30,000 Pounds, Including 23,000 of Mrs. J. T. Shurley, Sold to Tom Richey This Week

Last of the spring clip of wool stored here at the Sonora Wool & Mohair Company, and probably the last lot left in the state, was sold this week to Tom Richey for 30 1/2 cents, highest price of the year paid in Texas for 12-months wool. Some higher sales have been made in Boston on consigned wools, however.

The lot sold totaled 30,000 pounds. Biggest owner was Mrs. J. T. Shurley, with 23,000 pounds. Balance was made up of various remnants.

The wool is being trucked to Lampasas to the Central Texas Trading Company, of which Richey is head.

The mohair held here is the last big clip in the state, also. Prices continue firm in Boston, with Texas hair, in the bag, quoted at 48 cents by the Commercial Bulletin. Sale is expected here soon at a price higher than any yet paid.

Bronchos Smothered Under 38-0 Licking by Eldorado Eagles

Game Closer Than Score Indicates, Visitors Get Breaks; Good Contest Expected at Menard

While the Sonora Bronchos were being snowed under by Eldorado Eagles to the tune of 38-0 here Saturday Rocksprings was beating Menard by the same number of points. Therefore, when the two underdogs meet in Menard this week-end a tight game is expected.

The Bronchos played a fair brand of ball at times Saturday. The second quarter was all theirs. They dominated the play in this period, but were never able to score. Eldorado seized every scoring chance, and while Sonora made about the same number of first downs, the Eagles grabbed all the breaks and scored every time a chance presented itself.

Bad throws from center, intercepted passes and fumbles on the part of the Sonora lads gave their visitors the topheavy score, although the play was quite close during most of the game.

In practice this week the men are fighting hard and have been hitting the tackling dummy with enthusiasm. They will go to Menard rated an even chance or better.

Long-awaited Rainfall Covers Sonora and Ranch Territory

1899 NEWS DELVES INTO HISTORY OF LONG AGO

Thirty-four years ago there occurred in Sutton county a crime which was responsible for the permanent designation of a landmark—the Dago Water Hole.

On page four of this issue of The News is reproduced a story from the issue of Oct. 21, 1899, which tells of the murder, by persons unknown, of a Syrian peddler, A. Joseph Cheheen.

Sonorans of today who lived here at that time will be interested to read again of that incident. Younger readers, as well as newcomers, should also find it entertaining.

Last Performance Will Be Given Tonight; Seats Still Available in Reserved Part

Many Sonora people plan to attend the Passion Play in San Angelo this afternoon and tonight, according to response to solicitation here this week by mothers of local Boy Scouts and members of the Troop committee. The spectacle was staged Thursday and is to be presented today for the benefit of the Boy Scouts of the Concho Valley council. Proceeds will be used in improving Camp Louis Farr at Mertzon.

Seats are still available for tonight's performance in the 75 cent and $1 reserved section. Choice seats in the house sell this year for only $1. Prices for this appearance of the players are about half what they were three years ago.

The play is being given in English this time. Before it was in German. The same cast of characters, with a few exceptions appears. Homes of the cast are in Frieberg, Germany. The players will return to their native land soon, since their passports soon expire.

Sonora people are being urged by local ministers, educators, and civic leaders to see this wonderful presentation and at the same time aid the Boy Scouts.

Tickets may be secured at the Trainer Beauty Shop or The News office.

Varies from 1 to 2 Inches; More Is Needed

Most of the Sonora ranch country received a rain last week-end, the first of any amount in over two months to cover the country evenly. In town the San Angelo Telephone Company gauge registered a total of .97 inches Thursday and Friday nights.

From the Devil's River country in the corners of Sutton, Val Verde and Crockett counties the heaviest fall was received. Hillary Phillips reported Wednesday that he received 2 inches at his ranch and that the rain was equally good on surrounding ranches.

The Aldwell Brothers ranch on the east of Phillips' got less, however. Jap Holman, southwest of Sonora 25 miles, reported an inch and a half. From several other parts of the county, though, the fall was the same as in town. Two inches fell at Lea Aldwell's Sheffield ranch.

One spot which was left out was in the vicinity of Cleve Jones' ranch 20 miles east of Sonora.

The rain was enough to start a few weeds, but more is needed shortly to keep the growth coming. In sections where showers had been received in recent weeks the rain was heavy enough to keep grass green and growing for several weeks more, or until frost gets it. Cloudy weather here Thursday as The News is printed gives promise of other rains.

Lots have been leased from the Santa Fe railway on a long-time basis and the structure will be built on the Santa Fe right-of-way on the east side of the street at the intersection of the Del Rio and San Antonio highways in south Sonora. Thirty Cars Going to Feeders in Just One Day

WEIGHTS FAIR

Muttons Averaging 60 Lbs.; Buyers Active Here

The big annual lamb movement in Sonora area began to be felt this week, and Saturday of this week will witness the moving of an entire trainload of feeder lambs, with 30 carloads scheduled to move. Twelve cars will leave today, while in the last week 13 cars went out from the local loading pens.

Buyers have about cleaned up the heavier lambs in the territory to the west and are now moving into this section. The market continues firm at 4 1/2 cents for good mutton lambs.

Weights are averaging around 60 pounds and a little over, which is below average, for the last few weeks, but much better than was expected in the face of the continued drought.

One of the best sales reported was that of Ed Mayfield's 4500 mutton lambs to Alvin Neal for a Fort Worth feeder at $3 per head, straight. That price is 30 cents above the mark of the average lamb as 4 1/2 cents. The Mayfield lambs have sold in a single bunch usually to one feeder and at a fancy price, for the last several years.

Last Friday Finley-Kitchens Commission company sent two doubles to Paducah and 3 to Muleshoe. They were from the Sol Kelly and M. G. Shurley ranches. Monday (Continued on Page 8)

When 36,000 People Jammed Fair Stadium on Opening Day

No depression here! Thirty-six thousand people, all having a time of their lives at the opening day and football game of the State Fair of Texas, in Dallas, when Southern Methodist university humbled a strong and fighting El Paso school of Mines team by a score of 27 to 6. Fighting gamely in the first half, the Miners boasted a 6 to 0 lead at mid-game, but something happened to S. M. U. between halves. Twenty-seven points in rapid succession, chiefly through the flashing play of Sophomore Robbie Wilson from Corsicana, gave the Mustangs a sweet victory before this mad throng.

'Buy Now' N. R. A. Is Newest Battle Cry for Nation

Movement Designated as Attack on Depression from Different Angle than Before

Swinging into line with the rest of America in the great "Now is the Time to Buy" movement Sonora has already developed a militant organization and is ready to go ahead with the drive just as rapidly as preliminary details can be worked out. In a statement this week H. V. Stokes, chairman of the local committee, made it clear that everything possible will be done by this group to speed up business in accordance with the plans outlined by the NRA in Washington.

"This program is an attack on the depression from an entirely different angle than anything that has been done before," said Chairman Stokes today. "We are attacking the depression with the weapons of salesmanship. We all know that during the last three years or more there has been great lack of buying by individuals, family groups and business organizations. The present nation-wide campaign is simply a drive to get people to buy the things they would have been buying the last three years or so if it had not been for their fear complex.

"Of course, we are well aware of the fact that there are some people who cannot afford to do any special buying at this time. But they are very much in the minority. Most families in Sonora can make at least some extra purchases.

"The object of our efforts will be to convince such persons that it will be to their interest to buy now the things that under ordinary circumstances they would have bought in recent years. Bear in mind that just a little more spending by each family in Sonora and vicinity will make all the difference in the world to the business interests of this city."

Mr. Stokes said that reports from Washington indicated that the present movement was spreading like wild-fire over the country and was bound to be a great success.

"NRA headquarters in Washington are getting reports of tremendous enthusiasm for the drive," he said. "In numerous places, mass meetings of the business men have been held, definite plans have been mapped out, committees appointed and the work is getting underway in real American go-getter fashion. The increased business momentum which started with the Blue Eagle drive is now being accelerated. We know that Sonora is not going to lag behind. I do not say this as a matter of patriotism, though I realize that this campaign has a patriotic side to it. What is outstanding at this time is that it really is a matter of local self interest to get into this prosperity parade.

"As I see it, any city or town that does not fall into line with this movement is simply going to lose a lot of business and keep a lot of people on the bread line who ought to be on the pay-rolls. The government in Washington is willing and eager to give all possible co-operation to local organizations. The great value emanating from this source lies in a co-ordinated national effort. With the campaign assuming national proportions, each community will receive the benefit of everybody working together.

"We know that business can be greatly stimulated by the plans now being put into effect. Nobody is being asked to make any particular sacrifices. To buy now is manifestly self-interest because prices are bound to go higher. Therefore, I feel that we are simply doing the logical and obvious thing

NRA Wins

Here is District Judge J. D. Moore of Austin, who threw Attorney General James V. Alford's oil anti-trust suit out of court, ruling that the NRA oil code had abated the action. Alford had previously won another suit against one oil company.

in accepting the government's invitation to join in the present campaign."

Mr. Stokes stated that every possible medium would be employed to mobilize public opinion. These include display ads and special articles in newspapers, radio talks, motion pictures, public speakers, posters, street car cards and stickers. It is the expectation of the NRA that every line of business will be tremendously stimulated during the weeks before the end of the year, and, with this momentum added to the various other phases of the recovery program, the upward economic trend will continue until conditions approximating normal have been reached.

READERS INDEBTED TO ADVERTISERS

Strange as it may seem, the readers of almost any publication are indebted to its advertisers. Take, for instance, the Saturday Evening Post. You pay 5 cents a copy for over a pound of paper. The paper alone costs almost that five cents, even when large scale buying is possible. Printing, distribution, dealers' profits, all cost of handling your purchase all would come from one nickel if it were not for the Post's advertisers. But if it were not for those advertisers you either would do without the magazine or would pay an enormous price—probably fifty cents an issue (books containing an equal amount of high class reading material bring $2 to $3).

Coming closer to home—if it were not for The News advertisers Sonora would either have no newspaper or else subscribers would have to pay $10 a year or more for a much smaller amount of reading material each week.

Those who bring a message to you in the form of advertising do so with the hope and conviction that you will read their advertisement and that it will affect your buying or your decisions in some manner.

IN 1899 THE NEWS RELATED EVENT THAT NAMED DAGO WATER HOLE

"With this issue the Devil's River News enters upon its tenth year as a recorder of local happenings of the Sonora and Devil's River country," read an editorial in "The Devil" for Oct. 21, 1899... and this tenth volume included one of the most dramatic news stories ever carried in the columns of the paper. Headed "Robbery and Murder," the tale, well-known to old-timers of this section, follows:

"Shortly after sundown Sunday Johnnie Adams came in from F. Mayer & Sons T half circle ranch and reported to Deputy Sheriff Davis that a Syrian peddler had been murdered on the Sonora-Ozona road that evening. Deputy Sheriff Davis accompanied by S. L. Merck and R. J. Owens, Justice of the Peace D. B. Woodruff, County Attorney W. A. Anderson and G. W. Sessoms left at once for the scene of the murder where Justice of the Peace Woodruff held an inquest and the body of the murdered peddler was brought to Sonora for burial.

"The case is shrouded in mystery as to the perpetrators, but the following are the facts leading up to the case: Two peddlers, Anton El Kouri and A. Joseph Cheheen of Austin were in Ozona last week and did considerable business. On Saturday they traded with some Mexicans and cashed a check for about $90 and in this way displayed the fact that they had considerable money in their possession. They left Ozona Saturday evening and camped about twelve miles from that metropolis. Sunday they came on past the headquarters house of the T half circle ranch and were within about 13 miles of Sonora about 3 o'clock when they were held up by men ambushed behind some large rocks on the side of the road. The highwaymen were armed with winchesters and sixshooters. They were black, or blackened, and spoke English and Mexican. They told the Syrians to get out of the hack, which they did. They were told to throw up their hands. Joseph Cheheen held up his hands and was shot twice through the neck and once just above the heart. He made an attempt to escape and fell on his face 40 feet from the hack. Anton El Kouri was too badly scared to hold up his hands and made his escape by running through the brush to Mayer's ranch house three miles distant where he fell exhausted and remained unconscious for an hour. When he was able to speak he told of the hold-up and murder and Johnnie Adams came to Sonora for the officers as reported above. The justice of the peace and the officers found that the body of the dead Syrian had been dragged to the hack and the horses had been driven around a point and up near the head of a draw where the body was thrown out and the contents of the hack piled on top of him. All the goods and packages had been ransacked and every indication pointed to robbery. The horses were driven off or stolen and the robbers took about $3000 worth of jewelry, dry goods and notions. Over two hundred dollars in cash hidden in the curtains of the hack was not found by the highwaymen. The rain and mist of Sunday night obliterated all trails and the officers have not much hope of capturing the robbers. The murdered Syrian was 28 years of age and leaves a wife and baby in Austin. This is probably the first case of murder for money to occur in the Sonora country. The distance from town, the roughness of the country, the lateness of the hour and the rain following, together with the lack of intelligent information makes good detective work necessary to effect a capture."

Sonora Ends Year 'Pure Milk' Town

Cows Tested for Coming Period; Commission Met Tuesday

Sonora has ended one year as a "pure milk town," the standard milk ordinance having been in effect during the last year. Cows are being tested this week for bovine tuberculosis, as required by the ordinance. No one will be allowed to sell milk in the city from a cow which has not been tested and pronounced sound.

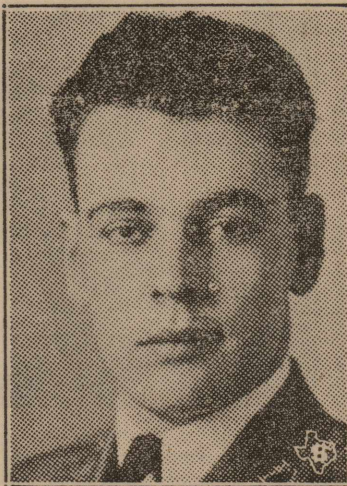

Public health has benefitted during the year, and Sonora dairy patrons have become accustomed to receiving their milk properly chilled.

The city commission met Tuesday night and discussed the milk ordinance among other things. The financial statement for the closing year was studied and approved, and the city treasurer, George H. Neill, was allowed $10 for compiling it. He received an additional salary of $10 per year, as contrasted with the $10 a month paid for the job until one year ago, the city saving $100 a year.

George E. Smith was confirmed as city manager for another year. Bills were read and approved.

Mrs. Ardena Speed will visit friends and relatives in Amarillo while attending the Grand Chapter of Texas O. E. S. there next week.

Drying Cabinet for Women's Wear Saves Buttons

J. W. Trainer has installed a specially designed drying cabinet for women's dresses and coats. It is seven feet high, allowing the garments to hang full length. A 27-foot coil of steam pipes in the bottom furnishes safe heat for drying and removing benzine odor, while a fan in the back stirs the air and speeds the drying. A vent at the top carries away fumes.

The cabinet is lined inside and out with sheet metal to eliminate fire danger. It was installed to permit drying dresses without breaking buttons and straining the garment.

Latest Methods Canning, Curing Available Here

Home Demonstration Agent Offers Information; Patterns to Be Demonstrated in Nov.

"Pork canning, beef canning, and meat curing comes into our minds with the first bit of cold weather. Are you informed as to the latest successful methods of canning and curing meats? Mrs. Ringgold, county home demonstration agent, has in new information from the Extension Service, and appointments for demonstrations should be made with her soon in order that she be able to best serve you. The Extension recipes include such canned meats as mince meat, scrap-ple from either beef or pork, chili, meat loafs and excellent roasts. There is surely nothing more useful to the housewife, the cook, or even (they tell me) the cowboy out for the day, than properly canned wholesome meat.

"Canned meat properly prepared will be a well fed fat animal, chilled thoroughly at 34 to 45 degrees from 18 to 24 hours, cut to divide the grades of meat for canning, and sealed in plain tins with a well adjusted sealer, and cooked in a pressure cooker the proper length of time. Information concerning the food poisoning known as botulism, comes in from Miss Lola Blair, nutritional specialist of the Extension Service telling us that it is caused by a bacteri that may be controlled by boiling if the liquid is sufficient acid, 2, they will not grow in salt solution as high as 9 per cent and that non-acid foods must be boiled in open kettle for at least six hours to insure its safety. This means, as she continues, that food boiled for 6 hours is highly over-cooked and expensive, and so it is only possible to can successfully from the standpoint of health in a pressure cooker for non-acid vegetables and meats.

"A few precautions are mentioned in meat canning, as we find that the petcock should not be opened full force when a No. 3 can is used, as this sudden release of pressure outside the can causes the end to bulge and often break the seam. The thorough cooling of cans is of most importance as often insufficient cooling causes spoilage. Last, be very careful to keep your canned meats in a cool place, avoiding wet walls in kitchen shelves. Without using canned meats your pantry and you are missing an opportunity for better meals and simpler preparation.

"Pattern drafting of foundation patterns and their uses is to be presented to the Home Demonstration Club women of Sutton county on Nov. 14 and 15 by Miss Dora Barnes, clothing specialist from the Extension Service. All wardrobe demonstrators will attend this meeting to better prepare them-

JIM the CONQUEROR

PETER B. KYNE

WNU Service.

"Who's there?" Don Jaime challenged in a ringing voice. "Quien es?"

"Open the door," a rough voice commanded. "We want you and we're going to have you."

"Ah, so it is my friend Bill Dingle. I have been expecting you, William, ever since you so thoughtfully sent one of your men with a false cry of raiders from below the Border. I sent forty men. Your lookout in the hills saw them ride out, and when they had passed you decided to come to my hacienda, deserted save for the women and children, and kill me in some unpleasant manner. Is it not so?"

There was no answer to this and Don Jaime's mocking laugh floated through the window. "Now, Dingle, my poor fellow, consider the situation. A hundred armed men surround this poor house of mine. Go you, Friend Dingle, to the patio entrance and look."

A murmuring rose among the recent arrivals and one of them ran to the entrance of the patio. A volley of good old Anglo-Saxon curses echoed through the old-fashioned garden, then the man came running back to join his fellows.

"Is seeing believing, Senor Dingle?" Don Jaime called pleasantly. "You win, Higuenes."

"One by one you will go to the entrance and give up your arms to my riding boss. It would be madness to resist. You shall not be killed and presently you shall all return to your sheeps—I mean sheep. Forward! March!"

A moment's hesitation, more low-voiced colloquy, a curse or two, and the retreat to the entrance commenced. A few minutes later Enrico Caraveo, a little pockmarked Mexican, thrust a smiling, sardonic face up to the grilled window.

"I have the honor to inform Don Jaime that his visitors await his pleasure."

"Confine them in the barn under guard. Feed them."

"Si, senor," murmured the riding boss, and departed chuckling. Mrs. Ganby, white-faced, speechless with terror, watched Don Jaime blowing rings. Presently he looked across at her, his eyes filled with musing, his white teeth showing in a gentle little smile.

"It's a great world, isn't it, Mrs. Ganby?" he murmured. "Please call Flavio. I would return to the veranda."

Roberta Antrim's limousine rolled up the gravelled driveway to the wide portals of Hillcrest, and Harms, the butler, came down the steps and opened the door.

"Mr. Latham came home an hour ago, Miss," he confided. "Something must have happened in the city today, Miss. He's worried—walking up and down the drawing room and talking to himself. I'm a bit worried about the master, Miss."

"Thank you, Harms. You're very kind."

A foreboding of disaster brought Roberta flying into the living room. Crooked Bill sat huddled in a reading chair, his face in his hands, his attitude reminiscent of profound despair.

"Uncle Bill! What's happened?"

Crooked Bill's old hands merely clasped his features tighter. He wagged his head and moaned.

"I'm through. My brokers sold me out this afternoon. Oh, Bobby, Bobby, what a massacre! I stayed as long as I dared, but when the last jump came I realized that only a crazy man would continue to invest in this crazy market. I declined to invest another dollar—for the reason that I didn't have it. I told my brokers I'd gone the limit and to sell me out. I'm all washed up."

"Must we leave Hillcrest?" Roberta queried in a strangled voice.

"We must," Crooked Bill replied heroically. "I have enough to pay off the servants and maintain us in respectability at some modest hotel until we can look around and see what the future holds for us, but after that—"

"After that I'll take care of you, dear Uncle Bill," Roberta's voice was tender, the touch of her lovely cheek to Crooked Bill's wrinkled jowls was very soothing to that wretched wreck of a financier. "Sheep are up and so is wool, Uncle Bill. Don Prudencio Alviso writes me that Uncle Tom's sheep are worth at least two hundred thousand as they stand, and he has over a hundred thousand pounds of wool in transit to a wool house in Boston. And good wool is quoted in today's paper at thirty cents a pound. Uncle Tom has a ranch of sorts also. Don Prudencio doesn't think much of it and says it is not a ready sale, but we can live there and carry on in the sheep business—"

"You have no conception of what you are proposing to me," Crooked Bill roared. "Sheep are terrible."

"Well, you've always taken care of me, haven't you, darling? What a poor sport I'd be to desert you when you're down and out. No, no, dear. We'll battle along together to the last sheep."

Uncle Bill Latham sighed and gazed drearily out the window. "If you'd only fixed it up to marry Glenn Hackett—"

"If we didn't have these sheep and the wool I'd marry him and risk learning to love him, just to keep you from worrying about me," Roberta assured him heroically. "But of course, thanks to that odious Jim Higgins, I find myself in rather an independent position. We will sell off all the sheep and wool and live comfortably and economically on the income from that until—"

"Hackett is coming for dinner," he interrupted. "Be nice to him. He's my attorney, of course, and I'll have to tell him what's happened to me. Promise me, Bobby, that if he renews his suit you'll accord him kindly and respectful consideration."

In her great distress at the catastrophe which had overtaken her guardian Roberta was in a mood to promise anything—and did. Crooked Bill appeared to rally immediately.

Roberta was dressing when she heard Glenn Hackett's car rolling up the driveway. Crooked Bill received his guest at the door and at once conducted him to the library.

"I've got to talk fast, my boy," he began, "before Roberta comes down. I'm supposed to have gone bust in the market—Hillcrest has been gobbled up by my bankers to meet my notes. I'm down to a couple of thousand dollars. In a word, h—I pops generally."

"I hope I do not have to assure you, Glenn, that in so far as Bobby is concerned I'm for you all the way."

"Thank you very much," Hackett replied. "I have suspected as much for quite a while."

"That girl is too dog-gone high and mighty to suit me," Crooked Bill continued, sipping his drink with meditative pleasure, "so I've cooked up a scheme to bring her fluttering to the ground. Roberta's the light of my eye and the apple of my heart, but nevertheless, as a reasoning human being, I've got to admit she has her drawbacks. She's got to be yanked out of the clouds of romance to earthly practicalities, and in my feeble way I'm attempting to do it. Now, then, here's my plan. I came staggering in, play-acting all over the place, and moaned aloud that I was out of the market, that my brokers had sold me out because I didn't dare stay with the game any longer. Well, as a matter of fact I am out of the market. My brokers did sell me out—but on the right side of the ledger, and as a result I've cleaned up about ten millions. I've arranged with a trusted friend to pretend he's bought Hillcrest from the bank to which I had given a deed. Well, I did give the bank a deed, as security for more money to play this crazy market, but I could afford to. I was miles ahead of the hounds—playing on margin. I've leased this place for July, August and September—and Roberta is so sorry for me she's going to sell out her Uncle Tom's sheep and wool and take care of me the remainder of my days."

"Very nice of Roberta, I should say, Mr. Latham. But then Roberta was always a good sport. Witness the sporty manner in which she took that beating I was insane enough to inflict on her in a moment of pique. I wish my tongue had cleaved to the roof of my mouth."

"Don't you wish anything of the sort. Women—Roberta's type of women—love rough stuff from their men."

"Roberta's Type of Women Love Rough Stuff From Their Men."

"I'm not her man."

"You follow my lead and you will be. You've given her one licking and I'm giving her another. Right now she's figuring ways and means of availing all her old friends. She'll never place herself in the position of being pitied by her set, of being patronized, of being the recipient of favors she can't repay. My boy, a change of fortune is going to make that girl do some solid, constructive thinking."

"Still I do not quite follow you." "I'm not surprised. Where Roberta is concerned you do not think very clearly. Now, listen to me, my boy. Roberta's going down to Texas to look after her interests. She didn't want to go if she could avoid it, but now she's beginning to think it is her duty to go. She must be on the job to protect every dollar coming to her from Tom Antrim's estate. She's the Little Mother now. Got to take care of poor Uncle Bill Latham, or else poor old Uncle Bill will never raise his head again. I'm going to give you a chance to be a hero, to put Roberta under obligation to you. Tonight, at dinner, this sad story I've just told you is going to come out. You're going to suspect something and start probing me—and when you discover all is over you're going to suggest saving me."

"How?"

Crooked Bill rubbed his hands together and smiled a coyote smile. "You're going to tell me that this rise is, undoubtedly, one of the greatest bull movements ever noted in the market, but that from sources of information you cannot, in honor, divulge, you happen to know that the bears aren't licked, that they have the bulls in a tight corner and that securities are due to crash. Then you rawhide me for not coming to you with my troubles when the going got slippery. You tell me I was a tarnation old fool for not doing so; that if I could only have held on a little bit longer the tide would have turned and that you would have been delighted to have loaned me a million to carry me over. Sabe that?"

"Yes, sir. Then what?"

"Why, I'll be overcome with emotion and say: 'Glenn, you ought to know I'd be the last man in the world to suggest a loan from you, of all men—under the circumstances.' And I'll give Bobby a look that will be—well, significant. She'll be grateful to me for not having placed her in position of having to be grateful to you for helping me. But at the same time she'll be grateful to you for suggesting it. Well, I'll tell you it's too late now, that the fat's in the fire, and you jump up and yell that it isn't."

"You'll prance up and down the dining room, thinking hard. Act like a movie actor. Show Roberta, who will be watching you fascinated, that in an emergency nobody need look beyond you. Prove to her you are a strong man—a quick thinker, bold, adventurous, brave fellow, but be careful to ignore her completely. Then out with your plan to save the old homestead and the family fortune."

"The plan," Glenn Hackett demanded, "the plan."

Crooked Bill's old eyes fairly popped with delight at the part he was playing. "When I first jumped into the market, Glenn, I sold twen-

"Best news I've had in fifty years, Glenn. But what challenges my interest is this. Antrim is dead. Higuenes lives and is not seriously injured, yet Antrim's sheep, with the tacit consent of Higuenes, continue to trespass. Meanwhile Higuenes is doing all he can to protect Roberta, whom he has never met—and all at considerable loss and inconvenience to himself, because those sheep are ruining his range. Sheep foul a range up, and cattle will not graze where a sheep has grazed. Also, a sheep destroys the range. Eats the grass down to the roots and then some. Now, why is Higuenes doing this?"

"Search me, sir."

"He has some ulterior motive, and Roberta will discover it, of course. Well, I want Roberta to go down there all het up with the mental picture she has painted of this romantic Higuenes. She'll find a brand of man she never met before. All I hope is that he makes love to her with Latin impetuosity, because if he does he'll be put in his place. Roberta will not be rushed by any man. All the men she'll meet there will be so different she'll be disillusioned. She'll begin to appreciate a man who bathes and shaves daily, who dresses in good taste, who knows something besides cattle and sheep and local politics, who lives in a regular house and moves in cultured society. She'll see the other side of the picture—and it will be good for her immortal soul."

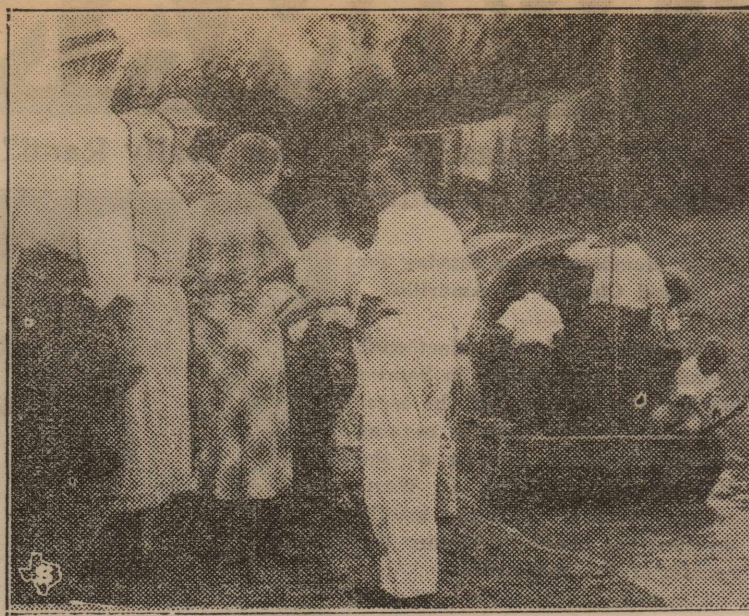

"There may be a great deal in what you say, Mr. Latham, and perhaps your cute financial plans will work out exactly as you expect, but I'm here to tell you they will not, and for one very potent reason. I'm not so blamed certain that I want Roberta."

Crooked Bill stared at the young man in undisguised horror and amazement.

"I'm afraid of her," Hackett resumed in his slow, methodical way. "She's too blamed modern and I'm too old-fashioned. I'll not change and she can't. I fear we would be mismatched and I'll not risk a brief happiness. I can stand to lose Roberta now, but I wouldn't care to have to stand to lose her after I'd won her; I'd break my heart to discover at some future time that she wasn't happy with me."

"Mares' nests," Crooked Bill protested. "I tell you I know women. They may hoot for years at a masterful man, but they'll end up by marrying him and adoring him until death do them part. However, why cross the bridge until you

At Last "Texas Steer" Gets Going

Here is the "Texas Steer," Commodore Hatfield's boat, docked up at Trinidad, Texas, after finishing the second leg of its journey from Fort Worth to the Century of Progress at Chicago by water. The Commodore established an all-time "long-time" record from Fort Worth to Dallas, taking about three weeks, but has a motor installed in the boat now and expects to make Chicago by October 20. A huge crowd of people from Athens, Malakoff, Trinidad and Kerens welcomed him as the above picture was taken.

come to it? Go through with my little plan and then stand by to see how the cat jumps."

"Well, it cannot hurt to try the thing out, Mr. Latham. If there's any back-fire later, you'll be the one to get scorched for deceiving folks who trust you."

"Spoken like a man," said Crooked Bill.

Miss Duncan Relates Experience at Fair

In assembly Thursday morning, Oct. 12, Miss Duncan related her experiences at the World's Fair last summer. Miss Duncan opened her talk by stating that the entire 424 acres of the fair grounds, which extended three miles along the lake shore line, was only the mud that had been taken from the bottom of Lake Michigan.

The first feature Miss Duncan described, and which seemed to her to be the most important, was the Hall of Science. This building was the key to the fair because achievements of science constitute the main theme of the fair. She told of the different kinds of materials used in the construction of the buildings and the new models of buildings, and also the different colors used in them. An interesting account was given covering the lighting features of the grounds; different colors of lights, the composition of the light tubes, and the gasses used in the making of these different compositions.

Miss Duncan also had the privilege of seeing the trunk of a rubber tree from Liberia Africa and the rubber in sap form as it was collected from the tree every other day. It takes one rubber tree three years to produce enough rubber for one tire, which averages about three pounds every year.

The drilling of an oil well, the years growth of a twig in only 75 seconds, the transparent man, which showed the internal view of the human being, the Clock of the Ages, which showed the different ages in the earth formation—these were some of the interesting features Miss Duncan told about.

To illustrate her speech Miss Duncan showed several pamphlets and picture cards which she later placed in the library for the students to read.

CHATTERING ANNIE

Well, folks, as I promised, here I am back this week with the real low-down on this bunch around here.

Everyone knows all about the ball game between Sonora and Eldorado. You can't tell me the NRA isn't going over in this section of the country. Even the Eldorado football club put on an extra man Saturday. That might be acting loyally to President Roosevelt, but it was very unfair to our hard working team.

That was a very good game, and never before in my life have I seen

Eldorado Defeats

Sonora Bronchos

The Sonora football fans were treated to a real brand of football here Saturday, when the Sonora Bronchos were defeated by the highly touted Eldorado team in a hard and desperate fight, the first on the home gridiron. The score was 38 to 0.

The members of the local team fought a losing fight, gamely. At no time did they admit defeat or give up the battle. All of the boys on the Sonora team seemed to have improved since the game with Rocksprings.

W. B. Brantley showed nice playing by catching several passes and running for neat gains. Ernest Smith made several good tackles, while Herbert Fields was forced to stand an unusual amount of tackling and did some commendable playing. The smaller boys on the team showed co-operation in the fight.

The Eldorado team might have outweighed the Sonora boys, but they certainly could not show any more fight than the Bronchos.

Tomorrow the boys are to journey to Menard, but they are going with the same old spirit that they showed in the Eldorado game.

a bunch of boys fight any harder. Here's to you, boys! Maybe things will come our way in the next game.

The pep squad was right there behind the Bronchos, too. They certainly did their part, and put on their drill splendidly. I thought once or twice the Eldorado pep squad would run out of pep, but they kept plenty of it going during the entire game. They also put on a pretty drill.

If don't watch those Colts they are going to slip up on some of their opponents and kick a score away up there. They've had a little hard luck in their first two games, but watch out for that third one!

Everyone is asking around here, "When are the freshmen going to be initiated? I think they have already had enough, but as the old saying goes, the final blow is to come sooner or later.

Miss Duncan gave an interesting account of the World's Fair, Thursday in assembly. The student body was spellbound during her talk, as she related many of the happenings around the fair grounds.

The Broncho staff had a very important meeting last week at which time Lavelle Meckell was promoted to managing editor. Lavelle is certainly doing his part this year toward putting the school paper over, and as you all know that's a big responsibility. Herbert resigned as sports editor during the football season, because he says it's kind of a hard proposition to play ball and take notes at the same time. Mr. George Baker, editor of The Devil's River News, is coming to make a talk to the Broncho staff Wednesday and give us all some good pointers on news writing.

Until next time—adios.

The Broncho Staff

Meets Thursday

Thursday the members of the staff met to discuss the election of some new officers and also to learn more about writing reports for The Broncho. Editor-in-chief Sara Ory, and managing editor, Lavelle Meckel presented some valuable points concerning headline and story writing, and brought to the group the helpful criticisms they had received from Mr. Baker.

The following new officers were elected to the staff: Managing editor, Lavelle Meckel; grammar school news editor, Dorothy Brantley.

PEP SQUADS PERFORM DRILLS AT GAME SAT.

Between halves at last Saturday's football game with Eldorado, both the Eldorado and the Sonora pep squads performed very pretty drills.

The Eldorado pep squad were dressed in orange and black and the boys of the squad were dressed in the same colors. The group formed an "S" and gave some yells.

The Sonora pep squad gave one of the most colorful drills that has ever been given on the Sonora field. The bright red of the new uniforms and the even tempo of the snare drums increased the effectiveness of the drill. "S H S" were the letters formed in the stunt.

The girls are continuing earnest practice and intend to stay right behind the Bronchos.

STRIKE UP THE BAND

MILE after mile of hot white road, and the beat of army boots in a haze of dust. No shade. No rest. A nightmare of thirst and weariness . . . And then, somewhere down the column, a band strikes up. A thousand throats pick up the refrain. Heads come up. Tired backs straighten. . . . The battalion marches like itself again!

Down on the levee at New Orleans . . . on the tow-paths of the distant Volga . . . on the decks of departing liners . . . wherever hearts are heavy or the spirit fails . . . music comes like a ray of sunshine through the gloom. It is the great restorer, the great comforter.

Human beings need music. We need it in our hearts and in our homes. And we need instruments to provide it. Radio . . . talking machine . . . piano . . . it doesn't matter, just so the music is there. With music life becomes brighter, cheerier. With music we can get through a lot of trouble and hard luck.

And music has never been so easy to enjoy as it is right now. Prices on musical instruments are lower today than they have are likely ever to be again.

The same quality radio that would have cost $160 in 1929 is selling today for $125—a decline of 22 per cent! and smaller models of today represent values never dreamed possible a few years ago. The $950 piano of 1929 now costs $600!

The last four years have been particularly hard on the music trades. Many people have had the mistaken idea that music is a luxury, easily to be dispensed with. And that false notion has destroyed almost all the basic value which music and musical instruments normally should have.

This government believes that the laborer is worthy of his hire, and that his hire should yield him at least a decent living. Professional musicians . . . radio and talking machine workers . . . piano makers . . . band instrument craftsmen . . . to say nothing of the manufacturers with their good money invested . . . all have something worth while to offer, and they are entitled to a fair return.

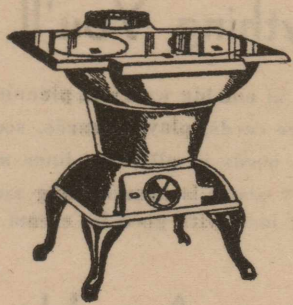

That is what the NRA codes are designed to bring about. The largest item in the cost of a radio is labor cost, and pay rolls are up 62 per cent. Raw materials are up. Cabinet woods have risen 65 per cent. Copper wire is up 45 per cent. Therefore retail prices must go up, too. Musical instruments and music are coming back to somewhere near their true value!

So . . . if your piano is worn out . . . if your radio is old-fashioned and limited in range . . . if your talking machine is a relic, and your records are heirlooms . . . treat yourself to some good music while prices are still down! It's an investment in happiness that you will never regret. Now is the time to buy!

The appointment of W. B. (Dutch) Wardlaw to a vacancy in the Texas Sanitary Livestock Commission is being urged by his friends in this section. Mr. Wardlaw is head of the Producers' Wool & Mohair Company of Del Rio and is also in the banking and ranch business.

BANKERS' NEW CODE

EFFECTIVE MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1933

Conforming to the Bankers' Code under the NRA we announce installation of service charges on unprofitable accounts and on some of the services rendered gratis in the past. :: It is our desire to see bank balances increased to necessary requirements so that charges may be avoided and that increased co-operation may result. :: Principal charges in the schedule follow. We believe they will be found just and reasonable in all respects.

Where not more than one check is given during the month, the account will be considered inactive and there will be no charge.

When an account is opened for less than Fifty Dollars a charge of 50c will then be made. Future charges will depend upon whether it be active or otherwise.

All active accounts below Fifty Dollars will be charged 50c per month plus 3c for each check above the minimum allowed.

Accounts maintained at all times at Fifty Dollars are not subject to service charge unless more than five checks are given. For each check above the five allowed 3c will be charged.

Accounts above Fifty Dollars are allowed one additional check free for each additional Ten Dollars balance maintained. Thus a balance maintained at Sixty Dollars will be allowed six free checks, etc.

Large active business accounts will be analyzed separately.

Accounts of churches, lodges, charitable organizations, etc., are free.

"Hot checks" will be charged twenty-five cents penalty for each presentation. The drawer of the check to pay the charges.

The schedule has had years of study and experience and your co-operation to the benefit of customer and bank is invited.
