BEAM

By J. W. King, St.

The week of October 1-8 is National Newspaper Week. This week was set aside to acquaint the public with the service the newspaper is rendering the community in which it is published and the nation as a whole. The slogan for this year is "The Newspaper as a public servant."

This newspaper as you now reading has strived all through the years to live up to this slogan. In order to get a clear view of the service it has rendered the community and nation during the sixteen years of its existence you need only to turn through the files.

We would not attempt to recall all of the services rendered for every issue has performed some service to the nation, the community, the church, the school, the city, business enterprises and individuals.

Outstanding services rendered I think would point to the school, the city and the promotion of the cheese and locker plant. During the war we rendered a service to the nation in the promotion of the sale of bonds, to the men in service by following them all over the world, and to the people at home by keeping them informed of the achievements of those men.

No individual or organization deserves more recognition than the newspaper for its part in promoting the welfare of the community. It reports the news as it happens, it carries advertisements telling its readers of the services offered by the merchants, and through its editorial it strives to serve by provoking thought on subjects that are of interest to its readers.

Some theorists have argued that the press should be an agency of the government not a private enterprise that must operate for a profit to exist. However, the American people have insisted that its press remain unconditionally free to report current events accurately and without bias, and governmental ownership of newspapers carries with it the ominous possibility of governmental censorship.

History proves that control of the press is one of the first objectives of a dictator. We are protecting our representative form of government and our precept of universal education when we protect the right of the press to publish the truth and to keep its columns open for a free expression of public opinion.

There are some who do not recognize the value of a newspaper to a community until it is too late. Merchants and citizens sometimes do not support the home newspaper through advertising and subscriptions and the newspapers suffer and frequently have to suspend publication for lack of patronage. We wish that everyone could recognize the service a newspaper renders a community. If they did the newspaper could render a still greater service.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK OCTOBER 1-8

"Your Newspaper Serves Freedom by Serving You." That is the slogan for National Newspaper Week this year.

American newspapers have been identified with "our democratic way of life" since the birth of the United States. Consider the three things most essential to our democracy; these are also the chief characteristics of the American press. We are thinking of:

- 1. A representative government—an instrument to express the will of the people.
- 2. Universal education, designed to give us an informed people.
- 3. Private enterprise and the sanctity of the individual.

Our national congress and the state and local legislative bodies comprise America's official representative government, but just as representative of the people it serves is the newspaper. The opinions, the actions, the desires, the achievements—all that describes what the people of the community do and think—are in the columns of the hometown newspaper.

Readers of this newspaper should read the paper, this week in particular, with the thought in mind of seeing those items that render a service to the community. The ads should be read, too, to get a full picture.

DALLAS FAIR IS BEEHIVE OF ACTIVITY

Dallas, Texas, October 1—A "bee hive of activity" is literally promised for the Hall of Foods this year at the State Fair of Texas, October 4-19.

SALUTE TO NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK

By Kay Kyser
Hey chillun, pay attention! Class is now in session and this is your O' Professor telling you it's about time you paid tribute to one of America's greatest institutions—your hometown newspaper!

This is National Newspaper Week and that's no "Comedy of Errors". In fact, it's time we all agreed nothing's more fun than a newspaper. Feeling very scholarly at the moment, I'd say that as the immediate reflection of a community's taste and opinion, your local newspaper is the crystallization of public thought and feeling. Not only that, but you can swap files with a newspaper and what's better for linking bureau drawers?

Being a high class student myself, ever since I rocked Rocky Mount by winning the zinc-plated yo-yo for being best orator in the drum and bugle, chowder and peanut racing corps, I remember when Shakespeare referred to the seven ages of man. Now we can do that thru newspapers. First a baby has the comics read to him, then he learns for himself. Soon the sports pages begin to interest him and then in school current event classes cause the news section to play a part in his life. The amusement section is added when dating comes along. Then as young manhood is reached he begins to realize the "news" can affect him personally. Editorials become required reading. The last stage is reached when Grandpa removes his uppers and turns to the obituary page first instead of the comics.

America's free press is one of the greatest bulwarks of democracy. I tip my tassel to it and recommend we all do the same.

JOINT CELEBRATION

The home of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Lefevre was the scene for a joint anniversary-birthday celebration Sunday, honoring the Lefevre's on their wedding anniversary and J. L. Pratt, Chester Hart, Mrs. Lefevre and Dewey Wilson on their birthdays.

L. Lefevre and Neysa of Loraine.

DeVaney of Coahoma, state director, will preside.

LORAIN CHURCH JOINS IN CELEBRATION OF WORLD WIDE COMMUNION SUNDAY

The congregation of the Loraine Methodist Church joins this Sunday, October 5, with other Christian groups of many denominations in the 8th observance of World-Wide Communion Sunday.

The observance of the Holy Communion will begin on October 5 in New Zealand. The worship services in the churches there will begin at 10:30 a. m. When it is 10:30 a. m. on that day in New Zealand, it is 6 o'clock Saturday evening in New York City, and 5 o'clock Saturday evening here.

This observance is being sponsored by the Councils of Churches in many lands, by denominations in all the world, and by international missionary organizations of the churches. Christians of all races, and all faiths, will join together at the common table of their Lord in an attempt to heal the many breaches that keep nations apart. Christian leaders are visualizing a table 25,000 miles long, reaching around the world, where will be gathered men of good will of every tongue, color, and nation. There will not be a nation in the world where Christians will not meet to break bread and drink wine in remembrance of Him who never forgets them.

Dr. Karl Quimby, Methodist leader, says, "There is a vast power in this expanding sense of spiritual fellowship and communion between all Christians around the world. On this day your church, and mine, along with many other Evangelical Churches, will form a part of one great fellowship of Christians assembled about the table of the Lord. Our common devotion to Him is the surest and shortest path to "one world" in spirit and in purpose. The nearer we come to Him the nearer we come to one another."

Though this day intends that as many people as possible attend their own services, at their own church, the invitation to all "who earnestly repent of their sins, and desire to live a new life", invites those of the Christian faith to join with some congregation in this significant observance this Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. John Hamblen and children spent the week end with their parents in Abilene.

For the first time in many years the Loraine Bulldogs will meet the Merkel Badgers on home grounds. The kickoff will be at 8 o'clock Friday night at Johnson Field.

The Badgers are last years district champions and will be out to keep their record clean while the Bulldogs will be striving for some of the fame that has been denied them so long.

Coach Hank Brown has been drilling his team all this week and will send a team at its full strength into the fray. All of the boys came through the comparatively easy tussel with Robert Lee last Friday night with no injuries. So far this season the Bulldogs have lost only to Abilene B team, having defeated Stanton and Robert Lee. Merkel has been more impressive this season perhaps than the Bulldogs, having won all three starters against teams in their own class, but Coach Brown is optimistic about the chances of his team coming through with a victory Friday night.

New seats for several hundred more people will be ready for the game Friday night. One of the largest crowds ever to assemble on the local field is expected. This game will open conference play for both teams. The Bulldogs defeated the Robert Lee Steers on their home ground last Friday night 18 to 7. The Robert Lee outfit is in class B but were bi-district champions last year and had not been defeated this year and put up a good stiff fight.

The Bulldogs scored twice in the first period and once in the third. Robert Lee scored in the first period. Loraine's first two touchdowns were made by Bobbie Johnson, the first after the Bulldogs had marched to the 1 yard line from their own 20, and the second after Ross recovered a Robert Lee fumble on their own 20. The third was made by Glen Bowlin who intercepted a Robert Lee pass on Loraine's 34 and went all the way, pushing off three would-be tacklers.

First downs favored the Bulldogs 13 to 3. Loraine completed 5 passes out of 21 for 130 yards while Robert Lee completed 4 out of 17 for 125 yards. Loraine was penalized 5 times for 45 yards and Robert Lee 1 time for 5.

Because of the congestion at the gate and the fact that seats are available school officials are discouraging driving into the football grounds to park. Cars may drive in and park but there will be a charge of 25 cents per car for the privilege.

There is plenty of parking space on the school ground and men will be stationed at convenient places to show people where to park.

PTA SOCIAL

HONORS FACULTY

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Loraine school honored the faculty members with a community singing and game night on September 29, in the school gym.

Mrs. Charles C. Robinson, guest speaker from Sweetwater, stressed the alue of the P. T. A. as a coordinating agency between the school and the community and urged every parent and teacher to take part in the program.

After several games and songs were enjoyed by the group, refreshments of punch and cookies were served from a table laid with a white lace cloth and decorated with red and wine dahlias.

Mrs. W. H. Narrell and Mrs. Virgil Walker were in charge of refreshments.

PEP RALLY TONIGHT

There will be a pep rally and bonfire on the high school grounds at 7:30 tonight (Thursday). The public is invited to attend and get ready to yell for the Bulldogs on Friday night.

Mrs. D. W. Haralson and Ken spent from Sunday until Tuesday with her mother, Mrs. Bertha Barber, at Abilene.

FOXHOLE DREAMS COME TRUE

Marine Club Serves Living While Honoring War Dead

WNU Features.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Many a foxhole dream comes true as marines and former marines gather in the congenial and swank atmosphere of the Marine Memorial club, which was established here a year ago as the only living memorial to the gallantry of all marines.

The lush surroundings of the Memorial club, located in a former swank hotel at Sutter and Mason streets in the heart of downtown San Francisco, are a far cry from the filth and deprivations of foxhole living, which was the lot of so many marines.

But it was the unappetizing PX rations, the warm beer and the generally stale candy bars munched in foxholes which are responsible for the Marine Memorial club. Profit accruing from these sales went to the post exchange fund, but in reality belongs to the marines who spent it. Usually such money is used to buy recreational equipment that Uncle Sam doesn't furnish. This time, however, marine headquarters in Washington felt that the money should be used in a way that would honor marines who died in combat by serving those who fought and lived.

The solution is the Marine Memorial club, where all members meet on an equal footing; where name, rank and serial number pull no weight; where the famed "esprit de corps" of the service enters into civilian living.

San Francisco was selected as the location for the club because so many marines passed through the Golden Gate on their way to the Pacific, felt at home here and wanted to return.

The man behind this club is the man who was behind the 21st regiment of the 3rd division in the battle for Hellzapoppin bridge on Bougainville Island—Brig. Gen. Evan Orchard Ames (retired). The club is his baby. A fighting man himself, he has helped to make many a foxhole dream a reality by creating a club where marines can take it easy, have the shave and steam bath they once longed for, in an exclusive town club atmosphere.

For the men and women of the corps who did return, the club is unique in its exclusiveness, for only marines and civilian marines may belong. Their families, wives, parents (including Gold Star parents) and children over 21 are eligible for guest memberships. Old friends in other services once attached to a marine unit may have an associate membership. Marine identification serves as both dues and initiation fee.

In the Skytop room prodding the clouds, in the swimming pool 12 stories below and on all the floors in between, marines and former marines can relax and enjoy club life. All the facilities of a first-rate hotel are available for a very low tariff.

For travelers, there's a choice of 250 rooms fully equipped with all hotel facilities; for those who just want to relax after a hard day at the office or exercise before breakfast, there is the tiled swimming pool with water blue as the Mediterranean and not nearly as cold. Three dining rooms, three cocktail lounges, a steam room, barber shop, library and writing room, and a ballroom provide all the facilities of a swank hotel. But, although it's a million dollar layout, a man can spend a little instead of a lot. The club is operated on the policy of many spending a little rather than a few spending a lot.

Dog Completes School With Perfect Record

McKEESPORT, PA.—Although aged and nearly blind, Spotty, a woolly black and white dog, left an almost unmatchable record behind when he was graduated from grammar school into retirement.

Providing a climax for the graduation exercises, Principal H. E. Remaley called Spotty to the stage after diplomas had been presented to all the pupils. Gingerly, the dog trotted up the steps to receive a real diploma and a certificate of perfect attendance.

The dog trailed to school behind members of the Stanko family for 10 years. First he followed John, then Roselle and finally young Robert Stanko, who was graduated just a few minutes ahead of his master.

Street Names Confuse Tourists

NEW ORLEANS.—It's no wonder tourists are confused, although fascinated, by street names in New Orleans. The city has about 2,100 miles of streets and 1,100 street names.

Take Tchoupitoulas, for instance. It is the oldest street name in New Orleans and has been spelled officially 20 different ways.

Burgundy once was Craps street. Churches forced renaming of the Country Doctor Remains Active At Age of 90

BURLINGAME, KAS.—One of the last of Kansas' horse-and-buggy doctors, 90-year-old Dr. F. E. Schenck hails modern medical techniques and the latest drugs but sadly recalls "the good old days." When the venerable old doctor was in his early years of practice here, his use of horses often spared him some physical strain in an almost 24-hour daily schedule. His team, he recalls, could be trusted to take him home without guidance.

"That's one advantage we had over the present-day doctors," he maintains. "The team would just head for home and I could sleep during the ride." Despite the weather, the hour or his advanced age, Dr. Schenck still will answer a call from any of the townsfolk. He has reduced his practice considerably and should cut it down more, but he says it's just habit for him to minister to the medical needs of the people of Burlingame.

The habit is so firmly entrenched, in fact, that Dr. Schenck has become an institution in this small Kansas town. Some of the people he has brought into the world are babies nursing in their mother's arms. Others are more than 60 years old. Dr. Schenck doesn't have any idea how many births he has assisted.

"I do know," he says, "that I have brought the third generation of some families around here into the world."

A large man with good posture and firm voice, Dr. Schenck is partly bald but has a thick gray mustache. He keeps well posted on all new developments in the medical profession, his medical library being considered one of the largest in the country.

Advancements in medical techniques and development of new drugs will be responsible for an ever-increasing rise in the nation's health standards, he believes.

Evicted Takes House Along

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—When Jesse Young, a carpenter, received an eviction notice, he was not downcast. Instead, he went down to his basement and built himself a new house out of army surplus trunk crates.

In two months the story and a half dwelling was completed. Modeled after an English cottage, the house has two rooms and a bath downstairs with enough space to make rooms upstairs.

When moving day came, Young and a son, Frank, who is a mechanic, loaded the floors, walls and other parts of the new house onto a truck. It took two hours to put the house together, six more hours to apply the finishing touches.

Basin street, probably the most famous thoroughfare, once was named Saratoga street but citizens demanded the return to Basin street.

U. S. Farmer Will Beat Communism

American Food Can Halt Chaos Threatening Europe

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—The American farmer is going to lick communism!

That's what your worried capital is saying today. American representatives abroad and at home are submitting one report after another which register gains in the Soviet battle to build a Communist world out of chaos.

The reports come in from Prague, from Belgrade, from Sofia, from Budapest, showing how each day the iron grip of the Russian-dominated secret police is gradually choking off democracy in the little countries. Reports from Rome tell us of a planned coup of the Moscow-directed Communist party in Italy to overthrow the government there. The open record of the meetings of the United Nations reveals the consistent effort of the Russian delegation to block the efforts of the struggling, still-free governments in Greece and France.

Some American political leaders still look askance at the huge program of aid to western Europe envisioned in the Marshall plan. Part of the country seems unsympathetic, or at least indifferent, toward the effort to win the "cold war" against Russia with purely economic weapons, because it means sacrifices on the part of the American citizen. Some officials in the administration, supporters of the Marshall plan in congress, and a few diplomats at home and abroad, are frightened by this attitude.

Until recently this correspondent has been pretty much distressed, too. But I feel better after talking with certain officials whose names seldom appear in the news. These men are not cabinet officers, they are not diplomats, they are not the leaders in congress whose faces appear in the news pictures and whose adumbrations are quoted in the daily dispatches. They are just the men who do the work for which Uncle Sam "pays the wage."

They are paid for knowing about American farms and American farmers. Their consensus is embodied in the first line of this dispatch: The American farmer is going to lick communism. I believe the farmer will do it, not because he knows it will pay him in dollars now, but because he is going to be convinced before very long that it will pay America. The American farmer will do it by providing the food necessary to halt chaos in Europe just as he proved the verity of the slogan: "Food will win the war."

The history of Europe since the war is that every government falls when the bread ration is reduced. The men who know tell me that whatever the total amount in goods or dollars demanded by the Marshall plan, it is safe to say that two-thirds of it will be for food—either the food commodities themselves or the dollars with which to buy them.

American dollars are growing very scarce in Europe but there are three things which the European purchaser hesitates to quit buying—grain, coal and fats. You will notice that France, when it reduced its imports (as all European countries are doing as their dollars decline) tried to hold on to her grain, coal and edible fats as long as possible.

Even if the Marshall plan were not put into effect in time to provide extra dollars, for their grain purchases, there will be a lag of some months before the farmer is touched in his pocketbook. By that time, if nothing is done, the European countries starve.

Free World Is at Stake

Exports to Europe already have been cut down. That will affect first employment of people in this country in such export industries as radio, electrical appliances and like gadgets which can be spared. It is quite possible that there may be a sufficient increase meanwhile in employment in construction or other domestic industries which will absorb this unemployment and keep up the purchasing power of the consumer sufficiently to maintain present farm prices. In any case, there probably will be a six months lag before prices are greatly affected.

Eventually, the marginal surplus would be touched (if Europe is not stimulated) as it was in 1920. Then, you recall, grain prices dropped, although exports were still heavy. However, the demand at that time was not great enough to absorb the entire American output. It is this "marginal surplus" which decides the prices at home. When the demand for the first bushel over and above the domestic surplus ends, it affects the whole price structure.

Before such a situation arises, it is firmly believed that the "realistic" side of the picture will be brought home forcibly to America. The average citizen, as well as the farmer and the exporter and others directly dependent on international trade as a whole, will realize that what is at stake is something far greater than the dollar—America's stake in the preservation of a free world—a world which will perish if Europe is underfed.

Russia has only about one-sixth of the amount of wheat which the United States is able to spare, according to current estimates. The United Nations food and agriculture organization estimated it as 70 million bushels against our 400 million bushels, as stated above. Our own situation, we admit, is not too good. Nevertheless, we are in a much better position on a competitive basis, than Russia. There appears little doubt in the minds of the men most familiar with the facts that when the full force of this situation and what it means is realized in this country, Europe may be saved for democracy—and the American farmer will have at least two-thirds of the credit due him.

1. He suggested creation of a new assembly committee of 55 countries which would operate without veto and would remain constantly in session to consider world security questions and function as a board of appeals. Potentially, the committee would be a rival to the security council.

2. He announced that the U. S. was ready to relinquish, in all but the gravest cases, its veto privilege and implicitly challenged Russia to do likewise.

3. He blamed Russia for the U. S. Soviet deadlock in Korea and said that America would submit the case to the general assembly for action.

4. He blamed Russia for using vetoes to protect Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria from being pronounced guilty of meddling in Greece. He said the U. S. would ask the assembly to vote guilty for the three satellites and to demand that they refrain from interfering in Greece.

PRICE BATTLE: Exports Cut

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson had a "Horatio at the bridge" air about him as he announced that the government had made a drastic cut-back of grain and flour allocations for export in November.

The move generally was accounted as another noble stand against the forces which are causing domestic food prices to spiral dizzily. This one, however, had the blessings of the grain trade as "a step in the right direction."

Reducing the export allocations for November was in line with the government's surprise revision of the nation's 1947 export goal from some 450 million bushels of grain down to 350 million. (In a significant sidelight, Anderson scoffed at the prospect of returning to rationing by pointing out that such a program could not be put into effect before the need for it would be over.)

Next move, it was hinted, would be an attempt by Secretary Anderson to put through a sharp reduction of total food exports—not just grain—as the only practical way of pulling down prices.

The U. S. state department, however, committed to its "have Europe" program, no doubt would object vehemently to any such action.

NO EXPLOSION POSSIBLE

Science Now 'Spalliates' Atoms

Scientists now can split the atoms of five more metals—lead, bismuth, thallium, platinum and tantalum—achievements destined to open new roads toward man's ultimate mastery of the atom.

However, there's no need to worry about the possibility that a "cheap" atomic bomb could be made by splitting the atoms of such a common metal as lead, according to Prof. Glenn T. Seaborg, University of California physicist, who played a dominant role in development of the first atom bomb.

The day has not yet come when atomic bombs could be made with common elements such as lead and bismuth, Dr. Seaborg said, emphasizing that the fission of such elements "opens no possibility for the production of self-sustaining chain reaction."

As a matter of fact, he added, they can't even be used as sources of atomic energy for purposes less violent than that of blowing mankind to bits. They don't emit enough energy for that.

Actually, the atoms of the five metals are not split—they're splintered. Scientists call this splintering process "spallation" to distinguish it from plain ordinary fission.

NEWS REVIEW

Showdown Near in U.N.; Grain Exports Reduced

SHOWDOWN: Russia's Choice

Secretary of State George Marshall sounded like a man who was getting a lot of things off his chest when he said in an address before the U. N. general assembly of 55 nations amounted to a call for a showdown with Russia.

The Soviets, he intimated, have held to their stubborn, veto-bound course in the United Nations long enough.

To make the delinquents come to time, Marshall proposed a four point plan of action to the general assembly:

1. He suggested creation of a new assembly committee of 55 countries which would operate without veto and would remain constantly in session to consider world security questions and function as a board of appeals. Potentially, the committee would be a rival to the security council.

2. He announced that the U. S. was ready to relinquish, in all but the gravest cases, its veto privilege and implicitly challenged Russia to do likewise.

3. He blamed Russia for the U. S. Soviet deadlock in Korea and said that America would submit the case to the general assembly for action.

4. He blamed Russia for using vetoes to protect Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria from being pronounced guilty of meddling in Greece. He said the U. S. would ask the assembly to vote guilty for the three satellites and to demand that they refrain from interfering in Greece.

Atom After-Effects

Although the atom bomb explosions in Japan have caused some sterility among the people, they have not affected the soil adversely and may even have brought about an improvement in the rice crop.

Dr. Shields Warren, Harvard professor, recently returned from Japan where he studied after-effects of the bomb, said that its effects on human beings may carry into the third generation, producing freaks.

WHOSE FAULT? Taft Talks

Sen. Robert Taft (Rep., Ohio), who had to crash a sign-toting picket line to get to his audience, told a Republican rally in Los Angeles that if President Truman had not jumped the gun in scrapping price controls the current inflation spiral might have been delayed a while longer.

Exactly how Taft arrived at that rather hazy conclusion was not immediately clear. The senator himself last year was denounced by Mr. Truman for his part in writing a price control extension bill which the President branded as being worse than no controls. Mr. Truman's subsequent veto of the bill allowed price controls to expire automatically.

Nailing down the first plank in what apparently is designed to be his campaign platform for the 1948 presidential nomination, Taft assailed the administration's record on taxes and spending.

The country must elect a Republican president next year if it is genuinely interested in reducing taxes and spending, Taft observed.

SPEED-UP: Forrestal In

James V. Forrestal wasn't due to be sworn in as U. S. secretary of defense for another week, but President Truman, manifestly alarmed over the trend of world events, ordered the former secretary of the navy to jump the gun in taking over his new job.

Mr. Truman observed that in view of conditions abroad, the nation should have its secretary of defense in office and functioning. The conditions, which he did not specify, probably were the current unrest in Trieste and the U. S.-Russian stalemate in the United Nations, topped off by Secretary of State Marshall's challenging speech before the general assembly.

Now presiding over the unified army, navy and air forces, Forrestal is the armed forces' only representative on the President's cabinet.

THE FICTION CORNER Lucky Punch By ELOISE STONE

The stage for Benson's Gulch was ready to leave Tucson. Gilbert Bradley hurried up the dusty street and climbed aboard just as the driver whipped the horses and the coach lurched forward.

Once settled comfortably in his seat, he casually took inventory of his fellow passengers. Besides himself, the coach contained two people—a girl and a man.

The girl's eyes reflected the color of the violets which trimmed her bonnet. Her dress was of gray linen. Beneath the brim of the bonnet, several curls of auburn hair escaped to flutter in the draft from the partly open window.

The first thing Gil noticed about the man was his agate-hard yellow eyes. They were set close together under thick black eyebrows. The man was heavily built, with huge shoulders and hands. He wore twin gun belts crossed at his waist and the black handles of his six-guns protruded from open holsters.

"Since we're all going to Benson's Gulch, we'd just as well make ourselves acquainted," he said, flicking his yellow eyes over Gil and then resting them on the girl. "I'm Mort Cass, mayor of Benson's Gulch."

The girl's pale face turned even whiter. Her lips quivered ever so slightly as she looked with loathing straight into the yellow eyes.

"I'm Virginia Holmes. My brother wrote me about you shortly before he died."

The two had forgotten Gil's presence.

"I was mighty sorry, ma'am, when your brother met his untimely end," said Cass.

"Sorry," the girl flashed. "William was fighting you and your corrupt friends with his newspaper."

could smell liquor on Cass' breath. The man had been drinking heavily, but was far from drunk. He pushed between Gil and Virginia.

"Run along, tenderfoot," he said. "I'll take Virginia to dinner and see if I can't change her opinion of me a bit."

He started to take the girl's arm. She drew back and slapped him full across the face. He started menacingly toward her.

"I'll learn you to slap Mort Cass," he said.

Gil tapped him on the right shoulder. As Cass turned, Gil drove a hard left into his face. The crowd, which was beginning to gather, gave a startled gasp. Cass charged at Gil and for a moment it looked as if he would pummel him into the ground. Gil's rapid foot work saved him. His weaving body made a poor target for the larger man's bear-like blows.

Cass soon realized that this fight was not going to result in the easy victory he had expected. He stepped back and warily eyed his adversary. Then again he charged at Gil, who eluded him.

Wild cheers rang from the crowd later, when Gil stood with widespread legs over the sprawled figure of Mort Cass.

"Oh, what a lucky punch," someone roared, as bystanders rushed to congratulate Gil.

"Lucky punch, nothing," cried a deep voice.

Gil turned to face the man who had drunk coffee with him soon after his arrival in Benson's Gulch.

"I remember you now," he said, taking Gil's hand in a firm grasp.

"I saw you fight once in Chicago. Recall the night you knocked out Motzi in the third round. You're Bradley, once holder of the world's lightweight boxing crown."

Don't Live a Self-Centered Life

Nine times in ten when you find a person who isn't getting as much out of his life as he should, who wants more friends than he has, who isn't altogether happy with his existence, you'll find, if you probe deeply enough, that that person is too self-centered.

Although they don't know it, usually this condition of being self-centered starts in childhood.

As a child the person was babied by his parents. He received so much notice that when he left home he felt let down, neglected, disillusioned when the world didn't treat him as his parents had. So he retired in a shell.

In one office I know there was a girl who didn't have a friend. For three months she had worked there. Not one of the other girls had paid the slightest attention to her. One day she came to me, broke down, cried, said she was miserable.

"They don't pay any attention to me," she sobbed. "Do you pay any attention to them?" I asked.

"No-no, I don't."

"Then that's the trouble. If you want to be friendly with these girls you have to show them that you are friendly with them."

If you are living a self-centered life now, the best thing for you to do is live more with other people and show them that they are important to you.

reminded Gil of a similar band which assembled each evening to watch the train go through the Ohio village where he had spent his youth.

A nearby cafe beckoned and Gil went in to have a cup of coffee before going to a hotel. The waiter had barely slid his brimming cup down the counter, when one of the onlookers from the stage depot took the next stool. He, too, ordered coffee and took a deep drink before turning to Gil.

"Haven't I seen you some place before?" he asked. "You look real familiar to me."

"I don't recall meeting you," answered Gil. "I'm new to this section of the country."

"It's a good country, but I can't say too much for this town."

"Don't discourage me like that, when I've only been in town ten minutes," smiled Gil. "What's wrong with the town?"

The other grunted. "You've met

PISCATORIAL DYNAMITE . . . Brand-new industry in eastern Canada, started just a year ago, the trapping of 800-pound tuna is called the most thrilling commercial fishing industry in America. At Hubbards, Nova Scotia, a unique colony of 100 men has been established to snare the giant fish for canneries. Picture shows a boatload of "elephants," as the Nova Scotia fisherman calls the big tuna.

AMERICAN MUNITIONS EN ROUTE TO GREECE . . . Cases of shells, grenades and land mines are shown as they were loaded from a lighter aboard an army transport in New York harbor. They were part of the military supplies being sent to Greece to help the Greek army defend the little nation in the event of attack.

1947 STYLES FOR D.P. KIDDIES . . . Children are pretty generally accepted as being universally interesting, particularly so if they're as cute as this pair, who are a couple of displaced persons living in a camp at Hanau, Germany. Here, they are modeling the latest thing in D.P. children's petticoats and pants, made from American Red Cross hospital bedside bags and ditty bags. D.P. camp workers are converting them into clothing—enough for an outfit for every child in the 411 camps.

GRAIN PRICES BOOST LIVING COSTS . . . Department of agriculture economists attributed soaring food prices, now at all-time high level, to high income, coupled with tremendous demand and prospect of small corn crop. Samuel Williams, a miller at the department's Beltsville, Md., experimental farm, is shown with bags of corn and wheat, retailing for $3.95 and $5.95, respectively, per bushel. These peak prices will cause poultry prices to continue rising.

TO WORK WITH LEPERS . . . Miss Margaret Haven of Chicago, 53-year-old telephone operator, left her job, home and friends, to work in Molokai leper colony in the Hawaiian islands. She said she wanted to share the good health God gave her with someone else.

ACCUSES MIDDLEMEN . . . Housing expeditor Frank Creedon told a special congressional investigating committee that unnecessary profits taken by middlemen in the building materials market are forcing up cost of homes.

MOTHER INSTINCT . . . When Jesse O. Price of Los Angeles, owner of Susie, the black cocker spaniel, bought a recently born pig, the dog, which might have heard about how valuable pork is these days, took over as mother. The two became fast friends.

IMMORAL LENGTHS . . . Dr. A. Powell Davies, pastor of the All Souls' Unitarian church at Washington, D. C., assailed new long skirts as "immoral" and "moronic" because they waste material needed by world's suffering people.

OUTSIDE LOOKING IN . . . Abdolrah Kamel Eld, Egyptian national and University of Oregon student, was escorted out of U. N. security council meeting after his outburst: "Long live Egypt! Down with Britain!"

Weekly Swing of Southwest Farm Markets

(USDA) — Farm commodities moved to generally unsettled markets last week, with moderate to sharp declines on many products, according to the Production and Marketing Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Wheat rallied at southwest markets for gains of around 12 cents per bushel, but corn sank steadily. White corn losses totaled about 35 cents, to close Friday at $2.50 for No. 2, while yellow dropped 15 to 20 cents to sell at $2.35 at Fort Worth and Galveston. Oats, barley, and sorghum grains netted little change.

Spot cotton prices declined from $4 to $6 per bale during the week, and there was a further weakening of the basis. Demand was good for Army Purchase qualities but only fair for domestic purchases. Harvesting made rapid progress. Cattle closed the week generally 50 cents to $1 or more lower. Calves felt the heaviest pressure.

Hogs suffered losses of mainly 25 cents to $1 for the week.

Lorainian Represented at Clinic

The Steck Publishing Co. at Austin, Texas, held an Annual Clinic there the 25, 26 and 27 of Sept. The sessions were held on the Mezzanine floor in the crystal ballroom of the Driskoll Hotel. The sponsor, Mrs. Henri Gay Ison, editor Elaine James, and photographer Charlene White attended. Sessions were held on Thursday and Friday from 9:00 until 5:00, and the Saturday session was until noon. 67 schools were represented and there were about 324 students present. New and different ideas were gained, and we were glad for the opportunity to have someone present at the premiere yearbook clinic.

LIGHT THE WAY TO Better Grades

Too often one of the most trying of all school tasks is doing homework. Home study is always a chore and if enough of the right kind of light for easy seeing isn't provided, it becomes double tough. Right now, take time out to check the lighting in your home, especially where your children will be studying. Make sure that every empty socket is filled with the right-size bulb and that portable lamps are in good working order and placed properly for comfortable reading and writing. Remember—better light plus better sight equals better grades.

The Home Ec. 2 girls are making some dresses. Wonder what they will look like when they are finished? (The dresses, we mean). We hope they can wear them anyway.

The sophomores in Spanish 1 are running over the little freshman boys.

The F. F. A. boys are making themselves useful by helping build the new grand stands on the football field.

World History will be interesting when we get around to studying it. We hope.

 Well, here we come again. Seems as if it is a little hard to get rid of us "Fish."

In English, we've all been busy rewriting History of Loraine School and memorizing poetry.

Miss Wilkerson had quite a few headaches the middle of last week trying to teach us how to make little lines, and also big ones for triangles. Seems as if it's a little hard to do.

A party was planned for Tuesday at Prof. Brown's house, but it may be called off because of the football practice.

Lone Star Gas Company's welcome mat is rolled out and ready to greet thousands of men, women and children at its air-conditioned exhibit building filled with displays of modern gas appliances at the State Fair of Texas in Dallas, October 4-19.

The exhibit will contain a sparkling array of domestic, commercial and industrial gas equipment, designed for economy, convenience and comfort. Lounges, rest rooms, ice water and music will be available for the comfort and entertainment of visitors.

Trained personnel will demonstrate and explain the uses of the gas appliances, and available to visitors will be printed matter on kitchen planning, proper placement of appliances for greater efficiency and more healthful and comfortable living.

Advertised as the "Parade of the Wonder Flame," the exhibit will present all of the newest improvements and beauty of the new gas appliances, and the exhibit is designed to startle and please every member of the family.

The Lone Star Gas Company exhibit building is about a block southeast of the Fair Park Auditorium on First Avenue. It may be spotted by a 70-foot tower atop of which is a giant blue flame, with "GAS" lettered out on four sides in neon lighting.

The exhibits include four "New Freedom Gas Kitchens", each distinct in design, color and with special features of comfort and convenience. All of the kitchens will be complete in every detail, from top of the steel cabinets down to the new floor coverings.

There will be a mammoth display of automatic gas ranges built for perfection in cookery. Also on display and in actual operation to bring comfortable temperatures to the building will be air-conditioning units employing the same gas flame to produce either heating or cooling by hand manipulation of a tiny switch. These units—safely, operated by a child without knowledge of mechanics—assure dependable warmth and correct humidity throughout a home in coldest weather; in summer they bring scientific relief from hot sticky weather, providing refreshing and invigorating cold air, and in every season they may direct the flow of live, clean air without drafts while filtering out dirt, dust and pollen. There will be automatic vented heating equipment, automatic dish washers which operate without power other than water pressure, gas refrigerators featuring silent operation and a storage compartment for frozen foods, automatic water heaters and a full line of heavy duty cooking equipment for restaurants and large institutions.

Educational features include a display of photographs telling the story of Lone Star's butane gas service from production to the burner tip, and a projected picture-story showing the many jobs required in furnishing dependable natural gas service.

Better Revelation Lesson for October 5, 1947

WITH Sunday's lesson we turn into another field of Bible study for the concluding quarter of the year—messages from the Epistles, other than those of Paul.

This lesson, and the next two, are from the Epistle to the Hebrews—one of my favorite books in the Bible.

The title of the lesson has reference, of course, to Christ—the better revelation of the Son of God in his appearance to bring the father's plan of redemption nigh unto all men.

Dr. Newton The title of the lesson has reference, of course, to Christ—the better revelation of the Son of God in his appearance to bring the father's plan of redemption nigh unto all men.

Love is the Key IN THIS better revelation of Jesus Christ, we find that love is the key that opens the door into the brightly lighted room.

And this revelation of God in Jesus Christ carries the further truth that "all things" have been placed in the hands of our blessed Saviour.

Christ Reveals God NOT only does Christ reveal himself, but also the father, for they are one.

A New Covenant THE better revelation means "a more excellent ministry," because Jesus Christ has now become "the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises," Hebrews 8:6.

Now that the better revelation is our portion, what shall be our response? One cannot be excused today by claiming ignorance of God's proffered salvation unto all men.

How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?

That Nagging Backache. May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action. Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—infects, exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overtaxed and fail to filter excess acids and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by medical users everywhere. Ask your doctor!

Some New Weed Killers Give Excellent Results

New weed killers to supplement 2,4-D are appearing with good reports. Quack grass and crab grass are two weed pests which 2,4-D does not control. IPC was developed in England during the war and now is giving good results in the control of quack grass, stolons and seedlings, in tests conducted by the U. S. department of agriculture. It is harmless to persons and to some broadleaf plants.

Farm Topics

Soft Corn Requires Special Attention

Several Methods Given For Profitable Feeding

Saving soft corn will be a problem facing many farmers this year. Much of the crop went in so late that frost became a factor in maturity, as well as in winter handling of the corn.

Next to chopping and feeding green, one of the best ways to get full value from soft corn is to put immature crops in the silo or pasture them off with cattle, hogs or sheep, Capper's Farmer points out.

Another method used by many growers in the last big soft corn year, 1945, was to build emergency cribs five to six feet wide. The farmers set two rows of poles in the ground, wired the tops together to keep the cribs from spreading, and fastened woven wire or slat cribbing on the inside of the posts. These cribs, built in east and west directions, took best advantage of prevailing winds.

Farmers in many northern areas, where corn is likely to be caught by frost before it is mature, regularly cut up large quantities and cure it as fodder. Ears later are husked by hand or with a shredder.

Most hybrid corns are stiff stalked and have a good root system. They will stand with few fallen ears well into the winter. Since ears will dry with less spoilage on a standing stalk, many farmers prefer to let hogs, cattle or sheep harvest the crop.

Justin Morgan was the fountain-head of the first great family of American horses. The Morgan strain secured its name from the man who bred the original Morgan horse and owned him until late in 1795.

Herds and Flocks

Fall pigs should be kept gaining from the start. If they stop gaining it is harder to get them started again, and it takes more feed. Don't let them lose their milk fat.

Keep weeds cut under your electric fence, to prevent grounding. Set the posts at an angle and you can keep the weeds cut with the mowing machine.

Flush ewes before the breeding season—that is, feed them generously so they will be gaining at breeding time. Changing from scant to good pasture, or feeding some grain, will put the ewes in better condition. Flushing results in more certain breeding.

Cows due to freshen in late fall should be dried off and given eight weeks of vacation to get ready for the bleated event. During this rest period, feed a fitting ration to keep the cow in good flesh and help develop the calf.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS by Lynn Chambers

Quick Breads Take Little Mixing Time

Tempting Breads

There is no aroma more appetizing than that tantalizing one which comes from the oven in which bread is baking. And what is more of a treat than eating the bread itself?

Piping hot muffins add interest to the simplest supper; hot coffee cake is a delight to both early and late risers, while thick and thin slices alike—as long as they are of home-made bread—make superb sandwiches for school lunches or late snacks.

Many homemakers don't bother to make homemade bread because they think it is a time-consuming procedure. Actually, it's far simpler than mixing a cake or even cooking a vegetable, and the pleasure of it is so great, it's more than worth the little effort.

Orange Oatmeal bread is good when sliced thin for sandwiches. Moist and tender, it keeps its flavor easily and slices readily. The flavor actually improves when the bread is kept for a day before being cut.

Mix milk, orange juice and grated peel and add to oats. Let this mixture stand for an hour. Sift flour, salt, baking powder, soda and sugar. Add chopped nuts. Beat egg into oatmeal mixture. Add molasses and beat thoroughly. Stir in melted shortening. Add flour mixture and stir just to blend. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for about 50 minutes, or until done.

Pecan Wheat Muffins. (Makes 12 to 16 muffins) 1 cup sifted whole wheat flour 1/2 cup sifted white flour 4 teaspoons baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt 1 egg 1/2 cup brown sugar 1/2 cup evaporated milk 1/2 cup water 2 tablespoons melted shortening 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Sift first four ingredients twice, returning bran in sifter to sifted mixture. Beat egg, add brown sugar, milk and water. Stir until mixture is dissolved, then add shortening. Stir liquid quickly into dry ingredients. With the last few stirs, add chopped nuts. Pour batter immediately into greased muffin tins. Bake in a hot (400-degree) oven about 20 minutes.

For a different egg salad, add a few capers to the chopped egg and a few herbs to the dressing used for moistening the mixture. Leftover weiners can be chopped or ground with pickle relish to be used as sandwich filling. Add a bit of mayonnaise or sandwich spread, if desired. When you can't slice cooked tongue any longer, cut off the meaty pieces and mix with chopped hard-cooked egg and boiled dressing for a very good sandwich filler.

Raised Luncheon Muffins. (Makes 1 dozen 3-inch muffins) 1 package yeast, compressed 1/2 cup lukewarm water 1/2 cup milk 2 eggs 1/2 cup sugar 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup melted shortening 1/2 cup grated orange rind 2 1/2 cups flour, sifted

Crumble yeast into lukewarm water to soften. Scald milk. Cool. Beat eggs in mixing bowl. Add sugar, salt, shortening and orange rind. Mix well. Add cooled milk and 1 cup flour. Beat smooth. Add softened yeast. Mix well. Add remaining flour. Beat 2 minutes. Fill greased muffin pans half full. Let rise in warm place until doubled (about 45 minutes). Bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven for 18 to 20 minutes. Date and Pecan Ring is an attractive as well as novel bread.

A REPORT FROM EUROPE
By George Mahon
This is being written from the city of Trieste, a town of about 300,000 on the shores of the Adriatic sea. I am here in Trieste with a Congressional subcommittee charged with making a study of our foreign aid program. I had hardly heard of this city prior to the war and that is probably true of most Americans. It is now one of the danger spots of the world.

The place belonged to Austria before World War 1 and to Italy after World War 1. The city and a small bit of land surrounding the city have now been set up as a free state which is to have a governor appointed by the United Nations. The city of Trieste is only five miles from Yugoslavia.

At the conclusion of the war, Yugoslavia and Russia demanded that the city be made a part of Yugoslavia, America and Britain refused to agree as most of the people in the city are Italians, and the Free State was finally agreed upon.

A force of 5,000 American troops and a similar number of British troops occupy the city of Trieste. The city is the dividing line which separates Russia and Yugoslavia from the western world. It may be our first line of defense against Russian aggression. In addition to maintaining our troops here, we are spending about $800,000 per month to help feed the people of the area. A ship load of American wheat arrived recently and there are no signs of starvation here. The Port was heavily bombed during the war. Our government is supporting a program to make the place self-sustaining.

During the stay of our Committee in Trieste, Treaty provisions have gone into effect setting up the new state, and Ratification Day has been celebrated. It has been a very precarious time for American and British military forces.

The Commanding General of the Yugoslav Army served notice upon our military headquarters that his army contrary to the provisions of the peace treaty was marching into the city of Trieste at 10 o'clock at night on Ratification Day. Our forces manned the roads to the city with instructions to prevent the entry of the Yugoslav army. The Yugoslavs engaged in some military maneuvers and threats, but when it became apparent that the Americans and British had called their bluff, they withdrew their forces.

There has been an air of uneasiness throughout the city during our stay here. There have been numerous riots and demonstrations by the Communists. Bombs have been exploded in the streets and a few people have been killed. The Yugoslav army outnumbered the Anglo-American forces in this area, but the presence of American war ships in the harbor and the flight over the city of our four-engine bombers have had a stabilizing influence on the situation.

One of the most spectacular demonstrations was a Communist funeral procession thru the streets of the city. The Communists claimed that the anti-Communists were responsible for the killing of a child who belonged to a Communist family. The child's casket was carried down the street on the shoulders of six young men, preceded by four huge red flags. The bands played and hundreds of flowers were carried in the procession. The marching crowd extended for several blocks and was estimated at 15,000 people.

In Trieste we have conferred at length with American and British military officials, where we have found considerable pessimism as to the chances for peace and stability. Trieste is headed for trouble unless the United Nations is able to pursue a firm policy and establish a strong civilian government. We have conferred also with local citizens and officials. The majority of the people in the city of Trieste are Italian, but there are also many Yugoslavs in the area.

Among the 5,000 American troops in Trieste are 137 enlisted men from Texas. I had a pleasant visit with two of them from West Texas, Max Carpenter of Sundown, and Cecil Drake of Big Spring. All our troops seemed to be in fine shape and morale appeared to be high.
