Democrats prepare to fight for Wright

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are girding for a bruising battle over the ethics case of their speaker, Jim Wright of Texas, and acknowledging that the worst may be yet to come.

"We haven't hit bottom yet," said Rep. Charles Wilson, a fellow Texan who is among Wright's most battle-ready defenders. Wilson said he expects more damage to Wright when the House ethics committee releases its report Monday and formally charges the speaker with several dozen rules violations.

But even before the charges were lodged, Wright was beginning his counteroffensive. In a carefully scripted and sometimes emotional speech on Thursday, he vehemently denied any intentional wrongdoing.

"I am confident that in the 34 years I've served in the Congress, I have not violated any of those basic rules nor any commonly accepted standard of ethical behavior," Wright told a packed room of reporters and television cameras.

With his top leadership lieutenants and many Texas colleagues at his side, Wright grew emotional as he defended his wife against a charge she did not do adequate work for the $18,000-a-year salary she was paid by a Fort Worth business partner.

"My wife is a good, decent, caring, thoroughly honorable person," he said, his voice choking. "I'll damned well fight to protect her honor and her integrity against any challenge by any source, whatever the cost."

The defense buoyed Democrats who already support the speaker, and many seemed prepared to fight.

"If you live in a glass house, you shouldn't throw rocks," said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas. "Most of us in the House are prepared to eat a steady diet of glass for the next few weeks."

But others were dreading the battles to come and some expressed doubts whether the party could afford politically to maintain Wright as its most visible spokesman — particularly if the case leads to punishment.

Bush nominates old friend Allday for Interior post

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Midland attorney Martin Allday has been nominated by President Bush to become Solicitor of the U.S. Department of Interior, according to the White House.

Allday, a longtime personal friend of the president since the early 1950s when the Bush family lived in Midland, said Thursday that he was honored to be selected for the position and would do his best to be an efficient administrator.

The White House nominee is currently undergoing a background check by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Following that he must be confirmed by the Senate.

"The process could take two weeks to three months," said the Midland lawyer.

Ritual-killing suspect digs up 13th body

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A suspected member of a drug-smuggling cult was forced to dig up the remains of the 13th victim of revenge and sacrificial killings as public officials decried the "massacre."

Authorities are looking for the sect's alleged ringleader, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, whom members called "godfather." The five men in custody said Constanzo, 26, and Sara Maria Aldrete, 24, called the "witch," believed human sacrifices protected the cult from harm.

Cameron County Sheriff's Lt. George Gavito in Texas said that Constanzo, a Cuban who has contacts in Miami, was last seen in Brownsville.

In Matamoros, City Council members and civic leaders issued a "Declaration Against Drug Trafficking" on Thursday that said, "Those connected to the massacre who poisoned the public should be prosecuted."

State Attorney General Anibal Perez Vargas talked with Matamoros authorities, then said, "We will not rest until we uncover all the vermin that use legal activities as a front to break the law."

Using a pick and shovel and his hands, Sergio Martinez, 22, dug alone for more than an hour Thursday afternoon to uncover the body on the ranch near Matamoros, where authorities unearthed a dozen bodies Tuesday, including that of University of Texas student Mark Kilroy.

Martinez turned to police at one point and asked to be allowed to rest and then asked for a tractor to dig the hole. "Come on, use your hands," policemen yelled at him.

The 13th victim, estimates of whose age ranged from 13 to more than 30, had a rectangular cut over the left side of his chest, which showed signs that his heart had been ripped from his body, authorities said.

Federal Judicial Police commander Juan Benitez Ayala said they fear there are more bodies to be found.

One investigator said some blood-stained children's clothing has been found at Ms. Aldrete's house, but they have received no reports of missing children.

Helen Kilroy, the mother of Mark Kilroy, asked 1,200 people at a Mass in Brownsville on Thursday to pray for the dead and the men who killed them.

"Pray for the people who have done these things," Mrs. Kilroy said at St. Luke's Catholic Church. "Pray that they are caught and that the Lord will enter their hearts, and they will know what they have done is wrong."

In a dramatic public confession Wednesday, some of the five men in custody were paraded onto a balcony where they told reporters the slayings were intended to provide a "magical shield" for members of a drug-smuggling ring.

A cauldron with a turtle, brains and other items were found near the graves at the ranch along with bowls containing burned goats' heads and a mutilated rooster.

So far, the only victim to be publicly identified was Kilroy, who was abducted from the streets of Matamoros last month during spring break.

The search for Constanzo has been focused on the Miami area, where his family lived in a middle-class neighborhood in the late 1970s and early 1980s, authorities said.

Those who know Ms. Aldrete say her alleged ties to the sect have taken them by surprise.

"Apparently, Sara was leading a double life: as a witch in Mexico and as a dean's honor roll student at Texas Southmost College," said Cameron County Sheriff's Deputy Carlos Tapia in Texas.

As income-tax filing day nears, 'Tax Freedom Day' weeks away

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once the Monday deadline for filing 1988 federal income-tax returns passes, the average worker still will have to toil an additional 17 days before having earned what government tax collectors will demand for 1989.

"Tax Freedom Day" arrives this year on May 4. It has not been later since the Tax Foundation began calculating this measure of the burden imposed on workers by federal, state and local governments. It was Feb. 13 in 1930.

By the foundation's calculations, the average worker will work 124 days this year just to pay taxes. So, if the government demanded its money up front, it would take all of the average worker's income through May 4.

Moviemakers were led to Odessa Thursday to film scenes involving the acquisition of a rathole rig used to help free Jessica McClure from an abandoned water well. Shooting in the Midland area was to end today as production units wrap up "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure." The films airs May 21.

Filming of rescue effort to end where story began

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series on the filming of "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure." From a backyard in Southern California and a Hollywood sound stage to Midland locations, moviemakers are striving for accuracy in the heroic tale that needed no dramatic embellishment.

Staff Writer

Filming of a special story that unfolded in Midland 18 months ago was to appropriately end here today.

Scenes of Midland should add a touch of West Texas reality to the film, "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure," a recounting of the saga involving the toddler trapped in an abandoned water well.

And to local residents involved in the production Thursday, Hollywood brought a lesson of its own: Academy Awards night is glamorous, but shooting a film is not.

Production began in the dark early Thursday morning — perhaps one of the coldest and dreariest spring days in recent history — at Midland International Airport where scenes documenting the arrival of reporters, drilling equipment and mining experts were shot.

Thursday morning's cold and seemingly endless drizzle was so unbearable at times, crews and extras who stood shivering on the tarmac were led to appreciate the occasional bursts of heat radiated by the gusts of jet fuel exhaust.

Vic White, airport director, donated its use to executive producer John Kander II.

"It's fun," White said of the day. "And it's not coincidental" the scene where a Federal Express airplane taxis to a stop is directly in front of the huge "MIDLAND INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT" sign facing the runways.

"I insisted the city and airport get some credit," White said.

Texas rafters likely won't face firearms charges

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Three American rafters who were shot at as they floated down the Rio Grande apparently will not face charges for carrying firearms, a Big Bend National Park official said Thursday.

After being grilled by the Texas Rangers and the FBI, Reuben Saage II of Alpine, James Gentry of Houston and Russ Alexander of Riesel will not be prosecuted on federal charges of possessing weapons in a national park, Ranger Charlie Peterson said.

"We tried to scare them a little bit to see if they would change their story," Peterson said. "Their stories stood. We may never know exactly what happened."

The men maintained that the sniper fired first, and they responded by shooting into the air.

Peterson said national law states that guns can be carried in a national park only if they're unloaded and stored so they're not readily available for use.

Because the rafters said the guns were wrapped in plastic and placed on the floor of the boat, it's unclear whether they were readily available.

"I think if we carry it to court, we may lose, so I don't anticipate any charges," Peterson said. "I just don't want an armed camp on the river."

Peterson said the .45-caliber and 9mm pistols confiscated from the men after the March 22 incident will be returned within a month.

None of the men were injured when a 15-year-old boy allegedly began firing rounds from a .22-caliber rifle at them from atop the Mexican cliffs near the village of San Vicente.

Led by the boy's cousin, Mexican police on March 30 captured Santos Sanchez Ramos at his uncle's home in Melchor Muzquiz, about 125 miles southeast of where the shooting occurred. Ramos, who said he only fired after the rafters began shooting, was convicted of attempted murder.

District Attorney Arturo Hernandez Aldate of Ciudad Acuna, speaking through an interpreter in a telephone conversation Wednesday, said Ramos will be sent to a youth correctional facility in Saltillo for an unspecified period of time.

Peterson said Mexican police told him that Ramos has been undergoing psychiatric evaluation.

WORLD in brief

Palestinians killed protesting deaths

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians protesting the deaths of five Arabs in a police raid clashed today with soldiers in the West Bank, and more than 17 were wounded by gunfire, hospital officials said.

At least 11 refugee camps, towns or villages in the West Bank and occupied Gaza Strip had demonstrations or were shut down by general strikes called to protest the killings Thursday in the village of Nahalin, near Bethlehem.

The worst confrontation was in the Askar refugee camp near Nablus. Arab doctors said 12 Palestinians there were hospitalized with gunshot wounds.

The victims included a 3-year-old girl, who was shot in the left side, and an 18-year-old man in critical condition with a bullet in the chest, they said.

In Jerusalem, police took unprecedented measures to prevent violence at the Al Aqsa Mosque during today's Moslem prayers. A riot occurred there during last week's prayers, and at least 2,000 extra police were called in today to prevent similar violence.

Avril appears stronger

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The failure of an attempted coup against Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril has left the Haitian leader in a stronger position to carry out his U.S.-backed program of democratic reform and drug busting.

But events of the past two weeks exposed the continuing threat to stability posed by the impoverished Caribbean nation's poorly trained and corruption-ridden army.

It is a question now of whether Avril, a former adviser to the Duvalier family dictatorship who became president in a military coup seven months ago, has the power and the will to fulfill his pledge of "irreversible democracy."

"So far, all we have are his democratic promises," said a Western European diplomat. "Haitians have grown skeptical of such promises."

Diplomats said the trigger for the April 2 coup attempt was Avril's dismissal the previous week of four army colonels accused of drug running. Loyal troops rescued the president as he was being driven, handcuffed, to the airport to be deported.

The government said the plot was hatched by former Haitian interior minister and longtime Avril foe, Roger Lafontant, who lives in the neighboring Dominican Republic, and other exiles linked to Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier, who fled into exile in France in February 1986.

China's 1.1 billionth born

BEIJING (AP) — China today marked the birth of its 1.1 billionth citizen with warnings that its attempts to put a lid on population growth are having little success.

The official China Daily said that despite greater public awareness of family planning and numerous state regulations, "China's population was undoubtedly out of control."

Chinese leaders, in meetings publicizing the new figure, said China will have difficulty feeding and housing itself if growth in population is not checked, leading dailies reported.

The People's Daily said in an editorial that the large population "has become the main obstacle to the development of the economy" and will "affect matters of vital importance to the Chinese people's future existence."

China reached the 1.1 billion figure a little more than seven years after becoming the world's first nation with 1 billion people.

DEA cuts back in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration has reduced its operations in Peru's cocaine-producing jungle for security reasons, U.S. officials said.

The cutback began two months ago after the security chief of the U.S. Embassy received a minor leg wound in January by gunmen firing at a U.S. helicopter from the ground, said embassy spokesman Charles Loveridge.

The violence occurred in the Upper Huallaga valley near Tingo Maria, 240 miles northeast of Lima. Officials say more than 60 percent of the world's coca, the raw material of cocaine, is grown in the region.

Operation Snowcap, under which DEA agents advise Peru's Civil Guard on eradicating coca fields and cocaine-producing laboratories, was suspended in mid-February, said Catherine Shaw of the department's office of International Narcotics Matters in Washington.

Fishing boat snags sub

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet submarine taking part in naval maneuvers got caught in the fishing net of a Danish trawler in the Baltic Sea and had to be cut loose, the official Tass news agency said today.

The incident took place April 4 during joint maneuvers with the East German navy and three days before a Soviet nuclear submarine caught fire and sank off Norway, the news agency said. Forty-two sailors died in the Norwegian Sea accident.

Tass said ships escorting the submarine displayed warning flags indicating underwater maneuvers were underway and that vessels in the area were warned by radio to exercise caution.

Despite the warnings, Tass said, "Danish authorities reported that the Soviet submarine had been caught in the net of a trawler from Bornholm Island. As this posed a threat to fishermen, the net was cut off."

Guards place themselves between Diana, the Princess of Wales, right, and carpenter Edward Adocock, left, as he lunged toward her in Cramlington Thursday. He said he wanted to give her a hug.

Detectives intercept man who sought to hug Diana

CRAMLINGTON, England (AP) — A 57-year-old man who grabbed Olympic sprinter Florence Griffith-Joyner in a passionate embrace last August lunged at Princess Diana when she visited this northern town Thursday.

Edward Adcock, a carpenter, said he meant no harm to the 27-year-old princess when he jumped over railings as she spoke to a crowd outside a workshop for the mentally handicapped.

"I am sorry if I caused her any upset because I have always admired her enormously," he said. "I might have been in the process of trying to give her a hug. She is attractive and I fancy her, but I didn't realize it would finish up this way.

"I may appear calm on the surface, but inside me there is turmoil. I have had some trouble in past years and now it has come up again. But there is no way I would be violent or harm anyone."

Television pictures show the princess was startled. She stepped backward as three burly detectives hurled themselves between her and Adcock, but quickly regained her composure and continued chatting with people in the crowd.

A Northumbria police spokesman said further inquiries would be made and no charges had yet been filed.

In August, Adcock grabbed the American sprinter from behind as she peeled off her track suit after winning a race in Gateshead. He was not charged.

Adcock wonders how his workmates at a building site will regard his latest caper. "They pulled my leg a lot over the Flo-Jo business," he said.

Moslem rebels cut off Afghan supply routes

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghan troops fought today to dislodge Moslem rebels who have cut off two major routes used to bring food and fuel into the capital.

The government confirmed Thursday that the Salang Highway, which runs from Kabul north to the Soviet border, had been cut off at two points, stalling much-needed supplies.

In New Delhi today, Afghanistan's ambassador said Washington's continued arming of the guerrillas violates the year-old Geneva agreement that led to the Soviet troop pullout, which was completed in February.

The last convoy arrived in Kabul on April 6 but an explosion ripped through an oil depot in the capital and destroyed about a dozen of the 70 fuel trucks.

The blockade has left several tons of supplies piled along the border, said diplomats who insisted on anonymity.

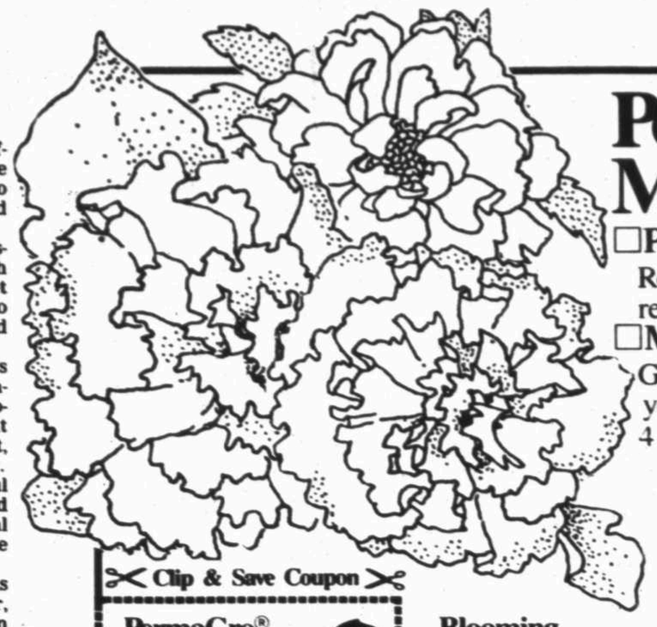

Another highway running east from Kabul to the besieged city of Jalalabad has been closed to all traffic except military convoys, said Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani.

The rebels said they control about 20 miles of the highway, the major route to the border with Pakistan.

One diplomat said the rebels had seized a convoy of empty trucks returning to Jalalabad, parked them along the road and then placed mines inside.

With the two main roads to the capital blocked, the Soviet Union has been airlifting food and military equipment to Kabul to help the government of President Najib hold out against the rebels.

But the airlift provides less than half of the 650 tons of flour the city of about 2.3 million people needs daily, and shortages of essential supplies have sent prices soaring.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be fair tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 40s and winds will be out of the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Saturday is expected to be sunny and warmer with the high reaching into the lower 70s and winds continuing out of the southeast 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 48 was 49 degrees cooler than the record high of 97 set for that date in 1972. The overnight low of 44 was 15 degrees warmer than the record low 29 set for this date in 1983.

STATE

Skies were expected to be partly cloudy over most of the state tonight as a weekend clearing process continued, but rain was expected over South and Southeast Texas.

Forecasters called for partly to mostly cloudy skies with a chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms over South and Southeast Texas tonight.

Lows tonight were expected to range from the low 40s to the upper 50s.

Warm, moist gulf air that moved across the state was responsible for a series of upper level storms that dumped as much as 2 inches of rain in some areas over a 24-hour period beginning early Thursday. Locations in North Texas received the most rain, while much of South Texas received 1 inch or less. Areas in West Texas reported less than one-tenth of an inch of precipitation.

The clearing today was expected to begin in West Texas and continue across most of the rest of the state. Highs were expected to range from the low 60s to the upper 70s.

Early morning extremes ranged from 37 degrees at Dalhart to 66 at Brownsville and Corpus Christi.

Early morning temperatures around the state included 49 at Fort Worth; 41 at Amarillo; 47 at Wichita Falls; 46 at Abilene; 52 at Waco, Austin and San Antonio; 61 at Houston; 49 at El Paso; and 42 at Lubbock.

NATION

Rainshowers fell over parts of the south-central United States today, and a cold front brought some snow to New England.

Rain fell in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas early this morning, with showers and thunderstorms in south Texas. Widely scattered showers also were near the southern tip of Florida and over the upper Mississippi Valley.

The rest of the nation enjoyed dry weather.

A freeze warning was in effect this morning for central Maryland, northwestern Virginia and the eastern panhandle of West Virginia.

The nation's high Thursday was 98 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif.

Today's forecast: a few thunderstorms over southern and central Florida; rainshowers scattered over northern Maine, the upper Great Lakes and northern Illinois; showers and occasional thunderstorms from western portions of Kentucky and Tennessee across Mississippi, Louisiana and the eastern two-thirds of Texas; and cloudy skies from the Florida Panhandle across Alabama, the Tennessee Valley, the remainder of Illinois and Missouri.

High temperatures were to be in the 40s and 50s from New England across New Jersey, across the northern Appalachians and the lower Great Lakes, Michigan, northern Wisconsin, the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains and the upper Missouri Valley; in the 60s and 70s from southern Pennsylvania across northern Florida, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, the central Gulf of Mexico states, the remainder of the Great Lakes, the lower two-thirds of the Mississippi, the remainder of the Plains, the Rockies, the northern Plateau, the Great Basin, the northern Pacific Coast and much of the California coast; and in the 90s from southern Nevada across southwest Arizona and southeast California. High temperatures over much of the remainder of the nation were forecast in the 80s.

ALLDAY

Secretary of Interior Manuel Lujan, in a press statement Thursday, called the move a welcomed nomination. Lujan said Allday was a veteran attorney, a strong executive and a distinguished community leader.

In the same statement Sen. Phil Gramm said the duties of solicitor required the legal skills and managerial ability of an individual like Allday.

As the top lawyer for the Department of Interior, Allday, if confirmed, will oversee the activities of 100 attorneys within the highly diversified department.

The Department of Interior has more than 50,000 employees and oversees the affairs of numerous bureaus and agencies including: Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Mines, Bureau of Mineral Management, Bureau of Surface Mining, U.S. Geological Service, Territorial and International Affairs and the National Park Service.

As a member of the U.S. National Parks Foundation for the past four years, Allday said he has developed and maintained a strong interest in U.S. national parks. "This is the only job in Washington that interested me," said Allday.

A managing partner in the Midland law firm of Chappell, Allday & Alsup, Allday said he would take a significant "financial beating" in the move to Washington, but he was very excited about the job.

Said Allday, a 1951 graduate of the University of Texas School of Law: "I am certainly going to miss Midland. It has been a very important part of my life for the past 35 years. It will be difficult to leave. I have four grandbabies all under six years. I will also miss my law practice, my friends, quail hunting and golf," he said.

The civic leader said it would take several months to disengage himself from his law practice and community duties, including his position as member of the Board of Governors of Midland Memorial Hospital. He is also a board member of a local bank and oil company. "I have to resign from everything," he said.

He said he had no agenda of his own except to be loyal to Bush and work with Lujan to protect national resources: "The President and Secretary Lujan have set forth a plan of stewardship for our national resources that calls for protecting what we have, developing it when needed and exercising environmental concern."

WRIGHT

"The ground would start to move under him if he were reprimanded," said Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont.

"The mood is bleak," Rep. Robert Mrazek, D-N.Y., told The New York Times. "There is recognition by virtually all of the people I would consider professional politicians that he will not survive." And he added: "For the first time, a couple of Texans have said to me they think it's all over."

The ethics committee, six Democrats and six Republicans, put the final touches on its report late Thursday and scheduled a Monday morning news conference to release it. The report will include a "statement of alleged violations" enumerating several dozen specific violations of House rules, said sources familiar with the investigation.

Under the rules, the panel's standard for issuing such a citation — the equivalent of an indictment — is that it has found "reason to believe" the violations occurred. For the committee to prove those charges requires the more difficult standard of "clear and convincing" evidence.

Wright asked that he be allowed as soon as possible to go before the ethics panel and present his defense and begin offering rebuttal evidence.

TAXES

That is the same as the last two years — in fact, it is the same as in 1981, when Congress and President Reagan agreed on the biggest tax cut in the nation's history.

"Americans ... are not better off than they were in 1981, despite economic growth, cuts in income tax rates and repeated claims that government spending has been cut to the bone," the foundation said Thursday in announcing Tax Freedom Day.

The reasons: 13 federal tax increases enacted since 1981; the giant 1986 tax overhaul, which, to millions of taxpayers, took away more than it gave; Social Security taxes that have been growing more rapidly than the economy, and steady state and local tax increases caused in part by a reduction in federal aid.

If you prefer worrying about your taxes on the installment plan, the foundation offers this option: The average worker will put in 1 hour and 46 minutes each 8-hour day this year to pay federal taxes and another 56 minutes for state and local taxes. The federal take is down by a minute from 1988; the state-local burden is unchanged.

The foundation, a Washington-based research organization, assumes for the purposes of its calculation that all taxes are paid by individuals, including those collected from corporations.

The Internal Revenue Service geared up for the last three work days of the 1988 return-filing season, promising its toll-free telephone system will be open to answer questions Saturday morning and until 7 p.m. local time Monday. IRS offices offering advice to walk-in taxpayers plan extended hours on Monday.

The IRS earlier projected that 32 million couples and individuals (out of 109 million expected to file sometime this year) would wait until the final two weeks of the season.

The deadline this year is Monday midnight because the statutory deadline, April 15, falls on a Saturday.

Woman suspect's double life shocks friends

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Heads turned when Sara Maria Aldrete roamed the halls of Texas Southmost College.

Friends and teachers describe the 24-year-old, tall, thin, fair-haired student as cheery, competitive and studious.

But Ms. Aldrete, who stands at least 6 feet tall, had another side — a dark side — police on both sides of the Rio Grande now say.

By day in the United States, she was an honor-roll student, but at night back in Matamoros she became "the witch," one of about 10 members of a cult that smuggled marijuana into the United States and kidnapped, tortured and killed at least 13 people for revenge or in rituals aimed to protect the cult from police harm.

"She was leading a double life. She had one life in Matamoros, with what she was doing with these people in narcotics and worshipping and in the United States, she was a student at TSC, and all the sports she was involved in, activities, and was on the honor roll," said Cameron County Sheriff's Lt. George Gavito.

"The friends over here didn't know much about what she was doing in Mexico," Gavito said.

As it turns out, even her parents in Matamoros knew nothing about their daughter's activities.

Israel and Maria Teresa last saw their daughter when she left the house a week ago and earlier this week, police raided the daughter's upstairs room and found an altar with candles, blood spatters on the wall and a burnt floor.

"We were ignorant of this," the parents told the Houston Chronicle.

TSC instructors, meanwhile, also were shocked at learning about Ms. Aldrete's alleged involvement in drugs and slayings, which included the kidnapping and slaying of Mark Kilroy, a 21-year-old University of Texas pre-med student whose disappearence from Matamoros during spring break on March 14 generated much publicity.

Kilroy was among those kidnapped, killed and mutilated by the cult at the Santa Elena Ranch, about 20 miles west of Matamoros.

"This whole thing is unbelieveable. If anybody would have picked up on some of those occult characteristics in class I think it would have been me," said Dr. Tony Zavaleta, a TSC anthropology professor who also specializes in folk medicine research and was Mrs. Aldrete's professor for several classes.

"She was striking — always well-groomed, neatly dressed, always present in class. She was the perfect student. If I had a room full of students like her, I'd be happy," Zavaleta said.

Police say Ms. Aldrete, a resident alien who has homes in Matamoros and Brownsville, is believed to be on the run in the United States.

With access to cash, she could be alone or with cult leader, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, a 26-year-old Cuban who headed the drug-smuggling operation and, according to other suspects in the slayings, committed many of the acts.

Police are not sure how Ms. Aldrete got involved with the group.

"We know she is a major player and we are trying to find her," said Oran Neck, agent-in-charge of the U.S. Customs Service in Brownsville.

Mexican and U.S. authorities also are trying to piece together how others in the cult were recruited, and Zavaleta said it may lead back to Ms. Aldrete, whose striking features may have been used to lure other members into the flock.

RITUAL

Texas Southmost College is a two-year college in Brownsville with an enrollment of 6,500.

A search of her home in Matamoros revealed an altar and blood-spatters, but no bones or bodies, Gavito said.

The bodies of the victims were at funeral homes pending identification, authorities said.

Officials said the sect was shipping more than a ton of marijuana to the United States each week, and that U.S. investigators are helping Mexican authorities in the investigation.

MOVIE

Local extras in the filming Thursday included Police Chief Richard Czech, Midland police officers Jim White, Andy Glasscock and Manny Beltran, KMID-TV reporters, paramedic Robert O'Donnell and County Attorney Mark Dettman.

"Words can't express how exciting it was," yawned the county attorney who played a reporter.

Mary Catherine Mathews, a KMID-TV weekend anchor paid $40 to be an extra, said crews told her "to ignore the rain, act like it's a spring day and to squint your eyes."

Location manager C.R. Holloway said the dreary Thursday morning likely won't make it to the TV screens May 21 when the film airs. In the film laboratory, processors can develop the film in such a way that the day should appear "almost sunny."

City officials don't have to worry about the police chief going Hollywood. "I think I'll stick to police business," explained Czech who portrayed a man who greets the mining expert flown to Midland by oilman Clayton Williams Jr.

For authenticity's sake, the particular scene features Williams' maroon-and-white Sabre jet whizzing by the national press as it deplanes an American Airlines 727 onto the tarmac.

O'Donnell, who with paramedic Steve Forbes, brought Jessica to daylight after 58½-hours underground, played a reporter and is already hunting a co-worker to cover his shift the night the film airs.

"The film will totally put it (Jessica's story) in history. It will be in the past," O'Donnell claimed.

Glasscock, who with Beltran, was the first officer at the water well on that fateful Oct. 14, 1987, doubled as himself in several scenes Thursday. The actor portraying the police officer couldn't make it to Midland for the shooting.

Glasscock lamented about having to shave off his 7-year-old mustache (the actor didn't have one) and whittled away the time between scene-shooting sitting with an American Airlines jet pilot in front of the cockpit's heater.

Shooting moved to KMID-TV later in the day where scenes of "Winnie-the-Pooh bear arrivals" were shot. KMID Station Manager Shorty Stokes said the bears began arriving at the studio when Jessica was retrieved from the well.

From there it was onward to the Odessa intersection of Loop 338 and Highway 191, where rathole rig acquisition scenes were shot.

During the 1987 ordeal, police officers located a rathole rig or column auger at a Midland highway construction site. The apparatus was used in the backyard at 3309 Tanner Drive to dig the hole parallel to the water well and through which rescuers eventually retrieved Jessica.

Since the overpass in Midland is now complete, the Odessa overpass construction site was used. Unlike the actual event, New Mexico businessman Kragg Robinson's rathole rig wasn't used in the film.

The rig in the film was rented from an Odessa firm, Holloway said.

As the chilly drizzle ebbed and day neared an end on Loop 338, (smaller establishing shots were all that remained on the filming schedule) Kander, who'd earlier finished a Tootsie Pop, reflected on the story he feels to which "justice was done.

"People (actors) had respect for this story and the people they were playing. It was a story that rallied everybody. And that's the truth," Kander vowed.

Kander, who calls Midland a "very wonderful and cohesive community," said actors realized "they were playing second fiddle to the well.

"At the bottom of that well was a little girl's life and the soul of the world was trying to free her."

Holloway pronounced Thursday's shooting a success even though the quintessential "pump jack in the sunset" may not make it to the film, thanks to the dreary West Texas weather.

"But I'd come back here in a New York minute," Holloway exclaimed.

"Midland to the first-time visitor looks like a city from outer space ... a city that's been abandoned," Holloway said.

He explained that when he'd arrived earlier this week he'd driven up and down streets looking for the nucleus of the city but couldn't find it. "I found downtown ... but it was just very eerie," Holloway recalled.

"I couldn't find the heart of the city ... until I met the individuals."

Passage of Contra aid bill gives Bush leverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional approval of a compromise $49.7 million package of non-military aid for the Nicaraguan rebels gives President Bush bipartisan support to pressure the Sandinista government into keeping its promises on instituting democratic reforms, lawmakers say.

"I think we've made a step in the right direction," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Thursday moments after the Senate voted 89-9 to approve the plan. "Now we can be an active player in that part of the world."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who hammered out the plan with Senate and House leaders, has said the history of disagreement between the Democratic-controlled Congress and the Republican White House over Central America has hamstrung U.S. policy toward the region.

The accord provides "an opportunity to put behind us one of the most divisive foreign policy issues in postwar history and embark on a new, more hopeful diplomacy toward Central America," Baker said earlier in the week.

The overwhelming Senate vote came Thursday night, just a few hours after the House passed the plan by a similarly decisive margin, 309-110. House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas said the legislation "sets in motion a united, single-voice policy."

In Nicaragua on Thursday, the ruling Sandinista party condemned the Contra aid package, saying it threatens the Nicaraguan government and "makes fun of the will of the Central American presidents." Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega also promised to push for democratic reforms in his country and moved up elections by 10 months, to February 1990.

Despite the strong support on both sides of the aisle in Congress, the plan had its critics.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., one of the strongest supporters of the Contras, attacked the plan as "little more than seven months of beans and Band-Aids." He objected unsuccessfully to an unusual feature effectively giving Congress veto power over further aid after Nov. 30.

Helms charged that the agreement amounted to an unconstitutional legislative veto, and produced a letter he received from former U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Robert Bork supporting his argument.

"Some have defended this arrangement by asserting that, while it would clearly be illegal if written into a statute, it is all right as a gentleman's agreement," Bork said. "That observation in no way alters the fact that constitutional processes are being circumvented."

Additional tests into radical's death planned

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — An autopsy on Abbie Hoffman was inconclusive, but officials hoped toxicology tests today would determine how the 1960s radical died, while his mother believes he committed suicide.

Hoffman

Hoffman, 52, was found dead in his bed by his landlord Wednesday night.

Hoffman's mother said the family assumed Hoffman had taken his life.

He sounded very depressed in recent telephone conversations with his brother, Jack, 83-year-old Florence Hoffman said Thursday night.

"He had to do what he had to do," she said from her Worcester, Mass., home. "I don't know why. I don't know what happened."

Bucks County District Attorney Alan Rubenstein said an autopsy performed Thursday night at Doylestown Hospital failed to uncover the cause of Hoffman's death.

Mark Broderick, director of student activities at Loyola College in Baltimore, said he also believed Hoffman sounded depressed when he called to cancel a speaking engagement hours before he was to arrive on Tuesday.

"He said that his mother was dying, that he really couldn't leave her," Broderick said.

But Mrs. Hoffman said she had not seen her son in weeks. She also said he was under treatment for breast cancer but did not consider the condition terminal.

Michael Waldron, who rented Hoffman an apartment in a 400-footlong converted turkey shed in New Hope, said Hoffman was busy with projects and concerned about the environment through his last few weeks.

Hoffman was very upset about the recent oil spill off the coast of Alaska, and he talked about organizing a boycott of Exxon Corp., which is responsible for the massive slick, until the spill was cleaned up, Waldron said.

Hoffman rose to prominence with the Chicago Seven, a group of radicals who stood trial on charges of conspiring to disrupt the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. He was acquitted of conspiracy and a conviction of crossing state lines with intent to riot was overturned.

He also founded the loosely organized Yippie movement, or Youth International Party, in 1968 to bring together radicals to protest the government and the Vietnam War.

Tentative budget agreement reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators from the Bush administration and Congress have tentatively agreed on a nearly $30 billion deficit-reduction plan that minimally meets next year's goals while putting off the tough choices until later.

Bargaining ended late Thursday night with a deal that was all but certain to be presented to President Bush and congressional leaders for their approval, sources said. A White House meeting was scheduled for today so Bush and House and Senate leaders could review and announce the compromise.

The plan claims to reduce the fiscal 1990 deficit to about $99.2 billion, meeting the goal of the Gramm-Rudman law of a deficit no larger than $100 billion in the year beginning Oct. 1. The current year's deficit will be about $163 billion, according to administration estimates.

About half of the deficit reduction, $14.2 billion, would come from a combination of increased revenues including $5.8 billion in taxes, $2.7 billion in fees for government services and $5.7 billion from selling government assets, according to sources familiar with the package.

Details of the revenue sources were left unspecified, to be worked out later as Congress and its committees draft the legislation to implement the pact. The budget agreement itself does not have the force of law, but it will provide a framework for the actual spending bills passed later.

The tax figure includes $500 million through increased enforcement of the tax code, but achieving the other $5.3 billion will either mean finding taxes that Bush doesn't believe violate his campaign pledges, or Congress acceding to Bush's claim that cutting the capital gains tax rate will bring in more revenue, not less.

Bush wants a lower capital gains tax and says it would actually increase revenue in fiscal 1990 because of an increase in that type of financial activity. Democrats argue that the plan is a big revenue loser in the long run, with the wealthy sopping up most of the benefits.

On the spending side, the plan would restrain overall growth for fiscal 1990 in both domestic and military programs to below the rate of inflation.

The Pentagon would be held to about $299 billion in outlays, virtually the same as this year. Military spending authority, which includes commitments that span more than one fiscal year, would be about $305.5 billion.

Current cost controls in the Medicare health plan would be extended and other restraints would be imposed on that fast-growing entitlement, without cutting benefits. Overall spending by government agencies would be increased with the rate of inflation, although the Congress and Bush would presumably cut some programs to make room for additional spending in others.

Fusion excitement generating hope

At a time when all the news concerning energy appears to be negative — oil prices remain low, a massive oil spill threatens the environment in Alaska, future energy demands and costs are predicted to be much greater — a report that scientists at Texas A&M University have recreated nuclear fusion in a beaker of water at room temperature is exciting enough to get the science community humming.

Why? Because that could mean that science may be on the threshold of harnessing a clean, almost limitless supply of energy that could revolutionize the industrialized world. It was formerly thought that it took heating materials to enormously high temperatures to achieve a sustained reaction.

Until the A&M experiment, which echoed the results of two scientists last month in Utah, nuclear power could only be created through fission, in which atoms are split. Unfortunately, current methods of producing nuclear energy can be extemely hazardous. Witness Chernobyl, Three Mile Island, and the massive public concerns that keep nuclear power plants from coming on line today. Those concerns are legitimate and that's part of the reason this fusion breakthrough is viewed with optimism.

But it's much too early to predict, or even assume, that producing energy through fusion, in which the nuclei of hydrogen atoms are joined, would be significantly safer or cheaper. In fact, the scientific community even remains skeptical about the experiments that caused the two teams to report creating nuclear fusion in lab tests.

Still, we surely can be forgiven a bit of excitement when a reported breakthrough occurs that could change human life for the better.

It isn't a matter of pitting this potential step down the road to energy security against the benefits of oil or electricity or coal. Because each obviously has a role to play in our society. Rather, it's a matter of recognizing this as the possibility of another energy source that could open vast new avenues to mankind.

It's too early to say that possibility exists, but the hope is, at least, exciting.

JACK ANDERSON

Navy quiet on death of 'Top Gun'

WASHINGTON — Marilyn Ginsberg has been waiting for two years to bury her husband. Thanks to the secrecy of the U.S. Navy, she may never put to rest the mystery of his death.

Jack Anderson

Capt. Daniel Ginsberg was one of the Navy's esteemed "Top Guns." On May 20, 1987, his F-18 jet crashed into the Sierra Nevada Mountains in California on a routine training flight. The Navy claimed it spent 1,388 flight hours searching for the wreckage. Then it gave up.

But Marilyn Ginsberg, the petite widow with two toddlers, wouldn't give up. The more she read of the Navy's search records, the more hollow they sounded and she grew determined to find the plane herself.

A year after the accident she did, and it took only seven hours.

Using the same information the Navy had, Mrs. Ginsberg had reward posters and maps hung in ranger stations, at trail heads and in sheriffs' offices. With reluctant help from the military, she initiated a search. On June 18, 1988, after a half-day hike, a search team found the plane east of Yosemite National Park near the Nevada border.

Finding the plane so easily raised far more questions than it answered for Mrs. Ginsberg and the family of the dead co-pilot, Lt. Michael Mueller. Why hadn't the Navy spotted it? Was the Navy hiding something? Why would a pilot, respected for his caution, who had flown the 1986 bombing raid on Libya, crash on a routine flight across California?

The Pentagon has locked the records of the crash in a vault for top secret material and will only release a sanitized version of its conclusions.

Our associate Jim Lynch pored over documents and interviewed more than a dozen people privy to the crash and the search. We found convincing evidence that the Navy may have known exactly where the plane was, and decided to leave it there.

The plane crashed on a ridge behind Green Creek Canyon. The Navy records show that no search aircraft were near the canyon on the day of the crash. Yet a hiker and a forestry worker swear they saw Navy planes fly in and out of the canyon just hours after the crash. A deputy at a nearby sheriff's department saw a helicopter equipped to pick up wreckage a couple of days after the accident.

A hiker reported an "explosion" near the crash site and the last radar reading from the F-18 was less than three miles from the crash site. But the Navy focused its search 30 miles away on Glass Mountain. The Navy stuck to the Glass Mountain theory, even to the point of putting it on Capt. Ginsberg's death certificate.

A Navy spokesman told us the official search was thorough and that the wreckage could not be seen from the air.

The Navy should thank Mrs. Ginsberg. Until she found the F-18, it was the only military jet lost inside the United States in the past 10 years.

If the Navy found the plane, why was it kept a secret? It may have something to do with chronic mechanical problems in F-18s, including sporadic engine fires. Three more F-18s crashed after Capt. Ginsberg's illfated flight. Five months after his death the Navy shelved half of the Pacific Fleet's F-18s for work on engines with more than 800 hours flying time. One of Capt. Ginsberg's engines had 1,482 hours, the other 955 hours. Officially, the Navy says an F-18 fire has never killed anyone.

A top Navy official, who asked not to be identified, told us Capt. Ginsberg made a dumb mistake and dipped down out of the clouds for better visibility. That explanation bothers another F-18 pilot who had flown with Capt. Ginsberg for more than 100 hours and called him, "real cautious."

The Navy is still identifying remains taken from the rubble. The Ginsbergs and the Muellers hope to have it all sorted out by May 20 so they can bury their men on the second anniversary of the crash.

"It bothers me to feel I have been lied to," Mrs. Ginsberg told us. "I want to know why. I guess I feel it's going to help with the grieving process. Until I have answers I don't know what I'm dealing with."

PAN AM DILEMMA — The Central Intelligence Agency is conducting a massive investigation into the bombing of Pan Am flight 103, but the closer the CIA gets, the less government officials like what they see. They are uneasy over evidence linking the bombing to Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini and Syria's President Hafez al-Assad. The officials don't know how to retaliate against either without taking the risk of inflaming the Middle East.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The U.S. attempt to freeze Manuel Noreiga out of power is a bust. One year ago, American companies in Panama were ordered by President Reagan to withold taxes from Noreiga. The idea was to break the dictator. It hasn't worked and now the companies are whining because they are losing friends in Panama. Noreiga has become a monumental embarrassment to Washington, but this is no time to back off on the economic sanctions. The power of the purse strings is the best leverage the United States has, even if private companies have to suffer a little discomfort.

Love's in the air down produce aisle!

NEW YORK — This is a city of strangers.

Apartment dwellers often live in a building for a decade without knowing more than one or two neighbors. Offices are somewhat better for getting acquainted, but that is only because people are thrown together at work.

Jack Casserly

In spring, where do young hearts turn for love?

The supermarket.

That's the wisdom of oldtime New Yorkers. The supermarket is one of the best places in the city to find romance. To say nothing of a good head of lettuce.

Go to the produce section. People linger there longer. They touch the vegetables. They weigh the fruits. They talk.

Don't bother with the paper goods section. It's a waste of time. How can you strike a romantic chord talking about paper towels and toilet paper?

Look for someone who buys interesting items. That's a good indication that he or she has savoir faire. How about a mango? Or a special Chinese sauce? Ask about it. Write down slicing or cooking instructions. And get the phone number — for further instructions, of course.

One young yuppie described how she met her dream — imported cookies. Right there in his cart, on top of his Perdue chicken — no chemicals added! The cookies were from romantic Italy.

She had been to Italy. Had he been to Italy? Cookies made in Perugia. She had been to Perugia. Could they talk about this over an espresso down the block?

Smile. That's the ticket to talking with people. We've all gone to Smile School, if only while licking our ice cream. Shoppers like smiles. Like soft, mellow music. Hum along, look alive, be happy. The odds are that, at least once a month, a good-looking guy or gal will smile back. And then, whoopee!

Look for someone who is buying for one. A couple of apples, a half-pound of hamburger meat, lots of TV dinners and cans of soup. Nevertheless, check for a wedding band. There could be a wife, away plotting with the mother-in-law.

Whatever you do, don't try to meet someone who buys cheap ice cream. That's a big no-no. Watery ice cream is a sure sign of a cheapskate. This is a guy who would offer dinner and then take you out for a pizza. He would also probably smoke cheap cigars.

Look out for the dame who is all dolled up with no place to go except the market. She is too good for this crummy joint and is a put-down artist. This doll is a show-off. Better you should shut up already and go home alone to bisquits and hot cocoa.

Never socialize with the help. Not even if she's good looking. She is there to save time, not make time. And she has met a hundred guys who have already told her how efficient she is at stocking those shelves and ringing up those sales. She is watching the clock — not you.

Whatever you do, don't force-flirt. Men will think you're just another ripe tomato. They will treat you like a rotten banana. Be natural, like a mid-summer peach.

If you need a change of luck, remember that there are supermarkets and SUPERmarkets where the elite meet to greet. These fancier markets offer gourmet food for thought. It's sometimes easier to strike up a chat over vichyssoise from France than chicken broth from Flatbush.

Your food bill will climb by at least 20 percent, but you'll be rubbing elbows with six-figure executives and their smooth secretaries. And, who knows, it may take just one spark to ride into cupid's sunset in a Cadillac.

One thing is certain about finding love in New York supermarkets. You have to shop around because a lot of merchandise is very over-priced.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

When in doubt, fellows, leer with caution!

A reader sent along an intriguing article from a newspaper in Toronto. The headline read: "Professor Banned from Pool for Leering."

Lewis Grizzard

It seems that Professor Richard Hummel of the University of Toronto has been banned for five years from a campus swimming pool after being found guilty of sexual harassment by a campus review board.

A female student charged that Professor Hummel tailed her while she was swimming laps in the pool and leered at her through his snorkel mask.

When she attempted to get away from him, the student said, he would use his flippers to swim faster and catch up with her.

She added that other women who used the pool were extremely bothered by the professor, and, "We feel objectified and victimized by his degrading behavior."

Professor Hummel, according to the article, defended himself, saying, "I do not consider that I leer. But I certainly observe women. I enjoy women and I photograph women."

A petition signed by 29 individuals was posted in the men's locker room supporting Professor Hummel. The petition stated, "Looking, by any name, in itself, does not constitute sexual harassment in a free environment of recreational activity. Indeed, a cat may look upon a king."

What we have here is another instance of a modern dilemma. Women have fought back hard against sexual harassment as a major step in achieving complete liberation.

But all Professor Hummel did was look, and after all, the pool was not for females only.

Having said that, I must also say I've decided not to take a firm stand in behalf of either side. The last time I did something like that was regarding an incident in which a man patted a woman wearing tight bluejeans on her backside at a laundromat and was arrested for it.

I wrote that the man was wrong in doing that, but I added if a woman didn't want her backside patted in a laundromat, it probably would behoove her to wear her husband's old army fatigues and not tight-fitting jeans.

The feminine wrath that rained down upon me was of an awesome nature.

"You're saying if a woman is raped, she's asking for it," said about 475,000 irate letters.

That's not what I said at all, but I learned you don't fool around with women about such matters.

All I have to say about the Toronto incident is that if somebody stares at you long enough it certainly can be menacing.

On the other hand, some of the swimsuits women wear in public today do make it difficult for a man not to leer.

You saw the Sports Illustrated annual swimsuit issue. Little bitty bikinis with hardly anything in front and a strand of dental floss in the back.

If a woman shows up at the pool or at the beach dressed like that she should expect some measure of leering that she has brought upon herself.

But use some common sense, guys. Stare with only one eye. Stare for short periods of time only. And do not whistle, howl, bark, nor make rooster sounds, nor try to touch.

But regardless of how hard I have attempted to tiptoe through this, saying women who appear mostly naked in public are asking for leering may get me into serious trouble again.

Am I still the dirty, rotten sexist pig I was before? I'm sure the phone and the mail will soon have an answer.

Israel victimized by propaganda assault

Agitprop, or agitation-propaganda actions, are as old as man, and certainly a prominent factor in 20th-century life, but people in and out of government act as if they have never seen nor heard of them.

Witness the clamor for Israel to do something to stop the troubles in the occupied territories.

What is happening in the West Bank and Gaza is not a general uprising but a carefully orchestrated agitation-propaganda campaign. The reason the Israelis cannot do anything to ease tensions is that the people running it are not demanding anything.

They aren't asking to have the schools re-opened, or to be granted autonomy, or to have local elections, or to have greater amounts of money spent on infrastructure. If they were, it would have been over a long time ago. It was the Israelis who helped build the schools, encouraged local elections, and have been waiting for some Palestinian to discuss autonomy measures for the past 11 years. Paradoxically, Palestinians have been far better treated by Israeli occupation government than they were by Egyptian and Jordanian governments when those two countries controlled Gaza and the West Bank respectively.

The purpose of the agitprop campaign is to convince Western democracies to force Israel to unilaterally withdraw from the territories without a single concession from the Arab countries.

Israel, remember, for 19 years did not occupy the West Bank or Gaza. For 19 years, there was no talk of autonomy, just talk of destroying pre-1967 Israel. Those territories were captured, just as we captured Okinawa, in response to a war of aggression by Syria, Jordan, and Egypt.

It has long been the custom and recognized by so-called international law that territory captured in the process of defending yourself remains occupied until its disposition is decided in the course of peace negotiations.

When Egypt finally came to the table and made peace, Israel gave back the Sinai, a huge area of extraordinary value in terms of strategic space and oil, captured in the 1967 war.

What the PLO, Jordan, and Syria demand is that Israel withdraw from the other territories without getting even a piece of paper pledging peace. Israel will no more do that than we would have returned Okinawa to the Japanese without a peace treaty.

Suppose World War II in the Pacific had ended in a cease-fire with the fascist government of Japan still in control of the mainland. Suppose they then demanded that before they would even discuss the possibility of peace talks, the U.S. had to unilaterally abandon all territory captured in response to their attack on Pearl Harbor.

Well, we wouldn't even consider such an absurd proposal and no American should ask Israel to do so either.

Time and time again, when moderate Palestinians have stepped forward, the PLO has shot them down. Not long ago, Elias Frej, mayor of Bethlehem, had the courage to suggest that Palestinians cool it for a couple of months. Yasir Arafat's instant response: threaten Frej with assassination.

By using one of their favorite tactics — putting children in harm's way — the PLO hopes to propagandize Western public opinion. And given the absence of memory, the ignorance of even recent history, the superficiality and sensationalism of television, it is succeeding.

Israel, however, is not the villain of this episode. It remains a democratic, humane government struggling to find peace in an area where vicious fanatics use blood, fear and death to guarantee there won't be any.

Car dealer, government clerk to testify in North trial rebuttal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A used car dealer and a federal employee who handled Oliver North's expenses were being brought in as witnesses to shore up the prosecution claim that North misspent money intended for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The witnesses were summoned to rebut testimony North gave during his six days on the witness stand in U.S. District Court. The last of those six days was Thursday, when the defense rested its case.

The suburban Washington used car dealer sold North a heavy duty station wagon in 1985 for $8,038. Under cross-examination from prosecutor John Keker, North said he helped pay for the GMC Suburban out of a $15,000 fund he kept in a metal box bolted to a closet floor at his house.

North paid off the $3,038 balance on the $8,038 vehicle four days after making the down payment. Keker asked North whether he got $3,000 in cash that day from Richard Secord, whose office is a mile or two from the car lot in Virginia.

North said he got "a lot of money from Gen. Secord on a lot of occasions" and didn't remember that particular day.

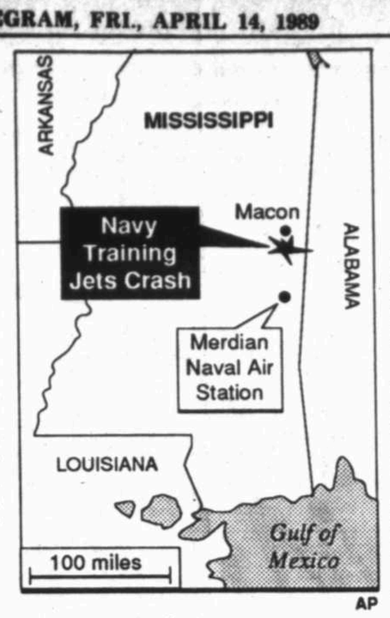

North had enlisted Secord to run arms secretly to the Contras, and North replenished a fund kept in an office safe with $150,000 to $200,000 in cash from Secord, a co-defendant in the Iran-Contra affair.

The prosecution is calling the former National Security Council employee who reimbursed some of North's travel expenses, to reinforce the charge that North converted to his own use $4,300 in travelers checks from Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

North maintains he used the checks to reimburse himself for out-of-pocket costs. In question are more than $2,000 in expenses for which North sought reimbursement from the government after paying for business trips with travelers checks.

Calero gave North travelers checks to help the Contras and the Iran arms initiative and over time, $90,000 to $100,000 from Calero was funneled through North's office safe.

North faces 12 charges, including lying to Congress and obstructing a presidential inquiry.

Two pilots die in crash of Navy training jets

MACON, Miss. (AP) — Two Navy training jets collided Thursday and crashed in rural east-central Mississippi, killing a student pilot and his instructor. Two other pilots ejected and parachuted to the ground.

Navy officials did not say how the crash occurred, but said an investigation has begun. There was one student and one instructor aboard each of the T-2C Buckeye jets, used to train Navy and Marine pilots.

The dead were identified as Lt.j.g. Jerome Reese Schuchart, 28, of Seattle, and Ensign Duane James Hofhine, 23, of Cedarburg, Wis.

Schuchart was Hofhine's flight instructor, according to Navy Petty Officer Dave McBride of the Meridian Naval Air Station.

The survivors were identified as Lt. Terry Lynn Tuggle of Aurora, Colo., an instructor, and Ensign Bruce Hart Szymanski of Fredonia, N.Y., his student.

Tuggle and Szymanski ejected from their plane as the two aircraft collided over rural Noxubee County. McBride said both were in satisfactory condition at Noxubee General Hospital in Macon, a few miles north of the crash site.

Witnesses said one plane, apparently in which the two fatalities occurred, went down in a wooded area just off U.S. 45.

Confessions bill's passage pleases officers

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Senate approval of a law to allow secret taping of defendants' confessions by police was applauded Wednesday by law enforcement representatives.

The bill would change the law so that oral statements made by an accused person — including confessions — could be electronically recorded without advising the person. The statements could be introduced at trial.

The recording would have to include a warning of the accused person's legal rights — the "Miranda" warning routinely given at the time of arrest and before questioning.

Officers now can record a defendant's statement, but the person must be told it is being taped and say so on the recording. The new law would allow an investigator to record statements secretly.

"Texas has been the only state in the nation that has not allowed officers to testify to an in-custody or jailhouse confession by the defendant," said District Attorney Al Schorre.

"Some legislators have been reluctant to allow that, to go that far. This is a compromise, a definite step in the right direction, although Texas should allow for all confessions backed by law officers' testimony."

Recordings currently allowed are of little use as evidence during criminal trials because "the defendant knows it is going on," Schorre said.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. J.E. Brown of Lake Jackson, has its opponents, who have dubbed it the "tricky cop bill."

Sen. Bob Glasgow of Stephenville found the bill objectionable during debate Thursday.

"Why in the world do we have to have a gimmick in an oral confessions bill that police can trick people into making statements?" Glasgow asked. "Why can't they just be absolutely flat bones with them?

"It's not fair, it's not right, and it's not just."

Brown countered: "I don't agree with you that it is designed to trick people."

Schorre had a ready answer for criticism of the bill, and insisted an even stronger bill was necessary.

"Some members of the Legislature are folks who practice defense law when they are not at the Legislature," the prosecutor said.

"This will definitely be an improvement over what we have had. A lot of people will give a statement, but they are reluctant to give a tape-recorded statement.

"Our local experience has been they will give you a written statement rather than a tape-recorded statement. The chances of getting a confession or evidence will be even better now that you can record without their knowledge."

Billy Ray, head of the Midland police investigative services division, said he was pleased with news of the passage.

"I think anything like that will certainly give us a boost," Ray said.

The prohibition against using defendant statements has been a problem for law enforcement "forever," Ray added.

Several years ago, a suspect in a murder case had given police a written confession, but refused to sign it. Ray said if the proposed law would have been in effect, then investigators could have taped him as he talked about the slaying, and the tape could have been used in court.

"It sure would have helped us," Ray said.

Bill sponsor Brown accepted an amendment by Sen. Craig Washington of Houston that would require authorities to provide the defendant's lawyer with any copy of a recording by no later than 20 days before trial.

The amendment would "create a level playing field," Washington said.

Sen. John Montford of Lubbock told Glasgow "I'm tired of the police being presumed to be bad ... Let's presume that these criminals that are maiming our society are bad."

Professionals back bill to outlaw attempts to take officer's weapon

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland's top law enforcement officers are backing a bill to outlaw any attempt to take a peace officer's weapon.

The bill, which has won preliminary House approval, would make the attempt — or actual theft of the weapon — a third-degree felony.

"This is one of the bills we have been monitoring very closely," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, who serves as vice-chairman of the legislative committee of the Sheriff's Association of Texas.

"Why do we need it? Because now it is not a violation of the law. You have resisting arrest, which is a misdemeanor, and assault, which is a misdemeanor unless the weapon is actually used.

"This bill would make it an automatic felony to even try for" the weapon, Painter said.

"I think it is a good law," Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said. "A person who knowingly or intentionally tries to takes an officer's weapon is a definite threat."

The chief said officers face the problem of weapon retention often.

"It does happen," he said. "It doesn't happen daily, but it does happen."

Czech said he has been kept abreast of the pending bill by a police chiefs' group and the Texas Municipal League.

Some legislators who expressed reservations about the proposal — claiming it could contribute to police brutality — are missing the point, Czech said.

In debate on the bill, one legislator, Rep. Senfronia Thompson of Houston, strongly criticized it.

"You're going to be giving them the right to beat up on people, you're going to be giving them the right to hurt people, you're going to be giving them the right to kill people," she said.

"There are some good officers," she continued. "But there are some officers, when they put that gun on their hip, it changes their whole personality, their attitudes of how to carry out the mandates of their office."

Czech responded: "That is administration's fault, if that happens. But we should not punish all officers for the misbehavior of a few. If a person is trying to take a gun away from an officer, he's got ideas in his mind."

Czech said he "has no idea" if the measure will pass.

Painter said the best weapon retention training can't prepare officers for the inevitable.

Just day makes big difference in area sales tax receipts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

What a difference a day makes.

Midland and Odessa finance directors found that to be the case this month after sales tax receipts came in a combined 26.5 percent lower by comparison to the same reporting period last year.

The monthly figures are lower because merchants collected and reported an extra day's worth of sales taxes in February 1988, which was a leap year.

"We estimated that as much as $1.9 million in sales tax could have been reported statewide for February 29 last year. One day may not seem like much, but it's enough to throw the numbers off," said State Comptroller Bob Bullock in releasing the report this week.

April's checks represent taxes collected by monthly filers in February and reported to the comptroller's office by March 20.

However, Bullock reported that statewide sales tax rebates for the first four months of 1989 were up 13.4 percent over last year's tax allocations for the same period.

"The economy is in good shape," Bullock said, attributing the remark to what's being reflected in state and local sales tax collections.

Last year's sales tax rebates through April were up 6.5 percent over the 1987 figures for the same period, while 1987 allocations through April actually fell 6.3 percent compared to the same period in 1986, Bullock reported.

Checks totaling $57.2 million were sent to 902 cities that collect local sales tax at either one or 1½ percent.

In Midland, Bullock reported sales tax receipts of $434,046 for April compared to $528,645 in April last year. Despite the 17.8 percent drop in April's allocations, the Tall City's total for the year-to-date climbed to $2,576,059.

Odessa's check of $379,113 this month fell 8.6 percent from the $414,891 received in April of last year. However, totals for the year-to-date jumped .02 percent, from $2,165,263 in 1987 to $2,165,602.

Another $5.7 million was allocated to 91 counties that collect the one-half cent sales tax, the state comptroller reported.

Midland County, which began collecting a half-cent sales tax in January 1987, garnered .05 percent more from this month's check in comparison to the same reporting period last year.

April's check amounted to $253,241, bringing the county's year-to-date total to $1.3 million.

Other West Texas cities sustained losses in sales tax receipts.

Students excel in language of romance

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A group of Trinity School students is one of the best in the West, although what the youngsters excel at has its roots on the other side of the globe.

Studying something French citizens probably know well — their own language — about 65 Trinity seventh through 10th graders recently have made an impression at national and regional competitions.

Taught by their energetic instructor, Richard Catania, the mostly junior high-age students bested many of their West Texas high school peers in an April 7 competition in San Angelo. Competing against high schoolers from throughout the region, the students took second-place sweepstakes.

In the regional round in early March of the American Association of Teachers of French contest of reading and listening skills, Trinity seventh graders placed seven in the top nine and took first through fourth places.

"This is the best class I ever had," said Catania, a six-year Trinity instructor.

Eleven other Trinity students also placed in their respective grade levels in competition between 734 students from 18 schools.

"I've had winners in the past, but this is probably the best results so far," Catania said. "We're teaching French earlier so we're getting winners at higher levels.

"It's very encouraging for us. There's a tremendous interest in the French culture and the French language. It's a tradition at Trinity School to learn French."

Trinity offers full French classes in seventh through 10th grades and limited instruction in the earlier levels.

Catania said he teaches French by provoking students into thinking about the language and the culture.

"You make them speak nothing but French," he said of ninth- and 10th-grade classes. "I tell them not to speak a word of English to me."

All but one year for the past six years Catania has set up a field trip where his students travel to France and stay with one of his friends or relatives.

"A monument will not teach the culture and the language — the people will," Catania said, adding that he hopes to set up an exchange student program with a sister school in France.

Seventh-grader Premila Singh, 13, who took first place at the American Association of Teachers of French, said the main reason she got into French was because she didn't like Spanish.

Ryan Epley, 13, a seventh grader who placed second in the contest, said his decision to study French had nothing to do with the language.

"I like the country France more than Spain and Mexico," Epley said, adding that studying France also is more romantic.

Third-place seventh-grade finisher Greg Landreth, 12, simply said learning French is fun.

ED TODD

Romance can be an adventure that excites euphoria

Isn't romance simply wonderful?

Todd

Romance is a delight — an adventure. An adventure may be a romance excited by danger and reward: mountain climbing, deep-sea diving, flying, hiking through McKintrick Canyon, swaggering down Champs Elysees, racing, rafting down the Rio Grande, cruising in New Orleans, and courting just about anywhere.

It may be as mesmerizing as savoring the Louvre Museum and the Smithsonian Institution. Though more on the mundane front, you could make an adventure out of cultivating a garden in your backyard. Could you not have romantic affectations for a rose garden, a field of wildflowers, the spectacular heavenly lights, the magnificent oceans, a view of other worlds through a powerful electronic microscope?

Romance can make the heart sing.

Sometimes it's a drunken song. Sometimes it's sweet, and, at other times, bittersweet.

Now, the romance which the world seems to most favor but with which the world should be most particularly and discerning is this aura called "romantic attraction," "romantic involvement," "meaningful romantic relationship."

That kind of romance, which seduces youth, the middle-aged and the oldsters, carries with it excitement and anticipation. It creates euphoria — a sense of well-being that has been somewhat de-romanticized by scientists who chemically explain the wonderment with such terms as "endorphins" and "opioid." The morphine-like chemicals act on the brain and, if things go well, induce the affected ones to imagine that they are waltzing without care in a palatial setting and imbibing the nectar of the mythological gods.

That's popular love — the romanticized love of which many American songs and movies allude to.

■ "Falling In Love Is Wonderful." Indeed. But after the fall, the lovers must recover, get up, dust themselves off, and reassess life and themselves.

■ "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now." Wondering who begs wondering why.

■ "Lament To Love." Much ado was made over the harvest moon, a tender kiss, the ecstasy of it all, the promises to be true, the crumbling dreams, the wondering why, and "I wished upon a star, but I reached too far."

■ "Here's To Romance." Be moderate. Not enough is not enough. Too much is too much.

■ "Lovesick Blues" and "Your Cheating Heart (Will Tell on You)." Oh, the pain and pangs of it all are sought again and again by those ill-fated lovers for whom love is an elusive thing.

■ "Noh Dimenticar." Don't forget, say the lyrics, that love is like a star shining bright and clear. And the question the grown-up child asks is: "Those shooting stars? Do they really fall?"

■ "Only You (And You Alone)," "I'll Get By (As Long As I Have You)" and "Yearning Just for You (That's All I Do, My Dear)." Alas! There is none other.

■ "The Breeze and I." And a "strange, mournful tune."

■ "I'm Looking Over A Four-Leaf Clover," "Ain't She Sweet," "Body and Soul," "Zing! Went The Strings Of My Heart," "When My Dreamboat Comes Home," and "Too Marvelous For Words." Keep the dream alive.

■ "You're My Everything." More or less.

■ "Am I Blue?" and "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." Yes, but don't forget.

■ "Of Thee I Sing." Gershwin and Gershwin romanticized "the dream girl" who became the lover's "silver lining," "sky of blue," "shining star" and "inspiration" worthy of praise and adoration.

■ "Embraceable You." How sweet it is if only for awhile, but sweet nevertheless.

Who knows? With a little luck, love from heaven and a day's work over and over, that sweetheart spirit could last.

The old Bard, William Shakespeare, affixed an if to the type of romance that's not about climbing mountains and skydiving: "If music be the food of love, play on."

Life, even in the old hometown, should have at least a pinch of adventure.

GUN

"You can do all kinds of training, but you still have crazy people on the street that will try to take an officer's gun," he said.

The sheriff also sang a familiar tune as he blamed overcrowding in the state prison system for the number of ex-convicts on the street — ex-cons that could end up confronting officers.

"There are more felons on the street because there is no deterrent effect in our penitentiary," Painter said.

The bill was prompted by the death of Suzanne Kays, a Dallas County deputy sheriff who was disarmed and fatally shot in January, according to the bill's sponsor, Rep. Bill Blackwood of Mesquite.

In January 1988, Dallas police officer John Chase was killed on a downtown street by a mentally ill vagrant who had grabbed Chase's gun.

Although killing an officer is a different offense, Blackwood said, it still is dangerous for someone to attempt to disarm an officer.

County Attorney Mark Dettman, who carried a weapon for two years as a U.S. Postal Service inspector, also backed the bill and blasted critics of the bill.

"I think we definitely need it," Dettman said. "Anybody that gets into an altercation with a peace officer has stepped over the edge. If they take a weapon, it is an extremely dangerous situation not only to the officer but anyone else."

Dettman dismissed any suggestion that passage of the bill would encourage police brutality.

"Police officers are already trying to fight crime with one hand tied behind their back," he said. "I think legislators that want to attempt to tie both hands behind their back don't have any business serving in our Legislature."

Clements gets tasteless greeting

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements received a humorous and intentionally tasteless 72nd birthday greeting from the Texas House Thursday as about 50 lawmakers donned pitiful parodies of the governor's trademark plaid jackets.

"I can understand now, looking at some of these sport coats, why y'all wear dark blue all the time," said Clements, who was himself wearing a bright blue and gold plaid jacket.

The governor gave his "worst jacket" award to Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who had turned a white silk jacket into plaid with the help of packaging tape.

"Is that Ron Wilson up there or an unclaimed United Parcel Service package?" asked Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont.

However, Rep. Jerry Yost, R-Longview, challenged Wilson in the bad jacket category by wearing an electric-blue sport coat with black velvet lapels.

"I've got a '57 Chevy in the parking lot," Yost joked.

VFW, MPD sponsors bike safety program

From Staff Reports

Mayor Carroll Thomas has signed a proclamation urging parents and children "to participate in safety programs" as part of Safe Kids Week.

Reflective tape will be applied in a "Lite-a-Bike" program to be conducted Saturday by the Veterans of Foreign War, Tall City Post 7208 and the Ladies Auxiliary, at 1306 E. Taylor St. Hours are from 10 a.m. to noon.

VFW members and Sgt. Lalo Camarillo and Officer Ron Sartor of the Midland Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit, will apply the tape and check bicycles for proper equipment, including horns, signaling devices, head lights and reflectors.

In addition, the police department will register bicycles and issue tag numbers that will be kept on file at police headquarters.

Children who are unable to afford the $2 fee may present a parent's driver's license in order to mark their bicycles at no charge.

Police officers also will conduct a driving skills obstacle course and distribute certificates to each rider who completes the training session. A bicycle will be given away afterward.

Camarillo stressed the importance of attaching reflective tape to bicycles, especially if children are to ride bicycles after dark.

Nationwide statistics show that at least 800 people are killed in bicycle accidents each year — 62 percent of whom are children under the age of 14. In addition, four out of five bicycle accidents occur after dark.

350 of 880 junior high pupils to get measles shots

From Staff Reports

Midland County health officials Monday will attempt to prevent the spread of red measles at San Jacinto Junior High, where a student was diagnosed as having the illness.

About 350 of the school's 880 pupils will be immunized in reaction to the county's most recent case, which brought the measles count to 37, including clinically diagnosed and blood-confirmed cases, administrator Monette Burke said this morning.

It will be the fifth school health officials have mass immunized since measles began appearing in Midland Independent School District schools in February. Students at Midland and Lee high schools, Goddard Junior High School and Jones Elementary School have been inoculated.

Meanwhile, Ector County's measles count hit 64 with the report that an 8-month-old boy contracted the disease, Toby Cross, administrator of the Ector County Health Department, said this morning.

Bill would limit efforts for low-level waste site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reps. John Bryant and Ron Coleman have introduced legislation that would strictly limit Texas' efforts to build a low-level nuclear waste site 11 miles from the U.S.-Mexico border in Hudspeth County.

Under the measure, if a radioactive waste site is proposed within 60 miles of a state or national border, adjacent states and countries must have an opportunity to participate in the siting process, said Coleman, an El Paso Democrat.

The bill would require the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority to give Mexico and New Mexico the chance to participate in the citing decision to locate the dump at Fort Hancock, 50 miles from El Paso.

"The state — in our case, the state of Texas — would be required to furnish all of its studies and justifications to neighboring state governments," Coleman said Thursday after introducing the bill.

The legislation imposes significant restrictions on the ability of states to install low-level nuclear waste dump sites near state and national borders without complying with a wide range of environmental and siting requirements.

Sen. Tom A. Daschle, D-S.D., has legislation in the Senate that would give states a say in the process if a low-level nuclear waste site is to located within 20 miles of their border.

According to Daschle press secretary Mark Ulven, U.S. Ecology is under contract to find a site in Nebraska for a low-level nuclear waste site. The proposed site is five miles from the South Dakota border, in Boyd County, Nebraska.

"We're trying to make sure we have a say in the process," Ulven said. "U.S. Ecology officials say some things stop at the state line, but radioactivity doesn't stop at the state line. We think we ought to be part of the decision-making process, if they put a site this close to the state."

In addition to Coleman and Bryant, a Dallas Democrat, the bill is also being sponsored in the House by Tim Johnson of South Dakota.

Regional archeological societies meet in Midland

The Southwest Federation of Archeological Societies has its 25th annual symposium in Midland this weekend at the Ramada Hotel, 3100 West Wall St.

The federation is made up of eight amateur archeological societies in the Panhandle and West Texas regions, including the Amarillo and El Paso societies.

At 8 p.m. tonight, there is a reception for federation members and the public at the Early Plainsmen Exhibit in the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

From 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, eight papers on archeological subjects ranging from Paleo-Indians to the historic period will be presented. Each presentation will be approximately 30 minutes long and is free and open to the public.

At the 8 p.m. banquet Saturday, Dr. George C. Frison will talk about Paleo-Indian sites in Wyoming. Frison, an archaeology professor at the University of Wyoming, has excavated numerous sites in that state and has published more than 70 articles on the archeology of Wyoming and the Northwestern Plains.

Frison is a former president of the Society for American Archeology, as well as a former research associate in the Department of Anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution. His honors include the Asa Hill Award for Outstanding Archeological Research and Interpretation on the Plains, in 1975, and the George Duke Humphrey Distinguished Faculty Award in 1985.

There is a $5 charge to hear Frison's address, which does not include the banquet dinner.

Baker backs plan to clean up Rio Grande

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III says he supports a $44 million plan to clean up raw sewage pollution of the Rio Grande, which one lawmaker says is so dirty downstream from Laredo it's unsafe to even touch.

"It is vitally important," Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican, told Baker during a Senate appropriations hearing Thursday. "So far as I am aware, it is the worst pollution problem in North America."

During questioning by Gramm, Baker said the Bush administration is behind a request to spend $7.5 million in next year's budget toward building a sewage treatment plant on the river at Laredo-Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

Gramm told Baker it was "only a matter of time" before the river pollution causes a public health crisis. Five miles below Laredo-Nuevo Laredo, the level of pollution is 1,400 times higher than is safe for contact with human skin.

"And we're not talking about drinking the water," Gramm said, "we're talking about touching it. Now the problem is, people on the Mexican side are drinking out of the river. ... The pollution problem comes primarily from the dumping of human sewage into the river on the Mexican side."

Baker said he was considering putting a portion of the $7.5 million into a supplemental appropriations bill, allowing the cleanup to be accelerated because the money could be spent before fiscal 1990 begins in October.

"This is obviously good news for all Texans and citizens of Mexico that live on the Rio Grande," Gramm said in an interview.

"As the population is growing on both sides of the river we face a growing threat from pollution. If it is not dealt with we ultimately face threats to economic development, tourism and public health."

Congress last year approved legislation authorizing the State Department, acting through the International Boundary and Water Commission, to negotiate with Mexico to clean up the Rio Grande.

The river is polluted by discharges of industrial waste and raw sewage totaling tens of millions of gallons a day. Downstream from Laredo and Nuevo Laredo is considered the most polluted stretch of river.

Since the bill's passage last year, the boundary and water commission worked out an agreement with Mexico for a jointly funded, $44 million clean up at Nuevo Laredo, which has no treatment plant for the city's sewage, Gramm's office said.

Under the plan, Texas would spend $2 million, Mexico $22 million, and the federal government would spend $20 million, Gramm said.

President Reagan's last budget request to Congress recommended $7.5 million be appropriated next year for initial construction of a sewage plant at Nuevo Laredo-Laredo.

TAXES

Andrew's payment of $39,880 came in 3.4 percent lower than the $41,310 received in April 1988. That brings the city in at $195,041 for the year-to-date.

Big Spring's check of $69,685 this month reflected a 14.7 percent decline in allocations from last year's payment of $81,704. So far this year, the city has received a total of $434,057 in sales tax checks.

A $3,643 check sent to the city of Stanton represented a .69 percent drop in allocations from the $3,669 received in April 1988. That brings the city in at $18,978 for the year-to-date.

However, Lamesa garnered 27.1 percent more in sales tax rebates this month with a check amounting to $31,123, compared to $24,471 in April of last year. The city's year-to-date total presently stands at $177,361.

Senate revises fees in crime victim compensation bill

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Petty misdemeanor defendants would bear a greater share of injury compensation for crime victims under bills the Senate approved Thursday.

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, noted the irony that persons convicted of Class C misdemeanors, such as traffic tickets, would pay an additional $2 to the fund that compensates victims of violent crimes, raising their court fees to $5, but Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, sponsor of the bills, said an increase in court costs for people convicted of felonies and more serious misdemeanors would not raise enough money to keep up with the increasing demand.

The increase in fees in Senate Bill 358 would generate an additional $4.8 million annually for the fund, which in 1988 paid $1.2 million more in benefits than it received from court costs for felony and misdemeanor cases.

Senate Bill 359 also increased the maximum weekly benefits by $50, to $200, for lost wages due to crimes and for survivors of murder victims.

Both bills go to the House of Representatives.

The Industrial Accident Board administers the fund, which helped 3,938 victims of crime in 1988 but was in danger of running out of money without the fee increase, Zaffirini said. The average benefit is $4,466.

The fund is expected to reach $19 million in 1990, including approximately $6 million in federal money.

In other action, parents could keep teachers from paddling their children under a bill the Texas Senate approved.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, sponsor of Senate Bill 20, said corporal punishment shows students that violence is an acceptable way to control situations.

Sen. Bill Haley, D-Center, an opponent of the bill, argued that teachers need the threat of paddling as the "ultimate punishment" to enforce classroom discipline.

In other action the Senate voted Thursday to confirm Durward O. Wright of Midland County and Bill D. Hicks of Ector County to the Texas County and District Retirement System Board of Trustees and Robert Lee Monaghan of Midland County to the State Depository Board.

Wright was reappointed to the retirement system board in January and Hicks was appointed in February for terms to expire Dec. 31, 1993. Monaghan was reappointed in October 1987 to the depository board for a term to expire Aug. 22, 1989.

House tentatively OKs recycling bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to encourage recycling by requiring that plastic containers be marked with a symbol indicating the resins of which they are made was tentatively approved by the Texas House.

The bill, which has been strongly supported by Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, would subject anyone who failed to label plastic containers to a $500 fine for each violation.

Plastic bottles of 16 fluid ounces to 5 gallons would be covered by the bill given preliminary House approval Thursday, as would rigid plastic containers of 8 ounces to 5 gallons.

The requirement would apply to plastic containers manufactured or distributed on or after July 1, 1991.

In other action, the House tentatively approved a bill to continue the Natural Fibers and Food Protein Commission until Sept. 1, 2001, and to rename it the Texas Food and Fibers Commission.

The commission's purpose is stated in the measure as contracting for university research on increased use of cotton, oilseed products, wool, mohair and other textile products.

Giving fraternity probation response to public outrage, president says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The president of a Trinity University fraternity said he is disappointed with the school's decision for probation because the decision was made before the facts were presented.

Peter Sturdivant of the Triniteers fraternity said the atmosphere on campus may have forced Dean of Students Coleen Grissom to react to the incident in a different way.

"I think the decision was not made in response to our specific incident, but the public outcry of racism on our campus," Sturdivant said. "It became the kind of thing where she (Ms. Grissom) was put in a hard place as an administrator and she acted not so much to save Trinity, but to make it look better."

The Triniteers social fraternity was placed on a year's probation yesterday, ordered to sponsor a workshop on racism and required to have members each perform 25 hours community work for violating the school's hazing policy.

The 36-member fraternity, founded in 1936, is being punished for asking a Jewish pledge to dress in a Nazi uniform and parade through a campus cafeteria.

Ms. Grissom issued a list of sanctions against the fraternity, as well as a position statement on fraternities, sororities and racism.

"After careful reflection, I am convinced that the Triniteers, in the incident involving Andrew Ellenthal's wearing of a Nazi uniform, violated the Trinity University Hazing Policy," Ms. Grissom said in a prepared statement.

"While Mr. Ellenthal claims that he did not resist the wearing of the uniform, and, in fact, asserts that the selection of a Nazi uniform was partially his idea, my judgment is that, within the context of pledging, such claims and assertions are suspect."

Sturdivant said that the wearing of any uniform or costume does not violate the hazing policy at Trinity. "Even after the state law was passed (in 1987), we continued to do it; and had it approved."

Ms. Grissom said she believed Ellenthal was pressured "to don a uniform which was demeaning, humiliating, that adversely affected his dignity."

About 150 students rallied at the campus yesterday in support of "anti-racism."

"If I ever wanted an excuse to stamp out fraternities and sororities at Trinity University, I have it now," Ms. Grissom wrote. "And, I don't even have to do it myself: I can simply ask any faculty colleague to bring the issue to a vote of the faculty and ask Ben Hughes (president of the student body) to conduct a referendum of the student body. I am not positive ... but I would wager that both votes would be: Greeks, Go."

Sturdivant agreed: "The way things are right now, I couldn't disagree."

Ms. Grissom ordered the Triniteers on probation through May 15, 1990, restricting them from recruiting or accepting new members, but allowing them to continue participating in the Inter-Fraternity Council, hold meetings, participate in intramurals and sponsor social events.

Lawmaker backs Northern Ireland anti-discrimination bill

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A San Antonio lawmaker said Thursday he will push for passage of a bill that would require state investment fund managers to consider whether companies that operate in Northern Ireland discriminate on the basis of religion.

Rep. Ciro Rodriguez, D-San Antonio, said House Bill 1847, which is due for a hearing in the State Affairs Committee, would encourage companies to follow the McBride Principles in their dealings with Northern Ireland.

Discrimination based upon religion is a daily occurrence in the violence-plagued province, he said at a Capitol press conference, as Catholics are 2½ times more likely to be jobless than Protestants. Catholics also are more likely to have low-paid jobs, such as construction and common labor, he said.

The principles put forward by the late Sean McBride, a Nobel laureate, "embody American standards and traditions of equal rights, equal opportunity and equal justice for all," Rodriguez said.

Companies that operate in Northern Ireland would have to report their compliance annually under the bill.

He added that, unlike legislation to withdraw American investment in South Africa, his bill would encourage investment in companies that follow those principles.

FAMILY MATTERS

Mother-in-law needs to be told her boundaries

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I are in our late 20s, have been married 10 years and are expecting our first child in late May. My mother-in-law, a first-time grandmother from another state, insists on moving in with us in late April. She plans to "visit" until the baby is two or three weeks old (this will be about two months) to help me.

Neither my husband nor I can get along well with her for more than three or four days at a time. She is bossy, nosey, unsupportive, interfering and extremely critical. She thinks that I don't cook nutritious meals and that I'm killing us with fat and calories. Neither of us have gained more than 10 pounds since our wedding. We exercise three times a week or more, eat no high caloric desserts and only snack on fresh fruits and vegetables, with rare exceptions.

She says we don't know how to manage our money. We just purchased a (expensive) home, and have a moderate savings account and rarely "want" for anything. I don't even work outside our home. She has squandered a sizeable inheritance after quitting her job and has one dilapidated car to drive and lives in a dumpy apartment.

Her idea of "help" is to sit in my rocking chair watching television from sunup to midnight and direct me on the right way to clean house. She tells me how to dust, mop and vacuum, and when each should be done. According to her, windows should be washed weekly and since I don't work, I should care for the yard.

She, on the other hand, when visiting us does not make her own bed, empty her ashtrays, pick up her dirty clothes or towels, and leaves a mess for me every time she makes a sandwich in the kitchen. In 10 years, she has cooked less than three meals for us, and never washed a dish or done a load of laundry.

This kind of "help" wears me out on every (twice annual) week-long visit. It causes a huge problem between myself and my husband because I dread the visit and am in tears and exhausted when she finally leaves. How can I/we tell her she is welcome for a short visit and both of us keep our sanity from her unwanted, interfering advice?

I'm already a nervous wreck and she's not even coming for three weeks! AT WITS END

DEAR AT WITS END: Let's first look at the challenge of a new baby. The first baby typically creates problems in a home because no one really knows what to do. This new "bundle of joy" is not always the sweet, happy infant we expected. Complicating things, men tend to treat a birth as a single event, and then look at getting on with life.

A "first time" baby is rarely a treat. You and your husband should prepare yourselves for the most difficult 60 to 90 days of your lives. New babies are often difficult; they cry a lot and frequently. A new mother, worn out from the delivery and concerned about her "mothering," often experiences a lot of negative feelings about herself. A new father, fresh from a wonderful event, often is ready to move on to the next challenge.

A loving, helpful mother or mother-in-law is a blessing, who can help soothe those feelings. However, in your case, your mother-in-law only adds to "normal" problems. I suggest you and your husband first decide when his mother can come and how long she can stay. If possible, both of you agree on telling her that her constant criticism is inappropriate and will not be tolerated.

Once the two of you have agreed, call and tell her of your decision and the terms of her visit. Prepare yourselves for a negative response. She will use whatever response has worked in the past (for example, shame, guilt, fear). Don't buy it. She chooses to act as she does, she can choose to act differently. Don't let her terrorize you any longer. That's emotional abuse, pure and simple.

She may not come at all. That's all right. You and your husband must set appropriate boundaries. It's time to end the violation of the sanctity of your marriage.

Clinic uses acupuncture to treat addicts

NEW YORK (AP) — The balding man with the black-and-gray beard leaned his head back with his eyes closed, relaxing, as if in a trance. Three needles protruded from each ear and another was stuck in the top of his head.

Bruce, a 36-year-old alcoholic and cocaine addict, was undergoing what some doctors say is a promising treatment for drug abuse — acupuncture.

Doctors and patients at Lincoln Hospital's clinic say acupuncture helps alcoholics and addicts relax and relieves the craving for drugs. Other doctors say there haven't been enough studies to determine if acupuncture works.

More than 50 centers have been modeled after the South Bronx program, including clinics in the Netherlands, Britain and Nepal, said Dr. Michael O. Smith, Lincoln Hospital's medical director of substance abuse treatment.

Developed more than 2,500 years ago by the Chinese, acupuncture is a technique to relieve pain and stress by inserting needles into specific points on the body that are believed to affect organs and bodily functions.

Lincoln's acupuncture program was begun in 1974 as an alternative to treating heroin addicts with methadone, a synthetic narcotic. Like methadone, acupuncture doesn't cure addiction — it helps patients endure withdrawal.

In addition, the clinic has used acupuncture to treat more than 500 AIDS patients in the past six years. Some reported that the treatment relieved such symptoms of the deadly disease as diarrhea, night sweats and skin rashes.

Like many doctors, Smith initially thought the idea sounded farfetched. "But when we gave the treatment we saw right before our eyes that it relieved the patients' symptoms and made them feel better."

Once the patients have gotten beyond the immediate symptoms of withdrawal, he said, they receive regular counseling at the clinic and are encouraged to attend Alcoholics or Narcotics Anonymous support group meetings.

Western scientists aren't sure how the ancient Eastern therapy works, but some believe the needles prompt the brain to produce endorphins, a natural pain-killer. Others theorize that it may interrupt pain messages sent to the brain.

The American Medical Association last took a position on acupuncture in 1981, calling it "an experimental procedure" that could "provide temporary relief from pain" and deserved further study.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse recently approved a $140,000 grant to study Lincoln's acupunture program.

DEAR ABBY

Young shoplifter ends up playing happier tune

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You have had quite a lot of letters about shoplifting in your column. Here's how I handled a young shoplifter:

A father and his young son came into my music store in Atlanta many years ago.

The father said, "My son wants to return a chromatic harmonica he took from your store."

The son had tears in his eyes. With bowed head he handed me the harmonica.

I asked, "Did you like the harmonica?"

He looked me in the eye and said, "I loved it."

"Do you have a weekly allowance?" I asked. The answer was "yes."

"Would you be willing to bring me a dollar a week until the $13 is paid?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," the boy beamed.

I gave him back the instrument. The father tried to pay for it. I said, "No, it comes from his allowance — starting next week."

The father and son came into my store every Saturday, and the son gave me a dollar until the harmonica was paid in full.

His father thanked me for giving his son a lesson in not stealing. — J.S. RUTAN, BEAVERTON, ORE.

DEAR J.S.: You were exceptionally generous. The father was exceptionally forgiving. And the boy was exceptionally lucky.

DEAR ABBY: Re the guest who had been deliberately kicked by a 4-year-old "bully": You suggested that the guest ask the child why she was kicking her — thereby opening a dialogue. What if the child persisted in kicking her?

My wife and I recently had dinner with a friend and her 3-year-old son at a small pizza place. We ordered a large pizza for all of us to share.

The child started handling the antipasto, taking a piece, putting it back on the plate, trying another, replacing it, etc. He ignored his mother's directives to stop.

I was particularly distressed because the child, who had a cold and a runny nose, kept rubbing his eyes and his nose while sorting through the antipasto!

I asked him to please stop touching the food unless he was going to eat it. He ignored me, so I moved the plate out of his reach and told him that he should not handle food that other people might want to eat.

My wife was very upset with me for having disciplined her friend's child. Could I have handled it better? — IN THE DOGHOUSE IN CLARK, N.J.

DEAR IN: Re your first question concerning the kicker and the kickee: Since the kickee was a grown woman, unless she had the mentality of the 4-year-old kicker, the "dialogue" should have put a stop to the kicking. Re your second question: You could not have handled the little food-handler better. Bravo!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this from a very romantic Hawaiian Island (Maui, to be exact). I am a man on his honeymoon with nothing to do at the moment because my bride is busy writing thank-you notes for our wedding gifts — we must have received more than 200 of them. She's been writing for three hours already.

We are not exactly "over the hill," Abby. I'm 26 and she's 23. What do you make of this situation? When our friends get thank-you notes from a bride on her honeymoon, don't you think they might think something is wrong with her? — TWIDDLING MY THUMBS

DEAR TWIDDLING: No. They might think something is wrong with you. P.S. How about offering to help her? Those gifts are for you, too.

DEAR ABBY: The poem "Present Tense," written by 14-year-old Jason Lehman, was truly a gem. It reminded me of another poem I learned a long time ago. I never did know who wrote it, or if it had a name. It goes like this:

As a rule, man is a fool
When it's hot, he wants it cool
When it's cold, he wants it hot
Always wanting what is not!
— JERRY ARONBERG, CLAYTON, MO.

DEAR ABBY: After a recent divorce, I find it rather awkward introducing my ex-husband to people. We are still good friends and not very well known in this community.

How shall I introduce him to others? "This is my ex-husband" sounds rather degrading. "This is my friend" does not sound right after having been married to him. Any ideas? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: It isn't necessary to inform people who are meeting your ex-husband for the first time that you and he were married to each other. Introduce him by his name — and leave the details of your relationship for another time.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Financial aid important

STORM LAKE, Iowa (AP) — When it comes to understanding financial aid, Martin Gallagher believes that being a part of a big family helps.

He has five brothers and sisters and his older siblings, he says, helped pave the way through the financial aid maze.

"One of my brothers graduated from Buena Vista, and another is a year ahead of me," says Martin, a 19-year-old sophomore whose family recently moved from Strawberry Point, Iowa, to Storm Lake, where Buena Vista is located. "My brother got financial aid, so when I applied to Buena Vista, I figured I'd get it, too."

As a senior in high school, Martin — a good student involved in extracurricular activities — applied to Buena Vista College and the state university. He knew he would need more aid, but he figured it was worth it.

Tuition for the current year is $10,650, including room and board. His parents' estimated contribution was $1,500, based on the number of children either in college or college-bound, and on his parents' annual income of $34,000, including Social Security.

Martin's father is a retired sales manager, and his mother works part-time at Buena Vista and as a substitute teacher.

The school's financial aid office came up with a loan-free package. Martin received a Pell Grant for $1,250, a Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant for $300, an Iowa tuition grant of $2,350, a State of Iowa Scholarship for $600, a Buena Vista Honors Scholarship for $1,400 and a Buena Vista ZZ White Talent Scholar for $1,000. He contributed to his aid package with a work-study job in the college public relations office and other employment.

On his own, Martin applied for and received a $1,000 Scripps-Howard Scholarship, designated for students interested in journalism.

"You can find books that list scholarships according to area of study," says Martin. "A lot of students don't know that these scholarships exist."

Martin says the financial aid process starts as early as high school, by concentrating on getting good grades.

"Lots of high school students don't take school seriously enough," he says. "They don't realize that getting good grades in high school can help you get scholarships for college when you need them."

"It helps to come from a big family," he says. "You're kind of competitive in nature and you get a lot of support."

Gambling may prove addictive

By MARTIN BOOE
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — For 27-year-old John, it started in high school. He loved sports and he loved to bet on the home team. He became a compulsive gambler.

John, who asked that his full name not be used, recalls that it started small, 10- or 20-dollar bets. But by the time he was a senior, he was placing bets of thousands of dollars with several bookies. He bet on all kinds of sports, and he bet on as many as 20 games at the same time.

Even though he was often successful at gambling, "I always bet more than I had," he said. "If I was down $5,000, I would bet $5,000."

Today John, who lives and works in Los Angeles, has conquered his gambling. But his addiction is one that still torments thousands of Americans.

ILLEGAL SPORTS BETTING is now in the limelight because of the controversy brewing over allegations that Pete Rose, baseball star and manager of the Cincinnati Reds, bet illegally on baseball — sometimes on his own team.

Rose's dilemma raises the question: Are more and more "casual" sports bettors crossing the line into compulsion?

"Gambling in general is on the rise, and sports betting has become the most popular form of gambling," said Dr. Richard J. Rosenthal, president of the California Council on Compulsive Gambling and an assistant professor of psychiatry at the UCLA School of Medicine.

Bob, a reformed compulsive gambler on the Gamblers Anonymous Board of Regents, said sports gamblers are making up an increasingly larger part of the organization's membership.

"It's an easy way to get buried very quickly," he said "You can bet about 20 games in one day. I've seen it happen. A guy can get very lucky one week and then blow it all."

A FEW YEARS AGO, before the advent of cable television, the serious gambler stuck to cards, casino games or racehorses. The reason was that good sports information was less readily available than racing odds.

But television has changed all that, experts say. With the proliferation of satellite dishes, constant sports broadcasts on such cable stations as ESPN, and the ready availability of odds and point spreads in many newspapers, sports gambling is more popular than ever.

No one knows how much money changes hands in illegal sports bets each year. But the Nevada State Gaming Commission reports an exponential increase in the volume of legal sports pools. In 1976, the state had 14 sports book operations with total bets of $54.6 million. Last year, the number of books had risen to 71, covering bets totaling more than $1.1 billion.

Not only are more people betting; the bets have gotten larger, too.

"The $10 bet used to be standard," said Dr. Robert Custer, medical director of Charter Hospital's compulsive-gambling treatment unit in Las Vegas. "Now it's $500 for a social gambler. A compulsive gambler is likely to go as high as $50,000 on a single game."

Custer has seen it all. Over the years, he's treated an executive who embezzled $30,000 to pay off a loan shark after a weekend of sports bets went bad.

"A bullet came through his window," Custer recalled. "Then a note that said, 'We got three more bullets: one for your wife, one for your two children.'"

Then there was the college student who embezzled funds from his fraternity after the NCAA championship didn't go his way. Devastated, he attempted suicide, but didn't succeed, Custer said.

APPROXIMATELY 20 PERCENT of compulsive gamblers in treatment have attempted suicide, and 10 percent of compulsive gamblers' wives attempt suicide, according to the National Council on Compulsive Gambling.

While compulsive gambling in general is an overwhelmingly male affliction — men outnumber women 5 to 1 — sports gambling is even more so. Men are more partial to betting on things that require skill, while women prefer games of pure chance. And men particularly pride themselves on the skill they bring into their betting.

But the association between sports and gambling runs even deeper than that.

"Compulsive gamblers are very competitive," said Rosenthal, adding that many compulsive gamblers were outstanding athletes earlier in their lives.

Football, Custer said, is the most attractive sport to gamblers, followed in order of preference by baseball, basketball and hockey.

Custer said many athletes become gambling-compulsive, especially after retirement, when they turn to gambling as a way to regain some of the thrill and notoriety they enjoyed on the playing field.

Another factor that may drive athletes to gambling is that they share similar personality traits with the profile of typical compulsive gamblers — bright, high-energy, hard-working, and usually a workaholic, Custer said.

"Many (athletes who gamble) avoid drugs and alcohol completely," said Custer. "They're totally clean, physically. But where someone else will use alcohol or drugs to deal with pressure or get a thrill, the athlete is more likely to turn to gambling."

Deadwood voters bring back gambling

By CHET BROKAW

DEADWOOD, S.D. (AP) — Wild Bill Hickok was shot in the head during a poker game in Deadwood more than a century ago, but the city's voters have bet that restoring gambling will give a shot in the arm to the gold-rush town's economy.

Residents voted 690-230 Tuesday to allow poker, blackjack and slot machines, with the city's cut of the proceeds to be used to restore and preserve buildings in the historic Black Hills community of 2,000.

An amendment to the South Dakota Constitution last year provided that gambling limited to $5 bets would be permitted in Deadwood if 60 percent of the city's voters approved it.

South Dakota is the third state to allow casino gambling, joining New Jersey and Nevada.

Melodee Nelson, head of the Deadwood You Bet Committee, said legalized gambling should boost the economy, increase tourism, create jobs and help hold down property taxes.

"But let's all remember it's first and foremost a funding mechanism for historic preservation," she said. "That's what it started out as. That's what it's always been."

Supporters hope the games can begin this summer, said Bill Walsh, owner of the 85-year-old Franklin Hotel. He said the restoration of gambling is about as important as the arrival of the first train in 1890.

"It's here, and we want to all jump on the train and ride this thing for the betterment of the city of Deadwood and the state of South Dakota," he said.

About 50 supporters of the measure gathered Tuesday night in the hotel lobby, which is guarded by a bust of Hickok.

But their celebration was subdued by the outcome of the mayoral election. Mayor Tom Blair, a gambling supporter, ran into trouble in his re-election bid. Blair finished second in a three-way race, and now will face first-place finisher Bruce Oberlander in a runoff in two weeks.

Some residents quietly opposed a return to gambling on moral grounds, and argued that the games wouldn't provide that much of an economic boost.

"I don't know that I'm as disappointed as much as I'm hurt by this, when people aren't looking at moral issues here," said the Rev. Don Hadrick of the United Methodist Church in Deadwood.

Supporters think gambling will help make the area a final destination for tourists, instead of just a stop on the way to Yellowstone National Park, the Rocky Mountains or Mount Rushmore National Monument, which is about 50 miles away.

They have predicted gambling could attract at least 200,000 additional tourists a year. It also could provide $500,000 annually to further promote tourism by restoring an Old West look to the city.

Uphill nothing but downhill for Treacy

By BERT ROSENTHAL

BOSTON (AP) — Heartbreak Hill often has proven heartbreaking for many of the best runners in the Boston Marathon. For John Treacy, it's been the downhills, rather than the uphills, however, that have proven his downfall.

This year, when the Boston Marathon is run for the 93rd time Monday, Treacy hopes to correct his downhill failures and move up in the standings.

This will be his third consecutive Boston Marathon.

In 1987, he finished 14th in 2 hours, 17 minutes, 50 seconds, as his "legs caved in coming downhill, around 22 miles, when I was in second place," he said.

Last year, Treacy finished third in a career-best 2:09:15, but was outraced over the closing downhill miles by Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya and Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania.

"I was there for about 23 miles," Treacy said of the 26-mile, 385-yard course. "But then, the last mile and a half, they got away from me.

"What happened is that when we drafted downhill, I'd lose ground, then catch up with them as we went uphill."

Shortly before the 25-mile point, Treacy began to lose contact, and the race boiled down to the two Africans, with Hussein winning the closest Boston Marathon ever, by one second over Ikangaa, in 2:08:43, the second-fastest clocking in the race's history.

"Downhills have always been the hardest part for me," Treacy said.

Perhaps that's why the Irishman was able to do so well in his marathon debut in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, finishing second over a relatively flat course.

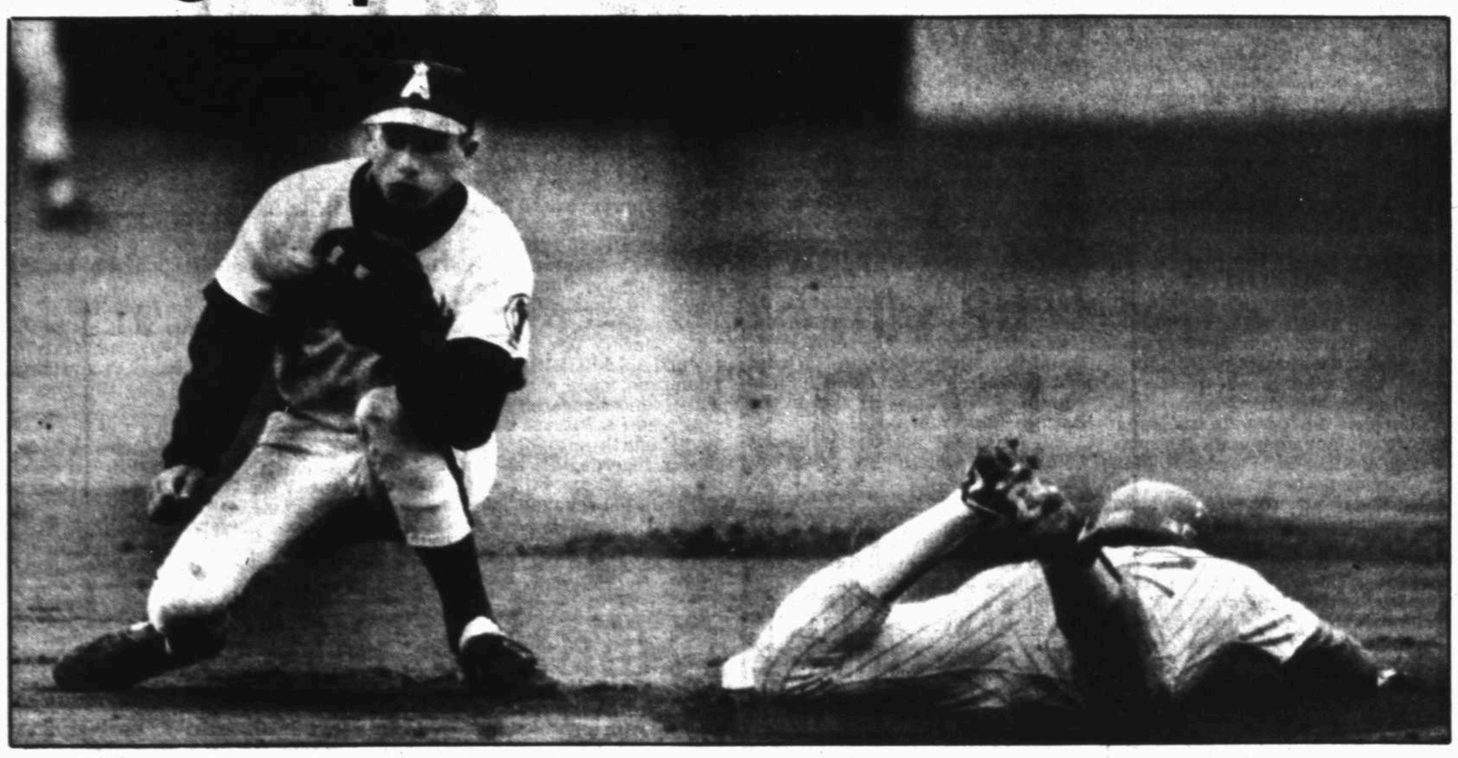

Last year, after Boston, Treacy was a dispirited figure at the Seoul Olympics, dropping out before the halfway mark. He lifted his spirits by finishing third in the New York City Marathon in November.

Although Treacy has yet to win a marathon in five tries, he is a most feared figure going into Monday's race against an extremely competitive field that includes Hussein, Ikangaa, Olympic fourth-place finisher Takeyuki Nakayama of Japan and sub-2:08 marathoners Abebe Mekkonen of Ethiopia and Kunimitsu Itoh of Japan.

For one thing, Treacy now has a familiarity with the course during competition, having run

Angel pitchers combine to blank El Paso

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland shortstop Gary DiSarcina takes throw from catcher Mike Knapp as El Paso's Ramon Sambo slides in to second with a stolen base. Sambo, however, was sent back to first and Frank Mattox was ruled out for batter's interference.

Trudeau, Buckels baffle EP

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Three Midland pitchers combined to throw a rare Angel Stadium shutout Thursday night. And when it comes at the expense of El Paso's normally destructive bats, "rare" becomes more like "extinct". And the tragedy of it was that most of Midland missed it.

Only 306 fans showed up on what started out as another inclement night, cold, misty and windy enough to make everybody miserable. But the wind subsided in the second inning and it turned out to be an absolutely delightful evening or as delightful as 40 degree temperatures will allow.

KEVIN TRUDEAU, seven innings, and Gary Buckles, two, teamed up for the shutout and lefthander Frank DeMichele got in just long enough in the eighth to lend a little suspense and excitement to the finish.

Midland made it look easy with three in the last of the eighth when an error, Chris Cron's single and Tom Alfredson's triple plated two runs and Mark Doran's third single of the night drove in a third.

But until then, it was a tense pitcher's battle with Jaime Navarro just about as stingy as Trudeau in his six inning stint. He trailed 2-0 when he left, thanks to some heads up base running in the first by Midland's Reed Peters and "double play" run in the fourth.

Peters walked to open the game, went to second on a grounder to short, moved to third on Everett Graham's infield single and scored on a passed ball. Doran singled and Bob Rose moved him to third with a hit to right and the run scored on a double play grounder to short.

Navarro gave up eight hits, three never got out of the infield.

TRUDEAU, acquired from the Minnesota Twin organization along with Bert Blyleven last winter, gave up seven hits, didn't allow a runner beyond second base and looked good enough to be pitching in Portland, where he toiled last season, or some other AAA city.

"Last time he pitched was two weeks ago," pointed out Midland Manager Max Oliveras. "So this was pretty impressive. We let him throw 91 pitches."

"Trudeau gave us lesson in pitching tonight," added pitching coach Gary Rubey. "He had good command of his pitches, a good slider and outstanding change."

It was the kind of dead ball night when outfielders cheated in and got away with it, at least, until the eighth when Alfredson drove his triple into the right-center corner. Centerfielder Ruben Escalera turned his back on the plate as soon as the ball was hit, but never had a chance.

THE GAME'S drama, however, came in the top of the inning when DeMichele relieved Trudeau to start the inning. He gave up a single to Frank Mattox and walked Marco Monico to start the inning and with a precarious 2-0 lead, Oliveras went to his closer, Buckels.

Buckels baffled 'em with his knuckle-curve, retiring six straight batters to earn his third save in four Midland wins this young season.

At this rate, you've got to wonder how long the righthander from Huntington Beach, Calif., will be around.

At Quad Cities last year, Buckels was 14-3 with six saves, a strange record for a closer. "It seemed like every time I'd go in, the team rallied to win it," Gary explained.

Brought up to Midland at the end of the season, Buckels admitted his knuckle-curve wasn't the same mystery it had been at Quad Cities. "At Quad Cities the ball dropped well. Here I was nervous and tried to guide the ball. Then, this spring I just tried to keep loose and keep my rhythm."

Apparently, it's working.

Buckels hasn't started since he was in high school. "In 1985 at Golden West JC, Coach Fred Hoover put me in the bullpen because I could throw a long time without getting tired."

Buckels was still a reliever at Cal State-Fullerton.

The knuckle-curve was an accident. "I picked up the knuckler from a friend but I held it differently. It wasn't until college though that it started dropping." That's when it became his bread and butter pitch.

HALO HOOPS— Jeff Barnes pulled up lame beating out a bunt in the third and was replaced by Scott Cerny at second....."Mike Knapp worked a great game behind the plate," Rubey credited the Angel catcher...Unusual, two batters interference plays were called by plate umpire Chris Jones. The first came as Ramon Sambo, who opened the game with a single, stole second. Batter Mattox was called out for interference and Sambo sent back to first....In the second, Doran singled and stole second as Bob Rose whiffed. Since Rose was already out when he interferred with the catcher, in this instance the runner was called out...

Angels face Higuera

Midland and El Paso will play a doubleheader starting at 6 p.m. tonight at Angel Stadium, a make up of Wednesday's rained out series opener.

Ted Higuera, down from the Milwaukee Brewers for rehabilitation, will start the second game for the Diablos against Midland's Mike Butcher, 0-0. In the opener, Scott Lewis, 1-0, will pitch for Midland against Jim Hunter, 0-1.

This will be Higuera's final rehab appearance before returning to the major league club. Higuera lost his first start to Wichita, although giving up just one earned run in five innings.

Mojo, Bobcats track favorites

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It's no secret that Odessa Permian and San Angelo are the two teams that will fight it out for the District 4-5A track team championship at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium Saturday, but several events offer mystery and intrigue as far as Region I berths are concerned.

The top two finishers in each event Saturday advance to the Region I meet in Lubbock in two weeks. It's there that Austin state berths may be earned. In short, the track season is down to where every run, jump and throw has extra meaning.

Here is a look by event of the boys favorites in the 4-5A meet:

Discus: This event is the weakest the district has witnessed in several years. Midland High's John Braun (148-10) may be the favorite because he has won two major titles against 4-5A foes. However, San Angelo's Darrell Abbe has been over 150-feet this year and San Angelo's Daren Childs (148-5) is coming on strong.

High Jump: Midland Lee's David Arehart owns a 6-8 and just missed at 6-9½ in one meet. He should win it and have a shot at the record of 6-8 if a minor back injury doesn't slow him. Permian's Eddie Hubbard, Midland High's Rusty Holt and San Angelo's Brad Johnson all appear to have a shot at second place.

Long Jump: Abilene High's Jesse Loza (21-7½) and Jay Lowery (21-5¾) are the favorites in an event where no one has established dominance. Lee's James Brown threw his hat into the ring last week with a 21-2½ and Arehart is over 20-feet as is San Angelo's Joey Musquiz and Permian's Philip Talley.

Pole Vault: Permian's Adrian Hall is close to 15-feet, but this is an unpredictable event this year. Others in the running are San Angelo's Matthew Laureles and Shane Luther and Permian's Greg Sweatt and Coddi Dean.

Shot Put: San Angelo's Abbe (56-2¾) should win with teammate Childs (53-0) second. Permian's Chris

Neck injury forces Randy White to retire

DALLAS (AP) — Randy White, the Dallas Cowboys' eight-time all-pro defensive tackle, announced his retirement from football Thursday because of a lingering neck injury.

"I've been thinking about it for a couple of weeks, and I just don't think I can still play at the level I'd like to," said White, who was praised by former Cowboys coach Tom Landry as one of the greatest players in the club's history.

"Fourteen years of pounding caught up to me," White said.

White will reflect on his career and discuss his future plans in a news conference at Valley Ranch at 11 a.m. Friday. White made his final decision after meeting with new Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, who had no comment Thursday.

The 36-year-old White, the Cowboys' No. 1 pick in the 1975 draft, was selected for the Pro Bowl nine times during his 14-year career. But he was unable to overcome a lingering neck injury that limited his effectiveness and playing time during the past two seasons.

"There's no doubt in my mind that he'll be in the Hall of Fame," said Landry, who was replaced by Johnson on Feb. 25. "He was a great competitor with a great heart, one of the really special ones I was fortunate to coach. He's in that group with the Roger Staubachs and the Bob Lilys."

White is suffering from a bulging disc in his neck. It has limited White's range of motion and made it difficult for him to raise his head from a down-position stance.

A part-time player last season, when he recorded career lows of 12 tackles and 1½ sacks, White realistically didn't figure into Johnson's plans to reconstruct an aging and injury-plagued defensive line.

During a minicamp late last month, White visibly struggled while going through drills and did not show up for the final day of the three-day camp.

Initially tried at middle linebacker for two seasons, White was switched back to his natural position in 1977 and his career took off. He recorded 114 sacks and 1,100 tackles in 14 seasons, and earned co-MVP honors in the Cowboys' 27-10 victory over Denver in Super Bowl XII.

Diablos toss Ringer at Angels tonight

Battles

Yes, that's a Ringer El Paso will be throwing at the Midland Angels tonight when major league lefthander Ted Higuera starts the second game for the Diablos.

On rehabilitation assignement from Milwaukee, Higuera last pitched in the Texas League in 1984, posting an 8-7 record.

The next year, Higuera was in the majors and was a 20-game winner in 1986.

His 2.60 ERA in '84 led the Texas League. That was the best ERA by an El Paso pitcher since Frank Tanana's 2.71 in 1973 and not even that led the league. That was the year Midland's Dan Corder led with a 2.25...

Jerry Tarkanian was in Midland Saturday night to watch Larry Johnson, the talent who could make UNLV a Final Fourist next season, in action against the cream of the nation's junior college talent in the Texas vs. U.S.A. All-Star game.

The performance of the Odessa College star was everything he hoped it would be, but the player who made the biggest impression on Tark the Shark was former Midland College All-America Spud Webb.

Before the game, in the Chap Center hospitality room, Tarkanian looked across the room and exclaimed, "God good, is that Spud Webb?"

What it was was a poster of Spud, in Atlanta uniform, about to slam dunk. The 5-7 Hawk was in orbit, his elbow rim high....

Next step for the Jaycees/United Bank sponsored classic is an all out campaign to get the game on ESPN...

Maybe the Cleveland Indians weren't all that anxious to get rid of outfielder Mel Hall, who once played for the Midland Texas League franchise, but Turner Ward, the minor leaguer involved in the trade, obviously hadn't been scouted.

The Indians thought Ward was black. But when he showed up in Tucson, he was white.

Although Mel hit .280 and batted in 77 runs for the Tribe last year, the appearance of his name in the black book of a woman accused of operating a call girl ring in Cleveland apparently was the last straw.....

Things just aren't the same in Boston any more. They booed pitcher Roger Clemens, who issued a warning to anyone thinking of doing harm to his family, and cheered third baseman Wade Boggs, whose off-the-field exploits and contract uncertainty have so disrupted the Red Sox that the club apparently would trade him, if anyone would take him.

Would Nathaniel Hawthorne have fun with this plot?...

Of course, Clemens wasn't alone in hearing boos from hometown fans this spring. The Twins' Frank Viola, off to an 0-2 start, caught it the other day, although he is the American League's winningest pitcher of the '80s. Still, baseball is a "What have you done for us today" game to fans....

After Princeton's one point loss to Georgetown in the NCAA basketball tournament, Coach Pete Carril tried to ease the pain. "I told my kids, as bad as you feel, feeling this bad is better than never getting a chance to feel this bad."..

Rangers sweep Milwaukee series

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bobby Witt's control went awry in the eighth inning Thursday night but he threw the most important pitch of the game over the plate.

AL

The result helped the Texas Rangers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-1 to complete a three-game sweep.

The Rangers led 2-1 when Witt suddenly went wild. He surrendered his only two walks and a single to Robin Yount, loading the bases with one out.

Terry Francona, who had broken up Nolan Ryan's no-hit bid in the eighth inning Wednesday, then worked Witt to a 3-1 count. But Francona, who was 2-for-19 and had struck out three straight times against Witt, swung at the next pitch and grounded into an inning-ending double play.

In the ninth, Julio Franco hit a three-run homer, giving him four RBIs for the second night in a row, as the Rangers won their fifth straight game to go 7-1 — their best start in 10 years.

"I was hoping he (Francona) would swing at it," said Witt, who gave up seven hits in eight innings with eight strikeouts to win his first game.

"I'm almost sure it was a strike. I was kind of surprised but he was trying to do something to get the run in."

Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for the Rangers.

Texas' three-game sweep was its first over the Brewers in four years. Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn decided to give Francona the green light, even though Witt couldn't find the plate.

"I chose to let a good hitter hit a good pitch and he did," said Trebelhorn, whose injury ravaged team has lost three straight and scored only six runs in the three games.

"I think it's hard enough to score one run. If I'm going to beg a walk here for one, there's no guarantee we're going to get the next one anyhow. He's a good selective hitter. He does a decent job of discriminating between balls and strikes. If he gets a good ball to rip, I'd just as soon let him and go for two runs."

As bad the Brewers are swinging, Franco and Ruben Sierra are sizzling.

Sierra went 2-for-3 after a 4-for-4 night on Wednesday. He was 7-for-12 in the series. Franco, meanwhile, ran his season RBI total to 12, tying for the major league lead.

Red Sox 9, Indians 1

Roger Clemens was in total control of what happened on the field Thursday, allowing three hits in seven innings, and his eight strikeouts put him over the 1,000-strikeout plateau.

Booed when he was introduced at Fenway Park on opening day for disparaging remarks about the Boston fans, Clemens received a standing ovation when he struck out Brook Jacoby with the bases loaded in the second for his 1,000th strikeout.

Wade Boggs had three hits and three RBIs, while Marty Barrett had three doubles and Dwight Evans homered in a 15-hit attack against four Cleveland pitchers.

The eight strikeouts gave Clemens 1,005 for his career, fourth on Boston's all-time list behind Cy Young (1,341), Luis Tiant (1,075) and Bruce Hurst (1,043).

Athletics 5, Angels 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jim Abbott improved on his shaky major league debut, but Mike Moore allowed no runs and three hits in eight innings as Oakland beat California.

Abbott, who made his pro debut with a 4 2-3 inning stint in a 7-0 loss to Seattle last Saturday night, pitched six innings against Oakland.

Again getting no hitting support, Abbott allowed four runs, two unearned, and nine hits. He walked two and struck out four.

Dave Henderson gave the A's a 1-0 lead with a two-out, homer in the first inning. Oakland made it 4-0 with three runs in the sixth, on Dave Parker's RBI groundout and a two-run double by Mike Gallego. Parker also added a run-scoring single in the ninth.

Tigers 3, Twins 0

DETROIT — Jeff Robinson pitched a four-hitter, and an error by shortstop Greg Gagne allowed two Detroit runs as the Tigers beat Minnesota, snapping a 12-game losing streak against the Twins.

Robinson, 1-0, whose 1988 season was cut short with a 13-6 record because of circulation problems in his right hand, struck out seven and walked four. He worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning by striking out Gary Gaetti and Randy Bush.

Lou Whitaker homered in the seventh inning for Detroit's other run.

Bluebonnet Bowl misses '89 deadline

HOUSTON (AP) — The financially strapped Bluebonnet Bowl missed the April 1 deadline to qualify for a game this December, but the bowl is not dead — officially.

"Since we don't have a title sponsor, we will not apply until the sponsorship is at hand," bowl president Al Warrington said.

All bowls were to have applied by the deadline to be certified by the NCAA's postseason subcommittee.

However, if the Bluebonnet secures a sponsor, Warrington said Bluebonnet board members will appeal to the NCAA to allow the bowl to sponsor a game this year.

"We have more active players as potential sponsors than we have ever had," Warrington said. "We have at least a half a dozen that on the surface appear promising. Is that going to get it done? I don't know, but we've never had that much interest before."

The bowl had two major sponsorships fall through last year.

Warrington said the bowl needs time to secure a sponsorship since the economic downturn in the Houston area has hurt some possible sponsors.

Officials from one of the those companies already have said the $1 million for the bowl sponsorship is not a problem, Warrington said. But the company is researching additional marketing costs.

NCAA postseason subcommittee members have let the Bluebonnet Bowl ignore three previous deadlines for payment of $400,000 owed Baylor, Colorado, Texas and Pittsburgh for games played in 1986 and 1987. The game was not played last year in order to raise money.

Bowl officials must put up a $1 million line of credit to assure teams coming to the bowl will be paid the minimum amount of $500,000 to each participant, as required by the NCAA.

Braves staff wows 'em

Astros beat LA in 15th

Associated Press

All of a sudden, the Atlanta Braves have one of the best pitching staffs around.

NL

Wednesday night, Tom Glavine shut out San Diego 5-0 and on Thursday Derek Lilliquist allowed only three hits over 7 1-3 innings in his major league debut as the Braves beat the Padres, 4-1, at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Manager Russ Nixon also has John Smoltz, Pete Smith and Zane Smith in the starting rotation and all have pitched well so far.

Last year, the Braves had a 4.09 team earned-run average and only four shutouts.

Lilliquist, a first-round draft pick in 1987 from the University of Georgia, allowed a one-out single by Mark Parent in the second inning, a one-out triple by Bip Roberts in the third and then retired 15 batters in order.

Luis Salazar homered in the eighth, San Diego's first run in 20 innings, and Joe Boever came in and finished with two-hit relief for his third save.

"I was anxious to get my first start out of the way," Lilliquist said. "It's here and gone now, so I have to get ready for my next one. I don't think I was scared. I was nervous, a little. You can't play this game scared. You have to go right after hitters."

Lilliquist struck out five and walked two, both in the first inning.

"Guys were trying to pull the ball when he was throwing the ball outside, and it resulted in a lot of pop-ups and ground balls," Padres manager Jack McKeon said. "We've seen him once now. We'll have a better time against him the next time out."

Atlanta took the lead in the first off Walt Terrell, 0-2. Tommy Gregg reached on shortstop Gary Green's error, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Andres Thomas' single.

The Braves made it 2-0 in the sixth on consecutive two-out singles by Dale Murphy, Gerald Perry and Thomas. Perry hit his first homer of the season in the eighth and Jeff Treadway hit a run-scoring groundout.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH — John Smiley took a one-hit shutout into the ninth inning, getting one inning of relief help from Jeff Robinson, as Pittsburgh beat the New York Mets and Ron Darling.

Bobby Bonilla scored twice and drove in a run, and Mike Lavalliere had a two-run single in the eighth inning.

Smiley improved to 5-1 lifetime against the Mets by striking out four and walking three, while the Pirates finally solved Darling, who had beaten them six straight times.

Darryl Strawberry's two-out double to right field in the fourth inning was the Mets' first hit against Smiley, 1-1. Smiley retired 13 in a row before allowing Lenny Dykstra's leadoff pinch double in the ninth, and he lost the shutout on Tim Teufel's two-out single.

Astros 4, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES — Rafael Ramirez grounded a one-out single to left field in the 15th inning to score Ken Caminiti with the go-ahead run as Houston beat Los Angeles in the Dodgers' home opener.

Caminiti opened the 15th with a walk off Ray Searage, 0-1, the fourth Los Angeles pitcher. Reliever Bob Forsch, 1-0, then bunted.

First baseman Eddie Murray's throw to second to force Caminiti went into center field for an error, and one out later, Ramirez singled.

Tim Crews replaced Searage and Billy Hatcher hit his first pitch for a run-scoring double down the left-field line, making it 4-2.

Forsch, the fifth Houston pitcher, shut out the Dodgers on one hit over the final four innings.

Hawks romp to fifth in row

From Wire Reports

ATLANTA — Moses Malone scored 29 points and Dominique Wilkins 27 as the Atlanta Hawks routed the Boston Celtics 132-118 Thursday for their fifth consecutive victory.

NBA

The Hawks broke a third-place tie with idle Milwaukee in the NBA's Central Division race for home-court advantage in the playoffs. The setback left the Celtics only 1½ games in front of Washington in the race for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Ed Pinckney paced the Celtics with 18 points and Reggie Lewis had 16.

Suns 119, Rockets 111

HOUSTON — Tom Chambers scored 15 of his 27 points in the third quarter and helped hold off a fourth-quarter Houston rally. The victory was the Suns' sixth in a row and left them 1½ games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Otis Thorpe scored 34 points for Houston and Akeem Olajuwon had 33 points and 16 rebounds but they couldn't overcome the balanced scoring of the Suns, who had five players in double figures.

Pacers 109, Bulls 105

INDIANAPOLIS — LaSalle Thompson made a three-point play with four seconds left for the winning points as Indiana handed Chicago its fourth straight loss. Michael Jordan recorded his 13th triple-double of the season with 47 points, 13 assists and 11 rebounds but the Bulls are only 7-8 when he scores 40 or more.

Reggie Miller led six Pacers in double figures with 25 points and Thompson added 20 points and 15 rebounds.

SuperSonics 116, Heat 111

SEATTLE — Xavier McDaniel, starting his fourth consecutive game in a major lineup change for Seattle, scored 35 points to help the SuperSonics snap a four-game home losing streak.

Kings 121, Nuggets 112

Danny Ainge scored 12 of his 24 in the final period. Wayman Tisdale added 19, Kenny Smith 15 and Jim Petersen 15. Alex English paced Denver with 31.

It was the 24th victory of the season for Sacramento, which was 24-58 last season. Denver has lost five consecutive road games and is 8-30 away from home.

Denver pulled within 101-96 with 7:01 to go but a 9-2 Sacramento run increased the lead to 110-98 two minutes later.

Stewart sets Heritage golf pace

Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Payne Stewart, who came to this tournament to prepare for another, compiled a bogey-free 65 Thursday for a share of the first-round lead in the $800,000 Heritage Classic.

Stewart was tied with Kenny Perry, who birdied three straight holes in one stretch and got a share of the top spot with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

"Probably the best competitive round I've played in my three years on the tour," Perry said.

But that wasn't enough to completely shake Nick Faldo of England.

"It was good that I could go out and get on with it," Faldo said after a 3-under-par 68 in his first round since winning the Masters last weekend.

"The sooner you get used to carrying that title, the better," said Faldo, who needed only 23 putts.

That, however, was five more than record-matching 18 putts needed by Kenny Knox in a round of 69.

it the past two years. He also trains over it frequently, since he lives in nearby Warwick, R.I.

For another, he has the strong support of the big Irish community in Boston.

And for a third, Treacy is coming off a solid training program, capped by a gutsy performance in last Sunday's America's Ekiden international road relay in New York, where he helped Ireland to its second straight team victory.

"Being Irish in Boston helps a good deal," Treacy said. "I felt last year that the crowd was really behind me. It gave me a big lift over the final four or five miles."

This year, he thinks he has solid shot at winning.

"I'm well-prepared," he said. "I've trained hard. This year, I'm not as heavily raced as I was last year. I made a few mistakes last year at Boston and I made a mistake by overtraining for Seoul."

And about those hills.

"I've got the hills taken care of," he said confidentally.

Amy Alcott goes home this week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Amy Alcott's old home course is one of golf's most famous public layouts.

Rancho Park, where Alcott tuned up her game as a youngster, is the home of the LPGA's $450,000 Ai Star-Centinela Hospital Classic, which was to get under way today.

Alcott finished tied for fourth in last year's tournament but she still likes her old course.

"It's always fun to come back and play here," Alcott said. "It's better than a lot of private courses and I'm always impressed with the way it is maintained.

"Rancho Park is one of the best public courses I have ever played."

Toothless Yanks aren't same, says Indians' Joe Carter

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — If the Yankees or their fans think they are having a nightmare and will soon awake to find that what has happened the first week of the season isn't real, a player who watched the team up close for three games can tell them it is.

"It wasn't the same Yankees," said Joe Carter, the Cleveland Indians' outstanding hitter. "Winfield being out and Claudell and Jack Clark not there, they don't pose as big a threat as they used to. They aren't intimidating."

The Yankees have existed on intimidation throughout most of their history. In fact, they invented intimidation at the plate in baseball. The 1989 Yankees, however, bear greater resemblance to the Yankees of the Horace Clarke-Jerry Kenney days than to the Yankees of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, Mickey Mantle and Reggie Jackson.

THE YANKEES would certainly have a greater chance of being intimidating if they had Dave Winfield in the lineup, but even before he had back surgery they were hurting offensively.

That's the problem they didn't seem to recognize; or if they did, they did nothing about it. Intimidation doesn't necessarily stem from one hitter but from a collection. The Yankees' collection couldn't intimidate a minor league pitcher.

The Yankees created the problem with three off-season blunders: They traded Jack Clark to San Diego, they let Claudell Washington slip away as a free agent and they did nothing to replace the offense they lost.

Why did they trade Clark?

He and his agent, Tom Reich, had an understanding with George Steinbrenner that if Clark was unhappy, the owner would do everything he could to trade him.

WHY WAS Clark unhappy? He didn't like being a designated hitter, but worse, he didn't like what he considered Lou Piniella's shabby treatment of him.

"He never told me in advance where I'd be playing," Clark said. "Fifteen minutes before a game, I found out I was playing left field, where I never played. I didn't feel I should be in that position. Then there was a big series against Boston. I was on the bench one game. I couldn't hit against the starting pitcher, Mike Smithson, but in our last at-bat, I'm supposed to go up and hit a five-run home run against Lee Smith. That's the way Lou used me."

Why did the Yankees trade Clark so quickly, without pursuing other possibilities?

Clark preferred going to a National League team in California. Jack McKeon, the Padres' trademaker, offered pitching, which the Yankees needed desperately, and the Yankees grabbed it. The swap was such a theft that McKeon has difficulty maintaining a straight face when asked about it.

THE LOS Angeles Dodgers are a National League team in California, and they were seeking a power-hitting first baseman. Fred Claire, their general manager, said Eddie Murray was his primary target, but Clark was also on his list of five such players who could be available. "We had some conversations," Claire said of the Yankees, "but they made their move."

Clark said if a trade could not have been worked out, he would have been happy to remain with the Yankees, especially, though he didn't say it, because they changed managers.

Why did the Yankees lose Washington to the California Angels?

The loss was the result of the Yankees' cavalier attitude toward signing him, believing no one else would give him more than they offered. They believed wrong. The Angels offered the outfielder a guaranteed three-year contract, but long before that Washington, who preferred staying with them, would have signed with the Yankees if they had offered an option for a third year with a $200,000 buyout.

Why didn't the Yankees obtain one or two hitters to replace the offense they lost? They were so preoccupied with improving their pitching that they apparently ignored or didn't fully comprehend the significance of the loss of Clark and Washington. The irony of their strategy was that they didn't even do a good job bolstering the pitching staff.

OTHER TEAMS traded hitters, but they also got hitters in return. Boston traded Todd Benzinger to Cincinnati and got Nick Esasky. Cleveland traded Julio Franco to Texas and got Pete O'Brien. Texas gave up O'Brien but got Franco and Rafael Palmeiro in another deal. The Padres traded Keith Moreland and Chris Brown, but they had already acquired Clark.

The Yankees have a good first third of a lineup. The other two-thirds make life too easy for opposing pitchers. The Indians' pitchers certainly didn't have trouble with the Yankees.

"We always have trouble at Yankee Stadium," Carter said. "The series was great as far as our confidence goes. It's definitely a big boost, sweeping the Yankees at Yankee Stadium. It's a good feeling."

Leahy's grandson signs with Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Pat Leahy, grandson of former Notre Dame football coach Frank Leahy, has signed a national letter of intent to play baseball for the Irish.

Leahy, a 6-foot-6 right-hander, was 8-2 last year as a junior at Yakima (Wash.) Eisenhower High School. He also led his American Legion team to a third-place national finish last summer.

Oak Creek record tourney catch looms

From Staff Reports

Last year the Bronte Bass tournament set a record for Oak Creek Lake with 88 fish caught and Ike Pate, proprietor of Sportsman's Lodge, says folks are wondering if that record will be broken April 15 when the Bronte Chamber of Commerce sponsors its annual tournament.

The signs are good. Late last month the Blackwell Volunteer Fire Dept. tournament reported catches second only to those record in the Bronte tournament a year ago.

The Bronte tournament will be a two-lake event, Oak Creek and Lake Spence. Entry fee is $25. Registration begins 5-11 p.m. Friday and 4:30-6:30 a.m. Saturday, the 15th. The format is a three-fish stringer, 14 1/4 inch minimum, optional $5 for Big Bass Calcutta, live release. First prize pays $750....

SIXTY-FOUR anglers entered the Blackwell tournament with 26 catching bass big enough to way. Don Houlihan took first with a two-fish string going 10.5...

If it's just a relaxing weekend of fishing you want, the white bass are moving into the shallow water at Oak Creek and Pate says "a lot of these fish are going over two pounds." Catfish are being taken on rod and reel and on trotlines, some blues going 18 pounds.

"There have been some good strings of crappie caught, but most believe the best is yet to come."...

FISHERMEN were rewarded with good catches of crappie at Lake J.B. Thomas, near Snyder, and black bass at Spence, and then the cold weather hit.

Ted Christian, Big Spring, reeled in an eight-pound black at Thomas and Steve Moreland, took a 10 pound black bass at Spence. Chriss Woodruff, Midland, aided and abetted by Joe, Brenda and Jeff Woodruff, hooked a 22 1/2 pound blue, a 3 3/4 pound black and 5-11 channel at Spence. Also Midland, Kelly Niedecker landed a 6 3/4 pound black. Jim Rose, Midland, took a 5-1 black, and Randall Beauchamp, Midland, landed a 4 1/2 pounder....

Some crappie were being caught in both lakes while black bass were keeping anglers busy at Spence. At Thomas, black bass fishing was good along the west end of the lake and Bull Creek areas while white bass were being caught on trollers on the north side.

Slow Turkey season should pick up speed

By MARK McDONALD

DALLAS (AP) — State wildlife officials say the spring wild turkey season is off to a slow start, but expect Texas hunters to be more successful this week.

"In many areas, gobblers are still mating with hens and that means hunters will have a hard time calling the male birds into (shotgun) range," said biologist Don Wilson, upland bird program leader for the Texas Park and Wildlife. "Gobblers didn't respond very well in that first week."

A notable exception to the overall early season outlook is the mature Edwards Plateau gobbler shot last week by Larry Rigsby of Farmers Branch.

"I would call and the bird would gobble back to me so loud it shook the leaves on the trees," Rigsby said. "That bird really got excited."

So did Rigsby when he saw the size of the bird.

The Lampasas County gobbler, shot with a 12-gauge at a range of nine yards, weighed 22 pounds and carried a hair-like growth from its upper beak called a "beard" that measured 10½ inches.

"I'm patting myself on the back because it was still with hens," Rigsby said. "Somehow I was able to call the gobbler away from the hens."

Not all turkey hunters have been so lucky, Wilson said.

"It's still early in the season," he said. "Once the hens leave to begin nesting activity, the gobblers will start coming in."

Competition for hens will make the toms more interested in the fake mating calls produced by hunters, Wilson said.

"Our field people figure it will take a turn for the better," Wilson said. "We should end up having a pretty fair spring season."

Texas hunters last spring shot a record 42,000 gobblers but with the slow start, Wilson predicted the total harvest would be "down a little."

The turkey harvest last autumn was 38,000 birds, well off the previous year's 63,000.

There are approximately 600,000 wild turkeys in Texas, Wilson said.

McEnroe beats Borg

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — John McEnroe beat Bjorn Borg 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in an exhibition match Thursday as the 32-year-old Swede announced he would retire completely after his current exhibition tour.

"There will be no more tennis for me, tournaments or exhibitions," Borg said on Wednesday after losing to McEnroe 6-3, 6-3 in Singapore. "My future involvement in tennis will be strictly in coaching the youth and I will be glad to do it in any part of the world."

McEnroe, ranked sixth in the world, had little trouble with the 32-year-old Swede in the first set Thursyday, but Borg came back in the second.

McMillan is the darkhorse.

3200: Abilene Cooper's Mike Martinez (10:15.85) is a strong favorite with Abilene High's Lang (10:17.14) the contender. Odessa High's Hector Cano could be the darkhorse.

400 Relay: Odessa High's 41.86 is tops this year, but no team has dominated. Midland High's 42.10, Permian's 42.16 and San Angelo's 42.40 are all in the hunt. Lee owns a 42.10 this year, but the team is racked with injuries and will have to be a major surprise here.

800: This looks like a two-man race between Permian's Darin Chase (1:59.70) and Lee's Bill Swearingen (1:59.35). Swearingen was a late 800 entrant, switching from the 400.

110 Hurdles: San Angelo's Joey Bonds (13.66) is state ranked and unbeaten here, but 13.43 is the record. Second place is wide open for Permian's Robert Brown, Abilene High's Jay Lowery or Lee's Troy Oliver.

100: Odessa High sophomore Dallas Cowan (10.20) is the talk of the district and state ranked, and he is looking at the blazing 10.10 record. Midland High's Albert Ray (10.38) looks good for second, but San Angelo's David Brainard could be a factor.

400: Permian junior Lloyd Hill (47.95) and the rest. Hill is seeking a second Region I berth. Abilene High's Mike Johnson and Permian's Musquiz fight for second.

300 Hurdles: No event is looked at more than this one. It is loaded with stars. Bonds' 37.31 is the best while Permian's Jeff Edwards and San Angelo's Gary Owens are both in the low 38s and state ranked. But the tension centers around Lee's Marcus Strambler (37.60), who went to state last year in this event. Strambler has been hurt, but vows to run Saturday. The cold weather hasn't helped his cause.

200: Again Cowan (20.95) and the rest. The record is 20.85. San Angelo's Brainard should be second with Permian's Rodrick Cornish owning hope. Midland High's Dwane Roberts, a 100 qualifier last year, will run here hoping to get back a region berth.

1600: This could be a real dog fight with Permian's James Lujan (4:38.69), San Angelo's Simon Federico (4:47.37), Cooper's Mike Martinez (4:45.69), Permian's Chris Creel (4:45.30) and San Angelo's Bryan King (4:49.58) all having hopes for one of the two berths.

1600 Relay: San Angelo, Permian and Lee all have a shot, but this could be the order of finish. San Angelo is looking good here right now.

But there are always surprises in this meet and one wonders where they will come this time around. About the only thing you can count on in this meet is the surprises.

Field events begin at 11 a.m. Running preliminares at 1:30 p.m. and running finals at 6:30 p.m.

Wings, Capitals lose in playoffs

NHL

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rich Tocchet's second goal of the game with 3:19 left gave the Philadelphia Flyers a 4-3 victory over the Washington Capitals Thursday night and carried them into the NHL's Patrick Division finals.

The Flyers, who finished fourth in the regular season, took the best-of-seven playoff series from the first-place Capitals 4-2. The loss represented the ninth straight season that Washington has been eliminated in division play.

The Flyers meet the Penguins in a best-of-seven series starting Monday night in Pittsburgh for the division finals. The Penguins reached the final with a four-game sweep of the New York Rangers.

Blackhawks 7, Red Wings 1

CHICAGO — Wayne Presley scored three times, including a record third short-handed goal, and Steve Larmer added two goals, leading the Chicago Blackhawks to a playoff series-clinching 7-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

Presley scored a goal in the second period 26 seconds after Larmer had broken a 1-1 tie. He added a power-play goal at 7:29 of the third period and completed his hat trick with a short-handed goal at 11:05.

The three short-handed goals by Presley tied an NHL playoff record set by Bill Barber of Philadelphia against Minnesota in 1981.

In eliminating the Norris Division champion Red Wings in six games, the Blackhawks, who finished fourth, advanced to the divisional finals starting next Tuesday in St. Louis.

Kings 4, Oilers 1

EDMONTON, Alberta — Chris Kontos scored his playoff-leading seventh goal on an assist from Wayne Gretzky and former Edmonton minor-leaguer Jim Wiemer added a goal as the Los Angeles Kings beat the Oilers 4-1 to force a seventh game in the Smythe Division semifinals.

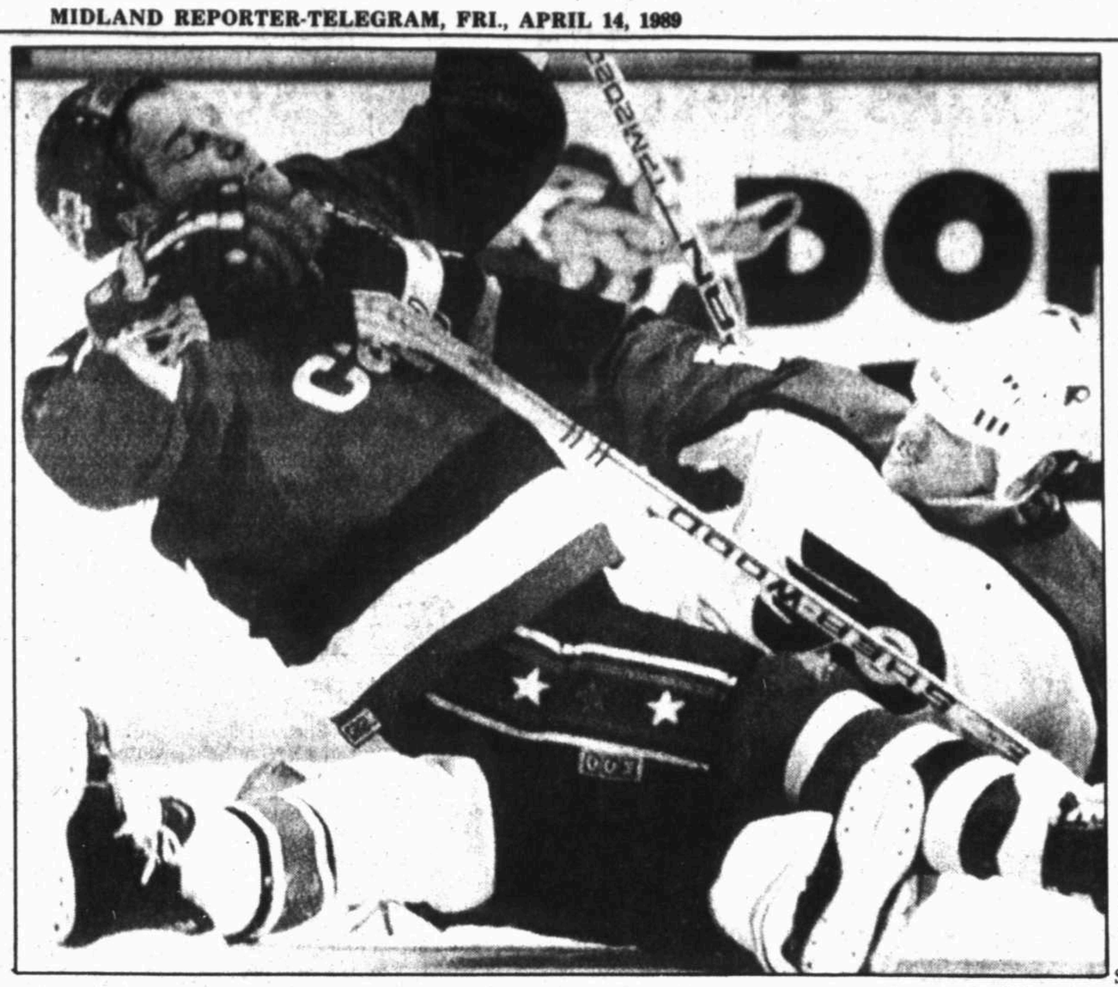

The Kings, snapping Edmonton's 14-game home playoff winning streak, won their second straight game to tie the best-of-seven series at 3-3. Game 7 will be played Saturday night in Inglewood, Calif.

The Kings are trying to become only the sixth team to rebound from a 3-1 deficit.

The two-time defending NHL champion Oilers, who got their only goal from defenseman Randy Gregg 33 seconds into the game, had not lost a postseason game in Edmonton since dropping Game 5 of the 1987 Stanley Cup finals to Philadelphia.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Jim Sandlak, Rich Sutter and Garth Butcher scored in a span of 2:18 late in the second period to help the upstart Vancouver Canucks defeat the Calgary Flames 6-3 and tie their Stanley Cup playoff series at three games apiece.

The seventh and deciding game between the Flames and Canucks will be played Saturday in Calgary.

OU gridders to stand 1st degree rape trial

By DOUG FERGUSON

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A judge ordered three former Oklahoma football players Thursday to stand trial on charges of first-degree rape in an alleged gang assault in January at the Oklahoma athletic dormitory.

Special District Judge Gary Purcell ordered Nigel Clay, Glen Bell and Bernard Hall to appear for formal arraignment next Wednesday.

Purcell issued his ruling at the conclusion of a four-day preliminary hearing in Cleveland County District Court.

In addition, Purcell ordered Hall and Clay to stand trial on charges of furnishing liquor to a minor.

Fred Shaeffer, attorney for Hall, said he would ask a district court judge to dismiss both charges against his client.

In testimony Thursday, the girlfriend of the victim of the alleged gang rape said she could hear the woman screaming for help and calling her name from the bedroom of a dorm suite on Jan. 21.

"I tried to get in the door," the woman testified. "I kept banging on the door and I heard her screaming my name ... several times," the woman said.

When she finally got the door open, a bedroom light was on and she could see Clay and her friend in the room, the woman testified. Her friend was on the floor sitting next to the bed and Clay was standing over her.

"I asked her, 'What's going on?'" the woman said. "She said, "Can't you see, they've attacked me. They've raped me.'"

The woman said she started to blame Clay.

"I asked him, 'How could you let something like this happen,'" the woman testified.

She said Clay told her he had no idea what was going on.

The woman said the victim had trouble walking from a combination of the alcohol she had been drinking earlier and the alleged attack.

The girlfriend said she could tell the victim was drunk by the slowness of her speech and the way she acted.

The victim's zipper was undone and she carried her pantyhose in her hands and was wrapped in a blanket as they left the dorm, the woman said.

The woman said they didn't call police because the victim thought police wouldn't believe her because the men were football players and because the girlfriend told the victim she would get in trouble because her parents didn't know she was in Norman.

In other testimony Thursday, Ken Kidd, an Oklahoma City police officer, said the victim told him she did not scream during the alleged attack because she was intimidated by the size of the players.

Kidd initially interviewed the woman, but then told her she would have to talk to campus police.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A close relationship takes a direction that should be pleasing to you both. Money will come to you in a steady stream after mid-October. Employment affairs may have their ups and downs. You will find it more difficult to knuckle down to work in the summer. Needed cash could be lost if you speculate or gamble. Live up to partner's high expectations.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Julie Sommars, American portrait painter Charles Wilson Peale, actor Michael Ansara, French actress Claudia Cardinale, country singer Roy Clark, rock star Dave Edmunds, actress Elizabeth Montgomery, railroad labor leader Asa Philip Randolph, jazz singer Bessie Smith, artist Leonardo da Vinci.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your enthusiasm for life is spurred by a new relationship. Keep spending to a minimum this weekend. You can have plenty of fun without going into debt. Take advantage of free entertainment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is an extra sparkle to everything you do today! A visit from a child could be part of the picture. Love is in bloom. Clarity of mind leads to important decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance takes over your day. Heed the advice you received from a friend yesterday and you will be able to move mountains. Your self-confidence grows by leaps and bounds. Forge ahead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Horseback riding or bicycling in the park brings joy to your heart. A blind date turns out better than you anticipated. Do not jump to conclusions, however. Commitment could prove elusive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A change in the weather leads to new recreational plans. You gain both new social contacts and a different perspective from a chance encounter. If you accept a party invitation, dress elegantly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A family get-together is featured. Protect your assets even if partner wants to take a chance. An older individual plays a more important role in your decisions now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A willingness to compromise will help you restore domestic tranquility. Energize your relationships by living up to your obligations. You benefit from making new arrangements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A spiritual calling inspires you to move in new directions. Be glad if certain plans have to be changed. A makeover builds your confidence. You feel better when you look in the mirror.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance improves when you open new lines of communication. You become a VIP in the eyes of someone you adore. Be less combative about having your own way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Good times and simple pleasures make this a weekend to remember. Your sound judgment is confirmed by something you are told in confidence by an important person. Keep secrets to yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put aside work materials and devote the weekend to family pleasures. A parent-child relationship becomes more open and therefore stronger. Share a secret that will bring pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use a down-to-earth approach and a problem will disappear. Feelings will run high early today. Avoid treading on someone's toes. You will enjoy sharing the limelight with a child.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	2 ♡
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

Many years ago we came across a bit of verse about someone attempting the impossible, only to find it couldn't be done. But sometimes someone lends a helping hand.

West's overcall suggested to North that most of South's points would be working. He decided, therefore, that slam should have reasonable play, and got there by the shortest possible route.

West led the queen of clubs, ducked in dummy, and it held the trick as East signalled with the ten. The club continuation was taken by the ace, and the king-ace of trumps revealed the bad break. Things looked bleak.

Declarer tried three rounds of spades, discarding his losing club. When that held, he ruffed a club and was in ecstasy when that suit also divided evenly, setting up a long club on the table. All that remained was to draw the last two trumps and claim the contract, since all dummy's black-suit cards were winners.

Declarer did superbly to cash in on a lucky distribution. As is often the case, however, we must credit the defense with an assist.

West's lead of the queen of clubs surely marked him with the jack. Therefore, East could have overtaken with the king to shift to a heart. As the cards lie, that would have resulted in the slam going down.

Declarer would have been forced to ruff in dummy, shortening the trumps there to three. Now, there is no way declarer can come to 12 tricks. Try it!

Sandi Patti, Amy Grant top gospel award winners

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sandi Patti has been voted gospel music's No. 1 female singer for the eighth straight year and Amy Grant has been chosen top artist for the third time.

The two heartfelt vocalists shared major honors Thursday night with the new a cappella group Take 6, which won four awards at the 20th annual Gospel Music Association awards show.

Patti

Ms. Patti, who has dominated Christian music awards this decade, won five honors and Ms. Grant earned three.

Besides winning female vocalist of the year, Ms. Patti won top inspirational song for "In Heaven's Eyes," No. 1 inspirational album for "Make His Praise Glorious," choral collection album of the year for "Sandi Patti Choral Praise" and instrumental album for "A Symphony of Praise." The instrumental award was for the musicianship of others on the album and not for her vocals.

"I sure like what I'm doing," Ms. Patti said later. "I'd do it if there were awards or not."

Ms. Grant broke Ms. Patti's two-year reign as artist of the year and also won for best contemporary gospel album and short-form video, both for "Lead Me On."

She said the recording of "Lead Me On" was interrupted by the birth of her son, Matthew, in 1987.

"I don't feel like the same girl who started the project," she said, chuckling.

Ms. Grant, of Nashville, also was voted artist of the year in 1983 and 1986.

Take 6, which won two Grammy awards in February, added to their award stockpile even though they have been singing for only two years and have released just one album.

The Nashville group was voted group of the year and best new artist, and won top black gospel album for "Take 6" and No. 1 contemporary black gospel song for "If We Ever."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 49-year-old Texas man has received Kentucky's first lung transplant in a 7½-hour operation at Humana Hospital-Audubon in Louisville.

Pete Toledo of Bryan was listed in critical condition Thursday night, as is customary for recent transplant recipients; but surgeon Allan Lansing said he was "resting comfortably" and showing signs of returning lung function in the hospital's intensive-care unit.

Toledo, who had incurable pulmonary fibrosis, a progressive and fatal lung disease, had to wait nine months for a donor lung for Wednesday's transplant. At least 67 people in the United States and Canada remain on waiting lists for lung transplants, said Liz Reed, education coordinator for Kentucky Organ Donor Affiliates.

Surgeons at Audubon, who had hoped to perform 14 to 17 lung transplants within 24 months after receiving permission to do the procedure last year, saw one prospective recipient die before a lung became available.

Officials declined to provide details about the donor to Toledo other than to say the lung came from a brain-dead individual at a Kentucky hospital "a couple of hundred miles" from Louisville.

Toledo has an 80 percent chance of surviving the first year and going on to lead a near-normal life, said Lansing, director of Humana Heart Institute International.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Lawrence, Nancy Sinatra, Joanne Worley and Earl Holliman were among the celebrities who turned out to honor singer Jack Jones as he was awarded a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Jones' star is beside one honoring his father, actor-singer Allan Jones.

"There are some good singers and there are some great singers and then there are some totally original singers," singer Mel Torme said of Jones.

Jones, 47, earned two Grammy awards for best male vocal performance for his 1960s hits "Lollipops and Roses" and "Wives and Lovers." But he may be best known to television audiences as the singer of TV's "Love Boat" theme.

"Obviously I can't be blase about the whole thing," Jones said. "This is a big thing."

Jones has recorded more than 50 albums. His latest, "I Am a Singer," will be released this summer on USA Records.

COVINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Carroll O'Connor was headed back to work today, resuming his role in the television series "In the Heat of the Night" a month after undergoing open-heart surgery.

O'Connor

O'Connor, who portrays Chief Bill Gillespie in the program, will film a scene for the season's final episode, titled "Missing."

In it, Gillespie is kidnapped while attending a domestic terrorism conference in Washington.

The show will air May 16 on NBC.

O'Connor, best known for his 12-year role as Archie Bunker in "All in the Family," underwent open-heart surgery and had his gall bladder removed at an Atlanta hospital last month.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Herbert Mills, who for nearly seven decades sang with the venerable Mills Brothers group, died Wednesday at the age of 77.

Mills performed with brothers Donald and Harry in a trio whose harmonies weathered musical changes from the big band era through rock 'n' roll.

Mills began singing with his brothers when he was 10 years old and by 1925, the Mills Brothers were regulars on a Cincinnati radio show.

The Mills Brothers became famous in 1943 with their hit "Paper Doll," soon followed by "You Always Hurt the One You Love." Their string of hits continued into the 1950s with "Daddy's Little Girl" and "Glow Worm."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Five-time Grammy winner B.J. Thomas will appear at a benefit concert for a hospital that helps drug abusers and people who have been sexually abused.

Thomas, whose hits include "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head" and "Hooked on a Feeling," is scheduled to perform May 11 at the nearly $90-a-person benefit.

The performance is to help pay for a new complex at Tennessee Christian Medical Center, which will be used to help adolescents and adults who have experienced various forms of abuse.

Wholesale prices show modest rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, despite a big jump in home heating oil costs, rose a moderate 0.4 percent in March as inflation eased somewhat after steep increases of 1 percent in each of the previous two months, the government said today.

The boost in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index reflected higher costs for both food and energy, although the increases in both categories were smaller than those registered in the first two months of the year.

The overall gain was generally in line with or a little under analysts' expectations and was likely to help calm Wall Street's inflation fears.

While March's increase was much more restrained than the strong jumps of the previous two months, wholesale prices one stop short of retail have risen at a compound annual rate of 10.2 percent over the past three months.

That is the largest quarterly increase since prices rose at a compound annual rate of 13.2 percent during the first three months of 1981.

Should the first quarter's rate be sustained for the rest of the year, it would far exceed the increase registered for 1988, when wholesale prices rose 4 percent in what was the steepest gain in seven years. Prices had risen 2.2 percent in 1987.

Financial markets had been fearful that further bad news on the inflation front would prompt the Federal Reserve Board to step up its campaign to slow economic growth and restrain inflationary pressures by pushing up interest rates.

Wholesale food prices rose 0.8 percent last month after jumping 1.2 percent during February. Last month's increase in food costs was led by a 38.8 percent gain in prices for eggs while vegetable costs dropped 11.6 percent after surging 35.3 percent during February.

Energy prices, meanwhile, rose 0.9 percent in March following a 2.4 percent increase during the previous month. Last month's increase was led by a 16.8 percent rise in home heating oil prices, while gasoline costs rose 3.5 percent and natural gas prices declined 5.4 percent.

Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, prices rose 0.3 percent in March, down from a 0.6 percent increase a month earlier.

The overall March increase left the Producer Price Index for finished goods at 112.2, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 in 1982 would have cost $112.20 last month.

That was up 50 cents from February and 5.6 percent above March 1988.

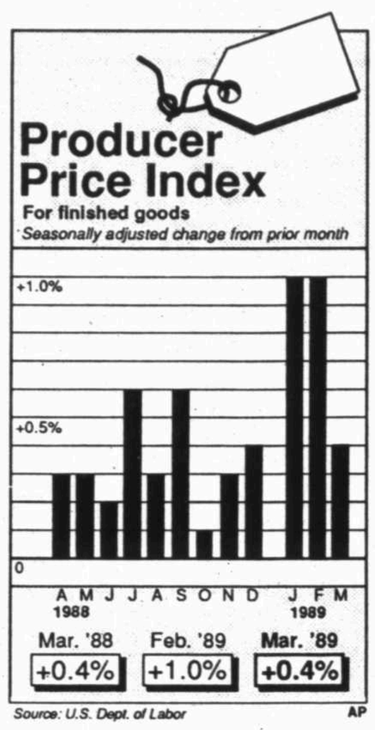

The troubling inflation reports at the start of 1989 have come even as signs emerge that the economy is cooling off in response to the Fed's anti-inflation campaign.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co., said in advance of today's report that while the economy does seem to be losing steam, it may take awhile for that to translate into inflation relief.

"There is a tendency to expect inflation to weaken as soon as the economy starts to slow, but more often than not it doesn't happen that way," Sinai said. "More often than not, it takes a weak economy for quite some time before inflation begins to peak and then drop."

Despite the moderate price hikes last month for finished goods such as bread and clothing, the index for prices at earlier stages of production demonstrated stronger inflation.

Oil prices head lower

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thursday's retreat in oil prices continued today, with May contracts for West Texas Intermediate falling 6 cents to stand at $20.23 at midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices fell Thursday as some traders decided to cash in their holdings to take advantage of recent price rises. WTI fell 35 cents to close at $20.29 a barrel. Other contract months also fell.

Among refined products, unleaded gasoline for May delivery fell 1.30 cents to 68.81 cents a gallon and heating oil for May delivery lost 1.06 cents to 52.14 cents a gallon.

William Byers, an oil analyst for Bear, Stearns & Co., said the decline was led by the gasoline contracts which have been rising on a combination of seasonal demands and worries about the impact of the Alaskan oil spill.

"Gasoline was the catalyst for the decline. There was some profit-taking in the gasoline group and that depressed crude and heating oil. It put some psychological pressure on the rest of the energy group," he said.

But Byers said trading was quiet and most of the price erosion occurred in the afternoon.

Peter Beutel, who follows oil prices for Elders Futures Inc., said the selling was motivated by technical conditions in the energy market.

"It seems the overriding sentiment in the market is that prices have gone as far as they can go on this particular runup," he said.

Dollar firm in quiet trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar firmed against European currencies today in quiet trading while the market awaited the release of two important economic indicators.

Gold prices retreated after gaining nearly a dollar in Hong Kong.

European traders reported thin activity this morning as the market awaited release of data on the U.S. trade deficit and producer prices.

In Tokyo, the dollar slipped 0.35 yen to a closing 132.45. Later, in London, the dollar traded at 132.55 yen.

Demand for the dollar remained strong, said Takamas Yamasaki, a trader for the Daiwa Bank in Tokyo.

—1.6525 Swiss francs, up from 1.6422

—6.3520 French francs, up from 6.3335

—2.1183 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1080

—1,377.75 Italian lire, up from 1,374.00

—1.1868 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1875.

In London, one British pound cost $1.6945, compared to late Thursday's $1.7010.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $389.50 a troy ounce, up from $388.75 bid late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $388.55.

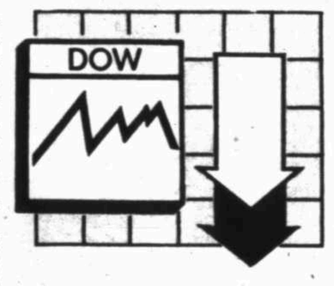

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.87 a troy ounce, unchanged from Thursday.

Stocks fall amid inflation worries

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered a broad setback Thursday as traders warily awaited the latest temperature reading on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 23.65 points to 2,296.00.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 456 up, 1,005 down and 501 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 141.59 million shares, against 146.83 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 168.22 million shares.

Analysts said a weak dollar in foreign exchange and rising open-market interest rates helped to set the tone for the day.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $20.28 billion, or 0.69 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 1.28 to 166.54.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 3.05 to 341.90, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 2.59 at 296.40.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped 1.82 to 413.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 333.44, down .79.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Elcor Corp. reduces quarterly losses

DALLAS (AP) — Roofing product manufacturer Elcor Corp. reported Thursday quarterly losses of $1.52 million, compared to a $2.51 million loss in the same quarter last year.

The company said losses amounted to 22 cents per share, on sales of $33.8 million, compared to 36 cents per share, on sales of $28.9 million in the 1988 period.

American to offer Lubbock-made wine

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — American Airlines has selected Llano Estacado Winery's 1986 Chardonnay for use on its Dallas to Tokyo flights beginning May 1. The wine is produced at Llano Estacodo's winery in Lubbock.

Failed Eastern bid opens new doors

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter V. Ueberroth's failed bid for Eastern Airlines has raised several new possibilities for the strike-crippled carrier, including an auction run by the federal bankruptcy court and new buyout offers from others.

On Thursday, a day after his $464 million deal with Ueberroth collapsed, Eastern boss Frank Lorenzo said he is turning attention to his plan to reorganize Eastern as a much smaller airline.

In Miami, meanwhile, American Airlines chief Robert Crandall said American is interested in such Eastern assets as its Latin American and Canadian routes. American, one of Eastern's leading rivals, already is expanding to capitalize on the embattled carrier's problems.

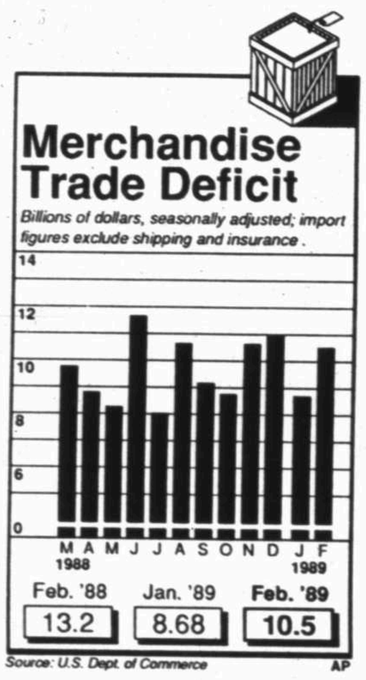

Texaco expects sale to net $1.3 billion profit

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. expects to record a $1.3 billion after-tax profit from the sale of Texaco Canada Inc., company officials said.

Texaco's chief financial officer, Allen J. Krowe, told a meeting of securities analysts Thursday that the $1.3 billion would be "slightly offset" by minor restructuring expenses.

Texaco sold its 78 percent in the lucrative Canadian subsidiary to Exxon Corp. in January for $3.24 billion. The deal was one of the final steps in a massive restructuring following the company's emergence from bankruptcy a year earlier.

Bush S&L plan clears first hurdles

WASHINGTON (AP) — After clearing its first two hurdles relatively intact, President Bush's $90 billion plan to bail out and reform the savings and loan industry is gaining momentum in Congress.

The package survived its biggest challenge so far on Thursday when congressional Democrats capitulated to Bush's financing scheme, which is designed to keep the $50 billion taxpayer cost from showing up in the federal deficit.

The House Banking Committee's financial institutions subcommittee, a legislative safehouse for the savings industry in the past, approved the overall plan after amending it to let S&L owners put up less money to stay in business than Bush had wanted.

A day earlier, the Senate Banking Committee approved the package after also weakening, but to a lesser degree, the capital standards that thrifts must meet in the future to qualify for federal deposit insurance.

The federal S&L insurance fund is now more than $25 billion in the hole because of loans that turned sour and, in many cases, fraudulent lending and accounting practices using government-insured deposits.

Another $50 billion in uncovered loan losses loom just over the horizon for 350 more insolvent thrift institutions that the government is keeping open now only because it doesn't have the money to close or merge them.

The full Senate plans to take up the bill Monday with the aim of passing it Wednesday before recessing for Passover. In the House, the bill now goes to the full Banking Committee, where Bush may win back some of the tougher capital and regulatory requirements he lost in the subcommittee.

"The Senate gave Bush about 80 to 85 percent of what he wants and we gave him 60 to 65 percent," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a subcommittee member who was on the losing side of a 24-23 vote to cut Bush's proposed capital requirements.

SEC, Drexel announce settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. faces federal supervision and a future without financier Michael Milken in its out-of-court settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission over Wall Street's biggest-ever securities fraud case.

The agreement Thursday resolved civil charges that included insider trading in more than 20 alleged fraud schemes and marked another milestone in the government's crackdown on white-collar corruption.

It also cleared the way for Drexel to plead guilty to six felony counts and pay a record $650 million in fines and restitution in a separate settlement of criminal charges with the Manhattan U.S. attorney's office.

SEC Chairman David S. Ruder called the deal, reached after four months of often bitter negotiations, "the most far-reaching relief ever obtained by the commission against a major regulated entity."

Drexel, the nation's fifth-largest securities firm, agreed to submit to extensive monitoring by the SEC for three years; set up a securities compliance watchdog committee and a disciplinary panel; and appoint a new chairman, general counsel, ombudsman and accounting chief subject to SEC approval.

In addition, Drexel agreed to terminate all relations with Milken, who helped transform Drexel into a Wall Street powerhouse by peddling high-risk securities known as junk bonds, and to bar its employees from direct or indirect business dealings with him.

U.S. trade gap widens 21 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit swelled by 20.9 percent to $10.5 billion in February as Americans increased their appetite for foreign goods, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the sharp deterioration in the trade picture reflected a 5.3 percent increase in imports, which swamped a slight 0.6 percent rise in export sales. The report was in line with economists' expectations.

The February deficit, combined with a revised shortfall of $8.68 billion for January, would translate into an annual imbalance of $115 billion compared with a deficit for all of 1988 of $119.76 billion.

Last year's figure represented a 21.3 percent improvement over 1987's record high of $152.1 billion, but analysts generally expect the positive trend to fizzle this year.

Rising prices for imported oil and a strengthening of the value of the dollar, which make U.S. goods more expensive overseas, are contributing to the stall.

The sharp narrowing of the trade deficit last year was credited with providing almost half of U.S. economic growth. With trade providing less momentum, overall growth, as measured by the gross national product, is expected to slacken as well.

Clean coal projects suffer delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four of nine clean coal technology projects financed by the federal government are so far behind schedule the Energy Department can't estimate when they might be done, and three others are suffering delays, the government says.

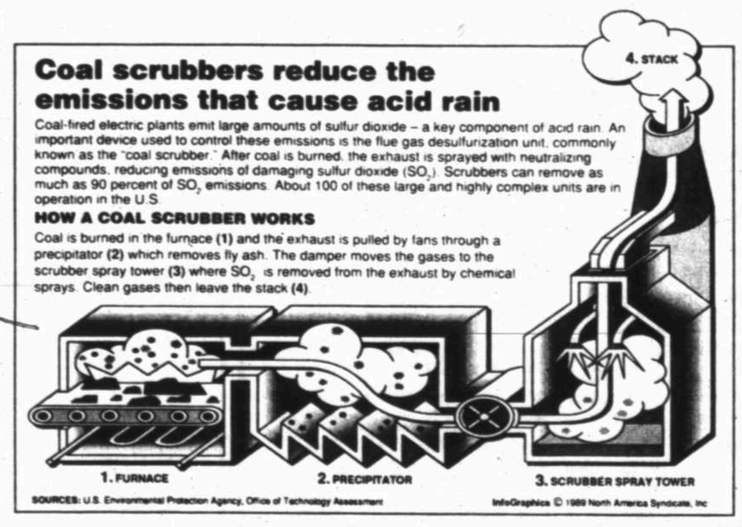

But it is too soon to tell whether the delays "will affect the timing of the commercial availability of the clean coal technologies," Keith Fultz, an energy expert with the General Accounting Office, told a House subcommittee Thursday.

In his report to the Energy and Power Subcommittee, Fultz blamed coordination, equipment and financing problems for delays in demonstration projects that account for about $8 million of the $42 million spent so far by the federal government.

Four clean coal technology projects "are in trouble at this point," he said:

■ Ohio Ontario Clean Fuels Inc.'s coal-oil coprocessing project at Warren, Ohio was about 13 months off track because of difficulty in getting environmental permits when it experienced economic problems. The Energy Department could not provide new estimates for when the project might be completed.

■ Energy International Inc.'s underground coal gasification project at Rawlings, Wyo., has postponed its completion date by 15½ months because the company has been unable to get private financing.

Georgia cold fusion experiment results in doubt

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech researchers, who believed an experiment apparently confirming "cold" nuclear fusion was a "sure thing," now are skeptical of their results because a key instrument may have been inaccurate.

James Mahaffey, senior researcher on the project, said the experiment would be run again to determine if the equipment caused error in the project's results. He acknowledged that the initial announcement of success might have been premature.

"It's not as sure a thing as it was," Mahaffey said in an interview Thursday night. "It seemed like a sure thing. Now, I'm getting nervous."

The five-man research team announced Monday that a chemistry experiment detected the emission of subatomic neutron particles at room temperatures, a sure sign of fusion, when nuclei of one element were forced into another substance.

Normally, a nuclear fusion reaction requires extreme temperatures and pressures; fusion at low temperatures could mean a cheap, clean and nearly inexhaustible power source.

The experiment — and another announced Monday by researchers at Texas A&M University — appeared to confirm a March 23 reaction obtained by B. Stanley Pons, a chemist at the University of Utah.

At the time, Pons said he had tried but failed to detect neutrons in his experiment and hailed the Georgia Tech results as "a real breakthrough." The announcements touched off a flurry of scientific comment worldwide.

But Thursday, the Georgia Tech team announced that questions had arisen about the accuracy of the probe used to detect the emission of neutrons. The researchers said the probe may not be reliable at the low temperatures used in the experiment.

"For some reason, a small temperature change causes an amplified reading," Mahaffey said. "That raises some questions."

Mahaffey said the probe — made of boron triflouride — was also being used by scientists at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif. A researcher there also noticed false readings caused by heat.

"He noticed the count rate going up when he put his fist around it (the probe)," Mahaffey said. "Then they put a hair dryer on it — the count rate went up by a factor of 10."

Commercial use far off

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Generating electricity by combining atoms in a fusion reaction may still be a generation or more away despite promising new laboratory results, say officials from the U.S. leader in nuclear power.

"As a rule of thumb, we'd say it's probably 20 to 30 years away," said J. Robert Maxwell, manager of strategic programs for Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s energy business. "It's virtually a test-tube experiment, a bench-top experiment."

From the Manhattan Project to develop the atomic bomb in the early 1940s, it took until 1957 to build the first experimental fission power plant. Widespread commercial use of the process took another decade.

Maxwell and another top official at the nation's leading producer of nuclear power plants said fusion also may pose significant radiation hazards, although probably not as severe as those from splitting atoms in fission reactors.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Fusselman strike flows 576 barrels

From Staff Reports

JACK N. BLAIR, Midland, has completed a Fusselman discovery in Martin County. The closest comparable production is in the Belspec field to the northeast, according to Kerry Blair, who noted that there is also Fusselman production in the Mid-Mar field to the west-southwest of the discovery.

Blair potentialed the No. 1 Connell to flow 576 barrels of 50 gravity crude, 150 Mcfd and no water on a 1/2 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 450 psi. Production was natural from perforations 11,442 to 11,485 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 260:1.

Permitted as an 11,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,500 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,489 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,698.4 ft., include the Grayburg at 3,710 ft., Spraberry at 7,100, Wolfcamp at 9,030, and Silurian at 11,238 ft. Pay was topped at 11,442 ft.

Location is 1,090 ft. from south and 1,000 ft. from east lines of Section 21, Block 36, T-1-S, T&P survey, two miles west of Stanton.

The field name of Dee (Fusselman) has been proposed for the discovery. In the meantime, Blair says, "we plan to analyze the well and determine what we have."

A 576 barrel Fusselman discovery has been completed in Martin County by Jack N. Blair of Midland.

Schleicher reentry finaled in Ramon field

The reentry of an abandoned well has yielded new production in the Ramon (Leonard) field of Schleicher County, extending the pay 1-5/8 mile north-northwest.

CARAWAY OPERATING CO., San Angelo, reentered the No. 1 Nixon "139", testing it to pump nine barrels of 38 gravity crude and three barrels of water from perforations 2,647 to 2,656 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,500 gallons of acid.

Originally drilled to 7,600 ft., the well was cleaned out and plugged back to 2,753 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and east lines of Section 139, Block A, HE&WT survey, five miles west of Eldorado.

The well was drilled by Mallard Petroleum Inc. and abandoned May 21, 1967.

Sawyer producer has CAOF of 3.2 Mmcfd

MERIDIAN OIL INC., Midland, has added new production to the Sawyer (Canyon) field of Sutton County.

The No. 25 Shurley was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.2 Mmcfd. The well flowed from perforations 5,306 to 5,948 ft., which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 280,000 gallons of frac and 539,000 lbs. sand. Condensate gravity was 52.5 API.

Drilled to 6,100 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 6,038 ft.

Location is 559 ft. from south and 1,320 ft. from west lines of Section 18, Block B, HE&WT survey, Abst. 1073, four miles south of Sonora.

Fina completes well in B.C. (Canyon) field

The B.C. (Canyon) field of Howard County has gained new production.

FINA OIL & CHEMICAL CO. finaled the No. 1 Thomas to flow 18 barrels of 43.1 gravity crude and no water on an 11/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 240 psi. The well flowed from perforations 9,044 to 9,054 ft., which had been acidized with 2,750 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 9,400 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,975 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,279 ft.

The well topped the Upper Canyon at 8,992 ft. and Strawn at 9,180 ft. on ground elevation of 2,605 ft. Pay was topped at 8,992 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and east lines of Section 2, Block 33, T-1-N, T&P survey, one mile west of Fairview.

Winkler field gains two new producers

TEXAS KEYSTONE INC. has added two new wells to the Hendrick field of Winkler County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Leck "B" flowed 54 barrels of 34.3 gravity crude, 98 Mcfd and two barrels of water on a 23/64 inch choke from perforations 3,055 to 3,100 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 180 psi.

The No. 2 Leck "B" was tested to flow 59 barrels of 34.1 gravity crude, 103 Mcfd and seven barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 3,113 to 3,128 ft. with a flowing tubing pressure of 185 psi.

DREXEL

The settlement also ensures Drexel's cooperation in any future government investigations.

"We think it achieves everything that's needed for the protection of the investing public," SEC Enforcement Director Gary Lynch said. "It will also give us the ability to bring other people to justice that might not be brought to justice if we had stayed at war for another three to five years."

Milken could be rehired only if he is exonerated of all 98 racketeering and fraud charges filed by the government in a separate indictment that seeks $1.8 billion in forfeitures from him and two others.

Drexel and Milken have been the main government targets since the Ivan Boesky insider trading scandal of 1986. Boesky, now in federal prison, has been a leading source of evidence against Drexel, Milken and others.

Drexel said in a summary of the agreement that it was paying the largest penalties ever in a securities case and making "comprehensive and unprecedented structural changes" that place the private firm under tight scrutiny.

"We expect that as a result of this settlement agreement and other steps we will take, Drexel will become the standard in the securities industry," said Drexel Chief Executive Frederick H. Joseph.

Drexel, which said it lost an estimated $2 billion in business during the government's investigation and spent hundreds of millions of dollars defending itself, also immediately named as its chairman John S.R. Shad, who started the Drexel probe during his 1981-87 term as SEC chairman.

In addition, Drexel will pay $15 million in civil penalties, an amount already accounted for under the total $650 million in penalties it has agreed to pay the government.

The 184-page SEC complaint filed last September described 21 alleged fraud schemes between 1984 and late 1986 and portrayed Drexel, Milken and others as systematic cheaters who engaged in stock manipulation, insider trading and other frauds.

The pact still must be approved by U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack, who temporarily has been barred from any rulings in the case while the U.S. Supreme Court considers whether to hear a defense request to remove him because of an alleged conflict of interest.

PLAN

"By the time it's all over, he may get 90 to 95 percent of what he wants," Schumer said, referring to the $6 that S&L owners would have to have in capital for every $100 they lend — the same level now required of banks.

The subcommittee, on an amendment by its chairman, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., and Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., voted to keep the present requirement — $3 in capital for every $100 of lending.

But it also tightened the standards in one significant way by saying at least half that amount, or $1.50 for each $100 in loans, must be in "tangible" assets or real money that the owners could lose.

The administration and congressional auditors have blamed part of the S&L crisis on "smoke and mirrors" accounting practices that Congress and regulators authorized, allowing thrifts to count non-cash items such as good will and deferred loan losses as capital.

The administration is still unhappy with House and Senate provisions that would permit capital-deficient thrifts to continue growing. Under its proposal, capital-weak institutions would have been required to shrink their operations or merge with a healthier partner.

"It's really building the skyscraper on quicksand," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which under the bill will have expanded responsibility to insure deposits in S&Ls as well as commercial banks.

The House panel also voted to increase from $50 million to $75 million the amount Bush had requested for the Justice Department to pursue criminal fraud and conspiracy charges against S&L executives who loaned or invested deposits illegally.

And it amended Bush's plan to allow banks to begin buying up both insolvent and healthy thrift institutions immediately. In deference to small banks and the thrift industry, Bush had proposed allowing banks to buy only ailing S&Ls for the next two years and healthy ones as well after that.

"The one question we are repeatedly asked is what are we doing to bring more capital into a capital-deficit industry," said Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga. "This is the one thing we can do."

Opponents, however, fear that change will increase taxpayer costs because banks will buy only healthy S&Ls, leaving the government stuck to pick up all the losses of the insolvent ones.

While the banks won that issue, they lost another one to the insurance industry. The subcommittee voted to declare a 2½-year moratorium on allowing more than $100,000 of multimillion-dollar bank investment certificates to be covered by federal insurance.

TRADE

That would be bad news for the Bush administration, which is counting on strong economic growth to keep tax revenues high and hold down the federal budget deficit.

Administration officials have vowed to whittle the deficit by opening more foreign markets to U.S. goods.

As usual, the United States posted its largest trade deficit with Japan in February, $4.65 billion, up from a three-year low of $3.53 billion a month earlier.

The imbalance with Western Europe was $624 million, a deterioration from January's rare $46 million surplus.

The February performance reflected a 5.3 percent jump in imports, which rose to a seasonally adjusted $39.4 billion. The higher figure included increases of $1.0 billion in sales of foreign capital goods to businesses and $800 million in purchases of foreign cars.

U.S. imports of oil managed to decline 7.2 percent to $3.24 billion despite the third consecutive increase in the price of a barrel of oil, $15.08 in February, up from $14.46 a month earlier. The volume of oil imported dipped to 7.7 million barrels a day from 7.8 million.

U.S. exports were up a lackluster 0.6 percent as drops in agricultural and manufactured products nearly offset gains in sales of industrial products and autos.

The stall in trade fits in with other evidence of slower growth, including lackluster retail sales and a slackening of employment growth in March.

"By our calculation, the widening of the deficit will come essentially because of flat-to-down exports and an increase in imports," economist Samuel Kahan of Kleinwort Benson Government Securities said in advance of the trade report. "That is not a very healthy combination."

PRICES

Prices at the intermediate level for items such as flour and cloth rose 0.7 percent, while the cost of crude goods such as cotton and wheat was up 2.3 percent.

March's figures on increases in consumer prices, which so far this year have been smaller than those at the wholesale level, will be released on Tuesday. The Consumer Price Index rose 0.4 percent in February and 0.6 percent in January.

Sinai and many others are forecasting a mild recession by the first half of 1990, but some analysts still are hopeful that the Fed can slow the economy just enough to restrain inflation and produce a "soft landing" in which growth slows but the economy avoids an outright downturn.

"I don't foresee the Federal Reserve allowing a recession to develop," said economist Samuel Kahan of Kleinwort Benson Government Securities Inc. in Chicago. He predicted the Fed would ease its grip on the money supply rather than allow an economic downturn to develop.

"I don't see any fundamental weakness in the economy to suggest that a recession is coming," Kahan said.

COAL

■ M.W. Kellogg Co.'s advanced coal gasification project proposed for New York is nine months off schedule because of problems finding buyers for the power the project would generate.

■ Energy and Environment Research Corp.'s gas reburning project was delayed for a year because of problems coordinating with utilities participating in the project, complying with environmental requirements and needed cost-cutting measures.

Fultz said he's concerned that the clean coal demonstration projects having the most difficulty are the ones in which the federal government has agreed to pick up a large share of the costs.

"These four projects have the highest rate of federal money," he said. "Two of them are 50 percent (taxpayer backed) and the other two are 38 percent. That's an average of 43 percent to 44 percent which is far above the overall average of about 30 percent to 31 percent."

The government, utilities and other private industries are sharing the cost of developing new ways of burning coal so the plentiful fuel can provide more power with less pollution.

Gasses from coal-burning power plants help cause both acid rain and the greenhouse effect, or overall warming of the globe.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

All mutual fund investments contain some risk

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I never had our money anyplace other than in savings accounts and certificates of deposit at banks. But about a year ago, we invested our life savings in two mutual funds, both of which hold U.S. government securities.

We are both retired and want to protect our savings. We fear the stock market. However, we have been told by both funds that our investments there are just as safe as in CDs at a bank.

Should we stay with the mutual funds or switch to CDs?

A. Although this column never gives "buy" or "sell" recommendations on individual securities or mutual funds, I'll cast a cautious "hold" vote in your situation — with the proviso that you make the final decision between the two of you.

Doyle

However, I am conscience-bound to make the following point. If anyone at either of those two mutual funds or any sales person who put you into those investments actually told you the funds are as safe as CDs, that person lied and fractured the rules.

There is some risk in all mutual funds. Even though they are relatively conservative, the risk in funds holding U.S. government securities is that the market values of those securities will fall, taking the values of the funds' shares and the values of your investments lower.

Both mutual funds you named in your letter have good records of past performance and pay high dividends. They seem well suited for you, unless you are so worried about risk that you shouldn't be "in the market" at all.

Another thing to keep in mind is that you paid 4.75 percent commissions when you invested in those funds. Based on the dividends the two funds have been paying, it took about six months for you to just "get even" for that commission bite.

Q. I was shocked by your statement that the value of shares in a mutual fund holding U.S. Treasury securities can decline. You must be wrong. Aren't those share values guaranteed by our federal government?

A. NO! Our government guarantees that interest will be paid on U.S. Treasury securities and that Treasuries will be paid off at face value when they mature. However, between the time they are issued and the dates on which they mature, the market prices of those securities can rise and fall.

Q. My broker claims no mutual fund has a commission charge higher than 8.5 percent. I say some funds have commissions as high as 9.3 percent. Who is correct?

A. Both of you. You're simply expressing commissions differently.

The broker is quoting commissions the way mutual funds with maximum commission loads do — as a percentage of the amount of money an investor pays when buying shares.

You're quoting commissions as a percentage of the amount of money invested after the commission is deducted.

The maximum commission allowed on the purchase of mutual fund shares is 8.5 percent of the total amount the investor pays. If you put $1,000 into the purchase of a mutual fund with a full 8.5 percent load, the commission is $85. As a result, you buy shares worth $915.

Now, $85 is 8.5 percent of $1,000. But it is 9.3 percent of $915. In this example, you pay a commission equal to 9.3 percent of the money you actually invested.

Q. Years ago, there were only two types of mutual funds. "Load" funds took an 8.5 percent commission off the top of every investment. "No-load" funds charged no commission.

Over the past several years, I have read about funds with "rear-end loads" in the form of redemption fees and contingent deferred sales charges when shares are redeem. And I have learned about funds with continuing charges for 12b-1 plans.

Just recently, I noticed some funds with commissions about halfway between 8.5 percent and zero. Is this another new development?

A. Not at all. There have been some mutual funds with commissions below 8.5 percent for decades. When a fund has a commission no higher than 4.5 percent, it's counted as-a "low-load" fund.

Dr. Gary Goldstein, president of the American Veterinary Dental Society, demonstrates some of the equipment used in canine dental hygiene. Goldstein, from Houston, said dogs and other small animals should get their teeth brushed every day and cleaned once a year to prevent "doggie breath."

Dentist says pet owners can give doggie breath 'the brush off'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Is Fido's breath worse than his bite?

If so, maybe it's time you learned about doggie dental hygiene, says the new president of the American Veterinary Dental Society.

"It's a myth that dogs just get doggie breath," said Dr. Gary Goldstein, whose organization has grown from 10 members in 1977 to 850 today.

"But if we get their teeth cleaned once a year and brushed everyday they won't have doggie breath."

Goldstein, a veterinarian in Houston, was elected president of the society at the start of this week's convention of the American Animal Hospital Association.

About 1,300 veterinarians are attending the conference to hear lectures on topics such as anorexia in Angoras and pacemakers in pugs. But pet dentistry, according to Goldstein, is the fastest-growing veterinary care specialty.

"Dental problems in animals have been around for years," Goldstein said. "We're now just recognizing that they're problems that can be taken care of. Just about exactly the same thing that can be done in human dentistry we can do in animal dentistry."

Preventive care includes a daily brushing of a pet's teeth with a special brush and toothpaste and a professional cleaning and checkup each year by a veterinarian. More extensive treatment can even include braces.

Many pet owners are not aware that Rover's bad breath may be sign of a more serious problem, that he needs a root canal or has an overbite that makes it difficult to chew properly.

"Ninety percent of all pets in the United States have some type of dental disease," Goldstein said. "When I work in the clinics, it seems like every animal that comes in has some kind of dental problem."

Nevertheless, Goldstein has had a problem getting people to take pet dentistry seriously. Even his colleagues have been known to chuckle.

"If the vets laugh and joke about it, then their clients will laugh and joke about it and we're not getting anywhere," Goldstein said. "That's why we need to have meetings like this. If we can't spread the word to vets, then certainly their clients aren't going to be aware there's a problem."

Goldstein said the cost of dental treatments such as root canals, crowns and orthodontics did not seem to deter pet owners from getting the work done.

"One of the reasons it has blossomed is that animals now are more companions than they are just pets," he said. "We need to do all we can do to accommodate these people who want the best for their animals."

Goldstein's start in veterinarian dentistry began when he was preparing to graduate from the University of Minnesota in 1984. There had been no lectures on animal dentistry, and he noticed that the veterinarians he worked with virtually ignored broken teeth and other dental problems. So, noting that the trend in veterinary medicine was toward specialization, he decided he had found his niche.

Goldstein does only pet dental work and says he's "swamped."

About 90 percent of his work is on the mouths of dogs and cats, but he has also been called out to the zoo to fill five cavities in the mouth of a grizzly bear and to the University of Houston to do three root canals on the school's mascot cougar.

But promoting preventative dental care for pets is his primary concern.

Fungus flourishing in Midwestern corn crop worries food industry

Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — It doesn't warrant celebrity testimony on Capitol Hill, a television expose or signs in the supermarket, but aflatoxin, an obscure fungus flourishing in the Midwestern corn crop has the food industry and its regulators on guard.

The fungus, aspergillus flavus, produces aflatoxin, a poison and carcinogen. It periodically grows on corn and other foods, but last year's drought created ideal conditions for a major outbreak in the Midwestern corn belt.

Unlike the dispute over the apple growth-regulator Alar, no one disputes the peril posed by afltoxin.

"I think aflatoxins are a real serious public health threat," says Maurice Guerrette, who supervises food inspection services for the New York State Agriculture and Markets Department.

"There really is no safe level," says Rodney Leonard, executive director of the Community Nutrition Institute in Washington. "Clinical studies have always turned up tumors."

Cargill Inc., of Minneapolis, a major grain producer, has a strict policy regarding corn contaminated with aflatoxin: "We don't handle it; we don't transport it," Cargill spokeswoman Laurie Johnson said crisply.

While the 1988 outbreak was more serious than in the past, it is unclear how widespread the contamination is.

Midwestern corn moves through the food chain as feed for dairy animals, beef cattle, pigs and poultry, and in prepared foods such as corn chips, tacos, and in corn meal, grits and popcorn. Aflatoxin does not affect the sweet corn, or "eating ears," or frozen, canned or creamed corn.

Some Corn Belt states have found aflatoxin in a third of the samples tested, but the federal Food and Drug Administration's most recent round of tests turned up six out of 263 samples, or about two percent, in corn meals and flours for human consumption.

Aflatoxin is "significantly reduced" by cooking corn meals, cereals or grits, said Bill Grigg, an FDA spokesman.

In unprocessed field corn, 95 samples out of 1,650, or about six percent, turned up.

"Our policy has been to remove the violative product from the market," says Grigg.

FDA tests of finished products (cooked cereal, dry cereal, tortillas, corn chips and popcorn) have been either totally negative, or under 20 parts per billion (PPB).

The FDA does not allow more than 20 PPB in corn for human consumption. The agency sets a limit of 300 PPB for animal feed and .05 PPB for milk.

The agency has not set an official "tolerance level" for aflatoxin, a procedure which requires public input prior to establishing a safe level.

Previously, the agency has allowed corn with higher levels of aflatoxin to be used in non-dairy animals, citing scientific data that showed this diversion of tainted corn would not be harmful either to animals or to humans.

This troubles Leonard of the Community Nutrition Institute, who says, "They don't take any steps; all they do is change the level of allowable contamination. That's like saying, 'We'll redefine the problem so it isn't a problem any more.' So nobody has any protection, and no one is sure."

After the aflatoxin outbreak of 1983, the Community Nutrition Institute took the FDA to court to try to force the agency to establish a set tolerance level. It lost, but Leonard says the organization will pursue the issue. The group would like to see:

- Better harvesting technology to minimize the spread of the fungus;
- Development of technology to detoxify contaminated corn;
- A network of rapid tests that can isolate tainted grain before it moves too far through the marketplace to be removed.

While the FDA concedes some test results come in too late to stop a shipment of contaminated corn, it maintains the supply is safe. Besides federal testing, most of the grain industry conducts its own sampling and testing.

Alaskan oil spill spawns boycotts, protests, jokes

Associated Press

The nation's worst oil spill is provoking boycotts of some Exxon stations, galvanizing protests from enraged citizens and talk jockeys, and leading to reports of bomb threats.

It's also inspiring some slick jokes.

But the shipload of Exxon bashing the past three weeks ago isn't funny to some gas station operators who quickly point out that the public shouldn't equate them with the giant oil corporation.

And many station operators maintain they've witnessed few, if any, effects of organized efforts against Exxon Corp.

A Phoenix-based group calling itself Friends of Prince William Sound — where the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground on a charted reef and spilled some 10.1 million gallons of oil — turned out about 50 marchers on Tuesday outside a Phoenix Exxon station, carrying signs with slogans such as:

"Exxon: sign of the double cross."

An estimated 2,000 people held a two-hour rally Wednesday at Seattle's Alki Beach to protest the oil spill, forcing Seattle police to close Alki Avenue, the thoroughfare that provides the only access to the beach.

Radio station KUBE-FM created and promoted the event. Announcers Charlie Brown and Ty Flint spent 12 hours broadcasting calls from the public about the oil spill. Four other radio stations joined in a simulcast.

Meantime, Michael Siegal of KING in Seattle is trying to generate national interest in a boycott against Exxon. He has appeared on other radio stations around the nation and said he is receiving 200 letters a day, many with cut-up Exxon credit cards.

At radio station KARN in Little Rock, Ark., talk show host Pat Lynch said Thursday that he has had guests on twice this week to discuss the Alaska spill, and he found listeners were livid.

"Listeners are just plain upset and there is, I think, an unusual sense of rage," he said. "I think it hinges on two things, one of which is the out and out undisguised greed of price increases coming at this time, and also the certain knowledge that the consumer will bear the cost of the Valdez cleanup."

In Los Angeles, morning show host Peter Tilden of KLSX-FM, a rock 'n' roll station, planned today to solicit volunteers to help in the cleanup.

He further plans to ask listeners to slice Exxon credits cards and boycott the oil company for its "irresponsible actions in accounting for the spill," said station program director, Tom Yates.

To others in radio and television, the issue has been a laughing matter.

"Exxon sprung into action immediately, and sent in their crack cleanup crew — a guy named Raoul with a squeegee and a dirty rag," Johnny Carson joked recently on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show."

He also quipped: "I don't think Exxon's new slogan helps at all: 'Exxon, we're not as bad as Union Carbide.'"

But all joking aside, Wayne Konitshek, managing director of the Colorado Service Station Dealers Association, said three bomb threats and two protests have been reported at Exxon service stations since last weekend.

He said the association is attempting to make the public aware of the difference between independently owned stations and company owned stations.

Independent dealers, he said, "are as innocent as the otters in Alaska."

NATION in brief

New AIDS drug raises questions

SAN FRANCISCO (HNS) — The new AIDS drug unveiled Thursday by the University of California and GeneLabs Inc. is raising expections, hope — and cautions — even before it has been tested in a single human being.

The day before the announcement, the phones began ringing at the UCSF AIDS Health Services Program, and by then, staffer George Martin already knew the question. "GLQ223? Everybody wants to know about that."

Project Inform, a clearinghouse for AIDS treatment information, put out a special bulletin. Physicans who treat people infected with the human immunodeficiency virus are bracing themselves for an onslaught of questions: Does it work, is it available?

And people with HIV are "finding themselves experiencing hope they had buried for a long time," said Cleve Jones, founder of The Names Project, and infected with the virus.

Friend of D.C. mayor indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal drug and perjury charges against a friend of Mayor Marion Barry Jr. are prompting critics to raise new questions about the mayor's ability to lead the city's anti-drug war.

Charles Lewis, 48, a former city employee, was charged in a 10-count indictment Thursday with lying to a grand jury seven times about whether he used, bought, shared or offered to sell cocaine. He also faces three counts of cocaine possession.

It is the second time in five years that an associate of the mayor's has faced drug charges.

"It heightens the circumstantial perception that there's more there than we've been told," said Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., an outspoken critic of the Barry administration. "When do you reach the point where you can conclude that where there's smoke, there's fire?"

NASA administrator to resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dale D. Myers, the acting administrator of NASA and one of the men brought back to the agency following the Challenger accident, is resigning on May 13, officials announced today.

Myers, 67, became acting administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration last week following the resignation of administrator James C. Fletcher.

Richard Truly, chief of NASA space flight program, was nominated by President Bush to become administrator, but has not yet been confirmed by the Senate.

Senator supports Bennett's efforts

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Democratic Sen. Joseph R. Biden, who was instrumental in creating the job of national "drug czar," voiced strong support Thursday for the early efforts of the man who holds the post, William Bennett, to wage war on drugs.

Noting that Bennett has six months to come up with an overall plan for attacking the narcotics problem, Biden said that, in the meantime, the former education secretary has done the right thing by targeting the nation's capital with a coorduinated federal assault on drug trafficking.

In an interview with the Hearst Newspapers, Biden said that Bennett was capturing the attention of both lawmakers and the huge press corps here. The positive result, Biden said, is that "the nation's No. 1 problem...has been spread on page one of every newspaper in the world."

Biden, who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, advocated continuing efforts both to curb the influx of drugs into this country and to reduce demand here through education programs. Calling drug use a disease, he also said there should be an increased focus on treatment programs.

The Delaware senator dismissed arguments for legalizing drugs, saying that the nation could not afford to sanction substances that kill and that legalization would send the wrong message to the world.

At the same time, Biden said that the scourge of drugs will not be brought under control "for a long, time."

He also suggested that nobody yet knows how to control the epidemic, which he said involves as many as 22 million people using illegal drugs more than casually.

Only a change in "cultural values" will reduce the nation's appetite for drugs, he said.

Calling himself a "congenital optimist," Biden said his hopes for minimizing drug use lie with those who are now between the ages of two and 12.

Biden has long advocated an executive branch coordinator for the drug fight who could "take on the bureaucratic infighting." In the interview, Biden predicted that the toughness that occasionally got Bennett in trouble as education secretary will serve him well as "drug czar."

Bennett's plan for the nation's capital calls for the expenditure of about $80 million in federal resources. Added drug enforcement agents and prosecutors, increased prison space, new drug treatment and education programs and the ousting of drug traffickers from public housing projects are part of the proposed package.

Judge rejects size as plea

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A convicted cocaine dealer seeking a light sentence cited his 540-pound build, but the judge said the argument carried little weight.

James Edward Roath said he felt "less than a human being" because of his obesity. Dealing drugs made him feel needed, argued Roath's attorney, Donald Lykkebak.

"Where was his conscience?" Circuit Judge Robert McGregor responded. "That is a matter of the mind, not of the body."

The judge sentenced Roath, 32, to 3½ years in prison and a $50,000 fine.
