$1 million UTPB grant 'a gift to the people'

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

Two Midland families' $1 million matching grant for construction of an economic diversification study center is reason for optimism in an otherwise gloomy economic outlook, an official of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin said today.

A gift of the Cy Wagner, Jr. and Jack E. Brown families of Midland, the $1 million grant "is not just a gift to the university," said UTPB President Duane Leach during a morning press conference. "It's a gift to the people of the region."

The grant will have to be matched on a one-to-one basis for the center to receive its total value, Leach said. Through their oil and gas firm — Wagner and Brown — the two families also have interests in plastics research, manufacturing and real estate.

"We've reached the point in this state where we are entering a new economic era," Leach said after announcing the grant.

"In the Permian Basin region, we've got the talent, we've got the capital and we've got the know-how, but without the building, people think that we're really just talking," he said.

The grant brings to $2 million the amount of donations currently pledged toward construction of the center, Leach said. He estimated the center ultimately will cost about $4 million, with construction planned to begin next spring.

Leach said the building — which is planned to house a laboratory, an "incubator" for fledgling businesses, administrative offices and a computer center — should serve as a "catalytic agent" for area development.

"That's why this first structure has to be of high quality and first class," he said.

"We need to admit that diversification is not easy, but it can happen — it's happened elsewhere," he observed. The center will not so much work toward bringing outside industry into the Permian Basin as improving the infrastructure that already exists, he said.

The 30,000-square-foot center is planned for construction on a site located at the intersection of State Highway 191 and FM 1788 north of Midland Regional Airport, Leach said. The land was donated by Midland's Scharbauer family, he said.

Not the least of the center's planned offerings is access to the University of Texas system's "supercomputer," Leach said. The computer, set to go on line next year, represents the next generation in information processing electronics and should assist in designing economic models, Leach said.

The "enormous power" of the computer should help draw prospective businesses to the center and help place the Permian Basin at "the cutting edge" of technology, he said.

The ultimate purpose of the center is to create jobs, he said.

U.S.S.R. won't send greetings

■ Will Soviet returnees become propaganda tool? — 3A

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin rejected a U.S. request for an exchange of televised New Year's greetings by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev because superpower relations have deteriorated, a Soviet official said today.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, without giving specifics, also said Soviet officials plan to "democratize" society.

"We have no basis for the exchange of such New Year's messages," Gerasimov said. "We should make joint efforts to correct the situation and have foundations for optimism."

Last year, a taped address from Reagan was broadcast on New Year's Day at the beginning of the Soviet television news program Vremya (Time). A message by Gorbachev was shown on U.S. television.

Reagan's message marked the first time a U.S. president addressed the Soviet people on television since Richard Nixon did so during a visit to Moscow in 1972.

At his news conference, Gerasimov referred to the kind of stories reporters could expect to cover in the Soviet Union in 1987 and said:

"We are going to democratize and restructure our society and I hope you will have a lot of interesting subjects to write about this (next) year." Asked to provide specifics, Gerasimov advised reporters to wait and see.

Gerasimov said U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman approached Soviet officials with an offer to repeat the exchange of messages this year.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner confirmed today the United States "made a proposal that an exchange similar to the one that took place last year be repeated."

Asked if the Kremlin's refusal meant an end to such broadcasts, Verner said, "This is a presidential thing and needs to be referred to the White House."

He added, however: "In general, I would say that we are very interested in an open communication with the Soviet people."

Verner said he believed the Soviet refusal was communicated earlier to Washington. "We did not learn about it from Gerasimov," he said.

Evidentiary hearing on arson case continues

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

An evidentiary hearing that will determine if an outgoing Ector County Commissioner should get a new trial on charges of arson conspiracy and perjury continued today before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton.

Bunton Monday evening recessed the hearing until 8:45 a.m. today after placing everyone involved in the trial under a gag order.

The hearing was ordered in November by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals which declined to rule on Willie Hammond's appeal of his conviction on charges of arson conspiracy and perjury until it was determined if alleged prosecutorial misconduct deprived the 46-year-old county commissioner of his right to a fair trial.

At the same time, the appellate court denied a request for a rehearing of the conviction of former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel on charges of arson conspiracy.

Hammond's appeal, filed by Defense Attorney Warren Burnett, contended federal agents prevented Hammond's wife, Helen, from testifying in her husband's second trial in El Paso.

Burnett this morning attacked FBI agent Scott Crabtree's recollection of events in El Paso in September, 1985 relating to Hammond's wife and a closed door session she had with Bunton.

Concerning the session with Bunton and a court reporter, during which she reputiated government contentions that she was a voluntary witness, Burnett asked Crabtree what he thought had happned to make Mrs. Hammond change her mind.

Crabtree started to suggest that it was because of a friendship and that she might have been intimidated when Bunton stopped him in midsentence. The judge asked Crabtree if he thought he, Bunton, had done anything to intimidate Mrs. Hammond or suggest she shouldn't testify.

Crabtree said it had been some time since he read the transcript of the closed door session and counldn't remember exactly.

On Monday, assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Blakinship called a series of local and federal law officers to the witness stand in an effort to establish that all actions taken by law officers were initiated at the request of Mrs. Hammond.

Former Odessa police detective Art Ellison, now an investigator with the Ector County Attorney's office, stated he met with Mrs. Hammond April 24, 1985. Ellison testified she told him her husband had beaten and threatened her a number of times, that she had found items she believed stolen, as well as cocaine, in their home and that she "was tired of it."

Ellison said he suggested she go down to the police department and talk with other officers, which she did, he stated.

Blankinship attempted to determine if Mrs. Hammond, at any time, had been taken into formal custody. Ellison said she had not.

Odessa Police Deputy Chief Jim Dotson stated Mrs. Hammond came to the police department that same day and talked to Detective Sgt. Pete Frankson about alleged stolen property. He also said Mrs. Hammond talked about her husband's trial on arson charges and he asked her if she wanted to talk to the FBI. She said she "would like to," he stated.

Burnett asked Dotson if any members of the Odessa Police Department had ever been asked to help serve a subpoena on Mrs. Hammond. Dotson said no.

Sgt. Terry Tyree, who heads the Odessa police intelligence unit, said during an interview sometime later Mrs. Hammond talked about her husband's "gambling over the years," about the "rehearsed" testimony of a defense witness and about "odd things happening at the house."

Asked by Tyree why she was willing to come forward and talk to the FBI, she stated she was afraid of her husband, he said.

Tyree said he contacted the FBI and arranged for Mrs. Hammond to meet with agents.

Special Agent Edward Strohz stated he and Special Agent Scott Crabtree met with Mrs. Hammond and following the interview he filled out a 302 report. The report was entered into evidence by Blankinship.

Woman's suit names reporter

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old woman who claims she was defamed when she was arrested during a television program is suing reporter Geraldo Rivera, two production companies and law enforcement officers for a total of $30 million.

Rouse

Terry G. Rouse also contends invasion of privacy, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution and conspiracy in the state district court action filed Monday.

The lawsuit stems from Ms. Rouse's arrest Dec. 2 during a drug bust broadcast on a two-hour special, "American Vice: The Doping of a Nation." A cocaine possession charge filed against Ms. Rouse after her arrest was thrown out by a state district judge after she spent two days in jail.

"We have discovered that this particular entertainment program was seen by over 15 million, so we have asked for $2 per person on that. We have asked for $30 million in exemplary damages," said Mary Heafner, Ms. Rouse's attorney.

Rivera, his production company, Maravilla Productions Co. Inc., the program's syndicator, Tribune Entertainment Co., as well as Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen, sheriff's Sgt. W.F. Kessler, County Attorney Mike Driscoll and his assistant, John W. Mahoney, were named as defendants.

The suit states that during the raid Rivera said: "A pimp and his prostitutes are supplying truckers with coke and speed," and "A dude and his ladies are allegedly dealing out to the truckers."

Millions will pause to pray for peace

HOUSTON (AP) — Millions of people throughout the world will pause for an hour Wednesday to pray and contemplate peace on the last day of 1986, according to organizers of the vigil.

"The whole idea is to get people all over the world thinking about the same thing," said Debbie Ward, a spokeswoman for Houston's Center for Civic Transformation.

More than 400 million people in 75 countries are expected to participate in World Peace Day, said Ruth Larkin of the Quatrus Foundation, a nonprofit spiritual awareness center in Austin that acts as census keeper for a loose network of participants.

Musicians, singers and Houston residents will do their part beginning at 6 a.m. at Jesse H. Jones Hall, Ms. Ward said.

The 6 a.m. time corresponds with noon Greenwich time, the only time the entire world is on the same calendar day, she said. Wednesday also is the last day of 1986, designated by the United Nations as the International Year of Peace, said Larry Patton, co-chairman of the Houston group.

At Jones Hall, performances will include a children's choir, ringing of peace bells and a minute of silence at 6 a.m. Several churches in the Houston area are scheduled to be open for the vigil.

Jaycees withdraw sponsorship of Midland World Peace Event

From Staff Reports

The Midland Jaycees have withdrawn as sponsors of the "Midland World Peace Event" which was scheduled to be staged Wednesday.

In a press release issued this morning the local organization stated "The Midland Jaycees are withdrawing their support of the World Peace event scheduled for 6 p.m. Wednesday. After a review of recently obtained information concerning this event, it is our understanding that this program's goals are such that they are in conflict with the beliefs of the Midland Jaycees. Those beliefs include remaining neutral with regard to any political and/or religious beliefs or movements."

Jay Workman, a representatyive of the Jaycees and individual development director for the organization, said the decision was made following a meeting this morning.

In earlier reports it had been announced that a panel of three local speakers would participate in the Wednesday event. Today, all three announced they would not be participating.

Please see PEACE, Page 2A

The non-profit group planned a more festive event for peace because it is not a church organization and wanted to "keep it more open," Ms. Ward said. Members wanted to host the event in the Astrodome, but could not raise the money to rent the stadium.

Events honoring the hour are also planned in El Paso, Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas and San Antonio.

Theologian Randolph Price, who launched the idea for the event in a book he wrote in 1984, The Planetary Commission, said he chose the last day of 1986 because he hoped Jan. 1, 1987 will mark a new age of peace in world history.

Ms. Larkin said getting millions of people to "honor peace for one hour has got to have impact."

"Peace is a conscience choice that we make," she said, adding that she believes concentrating on peace will help improve the world's quality of life.

"Some people want to do it with joyful singing, others want to do it with quiet contemplation," she said. "The idea is to pray, contemplate, meditate."

Iran says tribunal making progress

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — U.S. and Iranian negotiators in The Hague have made progress toward return of $507.7 million in Iranian funds held at the New York Federal Reserve Bank, an informed Iranian source said today.

Officials from the New York Federal Reserve Bank, the U.S. Treasury Department, the Iranian Central Bank and the Iranian government arranged a second straight day of talks this afternoon at the Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal.

The two sides met for 3½ hours Monday.

Tehran has linked return to Iran of all its assets blocked in America to Iran's possible intercession on behalf of American hostages in Lebanon.

This is the third series of meetings the United States and Iran have held recently on the issue of Account Number One, the $507.7 million residue of a $3.66 billion account at the New York Federal Reserve. That account was established with Iranian money in 1981 to pay off syndicated bank loans.

The amount was given earlier as $506 million. Today's figure of $507.7 million was given by the New York Federal Reserve and reflected continuing interest.

"They have progressed," an Iranian source privy to the negotiations told The Associated Press. "I hope they reach some outline (for a solution) by today."

"The tribunal already gave the view that this money is the property of the Islamic Republic of Iran, and they (the United States) should transfer it immediately and promptly," said the source, referring to a tribunal decision last August which led to the negotiations.

The tribunal was set up in 1981 to mediate billions of dollars in financial claims between the United States and Iran that resulted from the 1979 Iranian revolution which overthrew the shah.

Account Number One took on added significance when Hashemi Rafsanjan, the Iranian parliament speaker, stressed that Iranian assets in the United States must be returned prior to any Iranian intercession on behalf of American hostages in Lebanon.

"That is the statement, including all Iranian assets and all Iranian property in the United States," said the Iranian source, who demanded anonymity.

While both sides in The Hague negotiations have specified that these discussions are only financial in nature, the Iranian source said Account Number One is considered part of those assets.

"It is that for sure," he said.

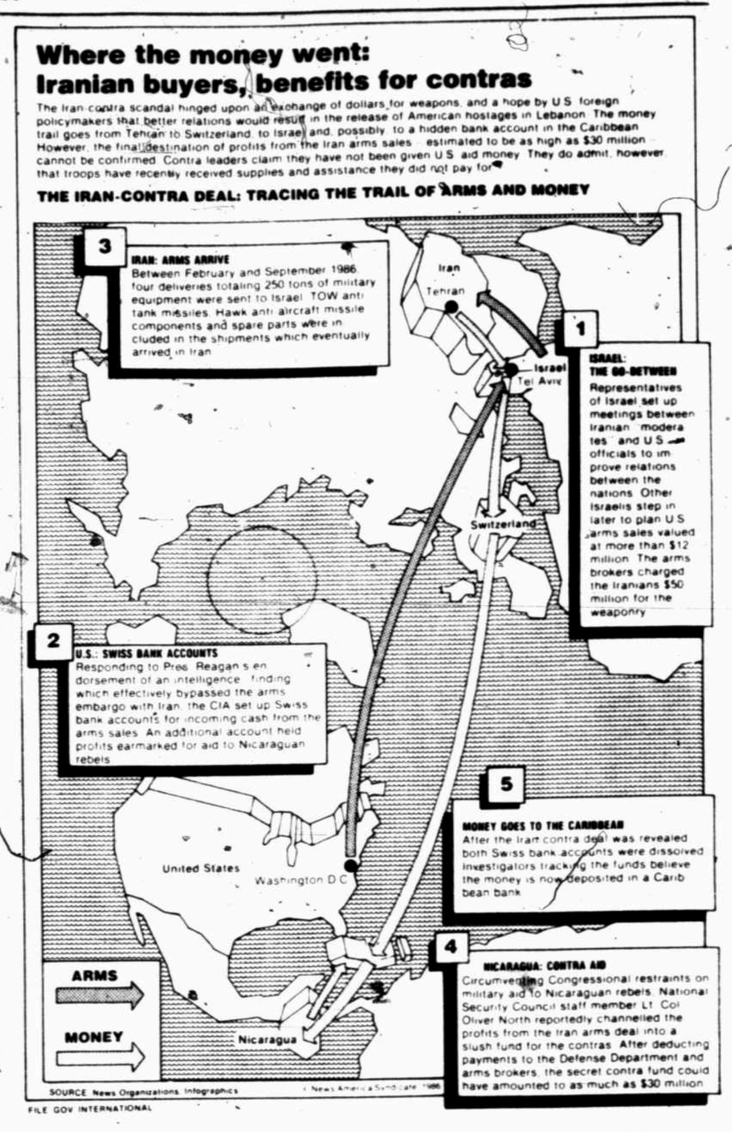

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said earlier, "We see no link whatsoever between these funds and the hostages." She described the talks as "technical discussions."

Six Americans are missing in Lebanon, and most are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems.

The United States has agreed to the return of the bulk of the funds sought by Iran, but details must be worked out.

Leading the U.S. side this week is James Oltman, general counsel of the New York Federal Reserve, aided by Donald Bittker, the bank's deputy general counsel, and a U.S. Treasury official whose identity was not determined.

Issues being discussed include the wording of a release absolving the New York Federal Reserve of any further responsibility for the account it has managed for almost six years; disposition of $10 million to $15 million in interest from the account; the final draft of an agreement, and the mechanism of transferring the funds to Iran.

Meese: North said Israeli aide suggested plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese has testified that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North told him an Israeli official proposed using proceeds from the sale of arms to Iran to fund the Contras, The New York Times reported today.

According to congressional and Justice Department sources, Meese testified that North told him of a meeting about a year ago with an Israeli official to discuss funding for the Nicaraguan rebels, the Times said.

The official, identified by a congressional source and a Justice Department source as David Kimche, director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, told North there were three options, the newspaper reported.

Kimche said money for the Contras could come from U.S. funds or from foreign aid to Israel — both of which would violate a congressional ban on aid to the rebels — or from increasing the price of weapons sold to Iran and sending the proceeds to the rebels, the Times said.

The congressional account of Meese's testimony before the House and Senate intelligence committees was confirmed by the Justice Department official, who said the department had been unable to corroborate North's assertions, the newspaper reported.

It said the assertions attributed to the fired National Security Council staff member couldn't be independently verified.

Kimche told the Times, "The whole thing is ridiculous. If that is what Oliver North testified to, then he is an unmitigated liar." He said he first heard about the diversion of funds through newspaper accounts.

If true, the statements by North would suggest a larger Israeli role than has been acknowledged.

The Israeli government has repeatedly denied that it had knowledge of or was in any way involved in the diversion of funds from the Iranian arms sale to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as contras.

North, a marine, was fired last month after Meese said North had specific knowledge of the plan to funnel funds to the contras. His superior, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, resigned.

Chicago firm's offer becomes week-long counseling session

CHICAGO (AP) — A company that had planned to ring in 1987 by offering free job advice on New Year's Eve has been deluged with calls and instead has spent a week counseling those with shaky careers.

"We've heard so many bad things about how hard it is to find a job, we wanted to show people that it really isn't that bad," James E. Challenger, president of Challenger, Gray & Christmas, said Monday.

The company, formed about 25 years ago, is the nation's oldest outplacement concern — a company that contracts with corporations to provide job placement guidance for employees who are being terminated, Challenger said.

The New Year's Eve hotline was the first time the company's counseling was to be available to the general public, he said in a telephone interview. "We planned to man the hotline only on Dec. 31. But a published report got out, and we've been accepting calls all week. It's getting heavier every day."

Challenger said the company had received about 100 calls since a week ago, and he estimated that 90 percent were from white-collar workers.

"Surprisingly, the majority of the calls so far have been from people who are still employed, but are worried about losing their jobs in the near future," he said.

Texas: America's bargain basement?

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times News Service

HOUSTON — John Mockovciak Jr., an aerospace engineer with the Grumman Corp., faces the pleasant prospect next spring of moving from Bayville, N.Y., to Houston. He will probably be able to sell his 2,000-square-foot ranch house on Long Island for at least $350,000 and buy something similar here for less than half that.

And when the Mockovciaks arrive in Texas they will find almost everything else bargain-basement cheap, too: fuel, utilities, parking, insurance, taxis, restaurant meals, air fares, taxes. It costs only about 62 cents a gallon for regular unleaded gasoline here compared to $1.03 in Manhattan and about 85 cents on Long Island.

"Even dating a chick here is cheaper," said Ken Lehrer, an erstwhile New Yorker who is a real estate consultant here and who still complains of having to pay $800 for two season tickets for the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

Everything may be bigger in Texas, as they say, but not the prices. The slump in its oil economy has caused statewide deflation amid a rising tide of business failures and property foreclosures. And while this has been catastrophic for thousands of Texans who have lost their jobs or homes as a result, the upside is that Texas has become one of the cheapest parts of the country in which to do business and live. Houston is by far the least expensive major American city.

INCREASINGLY LOCAL communities here are trading on that advantage to lure new business. Mockovciak's employer, Grumman, decided to transfer a unit of its civil space program, with about 100 workers, from Bethpage, N.Y., to Houston, which is one of the nation's space industry centers, in large part because it was cheaper here both for the company and its employees.

"It's unfortunate for the local people caught in the downturn, but if you are looking to establish a new business here this is a good time to do it," said Jerry Bostik of Grumman. "There are a large number of skilled people in the job market, construction and leasing costs are low." He added that the company expected it to be easier to recruit new young workers here than in New York because they could afford to buy houses here.

So far, however, low prices have not been enough to draw large numbers of new jobs to Texas. According to Donald D. Moyer, president of the Houston Economic Development Council, most businesses decide to locate on the basis of proximity to markets, and then cost of living and doing business becomes a factor. Up in Amarillo, the Panhandle city also caught in the grips of the oil and gas doldrums, Larry Milner, president of the Chamber of Commerce, agreed that prices were not always paramount. "Everyone looks at the cost of living," he said. "It's nice to have it and it is something we try to sell, but I don't see it as a panacea."

Still, Texas is awash with bargains, particularly in real estate. Property experts say values have dropped by 20 percent statewide over the last year, much more in the highly energy-dependent areas like Houston, Midland-Odessa and Beaumont. In these places, one man's misfortune is another's fortune.

Consider Tom Sikes, a geologist, and his wife, Barbara Laing, a photographer, who live in Midland in west Texas. A few days ago, they bought a three-bedroom house, with a guest house and a lap-length swimming pool, in a prestige section of town for $83,000. They believe the seller, an architect, may have lost about $100,000 on the deal.

Here in Houston buyers are finding steals in the city's many lovely neighborhoods, some of them just minutes from downtown. A lawyer and his wife, a banker, recently bought a 12-room mansion with a swimming pool in River Oaks, the most fashionable part of town, for $310,000 after foreclosure. The house, which once may have sold for nearly $1 million, was given up by its Mexican owner who defaulted on his mortgage. The couple believe they bought at just the right time, before Houston's recovery begins. "We truly caught the curve right," the lawyer said.

THE RICE CENTER, a research organization owned by Rice University, recently predicted that Houston would suffer one more year of job losses, then begin a slow recovery in 1988.

According to the Coldwell Banker Residential Group, the average three-bedroom, two-bath house with two-car garage in an "above average or prime" neighborhood, which sold for about $135,000, was selling for $81,000 in Houston last May, compared to $193,000 in the New York area and higher in California. Apartment rents have also dropped drastically, from about $455 to about $300 on average in Houston, even less in smaller Texas cities.

Commercial property is also cheap. Texas cities have about 100 million square feet of vacant office space, 40 million of it in Dallas and 40 million in Houston. Houston's downtown vacancy rate has swelled from 1 percent in early 1982 to about 20 percent today, according to Coldwell Banker. By comparison, the rate for midtown Manhattan is 8 percent. The "effective" rent for first-class office space in downtown Houston has dropped from about $20 to about $11 a square foot per year, counting free rent and other concessions. Similar space in Manhattan costs about $40. Suburban office buildings are even more desperate, offering free parking, wet bars and as many as three years free rent for a six-year lease for desired tenants. "The bigger the stud, the bigger the deal," remarked Lehrer.

Similarly, it's a buyer's market for industrial space. The price of prime factory space in San Antonio has dropped from about $2.50 to $3 a square foot in 1984 to $1.25 or $1.50 today, again half or less than the cost on the East or West coasts.

Real estate is not the only bargain.

A taxi ride from the airports to downtown Houston is only $1.02 a mile, compared to $3.67 in Boston. A car can be parked on the edge of downtown Houston or Dallas for as little as 35 cents a day. Restaurants, faced with a 20 percent to 25 percent dropoff in business are struggling to attract customers with specials. A recent survey by Houston City Magazine found that most restaurateurs had cut prices; even Tony's, Houston's fanciest dining place, has trimmed dinner prices by 10 percent and now offers wines at less than $20 a bottle.

Klevenhagen participated in the raid in Channelview, about 10 miles east of Houston.

Joan Torres, a secretary for Rivera in New York City, said he was out of the city and could not be reached for comment.

Chuck Senet, attorney for Chicago-based Tribune Entertainment, said, "I was expecting it (the lawsuit) only in the sense that they told us they were filing it."

Klevenhagen and Kessler are on vacation and could not be reached for comment, their secretaries said Monday.

Driscoll said he will ask the court to dismiss him and his assistant as defendants because there was no reason for them to be included in the suit. He also said he believes the sheriff acted correctly and wants to represent him.

"It's not the first time and not the last time I've been mentioned in a suit," Driscoll said. "As far as I'm concerned, this lawsuit will be handled just like the others."

Mahoney said he was not worried about the suit.

"I haven't seen a copy of it yet so I don't have any particular comment. Anyone can file a lawsuit," he said.

Ms. Heafner said the program was shown for a second time Dec. 4, but no mention was made of the charges being dismissed. Ms. Heafner said she asked Tribune Entertainment for an apology, but the request was denied.

Senet refused to comment on that allegation.

"I cannot understand that an investigative journalist as Geraldo Rivera — his job in life is to bring truth out to the public, then he shows such a lie on national television. And he still doesn't want to set the record straight on his own lies," Ms. Heafner said.

Ms. Rouse, who said she was staying at the Channelview duplex temporarily as partial payment for painting the house, said strangers have been offering her money for sex and drugs.

HAMMOND

Mrs. Hammond said she believed her husband was involved in the Nov. 25, 1981 O'Michael Building fire because shortly after the fire he gave her $1,500, which she said she deposited in the Phillips Petroleum Co. Employees Credit Union. No deposit wad found there, Strohz said, but further checking found she had deposited $1,000 in a Western National Bank account Nov. 30, 1981.

Strohz stated Mrs. Hammond willingly agreed to testify against her husband, but said she wanted to be subpoenaed so it would appear she didn't have any choice, but had to testify.

Burnett asked Strohz if he was "aware of any piece of paper on this planet that would prove that Mrs. Hammond was warned or advised that she didn't have to testify against her husband." The FBI agent said he was not.

Strohz further testified that the day before Mrs. Hammond was wanted to testify in the September 1985 trial of her husband he began trying to get a hold of her but was unable to. That evening, he said, he finally got a hold of her and was talking to her on the phone when two agents appeared at her door with a subpoena.

It was Mrs. Hammond's own choice, he said, that she and her two children not stay in the family home that night because she was afraid of her husband. Mrs. Hammond and her children were taken to the Mark Twain Motor Hotel on West Wall Street in Midland, where assistant U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers occupied a suite of rooms, he said.

Agent Tom Ferris recalled how he picked up Mrs. Hammond and the children about 7 a.m. the next morning and left for El Paso.

Blankinship asked Ferris if Mrs. Hammond displayed any concern about going to El Paso. Ferris said she questioned if she would have to talk to defense attorneys. He said he told she wouldn't if she didn't want to.

Responding to questions from Blankinship, Ferris stated that agents at no time had Mrs. Hammond in custody, that government agents were only trying to safeguard her to assure that she and the children arrived safely in El Paso.

Other agents called to the witness stand Monday sought to reinforce the government contention that Mrs. Hammond volunteered to testify against her husband, that she was in no way forced or coerced into testifying.

Burnett has contended Ms. Hammond was, in effect, kidnapped by federal agents and prevented from testifying on behalf of her husband.

PEACE

Mayor Pro Tem Katie Heck, a member of the group, said in a statement released today, "As Mayor Pro Tem I accepted an invitation to participate in the local World Peace Event on New Year's Eve. After reviewing background material received only Monday, I have come to believe that the prime purpose of the event is to promote pacifism and total disarmament. I personally disagree with these aims and would not, as an individual, have attended.

"The role of mayor pro tem, which is largely a ceremonial one, nevertheless indicates a degree of approval by authority, an approval however passive, that I am unwilling to grant."

Charles Spence, publisher of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, and Wayne Merritt, Midland Chamber of Commerce president, concurred with the statement and announced they likewise would not be participating.

It had been announced earlier that a meditation ceremony would be held at 6 a.m. at Midland Center, a run-for-peace at 4 p.m. beginning in the parking lot of the Holiday Inn Convention Center and a candlelight prayer service at 6 p.m. at Centennial Plaza.

Fran Hillin of Midland, who has acted as coordinator of the local observance, was in El Paso this morning and could not be reached for comment as to whether these events still would be held.

Judge dismisses murder charge against Lucas

EL PASO (AP) — A judge today dismissed a capital murder charge against former drifter Henry Lee Lucas.

Prosecutors had asked State District Judge Brunson Moore to drop the charge, saying they had no other choice after Moore refused to admit Lucas' confession into evidence.

Lucas, 50, had been indicted in the May 27, 1983 ax-slaying of 72-year-old Librada Apodaca at El Paso.

Soviet emigres return home to warm welcome

MOSCOW (AP) — Fifty Soviet emigres returned home to a warm welcome after abandoning what they said were unbearable living conditions in the United States, including a constant fear of crime and economic pressures.

"We cannot live there," said Rebecca Kotsap, tears streaming down her face. She was the first passenger off the Aeroflot jumbo jet from New York after it landed Monday evening at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport.

"It's a foreign people, a foreign language, a foreign life," she said.

Ms. Kotsap, in her 50s, said she had lived in New York in constant fear of crime.

"There's nothing more important than your motherland," Ms. Kotsap said, her voice breaking. "I kiss my native soil with happiness."

Radio Moscow broadcast the emigres' return almost immediately, emphasizing that they had found life in America unbearable. It said, however, that should they decide again to leave the Soviet Union, "they'll be able to do that."

The radio said most of the returnees were Jews. It said some had acquired U.S. citizenship, "but that is not an obstacle to getting permission for residence in the U.S.S.R."

It also said hundreds of other Soviet immigrants in the United States are seeking to come home and dozens have bought tickets.

In the United States, the official radio said, the 50 Soviets found they could not cope with the "ruthless competition, the spirit of money-making, crime and drug addiction" they found to be rampant.

Valery Klever, an artist who emigrated with his family from Leningrad in 1977, was asked if he believed the Soviet Union was freer than American society.

"Of course," Klever answered. "What kind of freedom is there in the United States? It's tough freedom, you have to worry about your life and your apartment, your bills every month, everything."

Klever's wife, Lidia, 36, held their 2-year-old son, Nikita. She said they had lived in Maine, New York and Los Angeles and that she would be renouncing her U.S. citizenship.

"I almost lost my hope of getting back," she said. "I think I was a very loyal American, too. I worked. I never had welfare or any other help."

Mrs. Klever said she and her husband had been trying since 1979 to win Soviet approval to return.

The publicity given the returnees coincided with articles in the Soviet Union's state-run press on the difficulties faced by Soviet citizens when they go abroad to begin a new life.

Such articles have been an apparent attempt to justify on humane grounds the severe restrictions placed on emigration from the Soviet Union. The welcome extended recent returnees has been in strong contrast with the treatment once given emigres, who were accused of betraying their homeland.

Alexei Zhvakin, vice consul for the Soviet Embassy in Washington, said Sunday that the group repatriation was the third in as many months. In October and November, Soviet officials announced the return of 17 emigres.

Boris Molokov, press attache at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, said the group that returned Monday was the largest to return from the United States to the Soviet Union.

The vast majority of Soviets who emigrate do not return to their homeland. The National Conference on Soviet Jewry says from October 1968 to December 1983 more than a quarter million people were allowed to leave the Soviet Union, most of them Jews.

Soviet people see returnees as fools, U.S. group says

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — Soviet officials hailed 50 emigres who returned to the U.S.S.R. as the vanguard of an exodus, but the Soviet people will regard them as fools, says a group that helps emigres adjust to Western life.

The emigres who decided to abandon life in the United States arrived Monday night in Moscow on a flight from New York City in what Radio Moscow portrayed as the first wave of hundreds of returnees from the West.

Although Soviet officials have said they were the largest single group to return from the United States, Rabbi Elazer Grafstein, executive director of the Committee for the Absorption of Soviet Emigres, said the number was insignificant except for propaganda purposes.

"When you have thousands of people clamoring to get out of the country, it is helpful to have even a handful come back and say America is not the oasis in the desert they thought it was," Grafstein said Monday.

Some of the returnees may even have come to the United States with the intention of returning as part of a propaganda campaign, Grafstein said.

His group, known as CASE, has worked since its founding in 1974 with about 700 of the 1,000 Soviet emigre families that have settled in this Hudson River city. None of Sunday's returnees were affiliated with CASE, officials said.

Alex Milstein and Victor Golubchik, both 31 and Jewish Soviet emigres who work at the center, said they recalled seeing reports in which returning Soviet emigres told of their disenchantment in America.

The two came to the United States in 1979 from Kiev.

Golubchik, CASE financial director, said Soviet Jews would be "gravely disappointed" with the returning emigres.

"To return is terribly unfair when so many are trying to leave," he said. "It is a betrayal of the Jewish cause."

Most of the 50 returnees are Jewish, said Alexei Zhvatin, vice consul of the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The Soviets allowed only an estimated 800 Jews to emigrate this year, a modern historical low, and about 400,000 are still waiting to emigrate, Western experts say.

Milstein, Golubchik's assistant at the center, said the returnees will be thought of as fools for returning to the Soviet Union.

"Most Russians envy Americans," he said. "They know the standard of living is better here than it is there and you look like a fool to stand up and say it is not so."

However, he said that misconceptions about life in America may be what prompted some emigres to come to the United States and may have contributed to their reasons for leaving.

South Africa outlaws 'alternative' syllabus

JOHANNESBURG (NYT) — South Africa's white authorities Monday announced new measures under the nation's emergency decree to combat dissent in segregated, black schools and to counter activist plans for an "alternative" syllabus called people's education.

The action, commentators said, seemed to reflect official concern about plans by anti-government educationists to offer alternative courses in history, English and other subjects as a means of promoting protest against apartheid and to establish what is called "people's power."

In a separate development, the government confirmed that it planned to build an airstrip on a remote South African-owned island between Cape Town and Antarctica. But the authorities offered no direct comment on British news reports that the strip was part of a joint Israeli-South African plan to test nuclear weapons.

The authorities also acknowledged continued violence in segregated black townships where more than 2,300 people, mostly black, have died in political unrest since the nation's newest, black revolt took root in September 1984.

The Bureau for Information, the sole source of authorized news under an emergency decree in force since June 12, said a black man opened fire on two unidentified members of the "security forces", wounding one of them in the shoulder. In two other segregated black townships, the Bureau reported attacks on private homes, one of them belonging to a member of a local, black council.

Newly tightened censorship regulations outlaw all but authorized reports of violence or unrest or of protest actions such as boycotts of buses, rents, stores or schools.

Over the Christmas period, activists had sought to mount a campaign called "Christmas against the emergency", which enjoined blacks to abstain from buying goods in white-owned stores. Figures released Monday suggested that pre-Christmas sales in many retail outlets were down from anticipated levels, but it was unclear whether the drop resulted from the boycott campaign.

Since September 1984, South Africa's black high school scholars have been at the forefront of protest against white domination. The newest actions followed a roundup of government opponents earlier this month following a tightening of emergency rule that effectively outlawed most forms of black protest.

In a special edition of the Government Gazette, President P.W. Botha empowered the Department of Education and Training — the ministry in charge of black education — to bar individuals from school premises, prohibit pupils from using school facilities out of hours and to outlaw any "alternative" course or syllabus.

The authorities were also empowered to bar the "wearing, possession or display" of T-shirts, articles of clothing, flags, banners, pennants or posters bearing slogans or the names or emblems of resistance organization.

The new regulations, following up on new censorship rules and a widened definition of subversion promulgated earlier this month under the emergency decree, also empowered the authorities to ban the distribution of letters, books, pamphlets, posters, papers deemed unlawful.

The white authorities, under the proclamation, may determine which causes are to be outlawed, and offenders stand to be punished by a maximum fine of $1,800, or two years in jail.

Students defy ban, put up posters in Peking

PEKING (AP) — Student activists today defied a government decree and put up wall posters at two Peking universities, demanding freedom and accusing the government of repressing the nation's democratic yearnings.

The posters went up a day after the official media reminded students that hanging posters is a crime punishable by up to five years in jail.

In another development, sources said today that students from Peking Teachers University were prevented from leaving campus Monday night for what would have been the second straight night of pro-democracy marches.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said police locked the campus gate, forcing the students back inside. Loudspeakers warned the students that they were committing an illegal act. The city government last week banned all unauthorized demonstrations.

Before dawn Monday, several hundred students from four Peking universities took part in a pro-democracy march, reportedly after authorities at the teachers' college tore down wall posters. Police monitored the demonstration but did not interfere.

One of the posters that went up at the teachers' college today depicted the government as pressing down on the head of a student with one hand and holding a noose around the student's neck with the other.

The caption read, "(We) give you democracy, give you freedom." It apparently was a reference to a statement attributed to Vice Premier Wan Li that democracy is to be handed down from above, not struggled for.

Another poster said Wan was only being frank about unstated government policy.

"Long live democracy" and "Down with dictatorship" were scrawled on strips of newspaper and pasted on walls.

At Peking University, more than 100 students stood in freezing weather today to read posters pasted where the previous day's signs had been removed. Several read the contents of the posters into tape recorders, to be transcribed and passed on to students at other universities.

Some of the posters also criticized Wan. Others rebutted government arguments that student activism is leading the nation into chaos, and defended the right to put up posters, a practice especially disliked by the current authorities because it is a reminder of the turmoil of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

"Without democracy there's no China," said one poster, mimicking the old slogan, "Without the Communist Party, there will be no new China."

Another poster said authorities "tore off their kind mask, and a huge palm is coming down on our heads. This makes us afraid."

Posters also called on students to get organized and prepare slogans for a demonstration in Tiananmen, Peking's central square, on Thursday. The city has stated that demonstrations are prohibited at all times at the Great Hall of the People, immediately adjacent to the square.

The government so far has avoided direct suppression of the protests that have involved tens of thousands of students in at least nine cities this month.

However, authorities have come down increasingly hard on the demonstrators, imposing limitations on street marches in Shanghai and Peking, warning leaders of unauthorized marches that they face legal action and reminding students that they can go to jail for putting up inflammatory political posters.

Leftist rebels intensify attacks against Salvadoran troops

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels have intensified their attacks against government troops in the past month, striking mainly at small, isolated military posts as part of a new war strategy.

The latest raid came before dawn Monday when rebels armed with rifles and mortars attacked an army post north of San Esteban Catarina in central San Vicente province, 35 miles east of the capital.

The military press office said eight soldiers were killed and 13 others wounded. But sources at a hospital in San Vicente, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said 16 soldiers were killed and 13 wounded. The hospital is about five miles south of the fighting.

No reports of rebel casualties were given by either the military or the guerrillas.

In the past year, the rebels have switched from staging large-scale attacks against government troops to moving in smaller groups and mounting raids on isolated targets.

Clandestine rebel Radio Venceremos said Monday that attacks on military positions and ambushes caused 579 casualties in the past 1½ months. The broadcast gave no breakdown of figures.

The government did not comment on the claim.

The army, trained and supplied by the United States, holds a military advantage over the Marxist-led rebels, who are grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN.

The army has 53,000 fighters, compared to the rebels' 4,000, and also has helicopters and jet bombers. The rebels have no air power.

Last year, the rebels said they would wage a "prolonged popular war," claiming they would win by attrition and move their battles into all 14 provinces. However, their claims did not become reality.

Thailand closes Cambodian refugee camp

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The government on Wednesday will close a complex housing more than 25,000 Cambodian refugees and start moving them to camps along the border with Cambodia and Laos, officials said.

The complex, Khao-I-Dang, opened six years ago about 7½ miles from the Cambodian border to house refugees deemed suitable for resettlement to other countries. At its peak in 1980, it was home to 147,000 refugees, making it the largest Cambodian "city" outside the capital of Phnom Penh.

Prasong Soonsiri, secretary general to the prime minister, said Monday the government decided to close the Khao-I-Dang because it was dissatisfied with the slow rate at which Western nations accepted refugees and because it hoped to slow the number of refugees entering Thailand.

"It has already been 11 years since Thailand has shouldered the refugee burden," he said.

Prasong said the government always regarded Khao-I-Dang as a temporary shelter and that Thailand's policy has been to offer only temporary asylum to refugees from Cambodia, Vietnam and Laos.

He said that despite the closure, some refugees from Khao-I-Dang would be able to resettle in other nations. He said foreign officials could interview potential candidates at other camps.

A Western relief agency official called Khao-I-Dang "the last neutral haven for those Indochinese refugees truly seeking asylum."

Mark Gorman, director of the U.S.-based International Rescue Committee, said Khao-I-Dang has represented a "symbol of compassion" since it opened Nov. 21, 1979.

In a telephone interview, he said camp residents were "very anxious" about being moved nearer the border. Gorman, who was in the camp a few days ago, said the Cambodians heard the news from Thai authorities and Voice of America broadcasts.

U.S. envoy visits Sakharov

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman has visited Andrei Sakharov since the dissident returned from internal exile a week ago, an embassy spokesman said today.

Hartman, his wife, Donna, and political attache Shaun Byrnes met with the physicist and his wife, Yelena Bonner, on Monday night, U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner said.

Sakharov, 65, and Bonner, 63, have spent much of their first week in Moscow meeting with friends and foreign journalists to discuss political issues in the Soviet Union and their years of exile in Gorky, a city closed to foreigners 250 miles east of the capital.

Verner said he could not disclose details of the diplomats' discussions with Sakharov and Bonner, but he described the meeting as "essentially a social call."

Moderate quake jolts Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A moderate earthquake shook central Japan this morning, but there were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

The Central Meteorological Agency said the quake struck at 9:38 a.m. and preliminary readings indicated it measured 6 on the Richter scale, signifying a quake capable of causing widespread damage in populated areas.

It was centered in the northern part of Nagano prefecture, about 110 miles northwest of Tokyo.

The National Police Agency and Nagano prefectural police said they had no reports of damage.

The tremor was felt most strongly in Nagano city and less strongly in Matsushiro and Suwa, also in Nagano prefecture, and in Yokohama and Tokyo.

Quake shakes east Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — An earthquake centered in the sea east of Taiwan jolted the island's eastern section today but caused no injuries or damage, weather officials and police said.

The Central Weather Bureau said the quake hit at 6:24 a.m. and that preliminary readings indicated it measured 5.6 on the Richter scale. It was centered about 120 miles east of Ilan, a commercial town about 40 miles southeast of Taipei.

It said the epicenter was near Nishiomote, a Japanese islet of the Ryukyu chain. No tidal waves were reported, the bureau said.

Israeli on flight, man says

ROME (AP) — Israeli nuclear technician Mordechai Vanunu was aboard a Sept. 30 flight from London to Rome before vanishing and resurfacing in Israel to face spying charges, an Italian investigator was quoted Monday as saying.

Investigating magistrate Domenico Sica was quoted by the news agency ANSA as saying that British police had told him that Vanunu was on British Airways Flight 504 to Rome.

Russian, Eastern bloc technological capabilities 'underrated'

By CARL HARTMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — American firms have been acquiring considerable amounts of technical know-how from the Soviet Union — some with military uses — and more may become available after New Year's Day, says John W. Kiser III, president of a firm in the technology transfer business.

"In the business community...there is a long history of underrating the Russian and Eastern bloc capabilities," he says. "If people worry about the Soviets 'stealing' our technology, I say that the best defense is a good offense."

Kiser, 44, who has written reports on Soviet technology for the State Department and the Harvard Business Review, is president of Kiser Research, Inc., which searches out technologies in Eastern Europe for licensing to American firms.

U.S. companies are evaluating nine technologies his organization has found, and have signed four options and one license for Soviet, Czech and East German processes, he said, adding that 16 firms already buy patent know-how and licenses from the Soviet bloc, including DuPont, Dow Chemical, Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical, and the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

New rules taking effect in the Soviet Union with the start of the new year will enable 70 Soviet industrial enterprises and 20 Soviet government departments to make separate trade deals with other countries, including the sale of technology.

They will be able to hold on to at least some of the dollars they earn, using such earnings to make their own operations more effective, instead of having to turn them in to the central government. Such easing of trade rules has already been done by some Soviet bloc countries, especially Hungary.

Up to now sales of Soviet technology to American firms have had to filter through a single Soviet trade organization, Licensintorg.

"It will be better for trade in the long run if the individual Soviet agencies turn out to be more aggressive about making deals," Kiser said in an interview.

He estimates that over the past 10 to 15 years the Soviets and their east European allies have earned about $80 million in this country from royalties and licensing fees. He says the Soviets seem to be less worried than U.S. military authorities about the possibility that some of the processes they sell may have military applications.

"We won't sell them a baloney-slicer for fear it might be used for troops in Afghanistan," he said.

Kiser likes to recall a remark attributed to former Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev. Khrushchev said maybe the United States should not sell buttons to the Soviet Union, because if a Soviet soldier finds his pants falling down, he can't handle his rifle.

Kiser points on the Soviet side to an electromagnetic process called electroslag casting, which could make cheaper gun barrels with fewer impurities in the metal. The process is already being used by American companies.

And the the Washington subway system — though it has little direct military significance — does stop at the Pentagon and uses rails welded by an American company using Soviet machines, he says. The process, called flash butt welding, was developed in the Soviet Union by the Paton Institute of Electronic Welding in Kiev. It makes especially strong welds without the need for a welding rod.

Production experts in the U.S. Board on Army Science and Technology fear that this country is falling behind in handling gallium arsenide, a material used in computer chips for devices that jam enemy radar and for many other electronic instruments. It has also been used in power units on space missions because it absorbs solar energy better than silicon.

Some of the best research on the subject goes on at the Joffe Institute in Leningrad and the United States should take more advantage of it, according to Kiser.

"It's dangerously naive to think of the Russians as just brilliant theoreticians," he said. "But it is heresy here to suggest otherwise."

Soviet surgical technicians took the lead in mending joints with a kind of plastic pin that is "biodegradable" — it just melts away, he says — and they originated the stapling gun that U.S. military surgeons now use to stitch wounds together.

The Soviets do put a lot of emphasis on theoretical work that Kiser says is sometimes neglected in this country because of emphasis on quick results.

"There is plenty of negative stuff to look at in the Soviet Union, but emphasis on theoretical mathematics and physics is not part of it," he said.

He cites an elaborate theoretical model developed by the Soviets for a more efficient way of extracting juices from fruits and vegetables, which he is promoting. One American firm is ready to start using it, he says.

He says that a lot of information on new developments can be had from Soviet scientific publications that are freely available.

"We should read it, and not just whine about how closed the Soviets are," he says.

He cites Soviet published information about the gyrotron, which emits ultra-short radio waves less than a millimeter in length and which he says are especially hard to intercept.

Pentagon spending 'necessary' for needs

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading Senate Democrat says the Reagan administration will have to either raise taxes or cut some defense programs if it wants Congress to approve $2.8 billion in new Pentagon spending, including a down payment on new, more powerful rockets for "Star Wars" missile defenses.

The budget request was unveiled Monday by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who told a news conference that the money is necessary for "a vital set of needs."

The extra money would finance a pay raise for the country's 2.1 million uniformed personnel, changes in the health care system, destruction of old chemical weapons and add $500 million to the Star Wars budget.

If approved, the money would raise the defense budget for fiscal 1987, which began last Oct. 1, to $292.2 billion. It was the latest shot in the long-running defense budget fight between the Reagan administration and Congress.

Reagan's defense buildup won large Pentagon budget increases during his first term, but Congress has essentially frozen defense spending in each of the past two years. Next week, Weinberger will unveil the defense budget for fiscal 1988, which begins next October, and he is expected to ask for about $312 billion.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., incoming chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Monday that Weinberger will have trouble winning approval for the $2.8 billion addition.

AP Laserphoto

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger holds a Pentagon news conference Monday where he asked Congress for $2.8 billion more in the current fiscal year, including $110 million to study new more powerful rockets for the "Star Wars" missile defense system.

Congressional passage of the measure is unlikely, said Nunn, unless the administration comes up with new revenues or cuts in other programs "because the till is empty. There is no more money in the cash register."

"So the administration will have to answer this question — do you have offsets, are you willing to have additional revenue or additional cuts that will compensate for this $2.8 billion?" Nunn said.

One of the main parts of the new request is $500 million for the Strategic Defense Intiative, Reagan's antimissile research program popularly known as Star Wars. Reagan wanted $5.4 billion this year for SDI, but Congress cut it to $3.6 billion and the new request would raise the total to $4.1 billion.

Nunn noted that the SDI budget has risen 20 percent a year for the past several years and added, "the burden is going to be on the administration to tell us why" last year's 20 percent hike wasn't enough.

Of the SDI request, $110 million would go for research into new types of rockets which could eventually boost huge payloads of 50 to 75 tons into orbit.

That would be far larger than the 32-ton capability of the U.S. space shuttle, the largest current American rocket system. It would also be bigger than the estimated 30-ton payload capability of the Soviet Union.

Weinberger declined to offer details on the new rocket system, beyond saying that "it's a logical next step" in the program to develop defenses against Soviet nuclear missiles. He suggested it could be either manned or unmanned and also could be used to boost parts of the planned U.S. space station into orbit sometime in the future.

John Pike, associate director for space policy at the American Federation of Scientists, a private group which has been critical of SDI, said the new rockets will likely be used either for lifting rocket interceptors or mirrored satellites into space.

The interceptors would house clusters of rockets which would be quickly launched to knock out attacking Soviet missiles, while the mirrors might be used to redirect the intense light beams from ground-based lasers at Russian missiles.

"They'll still have a problem of lifting enough armor into space to protect the interceptors or mirrors," Pike said. "The lift capability is achievable, but getting the armor up is tougher."

Other elements of the supplemental request include:

— $100 million to fully pay for the 3 percent pay hike for uniformed personnel authorized by Congress.

— $500 million to set up a system to destroy stocks of aging chemical weapons. Congress ordered that the existing weapons be destroyed before the Pentagon can go ahead with plans to produce a new generation of the weapons.

Trade dispute decisions to be announced today

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan planned to announce retaliatory measures against some European farm exports in a trade dispute the United States says is costing American farmers $400 million to $500 million a year.

The White House said presidential decisions in this and another trade dispute, involving Brazilian computer imports, would be announced today by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter.

The White House said Yeutter would make a brief statement and answer reporters' questions about a dispute over agricultural trade with the 12-nation European Community and one dealing with Brazilian Informatics trade and investment.

In both disputes, a Dec. 31 deadline was set for a presidential decision.

The European dispute arose after the EC was expanded to include Spain and Portugal. The two countries had been major markets for American corn and sorghum, used as livestock feed.

The EC, also known as the Common Market, imposed a high tariff on non-European feed grains, effectively cutting them off at a cost to American farmers which U.S. officials estimated at $400 million to $500 million annually.

U.S. officials conceded that the EC had the right to take this action, but argued that the United States was entitled to compensation under rules of the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

Gary Holmes, spokesman for the trade representative's office, said the main argument has been over the form of the compensation, with the United States wishing to apply it to agricultural products and the Europeans favoring other areas.

On May 31, Reagan announced that retaliatory action would be taken against a number of European exports, including wine and cheese, if an agreement was not reached by July 1. The deadline was extended for six months by an interim agreement under which U.S. exports to Spain and Portugal were allowed to resume.

An administration official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said the president was expected to retaliate against items on the list announced on May 31. This could increase wine and cheese prices, among others, to American consumers.

The second dispute involves a Brazilian policy called Informatics, designed to build up its domestic computer industry through barriers against imports and restrictions on foreign investment.

Mayor Koch 'disappointed' with Howard Beach decision

By VIRGINIA BYRNE

NEW YORK (AP) — Police fearing further racial violence beefed up patrols in Howard Beach today after a judge dismissed murder charges against white youths in an attack on three black men that has sparked two retaliatory beatings.

Criminal Court Judge Ernest Bianchi threw out murder, manslaughter and assault charges Monday against the three teens after the two surviving victims of the Dec. 19 attack in the white neighborhood refused to testify.

Bianchi substituted reckless endangerment charges against Jon Lester, Scott Kern and Jason Ladone, leaving no one charged specifically with the death of Michael Griffith, who was hit and killed by a car as he fled a white gang.

Black gangs chanting "Howard Beach" have since attacked a white youth and a light-skinned Hispanic man, the latter Sunday, in apparent retaliation.

Three dozen blacks among those who packed the courtroom Monday reacted to Bianchi's ruling with screams of "injustice," and elected officials and black leaders voiced criticism of it and of maneuvering by the victims' attorneys.

Attorneys for Cedric Sandiford and Timothy Grimes said they would only let them testify if Dominick Blum, 24, the driver of the car that hit Griffith, was charged with murder. Police have said Blum had no connection with the attack.

Sandiford's lawyer, Alton Maddox, contends Blum was a willing participant.

"There will never be a conviction of a white man who murdered a black man in New York City," Maddox said outside the Queens courtroom.

Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins, the city's highest elected black official, said the ruling "creates the impression that New York City will tolerate the vicious actions of a racist gang."

Mayor Edward I. Koch said he was disappointed with the decision and urged Sandiford and Grimes to come forward.

Queens District Attorney John Santucci also urged their cooperation and accused Maddox and Grimes' attorney, C. Vernon Mason, of conducting "hostage negotiations" with prosecutors.

Santucci said his office has tried to subpoena Sandiford, but more serious measures were not used out of reluctance to upset the black community.

"There is more to this case than just simply the item before the court," he said. "It's what this case stands for, what was involved. We want things to remain calm. We don't want people throwing gasoline on the fire."

In the most recent of the two retaliatory attacks, 10 to 12 youths accosted John Santiago, 28, with bats and sticks Sunday night in the East New York section of Brooklyn, said police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

Santiago, a light-skinned Hispanic, spoke to his attackers in Spanish and one of the gang said, "Leave him alone, he's not white," O'Donnell said. But after another man said, "He looks white," the gang beat him and took $10.

Santiago was taken to a hospital, but walked out without seeing a doctor.

A 17-year-old white youth was attacked by a group of blacks who were also chanting "Howard Beach" on Dec. 23 in the Jamaica section of Queens. Three black youths have been arrested.

Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward ordered 22 additional uniformed and nine plainclothes officers to be assigned today to Howard Beach, and said that 11 officers will conduct a youth dialogue today for black, Hispanic and white teens from John Adams High School, attended by Lester, Kern and Ladone.

Kern, 17, and Ladone, 16, were freed on $15,000 bond Monday. Lester, 17, continued to be held in lieu of $25,000 bail.

On Monday, police Detective Peter Fiorillo testified that Lester told him that he and two friends were taking Lester's girlfriend home from a party when three black men walked in front of the car and slurs were exchanged.

Lester and his friends were on their way back to the party when they saw the blacks at a pizzeria. "There are some niggers in the pizza parlor. Let's go kill them," Lester told Fiorillo, according to the detective.

Lester later said kill is "a terrible word" and that he meant "let's go fight them," Fiorillo testified.

Lester told him that up to a dozen youths got in three cars and caught up with the three blacks at the New Park Pizzeria, he said.

Lester told police the black men had knives and a gun, although he didn't see them. Police found no weapons on the victims. A plastic toy gun was found near Griffith's body on the highway.

Fiorillo said the white youths were armed with baseball bats and according to Lester: "They came towards us and we started swinging."

Other officers testified that Ladone and Kern gave similar accounts.

Four Challenger families agree to settlements

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for the widow of an astronaut killed in the space shuttle Challenger explosion said a financial settlement accepted by some of the families would be inadequate if it is less than several million dollars.

The families of four of the seven astronauts killed in the Jan. 28 accident agreed to settlement of all potential claims in exchange for undisclosed financial arrangements, the Justice Department said Monday.

Under a separate agreement with the government, Morton Thiokol Inc., the manufacturer of the solid rocket boosters used on the Challenger, will make a "substantial contribution" to the undisclosed sums paid the four families, the department said.

Ronald D. Krist, a Houston attorney representing Cheryl McNair, the widow of astronaut Ronald E. McNair, said he found it "curious that the four families they settled with were the four that didn't file claims, and weren't represented" by counsel. "Those that didn't file are getting paid."

That agreement did not constitute an admission of negligence by Morton Thiokol, according to the department. A presidential commission blamed faulty joints on the boosters for triggering the fireball that engulfed the spaceship shortly after launch.

The settlements involving the families of school teacher Christa McAuliffe, mission commander Francis R. Scobee, mission specialist Ellison S. Onizuka and payload specialist Gregory B. Jarvis preclude any future legal actions against the National Aeronautics and Space Administration or its contractors. Compensation for the other three astronauts killed in the accident, including two whose families have filed legal claims, has yet to be resolved.

"If they're not getting several million dollars each, they're being underpaid," said Krist of the families involved in the settlement. "This accident cost the lives of the best our society can produce. But I'm certain the government and Morton Thiokol got out as cheaply as they could."

Krist, who has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Houston against Morton Thiokol for an unspecified amount, said he has not been approached by the Justice Department regarding a settlement. "And I know this," he said.

The Justice Department said the settlements "involve payments over an extended period of time" and are designed to provide adequate financial security for the families of these crew members."

"At the request of the families, the amounts and terms of the settlements will remain confidential," the department said.

One possible clue as to the amount, however, lay in the fact that that the out-of-court settlements were sent up the department ladder to Deputy Attorney General Arnold I. Burns, the No. 2 official in the Justice Department, for final approval.

Cocaine worth $20 million seized in truck

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Federal agents seized $20 million worth of cocaine hidden in the false top of a pickup truck's camper shell after two men allegedly ran the truck through the Douglas border crossing, officials said Monday.

Two men were ordered held in federal custody until a detention hearing and a preliminary hearing on Wednesday morning, after federal prosecutors filed a complaint alleging the pair possessed cocaine with intent to distribute.

Luck and the sharp eye of a U.S. Customs Service official led to the seizure Friday, authorities said in a news conference Monday. The officials displayed 187 packets said to contain cocaine as well as a brown Ford pickup with a compartment in its camper top ripped open.

"It's what we call a 'cold hit', just on the experience and hunch of the inspector," said Peter Gonzalez, district director of the Customs Service.

The cocaine weighed 443.5 pounds, with some of the 187 containers it was in wrapped like Christmas presents and some of them wrappped like round packets of Mexican cheese, officials said.

Border Patrol agents seized the truck and arrested a Douglas resident and a Mexican citizen after a customs official who thought the truck looked suspicious tried to stop it and it drove past him.

The cocaine was believed to have come from Colombia. Authorities called the bust the largest seizure of cocaine by officials working at a border crossing.

"Up to now, it's been flying over us" in airplanes used by drug smugglers, Gonzalez said.

The arrested men made an initial appearance Monday before U.S. Magistrate Nancy Fiora, who ordered them held until the hearings on Wednesday.

Authorities identified the Douglas resident as Xavier Padilla, 24, and the Mexican national as German Cuadras-Escalante, 28, of the state of Sinaloa. No hometown was available for Cuadras-Escalante, officials said.

More arrests were expected, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration official Richard Braziel said.

Harold Ezell, western regional commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said at Monday's news conference that the cocaine bust shows that the U.S. border needs to be more tightly controlled.

"Something must be done about this cancer that's sweeping America," Ezell said. "Mexico is a major source. The corridor between Tucson and Phoenix is major as far as the invasion and the flow of drugs."

He said federal efforts don't seem to be deterring drug dealers.

"They aren't that concerned about us, or they wouldn't do something crazy like they did in Douglas," he said.

Voyager flight 'inspiration to all'

By JOHN ANTCZAK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The names of Voyager pilots Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager belong on the rolls of aviation pioneers, President Reagan said in honoring the crew and designer of the first airplane to circle the globe without stopping or refueling.

"The flight of the Voyager brought us back to the days of those magnificent men in their flying machines," Reagan told the pilots and designer Burt Rutan on Monday before awarding each of them the Presidential Citizen's Medal in a ceremony at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Voyager successfully completed its nine-day, 26,000-mile non-stop flight on Dec. 23, becoming the first plane to circumnavigate the globe without refueling.

"You reminded us all that aviation history is still being written by men and women with the spirit of adventure and derring-do," the president said, calling the flight "an inspiration to all Americans."

The Rutan brothers and Yeager each were given a medal, plaque and a kiss by first lady Nancy Reagan before a crowd that included many of the project's volunteers.

"With all of America, Nancy and I followed the Voyager's progress along each leg of its fabulous flight with alternating feelings of nervousness, hope, fear and elation, but mostly overwhelming pride in these two courageous Americans and their historic mission," Reagan said.

The name Voyager has "joined the distinguished family of airborne technological breakthroughs that began with the Wright Flyer, includes the Spirit of St. Louis and the Glamorous Glennis," Reagan said, referring to the Wright brothers first airplane, the craft in which Charles Lindbergh crossed the Atlantic, and the Bell X-1, which broke the sound barrier in 1947.

"Three names will be added to the column headed 'the right stuff,'" he said.

"Wow!" said Dick Rutan, 48, after receiving his medal. "...This was done by individual citizens of this great land, and we did so because we had the freedom to pursue a dream."

Asking the Voyager volunteers to stand, he said, "I'm proud to death of you."

"We're very proud of this," said Yeager, 34.

"I've had tears in my eyes many times during this flight and I'm very close right now," Burt Rutan, 43, said.

Dick Rutan and Yeager will ride aboard a New Year's Day Rose Parade float sponsored by Lawry's Foods Inc., of Los Angeles, the company announced Monday.

Voyager has remained at Edwards Air Force Base since it completed its journey. It is expected to be flown the 20 miles back to its Mojave Airport base within the week.

Education proposal targets remedial money in schools

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's ill-fated proposal to give parents government vouchers to pay for remedial education is back again, but with a difference that the Education Department says may sell the program to a skeptical Congress.

A department proposal to rewrite the $3.9 billion Chapter 1 remedial education program includes vouchers, but only as an option for local authorities, Chief of Staff William Kristol said Monday.

The vouchers are called "compensatory education certificates" in the legislation that will be submitted to Congress in a month or so, Kristol said. If enacted, local school boards would decide if their use would be the best way to meet local needs.

"It doesn't authorize any parent to demand a certificate," he said. "There is no right to a voucher in this bill. We're just not precluding local authorities from doing it, and that just seems sensible."

Education Secretary William J. Bennett proposed last year that the parents of poor children be given vouchers they could use to pay for private school tuition, even if the schools did not offer special remedial classes. The plan was rejected in Congress, with some critics calling it an attempt to undermine public education.

The voucher option is part of a bill reauthorizing and restructuring the program, which technically expires next Sept. 30.

The program is spending $3.94 billion this year to give some 5 million children, most of them poor, remedial schooling. Bruce M. Carnes, the department's deputy undersecretary for budget, said the administration will seek an additional $200 million for the fiscal year beginning next October, allowing another 400,000 children to attend remedial classes.

Besides vouchers, the proposal also would more tightly focus the remedial money on poor schools — in the process taking funds away from some middle- and upper-income neighborhoods.

And, it would require state educational authorities to grade local districts on how well they are succeeding in overcoming educational handicaps.

"This bill is a serious attempt...to say we do know something about what works, that we can use the money more effectively," said Kristol. "It's a serious attempt to take some of the things we know about social policy and embody those in a legislative proposal."

While poor areas tend to get more money under the program, on the theory that poverty and educational deprivation go together, 90 percent of all school districts would receive some money. And school districts with a mix of rich and poor neighborhoods are not required to target their money on the neediest schools.

The new proposal would restrict eligibility to the neediest schools within each participating district.

The proposal also seeks to increase the accountability of school officials for the results of their teaching, Kristol said.

"If a program isn't helping children improve their skills and performance, someone should be held accountable," said a briefing paper on the new program. "It's not enough merely to provide services and consider our job done."

The proposal would require states to assess local remedial education programs both for results and to ensure they are being fairly administered.

A program found to be highly effective could receive a bonus payment to extend it; the bill calls for each state to set aside 1 percent of its money to reward successful programs.

If a local program is found to be either ineffective or inequitable, the states would have to step in and correct the problems — possibly including a state takeover.

The voucher system could be mandated by state authorities in such districts, Kristol said, but they could not be ordered by the federal government.

Kristol said the vouchers also could circumvent a Supreme Court decision that limits the ability of government to help students in parochial schools.

The court struck down a program in which public school teachers went into a parochial school to teach remedial classes, ruling it was an impermissible entanglement of government and religion.

Yet, Kristol noted, the law requires private school students to be served by remedial education, even though most are in parochial schools. Because of the court decision, he said, many parochial school students are not receiving the remedial education they have coming. The voucher system may be a solution, he said.

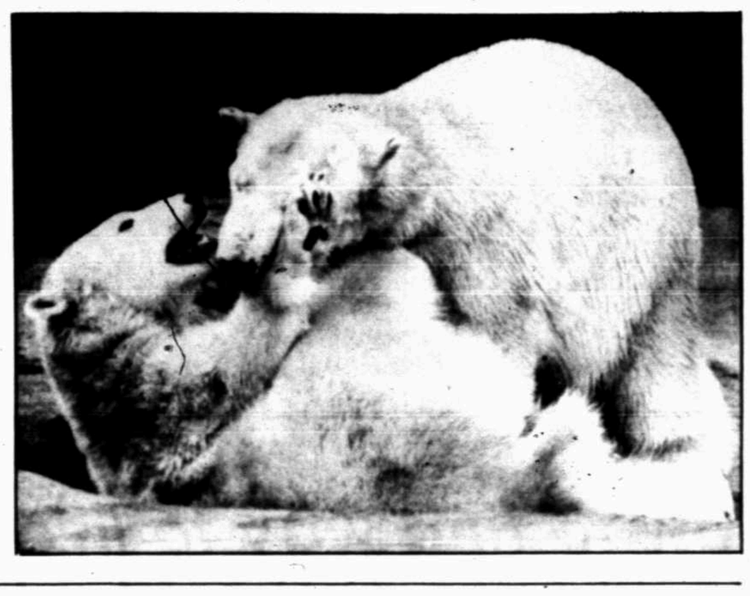

Kristol said he does not expect the new Democratic Congress to enact the bill in its entirety, but added that he believes many of its provisions are widely supported.

"There's a surprising amount of agreement that funds could be used more effectively," he said. "We are hopeful for this proposal, and lots of its elements will be attractive to people on both sides of the aisle."

Without snow, skiers 'just change plans'

Associated Press

Lower-than-normal snowfall has taken the white out of Christmas holidays at many ski resorts, while forcing winter festival promoters to make snow, truck in skating-rink scrapings and postpone contruction of a giant snowman.

The Rockies and Northwest had snow, but several resorts in southern Idaho had not opened by Monday. Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin ski areas have been making snow whenever it's cold enough to keep their slopes in shape.

Colorado reported good ski conditions, with a normal or near-normal base even without fresh snow for a week.

But the Tahoe North Visitors and Convention Bureau, whose Tahoe City base is in the heart of California ski country, tried to offset the worst holiday season for snow in a decade with a list of 60 non-skiing options, including hot-air ballooning, fishing, sightseeing and gambling.

"We have to deal with it," bureau employee Steve Teshara shrugged Monday about the snow shortage. "These things happen."

Only 10 of the roughly three dozen downhill ski areas in the state are reported open. Most had rocky slopes, with snow-making and trail-grooming crews on overtime and patrons competing for limited trail space.

"It's not terrific skiing," admitted Bill Jensen, publicity director for Squaw Valley Ski Corp.

"About every 10 years we get a year like this," said Bob Roberts, executive director of the Sierra Ski Area Association. "What happens is that people change their plans. They'll go to Hawaii or Mexico instead, or to Colorado if the snow is any better. Mostly they bide their time and wait."

Those who made ski plans for Christmas and New Year's were gloomy. "I wonder if it's ever going to snow," griped skier Cindy Leising of Minden, Nev. "I'm not getting any exercise. I hope that when it does snow, it dumps."

At Mountain High, 90 miles east of Los Angeles, the lack of snowfall since a Dec. 9 storm left six inches has forced the resort to use artificial snow to make a 30-inch base. "The snow guns have been on all night," said employee Pat Akusis. "Crowds have been very good."

Ellen Squires, Yosemite National Park's reservations manager, said skiers have been canceling hotel reservations after hanging on and "hoping for a sudden storm."

The Buffalo, N.Y., Chamber of Commerce had to make snow when a ski exhibition at the city's first Winterfest was threatened by the lack of snow in a city known for its nasty winters.

"It could have been worse," said spokeswoman Karen Wodarczak. "It could have been a blizzard and then nobody could have come to our events."

But for businesses that depend on snow, it's tough to look at the bright side. "We're starving," said Vic Puglia, operator of Kenmore Collision, an auto body shop which normally has its biggest month in December.

Organizers of the New Year's celebration "First Night New Hampshire" couldn't scrape up enough snow for six sculptures in front of the Statehouse, Production Director Van McLeod said Monday.

A plan to bring in snowmaking equipment fell through, so organizers trucked in about 10 loads of ice shavings collected at ice arenas, McLeod said.

A lack of snow in South Dakota delayed plans to build the world's tallest snowman in Aberdeen, S.D., until January. And in east Tennessee, only two of Ober Gatlinburg's resort's 10 slopes were open, using machine-made snow.

"I'm hanging on by the skin of my teeth," said Rolf Lanz, ski director at the resort.

They were singing a different tune in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts, where snow started as early as September.

"We had a lot more snow a lot earlier than in the past several years and if the temperatures stay down we are expecting an excellent season that could break all records," said William R. Wilson Jr., executive director of the Berkshire Visitors Bureau.

NATION IN BRIEF

Administration gets low marks for lack of action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration got a "D," the Senate received a "D+," and the House had a "C+" overall for consumer-oriented action in 1986, according to the National Consumers League.

The low marks were handed out on Monday for lack of action on the federal budget deficit, which the league, a nonpartisan consumer group, said was a "time bomb."

The nation's budget deficit stood at $220 billion last year.

"The most basic consumer problem today is the state of our economy," executive director Linda Golodner said in the league's annual report. "The budget deficit continues to undermine the economic health of the nation."

The league's report card considered nine areas: Air safety, economic policy, energy, environment, financial services, food and drug safety, health care, insurance, and fairness at the workplace.

The lowest mark in any category went to the White House, which received an "F" on instances of intimidation and harassment and a generalized sense of fear among many, especially the poor."

Pentagon site of arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen people were arrested at the Pentagon during a protest in which a red substance was splashed on signs and pavement outside the building, authorities said.

The demonstration Monday involved about 50 people who were protesting nuclear policies of the Reagan administration.

Capt. Samuel Stewart of the Federal Protective Service said the 13 were charged with defacing federal property.

The protest was held by the Atlantic Life Community, a group that has demonstrated before at the Pentagon.

Many of the demonstrators carried signs protesting Trident nuclear submarines, the administration's refusal to halt nuclear testing and the administration's decision to build MX nuclear missiles.

AT&T to buy companies

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph said it will buy two companies from ITT Corp. now providing domestic and international communications service to Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, pending federal approval.

AT&T spokeswoman Esther Silver-Parker said Monday AT&T would provide only long-distance service on the islands.

The companies involved in the purchase, which needs approval by the Federal Communications Commission, are All America Cables and Radio Inc. and ITT Communications Inc. Virgin Islands.

The two companies now deliver calls to and from the islands by connecting to the United States mainland and other international points through AT&T's satellite and undersea cable networks.

When the deal is complete, AT&T said it plans to upgrade and enhance existing transmission and switching facilties on the two Caribbean islands to give customers there access to AT&T's digital business services now offered on the U.S. mainland.

The purchase price was not announced.

Another resigns NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burton I. Edelson, NASA's associate administrator for space science and applications, will resign from the agency in the spring, saying his departure was unrelated to the Challenger space shuttle explosion.

In his third-tier post, Edelson was in charge of several non-shuttle programs at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, including astrophysics, medical and biomedical research, planetary exploration and sub-orbital research with rockets and balloons.

Edelson was the most senior NASA official to have kept his job in the wake of the shuttle explosion Jan. 28 in which seven astronauts died.

"Some of us don't feel that the shuttle was the agency's most important mission," Edelson said Monday, referring to the projects he headed during his tenure with the agency.

Man loses wife on trip

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Like thousands of other people returning from a Christmas trip, Kenneth Zimmer, 36, discovered when he got home Monday that he had left something important behind.

But Zimmer's case is more embarrassing than most. It seems he was driving from San Francisco to his home in Eugene, Ore., when he stopped 100 miles south of the California-Oregon border in Redding.

Zimmer told police that he left his wife, Pat, 36, and their five children sleeping in the back of their van while he had a cup of coffee.

The children were all fine when Zimmer arrived home around dawn. But — no wife.

About six hours later, after the embarrassed student teacher filed a missing person report with Redding police, his wife telephoned from the Eugene bus depot asking for a ride home. There were no reports of anything she may have said.

End the piracy

The story is still unraveling about the hijacking and subsequent crash of an Iraqi jetliner Christmas Day. Details still are sketchy, but the grim death and injury count should make it clear that air piracy remains one of the world's most serious problems.

Available information indicates 62 people died when the hijacked jetliner crashed in the remote northern desert region of Arar in Saudi Arabia, near the Jordanian border. Another 32 people reportedly were injured in the crash and 12 survived unharmed. The tragic tally of death made it the worst outcome to a hijacking yet — surpassing even the tragic incident on Nov. 24, 1985, when Egyptian forces stormed a hijacked EgyptAir jetliner on Malta and 58 people were killed.

In the confusion surrounding the Christmas Day disaster, the full details of the hijacking and subsequent crash could not be learned. One group called the Islamic Revolutionary Movement even claimed Saudi warplanes confronted the hijacked airliner in the skies, forced it down and that Saudi troops stormed it at Arar. The jetliner then exploded, the group claimed.

But Saudi officials called that allegation "ridiculous" and said Saudi jets may have scrambled when it became known the jetliner was in trouble. It's likely that more details of the incident will become known in the next few days and as they do, a clearer picture will become obvious of the response needed.

Regardless, though, one fact will not change: It probably was the presence of the hijackers on the aircraft that led to the crash and the terrible loss of innocent lives. The fact terrorists were able to gain access to the aircraft means that although a concerted effort has been made in the past few years to upgrade security against terrorists, the situation remains too lax in many airports around the world.

As long as that is the case, the prospect for continued terrorism in the skies will exist and the safety of air passengers will remain in jeopardy. Of course, any effort to improve the situation will require widespread support by those responsible for airport security throughout the world. Coordinating such an massive and widespread effort will be difficult within itself. But the need for such effort is apparent.

Nothing could be better for the new year than a resolution by pilots and airport personnel to launch that diligent effort aimed at making air piracy a danger of the past.

Progress at U.N.

The United States has finally seen a bright light at the end of a long tunnel of trouble at the United Nations. For the first time in 40 years the General Assembly has decided to restructure the world body's administration in accordance with complaints the U.S. State Department has been expressing for a long time.

Washington's complaints have included the presence of a costly and cumbersome bureaucracy on the banks of the East River. It was felt that fiscal irresponsibility plagued the organization, and there were too many executives and staff members doing too little to earn their pay. As a result of these and other deficiencies, plus a pervading anti-American attitude, Congress voted to withhold $110 million of its annual assessment.

The General Assembly finally responded by giving the U.S. and other heavy contributors a more effective voice in the budget process. The budget-making committee has been given authority to put a ceiling on supplemental spending so additional items cannot be tacked on after a budget is adopted. And it was agreed there would be a 25 percent reduction in executive posts and cuts of 15 percent for staff members.

It is too early to guess how effectively U.N. leadership will pursue these goals, but certainly progress has been made. The United States' Ambassador to the U.N., General Vernon A. Walters, greeted the Assembly's action with optimism, saying: "What has been done here is something really historic. We have gotten the things that the United States intended."

Awakening U.N. leaders to their wasteful ways has not been easy, but it is a credit to Reagan Administration leaders that they persisted until action was taken.

Wonderful release

The Kremlin announcement that Andrei Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, will return to Moscow from exile is wonderful.

However, let's not forget the many others who remain victims of human rights abuses in the Soviet Union.

The Kremlin announced Friday that it had lifted the internal exile of the Nobel laureate and respected physicist. The Kremlin exiled Sakharov to the closed Soviet city of Gorky in 1980 after he publicly criticized the 1979 Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Soviet officials never charged Sakharov with any crime.

Bonner lived with Sakharov in Gorky, making monthly trips to Moscow for supplies. She provided Sakharov's contact with the world until she was sentenced in 1984 to five years of internal exile for slandering the Soviet Union. The Kremlin announced it had given Bonner clemency.

Sakharov and Bonner have become the most widely known human rights activists in the Soviet Union. That country has earned severe world criticism for their exile.

Despite that, or perhaps because of it, the Soviet Union has allowed Bonner to seek medical attention in the West several times. The last trip came in December 1985 when Bonner had surgery in the United States.

No one is sure yet just how much freedom, if any, Sakharov and Bonner will have in Moscow. Still, they will be closer to medical treatment and friends. That's an improvement from their life in Gorky.

In addition, let's hope the Soviet Union follows this announcement with similar announcements involving other Soviet dissidents.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 30th, the 364th day of 1986. There is one day left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 30, 1853, the United States bought some 46,000 square miles of land from Mexico in a deal that became known as the Gadsden Purchase, for the man who engineered it, James Gadsden. The area became the southern part of Arizona and New Mexico.

On this date:

In 1865, author Rudyard Kipling was born in Bombay, India.

In 1894, suffragist Amelia Jenks Bloomer died. She had gained notoriety for wearing in public a short skirt and baggy trousers that became known as "bloomers."

In 1903, about 600 people died when fire broke out at the Iroquois Theater in Chicago.

In 1947, King Michael of Romania agreed to abdicate, but charged he was being forced off the throne by Communists.

In 1972, the United States halted its heavy bombing of North Vietnam.

JACK ANDERSON

Pentagon eases silly fruitcake specs

WASHINGTON — Add this to the American taxpayers' seasonal blessings: The Pentagon has sliced its detailed specifications for the armed services' traditional holiday fruitcakes from 16 pages to four.

Jack Anderson

It's too early to predict how much this will save in actual dollars. But the simplification should sharpen the competition for fruitcake contracts by bringing in experienced commercial bakers who don't feel like adjusting their proven, successful recipes to meet the picky requirements of the 16-page specs.

In fact, the new fruitcake specs have been aimed deliberately at suppliers who have been selling their product on the civilian market. The new, four-page "commercial item description" simply lists the essential ingredients without the niggling detail that the old specs included.

The new requirements still name the various types of fruit to be used, but do not, for example, insist that the cherries be tinted with colorfast dye that won't run in the batter, or demand that the candied orange peels and pineapples have a "75 percent soluble solids content." Nor do the new specs give the temperature at which the eggs for the batter must be stored.

The looser specifications may also improve the quality of the fruitcake by weeding out incompetent suppliers who used the more detailed specs as a recipe to be followed slavishly. As any amateur cook knows from watching Julia Child, literal devotion to measurements is no substitute for experience.

An amendment to the Pentagon budget now permits military procurement officers to consider a supplier's commercial success when buying any of the thousands of different items used by the armed forces every year. The streamlining of old, unwieldy specifications is being supervised by Peter Yurcisin, head of the Office of Standardization and Data Management.

Yurcisin knows the job won't be easy: There are specs for 55,000 different items the Pentagon buys. But 4,000 industry standards have already replaced the old, by-the-numbers specs, and Yurcisin predicts that about 2,000 more commercial item descriptions will be adopted in 1987.

"That does not mean we are adopting every one (that industry) makes," Yurcisin told our associate Stewart Harris. But if, for example, the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) has already done the detail work and come up with an acceptable standard, Yurcisin figures there's often no real need for the military to do it all over again just to have its own requirements.

Except for obvious items that have a uniquely military application, collaboration between the Pentagon and its civilian contractors should enable specs to be drafted that will be useful to all concerned, according to Yurcisin. Procurement officers and suppliers alike will have fewer headaches if the contractors' commercial expertise can be taken into account.

Among the items that have not suffered from adoption of industry standards are hot-chocolate dispensers and dishracks. The streamliners may eventually zero in on chewing gum (17 pages of specs) and athletic supporters (22 pages).

Much of the concern over military specs was triggered by the Defense Science Board, headed by Dr. Joseph Shea of Raytheon.

Footnote: Yurcisin's office has begun eliminating specs that are not reviewed every five years.

EYE ON THE BIG APPLES: Only in New York could Rita Jenrette, a former congressional wife and Playboy model, fail to raise an eyebrow when she works as a counselor at a homeless shelter one night a month. FLORA LEWIS

Task for now to find way to live together

CAIRO — In this region, where three great religions were born, the issues of faith and promise are again stirring societies. They are not simple issues, long settled, because religion is about how men and women behave toward each other as well as about belief in their relations to God.

Flora Lewis

Change has been coming at a rate never known in human history and it imposes ever new demands. The changes are welcome for what they bring in well-being, health, protection from the rigors and cruelties of nature. And they are frightening for what they bring in uncertainty and challenge. So they create new questions in everyday personal and social life and questions about the role of religion.

American fundamentalism has regained vigor in Christian and Jewish as well as Moslem societies, often in response to these pressures. It is an insistent and exclusive form of faith at odds with other traditions, at least as strong, in the three religions.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt included an implicit reminder of this in a message he has sent to a Moslem conference in California, calling for "adherence to the tolerant principles of Islam and to the spirit of benevolence and peace pervading the preachings of Islam and all religions."

Moslem, and particularly Arab, societies are being pushed now by the fundamentalists' call for a return to unquestioning obedience to rigid orthodoxy. It is presented as a return to roots, to the well-springs of a vanished golden age that can be regained by rejecting what is seen as alien influence and impurity.

There is not a great difference between Rabbi Meir Kahane's ideas of what a Jewish state should be and those of the Islamic republicans. Both oppose secular modern society. "Zionism and democracy are incompatible," he proclaimed, "because Zionism was to establish a Jewish state and not a state with equal rights for everyone else." He accepts the rules of Israeli democracy, he says, "because otherwise it would provoke civil war in this country, and that I would never do. But does it make any sense to hold elections every four years to ask if people want to obey the will of God?"

Some Arab states are struggling to learn democracy, and most have not yet begun. The comparison can't be carried too far. Still, there is a similar claim to a right to command a way of life, all aspects of life, on the grounds of a divine inspiration that provides knowledge of all man needs to know.

The claim would leave no vacuum, and that is the basis of its appeal. For there is a vacuum in today's world of ideas. An Egyptian professor, Ali Dessouki, speaks of a "vacuum of ideology," especially among students in his country.

There is some nostalgia for the exhilaration of the late Gamal Abdel Nasser's nationalism, and some zealous planning to complete the establishment of Marxism. But both have failed to pass the test of historical experience. Neither nationalism nor communism has anywhere cured society of ills or delivered its vision of utopia. Both are fading, and in Moslem lands both can be seen as Western ideas unsuitable for assimilation.

No other modern thought has been offered for systematic belief. Capitalism is no more than a method of organizing production, bringing together the essential elements of management, labor and material as effectively as possible. Democracy is a process for accommodation, renewal, correcting mistakes that people are bound to make and adjusting to circumstance. It offers the most decent way for societies to find answers, but it doesn't guarantee right answers beforehand. So people who ache from confusion and yearn for certitudes turn to old prescriptions, hallowed by custom but no more assuredly divine than a new spark, a new sense of the miracle and wonder of life. Fearful of the future, confounded by the present, they seek refuge in the past.

This is a massive failure of contemporary thought, of modern intellectuals. For decades, too many have been narcissistic, particularizing their private discomfort when their job is to articulate the needs and hopes of their time.

Medieval practices won't solve problems of the 21st century but neither will resignation to drift or retreat into the vastness of the solitary psyche. There is a vacuum of spirit that requires conscious effort to show the joys of learning and the marvel of the unknown, to educate and explain why doubt exists so hope can flourish. That was the task of the early sages. It is the task for now. Faith is necessary and irrepressible. But without a message of wisdom and humility in human affairs, it can turn vicious.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Reagan hanging in there for 'space defense'

The whole world is going bananas.

Here I am, home on the ranch, and what do I see?

I see the Russians giving Sakharov a television studio to broadcast to all the American television networks, and Gorby's men smiling as that fearless dissident denounces the Red Army's occupation of Afghanistan. Crazy.

William Safire

I see Chinese students rioting against Deng for being too slow on democracy, and the authorities in Beijing patting the kids on the head and telling them to go home and be nice. Unbelievable.

Here at home, I see all the people who tore their hair out at my heartlessness and lack of compassion now up in arms because I turned out to be a soft touch on hostages. The liberals are sore because I wasn't the tough guy they hated.

Which brings me to the Iran arms controversy. I'm the only one who calls it a controversy — everybody else agrees in perfect hindsight it was a terrible idea to sell them anything, which is another example of the world gone bananas.

It's not enough that I had to admit, in a passive voice, that mistakes were made in the execution of my Iran policy. Now they want me to confess to making a mistake in the policy itself, and that's not like me — I haven't even admitted making a mistake in turning down the role in "Casablanca" that went to Humphrey Bogart.

The cover story isn't flying — that this was some geostrategic design to foil the Russians after the death of the ayatollah. Now they have the memo from Casey that shows this was a straight hostage ransom payment, with a hoked-up cover about moderate elements. But what can I do — go out there and say I caved in to those families that came to me crying? Or that Bill Casey was going bonkers at the CIA station chief in Beirut being tortured, and was willing to pay anything to spring him before every name in our Middle East network was forced out of him? That's out of character. We can never admit publicly we're vulnerable to blackmail. The plain truth is not a realistic option.

Poor Bill, to have all his fine work rebuilding that agency go down the drain this way. Do you suppose his brain tumor affected his judgment over the past year, the way his friends say it affected his mood?

At least now when they ask him to testify about meetings with me he can deliver my old line from "King's Row": Where's the rest of me? Bill can take a joke, especially coming from me now. I didn't choose January for my prostate operation because it was the most convenient time; for a president, just before the State of the Union and the budget, it's the worst time, but the doctors say I shouldn't wait another month.

Gutsy guy, Casey; as soon as that great American can talk, I'll bet he'll tell me his candidate for a successor. He'll want me to get Leo Cherne's advice. Pity we kicked Edward Bennett Williams off the Intelligence Advisory Board, to make room for Henry Kissinger or somebody; now the Williams law firm is working for Ollie North, and Ed knows too much about the place across the river.

I wish my friends would stop dumping on Ollie, calling him a kook, hinting he was in cahoots with some general with his hand in the till. We have to treat that young man with great care, get somebody to give him immunity, not so much to get him to talk as to get him to relax. If he and his friend the admiral get angry, Northdexter could decide to involve me in that contra thing, which I was not a part of, that I can remember.

And now, when I can least afford it, my own wife is giving me trouble. On the advice of Mike Deaver, who was not exactly a barrel of laughs at Christmas dinner, Nancy's been calling a pal of hers in the media regularly, undercutting Don Regan, the only person I can talk to these days. The White House operator has a list of those calls but I don't want to look at it; that would be spying on your wife.

Pushing Regan off the sled would not satisfy the wolves, and it would be admitting a mistake I never made. Come to think of it, the role Bogie played in "Casablanca" wasn't right for me.

Well, when the going gets going, the tough get tough, or whatever. I'll start off the year flat on my face in the polls and flat on my back in the hospital, but my exit line hasn't been written yet.

Televised hearings and investigators' leaks can smear my reputation, the Democrats can gut the Reagan revolution, the Kremlin can turn truth on its head, but I'm hanging in there until SDI is a fact of life. Let the world go bananas; space defense is my legacy, and no matter how they all come at me, I'll deliver on that.

Pair compile photographic chronicle of county courthouses

By JANET NICHOLS

CORSICANA (AP) — Norman and Dana Stubbs drove more than 21,000 miles and visited every county courthouse in Texas this year, sometimes seeing as many as eight in a day, to celebrate the state's 150th birthday.

The Corsicana couple — who began their "county-hopping," as they call it, on Jan. 1 — said they did it because they just like courthouses.

"We said we would be able to take pictures of all 254 county courthouses in Texas in this, the Sesquicentennial year, and we've done it," Stubbs said. "We did it for the fun of it, and we just 'shot' the final courthouse on Dec. 8."

"I hadn't been west of Whitney nor south of San Antonio before these trips," Mrs. Stubbs said. "I wanted to see all of Texas, and we thought the pictures would be the way to preserve our memories."

Most of the trips around Texas were accomplished in one day, usually on Sunday. "We traveled over 21,987 miles of Texas roads to get the pictures, and on some of the one-day trips we'd drive as far as 800 miles before getting home," she said.

"Norman walked around every one of the courthouses while I took slides and videos," Mrs. Stubbs said. Stubbs laughed and said, "I walked around a lot of them, but most of them I ran around because it was either too cold or raining."

The couple said it took a lot of planning to log as many courthouses as possible into each trip and not have to cover the same territory twice.

"We used one map to keep track of all the places we'd been," Mrs. Stubbs said, indicating a pile of tattered pieces of an old map. "We'd circle the county seats as we'd visit them. We didn't write them down anywhere else, and I almost had a heart attack once when we thought we'd lost part of the map."

"I always thought courthouses should look like Waxahachie's, but we did see some that were prettier...some really ugly. Some of the courthouses looked like schools, nursery homes or barns but Mount Pleasant's had to be the ugliest. It was long, with doors on both ends and no windows."

Some of the county seats had only four or five houses plus the courthouse, "We drove right through Palo Pinto before we realized the 'school' we'd passed must have been the courthouse."

The Stubbs said the most difficult part of their trips was getting the policemen in the towns to tell them where the courthouses were located. Most could not give the directions. In San Antonio, a policeman guarding a Christmas tree in front of the Alamo said he could not direct them but, if he could have left the tree, he could take them to it.

In all the miles traveled the only vehicle trouble the couple experienced was a slipped alternator belt, which was fixed by a rough-looking trucker named the "Wild Man."

"We met the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train in Belton, held hands in the Hands Across America in Vega and got wet a lot of times.

"It's amazing how nice the people are," Mrs. Stubbs said. "When the people would find out what we were doing, they'd find other interesting places in their communities for us to visit."

"We used one map to keep track of all the places we'd been. We'd circle the county seats as we'd visit them."
— Dana Stubbs, connoisseur of Texas county courthouses

The most unique courthouse, the Stubbs said, is the one in Grimes County which has all of its steps built onto the outside of the building. A member of the Clyde Barrow gang was tried there in the 1930s. The county was named for Jesse Grimes who signed the Declaration of Independence.

They will have their "work" cataloged by the first of the year, Mrs. Stubbs said. "It must be completely finished by July because the historical society has asked me to give a slide presentation then."

Texas Highways magazine also has expressed an interest in publishing an article about their trips, they said.

They intend to make the video available for the use of various civic groups but they don't know now what they'll do with the book they intend to compile from their pictures and notes on the trips.

Stubbs said they would do it again and in exactly the same way. His wife answered emphatically, "You better believe it!"

Postal Service issues new envelope with Mayflower

Associated Press

The Mayflower sails again.

The U.S. Postal Service has issued an 8.5-cent embossed envelope which features a design of the renowned Mayflower, which sailed with its Pilgrims from Plymouth, England, in 1620 and finally landed at the site now known as Plymouth, Mass. The 8.5-cent denomination meets the non-profit bulk mailing rate of the USPS.

The Mayflower, with its small band of Pilgrims seeking economic opportunity and religious freedom, actually landed first at present-day Provincetown, Mass. But after preliminary explorations of the Massachusetts Bay area, the Mayflower then set sail for its historic landing near Plymouth Rock.

To allow collectors more time to obtain first-day cancellations, the Postal Service has extended the deadline until Feb. 2. The usual two methods are in effect.

If you prefer to purchase the envelope at your local post office, you may send it to: Customer-Provided Stationery, Postmaster, Plymouth, MA 02360-9991. No remittance is required. However, since the price is 14 cents per envelope, you must affix at least 14 cents additional postage to meet the minimum first-class rate (8.5 cents plus 14 cents).

Collectors desirous of having the USPS provide the envelope should send their request to: Mayflower Envelope, Postmaster, Plymouth, MA 02360-9992. Enclose a money order for 28 cents per envelope, which includes the 14-cent envelope plus the 14 cents additional to meet the first-class rate. A 14-cent Iceboat coil stamp will be used.

Remember, first-day cancellations are available until Feb. 2.

Museum created from county jail

By LISE BICKHAM

PARIS, Ark. (AP) — Dressed in white, the convicted murderer was marched from his dank Logan County Jail cell, down the jail's narrow stairway and outside to the gallows set up just south of the red stone building.

It was March 1914, and Arthur Tillman was the last man hanged in Arkansas — "legally" — says Beatrice Gilbert, curator of the Logan County Museum, which is located in the 100-year-old building.

Antiques fill the four rooms downstairs, where jailers used to live, and the four cells upstairs.

The building was judged unsafe as a jail in August 1971, and about a year later County Judge J.V. "Jim" Ward said members of Extension Homemakers Clubs could convert it into a museum. Soon afterward, the Logan County Museum Association was formed.

Over the next few years, the association collected donations of antiques from county residents, and now the building is packed with contributions. A handful of examples:

A 1923 paper silver dollar; a treadle sewing machine; a dusty Paris Liberty Marching Band bass drum; military uniforms and equipment from World War I and II; a 1924 wheelchair; a lard press; a tobacco knife; a spinning wheel; an 1876 rocking chair; about two dozen jeweled women's decorative hair combs; and about five dozen arrowheads.

Mrs. Gilbert, whose salary is paid by a grant, greets about 2,500 visitors a year.

The building has two doors, one to the jail and the other to the jailers' quarters. Displays fill the three rooms of the jailers' quarters, and the narrow stairway to the former kitchen in the basement is roped off.

The outside door to the jail is solid steel; behind it is one made of flat vertical bars. The solid door has a lock box where jailers used to store the only key to the jail, a thick brass key about 5 inches long.

Mrs. Gilbert opens the doors so visitors can go into the one downstairs room of the jail and then up the stairs to the four cells, which are made with the same kind of flat crisscrossing bars.

The cells are filled with displays devoted to mining, medicine, the military and other subjects. In the medical display, an old medical dictionary gives a remedy for heartburn: One dram sulphate of quinine, one ounce of tincture of nux vomice, three ounces of wine of pepsin and one dram of Fowler's solution of arsenic. Take one-half teaspoon after meals.

Mrs. Gilbert has tried to trace the history of some of the items on display. Pointing at an old slide projector, the former teacher said, "I wrote to Bausch & Lomb about that. It was the Paris High School's first slide projector. They didn't have any information about this model. They sent me some information about later models."

The hanging of Tillman still occasionally draws attention to the jail. An article about the case appeared in the Arkansas Times magazine last year.

A faded newspaper clipping and a magazine article about the case are displayed near the door. When asked if a girl in a photograph is the one Tillman was convicted of killing, Mrs. Gilbert says, "Supposedly."

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight clear with a low near 30. Light southwest wind. Wednesday fair with increasing high clouds during the afternoon. A high near 60. Southwest wind 10 to 15 mph, shifting to the north 10 to 20 mph and gusty during the afternoon. Forecast for New Years Day partly cloudy. A low in the upper 20s and a high in the middle 50s.

Clear, cold night likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a clear, cold night tonight. The low is predicted to be near the 30-degree mark and will be accompanied by light, southwesterly winds.

Wednesday's forecast calls for fair skies and winds out of the southwest at 10-15 mph during the morning. Increasing high cloudiness and winds shifting to the south at 10-20 mph and gusting are called for during the afternoon.

The NWS forecast for New Year's Day calls for partly cloudy skies, a low in the upper 20s, a high in the middle 50s.

Monday's high of 58 was 19 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1945. Today's 25-degree low was 13 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1983.

STATE

Rainfall triggered in South Texas by an upper level storm system over North Central Mexico is expected to end and give Texas mostly clear skies and mild temperatures for the last day of 1986.

Forecasts called for occasional rain across extreme South Texas to end by tonight. Skies will be clear over most of the state although a few clouds are expected to linger over extreme South Texas and some scattered clouds are expected Wednesday over West Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s, ranging from the lower 20s in the Panhandle to the 40s in South Texas.

Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 50s and 60s.

In addition to the rainfall in South Texas, some fog was reported over southern portions of the state, extending northward into South Central Texas and Southeast Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 20s and 30s. Extremes ranged from 25 at Amarillo and El Paso to 51 at both Galveston and Corpus Christi

NATION

A low-pressure system spread snow across the western Great Lakes region and Ohio Valley today, while freezing drizzle fell over southern Wisconsin and northwest Indiana.

Travelers' advisories for light snow and slippery roads were posted for southeastern lower Michigan and parts of central and east-central Indiana. An inch of snow fell during the six hours ending at 1 a.m. EST at Indianapolis, Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Lansing, Mich.

Commissioners to delay taking Culver home bids

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners Monday agreed to delay consideration of bids for the renovation of Culver Youth Home until bids for work on the county jail are received.

The commissioners said they agreed to the delay so the bids could be reviewed as a package.

Project architect Walter Pate of Pate and Associates told commissioners that the low bid of $738,700 submitted by J.W. Cooper Construction of Odessa could be reduced by 15 percent, to just over $626,000, but was still $125,000 more than the bond issue passed by voters in May 1985.

"There are not any other significant dollars that can be pulled out that we can see," Pate said.

Commissioners agreed to wait until bids for the $2.3 million jail renovation, which will also be financed by bonds, are received in mid-February.

Pate said he hoped commissioners would give final approval to the jail plan at their Jan. 12 meeting. He said he hoped to go to Austin the next day to "walk through" the plan with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, then advertise for bids Feb. 17.

Plans for the youth home include the addition of maximum security housing, a day room, a classroom and an office for the Juvenile Probation department.

Pate said he hopes construction on the youth home can begin by March 1.

Commissioners also voted to complete payment for the computer system for the Midland County Sheriff's office, which has just been installed. Sheriff Gary Painter told commissioners the system will go on-line midnight Dec. 31, as scheduled. Total cost of the system was $126,044, he said.

Painter commended High Tech Data Corp. of Midland for a donation of computer hardware, software and labor valued at more than $81,000.

Painter also asked commissioners for fund transfers that would allow the Midland County District Attorney's office and Midland County Constable's office to access the computer system.

Midland officer to represent state at national lodge

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland police officer is the new representative of the 1,000 law enforcement officers who belong to the state's Fraternal Order of Pplice lodge, and he said expansion of the order is one of his primary goals.

Patrolman Leonard Hendon, president of the Midland lodge since its inception in Nov. 1985, replaced Paul Lushin, an Odessa police officer who resigned to move to Indiana as national trustee for the state. Hendon said he will sit on the national board of directors along with the national trustees of the 38 other state lodges.

"My main responsibility is representing the state to the national (board) and expanding the lodges in Texas," Hendon said. "I am currently working with the state officers. We are trying to get the state lodge on a firm footing."

Leonard Hendon

The Midland lodge is one of the six chapters of the FOP in West Texas. The others are in Odessa, Pecos, Andrews, Lamesa, and San Angelo.

Hendon said Texas is one of the last states without a significant FOP presence. He said chapters would pop up periodically, but no lodge of the current 24 in the state remained viable until 1983.

"I really don't know what caused that," he said. "But I do know a lot of the current lodges in the state are made up of ex-FOP officers from other states or areas."

One of the significant achievements of the FOP on a national level, Hendon said, was the establishment of a $50,000 benefit from the federal government that goes to the family of an officer killed in the line of duty. He said the FOP's national standing committee has also supported legislation banning the "cop-killer" bullet — teflon-tipped ammunition that is capable of piercing bulletproof vests.

The 35 members of the local FOP, comprised of officers from the police department, Midland County Sheriff's office, and U.S. Marshal's office, distributed 550 food baskets to needy families over Thanksgiving and Christmas. Hendon said that is the type of activity he would like to see the lodge involved in in 1987.

"It (FOP) is a fraternal organization, classified as a nonprofit organization..."

— Leonard Hendon

"It (FOP) is a fraternal organization, classified as a nonprofit organization," he said. "It is not classified as a labor organization, and our goal is fellowship. The organization is run entirely by police officers, or retired officers. It is a service organization to help the communities where the officers live."

Hendon said his term expires this August, and he plans on running again and winning his first full term at the week-long national convention that will be held in Mobile, Ala.

Effective Jan. 1, the chapter's new vice-president and trustee to the executive board of directors is Det. Sgt. Ernie Wakefield of the Midland Police Department.

Hendon said athletics and another lodge might be in the local chapter's future.

"We are looking at the possibility of sponsoring some athletic teams for the upcoming season," he said.

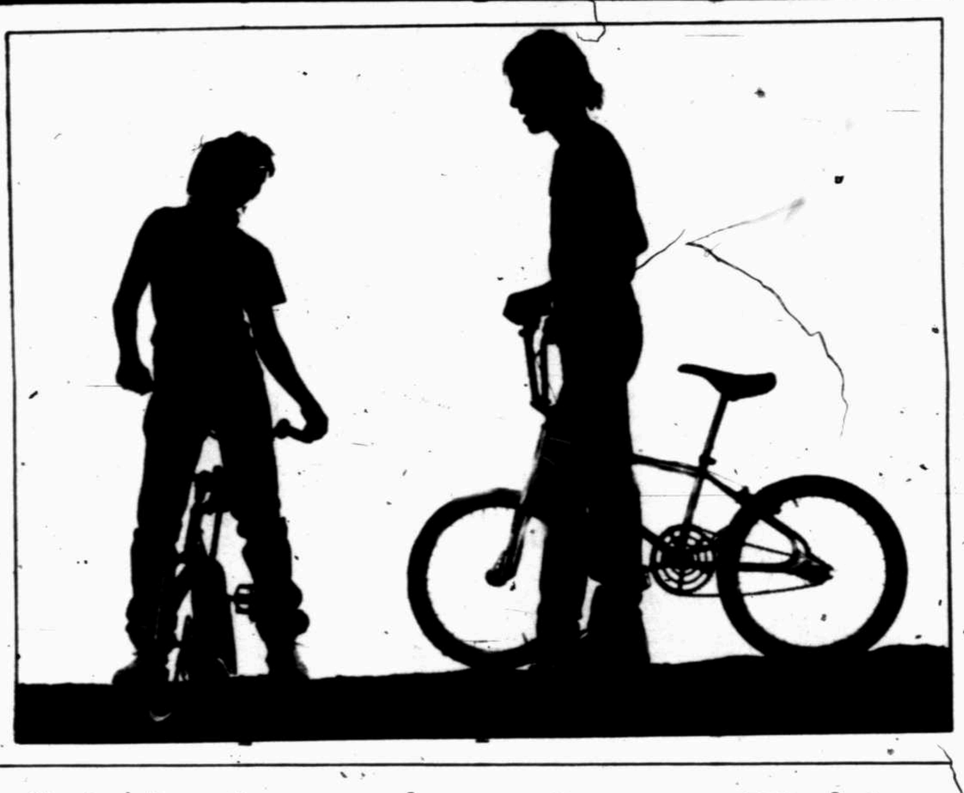

"We are also looking at perhaps establishing an associate lodge, made up of business people and other citizens interested in law enforcement."

Artist draws 'sick' chickens, bunnies on T-shirts

DIBOLL (AP) — Ted Cheavens knew he was onto something when his wife, Michele, took one look at his drawing of chickens in horn-rimmed glasses and said, "That's pretty sick."

He said, "I know I'm doing things right if she says it is sick. That's her way of saying, 'You've got something there.' "

The bespectacled chickens have since found a home on the back of a group of T-shirts that he is marketing nationally and he says, "That will probably be the hottest thing I'll have this year."

The 20-year-old Diboll artist and Pat McCann II of Lufkin have a business agreement to work together on marketing the shirts, he said.

The chicken idea lead to additional ideas for the group of six designs that appear on the back of the new, 100-percent cotton T-shirts. Cheavens said he thought about different ways that humans try to dress up animals and went from there with the idea of animals in human settings.

The collection includes the chickens, a bewildered-looking bunny with floppy ears wearing a too-large suit and a rumpled tie, a cheerful dog skimming the water on a slalom ski, a skunk hanging on for dear life as he takes an unexpected ride on a skateboard, a large pink fish with big, pursed lips and half-closed eyes bearing down on a hapless, hooked worm, and "Johnny," an innocent-looking guy with a flat-top, looking out at the waves.

"The market we are trying to appeal to is the surfer, beach-related market. This type of subject matter — skateboards and surfing — is found in just about every type of store. It is not just sold in beach stores now," Cheavens said. He added that skateboards and surfboards, "Just go together like cookies and milk." He has been a skateboarding enthusiast since the early 1970s.

His shirts have the same format as large, successful brands such as Ocean Pacific, he said, with the designs printed on the back and his logo on the front. "The difference in mine is that they are all cartoon-oriented," he said.

His logo is an artistic version of "Cheavens" drawn symmetrically and using "e's" that are three little squares stacked on top of one another.

Cheavens said it is possible that his shirts could lead him into the big time. "I think this could turn into a million-dollar operation easily, really easily, because I've seen it done. But I'm not expecting it."

United Way's executive director will be resigning

From Staff Reports

Bob Smith, United Way of Midland's executive director, has announced his resignation, effective March 31, 1987.

Smith has been employed with United Way since February 1985.

His areas of responsibility included fund development and distribution, planning, administration and management of the United Way and the 15 agencies it supports.

Prior to working at United Way, Smith was the associate general director of the Midland Metropolitan YMCA.

The executive committee of United Way will meet in early January to begin considering a new executive.

Police probing Domino's robbery

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

Police are still investigating the robbery Monday of more than $3,000 in cash and checks from Domino's Pizza, 2106 Big Spring. According to reports, an employee, 23-year-old Matthew Lee Schreiter of Midland, was apparently struck over the head shortly after 10 a.m. and was found by another employee lying on the floor of the business.

Reports said Schreiter, who was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital, told police at the scene he only remembered starting to leave the business with the bank deposit, kept in four bank bags. Police are scheduled to interview Schreiter again today.

Police found a bent, rusted pipe at the scene, which they say may have been used in the attack.

K-9 Officer Pat Bostick was called to the scene after some shoeprints were found, but was unable to locate a suspect. Police said two men were picked up near the scene and questioned. One was released, and the other was arrested on an unrelated outstanding warrant.

Police are also investigating several burglaries that were reported Monday, including several in which the burglars favored 19-inch color television sets.

Woman says 4-feet, 4-inch height doesn't stop her

By CINDY SMITH

PLANO (AP) — What is it like to be a small person in a tall world?

Vee Ragsdale, 22, of Plano, stands only 4 feet, 4 inches tall. But she doesn't let her height stand in the way of her life.

"I watched a show on television about a little people's club and I couldn't understand why they were all so depressed. They seemed real hostile and asked 'why me, why me' and I think 'Why not you? What's so terrible?' I would rather be 4-foot-4 than 8-foot-4," Miss Ragsdale said.

Miss Ragsdale is in her second year at Richland College with a double major in English and advertising.

"The Texas Rehabilitation Center finances all of my schooling, my books and tuition. All I have to do is make something of myself, which is basically what we are all trying to do, isn't it?" she said.

Miss Ragsdale says she does have one concern in common with other "small people" — gaining weight.

"All the girls get to the stage, saying 'I'm fat-I'm fat,' but I was really getting fat. Up until about the eighth grade I was really chubby. I weighed, and I know it doesn't sound like much to you, but I was getting to where I weighed 100 pounds. I was a roly-poly," she said.

Miss Ragsdale says she watches what she eats but just stays active to burn all those calories.

She says another concern that plagues dwarf-sized people is clothing. She wears size 3 or 5 in women's clothing, but she cannot wear girls' clothes.

"I wear size 1 in children's shoes, which is great because they are cheaper. The ony drawback is that they don't make pumps for little girls. I don't even own a single pair of high heels," she said.

She could have special shoes made by a mold, but the mold alone cost $500 and the first pair of shoes averages $200.

Miss Ragsdale has an extension on the pedals in her car, and when she goes shopping, she doesn't hesitate to ask someone to reach something on the shelf for her.

And she says she is not insulted by jokes about her height. "If it's funny, it is funny," she said. "No one has ever hurt my feelings or insulted me so why should I take it as an insult.

Miss Ragsdale says her parents first noticed something was wrong when she was about 9 months old.

"My parents would pick me up and I would cry all the time because it hurt; the bones were too soft," she said. She says she did not notice her own size until she was in the second grade and everybody else kept growing.

"It's just a form of dwarfism. The short bones grow a lot faster pushing on the long bones which makes them bend," she said. "The doctors really don't know why some people are affected this way. My mom didn't drink or take drugs or anything when she was pregnant."

Miss Ragsdale is part of a normal-sized family. Her parents, Janie Dobbs and Sammy Ragsdale, are of normal height and her brother, Sammy Jr., stands 6-foot-5.

Miss Ragsdale's parents took her to several doctors during her first few years. Then she went to a "little people's place," Dallas' Scottish Rite Hospital, which specializes in dwarfism. "And a lot of the doctors that work there are little people too," she said.

Miss Ragsdale, needing surgery badly on her legs, was hospitalized. "I was practically pigeon-toed and bow-legged at the same time," she said.

During two summers, when she was 9 and later when she was 10 years old, Miss Ragsdale was in the hospital to have the shin bones broken in different places to heal back properly. The second time she went in, doctors had to redo the left leg because it did not heal well.

"I was just scared to death, I mean here I was just a little kid and those people were so nice to me," Miss Ragsdale said. "And I also saw a lot of people that were a lot worse off than me."

Her legs were placed in full-length leg casts. After the casts were removed, she had to learn how to walk again.

"It was weird. My head remembered how to walk but my legs didn't," she said.

She recalls finishing up her school work early to have the operations and start back in the fall like everyone else.

"I have never worried too much about my size," Miss Ragsdale said. "My folks didn't worry too much about it. My mom has always told me to do anything and everything and I have always been involved in school, in the pep squad, the drama club."

She also participated in band and was secretary of the student council and president of the Thespian club. She was a charter graduate of Plano East Senior High School. "We felt like we were seniors for two years instead of one because we were the first class to graduate from the new school," she said.

Miss Ragsdale went right to work after graduating from high school because she says she was not ready to go to college.

"I really enjoyed working. All of a sudden I had money all the time and I didn't have any rent, so I could do what I wanted to with it," she said.

"I do not feel like I have missed out on anything in high school because of my size. I had a steady (boyfriend), then I wanted to date around. No, I never missed out anything, although my mom wished I would have," she laughed.

She says she would eventually like to marry and have a family — about four children. Dwarfism doesn't run in her family, but twins do, she says.

Sesquicentennial flag at South Pole

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Sesquicentennial flag is flying at the South Pole to mark the state's 150th anniversary, thanks to the efforts of a group of Texans working at McMurdo Sound in Antarctica.

The group, including Dave Honea of Austin, decided to join the state's 150th birthday celebration by planting a Sesquicentennial flag at the South Pole, the Austin American-Statesman reported Monday.

The flag was provided by another Texan, Matt Nelson of Bacliff, a Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. Inc. employee at Johnson Space Center. Nelson agreed to carry a Sesquicentennial flag with him on a visit to Antarctica.

Honea was in Antarctica to work on a South Pole data link project, a joint venture involving the University of Texas and other agencies.

After a Thanksgiving dinner, Nelson and Honea braved a wind chill factor of minus 60 degrees to plant the flag.

"It probably will stay there as long as an Oklahoma fan doesn't winter over (in Antarctica) and decide to remove it, or some official agency decides this is not to be, or it gets covered up with snow," said Pat Smith, a UT researcher who worked from October 1981 to October 1982 in Antarctica.

Chow dog attacks Odessa woman

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A woman attacked Monday by a chow dog was listed in stable condition today at Medical Center Hospital.

Ms. Oleta Kennedy, 62, had apparently gone outside her apartment to feed or pet the dog, Freddy Belis, Ector County Animal Control supervisor, said.

"It bit her on the breasts and on the arms," Belis said.

Traditionally, the chow is known as a one-owner dog and has a history of being mean to others, Belis said.

"He's what I call a fear-biter. The dog will stay here for 10 days for supervision.

"The owner doesn't want him back; he wants him destroyed," Belis said.

A nursing supervisor at MCH said Ms. Kennedy was brought in late Monday afternoon, but did not know when she would be released.

He said he is not expecting wealth nor seeking it. "My main concern is not wealth. I really just enjoy drawing. I appreciate and enjoy abstract art, realism, cartoons, stick figures, anything. The Lord has gotten me to this point where I have perfected my drawing enough to do it professionally."

"I am a Christian. I want to please Christ in everything I do, more than anything...Money is not my prime concern at all."

One thing that is of concern to him is to be able to continue drawing as his profession. "I just want to draw the rest of my life," he said. "I used to spend my spare time drawing. Now I spend my spare time doing something else because I spend full time drawing."

Diversification is his strategy. "I do all types of artwork. I've illustrated one book, 'Child of the Sun,' a novel written by my grandfather, Dr. Frank Cheavens; and I am working on illustrating one now by Bill Troth, pastor of Believer's Bible Church, called 'How Can I Get Into Heaven?' "

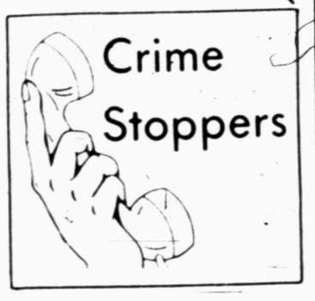

He has designed animal character note cards that are available at Shelf Image in Lufkin. he is working on retail advertising campaign ideas in a cartoon format, and he draws caricatures. One caricature to his credit is a depiction of Temple-Eastex executives. An example of his work that is on public display currently is a 6-foot by 4-foot acrylic on canvas piece featuring many men dressed in tuxedos. It is called "Texas Tux," and it is hanging in the library at Angelina College.

Burglary information sought

This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information concerning the burglary of a business in Odessa.

At about 4 a.m. on Dec. 11, Hallmark TV Repair, 1231 W. University, was burglarized. The store's security camera was operating, and taped the suspect as he broke a window and entered the business. Once inside, removed three Quasar front-loading videocassette recorders and a compact disc player. Investigators said they have been unable to identify the suspect.

Information about the burglary could be worth $1,000 cash this week only if it leads to the arrest and felony indictment of the suspect. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information about other felony crimes.

In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

Explosion demolishes apartment building near TCU

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fire investigators began an investigation at dawn today to determine the cause of an explosion that triggered a two-alarm fire and demolished a small apartment building near the Texas Christian University campus.

No one was injured in the explosion late Monday night, authorities said.

Fire department spokesman Butch Hall said arson investigators would begin their investigation at dawn today. The building was guarded during the night while investigators waited for daylight to begin their probe.

Hall said the explosion, which occurred at about 10:30 p.m. Monday, destroyed the north end of the Bellaire Villa Apartments.

The structure, a two-story white frame and stucco complex located across from the TCU football stadium parking lot, caught fire after the explsion.

All residents of the building were accounted for by late Monday, spokesman Charlie McCafferty said.

Damage to the building was "considerable," officials said in declining to give an estimate of the damage.

Paper's former publisher will be TDNA vice president

AUSTIN (AP) — George Irish, publisher of the Beaumont Enterprise and former publisher of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, will become vice president of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association on Thursday.

Tucker Sutherland, president of Sutherland Media Inc. of San Antonio, which owns the Corsicana Daily Sun, will become the 55th president of TDNA.

Gene McDavid, vice president and general manager of the Houston Chronicle, will become TDNA treasurer.

Sutherland, who formerly was president of newspaper operations for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc., last fall formed his own media company. He had been with Harte-Hanks newspapers for many years, serving as publisher of the Corsicana and San Angelo newspapers.

James M. Moroney Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the A.H. Belo Corp., publisher of The Dallas Morning News, will become chairman of the TDNA executive committee.

Fire department to host dance

From Staff Reports

The Northeast Midland County Volunteer Fire Department will host its first annual New Year's Eve Dance Wednesday night, featuring Michael Payne and the Western Stars.

The dance will be from 8 p.m. until midnight at the Midland County Exhibit Building on E. Highway 80. Setups will be available, but participants need to bring their own bottle.

Proceeds from the dance will be used to purchase needed fire fighting equipment for the department.

For additional information, contact Cindy Vorheis (682-0689), Carolyn King (683-6978) or Midge Graham (685-1985).

In other action, commissioners agreed to join the Midland County Hospital District in an indigent care prescription program. County Judge William Ahders said the district agreed to underwrite the cost of prescriptions for indigent persons, and will subsidize half of the salary of the Midland County worker that administers the program.

Commissioner Durward Wright pointed out that the program will actually make money for the county, since before the agreement the county has paid the worker's salary and paid for all prescriptions for indigents.

MD's 1966 poster child dies from disease

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A woman selected as Texas' Muscular Distrophy Poster Girl in 1966 has died after struggling against the debilitating muscle disease for 25 years.

Her duties as a poster child allowed Viki Dee McNair, who died Sunday, to meet and pose with such celebrities as President Lyndon Johnson, astronaut John Glenn and John Wayne.

"The doctors told us she wouldn't live to be 10," said Miss McNair's sister, Patricia Hoelscher of El Campo. "She lived to be 25, and I have to give credit to the way my parents cared for her."

"I don't know if she had a philosophy, but what she could do, she enjoyed," Mrs. Hoelscher said. "Everything she could do, she did."

When Miss McNair was selected as the poster child at age 4, she got the chance to meet governors, astronauts, Hollywood stars and the president, her sister said.

"She was supposed to be the national poster child," said Mrs. Hoelscher. "But she had to decline because of the amount of travel. She wasn't strong enough."

After that annual MD fund-raising drive ended in 1967, Miss McNair went back home with her parents, Veda and Winfred McNair of Calallen, then outside of Corpus Christi.

Miss McNair lost the use of her legs and was confined to a wheelchair, but she became active in the Bluebirds and the 4-H Club, raising turkeys and capons for competition. She was also active in journalism at Calallen High School and graduated in 1980.

"When she got out of school, she wanted to write children's books," Mrs. Hoelscher said. "But it was just too difficult."

Paraplegic thankful for all she has

By SUZY McAULIFFE

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — This is not the story of a young life destroyed by tragedy.

True, Patricia Mount was 19 when she lost the use of her legs and painfully learned to say "paraplegic" when describing herself.

True, a traffic accident put an abrupt end to an active life at Southwest Texas State University, where she was studying agribusiness.

True, she now spends several hours each day simply learning how to crawl and lift her body with her arms.

But people who meet this 20-year-old from Taft won't be tempted to use sympathetic tones and polite eyes. That's the way Patricia wants it. And, most often, that's the way she gets it.

"I'm a paraplegic," Patricia said, in a matter-of-fact tone that sounds almost as if she's joking. "There is a possibility I can walk again. There is a possibility I can't. I learned to crawl a couple of months ago, which is real good."

Her relatives and most of her friends "don't treat me any differently," she says, but strangers seem uncomfortable.

"I still get some stares in the mall. It used to bother me, but it doesn't anymore," Patricia says, pushing her brown hair behind her ears. "They're just curious. I'm so young and they want to know why somebody so young is in a wheelchair."

She sat at a breakfast table in her parents' home, where she lives with her older sister, mother and father. It was late in the afternoon and she had just returned from a rigorous two-hour therapy session.

"We were going to Kingsville on a back road," Patricia said, describing the wreck that left her paralyzed. "My sister was driving, and we were going around a curve. I was in the front seat and my cousin was in the back. Our car hit a little bump, and it hydroplaned and hit them," she said, referring to another vehicle. "We were only going about 40 mph, but it was misting."

She laughed about the incident, smiling over the memory of a George Strait tape blaring from the cassette player after the crash.

"My cousin flew forward, and her head hit the tape deck and punched in a George Strait tape," she said. "We all had a good laugh about that later."

Her older sister, Karla, was hospitalized 21 days with a broken leg and other injuries, and her cousin was treated and released at Memorial Medical Center, she said.

Patricia suffered a broken back and spinal cord injury that kept her in the hospital 19 days. She then spent seven weeks at Warm Springs Rehabilitation Hospital in Gonzales.

Patricia Mount, who lost the use of her legs in an automobile accident, spends several hours each day learning how to crawl and lift her body with her arms.

"A year ago while I was at Southwest, I wouldn't have thought of all the things I could be thankful for," she says. "But there are a lot of people out there who are a lot worse off than me — some, all they can do is move their head."

Life goes on for Patricia. She takes classes at Del Mar College in the mornings. She has big plans for the future. And she still keeps in touch with old friends.

Reently, she traveled to Kansas City, Mo., to receive an American Farmer Degree, the highest award given by the Future Farmers of America.

More than four years of work went into the award, which she was applying for at the time of the accident in May. To win, she raised chickens, planted cotton and tilled a vegetable garden from her freshman through senior years. She earned $5,000 and invested it in "my 40 acres of cotton."

Today, she still has the cotton field about five miles from her home. But instead of honing her agriculture skills, the bubbly, brown-eyed young woman wants to pursue rehabilitation counseling and use those skills to help handicapped people in the agriculture industry.

Her future is bright, she says, and, day by day, it's looking brighter.

"You can sit there and cry about it and not get anything done, or you can smile and get something done," she says. "I remember thinking 'Why me?' But then, why not me?"

Woman didn't realize she left two boys at truck stop

EL PASO (AP) — A woman en route from Mexico to California drove 85 miles before realizing she had left two boys at an El Paso truck stop where they watched in bewilderment as she drove off.

Ceci Quezada, who works at Food N Fuel, said the unidentified woman stopped for gas at about 8:30 a.m. Sunday. The woman's son and nephew climbed out of the pickup truck camper.

"They were standing over there getting some hot chocolate. They paid for it and everything," said Ms. Quezada.

Then the boys, ages 11 and 14, watched in disbelief as the pickup drove away, along with a van traveling with it. The cousins told Ms. Quezada they were returning home to Los Angeles after spending Christmas in Juarez, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

"I couldn't get over it," said Ms. Quezada. "They didn't say anything. They'd go outside and then come back in. The older one looked so scared. He had tears in his eyes, like 'What are we going to do?' "

Ms. Quezada finally called the El Paso County Sheriff's Department, which notified New Mexico authorities.

"And we were telling all the truckers going west that if they saw the truck and van, to tell them the boys were here," she added.

The woman apparently did not realize she had lost the children until she stopped in Deming, N.M., some 85 miles away. She returned to El Paso about 2½ hours later, picked up the boys and resumed her trip, Ms. Quezada said.

Pedestrian killed in 'freak' accident

DALLAS (AP) — One woman was killed and another injured when an automobile went out of control and sped wildly in reverse through a shopping mall's parking lot, police say.

Sarina Blackman, 26, of Dallas was killed and her mother, 46-year-old Juanita Thompson, was hurt when a car slammed into them outside the Galleria Mall parking lot Monday night, said police investigator R.A. Milner.

Ms. Thompson was in stable condition today at Medical City Hospital, officials said.

"This is the most tragic freak accident I've ever seen," Milner said.

Two young women in a 1982 Datsun 200SX had parked near an entrance to a department store to wait for a friend. When they started the car to move it so another car could get around them, their car locked into reverse at a high speed and careened nearly a quarter-mile through the parking lot.

The car struck a parked vehicle and a wall before lunging forward and striking another wall and Ms. Blackman and Ms. Thompson, who were both, pedestrians, Milner said.

Neither Sara McLeod, 21, of Lake Charles, La., or her passenger in the Datsun was injured, he said.

Famed Shamrock Hotel will be torn down by hand

HOUSTON (AP) — The famed Shamrock Hilton Hotel will be torn down to make way for the Texas Medical Center's expansion plans that officials say should help create thousands of new jobs.

According to a statement released Monday, the hotel and other buildings on the 22.6-acre site will be removed by hand to protect the surrounding neighborhood from explosive demolition.

The medical center bought the site a year ago for $14.9 million. The hotel closed earlier this year and crews have already begun dismantling its interior.

"It will take several months to take down," said Gerald J. Hickman, medical center vice president.

Officials said development of the property could begin in 1987 and will continue through the ensuing decade. As many as seven or eight multi-story buildings may be built.

Texas A&M University will build an institute for biosciences and technology on part of the property, Hickman said.

Eight institutions have discussed the possibility of building on the property, and the medical center also is considering establishing a main building for its 546.8-acre complex, officials said.

Other construction projects planned for the medical center combined with projects planned for the hotel property could add about 10,000 jobs to the area after construction, Hickman said.

Officials said they hope the site will attract nonprofit institutions in medical research, education and patient care.

Jeannie Wilson and Jack Lucarelli star in the action thriller "American Justice" about an ex-police officer who witnesses the killing of a Mexican woman on the Arizona-Mexico border.

Film based on news reports of 'border bandits'

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Lucarelli, the producer and one of the stars of the movie "American Justice," is quick to admit that his name alone won't draw patrons to the box office just yet.

So, add Wilford Brimley and the "Simon & Simon" team of Jameson Parker and Gerald McRaney to Lucarelli and his wife, Jeannie Wilson, and the main cast is complete. Parker is co-producer of the independent production.

"I'm not a recognizable name with a high visibility," Lucarelli said in a recent visit to Dallas for the area opening of the film.

In "American Justice," Lucarelli portrays an ex-cop who visits a friend and deputy sheriff, portrayed by Parker, and witnesses the killing of a young Mexican woman along the Arizona-Mexico border.

When he reports the crime to the local sheriff, played by Brimley, he realizes the killer was one of Brimley's chief deputies, played by McRaney.

McRaney's character, who sports a crew cut and spits a generous amount of tobacco, is the brain behind a group of reprobates who disguise themselves as Border Patrol agents, rob from illegal aliens trying to sneak across the border and, for good villainous measure, carry off Mexican women into bondage.

(Jack) Lucarelli said the idea for the movie ("American Justice") came from news reports he read about so-called "border bandits" who prey on Mexican aliens trying to get into the United States.

Lucarelli's character, Joe Case, tries to find the truth, only to be stymied by the sheriff, who also is involved in the scam.

"It's about an American hero trying to find justice," said Lucarelli.

Justice — at least the type popularized by Charles Bronson — is found only after Parker's character is killed by McRaney with a shotgun that lines up the target with a small laser, and Case returns the favor.

Lucarelli said the idea for the movie came from news reports he read about so-called "border bandits" who prey on Mexican aliens trying to get into the United States. His next project, called "Dolan's Walk," involves prison gangs that have pervaded penitentiaries in California and Texas.

"The prison gangs are as organized as organized crime," he said. "It would be fascinating to make a film about them."

Lucarelli's interest in story lines dealing with law enforcement is not a chance matter. The California native's father was a police officer.

"I like action-genre films," he said. "I'm fascinated by law enforcement."

Lucarelli, who is considering Texas as a shooting site for his next venture, previously appeared in "The Boy Who Cried Werewolf," "Simon & Simon," "The Rockford Files" and "Celebrity."

Ms. Wilson, a former Miss Texas, wad formerly a regular on "Simon & Simon," and was a regular in the short-lived television series "Street Hawk."

Deer slaughtered in zoo

LUFKIN (AP) — Police searched Monday for at least two people who either shot or stabbed an eight-point buck in the Ellen Trout Zoo then dragged the carcass from the compound.

Blood was found Monday morning in the compound where a herd of whitetail deer are kept, and the 150-pound buck was missing from the herd, authorities said.

Police believed that two people entered the zoo by crawling over the fence about 4 a.m. Monday and stabbed or shot the deer with a small caliber pistol, then dragged the body away and transported it from the zoo in a car or truck.

Officials asked taxidermists and food processors to look out for anyone bringing in an animal similar to the slaughtered deer.

Judge injured in accident

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Edd B. Keyes, a Tom Green County judge since 1959, missed the swearing-in ceremony for his eighth term because he was hospitalized in Dallas with injuries suffered in a Christmas Eve automobile accident.

The accident broke four bones in Keyes' ankle, broke two ribs and caused a knee injury, said his wife, Frances. Mrs. Keyes was also injured in the accident, but not as seriously, she said Monday.

"Both patients are listed in satisfactofy condition," Presbyterian Hospital spokeswoman Pat Standlee said late Monday, the day the judge was to be sworn in for another four-year term. "Judge Keyes is still in ICU. There has been no change in their condition."

Keyes, 80, and his wife, 73, were preparing to make a turn near their son's home in Dallas when their car collided with another vehicle Dec. 24.

Missionary files lawsuit

ATLANTA (AP) — Saying he was forced out of a Snellville congregation, a Baptist missionary has filed a $2 million libel suit against the church and its former pastor.

The Rev. Pat Clark and his wife Dodie Clark, who now live in Henderson, Texas, filed suit in U.S. District Court against the Dogwood Drive Missionary Baptist Church of Snellville Inc., and its former pastor, Bobby Bear.

Clark contends Bear expelled him from the church in May 1985 and then sent letters to the 2,000 member churches of the American Baptist Association, informing them that Clark had been dismissed from the church "for immoral conduct" involving two women members.

Clark denies that he ever did anything improper involving the two women church members.

Escapee remains at large

GALVESTON (AP) — Area law enforcement officials continued their search Monday for one of two inmates who overpowered a guard and escaped from the Galveston County Jail.

Deputy Delbert Runyun was making a routine check of inmates at about midnight when inmates Robert Ruiz, and Ronnie Perez Myers, both 24, wielded a knife and overpowered the guard, said a sheriff's spokesman who asked not to be identified.

The two escaped by kicking out bricks from the south end of a jail catwalk, dropping from the third floor to an overhang then on to the groud where they fled on foot.

Myers, jailed on charges of aggravated robbery and parole violations, was arrested by police shortly after the escape about six blocks from the jail. But Ruiz, jailed on burglary charges, remains at large.

Runyun, 51, was treated and released from St. Mary's Hospital.

Eldery abuse studied

AUSTIN (AP) — Most abuse of the elderly results from unintentional neglect, according to a report prepared by a special Senate subcommittee.

The report said such abuse is the type least understood by the public.

Charlotte Flynn of the Austin Gray Panthers, which sponsored the study, said, "Although physical abuse makes headlines, far more elderly persons are harmed by unintentional abuse, which includes neglect and the lack of needed services."

The study for the Senate Select Subcommittee on Elder Abuse compiled comments from more than 1,600 professionals who deal with the elderly.

During the 16-month period surveyed, the professionals reported experience with more than 11,000 instances of abuse of the elderly in Texas, according to Ms. Flynn.

At least 34 die in accidents

Associated Press

At least 34 people died in Texas traffic accidents during the long Christmas holiday weekend, according to police reports.

Twenty-one people were killed during the official Department of Public Safety counting period that began 6 p.m. Tuesday and ended at midnight Christmas Day. The Associated Press' count continued through midnight Sunday.

DPS Director Jim Adams had predicted that 23 people would die on the state's highways and streets during the agency's 54-hour Christmas holiday counting period.

The agency forecasts another 18 traffic-related deaths during the 54-hour New Year's period that lasts from 6 p.m. Dec. 30 to midnight New Year's Day.

Telethon benefits college

AUSTIN (AP) — A telethon to benefit Huston-Tillotson College raised $41,474, the most ever collected by the annual fund-raiser, officials say.

"Some collections are still coming in, and we're hoping for $50,000 by the end of the week," said William Akins, assistant superintendent of the Austin Independent School District and a host for the telethon.

The local fund-raiser was held in conjunction with the Lou Rawls "Parade of Stars" telethon for the United Negro College Fund, which raised more than $10 million nationally.

Gloria Pennington, another local host, said the telethon last year raised more than $32,000. This was the fifth year Huston-Tillotson participated.

Officers seek suspect

AUSTIN (AP) — Law enforcement officials today were still looking for the man who shot a state trooper during a traffic stop, the Department of Public Safety said.

Answers to travel questions can make even holiday travel easier

Traveling any time of year can be hectic, but during the holiday seasons hectic can turn into horrible without proper planning.

In the following paragraphs Patsy Welmaker of Adventure Travel answers some frequently asked questions and makes suggestions for a smoother, happier trip.

Patsy Welmaker of Adventure Travel answers questions frequently asked by travelers and gives suggestions on how to get the best deal. "Plan ahead," is the key, according to Patsy.

"To avoid disappointment over holiday plans reservations should be made three to six months in advance," she notes. "For high (peak) periods of travel, such as spring break or summer vacations, five to six months in advance is recommended."

Sometimes last minute spaces do become available. "But to get the best prices and choice accommodations, the travel agent can better please the customer when they have time to research," this travel expert explains.

How agencies make money when it costs the consumer no more to purchase tickets (and sometimes less) through them than if they had booked it themselves is another frequently asked question.

"Agencies are paid commissions by airline companies, tour operators, auto rentals and hotel and cruise lines to do the bookings for them," Welmaker explains. "Travel agencies represent all the different companies involved. Whereas if the individual calls for prices he will get only the prices of the company called, not a comparison of prices that a travel consultant can give them."

The biggest problems facing travel agencies today are cancellations and refunds, according to Welmaker. These cost the agency in time and expense yet no compensation is paid.

"In most cases tour companies and airlines that charge cancellation fees retain it themselves and nothing is paid to the agency," shesays. "Customers expect refunds in full even though it is an expense borne by the agency to refund the entire cost of the tickets."

In some parts of the U.S. agencies are charging fees for consultation, refunds and cancellations, the Adventure Travel expert points out. Although the practice has not yet hit West Texas, it could at any time.

"A simple phone call cancelling before the ticket is run would save the agencies a lot of frustration and money," she adds.

While all agencies have access to the same information the only difference is the service and personal attention that a customer gets from his travel consultant.

"We at Adventure Travel have experienced, personable agents in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere," Welmaker comments. "Come by and see us or call 683-4211 the next time you are planning your vacation. In fact, it is time to start thinking about your summer trip today. The early bird gets the best a full service agency can provide."

Adventure Travel, a full service agency, is open weekdays 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Located at 16 Oakridge Square (corner of Wadley and Garfield), Adventure Travel has information on airline tickets, cruises, tours and rail for business travel, leisure, vacations and groups. Telex services are available to the public and parking is free.

Medical Air Supply provides Accu-Chek glucose monitors

Diabetes is the third leading cause of death in the United States (after heart disease and cancer), claiming in excess of 300,000 lives annually according to the National Commission on Diabetes.

–Approximately 10 million Americans now have diabetes, although 2 out of every 5 are unaware of their disease. The life expectancy of diabetics is approximately one-third less than that of the general population.

For these reasons and the accompanying complications diabetes can cause, proper patient monitoring of the disease is truly a matter of life and death.

Since their introduction in 1974 the technology of glucose monitoring devices has continued to improve, according to the experts at Medical Air Supply. Microprocessor-controlled reflectance meters are the latest technology.

Medical Air Supply, a Permian Basin home health care company, leases and sells glucose monitoring devices, as well as other medical supplies and equipment.

The basic procedure for the use of these devices begins with the patient obtaining a sample of capillary blood and placing it onto the appropriate reagent strip. Depending upon the reagent strip used, the blood sample is left on the strip for a specified amount of time, usually between 30-60 seconds.

At this point the blood is removed from the strip, after which the reagent strip is inserted into the monitor to obtain the blood glucose reading.

While early monitors required frequent, complicated calibration, technological advances have improved and simplified the procedure in more recent models, such as the Accu-Chek II recommended by the experts at Medical Air Supply.

The Accu-Chek II utilizes a plastic calibration strip to adjust for lot-to-lot variation in the reagent strip. The plastic calibration strip, found in each package of Chemstrip bG, is inserted into the Accu-Chek II and remains there until that vial of strips is finished.

Although blood sugar testing is one of the best ways to control diabetes, prior to the introduction of these monitors patients could only go to the doctor or hospital to have a blood test done. Testing an individual's own blood sugar allows them to have blood sugar results immediately and plan diet, exercise and medication changes.

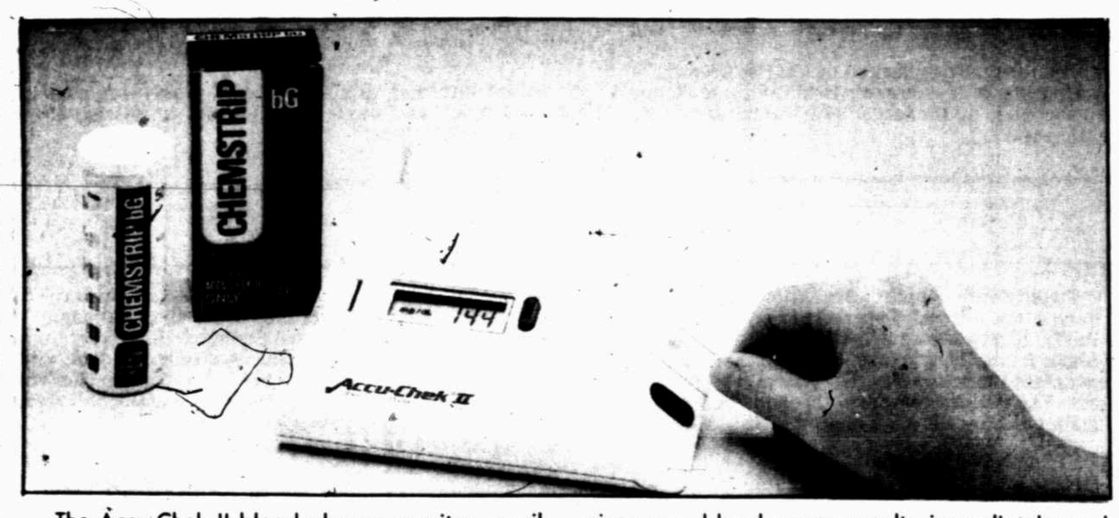

Most importantly, Medical Air Supply offers instruction in the home to help the patient and the family understand the medical problem and the treatment.

Medical Air Supply also provides respiratory equipment, durable medical equipment, including adjustable beds, wheelchairs and walkers. On the physician's order, this Permian Basin Company will deliver and set up the needed equipment anywhere in the area with no delivery charge.

To further aid their clients, Medical Air Supply will do the filing for Medicare, Medicaid and insurance claims.

Medical Air Supply does accept indigent patients on the physician's referral and will try to find funding for those patients with no insurance.

For more information, call collect 332-6976 or go by 706 Adams Street in Odessa. Office hours are Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Accu-Chek II blood glucose monitor, available at Medical Air Supply, is one of the best ways to help control diabetes. Blood sugar testing gives you blood sugar results immediately and allows you to plan your diet, exercise and make necessary medication changes.

David Lewallen and Harold Lewallen look on as Curtis Lewallen and Norman Meador shake hands to represent the assumption of Meador Sales and Service's operations by Commercial Ice Machine Company. CIMCO is located at 501 East 2nd Street, Odessa.

The Commercial Ice Machine Company expands operations

Commercial Ice Machine Company is happy to announce that they have assumed the operation of Meador Sales and Service, Inc. Meador Sales and Service was founded by Norman Meador in 1936. Meador has served the Permian Basin's commercial refrigeration needs for 50 years.

Upon Norman's semi-retirement four years ago, he turned the business over to his son, Dan Meador. Dan has moved to Charlotte, N.C. taking a position with Larkin Refrigeration Company.

As many know, CIMCO has been in the ice machine sales, service and leasing business in the Permian Basin for 25 years. In addition to ice machines they also sell, lease and service soft drink dispensing equipment and soft ice cream and yogurt equipment.

CIMCO also offers complete commercial refrigeration sales and service. They have seven qualified service technicians, a well stocked part department, radio dispatched trucks and a toll-free telephone line.

With the addition of Meador Sales & Service to Commercial Ice Machine Company comes the Tyler line of refrigeration equipment. Tyler has been one of the biggest names in super market equipment since the 20's. This line of equipment includes both reach-in and walk-in refrigerators, meat cases and produce cases.

Commercial Ice Machine Company would like to express their sincere appreciation for the patronage of those who are now their customers.

To those of you who are new to CIMCO they would welcome the opportunity to take care of your needs in all of the above mentioned areas.

Pre-tax sale gives you one more reason to shop Wood You Like

Wood You Like (The Unpainted Furniture Store) is clearing out their stock before they have to pay taxes on the inventory. Prices are reduced throughout the store, so it's the perfect opportunity to take that money you got for Christmas and select the quality furniture you want.

Whether you are looking for a bookcase, shelving units, desk, bedroom furniture or dining room furniture, you should seriously consider selecting unpainted furniture. Kay explained that the hand-selected wood in unpainted furniture is BETTER than the wood in pre-finished products. The wood is clearer and more evenly color-matched.

Unfinished pieces, she added, have MORE wood in them. Wood You Like purchases solid wood pieces whenever possible. If these aren't available, they select quality plywoods, which have layer on layer of wood. Veneers, which are thin layers of wood on particle board, are a last resort. (Expect 80% of finished furniture to be comprised of veneers.)

Kay did say they stock some particle board pieces for specific use, such as painted furniture in children's rooms.

Kay cited another advantage to furniture at Wood You Like - your FINISH will be BETTER. Wood You Like has the "know how" it takes to help you get just the finish you want. The store's stain class on video tape can be viewed in the shop or at home. In addition, you'll get all the correct advice, stains and finishes you'll need.

Kay also offers custom staining. You can do as much or as little of the staining job as you want, leaving the rest to professionals. Wood You Like offers a truly hand-rubbed finish, which can't be expected from a mass production process. The hand rubbing, Kay said, makes the piece more resistant to spills. Kay said they will even do stripping and refinishing.

Many people don't realize the amount of personal attention that goes into pieces stained at Wood You Like. "We don't run it through a machine. Quality work doesn't happen that way. Quality work happens the old fashion way," Kay said.

Unpainted furniture is also CUSTOM furniture. You can match a piece with furniture you already have. You can decide how much or how little distressing you want. You choose the wood type, be it oak, alder, pine, white birch or maple. Just about anything you can imagine can be special ordered.

Lastly, Kay said, unpainted furniture can SAVE you money. IF you find a pre-finished piece that is of comparable wood quality and construction, you can expect it to cost two to three times more. Right now during the big pre-tax clearance sale, you'll save even more.

Delivery service is available, or haul it yourself and get a discount.

MasterCard, VISA and Discover are accepted. A 60 day lay away plan requires only 25 percent down. Financing is available also.

Visit the store in Imperial Shopping Center at Midkiff and Wadley or call 697-1321. The hours are Mon.-Fri. 11am.- 7pm., Sat. 10am.-6pm.

Kay at Wood You Like says this is a perfect time to select beautiful, high quality, unpainted furniture. Right now, prices are cut so inventory can be reduced before the tax man comes.

Elderly woman active in politics, attends school

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — The bulges in Edna White's worn leather wallet aren't credit cards — and they're certainly not cash. Her fat stack of paper and plastic rectangles are more of a road map to a unique, complicated woman.

But the Alton native's fistful of senior citizen discount cards and memberships could herald a political power-broker.

Mrs. White, 76, is proud of memberships in the local, state and national Republican Party; the local, state and national Republican women's organizations; the GOP Victory Fund; and the union representing bartenders, cooks, dishwashers and waiters.

She's been Republican precinct committee person in her midtwon Alton neighborhood for 10 years.

She prizes her congressional VIP card. "I never did get to Washington. But I want to go. They'll show me around and tell me about things."

A dishwasher for 40 years and an employee of the Hotel Stratford for 20, she has a shop steward's card that not only attests to her union activity but gives her entree into other food establishments. She takes a professional interest in other folks' kitchens.

"They're always nice to me. Some aren't even union, but they know me," she says.

The wallet also contains a student ID card, signifying the approaching realization of a lifelong dream.

Mrs. White hopes to complete an associate degree in political science at Lewis and Clark Community College next summer.

Mrs. White's account of her own history is as jaunty as the flag pin on the lapel of her navy blue blazer.

"I'm very proud of my heritage," says Mrs. White, the daughter of a housekeeper for an Alton mogul. "My great-grandfather John Cross was a captain in the Civil War. He farmed 150 acres given to him by the government. My dad worked for Western Cartridge. He was a workaholic. I guess that's where I got it."

Although she was a good student, she dropped out of school at 14 to marry. She reared a son and was widowed in 1945. Though she had earned a beauty school diploma in 1939 and even studied in New York, she didn't follow that path, she said.

One thing led to another, and she began her long career as a dishwasher and kitchen helper.

After nursing her mother through a final illness in 1974, Mrs. White returned to school and got her high school equivalency degree.

Age has slowed the aspiring student little.

On a typical Monday, she hikes from her home to a bus stop nearly a mile away to go to school. There, she grabs a bite to eat, takes a last-minute look at her notes for a psychology quiz and dashes off to class.

Psychology over, she sprints for Hatheway Hall and pulls her tomato red leotard out of her tote bag to suit up for her next class — jazz dancing.

"I signed up for dancing because the piano class was filled," Mrs. White says. But now she loves dancing.

"She participates like mad," says instructor Betty Pars. "She makes the whole class work by her enthusiasm. She never sits down like some students do when they're worn out or don't get something. She keeps on trying."

That approach reflects a personal philosophy.

"I'm a person who keeps pressing and pressing, trying to make that goal, Mrs. White says. "I feel like I did when I was 25.

"I always like to listen to something new. You never get too old to learn. And I've found that to be very true."

Calf acts like dog

GEORGETOWN, Ky. (AP) — It looks like a calf, it walks like a calf, it occasionally consents to eat grass like a calf and, at 425 pounds, it's as heavy as a calf. But Mitzi thinks she's a dog.

Mitzi chases cars that pull into the driveway, whines for food or water and butts her head into people when she wants more table scraps or more attention.

"I used to only joke about it," said Lillian Courtney. "But as she got older, I really started to believe she thinks she is a dog. She won't even go near the other cows — she's afraid of them."

Mrs. Courtney's husband, John, found Mitzi in a field after her mother died while giving birth nine months ago.

He took her to the house, where Mrs. Courtney bottle-fed her and later let her run in a fenced-in area with puppies.

"She never knew her mother, so she never knew what a cow was," said Mrs. Courtney.

"We want to keep her around, but sooner or later she's got to get used to the other cows," Courtney said. "But we're probably not going to eat her."

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — While ski resort operators in the Sierra Nevada have been left high and dry for the holidays, there's snow galore at one spot near the temperate California coast.

Youngsters, some of whom had never seen snow, waited as long as 45 minutes in line for a five-second slide down a small hill packed with man-made snow at Marine World Africa USA.

But the slide down, with sheets of plastic serving as sleds, wasn't the only attraction for those unacquainted with the white stuff.

"It tastes good," said 3-year-old Paige Linville of Vallejo after encountering snow for the first time. "Cold and wet. I like it."

Observed Samantha Potter, 7: "It's like a Slurpee."

Payoff for college bowl games

In thousands of dollars paid to each university for participating in the bowl game

Underdog role incentive

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHOENIX (AP) - The consensus of Penn State players is that their role as the underdog in Friday night's Fiesta Bowl creates an even greater incentive to beat top-ranked Miami in the battle for the national football championship.

Miami has been installed a 7- to an 8½-point favorite over No. 2 Penn State, depending on which part of the country you're in.

Apparently the oddsmakers figure the passing of All-American quarterback Vinny Testaverde gives the Hurricanes a solid edge over the balanced offense of the Nittany Lions.

State safety Ray Isom observes, "We enjoy being an underdog. Anytime we're expected to win and we win, nobody gets excited. But anytime you're expected to lose and you win, then people start turning their heads and noticing what you accomplished."

Isom noted, "The bottom line is that in order for us to be recognized as good, we're going to have to win the national championship."

Isom says not to believe the players or coaches who say they don't know the point spread and don't care.

"You can't help but read the newspaper. And the more they talk us down, the more we're expected to lose, the harder we work, the more excited we get about the game.

Fiesta Odds

I think it helps our team. Anytime we're an underdog I expect us to play better than we do when we're expected to win."

Quarterback John Shaffer is inclined to agree with Isom.

"I think going in as an underdog takes off a little pressure," Shaffer said. "They (the Hurricanes) may be a favorite but that doesn't give them a first down or any points come opening kickoff.

"Whether we're underdogs or picked to win, it's not going to discourage us or help us at all. We have to play the best game we can play."

Linebacker Trey Bauer said: "You really can't pay attention to that, and I'm sure they (the Hurricanes) don't. It's going to be us against them."

Coach Joe Paterno pointed out that Penn State in its only other underdog role this season went to Alabama and soundly beat the Crimson Tide, then ranked second behind Miami.

He also recalled that the Lions were underdogs in a couple other Fiesta Bowls (against Ohio State and Southern California) and won.

"It's a role we're fairly comfortable with," Paterno said. "As long as our kids don't think we're underdogs and are confident we can win, it doesn't bother me at all.

"And we don't think we're underdogs. I couldn't tell you who the favorite is in this game."

Against comparable schedules, the teams are fairly even statistically. Miami leads in scoring offense 38.2-29.6. Penn State's 11.2 points per game allowed is slightly better than the Hurricanes' 12.4.

It's plus 24 to plus 18 for Miami in turnover ratio. Penn State is ranked third in the nation against the rush; Miami is not among the leaders.

Miami is 10th in the country against the pass and the Nittany Lions aren't ranked. This department could be the main reason for the Hurricanes status as a favorite. It means the nation's best passer, Testaverde, is going against a suspect pass defense.

Miami is fifth and Penn State 12th among the leaders in total defense.

On pass offense, Miami is sixth and State unlisted in the top 20. But in rushing, Penn State is 14th and Miami off the board.

The Lions are ranked second in the nation in kickoff returns and Miami isn't rated. Neither is listed in punt returns or punting.

Individually, Miami's Testaverde leads the passers, and free safety Bennie Blades the pass interceptors. State's Blair Thomas is second in kickoff returns.

Roses, as in Bowl, make Sun Devils nervous

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Arizona State Coach John Cooper said Monday his team's first appearance in the Rose Bowl will bring anxious moments.

"There's no question we'll be nervous," Cooper said during a break in preparation for the New Year's Day game against Michigan. "I'll have butterflies. We have to stay close early and not make mistakes where we'd be three or four touchdowns behind. We'll have no alibis, no excuses for not playing well."

The No. 8 Sun Devils are the first school from Arizona to represent the Pacific-10 in the Rose Bowl. Cooper has been involved in two games as an assistant coach.

"We feel we have a slight advantage since we've played in the Rose Bowl (against UCLA) the last two years," Cooper said. "We've been in the dressing rooms, played in the Rose Bowl and a lot of players are from this area. If there's any advantage, we'll have it.

Rose Bowl

"We've been here since the 20th (of December) and seen all the sights. If we win the ballgame, all we've done is right. This game is the greatest thing that has ever happened to me as a coach. It's not if we win or lose the ballgame, it's really how we play."

Arizona State was 9-0-1 before falling to Arizona 34-17 in the final game of the regular season.

"Disappointments only last as long as you let them," Cooper said. "We're 9-1-1 and we're here. I haven't thought about the game since the Monday after it. We have had more intensity in our practices than we've had. Whether it's due to that game, I don't know."

Bo Schembechler, the coach of No. 4 Michigan, spent much of his time during the news conference answering questions about the Big Ten's poor record in the Rose Bowl.

"You're asking the views of an uneducated man," Schembechler said. "I'm the worst guy to ask."

Schembechler's teams have won just once in seven appearances in Pasadena.

"We had four practices in Ann Arbor and three really good practices here," he said. "It always takes us a little time to go from artificial turf to natural grass. It was slow at first, but it's gotten better and better."

Schembecher said ASU is the best team his squad will play all year.

"They have a good quarterback, strong backs and excellent receivers," he said. "They have the best return game in the country and their defense is great. Ohio State is a great football team, but I don't think they're quite as good defensively as Arizona State. Playing the toughest team on our schedule is the way it should be."

Game has changed

Associated Press
From Staff Reports

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — The mastermind of Texas A&M's high-scoring offense was the hero of the 1963 Cotton Bowl.

Lynn Amedee kicked two field goals and recovered a fumble that led to LSU's only touchdown in a 13-0 victory over Texas. He was voted the game's outstanding offensive player.

"I remember it was a big deal because we completed 21 passes," said Amedee, who was the Bengal Tigers' starting quarterback. "Kevin Murray may have that many in the first half this Thursday."

The Aggies, champions of the Southwest Conference, rated two-point favorites over the Ohio State Buckeyes, co-champions of the Big Ten Conference in the 51st Cotton Bowl New Year's Day.

Amedee, who became A&M's offensive coordinator two years ago, has helped Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill turn things around.

The Aggies were a .500 team under Sherrill for three years until Amedee's arrival. With Amedee calling the plays, the Aggies are 19-4.

Cotton Bowl

"JACKIE AND I had been friends for a long time," Amedee said. "He knows I know offense. He understands what I'm trying to do. You can't be successful with two or three guys calling the plays.

Amedee added, "Jackie has been very good about letting me call the plays."

Amedee has been interviewed for several head coaching positions in the last two weeks, including the LSU job.

"I would have loved to go to LSU but it didn't work out," Amedee said. "I've got a pretty good deal here particularly with (quarterback) Kevin Murray coming back. We should have a great year next year."

The Aggies have led the SWC in offense the last two years and, under Amedee, Murray has become the all-time A&M record holder in every passing category.

"Our offense is no secret," said Amedee, who prefers to have the pass set up the running game. "We try to isolate our best offensive players on people. Sometimes we will go into a game with 30, 40, or 50 formations."

AMEDEE said Ohio State, the first Big Ten team to play in the Cotton Bowl, worries him.

"I've looked at every game this year and two games on film last year and I don't see any weaknesses," Amedee said. "Ohio State has excellent techniques and excellent tackling. They swarm to the football. They are really good."

Texas A&M finished the season third in the nation in total offense while the Buckeyes were 12th nationally in defense.

"Our philosophy is to pass first and to run second but we ended up with yardage pretty well balanced this season," Amedee said. "We feel we can do what we need to do to win any game."

The Aggies have been working out at the Cotton Bowl under the watchful eye of regular SWC officials.

"We like to do that because it makes the practices more intense and cuts down on mistakes," Amedee said.

Look deeper, advises ex-gridder

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Steve Courson, a former South Carolina football player who is writing a book about the use of steriods and other drugs in college and professional football, says the NFL and the NCAA need to look at why players use drugs.

"The NCAA and the NFL ought to take a closer look at the game, instead of just pointing the finger," Courson said. "They should look at why guys are doing it (steroids)."

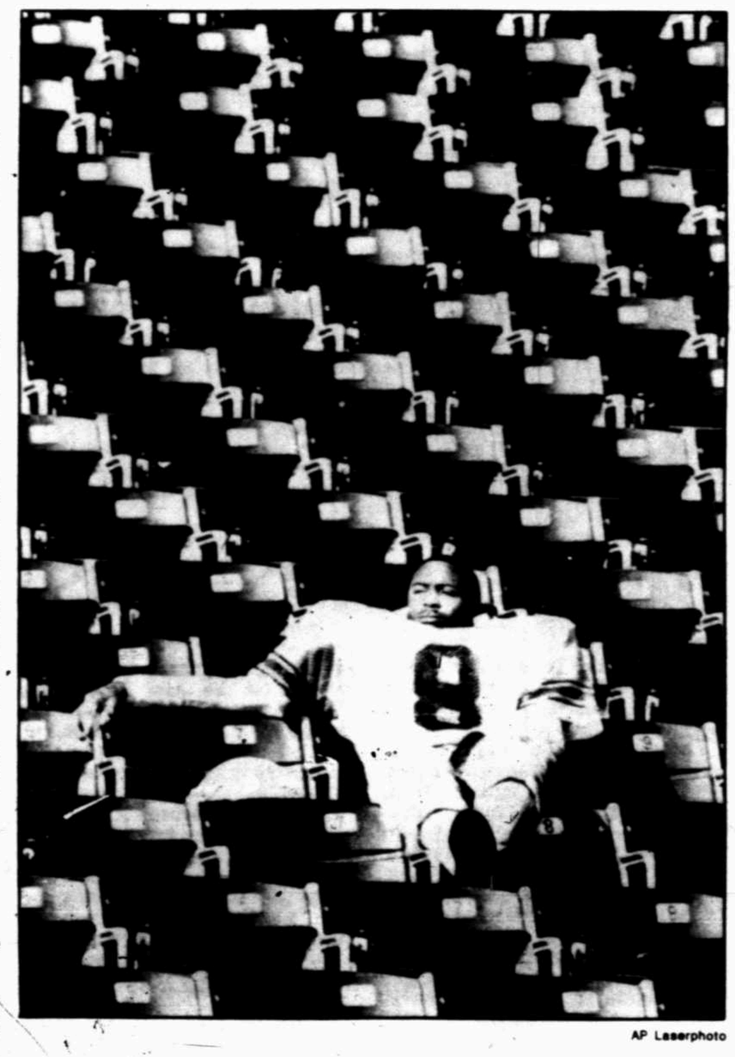

Courson, 31, who played on Super Bowl championship teams during his nine years in the NFL, has some advice for the NCAA.

"Instead of testing players for steroids," he said, "NCAA officials ought to put on pads and see what the modern game has turned into.

"A lot of people say, 'Oh, my God, they're taking steroids.' Those people ought to have the experience of lining up third or fourth-and-one in college and the pros. It's a war out there. That's why players take drugs."

COURSON, who lives in Jackson, Wyo., is writing a book about the widespread use of steroids and other drugs by pro and college players. The book is tentatively titled, "War in the Trenches, the Chemical Battlefield."

Courson said he's taken steroids. He said he first took them as an 18-year-old, 260-pound freshman South Carolina lineman in 1973.

Catching Some Rays

Ohio State linebacker Scott Leach catches some sun while waiting for practice to start at Texas Stadium in Irving. Buckeyes face Texas A&M in Cotton Bowl New Year's Day.

Tennesse holds off Minnesota

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee, which had trouble stopping the run all season, stymied Rickie Foggie, Minnesota's scrambling quarterback, and won the Liberty Bowl Monday night.

Jeff Francis threw three touchdown passes, two to Joey Clinkscales, and the Volunteers stopped Foggie and the Gophers' option attack in a 21-14 triumph in the 28th annual classic.

Francis hit Clinkscales with scoring strikes of 16 and 18 yards and connected with fullback William Howard on a 23-yarder. Minnesota, down 14-0 at one point, could manage only one touchdown, an 11-yard run by Foggie. The Gophers' other points came on field goals of 25 and 27 yards by Chip Lohmiller.

Francis directed the Volunteers to a 66-yard, 5-play drive to break a 14-14 deadlock in the final quarter. The drive climaxed with his 16-yard pass to Clinkscales.

Francis, who was named the game's most valuable player, completed 22 of 31 passes for 243 yards. His three touchdowns was a Tennessee record for bowl games. Clinkscales wound up with seven catches for 72 yards and Tennessee's other wide receiver, Anthony Miller, finished with six catches for 72 yards.

For Minnesota, Foggie completed 10 of 25 passes for 136 yards and Darrell Thompson rushed for 136 yards on 25 carries. Foggie carried 12 times for 52 yards.

Tennessee finished its season by winning five straight games and improving its season mark to 7-5. The Gophers ended up 6-6.

TED BATTLES

Ags back for second in a row

BATTLES

Texas A&M will be playing in its second straight Cotton Bowl game when the Aggies face Ohio State University Thursday.

That hasn't happened since the Homer Norton days when A&M earned back-to-back berths in 1941 and 1942, edging Fordham, 13-12, and then losing to Alabama, 29-21.

Not even the A&M national champions of 1939 made it and not even Bear Bryant's Aggies of the mid-1950s, on probation, earned a trip to Dallas on New Year's Day.

Although the Cotton Bowl game was a regular on the post-season schedule by 1939, the Southwest Conference hadn't yet agreed to send its champion to the game.

Consequently, instead of the SWC-national champions playing in Dallas in the 1940 game, it was Clemson, a 6-3 winner over Boston College. The game, in retrospect, turned out to be more significant for the coaches who brought the teams to Dallas than the combatants.

FRANK LEAHY, who was soon to make Notre Dame into the scourge of the nation, coached BC and Jesse Neely, who was to become a legend in the SWC, was the Clemson coach.

Still, the game must have gotten the founding fathers thinking and to insure the success of the yet-young bowl game, the SWC was talked into supplying its champion as the host team, perhaps the first conference-bowl affiliation of its kind.

The Pacific Coast Conference champion habitually wound up as the Rose Bowl host, but that was something that evolved over the years. It wasn't until the Big 10 agreement after World War II that it was put in writing.

If the agreement had been signed a year earlier, A&M would have had three straight champions in Dallas.

As it was, the two trips had to last a long time. A&M didn't return until 1968 when Gene Stallings beat Alabama and his old coach at A&M, Paul "Bear" Bryant. The Bear didn't like to lose, but he was so proud that it was "one of his boys" that he carried Bebes off the field himself.

THURSDAY'S game doesn't carry any national championship implications. That's all being settled out in Tempe, Ariz., Jan. 2 when Penn State challenges Miami.

However, it should be a memorable event in that Ohio State is the first Big 10 team ever to come to Dallas for the classic. Maybe it's for that reason that there's more interest in the game than at any time in recent years. Still, any time you get the Aggies, or Arkansas, to Dallas, you've got a built-in following and the excitement that goes with it, regardless of the stakes.

Nevertheless, the Cotton Bowl has had its share of games with No. 1 impact.

The first came in 1960 when Syracuse's Sizeable Seven and Ernie Davis, No. 1 in the land, came to Dallas and beat Texas, 23-14.

The 1963 game was significant for the present Aggies for it was the year Quarterback Lynn Amedee led LSU to a 13-0 win over Texas. Amedee is an Aggie assistant this year.

However, the first out-and-out national championship game came in 1964 when No. 1 Texas withstood the challenge of No. 2 Navy and Roger Staubach, 28-6.

IN 1965, Arkansas earned the Football Writers Association national championship with a 10-7 win over Nebraska. And the following year, all Arkansas had to do was win to clinch its second straight title. Instead, LSU, led by Joe Labruzzo ended the Razorbacks 20-game unbeaten string with a 14-7 win.

Notre Dame, which hadn't been to a bowl since the days of the Four Horsemen, broke its close to a half century fast by accepting an invitation to play Texas in 1970 and the Longhorns had their hands full before retaining their title, 21-17.

Wild Card Super Bowl chances are wild indeed

By MIKE RABUN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The record shows that the chances of a wild-card team winning the Super Bowl are about the same as an airplane getting from here to there on time.

It happens, but when it does it is worth mentioning.

It was worth mentioning six seasons ago when the Oakland Raiders did it. But they are the only one to do it since the AFL-NFL merger in 1970 and from the looks of it they will still be the only one after this string of nine postseason games runs its course.

The New York Jets and Washington Redskins probably did not put any special fear into the Cleveland Browns or Chicago Bears during their wild-card victories — neither of which will go down as games to remember.

The current format, in which two wild cards meet in each conference on the first weekend of the playoffs, began in 1978. Throw out the strike year, in which eight teams from each conference were allowed to compete for the Super Bowl, and this makes the eighth time they have done things this way.

And in the previous seven years, the record of the wild-card teams is 10-13. Forty percent of those victories came from Oakland when it captured the Super Bowl in 1980. Of the 14 wild-card game winners since 1978, six won their next game.

Six of the most recent eight wild-card winners lost the next time out — the exceptions being the 1983 Seattle Seahawks (who won a divisional game before losing the AFC championship game to the Raiders) and the 1985 New England Patriots (who made it to the Super Bowl before being overwhelmed by Chicago).

Pro Files

So history is against the Jets and the Redskins. And so are the cold facts.

The Jets needed to win last Sunday or slink back home. To have gone from the best team in the NFL to losers of their last five regular-season games was bad enough. But to have been summarily drummed out of the playoffs by a team that scores more points with its special teams than with its offense would have been downright embarrassing.

Now that the Jets survived that potential humiliation, they can go quietly. New York's defense will still be hurting against Cleveland next Saturday and the Browns running game should have a pleasant afternoon.

New York's chief hope is that the Browns will be so hyped up by their first home playoff game in six years that they will be too excited to properly tie their shoes.

Cleveland, by the way, hasn't won a playoff game since 1969 — the last year that the Chiefs won one.

Washington won its wild-card game against Los Angeles chiefly because the Rams forgot to hold the ball.

The Chicago Bears usually remember that sort of thing. In addition, the Bears delight in taking it away from the other players. And if they can't do that they will simply beat them up.

Everybody raved about the Bears defense a year ago and justly so. But with Buddy Ryan gone and the Bears playing a different scheme, the same guys have gone out and done it better than they did in their Super Bowl season.

Jay Schroeder has had a wonderful year, but if the Washington quarterback plans to complete a lot of passes next Saturday in Chicago he had best have his running shoes on.

Everything possible is stacked against the wild-card teams. They have to travel and they have to play a game while the division champions rest — bringing the possibility of additional injury such as the Redskins suffered while beating the Rams.

This year the wild-card winners face the further discomfort of having to play their divisional round game six days after their wild-card victory.

That means they will have one less day than usual to enjoy the victory. Which is a shame, because the record book suggests it is going to be the last one of the season for the Redskins and Jets.

OU's Jones shuns spotlight

By BOB KEIM

MIAMI (UPI) — The personality of Oklahoma's strongside linebacker took a 180-degree turn when Dante Jones was named to replace suspended All-America Brian Bosworth.

The Sooners went from a brash, outspoken character in Bosworth to a quiet, reserved person in Jones. The Oklahoma coaches believe the difference in talent at the position will not be as noticeable as the change in personalities when the No. 3 Sooners, 10-1, meet 10th-ranked Arkansas, 9-2, in the Orange Bowl Thursday night.

During the regular season, Jones and Paul Migliazzo alternated at the weakside linebacker spot while Bosworth played on the strong side. With Bosworth out of the Orange Bowl because he used steroids, the Sooners switched Jones to Bosworth's spot.

Coaches describe Jones as an intelligent player who has good quickness. Jones describes himself as a shy person who would rather not have the media attention that comes with replacing the outspoken Bosworth.

"I'm trying to stay in the background," Jones, a 6-5, 225 pound junior from Dallas, said. "I'd rather stay in the background and stay away from the press. I'm basically a shy person. I'm just kind of a quiet guy, I'll probably spend most of my time (in Miami) at the hotel. I'm too stingy to go into the city and spend my money."

Jones is the third-leading tackler on the Oklahoma defense with 59 tackles, and is tied for the team lead with three interceptions. He started six games this year and got 1986 off to a good start with a strong showing in last year's Oklahoma win over Penn State in the Orange Bowl.

"In the fourth quarter of the game against Penn State, he played a better fourth quarter than anybody on the field," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "The only problem Dante's got is he has played the weak side and the strong side and weak side linebackers play differently; they have different keys.

"But linebacking instincts come through no matter what side you play on."

That is something Jones is counting on.

"Linebacker is linebacker, so hopefully I should be able to pick it up pretty easy," Jones said. "Usually me and Migliazzo are alternating, so I've got to get my mind so I'll be in there every series. Brian made a lot of tackles, so I guess I'll have to make those tackles now."

The news about Bosworth caught Jones by surprise, "I was shocked," he said, but now he is beginning to realize how difficult it is to take the place of a star player.

"I feel a lot of pressure," he said. "I guess everybody will be looking at me to see what I can do. If I have a good game, fine. If not, everybody will say 'See, that's how much they need Brian.' I have confidence in myself. I think I'll do a pretty good job."

One reason Jones shies away from media attention is that he believes he has been a key performer all season for the Sooners, and he is disappointed many people view him as a "no name" that is replacing an All-America.

"I started six games this year and I started six games last year, including the Orange Bowl," he said. "This is my fourth year at Oklahoma and I think I'll be OK. I've proven I can play. Last year's Orange Bowl game gave me a lot of confidence.

"I'm playing much better right now. So I should be able to play better this year."

Aztecs try wings against Big 10's Iowa Hawkeyes

Holiday Bowl

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — San Diego State, which mastered the art of winning the close ones in 1986, anticipates another tight game Tuesday night against Iowa in the Holiday Bowl.

The Aztecs, surprise champions of the Western Athletic Conference with an 8-3 record, won seven games by an average of 5 points. Their two most important victories — 27-26 over Colorado State and 10-3 over Brigham Young — produced their first postseason appearance since the 1969 Pasadena Bowl.

Against Colorado State, they marched downfield to score the winning touchdown with two seconds left. That was the beginning of their current four-game winning streak.

"We've learned to win close football games," Coach Denny Stolz said. "Now there are three teams in the WAC that have national recognition: Air Force, BYU and us."

The Hawkeyes, playing in a bowl for the sixth straight year, are 8-3 and are much bigger than San Diego State.

The Aztecs are led by quarterback Todd Santos, who completed 62 percent of his passes for 2,553 yards, 14 touchdowns and 12 interceptions. The junior has thrown for almost 6,500 yards in his career, breaking most of Brian Sipe's school records.

When Santos is not passing, he's usually handing off to Chris Hardy. The 5-foot-9, 175-pound halfback gained 947 yards this year while scoring 12 times.

San Diego State will be without leading wide receiver Anthony Conyers, who was suspended Friday after testing positive for cocaine use. He began the year as a reserve but had 13 catches for 252 yards against Colorado State and Wyoming and finished witht 27 receptions for 507 yards.

"This is something that shouldn't have happened," Conyers said. "For a while, my priorities lapsed. I was irresponsible and made a mistake. You have to live your own life and not do what others do when you get a little pressure.

"When you're with a lot of people and they do something and you get caught up in the action, sometimes you don't think like you should."

Conyers will be replaced by senior Kenny Moore.

"As for Kenny Moore, he has played more football than Anthony Conyers," said Stolz. "Sometimes a kid like that has a great ballgame. I'm counting on that from Kenny."

The Hawkeyes, seeking to give Coach Hayden Fry his 150th career victory, are expected to start Mark Vlasic at quarterback. The fifth-year senior suffered a shoulder injury in the third game of the year.

"I'm hoping by gametime it's back to full strength," said Vlasic, who relieved freshman Tom Poholsky and rallied Iowa from a 17-0 deficit to a victory over Minnesota in the Hawkeyes' last game. "We'd like to come out and win and finish 9-3 because there have been only three other seasons in Iowa history with a record that good."

Rick Bayless, a former walk-on, leads Iowa with 1,040 yards rushing and is the team's top receiver with 30 catches.

Quiet Francis makes noise on field

By SAM BLAIR
The Dallas Morning News

WACO (AP) — By his own account, Ron Francis is no party animal.

"If I'm not playing football, I'm playing basketball," the Baylor cornerback said in a voice so soft that you must lean closer to hear him.

"If I'm not playing basketball, I just listen to music. I'm not that outgoing. I don't go out much."

Francis and Baylor are in the Bluebonnet Bowl Wednesday night in Houston to take on the University of Colorado.

Now, one game from the end of an unusual college football career, Francis will be remembered as the quiet guy who caused a lot of explosions. He has had some wonderful times on the football field, the best coming in his final game in Baylor Stadium on Nov. 22 when he had three interceptions and the Bears beat Texas, 18-13.

"I'd never done that before," he said. "The third one stopped Texas' last drive and made it a very satisfying game. We really wanted that one after what happened last year in Austin. They owed us."

IN 1985, the Longhorns bounced the Bears out of the Cotton Bowl by winning, 17-10. Texas held off a late Baylor threat after Francis' interception had given the Bears a shot at the winning points. Thus Baylor took a detour in its holiday travels, going instead to the Liberty Bowl where it defeated LSU, 21-7.

Francis' inspired play against Texas this year didn't change the Bears' bowl destination. It brought them into their preparations for the Bluebonnet Bowl date with Colorado with a much better feeling about a second consecutive 8-3 record. And it gave him an edge in a friendly rivalry with his teammate, Thomas Everett.

"Toward the end of the season, we were kidding about who would get the most interceptions," Francis said. "Thomas told me, 'Man, last season was your time. This is my year.'"

Francis had six interceptions in 1985 to Everett's two.

"Thomas started strong with two interceptions against Wyoming, and by the time we got into the last month, he had five and I had three.

"I just laughted and told him, 'It's not over yet.' Then I came on strong."

THEY CAME into the Texas game tied with five each, determined to outdo the other as well as the Longhorns. Everett played brilliantly and had one interception, only to see Francis steal three and take the lead, 8-6.

"It was fun, a good personal rivalry," Francis said. "It has been good for me and Thomas, for the secondary, and for the team. Hey, I think the world of Thomas. He sets our defense, gives us our coverages, and he's always on top of everything. He has a great football mind and instincts."

Everett, a consensus All-America free safety, feels just as strongly about Francis, a consensus All-Southwest Conference cornerback.

"The key to our secondary's success the last two years has been Ron returning to us after playing a year at running back," Everett said. "He became the glue. I think we would have been a good secondary without him, but he made us that much better."

Nobody appreciates Francis as a team player more than Baylor Coach Grant Teaff.

"He's the greatest kid in America," Teaff said.

The facts support Teaff's assessment.

— Francis was recruited as a running back but converted as a cornerback as a freshman to strengthen a shaky secondary.

— He paid his way to remain in school when he was academically ineligible in 1983.

— He starred at tailback until a hamstring injury sidelined him in 1984, then returned to defense in 1985.

"He's a unique college player because he could be playing both ways for us right now," Teaff said. "Ron always has been willing to do whatever we asked him to do."

FRANCIS, however, is delighted that he hasn't been needed on offense.

"These last two years on defense have been so good that I wouldn't want to switch. When I intercept a pass, I feel a real high. To me, it's the same kick as scoring a touchdown."

Gil Brandt, the Dallas Cowboys' vice president in charge of personnel development, sees Francis as a blue chip NFL cornerback prospect.

"He's a splendid player, one who really doesn't have any negatives," Brandt said.

Tar Heels bring Boilermakers back to earth, 94-81

Associated Press

Purdue Coach Gene Keady thought his second-ranked Boilermakers could learn a thing or two about the accuracy of the college basketball polls when they met No. 4 North Carolina.

And the fact that his North Carolina counterpart Dean Smith could find fault with the play of his Tar Heels after they had a 25-point lead en route to a surprisingly easy 94-81 victory Monday reinforced Keady's feelings about the rankings.

"I've said all along that I didn't believe the polls," Keady said. "We beat some young teams early and we needed to play a team like North Carolina to find out how good we are. We played like we practiced."

With senior guard Kenny Smith scoring a career-high 23 points, North Carolina advanced to a showdown tonight with Southern Methodist, a 79-65 victor over Towson State in the other semifinal game of the Dallas Morning News tournament.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas 104, No. 9 Navy 79; No. 3 Iowa 105, Cal-Irvine 103; Texas-El Paso 87, No. 5 Auburn 82; No. 10 St. John's 62, No. 18 Georgia Tech 53; Ohio State 79, No. 12 Kansas 78 in overtime; No. 14 Temple 80, Georgia Southern 61; No. 17 Pittsburgh 114, Arkansas 82, and No. 20 Duke 80, Appalachian State 50.

With a tournament record crowd of 15,605 watching at Reunion Arena, North Carolina, 9-1, dominated Purdue, 7-1, after the first 10 minutes.

J.R. Reid and Dave Popson scored 14 points apiece, and Jeff Lebo had 13 for North Carolina.

Doug Lee, who hit three three-point shots, led Purdue with 21 points. Everette Stephens added 17 and Todd Mitchell had 14.

No. 1 UNVL 104, No. 9 Navy 79

With senior guard Mark Wade dishing out a school-record 21 assists, the Runnin' Rebels, 11-0, led by as many as 35 points in winning the UNLV Holiday Classic.

Navy center David Robinson led all scorers with 29 points.

Freddie Banks poured in 25 and Armon Gilliam added 23 for the Rebels before a UNLV record crowd of 20,321. Navy fell to 5-2.

No. 3 Iowa 105, Cal-Irvine 103

Iowa got six points from Ed Horton in the final 2:06 to overcame a 12-point deficit and win the Anteater Classic.

Texas-El Paso 87, No. 5 Auburn 82

Getting 20 points apiece from Mike Richmond and Chris Sandle, the Miners upset the Tigers to win the Sun Bowl tournament.

The Miners, 8-2, scored their last 15 points on free throws.

Jeff Moore scored 20 points for 8-1 Auburn and Mike Jones added 18 and Frank Ford 16.

Quintan Gates added 19 points for Texas-El Paso.

No. 10 St. John's 62, No. 18 Georgia Tech 53

St. John's, led by Mark Jackson and reserve Matt Brust, staged a 10-0 run at the start of the second half and went on to win the ECAC Holiday Festival for the third straight year.

Duane Ferrell led Georgia Tech, 6-3, with 16 points.

Ohio St. 79, No. 12 Kansas 78

Keith Wesson's tip-in of Curtis Wilson's 32-foot shot at the buzzer gave the 8-3 Buckeyes the upset victory that dropped Kansas to 6-3.

Dennis Hopson scored 28 points to lead Ohio State, and Wilson wound up with 23. Cedric Hunter led the Jayhawks with 23 points.

No. 14 Temple 80, Ga So 61

Temple got 20 points from junior guard Howard Evans and routed Georgia Southern to advance to tonight's championship of the Blade Classic against host Toledo, which beat Air Force 77-60.

No. 17 Pitt 114, Arkansas 82

Pitt used a fast break, featuring guard Curtis Aiken, who scored 37 points, as the Panthers advanced to the final of the Rainbow Classic against Wisconsin.

"They just manhandled us. It was a case of men playing with boys," Arkasas Coach Nolan Richardson said.

Pittsburgh, 7-2, took a 53-20 halftime advantage and led by as many as 41 points several times in the second half.

Arkansas was led by guard Ron Huery with 26 points, followed by Philip McKellar with 19 and Keith Wilson with 15.

No. 20 Duke 80, Appalachian St. 50

Center John Smith scored 14 points to lead a balanced attack as Duke won for the seventh time in eight games.

The Mountaineers, 2-5, shot just 27.3 percent in the first half, committing 19 turnovers.

Leslie O'Neal ...defensive rookie

Leeman Bennett ...fired by Bucs

FOOTBALL— Tampa Bay fired Coach Leeman Bennett after the Bucs' finished with their second straight 2-14 record.

Owner Hugh Culverhouse did not set a specific timetable for finding a new coach. He again denied reports that he has talked with Alabama coach Ray Perkins about the job. Bennett compiled a 4-28 record in two years at the helm of the Bucs...

Leslie O'Neal, a primary force in the San Diego Chargers' defensive improvement before he was cut down by injury, was named AP defensive Rookie of the Year. A two-time All-American out of Oklahoma State and the eighth player picked in the draft, O'Neal finished with 34 votes. Miami linebacker John Offerdahl, a second-round pick, received 20 votes. Kansas City linebacker Dino Hackett, a third-round choice, received seven votes while Atlanta linebacker Tony Casillas, the second player taken in the draft, was fourth with five votes....

Paul "Tank" Younger was fired as assistant GM of the San Diego Chargers and GM Johnny Sanders was reassigned after the club's 4-12 season. There was no immediate word on replacements for the two...

Dallas Cowboys assistant coach Paul Hackett has interviewed for the head coaching job at Southern Cal, but Iowa Coach Hayden Fry denied USC has contacted him about the job. Also reportedly being considered are Dave Levy, former USC assistant and now Chargers' offensive line coach, Arizona Coach Larry Smith and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne...

HOCKEY— Chicago Blackhawks center Denis Savard, who scored three goals and added five assists in three games, is NHL player of the week for the period ending Dec. 28. Savard came up with two goals and two assists in Chicago's 8-6 triumph over the St. Louis Blues on Dec. 26. Two days later, he scored one goal and added three assists as the Blackhawks downed the Washington Capitals 7-5...

BASKETBALL— Knicks center Patrick Ewing, who averaged 26.3 points and 13.3 rebounds, was named the NBA player of the week for the period ending Sunday. Ewing contributed to three New York victories during the week. He had 28 points, including the game-winning shot at the buzzer, and a season-high 17 rebounds in an 86-85 victory over Chicago on Christmas Day...

Dooley wants to go out winner

Peach Bowl

ATLANTA (AP) — Virginia Tech's Bill Dooley would like to go out a winner when he coaches his final game as the Hokies' head coach in Wednesday's Peach Bowl against No. 18 North Carolina State.

Dooley, who has a 131-91-3 record in 20 years of college coaching, nine years at Virginia Tech and 11 at North Carolina, has a 1-7 mark in bowl games, including an 0-3 record in the Peach Bowl.

"I don't know if you're aware of it," Dooley said Monday at a news conference, "but Virginia Tech has never won a bowl game. It would be nice personally for me to win one. This is my fourth Peach Bowl."

Dooley, whose squad was 8-2-1 this season, has taken the Hokies to two other bowls — losing to Kentucky 21-0 in the 1980 Peach Bowl and dropping a 23-7 decision to Air Force in the 1984 Independence Bowl.

In North Carolina State, the Hokies will be facing a team with an identical 8-2-1 record under first-year Coach Dick Sheridan, who was highly successful at Division I-AA Furman, where he won six Southern Conference championships in compiling a 69-23-2 record in eight years.

Wednesday's 1 p.m. EST game will be televised nationally by the Mizlou network from Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, where a capacity crowd of nearly 60,000 is expected.

Dooley is leaving Tech following the school's decision to take away the athletic director's job he also held. Dooley sued the school, and the parties reached a $3.5 million out-of-court settlement.

Dooley, brother of Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, has a 62-38-1 record at Virginia Tech.

When asked several times at the news conference to explain what the game meant to him, he would say only: "My personal feelings are set aside for team goals. Our football team wants to come down here and win. Certainly it would be nice to finish off with a victory."

He said he would like to remain in coaching or administration or go into private business, but had no plans. "I haven't thought past Dec. 31. I'm just leaving all my options open."

Sheridan, speaking at a news conference that followed Dooley's, said: "You have to respect Virginia Tech for what they accomplished this past season. I think it's obvious that they will be very emotional and play with a lot of intensity because it is Coach Dooley's last game at Virginia Tech.

"There's no doubt they will be emotional. That could be a problem, but we can't worry about that. We have to be sure we're prepared to play."

Sheridan inherited a program that had three consecutive 3-8 records in the Atlantic Coast Conference before this season. He said he wanted his team to be prepared for success in the game and also wanted the bowl trip to be enjoyable for the players.

"We believe that you can work hard and have a good time," he said. "We want to do both of those."

North Carolina State is led by All-ACC quarterback Erik Kramer, who completed 145 of 277 passes for 2,092 yards and 14 touchdowns this year.

VPI quarterback Erik Chapman threw for 1,627 yards and 10 TDs, connecting on 113 of 222 attempts. The Hokies, however, relied on a ground game led by Maurice Williams and Eddie Hunter, who combined for 1,901 yards and 12 TDs.

SMU, Aggies move into tourney finals

SWC

Associated Press

Southern Methodist University and Texas A&M have moved into the championship games of holiday college basketball tournaments after a night when SWC teams were 3-3 against outside competition in six different tournaments.

SMU moved into the finals of the Dallas Morning News Classic with a 79-65 victory over Towson State Monday night. Texas A&M took an easy 80-60 victory over Lehigh to enter the finals of the Connecticut Mutual Classic at Hartford, Conn.

SMU will face North Carolina, a 94-81 winner over Purdue, in the finals at Dallas tonight. Texas A&M faces Hartford in the finals of the tournament in Connecticut.

In other games Monday night, Houston edged Vanderbilt, 73-72, in the consolation finals at the Sugar Bowl Tournament in New Orleans, Iowa State edged Texas, 58-57, in the consolation game at the Sun Bowl Classic in El Paso; Arizona whipped Texas Tech, 53-40, in the championship game of the Fiesta Bowl Tournament in Tucson, Ariz., and Pittsburgh blasted Arkansas, 114-82, in a semifinal game of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

Sean Elliott scored 23 points as the University of Arizona defeated Texas Tech University 53-40 in the championship game of the Fiesta Bowl Classic at Tucson.

Sean Gay scored 11 to lead the Red Raiders.

The 40 points the Wildcat defense gave up were the fewest by an opponent since Arizona held Northern Arizona University to 38 points in 1949.

Texas Tech dropped to 4-6, while Arizona was 5-3.

Terry Williams scored 19 points to lead SMU to the victory over Towson State.

The Mustangs, 8-2, held a 44-33 halftime lead.

Miami warns: no prisoners

By JOE CIALINI

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — With many of its players dressed in combat fatigues upon arrival, the University of Miami says it intends to take no prisoners in its Fiesta Bowl showdown with Penn State.

"This game is going to be a war and we're going to be ready for it," said Vinny Testaverde, the Miami quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner, in explaining the Hurricanes' choice of clothing.

At a desert steak fry for both schools Sunday night, Miami defensive lineman Jerome Brown led a team walkout.

"The Japanese didn't eat with Pearl Harbor before they bombed it so let's get out of here," he said.

Said Penn State Coach Joe Paterno: "His history is not very good as far as the results."

The militant stance of No. 1 Miami contrast for Friday night's game contrasts with the relatively staid approach of the No. 2 Nittany Lions.

"Let them have fun," Paterno said of the Hurricanes. "If they want to jive each other a little bit, let them jive each other a little bit. As I understand it, they left after they ate. Typical football player."

Miami is adopting the same role this year that Oklahoma played last year as the Sooners prepared to play then-No. 1 Penn State in the Orange Bowl. Oklahoma, led by linebacker Brian Bosworth, enjoyed a high profile and won 25-10.

"I don't think the football field is made for a bunch of clean-cut guys," Brown said. "The football field is made for people to go out there and kill each other."

Penn State's players say they are hardly intimidated by such bravado.

"We're on a mission too," Penn State center Keith Radecic said. "The goal of every team starting the season is to win the national championship and now it's down to two teams. It's going to come down to whoever hits the hardest for four quarters will win.

"They're more of a hype team. When we're on the field, nobody is going to remember they wore fatigues when they got off the plane."

Added defensive tackle Bob White: "We're here to play football and come Friday that's what we're going to do. All that extra stuff, that's a waste of time."

Miami's reckless image has had drawbacks. Several players have clashed with authorities because of incidents on and off campus.

"We did have some problems during the year but we really don't cultivate the image," Miami fullback Alonzo Highsmith said. "We just do whatever it takes to win. If it takes one particular thing to win a game, we'll do it. We enjoy doing things like wearing army fatigues. Why not enjoy ourselves? We get our heads kicked in every week on the field. It is business on the field so we have to have fun sometimes."

And that is fine with Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson.

"They like to express themselves," he said. "They're loose. Probably much looser than some other teams might be. Fun. And that's what this game is all about.

"If you have to be uptight and walk the straight and narrow line, minute by minutes, day by day, it takes a lot of the fun out of it. We enjoy being in a game like this and we want our players to enjoy it. If I do not allow them to express themselves and to be individuals, then I'm not going to be myself."

COTTON

The next year, Notre Dame, again led by Joe Theismann, came back and extracted revenge, 24-11, a loss that cost Texas a second straight national title and a 30-game unbeaten streak. It apparently was the beginning of a jinx for the Horns.

In 1978, Notre Dame thoroughly thrashed No. 1 Texas and Earl Campbell, 38-10, to claim the national title for itself.

And then there was that galling loss in 19843. Texas was just a few minutes away from a national title against Georgia when a fumbled punt set up the Bulldogs' winning touchdown in the gloaming. Things never really went right for Fred Akers after that and he was replaced this year by David McWilliams.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Do not let success spoil you and you will enjoy one triumph after another! Real estate purchases could enhance your financial security. A career in science, medicine or education offers the greatest promise. A change of environment could solve a personal problem. You feel more romantic than in the recent past. Your goals and values come into clearer focus. A child returns to the family fold.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Singer Donna Summer, actress Sarah Miles, musician Nathan Milstein, singer John Denver, actors Anthony Hopkins, Ben Kingsley, and Tim Matheson, statesman-soldier Gen. George Catlett Marshall, "V" star Jane Badler, cosmetics queen Elizabeth Arden, explorer Jacques Cartier, artist Henri Matisse, tennis Cliff Richey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your day will be anything but routine. Agreements may be difficult to negotiate. Influential people have the upper hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exercise more self-discipline. Add self-improvement activities to your list of New Year's resolutions. Write letters to influential people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who work at home can look forward to greater productivity in 1987. Do everything possible to eliminate unnecessary expenditures. Romance holds some pleasant surprises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Influential people continue to be helpful. Work must come before pleasure early in the day. Try not to be distracted by New Year's Eve festivities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel is best postponed. Leisure hours should be given over to dealing with family matters. Socializing tonight could put you in touch with people who are willing to help your career.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial deals are easier to negotiate. A real estate venture should show a profit soon. Get in touch with relatives you did not see over Christmas. Share entertainment costs with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It may be necessary to turn down a personal appeal. Explain your reason as tactfully as you can. Mate may be unpredictable. Your loved ones could be in an extravagant mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A financial deal could be held up. Avoid acting on impulse. Influential person may not support your ideas regarding land transactions. You may want to celebrate at home tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others are counting on you to take the lead. Do not let them down. A New Year's celebration will put you in touch with a potential romantic partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make a New Year's resolution to devote more time to home and family. A quiet celebration at home holds special appeal this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family members will go along with any plans you have for making changes. Someone who intrigues you is likely to drop by later in the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Differences of opinion could develop with mate or partner. Make concessions. Dress elegantly for an evening celebration. Home parties are more intimate.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	3 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

The secret to many hands is counting. South went to considerable trouble on today's hand to obtain a count, and it was worth it in the end.

South's hand was a classic weak two-bid at any vulnerability. West's overcall was impeccable, but North brushed it aside and went directly to the spade game.

After cashing two heart tricks, with East following up the line, West shifted to his singleton trump. Declarer won in dummy and considered the possibilities. Since there was no way to avoid giving up a club trick, he would have to bring in the diamond suit with no loser. Therefore, West would have to hold the king of diamonds. If it was doubleton, a simple finesse followed by cashing the ace would accomplish the job. But if West held more than two diamonds, he would have to have the 10 as well for the contract to succeed.

To know how to tackle the suit, declarer set about learning all he could about the hand. He ducked a club, won the trump continuation on the table, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed another club. He got back to the board with a trump and ruffed the last club. When East produced the 13th club, the count was almost complete. If East's heart plays were to be believed, West's distribution was 1-6-3-3.

The rest was simple. Declarer led the jack of diamonds, covered by the king and won in dummy. He returned to hand with his last trump and led a diamond. When West followed low, declarer took his only chance — he finessed the nine. When that won, the contract was home.

Winning declarer technique is to play the hand as if you can see all the cards. Counting often enables you to do just that.

Former British prime minister Harold Macmillan dies after short illness

Macmillan

LONDON (AP) — Harold Macmillan, who as prime minister from 1957-63 presided over a golden period of prosperity at home and the breakup of the British Empire abroad, died after a short illness. He was 92.

With relatives by his bedside, Macmillan died at 6:20 p.m. Monday at his Birch Grove House home near Haywards Heath, south of London.

The late President John F. Kennedy said it was Macmillan's perseverance that made possible the unprecedented Nuclear Test Ban Treaty signed in Moscow by Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union on July 25, 1963.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, informed of his death, said Monday night she was "deeply sad to hear the news. His death leaves a place which no one else can fill."

Buckingham Palace press secretary Michael Shea said Queen Elizabeth II heard the news "with great sadness."

Macmillan, who belonged to a prosperous publishing family, is survived by two of his daughters, Lady Catherine Amery and Lady Ann Caroline Faber. His heir is his grandson, Viscount Macmillan, who is chairman of the family publishing firm, Macmillan Ltd. His wife, Lady Dorothy, died in 1966.

He will be buried alongside his wife in the family plot in the churchyard of St. Giles in Horsted Keynes, West Sussex, after a private funeral. The day was not immediately announced. His grandson said a memorial service would be held later in London.

Macmillan was born Feb. 10, 1894, and attended Eton and Oxford. A scholar, publisher and country gentleman, he was named the Earl of Stockton two years ago.

He became leader of the Conservative Party and Britain's 46th prime minister in the wake of the Suez crisis of 1956. He emerged as a world statesman, improving relations with the Soviet bloc and presiding over the granting of independence to British colonies, including Ghana, Nigeria and Kenya.

Kennedy treated Macmillan with almost filial regard and after Kennedy's assassination in November 1963, Macmillan spoke of him as "my close friend and associate."

During the Cuban missile crisis in 1962, Kennedy telephoned Macmillan as often as three times a day for advice on how to handle the Soviets.

"The only trouble was he always rang up at midnight, which was 5 a.m. our time, so we had to sleep in the Cabinet room," Macmillan later recalled.

Dubbed "Supermac" in the 1960s by a popular British cartoonist, Macmillan's administration was marred by scandals that included the Profumo affair of 1963, in which War Minister John Profumo was discovered to be sharing a prostitute with a Soviet military attache.

Four months later, prostate surgery compelled Macmillan to step down as prime minister. He retired from the Commons in 1964 after 40 years as a legislator.

NEW YORK (AP) — Diane Sawyer, who has renewed her contract as a correspondent on the top-rated "60 Minutes" news show, will draw a salary of about $1 million, a source at the network said.

The new agreement calls for Ms. Sawyer to continue her work with "60 Minutes" and includes "upcoming CBS projects" still in the planning stages, CBS spokeswoman Ramona Dunn said Monday.

A source at CBS, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the new contract gives Ms. Sawyer an annual salary "in the million (dollar) range."

Under her previous contract, which expires at the end of the week, she had earned $800,000 each year, Ms. Dunn said.

Recent reports said Ms. Sawyer had been discussing job offers with other companies because she wanted an anchor slot.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Actress Mary Martin will receive an Albert Schweitzer Medal for Artistry for contributions to the American broadway musical.

Miss Martin's son, Larry Hagman, and her daughter Heller will award the medal to her April 8 in Wilmington, N.C., Jim Burns, executive director for the Albert Schweitzer medals for artistry, said Monday from Wilmington.

The actress accepted the nomination for the award when contacted in her motel room in Fort Lauderdale, where she is appearing in a play.

Previous winners of the Schweitzer prizes include stage actress Helen Hayes and Spoleto Festival founder Gian Carlo Menotti.

Orlov

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Freed Russian dissident Yuri Orlov probably will spend much of his first months back in physics research catching up on developments over the past decade, one of his new colleagues at Cornell University says.

Much has happened since 1977, when Orlov was arrested by Soviet authorities for his stance on human rights, said Cornell theoretical physicist Kurt Gottfried, who acted as the university's liaison with Orlov.

Orlov was released from the Soviet Union earlier this year.

At the time of his arrest, the 62-year-old Orlov was working on subatomic particle research as well as in the design of machines that accelerate subatomic particles, Gottfried said.

"Most of his work then was about 10 to 15 years ahead of his time," Gottfried said. "Many of his ideas were not as widely accepted when he was arrested as they are now."

Orlov has accepted a three-year appointment to the faculty of the Ivy League school.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John T. "Terry" Dolan, a founder of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, died after a long illness at age 36.

Brent Bozell, a spokesman for NCPAC, quoted in today's edition of The Washington Times, said the immediate cause of death was congestive heart failure.

Dolan died Sunday.

"We loved Terry deeply and our grief is beyond measure," Dolan's family said in a statement Bozell read to The Times. "We take consolation in knowing that for the last six months and on the day of his death, Terry's family was with him constantly."

The newspaper did not say where Dolan died.

"Terry did many great things for America; his professional and personal accomplishments were well-known," the statement said. "But we were never prouder of him than in these past few months. His memory is cherished, he will be with us always."

Dollar rallies

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar steadied on European markets today as dealers rushed to purchase the weakened currency at bargain prices. Gold was slightly down.

Analysts said the dollar's plunge of recent days, including a six-year low against the West German mark, sparked a scramble for dollars that banks were hard-pressed to meet in the dull end-of-year trading spell.

The strong Deutschmark prompted the French central bank to intervene on behalf of the franc by boosting its interest rate on loans to commercial banks from 7.75 percent to 8.25 percent.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 159.20 yen, down 0.30 yen to its lowest level in three months.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—1.9473 West German marks, up from 1.9468

—1.6278 Swiss francs, down from 1.6280

—6.4400 French francs, up from 6.4375

—2.2010 Dutch guilders, unchanged

—1,357.25 Italian lire, up from 1,353.50

—1.3795 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3850

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4665, compared with $1.4675 Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $389.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $389.50. The recommended price fixed by the city's five major bullion dollars at mid-morning was unchanged.

In Zurich, the bid price was $389.10, down from $390.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.47 to close at a bid $389.95.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.28 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $5.30.

Posted price jumps to $16.50

From Staff Reports

The posted price for West Texas Intermediate crude jumped to its highest level since mid-March as Permian Corp. raised its price to $16.50 per barrel, effective this morning.

According to Permian crude oil representative Bill Rigney, the company's move will effect both intermediate and West Texas Sour crude and the higher prices will be reflected in other areas as well.

The new price represents a $1.50 per barrel hike, from $15 last week.

A random spot check with other area crude oil purchasers this morning revealed no other purchasers have boosted prices yet, but are expecting a move soon.

The sharp upward movement follows Monday's trading on the world futures market where crude oil prices rose to their highest levels in 10 months. Strengthened futures trading signals increased confidence in last week's production accord of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The near-month futures contract on the New York Mercantile Exchange advanced 38 cents to close at $17.65 a barrel. Its price had not been so high since Feb. 7, when it closed at $17.68 for a 42-gallon barrel.

In addition, two key barometers of the London-based open market also reached prices not seen since early February. West Texas Intermediate crude oil, the major American blend, traded at $17.50 a barrel, while Brent North Sea crude, the British oil that is a key international marker, traded as high as $17.60 a barrel, up 70 cents from Wednesday, when it last traded.

On Feb. 7 the West Texas grade had reached $17.65 a barrel.

The market was "continuing last week's upward momentum," said Peter C. Beutel, assistant director of Elders Futures Inc. "More and more people are coming around to OPEC's point of view that prices should be a little higher."

Other analysts said the market's confidence was also buoyed by reports that Saudi Arabia and Kuwait had notified their contract holders that they would revert to a fixed price around $18 a barrel on Feb. 1 as required by the OPEC accord.

Arco cuts 1987 capital budget by 20 percent

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Atlantic Richfield Co. announced Monday its board of directors approved a capital spending plan for 1987 of about $1.6 billion, down 20 percent from the revised $2 billion capital budget this year.

Arco said the reduction in capital spending "primarily reflects the installation this year of the last major facilities required to complete current development plnas for the Prudhoe Bay, Kuparuk River and Lisburne oil fields on the North Slope of Alaska."

In February Arco, the sixth-largest U.S. oil company, lowered its 1986 capital spending program from the original $3 billion target to $2 billion in face of the oil price collapse. Other major oil companies also cut back sharply on capital expenditures in 1986.

Arco's total worldwide spending on exploration and production is budgeted at approximately $900 million for 1987. Of the remaining $700 million, the largest portion is earmarked for refining, marketing and chemical operations.

"This capital plan reflects our outlook for long-range industry conditions," said Arco Chairman Lodwrick M. Co[illegible]

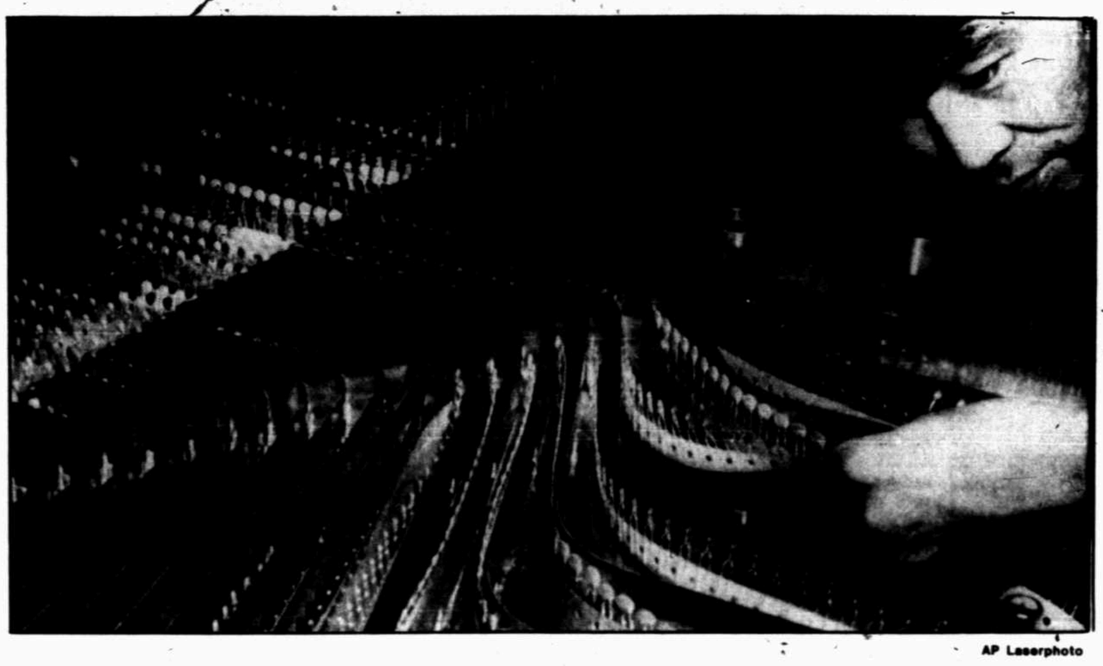

Exxon sells interests in South Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. today announced it has sold its interest in its South African affiliates, joining the exodus of U.S. companies from the troubled country.

Exxon, the largest U.S. oil company, said the two small South African companies had been sold to an independent trust established to continue business and pursue social responsibility and employee support programs.

The affiliates, Esso South Africa (Pty.) Ltd. and Exxon Chemical (Pty.) Ltd., sell petroleum products and chemicals and have a combined workforce of about 200. They do not have refining operations and their combined South African sales accounted for about 0.2 percent of Exxon's worldwide consolidated revenue in 1985.

"This decision was reached after thorough consideration of the interests of our employees in South Africa and the corporation's shareholders," Exxon President Lawrence G. Rawl said in a statement.

China expects crude export earnings to fall

PEKING (UPI) — China's oil export earnings are expected to drop by at least $3.5 billion this year because of declining world oil prices and a decrease in demand, the official China Daily newspaper reported Monday.

Zheng Dunxun, president of the China National Chemicals Import and Export Corporation (Sinochem), told the newspaper that earnings from oil exports will fall to an estimated $3.8 billion in 1986 from $7.4 billion last year.

Zheng said final oil export figures for 1986 were not yet in, but they are expected to be "far below" last year's 15.1 million tons, which included refined petroleum products.

China twice this year announced reductions in its oil exports in a show of support for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' efforts to stabilize the market, the paper said.

Chinese oil prices dropped by an average of 51.8 percent this year on the world market, compared with 54 percent in the OPEC countries.

Economic indicators jump 1.2 percent in November

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its main barometer of future economic activity shot up 1.2 percent in November, the largest increase in seven months.

The Commerce Department said the gain last month in its Index of Leading Indicators was more than double the 0.5 percent rise in October and the biggest increase since a 1.2 percent rise last April.

Analysts, however, cautioned against reading too much into the November rise, contending it was more a reflection of short-term economic activity than an indication of future strength.

Economists believe that while the economy at present is performing well, it will suffer a substantial slowdown in activity in the early part of 1987 due to an adverse initial impact of the new tax law.

The biggest contributor to strength in the index in November came from a rise in raw materials prices. Materials prices showing the biggest gains were lumber, iron and steel, aluminum and cattle hides.

Rising prices for raw materials are considered a sign of increasing demand and thus a signal of faster growth in the future.

But analysts noted that rising prices can also signal a pickup in inflation, which would be a drag on economic growth.

It was the second consecutive month that a big jump in commodity prices had been the major strenth in the index. Without the price rise in November, the index would have been up a much smaller 0.7 percent.

In all, eight of the 11 economic barometers showed strength last month. Following the rise in materials prices, the biggest contributors in order were a rise in stock market prices, growth in the work week, a jump in orders for business equipment, a rise in building permits and growth in the money supply. Also providing strength were a change in delivery times on business orders and a drop in initial unemployment claims.

Three barometers held back growth in the index. The biggest negative came from a drop in business and consumer credit followed by a fall in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods and in net business formation.

The department announced today that beginning with the February index, it was dropping net business formation from the group of statistics which make up the leading index. The government said the change was being made "because this series has deteriorated as a measure of change" in the number of businesses in the country.

The various changes left the index at 182.5 percent of its 1967 average after an adjusted 180.4 in October.

The 1.2 percent rise was slightly higher than had been expected by private analysts. But economists cautioned that much of the growth in November reflected a last-minute buying spree on the part of businesses and consumers who are rushing to take advantage of expiring tax breaks before the new tax law takes effect on Jan. 1.

Many analysts believe that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, is growing at close to a 3 percent rate in the current October-November quarter. However, economists believe this growth is being borrowed from the early part of 1987 and they are predicting economic activity will slump dramatically in the January-March quarter.

The most pessimistic are actually forecasting negative growth for the GNP, something which hasn't happened since the last recession.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he believed the GNP would fall at a 1 percent annual rate in the January-March quarter, but he said he was not predicting an outright recession, which is defined as two consecutive quarters of negative GNP performance. Evans said he believed the economy would recover and grow at a 2.5 percent annual rate from April through December.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said he would be forecasting a recession for next year if it were not for a belief that the country's huge trade deficit will improve and provide help to hard-hit sectors such as manufacturing.

Sales of existing homes reach seven year high

Prices also show increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes climbed to their highest level in seven years last month as a rebound in economically depressed Southern states overcame weakness in other areas of the country, a real estate trade group reported Monday.

The National Association of Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes rose 2.9 percent in November to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.92 million units.

The November increase marked the fifth consecutive month that sales of existing homes have risen. By contrast, sales of new homes have been declining during the same period. Some analysts speculated that a faster increase in new-home prices may be partly to blame for the disparity.

However, prices of existing homes rose as well in November, the first increase in three months. The 1.9 percent increase put the median price of an existing home at $80,900. The median price means half the homes sold for more and half for less.

The increase in sales last month followed a 1.1 percent rise in October and put the sales pace 13.6 percent ahead of where it was a year ago. The annual sales rate was the highest since September 1979, when houses were sold at an annual rate of 3.94 million units.

The November sales improvement was concentrated primarily in the South, where sales rose 13.3 percent to an annual rate of 1.53 million units, after a 2.2 percent October decline.

The South has been hard hit by depressed conditions in the region's oil and gas industry and in farming. Analysts suggested that the November improvement may have come from speculators buying real estate at depressed prices.

"It appears that investors in some of these markets are buying houses with the belief that these economies are going to improve soon and cause home values to rise," said William M. Moore of Denver, president of the Realtors association.

Moore said sales are also being propelled by consumers seeking to buy now before home price increases overshadow savings brought about by falling mortgage rates.

Fixed-rate mortgages averaged 9.3 percent last week, the lowest level of this decade, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. Analysts have speculated that the average will drop below 9 percent in the early part of next year.

"Clearly, the demand for homeownership remains strong and market conditions are encouraging families to go ahead with housing purchases they may have been waiting years to make," Moore said.

In addition to the big rise in home sales in the South, sales were up 1 percent in the Midwest to an annual rate of 1 million units, 9.9 percent higher than a year ago.

Sales fell 4.2 percent in the West to 680,000 units, but that was still 13.3 percent ahead of the pace in November 1985.

The Northeast, which has enjoyed record-high sales levels for much of the year, suffered a 6.6 percent decline in November to an annual rate of 710,000 units, still 6 percent ahead of the pace a year ago.

Prices have risen the most in the Northeast over the past year. The average sales price for an existing home in the Northeast was $107,800 in November, 20.9 percent ahead of a year ago, while homes in the West were selling for a median price of $102,400 in November, 8 percent ahead of a year ago.

The median sales price in the Midwest was $63,600, 10.2 percent higher than a year ago, while the median price in the South was $77,000, up only 2.7 percent from a year ago.

Texas housing affordability continues rise

COLLEGE STATION — Texas housing affordability for the third quarter was 16 percent higher than the same period for 1985, and housing was more affordable than it has been for seven years, according to the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University.

"The Texas Housing Affordability Index (THAI) rose above the affordable mark (1.00) in late 1985 and has continued to rise since then. At that level, 50 percent of Texas households are able theoretically to make the mortgage payments associated with the average-priced home sold locally," said Dr. Arthur Wright, research economist with the Center.

Lower interest rates are the primary reason for improvements in affordability. The effective mortgage interest rate for the third quarter fell to 10.12 percent, the lowest since 1978 and far below the record high of 15.5 in 1982. An interest-rate drop of 5 percentage points on a $75,000 fixed-rate mortgage for 30 years can result in a payment decrease of more than $290 per month.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Field producer flows 370 barrels

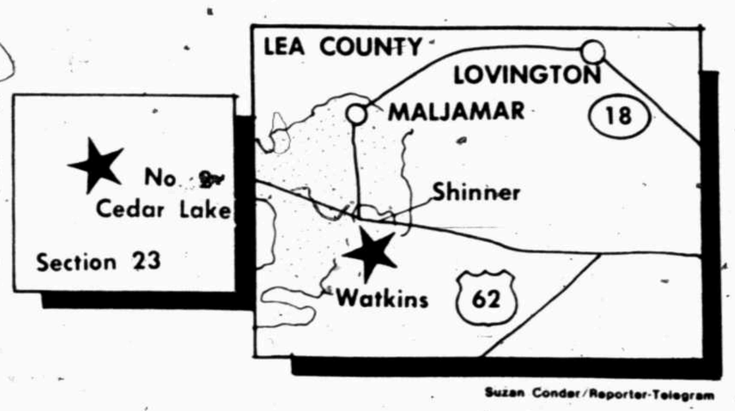

From Staff Reports

MEWBOURNE OIL CO. reports a strong Upper Bone Spring completion in the Querecho Plains field of Lea County, N.M.

Mewbourne finaled the No. 2 Cedar Lake to flow 370 barrels of crude, 301 Mcfd and 76 barrels of water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 250 psi. Production is from perforations 8,435 to 8,501 ft., no treatment reported.

The well was drilled to a total deoth pf 8,700 ft. and plugged back to 8,347 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,500 ft. Pay was topped at 8,435 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and west lines of Section 23, T18s, R32e.

Pogo Producing tests Loving County project

The Hubbard (Cherry Canyon) field of Loving County has gained a new producer and northwestern extension.

POGO PRODUCING CO. potentialed the No. 1 T.H. McElvain to flow 120 barrels of 38.8 gravity crude, 680 Mcfd and 360 barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 850 psi. Production is from perforations 5,168 to 5,174 ft., which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of 7.5 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 5,667:1.

Permitted as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the wellw as drilled to 5,347 ft. and plugged back to 5,293 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,346 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 5,168 ft., include the Base Salt at 3,904 ft., Delaware Lime at 4,092, Bell Canyon at 4,121, and the Cherry Canyon at 5,066 ft. Pay was topped at 5,168 ft.

Location is 4,573 ft. from northeast and 660 ft. from southeast lines of Section 87, Block 33, H&TC survey, three miles northwest of Mentone.

Lea field extension flows 115 barrels oil

HONDO DRILLING CO. has completed a new Cisco Canyon producer and northern extension to the Sanmal field of Lea County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Chevron State flowed 115 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 40 Mcfd and two barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 120 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 11,072 to 11,150 ft., which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 900:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 11,500 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 4,259.4 ft., formation tops include the Anhydrite at 1,425 ft., Yates at 2,675, Queen at 3,540, San Andres at 4,335, Glorieta at 5,880, Tubb at 7,055, Abo at 7,789, Wolfcamp at 9,454, Cisco at 10,764, and the Canyon at 11,300 ft. Pay was topped at 11,072 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 8, T16s, R33e.

Azalea field gains Devonian producer

The Azalea field of Midland County has gained a modest new high-gravity Devonian producer.

DAVIS & CARR ENERGY CO. finaled the No. 1 Nichols to flow 30.2 barrels of 52 gravity crude, 346 Mcfd and 13 barrels of water from perforations 11,457 to 11,607 ft. The interval was acidized with 80,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 20,000 gals. gel. Gas-oil ratio is 11,457:1.

Drilled to 11,657 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 11,648 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,763 ft., formation tops include the Anhbydrite at 1,768 ft., San Andres at 4,250, Spraberry at 7,559, Strawn at 10,466, Woodford at 11,445, and the Devonian at 11,540 ft. Pay was topped at 11,547 ft.

Location is 1,435 ft. from south and 1,978 ft. from west lines of Section 38, Block 38, T-1-S, T&P survey, five miles east of Midland.

Middle Strawn find tested for 28 barrels

A Middle Strawn discovery has been completed in Borden County, located approximately two miles north and slightly west of the Canning field.

AIKMAN OIL CORP., Midland, tested the No. 1 Lemley to pump 28 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 78 barrels of water from perforations 4,734 to 4,773 ft. The interval was treated with 30,000 gallons of frac and 61,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio was too small to measure.

Permitted as an 8,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,400 ft. and plugged back to 8,970 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,020 ft.

The well topped the Middle Strawn at 4,734 ft., Wolfcamp at 5,900, and the Lower Strawn at 7,588 ft. on ground elevation of 2,293 ft. Pay was topped at 4,734 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and east lines of Section 165, Block 25, H&TC survey.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Double-check travelers checks for FDIC coverage

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Much has been written about Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage of up to $100,000 per depositor. However, I have never read anything about the safety or risk in travelers checks.

Many banks issue travelers checks. If a bank fails, are its outstanding travelers checks counted as deposits and covered by federal insurance?

Doyle

A. Yes, if the travelers checks were actually "issued" by the bank. That's a big "IF."

Although some banks do issue travelers checks, most do not. Travelers checks often are issued by a corporation that is not a bank, such as a non-bank subsidiary of a bank holding company.

For example, BankAmerica Corp. travelers checks are not deposits at Bank of America, nor are Citicorp travelers checks deposits at Citibank. And, of course, American Express travelers checks are not bank deposits.

If you insist on having federal deposit insurance coverage on travelers checks, you'll have to double-check to be sure those you obtain are actually issued by a bank. The fact that you buy travelers checks at a bank does not necessarily mean they are issued by a bank.

Let's not overstate this and scare readers out of getting travelers checks, which are the sensible things to have on vacation or business trips. Big outfits such as BankAmerica Corp., Citicorp and American Express are not going to go bust.

• • •

Q. Although I don't travel very often, I always keep the travelers checks left over from a trip. I feel the interest I lose is balanced out by the fact that I never pay interest on my credit card, which I always pay off by the due date. Do you agree?

A. Not for one minute. Travelers check issuers love people such as you. You're giving them the free use of your money and depriving yourself of the interest that money could earn.

Every time my blue-eyed finance officer and I return from a trip, the unused travelers checks go into an interest-paying account — immediately.

Naturally, it's smart to pay off credit card charges before double-digit interest charges start to run up the amount you owe. But that has no relationship to hanging on to unused travelers checks.

• • •

Q. I read that certificates of deposit have to be in a federal bank — not a state-owned bank — to be insured. My bank is state-owned but they say they are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Are my CDs safe in a state-owned bank?

A. First off, there are no "state-owned" banks. Commercial banks are owned by stockholders. Mutual savings banks are owned by depositors.

There are state-chartered banks and federally-chartered banks. Both can have FDIC coverage, just as state-chartered S&Ls and federally-chartered S&Ls can have Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Coverage.

Assuming your bank displays the FDIC emblem, your CDs are safe, up to $100,000 per depositor. The same thing applies to S&Ls with the FDIC emblem.

You probably read a warning about keeping money in a "state-insured" bank. After the sad experience depositors had at state-insured banks and S&Ls in Maryland and Ohio, the standard advice has been to make sure your institution has FDIC or FSLIC coverage.

• • •

Q. Do you feel that money in a credit union is just as safe as it would be in a bank with FDIC coverage or a S&L with FSLIC coverage?

A. Yes, if it's a National Credit Union Administration member, meaning that the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund provides each CU depositor with $100,000 coverage.

There are private or cooperative CU insurers with excellent records. But they are not backed by the federal government. NCUSIF is a federal agency.

Black bear replaces wolverine

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan has adopted the black bear as a symbol of its 150th birthday celebration, snubbing its official mascot because there's no proof the wolverine ever roamed The Wolverine State.

The Michigan Sesquicentennial Committee originally wanted to honor the wolverine, said Gijsbert van Frankenhuyzen, a wildlife illustrator who designed a logo illustration of the bear.

But the committee's research found no evidence the stocky, ferocious fur-bearing mammal found in Canada and the northern United States ever lived in Michigan forests, he said.

"There is no wolverine in Michigan," van Frankenhuyzen said Sunday in a telephone interview from Lansing. "It's a mistake. They decided to do something cute and cuddly, so they decided on the black bear."

Blass designs are breezy, bouffant

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Bill Blass spring show was on for less than five minutes before the first short, swinging skirt appeared. It was part of a satin-striped navy suit, and a lace petticoat peeped out of the hemline and Casey Ribicoff murmured, "It's adorable."

She and other Blass fashion fans, including Pat Buckley and Nancy Kissinger, were perturbed that the new bouffant look would be too young or too fussy for them. Blass, predictably, made it work for them. He showed princess coats with modestly flaring skirts and suits with skirt fullness folded into unpressed pleats for those on the fast fashion track. But there were also plenty of short slender clothes as well as some calf-length styles.

For evening, ruffles and flounces, tiers and bubbles were prominent, but Blass has long been an advocate of the short dressy dress, and these fancy skirts simply make them look more important. Petticoats do make long, full skirts stand out more. So do hemline ruffles. Still, the clothes remain ladylike.

That's what impressed Christian Lacroix, the designer of the Patou couture collection, who stopped off for a Blass show on his way back to Paris from Los Angeles. Lacroix is as responsible as any other designer for the interest in short madcap baby doll dresses.

"The clothes have an elegance that is very American," said the French designer. "They're very neat, very simple. I liked his use of navy and white."

Karl Lagerfeld's ruffled petticoats and big skirts for Chanel also contributed to the current fashion fervor for short, puffy skirts. Lagerfeld was also in New York Monday. He showed his American collection, called KL, which retains a lot of the European collection he presented in Paris.

The prevailing impression is of short (mid-thigh-length) skirts, not masses of ruffles, though they exist too. Navy suits have pleated insets at the hem so they swirl gracefully. Some skirts in crinkled fabrics are fitted through the hips before they begin their swirl. Flaring skirts with high rising waistbands look smart with short jackets.

Double ruffles in mauve or pale yellow make short, flirty skirts with long, knitted tops — charming styles for the very young. Like the rest of the clothes, they have an effervescent, happy look. Mr. Lagerfeld is on a roll.

For other designers showing new collections, obeisance to the short, puffy skirt is unavoidable, so strong is its mark on the season. Carolina Herrera, who is known for her sophisticated couture look, considered the new skirt important enough to end her show with about a dozen models wrapped in hooded taffeta cocoons. They slipped out of their wraps to show myriad short dresses, all with full, puffed and draped skirts, often with long, snug bodices.

The styles were so dramatic that they were all people were talking about. Herrera had shown serious daytime suits, some with carefully mitered stripes, and traditional grand evening dresses, but it was the tiers and bubbles that attracted attention. Some took the form of taffeta overskirts that could be removed, leaving a slender crepe dress. That was a clever idea.

Bob Mackie, best known for his sleek, sequined siren dresses, also presented poufs and petticoats. A smashing striped taffeta shirtwaist dress floating over masses of white petticoats was a lovely way to look on summer evenings. The full-skirt trend has caused Mackie to widen his range, a good side effect.

Kasper introduced his first dress collection in a year. With a new set of Japanese backers, he included a lot of good, wearable shapes and attractive ideas such as slender printed jackets over blouses in a related pattern, making for a variation on the twin sweater set idea. But his most arresting styles had fluffy skirts, either a mass of ruffled tiers or smooth, flaring shapes over masses of petticoats.

Blass, Klein designs enter age of ageless

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Designers Bill Blass and Calvin Klein proved this week that the zippiness of youth and the elegance of maturity can coexist peacefully in a woman's wardrobe, even in a single style.

Blass, who showed his spring collection Monday for buyers and the press, drew an audience that included television newswoman Barbara Walters, socialites Nancy Kissinger, Pat Buckley and Fran Stark, modeling agent Eileen Ford and a few dozen other well-known, well-heeled women who certainly are not miniskirt and crinoline types. But Blass seemed to please them all, judging from the applause, by shaping dresses and suits with subtle understatement, even though some were above the knee and had petticoats rustling underneath.

Suit jackets were short and boxy or gently shaped to the figure, with slim or full skirts that stopped above the knee or low on the calf. Daytime dresses, in princess or long torso shapes, frequently had bias-cut skirts that flared gently to just above the ankle.

Blass' evening dresses had simple bare shoulder bodices, long torsos and puffed-up skirts or side panels that lent a certain youthful exuberance to the styles but were well within the accepted limits of grown-up evening wear.

Walters said after the show that she loved the petticoated skirts and evening dresses, but that Blass' clothes are "so very expensive" that she only buys the most tailored outfits, which she can wear in her private life as well as on the air.

Calvin Klein, who showed his spring clothes Tuesday, also offered long and short, full and slim styles. Here too, the matter of width and length seemed insignificant. What Klein seemed to be saying was that anything could work for women this year if the shapes were simple and the pieces were put together in an uncluttered way. Jewelry and adornment were at a minimum in this show. Shoes were flat.

Klein's wool or silk suits in navy, black, white or red, featured long, bathrobe-sashed jackets with pleated or slim skirts that hovered at the knee. His persimmon-colored silk and cashmere sweater sets were shown with ankle-grazing brown-checked silk skirts. Wide pants had off-the-shoulder or halter-neck sweaters. Petticoated evening skirts, in red, navy or black silk faille, were teamed with off-the-shoulder silk jersey tops in solids or stripes. But other after-five styles were simple sheaths of black silk, narrow from the bare shoulder bodices right down to the hemline.

Klein and Blass' lines seemed ageless and should allay retailers' fears that many styles for spring are too ingenue for all but junior customers.

Fashion has gone to the dogs, literally

NEW YORK (AP) — If you want to make Fido the most absolutely fashionable dog on the block, Doggie Denims of Wall, N.J. has "neckwear to fit" your dog's personality.

A hunter, you say? Buy him a camouflage print bandana. A preppie poodle? How bout a duck or oxford print. Why not a teddy bear or Santa Claus neckerchief?

The bandanas, in different sizes, are available at most pet stores.

DEAR ABBY

Past isn't part of man's present

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I grew up in a small town where I did my share of growing up the hard way. I made a lot of mistakes, but none that hurt anyone except myself. Nevertheless, I do regret some of those mistakes.

I am now a grown adult with a respectable job, which requires that I travel occasionally back to my hometown on business. I have a good reputation among my co-workers, but here's the problem: I have a couple of old "friends" in my hometown who always have to say in a crowd, "Oh, I knew him back when ..." and then they recite a story I'm not particularly proud of.

The reaction of others ranges from raised eyebrows to obvious surprise. How do I handle a situation like that? I've tried to get the message across that that was a long time ago, but they don't seem to want to give up their irritating antics.

What's a respectable comeback, and how can I get these "friends" to stop? — IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Take these "friends" aside and privately tell them seriously and earnestly that their constant dredging up of past incidents of which you are not particularly proud causes you embarrassment, and you would consider it an act of kindness if they would not do it again. Let them know that you are serious. I am betting they will respect your request. But if they don't, then pointedly avoid, whenever possible, these mean-spirited (and probably envious) "friends."

DEAR ABBY: Do you want to hear the joke of the century? I'm 39 years old, 5 feet 8 and weigh 155 pounds. My husband, Archie, is 53 years old, he's exactly my height and weighs 165 pounds. Here's the clincher. He recently got an invitation to his high school class reunion and he says he is not taking me unless I lose 20 pounds!

I have been to his other class reunions and I was always the youngest and slimmest wife there. I didn't know a soul, and was bored stiff while Archie spent the whole time talking about old times with all his high school friends.

Should I tell him to go by himself? Or should I try to lose 20 pounds in three weeks? — MIFFED IN D.C.

DEAR MIFFED: Since when is a person's weight a factor in such matters? If you want to go to his reunion, go. But if I had a husband who ignored me while he talked to only his old friends, I'd stay home. (P.S. Your weight is your business.)

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Bathroom serves as retreat for children

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

A group of college students, majoring in design, decided recently to take a hard look at a room in the house that hasn't changed in years: the bathroom.

Frankly, I don't think kids are the ones to approach. They see the room quite differently from adults. My kids always perceived a bathroom as a place where you wait it out until all the groceries are unloaded from the car. Or when I called, "Dinner!" they bolted there and locked the door so they would have to be summoned individually. They envision a bathroom as a tropical rain forest with moisture making rivulets on the mirror and towels steaming on the floor. They see a natural waterfall of hot water that flows free through the house. Soap produces itself, and as they sleep each night a toilet tissue fairy replaces the bare spindle with a fresh roll.

The design students think they can improve on it. They would like to see a bathroom with toilets and sinks that move up and down, self-cleaning sinks, and in front of the sink a weight-sensor that weighs you in and electronically flashes your weight as you brush your teeth.

The tub could be programmed to fill to the temperature of your choice as you slept, and if you overslept the water would empty automatically. The tub would also feature a keyboard of electronic controls with everything from a telephone to intercom to music and television.

They also wanted showers that wouldn't get your hair wet (or for boys under 10, showers that wouldn't get your body wet). The entire floor would be a drain.

Speaking as a mother and a wife, if there's one thing a bathroom doesn't need, it's more comforts. You can't get the kids out now. I had one kid who went in there at 12 and didn't come out until it was time to get married.

I think the first thing we should do is to keep traffic flowing by taking out mirrors. If you want to look at the underside of your tongue or spit on your cowlick, go to your room. I'd like to see a large holding tank for hair just under the drain. When it gets full ... you move.

My all-time favorite bathroom accessory was in a plush restroom off the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York. Every time you dropped a towel and a woman picked it up, you dropped a donation into a little saucer. I could retire to Barbados in three weeks!

Calendar of celestial events

JANUARY 1
Look for the two day old Crescent Moon in southwest evening twilight. Sunrise 7:49 a.m. Sunset 5:56 p.m.

JANUARY 3
Watch the waxing Crescent Moon during the next three evenings as it overtakes and passes brilliant Jupiter and dimmer red Mars.

JANUARY 4
Jupiter is three degrees right and Mars nine degrees upper left of this evening's waxing Crescent Moon. Earth is making this year's closest approach to the Sun this afternoon, but it has little effect on our winter temperature.

JANUARY 6
First Quarter Moon

JANUARY 7
Venus, now at its brightest, dominates the southeast predawn sky. Scorpius' bright red star, Antares, is 12 degrees below and golden yellow Saturn is 16 degrees lower left of Venus.

JANUARY 10
Waxing Gibbous Moon, now high in the eastern evening sky, is passing through Taurus with the Pleiades (Seven Sisters) star cluster eight degrees upper left and the red giant star Aldebaran 10 degrees below.

JANUARY 14
Full moon with Gemini's twin stars, Pollux and Castor, upper left, three degrees and seven degrees respectively.

JANUARY 15
Sunrise 7:50 a.m. Sunset 6:07 p.m.

JANUARY 17
Waning Gibbous Moon rises before 9 p.m. with Leo's brightest star, Regulus four degrees to the right.

JANUARY 18
Watch in the southeast predawn sky during the next 12 days, as Venus moves from eight degrees upper right to four degrees lower left of Saturn.

JANUARY 22
Last Quarter Moon high in south in morning sky is four degrees left of Virgo's brightest star, Spica.

JANUARY 25

JANUARY 29
New Moon.

JANUARY 31
Look for two day old waxing Crescent Moon in southwest evening twilight. Mercury is eighteen degrees lower right, Jupiter ten degrees upper left and Mars 30 degrees upper left of Moon. Sunrise is 7:43 a.m. Sunset is 6:22 p.m.

DON'T GAMBLE WITH DEATH

IF YOU DRINK...DON'T DRIVE!

Before you arrive at a party, designate one person in your car to abstain from drinking alcohol beverages for that evening. They will be your sober, safe way home!

Remember, that one last drink could make a difference in your driving responses. Never drive if you are sleepy and watch out for others who may not be as careful. Let's make the holidays enjoyable by driving safely.

IF YOU DO DRINK TOO MUCH - CALL TIPSY TAXI FOR A FREE RIDE HOME.
