Human rights activist Harry Wu, in cap, hugs his assistant David Welker after arriving at San Francisco Airport Thursday.

Wu's demands

Chinese-American human rights activist Harry Wu, safely back on U.S. soil after two months in Chinese detention, said Friday that the spying case against him was "all lies" and vowed to seek compensation from China. Wu called The Associated Press bureau in Beijing from his home in Milpitas, Calif., to give his first lengthy interview since he was taken into custody June 19 while trying to enter China at a remote border crossing. He said he would demand compensation from the Chinese government for illegally detaining him and violating U.S.-China agreements that say arrested Americans should be allowed visits by U.S. consular officials within 48 hours. Story page 5A

Grounding planes

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration on Friday ordered the grounding of any planes similar to the Atlantic Southeast Airlines turboprop that crashed Monday in Georgia if they are equipped with Hamilton Standard propeller blades that were repaired after ultrasonic inspections. The agency also said other models of commuter planes equipped with repaired Hamilton Standard 14RF and 14SF blades must be re-inspected ultrasonically within their next 10 flights. If any anomalies are found in the new inspections, those planes must be taken out of service until the blades are replaced, the FAA said. Story page 4B

Packwood reverses, decides on hearings

"Fair treatment of all participants will be impossible without public hearings and public cross-examination."
-Bob Packwood

■ Senator changes course, calls for hearings into charges he committed sexual misconduct.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a stunning reversal that could delay conclusion of his ethics case, Sen. Bob Packwood said Friday that he wants public hearings into charges that he committed sexual and official misconduct.

The Oregon Republican changed his mind after vowing last week to "fight fire with fire" by aggressively confronting his female accusers. Just last month, he had declined to request hearings that are his right under Senate Ethics Committee rules.

Packwood, who chairs the Finance Committee, said he reversed himself because the Ethics Committee "changed its rules in the middle of the game" — reopening its investigation to consider two recently filed complaints of sexual wrongdoing.

His request could persuade the committee to overturn its earlier decision against hearings when it meets next month. If not, the switch could change the 52-48 Senate vote that upheld the committee's decision.

Traffic accident

Emergency personnel transported 20-month-old Daniela Garcia, daughter of Lilia and Jose Garcia of Hobbs, N.M., to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after a traffic accident Friday afternoon. The Garcias' vehicle, southbound at the intersection of A Street and Texas Avenue, was struck by a van driven by Midlander Dewey Lee, who was also transported to the hospital. Both victims sustained minor injuries and were treated and released by Friday night, according to hospital officials.

Chicago buries 41 unclaimed victims of killer heat wave

HOMEWOOD, Ill. (AP) — Forty-one forgotten and unclaimed victims of Chicago's killer heat wave were given a pauper's funeral Friday, laid to rest in simple plywood coffins in a mass grave that will be left unmarked.

"The longer you stand here and look at the number of people buried here, it just overwhelms you," said a tearful Elaine Egdorff, walking through Homewood Memorial Cemetery with her granddaughter. "These people just didn't have anyone."

Paul Ozienkiewicz, an Air Force veteran who also served in the merchant marine and Navy, did have someone but wound up in the 160-foot trench anyway.

He died with $3,900 in the bank, but relatives withdrew his money and left him to the city to bury at taxpayers' expense, investigators said.

"We knew we could save this guy from Potter's Field," said investigator Terry Drennan. "It gets really frustrating."

Few shed tears for the 68 people buried, including 27 other unclaimed bodies not linked to the heat that scorched the Chicago area and other states in July.

On the hottest day — July 13 — temperatures reached 106, and the homes of many elderly and infirm residents became ovens. The death toll from the heat stands at more than 580.

Midland man remains in critical condition after Thursday shooting

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A north Greenwood resident was shot while standing in his driveway at 6008 Farm to Market Road about 9 p.m. Thursday night, according to sheriff's officials.

Stanley W. Malkiewicz, 40, exchanged a few words with the gunman— who was apparently not known to him — before the man opened fire with a small caliber weapon, according to Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. The gunman fled and Malkiewicz was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, where he is reported in critical condition.

At a Friday afternoon news conference, Painter said Malkiewicz, a geologist, transferred to Midland from Houston with EXXON two months ago, and has two high-school age daughters who decided to stay in Houston to finish out their school years.

Painter said Malkiewicz's wife had recently returned to Houston to register their children in school.

Ortiz testifies he can't remember signing consent form for search

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A police detective testified Friday in a pretrial hearing for Henry Lopez Ortiz that he hoped the man gets the death penalty.

Later, Ortiz testified that he didn't remember a number of events, including signing a consent form to have blood and hair samples taken from him on the evening of Feb. 10 — the day he was arrested in connection with the death of Julianne Powell, whose body was found in a laundry hamper in a spare room of his apartment.

Pretrial hearings Thursday and Friday centered around a defense motion to suppress photos of the defendant's body and evidence from the body search of the defendant, as well as the state's motion to determine whether Ortiz's oral statements were given voluntarily.

Ortiz, 41, was indicted Feb. 15 on charges of capital murder in the sexual assault, kidnapping and slaying of the 10-year-old.

Ortiz has pleaded not guilty in the case and has been denied bond. His trial is set to begin early October in Amarillo because of extensive publicity in the Petition organizers seek to force vote on planned $30 million airport terminal

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A news conference to promote a petition drive — to force a referendum on the planned airport terminal — turned into a debate between petition organizers and former mayor and airport board member Thane Akins on Friday.

"We just want the City Council to call an election to let the people vote on it," said Tom Dollahite, an opponent of plans for a new terminal.

To do so, Dollahite and others hope to secure the 4,700 signatures necessary to put the issue to a vote by the people.

Design work for a $30 million terminal at Midland International Airport has long been under way. Construction has been set to begin at the start of the new year with completion about two years later.

"They've already spent a great deal of money," said Edna Walger, a petition-drive supporter and head of Citizens Against Taxpayers Abuse.

British doctors repair potentially deadly disorder in 5-month-old fetus

LONDON (AP) — With a medical telescope that peers into the womb and a long, tiny tube, doctors have fixed a potentially fatal urinary tract defect in a 5-month-old fetus, according to a new report.

The fetus suffered from lower obstructive uropathy, or a blocked urinary tract, which strikes about one in 5,000 babies worldwide. Without treatment, the build-up of urine can kill a fetus by destroying its kidneys and lungs.

The new method "may help us understand better what's going on and offer new ways of treating the disease that may be better than the ones we are currently using," said Dr. Rubin Quintero, the leading investigator from Hutzel Hospital in Detroit.

The report will be published today in The Lancet, a medical journal. Advance copies were released to media on Friday.

In the past decade, doctors worldwide have been attempting to operate on sick fetuses to fix defects that often kill them within days of birth. Most research so far has focused on heart defects.

The aim of in-womb surgery is to fix the defect before complications strike, allowing the fetus to thrive and grow into a normal baby.

"They've used a very innovative approach to this rare but devastating disorder ... that may well become the treatment of choice in five or 10 years from now," said Dr. Joshua Copel, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at Yale University.

Many babies suffer complications from the current treatment, which involves using ultrasound to spot the blockage and then inserting a tube into the fetus's bladder to empty the urine into the womb.

But often the tube needs to be replaced several times during the pregnancy, increasing the risk of miscarriage, said Quintero.

He cited two main advantages to the new technique. The endoscope, or medical telescope, allows doctors to see the fetal bladder clearly, and sometimes they can fix the blocked urinary tract before the baby is born.

"The difference in what we are doing is that we are looking inside the fetal bladder with endoscopes and gaining a lot of information that you cannot get with ultrasound images," said Quintero.

In The Lancet report, doctors detected blockage in seven of 11 fetuses. Then they attempted to repair the damage in two fetuses that they felt could pass the catheter through the urinary tract. The others had standard therapy.

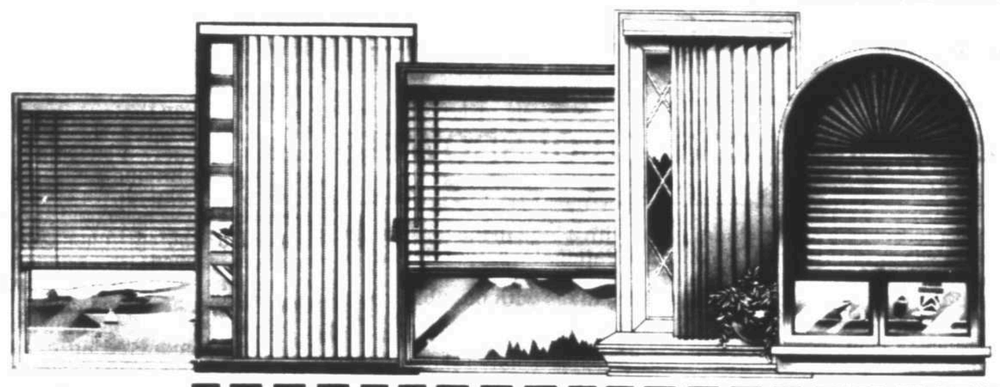

One fetus died three weeks after birth, due to other complications, said Quintero. The other baby is a healthy 6-month old, he said.

Today, slight chance of showers

Staff Report

Today's forecast is partly cloudy skies with a high in the low-90s and southeast winds 10-15 mph, according the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with possible isolated showers and thunderstorms, a low near 70, and a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

Sunday's forecast is partly cloudy with possible isolated showers and thunderstorms, a high in the low-90s and a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

After an overnight low of 69, Friday's high reached 95, compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1936. The record low was 58 set in 1970.

STATE

The heat and humidity that marks most Texas Augusts was easily evident Friday across the state.

Temperatures climbed into the mid and upper 90s all over the state, with showers and thunderstorms cooling things off in south Texas, the Hill Country and the Abilene area.

Some sporadic rains popped up in north Texas as well, but hot and dry conditions remained in the northeast part of the state.

The Texas Forest Service has asked people in 14 northeast counties to refrain from outdoor burning until a healthy rainfall eliminates the drought conditions there.

Counties included in a voluntary moratorium are Bowie, Camp, Cass, Franklin, Harrison, Marion, Morris, Red River, Titus, Upshur and Wood. Three other counties — Lamar, Delta and Hopkins — also are included, though they are outside of the Texas Forest Service administrative boundaries.

The National Weather Service reported no weather records of any kind Friday.

Hot and hazy conditions that Texans experienced Friday are expected to continue. Severe thunderstorms were expected to enter south Texas Saturday.

Otherwise across the state, partly cloudy conditions and temperatures in the 90s are expected, except for cooler readings in the mountains and triple-digit temperatures along the Rio Grande.

NATION

A tropical depression crossing southwestern Georgia produced flooding from torrential rain Friday, while the Northwest had clear, crisp weather and the Northeast was dry and mild.

The depression that used to be Tropical Storm Jerry weakened as it moved inland, crossing south of Valdosta, Ga. It dumped heavy rain, including over 6 inches by midday in Mayport, Fla.

A tornado was sighted southeast of Tampa Bay near Wimauma, Fla.

In the Northwest, high pressure moving in behind a trough of low pressure produced clear skies and temperatures in the upper 50s to low 60s from northern California to Washington.

High pressure also kept skies clear in the Northeast, to the disappointment of firefighters battling a wildfire on New York's Long Island. Gusty 25 mph wind fanned the flames but heat was not a problem with temperatures in the upper 70s.

Showers and thunderstorms developed across eastern Idaho, into west-central Montana. The Upper Midwest and areas from south-central Texas to southern Louisiana also had showers.

Rain showers and thunderstorms were developing in western Washington and Oregon and could be scattered with some severe thunderstorms from Arizona to the central Rockies to the northern Plains, upper Mississippi River Valley and the northern Great Lakes region.

The forecast called for the tropical depression to weaken rapidly, leaving showers and thunderstorms over a large part of the Southeast. Severe thunderstorms and rainfall greater than 5 inches were possible in areas from southwestern Florida into southern Georgia.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EDT ranged from 97 in Jacksonville, N.C., to 26 in Meacham, Ore.

ORTIZ: Defendant claims he can't remember consent

(From 1A)

Midland/Odessa area. The state is seeking the death penalty.

The pretrial hearings are intended to help 238th District Court Judge John Hyde rule on the motions. Testimony ended late Friday and will resume Wednesday.

Detective Rick Gilley testified he told Ortiz of his rights each of the three times he interviewed him. He said that on the third talk, Ortiz asked to talk to a lawyer, so the officer ended the conversation.

Detective B.G. Johnson interrogated Ortiz hours after his arrest, trying to compel the defendant to "come across and get it out."

Defense attorney H.W. "Woody" Leverett asked Johnson if he offered Ortiz anything for his cooperation.

"I didn't offer him anything and he didn't give anything," Johnson said. "I told him he killed a little 10-year-old and he needed to get himself straight on that.

"I just arrested the man for capital murder. You think I'm gonna give him anything? I want him to get the death penalty," Johnson said as he looked at Ortiz.

A police photographer testified he photographed Ortiz's nude body as well as scratches he saw on Ortiz's face, hand and chest.

An emergency room nurse testified she conducted an exam of Ortiz drawing blood, removing scrapings from under his fingernails, swabbing for fluids in his mouth and on his penis, cutting hair from his head and pubic area and measuring the wounds on his body.

Both the photographer and nurse said he was cooperative in their efforts.

Ortiz testified for almost two hours about how he was treated by police. He claimed he didn't remember signing the consent form for the body search and that he was mistreated by police.

Ortiz said following his arrest, he was taken to a police car in his stocking feet and despite getting a splinter in his foot and complaining to Officer Richard Edens about the pain, he was forced to walk with the splinter in his foot.

He said he asked to use the phone at the jail, but was ignored. He said he wanted to call his wife to see if she was at home and to let her know where he was and to ask if she would get him a lawyer.

Police took Ortiz to an isolation cell, where he stood on a piece of paper to collect any evidence that may have fallen off his person. He was instructed to disrobe with the photographer taking photos.

Officers collected Ortiz's clothes and gave him a pair of jail-issue clothes, which consisted of a shirt, pants and sandals.

Ortiz said he didn't remember Gilley reading him his rights and asking him to sign the consent for the body search. He acknowledged that the signature on the form was his, but said he didn't remember signing it.

"I remember somebody having a paper, but I don't remember what it was," Ortiz testified.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty asked Ortiz if anyone forced him to sign the consent form.

"I can't answer that because I don't remember signing it ... it looks like my handwriting," Ortiz answered.

Petty asked him why he could remember "something so trivial" as stepping on a splinter, but couldn't remember something as vital as signing a consent form for a body search.

"You remember pain," Ortiz replied. "I don't know. I just remember the splinter in my foot."

Ortiz said he didn't know he was going to the hospital until he got there. He also complained he was cold because all he had on were the shirt, pants and sandals with no jacket or underclothes.

He said, at the hospital, he asked to see an attorney and no one responded to him. Ortiz — who has an associate's degree of applied science in criminal justice from Odessa College — said he cooperated with the body search by the nurse because he didn't think he had a choice.

During the interview with Johnson later in the evening, Ortiz said "he said I was condemned to die for the crime I committed. He talked about stuff I had in my apartment, Christian logos my wife had like a sign over the door that said 'Jesus loves you' ... he said I was going to go straight to hell, because if I had something like that, how could I do that."

Ortiz also claimed Johnson described how a lethal injection is done and told him of other capital murder cases locally in which the defendants showed remorse and were given lesser sentences for lesser crimes.

"To me, they were threats when somebody tells you you're condemned," Ortiz said.

He also said he felt threatened because Johnson was sitting close enough that "I felt he could've hit me."

Petty plans to call all of the parties who were in the hospital room to rebut Ortiz's claims. The testimony will resume Wednesday.

Julianne was last heard from by a friend about 4:15 p.m. Feb. 10, and her mother arrived home about 4:25 p.m. to discover her missing. Police were called out about 5 p.m. after an initial search was conducted.

Officers were led to Ortiz after questioning the girl's mother and their neighbors about the girl's disappearance. Officers had questioned Ortiz since shortly after 5 p.m. The girl's body was found just before 7 p.m. in a spare room of Ortiz's apartment.

The indictment charges Ortiz with suffocating and strangling the girl before stuffing her body in a laundry hamper while in the course of kidnapping and sexually assaulting her.

Both the suspect and the victim lived in the same building at The Park at Caldera, formerly known as Quinten's Walk apartments, 3100 W. Caldera Blvd. Julianne and her mother lived upstairs from Ortiz and his wife.

Prosecutors and the defense attorneys will travel to Dallas Monday to see physical evidence at Southwestern Institute of Forensic Science.

CHANGE: Packwood requests public hearings

(From 1A)

The senator said his earlier decision was based on his belief that the investigation of more than 2 1/2 years had ended. He has strongly disputed the story of one of the two new accusers, a woman who was 17 when, she alleged, Packwood made a sudden and unwelcome sexual advance in 1983.

Packwood, who announced his decision in a written statement, said in an interview, "That isn't fair to say to somebody, 'Well, do you want a public hearing or not' ... and then to bring new charges."

If hearings were held, Packwood's legal team, headed by prominent Washington attorney Jacob Stein, would be expected to cross-examine the female accusers rigorously.

"I would hope that I would now be given the right that any other American has in court, to interview witnesses ahead of time, to depose them," Packwood said in the interview. "... We asked the Ethics Committee some time ago to allow us to depose witnesses and they wouldn't allow us to do it. I would hope now they would."

Despite a public ordeal that would be difficult for the accusers, most of them have backed public hearings.

One of them, Julie Williamson, said after Packwood's announcement, "I have quite a bit of confidence in the Ethics Committee. They have been, I think, even-handed." Williamson accused Packwood of making an unwanted sexual advance in 1969.

The committee, citing "substantial credible evidence," has charged the senator with making unwanted sexual advances to 17 women in 18 instances in 1969-90, and will consider in September whether to add the two latest complaints to the charges.

The panel also has charged Packwood with asking lobbyists and businessmen who had interests in legislation to get a job for his then-wife and with altering his personal diaries when he thought they would be subpoenaed.

The hearings issue has generated bitter partisan struggles. The Ethics Committee's three Democrats strongly backed hearings, but the panel rejected the proceedings by a 3-3 vote July 31. It decided instead to make recommendations to the Senate based on evidence gathered by its staff. Possible punishments include censure, loss of Packwood's committee chairmanship and expulsion.

The Senate upheld the decision against hearings Aug. 2 on a 52-48, mostly partisan vote. But the leader of the unprecedented move to force public testimony, Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said Packwood's new support of hearings likely would reverse the outcome.

The office of Ethics Committee Chairman Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said in a statement that the panel will consider Packwood's request when it next meets.

Packwood, a five-term senator who is not up for election until 1998, said, "Fair treatment of all participants will be impossible without public hearings and public cross-examination. I now look forward to moving ahead in this process."

The senator said he didn't know, when he first turned down hearings, that the committee would decide subsequently to make public the entire record of the investigation.

In the interview, he called the media coverage of his case "totally unfair," saying many reporters wrote inadequately about sworn statements that contested an accuser's truthfulness.

"That's unfair journalism, so the only way that I'm going to be able to get a fair hearing is to say, 'OK, we want to depose these witnesses ahead of time,'" Packwood said.

INJURE: Shooting victim remains in critical condition

afternoon. "He underwent surgery early this morning and had his right kidney removed and damage done to internal organs," Painter said. He declined to divulge the number of gunshot wounds nor the victim's chances for survival. Painter said Memorial Hospital will not give out Malkiewicz's condition in compliance with the wishes of his family and the patient's location in the hospital will not be given out for his protection.

Painter declined to comment on whether or not law-enforcement officials fear the shooter may return.

"Right now we have several leads, but no suspects," Painter said.

He said Malkiewicz described the suspect as a white male, 25-30, 150-160 pounds with short black hair and a black moustache.

The suspect fled the scene in a dark colored mid-sized vehicle.

"I just want the community to know that this is an isolated incident and we don't know what precipitated it yet," Painter said.

The sheriff said no weapon was left at the scene. When asked by a reporter if shell casings were found, he said, "evidence was collected at the scene."

Painter said Malkiewicz's condition would depend on how he fared through the next 72 hours.

The sheriff commended hospital staff, including a four-doctor operating team, for "extremely fast and efficient care."

He said the victim's wife returned to Midland from Houston, and other members of his family were coming to Midland from Maryland. Malkiewicz's brother, Steve Malkiewicz, an FBI agent who lives in El Paso, has also arrived to keep vigil over his brother.

EXXON USA officials confirmed that Malkiewicz is an EXXON employee with the Midland producing office and had transferred to Midland about two months ago.

homes of victims and went through scrapbooks, mail and bank records, looking for clues about their past.

Some relatives were found but couldn't afford the cost of a funeral. Others, like Ozienkiewicz's family, left their relatives unclaimed.

"It's important because to live and to die alone is a human tragedy, but not to be remembered and mourned after human life is an ugly blemish on human dignity," said Earl Lewis, a lay minister who conducted the service.

About 30 people, reporters and workers in the coroner's office, attended the short service. The mass burial was the largest in Cook County history and was conducted on a day of above-average temperatures, an all-too-common occurrence in one of the hottest summers on record.

No plaque or stone was planned for the grave. Plain yellow name tags on the coffins were the only clues to the identities of the dead, giving names and dates of death.

Among the dead was Lorraine Purkey, 78. She lived surrounded by people in an apartment building on the city's north side, but she died alone July 18, with her cats as company.

She had $400 in her bank account, enough to buy an air conditioner. But in her apartment was a notice from the state announcing her monthly food stamp allowance was being dropped to $13.76 a month.

"To me, it's always a sad story," said John Turchan, assistant to the public administrator. "Four hundred dollars certainly would have bought an air conditioner, but she also might have needed it for medical expenses, drugs or food."

AIRPORT: Group calls for vote on terminal

been spent for a new terminal.

The go-ahead to construct a new terminal was ratified with a unanimous City Council vote in October 1993. An election was not required because funding would be generated through airport revenues, not tax dollars.

Four petition organizers — apparently opponents of a new terminal — argued with Akins about funding sources, the need and the decision for a new terminal.

Opponents say necessary Federal Aviation Administration dollars are not available and the project may end up costing taxpayers. Proponents vehemently claim federal funds are available and general tax funds will never, and have never, been used for the airport.

Opponents maintain the current terminal is more than adequate for present and future needs, and any problems can be fixed much short of a new terminal. Proponents say the 40-year-old building is in poor shape and would cost more to repair than replace.

Opponents say the people should be allowed to decide on whether a new terminal is needed. Proponents claim the City Council and airport boards — which represent the people — have scrutinized the situation in detail and all concluded that a new terminal is needed.

Ms. Walger said the City Council only listens and responds to special interest groups. "They really don't care about the typical taxpayer, citizen, voter," she said.

Akins — who does not currently hold any official position with the city — defended the council as fair and concerned for the best interests of the people.

Akins also raised the concern that those opposing the airport terminal have not studied the situation in detail, and if they did, would be convinced of the need. "Every person that's done it has come away thinking that it ought to be done," Akins said.

City Manager Mike McGregor, in a statement released after the news conference, stated, in part: "In our opinion, the facts and figures overwhelmingly indicate that a new building is needed. An election costs money and time."

McGregor's statement continued: "However, we do realize the rights of this group to ask for a referendum. If they are successful in getting the signatures on the petition, we will aggressively communicate our story. We have confidence that the public will make a sound decision after hearing both sides of the story."

If enough signatures are acquired and following verification by the City Secretary's Office, an election must be called within 60 days.

Petition organizers said additional information about the petition can be obtained by contacting any of the following committee members: Tom Dollahite, Hurchel Joe Murphy, Edna Walger, Larry Mayes, J. Chris Statton, Jim Harris, Richard A. Ingram, Don K. Kyser and Sharon Sanchez. All are listed in the telephone director except Ms. Sanchez, organizers said.

Chinese human-rights activist Wu vows to seek compensation for detention

Associated Press

Chinese-American human rights activist Harry Wu, safely back on U.S. soil after two months in Chinese detention, said Friday that the spying case against him was "all lies" and vowed to seek compensation from China.

Wu called The Associated Press bureau in Beijing from his home in Milpitas, Calif., to give his first lengthy interview since he was taken into custody June 19 while trying to enter China at a remote border crossing.

He said he would demand compensation from the Chinese government for illegally detaining him and violating U.S.-China agreements that say arrested Americans should be allowed visits by U.S. consular officials within 48 hours.

On his first day home, he wrote a letter to the Chinese government, accusing police of swindling him of $1,000 just before putting him on the plane to San Francisco.

"Now, I'm fighting back," Wu said. He did not specify what other steps he would take.

Wu, 58, had spent 19 years in Chinese labor camps before emigrating to the United States in 1985. Since 1991, he has made repeated clandestine trips into China to gather evidence of abuses in China's extensive prison labor camp system.

Chinese authorities convicted Wu on Thursday of stealing state secrets and sentenced him to 15 years in jail. But in an apparent bid to pull U.S.-Chinese relations out of their deep slump, officials released him hours later and put him on a plane out of the country.

"I knew they had only two ways of dealing with me: totally destroy me or let me go," Wu said.

He said his release "shows how powerful is U.S. pressure (and) the pressure of the whole world."

After sleeping for a few hours in his home in Milpitas, about 40 miles southeast of San Francisco, he talked with reporters in his family room.

He walked downstairs slowly, apparently feeling the effects of the broken back he suffered in a coal mine accident during imprisonment. But Wu managed to crack a few jokes.

While on the plane home, he said, he considered renting a car at the airport and driving home to surprise his wife. But the surprise was on him.

"I stepped out (of the plane) and said, 'Wow.' I saw flowers, mayors, reporters and policemen ... and especially yellow ribbons," he said. It meant "freedom," he added softly.

His wife, Ching-Lee Wu, who had ceaselessly lobbied governments and human-rights groups to press for her husband's release, smiled as she watched him talk with reporters.

Wu said he steeled himself for execution — a possible sentence for espionage — by not thinking of his wife.

"I confessed to my wife, 'I didn't think about you a lot. Thinking about you, I'd go mad,'" Wu said. He told himself he had no family or any "good things" on the outside.

"I had to prepare for my death," he said.

Wu said his only choices were death or freedom.

"I decided if they put me in jail, even one month or two months or three months, and were not going to deport me, I would just have a hunger strike," he said.

In the telephone interview, Wu said the government case was built on "lies, all lies." He said he did not want to go into detail yet.

He also dismissed as fabrication the official Xinhua News Agency report that he was given good treatment.

Xinhua wrote: "While in custody, it is learned, Wu received humane treatment. ... Wu received timely medical treatment for his leg ailments and was deeply moved by this."

In fact, Wu said, police did not give him medicine brought by U.S. consular officials until just before he left the country. His requests for a cane or a wheelchair were refused, and he was denied even aspirin during the trial.

"You saw how I was holding on to the railing for support," Wu said, referring to Xinhua photos showing him leaning on the prisoner's enclosure.

He said he was detained in a small room in a rest home for police in Wuhan, Hubei province, about 700 miles south of Beijing. For his two visits with U.S. consular officials, police drove him to a detention center in central Wuhan.

Three police shared the 148-square-foot room with him, while dozens of others surrounded the building. Wu said he was kept under 24-hour guard, even when he went to the bathroom.

As women's conference nears, taboo subjects come to fore in China

By Charlene L. Fu
Associated Press

BEIJING — Gui Xiaoyan's husband poured a cup of acid on her face, burning off her eyelids, ears and nose. Government-controlled media gave her story unprecedented coverage, pushing the issue of domestic violence into the open.

Spousal abuse is just one of the taboo subjects that has been seriously discussed in the official press in recent months, along with incest, sexual harassment and marital rape.

Reporting violence and discrimination against women could be, in part, an attempt to make local officials more aware of such problems in the hopes of giving women more protection.

They are topics Chinese women are likely to encounter at the Fourth World Conference on Women that begins in Beijing Sept. 4, but until recently they were hardly fodder for official reports.

Reporting violence and discrimination against women could be, in part, an attempt to make local officials more aware of such problems in the hopes of giving women more protection.

Whatever the motivation, the public admission that such attacks are not isolated is a dramatic turnaround for China. For decades, the government portrayed China as a haven of equality for women — a place where women were respected for their contribution to society and were not regarded as sex objects.

But now, reports like these appear in the official press:

■ A coal miner doused his ex-wife with kerosene and set her on fire when she refused to remarry him.

■ A 17-year-old girl beat her father to death with a steel rod after he raped her repeatedly over the course of a year.

■ A husband bit off his ex-wife's tongue after tricking her into giving him "one last kiss."

■ A peasant man forced his wife to have sex with him, kicking her so brutally in the abdomen that she nearly died. He was sentenced to five years for marital rape.

■ Fifty percent of the women at a secretarial training session said they had been sexually harassed, some by foreign bosses. One secretary changed jobs five times in six months because of sexual harassment.

Gui's story has gotten the most attention.

She was known as a beauty in her village in central China's Hubei province, 685 miles from Beijing. Her first marriage ended when she bore a daughter rather than a son and her husband divorced her.

Her boss at a bus company where she sold tickets threatened to kill her unless she married him. She did, and on March 4, when she didn't respond fast enough to his demands to serve food and drink to his friends, he poured acid on her.

She was so disfigured that for more than a month, until her family borrowed enough money for corrective surgery, she couldn't close her eyes or swallow. Her chin fused to her neck as the skin on her face and neck grew back.

Local police refused to arrest her husband, saying they could not interfere in a family matter. He fled the village.

The Jinglun Family Center in Beijing pushed hardest to get Gui's case publicized.

It is just one of hundreds of unofficial women's groups that have sprung up as China prepares for the women's conference. The groups are mostly small and mainly made up of volunteers who help women with such matters as getting through divorce, finding loans and getting job training.

The Jinglun center also runs a hot line, taking 210 calls from opening in October through the end of May. The number is misleadingly low, said Chen Yiyun, the center's founder. For one thing, only 3 percent of Chinese households have phones.

Chen and others say spousal abuse is on the rise as Chinese are confronted with dramatic social changes for the first time in nearly a half-century: competition in the workplace, growing personal — including sexual — freedoms, and opportunities to become wealthy or destitute overnight.

Just how widespread such violence has become, however, is not known.

"There's never been a comprehensive survey of domestic violence in the entire country," Chen said.

Underlying it all is the traditional belief that a wife is a man's property.

Chen tells of a husband who cut off his wife's ears and nose, then went back to watching his television program.

"He didn't think he'd done anything wrong," Chen said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, AUGUST 26, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Making overdue changes in your personal life will put you in a positive frame of mind. You get an opportunity to shine in areas you have shunned in the past. Business negotiations should go great if you enter them fully prepared. Take a closer look at shared resources, then decide what is best for you and your mate. Keep a watchful eye on offspring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: oral polio vaccine developer Dr. Albert Sabin, actor Macaulay Culkin, basketball great Tom Heinsohn, musician Branford Marsalis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone promises new financial support. Believe it only after the money is in the bank! An evening out will be surprisingly inexpensive if you plan carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Schedule your time so that you can meet family demands as well as your own needs. A phone call gives you an opportunity to see someone special. Share secrets only with those you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An excellent day to kick back and relax with friends. Small favors will be quickly granted. Show appreciation. Reviewing your priorities will help you decide what to do this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Others look to you for leadership. Avoid seeming indecisive. Romantic partner may be feeling taken for granted. Work harder around the house. A casual supper with close friends proves very relaxing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Learn more about computers and encourage children to do the same. Public opinion favors your efforts to right an old wrong. A relationship based on fiery passion may burn itself out. Develop shared interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay action-oriented. Make things happen! An older person's request could leave you with mixed feelings. Impulsive purchases will lead to regrets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct 22): Financial records could hold the secret you are trying to unravel. Dig deep and you will find all the proof you need. You deserve the best. Say "yes" to an offer to travel first-class.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Discuss joint financial matters face-to-face with family members. A secondhand report could get garbled and cause a rift. Take care of minor repairs before they become more serious. Reserve quality time for romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Quit changing your mind. Settle on something so that everyone involved can get on with their lives. Knowing your own heart will make the path to romance much smoother. Dynamic action pays handsome dividends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your ambition could work against you if you let it get out of hand. Maintain your self-control when under pressure. You may have to fight for what you want. Postpone a romantic interlude.

Mother Teresa has no special plans for her birthday, welcomes guests

CALCUTTA, India — Mother Teresa has no plans for her 85th birthday on Saturday, so if you're in the neighborhood, drop in.

Asked Friday what she was doing for her birthday, Mother Teresa said, "Nothing special." But if people come to wish her well, she said, "I will meet whoever comes to see me."

The 1979 Nobel Peace Prize winner is not letting age slow down her mission to rescue the world's poor and fight abortion. Since her last birthday, Mother Teresa has traveled to Washington to open an orphanage, to Bangladesh to open a floating hospital, and to Rome to consult with Pope John Paul II.

NEW YORK — Charlie's best-known angel may be taking it off for Playboy.

Nude photos of Farrah Fawcett will appear in the magazine's Christmas issue, the New York Daily News reported Friday.

The 48-year-old actress posed for the pictures in St. Barts in the Caribbean, the newspaper said.

Former 'angel' Farrah Fawcett may be taking it off for Playboy.

Playboy spokesman Billy Farley refused to comment. And Fawcett's spokeswoman, Annette Wolf, did not immediately return a call Friday.

Other over-40 women have disrobed in the pages of Playboy, including 54-year-old Nancy Sinatra earlier this year.

LOS ANGELES — A family illness has forced Ringo Starr and his All-Starr Band to scratch the remaining dates on their U.S. tour.

Starr returned to England on Friday to tend to the sick relative and canceled appearances in Reno, Nev., San Diego, and Monterey and Santa Barbara, Calif., publicist Elizabeth Freund said.

Freund would not identify the relative or elaborate on the nature of the illness.

John Entwistle of the Who and Randy Bachman of Bachman Turner Overdrive are members of the All-Starr Band.

LOS ANGELES — Michael Jackson's new single is making sales chart HIStory.

"You Are Not Alone" has become the first song to debut at No. 1 on the singles charts, his record company said Thursday.

In one week of sales between Aug. 15 and Tuesday, the single sold 120,286 copies for the top spot on Billboard's Hot 100, Sony Music said.

Jackson's new album, "HIStory: Past, Present, and Future, Book 1," is No. 15 on the charts. It is Jackson's first album since he settled child molestation allegation for a reported $15 million.

Jackson's single "Scream" from the "HIStory" album set a record when it entered the chart at No. 5. It beat the Beatles' "Let It Be," which entered the chart at No. 6 in 1970.

NEW YORK — Angry is as angry does, and the creator of Forrest Gump is angry.

The object of Winston Groom's ire is Michiko Kakutani, book critic for The New York Times, who recently slammed Groom's new book, "Gump & Co.," in a review written like a monologue from the dimwitted Gump.

"I think I speak for a lot of writers who've been bullied by this woman over the years," Groom said in Friday's New York Post. "I don't mind bad reviews. But this was just mean-spirited. It wasn't even a good parody of a satire."

Ismail Merchant, the filmmaker whose informed eye for perfect locations and polished sets has made productions like "A Room With a View" and "Remains of the Day" as renowned for their visual splendor as for their dramatic content, found himself cast out onto the street this week. In New York, of all places.

Merchant, who has filmed in the palaces of India and the palazzi of Italy, was denied access to a co-op apartment at 131 East 66th Street while directing "The Proprietor." The movie stars Jeanne Moreau as an internationally celebrated French novelist.

"We were completely shattered," Merchant said. "This has never happened to us."

Merchant said he had understood that he had a valid agreement with the owner of the elegant, high-ceiling apartment and the building's management before he left for six weeks of filming in Paris earlier this summer.

But after he and his crew filmed for one day in the apartment, the director said, the co-op board said its permission for such activity was necessary, and it was denied.

Merchant's appeals for reconsideration fell on deaf ears, as did those of Patricia Reed Scott, the city's commissioner of film, theater and broadcasting. He quickly revised his filming schedule to shoot in Mount Morris Park in Harlem while seeking a new interior location.

GOP recalls Republican heroine of suffrage movement in attempt to gather votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A banner strung outside the GOP's national headquarters proclaims, "It Took a Republican Congress to Get the Vote for Women." And the party tells anyone who will listen: Susan B. Anthony, heroine of the suffrage movement, voted Republican.

To mark the 75th anniversary of the women's vote today, the Grand Old Party dug up its past in hopes of impressing female voters, who as a group have leaned toward the Democrats in recent elections.

"I think they'll like our history," said Karen Johnson, a spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee.

Democrats aren't impressed. Their retort: What have you done for women lately?

"The Republicans are reaching as far back as they can in order to gloss over the fact that the Republican Party today has nothing to offer women," said Diane Reis, press secretary for the Democratic National Committee.

Women voters are a hot property. If women voted as a bloc, no national candidate could win without them.

Women have been more than half of all voters since the mid-'60s, partly because there are more women of voting age. And these days they also turn out at a higher rate.

Women don't vote alike, of course. But since 1980 there has been a "gender gap": Women were slightly more likely to vote for Democrats, and men were more likely to vote for Republicans.

Women were crucial to President Clinton's victory in 1992; Men were the key to the Republican takeover of Congress in 1994. In that congressional election, the Democrats won the votes of 53 percent of women but only 42 percent of men.

"Women voters are the balance of power for both parties," said Republican pollster Linda DiVall. "Both parties have to do better in getting their share of the women voters."

The GOP's role in giving women the vote 75 years ago is probably "a small plus" at best, DiVall said.

Nevertheless, the Republican National Committee urged party members in every state to mark the anniversary with news conferences and celebrations reminding them that Republicans took the lead in women's suffrage.

"In the public's mind the Democrats have always carried the banner that they have been the party of women," said Rep. Sue Kelly, R-N.Y. "I think it's unfair."

History shows that men in both parties ridiculed women's early calls for suffrage. And by the time the 19th Amendment was ratified seven decades later, both parties supported it.

In the meantime, many suffragists were Republicans, partly because the GOP embraced their other favorite movements — the crusades to abolish slavery and prohibit the sale of alcohol.

The 19th Amendment didn't receive the two-thirds vote needed in Congress until Republicans won control in 1918. But it was a Democratic president, Woodrow Wilson, who called Congress into a special session for that vote.

And what about Susan B. Anthony, who died before women won the right to vote? She cast a ballot only once, in 1872, and was arrested for it. She voted for the Republican ticket.

"Later she would say over and over again that she would support any party that would put women's enfranchisement on the plank," said Colleen Hurst, historian at the Susan B. Anthony House in Rochester, N.Y. No party did in her lifetime.

But as soon as it seemed inevitable that women would win the vote, both parties were eager to count women on their side.

Just ask 95-year-old Ann Salsberg, who was working for a Republican state legislator in 1920. As soon as she got word that the 19th Amendment had been ratified, she rushed to the Camden, N.J., city hall to become the first local woman to register.

They weren't ready for her. The all-male staff huddled together. What should they do? Finally, one said, "Go on and let her register. She'll be a good Republican."

Citizens object to no-mowing policy for parks in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Overgrown and unsightly, some complain.

Native prairie grasses adding texture, color and softness to the urban landscape, the Minneapolis Park Board counters.

The Park Board in this city of groomed parks and many lakes is letting 10 percent of Minneapolis' mowed parkland revert to nature this year. To hear some people complain, you'd think the whole city had gone to seed.

"One of these days someone is going to suggest we go out and buy a bunch of cows and let them graze. That's what we have here, a bunch of pastures," grumbles City Councilman Steve Minn.

The Park Board, faced with a $678,000 budget shortfall, approved the plan in a 9-0 vote in December, estimating the agency will save $200,000 by not mowing certain patches, mostly along lakes and creeks, on hillsides and in little-used corners of parks.

The reduced mowing is part of a long-range plan to convert some parkland to native grasses and wildflowers that grew in Minnesota before settlers arrived.

"What we're trying to do is create sustainable landscapes so we don't have to commit a lot of time to maintain them. It doesn't mean you can just let them go," says Al Singer, environmental program manager for the Park Board.

Already, the yellow faces of black-eyed susans and lacy goldenrod fronds are brightening up some hillsides.

On the other hand, 8-foot stands of ragweed are blocking people's view of Minnehaha Creek, and heavy stands of grass are making it hard to reach Lake Nokomis.

The Park Board set up a telephone line to take comments on the reduced mowing policy. Singer says 43 percent of nearly 850 callers opposed the policy, and 57 percent liked it.

"Living in the city, I think we need everything green we can get," Jayne O'Connor says. "I like long, flowing grasses."

"You call them grasses, I call them weeds," Ron Bates says. He says his wife has begun walking on the St. Paul side of the Mississippi River because she is nervous about thugs hiding in the grass on the Minneapolis side.

Singer says the board has gotten only two calls from people complaining that the reduced mowing has worsened their hay fever.

Hardware nightmare

Samples of hardware that are compatible with Windows '95 are displayed at a Cambridge, Mass., computer store. Upgrading even a relatively new personal computer to run Windows '95 at a good clip could cost hundreds of dollars more than the cost of the new operating system itself. Page 3B

Some Q&A on Windows

To come up with straight answers on Windows 95, The San Francisco Examiner asked expert Bill Magid and other professional computer reviewers for their ratings of the new operating system.

Q: What is an operating system?

A: It is the software that controls every aspect of your computer. It is analogous to the way the human nervous system regulates breathing, heart beat and all the other functions necessary to sustain life. The operating system also controls the working of the application programs, like word processors or spreadsheets, that make computers useful.

Q: What is Windows 95?

A: Today, most computers have Intel Corp. microprocessors inside. Most Intel-based PCs are controlled by two Microsoft programs working in conjunction. The DOS operating system controls the PC's basic functions. Windows 3.1 gives users point-and-click control over the computer that is easier than typing in DOS commands. Because Windows 3.1 is an add-on to DOS, the two programs often run into conflicts that cause the computer to "crash." Windows 95 will replace DOS and Windows 3.1 with an all-in-one operating system. Win95 will control the computer and offer point-and-click control in one program. It will be more reliable and easier to use. It is expected to sell for $89.

Q: Why all the fuss about Windows 95?

A: Microsoft operating systems control more than 80 percent of the world's personal computers. Even if the software giant wasn't hyping the event, the release of a new Microsoft operating system would still require software and hardware vendors to upgrade their products to keep up with the capabilities and quirks of the new operating system.

Q: I'm about to buy my first computer, what do I need to know?

A: If you buy a new PC after Aug. 24, and it has an Intel Corp. microprocessor, chances are you'll get Windows 95 automatically. Ask for it. New users will find Windows 95 easy to use. Some reviewers say Windows 95 is as easy to use as Apple Computer Inc.'s Macintosh operating system.

Microsoft won't spend any of its promotional budget to tell you so, but the Mac operating system is the model on which Windows 95 is based.

Q: I already have a PC? Can it run Windows 95?

A: Although Microsoft says Windows 95 can run on a 386 PC with 4 megabytes of memory, the experts say don't try it.

For decent performance, a 486 microprocessor running at 33 megahertz, with 8 megabytes of RAM is a minimum. Twelve to 16 mega of memory would be better.

Windows 95 itself takes up about 60 megabytes of storage space on your hard drive. Hard disk storage space is different from memory. You have to have enough of both.

Though not absolutely necessary, you should have a CD-ROM drive. The CD-ROM version of Windows 95 has tutorials not available on the disk version of the upgrade.

Whether you upgrade from disk or CD-ROM, rest assured: Microsoft has made Windows 95 easy to install. But just to be safe, back up.

Opening Windows

Gates' way to tomorrow hits store shelves with a flourish

■ Windows '95 isn't revolutionary, but it is stable, fun.

By Warren Wilson
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

THE PRODUCT IS NEW, BUT THE BASIC SCRIPT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WRITTEN A DECADE AGO.

IN 1985, MICROSOFT WAS TOUTING ITS WINDOWS COMPUTER OPERATING SYSTEM, EXPLAINING HOW EASY AND FUN IT WAS COMPARED WITH KLUNKY OLD MS-DOS. TODAY, MICROSOFT IS TOUTING WINDOWS 95, EXPLAINING HOW EASY AND FUN IT IS COMPARED WITH KLUNKY OLD WINDOWS.

AP Laserphoto

Despite reviews that are largely favorable, Microsoft's Windows '95 will not be bug-free, and the complementary hardware and software that users will need to make certain it works at optimum performaance will be far from cheap.

So what exactly do you get if you pay $90 or so now that Windows 95 is on store shelves? Is it an advance on the scale of Windows 3, the best-selling computer operating system ever? Does it deliver?

Many reviewers and analysts agree that the answer is a strong — but still qualified — yes, Windows 95 delivers. It's not revolutionary, they say, but it's stable, strong, considerably easier and much more fun to navigate.

Windows 95 is "absolutely" a quantum leap forward from Windows 3.1, said Rob Enderle, senior analyst with the market research firm Dataquest. It has been so thoroughly tested and refined, he said, that "the final release is really more like the release of a version two."

The qualifiers:

■ Installation might not be bug-free, despite Microsoft's best efforts.

■ Your old software probably won't run any faster, so you may want to upgrade.

■ And you might want to buy a new computer. But more on that later.

Windows 95, like Windows 3.1 and DOS, is an operating system. It is to a computer what the steering wheel, gearshift and pedals are to a car. Compared to the old versions, using Windows 95 is like having an automatic transmission after using a stick shift without synchromesh.

Several reviewers have said that Apple's Macintosh system retains a slight edge in ease of use, and that some of the new features in Windows 95 have been available to Mac users for years — long file names and automatic hardware adjustment, for example.

But they agreed that Microsoft, by plucking good ideas from far and wide, has significantly narrowed the usability gap.

Besides, Microsoft hardly needs to convert Mac enthusiasts. The 70 million to 80 million people who already use Windows on personal computers are a ready market for the upgrade. And such is Microsoft's marketing might that of all the new personal computers sold, 80 percent will include Windows 95.

Between upgrades and new computers, market analysts predict that Microsoft will sell 20 million to 30 million copies by the end of the year.

Among the first things a Windows 95 user will notice upon installation is that it studies the system and sets itself up accordingly. So the chances are good you won't have to spend extra hours telling it about your printer, your modem, your sound card, etc., before those things will work.

Again, it's not bug-free. Old or obscure hardware may give it fits, and even some new, major-brand computers can cause headaches. But given the thousands of items on the market, the remarkable thing may not be that Windows 95 doesn't know them all, but that it recognizes so many.

There's another payoff ahead when you upgrade your hardware. If the new item is compatible with the Plug-and-Play feature, Windows 95 will automatically recognize it and set the proper switches for you.

Once Windows 95 is up and running, users will find it packed with new features and improvements.

A key difference is the welcome absence of the old Program Manager, the main window through which all others were reached. It has been replaced by a "start" button: Click it once and up pops a short, simple menu of programs, documents and tools such as "help" and "find."

Pick the document you want — a letter, for example — and it opens right away; you don't have to open the word processor first.

And the start button is always visible, unlike the Program Manager, which was lost to view the moment you opened a window on top of it.

Another change involves the right-hand button on the mouse. Now it has a real purpose: Click it to customize the desktop, create a shortcut, test a screen saver or close a program, among other uses.

Multitasking — running more than one program on your computer at a time — is also much smoother and more reliable. Instead of killing time while a long document prints, you can go to another program and do something productive.

The new "recycle bin" lets you retrieve an accidentally deleted file as easily as you deleted it.

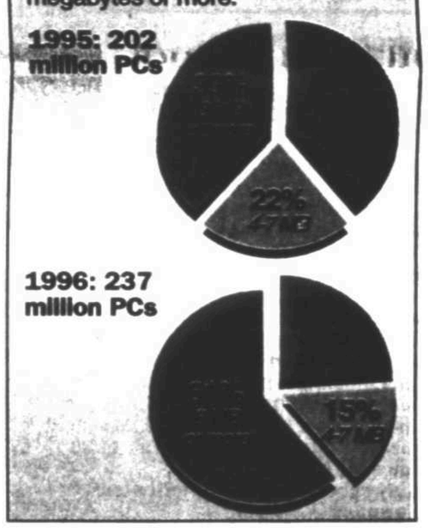

And at last you can use long file names. Instead of "grtamnvl," you can say what you mean — "The Great American Novel" — and still have room left over.

Experts: Windows '95 requires a lot of hardware, some relearning

By Tom Abate
San Francisco Examiner

As Microsoft Corp. prepares to put its new Windows 95 operating system on sale, the San Francisco Examiner asked five Bay Area product reviewers to rate the most heavily promoted software package of all time. Their verdict: Windows 95 is a big improvement over Windows 3.1, which it was designed to replace. As promised, the new operating system will run most existing PC software, even though the real benefit of having Windows 95 won't be realized until new applications emerge to tap its power.

But the experts said Windows 95 requires so much hardware to run that it may force users to upgrade existing PCs or buy new machines. And while novices may appreciate its easy-to-use features, some reviewers think veteran Windows 3.1 users will be surprised at how much Windows 95 forces them to relearn.

These generally positive assessments came as Microsoft got the good news that the Justice Department will not interfere with its Windows 95 debut. Government attorneys had been investigating whether Microsoft violated antitrust law by offering every Windows 95 buyer a chance to join the new Microsoft Network. But Justice will do nothing for now.

■ Analysis

Meanwhile, every PC vendor except International Business Machines Inc. is licensed to load Windows 95 on millions of new PCs, helping augment the sales that Microsoft is expected to garner from current users who will buy Windows 95 as a software upgrade for existing PCs.

"I think it will be a very, very successful product," said Dataquest analyst Scott Miller.

Here's what review editors and hardware analysts had to say about Windows 95.

The overall rating system is 1 to 4 stars, with 4 being the best:

Hardware configuration: I've used it on everything from a 486 running at 66 megahertz to a Pentium running at 90 megahertz. The 486 had 16 megabytes of memory and the Pentium had 32 megabytes.

Key applications: I've been working on it on a daily basis with a wide variety of applications.

Traveling exhibit to help ease use for potential customers

Now that Microsoft is making the ballyhooed conversion to Windows '95, most of the computer industry is rushing to switch equipment, too.

By Anthony Ramirez
N.Y. Times News Service

With Windows 95 now unleashed on a suspecting world, many marketers think the first customers will mostly be individuals, not businesses.

Companies of various stripes make up three-quarters of the potential market, but they may take months if not years to decide whether to buy the Microsoft upgrade. How can Microsoft and its allies get them to pick up the pace?

Enter an 18-wheeler truck.

The brainchild of Windows magazine, a trade publication, the truck is a traveling trade show. The products to be demonstrated are Windows 95 and the compatible products of the show's sponsors — AST Computer, a maker of IBM-compatible PCs; Western Digital, a maker of computer hard drives; and Ingram Micro, a distributor of computer software that is a unit of Ingram Industries Group. Other sponsors may sign up as well.

Windows 95 is the new operating system, or the brains, being brought out for the 80 percent of the nation's personal computers that use Microsoft systems. Now that Microsoft is making the ballyhooed conversion to Windows 95, most of the computer industry is rushing to switch equipment, too.

While many computer stores, like Computer City and CompUSA, have some PCs where potential customers can view Windows 95, they rarely have staff dedicated to Windows 95 alone.

And many suppliers, like AST Computer, sell their products through middlemen rather than through their own sales staff, so the show gives them the chance to meet customers firsthand.

The 18-wheeler truck will have a staff specially trained in Windows 95 and the compatible products. It has space to demonstrate the software on 10 computers and carries enough generating capacity to light and air-condition a four-bedroom house.

The truck can visit as many as seven cities a week, stopping at business parks and large suburban computer stores. The total cost, to be borne by the sponsors, is likely to exceed $1.2 million.

Now being built, the truck is scheduled to leave New York on Sept. 6 on a 75-city, 110-stop tour called the Windows Magazine Business Productivity Tour. The tour is scheduled to last until February.

Why such a big vehicle? "If it was just a U-Haul truck, it wouldn't be as dynamic-looking a tool," said John Burger, vice president for marketing for Western Digital Corp. in Irvine, Calif.

Despite its openly promotional aspect, the tour's appeal is akin to that of Barnum & Bailey, the organizers say. "Why will people come?" asked Mark Dodge of Integrated Marketing Services, which is training the staff and scheduling the tour. "You're bringing to the public a free show."

Rob Enderle, a computer industry analyst for Dataquest, a market research firm in San Jose, Calif., said the tour might help the whole industry. "It's important for companies to educate users about Windows 95," which unlike earlier versions "can be installed on the desktop by an individual user" without involving the purchaser's computer department.

Enderle said he had heard of a user installing Windows 95 on his office computer and then causing an entire computer-driven assembly line elsewhere in the building to crash.

"If someone learns about the advantages and potential risks of Windows 95 by seeing this tour," Enderle said, "then it's an important thing to do."

He estimates that by year's end, about 20 million of the 100 million computers using Windows or DOS will use Windows 95. By the end of 1996, the number may shoot up to 76 million out of 140 million computers.

Scott Wolf, publishing director, and Cynthia L. Ahart, marketing director, thought up the truck tour for the magazine, which is owned by CMP Publications Inc. They had success last year with a four-month tour showcasing AT&T's new line of personal computers.

But unlike that tour, which was aimed at big business, the Windows tour is also aimed at small businesses and consumers. "We wanted to take it out of the box of regular advertising," Wolf said. He hopes to break even on the show but to raise $1 million in additional advertising revenue for the magazine.

But isn't there a big sponsor missing from the big tour? "Yes, Microsoft," said Wolf, who is lobbying the company to sponsor part of the tour.

Last week, Microsoft announced a $200 million television and print campaign that centers on the software's "Start" icon and the Rolling Stones song "Start Me Up."

Wolf acknowledged that there was little incentive for Microsoft to pay for promotion that Windows magazine is providing free. "It's actually pretty smart on their part," he said.

FUN: 32-bit architecture improves software

(From 1B)

Many of the improvements built into Windows 95 are made possible by its 32-bit architecture. The details won't interest most users, but it's worth noting that your current software is all 16-bit, so it won't run much faster, if at all. To take advantage of the speed and power of your new operating system, you'll need new, 32-bit software.

A number of programs designed to work with Windows 95 will be on the market by Thursday's launch date, but most are still being developed.

Relax. Your current software is by no means obsolete. As with hardware, Microsoft has gone to great lengths to make Windows 95 "backward compatible" with the thousands of programs already on the market. But as Windows 95 becomes the new PC standard, and few doubt it will, there will be less and less reason for software companies, including Microsoft, to improve and support their old 16-bit programs.

Now, about that new computer.

Windows 95 requires, at a minimum, a 386DX processor with four megabytes of memory. Microsoft says that will perform about as well on Windows 95 as it does on Windows 3.1.

For good performance, Microsoft recommends a 486 processor with eight megabytes of memory. Certain functions — multitasking, for example — require eight megabytes, as do certain programs, such as the new Microsoft Network.

And most people who have worked closely with that program say you'll be happier with 16 megabytes.

As for hard-disk space, installing Windows 95 on top of Windows 3.1 will consume about 25 megabytes and temporarily borrow about 15 more during setup. So hold off if your disk is nearly full.

All told, to run Windows 95 happily you might need more memory, a bigger hard disk and a faster processor — which adds up to a new computer to go with all your new 32-bit software.

If you're into bells and whistles, you'll get a kick out of the $50 Windows 95 add-on called Microsoft Plus. Among other things, it includes something called a "system agent" that keeps your computer tuned up, a realistic pinball-machine game and a set of desktop themes. Choose the "dangerous creatures" theme and check out what the blowfish does as you dump things into the recycle bin.

Among the most interesting features on Windows 95 are the Internet and Microsoft Network icons on the main screen. They are noteworthy not as technical innovations but for what they say about Microsoft's goal of seamless, one-click access to the world of online services and information.

It's the network icon in particular that competitors claim gives Microsoft an unfair advantage. Everyone who installs Windows 95 or buys it pre-loaded on a new computer will see the MSN symbol every time he or she looks at the main screen.

Users will see it a lot more often if they buy new versions of Microsoft software. Many programs will prominently display the same icon so users can quickly tap into the network from whatever program they are using.

By combining ease of access with low cost, Microsoft hopes to capitalize on its dominance in operating systems to gain similar strength in the burgeoning online field. Forrester Research predicts that the Microsoft Network will surpass CompuServe in membership by 1998 and market leader America Online by the following year.

So with all these features, are there any drawbacks to Windows 95? Should you upgrade right away when it's released to the public?

If you're buying a new PC, you'll probably get it automatically. If not, you can figure the system has been assembled with Windows 95 in mind and should run smoothly.

For upgraders, Microsoft has spent major sums not only to trumpet the improvements but to eliminate as many of the problems as possible:

- It postponed the release more than once while it labored to make Windows 95 as broadly compatible as possible.
- It conducted an extensive beta testing program that ultimately encompassed 50,000 users — more than three times as many as on Windows 3.1. A "corporate preview" program put the final beta version in the hands of 400,000 more users.
- It developed its own "usability" laboratory to study people's reactions and make Windows 95 as simple and intuitive as possible. It even commissioned Usability Sciences Corp. to study Windows 3.1 and Windows 95 side-by-side and compare users' learning time and productivity.

Not surprisingly, the Dallas company gave Windows 95 two thumbs up. After using it for an hour and a half, it said, the people in the study group completed a standard set of tasks in less than half the time it took them with Windows 3.1.

One of the innovations in Windows 95 is so powerful that it set off alarms. A tool called the Registration Wizard studies your system and can forward its findings to Microsoft.

Critics say it's too Big Brotherish, that they don't want Microsoft poking around in their computers. Nor do they want the information used to flood their mailboxes with customized offers for hardware and software upgrades.

Group program manager Dennis Adler calls that a bum rap, and one that really bothers him.

"We were so careful to make sure it didn't send out anything without asking you," he said.

And it doesn't. The registration form explicitly asks whether to forward the information to Microsoft. And Microsoft promises it will never give registrants' names or addresses to other companies, though it will sometimes share group information and may do custom mailings for them.

Don't wait for Windows 96, because there won't be one, the company says. Windows 95 is the ticket, and it's ready right now.

At a recent meeting with reporters, someone suggested to group product manager Russ Stockdale that buyers should treat Windows 95 cautiously, like a new car model.

His ready answer: "The first Lexus did just fine."

Facts & Figures

NEW YORK— Microsoft Corp.'s long-awaited Windows 95 software went on sale last Thursday. Following is a summary of what all the hoopla is about:

- Windows 95 is an operating system to control a personal computer's basic functions and run other software, such as word-processing programs. Its predecessors, Windows 3.1 and predecessor MS-DOS, run 100 million, or 80 percent, of the world's PCs.
- Redmond, Washington-based Microsoft says Windows 95 makes PC tasks easier by eliminating steps. It also allows different tasks to be done at the same time, such as calculations and typing. Microsoft says graphics for saving documents and transferring files are simpler, and file names can be longer than the current eight-character maximum.
- Microsoft Network, a new on-line service, is included in Windows 95.
- Windows 95 is priced at $89 in the U.S. A buyer may have to spend more to use it, though. It is best used with a PC with eight megabytes of memory and at least 500 megabytes of disk space —both about twice as much as the average PC has. That means many Windows 95 buyers will have to invest in a new PC, additional disk-drive space or more memory.
- Windows 95 will be installed in most new PCs before they are shipped to stores, as well as being sold separately. Sales are expected to reach 7 million to 9 million in the first week, and 29 million by year-end, according to Dataquest Inc.
- The software could generate revenue of more than $2 billion for Microsoft in the next 18 months, analysts said. The company is spending $1 billion on its global promotional campaign.

RELEARN: Expert says corners have been cut in interface stability easier to configure.

Dislikes: I don't like the interface very much. They cut a lot of corners in the stability and quality of the operating system. It still will crash occasionally.

Glitches, bugs and crashes: We've found incompatibilities with two different versions of D-base for Windows, and some problems running Excel if you don't have at least a fast 486 to run on.

Overall rating and advice: I hesitant to give it a number rating. For the ordinary Window's 3.1 user it's a worthwhile upgrade, but you will need 12 megs of memory to use it comfortably, and nothing slower than a fast 486 will do. My present operating system of choice is IBM's OS/2.

Lawrence Magid, Syndicated columnist:

Experience with Windows 95: I have been playing with it for a long time and have used it full-time for about five months.

Hardware configuration: My desktop machine is a 90 megahertz Pentium with 16 megabytes of memory. I also have it on a Gateway 2000 subnotebook with 24 megabytes of memory.

Key applications: I am using a beta version of Word 7.0. Prior to that I used Word 6.0. I have used all the on-line services as well as the Netscape browser. I've also used Microsoft Works, Quicken and lots of miscellaneous software.

Likes: It doesn't crash nearly as often as Windows 3.1. I ran it on my Gateway for two weeks without rebooting. I like the long file names and the user interface.

Dislikes: For all practical purposes, people will have to buy new hardware because it requires at least 8 megs of RAM or preferably 12 to 16 megs. Don't expect to install it Monday morning and be fully productive Monday afternoon. There are tricks to be learned but it's well worth it for anyone willing to make the time.

Glitches, bugs and crashes: Sometimes it does crash. Sometimes there are long delays, but it is quite stable. I review 10 software programs a week and have conservatively run 200 packages on Windows 95 and it took virtually all of them without trouble.

Overall rating and advice: I would give DOS 1 star, Windows 3.1 2 1/2 stars and Windows 95 and the Mac operating system both 4 stars. In my view Windows 95 from an operating system standpoint is at least on par with the Mac.

Steve Fox, Executive editor, PC World, San Francisco

Experience with Windows 95: 13 months. Hardware configuration: I have used it on a range of machines from a 486 running at 33 megahertz on up to a Pentium running at 100 megahertz. All of them have 16 megabytes of memory.

Key applications: I have used Microsoft Word and Excel, all the on-line services, Netscape, cc:Mail, Lotus Organizer and PageMaker.

Likes: The user interface is cleaner and faster, and lets me do things more efficiently. I can run multiple applications and it doesn't crash or slow down. It is definitely more stable than Windows 3.1. With Windows 3.1 I used to find myself rebooting every hour or two. I've gone days without rebooting Windows 95.

Dislikes: Windows 95 has an e-mail and fax inbox called Exchange. But at times I'm not sure how to use it and I'm a pretty advanced user. Another key utility, Explorer, is not well done. It creates new folders, directories, etc. and is the replacement for File Manager under Windows 3.1, but I'm not sure it's better.

Glitches, bugs and crashes: Applications still get hung up on occasion. Everyone's looking for a bulletproof system but I'm not looking at it with Windows 95.

Overall rating and advice: I'd give it 3 stars. For the ordinary user it's a really persuasive upgrade for Windows 3.1. But the power user of Windows 3.1 will have to learn new things to take full advantage of Windows 95.

In response to the worldwide hub-bub surrounding the release of Windows 95, Apple Macintosh, Microsoft's chief competitor, issued the above congratulatory reply. In true computer-speak, the message was written in DOS language, a forerunner to the widely popular Windows operating system.

FAQ
(Frequently Asked Questions) about jalapeno.net

What is jalapeno.net?

jalapeno.net is a node on the Internet (the information highway).

What is the purpose of jalapeno.net?

jalapeno.net is established to provide direct dial-up and/or business networks with access to the information provided throughout the world to Internet users.

Are there other ways to access the Internet?

Yes, but most of the access is through some type of bulletin board system (bbs), online service (newspapers) or commercial server.

So, what is the difference?

Well simply, it is speed, access time and cost when one is talking about the Internet. Dial-up bbs and online services have limits to the type of connections an individual may use and the cost of time online. The user is connected to a host bbs or online server that is connected to the Internet. They do offer information and mail resident on their system. Access time and storage of mail sometimes involve a cost factor to the user.

jalapeno.net recommends the use of Netscape Navigator v 1.1 or compatible software to browse the Internet. The user is placed directly on the World Wide Web (WWW) Internet network. Mail is handled as a client server. The user is given an Internet address and mail is forwarded to their system through mail client software that resides on the user's system.

jalapeno.net gives the user access to the WWW for online services. Some are free and some require a subscription. That is a choice of the user.

What about cost?

jalapeno.net charges a flat fee of $ 29 plus tax for access every month. There is a one time setup charge of $ 29 plus tax. Mail is included in the charge. Software and installation-training are available for a fee. Netscape Navigator v 1.1 for both the Windows and Macintosh retails for $ 59 plus tax. Business and dedicated home access depends on the number of users and the distance the line must carry information to the node. All calls are local. The setup of rural access is coming in the next few months. The rural user can then call a local number to access the Internet. There is no time limit and no long distance fees for the user. This is the next step in access to the information age on a "today's .net."

Why an application and subscriber contract?

The application and contract addresses (1) use, (2) qualifications for payment and (3) user rights and liability. This is required by all major .nets due to the nature of the information on the Internet, i.e. copyrights and graphics. For an application and subscriber contract call 580-9676 or mail coupon to: CRN Communications, PO Box 60134, Midland, Texas 79711-0134.

To do it right, experts warn to be ready to shell out big bucks

By Richard Lorant
Associated Press Writer

■ Windows '95

BOSTON — At around $100, a copy of Windows 95 might not seem like a major investment to many personal computer owners.

But upgrading even a relatively new PC to run Microsoft Corp.'s new operating system could cost hundreds more. And that's not counting the new word processing, games or other application software it was created to run.

One Boston law firm with 100 PCs that are a few years old estimates it will cost about $1,000 per computer to change to Windows 95. That includes training and system improvements.

"We'd have to get new hard drives, more memory and an overdrive chip for each machine," said Steven Cohen of Rubin & Rudman as he looked over a Windows 95 display in a store Wednesday, the eve of its release. "It might actually be cheaper to get new computers."

Either way would be just fine with the computer industry, which is banking on a big boost from products associated with Windows 95. It is the first major update since 1990 to Windows, which runs basic functions of 8 out of 10 PCs.

"This whole Windows 95 hoopla will bring more people into our stores," said Laurie Levy, a spokeswoman for Dallas-based CompUSA Inc. "So we do believe we will sell more computers, more memory, probably even more mouse pads."

The program is expected to be standard on most new PCs the rest of this year. But it is unclear how many business and home computer owners will upgrade existing machines.

Microsoft says Windows 95 will run on a PC featuring an Intel 386 microchip with 4 megabytes of main memory and 25 megabytes of free hard disk space. The company recommends a faster 486 chip and 8 megabytes of memory.

But most reviewers say the program runs best with 16 megabytes of main memory and a top-end Pentium chip. They also say the program needs at least 35 megabytes of storage space.

That translates to $800-$1,200 in hardware improvements for someone whose computer is more than a year old, according to Paul Gillen, editor of Computerworld, a Framingham, Mass.-based trade publication.

He compared software makers who are writing new products that work with Windows 95 to record companies who have released compact disc versions of recordings they once sold as vinyl records.

"What they want is to sell all their software all over again," he said.

In the business world, buyers encounter more than the cost of the software.

A typical business will spend $200 to $700 per person in training and installation for a Windows 95 upgrade, exclusive of hardware improvements and new programs, according to Gartner Group of Stamford, Conn.

But the technological advisory firm has said the new program should reduce the five-year cost of a PC in a corporate setting from around $41,400 to $35,900, a 13 percent decline chiefly due to lower training costs.

Garnter Group told its clients, mostly large companies, to wait to buy Windows 95 until Microsoft has released a new version of the software in which early flaws have been corrected. That should occur by early next year.

But Mark Bird, manager of an Egghead Software store in Boston, is ready for shoppers. The back room of his store is stacked high with Windows 95 boxes.

"If people spend money, it's good for everybody," said Bird, who just increased his staff from four to six. "We're building a stronger economy."

Product will likely spur on-line services to newfound popularity

By Warren Wilson
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

SEATTLE — The world of online services is an increasingly rough-and-tumble marketplace. Microsoft's entry this week is helping turn it into a flat-out melee.

Forget for a moment whether the feds will heed the wishes of Microsoft's competitors and force the software giant to somehow separate its new Microsoft Network from its new operating system, Windows 95.

That is indeed a big issue, at least in the short term. But regardless of what happens there, Microsoft's arrival will only help spur competition among online services to new heights and accelerate the pace of change to warp speed.

Consumers will benefit from the pressure, as each service strives to keep its rates low while making its offerings interesting, innovative and easy to use.

"Users will see a lot more creativity and lower prices," said Josh Bernoff, senior analyst with Forrester Research in Cambridge, Mass.

The Microsoft Network is set to make its official debut Thursday with the release of Windows 95. For months the company has been busily lining up deals with "content providers" from NBC to UPS, aiming to offer a broad range of interesting and useful information on opening day.

Meanwhile, the other big online services haven't been idle:

■ Compuserve, the oldest and until recently the largest, is overhauling its "interfaces" (the point-and-click screens through which a user navigates the service) to make them easier to use. It also plans to cut rates next month and is racing to develop a new service aimed at less experienced computer users that they can customize according to their interests.

"There's this view that the online industry is going to stand pat and see what happens when the giant puts its foot down," said Compuserve spokesman Jeff Shafer. "In fact, this is a period of tremendous change for us."

■ America Online, which analysts say recently equaled or surpassed Compuserve's membership, revamped its own interface nine months ago and recently launched what it calls its "greenhouse" project to develop new offerings.

Two examples: NetNoir, which focuses on Afrocentric culture, and SurfLink, an interest group for people who surf (ocean waves, not TV channels or Internet sites).

■ Prodigy, the third-largest service, has just unveiled a new interface that is written in the same "hypertext" language as the World Wide Web, the Internet's commercial area. That means users can see Prodigy material and Web material on the same page and easily switch back and forth.

What sets Microsoft apart, of course, is its dominance in operating systems, and its plan to use that strength to leap ahead of its online competitors.

Everyone who adopts Windows 95, whether by upgrading from an earlier version or by purchasing it pre-installed on a new computer — tens of millions of computer users, in other words — will see the Microsoft Network access button right on the main screen.

Similarly, new versions of Microsoft's major applications programs, such as Word, Office and Publisher, will also include the same Network button.

Not only will it be easy to find, but Microsoft has sought to make it easy to grasp by designing it as an extension of Windows 95.

"When people learn the operating system, they will immediately know how to use the Microsoft Network," said George Meng, lead product manager for the network.

The company's goal, he said, is "seamless connectivity" between the two.

Microsoft's competitors assert that linking the network service to its ubiquitous operating system gives Microsoft an unfair advantage. They want the Justice Department to intervene and put a stop to it.

"It's an extremely unfair competitive advantage — deliberate and unfair," said Prodigy spokesman Brian Ek.

Not only is the Microsoft Network symbol easy to find, Ek said, but competitors' access buttons, or icons, are "buried four layers down" and the steps required to reach them "are not intuitive, either."

Allen Weiner, principal analyst for online strategies at San Jose-based Dataquest, a market research firm, said a Justice Department ruling against Microsoft would damage not just the company but the online industry itself by creating "a whole layer of confusion."

Dataquest predicts that as many as 11 million copies of Windows 95 will be sold Thursday alone, 20 million by the end of the year, and each one will include the Microsoft Network software.

If ordered to separate the two, Weiner asked, "How do you do it?"

Longer term, however, he and other analysts agree that quality is the key — in content, appearance and ease of use.

"The question isn't who can sign them up, it's who can keep them," said Forrester's Bernoff. "If the Microsoft Network doesn't have anything interesting on it, people will just leave after a few months."

Microsoft and its network allies seem well aware of that consideration.

As if in answer to recent critical reviews, NBC Tuesday announced the launch of SuperNet, a news service that will offer Microsoft Network subscribers breaking news from NBC News and The Associated Press, plus in-depth reports, maps and video and audio clips.

Among the other content providers Microsoft has lined up are a host of computer hardware and software companies, shopping services such as Home Shopping Network and QVC, various services aimed at small businesses and such eclectic offerings as a self-help resource called Mind Garden and the RockNet rock 'n' roll forum.

And whatever lineup it offers on launch day, the Microsoft Network will change and grow quickly, analysts agree.

"The Microsoft Network we'll see in six months or a year will be a lot different than the Microsoft Network we see on day one," Weiner said.

For example, the so-called "Blackbird" tools Microsoft is developing will let content providers build audio into their packages. Microsoft's Internet Explorer already includes an audio player, so when a user finds a Web site that offers audio, he or she just clicks on it and listens.

In the long term, the online services are competing not just with each other but with the increasingly vast and sophisticated offerings on the Internet, the global public computer network, and its commercial segment, the World Wide Web.

Forrester Research estimated late last year that online membership in the United States totaled 7.2 million, and figures it will peak in 1997 at about 10 million.

Meanwhile, it predicts, the number of Web users will continue to soar as high-speed connections become widely available and Web software becomes more reliable and secure.

In response, the major services "have either delivered or are about to deliver Web access," Bernoff said, while at the same time "spending large amounts of money to attract and retain" users of their proprietary services.

Marketers splash 'Windows '95' far and wide

Windows 95.
Windows 95.
Windows 95.

There. That makes it about 47,000 times this month you've probably seen or heard about the long-awaited operating system from Microsoft.

Get ready for more.

Expect to see it on television and hear it on radio. And don't plan on picking up a computer magazine this month without seeing something about Windows 95, its pluses and minuses and why you should or shouldn't buy it.

The hard-core PC magazines, such as Windows, PC Computing and PC World, have covered the Windows 95 saga for a year or so. Now, the general interest computer magazines are jumping on the bandwagon.

Computer Life, August, $3.95, is a prime example. Almost the entire "special issue" this month focuses on Windows 95, and includes everything from a demo CD-ROM to a close-up look at how the system works.

As for the demo disk: The CD-ROM from Microsoft is pretty slick. It's capable of running demos of not only Windows 95, but between 40 and 50 other Microsoft products, ranging from Bob to Excel.

At one point during the demo, however, my machine crashed amid one of those dreaded "memory parity errors." I'm not sure whether to blame the demo. But I think the risk is worth it to preview all that software.

The close-up look takes the reader step-by-step through Windows 95's bells and whistles. There's a section on what "real people" think about the system. Other sections cover system requirements and tips for getting the most out of Windows 95.

If you're tired of reading about Windows 95, don't fret. There are some computer magazines on the shelf this month that managed to fill their pages without mentioning the latest from Bill Gates.

One is the August issue of NetGuide. If you've ever thought of starting your own computer bulletin board, this is the issue for you.

Authors Daniel Akst and James Weissman take readers on a journey through BBS land, detailing what happened when the dynamic duo decided to put up a board dedicated to dentists (they also explain the dentist part).

It might not be everything you need to know. But the five-page feature makes for interesting reading.

Nation in Brief

■ NASA aims for Aug. 31 launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle officials scheduled Endeavour to lift off Thursday after deciding that repairs conducted on the launch pad fixed potential O-ring problems.

Over the past week, technicians were raised into the bell-shaped nozzles of Endeavour's two solid rocket boosters, wearing special suits to prevent static electricity that could ignite the rockets.

The workers replaced putty that insulates nozzle joints, using a small pump as a vacuum to prevent air pockets.

During the past two shuttle launches, NASA has discovered, air pockets allowed hot rocket gas to penetrate the putty and singe the O-rings in a particular nozzle joint.

The problem caused almost a month's delay in Endeavour's science mission originally scheduled for early August.

Shuttle manager Tommy Holloway said he's satisfied with the repairs though there are no tests to verify the launch-pad work. Identical repairs were performed successfully on spare nozzles by booster manufacturer Thiokol Corp. in Utah, using the same workers, the same kind of putty and the same procedures.

■ ACLU tries to block prison program

MONTPELIER, Vt. — The ACLU asked a federal judge Friday to stop a prison sex-offender program in which inmates are forced to undergo a simulated anal rape while a therapist screams obscenities.

The "drama therapy" conducted at the Northwest State Correctional Facility in St. Albans is part of a "victim empathy class" to help rapists understand what their victims go through.

The American Civil Liberties Union said the treatment could actually undermine the effort to get sex offenders to change their ways, and amounts to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

"By the accounts of many inmates, they have been deeply and lastingly traumatized, sickened, terrified, and humiliated by these experiences," the ACLU said.

The request was filed on behalf of five inmates who have taken part in the program, which is required of prisoners who want to get out early.

The therapy was halted a few weeks ago for an internal investigation, after which the prison system will consult outside experts to see whether the treatment is appropriate, said Richard Turner, corrections services director.

■ Judge sets aside ABC fine payment

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court set aside an order Friday that required ABC Inc. to pay more than $300,000 to a current and a former employee in a lawsuit charging race and sex discrimination.

A federal judge used the wrong legal standard in entering a default judgment against ABC on grounds of misconduct, said the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

In June 1994, U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth awarded $125,000 plus attorneys' fees to Michele Shepherd, a black woman who is a staff artist at ABC News in Washington. She said she was given an oppressive work schedule as the result of race and sex discrimination.

LaRue Graves, a black man who was fired in 1985 from his job as an artist in the Washington bureau, was awarded $184,293 plus attorneys' fees. Graves said he was fired after participating in a 1985 meeting of minority ABC employees.

Lamberth did not decide the merits of those complaints. Instead, he ruled ABC in default, finding that it altered a document, harassed a witness and deceived the court about a man who was asked to report to ABC management on the minority employees' meeting.

FAA orders grounding for certain commuter planes

■ Aircraft similar to the one that crashed on Monday in Georgia, which also are equipped with repaired Hamilton Standard propellers, must be reinspected within their next 10 flights.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration on Friday ordered the grounding of any planes similar to the Atlantic Southeast Airlines turboprop that crashed Monday in Georgia if they are equipped with Hamilton Standard propeller blades that were repaired after ultrasonic inspections.

The agency also said other models of commuter planes equipped with repaired Hamilton Standard 14RF and 14SF blades must be reinspected ultrasonically within their next 10 flights. If any anomalies are found in the new inspections, those planes must be taken out of service until the blades are replaced, the FAA said.

The actions followed a call earlier Friday by the National Transportation Safety Board for urgent inspections of all Hamilton Standard model 14RF and 14SF propeller blades if they have accumulated more than 1,250 flights since their last ultrasonic inspections.

That could involve grounding as many as 400 planes, and the FAA's staff is consulting with the safety board to determine if that was the intent of the recommendation, FAA deputy administrator Linda Hall Daschle said Friday night. She said the agency would respond to that recommendation by no later than Monday.

Both the safety board and the FAA have focused on a broken propeller blade in searching for the cause of the Atlantic Southeast Airlines Embraer Model 120 crash on Monday, killing five people.

"Several of the actions respond to the NTSB's recommendations issued today," said Daschle. "Others go beyond the board's recommendations."

Daschle said immediately replacing repaired Hamilton Standard propellers on Embraer 120 aircraft would ground no more than 19 planes. "This should not have a significant impact on operations; there are readily available spare blades they can put into service immediately," she said of the commuter airlines.

In addition, both the safety board and the FAA are requiring Embraer and Hamilton Standard, which is based in East Hartford, Conn., to conduct new vibration and load tests on the propellers to better understand the stress on the blades.

About 15,000 propeller blades of this type are in use worldwide, including 4,900 in the United States, according to the NTSB. That would indicate about 1,875 airplanes use these propellers worldwide, including more than 600 in the United States.

They are used on a wide variety of commuter planes. In addition to the Embraer 120, these include the DeHavilland DASH-8, ATR 42, ATR 72, ATP, Saab 340B, CASA CN235 and Canadair CL-215T.

The NTSB has been involved in the investigation of three other in-flight failures of Hamilton Standard Model 14SF and 14F propeller blades in the last two years. Two of those involved Embraer aircraft and one was on an ATR 42 plane.

These incidents occurred in Canada, Brazil and Belgium, but all three planes were able to land safely.

Hamilton Standard issued a service bulletin and the FAA called for propeller inspections in 1994.

The NTSB reported that the propeller blade that snapped off the Atlantic Southeast plane a few minutes before it crashed had flunked an inspection a year earlier. An "anomaly" was found in the propeller blade during an ultrasonic exam, but maintenance records showed it was fixed before the crash.

The plane should have been able to fly with one engine. Investigators were unsure why the plane crashed after the propeller blade on the left engine snapped soon after takeoff.

Investigators found nothing mechanically wrong with the left engine.

According to the safety board, the Embraer puts a light load on the propeller compared with other planes. But because three of the four incidents have involved these planes, the agency said it is concerned that the vibration and loading on this specific plane may not be fully understood.

The earlier incidents listed by the NTSB were:

■ March 13, 1994: Inter-Canadien ATR 42 had an in-flight propeller failure over Val d'Or, Quebec, but landed safely.

■ March 30, 1994: Nordeste Airlines Embraer 120 lost a major portion of one blade, but made a safe landing at Salvador, Brazil.

■ Aug. 3, 1995: Luxair Embraer 120 had a propeller and gearbox failure, but landed in Luxembourg with no other major damage.

Dole campaign returns $1,000 contribution to gay GOP group

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign said Friday it is giving back a $1,000 contribution from an organization of gay Republicans because Dole disagrees with the group's views.

The Log Cabin Republicans immediately criticized the Kansas Republican.

"We are extremely disappointed over this incident," said Rich Tafel, executive director of the group, which is meeting this weekend in Cincinnati.

"We were encouraged by the Dole campaign for months to support them financially, and any indication that they were unaware of our involvement is dishonest."

Dole campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield said the $1,000 was mailed Thursday back to the Washington-based group, which claims 10,000 members among 43 chapters in 35 states.

"It's our policy to decline contributions from political groups that have an agenda that is not in line with Senator Dole's position on the issues," Warfield said. "We've gotten over 200,000 checks, and this one clearly slipped through the cracks."

Warfield said Dole, an Army veteran who served in World War II, opposes lifting the ban on allowing gays to serve in the military. That runs counter to the Log Cabin Republicans' position, and is one example of why Dole is returning their money, Warfield said.

Tafel, whose organization refused to endorse President Bush for re-election in 1992, said the group had not endorsed any GOP candidate this year and encouraged its members to support any candidate they choose.

Officials expect more than 30,000 convicted illegal aliens in 1995

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deportations of illegal aliens convicted of serious crimes are expected to reach 30,000 this fiscal year, 5 percent more than projected, immigration officials said Friday.

More-aggressive enforcement enabled the Immigration and Naturalization Service to send 8,134 convicted aliens home in April, May and June, an increase of more than 10 percent over the previous quarter.

New rules mandated by the 1994 crime bill could push those numbers up even higher, said T. Alexander Aleinikoff, the INS executive associate commissioner of programs.

"We believe this is the beginning of a trend which will result in the doubling of the number of criminal aliens removed next year," he said. "A criminal conviction means jail time and a one-way ticket home."

INS had expected to deport 28,579 convicted aliens in fiscal 1995, which ends Sept. 30.

Rules that went into effect Thursday created "administrative deportation," a new and faster way to deport aliens convicted of aggravated felonies such as murder, armed robbery, firearms trafficking and narcotics violations, the INS said.

The aliens now can be deported without a hearing before an immigration judge if they are not permanent U.S. residents and don't qualify for any program that would allow them to stay in the United States.

The INS didn't release figures on how many illegal aliens are incarcerated, but said federal prisons house about 29,000 foreign-born inmates, and about 72,000 are being held in state prisons. Not all are illegal aliens, INS spokesman Greg Gagne said.

In 1993, 644 of the 36,686 aliens deported for criminal acts or other reasons were European, 510 were from Asia, 405 from Africa, 40 from Oceania, 1,589 from South America and 33,459 from North America — including 25,501 Mexican citizens, the INS said. The remaining 38 were stateless or came from unreported countries.

Aleinikoff also said the INS plans to begin releasing criminal deportation statistics on a regular basis to show how much progress it is making.

Firefighters continue battle with blazes on Long Island

■ Anonymous sources said investigators noticed a pattern indicating the fire may have been set.

EASTPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A brush fire raged out of control for a second day Friday near the Hamptons, turning the resort playground for the rich into a disaster area choked by 40-foot flames and billowing white smoke.

More than 1,500 volunteer firefighters waged a ground war against the fire with hoses, shovels and picks. Seven National Guard helicopters dumped 200-gallon loads of water pumped from a nearby lake onto the 5-mile-long, 1 1/2-mile-wide fire zone.

The fast-moving fire burned across 6,000 acres of land and destroyed a lumber yard and one home. The Westhampton commuter railroad station and at least seven nearby homes, mostly small, wood-frame structures, were damaged.

"It's like being in hell," said volunteer firefighter L.J. Heming, 33, of Middle Island. "We were right there in the woods and a wall of fire went right over us. We pumped every ounce of water that we had. ... Everyone was screaming on the radio for water, water!"

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press that investigators noticed a certain pattern in the way the fire burned, indicating it may have been set.

Threatened homes included slope-roofed, post-modern country houses typically sold for hundreds of thousands of dollars. But the fire posed little threat to the more posh homes of well-known Hamptons residents such as Steven Spielberg, Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger.

An exception was composer Marvin Hamlisch, who hosed down the roof of his Westhampton Beach summer house and fled back to Manhattan on Thursday, bringing along a favorite picture of his wife in case the fire got to their home.

"I just want it to be over," he said. "You pray that your house, your neighbors, be spared."

Hamlisch left voluntarily. About 250 residents were ordered to evacuate from more dangerous areas; one told of a rain of ashes.

The area was eerily quiet on Friday, when traffic jams of luxury cars normally would be headed to the island's east end for the last weekend before the traditional Labor Day end to the summer resort season.

The smoke grounded the helicopters and private planes that ordinarily ferry in the wealthy. The Westhampton airport was shut down, the Long Island Rail Road curtailed and many local roads — including part of the Sunrise Highway, the main link to the Hamptons — also were closed.

On Thursday night, streets in the wealthy resort communities were jammed with cars loaded with people fleeing with clothes, pets and furniture. More than 100 people spent the night at Center Moriches High School, which was converted into an emergency shelter.

Terry Van Essche, a summer renter from Monte Carlo, said he abandoned his Remsenburg home at 2 a.m. when the flames became visible from the house. The retiree packed up his wife, pregnant daughter and three grandchildren and headed to the shelter.

"I figured it was time to go," he said.

The fire began Thursday in woods near the Eastport campus of Suffolk County College. Whipped by winds up to 20 mph, it roared through rain-starved woodlands, leaped a highway and crept southeast on Friday.

Some firefighters said their efforts were becoming an exercise in frustration.

"It's like fighting a losing battle," said 22-year-old Eddie Wheeler of the North Bellmore Fire Department. "(You) knock it down for a few minutes and then it comes back up."

President Clinton dispatched Federal Emergency Management Agency Director James Lee Witt and other officials, experts and equipment.

"We are looking to get this fire contained, attack it and get ground crews to dig fire lines so the fire can't proceed any further," Witt said.

Gov. George Pataki and U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato toured the area. "It's real scary stuff," said Pataki, who had already declared a state of emergency.

Gaping stretches of burned-out forest were obvious, with blackened trees stripped of their foliage by the flames. Wisps of smoke drifted up from the ground in areas where the fire had already passed. An occasional burst of greenery was seen in areas miraculously spared.

In one bizarre tableau, a development of 20 Westhampton houses stood intact amid a totally burned out area. Firefighters were able to split the fire, which raged on either side of the homes.

All along the edges of the blaze, yards and yards of fire hoses were intertwined as sweating firemen mopped their brows with bandanas.

Study: Transmission of virus from HIV-positive men is high

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than one in every five semen samples from HIV-infected men contain live specimens of the virus that causes AIDS, demonstrating the high risk of unprotected sex, even with men showing no symptoms, researchers say.

Dr. Ann C. Collier of the University of Washington, Seattle, said a study of more than 100 semen samples taken from 16 HIV-positive men over a two-year period found live and infectious virus 22 percent of the time.

Collier said Friday that the appearance of the virus was intermittent, appearing in the semen from some men during one test, but absent when the same men were tested later.

"In one way, this is good news," said Collier. "If the virus was found more frequently, then the transmission rate of the disease would be much higher."

The bad news, she said, is that nobody can tell when the virus will be present in the semen of HIV-positive men.

"We could find no predictors of who would and who would not be shedding the virus (through their semen)," said Collier, a physician who specializes in infectious diseases.

A report on the study is to be published in the September issue of the Journal of Urology, a peer-reviewed medical journal of the American Urological Association. Researchers from New York University School of Medicine also participated in the study.

HIV virus was found less frequently than 22 percent in earlier semen studies. Collier said her group found more of the virus because great care was taken to start the laboratory work rapidly. Each specimen was placed into a cycle of tests immediately after it was collected. The tests included culturing and also an amplification capable of detecting even a very small population of virus.

In blood tests, all of the patients tested positive for the AIDS virus every time they were examined, the study said.

Dr. Robert Gallo, the National Institutes of Health researcher who co-discovered the AIDS virus, said the findings are new, but "not surprising."

"With better and better laboratory technology, the discovered frequency of HIV in semen will go higher and higher," he said. "If you get good enough technology, it may well be that you will find the virus in all semen from seropositive men."

Gallo was co-author of a 1984 study in which the virus was isolated in semen. He said the detection techniques have been substantially improved since.

The researcher also said the new findings, once again, emphasize the wisdom of practicing safe sex.

Collier said even the taking of anti-viral drugs did not assure virus-free semen. The rate of virus detection was the same in patients on AIDS drugs as in patients not taking medications.

"People who are sexually active should be aware that HIV could be in the semen at any time, and that means people should be cautious all of the time," said Collier. "There is no way to look at a person or do an examination or depend on a sexual history that can assure the semen is virus-free. One needs to assume that everybody has it all the time."

Public health authorities recommend that all sexually active people practice safe sex by wearing condoms during each exposure, but even this carries some risk. Only monogamy with a uninfected partner or abstinence assures no sexual transmission of HIV.

'Something wrong' with handling of blood samples, witness says at Simpson trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A forensic scientist testified Friday that there was "something wrong" in the handling of a blood sample collected near the bodies of O.J. Simpson's ex-wife and her friend.

Henry Lee, testifying for the defense, said inexplicable blood smudges were found on the inside of paper packaging that held what were supposed to be dry blood samples.

"There may be reason to explain it," Lee told jurors. "I don't know."

The testimony bolstered the defense's theory of evidence tampering in the police crime lab. The blood sample found on Nicole Brown Simpson's walkway at her condo contains Simpson's genetic markers, tests have shown.

The blood, collected the day the bodies were found on June 13, 1994, was sopped up onto tiny cotton swatches, which were left in a lab cabinet to dry overnight before they were put in a paper packet, called a bindle. Lee said such swatches should be dry after that much time, raising the question of how a damp swatch ended up in the packaging.

"The only opinion I can give under these circumstances: something wrong," said Lee, who returns to court Monday for cross-examination.

Defense lawyer Barry Scheck cited previous testimony from police criminalists, who said the swatches had dried and would not have been placed in the bindle if they were still wet.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito barred Lee from describing a blood-drying experiment designed to reinforce his testimony, saying it didn't duplicate the conditions under which the evidence was stored.

Lee, considered the nation's top forensic scientist, didn't need the experiment to make his point. With a giant picture of the blood-stained bindle, he conducted a show-and-tell demonstration with monster swatches and a picture on a magnetic board.

Asked what was wrong with the stain pattern on the bindle, Lee replied that there were seven swatches but only four stains.

"If seven swatches were wet, I should see seven transfers," he said. "I only see four. The numbers don't add up."

The testimony completed a week that was dominated by developments outside the jury's presence, most of them involving the Mark Fuhrman tapes.

On the tapes, recorded between 1985-94, the detective talks about police brutality and repeatedly uses the word "nigger."

Fuhrman, who said he found a bloody glove on Simpson's property, testified at the trial that he hadn't used the word in the last 10 years. The defense claims he is a racist capable of planting evidence.

The window was presented at the assembly to feast of Victory Lutheran Church, Acme, Mich., a young ELCA congregation established through churchwide support. It depicts the assembly theme, "Making Christ Known."

The window was constructed by the 1,000 voting members from all over the the United States and the caribbean under the supervision of artist Dennis Roberts and crew from IHS Studios, Inc., Fredericksburg.

Voting members helped to set the mission priorities of the 5.2 million-member church body for the next two years.

Ceremony planned

The Apostolic Church, 2309 S. Fort Worth, will hold a ribbon-cutting ceremony for its new fellowship hall at 10 a.m. Aug. 26.

Also, a service is scheduled for 5 p.m. that day to honor the Rev. Valentin B. Torres for 38 years of service. Torres moved to Midland in 1966 after pastoring in McCamey for nine years. He founded the local church in 1966 and the church has grown during his 29 yeaars of devoted leadership. The church currently has 265 members.

Adult course set

Beginning Wednesday evening, August 30th, from 6:30-8:00 p.m., Richard and Linda Goddard of CLER Ministries will be presenting their fifteen-session adult course as part of the "Wednesday Night Live" program at First United Methodist Church.

This course will be offered every Wednesday evening through November 15, 1995, and is open to any interested adult, 18 and above.

Cost of the course is $20 per person. To register or for more information on what the class is about call the church office at 682-3701. First United Methodist is located at Main and Illinois. This class will meet in Rooms 101-102. Anyone is invited.

Chairman named

A Midland woman has been named chairman of the Standing Commission on the Structure of the (National Episcopal) Church. Betty Gilmore, a member of St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church, will serve as chairman through the General Convention in 1997.

The 12-member Structure Commission consists of bishops from California, New York and North Carolina, priests from Maryland, Florida and Texas; and lay persons from Delaware, New York, Hawaii and Washington, in addition to Mrs. Gilmore.

The group will study the current established bodies and make recommendations as to their number and/or membership. It also is charged with studying how the church could be re-structured if a new institution were being started.

Mrs. Gilmore will be chairing the Structure Commission meeting in Minneapolis in October when its members will consult with about 300 people from the interim bodies. These representatives have been asked "to take a good, hard look at their past performance and current activities," according to Mrs. Gilmore.

Breakfast planned

A Men's Fellowship Breakfast at Green's Restaurants in Village Shopping Center will be held Sunday, August 27th by Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church.

To arrange for transportation to the Breakfast, Sunday School and Church call 694-1645 on Saturday afternoon.

Course scheduled

Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway, will begin a four week course for adults on Sunday evenings on the topic of "Forgive and Forget." It will be based on the book by that title by Lewis B. Smedes and will be taught by Bill Bucy, a Sunday School teacher and Elder at the Church.

The first session is this Sunday, August 27, at 6:00 p.m. The class will skip the Labor Day weekend, and will conclude with three sessions on the Sundays of September 10, 17, and 24. Guest are invited to share in this course.

Speaker planned

Bill Wilson will be speaking at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 Baldwin, on Sunday at 10:30 a.m. and 6:00 p.m.; and Monday through Wednesday at 7:00 p.m.

At age five, Bill Wilson's parents separated and he was passed around from relative to relative, attending a different school in a different city for seven years. He became a connoisseur of wine although he rarely paid over 98 cents for a bottle, and established himself a "wine-o." The gang he belonged to became so deadly he decided it would be better to die for his country than for the gang. So, November of 1966, Wilson entered the U.S. Marine Corps, and within six months after boot camp was sent to Vietnam. Here, he turned to drugs to make the horrors of war, and the ever present fear of death bearable. After Vietnam he went to Washington and became a Presidential Guard for President Johnson and President Nixon.

Wilson's drug habit continued right into the White House, though he was assigned to the Marine Corps Silent Drill Team, the most precisioned military rifle team in America. After thirteen months he was demoted and transferred to Camp Lejeune for a drug related incident. At Lejeune, he went on a Caribbean Cruise which enhanced his drug usage by allowing him to get the best drugs in the world. He left the Marine Corps in 1970, a well matured junkie and alcoholic becoming involved in violence and crime to support his habit. He lived in abandoned houses, cars and slept in parks. After nearly eight years of this, a friend told him of Teen Challenge, where he went and was "Biblically Born Again." This began a new and exciting life with Christ, who called him to preach and teach His word.

For more information, call 685-1981.

Topic planned

"Remembering Where We Stand," an unshakeable community of faith within a "shaken-up world" - will be the topic of Rev. Dr. Jerry Kelly's sermon August 27 at Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The worship service will begin at 10:55 a.m. Sunday School starts at 9:30 a.m. In addition to classes for children ages 18 months through Senior High, adults will have a choice of two Bible study courses and the CLER Ministries adult study of human sexuality from a Christian perspective.

Trinity Presbyterian Church's Junior and Senior High Youth Fellowship will kickoff its fall program on August 27 with the "1st Annual Rough Ridin' Road Rally." Current and prospective members and their guests should meet in the church parking lot by the playground at 5:00 p.m.

Wednesday night activities have resumed. Dinner will be served beginning 5:15 p.m.; reservations are required and may be made by calling 682-2514 weekdays; cost is $4 for adults and $2 for children, with a maximum of $12 for a family. Reservations are not required for Wednesday night classes 6:15-7:15 p.m. Children from kindergarten through 6th grade will learn about Christians in Pakistan in "The Secret Search." Adults have a choice of two courses: "Speaking the Truth in Love - Being an Assertive Christian" and "In the Name of Jesus."

Review underway

The Grace Lutheran Early Childhood Program is currently undergoing evaluation for accreditation by the Texas District of National Lutheran Schools Association. Accreditation of an early childhood program is a twelve step process and normally takes 9-12 months to complete. Areas that are under review include the school's relationship to its operating congregation, to the families with children enrolled in the school, and to the community. Also being evaluated are the appropriateness of the school's curriculum, its teaching methods, and the child-teacher interactions. The health and safety of the facility plus the administrative policies must meet the standards set up by the NLSA, too.

The school at Grace Lutheran Church employs 11 staff members and services 75 families with nearly 100 children enrolled. One of Grace's teachers was recently honored as teacher of the year by the West Texas Association for the Education of Young Children. Classes held at the school include Children's Day Out for 1 and 2 year old children and preschool for 3 and 4 year olds. The church and school are located at 3000 W. Clubs drop ads

ARLINGTON — Three companies have agreed to stop flying airplanes towing banners advertising nude and topless clubs over The Ballpark in Arlington.

U.S. Rep Joe Barton, R-Ennis, made the announcement Friday. The agreement came after meetings between Barton, Arlington Mayor Richard Greene, the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association and several regional banner towing companies.

The companies, Peregrine Aviation, Skyways and Redbird Sky Ads, voluntarily agreed to stop towing the banners after complaints that children attending Texas Rangers games could see them.

No other towing companies have permits to fly banners over the stadium, Barton said.

Last year, Barton was unsuccessful in passing a bill that would have expanded the areas in which planes are banned from flying over and around the baseball stadium during any public event identified by the city.

Riley accusations

NEW YORK — The Miami Heat has been accused of improperly approaching former Knicks coach Pat Riley about its head coaching job, but it was Riley himself who reportedly made salary demands before he had even quit the Knicks.

Ten days before he faxed in his resignation to New York, Riley sent a memo to Heat owner Micky Arison asking for a 20-percent ownership stake in the franchise and a $15 million salary, The New York Times reported in Friday's editions.

Citing three unidentified sources, the newspaper said Arison acknowledged the memo in a hearing Aug. 4.

Cowboys give Bucky, others look

■ Dallas' final preseason game will pit special teams player against his former mates.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — A month ago, quarterback Bucky Richardson was in San Antonio going through the grind of training camp with the Houston Oilers.

On Saturday, he'll be back in town with a new team and a new position as the Dallas Cowboys face the Oilers at the Alamodome in the final preseason game for both teams.

Dallas acquired Richardson, a former Texas A&M standout, earlier this week for the minimum $178,000. Cowboys officials said they plan to use Richardson on special teams or at fullback.

Richardson had played for the Oilers for three years, but was cut during training camp. He reportedly was making about $400,000 at Houston. Richardson then was signed and cut by New England, who tried him at fullback before cutting him.

Besides looking at Richardson, the Cowboys say they will spend the exhibition game making final evaluations of young players.

The Oilers, however, are having to make up for lost time.

Cowboys-Oilers

FOX 24 (cable 5)

Houston's exhibition game last weekend against San Diego was canceled because of a problem with the Astrodome field. That forced the Oilers this week to start preparing for their Sept. 3 regular-season opener against Jacksonville and reduced the time they had to get ready for the Cowboys.

"We missed an opportunity to look at a lot of players, and now we don't have a lot of practice time and we have to look ahead," said Oilers coach Jeff Fisher.

Last week's cancellation meant rookie quarterback Steve McNair lost a chance to play before the home crowd in Houston. McNair may not see much time against the Cowboys since starter Chris Chandler and backup Will Furrer will play most of the game.

"It's going to be tough to get Steve in because we have to give Chris and Will enough time," Fisher said.

Houston is 0-2 in the preseason; Dallas is 1-3.

The Cowboys, who open the regular season Sept. 4 against the New York Giants, insist they aren't worried about their preseason record.

"Our team philosophy is to go out and win every game

Cowboy-Oiler TV delayed

Staff Report

If you had plans to watch the Dallas Cowboys-Houston Oilers preseason game tonight, better make it a late night.

The game will be televised on a tape-delay basis starting at about 10 p.m. on the Fox Network local affiliate KPEJ-TV (channel 24, cable channel 5) at the conclusion of the San Francisco 49er-Seattle Seahawk game.

KPEJ general manager Jamie Beeghley said FOX gave his station the go-ahead to show the Cowboy-Oiler game live but the NFL said KPEJ must televise FOX's 49ers-Seahawks broadcast instead. The Cowboys-Oilers game is being produced by the syndication-outlet Silver Star Network.

"(The NFL) felt it was inappropriate for a network to be pre-empted by a syndicator," Beeghley said.

The 49er-Seahawk game begins at 7 p.m., the same time as the Cowboys and Oilers kick off at the Alamodome in San Antonio. Radio station KODM will braodcast the Cowboy-Oiler game live on 97.9 FM.

KPEJ will run the Cowboys' pre-game show from 6 to 7 p.m. today.

The game will also be rebroadcast on Sunday at noon on KWES-TV, channel 9.

Fans don't take to Taiwanese

By Michael A. Giarrusso

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Few American 12-year-olds are as respectful as the youngsters from Taiwan playing in the Little League World Series.

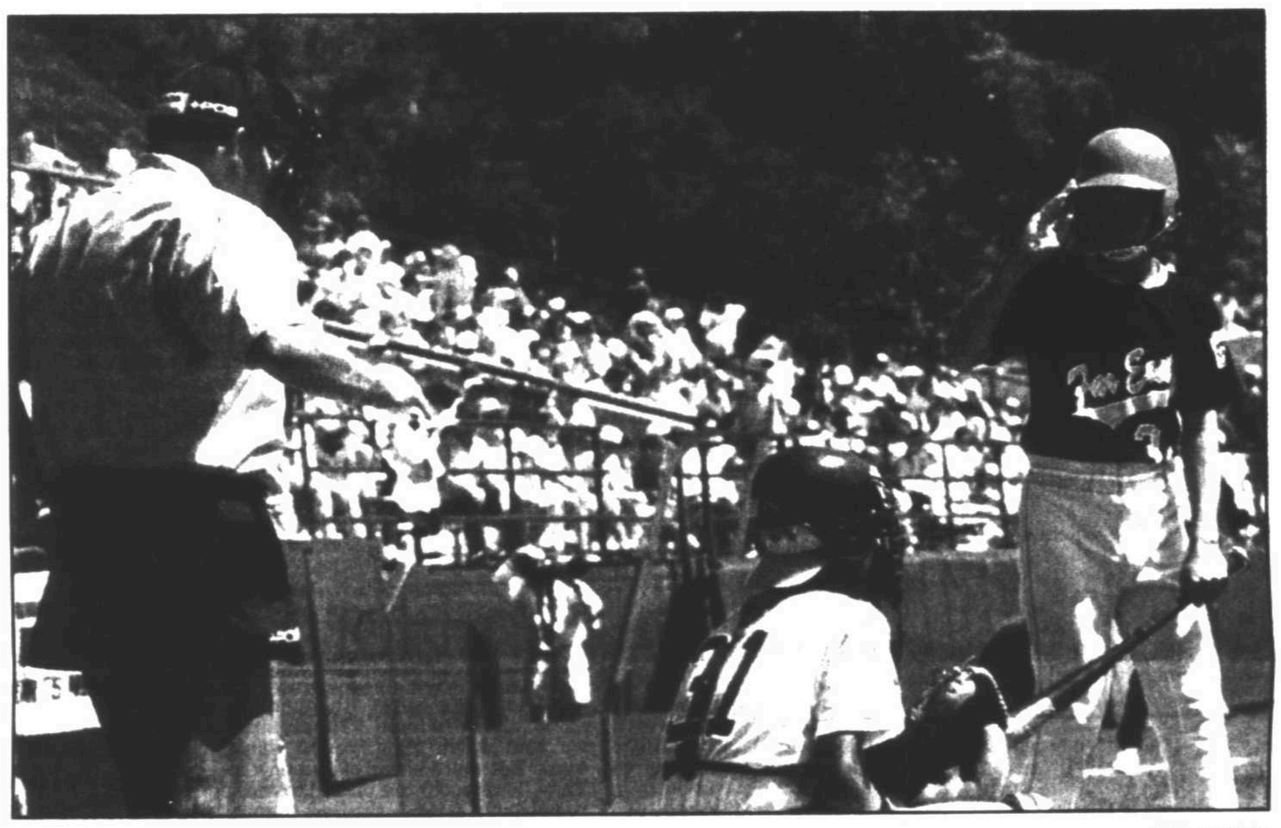

They salute the umpires, take off their hats when their coach is speaking and bow to the crowd after victories. Despite all the politeness, fans love to hate the Taiwanese at Williamsport, where they'll play Spring, Texas, Saturday for the championship.

"It's a natural emotion and we expect it," said manager Tzyy-Tsan Wang, who coached the team from Tainan, Taiwan to the 1990 Little League title. "I

Defense key for Steers

BIG SPRING — Dwight Butler takes his place as the dean of District 4-4A coaches this year. And if one trait has marked the four years that put Butler at the top of league coaching tenures, it's tough defense.

That's a good thing for this year's Steers, because only two starters make their way back to the Big Spring defense. Which means this is a team definitely in need of a defensive expert.

"He used to be a middle linebacker," said Steer senior defensive tackle Kinney Dupree of Butler. "He always comes up and surprises people with what he's got."

This year Butler is not sure what he's got on defense. But he does have seven key returners on offense, which means if the 4-4A veteran works his 'D' sorcery again the Steers should return to the playoffs, probably as the district runner-up.

"Not a clue," is the way Butler answers questions about who will start on his defense. "It's as wide open as it's ever been since I've been here. But on offense you can tell right now we're a lot further along than we were a year ago. This is the first time we've had a quarterback, split end, tight end, two lineman and a fullback back."

The Steers led the league in team defense the last two seasons. And this year is, on paper, not much differ-

Lee looks to rev motor in Eastwood scrimmage

■ The Rebels take on one of El Paso's best teams in Van Horn today.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

A new era begins for the Midland Lee football team as the Rebels take on El Paso Eastwood today at 1:30 p.m. in Van Horn. And for Lee's tenth head coach, John Parchman, winning would be great but getting his team going at full throttle would be even better.

"We're not where we need to be," said Parchman, who comes back to Lee after two seasons at Class 3A Llano where he had a record of 14-7. "The offensive line is not where it needs to be. We're making the transition to throwing the ball, and don't understand what we need to do. It takes time for the offensive line to gel."

Lee, who has qualified for the playoffs 11 of the past 12 seasons, returns 12 starters from the 1994 team, which reached the state quarterfinals and finished 7-4-2. The Rebels also finished third in District 4-5A in the last of nine seasons under Earl Miller. Miller left his post to join his wife in San Antonio. He is now the linebacker coach at San Antonio Marshall.

Lee will return seven players on what should be another strong defense, but it is the offense, which returns five starters, that raises some initial questions. Parchman expects Eastwood to play an eight-man front and that should

College football opens year with Cavs, Wolverines

By Harry Atkins
AP Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Virginia coach George Welsh has given up trying to get an early handle on his teams. Just when he thinks the Cavaliers are ready, they're not.

And he finds his teams especially unpredictable when opening on the road. Last year, for example, the Cavaliers opened the season at Florida State. Welsh felt his team was ready. But FSU routed the Cavaliers 41-17.

Today, the 17th-ranked Cavaliers open in Ann Arbor against No. 14 Michigan in the transplanted Pigskin Classic. This is the sixth annual edition of the game with the first five played in Anaheim, Calif., mostly before empty seats.

If they get off to a good start, the Cavaliers might go on to do big things. They finished 9-3 last season and have most of the regulars back from that team, including quarterback Mike Groh. He was the leading passer in the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1994.

Yet there was a hint of doubt in Welsh's voice this week.

"I've given up trying to rate my team," said Welsh, starting his 14th season in Charlottesville. "We have not had a good opener since 1990. We fumble, we drop passes. Like last year against Florida State, we dropped seven passes that were catchable."

STEERS: Offense returns 7 starters

ent from last season when Big Spring had only three starters back on defense. Three starters back was all Butler and his coaches needed to build a defense that allowed only 55 points in five 1994 league games.

"Defense has kind of been our trademark, no doubt," said Butler, who came to Big Spring as the defensive coordinator in '88 and has run the same scheme since then. "I think what's made it so good is these kids have run the same defense since they've been in school. Coach (Jay) Kennedy and the others have just given it a few new wrinkles and made it even better."

Returning starters Jon Green (5-7, 200) and Dupree (5-10, 270) give the Steers a good place to start on the defense at the tackle spots. Big Spring will look at as many as ten sophomores in the search for defensive replacements.

"We're going to have to lead and let the younger players know this is a different game than JV," Dupree said.

Offensively Big Spring ended last season on a roll. The Steers scored 34.5 points in the last five games to recover from a 2-4 start and make the playoffs as the league's runner-up to San Angelo Lake View. That offensive momentum has a good chance to continue this year.

Senior Bucky Crenshaw returns at quarterback where he beat out Dustin Waters for the position last year and threw for 805 yards and seven touchdowns. He epitomizes what Butlers says makes up Steer football — athletes less than spectacular pysically, but effective.

"He showed last year that he's a competitor and that you don't have to be the biggest guy out there," Butler said. "We don't have the 6-3, 6-4 All-American looking (players). We're the 5-8, 5-9 we may be small but we're slow too types."

Crenshaw, at 5-9, 160, may fit that description. But one player on the Big Spring offense that doesn't is tight end Daniel "Bubba" Franks. Franks used his 6-5, 218 frame to catch 25 balls last year and could help the Steers offense get over the loss of last year's leading rusher, Quentin Dickson.

"Bubba gives us a unique situation," Butler said. "He's probably one of the biggest tight ends in this part of the country. He's got great ability. His deal is going to be how he responds to people double covering him and holding him. They did that last year late, especially in the playoffs."

Fullback Donnie Hill rushed for 490 yards last year as the starter. He'll be back sharing the backfield with Toma McVea, set to take Dickson's position as running back. McVea (170 pounds) doesn't have the power of Dickson, which means the Steers will have to change their approach in short-yardage situations, Butler said.

Senior Marc Baker, who Butler said surprised Big Spring with a "great year" in '94, comes back at wide receiver. Five-ten, 280-pound senior Tim Rios leads the returners on the offensive line at right guard. Junior center Dan Brewster is back along with tackle James Escobar. John Jenkins (guard) and Rudy Hernandez (tackle) are newcomers on the line.

The Steers schedule could leave the team with at least three losses six games into the season. Three of Big Spring's first six opponents showed up in the Associated Press Class 4A state poll. Two others, Sweetwater and Snyder, are picked second and third in their district.

Butler's team opens the season at No. 10 Borger and plays Lubbock Estacado (22 top ten AP votes) the third week and San Angelo Lake View (18 votes) the fifth week.

Lake View comes in as the league favorite after winning the title last year. Andrews and Monahans could also contend for 4-4A's second playoff spot. But the Steers are by no means ready to end their playoff appearances with one year in the postseason.

"There isn't any better feeling than getting to the playoffs and playing more games under more people," Crenshaw said. "Everybody wants to fulfill that goal."

Especially Hill, who prefers not to think about missing the playoffs.

"It would be a very big disappointment," Hill said. "But we're going to make it there (or) we're going to die trying."

Chances are Big Spring will be very much alive when the regular season ends.

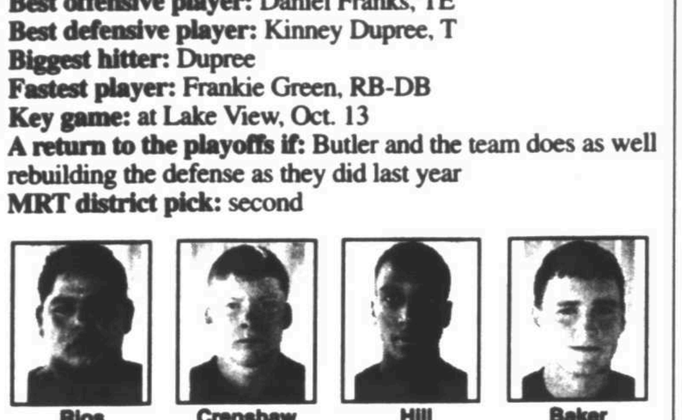

The Steers scrimmage Midland High Thursday at Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m.

Martin sets Bristol mark, wins Goody's pole

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Mark Martin slammed the door on the rest of the competition Friday night, setting a Bristol International Raceway qualifying record in winning the pole for Saturday night's Goody's 500.

Martin, who also was the fast qualifier for the race at Bristol in April, earned his fourth pole of the season and 28th of his NASCAR Winston Cup career with a lap of 125.093 mph.

That surpassed the mark of 124.946 set in April 1994 by Chuck Bown and relegated Terry Labonte to the outside pole for the 250-lap race on Bristol's fast .533-mile concrete oval.

Labonte was the first of 43 drivers to make a qualifying attempt and his 124.662 stood at the top of the list until Martin, 39th in line, went out and topped Labonte's Chevrolet Monte Carlo on the first of his two laps in a Ford Thunderbird.

"We've just got a great setup for here," Martin said. "We came here in April with a great setup and never turned a screw. We brought it back the same way and it was fast right off the truck. And, again, we never had to turn a screw. And the race setup is the same way."

Martin finished eighth here in the spring, but he has wound up in the top four in four of the last five August events at Bristol, including a win in 1993.

Michael Waltrip was third at 124.291 in a Pontiac Grand Prix, followed by series points leader Jeff Gordon's Chevy at 124.018, Rusty Wallace's Ford at 123.986 and the Chevys of top 1995 rookie Ricky Craven at 123.970 and defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt at 123.826.

Rounding out the top 10 were the Fords of Ricky Rudd at 123.690, Martin's Roush Racing teammate Ted Musgrave at 123.658 and Derrike Cope at 123.602.

Sterling Marlin, who trails Gordon by 167 points in the season standings, qualified 19th at 123.047.

TRACK LENGTH: .533 mile
RACE LENGTH: 500 laps, 266.5 miles

QUALIFYING RECORD: Chuck Bown, 124.946 mph, 1994

The top 20 qualifiers Friday night locked up starting spots in what is expected to be a 36-car field. Twelve more positions will be determined Saturday afternoon in the second round of time trials, with the final four positions going to provisional starters based on season points.

As usual, qualifying was close and tense, with the speeds of the top 20 separated by just 2.046 mph and 0.255 seconds.

"It's definitely indicative of a close race," Martin said. "This place is really tough. The outside groove is not easy to run on, and that's where you have to do your passing."

Steers happy to play Chiefs early in league schedule

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Big Spring won't have to wait long for its rematch with District 4-4A champion Lake View. The Steers play the Chiefs in the first game of their five-game league schedule this year. But for some Big Spring players, even that's not soon enough to get at chance to avenge last season's 21-17 loss.

"I love it," quarterback Bucky Crenshaw said about playing last year's 4-4A winners in the first league contest. "We should have won the game (last year). We had it right there in our hands."

The Steers went 4-1 in district in '94 to finish second to the Chiefs, who were undefeated. So the Lake View game, played at Big Spring to open loop play for both teams, ended up deciding the league championship. And it was a game the Steers could have easily won.

In the second half Big Spring had the ball inside the Chief 5-yard line twice and inside the 20 once without scoring.

"We think we should have beat them and I'm sure they think we shouldn't have," Steer coach Dwight Butler said.

This year the Chiefs are favored to repeat their district championship. Big Spring is taggged to finish right behind Lake View, which means the Friday the (Oct.) 13th game at Lake View between last season's two 4-4A playoff teams could again decide the league title. It will at least decide who'll be singing at game's end.

"I'm looking forward to walking off the field singing like they did last year," Steer fullback Donnie Hill said. "We've got a song to sing, too."

Big Spring lineman Kinney Dupree also remembers Lake View's post game tune.

"We would have beat them and they got their songs they're singing," Dupree said. "That game really hurt."

Big Spring led at the half 17-14 and outgained the Chiefs 318 yards to 189. But a third-quarter Lake View touchdown gave the Chiefs the win.

"That was my first start last year and I had a bunch of goofups," said Crenshaw, who threw a fourth-quarter interception. "That's one of the big games I'm looking forward to this year."

The contest marked the first time Lake View had beaten the Steers since 1985. The Chiefs, behind second-year coach Kyle Gandy, ended up making their first playoff appearance in nine years.

"They've always had the talent," Butler said. "They got a good bunch of coaches that got the kids back out of the halls (to play football)."

And do a little singing on the side.

LEE: Rebs back to Van Horn next week

give Rebel fans a chance to see the ball fly through the air. However, don't expect that to be the norm this season.

"If we can hold up their 8-man front, we'll throw a bunch to see if we can," said Parchman. "If you have a good team you don't want to run a high-risk offense. If you run a high-risk offense, you're not doing yourself any good. It will be a ball control offense.Nothing has changed, same defense, same coaches."

In 1993, Lee beat Eastwood 10-1 in a preseason scrimmage. In 1994, Midland Lee tied El Paso Eastwood 4-4, thanks in part to three touchdowns scored by then second-string quarterback John Thurmond. Thurmond will be the No. 1 signal caller this season for the Rebels.

The 4-4 tie was quite upsetting to Miller. This year, Parchman is expecting another tough match-up with an Eastwood team he expects to top the District 2-5A standings.

"We were embarrassed," said Parchman, who is also looking forward to Lee's Sept. 8th opener against El Paso Irvin. "That team we sent down (last year) was weak. But we're ahead of that now. They (Eastwood) are picked to win the district. Irvin is the best team out there. We'll get a taste of the better El Paso schools."

Parchman expects the first, second and third teams to get 30 snaps a piece (in 15-play increments) in today's scrimmage. Playing a large number of players will allow the coach to evaluate his talent and make the last decisions on who will play this season. Playing against another team instead of intrasquad scrimmages will also help the selection process.

"It will be a final opportunity to take a look at some of the players," said Parchman. "We have an idea of who will play except at one or two spots. The kids are looking forward to playing someone else. We've been hitting pretty hard."

Lee will return to Van Horn next Friday for its second scrimmage of the season. They will take on El Paso Socorro at 7:30 p.m.

PIG: Michigan to break in freshman QB

(From 1C)

Because the Wolverines will be breaking in a freshman quarterback, Scott Dreisbach, it is likely Michigan will try to stay on the ground. With most of the offensive line returning from 1994, and with Tim Biakabutuka finally out of the shadow of Tyrone Wheatley, running the ball should be Michigan's strength.

However, the Cavaliers led the nation last season in defense against the rush, allowing an average of 63.6 yards per game. And, just in case Driesbach is looking for a little beginner's luck, Virginia's secondary also led the nation in interceptions last year with 27.

"The mere fact that they're freshmen doesn't mean they can't be very good at it," Welsh cautioned. "We've had some here. Don Majkowski, who came in as a freshman, did very well.

"Plus, the fact that they have a young quarterback means they may do a better job of protecting him than we will of protecting ours."

This is only the 19th time Virginia has started its season with a road game. The Cavaliers are 4-12-2 in the others.

In addition to a new quarterback, Michigan also will be playing its first game under Lloyd Carr. He became coach last spring after the forced resignation of Gary Moeller. Carr had been the defensive coordinator.

The Wolverines are coming off successive 8-4 seasons. They yearn for another Big Ten championship and a return to the Rose Bowl.

"Training camp has been very upbeat," guard Joe Marinaro said. "The pace has been pretty swift. We seem to be a bit more focused on where we are. Everybody knows the situation we're in. We want to do well right off."

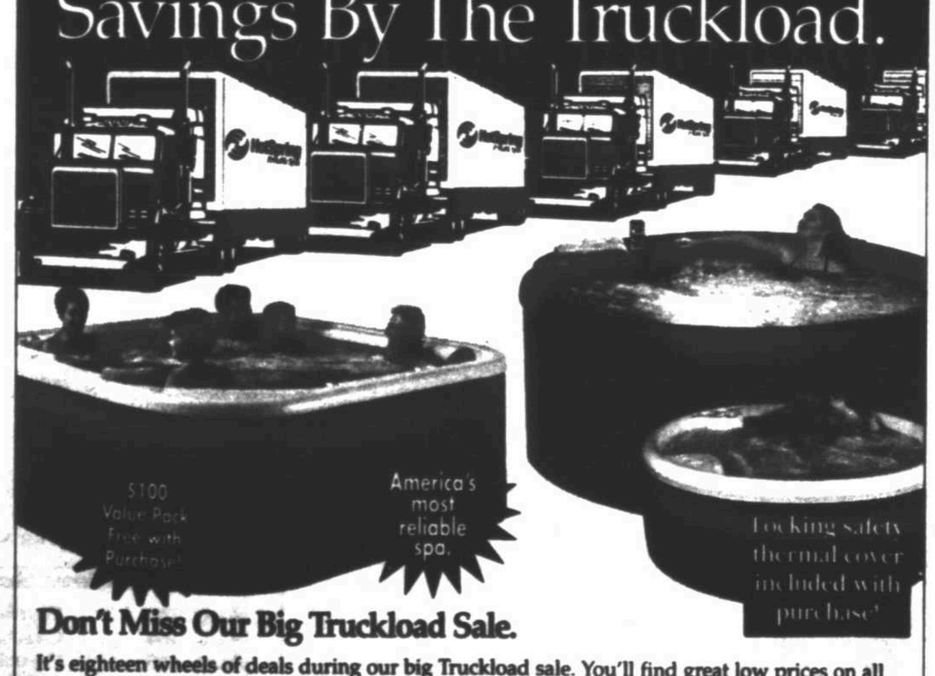

Both schools have a ton of tradition. It will be Michigan's 1,027th game. But it's the 1,021st for Virginia. This is one of 19 games during the 1995 season featuring two Division I-A teams that have played 1,000 games or more in their history.

"One of the great things about Michigan, and one of the things that distinguishes Michigan, is the great tradition," said Carr.

Sanders lessens burden of Gant loss with homers

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Reggie Sanders made sure Cincinnati didn't miss the injured Ron Gant by hitting a pair of two-run homers and driving in six runs as the Reds crushed Pittsburgh 19-3 Friday night.

Gant missed his ninth game of the season with strained rib cage muscles, but Sanders, who had only five homers in his last 30 games, homered in consecutive at-bats off Steve Parris (6-5) in the fifth and seventh innings.

Thomas Howard replaced Gant in left field and went 4-for-5 as the Reds worked over three Pirates pitchers for 19 hits, 12 in the final three innings.

Marlins 5, Astros 4

MIAMI — Andre Dawson hit a tiebreaking three-run homer and Florida beat Houston Astros, extending streaks for both teams.

■ NL Roundup

The Astros have lost eight in a row, their longest losing streak since 1983 when they began the season 0-9. The Marlins extended a club record with their 11th consecutive home victory. The win followed a 2-9 road trip.

John Burkett (11-11) allowed three earned runs and nine hits in seven innings. Alejandro Pena pitched a perfect eighth and Robb Nen followed with a perfect ninth for his 17th save.

Florida fell behind 2-0 before Kurt Abbott started a five-run fourth inning with his 16th homer, hitting the foul pole when he pulled an 0-2 pitch from Shane Reynolds (8-9).

Expos 12, Giants 1

MONTREAL — Sean Berry homered twice and matched his career high with six RBIs as Montreal routed San Francisco to snap its season-high six-game losing streak.

Cardinals 8, Rockies 3

DENVER — Bernard Gilkey homered on the game's first pitch and John Mabry had four hits and three RBIs to lead St. Louis to a win over Colorado.

David Bell also had two hits, including a game-breaking triple to help Mike Morgan (5-7) get his 100th career win and his second against Colorado this year.

Ray Lankford also homered for St. Louis, hitting a two-run shot in the ninth.

Braves 7, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — John Smoltz is a major reason the Atlanta Braves have the best record in the National League.

Smoltz, who hasn't lost since mid-July, allowed three runs in six-plus innings as the Braves beat Chicago for their fifth straight victory.

Mets 10, Padres 5

NEW YORK — Carl Everett hit the first grand slam of his career and Butch Huskey added a two-run homer, all in the fifth inning, as New York beat San Diego.

Rico Brogna had a solo homer and Jeff Kent, Jason Isringhausen, Huskey and Jose Vizcaino each had a pair of hits.

Phillies 17, Dodgers 4

PHILADELPHIA — Gregg Jefferies became the first member of the Phillies to hit for the cycle in 32 years as Philadelphia thrashed Hideo Nomo and Los Angeles.

The Phillies, winners of eight of their last nine, battered Nomo in the shortest shart of his major league career. The other Dodger pitchers didn't fare much better as the Phillies collected 17 hits, including a grand slam by winning pitcher Jeff Juden (2-1).

Gubicza ends Ranger jinx with 9-4 win at The Ballpark

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — While Mark Gubicza was able to overcome his past, Kenny Rogers wasn't able to live up to his.

Rogers, who hadn't allowed a run in his last 20 1-3 innings in Kauffman Stadium, gave up four in the first. And Gubicza, winless at home against Texas for nine years, picked up the victory Friday night in Kansas City's 9-4 victory over the Rangers.

■ AL Roundup

"I can't explain it," Gubicza said of his inability to beat the Rangers in his own park. "And just about every time I've faced Kenny Rogers, who's a great pitcher, it seems like he's beaten me 2-1."

Rookie Joe Vitiello's three-run homer helped stake Gubicza (9-11) to a 4-1 lead in the first inning as the 12-year veteran right-hander matched his highest victory total since 1991.

"Kenny Rogers has pitched so many great games against us, getting four runs in the first inning not only helped me, but I think it helped the team a lot," he said. "It was like everybody thought, 'Hey, we CAN score against this guy.'"

Gubicza, snapping a personal four-game losing streak against Texas, had lost five in a row at home to the Rangers and hadn't beaten them in Kansas City since May 31, 1986.

He went 7 2-3 innings, giving up 10 hits and three runs, and Greg Olson got his second save getting the last four outs for the Royals, who are 3 1/2 games behind Texas for the AL wild-card berth.

Brewers 6, Twins 3

MILWAUKEE — John Jaha hit a three-run homer and rookie Scott Karl won for the fourth time in his last five starts as Milwaukee defeated Minnesota.

Karl (5-2) settled down after the second and pitched effectively for four more innings. He allowed six hits and two earned runs while striking out five and walking two.

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 7

TORONTO — Rookie Ray Durham hit his first major league grand slam and Lance Johnson added a two-run homer in a seven-run sixth inning as Chicago beat Toronto.

Durham's sixth homer of the season landed just inside the right-field foul pole, making the score 6-0. One out later, Johnson hit his career-high eighth home run into Chicago's bullpen.

Indians 6, Tigers 5, 11 innings

CLEVELAND — Sandy Alomar homered with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning, giving Cleveland yet another dramatic win as the Indians beat the Detroit Tigers.

LITTLE: Taiwan has dominated since '69

don't mind, but it is not fair to the children."

Some fans don't like Taiwan because the team has dominated U.S. squads since 1969, winning 15 Little League titles. Many believe the team from Taiwan is made up of ineligible players, who are either too old or from different regions of the country.

"These players all come from one league," Wang said through an interpreter. "We have hundreds of leagues in Taiwan, and the players are all 11 and 12."

After the Philippines forfeited the 1992 title, Little League has more strictly enforced rules regarding ineligible players, but the belief that the teams from the Far East region cheat has lingered.

The team from Taiwan has five players who are 5-foot-5 or taller, while international runner-up, the Dominican Republic, had eight players that tall. But the fans at Williamsport warmed to the Dominicans, and treated the Taiwanese roughly.

Wang has been booed loudly every time he challenges a call and a smattering of jeers can be heard when the team is introduced. Even the umpire from Taiwan is booed.

Wang thinks fans root against Taiwan because the players are so emotionless on the field.

"The kids are very serious during the game, because I stress that," he said. "I tell them to be serious because the game is dangerous and you can get hurt.

"But off the field, they are kids who like to have fun," Wang said.

Evidence of that could be seen at the Little League complex all week. The players jumped in the pool and joked around with players from other teams despite the language barrier. They signed autographs for young fans and clowned around with teammates.

"After the tournament, the kids will have two days of fun in California with a trip to Disneyland," Wang said. "The baseball federation in Taiwan pays for that every year."

Baseball is the No. 1 sport in Taiwan, and Tainan is the hotbed.

"Baseball is very important to Tainan," Wang said. "We take pride in sending a team to the Little League World Series."

The series championship used to be the culmination of most baseball careers in Taiwan, with only the best players going to Japan to play professionally. But a 6-year-old baseball league in Taiwan has changed things.

"Because of the pro league, the kids have a dream for the future," Wang said. "Now our goal is not just to win the Little League World Series, but to produce good players for the professional league."

Wang's team hasn't lost since winning the national title, and Taiwan blew out every team in the Far East tournament. The Taiwanese beat Guam 19-0, Pakistan 16-0, Saipan 28-0 and Hong Kong 29-0.

The 1-0 extra-inning victory over the Dominican Republic was the closest game Taiwan has played. Wang said the Dominican Republic was better than any of the U.S. teams.

"No disrespect to the U.S. teams, but there's no doubt that the international champion will win the whole thing," Saudi Arabia coach Mark Tucker said.

Spring assistant coach Lynn Foster said the team from suburban Houston wouldn't be intimidated by the favored Taiwanese.

"We think we can win," Foster said. "We're from Texas, and we don't know any better."

DALLAS: Cowboys to evaluate players

(From 1C)

we play, preseason or not. But you have to understand the preseason is a time for personnel evaluation," said Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple.

"In the framework or trying to win a game, you're also trying to make decisions on which players can make your team better," he said.

Broncos take 2nd preseason loss to expansion club

By The Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

The Denver Broncos have made a habit of beating top teams during the NFL exhibition season. It's the others that have given them trouble.

Capping a weird preseason Friday night, the Broncos lost to an expansion team for the second time when they fell to the Jacksonville Jaguars 23-17. The Broncos, who had beaten defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco twice and Dallas once, also lost to Carolina.

"It shows you how mental this game is," Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said. "You play San Francisco twice and the Dallas Cowboys, you get ready. The other two games against Carolina and Jacksonville, obviously we were unprepared."

Mark Brunell, expected to start the season on the bench behind Steve Beuerlein, threw for 185 yards and directed two second-half touchdown drives as the Jaguars rallied to beat the Broncos.

Bills 20, Falcons 14

Jim Kelly, coming off knee surgery, completed 8 of 10 passes for 68 yards and led Buffalo (2-3) to a touchdown on the opening series.

Thurman Thomas played one series and had six carries for 21 yards, including a 7-yard touchdown run on Buffalo's first possession. Rookie running back Darick Holmes set up his own 6-yard TD run with a 47-yard dash in the third quarter. Steve Christie kicked field goals of 29 and 26 yards.

Eric Metcalf's 45-yard punt return late in the second quarter, and Browning Nagle's 6-yard TD pass to J.J. Birden accounted for Atlanta's scoring. The Falcons (2-2) had five turnovers.

Jets 30, Bengals 24

Boomer Esiason threw his only touchdown pass of the preseason and Nick Lowery kicked five field goals, leading New York (2-2) over Cincinnati (1-3).

Cincinnati, already devastated by the loss of three key players, lost two more starters to injury. Guard Rich Braham severely sprained his left ankle, and defensive lineman Dan Wilkinson — last year's top draft pick — broke the ring finger on his right hand. Wilkinson is expected to play the season opener next week at Indianapolis with the finger in a splint.

Saints 24, Lions 10

Vaughn Dunbar, New Orleans' No. 1 draft pick in 1992 who spent two years hampered by major knee surgery, rushed for 73 yards and two touchdowns and caught two passes for 26 yards in the Saints' victory over Detroit (3-1).

Dunbar, who led the Saints (1-3) in rushing as a rookie, tore a ligament in his right knee in the third preseason game of 1993 and spent the year on injured reserve. Last season, Dunbar played in eight games, primarily on the kickoff return team, and never regained confidence in the leg. In the first three preseason games this year, Dunbar carried 19 times for 39 yards.

Packers 35, Redskins 23

Dorsey Levens scored on a pair of 5-yard runs and caught a 1-yard touchdown pass for Green Bay.

The Packers (3-1) gained 233 yards on the ground, didn't fumble for the first time in the preseason and got three rushing touchdowns in the third period to take control.

Behind second-year quarterback Heath Shuler, the Redskins' first-string offense finally scored its first touchdown of the preseason. Reggie Brooks ran it in from the 4 with 26 seconds left in the first half, giving Washington (1-3) a 17-14 lead.

Bucs 24, Dolphins 17

Tampa Bay got another steady performance from Trent Dilfer and wrapped up its most successful preseason in four years.

Dilfer completed 7 of 10 passes for 109 yards and one touchdown, while Martin Mayhew returned an interception 41 yards for a TD. The 3-1 finish is Tampa Bay's best since 1991. Miami (1-3) hasn't lost three exhibition games in the same year since 1990.

Dan Marino played the first half for Miami, completing 11 of 21 passes for 174 yards and one touchdown.

Raiders 32, Patriots 24

STANFORD, Calif. — Quarterback Billy Joe Hobert, pressed into duty in place of injured kicker Jeff Jaeger, converted a 45-yard field goal with 3:45 remaining, and Oakland rallied to beat New England.

Trailing 24-7 heading into the final period, the Raiders closed in behind two fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Vince Evans. Derrick Hoskins then an interception of Scott Zolak, returning it 19 yards to the New England 30.

Woods reaches quarterfinals

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Defending champion Tiger Woods won two matches Friday to reach the quarterfinals of the U.S. Amateur. His victories were overshadowed by those of another teen-ager who's trying to replace him as the youngest Amateur champion.

Steve Scott, 18, of Coral Springs, Fla., defeated 37-year-old Griff Moody of Hoover, Ala., 5 and 4 to reach the round of eight. Scott, who won the last three Florida high school championships, was five under through 14 holes, including birdies on 10, 11, 12 and 13.

DuMarier Classic

MONTREAL — The winds calmed, the clouds disappeared and it was Liselotte Neumann's day to shine at the du Maurier Classic.

While first-round leader Patty Sheehan was coming apart, Neumann had a bogey-free 66 to take a three-shot lead after two rounds of the LPGA Tour's last of four major championships.

Seniors Bank of Boston

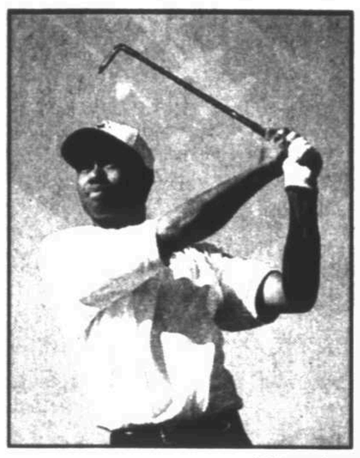

CONCORD, Mass. — The winds blew and the scores soared as five golfers posted 3-under-par 69s Friday to share the first-round lead of the $800,000 Bank of Boston Senior Classic.

World Series of Golf

AKRON, Ohio — Jim Gallagher Jr. avoided the pitfalls that befell playing partner Payne Stewart and retained a one-stroke lead Friday through two rounds of the World Series of Golf.

"Par's a good score, to say the least," Gallagher said after a 71 left him at 3-under 137. He started the round with a one-stroke lead over Stewart after opening with a 66 at parched and hard Firestone Country Club.

One shot back were defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal, Billy Mayfair and Mike Sullivan. Olazabal shot a 70.

College football Hall of Fame opens

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Being inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame with Paul Robeson meant almost as much to Jim Brown as the honor itself.

"The man was multi-talented, had tremendous courage," said Brown, who rushed for 2,091 yards and 25 touchdowns at Syracuse. "It's very significant to me because he was the person I most admired."

Brown, Robeson, who played at Rutgers early in the century, and 11 others were enshrined Friday in the new hall of fame in South Bend. The other inductees were: Chris Burford, Stanford; Tommy Casanova, Louisiana State; Jake Gibbs; Mississippi; Rich Glover, Nebraska; Jim Grabowski, Illinois; Jim Martin, Notre Dame; Dennis Onkotz, Penn State; Rick Redman, Washington; Billy Sims, Oklahoma; Mike Singletary, Baylor; and former Arizona State coach Frank Kush.

Sims, who had a family emergency, was the only inductee not represented.

The induction ceremony was held as part of opening day festivities at the new $14 million hall, which was three years in the making.

AUTOMOTIVE TODAY & Classified

There is one critically important maintenance task that is still universally required by your car or truck. Changing your vehicle's dirty, contaminated engine oil for fresh clean oil of the proper grade may well be the single most important task you can perform to ensure the engine' s healthy long life.

The owner's manual may recommend an oil change interval, however, the statement usually has an asterisk attached to it. That's to clue you to the fact that the suggested oil change interval is for what the carmaker considers normal service. Trailer towing, driving in extremely hot or cold climates, driving in heavy traffic, stop-and-go, are all outside the norm. These conditions drastically change the automaker's suggested oil-change interval.

For the well-being of your engine, a 3,000 mile oil-change interval is wonderful. Your engine will rarely have any degraded or contaminated oil coursing through it and should run fine and healthy for a long time.

Such frequent oil changes are not so good for our environment. Each time you change the oil you take another gallon or so of fresh clean oil from our reserves. You also are faced with disposing a gallon or so of dirty contaminated oil. As far as the ecology is concerned, as long as your engine is running well, the longer you keep the old oil in the engine, the better. Using common sense and monitoring your engine's oil condition, you can have both a healthy car and a healthy world.

By regularly monitoring your engine oil — checking the dipstick at least weekly — you quickly correct any problems that can deteriorate your engine's health and the environment. Checking the engine oil weekly, you will notice if sudden oil loss occurs. If your engine develops a leak it can lead to serious engine damage while fouling the ecology. Even a small leak of only a drop or two every mile can amount to more than a quart of spilled oil a week.

Before you set out to drain the engine oil and replace with fresh, you should trace and stop any oil leaks.

Knowing that your engine has an oil leak is one thing. Knowing where it's leaking is quite another. An oil-leaking engine is soon covered with oily grime which makes the entire engine seem to be the source of the leak. Oil clings to the engine and other components as it runs down. While it's possible that the source of the leak is directly above that oily stain or puddle on the garage floor or driveway, it's not very likely.

Unless your engine is shiny and clean and you've detected the leak soon it after it began, you should first clean the engine. Use one of the many quality biodegradable engine cleaner/degreasers on the market. Follow the instructions on the cleaner's label. You should also clean the oil stains from the driveway or garage as well.

With the engine clean, it should be easier for you to trace the oil leak. Inspect the engine carefully, both from above and below, as soon as you pull into the garage after each drive. Use a flashlight and clean cotton work gloves to probe all corners and crevices.

If the leak persists but you can't find its source, re-clean the engine and then dust it with talcum powder. This will absorb the leaking oil and highlight its trail back to the source. Truly mystifying leaks will require the help of a pro who can add an iridescent tracer to the engine oil and then search for the source with an ultraviolet light.

Once the leak's source has been found, it's usually easy to repair. Leaks at the engine's front cover, the cam or valve covers or the oil pan frequently are caused by a gasket that's loose. You may have to do nothing more than tighten some bolts to make the repair.

If that doesn't do the trick you must remove the cover, and clean all the old gasket and sealer from both mating surfaces. Inspect the parts for gouges or nicks that are too deep for the gasket to seal — if there are any, you may need to replace the damaged part. Also check the bolts to see if any of them need a special copper or nylon sealing washer. If so, make sure that the washer is good and that you put that bolt back in the proper hole. Then take care to not twist or tear the replacement gasket when you put the cover back on.

You may opt to use RTV silicone in place of a paper or cork gasket. Carefully lay down a continuous, unbroken bead of silicone all along the sealing surface, totally enclosing all bolt holes. If your search for the leak leads you to the end seal of a shaft, leave its replacement to a pro.

Once you've stopped all the leaks, you're ready to drain the old oil and replace it with fresh. Remember to take the old oil to a recycling center.

Aurora sets new Olds style

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

In the continuing quest to construct a full-size luxury sedan which rides and drives and performs the agile tricks of a sports car, there's a new entry for 1995 and it goes by the new name of Aurora.

In the styling department, Aurora looks as slick and smooth and sensuous as anything on the road today.

In the power department, it packs a sophisticated V8 engine rigged with technical marvels and ample horsepower.

In the comfort department, Aurora fits and feels like some luxo-liner shipped straight from Japan or Germany.

But Aurora is not an excessively priced import.

It's an Oldsmobile built in the United States and it lists for thousands less than the imported luxury sport sedans at which Aurora is targeted.

Aurora is, in a word, sensational.

Consider it the new flagship for a General Motors line which during the 1980s lost its identity as the brand of innovation and far-flung automotive invention. Those Rocket V8 engines and fast things from 1949 forward gave way to nebulous nomenclature of a homogenized collection of GM cars which looked and drove like one another, no matter what badge appeared on the grille.

Today, though, the Oldsmobile Division attempts to venture into new territory, automotively speaking, as it forges new products for the next five years which, once you see them all, will bear some resemblance in style and intent to new Aurora.

That's the word from John Rock, Oldsmobile's general manager whose mission it is to redefine the line.

Rock has his work cut out for him because of those past problems of image and hodgepodge models, but Aurora appears to be, at the least, an excellent start.

On a test-drive with Rock in a silver prototype Aurora, we scooted through rolling pine forests of northern Michigan as I tried to trick the car into misbehaving around tight corners or at high speed over humps like the big and mushy American stretchers of Oldsmobile's past.

Aurora would not play my game, however, because it cut a tight and precise line in every maneuver I demanded. No squeal turning, no-effort steering, no-nonsense managing of suspension components over road bumps, no-deviation routing for emergency brake paths — these were the traits I found.

Aurora behaved like the world-class car that it is.

And it is simply gorgeous.

Riding on a full-size platform Aurora shares with the new Buick Riviera coupe, this Olds features rounded styling lines which are strictly its own.

Where Aurora surprised me was in the way its driving and performance characteristics varied from those of Riviera. You see, the Oldsmobile slants strictly toward the sporty end of automotive acrobatics, which is precisely the way I like a car to perform — and Oldsmobile is betting that's also the way those now grown and often affluent Baby Boomers want their luxury cars to drive.

Regarding Aurora's tilt toward luxury, understand that the contents aboard this autoship include every possible creature comfort to transport as many as five people in classy style.

The interior layout plies two comfortable bucket seats in front and a rear bench sculpted for up to three. Front seats fit in sport-action manner, then move with up to six power positions.

Everything inside this sedan hinges on power operation — from windows and door locks to mirrors (with built-in defogging mechanism), and more. Buttons mounted on the sport steering wheel allow fingertip control for audio and climate control systems.

Dual climate zones with rear seat air conditioning vents illustrate the depth of comfort factors addressed by Oldsmobile's designers.

Yet, to me at least, the most significant aspects of this car's character concerns its aggressive powertrain components and the mechanical gear which make it so lively.

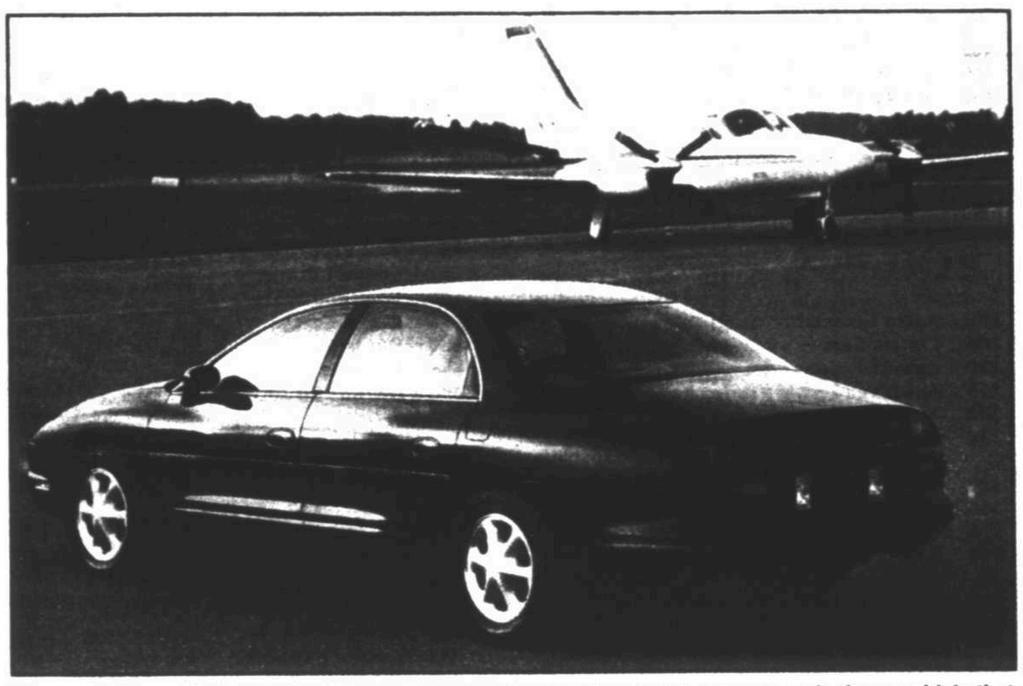

The new powerplant, a dual-cam V8 with aluminum upper block and four valves for each cylinder, produces a lusty 250 horsepower rating. This engine, exclusive to Aurora, is a modification from the remarkable Cadillac Northstar plant that sets a new high mark for American motor design.

Aurora's V8 couples to the latest electronically controlled GM automatic 4-speed transmission. I find it one of the smoothest to shift and still most controllable in today's marketplace.

Steering, via a rack and pinion system which uses magnetic connections to provide tension control that varies with vehicle speed, feels crisp and to the point. Brakes, with a disc at each wheel and anti-lock action governed by a computer, becomes the first of many safety assets which include dual air bags up front and even traction control.

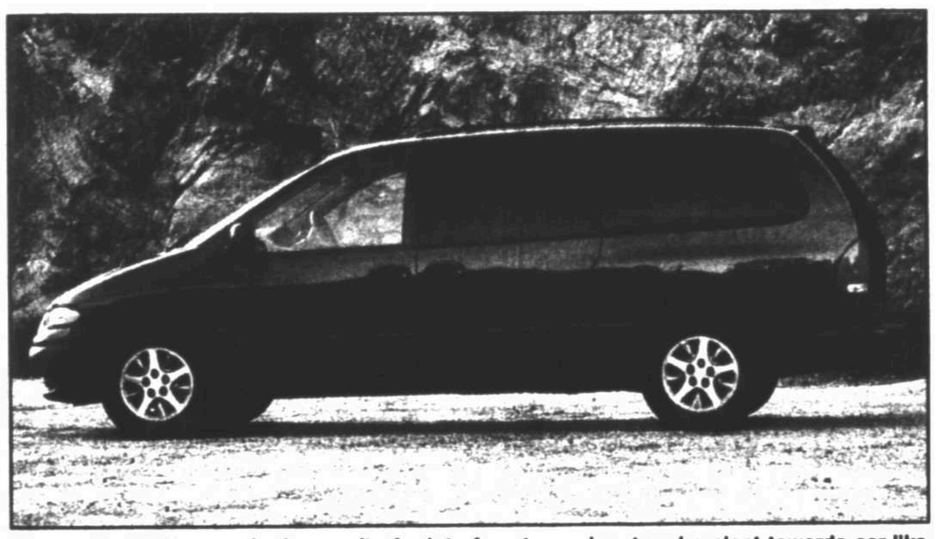

Only one trim level for Aurora signifies that this is a car complete in its long list of mechanical and comfort features. Options are limited to more aggressive performance tires, a Bose audio system and power sunroof.

Aurora feels and drives wonderfully, and for $31,995 it's priced to compete aggressively with the imports.

The new Oldsmobile Aurora is Oldsmobile's way of redefining their lines and producing a vehicle that will appeal to baby boomers with a zest for luxury, style and power.

A car-like ride, van style

Plymouth's '96 Voyager is the result of a lot of customer input and a slant towards car-like behavior. The new minivans have been redesigned to eliminate the boxy feel of yore.

I knew getting Grandmom into the minivan would be a good test for the Plymouth Voyager. Our 81-year-old granny hoisted herself up, expecting a struggle, then turned and exclaimed, "hey, I did it myself."

Chrysler's all-new 1996 minivans have made their proud debut. Redesigned with a lot of input from customers, these minivans have a whole new car-like feel.

The Plymouth Grand Voyager SE has a beautifully sculpted new look with a rounded exterior profile resembling Chrysler's signature cab-forward cars. Just as the family sedan has four doors, so do Chrysler's 1996 minivans.

A second sliding door, located right behind the driver, is an option families told the automaker that would make the minivan feel as functional as a car. Adding to the minivan's smoother appearance, are the hidden sliding door tracks, tucked under the side windows rather than mounted on the side panels.

I had a panoramic view of the road in my Plymouth tester. Chrysler lowered the cowl by four inches, improving forward visibility, and added three inches to the side glass windows. The feeling of riding in a big boxy "van" with small windows is a thing of the past. I was as high up as drivers in sport utility vehicles with a command-of-the-road feel.

Hauling things other than family members is a cinch with the "Easy Out Roller Seats." The second and third row benches in my tester rolled out as fast as in-line skaters in the park. At the base of the seats are small wheels that lower just as a plane's wheels descend for landing. Two levers release the wheels onto a landing track allowing the benches to slide out. The roll out could be made a lot easier if handles were mounted onto the rear of the seats.

There are so many thoughtful features with the family in mind in the Plymouth Grand Voyager SE. The second row bench in my tester provided two built-in child safety seats, eight -big cup holders, able to accommodate coffee mugs, are located in convenient spaces throughout the minivan. It also includes, at no charge, a smoker's convenience package.

Added to the comfort of the Plymouth Voyager, is a new dual zone climate comfort control system. It can supply up to a 100 degree difference (at the outlets) in temperature between the driver and front seat passenger. Plenty of air reaches the back seat riders with a separate climate control system.

Chrysler's all-new minivans are the first to provide the feature of a windshield wiper de-icer. Resembling the rear window defroster, the small grid de-icer covers a small area of glass at the base of the windshield to minimize ice build-up on wiper blades during the cold winter months. One annoying problem with the wipers in my tester is that they would flash over randomly during periods of driving. Sometimes using the turn signal would provoke the wipers to flash.

The feeling of safety and security is part of the positive driving experience of the Plymouth Voyager. The security of the Plymouth comes with a command-of-the-road feel in a stable, quiet ride. Handling is part of the minivan's ability to maneuver out of tight spots in shopping centers and school yards. Chrysler made the Voyager easier to get around obstacles like bicycles in the driveway by reducing the turning circle almost three-and-a-half feet.

Dual air bags, anti-lock brakes, child protection rear door locks and five-mile-per hour bumpers are standard safety equipment. Height-adjustable shoulder belts make wearing the straps comfortable and the trip enjoyable for passengers of all sizes and ages — even Grandmom.

Raymond Loewy, an internationally famous industrial designer, had been styling new Studebakers since the late 1930s. One of his best-liked of all automotive designs was the totally restyled 1953 Studebaker and, in particular, the low-slung coupe and two-door hardtop—with the "Italian look of a grand turismo sports model!"

The 1953 design seemed almost impossible to improve upon, so just to distinguish the new '54 from the '53, vertical pieces were added to the grille and the parking/directional lights were incorporated into the horizontal grillepiece. There were other minor changes, but the grille was the most obvious.

Studebakers were not only goodlooking in 1954, but they were easy on fuel. As an August 1954 ad proclaimed, "Millions of Americans know that Studebaker ran rings around all competition in this year's Mobilgas Economy Run." A six-cylinder Studebaker Champion with overdrive managed to squeeze out three to seven more miles per gallon than its four low-price Mobilgas Run rivals.

"That performance," continued the ad, "would cover the 2,958 miles from Los Angeles to New York on 100 gallons"—meaning that a '54 Studebaker 6 had managed to get nearly 30 miles per gallon.

And what about the illustrated Studebaker V8? The V8 could get up to 20 miles per gallon or more under favorable driving conditions. With only 232.6 cubic-inch displacement, Studebaker's V8 engine (introduced in 1951) was relatively small for its class. In the coming years, some luxury cars would pack in V8 engines with twice that displacement.

In 1954, Studebaker introduced a new station wagon, but there were no Studebaker convertibles between 1952 and the 1960 model of Studebaker's compact Lark. And 1954 was the year that Studebaker merged with Packard in the face of stiff competition from "The Big Three" (Ford, GM and Chrysler Corp.). Packard was discontinued after '58, and Studebaker's final 1965 and 1966 models were not built at South Bend, but at Studebaker's Canadian factory.
