Grumman Avenger

The Grumman TBF Avenger, equipped with folding wings for easier storage on aircraft carriers, was a U.S. Navy torpedo bomber during World War II. In the Battle of Midway in June 1942, a squadron of Avengers virtually was destroyed by Japanese anti-aircraft fire and by attacking fighters. Later, the Avenger proved its worth in sinking many Japanese warships. Only a few of the almost 10,000 produced during the war are flying. The Avenger will be among as many as 100 warplanes in the Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 on Saturday and Sunday at Midland International Airport.

U.S. delays WIPP

Faced with a state lawsuit and growing political opposition in New Mexico, the U.S. Department of Energy on Wednesday postponed at least until the end of November the opening of the nation's first permanent nuclear waste repository. The postponement came one day before the first truck loaded with nuclear waste was to leave a government nuclear weapons plant in Idaho and head south to Carlsbad, N.M., the site of the repository, the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant. The decision to delay the opening was made after a lawsuit was filed Wednesday in federal district court. /3D

Shirley's memoir

NEW YORK — Shirley MacLaine didn't want her daughter growing up in Hollywood, so she enrolled her at a school in Tokyo where her husband worked. Only recently, the actress said, did she learn how sorely her child had missed her. In her forthcoming memoir, "Dance While You Can," she tells how she and her daughter, Sachi, went to therapy together and how it changed their relationship.

Fans get jump on ticket 'war'

■ Yearly run's almost as interesting as LHS-Permian football game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The first battle in the Midland Lee-Odessa Permian football war took place Tuesday and Wednesday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office as fans waged a bloodless attack on available tickets.

Lee and Permian don't play until 8 p.m. Friday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium, but the yearly run for tickets is almost as interesting as the game between these two rivals.

Season ticket holders were given the "ticket" jump on the general public Tuesday, and when the ticket windows closed at 5 p.m., the line began forming again for Wednesday's sale to the general public.

However, Midland still had approximately 1,350 tickets left after the initial rush through Wedensday and Jack Tayrien, Midland athletic director, sent one section of reserved seats back to Odessa to be sold today.

"We had our ticket office open about 20 hours and felt like we had served our fans," Tayrien said Wednesday afternoon. "We still have about 150 tickets left for stragglers Thursday, but it wouldn't be fair to keep the last section until game time. This will give Odessa a chance to sell them. It will insure a sellout, I'm sure."

John Wilkins, Odessa athletic director, said the tickets he received from Midland will go on sale at Ratliff Stadium at 9 a.m. today until

Capitol takes a bath in mud

By Maureen Dowd
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Capitol is covered in mud.

In an extraordinary political psychodrama, nasty charges are flying in Congress about character assassination, ruined lives, chicanery and sandbagging, a legislative process run amok, sex, lies and raunchy movies.

■ Assessment

"When you go for the jugular," Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.,warned his colleagues on the floor of the Senate Tuesday night, "the beast comes out."

Beyond all the high-dudgeon oratory about the rules being broken and the process being tarred by the leaking of a FBI report on Anita F. Hill's allegations about Clarence Thomas, there is fear and anguish on Capitol Hill and at the White House.

■ High drama of Senate debate shifts to tense, high-stakes backroom contest.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As the Senate Judiciary Committee prepared to reopen hearings on Judge Clarence Thomas, a determined President Bush rushed to support his Supreme Court nominee Wednesday.

The White House plotted a counterattack to present Thomas as a family man with greater credibility than the woman accusing him of sexual harassment.

"I've got strong feelings, but they all end up in support for Clarence Thomas," said Bush, who drew Thomas out of the seclusion in which he had been weathering the sudden storm over his nomination and brought him to the White House for a high-profile meeting.

Thomas' confirmation process, with the vote delayed Tuesday by the Senate for one week, will resume Friday at 10 a.m., when the Senate Judiciary Committee starts a new televised hearing that could last through Saturday. The committee, which split 7-7 in its first vote on the nomination before the new allegations became public, is not expected to vote again.

Craddick seeks court reversal on districting

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The new Congressional redistricting plan that divides Midland County into three parts is a disaster, according to State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

Craddick, addressing attendees at a Midland County Republican Women luncheon Wednesday, said he is hopeful a three-judge federal court will throw out the current redistricting plan.

"The way the lines are drawn now, 186 communities in West Texas are split," Craddick said. "Every community — with the exception of Abilene — is split."

The GOP, in court challenges, has argued that the Dem-

Airsho'91 salute to WWII air power set for takeoff

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force Airsho'91 salute to America's air power in World War II is a harbinger of the CAF's official move to Midland from South Texas.

West Texans and visitors from around the world are expected at Midland International Airport to see, hear, smell — and maybe touch and climb aboard — many of the vintage, piston-powered airplanes whose prop wash, rumble and glory are legendary.

Midlanders who drive to the show Saturday and Sunday at Midland International Airport will be directed to limited parking places around the CAF headquarters by Boy Scouts at a cost of $1 per car.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce is encouraging show-goers to utilize bus transportation to the airport that begins at 8 a.m. Saturday and Sunday and will continue hourly as needed. Buses depart from the downtown Superblock parking area near the Midland County Public Library, at Basin Aviation at Midland Air-

Cuba's Congress convenes amid deep domestic crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba's Communist Party convenes today, offering President Fidel Castro the option of instituting sweeping reforms to help the country overcome its deepest domestic crisis in 32 years.

But Castro has said he will stand by his revolutionary principles, and most outside analysts believe that fundamental reform is not in the offing.

"He wants people to toe the line," says Jaime Suchlicki, a University of Miami history professor.

But American University's William Leogrande believes that recent events, including Cuba's precipitous economic decline, leave Castro and his party little choice but to opt for reform.

"He's got to start a strategy for dealing with the current crisis," says Leogrande. "It has to be a reform strategy. He can't say, 'We're going to stay the course.'" Leogrande concedes that most Cuba analysts disagree with his thesis.

Cole Blasier, a Cuba expert at the Library of Congress, says Castro believes that a reformist movement will lead to the unraveling of his authority.

"I don't see how, politically, Castro can make far-reaching reforms in the Cuban economy," Blasier says.

A U.S. government analyst, asking not to be identified, says it is difficult to exaggerate the importance of the Congress to the revolution's future.

"What's done at the Congress will be key to the regime's survival," the official said.

Castro need not worry about critical international reporting on the Congress. He is making the conclave a family affair, prohibiting foreign journalists from attending as well as foreign communist delegations.

The collapse of the socialist bloc led to sharp cuts in Cuba's foreign trade, and the result has been an acute shortage of food and other products. Changes in relations with the Soviet

WEATHER SUMMARY

Look for sunny, 80s repeat

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and southeast winds at 5 to 10 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday is expected to be fair with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 52, Wednesday's high was 88 compared to the record high for Oct. 9 of 94 set in 1965. The record low for today was set in 1945 when the mercury dipped to 50.

STATE

Texas was mostly sunny and warm Wednesday with southerly breezes. It was partly cloudy in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the lower Gulf coast.

High pressure over the Western United States contributed to the dry conditions while a cool front across the Panhandle helped keep winds less gusty than Tuesday.

Winds were from the south at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

Temperatures climbed into the 80s, although some highs in the 70s were reported.

The forecast for North Texas was for continued fair conditions through Friday with highs in the lower 80s. Lows were expected to be in the 50s.

West Texas was expected to be fair with highs mostly in the 80s. Lows were predicted in the 40s and 50s.

NATION

Heavy rain continued to fall Wednesday in southern Florida, where areas had been drenched by nearly 20 inches in two days. Skies were clear or partly cloudy over much of the rest of the nation.

Hollywood, Fla., received 14 inches Tuesday, followed by nearly 6 inches through Wednesday morning. Miami received 8½ inches by Wednesday, more than the 7¼ inches the city usually gets during the entire month of October, the National Weather Service said.

Residents of Dade and Broward counties were trying to clean up from Tuesday's rain, which caused widespread street flooding. Authorities advised against fishing and swimming in canals, the Miami River and Biscayne Bay because sewers were overwhelmed by the downpour.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over east-central and southeast Florida.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

THOMAS: Nomination battle lines abruptly shift

aide whose allegations of sexual harassment have thrown the confirmation into disarray, will both appear, although not at the same time. Two other witnesses are expected to testify that Professor Hill, who now teaches law at the University of Oklahoma, spoke to them about her accusations years ago.

The questioning of the witnesses will be conducted for the Democrats mainly by Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the panel's chairman, and two other senators yet to be named. The Republicans have not designated their primary questioners.

The judge's chief Senate supporter, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said Thomas "will look the American people in the eye" and deny the accusations by Professor Hill, which put into serious jeopardy what had seen like a certain confirmation just a few days ago.

The White House on Wednesday deliberately avoided engaging the issues surrounding the new debate over Judge Thomas. In their public and private statements, administration officials betrayed no anxiety that defending Thomas and attacking Professor Hill could in the end backfire and subject Bush to the same charges of insensitivity about sexual harassment that have been hurled at the Senate.

The abruptly redrawn lines of battle over the nomination took focus during a day in which the high drama and open confrontation of the Senate debate shifted into an equally tense and high-stakes backroom contest.

While trying to maintain cordial relations with Biden, the White House took pains Wednesday to say that it expected the committee to stick to the agreement under which the vote was delayed: that the senators would not resume their questioning about Thomas' judicial opinions.

MUD: White House prepares assault against aide gether, they and their institution will be on the line," said Norman Ornstein, a political analyst at the American Enterprise Institute who specializes in Congress.

"There is a lot of legitimate unease among members of Congress about the degree to which confirmation hearings and political battles now are contests of character assassination."

Reluctant in the first place to come to grips with the explosive issue of sexual harassment presented by the Oklahoma University Law School professor, senators are now in turmoil about presiding over the first televised congressional hearing on the subject in history.

The White House, for its part, is hunkered down, preparing to make a heavy assault against Professor Hill. It has been noted with some surprise by political operatives watching the White House and Congress that no one in the Republican camp seems to take the anger among women in Washington this week as a warning that its party's candidates, including President Bush, might suffer in 1992.

Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1988, is among many asserting that these men "still don't get it;" that the standard rules of political combat, which endorse a no-holds-barred defense of Thomas and all-out attack on Professor Hill's character, may have been altered this week.

This is one reason why the cross-examination intended to discern the truth in the diametrically opposed stories of two intelligent, articulate, self-made lawyers, is likely to be excruciating and embarrassing, and could well lead to a muddled outcome and a painful vote for lawmakers who thought it would be a political free pass only days ago.

The hearings are also likely, as in the case of John G. Tower, whose nomination to be secretary of defense was derailed by accusations of drinking and womanizing, to raise the specter of congressional hypocrisy.

Congress exempts itself from most federal labor laws, including those governing sexual harassment. But after being embarrassed by the sexual misconduct of some members, Congress has introduced internal rules against sexual harassment over he last few years.

CUBA: Castro says he's not going to backtrack

(From 1A)

Union could mean that Cuba will have to get by on half as much Soviet oil next year as it did in 1989, according to experts. Cuba appears to have no other source for oil because it lacks foreign exchange.

At a rare news conference in Havana this week, Cuban dissidents said the Congress should implement broad democratic changes, including an end to the Communist Party's monopoly on power.

Two weeks ago, Castro once again insisted that the collapse of the socialist bloc and Cuba's declining living standards will not lead to significant shifts when the party faithful, numbering almost 2,000, assembles in the east coast city of Santiago.

"Cuba is not going to backtrack from its revolutionary conquests," Castro said. "Even more revolutionary changes can be expected during the Congress." It will be the first such gathering since 1986.

Leogrande does not accept Castro's hard-line bluster at face value, and he predicts the Congress may ratify some dramatic changes. One option is to permit the service economy to operate on a for-profit basis, he says. Another is to permit farm cooperatives to sell their products at market rates.

CRADDICK: Lawmaker speaks at GOP luncheon

ocrat-dominated Legislature, in drawing House and Senate redistricting plans, didn't maximize opportunities to elect minority group members as required under the Voting Rights Act.

The GOP also complained that the districts are drawn in a way to punish Republicans and help Democrats.

"To ask for another plan is not gerrymandering on our part," Craddick said. "Growth in the state has been in Republican areas, and minority districts haven't been protected as well as they could be."

Rick Davis, Midland County GOP chairman, said, "Republicans have been packed into some districts and diluted in others. "In districts where we were 70 percent strong we are now 75 to 80 percent strong, but diluted in other districts."

Craddick is a party to one of the federal lawsuits pending against the redistricting plan. According to Associated Press reports, other federal lawsuits are in progress in Brownsville, Austin and Washington, D.C., and a state district court suit in Edinburg is being reviewed by the Texas Supreme Court.

Attorney General Dan Morales has asked a three-judge federal court in Washington, D.C., to either accept the redistricting plans as drawn by the Legislature or to fashion its own, as interim plans for the 1992 elections, so they can be conducted on time.

"We think we have an excellent change of defeating this redistricting plan in favor of a more fair plan," Davis said.

Noting that the redistricting was a result of the recent census, Davis said, "Unless we challenge the redistricting plan now, we will have to wait another 10 years to anything."

Craddick and Davis both stressed the importance of electing Republicans to the Senate, where Craddick's proposals often fail after passing the House.

Craddick also said that local surveys indicate Midlanders don't want a state lottery.

"I doubt a state lottery would generate $400 million a year," he said. "We are still waiting for the great revenues predicted for parimutuel betting."

The state representative said he was disappointed his bill failed because it would have created a fine to speeders for using excessive energy. Drivers could have bought coupon books and hand coupons to Department of Public Safety officers when they were fined.

"The coupon books would have made great stocking stuffers," Craddick joked. "The coupons could have generated $100 million a year and I think Texans would be more inclined to buy them then lottery tickets."

Craddick discussed the Republican Caucus budget proposal he presented that did not gain favor in the house.

The budget recommended such cuts as stopping the state contribution of the employee's share of Social Security taxes, reducing the number of state employees and reorganizing the Department of Human Services.

Craddick allowed that of 7,000 bills and resolutions considered by the last Legislature many of his favorites did not pass.

"Well, we appreciate you trying," a man in the audience called out.

Also, at the luncheon, Barry Williamson of Dallas announced that he was running for Texas Railroad Commissioner.

"I am the only candidate running who has experience in the oil and gas business," he said.

Williamson has served as Director of the Minerals Management Service for the Department of the Interior for the past two years. He is the son-in-law of Midlanders Bobby and Joanie Holt.

"About 75 percent of the time the Railroad Commission spends on regulation is spent regulating the oil and gas industry," Williamson said. "Shouldn't we have someone with oil and gas experience as commissioner?"

The candidate said that Texas "has a bright energy future, especially with natural gas."

Williamson said he is just beginning his campaign and plans to "meet everybody, shake everybody's hand and wear out five pair of shoes."

TICKETS: Football fans wage a bloodless attack

they are gone.

"I may be crazy, but I expect these tickets to go in a hurry. We will have a limit of four per person and we don't expect any student or reserved seat sales at the gate Friday night," Wilkins said. "When all the reserved seats are sold, we will sell a limited amount of end zone tickets."

First in line for Wednesday's sale in Midland was Odessa's Bob Dykes, who arrived at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

"There are no tickets in Odessa, so this is the only place you can get them. I really didn't have a choice," said Dykes, who spent the night as the head of his ticket class. "It got pretty chilly by four o'clock this morning."

Dykes is a Permian fan, but will be sitting in the middle of the Lee fans Friday night.

"It's no big deal. They (Lee fans) are all right. I've done it before," Dykes said. "Besides, I don't have much of a choice if I want to see the game."

Rick Rodriguez, originally from Midland but now living in Odessa, quickly joined Dykes in line.

"I'm for Midland Lee," Rodriquez said, which brought the reply from Dykes, "He sure changed his mind. Last night he was for Permian."

"Well," Rodriguez said, "I was surrounded by all these Permian people last night and I didn't want to say anything."

Rodriguez is a Midland High graduate, but chooses to bypass the Midland High homecoming against Odessa High Friday at Memorial Stadium to attend the Lee-Permian game.

"It's a little sad at Midland High this year. I'd rather see someone else play," Rodriguez said.

By 6 p.m. Tuesday, Jerry Smith was in line. Smith drove 500 miles from Henderson, a community 35 miles east of Tyler, to make sure he had a ticket for the game.

"I'm a die-hard Permian fan," Smith said. "I moved from Odessa in 1974, but I keep up with the team and see as many games as I can. I'm used to lines and spending the night for tickets.

"I saw Permian play John Tyler and Odessa High this year, but after the Lee game, I won't see them again until they get to Texas Stadium in the playoffs."

Pat Evans, the mother of Midland Lee football player Chris Evans, also spent the night, rolling out a queen-sized air mattress, which she shared with friend Sandy Znamirowski.

"I was able to get two tickets Tuesday, but I needed more for some friends," Evans said.

It was a new experience for Znamirowski, who has lived in Midland only 18 months.

"I can't wait until I find out what my friends back in Baltimore think when they find out that I camped out all night to get tickets for a high school football game," Znamirowski said. They're going to think I'm crazy."

Well, it's a crazy weekend in the Permian Basin. The Lee-Permian game is expected draw around 20,000 Friday and the Confederate Air Force AirSho'91 is expected to draw around 100,000 on Saturday and Sunday.

park, and at three areas at Midland Park Mall: just outside Sears, Roebuck & Co., JCPenney's and Bennigan's.

Buses will return the air show-goers to those three locations.

Additionally, beginning at 7:30 a.m. both days, buses will transport people between the airport from Midland's hotels and motels.

Shuttle bus service will be available from remote parking in the airport area.

About 40,000 visitors are expected each day at the air show.

Gates to the show will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. The air show will be from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., although the main portion of the show will begin at noon.

Tickets for adults are $8 each and for children between ages 6 and 12, $4 each. Advance tickets are $1 less.

At 7 p.m. today, a USO-type dinner-dance featuring the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra and singer Kay Starr is scheduled for the CAF Hangar at Midland International Airport. Tickets are $250 per couple or $125 per person.

A luncheon and style show featuring 1930s and 1940s period costumes and military attire will be held at 11:30 a.m. Friday in the Midland Holiday Inn. Individual tickets are $35 each.

Additional information on the activities may be obtained by telephoning 685-0427.

The Midland Downtown Lions Club will host a pancake breakfast, at $3.50 a plate, at Basin Aviation at Midland Air Park from 6 a.m to 11 a.m. Saturday and Sunday. A $5-a-plate barbecue supper will be held at the air park at 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

"Through the Perilous Night" exhibit is on display at the Presidential Museum in Odessa.

"A Wing and A Prayer" musical review featuring the Midland Community Theatre singers will be held at 6:30 p.m. Friday in Green Tree Country Club. Tickets are $22.50 each.

Morale-boosting "nose art" salvaged from World War II warplanes is on exhibit in the Rodman Gallery of the Art Institute for the Permian Basin in Odessa. The exhibit is entitled "The Classy Chassis: World War II Nose Art."

The Pecos Army Air Field, 1942-45, exhibits are at the West of the Pecos Museum in Pecos.

Haiti's new leader forming interim government

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Disregarding a 34-nation trade embargo, Haiti's new leader set out Wednesday to form an interim government to replace deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and his Cabinet.

On his first full day in office, provisional President Joseph Nerette telephoned political leaders to discuss candidates for prime minister and Cabinet posts, said one politician, speaking on condition of anonymity.

State-run radio said later that Nerette summoned leaders of all major political parties to a meeting Wednesday night.

Several names were circulating as candidates for prime minister, including prominent human-rights activist Jean-Jacques Honorat. But Honorat said he wasn't interested.

"I know what politics is," he said. "I'm not even tempted. I'm not going to leave human rights for politics."

In Washington, the 34-nation Organization of American States intensified international pressure for reinstatement of Aristide, Haiti's first democratically elected president, who was ousted by rebellious soldiers on Sept. 30.

An OAS foreign ministers meeting Tuesday night called for a Western Hemipshere-wide trade embargo and a freeze on Haitian assets abroad. The diplomats also authorized creation of a civilian mission to help restore democratic government.

Haitians were kept mostly in the dark on efforts to form an interim government to run the country. On orders of the Army High Command, none of the capital's 12 independent radio stations broadcast news. State-run radio and television rebroadcast Tuesday's inaugural speech by Nerette.

Aristide's prime minister, Rene Preval, and the 12 members of his defunct Cabinet were said to be hiding.

Port-au-Prince, the capital of 1 million, was bouncing back to life Wednesday. Some shops remained shuttered, but markets were bustling and the streets reverberated as before with the clatter of the brightly painted "tap-tap" buses most people use for transportation.

The airport was open to scheduled commercial flights. At the ticket counter, hundreds of people fought for space on a Haiti Trans-Air flight to Miami.

At the harbor, stevedores unloaded ships, but one captain said the ships would be leaving the port empty because no cargo had been delivered to the docks during the more than week-long crisis.

Hector Omar de la Rosa, captain of the 274-foot Ocean Fleet, a freighter out of Miami, said he had been waiting outside the port since last Friday. He said he had heard about the OAS sanctions, but had been given the go-ahead to unload.

De la Rosa said he thought an OAS trade embargo was bound to hurt Haitians, whose government is heavily dependent on imported rice, flour and raw materials.

Canadian Ambassador Bernard Dussault said sanctions were not meant to cause hardship, but rather to pressure the authorities into negotiating Aristide's return. He said he still believed Aristide enjoyed widespread support in Haiti. "The Haitians want democracy, and they're willing to fight for it."

There was heavy shooting Tuesday night in a Port-au-Prince suburb known as Delmas. A 20-year-old student who lives there said soldiers were firing into the air to scare off street vendors and then stealing their rice, fried meat and cauldrons.

The student, who asked to be identified only as Gladys for fear of retaliation, said hungry soldiers in unwashed uniforms were roaming the capital shaking down pedestrians.

At least 150 people are thought to have been killed by security forces during and after the coup.

Gunmen kidnap Romania's acting ambassador to India

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW DELHI, India — The top Romanian diplomat in New Delhi was kidnapped Wednesday by four armed men in what appears to be a new twist to the Sikh separatist campaign, police said.

Romania's acting Ambassador Livia Radu was abducted less than a quarter mile from his home by four men, some of whom carried AK-47 rifles, the police said.

In August, Sikh gunmen from Punjab state shot and wounded the Indian Ambassador in Bucharest, Julio Francis Ribeiro. Ribeiro had led a ferocious crackdown on Sikh militants as the senior police official in Punjab state in the 1980s, proclaiming a "bullet for bullet" policy.

Roadblocks were thrown up by late Wednesday morning on all roads leading from the capital, causing traffic jams. Police said Wednesday night that no group had claimed responsibility for Radu's disappearance.

Violence in Punjab state has risen sharply in recent months, with Sikh militants gunning down the families and relatives of police officers. Virtually every day there are reports of 20 or more people killed by the security forces or militants in Punjab state.

Although the Sikh militant groups are disunited, most are campaigning for a separatist Sikh state in the Punjab. Many Sikhs argue that India has failed to give Punjab state equal treatment in national investment, although the state has India's highest per capita income. Many of them also maintain Sikh religious rights have been neglected or repressed.

In June 1984, Prime Minister Indira Ghandi ordered an attack on the holiest Sikh shrine, the Golden Temple in Amritsar, which was being used as a stronghold by militants. The attack is generally considered to have led to her assasination by her own Sikh bodyguards that October.

In the attack on Ribeiro in Bucharest two months ago, Romanian security guards killed one Sikh attacker and captured two. A fourth assailant escaped.

Experts seek evidence of Iraqi H-bomb project

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Nuclear experts headed for Iraq Wednesday to try to seize evidence of its H-bomb project as spy satellites and planes monitored Baghdad's secret weapons laboratory, officials said.

Iraq has already manufactured some lithium-6, a material used only in hydrogen weapons. The U.N. inspectors hope to capture the supply at the Al-Athir weapons facility, officials said on condition of anonymity.

The Al-Athir site is being monitored by spy satellites, U-2 flights and other means until the nuclear experts arrive, the U.N. and International Atomic Energy Agency officials said. The surveillance is intended to catch any Iraqi attempt to move the lithium-6 out of Al-Athir or bury it on the grounds.

Iraq was obligated to disclose the extent of its program under the Security Council's April 3 cease-fire resolution, but has acknowledged little and has not commented on Tuesday's disclosure by the IAEA of its lithium supply.

David Kay, one of the IAEA's chief inspectors, said Wednesday that "the purpose of our on-the-ground inspection, as well as our continuing efforts, is to put them out of that game" of producing nuclear weapons materials.

Kay said the H-bomb project could still be under way.

The next team of nuclear inspectors, the seventh so far, left Vienna on Wednesday, the IAEA said. The team is due in Baghdad on Friday and it hopes to remove any remaining lithium-6 from Al-Athir, officials said. The facility is 40 miles south of the Iraqi capital.

When asked if the IAEA would get "tangible evidence," such as lithium-6 or other thermonuclear weapons components, Kay replied, "I'm confident that we will not stop until we have."

Kay said Wednesday that one of the documents his last mission captured in Baghdad on Sept. 23-24 showed the Iraqis were producing "small kilogram amounts" of lithium-6. However, Kay and IAEA director Hans Blix said the Iraqis had "ambitions" for producing over 220 pounds of lithium-6 a year.

Neither Kay nor Blix would disclose how much lithium-6 is needed to produce a working thermonuclear weapon. Michael Brower, a physicist and research director of the Union of Concerned Scientists, said "a few kilograms of lithium-6 is certainly enough to produce a thermonuclear device."

But Brower cautioned that the Iraqis would also need a plutonium bomb to trigger the hydrogen bomb, as well as small quantities of the hydrogen isotopes tritium and deuterium to begin splitting the lithium, which would then continue the nuclear reaction.

He spoke in a telephone interview from the scientific group's headquarters in Cambridge, Mass.

Earlier, U.N. officials reported that Iraq had been as little as 15 months away from coming up with a working atom bomb. Brower said that would indicate that Iraq would have been at least that far away from developing an H-bomb.

Blix and Kay said IAEA translators and atomic experts are still working to translate the tens of thousands of pages of documents that Kay's team seized at an atomic records repository in Baghdad and at the Iraqi Atomic Energy Commission.

Kay was the leader of the nuclear inspection team that was barricaded in a Baghdad parking lot for five days last month when it refused to give up the documents on Iraq's weapons program.

The five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Britain, France, China and Soviet Union — have circulated a draft resolution that would order Iraq to fully cooperate with the IAEA and the U.N. Special Commission, and clamp even more stringent controls on its industries.

The resolution could be taken up by the council as early as Friday, diplomats said.

Parliament refuses to resign

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The government Wednesday rejected calls to resign and placed its security services on alert for signs of unrest over Jordan's role in the planned Middle East peace conference.

Fifty legislators in the 80-member lower house of Parliament on Monday accused the government of inefficiency and called for Prime Minister Taher Masri to step down.

"Since the government of Mr. Masri is incapable of confronting the challenges of the current period on the internal and external arenas, we ... announce that this government does not enjoy our confidence any longer and we urge it to resign," the legislators wrote to the Parliament speaker.

Nearly half of them were deputies from the Muslim Brotherhood Party, the largest political group in Parliament and Jordan's most influential political group.

The brotherhood, which denounces Masri's plans to participate in Arab-Israeli peace talks, opposes any negotiations with Israel.

Masri's government, appointed by King Hussein on June 19, called the demand by the Parliament members unconstitutional.

Seventeen legislators who signed the letter seeking the government's resignation said they did not oppose the peace conference.

Firebomb hurled into refugees' home in Germany

By Terrence Petty
Associated Press writer

HUENXE, Germany — A teddy bear on a chair is the only sign of happiness left in the burned-out apartment of Fanzi Saado, a refugee from Lebanon.

Before dawn on Oct. 3, the first anniversary of German unification, German youths hurled a homemade firebomb through a window while Saado and his family were asleep.

The bomb, a beer bottle filled with gasoline, landed on a bed where Saado's three daughters slept together, splashing flaming liquid everywhere.

Zeinab Saado, 8, and her 6-year-old sister, Mogades, were badly burned and are being treated at special clinics. Zeinab's burns are so severe she is kept heavily sedated.

The other sister, 11-year-old Salma, escaped uninjured.

"I was in the room at the time too," Salma told a reporter in front of the two-story brick refugee home. But she soon broke down, her face wincing from the memory.

Since the attack, the Saado family has come to represent the senselessness of the xenophobic violence that has flared across Germany this fall.

Many Germans have been enraged by the violence that struck this pretty village of 5,000 residents near the Dutch border.

"Look At What You've Done, You Cowards," said a headline in the mass-circulation newspaper Bild. Beneath the headline was a photo of Zeinab lying on her hospital bed.

Sociologists say many of the right-wing radicals responsible for such attacks are jobless and seek to compensate for a low self-image by assaulting refugees.

With more than 200 asylum-seekers and about a dozen radical "skinheads" living in the area, Huenxe residents say they long feared trouble could erupt.

The Saado apartment is one of three at a refugee home on a leafy Huenxe street.

Fanzi Saado and his family, which also includes his wife and two small boys, fled civil war in Lebanon three years ago. He has applied for asylum but does not know if he will get it. He has no job, because without asylum he's barred from working. The family lives on welfare.

Today, signs of the night of terror are everywhere. The apartment has to be completely renovated because of the fire. Everything is needed, from new wiring to replacement furniture.

The only thing that escaped the inferno, somehow, was a teddy bear that sits on a singed chair in the kitchen.

Plaster and concrete around the window casing where the firebomb came in are scorched black. Paint has been seared from the walls.

The family has temporarily moved into a house owned by the local Lutheran Church.

But Saado and his wife spend much of their time at the burn clinics, trying to help their injured daughters.

Huenxe's German residents say up to now they have gotten along with the refugees who live among them.

But the fact that children were hurt seems to have created new bonds here.

Huenxe citizens have organized volunteer guard duty in front of the asylum home, with at least two citizens posted there the whole night.

Outside the refugee home, Heinz-Werner Mangelmann showed a list of people who have donated money and goods to the Saados.

"My telephone rang continuously today with more people wanting to help. And someone just came by to give me an envelope with money," said Mangelmann.

On Sunday, police arrested three suspected bombers — two are 18 and the other 19. All are area residents, and are being investigated for attempted murder.

One of the suspects is unemployed. The second is a car mechanic, and the third a linoleum-layer.

Defendant sets himself on fire

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Judges used their gowns to extinguish flames set by a defendant who doused himself with gasoline after being sentenced to prison, the official PAP news agency reported Wednesday.

The defendant was taken to hospital with severe burns, the agency said. It did not identify him or say what crime he had been convicted of.

The incident took place in Pila, in northwest Poland, after the man was sentenced to two years in prison, the report said.

Pulling nuclear plug isn't easy

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's decision to respond to President Bush's initiative, designed to move the world's greatest military powers back from the threshold of nuclear war, was a positive move which some observers say could mean the world is entering "the last hours of a 40-year nuclear standoff."

Essentially, Gorbachev's response matched and in some respects appeared to go beyond Bush's unilateral reduction of all tactical nuclear arms on land and at sea both in Europe and Asia.

But Bush, while terming Gorbachev's response "good news for the whole world," wisely refrained from committing to a call from the Soviet leader for a superpower summit. "There's work to do before we sit down at a summit," Bush said, and he's absolutely correct.

For example, what about the Soviet Union's SS-18 missiles? Those long-range missiles, each with multiple warheads, are the most destabilizing nuclear weapons fielded by either side. It was that force of missiles, deployed in the 1980's and capable of destroying in a single attack virtually the entire U.S. land-based missile arsenal, that fueled the arms race and led to fears that Moscow was planning to fight and win a nuclear war, noted Jay Kosminsky, deputy director of Defense Policy Studies for The Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C.

What about Gorbachev throwing support behind Bush's efforts to build limited strategic defenses? Kosminsky says that the deployment of defenses designed to protect against limited, unauthorized or accidental missile attack could be perceived as threatening no one while greatly enhancing the security of both sides. He adds that such a move would be "Moscow's chance to renegotiate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, and diffuse a longstanding point of tension and disagreement with Washington."

Without a doubt there are even more points yet to be resolved in the drive to reduce the two nations' nuclear arsenals and make the world a safer place. It's exciting that the possibility is at least being discussed.

The first item of business is, as President Bush says, to work out the details. As the nations of the world are learning, putting the nuclear genie back into the bottle is not as easy as it was letting the genie out.

OTHER VIEWS

Year-round schools would aid education

Not content to complain about what's wrong with public education in Texas, an Austin-based business organization has offered some worthwhile suggestions about changes that need to be made in the schools to improve the situation.

The Texas Association of Business, concerned as most Texans are by high dropout rates, declining test scores and unqualified graduates, has issued a call for increased instruction time through year-round school schedules and more in-school days for Texas students.

All have been suggested before, but the Legislature has been too busy trying to develop bargain-basement methods of financing education to address the real problems, and the education bureaucracy has been too resistant to change to push for genuine reform.

We can only hope, now that the state's business organizations are getting really serious about improving the quality of education In Texas, that the proper authorities will take notice and begin implementing needed changes.

Year-round schools would be a great place to start.

— Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Limiting judicial terms is worthy of consideration

The confirmation hearings on Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court caused us to think about how long justices should serve.

Currently they are appointed for life. And in recent years that has frequently meant that justices have served well beyond their capable years.

A 12-year limit has been suggested for members of Congress, and that seems reasonable for Supreme Court justices as well. We're not sure if that ought to apply to the entire federal judiciary, but we're inclined to think so.

Limiting terms is a way of insuring new blood in government, fresh ideas, changing philosophies. It would keep government more in tune with the will of the governed, make it more responsive. It spreads out the power rather than concentrating it in the hands of a few people with longevity.

We limit the years a person can serve as president. A growing movement would like to see limits applied to representatives and senators. While we're at it, we ought to consider how long a person should serve in what may be the most powerful position of all, as a justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

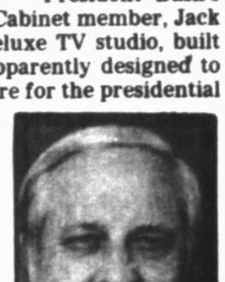
Kemp's TV studio collects cobwebs

WASHINGTON — President Bush's most telegenic Cabinet member, Jack Kemp, has a deluxe TV studio, built by the taxpayers and apparently designed to increase national exposure for the presidential wannabe.



Anderson

But in the eight months since the studio was built, Kemp has never used it. The huge room with its 1,000-watt dimmers, black velour curtains, stately desk and American flag backdrop has become an embarrassment to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It is locked up and almost never entered. The "QUIET RECORDING" sign in the hall has been lit only four times for minor projects.

Throughout HUD headquarters, employees are whispering that HUD Secretary Kemp built the studio to get his mug on TV more often. Now HUD, already burdened by a reputation for mismanagement and financial scandals, is scrambling to come up with other reasons to justify the expense.

HUD officially claims the room was designed to make training videos to save money, so HUD employees would not have to travel to Washington from far-flung offices. The official line is that Kemp wasn't even aware that the studio existed until we asked about it.

That is hard to believe.

Well-placed HUD sources told our associate Jim Lynch that Kemp had to know. His closest aides spread the word late last year that the studio was being built for him. The original plan was to outfit the studio with satellite capability so Kemp could get instant access to the networks and orchestrate his own press conferences.

If Kemp did not actually order the construction, he must have heard it. The studio is down the hall and around the corner from his own 10th-floor office.

We can't blame Kemp for yearning for the lights. He didn't leave politics and accept the HUD job because he wanted a secure pencil-pushing job. When Kemp took over the scandal-ridden HUD in 1989, it was the perfect spot for a man with designs on the White House to show his stuff as a tough administrator. He was an instant hit with his pledges to clean up the mess.

But then something happened. The HUD scandal got moved to the back pages and then disappeared. As time wore on, it became apparent that Kemp's crusade was a low-priority for a president who preferred foreign intrigue.

Kemp's advisers, some of them carryovers from his 1988 presidential campaign, began coming up with schemes to get their boss in the news. Agency cameras rolled as Kemp joined a police raid on public housing in Chicago a year ago. The footage was supposed to be part of a video on the Kemp years at HUD, suitable for campaign use.

Then came the studio, which was kept a secret at first. HUD employees, some of whom barely have enough room to turn around in their own cramped offices — watched in amazement as the studio took shape. HUD told us the total cost was $69,932, but other sources speculated that the actual cost was far higher.

An eerie quiet followed the completion of construction. The studio was seemingly forgotten for months, perhaps because word began to spread that it could be seen as a vain waste of taxpayers' dollars. HUD brass began calling it a "Training Room." Department heads were urged — one source said "begged" — to use it to produce training videos. The room was used a total of four times in May, June and July of this year, according to Mary Brunette, assistant secretary for public affairs at HUD.

Now the HUD rank and file are grumbling. "It's sitting there as a monstrosity," one employee told us. "It's an embarrassment. They have not come up with a reason to use it."

GEORGE WILL

Are Pennsylvania democrats 'overdue'?

PHILADELPHIA — Pennsylvania last elected a Democratic senator when Henry Aaron played outfield for the Braves — the Milwaukee Braves, in 1962. Are Pennsylvania Democrats (in baseball parlance) "overdue"? If their 29-year drought ends next month, lightning will have flashed from George Bush's cloudless — or are they? — political skies.

Will

In the Whiskey Rebellion of 1794, some Pennsylvanians showed a capacity for turbulence in response to taxes and other indignities. This Nov. 5, Washington will be watching Pennsylvanians as they decide the fate of Harris Wofford.

Seven months ago he was Pennsylvania's secretary of labor and industry. Then Republican Sen. John Heinz died in a plane crash. When Gov. Bob Casey, a Democrat, was unable to convince several well-known people (including Lee Iacocca, an Allentown native) to accept, Wofford was picked to fill the seat.

To fill it, most people assumed, for a short time. Then Richard Thornburgh, Bush's attorney general and formerly two-term governor of Pennsylvania, would win it in a special election. It may work out that way, with Wofford going back to Bryn Mawr, the suburb of this city where he lives and once was a college president.

However, Thornburgh's 40-point lead in August is now, in one independent poll, 12 points (50-38). Pennsylvanians are generally anxious because of the state's long decline and particularly angry at Gov. Casey — Wofford's benefactor (if being in the Senate is a benefit). Yet Wofford could benefit from the general surliness. Because Wofford is an unknown and Thornburgh is a household word, Wofford almost seems like the challenger and Thornburgh the incumbent, or at least the Establishment, which is a dangerous designation nowadays.

For a generation Pennsylvania has been a swing state in presidential politics. The two parties have split the last eight elections here, and Bush won with just 50.7 percent.

Wofford is attacking the legislative "fast track" for the free-trade agreement with Mexico. This is the hunkering-down, defensive politics of a state buffeted by prolonged decline.

Wofford is (or so conservatives would like to believe) the Last Liberal. He was an important campaign aide to John Kennedy. He worked for the Peace Corps and the Civil Rights Commission. He got chucked into a Chicago jail during the anti-war demonstrations at the 1968 Democratic Convention. But his seminar-style speech, laced with more semicolons than is convenient for a television sound-bite, disguises a hard political edge.

If he defeats Thornburgh, who was head of Bush's Domestic Policy Council, he will do it with slogans like, "It's time to take care of our own," and "If criminals have the right to a lawyer, working Americans should have a right to a doctor." To suppress any insurrection, Bush has come here three times in two months.

Heading into 1992's extremely expensive Senate elections (with a New York seat and two California seats being contested), the Democratic Party is strapped for funds. But the national Democratic Party has borrowed enough to make the maximum permissible contribution to Wofford, who is still short of time and money, but has had some good luck. The special election to replace Rep. Bill Gray, who has retired, has been moved up from January to November, which will increase the turnout in this Democratic city.

Pennsylvania's other senator, Republican Arlen Specter, is from here, so Wofford must overcome western Pennsylvania's desire to have one of its own: Thornburgh is from Pittsburgh. The election probably will be close and Wofford could win, but Pittsburgh also is a problem for another reason: If the Pirates make it to the World Series and the Series goes seven games, Wofford will not get anyone's attention until Oct. 28.

Wofford should be inspired by the success of the upstart Braves, and would benefit from a Braves sweep of the Pirates in the playoffs. But he should not say so.

Sorry, no checks cashed from congressmen

I made the mistake the other day of giving a clerk in the store a check written out to me by Congressman Crank. I endorsed it.

"I'm sorry," he said, "we don't take checks written by congressmen."

"Why not?" I asked.

"We've had some bad experiences," he told me, pretending he was dribbling a basketball.

"You mean they've bounced? I refuse to believe it. These men are elected officials of the United States, in charge of voting a trillion-dollar budget and guarding a $300 billion deficit. They would never write a rubber check."

Buchwald

The clerk shrugged. "Then how come the last one I accepted I played with in my bathtub all evening? My orders are not to cash any congressman's check. If he comes in himself, I am to pretend I am checking the signature, but in effect I'm to push this button and alert the FBI."

"You have it all wrong. With just a wave of their fingers congressmen can allocate a $30 billion Stealth program. They can withhold millions of dollars from Planned Parenthood. They can pass unemployment relief bills they know the President will veto. Why would they write checks without funds for piddling amounts of money?"

"The manager told us that wasn't our problem. He just said if anyone handed us a check with the House seal on it, we were to make a paper plane out of it and shoot it out the window."

"I know the person who gave me this check and his credit is unimpeachable. It is so good that he doesn't even have to pay for his meals in the House dining room."

"He doesn't?"

"No, sirree. He's been in Congress such a long time that they're glad to have him eat there. He is from the 'there is such a thing as a free lunch' school."

"Why would we accept a check from someone who doesn't pay his meal bills?"

"Congressmen are getting a bad rap. There are a lot of people in this country who don't pay their accounts. The store has thousands of them."

"And there is going to be one more if you don't accept this check. Even if it bounces, the U.S. government will stand behind it. That is why our American banking system is so strong."

"I had a friend who kited a check and the judge wanted to give him 15 years," the clerk said.

"That's not too harsh a sentence for a non-elected official," I told him. "But don't confuse people check-kiting to congressional check-kiting."

"Why not?"

"Congressional kiting comes with political immunity."

"Do you want to pay for this wok or not?"

"I do, but I am going to tell my congressional friend that Thunderbolt Department Stores will not honor his check."

"So what can he do?"

"He can ask the House Banking Committee to hold hearings on it and call you as an unfriendly witness."

"I think I better call the manager."

The manager came over. He took one look at the check and said, "With all due respect, we'd prefer that you pay in Russian rubles instead."

Congress perceived as being corrupt, poll shows

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Members of Congress are widely perceived by the public to be corrupt, pampered by unnecessary perquisites and arrogant about their power, the latest New York Times/CBS News Poll indicates.

A striking 83 percent of American adults said they believe that the scores of legislators who overdrew their House bank accounts did so not by mistake but "because they knew they could get away with it," the poll found.

Three people in five told poll takers that basic privileges the lawmakers enjoy such as travel allowances, staff assistance and free mail are "unjustifiable."

In the wake of criticism over the House bank, the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct met Wednesday afternoon and agreed to form a subcommittee of three Democrats and three Republicans who did not overdraw their bank accounts to conduct an inquiry into abuses at the House bank.

Rep. Matthew F. McHugh, D-N.Y., who is in charge of the investigation, said the group would work as fast as possible, but he would not predict how quickly the inquiry could be completed.

For years, polls have shown that people disapprove of Congress generally but have a favorable view of their own representative, and this new survey was no exception.

It was taken Saturday, Sunday and Monday, on the heels of news that the House bank, without charging interest or other penalty, had covered the checks of dozens of lawmakers who had overdrawn their accounts and that representatives' overdue restaurant bills totaled more than $300,000.

Most of the polling was completed before word got out that the Senate Judiciary Committee had not pursued sexual-harassment charges against Judge Clarence Thomas, and no questions were asked about that matter in the poll.

The findings cannot be taken as proof that the public wants to throw Congress out and elect replacements. The public view of lawmakers reached an even lower point last October during the battle between President Bush and Congress over raising taxes and reducing the budget deficit, but 96 percent of the House members who ran for re-election still won in November.

Still, the latest poll conveys bad news for the legislators. Two-thirds of Americans said they had paid at least some attention to the news about the bounced checks. And the more attention people were paying to the matter, the more likely they were to view Congress with disfavor.

The poll, of 1,280 adults around the nation, was conducted by telephone and had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Tissue transplant shows signs of success

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pioneering transplant of fetal tissue into a developing fetus to cure a genetic ailment shows initial signs of success, doctors said Wednesday.

Esmail Zanjani of the University of Nevada in Reno said the transplanted tissue has taken hold in the recipient, who was born in November. Five to 10 percent of the child's blood-making cells are descendants of the transplanted cells, he said.

"Has it succeeded to the point of curing? We don't know yet," Zanjani said at the Eighth International Congress of Human Genetics.

Further tests will be required to determine whether the child, afflicted with a severe genetic abnormality called Hurler syndrome, is developing symptoms of the disorder, he said.

Such transplants could theoretically be used to treat a wide variety of genetic disorders, said Dr. Mitchell Golbus of the University of California, San Francisco.

The case highlights the thorny issue of whether research using fetal tissue should be allowed. The government has opposed fetal tissue research over the strong protests of medical researchers.

Golbus has attempted three transplants of adult tissue into fetuses to cure genetic disorders. Two failed, and in the third case the parents elected to terminate the pregnancy before the success of the procedure was known, Golbus said.

Powell rejects plan to eliminate bombs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Wednesday nuclear bombs would remain aboard American aircraft in Europe and that he would oppose deeper cuts in U.S. military forces.

"I will fight that, I will resist that," Powell said in response to calls for a "peace dividend" with the Cold War over.

Powell said the U.S. military would be cut by 500,000 men and women and the reserves by about 300,000. "We have a strategy. We have thought it out. What we can't do is to wake up every Monday morning with brand new ideas about how to fiddle with the Department of Defense," he told a group Americans and Europeans who are supporters of a strong NATO alliance.

Powell appeared also to reject a proposal by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to withdraw nuclear bombs carried aboard U.S. and Soviet warplanes.

The United States has some 1,700 on planes based in Britain and a half-dozen other European countries. The Soviets have an estimated 3,000 to 4,000 of these short-range nuclear weapons.

President Bush on Sept. 27 did not include this category of nuclear arms while offering to withdraw U.S. tactical nuclear weapons from European soil and from American warships. Gorbachev last Saturday matched the proposal and went further. He proposed the weapons by destroyed, not just withdrawn, as Bush proposed.

But Powell, in a speech, said "while we are altering considerably the mix of theater nuclear weapons available to NATO commanders in Europe, we are not eliminating them." He added: "The essential nuclear linkage remains, in the form of our dual-capable aircraft."

Powell referred to the U.S. warplanes based in Europe that can carry either short-range or long-range nuclear weapons.

Overall, he said, the Pentagon is embarked on a program to reduce weapons and troops that would produce savings.

"We are paying a peace dividend right now," the general said, ticking off plans to cut active forces by 500,000, the reserve by about 300,000, the U.S. Navy by about 25 percent, the Marine Corps about 20 percent, and the Air Force by about one-third.

"I think the Department of Defense has met the challenge of turning money back to the American people for whatever purpose they wish to use it," he said.

Wonder, disgust follow 1,760 giant umbrellas

FORT TEJON, Calif. (AP) — Spectators cheered and truckers honked as 1,760 giant yellow umbrellas blossomed in an arid mountain pass Wednesday to complete a trans-Pacific spectacle by environmental artist Christo.

Under brilliant morning sun and blue skies, the umbrellas sprouted amid burnt-yellow chamisa and golden-brown thistle on the drought-parched hills that Christo chose as his massive canvas.

The unfurling of the Southern California umbrellas marked the second phase of a two-country exhibit, following by less than a day the opening of 1,340 blue umbrellas scattered along two lush valleys north of Tokyo. The joint display will remain up for three weeks.

Christo oversaw the Japanese umbrella opening under drizzly skies before leaving by jet to direct the American part of the $26 million event — the Bulgarian-born artist's latest effort to create the world's largest artworks. Christo is paying for the umbrella project himself from sales of umbrella-related items and other artistry.

In the past, Christo has ringed Florida islands with pink fabric, wrapped Paris' Pont Neuf bridge in cloth and rope, and erected a marathon-length cloth fence across the fields of Northern California.

Bomber could be detected, officer says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force's top officer, in an unusually candid assessment, said Wednesday that Soviet air defenses probably could detect the radar-evading B-2 stealth bomber if it were flying its wartime mission today.

Gen. Merrill McPeak, the Air Force chief of staff, made the comment while elaborating on the Pentagon's standard statement that the B-2 never was intended to be invisible to air defenses but would be extremely hard to track and shoot down.

Questions about the B-2's ability to penetrate air defenses are an important part of debate in Congress over whether the nation should spend the $30 billion more the Air Force says is needed to produce a fleet of 75 B-2s. A decade of developing the airplane already has cost about $30 billion.

In a meeting with reporters at the Pentagon, McPeak was asked whether the Soviets were trying to improve their already extensive air-defense network to the point at which, within 10 years, they would be able to pick up the B-2 bomber. The plane is in the early stages of production and not flying missions.

McPeak, who returned Tuesday from an eight-day official visit to the Soviet Union, said he couldn't offer any details about Soviet air defense improvements. Then he added: "By the way, I expect that certain parts of their air defense setup would be able to detect the B-2 today, so we don't have to wait 10 years.

Council considers firearms ordinance

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Gary Stokes, a local archery enthusiast, says the City Council would be making a mistake if it restricted outdoor bow shooting.

■ Proposal would include restrictions on use of bows and arrows within the city limits.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Maybe early city leaders wanted to make sure there was no law against a shoot-out on the square in Midland.

Or maybe early Midland settlers were so law-abiding they didn't need it.

For whatever reason, no ordinance was ever drafted prohibiting the use of firearms within the city limits, although laws restrict firing or carrying weapons in parks. Now the City Council is considering a citywide firearms ordinance, with proposals to include restrictions on bows and arrows as well.

'I feel very strongly about BB guns and pellet guns. The problem is there's no good place to shoot BB guns or pellet guns in the city. There's always a car window, house window or business window somewhere around.'

— Police Officer Chris Cherry

It may be more than a month away, but it's not likely to go unnoticed.

"You can keep taking things away, but you're hurting people that are responsible in what they do, not just those that aren't," said Gary Stokes, a professional "staff shooter," as bow users are called.

A city legal adviser said drafting the bow and arrow aspect of the rule may be extremely difficult. It might include exemptions for indoor practice, organized events or other situations.

"How we're going to come down on it, I couldn't say at this point," said Kevin Laughlin, first assistant city attorney. "But generally, the city is permitted to regulate for the health and safety of its citizens."

At present, it's hardly free-shooting in Midland. Police have other charges they can pursue against negligent weapon-wielders, including reckless endangerment and disorderly conduct.

"I feel very strongly about BB guns and pellet guns," said Midland Police Officer Chris Cherry, who has researched the firearms issue. "The problem is there's no good place to shoot BB guns or pellet guns in the city. There's always a car window, house window or business window somewhere around."

He said he would advocate a rule to restrict such shooting to certain areas.

The bow and arrow issue, some say, is an isolated problem. It came up as the result of a citizen complaint to District 3 Councilman Buddy Sipes.

"There's a responsibility factor, that's definitely part of it," Stokes said.

He said the sport of "staff shooting" is growing in West Texas and throughout the country.

He manages Midland Army Store, which not only sells bows and arrows but has an indoor shooting range for practice. Bows are used in hunting as well as for competitions and some enthusiasts

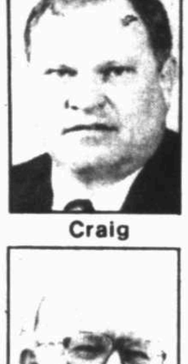
MHS to honor two notable graduates

■ Mark Craig, class of 1966, and Robert Payne, class of 1937, to be inducted into the Ex-Students Association's Hall of Honor.

Staff Report

When Midland High School's 1991 homecoming parade begins to traverse down "A" Street at 6 p.m. today, two notable MHS graduates will be near the front of the procession.



Craig

Payne

Mark Craig and Robert Payne — who have both made their marks in the field of aeronautics — will ride in the parade behind principal (and 1957 MHS graduate) Jane Carrens and her husband.

Both Craig (Class of 1966) and Payne (Class of 1937) are also being inducted into the Ex-Students Association's Hall of Honor during halftime of Friday night's MHS/Odessa High School football game.

Craig is director of the Lunar and Mars Exploration for NASA at its Washington, D.C., headquarters. He graduated from Purdue University with a bachelor's of science degree in 1971 and pursued graduate studies at Rice University from 1974-82.

He has garnered several professional awards and honors including being named NASA Engineer of the Year for 1991, NASA Exceptional Service Medal (1990 and 1981), American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) Associate Fellow in 1981, AIAA Exceptional Service Medal (1978) and the AIAA Community Service Award (1976).

Craig has written numerous technical papers and currently is assigned with the planning, management and execution of President Bush's Space Exploration Initiative.

He married the former Janet Smith of Wichita Falls and has one daugher, Jennifer Vallone.

Payne retired from the Aerospace Corporation (a not-for-profit corporation set up by the U.S. Air Force to perform technical management for its rocket booster and satellite programs) in 1979, but continues to act as a consultant for the organization.

While employed with the corporation, Payne served as director of the Medium Launch Vehicles and the Upper Stage Vehicles.

He also was the technical launch director for the original seven astronauts for the Mercury and Gemini programs.

Book chairman Mary Mann leafs through some of the merchandise which goes on sale today at the 24th annual Friends of the Library book sale. The bargain hunting runs through Sunday.

Friends' book sale begins today

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Book bargains will draw throngs of West Texans sold on books to the 24th annual Friends of the Library book sale today through Sunday at the Midland County Exhibit Building on East U.S. Highway 80.

About 40,000 hardback and paperback books are offered with proceeds benefitting the Midland County Public Library.

"Leaders are readers," touted Colleen Scury, a Friends loyalist, on the eve of the sale's kickoff.

'That's not necessarily so," countered Forrest Underwood, Friends president. "I know a lot of leaders who are not readers. And I know a lot of readers who are not leaders."

Regardless of that ongoing debate, the Friends members are out to sell as many books as possible at a quarter each for paperbacks and a half-dollar each for hardbacks.

There are a few rare exceptions, including the $150 asking price for "Iron Orchard," which failed to sell last year. It's a tale about the oil fields in the Southwest.

Most books, however, will be selling cheap.

The sale opens at 6 p.m. today with its early-bird sale. Admission is $2 per person. Admission is free on the other sale days — Friday from noon to 9 p.m.; Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday from 1-3 p.m., when most books will be selling at a dollar per yard. On Sunday, better-book prices will be dropped to half of their marked prices of $1 on up to $150 per book and $450 for a 54-volume set, plus bonus books, of Britannica's "Great Books of the Western World."

Priced at $10 is "Odessa: City of Dreams."

Each year, proceeds from the sale, which grosses between $12,000 and $15,000, go toward buying needed library items, including fixtures, machines and computers.

In the better books category are a lot of volumes on geology, petroleum engineering

New CAF traditions are in the making

There is something alluring and mystical, about the past, especially America's Old West and World War II. Midland is embedded in both.

Todd

Midland, on the Great Plains, is part of the Old West's lore. The buffalo roamed, the Indian tribes wandered, the calvary gave chase, and then along came the railroad, ranchers, cowboys, farmers, bankers, barkers, visionaries, opportunists and hired hands.

And Midland is a land where the ghosts of the Old West are kept alive and where real cowboys and ranchers still ride horses and imagine that their pickup trucks are buckboards.

After the derricks went up and drilling tools went down, oil started gushing in this part of West Texas in 1923. The landscape and the economy were altered.

From afar, pump-jacks took on the appearance of bucking horses whose riders hit pay dirt. They cropped up like mesquite. Petroleum — black gold — proved that coal-black oil can glitter as brightly as the lights on Broadway and can spend like Wall Street stock.

Then came 1941 and Pearl Harbor — America's battle cry for years to come.

War, already raging in Europe and in China, swept in the United States with its vicious tentacles.

America, drawn into the war for reasons still subject to debate, became an "arsenal for democracy." The nation and its people geared up and sent its brave but frightened sons and daughters off to war. On the home front, dedicated souls toiled in the war effort.

All across the nation, men and women served their country. And West Texas became a haven for training U.S. Army Air Corps crews. The flying weather was — and is — just about ideal.

World War II became a "war of air power" even as war raged on land and sea and brave souls lived, fought and died in all three elements.

Much heritage came out of the war. The war effort proved that a united people, serving the cause which they believed to be good, right and just, could prevail over the evils of fascism.

In pursuing victory, Americans conceived, designed, built, maintained, serviced and flew almost 300,000 aircraft. Today, most are forever gone.

But a relatively few of those warplanes survive. Of those, many are flying in the Confederate Air Force's Flying Museum. The aircraft include these and others, some forgotten: the P-40 Warhawk, B-17 Flying Fortress, B-25 Mitchell, Wildcat, Dauntless, P-38 Lightning, B-29 Superfortress, B-24 Liberator, B-26 Marauder, A-26 Invader, A-20 Havoc, P-39 Airacobra, P-47 Thunderbolt, P-51 Mustang, Hellcat, Helldiver, Avenger, Corsair, C-47 Skytrain, C-46 Commando, PBY Catalina, and the trainers, the gliders and liaison aircraft.

In 1991, the CAF and its American Airpower Heritage Museum are shoring up and rounding out their move to West Texas from South Texas, where the patriotic CAF, which is dedicated to preserving and flying those rare, old "warbirds," was founded in 1957.

The CAF's old and esteemed traditions are honored even as new traditions are in the making in CAF's new home in a land rich in tradition, lore, and blessings.

Program hopes to provide room for victims, witnesses

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

During trials conducted in district courts at the Midland County Courthouse, witnesses crowd the halls and victims waiting to testify are tucked away into back rooms.

"Sometimes they sit here all day and all evening. It's hard on them, especially the children," said Rochell Buck, coordinator of the Victim Assistance Program.

For crime victims appearing in court, the law provides the right to have a waiting area separate and secure from other witnesses, including the offender and the offender's relatives, before and during proceedings, Ms. Buck said.

"Right now we provide that but have to use whatever space is available at the time," Ms. Buck said. "But they don't have their own place to be that's comfortable and secure," she added.

Board to suggest change in airport smoking policy

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

At the urging of a local resident, Midland International Airport advisory board members agreed to recommend a change to the terminal's smoking policy.

Viola Kirksey told the group she avoids entering the terminal because of excess cigarette smoke in the upper concourse, where people wait for flights and incoming passengers.

Ms. Kirksey said in the last few years she has become increasingly aware of sidestream smoke that so fills the air that she can't be com-

ROOM: Victims' program hopes to get extra space

(From 1B)

One room sometimes used for victims measures only about eight by 10 feet; other times they are placed in District Attorney's offices alongside people working, Ms. Buck said.

But by this time next year, the Victim Assistance Program hopes to have a room designated especially for victims and other witnesses. The room will be provided when the District Attorney's Office moves to the second floor of the courthouse as part of building renovations.

"And if we could get some outside funding, we would like to purchase a TV, a VCR, table and chairs and maybe a couch, a clock and coffee pot ... things to make them feel more comfortable," Ms. Buck said.

Currently, adult witnesses are provided with magazines and children with coloring books and games. But after four or five hours of waiting in cramped areas, witnesses can become uncomfortable, Ms. Buck said.

The Victim Assistance Program hopes to change that though, and has applied for grants to furnish the anticipated waiting room, Ms. Buck said.

Sandra Edge, director of the Victim Assistance Program, recalled one recent occasion where a witness room would have been helpful.

"We had 44 witnesses on an arson case. I can't think of a place we didn't have witnesses," Ms. Edge said.

But the biggest plus of such a room will be a secure environment for victims, she said.

"Going through a trial for a victim is like being assaulted again," Ms. Edge said. "They need a place away from everyone else and not make it harder than it all ready is," she added.

In addition to outfitting a witness room, the Victim Assistance Program wants to hire a part-time employee to help with protective orders, Ms. Buck said.

So far this year, 61 protective orders have been processed through the District Attorney's Office compared to 21 in all of last year, Ms. Buck said.

The employee would assist in intake interviews, paperwork and sit in on the hearing to support the person who sought a protective order, Ms. Buck said.

AIRPORT: Smoking may be banned at concourse fortable inside. She said she suspects others feel the same way.

Environmental Protection Agency reports cited by Ms. Kirksey say smoking by others can lead to heart and respiratory diseases in non-smokers.

"Ideally, I would want a smoke-free environment where anyone going in sees the signs," she said. "Minimally, what I'm requesting is in the upper concourse to keep smoking out except in the lounge areas."

Board member Tom Sloan, a former smoker, said although smoking restrictions are typically touchy situations, he would recommend a review of the policy with the goal of eliminating smoking in most of the upper concourse.

"It's hard to tell somebody the habit they have is not good and we don't want it," said Sloan, who was a member of the city's committee to study smoking last year. "It's legal and smokers have rights."

The board agreed unanimously to recommend a non-smoking terminal to the City Council, which would have to approve any change. Under the current ordinance, airport restaurants can designate their own smoking areas, and board members did not recommend a change to that aspect of the rule.

In April 1990, a new smoking policy took effect at the airport and was largely unchanged by the city-wide smoking ordinance enacted Jan. 1, 1991. Airport smoking areas are designated to be at least 5 percent but not more than 30 percent of the entire floor space of the airport.

A change in airport smoking areas might not actually require amending that ordinance, said Kevin Laughlin, first assistant city attorney.

"As far as keeping with what's there, (the current ordinance) doesn't say smoking areas must be in the concourse as long as it is at least that 5 percent," he said. Under that rule, the airport restaurants might be designated to hold smoking areas and smoking eliminated in other areas, Laughlin said.

The smoking issue should now go to the city council for consideration. Ms. Kirksey said she would speak to that group as well.

"I just feel like we're becoming increasingly aware of the hazards of smoking," she said. "The evidence has been clear you can contract illness even if you're not actively smoking."

BOOKS: Most volumes sell for quarter, 50 cents and other oil-related subjects.

Books there include selections from the classics and books on history and legends, such as "At Dawn We Slept" on the 1941 Pearl Harbor attack and "Apache Gold and Yaqui Silver" by Texas folklorist J. Frank Dobie.

Books for sale deal with just about all subjects. They are arranged in broad classifications, such as art, business and economics, government and politics, literature, law, religion, how-to, poetry, sports, health, war, Westerns, science fiction, nature, biology, and reference books.

"Our new neighbors, the CAF (Confederate Air Force), will enjoy the book sale," said Mrs. Scury, "as they look through our wonderful selection of war and history books."

To speed up the reading process, the Friends is offering "a speed-reading machine (course) for $50," said Mary Hughes, "but I don't know if it works."

But a project that the Friends group is working on is "to get reading material to everybody," Mrs. Hughes said. "The fact that we may make money on it is a bonus. And the fact that we enjoy it (conducting the sale), is a super bonus."

Cindy Cantrell works in setting up the children's book tables.

"When you find kids that want to read, it is worth giving up a week to wrestle books around," she said. "Some of them come in here looking for special treasures." And working with other members of the Friends is fun, she said, because "there is no heavy-handed bureaucracy."

Barbara Larsen noted that children, at a quarter or 50 cents per book, can get their "introduction to reading. And from there, it can go to children saving their money and going to retail bookstores. They get a taste out here for less expensive books."

Mary Mann, who works year-round with Mrs. Hughes in collecting donated books for the sale, said that she simply enjoys "working with books and (enjoys) the people who work with books."

"This is real recycling," noted Mrs. Scury.

Janice Gist, mother of four, said that for her children to browse through the books is "like a treasure hunt."

A perennial bonus at the annual sale is the "trash-to-treasure" sale conducted by the Midland Geneological Society, which collects garage-sale type items to benefit the library.

"There's everything in the world," Donna Perrigo bragged. The trash-to-treasure fare goes from old radios and cameras to clothes and whatnots. "We even have the sink — the bathroom sink."

Substance abuse seminar set

Staff Report

Several institutions have banded together to present a "Substance Abuse Subtle Screening Inventory (SASSI) Training" Workshop.

The workshop will be offered at 9 a.m. Friday in Room 130 of the Electronic Technology Building at Odessa College.

Roger J. Knott, a doctoral candidate at the University of Texas in Austin, will conduct the workshop.

Participants will be trained in the administration of SASSI, a scientifically validated screening instrument for measuring substance abuse in both adolescents and adults.

The screening can be utilized by court substance abuse programs, employee assistance programs, counseling agencies, physician offices and general mental health and school settings.

Three hours of continuing education hours will be offered for the course. Cost of the course is $25.

To register with a major credit card call (915) 335-6580 or register in OC's Continuing Education Office on the second floor of the Student Union Building. Registration is also available at OC's Drive-Thru-Booth located in the parking lot off of University Boulevard.

The event is sponsored by the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Glenwood Hospital, and Odessa College Continuing Education Department.

For more information call (915) 335-6582 or (915) 332-2172.

have practice ranges in their back yards.

Whether bow and arrow shooting is safe for backyard use is in debate, but arrows can fly at 200-300 feet per second and more, and are used to kill large animals such as moose and bears.

"If you drive down the street you might have an accident tomorrow," Stokes said. "I'm not going to say that out in residential areas, kids ought to be shooting in their back yards. But a skilled adult is going to know how to be safe."

Al Chitwood, who shoots bows with his 9-year-old son, said he and other archery enthusiasts would take issue with too many restrictions on their sport. He and his son practice together in the back yard, shooting into a target backed by a piece of plyboard and leaning against a wooden fence.

"If they're irresponsible, anybody could get hurt, sure. You've got to design (a practice area) safe," Chitwood said. "But I know a lot of people who are going to be upset if something like this comes along."

Congressman thinks House should face random drug tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — First they lost their banking perks, then their ability to have parking tickets fixed. Now House members are being asked to submit to drug tests.

A Texas congressman wants his peers to vote on legislation establishing random monthly drug tests in the House.

"I do not personally know of any member of Congress who uses drugs, but then again, two weeks ago I could never have guessed that more than 100 members of the House had been bouncing checks at the House bank," Rep. Joe Barton said Wednesday.

The Ennis Republican last year introduced the legislation, which never reached the House floor. Barton was to appear before the House Rules Committee on Thursday to request his amendment be attached to the crime bill.

"If I get it to the floor, I'm very confident that it will pass," said Barton.

"Given the reputation that we've developed for being out of touch with reality and trying to exempt ourselves from everyday rules, this would be a start in rehabilitating the image of the Congress," he said.

Barton said House members should be just as accountable as other federal employees and American workers.

"The president of the United States is drug tested; the Secretary of Defense is drug tested; every member of the armed services is drug tested," he said. "Somewhere between a fourth and a third of all American workers are subjected to drug tests."

Department of Health and Human Services officials estimated that roughly 20 percent of the federal government's nearly 2 million civilian employees face drug tests.

Barton said for the last year and a half he has ordered drug tests on himself and his congressional staff. He declined to say whether any staff members ever tested positive.

Under Barton's plan, a random 10 percent of the 435-member House would be tested each month for drug use. Results would be reported to the House ethics committee and, once every two years, reported publicly.

A member found to have used illegal drugs could be sanctioned under the rules of the House, he said.

"Before we have another scandal we need to begin to police ourselves," Barton said. "We ask even the lowest ranking soldier who fought in Iraq to be tested for drugs and yet we do not require that of ourselves."

Under Barton's amendment, the drug tests would be conducted by a private, non-governmental agency.

"The cost of this would be minimal for the overall budget of over $1 billion that the House spends on itself each year," he said.

But Gene Guerrero, legislative representative for the American Civil Liberties Union office in Washington, questioned the need for drug testing.

"We are opposed to drug testing across the board," he said.

Lucas glad to be back on Texas' death row

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Alleged serial killer Henry Lee Lucas said Wednesday he's glad to back on death row in Texas after nearly a year in Florida, where authorities have been trying to link him to four killings.

"The prison system in Florida stinks," Lucas said. "They don't allow no fans, no air conditioning, no nothing. You just sit in there and roast.

"They make it humane in Texas. It may not be the most comfortable, but it is humane. Maybe I shouldn't run them down. I may have to go back there, but the truth is the truth."

Lucas, 55, was returned to Texas last week after authorities in Marianna, Fla., determined they could not afford to pay for Lucas' defense, although the charges against him have not been dropped.

Lucas' former companion, Ottis Elwood Toole, however, was sentenced to four consecutive terms of life in prison, each without parole for 25 years, after pleading guilty to four counts of first-degree murder for the 1980 robbery-murder of four people at a Florida gas station.

Lucas, indicted for four slayings between December 1980 and April 1981, once claimed he killed nearly 600 people in 26 states but later recanted his confessions for all but one slaying, that of his mother in Michigan in 1960.

He's on death row for the 1979 killing of a woman whose body was found near the central Texas town of Georgetown. Besides the death sentence, he has six life terms, two 75-year sentences and a 60-year term for other Texas convictions.

Toole implicated Lucas in the Florida killings, a role Lucas denies.

"They wanted me to confess to four murders," he said. "I wouldn't do it. I'm not going to confess to nothing I didn't do."

Lucas said he signed a waiver in which he agreed to return to Florida if the cases come to trial.

Lucas said while locked up in Florida, authorities kept him on the female wing of the Jackson County Jail, where he was the lone man, because that part of the facility was more secure.

"I stayed in one cell for 10½ months with a bunch of women," he said. "I don't like to see a bunch of naked women at all. I don't think I should have been there. I'm a man and I should have been locked up the man's side."

Lucas, who wears a glass eye and was without his dentures when interviewed Wednesday, said his female jailmates in Florida would walk up to his cell and talk with him.

"They all went for me," he said. "I've got a picture of one in my cell now. She's pretty."

El Paso teens' cruising to be curbed by curfew

EL PASO (AP) — Late night cruising will be a thing of the past for El Paso teens next month, when a curfew requiring them to be home by 11 p.m. goes into effect.

The City Council adopted the curfew Tuesday and set Nov. 8 as its startup date. The curfew is in effect from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m.

The curfew is an attempt to curb increasing juvenile crime.

El Paso Police Capt. George DeAngelis, commander of the Criminal Investigation Division, gave the City Council statistics showing that crimes by juveniles have been increasing in the city since 1986.

Most juvenile crimes occur from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m., DeAngelis said. But violent crimes tend to increase after 1 a.m., he said.

The curfew has drawn criticism from the American Civil Liberties Union, which has challenged curfews in other cities.

A curfew was approved this summer by the Dallas City Council and is now being challenged in court by the ACLU, several teens and their families.

Opponents of the El Paso curfew said the restriction would not reduce juvenile crime.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Better communication and greater versatility are the keys to lasting business success. Let other people know exactly what you expect of them in November. Travel for business and pleasure is favored in December. A new friend or romantic partner will bring out your best qualities in early 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Tanya Tucker, actor Richard Jaeckel, playwright Harold Pinter, actress Helen Hayes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Use your special communications skills to help a loved one attain a cherished goal. A check really is in the mail! Accept a last-minute social invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Too many cooks could spoil the broth at work. You belong at the front of the parade. Take charge and show others what you can accomplish on your own. Your professional reputation grows.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Strengthen your credibility by keeping any promises you make. A financial decision can no longer be postponed. Follow through on a helpful suggestion. Both your home and your mate need more attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Once you get better organized, no one will be able to accomplish more than you. Do what you can to help a friend, but refuse to be dragged down. Past efforts bring new rewards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on clearing away that paperwork on your desk. Your productivity will rise once the clutter is taken care of. Seize a golden opportunity to cement a business relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on the central issue and you will waste less time. It is possible to mix business with pleasure successfully. Your social schedule is more crowded than usual. Dress up and enjoy yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Court those who think positive and share your interest in good works. Diplomacy will get you what you want. Develop a recently discovered talent and you will reap new profits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A sense of humor helps you make an important point. You are more convincing when you lighten up. A challenge proves stimulating on both sides.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The direct approach works best. Confide in your mate or business partner. By taking a closer look at recent expenditures, you will find ways to save money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give an older associate the benefit of the doubt. Financial tensions subside, thanks to good news from afar. Act confident of success and you will get what you desire most. New alliances prosper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your options open. Postpone signing legal papers a while longer. A family member may want greater freedom. Give your loved ones a chance to spread their wings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel and sports vie for your attention. Flex your brain power as well as your brawn. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Listen eagerly to a partner's views on business and pleasure.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are quick-witted, punctual and well-groomed. They want to earn their elders' respect and show a strong interest in self-improvement activities. Making a good impression is a top priority with these Libras. They have a knack for turning the ordinary into something very special. Tireless workers, they always finish what they start.

A TIME FOR EVERYTHING

Both vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ A J 10 ♡ A 10 5 ◇ A J 9 4 ♣ 7 5 2
WEST ♠ Q 7 5 ♡ 7 3 2 ◇ 7 6 ♣ A 10 8 6 3		EAST ♠ 8 6 2 ♡ 9 8 6 4 ◇ K 8 5 3 ♣ Q 4
	SOUTH ♠ K 9 4 3 ♡ K Q J ◇ Q 10 2 ♣ K J 9

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣

If there is one facet of card play that distinguishes the expert from the average player it is the ability to resist the urge to win a trick at the first opportunity. Give most players a sure trick in the suit and the possibility of winning a second and no thought is devoted to the hand as a whole, which might dictate a holdup as a means of guaranteeing the contract. This hand illustrates our point.

South held a maximum for a two-no-trump response. With a square hand and only a weak four-card major, South saw no reason to introduce the spade suit when a bid that described both the strength and shape of the hand was available.

West led a low club and declarer captured the queen with the king. South had available seven fast tricks. One way to establish two more was to guess which defender held the queen of spades. Since that was an even-money proposition, declarer chose to cash the ace and king of spades, in the hope of dropping the queen, then fall back on the diamond finesse when the lady did not appear. Unfortunately, East held the king of diamonds, and a club return permitted the defenders to reel off four club tricks and the queen of spades as well as the king of diamonds—down two.

Declarer did well to increase the chances of landing the contract by attempting to drop the queen of spades. However, there was available a sure-trick line. All declarer had to do was refuse to win the first trick!

Since no shift can harm declarer, the best the defenders can do is return a club. Even if West can profitably hold up on this trick, declarer can now take the diamond finesse with complete safety. If it loses and East has a club to return, that suit is breaking 4-3 and the most the defenders will be able to collect is three club tricks and a diamond.

Denmark awards Minnelli with H.C. Andersen prize

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Liza Minnelli was awarded the H.C. Andersen prize Wednesday during a ceremony in a house where the Danish storyteller once lived.

The prize, the first of a series to be given to international stars visiting Denmark, was in the form of a silver medal with a relief of the emperor from the Hans Christian Andersen tale "The Nightingale."

Mayor Jens Kramer Mikkelsen presented the medal to Minnelli, saying the singer's voice was like that of a nightingale.

"The first book I was ever given was the fairy tales of Andersen, and I read them all," said Minnelli, who is on a European concert tour.

Andersen, whose popular stories have been translated into more than 100 languages, died in 1875. His restored 18th-century house features readings of his works in Danish and English.

SALT LAKE CITY — Michael Bolton's band members and road crew routed a radio station crew in a charity softball game that drew about 1,000 Bolton fans, many unhappy to see Maria Maples pitching for the singer's team.

Bolton

"What's she doing here?" complained Sheila Healy of Salt Lake City. "Why doesn't she go out and get a real job instead of glomming these rich guys?"

Maples, a model and former fiancee of Donald Trump, surprised spectators when she batted a ball smartly over the shortstop's head in the game against KISN radio Tuesday.

"The pressure's on today," she said, after rounding the bases to score. Maples pitched, and Bolton played second base as Bolton's Bombers beat KISN 18-4. The broadcasters lost despite the presence of former professional basketball player Ron Boone and Utah Jazz center Mike Brown.

Bolton, who had an evening concert at the Salt Palace, was divorced from his first wife in January. He and Maples were first spotted together last week at the Central Washington State Fair in Yakima.

BOYS TOWN, Neb. — Mickey Rooney and artisan Theo Faberge will help this home for troubled youth celebrate its 75th anniversary in a ceremony next month, Boys Town officials said Wednesday.

Rooney starred in the 1938 movie "Boys Town." Faberge is the grandson of Carl Faberge, goldsmith and jeweler to the Imperial Russian court and creator of the Faberge eggs for the czars of Russia.

The two will present a special line of Faberge eggs Nov. 16. The limited edition of 250 Brotherhood Eggs are hand-cut from amethyst crystal and hand-painted with 23-karat gold. Each egg is adorned with an imperial Russian crown.

Inside the egg and viewed through a crystal window is Boys Town's "Two Brothers" statue made of silver and inscribed with the Boys Town slogan, "He ain't heavy, Father ... he's m' brother."

Borsheim's Fine Jewelry and Gifts commissioned the line as a commercial venture. The presentation banquet is a benefit for Boys Town.

Boys Town is located west of Omaha and was founded by the Rev. Edward Flanagan in 1917.

OMAHA, Neb. — Veteran television host Art Linkletter says the explosion of tabloid-style entertainment programs has become a celebration of the dark side of life.

"It's fun and exciting. But the problem is that it's become a staple, rather than one of the flavors of life," he said Tuesday in an interview before an Omaha lecture.

Society has changed since Linkletter began working in radio in 1933, he said.

"Then, you couldn't use the word pregnant on the radio," Linkletter said. "Today, you go on the 'Geraldo' show and say how you get pregnant and with how many people."

Linkletter, 79, was the host of "House Party," which began on CBS radio and later moved to television.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Writer Hunter S. Thompson and his mother have obtained a court order against a Massachusetts man who is attempting to write an unauthorized biography.

Thompson

The Thompsons said Peter O. Whitmer posed as a flower deliveryman Sept. 26 after contacting Virginia Thompson, 83, several times to get information for his book on Thompson.

A lawsuit claims Whitmer caused Mrs. Thompson to "suffer emotional distress." Whitmer says he merely dropped by with a bouquet to try to make peace after annoying Thompson's family with requests for information for a biography he is writing for Hyperion Press.

Circuit Judge Thomas Knopf on Tuesday ordered Whitmer to stay away.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Men injured

Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police in Odessa are searching for two men in connection with an aggravated robbery Tuesday night at the Party House Lounge that sent two men to the Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Larry Alan Willsey, 44, of Odessa, is in critical condition with head injuries after being struck with a baseball bat. Charles William Bouchard, 41, was treated and released.

The suspects entered the lounge at about 9:20 p.m. and shouted for everyone to get on the floor.

One suspect is described as Hispanic, believed to be in his mid-20s, and is described as 5 feet, 7 inches, 150 pounds with a dark moustache. He was wearing a tan ski mask and dark coveralls. He was armed with a short-barrel rifle, possibly a .22 caliber, single shot, officials said.

The second suspect is believed to be a Hispanic in his late teens, and is described as 5 feet, 11 inches and 190 pounds. He was wearing a ski mask and was armed with the baseball bat, officials said.

The first suspect pointed the gun at Tracy Ann Coddington, 25, and ordered her to open the cash register. He took an undetermined amount of money and ordered her to lay down.

The suspects took a wallet and purse from Coddington and the wallets of both injured men.

After taking Willsey's car keys, the suspects put the victims in a storage closet and fired one round through the door. No one was hit by the bullet.

The suspects fled the scene in a small truck.

Drug charges

A Crime Stoppers tip led to the arrest of a Midland couple Tuesday on felony charges of possession of marijuana.

Dennis Darnell, 23, and Karen Darnell, 27, were arrested at 1:40 a.m. after officers found a half pound of marijuana at their residence at 3304 S. County Road 1204, police reports said.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond on each third-degree felony charge at $10,000.

Association to locate world trade center in McAllen

McALLEN (AP) — The city of McAllen will be the newest host for a world trade center, making it the first border city to join the international trading network, officials said Wednesday.

The center is expected to link McAllen with more than 100 centers worldwide and will provide a big boost to the local economy as well as help cut into the area's high unemployment rate, officials said.

"I think it will be a deciding factor in many companies locating here," said Mayor Othal Brand, one of several government officials and businessmen gathered to announce the city's new designation.

Officials learned Tuesday that the World Trade Center Association had decided to locate a center in McAllen, which will serve all the border cities between Brownsville and Laredo.

Other Texas centers are located in Houston and San Antonio.

"You know, today is really a great day," said state Rep. Roberto Gutierrez, D-McAllen. "Today, McAllen is put before the eyes of the world."

The centers were described by officials as focal points for foreign trade, providing a single location for government agencies and businesses to conduct trade-related activities.

The facilities provide businesses with a place to display their products and also allow access to the WTC Network, the association's worldwide computerized trading and messaging system.

The network can identify business prospects in more than 70 countries and provide business leads and other pertinent information, including government regulations and tariffs.

In McAllen, the center is expected to begin operations immediately as official recruit memberships for service and the network system.

Treaty Oak wood proceeds could be spent on trees

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal to spend all proceeds from the sale of Treaty Oak wood on planting and care of trees is before city officials here.

"We think it would be an extension of the oak itself," said Brother Daniel Lynch, chairman of the Treaty Oak Wood Utilization Evaluation Team, a city task force making the recommendation.

The City Council on Thursday considers the proposal, which would channel the money into the city's Planning for the Future Fund. The city's goal is to plant 1 million trees by the year 2000.

The fund, bolstered by a voluntary checkoff on utility bills and other private donations, pays for the materials and education necessary to accomplish that goal.

About 1,500 pieces from the landmark live oak are stored at an undisclosed city Parks and Recreation warehouse. The wood, trimmed from the tree last spring, has been preserved and is on reserve as officials decide how to dispose of it.

"No proposal has been accepted," said John Giedraitis, city forester. "Proposals have ranged from the greatest piece of art ever made to toothpick holders — and everything in between."

Treaty Oak, a half-century-old live oak, lost one major limb system after an intentional herbicide poisoning in 1989.

Diet may influence arthritis, study shows

By Jean Carper

Food-Inspired Arthritis

Does diet affect rheumatoid arthritis?

In the past, the answer was a definitive no, according to a group of Australian rheumatologists at the University of Sydney. But in a new review of the evidence in the British Journal of Rheumatology, they find "growing concern that what patients eat may influence the course of their rheumatoid arthritis."

Carper

For example, the rheumatologists point to well-documented studies showing that allergic reactions to specific foods aggravate arthritis in some people. Offending foods include milk, cheese, corn, cereal and shrimp. When some patients were deprived of these foods, their joint pain and swelling, as well as fatigue, lessened or disappeared.

Another sure-fire clue: When some patients fast — giving up all food for a short period — their joint inflammation lets up. One theory is that some arthritis sufferers may have "leaky" intestines, which more likely let food allergens slip through into the bloodstream.

Since only certain arthritis sufferers react to food (the estimates range from 5 to 70 percent), the problem is detection. The Australian researchers urge more intensive testing of individuals who appear to have food-aggravated arthritis.

Chocolate migraines

Many migraine sufferers blame their headaches on chocolate. Now a new double-blind study says they are right.

Researchers at the Princess Margaret Migraine Clinic at Charing Cross Hospital in London had 12 patients eat a 1.4-ounce chocolate bar. Twenty-two hours later, on average, five of them (about 40 percent) developed a migraine. None of eight patients given a placebo look-alike bar without chocolate got migraines.

Chocolate contains several pharmacological agents that might be responsible, such as theobromine and tyramine, a known migraine trigger, say the researchers.

This doesn't mean, however, that eating chocolate will always trigger a migraine. Dr. Seymour Solomon, director of the headache unit at Montefiore Medical Center in New York, notes in his new book, "The Headache Book," that sometimes several factors must conspire to bring on a migraine, such as stress along with a specific diet-trigger.

Also, how much chocolate or other migraine-triggering food you eat may determine whether headache occurs. For example, one piece of chocolate may not bring on a migraine, but eating a whole box of chocolate might, says Solomon.

New advice for salt-watchers

Cut down on salt in cooking and curtail use of the salt shaker at the table. That's common advice from health experts. But such measures may not rid your diet of as much excessive sodium as previously thought.

So say researchers at the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia. Experts in the past estimated that you got from 30 to 35 percent of your sodium from such individual salt use. But when Monell researchers did a careful week-long test of the salting habits of 62 healthy average adults, they found table salt and cooking salt contributed only 11 percent of sodium in the diet.

By far the major sodium source was processed foods; fully 77 percent of sodium in the diet was added to foods during processing, Monell researchers calculated. Virtually all the remaining sodium in the diet — 12 percent — was natural to the foods.

This means, says Monell's Richard Mattes, Ph.D., that cutting down on the use of table and cooking salt does not reduce sodium intake nearly as much as most people think and, indeed, may do little good. Primarily, he cautions, consumers must learn to choose foods low in sodium, notably processed foods. He also urges companies to produce more low-sodium foods.

Book explains use of psychiatric drugs

By Brenda C. Coleman
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — A consumer book about psychiatric drugs is scientific enough to satisfy doctors and understandable enough to serve as a "Reader's Digest" of mind-altering medications, mental health professionals say.

"What You Need to Know About Psychiatric Drugs," co-written by the University of Chicago's psychiatry chairman, tells in plain language the good and bad points of the scores of such drugs, dispensed to Americans at a rate of 200 million prescriptions a year.

It also tells, perhaps uniquely, how they fit in with overall treatment, how they are used appropriately and how they often are misused by doctors and patients, said Dr. Stuart Yudofsky, professor and chairman of psychiatry at the university.

"I believe so strongly that the best care occurs when a patient is informed and makes decisions responsibly," said Yudofsky, who wrote the book with Dr. Robert E. Hales and Dr. Tom Ferguson.

Dr. Jim Lomax, professor and acting chairman of psychiatry of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, praised the 600-page book for its "good scientific information" and readability.

"The book is a careful and comprehensive explanation of the reasons for the use of psychotropic drugs — drugs that affect thinking or feelings," Lomax said.

"Psychiatric illnesses are frightening illnesses and people are very hungry for information," Lomax added. "Professionals, up until recently, unfortunately, have not done very well to explain the illnesses and their treatment."

One in five Americans will suffer a mental illness at some point, the National Institute of Mental Health has estimated. The most common are anxiety disorders, depression, dementias (such as Alzheimer's disease) and schizophrenia.

Many such disorders respond readily to drug treatments, but only one-fifth of adults with mental disorders are receiving any type of care, the institute has said.

Susan Dime-Meenan, executive director of the Chicago-based National Depressive and Manic Depressive Association, said Yudofsky's book is "like the Reader's Digest" of psychiatric medications and "very easy to read for the layman."

It includes drugs for use in children's illnesses such as attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder, and it contains an appendix explaining how psychiatrists classify all mental disorders, plus a glossary.

The only comparable book, Dime-Meenan said, is "The Essential Guide to Psychiatric Drugs," a consumer guide published last year by Jack M. Gorman, a psychiatrist and former student of Yudofsky. Gorman's book lists for $22.95, Yudofsky's for $35.

Yudofsky, who with Hales also co-wrote two psychiatric textbooks and co-edits a psychiatric journal, said the new book is organized around questions patients have asked him during his 17 years of practice.

"I went over my notes — years and years of notes," he said. "One thing patients told me was they wanted more information. Often they had questions that occurred to them in the parking lot that didn't occur to them during a two-hour visit in my office."

Cancer reseacher begging for funds

LONDON (AP) — A day after his breast cancer research was published in a prestigious medical journal, Anthony Leathem was down at Oxford Circus, begging for coins to support his work.

"All of the pennies and tuppances add up," said Leathem, a plump, jolly doctor with a deep belly laugh.

"My colleagues think it's awful. I'm at a fairly prestigious teaching hospital and I'm out on the streets with a tin can," said Leathem.

His fund-raising methods have gained as much attention as the research itself, which other experts call interesting but not a major advance.

In a recent issue of the Lancet, Leathem, the leading investigator at London's University College and Middlesex School of Medicine, reported a new breast cancer test that may identify women whose cancer is likely to spread and thus need further treatment.

Cancer experts say the test, which looks for a particular sugar in cancer tissue, is no better than current techniques.

However, the Lancet article led to some glowing stories in the London papers for Leathem to pin to his bulletin board before hitting the streets again.

That day it was Oxford Circus, the retail heart of London, where he sought attention with his rattling can and a bright green and gold banner across his chest proclaiming "Breast Cancer Campaign."

Leathem's saga is one of the odder manifestations of a worldwide dilemma — how to fund scientific research as costs swell and resources dwindle.

For Britain, the pinch has led a number of researchers to move to the United States.

Dr. Gordon McVie, the scientific director of the Cancer Research Campaign, said the charity funded the first three years of Leathem's work, but denied continued support until other labs confirmed his findings.

Dismayed but not discouraged, Leathem and his wife set up their own charity. His two teen-age daughters, his parents, brother, nieces and nephews all pitch in.

They've raised about $135,000 in two years.

Collecting pennies on the streets is just one of his efforts, including organizing dances, barbecues and flea-markets. He stands with his tin can in a subway in London every morning before work, and claims he collects up to 30 pounds a week.

Leathem's mother collected $675 at the Henley regatta. His father sells whiskey-spiked marmalade.

The results of his work so far, however, have fallen short of a breakthrough.

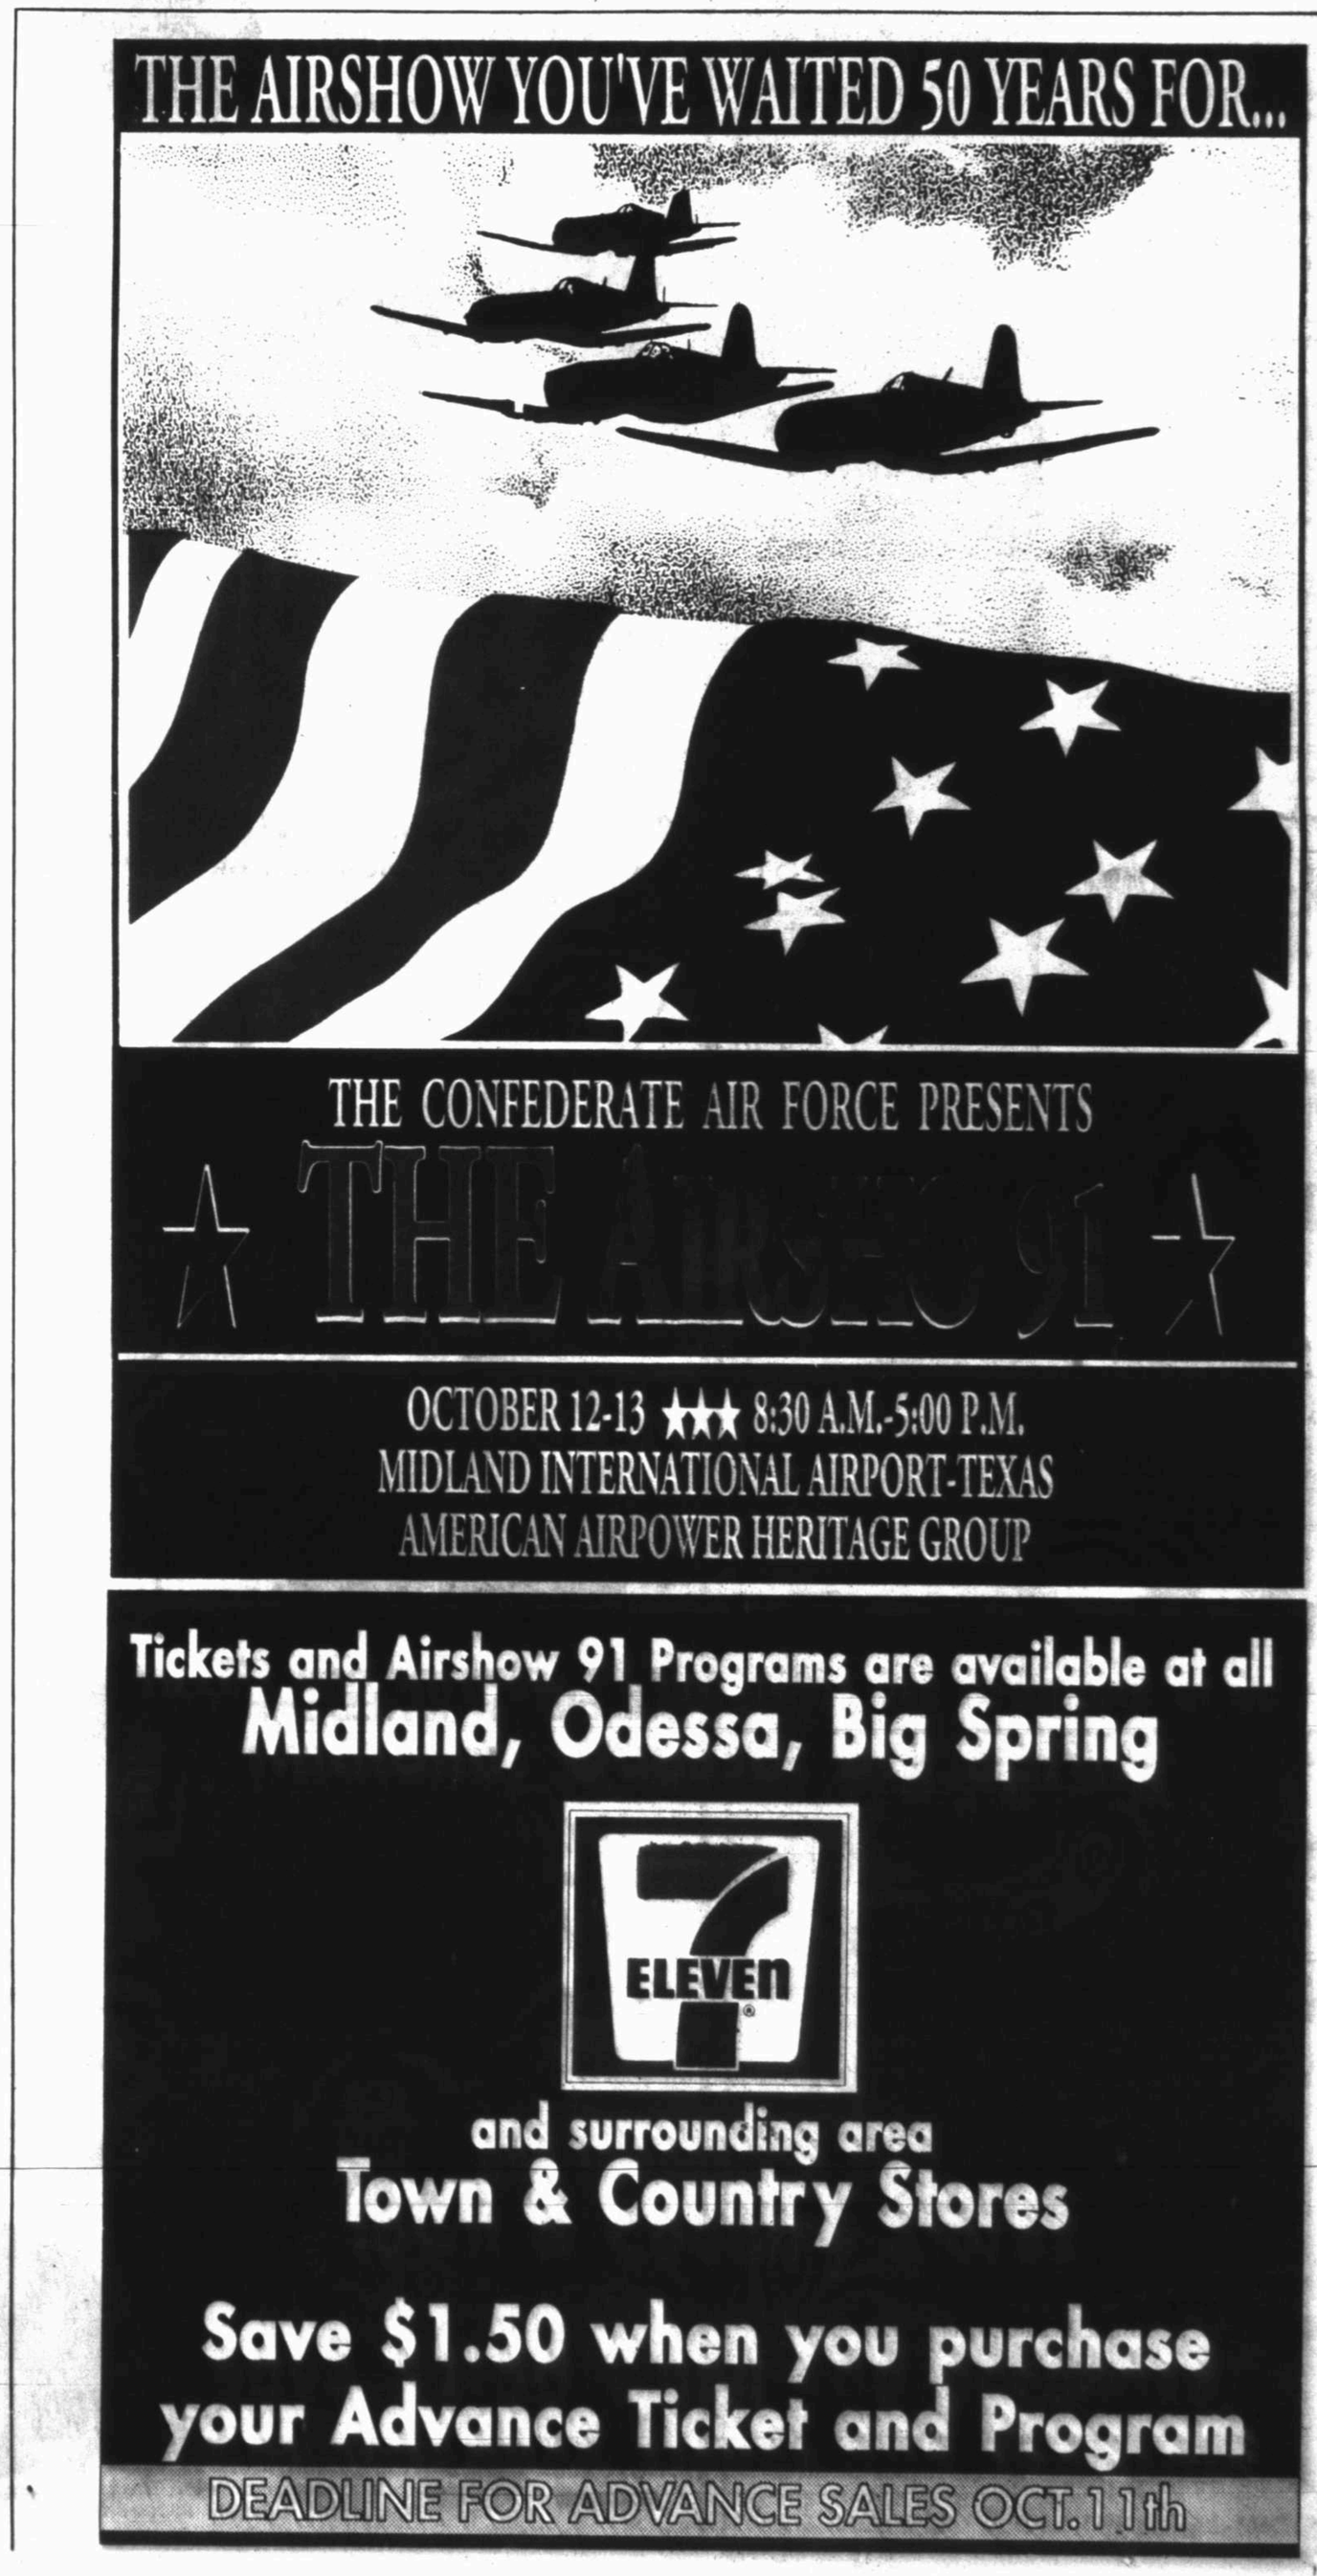
Preliminary results from two other British labs show that the test adds interesting information about the biology of breast cancer, but is not better at predicting the course of disease than current methods, McVie said.

The test uses a protein, HPA, that sticks to a specific sugar in breast cancer. Leathem believes that women who have this sugar in their cancer have tumors that are more likely to spread than tumors in women without it.

The current method of predicting the course of breast cancer is to take out a sample of lymph glands in the arm pit during the initial breast surgery. If cancer cells are found in the glands, it indicates the cancer is more likely to spread.

However, close to one-third of women who have no cancer cells in lymph glands go on to suffer cancer again.

Dr. William McGuire, chief of medical oncology at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, said Leathem's paper in the Lancet lacked "crucial data" proving that HPA is a superior forecaster.



FDA approves new drug for patients with AIDS

N.Y. Times News Service

The Federal Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday that it had approved dideoxyinosine, or DDI, as the second treatment to slow the deadly deterioration of the immune system in people with AIDS.

The drug was approved before the completion of tests to fully establish its effectiveness and assess the dangerous side effects that some patients have experienced.

It would be used by patients who are not helped by AZT, which had been the only approved treatment for the AIDS virus.

The retail price of DDI is expected to be about $2,000 a year for the most common dosage, or about 20 percent lower than AZT.

Although scientists said they did not understand how DDI worked, tests of AIDS patients using the drug showed an increase in the level of their T-4 cells, which is an indicator of relative strength in the immune system.

The agency's action, which had been recommended by an advisory committee, was expected.

Noting that DDI was approved before the completion of tests, Dr. David Kessler, the food and drug commissioner, said his agency would closely monitor the drug.

He said the agency had approved DDI quickly because "AIDS patients are dying" and enough was already known, based on scientific analyses and extrapolation, to approve DDI as "safe and effective."

The government says more than 180,000 Americans have been stricken with AIDS, and more than 100,000 have died. An estimated 1 million Americans are infected with the AIDS virus.

Kessler added that he expected government and private insurers to pay for DDI like any other FDA-approved drug. But the agency is requiring an unusually lengthy explanation of the dangers and uncertainties to be placed in the drug package.

An FDA advisory committee is to review the test results early next year.

Bristol-Myers Squibb, which developed DDI under a license from the National Cancer Institute and supplied it to patients without charge during tests, said more than 3,000 doctors had prescribed it for 30,000 patients around the world.

About 8,800 are now using it. The company said it would continue to supply DDI free to poor patients not covered by Medicaid.

Bruce Ross, president of the company's American drug unit, said it was "very difficult to predict" how many patients would use DDI or "how the drug will actually be used." Burroughs-Wellcome Co., which makes AZT, said more than 100,000 people were using AZT.

Marc O. Mayer, an analyst at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., said DDI sales could reach $100 million after the first year and $400 million if it was found effective at early stages of AIDS.

Bristol-Myers will pay a royalty of 5 percent of DDI sales to the National Institutes of Health, with a share going to the drug's discoverers, Dr. Samuel Broder, Hiroaki Mitsuya and Robert Yarchoan at the cancer institute.

CAF planes to soar into sky for AirSho'91

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Nostalgia will fill the sky.

A runway of memories will be decked out in fashion from a time remembered.

And a World War II-styled aircraft hangar will be swinging with the musical sounds of the late 1930s and early 1940s.

The time, recalling events of 50 years ago, is at hand when the Confederate Air Force (CAF) and its American Airpower Heritage Museum (AAHM) will unravel events in celebrating the CAF's new International Headquarters at Midland International Airport.

In leading up to Airsho'91 on Saturday and Sunday, the CAF and the AAHM will bring back Swing Era music associated with those 1939-45 World War II years.

Civilian-wardrobe fashions and military dress from those times will be on parade.

And then, the sights, the sounds and the smells of World War II's fighting flying machines will be fired up. Those round and in-line piston engines will stir and whine, belch smoke and fire up, and, finally, brought again to life, will roar, rumble and scream with the eagerness of flight. Their propeller blasts move both man and machine.

Designed to bring about peace in wartime by dealing out terror in the skies and on sea and land, the aircraft evoke sentiment, nostalgia, pride, patriotism and a historical perspective in many aviation buffs who view the rare and restored remnants from the past.

The CAF, after all, is dedicated to finding, restoring, maintaining and flying those rare and endangered combat airplanes from World War II.

Though mostly American, the CAF's Ghost Squadron of 150 warplanes includes other Allies' airplanes, notably British and Canadian, and some Axis powers aircraft, including German and Japanese warplanes.

OCTOBER 1991 FESTIVITIES

USO Dinner Dance

Today: United Service Organizations (USO)-type dance in the one-acre CAF Hangar at Midland International Airport at 7 p.m. Dinner music will be provided by the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, which will be playing Swing-Era songs, including some of those popularized by Tommy Dorsey and Frank Sinatra: "Daybreak," "Stardust," "Blue Skies," "I'll Be Seeing You," "Whispering," and "I'll Never Smile Again." Joining the band will be Kay Starr, whose songs include "Wheel of Fortune" and "Side By Side," and a Sinatra-sounding crooner.

Per-couple ticket prices to the dinner-dance are $700, which includes Airsho'91 VIP benefits, and $250. Single admission is $125.

The CAF Hangar's World War II motif, keyed to the U.S. Army Air Corps, the U.S. Army Air Forces, and U.S. Navy, Marines and Coast Guard aviation, will include combat aircraft and trainers.

Runway Memories

Friday: Runway Memories. The 11:30 a.m. luncheon-style show in the Midland Holiday Inn will feature the music and fashion, both military and civilian, of the late 1930s and early 1940s. Tickets are $35 each. A sponsor's table, which will seat 10 people, is $500.

CAF Colonels

CAF members, colonels all, will hold a membership meeting in the CAF Hangar from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

A West Texas barbecue supper for Airsho'91 participants and hosts will be held at 6:30 p.m. under sponsorship of Schlumberger.

The Airsho'91.

Saturday and Sunday: The CAF's Airsho'91 begins at 10 a.m. and concludes at 4:30 p.m. both days at Midland International Airport. Gates open at 8:30 a.m. Tickets at the gate are $8 each for adults and $4 for children ages 6 through 12. Children under age 6 will be admitted free. Airsho'91 headquarters are at the CAF Headquarters just off Wright Drive in the northwest quadrant of Midland International Airport.

The more intense segments of the show will begin about noon both days when CAF "warbirds" will re-enact major World War II air battles.

American, German and Japanese combat aircraft will be flying in the various stages of the show: The Battle of Britain; Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers; Pearl Harbor and the CAF's "Tora! Tora! Tora!" aerial-combat demonstration; Jimmy Doolittle's "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" raid; battles of Midway, Coral Sea and Wake Island; Russian Front; Ploesti; Marianas Turkey Shoot; D-Day; Victory in Europe; Victory in Japan.

Aircraft in combat-like maneuvers are to include the P-40 Warhawk, the P-38 Lightning, the P-47 Thunderbolt, the P-51 Mustang, the P-39 Airacobra, the F4F Wildcat, F6F Hellcat, B-26 Marauder, the B-25 Mitchell, the F4U Corsair, the B-17 Flying Fortress, the B-24 Liberator, the B-29 Superfortress, the British Spitfire, replica aircraft (Zeros, Vals, Kates) of the Imperial Japanese Navy and a restored Mitsubishi A6M2 Zero, the German Messerschmitt Bf 109, the Heinkel He. 111 and other warplanes.

A special attraction both days are to include aerobatic pilot Julie Clark in her Beechcraft T-34 military trainer; Otto the Clown Helicopter; aerobatic sailplane pilot Steve Powell; a sky-diving act; and other aerial demonstrations.

At 4:30 p.m. Saturday, a "Western Stomp" barbecue and dance is to be held under sponsorship of Premier Travel.

A "Survivors Party" is set for 5 p.m. Sunday for Airsho'91 participants and hosts under sponsorship of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

DECEMBER 1991 FESTIVITIES

Tuesday, Dec. 3, through Friday, Dec. 6: Symposium on "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years" in the Midland Holiday Inn. Keynote speaker is to be David Eisenhower, political scientist and grandson of Dwight David "Ike" Eisenhower, World War II U.S. Army general and, later, U.S. president. Sessions begin at 8 a.m. each day. Registration fee is $275 per person.

Dec. 3: Overview and concurrent sessions on events leading up to World War II. Oral history and photography exhibit featuring the Midland Army Air Field, the world's largest bombardier school operated by the United States Army Air Forces.

Dec. 4: Concurrent sessions. Noon speaker to be Dr. Tom Hatfield, University of Texas military historian and researcher. Dinner Theater performance of "Keep The Home Fires Burning" to be staged at 6:30 p.m.

Dec. 5: Concurrent sessions. Noon speaker to be Captain Edward L. "Ned" Beach, author of "Run Silent, Run Deep." David Eisenhower, author of "Eisenhower: At War," is to deliver the keynote address at 7 p.m.

Dec. 6: Concurrent sessions. Retired Lt. Gen. Robert Ruegg is to speak on "The Attack of the Philippines." Speaker for the noon luncheon is to be Joseph Jacob "Joe" Foss, World War II Marine Corps Wildcat fighter ace and former governor of South Dakota.

Preview of the American Airpower Heritage Museum is to be held at 6 p.m.

Midland-Odessa Symphony performance of "Christmas 1941," featuring vocalist Judith Dow, is to be at 8 p.m.

Dec. 7: Grand opening of the International Headquarters of the Confederate Air Force and the American Airpower Heritage Museum and the CAF's aerial demonstration "Tora! Tora! Tora!" The "Tora! Tora! Tora!" show reenacts the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

B-29 Superfortress

The Boeing B-29 Superfortress was World War's II most formidable long-range bomber. The high-altitude "Superfort" was widely used on Japanese targets in 1944 and 1945. The most famous B-29, the Enola Gay, dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6, 1945. The CAF's B-29, Fifi, is the world's only flying B-29. All told, 3,970 Superfortresses were produced.

B-17

The Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, which was designed in 1934, was used extensively in the European and Pacific Theaters of World War II. The bomber was lauded by its aircrews for its dependability, formidable armament, and ability to withstand battle damage. More than 12,700 Flying Fortresses were built before and during the war. The CAF's B-17s include "Sentimental Journey" and "Texas Raiders."

Air show introduction into history of WWII

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 at Midland International Airport will be a homecoming into nostalgia for many people who served "the cause" on the home front and overseas in World War II.

And for those too young to remember the war, Airsho'91 on Saturday and Sunday at Midland International Airport will be a literal flying introduction, a history lesson, to the era in which the United States became the world's "Arsenal of Democracy."

When the Japanese attacked U.S. forces at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, the war had been raging in Europe for two years, since 1939 when Germany invaded Poland, and in China for four years, since 1937 when Japan invaded China.

That infamous attack, which President Franklin D. Roosevelt said would "live in infamy," almost instantly united a nation.

America, which cautiously had been gearing up for war, turned into an angry tiger. As Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto — who engi-

■ The North American P-51 Mustang, above right, which was one of the best fighters in World War II, was designed at the request the British Royal Air Force. The Mustang was to complement the RAF's Hurricanes and Spitfires, which fought off waves of German Luftwaffe fighters and bombers in the 1940 Battle of Britain. The Mustang's performance soared after its Allison engine was replaced with the Packard-built Rolls-Royce Merlin engine. Mustang production reached 9,293.
■ The Curtiss SB2C Helldiver, above, was a formidable carrier-based U.S. Navy dive-bomber which was called the "Big-Tailed Beast." The Helldiver joined the aging Douglas SBD Dauntless dive-bomber at the height of the war in the Pacific. The Army version of the Helldiver was the A-25.
■ The British Royal Air Force's Supermarine Spitfire, right, which was produced in 40 versions for a total production of 20,351 copies, was the most widely used British fighter. The highly maneuverable and agile Spitfires and Hurricanes were decisive in turning aside the German Luftwaffe in the Battle of Britain in 1940 and in stopping Adolf Hitler's planned invasion of England.

HISTORY: CAF, musuem offers lesson into nation's role in WWII

neered the assault from six Imperial Japanese Navy aircraft carriers — had feared, Japan "awakened a sleeping giant." More than 400 Japanese Zero fighter-bombers, Kate torpedo bombers and Val dive bombers attacked American forces at Pearl Harbor.

America was indigent and no longer was the isolationist that kept the nation apart from the war in Europe. No longer would America remain a distant party to war by supplying bombers, pursuit aircraft (fighters) and other instruments of war to Britain by way of the Lend-Lease Act.

America became committed.

The United States, Britain and Canada declared war on Japan on Dec. 8, 1941.

Germany and Italy, which had welcomed Japan into the Axis powers in 1940, declared war on the United States. In turn, the United States declared war on Germany and Italy.

Down on the farm and in towns and cities, young would-be warriors, many in their teen-age years, volunteered to go to war in the uniforms of aviators, pilots, sailors, soldiers, Marines and Coast Guardsmen.

American industry, dedicated to peacetime production, became intensely steeped in producing military equipment. Automobile plants started turning out warplanes and tanks. Manufacturers of farm implements produced firearms.

General Motors, for example, shut down its automobile production lines and, among other machinery, started making aircraft, including the Grumman Wildcat. International Harvester Company, makers of farm tractors and trucks, produced weapons of war, including the M-1 rifle.

Women, if not serving in the military as WASP (Women Airforce Service Pilots) ferry pilots, joined men in dedicating their war efforts to working in plants.

"Rosie the Riveter," dedicated to turning sheets of aluminum into airplanes, inspired many a worker to keep up the war effort at home.

"Rosie" became part of America's propaganda machine to keep spirits high in the Allies' determination to defeat the Axis powers.

While embroiled in war, the U.S. armed forces established military training bases throughout the nation. Air fields for training fighter and bombers pilots and their crews, including bombardiers, were established throughout West Texas.

By time the war had ended, industrialized America had turned out almost 300,000 warplanes — trainers, liaison aircraft, transports, fighters and bombers.

The war's technology had accelerated aviation and avionics and produced faster fighters, such as the P-51 Mustang, and more lethal bombers, such as the B-29 Superfortress, and refined radar and navigation.

But the end of the war in 1945 almost signaled the extinction of the warring airplanes, which had become symbols of America's unity to end the terrors of wars and to squash the underlying evils.

Many of those airplanes that helped win the war in Europe and in the Pacific were now without purpose. They became obsolete. Their purposes had been fulfilled.

Many of the aircraft assigned to aircraft carriers were pushed overboard and into the sea.

Thousands of land-based aircraft, both stateside and overseas, unceremonially were chopped up, thrown into furnaces and turned into aluminum ingots.

In America and, particularly, in Europe and the Pacific, people were weary of the war.

Except for die-hard aviation enthusiasts, including veteran aircrews and innocent youngsters who, from afar, had so admired pilots and their airplanes, there was waning sentiment for the airplanes.

Fortunately, some aircraft went into the museums, including the Smithsonian Institution's Air & Space Museum and military museums, and into private collections.

Then, in 1957, Lloyd Nolen, a Texas crop-duster and a World War II flight instructor, and a few flying friends bought, for $2,500, a North American P-51 Mustang fighter. That aircraft became the first of the CAF's Ghost Squadron of 150 warbirds — trainers, fighters, bombers, transport, liaison airplanes.

American air-power history, at last, became preserved in flying fashion as the Confederate Air Force's American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum.

Attack re-enactment

CAF's re-enactment of attack 'tells it like it was'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The ghostly yet very real and rousing rumble and shriek of fired-up World War II warplanes will be bringing the past into the present on Saturday and Sunday at the Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 at Midland International Airport.

Those flying antiques, once doomed to aircraft boneyards, are but remnants of America's air power that played vital roles in defeating the Axis powers in the world's most fierce and destructive war.

Cities and towns were turned into rubble by bombing raids and artillery fire. Machines and other instruments of war were blown to bits by other machines and instruments of war. Shattered ships, aircraft carriers and submarines sank. Aircraft were blown up in midair or crashed in flames. Trucks, tanks, trains, jeeps, cars and motorcycles burned.

Bullets, flak, incendiary bombs, artillery fire, streams of fire and gas, falling rubble, starvation, and firing squads killed fighting warriors and innocent civilians.

All told, 50 million people, mostly civilians, died in the 1939-45 World War II era. Military deaths totaled about 17 million.

CIVILIANS DIED from causes which included bombing and strafing raids, starvation, epidemics and massacres.

For America, the war unified the nation, instilled patriotism and gave its people purpose in rallying against the evils of fascism, power and aggression.

The CAF's Airsho'91 is to demonstrate the American air power that waged war to restore peace to the world.

And, too, it is a show that illustrates the cunning of the Imperial Japanese Navy's air-strike force that attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, and pulled America — the "sleeping giant" embedded in isolationism — into a global conflict that would test the mettle of the nation and its people on the home front and in the war zones.

"We are not glorifying war," said Ken Shugart, a flying colonel in the CAF and a member of the CAF's popular "Tora! Tora! Tora!" act that re-enacts the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese aerial attack on Pearl Harbor. "We are just trying to tell it like it was."

THE VARIOUS air battles depicted in the CAF routines try to reflect a bit of the drama, terror, heroism, courage, fear and resolve that went into the war effort — person by person.

Numbers tend to impersonalize death. Nevertheless, they are a measure of war's gravity.

All told, about 16 million America military men and women served in World War II. Of those, more than 290,000 died and another 670,000 were wounded. Germany, which fielded 20 million troops, lost 3.25 million in battle. Japan put 9.7 million warriors in combat and lost 1.27 million to death. The United Kingdom, which sent almost 6 million troops to war, lost almost 360,000. France lost more than 200,000, and Italy, 150,000; Poland, 664,000; Romania, 350,000; Austria, 280,000; Australia, 27,000, and Yugoslavia, 305,000. Russian deaths totaled 6 million troops. China lost 1.3 million.

Amid war's chaos and terror, there is heroism and courage, tears and laughter.

Shugart noted that many World War II veterans will recall that the war "was the worst of times" and, yet, "it was the best of times."

On the American front, the war unified a nation that, following Pearl Harbor, chucked its isolationism and became a virtual world protectorate — at least for the 50 Allied nations dedicated to subduing the nine-nation Axis powers.

AMERICAN INDUSTRY mobilized to overwhelm the enemy with its production.

In aircraft alone, the United States produced almost 300,000 airplanes for the war effort: trainers, pursuit aircraft (fighters), bombers, transports, gliders, and liaison aircraft.

With the flying remnants of that air power, the Confederate Air Force and its American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum are dedicated to demonstrating how those aircraft were used in the war. The CAF claims 150 warplanes. Of those, about 100 are flying.

The intensity of those CAF airpower routines are to begin about noon on Saturday and Sunday. Gates to the air show at Midland International Airport will open at 8:30 a.m. both days. Aerial demonstrations, expected to attract about 40,000 spectators each day, are to begin at 10:30 a.m. Admission to the show is $8 for adults and is $4 for children between ages 6 and 12. Admission is free for children under 6 years of age.

MANY OF the 80 to 90 warplanes, including fighters, bombers and trainers, expected to fly into Midland for Airsho'91 are to participate in the mock air battles. Re-enactments are to include the Battle of Britain; the American Volunteer Group, the Flying Tigers, in P-40 Warhawks fighting Japanese Zeros over China; Japanese "Tora! Tora! Tora!" attack on Pearl Harbor at 7:55 a.m. on Dec. 7, 1941; the Russian Front; the Jimmy Doolittle-commanded B-25 raid, from the aircraft carrier Hornet, over Tokyo; the bombing raids over Germany in B-17s, B-24s and other aircraft; the Battles of Midway, the Coral Sea and Wake Island; the raids on the Ploesti oil refineries; and bombing runs, including the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima by the B-29 Enola Gay on Aug. 6, 1945.

Types of American aircraft to participate in the show include the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, the Grumman F4F Wildcat, the Curtiss SB2C Helldiver, the Douglas SBD Dauntless, the Grumman F4F Wildcat, the Grumman F6F Hellcat, the Chance-Vought F4U Corsair, the Grumman TBF Avenger, the North American P-51 Mustang, the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the Bell P-39 Airacobra, the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt, the North American AT-6 Texan, the Vultee BT-13 and BT-15 Valiant, the Douglas A-26 Invader, the North American B-25 Mitchell, the Martin B-26 Marauder, the Bell P-63 King Cobra, the Douglas C-47 Skytrain, the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, the Consolidated B-24 Liberator, and the Boeing B-29 Superfortress.

German aircraft include the Messerschmitt Bf 109 and Bf 108 Taifun, the Focke Wulf FW 190, Heinkel He 111, the Junkers Ju 52 Iron Annie, and the Fieseler Storch. A partial replica of the Focke Wulf FW 44 is in restoration.

JAPANESE AIRCRAFT include the Mitsubishi A6M2 Zero and replicas of the Zero fighter-bomber, the Nakajima B5N Kate torpedo-bomber, and the Aichi D3A Val dive-bomber.

British aircraft include the Supermarine Spitfire. A Supermarine Seafire is undergoing restoration.

The headliner of the CAF two-hour air-power demonstration is the "Tora! Tora! Tora!" act, which is coordinated and headed up by CAF Col. Charles Hutchins of Texas City.

The eight-minute "Tora!" act is "the most exciting part of the show," said Hutchins, who has flown the routine since 1975. He flies a replica of the Japanese Mitsubishi A6M2 Zero.

Throughout the year, the "Tora!" team flies about 25 re-enact-

PLANE: Zero fast and nimble, not sturdy, pilot says

(From 4)

Chino, Calif.

Those not destroyed in combat or left to rot in jungles were summarily destroyed in the post-war years in the demilitarization of Japan.

OF THE various Japanese warplanes produced during the war, the Zero was the most famous, feared and respected. The carrier-borne Zero was fast, agile, highly maneuverable and boasted a high rate of climb. It could out-turn American fighters, which were more powerful, dealt out heavier firepower, and were better able to withstand battle damage.

Of the 65,000 warplanes produced by Japan during the war, 10,449 were Zeros. By contrast, industrialized America produced 296,431 aircraft. Of those, 13,733 were Curtiss P-40 Warhawks and 8,000 were Grumman Wildcats, which were early American rivals of the Zero.

The Zero's air-to-air combat nemesis was the Wildcat's big brother, the Grumman F6F Hellcat, which became the scourge of the Japanese air forces. All told, the Hellcat downed 4,947 Japanese aircraft, including Zeros.

The Zero was formidable, yet it could be vulnerable due to its light construction and lack of heavy armor plating to protect the pilot in battle. Though less agile, the P-40 and the Wildcat were able to out score the Zero in combat kills.

Zero pilots fought Claire Chennault's famed P-40 Flying Tigers over China before Japan attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. Zeros were at other battles, including the Battles of Midway and Coral Sea, and became one-way missiles for kamikaze ("divine wind") pilots in Japan's desperation to halt the Allies' invasion of Japan.

IN THE CAF's "Tora!" act, the American forces are to be represented by the following aircraft and their pilots:

Curtiss P-40 Warhawk fighter, piloted by Gordon Richardson of Caldwell, Texas.

Grumman FM2 (F4F) Wildcat fighter, piloted by Randy Wilson of Dallas.

Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, a four-engine heavy bomber named the "Texas Raiders" and primarily piloted by Pat Elliott of Houston.

Chance-Vought F4U Corsair fighter, piloted by Vaughn Olsen of Dallas. (The Corsair was developed in 1943 but occasionally is flown for effect in the "Tora!" act.)

The P-40, the Wildcat and the B-17 were in service prior to the war.

Japanese forces are to be represented by the following aircraft and their pilots:

Mitsubishi A6M3 Zero (Zeke) fighter-bomber, piloted by Dr. John Kelley of Dallas.

ZERO REPLICAS (modified North American T-6 Texans), piloted by Charles Hutchins of Texas City, Skip Bailey of Houston, Jim Ryan of Freeport, Jess Bottenhoff of Rosharon, Mike Burke of Galveston, and Gary Hudson of Conroe.

Aichi D3A Val dive-bomber replicas (modified BT-13 Valiants), piloted by Gene Armstrong of Hobbs, N.M., and Charles Angel and Bud Warren, both of Conroe. (Ken Shugart of Midland is a Val pilot who is to fly in the CAF's "Tora!" act this Dec. 7 at the grand opening of the CAF International Headquarters and the American Airpower Heritage Museum.)

Nakajima B5N Kate torpedo-bomber replicas (composites of the AT-6 and the BT-13), piloted by Will Bonefas of Pearland, Bill Powers of Austin, Doug Peoples of Memphis, Tenn., Skip Rawson of Harrisburg, Pa., and Mike Conley of Atlanta, Ga.

The Zero is "a real honest airplane," said John Kelley, the pilot-sponsor of the CAF's only restored Zero. "It's fast enough to get the job done."

In many respects, the Zero was "comparable" to the United States' North American P-51 Mustang, Kelley said, but "everything that the U.S. had was heavier and more powerful."

But for what the Zero "was designed to do, it was remarkable:

Zero is 'a real honest airplane. It's fast enough to get the job done . . . It flies like a Corvette compared to a Lincoln Continental . . . very docile, very nimble, very fast.'

— Dr. John Kelley
sponsor of CAF's Zero

lightweight, fast and nimble, but it was not very sturdy."

THAT WAS part of the Zero's vulnerability.

The Zero had neither self-sealing fuel tanks nor armor plating. The pilot virtually was without protection.

"The Japanese did not customarily take radios or parachutes with them," Kelley said. "'Lightweight' and 'speed' was the order of the day for the Japanese."

By contrast, the heavier and more powerful American aircraft were designed, in part, to protect the pilot with their heavy armor plating and self-sealing fuel tanks.

Kelley's CAF Zero is named Fugu.

Fugu is a poisonous Japanese blowfish.

"PROPERLY PREPARED, it is a delicacy," Kelley said. "Improperly prepared, it will kill you."

The Zero was more nimble than the heavier American aircraft and had a high rate of climb. But later in the war, the U.S. Navy's Grumman F6F Hellcat could out fight the Zero "because it was stouter, sturdier, and we learned how to fight this (Japanese) airplane."

The Zero was designed by Hiro Horikoshi beginning in 1935 and went in production in 1939 by Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

The CAF's Zero, was manufactured in late 1942, but wound up disabled — shot up — by 1943 in the jungles of the Pacific's Solomon Islands.

"It had a tree growing through the middle of it when they found it (in the late 1960s)," Kelley said.

In 1969, a Canadian aircraft restorer hauled the "chopped up" Zero out of the jungle on a barge.

BY 1983, the rebuilt Zero was flying. But instead of its original 1,130-horsepower Sakae radial piston engine, the CAF's Zero is powered by a comparable American Pratt & Whitney 1,200-horsepower engine.

"It flies like a Corvette compared to a Lincoln Continental," said Kelley. The Zero is "very docile, very nimble, very fast."

Archie Donahue, a 74-year-old U.S. Marine Corps ace, scored 14 confirmed aerial kills in American warplanes, including the Wildcat and the Corsair. His logbook records 17 victories.

He tangled with Zero pilots.

"It (the Zero) had some armor plate but not sufficient to stop our .50 calibers (machine-guns)," Donahue said. "It was a pretty light airplane, and I'm very pleased not to have flown it in combat."

"The Zero could outrun, in straight flight, the Wildcat by about 10 or 15 miles an hour," said Donahue, who still flies CAF fighters. "It was a very light airplane but with a similar power plant."

The Zero could out climb the Wildcat.

"BUT WHEN you're in a tangle," Donahue said, "so many more things count. One of them is the ruggedness of the airplane." The Wildcat could take many more G (gravity) forces, like two times," than could the Zero.

"All of our airplanes were better than the Zero, even the Wildcat," Donahue said. The Wildcat had a record of 4½ Zeros (kills) for every Wildcat (downed). Then, when our pilots were shot down in a Wildcat, they survived almost all the time. When you're shot down in a Zero, you don't survive, because it becomes a funeral pyre."

The Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress comes in smoking on a simulated landing in the Confederate Air Force's "Tora! Tora! Tora!" act. Japanese Zero fighter-bombers, Kate torpedo-bombers, and Val dive-bombers re-enact the Pearl Harbor attack. In actuality, a squadron of unarmed B-17s was flying to Pearl Harbor during the Dec. 7, 1941, attack.

'TORA': Flying in show is fun, pilot says

ments of the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

The team flies replicas of the Japanese warplanes, since virtually none, except for a couple of rare Zeros, are airworthy.

THE AUTHENTIC Zero in the show will be flown by Dr. John Kelley, a Dallas physician who is sponsor of the fast and nimble Zero, which was restored in the 1970s after the aircraft was recovered in the Solomon Islands, where it had been shot up in 1943.

After the war, virtually all Japanese combat aircraft were destroyed in an effort to quickly dearm the nation.

Other aircraft in the act will be replicas of the Japanese Val, a single-engine dive-bomber; the Kate, a torpedo-bomber; and the Zero, a fighter-bomber.

"Tora" is the Japanese word for "tiger," which was a code meaning that the waves of more than 400 Zeros, Kates and Vals had reached their target undetected. They were launched from aircraft carriers.

The Zero replicas are modified North American AT-6 Texan trainers. The Vals are modifications of Vultee BT-13 Valiants. And the larger Kates are mergers of AT-6s and the BT-13s.

IN AIRSHO'91, after the Zeros, Kates and Vals make their mock attacks on American military targets, including battleships and military installations, U.S. Army P-40s Warhawks and U.S. Navy F4F Wildcats are launched to counter-attack the enemy aircraft.

Simultaneously, the Zeros are dog-fighting the P-40s and the Wildcats, the Vals are dive-bombing, and the Kates are launching torpedoes.

But safety is foremost.

"Each group has an absolute pattern, vertical and horizontal," said Hutchins. "If you were up on top looking straight down, it wouldn't be exciting at all." However, "When you're looking at it from the side, there's a lot of action."

Flying in the show is "so much fun, too," said Hutchins, 54. "It really all boils down to that. It's enjoyable. It's enjoyable meeting the people, showing them the history" by way of the airpower demonstrations. "That's what we are — a (flying) history lesson. It's enjoyable to meet and visit with the people."

Joining the "Tora!" act will be the CAF's Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress."

ON THE morning of Dec. 7, 1941, a gaggle of B-17s was flying from the mainland to Pearl Harbor on Hawaii's Oahu Island.

In the "Tora!" act, the B-17 will be blowing smoke from one of its four engines, and only one of its two main landing gears will down in simulating a crippled ship.

In the actual attack, Zeros were attacking the defenseless B-17s, which were unarmed and low on fuel.

"Zeros attacked B-17s," said Shugart. "They were defenseless. They were out of gas, no guns, and had nowhere to land" since the landing fields were damaged from bombing.

Shugart said a crew member of one of the B-17s remarked for history: "This is a helluva way to enter a war: with no gas, no guns, and no where to land."

The "Tora!" act will feature fiery blasts of dynamite and the sound of machine-gun fire, bombs exploding, and air sirens blaring.

"It's not a carnival act," said Shugart, who normally flies a Val replica in the Pearl Harbor act. "It's representing what killed over 3,000 Americans" on that morning of Dec. 7 almost 50 years ago.

THROUGHOUT THE air show, "Everybody has a prescribed airspace to operate in," Shugart said of the pilots in the "Tora!" act. "Every show is virtually identical" and "is as safe as we can possibly make it."

All the while, the CAF and its American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum are carrying out the CAF's primary missions: Flying the restored combat aircraft while trying to heighten patriotism in Americans and to honor the spirits in which those airplanes were flown and to pay tribute to the men and women who designed, built, maintained, serviced and flew the airplanes.

"The idea is to maintain them (the airplanes) in flying condition," Shugart said. "If they are well-maintained, they should be flown by fully qualified pilots (only) at appropriate times."

We're proud to welcome some rare birds to Midland.

The Douglas C-47 Skytrain (Skytrooper) is deemed by many pilots and aviation scholars as the world's most dependable, forgiving, and reliable aircraft. The transport, which originally was designed as the civilian DC-3 airliner, carried troops, paratroopers, cargo, and war materiel. Army General Dwight D. Eisenhower reportedly said that four things helped the United States win World War II: the bazooka, the jeep, the atomic bomb, and the DC-3 (C-47).

Museum records oral histories from WWII-era

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

As the 1939-45 World War II years fade into the past, they loom bigger than legend.

That historic period is romanticized by some. Others hold it in horror. Some want to forget. Others hold disinterested viewpoints. Some are in wonderment.

Interest is accelerating.

And those who were there, in war or on the fringes of war overseas or at home, have vast experiences to remember, to tell, to write about, or to forget.

Historians may view the war as objectively as possible or with socioeconomic and political slants. Young people, who have only heard, read about or viewed combat films of the so-called "last good war" may be intrigued by the action.

"World War II may start to become like the (American) Civil War and have that kind of sacred aura around it," said Kathleen McClelland, the curator of education for the American Airpower Heritage Museum (AAHM). "It has become not only part of American history, but part of American mythology, part of our cultural development."

To preserve recollections of those war years, the AAHM is steeped into an oral-history program to record the remembrances of people — on all fronts — who lived during the war.

THE PASSING of time has been an ally to World War II's history.

"When something is too recent, it doesn't seem to belong to history," Ms. McClelland said. "It's your immediate past and your parents' immediate past. You don't want to get into it because you are trying to live you own life."

Now, however, interest in the war is accelerating.

"Fortunately," many veterans are "still alive and will be with us for years to come," Ms. McClelland said.

And, into the 1990s, "a whole new generation" is reviewing the war.

"To them, it is new and different. They have to connect to it. To them, it is kind of exotic and attractive."

The oral-history program is keyed to aviation — virtually all facets that can be discerned and tapped into.

Interviews may be with aviators, the pilots and their crews, who flew in combat or on the home front in ferrying aircraft from place to place.

RECOLLECTIONS may be from foxed-holed soldiers or ship-bound sailors who viewed aircraft in combat. They may include home-front men and women, such as "Rosie the Riveter," who worked in aircraft plants in building the almost 300,000 aircraft produced by American industry during the war.

Others to be interviewed may have been youngsters during the war. Their impressions help form the aura that World War II is becoming.

In two years' time, the AAHM and the Confederate Air Force have recorded about 1,300 interviews with men and women who had some, if only a passing, encounter with war-time aviation.

Oral history is "a scholarly discipline," said Ms. McClelland, and the volunteer interviewers, including members of the Confederate Air Force, are schooled in the techniques of interviewing to elicit as much information as possible and to honor the interviewees' requests.

Some accounts of war veterans may be sensitive.

"They did not all have pretty war experiences," said Ms. McClelland. "It wasn't all fun and movies."

In some cases, there are recollections of incidents that story-tellers "don't want people to know about until after their deaths or after the deaths of people who are involved," she said. "They saw terrible things." Accordingly, the AAHM will "respect and abide" by their requests.

DURING THE CAF's Airsho'91 on Saturday and Sunday at Midland International Airport, AAHM and CAF volunteers will be seeking out "people who have a story to tell," Ms. McClelland said.

"The people who did the fighting had the clearest sense that those (history) lessons have to be re-taught and not allowed to be forgotten, or else we will repeat the same thing (tragic mistakes) over again," Ms. McClelland said.

The oral-history program is part of the AAHM-CAF's overall educational scheme of preserving air-power history by way of the printed and spoken word and by preserving flying artifacts — the warplanes — in AAHM's "Flying Museum" — the CAF's Ghost Squadron of 150 airplanes.

Among the impeccably restored aircraft to be in the museum are the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk and the Grumman FM2 (F4F) Wildcat, both of which are owned by CAF Chief of Staff Joe Mabee and his Aero Classic aviation company. Aero Classic's motto is "Assuring a future for the past."

Non-flying museum artifacts include uniforms, combat gear, weapons and munitions, medals, office furniture, radios, navigation equipment, the Norden bombsight, journals, letters, orders, photographs, radio broadcasts, telegrams and thousands of war-time memorabilia.

By early December, when CAF's new International Headquarters and the AAHM are dedicated at Midland International Airport, the AAHM oral-history program will be housed in the new AAHM offices.

THE MUSEUM'S Phase I will feature exhibits keyed to the theme "Wars and Rumors of War: the 1931-41 Decade Before Pearl Harbor," according to Tami O'Bannion, AAHM director.

The CAF-AAHM dedication will be preceded by the Dec. 3-6 international symposium, "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years," and will coincide with the Dec. 7 re-enactment of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor 50 years ago.

"There's a lot of symposiums on Pearl Harbor," said Mabee. "But the CAF's is going to be a little bit different. We are going to publish our symposium (papers and lectures)," Mabee said.

And the CAF will "re-enact the attack of Pearl Harbor" by flying World War II fighters (pursuit aircraft), torpedo-bombers, dive-bombers, and bombers. "There's no other museum that is able to do that," Mabee said. The CAF's Flying Museum (Ghost Squadron) is the "only one in the world" capable of that Pearl Harbor dramatization.

Mabee is working closely with the CAF executive director, Richard "Ish" Ingram, in the development of the CAF and the AAHM.

Subsequent phases in the development of the American Airpower Heritage Museum will be dedicated to war preparations and to flight training on the home front and to major events and air battles.

Exhibits, for example, will focus on the Spanish Civil War, the Invasion of Manchuria, the Rise of German and Japanese Nationalism, the Battle of Britain, the Attack on Pearl Harbor, the Battle of Midway, the Battle of the Coral Sea, the D-Day Invasion, Victory in Europe, and Victory in Japan.

THE FANCIFUL and morale-boosting nose art, including the Varga(s) girls, cut away from discarded bombers and fighters, is to be preserved in the museum.

All the while, the AAHM will be creating educational programs in an effort to "foster attitudes and habits of inquiry and ways of thinking," Ms. McClelland said.

Oral-history scholarship increasingly is being emphasized by the museum.

"Museums now are under the gun to provide original research — not just to collect old things and explain and interpret them," Ms. McClelland said. "That's where the oral-history program comes in."

Among recollections are those of the late Lloyd Nolen, founder of the CAF in 1957. His personal library and office will be moved into the museum. The recollections of Nolen and CAF co-founder Marvin "Lefty" Gardner, both World War II pilots, are CAF treasures.

The taped interviews are being meticulously transcribed and will be made available to historians, researchers, writers, aviation buffs and others interested in scholarship.

MS. O'BANNION and Ms. McClelland noted the significance in ensuring that "war experiences are not forgotten. The best say to do that is to preserve the artifacts. People (today) can see, touch and feel a connection to the people" in World War II. "The story is always about people and the planes they flew and the tools they used."

Herschel Whittington, editor of the CAF magazine "The Dispatch," helped launch the oral-history program in the late 1980s.

"We are interested in the aviation story from World War II," said Whittington, who was a B-29 radio operator during the war. The program goes far beyond aviators, including aces and those who were "heroes" if just for a moment.

The program, for example, seeks out "the wife of a guy who was in flight training, traveling around, doing what she had to do to keep her household together, to have groceries on the tables," said Whittington, 65.

And there are many stories yet to be told by WASP (Women Airforce Service Pilots) members who ferried high-performance aircraft across the nation.

There is a "spectacular account of a "dog-faced soldier on a Pacific beach describing a dogfight," and there is the story of a B-17 tail-gunner who survived the fall in the bomber's tail section after the tail broke away from the doomed aircraft.

The CAF and the AAHM were "just a natural" for the oral-history program.

And if the dwindling number of story-tellers, now in their 60s, 70s, 80s, elected to "embellish a little, that's their business," Whittington said. "If they leave out something, that's their business, too. We (veterans) don't want to tell everything."

Even at that, Whittington noted, "People remember things differently."

CAF's principal objective to 'keep 'em flying'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

From the outset, the Confederate Air Force's multi-mission role has been linked to the "Keep 'em Flying" and "Lest We Forget" mottos.

The CAF's colonels, not content for remnants of America's World War II air power silently to fade into museums, wanted to restore, maintain, and fly examples of those 1939-45-era airplanes.

And it wasn't just as a tribute to air power or to the fight for freedom and liberty and similar patriotic rhetoric, though those objectives rank high in the CAF's scheme.

The flying colonels wanted to fly the airplanes, as pilots are wont to do. They yearned to "fire 'em up" and take them into their natural element — the "wild, blue yonder." And colonels, both pilots and non-pilots, desired to see the warbirds and to hear, feel, smell, pamper and sense their bold engineering and design. They were eager to listen, almost reverently, as the airplanes' powerful engines made wind for flight.

THE CAF was founded in Mercedes in South Texas in 1957. This year, the CAF is finishing up its move to Midland in West Texas.

In October 1960, the CAF's objectives were simply these:

■ To preserve, in flying condition, as many types of first-line military aircraft as possible, particularly those types that played important parts in World War II.
■ To perpetuate the spirit and memory of these great airplanes, and the jobs they did, in the minds and hearts of the people.
■ To have lots of fun and good fellowship in flying and supporting great airplanes.

The CAF's first official meeting was in the Echo Hotel in Edinburg. Aircraft acquisition was the priority. By the end of 1961, the CAF owned a North American P-51 Mustang, a Grumman F8F Bearcat, six North American AT-6 Texans, a Chance-Vought F4U Corsair, a Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, a North American B-25 Mitchell, a Grumman FM-2 (F4F) Wildcat, a Lockheed P-38 Lightning, and a Grumman F6F Hellcat.

BY 1991, CAF-acquired aircraft had expanded to 150 warbirds, including about 100 airplanes in flying status. Others are being restored, undergoing maintenance or are in storage. Aside from those, individual CAF members own even more aircraft, including trainers, fighters, bombers, liaison aircraft, transports, and gliders.

In the CAF structure, the warplanes are within the American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum — the CAF's "Ghost Squadron."

Today, the CAF objectives are even more ambitious and idealistic than before:

■ To preserve, in flying condition, a complete collection of combat aircraft which were flown by all military services of the United States during World War II. (This objective has been expanded to incorporate "the world's great combat aircraft" in the 1939-45 era.)
■ To provide (American Airpower Heritage Museum) museum buildings for the permanent protection and display of these aircraft and to establish the Combat Airman Hall of Fame, as a tribute to the thousands of men and women who built, serviced and flew them.
■ To perpetuate in the memory and in the hearts of all Americans the spirit in which these great airplanes were flown in the defense of our nation.
■ To establish an organization having the dedication, enthusiasm and esprit de corps necessary to operate, maintain and preserve these aircraft as symbols of American Military Aviation Heritage.

Those objectives, particularly the "keep 'em flying" tenet, only can be maintained in the original spirit if the sense of purpose and the camaraderie prevail.

WITH ITS "Lest We Forget" motto, the CAF officially states that "The historic combat aircraft of the Confederate Air Force are aircraft which defended our nation and won the skies on every battlefront of the globe in World War II. They are living monuments to the thousands of men and women who built, serviced and flew them."

Among the "wonderful things" about the CAF is the "great camaraderie that has developed among different individuals and the whole group in general," said CAF co-founder Marvin "Lefty" Gardner, a crop-duster and a World War II bomber pilot. "There has been some real great friendships developed out of that."

Lloyd Nolen, the CAF's principal founder, was a post-war crop-duster and a World War II flight instructor who, in 1957, helped acquire the CAF's first warplane, the North American P-51 Mustang called "Old Red Nose."

Nolen died earlier this year. And his spirit in keeping the CAF, "the outfit," as he called it, high on good fellowship and safe flying prevails.

The focus of the CAF's camaraderie has been to "keep 'em flying" rather than entomb the airplanes in aviation museums.

"Without the flying aspect," Gardner said, "the CAF would probably just die away."

Kay Starr scheduled performer at CAF dinner-dance

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The singer's first audience was chickens. Her stage, an apple crate. The hall she performed in, a hen house.

Starr

Kay Starr, who has performed with the Grand Ole Opry, Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, the Glenn Miller Orchestra and was a regular guest on the "Danny Thomas Show," will sing with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra in a USO-style dinner dance today at the Confederate Air Force hanger at Midland International Airport.

She traces the discovery of her vocal talent to her Aunt Nora.

At the time, Ms. Starr was 6 years old. Her parents, who had moved to Texas from Oklahoma, were living outside Dallas.

"Once country, always country," Miss Starr said in a recent telephone interview. "Mother raised chickens. When the sun was going down, the chickens went to roost. I was always humming and singing. I got the idea, 'Shoot, this could be my audience.'

"I did it every night. It was fun to me; it was a game. My Aunt Nora thought that was the cutest thing she'd ever seen in her life. She told the neighbors. I finally had an audience in front and behind."

Aunt Nora was determined to get Miss Starr on a legitimate stage. She had a particular one in mind — The Melba Theatre in Dallas, which held amateur competitions on Saturdays.

Those competing were the children whose mothers thought their children had any talent at all, Miss Starr said, recalling how her aunt would tell her mother, Annie, "You've' got to put Katherine on that." Miss Starr's mother would respond, "Absolutely not. She's a child. You can't put a child on the stage. She doesn't know what she'd doing." Her aunt would then say, "She may not know what she is doing, but it's cute."

"She finally wore my mother down," Miss Starr said. She told Miss Starr's mother, "We'll put her on the amateur show. If she does good, she's yours. If she does bad, she's mine."

Life's wheel of fortune was to play a steady hand to Miss Starr when she began entering amateur competitions at 9. Each weekend, she placed in the top three, beginning with third and working her way up to first.

"Until I was about 10, I went to amateur competitions, one after the other. My Aunt Nora drove me everywhere. I didn't know songs much, except country — hillbilly songs."

Still, Miss Starr didn't set out to be in show business.

"It wasn't an intentional thing. Nobody in my family is in showbiz, and they simply never could understand how I got paid for what they did on the front porch Sundays for nothing."

"I loved to sing. Country people love to sing, they love to jig dance. They've got a joyous soul — all musical. My family was that way, too."

Miss Starr, who was born in Dougherty, Okla., grew up as a depression child. Her family moved to Texas when her father got a job as the foreman of a crew installing fire prevention devices in buildings under construction.

"I think we lived a half an hour in every town in Texas," Miss Starr said. She now lives with her mother in California.

Miss Starr has had no formal musical training.

"I don't know how to read music. I tried once to learn how, but it got in the way of my lyrics so bad that I decided to quit. I decided I'd better tell the story.

During World War II, Miss Starr sang with Charlie Barnett's band. The war took its toll on musicians as many were drafted or joined the service.

"A lot of the bands just fell apart. The only big bands that were working were the ultimate big bands — Woody Herman, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey. Other band leaders just didn't have a band unless they wanted to use all girls."

Miss Starr found herself "singing around town, around Hollywood. I was a pretty good jazz singer, and I sang the blues pretty good."

When Capitol Records recorded "Volume of Jazz I" Miss Starr said, "I was lucky enough to be one of the singers who was singing on that. I was noticed even slightly by Capitol, but I was not signed."

Miss Starr credits Red Nickols as having "a lot to do with" her signing on Capitol. He told her Capitol was looking for a female singer, one who would record any style.

"The union was going to go on strike. They were trying to put as many songs in the can as they could so if the strike would last a year or two years, they would still have songs to put out."

Capitol asked Miss Starr to compile a list of songs she would record.

"I started making up songs. I didn't have any arrangements. I put in a lot of standards. They had to run all of these songs past all these girls who had already been signed" to determine that these were not songs the singers would record. "When I got the list back, everything was crossed off. I had to start all over again — three times."

She was almost ready to give up when Nickols stepped in again. He found out she had submitted three lists and Capitol's female singers had scratched all of the songs off as selections they would record, so he told Miss Starr he knew some songs they didn't know and he was willing to teach her.

This list of choices came back, Miss Starr said, "Pristine. Those girls had never heard of those songs."

Capitol signed her. Her first recording, a song Nickols taught her, "I'm the Lonesomest Gal in Town," was a hit. She went on to have hits with other songs, including "Wheel of Fortune," "Angry," "Kay's Lament," "Rock and Roll Waltz," "Bonaparte's Retreat" and "Side by Side."

At the time she was hired, Capitol was looking for a female singer to record with Ernie Ford, who was among the most successful performers on the label.

"Whatever I needed to make a living is what I tried to sing. I always said that Capitol hired me because I was an all-around singer.

During her career, Miss Starr has branched out into other creative areas, including acting. She traveled with the musical comedy "Annie Get Your Gun" and starred in the movie, "The Lord Don't Play Favorites."

When Miss Starr looks back over her career, she said, "'Each step you take in the right direction is a memory you're not going to forget.

"Who in the world would have thought a country singer like myself would have sung for two Who would think I would meet presidents, meet the important people that I have met, be a headliner anywhere, that I would have Bill Cosby as my warm-up in Florida or discover Jim Neighbors and give him his first job in Las Vegas?"

Blue Jays pull even in ALCS

■ Juan Guzman guides Toronto to a 5-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins, evening the American League Championship Series at a game apiece.

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Toronto Blue Jays are ready for some dome doings of their own.

In Game 2 of the American League playoffs on Wednesday, Metrodome magic was simply no match for rookie Juan Guzman and the Blue Jays' hard-throwing bullpen.

Guzman pitched 5 2-3 strong innings as Toronto beat Minnesota 5-2 to even the best-of-7 series at one game apiece and break the Twins' seven-game postseason winning streak in their high-decibel dome.

Now, it's on to the SkyDome for more turf wars in baseball's first-ever indoor playoffs.

After a day off, the series shifts to Toronto for Game 3 on Friday night. Scott Erickson (20-8) is scheduled to pitch for the Twins against left-hander Jimmy Key (16-12).

Pirates chop up Braves, 5-1

■ Pittsburgh tomahawks Atlanta's Game 1 hopes in the National League Championship Series.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Forget the tomahawks. Pittsburgh chopped the Atlanta Braves down to size.

But don't break out the champagne for the Pirates, either. They won Game 1 of the NL playoffs 5-1 Wednesday night, but lost ace Doug Drabek, for now.

Drabek pitched like a playoff pro for six innings, shutting down Atlanta on three hits. Then, when he tried to stretch an RBI double into a triple, he suddenly strained his left hamstring and was forced to leave.

"We're pretty confident he can make his next start," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "We just have to wait and see. I know a lot of people are going to say he should have stayed at second base, and I wish he had. But that's one reason he started Game 1. He busts his behind all the time on everything he does and that's why I love him."

The shaky Pirates bullpen was able to hold off the Braves this time. Whether it will get another chance to save Drabek is uncertain, pending a further examination Thursday.

Montana agrees to surgery

Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Joe Montana, the three-time Super Bowl MVP who has been sidelined since training camp, finally consented to undergo elbow surgery Wednesday night.

After two days of criss-crossing the country hoping to find an alternative, Montana, 35, has decided that surgery is the best option to repair the torn tendon in his right elbow that has kept him off the playing field.

"Joe personally visited at least two other physicians, besides MRIs, where he was physically examined, and it was Joe's decision after receiving (team physician) Dr. Dillingham's, his team's input as well as the other physicians he visited, that it was no longer necessary for him to go elsewhere," 49ers president Carmen Policy said during a hastily arranged news conference Wednesday at team headquarters.

"... Ultimately it was Joe's decision to go ahead and do what he is going to do this evening."

The surgery, which is described as having an 80 percent rate of success, will be similar to the operation that ended the career of former Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw. He was 35, too.

The procedure is expected to take 45 minutes, and Montana is scheduled to be released this afternoon.

"There is no suggestion at this point in time that there is any damage to the ligaments," Policy said. "This is a tendon situation. ... It is nothing more than (Dr. Dillingham) anticipated the problem to be a month or so ago."

Dillingham will head a team of three surgeons who will perform the operation at a Bay Area hospital. Dr. Gary Fanton and Dr. Warren King will also participate.

The 49ers have scheduled a news conference today that would allow Dr. Dillingham to describe the procedure.

Greenwood opens district

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

If the deck looks stacked against the Greenwood Rangers for this Friday's opening District 6-3A encounter with Reagan County, it's because the Owls' 4-0 pre-district record stems from 123 points scored and just 19 points allowed.

But looks can be deceiving, and the Rangers, who are coming off of a 20-14 road win over Lamesa, may end up doing the dealing.

Greenwood, after opening the season with a disheartening 17-14 loss to Coahoma, has fought back to a 3-2 record behind a sturdy defense and steady improvement of the option offense.

"I thought we played harder than we had all year at Lamesa," said Greenwood coach Bob Purser, whose Rangers knocked off the Owls 12-6 in last year's 6-3A opener.

Welch

Cox

"But we'll need to play at least that hard this week because they (Owls) score a lot of points and they don't give up many."

In other games involving area teams — and there are some big ones — unbeaten Sweetwater descends on Andrews for District 3-4A battle; Big Spring plays host to Lake View; Lamesa opens District 2-4A play against visiting Frenship; Stanton travels to Ozona; McCamy visits Wall and Midland Christian celebrates its homecoming with the help of Northeast Christian Academy out of El Paso.

In Class A action, sixth-ranked Rankin plays Saturday at Presidio and top-ranked Garden City has the week off.

Ironically, Reagan County dealt Post a massive neutral-site 41-0 defeat Sept. 20 in Greenwood's J.M. King Memorial Stadium. The Rangers, meanwhile, have not played on their home field since tackling Fort Stockton 21-14 on Sept. 13.

"They (Owls) played on our field since we last did so they ought to be pretty comfortable on it," Purser acknowledged. "Reagan County has a big-play offense, so we'll have to stop the big plays and see what we can do with the ball."

BILL PRICE

On Lee-Permian and other prep games

A few odds and ends about high school football in the Permian Basin this week:

■ OF COURSE, the game that everyone has their eyes on is The Game, Midland Lee at Odessa Permian Friday at Ratliff Stadium. In 1989 there was a national cable television network broadcasting The Game from Memorial Stadium here in Midland, and last year the book "Friday Night Lights" brought national, if not flattering, attention to the Permian football program and the Lee-Permian game of 1988.

Price

This year neither circumstance is available to overshadow the fact that this could very well be for the District 4-5A title, granted San Angelo doesn't pull off an upset of either.

The only trouble is, tickets may be hard to come by. If fans don't already have tickets, don't expect them to last long at the ticket office today or at the gate Friday.

No trying to slight the other 4-5A game in the Petroplex Friday — an expected Odessa High blowout of Midland High at Memorial Stadium — fans that want to see a good game but are ticketless for Lee-Permian might want to trek to points not so far for these other two games:

— Sweetwater at Andrews: Andrews head coach W.T Stapler will tell you there's just no way his boys can handle this traditional 3-4A powerhouse in the battle of the Mustangs.

Both teams have belligerent and stingy defenses, but Andrews (4-1, 1-0) has outscored Sweetwater (5-0, 1-0) 152-110 this season. Look for a hard-hitting game that will be decided by less than 10 points.

One thing fans may be assured of, though. The Mustangs definitely will win.

— Reagan County at Greenwood: This District 6-3A opener features an unbeaten bunch of Owls from Big Lake (5-0) against a Ranger squad that is 3-2 and looking for some respect among its district foes.

Greenwood should put up plenty of fight while trying to bring Reagan County down a notch or two.

■ IN ANOTHER blowout of Alamogordo, N.M., last week, Permian hung 68 points on the scoreboard to Alamogordo's goose egg. It was yet another poignant commentary on the disparity between high school football in Texas and in New Mexico.

Last year Mojo defeated the Tigers 35-12, and this season the No. 3 Panthers handed the Land of Enchantment another disgrace since Alamogordo is ranked fifth in Class 4A — the largest New Mexican class — and purportedly was No. 4 before the Permian game.

It brought back memories of my childhood in the Panhandle, when Clovis won the 4A New Mexico title on a yearly basis, it seemed, but could rarely stay on the field with Amarillo, Lubbock or Plainview teams.

Of course, anybody familiar with West Texas football also knows that those same teams from up north that handled Clovis with such aplomb were also the teams that usually lost to 4-5A teams in the bi-district round of the playoffs.

Rangers stadium

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers can break ground on their new ballpark Oct. 30 now that the Arlington City Council has approved an interim lease for the land.

The four-year agreement provides rules for starting construction of the stadium.

Approved Tuesday night, it is the first legal document committing the baseball franchise to Arlington for at least the next 30 years.

The agreement also lays the foundation for a permanent lease between the Rangers and the Arlington Sports Facilities Development Authority. The authority was established this year to oversee financial aspects of the stadium project and to purchase land, actions the city could not legally take.

The interim contract details the authority's purchase of the main tract of land where the stadium will be built. It stipulates that the Rangers continue playing baseball in Arlington until construction is completed.

"It has a lot of standard issues in it but also establishes that the Rangers are responsible for building the facility and are liable for any costs over the $135 million the city will be paying," Mayor Richard Greene said after the council meeting.

Rangers managing general partner George W. Bush, part-owner Edward "Rusty" Rose and Authority Board President Bill Snider are expected to sign the agreement this week.

In January, Arlington residents approved a half-cent sales tax increase to finance $135 million in bonds to pay for the stadium and amenities including an amphitheater, sports hall of fame, learning center and youth baseball park. The complex will cost $165 million.

Close shave

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England Patriots owner Victor Kiam appeared headed to the wire as today's deadline approached for making a $38 million payment to buy out minority owner Fran Murray.

Murray, who is interested in bringing an NFL expansion franchise to St. Louis, could take over the Patriots unless Kiam comes up with the money by the end of business Thursday. And that's the full $38 million, not just a $13.5 million first installment, Murray said Wednesday.

"I have had no satisfactory indications that this obligation will be paid," said Murray, who had hoped to meet with Kiam this week to resolve the situation.

"We met last Friday at the league office looking into a possible extension of time," Murray said. "We left that meeting with the view that there would be meetings in the course of this week."

No. 2 Hurricanes should roll over Nittany Lions

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

The last time Penn State played Miami, it was for the national championship in the 1987 Fiesta Bowl. Saturday's rematch at the Orange Bowl won't determine who's No. 1, but it will have a major impact on the title picture.

Miami is 4-0 and ranked No. 2, while Penn State is 5-1 and No. 9.

If the Hurricanes win, they should remain undefeated until their Nov. 16 showdown with top-ranked Florida State. A loss won't eliminate the Hurricanes from the championship chase, but it would make them a longshot to win their fourth title since 1983.

If Penn State loses, it would probably ruin any title hopes for the Nittany Lions. No team has ever won the national championship with two losses, and there's no reason to believe the trend won't continue this season.

The last two Penn State-Miami games have featured an upset of the nation's No. 1 team.

In the 1987 Fiesta Bowl, No. 2 Penn State intercepted Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde five times and beat No. 1 Miami 14-10. In 1981, Jim Kelly led unranked Miami to a 17-14 victory over No. 1 Penn State.

Miami enters this year's game as a 10-point favorite.

The Hurricanes have routed their first four opponents, while the Nittany Lions have struggled since beating Cincinnati 81-0 in their second game. In the last four weeks, Penn State has lost to Southern Cal, defeated BYU and played poorly in victories over Boston College and Temple.

One of Penn State's problems is penalties. The Lions have been penalized 50 times for 430 yards in six games, close to their total for all last season.

"We're shooting ourselves in the foot every week," said Penn State linebacker Mark D'Onofrio. "We practice well, but we seem to be putting too much pressure on ourselves."

Miami has yet to be tested. The Hurricanes are averaging 36 points and 510 yards per game, while holding the opposition to 6.5 points and 281 yards.

Miami also has won 40 straight games at the Orange Bowl, the second-longest home winning streak in NCAA history. Penn State will be victim No. 41. ... MIAMI 31-14.

Oilers can play defense too

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Mention the Houston Oilers and an image forms of Warren Moon running and shooting passes to his legion of receivers.

There's more to the Oilers than just offense, though.

Like defense.

"We've gotten much better," defensive end Ray Childress said. "On a scale of one to 10, we were a five last year. We're a 7½ now. We've got everybody out there on the team trying to make a big play."

And special teams.

In Sunday's 42-14 rout of the Denver Broncos, Oilers special teams produced four turnovers that led to Houston's first 28 points.

The defense is led by combative cornerback Cris Dishman, who returned a fumble 19 yards for a touchdown and set up another score with a 43-yard interception return against the Broncos.

The offense is still among the league's best — first in the AFC with 31.2 points per game and second to Buffalo in total offense. Now the defense is moving up in the rankings, too. It rates eighth in the AFC in total defense and end William Fuller leads the conference with six sacks.

Dishman, a leading offender in the Oilers' former penalty-riddled defense, is trying to tone down his act. He now talks about team goals instead of personal ones.

"There's no room for individuals on this team," Dishman said. "It's got to be a team first. As far as me changing as an individual I'm still the same, I'm just a little bit older. I'm not looking for anything personal, not even setting goals for myself. It's just make the plays and see what happens."

But Denver wide receiver Mark Jackson says Dishman still talks trash on the field.

"Dishman got a couple of touchdowns and I didn't like that. He was talking trash all day," Jackson said. "He had diarrhea of the mouth. It was disgusting. We used to call him Dishrag and he still is."

Coach Jack Pardee, though, says Dishman has changed for the better.

"I can't change Cris, he changed himself — thank goodness," Pardee said. "He is determined to be a good player and he's playing with a lot of intelligence. He's seeing a lot of plays and being in the right place to make the big plays."

Fuller has emerged as the Oilers' sack leader on a team that includes Sean Jones and injured Lee Williams. Jones had 12½ sacks last season.

The Oilers held Gaston Green, who entered the game as the AFC's top rusher, to 36 yards on 15 carries. Childress and Doug Smith clogged up the middle all day.

Tagliabue, NFL players seek labor agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue met Wednesday with lawyers representing players suing the league for free agency in hopes of reaching a settlement that could lead to the first labor agreement since the 1987 strike.

It was the latest in a series of meetings Tagliabue has held with representatives of the players over the last year, the most recent in August. James Quinn, the lawyer representing the players, reportedly has been helping them in negotiations.

But Joe Browne, the NFL's vice president for communications, said he doesn't expect any immediate settlement, which could provide the league with the labor contract it's been lacking since the 24-day players' strike ended four years ago.

"The only way the lawsuits can be settled is if there are meetings," Browne said. "The meetings are confidential and we would hope they would remain so."

The antitrust suits, filed by players who would have become free agents in 1990 and 1991, are pending before U.S. District Court Judge David Doty in Minneapolis. Two weeks ago, Doty ruled that players who were free agents in 1989 also could sue.

All the suits seek unlimited free agency for players, who now can move from team to team without limitation only if they are not protected under Plan B, which was instituted after the strike. If a free agent who is among the 37 protected by each team moves, the team that signs him must provide compensation to his former employer.

Under that system, only two players have changed teams in 13 years, the most recent Wilber Marshall, who signed with Washington in 1988 from Chicago. The Bears got two No. 1 draft picks in return.

AREA: Rankin at Presidio on Saturday

(From 1C)

Leading the downfield charge for the Rangers will be quarterback Irvin Welch, who has 190 yards rushing to his credit to go along with 320 passing yards for three TDs.

Welch likes to hit tight end Jason Swopes (six catches and one TD) or Eric Clutter, the team leader in rushing yardage with 293 on 42 carries.

But it's on defense where Greenwood must rise up and stop Owl quarterback Jackie Hill.

"They (Owls) have a couple of pretty good tailbacks in Shi Flow and Michael Goodlow, and their fullback (Nuno Rivero) is a tough little kid. But it's Hill that makes them go," Purser said. "He is an exceptional player who can run the bootleg really well."

Greenwood will counter the Owl attack with middle linebacker Nolan Cox, whose 14 tackles a game lead the Rangers' defense.

"Cox, Donny Strickland at linebacker, Monte Mayo on the line and our defensive backfield pretty much dominated for us against Lamesa," Purser said. "Eric (Clutter) had a big night in the secondary.

"We hope we've improved each week and that we can go in against Reagan County and not make mistakes."

■ Sweetwater at Andrews (8 p.m.)

While the Andrews Mustangs were waltzing through Fort Stockton last Friday en route to a 42-0 victory in their District 3-4A opener, Sweetwater was struggling to a 7-0, 3-4A win over Pecos. But Sweetwater (5-0, 1-0) has allowed just six total points so far this season. Andrews (4-1, 1-0) has scored 152 points for just over 30 points per game thus far, so something has to give in this one.

■ Lake View at Big Spring (8 p.m.)

The Big Spring Steers took last week off so this is their District 3-4A opener. The Steers stand 4-0. Lake View, which dropped its 3-4A opener 32-0 to Monahans, is 0-5, 0-1 and not likely to improve against the multi-talented Steers, who handed Snyder a 34-13 loss two weeks ago.

■ Frenship at Lamesa (7:30 p.m.)

Lamesa (2-1-2) suffered its first loss of the season last week when Greenwood came to town and claimed a 20-14 decision. And the Frenship Tigers (1-4) scored their first win, 35-19 over Canyon Randall. But all that is history as the Tornadoes and the Tigers clash in the District 2-4A opener for both teams. Frenship dropped the Tors 43-22 in last season's clash.

■ Stanton at Ozona (8 p.m.)

The Stanton Buffaloes gave McCamey a run for the money last week before falling short 35-22 on a pair of late-game touchdowns, but Ozona'a 1-4, 1-1 mark is not much better than the Buffs' 0-5, 0-2 record. Led by Jim Bob Kelly's 168-yards rushing and two TDs, Stanton opened up its offense for a season-best 22 points against the Badgers, and that's something to build on going into the third District 6-2A outing of the season.

■ McCamey at Wall (8 p.m.)

The Badgers used John Babb's late fourth-quarter punt block and Albert Martinez' recovery for a TD to get by Stanton and move to 1-1 in District 6-2A and 2-3 overall last week. But in order for McCamey to keep its momentum alive, the Badgers have to find a way to stop undefeated Wall (5-0, 2-0), a team that scores at a rate of 36.6 points a game while giving up less than 10.

■ NECA at Midland Christian (7:30 p.m.)

The Midland Christian Mustangs (4-1) felt defeat for the first time last week when Christoval captured a 56-30 decision. Northeast Christian Academy (NECA) will be the Mustangs' homecoming guest.

■ Rankin at Presidio (2 p.m. Saturday)

The Rankin Red Devils were idle last week and still managed in inch up in the Associated Press rankings. Rankin, which moved from seventh to sixth in Class A, takes on District 5-2A Presidio (1-3) in a final pre-district tune-up. The Red Devils (3-1) have lost only to top-ranked Garden City. And they toppied Predidio 41-12 a year ago. Rankin gets started down the District 8A road next week, at home against Wink.

Brewer manager Treblehorn fired by new GM Bando

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Tom Trebelhorn's five-year plan for bringing the Milwaukee Brewers a pennant fell short. And not even a 40-19 record over the final two months of the 1991 season could save his job.

Treblehorn

Trebelhorn was fired Wednesday as the Brewers continued major changes in their operation that began a day earlier when Sal Bando replaced Harry Dalton as general manager.

"They are making changes and they think it's time to make a change in this position, too," Trebelhorn said. "They want continuity all the way through.

"My five-year plan didn't get us to where we wanted to go. To me that's more realistic than just saying we're just making a change."

As he sat at his desk for maybe the final time and prepared to clean it out, Trebelhorn joked at times, as has been his nature since he was named manager for the final nine games of the 1986 season.

He won and managed more games in team history with a 422-397 record that included three winning seasons, one loser and one at .500.

His first reaction to being fired?

"They're making a mistake," he said. "But who wouldn't say that in my role? I really enjoyed being here. We did some great things, probably the greatest thing we did was the last two months. No one did better than we did. Unfortunately that's not translatable into anything other than 'Nice finish.'"

Seventeen games under on Aug. 4, the Brewers finished 83-79.

Gene Tenace, Bando's former roomate with the Oakland A's during their run of three straight World Series titles from 1972-74, is being mentioned as a possible replacement. Tenace, a coach with the Toronto Blue Jays, managed them for 19 games this season while Cito Gaston was experiencing back problems.

Bando told the Milwaukee Journal he fired Trebelhorn because he thought the Brewers needed a tougher presence. Critics say Trebelhorn wasn't tough enough over the last three seasons when he's had to deal with outspoken players like third baseman Gary Sheffield and pitcher Chris Bosio.

"I felt it was time to get some new leadership and a little different personality to get us to the next level," said Bando.

"I have nothing against Treb. He's analytical and flexible with the guys. His personality was right for the club two or three years ago but in the past couple of years he's had problems with personalities. He needed to address the problems with more of a firm nature."

Bando said he was still compiling a list of possible successors and there was no timetable for choosing one. The Brewers have not yet asked Toronto for permission to talk with Tenace, he said.

Bando said Trebelhorn's coaching staff was free to talk with other teams about other jobs, but that doesn't mean some won't be asked to return as coaches under the new manager or in other positions in Milwaukee.

Batting coach Don Baylor and Tony Muser, manager of Milwaukee's Class AAA club at Denver, will be considered for the manager's job is they're interested, Bando said.

Catcher B.J. Surhoff said Trebelhorn should not be blamed for the team's poor start in 1991.

"Players not doing their jobs is what prevented us from being a good team."

NLCS: Pirates get one good game from Drabek before injury fells hurler

(From 1C)

At least the Pirates got one good game out of Drabek. That's more than Atlanta got from 20-game winner Tom Glavine as the Braves lost for the 10th consecutive time in postseason play, a streak dating to the 1958 World Series.

"Tommy wasn't nervous at all. His only problem was that he was behind in the count, and he paid the price," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

Andy Van Slyke, one of the big hitters who slumped in last year's playoff loss to Cincinnati, rattled Glavine with a home run in the first inning.

And within four innings, it was 3-0 and the worst-to-first Braves had gone back to worst again.

Mark Lemke made a brutal mistake on the bases, getting thrown out at third base when he had no business running. Lonnie Smith made a bad throw home from left field, sure-handed shortstop Rafael Belliard got eaten up by a grounder and two-time Gold Glove Terry Pendleton seemed shaky in bouncing a throw from third base.

Meanwhile, the middle of the Pirates' order — Van Slyke, Bonds and Bobby Bonilla — was getting on base. That was a sharp contrast to last October, when they combined to go just 12-for-63 with five RBIs in six games against the Reds.

"Andy got us off on the right foot," Leyland said. "It was good to see those guys get some good at-bats, but we won the first game last year, so we're not getting overly excited. I think they wanted to show the whole world how far they could hit the ball. On a couple of swings, Barry looked liked he was trying to hit it off the earth. But they took some nice, even swings."

Van Slyke and Bonilla each got two hits, and Bonds walked twice and hit the ball hard both times he made outs.

"We had the right focus last year, but Cincinnati had good pitching," Bonilla said. "You can have all that adrenalin going, and we did this year, but you can use it in the right way."

From the start, the Braves looked like a team that had not won a postseason game in 31 years. And Glavine looked like the same guy who's had a 15.34 ERA in the first inning of his last seven starts.

Glavine bounced a couple of his warmup pitches and catcher Greg Olson skipped his practice throw into center field.

Glavine retired the first two batters, but Van Slyke, who was batting only .194 against left-handers, hit his second home run in seven at-bats against Glavine this year.

"I was just trying to get pitches in the strike zone and get some good swings," Van Slyke said. "I put the bat on the ball and that was the difference."

That ignited the crowd of 57,347, the largest ever to see a baseball game in Pittsburgh, and may have unnerved Glavine. He threw five straight balls, and the Pirates went on to load the bases on Belliard's error and another walk.

After a visit from pitching coach Leo Mazzone, Glavine managed to escape when Don Slaught grounded to Pendleton, whose throw was neatly short-hopped by first baseman Sid Bream.

Glavine fell further behind in the third inning in the count, and on the scoreboard. Jay Bell led off with a single and scored on Van Slyke's double. Bonilla followed with a single.

Sieckmann's 63 leads Las Vegas Invitation

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Tom Sieckmann was playing a mind game with himself over the last three holes at the Las Vegas Country Club.

"I'm thinking birdie-eagle-birdie'," he said, a finish that would have matched the lowest 18-hole score in PGA Tour history.

But Sieckman fell four strokes short with a par-par-par finish that produced a bogey-free, 9-under-par 63 and the first-round lead Wednesday in the 5-day, 90-hole Las Vegas Invitational.

He said he recognized it was unlikely he could match Al Geiberger's record 59 set in 1977, but added:

"You have to play mind games with yourself. When you get six or seven or eight under par, there's a tendency to try to protect it.

"But in this tournament you know you can't do that. You have to keep it going."

As usual, the $1.5 million event played on three desert resort courses produced exceptionally low scoring, with more than half the pro field shooting in the 60's.

But the bulk of the scoring heroics came on the Las Vegas Country Club course, rather than the mildly controversial little Sunrise Golf Club course that is being used in the three-course rotation on a once-only basis.

Tom Byrum, the second pro off the first tee on the relatively docile little course that is listed at 6,914 yards but plays shorter, hinted at a reason after his 64.

"By the time we made the turn, the greens already were spiking up pretty bad," Byrum said. "By the afternoon, and then the next two days, they're going to be pretty rough."

Byrum shared second at eight under par with retread veteran Bruce Fleisher and Kirk Triplett, both of whom played at the Las Vegas Country Club.

American Ryder Cup player Chip Beck led a group at 65 that included Ted Schulz, Brian Tennyson, Andy Bean, Bob Estes and Steve Jones. Beck, Schulz, Estes and Jones all played at Las Vegas. Tennyson and Bean were at Sunrise.

Jeff Sluman, with a 66, was the low at the Desert Inn, generally regarded as the most difficult of the three courses.

John Daly, the long-hitting rookie who became a national sensation with his PGA victory, had a bogey-free round of 66 at Sunrise, but was less than confident about continuing that success.

"It's wide open and I got away with a few wild tee shots," he said. "I'm going to have to hit the ball a little straighter off the tee on the other courses if I'm going to have a chance."

The format has the 156 pros playing one round on each of the three courses, each day with a different team of three amateurs, before the field is cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Sieckmann, who has won once in seven seasons on the tour, is a long-hitting, 6-foot-5 former basketball player at Oklahoma State.

While he scattered a gaudy collection of 10 "3's" across his card, he let some of his favorite targets escape. Three of the par-5's were played in par.

"I'm a little disappointed about that," he said after errant drives left him with no chance to go for those three greens in two.

A little measure of revenge came on the first hole — his 10th of the day. He needed only a 4-iron second shot to set up a 4-foot putt for eagle.

ALCS: Series heads across border to Toronto

(From 1C)

"I hope we don't have to come back here," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "This is a tough place to win."

The last time the Twins lost a postseason home game was in 1970, when they played at Metropolitan Stadium. But it really shouldn't come as a big surprise they lost to Toronto.

Coming into Game 1 of the playoffs, the Blue Jays had won 10 of 12 games in the Metrodome and 12 of 18 overall against the Twins. Minnesota was trying to tie the record for consecutive postseason victories at home, set by the New York Yankees (1927-36).

"Sure we would have liked to win both games here," Toronto right fielder Joe Carter said. "But realistically this is what we were hoping for. We've played well against them this year."

Guzman, 10-3 after his recall from Class AAA Syracuse on June 4, is becoming something of a Twins killer. He beat Minnesota starter Kevin Tapani for the third time this season.

"Guzman pitched a fabulous game," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "We got beat by the better pitchers today."

The top of the order came up big for the Blue Jays. Devon White had two hits and scored three runs and Roberto Alomar had two hits and scored a run. Each stole a base, too.

"That's our job," White said. "I go out there trying to get to second. We had a young pitcher out there and needed to get his head right."

The Twins looked like they would get off to a quick start again when Guzman walked two in the first inning, but the right-hander quieted the crowd by getting Kent Hrbek on a popup and striking out Chili Davis.

"I used to be concerned about Juan in a situation like that but not now," Gaston said. "You have to be patient with him."

Kirby Puckett, Hrbek and Davis — the 3-4-5 batters — went a combined 3-for-20 in the first two games.

Toronto scored a run in the first when White led off with a single, stole second, took third on Alomar's sacrifice and came around on Carter's single.

The top of the order got the Blue Jays going again in the third when White doubled and moved to third on Alomar's infield hit to third. Alomar stole second and both runners scored on Kelly Gruber's broken-bat single to right.

Prices jump

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices extended their rally Wednesday, surging past a peak they hit in August after Soviet reactionaries attempted a coup.

West Texas Intermeidate for delivery in November settled at $23.16 per barrel, up 17 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That put the price 84 cents a barrel higher since the beginning of last week.

"We're up into new, uncharted territory," said Brendan Dolan, an oil broker at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. The per barrel price of crude has not been so high since the early days of the Gulf War in January.

Traders said much of Wednesday's move was explained by technical market influences. Players who recently agreed to sell oil have been absorbing big losses as the price continues to rise, but they are running into troubles buying the oil back because nobody else wants to sell it.

Natural gas prices were also mixed, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.970 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 2.7 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell against major foreign currencies Wednesday in trading dominated by largely technical influences and uncertainty over the direction of U.S. interest rates.

The dollar fell to 129.80 Japanese yen in New York from 130.35 late Tuesday.

The British pound rose in New York to $1.7195 from late Tuesday's $1.7070.

Other dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's prices, included: 1.6890 German marks, down from 1.7055; 1.4785 Swiss francs, down from 1.4905; 5.7515 French francs, down from 5.8070; 1,262.25 Italian lire, down from 1,274.00; and 1.13075 Canadian dollars, down from 1.12895.

Allied layoffs

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Allied-Signal Inc. will lay off 5,000 workers, close plants, cut dividends and sell off companies under a major restructuring.

The changes are designed to save the aerospace, automotive products and engineered materials conglomerate $350 million a year, Lawrence A. Bossidy, chief executive officer, said Wednesday.

The changes at Allied-Signal, which has been plagued by excessive spending and eroding earnings, are designed to cut costs, improve cash flow and streamline the company.

RRC opens natural gas hearing

■ Producers' group maintains that production should be brought in line with actual demand to avoid oversupply.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission turned its attention Wednesday to Texas production of natural gas, a resource an industry leader described as vital to the nation's energy future as well as the environment.

Texas is the leading state producer of natural gas, supplying nearly 26 percent of the national total last year, and it is portrayed as a clean fuel that should become more attractive.

Certain Texas officials have made concerted efforts recently to increase its use within the state, such as for motor fuel, and to increase sales in out-of-state markets.

Against that backdrop, the Railroad Commission, which oversees oil and gas production in Texas, received complaints that its regulatory policies combined with a depressed market have led to the waste of natural gas.

The commission scheduled a hearing, with more than 50 witnesses signing up to testify Wednesday.

Thomas Coffman, president of Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, projected that state production of natural gas will rise to 21 trillion cubic feet a year by 2000, matching high levels of 1969-74.

Coffman said natural gas is "environmentally sound, economic . . . abundant in supply if approached correctly," and could play a vital energy role.

TIPRO maintains that gas production each month should be brought in line with actual demand to avoid oversupply that suppresses gas prices below replacement costs.

Julian Martin, TIPRO executive vice president, said commission statistics indicate that monthly allowables in recent months "may have exceeded production demand by substantial margins."

Others proposed revamping the entire gas proration system, without offering suggestions in detail.

Tom Darling of Wichita Falls, immediate past president of the North Texas Oil & Gas Association, said current conditions in the natural gas industry are similar to those in the oil industry in the 1930s, when the Commission curbed unrestrained drilling in the East Texas Field that had pushed oil prices down to pennies a barrel.

"The state's precious resource of natural gas is being wasted primarily as a result of . . . wasteful excessive production" and premature abandonment of wells, Darling said.

SEC probes Merrill Lynch bond trading

■ Allegations send brokerage firm's stock price tumbling.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Federal regulators are investigating allegations that Merrill Lynch & Co. conducted fraudulent junk-bond transactions that helped a Florida insurer conceal financial problems, officials said Wednesday.

Insurance regulators in Florida alleged that Merrill temporarily swapped more than $900 million in Treasury securities for high-yield bonds and other risky securities owned by Guarantee Security Life Insurance Co. from 1984 to 1988.

Merrill, the nation's biggest brokerage, denied wrongdoing and said it was cooperating with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which polices the nation's financial markets.

The allegations sent Merrill's stock price tumbling $2.50 to $45 in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. More than 1.8 million Merrill shares changed hands.

In court papers filed in state court in Florida last month, state regulators said the transactions helped Guarantee Security avoid taxes and improve its year-end balance sheet by replacing low-value junk bonds with stable Treasury securities.

Florida regulators seized Guarantee Security in August. Officials said the Jacksonville-based insurer is insolvent in excess of $300 million. Guarantee Security, Florida's sixth-largest insurer, has $600 million in policy liabilities.

W. Michael Heekin, deputy receiver for the insurance company, said Merrill is not accused of any illegal activity. But he said the transactions could constitute misrepresentation. Merrill confirmed that the transactions occurred but said they weren't improper.

"We certainly believe they were misleading," Heekin said. "To the extent they were misleading, we are examining now their legality and any damage that was caused by them."

Heekin said Merrill sold or appeared to sell Treasury securities to Guarantee Security in exchange for junk bonds and some preferred stock with comparable face values, though their actual market values were far lower.

Dallas company wins Baldrige Quality Award

DALLAS (AP) — The lunchroom wall at Marlow Industries is painted with a fictional world where three ships like those of Columbus have dodged the Storm of Confusion and Shores of Desperation in a representation of the quest for quality products.

On Wednesday, they passed through Baldrige Straits.

Marlow Industries, a maker of tiny precision devices that stabilize the temperature of electronic components, won the Malcolm Baldrige Quality Award, given by the government to recognize quality assurance practices.

Marlow was the smallest of the three winning companies, chosen from 106 entries.

"One of the greatest things I've had the opportunity to do was tell the employees," said Raymond Marlow, who started the company in 1973 and is now chief executive officer.

"If you can imagine you just made the field goal in the last second of the Super Bowl and you see what the fans do. That's what they did," he said.

The company's devices, as small as ¼-inch-square, are used in fiber optic systems, medical instruments and other sophisticated electronics.

Two bigger electronics companies were also winners: Solectron Corp. of San Jose, Calif., and Zytec Corp. of Eden Prairie, Minn. Past winners have included Xerox, IBM and Federal Express Corp.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, who announced the winners in Washington, said the awards help stress to U.S. companies that high quality standards are essential to compete internationally. The winners will be invited to a White House ceremony later this month.

The awards were named in honor of the late Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

Asked to define quality, Marlow said, "It means continuous improvement through customer satisfaction and employee empowerment. When you get those things going simultaneously, that's the way you should do your business."

He helped start the Texas Quality Consortium, a group of small business owners in Dallas that share resources and ideas about quality assurance.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor won't lose staying with annuity

By Bill Doyle

Q. Two years ago, my widowed mother invested her life's savings of $20,000 in a tax-deferred annuity offered at her bank. At that time, she was not aware the annuity is with an insurance company. Later, we also discovered the annuity does not have Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage, even though the transaction was performed by the bank.

Doyle

In the wake of recent troubles in the insurance industry, Mom has become very concerned. We have the current ratings on the insurance company from A.M. Best's Life Insurance Reports, Moody's Investors Service, Standard & Poor's Corp. and Duff & Phelps Inc. Most seem to put the company's rating in the "fair" category, but Best's gives it an A-plus.

The bank officers still feel this company is safe. However, I would appreciate your advice. Should my mother put her money back into certificates of deposit?

A. Tell your mother to hold off on such a move. It's unlikely she will lose anything by staying with the annuity.

The well-reported problems in parts of the insurance business have frightened many annuitants and policyholders, causing an increasing number of people to cash out. However, it must be stressed that only a very small fraction of that industry has financial trouble.

Nonetheless, if your mother is losing sleep worrying about her annuity, she should consider cashing it. That has to be her personal decision. The mediocre ratings from Moody's, S&P and D&P are warning sounds. Insurance analysts usually recommend companies rated triple-A or double-A by at least one of those firms and A-plus by A. M. Best. The latter historically has bestowed high ratings.

Before she turns in her annuity, make sure your mother knows what penalty will be applied. She'll find that information in the annuity contract fine print. Typically, the penalty might be as high as 10 percent if the annuity is cashed within a year after it was issued and then declines by one percentage point a year, until it disappears after 10 years.

Q. My annuity was accumulating 11.3 percent interest but now the rate has dropped to 8.3 percent. The stock broker who sold the annuity to me says the insurance company has the right to change the interest accrual rate once a year. Could he be hoodwinking me?

A. That's not impossible, but count it as unlikely. Most annuities do provide for a revision in the accrual rate periodically, typically once a year on the annuity's anniversary date.

A three percentage point change in the accrual rate is unusual. The majority of annuity contracts limit the amount by which that rate can be moved down or up. That provision and other details are spelled out in your annuity contract, which you really should study.

Just the same, 8.3 percent is an attractive rate in these days of lower interest. You have no kick coming.

Q. Without any previous indication, the State of Florida seized the insurance company with which I have an annuity. An audit by an accounting firm showed the insurance company had positive net worth of $100 million. The state's investigation says the true amount is a negative $40 million.

I called the company and a very calm woman in policyholder services said, "Your money is insured. There is nothing to worry about." Well, the fact that the interest accrual rate has been cut to 4 percent is something to worry about.

Redemptions of the company's annuities and insurance policies have been suspended. What do we do in this situation, other than worry and read the newspaper for developments?

A. That's about all you can do, while you wait for notification from the company and/or state insurance regulators. That notification will come eventually, in the form of good news or bad news.

HEARING: RRC receives complaints

(From 5C)

But two Carthage residents, including Mayor Carson Joines, cautioned the commission against lowering gas production rates.

Joines and Mac Wheat, representing the Carthage school district, said dropping the gas allowable would hurt the local economy, threatening the school budget, growth of Panola Junior College and proposed hospital expansion.

Wheat said Carthage lost $2 million in public school aid this past year. "Our concern is that if another regulation is put in place which impacts our economy significantly, our school district and our taxpayers are going to suffer another major blow," he said.

Rex Fuller of Lubbock, an independent producer also representing TIPRO, told the three-member commission, "I believe that the record created here will show you cannot accept the status quo and do nothing."

Fuller said it may take several attempts before completely new gas production rules can be written, but "it can be done."

The commission set an Oct. 21 deadline for offering responses to comments at the hearing.

Sony, Philips end digital format rift

TOKYO (NYT) — The Sony Corp. and Philips Consumer Electronics International said Wednesday that they were ending their bitter dispute over what technology should be used in the next generation of audio equipment and agreed to jointly license each other's two newest products.

The agreement, announced in Tokyo on Wednesday, appeared to be an effort to end the dispute over whether Sony's new mini-disk system or Philip's new digital compact cassette — or DCC — tape should prevail as an industry standard.

Poor boy sweater enriches wardrobe

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

The poor boy, a skinny ribbed sweater from the days of Carnaby Street, Twiggy and feelin' groovy, is a fall must-have.

The poor boy started as a '60s favorite of the ready-to-wear folks and designers like Rudi Gernreich, Pierre Cardin, Yves Saint Laurent, Andre Courreges and Sonia Rykiel. It is best remembered tucked into hiphugger bell-bottoms and micro miniskirts. Mud-thick black eyeliner and frosty white lipstick also were part of the look.

The poor boy style was borrowed from tattered knit turtlenecks worn by newsboys on the London streets, according to George Simonton, a professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology. "These were young men, not from rich families, and is one of the best examples of street fashion."

With its high, tight armholes and narrow shoulders, the poor boy showed every curve — or lack of, in Twiggy's case. It would seem the perfect showcase for today's perfectly aerobicized body. But in a bigger, looser version, it is an ideal cover-up, too.

"Everything comes back in fashion, but never quite the same," Simonton says. "It'd definitely look dated if you put an old one on now."

AT LORD & Taylor in New York, LaVelle Olexa is all but counting poor boy sweaters in her sleep.

"I've seen them across the board in any number of levels of merchandise from better sportswear to designer," says the vice president.

"It's a knit that's going to be going forward," says Mariana Keros, a spokesman at The Limited headquarters in Columbus, Ohio. "Some of us consider it a retro look based on having owned poor boys years ago, but ribbing is a novelty treatment that adds newness, a little tweak to a classic turtleneck.

"Take a black poor boy sweater, add a pleated tartan skirt, black ribbed leggings and thigh-high black suede boots, and you'll be a walking fashion trend."

Barbara Weiser, vice president at Charivari in New York, says the poor boy is the key sweater of the season. People like them, she says, because they're stretchy and are particularly popular under suits because they aren't bulky.

So popular, in fact, that Charivari sold out of a wool Byblos sweater at $275 per.

Ralph Lauren's wool and cotton black turtleneck version is pricier at $175. In cashmere by Prada, it's $825 for an oatmeal cashmere turtleneck.

And the poor boy look is more than just sweaters. There are zip-up leotards, $30, and stretch velvet leggings, $60, at Baryshnikov Bodywear and cotton and polyester stretch leggings, $38, at The Limited. Ribbed tights, $15, and thigh highs, $12, are available from Hue.

BETSEY JOHNSON does a metallic minidress with bell sleeves in black or silver, $110. Ribbed bell bottoms in silver or black are $86. All are available in November at her boutiques nationwide.

At Express stores, the ribbed top is their hottest item, says Phillip Monaghan, executive vice president of marketing. "Our customer is in love with an oversized ribbed tunic. It's an easy, figure-forgiving silhouette that a lot of body types can wear."

The tunic, $48, comes in more than 40 colors. "It's one of the most versatile pieces in our fall collection," says Monaghan, who recommends wearing it with jeans, patterned leggings or slim pants. Add a belt at the hip for extra punch.

But for pure panache, put it with a short, tight stretch skirt.

Poor boys can indeed shout style. A couple of springs back, Ralph Lauren unleashed a calvalcade of models with short sleeved silk poor boys in red, white or blue with matching miniskirts, tights, flats and berets.

Andre Courreges, who got a head start on poor boys three decades ago, is back with a wool turtleneck version, about $198, and matching detachable hood, $60.

COURREGES IS quoted as saying that his clothes from the '60s were designed for the '90s. "I care nothing for the past; I do not do retrospectives."

Not so Betsey Johnson.

"I'm making '60s-looking poor boy dresses and bell-bottoms and I'm not changing them one bit," she says.

Today's twentysomething woman is on the move, establishing her own directions with a slightly more casual approach to "having it all." JCPenney department store will celebrate its third annual "Spirit of the American Woman" through Oct. 19 with special in-store events and promotions.

Men's great debate continues

By Laura Fisher
Associated Press

For many men, their first pair of boxers is a rite of passage, akin to boys of another generation trading short pants for long.

A man's allegiance to his underwear can stir deep, lifelong emotions. One former military officer was converted to boxers when the army issued him six pairs, and he has never looked back. "Besides," he says, "I look better in boxers."

"I wore briefs all through childhood, and in the last year of high school I made the big switch to boxers," says Don McGill, a New York television producer. "The sudden freedom can be traumatic. It's like performing without a net."

Indeed, some say that a man without briefs is not unlike a woman without a bra. No wonder 86 percent of men prefer briefs, according to Jockey International.

Briefs make some men feel more secure — and youthful. But boxer chauvinists claim shorts are more macho because they provide ventilation while briefs trap heat and — horrors! — inhibit sperm count.

But briefs buffs love to lament the shortcomings of boxers: too much bulk, too little support and the nemesis of ultimate comfort — bunching.

However, developing a technique for smoothing unruly shorts can be a matter of pride among some men. "It's like tucking in a shirt, but you have to have longer arms," says one.

For others, the boxer-briefs debate is moot. For them, the secret to underwear is not how it fits, but how it doesn't, as in bikini and thong styles which have a loyal, if perhaps narcissistic, following.

Teenage girls find fashion 'firsts' on favorite show

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — To a group of teen-age Valley girls, one of the best fashion shows on television is the NBC comedy, "Blossom."

Every week, its star, 15-year-old Mayim Bialik, shows up in the latest, coolest stuff this side of Melrose Avenue.

West Hills teens Alison Porter, 15, her sister, Courtney, 13, and her friend, Danielle Powers, 14, have formed an informal "Blossom" fan club and fashion watch.

"Usually me and my sister watch it," Alison Porter said. "Then my sister and Danielle get on the phone and swap ideas about clothes."

And with the new season underway, the girls will have a closet-full of ideas to observe, promised Sherry Thompson, the show's costumer.

Thompson and her assistant, costume supervisor Marion Kirk, shopped all over Melrose and even such Valley girl hangouts as Wet Seal, Contempo Casuals and the Limited to create six outfits for the show's new opening segment.

Blossom wore everything from a flippy mini made of men's ties, to a pinstriped Madonna-like suit, to a hip-hop dance ensemble, complete with flowered knee pads and leather-flowered suspenders made from belts.

Unfortunately, even for girls like Porter who work at Wet Seal, finding the exact match of clothes from the show will be hard.

"I don't like for any of the things I do to look like they came off the rack," Thompson said. Often Thompson adds trim to hats, dyes outfits, makes Blossom's pajamas from vintage fabric and creates new dresses from parts of others.

However, Blossom's best friend, the character Six, played by Jenna von Oy, wears outfits pulled straight from area stores.

"Six's clothes reflect the Valley," costumer Kirk, a Studio City resident, said.

Teen-agers pay close attention to Blossom's clothes, if not always for new ideas, then for reassurance. "She dresses like we all dress — or would like to," Porter said.

Bialik herself prefers to dress in baggy black clothes, a look that doesn't photograph well on television. "Blossom is really wild and zany," Bialik said. "But it's realistic fashion. It's not things that can't be found."

For Porter, the outfits in new opening credits yielded some new favorites. She liked the pin-striped suit and the bib overalls, which were made from vintage tablecloths.

The best surprise was seeing her own taste in clothing right there on TV. "One of the shirts Six was wearing I have in blue. They bought it at my store."

DEAR ABBY

Man's tall tale leads to very short marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You were right in your advice to "No Guts," who had given his fiancee a three-carat cubic zirconia. (You told him to find the guts because it would be better if she got the news from him.) I only wish he had written his letter a year ago. Here is the female point of view:

Van Buren

My fiance gave me a two-carat "diamond," saying he had inherited it from his grandfather. He said the jeweler that mounted it had told him its value was "between $8,000 and $10,000 dollars." When I asked if he'd ever had it appraised or insured, he said he hadn't — because he didn't want to pay an inheritance tax. His mother didn't even know he had it, he said, and I could never tell her because it would cause a family feud!

Of course, being in love and blinded by this gorgeous "rock," I fell for the whole story, and proudly showed it off at work and to friends and family. Imagine my embarrassment (yes, after the wedding!) when I took it to a jeweler to have it appraised, and he told me it was not a diamond!

When I confronted my husband, he gave me another string of lies, saying that either one of his previous roommates had found the ring in the apartment and replaced the stone with a fake, or that when he took it to the jeweler for engraving, the jeweler must have switched the stones. Then he said that he knew when he said "I do" that it wasn't a diamond, but planned to replace it (without my knowledge) on our first anniversary.

Needless to say, eight months before our first anniversary, I divorced this con artist.

I learned my lesson the hard way — and my sympathies go out to his next victim. "No Guts" should heed your sound advice, Abby, but I would also advise women to be wary of and question any diamond that is over one-half carat if it has no papers. — E.Z. DECEIVEE

DEAR DECEIVEE: It's discouraging to contemplate a world where a bride-to-be must see in black and white that her fiance is on the up and up. Not all that glitters is gold, nor is all that sparkles a genuine diamond.

DEAR ABBY: A few months back I sent for your booklet on "How to Be Popular." It did me so much good, I'm a different person. I read it several times, and then passed it on to family and friends. It may never get back to me, so will you please send me another copy — along with "How to Write Letters for All Occasions" and "How to Have a Lovely Wedding"?

I read your column every day — and it makes such good sense. God bless you. — HELEN LEWIS, OOLOGAH, OKLA.

DEAR ABBY: Do you happen to know George Bernard Shaw's very witty definition of love? — JAMES K. IN MIAMI

DEAR JAMES: Yes. "Love is a gross exaggeration of the difference between one person and everybody else."

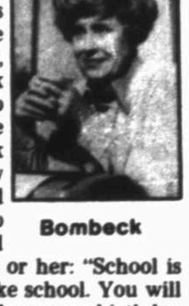
Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

AT WIT'S END

These truths can make you free

By Erma Bombeck

Isn't it time parents stopped spinning fantasies about life and started telling their children the truth?



Bombeck

We're all guilty of it. It's as though if we depress them, they'll go back to the womb and won't come out. Think about it. How many times did you line up your 5-year-old and assure him or her: "School is fun. You will like school. You will play games, and on your birthday Mama will bake cupcakes and you'll have a big party with all of your friends."

Why didn't we have the guts to tell them: "Learning is hard work. Some days you could die from the boredom and sleep from the repetition, but it's necessary. Teachers are not there to entertain you. School isn't television. It's one of the most elite factories in the world, one that tests your skills and challenges your talents. It touches all of your senses, leaving you with an idea of how much you don't know and how much you have to learn. In the process, you carve out for yourself a place on this planet."

We told the same lies about work. A job is supposed to be "fun." If it isn't — quit! We prejudice them early about low-entry jobs that are beneath them. It never occurs to anyone that there are a lot of unhappy, non-productive professionals out there. Nothing is said about pride; nothing is said about attitude and patience. Little is said about the strength that comes from the struggle. The object of a job is making money and stockpiling things. If you do all of that, you'll be happy. Get real.

The greatest myth we perpetuate is the one about how great growing up is. We who have survived it know better. There are years of insecurity, depression over the way we look, anxiety over failing something, despair over our social lives, uncertainty about pleasing parents or whether or not they're going to stay together. There are money, success and grades to worry about. I once compared the teen-age years to being on a roller coaster and wanting to get off and be sick, but everyone keeps telling you what a great time you're having.

We even spin fairy tales about marriage, the old "live happily ever after" ending that comes with the marriage license and the pound of uncooked rice. Tell them they have to work at it every minute of their existence. That's the truth.

Some of our wiser children have already figured out that if school is so easy, how come the dropout rate is at epidemic level; if work is so much fun, how come there are so many people in employment limbo; if marriage makes you ecstatic, why are half of them ending in divorce; and if growing up is such a gas, how come the suicide rate among teen-agers is at headline proportions?

Isn't it time we told the rest of them the truth so they can deal with it?

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Directors see another round of layoffs

N.Y. Times News Service

Just as state and local governments complete an agonizing round of large-scale layoffs of public employees, many budget directors are predicting that with the economy still faltering and revenue declining, a whole new wave of layoffs may be necessary.

"I think it's going to be a really tough year," said Marcia A. Howard, research director of the National Association of State Budget Directors.

"Most state budgets were based on the premise that a recovery would be well under way by now, and if it is, it certainly hasn't helped state revenues yet."

State and local employment has declined by 84,000 workers since July, the start of the fiscal year for nearly all states, the United State Bureau of Labor Statistics reported in early October. It Cas the first time in 10 years that state and local employment decreased for three months in a row.

The drumroll of layoffs is constant:

Connecticut laid off 2,500 workers last month and Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. is threatening to lay off another 7,500 unless unions provide more concessions.

Massachusetts is laying off 4,000; Ohio is laying off 1,000 and Maine 200.

New York State, completing a 12-month work-force reduction of 18,000 through layoffs and attrition, is laying off 1,300 this year.

New Jersey has laid off 5,000 and is considering laying off another

5,000 while California plans to lay off 3,000 in January.

Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon of Washington has sent termination notices to 126 middle-management employees, as part of her campaign promise to sharply reduce the district's 48,000 employees.

Gina Douglas, a communications specialist in Washington's Office of Personnel, said she could not answer questions about the layoffs because she herself was being laid off from her $48,500-a-year job.

"I'm just a little bit depressed today, I'm fighting back the tears," said Mrs. Douglas, 33, who is married and has two children. "We have a whole host of bills associated with a car, house and two kids. It's frightening."

The continuing layoffs not only erode the traditional sense of job security associated with government work, but put a drag on the economic recovery, forcing thousands of families to tighten their belts.

The continuing layoffs not only erode the traditional sense of job security associated with government work, but put a drag on the economic recovery, forcing thousands of families to tighten their belts.

Layoffs of public employees have profound social impact, too, bringing in their wake larger class sizes in schools, shorter library hours, fewer hospital beds and less protection from fire and crime.

No one is certain where the cuts will end, as Maryland's experience has made painfully clear.

Last year, the state laid off 3,000 employees when, for the first time in state history, tax revenue did not exceed the previous year's.

But this fiscal year, which began July 1, is looking even worse. Since then, Maryland has dropped its revenue estimates for this fiscal year by $260 million, to $5.8 billion.

So Gov. William Donald Schaefer recently announced the layoff of 1,766 more state workers and the elimination of 420 positions that are currently vacant.

The layoffs effectively eliminate rehabilitation programs for all 20,000 state prisoners and several mental health programs, close 1,000 beds in substance abuse programs, shut four state parks, two state police barracks and two medical evacuation helicopter stations.

The state also eliminated subsistence grants and health benefits for 24,000 indigent and disabled people who are ineligible for Federal welfare programs.

Things are expected to worsen in Maryland before they improve. "Fiscal 1993, which starts next July, looks like another $600 million to $800 million deficit," said Frederick W. Puddester, deputy secretary of the State Departent of Budget and Fiscal Planning. "We're looking at more cuts and layoffs."

The most serious problem in Maryland, as in other states, is the skyrocketing cost of health care in the Medicaid program for the poor.

"In the last two years, we've seen a double-digit increases in health costs and a 25 percent increase in enrollment, from 340,000 to 420,000 people." Puddester said.

The striking three-month decline in state and local government employment — an 84,000-worker drop to 15,401,000 — was still smaller than the 153,000 decline in state and local employment in the single month of July 1982, the start of the fiscal year after the last recession.

Some experts expect the current decline to be just as steep, but take place over a longer period.

At the state level, the decline in employment was steepest in July, when the work force shrank by 21,000 workers. It declined another 6,000 in both August and September.

According to the new Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, local governments are laying off workers even faster that state governments, with the decline in local employment doubling in each of the last three months.

The number of local government workers dropped by 7,000 in July, 15,000 in August, and 29,000 in September.

New York City, which has about 240,000 workers, has laid off 3,000 employees since July and may lay off up to 3,000 more, depending on union negotiations.

Nassau County officials are also preparing to lay off up to 2,000 employees after labor negotiations collapsed two weeks ago.

Cities in Massachusetts, for the third year in a row, laid off thousands of workers, including 2,500 teachers and 365 firefighters.

"We can't comfortably provide public safety at the levels of firefighters we have now," said Robert B. McCarthy, president of the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts, a union.

Many small municipalities, he said, are making do by relying on mutual aid agreements with their neighbors.

Stephen K. Wollmer, a spokesman for the Massachusets Teachers Association, the union for the state's 68,000 teachers, said that as a result of the cuts, "Class size in virutally every district is mushrooming, and in some cities and towns, it is not unusual to have class sizes over 40."

Part-time government workers are especially vulnerable.

The National League of Cities reports that full-time employment in large cities was stable over all last year, but that these cities reduced part-time employment by 15.2 percent.

U.S. delays nuclear waste site's opening

N.Y. Times News Service

Faced with a state lawsuit and growing political opposition in New Mexico, the U.S. Department of Energy on Wednesday postponed at least until the end of November the opening of the nation's first permanent nuclear waste repository.

The postponement came one day before the first truck loaded with nuclear waste was to leave a government nuclear weapons plant in Idaho and head south to Carlsbad, N.M., the site of the repository, the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

The decision to delay the opening was made after a lawsuit was filed Wednesday in federal district court in Washington by Tom Udall, New Mexico's attorney general, seeking a court order to halt its opening. Udall said in the lawsuit that planned procedures to open the repository violated several federal laws.

But early Wednesday, a few hours before Federal District Judge John Garrett Penn was to hold the first hearing in the case, the Department of Justice and the Energy Department announced that they had reached agreement to keep the repository closed, at least until Nov. 8. Later, Penn set a hearing in the case for Nov. 15 and said he would need another week or two to reach a decision.

Activity in the case ended late Wednesday when the Energy Department's press secretary, Joseph C. Karpinski, said the plant would not be opened until the issue had been resolved. "We see this as a much faster way of having the matter settled," said Karpinski.

In New Mexico, state officials and residents said they were relieved, but only temporarily. "It's a solid round-one victory for New Mexico," said Udall.

The $1 billion plant, a network of storage rooms and corridors 2,150 feet beneath the desert, is one of the three nuclear weapons installations around the country that the Energy Secretary, James D. Watkins, has vowed to open this year.

Designed to permanently entomb nearly one million barrels of plutonium wastes from the production of atomic weapons, the repository's future has become an important political issue in the West.

In Idaho, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, a Democrat, is battling to keep the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, one of the government's largest military atomic reservations, from becoming a permanent nuclear waste site.

Last week, after losing a court battle with the Energy Department, Andrus was forced by the government to accept lethal, highly radioactive nuclear fuel rods from an experimental civilian reactor in Platteville, Colo. That waste is being stored at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

A waste site at the laboratory is also being used by the Energy Department to store nearly 130,000 barrels of plutonium wastes. Andrus has barred any more barrels of plutonium wastes from entering Idaho and is eager to see the New Mexico site opened.

New York man makes living as professional 'babyproofer'

NEW YORK (AP) — They listen to whale sounds at birth, they eat special-delivery baby food, they ride around in $1,000 European prams. And now the babies of yuppies can take their first steps in homes babyproofed by a professional — Mr. Babyproofer.

"There's no place like home," says Mr. Babyproofer, "for things that are dangerous to the young."

Mr. Babyproofer is Anthony Simnowski, a young father and contractor who was spending a lot of time adapting apartments and houses for children. So last year, he branched out and formed New York Baby Proofing Co. For a fee, he will rid a home of the myriad threats to young life and limb.

Most of his clients are young professional couples who are security conscious — or security obsessed — but lack the time or the know-how to babyproof their own places.

For $45, Simnowski will evaluate a home and explain what must be done to make it safe for creeping, crawling and toddling. The work itself can cost thousands, but most apartments can be babyproofed for about $300 — "less than a stroller," according to Simnowski's wife and partner, Mary Ann.

Although some prudent souls retain the Simnowskis before the children are ambulatory (and sometimes even before they are born), most call for help only when the need has become all too apparent.

When Simnowski arrives, there's often been what he describes as "an incident" — a fall, a burn, an electrical shock. "Generally the child is crawling around, and the parents are pulling their hair out."

Parents such as Neil Ochsner and Janine Golding-Ochsner, whose son Joseph crawled at five months and is walking at nine months. In his short but active life, Joseph has pulled a telephone answering machine down on his head, yanked a stereo speaker off the wall and sampled the dog's food. "He's a little menace," says his adoring mother.
