other than having my children and being a grandmother, I think voting ... is the most exciting thing I could ever have done," said Mrs. Huron, who brought her 15-year-old daughter to a get-out-the-vote rally Friday in San Antonio. "Sharing that with my children and my grandchildren is probably one of the biggest highlights as a Latina woman."

Morales' unexpected nomination as the Democratic candidate for Senate also has energized Hispanic voters. He is the first Hispanic U.S. Senate candidate in the state.

"Mr. Morales' campaign has invigorated and motivated Hispanics much more so this year than in prior elections," said Roy Barrera Jr., chairman of the Bexar County Republican Party. "His ethnicity is a magnet for many who would otherwise take no interest in either registering or voting."

Ironically, even though Morales is credited for increasing Hispanic participation, a big turnout of Hispanic voters might not be enough to revive his campaign. Polls show incumbent Gramm with a double-digit lead over the former schoolteacher.

"If the Latino vote makes a difference on Election Day, it will make a difference only in the presidential election," said Bill Miller, a political consultant who represents Democrats and Republicans.

A Clinton victory in Texas would be a coup. The last Democratic presidential candidate to capture the state was Jimmy Carter.

Some believe the opportunity for an upset in Texas, one that hinges on Hispanics, is what drove the Clinton campaign to predominantly Hispanic regions of Texas.

"I think Clinton is worried about turnout among Hispanics and is pushing for that," said Charlie Cotrell, a political science professor at St. Mary's University in San Antonio. "Why would he do it in Texas and not California? I think he'd like to steal this from Dole."

Added Barrera: "Clearly, the president and his political advisers realize that if they want to carry Texas, they're going to carry it with the Hispanic vote."

DOLE: Candidate works on California voters

to defeat Bill Clinton, what do you do? You vote for Bob Dole and Jack Kemp."

From California, Dole was headed back to several Republican strongholds he's feverishly worked to hold ahead of Tuesday's voting: Arizona, Texas and Louisiana among them.

"Rock Around the Clock" was the be-bopping tune enlivening Dole's Saturday appearances, but by 7:30 a.m. EST Sunday, after 46 1/2 hours of campaigning, Dole took a pause, settling into a La Jolla, Calif. hotel for six hours. He told reporters that he slept for about four hours and was sucking cough drops to soothe his throat.

Sensitive to the fanfare about Dole's pledge to go nonstop for 96 hours, spokesman Nelson Warfield said the respite was more of a "hygiene break" than a nap.

Dole himself joked in Las Vegas of ulterior motives: "We want the press to get some rest so they'll write nice stories about us."

Sharing his stage at the MGM Grand hotel and casino with singer Wayne Newton, Dole said he knew better than Clinton where the nation should head.

"Nobody's perfect. But I think I've got a little better compass and a little better commitment to what America ought to be about," Dole said.

As he raced time zones to squeeze the most out of his schedule this last campaign weekend, Dole placed a wee-hours call to the staffers who had volunteered to keep his Washington headquarters humming through the night.

"Well, you're young, you can handle it all right," Dole cracked over the phone from the front cabin of his charter jet. "Keep your fingers crossed and keep on working."

RIG: New exhibit dedicated in Sunday ceremony

(From 1A)

it is at - the future of the country" in the petroleum realm. Within its formations, there are 12 billion barrels of "known" reserves "still in the ground out here that we know about."

Matthews said that he has cause to worry "about the future of the country and all of these enormous amounts of (oil) imports we are bringing in from foreign countries."

However, "when you look around the country, the only place that can change the amount of oil imports we are bringing into the United States is Texas."

"And in Texas, the only place that can change it is the Permian Basin," which "has more oil deposits here than any place else in the state or any place else in the country," Matthews said.

The three members of the Texas Railroad Commission seek "to encourage drilling activity out here in the Permian Basin," which takes in much of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico. "And you folks are doing a great job," said Matthews, who serves on the commission with Barry Williamson and Carole Keeton Rylander.

"We are in the middle of a miniboom out here right now, and people are feeling good," Matthews asserted. "The price of oil is reasonable. And there's a lot of activity."

Of the 1975-established Petroleum Museum, Matthews said that the facility "really does show the positive effects of the oil industry."

Matthews cited the oil industry's contribution of tax dollars and noted its role in furthering higher education. "If you went to a state college, you benefited from the revenues from the oil industry ... from oil that was found on state land."

Former Midlander Martin Allday, who accompanied Matthews to the dedication ceremony, commended the museum's rotary-rig addition and focused on the museum's "exciting" advancements to come.

"The museum is now thinking ahead, and it is going to be bringing in some of today's technology: Three-D (Dimensional) and horizontal-drilling exhibits," said Allday, who is an Austin oil-and-gas attorney and a former museum trustee. During former President George H.W. Bush's administration in the late 1980s and early 1990s, Allday served briefly as general counsel to the U.S. Department of the Interior and then, for about 3-1/2 years, as chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

Allday said that he does "miss Midland. I miss the people. I love the climate."

Of the petroleum industry, Allday said that he is "pleased and happy" with "the restructuring of the gas business, which happened" during his FERC chairmanship.

And as technology advances to the electronic bulletin boards, people in the industry will "understand and talk in the same language," he said. "The gas producer is going to get more for his gas than he was getting when he was selling to the pipelines. The consumer is going to pay less. The pipelines like it, because they are going to be moving more gas."

Not only a tribute to the petroleum industry, dedication of the rotary rig was a compliment to retired Midland driller W.V. "Red" Roberts and more than a hundred people whose donations made the rig exhibit a reality. FWA Drilling Company assembled the rig, which includes its draw works, mast, rig floor, mud pits, pipe racks, and dog house.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce's M-Squad ambassadors joined Roberts, who coordinated acquisition of the rig, and others in the formal ribbon-cutting ceremony.

"It is the start of something bigger, something better," Roberts said of the rotary-rig exhibit. "It is going to help the museum grow. It is a labor of love and sweat and confusion and everything."

Of the exhibit, retired Midland consulting engineer John Evans observed that "instead of talking about stuff, they finally got something done."

Signs indicate voters want divided government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complaints about gridlock aside, all signs point to voters once again choosing divided government Tuesday instead of opting for one party's solutions.

The record of the last three decades underscores what polls suggest will happen this year: faced with the choice of ending gridlock or balancing political forces against one another, voters will choose, or at least tolerate, balancing most of the time. In 22 of the last 28 years, at least one of the two houses of Congress has been controlled by the party opposed to the president.

While they can't admit that President Clinton will be re-elected, despite his healthy lead in all polls, Republican leaders are insisting they will retain control of Congress whatever happens to the presidency.

"I think people want that additional protection against Bill Clinton, should he be elected," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Sunday on CNN.

Democrats, of course, are saying the opposite. American voters "remember the polarization and the confrontation that existed for the last two years and they don't want to see that," Lott's opposite number, Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said on CBS. "They want to see more bipartisanship, more cooperation, less confrontation."

But history shows that divided government does not necessarily hurt presidents, nor does it automatically block legislation.

The recent record of presidents running for re-election after having led a politically divided government is promising for Clinton. Republican Presidents Reagan, Nixon and Eisenhower all won after having led Congresses partially or wholly under Democratic control. Presidents Carter and Benjamin Harrison lost after serving one term with their own party controlling Congress. And Lyndon Johnson, crushed by Vietnam, chose not to seek a second term despite unprecedented success with fellow Democrats in Congress.

Of course, history also raises caution flags: Presidents Bush, Ford, Hoover, Taft and Cleveland were unseated after leading divided governments.

Yale political scientist David Mayhew, whose book "Divided We Govern" discusses party rifts between the White House and Congress, said history fails to prove the thesis that one-party governments are more productive than divided ones.

"The volume of important legislation coming out does not differ significantly," Mayhew said, although the content of legislation may differ markedly.

Georgetown University political scientist Stephen Wayne argues that conservatives prefer divided government because division slows change.

In relatively good times, such as the last two years, Wayne notes, divided government seems to work well because action is less in demand. In bad times such as the early 1990s recession, voters yearn for decisive government action.

Zairian refugees flee Tutsi army

GISENYI, Rwanda (AP) — In the shadow of towering Mount Nyiragongo volcano, a seemingly endless line of refugees trudged north Sunday from the Zairian city of Goma to escape advancing Tutsi rebels and their Rwandan allies.

From a hillside across the border in Rwanda, it was impossible to see a beginning or end to the stream of people heading past the once teeming Kibumba refugee camp in the valley below.

A Rwandan guard at the dirt track border post 20 miles north of Gisenyi refused to allow reporters to cross into eastern Zaire, where Tutsi rebels backed by the Tutsi-led Rwandan army have been routing Zairian troops.

The camp below, the guard muttered, was filled with dead Zairian soldiers and Interhamwe, the Rwandan Hutu militiamen who fled to Zaire after massacring some 500,000 Tutsis in Rwanda in 1994. His claim was impossible to verify.

The refugees, clutching bundles of meager belongings, headed up the valley road past the volcano toward the refugee camp at Katale, some 25 miles further north, and to the town of Rutshuru, 10 miles beyond.

There were rumors Rutshuru had fallen to the Tutsi rebels. If true, the refugees may try to join some 20,000 others who already have crossed into Uganda, still further north.

The fighting between the Tutsi rebels and Zairian troops that flared last month has scattered more than 1 million refugees. The last international aid workers left Goma on Saturday, leaving the displaced masses with barely a week's rations and no medical assistance.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees appealed Sunday to the warring parties to allow aid shipments through and to cease attacking refugees.

"Unless we reach the refugees soon, many women and children, the elderly, the sick and the wounded are going to die," Sadako Ogata said in a statement from Geneva.

The refugees, she said, are moving toward some of the most inhospitable and inaccessible areas in Zaire. The further west they go, the more difficult it will be for relief workers to reach them, she said.

The French government said European countries were preparing to send in food, water purification kits and antibiotics to stave off cholera and malaria epidemics, prefabricated shelters and other aid.

There is no easy way to get aid in. The region's humanitarian lifeline, Goma airport, was closed by fighting and believed to be in rebel hands.

A plane with Italian aid has been on standby for days, waiting for the airport to reopen and a break in fighting, the Italian foreign ministry said.

Eastern Zaire's Tutsi minority rose up after Zairian authorities ordered them off land they have held for generations. Tutsis came under attack from Zairian military, Rwandan Hutu militias, and local Zairian gangs.

They struck back with startling military efficiency, driving Zairian forces from much of the border provinces of North and South Kivu. Many of the Tutsi rebels are believed to have once served or received training in Rwanda's army.

Rwanda denies its troops have crossed into Zaire to help the rebels, but soldiers wearing Rwandan uniforms have been spotted on the other side of the frontier.

A group of Rwandan soldiers and armed men in civilian clothes who appeared to be Tutsi rebels drove out of a track of forest Sunday from the Zairian side of the border crossing above Kibumba camp. Their pick-up truck carried the insignia of the international Red Cross.

Apart from occasional rifle fire, Goma appeared quiet, the rebels apparently consolidating control. From across the border in Gisenyi, men in civilian clothes could be seen in the streets. A large building in the center of town was burning.

Rwandan border guards refused to allow journalists into Goma, the capital of North Kivu province, claiming it was too dangerous.

Diplomatic efforts to resolve the crisis include a summit Tuesday of African leaders in the Kenyan capital of Nairobi. But with Zaire and Rwanda refusing to participate and neighboring Burundi not invited, the meeting has little chance of success.

The fighting risks destabilizing the whole of Zaire and could spread to other nations in Africa's Great Lakes region.

Zaire's military commander blamed the government Saturday for not acting decisively to crush the rebellion, and street demonstrators in the capital Kinshasa have called for the resignation of Prime Minister Leon Kengo wa Dondo, whose mother is an ethnic Tutsi.

Rescuers find bodies of Seattle couple, guides in Himalayas

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Rescuers dug through eight feet of snow Sunday to uncover the bodies of a U.S. medical school dean, his wife and three Nepalese who died while sleeping in their tent in the Himalayas.

The bodies of Philip J. Fialkow, 62, of the University of Washington medical school in Seattle, and his wife, Helen, 61, were flown by helicopter to Dunai, the nearest city 180 miles northwest of Katmandu.

The deaths added to a disastrous year for Himalayan climbers. Eleven mountaineers, including two professional guides leading commercial expeditions, were killed last spring on Mount Everest, the world's highest peak.

Two American climbers suffocated under piles of snow while climbing on Mount Annapurna IV in eastern Nepal last month. Nine other climbers died attempting to scale other Himalayan peaks this year.

The bodies of Fialkow, his wife and three Nepalese sherpas were found Sunday at an altitude of 15,500 feet in western Nepal — the site where they were last seen Oct. 21.

Maj. Kisendra Shahi, the helicopter pilot who flew the bodies to Dunai, said rescuers found the bodies of two Nepalese sherpa guides first, which were closer to the opening of the tent. The Fialkows' bodies and another Nepalese were discovered later.

"All of them were inside the same tent. It seems all of them died in their sleep, They were all in their sleeping clothes with no shoes on and lying in a row," he told The Associated Press by radiophone.

The pilot said they may have been killed by an avalanche or by a heavy snowfall that collapsed their tent. It was not clear when the victims died.

The couple was hiking in the Himalayan foothills toward Shey Gompa, a Buddhist monastery, with a crew of 12 Nepalese assis- nts, when a snowstorm hit. Fialkow — a seasoned climber — sent all but three guides back for help. It took several days for them to reach Dunai.

On Oct. 24, the SOS message by the trekkers reached Katmandu. But for two days, rescue helicopters were grounded by bad weather.

Guerrillas ambush Israeli allies, kill 1

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Guerrillas ambushed an armored patrol of Israeli-allied militiamen in south Lebanon with a roadside bomb Sunday, killing one of them, security sources said.

They said a civilian woman was later wounded when Israeli and South Lebanon Army militia forces retaliated by shelling the Iqlim al-Tuffah highlands just north of an Israeli-held border enclave.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the woman suffered light wounds when her house was hit by a shell.

The sources said the roadside bomb went off at 9:15 as a South Lebanon Army patrol was heading toward the town of Sojod on the northeastern tip of the border enclave.

The Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, claimed responsibility for the attack a short time later.

Meanwhile, U.N. peacekeepers on Sunday recovered the dead bodies of two Lebanese militants from inside the enclave, occupied by Israel since 1985 to protect its northern towns from cross-border guerrilla raids.

The security sources said the bodies belonged to guerrillas of the Shiite Moslem Amal group, which joins Hezbollah in its war of attrition against Israel and its allies.

MONEY BRIEFING

IMA meeting

The Permian Basin Chapter of the Institute of Management Accountants will hold its monthly meeting and technical session at ther Petroleum Club, Thursday, Nov. 21, from 11:30 a.m.-1:15 p.m. The topic will be "How Accountants Can Utilize a Network," presented by Bob Runyon of Gammon technologies. The session provides one hour of CPE. Cost is $15, which includes lunch. Advance registration required. To register, or for more information about the IMA, contact Michelle Ellison or Linda Ramirez at 686-9927.

Sweet music

If you've got an old piano stored in the attic and have no plans to play it, you might want to consider selling it. The New York Piano Center, a business that restores and sells old pianos, says instruments typically made between 1910 and 1930 are not good investments, having been produced in great numbers, but do sell for thousands of dollars. Grand pianos in Victorian, Art Deco, Chippendale and several other styles are in great demand with decorators and the wealthy. Namebrands such as Knabe, Baldwin and Mason & Hamlin can sell for up to $20,000, while Steinways can go for twice that amount.

Virtual bazaar

Few of us can afford clothes made by the top Italian designers, let alone jet off to Italy for fashion shows. So Harpers Bazaar magazine is bringing the Italian fashion scene to the Internet, with a Web site showing the latest from the likes of Gianni Versace, La Perla, Gruppo Gilmar, Alfieri/St. John and Ermenegildo Zegna. The address is http://www.viabazaar.com

Crystal PC

Number crunchers are turning into soothsayers as accountants are increasingly adding business planning to their job descriptions, Robert Half International finds in a survey of 150 executives from 1,000 big firms. Seventy-one percent of the respondents said accountants are taking more of a strategic role, said Half, an employment firm. And 66 percent said accountants have a more important place in their companies than they did five years ago.

Humane approach

In the coming years, compassion will be as important — or even more important — a requirement for executives as competitiveness, intelligence and aggressiveness. Cornell University surveyed executives of big U.S. corporations and found that 58 percent believe that companies must consider social issues such as work-family, diversity, equal rights and the environment. Thomas Dyckman, acting dean of Cornell's Johnson Graduate School of Management, said, "Executives may be getting weary of the 'chainsaw' management mentality that's been receiving so much attention lately."

Snackmakers

The guys who founded a company called Biofoam originally were planning to make snack food. It didn't work. So, reports Inc. magazine, they brought in a new CEO and started making packing material from peanuts. The environmentally-friendly version of polystyrene "popcorn" sounds like a great idea — it can dissolve in water, unlike the seemingly indestructible plastic version. But Inc. reports in its October issue that the Phoenix-based company faces a lot of competition — from makers of the plastic stuff and Dupont-ConAgra joint venture that turns out starch-based fill.

Disaster insurance

One of the worst setbacks to befall a small company is when one of its biggest clients leaves and takes its business elsewhere. Black Enterprise magazine says entrepreneurs can protect themselves against such a problem in several ways. First, a company should be sure it has a diverse client base so it doesn't become overly dependent on one customer. Also, the magazine says in its November issue, companies should be sure their cash flow remains strong they're not crippled when that big account leaves.

Ever wonder where your money goes?

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Do American families actually spend more on taxes than on the economic essentials of food, clothing and shelter, as one of the candidates alleged, or is the claim just another political exaggeration?

Exaggeration? No. An understatement? Quite likely.

The initial claim by candidate Robert Dole ignited controversy, since it conflicted glaringly with government figures showing the average household spent more than twice as much on these essentials as on taxes.

Government figures are hard to disprove, unless they are used for purposes not intended. The Bureau of Labor Statistics report, for instance, was based on survey responses of what people thought they paid in taxes.

It had additional limitations. It did not, for example, include the worker's share of Social Security tax payments. It did not report on sales and excise taxes paid. And it did not consider indirect taxes at all.

Such statistical niceties, and the limits inherent in using such surveys, are not generally understood by the public and are better ignored. Good for the public — statistics can lose both selves and meaning in the presentation.

In this instance, the issue involved the integrity of the Tax Foundation, whose figures Dole used, and it responded with evidence. This year, it said, taxes will cost households $21,365 vs. $19,292 for food, clothing and shelter.

It provided this breakdown of average household expenses: Food, $6,363; clothing, $2,669; housing, $10,260. The figures varied with income, but only in the lowest wage category (under $22,500) were taxes the lesser figure.

The Foundation says the average household will pay about $1,100 for the employee's share of payroll taxes, and many hundreds of dollars in sales and excise taxes ($2,500 for incomes of $50,000-$69,000).

Just as importantly, it says, the government survey ignored the effect of indirect levies, such as business taxes, on households. Although hidden from view, it says such taxes are inevitably borne by the general population.

"While the typical American won't ever see a tax bill for these taxes, they're certainly paid by all of us," said J.D. Foster, the foundation's chief economist. How? In lower wages and dividends, and higher prices.

Foster's says his complaint isn't with the government or its survey, "but with how the survey's results were badly misused" by the media.

In its defense, you might say the media can be excused — in part, at least — for having fallen into the same statistical trap that has ensnared even mathematical geniuses. Statistics are the spider webs of the best minds.

AIRLINE ANTITRUST COUPONS

Are flight benefits really worth it?

By Karen Swartz
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Perhaps never before has getting something for nothing angered so many.

Travelers are ticked about AirScrips, the discount coupons distributed two years ago to settle a lawsuit that alleged nine major airlines had engaged in price-fixing.

"It was the sham of 1994," said Tom Parsons, editor of Best Fares magazine. "The lawyers made money, the airlines got free advertising," and travelers got coupons for less savings than many promotional offers.

Many fliers, disappointed with the value and restrictions on the coupons, stuck them in a drawer to collect dust. Travel agents loathe them because of the extra paperwork involved. Even a lawyer who negotiated the deal, Pitts Carr, admits he'd do it differently if he did it over again.

"I tried a couple of times and was never able to use them," said Howard L. Greenberger, a New Yorker who takes a few trips a year. "I don't even know where they are now."

He'd better remember. The coupons are only good until the end of next year.

The coupons were anticlimactic in part because they were so widely anticipated. They were the result of one of three lawsuits that accused the airlines of using the Airline Tariff Publishing Co., a computerized clearinghouse for ticket prices, to fix fares.

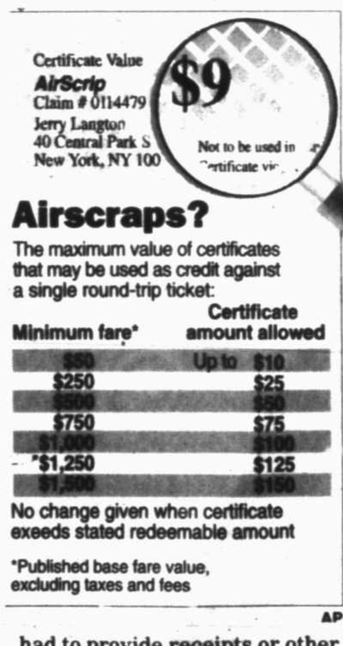

In addition to the class-action lawsuit on behalf of the traveling public, another lawsuit was filed by state and local governments, and a third by the Justice Department. The three cases kept the allegation in the spotlight for as many years.

The airlines settled the cases without admitting wrongdoing. The government agencies received 10 percent discounts on flights up to a maximum $40 million.

For the traveling public, the airlines agreed to issue $408 million in discount coupons to people who flew between Jan. 1, 1988 and June 30, 1992.

Expecting coupons for future discounts of up to 10 percent, more than 4.2 million people filed claims — nearly twice the number lawyers expected, but only a third of those eligible under the class-action lawsuit.

Although joining the lawsuit involved little more than mailing in a postcard for occasional travelers, people or corporations with more than $2,500 worth of flights had to provide receipts or other proof.

"Many businesses really got the shaft because they spent ... money in overtime trying to collect the pieces of paper," Parsons said.

Then came the long wait. It took two years for the applications to be processed and the settlement finalized. And then came the letdown.

"When we got the AirScrip, it totaled $84. I had expected something more in the range of $250," said Mary Sanders, a medical supplier in Gaithersburg, Md. "It was really disappointing."

Most individual claimants got about $63 worth of coupons. Corporate claimants were due a total of $3.2 million.

The coupons, good only on round-trip fares, provide up to $10 off on a $50 fare; $25 off a fare of $250 or more; $50 off a fare of $500 or more, and so on, up to a maximum of $150 off a fare of $1,500 or more.

That means, for instance, AirScrip could provide $25 off on a $494 round-trip fare between Detroit and Dallas — assuming the flight isn't over a peak holiday travel time, when the coupons aren't valid.

The certificates came in odd denominations. A total of $79 in AirScrip came as two $25 vouchers, two $10 coupons one $9 coupon. They can't be used with any other discount certificate, tour package or frequent flier award. A single coupon can't be applied to two tickets, even if the value is sufficient, and there is no provision for reimbursement if a coupon's value is too high.

The airlines can also require an advance booking and other restrictions. And they're not transferable, except to an immediate family member.

"They basically made it so you really had to work at using them," said Sanders, who used up her coupons in four flights.

The problem, according to Carr, the Atlanta lawyer who represented the plaintiffs in the class-action case, is that "in trying to be fair to everybody that we created a complicated coupon."

Carr maintains the coupons are "just like cash." However, U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob in Atlanta, who approved the settlement, anticipated that only 50 percent to 75 percent of the coupons would be used. The same would hardly hold true for cash.

"What it amounted to is that when they settled, the airlines cut themselves a sweetheart deal," said Ed Perkins, editor of Consumer Reports Travel Letter.

Carr said that if he could do the settlement over again, he'd try for a simpler system where a frequent traveler would get a free ticket while a person with a lesser claim would get a free upgrade.

Still, he believes the settlement was a good one, "taking into account the issues involved and both the strengths and weaknesses of our case."

Calls to Shoob were referred to Dawn Smith, a lawyer who worked with the parties in administering the settlement. She wouldn't comment on whether the settlement worked out well, but said that since the lawsuit was fairly weak, "it was a good order."

In reading Shoob's 140-page decision, it becomes clear he had concerns that the airline industry, financially strapped as it was in the early 1990s, might not be able to pay anything if it lost a court case. Indeed, four of the airlines named in the lawsuit — Continental, TWA, Pan Am and Midway — sought bankruptcy protection after the case was filed, and the latter two went out of business altogether.

If best-laid family budget flops, try a spending plan

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Don't put yourself or your family on a budget — adopt a "spending plan" instead.

The suggestion, which comes from a national association of financial planning advisers, has an appealing logic to it.

For many people, budgeting doesn't work, in the same way that dieting and other regimens often don't work, because it sets impossible goals and collapses immediately when subjected to the stresses of real life.

If you have tried and failed to follow a budget, suggests the Institute of Certified Financial Planners in Denver, consider instead "a plan that emphasizes spending, not budgeting. It's really pretty simple to do."

Rather than constructing a rigid model of how you think you ought to be operating, a spending plan starts with calculating your actual monthly income and outgo.

In one column on a sheet of paper — or in a personal computer program that may further simplify the job for you — you list all the income you receive for the month in question.

Then you make a separate list of all your expenses by category. This should include prorated amounts for expenses you pay annually, semiannually, or quarterly, such as car insurance premiums or property taxes.

"Record those slippery cash expenditures," the institute adds. As much as credit card debt and other burdens, unmonitored expenditures for day-to-day needs and wants can be a serious drain on your resources.

After you have kept these accounts for two or three months, the institute says, match the income total against the expense total.

If you are spending more than you are making, or just unsatisfied with the share of income that you are able to save, you can scan your list of expenses to see what is the most likely place to start cutting.

Maybe brown-bag lunches could be substituted for some of the fast-food expenditures. Or maybe you could read something borrowed from the library instead of the magazines you've been buying.

It really doesn't matter much which expenses you choose to reduce. The point is to find a way to manage your cash flow better.

"Controlling cash flow — what money is coming in and going out — is often what determines the success of reaching our goals," the institute observes.

"Many people don't know where their money goes. They may be earning more than they were a few years ago, yet they don't feel their lifestyle is improving.

"They find it difficult to save. Debts mount. Their money is in charge of them, not the other way around."

With all the changes that have taken place in the ways people manage their money in recent years, how much you can manage to set aside is still the main question.

MCI deal rings AT&T's bell

LONDON (AP) — British Telecommunications PLC said Sunday it will buy MCI Communications Corp. in a $20 billion-plus deal that would be the biggest foreign takeover of a U.S. corporation in history.

The deal, formally announced after boards of both companies approved, caused concern at fellow phone superpower AT&T Corp., which stands to lose the most from the marriage.

The companies promised a "communications powerhouse," with annual revenues of $42 billion and 43 million business and residential customers in 72 countries. They will call the merged business Concert, named after a joint venture begun three years ago when British Telecom bought a stake in MCI.

The combination comes at a vulnerable time for AT&T, the world's leading long-distance phone service provider, which has been struggling with a leadership succession problem and is in the midst of completing a major reorganization of its own businesses.

In a statement that clearly reflected AT&T's concern, chairman Robert E. Allen said the British Telecom-MCI deal deserved extraordinary attention from regulators, who have the power to overturn or significantly alter it.

Allen also objected to what he called obstacles to competition in the British market, which could give AT&T's rival a big advantage.

"The ability of a company with this kind of market power to negatively impact competition and reduce customer choice makes the evaluation of this proposed merger a global priority of the highest order," Allen said.

Globally, Concert will rank second only to AT&T as a long-distance carrier, and it eventually hopes to find an Asian partner.

"This merger creates the premier telecommunications company of the new millennium," Bert Roberts, chairman and chief executive of MCI, said in a statement. Concert PLC will combine the cash resources and global positioning of BT with the marketing skills of MCI.

Although British Telecom's earnings are expected to be reduced by about 5 percent in the first year of the deal, the companies expect to save nearly $850 million annually by the fifth year due to reduced costs and greater efficiency.

Any jobs losses will be minimal, because there is little overlap, BT chief executive, Sir Peter Bonfield, told a news conference in London.

The companies sought to portray their deal as a merger of partners that will combine top management as evenly as possible. The companies hope to complete their merger by August, but must secure approval from regulators in the United States, Britain and Europe, and from shareholders.

The deal will be the biggest takeover in British history.

It will also be the biggest foreign takeover of a U.S. company by far and mark the end of independence for MCI, a storied business that in some ways is responsible for the competition that's transformed the U.S. telecommunications industry.

State grant will aid home repairs

Midland Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS) received a much-needed shot in the arm earlier this week when State Rep. Tom Craddick announced the organization has been awarded a $310,000 grant from the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA).

As a result of the grant, 12 homes can be rehabilitated or reconstructed for up to $25,000 each. To qualify for the program, applicants' household incomes must not exceed 50 percent of the median income in the Midland-Odessa area.

Elderly and disabled applicants are preferential households and the target area for the grant is generally bounded east-west by Fairgrounds Road and Big Spring Street and north-south by Wadley Avenue and Interstate 20.

The grant will certainly help to fulfill the mission of NHS, which is to not only provide help to individual families, but also to improve the overall living conditions of people living in lower-income neighborhoods.

This grant appears directly in line with the needs in Midland since, in addition to the money for repair of the homes, TDHCA also awarded $12,400 in administrative costs for the program to Midland NHS. That means all the money awarded for the program will actually benefit the applicants selected.

This program should truly help in the rehabilitation of homes for some of Midland's residents who are most in need of help.

Work details benefit inmates, taxpayers

Although some people might be unsettled by the sight of prison inmates in white uniforms working on the grounds of Lamar University, both the inmates and taxpayers are well-served by this arrangement. And a new state policy that allows outside agencies to use their own officers to guard inmate labor crews is another benefit because it enables the prisons to send out even more inmate workers.

At the Larry Gist State Jail unit alone, prisoners have performed 135,000 hours of community service in just two years, a value of $643,000 at the minimum wage. Quite literally, these inmates are paying back their debt to society, something they can't always do inside prison walls, especially if they're simply warehoused instead of being educated or taught a skill.

At a big institution like Lamar, there's always something to do whether it's trimming trees, painting buildings or filling in potholes. That's especially true of a big institution like Lamar that's been short of money for routine maintenance in recent years. (Not too long ago Lamar teachers and secretaries devoted a special work day to spruce up their own campus because no one else could or would do it.)

The benefits to the taxpayers from inmate labor seems clear: necessary but unglamorous work is performed for little or no cost. Yet for the inmates as well, these work details can be a crucial part of the rehabilitation process they are supposed to be undergoing. They are doing something constructive, and when they get back to their prison they are less likely to have the time and energy to engage in mischief.

Safety shouldn't even be a major problem because only stable inmates who aren't considered an escape risk are permitted on the work details.

Official may have intentionally misled Congress

WASHINGTON — Vice President Al Gore, in his debate with GOP vice-presidential candidate Jack Kemp, called the 1994 U.S. invasion of Haiti one of the most "deft uses of diplomacy and military force" in American history.

Anderson

While the American invasion of Haiti went off without a hitch, its aftermath is much darker. Political murders and mayhem have declined since the ouster of Haiti's military regime. But they still occur.

And some congressional investigators believe that a senior Clinton administration official deliberately mislead Congress by failing to reveal some of the more embarrassing details of the U.S. government's relations with the government of former Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Lost in the clamor of the final week of the campaign was a report by the Republican staff of the House International Affairs Committee that takes to task James M. Dobbins, a State Department official, for failing to tell Congress that Aristide's government interfered with an FBI probe into the murder of an Aristide rival.

The Clinton administration, as it's wont to do whenever an embarrassing disclosure about its conduct comes to light, dismisses the report as an ill-timed partisan witch hunt.

Partisan? Yes. But not a witch hunt. Documents pulled together by investigators appear to directly contradict statements Dobbins made to Congress regarding the FBI's probe into the murder of Mireille Durocher Bertin.

Bertin was a prominent and outspoken critic of Aristide who had previously been aligned with the regime of military strongman Raoul Cedras. She and companion Eugene Baillergeau were gunned down by at least two attackers on March 28, 1995. Her death has become a focal point for critics of Aristide and his successor, Rene Preval. These critics say Bertin's slaying is emblematic of a tolerance within the new Haitian government for violence against its right-wing critics.

At an Oct. 12, 1995, congressional hearing, Dobbins was asked about the FBI investigation and replied that "the FBI has not briefed me, or as far as I know, anyone else in the administration on their findings ..."

But recently declassified executive branch documents appear to contradict that statement. According to the report, 22 separate State Department cables between March and October 1995, referred to the FBI's Bertin investigation and nine mentioned specific evidence or leads. Was Dobbins aware of the cables? Investigators believe so.

"Before his Oct. 12 testimony, Mr. Dobbins has to have been aware of the Haitian obstacles to the FBI inquiry, the apparent political motivation of the killings in which key Aristide aides were implicated, the FBI's frustrated attempts to interrogate over a dozen Haitian government officials, and the links between several other killings identified by the FBI," the report says.

Dobbins corrected himself last January, when he admitted to Congress that there were problems with his earlier testimony. He explained the error by claiming the State Department had not received adequate information from the FBI.

But an internal State Department memo, prepared on the same day as Dobbins' earlier testimony, suggests the administration already thought that lobbyists for the Haitian government were "blowing smoke" by contending that Aristide regime had nothing to do with the Bertin killing.

This memo cites a report by the powerful Washington law firm of Hogan & Hartson, which represents Haiti. According to the State Department memo, the Hogan & Hartson report "gives full vent to the spurious theories that the Bertin killing ... was either drug-related or the work of right-wing extremists. The more compelling theory developed by FBI investigators pointing to involvement of certain (government of Haiti) officials and policemen ... is bizarrely mischaracterized as 'stemming from an unsubstantiated claim.'"

Double standard exists between Israel, Palestine

One of the more tiresome aspects of writing about the Middle East is that any time you criticize Israel, the Israeli lobby swings into action and you get bombarded with accusations of being a liar and an anti-Semite.

The First Amendment has more than a few enemies but none so consistent as the Israeli lobby. A good summary of its history of trying to silence Americans by character assassination is "They Dare to Speak Out" by former Rep. Paul Findley (Lawrence Hill Books, 1989).

Reese

The problem the lobby has, of course, is when it comes to abuses of human rights, the facts are on the side of the Palestinians. Hence, it resorts to attacking the critic, rather than dealing with the criticism.

Let me try to put this in perspective.

Suppose in America that when a young man is caught committing a crime, the police not only punish him but march over to the home of his parents, order them out of their house, blow it up or bulldoze it into rubble and then forbid them to rebuild it.

Would you approve of that?

Suppose a young black man commits a crime, and in addition to punishing him, the National Guard surrounds all black neighborhoods and forbids all blacks within them from leaving. They cannot go to their jobs, to schools or anywhere else outside their neighborhood. As the months of isolation go on, men lose their jobs and the people become impoverished.

Would you approve of that tactic?

But let's suppose that despite enforced isolation, another young black commits a crime, so the government orders all black Americans to be confined within their homes. They are allowed to leave only one hour a day for food and water.

Would you approve of that?

Now let's suppose a city decides it just wants to get rid of its black citizens. So in addition to isolation, curfews and blowing up their homes, the government says it will no longer recognize their deeds. Hence, their property is subject to confiscation.

Nor will the government give blacks building permits, though it issues building permits to whites within the black neighborhoods who then build on the confiscated property.

Finally, the government induces whites to move into the black neighborhoods, occupying empty buildings, arming the whites, but disarming the blacks, and telling the black Americans they have no right to control anything the white settlers do, even though these settlers bully, insult and occasionally kill unarmed black people.

Would you approve of that?

Suppose the U.S. government rounded up, say, Louis Farrakhan and 100 of his followers just because it doesn't like what they are saying. Armed guards put sacks over their heads, handcuff them, force them into helicopters at gun point and then dump them out in the desert of Mexico and refuse to readmit them to the United States.

Would you approve of that?

Then, dearly beloved, don't approve of it by remaining timidly silent when the Israelis do those things to Palestinians. The Israeli government has done and is doing all of those things to Palestinians.

That's simply wrong. It would be just as wrong if Palestinians were doing it to Israelis. The wrongness of it has nothing to do with the fact that most Israelis are Jews or with religion or with prejudice. It's just old-fashioned abuse of innocent people by a government.

Americans who prattle about human rights -- especially politicians and journalists -- brand themselves cowards when they stand silent while the Israeli government abuses the human rights of Palestinians.

American taxpayers have paid more than $53 billion (in foreign aid) for the right to criticize Israeli actions that conflict with American values and that jeopardize American interests -- protests by character assassins supporting a foreign government notwithstanding.

City need to stay out of landscaping

A recent article suggesting an ordinance for landscaping guides referred to Michael's Charcoal Grill-North, Inc., in a less than favorable light. I would like to make the following suggestions to the Midland City Council: Please vote against a mandatory landscape ordinance. We all agree that trees and shrubs are a pleasant addition to parking lots, buildings, etc.

My point is this: If it is mandated by an ordinance, the city of Midland is now in the landscaping business. The city will tell the business owner how and where to spend his or her resources. The city will decide, thus adding another layer of bureaucracy. When it comes to the free-enterprise system and competition in the market place, there is something decidedly wrong with government telling businesses how to spend their money.

I chose to spend my limited resources on the interior of Michael's Charcoal Grill at "A" and Wadley rather than on the exterior.

This obviously has caused a great deal of aggravation and consternation to some people. However, even to these parties, we will make good on our promise of 1,000 free refills!

On behalf of the League of Women Voters of Midland, I would like to acknowledge the Reporter-Telegram for its publication of the Voter's Guide that appeared in Tuesday's paper.

Several Midlanders may not realize that the Reporter-Telegram fully underwrites the Voter's Guide in Midland County. To my knowledge, very few, if any, newspapers across Texas provide this service to their communities. I thank the Reporter-Telegram for its support over the years.

Smokers cost Texas too much money

I would like to respond to Greg Evans' letter dated 10/25 regarding the Texas Attorney General's lawsuit against tobacco companies. First, this lawsuit is not about who can choose to smoke. This lawsuit is about the fact that in 1993 smoking-attributable costs, in Texas alone, are estimated to be 5.1 billion dollars. (Texas Dept. of Health, 1995) Do you know how much of that came out of your paycheck in the form of medicare/medicaid taxes...not to mention rising insurance premiums? I, for one, am glad that we have someone in Austin trying to recoup those dollars from an industry that markets death and disease as a socially desirable habit.

Second, as an oncology nurse, I see the effects of your choices to use tobacco. Tobacco kills over 400,000 people each year---the equivalent of two fully-packed jumbo jets colliding every day and leaving no survivors. What a great choice!

The Great American Smokeout is coming up in November. It is an opportunity for everyone to become involved in making healthy choices...quitting smoking for a day and teaching our young people that they are too smart to ever start!

Texas drinking water is above average

As a Commissioner of the state agency responsible for the oversight of public-water supplies in Texas, I read your recent series "Tap Water at Risk" with great interest. The issues confronting public water suppliers are multifaceted and complex. You are to be commended for researching and framing these issues into understandable terms.

Unfortunately, attempts to paint a nationwide picture about drinking water quality (or the lack thereof) can do a disservice to individual states - like Texas - and communities that have historically been proactive in protecting public health. First and foremost, assertions that large segments of the population receive tap water that violates standards or is unsafe are not true in our state. In Texas, 95% of the population served by public-water suppliers receives water meeting all 84 chemical and microbiological national standards. Further, we have never had a public-water supply violate standards for herbicides or pesticides. Likewise, assertions that Texas surface waters are improperly filtered or disinfected are simply inaccurate.

This not to say Texas lacks challenges. This past summer's intense drought amplified the need for local and state officials to update conservation practices and to address groundwater withdrawal and surface water allocation issues in this thirsty and growing state. We also must continue our quest to provide essential water service to all unsaved areas of the state, the best-known example of which are the colonias along the Texas-Mexico border.

I hope that Texans who read your fine series of stories understand that local and state officials in Texas take their responsibilities to protect public health very seriously, and we invite the public to participate in local source water protection efforts and citizen advisory panels.

Knowledge best weapon for teen temptation

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from "Responsible Adult in New Jersey," who was sick of the argument that dispensing condoms in school encourages sex. You said you anticipated sharp criticism from some readers for printing that letter. I'd like to relate a story that made the news here in Tucson.

Van Buren

A 15-year-old girl was raised by strict parents who had not explained the facts of life to their daughter. They thought since she wasn't allowed to date, she didn't need to know about sex.

Despite her parents' no-dating rule, she had a boyfriend — and she became pregnant. Too terrified to tell her parents, she kept her pregnancy a secret. She went into labor and gave birth in the toilet at a friend's house, then strangled her baby and put it into a Dumpster. She's now facing charges of first-degree murder.

When the parents were asked why they had never talked about sex to their daughter, the father replied, "I guess we were waiting for her 16th birthday."

This girl's life is ruined. Her parents' lives are ruined. And before anyone assumes that this girl is from a broken home or living in the ghetto, let me assure you that she comes from a typical, middle-class, two-parent family. She was an honor student, a star basketball player and very popular.

Parents cannot assume that because they tell their children not to do something, they won't. In the case of sex, the price the children pay is too great to take the chance. Most teen-agers think they are immortal. They cannot fathom that anything bad will happen to them. Their denial is so strong that many of them give little thought to the consequences of their actions.

My question to parents: Are you willing to bet your child's life that he or she will always follow your rules?

Abby, if this letter changes the mind of just one parent who believes that the unavailability of condoms will prevent their teen-agers from becoming sexually active, it will be worth space in your column. You may use my name. —CAROL MONTGOMERY, TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR CAROL: The argument you make is intelligent and realistic. The sex drive in teen-agers can be very strong and sometimes overpowering. Farsighted parents give their children a framework within which to make their choices, and provide them with reliable information to protect them in precarious situations.

DEAR ABBY: From some letters I read in your column in years past, I know that a number of your readers do not appreciate Christmas newsletters, but I hope you will print this letter from someone who does.

It's time for people to start composing their annual holiday newsletters. Please, everyone, don't let those who don't like them stop you from writing them. It will spoil one of the things about the holidays that I most look forward to. It might be the only time all year that I get to hear from you.

I want to hear all about you and your family. I really enjoy reading all the great happenings. Of course, a holiday card is better than nothing, but it's so much nicer when you include a newsletter and even a photo.

My husband and children also enjoy reading those newsletters, and so do my parents.

So go ahead and write your annual newsletters and even brag a bit if you want to. Tell us about your trials and tribulations as well.

Those who don't appreciate newsletters can just throw them away. But please don't let a few sourpusses spoil it for the rest of us. The Scrooges have already taken enough fun out of our holidays. — A CHRISTMAS NEWSLETTER LOVER

Clinton homestretch drive rallies hard-core faithful

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — In a homestretch drive to rally hard-core Democrats, President Clinton implored an all-black congregation Sunday — his voice rising above husky shouts of "Amen!" — to cast their vote for racial harmony.

With his manicured fingers resting on the gold-edged pages of a Bible, the president said from the pulpit, "As we get closer and closer to the election, the work passes from my hands to yours."

In Florida, where he hoped to snatch a narrow victory on traditionally Republican turf, and in the Democratic bastions of New Jersey, Massachusetts and Maine the president was working feverishly to solidify his political base as GOP nominee Bob Dole tightened the national race.

Capping a yearlong campaign to turn elderly voters against Republicans, the president told a West Palm Beach, Fla., crowd that he protected them from GOP Medicare cuts.

"Your vote will determine the budget — and the budget will determine a large measure of our future, a future with strong Medicare for our parents or not," he told several thousand people, including a healthy dose of gray-haired voters, gathered near an airport tarmac.

Though still confident of victory, Clinton and his political team were privately concerned that their hopes for a landslide and a Democratic Congress were dimming.

But he stuck to a schedule crafted last week to reflect a three-pronged strategy: Engineer a huge voter turnout, make a last-ditch effort to nail down battleground states and campaign for Democratic congressional candidates.

Even as Air Force One hopscotched up the East Coast, White House advisers tinkered with second-term plans. A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said plans were being made to announce a round of Cabinet departures late next week.

Under the plan, the White House will announce in one swoop which Cabinet secretaries are leaving. The list will be a mix of those who are departing on their own terms and those whom Clinton wants out.

HUMOR ON THE SIDE

Dave's Top 10

"Ways I, David Letterman, Will Spend My Extra Hour This Weekend"

10. Get caught up on my refrigerator-repair correspondence course.
9. Interview potential nannies for Madonna.
8. Write another cranky letter to CBS begging them to bring back "Barnaby Jones."
7. Two words: step aerobics.
6. The same as every Saturday night — party with Joan Lunden.
5. Enjoy the "Dick Clark Rockin' Daylight Savings" special.
4. Take time to stop, sit back and really contemplate how much the Jets stink.
3. Answer mail from pen pals, Lyle and Erik.
2. Knock back a few dozen espressos and chase squirrels around the yard.
1. Fertilize and mulch my hairpiece.

Late Night Lines

"Yesterday in Detroit, Bob Dole was screaming at a rally there and he was saying that the reason he was doing so badly in the polls was because of voter apathy....At least that's what he told the one guy who showed up."

"It's a big day in the garment industry. Ninety-five years ago today, the first pair of boxer shorts was purchased ... And as the shopkeeper was wrapping them up, he said, Will there be anything else, Mr. Dole?'"

"Yesterday Clinton was in New Jersey and...he was heckled by this woman. She was screaming at him. She was calling him a draft-dodging liar who acts like a feminist.' And I thought Clinton was thinking pretty quick on his feet. He shot back at this woman screaming, he said, Well, hey! You married me!'"

"I know why Hillary Clinton probably doesn't enjoy the game of golf. Because for her, it's too much like work — you know, being trapped in one bad lie after another."

"Tomorrow, Carnival Cruise Lines will launch the biggest cruise ship in the world. To give you an idea how big this cruise ship is, it would take Kathie Lee Gifford and Richard Simmons two weeks to annoy every passenger on board."

"The hero of the game last night was this 19-year old Andruw Jones of the Atlanta Braves. He hit two home runs — 19 years old! This guy is the youngest player responsible for a home run in Yankee Stadium since that 12-year-old in the bleachers a couple of weeks ago."

"During the World Series game tonight, a man from Alabama has the opportunity to win a million dollars. All this guy has to do — stand on the pitcher's mound, throw a baseball through a target at home plate. And, if he does that, he wins a million dollars. If he misses, he wins $50,000. And, if the ball goes over the backstop and into the crowd, he gets a contract with the Mets."

"So I'm watching the game last night and they're talking about the New York Yankees having one of the strongest benches in baseball. And I'm thinking, well, hell, they'd have to have a strong bench to support Don Zimmer and Cecil Fielder."

Talking pork fill

Two sausages are in a frying pan and doing the macarena. One sausage turns to the other and says, "Man, it's getting hot in here." The other sausage looks back in amazement and says, "OH, MY GOD, A TALKING SAUSAGE!"

The 12 decibels, and other amazing stories

By Vicki Marsh Kabat
N.Y. Times News Service

In Proverbs, we are told to "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Given the training a lot of our children receive (or apparently don't receive) these days, that proverb has me worried.

I spend a good part of each week working as Christian education director at our church. My job is to further the faith knowledge and development of everyone in the church, from babies to older adults. Sounds kind of daunting, but we all work at it together and help one another on our faith journeys. It's a delightful occupation for me and one I take seriously.

No doubt I'll take it even more seriously after finding on the Internet some answers given by students who took a Bible knowledge test. The Internet message didn't give the age of the students or other details, so I can't vouch for the test's validity. If the results are even half true, though, Christian educators have their work cut out for them. For instance:

- The first book of the Bible? It's Guinessis, in which Adam and Eve were created from an apple.
- Noah's wife was called Joan of Ark.
- Lot's wife was a pillar of salt by day and a ball of fire by night.
- Samson played the Philistines with the axe of the apostles.
- Unleavened bread is bread made with no ingredients.

This funny business of humorists & politicians

Ed. Note: The actor and comedian Robert Klein is preparing his seventh special for HBO.

By Robert Klein
N.Y. Times News Service

There are no two more ubiquitous enterprises in America than show business and politics. And they have always had similarities, like pretense and glamour.

Actors, comedians and politicians are often perceived to have the air of the huckster, the transient, someone unworthy of a credit card, someone you wouldn't want your sister to marry.

Both callings are meritocracies of a sort, in the sense that if the public turns you down, you must obtain other work. The politician must be content with the humiliation of a Washington-based consulting job at five times his government salary. The entertainer, busing tables.

Their fate is entirely in the hands of the audience or the constituency, as the case may be. Not unlike the thumbs up or thumbs down given to the Roman gladiators, but without the fatal consequences.

I don't know when it happened exactly, but somewhere along the line, the separation between theater and state broke down, and show biz and politics came crashing together with a blurry, amorphous thud.

Dole and Madonna, Clinton and Roseanne, Brad Pitt and Gore, Michael Jackson and Perot. In the era of the unsubtle, of a hundred television channels, of music videos where no image dare linger on the screen for more than a nanosecond, the audience is assumed to have the attention span of an Egg McMuffin, and pyrotechnics are required to keep its attention.

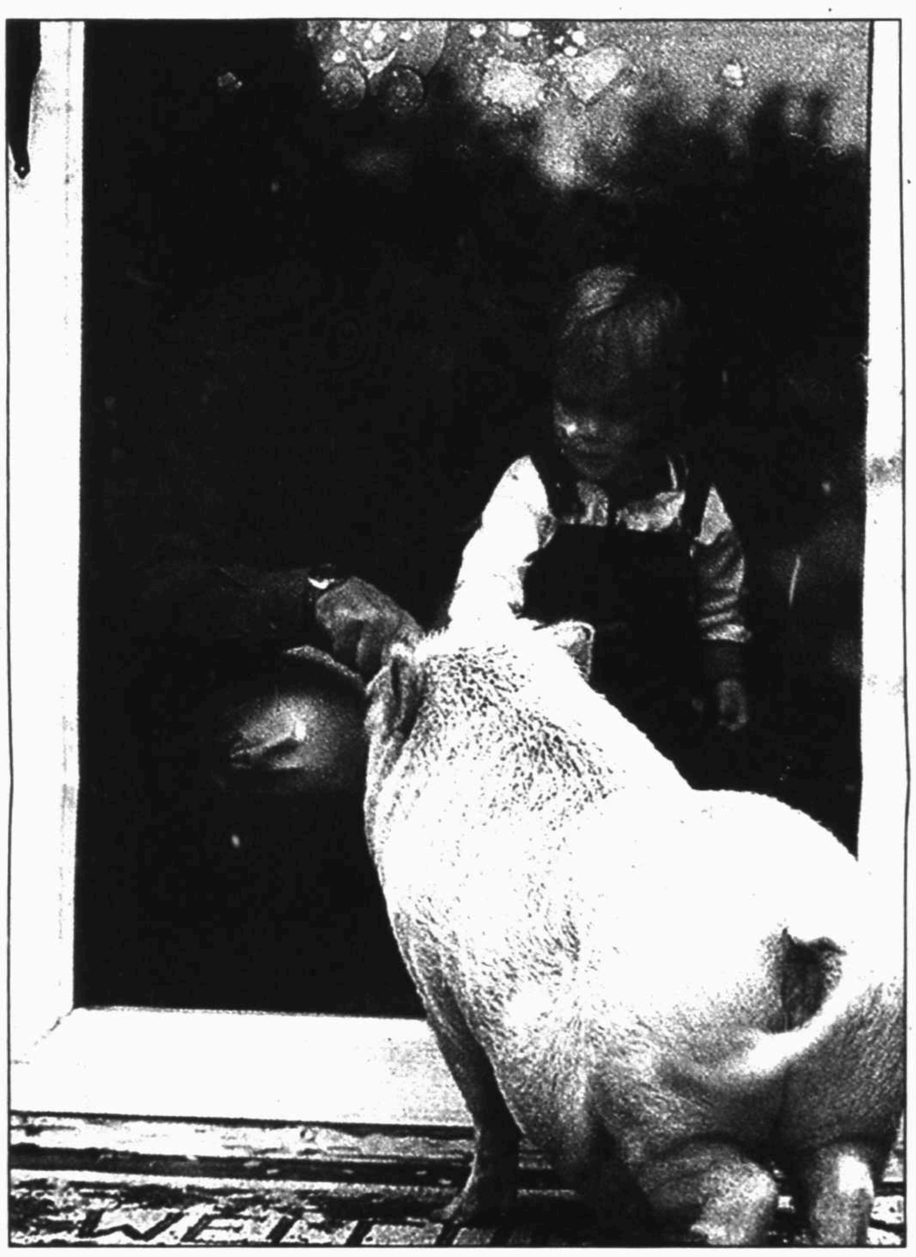

This has not been lost on those who campaign for office. The people's perception of the candidate, created through powerful spin, clever advertising and carefully controlled appearances in front of the convinced, is now what determines their vote.

Perception is far more important than substance. How the candidate "seems" and looks are as crucial to the calculation for victory as what he or she stands for. In fact, viewed through this manipulative camouflage, it is woefully difficult to tell what anyone does stand for.

For those of us who make a living going for the political laugh, it's a bit like fishing in a swimming pool. Citizen ignorance and apathy do nothing to enhance the art of popular political satire.

Comedians who have been thankful for the likes of Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker, John Wayne Bobbitt and Bob Packwood just don't seem to have the chops to tackle jokes about campaign contributions and Medicare. The comedian Dennis Miller has said that America is "dulled by mindless entertainment to the hard facts, and hopeful that the big lie is

Man bites dog — but dog bites first

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A suspect fleeing the scene of a robbery with a police dog nipping at his heels decided to get even. He bit back.

Miami Beach police say Ricardo Culberson robbed the Royal Palm Hotel of $469 early Wednesday before stealing a taxi and driving off with police cars in pursuit.

Culberson stopped a few blocks away and started to run as police and Myrus, a German shepherd, closed in. Myrus struck first.

Culberson then called out "Come here, doggy, doggy," grabbed the dog and bit him on the neck, police spokesman Bobby Hernandez said.

Myrus is fine. The bite didn't even break the skin.

Culberson, 27, should be so lucky. Pepper-sprayed, handcuffed and hauled off to jail, he now faces charges of armed robbery, armed carjacking, armed kidnapping and aggravated assault. He's also charged with biting the dog, a third-degree felony.

Culberson also is wanted by the FBI on charges of carjacking, armed robbery and attempted murder in Georgia, Pennsylvania and New York.

A fool-proof potty training method for your boy

Occasionally, a big "whoooooosh" comes over me, and I frankly pay close attention when that happens.

To most people, a feeling like this is usually a sign they're coming down with something. But to me, whenever I feel this "whooooooosh," it usually means I have, quite by accident, stumbled upon another of my can't-miss ideas that will dramatically improve the way everyone lives life.

Patterson

Nine times out of 10, these ideas are gone within eight to 10 minutes, the "whooooooosh" feeling amounts to nothing and I am again left feeling middle-aged and dejected.

But this time, the whooooooooshy feeling may mean something really big. Something that could benefit everyone and make me some big-time moolah; something that will change everyone's outlook on life and enhance their moods on a daily basis.

Brace yourself, here comes the whooooosh ... see if you can feel it, too: I have discovered the secret to successfully teaching 2-year-old sons how to go potty in the Big Potty. I am about to share with you how to do this, so you might wanna have a seat. You may be skeptical, and that's understandable. It's not everyday that someone comes across something so revolutionary. But today is different, so just hear me out ...

After an eternity of frustration for parents of all generations, races, religions and wipee preference, it seems it's really quite easy. The secret? Teach the boy how to read the sports section. Using the Big Potty will spontaneously occur only moments later.

How did I happen upon this brilliant idea? Well, I guess you could say it came to me while I was reading one day.

Think about it: What do all guys have in common? I mean beside the fact that we think we can fix everything (we can't), we know all there is to know about cars (we don't), we all think we're the funniest person on the planet (we aren't) and we think we own the remote control (we do) ... The one thing we all have in common is that we like sports, right? And we usually know all there is to know about sports before we can even read, right? So reading about sports should actually be easy, and will automatically lead to a bigger, better, more hygienic way of life, right?

If you're still hangin' with me here, it's safe to assume you have either tried to potty train a boy, are in the process of trying to potty train a boy or are still trying to teach your husband how to lower the toilet seat more often than once every three or four years.

We've been having potty training difficulties for several months. But thanks to my new method of easy-teach potty training by use of the daily sports section, I think we've cleared a major hurdle.

No longer do we just discuss the importance of using the Big Potty; instead, we're learning the finer points of high school football and how to read a box score. This week I'm explaining the NBA salary cap, and next week, the three toughest lessons of all: Why does Dennis Rodman wear a dress? Why does Deion Sanders wear TWO loop earrings? (which is not to say that wearing just one would be any better) And, is John Madden mental because he obsessively

DAVE BARRY

The all-important question: Yes, but is it fat free?

Recently, a reader named Jim Cornell sent me a postcard with a picture of insects on it, posing an interesting question.

(No, the insects were not posing a question. As far as I know.)

Barry

Jim stated that he, like every other American above the age of 4, is on a low-fat diet, and he noted that we have become basically a non-fat nation. This is true; virtually all edible substances, and many automotive products, are now marketed as being "low-fat" or "fat-free." Americans are OBSESSED with fat content.

DOCTOR: Mrs. Stoatbonker, you will die within hours unless you take this antibiotic.

PATIENT: Is it fat-free?

DOCTOR: I don't know.

PATIENT: I'll just have a Diet Pepsi.

So anyway, Jim, after noting that "millions of pounds of formerly fat-rich food is now de-fatted," asks: "What are they doing with all that fat?"

Jim, that is an excellent question, and I intend to answer it just as soon as I have written enough words to make a column. (Don't you wish you had a job like mine? All you have to do is think up a certain number of words! And they don't even have to be true! Plus, you can repeat words! And they don't even have to be true!)

First, however, we need to consider exactly what "fat" is. Just off the top of my head, without glancing at a dictionary, I would define fat as "any of various mixtures of solid or semisolid triglycerides found in adipose animal tissue or in the seeds of plants." A "triglyceride," as I vaguely recall from my high-school years, is "any of a group of esters, $CH_2(OOCR1)CH(OOCR2)CH_2(OOCR3)$, derived from glycerol and three fatty acid radicals."

But what does this mean? One thing it means, of course, is that "Three Fatty Acid Radicals" would be an excellent name for a rock band. But it also means that fat is some kind of chemical item that nature puts inside certain plants and animals to make them taste better. A good rule of thumb is: The more fat something contains, the better it tastes. This is why we eat hamburgers, but we do not eat ants. Ants have a very low fat content, so nobody eats them except unfortunate animals such as birds, who, because of a design flaw, cannot use drive-thru windows. Human beings, on the other hand, enjoy hamburgers, because they (the hamburgers) come from cows, which are notoriously fat. You will never see a cow voluntarily going anywhere near an Abdominizer.

Of course, there have been efforts to make low-fat "hamburgers." In researching this column, I purchased a product called "Harvest Burgers," which are "All Vegetable Protein Patties" manufactured by the Green Giant Corp. Upon examining the package, the first thing I noticed was that the Jolly Green Giant has apparently had plastic surgery. He no longer looks like the "Ho! Ho! Ho!" guy; he now looks like Paul McCartney on steroids. Check it out.

The second thing I noticed is that the key ingredient in Harvest Burgers is "soy." This ingredient is found in many low-fat foods, and I think it's time that the Food and Drug Administration told us just what the hell it is. A plant? A mineral? An animal? Are there enormous soy ranches in Nebraska, with vast herds of soys bleating and suckling their young? As a consumer, I'd like some answers. I don't want to discover years from now that "soy" is an oriental word meaning "compressed ant parts." This is not intended as a criticism of the "Harvest Burger," which is a well-constructed, extremely cylindrical frozen unit of brown foodlike substance. The package states that it contains "83 percent less fat than ground beef"; I believe this, because it also tastes exactly 83 percent less good than ground beef. Nevertheless I highly recommend it for anybody who needs more "soy" or a backup hockey puck.

Oh, sure, there will be people who will claim that soy patties taste "almost as good" as real hamburgers. These are the same people who have convinced themselves that rice cakes taste "almost as good" as potato chips, when in fact eating rice cakes is like chewing on a foam coffee cup, only less filling. You could fill a container with roofing shingles and put it in the supermarket with a sign that said "ZERO-FAT ROOFING SHINGLES," and these people would buy it and convince themselves it tasted "almost as good" as French toast.

Yes, we have become a low-fat society, which brings us back to the question posed by Jim Cornell: What's being done with all the fat? Jim offers this theory: "I suspect that they're dumping it in some small town in Texas or Mexico." No way, Jim. Our government would never allow a major fat-dumping facility in the same region where we're storing the dead UFO aliens. No, the truth is that the fat is being loaded into giant tanker trucks, transported by night, and pumped into: my thighs. There was no choice: Marlon Brando was already full. But I'm happy to do my part for a leaner America, so don't bother to thank me. Are you going to finish those fries?

POSTSCRIPT. After I wrote this column, my editor, Tom Shroder, sent me a note saying he thinks he read somewhere that ants DO contain fat. I think he's wrong, but since we're both professional journalists, neither of us will look it up. I will say this: If ants DO contain fat, it's only a matter of time before somebody comes out with low-fat ants.

POLITICS: Remembering some candidates' unintentional pratfalls, mis-steps

really the big truth."

How can one be funny about substantive politics when one's audience is unacquainted with it? Mark Russell, the popular political satirist featured on PBS, is more fortunate than most. Most likely his audience has just been watching Jim Lehrer's "Newshour" rather than "Men Behaving Badly" or "Beavis and Butthead."

Besides, singing your takeoff on the news gives you a definite leg up.

Was there a better day for the politically oriented stand-up comedian? Probably. But back in the 1950s when Mort Sahl strode onto "The Ed Sullivan Show" with a New York Times rolled up under his arm and skewered Eisenhower on the issues, there were nine newspapers in New York and "Hard Copy" was someone's bad dream.

A few years later, David Frye and Vaughn Meader had a strange, dependent relationship vis-a-vis the Kennedy brothers, and the assassinations effectively ended those impressionists' careers. Theirs was the broad brush. They sounded so much like the president and his brother that it hardly mattered what they said: the hilarity was in the hyperbole of hearing the president of the United States order a tuna sandwich.

The early "Saturday Night Live" cast, particularly Chevy Chase as a physically challenged Gerald Ford, had no particularly savvy political insight, but there is no doubt that its antics affected people's impressions and therefore the 1976 election.

(Dan Aykroyd's Jimmy Carter did not exactly come off as a figure to be revered, but at least he could stand up for several minutes at a time without falling. It's surprising that Bob Dole's unfortunate tumble in Chico, Calif., in September didn't bring back more Chevy Chase-like pratfalls.)

Most of the quotable political jokes nowadays are more akin to caricature than satire. As with Carter's teeth or Lyndon Johnson's generous ears, the idea today is to stay simple.

Exaggerate President Clinton's propensity for snacks and Bob Dole's for birthdays and ride it till the cows come home. In fact, the audience's anticipation of what new take David Letterman and Jay Leno will have on corpulence and doddering is most of the fun.

Dignity is not really the point here. For those who think that such humor is undignified, you need only hark back to the turn of the 19th century to see real vitriol and verbal assaults rivaling only the current United States Senate race in New Jersey.

Jefferson and his Republican colleagues (no relation to the current crop) were, as a matter of course, depicted as drunken debauchers. A cartoon of the day depicts a dog relieving himself on a Republican newspaper.

(John Adams's Alien and Sedition Acts put a slight damper on criticism for a while. In Newark during the Adams administration, there was a loud cannon salute in his honor. An observer remarked that he wished the cannon wadding had been "lodged in the president's backsides." He was fined $100. One can only imagine what kind of tab the late-night boys would rack up today.)

The real point is that polls show that a huge number of Americans today get their political notions primarily from one of Leno's fat jokes about Clinton or one of Letterman's age jokes about Dole.

Not to mention Miller on HBO or Bill Maher on Comedy Central doing a turn on womanizing or implying that the vice president of the United States is an inanimate object.

How has it come about that a bunch of clever television writers with no real political agenda can have such a tangible effect on people's impressions of the candidates, and thereby on the election itself?

When was the beginning of the end, the point at which image became pretty much everything? Does it go back to the perspiration on Richard Nixon's lip in the 1960 debate? Was it his unease or his 5 o'clock shadow as compared with the handsome Jack Kennedy, whom the camera so loved?

Or was it really not until Michael Dukakis disastrously placed that tank helmet on his head during a visit to an Army base in 1988? As a participant in that ill-fated campaign (I was a sort of opening act at a number of rallies), I have always believed that the election was lost that day.

The helmet looked so bad on the Democratic candidate that Republicans took photographic note of the event and declared a kind of schnook alert in which every Nikon in North American proceeded to depict Dukakis as Alfred E. Neuman. About the same time, a photograph appeared in a magazine of Vice President George Bush wearing a well-fitting cowboy hat and looking like the Marlboro man on a 12-step program.

Comedians made much of Dukakis's image. His ethnic-sounding name was also the target of cheap shots. The name Bush probably triggered in many Americans the Pavlovian reaction to get up and get a beer. No one had ever had an ice-cold Dukakis.

And the vice-presidential debate that year provided its share of humor. It included a clever though not spontaneous topper at Dan Quayle's expense by Lloyd Bentsen: "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

The unreported but crucial dynamic here, however, was that the venerable Texan had ill-fitting dentures that appeared to be jostling of their own accord inside his mouth, making him sound like a bad dub of a Japanese movie. In effect, he seemed to be saying one thing while his teeth said another. This is bad form. People distrust politicians as it is. It is essential to be on the same page as your teeth.

And these are the things that win and lose elections. I may be wrong, but didn't President Bush's numbers crumple just a tad after he threw up on the prime minister of Japan? A diplomatic no-no, to be sure.

Beyond the issues of age and pudginess, what have the candidates this time around presented in show-business terms, as grist for the comedian or any old voter in the streets?

First of all, there is an incumbent who is clearly comfortable with the requirement to act, in the theatrical sense, the part of earnest servant of the people. And there is a challenger who is reluctant to dance. Bob Dole has become the Mike Dukakis of 1996 in that he is loath to play-act to the extent necessary to run an effective campaign for president in contemporary America.

He can be elected to the Senate from Kansas with his eyes closed, but the presidency is the proverbial enchilada. In the big leagues, all the show-biz accouterments come into play: hair dye, makeup and photo ops on a treadmill.

Personally, I wouldn't mind having Dole's looks and acuity at his age. He looks fine to me. Rodney Dangerfield once said: "There's only one way to look thin. You hang out with fat people."

DECIBELS: Never admit adultery, according to children's rendition

(From 1B)

- Moses went to the top of Mt. Cyanide to get the Ten Commandments.
- The seventh commandment? Thou shalt not admit adultery.
- Joshua led the Hebrews in the Battle of Geritol.
- Solomon had 300 wives and 700 porcupines.
- The people who followed Jesus were called the 12 decibels.
- The epistles were the wives of the apostles.
- One of the opossums was St. Matthew.
- Salome danced in seven veils in front of King Harrod's.
- Paul preached acrimony, which is another name for marriage.
- David fought the Finkelsteins, a race of people who lived in biblical times.
- A Christian should have only one wife. This is called monotony.

There you have it. The Bible as you've never known it before ... and as at least part of the next generation apparently knows it. Scary, huh?

If we let these little children lead us, as the Bible also instructs, we might all find ourselves going to hell in a hand biscuit.

PATTERSON: Sports first, then the other part will happen

points out sweaty rear ends every single Sunday?

(By the way, the answers to the above three questions that I intend to teach The Boy are: Because he thinks he's a woman, because he thinks he's a woman, and because he only knows 15 words in the English language and he wouldn't know how to complete a sentence if he couldn't use his electronic chalkboard to draw circles around the back ends of defensive ends.)

If you want to stick to the more basic points in your first few potty training lessons, begin with simple scores and then eventually work your way up to more elaborate sports lessons such as "Is Don King an intelligent life form and if so, what's the deal with the hair?" Answer: Because he thinks he's a woman AND he knows only 15 words in the English language, which are: "Hi, I'm millionaire boxing promoter Don King: Make my hair as funky as you can."

One more question regarding today's subject: What is the one common denominator at all sports functions? Simple: Women's restrooms always have lines, men's rooms don't. Keeping this theory in mind, there is one other way to ensure your 2-year-old will successfully potty train: Install a tape-recording of a batter hitting a home run and turn it on every time your kid uses the bathroom. He'll be done really, really fast, therefore leaving the bathroom vacant for others in the house who may really need it. (Such as his mother and sisters, who will no doubt spend hours in it doing their hair and putting on their makeup and loop ear rings.)

Despite my incredible discovcery, I somehow still fear that my own son will not take to potty training as quickly as others. I have even had a recurring nightmare that goes something like this. The time is the not-too-distant future ...

"OK big guy," I say calmly to The Boy, "let's go over this one more time, just to make sure you've got it ..."

"OK dad, the Yankees won the 1996 World Series four games to one."

"No, no ... it was four games to two," you offer reassuringly.

"I'm sorry, dad, you're right. Four-to-2 was the final game count in the '96 World Series, 4-3 is how tall professional gymnasts are when they reach full maturity, and 4-4 was the Miami Dolphins' record after they lost to the Dallas Cowboys on Oct. 27, 1996. Oh, and $44 is how much Jimmy Johnson spends on hair spray every week."

"YES!"

"That's your impersonation of Marv Albert, dad!"

"Woah, Nelly!"

"That's Keith Jackson."

"Holy Cow!"

"Harry Caray."

"You're doing fantastic, big guy. So, are you ready for the Big Potty yet?"

"Uh, well, no, I don't think so, dad. Just gimme a little more time, please?!"

"Son, I really think it's time you learned how to go like a big boy."

"But dad? Please??"

"Look at me: YOU ARE 38 YEARS OLD!!! YOU HAVE A WIFE AND KIDS!! YOU'RE A WORLD RENOWNED HEART SURGEON. IT'S TIME FOR YOU TO GO ON THE BIG POTTY!!!"

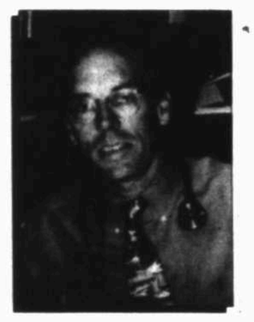

"OK, fine, just don't yell ... Have you seen then coupon section?"

"Uh, let's go back and start again ..."

Fort Worth protests influx of paroled sex offenders

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Despite a state promise to curtail the number of paroled sex offenders sent to Tarrant County, the area still leads Texas in the percentage of rapists and molesters imported from other counties.

The county is home to 253 paroled sex offenders, slightly more than half of whom were shipped in from other counties across the state.

In August 1995, state officials promised to reduce that rate in response to local outrage over the county getting a disproportionate share of paroled sex offenders.

But there are only 25 fewer sex offenders in the area since then, and the ratio of non-resident to resident offenders has actually gone up since September 1995, when 163 offenders were from Tarrant County and 115 from elsewhere.

Although "there has been an effort and I think the numbers have gotten better ... the truth is, Tarrant County, and particularly Fort Worth, continue to have a disproportionately large number of these offenders," said city council member Bill Meadows.

"It's still an unacceptable figure from our standpoint," he said.

Of the 253 sex offenders in the county as of Wednesday, 128 committed their crimes in another part of the state, while 125 committed their attacks here, according to statistics kept by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Other counties with high percentages of imported offenders include Harris County with 41 percent, El Paso County with 33 percent, Dallas County with 24 percent and Bexar County with 15 percent.

State parole officials acknowledged last week that they are still sending so-called "nonresident" sex criminals and murderers into Tarrant County. That has angered many in Fort Worth.

"I just think they're dumping sex offenders on us again," said councilman Jim Lane.

Most of the sex-crime parolees are scattered throughout Tarrant County as part of a state "home rule" arrangement that allows them to live by themselves or with family or friends, rather than in the more restrictive, dormitory-type environment of a halfway house.

There has been a significant drop, however, in the number of paroled sex offenders living at Fort Worth's only halfway house for sex offenders, the Correctional Services Corp. facility near downtown Fort Worth, said Melinda Bozarth, paroles division director.

"If they're still overloading our city with sex offenders, I think the City Council and the police chief will once again start raising unmitigated hell about it," Lane said.

American takeoff aborted at DFW

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — An American Airlines flight crew aborted a takeoff and evacuated their jet Sunday afternoon after an engine failure and brake malfunction at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

American Flight 1564 sustained a blade failure as it was taking off, officials said.

"Before it got off the ground, the pilot noticed a right-hand engine failure and aborted the takeoff," said American spokeswoman Jennifer Weaver.

The jet's brakes locked as it was taxiing to the gate and all passengers and crew members prepared to deplane on the tarmac, said airport spokeswoman Angel Biasatti.

But Ms. Weaver said the plane's brakes later cooled and unlocked, allowing the jet to taxi to the gate and then a hangar.

There were no injuries in the 2:56 p.m. incident and the blade damage was contained by the engine nacelle, Ms. Biasatti said.

It was uncertain why the engine and brakes on the MD-80 malfunctioned.

"It's being inspected now," said Ms. Weaver.

Animal therapy helps calm troubled souls

PHOENIX (NYT)— To deal with surly gang kids in San Antonio, a counselor hands over the leash to a dog named Dr. Pepper.

At a rape crisis center in Albuquerque, Rosie the rabbit snuggles in a victim's lap, coaxing conversation with warm kisses.

To part the curtain of autism and touch special children in Philadelphia, it takes a whole zoo.

People are rediscovering our connection with animals, and more than 500 people from around the world are sharing information this week at the Delta Society's 15th annual conference at Phoenix Civic Plaza.

The Renton, Wash., group mostly teaches people to train animals that serve the disabled.

At a break between seminars on Sunday afternoon, counselor Robin Burtenshaw talked about her clients. They are upset, most recently at being ripped from their gang — their family.

"I will give them the leash and say, 'We're going to do animal obedience today,'" Burtenshaw said. "This is new for these kids. They give the commands and somebody actually listens to them."

They respond, Burtenshaw said, but not necessarily to her.

"When I come back a week later, they don't have a clue what my name is, but they'll want to know, 'Where's Dr. Pepper?'"

Dogs bite and cats scratch, but rabbits never hurt anybody. Try to frame a bad thought about Peter Cottontail, Br'er Rabbit or Thumper.

"I think they see the rabbit as safety and something that loves them unconditionally," pastoral counselor Mary Morrison said. "Sometimes after a rape, they don't feel good about themselves."

It's almost impossible to know what autistic children are feeling when they are withdrawn and still. On the other end of the scale, children with attention deficit disorder often are violent and aggressive.

Both seem to respond to the "companionable animal" zoo at Philadelphia's Devereaux Foundation. Children spend five hours a week, feeding and caring for birds, gerbils, hamsters, rabbits, chinchillas, mice, hedgehogs, potbellied pigs and miniature goats and horses.

"The major job is taking care of the animals and keeping the animals safe and comfortable," said Aaron Katcher, who has been publishing studies since 1978 on the special relationships of people and animals.

"Some of these children are abused terribly in homes where they've never seen a male take care of anything," Katcher said. "In five years, we have never had a child become aggressive. We take children who are incompetent and make them competent."

The healing power of human attention on animals should not be touted as a new discovery, Katcher said.

"Five million years ago, we had to learn to hunt animals and learn from them how to hunt for other food," he said. "As recently as 30 years ago, what did you do with boys in trouble? You sent them to farm school."

Scientific papers abound at the conference. They cite carefully controlled studies of animals affecting troubled humans. They seek "operant paradigms" to train these animals to be more effective and efficient.

Professional studies provide personal benefits as well. They tell us that talking nicely to our animals makes us nicer people to talk to, Katcher said.

Collins to Angels

LOS ANGELES — Terry Collins, fired as Houston manager last month following a late collapse by the Astros, will become the new manager of the California Angels.

A major league source confirmed Sunday evening that Collins will be named the 15th manager in the Angels' 37-year history.

The Angels have called a news conference for this morning regarding their manager. However, team spokesman Bill Robertson, asked if Collins was the choice, said, "That will be cleared up tomorrow."

The Los Angeles Times had reported in its Sunday editions that Collins was going to get the job, edging out former New York Mets third-base coach Mike Cubbage and Sparky Anderson. The Angels, who had a late-season collapse of their own to lose the AL West in 1995 and finished last in the division this season, have been in the market for a manager since Marcel Lachemann resigned Aug. 6. John McNamara was the interim manager after Lachemann resigned.

"They made a good choice," Anderson said. "Terry is a good young man."

All-Stars 4, Japan 2

TOKYO — Cal Ripken's competitiveness was never more evident than in Sunday night's game against the Japanese Central all-star team. His hard slide into second base in the second inning was the key play in the major league all-star team's 4-2 win over the Japanese before a Tokyo Dome crowd of 45,000.

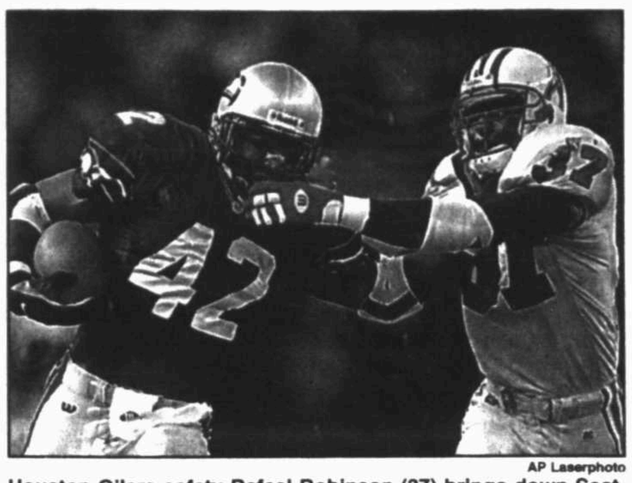

The major league all-stars lead the eight-game series two games to one.

In the second inning, Robin Ventura of the White Sox singled and Ripken walked. Tom Pagnozzi of the Cardinals grounded to short, and Ripken's slide into second broke up the double play and forced a bad throw into right field. That allowed Ventura to score the game's first run. On the play, Ripken injured his right hand when he deflected the throw into right field. On his his next at-bat in the fourth, he hit a solo homer to left.

Blues get to Stars

ST. LOUIS — Brett Hull scored twice and rookie Harry York got his third goal in three games as the St. Louis Blues ended a four-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the Dallas Stars on Sunday night. Fellow rookie Jim Campbell also scored for the Blues, whose goal total was a season high. They allowed 22 goals during the losing streak. A crowd of 14,386, smallest ever at the three-year-old Kiel Center, watched the Stars lose their second straight after tying a franchise record with nine victories in October. Hull put the Blues ahead to stay 2-1 at 17:16 of the first period with a shot from the slot.

Disaster strikes Oilers in Seattle

By Jim Cour

SEATTLE — What was supposed to be Al Del Greco's 127th career field goal turned into a dramatic loss for the Houston Oilers on Sunday.

Michael McCrary blocked Del Greco's field-goal attempt in the final minute, picked the ball up and lateraled to Robert Blackmon, who scored on a 61-yard return with four seconds left, giving the Seattle Seahawks a stunning 23-16 victory.

The Seahawks (4-5) improved their record to 3-1 since John Friesz replaced Rick Mirer as their starting quarterback.

The Oilers (5-4) lost their second game in a row on a day when Del Greco and Seattle's Todd Peterson were locked in a field-goal duel until the fourth quarter.

Houston, with Steve McNair making only his third NFL start at quarterback in place of the injured Chris Chandler, drove from its own 20 to the Seattle 20.

Del Greco, the Oilers' career field-goal kicker who is tied for the NFL lead with 23 field goals, lined up to kick a 37-yard field goal with 22 seconds to go, but the 6-foot-4, 263-pound McCrary blocked the kick, fielded it on a big bounce and ran it back 7 yards.

He then lateraled the ball to Blackmon, who was coming up on his left side, and Blackmon ran down the sideline for the Seahawks' second touchdown of the day. It was Blackmon's first career touchdown.

Instead of winning 19-16, the Oilers had to take a long and painful plane ride back to Texas.

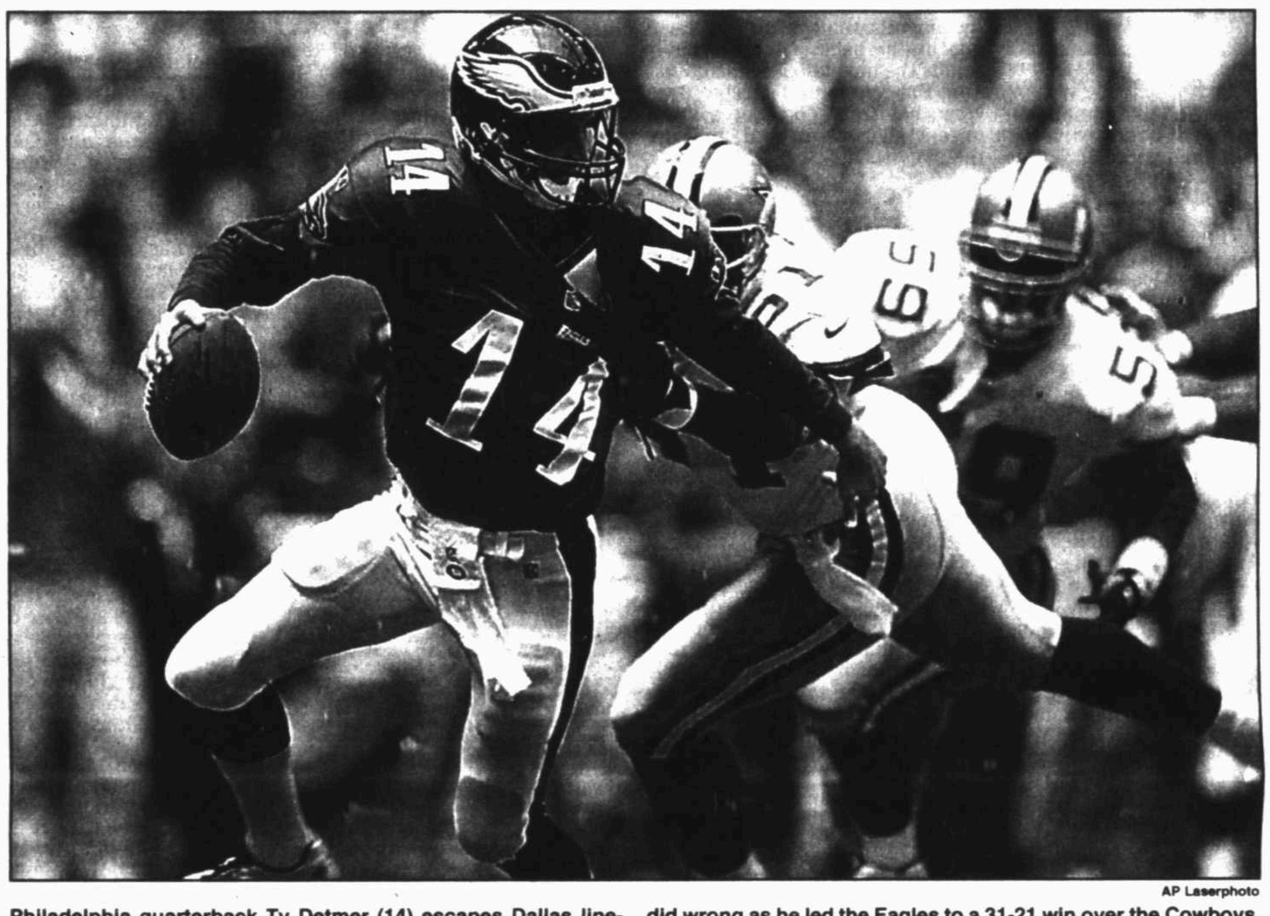

"This is going to be a tough loss to endure," Houston coach Jeff Fisher said. "We've had some tough losses, but this might be the toughest."

Del Greco, 34, had his second field-goal attempt blocked this season. He had a 37-yarder tipped in Week 4 against Pittsburgh.

"It was just a breakdown," Fisher said. "Some-

It was about the only thing the native Texan did wrong as he led the Eagles to a 31-21 win over the Cowboys. IRVING — Troy Aikman made two uncharacteristic mistakes, and the Philadelphia Eagles made him pay for their first victory in Texas Stadium in five years.

Aikman threw an interception to set up the Eagles' go-ahead field goal, then served up a second interception just trying to throw the ball away from the 3 yard line. The second mistake was returned for the clinching touchdown in the Eagles' 31-21 victory Sunday over the Dallas Cowboys.

"I wasn't trying to complete the pass," said the veteran Aikman, who has three Super Bowl rings. "I was trying to get rid of it. I should have taken the sack or thrown it out of the end zone. It was a bad play."

Linebacker James Willis intercepted Aikman's last-minute pass 4 yards into the end zone, ran to the 10 and lateraled to Troy Vincent, who went 90 yards for a touchdown with 12 seconds left, shocking the defending Super Bowl champions as they appeared to be going for the game-winner.

The Eagles are now 7-2 in the NFC East, and the eight-point favorite Cowboys dropped to 5-4 and in danger of missing the playoffs. Philadelphia had lost nine of its last 10 games against Dallas and hadn't won in Texas Stadium since a 24-0 shutout in 1991.

Unknowns crash party in New York

By Bert Rosenthal

NEW YORK — It was supposed to be a race for marathoning heavyweights Cosmas Ndeti, Moses Tanui, Martin Fiz and Tegla Loroupe.

Instead, the New York City Marathon turned into a celebration for the unheralded.

■ NYC Marathon

Giacomo Leone, a 25-year-old policeman from Italy, and Anuta Catuna, 28, from Romania, were the men's and women's winners Sunday, leaving the expected top contenders far back.

Ndeti, Tanui and Fiz never were among the men's leaders, and the projected 1-2 finish by Kenyans never materialized. Instead, an Ethiopian with an intriguing runner's name, Turbo Tumo, was the runner-up, with Kenyans Joseph Kamau, a first-time marathoner, and John Kagwe, third and fourth, respectively.

Ndeti, the three-time Boston Marathon winner from Kenya, placed sixth, just ahead of Fiz, the 1995 world champion from Spain. Tanui was not among the top 100 finishers.

Loroupe, the overwhelming favorite to win her third consecutive women's title, was on course-record pace early before fading over the second half and finishing seventh. After the race, she was removed on a stretcher to the medical tent suffering from dizziness.

"I tried to control the race, but when I felt dizzy I was tired," she said later after being taken to her hotel. "I couldn't control my legs after 20 kilometers (12.4 miles). I had a problem with my head. I had a headache.

"My muscles are OK. I'm not exhausted."

Leone won in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 54 seconds on a perfect day for running, with the temperature in the mid-40s, low humidity and a wind from the west. Leone was the first Italian winner since 1986, when Gianni Poli followed countryman's Orlando Pizzolato's 1984 and 1985 victories.

In the 1990s, however, the performances by the Italians had declined, with no finisher in the top five in the past six

CLASS 5A VOLLEYBALL PLAYOFFS

Seniors Trautman, Belcher fill tall order for Midland High

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Literally and figuratively, the net was raised for the Midland High volleyball team this season.

After two straight trips to the Class 5A bi-district playoffs, the Lady Bulldogs entered this season with some uncertainty over who would fill what roles, especially with their top three hitters, Elesceeya King, Jamee Stennett and Toya Zachery having graduated. On top of that, third-year coach Terri McColloch didn't have any front liners of equal size or status returning to replace the trio, all of whom stood at least five feet, nine inches.

So instead of having triple pillars to uphold the foundation, McColloch knew she would have to rely on a pair of rocks instead. But a lack of height hasn't kept two 5-4 seniors, Talitha Belcher and Christy Trautman, from providing that foundation.

In a word, McColloch says Belcher and Trautman bring the team "leadership. They have experience. Especially Christy has a calming influence on the others. When they do something good it gets the rest of the team excited."

More often than not, Belcher and Trautman have done something good for Midland High, which opens the playoffs as the third District 4-5A seed Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Boston College officials meet to discuss gambling allegations

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Boston College officials met behind closed doors most of the day Sunday as rumors swirled around campus about possible illegal gambling activity involving members of the school's football team.

On Saturday night, Boston College athletic director Chet Gladchuk announced that the school had started an investigation and asked for the Middlesex District Attorney's assistance.

"(Coach) Dan Henning came to me the other day and said there were rumors," Gladchuk said Saturday. "I said, 'What kind of rumors?' and he said rumors of gambling activity that was going on."

Reid Oslin, BC's sports information director, said the university would release a statement sometime Sunday night.

Middlesex County District Attorney Thomas Reilly issued a statement Sunday saying the office would not discuss the investigation.

"We are now in the process of sorting out those rumors," the statement said. "If there is wrong-doing, it will be dealt with. We will not comment on rumors and speculation."

While officials met, rumors continued to travel around campus.

Near the school's student center, many students expressed disbelief and concern.

"I guess I've always thought of BC as a well-respected college," said freshman Justin Shaghalian. "I've never heard any

Aikman admits loss will be tough to shake off

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Wins, Troy Aikman said, are easy to forget. It's the losses that nag the Dallas Cowboys quarterback for days and days, making it harder for him to focus on the next game.

"I don't handle them very well," Aikman said Sunday after making several crucial mistakes in Dallas' 31-21 loss to Philadelphia. "The nature of the game is that you can't dwell on it too long. ... That's what I'll have to do here."

Aikman's inability to handle a snap on third-and-goal from the 1-yard line cost Dallas a chance to go up 14-7 early in the second quarter, then his two interceptions on consecutive fourth-quarter drives sealed the defeat.

The second one was the toughest because it came just when it looked like Aikman was going to pull off a Staubach-like comeback.

AP Laserphoto

Troy Aikman...dejected after loss.

The Cowboys began driving from their 28 facing a 24-21 deficit and 3:19 remaining. Several Aikman passes and a few Emmitt Smith runs left Dallas with third-and-goal from the Philadelphia 3, less than half a minute on the clock and a time out remaining.

"We thought, 'OK, we'll at least get a field goal,'" said Cowboys' receiver-cornerback Deion Sanders.

Instead, Aikman was intercepted in the end zone by linebacker James Willis, who later pitched to Troy Vincent for a meandering 90-yard touchdown return.

The play did more than seal this game; it also put Dallas in a hole for the rest of the season.

Ideally, home-field advantage in the playoffs would be the long-term goal in the back of the Cowboys' minds the next two weeks against San Francisco and Green Bay. Now they must consider a more urgent short-term goal, making the playoffs.

At 5-4, Dallas trails Philadelphia and the Washington Redskins, both 7-2, in the NFC East. The Cowboys can keep some control of their destiny because they play Washington twice in the final four weeks.

"Any time you lose, it is tough. This one is extra tough," Sanders said. "We feel we had the win taken out of our hands. ...

"You can't move on. You can't go home and think about 'Frisco. It hurts. It hurts."

Other players said they saw no need to talk to Aikman and reassure him of their confidence. By now — after three Super Bowls in four years — they figure he knows they trust him.

"I think Troy will respond like a true champion," Smith said. "He knows he'll be needed in the big games to come. We just have to get behind him and get ready to play next week."

COWBOYS: Philly coach Rhodes says win his biggest

(From 1C)

"I told Troy I wouldn't trade him for any other quarterback in America," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "He's a champion, but this will hurt him for a long time."

Safety James Fuller picked off Aikman's pass at the Dallas 35 to set up Gary Anderson's go-ahead 30-yard field goal with 3:19 to play, giving the Eagles a 24-21 edge.

But Aikman rebounded to drive Dallas to the Eagles 3, where on third down Willis made his big play. Willis decided to run the ball out, then looked around and saw Vincent, who went all the way untouched including a strut over the last three yards for the score as the Eagles wildy celebrated.

"When I saw him (Willis) intercept the ball I was calling his name, hoping he heard me," Vincent said. "And he did. We were just looking to make a big play out of it. I didn't see anybody on that side of the field and I just kept going. I was going to try to score. We had nothing to lose.

"We felt this could be the game for the division championship. And it was a war. A 60-minute dogfight."

Willis said, "I went over to cover the tight end (Tyji Armstrong) and the ball came to me. Then I heard Troy calling my name."

Eagles coach Ray Rhodes said, "It's probably the biggest road win in my tenure. Our defense made the plays they had to make. I'm sure we'll see Dallas again somewhere down the line in the playoffs."

Emmitt Smith's 7-yard touchdown run and Aikman's conversion pass to tight end Eric Bjornson tied the game at 21-all with 10:14 to go.

Ty Detmer's 14-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar in the third quarter gave the Eagles a 21-13 lead after a perfectly orchestrated 75-yard drive.

Detmer, who came into the game with a 3-0 record as a starter for the Eagles, kept the No. 2-rated Dallas defense off-balance as Philadelphia built a 14-10 halftime lead despite being stunned again by Herschel Walker.

"This puts us in great shape going into the final stretch," Detmer said. "But beating them here doesn't mean anything. We've got seven more weeks."

Walker returned the opening kickoff 86 yards to set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Smith. On Sept. 30, it was Walker's 49-yard kickoff return that rallied Dallas to a 23-19 win over Philadelphia on Monday Night Football.

However, this time the Detmer-led Eagles weren't fazed. He directed them on a 74-yard drive and converted three third-down plays, with Ricky Watters getting the payoff on a 5-yard run.

Smith's two touchdowns give him 105 rushing scores in his NFL career, moving him to No. 4 on the career list one ahead of John Riggins.

"It doesn't mean much when you lose a game like this," Smith said.

Smith rushed 24 times for 113 yards, but was overshadowed by Watters, who got 116 yards on 24 carries. Detmer completed 19 of 33 passes for 217 yards, while Aikman finished 21-of-33 for 179 yards and the two fatal interceptions.

body hit a crease. The Seahawks had to be thinking the game was over and they had to make a play. Well, they made a heck of a play."

"We were just fortunate to come in untouched," Seattle coach Dennis Erickson said. "Then to have it bounce like it did and the rest of it to happen, I'd say we were pretty lucky. I'd like to say it was planned, but we were pretty lucky."

Del Greco couldn't believe the ending.

"I'm just shocked more than anything," he said. "Even if I would have missed the field goal, we still would have gone into overtime. To have it happen like that is amazing. To lose a game like this is a first for me."

McCrary, a fourth-year defensive end, said he almost blocked Del Greco's third field goal and then got some good advice from old pro Joe Nash.

"Joe told me not to jump," McCrary said. "He told me to get through a seam, you've got to run for the ball. So I did exactly what Joe told me."

Seattle tied the score at 16-16 on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Friesz to Joey Galloway with 3:30 to go. The Seahawks drove 66 yards in nine plays in 4:42.

The Seahawks' drive was kept alive on an offsides penalty by Houston after an interception by Darryll Lewis.

The Oilers went ahead 16-9 on a 65-yard touchdown pass from McNair to Chris Sanders. Sanders caught a short pass from McNair and made Selwyn Jones and Blackmon miss on the sideline before sprinting into the end zone with 8:12 to go.

Peterson missed a 23-yard field-goal attempt, his second miss of the second half, with 3:04 gone in the fourth quarter. The Seahawks had to settle for their fifth field-goal attempt of the day after Steve Broussard returned a kickoff 47 yards, and a 31-yard pass from Friesz to Ricky Proehl gave them the ball on the Houston 2.

Del Greco tied the score at 9-9 with his third field goal of the day, a 45-yarder, on the first play of the fourth quarter. It was set up by McNair's 49-yard pass to Willie Davis.

After Del Greco tied the score at 6-6 with a 36-yard field in the third quarter, Peterson kicked a 44-yarder with 2:31 left in the period to give the Seahawks the lead at 9-6. Peterson's third field goal came after a diving one-handed catch by Mike Pritchard on a 44-yard pass from Friesz.

Peterson was wide right on a 47-yard field-goal attempt with 3:37 gone in the second half.

The Seahawks led 6-3 at halftime as Peterson kicked field goals of 25 and 35 yards and Del Greco booted a 35-yarder in the firt two quarters.

MHS: Trautman, Belcher lead Lady Bulldogs into playoffs

(From 1C)

against Amarillo High at Brownfield. In terms of hitting, the two relatively short seniors have put up numbers which would be respectable for much bigger players.

Trautman is second on the team with 148 kills while Belcher is second for the Lady Bulldogs with 74 blocks. Teams which have underestimated Trautman and Belcher because of their size have paid the price.

"I take (being shorter) as completely positive because every time we go up and get a hit it's a surprise," Trautman said. "It makes it all sweeter because of our lack of height."

That lack of height didn't keep McColloch from placing Trautman and Belcher in different positions from last year. Both have been hitters this season after spending most of last year in the back row. Trautman had been a starting setter as a junior while Belcher mainly had a substitute role.

While Trautman did have some prior experience as a hitter, Belcher didn't.

"Talitha did not play any front line so she's done an excellent job adapting," McColloch said.

In retrospect, though, moving Belcher to the front line as a blocker wasn't such an outrageous move. A three-sport athlete, Belcher has a tremendous vertical leap and was third in the district in the triple jump last spring competing in track and field.

"I'd been looking forward (to playing up front). I love to block people who are yay high," said Belcher, raising a hand several inches above her head to emphasize her point.

Belcher and Trautman have to compensate for their lack of size to make kills with timing and anticipation. Trautman also welcomed the opportunity to play as a hitter although she had to strike something of a deal with McColloch a year earlier. McColloch told Trautman that if she agreed to be a setter as a junior, she would have a shot at outside hitter as a senior.

While coaches' promises sometimes carry all the meaning of a Don King contract, McColloch made good on her deal with Trautman when the year started.

"I don't think I'm too great with my hands so it was kind of surprising," said Trautman of the decision to make her a hitter.

Once Belcher and Trautman were settled into their places, the rest of the team had to come together. Roles were already established for the other two seniors, 5-4 setter and defensive specialist Becky Salgado and 5-7 hitter Brianne Elkins — the closest thing to a returning giant for the Lady Bulldogs — so the team chemistry was in place, and McColloch hoped it would produce a potion.

For the most part, the plan has worked. When someone has been out of place, though, it has exploded in the team's face.

"If I have even one of my seniors off it throws off the whole team," McColloch said. Case in point — Midland High faced Odessa Permian, previously winless in the district, during the second half of the season without Trautman, who was scheduled to be in a wedding. The Lady Bulldogs were thumped by the Panthers in two games.

Since then, Trautman has been back in the lineup and Midland High has won three of its last four to make the postseason. The Lady Bulldogs have been successful by sticking to their course and not deviating wildly from it with wholesale lineup changes. Belcher says the confidence McColloch showed in the team has spurred it on throughout the season.

"I knew it was going to be difficult because I knew I would have to take that extra step, but Coach McColloch gave us confidence and we knew we could do the job," Belcher said.

Hope has been the one ingredient in plentiful supply for Midland High all season. It has carried the Lady Bulldogs into the playoffs and has perhaps instilled them with a nothing to lose attitude that likely won't abate until they lose.

Trautman thinks that attitude will be a marked contrast to that which marked Midland High entering last year's postseason.

"During the playoffs our seniors had a hard time keeping their heads because they worried too much about the first round and they felt every point was a do or die situation," Trautman said.

Tuesday's match is a do or die situation, but without the burden of expectations which might have weighed on last year's team when it faced another Panhandle school, Amarillo Palo Duro in the first round. McColloch is hoping a little enthusiasm can carry her team a long way.

"It's just great to see these girls get excited and do it because nobody thought they could," McColloch said.

Nobody, except the girls themselves.

Nothing surprising about career catch No. 1000 for Rice

Associated Press

There were two shocking events in the NFL Sunday: Atlanta won its first game and Dallas lost because of Troy Aikman's mistakes. There was nothing surprising, though, about Jerry Rice's performance.

Rice became the first player with 1,000 career receptions Sunday night in San Francisco's 24-17 victory over New Orleans. Rice caught a 36-yard touchdown pass, set up another score with his milestone catch and recovered an onside kick that sealed the win.

Jamal Anderson rushed for a career-high 109 yards, and Atlanta's defense shut down Carolina after Kerry Collins left with an injured knee for a 20-17 win over the Panthers.

Atlanta (1-8) avoided the worst start in team history, 0-9 by the expansion Falcons in 1966.

"It's been a long time coming," linebacker Cornelius Bennett said. "You don't know the joy I have inside of me right now."

Elsewhere in the NFL, it was New York Giants 16, Arizona 8; Cincinnati 24, Baltimore 21; Green Bay 28, Detroit 18; Pittsburgh 42, St. Louis 6; San Diego 26, Indianapolis 19; Chicago 13, Tampa Bay 10; Kansas City 21, Minnesota 6; New England 42, Miami 23; and Buffalo 38, Washington 13.

49ers 24, Saints 17

At New Orleans, Rice got his 1,000th career catch in the fourth quarter when he grabbed a 9-yard pass from Steve Young, who scored on a quarterback sneak on the next play to put the 49ers up 24-14. New Orleans (2-7) kicked a field goal with 2:16 left and then tried an onside kick that was recovered by Rice. Rice, who had three catches for 45 yards, is the NFL's career leader in catches, receiving yards (15,864), receiving touchdowns (151) and total touchdowns (162).

Falcons 20, Panthers 17

At Atlanta, the Panthers (5-4) seemed to fall apart after Collins went out early in the third quarter following a late hit by Chuck Smith. Collins, who was 14-of-21 for 221 yards, reinjured the left knee ligament that caused him to miss one game and parts of two others earlier in the season.

Giants 16, Cardinals 8

At East Rutherford, rookie Danny Kanell guided the Giants (4-5) after starting quarterback Dave Brown got back spasms in the first quarter of the injury-filled game. Kanell threw a 24-yard TD pass in the fourth quarter and Jesse Campbell's interceptions set up two of Brad Daluiso's three field goals. The Cardinals (3-5) lost starting QB Kent Graham with a knee injury late in the first period, and Giants RB Tyrone Wheatley was taken off the field on a stretcher after getting a concussion late in the game.

Bengals 24, Ravens 21

At Baltimore, Doug Pelfrey kicked a 34-yard field goal as time expired to give Cincinnati its second straight win under Bruce Coslet. The Bengals (3-6) picked off four of Vinny Testaverde's passes and overcame an an 18-point halftime deficit. Trailing 21-3, Cincinnati tied it on a 1-yard run by Ki-Jana Carter, a 4-yard run by Jeff Blake and a 49-yard field goal by Pelfrey.

Packers 28, Lions 18

At Green Bay, Brett Favre didn't miss Antonio Freeman or Robert Brooks. Playing without his two best receivers, Favre still threw for four TDs as the Packers

■ NFL Roundup

(8-1) got their 12th straight victory at Lambeau Field. Don Beebe caught four passes for 106 yards, including a 65-yard TD catch, and Terry Mickens, who hadn't played all season because of a severe ankle sprain, made two diving TD catches.

Steelers 42, Rams 6

At Pittsburgh, Jerome Bettis came back to haunt his former team. Bettis ran for 129 yards and two TDs to lead the Steelers over the Rams, who traded him away on draft day after picking Nebraska's Lawrence Phillips. Erric Pegram scored on a 91-yard kickoff return and a 17-yard run, while Kordell Stewart scored twice on quarterback draws for Pittsburgh. The Steelers are 7-2 for the first time since 1979, the last time they won the Super Bowl. Phillips gained only six yards for the Rams.

Chargers 26, Colts 19

At Indianapolis, Junior Seau and the San Diego Chargers harassed Jim Harbaugh into his worst game for the slumping Colts (5-4). The Chargers (5-4) intercepted four of Harbaugh's passes, sacked him six times and forced a big fumble. Seau, out last week with a knee injury, forced a fumble that the Chargers recovered at the Indianapolis 42. Sean Salisbury then hit three straight passes, including a clinching 22-yard TD to Tony Martin.

Bears 13, Buccaneers 10

At Chicago, Bryan Cox — playing with a broken thumb — led an inspired Bears defense. After Chicago took a 13-10 lead on Raymont Harris' 1-yard TD run, Cox made three tackles to stop Tampa Bay short of first downs. The Bears (4-5) tried to talk Cox into having surgery last week, and didn't want him to go back into the game with about six minutes left. But Cox went back on the field after getting into a brief sideline shoving match with trainer Fred Caito.

Bills 38, Redskins 13

At Orchard Park, Thurman Thomas and backup Darick Holmes combined for 229 yards rushing and four TDs as Buffalo (6-3) snapped Washington's seven-game winning streak. Holmes finished with 122 yards and three TDs, while Thomas gained 107 and scored once. Jim Kelly was 19-of-23 for 206 yards, and ran 4 yards for a touchdown. The Bills held NFC rushing leader Terry Allen to 49 yards on 15 carries.

Chiefs 21, Vikings 6

At Minneapolis, Marcus Allen tied Walter Payton's career NFL record with his 110th scoring run and Greg Hill ran for two late touchdowns as the Chiefs beat the punchless Vikings. One week after gaining only 24 yards on the ground in a loss to Denver, the Chiefs (6-3) ran for 202 yards. They held Minnesota (5-4) scoreless until Brad Johnson's 1-yard pass to Cris Carter with 1:28 left in the game.

Patriots 42, Dolphins 23

At Foxboro, Ben Coates scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 23-yard reception, then raced down the sidelines to complete an 84-yard pass play as the Patriots won for the sixth time in seven games. Drew Bledsoe completed 30 of 41 passes for 419 yards and three touchdowns, and Curtis Martin ran for three TDs for New England (6-3). Miami (4-5) has lost five of its last six.

MEET: BC school officials assemble

(From 1C)

problems circulating around sports. You always hear about them happening at the bigger schools like Nebraska and Miami. They've had trouble, but you don't expect it at a smaller school like BC.

"It kind of brings us down to a lower level and I think that's what people will think of us," Shaghalian said. "I've heard some players might have bet on the team (BC) to lose."

WHDH-TV in Boston reported Sunday night that "the school was looking into five players that gambled on games and may have bet on BC to lose."

"I guess it will have an effect on the reputation of the school and the (football) program," said Mike Fois, a sophomore. "It was a total surprise to me."

Barkley punishes Suns on rebounds

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley wanted to please the fans — as always — when he returned to Phoenix. He also wanted to punish the Suns.

He accomplished both goals, and then some.

Charles Barkley pulled down a career-high 33 rebounds in his first game as a Houston Rocket.

Barkley's career-high 33 rebounds in a 110-95 Houston victory Saturday night punctuated the statement he felt he owed the organization that dealt him to the Rockets on Aug. 19.

"I wish I could have finished my career here, but they made it personal," said Barkley, who also had 20 points. "They said a lot of bad things behind my back."

Barkley's first appearance in the America West Arena since May 3, when the Suns were knocked out the playoffs, was bigger than he hoped. His 11 rebounds in the first quarter, 17 at halftime and 33 for the game set arena records. He had three more than the Suns, and the third-highest rebounding total in Houston history.

It was the biggest effort in an NBA game since Rony Seikaly had 34 rebounds on March 3, 1993.

"Rebounding is something I've always taken pride in," said Barkley, one of 10 players to have 20,000 points and 10,000 rebounds. With three more assists, he will join Wilt Chamberlain, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Elgin Baylor as the only players to have those numbers and 3,500 assists.

"I just want to rebound," Barkley said. "I don't think I'll get 33 a night, but everybody talks about Dennis Rodman. Dennis is a great rebounder, but if somebody told me, 'You don't have to score. Just go out and rebound,' I've always felt like I could get a lot of rebounds."

Hakeem Olajuwon had 24 points and Clyde Drexler 22, and Matt Maloney hit four 3-pointers during a 16-0 run in the first quarter. But the night belonged to Sir Charles from his appearance in the tunnel to a party he threw at an exclusive nightspot for players from both teams and invited guests.

Barkley wanted to join Olajuwon and Drexler so much that he lobbied all summer for a trade from the city where he spent four seasons. His refusal to return and references to himself as "slave labor" made the rift between himself and the front office ever wider.

Barkley was the first Rocket introduced, drawing tumultuous applause. But public address announcer Jeff Munn cut the ovation short by introducing Barkley's teammates.

"I was thinking it was typical Suns ... They were going to announce the next guy really quickly, which they did," Barkley said.

Munn denied that he was under orders to downplay Barkley's welcome, saying he worked the introductions at his usual pace.

Suns fans tried to treat Barkley as a threat during the game, booing him halfheartedly during free-throw attempts. Laughter rang out when Barkley slipped running downcourt and missed a layup.

But Olajuwon trailed Barkley and dunked the rebound, and the fans quickly turned on the home team, which shot 25 percent in the first quarter.

When he came out of the game with 38 seconds left, after playing 45 minutes, Barkley got more applause and smiled but didn't acknowledge the crowd with a wave.

"We're friends on and off the court," said the Suns' Michael Finley. "I think he wanted me to do well. In a way, I wanted him to do well, but I didn't want him to do what he did."

Sam Cassell, one of four Rockets the Suns obtained in the trade, led Phoenix with 22 points. He was philosophical about Barkley's tour de force.

"Without the effort from Charles, I think we win the game, but people have great nights like that occasionally," Cassell said.

Nuggets defeat depleted Spurs

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Reserve Ricky Pierce scored 11 of his 15 points in the fourth quarter Sunday night and the Denver Nuggets beat the depleted San Antonio Spurs 88-79.

Playing without injured regulars David Robinson, Will Perdue and Chuck Person, the Spurs went more than 11 minutes without a basket and matched a franchise low with only nine field goals in the first half.

Denver led 52-34 at halftime. The Spurs went on a 6-0 run to finish the third quarter and pull within 64-56, but got no closer than 73-67 in the fourth period.

Antonio McDyess added 13 points and LaPhonso Ellis and Bryant Stith each had 12 for Denver. The Spurs shot only 32 percent, with Dominique Wilkins going 1-for-13. Sean Elliott scored 17 and Avery Johnson had 14 for San Antonio. Pierce kept Denver ahead with seven free throws and two baskets down the stretch. The Nuggets won their first game of the season while the Spurs fell to 0-2.

Knicks 113, Hornets 86

NEW YORK — Anthony Mason's homecoming featured a warm reception from the crowd and a rude awakening from his former team as New York opened a 26-point lead in the first quarter and trounced Charlotte.

Mason, traded to the Hornets during the summer for Larry Johnson, was a non-factor in the early going as New York opened a 27-6 lead 8 1/2 minutes into the game. It was 37-11 at the end of one quarter, and by the middle of the second period, Johnson was talking trash to the Hornets' stone-faced bench.

Warriors 105, Grizzlies 95

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Chris Mullin reached the 15,000-point mark, scoring 24 points as Golden State beat Vancouver. The Warriors broke an 88-88 tie with 5:36 left by scoring seven straight points. Latrell Sprewell had 20 points for the Warriors. Mark Price and Ray Owes each scored 14 and rookie Todd Fuller had 12 for Golden State.

Lakers 91, Timberwolves 85

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Shaquille O'Neal had 35 points and 19 rebounds as Los Angeles rallied from a nine-point deficit early in the fourth quarter to beat Minnesota.

The Lakers, who trailed by 15 points in the second quarter, are 2-0 in their first season with O'Neal.

Rice to battle BYU for Mountain

DALLAS (AP) — Rice controls its own destiny in the Western Athletic Conference.

As shocking as it sounds, it's true. The Owls, long the egghead doormats of the deceased Southwest Conference, have taken the WAC by storm with an unforgiving running attack foreign to this pass-happy conference.

Pre-season WAC favorite Utah, ranked No. 20 going in, was fodder for the suddenly potent Owls, who have won four straight and rushed for more than 400 yards in each game, including 496 against the Utes.

The victory sets up a clash in Provo, Utah, that no one thought would amount to much earlier this season when the Owls were busy getting driven by Ohio State 70-7. Next Saturday, Rice (5-3, 4-1) visits division leader Brigham Young.

No. 12 BYU beat Texas El Paso 40-18 on Saturday, improving to 5-0 in conference play. Elsewhere in the Mountain Division, New Mexico beat Tulsa 34-23, Southern Methodist fell to 16th-ranked Wyoming 59-17 and Texas Christian beat Nevada-Las Vegas 42-34.

In other WAC action, San Diego State beat San Jose State 49-20, Fresno State mauled Boise State 41-7 and Colorado State edged Air Force 42-41.

Rice was supposed to be the Harvard of the new WAC — not the Nebraska. Yet coach Ken Hatfield's run-oriented attack has proven effective in a league littered with airborne schemes.

AP Laserphoto

Utah's Kevin Dyson (1) runs past Rice's Kevin Masek (16) on a 46-yard kickoff return during Rice's 51-10 upset win over No. 20 Utah.

"I don't think I've ever been part of a team that has gotten better in every aspect of the game four weeks in a row," Rice coach Ken Hatfield said. "We've shown what we said to our recruits and players. We've become competitive for the championship."

Utah (7-2, 5-1) still can win the division if BYU beats Rice and Utah beats BYU in their season-ending battle on Nov. 23.

No team epitomizes WAC football more than BYU (9-1 overall), also known as Quarterback U. Quarterback Steve Sarkisian threw for 235 yards on 22-for-35 passing in the victory over hapless UTEP.

Rice, which earned two points in the latest Associated Press poll, has never played BYU.

TCU (3-5, 2-3) kept its hopes alive for a winning season during its disappointing inaugural year in the conference. UNLV, which extended its Division I-A-worst losing streak to 12, was at the TCU 9 as time expired.

"It ain't pretty, but it sure beats the alternative," Horned Frogs coach Pat Sullivan said.

Reginal Johnson rushed for 232 yards and all five of New Mexico's touchdowns against Tulsa, which has fallen flat in its first WAC season after a promising start.

Johnson had 41 carries and scored 32 points, a Lobos record. New Mexico (5-4, 2-4) rebounded from a 52-31 blowout by SMU last week, while Tulsa (3-5, 1-4) has largely flopped since an emotional early-season victory over Oklahoma.

SMU quarterback Ramon Flanigan followed the best game of his career last week with the worst Saturday, throwing five interceptions against undefeated Wyoming, which hasn't needed much help in winning this year.

Wyoming safety Brian Lee caught three of the errant passes, and the Cowboys converted each into a touchdown.

Ags, 'Horns get victories, quarterback intrigue

■ A&M's Branndon Stewart, Texas' James Brown upstaged.

DALLAS (AP) — Texas played four full quarters of football on Saturday, which is more than can be said for Texas A&M quarterback Branndon Stewart.

The Longhorns appeared ready to cough up an early 21-point lead to Baylor but managed to stop the Bears on one last desperation drive to come away with 28-23 victory.

Meanwhile, the Aggies played perhaps their finest second half of the season at Oklahoma State in a 38-19 win. Unfortunately for Stewart, the ballyhooed Tennessee transfer Aggie fans waited on all last season, he watched it all from the bench.

In other Big 12 action, Nebraska beat Oklahoma 73-21 for the Sooners' worst-ever defeat, Kansas beat Iowa State 34-31 and Colorado beat Missouri 41-13.

Stewart's mere five completions for 50 yards in the first half didn't help the Aggie cause much as their 13-10 halftime deficit showed. When he took a third-down sack to open the second half, coach R.C. Slocum had seen enough.

"At halftime, some guys had their heads down. It was like, 'Here it goes again,' " said linebacker Keith Mitchell, who got the Aggies going with a 42-yard interception return in the third quarter.

Backup quarterback Randy McCown, while not spectacular, drove the Aggies to three touchdown drives, all finished by D'Andre Hardeman touchdown runs. The Aggies will determine their starter at quarterback this week in preparation for next Saturday's game against Baylor (4-4, 1-4 Big 12), Slocum said.

While the Aggies (4-5, 2-3) were busy thrashing OSU (4-5, 1-5), the Longhorns spent their Saturday trying to hang on to a fourth-quarter lead, something they had failed to do three times this season.

Baylor did make a final mad dash, but Texas' defense stopped them on a fourth-down play at the Longhorns 36 to set up a showdown next Saturday with divisional leader Texas Tech.

"On that last drive, I told the defense, 'We've been in this situation before. Let's do something different,' " linebacker Tyson King said.

Quarterback intrigue continued in Austin, too. While James Brown started and took most of the snaps, Richard Walton played a great deal during the second half.

Brown completed 11 of 19 passes for 178 yards, with two touchdowns to Pat Fitzgerald and two interceptions, including one on a botched reception attempt. Afterward, Brown said he had wanted to keep playing and didn't know why coach John Mackovic took him out in the third quarter.

Texas (4-4, 3-2) controls its own destiny for the division title. So does Tech (5-3, 4-2), which was idle, making their clash in Lubbock the biggest game of the year in the infantile Big 12.

Any hopes of Oklahoma (2-6, 2-3) making headway this season were dashed by Nebraska's whipping, the sixth straight in the teams' storied series. Of the Sooners' 10 all-time worst losses, four have come in the last three seasons.

Despite the score, the Nebraska offense wasn't scintillating. The defense made sure it didn't need to be.

"I guess when you win 70-something to 21 and you say, 'Well the key to the game was the defense,' it doesn't make a lot of sense," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "But obviously we played very well defensively through most of the game."

Report: UH pays former coaches more than $1 million in settlements

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston, while dealing with huge shortfalls in its athletic budget, has agreed to pay former football coaches some $1 million in settlements, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

According to documents obtained by the newspaper under the Texas Open Records Act, the university has agreed to legal and contractual settlements with ex-head coach John Jenkins and four former assistant coaches.

In two well-publicized matters, former assistant coach Steve Staggs received $650,000 to settle his whistleblower lawsuit against the college last spring, and Jenkins' contract was bought out for $250,000 when he was forced to resign in 1993.

In addition, records show the university authorized payments totaling $135,000 to three former assistant football coaches to prevent litigation over their dismissal and arranged for Jenkins to receive $15,000 to keep him from filing a defamation lawsuit over remarks made by UH athletic director Bill Carr, the Chronicle said.

Carr and UH legal counsel Susan Wheeler declined to comment on the settlements because of pending litigation.

Athletic-related finances are an issue at the university, where millions of dollars in student-service fees have been used to prop up an athletic department that has recorded a total deficit of about $13.5 million since 1992.

University spokeswoman Fran Howell said the settlements were not part of the athletic deficit. She said such settlements typically are paid by university funds set aside for potential legal claims and by the university's insurance carriers.

Bruce Davis and Ronnie Vinklarek, assistant coaches fired by current Cougars head coach Kim Helton after the 1993 season, received $42,500 and $40,000 respectively.

Two other coaches fired by Helton in 1993, Ron Shanklin and Melvin Robertson, sued the university a year ago, contending they were fired without cause in violation of school policy. The lawsuit, set to go to trial in May 1997, seeks unspecified damages.

Another former UH assistant, Jimmy Warren, accepted a $52,500 settlement in June 1994. He was dismissed a year earlier.

The settlement of the Staggs lawsuit called for the former assistant coach to receive $200,000 from UH and $450,000 from the school's insurer.

U.S. overcomes Guatemala, quiet crowd to win, 2-0

■ World Cup Qualifying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Playing with heart and grit, and dictating the early tempo, Guatemala had the home fans. Even though home was some 1,800 miles away.

That explains the muted response in the locker room after the United States' 2-0 victory over Guatemala in a World Cup qualifying game Sunday.

"It's still so frustrating," U.S. goalkeeper Kasey Keller said. "Being an American playing in your nation's capital and to have almost more support for the opposition."

Eric Wynalda and Brian McBride scored in the second half to secure the victory and send most of the fans at RFK Stadium home disappointed. That's because Americans in the boisterous crowd of 30,082 appeared to be outnumbered 2-to-1 by Guatemalans, many waving blue and white flags and chanting their country's name.

"I don't want to get into immigration issues, but if someone wants to be an American, then let him in the country and let him be an American," Keller said.

"If they want to come into the country and still be a Guatemalan, then it gets a little frustrating. I don't think that many people flew in from Guatemala to support them."

U.S. coach Steve Sampson suggested many fans stayed home to watch the Washington Redskins game at Buffalo later in the day.

"We have to take a very good luck at competing with the NFL," he said. "We need to stop playing games opposite the NFL so we can get a home crowd."

The Guatemalans also were playing in memory of 84 compatriots who died in a stadium stampede in Guatemala City on Oct. 16 before a scheduled game against Costa Rica. The players, their first game since the tragedy, wore black ribbons on their uniform sleeves, and were angry because the moment of silence held before kickoff was so brief they didn't realize it had happened.

"We worked on it psychologically," defender Martin Machon said. "We took (the tragedy) as motivation to try to give everything to play hard for all the families, but not to be preoccupied with it."

The Guatemalans committed 18 fouls and left Americans grimacing numerous times. The tactics threw the U.S. team off it game in the first half.

"Any time something like that happens, they carry it on their shoulders," Wynalda said, referring to the tragedy. "That added to their intensity — some of it came out in dirty play — but you can't hold it against them."

It was the first game for the United States (1-0-0) in the long road to the 1998 World Cup in France. The Americans play Trinidad and Tobago in Richmond, Va., next Sunday. Guatemala fell to 0-1-1.

Nobilo rallies for World Open trophy

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

BRASELTON, Ga. — Frank Nobilo of New Zealand overcame a four-shot deficit on a bright, sunny day and shot a 6-under-par 66 Sunday to win the Sarazen World Open Championship for the second year in a row.

Nobilo overtook third-round leader Scott Hoch with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole, and stretched the lead to two shots when he sank a 5-footer for another birdie at No. 14. His lead swelled to the final margin of four shots when Hoch took a double bogey-6 on the 17th.

Nobilo's 72-hole score of 272 bettered by one the tournament record set by Ernie Els in the inaugural Sarazen event two years ago.

His $342,000 first prize lifted his winnings to $718,600 in the three tournaments played at the hilly 6,967-yard The Legends course at Chateau Elan, a resort about 50 miles north of Atlanta.

The 36-year-old native of Auckland, who now lives in Surrey, England, had finished fourth in the Masters and eighth in the PGA Championship this year, having earned just over $262,000 in eight appearances on the PGA Tour.

Dunhill Masters

HONG KONG — Germany's Bernhard Langer won for the first time in 13 months, carding a 6-under-par 65 to win the $500,000 Dunhill Masters by two strokes over South Korean Kang Wook-soon.

Langer, whose last win was at the European Open last fall in Ireland, said the victory justified his faith in a long-handled putter. He used it for only the fourth time, and wound up 17-under at 267.

Kang finished with a 66, earning $53,685.

Australian Scott Laycock, who went into the final round with a two-stroke lead, wound up another shot behind after a closing 71. That was one stroke better than Thailand's Boonchu Ruangkit, who carded a 70.

LPGA Queens Cup

INASHIKI, Japan — Laura Davies lost in a playoff to Mayumi Hirase, but took the LPGA money lead by passing Karrie Webb in the Toray Queens Cup.

Hirase, a co-leader entering the final round, forced the sudden-death playoff with a final-hole birdie en route to a 72 for 4-under-par 212.

The victory in the $750,000 LPGA regular-season finale was worth $112,500.

Davies, with her payoff of $69,819, surpassed Australian rookie Webb, who finished 35th after a closing 72. Davies leads with earnings of $897,302. Webb has earned $852,000 with only the decisive Tour Championship remaining later this month.

Emerald Coast Classic

MILTON, Fla. — Lee Trevino sank a 35-foot putt for a birdie on the first hole of a five-way playoff — the biggest in Senior PGA Tour history — to win the $1.05 million Emerald Coast Classic on Sunday.

Trevino defeated Dave Stockton, Mike Hill, David Graham and Bob Eastwood who each shot par-4 on the 398-yard 18th hole during the playoff.

CHICAGO — Jana Novotna stopped Jennifer Capriati's bid for her first title since 1993, winning the final five games Sunday to take a 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 victory in the finals of the Ameritech Cup.

Novotna, second-seeded and the No. 5 player in the world, won her third title of 1996 with a strong serve and a versatile game featuring a relentless array of sliced backhands.

Capriati, who captivated the tennis world as a 14-year-old six years ago, returned to the tour this season after two years of personal turmoil that included two stints in drug rehabilitation.

Cheered loudly by a crowd at the University of Illinois-Chicago Pavilion, Capriati, unseeded and ranked 50th, showed she still has the game to return to the tour's elite.

Paris Open

PARIS — Thomas Enqvist, his serve whistling as high as 125 mph, beat French Open champion Yevgeny Kafelnikov 6-2, 6-4, 7-5 Sunday to capture the Paris Open for the biggest payday of his career.

"I felt like I couldn't lose," Enqvist said. "I was kind of playing out of my mind. I was in a zone today."

Enqvist served 20 aces, including four in the final game, and closed the match against the Russian in 1 hour, 26 minutes.

"It was very important to serve well against him," Enqvist said. 'It allowed me to play harder and be more aggressive."

Kafelnikov, the No. 4 seed, and Enqvist, No. 12, were the only seeds to get past the third round in a tournament that began with Pete Sampras Michael Chang, Boris Becker and Andre Agassi.

"When the other Italians won, I was a little child," said Leone, who pulled away in the final 3 miles and recorded his career-best time in his first marathon victory.

"I saw it on TV. Today, I remembered the New York City Marathon and I prayed to God.

"The finish of the race was very hard."

Italian Giacomo Leone, left, and Romanian Anuta Catuna, were the men's and women's winners Sunday in the New York City Marathon.

Leone made it look easy, though, beating Tumo (2:10:09) by 15 seconds and Kamau (2:10:40) by 46 seconds.

Leone finished second in last year's Venice Marathon but decided to skip last week's Venice race and come to New York "because the field was very tough and I wanted good international experience."

He got more than he bargained for — the biggest victory of his career.

Running in her third marathon this year, Catuna won by coming from behind.

She stayed off the blistering early pace set by Loroupe and another Kenyan, Joyce Chepchumba, before coming on strong late and winning in a Romanian record 2:28:18, 24 seconds ahead of Franca Fiacconi of Italy, a marathon winner three weeks ago.

"I ran slowly in the first part," said Catuna, the fourth-place finisher in New York in 1994. "Then, I tried to run fast ... fast ... fast.

"Now, I win. I am very happy. It's very important."

Catuna, who finished 15th in the marathon at Osaka, Japan, and 44th at the Olympics, arrived only Saturday night from Boulder, Colo., where she had trained for the past two months.

Chepchumba wound up third in 2:29:38, and the struggling Loroupe, whose mother and sister made their first visit to the United States to watch her run, was timed in 2:37:19.

Kim Jones of Spokane, Wash., the women's runner-up in 1989-90 but a non-finisher in 1992, 1993 and 1994, was the only American in the elite men's or women's field and placed a distant fourth in 2:34:36.

"It was good to finish," said Jones, who was using a new inhaler to combat her chronic asthma. "I couldn't make a move because it was windy ... there was a headwind. I was fighting the wind."

A little-known Algerian, Hamid Oubadriss, set the pace for the men through the first 11 miles, leaving the big names at least 1 minute back at several mile markers.

Eventually, the race developed into a four-man battle among Leone, Tumo, Kamau and 1993 New York City Marathon champion Andres Espinosa of Mexico. Espinosa wound up fifth.

The women's race was dominated by Loroupe and Chepchumba early as they pulled away from the rest of the field. But slowly the others reeled them in.

The winners each received $30,000 plus a new car. Leone also got a $20,000 bonus for breaking 2:10 and Catuna got a $10,000 bonus for running under 2:29.

Leone's prize money nearly tripled the annual salary he earns as a policeman — $18,000.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The big payoff comes when you play your cards right at work. Romance will have your heart racing as the winter holidays approach. Tie up any loose ends related to a previous relationship. Next spring is the ideal time to buy, rent or build a new residence. A marriage that takes place in May of 1997 seems made in heaven! Think about starting a mail order business or working from your home. Family and friends will offer support. Postpone a vacation until next fall.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: humorist Will Rogers, actress Loretta Swit, golfer Kathy McMullen, fashion designer Pauline Trigere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your energy is double what it was a few days ago. Do not feel guilty about furthering your interests. Others are eager to please you. A slightly playful manner will be an asset in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone may try to turn the tables on you. Stay alert! You need to back up your good intentions with action. Others like your style but question your motives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay close attention to partnership matters. You must not let others push you into making hasty decisions. Romance has its ups and downs. You win when you yield to your mate's wishes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let others know if you expect them to follow instructions to the letter. They count on you for advice. Be practical in business; you will get your way. A dream could prove prophetic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If your work load looks heavy, get an early start. Activity centers around investments and real estate. Sign contracts only after you have read the fine print.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel, teaching and writing will keep you on the go. Follow up on phone calls and messages. Contacting someone on a hunch could help you hit pay dirt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): More attention and recognition come your way. Be modest about your accomplishments. Your intentions are excellent. Follow through on your promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is no time to be a shrinking violet. Tap your creative potential by consulting experts or going back to school. Moving to another city could increase your income.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep up a steady pace at work. Your gift of gab is a tremendous asset in sales or public relations. A challenging love affair is a source of inspiration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Higher-ups will grant favors that sound reasonable. Make requests behind closed doors. Instead of questioning a loved one's seemingly erratic behavior, take a wait-and-see approach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Others may not be able to meet your exacting standards. Perhaps you are too demanding. A tolerant, patient approach helps mend a rift between parent and child.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends are amazed at your ability to cope during an emergency. Forget past mistakes and concentrate on the future. Treating your subordinates as equals will win their loyalty.

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K J 10 ♡A K 7 ◇A Q 8 6 3 ♣A 6

The bidding has proceeded:

| WEST | NORTH | EAST | SOUTH |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | Pass | ? |

What action do you take?

A - In the balancing seat, no-trump values are skewed. A balancing bid of one no trump is made with 11-14 points, double followed by no trump at the cheapest level shows 15-18, and two no trump promises 19-20. With a stronger hand, such as the above, start with a double and then jump in no trump. Using the jump to two no trump as a takeout for the minors is not, nor ever was, normal practice.

Q. 2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q 6 ♡K 9 7 5 4 ◇10 4 3 ♣K Q 10

The bidding has proceeded:

| WEST | NORTH | EAST | SOUTH |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Dbl | 1 ♠ | ? |

What do you bid now?

A - A bid of two hearts would be woefully inadequate, since it could be made with as few as 6 points and a four-card suit. Here you have 10 working points and a five-bagger, so to bid anything less than three hearts would be a dereliction of duty.

Q. 3 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠6 4 2 ♡J 9 7 5 3 ◇A Q 7 6 ♣9

The bidding has proceeded:

| NORTH | EAST | SOUTH | WEST |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | Pass | 1 ♡ | Pass |
| 1 ♠ | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?

A - The one bid you cannot make is two diamonds: that would be fourth-suit forcing and does not necessarily show the bid suit but does promise a considerably better hand. The logical bid is one no trump. Pass is a distant second since partner might want to take a heart preference.

Q. 4 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q 2 ♡A 10 9 8 5 2 ◇Void ♣A Q J 6 5

The bidding has proceeded:

| WEST | NORTH | EAST | SOUTH |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | Pass | ? |

What action do you take?

A - A difficult hand to bid, because a balancing two-heart bid could be made with a far weaker hand, and this one has tremendous playing potential. Since a two-spade cue-bid in the pass-out suit should promise a two-suited hand, so that is our choice with two hearts and three hearts, in that order, close behind.

Q. 5 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠7 6 5 ♡A K Q 10 6 5 ◇9 5 2 ♣J

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A - You want to play four hearts and nothing more, go ahead and bid it. If you play transfer bids, transfer into hearts and then raise to game.

Q. 6 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K 9 8 5 3 ♡A J 6 5 ◇Void ♣9 8 6 2

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A - You have invitational values, and the way to describe such a hand is to employ the Stayman Convention. If partner denies a major by bidding two diamonds, bid two spades. If partner responds in a major, raise to the three level.

Bill Cosby helps give retiring horse salute at Madison Square Garden

NEW YORK — If it takes practice to get to Carnegie Hall, how do you get to Madison Square Garden? Horseback, if you're Bill Cosby.

Cosby was in perfect comedic if not equestrian form as he entered the arena at the National Horse Show for a salute to retiring racing great Cigar.

Bill Cosby helped salute Cigar the race horse.

With a dour, immobile expression and his hands at his sides, Cosby bobbed along Saturday as he was led into the ring aboard his straight man — a very patient horse. He managed a couple of brief waves to the crowd before the horse ambled to a stop.

With the crowd egging him on, Cosby slowly leaned forward and painstakingly raised his leg over the horse's back to dismount.

"That was the longest moment of my life," Cosby said when he finally reached the ground.

Then, like a trouper, he introduced his co-star: "My horse — Jello Pudding."

———

LOS ANGELES — Jerry Stiller doesn't need skills — just ring a bell, sit back and wait for his comedic genius to emerge.

Stiller, who plays the hot-tempered, bellowing Frank Costanza on NBC's "Seinfeld," says he never knows what to expect from the show's writers.

"I felt like Pavlov's dog every time I get a call from them," the 69-year-old actor said recently.

"I find out another part of the character five minutes before I go on the set" — idiosyncracies like Costanza's foot odor, obsession with TV Guide and ability to speak fluent Korean.

Before the hit series, Stiller sold hot dogs in New York City and made 36 appearances on "The Ed Sullivan Show" with his wife, comedian Anne Meara. He also acted on Broadway.

"I never learned anything else, any skills, like typing," he said. "I thought it was below me. It was my stupidity, or call it my doggedness, that I learned one skill and little things broke here and there."

———

NEW YORK — Justine Bateman says teen-age fame made her become a bulimic.

The former "Family Ties" star said she made a lot of rules for herself.

"I can have one more cookie if I go throw it all up later. Or I can have this now if I skip lunch later," she said in the Nov. 9 edition of TV Guide. "I'm talking mainly about doing stuff like not eating when I'm hungry. Or eating more than I really want to and then trying to get rid of it."

Bateman said she was sure people knew. "In fact, when they'd say, 'You look anorexic,' I'd take it as a compliment."

The 30-year-old actress, now starring on NBC's "Men Behaving Badly," said she hit bottom three years ago and sought help in a 12-step program.

"One day the light went on, you know?" she said.

———

NEW YORK — Robert Urich is not accustomed to failure and certainly not about to start now.

The 48-year-old actor who starred in the hit TV detective series "Vega$" and "Spenser: For Hire" accused the producers of his latest series, "Lazarus Man," of trying to use him as a scapegoat for canceling the western after just two seasons.

Robert Urich's show was canceled after his cancer diagnosis.

Urich said Turner Program Services wanted him to approve a press release that said, "'Due to personal and medical reasons, I am withdrawing from ...'

"I said, '(expletive)! That is not my attitude and I'm not going to say that.' Because I believe we could have saved the show," said Urich.

He even offered to give up $50,000 of his $72,000-per-episode salary to keep the series going.

Turner halted production after Urich was diagnosed in August with synovial sarcoma, a cancer that attacks the joints and can spread to the lungs. An executive said there was too much uncertainty about how Urich would respond to treatment.

NEW YORK — Forget about pulling a Candice Bergen and bowing out of the next Daytime Emmy race — Erika Slezak says if nominated, she WILL run.

"I think Candy was wrong," the five-time Emmy-winning soap star said in Sunday's Parade magazine. "That's not the way this country is run. If you have one Pulitzer Prize, you deserve to try to achieve another. The way we recognize good work is giving out awards."
