Streets like Fannin, just east of Lee High School, could become posted no parking zones in the future after complaints that students go so far as to park in private driveways while attending class.

Gatherings disturb Lee High neighbors

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Residents living near Midland Lee High School say they've been threatened, intimidated and even bullied by students and dropouts who have turned local neighborhood streets into parking lots.

Sound bizarre? Well the police chief is taking it seriously and so is the Midland City Council which is expected to enact a ordinance that will make parking illegal in residential sections surrounding the school.

City Councilman Gordon Marcum III said he was appalled by stories, particularly the behavior of students who have shown a total lack of regard for police monitoring the area.

"I think the situation is atrocious," said Marcum. "They're behavior is disgraceful, but I have to give the residents credit, they've put up with this for long enough."

According to Police Chief Richard Czech, students think nothing about parking in personal driveways, verbally abusing residents and patrol officers or tossing trash on lawns.

"Frankly, the residents fear retaliation," said Czech, who has assigned one full-time officer to the area since complaints surfaced in October. "If officers can impound (cars) they're going to impound them."

Czech said he endorsed a no parking ordinance as the only logical solution. In fact, council believes the action will force the hand of the Midland Independent School District.

According to officials, the district already owns land across from the school, which they believe can and should be turned into a student parking lot. "It's a dilemma that's been going on the last two years now," said Czech.

Midland Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi doesn't dispute the problem exists, but says dropouts are largely to blame for the problem.

"In general terms, our people have been working with the police department and we're trying a variety of strategies. We've even assisted in arrests of violators," said Baressi.

But local residents dispute that claim, saying that Midland Lee officials don't even bother returning phone calls, let alone control the roving student population before class, at lunch and after school.

Still, people like Midland Patrolman David Sherrod say it is the same thing day in and day out. "We've (police) been working the area since school started and there is a problem over there ... they do a little bit of everything."

Cabinet posts going to Watkins, Bennett

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush is rounding out the top ranks of his administration by nominating retired Adm. James D. Watkins as energy secretary and former Education Secretary William J. Bennett as drug czar, transition and congressional sources said today.

Bush was to announce the selections at a news conference a few hours before holding a late-afternoon dress-rehearsal meeting of his Cabinet at Blair House, the historic residence across from the White House.

"He will talk about what he expects of them, what his priorities are, what's important," Sheila Tate, Bush's transition press secretary, said of the first gathering of the president-elect's top appointees.

Sources who declined to be identified confirmed that Watkins, formerly the Navy's top uniformed officer, would be tapped for the energy post and that Bennett would get the job of coordinating the government's war on drugs.

CBS News first reported on Watkins' selection and The New York Times had disclosed Bennett's new role.

Bush had a hard time filling both jobs, the last top-level posts that were vacant. Aides suggested that he vacillated on the energy post between an oil-state candidate and one with experience in nuclear energy. The Energy Department faces a multibillion-dollar cleanup of the nation's aging and increasingly unsafe nuclear weapons plants.

Six survivors found in earthquake rubble

MOSCOW (AP) — Six people who survived on canned vegetables, fruit and pickles for 35 days after the Armenian earthquake were pulled alive from the basement of a collapsed apartment building in Leninakan, Tass reported today.

The survivors were rescued Wednesday, Tass said, the 35th day after the Dec. 7 earthquake that killed an estimated 25,000 people in northwest Armenia. Rescuers last pulled a person alive from the wreckage Dec. 26, Tass said.

The six men were found under the rubble in the basement of a nine-story apartment building which had collapsed on them, the official Soviet news agency said in a report from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia.

They survived because there was plenty of canned food stored in the basement, Tass said. All are hospitalized in Yerevan but none are in danger, doctors told the news agency.

Tass did not say how the six men were found or who rescued them. Officials had ended the search for survivors weeks ago, saying it was necessary to clear away the rubble to prevent disease spreading from decayed bodies.

Authorities have been demolishing buildings that could not be rebuilt after the earthquake.

Bill Clements

Clements outlines jobs plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Renewing his call for "jobs, jobs, jobs," Gov. Bill Clements says the $35 million cost of his newest economic development program will be repaid many times over by the new taxpayers who find work because of it.

"The good things that are going to happen in Texas are going to come from a growth in our economy. As our tax base increases, we collect more taxes and we can do more things. So, creating jobs is the very root of all the good things that can happen to us in Texas," Clements said.

The governor on Wednesday unveiled several proposals for the Legislature and said he had no worries about paying the price for the program that an aide, Mark Sanders, said would create about 300,000 jobs.

"I don't think that (money) will be hard to find in a budget the size that we have in Texas ... $35 million is no big sum when we're talking about job creation," he said.

Highlights in the proposals Clements made during a speech to the Texas State Chamber of Commerce were creation of:

— A rural economic development fund to guarantee loans for expanding the state's food and fiber industries.

— A product development fund to provide money for testing, refining and demonstrating potential new products.

"Our jobs plan is aimed at providing tax incentives for job creation, at developing our high-tech base and offering specialized training for our workers. It's designed to enhance the development of rural Texas and, at the same time, broaden our markets nationally and internationally," Clements told the chamber officials.

"Above all, we're renewing our commitment to preserve our strong right-to-work laws and to work against a corporate or personal income tax."

Clements also said reform of the troubled workers' compensation system is mandatory.

To emphasize that, Clements formally declared workers' comp reform an emergency.

Cold front renews wintry conditions

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

If you thought winter was over, look again.

Those cloudy skies, coupled with the fact that the wind chill factor has descended rapidly into the single digits since dawn, means Jack Frost is alive and well in West Texas.

Indeed.

"This is a pretty good storm system," Pat Tyra, a National Weather Service forecaster, said this morning from the agency's headquarters at Midland International Airport.

Tyra said the latest cold front signifies a reversal from the spring-like weather patterns that have dominated the Midland forecasts over the past three weeks. Wednesday's high reached 74 degrees.

Meteorologists have been tracking this most recent storm system since it developed in the Gulf of Alaska early this week, moved into the Pacific Northwest and crossed the Rocky Mountains into West Texas overnight.

Accompanying this latest cold front are a variety of weather conditions: cloudy skies, gusty winds, frigid temperatures and a 50 percent chance of snow by Friday.

U.S. airlines given three days to check 737 wiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. airlines have three days to check for cross-wiring in 300 Boeing 737s, following speculation that faulty warnings deceived the pilot of a British 737 into shutting down his only good engine when the other one caught fire.

"We think this is not a very likely scenario, but it's a check that can be done very, very quickly without disrupting service," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman John Leyden.

The FAA order late Wednesday applies to eight Piedmont Airlines 737-400s with U.S.-French CFM56 engines similar to the British Midland Airways 737 that crashed Sunday in England, killing 44 people. It also would cover 292 smaller Boeing 737-300s operated by 10 U.S. airlines.

No planes were grounded by the order, and other 737s and other planes using the CFM56 engines would not be affected.

■ Related story — 4A

FAA Administrator Allan McArtor issued the order after the British Civil Aviation Authority ordered similar checks for three types of aircraft flown by British carriers, including the same two models of the 737 and the Airbus A320.

The British agency also ordered increased inspections of CFM56 engines on the planes, a step the FAA was still considering.

The FAA's "air worthiness directive" gives airlines 72 hours from official receipt of the warnings this morning to make the inspections, which officials said would take about an hour for each plane.

This could allow each plane to make one or two flights before the inspection was mandatory, and officials said it should not disrupt airline schedules.

"We certainly believe it's a prudent measure to go out and check to make sure there's nothing wrong with the fleet," Boeing Commercial Airplanes spokesman Craig Martin said Wednesday in Seattle.

Parent plays big role in life of student

EDITOR'S NOTE: In observance of "The Year of the Young Reader" programs being held this week in Midland, the Reporter-Telegram is publishing a six-part series detailing several issues that affect children's reading skills. In today's installment, the importance of parental and adult involvement in children's reading is examined.

THE YOUNG READER:
new words ... new worlds

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A caveat to the parent who likes to blame teachers or a school system for his child's educational shortcomings:

The parent is the child's first teacher.

And, the parent has the potential to be the child's most important and best teacher.

According to the National PTA magazine, most of what a child learns in his early years is a result of what he sees being done around him.

"Children role model what they see," explained Alma Thompson, president of the Midland City Council PTA. "We cannot expect the school district or volunteers to raise our children."

Two basic choices are available to mom and dad — the child can imitate them or he can imitate what he watches on television.

"Dynasty" or Mother Goose, parents, you decide.

Judging by U.S. Department of Education statistics — that one in five American adults is functionally illiterate — about 20 percent of the country's parents are opting for the former.

Admits Gerianne Green, co-chairman of the Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) program: "We don't do enough to encourage parents to read with their children. Our life depends on their ability to read.

"You can't expect the child to do it on his own."

One plus to parental involvement in reading — besides what good comes from it for the child — is what the process does for the adult.

Sharing time with a child is always special, as is the bonding that naturally occurs when a parent spends time with his child, explained Brenda Faught, VIPS chairman.

There likely isn't an educator in this world who will not agree with the claim children who are read to by their parents are better readers in the classroom.

A child's entire educational experience hinges on his ability to read his course work as well as outside materials from which he may also glean knowledge, teachers agreed.

Jim Trelease, author of "The Read-Aloud Handbook," wrote that a parent may begin reading to his child the day they bring him home from the hospital. Six months of age, however, may be more realistic, he adds.

That the child cannot understand words at such a young age isn't important, Trelease explains. Of greater significance is the child's "conditioning" to books and his parent's voice, he states.

Over time, the child will associate warmth, attention and security with the sound of his parent's voice, Trelease believes.

Mrs. Green said she can empathize with the busy or weary parent who finds it hard to "pencil in" daily reading time with his child.

"But take five minutes. Make five minutes...even if it is while supper is cooking. Have the child read to you," Mrs. Green suggested.

With that logic in hand, VIPS program members last year alone spent more than 65,000 hours in the public schools here, many of which were spent helping students individually with reading, she continued.

COLDER

"It could be snowing tomorrow morning, and that should give the school folks something to look at," Tyra said.

At 9 a.m. this morning, the Weather Service was reporting a wind chill factor of 4 degrees, with an actual temperature of 31 degrees at Air Terminal.

This storm brings welcome news to farmland, which relies on cold weather in the winter to produce the necessary rainfall in the spring, the forecaster said.

There will be increasing clouds with an increasing chance of snow tonight, Tyra said of the front, which has dipped further south than other Arctic storms of the season.

So far, most of the winter storms of the season have followed a path across the northern United States — evading West Texas — because of the position of the polar jet stream, he added.

Midlanders can expect cloudy skies tonight and cold temperatures with a 20 percent chance of snow. The low should dip into the mid-20s and winds will be out of the northeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Accumulations of 1 inch are expected, Tyra said.

The high Friday will be in the low 30s and winds will blow in from the northeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Wednesdays' high of 74 was four degrees cooler than the record of 78, set in 1935. The overnight low of 30 was 25 degrees warmer than the record of 5, set in 1963.

STATE

Forecasts called for snow in the Panhandle and northern portions of the South Plains tonight and for sleet in extreme West Texas and in the Hill Country and for rain possibly mixed with sleet in western portions of North Texas. There will be rain across the rest of the state tonight and Friday.

Lows tonight will be in the mid-teens in the Panhandle and in the 20s and 30s over the rest of West Texas, in the 30s and 40s over North Texas and in the 30s and 40s over most of South Texas, ranging upward to near 50 in extreme South Texas.

Highs Friday will be in the 30s over most of West Texas, ranging upward to the 40s in the Big Bend area, in the 40s across North Texas and in the 30s in the Hill Country and in the 40s and 50s across the rest of South Texas.

The cold front was racing southeastward across Texas early today. The front passed through the Dallas-Fort Worth area between 1 and 2 a.m. today, dropping temperatures from 58 at 3 a.m. to 44 by 5 a.m.

The front kicked up winds as it moved across the state. Winds gusted to 35 mph across portions of North Texas during the night and caused some blowing dust in the Midland area.

Early morning temperatures were in the 20s in the Panhandle and northern portions of the South Plains and in the 30s and 40s over the rest of the state behind the cold front and in the 50s and 60s in areas ahead of the front. Extremes ranged from 20 at Amarillo to 70 at Houston.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 44 at Fort Worth, 55 at Waco, 59 at Austin, 68 at San Antonio, 68 at both Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 41 at San Angelo, 29 at Lubbock, 31 at Midland and 38 at El Paso.

Houston begins school-based shelters

HOUSTON (AP) — The state's largest school district tonight will open its doors to homeless students in what may be the nation's first school-based shelters offering beds, showers and hot meals, officials said.

The program was approved after school principals reported increasing signs of Houston students living on the streets.

"We've had teachers discovering students sleeping in areas around schools, storing clothes under houses in the neighborhood and some who are asking for help," Houston schools spokesman Larry Yawn said.

Volunteers from within the school system and other social agencies will staff the shelters, which officials hope may lead to more permanent assistance for the homeless youths seeking help in a familiar place.

The Red Cross has donated 75 beds and blankets for tonight's opening of the Houston district's Schoolhouse Shelters program, although some officials question whether homeless students will risk making an appearance.

"We're going to have to wait on a day-by-day basis to see just how extensive the program is," Superintendent Joan Raymond said. "Happiness for me would be if there isn't a single child, but if there is one child the program must continue."

Lydia Ely, assistant director of the National Coalition for the Homeless in Washington D.C., said she has "never heard of anything remotely like" the Houston school-based shelters.

School officials say one goal of the program is to learn just how serious the homeless problem is among students. And child welfare agencies are hoping to learn whether the students have been abused or abandoned.

"At this point, it is a first step. We don't know how long it will be operated. One of the reasons we're doing it is to get a better understanding of the numbers involved," Yawn said, adding that the Schoolhouse Shelters program is not meant to compete with existing agencies and programs.

"They may be more trusting of school and be willing to go to a place where they have some familiarity," he said. "We think this is a positive way of getting clientele to the programs that can assist them."

The program will serve only students enrolled in the Houston Independent School District, among the nation's 10 largest districts with about 190,000 students.

School security officers will staff the shelters to guard against drugs and weapons, and Yawn said handheld metal detectors will be used at the school entrance. Students entering the shelters, operated from 5:30 p.m. until 7 a.m., will have to prove they are enrolled before entering.

Local youth agencies say they support the plan, although questions linger about its effectiveness.

"In a lot of respects, this is the first step in a long process of trying to find a solution," said Deana Harris of Houston's Covenant House, which provides emergency shelter for youths.

"We're taking this kind of wait-and-see approach because we're real interested in what kind of information we'll get back," Ms. Harris said. "We certainly have seen circumstances where a high school-age child was living in a one-parent family and the parent ... left the child alone in an apartment."

Judy Hay, a spokeswoman for Harris County Children's Protective Services, said the Schoolhouse Shelters may help document whether there is a true problem with homeless children in Houston.

"For years, the assumption has been that children on the streets of Houston are either runaways or have gotten involved in drugs and that they are choosing not to use the shelters," Ms. Hay said.

"There are vacancies in shelters right now," Ms. Hay said. "It's going to be interesting to find out what these principals have been seeing.

Reagan reruns good news during his farewell speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's handing the nation over to the "good hands" of George Bush, advising his successor to keep a wary eye on the Soviet Union and warning against "an erosion of the American spirit."

In a folksy Oval Office speech bidding adieu to the nation, Reagan boasted Wednesday of his accomplishments and ignored many of the difficulties that arose during his eight years in office.

"We meant to change a nation, and instead, we changed a world," he said.

Yet Reagan also admitted that his self-styled conservative revolution left many things unchanged, and he asked his followers to stick around and help his successor.

"If we're to finish the job, Reagan's Regiments will have to become the Bush Brigades," Reagan said. "Soon he'll be the chief, and he'll need you every bit as much as I did."

The president said he was leaving office with the central message of his political life strengthened — that an unfettered economy, a strong defense and a free citizenry forged a nation "respected in the world, and looked to for leadership."

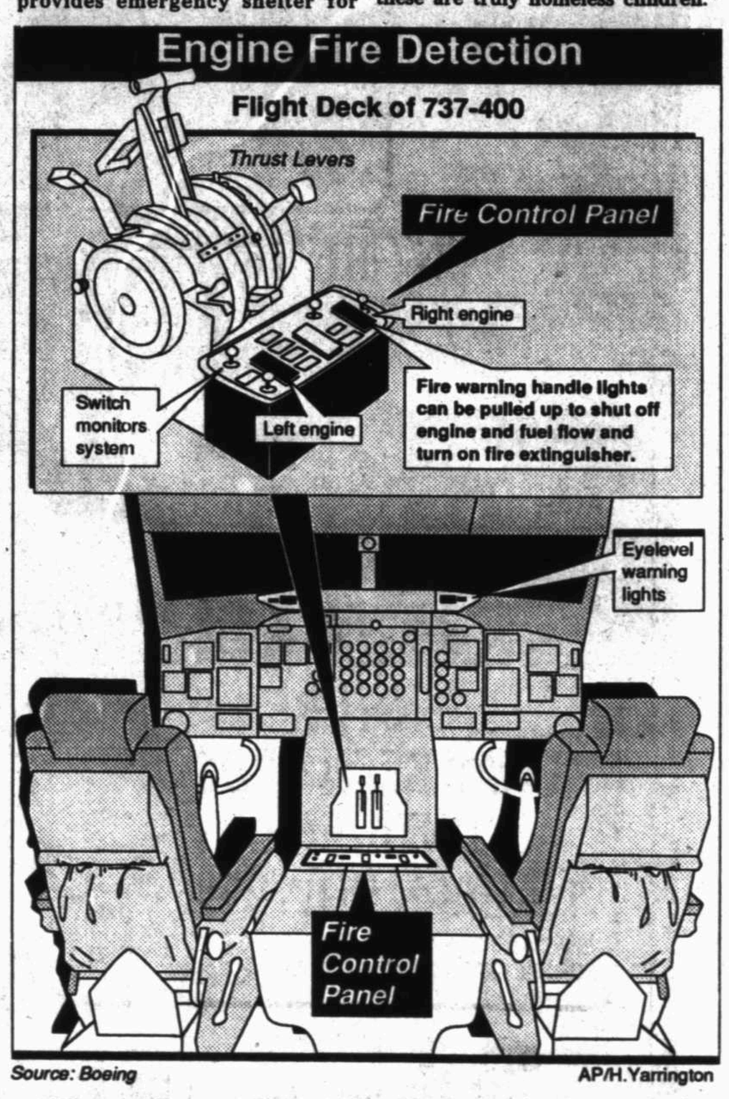

"Democracy, the profoundly good, is also the profoundly productive," he said. "Because we are a great nation, our challenges seem complex. It will always be this way. But as long as we remember our first principles and believe in ourselves, the future will always be ours."

The president and his wife Nancy were scheduled to receive a farewell accolade today from the Department of Defense, which arranged an elaborate ceremony featuring fly-overs and military bands at Andrews Air Force Base. Every four-star general and admiral in uniform was invited to attend.

Reagan addressed the nation from his Oval Office desk, his left hand in a splint and swathed in bandages from weekend surgery on a finger.

Speaking nine days before his retirement to California, Reagan called his departure "sweet sorrow." But he also said he looks forward to a renewal of personal freedom, contending a modern president must live "somewhat apart. You spend a lot of time going by too fast in a car someone else is driving."

Another regret, Reagan said, was his failure to tame the nation's deficit. But that merited only a paragraph in the roughly 21-minute speech. "I've been talking a great deal about that lately, but tonight isn't for arguments and I'm going to hold my tongue," he said.

BUSH

Watkins, who was a nuclear submarine commander before becoming chief of naval operations, is considered an authority on nuclear warfare.

Other contenders for the energy job were identified by Bush transition sources as former defense secretary Harold Brown and former Sen. Daniel J. Evans, R-Wash. Another contender, former Louisiana Rep. Henson Moore, was told he was no longer being considered, transition sources said Wednesday.

Along with Bennett, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and Texas industrialist Ross Perot had been mentioned previously as prospective drug czars.

Today's gathering of top officials in the incoming administration was designed to "give the president-elect and his senior staff the opportunity to share how they see the first week of the administration," said Bush spokeswoman Alixe Glen.

Ms. Glen also said Bush will sign an executive order immediately after he is sworn in next week setting up a panel to review ethics for government appointees.

The advisory commission will be co-chaired by Griffin Bell, the former attorney general in the Carter administration, and Malcolm Wilkey, a senior judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals here, she said.

On Wednesday, Bush defended his decision to attend Japanese Emperor Hirohito's funeral next month, saying he was "doing what's right."

The decision has been criticized by veterans and others who resent Hirohito's role in World War II.

Also Wednesday, Roger B. Porter, a Harvard University government and business professor, was announced as Bush's chief domestic policy adviser.

Porter, 42, was a White House adviser in President Reagan's first term and also worked as an assistant to former President Ford. He is a professor of business and government at Harvard.

Other announcements included:

■ Stephen M. Studdert, a former Bush campaign aide and the director of Bush's inaugural committee, as assistant to the president for special activities and initiatives.

■ Richard Breeden, a Washington lawyer and former vice presidential aide, as assistant for issues analysis.

■ John P. Schmitz as deputy counsel, the same job he has held in Bush's vice presidential office.

■ B. Jay Cooper, Stephen Hart and Ms. Glen, as deputy press secretaries. Cooper has been a deputy press secretary in the Reagan White House, while Hart was Bush's vice presidential spokesman and Ms. Glen served in a similar capacity in Bush's transition office.

AIRLINES

Martin said he was not aware of any previous incorrect wiring problems in 737s. He said there was one instance of improper instruments connections on a 747 jumbo jet, but the airline discovered the problem and repaired it without any mishap.

As a precaution, Boeing also is checking its procedures for testing 737 wiring, Martin said, "just to verify they're doing what we expect them to be doing."

British officials said Wednesday it was too early to conclude what caused the crash and they were still examining the possibility that both engines failed. A statement from the British Transport Department said, however, that the airliner's left engine caught fire and the right engine was shut down, and that pilot Kevin Hunt had told ground control the fire was in the right engine.

This led to the speculation that crossed wires might have caused warning lights to mislead Hunt into shutting down the right instead of the left engine. He could not see the engines from the cockpit. Hunt, who was injured in the crash, was interviewed by investigators Wednesday, but they did not disclose what he told them.

Fred Farrar, another FAA spokesman, said airlines flying the 737-300s are Aloha, America West, American, Continental, Delta, Orion, Piedmont, Southwest, United and U.S. Air. Piedmont is the only airlines using 737-400s with the CFM56 engines.

The U.S. inspections will cover fire warning systems and vibration monitoring circuitry in the aircraft, Farrar said.

He said there have been "very, very isolated incidents" of cross-wiring of warning systems in U.S. aircraft but none has led to an accident.

PARKING

Sherrod, like Baressi, has found a lot of the students are lured to the area by friends who no longer are in school or who previously attended Lee.

Last week, Czech met with about 65 homeowners. In a memo to City Manager Fred Poe, Czech said students were "creating hazards, unsafe conditions and a great deal of inconvenience," for the residents.

Czech offered two solutions to the problem — make parking by permit only or bar it all together.

Council reportedly is leaning to the latter solution, in order to force the district to build a new parking lot across from the main campus on Neely Street.

But Baressi was a bit lukewarm to that idea. "First, we don't own all the land across from the school, although we're in the process of buying the other lots." He also said MISD has other immediate priorities to address from building new classrooms to making teacher salaries more competitive.

"We're not ignorant of the problem and we're certainly not callus of their (residents) needs," said Baressi.

The volunteer goes to the public school and spends time alone reading with the child. Partners "stick together" all year, Mrs. Green added.

"We want to see that children find out reading is not bad," Mrs. Faught added of the program.

To help parents integrate reading into a family lifestyle, Mrs. Green advocates parents giving children a summer reading list, reading the newspaper or a book at night so children will imitate them, taking time to discuss stories they've read with their children and turning the television off for at least a part of the night.

"And comic books are OK...if that's all he's interested in.

"At least he's reading," she added.

SURVIVORS

One of the six survivors, Aikaz Akopyan, had medical training and administered massages to the others to relieve the pain of their injuries, Tass said. The first reports said one of the men, Karin Sarkissyan, had a broken arm, but there were no immediate details on their others' injuries.

"On the day of the earthquake, I asked five neighbors to help me carry two heavy jars to the basement," Akopyan was quoted as telling Tass. "Just then, we suddenly heard a terrible roar. The walls began to collapse. I thought a war had started."

Akopyan, 50, said they never had to worry about food and water because the basement was used to store tins of vegetables, fruits and pickles.

"It's true, we conserved the food in every possible way. But we never doubted for a minute that we would be found and released," he was quoted as saying.

ghetto — (noun) Although the United States is one of the richest countries in the world, there are many "ghettos" in America's industrial centers. A "ghetto" is a part of the city where members of a minority or cultural group live, especially because of social, legal, or economic pressure. People who live in a "ghetto" are often poor, disadvantaged, and are unable to find adequately paying jobs. As a result, they have a difficult time affording housing, clothing or food. "Ghetto" is an Italian word.

System checks on aircraft similar to 737s finished; Probe continues

LONDON (AP) — British airlines today completed checks on fire-alarm wiring on aircraft similar to the crashed Boeing 737, and investigators tried to determine why the jet's undamaged right engine was shut down when its left engine was on fire.

The airlines, meanwhile, began engine inspections ordered on Boeing 737-300s and 737-400s, as well as Airbus A320 aircraft with similar U.S.-French engines.

In Washington Wednesday, government aviation officials also ordered inspections of 300 Boeing 737s for possible cross-wiring of engine warning systems, to be completed within three days.

The Civil Aviation Authority's order to verify that engine monitoring systems correctly indicate right and left prompted speculation by aviation experts that a malfunctioning fire alarm system could have misled the flight crew of the British Midland Airways Boeing 737-400 jet.

Freddie Yetman, technical secretary of the British Airline Pilots Association, said this showed that investigators must have suspicions about the circuits. "It points to a possibly spurious warning being given to the flight deck," he said.

Investigators said the right engine and its warning systems had to be examined minutely and detailed evidence taken from the pilot and co-pilot before the reason for the shutdown would be known.

British Midland, British Airways, Air Europe and Monarch airlines reported today that their 737-300s had passed the examinations on their alarm systems. British Midland, Dan-Air and Air UK Leisure also completed tests of the alarms on their 737-400 aircraft.

The new Boeing 737-400, flying only on the fire-damaged left engine, crashed on the embankment of England's main north-south M1 highway about a half mile from East Midlands Airport where it was trying to make an emergency landing Sunday night. Forty-four people were killed and 82 injured.

Both engines were removed from the crash scene this morning.

The Times of London reported today that investigators believe the disaster began shortly after takeoff from Heathrow Airport with the failure of the No. 3 bearing in the left engine, which created vibration and intense heat.

As the captain throttled back on the damaged engine to prepare for an emergency landing, The Times said the vibration would have ceased and thus disguised the possibility that the wrong engine had been turned off.

AP Laserphoto

The cockpit section of the crashed British Midland Airways Boeing 737 lies on a transporter on the M1 motorway at Kegworth, England, Thursday for its journey to the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough for further investigation into the cause of the crash.

The Times said investigators believe the No. 3 bearing, just behind the engine's high-pressure compressor, broke down completely as the aircraft made its final approach, leaving the 737 without power.

The newspaper said investigators believe faulty wiring led to a false warning that the right engine, not the left, was on fire. However, it said the plugs which attach the warning circuits to cockpit levers are designed to prevent right and left from being accidentally swapped, and there was no indication how a false warning could have been given.

A Transport Department spokesman today refused to confirm or deny the newspaper's report.

Hunt

Pilot Kevin Hunt, whose back was broken in the crash, was questioned for 45 minutes by investigators Wednesday as U.S. media and Britain's tabloids blamed him for shutting down the wrong engine on Flight BD92.

The Air Line Pilots Association said there wasn't "a shred of evidence" for such speculation and British Midland Chairman Michael Bishop denounced the "rush to judgment" without all the facts.

The Department of Transport's Air Accidents Investigation Branch issued a statement Wednesday saying "evidence obtained early in the investigation indicated that both the left and right engines might have suffered a related failure" and that possibility was still being examined.

It confirmed the left engine caught fire while the right engine "revealed no evidence of fire as was reported by the crew in their radio transmissions." The left engine was undergoing an urgent and detailed examination to determine what caused the fire, it said.

The Air Accidents Investigation Branch made two safety recommendations that were approved hours later by the Civil Aviation Authority:

- More frequent engine inspections be required on 37 Boeing 737-300 and 737-400 airplanes in Britain with U.S.-French CFM56 engines as well as four Airbus A320 planes which have similar engines.
- The fire-overheat and vibration monitoring circuitry on the engines of Boeing 737-400s and Boeing 737-300s be examined to make sure they correctly indicate right and left.

The Civil Aviation Authority ordered the circuitry checks on all the planes be carried out before they can fly again.

Israeli planes hit Abu Nidal bases in Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today rocketed bases of Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal outside this southern port for the second time in 13 hours and police reported an undetermined number of casualties.

Two Israeli jets roared in at 10:05 a.m. to attack camps belonging to Abu Nidal's Fatah-Revolutionary Council in Majdalyoun Valley, four miles east of Sidon.

Israeli military authorities said the bases served as a planning and staging areas for terrorist attacks.

The Fatah-Revolutionary Council, an extremist PLO splinter group, has been blamed for terrorist attacks against Israel and Western European countries, most notably the Rome and Vienna airport massacres of December 1985.

A police spokesman said the two Israeli jets in today's raid fired four rockets "in a few seconds and flew away west toward the Mediterranean." The spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing rules, said smoke billowed from the valley.

Fatah guerrillas at first turned away ambulances dispatched from Sidon, claiming there were no casualties.

But the police spokesman said the ambulances later were allowed into Majdalyoun Valley and returned with sirens wailing. He said they took an undisclosed number of casualties to a Fatah clinic in the Druse-controlled Chouf mountains northeast of Sidon.

Germany admits firms linked to Libyan plant

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The government today said West German companies or individuals may have helped build a suspected chemical arms plant in Libya and that it is checking for any violations of export laws.

The issue has aggravated normally warm relations between the United States and West German.

"The federal government has indications of the possible participation of German companies or persons at this plant in Libya," chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost said in a statement.

"West German authorities are intensively pursuing these leads," Ost said without providing details.

He said the government is checking documents held by the Customs Service to decide if it should prosecute violations of export law that may have occurred.

Earlier today, government officials said indications that West German companies helped build and outfit the plant had embarrassed the government and damaged the nation's image.

"There is no question these allegations have caused serious damage to West Germany's international prestige," said a high-ranking government official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The government is in an extremely embarrassing and difficult position," said the official, referring to developments that forced Chancellor Helmut Kohl to reverse statements that there was no evidence of involvement by West German companies in the affair.

Earlier today, authorities conceded unofficially they had found "indications" that at least two West German companies played major roles in supplying equipment for the plant, and a shipper also implicated in the affair was arrested in Belgium on Wednesday night.

Libya's ambassador to the United Nations, Ali Treiki, said today on "CBS This Morning" that West Germans "did help us, not only in this plant, in other plants also.

"We have a vast cooperation with West Germany and certainly some companies participated in this pharmaceutical plant," Treiki said.

The Libyan leader, Col. Moammar Gadhafi, says the factory, 40 miles south of Tripoli, is for the production of pharmaceuticals, not chemical weapons.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher conceded in an interview with the ARD television network that "there are a number of indications that evidently point in this direction" of West German involvement in the plant.

Federal officials confirmed a criminal investigation has begun against a now-defunct Frankfurt company — IBI Engineering — and that investigators had seized company documents.

Officials also confirmed that the documents linked another company, Imhausen-Chemie of Lahr, to the construction project, backing claims made by the United States last month.

A source with the Belgian Justice Ministry reported today that Jozef Gedopt, director-general of Cross Link of Antwerp, was taken into custody and charged with forging shipping documents for goods sent to Libya.

Under West German law, the Economics Ministry must approve export licenses for arms, hazardous substances or components that can be used to produce them. There is also a ban on export of high technology to "sensitive areas."

Soviet Union imposes 'special' administration on disputed region

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government's highest executive body today imposed a "special form of administration" on the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region while keeping it within the Azerbaijani republic, Tass said.

The decision by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet was another step by the government aimed at defusing tensions over the mostly Armenian enclave, which has been the focus of a violent struggle between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

The dispute between Armenia, which wants to annex the area, and neighboring Azerbaijan has led to more than 60 deaths in almost a year of unrest. About 200,000 refugees have streamed across the border.

Military law and a strict curfew were imposed in many parts of the two republics in November to quell ethnic violence.

Tass said the decision today was made at a meeting of the Presidium convened by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Soviets to screen some foreigners for AIDS virus

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says it will try to maintain its minuscule AIDS rate by screening foreigners for the deadly virus, even forcing mandatory tests of some visitors who cannot provide proper medical proof.

Foreigners who want to stay in the country for three months or more will be subject to testing for the disease beginning next month, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said.

"Here, there cannot be any discrimination," Gerasimov said. "We conduct tests of our own people and besides, statistics show the Soviet Union is sharply lagging behind other countries, say the United States, in the number of ill people (with AIDS). And we just don't want to catch up."

The Soviets once regarded AIDS as a disease spawned by Western sexual depravity and drug use. One Soviet newspaper's account had even claimed the virus was the result of a U.S. biological warfare experiment gone haywire.

Gerasimov said the regulations were introduced to supplement a 1987 decree of the Soviet Council of Ministers.

That decree made it a crime to knowingly spread AIDS, punishable by up to eight years' imprisonment, and said anyone in the Soviet Union could be forced to take a test to determine whether they were carriers.

According to Gerasimov, the new rules go into effect Feb. 1. Summarizing them at a news briefing Wednesday, he said: "Foreigners coming into the Soviet Union for over three months, if they don't have certificates which would be mutually accepted by agreement, should be screened."

As outlined by Gerasimov, the new regulations on testing for AIDS antibodies appear to exempt short-term tourists but to apply to all foreigners — diplomats, students, business people and journalists — who live in the Soviet Union.

As of late 1988, Gerasimov said, AIDS tests of 17 million people in the Soviet Union had turned up 112 Soviets who carry the virus, as opposed to 334 foreigners residing in the country.

Eight people have the disease, five foreigners and three Soviets, he said.

Gerasimov said a traveler who tests AIDS-positive may be asked to leave the country.

"People who try to avoid medical examination or treatment may be expelled from the Soviet Union, following a prosecutor's sanction," he said.

Soviet doctors customarily use hypodermic needles that are then boiled to sterilize them for re-use, but Gerasimov told one inquiring foreign reporter: "Don't worry, we'll do our best so that you will have single-use needles."

Stephen Walker, U.S. vice consul in Moscow, said Gerasimov's announcement was the first indication he'd had from Soviet officials that U.S. residents in Moscow would have to prove they were AIDS-free.

The U.S. community in Moscow numbers about 800, Walker said.

Grenade kills peasant at Salvadoran refugee camp

PANCHIMILAMA, El Salvador (AP) — A fragmentation grenade tossed into a settlement of civil war refugees killed a peasant and injured five other people, including two church workers from the United States and Canada.

Witnesses Wednesday blamed the army for the Tuesday night attack. An army spokesman denied military involvement.

In a separate incident, the military arrested a human rights activist sociology professor from Hunter College in New York and a Salvadoran human rights activist, the El Salvador Human Rights Commission said Wednesday.

Jose Sixto Montoya, 35, died at the scene of the grenade attack. The injured were evacuated to the Central Diagnostic Hospital in San Salvador, the capital, about 22 miles away. They were carried out of the isolated coffee-growing area in hammocks.

Deborah Cohen, 26, of New York, and Evan Fox Decent, 21, of Canada, both Lutheran Church workers, suffered shrapnel wounds.

"I don't know what happened," Ms. Cohen told journalists in Spanish as she was being evacuated. "We were talking when I heard a noise and saw a flash. I have shrapnel in my arms and legs. My eyes are very bad. I can barely see."

Red Cross workers said Decent was in serious condition.

The two lived in Panchimilama, aiding 350 refugees.

PARIS (AP) — An anti-chemical weapons declaration, intentionally crafted in diluted form to satisfy its 149 signatory nations, should help accelerate talks on a ban of toxic arms, officials say.

But the United States and Soviet Union, the only two countries that admit they possess chemical arms, said Wednesday that the document produced by the five-day conference had fallen short of their expectations.

The chief U.S. delegate, William F. Burns, said Washington would have preferred that explicit language be put into the declaration to include sanctions against users of poison gas, nerve gas and other toxic chemical arms.

"If the United States had written this statement, which we did not, it might have been stronger. This is a consensus document," said Burns, who heads the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Iran, a victim of poison gas in its eight-year war with Iraq, was among several states that voiced reservations after the declaration's unanimous endorsement.

Iraq's use of chemical weapons against Iran and Iraq's Kurdish minority — graphic pictures of peasants killed in Iranian villages heightened concerns last year — provided a somber backdrop for the conference, which was formally proposed by President Reagan at the United Nations in September.

Iran succeeded in getting a reference to "recent violations" of the protocol in the declaration. But its delegation said it had hoped for a categorical condemnation of past use of toxic weapons.

Host France said the conference would give life to languishing negotiations in Geneva seeking a verifiable ban on chemical arms.

The non-binding declaration reaffirms the 1925 Geneva Protocol, which prohibits the use of chemical weapons, and urges negotiators in Geneva to "redouble" efforts to ban the use, production and stocking of chemical arms.

The six-point declaration affirms the U.N. role in investigating chemical weapons use and called for a strengthening of existing procedures at the United Nations in dealing with such use — a reference to enacting sanctions.

Signers condemned the use of chemical arms, pledging not to use them.

Unanimous approval of the final declaration was "tantamount to saying the whole international community has taken a posture" against chemical weapons, said Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France, who presided over the conference.

"This unanimity will accelerate...work underway in Geneva," he said.

But the breadth of the declaration, aimed at appeasing all parties, allowed for a broad interpretation that clearly reflected five days of haggling.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Jailed union boss says guns to defend members

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Jailed oil union boss Joaquin Hernandez Galicia told investigators the 200 automatic weapons found inside his northeastern Mexico home after a shootout with police were smuggled in from the United States by a former mayor and friend, officials said.

Hernandez Galicia, leader of the powerful Mexican Oil Workers Union, said that he asked former Reynosa mayor Jose Cruz Contreras to deliver the arms "to defend his union members, given the existing situation in the country," according to a statement released by the federal attorney general's office late Wednesday.

Two of Hernandez Galicia's bodyguards reported their boss ordered the 1983 slaying of a mayor who headed a union local, authorities said.

Hernandez Galicia told questioners that the 200 Uzi submachine guns were secretly delivered on Dec. 10 and that he planned to distribute some of them to other oil union leaders, the statement said.

Family deports itself

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario (AP) — A man who spent 20 years trying to leave Cuba unwittingly deported himself and his family from the United States for what he thought would be a 20-minute excursion to the Canadian side of Niagara Falls.

Three weeks after they left their Miami home on the trip, Carlos Fajardo, his wife and two adopted children remain stranded at a motel in Canada.

They set out Dec. 20 on a Christmas quest for snow, which his adopted children, Yoandys, 12, and Yordalys, 9, had never seen.

Even though the family lived in the United States for four years, immigration officials will not allow them back because they are illegal aliens.

"We came for 20 minutes," Fajardo said. "No one told us we could not go back."

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., has joined the Fajardos' cause by asking officials to let the family back.

Hirohito's image challenged

LONDON (AP) — U.S. prosecutors pressured Japan's wartime prime minister, Gen. Hideki Tojo, into changing testimony at his trial to avoid incriminating Emperor Hirohito in war crimes, a television documentary claims.

The British Broadcasting Corp. documentary, details of which were released Wednesday by its maker Edward Behr, said the U.S. prosecutors worked with the emperor's aides to find a way to avoid putting Hirohito on trial.

The documentary challenges Hirohito's image as a peaceful man forced to go along with his generals' plans and alleges among other things that he:

■ Must have known about the massacre of at least 20,000 Chinese at Nanking in 1937 because he received regular detailed reports from the China front.

■ Knew more than a month in advance of Japanese plans to attack the U.S. navy at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

Behr is a Paris-based journalist. His biography of China's last monarch was used for the award-winning film "The Last Emperor."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Know your own mind, but do not try to force your views on others. Big changes are featured in your business and personal life. You get a chance to register great financial growth in the fall. Mergers and new technology could help a partnership succeed. Have faith in a good friend and adviser. This person will not let you down now or ever! Discuss property, insurance and investments with well-known experts.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

One of the more important developments of the recent Fall North American Championships was the formation of an organization for young bridge players. In this respect the American Contract Bridge League has trailed far behind the rest of the world. The Europeans stage regular junior international matches and they have a European Junior Championship. The 1988 Alpwater award for the best-played hand by a junior was won by a 21-year-old Scot, Alistair MacDonald.

At this vulnerability, an opening bid of four spades was an accurate description of his holding. His hand was long on offense, especially since he had a fair second suit, and short on defense.

West's lead of the seven of clubs was obviously from a short suit. Paying little heed to the warning signals, most declarers won in hand and tried to draw trumps. The defenders in the East seat were able to win the ace and then return their lowest club when giving partner a club ruff. Heeding the suit preference signal, West underled the ace of diamonds, allowing East to win the king and give his partner another ruff for down one.

MacDonald saw the threat. He won the first club trick in dummy, cashed the ace of hearts and continued with the jack. When East could not cover, declarer cut the defenders' communications by discarding his diamond loser. When East eventually gained the lead with the ace of trumps he was still able to give his partner a club ruff, but he had no entry back to his hand to allow the defense to score a second ruff. With the help of what is known in the trade as a "Scissors Coup," declarer was able to hold his losers to three—a trump, a heart and a club ruff.

There will be no trumping this ACE.

This distinction is difficult to top. It's the Tenth Annual ACE Awards, which recognizes excellence in cable programming. See who wins and who comes close on WTBS.

'Doonesbury' comic strip fails to suit most people, Trump ventures to say

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Billionaire entrepreneur Donald Trump says he can't understand what cartoonist Garry Trudeau is getting at when he depicts Trump in comic strips.

"You know, I did well in school, but for the life of me, I still can't understand what 'Doonesbury' is all about," Trump said.

"They say Trudeau is somewhat clever," Trump said in an interview this week. "But I'd venture to say that most people are like me. They don't comprehend what Trudeau's trying to achieve with 'Doonesbury,' either."

Trump had kinder words for Trudeau's wife, NBC-TV "Today" show co-anchor Jane Pauley. "Personally, I think his wife has a lot more talent than he does," Trump said. "She's interviewed me on the 'Today' show a couple of times and she was very nice," Trump said.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Brent Aden, a 12-year-old autistic boy, was so elated after seeing the movie "Rain Man" that he wrote a letter to actor Dustin Hoffman, saying the film changed his view of himself and of autism.

Hoffman, who portrays an autistic savant in the movie, returned the favor and called the Fresno boy Monday, talking with Brent and his family for 20 minutes.

Autism affects brain chemistry and disrupts communication.

Until Brent saw the film, he hated his autism and refused to even say the word, according to his mother, Cathy Aden.

Mrs. Aden said her son "laughed in all the right places" and "blossomed" after seeing the film.

Brent's letter to Hoffman said in part: "I feel good now. People say autism is OK. I'm free now. This is good, Rain Man."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First lady-to-be Barbara Bush drew kind comments from Mr. Blackwell, but Marilyn Quayle, wife of the vice president-elect, made his Worst-Dressed Women of 1988 list.

"Barbara Bush is going to bring back vanilla ice cream and apple pie. It is going to be pure mid-America," Blackwell said Wednesday as he unveiled his 29th annual Worst-Dressed list.

Britain's Duchess of York and former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos topped the list by Blackwell, a designer and self-appointed fashion arbiter whose real name is Richard Sylvan Selzer.

Third place went to actress Debra Winger, followed by pop star-actress Madonna; Mrs. Quayle, and Shirley Temple Black. Three celebrity offspring tied for seventh place: Lisa Marie Presley, Carrie Hamilton and Katie Wagner. Jamie Lee Curtis was next, followed by Jodie Foster and funny lady Roseanne Barr.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Tom Selleck says he's drawing big bucks for his movie roles but that he'd play some parts without the pay.

"I'd do a walk-on in a Woody Allen movie," said the star of the former "Magnum, P.I." detective series. "But you don't want to call up a person and seem to be pandering by saying, 'Please let me into one of your movies.'"

"People say, 'We could never get Tom for this nice little movie, because he's too expensive,'" Selleck said in an interview in February's McCall's magazine.

• • •

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Actor Dennis Quaid will do a bit of singing in a movie as he portrays rock 'n' roller Jerry Lee Lewis, but Lewis will perform most of his music, the producer says.

Adam Fields' film crews wrapped up work in Memphis on Wednesday and prepared to leave for London, the other main locale of the movie "Great Balls of Fire," which is based on Lewis' early recording career. The movie is to be released in July.

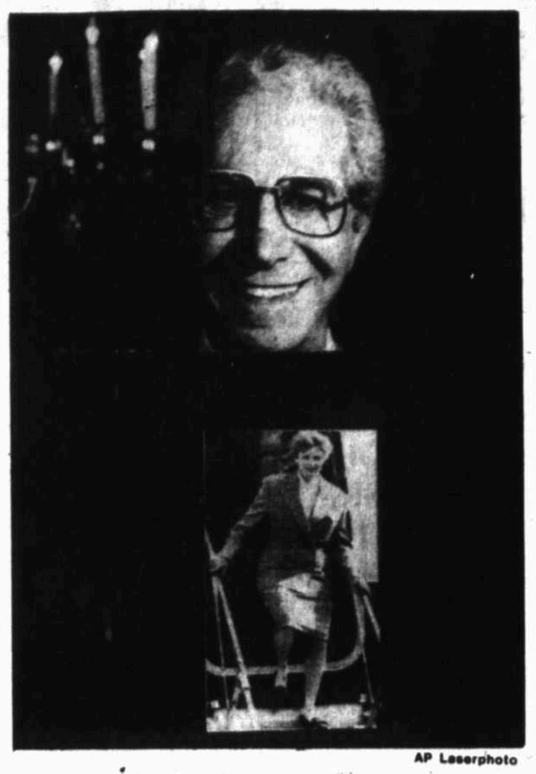

Lewis was forced to leave England during a tour when he was 23 because of a public outcry over his then-recent marriage to his 13-year-old cousin, Myra. They were divorced in 1971. Lewis has been married six times.

• • •

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Former President Jose Luis Bustamante, who was credited with pioneering the 200-mile limit at sea, died Wednesday. He was 93.

Bustamante, a politically independent lawyer, became president in 1945 and headed a centrist coalition government until 1948, when his administration was toppled in a military coup. In 1947, he decreed Peruvian sovereignty extended for 200 miles out to sea.

Bustamante also was Peru's ambassador to Uruguay and Bolivia, a past president of the United Nations International Court of Justice in The Hague, Netherlands, and in 1978 mediated a peaceful end to a border conflict between El Salvador and Honduras.

Military salutes Reagan by land, air

AP Laserphoto

President Reagan is presented his Cabinet Room chair by Secretary of State George Shultz at the White House Wednesday. Samuel Pierce, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, left, and Health and Human Services Secretary Otis Bowen look on.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is staging an unusual "farewell review" for President and Mrs. Reagan today, and the military services have been told to absorb the undisclosed cost of the pageant.

"The tribute is being presented to show the president that we appreciate his strong support for the mission of the Department of Defense," the Pentagon said in a statement about the event. "The secretary of defense, Frank Carlucci, recommended and approved the salute."

The farewell ceremony, to be staged at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington in suburban Maryland, will be include fly-overs of 17 aircraft from all four services plus the Coast Guard and the static display of 19 different aircraft and weapons on the ground.

The Marine Band will provide the music and the Joint Service Honor Guard will march for the president and first lady. Every four-star general and admiral in uniform has been invited to attend, along with about 1,400 VIPs and government officials.

Despite such elaborate preparations, the Pentagon said Wednesday it could not estimate the cost of the farewell "at this time" and would not count the expense of the aircraft performances in any event.

"Since the fly-by is being conducted using normal operational flying training hours, no additional costs will be incurred by the services," the Pentagon said.

"We do not have that information (on total cost) for you at this time," it said. "Funding for the salute will be absorbed by each of the services. Each service also is responsible for funding (the attendance of) their respective general and flag officers."

The Defense Department also acknowledged Wednesday it was not a normal practice to stage such a farewell for an outgoing president.

"It has not been done in recent history," the Pentagon said, but refusing to define "recent history."

Asked if a first lady had been so honored in the past, the Pentagon replied: "It has not been done in recent history."

The Pentagon previously had announced that Reagan would be presented with an award from each military service during the affair.

The department said the four Army helicopters, four Marine Corps attack jets, four Navy fighter jets, four Air Force fighter jets and one Coast Guard helicopter would conduct the fly-overs.

On the ground, the services will also display attack helicopters, rocket launchers, an armored personnel carrier and an M-1A1 tank from the Army; three aircraft from the Navy; a "Rigid Raiding Craft" and other aircraft and weapons from the Marines; three aircraft from the Air Force, including a B-1B bomber; three helicopters from the Coast Guard; and one of the E-4B aerial command post planes that is always standing by in case of war.

The Pentagon said the ceremony would be staged at a new hangar and support complex built to accommodate the next Air Force One.

AFL-CIO endorses Brown for chairmanship

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Ronald H. Brown, a Washington lawyer who was the Rev. Jesse Jackson's convention manager, received a major boost on Wednesday in his campaign to be chairman of the Democratic Party when he was endorsed by the AFL-CIO.

The federation, which stayed out of Democratic Party politics in the presidential primaries last year, will urge its members on the Democratic National Committee to support Brown, who also worked as an adviser in Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' presidential campaign, said Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO.

Brown's staff stopped just short of saying the endorsement would put Brown over the top in his effort to become the party's first black chairman.

The decision to back Brown was made by Kirkland and 16 of the federation's union presidents, including those from the teachers' and steel, communications, auto and garment workers' unions, after meeting with the five contenders for the chairmanship.

About 10 percent of the 404 members of the Democratic National Committee are also members of AFL-CIO unions. But the federation also carries great clout within the party because of its important role in financing both national and state Democratic Party operations.

"The endorsement represents more more than the votes of the delegates," said Brown's campaign manager, Carl Wagner. "It represents the support of a major force in American politics."

The Democratic National Committee will choose its new chairman Feb. 9 to succeed Paul Kirk Jr.

Many Democrats say they recognize Brown's long service in the party's vineyards. He has been an assistant to both Kirk and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

But they also fear, as Sen. John B. Breaux of Louisiana put it, that Brown's selection will send "the wrong message" at a time when some Democrats believe the party must pull to the right to attract white, Southern voters.

Among Brown's opponents are Richard Weiner, the Michigan Democratic chairman, and three former representatives, James R. Jones of Oklahoma, Michael D. Barnes of Maryland and James V. Stanton of Ohio.

Lobby accused of violating election laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of prominent Americans is filing a complaint today against 54 pro-Israel lobbying and political action committees charging them with violating federal election laws.

Among the complainants are James E. Akins, formerly ambassador to Saudi Arabia; George Ball, who served as undersecretary of state in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations; Paul Findley, a former Illinois congressman who contends he was defeated in 1982 because of a campaign by the pro-Israeli lobby; and Retired Adm. Robert J. Hanks, who headed the Navy's Middle East Task Force.

The petition to the Federal Election Commission focuses primarily on the activities of an influential pro-Israel lobby called the American Israel Public Affairs Committee. It contends AIPAC violated the law by failing to register as a political action committee even though it allegedly targets political candidates for support and contributes to their campaigns.

The plaintiffs are demanding that AIPAC be forced to register as a PAC bound by laws of disclosure of its activities — a move that would greatly limit its effectiveness as a behind-the-scenes lobbyist.

Spokesmen for the FEC and AIPAC say no such complaint has been filed against the group in its 15-year existence.

The plaintiffs have long contended that AIPAC exercises undue influence over legislators and administration officials, skewing U.S. policy in favor of Israel and against Arab states.

"The work of AIPAC is so effective that it creates a broad level of intimidation which is very harmful for our foreign policy interests," Findley said. Excerpts from his 1985 book "They Dare To Speak Out," which chronicles his defeat, are included among the exhibits.

The complaint, supported by more than 100 pages of exhibits, also charges that 53 pro-Israel PACs made excessive contributions to candidates in the 1984, 1986 and 1988 election cycles.

Most of the other documents are newspaper clippings about AIPAC, as well as notes made by one or more unidentified people who attended several AIPAC policy conferences.

"The complaint is based almost exclusively upon press clippings and supposed quotations," according to a statement issued by AIPAC. "AIPAC members proudly participate in the political process and do so within the law. We are confident the FEC will expeditiously concur."

Citing a law which bars discussion of cases before the FEC, AIPAC officials declined to further discuss the complaint.

The exhibits also include two memoranda written by former AIPAC officials, one of which urges a staff member to ensure that pro-Israel PACs around the country channel contributions to certain Senate candidates.

The complaint cites instances of AIPAC officials offering their help to candidates and suggesting grass-roots campaigns to defeat others, including Rhode Island Republican John Chafee. Chafee nonetheless retained his Senate seat in the 1988 elections, defeating Lt. Governor Richard Licht who was allegedly favored by AIPAC.

The plaintiffs contend that AIPAC has also assisted candidates by providing them with lists of people to contact for direct mail fund raising. "Such lists have value in themselves, and providing them to a candidate or committee constitutes the making of a contribution," according to the 34-page complaint.

The complainants also claim that all the pro-Israel PACs are affiliated through their common causes and by the fact that their officials are also active in AIPAC. Therefore, their joint contributions are in excess of the $10,000 contribution allowed each PAC and are in violation of the law, the petition said.

Bradley files for fifth term as LA mayor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley launched his campaign for an unprecedented fifth term Wednesday, the first candidate to file in a field that was thinned by the unexpected withdrawal of his strongest potential challenger.

The 71-year-old Democrat was first in line when the city clerk's office opened Wednesday, the first day candidates could declare their intent to run in the April 11 election.

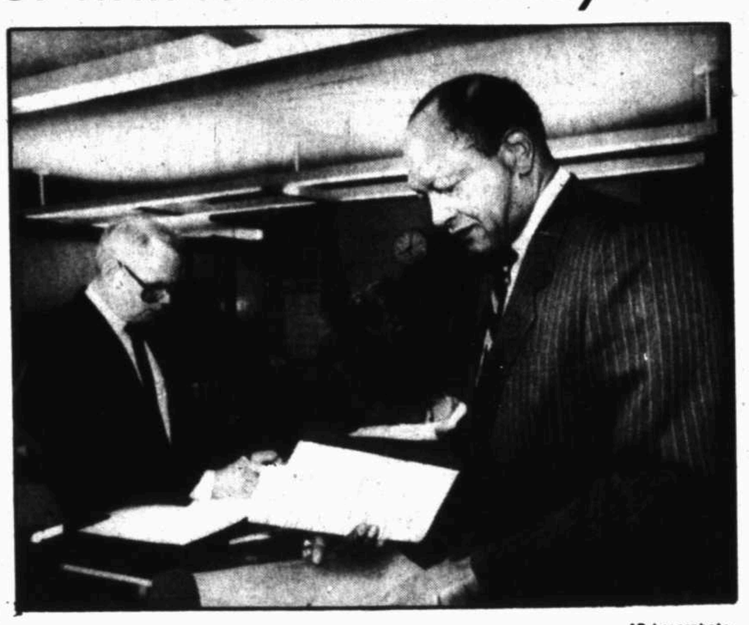

"I'm looking forward to a very active campaign. I won't overlook anyone or anything in the city," Bradley promised. "Anyone else who gets in this race faces an uphill battle."

Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky, a liberal Democrat who blames Bradley for allowing overly rapid growth in the nation's second-largest city, planned to challenge him in the nonpartisan race. But Yaroslavsky unexpectedly took himself out of contention Thursday.

Citing a poll and the advice of friends, Yaroslavsky said Bradley has such a rapport with the public that voters don't blame him for gang violence, traffic, smog and other problems plaguing Los Angeles.

Another Democratic councilman, Nate Holden, said this week he was considering a bid if he can raise $400,000 in contributions by noon Saturday, the close of the filing period. He said he has already raised $75,000. Bradley has $2 million in his campaign chest.

Holden alleged that Bradley, who is black, has broken faith with the black voters who, in alliance with wealthier Jewish voters, form the core of his support. Holden called the race "winnable."

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley files his candidacy papers Wednesday morning at City Hall as City Clerk Carl Berry, left, looks on.

Bradley, a former police lieutenant and City Council member, won his first four-year term as mayor in 1973 but has been unable to project his popularity statewide. He twice ran for governor, losing to George Deukmejian in 1982 and 1986.

Joel Britton, who identified himself as a process operator for Chevron oil, also filed for the mayor's race Wednesday. He said he was running because more attention needs to be paid to business interests. Britton did not identify his political party.

Mother charged in dismemberment of son

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A woman accused of drowning her 2-month-old son, dismembering his body and dumping the remains in two creeks reportedly told police she couldn't cope "because he was always crying," authorities said.

Tanya Dacri, 20, and her husband, Phillip, were being held today pending an arraignment, authorities said.

Police divers searching murky Neshaminy Creek in suburban Croydon on Wednesday found five green plastic bags containing Zachary Dacri's head, hands and feet, said police Capt. Robert Grasso.

A search for the torso in Pohopoco Creek near the Lehigh River in Carbon County about 80 miles to the northwest was called off at dusk, Grasso said. The search was to resume today.

Mrs. Dacri is charged with murder, false reports, hindering apprehension, tampering with evidence, obstruction of justice and conspiracy in tampering with a corpse, police said. If convicted, she could be sentenced to death.

Her husband is charged with obstruction of justice, tampering with evidence, aiding in a crime and conspiracy in tampering with a corpse, police said. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to 22 years in prison, Assistant District Barbara Christie said.

Grasso said police believe Dacri, 22, did not kill his son but helped dispose of the body.

Mrs. Dacri initially told police her baby was kidnapped at a mall Tuesday, authorities said.

She later told investigators she drowned Zachary in a bathtub Saturday, cut the corpse up with a knife Sunday and stuffed the remains into plastic trash bags, The Philadelphia Inquirer reported today, quoting unidentified police sources.

Mrs. Dacri said that she and her husband drove to bridges crossing the creeks and threw the bags in, the sources said. She took officers to both locations to show them where to search, the sources said.

Police searching a trash container outside the Dacris' apartment building in northeast Philadelphia found a knife believed to have been the one used to dismember Zachary, the newspaper said.

Mrs. Dacri told police she had tried to cope with raising her son and year-old daughter, Christine, but couldn't "because he was always crying," the Inquirer said. The daughter has been placed with a grandparent, police said.

A homicide detective declined to comment on the newspaper report early today, saying no supervisor with the authorization to release such information was on duty.

Police became suspicious shortly after Mrs. Dacri reported that two men grabbed Zachary and her purse at a Philadelphia shopping mall Tuesday, said police Capt. Richard DeLise.

She told police the kidnappers drove off in a sedan with no license plate and a third person behind the wheel, and said there were no witnesses in what is normally a busy area.

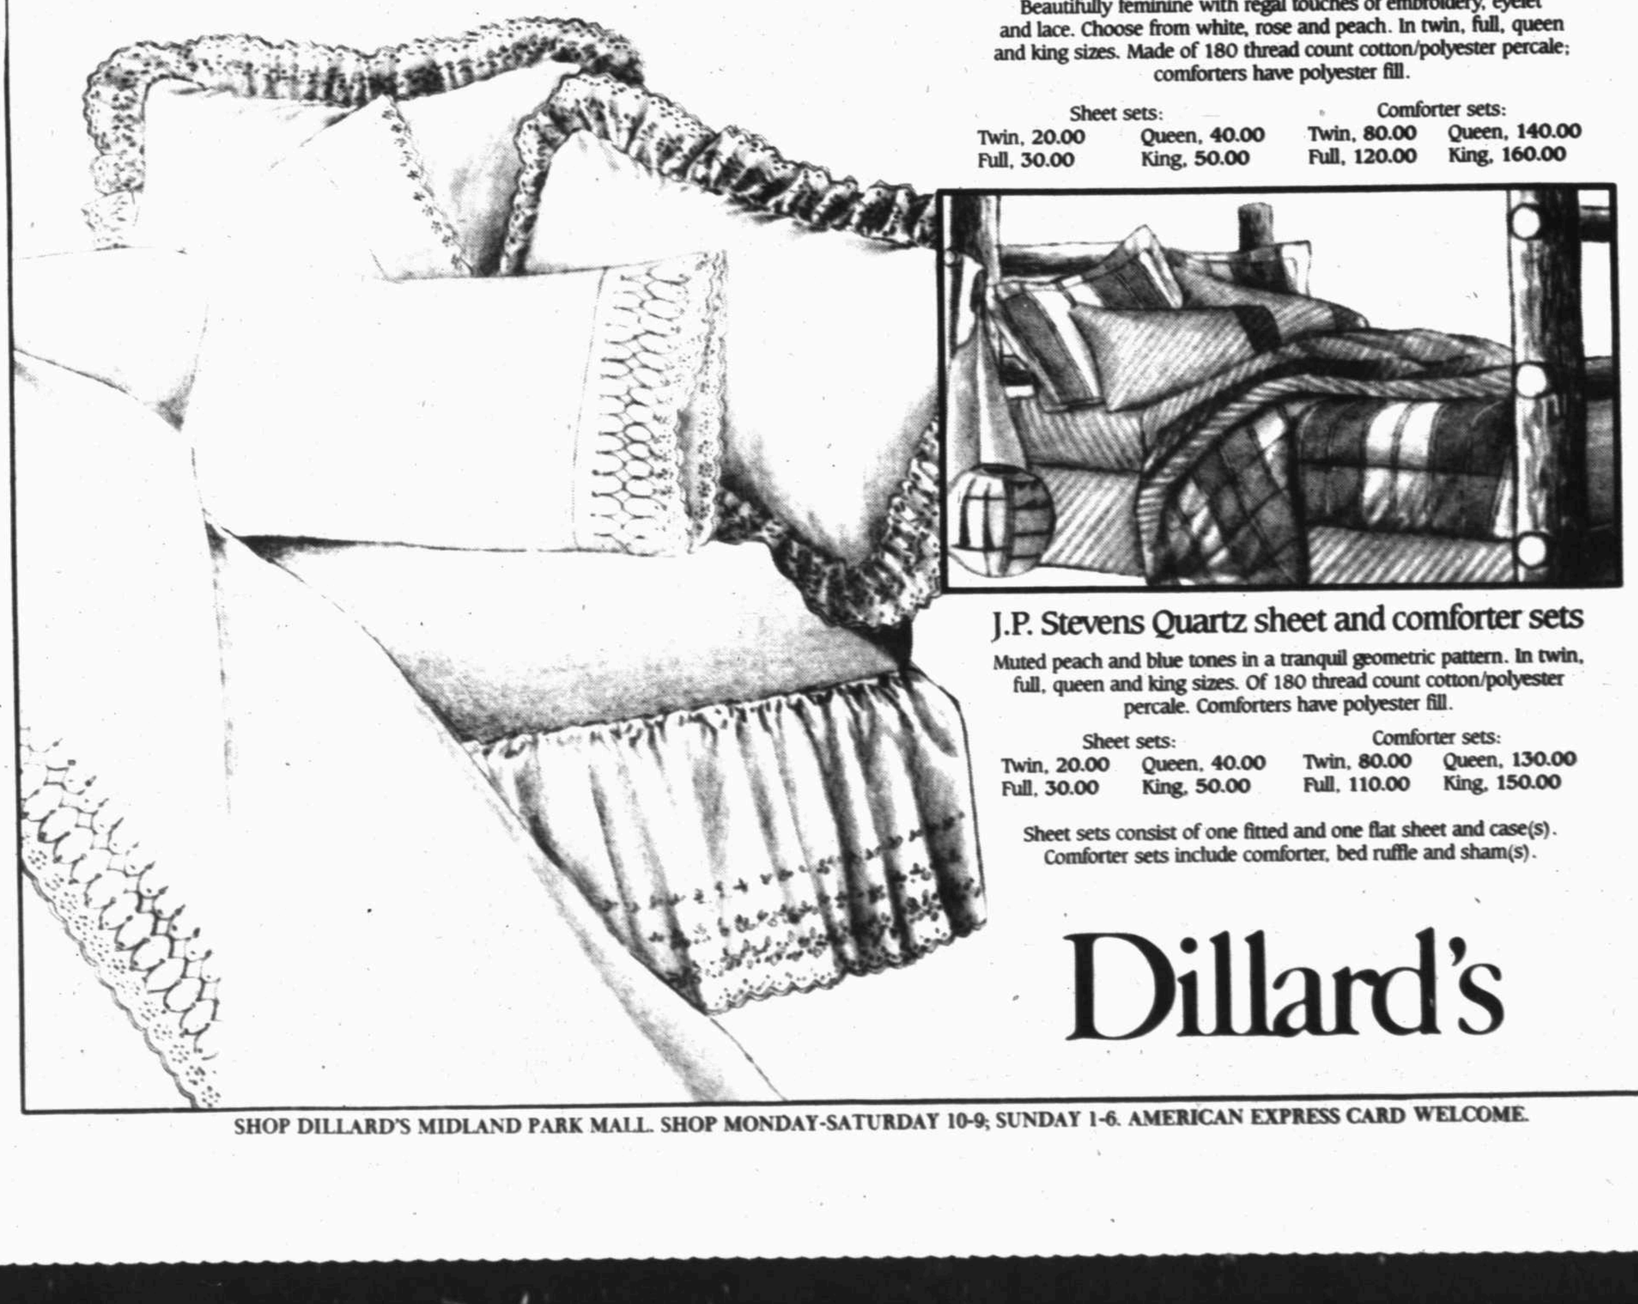

Police said the Dacris lost custody of Christine for eight months last year following allegations of child abuse. They underwent counseling before the child was returned to them in September, authorities said.

Contras announce peace plan

MIAMI (AP) — Leaders of the Nicaraguan Contras, boasting a revised peace proposal and a more flexible attitude, urged the Sandinistas on Wednesday to begin another round of peace talks.

The Nicaraguan Resistance, an umbrella group of the rebels, has proposed opening negotiations with the Sandinistas on Jan. 25 or some other date agreed upon in Washington.

But so far there has been no official response from the Nicaraguan government, according to Adolfo Calero, a director of the Resistance.

"We are being more flexible in this new position," Calero said Wednesday in a news conference at the group's Miami headquarters.

A major element of the Contras' revised position is to extend the deadline for compliance by the Sandinistas from 70 days to 120 days, culminating in the rebels giving up their arms and being reintegrated into the political and social fabric of Nicaragua.

"The Sandinistas have made promise after promise and never comply," said another Contra leader, Wilfredo Montalvan. "If the Sandinistas maintain their intransigence, the world will take notice that they have no desire to implement democratization and we would have no choice but to seek more military aid."

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega announced in his year-end speech in Managua that he would unilaterally extend a cease-fire for another month and that Nicaragua was ready to "look for ways to coexist with the enemies of the revolution." But he rejected peace talks with the Contras.

Although both sides agreed in March to end offensive operations, there has been no progress to resolve the 7-year-old conflict. Thousands of rebels remain at bases along the Honduran border with Nicaragua.

Calero said the latest Contra proposal will be sent to Central American presidents and foreign ministers, who can perhaps pressure the Sandinistas to agree to peace talks with the rebels.

Another element of the Contra proposal was to seek an independent judiciary, with professionals to be "named in accordance to their capacity," rather than demand the outright removal of current Supreme Court justices, Calero said. Calero did not elaborate further on the revised proposal, nor was a copy of it provided to reporters.

The Nicaraguan Resistance also denounced the assassination last week of Commander "Aureliano," a guerrilla physician killed last week on the outskirts of Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

Asked about the flood of Nicaraguan refugees entering the United States, with some 100,000 to 125,000 in the Miami area, Calero said the Resistance has asked U.S. officials to treat the refugees humanely and not deport them.

Papers withheld to protect leaders, newspaper says

MIAMI (AP) — To avoid identifying several Latin American government officials as working for the Central Intelligence Agency, the Reagan administration withheld certain documents from the trial of Lt. Col. Oliver North, The Miami Herald reported today.

Quoting unidentified sources close to the Iran-Contra inquiry, the newspaper says the administration feared that any discussion of the documents in court might disrupt U.S. intelligence in several countries.

One source said some of the withheld documents were declassified during congressional investigations of the Iran-Contra affair, but were later reclassified in an effort to limit discussion of the incidents they describe, the Herald said.

Special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh asked that the two major charges against North be dismissed after the Reagan administration refused to allow certain documents to be used in North's trial. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell is expected to act on Walsh's request this week.

The newspaper said some of its sources are closely tied to North's defense team while others either worked closely with North in the past or participated in the 1987 congressional investigation into the Iran-Contra affair.

One of the sources is a senior administration official who advises the State Department and the White House on Central American security policy, the newspaper said.

Countries listed in the documents, the sources said, include Costa Rica, El Salvador, and Venezuela where — respectively — North's resupply network aiding the Nicaraguan Contra rebels built an airstrip, controlled part of an air base and attempted to buy military aircraft.

North's activities in these countries were central to Walsh's legal strategy to show that the former National Security Council aide conspired to defraud the United States and steal government property by using the profits from arms sales to Iran to purchase supplies for the Contras.

Those are the charges Walsh says he must withdraw.

In each case, the sources said, Walsh has documentary evidence, including invoices, receipts and other legal papers, showing transactions involving Iran arms sales profits and Contra supplies.

Moscow's 'coup' may benefit U.S.

President Reagan has approved, with the assent of President-elect George Bush, U.S. participation in a human rights conference in Moscow in 1991, one in a series meant to secure implementation of human rights provisions in the 1985 Helsinki accords on European security. Critics of the decision say Moscow hasn't gone far enough yet to deserve a U.S. seal of approval of such a meeting, and by extension of the Kremlin's human rights record, and that Moscow can't be trusted to keep its promises once the meeting is over.

Those concerns are understandable, given the appalling history of Soviet violations of basic rights. But there are good reasons why Reagan's decision was right. One is the rapid human rights progress the Soviets have made since Mikhail Gorbachev came to power in 1985, and especially during the past year. Hundreds of political prisoners have been released; the number of Jews, Armenians, ethnic Germans and others allowed to emigrate soared during 1988 and may double this year; jamming of Western radio broadcasts has ended; and Soviet authorities say they may relax emigration restrictions further and liberalize the law to strengthen the rights of those who remain.

Perhaps most important, the approach of the 1991 meeting will focus world attention on the Kremlin's implementation of such promises. Reagan properly qualified his approval of U.S. participation by warning that a Soviet breach of faith could lead to a reversal of the U.S. decision.

Finally, Washington's assent clears the way for winding up a two-year review of the Helsinki process that had bogged down over Soviet insistence on Western agreement to its hosting the 1991 meeting. Completing that review before Jan. 20, which now seems likely, will put a final feather in the caps of Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz, whom some accuse of submitting to Soviet blackmail in return for a final foreign policy coup.

Whether that charge is valid or not, the agreement also opens the way for an early start, perhaps within a month or two, of long-awaited East-West talks aimed at drastic reductions in conventional military forces in Europe, with the greatest cuts by far expected on the Soviet side. If that happens, and if Moscow continues to improve its human rights record, the propaganda points it scores by staging the 1991 conference seem a modest price for the West to pay.

Another View:

North slips charges

Whatever happens from here on, the dismissal of the main charges against Oliver North leaves the Iran-Contra case with more questions than answers.

The most important of those questions have to do with the president's knowledge of, and involvement in, the illegal diversion of funds from the sale of weapons to Iran to the support of the armed Nicaraguan opposition. That's an issue that has more than academic consequences. Both the law and constitutional checks were violated, and there is not likely now to be either redress in a court of law or resolution of North's contention that he was innocent because he and his collaborators acted under orders. The charges left for the court — lying to Congress, the petty diversion of funds for personal use — are more likely to look like harassment than prosecution for heinous offenses against democracy.

There is no evidence that the administration's unwillingness to make available the classified documents that North's lawyers demanded for his defense was based on any intention to sabotage that trial. But neither is there doubt that it had little interest in having this prosecution go forward. On the contrary, given the clear potential for embarrassment, it had considerable interest in aborting it.

The heart of the difficulty here lies in the nature of the special prosecutor law itself. Under the law, the government acts with two wills — the will not to investigate and prosecute one of its own, on the one hand, and the special prosecutor's decision to pursue a case, provided the facts warrant it, on the other. And while there are often conflicts within the administration about whether a proposed prosecution — say of an alleged spy — is worth the disclosure of classified data that it may require, those conflicts are generally resolved within an administration acting with a single will.

And yet the case also is unique. It's not likely that the country will soon again have a president as disconnected from his own government, and thus as plausibly ignorant, as Ronald Reagan seemed to be in this case. And while other presidents may be subject to the "gray mail" — the threat that national security secrets and presidential complicity will be exposed if the case goes forward — with which North's lawyers threatened this government, there are remedies for presidents ill-served or illegally served by their subordinates. Unfortunately, in this case, Reagan acted as if North had served him loyally. And for that Reagan himself has to take the blame. The special prosecutor law is a reasonable remedy for a government that refuses to investigate and prosecute its own malfeasants. But it cannot guarantee that the president will be either honest or competent.

Kremlin shake-up means big changes

WASHINGTON — From scraps of intelligence, it is now possible to piece together what is happening inside the Kremlin. It is a story of high drama that could bring sweeping changes to the Soviet Union and shape the future of the world.

Jack Anderson

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has completed a series of bold moves that give him control of the Kremlin. But the Soviet system remains in the glacierlike grip of a ponderous bureaucracy. Past leaders have chipped away at the glacier with an ice pick; Gorbachev is using every weapon in his political arsenal to break it up.

According to a Central Intelligence Agency analysis, he is waging a revolution against his own bureaucracy; he wants to slash its size, power and perks. Through glasnost, Gorbachev has unleashed the Soviet media against the bureaucracy. The press now dares to criticize the commissars and expose their excesses.

Through perestroika, Gorbachev has also taken the first steps to restructure the bureaucracy. This has won the support of the populace, but it has also stimulated higher expectations than Gorbachev can now fulfill. He quickly needs economic improvements to keep the populace on his side. He began by lashing out at the incompetence of the Soviet economic system.

His closest associate in the Politburo, Alexander Yakovlev, has taken the lead. In language never before heard inside the Kremlin, Yakovlev has called for a market-oriented economy. It will take nothing less than the privatization of agriculture to meet Soviet food needs, he contended. The idea that a free market is incompatible with communism, he declared, is a lie.

He condemned the state-run economic system, which has been ruined by officials who put dogmas ahead of economics and promulgate decrees instead of incentives.

This produced a system, Yakovlev charged, that violates nature, defies logic and operates under false precepts. It will take drastic reforms, he said, to repair the economy. The alternative, he warned, will be continued economic decline and popular discontent.

Yakovlev's startling assault on the Soviet system has stirred resistance, couched in communist jargon, from hardliners. Their leading advocates are Politburo members Yegor Ligachev, whose power base has diminished, and Lev Zaikov, who has strong military ties.

They appear to speak for most of the entrenched party functionaries, who represent the most formidable opposition to Gorbachev's reforms. It is their power he is weakening, their control he is challenging, their cozy relationships he is threatening.

Their resistance is seldom open; the party bureaucrats remain invisible. But through Ligachev, Zaikov and other Kremlin hardliners, they register their protests. They have warned that glasnost and perestroika have weakened the Kremlin's leadership, encouraged dissidents and stirred unrest. By relaxing controls, the hardliners argue, the Kremlin could lose control.

Meanwhile, in the obscurity of the cubicle, the faceless bureaucrats have become largely immobile. They tend to express their opposition by disregarding orders and ignoring directives.

The czars, though they reduced a whole population to serfdom, where not able to subjugate their bureaucracy once it got established. It remains to be seen whether Mikhail Gorbachev can do any better.

ELDERLY IGNORED — Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., left office an angry man. In the last days of his term, Melcher gathered evidence which said that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission had ignored the complaints of many elderly workers who claimed they were being discriminated against on the job because of their age. Melcher, who chaired the Senate Committee on Aging, blames EEOC Director Clarence Thomas. In private letters, Melcher criticized Thomas for not standing up for elderly workers. Melcher says the statute of limitations expired on many complaints from the elderly before the EEOC lifted a pencil. The senator's anger peaked during the holidays when he discovered that an EEOC official who brought the problem to light had been reassigned from her job as a regional director to a backwater desk in the agency.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Iran-contra scandal continues to inflict personal and professional abuse on people who were innocent bystanders. The lastest victim is Charles Allen, the CIA official who was the first to warn his agency that the profits from the Iran arms sales were being diverted to the Nicaraguan resistance. In its frenzy to lay blame, the CIA reprimanded Allen for not being "fully cooperative" in the ensuing investigation of the scandal. He is now appealing the undeserved blot on his record.

Term papers should be kept in the family!

I receive a lot of interesting calls at my office. My favorite so far this year was from a mother who lives in Bethesda, Md.

"I wonder if you'd mind answering some questions on the U.S.-Soviet missile treaty?" she said.

Art Buchwald

"I would be happy to," I told her. "Why do you ask?"

"My son is home from college and he has to write a term paper on disarmament."

"I see. Why doesn't your son call me himself?"

"He's very busy. He needs to get his car tuned, and the only time he can see his girlfriend is when he comes home."

"Don't you think there is something wrong with a son asking his mother to do his term paper for him?"

"I don't mind," she replied. "There is so little he needs from me these days. Was it Reagan's idea or Gorbachev's to reduce the missiles in Europe?"

"Look, ma'am, I don't mind answering your questions, but if you do the work, your son isn't going to get anything out of it."

"Oh, yes, he will. If the paper is any good, they'll give him an A."

"Why not? We pay their tuition."

"The term paper itself isn't important — gathering the research for it is what helps make the scholar."

"Well, I'm sure my son would research the material if he could spare the time. He was never lazy when he lived at home."

"Whose idea was it for you to do this paper?"

"Both of us. He kept complaining that his entire vacation was being ruined because he had to look up facts about ICBMs. Since I didn't have any other commitments, I volunteered to help him. After all he is flesh and blood."

"But if you just give him all the information, he won't understand any more about disarmament than he does now."

"If he gets stuck, he can always call me. I always like to hear his voice."

I didn't know what to tell her. "Somehow I feel party to a crime," I said.

"Mrs. Lipkin always helped her son Milton with his papers, and now he works for the State Department. Will you please tell me everything that took place in Geneva before they reached an agreement?"

"That'll take a long time."

"I'm not going anywhere. My son is using my car."

"None whatsoever. We're very close."

"I'm sure you are. But I would still prefer to discuss disarmament with your son."

"What's the matter? Are you afraid that a woman can't understand it?"

"It's not that. What concerns me is if something I tell you about the missile treaty is wrong, your son would never forgive you."

"He has in the past," she told me. "Once I did a paper for him on Tolstoy. Are you going to help me or not?"

"Why are you so impatient?"

"He has to get the paper in by Monday, and my husband needs at least a day to type it for him on his computer."

'Mississippi Burning': Terrifying time, place

WASHINGTON — A black man who was young in 1964 emerged blinking from the bludgeoning administered by "Mississippi Burning" and wondered aloud, "Is this movie necessary?" An interesting word, "necessary."

George F. Will

It is optional, but good, to touch the sore of that summer when the three civil-rights workers were murdered. But it was not necessary to touch the truth the way this movie does.

The movie is winning awards and throwing off sparks that are kindling controversies. The most emotional criticism is unjust, but there is rough justice in that criticism. The movie plays fast and loose with facts for the frank political purpose of evoking visceral responses.

Angry critics say that blacks are reduced to the role of mere victims, appearing on screen only as sufferers, a background chorus to a melodrama of white FBI agents battling white conspirators. Such critics are complaining because the movie's makers did not choose to make a fundamentally different movie. The movie does not set out to tell the rounded story of "Freedom Summer" in Mississippi. The movie's subject is the cracking of one conspiracy. In that episode, blacks were largely bystanders.

But midway through "Mississippi Burning," the movie becomes a 1960s clean-up-this-town Western, with a dash of familiar male bonding and a large dollop of Dirty Harry intruding in the dust. The movie was made by people, many of them liberals, who believe that conservatism is boffo at the box office.

Liberalism, at least as defined by conservatism, is systematic impotence, well-meaning wooly-headedness that tries to overwhelm problems by piling on resources, and makes matters worse. FBI agent Ward is liberalism incarnate. He sends armies of blue-suited agents wading into swamps. By trying to interrogate a black man in public, at a segregated lunch counter, Ward gets the man beaten.

Ward's buddy (after some turbulent bonding) is agent Anderson, an Oliver North with a middle-aged man's mileage registered on his face. Anderson is a get-it-done, no-nonsense-about-due-process-please sort of fellow who operates beyond the Warren Court's wildest nightmares. He gets Ward to acquiesce in the use of violence, coercion, kidnapping, semi-seduction, entrapment and a few nicks with a razor to crack the case. It is a sign of the times that a movie made for the proclaimed purpose of raising society's consciousness, panders to conservative appetites, the satisfaction of which is considered commercially necessary.

The director, Alan Parker, says: "I'm trying to reach an entire generation who knows nothing of that historical event, to cause them to react to it viscerally, emotionally, because of the racism that's around them now. And that's enough of a reason, a justification, for the fictionalizing."

All drama is, in a sense, manipulative. But there are respectful and disrespectful ways of approaching an audience and a historical record. When the subject is real people and events — and nothing as distant as Richard III — it is neither necessary nor acceptable to tamper so much with the truth.

The three deaths moved history. The six-week hunt for the bodies became the hinge on which the nation's political will turned toward strong federal action. It is a story so dramatic that no embellishment should be thought necessary.

Charles Dickens was a "journalistic novelist." He wanted to inform as well as entertain, to improve the world while — by — depicting it. He exaggerated and caricatured to provoke reforming impulses. But "movie journalism" derived from real recent events owes the record more respect than "Mississippi Burning" shows.

Movies almost never miss an opportunity for missing an opportunity for fidelity and subtlety. However, Hollywood history can whet appetites for the real thing, and the real story of the 1964 murders is told in Seth Cagin and Philip Dray's book, "We Are Not Afraid." Reading it is a harrowing experience:

"Several black corpses were found in Mississippi by authorities searching for Goodman, Schwerner and Chaney....One of the saddest discoveries of the season was the body of a never-identified boy, about 14, wearing a CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) T-shirt."

That victim would have been about 40 today. His parents are probably living and remembering and wondering. There are so many such silent aches beneath the nation's scar tissue that it is respectful and kind to say: We remember the way it was. "Mississippi Burning" is broadly truthful about the terrifying tone of that time and place. Remembrance of that is necessary.

NATION IN BRIEF

Fake front page announces 'war'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Thousands of copies of a fake front page of The Arizona Daily Star declaring the United States at war in El Salvador were placed in the newspaper's vending machines throughout Tucson, authorities said.

Police were investigating Wednesday's hoax, and Executive Editor Steve Auslander said the morning newspaper would pursue a civil complaint alleging copyright violation against anyone caught.

Charges of misdemeanor theft of service and trespassing could be brought against anyone involved, said police Lt. Brice Fuller.

The mock front page contained a headline reading, "U.S. at war in El Salvador — 70,000 killed." Another headline stating, "Rebels seize initiative in El Salvador," ran above stories condemning Reagan administration policies toward the Central American country.

The mockup used type faces and design resembling those of the Star, but the phony front page was only about two-thirds the size of the real one.

Reversed order revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An enraged Nikita Khrushchev instructed Soviet ships to ignore President Kennedy's naval blockade during the Cuban missile crisis, but the order was reversed just hours before an inevitable confrontation, according to a new book.

James G. Blight and David A. Welch of Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government say that "if this order had held, war between the superpowers would probably have commenced at sea, shortly after 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, Oct. 24, 1962, several hundred miles off the coast of Cuba."

Anastas Mikoyan, then Soviet first deputy premier, was the catalyst for the reversal of Khrushchev's order, according to the authors. Mikoyan "preempted Khrushchev's order to run the blockade and ordered Soviet ships to stop just short of the quarantine line," they say.

The book, "On the Brink: Americans and Soviets Reexamine the Cuban Missile Crisis," is based largely on two 1987 conferences sponsored by Harvard — one that featured top Kennedy advisers and U.S. scholars and a second in which three Soviets joined the Americans.

According to newly revealed court papers in Cincinnati, the FBI has become involved in the investigation.

GE plant investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI and Pentagon investigators are reviewing admissions by General Electric that test records may have been falsified at a factory that made parts for military and commercial aircraft, according to court documents and federal officials.

The investigation centers on a check and drain valve for the F404 engine that powers the Navy's FA-18 fighter, GE spokesman Richard Kennedy said Wednesday.

The GE factory in question also makes an engine part used by the type of Boeing aircraft that crashed Sunday in Britain, killing 44 people, but federal and company officials said the part could not have caused the accident.

GE spokesman Richard Kennedy said Wednesday that the factory made a timer valve for the CFM56 engine used by the Boeing 737-400 as well as a check and drain valve for the F404 engine aboard the Navy's FA-18 fighter.

More refugees permitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will increase this fiscal year's quota of Soviet and Eastern European refugees by 5,500 by lowering the quota of Vietnamese refugees, many of whom have been unable to emigrate, a senior U.S. official says.

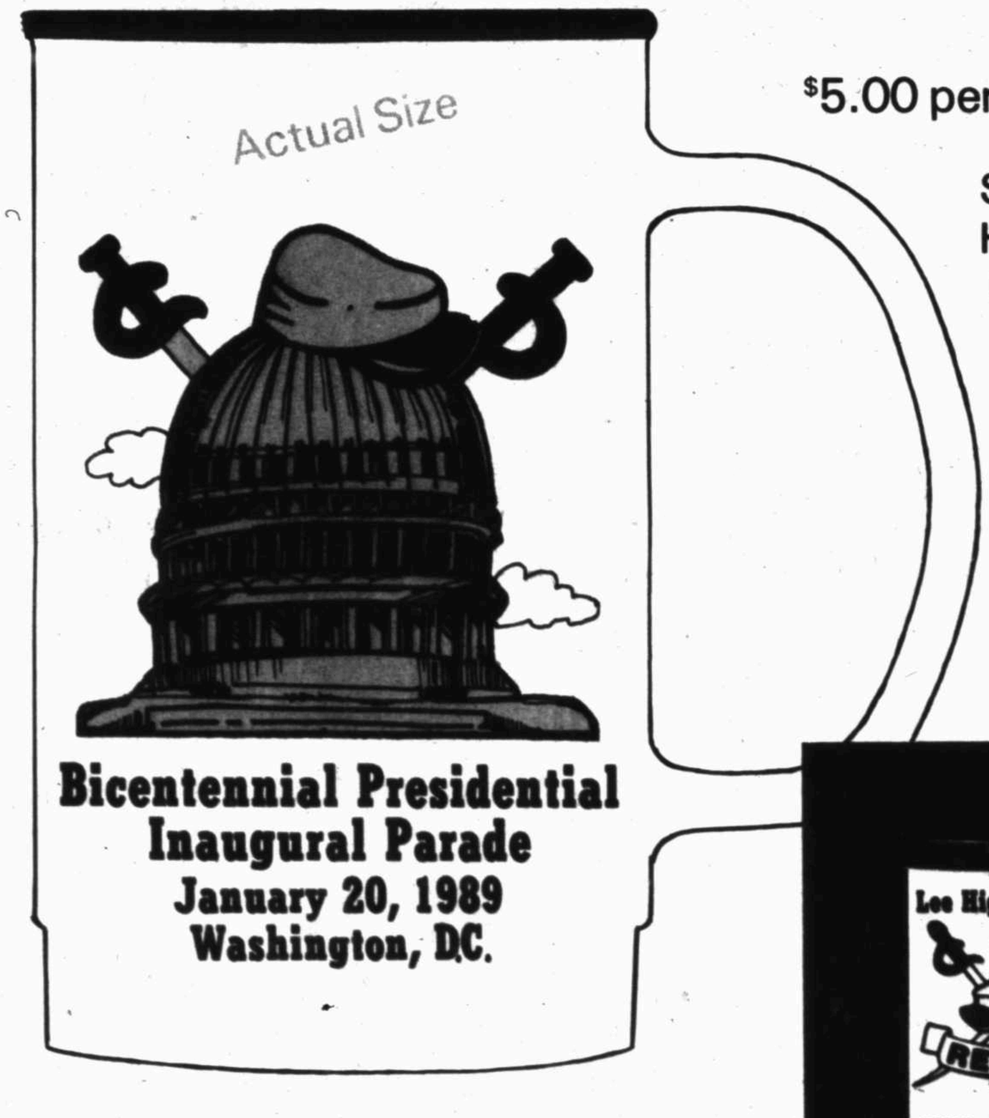

The decision brings to 30,000 the number of Soviets who will be permitted to enter this country. The added slots will be taken from the 25,000 ceiling for refugees from Vietnam, but the official said the president has considerable flexibility to alter the totals later on.

Thousands of Soviet refugees, many of them Jews, are backed up in Vienna and Rome, waiting for permission to come to the United States, and the quota for them to enter this country is full.

Many of the Vietnamese who were expected to come here this year have not been cleared by Hanoi authorities. A number of those Vietnamese are former political prisoners.

$1 million more required for giant telescope

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A huge new telescope planned for McDonald Observatory near Fort Davis could break records for size and creative economy if only builders can garner $1 million more in funding, the facility's director said this week.

Dr. Harlan J. Smith likes the term "creative simplicity" in referring to the design of the new window on the stars, whose construction costs are pegged at $6 million. The figure is far below the tens of millions that such equipment usually costs.

The director, on a fund-raising swing through Midland this week, said the University of Texas is building the new scope in conjunction with Penn State University, with each bearing $3 million of construction costs.

A dollar-for-dollar matching grant is helping the UT side, which already has raised $500,000, he said, indicating that the additional $1 million would complete UT's funding commitment.

The "fantastic economy" of the new telescope is the result of a myriad of basic and innovative decisions planners made in designing the new scope, Smith said.

For example, designers focused the intended use of the equipment on only the most important of modern astronomical research tasks: gathering enough light to generate a spectrogram of objects at the edge of the galaxy.

A spectrogram is a record of the light broken into elemental pieces. Analysis of a spectrogram can reveal such important scientific secrets as a star's rotational velocity or magnetic field, Smith said.

Other cost savings came in designing the telescope to rely on the Earth's rotation to bring objects into view instead of including a variety of sensitive machinery to manipulate the equipment.

According to Smith, the design of the telescope mirror also helps keep costs down. The large surface — about 35 feet in diameter — is made up of 85 smaller mirrors, each one meter in diameter.

Cutting a reflecting curve on each of the smaller mirrors is so simple that Penn State students are completing the task themselves "from ordinary Corning Pyrex glass," he said.

Craddick vice chairman of energy panel

By JIM CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — West Texas lawmakers got some choice committee assignments Wednesday as House and Senate leaders signaled their hope for quick action on some of the issues pressing the state.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, was named vice chairman of the House Energy Committee and kept his seat on the Ways and Means Committee while Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, scored seats on Higher Education and Appropriations committees.

House Speaker Gib Lewis surprised House members with the assignments Wednesday, the second day of the 71st session. Members usually wait a few weeks to find out their committee assignments, but Lewis said he wanted the 149 lawmakers to get to work right away.

Lewis said he stayed up the past five nights studying different committee scenarios, and he made changes up to the last minute.

Watkins, who will be chairman of budget and oversight on Higher Education, survived the cut on Appropriations as Lewis reduced the panel by five members, to 23.

Lewis said the budget-writing committee needed to be streamlined. "The problem there has been too many cooks in the kitchen."

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, will repeat as Appropriations Committee chairman.

Craddick said his assignments will help him look after two areas of local interest — the energy industry and taxes.

He also was elected chairman of the Republican caucus, which will monitor legislation and organize support for priority bills.

With 57 Republicans in the 150-member House, Craddick is not pushing to run the House on a partisan basis, he said, but he added the Republicans form the largest caucus in the House. "I just think it gives us a chance to be more positive and have some more input on the issues," he said.

Freshman Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, will serve on the Business and Commerce and Labor and Employment Relations committees.

In Senate committee assignments announced by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Wednesday, Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, whose 25th District includes Midland, remains chairman of the agriculture subcommittee of the Natural Resources Committee. He becomes chairman of Administration, which conducts housekeeping details for the Senate.

Sims remained on the Economic Development Committee and became a new member of the Finance Committee.

"I'm tickled to death," he said. "Of course, the Finance Committee is the most important because we spend the money."

Sims also is active in organizing the West Texas Coalition of legislators, which he hopes will meet every other week to discuss issues of common interest.

John Montford, D-Lubbock, whose 28th District includes Odessa, was named chairman of State Affairs. He also will serve on Finance, Natural Resources, including the subcommittee on water, and Administration.

Committee chairman in the House include: Agriculture, Dudley Harrison, D-Sanderson; Appropriations, Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield; Business and Commerce, Steven Wolens, D-Dallas; Calendars, Stan Schleuter, D-Killeen;

4-H livestock to be judged, auctioned

Livestock judges today and Friday will be scrutinizing steers, barrows and lambs exhibited by Midland County youngsters in the Midland County Exhibit Building east of Midland off U.S. Highway 80.

The judges will take note of the youngsters' control of the farm animals.

And come 1:15 p.m. Saturday, auctioneer Tommy Marricle of Snyder will be egging on the crowd to heighten their money bids for the approximately 120 premium calves, lambs and hogs shown by Midland County 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America (FFA) members.

"We are going to have an excellent show in quality not only in the steers but in the lambs and barrows," said Earnest Kiker, Texas Agricultural Extension Service for Midland County.

The boys and girls have raised, nurtured, managed and groomed the animals as 4-H Club and FFA projects in learning responsibility and money management.

Combest to explain why he opposed insurance bill

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — During a visit to the Northside Senior Citizen's Center this morning Republican Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock was expected to explain why he and 30 other members of Congress opposed recent passage of the Catastrophic Health Care Law.

In addition to opposing the health care bill, Combest also opposes the proposed bill that would give members of Congress as 50 percent pay increase.

Combest's opposition to the catastrophic health insurance legislation centers on his belief that "it does not provide an opportunity for most senior citizens" to benefit from the provisions, yet it imposes "all of the cost on them."

Combest says he and other representatives are "working hard to see if we can't completely scrap it by repealing it and go back to square one and start over."

The Lubbock congressman, whose district includes Ector County, says congressmen who supported the catastrophic health insurance bill "are now catching so much political heat that they're going to be anxious to do something about it."

Combest said he and the others who opposed the measure are "ready to do something about it when we get the support to do it."

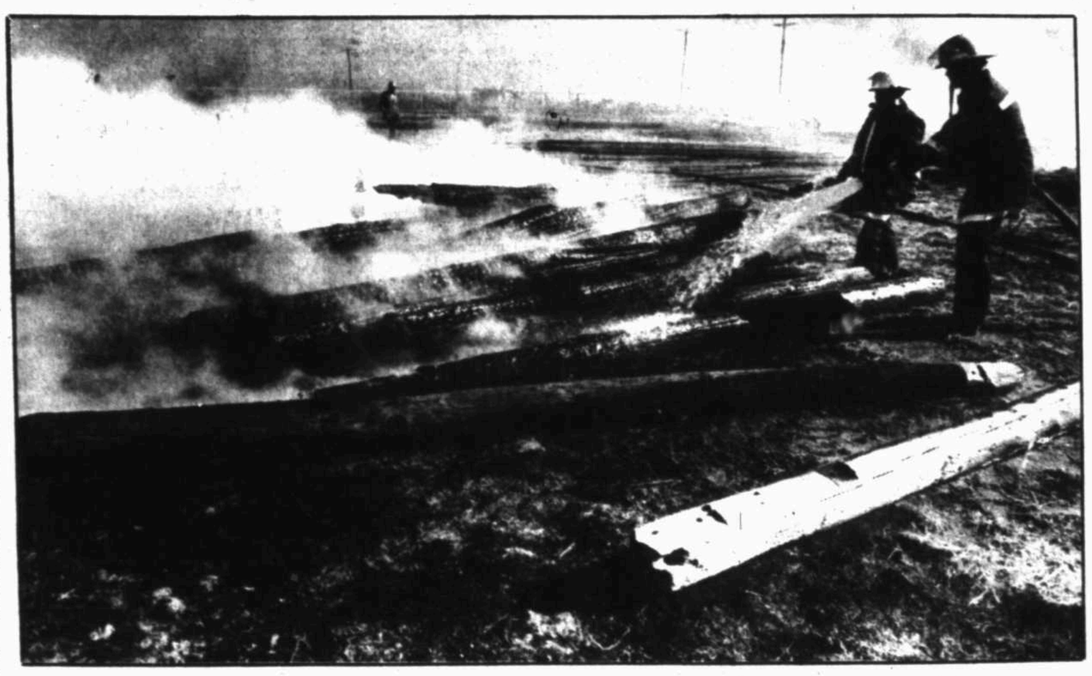

On the question of a 50 percent pay increase for members of Congress, Combest says every legislator "knew what the pay was when we ran."

He termed the pay raise proposal "absolutely ridiculous," especially at a time when we will be battling hard to reduce spending and get a handle on federal budget deficits.

Combest says what really upsets him about the proposal is that the leadership of the Democratically controlled House has said there won't even be a vote on the congressional pay raise proposal.

He says he and others who oppose the pay increase measure have submitted legislation that would require a roll call vote on the bill itself and all appropriations required to fund it.

Grass fires spread, cause some damage

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A rash of wind-fanned grass fires broke out in several areas of Midland County Wednesday, and according to reports the blazes caused no injuries but kept firefighters busy for hours.

The largest of the fires broke out just after 1 p.m. south of downtown, near County Road 115 just west of State Highway 349. A fire in a pasture, whipped by brisk westerly winds, spread to several fences, a motorboat, a trailer storage shed and pit before it was brought under control, according to reports.

The boat and shed were heavily damaged, and the blaze neared at least one residence before it was controlled. Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department assisted at least seven Midland Fire Department units, reports said.

Brotherly love not always evident in friends' banter

Todd

They just don't always act like it on Car Row — Wall Avenue — where both try to palm off cars on each other's customers.

The other day, Johnson, who sells cars, mostly Fords, for Doss Rogers, sauntered into Midland's Holiday Inn, where Dotson and his lovely wife, Miss June, were dining from the buffet table. It was coming up on noon.

"Fred and Miss June were eating with all of their friends," which, Johnson explained, was all by themselves.

That's generally the way Johnson eats, while he's reading the newspaper's sports section and bragging about his degree in "push-ups" from Sul Ross State University in mountainous Alpine. He's a former football running back and an ex-coach.

Dotson asked Johnson to join them for lunch about 11:30 a.m. Naturally, Dotson, who owns a car dealership, would pick up Johnson's $4.25 food tab.

Johnson declined the offer, he said, because his routine dictates that he eat two hours later — at 1:30 p.m., which he did.

"And when I rejected that deal," Johnson lamented, "he (Dotson) refused to reimburse me for the ticket which I paid for."

Weeping willows.

"It shows what kind of class he has," he growled at Dotson.

"Fred and I went to high school together in Midland," said Johnson. They were in the Class of 1955. "We didn't allow him on campus during the day. He went to night school. He was a heathen."

Dotson didn't argue.

"That's right," Dotson said. "He (Johnson) was the big ball player. He is what is known as a legend in his own mind. While they played football, I courted all of their lady friends since I wasn't smelly."

Johnson had something to say about that.

"He (Dotson) sees himself as God's gift to women, and the truth of it is that Miss June is the only woman who will put up with him. The only reason they married is that she was so young she didn't know any different."

"That's probably true," agreed Dotson.

"She finally gave him up for dogs," noted Johnson. Miss June heartily and ardently supports and defends the creatures.

But there's more to the story. The reason Dotson didn't pick up his friend's dinner tab was because Dotson's wife and conscience, Miss June, wouldn't allow it.

Johnson goofed up. While he was yakking with Dotson and Miss June, he just happened to mention that he had run over a dog while he was driving over on Wadley Avenue. It was accidental, of course. But he didn't stop to help the yelping and crippled creature.

And Johnson just happened to ask Miss June, "What should I have done?"

Miss June, who is not timid, told him. She is an unrelenting dog advocate and spokeswoman.

"He's supposed to stay with the dog until he takes his last breath and take him home and bury him — dog or cat," Miss June said.

Now, Johnson said he has tried to help hurt dogs before, but injured dogs "act like they are going to bite, since they are so hurt and scared." And he wasn't about to fool with the dog.

Now, after Miss June had got her fury aimed at Johnson, Dotson tried to assure her that his friend was just joking. "He's just mean enough to tell a story like that" to upset Miss June.

No, sir, said Johnson. He really did hit that dog.

"This is true," he said.

Miss June gave husband an order. "I told Fred, 'Don't ever buy Tommy any meals, because he ran over a dog and just left him there bleeding and dying on Jericho Road.' "

Dotson has learned to listen to Miss June.

Besides, Johnson just happened to mention that he didn't leave a tip after he had eaten in the restaurant.

"We can't associate with somebody who goes out and eats and doesn't leave a tip," Miss June said.

But she mourned Johnson's situation.

"Poor old Tommy doesn't ever have anybody to eat with him," Miss June said. "He's eats all by himself."

Fact is, Johnson seems to pride himself in his solo dining. He will point out to passers-by, as he eats and reads all alone: "I'm eating with all of my friends."

And Miss June had no regrets in telling her spouse not to buy Johnson any meals.

"He doesn't look like he's missing any meals," she observed. "He doesn't look like he's starving."

"He makes his living selling Ford automobiles, but he drives a Nissan," a foreign-made car which Dotson sells. And in that regard, Dotson figured that probably he and Miss June might be "obliged to buy his lunch. When he's away from Rogers Ford, he's advertising our product."

"This is true," said Johnson.

But Dotson, like his friend who is honking around for a free lunch, knows that Miss June is stalwart.

"She's like a bulldog," Dotson said. "Once she gets a hold of you, she stays hooked." And Dotson said he enjoyed the rousing bout with Johnson. "He's having fun, and if he's having a good time, I'm for it."

FIRES

The last unit was at the scene until 8:30 p.m., but the fire was re-ignited at least twice by wind shifts, according to reports.

The fire was first believed ignited by burning trash, but inspectors ruled out that possibility and were scheduled to investigate the scene today, Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said.

Burning trash was listed as the causes of two blazes that broke out but caused little damage.

At 3:30 p.m. firefighters were dispatched to an open pasture at 2310½ Cloverdale Road. The blaze was quickly extinguished, reports said.

Burning trash also ignited a pasture near the intersection of FM 307 and CR 1150 about 6 p.m., which caused slight damage to several fenceposts before it was controlled, according to reports.

A small grass fire was also reported at 12:50 p.m. near the intersection of CR 1110 and CR 85, but no damage was reported.

Fire Chief James Roberts said early today recent warnings his department has issued about dry conditions in the Midland area apparently have gone unheeded.

At a meeting with his senior officers this morning, Roberts said the officers agreed the fire danger remains high in the area because of the heavy growth of dried-out grass and brush in the Midland area.

TELESCOPE

With the new telescope, researchers will be able to gather enough light to probe the edge of the galaxy, where secrets of the development of the universe lie.

Smith cited several benefits of the research that could be completed with the new telescope, including keeping up with research planned by European, Japanese and Soviet astronomers, who also are building large telescopes.

While economic applications of astronomical research cannot always be anticipated, he cited medical CAT scan technology as one recent example of astronomical discoveries touching the daily lives of citizens.

However, Smith's search for the additional funding from private sources must continue since "the federal money isn't there now," he said.

The observatory director acknowledged frustration in his search. "Everybody says (the project is) just great, but everybody says to see somebody else," he said.

If the funding can be realized, researchers could begin using the scope within two years, as the Penn State-manufactured mirrors begin to fall in place.

After about four years, the telescope should be complete, he said.

LIVESTOCK

Schweitzer

The 40th annual livestock show, sponsored by the Midland County Livestock Association, is dedicated to the late Jane Schweitzer. Mrs. Schweitzer, a 57-year-old rancher and range-grass judging mentor, supported the youth-oriented livestock activities until her death in a pickup accident last March when she was driving to her family's Augustine Ranch in Pecos County.

"Jane was a very dedicated individual and was supportive of youth in the livestock program," Kiker said. "Not only was she a strong supporter of the county livestock show each year, but she would show up for major shows," such as those in Houston, San Antonio and Fort Worth. "She always had a smile, and she always was very positive."

Charlie Green, livestock show president and retired TAEX agent, said rarely, if ever, had anybody "put in as much dedication — time and service — for the benefit of the youth than" did Mrs. Schweitzer.

"She always was just brimming with vitality and was out-going, optimistic and friendly," Green said.

Mrs. Schweitzer had worked with 4-H Club and FFA youth since the late 1960s, when her son Lee, now 29, enrolled in 4-H and, after he had entered high school, got involved in FFA programs and projects.

"She was particularly interested in the livestock program and ranching interests," Green said.

Lee Schweitzer said his mother had "brightened the lives of a lot of guys and girls my age."

She had "more skillets in the fire" than many people. In addition to ranching and working with youth, Mrs. Schweitzer was an amateur archaeologist and genealogist.

Tribute will be paid to Mrs. Schweitzer during the show.

The annual livestock show got under way Wednesday afternoon with the weighing, measuring and sifting of lambs, steers and hogs.

The judging of steers by Gary Harkey of Texas A&M University was to get started at 6:30 p.m. today.

Lambs will be judged at 8 a.m. Friday by John Kearney, a vocational-agriculture teacher from Sterling City.

Following the judging of lambs will be the judging of small animals, such as rabbits and goats, by Dr. Robert Berry, retired TAEX plant pathologist from Lubbock and a nationally recognized rabbit judge.

Following that will be the judging of swine by Frank Hermesmeyer, vocational-agricultural teacher from Wall near San Angelo.

The auction of the show's premium steers, swine and lambs will begin at 1:15 p.m. Saturday under the direction of Snyder auctioneer Tommy Marricle.

The auction will be preceded by an 11:30 a.m. buyers' barbecue dinner. Bidders in the auction will be dinner guests of the Midland County Livestock Association.

Last year's auction of 115 head of livestock raised more than $69,000 for the 4-H Club and FFA youths. Midland County's 1988 top grand champion steer was a 1,215-pound Limousin-Angus-Maine Anjou black calf exhibited by 4-H'er Lindsay Stewart, now 15. The steer brought $2.25 a pound.

The grand champion hog, shown by Ginger Stennett, drew a top bid of $5.75 a pound.

The champion medium-wool lamb, raised by Sallie Farrow, went for $4.25 a pound. The champion fine-wool lamb, shown by Miss Stewart, was sold for $6.50 a pound. And the champion crossbred lamb, exhibited by Corey Simpson, attracted a $4.50-per-pound top bid.

Green predicted that 4-H and FFA members from urban and rural areas of Midland County will exhibit 40 steers and as many as 150 lambs and 150 barrows.

Livestock and other programs and projects for young people in 4-H help teach them the "basic values of responsibility, self-discipline and the development of good work habits," Green said.

The projects are designed to carry out a "good job in helping the young person to develop goals and to achieve in life."

The farm animals in the show "are going to be good," Green said. "They are the kind of animals that the industry demands — lean meat and all that.

"But it's the kids that we are really interested in," Green said. "And those kids out there are the champions — the real winners."

COMBEST

Combest says this countermeasure also would require that there be a congressional election between the time the pay hike proposal is initially voted on and when it would take effect. This would give voters an opportunity to "vote their consciences" on the measure, he believes.

If the proposal to have a roll call vote fails, Combest says, he and others, during the next two years, will seek passage of legislation that would retroactively repeal the congressional pay raise.

In addition to visiting the Northside Senior Citizen's Center this morning, Combest was scheduled to hold a news conference at 1:15 p.m. today.

Bills would specify smoking areas, prohibit selling tobacco to minors

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Minors would find it more difficult to buy cigarettes and adults could light up only in designated areas under proposed state Senate legislation designed to curb tobacco use.

Under bills filed Wednesday by state Sens. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, and Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, smoking in public buildings except in designated areas would be prohibited throughout the state, and selling tobacco to people under 18 would be a crime.

Krier's measure would raise the legal age to buy tobacco products from 16 to 18 years, and would make sale of tobacco to a minor a misdemeanor.

"Tobacco is addictive, and we must ensure that our children are old enough to weigh consciously the risk of using tobacco before they become addicted to it," Krier said.

The bills were filed on the 25th anniversary of the first U.S. Surgeon General's report that warned smoking could be a health hazard.

Brooks' bill would restrict smoking in government buildings, restaurants and other public businesses across the state.

Krier said Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, has agreed to carry similar legislation in the House.

Brooks said he has not yet found a sponsor for a smoking-restriction bill in the House, which during the 1987 session killed a measure restricting smoking statewide. The Senate passed a bill in 1987 called the Texas Indoor Clean Air Act, which is the model for Brooks' new bill.

"We hope this time not only to pass our bill in good shape through the Texas Senate, but also to see the House of Representatives act as well," Brooks said. He said House Speaker Gib Lewis expressed support for the bill.

Brooks said the bill would reduce the $3.5 billion per year Texas taxpayers and businesses spend on medical care, insurance and lost work hours because of diseases associated with smoking.

A 1987 interim report by the Senate Subcommittee on Health Services recommended both Brooks' and Krier's measures.

A council of the Texas chapters of the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the American Heart Association said they would lobby for both bills.

The health agency group, calling itself the Tri-Agency Tobacco Free Project, presented to the Senate six first-graders from Wells Branch Elementary School in Round Rock as "The Smoke-Free Class of the Year 2000."

"We are especially concerned that children are smoking at younger and younger ages," said Dr. Stephen Clark, chairman of the project.

"The earlier they begin to smoke, the more years they have to continue their habit, and the greater their risk of dying from smoking-related illnesses," Clark said.

The health agencies this month would begin distributing anti-smoking information to first-graders around the state with the goal of eliminating tobacco use by those under 18 by the year 2000, said Dr. Robert Bernstein, state health commissioner.

Bernstein said the number of smokers in Texas is the lowest ever at 23 percent of the population, and falls below the national average of 26.5 percent.

Lawmaker proposes paying $50 stipend to university athletes on scholarships

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston lawmaker who says he wants to address reasons behind NCAA rules violations has proposed allowing state universities in Texas to pay scholarship athletes a $50 weekly stipend.

"These men and women actually are professional athletes," Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said Wednesday. "They bring in millions of dollars to their universities and to the state, so we should at least, I think, give them $50 a week so that they can live."

But a spokesman for the National Collegiate Athletic Association said such a provision would violate the rules of the body that governs intercollegiate athletics.

"Unless the NCAA membership changes its rules, any athlete who accepts a stipend would be ineligible," said Jim Marchione of the NCAA.

The NCAA membership, meeting in San Francisco, on Wednesday rejected a proposal to raise the level of financial aid for athletes, Marchione noted.

"If they're not going to change that, I don't think they're going to change the rule about stipends," he said.

Wilson said he believed state law supersedes NCAA rules.

"All we're contemplating to do is to allow them to have some pocket change to go and buy incidentals," he said of the $50 stipend.

"Hopefully, it would discourage the kind of abuses that we've encountered in the past, with athletes being inclined to accept money from alumni and sports agents and those kinds of sources," Wilson said. "I think we can clean up a lot of that if we're sensitive about taking care of the athletes."

Scholarship athletes can't work during the school year, Wilson said, and they don't have time to hold jobs because of requirements for studying and for practice.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Hot new dish leaves tasters cold

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

There's no doubt about it, one of the most used appliances in my kitchen is my handy-dandy microwave oven. It heats up my favorite frozen dinners when I don't feel like cooking, it boils water for tea or hot chocolate in a hurry, it pops corn for the children (and grown-ups, too) who have a severe attack of the munchies.

And since I'm so fond of my microwave, it comes as no surprise that I'm always ready to try new dishes made just for such speedy cooking. And one of the newest of these foods is Hunt's Minute Gourmet. Did we try one of these meals, checking it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy? Need you ask?

Minute Gourmet is "a six-item line of gourmet microwave packaged dinners that allow consumers to cook with a variety of fresh meats in the microwave and get gourmet results," according to information from the company. (Makers of convenience foods are fond of the word, "gourmet." I guess they think if they use it long enough in reference to foods that only require the cook to add water and stir, then we might believe them.)

What Minute Gourmet turned out to be is a box containing sauce and seasoning mixes — everything you need to prepare a "gourmet" meal, except, of course, the meat. The one we tried was Chicken Cacciatore. (We found it ironic that the box for Chicken Cacciatore also carried the information "can be made with pork or shrimp.") Other flavors are Sweet and Sour Chicken, Barbecued Chicken, Italian Meatballs with Sauce, Oriental Beef and Cajun Pork. (I wonder if any of the other dishes can be made with substitute meats — imagine barbecued chicken or Italian meatballs made with shrimp. It boggles the mind.)

Company information also gives $2.29 per box as the suggested price. (Prices at different locations may vary.)

As with most new products, label advertising for Minute Gourmet is on the gushy side: "Now you can cook fresh meat in the microwave to create a variety of classic, impressive meat dishes for 4. Our secret is Minute Gourmet's rich, savory sauce, select spices, plus our remarkable microwave cooking bag. Simply add meat to ingredients provided and cook in the bag. When finished, just toss the bag away. No mess. No Fuss.

We actually chose to make Chicken Cacciatore with chicken, but instead of boning the chicken, like the directions called for (I'm not about to bone chicken if I don't have to; besides, the directions on the side of the box tell how to adjust cooking if you use ordinary pieces of chicken), I just used regular thighs and drumsticks.

Making the dish was easy. It takes about 15 or 20 minutes to prepare this "classic, impressive meat dish for 4," depending on how much fussing you want to do with your chicken (or pork, or shrimp).

Getting the kids to eat it was another matter. They did not like Chicken Cacciatore. I guess the combination of chicken and spaghetti sauce was not what they were expecting. They did, however, like the sauce once the chicken was taken out of it and spaghetti was added.

Yes, Minute Gourmet was easy to prepare. Yes, it tasted OK (unless you are a kid expecting something else). But there are less expensive Italian meals that your family will eat. And sometimes, they don't take too long to prepare, either.

'New woman' not so new

By CARLA MARINUCCI
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The trendiest female consumer of the year isn't in her teens, and she doesn't have pink hair, wear slashed jeans, or watch MTV.

She's approaching 40, and her interests aim more toward home, hearth, and "oatmeal on the breakfast table." This kinder, gentler woman, withdrawing from the frenzied climb up the corporate ladder to gather her family around her, has caught the fanciful eye of advertisers and marketers.

Described by one advertisement for Good Housekeeping magazine as "a contemporary woman who finds her fulfillment in traditional values," — such as oatmeal — she is heralded as the new marketing opportunity of the '90s.

But some demographers question whether this ballyhooed new woman exists at all. They contend she is a mere invention of marketing executives who see a chance to cash in on Baby Boomers' disillusionment with the fast track by creating a nostalgia for the simpler days of family life in the '50s.

"Madison Avenue loves a new trend, and its new love is the trend it sees toward family and home," says Martha Farnsworthe Riche, editor of The Numbers News, a New York newsletter that monitors demographic trends.

"If you ask women if they'd like to stay home, they may say yes," says Bickley Townsend, an editor with American Demographics magazine. "But so will men." Such expressions don't reflect the modern reality: big mortgages that require a two-income household.

YET, MARKETING experts insist the trend exists and stems from Baby Boomers' profound lifestyle changes in their nest-building years.

"We have had a return to older values and greater concern for relationships," says Judith Langer, president of Langer & Associates market research firm of New York. Along with it has come new emphasis on quality, classic home-related products: "flowers, English stuff, wood, early American." Says Langer: "It's a change in tastes, and it stems from an underlying value change."

"Traditionalism is here," says Nancy Lindemeyer, founding editor of New York-based Victoria Magazine, an upscale women's publication with an appeal to classic tastes. "We're trying to take a lesson from the past — on what was beautiful, what had quality, the special occasions, the adoration of family and children."

The readers of Victoria, the 18-month-old Hearst magazine, are generally well-educated professional women in their mid-30s and older, says Lindemeyer. The publication's articles deal with such home-oriented topics as making lace cookies, displaying centennial silver at the table, and buying keepsake ribbons. The magazine sold out its first 400,000 run on the newsstands in March 1987, and now has 750,000 subscribers, Lindemeyer says.

"There's a return to weddings, kids, ballroom dancing, front porches on the house," says Alan M. Waxenberg, vice president and publisher of Good Housekeeping. Baby Boom women, who protested in the '60s, rocked out in the '70s, and indulged themselves in the materialistic '80s, are now embracing the "realistic '90s," he says.

"They want to eliminate the complex excess baggage they've been carrying around," he says, and they are showing a "great deal of concern about family and health. It's a bringing together of traditional values."

IT IS Good Housekeeping, however, that is fueling debate on the subject by memorializing the New Traditionalist woman in a current series of promotional ads.

Riche of The Numbers News took issue with the ads — and their claims of an "extraordinary social movement" — during a recent American Demographics conference on consumers in the '90s.

"The implication (of the ads) is a new focus on home and children and family, and that these women are not working," says Riche.

Among the statistics she cites from the Current Population Survey conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau:

- Only 27 percent of all households are married couples with children — the unit considered "the traditional family," she says. That's down from 31 percent in 1980.
- Only 49 percent of Baby Boomers — those 76 million Americans between the ages of 24 and 42 — were married couples with children in 1986, down from 72 percent among the same age group in 1970.
- Nearly half of all married women with children age 3 and younger work; and for mothers with kids 6 and over, the figure rises to 62 percent. Those numbers will continue to increase steadily, says Riche.

"The '90s will not be a replay of the '50s," she says.

LET'S DO LUNCH

Food tasty, atmosphere pleasant

The OFFICE GOURMET

Catfish USA is a charmingly simple family restaurant. The large, open dining room has an atmosphere of a warm country kitchen for patrons who dropped in for lunch.

The small tables, covered with brown and white checked vinyl cloths, are set with blue enamelware (deep-dish) plates and mason jars. Hanging from the ceiling are lamps displaying a lovely collection of stained-glass shades. The unique stained-glass wheel is suspended over the sunken bar area, which is set apart by a brass railing.

There was an extended delay before the server came to the table to take my order, but strangely enough, I was not particularly disturbed since I felt very comfortable waiting around the "family kitchen table."

The menu is limited, offering only deep-fried chicken, shrimp, clams, crab sticks and catfish (of course). Included with each entree are hushpuppies, curly fries (potatoes), coleslaw and raw onions.

CATFISH USA

WHERE: #10 Plaza Center; Wadley and Garfield — seven minutes from Big Spring and Wall Streets. Ample parking.
HOURS: 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. and 5-10 p.m. daily.
PAYMENT: MasterCard, Visa, Discovery accepted.

Catfish USA is noteworthy because everything is served exquisitely fresh. The hushpuppies are very light and delicate. The chicken has a very thin batter crust — not at all greasy or heavy — and the catfish is thick, flaky, moist and especially fresh tasting (not at all muddy). The curly fries are also hot, crisp and tender.

The coleslaw is freshly made, but the dressing was a little too sweet for my taste. Side orders of turnip greens, fried dill pickles, etc., can also be ordered, enhancing the feeling of a warm ranch kitchen menu.

Although the service could use some work — I'm usually not fond of the restaurant floor being swept while I am trying to eat during the luncheon hour — it was hard to be too upset with the enthusiastic staff who seem like they might be trying to help "mom" in the kitchen. Strangely enough, it seemed quite charming and in keeping with the homey restaurant.

The dinner menu is identical to the luncheon fare, but is all-you-can-eat and is too tempting for the weight-conscious!! Catfish USA certainly is a delightful place in which to enjoy a mouth-watering home-cooked meal.

Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — After watching a television special on the hazards of rear-seat lap belts, a couple decided to have the belts in their 1987 station wagon replaced by safer shoulder belts.

That's easier said than done, they discovered.

Two hundred dollars and a week later, they had rear seat belts they say are more dangerous than the lap belts. Because of the way they were installed, the belts cut across the throat instead of the shoulder.

"We can't use them," says Linda Spaulding of Lansingburgh, N.Y. "Even if they were safe, you wouldn't want to put them on, they are so uncomfortable. We fear that in an accident, the belts will cause severe neck or head injury, rather than prevent injury."

The Spauldings' dilemma ironically comes at a time when consumer groups are advocating the installation of rear shoulder belts and manufacturers are offering them in some new-model cars. Studies have shown that shoulder harnesses greatly improve safety for rear seat passengers.

A study two years ago by the National Transportation Safety Board found that of 50 people wearing lap-only belts, at least 32 would have fared substantially better if they had been wearing lap/shoulder belts, according to a report in the Lemon Times, a newsletter published by the Center for Auto Safety (CAS).

In many cases, the lap belts induced severe to fatal injuries that probably would not have occurred if the lap belts had not been worn.

The newsletter says the auto industry has known for more than 20 years that lap/shoulder belts were far superior to lap belts alone, and that lap belts often caused internal injuries. The Department of Transportation considered requiring rear shoulder belts when it mandated shoulder harnesses for front seats of cars in 1968, but failed to do so when the auto industry said they cost too much.

Spaulding says the TV news program "20/20" claimed the original cost of installing shoulder belts at the factory was marginal — $12 per car.

In November, the Transportation Department announced plans to require automakers to install harnesses for rear seat passengers in cars beginning with the 1990 model year.

The lap belt without a shoulder belt tends to concentrate a great deal of force in the mid-section. Even in low-speed frontal crashes it can cause injuries that would be avoided by a lap/shoulder belt, says Benjamin Kelley, president of the Institute of Injury Reduction, a group of trial lawyers involved in automobile accident litigation.

DEAR ABBY

One dog's family tree grows at alarming rate

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a volunteer for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and my job is to talk to schoolchildren. I show them a chart that shows one female dog with a litter of four. In a year, if only half the pups themselves have litters of four, and the mother does likewise, there will be 12 pups. This goes on and on until the seventh year, at which point there are nearly 4,000 pups!

Nine out of 10 of these dogs will die either at an animal control facility or from some kind of neglect.

I think if most people were aware of these facts, they would have their dogs and cats spayed or altered. Many S.P.C.A. or Humane Society organizations offer financial help for this process.

Abby, by publishing this message, you could save countless unwanted dogs and cats from being born to die tragic deaths. — SHIRLEY BEEDY, S.P.C.A., AUBURN, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do every pediatric office in the country a favor and print this:

One of the most common requests we get — especially at the onset of the school year — is for information about immunization shots. This creates extra work for our busy medical clinic staff. Why don't parents keep a record of the shots their children have taken? We must get at least two dozen calls a day from parents who say, "I misplaced Johnny's shot records when we moved." Or, "I know they're around here somewhere, but it's quicker to call you."

Abby, we have more to do in this clinic than look up information and call back to tell the mother when her child had his last shots and what kind of shots they were. Right now I am trying to get back to someone for the fourth time. Her line is either busy, or she's not home yet. Talk about frustrating!

Please tell people that for more than one reason — trips to the emergency room, college enrollment, moving to another city — they should keep a running record of their children's immunization shots. — HAD IT IN OHIO

DEAR HAD IT: Your point is well-taken and parents would be well-advised to heed it. Continually having to dig into your records for information can be a bigger pain in the behind than the booster shot.

DEAR ABBY: We were recently married, and for a wedding gift we received a check for $25. We put the money into our savings account, and a week or so later, we received a note from our bank advising us that the check had bounced!

The $25 was deducted from our account. My question: Should we confront the gift-giver or just forget about it?

Also, should we send a thank-you note for the $25 check that wasn't any good? — SKUNKED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR SKUNKED: Thank the gift-giver. It will eventually come to his/her attention that the check bounced, and unless he/she is a total cheapskate, it will be replaced with a "good" one.

Billing errors can be corrected

Copley News Service

If you got caught up in the spirit of giving and are now digging out from under a stack of credit card bills, the Federal Trade Commission urges you to review your holiday billing statements with care.

Credit card billing errors do occur, but they are simple to resolve if you know how to use the Fair Credit Billing Act.

Under this law, you must send the creditor a written notice about the problem to avoid paying for any disputed charges.

To be protected under the law, here is what you need to do:

- Write the bank or retailer who issued the card. Your notice must be received within 60 days after the bill containing the error was mailed. In your letter include: your name and account number; the date, type and dollar amount of the charge you are contesting; and why you think there was a mistake.
- Make sure you send the letter to the correct office address. You usually can determine the proper address by looking on your bill for a heading such as "send inquiries to." Do not put your letter in the same envelope as your payment. To make sure the creditor receives your letter, you may also wish to send it by certified mail.

If you follow the above requirements, here is what the creditor is required to do:

- Acknowledge your letter in writing within 30 days after it is received, unless the problem has been resolved within that time.
- Conduct a reasonable investigation and, within 90 days, either explain why the bill is accurate or correct the mistake.
- Include documents showing the charge was correct, if you asked for "proof" in your letter and if the creditor states the bill is correct.

You should note that, by law, the creditor can not close your account just because you disputed a bill.

If you continue to have problems, you may wish to seek legal advice or contact the state attorney general. For more information about this law, contact the Federal Trade Commission for a free brochure.

Copley News Service

SPOKANE, Wash. — If you are a senior citizen, you are a sure "mark" for a telephone scam. It doesn't matter whether you live in a major city, small town or in a remote corner of the boondocks.

This message was delivered strongly to 1,100 senior citizens meeting in October at Gonzaga University by Washington state Attorney General Ken Eikenberry.

With telephone lines perpetrators of scams and "on the edge of the law" schemes can make contacts quickly and effectively throughout the nation.

"Senior citizens are their prime targets," states Eikenberry. "Seniors are generally available to the telephone and will listen to a pitch — and sometimes are even reluctant to hang up on the caller.

"Be on your guard," warns the prosecutor, "when a stranger phones you and is trying to sell you vitamins, low-cost vacations, magazine subscriptions, office or stationery supplies, club memberships or sure-fire investments.

"If they say, 'You have just won a contest,' and you need only pay for shipping and handling of the merchandise, be on your guard. If you have really entered a contest and have won, the contest sponsor pays for the prize shipment. If you have not entered a contest and you are greeted in this way, get ready for a scam."

THERE ARE legitimate telemarketing firms operating in the United States, according to the attorney general. When and if these call they will identify who they are, what they are offering and ask you to consider a purchase.

"But telefraud is also most active in the use of telephones, costing consumers nearly a billion dollars a year," states Eikenberry.

"Telefraud is the use of the phone by unethical companies who only want to take your money. Most calls come from firms located out-of-state. They work out of large rooms with rows of phones staffed by solicitors trained to repeat a deceptive sales pitch. Sometimes these firms send you an enticing or official-looking letter or postcard in the mail urging you to call them."

Listen for the common phrases used in telefraud:

- "You have been specially selected to hear this offer."
- "You will get a wonderful free bonus if you buy our product."
- "You have won a valuable free prize."
- "This investment is low-risk and provides a higher return than you can get anywhere else."
- "You have to make up your mind right away."
- "You can just put the shipping and handling charge on your credit card."

There is danger in providing your credit card number, such as for the "special offer" or "shipping charges" in that other charges to the card may be created if the caller is not reputable.

What happens if that telephone pitch is too good to be true — and in fact, is a fraud? Eikenberry itemizes the possibilities to include:

- The merchandise you bought is overpriced and of poor quality;
- The "free gift" never arrives, or it's worth just a fraction of the "shipping and handling" or "gift tax" you paid.
- The investment turns out to be non-existent or a loser.
- The donation you thought was going to charity goes into the fund-raiser's pocket.
- Unauthorized charges start appearing on your credit card bills.

IF YOU feel you are or have been the victim of a telefraud you should contact your state attorney general's office or the Federal Trade Commission, Attn: Telemarketing Complaint System, Sixth and Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580.

- Don't buy something merely because you will get a free gift.
- Get all information in writing before you agree to buy.
- Don't give your credit card number to anyone who calls on the phone.
- Be extremely cautious about investing with an unknown caller who insists you make up your mind immediately.
- If the investment is a security, check with state officials to see if it is properly registered. If large amounts of money are involved, check with your legal or financial adviser.
- Don't send money by messenger or overnight mail. If you use money rather than a credit card in the transaction, you may lose your right to dispute fraudulent charges.
- Hang up instead of being pressured to buy.
- If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

TELEFRAUD OPERATORS are targeting senior citizens throughout the United States. By being aware of their operations, you can avoid being their victim. Your protection starts when you just say "no" and hang up the telephone.

AT WIT'S END

Japanese experiment with stress-easing scents

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

If there is a designer disease of the '80s, it's "stress."

You can dress it up or down. You can take it with you to the club. You can suffer from it and still play tennis. The higher your income and the more powerful you become, the worse it gets.

You won't hear any of the women on "Roseanne" sitting around a bar saying, "I'm stressed out." No siree.

Well, the Japanese have been experimenting with ways to combat pressure in the marketplace, and they've come up with a theory: Fragrant aromas reduce stress. Here's the plan. They're going to pump various scents into the air conditioning system of office buildings and gas 'em into mellow.

According to their research, the fresh smell of a forest is supposed to help workers deal with being uptight, while lemon and jasmine are said to have a rejuvenating effect, helping workers overcome post-lunch drowsiness.

My first reaction is one of suspicion. A few years ago, for whatever reason, they came out with an "auto perfume." Remember? For an extra buck, the folks at your local carwash squirted a scent on the carpet of your car. There were lemon-lime, cinnamon, floral, orange blossom, northern pine, strawberry, cherry, and even one called "new car" to choose from.

Anyway, I'm here to tell you the smell my husband had spritzed in my car didn't relieve my stress. It created it. I don't know what scent it was. My guess was a cross between an overripe cantaloupe and a possum in heat. I drove with the windows down for two solid weeks.

That is not to say there might not be some merit to the Japanese theory. I'm not ready to admit smells can bring down your hypertension, but they can certainly make you have a better, more relaxed outlook on things. It's no great secret that if you're trying to sell your house, just set a bowl of yeast bread under a towel and a prospective buyer will send for the kids. And if you want your husband to be in a good mood when he opens the door at night, have an onion in the oven.

I guess we can look for all kinds of spinoffs on the market to reduce stress. Look for a new cologne for men called "Faithful Husband" or a car perfume called "Paid in Full," or even a home deodorizer called "No Termites."

STATE IN BRIEF

Texas high court will hear open records case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court will hear oral arguments in a case in which the Houston Chronicle has sought college transcript records of certain public school administrators of the Houston school district.

The court on Wednesday scheduled arguments for Feb. 8 in the case where the newspaper has been trying to find out if some officials in the school district have questionable academic degrees.

In August, the Chronicle filed a lawsuit to gain access to the transcripts under the Texas Open Records Act.

The Houston Independent School District refused to hand over the records, contending the documents could reveal embarrassing information having no connection to administrators' qualifications.

State District Judge Jack O'Neill refused to grant the Chronicle a hearing, saying the newspaper must first obtain an opinion from Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Mattox has agreed not to provide an opinion until after the Legislature has had an opportunity to consider the issue this session. O'Neill signed an order prohibiting Mattox from issuing an opinion in the case.

The Chronicle has asked Mattox to rule immediately, and O'Neill to hold a hearing on the lawsuit. The Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas filed a friend of the court brief on the Chronicle's behalf.

Motel maid finds drugs

FORT WORTH (AP) — A suspected drug dealer who slept past checkout time at a motel was arrested after a maid contacted police about drugs she found in his room.

About $3,000 worth of crack was confiscated and a 28-year-old Fort Worth man was arrested at the Delux Inn, said narcotics Detective G.W. Wilson of the Fort Worth Police Department.

A maid entered the suspect's room at noon, an hour after the hotel's checkout time, to clean up. She found the suspect asleep and was unable to wake him, police said. Officers said the maid saw drugs in the room and called police.

"Narcotics bags were in plain view," Wilson said. "When we took the suspect to jail, we searched the room and found more drugs."

Police found a "rock" of crack half the size of a baseball with an estimated value of $1,000 to $3,000, Wilson said.

Police said they also found cash and 3,000 zipper-lock bags they believe were to be used in delivering crack after it had been cut.

Authorities said charges were pending.

Tower out of hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Defense Secretary-designate John Tower was discharged from a Dallas hospital, a week after entering for removal of a colon polyp.

"His physician said he (Tower) had exemplary recovery," said Stephen Habgood, a spokesman for Baylor University Medical Center, where Tower underwent surgery to remove the polyp last Thursday. He was released Wednesday.

The polyp was discovered during a colonscopy examination Dec. 27 and removed during a three-hour operation by Dr. R.J. Dignan. A biopsy of the growth revealed it to be benign, doctors said.

Tower, a U.S. senator from Texas for 24 years, was selected Dec. 16 by President-elect Bush as his Defense secretary.

Officer gets spanking

DALLAS (AP) — An undercover Dallas police officer took a paddling while posing as a high school student so he wouldn't miss an opportunity to make a drug buy, officials said.

The 25-year-old officer, whose identity is being kept secret, ran afoul of school law when he was late for classes, said W.T. White High School Principal Gene Ward.

Given the choice of after-school detention and missing a scheduled drug buy or corporal punishment, the officer submitted to the spanking, Ward said. An assistant principal gave him the paddling for tardiness.

The investigation at W.T. White High resulted in 28 drug-related arrest warrants being issued. Sixteen individuals had been arrested by Wednesday night, police said.

Rate decrease suggested

AUSTIN (AP) — An overall statewide property insurance rate decrease of 0.5 percent will be recommended next week by the Office of Consumer Protection to the State Board of Insurance.

Public Counsel Kay Doughty said Wednesday that her recommendation would cover homeowners' insurance, tenant homeowners' insurance, farm and ranch owners' insurance, and fire insurance for dwellings and farms.

The insurance industry has requested an overall rate increase of 10.8 percent, while the insurance board's staff has suggested a 7.2 percent hike.

"Once again, we're asking the insurance industry to justify their expense requests, which our figures show are too high," Ms. Doughty said.

State chamber names head

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas State Chamber of Commerce has named Larry Milner of Amarillo its new president and chief executive officer.

The selection of Milner, who assumes his new duties Jan. 16, was announced Wednesday at the chamber's annual meeting. He will succeed Rex Jennings, a retired president and chief executive of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, who had served as interim president.

Milner, an unsuccessful Republican candidate for Congress last year, had been president and chief executive of the Amarillo chamber for three years. Before that, he was vice president of communication and public affiars for Southwestern Public Service Co., an Amarillo-based electric utility.

Merit scholars like UT

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas-Austin ranks second in the country among public and private schools in the number of National Merit Scholars for the fall of 1988.

Harvard-Radcliffe headed the list with 315, but UT-Austin had 218, school officials said Wednesday.

Other Texas schools ranking in the top 10 and their number of new merit scholars were Rice, 179, and Texas A&M, 113.

UT-Austin has ranked second in new National Merit Scholars every year since 1983. In the fall of 1988, a total of 871 were enrolled.

Court hearing retarded inmate's case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is examining the legal significance of imposing capital punishment on a convicted murderer described as having the mind of a child.

The justices heard 60 minutes of arguments Wednesday on whether they will allow the execution of Johnny Paul Penry, 32, a convicted rapist-murderer sentenced to die in Texas. The court is expected to announce its decision in July.

Penry is said to have the mental capacity of a 7-year-old and the social development of a 9-year-old.

Assistant Attorney General Charles A. Palmer of Texas argued that executing Penry would not violate the Constitution's ban against cruel and inhuman punishment.

"He knew what he was doing," Palmer said. Penry raped Pamela Moseley Carpenter on Oct. 15, 1979, in Livingston, Texas, then stabbed her to death. She was 22.

Palmer recited evidence that Penry killed the woman to prevent her from identifying him.

Ms. Carpenter's brother, retired National Football League placekicker Mark Moseley, was in the courtroom Wednesday and told reporters afterward, "It's been nine years of hell for myself and my family."

"It's not something anyone should have to go through and I feel that if anything good can come out of it, that may be we can render a decision that will make it not happen to someone else," the former Stephen F. Austin and Washington Redskins kicker said.

Some justices expressed doubts that describing someone as having the mental capacity of a child has much relevance.

"What does it mean to have the mental age of 9?" asked Justice Antonin Scalia.

Palmer said witnesses for Penry testified he functioned mentally like a 7-year-old and socially like a 9-year-old.

"Beyond that I can not help the court," Palmer said.

"If it's something we don't understand, why allow (such evidence) to be introduced?" asked Justice Anthony M. Kennedy.

Curtis C. Mason, a lawyer representing Penry, spent little time arguing that all retarded murderers should be spared. Instead, Mason challenged the Texas death penalty law on narrower grounds.

Mason said the law prevented the jury from giving full consideration to evidence in Penry's favor when it determined what sentence to impose.

Penry was abused by his parents, attended school only for a few days in the first grade and was in and out of mental hospitals while growing up near Houston.

Mason argued the jury only was permitted to consider whether evidence of Penry's retardation and mistreatment showed that Penry had acted "deliberately with the reasonable expectation that death would result."

While the high court might be reluctant to ban the death penalty for all retarded killers, it still could overturn the Texas capital punishment law on the narrower grounds cited by Mason.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, whose vote could be pivotal in the case, suggested to Palmer that the Texas law gives convicted murderers limited hope of winning reprieve from the death penalty.

She questioned whether the state law allows a juror to vote for life in prison even if the juror believed the defendant acted with diminished moral culpability because of his background.

Ms. Carpenter was stabbed repeatedly in the chest with a pair of scissors she was using to make a Halloween costume for her niece.

Police link two men to Dallas-area rapes

DALLAS (AP) — Two men working together are responsible for at least 17 sexual assaults in Dallas and and in three Dallas-area cities, police say.

Officers said Wednesday the men have been linked to 12 cases in Dallas and five others in Carrollton, Arlington and Irving.

"We consider these guys very dangerous," said Dallas Sgt. Larry Lewis, who said that in addition to raping the women, who they tie up and leave bound. They have also "roughed up" their victims and robbed them, he said.

"A lot of times, the victims are approached in apartment parking lots late at night when they're getting out of their vehicles," Lewis said.

At other times, the men get into victims' apartments through the front door, he said, declining to say how police believe they enter.

A law enforcement official in another city who asked to remain anonymous said officials believe the men, in some cases, have obtained the names, apartment numbers and keys of victims through burglaries of apartment management offices.

Lewis said all the Dallas rapes have occurred between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. The most recent occurred early the morning of New Year's Eve at an East Dallas residence.

Ten of the Dallas assaults occurred at apartments in northeast Dallas, and one occurred in Far North Dallas. Only two attacks occurred in the same complex.

"We believe they are somewhat familiar with their victims," Lewis said. "They've said things that lead us to believe that either they've seen the victim before or are familiar with them somehow.

"We're notifying everybody that there is a problem up there so they can let the tenants know," said Lewis, adding that he is sending bulletins to the Apartment Association of Greater Dallas.

The men also have been linked during the past year to two sexual assaults in apartments in Arlington, two in Irving and one in Carrollton.

The men are described as black males in their 20s. One is described as about 5 foot 6, weighing about 200 pounds; the other as between 5 foot 8 and 5 foot 10, weighing about 175 pounds, Lewis said.

Musician collaborates with wife on romance novels

By R.H. GROWALD
Copley News Service

"Life is one happenstance after another," says Larry Foster, whose 79 years have been filled with happenstance.

"Look at me now. My wife Poly and I write romance novels under the name of Jessica Logan," he says. "I'm Jessica and she's Logan."

He also is a drummer. Has been for six decades. Still is. Plays with a local band.

Poly, busy at her word-processor keyboard — Logan writes a tale and Jessica edits and revises — shouts for Foster to tell what happened before they met.

"I was born in Chicago and had a normal Chicago boyhood. Lots of gang fights," Foster says.

"In the mid-1920s, I began singing with a high school group. Maurie Sherman heard me and hired me for the afternoon tea dances at the Sherman Hotel. I sang songs like 'Cottage for Sale,' and Maurie listened and said, 'Kid, learn to play an instrument.'"

Foster says that at first his knees shook when he sang to crowds.

"Maurie told me to relax. I did," Foster says.

"I pretended I was back in the bathroom at home. That's where I practiced singing and the drums. And that's where Father, who liked his ears, suggested I take up the piccolo instead."

Foster sang and drummed in the afternoon. Mornings he worked in Chicago's financial district, in a brokerage house, standing on a ladder and chalking up stock prices. Along came the October 1929 market crash that began the Great Depression.

"Mr. Green used to sit in a chair behind me. He played the market big. Every Christmas he'd tip me $500. Every week or so, just because he was Mr. Nice Guy, he'd tip me $20 or $30.

"The day of the crash I was busy chalking up the plunging prices of stocks. I saw him sitting there with his cigar. I turned back and chalked more disasters. I heard a crash," Foster says.

"Mr. Green's stocks had crashed. He was wiped out and higher in sudden debt than our eighth-story offices. He rushed to the window, crashed through the glass and plunged to the sidewalk."

Foster decided music was safer.

By 1930 he was drummer-singer with the Husk O'Hare Band, "The Genial Gentlemen of the Air."

"I was a lousy drummer, but I sang sweetly on WBBM and WGN. It was less sweet when Husk, an accomplished drinker, would fire all of us. He usually canned us every night, telling us he had another band warming up in the john.

"As we were boarding the bus, he'd send Maury the piano player over to tell us we were rehired," Foster says.

One night, after being fired by Husk and before they could be rehired, Foster and eight other bandsmen joined Don Pedro "and His Magic Violin."

"He was pretty big. He got an offer to play the Rainbow Room atop New York's Rockefeller Center. Pedro refused to wear the required monkey suits.

"He spurned the job. It went instead to the little-known band of Xavier Cugat. It made Cugat," Foster says.

Still, in 1936, the Don Pedro band was hired for the coast-to-coast NBC radio broadcasts of the Marow Oil Shampoo Show. Enter Mrs. Marow.

"She doted on Don Pedro, his violin and his mustache. All was dandy. Until one night, during the 1936 presidential election campaign between President Franklin D. Roosevelt, a Democrat, and his Republican foe, Kansas Gov. Alf Landon.

"Mrs. Marow was laughing with Don Pedro and gushing about his mustache and asked him who he liked. Don Pedro praised Landon. Mrs. Marow, a Democrat, threw down her drink, fired us and stormed out," Foster says.

Don Pedro was broke. Foster put up the bus fare and the band rode the Blue Goose Line — 17 changes of buses — to Miami Beach. Sing sad songs.

Foster says one hotel there could pay them only for a week. No sweat; they hopped to Miami's Tropical Jungle club. Three nights later it burned down.

Such is life. The band got work at the Club Forest, gambling den of Hollywood, Fla. The first night there, a woman won $40,000 the club didn't have.

"The sheriff even padlocked my drums," Foster says. "We ate nothing but oranges for weeks."

World War II came. The Navy assigned Foster to the battleship Colorado at San Diego. The bandsmen were coming down a rope ladder one day.

A sax player tumbled. He landed on Foster. Foster landed in San Diego Bay. He still limps a bit.

After the war, Foster played with the Ted Fio Rito Band. Things got sticky in Reno the night Ted lost $50,000 gambling. The band crawled to Los Angeles for a club date.

On their arrival, the club owner dropped dead. Foster decided to move on to San Diego. He went to San Diego State University, earning a doctoral degree in education, and met Poly. She was a fellow student.

"He offered to teach me to sing. He never did. He just married me," she says.

Christian stand-up comic former Satanic high priest

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mike Warnke is one of a kind — he's part evangelist and part stand-up comic. Or, as some folks say, he's "a standup Jimmy Swaggart with long hair."

The 43-year-old Christian humorist and recording artist, who has shoulder-length locks, is also a former heroin addict and satanist high priest who once had more than 1,500 worshippers.

Noting his background, he says: "If God can use me, he can use anybody."

He shares his religious faith at up to 22 personal appearances a month. He's just released his 12th humor album, "One in a Million," on DaySpring Records of Nashville.

He employs 30 people at his ministry office in Burgin, Ky., where he has noted a marked rise in telephone calls from people, including the police, asking about the occult.

"There's been a dramatic increase in the past three years," he said in a telephone interview. "We're seeing younger kids getting involved. It used to be people age 20, but now it's 13 and 14. I'd say 70 percent of the calls deal with the occult. This is a frightening trend."

Warnke, who wrote the 1972 book "The Satan Seller," which has sold more than 3 million copies, believes there's a definite link between the occult and heavy metal music.

"We've never investigated a case with the police where heavy metal was not a factor. The music drives the lyrics into the conscious and subconscious. Then there's the clothing, the attitudes of the musicians, the things they say and the lifestyles they purport, and the symbols."

Mike Warnke

The symbols include demonic-looking caricatures, horns worn on heads and upside down crosses.

He compares music to lumber in that either can be used for good purposes or otherwise. "If you put a 2-by-4 in the hands of the Ku Klux Klan, it's bad. But in the hands of a carpenter, it's not."

Warnke, who has been featured on the TV show "20-20," says he began his involvement with the occult at age 12 or 13. He joined a coven in the early 1960s when he was in college and became a satanist high priest.

"I was the star sinner on campus," he recalled.

He used heroin heavily. And some of his satanic followers tried to murder him by injecting him with an overdose of heroin and leaving him on the streets of San Bernadino, Calif., to die.

Passers-by saw him and took him to a hospital, where his recovery began.

"If I'd have had to kick it (addiction) in the streets, I'd have been dead for sure," Warnke said.

He later joined the Navy and served one tour of duty in Vietnam. He became a Christian and devoted himself to preaching against satanism.

After his records started coming out, Record World magazine honored him as the contemporary and inspirational non-musical artist of the year, 1976-79.

He estimates he speaks to more than 1 million people a year. He has performed for the queen of Denmark and the king of Sweden and been to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada.

He's drafting a sequel to "The Satan Seller" that is due out soon.

"I've never been a perfect Christian," Warnke said. "That's where I deviate from others who seem to have a mandate to tell everyone else how to live. Jesus has been a perfect Jesus, and I just try to spend time talking about him and not me.

"What I'm trying to put across to Christians is that you don't have to be stereotypical. The Lord will use you no matter who you are. For people who don't know Jesus, we hope they see him and get saved."

Will knight fall before developers' dreams?

DESTIN, Fla. (AP) — Residents of this Panhandle resort are charging to rescue from developers a 30-foot-tall, steel-and-concrete Green Knight outside a lounge and liquor store of the same name.

The armor-clad statue has been a tourist attraction along U.S. 98 for more than 20 years. Community supporters raised money to repair the sentinel after a 1985 hurricane took off an arm.

Now, about 200 fans of the knight have signed a petition urging City Hall to save the statue from developers who want to take it down to make way for a shopping center.

The knight qualifies as roadside architecture, a part of Americana that is rapidly disappearing, said city Librarian Dooney Tickner, who is leading the petition drive.

The green warrior has received at least a temporary reprieve because of a delay in plans for the shopping center, said W.G. Ivey, owner-manager of the lounge and package store.

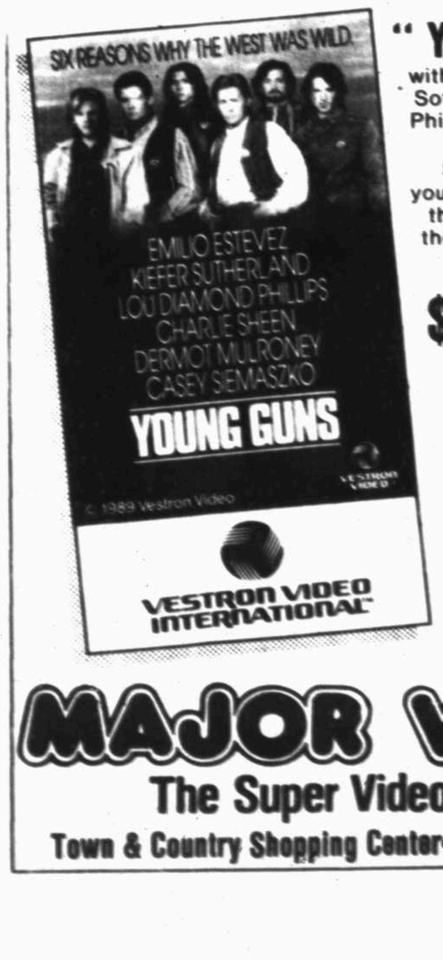

Bikers hit the trail

Analysts wonder where excess oil is

NEW YORK (AP) — The rapid rise in oil prices since OPEC agreed to slash production six weeks ago has exceeded expections of many, but analysts aren't ready to declare the cartel's accord a success.

Prices of Middle East oil remain well below OPEC's targeted price of $18 a barrel, and some of the recent gains still may be lost if the excess oil produced by the cartel late last year ever hits the market.

Since Nov. 28, when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced it would curtail production, Middle Eastern crude oil has risen more than $3 a barrel, from approximately $11 to about $15.

West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark grade of crude oil, has shot up to $18 a barrel from $15.03 the day the accord was finalized.

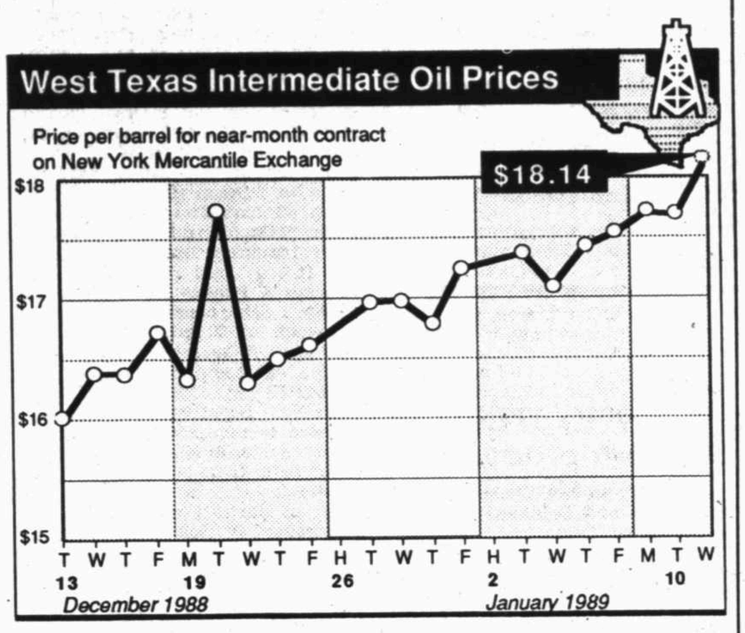

Many market observers had expected prices to rise but they had forecast a more gradual increase with the excess oil keeping prices soft for some time. Despite the recent increases, analysts remain doubtful about the future.

"I don't see $18 in the year for OPEC basket prices, at least not for any sustained period," said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "There is an overproduction that we will still see the consequences of down the road."

At the time of the OPEC agreement in November, the 13-member cartel was producing approximately 22.5 million barrels of oil a day. In December, it rose to about 23 million. For January, OPEC's production will be about 19 million barrels, slightly above its new quota of 18.5 million. OPEC's accord took effect Jan. 1 and extends for six months.

Since it takes four to five weeks for most Middle East oil to reach U.S. markets, analysts believed that shiploads of crude pumped late last year would be arriving any day, driving prices lower. But they haven't, and the question manyare asking is: Where is it?

Analyst: Oil import fee can't be justified

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Houston oil analyst Robert L. Bradley Jr. said Wednesday a tax on imported oil cannot be justified on national security grounds and would hurt the economy by saddling other industries and consumers with higher energy costs.

Bradley, 33, speaking at the Cato Institute here, disagreed with many petroleum experts and oil-state politicians who have called for a tariff on crude oil and oil products to protect the declining domestic industry, consumers and the military from foreign suppliers whose interests might run counter to those of the United States.

Earlier predictions of an oil shortage have been proved to be unfounded, said Bradley, the author of a new Cato-sponsored book titled, "The Mirage of Oil Protection." He said the world has enough low-priced oil, even without new discoveries, to last through half of the next century.

Bradley said he places more trust in entrepreneurs than he does in government to head off or to handle an energy crisis and advocated the sale of the federal Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) to private enterprise.

The SPR, which Bradley described as "a big mistake," is the nation's emergency energy stockpile, containing 560 million barrels of oil in salt caverns on the Texas and Louisiana coasts.

Bradley contended that the world today is a far different place than it was in the late 1970s, when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) stopped selling to the United States, That action resulted in long lines at gasoline stations and contributed to runaway inflation in America.

It was then that Congress authorized the SPR as a kind of insurance policy that could furnish energy for a prolonged period should an embargo or other supply disruption threaten national security.

The oil in SPR was purchased at a cost averaging $35 a barrel, Bradley said. Today, the price of oil is about $15 a barrel.

But Bradley declared that diversity of supply and increased deliverability have created buffers against a major supply disruption, like the one OPEC imposed.

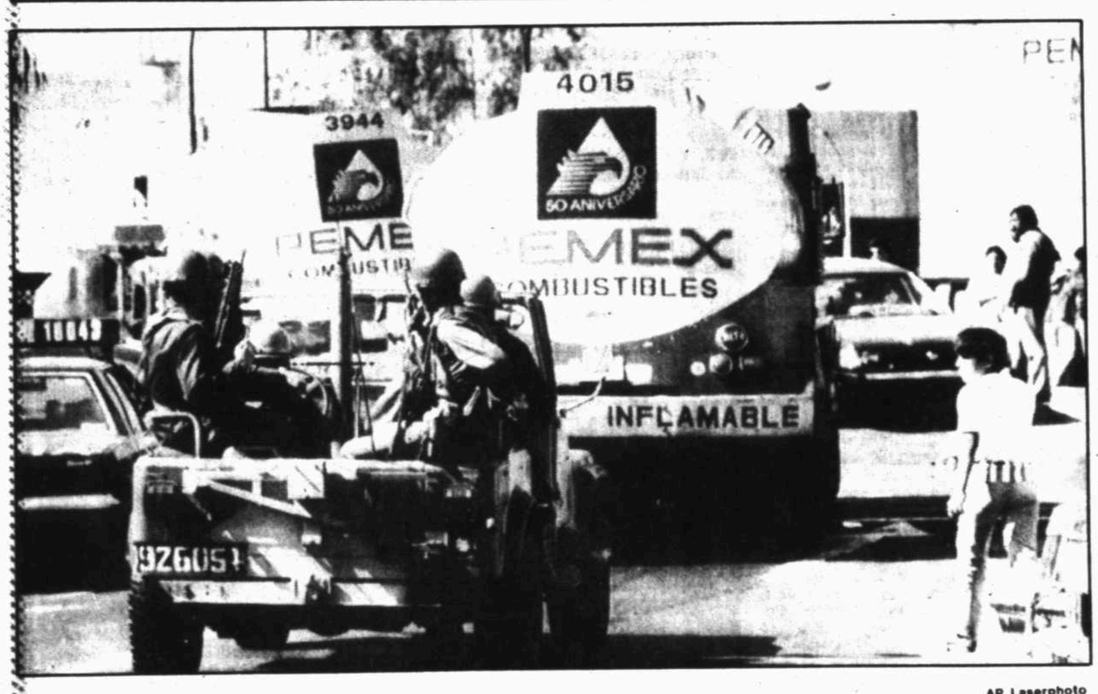

In addition, OPEC members faced with greater competition "have a strong will not to shock the market," Bradley said. In the event of such a shock, natural gas producers could quickly fill much of the energy shortfall, he added.

Earlier this month, President Reagan said he agrees with a finding by the Commerce Department that petroleum imports threaten national security, but said his administration would take no action to restrict imports.

The department investigation found that "declining domestic oil production, rising oil imports and growing free world dependence on potentially insecure sources of supply raise a number of concerns including vulnerability to a major supply disruption."

But the department said decontrol of oil prices, the SPR, the diversity of import sources, and the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement, which promises new oil supplies to the United States, were working to increase energy security.

A native Texan, Bradley conceded that his opinions, based on extensive research, are not popular with some of his friends who have suffered from a dramatic drop in oil prices in recent years.

Soldiers ride behind trucks distributing gasoline Wednesday in Mexico City following shortages caused by panic buying after union members stopped working.

Soldiers occupy Pemex plants

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — An uneasy calm seems to have set in around several Petroleos Mexicanos plants along the Texas-Mexico border after the facilities were placed under military guard, observers said.

Mexican army soldiers were ordered into the plants Tuesday night and Wednesday after union members stopped work following the arrest of a national union leader.

One local political observer said, "Now we're going to see who blinks first — the government or the union."

The arrest of Joaquin Hernandez Galicia on gun-running charges Tuesday was widely seen as a surprise challenge to the powerful union by the new administration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

A news crew from WFAA-TV in Dallas at the facility Wednesday night reported that operations were normal despite the military occupation.

In other parts of the Texas-Mexico border, Pemex installations were also under military guard. At Reynosa, Mexico, across from McAllen, Texas, soldiers had been at the Pemex refinery since Tuesday, said an editor for El Manana of Reynosa.

"Some 15,000 employees work at the refinery and they were ousted by the soldiers at about 4 p.m.," said the journalist by telephone.

Soldiers were also stationed at Pemex facilities in Tampico and Ciudad Madero on the Gulf of Mexico.

Local police delegate Jesus Torres Espejo, meanwhile, said the Tamaulipas state security chief ordered police, including state judicial police agents, confined to headquarters in all 48 municipalities.

The government oil monopoly also maintains a freight forwarding office in Laredo but things there also were reported calm.

Pemex, union at a glance

Associated Press

Here is a look at Mexico's government petroleum monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos S.A., better known as Pemex, and the Oil Workers Union:

THE COMPANY: Pemex is one of the biggest oil companies in the world, accounts for nearly half the government's revenues and is intimately identified with the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party.

It was created in 1938 after President Lazaro Cardenas nationalized foreign oil firms on March 18 of that year.

It is not a member of the oil cartel OPEC but tends to follow the pricing policies of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

ASSETS: By law, Pemex has a complete monopoly over the exploration and production of all hydrocarbons in Mexico, as well as refining and the production of 36 "basic" petrochemicals. It controls every aspect of the petroleum industry except for service stations, which are private.

Pemex claims assets of $31 billion, including nine refineries and a score of petrochemical plants, as well as oil tankers, offshore drilling rigs, one of the tallest buildings in the country and over 32,000 miles of pipelines.

PRODUCTION: Pemex is the world's sixth-largest producer of oil and the fifth-largest producer of petrochemicals.

Crude oil production is about 2.8 million barrels per day. Mexico is exporting about 1.36 million barrels a day, or about 40 percent of its oil, to 50 nations around the world. About half of the exports go to the United States.

Pemex supplies 90 percent of Mexico's energy needs.

FERC approves WyCal

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming-California Pipeline Co. officials said today they won't order the pipe for a natural gas line from Wyoming to California until they have firm contracts with buyers of the gas.

A subsidiary of The Coastal Corp., WyCal announced Wednesday that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission had given final approval to its pipeline proposal and that construction of the $665 million, 1,000-mile line would begin later this year.

Jim Paul, president and chief executive officer of Coastal Corp., said the company is a few weeks away from signing contracts that could allow them to order pipe. He said the company has not decided on a threshold of contracts that will start the project rolling.

Paul said the company will not wait for a proposed low-interest loan from the state of Wyoming to start work on the pipeline. But he said they are confident WyCal will get the $250 million loan from the Permanent Mineral Trust Fund.

Record settlement made in sex discrimination suit

CHICAGO (AP) — Women praised the largest sex discrimination settlement ever reached by the U.S. Labor Department as a "moral victory" Wednesday, but the bank involved claimed no defeat.

The $14 million settlement, to be shared by an estimated 5,000 women and minority group members, arose out of a 1977 case in which the Labor Department accused Chicago's Harris Trust and Savings Bank of promoting white men at a higher rate and paying them more than women and minority workers with comparable skills.

Under terms of the agreement announced Tuesday, women and minority workers employed by Harris from 1973 to 1988 will share $14 million in back pay.

In addition, the bank must revise its affirmative action policies and set up training programs for women and minorities seeking promotions.

"This was for myself and many others a moral victory, a victory of principle," said Marti Page, a former Harris employee. She said six years of hard work left her doing little

MARKETS

Prices hold on above $18 mark

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures retreated a bit this morning, but held on to most of the gains registered Wednesday as the near-month contract surged above $18.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange Wednesday, the February contract for West Texas Intermediate slipped back 8 cents by midmorning, after picking up 45 cents to close at $18.14 a barrel on Wednesday.

Analysts said a number of factors contributed to the day's gains, including a sharp drop in crude oil supplies, signs that OPEC is holding to its agreement to cut back production and possible Mexican supply disruptions resulting from strikes against Pemex.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed last November to reduce output by 3 million barrels to 18.5 million barrels a day. WTI prices have since climbed from the $15 range and analysts expect strong demand to push prices even higher.

The accord took effect Jan. 1 and continues for six months.

Dollar drops more after intervention

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against nearly all major currencies in moderately active European trading early today. Gold prices rose.

Dealers expected the dollar to trade within a narrow range while the market recovered from Wednesday's concerted intervention by U.S. and European central banks, which succeeded in knocking the currency lower.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.83 Japanese yen to a closing 126.12 yen. Later, in London, it slipped further to 126.05 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7900 from $1.7815 late Wednesday.

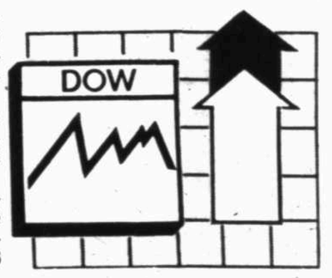

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $404.75 a troy ounce, up from $403.50 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $404.85.

In Zurich, the bid price was $405, up from $403.30 bid late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.88 to close at a bid $406.36.

Silver bullion rose in London to a bid price of $5.95 a troy ounce, up from $5.94 bid late Wednesday.

Dow rally finishes above 2,200

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market revived its early-1989 rally Wednesday with a late round of buying that carried the Dow Jones industrial average past 2,200.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 13.22 points to 2,206.43, its highest close since it stood at 2,246.74 on Oct. 16, 1987.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 822 up, 606 down and 532 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 148.95 million shares, up from 140.42 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 175.71 million shares.

In each of the previous four sessions the Dow had crossed 2,200 and then retreated.

However, when no strong selling pressure developed in Wednesday's session, the bulls got another chance, and they took advantage of it.

Brokers said the market drew continuing support from buying by money managers at investing institutions seeking to put some of their large cash reserves to work at the start of a new year.

Newton Zinder at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. said technical analysis did not show any particular significance to the 2,200 level, which the market passed easily in early 1987 and which showed no sign of support in the collapse later that year.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $12.27 billion, or 0.44 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added .80 to 158.65.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 1.96 to 326.29, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.63 at 282.01.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained .72 to 385.31. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 313.86, up .91.

Baker breaks off negotiations with Drexel

NEW YORK (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and former Sen. Howard Baker have scrapped negotiations about a possible management role for him at the troubled Wall Street giant, which recently agreed to a record $650 million plea bargain on securities fraud charges.

By mutual consent, Drexel and Baker said Wednesday, "The talks ended, and the senator will not be taking a position with the investment baking firm."

Steven Anreder, a Drexel spokesman, would not elaborate beyond the statement, and there was no answer at the Tennessee office of Baker's spokesman Thomas Griscom late Wednesday.

New England ski season headed downhill

BOSTON (AP) — This is the winter of the New England ski industry's discontent: Snowfall is below average and business is off despite efforts to blanket the slopes with man-made white stuff.

Christopher H. Gill, manager of Great American Ski Renting Co.'s store in North Conway, N.H., said Wednesday "the skiing is really good," thanks to artificial snow making in his area. But, he said, business is dov n about 25 percent from last year.

USDA expects farmers to be in high cotton

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1988 cotton crop is expected to be at a 7-year high of 15.4 million bales, up 5 percent from the 1987 harvest and 2 percent more than forecast last month, the Agriculture Department said.

In its new estimate based on Jan. 1 conditions, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board also said Wednesday orange production, estimated at 215 million boxes, would be up 7 percent from last season.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Methods to correct IRA complications simple

By BILL DOYLE

Q. The company for which my husband formerly worked had no retirement plan. So we put $2,250 annually into a spousal individual retirement account and took that amount as a deduction on our income tax returns.

Last year, after we had made our 1988 IRA contribution, he got a better job at higher pay and with a pension plan. Our 1988 adjusted gross income was well over $50,000. So we can't take an IRA deduction. Will we be in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service?

Doyle

A. You won't be, if you handle things properly. You have your choice of two methods to use.

You can take back that $2,250 IRA contribution for 1988, plus any money it has earned in interest, dividends or appreciation in value, before the due date for filing your 1988 income tax return — April 15, for most people.

Or you can leave that $2,250 in your IRA and treat it as a nondeductible contribution. If you do it that way, you must fill out and file Form 8606 with your income tax return.

If you don't do either of these things, the money you put into your IRA last year will be counted as an excess contribution and you will be subject to a 6 percent penalty tax on that money each and every year it stays in your IRA.

The first method is the simple one. It works well, unless you put your IRA contribution some place, such as a certificate of deposit or annuity, on which an early withdrawal penalty is charged. In that case, it's usually better to use the second method.

The big problem with making nondeductible contributions is the annual record keeping and eventually the problems figuring out your income tax bill when you finally start making regular IRA withdrawals.

The withdrawals resulting from deductible IRA contributions are fully taxable. Withdrawals resulting from nondeductible IRA contributions are not taxable but withdrawals of earnings on nondeductible contributions are taxable.

That comes about because of one of the many complicated provisions in the Tax Reform Act of 1986, which has come to be known as "The Accountants' and Tax Lawyers' Full-Employment Act."

Q. I caught two typos in one of your recent columns.

First, you wrote, "You are required to make your first IRA withdrawal by April 1 of the year in which you reach age 70½." Shouldn't that read, "... April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach 70 1/2"?

Secondly, you explained that the first required IRA withdrawal can be taken by "end of the year in which you turn 70½ — Dec. 31, 1989, in your case." You added, "That will make your first withdrawal taxable in 1988." Shouldn't that have read "...1989."?

A. Yes, to both questions. I can't blame those mistakes on typographical errors. I goofed and have been hearing about it from many, many readers. I offer sincere apologies, but no excuses.

Q. I'm now 70½. As my wife is deceased, I have named my three children, ages 31, 36 and 38, as my IRA beneficiaries. Do I use the age of the oldest or youngest to figure joint life expectancy for minimum required IRA withdrawals?

An article I read said an Internal Revenue Service rule limits the allowable age differential for the purpose of this calculation to 10 years. Can you check that out?

A. The article you read was correct. That rule went into effect January 1. Previously, under a more lenient rule, an IRA participant was required to withdraw at least 50 percent of the account during his or her lifetime, regardless of the beneficiary's age — unless the beneficiary is the spouse.

You can't use the age of any of your children. You'll have to use ages 70 and 60 to calculate joint life expectancy for IRA withdrawal purposes.

SETTLEMENT

Harris officials called the settlement "a window out" of a sticky legal situation that cost 11 years of legal fees and bad publicity.

"We do not acknowledge any wrongdoing," company spokeswoman Mary Ullrich said.

In pursuing the case before an administrative law judge, the federal government charged systemic discrimination throughout the company. The Labor Department's solicitor, George R. Salem, said the settlement would benefit not only Harris workers, but "all women and minority group workers in the American labor force."

Emily Richards, president of the National Association of Bank Women, representing 27,000 women in financial services, said women make up 70 percent of the work force in banks and savings and loans. By the year 2000, 66 percent of new entrants will be women.

"I hope the Harris settlement will help other companies realize that women's needs must be met," she said.

Of course, many financial institutions already have affirmative action programs that meet such needs. But that wasn't the case at Harris in the 1970s, contended Women Employed, a Chicago-based group that sued Harris on behalf of women and minority group workers who found themselves trapped in dead-end jobs.

"You show me one male college graduate hired in 1970 who was given a job with a typewriter," said Ms. Page. After completing a college graduate management training program with "excellent" reviews, she said, she was assigned to type insurance forms.

Harris denied any systemwide discrimination.

"Show us the individuals ... and we will make this wrong right," said Ms. Ullrich. "We would have said 'fine,' no questions asked. But to say every woman, every minority — no, no."

Not every employee of the bank who is entitled to the settlement will collect. Some women don't feel they were discriminated against, and are refusing their share.

"I won't accept an award," said one female Harris executive who asked not to be named.

But others are more than happy about it.

Janet Schumacher said she waited 12 years to be promoted to a job her male colleagues got in an average of three years.

Spindletop rained 'black gold' 89 years ago

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Eighty-nine years ago Tuesday the ground rumbled and the sky seemingly rained black gold amid cheers of roughnecks at the foot of a spewing derrick.

The place was called the Spindletop field and it put Beaumont on the map and brought Southeast Texas into an era of boom.

History repeated itself in 1925 when Yount-Lee Oil Co. struck paydirt again, ushering in a second boom and adding to the shacks, stores and stables that sprouted amid the derricks.

The shacks were home to families whose members made their livings from the oil business and whose children played hide and seek in the mud streets in the shadow of the derricks.

Only a handful of those children remain alive. But for some of them, now in their 80s and 90s, the word "Spindletop" still is magic.

"I looked out and it was the most beautiful sight in the world," says Anna Rose, 80, of the second gusher. Her father ran a blacksmith shop at Spindletop, and she and her sister, Louise Jones, now 84, remember helping him with some of the tasks.

"Now he never made us do anything too heavy, but when we'd be at home he'd say, 'Girl, come on here and help me,'" Ms. Jones told the Beaumont Enterprise.

They and the many other Spindletop kids walked to South Park School in mud that sometimes was a foot deep.

"Cars got stuck all the time trying to come out there," Ms. Rose says, adding that most people used wagons, the easiest way to get around in the mud.

"My brother had a bicycle and he'd try to ride me on it, too," she says. "He'd fall off and I'd fall off both of us in the mud."

The town was "shack after shack, right down the road," Ms. Rose says. The home they lived in burned down three different times because the area didn't have a fire department.

There were no doctors to tend to injuries. "If somebody broke their leg on the rig, they'd just tie it to a board until it healed," Ms. Jones says.

While most boys went to work in the oil fields when they were 14 or 15, they were required to be 21 years old, which led to a little fudging sometimes when applicants gave their age, says Elam Campbell, who worked in confectionary at Spindletop pushing a broom, jerking sodas and running a post office. He went on to the oil field when he got older.

He remembers applying for work when he was 22 and being interviewed by a timekeeper and paymaster whom he had spoken with at different drilling sites.

"When he asked me my age and I said 22, he looked at me and said, 'Son, I've signed you up I don't know how many times and how many places, and after all those years that's the first birthday you ever had.'"

EXCESS

"I suppose some production could be in transit, but we were hearing about surplus production as early as October and it hasn't shown up in the statistics," said economist Gordon Pye of Irving Trust Co. "It calls into question the accuracy of the OPEC figures we read about. ... Either that or it's being consumed more rapidly than anyone thinks."

Nauman Barakat, vice president of energy investments for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said he believes much of the excess oil is sitting in Middle Eastern storage tanks.

"There was an intentional decision by the cartel to keep as much of that crude as possible off the market so as not to flood the market and force prices lower," Barakat said.

Demand for OPEC oil in major oil-consuming countries like the United States and Japan has been stronger than projected. A report Wednesday from the International Energy Agency showed industrialized countries consumed 38.4 million barrels a day of oil in the fourth quarter, 1 million barrels or 4 percent more than previously forecast. The report said U.S. consumption was up 4.5 percent while Japanese consumption rose 6 percent.

Nevertheless, many analysts believe high demand won't be enough to boost or sustain prices for Middle East oil at the $18 level for the length of the agreement. One OPEC country, the United Arab Emirates, has already acknowledged it is producing above its quota.

"The question still is 'Will OPEC stick to its quota beyond the first quarter?'" said Lichtblau.

GLANCE

THE UNION: The Oil Workers Union controls more than half the lucrative drilling contracts let by Pemex and 95 percent of its jobs. Pemex has about 180,000 employees and is considered overstaffed by industry experts.

Pemex workers are some of the highest paid in Mexico and enjoy some of the best fringe benefits. Jobs can be inherited and are sometimes sold under the table.

PIPELINE

A competing pipeline company that believes it too will obtain an FERC permit said it already has tentative contracts to sell at least 328.5 million cubic feet of natural gas for enhanced oil recovery projects in central California around Bakersfield.

Still, Coastal officials remain confident WyCal will obtain enough contracts to start construction on their pipeline this year.

"We're talking to most of the potential customers for natural gas for the enhanced oil recovery market," Coastal spokesman Jim Bailey said Wednesday in a telephone interview from his Houston office. "Many of them have expressed an interest in negotiating contracts with us and we are now very actively proceeding with those negotiations."

Bailey also said there was a question of whether the tentative contracts signed by Kern River Gas Transmission Co. for its pipeline are binding.

WyCal first received conditional FERC approval for its project in November.

When the company announced the FERC approval Wednesday vice chairman Harold Burrow said the certification "clears the way for WyCal to begin construction of the first interstate pipeline system in the state of California."

"Our target is to start transporting gas to California by early 1991," he added.

WyCal has budgeted $665 million for the pipeline's construction. The company proposes to send roughly 650 mmcf of natural gas per day from gas fields in southwestern Wyoming and other areas to California.

The California Public Utilities Commission recently ordered California utilities and pipeline project sponsors to determine what capacity is necessary and to settle on a proposal by Feb. 1. Paul said his company does not need CPU approval to build the interstate pipeline because they already have federal approval. If Coastal contracts with any California utilities, those companies would have to get CPU approval for their part in the deal, Paul added.

"It's approved by the FERC and will be built with or without California approval," he said.

A full-page advertisement WyCal placed in several Wyoming newspapers Wednesday said its project would create an estimated 700 jobs and inject $22.6 million into Wyoming's economy during the construction phase.

The project also is expected to generate roughly $35 million in new tax revenues annually for Wyoming, with more than $500 million produced in a 15-year period.

Last year the Wyoming Legislature agreed to offer the company building the pipeline a $250 million low-interest loan to make the natural gas more competitive in California. The loan is seen as a way to reduce transportation costs by 6 cents or 7 cents per thousand cubic feet.

However, two Sweetwater County legislators are recommending the repeal of the low-interest loan program.

Exxon plans Louisiana lubricant operation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Exxon will begin immediately to build a $45.4 million state-of-the-art lubricant blending and packaging plant just across the Mississippi River from its massive operation here, officials announced today.

"We've convinced Exxon that we are a good neighbor and wanted them to make a $45 million investment here," Gov. Buddy Roemer said at a news conference attended by Exxon officials.

Exxon is one of the state's largest employers with 6,000 personnel and a $7 billion Louisiana investment, noted Gord Thomson, Exxon USA marketing vice president.

EPSON®

LQ-2550

High-performance printer.

Epson's powerful LQ-2550 is sophistication made simple.

Superb Letter Quality. Highest quality 24-pin technology for superior high-resolution text and graphics up to 360 x 360 dpi. Prints in seven colors, in a variety of Letter Quality resident fonts.

Paper-Handling Versatility. Handles fanfold paper, single sheets, envelopes and forms. Epson's exclusive SmartPark™ lets you change between these different types of paper with the touch of a button.

Advanced Features. Printer modes, printer settings, SmartPark operations and page-format pre-sets are easily selected via Epson's exclusive LCD SelecType front control panel. Print speeds up to 400 characters per second (12 CPI) in draft mode and 133 CPS in Letter Quality mode (12 CPI). Optional dual-bin cut sheet feeder, pull tractor and 32K buffer board.

The LQ-2550 is backed by Epson's one year limited warranty.

Epson's FX printers are legendary in the computer products industry. The FX-850 and FX-1050 continue Epson's long tradition of quality, performance and reliability. Now with increased speed and advanced features, the legend grows stronger.

Paper-Handling Performance. The narrow-carriage FX-850 and wide-carriage FX-1050 are equipped with SmartPark,™ a unique Epson innovation that lets you switch from fanfold paper to single sheets or envelopes without removing hardware or paper.

High-Speed Productivity. Both print 264 characters per second (CPS) in draft mode and 54 CPS in Near Letter Quality mode—insulated for quiet operation.

Backed by the Leader. Like all Epson computer products, the FX-850 & FX-1050 printers are supported by a nationwide service network and backed by Epson's one year limited warranty.

Super Bowl: It's Rice vs. Thomas

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cornerback Eric Thomas of the Cincinnati Bengals doubts there will be another fantastic finish in his rematch against San Francisco's Jerry Rice in the Super Bowl.

Thomas, a second-year veteran, says he's not worried about trying to cover the dangerous receiver who took advantage of him for two touchdowns last year in the 49ers' improbable 27-26 victory at Riverfront Stadium.

"I'm not scared going in," Thomas said. "I don't feel like I have to be frightened by anybody. Jerry Rice is a good receiver, but he's just one of many I've played against."

THE LAST time Thomas covered Rice, they were pivotal figures in one of the NFL's most unbelievable endings.

Thomas was a second-round draft choice from Tulane starting the second regular-season game because of injury to veteran Louis Breeden. Rice already had the reputation as one of the NFL's best receivers.

Rice burned Thomas for a 34-yard touchdown reception that kept the 49ers close in the third quarter. Thomas already had been burned by Mike Wilson for a 38-yard touchdown pass from Joe Montana in the second quarter.

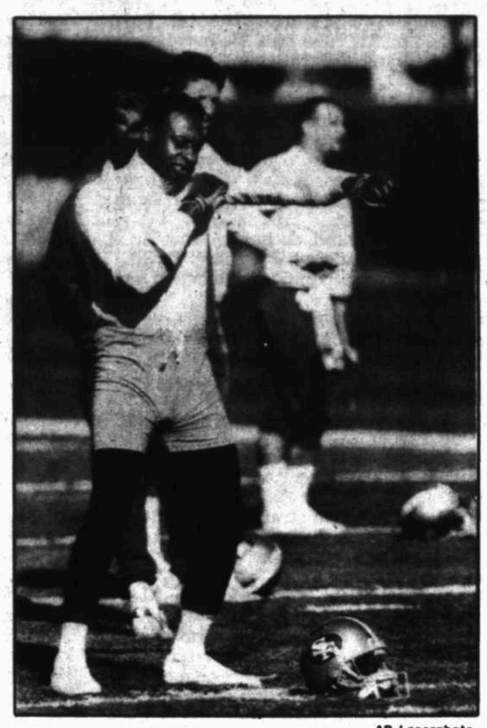

Cincinnati had the ball and a 26-20 lead with 54 seconds to play, but failed to run out the clock and James Brooks was dropped for a loss at the Bengals' 25-yard line on a fourth-down sweep called by Coach Sam Wyche, giving the ball to the 49ers with two seconds left.

It was a disaster waiting to happen.

"I don't know who was mixed up on the coverage, but I do think we had a breakdown on coverage," Thomas said. "We should have had another guy over on my side. But I'm not going to sit back and point and say somebody was out of position. ... I should have made the play."

He didn't. He kept yielding to Rice, who broke off his pattern in the end zone several yards in front of Thomas. Montana's lob was on the mark, and Rice went up for an easy catch as Thomas slipped.

...preparing for fight with Eric Thomas

"He just jumped up and made the play," Thomas said. "There was nothing that spectacular about the play, I don't think."

There was something extraordinary about the outcome. It came just two days before the NFL players' strike, and started the Bengals' snowball to a 4-11 season. It also turned up the heat on Wyche, whose job was in jeopardy.

The ending earned a place in the NFL's fantastic finishes, and left a cloud over the team during the strike. Wyche thinks the ending was magnified by the timing.

"It was followed by a month layoff that everyone didn't have anything to write about but that, so it got some headlines," he said.

Thomas agrees the devastating ending would have been softened if the Bengals' regulars had played again the next weekend.

"I think had we come on and played the following week, I don't think it would have affected us that much," he said.

The Bengals' secondary has shown major improvement this season, with Thomas playing a starring role. He had seven interceptions this season, second in the AFC.

RICE ALSO has had a good season. His 1,306 receiving yards ranked second in the NFL, and he averaged 20.4 yards per catch — the best in the NFC.

The Bengals are playing more bump-and-run coverage this year, with success. Thomas said they won't change their approach in Super Bowl XXIII just because Rice is there.

"Jerry Rice is a good receiver, no question, but he doesn't strike any fear in my heart to where if we get in man-to-man coverage I'm going to back 10 yards off," he said. "I don't play football like that."

Thomas thinks the speed of the Bengals' secondary — which has nicknamed itself the "SWAT Team" — can contain Rice.

"We're all fast," he said. "We're all just as fast as Jerry Rice. If you line us up in a 40-yard dash, I think we'll probably all beat Jerry Rice in the 40."

Guard Sapolu expects better Super Bowl view

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Jesse Sapolu remembers the last time the San Francisco 49ers went to the Super Bowl, and he's glad this year will be different.

In 1985, he was on injured reserve and watched the game from the sidelines.

"Personally speaking, this is a dream come true for me," Sapolu said Wednesday at the 49ers' training facility.

"I'm sure that anyone who's been on injured reserve before can tell you that it doesn't matter if you're on the team or not," he said. "(But) you still feel like an outsider ... Even though you get the money and everything, you're like a stranger on the outside looking in, and you know that you haven't contributed to the team."

The 49ers, hoping to complete the bulk of their Super Bowl preparations before next week's media crush in Miami, planned to hold what Coach Bill Walsh said would be their toughest practice today. They will practice again Friday and have a day off Saturday before flying to Florida on Sunday.

Walsh and his assistants have already put together a game plan for the Jan. 22 meeting with Cincinnati, after watching films of the 1982 Super Bowl win over the Bengals as well as of last year's 27-26 last-second victory in Cincinnati.

Sapolu, a longshot 11th-round draft choice out of Hawaii in 1983, fractured his right foot working out in Hawaii prior to the 1984 season and couldn't play in the first 10 games of the season. Activated for the Cleveland game in Week 11, he re-fractured the foot the following week in practice.

No. 1 Wranglers hit Chap with 18-0 mark

From Staff Reports

In their first home appearance in more than a month, the Midland College basketball team hosts Odessa College at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

The OC Wranglers bring in the nation's Number One ranked team with a spotless 18-0 record, headed by sophomore sensation Larry Johnson, the 6-7 Dallas Skyline product who lasted until the final cut on the 1988 Olympic Team and was a 1988 NJCAA All-American as a freshman.

Considered the top junior college player in the nation, Johnson signed in November with the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Midland College isn't conceding anything to the Wranglers, despite a shortage of players.

The Chaparrals have won four of five games since the Christmas holidays, including a come-from-behind 86-76 win over the New Mexico Junior College Thunderbirds at Hobbs Monday and are now 11-6 overall and 2-2 in conference.

MC head coach Reggie Franklin has been juggling his line-up due to changing personnel, but he's not winning with mirrors.

The Chaps won three of four outings last month in the 16-team BCI Mesa West Rotary Shoot-Out in Mesa, Arizona, nabbing third place. That was a tourney that saw the Chaps with just nine players, since two were academicially ineligible and another missed a flight to Midland.

Freshmen Tim Owens and ric Golightly still are in interim classes and their status for the rest of the semester won't be known until Friday. Sophomore Steve Overstreet left the squad last week, but missing player freshman Randy Williams now is back.

The Chaps and the Wranglers have had some memorable meetings. No team has played Midland more than Odessa. They've met 37 times, with MC winning 24. But OC won four of their five games last season with the Chaps, including a nail-biting 78-73 victory in the Region V finals at Midland.

MC sophomore Charles McCovery, a 6-2 guard, is directing the Chaparral attack now and has been scoring well. McCovery is touted almost as much as Larry Johnson. McCovery is listed as the top junior college guard in the nation and signed last fall with Oklahoma University.

Freshman guard Kethus Hanks, 6-3, took the scoring honors at Hobbs with 26 points, while freshmen Fred Campbell, 6-8, and Darryl King, 6-9, are doing the scoring and rebounding inside. King also is leading the conference in blocked shots.

Freshman Troy Taylor, undersized for a forward at 6-6, has been tough on both ends of the court and is beginning to mesh as a starter.

The Chaps are home next Monday for their only game of that week. They host the Clarendon College Bulldogs in "Elementary School Night", then are open on Jan. 19.

These two teams met five times a year ago with the Wranglers winning four, including a victory over MC in the Region V finals at Chaparral Center. It was one of the best games in the history of the rivalry, however.

If the Wranglers are to lose this season, the Chaps are hoping this is the time.

Wednesday's Answer: Catawba College played in the first two Citrus Bowls back when the years when it was called the Tangerine Bowl in 1947 and 1948. And for kicks, who played in the third Citrus-Tangerine Bowl game?

Horned Frogs upset Hogs

Tech, Texas, SMU all win in close games

Associated Press

The ability to control the tempo of the game and a good defensive performance allowed Texas Christian to upset Arkansas in Southwest Confernece basketball, TCU coach Moe Iba says.

Iba's Horned Frogs upset the Razorbacks, 51-45, in SWC action Wednesday night. In other conference action, Southern Methodist edged Baylor, 70-67, Texas slipped past Rice, 66-65 and Texas Tech narrowly defeated Houston, 76-74, in overtime.

Iba said the deliberate tempo was what his team needed to prevail against a deeper, quicker Arkansas team.

'We were able to handle the ball and got the tempo we wanted," Iba said. 'The players did what we asked them to.

'We were trying to kill 20 seconds off the clock every time down the court but toward the end, we ended up taking even more than that. And that was fine with me."

THE RAZORBACKS had an opportunity to give coach Nolan Richardson his best start in the SWC in four seasons.

'We were a beat behind all night," Richardson said. 'TCU controlled the tempo from start to finish. They had to do that to win.

John Lewis scored 12 points in the second half and wound up with 22 points for the game to lead the Horned Frogs.

Todd Day, with 10 points, was the only Razorback in double figures. Arkansas shot only 33 percent from the field to 48 percent for the Horned Frogs.

The game went into overtime after Richard Hollis, who scored 18 points after going 0-5 in the first half, hit a 3-pointer to knot the score at 70.

Tech's biggest accomplishment was holding onto its lead for a change, said Coach Gerald Myers. The Raiders have been plagued by second-half lapses in losses to Rice and Kansas.

"It was the same old thing when the game got tight, but tonight we held on and won it," he said. "Sean hit those free throws to win it at the free throw line and that should give us some confidence."

Senior guard Kato Armstrong scored 27 points to lead SMU to a close 70-67 Southwest Conference victory over Baylor.

Eric Longino, Armstrong's backcourt running mate, scored eight points in the last six minutes of play and 20 for the game to help SMU stave off the Bears.

BAYLOR OVERCAME an 18-point second half deficit (50-32) to tie the score at 55-55 with 6:15 remaining.

Longino finished the contest with 20 points for the Mustangs, who improved to 2-0 in the SWC and 6-5 overall.

Julius Denton scored 19 points to pace Baylor, which fell to 0-3 in the conference (4-10 overall). Junior guard Donnell Hayden and freshman center Joey Fatta added 11 points apiece.

Travis Mays scored 32 points, including a Southwest Conference record nine 3-point shots, to lead the Texas Longhorns to a 66-65 win over the Rice Owls.

The previous record was seven 3-point shots. Mays also broke a conference record of 14 with his 17 attempted 3-pointers. Both prior records were shared by several players.

Dana Hardy led Rice with 16 points, followed by Andy Gilchrist with 15 points and 11 rebounds. Alvin Heggs had 12 points and seven rebounds for Texas.

"We definitely wanted to get it to Travis because he had it going," Penders said. "He was the only one who was hitting."

Rocky marriage between Keeling, San Angelo ends

The rocky marriage between Jimmie Keeling and San Angelo football is finally over after 10 years, 59 victories, 44 losses, three ties and two trips to the state Class 5A playoffs.

Despite the length of tenure, this was never a marriage made in heaven. It's been a rocky road and the above results were obviously not what San Angelo football fans have in mind.

Williamson

Those aren't bad marks. After all, Keeling is the only coach outside of Odessa Permian and Midland Lee to put a team in the state playoffs in the 1980s from District 4-5A.

With 10 years under his belt, Keeling was the dean of 4-5A football. He was also elected this past year as president of the powerful Texas High School Coaches Association. You don't get that honor by being hated by your peers.

Keeling became a rising star in 1968 when he guided Lubbock Estacado to the 3A state championship in the school's first year of UIL football. He later coached at Andrews.

Keeling inherited a down program from Smitty Hill in San Angelo in 1979 and experienced some gosh awful teams in his early years with the Bobcats. He turned the program around and has been competitive ever since, usually making a strong playoff run yearly.

But San Angelo fans expected more. Unrest in San Angelo has been obvious over the past several years until things came to a head after the past football season. The San Angelo school board met to discuss Keeling's future after the season and word was that Keeling was out.

It didn't happen. After some obvious in-fighting, Keeling came away with a new two-year contract from a meeting designed to be his ouster. The public outcry didn't stop, however. The San Angelo Standard-Times was usually covered with letters to the editor, expressing that Keeling's contract shouldn't have been renewed.

It would appear that staying in San Angelo wouldn't be fun for Keeling in the wake of vocal public protest. After all, Keeling was making $51,825 in San Angelo, the top salary in District 4-5A. John Tyler will pay Keeling in the neighborhood of $45,000. What is $6,000 in terms of overall happiness? Apparently, happiness means a lot to Keeling.

And even before an organized search has begun for Keeling's successor, key names are emerging for the early frontrunners, including Midland High's Doug McCutchen, who guided the Bulldogs to a 9-1 record last year and MHS' first share of a title since 1951.

McCutchen once coached at San Angelo and is originally from Bronte, which is in the back yard of the Concho City. McCutchen is currently in Nashville, Tenn., for a coaching clinic and could not be reached for comment.

Ironically, with Keeling's departure, McCutchen becomes the 4-5A football dean with five years under his belt at Midland High. San Angelo would have to be an attractive offer for McCutchen if given. Not only does he have pleasant ties with the city, but most coaches feel the San Angelo job is a plum. It's the only 5A school in town, owns the first district open date that insures a 10-game schedule and has a large 2,400 student enrollment, the largest in the district.

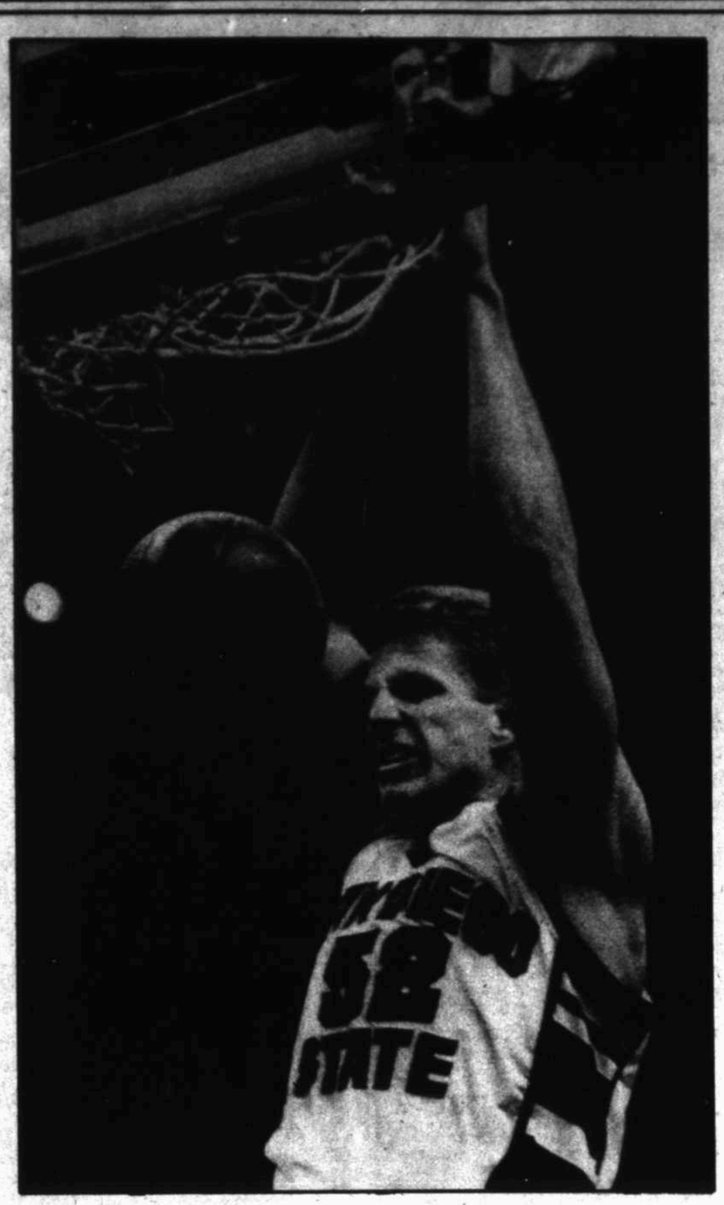

But McCutchen won't be the only name on the search list. It's almost certain that Corpus Christi Carroll's Jim Slaughter, a former successful coach at 4A San Angelo Lake View, and Spring Westfield's Emory Bellard, a former head coach at San Angelo and on the major college circuit before returning to the high school ranks last year, will be contacted by San Angelo officials.

As far as Midland is concerned, the search will be an interesting — and nervous — time.

McMullen plays year for brother

San Diego State's Mitch McMullen ...keeping faith with dead brother

"Before he did pass away, I told him I wanted to dedicate what I did in basketball to him," McMullen said of a hospital room promise he made to Corey McMullen the week before he died of leukemia in summer 1987.

"Corey was really weak at the time. He basically told me that he appreciated it and he loved me for it. When I do go out there and play, I'm doing it for him."

Corey McMullen was the eldest of three brothers. He died at age 25, some 3½ years after doctors diagnosed the disease near the end of his senior year at Arizona State, where he played two seasons of basketball.

Mitch McMullen, five years Corey's junior, was a 17-year-old star at Hart High School in Newhall, Calif., when he learned of his brother's illness.

THE NEWS sent the younger McMullen into a tailspin that nearly destroyed him as he began using drugs.

"I just couldn't face the reality that he was going to die," McMullen said. "Then I decided, 'Hey, look, I've got to make the best of it for him.' My parents, everybody in my family, were strong Christians, so I just kind of hung on to that to get me through those hard times.

"Our whole family is close," he said. "If we weren't close, who knows? I'd probably be a drug addict on the streets. That's why family is so important. When you've got a strong family, it holds you together. And obviously, if I wanted to keep playing basketball, I had to clean up my act."

His wife of 1½ years, Kathy, also has been a stabilizing influence, he said.

The first step in putting his life back on track was enrollment at Point Loma Nazarene, a small Christian college in San Diego. Corey also had attended Point Loma before his move to Arizona State.

The 6-foot-10, 250-pound McMullen averaged 10.5 points per game and six rebounds as a freshman at Point Loma in 1985-86 before transferring to College of the Canyons, a junior college in Valencia, closer to his hometown of Newhall.

With the encouragement of Corey and his family, McMullen, who backed out of a scholarship offer from Brigham Young after high school, again began thinking about going to a Division I school.

"That always was Corey's dream for me," McMullen said. "And I wanted to see if I could make it in big-time basketball. I didn't want to look back 10 years from now and say, 'Could I have made it?' "

He drew the attention of Division I schools by averaging 16.5 points and 9.8 rebounds in his only season at the College of the Canyons. Among the schools recruiting him were New Mexico, Arizona State, Washington and Wyoming, then coached by Jim Brandenburg.

In March 1987, Brandenburg left Wyoming to assume the San Diego State job. McMullen was the first player he signed to a national letter of intent.

"I thought he had the frame and the athleticism to develop into a good inside player," Brandenburg said of McMullen, who has become the focal point of San Diego State's early season success. The Aztecs are 8-4, and 2-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Last season at San Diego State, McMullen averaged 13 points and 6.1 rebounds per game. This season, he is averaging 17.1 points and 8.9 rebounds while leading the conference in field goal percentage (67.4). McMullen also has had six 20-point games compared to four last season.

"You have to give Mitch every credit in the world because he has really worked hard to develop himself. He's just made himself into a damn good basketball player," Brandenburg said.

Bradenburg described McMullen's improvement as "light years" better than how he was playing a couple of years ago.

"The year that his brother died was very traumatic, very emotional for Mitch," Brandenburg said. "He copes with it better now but he still thinks about his brother. The family is still very close and it's still a real tragedy in that family. But Mitch has made an awful lot of strides. He's made strides in every phase of his basketball life and his personal life."

McMullen said wished that Corey could see him play.

"He was the main reason for me to play basketball to begin with, him and my dad," McMullen said. "But I do have a good feeling that Corey is in a good place."

Hoyas turn with Turner

Ranked teams have perfect 8-for-8 night

Associated Press

When John Thompson talks, people listen. Especially his own players.

So when the Georgetown coach told John Turner to contribute more to the team's effort, he did. Turner scored 18 points and had 11 rebounds Wednesday night as seventh-ranked Hoyas beat Pittsburgh 76-57 in the Big East.

"John and I had a little conversation, and I think he heard what I said," Thompson said. "All of it wasn't kind, but it wasn't cruel."

Thompson took aside Turner, a junior college transfer, on Tuesday and said Georgetown was relying too much on Olympic guard Charles Smith and freshman center Alonzo Mourning.

"He just told me to rebound, to help Alonzo on the boards," Turner said. "That's what I did."

Mourning, who scored 15 points and blocked seven shots, noticed the difference.

"He took a lot of pressure off me," Mourning said. "He was picking up the loose balls, dumping them back in, helping us all out."

Smith scored 19 points and Georgetown held Pitt to 19 points in the first half. Smith began the game with 999 points and became the 24th Georgetown player to score 1,000 in his career.

The Hoyas improved to 11-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference. They are 7-0 against the Panthers at the Capital Centre.

Pitt, 7-6 and 1-2, has lost two straight games for the first time since Coach Paul Evans took over in 1986.

"It could be three in a row," Evans said. "We've got Oklahoma on Saturday."

"I picked Georgetown as the team to beat in the Big East, and they're just going to get better," he said. "We were kind of happy we were hitting them this early, so I hate to see what's going to happen later in the season."

Georgetown put away Pitt early. The Hoyas scored nine straight points for a 15-4 lead and were ahead 30-19 at halftime.

No. 1 Duke 100, William & Mary 38

Duke crushed visiting William & Mary as Christian Laettner scored 13 points and Danny Ferry had 12.

The Blue Devils, 12-0, led 55-14 at halftime and six players finished in double figures. Duke held a 49-21 rebounding edge and committed only 12 fouls.

Alaa Abdelnaby and Greg Koubek each finished with 12 points while Phil Henderson and Robert Brickey had 11 apiece. Jimmy Apple scored 13 points for the Tribe, 2-10.

No. 8 N. Carolina 88, Maryland 72

Kevin Madden scored 25 points and Rick Fox got 18 as host North Carolina won its Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

J.R. Reid, still a reserve since a foot surgery, added 17 points for the Tar Heels, 14-2. North Carolina led 46-35 at halftime and scored the first seven points of the second half.

Jerrod Mustaf scored 18 points for Maryland, 6-8.

No. 9 Louisville, 75, S. Carolina 52

Pervis Ellison scored 11 of his 13 points in the second half and Louisville beat South Carolina for its 11th straight victory.

The host Cardinals, 11-2, never trailed in the Metro Conference game. They led 28-22 at halftime and used a 15-2 burst in the second half to take control.

Kenny Payne and Tony Kimbro scored 12 points each for Louisville. Joe Rhett had 13 points for the Gamecocks, 8-3.

No. 11 UNLV 83, Fresno State 77

The Runnin' Rebels, 11-2 overall and 6-0 in the Big West, trailed for most of the game before Augmon made it 75-74.

Greg Anthony scored 16 points, David Butler added 15 and Anderson Hunt 14.

Jervis Cole scored 26 points for Fresno State, 7-5 and 2-1.

No. 13 Seton Hall 74, Iona 58

The Pirates trailed 13-3 in the first six minutes before scoring 17 straight points. Volcy led the spurt with six points.

John Morton got 17 of his 18 points in the second half to preserve the lead. Seton Hall, 14-1, won in its first game since losing by 34 points at No. 4 Syracuse on Saturday.

Sean Green scored 15 for the host Gaels, 6-8.

No. 14 Fla. St. 85, Jacksonville 70

George McCloud scored 35 points, including six 3-pointers, and Florida State beat Jacksonville for its best start in nine years.

The Seminoles' 11-1 start is the best since they won 11 of 12 to open the 1979-80 season.

Florida State used a 27-8 run early in the first half to get past host Jacksonville, 6-6.

No. 17 Tennessee 100, LSU 96

Ian Lockhart tipped in two missed foul shots in the last 90 seconds and Tennessee got past visiting LSU in the Southeastern Conference.

The Volunteers, 11-1, made seven of nine free throws in the final 1:50 with Lockhart tipping home the other two.

Freshman Chris Jackson scored 26 points for the Tigers, 9-5. Jackson, averaging 28 points per game, was held to a basket at the buzzer in the first half.

Top 20 Cage Roundup

Couples grabs Hope golf lead

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples shot a 7-under-par 65 Wednesday to take first-round lead in the five-day Bob Hope Classic.

Couples made nine birdies in his round at Indian Wells, the shortest and easiest of the four desert resort courses used for the first 72 holes of the 90-hole event.

The format calls for the 128 pros to play one round on each of the courses, each with a different team of three amateurs, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Bermuda Dunes on Sunday.

"I think we got a break playing Indian Wells today. With the mountains around, it probably was a little more sheltered than the others," he said. "It was chilly and windy — but nothing ridiculous."

About half the large group at 68 also played at Indian Wells. They included Tom Kite, Lanny Wadkins, Tommy Armour III, Jim Benepe and Wayne Levi.

Tim Simpson, Bob Lohr, Gary Koch, David Ogrin, Kenny Knox and Jay Don Blake, all at Bermuda Dunes, also had 68s.

Masters champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland had a 70 at PGA West, matching the best score of the day at that course. Kenny Perry, with a 70, was the best at Eldorado.

Defending champion Jay Haas — who played with the host, former President Gerald Ford and former House Speaker Tip O'Neill as his amateur partners — could do no better than a 74 at Indian Wells, where the bulk of the gallery gathered to watch the celebrity amateurs.

The long-hitting Couples said he used a new set of irons in competition for the first time "and played really well with them."

Seven COM tankers land 'Top 16' rank

From Staff Reports

Seven City of Midland Swim Team members made the "Top 16" in the country , according to the United States Swimming tabulations released this week.

The times are for long course age group swimming.

Robin Hill, 10-under girls, made the list in four categories and Matthew Houston was the list in 13-14 three times.

Houston had a second with a 59.22 in the 100-fly and Hill an eighth in the 50-free.

Doug Dickinson was fourth in the 17-18 50-free in 23.65.

Any swimmers under those times are submitted and ranked for the 1988 list.

The list will be published in the January 1989 issue of Swimming World magazine.

The only other West Texas Swimming Association swimmer to make the list was John Mayronne, Amarillo, listed in the 10-under boys, in the 50-free, 50-back and 50-fly.

Robin Hill, girls 10-under, 50-free, 8th, 31.12; 100-free, 1:08.80, 28th; 200-free, 2:29.41, 29th; 200 IM, 2:49.73, 35th.

Matthew Houston, boys 13-14, 50-free, 25.71, 12th; 100-fly, 59.32, 2nd; 200-fly, 2:17.77, 27th.

Two Texans threaten I-Bone legal action

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Two Texas men are threatening legal action against the University of Colorado because they say the school's Big Eight football team is using the offensive alignment they invented without giving them credit.

According to a news release from Joey Lozano of Austin, the offense known as the "I-Bone," which is a combination of the "Power-I" and "Wishbone" formations, was invented by James R. Smith, a veterinary dermatologist from San Antonio, while he was a walk-on quarterback hopeful at Texas A&M University.

The news release said that Lozano and Smith contacted Colorado coach Bill McCartney, whose team finished with an 8-4 record this season, after seeing the team use the formation in a televised football game. But they said CU has not responded to letters claiming a copyright of the alignment.

Dave Plati, a spokesman for the University of Colorado Athletic Department, said the school was aware of the men's claims but wouldn't announce a position on the issue.

"We haven't been notified that they're suing us," he said.

Kimball surprises with guilty plea

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Olympic diver Bruce Kimball announced a surprise guilty plea to drunken driving manslaughter to spare grieving relatives who had just heard gruesome testimony on the carnage that killed two teen-agers, his father says.

"He did it for the right reasons," a sobbing Dick Kimball, father of the 1984 silver medalist, said outside the courtroom. "He did not want to put the families of the kids through a horrible trial, or our family."

The plea came Wednesday as testimony was just beginning in the Circuit Court trial on charges that the athlete drunkenly plowed into a crowd of teen-agers with his sports car in suburban Brandon on Aug. 1. The late-night crash injured six others. Kimball and his two passengers escaped serious injury.

The case drew international attention when Kimball decided to compete for a place on the 1988 Olympic diving team less than a month after the crash. He failed to make the squad.

He pleaded guilty to two counts of driving under the influence manslaughter and three of causing great bodily harm while driving under the influence. Kimball, who was jailed pending sentencing Jan. 30, faces seven to 22 years in prison.

She described finding two bodies on the road "in pieces" and two of the injured teens, one bleeding badly and moaning, another bloody and screaming.

SAPOLU

"I had pretty much decided that this game wasn't for me," he said, recalling the 15-1 mark his teammates went on to forge as they headed for Super Bowl XIX.

Encouragement from his teammates and line coach Bobb McKittrick convinced him to give it another try, but the bad luck continued and he re-fractured the foot for the third time in two years in training camp. He spent the entire 1985 season back on the injured reserve list.

"This time I decided to let the time fly by and try another comeback, and it's been great ever since," Sapolu added.

"That's why this season is so sweet," said Sapolu, who earned a starting berth in the 1987 season. "Actually, this is a lot sweeter for everybody in general because people had written us off midway through this season."

Sapolu admitted this has been a long season, but he said he has enjoyed every minute of it.

"There was a span from Week 12 to Week 15 where my legs just started hitting the wall," he said. "I guess my body was reacting to starting five preseason and 16 regular-season games. But having that extra week off during the holidays put the spring back in my legs, and I feel good again."

Sapolu said that the 49ers peaked at just the right time and were able to carry the momentum into the playoffs.

"I think the combination of experience and confidence enabled us to deal with Minnesota's number-one-rated defense and the Bears' number-two-rated defense," Sapolu said. "And now we have just one more game remaining in our season."

Meanwhile, Walsh hinted that the team is drawing up plans to deal with the Bengals' no-huddle offense.

"Well, we're going to have a plan," he said. "But it's best that we don't get into it too deeply with a game coming up."

Walsh has warned the players of the crush of publicity they can expect when they arrive in Miami.

"We just remind them what kind of crush there will be, with so many people and so much interest," he said. "And they have to be able to deal with that."

Defensive end Larry Roberts said the players are concentrating on pacing themselves before the game.

"If we get carried away now and get that adrenalin flowing too fast, by game day we'll be worn out," he said. "So we have to take it easy and concentrate real hard this week, because Bill (Walsh) said this is our most important week of preparation."

7-foot-4 rookie center paces Pacers past Celtics

Associated Press

The last time the Indiana Pacers won at Boston Garden, Rik Smits was 11 years old and living in Holland.

On Wednesday night, the suddenly revived Pacers earned their fourth straight victory as Smits, a 7-foot-4 rookie center, helped them past the Boston Celtics 127-108 with a career-high 21 points. Chuck Person led Indiana with 29 points.

The Pacers, who now are 3-0 under new coach Dick Versace, won for the first time in their last 19 starts on the famed parquet floor in Boston, dating back to April 2, 1978.

The victory also ended Indiana's season-long 15-game losing streak on the road.

The former Marist College star started in place of injured Steve Stipanovich and connected on 9 of 10 shots from the floor — most of them dunks — and three of four free throw attempts.

"We were running the floor, I was getting open and the guys were giving the ball to me," Smits said.

Rockets 122, Spurs 117 OT

Purvis Short scored six of his 26 points in overtime, and Houston got past San Antonio despite blowing a 27-point lead.

Short, whose previous high this season was 17 points, carried the load for the Rockets after Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 29 points, fouled out two minutes into the extra period.

San Antonio pulled even three times before the extra period. The last tie was 106-106 on rookie Vernon Maxwell's 3-point basket with 15 seconds left.

Warriors 107, Mavericks 106

Winston Garland's 10-foot jumper with one second remaining gave Golden State a victory and extended the Dallas Mavericks' losing streak to five games.

Mark Aguirre, who had averaged only 13.8 points in his last four games, scored a season-high 41 points for Dallas. But Dallas still extended its longest losing streak since February 1986.

76ers 103, Nets 94

Charles Barkley scored 25 points and sparked a fourth-quarter rally as Philadelphia defeated New Jersey for its third straight victory.

Ron Anderson scored 24 points for Philadelphia, 10 in the fourth period, and Mike Gminski added 17. Morris had 20 points and Williams 17 for New Jersey, which lost its third straight game.

Knicks 100, Pistons 93

Mark Jackson scored four of his 19 points in the final 1:04 to fuel a 7-0 burst that gave New York its third straight victory over the Pistons this season.

Bulls 106, Hornets 101

Bucks 123, Nuggets 106

Larry Krystkowiak scored a career-high 27 points and helped ignite a 15-2 spurt to open the fourth quarter as Milwaukee ran past Denver and picked up its fourth straight victory.

Milwaukee, which has won eight of its last nine games, got 25 points from Terry Cummings and 17 from Paul Pressey, including 11 in the final quarter.

Cavaliers 124, Suns 121

Larry Nance scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half and John Williams had 11 of his 27 in the fourth quarter as Cleveland snapped the Suns' 11-game home winning streak.

Cleveland, owners of the NBA's best overall record at 25-6 after winning for the 12th time in the last 13 games, went ahead to stay at 107-106 on Mark Price's jumper with 6:13 remaining. It was the 30th lead change in the game.

Kings 106, Clippers 104

The shot ended a nine-game road losing streak for the Kings, who got 18 points from Rodney McCray. The Clippers, losers of seven straight games, were paced by Quintin Dailey's 26 points and 21 by rookie Charles Smith.

Pan American riddles Mavericks

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Keith Campbell scored 18 points to lead Pan American to a 76-69 victory over Texas-Arlington.

Pan American improved to 9-4. Texas-Arlington is 3-10 after Wednesday night's loss.

Texas-Arlington led 30-27 at halftime, but Pan American took the lead midway through the second half with an eight-point run.

The Mavericks were plagued by 36 percent shooting in the second half. Pan American overcame 40 percent shooting in the first half by converting 15-of-28 second-half field goals.

Freshman David Allen led the Mavericks with 14 points, and Michael Beasley and Willie Brand had 10 each.

Mevlin Thomas added 14 points and Lee Boddie had 10 for Pan American.

S. Mississippi 90, N. Texas St. 79

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Clarence Weatherspoon scored 19 points and had 16 rebounds to lead Southern Mississippi to a 90-79 victory over North Texas State.

Weatherspoon, a freshman from Columbus, Miss., also had a career-high six blocked shots.

The game was delayed 15 minutes due to the officials showing up late Wednesday night.

In the first half, the Golden Eagles went on a 10-1, two-minute run while North Texas managed to have the lead only three times. Southern Mississippi took its biggest lead, 50-35, with five seconds left in the first half on a 15-footer by Willie Brown.

In the second half, the Golden Eagles never trailed, and North Texas missed 11 of 12 of attempts at 3-pointers.

Other Southern Mississippi players in double figures were Darrin Chancellor, 18, and Jimmy Smith and Jurado Hinton with 18 each.

For North Texas, Ricky Robertson and Deon Hunter both had 18, William Smith scored 14, and Wendell Williams added 10.

SW Texas St. 92, Nicholls St. 66

THIBODAUX, La. — Torgbeir Bryn had 22 points and 12 rebounds, and Southwest Texas State had nearly twice as many rebounds as Nicholls State in the visiting Bobcats' 92-66 college basketball victory.

Southwest Texas held a 40-23 edge in rebounds Wednesday night, with half of them resulting in second or third shots, in closing out a nine-game road trip at 5-8. The loss dropped Nicholls to 6-6.

Bryn had five of Southwest Texas' 20 offensive rebounds as the Bobcats parlayed a 14-6 surge into a 40-27 halftime lead that was never seriously challenged.

SFA 79, Texas Southern 72

NACOGDOCHES — Jeff Williams scored 28 points to lead Stephen F. Austin to a 79-72 victory over Texas Southern.

Clarence King added 26 points and 12 rebounds for the Lumberjacks, 4-7, Wednesday night.

Fred West led Texas Southern, 5-8, with 18 points, and Ronald Jackson had 16.

Williams converted 11-of-12 field-goal attempts for the hot-shooting Lumberjacks, who shot 60 percent from the field for the game.

Stephen F. Austin led 41-31 at the half on the strength of 70 percent shooting from the field. Texas Southern struggled, making only 33 percent of its field-goal attempts in the first half and 36 percent for the game.

Austin Col. 78, Midwestern St. 63

SHERMAN — Guard Chris Herrmann scored 18 points to lead Austin College to its seventh consecutive victory, a 78-63 win over Midwestern State.

The non-conference victory Wednesday night improved Austin College's record to 8-2 for the season.

Midwestern State fell to 4-12 with the loss.

College athletes get NCAA say

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new group will soon join NCAA schools in the debate concerning what's best for college athletes. The new group is college athletes.

Legislation setting up a 16-member student advisory committee drew far less attention than other actions of the 83rd annual NCAA convention, which ended Wednesday. But Executive Director Dick Schultz, and others, believe it could be one of the most significant actions the ruling body of college sports has taken.

"I think this is a giant step forward," Schultz said. "It's going to be very important now to establish a structure where we can pick very interested student-athletes who will take the responsiblity seriously and do their homework."

The more than 1,800 delegates gave unanimous approval to the resolution. The students won't be able to write or introduce legislation to NCAA conventions, but for the first time in the organization's long and sometimes checkered history, the voice of the students is going to be heard.

"My personal feeling is that this is just a starting point," Schultz said. "I hope this will prove very effective and the 16-member group, if it functions properly, can be expanded over time. I think this can be very effective."

While NCAA students secured a victory in one round, many might say they suffered a serious reversal with the elimination of the "partial qualifier" as spelled out in Proposition 48. By a 163-154 vote on Wednesday, Division I schools reversed their decision on Tuesday and closed the only loophole available to high school prospects who do not meet all the controversial freshman-eligibility standards of Proposition 48.

A partial qualifier is a high school graduate with a 2.0 overall grade point average who does not meet other Proposition 48 requirements such as minimum test scores or a 2.0 average in college preperatory courses.

Since Proposition 48 went into affect three years ago, an estimated 1,800 athletes have received scholarship under the partial qualifier provision. Beginning in 1990, there will be no partial qualifiers, and high school prospects will have to meet all eligibility requirements.

Previously, partial qualifiers could receive full scholarship aid but had to sit out their freshman year and then have only three years of eligibility left.

"I have to admit I was a little surprised that it passed," Schultz said, noting that several other measures aimed at altering Proposition 48 were defeated. "What they were really doing was strengthening Prop 48."

Now, partial qualifiers will face the same dilemma as non-qualifiers — having to pay their own expenses in their freshman year while not playing or practicing in their sport. They may receive scholarships as sophomores if they complete 24 credit hours, but will have only three years of eligibility.

An NCAA spokesman in Mission, Kan., said about 600 partial qualifiers had been admitted each of the three years Proposition 48 has been in effect.

"This will affect not just black kids, but poor kids who are black, white and other shades," said Jim Frank, commissioner of the predominantly black Southwestern Athletic Conference.

Black educators have generally opposed Proposition 48 on the basis that the college entrance exams are discriminatory against minority and economically disadvantaged students.

"It means that a great many kids who cannot afford to pay their own costs for their freshman year will never get the opportunity for a college education," Frank said.

The rule takes affect in 1990 and does not affect anyone currently enrolled.

The request to reconsider was made by Alan Williams of Virginia, chairman of the infractions committee.

"We came to the convention intending to vote to eliminate the partial qualfiers, but were told the presidents Commission opposed it," Williams said. "Then we learned the presidents were not really that adament."

Most delegates seem to believe the tougher standards are having an affect.

"The overwhelming group of students seem to be much, much better prepared for college than they used to be, because of Prop 48," Williams said. "But there seems to be a persistent group of people who do not take academics seriously because they felt they had a way out through the partial qualifier provision. That's the group we were looking at."

Frank, the only black president in NCAA history, was president when Proposition 48 was adopted in 1983.

"I would disagree with those who say this action by the convention was punitive in nature," he said. "But this is the way they wanted Proposition 48 to read from the very beginning, and now they've got it the way they want."

"I don't like it," Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney said. "I don't see what's wrong with giving a kid a second chance. I don't think our coaches are going to like it either."

"It's unfair not only for minorities but for persons of low income," said Al Avant, athletic director at Chicago State University. "But whether or not that proposal passed, Proposition 48 is a failure. It's just an attempt by the NCAA to look good."

Manning sidelined by injury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Manning of the Los Angeles Clippers, the top selection in last summer's NBA draft, will have reconstuctive knee surgery in the next week and will be sidelined at least nine months to a year.

"I'll play basketball again," Manning said. "I don't know at what level, but I'll play again."

Manning, who signed a five-year, $10.5 million contract hours before the Clippers' home opener, tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee during a game at Milwaukee on Jan. 4.

"He will come back from this injury," Dr. Tony Daly, the Clippers' team physician, said Wednesday. "Realistically, the general rule is one year, but it's all generalized. Will he be 100 percent? That's open to question. Maybe he'll be at about 90 percent when he comes back, but 90 percent of Danny Manning is a lot better than 100 percent of most NBA players."

Manning said he will have the operation as soon as he decides on a doctor.

Cardinals sign Oquendo

NEW YORK (AP) — Jose Oquendo, who played all positions for the St. Louis Cardinals last season, agreed to terms Wednesday on a two-year contract plus an option year for a guaranteed $1.15 million.

Oquendo, would have been eligible to file for arbitration, will receive $450,000 in 1989, $550,000 in 1990. For 1991, the Cardinals can either pick up his option for $750,000 or buy out the contract for $150,000.

Oquendo batted .277 in 451 at-bats last season and earned $275,000.

Four other players eligible for arbitration agreed to one-year contracts Wednesday. Catcher Rick Cerone and the Boston Red Sox agreed to $400,000, a $100,000 raise. Outfielder Mike Young and the Milwaukee Brewers agreed to $350,000, a $45,000 cut.

Outfielder Lonnie Smith and the Atlanta Braves agreed to $250,000, a $100,000 raise. Herm Winningham, and the Cincinnati agreed to $230,000, a $90,000 raise.

Cerone signed with Boston after the New York Yankees released him. He hit .269 with three homers and 27 runs batted in 264 at-bats.

Young was 0-for-14 with Brewers after he was traded late in the year for the Philadelphia Phillies. Hit he .226 for Philadelphia with one homer and 14 RBI.

Smith hit .237 in 43 games with three home runs and nine runs batted in after the Braves called him up from Richmond of the Class AAA International League.

Winningham batted .232 last season for Montreal and Cincinnati last season with no homers and 21 RBI. He hit .230 for the Reds with 15 RBI.

Herzeg apologizes for incident

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg says he has apologized to a Houston Chronicle columnist for slapping him twice on the side of the head.

Columnist Fran Blinebury said Herzeg hit him on the side of the face two times during a conversation after the two had lunch at Tony's restaurant Tuesday afternoon.

"I have apologized for the incident which occurred at lunch yesterday on both occasions," Herzeg said in a statement released late Wednesday night.

"I am confident in stating that Fran and I have a better understanding between us ... and we were able to reconcile our differences and open lines of communication that will remain open."

Blinebury said Herzeg left the restaurant following the altercation.

"Fran Blinebury and I spoke last evening and again this evening upon my return from Atlanta where I attended a business meeting today," Herzeg said.

Blinebury has declined further comment.

"It was an unfortunate situation," said Jack Loftis, the Chronicle's vice president and editor. "I regret that the incident occurred. I'll have no further comment until all the facts are known."

Herzeg said, "I sincerely hope that yesterday's incident will have absolutely no effect on Fran's status at the Houston Chronicle."

Johnson turns down chance to run

TORONTO (AP) — Sprinter Ben Johnson, whose Olympic gold medal was taken away when he tested positive for steroid use, was offered the chance to run in an exhibition race Jan. 20 in Los Angeles but declined, a race organizer said Wednesday.

"We contacted his people and we'd have paid big," Al Franken said.

Johnson, the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash, was suspended from amateur competition for two years by the world governing body of track and field after testing positive for anabolic steroids at the Seoul Olympic Games last September.

Franken said he tried to get Johnson to run in an exhibition race that would have been held following the Sunkist Grand Prix meet in Los Angeles. Herschel Walker and Ron Brown were suggested as opponents. Both are former Olympic-caliber sprinters who have gone on to pro football careers.

Larry Heidebrecht, Johnson's U.S.-based agent, confirmed that Franken contacted the Johnson camp, but refused to comment on his offer.

"I'm not going to comment on anything until after the (Dubin) inquiry," Heidebrecht said.

Federal funding slows research

By A.J. HOSTETLER

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Clarisse, a calf with an electric heart, is one sign that political fighting over federal funding hasn't stopped researchers trying to develop a permanent replacement for as many as 400 diseased hearts a year.

Clarisse got her heart Dec. 8, about eight months after the National Institutes of Health decided to suspend $20 million in contracts for research on a permanent artificial heart — and six months after the NIH reversed itself.

Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Hearth, Lung and Blood Institute — a part of the NIH — questioned in May whether more than a decade of research would lead to a permanent heart that the body wouldn't reject.

Under pressure from members of Congress, Lenfant said in July that the contracts would not be suspended. The five groups funded are Hershey Medical Center of Pennsylvania State University; the University of Utah; Abiomed Inc. of Danvers, Mass., working with the Texas Heart Institute of Houston; and Nimbus Co. of Rancho Cordova, Calif., working with the Cleveland Clinic.

"Clearly, there is controversy in the medical community over whether or not the artificial heart is the right device," Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said recently. "If funding is cut off now, we will never know if the artificial heart was the right answer."

Researchers at Penn State and Utah have been working since the mid-1970s on electrical versions of the air-driven, or pneumatic, heart first implanted in Seattle dentist Barney Clark in December 1982 at the University of Utah.

Recipients of air-driven hearts remain mostly bedridden in hospitals, linked by tubes to large compressors, unless they get human heart transplants. Recipients of the electric heart will be able to walk, exercise and even work.

"The advantage of these hearts is that you'll be able to put everything inside the patient's chest except the battery," said Gerson Rosenberg, assistant chief of Penn State's division of artifical organs.

"Nobody is ever saying that this is going to be as good as a natural heart, that this patient is going to forget he's got it and go on to live a normal life. That's not true," Rosenberg said.

Because the devices must meet specific requirements — such as pumping eight liters of blood a minute — designs are similar at all five research facilities. The Penn State device, which has the size and heft of a squared softball, has a 10-pound, rechargeable battery pack on a waist belt. A battery in the heart will let a recipient take off the external battery for up to 45 minutes.

The device, designed to last about five years, probably will cost about the $80,000 to $100,000 that a heart transplant costs, Rosenberg said.

Hershey began testing its electric models in animals in 1983. One implanted Jan. 8, 1983, in a calf named "E.T." — short for "Electric Total" — enabled the animal to live 222 days — a record on any electric artificial heart.

Since then, the device has grown smaller — closer in size to a human heart — as researchers make use of advancements in a miniaturized electronics.

Rosenberg said he expects human tests to begin in the late 1990s. Researchers had hoped to start the trials in the early 1990s, but scaling down the electronics proved more difficult than expected.

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Gerson Rosenberg, assistant chief of Penn State University's division of artificial organs at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, Pa., displays an electric artificial heart similar to one implanted in a 4-month-old heifer at the center.

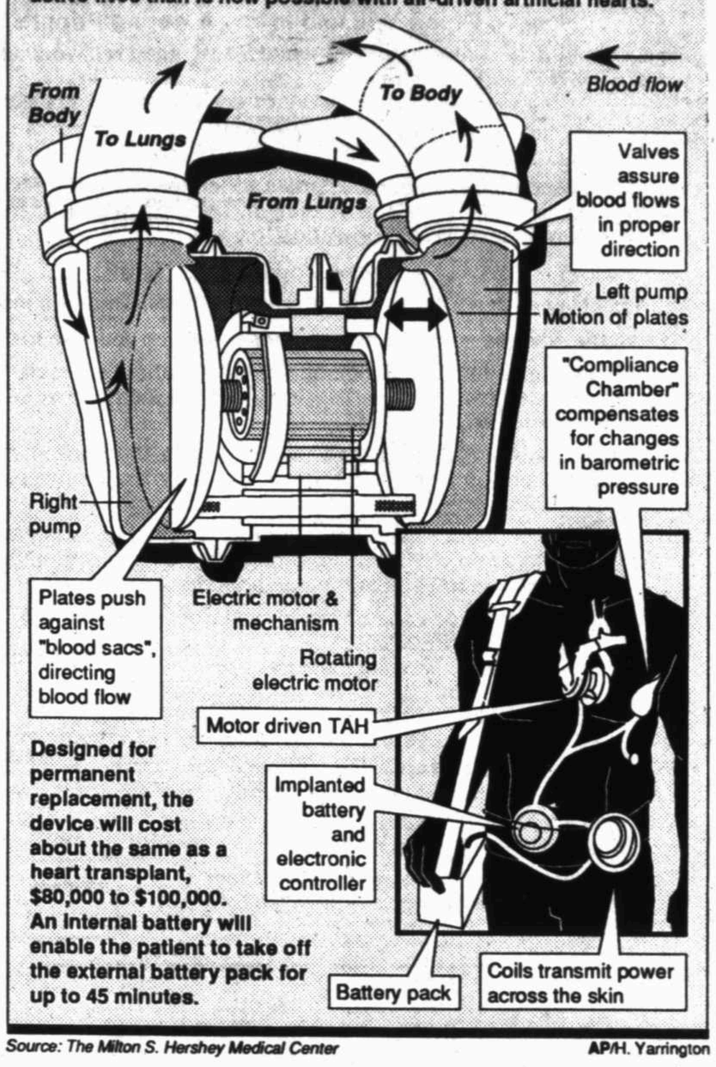

Despite the delays in perfecting a permanent heart, there have been benefits from the research, including better knowledge of drugs to prevent heart disease or strokes, improved design on commonly used artificial heart valves, and better techniques and materials for use in cardiac bypass surgery.

Rosenberg said the progress that's been made against heart disease is unlikely to eliminate the need for artificial heart research.

"I don't think anything would please the people working on the artificial heart more than to hear that something was discovered to prevent all that," he said. "But I doubt that that will happen."

The Electric Heart

Researchers are working on an electric heart which will be powered by a 10-pound rechargeable battery pack belted to the patient's waist. The new heart will enable recipients to lead more active lives than is now possible with air-driven artificial hearts.

Designed for permanent replacement, the device will cost about the same as a heart transplant, $80,000 to $100,000. An internal battery will enable the patient to take off the external battery pack for up to 45 minutes.

New treatment turns body's own cancer weapons against tumors

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors giving patients high doses of cancer-fighting cells taken from their tumors have turned back lethal skin cancer at a rate nearly four times greater than by using chemotherapy, scientists reported today.

The work is the latest development in a new strategy of revving up the body's own weapons to stop cancer. However, experts say this approach is still highly experimental, and no one knows whether it will turn out to be a practical way to fight disease.

Only one of the 20 patients treated has had a lasting remission after more than a year, but doctors were encouraged because most of the patients had at least partial responses.

The study was directed by Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg, who has developed the strategy known as adoptive immunotherapy at the National Cancer Institute. In earlier attempts, he used a natural chemical called interleukin-2 to prime cancer-fighting cells taken from the blood. These cells were then turned loose inside the body to hunt for cancer.

His latest effort, described in today's New England Journal of Medicine, is a refinement of that approach. Instead of using cells from the bloodstream, he drew killing cells from patient's own tumors, multiplied them and injected them back.

"We are finally zeroing in on the important cells, and he is getting better numbers to indicate that the strategy is the right one," said Dr. Malcolm S. Mitchell of the University of Southern California.

Rosenberg said the new approach, used so far on patients with the skin cancer melanoma, is more potent and less toxic than his earlier treatment.

"The first treatment, which we have now used in over 400 patients, is a first step," he said. "Now we are seeing an improvement upon it. Hopefully, there will be improvements beyond this."

In experimental use, they found that the latest approach shrank the tumors of 55 percent of advanced melanoma patients. Ordinary chemotherapy produces a response in about 20 percent of such patients.

"This is very exciting," commented Dr. Michael Atkins of New England Medical Center. "I hope it will give us clues as to where to go next. But it shouldn't be considered applicable to the general patient population."

Gene for treating schizophrenia found

NEW YORK (AP) — A gene found to be key to schizophrenia medication will trigger "an avalanche of research" that could improve treatment for psychosis, Parkinson's disease and other brain ailments, a scientist says.

Scientists worldwide "have really been poised to take advantage of this development," which could provide insights into the body's potential role in mental illness, said Kenneth L. Davis, chairman of the psychiatry department at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

The results could include improved treatments for diseases that include psychosis, which is a loss of touch with reality seen in schizophrenia and sometimes in depression, manic-depression and other disorders, he said.

It also could lead to better treatment of Parkinson's disease, which is often characterized by tremors and rigidity, Huntington's disease, which hinders movement and intellectual abilities, and Tourette syndrome, which includes jerky movements and vocal mannerisms, Davis and other researchers said.

Davis was responding to a report in a recent issue of the British journal Nature.

In the article, researchers said they had isolated the gene that acts as a blueprint for a protein called the D-2 dopamine receptor, which is made by brain cells. The receptor, which sits on the surface of the cells, is where anti-psychosis drugs exert their effects on the brain.

Normally, the receptor's role is to respond when adjacent brain cells secrete a substance called dopamine, allowing brain cells to communicate.

The defining of one receptor in the past has led to discovery of a related family of them, Davis said. If a family of dopamine receptors is found, scientists may be able to design drugs that affect only the receptors linked to disease and avoid side effects of current medications, he said.

Side effects of current anti-psychosis medications, for example, include tardive dyskinesia, a syndrome of involuntary movements of the mouth, tongue, limbs or trunk.

In the study, researchers said they identified the receptor gene in rats, defined its chemical makeup and made functioning copies of it. Since then, they also have isolated and partially defined the human receptor gene, Olivier Civelli said in a telephone interview.

The researcher reports the work in Nature with James Bunzow and others at the Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, and with researchers at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Portland and the Oregon Regional Primate Center in Beaverton.

"We've all been waiting for it," he said.

"This is an important and essentially fundamental step" in helping scientists understand how anti-psychotic drugs work, "and thereby indirectly understand what may be the biological mechanism underlying psychotic disorders."

Scientists also may be able to learn about the mechanisms that turn the receptor gene on and off, which may shed light on schizophrenia, he said.

Mystery remains over Bush's plans for Medicare

One of the best-kept secrets in Washington, D.C., is what President-elect George Bush plans to do with a proposed $5 billion budget cut in Medicare payments for the 1990 budget year. President Reagan proposed this reduction last year as well, but the proposal was rejected by Congress.

Humphreys

What is termed a reduction actually is a limitation on the rate of increase: Medicare expenditures are projected to reach $109 billion in 1990, so the $5 billion reduction actually would limit the expenditures to $104 billion, still a significant increase over what they were in 1988.

Medicare is the fastest-growing segment of the federal budget, so it becomes an inviting target in the face of projected budget deficit of $135-$148 billion in 1990 and campaign pledges not to add new taxes. Failure to pare the deficit to $100 billion or lower will cause dramatic budget cuts to be enacted under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction act.

Proposals by the White House Office of Management and Budget are not final, but so far include the following:

- Limiting fixed fees per Medicare admission to 2 percent less than the rate of hospital inflation, which is predicted to be 4.7 percent. This predicted inflation rate may be unrealistically low, since the inflation rate in 1988 was 5.4 percent;
- Cutting capital-payment reimbursements to 75 percent of cost rather than the current 85 percent;
- Reducing indirect payments to teaching hospitals by $1 billion, the payments which are supposed to cover the extra cost of medical education;
- Freezing payment increases for physicians not involved in primary care, and pruning 10 percent off payments for services performed by radiologists and anesthesiologists;
- Reducing payments for procedures deemed to be overpriced by the Physician Payment Review Commission, including coronary artery bypass surgery, hip replacements and pacemakers.

The increases in Medicare costs have not been uniform. Approximately 20 percent of the Medicare outlay goes for physician services under Part B; this is the single cost which rose the fastest. Research into the causes for this increase was performed on Medicare expenditures in five states between 1983 and 1985.

A suspicion that the physicians were largely responsible for the increase in expenditures by increased numbers of follow-up visits, "upcoding" (using a procedure code in billing to indicate a more complex procedure than actually was done), and other such "gaming," but it accounted for only about 4 percent of the increase. The vast majority of the increase in outlay came from increased numbers of eligible beneficiaries, increased numbers of beneficiaries filing claims, increased number of services per claimant and a large shift from inpatient diagnostic and surgical services to outpatient.

Institution of the Prospective Payment System in 1983 (fixed payment to hospitals according to illness, regardless of severity) produced one of the desired results, a shift from inpatient to outpatient services. However, the increase in Part B outlays far exceeded the reduction in Part A (hospital) for the reasons stated above. A significant deficit has resulted in Part B as well, because increase in Part B premiums have lagged far behind expenditures.

Where do we go from here? It is not reasonable to assume that the increase of eligible beneficiaries, the percentage of beneficiaries seeking services, or the number of services per claimant will abate anytime soon. These factors will continue to drive Medicare outlays upward, both in Part A and Part B.

Part A payments to hospitals for inpatient care already are considerably less than the costs of providing medical care to Medicare beneficiaries. Hospitals have been forced to absorb these differences between costs and reimbursement, essentially by shifting the cost to insurance carriers for other patients. Their ability to continue this shift is not infinite, however, especially those hospitals which have a high percentage of Medicare patients and/or nonpaying patients. Many small rural hospitals are in serious financial difficulty for this very reason.

The situation for services funded by Part B — outpatient diagnostic and theraputic services furnished by hospitals, physicians and other providers — is gloomy as well. Diagnostic and therapeutic tools have become more sophisticated, but also more expensive. If reimbursement for the use of these tools doesn't match the cost at least to some degree, then their costs can make them unavailable.

Physicians have a similar problem. All they have to provide is their time and too many patients for whom they are inadequately reimbursed make it impossible for them to remain in the business.

Few would argue that economy in provision of medical care is not desirable so long as quality is not compromised. As a society, we are faced with an increasing demand for medical services which is in conflict with a finitude of resources. The solution may involve difficult choices: funding reasonably to meet the demand, allocating services, or allowing those supposedly provided for by federal funding to become a new class of medical indigents.

Skateboards leaping as leading cause of dental injuries

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Accidental tooth damage is taking a growing bite out of holiday fun in the midst of an enduring craze for skateboards, bicycles and racket sports.

Never has the childhood song, "all I want for Christmas is my two front teeth" been so apt, particularly among youthful skateboard aficionados.

"Skateboards are the leading cause of dental injuries from an informal poll of dentists who treat children in our dental clinics and also among private dentists," said Dr. Donald P. Morse, Metropolitan Health District dental coordinator.

Mending dental injuries in children often requires procedures over several years, says Dr. John P. Brown, Community Dentistry Chairman at the University of Texas Health Science Center.

Morse said local private dentists and those in the health district clinics see a growing amount of accidental tooth damage.

To avert the need for a second visit by Santa — this time to bring youngsters new teeth — health officials here are urging parents to keep watch on children trying out sports equipment or backyard swing sets.

Figures from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission show that accidental tooth damage has increased by 44 percent over the past seven years, growing to 19,482 dental injuries in 1987 from 14,325 in 1980.

"That's only the tip of the iceberg," said Dr. Mohandas Bhat of the National Institute of Dental Research in Bethesda, Md.

His figures obtained through insurance records indicate that nationally there are 1.75 million accidents annually that result in lost or chipped teeth.

But local and national experts contend that the federal figures are skewed because they are derived from surveys of hospitals whereas most dental injuries go unreported and are taken care of by the family dentist.

Modern Plastic Surgery

by Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., ASPRS

A NEW RECONSTRUCTIVE TECHNIQUE

People who undergo mastectomy or experience disfiguring accidents must sometimes undergo reconstructive surgery to replace skin and/or muscle. This often involves the transfer of a skin graft from one area of the body (the donor site) to the area in need. For instance, the top layers of skin in the area of the groin might provide the bodily material necessary to reconstruct the injured area. The sucess of a graft largely depends on how much blood supply it receives from underlying tissue. Without sufficient circulation to the grafted skin, it may be lost. However, a new technique greatly increases the sucess rate. "Microvascular free-flap surgery" involves the transfer of a flap of tissue, including skin and muscle, to the injured area. Blood vessels in the flap are joined to those in the damaged area, greatly increasing the chances of success.

Be aware that any surgical procedure carries at least some risk with it. The more complicated the surgery, the greater will be the risk. Before proceeding with any surgical procedure, be certain you understand what risks may be involved. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER, located at 848 Central in Odessa, performs post mastectomy breast reconstruction. Burn care and reconstruction surgery is also performed. Hours: M-F 8-5. Tel. 335-8711 or 563-3110. Member ASPRS.

HINT:
