City Needs Funds For Projects

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Bond funds voted in 1977 to finance water improvements will fall $3.2 million short of completing projects approved by voters, City Manager Larry Cunningham told the Lubbock City Council this morning.

After an anticipated August sale of $6.1 million in water improvement bonds, $10.3 million in water bonds would still need to be sold to complete projects in the bond package, Cunningham said.

However, those remaining projects are estimated to cost $13.5 million.

The planned bond sale in August also will fall short of financing all planned projects, Cunningham said, and recommended the council proceed with one of the water projects with funds from increased water rates.

The council approved his recommendation that bids be taken for a water line along 82nd Street from University Avenue to Quaker Avenue at a cost of $450,000 to $475,000.

The line should increase the amount of water available to Southwest Lubbock residents, but will not improve the water pressure without construction of the pump station at 82nd Street and Memphis Avenue. The pump station, expected to cost about $2 million to construct, is to be financed from bonds sold in August.

Water rates were increased to pay off water improvement bonds, but since only $2.4 million of the $26.4 million bond issue have been sold since being approved in 1977 the money has been placed in a reserve fund in anticipation of the bond sales.

Also at today's meeting, council members set a July 26 hearing at 1:30 p.m. on a request by Norton Baker and Leroy Elmore to annex a tract of land between Indiana Avenue and University Avenue from 107th Street to 114th Street.

The annexation request, made more than a year ago by the pair, finally was recommended for approval earlier this month by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The council delayed implementation of a portion of the state tax relief bill which specifies agricultural land should be taxed on its productive value rather than its market value.

John Brooks, city-school tax assessor-collector, recommended the implementation of the provision be delayed because of the time involved in changing the methods of taxing farm land for the current tax year.

The productivity value will be used beginning Jan. 1.

Today was declared Kit Bigham Day and Sonny Bigham Day in honor of the bravery the two teen-agers displayed when two relatives sustained fatal electrical shocks June 14.

Sonny, 15, revived his cousin Kit, who had been shocked, using his CPR training. Kit then rode his motorcycle for help, although he had received severe burns on his hands and feet.

In making the proclamation, Mayor Dirk West said Sonny had "demonstrated an unusual level of maturity and judgment," and Kit's "courage and bravery...is an example and an inspiration to each of us."

Cartel Hikes Price Of Oil 37 Percent

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The OPEC oil cartel announced its biggest price increase in five years today, raising crude oil prices to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel. The boost is expected to add 4 cents a gallon to the cost of gasoline and heating oil in the United States.

The 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed on a multi-level pricing system. The base price was raised to $18 from $14.55 a barrel, a hike of 24 percent. But members can add surcharges of as much as $2 a barrel as market conditions permit, for increases of up to 37 percent.

On top of that, the maximum price was set at $23.50 per barrel, allowing for the usual differentials for higher-quality oil. The new prices take effect Sunday and are to last until the end of the year.

Saudi Arabia, which had held out for a low price, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates will be the only countries actually charging $18 a barrel, Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told a news conference.

Yamani, who described it as a "a slightly confusing system," said most other OPEC nations would charge between $21 and $22 a barrel. Observers said such nations as Nigeria, Algeria and Libya, which produce OPEC's best oil, would probably set their price at the $23.50 ceiling.

Saudi Arabia is OPEC's biggest producer, accounting for 28 percent of the cartel's oil last year. Saudi Arabia, Nigeria and Venezuela are among the biggest exporters of oil to the United States, which imports about half its oil.

Because of the lag in the transportation system, U.S. consumers are not expected to feel the direct effects of the new boosts until late summer.

Economists say the higher OPEC prices will worsen U.S. inflation, heighten the possibility of a serious recession and, in the words of one, make recent increases in fuel oil, utility and gasoline prices "seem quite modest" in comparison.

U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said on Wednesday that if OPEC raised its base price to $20 a barrel, the U.S. bill for imported oil next year would be $65 billion to $70 billion. The U.S. Treasury Department estimated earlier this year that the United States, although it was the second largest producer of oil in the world in 1978, would spend more than $50 billion on imported oil this year, compared with $42 billion in 1978 and $5 billion in 1972.

The oil cartel had a similar, two-tiered price structure in the first half of 1977.

The agreement was worked out late Wednesday night, prolonging the meeting into a third day, after moderate and radical members "narrowed the gap gradually until they got where they are," said Cyrus Ebrahimzadeh of the Iranian delegation.

Libya, Iran and Iraq had demanded that the price of OPEC's benchmark crude oil, Arabian light, be raised to be-

Carter Opens Door For Viet Refugees

TOKYO (AP) — President Carter announced today the United States will admit 14,000 Indochinese refugees a month — double the current level — as he and other economic summit participants called for an urgent United Nations conference on the problem.

The action on refugees was the first concrete result of the seven-nation meeting that was pictured as moving toward a compromise on its No. 1 agenda item, energy.

American officials, who asked not to be identified, estimated the additional influx of refugees would cost $150 million beyond the current outlay of $250 million.

In addition to the U.S. action, the other summit participants not only called for a U.N. conference on refugees, but also pledged to set aside more money for relief and resettlement efforts and admit more refugees.

"This is basically what we sought," one U.S. official said.

Carter said in a statement, "We can and will work together to find homes and jobs for Indochinese refugees."

U.S. sources said the U.N. meeting would be convened in Geneva during the third week in July.

They said they hoped that the increased number of refugees could reach the United States by next month.

The exact timing is uncertain, but Carter said he was making a one-year commitment.

U.S. sources said an administration emissary met with Vietnamese representatives in New York City at Carter's direction before the president flew to Tokyo last weekend.

They said they hoped Vietnam, which is expelling tens of thousands of "boat people," would participate in the conference.

Japanese chief cabinet secretary Rokusuke Tanaka told a news conference that specifics "would probably be decided in the course of the international conference ... the leaders did not go into specifics."

Most of today's summit talks focused on energy, with the aim of restraining oil imports by the seven nations represented here — the United States, Japan,

Woman Dies In Shooting

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An apparent domestic quarrel early this morning resulted in the death of one woman, the jailing of another and a Lubbock man's suffering serious stab wounds in the chest and arm.

The dead woman, identified as Wanda Fay Parson, 26, of 1704 Vanda Ave., was pronounced dead on arrival at West Texas Hospital shortly before 1 a.m. today. She suffered one .22-caliber bullet wound near the left shoulder blade.

Board Taps Rigsby For School Post

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Former city councilman Deaton Rigsby today was sworn in as an interim school board trustee during a special session called to fill the position left vacant by the death of Charles Waters.

The board also selected vice president Monte Hasie to succeed Waters as president, named Harold Harriger as vice president and re-elected Jose Ramirez as secretary.

Following a brief executive session, trustees unanimously elected Rigsby from among 12 candidates to replace Waters, who suffered an apparent heart attack Friday while on school board business in Georgia.

After contacting Rigsby to determine if he would accept the position, members called a short recess to await his arrival for the swearing-in ceremony. Hasie conducted the procedure before the few spectators who attended the meeting.

The independent insurance agent, who said he did not apply for the position personally, won the board seat over candidates Dr. Robert Carr, Dr. Charles Henry, Floyd Honey, Med Hunt, Dr. Heenan Johnson, Carolyn Lanier, Mary Nell Mathis, Joe Robbins, Howard Schmidt, George Scott and Joan Turner.

At a news conference following the meeting, Rigsby said he had heard within the past 72 hours that he was being considered as the new member, but said he did not know who had nominated him.

After the meeting, Hasie said, "We're real pleased with the choice. He'll be a real asset to the board with his background and qualifications."

Hasie said, however, that board members had a difficult time choosing a candidate during the executive session. "But we tried to choose according to the qualifications. What eliminated most was their not having kids," said Hasie in reference to the board-mandated criteria that a candidate should have children attending school in the Lubbock Independent School District.

According to legal criteria and trustee input, a candidate also has to meet the requirements of a qualified voter; has to have a knowledge of budgetary procedure, finance and the tax structure of a governmental agency; "has to have

Hospital Layoffs Worry Outgoing Administrator

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After losing his job as executive director of the Lubbock County Hospital District, Gerald Bosworth today expressed concern for the other hospital employees who might lose their jobs as a result of Health Sciences Center Hospital's financial crunch.

But he stressed that through relocation efforts within the hospital, as well as natural attrition, many of the planned cuts will not involve layoffs.

Bosworth's own contract was not renewed by the LCHD board in a meeting earlier this week. But before voting for his dismissal, the board authorized Bosworth to begin plans for the elimination of about 87 employee positions.

However, he said that of the planned approximately 87 position cuts, only about 56 are left to go since attrition has reduced the hospital staff.

And of the remaining positions to be cut, many of the employees will be offered the chance to relocate to other jobs within the hospital, he said. Of the original planned 87 cuts, almost 60 were on the nursing staff.

Included in the nursing staff category are attendants, licensed vocational nurses (LVNs), ward clerks, technicians and registered nurses (RNs). But RNs will be the last to go, if included in the layoffs.

Each hospital department head has been asked to turn in a list of positions — and names — which can be cut from the budget. Once the list is developed, the people affected should know by next week, Bosworth said.

However, Bosworth's last day on the job is Saturday and it will be up to someone else to initiate the cuts.

Bosworth is scheduled to meet with LCHD board chairman Jack Strong and associate director of operations George McGowan Monday to discuss the transition period between executive directors.

McGowan is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the teaching hospital and has taken over for Bosworth during his vacation periods. But Bosworth said he didn't know if McGowan would be appointed interim executive director.

Bosworth said the attempt to keep RNs off the layoff list is, for the most part, due to the difficulty in recruiting

County Fails To Pick Advisers For LCHD

By BOB CAMPBELL

Lubbock County commissioners this morning failed to appoint either a chairman or members for a Lubbock County Hospital District financial advisory committee.

The commissioners are to reconvene Tuesday to open bids for the construction of a $1 million county juvenile detention center and possibly will act on the committee then, County Judge Rodrick Shaw said.

Shaw and the four commissioners had the names of 21 persons who had agreed to serve since hospital district representatives came to the commissioners court earlier this month with the information that Health Sciences Center Hospital was in financial straits and possibly would run out of money in August if property taxes were not doubled.

The commissioners later rejected a tax increase, but they have been working on appointing a committee since then.

In other business held over from a regular Monday meeting, the commissioners today heard County Court-at-Law Judge J.Q. Warnick and Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford elaborate on their request earlier this month for approval of a third County Court-at-Law to handle the rapidly increasing civil and criminal case load.

Warnick said the two courts-at-law now in operation "are the busiest in the state." The judge said he had surveyed all of the metropolitan counties in Texas to draw his conclusion.

Commissioner Alton Brazell said the state should pay more of the costs of op-

Bell Wants Rate Boost

A-J News Services

Lubbock's one-party residential telephone rates would go up by more than 25 percent under a rate increase request submitted to the Public Utility Commission today by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The proposal would hike Lubbock's monthly rate for the single-party, non-measured service from $6 to $7.55 monthly.

Bell's Lubbock spokesman Jim Goodwin said the boost would be in keeping with a statewide flat rate increase of $1.55 the company is seeking. Bell's last rate increase was about 1½ years ago.

The statewide increase, on which the commission is expected to begin hearings in September, would boost Bell's revenue by $145.2 million a year.

Other Lubbock rates affected would include two-party hookups, which would

Health Of Leader Important In Peru Elections

By MARC LIFHSER

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — There is one question to which everyone in Peru today would like to know the answer — who will be the leading candidate in the presidential elections promised for 1980 by President Francisco Morales Bermudez, a retired army general who has ruled Peru since 1975.

The answer depends on the health of 84-year old Victor Haya de la Torre, founder and leader of Peru's strongest political machine, the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance (APRA).

Although Peru's last civilian president, Fernando Belaunde Terry, has been actively campaigning under the banner of his Popular Action Party for more than six months, he is no longer considered to be popular enough to be a strong contender.

Haya, the largest single vote-getter in June 1978 elections for a constitutional assembly, regularly put in 14-and 16-hour days as assembly president, presidential candidate and party leader before illness forced him to spend six weeks in the United States for treatment at a cancer clinic.

Commentary

He looked wan and weak when he returned from the United States in April and since then he has made no public appearances.

Political sources said he is not strong enough to face a political campaign or serve in the assembly, now in the final phase of drawing up a new Peruvian constitution.

According to government sources, APRA and Morales reached a secret agreement earlier this year that ended almost half a century of military anti-Aprista feelings.

The armed forces now appear to look favorably on elections as a means of insuring the continuation of the conservative economic policies it sees as necessary to bring Peru back from a severe financial crisis that put the nation's foreign debt at over $8 billion and sent inflation above the 70 percent-a-year level.

The military also based its support on APRA's strong anti-communist ideology and the party's grassroots organization and widespread popular support.

Haya has not appointed a political heir, and the news media has pointed to at least five APRA leaders as possible candidates in his absence. However, one strong contender, 64-year-old Armando Villanueva, head of APRA's left wing, may not be a viable candidate because his wife is Chilean, a fact likely to upset a military establishment that strongly remembers Peru's 1879 defeat by Chile in the War of the Pacific.

Another Haya lieutenant, the more conservative Andres Townsend, 65, is considered more acceptable to the military but, like Villanueva, he lacks Haya's national popularity.

Leftist candidates Genaro Ledesma, head of the Workers, Peasants and Students Popular Front, and former guerrilla leader Hugo Blanco are viewed as marginal candidates whose vote strength could become important only if the Constitutional Assembly decides to make the elections a two-round runoff in the French style.

The same is said for rightist candidate Luis Bedoya of the Popular Christian Party, who recently led his party out of a tenuous assembly alliance with APRA that was necessary to dominate the 34-seat leftist bloc.

Political uncertainty over a possible replacement for Haya has fueled the strong rumors that military president Morales would be amenable to a term as constitutional president.

"I've clearly said I have no obligation to any party but, yes, I would accept if launched by a political front," Morales said late in May. "I would be a traitor to myself running at the front of a party."

Political observers view a possible Morales candidacy with disbelief and a certain skepticism, and few feel he would win popular support after four years of raging inflation and cuts in real earnings.

Nicaraguan Agronomist Joins Rebel Movement

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — They call him Peter the bazooka man, but his boyish features and soft-spoken manner belie the destruction he can unleash.

Peter displayed his Chinese-made rocket launcher, the kind he says can immobilize a national guard tank.

"It's just my nickname," he said. "They call me Peter the bazooka man because I've knocked out so many national guard trucks with this."

But Peter wasn't always the bazooka man, and he wasn't a Sandinista guerrilla.

"I got a master's degree in agronomy and I studied a couple of semesters at Utah State," he said in close to flawless English, his brown eyes peering out from under a green camouflage cap. "I used to make good money."

"I became a Sandinista about two years ago because of the problems the government has created," he said. "I didn't care much about politics until I started working as an agronomist with the poor people. The big difference between the rich people in the city and the poor people I worked with in the country became evident. I saw all the poverty and all the killings by the national guard."

Peter set his chosen profession aside and joined other Nicaraguans in a drive to topple the regime of President Anastasio Somoza.

"I decided the only way to make change was to take up arms and start fighting," he said. "President Somoza always promises, promises and promises, but he never makes good on anything he promises."

Peter is one of hundreds of Sandinistas who currently occupy the eastern slum and residential section of Managua. More than two weeks ago, the rebels pushed their way into the area and dug in with barricades and trenches.

Since their occupation, they have fought off numerous advances by the national guard, and Peter said he has well-earned his nickname.

"We are winning the war and Somoza knows it," Peter said. "He's shooting up his last bullets."

Peter also denied government claims the guerrillas were an arm of the international communist movement.

"We're going to install a popular government with representatives from all sectors of the population. It's not going to be like Cuba where Fidel Castro took over and he himself was the government. Here the people will be represented."

National guard troops announced their advance again with a mortar round, and Peter the bazooka man picked up the the tool of his trade and started back to his post.

"When the war is over, I'll go back to my work as an agronomist," he said. "I studied a long time and it's what I'd like to do.

"I'll go back to work in the countryside and let the government be run by whoever knows how to run it."

King's Critics Oppose New Federal Holiday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. have told a Senate committee the slain civil rights leader's Jan. 15 birth date should not be made a federal holiday.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., conducted the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing and was the only panel member to attend. He took testimony on a bill to make the anniversary of King's birth a holiday. Among those testifying was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., who said King "was not of the caliber and moral integrity that we expect from our national heroes." Tom Southwick, a spokesman for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, said Kennedy had granted Thurmond permission to conduct the session as a "senatorial courtesy," but did not attend because "there were other things to do."

Energy Attitudes Different Now Than In 1960s

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Draw whatever conclusions you like, but if you contrast the economic mood of the mid-1960s with that of today you end up with a lesson and a sense of awe about the compression of time.

The time was only a dozen years ago, but it seemed like another era. Energy was something to be used, never mind the cost.

The battle of automobile horsepower was displayed in every newspaper ad, and nobody seemed to worry whether those horses were needed. They weren't, of course, but what a great way to consume conspicuously.

The all-electric home was promoted as the clean, smart, modern way to live. If you review those ads you'll see hardly a reference to cost. The sales pitch was about the same as that used to sell diets today.

Utilities eagerly sought new business, and one of the techniques was to urge business to leave its office buildings lit all night, torches in the sky that proclaimed a company's power and affluence.

In each instance the attitude prevailed that energy was plentiful, inexpensive and dependable. If it would have meant anything at the time, the promoters might have added that it was inexhaustable too.

That it isn't inexhaustable or inexpensive is proclaimed each day in the late 1970s. But habits are hard to change, and it is even harder still to correct the architectural style of the 1960s.

What do you do, for example, with a skyscraper sealed tight from the cooling summer breezes, insulated from the winter sun's warmth, and so well shaded from the outside light that electricity is burned all day?

The 1960s were the decade of consumption, a time when the customer or buyer became "the consumer," a force in the marketplace who was honored and elevated and nearly consecrated as the Americaan king.

Finally, the 1930s and the Great Depression and wartime austerity were behind us. A vast mass of people had money far in excess of their immediate needs. It gave them courage to let go, to raise life styles.

Analysis

Consumption grew for automobiles, entertainment, travel, two-bath homes, appliances, red meat, grass seed, cat food, energy, education and even, some say, of uplifiting religion. All hit highs.

It was, in fact, an economic high, and many people, including "experts" in academe, government and business sought to maintain it. Unemployment, they insisted, could fall to 3 percent or so.

The change to the current mood didn't come overnight. Gradually, for example, we settled for 3.5 percent unemployment, then 4, then 5. Lately, it seems, we feel that anything under 6 percent is success.

Inevitably, some now reflect, inflation invaded the economic structure like termites in a house. Even before the 1960s were ended the consumer warred against grocers. They demanded government intervention.

Government responded, in a big way. But as prices continued to rise, and as inferior products continued to flood the consumer marketplace, the perception of government as the ultimate answer grew suspect.

Inflation cut deeply into the discretionary income that had powered the consumer economy as the 1970s matured. It became more difficult to save. People sought hedges against inflation. Distrust of money grew.

The naive confidence of the 1960s is almost gone now. Too many failures. Too much disillusionment. Nobody seems to have the answers, people complain. Polls illustrate their sour, shaken mood.

Shortages are equated with deprivation, it seems, for those who felt consumption was a right, and maybe an obligation. The goal now is conservation — doing with less; it's a strange notion to adjust to.

Draw your own conclusions, but as an aid you might consider that production is at least as important as consumption, that comfort isn't the most sacred of mankind's goals, that government doesn't always have the answers, and that foresight is one of the mind's rarest products.

TVA Reorganizer Quits Federal Post

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dr. Leon Ring, a former aerospace industry executive, has resigned as general manager of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Ring, 45, said Tuesday he was leaving the $49,500 a year position as the federal utility's chief executive because "the job is evolving into something different than I had envisioned when I accepted it last fall."

He said the general manager's job involved more of a coordinating role than leadership and decision-making.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

The Politics Of Exclusion

POLITICS HAS BEEN the basic United Nations game since the organization was established by the victors of World War II. But until fairly recently it has been a politics of genuine power and of maneuver from within the organization.

Narrowly nationalistic politics traditionally has been downplayed in the specialized agencies, such as the World Health Organization, where matters of worldwide technical and humanitarian concern are the order of business.

The United States warned this year in Geneva that it might well withdraw from WHO if the Arabs succeeded in excluding Israel. It already has done so under very similar circumstances from the International Labor Organization.

It is difficult to comprehend what is to be gained from the politics of exclusion, other than the scoring of a few questionable propaganda points.

THERE IS little point in discussing the future of South-West Africa without the participation of South Africa, which has controlled the territory since 1918. And what is gained in debating conditions on the West Bank without the involvement of the occupying authority, Israel?

The Third World, less-developed countries have the voting power (the black African bloc alone numbers a massive 49, almost one-third of UN membership) to have their political way on many issues of particular concern.

But they largely lack the technical and military capabilities, or the cooperation of the major powers that do have these, necessary to give practical effect to paper majorities.

IN SOME respects, the United States is not in the best position to criticize. In the early years of a much smaller United Nations, with West European and Latin American votes securely in pocket, Washington could be certain of calling the turn on any issue not involving the prospect of a Soviet Security Council veto.

That time has long since passed, partly as a consequence of the membership explosion from the founding 51 states to the current 151 and partly as a consequence of learning from experience that a steamroller is not always the most effective way of preparing ground for constructive policies.

That, however, is a lesson the new majority has yet to learn.

IN BREAKING the word "gasoline" down into syllables, it's interesting to note that "gas" is short, "o" is an exclamation of pain and "line" is long.

WILLIAM RAMSEY of 3209 35th St., Apartment D, wants nothing more than to live out his life in dignity by working and supporting himself as long as he's able.

But Social Security law won't let him.

It's a problem shared by tens of thousands of over-65s. A man must either limit his income from working or he must give up all or part of his monthly Social Security check.

You can see it in their eyes. A mixture of defiance, a plea for help, puzzlement, despair and determination.

"Not many people," Ramsey says, "understand what it's like to be 69 years old and..."

His voice trails off.

"I've been to Washington," he says. "I understand it's the law. I know all that. But the law isn't fair. It's as though I've been convicted and fined without every being tried or given a chance to defend myself."

Ramsey draws a Social Security check, he says, of $246.80 a month. Not enough to live on. Not for a man who's plenty qualified and plenty healthy to get a job and hold it.

Ramsey has done just that. He works for a security service, 6½ hours a day, five days a week.

"BUT AS SOON as I make $4,500," he says, "it's the law that for every $2 I make after that, I'm penalized $1 on my Social Security. It just isn't right."

All Ramsey asks is that he be allowed to work as long as he's able so that he and his wife can afford the things they need—food, clothes, rent, medicine—without having to take a handout.

He spits out the word "welfare" as though it were poison, which—to him—it likely would be.

He plans to see U.S. Rep. Kent Hance "when he's home in August" to try to get a change in the Social Security law.

Ramsey hopes that others in a similar situation will join him in the effort.

"It's got to be done soon to be of any help to me," he says, noting that after age 72 a man or woman—if he or she is still able—can earn any amount without being penalized.

"If they'll just give me a chance," he says, "I can do a job. Why do they want to deny me that?"

Why, indeed?

RAYMOND BROGNIEZ tells me of the death in Mexico last week of his brother-in-law, Carlos B. Madero, youngest brother of Mexican hero Francisco Madero.

The older Madero led the 1910 revolution against dictator Porfirio Diaz and was president of Mexico from 1911 to 1913, when he was assassinated after he was overthrown and captured.

Brogniez' sister and the younger Madero met while both were students at Rice, Brogniez says, and were married about 60 years ago. They lived on the family holdings near Parras, Coahuila, west of Saltillo.

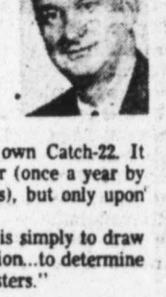
Will Taxpayer Have His Day?



WASHINGTON—Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, came to the Senate at the last election as senior partner in a top law firm, and before that he had worked his way at the metal lathing building trade through high school, college and law school.

These are public facts and I cite them mainly to identify Sen. Hatch as a man of parts. He is a member of the Senate freshman class which brings hope to one who has seen 'em come and go.

I was thinking this recently in the Senate Press Gallery when Sen. Hatch was speaking to a disgracefully empty floor on a subject that brims with national importance—the mandated balanced budget as a Constitutional Amendment.

It would be wrong to call it a long speech. I would choose to call it a full speech, hardly a superfluous paragraph there.

ALONG TOWARD THE end, indicating the stamina of the address, was a point of utmost significance that I had not seen made before. To paraphrase Hatch:

The Congress has used many an artful dodge to avoid passing a must-statute on budget-balancing. It has done likewise to circumvent the states from calling a Constitutional Convention for the same purpose.

Thus far, several states through their legislatures have petitioned Congress to call the first such Convention since 1787. As Hatch pointed out if the number of states reaches two-thirds, Congress is compelled to call the Constitutional Convention. Hatch continues in his own words:

"I hope that my colleagues will recognize that the issue before us is not simply whether an amendment will be proposed...Just as critical is the issue of which body will ultimately propose the amendment—Congress or the Constitutional Convention."

AS MATTERS STAND today, the Federal Establishment can spend as many billions as it likes while the taxpayers—"we the people," the Constitution calls us—are fleeced with scores of legalistic contraptions.

Ah, but let the long-neglected taxpayer have his turn at bat. Let him take full charge of the Second Constitutional Convention. Of course, the budget-balancing amendment will be passed with loud cheers, becoming the law of the land.

But the Convention need not stop with the budget-balancer. Most of the 20-odd Amendments ("Congress shall make no law...") are prohibitions by the states against the Federal government, and this pattern certainly would prevail at the Second Convention.

With the taxpayer in a temper against Federalia, I would guess there would be a crack-down on foreign junkets, a strict Congressional schedule with fewer holidays and goof-offs, perhaps the abolition of the useless Vice Presidency.

Sen. Hatch's bill (S.J. Res. 86) can bring about as complete a revision of the present Constitution as the First Convention was of the Articles of Confederation.

True, Hatch limits the Second Convention to budget affairs, but that will not matter if the document is ratified by the states.

The Hatch measure has its own Catch-22. It permits an "emergency" waiver (once a year by 60 percent vote of both Houses), but only upon seven calendar days' notice.

"The purpose," says Hatch, "is simply to draw the maximum amount of attention...to determine which Members were budget-busters."

Sylvia Porter:

You Can Sell House For Tax-Free Profit

(Last of seven columns)

THERE ARE TWO ways you can avoid paying capital gains tax on the profit from sale of your home this year and in the future:

(1) The new up-to-$100,000 exclusion (we'll call this the exclusion) and;

(2) The traditional sale-and-replacement tax (we'll call this the deferral).

Both breaks apply to the sale of a principal residence—but that's just about where the similarity ends.

There are several vital differences between the breaks and because the up-to-$100,000 exclusion is new, many of you, as home-owning taxpayers, are confusing the distinctions. Below is a simple rundown of how they differ.

• WHO QUALIFIES FOR the breaks: The exclusion is limited to homesellers who:

Are at least age 55 on the date of the sale; have resided in the home for three out of the five years prior to the sale, and have not taken advantage of any part of the exclusion before this transaction.

In contrast, the deferral is available to homesellers of any age who buy another principal residence within certain time limits (generally 18 months before or after the sale).

There is no minimum residency requirement on deferral.

And there's no limit on the number of times you can use the deferral with one exception: You can't use it more often than once in an 18-month period unless the sale is job-related.

• HOW THE TWO home-sale breaks work: The exclusion allows you to avoid the tax permanently on the first $100,000 of your home sale profits.

The deferral allows you to postpone the tax on all your profit, no matter how big, if you buy a home that costs at least as much as the home you sold. If you buy a house that costs less than what you got on the home sale, you pay tax on the profit that goes into your pocket and not into the new house.

• When do you pay the tax owed, if any? When you sell your house and do not buy another.

(The real tax-saving strategy would be to seek ways to use the $100,000 exclusion to erase the tax. If you're planning to sell your house in 1979, for instance, consider these tax points with utmost care before you sell. The tax you might or might not owe could be crucial in the timing of your sale as well as your post-sale plans on what to do next.)

• THESE TWO BREAKS are not mutually exclusive. You, a homeseller who qualifies for both breaks, can use both.

As an illustration, Prentice-Hall submits the story of Mr. Cooper, age 55, who bought and sold several homes over the years. He used the sale-and-replacement break on each of the sales to postpone the tax on his profits.

Now he wants to move into a smaller home, so he sells his present home for $165,000. He has a potential taxable profit of $140,000 on the sale (most of it built up from profits on earlier sales over the years).

Mr. Cooper can use the new exclusion to avoid the tax on the first $100,000 of his profit. But what about the remaining $40,000?

It is at this point that the exclusion break and the sale-and-replacement break act in tax-saving tandem.

Because he takes advantage of the exclusion, Mr. Cooper is treated as having sold his house for $65,000 ($165,000 actual proceeds less the $100,000 exclusion).

So, if Mr. Cooper buys a new house within 18 months that costs at least $65,000, he can take full advantage of the sale-and-replacement break. He can defer the tax on the remaining $40,000 of profit until he sells his new home.

You easily can apply the experiences of Mr. Cooper to your own situation, if you are a homeowner planning a sale, no matter what price range your home is in. The lessons are inherent and clear.

You also easily can grasp a main point on using the extremely valuable exclusion break. If you are not yet 55 but will be soon, postpone selling your home until you are at least age 55 so you will qualify for this break.

Don't lose it by ignoring the age limit, and selling months—or even weeks—too soon.

THE FUNDAMENTAL message of this whole series should now be unmistakable. Start planning your tax-saving strategy for 1979 now!

Don't overlook the traps in support of your parents when they get their Social Security benefit increases next month.

If your parents are babysitting for you, start now to take advantage of the new tax credit break. Never forget: Jan. 1, 1980 will be too late for tax-saving on '79's income.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Illiterates Are Still Graduating

WASHINGTON—After so many years in the newspaper business, a pundit learns to detect sounds that might otherwise go unheard—the rumble of momentum as it gathers, the shrill cry of crisis as it mounts.

These days, unless my ears deceive me, we are hearing in the field of education the unmistakable slosh-slosh-slosh of whitewash being mixed.

An effort is underway, sponsored by the National Education Association and the International Reading Association, to create a prestigious Commission on Reading Trends in the United States.

The prestigious commission will have a prestigious advisory board. Plans call for a small but savvy staff, headed by an expert in the bread-buttering art, and the staff will do all the work.

ONCE CREATED, the prestigious commission will be heard from only rarely, and the prestigious board will be heard from not at all. This, as everyone knows, is How to Get Things Done.

The problem at hand is a critical problem for the educational establishment.

This establishment embraces most teachers, principals and superintendents; it includes the manufacturers of textbooks and teaching devices; it takes in the teacher colleges.

The establishment is made up of all the wonderful folks who gave our children the glories of new math and the marvels of Dick and Jane and their jumping mutt named Spot.

The charge against the establishment is that its intellectual and political leaders have failed miserably in the vital task committed to them: They have failed to teach great numbers of our children those fundamental skills that are required for getting ahead in today's society.

Evidence to support this charge comes from many quarters—from the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), the California Achievement Tests (CAT), the Metropolitan Achievement Tests (MAT), and dozens of others.

But whether the empirical data emerge from SAT, CAT, MAT or the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills, the figures add up to a damning indictment of the establishment's blunders.

Yes, the data conflict. The figures are fairly subject to varying statistical interpretation. But after every allowance has been made for differences in evaluation, a melancholy conclusion remains.

MILLIONS OF OUR high-school graduates cannot comprehend the instructions on a box of macaroni; they cannot make change from a $20 bill.

Because of this situation, hundreds of school boards are demanding a return to basics; at least 36 states have taken some action to require that graduates demonstrate minimal competency in order to earn a diploma.

All this represents a grave threat to the establishment; it has a heavy intellectual investment in the look-and-guess method of teaching reading, and it has an enormous financial investment in readers, audio-visual gadgets and gimmicks.

Let us create a prestigious study commission, financed by a prestigious foundation, window-dressed with the mannikin names of such Divine Ones as Cesar Chavez, Alex Haley, Barbara Jordan and George McGovern—and, behold! Given a hand-picked staff, a splendid final report can be speedily put together.

The Commission of Reading Trends in the United States will produce a report, early in 1981, replete with tables, graphs, pie charts and chi-squares; and the report will reassure us (a) that everything in education is really peachy keen, and (b) that if everything isn't altogether peachy keen, it is not the establishment's fault.

THAT IS TO say, the confusing, conflicting and misleading data will be magically "clarified." The clarified figures will show that reading skills have not declined but have in fact improved.

The commission, thanks to its able and dedicated staff, will conclude that the declining scores on SAT, CAT and MAT have nothing to do with schools, principals, superintendents or textbooks, but are instead a reflection of socioeconomic factors that previously had been accorded insufficient weight.

In applying whitewash, as Tom Sawyer understood, staff is everything. A great executive director for this particular project would be Paul Copperman, author of the devastating critique, "The Literacy Hoax."

Anybody want to bet a thousand bucks he won't wind up with the job?

'Strictly Confidential' Concentrates On Protection Of Privacy

By STEPHEN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies indicate that Americans worry about who is getting information about their finances from their banks and how they can safeguard such information.

There are plenty of laws around that give consumers statutory rights on borrowing, consumer credit rating, credit card billing and keeping financial records at banks confidential. A major American commercial bank has just published a booklet that explains some of these rights.

Published by Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, the booklet describes the kind of information the bank requires from customers, how it collects it, what it does with it and how it protects it. The booklet also outlines laws protecting the privacy of such information and explains how Citibank makes decisions on credit, what roles credit scoring and pre-screening play in these decisions and how outside credit agencies are used.

The 27-page publication, called "Strictly Confidential," concentrates on protecting the privacy of customers' financial records. It may provide some guidelines for consumers who want to check what their own bank's financial disclosure policies are.

"Americans are becoming increasingly concerned about the privacy of their financial records," Citibank President William I. Spencer stated in the booklet.

Citibank said its own poll of 1,401 adults indicated that 63 percent of the population is bothered by what they considered excessive or moderate inquiries into details of their everyday lives. According to Citibank, 37 percent of the population is "very concerned" about such inquiries.

How much money someone has in the bank is privileged information, said 71 percent; 63 percent said it was nobody's business how they spent their money, and 47 percent said information about their indebtedness should be strictly confidential.

Of those polled, 48 percent said the government is too inquisitive and 30 percent said the same thing about business, Citibank said.

According to Spencer, Citibank's policy is to keep personal financial information confidential. "We won't give your personal financial records to the government or anyone else unless a legal order compels us to."

Senior Vice President Richard Kovacevich, who heads Citibank's New York area branch operations, noted that banks are allowed in some circumstances to divulge records in response to a "formal written request" from a U.S. government agency.

Citibank policy is to refuse such requests and to wait for a legal order, Kovacevich said.

Traditional credit inquiries from businesses that are considering a Citibank customer's request for credit or a charge account are answered "in general terms," the vice president said, but exact bank balances are not revealed.

All other inquiries are rebuffed unless the bank is legally compelled to reply. "Anyone who wants information from us about you has to get a subpoena, search warrant or other legal order," he said. "If we get a legal order, we won't comply until we have tried to notify you and give you a chance to try to stop it legally," he added.

Copies of "Strictly Confidential" are available from Citibank's public affairs department, 399 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10043.

Wise Words Cost Money

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Words of wisdom from prominent speakers may be useful and encouraging — but also can be expensive.,

The International Platform Association says the most popular dozen speakers in the country receive between $7,500 and $15,000 for each appearance.

Miss Savitch, an NBC News correspondent, makes about one appearance a day and is still able to keep up with her day-to-day job demands, said a platform association spokeswoman.

Asimov, a popular science fiction writer who has written 201 books, commands up to $10,000 for each of his almost 200 appearances a year.

It's the best thing to happen to O.J. since the Screw Driver. We call it a Q Driver and it's very different, decidedly smoother and better-tasting. That's because it's made with Don Q Rum.

Don Q, like all Puerto Rican Rums, is aged by law for at least one full year. And when it comes to smoothness, aging is the name of the game.

Scientists Say Senility Major Medical Problem

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — When Sir Winston Churchill was in his last years his doctor, Lord Moran, once bitterly mused that medical science had been unable to save the mind of the greatest Englishman of his time.

It was an affliction worse than death, the doctor said, and yet the research that might help the old die with dignity was starved of funds.

It was not considered good form before Churchill joined the immortals nearly 15 years ago to refer to his mental condition, even though the publicity might have helped public awareness of what scientists now see as one of the major medical and sociological problems facing the United States.

Dementia is basically a disease of the elderly — say 65 and over. There are 22 million people in that age group in the United States now. There will be more than 51 million in 2030, 50 years from now.

In an address to the Society for Neuroscience, quoted in the science magazine Nature, scientist Fred Plum suggested the problem may already be reaching epidemic proportions. The annual cost of caring for patients with chronic dementia is $12 billion a year and it may rise to $30 billion by 2030.

But perhaps even worse than the colossal cost is the emotional damage to families forced to watch the tragic deterioration of a parent or grandparent.

At one time, dementia was thought to reflect the effects of cerebral vascular disease, hardening of the arteries of the brain, for example. But Plum said this accounted for only about 8 percent of victims. By far the major cause — some 50 percent — is due to Alzheimer's disease, an abnormality of the brain which leads to senility.

Recent studies of dementia, Plum said, show the presence of anatomical changes which indicate an acceleration of the normal aging process. But other factors must operate as well, he added. There also is the fact that many sufferers have direct family antecedents who were also afflicted, "suggesting that at least some families inherit the susceptibility."

The situation, though grim in the short term, is not without hope. There is research, Plum said, that gives "hope that Alzheimer disease, like Parkinsonism, may turn out to be a specific neurochemical system degeneration, perhaps susceptible to at least temporary improvement with pharmacotherapy."

But if science does not solve the question of why the cell systems that transact the functions of memory, learning and judgement in the brain die before the rest of the brain, Plum said, "our descendants will face a plague that produces social and medical burdens of a size that adversely affects their whole way of living."

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have cataracts and can't wear glasses touching the sides of my nose where glasses normally rest, so I'd be most interested in finding out about the removal of cataracts if this is possible. I'm quite far advanced now. Recently I read an article in our local paper about 51 rabbits developing cataracts after repeated exposure to microwave radiation. What I'd like to know is: Are there experiments being done on how to reverse cataracts?

DEAR READER — There are some enthusiasts who believe that you can reverse cataracts with drops, diets and other procedures, but after careful review by qualified ophthalmologists, it is the opinion of the American Ophthalmology Service that the only effective treatment available for cataracts is surgical removal.

Some of the confusion may be related to difference in animal research and human responses. And some of the confusion may also be due to misinterpretation of what is a vacuole (bubble) in the lens.

There are basic reasons why people develop cataracts. Almost everyone develops some form of cataracts if they live long enough, even if it's not large enough or in the right location to interfere with vision.

You see, the lens of the eye is really a form of specialized skin. As your skin regenerates, the cells are sloughed off the surface. This cannot happen inside the eye, so the old cells are pushed to the center of the lens. The new cells are always on the outside of the globular lens. In the course of time, the center of the lens becomes packed with dense old cells. These become opaque, and it's difficult to transmit light through the lens.

When all the lens is involved to such an extent that it becomes white or is unable to transmit light, it's called a mature cataract.

There are a number of other factors that will contribute to cataracts. Diabetics are more prone to developing them earlier in life. Radiation can be a factor in causing them. And there's a body of evidence that indicates that ultraviolet rays from sunlight may be an important factor.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 13-6 on cataracts to give you more information about them, when you should have surgery and what can be done. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you have cataract surgery, you will probably be able to use contact lenses after the eyes have healed. This will get away from your problem with the pressure of the cataract glasses on the sides of your nose. I would like to add that not everyone who has cataracts necessarily requires surgery. Sometimes the vision is still adequate for that particular person's needs.

In other instances, there is another disease in the eye, which means that removal of the cataracts wouldn't necessarily results in a significant improvement in vision. Each case has to be evaluated by a competent ophthalmologist before a decision is made relative to the merits of surgery.

TREASURY PRESSURED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Other federal agencies are pressuring the Treasury Department to ignore complaints by Florida tomato growers that Mexican competitors are dumping winter vegetables on the U.S. market at cut-rate prices, Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., says. The Floridians said last September Mexican growers were selling half their crop north of the border at prices that would not cover their production costs. That cut the prices domestic growers receive, the petition said.

Card Delivered 15 Years Later

WEST WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — When Rita Duhamel reached into her mailbox last week, she found a postcard carrying Abraham Lincoln's violet profile on a 4-cent stamp.

Nobody knows where it was hiding for 15 years.

Warren Haskell, a clerk in the Brunswick Post Office said, "There's a lot of possibilities. It might have slidded behind something. It could have been lost inside the office or outside. Who can say? Who knows?"

Reached in Atlanta, Ga., Sherry Humes, who sent the postcard as 14-year-old Sherry Boisvert, said she was visiting an aunt and uncle at the time.

"I'm the kind of person who buys a bunch of them at the beginning of the trip and forgets to write them util I'm ready to go home. Usually they arrive after I get home," she said. "But not this far after."

NO SPEEDSTER — He's billed as "Fat Albert." But T.J. Albert is not one to moan his 856-pound condition. Albert, who runs the 100-yard dash in 23 seconds, says, "I'm not like lightning, but I'm faster than a turtle." (AP Laserphoto)

Size Both Blessing, Handicap

ST. ALBANS, W.Va. (AP) — T.J. Albert Jackson says his size — 6-foot-4, 856 pounds — is both a handicap and a blessing.

"I'm a fat man in a small man's world. but I'm happy," says the 23-year-old Jackson from Ashtabula, Ohio.

Jackson — whose mother began calling him Fat Albert well before Bill Cosby's comic character became popular — makes his way in the small man's world as an entertainer. He has a stage show act in which he sings and dances. During the summer he works side show tours.

He's currently appearing in a St. Albans Town Fair side show. He covers his two-cushion sofa easily, and keeps his portable fan running as children pay 25 cents to gawk and gape at his cave-like navel.

Jackson said he sometimes counsels fat people who come in to commiserate. He tells them that fat is only in the mind. He's learned to love himself the way he is, and tells them they can too.

Jackson said he is not really responsible for his massive girth, and that has helped him accept his fate and live without regrets. He said he has gigantism, a glandular condition that is not easily corrected.

"I don't really have to eat much — today I had two Big Macs and some vegetables. Sometimes I have less than three meals a day," said Jackson. "Eating hasn't caused my weight."

But he admitted, he's been known to put away a breakfast of four dozen eggs, two pounds of bacon, two loaves of bread and a gallon of milk.

Jackson says he has other plans for his life. He hopes to return to school and become a child psychologist.

"I'll never stand in the welfare line," Jackson said. "I'll never say, 'Help me, I'm too fat.'"

Even though he hopes for a change in the future, Jackson is not unhappy with his way of life now.

Area Representatives Vote On Canal, Utility Rates

HOUSE

PANAMA — By a vote of 220 for and 200 against, the House headed off efforts by conservatives to scuttle the Panama Canal treaties. The vote adopted an amendment requiring Panama to pay only $9.3 million to cover U.S. costs in turning over the Canal Zone, rather than the $2.3 billion required under a separate, Republican sponsored amendment. The vote came during debate on a bill (HR 111) implementing the Canal treaties. The bill was headed for final passage and the Senate.

Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., the sponsor, said that if the House adopted the GOP amendment rather than his amendment the U.S. " would look indecisive and unable to carry out the will of its leaders."

Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., an opponent, said the U.S. should seek more money from Panama to offset the high costs to U.S. taxpayers involved in turning over the canal to Panama.

Most members voting "nay" were trying to thwart implementation of the Panama Canal treaties.

Reps. Jim Mattox, D-5, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Mickey Leland, D-18, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-20, did not vote.

EVACUATION PLANS — The House rejected, 147 for and 235 against, an amendment stipulating that before a utility can be federally licensed to operate a new nuclear power plant, the state in which the plant is situated must have an emergency evacuation plan as a safeguard against castastrophe. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission now requires only an evacuation plan for the plant site. The amendment was proposed to HR 4388, a fiscal 1980 appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., a supporter, said: "In the wake of Three Mile Island, it is no longer possible for any ardent advocate of nuclear power to suggest that the worst could not happen."

Rep. John Wydler, R-N.Y., an opponent, said "this amendment is probably the opening salvo on a campaign whose ultimate purpose is nothing more nor less than to bring nuclear energy and power in our nation to a standstill."

Members voting "yea" want statewide evacuation plans to be mandated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Mattox, Leland and Gonzalez voted "yea."

Wilson, Eckhardt and de la Garza did not vote.

UTILITY RATES — The House rejected, 136 for and 271 against, an amendment to provide public financial reimbursement to "intervenors" who represent the consumer viewpoint before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The amendment sought to provide $550,000 for that purpose. It was attached to HR 4388, a fiscal 1980 appropriations bill later passed without money for intervenors.

The commission formerly was known as the Federal Power Commission. It sets rates and otherwise regulates interstate commerce in natural gas, pipeline oil and hydroelectric power, directly influencing the utility bills of most Americans.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the sponsor, said his amendment is necessary to balance the clout of the "high-priced lawyers" utility companies send before the commission.

Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., an opponent, said "no one wants to prevent anyone from appearing before the FERC" and that the agency has a public information office which any citizen or intervenor can use at no cost.

Members voting "nay" were opposed to federal funding of intervenors before the federal utility commission.

SENATE

PEACE CORPS — The Senate rejected, 32 for and 62 against, an amendment to remove the Peace Corps from the jurisdiction of the federal volunteer agency Action. The amendment, offered to a bill (S 239) concerning volunteer programs, would have made the Peace Corps an independent agency. The bill was later passed and sent to the House. The House has voted to place the Peace Corps under State Department control.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., sponsor of the amendment, said: "It is imperative that the (Peace Corps) be insulated from the political and social pressures that sem chronic to the Action agency."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, an opponent, said the Senate should support the Carter Administration's plan to give the Peace Corps more autonomy within Action. He warned of any "unfortunate perception abroad that it was another arm of American foreign policy...."

Sens. John Tower, R, Pete Domenici, R (N.M.), and Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "yea."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "nay."

TVA — The Senate rejected, 33 for and 58 against, an amendment to enlarge the Tennessee Valley Authority board of directors from three to five members and require that at least two directors reside in a state receiving TVA power. The amendment was proposed to a bill (S 436) increasing TVA borrowing authority. The bill was passed and sent to the House.

Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

VETERANS' AID — By a vote of 40 for and 52 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to block cuts of $[illegible] million to $42 million in veterans' dental care, travel reimbursement, and over-the-counter drug benefits. The Senate earlier had restored part of a larger cutback proposed by the Carter administration to make more money available for staffing VA hospitals.

Tower voted "yea."

Bentsen, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

Forbes Tours Russia On Motorcycle

MOSCOW (AP) — Malcolm Forbes, the Forbes in Forbes magazine, is taking his capitalist preachings right into the heart of the Soviet Union — and on a motorcycle yet.

Forbes and five other Americans arrived in Moscow after a week behind the Iron Curtain on the first-ever motorcycle tour of the Soviet Union by U.S. citizens.

"It's not like touring in America," the 60-year-old Forbes said. "There are no 28 delicious flavors of ice cream and very little cold drinks along the way. But if you want all that, then stay home."

Forbes, an adventurer as well as a publisher of the business magazine, relished his role as a "harbinger of capitalism in the land of communism." He tied to his bike a blue scarf emblazoned with his magazine's advertising slogan: "Capitalist Tool."

Fiedler Released From Hospital

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler is home from the hospital after suffering a heart attack, but he's not planning to do any conducting for awhile.

Pops manager Gary Good said, "I don't think he's going to be doing much of anything, just resting. ... We just want to wait and see what happens."

Good said assistant conductor Harry Dickson is taking the maestro's place on the podium this summer.

The 84-year-old conductor was released Wednesday from Tufts-New England Medical Center, where he was recovering from a heart attack suffered June 9 at his home.

Fiedler, who began conducting the Boston Pops 50 years ago, has had at least four other heart attacks in the last 25 years. He has not conducted since early May.

Sponsors Cancel Rock Concert

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — Faced with community opposition, sponsors have withdrawn a request for permission to hold a 19-hour rock festival as the backdrop for a movie featuring Linda Ronstadt and other rock stars.

Caesar Comeaux, president of the Iberia Parish Police Jury, said Wednesday night organizers of the concert withdrew their request for a permit required by the parish for all mass meetings except those involving labor and church groups. He said he understood Lafayette Parish was being considered as an alternate site.

Ed Clahan, executive producer of the movie "Plantation Hill," had said earlier that the proposed film venture was well-planned and well-financed.

The concert was to have served as the backdrop for the movie starring Miss Ronstadt, Neil Young, the Beach Boys, Poco, Jackson Browne, Kenny Rogers, Boz Scaggs and others.

Panel Wants Galante Back In Jail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Parole Commission wants to send reputed organized crime leader Carmine Galante back to prison to serve out a 20-year sentence on narcotics charges.

The commission voted last week to rescind Galante's release from prison, but the decision, announced Wednesday, is subject to approval by a federal judge.

The 69-year-old Galante, once considered in contention to be "boss of all bosses" in organized crime, has been free on $50,000 bail since March 23 pending resolution of his claims that his parole was revoked illegally.

He was sentenced in July 1962 to 20 years in prison for selling heroin and for contempt of court, but was paroled after 12 years. The parole was revoked for his alleged association with known criminal figures.

The parole commission said Wednesday it did not know of Galante's whereabouts. If the commission is successful, Galante could be imprisoned for the balance of his original term.

Sheik Service Station

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Steve Gottshall wasn't trying to sell more gas when he wore Arab-style headgear and passed out peanuts at his service station, he was just trying to give weary customers something to smile about.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Gottshall said some of his customers waited two hours to buy gasoline, and he handed out peanuts as they reached the pumps — his way of "thanking Mr. Carter for all this."

"I'm just trying to keep everybody happy," said Gottshall, who faced people with little to smile about while wearing a black T-shirt on his head, tied with a narrow band.

"I don't know how Arabs dress like this — it's hot," he said.

Evacuees Return To Michigan City

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Evacuees have been allowed to return home after flammable fuels were removed from tanks damaged in an explosion and fire at a fuel depot here.

About 300 persons were evacuated after several explosions ignited intense fires just before midnight Tuesday at the storage depot of Petrolane Gas Services and the adjacent Washtenaw Farm oil storage lot. Six fire departments fought the blaze for about 6 hours early Wednesday.

Police said the explosion occurred as a driver was emptying his 10,000-gallon propane tanker.

Suburbs Now Harbor For Elderly, Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Urban Institute has produced a study which it says explodes the myth that suburbs are mostly communities of young, white families who are affluent or middle class.

The study said the suburbs actually are growing older, and many elderly residents are neither affluent nor middle class but have pressing needs for financial assistance and social services.

This trend is likely to continue "because a large number of the pre-elderly (ages 55-64) will age in place in the suburbs," Michael Gutowski and Tracey Feild said in their report titled "The Graying of Suburbia." The institute is a non-profit research organization which concentrates its efforts on the problems of the cities.

Supreme Court Grants Broad Appeal Access

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today granted persons convicted of crimes in state courts broad new access to federal court review.

In a 5-3 ruling, the high court said federal judges may overturn state convictions if they decide that based on the evidence "no rational trier of fact could have found proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt."

The nation's highest court also handed the federal government's money managers a significant victory today in ruling that they may continue postponing the public release of certain sensitive information.

Voting 7 to 2, the justices said monthly recommendations made by the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee that influence interest rates and the availability of credit are exempt from the requirements for prompt disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act.

Today's decision reversed rulings by a federal trial judge and the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington. These courts had said the practice of postponing public release of the recommendations for one month violated the 1966 law passed by Congress to curtail government secrecy.

In a dissenting opinion in the appeals access ruling, Justice John Paul Stevens said the ruling may have little practical effect in overturning convictions. But he said the impact on the judicial system could be "seriously harmful" by forcing federal judges to review in detail a host of new cases.

Stevens sad the ruling means "the federal district courts are ... being directed simply to duplicate the reviewing function that is now being performed adequately by state appellate courts."

In the majority ruling, Justice Potter Stewart said the new standard of accessibility was dictated by a 1970 Supreme Court ruling.

In that case, the court said the due process guarantee of the Constitution assure that suspects cannot be convicted unless there is "proof beyond a reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute the crime."

Stewart said the 1970 ruling means federal judges must have broad powers to review state convictions.

But he said today's new standard does not mean the reviewing federal judge must ask himself if he would have returned a guilty verdict.

"Instead," Stewart said, "the relevant question is whether after viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact (either a judge or jury) could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt."

Stewart said that once there is a guilty conviction, any appeals court judge must weigh the evidence "in the light most favorable to the prosecution."

Stewart, seeking to minimize the impact of today's ruling, denied it would create a new class of cases for federal review. He noted that federal judges almost always can properly review state cases by reading a transcript of the trial, without having to call witnesses.

Prior to today's ruling, the standard for federal review of state convictions had required that there be "a total want of evidence" to support the charge on which the conviction was based.

In his dissent, Stevens said the ruling "will invite an unknown number of state prisoners to make sufficiency challenges that they would not have made" before. He said the decision "will surely impose countless additional hours of unproductive labor on federal judges and their assistants."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist joined in the dissent. Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. took no part in the decision.

The appeal on which the court acted today was brought by James A. Jackson, who is serving a 30-year term for first-degree murder in the Virginia State Penitentiary in the 1975 killing of a woman friend, Mrs. Mary Cole.

Jackson claimed he was too drunk to have committed the slaying with premeditation, although he admitted firing the shots that killed Mrs. Cole. He said he acted in self defense.

A federal judge threw out the conviction on the ground there was a lack of evidence showing premeditation. But the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last August reinstated the conviction, noting evidence that Jackson was sober enough to drive away after the shooting and end up several days later in Florida.

Advisers Recommend Gasoline Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief inflation fighters today accused many gasoline distributors of engaging in illegal price gouging, and recommended that the government consider rationing gasoline.

Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, also predicted that, mainly because of today's big increase in foreign oil prices, inflation "will be bumping at the double-digit level for the rest of this year."

On gasoline prices, Barry Bosworth, director of the council, told the House Government Operations consumer subcommittee that "on the basis of national data from the Consumer Price Index and the Producer Price Index, retail gasoline prices are going up far more rapidly than can be justified by refining costs."

Said Kahn: "I suspect as a private citizen that there are widespread violations at the retail level."

One legitimate solution to the energy problem would be mandatory rationing at the gasoline pumps, said Kahn. "It is something that ought not be to be rejected" out of hand, he said. "We really ought to consider rationing."

The House earlier this year rejected a plan that ould have given the president standby authority to ration gasoline.

"I feel that when the American people get mad enough about having to wait in line — and that is the inevitable consequence of price controls — they will be prepared to go to a system that limits consumption," Kahn said.

The council monitors gasoline prices at the refinery level to see if increases are in line with Carter's anti-inflation price standards. The Energy Department has the job of monitoring crude oil price increases under 8-year-old petroleum price controls.

Bosworth said the prices charged by many of the nation's small refiners are increasing "far more rapidly than can be justified by" increases in crude oil prices.

One problem, he conceded, is that some companies are buying refined gasoline on the world's uncontrolled "spot" markets at prices so high they would have to charge $1.75 a gallon at the pump.

Kahn and Bosworth said there is little the government can do about halting inflation until the nation reduces its reliance on imported oil, which accounts for about half of daily U.S. consumption.

"We cannot afford to continue to import crude oil as we have or it's going to drive us into bankruptcy," Bosworth said.

While it will be difficult to write a gasoline rationing plan that is completely fair, he said, "standing in a gas line is one form of rationing but it's inequitable as hell."

Launch Of Shuttle Delayed Until 1980

WASHINGTON (AP — The first launching of America's new manned spaceship, the shuttle, is being delayed several months, with only a 50-50 chance it can get off the ground by next July, the head of the space agency reported today.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had been working toward a Nov. 9 launch date, but for several weeks officials have said it would have to be put off until 1980 because of technical and manufacturing problems.

Robert A. Frosch, NASA administrator, said a complete review of the program has developed a new schedule that could result in a first launch by the end of next March.

"If I include some conservatism ... I would have to add some 10 to 12 weeks to that date," he said. "In summary, I feel we have one chance in five of launching by the end of the first quarter; I believe the chance of flight by the end of the second quarter of 1980 is 50-50."

The maiden flight could be delayed an additional six months, he said, if Congress does not approve an extra $220 million the agency has requested for fiscal 1980 to pay for costs incurred because of the shuttle's problems.

Frosch's estimate came in testimony to the House subcommittee on space science and applications.

Throughout its development the shuttle has encountered technical problems in several systems, including the main engine, thermal protection devices, fuel tank and electronics. The original March 1979 target for the first launch slipped until September and then until November.

Frosch emphasized most of the troubles have been resolved, adding, "I have found no reason to question the basic soundness of the shuttle concept or its technical design."

He also said the Carter administration "is fully committed to this program, with an emphasis on having an operational... capability as early as possible to meet citical space needs, particularly in the national security sector."

Both NASA and the Defense Department will operate the planned fleet of four or five shuttles for both civilian and military programs, with about 50 launches a year projected by 1985.

The spaceship is designed to take off like a rocket, fly like a spaceship and land back on Earth like an airliner.

Sex-Crazed Elephant Found With Trainer's Body

WOODLAND, Wash. (UPI) — A sex-crazed, six-ton bull elephant toyed with the battered body of his trainer Wednesday, keeping animal handlers at bay for eight hours while it repeatedly slammed the body to the ground.

It was not known if the trainer, H. Morgan Berry, 68, was killed by the elephant, named Tonga, or died of a heart attack and fell near the animal.

A second bull elephant named Tai broke out of Berry's 80-acre exotic animal farm at the same time and was at-large in the sparsely populated countryside for about half a day. He finally was sedated with tranquilizer darts and led groggily back to the compound, officials said.

"We are told this is the mating season for the bulls and they have sexual problems because of that," Cowlitz County Undersheriff Bill Stuart said, "so it is fairly dangerous" to handle the animals at the moment.

Berry was found beneath the chained Tonga at about 5 a.m., but the elephant would not let anyone near the body. Repeatedly the huge animal would pick up Berry's body in his trunk and slam it to the ground, Stuart said.

It wasn't until about 1 p.m. that handlers finally were able to distract Tonga long enough to retrieve the body.

"He plays with it," Stuart said of the elephant during the incident. "We could see that he had been trampled by the bull but we don't know if that is the cause of death."

Berry died 13 months after his partner, Eloise Berchtold, 52, slipped during a performance in Rock Forest, Quebec, and was crushed by another full-grown bull elephant.

A police sharpshooter finally killed that elephant, but spectators' cries panicked a second elephant who fled into a nearby forest. That 10-year-old elephant, raised by Berry from infancy, remained at bay in the forest until Berry flew in from the state of Washington and led it back to the circus grounds.

Deputies Search For Suspects

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies continued early today to look for a suspect in the Wednesday shooting death of Arthur Williams Jr., 48, of Route 1, Box 588.

Chief investigating deputy Ernest Rector said this morning several tips had been received in the case, but that the killing still was under investigation.

One of those tips is that Williams and another man had argued Monday over the victim's hog operation.

Shot five times in the head and once in the heart, Williams's body was found outside his home about three miles east of the city shortly after 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled the death a homicide, the county's seventh of the year.

An autopsy revealed that Williams suffered .22-caliber bullet wounds through the heart and in the chin, nose and right side of the face. Four spent .22-caliber shells were found next to the body.

O'Neill Says Busing Amendment Will Not Clear Congress' Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted today that although a majority of the House membership has endorsed a constitutional amendment limiting school busing, the proposal will not win the two-thirds vote needed to clear Congress.

O'Neill said the House is tentatively scheduled to vote on the amendment, proposed by Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, on July 23.

"Do I think it will reach the president's desk? The answer is no," the speaker told reporters. "I don't think it will get two-thirds of the House or two-thirds of the Senate."

The House Judiciary Committee has refused to hold hearings on the proposed amendment. In response, Mottl sought support from members of the House for his bid to bypass the committee and bring the question to a floor vote.

The signatures of a majority of members are needed on a discharge petition if the committee process is to be circumvented in the House. Mottl obtained enough signatures by late Wednesday.

The proposed amendment states that no student will be compelled to attend a public school other than the one nearest his or her home.

Mottl is from Cleveland, where a court-ordered busing plan for racial integration has been stayed pending U.S. Supreme Court rulings on similar desegregation orders in Columbus and Dayton, Ohio.

He contends that busing causes "white flight" to the suburbs and resegregation of city schools. "And there is not one shred of evidence that it has improved the quality of education for our children," he said.

Mottl's anti-busing crusade began shortly after his arrival in Congress in 1975.

The discharge petition will require two votes by House members — one on whether or not to set aside the committee process and one on the amendment itself.

Discharge petitions are seldom successful because of their disruption of established procedures for handling issues in the House.

The last proposed constitutional amendment brought directly to the House floor concerned school prayer. Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, was its sponsor. The amendment failed to get a two-thirds vote.

The Equal Rights Amendment was discharged from committee in 1970. Then-Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., was its sponsor. It cleared the House by a vote of 352-15.

Begin Defends Raids Against Guerrillas

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin today defended Israel's air raids against Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon and rejected American criticism of an Israeli attack Wednesda that turned into an air battle with Syrian warplanes, Israel Radio reported.

Begin said Israel's bombing of Palestinian positions and the downing of Syrian planes was a "legitimate act" by Israeli forces acting "for the sake of the national defense and the safety of our nation's citizens," the radio reported.

Begin met with Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan and air force chief Maj. Gen. David Ivri for a report on the aerial dogfights in which Israel claims its highly sophisticated U.S.-made F-15 Eagle fighters downed five Soviet-made MiG21s.

Syria admitted loosing four of its MiGs, far inferior to the F-1, but claimed to have downed two Israeli jets. Israel said all its planes returned safely.

Meanwhile, Israeli and Palestinian gunners traded rocket and artillery fire across the northern Israeli border. No injuries or damage were reported this morning when Soviet-made Katyusha rockets landed on Israeli settlements in the northern Galilee area.

In the Beirut today, government officials said Lebanon would seek stepped up U.S. pressure on Israel to avert further Syrian-Israeli air battles in the skies over Lebanon.

Officials said Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Salim El-Hoss decided upon the move after Syria warned that its air force has been ordered to intercept Israeli jets and defend Yasser Arafat's Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Syrian government officials disclosed the orders Wednesday night, officials said.

State Department officials Wednesday said the United States was "deeply concerned" by Israel's use of the F-15s, which were provided to Israel on the condition hey be used for self-defense only.

Begin's office announced that U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis tried to contact him Wednesday evening to give him a State Department note expressing U.S. concern over the use of American-made aircraft in Lebanon. Begin was attending year-end ceremonies for his granddaughter in a Tel Aviv school, and Lewis rushed to the school to meet him.

Begin's office said the American note called for "a more responsible attitude on the part of all involved, including the Palestinians" in the Israel-Palestinian-Syrian conflict in southern Lebanon.

Syria also was reported to have put its entire air efense system on alert after the dogfight and Arafat also ordered his estimated 12,000 guerrillas on an around-the-clock standby throughout Lebanon.

Syria maintains 22,000 troops in Lebanon to police a 31-month-old civil war armistice between Lebanese rightist Christians and an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinians.

Half Of Food Price Goes For Labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — About half the money consumers spend on an item at the supermarket goes for labor costs, according to a study by a food industry group.

The study, released Wednesday by the Grocery Manufacturers of America, said 51 percent of the price of a typical food or grocery item is due to direct and indirect labor costs. The United Food and Commercial Workers union took exception to the study, branding it as "totally biased" and exaggerated.

Gifted Teen-Agers Awe Reporter At Science Fair

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — We dissected worms and frogs a decade ago in Mr. Rodgers' required sophomore biology class at Paris High School. I don't know what they did in chemistry or physics — I dodged the first and dozed through the latter.

But 17-year-old Clarence Hebert Jr. of Berwick, La., one of 452 calculator-toting little g\u{fffd}ses at the 30th International Science and Engineering Fair, built himself an almost human, radio-controlled robot that mows the grass and vacuums the carpet.

Fifteen-year-old Maria Conover designed a revolutionary new sea wall for preventing beach erosion in her hometown of Neptune Beach, Fla. She's applied for a patent. She's also in the ninth grade. Depressing, huh?

David C. Lingelbach, 17, of Brookfield, Wis., determined the protostellar properties of Jupiter or something like that and 18-year-old Bradley Brown of Fort Lupton, Colo., built his own laser.

Mitchell A. Gallagher, 16, of Jamestown, N.D., created his own clouds in a homemade chamber, in search of a better method of cloud seeding.

Sixteen-year-old Andrew Seville of Dallastown, Pa., designed and built a roving, self-controlled Mars probe with photocells and all sorts of other neat stuff in it. Meanwhile, David John Lvorak, 17, of Terre Haute, Ind., came up with an improved artificial foot.

We collected insects — water bugs, June bugs and ladybugs — in Mrs. Topp's life-science class. William Kulp, 17, of Dallastown, Pa., however, examined the effects of exposure to a magnetic field on Drosophila — fruit flies, they tell me. Eighteen-year-old Fran Brown, of Jackson, Ala., investigated the effects of coffee, tea and cola on the web-spinning behavior of the spider.

Neill Germann, 15, of Van Wert, Ohio, asked the ever-popular question: "Could TTL-Linear logic be utilized effectively in a multicourse collision avoidance-attack computer?"

Frankly, Neill, I dunno.

And 18-year-old Leslie Glasgow of Jackson, Miss., did something with mathematical matrices and music. She patiently tried to explain it to me in the simplest terms she could muster. I listened blankly, feeling about as intelligent as the earthworm I once dissected.

"The projects get better each year," said 18-year-old Greg Judy of Forgan, Okla., a three-year veteran of the international science fairs who designed a system to use wind to convert water into hydrogen to operate autos and heat homes.

"The engineering is up tremendously. Of course, there are more energy projects than ever this year," he added.

Judy, headed for Oklahoma State University and an engineering career "of some sort," is a member of a graduating class of 21 in his tiny Oklahoma town of 500. His science teacher, a biology major who coaches the football team, teaches chemistry and physics on alternate years.

The crucial part of Judy's project is an electrolytic cell he had to design himself, with the help of college textbooks his teacher scrounged up for him.

The top two winners of the fair earn a trip to Sweden for the next presentation of the Nobel Prizes.

Dr. Edward Roy, chairman of the Trinity University geology department who has been involved with the science fairs for 12 years, said the junior Einsteins wound up — not surprisingly — as successful doctors, engineers and researchers.

"There has been an evolution of scientific though among young people," said Roy.

"They have access to ideas and equipment unthought of a decade ago," he added. "What is being taught in the eighth-grade science classes today wasn't taught in high-school classes 10 years ago."

Aha! So that's why I don't know how to construct or operate a tracking fresnel solar concentrator like 17-year-old Barry Eppler of Louisville, Ky., does.

Dallas Yellow Pages Rate Most Expensive

DALLAS (UPI) — Merchants, attorneys and anyone else who wants to be available to the public usually has to take the walk through the Yellow Pages. In Dallas it's an expensive trip.

The Dallas Yellow Pages advertising rates are the highest in the nation (Houston is second) because of the phone book's vast audience. Although Dallas' population is considerbly smaller, the Dallas Yellow Pages is more expensive than the Chicago, Los Angeles and Manhattan editions because it reaches approximately 80 percent of the available market, 1.2 million of the 1.5 million area population.

Houston's Yellow Pages have a 77.2 percent readership.

A half-page ad in the 1,780 page Dallas Yellow Pages costs $12,264 a year, compared to $10,968 in Houston, $4,742 in Los Angeles (where 32.6 percent of the population is reached), $9,936 in Chicago and $9,552 in Manhattan.

"Advertising rates are based on the value of the medium," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Joe McNamara. "That value is measured by the numbers of people reached, the frequency of readership and the credibility of the source.

"Too, in the case of Dallas, you have to realize that the overall advertising community is a vibrant one. The cost of ads in local newspapers and magazines and on television and radio reflect that, too," he said.

The philosophy behind Yellow Pages advertising is different from other media, said Gina Burks, a media director for Tracey-Locke, the largest advertising firm in Dallas. While an ad in a newspaper or a televison commercial can suggest a product, a consumer will not turn to the Yellow Pages until he has decided to buy.

"The Yellow Pages is good in its element but it doesn't take the place of other advertising media campaigns. It serves its purpose," Miss Burks said. "And if I had a local business I would advertise in the Yellow Pages.

Businessmen disagree on whether the high rates are worth the exposure in Dallas' Yellow Pages.

"I bought a display ad once and I got no response from it," said Bill Vaughn owner of a hair salon. "I went back to just a bold-face listing in the Yellow Pages and that's done just as well."

Bill Turnstall, owner of Wild Bill's toy train shop in Irving, recognizes the value of space in the Yellow Pages but finds the Dallas edition too expensive and does his advertising in the suburban telephone books.

"It's just so high I can't afford to pay their rates and stay in business," he said. "The Yellow Pages are the best and I get as much response from that as anything else, but I can't afford (the Dallas book)."

Severe Gas Shortages Exist In Urban Areas

By The Associated Press

Higher gasoline prices and continued tight supplies are indicated this weekend and for the July 4th holiday for Texas motorists.

Severe supply problems still exist in populous Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth despite the start of the odd-even rationing system but a weekly survey by the Texas Division of the American Automobile Association also indicates some interstate highway service stations at mid-points between major urban areas also are having problems in the closing days of the month.

"But the traveling motorists may have a better chance of finding gasoline than those who stay at home, particularly in Houston, Dallas, and Fort Worth," said the AAA's Wayne King.

Statewide, 71 percent of the stations surveyed reported plans to be open July 4.

Statewide prices ranged from a low of 73.9 cents a gallon for self-service regular at a Tenneco station in Houston to a high of 97.9 cents for full-service premium at a Texaco station in Waco. Although not among the stations surveyed, a West Side Houston station was selling diesel fuel at $1.18 a gallon.

Here is the expected availability of gasoline as indicated by the AAA survey of 415 stations:

AMARILLO — 36 stations surveyed, supplies much better than the statewide average, 53 percent closing by 8 p.m. weekdays, 25 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, and 61 percent closed on Sunday.

AUSTIN — 15 stations, supplies tightened the past week, 87 percent closing weeknights, by 6 p.m. Saturday, and Sunday.

BEAUMONT-PORT ARTHUR — 16 stations, supplies particularly tight at night with only 19 percent remaining open after 8 p.m. weekdays and 6 p.m. Saturday; about 37 percent plan to operate Sunday.

CORPUS CHRISTI — 19 stations, supplies much better than average, 58 percent closing by 8 p.m. weekdays and by 6 p.m. Saturday, 47 percent Sunday.

DALLAS — 38 stations, with Monday's start of the odd-even program curtailing the length of some lines but with 97 percent of the stations still closing by 8 p.m. weekdays, 100 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, and 95 percent on Sunday.

EL PASO — 30 stations, supplies better than average, 63 percent closing by 8 p.m. weeknights, 20 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, and 67 percent Sunday.

FORT WORTH — 28 stations, despite some odd-even relief, 93 percent closing by 8 p.m. weeknights and by 6 p.m. Saturday and 96 percent Sunday.

HOUSTON — 55 stations, some continuing to report record lines despite odd-even rationing, with 98 percent closing by 8 p.m. weeknights, 91 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday and 95 percent Sunday.

MCALLEN — 22 stations, 77 percent closing by 8 p.m. weeknights, 23 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, 73 percent Sunday.

MIDLAND-ODESSA — 15 stations, supplies better than average, 47 percent closing by 8 p.m. weekdays, only 7 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, and only 40 percent Sunday.

SAN ANTONIO — 40 stations, supplies still better than in other major urban areas despite a two-week decline, 63 percent closing by 8 p.m. weekdays and by 6 p.m. Saturday, 80 percent Sunday.

WACO — 15 stations, supplies much better than average, 47 percent closing by 8 p.m. weeknights, 40 percent by 6 p.m. Saturday, 33 percent Sunday.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAYS

Interstate 35 — Temple, Laredo, 24-hour availability.

Interstate 45 — Galveston, extremely tight situation similar to Houston, few stations open Sunday, one station closing by 9 a.m., another by 10 a.m.

Interstate 45 — Madisonville, normally a Dallas-Houston mid-point oasis, three stations out of gasoline, one selling diesel fuel only, but with operators expressing hope new supplies will be received by weekend.

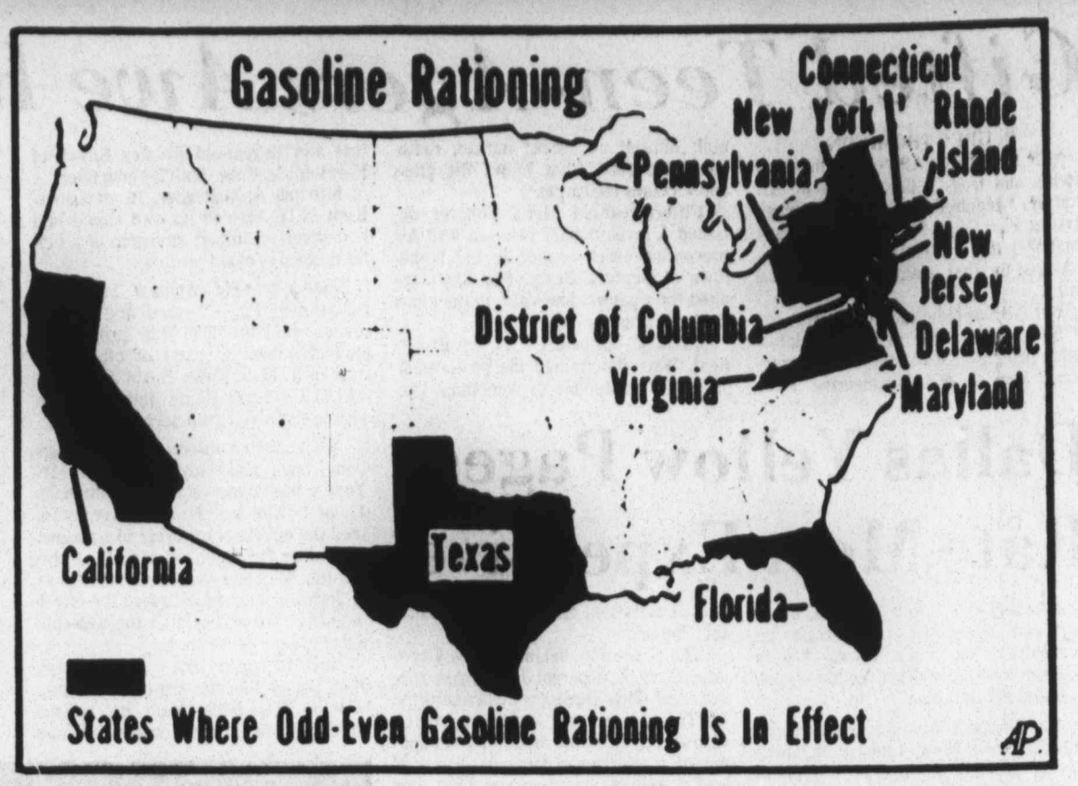
Other major highways — Big Bend, Brownwood, Uvalde, Wichita Falls, 24-hour availability.



Oil Industry Offers Encouraging News

By United Press International

The oil industry is offering a little encouraging news to gas thirsty motorists and harassed service station dealers. More gas will be available at the nation's pumps in July.

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, and Cities Service Co. announced Wednesday they would increase gasoline deliveries in July. Earlier this week, Mobil Oil Corp. and Atlantic Richfield Co. said they also would increase supplies slightly.

"June may well turn out to have been the tightest month for gasoline," said one oil industry analyst.

Ohio Standard said it expects its July gasoline supply to Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Kentucky to be 113 percent of what it was in the same month last year. The firm said its June supply was 98 percent of the June 1978 level.

In Chicago, Indiana Standard said its Amoco Oil Co. subsidiary will supply 16.7 million barrels of gasoline nationwide in July, or about 90 percent of the amount delivered in July 1978.

The oil company estimated that it will provide 15.4 million barrels of gasoline in June for roughly 80 percent of the yearearlier level.

"We expect that our gasoline deliveries will be about 5 percent higher in July than June," said spokesman Carl Meyerdirk.

Although Standard Indiana's allocations will rise from 80 percent in June to 90 percent in July, actual deliveries will not increase by that much since the amount of gasoline the company supplied in June and July 1978 varied.

"The Energy Department decided on June 21 to discontinue priority treatment for agriculture, which had been receiving 100 percent of its diesel fuel needs," Meyerdirk said.

"Since we no longer have to supply 100 percent, this has given us gallonage that we can spread over the entire market and allowed us to raise our distillate allocations to 90 percent of year-ago supplies in July, from 80 percent in June."

In Tulsa, Cities Service said it will allocate gasoline in July at 74 percent of the amount it delivered last year, compared with its June allocation figure of 68 percent.

The company said, however, that its actual June gasoline sales will amount to 73 percent of its June 1978 deliveries because of an additional 5 percent for state set-asides.

"We probably will do better for the rest of the year," said R.H. Chitwood, executive vice president of Cities Service.

Mobil said it would supply customers in July with 97 percent of the gasoline they received last July — up from 95 percent in May and June.

ARCO said that its total gasoline availability in July should be 97 percent of the amount it sold a year earlier, compared with about 94 percent in June.

But Continental Oil Co. said Tuesday it would be able to provide only 82 percent of the gasoline in July that it marketed a year ago and Phillips Petroleum Inc. said it expected its July gasoline volume to drop 19 percent below the amount it supplied in July last year.

Stations Ordered Open Sundays

HOUSTON (UPI) — Gulf Oil, reporting its gasoline allocations to customers would jump in July to 100 percent of last July's amount, has ordered 350 of its 800 company-operated stations in 26 states to remain open Sundays because of motorists' difficulties in buying gasoline on weekends.

Meanwhile, Exxon Co. USA Reports its refinery production in June averaged 1.35 million barrels daily, or about 85 percent of capacity.

Gulf said beginning July 1 it would order more than one-third of its stations in 26 states east of the Rockies to open Sundays, resulting in some weekday closings to preserve supplies. Except for priority customers, Gulf is now allocating gasoline to all of its customers, including its own stations, at 75 percent of their base period amounts, the company said Wednesday.

However, Gulf said it expected to supply about 3 percent more gasoline to its customers in July than it did in June, or virtually 100 percent of the amount supplied last July.

Earlier, Exxon had reported crude runs of 1.32 million barrels daily in May. Crude runs in June 1978 averaged 1.42 million barrels a day.

A spokesman said although a shortage of crude limited opportunities to increase production of gasoline and other products, Exxon hoped to maximize its refinery runs.

The spokesman said the company's inventories of crude, including oil in transit to the United States from overseas, totaled 49 million barrels as of June 22. The figure for late June 1978 was 52.8 million barrels.

Gasoline stocks as of June 22 were 19.5 million barrels, slightly higher than the 18.8 million in hand in June 1978.

The states affected by Gulf's Sunday opening plan include Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

DOE Office May List Violators

HOUSTON (AP) — Several Texas service stations were vandalized after they were publicly listed as violators of federal gas pricing rules, so the federal government stopped releasing such lists.

Now, however, the official in Dallas who made the policy in mid-June is reconsidering. Wayne Tucker, the enforcement officer for the Department of Energy's southwest regional office, said Wednesday he may begin releasing the names of flagrant violators.

Tucker's office handles price gouging compaints for a five-state area including Texas.

Two stations in San Antonio and Corpus Christi were vandalized, he said, after they were listed as violators earlier this month. Before that, all violators' names were released.

Other reasons he stopped the release of lists, he said, were that some stations listed had not been formally cited and that DOE staffers didn't have the time to keep accurate, up-to-date lists of offending stations.

The change he is considering would allow release of station names charging 4 or 5 cents a gallon more than allowed, second offender stations and maybe those requiring other services, such as a car wash, before customers are allowed to buy gas.

Citation for price gouging can bring a maximum fine of $2,000, but most penalties range between $100 and $250 in the southwest region.

Citizens may report price gouging to the DOE in Washington, D.C., using a toll-free number, 1-800-424-9246.

The office will not, however, handle complaints about the odd-even gas sales plan. The Federal Information Center in Houston said those calls should be referred to Gov. Bill Clements' office, using the toll-free number 1-800-252-9600.

Funny Hand Shadows Possible Anytime

By SHARI LEWIS

Sometimes you're lucky. Sometimes the light is just right for making funny hand shadows — the sun may be shining down on th pavement or the last slide has been pulled out of a slide projector.

You can get lucky any time you wish, if you have a big flashlight. Shine the light on a blank wall. As you get closer to the wall, the shadow will get smaller. Closer to the light, your shadow creature will become taller.

Everybody knows how to make a creepy, crawly shadow spider, but can you make a rooster? This hand shadow rooster will cockadoodledo for you even in the dead of night:

Clasp your hands together and fold your fingers over your linked fists. Looks like just a handful of fingers, doesn't it? Folded in this way, place your hands into that circle of light. Stick out your thumbs and, as you open and close the thumbs, say "Cockadoodledo." You'll see an outline of a crowing rooster, complete with a comb on his head.

You can even make a swan in the shadows, if you use your head:

Stick you right arm up to your forehead. Touch your fingers together and bend your wrist to form the swan's head. Place your left hand so that the fingers are sticking out past the back of your head. The top of your hair will form the swan's curved back.

With a little practice, you can have all of the shadow creatures you want right up on your wall, quick as a flashlight!

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: There are 12 legal federal public holidays, but only six are recognized by all states. Which are they?

ANSWER: New Year's Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Armistice (Veteran's) Days, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The other six are not shared by all states, and, oddly enough, Nevada celebrates Independence Day on July 3!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Can you set down four nines so as to make one hundred? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

GOP Interested In Lesser Races

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Republican Party leaders, gearing up for the 1980 presidential race, also are placing a top priority on electing governors and state legislators.

As the GOP wound up its summer meeting in Minneapolis, Republican National Chairman Bill Brock Tuesday exhorted GOP leaders to guard against redistricting that favors Democrats by making sure Republicans win elections from the grassroots up.

He said the "only assurance" the GOP has against the "contemptible disenfranchisement" of Republicans is for state parties to "get a Republican state Senate, get a Republican state House, get a Republican governor."

The national committee devoted most of its last session to plans for fending off what party leaders say was widespread Democratic gerrymandering after the 1970 census. The prospect is as bad or worse for the post-1980 reapportionment with Republicans controlling fewer than 20 legislatures or governorships.

Brock, who has decried the decadelong trend of Republican House candidates winning 8-10 fewer seats than they get in total vote percentage, said the RNC had an elaborate program to deal with the redistricting that will be required before the 1982 elections.

The plan would enlist legal, scientific and political experts to prevent gerrymandering — the redistricting of congressional districts that favor certain political parties or viewpoints.

Parents Demand 'Basic Schools'

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Schools within schools — a trend in public education — sharply contrast with blackboard jungles or classrooms in turmoil.

This is especially true of the "fundamental" or basic schools within some school systems in 21 states, all in response to parents demanding something more structured than regular public education.

These basic schools — some with dress codes and some stressing character training and patriotism — started making the scene in the early and middle '70s following development in the late '60s of another kind of alternative school.

That was the "open" or "freeform" school within public schools, launched in response to demand from other parents with different ideas: make the 3Rs and all else more child-centered and less structured than regular public schooling.

Other alternative schools — dubbed "magnet" schools — were set up to encourage desegregation and provide a smorgasbord: programs for gifted students, enrichment for youths with outstanding talents in the arts and still other super-instruction in skills providing readiness for jobs upon graduation.

The Council for Basic Education in Washington, D.C., an acting clearinghouse for information on alternative fundamental schools, says it would be a mistake to think of the schools in cookie-cutter fashion.

They have in common, however, an emphasis on academic achievement in teacher-centered classrooms. Some, with parental approval, even practice corporal punishment. Many have dress codes.

In its current "Bulletin," the Council makes these points about fundamental schools:

— Returns are only beginning to come in; but reports of high morale among students and teachers alike, of waiting lists, of good parent cooperation, and of very respectable achievement suggest that the alternative fundamental schools are making a successful demonstration of basic education.

— Perhaps most important and promising is their influence on other schools, which may be rather like that of a third party in politics. The fundamental schools are demonstrating partial solutions to the problems of low student morale and poor achievement, declining enrollment and closing schools, and even racial imbalance. Other schools may well emulate them. If this happens, according to CBE, standards for promotion and graduation will be raised in the nation's public schools and the need for a "third party" may go away.

The Council's inventory of fundamental schools operating within public school systems includes:

Colorado — Aurora, Jefferson County; Florida — Broward, Dade, Pasco, and Pinellas Counties.

Kansas — Wichita; Kentucky — Jefferson County; Maryland — Montgomery County; Massachusetts — Andover, Cambridge; Michigan —Flint, Grand Rapids; Minnesota — Minneapolis; Missouri — St. Louis; New Jersey — Montclair; North Carolina — Charlotte-Mechlenberg.

Ohio — Columbus, Cincinnati; Oregon — Eugene; Pennsylvania — Philadelphia; Texas — Baytown, Houston; Virginia — Arlington County; Wisconsin — Racine.

The council endorses no single method of instruction but regards the development of the alternative schools as healthy.

"This country's history includes the persistent belief that public education should offer diversity lest 'the system' become so lockstep and uniform that differences in skill, interest, and talent be dangerously neglected." the council noted.

Water Ban Lifted On Poisoned Lake

MILLINOCKET, Maine (AP) — A 12-day-old ban on drinking water was lifted at an isolated lake on the Allagash Wilderness Waterway, as state health officials announced toxic pesticides levels from a spray plane crash have diminished.

"People may now drink the water and eat the fish from the Eagle Lake aea," Donald C. Hoxie, director of the Division of Health Engineering, said Tuesday.

However, he recommended canoeists avoid drinking the water in the immediate area of Farm Island, where approximately 100 gallons of Sevin 4 Oil spilled June 14, until additional water samples are analyzed.

Advocates Of Renters' Tax Relief Turn Attention To Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rebuffed by the Internal Revenue Service, advocates of giving renters some of the income tax advantages now enjoyed by homeowners are turning their attention to Congress.

A slim chance of help from the IRS ended earlier this month when the agency issued a ruling formally rejecting a novel New York state law which would have allowed tenants to deduct from their federal returns the property taxes paid by their landlords.

Several bills are now pending before Congress to create such a deduction, or authorize the states to do so.

Rep. William Green, D-N.Y., sponsor of one of them, said, "The message implicit in all these bills is that the renters of our country deserve fairer tax treatment. It is obvious the Congress will have to take the lead if any relief for renters is to be achieved."

The major obstacle to approval of any of the bills is the potential drain on the federal treasury of close to $1 billion a year. But Green said this cost should be viewed in comparison to tax incentives already being provided homeowners.

He cited White House figures showing homeowners will claim $6.6 billion in federal deductions next year because of the local property taxes they pay and an additional $9 billion for mortgage interest.

Green said he has begun his drive to get similar tax breaks for renters considered in the House Ways and Means Committee by writing each of his colleagues who has a significant percentage of renters in his or her district.

Few areas approach the 90-plus percent of renting tenants in Green's "Silk Stocking" district on the East Side of Manhattan, but almost every district has at least a quarter of its families renting.

"We have to get together and convince Ways and Means that this is a good idea, both as a matter of simple fairness and as urban tax policy," Green said.

He said no further action was likely until next year, when the committee takes up the major tax bill of this Congress.

The New York law would have saved more than 3 million families about $130 million a year by making them subject — on paper at least — for the property taxes on their apartments. It would make landlords the tenants' "agents," responsible for collecting the taxes as part of the rent and passing the money along to the local government.

While the tenants gained a deduction, the landlords could continue to deduct the taxes from their income as a business expense.

The IRS found, however, that the New York law "does not impose on the renter any economic burden that did not exist prior to enactment"

As evidence, it said the landlord is ultimately responsible for paying taxes to the local government, even if the tenant fails to pay the rent which is supposed to include the tax.

"The renters tax merely divides the separately determined rental amount into a so-called rental payment and a so-called real property tax payment," the IRS said. "(It) does not establish that those payments are in fact real property tax payments."

House Gets Measure Prohibiting Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House will get a chance to act on a measure that would prohibit the Food and Drug Administration from banning the sugar substitute saccharin at least until June 30, 1981.

The House Commerce Committee approved the legislation Tuesday and sent it to the House floor. Two years ago, the FDA proposed banning saccharin as a food additive because of tests showing it may cause cancer in laboratory animals. But Congress quickly passed a bill ordering an 18-month moratorium on the FDA's proposal.

Public Views Recession As Mood, Not Numbers

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Recession, officially, is measured by the numbers. When output of goods and services declines for two successive quarters, say the keepers of the numbers, we have a recession.

Even before we tumble into the economic pits we use the numbers to guide us. Like a pilot flying on instruments, we seek guidance from the dials of production, jobs, sales, credit and the like.

This is fine for economists, and obviously necessary too, but for the mass of people a recession has come to mean not so much a numerical measurement as a mood, an attitude, a perception of times.

Ask almost anyone, for example, if the past four years have been economically good years or poor and they likely will choose the latter answer. And yet, the economy has been expanding rather than receeding.

"So what," they are likely to say, "my buying power hasn't expanded." And, were it their style to do so, they could illustrate their case with the same numbers used to show that times are good.

They could show that in the 12 months through March, straight-time wages rose 7.8 percent, but prices jumped 10.2 percent, resulting in a net loss of buying power. "Isn't that recession?" they ask.

They know that passbook savings earn less than 6 percent interest, and U.S. Savings Bonds no more than 6.5 percent if held a minimum of five years, while the inflation rate is 13.9 percent. A net loss, they say.

They know that inflation has shrunk their life insurance values, that they can't afford college for their children, that the house they aspired to is beyond their reach, and that they've had to retrench.

Retrenchment isn't expansion, they say. They know, because expansion has been the American tradition, part of our ethos, enscribed in history books. People were brought up on it: Everyone has the chance to do better. They know now that it isn't necessarily so.

Analysis

The mood of personal recession is measured by consumer polls. During the past four years, officially one of the longest continuous economic expansions in our history, consumer moods soured.

Throughout the period the growing sense of foreboding, of worry, of anger, of personal recession has been monitored as clearly as those other numbers claim to measure the continued strength of the economy.

Which attitude is real: The official one, that the economy has been strong and expanding, or the mood, based mainly on personal experience, that tells us the economy has been getting sicker all the time?

Each has it's use, but they cannot be interchanged. But inevitably they are. The official statistics, valuable to professionals, are too often offered to the public as evidence of their misperceptions.

If anything, that use can only make ordinary individuals more cynical. Who knows the condition of family finances better than the head of a family? Who knows better how that family interprets its condition?

And so we continue the dichotomy. Officially, the expansion continues — in that the nation's overall output of goods and services continues to grow.

But ask the next person you meet to assess his personal finances and he will tell you bluntly and simply, and quite accurately too, that the padding in his wallet has been shrinking for many months.

FDA Still Not Sure If Cyclamate Safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is the artificial sweetener cyclamate safe enough for the government to allow it back in the food supply?

Donald Kennedy, the outgoing head of the Food and Drug Administration, said Tuesday that he still can't answer that question despite six years of scientific studies and administrative proceedings. Cyclamate was widely used in diet soft drinks and foods until 1970 when it was banned by the FDA as a possible cancer-causing agent. Abbott Laboratories Inc., the sweetener's maker, appealed. But Kennedy said the scientific data needs further analysis. Abbott Vice President Richard W. Kasperson called the statement "yet one more delaying action."

Living Standard Could Suffer

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The combined effect of the dreaded I-R-S package, that is, inflation-recession-shortage, is likely to force Americans to cut back. But does a cutback mean a lowering of living standards?

No question: The I-R-S combine can do enormous damage to the economy, which is built on the assumption of plentiful supplies, an inspired consumer to want them, and a supply of money with which to buy them.

Analysis

But what happens to the economy, assuming it occurs on a limited time scale, is not the very same question as what happens to the consumer.

The elderly, the infirm, the poor — some living at the limits of their finances and requiring special transportation, foods and medicines — could very well suffer if special measures aren't taken.

So could the unskilled, the poorly skilled and those whose skills are temporarily not in demand. So could the indebted household, and there are millions of them, whose loan repayments are beyond them.

But for millions of Americans the answer is not clearcut: it isn't at all certain that for them a cutback means regressing to an earlier, less advanced standard. Inconvenience might be confused with suffering.

So far, however, the answer — even by some government officials — has been yes, individuals must lower their standards. But only a little reflection suggests that for many the demotion may be in mind only.

The explanation lies in attitudes, habits, excesses. In rich food, needless travel, wasted energy. In calorie-larded diets, over-powered cars, overheated homes. In short, it lies in the family garbage heap.

Waste is an almost natural consequence of the super-consumer society, one in which acquisition doesn't stop when the need is met but continues in search of needs that might not have been discovered yet.

Statistically, a preponderance of evidence indicates that Americans can indeed cut back without materially lowering their living standards. And that in so doing, they might improve the quality of their lives.

Is the car needed for the trip to church? Is it necessary to maintain the thermostat at 80 degrees in winter? Could the air conditioner be lowered? Is red meat necessary? And all those cigarettes?

For millions of Americans the answer is no. The discomfort index might conceivably rise, but in every instance medical authorities say the health of the persons involved might on average be expected to improve.

Don't confuse today's longevity with soft living, the medical people say. They maintain it's a consequence of better medicine. They even insist that the modern consumer society is medicine's enemy.

The issue then is whether cutbacks lower living standards, or raise them instead. Even before I-R-S, the debate was on, with people wondering if somehow the quality of life was deteriorating.

Diet provides one example. Food company studies show that many people are now rebelling against red meats, fats and sugars, the consumption of which has been associated with the growth of affluent societies.

Studies now show wealthy societies are demanding more fish, chicken, vegetables and grains, including pasta, foods long associated with less advanced societies. The trend is changing; people are reverting.

Conceivably, the same type of discovery might also be made in other areas of living. In a consumer society people will always want, but given time to reflect they might decide their priorities need changing.

Musing about life as the industrial revolution was gathering steam, William Wordsworth observed: "The world is too much with us; late and soon, getting and spending, we lay waste our powers."

It's conceivable that some Americans, given time to reflect, might come to the same verdict a century-and-a-half later.

EDUCATIONAL AMUSEMENT PARK — A group of 50 students from the New Approach Method day care center in Trenton, N.J., helped break ground this week for a $6 million educational amusement park that will feature 60 outdoor "play activities" when it opens next summer. "Sesame Place" park, as it will be known, will be aimed at children ages 3 through 12 and is a joint project of Children's Television Workshop and Busch Gardens. (AP Laserphoto)

'Sesame Place' Billed As Educational Park

LANGHORNE, Pa. (AP) — A $6 million amusement park being built on 15 acres here will not feature rides, shooting galleries or penny arcades — the people of Sesame Street don't believe in them.

"Sesame Place" park is being billed as the nation's first educational amusement park. Construction of the park began this week.

The park is aimed at children ages 3 through 12. It is a joint project of the folks who gave you television's "Sesame Street," Children's Television Workshop, and Busch Gardens, a division of Anheuser-Busch Inc.

"There won't be any arcade games like wars or shooting matches, no speedways or violent races," said the workshop's Fran Kaufman. But he said the place will be fun — educational and fun.

Sixty outdoor "play activities" are promised for when it opens next summer, like climbing and crawling through artificial caves and swamps. The outdoor play area will be surrounded by an indoor science and game pavilion featuring electronic games.

Busch Gardens, which runs family entertainment parks in Tampa, Fla., and Williamsburg, Va., will operate Sesame Place.

Daily attendance of 7,500 is anticipated.

A group of 50 young students from the New Approach Method day care center in Trenton, N.J., were invited to groundbreaking ceremonies, which were dubbed "untraditional" due to an absence of speechmaking.

Digging dirt was the order of the day. With a colorful hot-air balloom hovering overhead, children decked out in bright yellow Sesame Place T-shirts happily swung shovels, heaping dirt everywhere — including on each other.

"Hello, Bert," yelled Tiffany Peterson of Willingboro, N.J., "you're my favorite."

Bert did not reply.

Daughter Gets Jail Sentence

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — A 19-year-old girl who dipped into her parents' savings to buy a dozen expensive cars and trucks for herself and a $300 wristwatch for a car salesman will begin serving a 60-day jail sentence Friday.

District Court Judge Rex Scott imposed the sentence on Sandra L. Smart after accepting her guilty plea to a charge of second-degree forgery. He ordered the jail term after giving her a deferred two-year sentence.

Using $32,000 of her parents' savings, Miss Smart bought the vehicles to attract attention because she considered herself overweight and unattractive, police said. Among the vehicles purchased were a Jaguar, a pickup truck with camper, a customized van and two Lincoln Continentals.

The young woman also apparently spent some of the money on gifts.

The girl's mother, meanwhile, Wilma Jean Smart, is suing Midland Federal Savings for allowing her daughter to withdraw $13,609 from a savings account without permission. The savings and loan, in turn, is suing the girl and the Colorado National Bank, which allegedly cashed the checks.

Millions Of Bees Die; Keepers Cite Pesticide

DETROIT (AP) — Beekeepers in the heart of Michigan's cherry-growing country are blaming a chemical pesticide for the death of millions of their honeybees.

Farmers say the Grand Traverse Bay-area cherry crop is threatened because bees are needed to pollinate the blossoms, but agricultural experts said no danger is posed to humans.

"Dead bees are piled up an inch deep on the ground in front of some hives," Arnold Hilbert, a beekeeper near Traverse City said Monday.

Hilbert told the Detroit Free Press he lost 165 hives worth $33,000 after cherry trees in the area were sprayed with a pesticide called Penncap-M. A spokeswoman for the manufacturer of the chemical, Pennwalt Chemical Co. of Philadephia, said there was no proof Penncap-M was to blame for the bee deaths.

Elderly Kansas Man Proficient At Collecting Recyclable Cans

WELLINGTON, Kan. (AP) — While neighbors cut their wheat crops, Roy Whitney has a one-man harvest of his own.

But it's beer cans, not grain, that he brings in.

Whitney, who celebrated his 70th birthday in June, is so proficient at collecting the recyclable aluminum cans that a beer distributor in Wichita sends trucks 30 miles to Wellington to pick up his load.

"Roy is the only person we do this for. He's become kind of an independent recycler all by himself," said Ed Spiker, operations manager for Coors of Kansas.

In one recent week, the salty Kansan turned over 8,930 pounds of cans that, at 20 cents a pound, brought him $1,786. In addition, he collected about 4,000 bottles worth a penny apiece.

"It keeps the old wolf away from the door," Whitney said. "The last time I turned some in, I paid off the mortgage on the house and bought me a new pair of overalls and a six-pack of beer."

It required two separate trips by an 18-wheel tractor-trailer to carry away the cans and bottles, which were stored in the backyard of Whitney's home.

Whitney's last harvest was nearly three years ago, when he turned in 8,440 pounds of cans. But then the going rate was 15 cents a pound, and the load brought him $1,266.

Whitney conceded collecting the cans is dirty and tedious work, but noted "there's no money invested. It just gives me something to look forward to — get up in the morning and make the rounds. Otherwise, I'd just sit around."

His rounds include a local drive-in theater and bins behind taverns. He might find a bonanza of cans along city streets. But a good portion of the cans come from friends who know of his interest.

Whitney got so much local publicity when he turned in his first batch that others now are searching out the aluminum cans themselves.

"I've got a lot of competition now, one of them a good buddy of mine," he said. "And theres a lot of younger people picking them up to raise money."

With a little prodding, Whitney will admit that he has yielded business in the north side of town to his friend.

With the money from his latest sale, Whitney said he will make improvements on his house and fix up his pickup truck. He and his wife live on Social Security.

Real Charlie Brown Pleased To Lend Name To Comic Strip

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Good Grief! The real Charlie Brown says life has both good and grief, highs and lows, bright moments and dark periods.

The name of Charlie Francis Brown, now 53 and retired, has been used for nearly 30 years by his long-time artist friend, Charles Schulz, creator of the "Peanuts" comic strip.

Brown, a bachelor, lives in a comfortable suburban home with his dog "McGregor," a German shepherd — not a beagle.

Like his cartoon namesake, Brown says he is an intense person. "My life has been a Charlie Brown life.

"Like Charlie Brown, when things go wrong, I go to bed and pull the covers up over my head," he says. "Sometimes I've stayed in bed for three days so I didn't have to face the world."

Although Brown sees similarities between himself and the comic strip character, Schulz says he used only Brown's name, nothing else.

"I used nothing of his personality in the strip," says Schulz, who now lives and works in Santa Rosa, Calif. "I think it would be deplorable to build on your friends that way. I would not take a chance on offending a close friend."

Brown and Schulz worked together in the early 1950s as art teachers here. Brown says he shared with Schulz some of his feelings about life.

One day, Brown recalls, Schulz asked if he could use his name for a comic character he had created, an intensend rather morose boy. Brown says he wanted to see what the character looked like, and was disappointed when Schulz showed him the drawing.

"Can't you make him look a little more like Steve Canyon or Superman?" Brown says he asked the cartoonist.

"But I wasn't the Jack Armstrong type," Brown reflects. "I wanted to be a jock, the all-American boy, but I wasn't. I'm a 'Charlie' and not a 'Chuck.'"

After working as an art director for Catholic youth publications in Chicago in the 1940s, Brown returned to Minneapolis and was employed at the Hennepin County Detention Center, supervising work with erring juveniles.

Brown retired about three years ago after doctors diagnosed cancer and said he would die in three or four months if he didn't have surgery. He underwent three operations, one for the removal of a kidney. "I feel that I have been healed, by the surgery and by my prayers," he said.

He is currently seeking a publisher for his autobiography, "Me and Charlie Brown," which he says will have forewords by Schulz and by two artist friends who, like Brown, allowed Schulz the use of their names for "Peanuts" characters.

Freida Rich is an art teacher in Minneapolis and, like "Freida with the naturally curly hair," has curly hair. The name of Linus Maurer, a cartoonist in California, went to Charlie Brown's thumb-sucking friend, "Linus."

China's Trade Up In 1977

Tokyo (AP) — China's foreign trade last year jumped 30 percent over 1977 figures, with imports outstripping exports, the official chinese news agency Xinhua (Hsinhua) reported Wednesday.

Imports grew twice as fast as exports, the agency said, bringing China's foreign trade deficit to the equivalent of $1.2 billion. Imports and exports totalled $22.9 billion, according to a report issued by the Chinese statistical Imports jumped 40 percent, to $12 billion, while exports increased by 20 percent to $10.8 billion, Xinhua said.

However, the agency reported a slight surplus in overall foreign exchange for 1978. Foreign exchange earnings, boosted by non-trading income, exceeded expenditures by close to $1.3 billion.

Sales of durable consumer goods such as bicycles, television sets and watches grew rapidly compared to foodstuffs and clothing, the agency reported.

Housing Authority Gives CETA Workers Chance

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sitting around the large work table, the Community Center workers for the Lubbock Housing Authority stare nervously at each other. Talking about unemployment is not always a pleasant subject — especially if it's your own.

But these people have traded the stigma of unemployment for what may be another kind of stigma altogether. The Housing Authority placed them in their expanded community center program with funds from the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — CETA.

CETA workers have gotten a bad name in the past year or so. Charges of fiscal irresponsibility and general mismanagement of programs has left a sour taste in many taxpayers' mouths, who eventually foot the bill for the program.

Some of the people actually employed by the program have been rather confused by the bad publicity. For people who may not have worked for several years, getting a job of any kind is not something you criticize.

Most of the community center's CETA workers were recruited; that is, Social Services Director Greta Wood applied to CETA to create their positions after several Greenfair Manor residents (where the community center is located) inquired about working there.

Cynthia Wilson is a good example of how the others got into the CETA program. Now 21, she was 19 when she got on Welfare to support the baby she was expecting.

"I want to make it," she explained. "I know you've got to get a job."

Miss Wilson says she had tried before to get a job, but was always told that she needed experience. She was faced with the age-old problem of how to get experience when you can't get hired in the first place. And her incomplete high school education didn't help.

She still lives in Greenfair. She even considered joining the Air Force to support herself, though it would have meant giving up her baby for adoption or foster care. She said she used to look at the way other people were able to take care of their kids and wish she was able to do the same.

But on $86 a month in welfare, the choices were limited.

Gloria Ransom got quick agreement from others sitting around the table when she said she got "tired of counting stray dogs wandering into the projects." The boredom of unemployment can apparently be as stifling as the obvious shortage of money.

Mrs. Ransom was forced to get off welfare when she turned 18. She had been collecting off her mother's account and federal regulations prohibited her from drawing support from her mother's monthly check after she reached legal age.

She had worked when she was younger, selling clothes at a South Plains Mall department store. She described the problems involved with getting to and from work without a car, as well as the frustrations of the job itself. She eventually lost her job.

Eventually it was her mother who approached Mrs. Wood about the prospects of a job at the community center. Mrs. Wood by that time had had other inquiries and referred Gloria directly to CETA.

The paperwork involved in placement with CETA is admittedly a roadblock for many applicants. Mrs. Ransom said many people just aren't patient enough to go through the channels to determine eligibility.

"Anywhere you go they're going to have to tell you to wait," she said. She talked about the problems which occur when people expect an instant job.

Angelina Santibanez and Dorothy Thomas also have been recently hired through CETA for the community center. Both have children and their CETA applications included stipulations that they be able to work around their kids' needs.

Mrs. Thomas explained that she had heard about the charges against the CETA programs — including the charge that time cards had been changed to pay employees for work they hadn't done.

But she says she hasn't had any problems with the program and says none of the other community center workers has ever received pay for work they didn't do.

Thomas Sanders has been with the CETA program for about a year, now. He previously worked in a drug abuse youth center but lost his job when the program was cancelled due to lack of funding.

As a community center recreation specialist, he organizes programs for both Greenfair Manor and Hub Homes. The programs cover all age groups.

But in addition to his on-site work at the community center, Sanders works as a public relations man for the housing authority — seeking funding from agencies and community groups for the community center's programs.

The CETA jobs are not permanent for any of the community center workers. When Mrs. Woods applied for the money to create their positions, she asked for "sustaining slots". The participant is guaranteed funding for the job for a year and a half, but CETA hopes the worker will find another job before the time limit is up.

And the job is not guaranteed if the worker's services are lacking. It's supposed to be a normal employer-employee relationship, even though the worker's beginning skills may be deficient.

Kerry Zubras, a CETA counselor for the community center workers, hopes the housing authority will be able to find funding to keep the jobs now paid for by CETA. But Social Services Director Mrs. Wood stresses that the jobs are training positions. Four of the workers currently are enrolled in a Texas Tech Adult Learning Center program to strengthen their office skills.

GETTING BETTER — When Gloria Ransom and Mary Flores were hired to work in the Lubbock Housing Authority's Community Center, it was acknowledged that their office skills might be limited to begin with. But their status as CETA workers puts them in a training position as well as the traditional employee role. Mrs. Ransom and Mrs. Flores are seen here at work, and according to Social Services Director Greta Wood — their skills are improving. (Staff photo by Milton Adams)

YARD DETAIL — Dorothy Thomas' job with the Lubbock Housing Authority's community center includes a lot of odd jobs. She's seen here directing a group of neighborhood kids to do some clean-up work on the grounds of Greenfair Manor. But her real training is in expanded nutrition — and she hopes to get a job in that capacity after she finishes her CETA training. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

FEW BLACK LAWYERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Only 12, or 0.3 percent, of the 3,500 partners in the nation's top law firms are black, according to a survey in the current issue of the National Law Journal. Blacks make up about 2 percent of the nation's lawyers. However, the survey found that 2.5 percent, or 136, of the nearly 5,500 associates in the 50 firms are black.

Dog Becomes Fixture At Station

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Four days a week, only minutes before the passenger trains arrive, Duke trots into the railway station, tail awag. It's snack time.

He strolls among the passengers, accepts some friendly greetings and some petting, then heads for the dining car and barks for the handout that has become his due.

The dining cars always have a tidbit for him.

"He always shows up just a few minutes before the train arrives," said a woman baggage handler at the station.

"He knows which way the train is heading, too. When it's going west, he always trots right to that end of the line and waits."

Duke's owner, Mary Lee Turner, says it was Duke's interest in people that first drew him to the station, which is not far from his home. Then he discovered that dining cars have both people and food, and he has been a faithful train greeter ever since.

"He knows the schedule better than I do," Miss Turner said.

Duke also know the difference between freight trains, which have no dining cars, and passenger trains, which do. He doesn't greet freights.

The 9-year-old beagle was something of a hobo in his early days and may have perfected his bumming techniques on excursions around town.

"He just traveled," Miss Turner said. "He had a collar with his name on it and people would find him and bring him home."

Texans Pushing For Mild 'Windfall Profits' Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) -Some Texas congressmen who would prefer no "windfall profits" tax at all will be pushing today for the mildest version available, an estimated $23.9 billion bite on the extra profits decontrol is expected to bring the oil companies from 1980 to 1984.

"It only is attractive in a relative sense — that it is a lesser evil than what the committee has passed out. Hopefully the Senate will have better judgment," U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, said Wednesday.

The more votes for the probable losing side they can muster as a show of strength, opponents of a windfall tax argue, the easier it will be for the tax to be decreased when it reaches the Senate.

"It appears to me that we'll end up with some sort of a tax. This seems very strange to me that we are preventing the ability to produce more oil which we so desperately need," Archer said.

The Houston congressman, and others in the normally pro-oil business Texas delegation, maintain the tax will discourage the independent oil producers who make the most discoveries from looking for new sources.

The House will be voting on a bill to tax the profits which President Carter's phased decontrol of domestic production is expected to bring the oil companies. The main version would raise $29.1 billion from the $65 billion oil companies are expected to receive as a result of decontrol from 1980 to 1984.

Existing state and federal taxes would take $22.9 billion, leaving about $13 billion of the new revenue for the companies.

U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, disagreed with the prevailing state delegation view. He said he planned to vote for the stiffer tax as a way to compensate for the inflated costs which decontrol will bring.

He said he would have preferred price controls to stay in place until 1981 during this inflationary period, thus creating no windfall profits to tax.

"I'm really unhappy about the whole approach. We really ought to be talking about inflation, rather than decontrol and taxation. Considering what has been done, some of this inflated cost ought to be recouped and in some ways used for the results of inflation," he said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, said the mail a month ago from his district ran 3-2 for a windfall profits tax. "The majority of my mail now is running clearly against the windfall profits tax. It has shifted clearly, to about 9-1," he said.

The Stamford congressman predicted the House vote would be closer than earlier predictions for a windfall profits landslide had indicated.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, said he was encouraged by a close vote Tuesday on his unsuccessful bid to exempt independent producers from the windfall profits tax.

The House Rules Committee voted not to allow the amendment to be proposed during floor debate, but the tally was 7-7.

"I'm still optimistic because we came so close," Hance, of Lubbock, said. "Now, perhaps, the Senate can still exempt the independents and it will be settled in a conference committee which would come to a full House vote."

Some kind of windfall profits tax would be in order for a brief period, but the tax should be as lenient as possible to retain the incentive to explore, said U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas.

"If you make the tax rate too steep, then you're not going to be able to encourage them to go out and get more," he said.

Guardsmen Protect Oil Tank Truckers

By The Associated Press

National Guardsmen armed with bayonet-tipped rifles escorted tank trucks from oil terminals in North Carolina today as independent haulers warned of a renewed attempt to block fuel deliveries in Alabama.

Truckers in Iowa and Tennessee began returning to work Wednesday as Maine drivers camped out at a National Guard Armory in Augusta to await Gov. Joseph Brennan's return from a meeting in Canada.

There were renewed incidents of violence, with firebombs and sniper shootings aimed at trucks on the road. Thousands of nails were dumped Wednesday on Interstate 5, one of California's busiest truck routes, but they were quickly cleaned up and tire damage was reported to be minimal.

Shots from high-powered rifles were fired at two trucks on U.S. 301 near Cecilton, Md., and one driver suffered superficial wounds. Three trucks were fired upon in widely scattered areas of Alabama Wednesday night and early today, but no one was hurt. And nails were scattered along interstate highways 85 and 77 in North Carolina.

Food stocks generally remained adequate at supermarkets in the Midwest and East, but grocers predicted higher prices and shortages within days. Some meat and poultry wholesalers in New York closed early due to reduced supplies.

Independent drivers have been on strike for three weeks in protest of high diesel fuel prices, the 55 mph speed limit and weight limits that vary from state to state.

On Wednesday, Vice President Walter Mondale asked independent truckers to "get the country moving again." He warned that the strike would soon disrupt the nation's economy and promised safe passage for drivers who wanted to return to work.

"The action by some truckers is putting jobs in jeopardy and threatening food shortages and the economy in general at a moment when we can least afford it," he said.

Presidential assistant Jack Watson said the federal government was working with state officials to arrange "safe corridors of movement on major arteries." However, he said, the use of federal troops would be "an absolutely last resort."

While a lack of trucks has forced some farmers to plow rotting crops back into the ground, targets in the often-violent shutdown primarily have been fuel terminals. North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt put the National Guard on alert Wednesday to protect terminals.

"Much of the truckers' peaceful leadership has been repudiated and threats of violence to life and property have increased at petroleum terminals in Greensboro and Charlotte," he said. "They are threatening the safety and welfare of the people of North Carolina, which it is my sworn duty to protect."

Asked if he thought the presence of guardsmen could lead to violence, he said, "That's what I'm afraid of. Anytime you get this large a group doing something like this to try to keep from starving, it's more or less like pouring gasoline on the fire."

In Illinois, 50 National Guardsmen were ordered to patrol two truck routes where violence has flared. Two Illinois men were arrested Wednesday and charged with armed violence for three sniping incidents in which one trucker was injured by flying glass.

The Independent Truckers Association of Alabama voted Wednesday to resume picketing at gasoline and diesel fuel terminals.

"We're intending to stop all diesel and gasoline deliveries in Alabama except for emergency use," said ITAA President David Hammonds. Word of the pledge touched off panic gasoline buying in Huntsville, where lines had dwindled since the weekend.

SIGNS QUESTIONED — Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton has questioned the legality of threatening signs such as these that greet drivers at a fuel distribution terminal at North Little Rock. He says the signs may go beyond free speech. (AP Laserphoto) them. He added that other employees are considered just as valuable, but that the institution must keep those employees who are most flexible.

Recruiting efforts for RNs have been slowed, he said, but not stopped. He explained with a natural turnover rate of 37 percent for RNs — which probably will increase with the turmoil at the hospital — stopping recruiting efforts would mean being understaffed for the number of beds the hospital plans to keep open.

"I feel really sad that some of the people who are not RNs will be affected," Bosworth said. He added that "there is a great deal of feeling in the place" but doesn't know if the institution has been open long enough to create the kind of team effort needed at this time.

"Even if I'm not here, they're still going to do their work."

Bosworth has refused to comment on the actions leading to his dismissal, referring all questions to the board of managers. He has not indicated any plans for the immediate future, but has expressed concern over an anticipated drop in employee morale.

In recent months, he said he has met with workers in various departments and had planned to continue the meetings on a cyclical basis to keep employees briefed on the hospital's financial situation — which includes the possibility of a shutdown in future months if extra funding does not turn up.

He said that, obviously, he wouldn't be here to brief the employees, but added the employees were much more important to the operation of the hospital than the executive director.

Bosworth had no specific words for his successor, but stressed he still believes Health Sciences to have a great deal of potential as both a medical learning center and hospital.

"I'm pleased to have been a part of it for as long as I have been," he said.

Woman Dies In Shooting

county jail on a count of voluntary manslaughter.

A spokesman for the Lubbock County District Attorney's Office said the case would be presented at the next grand jury, scheduled to meet the second week in July.

Belvin Thomas, 43, of 3318 E. 15th Place suffered stab wounds in the chest and arm during the altercation, which erupted about 12:15 a.m. He was listed in serious condition this morning at St. Mary's Hospital.

When police arrived at the East Second Street apartment they found Miss Parson lying in the driveway where a large group of people had gathered.

Reports indicate the shooting suspect stepped from the crowd wielding a .22-caliber blue steel revolver, handed the weapon to police and said she shot the victim, adding, "They was fighting and I shot her."

Officers entered the apartment and found Thomas in a bedroom suffering multiple stab wounds.

Several witnesses said Thomas had gone to the residence to talk to the suspect and was confronted by Miss Parson in the driveway, where the two began arguing.

Thomas reportedly was backing a vehicle out of the driveway when Miss Parson walked up and said to the man, "Get out of the car, I told you not to bring the car over here. I don't care what you are or where you go, I told you not to bring the car over here."

Witnesses said the couple had argued several minutes when Miss Parson displayed a knife and stabbed Thomas. The man and woman were pulled apart and Thomas was taken into the apartment, according to several witnesses.

The suspect told police she was attending to the stabbed man when his assailant broke into the residence wielding the pistol.

Reports indicate the two women wrestled in the bedroom and Miss Parson dropped the gun. The 34-year-old female suspect told police Miss Parson picked up an ash tray stand and was about to strike Thomas — who was lying on the bed — when she shot her with the revolver.

The shooting victim then was taken outside and placed on the driveway where police found her.

The woman who reportedly fired the fatal shot remained in the county jail late this morning.

Miss Parson's body was taken to South Plains Funeral Home, where services were pending this morning.

NAME PROPOSED

WASHINGTON (AP) -A Texas congressman has proposed naming the San Antonio Federal Office Building after slain U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. The federal judge was killed by a shotgun blast May 29 as he left his apartment, and the search for the killer continues. U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler introduced the bill Tuesday to rename the structure the John H. Wood Jr. Building.

erating state-created courts rather than counties having to pay increasing costs of the criminal justice system with property tax revenues.

Shaw and commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou expressed support for the request, which would cost a minimum of about $168,000, including construction, from the first year of operation.

The proposal was discussed but not acted on.

In other business, the commissioners approved a South Plains Association of Government's (SPAG) proposal for an area-wide economic development district to bring federal funding into underdeveloped South Plains counties for their economic advancement.

Giles Dalby of Post, a SPAG board member, made a presentation on the proposal at the request of commissioner Coy Biggs, who said Monday that he wanted more information about it.

go from $3.75 to $5.25; and business service, from $14 to $18.65 a month.

One-party measured residential service — which allows 25 calls per month with each call above that number billed at 25 cents — would go from $3.95 to $5.50.

Telephone wiring and installation costs would go from a maximum of $44.50 to a maximum of $54.30, Goodwin said. However, he noted that persons who already have telephone wiring and jacks in their houses or apartments, and who could pick up their phones at Bell's phone center, still could get telephone installation for the current $24.25 charge.

Long distance and Directory Assistance calls will not be affected by the proposed rate increase, Goodwin said. Lubbock's Directory Assistance allowance of 10 requests per month is one of the largest in the state, he said. Elsewhere, the allotment is five calls, according to Goodwin.

Bell's rate increase package also includes higher prices for PBX equipment, Centrex service (like that at Texas Tech University) and key telephones.

Of the $145.2 million projected statewide revenue gain, $105 million would come from raising the price of local service — that is, basic rates for home and business telephones.

"Continuing growth and inflation leave us no choice but to ask for increased rates," said Doyle Rogers, the company's vice president for Texas.

Rogers said Bell really needs $242.9 million in new revenue but held down its request because of President Carter's price guidelines.

He said the request would provide Bell a 6.09 percent average statewide increase in Texas revenue.

Consumers, however, would feel a greater percentage increase than that.

The $1.55 requested hike in one-party residential telephone rates would amount to 19.4 percent in Houston, 20.6 percent in Dallas, 22.1 percent in Fort Worth and San Antonio, 23.8 percent in Austin, 25.8 percent in Lubbock, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Waco and Edinburg; and 26.9 percent in Abilene, Texas City, Galveston, Wichita Falls and Brownsville.

In the smallest class of cities — such places as Brackettville, Cameron, Marfa, San Diego and Refugio — the $1.55 increase would amount to a 32.6 percent increase.

The two-party residential rate also would increase also — ranging from $1.30 in the smallest exchanges to $1.80 in the largest.

Rates for one-party business telephones would increase $4.65 percent per month.

a sincere desire to serve the community as a whole rather than a specific interest or pressure group"; and has to "be willing to provide today's kind of education for today's children."

Rigsby said that "today's education" would be "the diversification we need along with the education. We have to expose the child to the kind of society and the kind of economics we have."

He said he accepted the position because, "We have a good school system. I want to continue that good system and improve it also."

He said he believes obtaining a large budget for the school district is a priority for the board. "The key to public jobs is budget and money," said Rigsby. "It's all a matter of how much money we can get."

Rigsby also said he believes his term on the Tax Board of Equalization will benefit him during his school board term.

"I think I have a grasp of what the other side of the tax issue is in working with the board and the people who come before the board," said Rigsby. "I think I have a feel for where the monies come from."

He said he would consider running for a board seat when his interim term expires in the spring, but said making a definite commitment now would be premature.

Rigsby, 49, is a Texas Tech University graduate who has been in Lubbock since 1950. He served on the city council from 1968-1972 and currently owns an insurance agency. Rigsby and his wife, Jan, have six children.

In other business, the board unanimously named Otis "Red" Simmons and Med Hunt to the Tax Equalization Board as replacements for Roy Middleton and Virginia Brackett, who resigned.

Trustees will gather for their regular monthly meeting at 7:15 a.m. Friday in the assembly room of the Administration Building, 1628 19th St.

OPEC

tween $23 to $27 per 42-gallon barrel from $14.55.

The 10 other nations will be able to add surcharges to the benchmark price to bring it to as much as $20. As always, additional surcharges could be tacked on to take into account differences in the quality of their oils.

The increases in the base price are the largest since 1974, when prices quadrupled during the Arab oil embargo. Analysts estimate that retail prices of gasoline and heating oil in the United States rise a penny per gallon for each 5 percent rise in the base price of crude oil. But because the surcharges in the past three months have raised the average price of OPEC oil to $17, experts say the rise at the gas pump and on heating bills will work out to about 4 cents a gallon.

The OPEC oil ministers will meet again in Caracas, Venezuela, in December. But delegates would not rule out the possibility of another meeting before that if market conditions changed.

The price structure approved by OPEC represents a little something for each of the cartel's 13 members. Saudi Arabia got the $18 price it wanted, but had to give some ground to more radical members.

In doing so, however, the Saudis did not, as some experts had predicted, make any immediate change in their production policy. There had been speculation before the meeting that Saudi Arabia would raise its production, alleviating the world oil shortage and undermining higher OPEC prices, if it felt the price decided by the cartel was too high.

Carter Opens Door To Refugees

France, Britain, Germany, Canada and Italy.

A senior American official, who asked not to be named, told reporters "I think we're clearly tending in the direction of a compromise."

He said he expects the summit to develop specific import ceilings for the seven countries for the balance of this year and all of 1980. In addition, he said, there was sentiment for setting import goals for 1985 as well.

But he emphasized that many technical details had to be resolved before the summit adjourns Friday afternoon.

Carter, meanwhile, reported "it's too early to tell" whether agreement can be reached at the summit on fixing country-by-country targets to limit oil imports.

Wrapping up the day's activities, Carter and the other summit participants attended a dinner hosted by Emperor Hirohito.

During the evening, police said an incendiary devise with a timer went off in an empty room of a hotel housing four summit participants, but not Carter. The Hotel New Otani, where the device set off a small fire that was contained, is one of the most heavily guarded summit sites.

After the first day of summit meetings ended, Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira told reporters, "At this point we are not ready to tell you anything" about plans for reducing oil imports. He said the seven were still discussing such things as which year to use as a basis for setting future import levels, and whether European nations should be counted as a unit or as individual nations in an import-reduction strategy.

European participants in the summit have been pressing for a freeze on oil imports through 1985, while Carter favors emphasis on import curbs that would focus more directly on the next 18 months.

The meeting began with an outward display of harmony despite evident friction over the specifics of an energy plan for the industrialized non-communist nations.

Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing exchanged only a perfunctory handshake at a breakfast that launched the summit, but they emerged side-by-side and chatting amiably from the first formal conference that lasted nearly three hours.

Carter is known to have been angered by a pre-summit interview in which Giscard told Newsweek magazine that Americans "haven't started" to reduce oil consumption.

'Carter canceled plans for a three-day vacation in Hawaii which was to have followed his scheduled weekend state visit to South Korea. White House officials were worried about how the American public would react to Carter sunning himself while ordinary motorists cancel their own vacation plans for lack of gasoline.

"The president has decided...to return to Washington for congresssional and staff meetings on the increasingly serious domestic and international energy situation," White House press secretary Jody Powell said.

American officials who briefed reporters on condition they not be identified said "it would be dreaming" to expect summit decisions to have any effect on gas lines in the United States.

But if oil import curbs are agreed to, they said, "hopefully, we can make the future less difficult than it otherwise might be."

Ease In Paper Shortage Seen

By GERARD W. COFFEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Publishers will have to bear with the paper shortage for at least another two years, but by 1981 the production of paper for newspapers and magazines will increase dramatically, industry officials say.

Completion of several new paper mills in the United States and Canada two yars from now should ease the present tight supply, but for now there is no shortage of bad news.

Recent strikes at major mills resulted in higher wages and higher prices. The strikes also further depleted low inventories and some major publishers have less than a week's supply.

But the strikes compounded an already bad situtation.

Production capacity — near 95 percent in 1978 — has not kept pace with consumption, which has risen faster because of increased advertising lineage.

Companies point out that money they could have invested in expansion and new mills had to be spent on environmental cleanup and higher wages.

Supplies are so short that some publishers are importing newsprint from Europe at almost double the current average domestic price of $345 a ton for 30-pound newsprint. In 1978, some 5,900 tons of paper had to be imported from Europe and Japan; imports amount to 34,000 tons for the first four months of 1979.

Georgia-Pacific, a major supplier, decided in April to get out of the newsprint business and other mills cannot fill the production gap.

Bad weather also interfered with havesting and transportation, and a rash of forest fires in Western Ontario destroyed 5,000 acres of timber owned by Abitibi Paper Co., a major supplier.

"...when the entire newspaper industry is faced with a sudden shortage of newsprint more serious than the gasoline shortage, we feel it is something we must share with you," William B. Parry, publisher of the Middlesex News in Framingham, Mass., said in a recent front page letter to readers.

Newspapers aren't alone. Magazines — which consume 70 percent of all lightweight machine coated No. 5 paper, the most widely used — report trouble getting paper. Some smaller magazines are faced with reducing editorial content to fit ads in smaller issues.

"Demand increased faster than the papermakers thought it would," says Kent Rhodes, president of the Magazine Publishers Association. "If demand keeps going up the way it has been and there is no economic downturn, paper will continue to be very tight." A recession would mean less adverising and less paper used.

No one yet has been forced to shut down for lack of paper; in a seller's market paper — at expensive prices — is available. Publications are trying to conserve by reducing type size, cutting down on complimentary copies and making in-house use of spoiled copies.

But relief is on the horizon.

Weyerhaeuser Co. announced it will construct a $750 million pulp and paper mill in Columbus, Miss. The first phase should begin production in 1982.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. reports it will begin construction this fall on its third newsprint mill in Elk Falls, British Columbia, adding 180,000 metric tons to output.

Planned construction of new mills and expansion of other facilities should bring overall paper production up by 40 percent by the early 1980s, industry analysts say. Newsprint production, presently 14.5 million tons a year, should increase between 10 and 15 percent.

Consumption remains the big variable.

"We don't know what's down the road," one industry executive says. "The capacity outlook appears good, but at the rate they're using it, I just hope we can keep up."

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: I made an oral agreement with a man to buy his car. I gave him $50 to secure the deal until I borrowed the remaining money from my bank. The bank, however, refused to loan me the money. When I informed the man that I couldn't buy his car he refused to give back my $50. How can I get the money back from him? I did get a receipt from him when I gave him the money.

A: You can file a suit against the seller in small claims court. If the seller appears in court and contradicts you, you will need a third party witness to the transaction because you will lose a "tie" case. Whether or not you get your $50 back depends on whether you and the seller agreed that you were putting down a deposit refundable if the deal soured, or buying an option on the car.

Q: When I moved from my apartment recently, I left some clothes in a closet and told my landlady I'd return in two days to pick them up. When I returned my clothes were gone. My landlady said she had no idea what happened to them, but perhaps the cleaning woman took them. She refuses, however, to give me the name or address of this person. I'm out more than $200. Can I sue the landlady? If so should I file in small claims court?

A: You may file for this amount in small claims court. Whether or not you can win your suit depends on the facts developed at trial. If your landlady denies that she realized that you were leaving your possessions or if she claims she told you to remove them, you will probably lose. If the facts show that she realized you had left your clothes, she was obliged not to treat them carelessly nor to take possession herself. These facts may convince the court she is liable.

Q: I recently attended a movie because I was sold by the TV advertising to see what I thought would be an enjoyable film. I now feel the advertising was deceptive. If I had left the movie theatre early and expressed my disappointment, could I have had my money refunded?

A: If you feel that the advertising tricked you, you should get up and leave the film early and ask the management to refund your money. If a circumstance was misstated in the ad, such as a black & white film advertised in color or a failure to show promised scenes, you probably have a comlaint that will be heard by a court. You may not want to complain to a court about your loss of a few dollars, but others may be similarly situated and you may be able to bring a "class action" lawsuit. Or the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Office may be interested in suing to force the theatre management to cease a claimed deception.

Q: While I was renting my apartment, the building was sold to a new owner. Now that I gave notice, paid my rent in full, and moved out, the new landlord has refused to return my security deposit. What are my rights?

A: Under certain circumstances, both the new and old owners may be liable for the return of your security deposit. You should write both owners asking for a refund or written accounting of all deductions. Send the letters certified mail, return receipt requested, and at the same time, send the same letters to the same people by first class mail.

If the answers are unsatisfactory to you, take the lease and the letters to a lawyer to determine whether you might sue for three things damages and other penalties.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Doctor Wants To Limit X-Rays

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dr. Armand Brodeur wants his patients to get only the X-ray exposure they need — and no more.

So Brodeur and his staff of radiologists at Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital for Children — where they take as many as 50,000 X-rays a year — use three types of film cassettes, depending on how detailed the picture has to be.

The result, he said in an interview, is an 80 percent reduction in exposure to radiation over the past year.

The key to the system, which Brodeur hopes to see adopted nationwide, is a rare earth element known as gadolinium oxysulfide, which he said is four times more efficient than the standard calcium tungstate phosphor used in most X-ray cassettes.

"If I have a baby whose hips are dislocated, he's going to be coming back 15 or 20 times in three years so we can check femur location," Brodeur said. "I don't need bone detail for that. Since this is right near his gonads, we want to use the fastest speed we can to minimize radiation.

"You don't have to be around Three Mile Island to know about problems with low-level radiation. We may not know about how much is harmful, but whatever it is, we're using 80 percent less."

Brodeur's radiology department has drawn national attention for other reasons. The doctor — also known for his talent as a magician — works in a lab coat bedecked with Snoopy, Charlie Brown and their friends.

But Brodeur's main concern is treatment, and that concern led to the new X-ray system.

Analysis

Type A, a standard cassette, has an exposure speed of 200 and gives the sharpest pinture — but emits the most radiation. Type B provides medium speed, 600, and medium picture and radiation. At a speed of 1,200, Type C is the fastest, providing less detail but exposing patients to much less radiation.

Explaining how the system works, Brodeur said a patient is bombarded with radiation, and the phosphor element of the film cassette absorbs the X-rays and emits light to produce a photographic image.

The new phosphor, gadolinium oxysulfide, he said, is four times better than calcium tungstate, because it absorbs twice the X-rays and emits twice the light.

"What we have to do is make the best use of the photons that leave your body before they leave the cassette," he said.

To illustrate how the system works in his pediatric hospital, he took the example of a 10-year-old boy with a broken wrist.

"We need every bit of detail we can get to see all of the fracture and make sure it wasn't a result of something like brittle bone disease," Brodeur said. "So we use system A, the standard cassette.

"Then he comes back wearing a plaster of Paris cast. All we need to check now is the alignment of the wrist. We don't need great detail, so we use system C and get six times less radiation. Other hospitals would use a Type A system both times and expose him to more radiation than is necessary."

If every hospital in the country were to switch to the multi-system approach, Brodeur estimates medical X-ray exposure in the United States would drop 50 percent. Such a drop would help everyone, but it is especially beneficial to children.

"We're pediatric. Anything we do for babies has an effect for at least 70 years. We decided to take a chance on a little less detail and a chance that our technologists might mix the systems up once in a while."

The thickness of a concrete walkway depends on how much and what kind of traffic will move over it, but the most recommended thickness is 4 inches. A concrete driveway should be at least 6 inches.

Henley Convicted In Second Trial

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Even before Elmer Wayne Henley's second murder trial ended in a conviction, the defendant's mother was talking about a third trial.

"We'll have our trial and put on our defense," she said as jurors deliberated here Wednesday. "Until they suppress those confessions, there's no sense in putting on a defense."

"Those confessions" formed the crux of the state case as prosecutors convinced an eight-man, four-woman jury to find Henley, 23, guilty of six murders in the Houston mass slaying of the early 1970s.

The jury took two hours and 20 minutes to deliberate on the guilt questions. They then returned to the jury room for 40 minutes before recommending six-concurrent life sentences.

The confession Mary Henley spoke about was a written statement the then teen-aged Henley gave police in August 1973. He had called the Pasadena police and said he had shot Dean Corll to death.

The 33-year-old Corll, Henley told police, paid him to lure young boys to his home. At the Pasadena home, Corll and Henley would trick the boys onto a "torture board" where they would be homosexually raped, then killed.

Henley had been convicted of the same six charges at a 1974 trial in San Antonio. But defense attorney Will Gray of Houston successfully argued on appeal that the defense had been improperly denied a venue change hearing.

Gray predicited here that a third trial would be necessary because of procedural errors in the jury selection phase.

As jurors here deliberated, Mrs. Henley talked about her son.

"If he had not killed (Corll), there'd be a whole lot more anxious parents hunting their sons," she said.

Defense lawyer Ed Pegelow echoed that sentiment in his argument before the jury.

"(Henley) was brought to Dean Corll as a victim and he was duped by Dean Corll," he said.

In final arguments the prosecution agreed that the death of Corll was necessary. Henley's statement indicated Corll was about to kill Henley before Henley shot Corll.

"Elmer Wayne Henley did a public service by killing Dean Corll — as cruel as that may sound," Harris County District Attorney Carol Vance told the jurors. But Vance asked the jurors to find that Henley acted willingly in procuring boys for Corll.

Vance said Henley at first did it "to get the $200 which he got for the first boy. Then he enjoyed it, so he didn't want any money."

The defense, which did not offer witnesses nor evidence, tried to prevent the jury from hearing the detailed statement Henley gave police after his arrest. The statement was given as Henley led investigators to 26 buried bodies.

Gray tried to convince State District Judge Noah Kennedy that Henley's rights were violated. But witnesses here testified that Henley was aware of his rights and chose not to have a lawyer present.

After the trial, prosecutors admitted that without the statement the state might have had a tough time getting a conviction.

One lawyer also said the extent of the mass murders may never have been discovered if Henley had not led police to the three burial sites.

Vance made an impassioned plea for the maximum sentence. Before reminding the jurors of the grisly details of the torture and death spree, Vance said his final argument was the "last words on behalf of these young people that were killed by the defendant."

The prosecutor continually gestured toward the "torture board," a wooden "body box" used to transport the bodies of the vitims, and a metal tool box containing devices used to torture the boys.

Furr's Creditors Eye Changes

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FORT WORTH — Although Furr's Inc. Wednesday was granted an extension of its "debtor in possession" status, some changes may be made in the company's operating guidelines — and top officials — when the firm's creditors meet here next month.

During a brief hearing Wednesday morning, Federal Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers granted a 60-day extension of the temporary debtor-in-possession order he signed May 26.

Under that order, existing company managers are allowed to continue in control of the firm "as usual," subject to stringent controls and mandatory reports to the court and company creditors.

The judge's extension of his order authorizes Furr's managers "to purchase on credit terms in the usual and customary course of its business, inventory of the kind customarily purchased" for the next two months.

Arthur Umbarger, an attorney with the Dallas-Fort Worth firm of Umbarger & Hill, who is representing an unofficial committee of creditors, offered no objection to the extension.

However, Umbarger asked Furr's attorney Troy Welch "to explain for the record why some money has been paid to a Furr's company in view of one provision of the order."

Umbarger cited Section 6 of the order, which prohibits Furr's from paying debts incurred before it filed for relief under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act to its subdivisions "and affiliates and subsidiaries thereof. . .except upon notice to the Creditors, or their representatives, and Order of the Court after hearing."

Companies listed as subdivisions of Furr's Inc. include Furr's Realty Inc., Clardy's Dairies, Frost Bakery, Avtech Aviation Inc., Solartech Systems Inc., El Paso Wholesale Inc. and Farm Pac Kitchens.

Umbarger told the judge Furr's had paid "several subcontractors" of Furr's Construction Company before notifying the creditors and obtaining the necessary court permission.

The approximately two dozen creditors present at Wednesday's hearing contend that because Furr's Construction is a subsidiary of Furr's Realty, the construction company also should be subject to court control.

Welch told the creditors that Furr's Inc. did pay $31,000 to subcontractors for the construction firm because of a guaranty Furr's Inc. had pledged for the work.

However, Welch added, a plan for repayment of the money to Furr's Inc. is being drafted.

Creditors and Furr's officials are expected to discuss the business transaction in detail today at an informal meeting here.

Many of the creditors present Wednesday indicated that at the July meeting they will seek an amendment to the debtor-in-possession order requiring any Furr's-related businesses to be named specifically.

Also at that meeting next month, Flowers will hear a motion from a group of Furr's creditors asking the judge to review his June 6 order allowing the appointment of Pat Murphy as president and chief executive officer of the financially-troubled company.

The group of five creditors, who are owed more than $11 million, are unhappy with Murphy's two-year contract for that position, which pays $160,000.

The petition contends that the draft

Committee Approves Hance Amendment

WASHINGTON (Special) — The House Agriculture Committee Wednesday approved an amendment by U.S. Rep Kent Hance (D-Texas) which would protect irrigation farmers from the possibility of being eliminated from federal farm programs.

The amendment by Hance of Lubbock was designed to offset a proposal which was one of a series of staff recommendations by the President's Water Task Force last year. The proposal would have prohibited all underground- and stream-irrigation farmers from participating in any government farm programs.

"This was a very dangerous proposal and could have been subject to implementation by the Water Resources Council," Hance said. "It would simply have been disastrous to a large majority of farmers in the High Plains and western states who farm by underground or stream irrigation. I really find it difficult to believe that this type of recommendation was ever considered by the Water Task Force. Hopefully, we have eliminated any chance of irrigation farmers being hurt by proposals such as this."

The recommendation by the Water Task Force last year was aimed at all farmers who use irrigation of all forms except trapped rainwater. Hance's amendment states that no person can be prohibited from participating in government farm programs unless specifically stated by law.

"This easily could have been one of those cases where an agency takes the authority of law in implementing a program," Hance said. "More than 80 percent of all water consumed in the United States goes for agricultural purposes and one-sixth of all irrigation is in Texas. That proposal could have seriously crippled farm production.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Usually there is no precaution you can take to avoid the extreme perils created by the shoals of distribution. But on those occasions when you fail to avoid misfortune by the exercise of due care, complaints of hard luck will fall upon deaf ears.

North had a difficult bid to make after West overcalled two spades. One solution was to simply bid three no trump in the hope that partner held a spade stopper. Fortunately, North realized that this might not be the case, so he used the Stayman Convention by cue-bidding the enemy's suit to check on a 4-4 heart fit. When South bravely complied on his jack high, an accurate auction came to an end.

West led the king of spades, and in response to East's beginning of a echo, continued with the queen and ace. It was obvious to everyone that East was out of spades, so declarer ruffed high—even if trumps were 4-1, he would still be safe. If a defender showed out on the second round of trumps, declarer would simply abandon trumps and run winners until a defender ruffed, and he would then make the rest of the tricks.

But the best-laid plans can go awry. West failed to follow to the first trump lead, and East now had two sure trump tricks, which resulted in a one-trick set.

While the 5-0 trump break was an usual occurrence, there was a rubber waiting to be chalked up and it was not the time to get careless. Declarer should have ruffed the third spade with dummy's low trump. Now when East overruffs, declarer can draw the rest of the trumps and claim his contract. If East refuses to overruff, declarer can, once the trump break is established, simply draw four rounds of trumps and cash minor-suit winners from his hand until East decides to ruff, which will be the third, and last, trick for the defense.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: This problem concerns my son. Two years ago he was engaged to marry a girl he had been crazy about for years. They were both 21. Then she ran off and married an older man (30) she'd known only a few weeks.

My son was brokenhearted. He couldn't eat or sleep, lost 20 pounds and walked around in a daze for months.

Then he met a lovely girl who raised his spirits and made him feel that life was worth living again. They planned to announce their engagement this month and marry in September.

Out of the blue, his old girlfriend called to say she and her husband were separated. She said she made a terrible mistake, she still loves my son and wants to pick up where they left off.

My son saw her, and is now considering dropping the girl who brought him out of the dumps and going back with the girl who broke his heart.

What should I do?

His Mother

Dear Mother: He should do what he wants to do. And you should offer no advice unless he asks for it. And neither will I.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine being treated for a skin condition told me that her doctor gave her a "word association test" in which he used some very filthy words which made her most uncomfortable.

She is an elderly widow who has raised several children. She is not a prude, but she said she is not accustomed to hearing language like that. Another friend (also elderly) told me that she went to this same doctor for her nerves, and he used some very vulgar language with her, too. She said she was so disgusted she never went back.

Abby, is this something new in the practice of medicine? What can be done about it?

A Friend In Oswego, N.Y.

Dear Friend: This kind of "treatment" strikes me as most unconventional. If a patient feels that a doctor has behaved in an unprofessional or unethical manner, that doctor should be reported to the ethics committee of his county or state medical society.

DEAR ABBY: Some of us older folks don't move as fast as we used to, so you'd be doing us a big favor if you would pass this suggestion on to those responsible for the sound effects on TV programs. When a telephone rings, I wish they'd use a more unique sound, such as a buzzer, or a beeping sound that is common in European phones. Anything but the familiar telephone bell most of us have at home.

Frequently while watching TV, I've struggled out of my easy chair to answer my phone to discover that it wasn't ringing at all. It was a ringing phone on the television!

Extra Money Hurts Some Couples

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a five-part series on "What We Haven't Taught Our Children;" financial planning for young people. This series is a special report by Purdue University.)

WEST LAFAYETTE, IND. (Special) — Approximately half of all married women are employed outside the home today, a relatively recent development in young America's financial game plan.

"Working women weren't a significant factor with the older generation," said Leslie A. Bryan, a consumer economist on the staff of Purdue University's School of Managment.

"Several important considerations emerge and must be thought out by young families should both man and wife desire to work. Two incomes could possibly pose more questions than answers."

For example: John's take-home pay is $1,500 a month. His wife, Jane, can earn perhaps $650 a month if she accepts a secretarial job. But before she accepts, she and John should estimate the expense of hiring someone to take care of their two children, figure in lunch money, transportation, maybe a cleaning woman once a week and other similar expenses.

Bryan would ask two questions: How much of the second income will be realized after meeting these additional expenses? How much of the realized second income should be committed to raising the family standard of living by incurring these added expenses?

"If the family budget absolutely requires the second income, financial hardship can quickly develop if the second wage earner has to quit work for any number of reasons," Bryan points out.

"It is best if the basic standard of living and life style are established based on the earnings of the main wage earner and not on both incomes," he says, adding that two incomes should ideally enhance the maintenance of a sound savings program.

Surveys indicate that a two-wage-earner family is likely to have a higher proportion of its income committed to debt repayment and less apt to have tight budgetary control of its finances than the equivalent one-wage-earner family.

Moreover, a family with two incomes often finds that marital trauma develops over "who pays for what"; for example, "The car payments come out of your paycheck, not mine."

"In many cases, this type of stress can be prevented by a firm understanding of who is responsible for what bills, or the establishment of three checking accounts — a 'his,' a 'hers' and a family or 'our' account," Bryan advises.

(Tomorrow in part five of the series, protecting your assets.)

Obtaining Other Medical Opinion Good Practice In Surgery Cases

By GHITA LEVINE
Women's News Service

The press release was impressive.

"Today we are initiating a nationwide program to encourage Americans to ask the advice of two doctors before deciding to undergo non-emergency surgery," went the lead sentence by Joseph A. Califano Jr., head of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington, D.C.

"There is a tremendous amount of unnecessary surgery performed in this country every day," said Califano. Surgery has both benefits and risks, he said, and in many cases other medical procedures may be safer.

With this came an almost identical statement from the then-head of the agency that administers Medicaid. The same introduction, followed by "We believe that the quality of medical care can be improved if patients voluntarily seek second opinions."

Next, a two-page memo called "Second Opinion." It reads: "Thousands of Americans face surgery each year, often with fear and doubts about whether the right step is being taken." The way to alleviate that fear, the memo says, is to get more information by visiting another doctor.

"The practice of medicine is not an exact science. Physicians do not agree." But this hasty addition: "This does not reflect on their competency or their concern..."

The message is clear: Watch out for yourself. Doctors won't necessarily do it for you.

Next came a six-pager called "Press Backgrounder." This has all the facts: purposes of the program, elements, etc. Then a section saying that Medicare will pay 80 percent of "reasonable charges" for checking with that second doctor. It will also pay for a third opinion, if needed. In most states, Medicaid will also pick up the tab.

Later comes an explanation of "unnecessary surgery." Estimates of how much unnecessary surgery is performed range up to 30 percent, with as many as 39 percent of hysterectomies judged as having been performed needlessly.

Then this: "Studies in Kansas, Vermont and Maine found a direct correlation between the higher rate of surgery and the number of surgeons and facilities."

And this: "Between 1970 and 1975, the overall rate of surgery increased 23 percent and the rate of surgery is growing four times faster than the population."

And also this: A Senate subcommittee "using 17 percent as the rate of unnecessary surgical procedures, concluded that approximately 2.38 million surgeries were unnecessarily performed in 1974 at a cost to the American public of $3.92 billion."

Last item in the press package was a slim brochure with some sound advice.

"You can get a second opinion with or without the doctor who originally recommended surgery knowing about it. But if you tell the first doctor and ask that your records be sent to the second doctor, you can avoid having to repeat tests that have already been done."

Finally, some information on how to find that second surgeon. Ask your own physician, or call an HEW toll-free number, open 24 hours, seven days a week, for the nearest referral center. That hotline number is 800-325-6400.

I dialed that number.

"Hi, this is Debra," a sweet young voice said. I explained why I was calling but she had no idea what this was all about. None whatsoever. After 5 frustrating minutes we, mercifully, got disconnected.

I called back and this time got Dana. She knew immediately, asked me my address and whipped out a nearby referral number.

Debra and Dana, it turns out, work for Western Union and give out information and take orders ranging from Bonwit Teller's to the latest pop records.

Some of these operators have heard about this physician referral service. If you want assistance and don't get it the first time, do what I did: call back and try again.

FACTS ABOUT FRANKS

Hot dogs are the most requested of all sausages in 95 percent of American homes. Surprisingly, adults eat more hot dogs than children, and women eat more than men. Last year, 19 billion frankfurters were produced in the U.S. This averages out to be 87 per person. Hot dogs contain high quality protein, carbohydrates, fat, iron, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, phosphorus, zinc, vitamin C and vitamins B-6 and B-12. Each link contains five to seven grams of protein, about the same as one egg, two slices of Cheddar cheese, one cup whole milk or yogurt.

Show Needs Tons Of Supplies To Survive Daily

When a local merchant gets a call for 450 pounds of carrots, he may wonder if someone isn't playing an off-season April Fool's joke. But when he recognizes the purchasing agent for the 108th Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, he knows that it's not a joke, but time for the Greatest Show on Earth, arriving in Lubbock, July 12 for an engagement beginning July 13 through 15, to come rolling into town. As well as entertaining children of all ages, the Greatest Show on Earth adds to the local economy.

The Circus, a self-contained community in its own 38-car train, requires an incredible quantity of provisions and a variety of domestic services to fill its basic needs as it travels across the country.

Filling the larder for the animals each week calls for 12 tons of hay, 1400 pounds of crimped oats, 1800 pounds of sweetfeed (bran moistened with molasses), 2200 pounds of government-inspected meat, 450 pounds of carrots, 100 loaves of unsliced white bread (elephant appetizers), 20 dozen eggs and 20 gallons of milk to wash it all down, plus three tons of straw for bedding and two tons of triple-sifted white ponderosa pine sawdust to spread underfoot.

(There are no set quantities of food for the human staff. Their pantry is stocked by the train's dining facility personnel on a day-to-day basis in each town, to insure freshness and provide variety in the menu.)

On some occasions, an SOS goes out to the purchasing agent and he must locate an unforseen item in a hurry — such as the time baby tigers were born in a railroad car while the train was on its way to Washington. The cubs required baby kitty milk replacer — a formula for newborn tigers. It took a concerted effort of the staff to track it down, but when the train arrived, the tiny felines' nourishment was there waiting.

Animal aesthetics are as important as their foodstuff; a 55-gallon drum is kept filled with a special coconut-oil soap for shampooing the tigers and maintaining their fluffy fur. Elephants are not neglected with respect to their cosmetic care, either. These ladies (for the majority of performing pachyderms are females, and, as such, do have their vanity), receive twice-yearly skin-lubricating treatments with 30 gallons of pure vegetable oil rubbed on the 22 elephant herd. Twenty-five pounds of vaseline soften the area around the eyes, and 25 gallons of neetsfoot oil are used every season for protecting the feet of all hay-eating animals. Additionally, in the hoof department, the Circus purchases 500 pairs of special rubber-coated metal shoes, in sizes zero to six.

Along with the food and beauty needs of the animal artists, the essentials for operating the Circus train, the largest privately-owned one in the world, must be arranged. Three hundred gallons of fuel each day are needed to power the two generators; a constant supply of fresh water is required and a sewage service must be engaged to flush the train's double load of septic tanks regularly. The 40 cubic yards of waste created by the human and animal inhabitants of "Circustown" on rails must be removed daily by a rubbish collection company.

The Greatest Show on Earth also contracts the services of a plumber, air-conditioning expert, doctor, dentist, veterinarian (besides the staff vet) and a local hospital to be on 24-hour call in every town.

In the laundry department, there are 400 sheets, 200 pillow cases and several hundred pairs of coveralls to be washed and ironed.

Miscellaneous necessities for the Circus household include 10,000 rolls of toilet paper, 25,000 balloons, 4,000 plastic trash bags, and 50 pounds of lycopodium, a powder manufactured from plants which creates the flash fire in clown gags.

The next time you're taking care of your household chores, and you think you've got a lot to do, consider the plight of the purchaser of the Greatest Show on Earth; if he doesn't get his errands done, he has dozens of hungry lions, tigers and a herd of 22 elephants to answer to!

Rumors Cause Problems For IBM's Competitors

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

IBM is getting to bring out a new line of computers that will make some current models old hat. IBM is about to rejigger its pricing structure to make life more difficult for companies that compete with it. Or maybe IBM isn't going to do anything at all.

It often doesn't seem to make any difference what International Business Machines actually does, only what people think it will do. And that is once again setting the computer business on its ear.

Over the past few weeks, IBM's own stock has fallen more than a handful of points — the decline would have been a lot more dramatic if not for the four-for-one split of the stock at the beginning of this month -- as analysts cut back their profits forecasts.

The shares of Amdahl Corp., whose computers compete directly with IBM, dropped more than 12 points — 33 percent — in just five days. The reason: a switch in the tactics of computer buyers, based on rumors of what the industry giant is going to do.

Amdahl's story is interesting because, although the company could well finish the current quarter with more computers installed than ever before, it doesn't figure to make any money, thanks largely to the rumors that have been circulating in the computer industry. And the squeeze is likely to last at least for several months more.

The problem is that at Amadahl, as at IBM, more customers are leasing computers than buying them outright. Leases can bring in more money than sales over a period of time, but they produce less revenue at the outset. The manufacturing and installation expenses are the same.

IBM has conceded "some switch" in the lease-sale ratios. Amdahl, according to analysts in Wall Street, is currently leasing from 30 to 40 percent of its new installations, compared with only about 10 percent in the first quarter of the year. So its revenue flow is declining.

Hesh Wiener, who publishes the Computer and Communications Buyer newsletters and has been following the industry for a number of years, says the changing buying patterns and the stock market reaction dramatize one of the basic facts of computer life — that the technolgy is moving so quickly that buyers don't know which way to turn, and that company fortunes can rise and fall without notice.

"IBM is making progress so fast that its own customers are dizzy," Wiener says. "People don't know what choice to make. While they trust IBM, they don't trust their own business judgement, so they lease instead of buying. That way they feel they won't get stuck with an obsolete computer with a higher price."

Wiener says it's practically certain that IBM will bring out a new large computer line next year but that, more than that, the company holds the whip hand in the field. "IBM can hurt a lot of companies just by sitting around, doing nothing and letting the rumors fly," he sas. "That hurts companies like Amadahl, where big computers are the whole thing, but it doesn't hurt IBM because big machines are only a part of their business."

An analyst at a Wall Street firm says he calls the syndrome the "ultimate embarrassment theory." Asking not to be identified, he says "buyers don't want to be caught with the last generation's computer, even though it shouldn't make much difference to them. If the computer did the job for them before, it will keep doing the job, whether or not a bigger or faster machine comes out. But they don't want to feel like they missed the market or that they were the last to pay a higher price. It's an emotional thing."

Daniel Mandresh of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith points out that there are "rumors" that IBM plans to unveil soon an "H-series" computer for the extreme upper end of its line, replacing the current 300X. He also says rumors have been rife for some time that IBM will re-structure its pricing, a move that could increase its competitive strength.

According to Wiener, "This kind of problem comes up once in every computer generation, but it can generate effects that last longer than the six to twelve months it takes to make the actual transition to new computers. Of course, IBM is able to handle the problem better than any of the others."

In Wall Street, opinions are divided on whether Amdahl's stock has seen its worst days. "There are still a lot of people expecting it to go further down," one analyst told us, "even after the beating it's taken already."

Another said, though, that he thinks the current problems will be resolved in a matter of months and that Amdahl's problems are short-term."

Rare Coin Brings Record Price

NEW YORK (AP) — An Iowa dealer in rare coins has paid $225,000 for a 1907 "St. Gaudens" $20 gold piece — the highest amount ever paid at public auction for a U.S. coin, according to the auctioneer.

Donald Kagin, of Des Moines, purchased the coin at auction at Stack's New York City. He said the price was "cheap," and said he expects it to become America's first million-dollar rarity due to inflation and the dollar's decreasing value.

The coin was designed, at the request of President Theodore Roosevelt, by sculptor Augus St. Gaudens and a limited number were struck by the U.S. Mint.

INDIAN SPRINGS, Ga. (AP) — Joel Crane grew up on a farm, enjoying turtle soup, stew and pie cooked by his mother. He still enjoys turtles in soup bowls, on dinner plates and breakfast dishes.

Crane, a 73-year-old, retired, state parks-department employee, catches turtles himself in a local, private pond using a home-made, 5-foot wire basket. In one year, he caught 111 turtles, including a 28-pounder and a 30-pounder.

He grinds up turtle meat and cooks it in an 18-gallon iron pot with corn, tomatoes, onions, potatoes, rat cheese and seasonings.

He once cooked 40 gallons of turtle stew for a group of people.

MARMADUKE by Brad Anderson

"You misunderstood me when I said I'm trying to keep my weight down!"

THE WHITE HOUSE

Security Almost Suffocating

By FRANK CORMIER

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese fear of terrorist incidents is so all-pervading here, with heads of seven governmnets gathering at the economic summit meeting, that security is nearly suffocating.

One Secret Service agent who came here in advance of President Carter's arrival found dealing with the security more than he could handle.

At the end of a long, often-frustrating day, the agent cut loose at his hotel, grabbing a fire extinguisher and spraying those within range.

Escorts For Children

Just last week, the 10-year-old daughter of an American who lives here crossed the street from her home to buy a loaf of bread for her mother.

A Japanese policeman intercepted her and gave polite but firm orders that she not venture onto the streets alone again until Carter and company have left town.

Parents of American children attending school here were sent letters instructing them to never let their youngsters out of the house without an adult escort during the Carter visit.

Reporters Restricted

The American delegation is staying at the ultra-fashionable Okura Hotel, across the street from the U.S. Embassy compound where the Carters are staying.

The hotel has two buildings and White House planners wanted to lodge Carter's traveling press corps in the same building that houses a sprawling press center.

No way, said Japanese security officials. Members of the American delegation are installed in that building and cannot be exposed to the risks posed by sharing elevators and hallways with members of the press.

This posed a special problem for White House press secretary Jody Powell, who usually meets privately in his suite with American reporters during international meetings.

Powell quickly discovered that the scores of Japanese plainclothesmen who are omnipresent at the hotel would not permit reporters to visit the U.S. spokesman's suite.

Packing his bags, Powell moved to the building assigned to the press contingent.

Invitation For Drinks

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal faced a similar dilemma. He wanted to invite reporters who specialize in economic affairs to join him for a drink in his suite.

Very complicated logistical arrangements had to be worked out to circumvent Japanese security.

Stringent Security

Reporters confronted with the mind-boggling security have compared notes and decided they have never seen anything like it before.

When Carter traveled to Iran to usher in 1978 — just a few months before the roof started falling in on the shah — security was tough. But reporters who made both trips agree the measures being taken in Tokyo are far more stringent.

Study Questions Antibiotic Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new congressional study raises questions about the potential health hazard posed by the routine use of antibiotics in animal feed.

Small amounts of antibiotics and growth hormones are added routinely to animal feed to increase yields. But the Office of Technological Assessment study says the constant use of low-level antibiotics in feed produces drug-resistant bacteria that may cause disease in animals and humans and transfer drug resistance to other bacteria.

Agnew To Pay Back Taxes

OCEAN CITY, Md. (UPI) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will be vacationing in Ocean City through October — and while he is in the state he will pay $200,000 in back taxes.

The Baltimore News-American reported Tuesday that Agnew, a former Maryland governor, arrived in Baltimore Sunday to pay $200,000 in back taxes through a loan from singer Frank Sinatra.

He is expected to stay in an Ocean City condominium through October, the newspaper said.

Agnew resigned as vice president Oct. 10, 1973, after pleading no contest to a federal income tax evasion charge that climaxed a long grand jury investigation.

Agnew resigned as Maryland governor in 1968 to become vice president under Richard Nixon. He was only the second vice president to resign, and the first to leave under a legal cloud.

Regulations Irritate Truckers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Department official Kenneth Pierson, a onetime driver himself, figures government regulations keep the average independent trucker busy half an hour a day jockeying a pencil.

The typical driver must maneuver through a maze of economic regulations laid down by the Interstate Commerce Commission, of safety regulations enforced by the Transportation Department, taxes collected by the Internal Revenue Service and fees, permits and regulations imposed by every state on every truck that passes through its borders.

Government regulations — those that limit how much a truck can carry and those that make paper shufflers of anyone who wants to move freight in a truck — are one source of irritation, in addition to high diesel fuel prices, among the thousands of drivers refusing to work these days.

A driver has to carry a lot of documents. He must have a license, of course, and a medical certificate signed by a doctor. Federal law requires he carry daily logbooks accounting for what he was doing every hour he spends on the road. He must carry logs with him for the past 30 days.

He must have a waybill listing the ownership, origin, destination and description of the freight he is carrying.

If he is operating on contract to a franchised carrier (as most independents do, paying them up to 37.5 percent of their receipts) he must carry evidence the carrier is authorized to operate in the states through which he will drive.

Keeping track of these state permits — and paying up to $1,000 a year in fees to renew them — is probably the biggest paperwork burden truckers face.

Drivers must keep additional records in order to pay state taxes on the fuel consumed going through a state minus the amount of fuel purchased in that state. They must hold on to fuel and delivery receipts and a settlement sheet used to settle accounts with the outfit for which they working.

This story concerns independent owner-operators. These are truckers who own their own equipment and operate on contract with a franchised carrier, carry freight through a broker or work their own deal directly with a shipper.

While trucking deregulation would reduce the paperwork, many of the drivers oppose trucking industry deregulation, proposed last week jointly by President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

They look at the troubles of their exempt-from-regulation colleagues who carry foodstuffs, livestock and plants and say they want no part of that cut-throat competition.

Among the most resented regulations are truck weight limits. Forty states have a uniform 80,000-pound gross weight limit on trucks but 10 states and the District of Columbia impose limits under 80,000 pounds. The limits are 73,280 pounds in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia and 73,000 pounds in Connecticut.

Truckers who cross the country say the Midwest states with limits under 80,000 pounds are "an Iron Curtain," forcing them to carry 10 percent less freight than they could if the 80,000 pound limit was nationwide. They also seek uniformity on the size oftrucks permitted.

The White House, responding to the truckers, last week asked the governors of the 10 states with lower limits to temporarily waive their limits.

But critics say heavier trucks will lead to a more rapid deterioration of the interstate highway system.

However, the federal agency which most touches the life of the average trucker is the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety (BMCS) in the Transportation Department.

The bureau publishes a 168-page booklet listing the regulations a trucker must comply with. The index carries more than 300 entries.

The regulations range from when a person may not climb out of a sleeper berth (when vehicle is in motion) to how many hours a driver can work without resting (no more than 60 in a seven-day period).

Drivers say of all the bureau regulations, the most disliked is one that requires them to keep a logbook reflecting, hour by hour, how they spend their time. Honestly kept, it would reflect whether they had violated the speed limit or drove longer than permited.

State police ask to see these documents when a driver is stopped. The driver can be fined for not keeping his log filled out.

Many drivers say no one could make a living at trucking if he kept an honest logbook.

Pierson, deputy director of the BMCS, defends the logbook as a safety mesure.

"The logbook is a control mechanism for an industry in which the employee is almost never in sight," Pierson says.

The mechanism is necessary, he says, because trucking is an industry in which the reward is greatest for the participant who goes "as heavy as he can, as long as he can, as far as he can, as fast as he can."

Amoco Selects Small Iowa Town As Gasohol Market Test Site

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amoco has selected a small town in Iowa as a gasohol test market in the first move by a major oil refiner to size up the American motorist's thirst for the 20-proof alternative to gasoline.

"Beginning sometime in early July, five stations in Ottumwa, Iowa, will be selling gasohol," Amoco spokesman Carl Meyerdirk said Tuesday. "It's to determine what are the problems and how they can be solved in the distribution of gasohol."

Several other small Midwestern markets eventually will be tested in the pilot Amoco marketing program that is expected to last a year or more, Meyerdirk said.

The program was facilitated last Friday by an Energy Department decision to suspend pricing rules to enable Amoco to pass on certain costs associated with gasohol.

Lloyd Costey, a gasohol expert in the economic Regulatory Administration, said the government probably would waive the rules for any other refiner interested in distributing gasohol.

Under current regulations that are soon to change, he said, the alcohol component of gasohol would be treated as an additive and the refiner would be forced to spread its cost over his entire range of products.

The department waiver gave Amoco some pricing relief by limiting the additive cost to gasohol, a mix of nine-tenths unleaded gasoline and one-tenth ethyl alcohol.

The alcohol, purchased mostly from the Archer Daniel Midland Co. of Decatur, Ill.,s the pure, 200-proof variety made from Midwestern grain.

Meyerdirk said Amoco's gasohol would replace some other fuel —most likely premium unleaded — at participating pumps. 3

"The gasohol is going to cost considerably more than the gasoline," he said. "It would only be federal and state tax relief that would make it marketable at all."

But Costey said tax incentives have made other gasohol sold in Iowa cheaper.

Since Jan. 1, the federal government has exempted gasohol from its 4 cent-a-gallon tax and 12 states have dispensed with all or part of their taxes, he said.

Arkansas, for example, has exempted gasohol from its 9 1/2 Cent tax, making the product more competitive by 13 1/2 cents, said Costey.

By April 15, 825 service stations were taking advantage of the incentives by offering gasohol in 15 or 20 states, Costey said.

A Senate bill currently under study proposes to replace all normal gasoline with comparable gasohol blends by 1990.

The resulting 10 percent saving in gasoine would amount to 10 billion gallons a year, since America's vehicles currently use approximately 100 billion gallons, said Costey.

But immediate prospects for gasohol production are limited by the availability of alcohol, which is in even shorter supply than Iranian oil.

Solon Directs Energy Criticism At Clements

HOUSTON (UPI) — Gov. Bill Clements and Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, agree the federal government is handling the gasoline crisis poorly, but Ogg takes it a step further. He also blames Clements.

In addition to lambasting President Carter and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, Ogg this week accused the governor of failing to use the state's full set-aside gasoline allocation in May, allowing the gas to be distributed to other states by refineries.

"The governor's no-tie summer is a gimmicky, ineffectual approach to conservation," Ogg said. "The odd-even gasoline purchase plan is a traffic directing solution. It might shorten lines, but it won't save any gas."

He said the Carter administration's allocation rules have turned a 2 percent crude oil shortfall into a 20 percent shortage at the gasoline pumps.

"Interference in the market place, ineptitude in management and a lack of leadership have created the long lines at the pumps. President Carter should fire Energy Secretary James Schlesinger," Ogg said.

Clements often has said Schlesinger should be dismissed.

Ogg suggested a revision of the Department of Energy's allocation rules to reflect the crude oil shortages more accurately. He said some groups are receiving gasoline to fill 100 percent of their needs, while others are 20 percent short.

"The American people don't believe there is an energy crisis because their government has not convinced them. The president's bend-with-the-wind policy is one reason the American people are not convinced. Governor Jerry Brown goes to Washington and cries wolf and he gets more gas. Other groups threaten action and their needs are filled.

"Governor Clements should put his tie back on and head for the White House and demand a fair set of rules."

Ogg said there are 31.9 million barrels of crude stored in an underground salt dome near Freeport that the Department of Energy has no way of retrieving at this time.

He also suggested the governor order a 5 percent reduction in use of state-owned vehicles, order all state agency heads to cut back on out of town travel, offer parking incentives for state workers who carpool and consider a four-day work week for some employees, particularly on construction projects.

SURVEY UNDERWAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is conducting a special survey of U.S. rice stocks because questions have been raised about the availability of supplies to meet foreign demand, officials say. Illegal Diverting Of Gas Reported

BALTIMORE (AP) — Millions of gallons of gasoline are being diverted illegally from Maryland's cities to rural areas by jobbers who claim the fuel is going to special interest groups, the Baltimore Sun says.

The independent distributors are taking advantage of the federal government's gasoline distribution program that gives priority to farmers, police, bus companies and other users, according to Energy Department and major oil company sources quoted in Wednesday's edition of the Sun.

The Energy Department does not require jobbers to show that the gasoline they order on behalf of agricultural customers actually ends up on the farm, oil company officials told the newspaper.

"It's millions of gallons. We are very concerned about that," said Donald R. Healy, manager of Shell Oil Co.'s Washington-Baltimore district.

"We're not saying that all jobbers are submitting false statements," Healy said. "But enough jobbers of all brands are to create a tremendous problem."

Healy said Shell discovered that one jobber had requested an allotment on behalf of a gasoline station that had been closed for nine years.

Jane Jachimczyk, counsel of the National Oil Jobbers Council, criticized the allegations against the small independent gasoline marketers.

"It's incredible that anyone could make that charge with a straight face," she said. "I don't pretend that all the jobbers are pure. But it's patently-ridiculous for them to be made the scapegoat."

Amoco Oil Co. officials said they have not seen evidence of illegal diversion, but they added they do not require proof that gasoline purchased by independents actually reaches priority customers.

Civil Rights Leaders Overjoyed By Weber Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elated by the Supreme Court's latest decision on race relations, civil rights leaders are predicting new gains for racial minorities in the nation's job market.

"Now no company or union can use the excuse that it is illegal to move forward on an aggressive affirmative action policy," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said in Chicago after learning of the high court's Weber ruling Wednesday. Jackson heads Operation PUSH, a black-oriented, self-help program

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the ruling "vindicates my faith" in the judicial process and the democratic system. National Urban League President Vernon Jordan said the decision "brings a little sunshine and hope to minorities."

Voting 5-2, the court ruled that employers voluntarily may give minority workers special treatment in hiring, training and promotion.

Even employers with no proven history of racial bias may offer the special preferences, the justices said.

They added that racial quotas may be used in the affirmative action programs, but offered little guidance to lower courts and federal agencies as to when quotas are permissible.

The court's ruling was a direct legal defeat for Brian F. Weber, a white employee of a Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co. plant in Louisiana who claimed he had been made the victim of illegal "reverse discrimination."

Weber was excluded from a 1974 training program at Kaiser's plant in Gramercy designed to land more blacks in higher paying jobs. Weber had more seniority than some of the blacks chosen for the program under a racial quota.

The court's decision did not discuss sexual discrimination. But because it was based on a federal law banning sexual bias as well as racial bias in employment, the ruling also represents a big victory for women's rights.

"Generations of legal restrictions, limited educational opportunities and exclusionary practices by employers and unions have prohibited women and minorities from competing as equals in the job market," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women.

"The Weber decision recognizes that an aggressive affirmative action policy is necessary to break down employment patterns caused by these societal inequities," she said.

The Carter administration praised the ruling. Vice President Walter F. Mondale said the decision "vindicates the strong position which this administration has consistently taken in favor of affirmative action (and) removes any doubt about the legality of affirmative action programs."

To a large extent, the practical effect of Wednesday's ruling will be determined by the psychological effect it causes.

The Urban League's Jordan warned that the court's decision occurs against a backdrop of a growing economic gap between blacks and whites.

"There is still massive resistance to blak needs as seen in the support given Weber," he said.

Richard Larson of the American Civil Liberties Union said, "The continuing struggle now is to convince all employers to adopt and vigorously implement meaningful affirmative action."

The decision had its critics also. Philip Kurland, a University of Chicago law professor and noted constitutional scholar, said it went "a step beyond equality." He added that "race relations are not going to be eased" by the high court's approval of voluntary affirmative action in employment.

Leonard Walentynowicz, a lawyer for the Polish-American Congress, also disagreed with the court. "Just because you're white, that doesn't mean you've had it made in the past 200 years in America," he said.

In two other decisions Wednesday, the court:

— Ruled by a 5-4 vote that unwed mothers have no constitutional right to be paid Social Security survivors' benefits when the fathers of their children die.

— Ruled, 5-3, in a case from Portsmouth, Va., that a shipowner is required to pay the full amount of damages to an injured longshoreman even though a jury found the shipping line only partly at fault.

Hart's Final Interview Published Today

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (UPI) — Gene Leroy Hart, acquitted of the sex slayings of three Girl Scouts, watched law officers on television as they tried to track him through the densely wooded hills of northeastern Oklahoma, Hart revealed in the last public interview before his death in prison.

In the copyrighted interview conducted three days before he collapsed of heart failure and published today in the Cherokee Nation's tribal newspaper, Hart said a good part of the five years he was a fugitive was spent with friends and that television allowed him to watch the progress of the manhunt.

"...It was kind of comical in a sense. It was serious, but the law enforcement people knew that there wasn't anybody out there," Hart said. "From what I saw on TV, I just don't see how anybody could travel from one place to another as fast as I supposedly was traveling from one area to another. I was seen in probably a thousand different places."

In the interview in the Cherokee Advocate, Hart said he was not the expert woodsman portrayed by the news media.

"Nobody can live out there that long. As cold as the winters are and what with the parasites in the summer and the snakes and the weather. Our ancestors might have done it, but I can't."

Hart said he first learned of the June 13, 1977, Camp Scott killings on television and anticipated he might be a suspect.

"I did feel like I might have been a suspect. When I realized I was charged with it ... and my idea, my thinking at the time ... and I thought it was good ... was, I'll just lay low and the longer I stay away from them, sooner or later these people are going to solve this and they'll leave me alone."

Referring to relatives and friends who sheltered him from the time he escaped from the Mayes County Jail in 1973 until his capture at the cabin of a Cherokee medicine man in April of 1978, Hart said, "It is pretty common knowledge, probably, that I visited with my relatives and friends in that area at one time or another. It's either that I'm super smart, or the law enforcement in that area is super dumb. It has to be one or the other, and I really don't feel like I'm that smart, so there you are."

Hart described his capture by the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation, which he referred to as "the governor's pet agency," as a "game" and explained how agents posed with him for "souvenir pictures" and how they changed into special uniforms when news photographers photographed him.

He said he was glad he was captured by the OSBI and not members of the Mayes County Sheriff's Department.

"If I had been arrested by law enforcement agencies, say the Mayes County Sheriff's Office or the deputy, then we wouldn't be here now having an interview. And, one reason that there was no harm ever brought to me ... because I was arrested by the OSBI."

Political ambitions and the public pressure to find someone to charge and arrest for the beating and strangulation deaths of the three girls colored the investigation and trial, Hart said.

"(Sid) Wise (Mayes County district attorney) wants to run for attorney general; the sheriff wants to be re-elected; the judge wants to be re-elected; the judge wants to be on the circuit court of appeals in Denver and I don't know what (S.M.) Fallis (Tulsa County district attorney) wanted."

Sheriff Pete Weaver especially wanted to see him captured, Hart said.

"I mean ... I have embarassed him to no end. Escaping twice from his maximum security jail ... what he says to be a maximum security jail. And it makes it worse, the man can't catch me. Knowing that I may be in the area and he can't even catch me. He can't even catch a cold. That's how stupid he is."

During his brief stay at McAlester State Penitentiary where he was returned after his acquittal to finish serving sentences for previous kidnapping, rape, burglary and escape convictions, Hart described his prison routine and said he was looking forward to the day he would be released.

He talked positively of release and said he was studying law and hoped he could pursue a career as a paralegal assistant.

Former Columbia Pictures Head Wins Early Probation Release

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — David Begelman, once among the most powerful movie executives in Hollywood, has been released from probation for grand theft and says: "My contrition is complete."

Begelman, former president of Columbia Pictures Corp., whose case created a major Hollywood scandal, won the early release Wednesday after Burbank Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Murphy viewed a film Begelman produced as part of his sentence.

The movie, which depicts the dangers of the drug PCP, or angel dust, is titled, "Angel Death," and is narrated by Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward.

The judge expressed surprise at the film's excellent quality and said Begelman had far exceeded the requirements of the court's assignment of a community service project.

"I am convinced it is the best I have seen in this area," said Murphy, "and I did not expect it."

Begelman's attorney, Richard Rogan, said the film will be televised.

Television cameras were in the courtroom as well as the judge reduced Begelman's grand theft conviction to a misdemeanor and dismissed the charge, saying he hoped Begelman could "now go forward without the stigma of probation."

Begelman, 57, who came to court with his wife, Gladyce, told reporters he has made peace with himself over the acts which led him to plead no contest to charges of $40,000 in thefts from Columbia.

"I understand the motivation that led me to commit the acts for which I have atoned," he said. "My contrition is complete. It is not manufactured for expediency."

As Columbia's studio chief, Begelman was making $400,000 a year with large bonuses and stock options before his financial misdeeds were discovered in 1977.

But actor Cliff Robertson went to the police and the press with the story of Begelman's check forgeries on a studio account. One check was written in Robertson's name for $10,000, another $5,000 check in the name of producer Martin Ritt and one for $25,000 in the name of restaurateur Pierre Groleau, part owner of Ma Maison in Hollywood.

When the scandal made headlines, Columbia's stock plummeted and Begelman was forced to resign his post. Columbia immediately rehired him as an independent producer.

In May 1978, Begelman pleaded guilty to one count of grand theft and was later fined $5,000, sentenced to three years probation and ordered to make the community service film. He had already made restitution for the stolen $40,000.

Bundy's Lawyers Asking Jurors About Hypnosis

MIAMI (AP) — Jurors deciding whether Theodore R. Bundy killed two young women at Florida State University in 1978 apparently will be asked to consider an unusual issue — hypnotism.

Bundy's trial entered its fourth day today with eight of the required 12 jurors tentatively seated. Circuit Judge Edward Cowart said he hoped to seat a jury by evening.

In three days of questioning prospective jurors, Bundy's attorneys have turned ofter to question about hypnosis.

"Have you ever been hypnotized?" defense attorney Lynn Alan Thompson has asked. "Do you know what hypnosis is? Do you know what time distortion is? Hypnotic suggestion?"

A boyish-looking, 32-year-old former law student, Bundy is accused of being the intruder who slipped into the Chi Omega Sorority House at Florida State University and launched a series of savage attacks on Jan. 15, 1978.

Lisa Levy, 20, and Margaret Bowman, 21, died beaten and strangled in their beds.

Two other sorority house residents, Karen Chandler and Kathy Kleiner, survived beatings as did Cheryl Anne Thomas, a student who was attacked in her off-campus apartment a few blocks away.

At the time of the attacks, investigators said the survivors weren't able to furnish a useful description of their assailant. But all three were reportedly subjected to hypnosis.

Also reportedly placed under hypnosis was Nita Jane Neary, a Chi Omega resident who entered the sorority house just as a club-carrying stranger fled the building.

The trial has another hypnosis angle in the presence of Atlanta physician Emil Spillman, who is consulting with Bundy on jury selection. Spillman says he works with "analytical hypnotism" and is able to analyze the subconscious of jurors by watching them under questioning.

Bundy also is accused of killing a 12-year-old girl in Lake City, Fla., and a Michigan nurse at the ski resort of Aspen, Colo. He has been convicted of kidnapping in Salt Lake City.

Doctor, Marina Operator Dispute Paisley Autopsy

SOLOMONS, Md. (AP) — Two men who saw the body of former CIA agent John Paisley have disputed the official autopsy finding that it had no marks of violence except a fatal head wound.

Dr. George Weems, the Calvert County coroner who thinks Paisley died from "foul play," said there was a half-inch-wide mark like a brush burn almost encircling the neck.

"You get that kind of lesion on a throat from a tight rope," Weems told a news conference called Wednesday by Bernard Fensterwald, attorney for Maryann Paisley, the victim's wife.

Paisley's body was found in Chesapeake Bay Oct. 1, about a week after he had been reported missing from his sailboat. Authorities said he was shot behind the left ear and had two scuba weight belts strapped around his waist.

State Police listed the cause of death as "apparent suicide" and say the inquiry is still open. Mrs. Paisley is pressing for renewed intensive efforts to investigate her husband's death.

Weems said he made the initial, visual examination of the body and routinely sent it to the state medical examiner's office in Baltimore for a complete autopsy.

Its report did not mention the neck mark. Dr. Russell S. Fisher, the state medical examiner, was not immediately available for comment on Weems' statements.

Weems said he did not mention the neck mark in his report to Fisher's office. "I would assume they would see what I saw," he said.

Harry Lee Langley Sr., a marina operator, said he was with Weems when the Coast Guard brought the body ashore and also saw a mark or wound around the neck.

"He either had a hell of a burn around his throat or his throat was cut," Langley said. "It was marred up." He added that he got no closer to the body than five feet.

Paisley was originally identified by the CIA as a minor official but it was later disclosed he was a senior Soviet arms analyst who had worked on the SALT I negotiations.

Louisianians Angry Over Herbicide Dumping

MONROE, La. (AP) — Tilly Stone gets angrier day by day — watching the trees turn brown and die from poisonous paraquat herbicide accidentally dumped on her neighborood.

"I just get disgusted," she said. "And there's been a number of people sick. Of course they say it wasn't the paraquat, but it had to be because there's too many been sick."

Other residents living along the mile-long strip of dead and dying trees were equally upset, complaining that nothing was being done to help them.

"Why should we be stranded out here and not be compensated for what they did to us," said Tommie Reneau. "All they told me was that they were working on it."

The "they" Mrs. Reneau was talking about were the City of Monroe, the flying service whose crop duster dropped the herbicide and the state Agriculture Department.

Paraquat is a weed-killer widely used in agriculture but it is perhaps best known for its use in the United States' plan to wipe out marijuana crops in Mexico.

The spraying in Mexico caused a political uproar when scientists said smoking marijuana sprayed with paraquat could cause serious illness, including permanent lung damage.

The paraquat cloud drifted over the quiet Monroe neighborhood about dusk on May 15. Nearby, a crop duster sprayed the overgrowth at the end of a runway at the city airport.

Officials acknowledge that the paraquat came from the crop duster, but they say reports of the damage have been exaggerated.

"It's not nearly as serious as it has been made out to be," said E.A. Cancienne, a pesticide official with the Agriculture Department.

"I know there are a lot of cases being reported of people being sick or nauseated and all kinds of weird symptoms resulting from that spraying, but I think it's more psychological than psysiological."

But Mrs. Stone said she could not go out in her yard for several days after the spraying and birds fell dead out of the trees.

"It burned your eyes and they'd swell," she said. "And the birds, you should have seen the birds, they just died like mad."

Pam Hudson said she was helping Mrs. Stone mow her yard a few days after the spraying and had to stop occasionally to clear about 15 dead or dying birds out of the way.

"Most of them were small birds," Mrs. Hudson said. "They wouldn't be all dead. They'd be like they were paralyzed, like they couldn't see or couldn't move. They were just shaking and had their little heads up with their mouths open."

She said she got sick while mowing the grass and had to stop.

"I started coughing really bad and got short of breath," she said. "I had a cough after that for about two weeks."

But Mrs. Hudson said she didn't go to the doctor because she didn't think of the possibility that her illness and the spray were related.

Cancienne said, however, that he didn't think the herbicide killed the birds.

"That's ridiculous," he said. "If there were dead birds, it's wasn't caused by the paraquat."

He said preliminary reports from his field inspector also indicates that many of the damaged trees will survive.

"Most of them are recovering," he said. "But I'm afraid some of the small trees may not come back and there could be permanent damage to some of the limbs on some of the larger trees."

He said paraquat has been used for 10 to 15 years without reports of a fatal accident in the United States. He said, however, that breathing the direct spray could be a health hazard.

Flying service owner Ray Wright said he had turned the whole thing over to his insurance company.

"As far as the damage paraquat would do to humans or animals," Wright said, "you'd damn near have to stick your head under it and drown."

He said he had taken all necessary precautions before the spraying.

"Sometime you think you have the exact right conditions and some freak (thing) happens and you get a drift. Evidently, it was in this case because it certainly wasn't misapplied anywhere," he said.

But area residents, angry about the accident itself, said they were getting madder because no one seemed concerned about it.

"Nobody has contacted us," Mrs. Reneau said. "Nobody from the city has even called and we know two of them personally. They're in the family, by marriage," she said.

"I was right in the middle of it," she said. "I was sitting out in the swing watching the plane go back and forth.

"It's taken a month for one of my pine trees to die so I don't know what to think. I have been sick, but the doctors just look at you funny when you bring up paraquat," she said.

Monroe City Attorney Charles Patten said the city did not feel obligated to contact the residents.

"We're leaving it up to the sprayer and his insurer to find out their liability," he said. "I believe he is insured for such mishaps."

Television Tax Brings Resentment

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Viril Hardeman, who was blind, went to jail rather than pay the tax. Afton Lee's television set was confiscated and sold at auction after he refused to pay.

Both men were angry over Washington County's $15 annual television tax that has brought better television reception and resentment of county government to the 27,000 residents of this isolated southwestern corner of Utah.

The county installed equipment to boost the strength of the television signal brought some 300 miles from Salt Lake City. The reception is better, but a local resident has filed suit contending the county's $15 annual television tax is unconstitutional.

Walter T. Mann said he is trying to press a class-action suit to nullify the 23-year-old county tax.

"The county is creating a debt out of thin air," he said. "It's never been voted on; there's no contract with the people, and we're going to put a stop to it," he said Monday. Mann isn't the only one who has objected to the tax.

Hardeman "told them to stuff it," said his daughter, Sue Russell. She said her father, who died in 1970, couldn't watch television but "didn't think it (the tax) was right" and spent four weekends in jail.

Under pressure from Mann and other irate citizens, the Washington County Commission revised its television ordinance Monday to remove criminal sanctions, including jail terms and criminal fines, said Commissioner Lyman Gubler.

The county sends each residence an annual bill for $15, Gubler said. If the resident doesn't have a television, he can sign an affidavit and be exempt from the levy.

"You'll always find a few people who don't want to pay anything. They're freeloaders," Gubler said.

"It has never paid its way with the money we've received," he said of the system, which uses 38 translator stations to bring the TV signal from Salt Lake City. Last year, the county took in $90,000 in television tax money, but spent $118,000 to maintain the system.

The sheriff came and got Lee's television earlier this year after he refused to pay the tax and the county pressed suit against him in small claims court, said County Attorney Paul Graf.

Lee, of Virgin, Utah, could not be reached for comment.

Graf said the county takes an average of one person a year to court. He said he knew of no others who had gone to jail.

"The operation of this TV system is a good faith attempt to provide a service for this area that otherwise could not be had," he said.

Other counties far from television markets bill residents or pay for translator systems out of property taxes, but that's not as fair as taxing owners of television sets, he said.

Werner Jailed For Contempt

NEW YORK (UPI) — Louis Werner, the only person convicted in the $5.8 million Lufthansa heist, has been sentenced to up to 18 months in jail for failing to answer a special grand jury's questions.

Werner, a former Lufthansa employee convicted of being the inside man in the robbery Dec 11 at Kennedy Airport, was found in contempt of court Tuesday by Judge Mark Costantino in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Costantino imposed the sentence after U.S. Attorney Edward Korman said that Werner refused to answer the grand jury's questions despite being granted immunity on Monday.

The judge said Werner, the only person tried in the case, will stay in jail until the grand jury completes its work or until he "purges himself of his contempt."

Werner faces up to 30 years in jail at his sentencing Friday on theft and conspiracy charges stemming from the largest cash robbery in U.S. history. He was convicted May 16.

Costantino ruled that any sentence imposed Friday will not begin until "the life of the special grand jury has expired" — apparently an attempt to induce Werner to disclose information about the heist.

U.S. Chamber Of Commerce Launches Newspaper

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP)— A weekly newspaper that unabashadly advocates the business viewpoint and a prime-time television news and interview show are expected to be launched soon by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The moves are part of an aggressive attitude taken in the past few years by the Chamber, which feels that in other years the business view hasn't been expressed forcefully or designed to reach a broad audience.

Planned also are $2.5 million of studios at the Chamber's Washington headquarters, where among other things, business people may learn how to testify before Congress and respond to media interviews.

While nobody at the Chamber says so, talks in the past with business leaders reveal that many of them have felt labor leaders have been more active and sometimes more effective in discussing vital issues.

Some people also felt the Chamber was too strongly identified with big business, which many independent business people will tell you is as much an enemy as big government or big unions.

Analysis

Since 1975, when Richard Lesher became chief operating officer, the image has changed. Membership, 52,000 in 1975, is now more than 80,000. A recent Chamber article proclaimed "Small Business Keeps America Working."

The Chamber has also become decidely outspoken and controversial on political and social issues. It lobbying efforts have become forceful and, more important, says Lesher, more credible.

Lesher, a former professor and assistant administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency, immediately gave the Chamber the impact that in years gone by it sometimes sought, but sometimes also feared.

He and his aides formed The National Chamber Litigation Center, a public interest law group that entered more than 30 court cases on behalf of business in its first two years of existence.

At nearly the same time, they began The National Chamber Alliance for Politics, a political action committee that claims to have "scored victories" in 60 percent of the 1978 races for House and Senate seats.

Simultaneously, the National Chamber Foundation has been researching key issues, such as health care costs. While nonpolitical, restricted by charter, the foundation can feed its findings to Chmber activists.

A possible setback, however, is the departure of chief economist Jack Carlson, known for the unusual speed with which he could assemble data for Congressional testimony or responses to media. Carlson is now executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors.

If through Carlson's leaving the Chamber has lost some ability to respond quickly, it may gain from the new communications effort by Carl Grant, like Lesher and Carlson, holder of a doctorate.

Grant's ambitious plans call for publication beginning next month of the weekly newspaper "Washington Report," which he predicts will have a circulation of 1.5 million within five years.

By September, he and his staff expect to have signed up scores of independent television stations for a midday Sunday show "It's Your Business," designed on the lines of network news interview shows.

The Chamber already has TV and radio shows, including "What's The Issue," currently on 400 radio stations. It publishes a magazine, "Nation's Business," circulation 1.2 million. And Lesher's weekly column, "Voice of Business," goes to 700 outlets.

But, says Grant, 39, the effort will expand. The Chamber, he said, wants to be known as the business adovcate. "We intend to be the foremost commentator on business issues."

Steel Order Plan Uses Computers

By ANDREW BLUM

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The days of total reliance on telephone and the mails may be numbered in the steel order game if a small group of businessmen has its way.

They are members of the American Iron & Steel Institute's systems communications committee. What they're pushing is the steel customer communication service, a uniform method of ordering steel.

The system, in which orders are placed directly from the customer's computer to the steelmaker's computer, also creates uniform classifications so there is a single product description no matter how many suppliers, thereby eliminating the confusion of varying descriptions for the same steel product.

Working on the project are employees of two Pittsburgh-based steel producers. Alan L. Komm, director of administrative services for United States Steel Corp., heads the effort, while Joe L. Parker, manager of marketing services for National Steel Corp., is a member of the communications committee.

The idea for the system came from steel users –such as Ford Motor Co. and American Can Co. –10 or 12 years ago, and has been under development ever since.

Basically the plan is designed to get all steel companies and customers on the same wave length to simplify ordering, cut time and save money. Right now only a handful of the industry's customers use the system, including Ford and A. O. Smith Inc., which produces auto parts.

The system will be accepted, National Steel's Parker said, because "the wave of the future in steel is electronic communication." U.S. Steel's Komm says so far the feedback has been positive.

But since the system is a joint effort of all steel companies, the question of government reaction arises, specifically that of the U.S. Justice Department. The government supports the system if it can improve productivity, the AISI spokesmen said, but the idea raised some eyebrows at Justice, an agency which often doesn't look too favorably on the steel industry.

Komm said the system has nothing to do with pricing, an area of sensitivity with both the government and the steelmakers. Rather, the system ends at the shipment point, he said, adding, "it was designed with the customer and the Justice Department in mind."

Although no other industry is said to have such a system, the steelmakers say they would not be averse to someone else picking up on the idea.

The system would give the domestic steel industry an edge on foreign steel companies. The only other country involved in the system is Canada.

But, as with other new ideas in industry, the final success or failure of the system rests with the customers. According to one user, it works for him but there is a long way to go before the idea is adopted for widespread use.

Edward Risk, an official of Ford Motor's Metal Stamping division, which uses 2,000 tons of steel per day, said he is happy with the system. He said it works fairly smoothly. It eliminates most phone calls although some follow-up conversations are needed, Risk said the AISI is wqorking hard pushing the idea, partly because the trade group spent 80,000 to 90,000 man-hours developing it.

Shop's Co-Owner Catches Suspect

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police say Mark Reese, 31, of Shaker Heights picked the wrong store when he allegedly dashed out of the Hermes Track & Raquet Shop without paying for a $15.98 gym bag.

Gary Easter, also 31 and co-owner of the downtown shop, gave chase.

It was no contest. Easter, who regularly runs 10 miles a day, told police that after a few blocks, the suspect tossed the bag aside, yelling over his shoulder, "You can have your old bag."

Easter kept running. After about one mile, he said, the other man collapsed to the ground. Two passing motorists stopped and helped Easter walk the man to a nearby police station, where Reese was charged with petty larceny.

Group Urges Carter To Help Refugees

NEW YORK (AP) — Vowing "not to stand by idly" as tens of thousands of Southeast Asian refugees drown or starve, a group of prominent citizens has urged President Carter to lead the world in saving them.

The Citizens Commission on Indochinese Refugees send a message Monday night urging Carter to double the monthly quota of "Vietamese boat people, ethnic Chinese and Cambodian refugees to the United States" and to ask Congress for a refugee resettlement fund of $10 million. The monthly quota currently is 7,000.

"Our group feels the present moment is like the 1930s when millions of Jews and other human beings were being put to death before the eyes of the world," said Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum of the Amerian Jewish Committee.

Italian Resort Caters To All

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

OSTIA, Italy — Rome's Rockaway or Coney Island, her subway summer resort by the sea, may well be the most classified, stratified stretch of coastline anywhere on earth.

Mulligan's Stew

The grainy gray sands, about as inviting as the road into a gravel pit, sweep away from Rome's Fiumicino airport in a series of haphazardly fenced off beaches that hold something for everyone.

There are some elegant cabana clubs for Rome's patricians and politicians, a number of fine seafood restaurants fronting on the sea, family picnic groves among the scrubby pine covered dunes now scarlet with wind-blown poppies and a number of campsites for colonies of campers and caravaners who come from all over Europe.

But only Ostia shakes out its sands to accommodate in separate coves the most extraordinary tides of humanity.

There is, almost in order, a nuns' beach, a tots' beach, a carabinieri beach for the police and their families, a topless beach, a nudie beach, a beach for gays and a beach for prostitutes. Democratically but aloofly sandwiched between the gays and the prostitutes, there is also a private beach for the president of the republic, an octogenerian who seldom uses it.

"Ostia's decadence began in Constantine's time," says the old Blue Guide to Rome, which is a long time for any resort to be going down hill.

Discounting the toga-less tribunes who used to splash about in the Tyrrhenian Sea back in Pliny the Elder's day, Rome's seaside scene wended its way onto the wild side only in the last few days.

This latter day decadence dates from the time the Italian bikini began to approximate in skimpiness its rival in the Western Hemisphere, the Brazilian string bikini, known generically in both countries as the "tanga," or the thong.

On the pasta-packed poitrines of the Roman sea nymphs the tanga meets the eye as a pleasing packaged bit of folk craft, as if someone had been hanging bocci balls in macrame. From the rear, two mandolins seem to be playing a one-string recessional.

The monokini, which jiggles its way down the coast from the French Riviera, soon made short shrift of traditional Italian modesty in dress, although total nudity as practiced in the outer reaches of Ostia's "spiaggia libera" — the free beach — is still rare.

For 400 lire (about 50 cents), the price of a ticket on the Metropolitina, Rome's subway, the visiting voyeur can easily crash the fences of all Ostia's way out watering holes by the simple expedient of walking barefoot along the shore. All except one, that is. The president's beach at Castel Porziano is guarded by security people with submachine guns.

There are no signs marking out the separate strands for the differing strata of the citizenry, but the children's beach has a colorful sprawl of playground equipment and sand castles and the beach for nuns is near the octagonal dome of Regina Pacis church.

Out of sight of the frolicking coppers, the prostitutes and gays cavort near the ruins of Pliny's villa on grounds once given over to the royal hunt. When out for a day in the sun, the ladies of the evening seem to favor conservative one-piece bathing costumes as if unwilling to give away any trade secrets.

The topless and nudie beaches, just down the line from one of the most expensive fish restaurants, reminds the well read tourist that Ostia, once the mouth of the Tiber always has been a godless place given to strange cults.

In Hadrian's time, when emperor-worship was in vogue hereabouts, there were temples to Cupid and Bacchus, the dieties in charge of love and booze. Sundown swingers used to gather in the tepidarium and the caldidarium — the pool and steam room — of the Baths of Neptune for Saturday night orgies.

In the ninth century, Pope Gregory IV tried to rescue Ostia from its decadence by enclosing it within walls and renaming it Gregoriopoed. St. Augustine died at a hotel in Ostia as he was about to embark for Africa.

In the days of Borgias, Julias II while still a cardinal added the picturesque castle that still rises above the dunes, After that the papacy lost interest in reforming the town and turned it into a penal colony for offenders against church law.

"So you are going to have a bath," the cab driver will exclaim if you direct him to Lido di Ostia, smiling roguishly to himself at the thought that you probably need one. Unless you specify, he will deposit you at whichever beach he thinks suits your lifestyle.

The ambiance at each is the same: a spray of beach umbrellas, a surfside jangle of well-greased bodies broiling in the sun, vendors hawking balloons, ice cream, fresh coconuts; rusty freighters heading out to sea, jets out of Fiumincino dumping kerosene into an amber sky.

Only the people are different. But whether bare as one of Bernini's statues or chaste as a Carmelite, they all follow the lovely Italian custom of minding their own business.

Kelly Learning American Way Of Life

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (UPI) — Daniel Kelly, 38, has begun driving a car and partially earning his keep.

If that age seems a bit late to start, consider this: he has been in the United States only about five months after 21 years in Chinese communist forced labor camps and prisons.

Born in China of an American missionary father and a Chinese mother, Kelly came to America — the homeland he had never before seen — in late January with his wife, their three children, and his mother. He shares a home in the Indianapolis suburbs with his sister, Elizabeth Peabody, and her husband and two children.

Kelly has earned some money by lecturing and consulting on China, he said. His wife — a nurse in China — is working on an assembly line that produces automotive parts, but she hopes eventually to retrain herself for nursing in America.

"I've lectured at the American Bar Association workshop in Baltimore and at a conference in Washington," Kelly said. The ABA workshop, he said concerned normalization of American-Chinese relationss.

His first trip alone on the open road in his 1965 station wagon was earlier this month to speak to the Indiana Bankers Association at French Lick, in southern Indiana, and to another group at Hope, he said.

Kelly insists he was not afraid or even apprehensive about the drive and managed to avoid losing his way.

"As long as I'm on Earth and can communicate with people, I'm not afraid of anything," he said. "They're all human beings. If I were on the moon or in space, I might be afraid.

"After what I've gone through, I'm not even afraid of death."

He still is seeking a job and hopes the lecture circuit will lead to one, he said. His potential income also includes an autobiography he has just begun and a film offer from Taiwan.

"They want to make a movie about my trying to escape imprisonment. I suppose it will have to do more with propaganda than with the story," he said.

Kelly said he can qualify for a good job, even though he performed only menial work in China's prisons.

"It's because I was thrown into prison that I was able to know more about China than the Chinese themselves," he said.

"An ordinary person would just stay where he was. He would know only what was happening in his local area. In prison, you had everybody from all over the country coming to you — from all walks of life."

Many former high officials and intellectuals spoke freely to a fellow inmate, he said, figuring their situation could get no worse.

Fellow prisoners included some Chinese professors who had been educated in America and had returned to China but "were outspoken and eventually landed in jail."

"That was the greatest mistake the Chinese made, was in putting me into prison," he said.

Woman Dons King Kong Outfit To Try Out For Summer Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Antoinette Herring thought the world was ready for a female King Kong when she donned an ape costume to apply for a summer job that called for "extra-gentle men" able to stand "summer heat in itchy, hairy garb."

Management wanted two persons to play Kong at the quarter-mile-high Empire State building, where he giant ape fell to his death in the 1933 film classic, "King Kong."

The summer Kongs will work on alternate weekdays between 10 a.m and 4 p.m and earn $50 a day for passing out balloons and "not getting testy."

About 150 persons filled out applications, but only 50 showed up this week to demonstrate their "ape-like" characteristics. Miss Herring, 23, was the only woman.

Miss Herring, a Manhattan Community College student and dancer, jumped, groaned and pounded her chest several times to survive to become one of the three finalists.

Robert Tinker, vice president and general manager of the building and one of the two judges, asked Miss Herring what she thought of King Kong being a woman.

"It's time for it," she responded.

Outside in full gorilla costume, she talked with several children and gave out balloons. She appeared very nervous.

"You were very good," Tinker told Miss Herring in saying she was eliminated.

He added, "You should keep in touch because I'm sure we'll be able to use you before the end of the summer."

The two "apes" hired were Ron Soffer, 28, an out-of-work comic, and Richard Albers, 25, of New York.

—Don Jay of Manhattan tried jumping around and singing "I Love New York" to get the job.

—Jim Collins, a Staten Island high school student, wore a New York Rangers hockey shirt to stand out.

—Richard Merton, a student at the University of Florida, said he "was a gentle King Kong" in hopes of landing the job.

—Glenn Graver, 19, a student at New York University, thought wearing the head and running into the ladies room to scare the occupants would do the trick. It didn't.

Kidnapping Charge Filed

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (UPI) — A childless married woman who abducted a seriously ill 5-week-old infant from a hospital crib has been charged with kidnapping.

Beth Ann Foster, 31, of Troy, faces a life prison sentence if convicted of the charge.

Police, who described Mrs. Foster as "very disturbed," said she posed as a social worker, nurse and even as the child's aunt to make it easy for her to enter the room in Beaumont Hospital, remove the baby's intravenous tubes and carry the infant out of the building Sunday night.

Mrs. Foster Tuesday was arraigned in Oakland County Circuit Court.

The infant, Monique Nicole Lee, suffers from a rare bone disease. She was reported in stable condition Tuesday but doctors had said she could have died if she had been without medical attention for much longer.

Working on an anonymous tip, police found Monique lying on a sofa in Mrs. Foster's home about 24 hours after the abduction.

Police have no motive for the kidnapping, but officers had said they never expected to receive a ransom note. They said they had been looking for a mentally disturbed person.

The victim's mother, Ann Tookes, 19, of Detroit, said she did not hold a grudge against Mrs. Foster.

Rapid Transit Begins In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — The first link of Atlanta's long-awaited rapid transit system — the first in the South — goes into service Saturday, fulfilling a promise that many felt would never be kept.

Gas-conscious commuters on the city's East Side are expected to flock to the 6.7-mile rapid rail line that for 25 cents will carry the rider from suburban Decatur and Avondale Estates to state offices and Georgia State University downtown.

The "East line," as it is known, is just part of a planned 52.9-mile system, scheduled for completion in 1989, that will link Hartsfield International Airport and other outlying areas with the downtown business district.

"It's a modest beginning but it's a start," says Alan F. Kiepper, who has piloted the project through political squalls for seven years — since long before the current gas crisis turned Americans' thinking to mass transit.

Rail commuter systems drew little interest for decades as auto travel grew, but both San Francisco and Washington have opened downtown rail lines in the past decade, and such lines are being developed in Buffalo, N.Y., Miami and Baltimore.

In Atlanta, citizens were openly skeptical when the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority announced plans in the early '70s for a high-speed rail system deep beneath the heart of the capital city.

Construction delays and skyrocketing costs heightened that skepticism. MARTA officials originally said the entire system could be completed by 1980 at a cost of $1.3 billion. It is now scheduled to be completed in 1989 at an estimated cost of $3.2 billion.

But the streamlined silver and black MARTA test trains zipping along at speeds up to 70 miles per hour along the graceful elevated arch of the East line have quieted many of the skeptics.

And Kieppe, MARTA's general manager, has taken steps to assure that Saturday's opening will be incident free. Scheduled for last Christmas, the opening was delayed for six months to work bugs out of the rail cars that arrived from France behind schedule.

And to steer clear of problems encountered by San Francisco's BART system, MARTA abandoned plans for a fully-automated line, choosing instead a semi-automated one, controlled in part by operators.

"Full automation depends on high technology, and if there are problems, you're really in trouble. Computers do go down," Kiepper said in a recent interview.

Otherwise, the east line represents the latest in rapid transit technology.

The air-conditioned cars, with upholstered seats and full carpeting, can be controlled by a central computer once in motion. Station platforms are scanned by remote-controlled cameras, and MARTA workers in a centralized communications center can control everything from the turnstiles to restroom doorlocks.

The smooth, 12-minute ride over the treetops of East Atlanta will be a surprise to resident Yankees accustomed to the old, spine-rattling subways of some Northern cities.

The earth-tone interior of the cars is whisper quiet as the trains streak along welded track laid across rubber-like shock absorbers.

The initial 13.7-mile phase of the MARTA rail system will be completed with the opening of the 4.7-mile "West line" in December and a stubby north-south anchor line, a portion of which burrows through the hard bedrock of Peachtree Street, will be ready in 1981.

To accommodate downtown merchants and hotel operators fearful of having the main artery peeled open, MARTA has been digging a pair of 2,700 foot tunnels beneath the city at a cost of $42.5 million.

In all, 4½ miles of the system's $1.04 billion first phase will be underground, the remainder at ground level or elevated on modernistic concrete supports.

The federal government, through the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, will provide about $800 million of the first-phase cost. The remaining $243 million comes from the 1 percent MARTA sales tax levied in Atlanta and in Fulton and DeKalb counties.

Douglas Campion of the mass transportation administration says the assured local funding source will be an advantage for MARTA in competing against other new subway systems for future federal funds.

He said the mass transportation administration is "terribly excited" about the Atlanta line since it is the first rapid transit system built completely under federal environmental, zoning and relocation procedures. "It's our baby," he said.

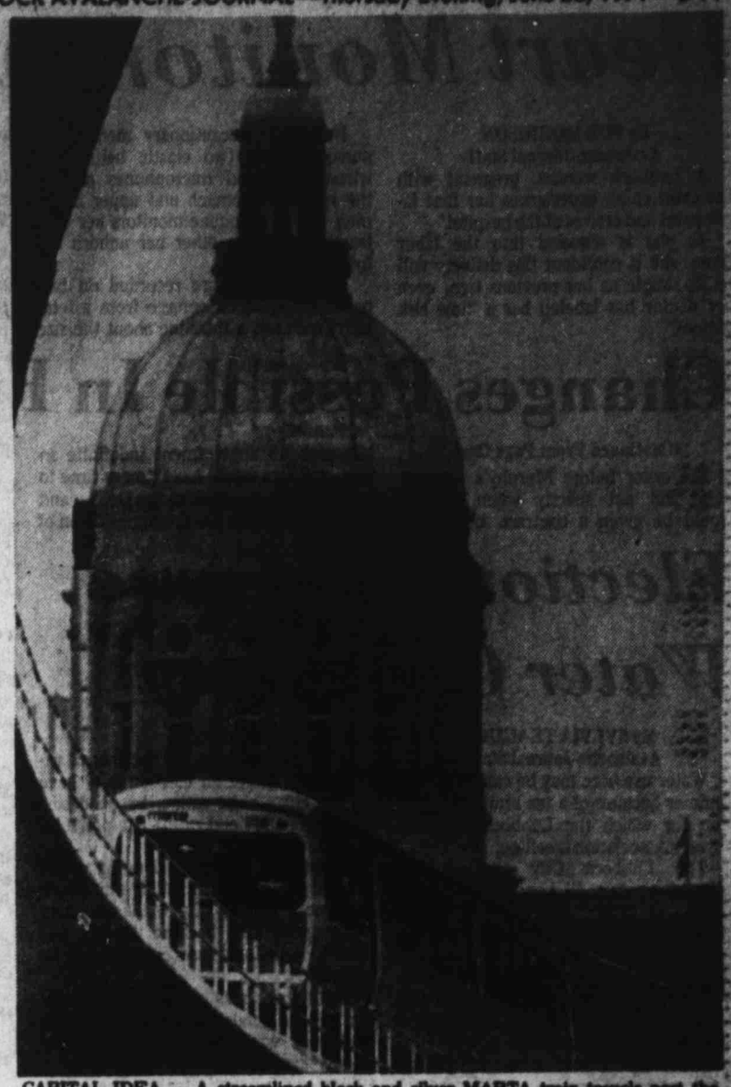
Kiepper said he is "ebullient" about the opening and believes the MARTA system will give Atlanta a "tremendous economic advantage over its competitors — Dallas, New Orleans and Birmingham — who are not doing anything creative in public transportation."

"Businesses deciding whether to expand are looking to communities with rapid transit systems," so their employees can get to work quickly and inexpensively, he said.

The MARTA system, once completed, will help relieve crowded freeways in serving a metropolitan population of 1.8 million, Kiepper said.

"Atlanta developed on the assumption there would be an unfettered use of automobiles," he said. "We know that's got to change.

"Automobiles will continue to be primary mode of transportation. What we are trying to develop is an alternative so that people will not be entirely chained to their cars."



CAPITAL IDEA — A streamlined black and silver MARTA train travels past the capitol in Atlanta moving along an elevated portion of the 6.7-mile rapid rail line scheduled to open Saturday. The "east line" is the first completed section of a planned 52.9-mile system designed to connect Atlanta with its suburbs. (AP Laserphoto)

Crib-Related Injuries Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some good news from the Consumer Product Safety Commission for a change: there has been a major decline in crib-related injuries and deaths.

The commission launched a crib-safety campaign in 1973 and a year later regulations went into effect to improve safety on newly manufactured cribs.

But cribs are often used for many years in families, and commission officials note that some older cribs may still be in use.

For the older ones, the commission urges use of bumper pads on the crib sides to solve the problem of too much space between the slats. The pads can help prevent babies from getting their heads caught between the slats and strangling.

The newer cribs have slats closer together to prevent this problem.

Another safety precaution suggested is to roll up large bath towels and place them between the mattress and the crib sides if the mattress doesn't fit tightly. This can help prevent babies from wedging their heads between the mattress and sides or end panels of the crib.

Before the education campaign and regulation on cribs the agency estimated an annual toll of 7,410 injuries and 131 deaths involving cribs. Since then, injuries have declined 44 percent and deaths 36 pecent, commission officials report.

Heart Monitor Indicates Unborn Child's Condition

By SUE MORRISON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock woman, pregnant with her third child, experiences her first labor pains and arrives at the hospital.

As she is wheeled into the labor room, she is confident this delivery will be as simple as her previous two; even her doctor has labeled her a "low risk patient"

But as a precautionary measure, a nurse attaches two elastic belts with wired ultrasound microphones around the mother's stomach and upper abdomen. One microphone monitors her contractions and the other her unborn baby's heartbeat rate.

Both readings are recorded on two paper strips which emerge from a fetal heart monitor, a machine about the size of a small filing cabinet.

As the woman's contractions intensify, the monitor's readouts show the baby's heart is not reacting normally to the increased pressure. The nurse immediately notifies the woman's doctor.

The doctor attempts to relieve the baby's distress but the monitor indicates the baby still is in trouble. The woman is quickly unhooked from the machine and wheeled into the delivery room where the doctor performs an emergency Caesarian section delivery.

"Without the use of the monitor it is very possible this child would have been born with brain damage," the doctor says later.

Whether a woman is giving birth to her first or third child, most doctors agree that using the fetal heart monitor can decrease an infant's chance of death and brain damage during delivery.

But there still are doctors and patients skeptical about using the machine.

One Lubbock obstetrician says that most women would gladly use the monitor if they knew about its benefits.

"Responsibility always comes back to the doctor," he said, "and some of them don't like the machine, so they don't offer it to their patients."

The main reasons some doctors dislike the monitor, he said, are because they don't like to take the time to watch the machine (a necessity in smaller hospitals where untrained nurses are not available), they don't want to take the time to learn how to read the machine and they simply don't like the idea of "something new."

Women who use the monitor have the benefit of seeing the readings and watching exactly what's happening with their baby just before birth. They can even listen to the baby's heartbeat through a speaker.

Dr. Harlan Giles, an obstetrician-gynecologist at the Texas Tech School of Medicine, says that most women receive a sense of security by being monitored and knowing their baby is being watched constantly.

"In my past seven years of practice, I've never had a mother complain because she was monitored, although there have been those who were upset because a monitor wasn't available to them," Giles said.

"Husbands like the monitor, too; some use the blinking light on the machine to coordinate Lamaze breathing exercises," he said.

The monitor shows the relationship between the mother's contractions and the baby's heartbeat rate, which is important in determining how the baby is reacting to the pressure being exerted within the womb.

A fetal heartbeat that is too slow or too fast could be an early indication that the baby is not receiving enough oxygen — a major cause of infant brain damage.

Should the monitor indicate a baby is having trouble breathing, an intrauterine device can be inserted to take a tiny blood sample from the baby's scalp. A blood test is conducted to determine exactly how much oxygen the baby is receiving.

One of the biggest complaints about the monitor is that doctors have seen signs indicating fetal distress and have immediately performed Caesarian sections when the operations were not needed.

But Giles explained that just because the monitor indicates fetal problems, other corrective procedures can be used before a doctor performs a Caesarian section.

"Sometimes just rolling the mother on her side or giving her oxygen through a face mask will stop the distress signs," he said.

"Also, if a mother is taking medication to induce labor, the amount of the drug can be lessened. The mother isn't the only one who reacts to medication; her baby's reactions may show on the monitor."

There are doctors who abuse the monitor by relying on the machine totally, but Giles said those physicians were in the minority.

"The important thing about the monitor is that it be considered one part of the total fetus evaluation," he said. "The monitor is no substitute for maternity attention, and patients should be educated as to its benefits and use."

Changes Possible In Furr's Operation

of the order before Murphy's appointment did not specify when Murphy would be given a contract, but rather left such an appointment indefinite so that creditors would have "more time to evaluate the operation of the Debtor and the overall makeup and compensation of its management."

While the creditors say they do not necessarily oppose Murphy's appointment, they question the fact that the appointment came less than a month after the company filed for relief with the court.

Creditors say they want a more concrete idea of the plan Furr's may submit for repaying the more than $56 million owed to almost 5,000 creditors before agreeing to any kind of permanent management.

Possible payment arrangments also may be discussed at the July meeting, although the judge has not set a specific date for the plan to be filed. But any arrangement Furr's ultimately files with its creditors will not erase the company's debts. Instead, it will provide a step-by-step method of payment.

The payment method filed then must be approved by 51 percent of the unsecured creditors, which are creditors who do not have any property to repossess if they are not paid. The 51 percent is based upon both the number of creditors and the amount owed them.

However, the Furr's Chapter XI filing is extremely unusual, creditors said Wednesday, in that only two of the creditors are secured, or have property to repossess.

The secured creditors are Mr. and Mrs. Art Lang of Las Cruces, who sold their New Mexico liquor license to Furr's for $76,132, and I.L. Beavers of Alamo, who sold his liquor license for a Hobbs package store to the company for $54,670.

If Furr's is unable to pay the debts, the liquor licenses will revert to the previous owners.

The remaining $56 million in debts is unsecured.

Among Furr's major trade creditors are Gold Bond Stamp Company, owed $5.2 million, and Topco Associates of Chicago, owed slightly more than $1 million.

Major Lubbock creditors and the amounts owed them include Borden Dairy Service, $646,759; Plains Poultry, $530,144; Cal-Maine Foods, $570,514; Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Lubbock, $259,906; Rainbo Baking of Lubbock, $215,413; Bell Dairy Products, $138,385; Baird's Bakery, $149,449; and Robert Heath Trucking Inc., $152,801.

Election May Cause Water Curtailment

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Water use here may be curtailed next summer because of a tax limitation election for which the Lubbock Property Owners Association is calling.

The Lubbock City Council had planned an Aug. 21 bond sale of $8.82 million in capital improvement bonds, primarily to finance water system improvements.

However, the specter of a tax limitation election may prevent any such sale until next spring — not in time to prevent the long, dry summer.

A New York bond rating official has told city council members they may not be able to get a rating for city bonds if such an election is in the offing.

Ben Phillips, assistant vice president in charge of ratings for Moody's Investors Service Inc., met with council members in April in Lubbock.

Phillips refused to tell the council exactly what effect an election may have on the city's bond rating, but said suspension of the bond rating is a possibility.

Suspension of the bond rating would prevent the city from selling any bonds until next spring, City Manager Larry Cunningham said, because the city will have to wait for a new city audit to be completed.

Until the bonds are sold, Cunningham said no funds are available to drill additional water wells in the Bailey County sandhills and to build a pump station and reservoir to improve water pressure in Southwest Lubbock.

The "main concern" is the drilling of 17 additional wells in the sandhills, which were to get under contract by October in anticipation of increased water demands next summer.

About $4 million in the Aug. 21 bond sale was earmarked for the wells, Cunningham said.

Land already has been purchased for the reservoir, to be built at the northwest corner of 82nd Street and Memphis Avenue.

The facility, which is expected to cost about $2 million, would improve the extremely low water pressure in Southwest Lubbock. The pressure problem has produced concerns about fire protection in the area.

Essentially, officials agree, the petitions for a tax limitation election are having the same effects on the city as lawsuits filed by James Marshall that continually have held up city bond sales while prices increased.

Leaders Threaten To File Civil Suit

DALLAS (AP) — Mexican American leaders angry over Justice Department refusal to prosecute in the case of an Ector County inmate who died in jail last year say they will file a civil suit against the agency to guarantee such prosecution in the future.

At a Wednesday news conference, the Hispanics said the death of Larry Lozano last year was a case of police brutality.

Lozano died Jan. 22, 1978, 11 days after he was arrested on drunken driving charges.

Attorney Ruben Sandoval said the Justice Department was trying to perpetuate "misinformation and misconceptions" about the Lozano case.

Justice officials said medical opinion was split on whether or not Lozano's death was an accident.

Sandoval said 92 bruises and wounds on Lozano's body indicated police brutality.

After showing newsmen color photographs that showed blackened bruises and open wounds on Lozano's body, Sandoval asked, "How can anyone say this man was not subject to unreasonable force?

"We are serving a simple message to the Justice Department," Sandoval said. "We want an explanation."

Paralyzing Strike Staged In Spain

VALENCIA, Spain (AP) — Workers responding to a general strike call nearly paralyzed this eastern city of 1.5 million inhabitants Wednesday.

Spain's five major labor unions called the 24-hour strike to protest the police killing of a man on Monday. The killing reportedly occurred when market workers demonstrating for better pay clashed with police.

All major industrial concerns in suburban Valencia were affected by the strike.

Byrd To Warn Soviets Of Senate's SALT Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd is flying to Moscow to tell the Russians they will have to expect the Senate to put its stamp on the SALT II treaty.

And Republican leader Howard H. Baker says he will actively oppose the strategic arms agreement unless the White House and the Soviet Union signal a willingness to consider "reasonable amendments."

Before leaving for Moscow today, Byrd pleaded with senators not to rush to judgment on SALT II and to avoid taking hardened positions at least until the conclusion of hearings now set to begin July 9.

Many supporters of the treaty expressed regret at Baker's conclusion that the pact is fatally flawed in its present form because it unfairly provides the Soviet Union with "a substantial strategic superiority."

But supporters as well as opponents joined in denouncing demands by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that the Senate make no changes in the treaty whatsoever.

In a news conference Wednesday, Baker said he is not willing to work to improve and ratify the treaty "under Soviet threats of 'grave consequences' if the Senate and the American people don't knuckle under."

Byrd said that while in Moscow he will attempt to impress on the Soviets the constitutional role of the Senate in the consideration of treaties.

And one SALT supporter, who asked not to be identified, said Gromyko's remarks have been widely resented and are proving counterproductive.

"Gromyko shouldn't be talking about what the Senate should do on treaties," he said. "He obviously hasn't passed fifth grade civics and until he does I think he should keep his mouth shut."

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, took exception to Baker's assertion that SALT II allows the Soviet Union 308 heavy SS-18 misiles while the United tates has none.

Baker said he would be willing to make "generous" concessions if the Soviets would agree to eliminate or limit its SS-18 force.

Culver said Baker is wrong in contending that elimination of the Soviet SS-18 missiles would in itself eliminate the vulnerability of the U.S. Minuteman missile force to Soviet attack.

He said the Soviet Union would retain several hundred smaller ICBM's with improved accuracy which also can threaten U.S. ICBM's.

One Senate defense analyst and SALT II supporter, who also asked not to be identified by name, contended Baker is inaccurate on a number of key facts.

He noted that Baker supported the agreement made by President Richard M. Nixon at Vladivostok which permits the Russians to have SS-18s.

But he said SALT II, unlike the Vladivostok agreement, places a cap on the number of warheads each SS-18 can carry. "If we fail to ratify SALT, those 308 missiles could carry many times more missiles than under SALT," he said.

"The number of Soviet ICBM times the number of warheads on each missile equals the threat," he continued. "Under this agreement at least you have the thing capped. They can't get any bigger than that."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, a leader of the Senate's anti-SALT forces, praised Baker for his decision and said he shares Baker's concerns about the SS-18, the exclusion of the Soviet Backfire bomber, and the problems of verifying Soviet compliance with the pact.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he believes both Baker and Garn ignore the consequences to U.S. national security if SALT II is not ratified.

"I agree that SALT II is not good enough," Cranston said. "It must be followed by other SALT treaties before we can say we have harnessed the danger of mutual nuclear suicide."

Consumer Group Urging Strike To Protest Spiraling Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers are being urged to strike for one day this fall to protest the government's failure to dampen inflation, which has skyrocketed to an annual rate of 13.4 percent.

"Unless consumers stand up in an organized manner ... they will never be able to deal with the deterioriating and fast crumbling" economy, consumer advocate Ralph Nader told a coalition of 70 consumer, labor, religious and senior citizen groups here Wednesday.

The coalition — Consumers Opposed to Inflation in the Necessities — launched what its leaders hope will be a series of teach-ins reminiscent of the grassroots protest of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

While applauding many of the coalition's long-term proposals — including efforts to expand and diversify the nation's energy supply and to deregulate the trucking industry — Kahn said controlling oil prices is "pretending" about its real cost.

Such a move back to energy price controls, he said, would discourage conservation and intensify demand for the fast-diminishing product. And that, he said, would only feed inflation.

Similarly, Kahn said subsidizing food and cutting mortgage rates would increase demand and cause prices to rise.

Abortion Foes Win In HEW Funding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House early today passed by a vote of 327 to 84 a $73.5 billion appropriation for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare after a frenzied debate over prohibiting payment for abortions.

Rejecting proposals to liberalize the abortion restriction or remove it from the bill outright, a lopsided majority of members insisted on allowing welfare money for abortions only when the mother's life is in danger.

The bill's outlay is $2.2 billion above the fiscal 1979 appropriation but is $204 million less than President Carter requested. It includes $60.9 billion for HEW, $11.3 billion for labor and $1.3 billion for related agencies.

During hours of rapid-fire debate, the House heard more than 30 amendments, passed 10 and rejected 15. Two were withdrawn and others were ruled out of order.

The adopted amendments added a few million dollars in cost. Among rejected amendments were proposals that would have added merely $250 million and others that would have cut out $1 billion.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, raised the abortion issue with a move to delete that section from the bill entirely. He lost on a voice vote.

Stokes' supporters joined ranks with sponsors of an amendment to leave the law as it now is, but that move also failed, 180-241.

Present law allows payments for abortions if bearing the child would endanger the mother's life or cause long-term health impairment, and also in cases of rape or incest if promptly reported. By the time the abortion issue was raised, Rep. William Natcher, D-Ken., floor manager of the bill, had imposed strict time limits on debates in order to pass the bill before quitting.

A number of Republican abortion foes pooled their skimpy debating times — just over one minute each and gave it all to Rep. Henry Hyde, RIll., who preached the gospel of "Right to Life."

The National Abortion Rights Action League promptly issued a statement denouncing the House action.

"It is apparent that the House shows no sympathy for the plight of a woman who is the victim of rape or incest, who is suffering from a serious disease such as cancer, heart disease or diabetes, or who is carrying a fetus with severe or fatal defects," the statement said.

The group, calling itself COIN, unveiled a 100-page anti-inflation program, highlighted by immediate calls to reimpose oil price controls, place a clamp on health care costs, subsidize consumers' food bills and lower mortgage rates.

LPOA Officials Believe Council Unresponsive

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Because Lubbock city officials have been unresponsive to demands for economy in city government, the Lubbock Property Owners Association felt compelled to submit petitions calling for a tax limitation election, association directors said Wednesday.

At a news conference at the group's Monterey Center office, LPOA chairman Bob Green said association members are "not against government, but we are for government with a sense of responsibility to the people it serves and with a sense of honor in the service."

Green said that because he has "seen no evidence that the city administration is going to or has begun to pursue this line of thinking," the association found it necessary to file the petitions for an election "to decide some of the issues on taxation."

The LPOA has proposed three charter amendments to be submitted to Lubbock voters.

One would limit the city tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation,and a second would restrict the assessment ratio to the current 60 percent of market value.

Also, the proposed amendments would require city voters' approval of any increase in the tax rate or assessment ratio, even if the increase keeps taxes below the current level.

Association director Elmer East expressed concern the petitions will be interpreted to mean the group is attempting to restrict Lubbock's growth.

The three amendments, if approved, would "do nothing, but give us a voice in how the money is spent," East said. "We don't want to hamper growth."

East, an attorney, said he interprets the $1.12 tax rate limitation only to apply to tax-supported city operations and to funds for the Board of City Development, which receives a nickel of the tax rate.

The limitation would not apply to future bonded indebtedness of the city, East said.

East admitted he "had serious doubts" about the language in the amendment when the LPOA general membership voted to launch the petition drive in February. At that time, East unsuccessfully submitted an alternative amendment specifying the tax limit would not apply to bonded indebtedness.

"I still think it would have been better the other way," East said, adding the City Council can submit an amendment with more acceptable wording to voters when the election is held on the LPOA proposals.

"I invite them to submit it," he said.

When pressed for specifics as to how city officials have been unresponsive, association attorney Warren Goss said the city taxes have not been cut since last fall, when the tax rate was reduced from $1.41 to $1.12.

When the LPOA demanded a 30 percent city tax cut last year, the group also was told "it was impossible," Goss said. "Actually, it was not impossible, and the cuts (to make the reduction) were made."

"They promised, when we made our initial appearance, to do everything possible...to seek out expenditures which were not necessary," Goss said.

"We don't feel like that's been done."

Green said there were other "ideas and methods to economize and to reduce taxes and expenditures" that haven't been implemented. He singled out city employees being allowed to take municipal vehicles home after work.

He also referred to the City Council's pursuit of legislation permitting a municipal court of record in Lubbock as an example of unresponsiveness.

He charged that city officials never consulted municipal or county judges who would be affected by the new court operation, and claimed there will be "substantially increased costs" of operating the city court system.

The LPOA collected 15,252 signatures on the petitions calling for the election, Green said, and about 12,000 of the signatures are those of registered voters.

When the group officially will present the petitions to the city council is unknown. Green only would say the presentation will occur "at the earliest possible date."

An attempt to present the petitions at today's city council meeting failed because of notice requirements under the Texas Open Meetings Law.

That law says all items on the council agenda must be posted 72 hours in advance of the meeting, but Green did not ask to present the petitions until Tuesday.

"Some of us will be at the meeting," Green said, "but not necessarily for the primary purpose of presenting the petitions."

However, Goss said if the group can get the petitions submitted today, it will.

Most likely the petitions will be submitted to the council at its July 12 meeting. Following the submission, the council has 30 to 90 days to call an election.

The two remaining dates for elections this year are Aug. 4 and Nov. 7.

City Woman Beaten, Pushed From Vehicle

A Lubbock woman reportedly was beaten and pushed out of her car shortly after midnight after she resisted sexual advances made toward her by a man and a woman.

The 41-year-old victim was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at Highland Hospital, suffering from multiple cuts, bruises and possible broken ribs.

Two men told police they found the woman, abandoned and naked from the waist up, at 82nd Street and Frankfort Avenue. They said they were taking her to the hospital when they decided to stop at the store and call police.

When first questioned, the woman reportedly refused to tell police what happened, saying, "I don't want anyone to know."

However, at the hospital, the victim said she had been assaulted by a man and woman whom she had given a ride from a 19th Street bar.

Police were told that while in the car the female passenger began pulling off the woman's blouse. When the victim resisted, the pair beat her and threw her out of the 1978 white and blue Buick, according to reports.

The suspects then allegedly drove off in their victim's car. Both were described as Mexican-American, between 18 and 25 years old, and short. The man reportedly was thin and sported a mustache. The female assailant was of medium build.

In other activity, police went to Methodist Hospital about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday and questioned a man who said he had been struck in the head with a tire tool.

However, the 33-year-old victim reportedly refused to reveal the identity of his attacker.

A 27-year-old Lubbock woman who was walking against traffic in the middle of the street was arrested Wednesday by a police officer directing traffic at Fourth Street and University Avenue.

The woman, who reports show already had been involved in three civil disturbances this week, was arrested and taken to the Methodist Hospital psychiatric ward after a mentally ill warrant was issued on her.

The same officer also arrested a 26-year-old Lubbock man who assaulted the officer when he tried to arrest the woman.

The officer said he was directing traffic at the intersection about 12:15 p.m. Wednesday when he noticed the woman walking toward him in the middle of the street.

The officer said that when he tried to escort her out of the street, she pulled a dagger from her blouse. The officer took the throwing knife from the woman and put her in his police car, reports show.

The officer then was approached by a man who tried to take the knife from him, according to reports. The officer said the man told him he would not let the officer take the woman away. After allegedly shoving the policeman, the man was arrested for assault on a peace officer.

A 30-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was assaulted by her boyfriend, who was angry that she forgot his birthday.

The woman said she let the man into her apartment about midnight Tuesday. She said the man complained that she had forgotten his birthday. Then he took off one shoe and beat her on the head and shoulders, she said.

The woman suffered a cut to the head and a bruised jaw.

A new refrigerated air conditioning unit was stolen from the Lyons Chapel Baptist Church about 3 a.m. Wednesday, police were told.

Police said someone broke into the church by prying open a window in the church's kitchen. The burglars stole the air conditioner, valued at about $700. A woman who lives across the street from the church, located at East 24th Street and Quirt Avenue, said she saw a car drive away from the church about 3 a.m. Wednesday.

MISSING — Tyra Christine Heath, 6, has been missing from her home in Mesquite since Tuesday night. The child's mother, Mrs. Janis Heath, said she last saw the little girl outside the apartment building where other children were playing. It was the first time Tyra had been allowed to play outside since the family moved to Mesquite from Tyler about two weeks ago. Police and neighbors continue to search for the child. (AP Laserphoto)

FATHER AGAIN

MESSINA, Sicily (AP) — The 32-year-old "Sultan of Cuccubello" has become a father for the 11th time while in jail awaiting trial on a charge of procuring. The youngest of the seven women who live with Giuseppe Scaffidi, 20-year-old Giuseppina Occorso, gave birth to a girl Wednesday. Scaffidi was arrested earlier this year after his father told police his son offered to sell him one of the women. The women told journalists they were happy living with Scaffidi and praised his kindness.

White Must Validate Six Clements' Vetoes

AUSTIN (UPI) — Attorney General Mark White will have to determine if Gov. Bill Clements' veto power extends to six rider provisions he eliminated from the Legislature's $20.2 billion appropriation bill.

Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Wednesday asked for White's legal opinion on the validity of Clements' veto of the riders.

"We wouldn't have asked for the opinion if we hadn't thought there were very serious questions about the legality of the vetoes," Presnal said. "Some I think are pretty clearly beyond his power to veto, and others might be questionable.

Presnal said courts and previous attorneys general have ruled the governor's veto power does not extend to riders.

"We're simply concerned with the balance of power and maintaining what the constitution calls for. There's nothing personal about it. I didn't take it personal when he vetoed all those bills."

Clements on June 14 vetoed $254.2 million from the spending bill, and rejected at least six rider provisions written into the inch-thick proposal by legislators.

The vetoed riders included provisions giving the Department of Human Resources authority for a new office building, authorizing the Board of Control to establish parking fees for state employees, ordering the Department of Highways and Transportation to use $5 million of its funds for grade crossing improvements at railroad crossings, allowing the University of Texas at El Paso to use bond proceeds for an addition to the Sun Bowl stadium and authorizing building projects at other state colleges and universities from dedicated funds.

Presnal said the rider allowing UTEP to spend bond proceeds from the Permanent University Fund to expand the Sun Bowl is almost identical to one upheld by the Texas Supreme Court in 1975 despite a veto by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

"If the attorney general rules the vetoes are invalid, they're not worth the paper they're written on," he said.

"To allow any branch of government's authority over another branch to go unchallenged when those actions are questionable is not in the best interest of constitutional government. In each case where a veto of an item may be questionable, the law governing the authority to veto should be clearly defined."

Mexican Baptists Adopt Resolutions

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Delegates to the Mexican Baptist Convention here Wednesday adopted resolutions on treatment of undocumented aliens, collective bargaining for farm workers and equal protection in law enforcement.

About 600 delegates from 197 Spanish-speaking Baptist churches in Texas, who met in the Memorial Civic Center for three days this week, voted to urge churches and associations throughout Texas "to help provide Christian social ministries, basic education opportunities, programs for meeting emergency needs, and at least basic counseling rights, privileges and documentation."

The resolution urges the Texas Baptist State Missions Commission to explore opportunities for training pastors and lay people in counseling undocumented aliens "to increase opportunities for witnessing to the love of Jesus Christ.

The resolution pointed to "strong blood ties with our neighbor to the south, Mexico," and "evidence that the Immigration and Naturalization Service procedures have been continually violated."

Convention delegates also called upon the Texas legislature to pass workers compensation laws protecting farm workers and to establish procedures guaranteeing farm workers the right to bargain collectively.

That part of the resolution stated there are virtually no social restraints on the exploitation of farm workers in Texas and that the migrant farm worker is cut off from the privileges afforded all American citizens, including educational, social and political opportunities.

"The farm worker has the right to expect decent housing with proper sewage and safe drinking water," the resolution states.

Another resolution said there are significant evidences that individuals being held by law enforcement officials have suffered violations of their civil rights. It also says there are needs for reform in the entire criminal justice system in Texas.

"We call upon our duly elected public officials to investigate and bring criminal charges where needed and rectify all instances of civil rights violations."

FBI Refuses To Discuss Assassination Leads

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI has information that four men sought in connection with the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. have been in a Houston apartment complex during the last three weeks, the San Antonio News reported today in a copyright story.

While the FBI has refused comment on any aspect of the month-long investigation, the News said federal agents have been questioning residents and visitors at apartments near South Post Oak Road about persons sought for questioning in the Wood killing.

An area resident shown composite sketches Wednesday of six men and a woman by an FBI agent told the News that four of the men in the pictures looked very much like persons who had been in the apartments and nearby business firms in recent weeks.

The agent told the resident the four men had been seen in the vicinity of San Antonio's Chateau Dijon townhouses. Wood was shot to death the morning of May 29 as he was leaving his townhouse.

The person interviewed could not identify the other three persons in the pictures.

The four men who were recognized, the News said, appeared to be young — from their mid-20s to mid-30s. One had a mustache but the others were clean shaven.

A federal investigator who asked not to be named commented that citizens are often mistaken in making identifications from police composites.

The apartment complex in question is in the same area where a 52-year-old man sought in connection with the Wood killing eluded the FBI last week.

The agents reportedly interviewed the man, then went outside his apartment after telling him they wanted to talk to him more.

It is not known why the agents left the man alone, but when they did, he left through the rear of his apartment.

The FBI has acknowledged that "some aspects" of the Wood investigation are centered in Houston, but that the case is also being investigated in other Texas cities.

Tech Professor Warns Panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An agricultural economist predicted that if present trends continue, two or three giant beef packers could dominate the beef industry in the future.

On a second day before the House Small Business Committee, Willard Williams of Texas Tech University said that "honest questions need to be raised (such as) where is this industry going."

He predicted some smaller firms in the South and Northeast could continue operating.

But he said the bulk of fed beef slaughter would be done by two or three firms cutting up beef carcasses into small cuts and vacuum packing them for shipment.

In the trade, the end product is referred to as boxed beef, which was pioneered by Iowa Beef Processors Inc., the world's largest beef packer, and MBPXL Corp., the second largest.

Williams predicted other firms could exist alongside the large two or three in the future only if they cooperated with the giants, possibly by providing carcasses.

Boxed beef is replacing the traditional system of marketing beef carcasses.

Williams estimated that 42 percent to 45 percent of meat is sold as boxed beef. He said projections had been made that the boxed beef share would grow to 70 percent in a few years and then higher.

Only relatively large packing firms can make money producing boxed beef, he said.

He said smaller efficient firms would be unable to compete with Iowa Beef in the future. He said the firm has special advantages of paying lower wages, has a special distribution system and purchases carcasses from smaller firms.

Williams presented a study to the committee, which is studying beef market concentration and pricing. In the study he said Iowa Beef would force other packers out of business if it went ahead with plans to build a giant plant at Lamar, Colo. Iowa Beef countered that it would stimulate the industry.

In his study, Williams reviewed the well-known story of the concentration of the meat packing industry at the turn of the century. Four leading packers were responsible for 54 percent of total cattle slaughter in 1916-19.

After a famous 1920 consent decree and the Great Depression, the giants lost their grip on the industry and a number of independent packers flourished. The present trend toward concentration began in the 1960s after Iowa Beef pioneered changes.

Iowa Beef was forced to divest itself of two plants as a result of a 1970 consent decree. Williams said conditions that led to the consent decree have accelerated.

At the present time, Iowa Beef controls about 16 percent of beef slaughter, the top four firms 22.5 percent and the top 50 firms nearly 76 percent.

The total number of plants fell from 977 to 1970 to 711 in 1977, a reduction of 27 percent, Williams said.

Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, asked if there was any solution to concentration in the industry if a firm enlarged under the free enterprise system and violated no antitrust laws.

Williams said there is a question whether operational efficiency of the giant beef packers endangers competition, pricing efficiency and the ability of all firms to compete in the marketplace.

He said a solution lies somewhere between controlling structure of the industry or prescribing conduct.

"I'd like more information on the conduct and that area needs more study," Williams said.

On other issues, he called for more study of the role of large grain companies in the beef industry. For example, Cargill has purchased MBPXL.

He said a recent beef pricing report by an Agriculture Department task force failed to address a basic issue of whether a thin market on which a private pricing system for beef carcasses is based permits manipulation of beef prices.

He said the Agriculture Department should improve its data on meat slaughter and prices.

Queen Victoria gave royal assent to the British North America Act on May 22, 1867, and Canada became the first dominion of the British Empire the following July 1.

Oats, Barley Taken From Grain Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oats and barley have been called out of the farmer-owned grain reserve and the booming market may soon trigger removal of wheat, corn and sorghum.

The law requires that the grains be taken from the reserve once market prices pass specific levels, which are set above federal support prices.

"That does not mean farmers have to sell their crops," Agriculture Undersecretary Dale E. Hathaway said this week. "They just have to pay back the loans within 30 days."

Hathaway outlined the procedures to reporters three hours before calling in the loans under which the grain is held. It was the first full release of part of the reserves since the Carter administration established them in 1977 as a way to reverse falling grain prices.

Normally, 10-month loans are available to grain growers at the price-support rate, but they pay interest and storage costs. Under the reserves program, 3-year loans at the same rate are available to those who agree to hold their crop until prices rise, with USDA paying storage.

Producers in counties with severe storage or transportation problems will have at least another 30 days to redeem the loans, Hathaway said.

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service offices in each county will evaluate marketing problems, notify farmers that their loans have been called in and give them a date for redemption, Hathaway said.

Some farm-state Republicans in the House were working on legislation earlier in the day to prevent what they called "dumping of the reserves" into a market already distorted by fuel problems and truckers' strikes.

Other members of Congress are known to be worried about the calling in of the reserve loans when the fate of this season's grain crops is still so uncertain and exports of food and feed grains are picking up.

"Once a reserve is called, it ceases to exist," Hathaway noted. Prices probably would have to fall to nearly the support levels before reserves would be re-established.

Any reserves that aren't redeemed are forfeited to USDA, which in turn can sell them in the market to recover costs.

Official reports by Hathaway and others of problems with the Soviet Union's wheat crop this year have spurred grain prices in recent weeks, even though record stockpiles are still on hand after three bumper crops.

The Russians have bought about 13.2 million metric tons of U.S. grain in the year ending Sept. 30, plus 1.18 million tons of soybeans. They are expected to buy no more than 1.8 million tons more wheat or corn, he said.

Hathaway, who met with Soviet grain buyers two weeks ago in Moscow, reported they have said nothing yet about their U.S. plans for the 1979-80 export season. They are expected to buy between 21 million and 28 million tons from various countries.

The 38 million bushels of oats and 40 million bushels of barley technically were already on the market.

Parents, State Argue Girl's Sterilization

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Bertram Polow says he will decide within two weeks whether a retarded teen-ager may be sterilized.

Edward and Luanne Grady of Sparta had asked the court to authorize doctors at Morristown Memorial Hospital to perform a tubal ligation on their 18-year-old daughter, Lee Ann.

During closing arguments in an eight-day hearing that ended Tuesday, representatives of the state Attorney General's office and the Department of Public Advocate opposed the sterilization of the young woman, a victim of Down's syndrome. The Gradys claim Lee Ann would be incapable of caring for a child if she became pregnant.

Computer Claims Man Dead

DRYDEN, N.Y. (UPI) — As far as the United States government is concerned, Charles Weldner drew his final breath last August.

But the 43-year-old father of eight is alive, living in the upstate New York community of Dryden, near Ithaca.

His fate is in the hands of a computer.

"I tried to straighen this mess out by myself, but the computer has me listed as dead, so I'm dead," said Weldner, a self-employed parttime cook and caterer. "I'm gone, I don't exist anymore. I have to prove that I'm alive.

"My nerves are shot and my lawyer's fees are getting awfully high.

"I thought this would be simple until a lady told me over the phone, 'How do I really know I'm talking to you?'"

Weldner laughed last August when his monthly disability payments for a 1963 automobile accident began arriving under his wife's name.

"I said to her, 'They must think I'm dead'," he recalled.

Laughter gave way to aggravation and frustration when Weldner's wife, Ruth, received a notice from the Social Security Administration 10 days before Christmas, informing her she was a beneficiary of her husband's death on Aug. 8, 1978.

"I was very curious. The notice didn't say how or where I died," Weldner continued.

Because of his untimely "death," Weldner's medical insurance has been canceled. His medical bills, resulting from the accident in which he was partially paralyzed, amount to thousands of dollars.

His Social Security disability payments have been stopped, although his wife and children still receive payments.

In an effort to resolve the situation himself, Weldner said he went to the Social Security office in Ithaca, but was told to call a Baltimore office. He was then referred to an office in Sayre, Pa., where he was hospitalized last summer recovering from his ninth operation in five years.

Distraught by the affair, Weldner decided in January to hire Rochester attorney Anthony Dentino.

"After about six calls and getting five different people at the Rochester office, I finally was put in touch with two branch offices in New York and they've been working on the problem," Dentino said.

Dentino feels Social Security has been "seriously" trying to resurrect his client, but a failsafe computer system has been holding up the works.

"The system is programmed so that if someone's dead, it's not easy to start the checks back up again. It's a fail-safe system designed to protect against fraud and abuse, and, in this case, it takes several inputs to resurrect him."

Calhoun said the problem should be solved by the beginning of July, but Weldner isn't sure.

"That's what they've been saying for two months. I'll believe it when I see it."

Chunk Of Granite Falls From Store

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 250-pound chunk of granite fell from a Gimbel's department store branch and came close to landing on a 15-year-old deaf mute girl who was walking by, police said.

Police said the 5-by 2½-foot chunk of granite fell from the store and struck a building setback, shattering to pieces. Bits of granite rained on Christina Martinez.

Police said the girl, who suffered only a cut on her scalp and a shoulder bruise, would have been hit by the piece of granite facing if it had not hit the setback.

Catholic Groups Sue Over Abortion Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops and its action arm, the U.S. Catholic Conference, employ 310 lay persons — a substantial number of them non-Catholic women.

If one of those women should become pregnant and desire or need an abortion, the bishops — aggressive foes of abortion — would be forced under current law to provide at least sick leave and perhaps even pay for the procedure.

Facing that situation, the two conferences took a historic action last weekand sued the government to block the Justice Department and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission from enforcing the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, a law designed to protect the rights of women workers with regard to pregnancy-related absences from work.

The bishops' brief said the law "compelled them to treat the practice of abortion as a commonplace, an illness, a fringe benefit" and to "facilitate this practice through provision of economic incentive in the form of fringe benefits."

"The moral, ethical and religious convictions of the NCCB and the USCC find the deliberate and unnecessary destruction of human life to be a grave and morally abhorrent act," the bishops said.

Under the law, according to the bishops, employers must treat abortion as a benefit and provide "paid time off for all women employees who wish to have an abortion." In cases where the life of the mother is endangered if she carries the fetus to term, employers must pay all expenses involved.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia on behalf of the two Catholic agencies and all employers with moral and religious objections to abortion, sought an immediate restraining order blocking the Justice Department and the equal employment commission from enforcing the abortion provisions.

In a hearing recently before Judge John H. Pratt, the government agreed not to enforce the provisions until after a July 5 hearing on the issues raised by the bishops.

The bishops called the law an unconstitutional violation of the free exercise of religion clause of the First Amendment, and said bishops cannot comply "since they cannot, because of moral, ethical and religious convictions, participate in the practice of abortion in the manner required by the PDA."

The NCCB has long been an outspoken foe of efforts to liberalize legal access to abortion, and since the Supreme Court's 1973 decision liberalizing abortion laws, has supported efforts fr a constitutional amendment to make all abortions unconstitutional.

Nomination Headed For Senate Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of retired Rear Adm. Rowland G. Freeman III to head the troubled General Services Administration is going to the full Senate for action.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Tuesday recommended approval of Freeman's nomination. If the Senate agrees, Freeman will succeed Jay Solomon as GSA administrator. Solomon resigned in May after holding the position for about two years. The 57-year-old Freeman is a military management expert.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.
The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

Somoza Calls Special Session

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza called a special session of the Nicaraguan Congress today amid widespread rumors that it would seek a formula for his departure from office.

Meanwhile, the national guard announced it launched a counter-offensive against Sandinista rebels occupying territory north of the Costa Rican border, and the new U.S. ambassador, Lawrence Pezzullo, arrived in Managua.

The government was making a major effort to round up members of Congress from across the strife-torn country. It chartered private planes and used national guard helicopters to bring the congressmen and their alternates to the Intercontinental Hotel, where the session was to be held because it could be protected better than the government palace.

Despite the expectations of action on the president's future, Somoza's private secretary, Max Kelly, claimed the session would be a routine meeting only.

"You guys are going to be surprised when nothing unusual happens," he told foreign reporters.

U.S. officials said the State Department instructed Pezzullo not to present his credentials to Somoza to demonstrate the Carter administration's opposition to his continuing in office. But they said the ambassador was expected to call on Somoza shortly and would urge him to resign.

On the southern battlefront where at least 1,000 guerrillas have pushed several miles into the country from Costa Rica, radio reports from Costa Rica said the border town of Penas Blancas on the Pan American Highway came under mortar fire Wednesday from national guard positions.

Radio Sandino, the guerrilla station, claimed the rebel forces in the south advanced several miles toward Rivas, the provincial capital which the Sandinista Liberation Front said it would proclaim the provisional capital of Nicaragua when it drove the national guard north of it.

The national guard's planes and helicopters continued to bomb and strafe rebel-held slums of Managua, and the guerrillas fought back with rockets and automatic weapons from foxholes and from behind paving stone barricades.

Foreign journalists who visited Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city 54 miles northwest of Managua, found the city functioning under well-organized guerrilla rule although without electricity and with food strictly rationed.

One of the Sandinista leaders who identified himself as Commander Marcos said the rebels had executed several national guardsmen after the garrison in Leon fell into their hands early this month.

"Yes, we executed a general and several lieutenants — but only ones that we knew were killers," the 25-year-old commander said. "We still have 40 to 60 prisoners."

Three of the five members of the provisional government announced by the rebels arrived in Panama Wednesday for an official visit signifying Panama's recognition of them as the legitimate government of Nicaragua. They said they would guarantee human rights and abolish the 42-year-old Somoza family dictatorship's oppressive laws.

Pezzullo passed through Panama Wednesday en route to Managua but did not meet the rebel leaders.

Syrian Government Executes Terrorists

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — President Hassan Assad's government hanged 14 terrorists and executed another one by firing squad at dawn today in a crackdown on the right-wing Moslem Brotherhood.

The executions came less than a day after Syrian and Israeli jets dueled in the skies over southern Lebanon in the first aerial combat between the two nations since 1974. An Israeli Embassy official in Washington claimed Assad unleashed his air force to divert attention at home from a growing challenge to his rule.

terrorists who cooperated with authorities, and two others were sentenced to prison terms.

Syrian officials said the 20 men were responsible for a wave of bombings and assassinations in the past few months aimed at the the minority Alawite Moslem sect, of which Assad is a member. Foreign observers estimated there were about 50 incidents.

The outlawed Moslem Brotherhood is made up of Sunni Moslems, the majority sect in Syria and the rest of the Arab world.

Assad's government announced a crackdown on the Brotherhood after gunmen raided a Syrian military training center in the northern city of Aleppo on June 16, killed 48 cadets and wounded 37.

Most of the cadets were Alawites.

The government accused Israel, Egypt and the United States of instigating the attack. Informed sources said the government rounded up as many as 200 members of the Brotherhood and has put them on trial.

The rising tide of right-wing Sunni violence is considered the most serious domestic challenge to the 49-year-old Assad since he took power in a military coup almost nine years ago. But diplomatic sources say his overthrow is unlikely because he is in firm control of the army and the intelligence services.

Syrian jets on Wednesday went after a group of Israeli planes attacking Palestinian positions in southern Lebanon. It was the first Syrian retaliation in five years of such Israeli attacks.

Israel said its American F-15 Eagle jets, making their debut in aerial combat, downed five of Syria's less effective MiG-21s with no Israeli losses. Syria admitted it lost four planes but claimed it destroyed two Israeli jets.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization claimed it shot down two Israeli jets, but witnesses said the guerrillas fired anti-aircraft guns and missiles indiscriminately and may have downed at least one Syrian jet. Reporters who visited the scene between the Lebanese ports of Tyre and Sidon could find the wreckage of only two planes, both with Syrian markings.

An Israeli spokesman in Washington said the Syrians challenged the Israelis to try to provoke a confrontation with Israel and shift attention from the strife at home.

The military command in Tel Aviv said rockets fired from southern Lebanon slammed into northern Galilee early today, less than 24 hours after the Syrian-Israeli air duel. Israel reported no casualties or damage but said its gunners returned fire across the border.

Officials in Lebanon, meanwhile, said President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Salim El-Hoss planned to ask the United States to press Israel to stop its attack on Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Head Of Iran's Court Vows To Take Charge

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The self-styled head of Iran's revolutionary court vowed to personally lead efforts to kill Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, whom he claims was slightly injured in a machinegun attack near the deposed monarch's retreat in Cuernavaca, Mexico.

"I shall personally take charge soon," Sheikh Sadeq Khalkhali said in an interview published today in the newspaper Bamdad.

Despite strong denials by Mexican police, Khalkhali insisted that his account of the attack, which he said took place Tuesday night, was true.

Khalkhali said from his home in the Moslem holy city of Qom that Mexican authorities denied the incident because "the Mefican police are demoralized; an admission may make it more difficult."

Khalkhali announced last week he had dispatched a "death squad" to Mexico to carry out execution sentences passed in absentia on the shah and his wife, Empress Farah.

Khalkhali, 54, has been a controversial figure snce his announcement that he headed the revolutionary courts, a claim denied by some government officials.

Foreign Minister Ebrahim Yazdi said in an interview with UPI Wednesday that Khalkhali was neither a revolutionary official nor doe he hold a government position.

"He is a private citizen and he has his own activities. As a religious man he also has certain obligations," the minister said. "But he has nothing to do with the government or with the revolutionary organizations."

Religious sources in Qom, however, said Khalkhali remains close to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Khoemeini has made no comment.

In the interview, Yazdi charged the United States has failed to adapt its foreign policy "to the new realities in Iran" and said relations could deterorate further.

"I hope that does not happen," he said.

Yazdi said Iran would stick by its refusal to accept Washington's appointment of Walter Cutler as the new U.S. Ambassador in Tehren. Iran withdrew official approval of Cutler because of his alleged role in troubled Zaire during his term there.

Front Will Not Affect Area's Temperatures

A-J News Services

A weak cold front is expected to push into Northwest Texas today and create a slight chance of thunderstorms tonight and Friday in the Lubbock area.

Reportedly stretched across central Colorado and central Kansas early today, the cold front was forecast to move into the Panhandle this afternoon and enter the South Plains this evening. The probability of rain in the Lubbock area was listed at 20 percent tonight and Friday.

Area temperatures will be little affected by the approaching cold front, according to the National Weather Service. Lubbock temperatures, which reached 94 degrees Wednesday, were forecast to climb to the upper 90s this afternoon before returning to the mid-90s Friday.

In the Panhandle, widely scattered thunderstorms were forecast today, but elsewhere in the state, generally clear to partly cloudy skies were expected. Temperatures were predicted to reach the 90s in most regions, with a high point near 105 degrees in the Big Bend lowlands.

NWS summaries of Texas weather Wednesday show no rainfall and a high reading of 103 degrees at El Paso.

More severe weather, including tornadoes and hail, occurred Wednesday in the Midwest, according to wire reports.

Twisters were reportedly spotted in northeastern Colorado and in the Nebraska Panhandle, but there were no indications of injuries or damage.

Walnut-to golf ball-size hail fell in southeastern Nebraska, reports said, and early today a severe thunderstorm watch remained in effect for that region stretching into central Kansas.

Heavy rains in the central Missouri town of Eldon reportedly covered streets with 1 to 3 feet of water and caused flooding of businesses. And in central South Dakota, about 35 families living along the Little White River were prepared to evacuate homes for the second time this week because of heavy rains, reports said.

A weather problem of another sort began to afflict southern Californians Wednesday. According to forecasters there, a heavy inversion layer coupled with hot temperatures has created a "pressure cooker" effect that is producing a brownish, eye-stinging smog. Residents in southern California are being warned that the smog has reached hazardous levels in some areas.

Refugees Land On Indonesian Islands

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The Malaysian government says it has driven 14,457 Vietnamese refugees from its east coast in the past 10 days, and Indonesian officials report some 15,800 have landed on the islands of the Riau Archipelago, southwest of Singapore, in the past two weeks.

The Indonesian report indicated that many or all of the boat people denied refuge in Malaysia were finding a haven ome 300 miles farther south instead of drowning in leaky, unseaworthy boats as some relief agencies fear.

Indonesian Defense Minister Mohammad Jusuf said Wednesday that the number of refugees on the Riau islands off the east coast of Sumatra increased from 31,200 to about 47,000 in the last two weeks. He said the refugees apparently slipped past Indonesian naval patrols.

Malaysia and Indonesia both announced stronger measures this month to prevent the arrival of new boat people on their shores. They increased their naval patrols and said any who got through would be expelled. Singapore cracked down last year, and Thailand has also announced it would accept no more.

The five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations are compelled to "withdraw our helping hands" from the Indochinese refugees, Indonesian President Suharto said today as he opeed an ASEAN meeting on the island of Bali.

"The flow of refugees has increased to such a proportion that we feel we are not able any more to carry the burden ... because it might impose a heavy burden on our people and jeopardize their tranquility," said Suharto.

Of the five ASEAN members, Thailand has about 230,000 refugees, Malaysia 76,000, Indonesia 47,000, the Philippines about 5,000 and Singapore has several hundred.

At the ASEAN meeting, Singapore Foreign Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam charged that Vietnam is using the refugees to inflame racial problems in their countries.

"They know that almost all Southeast Asian countries have delicate problems with their Chinese minorities," Rajaratnam said in a prepared statement. He said the situation could "only exacerbate racial sensitivities and, if the flow is sustained long enough, lead to racial warfare which could tear these societies apart quicker and far more effectively than an invading Vietnamese army."

"That would be a great psychological victory for the Vietnamese," Rajaratnam said. "So the refugee problem is something more than finding new homes for the victims of a new master race."

Snyder's New Show 'Prime Time Sunday' Draws Mixed Reviews

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "If I don't make it in this structure," Tom Snyder recently said of "Prime Time," his news magazine venture, "I will go away."

From the Neilsen ratings company comes news that may be received with mixed emotions — Snyder, NBC's journalist-entertainer, will stay.

At least for awhile.

Snyder's NBC show (now called "Prime Time Sunday" because of copywright problems) made its debut last Sunday and drew ratings numbers stunningly superior to those earned by its predessessor, "Weekend."

Of 65 prime-time network shows rated by Neilsen for the week ending last Sunday, "Prime Time Sunday" finished 25th, with a 29 percent share of the audience. If that doesn't sound like unqualified success, consider the showing of "Weekend".

Of the 114 prime-time programs in the September-April season, "Weekend" finished an inglorious No. 110 with a 17 percent share of the audience. Among the shows that were rated higher were the forgettable "Apple Pie" (ABC) and "American Girls" (CBS).

"60 Minutes," the CBS news magazine that begged imitation by becoming a big revenue earner, finished eighth over the course of the season, with an average 41 percent share of the audience.

True, the debut success of "Prime Time" is subject to qualification — it was far behind "60 Minutes," which rated No. 5, and many viewers may have tuned in out of curiosity. But it was an improvement, and has the advantage of gathering steam this summer while the other networks are playing reruns.

The debut show drew heavily on style rather than substance, relying on Snyder-as-personality and studio gimmicks for its "look." Perhaps assuming that we're all fascinated by this wonderful toy, television, the "bumpers" — the few seconds leading into commercials — were all dedicated to the sight and sound of a young woman counting down the seconds to the break.

"Five, four, three, two, one..." Then, presto! We're into a commercial. Zowie, wow, ain't that magic! It's one of those self-conscious stunts you'd have thought television got out of its system two decades ago.

The first segment seemed a little like "Tomorrow Visits Prime Time," with Snyder and his guests sitting around being clamorous, as they do on Snyder's late-night "Tomorrow" show. Through live hookups, Snyder was able to give us an argument between Sir Freddie Laker, he of the DC-10 skytrains, James Dunne, of the Airline Passengers Association, and Langhorne Bond, of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Laker disagreed with Dunne, Dunne disagreed with Laker and Bond, Bond disagreed with Dunne, and it was all very boisterous.

Ballet Competition Turns Jackson Into Hot Spot For Dance

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The 1979 International Ballet Competition has turned the curious into ballet fans and this city of 200,000 into a hot spot for dance that might not cool for some time.

"People who haven't been exposed to it tend not to like it because they think it's an esoteric art," said Thalia Mara, the director of Jackson's sudden entry into the world of ballet.

"But once they come they love it — they think it's very exciting, very beautiful visually and very beautiful musically."

It's a misconception to say that big city ballet would not fit in Jackson and rural Mississippi, she said.

"Jackson is not a small town," Miss Mara said. "The people here are sophisticated people who have traveled around, not yokels."

But interest in ballet is mushrooming since the arrival of the competition, the Olympics of ballet and the first ever held in the United States, she said.

"A lot of people who are not exposed to it are surprised they like it," she said. "I think a lot of people that never have been to a ballet tend to think that way."

Seven performances have sold out so far in the 2,400-seat Jackson Auditorium, Carolyn Jordan, a ticket coordinator for the festival, said, and tickets for the remaining events are also gone. Interest had increased for the final performance Friday night, which will feature dances by the winners of the competition.

"We have had people coming in with rhinestones and diamonds and we have had people coming in jeans and T-shirts," she said.

"We're getting people who are saying they have never seen a ballet and want to buy a cheaper ticket. Then they come the next day for three or four tickets."

Miss Mara, a former dancer and dance teacher who left New York to form a professional ballet in Jackson, said the competition will return to Jackson next year.

Varna, Bulgaria, has hosted nine internationl ballet competitions during the past 20 years — one every other year, Miss Mara said, while Moscow holds competitions every four years and Tokyo hosts an event every other year.

"Everybody keeps coming to me to say this is great, this is wonderful," she said. "People are just ecstatic about this happening here."

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Dow Jones Average Up 3.38

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced moderately today in the first trading since the oil-exporting countries set their new pricing plans.

Gainers led losers by close to a 2-1 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 indutrials rose 3.38 to 843.90 by noontime.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, concluding its meeting in Geneva, set a base price of $18 a barrel, with allowances for prices of up to $23.50 for some of the top grades of oil from African countries.

That compares with the former base of $14.55, and recent average prices of $17 to $18.

Analysts said there was some relief among investors that the forces of moderation within OPEC, led by Saudi Arabia, held firm against pressure from more militant members for even larger increases.

But they also noted a bit of disappointment that the Saudis made no decision to increase production. Stepped up production would tend to ease the current tightness in world oil markets.

Energy issues on the active list included Occidental Petroleum, up ⅜ at 24⅛; Exxon, up ⅞ at 53⅛; Atlantic Richfield, ahead 1⅜ at 67⅜, and Louisiana Land & Exploration, up 2⅛ at 37.

The NYSE's composite index rose .30 to 58.31. The American Stock Exchange market value index climbed 1.04 to 201.13.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 16.70 million shares at noontime, against 14.63 million at the same point Wednesday.

U.S. Dollar Sinks Lower

LONDON (UPI) The U.S. dollar took a drubbing at the opening of European money markets today and dropped to its lowest point against the British pound in nearly four years. The dollar closed lower in Tokyo as well.

Gold was up to $282.1250 per once at the opening in Zurich from Wednesday's close of $281.8750 but was down a fraction in London to $281.75 per ounce from Wednesday's $281.8750.

The dollar sank to its lowest level against the British pound since July 30, 1975, when the pound opened at $2.1755.

Today's opening was $2.1735, up nearly two cents from Wednesday's closing figure of $2.1560.

"The dollar took a little knock in early trading following the OPEC oil price rise and a widening U.S. trade gap," a Barclay's Bank International dealer.

"We're seeing fresh demand for the pound from all quarters," he said.

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ron Moody, the superb English actor and Oscar nominee for his 1968 portrayal of Fagin in the musical "Oliver!" lives in dread of the makeup box.

Few actors have suffered more for art than the jolly Englishman who has made a career of playing grotesque old goats.

Spirit gum, wigs, false teeth, contact lenses and greasepaint have taken their toll, altering his off-screen appearance.

He plays Merlin, the sorcerer of King Arthur's time in his new film, "Unidentified Flying Oddball," a contemporary story of a spaceman who gets caught in a time warp and ends up in the sixth century.

Taken from "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," the new Disney film depicts Merlin as a sinister villain. Moody wears a long goatee, mustache, wildly upturned eyebrows and a curlicue lock of hair sprouting from the top of his bald dome.

Since becoming a character actor at age 28, Moody has played dozens of old men, weirdos and villains, most of them requiring heavy makeup. He reckons he spends more time at the makeup table than he does on camera.

It is no wonder then that Moody walks the streets of his native England and in Hollywood unrecognized by moviegoers who have seen him dozens of times on the screen.

"I designed me own makeup for Merlin," said Moody in an accent that smacked suspiciously of cockney although he denies being a cockney.

"There's not much more that can happen to me face. Makeup has changed me appearance forever. A career of playing men of intense attitudes, villains and madmen have left me a shadow of me former self.

"It began early in me acting life when I wore a putty nose as Uriah Heep in a movie version of 'David Copperfield.' It clogged me breathing and I played the entire picture with a cold that affected me sinuses ever after.

"When I did Fagin, they shaved me head and covered it with a rubber cap onto which was pasted Fagin's mat of hair and then topped it off with a flat clerical hat.

"I wore the makeup for three months. When the picture was completed, I discovered me hair refused to grow back except for a little fuzz."

Moody patted his bald pate forlornly.

"I read of a doctor recently who researched the scientific fact that bald men are more virile than hairy men," he said. "The doctor concluded such is not the case. He said baldness plays no part in virility.

"We must explode this new theory. Bald sex maniacs are a necessity to western civilization as we know it."

Moody's most demanding makeup job involved "The Flight of the Doves" in which he was required to wear five different disguises. The experience left him almost a broken man.

In addition to having his fuzz shaved off, his eyesbrows where shaved as well. He was forced to wear brown contact lenses to cover his own blue eyes. Several different sets of false teeth were cemented to his own ivories.

"It was pure torture," he recalled. "I reeked of spirit gum which itches and burns when it is applied every day for hours on end. My eyes hurt so much I could only wear the lenses for a few minutes at a time.

"The false teeth ruined me bridgework. Me eyebrows never grew back. And a month after the film was over I was forced to wear spectacles to compensate for the damage incurred by the contact lenses.

"Misadventures with makeup have ruined me social life. It's part of the penalty one pays for his art. Me love life wasn't helped by playing older men. Perhaps that's why I've been a lifelong bachelor.

"I often appear on the set and me fellow actors don't recognize me. That's not surprising. I look at meself in a mirror and discover there isn't a vestige of Ron Moody remaining."

Moody will star next year for ABC in a new weekly adventure drama, "Hart In San Francisco," playing an Edwardian sleuth in contemporary California. He describes his character as a combination of Sherlock Holmes and Hawkshaw.

"Hart is really an anacronism as a detective," Moody said. "He's sent to San Francisco by Scotland Yard to deal with bizarre crimes. It's not like 'Starsky and Hutch,' although in a sense I wish Hart were more like them.

"Starsky and Hutch have all those sexy birds swarming around them. We character actors are denied the same opportunities with those sweet young girls.

"In the TV series I will be required to wear very little makeup except for a toupee, of course. That's a relief but it's a bit late for the makeup box to do much more damage to me appearance."

NBC Hoping Names Will Attract Viewers

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, its executive staff chanting "stability, stability" at every possible moment, continues to send signals to reporters and NBC affiliates that the worst is over at the No. 3 network.

Ceaseless talk of stability, aimed at countering criticism that the network seemed to be floundering, and the hiring of big names are central to the network's efforts to climb out of the ratings quagmire.

The fall schedule announced several weeks ago featured a host of familiar names: Shirley Jones, Claude Aikens, Robert Conrad, William Devane, being a few. It is the hope of network President Fred Silverman that viewers will give a show a better chance if they recognize its star.

But it's also a matter of image. Big stars, like the ressurrected NBC peacock, suggest a state of well-being that has been absent at NBC for the past couple of years. Stability, if you will.

Last week NBC announced that Mel Brooks, he of the crazy head and big audience appeal, had signed with the network. Brooks, who wrote for TV before his successes as an actor and director, will act as a consultant for NBC and star in a special next year.

Mike Weinblatt, president of NBC Entertainment, sent another signal to the NBC-affiliated stations when he said he would announce this week the network's entire prime-time schedule up to Dec. 31.

"This marks the first time any network ever revealed virtually its entire hour-by-hour and night-by-night plans this far in advance," Weinblatt said, "and it reflects the stability, strength and confidence we have in our 1979-80 programming."

Weinblatt was to announce the expanded schedule today on a close-circuit telecast to affiliated stations.

Affiliates like the talk of stability and demonstrated their approval of the Silverman approach when they met out here last month. Whether the talk will be followed by real advancement, of course, will be determined soon enough.

Other developments: NBC announced that Meadowlark Lemon, the Harlem Globetrotter great, will become a regular on "Hello Larry," McLean Stevenson's sitcom. Lemon's signing is one element of a general reworking of the show, intended to help its weak ratings.

Lemon will play himself on the show.

The network also announced the signing of an exclusive movies and specials contract by Gary Coleman, the little fellow on "Diff'rent Strokes" whose star shines brighter than any but Johnny Carson's at NBC.

Speaking of Carson, there are no public indications that he will remain as host of "Tonight" beyond next spring, a year before his contract runs out. Perhaps thinking of meeting that eventuality, NBC has signed comic David Letterman to an exclusive contract.

Letterman has hosted local talk shows and has appeared on Carson's show a few times, and is considered by some at the network as the likely choice to replace Carson.

Only a rumor, of course, and the network won't confirm or deny it. In fact, the network is altogether silent about the Carson negotiations. It's probably for the best, though. It's difficult to talk about losing your biggest star and say, "Stability, stability" at the same time.

Recently, Silverman announced that NBC had signed Lucille Ball for a series of entertainment specials.

The 67-year-old comedienne, whose long-running "I Love Lucy" is one of the most popular series in television, will not have a weekly series.

She thus makes the jump from CBS where she had been a mainstay for many years.

Study Finds Stress Disturbs Functions

CINCINNATI (AP) — The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health has found that workers whose jobs require them to keep pace with machines may become sick, lose sleep and drink more.

In a two-month study, 15 randomly selected workers spent eight-hour work days on simulated key-punch machines while technicians checked blood pressure, heartbeat, respiration and pulse. "The stress disturbs the chemical, physical and biological functions of the body, and the results are some forms of occupational diseases," Dr. Michael Smith, chief of the Motivational and Stress Research section, said.

Good Relations Depend On Soviet Conciliation

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S.-Soviet relations, on the cool side since World War II, will warm up appreciably if the Senate ratifies the new strategic arms treaty.

But good relations will depend on Soviet conciliation in three other areas as well — easing the plight of dissidents, reducing non-nuclear weapons, and coooperating in Africa and the Middle East.

It was hard to detect much headway on these three fronts at President Carter's summit meeting in Vienna with Leonid Brezhnev.

But U.S. officials haven't given up hope.

Negotiations to curb U.S. and Soviet arms sales to some areas of the world may resume soon. And the Russians may oppose but not veto U.N. peacekeepers to monitor the Egyptian-Israeli treaty.

SALT II provides a solid basis for trust. The two superpowers have joined in a common effort to slow down the nuclear weapons race, although they are not about to end it.

Carter and Soviet leader Brezhnev are tied together by a common goal — gaining support for SALT II at home. Carter must win the votes for ratification in the Senate. Brezhnev has to retain support for the agreement with the Soviet military and other hard-liners.

The treaty is recogntion that survival depends on some cooperation between the two superpowers. The Cold War has probably passed permanently into history.

But in other respects, U.S. and Soviet interests are in collision in much of the world. As the two nations compete for advantage, their relationship is bound to suffer, even if the treaty wriggles through the Senate unscathed.

In Western humanist tradition, the United States supports freedom of expression in the Soviet Union. It wants to enhance the rights of Jews and other minorities, particularly the right to emigrate.

Analysis

The Soviets consider this interference in their internal affairs. But to gain support for the treaty, and to try to win trading privileges, they apparently are willing to put up with a certain measure of it.

Jewish emigration is up, and some important dissenters have been freed. But many others remain in jail.

And SALT II does not end the arms race, nuclear or conventional. The Vienna summit gave no apparent boost to stalled talks on banning underground nuclear weapons tests or on reducing NATO and Warsaw bloc forces in central Europe.

In Africa, Cuban surrogates are busy promoting Soviet interests. In the Middle East, the Russians are lined up with the Arabs who reject the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The Carter administration's hope, of course, is that the SALT II treaty will encourage the Soviets to modify, or at least soft-pedal, some of their more irritating policies.

Recent history suggests any change will be minimal.

The SALT I treaty of 1972 did not deter the Soviet Union from its activities in Africa or from arming radicals in the Middle East.

Arms spending kept rising in the Soviet Union, as it did here, and dissidents still wound up in Siberia.

When Congress tried to force the Russians to step up Jewish emigration, the Soviets canceled their trade agreement with the United States and emigration slumped.

"In the last seven years, we and the Soviet Union have gone jointly into space. The Soviet Union has gone alone into Ethiopia," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said in a highly charged attack June 12 on the SALT II treaty.

"We have sent our scientists to Mosow. The Soviets have sent their Cubans to Angola.

"We have encouraged peace in the Middle East. The Soviets have encouraged war in Southeast Asia.

"We tried to calm the turmoil in Iran. The Soviets sought to aggravate it.

"We have encouraged human rights around the world. The Soviets have trampeled human rights at home.

"We have exercised restraint in the acquistion of strategic weapons. The Soviets have invested, in the last decade, over $104 billion more than the United States in strategic nuclear forces alone."

To a degree, Jackson was carried away by hyperbole. But there also is considerable truth in his complaints.

Carter's approach, nevertheless, is to try conciliation with Moscow. For him, the summit meeting and the treaty mark a fresh start toward cooperation.

The treaty will prevent sudden and alarming breakouts of new strategic weapons. It will provide predictable expectations of what each side will do through 1985.

That, in an important sense, is a confidence-building measure that can ease superpower tensions.

Task Force Suggests Screening

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of high blood pressure among blacks has recommended a 20-year national program against the problem involving black professional groups, churches and community organizations.

This health problem is estimated to be two-thirds more prevalent among blacks than whites and is a major factor in blacks having a death rate from strokes three times that of whites, the study said.

The recommendations, developed during an 18-month study by black health professional societies and others, call for community screening to identify those with undiagnosed hypertension and wide-scale education programs.

One goal of the program is to reduce by 50 percent each five years the numbers of blacks with critically high blood pressures, which puts them at greater risk of such complications as stroke, heart disease and kidney failure.

Another goal is to identify more people with hidden hypertension and increase the numbers of those who successfully control the disease through medication, diet and weight watching.

The cochairman of the task force, Dr. Donald Ware of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said at a briefing this week preliminary work already has begun on the program, which will focus on cooperative efforts of voluntary, professional and service organizations.

"Nothing like this has been done before," Ware said in an interview. "We want to link black associations with large service organizations, such as the American Heart Association, to work together and set mutual goals and task assignments."

Unlike similar reports on other health problems that call for large government programs and great increases in federal spending, members of the blood pressure group said the emphasis of this proposal is on the private sector.

"We don't have any figures yet, but at this point in the program there probably is no major commitment of new dollars needed," Ware said.

By redirecting existing manpower and public education programs, many organizations could contribute to a blood pressure program without major new costs, he said.

Dr. Robert Levy, director of the heart, lung and blood institute, said some of the task force's recommendations calling for further research on the disease and treatments would cost more money in the long run.

"But first we are going to see how much the private sector will do and try to aid that effort," Levy said. "There will be additional costs. For instance, some way will eventually have to be found to provide care for the indigent individual."

Levy said his institute, which sponsored the task force, spends about $70 million a year on research and programs concerning hypertension, which affects an estimated 35 million Americans.

Among the groups represented on the task force are the Congressional Black Caucus, the National Medical Association, the National Black Nurses Association and the National Bar Association.

Cards, Letters Aid Recovery

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Hospital officials say get well cards and letters are helping a 3-year-old boy get through a painful recovery from the amputation of his feet.

Sparrow Hospital officials said Tuesday the cards were pouring in by the dozen for Sammy Perkins, whose feet were severed Saturday in a farm accident, reattached in a long-shot operation, then amputated Monday because his blood failed to circulate properly.

Hospital spokeswoman Ann Heglin said the outpouring of sympathy from the general public is overwhelming and is helping the perky little boy through a painful recovery.

"He's just amazed that people who don't know him would send him cards," she said.

Sammy's condition held at serious today, but Miss Heglin said he was conscious, talking and "in very good spirits."

She said he will undergo surgery again next week for more work on his wounds and then would begin rehabilitation. Once he recovers, doctors hope to fit him with artificial feet, Miss Heglin said.

Raising Chinchillas Now Big Business

HUBBARD, Ohio (AP) — What do you give a chinchilla for constipation?

"All we do for that is feed a few raisins and they love 'em," says Charles Gardinier, who has 1,200 of the valuable critters as his business.

Raising chinchillas began as a hobby for Gardinier, his wife and two sons six years ago. They bought 10 females and two males for $2,500, hoping that with luck and time they could get their money back. The success of his business, mostly selling the animals for their fur pelts, is evident from the size of his operation.

Gardinier's chinchilla ranch is a maze of cages housed in one building. Each female has her own cage and each wears a loose metal collar.

"See the hole in the back of the cage?" Gardinier says in explaining the collars. "The male has a wire runway that lets him drop in to visit his six ladies whenever he wants to. He can get through the hole, but her collar, which is slightly bigger than the hole, keeps her from getting out."

Each cage has its own bottled water supply and Gardinier says medication or vitamins that may be needed are added to the water.

"It isn't good to handle chinchillas any more than necessary," Gardinier said. "They're high strung and when they get nervous they'll throw their fur like a porcupine.

"No, they don't get distemper or other like ailments — their biggest problem is constipation. All we do for that is feed a few raisins and they love 'em."

Gardinier keeps careful records on each animal with a system set up by the National Empress Chinchilla Breeders Cooperative.

Chinchillas mature at 10 months to one year of age and if they are not marketed as pelts, can live into their teens. Gardinier said one breeder has a 14-year-old female still producing.

"You always keep your best breeding stock," he said, "and we still have some of our original chins."

Chinchilla fur is dense and tends to hold moisture. Gardinier solves this problem with a dry bath in pumice powder to cleanse the animals. Chinchillas roll and tumble and flip about in it like a cat playing with catnip.

Alfalfa and other commercial animal food is their diet and Gardinier occasionally adds wheat germ, oats or other supplements. He estimates it costs 1½ cents per day to feed a chinchilla.

Gardinier said he spent about four hours a day caring for the animals. One of his sons has hopes of owning a chinchilla ranch.

In the marketplace, chinchilla pelts sell for $20 to $100 or more. The black pelts are most desired and the chocolate-colored is also a highly desirable pelt.

Gray animals are the basic stock in the chinchilla trade but Gardinier said grays could easily be cross-bred for color mutations.

One of the most common causes of unsuccessful painting is applying the paint too thick or too thin.

Stone Ring Used To Chart Time

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A large ring of some 800 low-lying stones on an isolated Arizona ridge was used by Indians 500 years ago to chart the passage of time, according to four researchers.

To test their theory, the researchers went to the desert site before dawn last week and — at the exactly 5:18 a.m. — the sunrise sent rays of light through a gap in a line of stones which they say was used to identify the summer solstine.

"We're right on the money," said an elated David Johnson, head of the archaeology field program at Tucson's Pima Community College.

The researchers said they studied folklore and found that Southwest Indians had "star priests" who used the site to chart the passage of time by aligning the stones with the sun, stars and moon.

The find had similarities to England's ancient Stonehenge — a large circle of standing stones that some researchers claim are aligned to accurately measure solar and and lunar movements as well as eclipses.

Arizona's ring of stones, measuring more than 130 feet in diameter, was found by a student more than two years ago. Since then, Johnson and another professor have helped students Nev and Wanda Autrey individually mark and correlate each of the stones on what they have called "Zodiac Ridge."

But the name zodiac may be misleading, according to Dr. John Carlson, head of the University of Maryland's Center for Archaeoastronomy. He said the ridge should have simply been given a number.

"New World Indians are not known to have developed a zodiac system and the researchers "are tacking on western mysticism," Carlson said.

Although Carlson thinks "they stumbled on something pretty interesting," he said he is waiting for the archaeological data usually needed in studies of this nature.

"They have no proof of who used the thing and when," he said.

The find was presented earlier this month at a conference on Archaeoastronomy in Santa Fe, N.M.

The Autreys said they have conducted two years of research into the early writings about Indian folklore and said the tribes of the area had, and still do have, "star priests," or men whose job it is to predict the events of the sky.

And a nearby Hohokum Indian village, which is being excavated by Pima College archaeologists about a mile and a half away, shows an agricultural life style.

Asbestos Disease Hits Ship Builders

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (AP) — A lung disease known as asbestosis has turned up in at least 15 workers at Ingalls Shipyard following an initial screening of 200 members of the Metal Trades Council, union officials said.

Asbestosis occurs when inhalating asbestos fibers creates scar tissue in the lungs. It ususally turns up in workers 20 to 30 years after they have been exposed. Over the past year, cases of asbestosis have appeared in alarming numbers across the country. Many victims are former or current shipyard workers.

Card Throws One-Hitter

By United Press International

Silvio Martinez, who speaks little English, could have learned a lot Wednesday night by following a trail of curses left by the overmatched Montreal Expos on their way to the dugout.

The 23-year-old Martinez, born in the Dominican Republic, settled for the third one-hitter of his career Wednesday night in pitching St. Louis to a 5-0 triumph over the Expos, snapping the Cardinals' four-game losing streak.

"I never think that I want to throw a no-hitter," the young right-hander, now 6-2, said. "I just think I want to win."

Garry Templeton led off for the Cards with a single, stole second and came home on a two-out single by Dane Iorg, and they added three runs in the second off loser Steve Rogers, 7-5. Ken Oberkfell and Mike Phillips singled and Templeton beat out an infield hit to load the bases with one out. Brock singled in two runs and Templeton scored on Tony Scott's infield hit.

In other NL games, Chicago pounded Philadelphia, 11-4, New York outslugged Pittsburgh, 12-9, Cincinnati trounced Los Angeles, 9-1, San Francisco beat Houston, 6-3 and San Diego split a double-header with Atlanta, winning the opener, 2-1, but losing, 5-2, in the nightcap.

"He looked like himself," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver said Wednesday night, after the veteran right-hander dealt the Cleveland Indians their 10th straight defeat, 3-1.

Palmer has started just three games this month because of tendinitis.

"I'm happy I won and managed to contribute," said Palmer. "I had a good curve and an excellent change-up late in the game and a good fastball sometimes.

Austin Plays Today

Borg Has Tough'Un

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — American schoolgirl Tracy Austin launched her bid to become one of Wimbledon's youngest title holders when she met South African Brigitte Cuypers today in the second round of the prestigious tennis championships.

The Rolling Hills, Calif., high school student had to quit last week's Eastbourne tournament with a groin injury but a first-round bye has given her a whole week to recover from that injury, and she felt confident today.

Meanwhile, Bjorn Borg spent a few seconds contemplating what it would be like to lose the Wimbledon singles title he has won for the past three years.

"There is no way I can keep on winning. I have to lose eventually. You can't win every single match in every single tournament."

Those thoughts ran through his head Wednesday during his 2¾-hour victory over India's Vijay Amriraj in the second round. Amritraj led two sets to one and 3-1 in the next set, and it was at that stage that Borg felt defeat was a real possibility.

"I thought I would probably lose," admitted Borg, who went on to win 2-6, 6-4, 4-6, 7-6, 6-2.

"When we got to 3-1 in the fourth it was vital for him," said Borg. "But he got a little nervous when he realized how important it was.

"I thought that I had been down like that before, and I get more relaxed when I see a match might be slipping away from me."

Relaxed or not, Borg moved into top gear to come back and take the fourth set tiebreaker 7-2.

Snake, Raiders Continue Feud

OAKLAND (AP) — The Pride and Poise boys have lost their poise, if not their pride, in the growing flap between Kenny Stabler and the Oakland Raider management that pays him $340,000 a year to throw a football.

Trouble was that Stabler didn't throw as well as his bosses thought he should have last year as the Raiders had a very un-Raider-like 9-7 season. Afterwards, boss man Al Davis blamed Stabler in large part for the mediocre record.

The quarterback responded by saying he wanted to be traded. Davis said forget it. The quarterback said take this job and shove it.

"I wouldn't talk to him (Davis) if he walked through the door right now," Stabler told Sport Magazine in the July issue. "I have no love for him. He wanted me ... to bury the hatchet. I'd like to bury the hatchet — right between Al Davis' shoulder blades."

Stabler went on to knock tackle Henry Lawrence ("sometimes — when I went back to pass — I felt like I was standing in the middle of a freeway"), guard Mickey Marvin ("he's going to be a good player, but he's not right now") and wide receiver Morris Bradshaw ("Morris doesn't play very well").

Officially, the Raiders have had little or nothing to say about the blasts.

"I don't agree with the comments," said new Coach Tom Flores. "You have to take them with a grain of salt," said executive jack-of-all-trades Al LoCasale.

But LoCasale also called a reporter to point out what he called "important" statements in a local newspaper made by Raider guard Gene Upshaw and asking that they be picked up.

"Everyone's carried what Kenny said, but they haven't carried what the players think about it," LoCasale complained.

What Upshaw said was that "we've never had that kind of problem in our organization. Every day he (Stabler) opens his mouth, he sticks the knife in further. We have to heal the wounds. He should never have blamed those guys."

Others don't feel that way.

"He (Stabler) told the truth," said Raider broadcaster and former pro football player Monte Stickles. "Now, if Henry Lawrence wants to prove him wrong, let him play a better tackle. And if Morris Bradshaw wants to prove him wrong, let him hold on to more passes."

"No one stuck up for Kenny," says his former teammate Fred Biletnikoff, who was cut loose by the Raiders this spring after 14 seasons. "They let Kenny take the blame. A lot of people ducked out on Kenny."

Rules Recommended

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Speaking bluntly of a topic generally hushed by college coaches, Florida football coach Charley Pell has called for "drastic changes" in NCAA recruiting rules.

Addressing the convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, Pell said current recruiting rules "encourage failure" among athletes and help keep periennial powers on top in football.

"Recruiting in football should not have to be a necessary evil, but the way the system is set up now, it is. We need changes, drastic ones," Pell said.

"I'm no crusader or anything. And believe me, I want to win juast as badly as anyone else. And I'll recruit just as hard as I can to do it. My point is, you can win and still save a lot of kids from failing themselves and your school if the rules are changed."

Borg Fights For Victory

The final set was much smoother sailing.

"When I get relaxed I take a few more chances," said the 23-year-old champion. "I tried to hit winners on service return and mostly I made those shots. I feel I am a better player when I am down a break than when I am level or in front."

Borg, who says this is the toughest draw he has ever had at Wimbledon, has a day to ease a slight leg strain before he meets American Hank Pfister in the third round Friday.

Second-seeded American John McEnroe also had a bumpy ride into the third round. The aggressive 20-year-old New Yorker dropped the first set to Britain's Buster Mottram, but went on to win 6-7, 6-2, 7-6, 6-2.

Only one seed fell in the men's singles. American John Sadri downed Spaniard Jose Higueras 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5. Sadri is ranked just 35th in the United States, but the 12th-seeded Higueras plays very little on grass. He was the fifth of the 16 men's seeds to be toppled.

Blind Batter LL First

SIMON RISCONI

WEST COVINA, Calif. (AP) — "Yes, I'm blind — but I'm not handicapped," says 11-year-old Simon Risconi, possibly the first sightless designated hitter in Little League history.

Simon bats off a tee and gets help running to first base. He survives on a burning desire to "do what normal people do."

Simon, the only blind student at Westcove Elementary School here, has spent more than half his life in darkness since losing his sight to glaucoma at the age of 5. But that hasn't stopped him.

"The kids were practicing at Westcove School one day and he went up to one of the coaches and asked about playing in the league," explains league representative Don Payton, one of many who insist Simon's achievement is a Little League baseball first.

Payton said he talked to the boy on the telephone one night about playing in the Orangewood Little League and at the end of the conversation, Simon said: "Incidentally, I think there's something I should tell you. I'm blind."

Payton took Simon's case to the league's board of directors, and District 19 representative John Littlefield gave his approval after suggesting young Risconi hit off a batting tee, be helped to first base and not be allowed to play in the field to prevent possible injury.

A few weeks later, Simon was in uniform for the Angels of the rookie division, coached by Ed Miraglia and Gus Sansone.

"He showed up at practice one day and said, 'I was sent here to be on your team,'" said Miraglia, who had never worked with a blind child before.

When Miraglia introduced the other players to him, Simon shook their hands and felt their shoulders and chests to find out how tall they were and how they were built, so he could remember them.

He is shown no favoritism; in the dugout he has to behave like all the other players.

"The biggest problem is keeping the other kids away from him," said Miraglia. "They want to lead him around all the time. He's too independent for that."

Simon's dedication makes him a major influence on the team.

"He thinks we're going to win just because he's out there," Miraglia said. "He's really a very positive little man. When he first came out, I asked him how he would get to first base and he told me to go down to first and call his name.

"I'm a police officer, and it brought tears to my eyes," the coach says. "He's so enthusiastic. He comes out like gangbusters."

Tech Signs Fem Stars

Texas Tech University continues to bolster its women's athletic program with the signing of four more athletes to national letters-of-intent, the athletic department announced Wednesday.

Ramona Spencer, an All-Conference and All-Region performer at Amarillo Junior College the past two seasons, will be returning to Lubbock to play college ball. The 5-8 guard played for Estacado High School. She averaged 12.8 points a game while directing Amarillo to a 21-11 record, the Region V title, and a 13th place finish in the national tournament.

"I decided on Tech because I knew about their program and I've heard about coach (Gay) Benson," said Miss Spencer. "I know many of the players that have signed with Tech, so it won't be a tough adjustment."

"I played with Christie (Newman, another Tech recruit from Amarillo College), I've played against Nodia Vaughn and I also know Gwen McCray," she said.

"I don't expect much difference between junior college ball and what's played at the universities," she added. "We play the same type of ball."

Tech's fifth basketball signee is Pam Stone, a 6-1 center from Jacksonville, Fla. She averaged 11 points, 12 rebounds and three blocked shots a game as a senior, her first year of competitive basketball.

"I read about Pam when I was in Florida vacationing and I followed up when I got home," said coach Benson. "She is a natural athlete with a good attitude and an ability to learn," she added. "Her speed and jumping ability make her our No. 1 prospect at the post position.

Other newcomers to the Tech basketball program next year are Nodia Vaughn of Western Texas, Gwen McCray of El Paso Parkland and Christie Dewman of Amarillo College.

Miss Butler was a member of the El Paso Andress state qualifying mile relay team the past three years. Her best time in the 440-yard run is 57.6.

She will compete in both the mile relay and the open 400-meter run for Tech, said track coach Beta Little.

Miss Butler is the third Tech track signee this year. She joins hurdler Veronica Flowers of Temple and Lubbock Cooper's half-miler Kayla Jones.

Miss Cox, the second diver recruited by Tech in two years, was a conference champion and state qualifier in high school at Fort Myers, Fla. She will join sophomore Melanie Halpin in the one and three meter diving events.

Coach Anne Goodman has signed six swimmers this summer including Amy Thorpe, Janie James, Lindy Lauderdale, Dorinda Jung, and Debra Kaufmann..

BIG BUCKS

Handball Stars Visit Lubbock For Clinic

Fred Lewis, a professional handball player who has been world champion five of the last seven years, and Pete Tyson, a physical education instructor and handball coach at the University of Texas, were in Lubbock Wednesday night to conduct a clinic at the Executive Athletic Club.

"Lubbock has a good nucleus of players," Tyson said. "That's why we stopped by."

Lewis and Tyson are on their way to an annual handball camp in Steamboat Springs, Colo. and conducting clinics in various cities along the way.

Tyson said handball could become more popular in Lubbock if there were better courts available. Unlike racquetball and tennis, handball is not booming.

"Racquetball is a phenomenon — not a fad — a phenomenon," Tyson said. "Handball is more difficult to play and its been stationary."

Raiders Clean Rug

It's clean-up, paint-up, fix-up time around Lubbock, and rug repair falls in the last category. At least, for Texas Tech, it does.

A repair crew is now in the process of working on the AstroTurf surface of Jones Stadium.

John Conley, the assistant athletic director in charge of facilities, said the crew is taking care of the artificial rug, by reworking the area along the seams.

The artificial surface was laid in five-yard strips running across the field. And Conley said there was some deterioration along the seams. A crew is in the process of separating the carpet at the seams, vacuuming out the dust collected, making the repairs and resealing them.

"It's just part of the regular maintenance procedure," said Conley. "It's part of the regular contract issued by Monsanto when we bought the AstroTurf two years ago."

The work is expected to be completed by the end of this week, Conley said.

Also, later this summer, Tech plans to repaint the lines and markings on the field, Conley said. However, this will be delayed as long as possible before the Red Raider footballers return for start of fall drills and the start of the home season Sept. 8 against Southern California.

Network Takes Gamble On Wimbledon Telecast

By CHRISY BARBEE
AP Sports Writer

Devotees of Daffy Duck, Buford and The Galloping Ghost and The Jetsons may suffer a little, but it's all in the name of television history and one man's belief in the sanctity of Wimbledon.

NBC will defy the Saturday late-sleeping habits of tennis fans and the cartoon-viewing regimen of millions when it telecasts live coverage of the men's tennis final at Wimbledon July 7 at 8 a.m. CDT.

It will be the first time Wimbledon action will be seen in America as it happens. Because of the time difference between continents, diehards for years have had to hide out from radios and early afternoon newspapers in order to avoid learning the results from Wimbledon before the afternoon telecast.

NBC will provide 10¾ hours of coverage, starting with the telecast this Saturday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. CDT. Highlights of 15 minutes will be telecast each week day next week at 10:30 p.m. CDT. Viewers in the Pacific and Mountain zones should check local listing for possible time differences.

The live final is a real gamble. "I really have no feeling yet for whether this will be a huge success or a miserable failure," says Jeff Mason, the network's vice president for European productions and the enthusiastic producer for Wimbledon.

"But we feel that's the way the event should be treated. This is Wimbledon, one of the most prestigious sporting events in the world, a class act."

And, he says, Wimbledon is the single event for which he could see troubled NBC do battle to its last breath should another network loosen its 11-year hold on it.

"I think the guy at home really likes class acts."

He acknowledges, though, that were he to be in the States on July 7 he might well sleep until 9 a.m., figuring that he might not miss too much in the first outrageously early hour.

"But I hope there aren't too many of those types around," he says, "and I hope they'll make an exception in this case."

The probability for dismal ratings would seem high. Add to the unusual hour the fact that tennis telecasts generally draw small audiences, smaller than those for golf.

But Wimbledon, which started last Monday, does boast some eye-opening attractions this year. The rivalries that could come to the fore are more interesting than they've been in recent years. And NBC has assembled a fine team for the coverage.

Bud Collins and Donald Dell are the best, and really the only experienced tennis commentators on TV. Billie Jean King, who is playing singles and doubles here and vying for a record 20th Wimbledon title (singles and doubles included), will provide commentary on the women's action. And Dick Enberg, doing Wimbledon for the first time, will provide continuity.

And Borg could achieve a mark not reached since 1913. He could win a fourth consecutive Wimbledon crown, becoming the first man since New Zealand's Tony Wilding to do so.

Connors gave organizers a big scare. He nearly passed up the hallowed event to be with his pregnant wife in the States, but doctors said she probably would not deliver until later in July.

His chances seem slimmer than ever, given his inconsistent play so far this year, Borg's domination at Wimbledon and McEnroe's constantly growing prowess.

Victor Pecci, the tall dark man with the diamond earpin, will be a big story. From relative obscurity, he stunned the field at the French championships early this month, beating Connors and three other top players before bowing to Borg in the final. He made it to the final weekend before last at a London grass court event, then yielded to McEnroe.

The story in the women's draw will be whether Chris Evert Lloyd, a two-time Wimbledon winner but a listless loser the last two years, can stir herself to challenge Martina Navratilova. She beat Martina last week at Eastbourne, a traditional Wimbledon grass warmup.

A renewed Evonne Goolagong Cawley, who made it to the semis against Navratilova last year before limping out on a severely damaged heel, has an excellent shot at the final.

Ali Knew Career Ended After Last Spinks Bout

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

The moment of truth, that precise instant he knew in his heart it was all over, hit Muhammad Ali at the height of his finest hour while everybody else around him was going bananas.

Just when they all were telling him how great he was, he knew he was all through.

He remembers the date, last Sept. 15, and the site, New Orleans. He had just finished going 15 rounds with Leon Spinks for a second time, digging deep down into his reserve, his soul, and his spirit, in an exhausting expedition to become the first man ever to win the world heavyweight championship three times.

"The winner ... and new world heavyweight champion ..." The ring announcer was trying to make himself heard over the ear-piercing uproar of the crowd which already knew who the winner was, having been told of the unanimous 10-4-1, 10-4-1, 11-4 votes of the three officials.

Ali also knew who the winner was because he had been told, but he waited for the announcer to call out his name.

"Remember, I threw a kiss to the crowd," he says. "That was the moment ... that was when I realized I would never fight anymore ... except maybe these exhibitions. I threw them all a kiss because I was telling them goodbye ... I was so tired. You have no idea how tired I was. I worked so hard and knew I couldn't ... or wouldn't ... ever want to do it again for no amount of money in the world.

"I knew something else, too. I knew I got lucky and won the fight."

Ali was speaking over the phone from his home in Los Angeles, pouring out his heart a little, talking about both the past and the future and telling why he spurned an almost incredible $50 million offer from Johannesburg to fight WBC champ Larry Holmes.

"The wear and tear on my body wouldn't be worth it," he was saying. "Besides, I've got a lot of other things I'm working on that mean much more to me than fighting again. Not that I couldn't if I wanted to, though. But I wanna go out like this ... clean."

Ali, at 37, is going out the way he wants, clean as a whistle, knowing his fists and his unique personality made him more than $40 million and probably at least that many fans. Part of his appeal lay in the fact that although he always talked about how great he was, he generally backed it up. At the root of it all, he provided many, myself included, with any number of thrilling moments and nobody could ever say he was a vicious individual or had any meanness to him. Sometimes, it seemed to me, what he enjoyed most was pulling everyone's leg.

He says he could fight again if he wanted to and I'm sure he could.

"There isn't anything in the world that man can't do that he says he can," offers Angelo Dundee, who knows him as well as anyone else. "I've seen him do the impossible too many times ever to discount anything he says. I don't think he'll fight again, but I wouldn't fall over in a dead faint if he did."

Maybe Angelo Dundee wouldn't be surprised if Ali decided to fight again, but I would. I think he has more sense than that even though I know he isn't in as poor physical shape as most people think.

Those pictures of him taken in London recently with his stomach hanging over his belt weren't doctored, but here again, typically, he was burlesquing, purposely puffing out his belly. I've seen Ali do it also while he was in training simply so he could enjoy the way everyone would start talking about what "terrible shape" he was in.

Those stories about him having ballooned all the way up to 250 and more are just that, stories. Right now, he weighs 235.

On July 14, Ali will meet Lyle Alzado, the Denver Broncos' All-Pro defensive end, in an eight-round exhibition in Denver. Alzado once won the Golden Gloves heavyweight championship of Omaha, Neb., and he's determined to make a good showing when he gets his big chance with Ali.

For his trouble that night, Ali will get $250,000. Not too shabby for an old retiree.

Alzado Taunts Fly Already

DENVER (AP) — World heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, although officially retired from the ring, has warned he is "out for blood" when he meets Denver Bronco defensive lineman Lyle Alzado in an eight-round exhibition bout next month.

"I've been running, I've been training, I've got my stuff, I'm watching my weight, I'm sleeping in a different room from my wife," he said, noting that his weight is down to about 235 pounds. "I will be ready. I will be dancing. I'm looking at this fight as something that can hurt my reputation, so he better be ready.

"Tell Alzado this is war. I'm out for blood. I'm very serious. Tell him to be ready to be hit hard on the jaw. Tell the world, he must fall. He will fall.

"I've stopped Joe Frazier and George Foreman. I've defeated the greatest fighters in the world. I'm the greatest fighter of all time."

Ali said he knows nothing about Alzado's style of fighting and doesn't care. "He cannot hit as hard as a boxer, so he's in trouble. When I'm through with Alzado, people won't pay to see him no more.

"There cannot be no Denver white boy whipping me. I cannot be defeated by a white boy. He won't have a chance. I don't believe he'll show up."

Steinbrenner Throws Ball In Jackson's Court

TORONTO (AP) — The next move is up to Reggie Jackson in the international war of words among George Steinbrenner in Columbus, Ohio, Billy Martin in Toronto and Reggie in New York.

In remarks to newsmen Wednesday in Columbus shortly before the New York Yankees' exhibition game with their top farm club, Steinbrenner, the club's headline-making owner, made it perfectly clear that "the ball is in Reggie's court. He has to be a man."

And Wednesday night in Toronto, Martin said that his "door is always open" and he hopes Jackson will come in for a talk to settle their differences.

The two protagonists will be in the same clubhouse Friday night when the Yankees return home for a weekend series with the Boston Red Sox. "I think Reggie will come in so we can have a talk and settle the whole thing," Martin said.

That would suit Steinbrenner just fine. He would like to see the long-running dispute between the manager and the right fielder come to an end — and the sooner the better.

"Things can be worked out and things had better be worked out," the owner said. Or else, was what he implied but didn't say.

At the same time, Steinbrenner said it was " very doubtful" that Jackson would be traded and disclosed that Jackson's lawyer asked to have the slugger's contract extended when his request for a trade was turned down.

Steinbrenner said his "door is open," too, but hoped he would not have to serve as the peacemaker. But he said it was necessary for Jackson and Martin to "get together and resolve any differences.

"These are grown men," he went on. "A guy can do his job and he doesn't have to have Christmas dinner with his boss. But go out and do the job you're paid for. Reggie's got to understand he's got a contract to play baseball for the Yankees.

"I think Reggie is truly troubled by the fact that Billy came back as manager, but he has no reason to be. Billy is a different individual this time. He has gone further down the road. What Reggie's gonna do to make it right remains to be seen, but I think he'll do it. He's not gonna let New York down or let his temammates down. He's still a hell of a man."

Jackson, who has been sidelined for more than three weeks with a calf injury, took special batting practice again in New York on Wednesday and Steinbrenner said it was reported to him that Reggie "was hitting like hell out there. He's working. He's not dogging it."

Jackson could return to action this weekend as the designated hitter, although he won't play the outfield until his leg is completely healed.

Earlier, Steinbrenner said that Steve Kay, Jackson's lawyer, told him Reggie "might not be in the right frame of mind" the rest of the season unless the Yankees promise to trade him.

Steinbrenner said he turned down that request and Kay promptly changed tactics and "asked me to consider an extension of Reggie's contract. I told him I'm not gonna talk that kind of stuff now."

Jackson is in the third year of a five-year $3.5 million contract.

Jackson, who has been quoted as saying he doesn't think he can play for Martin, has yet another problem. On Tuesday, the Yankees reacquired right fielder Bobby Murcer, who starred in New York from 1969-74.

"Murcer is the one ingredient we really needed — a No. 3 hitter," Steinbrenner said. "But we can't make a run and win again without Reggie. He's a great baseball player and we need him."

Engineering Professor Claims Wind, Solar Power Not Cheap

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — "The laws of physics will not conform to the whims of the public," said Dr. William Hughes, who has been conducting wind power research at Oklahoma State University for several years.

He said just because the public wants to believe that wind and solar energy will provide cheap, efficient energy doesn't make it so.

"There is no more cheap energy. There will never be any more cheap energy," said Hughes, who is director of the Engineering Energy Research Laboratory at OSU in Stillwater.

Hughes, in a telephone interview, said Americans cannot expect wind or solar power to supply cheap, efficient electricity.

"It will be a long time until small wind systems can compete with commerical electricity. That is if we don't beat commercial energy to death with a snail darter or other ways," he said.

Although the wind is free, the windmill that generates the wind isn't. The same goes for solar energy.

Hughes said the cheapest windmill on the market is $3,000. If the cost is amortized over 20 years and the money is borrowed at the going rate and the costs of maintenance and operation are figured in, the cost of wind power is about 20 cents a kilowatt, compared with five cents if the power is purchased from a commercial power plant.

He said a wind system can only produce about a tenth of the power needed for a regular-sized home.

"And you only get it when the wind blows," Hughes said. He added that storage systems are expensive and not very good.

He said that people who say that wind and solar power can be as economical as nuclear power "only wish it so. They have never really calculated the costs.

"Knowing what I know, it just doesn't fit," he said.

An argument used by proponents of solar and wind power — that mass production will bring the cost down as it has in calculators and computers — is false, Hughes said.

"There is not $25 worth of silicone in a computer. But solar and wind power are material-intensive and the cost of materials continues to go up," Hughes said.

"It takes several years of operation just to produce the amount of energy it takes to make the windmill," he said.

Instead of trying to find a cheap source of energy, he said Americans are just going to have to allocate more of their budgets toward energy.

"If we understand that, we can expect a reasonable life. We need to stop looking for villians. It is all our fault. We've had it too easy too long. There are no big villians, just short-term villiams.

"It's time we stopped chasing dreams and face reality," Hughes said.

Firm Hikes Price Of Coffee

NEW YORK (AP) — General Foods, the nation's largest coffee roaster, has joined three other major producers in raising the wholesale price of ground coffee by 25 cents a pound, the third quarter-a-pound jump in the past eight weeks.

The price boost reflects worries that a frost in Brazil and civil unrest in Nicaragua and Uganda will cut the world's supplies of green coffee beans.

General Foods increased the wholesale price of a pound of Maxwell House ground coffee by a quarter to $3.08. It also announced 25-cent increases on its Yuban, Sanka and Brim brands, and said its instant coffee prices are rising by 3 to 3¾ cents an ounce.

On Tuesday, 25-cent increases in the wholesale price of ground coffee were announced by Procter & Gamble, whose Folger's division is the nation's second-largest coffee roaster; by Coca-Cola, maker of the Butternut and Maryland Club brands, and by MJB Co., a regional producer based in San Francisco. Each company raised the wholesale price of a pound of ground coffee from $2.83 to $3.08.

Hills Brothers, the third-largest roaster, did not immediately follow the other producers' actions.

General Foods said the price of "green coffee, which represents some 70 to 90 percent of the total processing cost of coffee, has risen 34 percent since April." Procter & Gamble and MJB spokesmen also cited the increasing cost of unroasted coffee as the reason for their wholesale price hikes.

The wholesale price increases may be passed on to consumers. But supermarkets often sell coffee at or even below wholesale prices as a way of attracting business.

In one New York supermarket Wednesday, Folger's coffee was selling for $1.99 a pound, and several other brands were selling for less than $2.50, well under wholesale. But the Agriculture Department has predicted retail coffee prices will rise by 40 cents a pound this summer.

The civil war in coffee-producing Nicaragua, and worries the strife might spread to other Latin American coffee exporters, have combined with concerns over future coffee supplies from Uganda and neighboring Zaire to drive bean prices higher.

Woman's Hobby Now Job

NORTH CANTON, Ohio (AP) — It's crystal clear to Sandy Donato that she blows her job every day.

She makes ornamental crystal objects that require her to blow, shape, etch and cut glass.

It started as a hobby but Mrs. Donato and her husband now have four stores in Ohio and West Virginia to market her products and she hopes to have a retail outlet in Florida soon.

Her love of the art goes back to her high school days when her boyfriend, Joe Donato, who is now her husband, gave her a glass ornament.

"While we still were at Glenwood (high school), he bought me a glass wishing well," she said. They have now been married 10 years.

"That started a collection and, when we'd go on a trip, I'd always buy a piece of spun glass," she said.

In 1970 they got into conversation with a glass-blowing artist at a festival in Lisbon and learned he taught a course in creative glass blowing at the University of Akron.

Sandy enrolled and attended every class for three years. In the course of her studies she kept some of the objects she made and began showing them at Stark County fairs.

"I had 18 pieces and was so excited to have an opportunity to exhibit them," she said. From that, the hobby grew into a business.

Her husband quit his job as an accountant a year ago to join his wife in the business and has studied the art of etching and cutting crystal.

Working with glass, she says, is like weaving taffy. It cools so fast she has only a few seconds to mold it after the glass is softened.

"I can only blow four hours a day because of the intense light from the burner," she said. "It's hard on the eyes."

Her creations include tiny animals that sell for $1; sailing ships that sell for $18-$35; and a coach with four horses that takes up to 80 hours to make and sells for $300.

Mrs. Donato said she seldom signed her work but had signed it on one occasion when a customer had bought a butterfly and a bee as a gift for Muhammed Ali, the boxer.

Grand pianos spun in glass, she says, are fun to make and fast-sellers at her stores.

Businessman Picks Appropriate Gift

DENVER (AP) — When a Denver businessman is invited to China with Commerce Secretary Juanity Kreps, what should he take his host, Li Quang, the Chinese foreign trade minister?

Edward M. Lee, president of Information Handling Services, came up with a $20,000, computerized information bank that can provide comprehensive data on 10 million American products.

The information unit, which Secretary Kreps indicated was the proper gift, was designed to break the information logjam between China and the United States.

Frantic Trade Seen In Mart

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — To those who take their cues from the Dow Jones industrial average, things have been pretty dull lately in the stock market.

For almost four months, the widely recognized average of 30 blue chips has fluctuated listlessly back and forth between 820 and 880, covering over and over again the same ground it first reached more than a decade ago.

But behind that lackluster facade, there is a lively, sometimes downright frantic, market in many individual stocks.

As even casual observes of Wall Street know by now, the name of this game is "takeover mania," born of an unprecedented wave of corporate acquisitions and mergers.

For investors, the rules of the game seem simple enough: pick out the next likely takeover target, buy a chunk of its stock, and wait for the payoff when some other company comes along and snaps it up at a premium price.

The rewards can be handsome. Eltra Corp., a diversified company whose products include batteries and Converse sneakers, jumped 10½ points to 41⅛ last Wednesday, and another 2⅛ the next day, when the company said it had been approached by another concern interested in acquiring it.

The problem for would-be participants in this heady action, of course, is figuring out where the lightning is likely to strike next.

Rumors abound. The same day that Eltra's shares took off, at least five other Big Board companies issued statements saying they had no news to account for sudden surges in the price and volume of their stocks.

There is, naturally, no foolproof method for picking tomorrow's takeover candidate. In a recent bulletin to clients, however, Alan C. Poole at Laidlaw Adams & Peck Inc. set down a two-step approach investors looking for "takeover plays" might use.

"Step One involves selection of what is basically a good investment whether a takeover occurs or not," Poole said.

This step requires analysis of several aspects of the company's fundamental situation. By Poole's method, the stock should meet at least three of four standards:

—It is trading below book value, or its theoretical value per share if the company were to be liquidated.

—It is selling at no more than twice net working capital per share, after debt is subtracted.

—Its dividend yield is 5 percent or better.

—Its price earnings ratio is less than 10 times the past 12 months' profits.

Poole's second step, then, involves technical analysis, with the aim of determining whether the stock is "under accumulation" by someone. Again, he lists four citeria, and suggests that a possible takeover target should meet at least three of them:

—In at least two weeks this year, the stock has risen on volume that is double its weekly average so far in 1979.

—Average weekly volume over the past 13 weeks is at least 50 percent greater when the stock has risen than when it has declined.

—The stock's chart shows a rising pattern.

—The stock is trading in the bottom half of its range over the past 12 months.

This do-it-yourself kit requires familiarity with such things as corporate financial reports and stock charts. And, says Poole, "this method is not infallible. It is possible that the stock might be being accumulated for investment purposes rather than to take over the company.

"Over all, however, we feel that the combined fundamental and technical approaches which we use will increase the investor's chances of success."

Study Shows Most Wives Enjoy Work

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Despite the popular view that 1980s housewives are "bored, isolated drudges," a majority enjoy their work as much as their 1950s counterparts, a University of Michigan study has found.

At the same time, the study showed the same factors that have reduced misgivings in working wives have increased feelings of guilt in wives who stay at home.

"The rhetoric against housework tends to ignore the rewards of child care, community involvement and civic activities, all of which make homemaking a very viable way to enhance feelings of selfworth," said Alfreda F. Iglehart of the U-M Survey Research Center.

Iglehart surveyed 628 housewives and 149 employed women and compared the results with a 1957 study of 337 housewives and 231 working women.

"In 1957 social norms were rigid, particularly for mothers of young children. A wife's first loyalty was expected to be the home, and working — even for economic need — had a degree of stigma attached to it," Iglehart said.

Trends emerging over the next 20 years, including later marriages, birth control and the women's movement, urged housewives to find fulfillment outside the home.

Iglehart said the same factors that reduced feelings of guilt in working wives may have increased similar feelings in housewives.

"Household tasks which were respectable in the 1950s are now being called trivial and exploitive," she said. "Even if a woman doesn't agree with this assessment, her self-image will suffer if her work is degraded."

While one-quarter of employed wives in 1957 said they would prefer to be home, only 3 percent of today's wives gave that answer, indicating that work has become a matter of choice, the study shows.

The only working mothers who held negative feelings about themselves were ones with pre-school children, Iglehart said.

She found that in both studies, the presence or lack of full-time employment seems to have little bearing on personal happiness.

Conservation Group Criticizes Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservation lobbying group is criticizing the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for approving the start-up of California's Rancho Seco nuclear power plant.

Friends of the Earth argued Tuesday the commission did not demand enough information from the plant's operators to justify its reopening. Rancho Seco, near Sacramento, was one of eight Babcock & Wilcox plants ordered shut down following the Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania in March.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Heavy selling by brokerage houses in a general absence of bullish news pushed grain and soybean futures sharply lower Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn and soybeans plunged by as much as the daily trading limit, with a selloff late in the session accounting for much of the losses.

Early selling by local traders touched off waves of selling by commission houses, many of whom had sell-stops, or set prices at which they would sell, already established at prices slightly below Tuesday's closing levels.

Private forecasts of scattered rains in parts of the corn and soybean belt encouraged some selling on ideas that crop conditions in this country are generally good, an analyst said.

Fusion Music Relaxes Jazz Festival Crowds

NEW YORK (AP) — The mellower side of fusion music made a recent performance at the Newport Jazz Festival a laid-back affair.

Although there was no sizzling drive or pounding electricity, there was the enormous talents of guitarist Earl Klugh and vocalist Michael Franks.

Klugh is as comfortable playing classical guitar as he is with the Spanish and jazz guitars. And this range is reflected in his type of fusion music. It is the same classically influenced styling of violinist Noel Pointer, and a refinement of the more rock oriented fusion of a George Duke.

Franks, whose jazz coloring best resembles Mel Torme without the fog or Astrid Gilberto without the whisper, blends the easy listening rock sound with jazz. His form is more conventional than Klugh's, as he takes predictable breaks from the melody.

He opened the program at Avery Fisher Hall and immediately demonstrated the polish and precision of his five-piece backup with a tune he wrote with Joe Sample, "Chain Reaction." It was a song that showcased Richard Eisenstein's talents at the keyboards and John Payne's flexibility with reeds.

Franks is very direct with his music. He takes no chances and creates no frenzy. Instead, he is clean in his coloring and precise in pitch. His voice is modulated to become another instrument.

He is equally at ease with uptempo jazz or smooth bossa novas. In "Underneath the Apple Tree," he was gentle and controlled. In "Popsicle Toes," Franks moved more freely.

Klugh concentrated on intricate fingering and bridges. His five-piece backup, which included Hubie J. Crawford, Jr., on bass, was not as clean as it should have been, but the musicians worked well with him.

"Living Inside Your Love," was a good arrangement for Klugh, permitting him to show his facility with chord changes during a solo lead-in. Klugh has a tremendous reach which allows him to move in and out of bridges without slipping chords.

Area Offers Variety Of Sites

Driving habits are changing as motorists consider the cost of gasoline, service station hours of operation, and miles-per-gallon. Yet, for many persons there remains an important psychological need to get away for awhile — or start climbing the walls.

Aside from the usual two-weeks-with-pay annual vacation, some people like to get away for brief excursions or weekend mini-vacations. From now on, most likely, such excursions will need to be within range of a tank of gasoline, enabling the travelers to reach the destination and return home without having to worry about filling up.

To take advantage of excursions on a tank of gas, the travelers need to know how many miles the family auto can go on a full tank of gasoline. Take half that distance and use as a radius to draw a circle on a road map around your hometown. Keep in mind you will use some gasoline at your destination and will want some spare fuel in your tank after you return home.

Here's an example: If your car can travel 350 miles on a full tank, then a good radius from Lubbock would be 150 miles; the extra 50 miles allows for some driving at your destination and upon your return home.

Because various autos have different size tanks and get different miles-per-gallon, your turn around point may be a greater distance.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has a map that will list many interesting destinations near Lubbock. A free copy of the map is available by writing: Wonderful West Texas, Fun and Adventure Map, Box 1561, Abilene, TX 79604.

Crosbyton, 37 miles east of Lubbock on U.S. Highway 82, is an excellent example of a destination for a mini-excursion. The town of approximately 3,000 population recently gained national prominence for its solar power project. But, the immediate area of the "most progressive town in West Texas" has also played an important role in our history for over 100 years.

During a recent visit to Crosbyton, this writer counted more than a dozen historical markers in and around the town square. Crosby County itself has a total of 32 historical markers.

On the town square is the Crosby County Pioneer Memorial Museum. The main building is an exact replica of the Hank Smith ranch house (circa 1877), the first permanent dwelling to be built on the Plains of Texas. If a century ago doesn't seem very historical, keep in mind that the 1875 Texas Almanac described this area as being "an unexplored region, little known; at present the tramping grounds of wild Indians and buffalo."

Additional museum wings extending from the central rock house bring the complete facility to 13,000 sqaure feet. Museum space takes up 8,500 square feet. The museum traces the area's history by using some of the most interesting displays I've ever seen. From a replica of a half dugout and mementos of the U.S. 4th Cavalry to early transportation methods and an early day post office, it is easy to understand why Crosby County is called the most historical area on the Plains.

Be sure to spend some time studying the beautiful diorama (measuring 6 feet by 40 feet) showing the picturesque land of the Crosby area. Painted by Conny Martin of Lubbock, the diorama contains details not qoticed by the casual or passing observer. The Lubbock artist has also illustrated a book by W. Hubert Curry relating the saga of pioneer Henry Clay Smith who settled on the edge of the Staked Plains over a century ago. The book, Sun Rising on the West, will be available in about two weeks at the Crosby County Pioneer Memorial Museum. The museum is open 9 -12 a.m. and 2 -5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday year around. From May through September the museum is also open on Sundays 2 -4 p.m.; the facility is closed on Mondays.

Crosbyton's town square will be the site of an art festival this Saturday beginning at 12 noon. Activities will include a jurored art show (oil, watercolor, pastel, graphics, sculpture), crafts for sale, plus baked goods, jams and jellies. "The Golden Years of Country Music," by students of South Plains College, Levelland, will begin at 8:30 p.m. The musical program will be free of charge.

Located five miles east of Crosbyton, on U.S. Highway 82, is Silver Falls Park. Although the stream that meanders through the park may be more mud than water, the scenic site is a perfect place for a picnic. Scattered about the park are picnic tables and grills shaded by large trees. The area's flowers and shrubbery attract many birds making the site a productive spot for serious birders. The park is attractively landscaped and is complemented with drinking fountains, modern restrooms, and night lighting. The State Department of Highways Travel and Information Division considers the facility as one of the finest roadside parks in the state.

A mile west of Silver Falls Park, toward Crosbyton, are three historical markers worthy of a traveler's attention. One of the markers pertains to a campsite used by Colonel Ronald Mackenzie following a skirmish with Indians; another marker describes why Dewey Lake, once an important landmark, was hastily named for a woman; the third marker relates to the first Texas Ranger station on the Panhandle-South Plains.

Dewey Lake is no more, but White River Lake (22 miles south of Crosbyton) provides some of the Plains best fishing for bass, catfish and crappie. The exceptionally clean lake has 35 miles of shoreline. Facilities include boat ramps, bait shops, convenience stores, picnic areas, and a restaurant.

There are many activities and points of interest within the range of a half tank of gasoline from Lubbock. Brownfield, home of the West Texas Flea Market every third weekend, has an interesting museum and free camping. Stamford hosts the Texas Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo, Western Art Show and Sale July 2,3, and 4. Abilene has one of America's unique small zoos, Fort Phantom Hill, Old Abilene Town, and a State Park with swimming and camping.

Sweetwater has the Recreational Vehicle Oasis and three area lakes. Canyon has the Panhandle -South Plains Museum and is near Palo Duro Canyon State Park where the outstanding production of the summer musical "Texas" is now in progress. Near Amarillo is Lake Meredith and the Alibates National Monument. Midland has the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

COOL FUN — Suzanne Spearman (age 4) and her brother Joseph (age 13) have a muddy good time at Silver Falls Park near Crosbyton. The youngsters from Texarkana enjoyed the park while visiting relatives in Lubbock.

Disco Musical Bores Critic

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The owner of the Dream Castle Disco in the first disco musical on Broadway says he wants no losers in his place. However, the musical he's part of, "Got Tu Go Disco," qualifies for that word itself.

"Got Tu Go Disco" opened this week at Broadway's Minskoff Theater. The music is uniformly headache loud, with the appropriate heavy bass and lavish strings. That's fine for an evening of disco dancing but all gets to sounding the same in an evening of listening.

It becomes difficult for assaulted ears to tell which of the songs might be good in a real disco. Some probably would be.

The story is Cinderella, updated. This was done charmingly a few years ago in an off-Broadway musical, "Cindy." This one features a clash of styles and lines as shallow as a parody, combined into a mess, in the old-fashioned meaning of that word.

Irene Cara plays the lead, her name updated to Cassette. She is delicate and lovely and even, in the midst of the melee, attractively quiet.

In the plot, she clerks in a disco clothing story. But she doesn't dance at night. She waits on a shrill half-sister and Mom, with hair like fright-wigs, played by one-time New York celebrity Baby Jane Holzer and Patti Karr. The latter is given a leg-showing solo dance, placed so it slows the finale.

Joe Masiell, a good singer, misplays the disco owner, doing him like an overly macho, aging rock singer staging an unsuccessful comeback.

Cassette gets a beautiful disco dress, enters a disco contest and wins. There is a finale and then two lesser numbers after it, completely killing the finale's effect, a typical event of the evening.

Mom and step-sister have body mikes. Everybody else also carries one, a gesture which often gets in the way.

Chrome and lucite platforms and ramps by James Hamilton come and go effectively. Movies by Robert Rabinowitz are shown on side walls and ceiling during musical numbers. Larry Forde directed. Jo Jo Smith and Troy Garza are credited with choreography. John Zodrow wrot the book and 12 people wrote music and lyrics. Jerry Brandt and Gotta Dance, Inc., produced.

There is some lively disco dancing. But it's a lot more fun to go to a disco and do it yourself.

What other critics said:

Richard Eder, New York Times — Apart from drawing customers ... it is hard to figure out what is the purpose of "Got Tu." For much of the night it seemed to be an extended commercial for New York's best-known discotheque; two of the performers, in fact, are, respectively, Studio 54's barman and the man who keeps people out. At other times it was like a demonstration show for a record salesmen's convention.

Richard Watt, New York Daily News — "Got Tu Go Disco" is pure trash, and as meaningless as its title. Discotheques are trashy, too, of course, but you can get caught up in their trash.

Bravos Greet NY Premiere Of Ballet

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Return to The Strange Land," a 1975 ballet conceived under the impact of the death of John Cranko, founder of the Stuttgart Ballet, premiered in New York last week to spirited bravos.

The simple, minute ballet in four parts was set to piano music by Leos Janacek and designed by Czech choreographer Jiri Kylian.

The abstract dance seems to speak of flight, freedom, thrilling use of air space and interdependence of people as they move from one form of existence to another.

The planned New York premiere for "Handel Concerti," choreographed by a New Yorker William Forsythe in 1977, was postponed because dancer Kurt Speker, who was to appear in four parts of the work, hurt his leg earlier in the day. Cranko's "Concerto for Flute and Harp" to Mozart's music was substituted.

Lucia Montagnon, Christian Fallanga and Stephen Greenston danced the first movement of "Strange Land." Birgit Keil, Reid Anderson and Vladimir Klos the last. The two middle movements were duets.

In each movement, a ballerina was spun around by her partner. One of her arms is stretched high and out and one leg was completely extended. There are many fast, dazzling lifts and spins. At times, as when a ballerina is turned in an extened-leg somersault between two partners, she looks like a trapeze artist, working happily in space. But along with the arial look of the ballet, the close partnership of each set of dancers developed into unconvention and delightful patterns.

Choreographer Kylian left his native Prague to join the Stuttgart Ballet in 1968. Since 1975 he has been director and choreographer of the Nederlands Dans Theater. Kylian says of his tribute to Cranko that one is unconscious before life and leaves consciousness at death to return "to the strange land of one's origin."

Siamese Twin Girls Born

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Lackawanna County woman and her newborn Siamese twin girls were in stable condition today at hospitals in Philadelphia and Scranton.

The twins, joined at the breastbone, were born at Community Medical Center in Scranton shortly after midnight Tuesday and transferred to Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, where they were admitted to the newborn intensive care unit.

A hospital spokeswoman said it would be at least a week before doctors can consider surgically separating the twins.

Their mother, Carol Ann Lucas Jaskulski, 30, of Dickson City, spent three hours in delivery with the help of 12 doctors under Dr. Charles S. Rogalla.

Mondale Says Carter Will Be Re-Elected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale predicts Jimmy Carter will be re-elected to office in 1980 because of his "integrity and leadership."

Mondale told a Democratic fund-raising dinner Monday night he expected Carter to be returned to the presidency because "I've never known a man of leadership and integrity who ran for office who didn't get elected." The vice president made no reference to recent calls for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to challenge Carter for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

Liberals Criticize Police Computer

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — A police official filed an arrest order into the main brain of the West German police computer, and two minutes later a baffled fugitive embezzler was arrested at an airport passport control hundreds of miles away.

West German guards on the border to East Germany routinely check passports against police computer files. Such push-button speed, across-the-country data checking, is made possible by a $20-million computer in a bomb-proof shelter at Wiesbaden.

The computer, called INPOL For police information, is the brain-child of Horst Herold, head of the federal criminal police, the West German equivalent of the FBI.

Operational in 1976, INPOL now has more than 1,527 outlets in police patrol cars, on airports and at border crossings, and Herold wants 10 times as many. He said the system gives law enforcers for the first time technical, informational and intellectual superiority over crooks, replacing what he calls "detective chance".

In its first year, INPOL helped triple arrests to 100,000, 60 percent of them at the borders. It has been helpful in the hunt for the left-wing Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang and the spectacular arrests of leading members in the Netherlands, Belgium and Yugoslavia.

But Herold's critics argue INPOL may threaten civil rights.

INPOL and the computers of three separate security forces together have between 8 and 9 million West Germans on file, said the Hamburg news magazine Der Spiegel in a series on the computer maze titled, "A Steel network is descending on us."

Helga Schuchardt, a liberal member of parliament from Hamburg, commented that the fear of police-state methods had terrible effects on the psychological climate of the country.

Following growing criticism, Interior Minister Gerhart Baum appointed a commission to map which police and security forces should have access to what computer files consistent with the legal and effective functioning of the police and intelligence services.

Constitutional experts say a U.S.-inspired freedom of information act may cure the system of inherent ills. It would make it possible for citizens to see what kind of information is gathered, by whom and for what purpose, Spiegel quoted a government expert as saying.

Right-wing parlamentarians tried to overturn Baum's proposal, but parliament rejected the motion after Chancellor Helmut Schmidt cautioned against over-reacting in the fight against terrorism.

EXTENSION RATIFIED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has ratified a two-year extension of the 1971 International Wheat Agreement. Under it, a staff is kept in London to promote negotiations between exporting and importing nations. Participating nations also agree to ship minimum amounts of food to needy countries each year. The vote Tuesday was 89-6.

Refugee Subject Delicate

By FREDERICK H. MARKS

TOKYO (UPI) — The subject of Indochinese refugees will be a delicate one this week in Tokyo when the leaders of the seven industrialized nations sit down for their annual summit meeting.

It is delicate because Japan, the host of the summit, has a distinctly poor record on resettlement of the refugees. Only six Vietnamese have received permission to settle here, and the government has put a limit of 500 on those refugees who can eventually stay in this country.

By contrast, the United States, France and Australia have taken in hundreds of the recent refugees.

The exodus of tens of thousands more refugees has added to the urgency of the situation.

Analysis

A comparison is beginning to make the rounds here between the plight of Jewish refugees from Nazi Germany in the late 1930s, tens of thousands of whom were denied entry to other countries, and that of Indochinese refugees today.

"A real argument can be made that an analogy between today and 1938 is a valid one," said one Carter administration official.

But it is difficult to attack the problem head-on in a country like Japan because from a diplomatic standpoint it is simply considered bad form to criticize one's host.

The question many visitors to Tokyo are asking this week is why Japan takes such a hard line towards the refugee problem.

The Japanese position is difficult to analyze, but some answers may lie in Oriental philosophy and the homogeneity of the Japanese people.

"You have to understand that the Japanese simply don't want the refugees from Vietnam," says one Japanese internationalist. "We feel no obligation to those people."

That may sound blunt, but historically the Japanese have always been aloof from their neighbors. Indeed the only time the Japanese have intruded on the affairs of their Asian neighbors, the results have been disastrous, as in Japanese occupation of Korea and Taiwan, the invasion of China and Manchuria in the 1930s and the conquests during World War II.

Nowadays the Japanese privately feel that it is far more to their advantage to remain aloof from world politics and tend to their economy. To many Asians, the issue of human rights is an abstract principle which has nothing to do with their daily struggle to keep themselves and their families fed.

The Japanese economy may be the key to any move by Japan to solve the refugee problem. It is apparent that the Japanese government would like to buy their way out of adding any significant number of Vietnamese to their already overcrowded population.

And it appears that the United States might go along with that. "I would not be unhappy if a Japanese contribution enabled us to reduce our budgetary requirements for the refugee problem," said a ranking Carter administration source.

While nothing has been settled yet, Japanese sources indicate that Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira will probably significantly expand Japan's monetary contribution to the United Nations refugee relief effort.

In 1978 Japan provided just over $10 million, but Japanese sources say that the Japanese refugee aid might be doubled this year, and even increased beyond that if the problem persists.

Triumph. The first and only cigarette that delivers good taste with only 3 mg. tar.

If you've ever been disappointed by one of the very low tar cigarettes, you will understand why Triumph is quite an achievement.

Even the draw is a surprise.

The smoke comes through abundantly. The taste reaches you smoothly. Effortlessly. With none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

No less remarkable than Triumph itself, is the technology that enabled us to build it.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists took a more sensible tack:

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology further than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found, for example, that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw.

That tiny "vents" in the filter-rim smooth the taste.

That lower-leaf tobaccos (shaded from the heat of the sun) tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph is not one of those ultra low tars that spoil your pleasure by short-changing you on taste.

Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, is a cigarette with a taste you can stay with. So good, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.

TRIUMPH.®
