MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

BY H. N. F.

Porto Ricans are hot on the trail of Governor E. Mont Reily. They say he is tyranical, dictatorial, unfit, unsuitable, undemocratic, un-American and should be called to the States by President Harding. They say that his public documents are drivel, his speeches insulting and many of his appointees incompetent. Many years ago E. Mont Reily was a citizen of Texas. Fort Worth was his habitat. He was a real estate dealer. He was glad that his Redeamer liveth and that he was a voting member of the Grand Old Party. He knelt at the shrine of the elephant, he voted the straight Republican ticket when he could find a ticket to vote and there was nothing really offensive about E. Mont in the good old days. He deserted Texas for Missouri. He pitched his tent at Kansas City. He played politics and he played with the gang. His enemies said he was a pawnbroker; his friends said that he was a good fellow and a man who "would do to tie too." Came the Republican deluge and Warren G. Harding was swept into high office and power. E. Mont had been the original Harding man in the sovereign States of Missouri and Oklahoma and Texas. He asked for his reward. He was made governor of Porto Rico and the salary attached is $10,000 a year. Kansas City has a newspaper that is independent Republican in its politics, very influential and widely read. The late Theodore Roosevelt was its ideal leader and the Roosveltian policy its gospel. This is what the Star says editorially of the guileless and generous E. Mont: "E. Mont Reily was sent to Porto Rico because President Harding believed he was politically indebted to Mr. Reily and desired to show his appreciation. Unfortunately Mr. Reily was not qualified for the position of governor of an important colonial possession. This fact, which might have been inferred from his record, has become glaringly apparent in the resentment he has stirred up in Porto Rico. A colony which never before had given the United States the slightest trouble, is now seething with discontent. Very likely the President feels a strong disposition to stand by his appointee. But he cannot continue to stand by Mr. Reily without doing an injustice to the people of Porto Rico and laying up for the administration further trouble there." There are political bosses; there are newspaper bosses. Now the Star is a newspaper boss. The Star doesn't "fawncy" the E. Mont Reily type of politicians or place hunters or place holders. Of course E. Mont doesn't shine as the governor of a former Spanish island possession. Educated Porto Ricans are polished, polite, perfunctory and punctilllous. They are high-bred, they are high-spirited and they love music and poetry. E. Mont would have made a magnificient Indian agent in the good old days, or a consular agent in 'furrin" parts, or something of the sort. Regardless of all this E. Mont is a standpatter; his friends are for him and his enemies are against him. He was the original Harding man for three states and it is a hundred to one shot that he will hold the job until March 4, 1924.

There is no place like America. There are no people like the American people. They exceed all others in the use of modern appliances. Forty-five years after the invention of the telephone, according to a telephone official, Europe has only one telephone to each 100 of the population while the United States, having one-sixteenth of the population of the world, has two-thirds of all the telephones on the world. HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 4.—Charles Evans Hughes, American secretary of state, and Mrs. Hughes sailed today for New York on the steamship Fort Hamilton.

STORY OF EGG OR WHY YANK LEFT MEXICO

"Mexico Ain't So Bad If You Have a Cook But no Country to Take Wife to," Says the Yank.

BY HERBERT COREY
ARTICLE No. 10

SAN BLAS, Sinaola, Mexico, March 4.—The small red headed American said it was the hen which really brought him to his senses. As soon as he seen the dern hen layin' that egg away this wasn't no country to bring his wife to. His wife, he said, was better folks than he was. He had never been raised, particularly, though nobody never had no better mother than he had. But when he was a kid he run off and joined the army and you know what that does to a man.

"I got so I knowed a lot more about the values of three little deuces after ten o'clock than I did about the refining influences of a home," he said, "and you can lay a bet on that."

Waits Till the Pots Get Good

He never paid no attention to poker for the first two or three days after pay day, he said. He just let the other men in the company play their fool heads off. It saved him a lot of time and annoyance. By that time all the money in the company would be concentrated in two or three hands, and he knew right where it was, and he could get it in a night or two's playing. Once, he said, he understood to play in another company, but there was a guy there that was a slicker. He could slip 'em off the bottom so's you couldn't see him do it, even if you was watching him. But he knew what was happening, and after he had lost a little he just pulled out and sat around until the game ended. Then he says to this guy:

"Pay me," he says, "I'm wise."

The other guy, the red-headed one said, didn't want to do it, but he did. He couldn't afford to have that game spoiled. So then he kept on playing in his own company and when he was mustered out he had $30,000—and him only a kid. He picked up a nigger that was sure a wonder on playing cards and they cleaned 'em up at Mexicali. The nigger, he said, used to wear an extra pair of glasses when he played cards. He could see the marks in the corners of the cards clean across the table. Then he got married.

Paid Up Not Pampered

"So then I come down here," he said. "I bought my wife a Ford to play with up home and I thought I'd see how they're breakin' down in this country."

He had not invested any money, he said. He got a job of work first, to see how things look down here. The guy he was working for was all right, but he didn't aim to furnish his men any luxuries. They could live where they wanted to. He didn't furnish 'em any clubhouse or Saturday night dances to keep 'em contented. Not him. They got their pay regular on Saturday night and that was all. At first the grub knocked out his stomach, he said. He could stand an army cook, but these Mexican cooks put onions and peppers and garlic and stove varnish and anything else they happened to have about the place in their food. So he and another guy, they found an old woman and taught her to cook.

Had Been Used to Better Things

She had been a rich woman until the revolution came, said the red-headed one. Never had touched a pan or a stove. All she had had to do was to clap her hands, and a mozo came arunning and she told him. But they burned down her house and killed off her folks in the revolution, and when the Americans found her she didn't have nothing. No food, even. She was a nice old woman, too. The nicest, softest voice you ever heard, and awful glad to do something for those Americans who had rescued her. She'd just work her head off for 'em, said the red head. But she didn't know nothing.

"But I taught her how to make flapjacks and hot biscuits," he said, "and how to keep the onions and garlic and grease out of things. So we were doing pretty well. Of course, the house where we're living is pretty queer. There ain't any glass in it, and it has a mud floor and the door is never shut, and them folks that own it have a pet deer and a pet snake, and a pet wildcat and a lot of chickens and a lot of pigs, of course, running all over the place. They use the house as much as the folks do that own it."

He was sort of getting along, though, he said. The country is sure a wonderful one. You can raise anything you want to and the climate is perfect, and he never seen any poisonous snakes, or scorpions or nothing.

But his wife got lonesome and said that either he was coming back to her or she was coming down to him. He'd been sort of stalling, he said, not wishing to make up his mind one way or another until that morning. Then he got a letter from his wife, saying that she wanted to hear from him by wire, and if she didn't she was coming down to join him. And that day the hen laid another egg in his bed and he made up his mind in a hurry.

"If I had a nice house to take my wife to it would be all right," he said. "But to bring her down here to an Indian joint like I'm living in, with snakes and hens and pigs running all over it, that wouldn't do. So I'm going back to Los Angeles and get her and we'll go somewhere else."

SOUTHWESTERN BRANCH HOUSE PLACED HERE

Plan Permanent Headquarters, With Factory Branch Later; Obtain J. M. McFall Warehouse.

Location of a sales branch of the E. W. A. Rolles Co. of Chicago, one of the largest manufacturers of school desks, opera chairs and church pews in the United States—a branch which will be eventually expanded into a factory branch and manufacture much of their product here, was announced by Hubert Harrison, general manager of the Chamber of Commerce, following the signing of a five year lease by the company for the J. M. McFall warehouse on Barwise street. The branch from the start will carry the largest stock of its kind in Texas, and will mean the removal of a number of families to Wichita Falls.

The location of this branch here was secured after several months work in this connection, and came as a result of surveys made clearly establishing Wichita Falls advantage over competitive cities in location with regard to markets and advantageous freight rates. Wichita Falls' nearest competitor in this proposition was Fort Worth.

The local Chamber of Commerce was first apprised of the intention of the company to make a move nearly a year ago through J. D. Purnell, who is a personal friend of the Texas manager, W. G. Smith. The deal for the location, tentatively cleared up a recent trip here when Mr. Smith was accompanied by a representative from the Chicago headquarters has just been approved from Chicago.

Mr. McFall will make extensive changes in the warehouse to suit it for the purpose of the new tenants. While the lease is a five year lease, the location in Wichita Falls is intended by the house as a permanent location.

STRIKE EFFECT IS BEING FELT IN MEXICO CITY

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—The seriousness of the electricians' strike, which has tied up street car service, shut off power in various sections of the city and today put Mexico City on a meagre water rations, has now become apparent, and the newspapers are demanding that the government take energetic steps to settle the controversy before the strike spreads.

Although the striking members of the electric union have not been able to bring total darkness to Mexico City, because soldier guards have been stationed at several auxiliary plants, business affairs have suffered severely during the last few days on account of the uncertain situation.

Fear of disorders has caused the government to provide several auxiliary plants with machine gun detachments. No casualties through the strike had been reported up to late today.

MAN WRITES HE KILLED TAYLOR, SAYS OFFICIAL

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 4.—Captain David Adams, of the Los Angeles police department, announced today he had received a letter from a man whose name he refused to disclose, stating that the writer had killed William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director, whose recent death has baffled investigators.

The letter, Captain Adams said, was written by an educated man and was sent from a city in Connecticut, the name of which he declined to disclose and made circumstantial statements that fitted in precisely with facts developed by the police.

Captain Adams said he would not say definitely that the letter was a genuine confession, but he would say that the department gave much credence to it and was making a thorough and quick investigation.

The letter expressed regret that he would not collect the reward offered for the arrest of the slayer, but announced that the writer was leaving the country immediately. It gave revenge for an old feud as the motive for the shooting of Taylor, and was signed by a name that had not been connected with the previous investigation.

Captain Adams declined to give out any further details and said he would not show the letter at present.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK IS FELT IN NICARAGUA

By Associated Press.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, March 4.—A strong earthquake shock lasting about 40 seconds was felt here at 1:50 o'clock, New York time, this morning, the culmination of slight tremors which began at midnight. The shocks are attributed to the activity of the volcano Ometepe, near Lake Nicaragua.

TREMENDOUS CROWDS VIEW WONDERFUL NEW AUTOMOBILES AT THIRD ANNUAL EXHIBIT

This is the auto age. This is the age of rapid transit. This is the age of fast moving people and fast moving industries. This is the age of progressive men and of progressive thought. This is the age of which and in which America is the leader of the world. This is the age in which the dollar is a fast traveler and the men who dare to do things are the trade winners in all fields of activities.

Wichita Falls has an automobile show. This show is given under the auspices of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers association. This show was inaugurated at noon Saturday. It was a surprise to the exhibitors, the managers, the salesmen and the visitors.

Its opening was most auspicious. When the doors swung inward the crowd gathered. There was a crush during the afternoon hours. There was a crush at night until the closing hour came. There were many reminders of the days of high peak prosperity when the money was easy and the going was good.

President Booth, Show Manager Dodson, Secretary Nolen, Assistant Manager Quiesser and all the others who are assistant managers, or chairmen or vice chairmen of the various committees expressed supreme gratification at the very large attendance, the interest manifested, the exhibits of the models of 1922 and the very elaborate arrangements which had been made by the managers for the reception of the public and the informative education free to all prospective buyers.

Tasty are the decorations and inviting the whole interior of the big show room where the motor cars are displayed. Incidentally, the crush of visitors reminded a representative of the Record News that an auditorium is a demand of the hour. The show room is 150 by 50 and the exhibition is worthy the attention or rather the presence of all the people of Wichita Falls and surrounding country.

Captain W. S. Langford, in order that the association should have a suitable place and setting for its third annual show gave this floor space, 150x50, and a building 50 by 50 adjoining for the dealers in auto accessories. From the large room he moved all his second hand cars in order that the space should be given all dealers, and Frank Quisser, chairman of the decorations committee as well as all the members of the association, worked until a late hour Saturday morning to get the place in order to receive the public.

Then the exhibitors were busy Saturday morning placing their prize cars in the space allotted, and at the noon hour there was an automobile show ready that has never been surpassed in cities of twice the population of Wichita Falls.

There were many visitors from the oil fields. There were many townsmen from Burkburnett, Electra, Iowa Park, Vernon, Henrietta, Petrolia and other places in the territory contiguous to the City that Faith Built.

It was a most auspicious opening day, and those who are directing it and all the trade generally for that matter, were in the best of good humor last night at the success which had attended their efforts, the number of prospects each individual had listed and the promise of a large daily attendance on March 6th, 7th and 8th, which they expect will be three red letter days in the annals of automobile history and the industry in Wichita Falls.

A jazz band furnished the music and a Willys-Knight talking car furnished one of the sensations and there were many surprises in new models and many strangers were introduced to the lovers of pleasure cars as it was their first appearance in this City.

President Booth requested the Record News to remind the public that the exhibitors of auto parts or accessories in the large room adjoining the main building is one of the best offerings ever shown in the southwest, and to urge the people not to overlook this splendid feature of the third annual automobile show given the people by the dealers of Wichita Falls. There will be added features at this show room Monday, and every day until the show closes, and the jazz band will be there to make lively music for the people.

Remember the dates—March 6, 7 and 8. Remember the place—corner of Sixth and Indiana.

FIUME IS NOW CONTROLLED BY REVOLT FORCES

By Associated Press.

ROME, March 4.—Italian fascisti and former D'Annunzio legionnaires have installed a government at Fiume after their coup of yesterday when they forced President Zanella to relinquish office. The new provisional government is composed of former members of D'Annunzio's national council.

Italian carabineers are doing police service in the city, while battalions of other troops are massed within the confines of Fiume in readiness to check further outbreaks. The cruiser Mirabello, which formed a part of the fleet of D'Annunzio when he held the city, has been ordered to Fiume.

Zanella, who was chosen to head the Fiume government by an overwhelming majority in the elections last April, refuses to leave his native city.

Premier Facta and Foreign Minister Schanzer met this afternoon to discuss the question of how to oust the insurgents. The government this evening sent Commedatore Sastelli to Fiume as a special commissioner with instructions to try to straighten out the situation. After consulting members of the government departments tonight, Captain Mostwenturi and Major Giuriati, respectively, minister of war and chief of cabinet in the D'Annunzio ministry, left Rome this evening for Fiume.

PROMOTION OF PECK FINALLY IS CONFIRMED

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Promotion of Maj. Robert G. Peck to be a lieutenant colonel, bitterly opposed because of reported statements disparaging the Kansas and Missouri national guard contingents of the A. E. F., finally was confirmed today by the senate after pleas by senators that he had been punished sufficiently by war department rebukes and by rejection of his first promotion last year.

NEFF TO ADDRESS FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK SHOW

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, March 4.—Governor Neff has accepted an invitation to speak at the annual convention of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association in Fort Worth on March 16.

SPEEDY ACTION IS PROMISED ON PACIFIC TREATY

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The four power Pacific treaty will be taken up Monday by the senate and discussed virtually every day thereafter until a vote on ratification is obtained under a program said to have been agreed to at a conference today between President Harding and Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, republican leader.

Administration spokesmen, it was announced, will open the fight for ratification of the treaties, with Senator New of Indiana, a close personal friend of the president and a republican member of the foreign relations committee, speaking Monday and Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, another republican committeeman and confident of the president, on Tuesday.

Senator Lodge, it was said, also will speak soon and present some of the arguments of the administration in support of ratification.

FORT WORTH YOUTH KILLED WHEN CHILD SHOOTS SHOT GUN

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Mar. 4.—Albert C. Houston, 17, this city, was instantly killed at 8 o'clock this morning when a shotgun in the hands of his five-year-old cousin accidentally was discharged.

The accident occurred at Kellar when young Houston walked into a room where his cousin was playing with the gun, which he had left in the room a few minutes earlier, while preparing to go hunting.

GOVERNOR NEFF IS THREATENED WITH TAR AND FEATHERS

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, March 4.—A letter was received by Governor Neff today threatening him with a coat of tar and feathers if he ever visited Mexia again. The letter was dated at Fort Worth and signed "The Gun Club."

Governor Neff paid little attention to the letter and said in answer to a question that he would go anywhere his duties carried him.

NEFF INVITES LANDIS TO INCLUDE TEXAS IN TOUR

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, March 4.—An invitation to visit Texas while on his tour of major league baseball teams training in the south was today extended to Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, national commissioner, by Governor Neff.

FARMERS SHOW INTEREST IN FINE CATTLE

Pure Bred Stock Gaining Ground in Section; George Keith of Wichita Falls Big Prize Winner.

Special to the Record News

ARCHER CITY, March 4.—Attendance, interest, sales and every other feature of the Second Annual Archer County Hereford Breeders' association show, closing a two-day session today, indicate a rapidly growing interest among farmers throughout the whole section of the importance and possibilities of the raising of high grade livestock. The sales, in addition to bringing good prices and drawing lively competition among the purchasers, showed farmers and stock men who have never before "gone in" for pure bred livestock buying to make a start with pure bred stuff or to raise the standard of their present herds. Sales, which were the feature of the show and of the closing day saw 22 head of stock selling at auction, with an average price paid of $104 per head—bulls averaging $120 and cows $90, a good range of prices, it is considered, as none of the prize stock was offered.

The record sale was that of a cow for $170, R. H. Busby of Megargel, one of the leading pure bred stockmen in Northwest Texas, being the seller, and P. P. Wilson of Archer City the purchaser. A yearling bull, which went to J. L. O'Keefe of Archer City was another feature of the sale, R. H. Busby again being the seller.

Success of this year's show assures not only the future existence of the show here but assures the solid foundation and future growth of the pure bred livestock industry in this particular section. A considerable part of the cattle which was exhibited at this show was shipped out immediately to compete in the forthcoming show at Fort Worth.

R. H. Busby of Megargel, is president of the show; W. F. Hutcheson of Archer City is vice president and Coff G. Conner of Archer City, secretary.

A Wichita Falls exhibitor, George Keith, although not able to exhibit his best cow, took a goodly share of honors in the show, including the herd prize of one bull, one cow, one heifer and one calf. W. F. Hutchinson of near Archer City was second in this event, and Zack G. Scott of Archer City, third.

Yearling bulls—Rathburns Caldo, owned by Z. G. Scott of Windthorst, first; Lee Beau, owned by J. F. Meuer of Windthorst, second; Rupert's Best Boy, owned by R. E. Andrews of Archer, third.

Bull calves—Beau Mate, owned by W. T. Hutchinson, first; Druid of Archer, owned by C. G. Scott, second; Joy Graham II, owned by W. T. Hutchinson, third.

Aged cows—Belle Repeater, owned by George Keith, first; Lady Archer, owned by W. T. Hutchinson, second; Generous Hilda, owned by W. C. Young, third.

Heifer calves—Verna H. II, owned by George Keith, first; Emmaline and Miss Fay, both owned by W. T. Hutchinson, second and third.

FIVE AMARILLO MEN CHARGED WITH FLOGGING

By Associated Press.

AMARILLO, March 4.—Five Amarillo barbers today were granted bonds for $1,000 each on charges of assault in connection with the whitecapping of J. M. Dendy, proprietor of a local barber college, near here last November.

According to the evidence at a hearing held here the day after the white capping is said to have occurred, Dendy was induced to get in a car with two women, one of whom later left the party, and was driven several miles south of Amarillo into Randall county where he was seized, blindfolded, his hair disfigured and he was whipped with a razor strap. The arrests of the local men followed and they were bound over to await action of the Randall county grand jury. The indictments were returned at Canyon yesterday.

SNOW UPSETS THE CAR AND PLANS OF WHISKEY HAULERS

By Associated Press.

FLOYDADA, Texas, March 4.—Snow has joined the dry forces. A drift of it caused the capture of J. A. McCauley and Frank Yohen, arrested on charges of illegally transporting liquor.

These two were en route to Vernon from Littlefield, their professed home, they told Sheriff Grigsby of Floyd county. Their automobile hit a snow drift and emptied them and a jug or other container of what officers' noses interpreted to be booze.

DEATH LIST OF CRASH IN OHIO MOUNTS TO 15

Prosecutions May Result from Inquest; Watchman Testifies Driver of Bus Ignored Warnings.

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Ohio., March 4.—The death list in the crash at Painesville, Ohio, last night between a New York central express train and an automobile bus, mounted to 15 late today when Mrs. Martin Steinbeck of Fairport, who sustained a fractured skull in the collision died in the Painesville hospital.

"Of the four remaining injured, one is expected to die, Nick Nenno, of Fairport, sustaining a fractured skull.

At Coroner M. H. Bradley's inquest held this afternoon "to fix the responsibility for the tragedy," A. W. Barnes, New York Central railroad watchman at the crossing, testified the motor bus which was struck by the flyer, went on the tracks oblivious to the signal of a white lantern warning swung directly in its path for a full minute by him. Barnes testified that he saw the train's headlight, when it was fully four miles away. He saw the bus coming down the street about two minutes before the crash, he said.

In his opinion, Barnes testified, the train was going at almost 40 miles an hour at the time. Three other railroad men were on the stand at the coroner's inquest today. They are Engineer F. S. Fernandes and Fireman Milo Cornell of the express train and W. H. Gray, watchman at the State street gate crossing, a block away from the scene of the disaster.

Criminal prosecutions may result from Coroner Bradley's inquest, County Prosecutor Ostrander of Lake county, declared late today, when the inquest adjourned until Tuesday to wait for the testimony from two survivors of the crash now in the hospital, Andrew Adams, driver of the bus, and Charles F. Sullivan, both of Painesville.

The Ohio public utilities commission will conduct an investgaton of the collision at a meeting in Painesville, Monday, railroad compay officials announced late today.

GREAT BRITAIN'S POLITICAL SEA STILL MUDDLED

By Associated Press.

LONDON, March 4.—Outwardly the political crisis is unchanged. Winston Churchill's speech at Oxford yesterday, like the speeches of Austen Chamberlain and Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, was chiefly remarkable for its omission of any direct reference to Sir George Younger, leader of the conservative secessionists, and apparently there is no intention among the premier's conservative colleagues to emulate Lord Kirkenhead in reading a public lesson to the offending conservative organizer.

Mr. Churchill's speech at Loughborough today, so far as may be supposed to reflect the premier's mind, clearly looked to the formation of a new national party out of the present coalition, whenever a political battle is joined, but when this may be he gave not the slightest indication.

AUSTIN CITIZENS TO PLAN DRIVE ON THE BOOTLEGGERS

AUSTIN, Mar. 4.—A meeting of Austin citizens will be held in the senate chamber at the capitol next Tuesday night for the purpose of discussing plans for ridding Austin and Travis county of bootleggers, it was announced here today when a delegation of local citizens called on the board of control to obtain use of the senate chamber.

The citizens of Austin and Travis county will be invited to attend the meeting and suggest any plans for ridding the county and city of bootleggers, Dr. J. E. Howse, a member of the delegation, said.

WANT FILM ACTRESS TO STOP PUFFING PILLS

TOPEKA, Kan., March 4.—Request that cigarette smoking by women be eliminated from motion pictures was forwarded today to Will H. Hays, new national motion picture arbitrator by the eastern Kansas section of the W. C. T. U.

HUBERT WORK IS SWORN IN TO SUCCEED HAYS

New Postmaster General Highly Praises Predecessor Who Leave Cabinet After Year's Service.

Retiring Postmaster General Will Assume New Duties With Motion Picture Industry Monday.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Dr. Hubert Work took the oath of office today as postmaster general succeeding Will H. Hays, who has been a member of the cabinet for one year to the day.

Dr. Work, whose home state is Colorado, had been first assistant postmaster general under Mr. Hays. In a statement addressed to the personnel of the postal service the new cabinet official said Mr. Hays had "set up new ideals for a postal service" adding that such ideals had been approved by the American people. Dr. Work said it was his purpose "to give substitute to his vision."

"The postmaster general has tendered his resignation to the president and will retire as head of the postoffice department.

"The impression his personality has made on the morals of the postal employes has been unprecedented and it has been altogether for good.

"Humanizing the service was merely the forcing of a wish and the kindliness which is in all of us to some degree, responded to it. It was the impulse of a kind heart, an expression of the intangible thing called the common touch which makes the world akin and "the letter is now put in the box and not thrown at the door."

"He will travel far but will not become a wanderer. He may live among the pictures but he will not become confused for nature has imbibed him with the intutition of a woman, the initiative of the inventor, the heart of a wholesome boy and the judgment of a man—traits that have endeared him to all of us who served under him. It is true now as when it was written that "where there is no vision the people perish." Mr. Hays set up new ideals for a postal service. They have been approved by the American people, and as his successor in office it will be my purpose to give substance to his vision."

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Will H. Hays, who retired today as postmaster general after a year's service in that capacity, called by the White House late today to bid President Harding goodbye.

He will leave tomorrow for New York where on Monday he will assume the directorship of the National Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

Mr. Hays said that after spending a few days in New York he would go to his home at Sullivan, Ind., for a short visit and then return to New York and resume his new duties. He said that he had made no plans to visit Hollywood, the motion picture suburb of Los Angeles.

The new motion picture head declared that he intended to study the situation and do those things which are necessary to place the production of motion pictures on the highest possible plane.

"It is a tremendous undertaking and I approach it with much concern," said Mr. Hays, "but with that confidence which springs from an earnest purpose and a strong conviction that we will have the general help of every one in accomplishing what must be recognized as an effort for the good of all."

VICE CLEANUP WILL RESULT FROM FATAL AFFRAY AT ORANGE

By Associated Press.

ORANGE, Texas, March 4.—A thorough cleansing of vice in the oil district in and about Orange will be inaugurated immediately, Sheriff Helton announced tonight, following the death of Ben Clemans, field worker, reported to the police, the result of a gambling row, in which Clemans, according to the officers, was clubbed to death.

The sheriff locked the doors of the Petroleum club where the assault occurred, he said, tonight. Eight men were arrested on suspicion.

WOMAN DIES NEAR HUT SHE WAS BORN IN 119 YEARS AGO

By Associated Press.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., March 4.—Mrs. John Whalen, a member of the Chippewa tribe, whose Indian name was Wahsaya Ozebayanqua, died in her 119th year at her home on Sugar Island, near here, today, within a few yards of the rude hut in which she was born in 1803. Mrs. Whalen had never been more than 100 miles from home, although she was physically active, until four or five years ago. An old clay pipe was her constant companion.

Organization's Program Consists of Providing Veterans With Work and Adjusted Compensation.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—A campaign by the American Legion to obtain employment for 700,000 veterans of the world war now idle and in need, has been undertaken by the legion, Colonel Hanford MacNider, national commander, announced tonight in an address at a dinner given in his honor by the Illinois department of the legion.

National, business, civic, fraternal and welfare organizations have been asked to co-operate and a survey of conditions in each locality will be completed before March 20 which will be known as American Legion employment day, Colonel MacNider announced.

"Properly supported this concerted, localized national effort will result in the relief of 500,000 men in thirty days", Colonel MacNider asserted. President Harding has been requested to set aside the day by proclamation to obtain relief for unemployed veterans and governors, mayors of cities and local leaders have been asked to co-operate, it was announced.

"Resplendent dignitaries, great addresses and solemn music paid homage to the unknown soldier last November," Colonel MacNider said. "This unknown soldier even now is passing your door. Your faith and appreciation will inspire him. Give him work."

The legion's real influence for good he said, is in the individual post. "The legion," he said, "is not in politics but we are going to see that the country stays the way we fought for it to be—American."

The legion's program, Colonel MacNider said, consisted in getting relief for disabled soldiers, in securing adjusted compensation for those who fought in the world war and in finding employment for the service men.

Discussing the soldiers' bonus legislation, Colonel MacNider said:

"Those opposed to adjusted compensation charge that we are putting a price on our patriotism. This is untrue. We do not believe, however, that a man should be penalized for offering his services to his country."

Opposition, he said, came through ignorance of the provisions of the proposed legislation. The cash featureof the bonus bill was a child of congress and not of the legion, he asserted.

"I think I can assure you that the adjusted compensation legislation will pass congress," he said.

"It is the legion's duty," he continued, "to see that service men get a chance to live respecting lives in thenation they helped to save.

"It should be our endeavor to see it grow so big, so fine, so strong and stay so clean and American that when we ask for anything the people will have the confidence to say, 'If the legion is for it, we are for it.'"

Celebrities of New York State Are Burlesqued

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Mar. 4.—Governor Miller, Mayor Hylan and politicians of city and state saw themselves burlesqued and their works and pomps satirized tonight at the annual dinner of the association of city hall reporters. In a five-act comedy New York City seceded from state and nation and was towed out beyond the three-mile limit, where Manhattan was rechristened the "Island of Yap" and "John Faithful Hylan" ruled as "King of the Yaps."

"Comptroller Craig" was given all powers not held by the official bootleggers. The government discussed disarmament with the "open door for William Randolph Hearst and Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall," and the closed door for the "reptile press" and the traction trust.

The "city club sissies" were ordered boiled in a big kettle and "Murphy" was found to have ordered "Al Smith" the former governor, executed "to please Hearst."

Schuyler Meyer, chairman of the executive committee, which investigated the city administration and Samuel Untermeyer, counsel for the Lockwood committee, were dubbed "the mire brothers," and they conducted investigations. A witness asked by "Untermeyer" to tell where ivory was found, replied "in the the board of estimates."

Fun was poked at investigations and fulminations by Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield on such subjects as birth control and history.

"Millionaire back slappers" who sailed down the bay to shake hands with notables arriving from overseas were other targets.

"Doc Copeland" the health commissioner, was boomed as "the greatest publicity bound since old Doc Cook."

"Miller" proclaimed himself ruler of the "vast domain stretching from the rum bound coast of Canada to the garbage kissed shores of Staten Island," but "Hylan" called him a high binder and showed himself innocent of being a hireling of the 'high falutin' interests."

CHURCH RELATIVES REFUSE TO PERMIT AUTOPSY ON BODY

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Mar. 4.—Coroner M. Hoffman of Cook county failed in his efforts today to obtain the permission of relatives of Harvey W. Church, hanged yesterday in the county jail, for an autopsy to determine if drugs had been administered the prisoner during the week that he passed in a comatose condition prior to being taken to the gallows. Church's mother and father objected to allow further investigation into the case.

OUR NATIONAL LEGISLATORS

Senator Hiram Johnson.

Hiram Warren Johnson, California senator, is known for his progressive views and his fiery utterances. As an irreconcilable on the Versailles peace treaty and foreign agreements generally he has been much in the public eye. He was born in Sacramento, Cal., September 2, 1866, and resided there until he moved to San Francisco in 1902. Served two years as governor of this state before entering senate in 1916.

Small Number Of Truants Is Reported Now

Based on the number of truants reported school attendance in this city during the last two weeks has been better than at any time during the school year, according to Juvenile Officer Yates. According to Mr. Yates, he has been compelled to look up only two boys during the last two weeks reported as absence without excuses by their teacher.

"The fact that all are in school has resulted in a minimum of reports of petty thievery," Mr. Yates said. "It bears out my contention that if we can keep everybody of school age at their studies regularly they don't have time to get in other trouble," he declared.

Mr. Yates was appointed juvenile officer in August and since that time has sent 11 boys away to the state training school at Gatesville. For the last two weeks no boys have been confined in the juvenile jail at the courthouse.

EDUCATOR ARRIVES AT HALIFAX, BENT ON GHOST CHASING

By Associated Press.

HALLIFAX, March 4—Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, director of the American Institute for Scientific Research, arrived here from New York today to investigate the widely heralded ghost of Antogonish.

He will go to the supposedly haunted house of Alex MacDonald, near Caledonia Mills, probably tomorrow. MacDonald left the place several months ago, asserting some occult power had started two fires, killed off several head of farm stock and thoroughly frightened his family.

A detective and a newspaper reporter who recently spent a night in the house, reported they had been slapped by an unseen hand for their temerity.

BRITISH SHIP MATE IS CHARGED WITH KILLING CAPTAIN

By Associated Press.

KEY WEST, Fla., March 4.—A preliminary hearing for V. Brecklehurst, of Baltimore, first mate of the British schooner Lewis Brothers, who is charged with the murder of H. Chute, captain of the vessel, will be held here Monday, United States Commissioner Knowles announced today. When the hearing is concluded, the commissioner said he would submit a recommendation to Secretary Hughes at Washington on the request of the British authorities for the extradition of Brackleburst to Nassau for trial.

KAHN SUGGESTS COMMISSION TO ACT ON SHOALS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Proposal that congress create a Muscle Shoals commission to adjust legal difficulties involved in disposition of the government's war-built properties in Alabama, and to direct sale or lease of the projects to private interests, was made today by Chairman Kahn of the house military affairs committee, but failed to receive the support of minority members of the committee, which has pending before it three offers for the properties received by the government.

Representative Fields, of Kentucky, ranking minority committeeman, declared with respect to the Kahn proposal, that congress itself would have to assume responsibility of deciding upon a plan for the development of Muscle Shoals and it was not a question to be solved by any group of cabinet officers as representatives of the executive branch of the government.

In announcing his proposal for the commission in the form of a statement, Chairman Kahn took pains to have it understood that he spoke only for himself acting as an individual rather than in the capacity of committee chairman. He said it was his firm belief based on a three weeks careful investigation of the offers made by Henry Ford, the Alabama Power company and Frederick E. Engstrum of Wilmington, N. C., for the completion and operation, lease and purchase of the shoals projects, that the commission suggested offered the logical and probably the only practical way of reaching a proper decision on the question.

The commission would be composed of representatives of the war, treasury and agricultural departments under Mr. Kahn's scheme and be empowered to straighten out government tangles as to existing contracts and enter into either a sale or a lease or construction arrangements for the future development of Muscle Shoals.

O. B. COLQUITT TAKES HAT OUT OF SENATE RING

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Mar. 4.—O. B. Colquitt, former governor of Texas, today announced his withdrawal as candidate for the United States senate.

"While it has been my purpose from the time I was euchered out of the nomination six years ago, to again become a candidate at this time," he stated, "yet impressions and circumstances which have recently arisen make my candidacy incompatible with the happiness and best interest of myself and family. And nothing short of a conviction that my candidacy was necessary to secure the defeat of plans to subvert the democratic party principles which I have discussed and sanction the violation of constitutional guarantees, by the selection of a man committed to that purpose, would induce me to change the conclusion I have reached not to run."

STAR IN OPERA AT DALLAS IS REALLY FIRED IN HER PART

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Mar. 4.—Miss Ina Bourskaya became a bit fired in her part in "Boris Goudonov," offering of the Russion grand opera company here today.

Scene one, third act, saw a lighted taper upon which the mezzo-soprano dramatically wept, catch fire to the high collar of her white gown. M. Golenko, on stage with the singer, extinguished the blaze putting to rest confused orders in the wings and the anxiety of the audience.

FREE SEED ITEM BLUE PENCILED BY HOUSE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The $300,000 free seed item, carried for years in the agricultural bill has been lopped off by the appropriations committee which will report the department of agriculture measure for next year to the house Monday.

JUDSON OIL MAKES ANOTHER BIG PURCHASE IN SOUTH BURK

The second big purchase of South Burkburnett property and production was announced Saturday, the Judson Oil corporation buying 25 acres from the Laning and Moninger interests for a consideration, one thousand dollars a barrel on the settled production which amounted to 347 barrels. This price, $347,000 is on the basis of $13,880 an acre, the largest per acre price recorded in a sale since the Burkburnett boom days.

There are seven producing wells on this lease, which is on the Judson land, offsetting the Camp lease, which sold earlier in the week to the Judson, for approximately the same amount brought by the Laning and Moninger. There is a 900-foot sand on this lease which is not found on offsetting leases, and in addition the several other sands that have made the South Burkburnett shallow fields famous. There are sands at 200, 400, 600, 800, 1,000 and the regulation Texhoma 1200-foot sand.

There is one 900-foot well on the lease, the others being in the 1,000 and 1,200-foot sands. The 900-foot sand has been encountered in all of the seven producing wells, and good showings in all of the shallower sands, insuring production at these levels, if it is desired to develop them. There is also one gas well on the tract.

Laning and Moninger commenced development of this lease which comprises 65 acres, twelve months ago, the No. 1 being started in March, 1921. Mr. and Mrs. Rex Lansing have been personally in charge of the development. To date, only the west side of the lease, which comprises the 25 acres sold to the Judson, has been developed, and there is 40 acres remaining to be developed. Among these seven wells have been some of the best wells ever completed in the South Burkburnett field. The 900-foot well has been exceptionally good, holding up for months to nearly flush production, and making 50 barrels at the time of the eight-day gauge run, on which the purchase price was based.

Work Halted On Burk Road By Weather

Due to the snow and cold weather no work was done last week on the paving of the Burkburnett road, according to information Saturday from the county engineer's office. With most of the snow melted and milder temperature predicted it is expected that work can be resumed Monday.

The new scale of wages adopted by the county commissioners court recently and which average 15 per cent lower than those paid in the past are now in effect.

DISABLED VETS DEFRAUDED OF COMPENSATION

By Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 4.—Details of an alleged conspiracy by which disabled world war veterans have been defrauded by theft of compensation checks from the veterans' bureau here totalling between $6,000 and $10,000 became known today when federal officials were notified of the arrest of John O. Locke at Cincinnati.

Three other men also have been taken in custody in connection with the alleged conspiracy, it was said.

DOCK WORKER RESCUED BY SEA CAPTAIN'S DOG

BOSTON, Mass., Mar. 4.—A sea captain's dog did a good turn for a landsman last night.

"Buck" Dan, a handyman about the pier, finishing duties late, had started home when he collapsed in the archway of the pier.

"Rover," a St. Bernard owned by the master of the schooner Yankee, found the man, fastened his teeth in his clothing and dragged him to the side of the Provincetown schooner Pilgrim. There he barked, arousing the crew who revived Dan, patted the dog on the head and sent him away with a bone.

BISHOP EDWIN D. MOUZON

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon will be in this city for about two weeks, conducting a revival meeting at the Floral Heights Methodist church. He will arrive on Thursday, March 16. He is not only one of the really great preachers of his own denomination, but is recognized as a national figure. He has travelled extensively over the world, and has preached in many of the great churches in other countries as well as in America. He made a profound impression at the "World's Centenary conference" at Columbus, Ohio, in 1918. He was an outstanding American preacher at the Ecumenical conference of Methodism in London last summer.

He promises a message for all classes in this city. It is predicted that the large auditorium in the new Floral Heights church will be taxed to hold the congregations.

The pastor, Dr. J. H. Groseclose, in speaking of the meetings said: "It is our purpose to make everybody feel at home in this meeting." We are mailing out written invitations to all other churches and pastors and trust they will accept our invitation to make these services theirs.

AN OPEN LETTER

Wichita Falls, March 3, 1922.

Judge J. P. Jones, Commissioners' court, Wichita county; J. M. Isbell, County Engineer:

This open letter is given to the papers of Wichita Falls, so that the tax payers, if they are able to do so, can advise us why you are not buying sand from the Western Sand & Gravel Co. We have made you an offer to sell you sand just as good as any that you are using, and far better than a great deal that you are using, for 10c per ton less than you are now paying, or that much less than you can purchase it for from anyone else.

Our sand has been tested as to quality by the best consulting engineer in the city and has also been tested by the laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin and they have advised us that our product is a most excellent concrete sand.

The tax payers of Wichita county are entitled to the knowledge that you are now paying 10c per ton more for sand than it is necessary for you to pay. They are also entitled to the knowledge that you are purchasing your sand from people near Denison and Alvord while you could purchase the same grade of sand at a lower price from the Western Sand & Gravel company, whose officers, directors and stockholders are tax payers of Wichita county and are entitled to the business on equal basis. The company, to secure this business, has offered to sell you this product at a saving of approximately $1,000.00 per month at the rate you are now buying. Still you fail and refuse to buy anything from us. Is Wichita county so rich that it can afford to send its money to distant parts of the state where it will never be returned? Did you ever stop to reflect what an immense amount of roads could be dragged, chuck holes filled up and needed culverts built with $1,000.00 per month? Do the farmers of Wichita county feel that the dirt roads leading to their farms could not be improved with $1,000.00 per month?

We also want the tax payers to know that we have talked to the county judge, the county commissioners and county engineer, Mr. Isbell and have offered to submit to any reasonable unprejudiced test as to the quality of our products but that you do not wish to submit to anything except Mr. Isbell's opinion as to the quality of our products. We also want the tax payers to know that at one time you did enter on your records an order to buy at least two cars of sand per day from us, but that you turned down every car that we shipped you in spite of the fact that even a man who made no pretense of knowing anything about quality of concrete sand could very readily see that our material was far superior in quality to a large portion of that which you are using every day. We also want them to know that the very sand you turned down was sent to the laboratory of the University of Texas at Austin to be tested and they reported that "We consider this an excellent sand which should make first class concrete." The State Highway Engineer pronounces the sand satisfactory for concrete. The samples sent were not taken by us but by a man selected by Mr. Isbell after he (Mr. Isbell) had turned the car down.

We want the tax payers of this county to know that all the Western Sand & Gravel company is asking for is a square deal and that, in the opinion of the officers and directors of this company, we have not had it up to date.

If you wish to answer this letter through the press so that your constituents will know your side of this controversy, we shall be glad to have you do so, after which we shall publish in the press our correspondence with you and also various other information that we have in our files regarding the materials that you have been using on the roads in Wichita county.

We have tried to handle this matter without any unpleasant publicity but we feel that now patience has ceased to be a virtue and the people of Wichita county are entitled to knowledge of the facts we have in our possession and which we are going to give them from time to time.

Harding Given Appellation of "Conference President" for Way Of Handling Executive Tasks

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Warren G. Harding at noon today completed his first year as president of the United States and when asked for an expression regarding the accomplishments of his administration to date authorized this statement:

"The record of the administration speaks for itself; it would be a poor administration that required the executive to speak for it."

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—If Warren G. Harding should step out of the Presidency today at the end of his first year in the white house he undoubtedly would go down in history as "The Conference President."

Conferences—international, agricultural, industrial and legislative—have been the outstanding features of the first year of President Harding's term. There have been few weeks in Washington since March 4 last when there was not a conference of some sort actually in session or in the making. In the background of them all stood the figure of the President.

President Harding once described himself as a "devout disciple of the conference idea" in the settlement of controversies and disputes—whether they be international, national, municipal or domestic.

Once during the campaign Mr. Harding was speaking to a group of confidants about his chances for election and the prospects of four years in the white house. The passage of time has removed the mantle of confidence that was thrown about what he said that day.

"Don't 'Kid' Myself."

"You know," he remarked, thoughtfully, "I don't 'kid' myself that if elected I will make the best president we ever had. But I pride myself that there is one thing I do as well if not better than most men—I have the faculty of bringing men together; I can reconcile minds that are widely divergent, minds that are perhaps better than my own. And it seems to me that is what we need today—somebody who can bring men together instead of keep them apart."

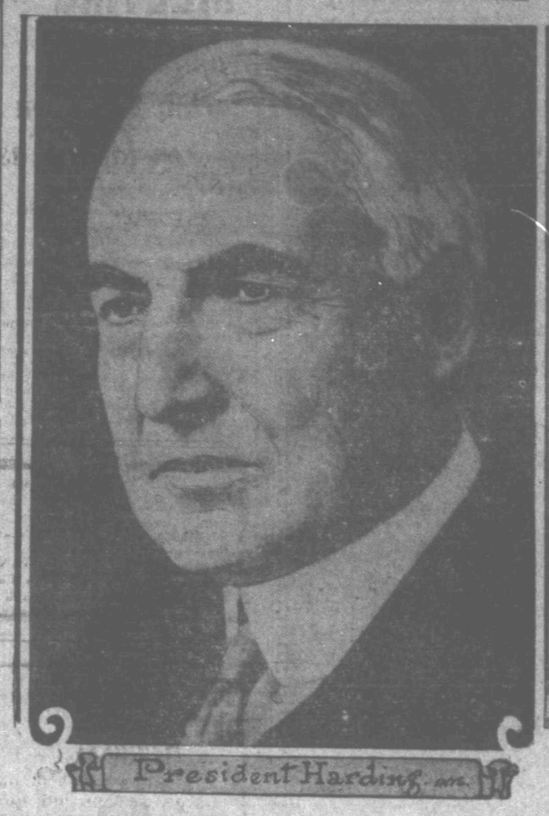

That was in October, 1920. How faithfully President Harding has pursued the "conference idea" in his first year as Chief Executive may be seen in the fact that there have been more conferences in Washington since March 4 last than in any other single year in recent history.

Arms Meet Leads.

At the top of the list, of course, stands the International Armament Conference, which for three months met in a steady succession of daily meetings and at the end produced a dozen treaties and agreements which their proponents claim will firmly establish the peace of the world for the next quarter of a century at least.

But not only in international affairs has the President pursued the conference idea. In two national "crises" in the past year he has summoned to Washington leading figures in the nation's financial and industrial life to try to work out programmes of betterment. These were the "unemployment crisis" and the more recent "agricultural crisis," which is still with us.

Opinions differ radically as to the benefits derived from these two meetings of "best minds," but in any event they both adopted programmes of betterment and adjourned without engaging in any fist fights or damning the government more than usual.

President Harding.

The Dinner Talks.

In his contact with congress and in attempting to keep a guiding hand on the course of legislation, the president's pursuit of the "conference idea has been even more pronounced. A score of times in the past year the party chieftains and the leaders in congress have gathered about the hospitable Harding dinner table in the White House to discuss affairs of state over a good meal. Sometimes democrats have been included, although for the most part the invitation lists have been confined to members of the president's own party.

Are things in a snarl at the capitol? Is the party success being endangered by the stiff opposition of a minority in some committee? If this group or that group kicking over the party traces?

"Invite 'em down to dinner, and we'll talk it over and see what can be done about it."

Shocked 'Em All.

The first legislative conference, called a few weeks after the Hardings took up their residence in Pennsylvania avenue, created somewhat of a stir in Washington. Perhaps there was a precedent for it, but if so it was so old that everyone had forgotten it, and reporters flocked to the executive offices in droves that night, staying on duty till long past midnight. At the end the president himself came, bareheaded, to the big, broad portico and informed the newspaper men what had been discussed and accomplished.

Since that first conference of the legislative heads of the government almost a year ago, there has been a steady succession of such meetings. Some of them have accomplished much; some of them little, but they continue regardless.

Washington was surprised and interested when they started. The White House had been virtually closed for three years—the Wilsons had few dinner guests and did little entertaining except for intimate personal friends. Now the capital has become used to seeing white shirted members of the two houses stroll to the White House for dinner and a chat. It has been one of the greatest steps in the process of "getting back to normalcy."

Department Heads Confer.

"Then there was the inter-departmental conference, in which all the departmental heads and bureau chiefs in Washington took part. It was inaugurated by President Harding and lashed into vitality by the picturesque profanity of "Hell in Maria" Dawes, director of the Budget. It still meets at stated intervals to listen to the explosive advice of General Dawes on matters of economy and co-operation.

The bureau chiefs had seldom met each other before the initial conferance. For years they had pursued their individual ways, each bent on getting all the cupid for his own bureau in the way of money, personnel and supplies. If a bureau needed a thousand brooms the purchasing agent went out and bought them, regardless of the fact that some other department might have ten thousand surplus brooms.

The conference idea, vigorously promulgated by the volcanic Dawes, changed that. They now get together once in a while to talk over their mutual problems.

The outstanding feature of President Harding's first year, from an international standpoint, has been, of course, the Armament conference. Seven treaties and twelve resolutions grew out of that epoch making event, and in them is incorporated nearly all the administration's foreign policy that has thus far been disclosed.

The Treaties

These treaties adjust many of the international questions left pending when the democrats retired a year ago. The far famed Yap dispute is settled, likewise Shantung. The nations of the world have repledged their adherence to the open door in the far east, and they have likewise pledged themselves to act as "moral trustees" for the interests of prostrate Russia. The United States has secured rights in mandated territories denied by the league of nations; the navies of the world have been cut in half, and the expensive business of building fifty million dollar battleships has been stopped.

Next in importance internationally is the conclusion of peace with Germany through the agency of a separate treaty.

Opinions vary as to the outstanding achievement from the domestic standpoint, but probably the consensus of opinion would point to the establishment of a budget system. The first budget has been launched.

Little of Domestic

In matters of domestic legislation not a great deal has been accomplished Permanent taxation and tariff measures that have gone through the legislative hopper at the capitol are those designed to relieve the acute distress of the farmers.

It is against the domestic record of the administration that the democrats are going to center their heaviest fire during the coming congressional campaign. The democrats will charge that the republicans have not reduced taxation nor effected the economies they claim to have effected, and that if any savings are shown they can be ascribed to the natural reaction war days rather than to republican economies.

The campaign promises to be a repetition of that old familiar sight—the republicans "pointing with pride" and the democrats "viewing with alarm."

President Harding rounds out his first year with the original cabinet intact, although the resignation of Will H. Hays as postmaster general becomes effective today. It is regarded as likely, however, that another year will see several cabinet changes.

In the matter of patronage much progress has been made. Republicans are now sitting in most of the appointive offices which a year ago were occupied by democrats.

The entire democratic corps has been shaken up, and there are few holdovers either at home or abroad.

CHALLENGE ACCEPTED BY SWANSON

To The Record News:

Wichita Falls, Feb. 27.—The following should be self explanatory. Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker, City—Dear Dr. Knickerbocker: In Sunday evening sermon you threw a challenge at the bar—jointly and severally, individually and collectively to come to the defense of the charge you make against them, towit: "prostitution of justic, of legal talents" by indulging in technicalities in defense of criminals, and stating that you would maintain positions that an attorney's duty was first to his God and society and then his client, implying that attorneys failed.

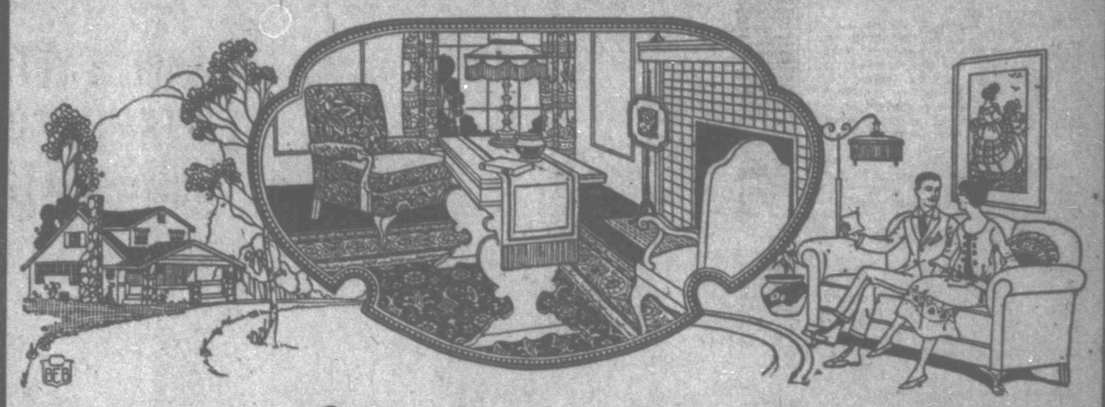

There are different views, and different approaches to many questions. Believing that your efforts has aroused considerable interest in many problems that too frequently get too little attention, and that a discussion of the question involved in your open challenge would be informing and educational, in event no other member of the bar has accepted your challenge or you have no other to accept, I accept challenge made with and in the hope that the discussion will be of considerable enlightenment of some differently view questions.

On the basis that attorneys' use of technicalities is charged with being in large measure responsible for the lack of respect for law and order, for enforcement of law and failure of democratic organizations to function, I accept challenge leaving it to you to phrase the question and allot time limits and order of speaking. My intention is merely to aid in the public enlightenment of the problems involved which I think can be done. Sincerely yours,

E. G. SWANSON.

SOCIETY

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND MOTHER'S CLUB.

About 152 members were in attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Alamo Mother's club held at the school Friday afternoon when reports from committees were a feature of the business session. An added department to the club was announced at the meeting when a welfare committee was appointed with Mrs. E. W. Carter, chairman, to look after the charity work among the families of the Alamo pupils. Mrs. W. S. Curlee, chairman of the Kate Haynes fountain fund reported that the fountain, a part of which is being made in Italy, would be ready for erection in May, and that the entire amount necessary for the purchase is in the bank. Mrs. W. L. Rhodes, chairman of the program committee, reported that a social party would be held at the school in April instead of at the home of Mrs. M. J. Bashara as was previously announced. The little bags containing the dimes which were distributed some few meetings ago, will be opened at this party and a prize will be given the mother who brings the most money earned by the investment, also one for the one who tells the best story as to how the amount was earned.

Miss Dean's room, the high fifth, received the picture for the best attendance of mothers at the meeting, and also received the prize for the month for the largest percentage of pupils in attendance during the month.

Wednesday was announced as "rag day" when the children are requested to bring rags to be sold, the proceeds to be used for the purchase of physical culture records.

A short program was a feature of the meeting in which devotionals were led by Mrs. John C. Kay; a piano solo by Miss Margaret Bond; a reading by Mrs. T. B. Couch and a violin number by Herman Conrey. Dr. J. H. Groseclose, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church, gave a talk for the afternoon on "The Spiritual Needs of the Child."

MUSICIANS' CLUB GIVES OPEN PROGRAM

An interested audience composed of local music lovers heard the exceptionally splendid program rendered by the Musicians' club at the March open meeting held at the Wichita club Friday evening with Mrs. C. Y. Tully, leader, and Mrs. W. M. Priddy hostess for the occasion. The program was declared by all who attended to be one of the very best of the entire season. The opening number, the Bridal Chorus, "The Rose Maiden" (Cowen), was sung by Mesdames J. K. King, C. L. Tully, N. M. Clifford; Miss Teresa Veale and Messrs. Vaughan Ray, Joe Farrabee, Grover Bullington and Charles Angle.

Miss Florence Sammons, one of the younger piano soloists, gave a Liszt number, "Cantique d'Amour;" Mrs. Louella B. Thompson, sang Schubert's "Ave Maria," and Mrs. John W. King gave a and b numbers "Lullaby" (Scott) and "Dawn" (Curran). A beautiful number on stringed instruments was "Pastorale" (Nevin) with Misses Cecelia Adickes and Marion Maer, violinists and M. A. Ellis cello, accompanied at the piano by Miss Annette Walsh.

Mrs. E. L. Fulton gave a splendid and instructive talk on "Correlation of the Fine Arts for Community Work," in which a number of good ideas were brought out and which proved very interesting.

A quartette composed of Mesdames George W. Thorburn, Louella B. Thompson and Messrs. Vaughan Ray and Charles Angle gave the concluding number, "Goodnight, Beloved," by Pinsuti. The program while a little shorter than those usually presented, was nevertheless extremely well balanced, and the artists all in perfect "trim" gave splendid interpretations of their numbers.

D. A. R. HOLDS MONTHLY LUNCHEON SATURDAY.

Members of the Francis Grice Chapter of the D. A. R. held their monthly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Saturday when the table was attractively decorated in the St. Patrick colors and motifs for the occasion. Hostesses for the affair were Mesdames J. E. H. Bailey, A. R. Watland, W. M. McGregor and Miss Anna Chenault.

With Mrs. E. T. Duff, leader, a splendid program was given in which Mrs. Fred Couper read a paper on "Colonial Women of Virginia"; Mrs. J. L. Jackson gave an interesting description of Washington's monument, and Miss Vivienne Bailey rendered a violin number Hungarian Dance No. 5 by Brahms, and responded with an encore number "Wearing of the Green."

A delicious four course luncheon was served to Mesdames S. H. Burnside, C. W. Beavers, V. W. Cain, Lee Clarke, Fred Couper, Danforth, E. T. Duff, Ira E. Bells, S. Y. Ferguson, W. L. Herblin, Ben M. Bell of Greenville, Texas, J. L. Jackson, W. M. McGregor, N. H. Martin, W. C. Ray, D. G. Whitney and Misses Bessie Lee Bartlett and Blanche Clark.

PLAYERS CLUB PRESENTS TWO ONE-ACT PLAYS.

Entertaining a large audience composed of active and associate members and their guests, the Players club presented two charming one-act plays Saturday afternoon and evening. Local lovers of the drama were given a real treat when "The Person in the Chair" by Frances Shaw and "Overtones" by Alice Gerstenberg were the favored compositions presented.

Mesdames Guy Rogers and Walter S. Robertson were hostesses for the afternoon and evening and Mrs. G. L. Sheppard and Leslie Humphrey acted as ushers, also passing opera tickets between acts.

The unusual richness and beauty of the auditorium decorations, where the plays were given, was noted by all present, handsome draperies of bright figured cretonne and purple velvet being used as window draperies and the cretonne seat covers, all the handiwork of the active members of the club, which has grown since its organization from a mere group to 25 active and 123 associate members.

The cast for Overtones included: Harriet, a cultured woman, Mrs. Ben G. O'Neal; Hetty, her premature self, Miss Beryl Knickerbocker; Margaret, a cultured woman, Mrs. Mark Moore; Maggie, Mrs. Fleet Wynne.

T. B. Maddrey took the part of "The Person in the Chair" and other roles were taken as follows: Nurse Ray, Mrs. W. B. McClain; Nurse King, Miss Margaret Coy; James, W. M. McClain; Mother, Mrs. J. W. Akin; Delivery Boy, Willis Clark; Debutant, Miss Pearl Smith; Sister Margaret, Mrs. Will Pagan; The Friend, Joe Hill and The Woman Who Knows, Miss Marjie Schuster.

The parts were all well played and the afternoon and evening was very much enjoyed by all who attended.

THE SARTORIAL WAISTLINE DROPS SOME SIX INCHES BELOW NORMAL

FOR the past few seasons, evening gowns have been but variations on the simple theme of the camisole waist, gathered skirt—and normal waistline. The new note this season is sounded by the appearance of the low waistline and the Russian blouse. Heretofore the appearance of the Russian blouse has only been on the street frock, the suit, and the afternoon gown, so its entrance into the ballroom is revolutionary.

One may or may not have one's waist bloused — that freedom of choice is left to madame's own individual taste, but one thing Dame Fashion does insist on, and that is that one's waistline be low.

For the woman who does not prefer the bloused effect, there is the semi-fitted basque that is drawn low over the hips. This mode is the perfect complement to the long skirt that reaches to the floor. It creates a formal gown with gracious air that makes an interesting contrast to the fluffy type of dress. Just such a creation is shown in the photograph above of Gloria Swanson, whose latest Paramount picture is "Her Husband's Trademark." The long basque is there, the long skirt, the long panel in the back that forms a train. A gown of dignified charm, made unusual by a lace "cape." Bugle banding collars this "cape" and likewise edges the panels.

Less formal gowns, or dinner dresses, are shown in the sketches. They both have the long Russian blouse and the long skirts — the skirts, however, only reaching to the ankles.

THE RUSSIAN BLOUSE BECOMES FORMAL

The dress shown in the sketch to the left is a simple one to make. It is composed of a satin slip, covered with the lace over dress. Over the lace skirt are two apron-panels of satin, one in front, and one in back. The lace hangs below the slip and the panels.

The other frock is of moire, and has an uneven skirt—longer at the sides than in the front and back. There is an individual touch employed on the blouse. A peasant flower-motif done in colored silks.

To Appear in Recital

FRANK FREDERICK LOEW

Frank Frederick Loew, composer-pianist, will appear in recital at the Kemp hotel Tuesday evening under the auspices of the University club. Mr. Loew, who will be assisted by Mrs. Louella B. Thompson, soloist, and Miss Juanita Kinsey, reader, needs no introduction to local audiences, as he has been heard here in concert on several occasions, and is a favorite performer.

LOCAL YOUNG MAN TO MARRY THURSDAY.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of George Clifford Shankle of this city to Miss Wolfe of Dallas. The wedding to take place there at the First Methodist church Thursday evening.

The groom-elect is well known here where he is connected with the parcel post department at the post office. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. W. E. Wolf of Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. Shankle will be at home after Monday, March 13 at 1052 Lucile.

BURK BUDGET FOR THE WEEK IS VERY NEWSY

Two Deaths Cast Shadow Over One Household; Doings in Clubdom; Church Services; Minor Mention.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, March 4.—The announcement of the marriage of Blake Grennell, acting vice-president of the American State Bank, to Miss Alice Black, of Okeene, Okla., was received with special interest in our city this week. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Black, in Okeene, Okla., Saturday at high noon, Feb. 18th, Rev. Erdman of the Methodist church officiating. The bride is a charming young woman of culture and refinement, and will find a cordial welcome awaiting her among her husband's many friends in Burkburnett, where he is held in highest esteem. Mr. and Mrs. Grennell will be at home at 103 Avenue C, following their return from their bridal trip to Chicago, St. Louis and other northern cities.

Two deaths of unusual sadness occurred at the home of A. T. Todd, one mile northwest of Burkburnett this week when his sister-in-law, Mrs. Pearl Rogers, age 27, died Sunday morning from pneumonia following influenza contracted the week previous, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary J. Dutton, who was ill at the time, passed away the next afternoon, Monday, at three o'clock, also of pneumonia, following influenza. Both were interred in the Burkburnett cemetery, the daughter on Monday afternoon, and the mother Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Dutton was fifty-six years of age, a native Texan, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Oddom. She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Todd, of this city, and other relatives. Mrs. Rogers, also a daughter of the late Mrs. Dutton, is survived by her husband, Charles Rogers.

On Monday afternoon, the Ladies Missionary Society of the Methodist church were entertained by Mrs. Ernest Windham and Mrs. M. L. Urban in the home of the latter on East 4th street. Following the devotional and study hours the ladies were invited to enter a unique "Penny for your thoughts" contest, which afforded wit, humor and merriment. As the concluding favor, a dainty salad luncheon was served. The following guests were in attendance: Mrs. N. G. Goodlett, Mrs. C. D. Montgomery, Mrs. R. H. Henry, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Kiker, Mrs. Bert Calkins, Mrs. Joe Davis, Mrs. W. R. Hill, and Mrs. J. S. Mills.

The Krowelideen club met in the home of Mrs. S. J. Campbell on Wednesday afternoon March 1st. The hours were spent in needle work while music was rendered on the Edison. A delicious two-course luncheon was served to the following members and guests: Mesdames McCutcheon, Hill, Utts, Ensor, Williams, Blum, Campbell, Moss, Bryson, Parrish, Wiggins, Dace and Quinn. The next meeting of the Krowelideen club will be held with Mrs. E. L. Blum, hostess, in the home of Mrs. R. H. Henry.

The monthly social meeting, known as the "Get-acquainted Service," was observed Wednesday evening at the Baptist church, notwithstanding the snow and cold weather. Following an interesting prayer meeting service a social hour was enjoyed in the large reading room of the church, during which the ladies served a refreshment course of coffee cake and sandwiches.

Rex Jones, former superintendent of the Jones-Light Petroleum company, is reported to be permanently located in Chicago in the employ of the Marshall-Field company. His Burkburnett friends are wishing him every success in his new work.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Grennell, Misses Agnes and Chiquita Grennell and Mrs. S. C. Kenworthy, all of this city, have returned from Okeene, Okla., where they attended the Grennell-Black wedding.

The Eastern Star chapter did not hold its regular meeting Tuesday night on account of the extremely cold weather.

"U. D." CLUB'S STUDY SESSION HAPPY EVENT

Seymour Society Makes a Visit to the Hawaiian Islands on Information and Pleasure Bent.

Interesting Literary Program Follows Four-Course Dinner; Children's Party; Personal Mention.

SEYMOUR, Texas, March 4.—Mrs. J. J. Cockerell was hostess to the "U. D." club Friday afternoon in study meeting, subject of the lesson was "The Hawaiian Islands," Mrs. C. M. Randall, leader. The house was appropriately decorated for the occassion. The dining room a veritable bower of vines and potted plants made a beautiful setting for the program. The audience was supposed to be composed mainly of old students of a seminary of which Mrs. O. C. Harrison was president and she was conducting the party on an imaginary trip to these islands. Her costume and language very forcibly reminded one of such a person. The trip was made doubly interesting and instructive by a large map and stops were made at different times to hear papers on special features of the islands prepared by Mesdames Nick Mitchell and A. K. Moillette; a reading, Mrs. Alva Hill; Hawaiian song, Miss Dorris Humphreys; the Hula dance, Miss Alma Cockerell and chorus by Misses Florence Cooper, Georgia Britton, Pleasie Carter, Aileen Humphreys, Eulene Powell, Valery Buck. The last stop was made for a native lunch which Mrs. Cockerell served to Mesdames M. E. Tarver, Nick Mitchell, Z. W. Jenkins, J. T. Lively, D. B. Daugherty, Jr., M. R. Fuller, Meadors, W. H. Francis, I. E. Cockerell, R. D. Mugg, Walter Gray, A. K. Moillette, ——— Hinds, E. P. Croft, R. R. Kellum, R. L. George, Frank Davis, I. O. Newton, Alva Hill, A. J. McNeil, ——— Howell, C. M. Randall, S. C. Harrison, J. A. Wheat, ——— Decker, Tom Irby; Misses Thelma and Grace Porter, Neva Merrick, Dorris Humphreys, Elaine Harrison and Peggy Moillette.

The "U. D." club at their business meeting Thursday elected officers for the next fiscal year as follows: Mrs. C. M. Randall, president; Mrs. Alva Hill, first vice-president; Mrs. A. J. McNeil, second vice-president; Mrs. O. C. Harrison, recording secretary; Mrs. A. K. Moillette, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. E. Tarver, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Wheat, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. E. Lankford, press reporter; Mrs. Frank Davis, delegate to district federation at Haskell.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Merrick honored their mothers, Mrs. J. H. Merrick and Mrs. Carrolyn Lee, with a four-course dinner at the Washington hotel Thursday at high noon. The guests were all elderly ladies, ranging in age from sixty-five to eighty-four years. The after dinner program included a story telling contest which provoked much laughter. Grandma Dickson acted as judge. The story was supposed to be a joke on oneself or some personal experience. The prize a box of chocolates went to Mrs. Albright. The ladies enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Merrick were: Mesdames M. M. Harrison, Aunt Molly Taylor, Nannie Albright, Nannie Ray, W. H. Nichols, Bowie Morris, Grandma Dickson and the honorees.

Mrs. J. H. Clark entertained for her daughter, Kathleen, Saturday afternoon. Various games were played, including progressive Nilo and a George Washington contest. Harriet Allison won the prize, a box of chocolates. After the games the guests marched around a big birthday cake, containing twelve red and white candles, singing "Happy Birthday" and snuffed out the candles. The cake was then cut and served with hot chocolate. Mrs. Clark then served minced home sandwiches with hot chocolate. The favors were tiny American flags. Those enjoying this anniversary with Kathleen were: Ruth Faucher, Jaunita Lowery, Harriet Allison, Murrie and Pauline Head, Flo Richmond, Katie Lee Coy, Elizabeth Johnson, Rowena Bledsoe, Lilla Yarbrough, Jaunita Camp, Willie Mae Bryan, Nadine Lankford, W. R. Hill, Billie Postwood, Wilson Howell, Foster Richmond.

The Missionary society of the Christian church met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. J. H. Clark with Mrs. Alva Hill, leader, subject "The New Testament Model Church." Mrs. Clark served a lovely salad plate to Mesdames W. A. Baker, Alva Hill, R. D. Mugg, Lee Coy and P. J. Foster.

Mayor J. A. Britian called a clean-up meeting Thursday to formulate plans for a cleaner city. This meeting was attended by representatives from the federated clubs, city council, chamber of commerce, and the schools. The town was divided into four parts and a captain for each was appointed. These captains will have chosen their workers and be ready to greet the clean-up Friday, March 10th.

ADJUSTING COMPLAINT.

The New Steno—Good morning, Mr. Grouchmore. I'm Miss Hooks.
The Boss—I can't help it if you are. I didn't name you. If you don't like your name why don't you get married?

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.—Adv.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft clear, rosy, white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.—Adv.

CASCARETS 10¢

For Constipated Bowels—Bilious Liver

Headache	Biliousness
Colds	Indigestion
Dizziness	Sour Stomach

is candy-like Cascarets. One or two tonight will empty your bowels completely by morning and you will feel splendid. "They work while you sleep." Cascarets never stir you up or gripe like Salts, Pills, Calomel, or Oil and they cost only ten cents a box. Children love Cascarets too. —(Adv.)

UPSET STOMACH

In five minutes "Pape's Diapepsin" ends

Indigestion	Gases	Flatulence
Sourness	Acidity	Palpitation

"Pape's Diapepsin" relieves stomach distress in five minutes. You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs. Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief, its harmlessness, its certain action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large sixty-cent case from any drug store, and then if you should eat something which doesn't agree with you, if what you eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all indigestion vanishes. It is the most efficient antacid known—the certainty and ease with which it overcomes stomach and digestive disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—Adv.

YOUR FRECKLES

Need Attention in March or Face May Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish to look well the rest of the year. The March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use Othine—double strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of Othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.—Adv.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Fruity Taste and it cannot Injure Little Stomachs.

Don't let child stay bilious, constipated.

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Genuine "California Fig Syrup" has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

YOUNG BANKER LEADS TO ALTAR GIRL OF CHOICE

Given Warm Welcome by Henrietta Society Folk; Delphine Club Has Interesting Session and Ancient Theme.

Many Favors for Mrs. Morris; Thursday Bridge Club Has Series of Games; Personal and Minor Mention.

HENRIETTA, Texas, March 4.—The marriage of Miss Carabelle Tabor and T. H. Morris, Jr., was solemnized at high noon at the Methodist Episcopal church on February 22nd at Chillicothe. The Rev. J. B. Woods performed an impressive ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends. The bride was becomingly attired in a tweed coat suit with a violet corsage. After the ceremony the young couple left immediately for a brief stay with the groom's parents, Rev. and Mrs. T. H. Morris, at Dallas. Mrs. Morris is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Tabor, of Chillicothe, and Henrietta's social circle has already given her a hearty welcome. Mr. Morris is the capable and efficient cashier of the Merchants and Planters bank of this city and has a host of friends all of whom wish him well.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Staggs had a few friends in Saturday evening, February 24th, to meet Mrs. T. H. Morris. Those present were: Mesdames and Messrs T. H. Morris, Carl Green, Glen Cunningham, Misses Kathryn Hall, Dorothy Bear and Messrs Bryant and Kirk Edwards.

The Delphian club met in regular session Wednesday with Mrs. Joseph Edwards as leader. The subject was "Early Greek Comedies." The program follows: "The Sophists and Their Effect on Greek Drama," Mrs. P. H. Neville; "Aristophanes," Mrs. L. C. Kelley; "The Clouds," Miss Jasper; "The Birds," Mrs. J. O. Gilliland; "The Beggar's Suit," Mrs. A. B. Edwards; "Philemon," Mrs. Joseph Edwards; "Menander," Mrs. J. B. Douthett.

Mesdames and Messrs C. O. Taylor and R. R. Hodge gave a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday evening, honoring Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Morris. The living room was decorated in red carnations and ferns and the dining room in violets. The centerpiece for the table being a crystal basket of violets with pink tulle bows. A five-course dinner was served, after which several games of bridge were played. Mr. Hodge won gentleman's high score, a carton of cigarettes, and Miss Lou Mae McGlasson won ladies high score which was a corsage bouquet. At a late hour an ice course was served to the following: Misses Bennie and Lou Mae McGlasson and Dorothy Bear; Messrs. Kirk Edwards, H. M. Muse and Charlie Edwards.

Mrs. W. H. Myers was hostess to the "Thursday Bridge club." Thursday afternoon. Six games were played after which delicious refreshments were served. The prizes, exquisite California butterfly pin trays, went to Mrs. E. C. Carter and Mrs. A. B. Staggs. Those present were: Mesdames S. M. Brightwell, P. H. Boddy, A. B. Staggs, E. C. Carter, J. O. Gilliland, L. S. Keller, A. B. Edwards, C. O. Taylor, Alvis Fuller, T. H. Morris, Carl Green, R. J. Brown, Carl Barker, Joseph Edwards and Misses Hart, Galloway and Bennie and Lou Mae McGlasson.

Miss Mabel Edwards was hostess to the "Maids' and Matrons' Bridge club" Friday afternoon. The club members present were: Mesdames R. R. Hodge, Carl Green, Misses Dorothy Bear, Sara Dale, Margaret Holly and Lou Mae and Bernice McGlasson. Guests besides the club members were: Mesdames T. M. Morris, Carl Barker, Alvis Fuller, Misses Kathryn Hall and Lydia Cook. An elegant and substantial coursed luncheon, consisting of pressed chicken with a layer of cranberry jelly, stuffed tomatoes, queen olives, stacked sandwiches, gnocchi a la romana, coffee, angel food cake and mint ice was served.

The members of the "Unity club" enjoyed a lecture by Dr. Cook of State University, Saturday afternoon at the club rooms. His subject was "A Review of the Years Study."

Saturday evening at 8 o'clock through the courtesy of the "Unity club" the people of Henrietta were given the pleasure of hearing Dr. Cook. The program given at the Baptist church follows: Alto and baritone duet with cello obligato, Mrs. Dickey, Messrs Liles and Otwell; groups of songs, Mrs. Dickey; lecture, "Recent English Novels," Dr. Cook.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Stone and two little daughters left Saturday for Oklahoma City to make their home. Mr. Stone has been proprietor of the "Brandenburg Grocery company" here and is very much liked, both in a business way and socially. He will be connected with a brokerage company in Oklahoma City.

Personal and Minor Mention.

Miss Dorothy Garrison of this city has accepted a position with "The Home Furnishing company" at Dallas.

The "Neighborhood club" was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Nutter, Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Alexander, Mr. F. O. Moore and Miss Cora Neville went to Altus, Oklahoma, Sunday to be present at the funeral of their uncle, Mr. W. H. Neville.

Herbert Caldwell is home from the navy.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Taylor are spending a few days in Fort Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jasper of Wichita Falls were guests of his mother here last Sunday.

Mr. C. M. Worsham has returned from a business trip to Oklahoma City.

Mr. T. L. Shackelford of Wichita Falls attended to business matters here Wednesday.

Miss Anna Frank Bridges went to Dallas Wednesday to visit with friends.

Mr. A. F. Bowden of Wichita Falls was in town Wednesday.

Misses Dorothy Bear, Katherine Hall and Kirk and Bryant Edwards played bridge with Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Morris, Wednesday.

Mrs. May Puckett left Friday for San Antonio to visit her sister.

Mr. Floyd Pruett's father of Denton is visiting him.

The attendance of the public school the past week has been very poor on account of so many of the pupils having been vaccinated.

CHICAGO U. CHALLENGES RIVALS TO PRODUCE GIRLS TO OUTSHINE TRIO

These three maidens, one a sophomore and two freshmen, were recently elected as the prettiest girls in Chicago university by students who annually choose the beauties for the annual play. And the students are willing to match their beauty against that of any triumvirate produced by any other college around Chicago.

The three girls are the Misses Ruth Browne, Constance Croonenborghs and Nellie Newton.

How Does Chiropractic Differ From Other Methods?

CHIROPRACTIC is unique and distinct from every other method. No simon pure Chiropractor uses a single method or movement taught in any other school. Its principle was discovered by a layman, and its science, art and philosophy developed not only without the aid of any other profession, but in spite of their utmost effort to prevent. It stands squarely on its own merits, scorning every device or method which would serve to conceal its wonderful efficiency.

—While its philosophy can be easily understood, the science and the art can only be acquired in a reputable resident school. For this reason it cannot be taught by mail.

—A good baseball fan, one understanding all the rules and regulations of the game, may not be able to catch, toss or bat a ball, and so it is with Chiropractic.

—There are some very essential facts which can be only learned by experience, while the art of adjusting can be learned only by practice under a most efficient instructor, and THEN it comes slowly, requiring much intelligent, painstaking effort.

—Chiropractic can be distinguished from massage by the sureness with which the exact vertebra is adjusted. While the Masseur rubs, kneads and massages the entire body, the Chiropractor does NOT rub, knead or massage at all. He gives but a single, quick thrust and confines his efforts to the spine.

—In the same way Chiropractic can be distinguished from Osteopathy. The Osteopath manipulates the muscles, bones and ligaments of the entire body, while the Chiropractor confines himself to the segments of the spinal column and does not manipulate at all. There is an abundance of documentary evidence in the form of signed statements from leading Osteopaths which clearly proves the variance between the systems, as well as the fact that Chiropractic has been recognized as a SEPARATE science by the LEGISLATURES of TWENTY States.

—While Christian Science is purely spiritual, Chiropractic adjustments are purely physical. Any Christian Scientist, as well as any Chiropractor, will at once disclaim any similarity of method.

—It differs from suggestive therapeutics in that no suggestion is given and no attention is paid to the mental attitude of the patient, which may range anywhere from extreme skepticism to absolute optimism.

—While medicine has been variously defined, no THEORY or PRACTICE of medicine ever yet included spinal adjustments. In fact you can easily find good medical authority to prove that the segments of the spine cannot be moved. A very unsuccessful attempt has been made to so define medicine as to include verything used for the cure, relief or alleviation of human suffering, from Christian Science to Optometry, but no definition has ever been made broad enough to include Chiropractic. Chiropractors do NOT give medicine of ANY kind under any circumstances. They want their science to be judged on its own merits.

PURE FOOD SHOW DRAWS MANY WOMEN

Bakers, Grocers and Dairymen, Co-Operate With Backers to Make Show a Real Demonstration.

While their husbands were looking over the "best to buy" at the automobile show, scores of Wichita Falls housewives spent yesterday afternoon studying the exhibits of the pure food show being staged at 707 Scott street by the city health department under the direction of Dr. A. H. Douglas.

Local bakers, wholesale and retail grocers and dairymen co-operated with the officials of the health department to insure the success of the show. Booths attractively decorated and containing exhibits of food stuffs constituted only one section of the show. Particular attention also was being paid by those in charge to the preparation of food products under scientific and sanitary methods, and to discussion of the proper way to detect inferior foods.

Members of the Civic league, with Mrs. Glover as chairman, gave their assistance at the special health department booth, where a trained nurse was in attendance to answer questions on health matters, general hygiene and the care of children.

"We are trying to impress upon people that health is a priceless possession yet one easily within reach if they will observe a few precautions," Dr. Douglas, director of the city health department, said. "Also we want the citizens of Wichita Falls to realize that the health department is here for their use and that we are always ready to work for their welfare. This food and health show will make an impression on many, but we hope particularly that it will serve to introduce the health department more cordially to our citizens and will make them feel more ready in the future to call on us for any assistance they may desire along lines of general sanitation and health."

Ruling on Girls' Skirts Thrown Out of Court

By Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., March 4.—A ruling that high school girls' skirts must extend three inches below the knee to be modest was thrown out of court today by Judge Hugh Means in the district court here. The ruling had been laid down by the school board of the Vinland rural high school in this (Douglas) county.

Because, according to the school board, their skirts did not extend far enough below the knee, Alice Hansen and Maud Buchanan were suspended from school last Tuesday. Today, J. H. Hansen, Alice's father, appeared in district court seeking redress. He told the court that both girls were modestly dressed in clothing made for them by their mother.

Judge Means issued an order that the girls be readmitted to the school and set March 18 as the date when he will determine to what extent, if any, the girls and their parents were damaged by the action of the school board in barring them from school.

Missionary's Personal Effects Charmed Chinese Bandits Who Held Him Captive Two Months

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, March 4.—Dr. Al Shelton, medical missionary, reported murdered in Thibet, was a former resident of Anthony, Kansas. He was born in Indianapolis June 9, 1875.

He was here in October, 1920, and told of his adventures in the hands of Chinese bandits who captured him earlier in the year and held him captive for more than two months. Dr. Shelton was enroute from Batang, Thibet to Yunnan Fu, China, the nearest railway point, where his wife and young daughters, Dorothy and Doris, were to start for the United States. Bandits swooped down on the Caravan about 50 miles out of Yunnan Fu after a trip of 47 days on mules through the mountains and carried off the missionary.

He gained favorable attention from them by dressing a wounded bandit's injuries. He was taken from camp to camp with the bandits, kept for some weeks in a temple on a mountain top, and his camera, field glasses and repeating shotgun were all objects of interest to his captors. Occasionally the band raided a native village, killed villagers and carried off loot, but Dr. Shelton was treated with consideration. Indeed, some members of the bandit gang invited him to become its leader, it is said. He was offered opium to smoke and money to gamble with, but declined both offers. Frequently individual bandits entrusted with him money to keep for them, saying they could trust him.

A French Roman Catholic missionary made repeated efforts to procure Dr. Shelton's release, but the leader of the bandit gang said to have been a former general in the Chinese army, sought concessions from the Chinese government which it was unwilling to make in return for freeing the missionary.

Finally Dr. Shelton becoming ill, and the bandits believing he was about to die, he was left in a remote village practically, unguarded. From there he managed to make his way to an area where the government was in control. After a brief visit in this country, Dr. Shelton went back to Thibet, where he had labored as a missionary since 1903.

Girls' Cothing Cost Is Studied By Civic Bodies

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—How much is enough to keep the sweet young flapper flapping?

This was the question which representatives of several civic organizations set out today to answer, following publication of advices from Topeka that testimony before the Kansas Industrial court had fixed the amount at $87 per annum.

The answer as determined for Chicago was $117.70—with reservations.

"I do think she can dress well, perhaps even smartly, on $117 a year," the head of the women's apparel division of a leading department store said when shown the figures fixed by other buyers, "but she must have good taste, practice constant self-denial, and steer away from the impractical garments."

The accepted budget of the year's outlay for the wardrobe contained, among other things, one suit at $20, two pairs of shoes $12.00; five pairs of hose, $6.80 and two hats, $10.00.

Stockings at twenty-five cents, as proposed in the Topeka budget were frowned upon.

TIRES WITH 500 NAIL HOLES LEAK NO AIR

A new puncture-proof inner tube, which in actual use was punctured 500 times without showing the loss of any air when tested by a tire gauge has been invented by Paul B. Coats, an electric engineer of Chicago. It is inflated with air and has the same appearance as the regular inner tube, yet it removes all the necessity of changing tires until the casings are entirely worn out. Cars using these tubes are making from 5,000 to 12,000 miles without removing a tire from the wheel. A wonderful feature of this new tire is that it can be produced and sold at about the same price as the ordinary tube. Mr. Coats has turned over all his rights on this invention to the Milburn Puncture-Proof Tube Co., 360 W. 47th Street, Chicago, who wants to place these tubes in a few cars here. They will make a very liberal offer to anyone who wishes to try them at the Company's risk, until a distributor is appointed for this territory.—Adv.

SPECIAL TERM 30TH COURT FOR GRAHAM

Judge H. R. Wilson Saturday closed the winter term of the 30th district court and Monday will open the spring term of the court at Graham in Young county. The court will not convene here again until June.

A grand jury has been ordered to report Monday at Graham and Judge Wilson has also set several civil cases for trial during the week. Judge Wilson said Saturday that he planned holding a special term of court in Young county before returning here in June. The regular term only lasts one month and the special term he said would be necessary to relieve congested criminal and civil dockets.

ALL CRIMINAL CASES GO TO 89TH COURT

Change Made So That End of Term of 30th District Will Not Slow Up Disposition Criminal Docket.

All criminal cases now pending in the 30th district court were transferred Saturday to the 89th district court with the exception of the B. W. Acuff case, which will come up for trial in the 78th district court Monday. The transfer was made due to the closing of the winter term of the 30th district court which convenes Monday at Graham.

The action was taken after a conference between District Attorney Schenck, Assistant District Attorney Holliday and County Attorney Fulton. It is understood that several of the cases now pending will be set for trial in the 89th district court before Judge P. A. Martin within the next few days. The prosecution of the cases will be handled by County Attorney Fulton and Assistant District Attorney Holliday. District Attorney Schenck will be engaged in Young county.

B. W. Acuff whose motion to quash an indictment was overruled last week by Judge Ed Napier, acting judge of the 30th district court, will be tried Monday on a charge of theft.

Studio Players Club Is Confused Says Mrs. Fulton

In order that a misunderstanding that seems to exist concerning the separate identity of the Studio Players and the Players club, Mrs. E. L. Fulton, the organizer and director of the Studio players makes the following statement:

"There seems to be a misunderstanding by some of the public regarding the identity of the Studio players and the Players club, many thinking that they are one and the same and likewise confusing the programs of the two. As director of the Studio players, which was organized as a community affair, and a neucleus of a Little Theater, I wish to make this public explanation of the Studio players, and that the two are not the same.

"The organization of the Studio players was begun last spring, during the summer through personal contact with heads of the Drama league of America, in Chicago, I laid the plans for the local club's affiliation, when it has grown to the required proportions, with the national Little Theater movement. Organization was perfected in the early fall of 92, and the name Studio players taken instead of the Little Theater, since it had not yet developed to a little theater proportion.

"The Sudio players' first program was given early in December. The March entertainment was announced for March 4, but was later postponed. The plays this month, as previously announced will be "Will o' The Wisp" and "Belinda."

"Patrons and patronesses of the Studio players were announced at the occasion of the first public appearance in December. The associate membership, like the membership, and the purpose of the organization, in civic and general, ad limited only to those interested in the furthering of the theater movement, and bringing the drama to the public."

CRASH OF THE OLD BAT AGAINST YE HORSEHIDE AT BALL PARK MONDAY

Spudders Will Start Spring Training Tomorrow; Abe Bowman and Buddy Tanner Check in, Looking Fine; Big Host of Players, Vets and Rookies, Expected Today.

By "NICK" CARTER

That delightful sound caused by swift contact of a bat with a baseball will be heard tomorrow at Athletic park. The sixth of March will be here in a few hours, and the sixth of March is the date fixed for the 1922 Spudders to start limbering up their pegging arms and working the kinks out of their leg muscles in preparation for a Texas league season of fight.

And it will be a fight, make no mistake about that. Every team in the old loop has strengthened in some department, and reports from around the circuit indicate a determination on every manager's part to spend money, time and energy to keep his aggregation of ball tossers up in the first division.

Abe and Buddy Here.

Abe Bowman, steady, reliable, hard-working big fighthander of the 1921 hurling corps, and Buddy Tanner, hustling little shortstop and as popular a player with the fans as ever wore a spiked shoe in this territory, landed in Wichita Falls yesterday. Abe spent the winter as a salesman. He was out of doors a greater part of the time, kept himself in fine condition and is ready to start baseball work in earnest now. Buddy ran a "restauraw" in Mexia, but found time to chase around the oil fields, and he swears also that juggling dishes is great dope for keeping the arm muscles strong and supple.

I saw Abe and Buddy in the offices of the baseball association and both looked fine. Abe is ready to start tonight or Monday morning for Marlin, there to join Darough, Ruth, Ramsey, "Lefty" Odom and Frank Kitchens, and to wrest out the old flipper, while Buddy is all set to get out on the Athletic park diamond and show some of the youngsters they'll have to travel fast to get away with that infield berth of his. Good boys, Abe and Buddy both, loyal, dependable workers, a credit to any club; I'm sure glad to see 'em back.

More players were expected on late trains last night, and a raft of 'em will arrive tomorrow morning. Jake Miller has indicated his hold-out days are over, and Jake and his contract are expected to arrive together soon. "Tex" McDonald, Ray O'Brien, Fred Beck, George Knadler and a big gang of youngsters will be on deck for the opening festivities. Bob Bescher is still on the fence, as is George Bischoff, but the Skipper isn't worrying about 'em, they'll fall in line with the others. Wright and White, the new infielders purchased from the Oklahoma City and Oakland, Cal., clubs respectively, are the biggest worry, as Salm has been unable to get in touch with them by mail. However, stranger things than that have happened in baseball, and both these players will probably check in of their own accord, or will write within a few days.

Doak's Wires Crossed.

J. Doak Roberts, president of the Texas league, appears to be taking an unusual interest in the fact that Ray O'Brien has signed to wear a Spudder uniform. Walter Salm was in Dallas recently, and during a fanning bee there with Roberts, Hughey Jennings and Tris Speaker, discussion of Ray's case came up, and Roberts went so far as to express the belief that Judge Landis didn't have authority to declare O'Brien a free agent, and that Ray "morally" belonged to the Galveston club. Where does Roberts get that "morally" stuff, I wonder? Landis had authority to block any cover-up deal that came to his attention. O'Brien's case involved just such a deal. Landis also had authority to declare O'Brien a free agent, and did so—and after that Ray was free to deal with any club, except Omaha and Fort Worth.

Roberts argued that Salm had illegally offered O'Brien a bonus, and there again Roberts is off on the wrong foot. Had Salm offered O'Brien a certain sum if he, O'Brien, would bat over .300 for the season, or if he would drive in 75 runs, for example, that would have been a case of offering a bonus. But as O'Brien was a free agent, there is nothing in the rules against Salm giving him an extra piece of change to sign a contract—in other words, purchasing the player's release from himself. Just why Roberts is so interested in Galveston's side is another problem that might develop entertaining angles. Personally, I don't believe Leopold will be fool enough to call for any show-down; and if any team should protest games in which Ray O'Brien plays for the Spudders, the attendance would be hit such a wallop in the mid-section that the Texas league could be thoroughly and scientifically wrecked before the season was half gone—and so you can make a little bet that there'll be no protests.

That's that. Tomorrow is the opening day of spring training. The baseball association has spent "beaucoup jack" getting together the nucleus of a winnig Texas league team; the seating accommodations at the park have been increased; the fans are fidgeting restlessly; Charlie Pogenpohl has been out to look over his favorite roosting spot on the grandstand roof; 'Gene Leipold is heart-broken over the sale of "My Man" Griggs; Red Phillips is taking throat lozenges and getting his voice in condition for opening day; we're all r'arin' ter go, gang, huh?

POUR IT ON 'EM! POUR IT ON 'EM!

GREAT RECORDS WERE MADE BY EX-LONGHORNS

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, March 4.—With the addition of pictures of the University of Texas athletic teams for 1921, the long picture gallery in the corridor of the men's gymnasium is now practically filled. There are 28 varsity football teams represented in the collection, and of this number six were undefeated, the most recent was the 1920 team, of which Maxie Hart of Austin was captain. The other undefeated Longhorn teams were those of 1918, 1914, 1900, 1895 and 1893.

Among the 25 baseball teams represented in the photographs, only one went through the season with an undefeated record. The team of 1899 bears that distinction. In 1914, however, the world's intercollegiate record of 25 consecutive victories was established by the "Texas" team. W. J. Disch came to the University as baseball coach in 1911, and in his first year won the Southwestern championship. Since that year, the University baseball team has won 10 consecutive championship victories.

Records of the University track teams show that six of the 21 teams have been undefeated. During the years 1912-1918, the Varsity track team won every meet in which it participated. In 1917, all meets were cancelled by the outbreak of the war, although interclass contests were held. In 13 years of basket-shooting, the University basket ball teams have had three undefeated seasons. These ran consecutively from 1914-1917.

The banner year for Varsity athletic teams was probably 1914. In that year, the track and basketball teams were undefeated; the baseball team set the world's intercollegiate record for consecutive victories; and the football team won every game until the final contest, which was won by Notre Dame with a score of 30-7. Outstanding members of the team that year were Louis Jordon, who was killed in action in France, and Clyde Littlefield, who is now freshman football and basket ball coach of the university, as well as Varsity track coach.

The number of pictures of three-letter men of Texas was increased to 17 in 1921 with the addition of Joe Ellis of Fort Worth, who won letters in football, baseball and track; George Hill of Forth Worth, football, basket ball and wrestling, and F. F. Leisener of Sample, football, baseball and track.

Three members of "Texas" football teams have been mentioned by Walter Camp in his mythical all-American teams, and their photographs decorate the gallery. Louis Jordon, a tackle, was placed on the third all-American team; "Pig" Dittmar, center, was given mention; and George McCullough, sensational end on the Longhorn team of 1921, was mentioned by Camp in his latest selection.

IT'S ABOUT SOLVED

Meaning the infield problem of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Plump Wilbert Robinson believes that the addition of Larry Kopf, late of the Reds, has turned the trick. He plans to place Larry at short and Henry Ford (not the auto magnate) at second. This combination puzzled him until he landed Larry for Walter Barbare did not seem able to work smoothly at the shortfield position with the youngster Ford.

Kopf was one of the members of Pat Moran's world's championship aggregation of 1919, playing short in brilliant style, collecting six hits in twenty-seven times at bat scoring three runs in the world's series.

Kopf was born in Bristol, Conn., in 1893. He attracted attention of the big league scouts while playing baseball at Fordham college. He played with Akron and New Haven and Toledo. Then Cleveland which sent him to Toledo had a string on him turned him over to the Athletics. He played second most of the time for Connie Mack until released January 30, 1916, to the Baltimore International league club. The Cinci Reds bought him in September of that year. When the war came along Kopf joined the steel league and then the army. He rejoined the Reds after the war and played with them until sent to the Braves with Rube Marquard the other day.

NEW YORK COP THREATENS TO RIVAL PADDOCK

His "Nervous Reaction," Common to Cinder Path Novices, Has Thus Far Been That of Deaf Mute.

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The extremely hurried Mr. Charles W. Paddock of the Pacific coast, a gentleman of comparatively no leisure whatever, may yet find it expedient to move those flying shanks of his just a bit faster before the impending track season passes on.

Six months ago Paddock was supreme among the world's sprinters; today his supremacy is in nowise questioned, but it is altogether probable that in the immediate future his speed afoot will be questioned.

Having said that much, we will go further and respectfully submit for consideration the name of Bob McAllister, New York policeman, whom the writer considers the most promising sprinter in the world today.

McAllister "broke his novitiate," as the saying goes, less than six months ago. Yet at this very moment he is rated above Jackson Scholz, Bernie Wefers, Jr., Eddie Farrell and others as the fastest man in the local district, and at a recent set of games he lent authority to this belief by running 150 yards on the boards in 14 3-5 seconds, a world's indoor record.

Does Intermediate Runs.

At intermediate distances he was caught in 10 3-5 seconds for 110 yards, which means 9 4-5 for the century; 11 4-5 seconds for 120 yards and 12 3-5 seconds for 130 yards.

These performances were made without spikes on an armory drill floor that afforded all the spring and resiliency of a concrete sidewalk. Can you beat it? Not with a horsewhip.

For one, Jackson Scholz couldn't, and Scholz is generally regarded as one of the world's best. He was yards outside of McAllister at the finish of this particular race.

At the moment two faults stand out in McAllister's style. He is slow away from his mark, and at certain stages of a race he shows a disposition to "climb" in his stride. Note, for example, the fact that it took him 1 1-5 seconds to travel from 110 to 120 yards, while other ten-yard intervals were covered as low as 4-5 of a second. McAllister did a little climbing between 110 to 120 yards and, at that, broke a world's record.

Nervousness of Novice.

Many have contended that McAllister's slow starting is due to the nervousness of a comparative novice. We do not hold with such.

The ability of a sprinter to get away with the gun is largely a matter of nervous reaction to its sound. McAllister's nervous reaction to date has been that of a deaf mute. Every muscle is loose as the gun goes off; therefore he makes starting a two-motion operation instead of one. He must first tense his muscles before he can start them in motion.

These are details easily eradicated by proper training. But even an inefficient trainer couldn't rob McAllister of his natural speed. Give him a good one, such as the late Mike Murphy, and there is no telling how far he will go.

TAKE IT FROM TY, THE TY-GERS WILL SCRATCH

Dynamic Manager of Detroit Entry Not Boastful But Claims That Team Will Be Strengthened.

(By International News Service)

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 4.—The Detroit Tigers are not claiming the American league pennant for 1922, but they will make trouble aplenty for any club in Ban Johnson's organization. So speaks Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the dynamic manager of the Detroit team, in an interview at his home here.

The "Ty-ger" leader was not given over to boastful predictions for the coming season. Rather, he declared, he will concentrate his efforts to strengthen the team in several departments and build it into a formidable machine.

Second base and shortstop are the main difficulties Cobb says he is facing. Last year, he said, opposition clubs punched holes through the Keystone position of the infield that lost many a ball game. But he has strong hopes of plugging up these infield defects before the season opens.

"The Tigers should finish fifth or better," the Georgia Peach declared. "We have a very good chance of finishing fourth or possibly third. We are still unsettled at second base and at short. Last year 117 errors were made at these positions, but if I can get some fairly good fielding at second and short we will worry any club in the league. I look for improvement in my young pitchers, and the club as a whole will be more settled in its defensive play."

The boys are all imbued with the spirit to win, and any club that expects to find the Tigers easy picking is going to be handed a rather unpleasant surprise, according to Cobb.

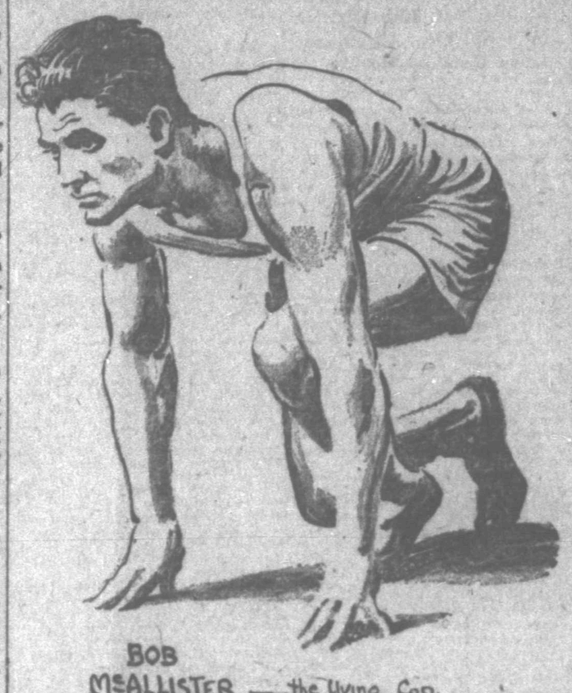

Last year "Pep" Young and a youngster by the name of Sargent held down the positions of second and short.

Cobb did not state whether he contemplated any trades to strengthen his team, but appeared satisfied with the prospects of the club for the coming season.

NEGRO IS REMOVED WHEN CROWD GATHERS AT JAIL

POPULAR BLUFFS, Mo., March 4.—Sank Robinson, negro, was spirited out of town by Sheriff Hogg today when a crowd gathered at the jail, where the negro was held on a charge of murdering Orville Farmer, a landowner. Robinson is said to have shot Farmer at a hotel following an argument over some whiskey.

THE FLYING COP

By ROBERT L. RIPLEY

Notice to yegg men:

Watch your step around New York town!

McAllister, who is a detective attached to the Ninth Inspection District, New York City Police Department, is only twenty-two years old, and ran his first race last September at the police games held on Long Island.

He is a natural runner, has had little instruction, and with frankness admits that he knows little about the science of running. Proper training and tutoring should make him step along with Charley Paddock. As a matter of fact, his time indoors is about as fast a performance at Paddock's efforts outdoors.

The new police athletic sensation ran in flat shoes indoors on the boards of the Thirteenth Artillery Armory in Brooklyn and set the following marks:

	Seconds.
100 yards	10
110 yards	10 3-5
120 yards	11 4-5
130 yards	12 3-5
150 yards	14 3-5

He finished about five yards in front of Jack Scholz, the Olympic sprinter, in the 150-yard event.

McAllister joined the army at the age of eighteen, and served eighteen months on the other side with the old 401st Aero Squadron.

Lost—One Stroke.

Didst ever tee your ball and see
A smirking imp of Satan there?
A bally pest who mocks my best,
He is a sight I scarce can bear.

He looks at me and seems to see
In truth, I am a dub for fair.
I've tried to slug his ugly mug,

BUSINESS OF SAYING NOTHING

Some days ago a group of football coaches got together in a New York hotel with the idea of formulating suggestions in rule changes to be presented for the learned consideration of the Football Rules Committee. The sense, if any, of the meeting was that the goal from touchdown be scrapped in favor of putting the ball in play on the fifteen-yard line for one down only on which the offense might attempt to score the lone point by kick, run or pass.

The idea is just about 90 per cent sheer hokum. What quarterback would call for a running play with fifteen yards to gain on a single down? So much for that.

Also, with the ball in scrimmage on the fifteen-yard line the kicker would, perforce, go right to ten yards back for his effort. Since when, therefore, was a field goal from the twenty-five-yard line worth only one point? And what, may we ask, is to prevent the defense from massing nearly all its men on the line of scrimmage against the seven prescribed by the rules for the team in possession of the ball?

Moe Herscovitch is the welterweight champion of Canada. How do we know? Moe says so himself.

The race may not be to the swift, but did you ever try to prove it by a bookmaker?

THE DIFFERENCE

"Oh, you bum, you terrible clown, you,"
Quoth the greatest star of all.
"For all of me the crowd can crown you."
And the umpire said: "Play ball."

"You missed that one, I sorely fear, sir,"
Said the kid just newly signed.
"Perhaps your vision is not clear, sir,"
And the umpire bawled: "You're fined."

Just why the much-abused sport of wrestling has been further embarrassed by the introduction of the folling fall is above and beyond our feeble resources. As the night watchman of the cabaret said to the stoker at the ice plant: "A rolling fall gathers no cash customers."

MEET MISTER BUSHER FROM BUSHERVILLE

By JACK KEENE.

The Busher is about to take his place in the front rank of baseball's host again, to preen himself before the public for a brief while and then slip out of sight, obscured by the bulking form of the Regular. Just about this time every year the unknown lad from Painted Post or Hohokus or the backlots of the big town gets as much attention as the established stars. His name and the record of his dongs are plastered over the sporting pages and the fans talk of him around the supper table. And then—unless he possesses exceptional class—he falls back to the minors for further seasoning, to be forgotten until he comes up another year.

The rookie who goes south in the spring time with a major league club leads a busy existence for a few weeks. Into those weeks are packed laughs and thrills and disappointments, jumbled with hard work. It is a spring he never forgets, whether he drifts out of baseball or remains in it and achieves stardom. For the average busher a single training trip often means the making or breaking of a major league career. He hits the trail for the southland with his heart light and his hopes riding high, the while he wonders what fate holds in store for him—and if he has the right spirit steels himself for a fight to get the best that fate has—to go out and grab it and not wait for it to be dropped into his lap.

For the first couple of weeks of the stay in camp the rookies get practically the entire attention of the manager. The regulars are left largely to themselves while they go through exercises calculated to limber up their muscles, stiffened by a winter of idleness, while the young fellows caper about in the sunshine under the careful scrutiny of the manager. As a rule, the chief difficulty a manager has with his recruits is to keep them from striking too fast a pace. In their eagerness to show to the best advantage in the short time allotted to them they hurt the ball and themselves around with reckless abandon on the first day unless a check is put upon them. It is not unusual for a recruit to start his training so violently as to put himself completely out of the running because of sore muscles following the first day's exercise.

When the training of the club as a whole has advanced to the stage where daily practice games are played the rookies are pitted against the regulars. It almost always happens that in the first three or four games the youngsters play rings around the veterans, who round into form slowly. This often causes jubilation among the rookies, who do not look beyond their own skill to the lack of condition on the part of the regulars for the real reason for the victories they score. Their triumphs are short lived, however, for once the regulars hit their normal stride the bushers, of course, are easy picking for them.

A common fault, and a natural one for those who look on at a training camp, is to overestimate the ability of a busher in the early days of the team's sojourn. As a result, players often are boosted to the skies by the scribes and then, with the passing of days, gradually drop out of sight and are forgotten by the time the team hits the northward trail. The answer to this may be found in the preceding paragraph. The busher, starting with a rush, looks good until the regular starts. Then the busher is made to look as though he were standing still. But now and then you'll find a busher who looks just as good when the training season ends as he did at the beginning. When you do, you've found a ball player.

BIG LEAGUE MOGULS

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Harry Frazee.

Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox, has been called the champion wrecker of baseball clubs. His wholesale peddling of the star members of the Hub team since he assumed control of the club earned him the sobriquet.

And there is no doubt but what Frazee has managed his ball club with but one end in view—to pay off the mortgages on it.

The sale of Babe Ruth for $125,000 after he had set a record in hitting home runs, was the first deal to draw attention of Frazee. The more recent deal whereby he let his two star pitchers and one of the greatest shortstops in the game go to the Yankees, was another high spot in his career as an auctioneer.

Frazee is known nationally as a theatrical man, having had marked success in producing and managing productions on Broadway and on the road. That he realizes the value of publicity has been evident in his handling of the baseball team. His constant clashes with Ban Johnson and Ban's followers have drawn attention to him and the club frequently. He is a good business man and has a pleasant personality.

INDIANS WILL HAVE NEARLY SAME LINEUP

Tris Speaker Builds Pennant Hopes for Coming Season Largely on Men He Led Last Year.

(By International News Service)

DALLAS, Texas, March 4.—With hopes of another pennant under the leadership of Manager Tris Speaker beating strongly in their breasts, the advance guard of the Cleveland Indians is in training camp here. The advance guard will be joined in a few days by recruits until more than 40 athletes will show their wares to the gray-haired manager of the runners-up in last year's gruelling pennant race.

Dspite the large number of recruits who will work out under the sunny Texas skies, it is the consensus that there will be few changes in the line-up when the words "play ball" are heard at Dunn Field in April. Stuffy McInnis, Red Sox and Athletic star, acquired by Owner Jim Dunn to fill the gaping hole in the Indian infield at first base, the only man to be acquired during the sessions of the "stove" league.

O'Neill Is Back

Catcher Steve O'Neill, out of the game for a long time last season through injuries, is said to be in the best shape in years and Owner Dunn believes he will catch almost every game this season unless the "jinx" puts him in the injured list again. Leslie Nunnamaker, veteran catcher; Ginger Shinault and Luke Sewell, the two latter recruits, comprise the other backstoppers who go to camp with the Indians.

With Tris Speaker, Charley Jamieson and Joe Wood as regular outfielders, backed up by Jack Graney, "Doc" Evans and Louis Guisto, who has twice proven a sensation on the coast, the Indians are well taken care of so far as the "gardens are concerned.

The same is true of the infield, where Stuffy McInnis will be at the hot corner, Bill Wambsganss at second, Joe Sewell at short and Larry Gardner, veteran of many hard games, at third. Young Hammond and Riggs Stephenson, a fellow graduate with Joe Sewell and brother "Luke" of Alabama university, are expected to make good as substitute infielders.

Speaker's Big Problem

Speaker's greatest problem in the spring training camp will be to develop a string of consistent winning pitchers. Stanley Coveleskie, the veteran spitballer, is counted upon as the ace of the pitching staff, and Allan Sotheron and Walter Mails are also believed sure of regular berths.

Local Sportsmen Plan Organization of County Field Trials Association

Splendid Showing Made by Wichita Falls Dogs at Bowie Prompts Owners to Perfect Club as a Medium for More Thorough, All-Around Training for Major Circuit Races.

A movement has been launched by local sportsmen and bird dog lovers to organize the Wichita County Field Trials Association, as a step toward training bird dogs for participation later in the trials of the major circuit. It is also planned to urge upon the citizens of Bowie, Texas., the organization of a similar association and to hold from time to time small field trials with the best dogs entered from these two sections.

The movement is a direct outgrowth of the recent major circuit trials held at Bowie by the Oil Belt Field Trials Association, where the finest bred bird dogs in the United States competed, including Champion Becky Broomhill, Commanche Rap, Great Island Ringing Bells, Don Proctor and other bird dogs of national reputation. The Bowie trials opened the eyes of many local sportsmen, who in the past have been content to develop good hunting dogs, steady to point, steady to fire, keen-nosed, intelligent, but for the most part of limited "casting" ability.

Had the dogs from this city been completely outclassed at Bowie, the enthusiasm of Wichita Falls bird dog owners might have died a-borning. But the local dogs made remarkable showings at the Bowie trials, particular honors going to Tom Hall, black and white pointer owned by "Doc" E. P. Bass, and Eugene M. Jr., a splendid setter owned by Claude Woods. Other Wichita Falls dogs showed more than ordinary ability, especially when tried on birds, and there was not a dog entered from this city that failed to show merit of some kind.

The breeding of the local bird dogs is right. Every dog taken to Bowie had a registration showing a long line of winning ancestors. That more Wichita Falls dogs did not get in the money was simple due to the fact, in the opinion of many good judges, that not a dog, with the exception of Tom Hall, had ever been trained for field trial work. To be successful in this type of canine endeavor, a bird dog must be educated not only in the handling of birds, but even more particularly in speed and in the art of staying "in hand" and keeping on the course while at the same time casting out wide and covering a broad stretch of territory. Men who use their dogs exclusively for hunting seldom bother to train them along all these lines.

Many local sportsmen feel, however, that if a county field trials association could be perfected it would provide the proper medium through which the finest bird dogs in this section could be trained for bigger honors in major circuit trials—and if a similar movement is successful in Bowie, dual trials could be arranged between the two sections that would stimulate interest and further encourage all bird dog owners to give more careful attention to the training of their hunting pals.

LINDALE QUINT WINS TITLE AT STATE TOURNEY

Civic League To Campaign For Members

The Civic league will wage a membership campaign on March 14, according to a decision made Saturday at a meeting of the executive board of the league, held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Sharpe, president. It is expected that a large increase in membership will result from the one day campaign which will make it possible to enlarge the activities of the club during the coming year.

Mesdames W. S. Curlee, R. E. Hilburn, J. W. Stone, Hubert Harrison and Dan Hardy were appointed to head "live wire" committees that will have charge of the soliciting of new members for the league. The city will be divided into five districts and on the date set it is expected that every woman in the city will be given the opportunity to join the league.

Heads of the committee are requested to meet Tuesday at 3 p. m. at the Kemp library with other members of the league when final plans in connection with the campaign will be arranged.

COACH WHITTAKER PLEDGED SUPPORT OF TEXAS ALUMNI

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, March 4.—Pledging of their undivided support and loyalty for the coming football season to Coach Barry Whitsker and the athletic council and calling upon all ex-students and alumni of the University of Texas to get behind the team was part of the accomplishments of the athletic conference held here today.

The conference was attended by alumni and ex-students from Dallas, Houston and other cities and towns over the state at the present athletic council of the university, and Dr. R. E. Vinson, president of the university, who called the conference.

The conference also purged Coach Barry Whitaker of any charges of partiality during the past season, by a resolution. They also thought it inadvisable for the council to change coaches and, recommended employment of an additional assistant coach.

FRAZEE OFFERS JACK DEMPSEY $350,000 BOUT

Red Sox Owner Seeks to Stage Fights Between Dempsey-Wills, Leonard-Tendler, and Buff-Wilde.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Harrey Frazee, owner of the Boston American league baseball club, announced late today that he had offered Jack Dempsey $350,000 to defend his worlds heavyweight boxing championship against Harry Wills, negro heavyweight. Saturday, September 2, was mentioned as the date, the site to be selected later.

In addition to the Dempsey bout Frazee said that he was ready to make tween Benn ;32agltu suitable offers for title bouts between Benny Leonard, world's light weight champion, and Lew Tendler of Philadelphia, and between Johnny Buff, American flyweight champion, and Jimmy Wilde, premier English flyweight.

Mr. Frazee said that if these matches could be arranged, they would be held preliminaries to the Dempsey-Wills contest."

The sum offered Dempsey for the Wills match is $50,000 more than he received for his battle with Georges Carpentier at Jersey City last July, it is the largest individual purse ever offered a fighter.

No offer has yet been made to Wills, Frazee explained, but added that if Dempsey's signature to a contract was obtained, Wills would be offered a sum large enough to induce him to sign for a bout which would give him a chance at the world's heavyweight title.

STUDY MADE OF EQUIPMENT OF OIL REFINERIES

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A study of the efficiency of oil refiners equipment is being conducted at the Petroleum Experiment Station of the bureau of Mines, Bartlesville, Okla. The typical Mid-Continent "skimming plant" was erected at the time of flush production in some oil filed adjacent to the location of the plant and, when completed, oil was at a comparatively low price and easy to obtain. In most cases no particular attention was paid to constructing an efficient plant for the reason that those interested in building refineries of this nature were anxious to get the plant running and obtain returns on their money as soon as possible.

Recently, conditions have changed to such an extent that a number of these refineries have been forced to shut down because of inability to obtain crude or because they were not able to manufacture products to compete with those turned out by the larger refineries. It is believed that by a careful study of these plants the Bureau of Mines will be able to furnish advice as to the best methods for their operation and in that way will be able to aid in preventing enormous wastes that are now occurring in these refineries due to inefficient equipment. M. P. Youker has been assigned to this work, and, as a part of the investigation, he will make a study of construction features, operating conditions, and heat conservation.

Another investigation to be conducted by the Bureau of Mines at Bartlesville, relates to methods of treating petroleum products. Most of the progressive refiners in the country realize that the methods of treating petroleum distillates have for the most part been handed down from one generation to another and that in many cases they are not satisfactory. They are of the opinion that work should be done to determine proper methods for treating distillates from the various types of crude for at present a method of treating products from one type of crude may not be satisfactory for treating products of a certain other type. Also, the losses in treating are comparatively high, particularly in the case of the small refiners who make use of open top agitators and as a result, lose large amounts of the lighter fractions through evaporation. The problem of treating petroleum distillates has been assigned to D. B. Dow, who has had some previous experience along this line, having developed a method for treating casinghead gasoline that is now being used by several plants in the mid-continent field.

One of the most important problems in the oil industry is the production of certain grades of lubricating oils, such as cylinder stocks, from mid-continent crudes. Until recently, these special products have been manufactured almost exclusively from Pennsylvania crude but due to the increase in demand for products of this nature and to decreased production of crude from the Appalachian district, it has been necessary to seek other sources for the production of cylinder stocks. Cylinder stocks are now made from mid-continent crude but in order to make satisfactory products it is necessary to subject the crude to special treatment for the removal of asphalt and other undesirable constituents. It is planned to make use of the experimental refinery at the Bartlesville station of the Bureau of Mines as a means of determining the best methods for handling the different type of mid-continent crudes for the production of cylinder stocks, also to determine the most satisfactory operating conditions for manufacturing products that can compete with lubricating oils made from Pennsylvania crude.

PROSPECTS BETTER FOR MISSOURI AND NO. ARKANSAS ROAD

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Prospects for the resumption of the operation of the Missouri & North Arkansas railroad, whose line from Joplin, Mo., to Helena, Ark., was abandoned by its receivers last year, were declared to be somewhat improved today with the filing of recommendations with the interstate commerce commission by W. A. Colston, the committee director of finance, which if put into effect, would increase the road's earning ability.

Representatives of the road's owners and the population served by it appearing before the commission, urged that a loan be granted it by the government and that trunk line railroads be compelled to give it a larger proportion of the total revenues originating from joint passenger and freight rates.

A BONUS BALLAD

By "NICK" CARTER

Two aged men were talking, and I overheard it all,
And I intend to tell the truth, no matter what befall.
But the head of one was minus hair, the other's white as snow.
And both were garrulous with age, and each had set opinions
Regarding things political in U. S. A. dominions.

"I tell yuh, Sam," said Old Man Brown, "ye're losin' all yuh pep;
Ye got one foot inside the grave; ye better watch yuh step.
I'd hate to be as old as you, worn out with cares and onus,
And still despairin' that I'd get my world war soldier bonus.
I'd be ashamed, I would, Sam White, to be so dern disloyal—
Ye'd better dose y'self, old man, with oil o' pennyroyal."

Then Old Man White he turned as pale, as any soda cracker.
And up and danced about in rage, and swallered his terbacker;
"Ye dodderin' idiot, ye," he squeaked, "I've never seen the day
When ye had sense enough, Jim Brown, to let me have my say.
There'll be no soldier bonus that you'll ever know,

Then spat some fifteen feet or so, as accurate as a rifle;
"Much good it does us spry young chaps to argue with old tramps
I know we'll get a bonus, 'cause 'way back in '22
I heard our repree-sentative declare what he 'ud do."

"Ye fool, ye blind and stagg'rin' optimist," roared aged Sammy White,
"Why that was forty year ago; ye talk as though last night.
Who was it fit, and bled and died, or almost died, Jim Brown?
'Twas old Sam White who fit and bled, while ye was still in town.
Ye fit the Texas mud, ye did; and now ye talk to me,
Who drank more cognac with them 'Frogs' than ye'll ever see!"

I slipped away to call a cop, the talk was getting heated.
And some things that those old men said the censor has deleted.
I slipped away to get a cop, for I respect old age,
And I was fearful lest they'd hurt each other in their rage.
But when the cop and I returned, expecting bodily harms,
Those two old men were fast asleep, in one another's arms!

Cats Will Need Two Ball Teams Says Dan Duffy

By C. F. C.

Now, then, gang, I'm not going to mention any names in this little story, because I don't want to make any guy ashamed of hisself for having received such a letter as I'm going to print and anyways why should the feller what got it be assoshiating with them rabid Fort Worth fans is what me and Dan Duffey wouldst like to know.

But here's the letter what was signed by "C. R." and was written to a bird whose initials are "S. K. C." and which give it to me and I am going to print it even if it does give me a paln:

"Morning, Sammy. Mighty sorry to see in the paper that Wichita Falls is not going to have a good ball team this season. Fort Worth is going to have two teams; going to have a scrub team to keep the regulars in practice for the post-season series with the Southern league champions, as we don't figure these other Texas league clubs can keep 'em in good form. The pitchers are the only ones who will get any practice. Figure Jake will let all the players take turns pitching. All the work the fielders will do will be going back and forth to their positions and walking round the bases after knocking homers. Sure looks bad.

"There is a move on foot to let the Wichita Falls club use flat bats, 18 inches wide and four feet long. It is said this will raise the club's batting average to .142. Well, it might if they use rubber balls.

"They are doing a lot of work out at Panther park, Sam. They're putting up an iron fence around the park. This is on account of Possum Moore sigsing up for next season. He never knocks anything but liner and he busted so many boards last year that they couldn't fix 'em fast enough to keep the cows out of the park. This is on account of Possum being too fat to stoop over and raise up under 'em. None of the other boys give much trouble as they always knock 'em over the fence, unless something happens.

"See you soon, Sammy, and tell you the rest of the news. You boys sure have my sympathy."

And I shows this basis for a libel suit to Dan Duffey and Dan agrees that Fort Worth will need two teams all right, one team of infielders, catchers and outfielders and one team of nine pitchers to stop the Spudders and so I gives three cheers and Dan goes on to remark that the guy what says them Panther pitchers will get exercise sure knows his stuff because they will most probably get knocked outa the box so often they will have to work outa turn all season and when it comes to Jake Atz letting all his players take turns pitching why says Dan, I can remember last summer when George Whiteman hadda use his second baseman and his shortstop as pitchers in one game after the Spudders had knocked out all his reg'lar Houston flingers and maybe that's what Jakey Atz is thinking of and sure adds Dan Duffey if they put an iron fence around Panther park it ain't because of Possum Moore's hitting, but it's being put up says Dan to keep back the overflow crowd that tries to jam into that there park whenever the Spudders visit Fort Worth!

AUTO RACES FOR CHAMPIONSHIP TO START ANEW TODAY

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—The 250-mile championship automobile race, which officials were forced to stop in the 93rd lap last Sunday on account of rain, is scheduled to be run at the Beverly Hills speedway here tomorrow. With clear weather predicted a finished contest is expected.

When the race was called, 116 miles had been run. Tommy Milton led the field, with Harry Hartz second and Joe Thomas third.

The race is the first 1922 championship event, the A. A. A. giving 1,250 championship standing points to those placed. The winner will get $8,000 of a $25,000 purse.

COACH BIBLE IS NOW EN ROUTE TO RULES MEET

Membership in Committee Regarded Highest Honor That Can Come to Man in Athletic Work.

COLLEGE STATION, March 4.—D. X. Bible, head coach of athletics at the Texas A. & M. college, left tonight for New York City to attend the meeting of the National Football Rules committee, which meets March 10 and 11. Bible will be the first man from the south ever to sit in on a meeting of the national rule making body.

He was elected a member of the rules committee at the last meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic association, held in New York City, December 20, and will represent the south, southeast, southwest, and middle western states and conferences.

Membership in the national rules committee, reputed generally to be the highest honor that can be paid a man engaged in athletic work, includes the leading football men of the country, such as Walter Camp of Yale; E. K. Hall of Dartmouth; A. A. Stagg of Chicago; J. A. Babbitt, Haverford; F. W. Moore, Harvard; W. W. Roper, Princeton; Y. Smith, California; Dr. H. L. Williams, Minnesota; Paul L. Daniel, Annapolis (Navy); Carl Williams, Pennsylvania; and Dr. C. W. Savage, Oberlin.

PHOTOS OF BECKY BROOMHILL, BIRD DOG CHAMP, HERE

Hunter Dempsey put on exhibition in the window of the Little Sporting Goods store yesterday photographs taken at Bowie of the greatest bird dog in the United States, Champion Becky Broomhill, holder of the national championship, the Canadian championship and the free-for-all championship. Sportsmen gathered in front of the window throughout the day to study the photographs and to comment on the "champ."

Dempsey took the pictures on the last day of the Oil Belt field trials, just as the judges were about to put down Becky and Great Island Bramble in the second series of the Open All-Age stakes. The photos show Joe Crane, handler of Bramble, holding the dog by the collar with both hands with Bramble straining to get away—while in sharp contrast Champion Becky is shown standing alone, hind legs braced for a springing get-away, and her trainer, Chesley Harris, several feet distant, taking life easy.

SLATER HERE FOR ADDRESS MONDAY NIGHT

George H. Slater, president of the Texas Federation of Labor will address a general open mass meeting at the Labor Temple Monday night at 8:00 o'clock, according to a Saturday announcement. A special invitation to all union members, particularly railroad men, is issued.

It is said that the visit at this time is not in connection with any particular issue, but for the purpose of becoming acquainted with local conditions, and the address will deal with general matters rather than a specific local or state issue. Slater is regarded as a splendid talker and it is expected that he will have a capacity house of members of the local unions to hear him.

STEER FROM TEXAS MAKES REAL HIT IN BIG TOWN CIRCLES

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 4.—A large Texas steer today turned Paddy's Market, a couple of blocks west of Times Square, into a topsy-turvy scene of frightened shoppers and peddlers, overturned push cars and damaged vegetables.

The steer used a young lady's red parasol as an excuse for abruptly quitting a herd on the way to an abattoir. The young lady even more promptly dropped her parasol and escaped.

When the steer plunged through Paddy's Market, the air was filled with oranges, fish, shoe strings, cups and saucers, neckties, lettuce, potatoes, shoes, bananas, newspapers and Mrs. Mary Smith. She was hurled upward when a push cart hit her.

The steer had stumbled on the push cart and before it could arise, policeman Michael Mulcahy jumped on it, grabbed its horns and subdued the animal just as the cowboys do in the rodeos.

GENE SARAZEN WINS SOUTHERN OPEN TOURNEY

Diegel of New Orleans Is Runner-up With 302, Eight Strokes Behind the Title Winner.

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—Gene Sarazan, Pittsburgh, won the title of southern open golf champion here late today by turning in a score of 294 for the 72 hole medal play in the southern golf championship tournament. Leo Diegel of New Orleans was runner-up with a score of 302, while Cyril Walker, Englewood, N. J., leader of the field for a part of the day, finished with a score of 304.

Sarazen in turning the lowest score of the entire tournament with a 72, was just one above par in the last eighteen holes of play.

In his playing during the afternoon Sarazen played par for the first nine holes, but in the second nine missed three easy putts on the fourth, fifteenth and sixteenth holes which cost him three extra strokes.

Diegel's loss of the tournament was attributed to his poor putting in the afternoon round. Cyril Walker finished the first day's play in second place but fell off his game in the second round and gave way to Diegel.

Sarazen, as the winner of the tournament, was given a purse of $1,000 while Diegel received $750, Walker won $500 and Jock Hutchison's share of the prize money was $250.

The contest is the first southern open championship tournament held under the auspices of the Southern Golf association. The title won by Sarazen therefore does not uncrown any former champion, according to local club officials, who declare that the results of the tournament will in no way effect the titles now held by the southern amateur champion, nor the southern professional championship.

RICKEY OPINES HIS PITCHING STAFF IS IN FINE CONDITION

By Associated Press.

ORANGE, Texas, March 4.—Manager Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals, after watching his team in practice two days today, expressed the belief that his pitching staff is in fine condition. Barfoot and Bailey, former Texas leaguers, and Walker and Sherdell, will be used in exhibition games, Rickey said.

EUGENE MEYER OPTIMISTIC OF 1922 OUTLOOK

Better Business Conditions Throughout Year Forseen by War Finance Corporation Director.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Better business conditions in the country continuing throughout the year were foreseen by Eugene Meyer Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, in an address here today at a luncheon of the Republican club. Every concrete and tangible piece of evidence, he reported, pointed to an existing and prospective gradual improvement in the general situation.

"Better financial conditions and the recent stabilization of the markets for agricultural products," he said, "furnish a sound basis for the business recovery already well under way, and for the confidence that the improvement, possibly with temporary reactions, will continue throughout the year. The improvement at home is supplemented by the return toward normal of some of the important foreign exchanges, which warrants the hope of the stabilization of our foreign commerce. The outlook for agriculture, for the railroads and for business generally may be viewed more hopefully than for a long time past.

Discussing the relations between agriculture and railroads, Mr. Meyer declared that both had an interest in seeing that goods reached the markets at the lowest rates compatible with operating and capital costs and both suffered equally from rates so high as to limit the movement of traffic and so low as to prevent a return adequate for the maintenance of the railroad plant in good financial and physical condition.

"It is to be hoped," he said, "that the experience of the railroads with the revolutionary effect of rate increases on the movement of traffic will result in a more elastic handling of the rate situation by the railroads under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission."

Railroads, he continued, must go beyond the mere transportation question and take their share in reducing the other costs besides freight rates which account for the difference between what the producer gets and the price the consumer pays for commodities. They must, he contended, devise means for eliminating waste in transit and cooperate with others in developing more economical marketing methods.

A HELPFUL SUGGESTION.

The Customer—Fine! Just the thing!

The Waiter—Ain't it so? Too bad, we ain't got none.

BLIZZARD SHUTS DOWN INTERESTING TESTS IN WICHITA COUNTY POOLS

This week's blizzard put the finishing touches on the Wichita Falls district oil fields, as it were, making it necessary to shut down temporarily even the few wells that have been able to continue drilling, through the drouth.

Unless there is an additional downpour, or more snow, the bad weather will not have brought any permanent benefit to the oil industry, though it has sufficed to save much of the winter wheat crop, according to the agricultural industry. There may be some places in the county where the snow was heavy enough to make a difference, but the opinion is expressed that it will make little difference in general.

Drilling in of the Gulf's No. 1 Roberts, the first well to get the new 1600-foot sand at Fowlkes Station since the bringing in of the Magnolia's discovery well on the Duke has been delayed on account of the blizzard. Drilling of other tests in this pool has been given a setback by the cold, and it will probably be another week, even if conditions get back to normal, before any of the other tests reach sand depth.

Gulf's Powell on Sand.

The Gulf's No. 1 Powell, west of the Magnolia's discovery well, is on an oil sand around 1800 feet, and has consented and set, preparatory to drilling in and testing. If this sand proves productive, as appears highly probable, this section will begin to take on the appearance of another "Gladiolus" pool, as the South Electra pool was originally called, from the company which has been one of the first and most active in the development of the shallow sands, and also the new 1600 and 1800-foot levels which have proved of much importance recently. It will be remembered that, a short distance further west from the Gulf's No. 1 Powell, Powell & Long, drilling last summer and fall picked up a sand below 1800 feet which was considered as a producer for several weeks, but was finally lost because of casing trouble. On this same Powell lease, the Saint Louis Oil company has started its No. 1, now reported temporarily shut down for the usual reasons.

Interest is added to this section by the good shallow production which has been proven on the east of the Magnolia's semi-deep well. The Mona Marie has several shallow wells on their Roberts lease, and have two more under way. The No. 4, known as the T. F. Hunter-Mona Marie Trust, is reported down around 800 feet.

The Sooner Oil company has two tests under way, both on the T. W. Roberts lands. The No. 2 got several feet of sand, with oil showing around 870 feet, but made no attempt to test at this depth. It is now down around 1,000 feet, at last reports. The No. 1 is reported also around the 1000-foot depth.

Magnolia Drilling Two.

The Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 2-A Duke, is reported down around 750 feet. The No. 1-B Duke, of the same company is below 1000 feet and the No. 2-B is still a rig. The effect of the weather has been felt on this lease, where at least one test should have had the oil sand, it is reported.

In the South Electra district, both in the original pool and the newly opened up pools to the west, the weather had had an almost paralyzing effect. By the first of the week, there were only a few rigs that were able to continue running, on account of the water having been shut off, and with the cold, even the spudding machines, that have had the advantage because of the small amount of water required, have been forced to shut down.

Spudders Going on Waggoner.

Three spudders have been running on the Waggoner lease of the Petroleum Producers company, offsetting the No. 1, which came in three weeks ago with an initial production of 100 barrels, from the 480-foot sand.

With anything like fair operating conditions a well could be brought in from this sand in a week's time after it was started.

The Rio Bravo Oil company's No. 1 Waggoner, a completion last week, in new territory for the 1,600-foot sand, is promising to be a center of new activity as soon as conditions will permit.

Several New Rigs

New rigs west of the original South Electra proven pool include the No. 1 Waggoner of Riner and Bailey, E. M. Gates et al, No. 1 Waggoner and the J. J. Perkins No. 1 Waggoner, ready to start drilling.

The Carteret Oil company, which has an oil sand at 2,000 feet in its No. 1 Waggoner, a south and west extension from the main pool, has a derrick up for the No. 2, while the No. 1 is being completed.

The Griswold Oil company's No. 1 Waggoner, north of the Carteret test, is reported held up in the testing of the 1,900-foot showing, encountered several weeks ago. This test has had trouble with the casing, in addition to the lack of water and cold weather to slow up completion.

The No. 1 Waggoner of Grisham and McCallister, a short distance south of the new 480-foot well of the Petroleum Producers company, is reported down around 700 feet.

The Waggoner and Kolp No. 5 Waggoner, just south of the city limits of Electra, where there have been several nice shallow producers completed, is reported shut down around 1,400, preparing to make a test for the deep sands.

Several new wells will be due in on the Burnett leases of the Planet, Griswold and Gladiolus, in a week or so, if the conditions improve. The Bryan Oil corporation is drilling its No. 6 on the Burnett 100 acres in the main pool.

W. R. Harris et al. are completing a new well, in the 1,800-foot sand, their No. 3 Burnett, in the east side of the pool.

On the Grace Jennings lease the No. 2 of E. M. Fouch et al, is reported a 30-barrel well from the sand at 860 feet.

The Simms' Oil company's No. 6 Burnett is reported a 25-barrel well from the 500-foot sand.

In the North Electra district the Fort Dearborn Oil company's No. 1 H. A. Overallis reported a 10-barrel well, sand at 700 feet.

On the Texas company's Waggoner lease, in South Electra pool the Nos. 213, 214 and 215 are reported ready to drill. The No. 212 was completed a couple of weeks ago for a 100-barrel producer in the 1,600-foot sand. These wells offset the Bridwell and Heydrick Waggoner lease on the east and south.

The No. 1 Burnett of Strunk and Nix, in the older shallow pool, is reported on the 980-foot sand, preparing to complete.

K. M. A. Drills Again

The Kemp, Munger, Allen Oil company, which opened up the K. M. A. pool with it's wildcat well more than two years ago, is doing it's first new drilling in a year's time. The No. 14 is reported down below 1,300 feet. This is an inside location on the east side of the company's 300-acre lease.

The K. M. A. district, with the exception of here and there, a rotary, is inactive at present, and has been for several months. The Kemp-Munger-Allen company is practically the only company which has not yet developed its acreage inside the production lines. General conditions have been the cause for the lack of activity here, but it is understood that there will be a drilling campaign, quite conservative, but still an increase of activity, here within the next few months.

Archer County.

The Andrews pool, in the south part of the county, has its first new producer in many months this past week, when T. E. Lipp made a 30-barrel well from the 940-foot sand, of his No. 4 Andrews. There has been shallow production on this Andrew ranch for several years, though development has been very intermittent. Location has been made for the No. 5 on this lease by Lipe et al.

In the southwest corner of the county the Sun company is reported shut down below 1900 feet in its No. 1, McCarty and underreaming around 1570 feet.

The weather has held up drilling in the Johnston & Markley No. 2 Lake Wilson, offsetting the No. 1, which was found to be full of oil a few weeks ago, after it had been abandoned, with casing pulled for months.

In the Texhoma pool, new operations that have been planned by the Texhoma Oil & Refining company are still held up for various conditions, but some new locations are to be made shortly, it is understood.

South Burkburnett.

The Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 7 Dodson, in the South Burk shallow field, is preparing to drill in the sand at 1030 feet, it is reported.

The No. 3 Beach of the Camp Oil & Gas company, same pool, is waiting for cement to set, before drilling into the 1250-foot sand.

The No. 1 Roller of the Dixon Syndicate is reported drilling below 1200 feet. An oil showing, which was not tested, is reported around 970 feet.

Wirt Franklin is reported rigging up to deepen an old shallow producer on his Cropper lease. This is the No. 4 Cropper, now 500 feet deep.

A new wildcat for the south part of this field is to be drilled on the Horton farm. The derrick was completed last week, and drilling would have already been under way except for the inclement weather. Jack Dow and associates of Wichita Falls are drilling.

The wildcat on the Norris Martin farm, still further south of the old Texhoma pool, known as the Pipe Drilling company No. 1 Martin, is reported down around 800 feet and temporarily shut down.

In the proven pool, the No. 6 Cropper of Stumpf et al, is reported down around 1300 feet.

On the Goetze farm, between Sunshine Hill and the older Burkburnett pools, the Panhandle Refining company is getting ready to drill their No. 1 Goetze, it is reported.

Several rigs are running in the old Burkburnett pools, scattered about. The Stanley, Staley & Langford No. 1 Fee, is reported drilling around 1800 feet.

W. G. Skelly's No. 2 Clara Ramming, is reported drilling around 500 feet.

Lectures At Local Church Highly Praised

Dr. Herbert Yeuell, world traveler and lecturer-entertainer who is announced to appear at the First Christian every night this week beginning with tonight comes to Wichita Falls most fatteringly recommended. He has lectured exclusively in Texas since April, 1921 to more than capacity houses.

In the preparation of the Ben Hur lecture he was assisted by the author Gen. Lew Wallace, and he attributes the universal popularity of his presentation to that fact. In his "Quo Vadis" lecture he ransacked the principal art galleries of the world for beautiful pictures to illustrate his interpretations. The lecture on "Sunny Italy and Her Romances" is the result of several extended visits to that beautiful and historical country. The lecture on "France, Yesterday and Today" has proven intensely popular because it deals with many world wide and post-war topics of up-to-date interest. Doctor Yeuell says that Anton Lang, the Christus of the Passion Play, is one of three of the principal performers of the Passion Play of Oberammergau of 1910 to survive the war, eighty-two in all having been killed in the trenches. So deeply ingrained in their consciousness is the sacredness of the part, even the depleted little village is still able to furnish wonderful performers for all the parts for the 1922 season.

More than a thousand pictures will be shown during the week, it is announced. They are projected from professional machines by Dr. Yeuell's own operator and shown upon a satin curtain.

The pictures will include travelogue, great buildings and cathedrals showing the most wonderful architecture in the world; hundreds of reproductions of master paintings in their original colors, and especially strange types of peoples, both past and present, with their strange customs and modes of living.

At 10:45, Dr. Yeuell will speak on "The Lost Chord" and at 7:30 the subject will be "One Night in Babylon."

Don't fail to hear Geo. H. Slater president of the Texas Federation of Labor, in an open mass meeting at the Labor Temple Monday night, 8 o'clock. Railway men especially urged to attend.

—And when it closes—the door of opportunity will be closed in your face.

Just Two More Sales—Tomorrow at 2:30 and 7:30

—Never before has the public had an equal chance to buy Diamonds, Jewelry and Fine Watches. Hundreds of articles have passed from the auctioneer's box for only a very small part of their true worth. On many unredeemed pledges we have not even gotten the amount of the loan we made on them. Only a desperate need for cash in our business persuaded us to offer these pledges to the public.

SO COME TOMORROW
BRING YOUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS

—You can buy here with absolute safety. Every sale carries our unconditional guarantee that the article is just as represented. We are not leaving the city. We are going to be in business here for years. Our reputation for fair and honest dealing is behind every transaction.

The Franklin Price List
What Is It?

—The printers of Wichita Falls recently voted unanimously to use the Franklin Price List in the figuring of all of their work. And in so doing they adopted the prices prevailing in fully seventy-five per cent of the printing establishments of the United States.

—The prices shown in the Franklin Price List are arrived at by a close study of cost systems kept by printing houses in all parts of America. The prices are figured on a basis of the average cost of each kind of a job. The list is so universally recognized as a fair basis of computing printing costs, that it is employed by many State, County and City Purchasing Agents as a guide in the purchase of printing. It guarantees a satisfactory price both from a buyer's and seller's standpoint.

—In adopting the Franklin Price List the local printers forever sealed the lips of those who are quick to claim that "we always pay more for things at home than abroad." You know that your printing prices are right if they are based on this generally used list.

NEW DISTRICT ATTORNEY FOR LAW AND ORDER

"You may tell the people of this city that I stand for those things which were brought out in that citizen's mass meeting a week ago and you may further state that it will be the endeavor of the district attorney's office to bring about that law enforcement condition which is apparently desired," said W. F. Schenck newly appointed district attorney of the 30th district court, who was here a few hours Saturday.

While Mr. Schenck announced the appointment of Sam Holliday as assistant district attorney to have charge of the local office while he is occupied in the other counties of the district, Mr. Holliday was serving as acting district attorney pending the appointment of Mr. Schenck and previous to that served as assistant under H. R. Wilson and Fletcher Jones for two years.

District Attorney Schenck was in brief conference here Saturday with E. L. Fulton, county attorney and Mr. Holliday regarding the criminal docket of the court. He said that he had not as yet had time to investigate and make decision as to the disposal of the cases now pending.

"I don't know just what is in front of me, but I have always stood for law enforcement and to secure it will be the policy of the office," Mr. Schenck said. Mr. Schenck served as assistant attorney general for a time and was also county attorney of Bell county several years ago.

He returned to Graham Saturday afternoon. His first work will be the grand jury of Young county which convenes there Monday at Graham. The court will be in session there one month. Criminal trials will be held the latter part of the term.

MARTIN GIVES JUDGMENT FOR GLADIOLUS CO.

Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court Saturday rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the suit of the Gladiolus Oil company against the Planet Petroleum company involving title to a 33-acre lease with production in the South Electra pool. The judgment follows a verdict by a jury which made its findings on several submitted issues.

In announcing the judgment Judge Martin set March 25 as the date to hear arguments by attorneys to determine the exact effect of the jury verdict. There is some dispute by the litigants as to the scope of the verdict and judgment and the exact amount of money involved. At the next hearing the court will determine that part of the money from oil now held in escrow will be accrue to the plaintiff and also determine how the development expense will be divided.

The verdict in the case was returned a week ago following a ten-day trial. It is generally considered that the verdict gave the plaintiff company property and oil worth around half million dollars. The suit grew out of a dispute as to the boundary line of an oil lease in the South Electra pool. Both companies have valuable holdings in that pool.

Fashions of Coming Year Favor Women of South, Mrs. Salm Says

"Up north the shops, and the specialty buyers are all showing things for those going south," says Mrs. Louise Salm, buyer for Baum & Gardner, who has resently returned from her first spring buying trip, "but the New Yorker must leave town before she can enjoy the beautiful, colorful new spring clothes. The Wichita Falls woman can in a short time, if we are to forecast weather as usual, will be able to wear at home, to be admired and envied by all her friends, the same smart sport clothes, tweed or more elaborate tailored suits, and all the numerous new fancies of the season. To the buyers from the south this year, it seems as if the fashion designers and creators had them particularly in mind, with the partiality to vivid colors, and to sports suits and sweaters and skirts, a type of dress which has long been a favorite with the southwest and Texas women and girls particularly.

"Wichita Falls' women will be interested in the extreme popularity of the tailored suit after last season's almost complete disregard for the suit. The three-piece suit, with the cape substituting for the coat is, of course, the newest tailored effect, though there are many of these three-piece suits that are so elaborate and soft in effect as to make them appropriate for the most exacting afternoon and semi-formal wear. And, of course, there is the strictly tailored suit, of definite lines, that has its place of utmost importance in the wardrobe of many particular people.

"The separate blouse has really come into its own this season. To match the tweed suit there are shown blouses of organdy or dimity, collared and cuffed in the finest and daintiest of ginghams. All sorts of attractive color combinations and contrasts are made possible in this manner. The vogue for yellow in any and all of its numerous shades, is repeated in these new blouses, in fact, fashion absolutely ignores any color line this season, the brighter and gayer, the better.

"Skirt lengths? Well, Paris continues to make an effort to bring the hem downward. There has not been an unqualified success in this movement. However, there is one well established understanding, that whatever the length, the hem must be uneven.

"There has also been an effort to move the waistline upwards, but the dropped waistline is still most smart. Sleeves may be long or short, and very full and loose, or mediumly tight, if they are short.

"Wraps that are really capes, or in cape effect, have really just about replaced the coat for spring wear. Colors in wraps repeat the gay notes sounded in blouses and sport frocks. There are many checks and plaids, as well as the bright colors in solid effects.

"Beaded embroideries are still much in favor. Many of the spring crepes and satins have the fabric almost hidden by an elaborate embroidery design. Heavy silk embroidery is as much a favorite as the beaded effect. Colored embroideries are plentiful on dark dresses, and dark embroideries have a place on light dresses.

"There is every possible type of crepe used for this spring's garments. Crepe de chine is very good, either plain or in small prints. Roshanara krepe knit and eponge are leading favorites for street and sport wear. There will be much white silk jersey used, and some wool and silk combinations are seen.

"Chiffon is to stage a comeback, and a strong one, and will see more general wear than for some time. White, nile, apple, yellow, flesh, flame, orchid and periwinkle, some of them ordinary enough in name, but unusual in the 1922 variations, are the predominant afternoon and evening wear.

"Black in combination with white, is to be as smart as usual. There will be many shades of red worn, and much periwinkle, which is Princess Mary's favorite shade of blue, word comes from abroad."

Bids Asked for Holliday Creek Bridge Monday

Bids for the construction of the Holliday creek bridge on the road leading from this city to Henrietta will be opened at the Monday morning meeting of the county commissioners' court. The bridge which will be one of the largest that has been constructed in the county is 70 feet long. The new bridge will be of steel construction with a road surface 18 feet wide. It is understood that six companies will submit bids for the construction of the bridge.

It is expected that some final agreement will be entered into Monday by the court and local bankers regarding funds for the completion of the county's outlined county road improvement program. Members of the court are desirous of making an arrangement whereby they can secure the money from the road bond issues so that the work can be completed by the end of the year.

Under the present agreement the county will not receive the last of the money from the road bond issues until May, 1923, the local banks not making their last monthly payment until that time. Members of the court have expressed confidence that the necessary arrangement will be made. In that event, sub-contracts will be let for the construction of roads out of Iowa Park, Electra and Burkburnett.

CALOMEL GOOD BUT NEXT DOSE MAY SALIVATE

It Is Mercury, Quicksilver, Shocks Liver and Attacks Your Bones

Calomel salivation is horrible. It swells the tongue, loosens the teeth and starts rheumatism. There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic—a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Calomel is a dangerous drug, besides it may make you feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than treacherous calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

DECLARE MAN UNBALANCED; NO CHARGES

Declining to bring any charges against him on the ground that he is mentally unbalanced, police officials yesterday released a man who earlier had cashed checks aggregating $100 on two local banks. A relative of the man promised the police to "keep an eye on" his future movements.

The case was peculiar in view of the ease with which the man obtained the money. On the strength of what purported to be a draft for $8,000 on a Tulsa bank he succeeded without difficulty in cashing a check for $50 on a Wichita Falls bank; a little later he repeated the operation on another bank. Next he "purchased $600 worth of furniture here, and gave a check for the amount on a third Wichita Falls bank—and then the investigation started. The Tulsa banking institution disclaimed all knowledge of the man, and City Detective Jack Miller finally located him in a cheap rooming house in this city.

A relative made good the two check, the furniture dealer lost nothing, and the police dropped the case after being convinced the prisoner was, perhaps, a little "balmy in the bean."

With three times as many contestants entered as in any previous year plans are now under way for the eliminations in the high school debating and declamation contests. According to an announcement made Saturday 71 boys and girls have formally entered the contests with a view of representing the high school in the interscholastic meets to be held during the next two months.

Five teams are ready for the eliminations in the boys debating teams. The question for debate is "Resolvot that all immigration to the United States should be prohibited from period of two years." Roan Sides and Sam Hildreth will debate Gage McDeemett and Peyton Thurman, the former taking the affirmative and the latter the negative side of the question; Herbert Mayfield and Preston Beck, affirmative will debate William Powers and Clifton Haynes, negative. Gorman Kenly and Hidley Maples will debate one of the above teams. The winner will defend the negative side of the question against Altus high school on March 17.

The latter team will also debate a team consisting of Mortimer Clopton and Joe Bashara to determine which team shall represent the local high school in the interscholastic meet to be held at Iowa Park April 14 and 15.

Stella Winters and Thelma Cain will debate Frances Jones and Bernice Gatlin to determine which team will debate a girl team from Altus on March 17. The first team will debate the affirmative side of the question and the latter team the negative.

The senior high school girls who have entered the declamatory contest are as follows: Martha Maude Apple, Ira Barksdale, Naomi Beer, Lillian Brannon, V. Buchanan, I. Cain, Elizabeth Carrigan, Welworth Carter, Dorothy Ellis, Rith Evans, Fannie Smith, Frances Jones, U. Johnson, Helen Vandeventer, Carrie Valcek, Nell Warmon, Stella Winters, Ninon Yeager, Anna Keevil, Faye Greene, Mary Hamilton, Lucile Overall, Louise Jenkins, Herma Punds, Lillian Randle, Alleene Richardson, Electra D. Ressor, Dot Russell, Frances Ann Saunders, Louise Scott, Clara Scoggin and Bertha Somerville.

Conner O'Neil Gets Judgment Over Brother

Judge H. R. Wilson of the 30th district court Saturday overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of Conner O'Neil against his brother, John O'Neil and rendered judgment for $15,300 in favor of the plaintiff. The case was tried last week, a jury returning a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

The two litigants are oil operators and brothers. The suit grew out of a dispute in regard to a commission for the sale of an oil lease. Notice of appeal was given following the announcement of judgment.

MARKET REPORTS

Grain

CHICAGO, March 4.—Bears raided the Chicago board of trade grain pits today and a hectic two and one-half hours of trading resulted. The entire list lost ground, wheat finishing with net losses of 3 3-8c in May, 2 1-4c in July and 1 1-2c in September; corn 2 3-4c to 3 3-8c net lower, oats 5-8c to 7-8c off and provisions from 15c to 27 1-2c points under Friday's finish.

Easier prices at Liverpool and weakness in corn started wheat on the downgrade from the opening gong. Heavy selling by houses with New York connections run the market into stop loss orders and soon prices showed drops of 2 5-8 to 4 3-8c with May leading. The run on May was helped by a local concern which sold that option and bought July, the result being a narrowing of the spread between the months.

Later there was a rally on reports of seaboard sales for exports and that Japan had taken 250,000 bushels of hard winter and 150,000 bushels of Manitobas overnight. But in the last 15 minutes, selling by pit traders who bought on the early decline in anticipation of a late rally, caused a sharp setback.

Corn was weak under the same kind of selling as wheat but when inside figures reached 5 3-4c under Friday's high, seaboard houses and shorts bought freely and the finish was on a good rally.

Provisions started off with a new season mark in lard but broke sharply when grain declined. The corn rally gave some late firmness to an otherwise featureless market.

Livestock

FORT WORTH, March 4.—An advance of 5 to 10 cents on hogs which was a new high level for the year featured the livestock trade today. One sale was made at 10.60. Most of the run of 2,000 head went at a range of 10.00 to 10.50. Pigs sold at 8.00 to 8.75 for the most part but a few went to packers at 9.00.

Cattle receipts amounted to 600 head of which 100 were calves. Most of the cattle supply trailed in late and came from south Texas. The early market was active and steady on all kinds.

Nothing was on sale in the sheep house. Around 700 head were recovered on through billing. Quote:

Cattle, beeves 3.50@7.50; stockers 3.50@5.85; cows 2.50@5.50; canners 2.25@2.75; heifers 3.50@7.25; yearlings 3.50@7.50; bulls 2.00@4.25; calves 2.50@8.00.

Stocks

NEW YORK, March 4.—The vulnerable technical position of various automobile shares and kindred specialities, also equipments and oils, gave the shorts an opportunity to depress those issues in the course of today's brief market operations.

Studebaker, Chandler, United States Rubber, Mexican Petroleum and several of the less prominent domestic oils, as well as American and Baldwin locomotives, Republic Iron, American Hide and Leather, preferred, United Fruit, also were under attack.

Several of the secondary rails, especially Missouri Pacific, common and preferred, and Kansas City Southern forfeited part of their recent advances. Extreme losses of one to two points were partly retrieved but a heavy tone marked the close.

The noteworthy feature of the clearing house report was the actual cash loss of 50,256,000, which wiped out last week's large gain and effected another deficit of slightly more than $12,000,000 in excess reserves. Actual loans and discount increased only moderately, but reserves of members of the federal reserve bank showed a decrease of almost $55,000,000.

Foreign exchanges were most erratic, sterling and the leading continental remittances weakening at the outset, but rallying briskly later as a result of speculative covering operations. German marks again were the sole exception, extending their recent decline.

Mercantile authorities reported an increase of business compared with that of the same period last year, but collections were less satisfactory, despite the relative ease of money at interior centers.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Bullish advices from Brazil failed to stimulate any large volume of buying in the cotton market for coffee futures here this morning, but imparted a generally steady or firm tone to prices. There was some scattered realizing at the start but after opening 2 points low to 3 points higher, active months held 1 to 4 points above last night's closing quotations.

May advanced to 8.73, making a recovery of 30 points from the low level of Wednesday. The official cables showed continued firmness in the primary market which private advices attributed to renewed buying by government interests, a better demand from Europe and firmer exchange rates. Closing prices here were at about the best for the market, being net unchanged to 5 points higher; sales were estimated at about 11,000 bags. Closing quotations: March 8.62; May 8.72; July 8.74; September 8.79; October 8.80; December 8.81.

Cotton

NEW YORK, March 4.—A bullish report on fertilizer sales in the south failed to create any general demand in the cotton market here this morning and prices were lower under realizing or liquidation. May sold off from 17.92 to 17.72 or 22 points net lower and the close was barely steady at a net decline of 19 to 26 points.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 2 to 16 points under over night selling orders. Initial offerings were pretty well taken by scattered buying on the New Orleans report that sales of fertilizers in the south from August 1 to February 28, showed a decrease of 16 per cent as compared with last year and of 70 per cent as compared with two years ago. There was also some trade buying, but the demand was supplied on rallies of a few points from the lowest, and the market showed increasing weakness later in the morning under less general liquidation.

March sold off to 18.00 and July to 17.05, and the close was at the lowert prices of the morning. No one special news feature was connected with the decline with local brokers attributed largely to an easing of the technical position on the February advance. The disposition to even up long contracts, however, was promoted by the decline in grain, and the unsettled ruling of foreign exchange rates, while there was also unfavorable comment on reports of a smaller volume of business in the goods market.

Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market for the week were estimated at 150,000 pieces compared with 220,000 for the previous week. The curtailment of production at that center was estimated at 110,000 pieces but was reported largely due to an epidemic of influenza. The statement on fertilizer sales, indicated a small decrease as compared with last year than talked of in some quarters recently, but carried the season to a later date than previous figures. South Carolina reports say that farmers have been deferring purchases of fertilizer as long as possible in the hope of getting it at lower prices.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—Figures on fertilizer sales in the south were a supporting influence for a while in the cotton market but after mid-session the tone was distinctly weak. Under the great deal of liquidation from the long side and rather aggressive selling. The close was practically at the lowest of session, at net losses of 21 to 25 points, May closing at 16.56.

While the opening was lower, losses amounted to only 2 to 8 points and there were partial recoveries from this, as the result of a statement by Secretary Hester of the New Orleans cotton exchange, placing sales of fertilizer in nine states of the cotton belt at 552,836 tons during the seven months ending with February against 568,723 during the same period a year ago and 1,758,777 two years ago. This was a decrease of 16 per cent compared with the sales of last year and a decrease of 70 per cent compared with those of two years ago. While this was regarded as very unfavorable in connection with the outlook for production during the coming season it caused no aggressive buying.

Weather conditions over the belt were considered more favorable, temperatures being moderate. It was complained, however, that the further rains in the eastern division of the cotton region would interfere with crop preparations.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Cotton goods were quiet today. Print cloths in wide constructions were easier. Yarns were quiet, with a firmer trend and sheetings were firm. Wool goods were quiet, with a more noticeable demand for staples. Burlaps were quiet. Linens have been revised on plain cloths in primary producing markets.

Metals

NEW YORK, March 4.—Demand for finished steel continues to make slow but steady growth and the various companies are showing gains in their daily output. The demand is especially encouraging for structural materials and for plate, for tank and car construction, but there is also a fair general demand for prompt delivery. Mills are so anxious for business, however, that competition is very keen and prices are barely steady.

Teh pig iron market shows further improvement and an encouraging feature of the demand is that the trade is beginning to anticipate future needs.

Copper has shown rather a steadier tone during the week. While no increase in business of importance has been reported there has been a little more doing for export and domestic consumption have shown more interest. In the meantime, most of the small lots recently pressing for sale appeared to have been either absorbed or withdrawn.

The export business reported has been largely for shipment to France and the continent, but small sales have been made to Great Britain and there has been a moderate inquiry for casting for China.

Tin was weak following sharp declines in London and the far east, which has badly disturbed confidence among local dealers.

Zinc has been firm with no much offerings. There is some disposition to anticipate requirements, including a better demand as far ahead as June delivery.

Antimony remains quiet, the large arrivals supplying what demand there is from consumers.

COLD WEATHER CHECKED WORK AT ELECTRA

Water Situation Is Growing Serious; Local Banks Will Liquidate Warrants; Praises Local Workers.

First Hog Sale Success; Tractor Demonstration; Social Matters and Personal and Minor Mention.

BY H. A. STROUD

ELECTRA, Texas, March 4.—The cold weather of the first part of the week has materially slowed up work in the oil fields and held back the completion of several important tests. During the first of the week practically every well in the field was temporarily shut down for three or four days on account of the sleet and ice that made work impossible. Extreme care was necessary in guarding water lines over the field and a large number of them were broken in spite of all precautions taken.

The snow has almost disappeared but so gradual has been the thawing out that no water has accumulated for drilling purposes in any section of the field. However, the farmers are well pleased with the condition in which the snow has placed their grain and it is believed that the cold weather and freeze will set back what little fruit there is in the country until it will probably yield a large crop this season.

In the oil fields the water situation is growing more serious every day. In the Fowlkes district everything is shut down with the exception of the Magnolia and Gulf wells awaiting the arrival of the four-inch line coming over from the Dale farm. Work has stopped on the construction of this line during the first of the week and it will not reach the field until the middle of next week. Down in the South pool the Planet has everything shut down awaiting a water supply. However, the Planet is considering running a four-inch line to Beaver Creek and will not be shut down long. The Gladiolus has a supply for the present but the many independents scattered over the Waggoner lease are less fortunate and must await a rain before resuming operations.

Banks and Warrants

Local banks have consented to liquidate warrants for the city of Electra to provide money for the solution of the city's water situation, according to an announcement made by the Chamber of Commerce and city officials during the latter part of the week. The three banks have agreed to furnish $25,000 which will be used in building a four-inch pipe line from the city reservoir on the Schleitzer farm to a point near Red river, a distance of four and a half miles. This line will start immediately and it is believed will add enough to the city's water supply that there will not develop a shortage this summer.

A few days ago the city officials asked the Chamber of Commerce to appoint a committee to work with them with a view of finding some solution for the threatened water shortage. The Chamber of Commerce committee composed of E. M. Friend, John Brownlee, J. A. Wise, J. A. Brannen and E. R. Brown immediately enlisted the services of a capable engineer who went over the situation thoroughly and made recommendations that the auxiliary line would be the most economical and efficient manner of providing temporary relief. The committee investigated the sands near Red river and found that the Texas Company and the Magnolia Company already had pump stations located there which were furnishing about 400,000 gallons of water each a day and that the supply had not been diminished on account of the dry weather. The water is pure and has been used for drinking purposes for years by the people residing in those communities adjacent to the sand territory.

However, the financing being complete for the present does not mean that the water situation is permanently solved. But the committee and city officials have laid out a program that when complete will probably solve Electra's water problems for years to come. The plan is to vote a bond issue of $100,000 which will be used in taking up the outstanding warrants held by the local banks and in substituting a twelve inch line from the city to the pump station instead of the six inch main that is now serving. The six-inch line that will be taken up can be used in extending the water service over the city, according to the recommendations of the committee.

Petition for Routes

Petitions have been completed for two rural routes and the applications have been sent in to the postoffice department. These two routes will cover a section of the county that is not being served by any mail route at present and will greatly facilitate the mail service of this section of the country. The routes will be about 35 miles each in length.

One of them leads out of the city south serving the site of the diversion dam, doubles back to the K. M. A. district, comes back over the Electra bridge into the Fowlkes territory and back to Electra.

The other mail route will lead out north of the Sunshine Hill road serving a number of farmers in and around that community and will come into the Wichita Falls highway near Burk station and thence back to Electra.

Praises Local Bankers

The board of directors of the chamber of commerce adopted a resolution of praise to the local banking institutions, commending them for their attitude towards financing the city warrants for the relief of the threatened water shortage. The resolution adopted was published in local newspapers and copies mailed to each of the bankers.

First Hog Sale Success

The first hog sale that was ever held in Electra of thoroughbred stock occurred last Monday when J. C. Guyer, noted breeder residing north of this city, placed on sale a number of his high grade stock. In spite of the severe cold weather a good crowd of interested farmers and stockraisers were in attendance and the hogs sold for fancy prices, the average per head running $80.81. Mr. Guyer's hogs were of the Poland China breed and carried the strains of some of the best known stock in the southwest. The record price of the day was paid by E. M. Friend, of this city, who purchased a prize sow, Bell Mastedon, for the sum of $375. The lowest price paid for any of the offerings was $40 which sum was realized from the sale of three or four young gelts. Very few buyers of the Electra trade territory made purchases and those locally interested were glad to note the interest that is being manifested by local farmers in high grade swine.

LOCAL BREVITIES

The Lina Motor company in this city is receiving numerous inquires from all over the country concerns the adaptability of Fordson tractors to oil field work. W. A. Ashill, manager of the company, has been conducting a series of demonstrations all over the oil fields showing the wide range of work that can be accomplished by the Fordson and a recent attachment that is known as the Myers Winch. With the winch attachment the Fordson is now being used in the oil fields for pulling rods and tubing from wells. Recently this tractor made a pull of a well when the three lower joints were entirely encased with paraffine. It was a mighty pull but the Fordson did the work. This tractor is also being used for pulling heavy loads and it is nothing uncommon to see on going down the streets hooked on to a wagon loaded down with 10,000 pounds of casing and oil field material.

Amos Bates started construction of a new garage building last week on Cleveland avenue. Mr. Bates stated that before he had laid the foundation he had over a dozen opportunities to rent the building. He stated that many residents of Wichita Falls and Vernon had their eyes on Electra with a view of going in business here as soon as a location could be secured.

The Trades day, which was scheduled to have been held in this city yesterday, has been postponed until next Saturday. One of the features of the trades day will be the auctioning of articles that are useless to the owner, but may have a value to someone else. The chamber of commerce is conducting the auction and listings of the offerings are being advertised free of charge.

J. F. Davis, local oil man, has closed a contract with the Callihan Construction company to furnish them 150 head of work stock. The teams and drivers left the city yesterday to establish a camp at the dam site and will begin work next week.

The Texas Pine Line company and the Magnolia Petroleum Pine Line department suffered considerable loss during the first part of the week on account of broken down telegraph and telephone lines. According to the office men it was impossible to get connection with but few points in the field. Electra was also isolated as far as communication was concerned with the outside world. It was impossible to get points in either direction over long distance telephone. However, the high line of the Wichita Falls Electric company between this city and Wichita Falls weathered the storm with only momentary breaks in the service.

Mrs. Fred Lalk, aged 26, died at her home in the Enterprise community, north of this city, March 26, and was buried in the Electra cemetery Monday. Rev. Wolff of Dallas conducted the funeral services. Mrs. Lalk is survived by her husband and one little girl 3 years old.

Mrs. Nona Mae Stansel Fillman died at her home here on Wabash avenue Feb. 22, following an illness of several days. Funeral services were held at the family residence by E. M. Francis, pastor of the First Baptist church. Mrs. Fillman had been a resident of Electra for several years and was a graduate of the Electra high school. She is survived by her husband, Benton Fillman.

Club to Have Guests.

Members of the Wednesday Music club are already making preparations for the entertainment of four noted guests of the Edison laboratories who will be in this city on March 22. These guests will include Harvey Hindermyer and the Dann Trio, all of whom are recognized artists with the Edison Phonograph company. Mr. Hindermyer is a tenor of great ability and has been registered in many concerts in leading cities over the country. He has sung at the principal music festivals and press and public have alike, heaped much praise upon his unequalled work. The Dann trio are three New England young ladies of distinct musical ability. They are bright lights in the concert field and are artists on the piano, violin and cornet. The music club is planning for a concert to be held in the High School auditorium while these distinguished musicians are in the city and are also planning for many beautiful entertainments in their honor while in the city.

Wednesday Music Club.

The Wednesday Music club met March the first in the First Christian church. The meeting was presided over by Vice President Mrs. J. A. Wise. The afternoon was devoted to the study of Indian music and various American composers. The leader, Mrs. A. F. McCormick, gave an interesting discussion of the importance of music in the different phase of life among the American Indians. Chief among these was a vivid description of the corn dance which always takes place at the harvest season. The excellent program rendered was as follows:

Piano—"In Fond Remembrance," Goetze, by Miss Gelhausen. Mrs. Bruce Frazier gave a brief sketch of the "Apocloypse" which was featured by the Federated Music Clubs of America and recently conferred by Gallico. It is taken from "The Four Horsemen of the Apocolypse," and the book on Daniel. It bids fair to rise to great popularity in the operatic world.

Mrs. Wise Entertains.

Mrs. J. A. Wise was hostess Tuesday afternoon to the Primo Bridge club and the Five Hundred club. The afternoon was spent in playing both games, an extra table of bridge being provided for the members of the Five Hundred club. Mrs. S. C. Hyter won the high score at bridge and Mrs. S. J. Dotson, the guest prize. Mrs. Johnnie Mariott was awarded the prize in "500" games. Refreshments served by the hostess consisted of very tasty salad course daintily served. Members of the Bridge club in attendance were: Mmes. Brownlee, Cramper, Campbell, Hyter, Harris, Haaf, J. T. McDannald, McGann, Kearby, Dotson, Magee, T. H. Smith, Frazier, Morrow, Cameron and Mrs. Lloyd of Wichita Falls. Those of the "500" club who attended were: Mmes. Watson, Marriott, Turner, Chaffee, Green, Davidson, Marchant, Morgan, Brown, Cummings, Parr and Cook.

TO HOLDERS OF VICTORY NOTES AND OTHERS CONCERNED

Notice is hereby given as follows: First call for redemption of three and three-quarter per cent Victory notes. All of these three, three-quarter per cent series of United States of America convertible gold notes of 1922 and 1923 otherwise known as three three-quarter per cent Victory notes are hereby called for redemption on June 15, 1922. Pursuant to the provision for redemption contained in the notes and in Treasury Department circular number 138, dated April 21, 1919, under which the notes were originally issued, interest on all Victory notes of the three three-quarter per cent series will cease on said redemption date, June 15, 1922.

Second—suspension and termination of Victory note conversion privilege in view of the call for the redemption of all three three-quarter per cent Victory notes on June 15, 1922 and pursuant to the provisions of said Treasury Department circular number 138, the privilege of conversion of Victory notes of either series into Victory notes of the other series is hereby suspended from February 9, 1922, to June 15, 1922, both inclusive and on June 15, 1922, will terminate. Victory notes accordingly cease to be interconvertible effective February 9, 1922, and on and after that date no conversions of the notes may be made.

Third—detailed information as to the presentation and surrender of three three-quarter per cent Victory notes for redemption is given in Treasury Department circular number 277, dated February 9, 1922, copies of which are available at the Treasury and Federal Reserve Bank.

A. W. MELLON

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County, Greeting:
You are hereby commanded to summon Jessie I. Flick by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 89th District Court of Wichita County, to be holden at the Court House thereof in Wichita Falls on the First Monday in April, A. D. 1922, the same being the 3rd day of April, A. D. 1922. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 15th day of February, A. D. 1922, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court No. 13970-B wherein, Franklin Flick is plaintiff and Jessie I. Flick is defendant and said petition alleges that plaintiff and defendant were lawfully married on the 26th day of April, 1889, and lived together, with exception of short intervals, until October, 1910. Plaintiff says that defendant was harsh, cruel and tyrannical, that she would accuse him of being untrue to her, would accuse him of keeping company with common prostitutes, all of which she knew was untrue. Plaintiff further says that defendant would curse him, calling him all kinds of bad names, and accuse him of being a thief, and further went so far as to threaten to kill

SHERIFF'S SALE
COUNTY OF WICHITA.
By virtue of a certain order of sale issued out of the Honorable 89th District Court of Wichita County, on the 25th day of February, 1922, by A. F. Kerr, Clerk of said court against the Texas National Oil and Refining Corporation for the sum of Two Thousand Eight Hundred Forty-four and 50-100 ($2844.50) Dollars and costs of suit in cause No. 11938-C in said court, styled G. W. Whitman versus Texas National Oil and Refining Corporation et al and placed in my hands for service, I, Fred K. Smith, as sheriff of Wichita County, Texas, did on the 25th day of February, 1922, levy on certain real estate situated in Wichita County, described as follows, to-wit:
The well and gas leases and leasehold estate, and all interest owned therein, being an individual one-half interest, together buys a modern four-room house with garage within two blocks of the Austin school. This property is not an old run-down property, but is well worth twice this price, however, it must sell and for that reason the owner has agreed to take this price for the property.

—This amount buys a strictly modern 5-room house on the pavement, has also garage. With no exceptions there is not a duplicate of this property to be had in the town.

buys an east front modern 5-room house on a corner lot with an extra width and an extra depth lot. This property is situated within three blocks of the High school. If desired, can be handled on very reasonable terms.

—A modern 6-room brick home on the pavement with the pavement paid for, on one of the best resident streets of the town. $2500 cash will handle this property.

buys an east front 7-room strictly modern house in the second block off Tenth street on one of the best resident streets in Floral Heights. This property can be handled by a good moral risk with any terms desired.

—The above are only a few of the many sacrifices that we have to offer you at this time in choice homes in any part of the city. An appointment with you is all we ask if you are really in the market for a home in Wichita Falls.

LINEUP FOR CITY RACES IS FORMED

Expiration of the limit for the time for filing nomination petitions for candidates in the municipal election in April at midnight last night found the existing situation little changed, except for the addition of a petition for N. M. Clifford for Place 2 on the council, in opposition to D. M. Perkins and Nat L. Ings, and of J. T. Richards, a union carpenter living at 309 Walnut street for Place 1 against Burton A. Stayton and J. B. Stokes.

A nominating petition for O. B. Kelly for mayor was also filed Saturday as the result of the organization of a "Non-Partisan League" Friday night. Little is known of Kelly save that he was formerly a resident of Bowie, has recently engaged in an attempt to make an issue of wages and working conditions on the irrigation project, a movement which has drawn repudiation from both the business and local union interests, and statement of Police Commissioner Fitts to the city council on one occasion that he had at one time served the city as dog catcher, resigning when some one released all the canines which had been gathered into the city pound.

ORDERS TO REVOKE FLEISCHMANN FIRM'S PERMIT SUSPENDED

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Orders by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes revoking the industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann Company, Inc., of New York, and eleven of its agencies were suspended until Tuesday night by Internal revenue Commissioner Blair.

The orders were suspended, Mr. Blair said, pending a re-hearing of the case on Tuesday. He added that he, himself, would hear the case.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Henry Kaltenbach, vice president of the Fleischmann Company, Inc., manufacturers of yeast and alcoholic by-products, tonight asserted that the federal prohibition department is "in such a bad muddle it doesn't know what's going on. It doesn't know what it's all about."

His statement was occasioned by the announcement that Prohibition Commissioner Haynes' order revoking industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann Company had been suspended by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair and that seizure of alcohol in possession of the company and its 11 agencies would be held up.

"We shall continue to manufacture alcohol," said Mr. Kaltenbach, "although we shall respect the government's orders by not shipping any of it until Tuesday."

FAIR WORKERS TO MAKE START EARLY TUESDAY

Expect to Get Capital Stock for Fair This Week; Encouraging Neucleus of $200,000 Now Pledged.

Work toward the subscription of the $200,000 capital stock for the Texas-Oklahoma Fair, stopped by the storm of snow and sleet last week, will be resumed Tuesday morning by a large force of workers, starting from the Chamber of Commerce at 9 o'clock. Although no report on the subscriptions obtained will probably be made until near the close of the week when the workers will be called together for a general report, it is known that a highly encouraging neucleus of the total amount needed has been obtained as a result of the work to date. It is believed that the total amount can be secured during this week.

SAYS ACCOUNT IS NOT CORRECT

The following statement taking issue with the account of the case of two expulsions recently upheld by the county board of education has been given The Record News by D. H. Oltman, father of the boys. It reads: "The item printed in your paper on February 26 on 'County Board Upholds Expulsion' at District No. 22, better known as the Everett district, needs correction.

"The first two times the instructor punished the 11 year old child, it was done with entirely too much severity for any parent to allow. The second time he was punished she called a 16 and an 18 year old boy to hold him, and the 15 year old boy jumped up and threatened the two boys in their attempt to hold him, but he did not threaten the instructor.

"She ordered these two boys out of the school ground and told them not to come back, but the parents compelled them to go back to school, and she then called in the trustees and father-in-law and dismissed all the school but the 11 year old boy. She then locked the door and proceeded to punish him and threatened to call on help before these men.

"The parents applied to the county superintendent and he only took the instructor's evidence, and then they brought it before the county board.

"Fifteen witnesses gave evidence but none was accepted but the instructor's. One of the county board was absent, another did not vote, and two others were acquaintances of the instructor.

"The older boy was expelled the rest of the term and the younger boy must take another punishment before he is reinstated.

IN MEMORY OF T. B. TAYLOR

Whereas, the Sovereign Commander of the Universe has seen fit to remove from our midst Sovereign Tom B. Taylor, be it resolved by Wichita Camp No. 3001, Woodmen of the World that we do humbly bow in sorrow to the orders of the Supreme Commander.

That we do extend to his bereaved loved ones our sincere sympathy and refer them to Him who heals all sorrow.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Camp; a copy be furnished to the family of our deceased Sovereign and a copy be furnished a local paper for publication.

Addie Comfort, eleven-year-old girl of Hawley, Pa., has been found after a two-year hunt for the persons who kidnaped her. She was found with Mrs. Margaret Greenwood of Syracuse, N. Y. Mrs. Greenwood is said to have told officials that a showman kidnaped the girl, intending to make a dancer of her but later abandoned her. The woman's husband believed until the recent discovery of the girl by the Syracuse Children's society that she was his own daughter.

WILL DEVELOP OIL RESOURCES OF NICARAGUA

Americans Granted Concessions Covering Practically All of the Area of the Republic.

By Associated Press.

OKMULGEE, Okla., March 4.—Development of the petroleum and natural gas resources of Nicaragua, in Central America, by oil men of the United States, is assured as the result of granting of an oil lease or concession covering practically the entire area of Nicaragua to W. B. Alexander of Okmulgee and Kansas City, and associates, according to an announcement here today by Mr. Alexander.

The lease, granted for 40 years by the Nicaraguan government, covers approximately 40,260 square miles and provides that a certain amount of oil and gas development work shall be done each year, Alexander said. It is subject to renewal by the present grantees and carries a royalty provision for the Nicaraguan government and also contains a clause providing that its holders may purchase the surface of government land covered by the lease for $1.50 per hectare, equivalent to about two and a half acres.

In seeking the Nicaraguan lease Mr. Alexander and several Kansas City capitalists, were in competition with oil men of other countries. The award is looked upon here as a big achievement for American oil interests. If Nicaraugua should prove to be a prolific oil producing country, the Alexander concession would assume international importance.

Mr. Alexander is a pioneer oil operator in this district. He will leave for the east within a few days to make arrangements to start the preliminary work which must be done before actual drilling operations can be begun in the Central American republic.

Up to the present time no commercial production of petroleum or its products has been developed in Nicaraugua, it was said.

JUSTICE THRONE AT BURKBURNETT RESIGNS PLACE

Special to the Record News.

BURKBURNETT, March 4.—Justice Dave Throne today announced his resignation as justice of the peace to take effect March 15. The reason given was lack of sufficient remuneration for the work entailed by the face.

GAS STOVE IS CAUSE FOR ALARM

A gas stove, which had been forgotten at closing time was the cause of a run of the down town fire department to the Riggs Clothing Store, 511 Eight street, shortly after midnight.

There was no damage. The alarm came at 12:05 and the "out" sounded at 12:07.

LANING & MONINGER COMPLETION OPENS POSSIBLE NEW POOL IN SOUTH BURKBURNETT DISTRICT

South Burkburnett comes to the front to claim some of the wild-cat extension notoriety which has for several months been confined to the Electra district. On the Cropper land, on the grounds of the Burk-Tex Refinery, Laning, Moninger & Newby have brought in a good producer, from the 1250-foot sand, an extension to the north of about two miles from the old field, though it will probably prove a new pool, instead of an extension. This new well is reported better than 40-barrel producer.

These operators have 120 acres in their Cropper lease which they are planning to develop as quickly as possible. Two more rigs are already on the ground, for Nos. 2 and 3. Other operators and several large companies who had acreage near this new well, or have recently acquired acreage, and are preparing for tests.

A new wild-cat test a mile southeast of Burkburnett, on the R. E. Moore, is to be drilled by the Texhoma Oil & Refining company. The derrick is up, and the rig is being moved in, to start drilling immediately. This test is in a neighborhood where the scattered tests that have been drilled previously, have had sufficiently favorable showings to make further tests worth watching.

The Saturday reports from the field showed little news. Some rigs that had been shut down through the week on account of the blizzard, were getting ready to resume activity. If there was drilling water available, while the water problem itself was practically unchanged by the snow, which, while a salvation to the wheat crop, put no water into creeks and tanks.

The Texhoma Oil & Refining company's water line to the new Fowlkes Station pool will be finished by Monday or Tuesday of this week, according to the Saturday reports. The line would have been completed this past week, if work had not been held up by the bad weather. The Texhoma will commence drilling their No. 1 J. C. Duke, as soon as the water line is in operation, and it is understood that there will be several other tests in a short time.

Think Horse Biting Child Had Rabies

Special to the Record News.

BURKBURNETT, March 4.—James Webb, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Webb, was today taken to Auston for treatment at the Pasteur institute as a precaution against rabies, following the bite of a mare belonging to a neighbor, which is thought to have gone mad. A colt of this horse six weeks ago bit some children here, and an analysis of its head showed symptoms of rabies. The mother had been confined since the colt's symptoms, but succeeded in breaking loose today.

SIX OUTFITS NOW AT WORK ON BIG DITCH

With the placing of two more teaming sub-contractors at work on the South Canal of the irrigation project the first part of this week, six different "outfits" will be at work and the digging of the big ditch will be in full swing up to mile 17. The outfits which will then be at work will be the Yandell, Shackelford, Casada (Dago Mike), Cecil and Cumby outfits. Each is equipped with practically the same machinery at the Yandell outfit, which first went on the job, and each gives employment to about 30 men. Whites, negroes and Mexicans are at work for these various outfits, ranging from outfits which are composed almost entirely of whites to those almost entirely of blacks.

Digging of the muck ditch for the steel sheet piling for the embankment of the diversion dam by the big drag line of Callahan & Walker, sub-contractors, is almost complete—800 feet being left. The driving of the piling is somewhat behind this work, but several hundred feet have been driven. Following completion of the trench, the drag line will begin working on the embankment proper.

At the storage dam the power steam shovel is still engaged in excavating for the conduits. The bridge at this point will be completed Tuesday.

Minor's parents live in Fort Smith, Ark., but he has been working in Wichita Falls the past two years.

KEELING BELIEVES MEXIA IS THROUGH WITH MARTIAL LAW

By Associated Press.

MEXIA, Texas, Mar. 4.—Martial law will not be restored in Mexia, Attorney General Keeling declared he felt confident, after a two-day police organization with city officials.

"The local officers are in dead earnest about enforcing the laws and I am well satisfied with results thus far," he said. He left tonight for Austin.

Streets of Mexia have resumed their former bustling and thronged appearance. It is estimated on good authority that at least 2,000 new investors and people not classed as "undesirables" have arrived here in the past ten days.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. W. F. PEERCE

FIVE BABIES DIE AT BURK IN THREE DAYS

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, March 4.—Five children of less than a year of age have died here in the three days of March 2-4 inclusive—all but one of them from pneumonia. The children were George Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Freeman, one year of age, who died with pneumonia; Minnie L. Tinker, 9 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Tinker, pneumonia following influenza; Troy Thompson, six weeks old, one of twins recently born on following days to Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Thompson, pneumonia following whooping cough; George Herman Berry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Berry, six months old, pneumonia; John C. Wills, 10 days old, one of twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Wills, who died suddenly without showing signs of sickness. All of the children were buried in Burkburnett.

Extension Is Granted for Water Taxes

Announcement was made yesterday by the directors of Wichita County Water Improvement District No. 1 that a further extension to April 1 has been made on the payment of taxes for 1921. After that date a penalty of 10 per cent will be added, and all property subject to this tax will be charged with the additional costs incident to legal collection.

The announcement was made through the press after the directors found it impossible to reach many citizens because of changes of address since the assessments were made last spring. The law also will require publication of the names of all property owners on the completion of the delinquent roll, which will be prepared soon after the first of April.

Mrs. Calvert Is Injured in Auto Collision

Mrs. Roy Calvert, 1915 Grant street was injured Saturday at 6 p. m. when the automobile in which she and her husband were riding was struck at the corner of Tenth and Buchanan streets by a Ford car driven by two negroes. Mrs. Calvert was thrown against the windshield of the automobile by the collision. She was immediately taken to the Jones-Lee-Kiel hospital where attending physicians said her condition was not considered serious. No bones were fractured it was said although she was painfully bruised.

According to information obtained by the police the accident was largely due to negro driver of the Ford car and the slippery condition of the pavement at the street intersection. Mr. Calvert was coming down Tenth street when struck by the Ford coming out of Buchanan street. The Calvert car was damaged slightly and the Ford was practically demolished.

Anne Morgan, Noted Woman Welfare Worker, to Be in Wichita Fals on Saturday and Sunday of This Week

Saturday and Sunday, March 11 and 12, Miss Anne Morgan will be in Wichita Falls, on behalf of the work of the American Committee for Devastated France, of which she is chairman of the executive committee. Arrangements were completed Saturday for Miss Morgan's visit to Wichita Falls, promised by Miss Morgan personally to J. G. Culbertson, who took an active part in the work in Texas, some time ago.

The program for the two days includes a luncheon on Saturday, when the opportunity will be given for both the club women and the business men of the city to meet Miss Morgan and hear first hand of the work that the American Committee has been doing in the devastated area of France. Saturday night, Miss Morgan will address a meeting of Boy Scouts. Sunday afternoon there will be a meeting at one of the theaters, open to the public, and Miss Morgan will again speak.

Miss Morgan is spending a part of the month of March in Texas. She has been in Dallas all this past week, and is scheduled to appear in all of the larger cities.

CENSUS SHOWS VAST WEALTH OF THIS STATE

Outsider Convinced That What He May Have Considered Bubbles Is Based Upon Solid Foundation.

Since 1900 Average Size of Texas Farm Has Been Decreasing; Land Values in 10 Years Have Doubled.

By A. L. BOSTWICK.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 4.—A census bureau has finally issued its bulletin on Texas agriculture and the statistics, the first complete set in ten years, show in a most lucive manner the enormous wealth of our greatest state, and the magnitude of the increase in that wealth since 1910. After analysis of the figures as presented, the outside becomes convinced that what he may have considered extravagant claims of "native sons" of the Lone Star State are in reality based upon solid foundation.

The bulletin gives the value of Texas farm property—including land, buildings, implements and machinery, and livestock—as approximately four and one-half billion dollars; a rather staggering sum, and more than double the amount at the 1910 census. Livestock alone are valued at a little under $600,000,000. These valuations, it is true, are as of January 1, 1920, when prices were very high; nevertheless, after all, allowances are made the figures remain highly indicative of agricultural wealth and progress.

Texas, being in large measure a comparatively new state, fails to show some of the backward tendencies evident in the East and even the Middle West. Since 1910 the number of farms has increased, as have also the farm acreage and the extent of "improved" agricultural land. The latter increased substantially; 14.1 per cent. In many sections of the United States, especially where urban population is large, farm land has declined materially in area.

Since 1900, the average size of Texas farms has been decreasing. Before 1900 there was considerable fluctuation, although the net decline since 1850 has been very great. Since 1910 the increase in number of farms has been entirely in the 20 to 500-acre class; the very large and the very small, are fewer in number.

Land values, per acre, were about doubled between 1910 and 1920.

Land Values Doubled.

Farm tenancy has increased slightly, just as in many other states. The percentage in 1910 was 52.6; at the last census, 53.5. Negro farmers grew in number more rapidly than white. In view of various published statements about Japanese agricultural invasion it is surprising to note that the number of Japanese farmers is only 29, as against 44 a decade ago.

The livestock figures, as given for 1920, are probably quite different from those of 1922. The bulletin indicates that between 1910 and 1020 the number of horses decreased, mules increased, and cattle showed little change. Dairy cows were about 1 per cent fewer than in 1910; this is contrary to the trend shown in most states. There was a very large increase—86.8 per cent—in sheep. No comparative statistics are given for hogs.

Notwithstanding the slight falling off in dairy cattle, there was substantial growth in purely commercial dairying, not only in dollar sales but in actual volume of products handled. This is in line with developments over most of the country. Sales amounted to nearly $15,000,000 in 1919; about treble the 1909 record.

Wool and mohair sold, brought in over $10,000,000; poultry and eggs, nearly $12,000,000; honey, over $1,000,000. Contrary to what is found in many states, the actual amount of wool sold in 1919 materially exceeded that for 1909.

Coming now to crops, we find that the estimated value for the state in 1919 was somewhat in excess of one billion dollars; nearly 3 1-2 times the 1919 figures. Furthermore, we see that actual acreages in the vast majority of cases show increases, often large.

Cotton the Leader.

Measured in value, cotton is far and away the leader; it represents half the state's wealth in crops. Next, in order, come corn, cottonseed, wheat; hay, oats, kafir and milo, all vegetables, rice, fruits and nuts, and peanuts. Without giving figures in detail, a few "high spots" are worth noting. Cottonseed alone in 1919 was valued at over $80,000,000. Vegetables grown for sale, (not including potatoes) were worth nearly $7,000,000. The pecan crop was valued at over $3,500,000. Kafir and milo, comparatively new crops, are placed at over $40,000,000.

During the last 40 years there has of course, been a great increase in the acreage of all crops. In 1879, however, cotton and corn were of much greater relative importance than now. Other crops have been coming into prominence. In 1899, kafir and milo acreage was only about 23,000; in 1919, it was nearly 1,500,000. Wheat acreage in 1919 was nearly seven times the amount in 1879. Corn acreage on the other hand, in 1919 was less than it was 20 years previous.

Rich Old Ellis.

The banner agricultural counties of the state are as follows: Ellis, in the northeast, leads in value of all farm property ($102,804,849, nearly as great as for the entire state of New Hampshire.) Edwards, in the southwest, is the principal livestock county, the value involved being over $7,000,000. Field crops in this county amount to very little. In value of crops alone, Williamson, in the east-central section, is the leader, with a total of $21,500,400. The greater part of this represents cotton. In 1920 Williamson was the banner cotton county of the United States. The census indicates that in crop value it ranked, in 1919, 21st in the nation.

In conclusion, it may be proper to call attention to the fact that the recent great changes in agricultural prices, already referred to, furnish a powerful argument for the annual collection, by state or federal agencies of crop statistics showing both volume and estimated values. Many states now issue such figures in detail, and the federal authorities give totals for important crops, but there is much room for further development.

Contracts Cosed With Drillers At Iowa Park

IOWA PARK, Texas, March 4.—Barkburnett Junior Oil company have closed a contract with local drillers to put down two additional wells on their lease two miles southwest of town, operations to start soon. Seventy other locations, permits already allowed, will start work as soon as water arrangements can be made, either from dug wells or more rain.

With its city water works completed, an active Chamber of Commerce, 75 drilling permits allowed, thousands of fertile acres in the new irrigation district and progressive business men and farmers has a bright future to offer the investor. Come and see.

SIGNS INDICATE PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR AUTO INDUSTRY

New York Statistician Has Figures and Places Auto Industry Ahead of Steel

Texas Ranks Sixth in List of States and Wichita Falls Fifth in Cities in Number of Motor Cars

This is a world of change. Before the coming of the World War, speaking of leading industries, agricultural, mining, railroad, steel and iron manufacture, textiles and forestry ranked in the order given. Now all is changed. Before the World War these were the six leading industries. Now America boasts of ten leading industries—shipping, automobile, motion pictures and petroleum having been added to the list.

According to the statistician of the New York Herald the value of the automobiles produced in 1920 was $917,470,000. He avers that if the $450,000,000 in tires, the $184,000,000 paid for garage hire and wages and the many millions spent in motor car accessories are added then the automobile industry looms up with its $1,500,000,000 turnover ahead of the steel and iron industry.

Notwithstanding that 1921 was the dullest year in American history on account of the depreciated value and daily fluctuations in the price of foreign exchange and other causes which is not necessary to mention there was a tremendous output of pleasure cars and trucks and tractors.

There is no telling how long it will take a comparative newcomer, the automobile industry, to climb to the top of the ten leading industries of America but the pace has been very rapid since the year 1912 and unless all signs are misleading extraordinary strides will be made in the near future.

"Lest we forget," according to a high authority the market for automobiles in America during February to date has shown considerable improvement over that of January. All trade reports agree as to this. Most of the increased betterment in tone, however, is based upon improved general conditions and the confidence of leaders on the outlook for good business in the spring.

This confidence is reflected in the stocking of cars, which has caused much activity at the manufacturing plants. Most of the stocking, it is said, is taking place in the agricultural districts, where dealers, due to the recent depression in those sections have not been carrying cars in their show room.

Another indication of the greater optimism of dealers, according to Automotive Industries, has been found in the large numbers who have attended shows this year, particularly in Kansas City. At the show there last year dealers in the outlying districts were so discouraged over the outlook that they did not think it worth while to attend. This year the dealer attendance numbered between 800 and 1,000, a most surprising showing.

Companies which are watching conditions in the South, east of the Mississippi river, find some comfort in the fact that retail sales at the Atlanta show ran materially ahead of last year. In fact, Automotive Industries says the outlook throughout the cotton belt is much more cheerful; that while sales of passenger cars thus far this year have not been large enough to cause wild enthusiasm they have been so much better than they were for the same period last year that the prediction of a considerably better business for the first quarter of 1922 already is vindicated.

According to the same authority the tone of the truck market continues to improve. Reports not only from rural but from industrial centers states there is a considerable demand for light delivery vehicles. Aggregate sales of this type of truck this year will be large. Furthermore business of parts and accessories makers which has been materially better since the return of the year are holding up well and there are indications of continued improvements, as the substantial claim is made they now are getting the full benefit of inventory deflation by manufacturers.

Kansas City put on a great show. There was a most satisfactory attendance and a spirit of optimism swept over exhibitors and visitors. Chicago put on a great show and the same encouraging reports were made. Atlanta put on a great show and Automotive Industries tell of the feeling of confidence as well as the most encouraging activity displayed by exhibitors and buyers and sellers.

Dallas put on a great show and the reports from that city were very encouraging. This is the third Automobile Show given under the auspices of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers' association. All the dealers are represented. All the new models in the foremost motor cars of America are on display. Many models are exhibited for the first time in Wichita Falls.

Wichita dealers look forward to improved conditions almost to a man. They are optimistic almost to a man. They are agreed that 1922 will supply a volume of business far more profitable than that of 1921. There isn't an undertone of pessimism to be found in their ranks.

It is interesting to note that the manufacturers of America figure that the annual producion or output of their plants for 1922 will be the same as for the year 1921. In 1921 the total pleasure car production is placed at 1,535,000. According to Secretary C. W. Nolen of the Wichita Falls Automotive association the sales managers of the factories of America are very optimistic. Tremendous attendance as well as the success which attended the automobile exhibitions or shows in New York, Chicago and Kansas City is responsible in no small degree for their cheerful tone and optimistic outlook for the year.

Factories base their production on the success of these annual shows or expositions of the new models and improvement in car accessories. It is also interesting to note that statistics show that from the beginning of the industry farmers of America have taken forty per cent of the production of all cars manufactured in this country.

On the other hand farmers only bought or used 2 per cent of the trucks made by American manufacturers and when it comes to tractors of all the tractors produced the American farmer has only taken 3.6 per cent of the output, this in the face of the fact that there are 6,500,000 farms in the United States, according to the census of 1920. In time, those who have studied this branch of the industry are convinced that hundreds of tractors will be employed by farmers where only a limited number is in use today.

Texas ranks sixth in the sisterhood of states in the number of motor cars owned by its people and in Wichita county alone estimates of the number of cars vary, the minimum being placed at 10,000 and the maximum at 10,500. Wichita Falls ranks fifth among Texas cities in number of automobiles owned. No longer a luxury is the motor car. It is a necessity now. No longer an experiment is the truck. It is a permanent institution. No longer a fanciful invention or toy of the gentleman farmer in the tractor. It has come to stay and in future years will create a revolution in farming countries in this and all other civilized or semi-civilized countries.

There is a way to push the industry along. There is a way to make the annual Automotive Show a tremendous success. Swell the attendance, see Who is Who and What is What in the models of 1922 and keep up with the swift-moving procession.

Big Road Building Year

Construction of Substantial Highways Pressed in Various States

From reports recently received by the American highway educational bureau of Washington from many state highway departments, a new record is likely to be made this year in reducing the gap between capital invested in motor vehicles and the amount invested in substantial highways. In this gap it appears millions of dollars are being wasted in the continual maintenance of unsubstantial road surfaces under the terrific impact of an increasing number of motor vehicles.

Among the states seeking to eliminate excessive maintenance Pennsylvania assumes a foremost position. On Feb. 28, bids were opened at Harrisburg for new construction on state projects in 14 counties. In 12 of these counties reinforced concrete is called for in the specifications. In the two remaining counties concrete foundations are specified with either bituminous or concrete wearing surfaces.

On Mach 1, 14 more state projects were started, 11 of which call for reinforced concrete, and three either a bituminous or concrete wearing surface on a concrete foundation.

New Jersey called for reinforced concrete on one state highway route on Feb. 15 and calls are out for similar construction on another state project.

The policy of substantial construction as the only certain method by which highway funds may be used to the permanent benefit of taxpayers, and motor vehicle owners who are contributing to road construction in license fees, appears to be spreading throughout the country. More than ever, says the bureau, the road-using public seems less inclined to take general road construction reports at their face value. Mere boasts as to mileage constructed are beginning to count for nothing unless that mileage means that real roads have been built—roads that will last. Simply reshaping a road or shoveling material back into place after it has been loosened by traffic has come to mean nothing to the taxpayer beyond revealing the fact that continuous performance in highway repairs is as ludicrous as it is expensive.

In Ohio, where the state highway department has inaugurated a policy of substantial construction on main routes to insure safe investment of highway funds, great progress is being made. It is expected that the projects for this year will be well under way by April 15.

Some attempts have been made in Ohio, as in other states, to check the program for substantial roads by issuing cost comparisons to show that road building is far from the pre-war level. In these comparisons it is noted that neither width, thickness nor drainage is taken into account, the result being half truths of a character not designed to convey correct information to the taxpaying and road using public.

The bureau's statement adds that a feature of marked significance, as states are about to enter into construction for the new season, and one which bodes well for the taxpaying public, appears to be exemplified in an inclination on the part of highway officials to seek public approval by paying more heed to good construction and less heed to ill-informed political advice of the vote-catching type.

F. D. Keim And the Big And Little Six

F. D. Keim of the Excelsior Motor company, is banking, of course, on the Studebaker, and he has both extremes of the 12 Studebaker models in the show, the Big Six and its "kid brother," Little Six.

"December of 1921," remarked Keim, "was the biggest month of the year for us. January and February, always considered dull months, were exceptionally good. I find there are more prospective buyers, men really interested in the best buy for the dollar than ever before. Men now are looking more into the merit of a car and the reliability of its makers and the quality of service accompanying it than they formerly did. I believe there are going to be more cars sold during the coming year by the service department than by the sales force. The flush days are gone, but the buying power is still here, and I look for 1922 to be really a wonderful year in the automobile industry. I expect a big season for Studebaker cars, and I am laying all my plans to that

FAIR AND FAT STOCK SHOW TALK

By H. N. F.

"Extraordinary interest is being shown throughout Central West Texas and the Panhandle in the announcement from Wichita Falls that this city is planning to institute a great fair and fat stock show," said Porter A. Whaley, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, who is in Wichita Falls to attend the Automobile Show and on business connected with the West Texas body. Continuing, Mr. Whaley said:

"Few people appreciate the enormous growth in West Texas in the development of the poultry, dairying, hog and fat stock industries. These are the industries that primarily are best adapted to the permanent growth of West Texas. They supplement the cotton and wheat crops. The milo maize-kaffir-feterita crop is the basis of these developments. West Texas produced in 1921, 70,000,000 bushels of these crops. Daily the farmers of West Texas are becoming converts to the idea that the best way to utilize these grains is to manufacture them into butter, poultry, hogs and fed cattle. And it is right here where the extraordinary interest in the proposed Wichita Falls fair finds its manifestation. A fair is a potent factor in the propagation of the idea of every farm a factory—an idea that is bound to ultimately convert West Texas into one of the largest regions in the world devoted to the 'feeding' plan of agriculture.

Eighty Fairs Show Interest.

"In 1921 the reports to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce showed that there were approximately 80 county, district and regional fairs held in West Texas. This represented a tremendous increase over any past year. Incidentally, it is worthy of note that practically every county along the lines of the Fort Worth & Denver railway between Wichita Falls and Amarillo, and along the lines of the Wichita Valley railway held fairs in 1921. The Wichita Falls fair should be a 'clearing house' fair for all of these county fairs and regional and district fairs. Why? Because Wichita Falls must be interested in the development of poultry, dairying, hog raising and cattle feeding as the basis of the sure future growth of the trade territory now controlled and to be controlled by her. Nothing else in this generation will build a permanent and growing agriculture in the regions of West Texas.

Cattle Feeding Results.

"At Post City, Lamesa, Hereford, Dalhart, Snyder, Stamford, Colorado City and at and near many other agricultural centers in West Texas, the advancement of the cattle feeding and finishing industry has made great strides during 1921. The celebrated Post-of-Battle-Creek interests started the cattle finishing work near Post five years ago. Today, farmers in Garza and Lynn counties are feeding and finishing more than 10,000 head. These finished cattle are selling on the Kansas City markets at prices substantially the same as Iowa and Missouri corn-fed beef, and in some instances at higher prices. Many farmers in that whole territory on the South Plains are making the finishing of cattle on milo-feterita-kaffir their principal 'money crop.' And the results obtained are causing the industry to spread to other and adjoining counties.

California Takes the Hogs.

"More than 125,000 hogs where shipped through the Lubbock and Amarillo gateway to California during 1921. These hogs had previously found a market in Kansas City, Wichita Falls or Fort Worth. California buyers came in and offered considerably more money for the hogs than the other centers had previously paid. California also paid more money for these milo-feed and finished hogs than she was willing to pay for any other hogs raised anywhere, including her own alfalfa finished product. The milo-fed hog has captured California. Two train loads a week now leave the Plains country for California. They are concentrated either at Amarillo or Clovis, New Mexico. This new development is causing an immense expansion of the hog growing industry.

Plainview Convention.

"Incidentally, the fourth annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will be held in Plainview on May 22 and 23 next. Approximately 4,000 farmers, business men and delegates will attend this convention. The first annual convention of this association was held in Wichita Falls, February 5, 1919, and was attended by 500 delegates. The second annual convention occurred at Abilene, January 22nd, 1920, and was attended by 1,250 delegates, and the third annual convention was held at Ranger, February 8 and 9, 1921, and was attended by 3,000 delegates.

"Stock farming, poultry raising, dairying, swine propagation, immigration, irrigation and other vital matters affecting the present life and future of Wichita Falls and West Texas will be discussed by experts at the Plainview convention. Also a trip is planed through the celebrated irrigation districts around Plainview. I understand Wichita Falls will be represented by a large delegation.

Weissenborn Has "Stranger" And Maxwell

If someone doesn't stop A. L. Weissenborn, he will have on exhibit everything carried by the Bemrod Auto Supply company, cars, accessories and all.

"First off," he narrated with a grin, "we have on the floor a brand new series roadster, a Chalmers that is a stranger here. It has all the standard equipment, including disc wheels and cord tires, and it has passed the extra inspection that is now a feature of Chalmers manufacture. Then we have also on display a new Maxwell touring car, the 1922 model that has already created a big interest here because of the many changes over previous models.

"Next we are showing for the first time the Wichita storage battery, which is our own manufacture. We're putting it on the market in the belief we can give the public a good battery for less money, since we will not be handicapped by any national overhead.

Why Particular Attention Is Directed to a Car Like Hupmobile Which Has Steadily Developed Motor

An Interesting Description for All Who Are Interested in Autos and the Progress of theAuto Industry

The trend toward the four-cylinder principle and general simplification of chassis, is more apparent to visitors at this year's show than ever before. The result of this trend has been to intensify interest in those cars, whose superiority in the four-cylinder field has been established over a period of years. It has directed particular attention to a car like the Hupmobile, which since 1908, has steadily developed the four-cylinder motor to its present perfection.

Examination of the Hupmobile chassis at the show first gives the impression of simplicity and accessibility, which is thoroughly confirmed by closer inspection. To those who owing to the number of interested visitors at the Hupmobile booth, were unable to get as much information as they desired, the following description will prove of interest.

The Hupmobile four-cylinder motor —3¼ inch bore x 5½ inch stroke— is of the L-head type, having intake and exhaust valves on the same side. The cylinder displacement is 183 cubic inches. The compression is 70 pounds guage pressure to the square inch at 1000 R. P. M. The power curve of the Hupmobile motor is such that the point of maximum power is sustained over a wide range of motor speeds without loss. Cylinders and crank case are cast together in a block of noticeable symmetry and rigidity. The cylinder head is detachable, giving easy access to combustion chamber valves.

The crankshaft is tested for static and dynamic balance. It is of ample diameter, extra heavy, and of short length between bearings, giving rigidity. It runs in three large bearings of the best grade phosphor bronze, with special high speed babitt lining. These bearings are exceptionally large for a motor of this size and for a crankshaft of this length, making the crankshaft unusually rigid and reducing motor vibration.

All bearings are carefully fitted in crank case after which they are bored to insure true alignment. Following this they are fitted to crankshaft by an exact and careful process of hand scraping. They are split and provided with laminated shims, which make them easy of adjustment.

The flywheel is tested for dynamic balance, then attached to the crankshaft, and the whole assembly is again tested for perfect rotating balance.

The maximum thrust her explosion on each piston is approximately 2,500 pounds. The connecting rods transform this force into the even power and smooth running of the crankshaft. They are 11 7-8-inches between centers, of I-beam shape carefully machined for lightness and balance. The material and construction of the connecting rods give maximum rigidity and strength with the necessary lightness in weight. The connecting rod bearings, are of phosphor bronze, babbitt lined, and are scraped and fitted by hand with the same cars as crankshaft bearings. The length of the connecting rod compared with the stroke 11 7-8-in. to 5 1-5-in., deserves attention, as this unusual length reduces the pressure of thrust of the piston against the cylinder walls, by reason of the small angle with the center line. The pistons are special light cast, and weigh but 20 ounces each. In shape they are of the hour glass, high speed type, and are carefully ground to less than .001-inch limits on bearing surface. They are fitted with three rings; two above the piston pin, and one below, which serves to keep oil out of combustion chamber. The piston pin is made of steel carefully heat treated, hardened and ground. These hollow pins are clamped in the rod, and turn in the piston, giving the advantage of an extra bearing surface.

The reason why all reciprocating parts are of light weight and carefully balanced is evident when you consider that the pistons stop and start approximately 75 times per second when the motor is running at maximum speed.

The crank case and cylinders are in a single casting, of the best grade special analysis cylinder iron, remarkably rigid. Casting is "seasoned" for sufficient time, to relieve internal stress, and insure bearing alignment. The working parts of the motor are protected from dirt and mud by crank case, and a two-piece shield, which has sections along the sides of the motor below the frame and cross the front; the advantages of this construction are extreme motor accessibility, and more efficient cooling. The engine has three-point suspension. The cylinders are ground on an internal grinder, a process more expensive but giving much more satisfactory results than reaming. This method gives a glass-like surface to the cylinder walls—insuring long life, and preventing compression loss because of closer fitting pistons. The detachable cylinder head gives access in manufacturing to both ends of the cylinder bore, and allows the use of internal dial indicaters for measuring bore precisely to .0005-inch limits, at top and bottom; the cylinder block being open at both ends, renders the casting of the block more uniform and inspection more exact.

The combustion chamber of special improved shape, gives large mixture volume over the valves. This construction has been carefully designed to take full adantage of the inlet gas turbulence, and gives a power and efficiency hitherto obtained only with complicated valve systems.

Rich Suitor Solves Problem of Young Woman Urged Not to Marry

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 25.—Dan Cupid, who involved Miss Eleanor Berlin, 21 of this city, into love and money dilemma which threatened for a time o spoli her future happiness, has brought her safely through the problem. It was easy, Dan would say.

Charles A. Hamilton of Chicago, once a sweetheart of Miss Berlin, a trust fund of $60,000 on condition that she live with his mother and never marry. For months, until a few days ago, she was torn between two emotions—obeying his request and spurning the fortune to follow the natural dictations of her heart.

But now her heart and mind are at rest. For she has become the bride of Raymond L. Goding, wealthy real estate broker of this city. His wealth relieves Miss Berlin of the necessity of worrying about the loss of the other.

The unusual bequest was the result of a wartime romance that started in the south, where Hamilton was an officer in the aviation service and ended when he was killed in an airplane crash at Ellington field.

Hamilton was one of the first of the flying officers to be sent to Ellington field when it was opened in 1911. Tall, handsome, athletic, he presented a striking figure in his aviator's uniform.

At the same time Miss Berlin, like thousands of other southern girls, was doing war work. As the trains arrived at Galveston, Texas, from inland, with their loads of doughboys on their way to the port of embarkation for overseas, Miss Berlin and her companion greeted them with hot coffee and sandwiches.

Gave Him Coffee.

One day Lieutenant Hamilton stepped out of a train and accepted a cup of steaming coffee and a sandwich from a pretty girl. It was Miss Berlin, and another war romance was started.

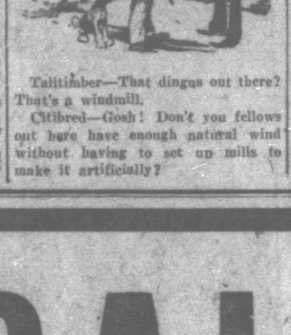

Then came a day when the young lieutenant took his last flight. Something went wrong with his "ship" and in a few moments he was lying beneath the wreckage of the airplane, bruised and broken, with but a brief time to live.

"I went to the hospital to see him" said Miss Berlin. "He was dying. He took my hand in his and asked me if I would promise never to marry any other man if he would leave me all he had and would provide for my future.

"He also asked me to go and live with his mother at Chicago. Well, I promised him I would do as he wished.

"Then, while he was dying, he had his will drawn up, leaving his money to me, and stating the conditions. He signed it and died with a smile on his face."

Joe Zihlman's "K-S" Tires Are There

Ask Joe Zihlman, of the Zih'man Auto company, about the show, and he just grins and bursts into slang:

"You tell 'em, kid," said Joe, "that I expect to be invited to more 'blow-outs' this year than ever before—make a society note of it. Only the blow-outs will be other brands, 'cause these Kelly-Springfield casings of mine never blow! That's my exhibit. Kelly-Springfield casings, cords and fabrics, and caterpillar type truck tires. I can't describe those casings brother. Pick up any high class magazine, and you'll find a national advertisement of 'em. The selling game is good. All we need is rain and there'll be more automobile business than the dealers can handle."

NOTHING LIKE THE ALAMO IN HISTORY

Not a Candidate for Any Office and Never Expects to Be a Candidate for Office Again.

DALLAS, Texas, March 4.—Liberties for which the forefathers of Texas fought and died at the Alamo and Goliad are threatened today by the ever-advancing encroachment of Federal legislation, Joseph Weldon Bailey, former United States senator from Texas, told an audience of more than 200 persons at the Independence Day luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Oriental.

After paying eloquent tribute to the founders of Texas and recounting the deeds of heroism of Travis, Crockett, Bowie, Bonham and others, Mr. Bailey said he doubted if Texas today were living up to the heritage of freedom left them by their forefathers.

"There is nothing like the Alamo in the history of the world," declared the former senator, "and if there had been no Alamo and no Goliad, there might have been no San Jacinto. Ours is a glorious heritage won by men who loved liberty better than their lives. Are we proving worthy of their glorious deeds by preserving the liberty and independence which they bequeathed to us? Not as we ought to have done it.

Could Have Kept Right.

"They made Texas a Republic and then voluntarily exchanged independence for Statehood. Had I been living then I believe I would have favored such a move, but living now I sometimes wonder if we would not have been better off if we had not made the change. Then we would have had some State rights. Then we could have decided for ourselves if we would have saloons or bootleggers in our midst, whether our women would vote and whether we could let our children work. This is not true today. The Federal Government has taken regulation of these matters out of our hands. Today the State of Texas can not say what the freight rate shall be on a bale of cotton from Abilene to Dallas. That is determined at Washington, but who else besides ourselves is interested or concerned in such a matter.

"If any man had prophesied to Sam Houston or any of those hardy pioneers who founded Texas that the time would ever come when it would be a mockery to talk of State sovereignty, Texas would have never joined the Union.

"I am not arguing the prohibition question. I don't care whether you are a dry wet or a wet dry. (Laughter.) Some men's tastes and principles don't run the same. I just insist that Texas should be allowed to delide this question for herself. I am not a candidate for any office, and I never expect to be a candidate again, so I can talk freely to you.

"In Texas most women are intelligent enough to vote, and the more intelligent they are, the less they are inclined to vote. (Laughter.) But in Mississippi a black cloud of ignorance hangs over the State, and the large number of negro women there should not be allowed to vote, and every man knows it.

Republic Threatened.

"Already the Federal Government has come down to Texas and told us we shall not allow our children of certain ages to work. I am opposed to children of tender age being subjected to hard labor which endangers their health or their lives, but I am not in favor of any government regulating our children. When we reach the time when we can not entrust the welfare of our children to their mothers and fathers, then we have reached the end of this Republic."

Mr. Bailey declared that the Federal child labor law was "born in greed and bred in propaganda," and that the secret of its passage was due to the fact that the cotton spinning mills of South Carolina were paying children who worked for them lower wages that the Massachusetts mills were forced to pay.

"Those children were brought down to the spinning mills of South Carolina from the mountains of Tennessee, and it was unmixed blessing for them, because they were subjected to schools and other wholesome influences," declared Mr. Bailey, "but at that they received lower wages than the Massachusetts mills were forced to pay, so the New England conscience asserted itself."

Others Worked as Children.

Mr. Bailey said that some of the greatest men in history had spent their childhood in poverty and hard work, and that Sam Houston and Andrew Jackson supported widowed mothers when they were under the age of the child labor law.

"No man will ever win a place for himself in history by eating out of the hand of the Federal Government," declared Mr. Bailey amid laughter and applause.

"I am not trying to inject politics into this splendid organization, but we ought to value liberty and independence above everything else. I would rather be a free pauper than a rich slave. Let us resolve to cherish these things for which our forefathers fought and died. Let me say to you business men that regardless of how much money you make, you are failing unless you instill into your children a respect for the rights of others."

Mr. Bailey showed that some of the greatest men in history have died poor, and declared that "Money is like sweet potatoes, easy to make but hard to keep."

The former senator declared that the prohibition law would never be repealed, but that it ought to be observed and that its passage had demonstrated to all legislators that no law can be enforced unless there is public sentiment behind it. "Even the 'pros' are finding the law dryer than they intended to make it," said Mr. Bailey, amidst roars of laughter.

Mr. Bailey said that if it had not been for the women's vote the prohibition amendment would have been repealed, but that after it had been enforced the world will see that it is better off without liquor, and will never want it again.

Closing in a burst of eloquence, Mr. Bailey urged his hearers to "swear anew allegiance to the creed of our fathers, preserve the glorious heritage of liberty and freedom which they have left us, and this great Republic of ours will survive a thousand times a thousand years."

President Booth is gratified with the showing made, proud of the interest manifested, sanguine as to its successful outcome, confident that here in the city that faith built and all contingnous territory the people are interested in the future more than are in the past and there isn't a speck of pessimism attached to his tongue or garments.

"We have an ideal location for the show," he said. "All the members of the association have contributed and all are putting forth their best efforts or endeavors to make the Third the best we have ever given. We have passed through the graveyard of depression and now we are ascending the hill of prosperity. Activities in the oil fields are in evidence. All we need is a soaking rain to fill the tanks and the creeks now that the snow has furnished moisture for the fields and the reports are indicative that wheat will come again. As president of the association I extend a hearty invitation to all the people of Wichita and surrounding country to be our guests, to inspect the exhibits, to mingle with our people and to enjoy the offerings.

ROBERT E. LEE AN IDEAL MAN OF THE WORLD

Judge Robert Ewing of Nashville has contributed a very interesting chapter to Washington and Lee university's semi-centennial memorial to Gen. Robert E. Lee, which has taken the form of a collection of reminiscence of associates of General Lee, when he was president of Washing college and alumni of the school.

These recollections have been published by the university in book form, under the title, "Gen. Robert E. Lee After Appomattox." The publication is edited by Franklin K. Riley, professor of history at Washington and Lee, and is published by the MacMillan company of New York.

The book is the result of a resolution of the trustees in 1917 to collect all the facts then available on General Lee's connection with the university, and Professor Riley was entrusted with the task. In performing this task he sent appeals to all living "Lee alumni" to supply him with every item of information they possessed. The responses were generous and among them was the following "Reflections of a Lee Alumnus," from the pen of Judge Ewing:

"It is my recollection, though it has been a long time since I studied classical literature, that when Queen Dido commanded Aeneas to describe to her what had taken place at Troy, the old hero said that in doing so she ordered him to 'renew his grief.' At least, that is the way my dear old professor of Latin, Carter J. Harris, of blessed memory, used to require me to translate those lines of Virgil.

Happy to Perform Task

"How different is my feeling from that of the Trojan leader when, at your request, I attempt to send a few lines embodying some of the memories of the years 1867-8, which I spent at Washington college, filled as they were with the keenest pleasure.

"When I read General Lee's modestly couched agreement to accept from the trustees the presidency of the college, and thus to continue to serve his country in a different, though equally as great a way as he had just ceased to serve it, I was, though a mere lad and wholly unprepared for entry, fired with the desire to serve under him, and, if possible, learn to know him as he was and catch from him some inspiration.

"My father had died in Atlanta in 1864, serving the cause which General Lee had served. His fortune had been swept away at the fall of Nashville, and had been compelled to work to support myself. By hard work I had saved a little fund and felt that I could not better invest it than by going to Lexington and placing myself under General Lee. Though I have since sadly realized that I did not study while there as I should have done, and as the general was solicitous to have all who attended do, I count not as lost the time spent there for at my impressionable age and with my intense feeling, simply to have met General Lee and to have watched so noble a hero daily performing such high duties, was almost equivalent to the beginning, at least, of acquiring a liberal education.

Students Mostly Young Men

"A majority of the students were young men who had, four years before, entered the southern army as mere boys. They had served under General Lee, and at that time had the spirit of grown men. They needed no spur to endeavor, other than their reverence for General Lee and their own determination to seize upon the themselves for useful lives. That they only opportunity existing to prepare worked to a purpose, their after careers in life, some of which I have kept up with pretty closely, clearly demonstrated, in fact, the spirit of all was admirable.

"But little attention was paid to dress or the securing of personal comforts. Students knew the strained financial situation of their home people at that time, and were too proud to call for any but the most necessary aid. Under the circumstances, entrance to the college was made easier then than it is or should be now. The faculty consisted of men of ability and strong common sense, whose sole purpose seemed to be to take hold of the situation as it existed, and without any sort of friction they supported General Lee very whole-heartedly in his purposes.

"Though the general himself had expressed some doubt as to his suitability to serve as president, no one else, I am sure, ever had occasion to feel that he was other than the ideal executive. The college started out lacking money, of course; but the services of very able men were then to be obtained for comparatively small compensation—men who truly appreciated what the times called for and what general Lee was seeking to accomplish. They were loyal to the core, both to him and to the college.

Lee Lead With Ease

"Then, too, it was not a difficult matter for so great a leader of men and so accomplished a scholar to marshal us the way he desired us to go. We were not exactly afraid of the general, but we were so unwilling to do anything which would justly merit his censure that this respect really amounted to fear. I never remember to have seen him smile. He seemed borne down by an overwhelming sorrow, the nature of which all knew. Besides, he was gravely intent on what he regarded as very grave duties.

"I do not mean to convey the idea that he was austere or loftily unapproachable. For from it! In a smiling way, I would say that he only seemed so to those whose low marks in their studies caused him to send for them for 'personal consultation.' It is needless to say that such interviews generally ended with pretty sincere promises on the part of those sent for to do better. I do not remember a single case where a student actually sought to receive him, though many culprits came away from his office with his signed photographs. That was quite a popular, transparent dodge, though such souvenirs were really very much prized by the boys and their home people as well.

"I remember sending one to my sister, and one to another fellow's sister, though I am not going to say what was the exact occasion for my purchasing them at Miley's photograph gallery. I will admit, though, that the general's close scrutiny of the progress being made by each student was such that he did not overlook even me.

"Self-confidence in his ability to do great things in a great way may possibly have appeared to some to have been lacking in General Lee, but this was only an appearance easily accounted for by his excessive modesty. He knew that he could perform efficiently the duties of president of the college, or he certainly would not have accepted the office. It was not with him a mere lending of his great name to an institution engaged in a great cause which he himself had been strongly advocating—the education of southern youth.

"His hesitant acceptance was simply an honest notice to the trustees not to expect too much of him in purely technical matters. I venture to say that the most trained executive living at the time could not have accomplished as much good as he did, simply because he had the power to bring out, and did bring out, the very best there was in every student. He was individually able to do this because of the profound esteem in which he was held by all.

"I believe the work was agreeable to him, because he knew the people he loved were earnestly seeking that which he knew to be their best interests. I believe that those young men who went from the halls of Washington college, the University of Virginia, and other institutions, had very much to do with the recovery of the south and getting her on the plane she now occupies before the world.

"As soon as the recumbent statue of the general was finished and placed in the chapel, I obtained a large photograph of it, and it has ever since hung in my hall as one of my prized possessions. I see it daily, but I never gaze upon it without feeling that I was indeed fortunate to have known in life 'The Ideal Man of the World,' for such I always considered him.

Franklin to Issue $5,000,000 For "New Four"

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 4.—Plans are announced for financing the new four-cylinder Franklin car, following decision by board of directors of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing company to offer $3,000,000 in 7 per cent preferred stock at par, $100 per share, and 40,000 shares of no par value common stock at $50 per share. This will provide $5,000,000 in new capital which will be divided in approximately $2,500,000 for new plant and equipment and $2,500,000 for working capital.

Directors tentatively decided to provide plant and equipment for the production of 100 Franklin Fours per day on a two-shift basis. It is planned to reach capacity production about April of next year.

The statement made at the time of the New York and Chicago automobile shows that the Franklin Four will retail at about $1,000 also was confirmed bby the company's directors.

NEW YORK OIL MEN VISIT TEXAS

Burkburnett and Other Fields Visited; Work in the Young County Field; Steady Production.

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 4.—Mexia may be occupying the center of the stage just at present but the other fields of Texas still have plenty of followers and admirers among Eastern investors.

That is the message, at least, that was brought to Fort Worth, this week, by several hundred stockholders of the Revere Oil company who have just completed an extended tour of inspection of the company's holdings in a number of different districts. While in Texas the party visited the properties of the Revere in Stephens, Eastland and Wichita counties and in the Mexia field.

Members of the party were particularly interested in the Breckenridge area which, they predicted, would rival Pennsylvania, from which many of them hailed, in the longevity of its wells. They also were much impressed with the Mexia gushers and the prospects of increased production there.

The party was composed entirely of Revere stockholders and company officials, and included a number of prominent business men. The tour of the fields was under the personal direction of Albert H. Shepherd, vice-president of the Revere company and a well-known Texas operator.

The Revere company, although among the younger independents, already has acquired extensive holdings and production in Texas. Its properties consist of approximately 114,000 acres scattered throughout Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas and some 36 wells of settled production in Breckenridge, Desdemona, Burkburnett and other fields.

Included in the list of producers is the Ackers No. 1, Breckenridge field, which was deepened recently, after producing several months, and increased its flow from 50 to 1,500 barrels, daily. The Ackers is an offset to the famous 5,000-barrel gusher of the Pairie's by the same name and located on the same tract. The Revere company has made two more locations to be drilled on this lease.

An extensive drilling campaign was inaugurated by the company and it has nine strings of tools working in different districts at this time. At Mexia, its Broadnax No. 1 is now drilling below 2,800 feet and is scheduled for completion within a few days. The Broadnax is in the heart of the proven area and it is confidently expected that it will come in for large production. It is just east of the Thompson, Slaughter and other famous producing leases and some of the biggest gushers brought in to date are almost within the shadow of this derrick.

Two other Revere wells scheduled for early completion are the Farmer No. 1, in Young county, and the Little No. 4, in Eastland county. The former is located on a 1,000-acre tract and company geologists estimate that the pay will be found around 2,700 feet. Several prolific shallow sands have been found in the Young county field.

The Little No. 4 is on a 35-acre lease in Eastland county. The tract already has three producing wells on it and the No. 4 is practically a sure shot for good production.

Other operations of the company consist of the Lance No. 1, in Hardeman county, which has reached a depth of 1,358 feet. Casing is being set this week. The test is on a 4,500-acre tract near the Red river and west of Burkburnett. The trend of production is in this direction from both Burkburnett and Electra where there is large settled production.

In Jim Hogg county the Revere Jones No. 1 is drilling around 1,500 feet and promises to be an early completion. The Erstein No. 1, in Grayson county, is down 2,200 feet but has been delayed by a tedious fishing job.

The 36 wells which the company either owns outright or has an interest in are located in the Stephens, Eastland, Ennis and Wichita fields of Texas and the Caddo-Pine Island field of Louisiana. They range in age from one to five years, the majority of them dating from 1919. The average life of a deep well is around 20 years so that the company is assured of a steady production from these properties alone for some years to come.

Despite the general depression in the industry throughout the major portion of 1921 the Revere managed to weather the slump in excellent shape. In addition to acquiring a number of valuable properties, many of them picked up off the bargain counter, it paid dividends to the amount of 15 per cent.

Officials of the company are among the best known oil men in the Mid-Continent fields. Warren H. Hollister, president, was engaged in the wholesale lumber business in New York state for 25 years. He has been a member of the New York Petroleum Exchange for a number of years and is also well known here.

Albert H. Shepherd, vice-president, has been engaged in the oil business for a number of years as has J. C. Verser, secretary-treasurer, who operated in the Kansas and Oklahoma fields before coming to Texas. E. J. Brock, Jr., of the board of directors, served three terms as district clerk of Tarrant county of which Fort Worth is the county seat, while Charles Nelson, another member of the board, has been active in the oil business several years.

Clarence T. Ford, formerly connected with the Standard Oil in West Virginia, is the company's field manager in Stephens county. Prior to going with Revere he was in charge of operations in Desdemona for the Cassidy Oil company.

The Revere operating headquarters in Stephens county are at the former Weber-Harris camp, near Breckenridge. This is one of the most complete and modern camps in the Texas fields and was acquired by Revere when it took over the Weber-Harris properties recently.

In addition to its large lease holdings and producing properties the company owns twelve complete strings of cable tools and sufficient casing, derricks, tankage and other field equipment to finish all contemplated wells. Its prospective operations during the immediate future include the drilling of six new wells in proven territory.

Members of the Revere party expressed themselves as very optimistic over the outlook for the industry this spring and summer and were confident that crude would go to new high levels before 1922 passed into history.

New Magazine For the West On the Road

LUBBOCK, March 4.—Announcement is made by Curtis A. Keen, managing editor of the recently organized magazine company that the first issue will come out in April as an Agricultural Monthly featuring facts, figures and conditions found on the plains of Texas, edited by plainsmen familiar with the breeding, feeding and handling of plains stock, plains farms and marketing stuff from plains feed lots and ranges.

The magazine will be a 48-page monthly printed on machine run book paper carrying a full complement of cuts, features, special articles and departments. The swine department will be headed by Fred W. Boerner, for two years president of the Panhandle Swine Breeders' association and a widely known plains breeder of good hogs. The poultry department will be edited by L. C. Ellis, superintendent of the South Plains Fair Poultry Shop and recognized breeder of show and commercial poultry, assisted by Mrs. Ed Schroeder, Oscar Sensabaugh and Mr. Peebyhouse, all recognized poultry growers of the plains.

Other departments will be dairying, crop production, garden and orchard, livestock breeding, feeding and marketing, Boys' and Girls' clubs, churches, schools and community service, woman's department and similar departments of importance to the ffull development of the diversified farming gidea that' is sweeping the plains country. Each department will be headed by a leader in that field who is familiar with West Texas conditions, development and possibilities.

"East Texas has furnished our politicians, agricultural advice, reports and papers too long already. The west is entitled to a representation of the facts that have made it possible and presented by the men who have made it what it is—the supply house of Texas in swine, poultry, livestock, cotton aid feed. The Plains Magazine will present this opportunity and is receiving the support of the leaders of the west," said Curtis A. Keen, manager of the Lubbock chamber of commerce, addressing the South Plains Livestock association Saturday, in speaking of his new work as managing editor of the magazine.

Dodge Cars, And McFalls In Evidence

Two Dodge Brothers cars, a coupe and a touring car, are shown by McFall Brothers, according to J. A. McFall, another business optimist:

"Sales are picking up fast now," said J. A., "and the general business outlook is very good. Inquiries for new cars are numerous, and the used car sales have been very fair. We look for a big year. Our service business is rotten—because these Dodge cars need so little service!

"The coupe that we are exhibiting has disc wheels and 32x4 cord tires; windshield cleaner, non-glare lens, front fender brace, Alemite lubricating system, straight-line 'body and 'anti-rattler' windows. The touring car also has 32x4 cords, bevelled plate glass in the rear curtain and the other features mentioned for the coupe. Both models have the new long springs which add greatly to the riding qualities. All these improvements have been added in the effort to make the first cost of the Dodge car as nearly as possible the last cost."

SOME LOSS.

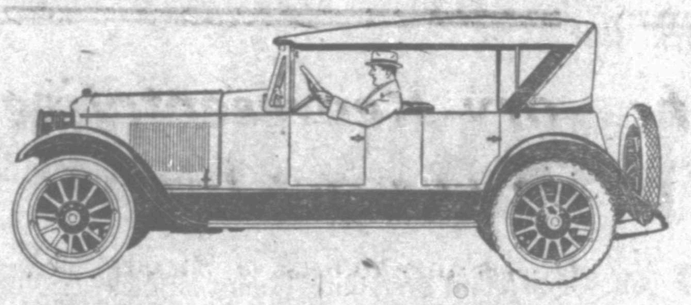

Larry—So you have a very pretty girl, eh?

Harry—I'll say so. When she get on a street car the advertising is a complete loss.

C. A. CULBERSON REVIEWS TERM SENATE RECORD

Special to the Record News

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Senator Charles A. Culberson in a statement addressed to the democrats of Texas today outlined his service since the beginning of his present term on March 4, 1917, and asked for re-election.

In the event that Culberson is re-elected and serves another term he will have equalled the longest record for service, 30 years, held by Benton of Missouri. He is now the ranking democrat in the senate in point of service, though not in age, being only 66 years old.

Senator Culberson in his statement said that the senate has been in session 1,217 days since he began his present term and that he has not missed a day. He makes it plain, however, that he is not strong enough to canvass the state and that he will leave his candidacy to men and women who approve his views on public questions.

The Texas solon in addition to reviewing his attitude on various public questions during the last five years announced that he favors adjusted compensation for former service men; the leasing or selling of Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford; for a revenue tariff on both manufactured articles and raw material; that he will oppose the anti-lynching bill recently passed by the house, and that he is fro more rigid economy in government.

To the Democrats of Texas: On the 25th day of January last I issued a statement to you to the effect that I purposed submitting my name to the democratic primary next summer for the nomination for the United States senate, and that later on I would issue a further statement to you on the subject.

This further statement which I now make will, generally and broadly speaking, be a review of my record in the senate during my present term and my position on important public questions of the day.

As is well known, took an active part in the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for the presidency in 1912.

His first term as president beginning in 1913 was largely devoted to domestic affairs and was a record of unexampled achievement in such policies. So strongly did he impress the country, and so prosperous was it under his administration, that he was unanimously renominated in 1916 and reelected being the only democrat since Andrew Jackson to succeed himself in the presidency.

During the first four years of my present term, beginning in 1917, Mr. Wilson was president of the United States, and, as in his first term, so in his second term I supported his policies.

During his second term, beginning in 1917, foreign affairs largely dominated his administration and he carried the United States to the leadership of the nations.

His doctrine of self determination restored the liberties of Poland, made Ireland a free state and gave fresh hope to countless other millions struggling for liberty throughout the world.

In truth, the stand of the United States under his leadership saved democracy for mankind and rescued our imperilled civilization.

Coming to particular measures of legislation during this period, and my attitude upon them, I supported the declaration that a state of war existed between the United States and the Imperial German Government, in April, 1917.

I supported the draft act, under which the American Army was organised.

In co-operation with the Texas delegation in Congress, I urged upon the President and the Secretary of War the policy, which was pursued, of establishing large training camps in Texas.

I favored the emergency bond issue to meet the expenditures for national security and defense to assist in prosecuting the war.

I supported the food control bill encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel.

I favored the resolution to limit debate in the Senate, the purpose being to expedite urgent war measures.

As chairman of the senate committee on the judiciary during the entire period of the war, I introduced some of the important legislative acts of the war.

Among these, the act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes.

This law, commonly called the espionage act, protected the government in its conduct of the war by punishing spies and restricting their opportunities, by penalizing obstruction of Army and Navy recruiting and enlistment, by safeguarding the ocean-borne commerce, and by eliminating freedom of foreign propagandists.

The act under which all German liners in American ports were seized, and later all Austrian liners, which authorized the President to take over for the United States the possession and title of any vessel within its jurisdiction which at the time of coming therein was owned in whole or in part by any corporation, citizen, or subject of any nation with which the United States was at war.

The act to punish the willful injury or destruction of war materials or of war premises or utilities used in connection with war material.

The armistice, which ended active hostilities, was signed November 11, 1918.

The Peace Conference, which settled all matters arising out of the war, met in December, 1918.

I voted for the ratification of the treaty of Versailles, which was the result of this conference.

This treaty was the greatest forward step ever taken to secure the peace of the world.

It was defeated by the Republicans of the Senate, because its ratification would have redounded to the credit of the Democratic party and the fame of President Wilson.

Its rejection by the Senate has kept the world in political and economic disorder.

Its ratification, on the contrary, would have tended toward peace among all nations and restoration of normal economic conditions.

The benefit to the United States of its ratification can not be overestimated along economic lines, because, producing a surplus of agricultural and manufactured products, it would have stabilized European conditions and given us a market for this surplus whereas now, under present conditions, this surplus is either not produced or it is a drug upon our domestic market.

I opposed the submission of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States as an invasion of the reserved rights of the state, but when it was adopted I favored its enforcement, under my oath of office.

I voted against the so-called light wine and beer bill, believing it to be an evasion of the eighteenth amendment.

I am proud to say that I favored the submission of the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, extending the right of suffrage to women.

I voted for its submission three times. First in October, 1918 when it failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote; in February, 1919, when it failed again; and, finally, in June, 1919, when it passed the senate.

I opposed the Esch-Cummins railroad transportation bill.

I voted to continue the war finance corporation, for the relief of the agricultural depression, which corporation has to date approved advances of approximately $12,800,000 to Texas banks and financial institutions and has extended nearly $10,000,000 in credit to co-operative associations.

I voted for the federal good roads act, appropriating $75,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of roads.

I voted for the federal farm loan act and had a share in the creation of a separate district for Texas and the establishment of the federal land bank at Houston, which has already loaned to Texas farmers nearly $50,000,000 at reasonable rates of interest.

I favor the idea of leasing or selling Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford on proper terms.

I voted for the bill providing adjusted compensation for the veterans of the world war. I shall continue my support of that legislation.

Voted for the Sheppard Matrnity Act.

I voted against the new republican revenue tax law, which ought to be designated as a method of relieving the rich from the payment of their just share of taxation.

I voted against the bill providing free tolls through the Panama Canal for American ships engaged in coastwise trade because these ships already enjoy a legal monopoly of that trade which should not be added to by this gratuity.

I voted against the resolution declaring Senator Newberry entitled to his seat as a senator from Michigan.

I am opposed, of course, to the anti-lynching bill which recently passed the house of representatives because, among other reasons, it is an encroachment upon the reserved police powers of the states.

I stand unreservedly on the declaration adopted in the Clayton anti-trust law, on my motion, that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

While there are other matters of importance and gravity, yet, in my judgment, the paramount and pressing questions which now confront the American people are the restoration of economic conditions and the application of sound principles of taxation in raising the necessary revenue for the support of the government.

To restore economic conditions many things may be done, but nothing is more important in this connection than the curtailment of government expenditures wherever practicable, the encouragement of labor and agriculture, and the enlargement of markets for American products.

To provide the necessary funds for the support of the government, resort should be had primarily to the indirect method of tariff taxation and the direct method of income and other direct taxation.

With reference to the tariff, I favor the levying of revenue duties on practically all imports, whether raw material or the finished product, and I am opposed to the levying of protective duties on any imports, whether raw material or the finished product.

In respect to direct taxes, the basic principle to be followed is to levy such taxes in proportion to the benefits received from the government and the ability to pay the taxes.

It is perhaps not extravagant to say that no more important sessions of the congress have been held in its history than during my present term.

As is well known, I have not enjoyed robust health for some time, but, notwithstanding this, I have been a daily attendant upon the sessions of the senate.

The sessions of the congress, during my present term, cover 1,217 days, and I have not missed a day.

During the five years which I have served of this term I have voted on practically all important questions which were before the senate, and where I have not voted on minor questions I have usually been protected by a pair.

While my name will be submitted to you in the forthcoming primary, yet candor impels me to say that I am not strong enough to make a canvass of the state. My candidacy must therefore be left largely to the democrats generally, men and women, who approve my views on public questions, and for whose support and friendship I will be profoundly grateful.

C. A. CULBERSON.

Mrs. Roy Alfred Mayo, the daughter, and (above at right) her mother Mrs. E. S. Cheatham, who disappeared.

KANOWA TEST NOT YET WELL SAY REPORTS

Efforts Continue to Make Well of Wildcat, Earlier Rumored to Provide Big Extension.

Bad Weather Holds Back Operations in Young County as in Other North Texas Districts.

Earlier reports that the Kanowa Oil and Gas Company's No. 1 Stovall in South Bend field, made flows amounting to several hundred barrels after a shot in the lime at 3410 feet, failed of confirmation later in the week, when communication was again established with the field. According to reports from authentic sources the test is not yet a well, and has made less than 100 barrels of oil, and is showing only a small quantity of gas. It was given a shot of 100 quarts of nitro glycerine, the shot forming a bridge in the hole, which is not yet cleaned out.

The bad weather has resulted in shut-downs in this section, as in practically all of North Texas, and as a consequence actual developments are scarce.

Two New Producers.

Two new producers are reported from the Bunger pool. The Cosden Oil and Gas, and Brooks, No. 1 Grimshaw is reported a 50-barrel pumper.

Miller et al No. 1 Herron, offsetting the Penn Cities wildcat, which is now making around 40 barrels on the pump from a new sand at 2300 feet, drilled several weeks ago, is reported down around 800 feet.

The Pomona Mutual Oil company's No. 3 Owens is reported drilling in the 1900-foot sand. The No. 4 on this lease in a rig.

The Simms Oil company's No. 7 Owens is reported drilling around 1550 feet. No. 10 this lease is a rig, and No. 11 is still a location.

The Monroe Production company's No. 1 Askew is reported drilling around 2350 feet, and the same company's No. 1 Prichard is drilling around 2430 feet.

The Union Oil company's No. 2 Grimshaw is reported drilling around 2,700 feet.

The Racco Oil company's No. 1 Rhoades is reported drilling around 3,840 feet. The Hedrick Oil Corporation No. 1 Rhoades is reported drilling around 2125 feet.

The Ralco's No. 1 Roark is reported down below 3,150 feet, and the No. 1 Chriswell which recently started rilling is reported down below 1,400 feet.

Burton & Burton No. 3 Whittenberg is a rig.

Cosden Makes Progress

The several tests being drilled by the Cosden Oil and Gas company on the Owens leases report good progress. The No. 5-B Owens is reported drilling around 920 feet; the No. 3-B drilling around 890 feet, the No. 2-D drilling around 1,140 feet, the No. 3-D at 970 feet, the No. 3-M drilling around 790 feet, the No. 4-M drilling around 880 feet, the No. 6-M drilling around 1,040 feet, the No. 9-M drilling around 300 feet.

There is practically nothing new reported from the older South Bend field. Just south of the North American's No. 3 Scott, which is making better than 400 barrels in the 2200 foot sand, the failed to get this sand in their Burgess test, now drilling around 2,500 feet. The No. 2 Payne of the Roxana is drilling around 2,450 feet, the No. 2 Goode drilling around 2,190 feet, and the No. 3 Scott drilling around 870 feet.

The Panhandle Refinery company is reported drilling around 1650 feet in their No. 18 McCluskey. The No. 19 is drilling around 1,000 feet. These wells, with the No. 7 McCluskey, a producer in the 2100-foot sand, to be deepened, are going to the 2,600-foot sand, it is reported.

Conner et al No. 2 McCluskey is reported drilling around 1140 feet. The No. 7 is drilling around 1400 feet.

The Eureka Production company's No. 8 McCluskey is reported drilling around 600 feet. This is a new well, to be drilled to the 2000-foot sand opened up by the Conner No. 6 McCluskey, responsible for the new development at present going on on the McCluskey and adjoining leases.

Another new rig running since the Conner 2600-foot sand discovery is the No. 7 McCluskey of the Oklahoma Petroleum and Gasoline company.

West of the river there are very few rigs running. The Godley oil company's No. 18 Graham is reported shut down around 2130 feet. Westerfelt and Noble No. 3 Graham is reported drilling around 1830 feet.

The Panhandle's Martin Wildcat, about two miles west of production in this McCluskey-Graham pool, is reported down around 1700 feet.

Production totals for the month of February showed a drop of a little more than a thousand barrels a day, with the daily average slightly under 9,000 barrels. Bad weather for a part of the month, and a shortage of completions in the new parts of the field, coupled with the usual decline in the older fields, is responsible for this drop. The total runs for the month were 249,500 barrels.

OHIO AND OKLAHOMA STARS BATTLE FOR HORSESHOE TITLE; OHIOAN WINS

Charles C. Davis of Columbus, O., recently annexed the title by defeating R. P. Spencer of Pitcher, Okla., in the national tourney at St. Petersburg, Fla. Twenty-two of the star pitchers representing almost every corner of the U. S. competed in the meet. Fred Brust of Columbus, George May of Akron and Charley Bobbitt of Lancaster were the other Ohioans to hold the title. The contests drew several thousand people to the stadium where the games were staged.

NOTE—The Harding administration is one year old. The chief attacker and chief defender of administration policies in the United States senate present herewith a review of the year from their respective party standpoints.

By SENATOR E. WATSON (R) United States Senator From Indiana (Written Expressly for International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Americans may well be proud of the achievements recorded in one year by the Harding administration.

Senator J.E. Watson

The republican party was confronted with Herculean tasks when it came into control of the government March 4, 1921. The administration's success in carrying out its platform can be measured only by the magnitude of the obstacles it overcame in its attempt to achieve normalcy.

An era of public expenditures on a scale staggering imagination prevailed in the Wilson administration. Public service was habituated to extravagant measures. The country was burdened under a national debt, the interest alone of which was greater than the total public debt prior to the world war.

The disarmament conference, called by the Harding administration, has been an extraordinary success. It has dealt with questions of the most difficult character and on all of them has reached agreements that will have most beneficial results. This conference was the greatest single step taken to eliminate war in the history of mankind.

"Success Due to Genius."

Its success is due to the genius and inspiration of those who directed the policy of the United States. It is a tribute to the leadership of President Harding and to the able men he selected to represent the United States in the conference.

The Harding administration one year ago today was confronted not merely with the necessity of removing officials long trained in extravagance, but of attempting to cure an extravagant plague that permeated every federal bureau and department. There was a huge army of unemployed. Industry was paralyzed.

These conditions were inherited from the Wilson administration. They are not corrected yet, but in one year of effort the Harding administration has done much not only to cure the country's financial ailment but to prevent a recurrence of the devastating disease.

From a constructive standpoint the administration has ended the technical state of war with Germany. This act was essential to the prosperity of the nation and was a long step toward bringing a return to normalcy.

"Budget Act Passed."

The budget act was next passed by a republican congress. This measure already has proven a success. Its adoption had a healthy effect on curbing extravagance in public office.

The farmers' emergency tariff act was also passed to provide the first necessary relief for overburdened agriculture. The Capper-Volstead Co-operative Marketing bill was passed only last month to give agriculture further relief. Other bills were enacted to help the farmer.

The soldiers were not forgotten, even though a bonus was impossible under existing unstable financial conditions. The veteran's bureau was formed, consolidating all government agencies for the relief of soldiers. Right now congress is enacting new appropriations for carrying on the important work.

The maternity bill, one of the

By SENATOR HARRISON, (D.) (Written Expressly for International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A trail of broken promises, misrepresentations, apologies and an absolute failure to reduce the high cost of living mark the first year of republican administration of the government.

Senator Harrison

The only achievement the republican party can hardly claim was the passage of legislation at instance of the so-called agriculture group—a group made up of democratic and republican and progressive republican senators. The amendment to the war finance corporation act, granting credits to farmers and relieving banks holding agricultural paper, would never have passed had not the agriculture group been insistent in its demand that the measure be passed.

"President Opposed."

This legislation when first suggested was bitterly opposed by President Harding and administration forces in the senate and only accepted when the agriculture group, backed by the militant democratic minority, forced it through the senate. This legislation is the single achievement of the present administration.

Those who now claim credit for the results of the disarmament conference as an administration achievement seem not to realize that the conference was held not because of President Harding but in spite of him.

The idea first was suggested in concrete form in Article 8 of the league of nations covenant. Senator Borah, a progressive republican, introduced a resolution in the senate that was championed by the united minority in congress, calling for such a conference. It was opposed at first by President Harding and the republican leadership in both house and senate. It was killed twice in committee and only allowed to be passed when some progressive colleagues of Borah and the militant democratic minority aroused such a storm of public opinion that the calling of the conference could not be denied any longer.

"Must Answer."

This one year of republican control in congress must answer to the country for the "white-washing" of Senator Newberry, of Michigan. The republican record of this purchase of planks in the republican platform a year ago, was enacted by the republican congress. It was an administration bill and provided for the care of mothers and babies.

"Packers' Bill"

The packers" bill, regulating commerce in livestock and dairy products, also passed. It ended a long and violent controversy over abuses complained of by farm producers.

For the shipping interests the republican senate passed an act permitting American vessels to pass through the Panama canal free of tolls.

These are but a few of the most important bills. There were numerous measures of a constructive nature which have given benefits on every side. No one year of party administration in history can be successfully pointed to as having enacted more constructive legislation than the first year of Harding rule.

RANGER FAMOUS AS INDIAN FIGHTER RELATES STORY OF THE CAPTURE OF GERONIMO

CHICAGO, March 4.—Superstition resulted in the surrender of Geronimo, the famous Indian and the Apache Kid used the first smoke screen recorded in this country, according to Col. Fred Owens of Chicago, a noted Texas ranger of half a century ago.

Colonel Owens, an old circus man, who earned his title as ranger, cowboy, bronco buster, pony express rider and participant in many wild west pursuits, including those of Geronimo and the Kid made these assertions here in a recital of his life which has been crammed full of action and narrow escapes that read like the passages from an old dime novel.

Fred Owens when nine years old was missing from his home in Flemingsbury, Kentucky, one morning in 1859. He had gone west.

At eighteen, or in 1868, he became a Texas ranger and made such a mark for himself that he was sent to the Centennial at Philadelphia with other rangers to represent the Lone Star state. In 1878-79 80, he was detailed to the pony express through No Man's Land, or the Indian Territory. He was never held up many times, outrode bandits bent on possessing the valuables he carried.

In 1881 he took the saddle again as an active ranger. About that time Geronimo, the most wily chief that ever gave the American army trouble, was getting bad in West Texas. Until Geronimo's capture in the hills back of Chihuahua, Mexico, Colonel Owens was a material part of his pursuit. And he tells a story of the Indian's capture that may not be part of the records of the war department because Geronimo had few friends among white men. The colonel was one of these few.

In after years, Geronimo told him why he surrendered to the white man and it is a story of the Indian's superstitious nature. Geronimo's pursuers numbered among them a Captain Hildebrand. When the Indian was driven into the hills and the chase became hot, Hildebrand's command was crawling over the crags toward the red skin's stronghold. Just before his surrender Geronimo caught sight of the face of Captian Hildebrand and was ready to fire. Then a bright light flashed over the officer's features. This the Indian could not fathom, and it drove all the fight out of him.

In those days troopers in the army were resourceful men. A private in the advancing line had seen a point of vantage and thought his captain should know of it. To move or call would reveal his position to the Indians. Yet he must get the attention of Captain Hildebrand. Taking a small mirror from his pocket he caught the rays of the sun. These reflected on the face of Hildebrand, then in imminent danger of Geronimo's rifle. But the flash beat the Indian's trigger finger. He saw the wonderful, bright light and thought it a message from Heaven to identify Captain Hildebrand as the Great Spirit. Geronimo ran up his flag of truce, merely stipulating that he should not be hung or shot for his outrages if he surrendered. His terms were accepted.

In 1884 the Apache Kid, a half-breed outlaw, and his band were marauding in West Texas. The Apache Kid, was of the same tribe, but not related to Geronimo. Yet he possessed all the wiles and savage cruelty of his chieftain. Colonel Owens and his fellow rangers were sent after the Apache Kid.

The chase was a hot one. The Apache Kid knew horses and from time to time got remounts on the fastest and freshest horses in corrals he passed. The rangers plugged along on their same ponies. But they followed the trail so fast that they drove the Apache Kid and his band to a field of fewer corrals and more desperate straits.

They surrounded the band at Stinking Wells, so called from the sulphur fumes that rise from its pit. As the law circle closed in, the Apache Kid made use of a smoke screen. The wind was blowing from his band toward the rangers. The Indian fired the prairie. Then, under cover of the smoke they brought down some of the rangers.

Colonel Owens did not escape. Two of the Wolff boys with whom he had lived when he first came to Texas fell in the rifle fire. Colonel Owens dragged them through it and returned to get his horse. Then he rode into a bullet that caught him in the left thigh and another killed his horse, which fell on the colonel, crushed his chest, and left him unconscious. When he came to himself he was seven miles nearer civilization, being carried on the back of a friendly squaw. The Wolff boys were saved.

Recuperating, he again took up the chase and helped to make it merry for the Apache Kid until that outlaw was run to cover in Big Bear Canyon on the Pecos river and died from a ranger's bullet.

He then broke eighteen horses to work without line, bridle or bit, and their performance was presented the first time with the original Buffalo Bill show in Omaha in 1884. In 1885 Colonel Owens went back to Texas. He added to his string of "naked racers," as they were called, and presented them for two seasons with the Barnum and Bailey circus. Then he sold them to that company.

He returned to Texas and took up the trail of Bass Scott and his band of cattle rustlers. This crowd was exterminated 100 miles from Fort Stockton, but before their end Colonel Owens had received a terrible wound that crushed in his left side.

This laid him up for some time but he went on the last "big drive" of cattle from Texas. There were five thousand head in the herd. In Stevens' Saucer, Texas, so called because the hills form a giant saucer, a coyote barked and a cowboy fired a shot at him. When the stampede was over one thousand head of cattle were dead and twenty-five hundred were lost.

Returning to civilization, Colonel Owens heard of a midget broncho pony born on the trail. He bought this little animal, which was the great trick pony, "Cleo." He trained "Cleo" and the animal was taken around the world twice by Colonel Owens. Cleo died in 1918. Colonel Owens then left the road.

What is thought of him by showmen is evidenced by his initial, and since, automatic elections, as chaplain of their club. He can still take the thumb, fore and middle fingers of his pistol hand, roll and crimp a cigarette the cowboy's way, in spite of the fact that those three fingers are marred by the mark of a bullet that shot the gun out of his hand.

Colonel Owens is still a Texas Ranger. He has never resigned, he has never been discharged. He is a man of quiet mein, and to meet him one would never realize he was one of the valiant men that carried law and order to and over the frontiers.

"Only One Chance in Ten for Elopers!"

"Drive Slowly to the Church," Warns Dr. Houghton, Famous "Marrying Parson," Who Now Reveals That 90 Per Cent. of the Runaway "Knots" He Has Tied Have Broken Asunder.

At Left—Edith Gaynor, Daughter of the Late Mayor of New York City, Whose Elopement Ended in a Divorce Decree.

By Betty Van Benthuysen

LISTEN, Little Miss Emotion: If you follow the caprice of your young heart and elope with the young man whose fraternity pin you are wearing, do you know how much chance you have of remaining a happy wife? No?

Nine out of every ten elopements end on the rocks, in the divorce court or some other equally effective place for turning love's young dream into a nightmare.

The authority for this information is the Rev. Dr. George Clarke Houghton, priest in charge of the Little Church Around the Corner, where 10,000 romances, some of them hurriedly started, have found their way to the altar.

"Ninety per cent. of the hasty marriages which result from elopement end unhappily," said the venerable clergyman, and what man in this country could know better? For there is an atmosphere of romance about the quaint little church that draws to it every week numbers of young folk who often come long distances to be married in the notable edifice.

Dr. Houghton has had charge of the little clearing house of love for many, many years. In a recent warning to the young, he begged that they should not make the mistake of contracting hasty matches, without parental approval, and backed his warning with those chilly statistics that should serve as a red flag before a love-sick couple, traveling churchward in an automobile. For that matter, they might be going on foot, for the experience of the rich and poor have alike made up the grand total from which the estimate is made.

Heedless Drivers Take Notice!

"Go slow," is the road sign that the rector would erect on every highway leading to an altar—to say nothing of a justice of the peace.

Strong support for the warning given by the venerable head of the Little Church came also from Magistrate Jean Norris, the woman judge who passes upon the vast number of feminine delinquents who appear at Jefferson Market.

"It is my belief," she said, "that most of the runaway marriages contracted are unsatisfactory in the end. Such marriages, like those which are consummated under force, never bring the same happy result that comes from the regulation, family-sanctioned one."

The Abbe Jules LeMire had just told the French Deputies that they should repeal the "Act of Respect" in France, under which the consent of parents was required for marriage.

Nothing like the Gaynor family's corroboration of the "drive slowly to the church" idea is presented in any section of the land. The late Mayor William J. Gaynor of New York City left five children, four of whom married in haste and repented at leisure. Of the children, one was a son, Rufus. He was hardly twenty when he went to Chicago and secretly married Marie Oddo. He consulted neither of his parents, and it was but a short time before Gaynor found himself named as corespondent in a suit for divorce brought by a previously-annexed husband of his bride.

His sister Edith married Harry K. Vingut after a speedy elopement. Vingut was a Harvard man, a polo player of ability and of high business and social place. They slipped down to Wilmington, Del., and got married. In a few years the young woman went to Reno. She established a residence and won a divorce.

Marion Gaynor married and divorced Ralph H. Isham, and her sister, Helen, also took the Reno route a few years after her marriage to Edward T. Bedford, Jr.

It was a very short-lived event in the life of Julia Breitung when the daughter of the much-discussed banker and millionaire eloped with a farm hand who was employed on one of the places owned by the banker. Her father got rid of the new husband in such short order that nobody probably recalls anything about him.

An exception was the case of the Carroll Wainwrights. Young Wainwright lived in Philadelphia and he was a welcome visitor at the home of the George J. Goulds. One day the families of both were amazed to find that Wainwright and Edith Gould had eloped to Greenwich, Ct., and had been married. The Goulds banned the elopers for a long while and the gossips said that the time would speedily come when the pair would be telling it to the judge.

Nothing of the kind happened. They settled down like two doves. One saw them often on the Highlands boat journeying along just as two country lovers might, blissfully unmindful of parental ire, public curiosity or anything else. And the time came when a little one came to their home, and even the girl's grandmother, who reigned at the great estate, capitulated to the infantile evidence of bliss.

And they are still pursuing the even tenor of their way as though determined to come in the 10 per cent. class of those who triumph over human experience.

But while this is true, one does not have to go out of established channels to show how the elopers fail. In all New York society there has never been a woman of more striking presence than Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche. Her father, the late Frank Work, was one of the big figures in the financial district. He was an associate of the early Vanderbilts and the men who built without being Vanderbilts. Mr. Work had the keenest aversion to the marriage of one of his daughters to a foreigner. The experiences of his time had proven disastrous and he set down the edict that when Frances Ellin and Lucy picked mates, they had to be voters in the U. S. A.

Mrs. Burke-Roche twice defied that paternal dictum, and twice met failure. She first married James Burke-Roche, later Lord Fermoy. She divorced him in Delaware. Then, being notably fond of horses, she fell in with Aurel Batonyi, a Hungarian riding master and coach instructor, and astounded society by eloping with him.

The time came when she was forced to seek the divorce courts to drop the Batonyi name, and she resumed the name Burke-Roche. Her son by the first marriage has just inherited the title of his British father.

The Case of "Buddy" Fancher

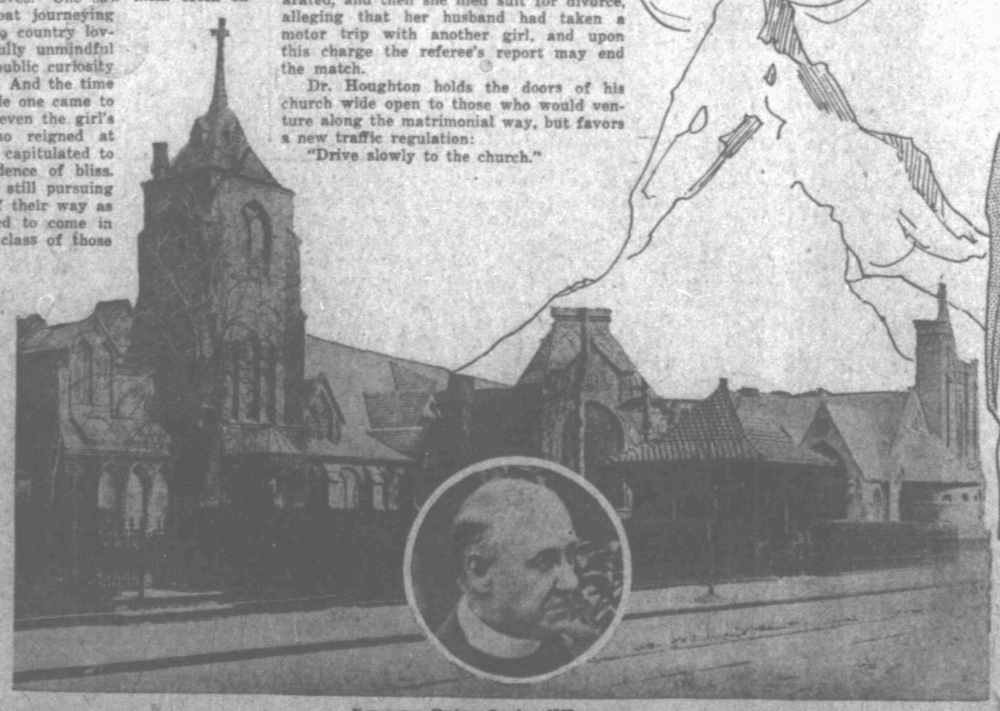

But the point is that in this case the Houghton prediction came true in two cases, and the defiance of the parental authority and wishes ended in divorce each time.

Dropping from notable history to the most recent case, one finds the romance of Miss "Buddy" Fancher, who had been proclaimed the second prettiest girl in Syracuse, completely wrecked within two months of her elopement. This young woman has a reputation for beauty that is more than local, and when she came to New York last June with Harold Dickson, against the wishes of her parents and friends, and then went over to the Brick Presbyterian church and was married, it created a sensation up-state.

Hardly had they returned to Syracuse when it became known that trouble had come. In a few weeks they were separated, and then she filed suit for divorce, alleging that her husband had taken a motor trip with another girl, and upon this charge the referee's report may end the match.

Dr. Houghton holds the doors of his church wide open to those who would venture along the matrimonial way, but favors a new traffic regulation:

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

The business situation has been brightened decidedly by the rise of farm products which has taken place in the last month, says the monthly review issued by the National City bank of New York. "This advance is of greater significance than any other development that has occurred since the prices of farm products broke in the fall of 1920. It is the first burst of real sunshine, and as such in marked contrast with the artificial variety which has been rather laboriously disseminated by cheerful people who have thought nothing was required but that everybody should smile at each other. A deadlock has existed, as a result of farm products having fallen much faster and farther than other products, and prosperity has been waiting on a correction of this uneconomic and unjust situation. Another demonstration has been afforded of the profound truth that the economic law and the moral law are always in harmony, and that it is wise management to bring business affairs into line with them," says the reviewer. "A pronounced improvement has taken place in the position of the farming population, which is precisely where the business situation has been weak. It would not be safe to predict that this improvement will continue or even that it will be in all respects maintained, but it probably is safe to say that the worst has been passed, and that on the whole the farmer will not lose the ground that has been gained. For one thing, a rise such as has occurred, does much to restore confidence in values. It has shown how easily the situation may right itself with a slight change in conditions, and that there never was ground for the extreme pessimism that prevailed. Pessimism, like optimism, is infectious, and when everybody is thinking the same way either state of mind will run to the extreme. When times were booming, common opinion was ready to insist they would go on that way for a long time, and when they turned bad it was just as positive that they were going to stay bad for a very long time unless something was done forthwith. This rally of farm products by no means restores the balance between farm products and the goods and services which the farmer must buy. It helps, but the latter must come down before employment can be full for the wage-earners or business normal for anybody?" The review calls attention to the fact that the cotton mills, where a strike is now in progress, and in coal mines, where a strike is threatening, cannot continue to pay the high union wage scales while non-union concerns are operating at lower wages to meet the public demand for lower cost of living.

George Weymouth is the editor of Farm Life. George says whatever may happen to the coal miners and the railroad workers in their campaign against reduced wages it is apparent that the farm laborer has been pretty well deflated. This is his view point, "Under present conditions farmers cannot afford to pay, and will not pay for hired help, anything approaching the sums paid to organized labor in the industries. This is hard for the hired men, and in the end will be hard for men in the cities. No combination of labor groups will be able to resist the necessity of equalizing the costs of production between agriculture and manufacture. You may have cheap bread and expensive shoes for a year or two, but you cannot have them forever. It will be cheap bread and cheap shoes, or dear bread and dear shoes, when the re-adjustment is over. The logical thing and the best thing will be to have both bread and shoes reasonably priced and produced under conditions that will give farmer and business man a living wage and a fair profit. To paraphrase the revolutionary hero's epigram, we must all prosper together or suffer poverty separately, for agriculture and industry have only a single interest. Business has been sharply reminded of the fact that it cannot prosper when the farmer has hard times, and the farmer may take the lesson to heart. He cannot further his own best interests by any form of retaliation." All this reminds H. N. P. that Roger W. Babson is of the opinion that the corn farmers of Iowa and other States of the West are the real Bolsheviks of America; that they are responsible for the farmers bloc; that they are responsible for the relief measures or rather so-called relief measures put over by congress and some one should warn them that legislation will not help them or make their road easy. Roger W. Babson doesn't know it all. There are mighty few Bolsheviks among the land-owning farmers of America. Their pocketbooks were deflated with a vengeance in 1921. They are not asking charity. They are not going to tear down the government. Roger W. is a product of Massachusettes. Only gentlemen farmers till the soil in Massachusetts. It is a fad with them. Roger W. should stick to his knitting. He knows all about factories and factory lords. He knows all about producers and free raw materials. He insists that the farmers of America should produce free raw materials for the manufacturers of the East. If protection is a good thing why shouldn't producers as well as manufacturers share in the pickings?

All the manifestations of sense and sanity augur well for healthier and more active business and fuller employment is the verdict of B. C. Forbes, business doctor and writer on economics. Forbes says that all the people and all industries are moving back toward sanity. Sane conditions rule the banking world. Exorbitant rates have disappeared. Borrowers are no longer given the cold shoulder. New bond issues are handled on reasonable terms. Prices for agricultural products are now moving toward a rational level. Wheat and corn have recovered more than 40 per cent from the low quotations of last year. Sterling exchange has broken into new ground. Francs are higher than any time since 1919. Bond prices are at the highest average level in almost three years. Advance in railway and industrial centers are notable. As for the stock market failures of third rate brokerage houses have not effected prices or business. Forbes says something else, "Concerns that canceled their advertising are beginning to manifest courage, especially as most of them discovered it was poor business to stop their selling efforts when orders were most needed." Forbes is a business doctor, an investigator of business conditions and he generally knows whereof he speaks.

An example of tax exemption is mirrored by the Detroit Free Press. A probate court fight among the heirs of James J. Hill and Mrs. Hill has been on of late in St. Paul. The row has been over the appointment of an administrator for Mrs. Hill's estate of $12,000,000. But that is only incidental here. The significant point of public interest is that Louis W. Hill, former business adviser for Mr. Hill, testified that beginning in 1916 and continuing until 1919, he disposed of heavily taxed securities held by his principal, substituting therefore tax free holdings, and in this way increased her annual income from $365,000 to $730,000 a year; that is he doubled net returns. "Here is a concrete example of the working of the tax exempt bond evil anybody can understand at a glance. In a single instance, in the case of a personal fortune which is surpassed by several in Michigan which have been similarly invested, a little shrewd readjustment has withdrawn $365,000 annually from the reach of the tax gathers. But the money thus lost to the public treasuries must be found somewhere, so the burden is shifted to business enterprise, to people who are obliged to work for their livings, to the widow with a cottage instead of a palace. "If the case of the estate of Mrs. Hill were an isolated one the matter would not be worth mentioning,'" says the Free Press. "But unfortunately it is typical of hundreds of other cases. A good many billions of dollars are tied up in tax exempt securities in this country. Figure very conservatively on the basis of what was done with the estate of Mrs. Hill by expert handling, and the extra weight of taxation placed in consequence on the shoulders of those whose property enjoys no exemptions becomes appalling. It runs into the hundreds of millions, possibly into the billions annually. It easily makes the difference between a situation in which the nation could handle its financial problems easily, and the present very difficult economic condition."

Congressman Fritz Lanham got his where the turkey got the ax—in the neck. He made a gallant fight for $150,000 to keep the Fort Worth helium plant going for the remainder of the fiscal year. Republican congressional leaders smashed Fritz, they smashed his little appropriation bill and Boss Madden of Illinois plunged his knife to the hilt into the Fort Worth helium proposition. "Cut to the bone" is the Madden slogan whenever a Southern Democrat bobs up. "If war has been eliminated, why a helium plant," is the contention of the Hon. Madden who says that there are more negro voters in his district than in any one congressional district in America; but the color line hasn't anything to do with the helium proposition and for this Fritz took the count.

Hon. Cullen F. Thomas in a recent speech declared that he would tax the wealth of America to pay the cost of the World's War and the cost for maintenance of government. Financiers say that wealthy people and corporations of America have among their holdings tax exempt bonds having a value of 14 billion dollars. Now how would the Hon. Cullen F. Thomas go about it to make the holders of the 14 billions of tax exempt bonds pay their share of the cost of the war and for the maintenance of the government?

Representative Williams, Republican of Illinois, thanked God for the going of Postmaster General Will Hays and Representative Blanton, Democrat of Texas, thanked God and the country for having Hays at the head of the postoffice department for a year. A very decent chap is Will Hays, a spoilsman perhaps but all politicians are spoilsmen. They place their friends in office and they keep their political opponents or personal enemies out of office. Isn't business business?

George E. Roberts is the statistician of the National City bank of New York and the editor of the monthly bulletin issued by the bank. His survey of agricultural staples in the February bulletin of the bank is of interest to farmers and stockmen as well as bankers and investors who are buyers of cattle paper: "Wheat has had a rise of forty cents a bushel from the low point, and should bring a good price as long as Russia is not an exporter. Hogs at $10 per hundred weight in Chicago are on a profitable basis, and helped corn. Stock cattle are doing much better. During the boom period, while prices were rising, many cattlemen became over-extended, and in many instances banks became over-extended in granting them accommodations. A great amount of cattle paper was put afloat through cattle-loan companies, and bought by investors who were under no obligations to renew it, and who counted upon having their money when the paper fell due. The turn of the times came, prices fell, bank deposits declined, the cattle loans fell due, banks needed their money to meet the calls of depositors, and cattle had to be sold. It was a mistake to create so much indebtedness. The cattle business would have had more real prosperity without borrowing so much. The borrowing resulted in a competition for stock cattle that drove prices up to a level that was dangerous for those who fed the finishing and ultimately brought disaster all around. The excessive supplies of cotton are being steadily reduced, and the price has advanced two cents from the low point of January." Wheat is climbing; cotton is climbing; sheep are climbing; hogs are climbing; corn is climbing, and spring is almost here.

George Weymouth of Farm Life advocates a bond issue for the soldier bonus. "We believe that nine-tenths of the farmers of the country would prefer to have the proposed bonus for the World's War veterans taken care of by a bond issue rather than by additional taxes," reads a Farm Life editorial. "It does not seem either wise or necessary to put too much of the burden of the war upon the present generation. Long time bonds, at a low rate of interest, for the purpose of paying the bonus, could be sold. They might temporarily depress the price of the Liberty bonds, and of other securities, but even that would be less hardship and less disturbing to business than an increase in taxes, either direct or indirect. Without doubt a majority of the farmers agree that the bonus is a just recompense to the boys who went into the service. But farmers are unanimous in objecting to additional taxes. They do not even want to see business, or incomes, or corporations further burdened by tax levies. They strongly object to sales taxes or increases in first and second class postal rates, because they know the payment ultimately falls upon the whole people. If the members of the House and Senate could only realize just how 'hard-boiled' people are becoming over the tax question they would turn resolutely away from the temptation to increase the tax burden for any purpose whatsoever." Tell it to Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas. He is the uncrowned leader of the farmers bloc and owner of one daily newspaper and a chain of farm weeklies.

Editor Cyrus Coleman of the Henrietta Independent has a political grouch. If it isn't a political grouch then what is it? The Independent carries the following editorial: "That Governor Neff made a serious mistake when he vetoed the bill to create a judicial district of Archer, Clay and Young counties must now be apparent to the governor himself. One of the arguments in favor of separation of Wichita county from the other three counties, was that Wichita demanded all the consideration for herself and the other counties were treated like negro orphans. The truth of this contention is illustrated in an incident that took place in Wichita Falls last Sunday, when the newly organized law and order league, or vigilance committee, appointed a committee to recommend a suitable district attorney to the governor. We are not complaining about a vigilance committee in that county, for they certainly need it down there, and of course a vigilance committee has the privilege of recommending persons to the governor for appointment to office, but if they were going about the recommendation in a public way like that, it seems that courtesy would have dictated that the other counties in the district be invited to take part in the selection of the man to be recommended. But they seemed to regard the office of district attorney as a matter for the exclusive use and benefit of Wichita county. The Independent has it upon good authority that the bill for a district to be composed of Archer, Clay and Young counties will be introduced again when the legislature convenes, and it is believed that it will easily pass, and that the governor will not veto it again. The logical thing is for Wichita county to compose a judicial district or districts by itself, and fight its own battles with its plethora of crime, and leave these other three counties to go on with their development." Representative citizens of Wichita county organized a law enforcement league. They organized it in order to get in behind officials who are striving to do their duty and do all in their power to give community and county an impartial administration of law and justice. They did not care a snap of the finger who was to be appointed district attorney by the governor or where he hailed from if he had the necessary qualification and would do justice to all concerned. Editor Cyrus Coleman is reminded that it is impossible for mere mortal man to create a mountain out of a molehill.

Canada has 3,700,000 square miles of territory. This is a fifth more than the United States. Canada has less population than the State of New York. Richard Spillane says two of her great transcontinental railroads do not earn expenses and will not until the country grows up to them. Now Canada is hoping for the coming of men and money from other lands and a big advertising campaign is to be launched for immigrants. Uncle Sam is doing his best to shut them out. Canadians and their government and their railways are going to do their best to bring them in. Business appears to be business.

Chicago capitalists are to build the largest hotel in the world. Its site cost $2,500,000 and the building will cost $12,000,000. It will contain a convention hall with seating capacity of 4,000, a exposition floor with 8,500 square feet, a banquet hall seating 1,045, a dining room seating 1,000 and will be 25 stories in height. This is handing Manhattan Island another wallop.

Folks Back Home

Sketches by J. H. STRIEBEL

By Robert Quillen

UNCLE GUS

"I'm kind o' poo'ly this mornin'," confessed Uncle Gus, as he leaned forward to touch a match against the red belly of the stove. "Rheumatism's got me. When a feller's got rheumatism, tho' ain't nothin' in the world o' value, exceptin' maybe it's hope. An' sometimes I think the ability to hope was the greatest thing God give to folks. It's hope what keeps folks from crawlin' in a hole an' dyin'. You'd think rich folks would be full o' the joy o' livin', and po' folks wouldn't care much whether they lived or not; but it ain't that way. Rich folks ain't got much to hope for. They've got everything they need, an' nothin' to look forward to exceptin' another day o' plenty; but po' folks lives on hope. They know things can't git much worse, an' they hang on somehow, hopin' maybe tomorrow will bring somethin' better. If I knowed I'd have rheumatism ever' day from now on, I reckon maybe I'd curl up an' die; but hope keeps me expectin' the pain to quit an' so I manage to stay cheerful. If it wa'n't fo' hope, son, the' wouldn't be no buildin' or educatin' or courtin' or marryin' or nothin else, an the human race would die o' rot in a few years, like as not."

CONCERNING BOSSES

The man you work for is either the directing head of an institution in which you are an important co-operating cog, or he is a 'Boss with a capital B. If he is a directing head, you are lucky and he is lucky. If he is a Boss, both are unlucky. The fault may be his, or it may be yours. If the fault is his, he is a two-by-four who hasn't sense enough to conduct a business and thinks he is being efficient when he is meddling with the employees and interfering with their work. If the fault is yours, you are a sorry workman who can't be trusted to handle your job without supervision. In the former case, you should learn to handle the job you have.

If he knows his job and you know yours, the relationship usually is pleasant if you give him what he pays for. It may be that he doesn't pay you what you think you are worth. Employers never do. But that has nothing to do with the case. He pays you what you agreed to work for, and your part of the contract consists in giving him an honest day's work for his money.

Now there is but one way to work for a man. That is to work for him. And you can't work for him while nursing a grudge against him and accusing him of denying you a square deal. If he isn't giving you a square deal, by all means cuss him out and quit. But don't, for the sake of your own self-respect, continue to take his money while failing to deliver the service you have sold him.

No law compels you to work for him. The world is wide. Either work for him cheerfully and honorably or refuse to work for him at all. You can't serve both an employer and the god of hate. And you can't be neutral. You are either for the boss (not a capital B) or you are against him. If you are for him, do your darndest. If you are against him, tell him to go where Dante saw the wolf and remove yourself from his pay roll.

All this sad world of industrial "unrest" needs is a collection of employers and employees who will be square with one another.

THE GIRL ACROSS THE STREET

Usually the girl across the street lifts her voice in song as she goes about her morning duties, and her enthusiasm in the performance hurls the melody through open windows to echo up and down the street and proclaim to the world that industry is the mother of happiness; but this morning silence hung upon the neighborhood like a pall. We were a little uneasy, but as the morning advanced the girl came calling and drew daughter into a cushioned corner to share her sorrow. It appeared that the butcher's boy, wanting other diversion, had called upon her last night without invitation, and being alone with her in the dim hallway after an evening of monosyllabic conversation, had shown symptoms of desiring to kiss her. "I know he was going to do it," wailed the girl. "I just know it; and I had to be right distant and haughty to scare him off, because we had onions for supper; and it'll be just my luck if he never tries it again when I'm fixed for it."

ABOUT DEMOCRATS

It is commonly believed that democracy promises equality among men—that when all the world is made safe for democracy, the great man will call the humble man Mister and the humble man will call the great one Bill.

Such democracy is neither possible nor desirable. For man will not labor except by laboring he can win rewards; and all rewards are vain and profitless things except they bring him the privilege of putting on airs before his fellows.

The cry for a democracy that will level all ranks comes from those who stand at the bottom, never from those who have reached the top. The men who would divide all wealth are the men who have little, not the men who have much.

But in a land where opportunity is equal the man at the bottom may become a congressman or a millionaire; and having thus gained distinction, he will feel that Fate has denied him a portion of his carvings if his fellow men do not cheer or bow before him and concur in his belief that he is a superior being.

The standard of greatness varies with the passing generations; it cannot be fixed until progress is stayed. The ambition of men is not to equal a standard, but to excel other men—to become the big duck in the pond—to drive a car equipped with a greater number of cylinders than the car possessed by the neighbor.

The desire to excel is born of vanity, but it is a wholesome desire, and in it is the germ of all the progress, art, research, discovery. Why run a race if there are no cheers for the winner?

A democracy that guarantees equal opportunity is greatly to be desired. A democracy that promises equal rewards to the wise and the foolish, the weak and the strong, is a dream of madmen or knaves, and, please God, must remain a dream while the world stands.

The Incumbency of Greatness

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

There seems to be little doubt that the United States is a great country.

She admits it.

She is great not only in natural resources in wealth, and in the vigor of her population, but great also in her moral influence, as what she says today has probably more effect in the councils of the world than has the word of any other nationality.

Two recent visitors have born testimony to this situation. One is a Briton, Lord Riddell, a prominent British newspaper publisher, who has returned home after having served as official press representative at the Disarmament Conference. He says that he detected a distinct undercurrent of feeling in America that the old world is on the wane and that America is destined to become the financial, commercial, shipping, artistic, and scientific center of the world, and that she is also destined to be the source from which new political ideas will emanate.

Marshal Foch, the distinguished Frenchman who commanded the allied forces in the late war, made a visit to the United States, traveled throughout the country, and as he stepped aboard the steamer for home, declared, according to the Paris Times:

"America is a reservoir of inexhaustible energy and labor. I had guessed its capacity, its power, from what we had seen the country do during the war, but on the spot was brought home to me just what are the fertile fields and extraordinary industries of the country. And we see only the commencement. When both fields and industries are fully exploited and giving a full yield the result will be prodigious."

Giving the due per cent off for national vanity, there still remain enough facts to justify the opinion that America is, at present, perhaps the tallest, broadest-shouldered brother among the family of nations.

And it may have one of two incumbencies, or some of both.

In the first place, any sort of prominence is bound to produce envy. Any sort at all. If you are richer than your fellow townsmen, a certain number of them will hate you. If you are the best-looking girl in the boarding school, you can depend upon a certain amount of catty hostility. If you are the best player on the baseball nine, there are quite sure to be some of the number who would be glad to see you fall and break your leg. Even in the matter of goodness or virtue the rule holds, for the best man in the world, whom none was able to accuse of sin, was hounded to death and crucified between two thieves.

We can, therefore, depend upon a certain amount of hostility from our neighbors.

If the rich man uses his wealth to help his fellows and not to trample upon them, if the witty-minded devotes his superior mental qualities in making people happy instead of ridiculing them, and if the endowment of virtue is used for the welfare of one's fellows, in the long run such superiority will not only be beneficial to others, but will provide security to the one that possesses them.

If America realises her responsibilities and turns her great power toward helping her fellow nations, it will be the best possible means of making her position secure.

If America listens to the narrow-minded counsels of vanity, cockiness, isolation, and unfriendliness, with which some of her politicians and newspapers are prolific, she will naturally succeed in raising up for herself an enmity which in course of time will be strong enough to destroy her.

Imaginary Playmates

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

As is well known, many children three to seven years of age—sometimes even older—invent imaginary playmates for themselves. They give names to these creations of their mind, talk to them, pretend to entertain them, order them about, and so forth.

Also they may go travelling with them to imaginary places, where they have a variety of interesting adventures. All of which is usually regarded by the parents of these fanciful children as highly amusing, and of no particular significance other than testifying to the imaginative ability of their offspring.

Of course, it does so testify. But the question remains as to why the children exercise their imagination in this particular way. And the parents' amusement would lessen if they appreciated how this question must be answered.

Almost always—perhaps I should say, always—children who invent playmates do so because of some real or fancied source of dissatisfaction with their home life. Often this source is to be found in the failure of their parents to let them have actual playmates.

Children possess a gregarious instinct, even as adults do. And they are so constituted that they need companions of their own age, not merely to satisfy this instinct, but to help them develop into socially adaptable beings.

When denied such companionship they will either content themselves with solitary games and amusements, or, if the gregarious urge be strong within them, they will fall back on imaginary companions. In either case a harmful result may follow.

Resort to solitary amusements tends to make the child more or less socially unadaptable through life. But so does resort to imaginary playmates, in so far as it facilitates over-development of another instinct, the self-assertive.

And it is an almost invariable rule that, when playmates are imagined, the child adopts a dominating attitude toward them.

It is not led by them, it leads them. Even when professing great affection for them, it insists that they must show subservient devotion to their creator. The latter is the superior one, they are inferior. Thus, unconsciously, a selfish, domineering, perhaps arrogant, trend may be established in the character, to the child's later hurt.

Nor is it only lack of actual playmates that may incite children to invent imaginary comrades. It may turn to these if, rightly or wrongly, it feels that it is not receiving from its parents the attention is regards as its due.

In that case, as recently pointed out by George H. Green—in a book, "Psychoanalysis in the Classroom," of distinct value to parents as well as to teachers—the creation of imaginary playmates must be interpreted as a criticism of the parents.

The latter may well ask themselves if such criticism is justified; or if, as is more likely, the child is both inclined to demand too much from life and disinclined to meet the demands which life makes of it.

So that, in short, instead of being amused if their children turn to imaginary playmates, parents should regard this as a sign, either that they are failing to give the children all they should, or that the children stand in need of special care to help them endure the stresses, trials, and problems of every-day reality.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

As a broad, general principle I object to emancipated mothers. They are apt to go too far. Once freed from what they call their shackles, they sometimes get clear out of the social enclosure before they realize it. But there is one particular emancipated mother I approve of heartily. She has just disclosed to one large pinhead son just what she thinks of his brand of bullying.

"Ain't I been a good son?" he asked me, almost tearfully. "Haven't I always provided for her fine?"

I could say yes with heartiness to the providing part. As to his being a good son—well, I have my doubts about that. He has furnished her a house rent free and for years he has sent her one hundred and fifty dollars each month, and at Christmas he goes to visit her and takes her some present. But between times he is as mean as cowitch.

And the poor woman has to go through her books—he makes her keep books—and show him. If he does not like an item he says so forcibly. He continually complains that she is spending too much money, although she is spending no more than the money he sends her and she should have a right to spend that. If she gets too many dresses a year he tells her about it, and if her butcher's bills are larger than he thinks they ought to be he tells her, and if she gives money to the church or the dog-robbers, or Faith, Hope, and Charity he moans like a steam siren. So he did this year.

"It isn't any of your business what I spent my money for," said the old lady. "It's my money. If you do not want to give me the money you may stop. I can support myself. I had rather do so than be made to feel that I am an object of charity."

The son has been crying around ever since about that. He feels that he has been grievously misunderstood. He says that what he said to his mother was for her own good, and that if she were not getting old and childish she would never have taken that tone with him. But I'm not so sure of that. I happen to know she plans to support herself if she has to.

She intends to teach auction. That's no sign of childishness.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

When a man is reading a newspaper account of a wedding he skips the description of the bride's gown.

A rural editor says he was grossly insulted but once, and that was when some heartless wretch offered him a cash register in exchange for advertising.

Usually people who make the most imposing show have to impose on others to make it.

Sooner or later a woman is supposed to find that her husband actually knew what he was talking about.

There seems to be no place like home for the hilarity that begins there, as it seldom gets any further.

LIFE IS 'GRIM COMEDIAN' IN EMPRESS PLAY

Behind the prodution of Rita Weiman's first original screen story, "The Grim Comedian," which will be shown at the Empress Theater for two days, beginning Monday, lies a story of painstaking preparation by the director, Frank Lloyd, and the entire Goldwyn studio staff, and daily conferences with the author who had the unique satisfaction of seeing her story grow into a motion picture under her eyes.

The grim comedian, of course, is life, who plays ugly tricks on the puppets that fall into his hands. With this theme, Miss Weiman has told the story of a minor actress who gave up the luxury of a rich roue's favor that her child might not be contaminated by the loose atmosphere in which she lived. By a trick of fate, the girl moves the philanderer to his first genuine affection. Of these threads is "The Grim Comedian" woven into a tense drama.

Frank Lloyd, who directed "The Grim Comedian" had an excellent cast to work with. Phoebe Hunt as the actress-mother, Gloria Hope as the growing daughter, Jack Holt as the rich lover, and John Harron as the girl's fiance, play the more important parts. The minor roles are vividly presented by Mae Hopkins, Bert Woodruff, Laura Lavarnie, Joseph Dowling and Claude Payton.

MARY PICKFORD DOESN'T DANCE WITH THEM ALL

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, March 4.—Do you dance with another woman's husband?

"I'm not a prude and I'm not censuring other folks' activities," she explained to the International News Service.

"Douglas Doesn't Approve."

"Douglas doesn't think it the right thing for me to dance with other men," she added, as she glanced coyly at the muscular modern D'Artagnan who was sitting in a chair in the center of the parlor of their magnificent suite in the Ritz-Carlton, posing for a "still" picture.

"For that matter," she continued, "I think it's hardly the thing for me to meet a man one minute and then the next go into his arms and dance.

"Of course, I never dance in public. Occasionally we have a few persons—six or eight—at Beverly Hills, but then I dance only with Douglas, and then its the waltz and two step."

Move to California.

As soon as their legal affairs are attended to "Our Mary" and "Her Doug" will rush back to California.

Fairbanks explained why he believes the motion picture will be centered in California for some time to come.

"It's not because of the light—but because within a radius of a few miles of Los Angeles you find experts on every subject under the sun.

"You wouldn't believe it, but the best chain armor in the world is made there today," he continued. "That's just a sample of how American experts—in California—can supply better everything that the movies need."

Conductor to Nervous Passenger—If you are so nervous why don't you move up farther? The end car of a train is always the most dangerous.

Nervous Passenger—Well, then, why do they have it?

WOMAN COULD NOT WORK

Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Paul, Minn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a tired, worn-out feeling and painful periods. I used to get up with a pain in my head and pains in my lower parts and back. Often I was not able to do my work. I read in your little book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it. I feel so well and strong and can do every bit of my work and not a pain in my back now. I recommend your medicine and you can use this letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. PHIL. MAHER, 801 Winslow St., St. Paul, Minn.

Just another case where a woman found relief by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many times these tired, worn-out feelings and pains about the body are from troubles many women have. The Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for just this condition. The good results are noted by the disagreeable symptoms passing away—one after another.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Woman's Medicine for Women's Ailments. Always reliable.

Actress Sued Second Time on Charge of Being Heart Stealer

Miss Pauline Lord.

NEW YORK, March 4.—For the second time Pauline Lord, star in "Anna Christie," now playing at the Vanderbilt, has been haled into court as a "love pirate."

Mrs. Ruth Harris, the second accuser in five years, charges the actress alienated the affections of Mitchell Harris, her husband, and has induced him to leave her and their ten-year-old daughter, June, destitute.

Harris played in stock companies. His aunt was the late Maggie Mitchell, well known to a former generation of theatergoers. His brother is Averill Harris, who played the leading roles in a number of Broadway successes.

The first episode occurred six years ago when Mrs. Nellie Roche, wife of "Billy" Roche, the prize fight promoter and referee, brought suit in San Fraicisco for $15,000, alleging alienation. There is at present a judgment of $5,148 docketed in the office of County Clerk Donegan.

Promised to "Be Good"

During 1921, says Mrs. Harris, her husband did not support her and was friendly with Miss Lord. Mrs. Harris asks $50,000.

An interesting feature is promised at the trial by the introduction of a number of letters, purporting to have been written to Harris by Miss Lord while the former was playing in Boston with "Shavings," in the summer of 1920.

Calls Him "My Tweedy"

Darlene, miss you, oh, so much. You think I should get used to being without you and 'It you my tweedy?' and did you lobe me? an how much and it you my darlene? an it you my pie and it you nice? and for my sake and yours sake destroy this. Love.

PAULINE."

BEBE DANIELS HEADS CAST IN 'GAME' CHICKEN

Have you a little Spanish grandmother in your home? "It's your loss if you haven't," says Bebe Daniels, star of "A Game Chicken" which will open Thursday at the Olympic theater.

Miss Daniels has a quaint little grandmother who is, in her way, as interesting as the pretty star of Realart pictures herself. Eva de la Plaza Griffin is the daughter of a one-time governor of Colombia. On a trip to Buenos Aires she met the American consul in that city, and married him as the culmination of a real international romance. Mrs. Griffin traces her descent from the Empress Josephine of France.

When Mrs. Griffin learned that her grand-daughter was to do a picture with a lot of spanish atmosphere, she took from her trunks the relics of her youth; fine shawls and mantillas, rare and beautiful fans and jewelry. Many of these appear as costumes and "props" in the picture, and Mrs. Griffin, as interested as any young girl, was nearly always on the stage when Spanish scenes were being made.

"A Game Chicken" was written for Miss Daniels by Nina Wilcox Putnam, the well-known fictionist.

Brilliant Array of Headliners Put Their Best Into Gripping Play to Be Shown at Gem.

J. P. McGowan, star and director; Kathleen Clifford, noted prima donna and bright light of the screen; George C. Shedd, author of a long list of best sellers, and Monte Katterjohn, foremost photodramatist of the country, bestowed their combined talents upon "Cold Steel," which opens as the Gem Theatre Friday.

This brilliant array of headliners put their best into the making of a gripping story of the wastelands supplying it with the various elements of suspense, of romance, of intrigue and all the other ingredients that build up a drama of the screen.

"Cold Steel," distributed by Robertson-Cole, was adapted by Mr. Katterjohn from the famous novel "In the Shadow of the Hills," from the facile pen of George C. Shedd. The story is laid in the San Mateo Valley, New Mexico, and is rich with the rugged atmosphere of the open country.

J. P. McGowan, to whose credit is a long list of stage and photoplay successes, portrays the leading role and is supported by an all star cast including such well known players as Stanhope Wheatcroft, A. N. Millette, Charles E. Insley, Milton Brown, Nesel De Bruller and Elinor Fair. McGowan's long experience both as actor in important stage and screen productions and director equipped him perfectly to portray his exciting role in "Gold Steel." Critics everywhere have commended him.

Miss Clifford came first into prominence several years ago when she created a furore on Broadway by playing a child's part in the memorable extravaganza "Top o' the World." Both for her dancing and her delicate beauty she won the commendation of both critics and public and was the hit of the production during its long and successful run. She also created the name part in Henry Savage's production of "Little Boy Blue," to which her slight figure and charming personality readily adapted her. Then followed a season in London and a return to her native land to play in "Business Before Pleasure," and "The Heart of a Child" in which she created the leading role. It was natural that the picture producers should select such a promising young woman and shortly after Miss Clifford made her screen debut, co-starring with Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By," and several other important productions of like importance.

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A suit for $100,000 damages for alleged assault and battery, in which the names of half a dozen senators and members of the cabinet are mentioned, has been filed by Mrs. Alma C. Smythe against Leighton Taylor, secretary to the late Senator Boies Penrose and former clerk of the senate finance committee.

Mrs. Smythe declares that last May she went to the finance committee room to see Senator Penrose. There Mr. Taylor, "without any justifiable, reasonable or probable cause whatever, rudely, unlawfully and with much force and violence, grabbed hold of, hugged and kissed your plaintiff without her consent and over her resistance," according to the allegations in the complaint.

"She kept bothering us for a long time, and finally I put her out of the office, after the senator had declined to receive her."

Mrs. Smythe, who is thirty, red haired and attractive, says she had been promised a motion picture concession for the Argentine Exposition. She says that at the Commodore Hotel in New York she met a Captain Hugh Fitzpatrick, "a friend of Senator Penrose," who offered to speak to the senator about using Mrs. Smythe as a campaign worker in the Harding campaign. The job, however, was not forthcoming, so on the advice of Lieut. Gov. Wood of New York she came to Washington to see Mr. Penrose.

When she went to the senator's office, she alleges, Mr. Taylor treated her as before described.

DYE STOCKINGS OR SWEATER IN DIAMOND DYES

"Diamond Dyes" add years of wear to worn faded skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, hangings, draperies, everything. Every package contains directions so simple any woman can put new, rich fadeless colors into her worn garments or draperies even if she has never dyed before. Just buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then your material will come out right, because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to streak, spot, fade, or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen; cotton or mixed goods. —Adv.

ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, etc.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say: CURED and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling over half a million cases of eczema and devoting over 20 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured; all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. Don't be discouraged but write me TODAY and I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged just give me one chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

'WILD' WOMAN WAS TAMED BY COUNTRY YOUTH

It is not often that motion picture fans are given the opportunity to see the latest and most stylish costumes presented by one of the most attractive artists of the screen in a story vibrant with romance and adventure, but that is what Mae Murray's latest picture, "Peacock Alley," is. It will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Olympic theater.

In this Metro release for Tiffany Productions, Inc., presented by Robert Z. Leonard, Miss Murray portrays the part of a Parisian dancer, who, as the darling of the famous city of pleasure, is feted and adored for her daring and artistic creations. She falls in love with a youthful American, a small town boy, and goes back to his home only to find that the people of the little village are scandalized at his French wife. The rude awakening among the bright lights of Broadway gives this story a turn which makes it one of the most dramatic offerings of the screen.

"Peacock Alley" is typically a Mae Murray picture. Its gorgeous settings and the costly costumes of the star are outstanding features in an offering which at its special showing in New York won the unstinted praise of the critics as being the most beautiful and gorgeous production of the screen.

For scientific treatment of chronic, nervous and special diseases of both sexes, catarrh of all mucous membrane, stomach, liver, kidney complaints, blood and skin diseases. Hemorrhoids and prostatis complications treated without the knife, by a safe and humane system of scientific treatment.

If you are sick of experimenting, sick of failures, sick of being sick, come to me. I invite sick people who contemplate taking treatment to come. Special attention given in the combination of curative powers, modern electricity, vibrations, etc., with the scientific administration of selected Specific Medicines. I endeavor to do everything to promote the welfare of my patients.

IF YOU NEED A SPECIALIST WHY NOT THE BEST?

Are you a nervous wreck? Are you worn out and broken down? Are you suffering from vicious Blood and Skin Diseases, that destroy bone tissue, and disfigure for life? Backaches and kidneys give you all-gone feeling? Whether these conditions were caused by early excesses, or contracted by inoculation, it does not matter, for they will all respond to my treatment. Consult Dr. Schultz, the Reliable Specialist, who is well equipped by long experience that enables him to offer his service on a basis that no other can; his charges are lower for cures than the average physician generally charges for failure.

Those who have wasted time and money, and failed to get rid of their ailments, are especially invited to consult FREE. I am giving the benefit of over 30 years' honorable experience; some of my cures are truly wonderful, yet I do not work magic: I do not make the old younger, nor the blind see; I simply apply the knowledge my years of honorable experience have given me, and I do this honestly and intelligently.

How I Made My Brother the Terror of the Bantams

Vera Smith Says "Midget" Will Win the World's Championship Within a Year, and Tells Her Rules of Training.

"I Do Not Hesitate to Put on the Gloves to Give Him a Warming Up."

Miss Vera Smith, Who Has Made Her Brother, Midget Smith, the Closest Contender for the World's Championship.

MIDGET" (William J.) Smith is on the road to the bantam championship. Sports writers in all parts of the country have predicted it. When Johnny Buff returns to the ring after his European jaunt, the "Midget" is one of the men whom he must whip in order to retain his title.

The boxing world was astonished when, beginning a year ago, this stocky lad rose suddenly from a second-rate preliminary fighter to the most formidable of the title hunters. There was much discussion. When inquiry was made and it was found that a woman had put the punch in the Midget's good right arm, the wonderment became greater.

So the spotlight turned on the woman and discovered her as the Midget's 24-year-old sister, Vera. Not only, the public learned, does she train him. She takes up her position in his corner of the ring and watches him give and take punishment with the critical eye of a Jim Corbett or a Kid McCoy.

Big Sister Vera towers over the Midget. He weighs 118. She tips the beam at 132. It is a case of "big sister" and "kid brother." So the neighborhood of their home in East One Hundred and Fifty-third street, New York City, knows them.

The Midget, when first in the ring, amounted to little. He could take an awful beating. Many a night when he was the loser the crowd of sports sheered his gameness. But he just couldn't seem to put over the wallop.

At this point sister Vera stepped in. "I'll train you," said she. "Then, watch out!"

The first thing she did was to knock pies off his menu. Then, to toughen him up, she put the gloves on with him every day and lambasted him with all the heft behind 132 pounds of solid, healthy womanhood. If this training occurred in public someone would have mistaken it for a mother administering severe punishment to her son. For she is so much bigger than he that the mistake would be excusable.

"I Want That Chicken," Says Midget. "Nothing Doing! It's Fried," Says Sister. Thus She Guards His Diet.

It really did look like action for the A. S. P. C. C. But it certainly did Midget a world of good. He got so used to stopping right jabs with his jaw that they made no more impression than a putty blower against an elephant's hide.

But just as he was ready to become a sure enough contender for the bantamweight championship that world-old fighter, War, stepped in.

"Aw, you won't do," said the recruiting sergeant, as the Midget stood, just 5 feet and ½ an inch above the ground waiting for the O. K. on his application for army service.

But the Midget wouldn't take the "no" of even a dozen sergeants. So he wrote to the secretary of war and Mr. Baker gave him special permission for joining. The Midget got into the 33d infantry and was detailed for duty at Panama. Having no Germans to fight with he picked out some of his own mates and proceeded to put them to sleep with the kick his big sister had packed into his punch. He caused such a furore at the canal that Gunner Hammer, bantam-weight champion of the zone, challenged him. The fight went the full 15 rounds. The Midget won on a decision.

When he returned from the war his sister again took him in hand. She proceeded to put him through a rigorous regimen that soon proved its value in the result of his fights. Fighter after fighter went down before him and last December he finally secured a match with Johnny Buff. In the third round something snapped in the Midget's right hand. But he went right on and finished the fight and Buff, who won the close decision, did not know until days afterward that the man he had conquered had broken his dangerous right hand on the Buff head.

Midget is a pal of Jack Dempsey. When they are together they look like the unabridged and the pocket edition. Once in a while they put on the gloves to amuse their friends. But the little Midget one day jumped up and clouted the mighty man of world championship on the nose in such a smart manner that Dempsey forgot himself and failed to pull a punch. So the Midget went out. When he was fanned to, he laughed at the alarmed Dempsey and said that accidents will happen in the best of boxing exhibitions.

The Midget has made $50,000 in a little over a year. Sister Vera says it has been safely invested. His earnings take care of that little family up on the sky end of the apartment house. For Midget is the head of the family. Fact is, he's the only man in it. Mother and Vera and Marguerite, 16, and Frances, 13, comprise its human members. But there's the parrot, Polly, who also eats, and a little fox terrier, who polishes platters, and the cutest little nursing puppy you ever saw.

By Vera Smith

Trainer of Midget Smith, Her Prize-Fighting Brother.

TRAINING a prize fighter is like preparing chopped meat cakes. If you want to enjoy meat cakes, lean, tasty cakes, you've got to put lean, tasty meat into the chopper. If you put in odd ends and fat, odd ends and fat will come out. But if you put clean, lean meat into the chopper, the cakes will be of the best.

It's just the same with a prize fighter. In fact, the simile might be employed to cover all of life. Life is a chopper and one gets out just what one puts in. And that is the rule I have followed with my brother, the Midget, who, I believe, will be the champion bantam fighter before 1922 is finished.

Midget used to put lots of pies into his stomach. And when he got into the ring he was pie for his opponents. The pie seemed to weigh down his feet, or something. So the first thing I did was to banish the pie man.

Of course, I only use the pie as one example of the conditions I was up against. Midget had got into his head the idea that the only things necessary to win a fight are willingness to fight and fearlessness. The history of the prize ring disproves these beliefs, yet both are attributes of the successful fighter.

From as far back as I can remember the Midget he was always scrapping with me. I think I can truthfully take the credit for being the first one to arouse in him the fighting instinct. It was fun to box with him and it was more fun when he got mad and sailed into me and I was thereby permitted to land on him. It sort of gave me an idea of how I could take care of myself should occasion ever arise. Ask him if I am not good at it. I still do not hesitate to put on the gloves to give him a warming up.

Well, when he began to sink into the role of human punching bag at local clubs I began to get a bit disgusted with his trainer. That was before he enlisted in the army. So I took hold of him and laid down the law. I told him if he didn't obey me and do what I said I would give him a good beating up. He knew I meant it.

In six months I had him as hard as nails and as agile as a panther. Then he went into the army. But what I had done for him was quickly shown at the Panama Canal, where he cleaned up everything that ran across his path.

When he returned to civil life it was quite difficult at first to get him a good fight. The fight managers played all sorts of tricks on him. He went to the garden in a preliminary one night to fight a Canadian bantam-weight named Dick Atkins from Toronto. Atkins was supposed to weigh not more than 118. He weighed 124. And he was built like the obelisk at Central Park. But, as freckled Bob Fitzsimmons used to say, "the 'igher they are the 'arder they fall." And he did fall hard. Three times in the first, three times in the second, and out!

This was one of the victories that began to attract attention. Then he started to wade right through them all and to make real money. But he never has departed from my regimen. He lives up to it, absolutely, and if he didn't, well—(she made a significant gesture with her clenched fist).

I do not feel that I am depriving my brother of any particular advantage when I tell just how I train him. For he has reached that stage now where it requires mere obedience to the rules I have laid down to put him on top. So, for the benefit of ambitious fighters, and also for the benefit of those who want a course of training to put them in good trim for any game or even for the world of business, I'll reveal my secrets.

Rising hour is 7 o'clock. "Outdoors, immediately, for an hour's stiff roadwork. Mix walking with running. Never sprint too much lest you strain yourself. Then a good rub-down.

Breakfast at 8 o'clock. Cereals and lamb chops. No milk with meat, ever. Once in a while, on a very cold morning, coffee. A little never hurts anyone. And do not forget the fruit. One caution. If grapefruit or orange is on the table it should be eaten an hour after the meal. Otherwise the acid in the fruit interferes with the digestion of the starchy food. Toast, too, made from stale bread, heavily buttered, should be included.

The morning should be spent in loafing. Reading the newspaper, a light novel. No physical action should detract from the effect of the before-breakfast exercise and the process of digestion.

The noon meal should be light. Plenty of green stuff. Lettuce and celery. Plenty of milk. No meat.

Two hours after dinner the gym should be the order. Snappy work at the punching bag, shadow boxing, then several rounds of good rough mixing. After that the rubdown and a slight nap.

At supper red meat should be the feature, broiled steak, roast beef, something with the real pep in it. Banish chicken and such stuff. That's good for ladies, not for fighters.

Bed at 9 o'clock, between blankets in cold weather, and not too many of them.

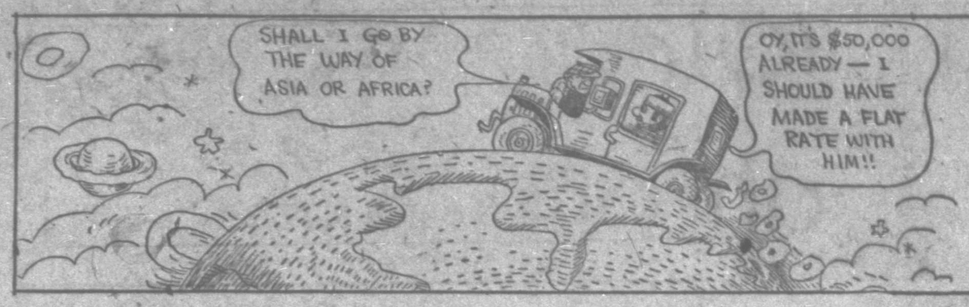

Vera Gives Health Hints

There are many little tricks of the trade, one might term them, to obtain the best that is in food. When I cook spinach or other greens for the Midget I strain whatever grit there is out of the juice and make him drink plentifully of it. The iron is boiled out into the water. That's why one should drink the water.

If he happens to have a fatty meat I always have a couple of chocolate candies to eat with it. The combination digests the fat. I see to it that he chews his potatoes more carefully than his meats. The potato begins the process of digestion in the mouth, carries it into the stomach and completes it in the intestines. The digestion of meat occurs wholly within the intestines. That's why a dog bolts meat and masticates potato or a cracker.

And, lately, the Midget never has anything fried to eat. Roast or broil, stew or bake, are the only proper ways of preparing food. Potatoes should always be baked in the winter and boiled when new. A fried potato will do more harm to a fighter than his opponent's right to the chin. Any kind of fried stuff clutters up the wheels, so to speak, just as too much oil in machinery collects dust and finally becomes a clog. Bear in mind always in eating and in exercising that the human body is a machine run by chemical power. Treat it accordingly, and it will be a powerful and efficient machine of the best endurance.

CHILE PREFERS AUTOMOBILES MADE IN U. S.

American-made cars are in the large majority throughout Chile, owing to their lower price and more durable qualities as compared with European makes, according to Vice Consul E. H. Livingston of Valparaiso.

The market for automobiles and accessories is usually good, but at the present time very few cars are being sold or imported, and but slight improvement can be expected until there is a revival in the nitrate industry, is the opinion of the vice consul.

In Chile the best market is for light and medium weight cars, as the roads are very rough and practically impassable for anything but strong light cars with good road clearance, except in the larger cities. Of the comparatively few European cars in the country, most of them are expensive passenger cars, although there are a number of British 2 1-2-ton trucks and a scattering of French and Italian cars of various grades.

Prices of European-made cars are considerably higher than those for similar American makes, but no reliable statistics are available by which to make exact comparisons. The fact that the American car has obtained a long lead over other cars here in an open market is, in itself, sufficient tribute to its merit as regards price, durability and design. Now that production in Europe is becoming more normal, the supremacy of the American car in this field will be strongly contested.

Sales Factors.

For the American car to maintain this ascendancy in the market it will be necessary for the manufacturers to grant more liberal agency contracts than has hitherto been the practice in the United States. The Chilean agent can not be made to see any advantage in signing a contract binding him to take a certain quota of cars monthly provided the manufacturer can make shipments. From the agent's point of view, it is a rather one-sided contract, for he must receive the cars if the manufacturer can make delivery, but if the manufacturer can not make delivery when the cars are needed, then the agent can not get the cars to fill his orders, which damages his reputation.

There is no seasonal fluctuation in the market in Chile, as in the United States, where spring months bring an increased demand for automobiles. Over half of Chile has no spring to speak of, summer coming with a hardly noticeable change in climatic conditions. Accordingly, the spring demand for automobiles is not much different from any other season of the year.

Electric Service Station and Its Fifteen Lines

One by one the Electric Service Station has added to the various lines for which they are representatives, until now they occupy the unique position of being direct factory representatives of 15 various electrical and automotive lines. L. M. Forcier, the genial manager of this business, claims that he has as fine a family now as can be gotten together, and goes further in stating that he is proud to assume the role of "father" to each one of them.

UNDER THE PALMS AT MIAMI FILM DIRECTOR CHATS

Will Hays, at right, and Thomas R. Shipp.

It might be more interesting than "what the wild waves are saying" to know the "movie" plans which Will Hays, the new dictator of the motion picture world, talked over at Miami, Fla., with his friend and adviser, Thomas R. Shipp, of Washington, D. C. Mr. Hays and Mr. Shipp have just spent the week torether at Miami.

The lines now handled by the enterprising concern are the following: Westinghouse, Auto-Lite, Atwater Kent, Connecticut, Klaxon, North East, K. W. Magneta, Bijur, Delco, Remy, Dyneto, Columbia Battery, Bosch Magneto and Gabriel Snubbers. These lines are handlel on a direct factory contract which permits the Electric Service Station to adjust all matters at this end of the line without the necessity of taking the matter up with the factory. Under these contracts which the local concern holds with the manufacturers, free service is given on all lines within 90 days or 3,000 miles.

A free inspection service is also maintained by the Electric Service Station. All motorists are cordially invited to avail themselves of this service without cost or obligation. After the inspection an accurate report of what is needed on the car and the approximate cost of placing it in perfect order will be furnished the motorist, who will then decide as to the carrying out of the suggestions. All work is done under a strict guarantee of satisfaction.

J. O. Wheat's Cole Roadster And Winton

Chenault & W[illegible] to glistening radiance a late model Cole roadster, and a Winton four-passenger sport sedan, both splendid types of passenger cars, with which to please the eyes of show spectators, J. O. Wheat isn't worried about business in 1922. Listen to him:

"Everything favors a big year in the automobile industry. Sales were light last year, and many people held on to their old cars and ran them to the limit. But toward the close of the year 1921 I had many inquiries regarding the 1922 models, and in the next six months I anticipate many sales. In fact, I'll be mightily disappointed if we don't break records this season. When you help the farmer you help every line of business life, and just you watch things hum after this good old snow has melted into the soil and made it productive."

John Maupin Exhibits His New Battery

The Wichita Falls Battery company is pinning it's faith on the new Willard-all-rubber battery, according to John Maupin:

"That is our only exhibit," Maupin told The Record-News representative, "and it is a good one. We are specializing on this new and improved type of Willard battery that was put on the market only a few months ago. It has an all-rubber case that makes it practically indestructible, as far as it is possible to say that about any battery. We will have a man on the job to explain the workings of the battery, and to explain also how to care for the battery so as to obtain from it the maximum of service. Business has been getting better every day. Give us one good rousing rain, and it will look like old times again."

L. O. Brown Has a Model Pace-Maker

L. O. Brown, of the Victory Motor company, springs a surprise at the show in the form of a six-passenger Oldsmobile described as a Model 46 "Pacemaker," which has never before been shown in this city and on which Brown is promising delivery in ten days:

"It is an eight-cylinder car, a long, slender, graceful model of the speedster type, yet with ample room and seating capacity for six persons. This is the type of body that so many of our customers and friends have been waiting for a long time. It has many advantages that must be seen to be appreciated.

"Of course, we are showing a Packard also—a single-six coupe of the standard 1922 model. It is a quality product down to the smallest detail, and the economy of the Packard single-six is the economy that only fine quality can give."

U. S. PRINCESS IS HAPPILY MARRIED

Princess Margaret Boncompagni, who was Miss Margaret Draper, daughter of the late Sen. Draper, has sailed from New York for a winter cruise in the West Indies. She is the wife of Prince Andre Boncompagni of Italy and their marriage has proved very happy. They have known each other since childhood, Sen. Draper being at one time U. S. ambassador to Italy.

WHAT PUBLIC WILL EXPECT THIS YEAR IS TOLD BY SALES MANAGER STUDEBAKER CAR

By H. B. HARPER
Sales Manager the Studebaker Corporation

While I believe this is going to prove one of the greatest years in the history of the automobile industry, I feel just as certain that the public will be more discriminating in its choice of cars than ever before, will weigh values more carefully, and, in general, will be guided by the point of view that is always attributed to the shrewd purchaser.

That being the case, it is thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of this discussion to go into the factors that determine automobile value. What, then, must a car possess to answer the requirements of the owner in 1922?

Style is, of course, an important consideration. Body lines must be attractive and distinctive, with dignity rather than freakishness as their dominant note. We have recognized this fact in our new models by adding still greater beauty to body designs which were already noted for their striking appearance. These new bodies are entirely the creation of our own body designers and built complete in our own plants at South Bend.

Along with beauty, I would name comfort. My conception of comfort is something considerably more than is expressed in terms of deep, soft upholstery, although, of course, these are important and no car can be comfortable without it. But roominess for driver and passengers is just as important, and we can not overlook such mechanical features as long, resilient springs, even distribution of car weight, easy gear shifting, steering and clutch operating, and the convenient placing of levers and control instruments. Our engineers have given special consideration to all these features, for all of them contribute to true comfort, mental as well as physical.

Right Kind of Power

The next item I would mention is power. It must be more than ample for all requirements so that frequent gear shifting will not be necessary. It must have that quality known as flexibility, enabling the car to throttle down to a snail's pace in crowded traffic and pick up instantly when an opening permits, as well as to negotiate hills "in high." It must be quiet power, too, for the idea of a car's motor being powerful in proportion to the amount of noise it made no longer holds good. And finally, it must be economical power. It was to secure all these essential qualities that we use the six-cylinder type of motor exclusively, designed by our own engineers and built in our own great plants. It has been well said that the motor is the heart of a car and that no make of car can hope to win public approval without having an unusually good motor. Studebaker engineers design our motors for use only in Studebaker cars, to work in perfect harmony with other Studebaker units of construction and build each motor complete in our own factories—just to make sure it will be exactly according to our specifications. That we have attained the position of being the world's largest manufacturers of six-cylinder cars is the best tribute I know of that can be paid to the motor design we use.

As with the motor, so throughout the car. There must be mechanical excellence. You can't buy a conglomeration of parts, from Tom, Dick and Harry, with plants miles apart, and expect to get a dependable piece of machinery after they are all put together. Each unit must be designed and manufactured with long life as the determining factor, which means that each part must not only serve the purpose for which it is intended, but must also work in complete harmony with every other unit in the car. That is why we build our cars complete in our own factories, by one organization and under one general supervision. And only in that way can the maximum efficiency of the car be secured. It is a source of pride with us that wherever and whenever our cars have been mentioned—and that has been with great frequency—their performance has been highly praised, due not only to their correct design, but also to the fact that in their manufacture we have an iron-clad purchasing policy which permits of only the highest quality of materials that money can buy, including steels, leather, upholstery, tires and accessories.

With a car possessing all of the foregoing attributes, the factor of the car's price enters into the reckoning. There is a true saying, "It's what you get for your money that counts," and that consideration will be more important this year than usual. The Studebaker corporation has reached its present commanding place in the industry upon the basis of the value of its cars represented—high quality at low prices—and we are carrying this same policy even further this year. For instance, our models this year offer more dollars of automobile than they did last year, for they are more complete and embody further refinements in design, besides even more attractive in body lines.

Now we come to the final, but by no means the least, consideration: the standing of the manufacturer. What of the manufacturer's experience, stability, organization and resources? I believe motor car buyers will give more thought to these points this year than ever before. As a matter of fact, with each succeeding year in the history of the industry, the standing of the manufacturer has assumed constantly increasing importance, because more and more owners have had experience with "orphan" cars, and are firmly convinced of the advantage of buying the product of a manufacturer who has been in business a long time and will remain in business. We of Studebaker consider our seventy-year-old experience and reputation as the most highly prized of all our assets.

NEW SERIES OF CHALMERS SIX IS INNOVATION

Car Is Declared to Bring to Reality All That Motorists Have Hoped for in Engine Excellence.

The new series Chalmers Six, now shown for the first time at the automobile show, is the first product of the new Chalmers organization, and, according to S. Bemrod, local Chalmers dealer, the car embodies a greater advance than has ever before been registered in the highly developd six cylinder type.

"This car," states Mr. Bemrod, "brings into reality all that motorists have hoped for in the automobile engine. It emphasizes by further improvement the remarkable and deservedly famous qualities of six cylinder construction. Always quiet and sure, practically free from vibration, with a constant and instantly responsive flow of power, and six cylinder engine is well deserving of the great favor it has gained to date with automobile enthusiasts. But the new series Chalmers Six so intensified these splendid features of its type that automobilists are bound to set up new standards for motor car performance. Chalmers' lightning pick-up removes the strain of driving in crowded traffic, and its great surplus of power is more than ample to meet any emergency or task to which it is set. Carburetion is brought to perfection and the utmost in power is taken from every drop of fuel.

"For more than a year the Chalmers plant and resources have been devoted to the creation of this motor and the results achieved speak eloquently of the time and energy expended.

"But not alone has mechanical advancement marked the activity of Chalmers in the past month; a beautiful body, complete and elaborate in equipment, is in keeping with the fine motor.

"The car hugs the ground but its high hood and sides give a massive cruiser-like grace. The low, well-tailored top, and the massive one-piece windshield develop a long, rakish appearance.

"An entirely new design in fender construction lends distinction. The curves are sweeping and graceful, and the crown is beautifully modeled. This fender is also rigid and sturdy, heavy enough to withstand the bumps to which it is too often subjected.

"Steel disc wheels, which are regular equipment, fit in well with the general design and add their full share to beauty, safety, and convenience. A spare wheel, furnished with the car, is carried on a heavy specially designed wheel-carrier in the rear.

A GOOD HAND TO DRAW TO--THREE KINGS

These three kings of the billiard world were photographed together recently in San Diego, Cal., when Roger Conti, French balkline champion, and Young Jake Schaefer, world's champion, played an exhibition match in the billiard parlors conducted there by Ora Morningstar. Ora has held a world title three times. Conti is giving Schaefer real opposition on the tour.

PROMISE MADE FOR MAXWELLS WAS FULFILLED

New Series Is Fulfillment of Pledge Made to Produce Truly Wonderful Car at Moderate Price.

"Many visitors who have come, seen and been conquered by the New Series good Maxwell," said S. Bemrod, local Maxwell dealer, "have marvelled that this can can offer so much genuine automobile value for so little money.

"But those who remembered the promise made more than a year ago when the new and powerful organization took control of Maxwell knew what to expect. They knew that a truly beautiful car would be the result, a fine car that could be sold at a very moderate price; they expected the easy riding qualities that are present in this New Series good Maxwell, the refinement of detail and the perfection of mechanism.

"The pledged word of the organization to produce such a car as this served as the basis for each careful step in its designing and building, according to L. C. Freeman, executive engineer of the Maxwell Motor corporation. The power plant, of proven durability and efficiency, was given the most careful thought. Parts which need the most attention were made very accessible; parts needing protection from weather and road shocks were so positioned as to assure such protection. The result is a "clean" engine, endowed with all the power and durability that has long characterized the good Maxwell along with refinements which mean a highly perfected mechanism.

"In body design the promise made more than a year ago has been exceeded. The New Series Good Maxwell stands as the first small car to be built on large-car lines. This marks not only a new development but a new thought in automobile design. Big-car comfort was achieved through the use of longer springs and stronger frame. A lower car, too, has added to beauty as well as comfort.

"The cushions and back rests were given much thought and their great riding comfort is due to the use of specially designed cushion springs which, while old in type, are paired in a new combination calculated to make cushions and rests well adapted for use by any and all passengers—big, heavy men or smaller, lighter women alike.

"Roominess, the thing which means so much to passengers' comfort, especially when touring, was the next feature to be considered in the fulfillment of the pledge. The New Series good Maxwell is well endowed with room. But it has been secured not by furnishing a needlessly large body; rather, through genuine economy of space. Every bit of available space has been used to the very best advantage.

"In no instance can it be said that freakish design has played a part in common sense applied in a practical way.

"This car amply complies with the pledge made by the organization, and its fulfillment marks a great new step in the development of the automobile. The newest models are now on display at the automobile show.

HADLEY SEES ROLE OF PARTY OVERTHROWN

Farmers Are Dissatisfied but if Conditions Continue to Improve the Danger May Be Averted.

NEW YORK, March 4.—There is a good possibility that in the next congressional election the Republican majority in congress may be overturned because of dissatisfaction among western farmers, said ex-Governor Herbert S. Hadley, Republican of Missouri, who is visiting New York for the first time since 1915, in an interview yesterday at the City club, where he is the guest of a relative, Wallace Thompson. If conditions continue to improve, however, Governor Hadley believes that this may be averted.

Governor Hadley's interests now are educational rather than political, but he has kept in touch with political conditions in the west, and thinks that they have in them the elements of an agrarian movement similar to the Populist movement of 1892. Since his health made his residence in Colorado necessary he has been lecturing in the law school of the University of Colorado and moving about the country talking with the grain and cattle raisers.

The dissatisfaction among farmers is great, he said, due partly to the low prices they have received for their products, and partly to the losses they have had as a result of their poor investments. The average farmer, when he makes some money, does not invest it in a bond, as the easterner does, said Governor Hadley, but instead, buys land at top prices, or plants twice as much acreage in the belief that he will make twice as much money the next year. The result is that he loses all, and sometimes more, than he makes, and this has forced him into a state of mind where he welcomes Henry Ford's plan for flat money, and has thought of a new party, an agrarian party, as the solution of his troubles.

May Come a Third Party

"There seems to me a very good possibility that a third party will be formed, unless conditions improve materially," said Governor Hadley. "I also feel that there is a definite possibility that the Republican majority in congress may be overturned. I would not speculate on it, however, because the recent increase in the price of wheat and livestock has relieved the strain on the farmer to some extent and he is feeling more hopeful. If that increase continues, if conditions improve still more, as I think they will, there is little fear that the Republican majority will not be maintained. The farmers do not trust the Democrats more, but they are showing the inevitable reaction toward the party in power, which must shoulder the blame for hard times."

Governor Hadley said that Henry Ford's flat money plan had fallen on receptive ears in the west, where the farmer feels that the bankers get too much from the sale of bonds, and believes that the government can issue money when it is needed. The declarations of Ford and Edison gave strength to this feeling, so much so that Governor Hadley believes it will be a factor in the next campaign, although probably not an issue.

Farmers and Ford

"The farmer to a large extent is firm in his belief that Henry Ford is a great genius in anything he undertakes," he said. "They know he is a successful manufacturer, they know that his railroad has showed a profit above that of other roads, they think that he can be just as successful in dealing with financial problems. Therefore they welcome his announcement about flat money. Edison they look upon as a man who has done more than any other man in harnessing one of the great forces of nature. They say that surely these two men should be as successful in dealing with economic problems as the average representative and senator."

The farmer also feels that through the issuance of money by the government to pay for public undertakings, the circulation of money would be increased, and there would be a better market for their crops, said Governor Hadley. It is for this same reason, partly, that they support the bonus plan, although they object to a sales tax. The farmer feels that if money is raised for the bonus it will come largely from the east, and by its distribution among the ex-service men in the west it will get quickly into circulation and improve conditions. For the same reason, they object to a sales tax.

Governor Hadley himself believes that the sales tax is the most sensible way to raise the money for a bonus, if it must be raised.

KING ALBERT'S CAR NOW DOES TAXI SERVICE

The king of the Belgians' automobile, in which King Albert toured the battle front during the war, is now doing duty as a motor hack at the railway station in Baltimore. It has a costly limousine body on a long wheel-base, and the interior, from the velvet covering on the floor to the dome in the roof, is finished in mahogany and oak inlaid. The seats are fashioned more like costly furniture than like the usual automobile seat, and are covered with heavy gray whipcord material. The royal colors that once decorated these coverings have been removed.

Directly in front of the front seat is a miniature chiffonier. It is equipped with a disappearing mirror and drawers which open to the touch of hidden springs. In these are receptacles for brushes and shaving materials.

The history of the limousine from the time it left the ownership of King Albert is rather vague. It is said Douglas Fairbanks bought the machine while in Europe and brought it to this country to use in making several pictures. It was sold several times afterward, and just recently came into possession of Gilbert H. Richards, of the Eutaw Motor Sales company, Baltimore.

Richards removed the massive brass headlights and running lights, which used acetylene, and replaced them with electric lights. He also removed the twin tires on the rear wheels. These are about the only changes that have been made. Traces of the royal yellow, in which it was once painted, can still be seen where the coach worker who painted it could not get his brush.

Gaines Bros. And Their Big Place

"Don't sit around and wonder where you can get the part for that car or truck that you have for repair," is the message of Sid and M. J. Gaines of the Gaines Motor Sales Company and Replacement Parts Depot. "We have the largest replacements parts depot in Texas and can save you from 20 to 50 per cent off of list," and the Gaines have their exhibit at the Third Annual Auto Show. They are proud of their place. They are proud of their investment of $50,000. They are proud that they are citizens of the city that faith built. They know that the city has a future as well as a past and the future filled with promise and building development. "Service today" is their motto. They have everything in the bolt line from 3-16 of an inch to an inch and furnish parts for passenger cars, trucks and tractors. It is their proud boast that they are operating the largest part replacement depot in Northwest Texas and are representing the largest manufacturers in the country dealing direct to the garage man. Their personal guarantee goes with every sale and prompt attention is given to all orders received by mail or wire or phone. Of course they are optimistic. They say that business is excellent, sales increasing, prospects hopeful and business conditions bright. They receive many orders for parts from New Mexico and Oklahoma and they predict that 1922 will be a very successful year for them. Gaines brothers are too busy to be pessimistic and they look forward to a time in the near future when Wichita Falls will boast of a population of 100,000, thousands of small farmers will cultivate the Wichita valley and the magical flow of impounded water will bring wealth and happiness to all the people here today and many thousands of newcomers to city and country.

Stringer Tells Whole World It's the Haynes

"We're exhibiting two Haynes cars," he said, "one a Model 47 speedster, the other a Model 55 roadster, and if it's permissible to gush a little I want to tell the world that speedster is a Jo-darby. It has one of the most powerful six-cylinder motors built, possesses a wheel base of 132 inches and with it all is a beautiful car—painted a standard green, long rakish lines, red wire wheels, individual steps and running boards; man, that car is a pipin!

"It's going to be a good year. Business conditions are what men make them, and I'm glad to see more men daily putting heart and life into their work. Business is coming back fast, and I find conditions improving steadily."

Scott Bower Talk Cadillac And Business

"Our booth contains a Model 61 Cadillac, five-passenger Sedan, fully equipped, the special equipment including a new type of trunk on the rear. Also we will exhibit a four-passenger phaeton, equipped down to the last minute, with extra casings, special Cadillac seat covers, the de luxe motor meter and the special monogram radiator cap. Every motorist knows the high standard of the Cadillac motors so it is hardly necessary to go into details over that.

"Business has been improving briskly since the first of the year, and I'm satisfied it will continue to improve."

TAKES PLACE OF SHACKLETON WITH POLAR EXPEDITION

Capt. Frank Wild.

Capt. Frank Wild, veteran of four expeditions into the antarctic regions, has taken over the leadership of the expedition headed by Sir Ernest Shackleton, who died recently a few months after the voyage was begun. Captain Wild had promised Sir Ernest before the trip began to assume the direction of the expedition in case of a mishap to the dead explorer.

Buick Special Six Is Shown For First Time

The sales force of the Dixon Motor company longed for the doors to open on the show. "Dick" has a new model, "Special Six 54," roadster type, on exhibition, and his salesmen are predicting a "clean-up" with this car.

"The Buick Special Six has never been shown in Wichita Falls before," R. V. Flora, of the retail sales department, explained, "and it's one of the neatest, most striking automobiles I've ever laid eyes on. It is finished in maroon, with red wire wheel, Houk type, equipment; wind wings; all nickel trimmings, and a special tailored khaki top. The car is built on a seven-passenger chassis, having a 124-inch wheel base. It was first shown at the New York automobile show, and this will be the first car of its type brought into Wichita Falls. We hope to be able to make deliveries around the first of April. This car will be shown in Booth No. 1 and all Buick owners and their families are invited to make the booth their headquarters during the show. We are showing another standard model Buick, choice of which will be made by Mr. Dixon later."

Fritz Has Marmon Sedan And Reo Coupe

"It is a beautiful car," Sharpe declared, "built in its entirety in the Marmon shops. It has the standard Marmon motor, which I needn't describe. If there is one feature deserving particular mention it centers around the remarkable visibility given to occupants of the car. The design of the wind shield, the large windows of the doors and the permanent side windows combine to give a view on all sides that is unusual in closed car construction.

"The Reo coupe is what its makers term the "business man's coupe," designed especially for doctors, lawyers, executives and salesmen. It is a combination of the best features of the coupe and the roadster.

"We sold two cars last week, while our list of prospects and our interviews make us most optimistic regarding the business outlook for this year."

"The Coach," Hudson and "New Essex"

The Lloyd Weaver Auto company is also among those that will have something new to put on the floor of the show room. It will be "The "Coach," a Hudson closed car making its debut before the Wichita Falls public:

"The Coach," explained C. F. Hall, office manager, "is worthy of the Super-Six chassis, and I doubt if a closed car on such a splendid chassis ever was offered before at such an attractive price. It has beauty and utility, and only the finest materials are used in its construction. The body sills are strong and sturdy, while numbered among many new features are door windows operated by new type crank-handle lifts, and doors that swing on four hinges and are equipped with devices to prevent rattles and squeaks.

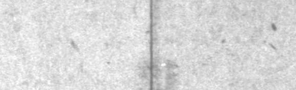

We also intend to exhibit the Essex Coach, a similar type, which is light, sturdy and compact; has deep cushioned seats, dash-controlled ventilator, sun visor, luggage and foot locker in rear, plate glass windows, radiator shutters, motor meter for efficient motor control, neutral gear lock and cord tires."

STUDEBAKER IS SELLING FAST IN CALIFORNIA

Sales of Car in That State Far Ahead of Any Other Six; Exceeded Only by Two "Four Cylinders."

The part played by the State of California in making 1921 a Studebaker year is shown in detailed figures of car sales just received here by Frank Keim, the Studebaker dealer.

The report, issued by Motor Registration News of California, shows that 8,240 Studebakers were sold in that state last year as compared with 1,128 by the next largest exclusive manufacturer of sixes. In fact, among all makes, Studebaker sales were the largest with the exception of the two lowest-priced makes of four-cylinder cars.

Equally noteworthy is the fact that Studebaker sales showed the biggest per cent of increase over 1920 of any make, a gain, to be exact, of 83 per cent. Sales of 8,240 Studebakers in 1921 compared with 4,499 in the previous year.

"In 1920 sales of Studebaker cars were 4 per cent of the total number of cars sold in California, whereas in 1921 they were 8 per cent," said Mr. Keim. "Eliminating Ford and Chevrolet, Studebaker sold 16.3 per cent of the total number of new cars registered in California in 1921.

"Not only did Studebaker become established as the largest builder of six-cylinder cars in 1921 and show the greatest worldwide percentage of gain of any automobile manufacturer over 1920, but the records so far available this year are far in excess of the same period last year, when Studebaker sales and production reached their high point.

"For instance, reports for January show that 392 new Studebaker cars were sold at retail in New York city, as compared with 117 in January, 1921, an increase of 275 cars or 235 per cent. In Detroit retail sales were two and one-half as great as in January, 1921. Kansas City, Cleveland, Buffalo, Chicago and other points throughout the country also show big increases. The best comment I can make on these figures is that they speak for themselves."

Faith Abideth In the Breast Of Mr. Nolen

C. W. Nolen of the Nolen-Stringer company, is secretary of the association as well as one of the makers of the Third Annual show. He is a youngster. He saw service in France If he has a fad beyond extolling the virtues of the cars he sells it is the modern highway and he keeps his eyes as well as his cars open all the time. Also he has answers ready for the interviewer: "Business much improved; 1922 will be a good year in the automobile industry. There are now in use in this country 10 million motor cars. Replacement demand alone will require 1,500,000 this year. Present prices have been reduced about 25 per cent and they are all based on quantity business. this quantity business is not secure, prices must advance.

"Yes, the industry was hit pretty hard the last year, but it suffered less than the other two large industries—steel and packing. It stood a shrinkage of 35 per cent less than the steel industry and 10 per cent less than packing. Yes, with the new low prices the cars are vastly improved. There are lots of salesmen at the Automotive Dealers' Third Annual show. They find it no trouble to answer questions.

"There are 10,000 cars and trucks, perhaps 10,500, in Wichita Falls and Wichita county. Texas ranks sixth in the list of states in the number of individual owners of cars. Forty per cent of the cars made in America are taken by farmers. Wherever there are good road advocates, men who are willing to tax themselves for modern highways, in their ranks you will find owners of pleasure cars and trucks. The pleasure car is a necessity; the truck is a necessity; the tractor is a necessity. We are just in the beginning of the auto or motor age.

"Wise business men, who are not engaged in the automobile industry, tell me that conditions are most encouraging and that the year 1922 will show a good account of itself on the last day of December of the year. They are not frightened. They are not pessimistic. Take the trade papers and the magazines. There is an optimistic tone uppermost in their trend of thought and their contents. This is really a very fine show, a credit to Wichita Falls and the men who represent the industry here. We are having glorious weather after the rain and the snow. The sun is shining and the stars are in the heavens. It is worth the while of all the people who are interested in a vast industry to swell the attendance."

"Big Business" Says Dodson, "And Big Show"

Every real show has a manager, regardless of whether it is a political show, a musical comedy show, a movie show, a screen show or a show on the speaking stage. Herman A. Dodson is manager of the Third Annual Automobile show given under the auspices of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers' association. Herman is of the Southern Tire company and he doesn't peer through smoked glasses. "It's a beautiful show," he said, "It's up to expectations. The automobile industry is of recent origin, but it is getting there just the same. All the people of Wichita Falls and surrounding towns and country should come to the city that faith built and see what we are doing in the auto world.

"Business outlook? Most encouraging. More sales in February, 1922, than in February, 1921, and the cost was 60 per cent higher in 1921. My reports as well as my sales are very unflattering to pessimists. I look for a big volume of business during the year. There is a possibility of more than 10 million dollars being spent in this city and county for tires and supplies this year. This is a big figure, but I can take my pencil and demonstrate to any doubting Thomas that my estimate is correct.

"Now I have a large acquaintance in the oil fields and I know how the oil men are talking and how they feel about business this year. Of course, this depends on the supply of water. If there is water in abundance, sales are going to boom. At Dallas last week I talked to all the leading tire men and they predicted a banner year in the tire business—best they have ever had.

"This is the prevailing opinion the country over. Let the Record News urge upon the people to attend our big show. It is worth while. It is an educator. It tells all about 'who is who' and 'what is what.' Automobile dealers are progressive. They are community builders. They get in behind all building enterprises. They are of everything, for anything, that will push on development and building in city or country. They are champion road builders. They are peptomists and not pessimists. They extend a hearty welcome to all the people to visit their show."

CHICAGO SOCIETY LEADER ELOPES WITH WAR VET

Mrs. Frank B. Watling.

Chicago society was surprised to learn recently of the secret marriage of Mrs. Mayme Wood Thorne, widow of Raymond C. Thorne, to Frank B. Watling, Marine war hero. Her second marriage following an elopement recalled the fact that her first marriage followed an elopement also. Thorne was a student at Dartmouth and she was the daughter of a foreman on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

An Old Boy, Ever Young, Is Randle

C. C. Randle, head of the Randle Auto Supply company, is one of the "old boys" who stays perennially young. Questioned regarding business conditions, he spoke up like the owner of a producing oil well:

"Business in February was twice as good as January, and it's getting better every day. As soon as all this ice and snow thaws, we're going to do a land office business in March. Why, say, I made up a batch of Faith batteries to exhibit in this automobile show, and danged if I didn't sell every one of 'em! Now I've got to make up another show batch, and I've absolutely stopped selling 'em until the show is over. I surely expect to make a killing with the 'Faith battery manufactured in the city that faith built.' I've also taken on a line of Seiberling cord tires, and will have them on exhibition. They should make a big hit here through Seiberling's reputation established as general manager of the Goodyear company through the best years of that organization."

Two Hupmobiles Are Exhibited By Eck and Von

Paul Von Allmen the silver-throated songbird of the firm of Eckman & Von Allmen, Hupmobile distributors, has the world stopped, however, when it comes to business optimism.

"I expect business will be so good this year," Paul declared, "that I won't be able to play baseball again on the University club team. We delivered one car last week, and another on Monday of this week. We have a bunch of live prospects lined up and are all set for a good year.

"We have two Hupmobiles in the show, a roadster and a touring car. The Hupp among other things, has gone back to the famous old solid steel running board, while the new models also have the windshield wiper, heavier pressed steel fenders, plate glass windows in the back curtain, outside door handles, Timken bearings and non-skid cord casings—and you can toss in with that the regular long stroke, long-lived Hupp motor; yes, and the Marshall's spring upholstery, featured on the highest priced cars."

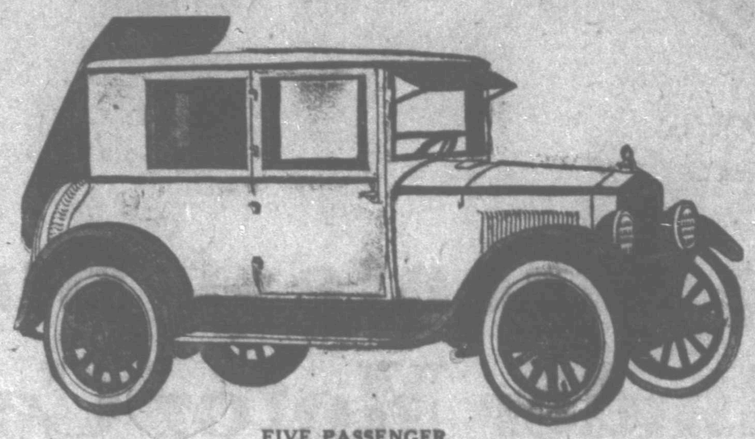

LET THE BUYER BEWARE!

Mr. Hippo—Correct; I only rode in it two days.

Studebaker Motor Cars

The Greatest Builders of Six Cylinder Motor Cars in the World

The universal popularity of Studebaker Cars is attested by the fact that the corporation enjoyed the biggest business in its history in 1921. The sale of Studebaker Cars exceeded 1920 production by 29%, notwithstanding the fact that 1921 was a year of severe financial and decreased production.

Studebaker today is the world's largest producer of six-cylinder motor cars.

The only possible explanation of the popularity of the Studebaker lies in their Quality, Durability and Dependable Performance in users' hands. Substantially better motor car values cannot be obtained at any price.

See the new models, ride in them, then decide if the Studebaker isn't the car that fills your own individual needs.

More Than 10,500,000 Motor Cars Registered in United States in 1921

Statistics compiled by the B. F. Goodrich company give a total of 10,524,395 cars and trucks registered in the country during 1921. This is an increase of 1,229,023, or 13 per cent over 1920, when there were 9,295,372 motor vehicles registered.

The gain made during the past year warrants the consideration of the automotive pessimist. The automobile business has gone through its supremest test. It has emerged victorious, and there is no longer any room for pessimism. Authorities concede that over one-third of the cars running are owned by farmers. Despite the fact that six large agricultural states show a decrease over the previous year, the industry has forged ahead. It is remarkable that so few states show a decrease. Wheat and corn in 1921 sold at extremely low prices, frequently far below the actual cost of production. This of itself would tend to restrict the use of automobiles by farmers, yet in such states as Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, where the agricultural depression was the most acute, the number of cars has increased. Motor vehicles are becoming as essential as farm implements.

New York again leads the field with 816,010 cars and trucks, an increase of 23,836, the largest made in any state over the previous year. Ohio is second, with 726,700, again of 108,700 over 1920. Pennsylvania clings to third place, with 689,589, while Illinois is close on its heels with 670,434.

Increase in West Virginia

The largest percentage gain was made by West Virginia, where an increase of 38.1 per cent is recorded over 1920. California and Florida reflect the popularity of their climate and roads with respective gains of 19.5 per cent and 24.8 per cent.

It is interesting to note that six states account for over one-third of the year's increase in registrations. Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania accomplish this with a combined gain of 573,347 cars. Any one of these states has more cars than the entire European continent. Their aggregate total of 3,781,849 is greater than the total registration of the country in 1916, and greater than the present world registrations excluding the United States.

There was one motor vehicle for every 10 people in the country in 1921, as compared with one for 11.8 in 1920. If this average were maintained throughout the world there would be 170,000,000 cars in use. The world registration today is approximately 12,500,000. California and Iowa lead in the number of cars as compared to population with one car for every 5.2 inhabitants, according to these figures. South Dakota has third place with an average of 5.3. Nebraska, the 1920 leader, dropped to fourth place with 5.4 people for each car. Alabama makes the poorest showing in this respect with 28 persons for each automobile. New York with the greatest number of cars has an average of 12.7 people for each one in use. If the leaders' per capita average could be maintained throughout the country we would now have 20,227,000 motor vehicles in use. The saturation point has hardly been reached.

Cars Giving Service

At the outset of 1921 various authorities agreed that at least 600,000 automobiles would be scrapped during the year. National automobile chamber of commerce and other production figures for the year compared with the increase in registrations show this total to be well under the 400,000 mark. Cars are delivering exceptional service. Instead of being discarded at the end of the estimated five-year period, they are delivering at least six years service. The total production of cars and trucks in 1921 was 1,575,686. Registrations increased 1,229,023. It is reasonable to believe that the difference between these two figures, or 346,663, represents the number of cars that were junked last year.

State registration for 1920 and 1921 are given below, together with the rank of each state last year and its percentage of gain or loss over 1920.

"Jim" Moulder's New Chandler Is Regular Beauty

When you begin discussing new models that have never been shown in Wichita Falls before, that's where you hit J. D. (Jim) Moulder, of the Wilhelm-Moulder Auto company, right in his weak spot. His company has a beautiful dark green five-passenger Chandler touring car as one of its auto show exhibits, and Jim raves every time he thinks of it:

"From the classy barrel type head lamps to the rugged spare tire assembly; from the snappy, distinctive aluminum steps to the graceful, hand-tailored top, that car is a lalla-cooler! It's long of line, deep sided and low swung; it has the looks and the power both.

"We did expect to exhibit also a brand new Cleveland, but were unable to get the latest model in on time. We have literature at the show, describing it, however. Business with us has been exceptionally good during the past two weeks. The Chandler factory writes us that during the first two months of this year they produced and shipped more cars than ever before in the company's history in the same period time."

Cadillac Day Is March 5th Everywhere

March 5 is a red letter day for all who have ever studied or heard about one of America's greatest pioneers, for that date is the 264th anniversary of Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac's birth. Descending from the ancient royalty of France, Cadillac at the age of 25 cast his lot with the new world, and during his years of constructive work in new France he was in turn an adventurer, explorer, founder of Detroit, Mich., commandant of Machinac, and governor of Louisiana. Commissioned a lieutenant in the French army at the age of 19, he was 25 years old when he emigrated to Arcadia—the district later made famous by the poem "Evangeline." Four years afterward at Quebec he married a French lady, a niece of Francois Guyon, one of the boldest of American French privateers. The next year he was granted a huge tract of land in what is now the state of Maine, as well as the island of Mount Desert, wither he moved at once. Louis XIV, king of France, gave Cadillac in 1689 the title of "Sieur de Mount Desert." It was in that year that Cadillac went to New York with a French fleet, and afterward spent several months in the French court, where he gained steadily in favor with the great king. At this time he rendered a detailed report of his explorations from the mouth of the St. Lawrence river to Virginia. Returning to his beloved America, Cadillac accepted the important position of Commandant of Machinac, and after many years of activity in Canada, in 1701 he founded Detroit, Mich., now the fourth largest city in America. It was five years later that the first great western emigration started from the Atlantic seaboard to Detroit. Cadillac stayed in that place only long enough to see it well established, and then swung west and south into the Mississippi valley. In 1710 he was appointed governor of Louisiana, the title carrying in those days entire authority over the Mississippi from its source to its mouth. It was in 1743 that he established his first rude hut, in the now well known city of Natchez. Grown old in the rigorous service of frontier life, honored and respected both in America and in France, he was recalled to his native country, and later became governor of Castelsarrasin, where he died and was buried in his own fortress. Cadillac established a famous crest in America, a shield surmounted by a crown with seven points, representing his various ancestors of royal blood. The markings on the shield stand or the fact that the bearers of the crest have as their ideals: "To attain prowess, purity, charity, virtue and plenty; to look to the wings of virtue and merit; and to be in readiness to undergo the business of the public weal." Among the many places and institutions which have been named in honor of Cadillac, is the Cadillac Motor Car company, the largest manufacturer of quality cars in the world, with the factory at Detroit now employing 7,000 men.

REPORT ON COST OF LIVING IS MADE BY FRANKLIN COMPANY

The industrial relations department of the Franklin Automobile company has just completed a study of the cost of living in Syracuse, as of Feb. 1. This report shows a net decrease of 3.7 per cent since the last report was taken on Nov. 1.

An analysis of the budget shows that living costs up to Nov. 1 had increased 63.09 per cent over the base year 1914, while the November study shows an increase of 68.67 per cent. The national industrial conference board in a study conducted up to Nov. 1 reported an increase of 63 percent in living costs over 1914. Their study, however, was conducted on a nation-wide basis.

Every item in the budget shows a decrease with the exception of shelter, which held constant. Clothing and sundries show a marked decrease, while food and fuel show a slight decrease. It is found that food has decreased 3.3 per cent since the study made in November. This decrease is attributed to a lessened cost in the prior of potatoes, dairy products and flour.

Nearly all the other items remained practically constant or show a slight decrease. The winter and mid-winter prices of clothing are considerably less than those of Nov. 1, and this resulted in a decrease of 10.4 per cent in price of clothing. Fuel showed a very slight decrease. This is accounted for by a drop of 5 cents per ton of coal.

Consultation with real estate men seems to show that there has been no change in cost of shelter. However, there are more flats available today for renting purposes than there have been in some time past and if this condition continues, there is no doubt that a decrease in the cost of shelter will take place in the very near future.

Lower Prices On All the 55 And 75 Models

The Haynes Automobile company, Kokomo, Ind., has announced lower prices for the new, improved Haynes 55 and 75 models, effective Jan. 1, 1922, as follows: Model 55, five-passenger touring car, $1,595; model 55, two-passenger roadster, $1,645; model 55, five passenger Sedan, $2,595; model 55, three-passenger coupelet, $2,295; model 75, seven-passenger touring car, $2,395; model 75, four-passenger tourister, $2,395; model 75, two-passenger Special speedster, $2,595; model 75, five-passenger brougham, $3,095; model 75, seven-passenger sedan, $3,395; model 75, seven-passenger suburban, $3,395. All Haynes 55 models are mounted on a 121-inch wheel base chassis, while all Haynes 75 models have a 132-inch wheel base. "Not only have we lowered our prices on all Haynes models," declares Alton G. Seiberling, vice president and general manager of the Haynes company, "but we have also added some very important improvements to our new models. These improvements, in reality, constitute a further lowering of our prices than the actual figures show. We did this because we wanted to give the motoring public in 1922 the biggest value in the automobile field. Noteworthy among the improvements on the 1922 Haynes cars are the moleskin-covered trunk and improved design trunk rack on the Haynes 75 touring car, tourister, sedan and suburban. Six nickle-plated ornamental protection bars placed at the back of the 75 touring car, sedan, and suburban, add to the appearance of these new cars. All of the new, improved Haynes 75 models, with the exception of the Special speedster, have the new fashionable three-quarter length running board. Two extra tire carriers, mounted on each side at the front, are included at the new low price as standard equipment. For those motorists who desire a highly economical, light weight, medium price, enclosed car, the Haynes Automobile company has produced the new Haynes 55 three-passenger coupelet. The coupelet has a single, 52-inch seat, allowing the three passengers to ride side by side. The interior is finished in hand-buffed leather and durable fabric. Individual steps and fenders lend distinction to its appearance. The Haynes 55 roadster which sells at $1,645 is exhibited to the public for the first time at the automobile show by Nolen-Stringer company, local Haynes dealers. All prices quoted are factory prices.

FIRST OLDSMOBILE IN SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTE

Old-fashioned autos of this model were purchased by Sir Thomas Lipton, the Queen of Italy and many other progressive notables of the time. Back in 1895 Ransome E. Olds and Frank Clark, both of Lansing, Michigan, labored on a new idea. The father of the former was a manufacturer of stationary gasoline engines, while the latter's parents operated a small carriage works. They combined their interests, but shortly afterwards Frank Clark, due to parental objections and the fact that the car did not immediately meet his expectations, withdrew. And then the Oldsmobile really got under way.

Two Franklins And Gold Watch In the Big Show

Business is so good with Carl Waelder of the Franklin Sales company, that it has brought him a new gold watch. Waelder received a letter yesterday asking for his initials to engrave on the case of a watch being sent to him as the "president's award" to the leader of the "Fourth Division, Southwestern Army," during a Franklin sales contest in November and December last. Business is still good, according to Waelder, and it looks better for the near future.

"We have two Franklins in the automobile show," he stated, "a sedan and a touring car. A few of the unique features of these cars are the case-hardened crank shaft, carburetor heater, new type hood, eight-clamp rear spring, bigger starter and new ignition. We are putting out a general invitation to the public to enjoy a 50 to 500-mile demonstration ride at any time, just to prove the car and not the man is the salesman."

James King - Proud of His Nash Models

The King & Weaver Auto company are showing two five-passenger Nash touring cars, one a four-cylinder, the other a six-cylinder model. Business is also good with this firm, according to James King, who yesterday stated that the company is preparing for a big year.

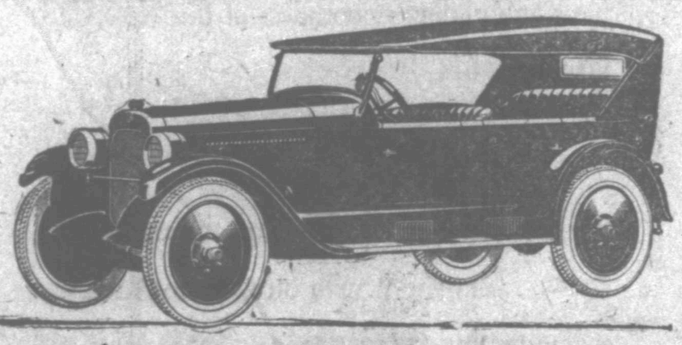

"Since the beginning of the year," he said, "we have had steadily increasing numbers of visitors to our showrooms; inquiries regarding the new models have come in thick and fast, and sales have picked up in proportion. I believe 1922 will be a banner year in the automobile industry. Everything points that way at this time."

FRITZ WINNER MARMON PRIZE AS SALESMAN

The many friends of D. L. Fritz, the local distributor for both the Marmon and Reo automobiles, are pleased to learn that Mr. Fritz won first prize in his division in the Marmon Salesmen's contest, recently staged by the Nordyke and Marmon company. Along with the honor of winning over a big field came the equally gratifying prize of two hundred and fifty dollars. The letter notifying Mr. Fritz of his victory follows:

Mr. D. L. Fritz,
Wichita Falls, Texas.
Dear Sir:—

The coupons in the Marmon Salesmen's contest have been checked and show that you are high man in the A. R. Heiskell division.

We want to congratulate you on the efforts you exerted in order to attain this place, for you were in competition with a field of real salesmen. To win against such a field is indeed worth while.

We feel sure that the aggressiveness showed by the whole sales organization during the contest is going to move Marmons this spring as they never moved before.

Again congratulating you on your excellent showing, we are, yours very truly,

NORDYKE & MARMON CO.,
(Signed) H. H. BROOKS,
Sales Manager.

Two Optimists Are Langford And Queisser

"I cannot understand for the life of me why people should be pessimistic as to the business outlook," said Capt. W. S. Langford of the Motor Supply company who handles the Ford car and tractor and all its accessories. Captain Langford, who donated the magnificent building free of charge for the use of exhibitors for the Third Annual show, was discussing conditions generally as well as here at home. "We sold more cars in the month of February, 1922, than we sold in February, 1921, and the slump had not been felt in this section of the country in February, 1921. All my reports indicate that 1922 will be a prosperous year for the goods we handle and this is a very conservative viewpoint. There has been an upward trend the country over for some months and daily our list of inquiries are on the increase. Positively it looks good to me. This show should be a sweeping success. All the new models of the different makes of cars will be displayed. All the modern inventions in accessories will be displayed. There is no reason why the attendance should not be large. Roads are in excellent condition after the rains and the snow which is rapidly melting and if fair weather continues the success of the undertaking is assured."

Frank Queisser, treasurer of the Wichita Falls Automotive association, and an indefatigable worker, is another member of the Motor Supply company who is very optimistic as to the success of the third annual show, the condition of business and the future outlook. Two models from the Ford work shops for 1922, the very latest, will be shown and Mr. Queisler is very proud of the big show room across the street, its electric lighting, its evergreen-decorated walls and the display of the flag that has for 146 years and will forever float over a free people and a united country. Speaking of business, he said, "Whenever a telephone is installed in a home that settles it. It is impossible for the inmates of the home to get along without one. The same may be said of a car. After a man has owned a car once he never gets away from the luxury, the necessity, the habit or the convenience. Of course, depression hit the country but it helped our business. A man who had been accustomed to a high priced car and needed another to replace it naturally had to have a cheaper car if his losses had been considerable and he did not hesitate to select a Ford. We keep busy, very busy, and there are 45 or 50 men on the pay roll and there is going to be a demand for tractors with the coming of spring." All is optimism in the Ford world.

ANOTHER DIVORCE IN FILM COLONY

Billie Rhodes.

Another matrimonial wreck has come to light in the Los Angeles film colony. Billie Rhodes, widow of the late Smiling Bill Parsons, has filed suit for divorce from her second husband, William H. Jobelman, to whom she was married in 1920. Cruelty and the claim that he offered to give her grounds for divorce for $10,000 are among the charges. Mr. Jobelman was formerly the comedienne's publicity man. He denied the charges.

A. J. Speegle's Exide Batteries And Business

Exide batteries, which were first put on sale here three years ago and found general favor among motorists, will constitute the exhibit of the Exide Service Station. A. J. Speegle doesn't talk much about his battery, but he waxes as loquacious as a parson when this question of business is brought up:

Business? How is it? Can't kick at all. We are getting our fair share of business and expect to get more. We're going ahead and spending money right along to improve our service, and we expect enough business to pay for all improvements and yield us a good profit. Our station is located at the top of a hill, and we expect to stick at the top of the hill in a business way. We have just spent quite a bit of money putting in a constant potential motor generator that will charge any battery in eight hours—and I cite that just as a sample of our faith in the business outlook for 1922."

Suggestions on Keeping Buick In Good Order

Visits by Jack Frost to a large portion of the United States in the months of January, February and March carry with them certain atmospheric perils to the operation of the automobile which careful drivers are quick to guard against. Every car owner is familiar with the necessity in freezing weather of protecting water in the radiator with alcohol or other anti-freeze solution, but there are other points where an accumulation of water may be the cause of a great deal of annoyance and faulty motor operation.

The fuel system is likely to be overlooked in a consideration of places which are subject to attack in winter and yet it contains several trouble-making possibilities unless proper attention is given to it. The gasoline tank under warm weather conditions, as pointed out in the instruction book furnished Buick owners, should be drained every 2,000 miles to remove any sediment and prevent clogging of the gas line, but in cold weather it is additionally important that the tank be drained to in the bottom of it. Water is produced by the condensation and consequent vaporization which takes place in the tank as the result of changing atmospheric conditions.

If this water is not removed from the gasoline tank it is in position to be drawn to the vacuum tank and, if frozen there, will interfere seriously with the operation of the fuel system and the motor. Ice in the top of the vacuum tank is likely to hold open the air valve with the result that the automatic features of the fuel system will be suspended and gasoline in large quantities will be drawn from the gasoline tank and pass directly into the intake manifold without undergoing the carbureting processes which are necessary to proper vaporization. The result is not only an unusually large and wasteful consumption of gasoline but a sluggish and choked operation of the motor, with an absence of the usual pick-up and power as noticeable Buick Valve-in-Head characteristics.

While not attended with the same possibilities of trouble, water in the carburetor dash pot is not productive of any good and in putting the fuel system in shape to meet winter conditions it is well to make a thorough job and empty the dash pot of any water it may contain. The dash pot is the small, round receptacle at the extreme bottom of the carburetor and, will be readily recognized as the one portion of the carburetor extending below the line of the carburetor gasoline feed pipe.

The gasoline tank can be drained by removal of the drain plug in the bottom of the tank. Inasmuch as an accumulation of water around this plug may result in a rusted condition, care should be taken in the removal of the plug that the threads are not injured, otherwise a leaking tank will be the result.

Crowds Flit Around the New Haynes

Reports from the Haynes exhibit at the show indicate that the new Haynes 55, the smaller and lighter Haynes six-cylinder roadster, is creating something of a sensation among the hundreds of show visitors. At all hours yesterday, a swarm of interested motorists were inspecting this long-heralded Haynes creation. The unanimous verdict of practically all the show visitors is that the new Haynes 55 is an ideal car to meet a strong, popular demand. The beauty of its characteristically Haynes lines, combined with its sturdy build, its evident power and speed, have a distinct appeal for all classes of automobilists, if the favorable comment of both dealers and buyers is any criterion of public judgment. "We are exceedingly well pleased with the reception accorded tthe new Haynes 55 during the first day of the show," states L. R. Stringer, general manager of the Nolen-Stringer company, "and we anticipate an unprecedented demand for this car during 1922."

Federal Tires Are Praised By Leslie

E. V. Leslie of the Auto Tire company of West Texas, was undecided whether to talk automobile or to discuss the showing his bird dog, Commanche Dick, made in the recent Bowie field trials. But he was pinned down to business finally.

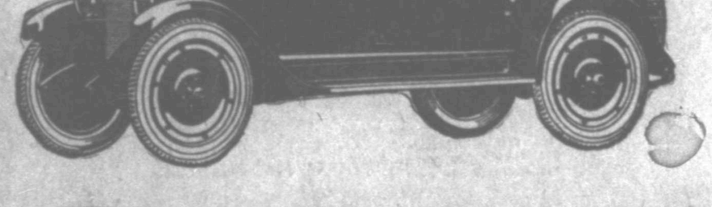

"Federal tires, both cords and fabrics and Vesta batteries make up our exhibit," he said. "We illustrate the entire method of making Federal tires, from the raw material to the finished product and also explain the advantages of the locking isolator of Vesta battery.

"Business is good; good enough to warrant the installation a few days ago of a new, latest model gasoline pump. When folks are buying gas, they're riding in automobiles; when they're riding, they're interested in motors, and when they're interested, they are all customers—and it all just proves that the automobile business is in a healthy condition."

OVERLAND MOTORS AVERAGES SALE A DAY IN PAST YEAR

The Overland Motors company of this city has sold an average of one automobile daily since February 1 last, the date on which R. A. Ebner took over the company's management. Ebner, who was formerly special wholesale representative of the Willys-Overland company, has put a world of enthusiasm into the employes of the local firm with the result that every man, from the department head down to the mechanic in the shop, is an Overland booster.

A. B. Booth is now in active charge of the inside work of the Overland Motors company, while Lane Rosenberry is the retail sales manager with H. P. Berry and E. G. Reasnor as assistant salesmen. F. Kennedy, formerly accountant for the Marshall-Huff company, is now accountant for the Overland Motors company, and is being assisted in this work by D. A. Rose and Mrs. Voght. The service department is in charge of N. D. Derby, with Walter Alver and Walter Lucas as assistants.

A FULL-powered motor, with special design aluminum pistons and perfectly balanced crankshaft—free from vibration; a sturdy, rigid frame, with channel six inches deep; 52 inch rear springs; large spring bolts and bushings that wear more slowly and stay quiet longer—these loom large among the elements of unusual value with which the New Series of the good Maxwell abounds.
