Football Squad To Use Movies Study Of Fundementals

Hageman Out For A Few Days After Fall On Car While Working

Squad Works Hard

The Bulldogs continued the spring training grind this week with a new element, a moving picture camera, introduced into the training regime. For the past two weeks coach Volney Hill has shot movies of the teams. These films have been developed and used to demonstrate the right and wrong ways to block, tackle, pass, punt, and other fundamentals of football playing.

In addition to shooting the local footballers, Hill took Captain Tolly McKown to Lubbock to shoot 200 feet of the "Red Raiders in practice sessions. Wednesday night, these films were shown to the fans at the Boys Club room and the technique of the game explained to the fans interest. So the films will serve the double purpose of educating the fan and the player.

The team had one injured player this week on the bench for a few days. Dorace Hageman, all district center was injured when he fell against a car on main street, cutting his arm. The accident occured when the star center slipped on a banana peeling. So far this spring that has been the only injury. The boys are in the best condition physically that a spring squad has ever achieved.

The blocking and tackling routine has taken much time during the past week. Freshmen and veterans alike have spent much of the routine every day drilling on what coach Hill considers the important features of the game.

The rivalry between the two teams within the squad has continued to grow, and will reach a strong point in the spring champioinship game May 17. On that occasion the fans will be invited to a special training game.

This attention has been centered on a speedster, Delmus Womack, about the only man on the squad that can outrun Tolly McKown. Still awkward and with a lot to learn about the game, Womack has been coming along fast this spring. He has a chance to move into the first string lineup with Brown, Willet, Evans and McKown if he improves as rapidly throughout the season. Womack and Bob Bates have swatted the first string line with power and speed during the scrimmages.

Seniors Presenting Three Act Farce As Annual Class Play

Clever "The Whole Town's Talking" To Attract Large Crowd At High School

Miss Tanner Directs

Miss Margaret Tanner will present the cast of Seniors in one of the cleverest farces ever attempted by the local school organization "The Whole Town's Talking" by John Emerson and Anita Loos as the annual play of the graduates. The class cast has had the rollicking comedy under rehearsal for several weeks, and is nearing perfection in acting and speaking parts.

The most entertaining hour of amateur dramatic presentation of the year has been offered to the patrons and playgoers of the city in the selection of the widely known comedy.

The play was originally produced on Broadway with Grant Mitchell as the leading man in the part of Chester Benney, subjective of much of the humor of the play. On its original presentation, the play attracted attention of both the critics and populace, and the general approval of the audiences which witnessed it promises the local audience an interesting and enjoyable evening.

From serious elimination contests and tryouts the cast was selected as representative of the talent of the class. The excellent casting of the director has added a spice to the brilliant program.

The characters are L. Henry Simmons, a manufacturer, Billy Ashlock; Ethel Simmons, daughter, Pauline McGinnis; Mrs. Henry Simmons, Grace Preston; Chester Binney, Simmons partner, Tommy Harms; Roger Shield, Dan Hofacket; Lila Wilson, Sally Otis; Donald Swift, portrayed by Mary Louise Kelly; Margaret Turner and Luther Lee Grace, Ethel's friends; Letty Lythe, Marjette Owens; Taxi driver, Jack Boulton; Sadie Bloom, a dancing teacher, Christine Millikin; Anne, the maid, Ordette Cope.

The cast has been working hard in the practice session, and expect to wind up the play in excellent form before the start of the program. Ticket sales have indicated a popularity of the play.

Mothers Honored In Contest To Be Held In Theatre

Oldest Mother And Mother With Most Living Children To Be Special Guests

Registration Asked

All the mothers in this territory will be honored at the Palace Theatre, May 9 as the whole nation pauses for a whole day to honor mothers. Two mothers will be expecially honored on this occasion, the oldest mother, and the mother with the most living children will be given most definite recognition.

Mothers Day has been observed regularly in this country since 1914, and the second Sunday in May has been set aside for the occasion. Today, in addition to telegrams, flowers, church services, gifts and special programs will make the day memorable.

While Miss Anna Jarvis of Phillidelphia is generally credited with the idea of starting the observance in 1907, it is one of the oldest in history. For thousands of years in various forms, various types of people have honored the mothers.

The ancients worshiped Rhea, this holiday. With the advent of 250 B. C. Rome started the celebration on the Ides of March of Christianity the nature of the worship changed, but Mary the Mother became the objection of adoration in the place of Rhea.

Protestant Christians honored mother in England by what we called "mothering day". On this day the youths serving as maids, apprentices, and other semi-serf positions were allowed to visit home. It was the only such day in the year for them.

So when the mothers are honored here it will be the result of a custom that reaches back into antiquity of the history of man, and the urge of the race to worship mothers will be expressed.

Riley Patterson's Kriss Supply Team To Open Schedule

Riley Patterson's Kriss Pipers open the softball season Monday night in Wichita Falls against a ball club that is recognized as just about the cream of the crop. It is a tough assignment for Riley and his hustling youngsters, but they are prepared to carry the Burkburnett banner proudly.

It will be a long jump for the local youngsters to take, but they are confident that they have what it will take to jump and produce the results. Last year in the Minor league in Wichita Falls the club was a sensation, but the critics howled that it was the absence of competition.

The Kriss Pipers are out this season to show that they have got what it takes. Riley invites all the fans from Burkburnett who can make the trip to come out and help the Burkburnett boys over the toughest jump they will have to face.

Wichita sports writers have looked upon the Pipers as the dark horse of the City League, and have gone so far as to give them but little consideration. All fingers have been pointed at the Wichita Falls Post with an aggregation that has copped the crown three years in a row and won one state championship under other banners.

Twice as the Gold Medal Flour company team, they won the City League in Wichita Falls and one state championship with the aid of a pair of high salaried, and borrowed pitchers. Under the banner of Ross and Tims this same team copped the City and District championship last season.

Patterson will be ready to shoot the works Monday night in Wich-

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Effect of Wagner Act Validation on National Labor Policy and Supreme Court Controversy—President Orders Curtailment of Expenditures.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

VALIDATION of the Wagner act brought the administration up against the necessity of formulating a new national labor policy to prevent strikes and to determine what course shall be followed when collective bargaining is unsuccessful. For this purpose Secretary of Labor Perkins invited 33 leaders of industry and labor to attend private meetings in Washington, stating they would be asked to discuss the need of new safeguards for industry to balance the gains achieved by labor under the Wagner act. Among those Madame Perkins invited were William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization; Myron C. Taylor, board chairman of United States Steel corporation; Gerard Swope, board chairman of General Electric corporation; Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and government officials.

Sec. Perkins

Certain of the President's advisers have told him a law requiring the incorporation of labor unions should be passed; or that at least there should be a law similar to the British trades union act which provides that all union funds must be accounted for to the government and that unions cannot participate in sympathy or general strikes.

Organized labor always has opposed any such legislation and probably would continue to fight against it.

John L. Lewis thinks one result of the Wagner act decisions may be the abandonment of the sit-down strike, though this, he says, depends on the attitude taken by employers in the operation of the act. "Under the court's decision," says Lewis, "workers now have machinery for adjudication of disputes and the making of contracts with employers. Everything depends on the attitude of employers, who showed no disposition to be generous although the right of labor to gather together for its protection had been conceded for a lifetime."

HOW does the upholding of the Wagner labor relations act affect the battle over the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme court? That question arose at once on announcement of the decisions and received various answers. Opponents of the President's bill declared the necessity for such a measure, if it ever existed, was entirely removed by this showing of liberal tendencies by a majority of the court; and many supporters of Mr. Roosevelt admitted that some compromise such as the appointment of two new justices instead of six, might be advisable. But the President himself let it be known that he wished his program pushed through without modification. The favorable majority of one, created by the shift of Justice Roberts, did not seem to him safe enough.

This position of the President was taken also by some of his cabinet members. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared that agriculture could expect nothing from the Supreme court as now constituted, and urged American farmers to give the Roosevelt plan their earnest support.

Attorney General Cummings declared that the four justices who dissented from the court's decision that the Wagner act is constitutional still constitute a "battalion of death" and will continue to oppose all major New Deal social legislation.

John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., asserted the Supreme court had demonstrated its "instability" anew and that the Wagner act decisions only made more imperative the need for enlarging the court.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, whip of the senate, predicted that the President's court plan would emerge from the judiciary committee "a much compromised, amended and generally transformed measure."

CHIEFS of executive departments, independent officers and other spending units of the government were called on by President Roosevelt to reduce expenditures up to the end of the fiscal year June 30. In his letter to them the President said:

"It is apparent at this time that the revenues of the government for the present year will be materially less than the amount estimated in my budget message of last January; and, hence, the deficit will be far greater than was anticipated unless there is an immediate curtailment of expenditure.

"You will carefully examine the status of appropriations for your activity with a view to making a substantial saving by eliminating or deferring all expenditures which are not absolutely necessary at this time.

"You will report to me through the acting director of the budget not later than May 1, 1937, the steps which you are undertaking to reduce expenditures and the amount of the estimated saving resulting therefrom."

SOUTHERN congressmen found they were no longer in the saddle when the house by a vote of 276 to 119 passed the anti-lynching bill. The debate was furious and the representatives from the South were deeply resentful.

"For more than 100 years the people of the South have kept life in the Democratic party," declared Representative E. E. Cox of Georgia, "and now that that party has grown powerful it turns upon the South and proposes to pass this wicked and cowardly law. This bill is directed just as much against the South as any reconstruction bill passed after the Civil war."

The bill was sponsored by Representative Joseph Gavagan of New York whose district includes the big negro city of Harlem. It provides that any state officer who surrenders a prisoner to a mob shall be guilty of a felony and subject to prosecution and severe penalties. In addition, the county in which a lynching occurs shall be liable for $2,000 to $10,000 damages, to be paid to the family of the lynched person.

Proponents of the measure were greatly aided by a mob in Mississippi that took two negroes from a sheriff and tortured and burned them to death. The local authorities were supine and called the shocking affair a "closed incident."

MITCHELL HEPBURN, premier of Ontario, reiterating his determination not to permit C. I. O. representatives from the United States to take part in negotiations for settlement of the strike in the General Motors of Canada plant at Oshawa, promised to "call out an army if necessary" to protect the property of the corporation. Hugh Thompson, U. A. W. A. organizer, barred by Hepburn, threatened that every General Motors plant in America would be closed unless the Oshawa strike were settled soon with recognition of the union demands. Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., called Hepburn a number of unpleasant names. The Toronto Trades and Labor Council pledged the support of its 40,000 members to the union's strike against General Motors.

Premier Hepburn

Hepburn forced two of his ministers to resign, charging they were not supporting the government in its fight "against the inroads of the Lewis organization and communism in general." They are David A. Croll, who held the labor, municipal affairs and public welfare portfolios, and Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck. Axel Hall, young mayor of Oshawa, who has been friendly to the strikers and critical of Hepburn's action, sent an "ultimatum" to President Martin of the Automobile Workers of America demanding that members of the union in the United States strike in support of the Oshawa local. The latter body adopted a resolution demanding that Premier Hepburn withdraw from the negotiations to make way for intervention by the dominion authorities.

In Montreal 5,508 women garment workers, members of the C. I. O. international union, employed in 72 plants, started a strike for higher wages; and in Fernie, B. C., 1,000 C. I. O. miners threatened to strike for union recognition.

WHEN George VI is crowned king of Great Britain on May 12 Robert Worth Bingham, our ambassador to London, and James W. Gerard, President Roosevelt's special ambassador to the coronation, will appear in Westminster abbey garbed in silk knee breeches and ordinary evening tailed dress coats. The State department in Washington consented to a modification of the ruling which bars American diplomats from wearing gala clothes at state functions. The costume decided upon is not full court dress but the duke of Norfolk, who is earl marshal, will let it go as such.

FOR the second time in two years the house passed the Pettingill bill to repeal the "long and short haul" clause of the interstate commerce act. This law prohibits railways from charging lower rates for a long haul than for a shorter one on the same route in the same direction, and it hampers the roads greatly in their competition with water and truck carriers for long distance traffic.

Correspondents agree that the Vallee program is always a grand show, but they point out that Bing's hour gives much greater variety, since it consistently includes the greatest musicians as well as popular songs, comedy and dramatic sketches.

Warner Brothers cabled Errol Flynn in Ireland to return to the studio at once to start work in a new picture, but the cable was undelivered as the adventurous Errol had already set out for Spain. First news from there was that he had been injured in a rebel attack and for a few hours groups of anxious friends stood disconsolately around the studio talking about what a grand guy he is. Nobody felt like working until the welcome news came that his injury was slight and that he would be able to return soon.

Fred Astaire is so determined to have Carole Lombard in the first film that he makes without Ginger Rogers that he is postponing production until she is free. And James Stewart is so determined to play opposite Ginger Rogers in her solo starring vehicle that he is pleading with M-G-M to release him from working in Luise Rainer's next. It is so much fun working with Astaire or Rogers that players are willing to give up better roles in order to be with them.

The new officers are: President, Mrs. Joe Podbreger; Vice-president, Mrs. Paschall; Treasurer, Mrs. Brown; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Hayes; Historian, Mrs. Bunstine; Correspondence Secretary, Mrs. Cauthorn.

Supt. Y. C. Paschall presented Mrs. Brown with a lovely bag as a token of appreciation of the P. T. A. for her services rendered during the past year.

The talk given by Mrs. Frank Creighton was very interesting and inspirational and every one who heard it will surely profit by it.

SCAVENGER HUNT

The Seniors were hilariously intertained by their hostess Lenore Podbreger and Bessie Cuddeback with a scavenger hunt given April 16. The dear children left Lenores' home with a long list of the most unimaginable things to find at about eight fifteen with orders to return at nine-thirty. Gold fish, toe-nails, mice and rabbits just began the list. By eleven everyone had returned and refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cookies, and frosted cakes were served to the following: Mr. and Mrs. Y. C. Paschall, Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Podbreger, Dorothy Siber, Margaret Nell White, Margaret Lee Bogy, Iva Jim Banning, Mildred Morrison, Albert Zink, Leon Brown, K. Miles, James Brown, Fred Key, Scotty McCall, Henry Hodges, Leroy O'Quinn, Joan Podbreger and hostesses Lenore Podbreger and Bessie Cuddeback.

SENIOR NEWS

Friday morning at the second period Mr. Paschall called a meeting of the Seniors. 'Cause two men from Hardin Junior College wanted to talk to them. The seniors wish to thank them for the advice rendered concerning Hardin Junior College, the courses offered, and the expenses of going to school.

Mr. Pashcall requests each senior to secure a conference period with him in the near future.

CHAPEL PROGGRAMS

The students of Fairview School have been favored by two very interesting chapel programs. Last Tuesday morning Mr. and Mrs. Mason of the U. S. Zoology Association presented a program in which Mrs. Mason presented her group of trained monkeys and Mr. Mason gave a short talk on "Pets" and about the Gila monster which was displayed.

Thursday morning the Glee Club of the Booker T. Washington school for negroes from Wichita Falls presented a program. This was sponsored by Miss Baird and the third grade. They gave a number of beautiful selections and ballads and the male quartet offered several delightful selections.

Everyone enjoyed these programs immenseley and wish to have them back again.

SENIOR PLAY

The Seniors have now selected the cast for the play "Bashful Bobby" and are going to begin work inearnest on it. Every member of the class is working in all sincerety to make it the best play ever presented in the Fairview Auditorium. It is to be presented in the auditorium, Friday evening, May 7, at 8:00. The funds received from it will go to buy the school a present and to help finance the Senior's trip to Carlsbad Cavern.

As it was predicted, the affair Thursday night at Wilma Whigham's home was about the biggest and best party of the year. Yes sir, everyone really enjoyed himself, especially the games played. Only a few occurences seemed to blight the party; one, the fact that Chief Smith couldn't find his squaw of the evening, and so had to do without. Chief Woodrow couldn't find a squaw and so had to depart. Mary Elizabeth Fink was a happy girl when she left us because she had received ten boys' proposals to be escorted home, and had gaily refused each and every one of them. After Coca-colas, cakes and candy were served to each one, everyone had a big rush for the living room, where a game of "Truly" was played and much dirt and scandal unearthed. More fun and power. The girls got a flattering rush and midst much weeping and bewailing of the fact, the kids were pushed towards their hacks and sent home to bed.

Those babies attending were: Marion Wayne Price, Olive Eckenroed, Mae Whigham, Oliver Webb, Eugene Winkles, Wynona Hancock, Mae Alexander, Eugene West, Gay Desperado Robinson, Chief Smith, Minnie Weidner, Maggie Grizzle, Franklin Gifford, Tol Bogyman, Lucile Drennan, Wallace Bush, Broke Arm Thompson, Palestine Fink, Fredman Spencer, Jockey Brown, Lorene Rose, Jalmer Roberts, Barney Boyd, C. J. Cauthorn, Pedro de Peed, and their uppers, Mr. Tyson and Mrs. Whigham.

Punts
And Passes

Dorace Hageman Was injured last Saturday night in a freak accident and will be out of the tougher practice sessions for several weeks. The accident occured when the first string center slipped on a banana peeling near and fell across the liscense plate of a car. Some thoughtless person had tossed the peel on the sidewalk, and Hageman was fortunate to be injured slightly. The fall against the plate caused a severe gash on his right arm and five stitches were required before he was all together again. When the crowd first saw him lunge at the car they thought he was blocking so much during the last few days of the practice session that he was trying to see if he could "take out" a car.

Movies Presented by coach Volney Hill can be one of the most valuable parts of the training season. Last week end Hill and Captain McKown went to Lubbock and brought back and excellent reel of film showing how the various routine fundamentals of the game should be played. Several reels have been made of the local boys while they are practicing. These films can be stopped at any point in the exhibition and the good or bad form used pointed out by the coaches. One of the particularly impressive scenes in the preview for newspaper men was the scene where the players camecharging out of the line charging standing up. The coach sent them back and the next time they came low and fast. The right and wrong way picture was impressive.

The Use Of Pictures can be expanded to be useful when the regular season rolls around. When some play that ought to work fails to do so the coach can shoot a few shots of its action and find exactly why it is failing to work on the field like it looks on paper. Then the play can be changed on the players instructed in the point where the play bogs down.

The Competition Between the two teams in the spring training camp is growing more intense every day, and the game which will be played May 17 to elect the queen for next years squad will be a tear for the fans. Misses Francine Hill, Marilyn Harwell, and LaNelle Elder are the candidates for the honor, and the partisans for each have started the campaign to bring out the biggest crowd ever gathered at the stadium for the event. The tickets are sold for 50 and 25 votes for the admission to the game. The honor of being queen of the Burkburnet squad is one of the treasured honors of the school. Traditions have given this selection greater prestige than the average choice made.

The sales resistence of the men in Burkburnett will be tested the next few days as they are attacted from all directions by enthusiastic members of the three princesses courts.

Chillicothe Poets start raving about this time of every year, and the greatest inspiration that they have ever had was the victory two years ago over the Bulldogs. They haven't been able to forget that even in face of the revenge of the Bulldogs last year. The poet breaks forth with the following poem:

"And the Mighty Bulldogs growling
Scare the Eagle not one whit!
For the Eagles plan next season
To eat the Doggies bit by bit!"
So let the Bulldogs be warned that when they visit Chillicothe next year that the team will have spent the entire year getting ready for just that one game.
The Bulldogs like their Growling
It keeps thm fin and fit.
And when they meet the Eaglets
They'll carry a can of Flit.

THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING

Or at least we hope it's talking --just simply buzzing!

We seniors are working very hard on this play and we hope to make it a huge success. We, of course have had interruptions and mishaps, but nevertheless we are working. And--if you have taken time to notice--there are signs all over town advertising it.

Now I'll try to give you a brief description of how each "actor" or "actress" is doing.

Tommy Harms, or rather ,Chet Barney, our leading-man just can't get that Country-was about him. The reason why, of course, is because he is such an "up-town -city boy."

And Billy Ashlock--well, Mr. Simmons just naturally can't seem to learn his part--but he makes and excellent father. Also--it will be worthe the price of admission to see the dance he does so gracefully executes throughout the play.

And Gracie Preston, well, I know you can all imagine what a splendid wife and mother she makes.--But Gracie just can't seem to be stern enough, somehow.

And our leading lady, pauline McGinnins seems to want to put on in the role of Ethel Simmons.

Maybe it has gone to her head. Now, Dan Hofacket, from Chicago and Paris, well, he's really making a polished, well-bred gentleman--but he still persistes in talking in that very fast manner of his. And Letty Lythe, (Marjetta Owens) --you should see her! She really seems to be working very hard. And she can really do that LOVING act with Chet Binney.

Oh, yes,--you just ought to see Lila Wilson and Sally Otis,--They are just too cute! Lila thinks that is--"juth too thweet" and Sally, well, Sally's just thrilled about everything! Lila, that little lisping person is no other than Mary Louise Kelly, and Sally is our sweet little Margaret Turner.

Now Donald Swift (Luke Grace) is that tough customer who is an ex-prise fighter and is now Lythe's manager. He is in love with Letty Lythe and proves to be a tough customer to fool with very much.

And our maid, Annie, well she makes an excellent maid, but you will always find her where she doesn't belong. This personality proves to be no other than Ordette Cope .

And Sadie Bloom--she's that tough dancing teacher of Mr. Simmons and she proves that she always gets what she comes after. This turns out to be no other than our beautiful Christine Millikin.

Now, you must remember that Jack Boulton is that good taxi driver who is ever so important

All in all--its going to be one swell play-- if you don't believe it--come see for yourself and we will prove it!!!

BOOK NOOK

On behalf of the library staff and the student body, the librarian wishes to thank Mr. John Farr and his extemporanoius speakers, Bill Amyx and Polly Hall, for their generous contribution of two new books to be added to the library collection. The gift consists of two copies of a volume titled: "The Collapse of Cotton Tenancy," and was written by Charles S. Johnson, Edwin R. Embree and W. W. Alexander. The books were published by the university of North Carolina Ress and deal with cotton culture and farm tenancy. For this reason, they will be particularly valuable to the vocational agriculture department for reference use.

A MUSE

I want so much to write a verse
  About a brook, a man or nurse.
But I haven't the slightest little muse
  To urge me on and my knowledge use.
I love to write of love and bees
  And birds high in the trees.
I love to write about the flowers,
  Of spring, the grass and April showers.
Not one single little word
  That I can say about a bird
Comes to help me in my strife
  To write and cheer some lonely life.

OUR SCHOOL

Our school is a model institution of intellectual advancement, consisting of a building, books, teachers, and pupils. We are all very happy in our big red brick school house, for we are all very sweet and appreciative.

Our building is a big place, constructed of pretty red brick, with about eleven rooms, the three rooms for the office, the gym, and auditorium, and a few other varied and useful rooms for miscellaneous purposes. In the spacious halls, and homelike class rooms of our high school we meet many lovely children whom we call our friends at times. The seniors, the Juniors, the sophomores and the Freshmen all reside upstairs. The Seniors live in the big study hall for thirty minutes in the morning, and they spend each of these thirty minutes in the morning straining their brains in order to show their profound love for their next younger brothers and sisters, namely, the Juniors.

Down the hall live the Juniors, divided into two camps, and they too spend their time thinking up new ways in which they might manifest their intense devotion to their upper classmen. The Freshmen and the Sophomores also live somewhere around, but as no rumblings come from their quarters it is very hard to find out anything about them.

As has been previously mentioned, we have books in our school. Our ediface of wisdom, in fact, abounds in books, red ones, green ones, blue ones, orange ones and others of many hues. In these books are printed such entertaining and amusing things as algebra, geometry, and English. We love our books for five reasons:

(1) Because we love our teachers and our teachers want us to love our books.

(2) They have such interesting things inside.

(3) They have such pretty covers.

(4) We like to be thought intelligent, and every one knows intelligent people read books.

(5) We consider them symbols of the deep affection the publishers feel for us.

In addition the books, the building, the classes, our school also consists of teachers. We have many kind and thoughtful instructors on our faculty, and we know they are here solely for our amusement and benefit. Our teachers are all very thoughtful of our leasure time, and consequently assign huge lessons in such imbecilic courses as Texas History and Commercial Geography when they find we have a picnic or other entertainment planned. We know our teachers are thinking only of our mental welfare whe they are so considerate and we are immensely grateful.

In addition to all these four mentioned things, we have in our school pupils. The pupils are all lovely intelligent little creatures, and they think of no other things than to love each other and be sweet and polite to their teachers. Some of the pupils are smarter than others, but even in view of that they are not envious of each othr, although all must put herroic struggles to keep from falling back into the Stone Age and other metallic elapses of time.

As one can see, our school abounds in brotherly love and genuine appreciation for all that deserve it. Our building, books, classes, teachers, and pupils are all of the very best, and we think that if heaven were to spring a leak, all of the angels that spilled out would certainly come to our shcool for refuge.

NEW STUDENT

Francis Felty is our new Junior who lives at 617 East Third street and who comes from Byers, Texas. Francis has been living in Burkburnett one week and has attended the Burkburnett school during that time. Also she has one sister and brother who are in grade school.

Miss Felty brings more honors from grade school that makes us realize that we have another student in our high school who will indeed be a credit to the school and students thereof.

She won a honor pin and also a book for head marking in spelling.

We haven the pleasure of knowing her age but she measures 5 feet and one inch and weighs 97 pounds. Her eyes are large brown and she has hair of the same color, also, in that small body she has a pleasing personality. We are glad to announce that she plans to remain in our school the remainder of her school days.

REAP REWARDS

"April Showers bring May flowers", but is that the way the old saying goes. But here's one that doesn't rhyme but is also true, "April studying brings May rewards". Yes, this is April and in May we will reap our reward, be they small or be they large, for our entire nine month's work in school. To some students the word "work" cannot be applied but to some it can be abundantly applied. No matter how little one has studied his chest swells with pride when he receives his card with good grades and automatically his lips drop in an undesirable fashion when they are covered with "U's" or "S's". He never thinks that maybe he doesn't deserve the grade he gets. However, he has the consolation that his teachers are doing their best, all he has to do is put forth a little effort and the rseults are the same.

In my opinion no student has the ability to go to a class without studying; comment upon the lesson as if he knows it and decline the teachers. If this can be done, the teacher needs to go to school some more. However, if a student does study before class and comments intelligently then he knows what the teacher thinks of him and, of course, his grade will be a good one. Now, teachers are valuable creatures after all, that is, if we are permitted to use the word creatures, although we are made to believe that they are not creatures but a grouchy sort of persons who should have been in an asylum long ago. But, I am proud to say that we have no such inhabitants around our school, which is a great asset to the students and one of which we are proud.

Now, as there are only six more weeks of this trying year of school it is necessary for every student to put forth his best efforts and try to reap a ripe harvest of good grades.

IN MEMORIAM

Often times sorrow is the greatest blessing although we can't see it at the moment. We trust that we are not selfish in that we can see good has come from the disaster that has wrecked the lives of so many. Perhaps it seems cruel that a few should be visited with this heart rendering sorrow, but the lasting good which has grown out of it makes us realize there is reason in all things. This tragedy has acted as a warning to the nation. Preparedness in the future for such an occurance as the New London tragedy is a vital necessity. The whole world will sympathetically remember the sacrifice made by those who suffered in this disaster.

A WORLD WIDE TRAGEDY

If all the world could see the things in life the way they ought to be,
  There would be happiness;
But grief they would see,
  Life is full of grief and sorrow,
But no one knows when it's to come.
  It might be next week or tomorrow,
And still it might come before the setting sun.
It sways and goes over the whole world wide;
  It sweeps the country clean,
  But none have done as much as this,
Nor even has it tried.
  The tragedy that has happened in our school history that is known the whole world wide.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Governor James V. Allred declared in a proclamation that Wednesday, April 7 be set aside as New London Memeorial Day. In keping with this proclamation, each home room in the Burkburnett school system held short impressive memorial services during which each child made a contribution of one cent toward a memorial fund to be used in establishing a New London Memorial. The type of memorial has not yet been determined. A total of $4.66 was collected in the high school. A similar sum was contributed by the grade school students.

Announcement

The library takes great pleasure in announcing the arrival of the new "Encyclopedia Britanica" of which there are twenty-four volumes. This collection is one of the greatest assets which the library has received. The "Encyclopedia Britannica" is widely and favorably known, and has long been an authority; thus, it really needs little in the way of introduction. The set is the result of the cordial co-operation of some three thousand, five hundred scholars, scientists, experts and men of affairs from all the civilized countries of the world. It is supported by subscriptions donated by the wealthiest men of two continents, both Europe and North America. Among these philthanthopists are such well-known Americans as Andrew Mellon, Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller and other impoortant citizens of the United States. Our new set is the fourteenth edition of "Britannica" and as such, contains the most up-to-date, most authoritative and most complete information to be found in any one collection of reference books published today. The dedication reads as follows:

Dedicated By Permission To

The Two Heads of the English Speaking People, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the Unitde States of America and His Majesty Edward the Eighth, King of Great Britian and Ireland and of the British Dominion beyond the Seas, Emperior of India.

JUNIOR JOTTINGS

Thank you, Mr. Cook, for your suggestion of last week in regard to the Interscholastic League work. The Henrietta schools have a period set aside for special practice on these events, and if you noticed you saw the results of this work in the number of Henrietta contestants to take part in the district meet. This school has a good football team, but only because of the great amount of practice it has had. This year we only had one contestant in the literary events of district meet; last year there were four. Ther is no logical reason for this except the students have not had enough practice and that the talent of the students is getting soft. It ought to be easy for Burkburnett to secure the All County Championship banner, and it will if the whole school, not just one or two students or teachers, will start working early in the fall, before the football season is out, if necessary, and work unrelentingly until County Meet. Our football team, good as it is, cannot be depended upon for all the laurals of the school, and those that are reclining upon its honors ought to be pitched off to gain some of their own.

In our school, only those who have a great amount of physical ability may have the priviledge of wearing the school sweater. Mental excellence goes unrewarded by the school. There is nothing to show that one had won a district or regional contest except the ribbons acquired at the meet itself. In the Denton public schools all students who have placed in any district literary event are presented with the school letter and allowed to buy their own sweaters. That way one does not entirely lose out because he cannot participate in the atheletic events and his ability lies in speaking, typing, writing, spelling, or other things.

The date of the banquet has been changed again. This time definitely to Tuesday night, May 11.

Billy Walker and party which now definitely includes Miss Tanner, Mr. Kimbrew, Mr. Duncan, Pauline Browning, and Mr. Pierce will leave early Saturday morning for Denton. After a few minutes of relaxation at Mr. Pierce's home, Billy will enter his contest, speak, and then the whole bunch plans to go to Dallas for a show. We know that they will have a good time and all we ask is that Billy do his best.

English contracts, history lessons every day, bookkeeping, and 53,960,457 other lessons per diem are enough to drive a sane person crazy and now a tough bunch of geometry rears its ugly head. 'Sno fun, this business of working, 'sno fun.

It is just a week until the curtain goes up on "The Whole Town's Talking." Having the cast and author it does, the Senior play has no choice but to be good, the Seniors think. (But we do too) Remembering the excellent support in attendance the Seniors gave our Junior play, it is not only good taste but practically compulsary that every Junior see "The Whole Town's Talking."

Hill Goes To Lubbock

Did anybody miss Coach Hill last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday?

Personally, I didn't, but he and our football hero, Collie McKown went up to Lubbock to watch the spring football practice of Texas Tech's "Red Raiders."

They filmed 200 feet of pictures of Cawthorn's linemen, to use in perfecting their own men, and they got a lot of pointers and good ideas which they plan to work into their own program for the advancement of our Bulldogs.

We are sure our Bulldogs, will profit by Coach Hill's and McKown's new ideas and "Luck to Them."

Everyone likes to work cross word puzzles and Freshmen are no exception. We worked a cross word puzzle in Spanish. Then we had more mischief by making Spanish words out of jumbled up letters written on paper.

With all this fun, who could help but like Spanish?

How To Compose Music or When The Boyfriend Calls

The first rule to bserve in composing music is to have lots of time to get nothing done in. That being accompolished one should gather realms of paper with five lines drawn every half inch; three pencils, one to chew the second to break and the third with which to write.

Mary Jane Whosis is an example of the successful amatuer composer so we will look in on one of her composing moods to see how she follows the rules of the game.

Mary Jane gets her pencils and her paper and sits down in a comfortable chair to wait for inspiration or melody to come to her. An hour later we find her pencil in hand, head bent over her paper----asleep! She stirs. Ah! Now she's awake. Now she'll really get to work. Mary writes away for five or ten minutes then runs to the piano to play her masterpiece. But what's this? Oh, a discord. Mary Jane reaches for a pencil to chew. No, she already chewed the one she got for that purpose so she must find another way to give vent to her emotions. Ahhhhhhhhhh! The second pencil has yet not been broken, Mary Jane breaks it and begins on the composition again. For ten minutes she writes vigorously. Then up comes her head and she pounds on the piano again. "Stop that racket!" yells her father. Our heroine sniffles and says to herself that her father doesn't have any respect for her genius on making discords until her father comes and asks would she that noise, and if she can't go to the show grimmy impudent, per of a Jones boy sweetie pie when he one is listening.

—14—

"And have Miss Beeton's subsequent observations been helpful to you, doctor?" asked Vance.

"No, I can't say that they have," Siefert admitted.

Vance was studying the tip of his cigarette. Presently he asked: "Has the nurse's presence in the house resulted in any information regarding the general situation here?"

"Nothing that I had not already known. In fact, her observations have merely substantiated my own conclusions. It's quite possible, too, that she herself may unwittingly have augmented the animosity between young Garden and Swift, for she has intimated to me once or twice a very strong suspicion that she is personally interested in Floyd Garden."

Vance looked up with augmented interest.

"What, specifically, has given you that impression, doctor?"

"Nothing specific," Siefert told him. "I have, however, observed them together on several occasions, and my impression was that some sentiment existed there."

The nurse appeared at the door at that moment to announce the arrival of the medical examiner, and Vance asked her to bring Doctor Doremus up to the study.

"I might suggest," said Siefert quickly, "that, with your consent, it would be possible to have the medical examiner accept my verdict of death due to an accidental overdose of barbital and avoid the additional unpleasantness of an autopsy."

"Oh, quite." Vance nodded. "That was my intention." He turned to the district attorney. "All things considered, Markham," he said "I think that might be best. There's nothing to be gained from an autopsy."

Markham nodded in reluctant acquiescence as Doremus was led into the room by Miss Beeton. After a brief interchange of explanations and comments Doremus readily agreed to Markham's suggestion.

Doctor Siefert rose and looked hesitantly at Vance. "You will not need me further, I trust."

"Not at the moment, doctor." Vance rose also and bowed formally. "We may, however, communicate with you later . . . And, Miss Beeton, please sit down."

The girl came forward and seated herself in the nearest chair, as the men went down the passageway.

"I don't mean to trouble you unduly, Miss Beeton," said Vance; "but we should like to have a first-hand account of the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Garden."

"I wish there was somthing definite I could tell you," the nurse replied readily in a business-like manner, "but all I know is that when I arose this morning, a little after seven, Mrs. Garden seemed to be sleeping quietly. After dressing I went to the dining-room and had my breakfast; and then I took a tray up to Mrs. Garden. She always had tea and toast at eight o'clock. It wasn't until I had drawn up the shades and closed the windows, that I realized something was wrong. I spoke to her and she didn't answer me; and when I tried to rouse her I got no response. I saw then that she was dead. I called Doctor Siefert at once, and he came over as quickly as he could."

"You sleep, I believe, in Mrs. Garden's room?"

The nurse inclined her head. "Yes. You see, Mrs. Garden frequently needed some small service in the night."

"Had she required your attention at any time during the night?"

"No. The injection Doctor Siefert gave her before he left her seemed to have quieted her and she was sleeping peacefully when I went out—"

"You went out last night? . . . At what time did you leave the house?" asked Vance.

"About nine o'clock. Mr. Floyd Garden suggested it, assuring me that he would be here and that he thought I needed a little rest."

"Had you no professional qualms about leaving a sick patient at such a time?"

"Ordinarily I might have had," the girl returned resentfully; "but Mrs. Garden had never shown me any consideration. She was the most selfish person I ever knew. Anyway, I explained to Mr. Floyd Garden about giving his mother a teaspoonful of the medicine if she should wake up and show any signs of restlessness. And then I went out into the park."

"At what time did you return, Miss Beeton?"

"It must have been about eleven," she told him.

"Mrs. Garden was asleep when you came in?"

The girl turned her eyes to Vance before answering.

"I—I thought—she was asleep," she said hesitantly. "Her color was all right. But perhaps—even then—"

"Yes, yes. I know," Vance put in quickly. "By the by, did you notice anything changed—anything, let us say, out of place—in the room, on your return?"

The nurse shook her head slowly. "No. Everything seemed the same to me. The windows and shades were just as I had left them, and—Wait, there was something. The glass I had left on the night-table with drinking water was empty. I refilled it before going to bed."

Vance looked up quickly. "And the bottle of medicine?"

"I didn't particularly notice that; but it must have been just as I had left it, for I remember a fleeting sense of relief because Mrs. Garden hadn't needed a dose of medicine."

Vance seemed profoundly puzzled and said nothing for some time. Then he glanced up suddenly.

"How much light was there in the room?" he asked.

"Only a dim shaded night-light by my bed."

"In that case, you might conceivably have mistaken an empty bottle for one filled with a colorless fluid."

"Yes, of course," the nurse returned reluctantly. "That must have been the case. Unless . . ." Her voice trailed off.

"Tell me, when did you discover that all the medicine was gone?" Vance asked.

"Shortly before Doctor Siefert arrived this morning. I moved the bottle when I was arranging the table, and realized it was empty."

"I think that will be all just now, Miss Beeton." Vance glanced at the girl sombrely and then turned away. "Really, y' know, I'm deuced sorry. But you'd better not plan on leaving here just yet. We will undoubtedly want to see you again today."

Heath, who had been waiting in the passageway for the girl's dismissal, came in to report that Siefert and Doremus had departed, and that Floyd Garden had made the necessary arrangements for the removal of his mother's body.

"And what do we do now, Mr. Vance?" Heath asked.

"Oh, we carry on, Sergeant," Vance was unusually serious. "I want to talk to Floyd Garden first. Send him up. And call one of your men; but stay on the job downstairs yourself till he arrives. We may get this affair cleared up today."

Footsteps sounded in the passageway, and Floyd Garden entered the study. He appeared deeply shaken. "I can't stand much today. What do you want?"

"We understand just how you feel," Vance said. "It was not my intention to bother you unnecess'rily. But if we are to get at the truth, we must have your co-operation."

"Go ahead, then," Garden mumbled.

"We must have as many details as possible about last night. Did your expected guests come?"

Garden nodded cheerlessly "Oh, yes. Zalia Graem, Madge Weatherby, and Kroon."

"Was there any one else here?"

"No, that was all."

"Which of your visitors arrived first?"

Garden took the pipe from his mouth and looked up swiftly.

"Zalia Graem. She came at half-past eight, I should say. Why?"

"Merely garnerin' facts," Vance replied indifferently. "And how long after Miss Graem came in did Miss Weatherby and Kroon arrive?"

"About half an hour. They came a few minutes after Miss Beeton had gone out."

Vance returned the man's steady scrutiny.

"What time did your guests depart?" he asked.

"A little after midnight. Sneed brought in sandwiches about half-past eleven. Then we had another round of highballs."

"Miss Beeton had returned by then, of course?"

"Yes, long before that. I heard her come in about eleven."

"And after your guests had gone, what did you do?"

"I sat up for half an hour or so, had another drink and a pipe; then I shut up the front of the house and turned in."

Vance lighted another cigarette, took several deep inhalations on it, and settled himself deeper in the chair.

"To go back a bit," he said casually. "The sleeping medicine Doctor Siefert prescribed for your mother seems to constitute a somewhat crucial point in the situation. Did you have occasion to give her a dose of it while the nurse was out?"

Garden drew himself up sharply and set his jaw.

"No, I did not," he said through his teeth.

Vance took no notice of the change in the man's manner.

"The nurse, I understand, gave you explicit instructions about the medicine before she went out. Will you tell me exactly where this was?"

"In the hall," Garden answered with a puzzled frown. "Just outside the den door. I had left Zalia in the drawing-room and had gone to tell Miss Beeton she might go out for a while. I waited to help her on with her coat. It was then she told me what to do in case the mater woke up and was restless."

"And when she had gone you returned to the drawing-room?"

"Yes, immediately." Garden still looked puzzled. "That's exactly what I did. And a few minutes later Madge and Kroon arrived."

There was a short silence during which Vance smoked thoughtfully.

"Tell me, Garden," he said at length, "did any of your guests enter your mother's room last night?"

Garden's eyes opened wide: color came back into his face, and he sprang to his feet.

"God God, Vance! Zalia was in mother's room!"

Vance nodded slowly. "Very interestin'. Yes, quite . . . I say, do sit down. Light your beastly pipe, and tell us about it."

Garden hesitated a moment. He laughed harshly and resumed his seat.

"Damn it! You take it lightly enough," he complained. "That may be the whole explanation."

"One never knows, does one?" Vance returned indifferently. "Carry on."

Garden had some difficulty getting his pipe going again.

"It must have been about ten o'clock," he said at length. "The mater rang the little bell she keeps on the table beside her bed, and I was about to answer it when Zalia jumped up and said she would see what the mater wanted."

"I Saw That She Was Dead."

"And did you yourself go into your mother's room at any time during Miss Beeton's absence?"

"No, I did not!" Garden looked defiantly at Vance.

"And you're sure that no one else entered your mother's room during the nurse's absence?"

"Absolutely."

"And who was it," Vance went on, "that first suggested going home?"

Garden pondered the question.

"I believe it was Zalia."

Vance got up.

"Awfully good of you, Garden, to let us bother you with these queries at such a time," he said kindly. "We're deuced grateful . . . You won't be leaving the house today?"

Garden shook his head as he too stood up.

"Hardly," he said. "I'll stay in with father. He's pretty well broken up."

Garden went morosely from the room.

When he had gone Vance stood for a moment in front of Markham, eyeing him with cynical good-nature.

"Not a nice case, Markham. As I said."

He moved toward the window and looked out. "But I have things pretty well in hand. The pattern is shaping itself perfectly. I've fitted together all the pieces, Markham—all but one. And I hold that piece too, but I don't know where it goes, or how it fits into the ensemble."

Markham looked up. "What's the piece that's bothering you, Vance?"

"Those disconnected wires on the buzzer. They bother me frightfully. I know they have a bearing on the terrible things that have been going on here . . ." He turned from the window and walked up and down the room several times, his head down, his hands thrust deep into his pockets. "Why should those wires have been disconnected?" he murmured, as if talking to himself. "How could they have been related to Swift's death or to the shot we heard? There was no mechanism. No, I'm convinced of that. After all, the wires merely connect two buzzers . . . a signal . . . a signal between upstairs and downstairs . . . a signal—a call—a line of communication . . ."

Suddenly he stopped his meditative pacing. He was now facing the door into the passageway and he stared at it as if it were something strange—as if he had never seen it before.

"Oh, my aunt!" he exclaimed. "My precious aunt! It was too obvious." He wheeled about to Markham, a look of self-reproach on his face. "The answer was here all time," he said. "It was simple—and I was looking for complexities . . . The picture is complete now, Markham. Everything fits. Those disconnected wires mean that there's another murder contemplated."

He led the way downstairs. Heath was smoking gloomily in the lower hall.

"Sergeant," Vance said to him, "phone Miss Graem, Miss Weatherby, Kroon — and Hammle. Have them all here late this afternoon—say six o'clock. Floyd Garden can help you in getting in touch with them."

"They'll be here, all right, Mr. Vance," Heath assured him.

"And Sergeant, as soon as you have taken care of this, telephone me. I want to see you this afternoon. I'll be at home. But wait here for Snitkin and leave him in charge. No one is to come here but those I've asked you to get, and no one is to leave the apartment. And, above all, no one is to be permitted to go upstairs either to the study or the garden . . . I'm staggerin' along now."

"I'll be phoning you by the time you get home, Mr. Vance."

Vance went to the front door, but paused with his hand on the knob.

"I think I'd better speak to Garden about the gathering before I go. Where is he, Sergeant?"

"He went into the den when he came downstairs," Heath told him with a jerk of the head.

Vance walked up the hall and opened the den door. I was just behind him. As the door swung inward and Vance stepped over the threshold, we were confronted by an unexpected tableau. Miss Beeton and Garden were standing just in front of the desk, outlined against the background of the window. The nurse's hands were pressed to her face, and she was leaning against Garden, sobbing. His arms were about her.

At the sound of Vance's entry they drew away from each other quickly. The girl turned her head to us with a sudden motion, and I could see that her eyes were red and filled with tears. She caught her breath and, turning with a start, half ran through the connecting door into the adjoining bedroom.

"I'm frightfully sorry," Vance murmured. "Thought you were alone."

"Oh, that's all right," Garden returned, although it was painfully evident the man was embarrassed. "But I do hope, Vance, you won't misunderstand. Everything, you know, is in an emotional upheaval here. I imagine Miss Beeton had all she could stand yesterday and today, and when I found her in here she seemed to break down, and—put her head on my shoulder."

Vance raised his hand in good-natured indifference.

"Oh, quite, Garden. A harassed lady always welcomes a strong masculine shoulder to weep on. Most of them leave powder on one's lapel, don' y' know; but I'm sure Miss Beeton wouldn't be guilty of that . . . Dashed sorry to interrupt you, but I wanted to tell you before I went that I have instructed Sergeant Heath to have all your guests of yesterday here by six o'clock this afternoon. Of course, we'll want you and your father here, too. If you don't mind, you might help the sergeant with the phone numbers."

"I'll be glad to, Vance," Garden returned. "Anything special in mind?"

Vance turned toward the door.

"Yes. Oh, yes. Quite. I'm hopin' to clear this matter up later on. Meanwhile I'm running along. Cheerio." And he went out, closing the door.

As we walked down the outer hall to the elevator, Vance said to Markham somewhat sadly: "I hope my plan works out, I don't particularly like it. But I don't like injustice, either . . ."

We had been home but a very short time when Sergeant Heath telephoned as he had promised. Vance went into the anteroom to answer the call and closed the door after him. A few minutes later he rejoined us and, ringing for Currie, ordered his hat and stick.

"I'm running away for a while, old dear," he said to Markham. "In fact, I'm joining the doughty sergeant at the homicide bureau. But I sha'n't be very long. In the meantime, I've ordered lunch for us here."

"For Heaven's sake, Vance, what are you planning?"

Queen Elizabeth's Gowns

Queen Elizabeth is said to have left more than three thousand habits in her wardrobe when she died, including gowns, petticoats, kirtles, doublets, and mantles, some embroidered with jewels and others made of velvet and damask. A high functionary who was received by the queen in audience described her dress as follows: "The queen had two great pearls in her ears with very big drops. She wore red false hair and a small crown. Her neck was uncovered and she had a huge necklace of exceeding fine jewels. Her gown was white silk all bordered with white pearls as big as beans. She wore a mantle of blush silk shot with silver threads and a very long train." She is described as "vain and effeminate though brusque and masculine."

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"The Iron Mouth"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

NOW here's a yarn that just goes to show what an age of progress we live in. You know, thousands of years ago, when the cave men roamed the primeval forests the boys who made the Adventure club were the ones that came running back to the family campfire and told Ma Stonehatchet and the kids about how one of them just missed being gobbled by a dinosaur with a mouth big enough to take him all in one bite.

Well, the dinosaurs died off and you don't see them any more, except stuffed ones in museums, but you can still have the adventure of being gobbled by a mouth as big as a prehistoric monster's because nowadays we manufacture them—make them out of iron, and put rows of sharp teeth in them, attach them to great mechanical animals and send them out to bite people like David J. Hanlon of Belmar, N. J.

Dave had his run-in with one of those steam-powered man-eaters at three o'clock on a cold October morning in the year 1927. Dave was just out of high school then, and working at his first real full-time job. It was the job of laborer on the state highway bridge over Shark river between Belmar and Avon, and Dave was working on the night shift.

Most Dangerous Job to the Youngest.

Dave says it was an adventure all in itself to be staying up all night, working with a crew of grown men. He was the youngest one in the crew and also the smallest. As a result, the foreman had given him the easiest job on the bridge. That foreman might have thought he was doing Dave a favor, but it so happened it was the most dangerous job on the bridge as well.

The crew had run a temporary trestle out over the water and out on that trestle they had rolled a big crane with which they were excavating holes for the big concrete piers which were to form the bridge's foundation. The crane was equipped with a clamshell scoop—two great jaws with sharp teeth set along the edges, hinged at the upper end. The crane dropped that scoop deep in the mud and silt of the excavation. The jaws closed on a mouthful of the muck, and the scoop was hauled up and dumped on the other side of the trestle.

There was a caisson of heavy planking built around the edge of the excavation to keep the sides from caving in, and down near the bottom of the hole carpenters had built a wooden ledge that a man could stand on. It was Dave's job to stand on that ledge, wait for the clamshell to come down, and push it to a spot where it could get a good big bite of the mud they were dredging.

How the Huge Scoop Worked.

It took three men to work that job properly. Jerry, operator of the crane, would drop the big scoop down to within a few feet of the slimy mud, and then stop it. Then, to make sure it got a good mouthful, Dave would push it to the desired spot. When he got it there he'd yell, "Oke." That was a signal to Sam Smith, the boss, standing directly above him on the edge of the caisson. Sam would relay that signal to Jerry with a motion of his hand, and Jerry would let the big scoop fall and gobble its mouthful of mud.

"Time and again," says Dave, "Jerry would drop those half-ton jaws and they'd eat up more mud. We soon attained a certain rhythm at it, and all night long it was 'Oke—splash! Oke—splash!' so steady and monotonous that we could have done it in our sleep." And the whole trouble was that those three birds almost did do it in their sleep, and a big iron monster is something a man ought not to fool with UNLESS HE'S WIDE AWAKE.

The planking Dave was standing on was narrow, and time and again he almost lost his balance and fell in. And then, somehow, Dave did slip and fall. "I'm not sure how it happened," he says, "but all of a sudden I was falling, and the next minute I was on my back in the mud, right under the gaping, six-foot jaws of that half-ton clamshell scoop. It was probably only a couple of seconds that I lay there, trying to get my wits together, but I remember thinking of what would happen if that scoop should fall and the teeth close on me."

Steel Jaws Closing on Him.

And then, suddenly it began to look as if Dave was going to find out. Up above he heard Sam give the signal. Oke! It was purely mechanical on Sam's part. He had been giving that signal at a certain interval for so long that now he was doing it without thinking. Then—SPLASH! Down came the scoop right across Dave's body!

The jaws landed on either side of him and sank deep into the mud. They hadn't hurt him because his body lay in the triangle up at the top where the two parts were hinged together. But in another second or so those two parts would begin to come together!

"There wasn't much use in trying to yell," says Dave, "for down there in the muck, under that great steel shell, my voice would be smothered and drowned by the clatter of the machinery and the noise of the pumps. Beside that, there wasn't time. I could see, to my horror, that they were going to close over my head and my feet which stuck out at either side!"

Those jaws were almost on Dave now. He gritted his teeth and shut his eyes. In another moment it would be all over. He drew in a deep breath—and thought to himself that it would probably be his last. And then—

And then, all of a sudden, the great jaws stopped closing. Up on the caisson, Sam Smith had looked for Dave and hadn't been able to see him. He knew something was wrong and gave a signal that stopped the closing of the scoop. "He did it calmly and easily," Dave says, "but I've often wondered what would have happened to me if Sam had been one of those excitable fellows. If he had lost his head then, I am pretty sure I would have lost mine, too."

Nature Supplies Power and Ice From Volcanoes

Sometimes Nature supplies power for nothing. The people of Larderello, in the Province of Pisa, Italy, live at the foot of an active volcano.

Every unit of heat, power, and light used in the town is obtained from its fiery interior, thus saving the citizens endless expense and taxation. In addition, commercial borax is obtained from "blow holes" in the hillside, relates a writer in London Answers Magazine.

The people of Styria, Austria, live beside another kindly mountain. This is "Der Erzberg," the Iron Mountain, which is 5,000 feet high and contains about 300,000,000 tons of iron ore—fifty per cent of its volume.

There is another iron mountain in Sweden—Kiirunavaara—which is 2,455 feet high and contains more high-grade iron than any other equal area on earth, for seventy per cent is pure iron.

Needless to say, both these mountains have been exploited by the communities who live in the vicinity.

Nature has also her own gasworks. Medicine Hat, in Alberta, has for years obtained gas and light from inexhaustible subterranean generating stations. There are a number of wells which supply fifty miles of houses and streets.

Welland, Ontario, also has a natural gas supply, and so has some of the Mid-Western of the United States, but in the latter case gas is sent by pipeline from Texas—where the wells are—800 miles away.

Mexico has a volcano that produces ice. This is Colima, which sometimes bursts into activity. By some freak, huge hailstones fall continuously round the crater. These are collected in special bins, conveyed to distant towns, and sold in cafes and hotels.

Chameleons

The change of color in chameleons and certain frogs is a very interesting phenomenon in nature. Many complicated factors enter into these color changes, but in general, they are caused by the expansion and contraction of the pigment cells in the superficial layers of the skin. The cells are linked up with the sympathetic and central nervous system by means of nerve fibers, and they all act in harmony as the result of a common stimulus, which may be due to moisture, light, or temperature conditions, cerebral excitement, food, or the creature's physiological condition; or the surroundings acting through its eyes.

Creamed Eggs With Chili and Rice

To two cupfuls of well-seasoned medium white sauce add one teaspoonful chili powder and six hard-cooked eggs, cut in quarters.

Meanwhile, cook one cupful of rice, season it to suit the taste and arrange in a border around a platter. Pour the egg mixture into the center. Serves six.

for WOMEN only

CARDUI is a special medicine for the relief of some of the suffering which results from a woman's weakened condition. It has been found to make monthly periods less disagreeable, and, when its use has been kept up awhile, has helped many poorly nourished women to get more strength from their food. This medicine (pronounced "Card-u-i") has been used and recommended by women for many, many years. Find out whether it will help you by giving it a fair trial. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Helping Others

What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?

Don't Irritate Gas Bloating

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable.

You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe—is not habit forming. At all Leading Druggists.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Murmurings of Spring

"IF YOU'D take a few steps, Sis, I believe I'd be inspired to answer that question, 'Did you ever see a dream walking?' You are nothing less than devastating—truly a menace!"

"You meow so sweetly, Connie. I'm a bit suspicious that this little peplum frock of mine has got you catty. Your eyes really aren't green by rights, you know."

Connie Sews Her Own.

"How could you? I think my dress looks as nice on me as yours does on you. Why practically all of the girls at the Laf-a-Lot last night wanted to know where I found such a lovely frock. Not one of them guessed that I made it myself. And did I feel elegant when I played Mendelssohn's Spring Song on Diane's new baby grand! The girls said I fit into the picture perfectly. I thought if only Dwight could see me now."

"I still say my two-piecer with its piped peplum, cute little buttons and stream-lines is the No. 1 spring outfit in this woman's town."

Mother Happens Along.

"Girls, girls, if your talk were only half as pretty as your frocks you'd be better off. Sometimes I wonder if you wouldn't be more appropriately titled The Cheek Twins, rather than The Chic Twins."

"Okay, Mother, you win. Let's change the subject by changing clothes. We'll put on our culottes and join you in a round of golf, how's that? Gee, Mother, you never look sweeter than when you're wearing a casual young two-piece shirt dress. The plaid pique is just the thing for you, too. In fact, Mom, you're just about tops from any angle."

folks. Hawkeye will out a few words about how his Bro. John helped to the big pasture over 31 n. About all we had in of the country was rattle parrie dogs and hoot awkeye never dreamed would live to see this invaded by the famous that is called the Lion Tuesday evening when of Lions numbering over ay boy, believe me they er out of the jungles in 'ole' state of Texas. They er to the rabbit creek use and held a fine meet- ining their Lion Club late Monday evening a car drove up to Hawk- e and a big husky well , a Mr. R. P. Reagan, the ager of Burkburnett. He wkeye about their meet- he Rabbit Creek School d he came to invite Hawk their honored guest. So uesday evening came a car drove down loaded eye and in a few minutes e was face to face to that bunch of ferocious Lions. After Hawkeye got over his scare he was escorted around by the Master Lion, Wiley Browning, president of the Club and Erwin Sweagler. After the big, old and young Lions got quited down, Lion W. R. Hill opened up by a song accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Henry Kinnaird. After the singing was over, the president called the house to order and the Lions all became doceil. Once more in a few minutes the Ladies started placing the fine three course supper supper on the tables which were prepared by the Big Rabbit Creek ladies. A grand supper was served which was appreciated by each Lion, also by their honor guest, Hawkeye and others. Soon after the grand supper was served the fine lot of cigars were passed around and a fine smoke was enjoyed by all of them. The Lion president called the meeting to order and the record of the last meeting was read by Lion Erwin Sweagler, secretary. After theye were read, they were approved. Hawkeye noticd at once that the Lions were getting very restless, especially Lion Uncle Joe Davis. Say, it took three grown up lions and two Lion cubs to keep Uncle Joe from cutting the pigion wing right out on the floor. Lion R. L. Mattingly was another hard Lion to handle. Still the Master Lion (Wiley) seemed to have great power over all of his charge. Another of those wilds got up before his brothers with a little book in his hand and read some of the Lions names, but just before he finished he just had to spill the beans and come clean about his part of their show program. Another Lion as a honored guest from Wichita Falls, Tex., by some reason escaped out of his cage and met his other Lions and came over to the Rabbit Creek school house was Lion K. C. Spell, one of the greatest speakers of the Lone Star State. Say boy, talk about a roaring Lion, K. C. was sure one of them. Never-the-less they are all just a fine set of boys, every one of them full of pep and full of fun. The Master Lion (Wiley) had his hands full keeping Lion R. P. Reagan and R. D. Owens still long enough to find out just what they were talking about. Well, the funniest thing that happened was that Lion W. R. Hill had eaten so much chicken and dressing, salid and pumpkin pie that his "stummie" began to swell so fast under the leaf of the table it took Lion R. P. Reagan, Joe Majors and R. L. Mattingly to get the little cub Lion out from under the leaf of the table. Well, folks, all that Hawkeye has to say about this splendid bunch of Lions is this. We all know that Cotton Co., Okla has a large open door and this great wide door latch key will always hang outside of our open door for the roaring bunch of Lions in Burkburnett, Tex., our friendly little city. This invitation covers all of Burkburnett. We say, "Come over at any time that the time will permit."

Randlett baseball nine crossed bats Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. with the Wichita Falls, Tex. hospital base ball nine. The score was 6-10 in favor of the Wichita Falls Hospital nine.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Woods and family visited with Mrs. Woods father and mother Mr. and Mrs J. C. Fowler.

Mrs. Fred La Barre called on Mrs. Ed Owens Wednesday afternoon.

There were many a bushell of corn planted over in this neck of the woods this past week.

Thousands of human beings were on the streets of Burkburnett Saturday. Just as many were in all the stores. It seemed to Hawkeye that if it were possible to have four arms and hands the clerks in all the stores in Burkburnett. As it was, they were waiting on two customers at a time.

Some up land farmers are holding for more rain. Still wheat and oats are still looking fine. Also all gardens are nice.

Some farmers has started to plant cotton. Mrs. Maud Owens started planting last Monday.

The past week has had the highest tempretures especially Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The mercury climbed up to 78 the hottest for the month of April for over 30 years.

The big up to date Ice Cream Store was the coldest place in Burkburnett Saturday. Why does Hawkeye say this, simply because he counted 77 seated in those easy stools and over 50 that were standing eating that delicious ice cream with nuts mixed in and also any flavor you call for, it's served at the big Ice Cream store.

You know folks, when Hawkeye and Mr. J. E. Woods accompanied by J. C. Fowler got over to our friendly little city of Burkburnett, the only parking place they could find was way down south of the city down by the big junk pile. So when Hawkeye got ready to leave town he went into Boyds big store to get his groceries. I told Charlie Boyd where the car was parked, so Charlie called a helper to help Hawkeye carry his groceries almost half a mile to where the car was parked. That's the good spirit that all business men have in Burk.

Oatmeal Fed Dionne Quins Aren't Afraid Of Cold Weather

Grown-ups may shiver at the mere mention of sub-zero weather but the famous Dionne Quins have been known to brave the elements when the thermometer hovered around the forty below zero mark. As the northern air is dry it is possible for them to remain outdoors without harm. The Quins medical advisors believe that cold weather makes the children hardy builds up their resistance, increases their appetites and brings color to their cheeks. However, the worlds most famous babies are never allowed to remain in a draft, whether indoors or outdoors. And their home is very evenly and continuously heated and well ventilated. The playroom tempreture varies from 68 to 70 degrees and the sleeping room tempreture usually is around 60 degrees.

The famous Dionne Quins have been the worlds hardest-to raise of all children, and today their remarkable development is a triumph for all rules of feeding, cleaniness, fresh air, sleep and exercise.

Realizing that food was a very important factor in the growth of these five children, the Dionne Quinn child specialists and diet experts chose oatmeal for their cereal. Oatmeal is recognized as a splendid source of Vitamin B, the vitamine for protecting poung and old against nervousness, constipation and poor appetite due to lack of Vitamine B. And oatmeal with milk is also considered a rich source of body-building minerals, muscle-building protein and energy-making carbohydrates.

So every day, the Dionne Quins have Quaker Oats. No wonder they run outdoors and like it!

MEMBER TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

PAROLE SYSTEM

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI (commonly known as G-men) was bitter in his statement last Sunday in denunciation of the policies of parole used in various states. W. W. Baker was shot in the back when he and another member of FBI arrested Alfred Power and Robert Suhay. Investigation revealed that the two men were paroled convicts. They had been released by sympathetic official of some state after conviction of a major serious crime.

Hoover made the statement that every FBI or G-man that had ben killed or shot had been the victim of a paroled convict. Still further he stated that every major criminal of investigation were paroled convicts.

Parole has a very definite part in the punishment and caught or shot down by the members of the federal bureau treatment of criminals. There are some few cases where it is justified. In several thousand percent more cases is becomes a political football abused for the purpose of making some local powerful politician more powerful.

Recent governmental survey indicated that 86 percent of the crimes committed of major importance were committed by persons who had been pordoned at least one time previous to that major crime.

The cowardly rat-like act of shooting the man in the back in Kansas last week was characteristic of the acts of such scum. The governor or parole board thatreleased this man after his previous acts are partly guilty of the murder with which he is charged.

When a man is sentenced justly and fairly, he must be made to pay the entire penalty that is assessed. It is this escape from penalty that creates a false arrogance and indifference to society on the part ofthecriminal.

There isn't language in the range that could be used in an editorial column strong enough to be completely expressive of the proper condemnation of those politically minded officials who release criminals prematurely.

THANKS FOR THE PICTURES

So many have responded with the request for pictures to use in the publicity of Burkburnett that the paper will soon have enough to make an excellent display for the interest of these who read the paper. For this ready response the Star expresses sincere appreciation.

However, there are still a few missing links. The following pictures will be needed: First school house, first church, first school teacher, Schmoker No. 1 well, early main street, first store, first saloon, and the first anything like jail, hotel, water plant, electric plant, and city hall.

CHURCH'S OPPONTUNITY

So far as we know, special celebration of the 30 anniversary for the churches has not been arranged. Last year when the state celebrated the centennial, the church made adequate response to the ocasion; and every denomination having churches within the state made special observation of spiritual nature.

The churches of Burkburnett have played the most important part in the city's development. This birthday celebration should not pass without some official observation.

The other events will be the week end of June 18-19. The suggestion that this paper would like to make to the churches is that the pastors and congregation combine in a mass meeting Wednesday night June 16.

On this date the members of all the congregations could gather at the largest auditorium in the city in a profound expression of appreciation to the providence that has so often been evident in the development of our community. A meeting of young people thanking God for his guidance and aid during these years could be an occasion which would make permanent impressions on the minds of our people.

God has been kind to us. In moments during these 30 years when the times seemedto darken hopes and ambitions of those spiritually minded, courage has grown out of the realization that He has remained a constant and dependable source of strength and comfort.

Now, regardless of what form the other celebration takes, the churches should unite in a common service of appreciation and thanksgiving.

NATURAL PICTURES

One of the chief critisisms that is passed on the average picture made for press purposes is that the ictures are too severe in their choice of details. Photography has developed so rapidly in the last few years that even the most unattractive can be made to look like a movie actress or assume angelic expressions.

At the professional photographer's convention meeting in Dallas this week, the picture makers voted to try to sell the public on pictures whichreally looked more like the subject and less like a hazy attempt at interpretation. One of the chief speakers at the meeting was E. W. Kalender of the Eastman company who stated that pictures for the family should look more natural and not be theatrical studies. Such studies should be saved for the hobbyist.

It is often necessary for newspapers to use pictures of people in connection with the stories published. If the picture looks too much like the subject, the subject is insulted. Of course the photographer can make such changes in the negative and print as to eliminate harsher features, but he can't change the awkwardness that the average person assumes when posing for a publicity picture.

For that reason, the news photographer likes to catch his subject unposed and natural. The pose may not be exactly complimentary, but it is more accurate than any other type.

HEADLINES

When the FBI starts after a man, every possible resource of science and common sense investigation is combined to bring to justice the criminal. The ingenuity of this group was illustrated in the arrest of two desperate criminals in Kansas. The criminals were placed under arrest through an intricate maize of evidence that led to the criminal's calling for a mailed package. In all the fuss about the shooting and near escape of the men, the main factor of the detailed investigation which led to their arrest was forgotten. The cleverness and courage of the men is the thing that is saving respect for the law. The condition created by crooked politics that made the investigation necessary is to be deplored.

Noble Experiment

The Spanish neutrality attempt that was put into force last Monday is a noble experiment on the part of the nations, but we are not sure that it is a sincere attempt for all parties concerned. The fundamental factor of human selfishness can not be disregardedin the matter. It is difficult to picture Italian, English, French or German authorities stopping at blockade any shipment of men or materials which would go to a side in the conflict in which any of these nations might be interested. Italian navy surely would not stop the shipment of materials or men to the rebels, nor would France stop the shipment of materials or men to the government. These two nations would believe in the sincerity or pretense of the other side is silly.

Costly Operation.

The operation will cost about $4,000,000 a year in actual cash outlay, and 50 warships from the regular navies to maintain the blockade. This is the most extensive peace preservation setup ever attempted by the nations of the world. There will be 27 governments in the blockade of the spanish ports. Even the European capitols, expressly Great Britian, are skeptical of the effectiveness of the arrangement. These ships and men are supposed to observe and report to a central council the results of the workings. However, if the setup can perserve peace in Europe, regardless of what it costs the attempt will be entirely worth while.

Old Age Tax

The old age and retirement tax that is being paid every registered worker in the United States is under the contest in the Supreme court, and the recent decision of the Boston court of appeals that the tax was unconstitutional has led to hasty action on the part of the government to prepare for a contest for the Supreme court. So it is highly probable that one of the most hasty trials ever conducted by the Supreme court will soon be held. The government department of justice has expressed fear that th circut court decision will lead to the general holdup of the payment of the taxes inthe matter. Such a movement would hold up 324 million dollars which has already been budgeted into expenses for this year. The decision on the AAA left the government holding the bag a few months ago. The source of revenue was cut off, and the government still held the contracts for the payments with the farmers.

Noiseless Navy

One of the most effective machines used in wartimes is the various types of sensitive machinery used to detect the presence of machinery of the enemy. One of the disadvantages of mechanisms use in war is that the presence of the machines of various types. One of the reasons that deisel engines have become so pop ular in the scientific investigations and research for war machines is the absence of magnetic impulses which can be detected for several miles. The United States navy department recently announced plans for such a navy. Probably it will be developed along the deisel type.

Guest Columnist Riley Cooper Tells of Betting Evils

(Courtney Riley Cooper, widely known writer of crimes and adventure stories, today fills in as Hugh Bradley's guest columnist. His contribution is taken from his book, "Here's to Crime.")

By COURTNEY RILEY COOPER

THERE is a wave of public gambling which has been gaining force ever since the beginning of the depression. The figures are amazing. In cities which have conducted thorough, impartial investigations, it has been found that the totals in this new racket are far beyond the amounts spent even in the wildest days of prohibition and bootlegging. The amount per capita is, in fact, at least seventy-five dollars a year, placed on bets, which means that much of it is turnover. That is not the amount wagered by each person who gambles, but it is the result of dividing the total sums by the aggregate of every man, woman and child in the city.

There are comparatively few towns in America above a population of 3,000 in which slot machines, punchboards, horse joints, the numbers, bolita or some other form of lottery does not flourish. Therefore, assuming that all rural districts are free from the taint of gambling—which they are not—a gross population of about eighty million persons is dallying with six billion dollars in winnings and losings, of which all but about a billion goes through the hands of the underworld — where much, of course, remains.

A half-billion dollars of the "legitimate" gambling money goes to fairs, carnivals, county race meets, charities and a number of small games of chance which are affiliated in no way with organized syndicates.

Half Million Is Bet in Area on Relief

Last year, for instance, Massachusetts' racegoers backed their hunches thirty-five million dollars' worth; Kentucky let go of about eleven million; Florida guessed about twenty-five million dollars' worth; California, always seeking to better its rival, took more than thirty million to and from the racetracks; while Michigan, Texas, Oregon, West Virginia, South Dakota, Nebraska, Nevada, Rhode Island, Louisiana, Maryland, Illinois and other race-loving states contributed something like a hundred and ten million.

This money was wagered in places where pari-mutuel betting is permitted and where it is possible accurately to gauge the amounts risked. Incidentally, it might be interesting to know that in one New England district where nearly a half-million dollars poured into races in a single month, the majority of persons in the area were on relief.

Besides the pari-mutuel betting must be considered the bookies system of betting in New York, where, it is estimated, nearly three hundred million dollars were wagered.

This, according to the average man's belief, is all the money which went into racing, either through bookie or pari-mutuel systems. However, there was another "system" which made no reports, and which handled more money than all the racetracks combined. That was rangdom. There was a time when the usual representative of crookdom who fell into the police net felt it incumbent upon him to pretend some legitimate occupation. Today, however, he settles the matter by stating that he is a "betting commissioner."

Instead, they say, Paul was anxious to find some excuse to train in his Florida home instead of journeying all the way to California.

The worst batting trouble of Vince DiMaggio is that he tries too hard for those long drives into left field. Word has been passed around that he is a pull hitter always trying to murder the ball and so he is pitched to accordingly.

One of the saddest stories of recent days was overlooked by the gents who combine prize-fight promotion with their newspaper chores. I refer to the New Jersey report that two Irish process servers mistook a polish sparring partner for the heavyweight champion of the world. Things have come to a sorrowful pass when an O'Shaughnessy can't recognize a Braddock in a land where faithful followers never mistook a Gene Tunney for a Kingfish Levinsky or a Ruby Goldstein for a Pedro Montanez. If it keeps up the first thing you know even the heavyweight champion's master mind, Million Dollar Gate Joe Gould, won't be able to recognize himself as the greatest fight manager in the world.

Princeton track coach Matty Gels is sure that Archie San Romani will crack the old 4:06.7 mile record at Palmer Stadium in June. It's not a bad prediction either. Every year Archie has lowered his mile time, once by as much as five seconds, and he's due again this spring . . . Did you ever note that, for the past six years, the National League pennant has gone in complete cycles—'31-Cards, '32-Cubs, '33-Giants, '34-Cards, '35-Cubs, '36-Giants—?Sooo-000? Well, anyhow, it's one way of figuring that the Cards are due . . . Two new books worthy of a gander from sports fans are "Showman," by William A. Brady, who used to manage prize-fight champions before he became a big time theatrical producer, and "Marathon" by Clarence De Mar, the veteran distance running ace . . .

Eddie Givens, star quarterback and likely successor to Ken Sandbach as Tiger pilot next fall, is one of the reasons why Princeton expects to win its first Ivy League baseball championship this year. Givens, he's a catcher, is the best baseball player to perform at Nassau since Moe Berg's day . . . Tab hard-hitting Sammy Snead, sensation of the golf trail, to be a real star this summer . . . Also look forward for the Met College Outdoor track championships to be held at Randalls Island in May. . . .

Fight Manager Joe Jacobs indignantly denies persistently published reports that Max Schmeling ever has been sued for writing that Joe Louis "deliberately" fouled him. . . . Although he weighs only 137 pounds and stands a mere five feet two and one-half inches, Shorty Chumbris, Maryland's soph shortstop, is being rated as one of the best college players in the South . . . Distemper is even a worse plague of greyhound racing than the gents who do so many interesting things to ensure themselves of winners. Seventy-five per cent of all greyhound puppies are killed or rendered unfit by the disease . . . New York fight promoters should take a look at Ben Brown, a middleweight now working out of Atlanta.

Wally Hally, coast lightweight boxer who recently defeated Baby Arizmendi, is a former Salvation Army trumpet player. . . . Johnny Weismuller, swimming in a Hollywood tank, recently equaled his own 50 yard free style world record of 51 seconds . . . Four members of the Phillies, Manager Jimmy Wilson, Hal Kelleher, Swede Burkart and Bucky Walters, are home town boys.

Lesson for April 25

THE OBEDIENCE OF NOAH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 8:20-22; 9:8-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house. Heb. 11:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Meaning of the Rainbow.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Rainbow's Message.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Following God's Plan.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Deliverance through Obedience.

The "book of beginnings" (Genesis) has already brought before us the creation of the world, the origin of man, the entrance of sin into the world, and God's judgment upon that sin. In chapter 4 we find the first murder. Cain, who brought an offering before God which was not acceptable, murdered his brother Abel, whose offering pleased God. Strange it is that man has it in his heart to hate those who expose his sin by their godly life.

God does not leave himself without a witness in the earth. The God-fearing line of Seth appears. There are always those who have not bowed the knee to the Adversary. Consider the astonishment of Soviet officials at the deep-seated and wide-spread faith in God revealed in their recent census.

But sin again lifts its ugly head and ere long God is driven to the necessity of judgment upon mankind. Read the terrific indictment of humanity in Genesis 6:5-7. It is still true that the heart of man apart from God's grace is "desperately wicked" (Jer. 17:9). Well does a contemporary writer say that even modern "psychology has unveiled the dismal and sinister depths in human nature. Man can no longer flee from reality into the romantic refuge of his own heart; for the human heart has become a house of horrors in whose murky recesses man cannot erect for his solace either a shrine or a citadel. Man is bad; he is a sinner. The depths of his meanness are being unveiled in a ghastly way in individual and social life in these times. What a contemporary ring there is about these old biblical judgments on mankind! (Gen. 6:5, 6; Isa. 1:6.) What a tremendous arraignment of sinful human nature is Paul's prologue in Romans 1" (Mackay).

So God sent a flood upon the earth. It used to be fashionable to doubt the story of the flood, but archaeology has joined hands with geology and history to agree with Scripture. The facts are available; let us use them.

"But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord" and prepared an ark at God's command. Here again it can be demonstrated that the ark was sufficiently large to meet the need of Noah and all his family, with the animals and their food, and with room to spare. It is significant that the proportions of the ark were those of a well-planned boat. God knows how to build, and man does well to obey his instructions.

The rain came, the fountains of the deep were opened, and all the living perished, except those within the ark. What an instructive type of our safety in Christ is the ark!

But our lesson concerns primarily what occurred after Noah came forth from the ark and presented himself before God.

I. An Obedient Man (8:20-22).

To come before God with acceptable worship, man must come with clean hands. The question is not whether he is brilliant, learned, or of high position. The one thing that counts is obedience. When such a man offers the worship of his heart before God, it goes up to him like a sweet savor.

II. A Covenant-Keeping God (9:8-17).

The beautiful rainbow in the cloud became a token of God's promise, and the visible assurance to "all flesh" that the judgment of the flood will not be repeated. Never again will seed time and harvest, nor any of the orderly processes of nature, fail throughout the whole earth.

What a gracious God we have! And what a pity that men presume upon his goodness. Because he "maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust" (Matt. 5:45), men not only forget that he is the giver of all things, but assume that they may sin against him with impunity. Let us remind them that it is the clear teaching of Scripture that "every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Rom. 14:12).

God's Mercy

Like the drops of a lustre, which reflect a rainbow of colors when the sun is glittering upon them, and each one, when turned in different ways, from its prismatic form, shows all the varieties of color, so the mercy of God is one and yet many, the same yet ever changing, a combination of all the beauties of love blended harmoniously together.—Spurgeon.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Removing Stains on Hands—Vegetable stains can be removed from the hands by rubbing them with a slice of raw potato.

Frying Eggs—Eggs are less liable to break or stick to the pan if a little flour is added to the frying fat.

Care of Shoes — The preservation of patent leather shoes presents difficulties because, by the very nature of the hard finish, it will crack eventually. But the fateful day may be delayed by occasionally applying just the smallest touch of pure vaseline and rubbing it in well with a soft cloth. Patent leather shoes should be polished by rubbing with a soft cloth only.

• • •

New Hot-Water Bottles—Have a little glycerine added to the water with which hot-water bottles are filled for the first time. This will make the rubber supple, and the bottle will last longer.

Boiling Old Potatoes—Old potatoes sometimes turn black during boiling. To prevent this add a squeeze of lemon juice to the water in which they are boiled.

Protecting Buttonholes—A row of machine-sewing around button holes in knit underwear prevents stretching and makes them last longer.

Preparing Salted Nuts—Here is an ideal manner in which to prepare your salted nuts at home: Take blanched nuts, salt and oil. Sprinkle nuts very lightly with oil, using not more than one teaspoon to one cup of nuts. Spread in one layer in a baking pan and brown delicately in a moderately hot oven — 375 degrees — stirring occasionally that they may color evenly. Sprinkle with salt after removing from the oven, and spread on crumpled unglazed paper to absorb any surface oil.

For Good Gravy—Did you know that gravy, to be served with roast meat, will taste much nicer and contain more nutriment if it is made with the water in which the vegetables have been boiled?

For Steamed or Boiled Puddings—Puddings will not stick to the basin if two strips of grease-proof paper are put crosswise in the basin before the mixture is poured in.

The Great Kipling

Rudyard Kipling's devotion to his son is shown in a new anecdote, says the Boston Post. Soon after the death of Second Lieutenant John Kipling, at the front during the World war, an unknown admirer accosted the poet on a road near Burwash, England.

"So you are the great Kipling?" he asked.

"No, my son is," was the reply.

Womanless Wedding By Methodist At Church Tues. Nite

Tuesday evening, April 27, 1937, at 8 p. m. in the basement of the Methodist Church of Burkburnett, the Young People's Class presents a "Womanless Wedding.

The bride is a very modest, warty, platinum blond (Checo Marx type) of sweet sixteen. Her trosseau is modern in every detail, consisting of a green bonnet, grey veil and yellow sunflowers, with dress to match, connected to a radiant red train,--er sumphin.

Study the ever so graceful sway of this young bride as she gawks down the aisle. Then you will know "why men leave home."

The grooms is a homely ol' cadger with a handle bar mustache whose sole vocabulary consists of two words---"YES DEAR", who still doesn't know what has happened.

Additional cast consists of the preacher, a bald headed mother, ring bearer, train bearers, best man, mothers and fathers of the couple, and enough brides maids to go around et al. As a special addition, the relatives will all be there; or will they? (We think they are relatives of Bob Burns)

Not a "four star" attraction--but a "MILKY-WAY" attraction.

In addition to the wedding will be a series of entertaining numbers. A small admission will be charged.

For You And Your Town
The Best Is None Too Good

That is the reason why the business men in Burkburnett were unanimous in their action to build for this community a municipal light plant.

However, such action was not taken without thorough investigation first. What did they find upon inquiry of other towns which already had their own light plants?

They found in more than thirty communities in Texas which had already taken this forward step that conditions were excellent. They found that rates were low or taxes were reduced. They found citizens satisfied with service being rendered. They found improvement made for the towns with revenue kept at home. They found a deeper sense of cooperation in the towns. They found the opinion unanimous that by giving the best they had kept the best.
