A SPRING MEDLEY. Brown branches laden with cherry blossoms reach to bluer skies as winter - gray fades to the freshness of spring. Peeking from behind the branches, almost like clouds, are dazzling daffodils, now appearing on lawns and in gardens around the city, a tangible promise of warmer weather to come.

'All clear' sounded before worker killed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An "all clear" announcement that it was safe to return to work sounded over Kennedy Space Center moments before one worker was killed and five others nearly asphyxiated in a nitrogen-filled compartment of the space shuttle Columbia, an official says.

The compartment, filled with nitrogen as a precaution against fire during a dress rehearsal Thursday for the shuttle's launch, should have been refilled with air before workers were allowed back in the area, said Dick Barton, a spokesman for Rockwell International Co., the major shuttle contractor.

SITE OF SHUTTLE ACCIDENT. The engine compartment of the space shuttle Columbia is shown where an accident occurred involving Rockwell workers at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla. The accident involving the first launch pad fatality since a flash fire killed three Apollo I astronauts in January 1967, was not the result of a flaw in the shuttle, space agency officials said.

Five of the men, including the dead man, worked for Rockwell and the sixth was a security guard.

"I just happened to be in the area, and I heard the announcement: 'Clear for return to normal work.' Regretfully, it was not," Barton said.

Asked if someone at the space center gave an all-clear announcement prematurely, Barton said: "That's the inference, but I can't go any further. I did hear the one statement. I can say that. But I didn't hear any other statements that were made after that."

The men would not have smelled anything peculiar or have had any other warning that they were entering a deadly area. All five reportedly passed out almost immediately, and soon after they were evacuated from the compartment.

The dead man was identified as John Bjornstad, 50, of Titusville, a senior mechanical technician for Rockwell.

Two of the workers were hospitalized. One was in critical condition early today at Shands Teaching Hospital in Gainesville, the other was in satisfactory condition. The other workers were treated and released.

Rockwell and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration convened boards of inquiry after the incident.

The accident marred a "super" dress rehearsal for the nation's first reusable spacecraft.

Space agency officials in Washington said the accident was not caused by any flaw in the shuttle and said the craft would be launched on schedule next month.

The workers were felled quickly by the lack of oxygen when they entered a "nitrogen purge" zone, said Rocky Raab, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman.

It was the first launch pad fatality at the space center since a Jan. 27, 1967, flash fire killed three Apollo I astronauts — Virgil Grissom, Edward White II and Roger Chaffee — during a pre-launch test. In all, eight people have died here, some in accidents unrelated to launchings.

The shuttle, delayed repeatedly by technical problems over the past two years, is scheduled for its maiden voyage into space sometime during the week of April 5.

HGH gets clean bill of health

A survey team from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) reported Pampa's Highland General Hospital is in compliance with accepted hospital standards, and hospital personnel were commended on their work.

Hospital spokesman Mel Mottet said Highland General follows a continuing program of self - evaluation and professional review to assure the community of the highest possible standards of health care.

Mottet, administrator of South Park Hospital in Lubbock, has been filling in for Norman Knox, HGH administrator, who remains in an Amarillo hospital following a heart attack he suffered Tuesday.

The team has completed a one - day survey of the local hospital as part of the routine program of certification.

A hospital release stated the JCAH survey is conducted every two years to ensure that accredited hospitals are maintaining the standards set forth for such institutions.

The three - member survey team included a physician, a nurse and an administrator. Participating in the HGH survey were Dr. John Olney, Mildred Nagler, R.N., and Charles Wynne.

Wynne, in summing up the survey, said the hospital facility is in compliance with accepted standard, and commended hospital personnel for their work.

The team's recommendations, following a summation conference with the hospital department heads, are forwarded to JCAH headquarters, for a formal certification of the hospital.

That certification is received by the hospital two or three months following completion of the survey, Mottet noted.

Knox condition 'guarded'

Highland General Hospital administrator Norman Knox remained in guarded condition in the coronary care unit of an Amarillo hospital late Thursday.

A High Plains Baptist Hospital spokesman said his condition was still guarded, but that his vital signs were stable.

Knox, 43, was treated at Highland General Hospital for a heart attack early Tuesday, before he was transferred to the Amarillo hospital.

A spokesman for Highland General said Tuesday that Knox had awakened with chest pains at 4 a.m. Tuesday at his home. Knox was taken to the local hospital where it was found he was suffering a heart attack, she said.

Knox was appointed administrator of Highland General on Sept. 1, 1980.

Mrs. Daniel told ex-husband she tripped and fell

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Larry Moore, the ex-husband of Vickie Daniel, testified today he asked his former wife what happened the day Price Daniel Jr. was fatally shot and she replied that she had tripped.

Moore, divorced from Mrs. Daniel in 1976 after a nine-year marriage, said he had a conversation with Mrs. Daniel on Feb. 28 concerning Daniel's death.

Moore said he asked Mrs. Daniel what happened and she replied, "You'll never believe me, but I tripped and fell."

Attorney Zeke Zbranek did not pursue the questioning further.

Zbranek then asked Moore if Mrs. Daniel ever discussed any of her fights with Daniel.

"Yes," Moore said, "she said he was easy to whip because he was weak."

It was Moore's second day on the witness stand. In testimony Thursday, he said Mrs. Daniel once asked him what kind of gun he would use to shoot someone.

Following a dull day of testimony concerning cancelled checks belonging to the late Price Daniel Jr., Moore startled the jury Thursday with his revelation that Mrs. Daniel had twice talked to him about shooting someone.

Mrs. Daniel is charged with murder in the shooting death of Daniel, who died at his home here Jan. 19. Mrs. Daniel has pleaded innocent, claiming self defense.

Moore, 31, testified he spoke with his ex-wife in 1980 concerning the use of guns.

"She asked me what type of gun I would use if I were going to shoot someone," Moore said. "I told her I'd use a shotgun. She asked why, and I said it would have a positive stopping effect at close range."

"She asked if a .22 would do just as good, and I said yes, if you hit the right spot."

The testimony came in a custody suit brought by Jean-Daniel Murph, who is trying to gain custody of Mrs. Daniel's two children by the former Texas House Speaker.

Moore testified that in 1979, Mrs. Daniel told him she was contemplating a divorce from Daniel and at one point said, "I'll shoot the SOB before I let him take the kids."

Asked if he reported either incident to authorities, Moore said he didn't think Mrs. Daniel was serious. "I just thought it was something off the wall," he said.

Moore said that during the couple's nine-year marriage, he often had to restrain his wife because she became violent when angered.

With the jury outside the courtroom and Mrs. Daniel listening passively, Moore testified if they got into a heated fight during their marriage, Mrs. Daniel would try to scratch his face.

"Once it got so bad, I had to hold her down and cut her fingernails," Moore said.

Zeke Zbranek, Mrs. Murph's attorney, asked Moore if Mrs. Daniel ever attacked him with a weapon.

"Yes, a butcher knife," Moore said. "I grabbed her arm and stopped her."

Moore said he and Mrs. Daniel fought on an average of twice a month during their marriage.

Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel's attorney, objected strongly to Moore's testimony concerning fights during their marriage.

"That's about 200 fights over the course of their marriage that we're going to have to go into and find out if and why Mrs. Daniel scratched him," Haynes said.

"It's so ancilliary it can only confuse the court."

Moore said that during Mrs. Daniel's marriage to Price Daniel, she and her children stayed at his house on four or five occasions following quarrels with Daniel.

"She'd normally stay just three or four days on each occasion," Moore said. "The children came with her."

Zbranek asked Moore if Mrs. Daniel shared his bed, and Moore replied, "yes, she did."

Before Moore took the stand late in the day, Zbranek tediously introduced cancelled checks from three of Daniel's accounts, showing various family expenses for which he paid.

During the morning session, court was recessed 30 minutes while the state champion Hardin girls basketball team carried on a celebration on the courthouse lawn, complete with a band that played the "William Tell Overture."

Asked about the slow moving nature of the case, Zbranek said, "It all seems obvious to me, but it can't happen in one day. It's not like on television where they've only got 30 minutes."

'Christmas tree' theft in Wheeler investigated

Wheeler County Sheriff's Deputies, a Texas Ranger and an investigator from the Union of Texas Drilling Company are investigating the theft of a $100,000 "christmas tree" from a Wheeler County oil lease.

"The stainless steel christmas tree, owned by the Union of Texas Drilling Company, was taken about March 9 from the Tom Puryear Ranch, seven miles east of Wheeler and one mile north," according to Wheeler County Sheriff Deputy Lonnie Miller today.

"There are no suspects in custody at this time," Miller said.

"We do have some clues that we are working on at this time, but we are not releasing any information about them," Miller said.

"Whoever took this equipment just went ahead and took it apart piece by piece. There was obviously more than one person involved in this theft, probably two persons," Miller said.

"We aren't having as much trouble with oil field equipment thefts in Wheeler. This is only about the fourth such theft in a year," Miller said.

A "christmas tree" is an oil field term for a series of valves used to control the pressure and flow of a producing well.

In an unrelated theft case Thursday, charges of third - degree felony theft were filed today against Tom Gray Barker, 52, of Shamrock and Nina McCurley, 47, of McLean in connection with the theft of condensate gas from a lease owned by the M.C.R. Oil Corporation of Texas, according to information from the Hemphill County Sheriff's office.

Baker and McCurley were arraigned today before Hemphill County Justice of the Peace Frankie Hill and bond was set at $10,000 each.

The two remain in custody in the Hemphill County jail.

The condensate was taken early Thursday morning from the M.C.R. Oil Company Little Lease located 11 miles south and one mile west of Highway 83, according to Hemphill County Sheriff C.H. Wright.

The condensate was valued at $38.50 per barrel by M.C.R. officials and the amount of condensate taken had not been released at press time today.

Four employees from M.C.R. Oil Corporation and sheriff's deputies worked together to stake out various oil leases in Hempill County and according to M.C.R. Production Foreman Bob Goodwin, "We just got lucky Thursday and caught them."

"We have been bothered with these type thefts for the past three months," Goodwin said, "and as long as there is a market place for the stolen condensate..."

Grand jury hears evidence in Maynard shooting

The Gray County Grand Jury met in special session today in 31st District Court here to consider evidence in the Dec. 10 fatal shooting of 40 - year - old Shirley Louise Maynard. The dead woman's husband, Preston Wayne Maynard of Pampa, is charged with first degree murder in connection with the death.

Maynard, 45, has been in and out of hospitals and convalescent homes since the day of the shooting, suffering from a gunshot wound to his knee.

At press time today, the grand jury was continuing to hear witnesses in the case, a court house spokesman said.

The shooting occurred in the couple's mobile home in the Pampa the evening of Dec. 10.

Gray County Sheriff's deputies, alerted to the situation by a phone call from Lipscomb County, surrounded the mobile home at 6:40 p.m.

At 7 p.m., a shot rang out from the mobile home.

Repeated attempts by sheriff's deputies and Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan to communicate with Maynard were met with silence.

Law enforcement officers continued their vigil until 9 p.m. when officers, armed with rifles and pistols, forced the door of the mobile home.

Inside, the officers discovered Mrs. Maynard lying on the living room sofa, dead of a single gunshot wound to the chest. Maynard, was lying on the floor beside the dead woman.

Mrs. Maynard was a nurse at Highland General Hospital. Jordan said she had called in sick to the hospital at 3:30 p.m. Dec. 7 and did not report back to the hospital before the shooting.

Maynard was employed as a custodian and delivery man for the Pampa Independent School District. After the shooting, school officials said Maynard had been absent for two weeks because of bronchitis and exhaustion.

The regular session of the Gray County Grand Jury is scheduled for Monday at 10 a.m., Assistant District Attorney Penny Burt said today.

She said 18 cases will be presented to the grand jurors in 31st District Court here. Judge Grainger McIlhany will preside over the grand jury.

Cases to be included in the regular session will involve charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated assault, injury to a child, drug offenses, burglary, forgery, theft by check, theft by taking and theft of service, and possession of a prohibited weapon.

Burt said the District Attorney expects to complete the presentation of evidence on all 18 cases by late Monday.

Study says budget cuts would strip poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study says President Reagan's proposed budget cuts would strip low-income families of their "already meager resources" while lowering the income of some Americans to well below half the poverty level.

The comprehensive report, one of the first of its kind on the Reagan economic program, also predicts "serious political, administrative and financial problems" as deficit-ridden state and local governments take up social programs now run by the federal government.

The study, prepared by researchers affiliated with the University of Chicago and released Thursday, scrutinized planned cuts in six major social programs, including Medicaid, federally funded jobs, food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the nation's primary welfare program.

"President Reagan's proposals to reduce federal spending for these public assistance programs have two critical flaws: they strip low-income families of their already meager resources while inflation continues to erode the value of their incomes, and they shift significant fiscal burdens onto states and localities whose budgets are already in the red," the researchers said.

"In some cases, the combined impact of the administration's budget proposals will reduce the income level of the poor to less than 50 percent of the poverty standard."

The study used $7,070 as the poverty-line income level for a non-farming family of three. That is the same poverty standard that takes effect on April 6 for programs run by the Community Services Administration.

"The proposals will discourage work by making it less profitable to maintain earnings," the study added.

The study applied the Reagan cuts to "typical low-income families" in 10 states: New York, California, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah.

It said, for example, that a hypothetical non-working mother in Mississippi with two children and no other income receives $96 a month in Aid to Families with Dependent Children and $180 a month in food stamps.

Under the administration's plan, the woman would lose $24 a month in food stamps, thus lowering her family income from 47 percent of the poverty line to 43 percent.

In Texas, the study profiled another woman with two children who receives a total of $371 a month in AFDC and food payments, as well as maximum allowable earned income and tax credits. Under the Reagan plan, that family's monthly income would drop to $285 after four months, thus lowering its income from 63 percent of the poverty line to 48 percent.

Other states where benefits were more generous also showed substantial drops, the report said.

The families also would be hit by reductions in the other programs studied, including Medicaid and subsidized housing.

The study said that seven key social programs exempted from major cuts — including veterans benefits, Medicare and summer youth jobs — do not "primarily aid low-income people."

Edwin L. Dale, a spokesman for the administration's Office of Management and Budget, said the OMB had "no great challenge to the figures" used in the new study.

However, he said of the study's claim that some people will be discouraged from working: "Our proposed changes do not significantly worsen an already existing problem — that is the disincentive to work.

"We regard welfare — AFDC — as a safety net for the truly poor and not as income supplement for the working poor," he added. Roughly two-thirds of those profiled in the study had some earnings.

The study was directed by Thomas C.W. Joe, a high-ranking welfare official in the Nixon administration.

Harrelson-Chagra connection is speculated in Wood investigation

DALLAS (AP) — El Paso attorney Joe Chagra, who has said he expects to be indicted in connection with the case, planned to fly to San Antonio today for a talk with U.S. attorneys about the assassination of a federal judge, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

In a copyright story, the News said FBI agents searched Chagra's home Feb. 27 and found a map and a tape recording that relate to the judge's assassination. Following that search, Chagra said he expected to be named in an indictment.

U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was gunned down outside his home the morning of May 29, 1979. The ensuing government investigation has been described by federal agents as the most intensive since President Kennedy was killed in 1963.

The newspaper said convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson and Chagra's brother, Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, are the two "key suspects" in the Wood death.

The News, quoting sealed search warrants and inventories from the FBI raid, said Harrelson made the map showing where the murder weapon from the Wood killing was buried, in a remote location near Lake Ray Hubbard east of Dallas.

He made the map while Chagra was visiting him as he was being held in the Harris County Jail at Houston on unrelated charges of possessing illegal weapons and gambling paraphernalia as well as narcotics, the newspaper said.

Chagra copied the map onto a small tablet and federal agents found it in his briefcase when they searched his home, the newspaper reported.

The tape-recording was made Aug. 30, 1980, three days before Harrelson was arrested east of El Paso on state weapons, narcotics and gambling charges, during a telephone conversation Chagra had with Harrelson, the newspaper said.

On the tape, the News reported, Harrelson said he expected to be charged with Wood's death.

Chagra's brother was to be tried before Wood, known as "Maximum John" for the severity of his sentences in drug cases, and Chagra — acting as his brother's attorney — asked that the case be transferred. He claimed Wood could not preside over a fair trial because of a long-standing feud with the Chagra family.

Wood was killed the day Jimmy Chagra's trial was to have started. Jimmy Chagra was later tried and convicted in Austin and sentenced to 30 years in prison. The newspaper said he was transferred from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., to a high-security prison in Marion, Ill., the day agents raided his brother's house in El Paso.

The News quoted unidentified sources as saying the transfer came after two attempts to smuggle weapons into Leavenworth and to protect another inmate who may have informed against Chagra.

Harrelson was convicted in the 1968 murder-for-hire of Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. He was released on parole in September 1978 after serving five years of a 15-year sentence on that conviction.

Reagan amazed at unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he can't understand how people complain about being out of work when the Sunday newspapers he reads carry 30 or more pages of help-wanted ads.

An economist who agrees with him says that's because society has gone too far toward paying people for not working.

But a couple of other economists, critics of the president, say he is reading too much into the want ads; even in the Depression, they say, some jobs went begging.

Last Sunday's Washington Post, as Reagan noted, carried 33½ pages of help-wanted ads. But only a handful of jobs were for people at the bottom — those with no marketable skills and no experience.

There were more than two pages of ads for computer specialists, offering all sorts of inducements, but only three openings for dishwashers.

"Secretaries — where are you?" begged one ad. But "situations wanted" ads by housekeepers looking for work outnumbered ads by employers looking for housekeepers.

It was clear that most of the ads were addressed to people already working. Ads tried to lure draftsmen, engineers and nurses away from their jobs with promises of big pay and cushy benefits.

A White House transcript shows he said: "We know the high unemployment rate here in Washington, we know in New York and their problems, and yet how do I explain that — or how do we explain that in the Sunday Times, New York Times, there were 45½ pages of help-wanted ads and in The Washington Post Sunday there were 33½ pages of help-wanted ads and these were jobs calling for people of every range that you could make.

Sales tax rebate totals confusing

March sales tax rebates figures for Pampa look worse than they are, Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett said today.

In the March sales tax rebate release from State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office, Pampa was reported to have received only $87,957.35 as compared to $168,645.68 this time in 1981.

Sackett said the reason for the dicrepancy is a change in the state comptroller's accounting period and processing timetable. However, he noted that despite Pampa's low figures, the city was still 20 percent above 1980 in total sales tax rebates.

"As far as I can determine, our economy is still in great shape," Sackett said.

Pampa's neighboring cities were also reported to have a declining sales tax rebate.

Plainview, a city of roughly the same size as Pampa, received a net payment of $50,122.17 as compared to $143,650.21 in 1980.

Amarillo's rebate was way down also — $466,233.58 compared to $1,099,275.39 in 1980.

Borger's rebate at $66,312.93 was almost half the $126,966.28 paid in 1980.

In the cover letter of the rebate report, Bullock said March payments of $162.5 million were up $23.8 million over the first quarter totals of 1980. He said the total rebates for this month equal $37.9 million.

Bullock said that despite the changes in the accounting period and processing timetable, the 1981 payments are generally running well ahead of the 1980 rebates for the first three months of the year.

McLean businessman delaying private club

"The issue of the private club in McLean is a dead issue - for now," Neal Middleton said Thursday.

Middleton is the owner of the Dixie Restaurant in McLean and was asking for the private club license to allow the sale of alcoholic beverages in his restaurant.

"We have run into a snag in this issue," Middleton said.

The snag, according to Middleton, is a discrepancy in the number of letters written in favor of the private club in McLean to Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy.

The awarding of the license for a private club is based on the approval of the county judge, the county attorney and the county sheriff, Middleton said in an earlier interview.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan made his opposition to the establishment of a private club in McLean known in an advertisement in the McLean newspaper. County Arttorney Robert McPhearson said that since there was no legal reason to oppose the private club he was not officially against it.

Judge Kennedy said he would base his decision regarding the private club on the wishes of the people (as made known to him through letters written concerning the issue).

On Tuesday Judge Kennedy issued his position on the issue.

"I have received letters from 248 persons opposd to a private club and 19 in favor of a private club near McLean," Kennedy said.

"Based upon this informal survey, it will be my position to oppose licensing of a private club to sell alcoholic beverages in the McLean area," Kennedy said.

Middleton said, "I am questioning the number of letters written in favor of the private club to Judge Kennedy."

"I am not questioning the number of letters opposed. There are people for the issue, that say they wrote letters to Judge Kennedy and we are checking into the matter now."

"We hope to be able to say something more about this in the next few days," Middleton concluded.

Polish workers put on strike alert

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity labor federation ordered its 10 million members on national strike alert today and shut down three central Polish cities with two-hour warning strikes after a clash in one of them between police and some 25 striking farmers.

There were no reports of incidents today in strikes at Bydgoszcz, scene of the Thursday clash, and the neighboring cities of Grudziaz and Torun.

Solidarity said the police beat the farmers and threw them out of the Bydgoszcz city hall. Warsaw Radio said the police led them out of the building.

It was the first serious clash reported between the police and the masses since the outbreak of labor unrest last summer. And it occurred as Soviet bloc troops were holding maneuvers in Poland and its three communist neighbors — the Soviet Union, East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

In Moscow, meanwhile, Soviet officials met with a Polish delegation headed by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, and Tass said they discussed trade and economic relations. It was the second meeting between Soviet and Polish officials this month, underscoring the Kremlin's concern about Poland's labor unrest.

Lech Walesa and other national leaders of Solidarity rushed to Bydgoszcz Thursday night to try to take direct control of the potentially explosive situation. In a communique, they announced a break in all negotiations with the communist government.

The union leaders said the police action was a "provocation" against the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier and defense minister, who stressed the importance of continuing dialogue with the independent union when he called last month for a 90-day moratorium on strikes.

About 150 farmers have been holding a sit-in strike since Monday at the Bydgoszcz headquarters of the government-run United Peasants' Party renewing a demand for an independent farmers' union and other concessions from the government.

Led by local farm leader Jan Rulewski, a delegation of about 25 of the farmers went to the city hall to negotiate with municipal officials. There were conflicting reports of what happened at the end of the meeting.

Local union officials said the government officials broke off the talks, and the farmers asked to stay in the building to draft a communique. They claimed about 200 uniformed and plainclothes police stormed in, beat up the farmers and forcibly evicted them through a back door to avoid several hundred "sympathizers and onlookers" outside the main entrance.

They said Rulewski was hospitalized with head injuries.

Moore trial delayed, more indictments seen

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has postponed indefinitely the Texas Brilab trial of a local union official until reputed crime boss Carlos Marcello has been tried in New Orleans.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor came amid speculation that the government would seek additional indictments in the Texas case in May.

O'Conor granted the motion by government and defense lawyers Thursday to delay the scheduled April 27 trial of Deer Park labor leader L.G. Moore.

Several people subpoenaed to testify at Moore's trial are "essential witnesses" at the Marcello trial, attorneys said.

Moore was given a separate trial from three co-defendants — Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and Austin attorneys Donald Ray and Randall Wood.

The four were charged in June 1980 with fraud, conspiracy and bribery. The government claimed Moore and undercover FBI agent Joseph Hauser delivered $5,000 in cash to Clayton in exchange for his influence in reopening bids on a state employee insurance contract.

Clayton, Ray and Wood were acquitted last October.

According to the motion, Moore would be able to ask that all charges against him be tried at once is he is named in additional indictments.

Other court documents have indicated a federal grand jury also has been investigating a health insurance contract awarded in 1979 by the Houston City Council and negotiations involving similar contracts for labor groups.

The motion said Moore would use entrapment as the same defense in all cases.

"A joint trial of offenses will be an exercise in judicial economy as well as saving Moore from participating in a war of attrition with the United States," the motion said.

City building permits show local slowdown

Pampa's building permit valuations for the first two months of 1981 are almost one million dollars below last year's figures for the same period.

The February building permit report states permits for buildings valued at $666,136 have been issued in this calendar year as compared to $1,591,000 issued by this time in 1980.

In light of these dismal figures, city building inspector Steve Vaughn said the much - predicted recession may have finally struck Pampa.

"I think we have finally hit bottom," Vaughn commented. "It's been going better than I thought it would for a long time," he said.

In February, only two permits for single family residences were issued with a total valuation of $114,174, according to the monthly building permit report.

The report states only one commercial building permit was issued at a valuation of $86,000.

Four mobile home permits were issued with the total value of the homes at $44,500.

Even alterations and additions were down from previous months with five alterations to dwelling permits issued along with one permit for commercial building alteration.

Fiscal year figures are down also for building permit valuations. In 1980, $2,898,730 in building permits were issued as compared to a total valuation of $2,102,588 for 1981.

March figures are not promising, Vaughn said.

"Looks like March is worse off than last month," he said. No building permits for commercial or residential building had been issued recently, he said.

"I don't know what's to blame, whether it's the economy or over - building," Vaughn said. "I'd tend to blame the economy, though," he added.

"It's gotten to the point, with interest rates like they are, that people can't affort to build houses or businesses," Vaughn said.

Total valuation of building starts for February was listed as $303,074.

Senator charges booze lobbies endangering age limit increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, says beer, liquor and grocery store lobbyists are endangering the final passage of his bill raising Texas' legal drinking age from 18 to 19.

The issue, he said, is an amendment added by the House which puts a responsibility on sellers of alcoholic beverage to make sure customers are not under-age.

"I understand they (lobbyists) are putting pressure on some of the senators not to go along with the amendment," Sarpalius said.

The House passed the bill, 104-15, on Thursday, returning it to the Senate for action on the amendment. If senators OK the amendment, the bill goes to Gov. Bill Clements for signature into law. But if they reject it, the measure will be sent to a House-Senate conference committee for compromise talks.

Clements submitted raising the drinking age as an emergency matter and is expected to sign the bill if he gets it.

Sarpalius said he feared losing the entire bill in the fight over the House amendment.

The House amendment puts teeth in the law that says a tavern or beverage merchant may not "knowingly" sell alcohol to a minor — defined in the bill as anyone under 19. A seller would be presumed to know a person was a minor if he did not request a driver's license, military identification card or other proof of age.

Sarpalius said grocers, as well as liquor and beer interests, object to the amendment.

"They don't like the idea of being required to ask for an ID, and the responsibility that is being placed on them," he said in an interview.

Sarpalius said he gave each of the 31 senators a copy of the amendment to take home and study over the weekend. He said he would talk to them again on Monday.

"If it looks like I have the support to concur (in the amendment), I will. ... I support the amendment," he said.

Speaker Bill Clayton, who would appoint House members of a conference committee if one is required, also favors the amendment.

"I know he wants the amendment on there," said the speaker's press secretary, George Works.

PTAs, teachers and school administrators pushed for the bill, saying it would help stop a growing problem of drunkenness in the high schools.

Students who are 18 are drinking on their lunch hours and also buying beer for younger students, they testified.

Since few persons are still in high school at 19, raising the drinking age would reduce the amoung of alcohol-related problems involving students, supporters of the bill said.

Military personnel could continue drinking at age 18 as long as they did it on military bases, where a federal law permits the lower drinking age.

Shrimp boats are inspected

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Shrimp boats docked along the Texas Gulf Coast are being inspected by state and federal agents followinng complains that some fishermen, including Vietnamese refugees, are operating unlicensed, oversized vessels.

The officers received a list 231 boats from game wardens who said the vessels might need documentation. Americans own 158 of those on the list while 83 are Vietnamese-owned vessels.

Gov. Bill Clements asked the U.S. Coast Guard and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to inspect the vessels.

Native shrimp fishermen have complained that Vietnamese refugees are operating boats without licenses and are building boats in excess of a five-ton limit.

"These are boats that could be in violation ... or operating illegally," said Frank Dickerson of the wildlife department.

Spring light dims in smoky rooms

LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Spring is here — not that it matters much in the statehouse where legislators, lobbyists, journalists and other players in the indoor sport of politics are at work.

During the day the Capitol halls are often crowded and the meeting rooms full. At night the nearby bars are busy, and parking places are hard to find on Sixth Street, where chic restaurants offer one kind of comfort and prostitutes another.

But outside, all week, Austin has been gleaming, glittering, bursting into bloom and leaf. An ornamental peach tree laden with thick clusters of white flowers grows on the east side of the Capitol grounds, a reminder to denizens of smoky rooms that seasons have changed.

Spring arrived today, this year's vernal equinox. The start of the season is literally heavenly. Spring begins when the sun crosses the earth's celestial equator, making night and day of equal length all over the world.

But the blooming truth of the matter is that spring arrives when flowers open, tender green translucent leaves come out, and the air softens and warms. By this definition, spring hit town about a week ago here, and almost didn't show up at all last year.

"It was so crummy last year, there's really no comparison," said Kelly Prehn, a supervisor with the Austin Parks and Recreation Department's horticulture division. "We had a late freeze, just about this time of year, and it knocked everything back to nothing.

"That's why everything's so pretty this year. They didn't use much energy last time," he said Wednesday.

In the Austin Area Garden Center, a 16-acre garden that is the showpiece of the city's 8,173 acres of parkland, azaleas — pale pink, dark rose, white, clear red, fuchsia — produce masses of color under purple cascades from the flowers of mountain laurel trees. The scent is heavy and sweet.

Small Johnny-jump-ups, violet and yellow, grow among gold pansies and bright red dianthus. Cardinal peach trees with fat scarlet flowers are next to peppermint peaches, fruitless ornamentals that bloom white, pink and rose.

A huge, fragrant wisteria droops lavender blooms over one of the shallow ponds. Nearby a pussy willow has put out furry blooms that shine like highly polished silver.

"Jesus is back, and he's a vegetarian, and love," says a young woman who gave her name only as Elizabeth. She wore a long, loose, white dress covered with a kind of serape of khaki-colored wool, as did the other members of "Able Christ."

"We don't believe in killing, sex or materialism," she said, adding that they were "nomadic."

Another member of the group, who said his name was "Brother," leaned into the park's wishing well, scooping up coins.

Eventually the police stopped the quartet, took back the money and arrested Brother and another man called Clyde.

"When they make enough people uncomfortable, it's time to hassle 'em a little bit," said one officer.

Spring brings Austin a bumper crop of transients and "bums," according to officer Dave Smith, who works in the department's Crime Analysis Division.

"It picks up quite a bit this time of year," he said. "You get a lot more bums moving in, and they come from all over the country. This is the season for 'em.

"It's warm, it's nice. They know they can get away with a lot," he said.

So not everything spring brings is beautiful. Statistically it's not even Texas' most romantic season.

The state Bureau of Vital Statistics has figures proving that Texans get married most often in the summer — over 20,000 June brides alone in 1979, the last year for which numbers are available.

There are also many more divorces in June, July and August, but since Texas requires a 60-day waiting period from filing date to granting of divorce, it could be argued that spring is the beginning of the end for love and marriage.

And spring has the lowest number of births: 58,493. But who wants to fool around in July, August and September? It's too hot, and people are busy killing each other.

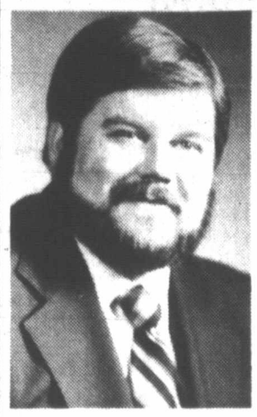

Car runs under truck, man killed

ATLANTA, Texas (AP) — A Longview man was killed Thursday when his car ran under a stolen truck left across a highway, authorities said.

Raymond Combs, a 76-year-old retiree, was pronounced dead on the scene after the 3 a.m. accident, highway patrolman Larry Aycock said.

The truck had been abandoned across three lanes of U.S. 59 about 6 miles north of Atlanta. Aycock said no flares or markers had been placed around it.

Officials at Friedman Steel Co. of Texarkana, the owner of the truck, had not realized the truck was missing until the accident was reported, Aycock said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Caribbean challenge

The continuing challenge of U.S. foreign policy in the Caribbean region must be to neutralize the troublemaking role being played by Cuba.

We can seek to counter the initiatives taken by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro wherever he moves as the agent of his masters in the Soviet Union. We tried this option without success in Angola and Ethiopia. Perhaps we should have tried harder.

We are striving now to reduce Castro's influence in Nicaragua and prevent his influence from spreading into neighboring El Salvador. The Reagan administration has mounted a strong effort to reduce the flow of arms from Nicaragua to the guerrillas in El Salvador. It is believed that the arms are being supplied under Cuban direction.

The troubles in El Salvador are not simple and easy to solve. They won't go away, even if we succeed in cutting off the arms flow entirely. But reducing the level of violence is certainly worthwhile as an immediate objective.

The best way to stop Cuba's troublemaking might be to reach an agreement with Castro which would free him from the domination of his Soviet masters. We don't know if such an agreement is possible at this time. But an effort could be made.

IN 1975, President Gerald Ford made a beginning toward easing relations with Havana. Shortly after taking office in 1977, President Jimmy Carter took several steps toward normalizing relations with Cuba. But Angola soured things for Ford. The Cuban role in Ethiopia, the flap over the stationing of a Soviet combat brigade in Cuba, and the flood of refugees from Cuba dumped on Florida by Castro soured the relationship for Carter.

Now it appears the El Salvador issue is increasing tensions between Castro and Washington.

It has been 20 years since we broke relations with Communist Cuba and imposed a trade embargo. We have tried and failed to isolate Cuba diplomatically and economically. We may have driven Cuba deeper into the arms of the Soviet bear. The results have not been good, either for Cuba or for the United States.

There are potential advantages for us as well as for Cuba in normalizing our relationship. A new administration in Washington can take new initiatives without being hobbled by the memory of previous disappointments.

President Richard Nixon opened the way toward normalizing relations with Communist China, to our mutual advantage. The new policy worked only because the rulers of China wanted it to work.

No new relationship with Cuba can develop if Castro doesn't want it to develop. But he should be given to understand that this country can offer incentives for good behavior, at the same time that we threaten punishments for bad behavior.

The El Salvador issue offers an opportunity for Washington to make a new approach to Cuba in the hope of improving U.S. - Cuban relations and reducing Soviet influence.

The vulnerability of communism

We don't count ourselves among the admirers of former president Nixon. But most observers will concede that the man, in certain areas, has a shrewd grasp of world affairs. Like all politicians, he is not always consistent or principled in the way he approaches these matters, but he is a serious observer who occasionally offers important insights.

The other day Nixon made his first political speech since resigning the presidency, and some of his insights regarding the current status of the Soviet Union are worth pondering.

Nixon noted that some of the Soviet Union's military successes may have actually weakened it as a world power. The military intervention in Afghanistan has cost the communist leadership dearly in terms of world prestige, as well as money and manpower. The Soviets are pouring millions each day not only in Afghanistan but into Yemen, Cuba and Ethiopia. While there may be short - term military gains, each new venture results in a new wave of criticism, a new loss of credibility among the poorer nations of the world with whom the Soviets try to establish a bogus solidarity.

The situation in Poland, says the former president, poses an even more serious no - win situation for the masters of the Kremlin. If they permit a successful counter - revolution they risk the eventual crumbling of their Eastern European empire. If they send in Soviet troops, they risk the final crumbling of detente with Western Europe, which brings them many advantages, and an additional loss of credibility and prestige in the rest of the world.

There are two immediate implications to be drawn from these observations. The first is that communism, for all its formidable power and apparent success, may not be the invincible force it portrays itself as being. Many opponents of communism have fallen into the trap of viewing it as a virtually overpowering adversary, sometimes neglecting the inherent weaknesses of the system and the cracks in the structure.

The second implication is that military adventures, while they may bring about short - range advantages and short - term successes, often carry long - range costs and disadvantages that outweigh the immediate advantages perceived in their successes. Soviet reliance on military tactics may be winning battles but losing the war for success in the world and even for the regime's survival at home.

If Soviet militarism redounds to the regime's long - range disadvantage, if it ultimately weakens the country instead of strengthening it, might not that carry some lessons for those who would rely on American military power?

An apple a day

By Oscar Cooley

Citrus fruit being costly because of the January freeze in Florida, one turns to apples, which somebody -- probably an orchardist -- claims keep the doctor away.

The apple is a versatile fruit, being good either raw or stewed, baked, in pies, or even fried. There is apple dumpling, too, and apple shortcake. Apple jelly is standard, and what is wrong with apple butter, apple strudel? Or cider?

I recall no other fruit you could put down cellar in October and take out for the eating, mellow and juicy, in February or March. Of course it had to be the right variety. A Red Astrachan or a Yellow Transparent would not keep that long, but a Rhode Island Greening or a Northern Spy probably would. And a Baldwin or a Russet surely would.

Nowadays few put those varieties in the cellar, first, because they have no cellar, and second, because the kinds I have mentioned are antiques, not easily obtainable now. People get their apples, like other foods, from the supermarket, where they find Delicious (red and yellow), McIntosh and Winesap mostly, these being favorites of commercial growers.

While, years ago, every farm in the northeast had its apple orchard, now apples are grown for the market on large tracts in the Pacific Northwest, usually irrigated. There are hundreds of varieties of apples, but many of the old favorites are not grown commercially because they do not yield heavily, are subject to pests, or are not good keepers.

All apple trees have to be pruned regularly, sprayed thoroughly and at the right times. To insure against rot, apples have to be kept in a cool place. Those who are in the business store them in nitrogen gas. I'd still like my apple a day from down cellar.

A favorite early apple was the Red Astraghan, though the Peach apple was a close second. Both frequently have "water cores," which makes them especially choice. They ripen in August.

For a fall apple, the Fameuse, or Snow, is good but the McIntosh is even better. It has a snappy flavor all it's own.

We used to have a fall apple called the Hampshire Sweet. A big, yellow apple, it was fine when baked; I liked it especially when cut up in a bowl of bread and milk. The Pound Sweet was even larger but not so tasty.

Another baking apple is the Wolf River, an enormous red - striped fruit -- it excels in size rather than flavor. But one can seldom have everything in one package, though one comes close with a McIntosh. Dig out the core, stuff it with brown or maple sugar, and bake it until soft. With a dab of whipped cream, it's a dessert for a king.

For either pies or sauce, the Rhode Island Greening is hard to equal. Being green, it's not a showy apple, but it has spirit. The Baldwin, red with creamy flesh, is a fine all - around apple, once very common but now seldom seen.

When the farmer set out these old varieties, he did so thinking, not so much of the market as of his own table. He could afford to indulge his taste.

Not all the antiques were good. One, called the Ben Davis, was notoriously bad -- big and red but hard and tasteless as a croquet ball. Grown to sell, no repeat sales could be expected.

Noodle socialism

By Don Graff

Back in the days when the late Nikita Khruschev was loudly and persistently promising to overtake the West economically, there was a lot of discussion of "goulash communism" and its implications, what the effects might be of a preoccupation with consumer goods upon the building of socialism.

Today's People's China may be providing part of the answer: industrial espionage and a capitalist - style compromise in dealing with it.

As reported in a Shanghai newspaper, a technician at a Peking plant developed better methods of turning out that operation's product. So far just fine as far as the management of the state enterprise was concerned. But the technician's willingness to share the innovation with other state plants was something else again.

That brought a reprimand and penalty, which in turn earned the plant management a reprimand from state authorities. But they coupled it with an acknowledgement of the benefits to be derived from allowing enterprises to keep their own technological innovations to themselves; all in the interests of furthering socialist competition.

The technological advance in question: an instant - noodle maker.

We don't call it senility any more

by Paul Harvey

We used to call it "consumption." It started with coughing, ended with spitting blood -- and death.

Then we renamed it "tuberculosis," discovered a remedy, and TB has all but been obliterated from the civilized nations of the earth.

Similarly -- we used to call it "old age."

We would say that he or she had become "senile" -- that he or she "died of old age."

Now we have discovered that much of what we considered "senility" or "dementia" is in fact "Alzheimer's disease."

And there is something we can do about it.

The degenerative manifestations of "old age" have included memory loss, disorientation, confusion, perceptional difficulties, speech problems.

Now we have learned that those are not necessarily symptoms of "old age"; they may instead be symptoms of Alzheimer's disease and may affect people as young as 40.

I know of a man 55 who is struggling to hang onto his executive position because he can no longer read with comprehension, and has difficulty even signing his name.

As the illness progresses, he will be unable to find the bathroom in the home in which he has lived for 30 years.

Eventually, he may not recognize members of his own family.

Finally, he will become a "vegetable."

Heretofore, this patient has been considered "senile," a victim of hardened arteries.

Actually, only 20 percent of such dementias result from hardened arteries. More than half are Alzheimer's disease -- a progressive, degenerative, organic brain disorder.

It is a major health problem which has gone untreated because we gave it the wrong name, assumed it to be a normal result of aging.

Now that Alois Alzheimer has given it a name and now that there is a national association devoted to its diagnosis and treatment -- we are developing a counterattack.

Diet, drugs and altered lifestyle may someday reverse the damage done to the brain by this disease.

As of now, all that's known is that careful use of drugs can lessen agitation and depression, improve sleep patterns. Proper nutrition is particularly helpful.

Also recommended is keeping mind and body active with exercise, hobbies and activities.

Understand, geriatrics -- the understanding of aging -- is a relatively young medical specialty.

But research on aging is accelerated by advances in related sciences. And if the quantity of life for the elderly cannot yet be appreciably expanded, the quality of life can be.

The mental disorientation of one member of the family can disrupt the whole family. Correspondingly, the control of symptoms can be helpful to family relationships.

Cliches of our time

By Anthony Harrigan

The intellectual and moral confusion of the late 20th century has become embedded in the American language. Routinely, we use phrases that show a lack of clarity about the purposes of life.

Juliet Halliburton Burnett, in a recent address at Sweet Briar College in Virginia, called attention to this confusion. She quoted an article in The New York Times that told of a woman who had left her husband and their six children to run a chocolate shop in Hawaii. The husband said he did not consider that his wife had deserted her family, as he appreciated that she needed "to do her own thing."

In other words, he excused her desertion as "fulfillment in her search for self - expression."

Mrs. Burnett exposed the wrongness of this and the shallowness of the excuse, saying: "While growing sounds wholesome, it can camouflage the most selfish acts." It becomes, she said, "the stated reason for every self - indulgence from shirking a job to breaking a marriage."

Mrs. Burnett's comments deserve a wide audience. "We are threatened," she said, "by an ethic of what an editorial writer on my hometown paper calls 'extraordinary utilitarianism where the greatest good requires only that the individual check his own interior to see what his need might be. Gone is the age when the important realm of ethical action was the external world, when judgments of what to do were formed with reference to far more than one individual's needs.' " She added that no one seems to want to be formed or finished, only to grow.

It is good to know that young college women are hearing words such as these. So much hokum has been passed off as wisdom in the past 20 years. It is cheering that authentic wisdom is coming back into vogue.

Mrs. Burnett's address at Sweet Briar fits into a developing pattern. There is a resurgence in patriotism, as evidenced by the national mood and response at the release of the hostages. In Washington, new leaders are standing up for freedom and rejecting the policies of guilt and defeatism that have characterized our government in recent years.

We desperately need a more assertive foreign policy and greater fiscal responsibility. As policies are changed, we also need an inner renewal, a return to traditional values and beliefs.

In her talk, Mrs. Burnett touched on this need. "I think heritage is a beautiful word in sound and in meaning," she said. "To me, it implies a gift unearned, an expression of care for what follows, an ongoing direction, a harvest of sorts. Our heritage includes our families, our institutions, our country and our human society itself."

Well said, Mrs. Burnett. Our country can't be restored by economics alone, or a stronger foreign policy. National renewal begins in the heart and mind. It leads to clear intellectual and moral understanding.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 20, the 79th day of 1981. There are 286 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 20, 1942, General Douglas MacArthur made his famous pledge: "I shall return." He had fled from the Philippines to Australia as the islands were invaded by Japan.

On this date:

In 1602, the Dutch East India Company was formed.

In 1941, Yugoslavia agreed to peace terms with Germany in World War II.

In 1956, France recognized the independence of Tunisia, with Bourguiba as its first president.

In 1972, 19 mountain climbers on Japan's Mount Fuji were killed in an avalanche.

Ten years ago: James Chichester-Clark resigned as Prime Minister of Northern Ireland.

Five years ago: Patricia Hearst was convicted of armed robbery for her part in a bank holdup staged by revolutionaries who had kidnapped her.

One year ago: President Tito clung to life in a Yugoslav hospital, several weeks after arrangements had been made for his funeral.

Today's birthdays: Actor Michael Redgrave is 73 years old, as is retired broadcast executive Frank Stanton.

Thought For Today: The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness — Montaigne, French essayist (1533-1592).

John Endecott, governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, brought the first apple seed from England. Apples soon became an important crop. In 1649 Endecott bought 200 acres of land, paying for them with 500 three-year-old apple trees he had raised.

A collection of rocks in the rough shape of a bicycle wheel is located in the Big Horn Mountains of Wyoming. Thought to have been used by Indians around 1700 as a primitive astronomical observatory, it is called the American "Stonehenge."

Census reports showing tremendous Texas growth

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outpouring of Census Bureau facts and figures from its 1980 survey continues to point out Texas' dramatic population growth during the last decade.

A report on metropolitan areas released Thursday shows that five of the 25 fastest growing in the nation from 1970 to 1980 were in Texas.

And 19 of the 25 standard metropolitan statistical areas in the state jumped in the rankings to higher positions.

Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas' largest metropolitan area, rose from 12th biggest in 1970 to eighth and Houston from 16th to ninth.

The Houston area also was the biggest gainer in the United States in terms of actual newcomers, adding 891,930 residents from 1970 to 1980.

Dallas-Fort Worth was second in that category. Its population increased by 586,719 residents during the decade.

The growth rate, however, was highest in smaller metropolitan areas. Bryan-College Station led the state, and was the sixth fastest growing in the nation, with a growth rate of 61.2 percent.

Other Texas metropolitan areas placing in the top 25 fastest growing were McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg 54.2 percent, in 11th place; Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito, 48.3 percent, 18th; Austin, 47.8 percent, 20th; and Houston, 44.6 percent, 21st.

All 25 of the nation's fastest growing metropolitan areas were in the South and West, another indication of the increasing movement of Americans to the Sun Belt.

Preliminary census figures for Texas released earlier this year showed the state grew at a 26.6 percent rating in the decade, increasing from 11.2 million in 1970 to 14.2 million in 1980.

Following Houston's 44.6 percent growth rate among Texas metropolitan areas were, in order, Laredo, 36.0 percent; Killeen-Temple, 34.0 percent; El Paso, 33.4 percent; Tyler, 31.2 percent; Midland, 25.8 percent; Dallas-Fort Worth, 24.7 percent; Longview-Marshall, 24.3 percent; Odessa, 24.3 percent; San Antonio, 20.5 percent; and Amarillo, 20.2 percent.

Other growth rates included San Angelo, 19.2 percent; Lubbock, 18.2 percent; Waco, 15.6 percent; Galveston-Texas City, 14.7 percent; Abilene, 13.9 percent; Corpus Christi, 13.8 percent; Texarkana, in Texas and Arkansas, 11.5 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, 7.8 percent; Sherman-Denison, 7.2 percent; and Wichita Falls, 1.0 percent.

The Commerce Department defines metropolitan areas, in general, as a city of at least 50,000 and the surrounding counties which are associated with it economically, culturally or by other means.

The new census study also gives the first ranking of metropolitan areas by size according to the 1980 results. The only Texas areas not rising to higher positions were Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, Waco, Abilene, Wichita Falls, Texarkana and Sherman-Denison.

Texas cities behind Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston in the list of the nation's largest metropolitan areas were San Antonio, 36th largest, up from 38th in 1970; Austin, 70th, up from 93rd; El Paso, 82nd, up from 94th; Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, 104th, down from 97th; Corpus Christi, 113th, up from 118th; McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, 133rd, up from 162nd; Killeen-Temple, 162nd, up from 184th; Lubbock, 163rd, up from 165th; and Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito, 164th, up from 194th.

Galveston-Texas City is next on the list at 170th, up from 172nd; Amarillo, 189th, up from 192nd; Waco, 193rd, down from 188th; Longview-Marshall, 207th, up from 217th; Abilene, 216th, down from 214th; Wichita Falls, 231st, down from 207th; Tyler, 234th, up from 248th; Texarkana, 235th, down from 230th; and Odessa, 247th, up from 256th.

Others were Laredo, 260th, up from 273rd; Bryan-College Station, 267th, up from 281st; Sherman-Denison, 273rd, down from 266th; San Angelo, 275th, up from 276th; and Midland, 276th, up from 279th.

There are 284 standard metropolitan statistical areas in the United States.

The five fastest growing in the nation were Fort Myers-Cape Coral, Fla., which grew at a 94.2 percent rate; Las Vegas, Nev., 69.1 percent; Sarasota, Fla., 67.5 percent; Fort Collins, Colo., 66.0 percent; and Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood, Fla., 62.2 percent.

Outside Atlanta, few unsolved child slayings

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As if to emphasize the stark horror of Atlanta's child death tragedy, police in other major American cities say it remains rare for a missing child to be found dead — and for such a case to go unsolved.

Authorities in more than two dozen cities told The Associated Press that they have few cases comparable to those in Atlanta, where 20 black children between the ages of 7 and 16 have been found dead over the past 20 months. Two other children are missing.

"There's no pattern of killings, nothing like Atlanta." — Philadelphia homicide Capt. Jerry Lane.

"Atlanta seems to be a phenomenon all by itself." — Patrick Conway, homicide statistician for the Chicago police.

"We're not experiencing anything like that. Any homicide is alarming, but we have nothing in the pattern or the situation of Atlanta." — Milwaukee police Capt. Albert Hentz.

Police in Boston, Baltimore, Miami, Milwaukee, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., Seattle, San Francisco and Oakland, Calif., and Tucson, Ariz., said that in the last year and a half they've had no similar unsolved cases of missing children being found murdered for no apparent motive.

In Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Knoxville, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., Columbus, Ohio, Oklahoma City, Topeka, Kan., Phoenix, Ariz., and San Diego, police said they have only one such case each.

In a number of other cities, including New York, Los Angeles, Dallas, Houston and Minneapolis, authorities had no recent homicide statistics to offer but said they weren't aware of any increase in child murders.

The New York police said children under 15 have in the past accounted for fewer than 5 percent of the city's murders in a year.

In 1977, the last year for which a breakdown is available, there were 1,557 murders in the city. Of these victims, 72 were 15 or younger. Officials said only 16 were killed for unknown reasons.

Denver reported two unsolved child murders from a year ago: cousins, aged 7 and 10, were found dead of blows to the head several hours after they told their parents they were going to a corner ice cream stand.

Authorities said the Atlanta case appears to be making both police and parents more aware of violence against children.

Late last year, neighbors and police conducted an Atlanta-type search in Philadelphia when a 5-year-old black girl disappeared. Since her body was found in a vacant building a month later, citizens have been demanding more police protection near schools.

When a 6-year-old black girl disappeared the day after Christmas, 300 Knoxville, Tenn., citizens and officers joined in a search. The girl is still missing.

Police in Oakland County, Mich., a suburban area north of Detroit, were quick to contact Atlanta officials to see if any similarities existed between the Georgia cases and the kidnappings and murders of four white children, aged 10 to 12, during the winter of 1976-77. Authorities decided the cases were not linked.

After the still-unsolved death of an 8-year-old girl last summer in an affluent Columbus, Ohio, suburb, police began warning parents and children to be wary of strangers.

In Washington, where several child deaths in the last two years were solved with the arrests of relatives or relatives' friends, police routinely visit schools to warn children against "stranger danger."

In Orlando, Fla., police said citizens were instantly concerned about an Atlanta-type homicide when a black girl was found shot to death. But two people were quickly arrested — a woman dating the dead girl's father and the woman's ex-husband.

In Miami, city and Dade County authorities said all the child deaths they have investigated in the last two years have stemmed from child abuse.

Tom Mundy of the Oklahoma City police department concurred: "Most of the dozen or so child deaths we've had in the past 18 months have been beatings involving the parents.

"Typically, that's what happens," said Lt. Frank Phillips, chief of the Columbus, Ohio, police homicide unit. "The murder is a result of a beating."

A 34-year-old white woman in San Francisco was recently sentenced to life in prison after a jury found her guilty of strangling a 5-year-old black boy because of "racial hatred," but none of the authorities contacted reported any unusual increase in the deaths of black children. Nationally, however, the rate of murder for black children is considerably higher than for white children.

The FBI said that in 1979, the last year for which complete homicide statistics are available, 880 of the nation's 21,356 murder victims were aged 15 or younger. Black children made up 38 percent of the victims — about three times the percentage of blacks in the U.S. population.

While the Atlanta victims included 18 boys and 2 girls, the FBI statistics showed the youngest murder victims are about evenly divided as to their sex.

Oklahoma official says Katy won't be displaced

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad's operation of track between McAlester and El Reno won't be jeopardized by negotiations between state officials and the Santa Fe Railroad, a state spokesman says.

"We have no intention of displacing the Katy (Missouri-Kansas-Texas) off the track," Darrell Henry, an assistant planning engineer for the state's Transportation Department, said Thursday.

Reports of state negotiations with the Santa Fe have made some shippers reluctant to enter into contracts with the Katy, he said.

The Katy has handled shipments along the track since the Rock Island folded last year.

The state now is negotiating to have the Santa Fe run the old Rock Island line between Memphis and Amarillo. Negotiators are "talking with the Santa Fe and working up a memorandum of interest with the Santa Fe" defining the railroad's and the state's responsibilities, Henry said.

Earlier this month, the Katy and Santa Fe reached a "verbal agreement" to operate the line jointly.

Oklahoma has jointed with Texas and Arkansas in asking the Federal Railroad Administration to buy "preference shares" to finance the purchase of the line.

Officials have put the cost of buying and rehabilitating the 760-mile segment at $100 million.

An railroad administration spokesman said Thursday the agency now has $25 million for the program.

The administration has asked for $150 million in funding for fiscal year but the Reagan administration has proposed cutting $40 million out of that request.

Houston congregation declares bankruptcy

HOUSTON (AP) — Creditors of the South's largest black Baptist church stand poised to seize the church's new sanctuary, a $1.1 million structure that hasn't been paid for, and a bankruptcy petition is the only thing keeping them at bay.

The filing of bankruptcy papers in federal court here is the latest chapter in the story of the Pleasant Grove Missionary Baptist Church. Its pastor is the Rev. Charles L. Jackson, a Houston preacher who drives a Mercedes and frequently travels abroad.

A Dallas bond company has foreclosed on Pleasant Grove, and 500 bondholders have gone to court in Harris County to claim possession of the property after Jackson's administration defaulted on a $1.1 million deal to finance construction of the church's new sanctuary.

The bankruptcy will temporarily block the bondholders from seizing the church until Pleasant Grove's finances are sorted out by a court-appointed trustee. The bondholders' suit, scheduled to go to trial Monday, has been postponed indefinitely.

The Associated Press was unable to reach Jackson for comment. His wife said he was not at home and she would not say where he could be reached.

Pleasant Grove is located in one of Houston's poorest neighborhoods, the Fifth Ward, and has 10,000 members. Jackson is a prominent political force known for his ability to deliver votes in the ward.

Besides owing money on the sanctuary, Jackson's administration also owes about a dozen building contractors more than $500,000, court records show.

In depositions, Jackson said he and others committed the church to the construction debt without consulting the congregation.

Jackson has filed a countersuit against the bond company alleging it did not live up to the terms of the construction loan contract and harassed the church for bond payments.

Class on family relationships

A class on family relationships will be presented by John Picco of Amarillo on Monday at 7:30, in the First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

What are some practical tips about parenting? How do children learn? How should we think and listen to others?

These will be some of the areas Picco will explore.

"A family that never eats together has no traditions, the family is too busy with activities or television and is surrounded with a chaotic atmosphere. This can lead to disresses that can end with problems," Picco said.

Picco has lectured throughout the Texas Panhandle in programs sponsored by the Amarillo Mental Health-Mental Retardation Regional Center. He has taught and has worked in the fields of psychology and English.

He has worked with clients in the mental health service and with clients involved in substance abuse.

The Monday class is the third in a series of five sponsored by United Methodist Women. The remaining series will include Assertiveness Training by Jane Kerr, WTSU director, March 30, and on Creative Single Living by Charlotte McClure, WTSU counsellor, on April 6.

The series is open to the public, and a babysitter is available in the Church Education Building nursery.

Family life seminar scheduled

Reverend Tom Lakey, West Texas District Christian Education Director from Lubbock will conduct a Family Life Seminar and training course at the Calvary Assembly of God Church, Crawford and Love streets, on Monday, March 23, through Friday, March 27 at 7:30 p.m. each evening.

The seminar and training course is being sponsored by the area Assemblies of God Churchess from Pampa, Skellytown and White Deer.

Mr. Lakey will be teaching on the subject, "The Church and Family," covering a variety of subjects vital to the family today.

The pastors of these Assemblies cordially invite the public to share the teaching and ministry of Reverand Lakey.

Put on the Full Armour

"Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God"...

In Paul's letter to the Ephesians, he makes a comparison of the children of God and warriors. He says that our loins should be girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness. He makes many more comparisons that exhort us to a proper life. Another thing that Paul urges is that we gather together and worship the Lord. No part of our armour is greater than regular church attendance. Much strength for the week is derived from worshiping with others.

Complete your suit of armour... attend church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Which commandment is written on stone

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Thou shalt post the Ten Commandments on the classroom walls, says a 1978 Kentucky law. Thou shalt not, says the U.S. Supreme Court. Help! say confused local school boards.

A group of Crittenden County residents sued when their school board decided to remove copies of the Ten Commandments from the public schools.

In Bullitt County, an angry woman shouted, "And I thought we had Christians on this board!" after her local school board voted 3-2 last week to remove copies of the commandments from classrooms.

Such passion is butting up against the vow of a Louisville civil rights attorney, the lawyer who originally took the matter to the nation's highest court. He says he'll go to court against any school board that votes to leave up the Ten Commandments.

The controversy began three years ago with passage of the state law requiring copies of the commandments to be posted in all public school classrooms. The law was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court last fall.

Backers of the law, led by the Kentucky Heritage Foundation in Louisville, contend the ruling struck down only the law and does not apply to donated copies.

But state Attorney General Steve Beshear, asked for an opinion by state school officials, says he believes the Supreme Court meant to ban the posting of the Ten Commandments in public classrooms under any circumstances.

A random survey by The Associated Press turned up 10 districts whose boards voted to take the copies down and 10 districts whose boards voted to keep them up despite Beshear's opinion that the boards are leaving themselves open to legal action. The state has 180 school districts.

John Wilson, chairman of the Shelby County board of education, said he didn't feel his board was defying the law in keeping up the copies.

"If there was a state law or clear instruction that they come down, I'm sure they would come down promptly," Wilson said.

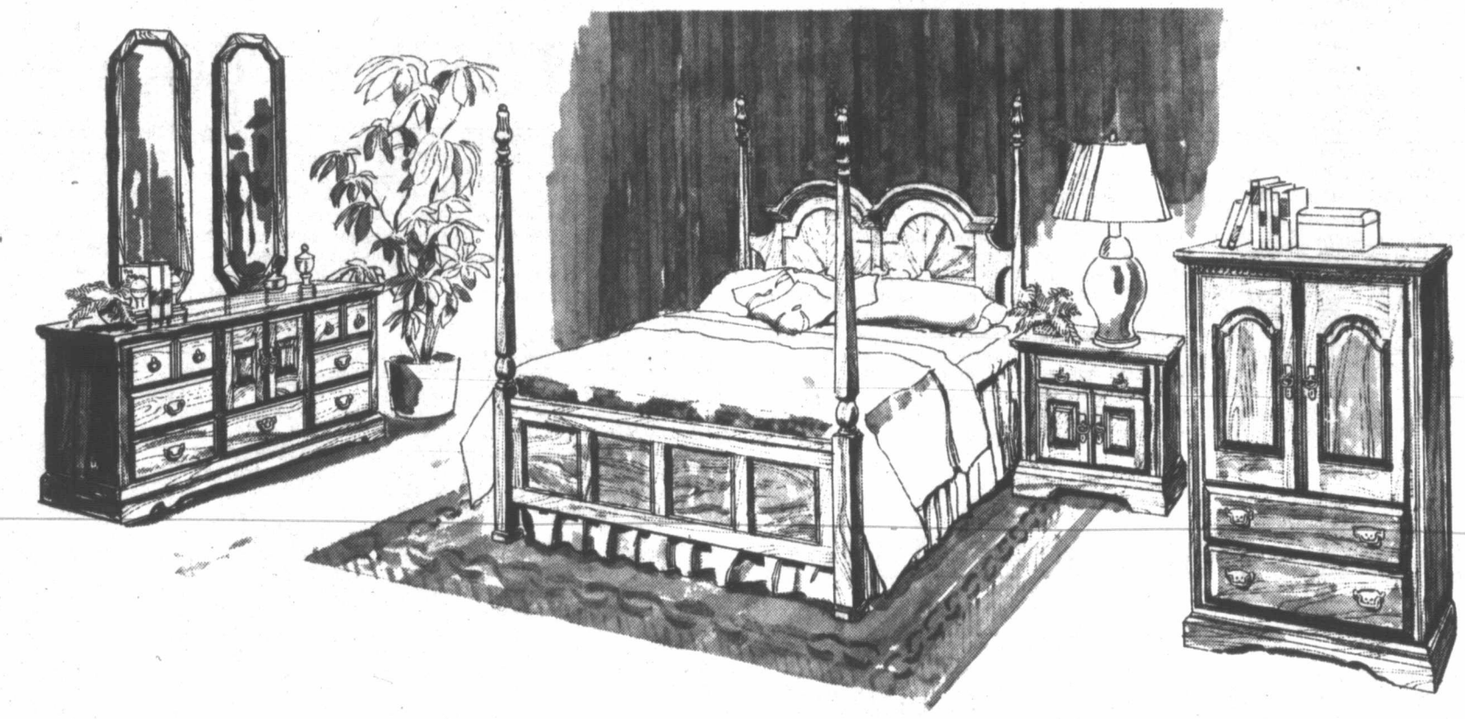

There is also a political danger involved, as the three members of the Bullitt County board who voted to remove the Ten Commandments found out.

"You're on our list," Kenneth Mills, one in a large crowd that attended the board meeting, said to the three. Mills and others urged that board members Bill Dawson, Charles Hamilton and James Robards be voted out of office when their terms expire.

The Bowling Green Independent school board decided in January to remove the commandments from the classroom walls. The Warren County board voted March 9 to keep them up against the advice of its attorney.

Old Turkish bath popular again

By MARION KWARTLER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Shiny porcelain tiles meet oriental arches in this modern city's century-old Turkish baths, a steam-filled relic of a bygone era with newfound popularity.

Today, oldtimers, young Israelis and tourists flock to the renovated baths as if to a health spa to spend a langorous day in the sauna and hot pools, or to sunbathe nude on the roof in the summer.

Built in 1890 in the Bukharian quarter, one of the first Jewish neighborhoods outside the Old City walls, the baths are a functioning antique and reminder of when Jerusalem's houses were built around central courtyards with communal kitchens and toilets, but without showers or baths.

Many old homes still lack modern plumbing and even homes with showers rarely have bathtubs.

Shimon Khoushy, a Yemenite Jew who remembers collecting firewood as a child for the baths' giant furnace, reopened the crumbling remains in 1967, and is now giving the entire building a modernizing facelift.

"I felt sick once and came to lie on the hot marble slabs, and that's when I decided to fix the place up," he said.

Khoushy, who takes pride in his historic neighborhood, swears by the baths' medicinal properties and claims they have kept him away from doctors for years.

When Khoushy bought the baths, they were in much the same condition as they had been for nearly 70 years. Giant cisterns collected rainwater and a few pennies bought a hot bucket.

During summer drought, the price went up and only the rich could afford to wash. Such was the shortage of water that even the used soapy bath water was recycled and sold to wash laundry.

Khoushy turned the furnace room into a wet sauna and the old cisterns into hot, warm and cold swimming pools. In a side room closed off from the baths, camel-hair Arab carpets cover divans and floor pillows where bathers bring baskets of food and fruit to picnic under a skylight partially covered by ivy tendrils.

The baths are similar to the originals in Turkey, but instead of muscled attendents who scrub bathers with young birch switches, the Jerusalem baths have a full staff of modern cosmeticians and masseurs for separate men's and women's days. A snack bar serves spicy oriental dishes.

The once-elegant Bukharian quarter is filled with one- and two-story stone buildings known for graceful arched windows and intricate wrought-iron work, but from the outside the bath is nondescript.

During the British Mandate period, Jewish underground fighters hid in the quarter's narrow alleyways and reputedly used the baths as a place to stash weapons and as a hideout for kidnapped British soldiers.

FUNCTIONING ANTIQUE. Many tourists and Israelis flock to the Turkish bath in the Bukharian quarter of Jerusalem. The bath, built in 1890 and renovated in 1967, is used for relaxation by some and for its medicinal powers by others.

School officials plan to lease classrooms

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — School officials here want to bring business in when their classrooms go out of business.

Faced with declining enrollment and revenue, trustees for Modesto city schools have decided to try leasing unused classrooms.

"This would give the school district the ability to generate funds to help maintain the building and to keep the neighborhood schools open, which is an important point here," said Louis Medeiros, the district's newly hired marketing agent.

The board's decision last year to permit outside leasing hinged on the neighborhood school concept.

"We want local schools. We don't want kids to be bused out of their local area," explained Phillip Hennessey, an assistant principal heading a lease - study committee.

Enrollment peaked at 9,400 students four years ago and has fallen to about 8,500 students at present in this central California district's 23 elementary schools.

The district thus has about 40 surplus classrooms with enrollment increases not anticipated until late in the decade, Hennessey said.

Almost 20 prospective tenants have contacted the district about renting space.

"I found the response to be extremely high, in fact, surprisingly so," said Medeiros, who specializes in commercial real estate.

Four schools in north Modesto residential areas with two to five available classrooms were chosen for a pilot rental program scheduled to start in June. Rentals could boost district revenues about $40,000 a year, Hennessey said.

Likely occupants include day - care centers and non - profit groups looking for headquarters.

A two - year study also suggested that tenants could include adult education and recreation programs, a children's bookstore, counselors, and even a photographer in need of a studio.

A committee at each school will narrow the types of allowable businesses before the district seeks zoning changes from the city.

"Rooms will be completely unfurnished. Tenants will make their own improvements and bring their own fixtures," Medeiros said.

Officials expect to lease classrooms for a minimum of a year under a plan developed at Belmont in San Mateo County. Lease contracts may extend to five years, and rates are expected to be competitive with private leases.

The rentals will not return enough money to cover district expenses, but Hennessey said, "We are all interested in keeping each of the local schools open. We see this as an alternative."

Straight talk unravels economic mess

By David Handler

NEW YORK — Do you understand what causes inflation? Do your eyes glaze over at the mention of terms like wage and price controls, Eurodollars, petrodollars, staglation, OPEC? Do you have this terrible "skidding" feeling about your paycheck, the feeling that you can't keep up, can't figure out how to, can't even, well, figure out what the heck is going on?

Calm down, help is on the way. Adam Smith, our cheery tour guide of Wall Street in "The Money Game" and high finance in "Supermoney" has just unraveled with tremendous wit and clarity the whole economic mess. The name of his new book is "Paper Money," and it's a must read if you don't know a thing about economics and want some straight answers.

Smith has that skidding feeling himself. "Things used to go up and down," he writes of prices. "Now they go up and up. Or they go up, pause, look around, and go up again." Smith on oil: "We have seen the greatest transfer of wealth in the history of the world, practically without a shot being fired. We are issuing claim checks on the country for a product that burns up in the atmosphere."

In his search for answers Smith explores the roots of OPEC, which was actually modelled after the Texas Railroad Commission and started by Middle Eastern oilmen who were educated in the United States and still watch videocassettes of their alma maters scuffling on the gridiron.

He explains how OPEC skunked the West and the oil companies (who mistakenly still thought of OPEC's members as "ragheads" on camels) and how rich the OPEC nations actually are now (they could buy all of the stocks on the London exchange in eight months). He traces inflation back to the mid-'60s, when President Johnson escalated the war in Vietnam without raising the funds to pay for it. And he answers the question that seems to be on everyone's lips these days: Why are the economists almost always wrong?

Adam Smith is actually the pen name of George J.W. Goodman, chairman of a private investment group, cofounder of several magazines, former editorial board member of The New York Times. He has gray hair, spectacles and a wicked sense of humor. "The economists have convinced us that they are the high priests of this esoteric mystery," says Goodman. "And we in turn have laid upon them our need to invest someone with authority."

In the book Goodman refers to an old joke about economists: Three men are stranded on a desert island with one can of tuna fish and no opener. The physicist suggests they build a fire hot enough to melt the can. The engineer conjurs up a complicated slingshot device that will puncture the can. The economist's answer: "Assume a can opener."

"More than a quantitative judgment is called for these days," explains Goodman. "Political astuteness and an understanding of human nature are needed, too. My suspicion is that in order to break inflationary expectations — which are so much a part of the inflationary cycle — you must make people believe there's a problem."

Take energy, for instance.

"You can sit in the White House in your cardigan sweater and talk about the moral equivalency of war all you want but the only way people will get spurred into action is if they say, 'Wow! It just cost me 29 dollars to get gas!' That's the way this country is."

So how bad off are we? How far away are we in this age of paper money from Germany in 1922, when it took a wheelbarrow full of bills to buy a loaf of bread?

"Things aren't that bad right now," Goodman replies, "but you don't have to get to the stage they were at in Germany for the social glue to come apart. That's what worries and haunts me. We must hold onto our sense of community, of cohesion.

"I can see, on the one hand, really perilous flash points — the petrodollar recycling, another oil shock, the fragmenting of government into veto groups. And if you look only at those you can get gloomy.

"But then just take a look at the United States. I don't mean to sound corny but this is a fantastic country, in terms of talent and resources, universities, brainpower.

Dear Abby

Minister's wife not counselor

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine wrote to you last year, and you advised her to go to her minister for counseling. She went, and he helped her a lot, so I decided to go to my minister to talk over some marital problems I was having.

I made an appointment to see him at his office, which is in his home, and I found him to be very kind and understanding. I have never been able to discuss anything of an intimate nature with anyone. He sensed my shyness and suggested I go home and write down what I had trouble saying, and bring it back for him to read before our next session.

I did as he suggested and it worked out very well. We had three sessions and he helped me so much. Then, as I was leaving his home after my last session, his wife followed me to the door and said, "Please don't write my husband any more letters. I happened to see one on his desk, and it was disgusting!"

I was terribly embarrassed and felt so bad I never went back. I called the minister and made up an excuse for not getting back to him for two weeks. Abby, I really want to continue with the counseling, but I just can't face his wife. What should I do?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Call the minister and make an appointment to see him. And while you're there, be sure to tell him why you nearly dropped out. (It's important for him to know the truth.) And should you see his wife, you need not feel embarrassed. She was clearly out of line.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I eat out a lot. Our problem is with tipping. When we go to a large, expensive restaurant, my husband tips between 15 percent to 20 percent of the bill — even if the service is terrible. But when we go to a small family-type place, or a diner where the prices are more reasonable and the service is really good, he leaves what I consider a very meager tip, even though it's between 15 and 20 percent of the bill.

Example: Breakfast for two in a small diner costs $4, so my husband leaves a 60-cent tip. Yet breakfast for two in a classier place costs $8, and my husband leaves a $1.60 tip!

I contend that the waitress in the diner works just as hard as the one who works in the more expensive place, and she should get at least $1 for serving two people. My husband says, regardless of what the bill is, he sticks to the accepted rule — 15 to 20 percent of the bill.

Maybe I should keep my mouth shut and let him handle it, but we are constantly arguing about this, so I hope you won't think this is too trivial to answer.

SHIRLEY IN WORCESTER

DEAR SHIRLEY: Trivial? No way. One of the hardest jobs in the world is serving hungry (and sometimes disagreeable and demanding) people. The waitress who works in a less expensive place needs tips as much (and often more) than those who work where the prices are higher. Tell the old boy to loosen up.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a man who is 50. I am 40. He has never been married. I have, but I'm now divorced. I am a mother and grandmother. I can no longer have children because I had a hysterectomy.

My husband wants a baby in the worst way, but I can't give him one. He is very hurt and disappointed. Have you any suggestions?

SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR SOUTH: The obvious option. Adoption.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Rosen, 36, returning to his studies at Columbia University after being a hostage in Iran for more than a year, says his doctoral dissertation will be about a "romantic" place — Iran.

He said Thursday he would write about the history of the Iran from 1977 to 1980, including the story of the Islamic republic that held him captive for 444 days.

"The situation was agony, personal agony for me, but I have to look beyond that," he said. "Everyone has a niche in life, and this is mine."

Thus, he said, it was "without bitterness" that he would study Iran. He said it remained in his mind a "romantic" place.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Helen Wagner, who has been on the CBS soap opera "As the World Turns" since it began in 1956, will leave the show when her contract expires at the end of this month, according to her husband-manager.

"She was offered a renewal, but they cut her part down to less than nothing and just wanted her to wait around in the wings," Robert Willey was quoted as saying in Thursday's Daily News.

Ms. Wagner, 62, has been playing the part of Nancy Hughes. Don MacLaughlin, the only other original cast member, plays her husband, Chris.

Willey said that the soap opera is now "emphasizing the younger generation."

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Charles S. Robb, son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, has announced he will run for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Robb, 41, husband of Lynda Bird Johnson, appears likely to be unopposed for the nomination at the party's convention May 29-30 in Virginia Beach. His announcement came Thursday.

If nominated, Robb is likely to be opposed in the general election by Republican Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman, who announced his candidacy Monday. The GOP will pick its nominee at a Virginia Beach convention June 4-6.

Robb was elected lieutenant governor in 1977 in his first bid for public office.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — British rock star Eric Clapton, undergoing treatment at United Hospitals in St. Paul for an ulcer, is responding but is still in serious condition, a Clapton spokeswoman said.

Clapton was admitted to the hospital early Saturday after performing in Madison, Wis., Friday night as part of a scheduled four-month U.S. concert tour.

The remaining 47 dates of the concert tour have been canceled, said Ronnie Lippin, director of national publicity for RSO Records of Los Angeles.

Ms. Lippin said Clapton is responding to treatment but will remain hospitalized for two to three weeks.

He was listed in serious condition on Thursday; she said.

Forest service lifts fire ban

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — A two-day moratorium on outdoor burning in East Texas, imposed because of "extreme" forest fire danger, has been lifted due to a moderation of weather conditions, a Texas Forest Service officer said.

Bill Terry, a spokesman for the agency, said the passage of a cold front through East Texas decreased wind speeds and lessened what the service called an "extreme fire danger" the day before. Southerly Gulf Coast winds are expected to increase the humidity in East Texas forests today, further reducing the fire danger, he said.

The agency is still recommending that outdoor burning be postponed until after the next rainfall where possible. If burning can't be delayed, Terry said, it should be carried out with caution.

Movement to Sunbelt could hurt Demos

An AP News Analysis
By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The movement of Americans to the Sunbelt and out of cities is forcing a redrawing of political lines that could wipe out the advantage Democrats might expect as the party out of power in the 1982 Congressional elections.

The 1980 Census figures seem just one more headache for troubled Democrats still reeling from last year's Republican landslide that put Ronald Reagan in the White House and gave the GOP control of the Senate.

Leaders of both major parties see the 1982 elections as the test of whether 1980 signaled a genuine shift in the nation's political direction.

The biggest factor influencing the 1982 results could be the public perception of the success or failure of the Reagan economic program. But few politicians expect a clear consensus on the economic program to have emerged by November 1982.

At this early stage, the redrawing of congressional and legislative district lines to reflect the results of the 1980 Census is seen as a potentially decisive factor in the battle for control of the House of Representatives, the last bastion of Democratic power in Washington.

If the Republicans gain 26 seats in the 1982 elections, they would take control of the House.

But, historically, the party out of power comes out ahead in non-presidential election years. The average gain for the outs in recent years has been 33 House seats.

More significantly, the outs have picked up House seats in every off-year election since 1938. The last time the party in power consolidated its gains was in 1934, the election two years after Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the White House.

What has Democrats worried is the extraordinary political bias inherent in the population shifts during the 1970s.

The big losers of House seats are the Northern industrial states. New York loses five, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois two each. Losing one seat each are Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Indiana, Missouri and South Dakota. Within those states, districts losing the most population tend to be in cities and all are held by Democrats.

The big gainers are Florida with four seats, Texas with three, California with two and Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah, Washington and Nevada with one each.

When the politicians finish redrawing the lines that shift 17 House seats from the North and Midwest to the Sunbelt states, it won't represent a clear loss of urban Democrats seats to increasingly Republican areas in the South, Southwest and West.

The odds are that in Northern states losing two seats each the new lines will result in a loss of one Democratic and one Republican seat. That's the way of political compromise.

Astro-Graph

March 21, 1981

In several relationships where you previously experienced friction you will now find harmony over the coming months. Each of you will discover new things to like in one another.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Seek activities today of the lighter type, with just a few select pals involved. Slowing your pace will help a bit. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to while away some happy hours on your favorite hobby. If your pursuit is creative or artistic, it should even prove more enjoyable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll be happier today going places where you can see and be seen. Forego your usual haunts. Find one that is new and interesting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The secret to getting things done today is to maintain a steady pace. Don't tackle projects in fits and starts. It could impede your momentum.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll feel better today if you get out and move around a bit. You don't have to go any great distances, perhaps just drop in on a friendly neighbor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Sharing will not only please the recipient today, it will afford you a great amount of pleasure as well. Much joy will be found in being a giver.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The ball is in your court today and you should be able to exercise control over a situation previously managed by another. Use your initiative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid the type of social gathering today where you could be around people with whom you have little in common. The event may be fun for them, but not necessarily for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to try to get together with someone you met recently who you'd like to know better. You're both on the same wavelength at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a commanding way of handling yourself today which others will find admirable rather than offensive. You know how to take charge diplomatically.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be a keen observer as well as a good listener today. You could learn a very important lesson from someone you'd least expect to be the teacher.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Joint ventures look very encouraging at this time, especially if they're with persons who tend to make you feel uplifted and who buoy your spirits.

Bishop: full circle on broadway

NEW YORK - Joey Bishop's first Broadway stint calls for him to don a dress, falsies, frightwig and sneakers. And that's his most dignified costume. He's headlining for a month in "Sugar Babies," the salty, splashy homage to burlesque that brought entertainment back to Broadway and put its top banana, Mickey Rooney, back on the map. Rooney's taking the month off to do a film.

For the 63-year-old Bishop, "Sugar Babies" means his career has come full circle. Before he had his own late-night TV talk show on ABC in the late '60s, before his sitcom in the early '60s, before he emceed John Kennedy's inaugural gala, before he was a member of the celebrated Rat Pack and a premiere stand-up comic, he was one of the Three Bishop Boys. Joey Bishop got started in show business in the late '30s in his hometown, Philadephia. He got started in burlesque.

"We did mimicry," he recalls of his old burlesque trio. "I did impersonations of radio comics like Fred Allen and Eddy Cantor. One guy did impressions of famous singers, the other did take-offs of radio commentators. I think I was 19 or 20.

"Burlesque was an attitude. If Ziegfeld did a scene with a luxurious boudoir, burlesque would use an army cot. But it was never off-color. You couldn't take the Lord's name in vain. Had to say 'what the hay' or "cheese... and crackers.' As suggestive as you would get would be, say, the old routine with the traveling salesman who stops at the farmhouse and spends the night in the same bed with the farmer's daughter. They'd get into the bed — actually she's in the bed, he has to sit on top of the covers — and she'd say to him 'don't you want to amuse me?' and he'd say 'sure' and take out a harmonica and start playing."

He says Rooney talked him into taking over for him in "Sugar Babies." "Mickey is an old and dear friend. He saw me in Chicago in a play, 'The Mind with the Dirty Man,' that I did with my son, Larry, and he said 'you gotta do more than your nightclub act.' I told him I never sang or danced on stage in my life, but he swore I could do it. So I did."

The prospect of setting foot on a Broadway stage for the first time terrifies most mortals. Not Bishop. "Try performing a nightclub act in front of 30 people who've been drinking all night. That's hard. Getting up in front of 1,600 people to whom you are the most important thing in their lives at that moment, to have them concentrating on just you, that's a luxury."

Bishop's professional personality has always been a sad sack with a deadpan. Some of the "Sugar Babies" routines had to be changed to fit him. "Mickey takes over a stage. I'm more of a reactor, a victim. I'm also a bit more cerebral. The audience will take off-color jokes from Mickey they won't take from me. But I had carte blanche to change the jokes to fit me."

Bishop lives in Newport Beach, Calif., with his wife, Sylvia. He still plays clubs, but he devoted most of last year to raising funds to build the Joey Bishop Center for Addictive Diseases at the Giuffre Medical Center in Philadelphia. "A bunch of us who grew up in Philly got together and decided we owed something to the city," he explains.

He isn't interested in returning to TV. It's not that he only remembers the nightmarish moments, like the live debut of his talk show in April 1967, when guest Ronald Reagan, then governor of California, showed up 14 minutes late. "It's just that I've reached a strange point in my life, where if it doesn't feel like it's going to be fun I won't do it. I wouldn't do another talk show because I wouldn't bring anything fresh to it. I also would never star in another series. Out of the 124 episodes we did of 'The Joey Bishop Show' I personally rewrote 107. I worked on the scripts 14 hours a day on Saturdays and Sundays. My wife wanted to divorce me."

"Sugar Babies," on the other hand, is pure fun for Bishop. He clearly relishes the old jokes, the memories. "Mostly, doing 'Sugar Babies' reminds me of how much I wanted then to be the top banana. Crazy thing is the top banana when I played the Trocadero in Philly was a comic named Maxie Furman. He's in 'Sugar Babies.' He's also Mickey's understudy. I made sure I arranged to be in a couple of black outs with him, to see what it would feel like."

Bishop smiles. Obviously it feels pretty good to finally be top banana.

Voice-over animation

Mrs. Frisby? It's Elizabeth Hartman

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - When the scene finally appears on the screen, it will look as if the two characters are talking to each other. And probably, you'd be willing to bet that when it was filmed, they were talking to each other.

But they weren't. In fact, Derek Jacobi, who does the voice for one part, wasn't even at the recording studio when Elizabeth Hartman read her part.

"That's the way it has always been done with animated cartoons," says Don Bluth. "You record each part separately, and then cut them together."

Bluth is making an animated feature called "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH," based on an award-winning children's book of the same title. Bluth, and most of his team of skilled artists and animated filmmakers, formerly worked at the Walt Disney studio. He says the technique of recording two people separately was always the way it was done by the Disney people.

So Elizabeth Hartman is alone at the recording studio microphone, with only Bluth to give her cues. Elizabeth is reading the part of Mrs. Frisby, and her voice has just the right note of fright, with a touch of courage underneath.

As she works, an artist stands behind her, out of her line of vision so as not to make her nervous. He does quick sketches of her and her mannerisms, which will be given later to the studio artists to incorporate into the finished drawings of Mrs. Frisby.

As the session progresses a pattern becomes noticeable. Bluth gives her her cue. She reads her line, once, twice, three or four times. She keeps repeating it, each time giving it a different reading until Bluth gives her the next line. It is apparent that he waits until he gets the reading he wants before proceeding.

"Will our children live longer?" she says. Bluth waits.

"Will our children live longer?" Again, Bluth waits.

"Will our children live longer?" This is apparently the way Bluth wants it. He speaks the next line and the session continues.

In the control room, other executives listen attentively, scripts in hand. They make comments to one another, and occasionally speak to Bluth and Miss Hartman on the intercom.

"That pause is just right," one says.

"That'll work," says another.

"That's cute."

They record each person separately so all the lines are clean at the outset. Then, if necessary, they can deliberately overlap them.

"She's never been better than she is today," one of the men says in the control booth, as Miss Hartman reads a particularly difficult speech.

At first they read each scene through quickly, so she can familiarize herself with the lines. Then they proceed, line by line, until the scene is recorded the way Bluth wants.

She reads one line — a simple, "Oh, my!" — a half dozen times, giving it a new meaning each time. Her skill as an actress is obvious.

And yet, she says later, this is her first experience at a voice-over session. Previously, she has only acted on camera and she believes this is so much more difficult.

"Here I can only use my voice, and on camera I can use my whole body as well."

This marks the beginning of her new career. She says she has had a very difficult time, and is, in effect, starting all over from scratch.

You probably remember her from the stunning, 1966 film "A Patch of Blue," in which she co-starred with Sidney Poitier and Shelley Winters. Miss Winters won an Academy award for her work in that film, and Miss Hartman was hailed as a coming star.

She made a few more films — "You're a Big Boy Now," "The Fixer," "The Beguiled" and the first "Walking Tall." And then no more.

"Some four years ago," she says, "I became ill — a mental thing — and I had to go back home to Ohio. But I'm fine now and I'm back.

"When I first got started, I was very lucky. I got pictures like 'A Patch of Blue' very easily. And I guess I figured that it would always be that easy. But this time it's not happening that quickly."

She says this job — doing the voice for "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH" — is the best she's had since her comeback began. But with her talent, it certainly won't be the last.

TV Guide's cowardly crusade on cocaine

NEW YORK (NEA) - TV Guide, that usually sober digest of celebrity profiles, service features and program listings, has surprised quite a few people the past couple of weeks with its two-part cover story on cocaine abuse in the television industry, entitled "Hollywood's Cocaine Connection: An investigative report on the hidden ingredient that may be poisoning programs you watch."

It is no scoop to report widespread cocaine use in the entertainment business, be it the record industry, movies or television. That is not the surprise. What is so surprising is the length TV Guide has gone to promote an "expose" by staffer Frank Swertlow that names no names, relies almost exclusively on anonymous sources and, in the end, sheds no new light.

You've seen all those special commercials for the TV Guide cocaine report. A hand spells out the word "Hollywood" with a razor blade in lines of cocaine, only to be blown away by a gust of wind.

And you've seen the brand of reporting contained in this two-part series, though usually in the sleazy tabloids hawked next to the supermarket check-out counters:

—"One actress on a network series looks as pure and innocent as a Midwestern cheerleader, but her dependence on coke has earned her the nickname 'The Cocaine Queen of Hollywood.'"

—"A well-known TV actor in a network show keeps his dressing room, inside a large van, lavishly equipped for drug use."

—"A longtime Hollywood leading man who has a recurring role in a network series can't remember his lines." "We can only use him for one day," says an unnamed veteran writer. "The guy is banana city."

—"An actress working on a Norman Lear series was fired because of her drug problem."

—"There are people who are in high places at the networks and at studios because somewhere along the line they have gotten people drugs."

Yes, you've seen this kind of reporting before, but seldom if ever in TV Guide. While the "investigative report" does mention names of performers whose drug-related problems have already been made public — Richard Pryor, Mackenzie Phillips, Freddie Prinze — the bulk of Swertlow's reporting is a collection of teasers, a guessing game of blind items more commonly found in the gossip columns.

TV Guide had, it seems, serious intentions. The magazine appears upset by its "revelations." "We recommend," it editorializes, "that the Hollywood creative community turns its creative energies to combating this pernicious problem."

But its reporting fails to upset the reader, who is mainly interested in trying to guess who the unnamed celebrities are. Furthermore, while the magazine suggests that cocaine abuse accounts for a percentage of the inept productions coming out of Hollywood, it offers no specific programs, no facts.

Clearly, Swertlow's sources are consistently unnamed because they requested anonymity. Statements about industry drug abuse are attributed to performers like Peter Strauss and Henry Winkler, but, again, the users they discuss are not identified.

Why the guessing game? For TV Guide to name names is for it to open itself up for lawsuits.

Leigh Lawson is the slick star of 'Tess'

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - If you want an example of the truth of the old adage — "time changes everything" — listen to Leigh Lawson talk about how the public's reaction to the male roles in "Tess" has changed.

Lawson is the slick English actor who plays the equally slick character called Alec in "Tess." That is the new (and marvelous) film version of the old (and marvelous) Thomas Hardy novel, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

In the story, Alec is the chap who causes Tess (played by Nastassia Kinski) to become pregnant. Later, after her child dies, she marries Angel (Peter Firth) and tells him of her early indiscretion. He promptly walks away from her.

"When Hardy wrote it, in 1891," Lawson says, "Alec was the villain, and Angel was the hero. The people who read it then thought that Angel was perfectly justified in leaving his wife like that.

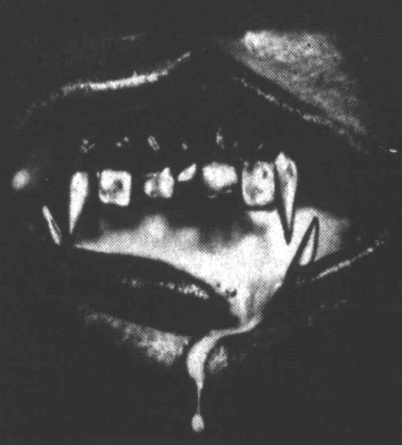

"Today, not through any rewriting, but merely through social changes, the roles are reversed. The audiences who see the movie now consider Angel the villain — they hiss him when he renounces Tess — and they think Alec is an OK fellow."

Lawson has made a career out of getting involved in projects that require long location trips. He spent 10 months in France shooting "Tess." Before that he spent a year on "Brother Sun, Sister Moon."

"But the worst one of all," he says, "was four months in South Africa on a picture called 'Golden Rendezvous.' It was the off-season there, and we were literally trapped in a small village .

NFL owners wrestle with money problems

MAUI, Hawaii (AP) — Behind closed doors, the owners of National Football League clubs wrestle with big money adversaries.

First, there is the anti-trust suit against them by the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission coupled with the Oakland Raiders, who want to move to Los Angeles.

Secondly, the NFL Players Association plays out its contract this year and wants 55 percent of the gross receipts distributed amoung those in uniform.

The Los Angeles Coliseum Commission has asked $53 million in damages and the Raiders $160 million in the suit to move the team to Southern California.

Meanwhile, the NFL's Management Council reports on the progress toward a new players' contract. Actual negotiations will come later, but this annual meeting of the owners is being appraised of the overall situation.

Although there have been some minor rule changes adopted, the thrust of this session has been on the multi-million dollar anti-trust suit.

Right now, that action is centered in San Francisco where the 9th District Court of Appeals must decide if the trial over the suit should be held in Los Angeles or elsewhere.

Earlier this week, U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson refused an NFL petition to hold the trial outside Los Angeles. The league filed an appeal to overrule that decision.

A jury will make the determination of whether the NFL or the Raiders are right.

Sports in brief

By The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Attorneys for light heavyweight boxer James Scott say they will decide whether to appeal the fighter's murder conviction after his sentencing today.

Scott will face sentencing today on his conviction in the shooting death of a Newark man six years ago.

The 33-year-old boxer rose to national prominence through his televised bouts inside Rahway State Prison, where he is serving a 30-to 40-year term for an armed robbery linked to the murder.

Scott, once ranked No. 2 in the World Boxing Association, was stripped of the position last September because of his inability to gain temporary release to fight outside the prison.

His 18-1-1 record includes victories over Yacqui Lopez, Jerry Celestine and Eddie Mustafa Muhammad, formerly known as Eddie Gregory and now the World Boxing Association light heavyweight champion.

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson University named Bobby Hussey of Belmont Abbey as head basketball coach Thursday as John Kresse, who said last week he would leave College of Charleston to coach at Davidson, changed his mind.

Cavaliers' winning streak snapped

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The resurgent Cleveland Cavaliers tried, but just couldn't find enough firepower against the Chicago Bulls, who are anticipating a National Basketball Association playoff berth.

Artis Gilmore scored 28 points and Reggie Theus scored 23 to lead the Bulls over the Cavaliers, 116-111, Thursday night.

Gilmore, who sat out much of the first half with foul trouble, scored 20 points in the second half. Theus scored 17 of his points in the second half when he hit 11 straight foul shots.

The Bulls' record in the Central Division improved to 40-37 with the victory, which broke a Cleveland three-game winning streak.

"Now we're in a position where we have to win one more game or Washington has to lose one more game, and we're in the playoffs," said Chicago Coach Jerry Sloan. "We've won three in a row, and I feel we're playing excellent basketball right now.

"We had to go on the road, but we still managed to win some big games."

San Diego whipped Golden State 139-113 in the only other NBA game of the night.

Mike Mitchell paced the Cavaliers with 24 points, 18 in the second half.

"We just weren't getting to the boards on defense and weren't going to the basket on offense," said Don Delaney, coach of the Cavaliers the past five games. He was concerned that the Cavaliers had just four foul shots the first three quarters.

The Bulls led 26-22 after one quarter and led 30-24 early in the second quarter. Cleveland tied the game at 32-32 with 6:32 left in the half and moved on to lead 50-44 at intermission.

The Cavaliers led 73-64 in the third period, but the Bulls roared back, trailing 80-79 after three periods.

Chicago gained the lead for good with 9:22 left in the game when Ricky Sobers hit a spinning layup to make the score 87-86. The Bulls marched to a 107-97 lead with less than four minutes to play and fought off a late Cavalier challenge.

David Greenwood had 20 points for the Bulls, but it was Gilmore who made the difference near the hoop on offense.

Clippers 139, Warriors 113

Phil Smith, an ex-Warrior, came back to haunt his former teammates by scoring 22 points and dishing out 15 assists. Freeman Williams led the Clippers with 25 points, while Michael Brooks had 18 and Swen Nater totaled 17.

The loss dropped Golden State into a tie with Kansas City for the fifth and sixth Western Conference playoff spots, each with 37-39 records and six games left. Houston is one game behind both clubs.

However, San Diego coach Paul Silas, whose team is 2½ games back, says his club's not quitting, either. Silas says the chase will be "long and hard" but that "We're not giving up yet."

Ron Delany won the 1,500-meter run at the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia, competing for Ireland although he was a student at Villanova University in Philadelphia at the time.

Kansas City wins by forfeit

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The pitchers may or may not be ahead of the hitters but Earl Weaver, as usual, is right up there with the umpires.

The feisty Baltimore manager may have outdone himself Thursday when he pulled his team off the field because he said the umpires wouldn't give him a list of Kansas City's batting order or substitutions.

The Orioles were losing 4-2 after six innings when Weaver and the Orioles flew the coop and the result was a forfeit...although a spring training forfeit means about as much as a politician's campaign promise.

Kansas City Manager Jim Frey inserted five substitutes in the top of the seventh. Because of numerous changes in spring games, the managers reportedly had been told that substitutions would be announced over the public address system. Vic Voltaggio, the senior umpire, said both managers were made aware of that before the game.

Oh, yes, the Royals broke a 2-2 tie on Dave Chalk's bases-loaded double in the bottom of the sixth.

If Weaver was up to his old tricks, so were the New York Mets. They brought back memories of their hilarious early days by committing three errors on one play and six all-told in an 11-3 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In the third, third baseman Joel Youngblood missed a grounder and Mookie Wilson bobbled the ball in left field. When the ball finally got to the plate, catcher Ron Hodges heaved it into center field trying to nail a runner at second base.

Meanwhile, the Minnesota Twins turned in three double plays in the first three innings, pulled a triple play in the eighth and rallied to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 on RBI singles by Rick Sofield and Roy Smalley in the bottom of the ninth.

The California Angels won their sixth consecutive game, nipping the San Francisco Giants 4-3 behind the pitching of Steve Renko and Jesse Jefferson.

Montreal pitcher Bill Lee hit a three-run homer to cap a nine-run third inning as the Expos ouslugged the Houston Astros 12-9 and Graig Nettles' two-run homer helped the New York Yankees defeat the Atlanta Braves 6-3.

Leon Durham singled in the 12th inning, stole second and scored on a single by Ken Reitz to give the Chicago Cubs a 6-5 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers and John Ellis' RBI single in the bottom of the 11th lifted the Texas Rangers over the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

The Oakland A's pushed across four runs in the ninth inning on a bases-loaded walk to Rob Picciolo, Tony Armas' sacrifice fly.

VICTORY IS THEIRS. Brigham Young players rejoice after their 51-50 upset victory Thursday over Notre Dame in the NCAA East Regional semifinals played in Atlanta. Brigham Young will play Virginia for the East Regional title Saturday.

Ainge leads NYU past Irish to advance into East finals

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Spring is just around the corner, but spring training and the Toronto Blue Jays will have to wait a while longer for Danny Ainge.

The Brigham Young All-American extended his basketball season for at least one more game Thursday night when he drove the length of the floor and sank a layup with two seconds remaining to give the 16th-ranked Cougars a 51-50 victory over seventh-rated Notre Dame, in the NCAA East Regional semifinals at Atlanta.

"I just tried to get the ball, dribble up the court and go all the way to the basket," said Ainge, an infielder who will report to the Blue Jays as soon as the last basket is shot. "Fortunately, I got a three-foot shot. Without a doubt, this is the biggest win ever for me."

Besides, the Blue Jays have proved they can finish last with or without Ainge.

The victory moved BYU into Saturday's East title game against fifth-ranked Virginia, which beat No.15 Tennessee 62-48 behind the brilliant second-half play of Jeff Lamp.

In the West Regional, sixth-ranked North Carolina held off hometown favorite Utah 61-56 and Kansas State's unranked giant-killers disposed of No.19 Illinois 57-52.

Tonight at Bloomington, Ind., St. Joseph's, Pa., meets Boston College and ninth-ranked Indiana faces Alabama-Birmingham in the Mideast Regional. In the Midwest at New Orleans, Wichita State goes against Kansas and fourth-ranked Louisiana State, the highest-ranked team still left from the original 48-team field, tackles No.20 Arkansas. The winners meet Sunday and the four weekend winners go to the Final Four in Philadelphia March 28-30.

BYU, trailing Notre Dame by 14 points early in the second half, took the lead for the first time 49-48 when reserve guard Greg Ballif hit from the top of the key with 62 seconds remaining.

Miracle-minded Notre Dame then called two timeouts before Kelly Tripucka drilled an 18-footer from the right side with 10 seconds left to give the Irish a 50-49 lead.

BYU inbounded the ball to Ainge — held to two points in the first half but a team-high 12 for the game — and he started up the floor surrounded by Irish players. He dribbled behind his back as he crossed midcourt and drove to the basket, where he laid it in over a Notre Dame defender.

Until the closing minutes, Notre Dame had BYU and Ainge under control.

"We wanted to control the tempo of the game. We thought we did that," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "We wanted to control the boards. We thought we did that. And we wanted to control Ainge. We did that until the last eight seconds. When he got he ball, that's when I knew we were in trouble."

"In all honesty, sometimes it's better to be lucky than good," conceded BYU's Frank Arnold. "I thought Notre Dame outplayed us the whole ballgame."

Lamp scored six of Virginia's first eight points during a 13-0 second-half run that carried the Cavaliers away from Tennessee. Virginia destroyed the Volunteers immediately after they had taken a 36-31 lead with 13:20 remaining. Tennessee went scoreless for the next 8:08 as Lamp, a third-team All American who had a game-high 18 points, hit an eight-foot shot, a jumper from the free throw line and a five-footer as the Cavaliers took the lead 39-36.

Gary Carter ended Tennessee's drought with 5:12 remaining but Virginia came right back with six more unanswered points.

"This team has worked too hard this year," said Lamp. "We didn't want to go out tonight. We have a lot of confidence and there was a lot of time left so there wasn't any real panic."

Tennessee Coach Don Devoe said his team "made a game of it" until "the ball stopped going in for us. We were just within a whisker of making things happen."

North Carolina's front line of James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Al Wood scored 15 points apiece to lead the Tar Heels over Utah. The Utes' vaunted front line of Danny Vranes, Tom Chambers and Karl Bankowski had only 26, almost 25 points below their combined season average.

Bankowski was especially ineffectual, managing just two points. Chambers, in foul trouble much of the game, had 11 and Vranes, who finished with 13, didn't make a field goal until 2:03 remained in the first half.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said his front line did more than score.

"Worthy kept the ball away from Vranes very well," he said. "And I think you saw the leadership of Al Wood."

"We got the ball inside," said Wood. "We hit the big ones down the stretch. With Chambers in foul trouble, it opened up the middle."

In the nightcap, Tim Jankovich, Ed Nealy and Rolando Blackman hit crucial free throws in the final minutes as Kansas State held on to slip past Illinois.

The Wildcats, upset winners over San Francisco, second-ranked Oregon State and Illinois, spurted to a 11-2 lead and held a 30-27 advantage at halftime. The taller Illini cut the margin to one and two points several times, but never pulled even.

Rangers win

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — John Ellis' bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 11th inning Thursday pushed the Texas Rangers past the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in exhibition baseball.

Ellis' game-winner came at the expense of Dodger right-hander Alejandro Pena, who had previously given up walks to Jim Norris and Leon Roberts and a single to Dan Duran.

Dave Schmidt was the winner, shutting out the Dodgers on two hits over the last three innings.

The Dodgers broke out to a 2-0 lead in the first when Reggie Smith drove Davey Lopes home with a single off Texas starter Jon Matlack and later scored on a wild pitch.

Canyon crushes South San West, 76-49, in state semifinal win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Beaumont Hebert used its 6-2 leapers to race past Waxahachie, and confident Canyon used a collection of weapons to demolish San Antonio South San West to join Hebert in the the Class 4A schoolboy basketball finals.

Hebert, with no one taller than 6-2, got 31 points from Andre Boutee and 29 from Donald Mickens in an easy Thursday night 81-64 semifinal win over Waxahachie.

Canyon, with only one starter under 6-2, got 22 points from sharp-shooting guard Ken Walling to blister South San West 76-49.

In 3A semifinal play Thursday, Powderly North Lamar took a 65-62 overtime win over Van Vleck, and Altair Rice squeezed past Perryton 58-54.

In Class A action, Snook, looking for a fourth straight state title, punished Midland Greenwood 53-27, and Henrietta Midway beat Avinger 61-50.

All finals are set for Saturday.

Hebert, 34-2, put the game away late in the second period with a 19-4 spurt. Mickens and Boutee, both 6-2 seniors, scored 54 of Hebert's 61 points in the first three periods. Waxahachie, which narrowed the gap to eight in the third quarter, was led by James Stern's 24 points, most on long-range jumpers.

Canyon, 29-8, put South San West away early. The winning Eagles trailed 11-10 early in the second period but rode Walling's hot shooting to a 36-21 halftime lead. The 6-3 senior guard had 16 of his 22 points in the first half.

The final will pit Hebert's quick leapers against Canyon's height, including 6-9 postman Butch Bearden, who had only eight points and eight rebounds in the semifinal win.

North Lamar's win over Van Vleck was the day's tightest contest. Van Vleck held a 28-25 lead with 3:43 to go in the second quarter when team scoring leader Eric Martin went down with a knee injury. Martin, a 6-1 senior headed for Louisiana State on a football scholarship, did not return and the Leopards missed his 20 point per game scoring.

Senior Jimmy Smith came off the bench to lead Van Vleck with 26 points and 16 rebounds, and 6-7 forward Anthony Hudgins hit an inside shot after an offensive rebound to tie the game at 58 with 1:04 remaining in regulation play. Neither team scored in the final minute, sending the game into overtime.

North Lamar's 6-4 Merritt Williams continued his inside dominance in the extra period. Williams scored North Lamar's last five points, including three free throws in he final 47 seconds, to give the Panthers, now 24-9, the 65-62 win.

Williams, using a soft touch when necessary and rattling the backboard with a powerful dunk over an opponent when needed, finished with 31 points and 10 rebounds.

Altair Rice used a balanced scoring attack in its 58-54 win over Perryton. Senior 6-5 forward Larry Haynes led with 14 points. Earnest Fields, David Grammer and Kenneth Bluntson each added a dozen. Ricky Herring, whose long set shots kept Perryton in the game, led the Rangers with 18.

Perennial power Snook, 38-4, led outmanned Greenwood 16-1 after the first period. The Bluejays shot a poor 29 percent from the floor in the first half, but still led 20-9. Hezekiah Carter led the winners with 22 points. Tommy Pyle paced Greenwood with 15.

Midway, 34-5, used 60-percent shooting to beat top-ranked Avinger 61-50. The Falcons pushed in 12 unanswered points to extend a 29-28 late second quarter lead to a 41-28 edge midway through the third period.

Lane dies after lengthy illness

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — They called him "Trader," and once when a cab driver accused him of being willing to trade his own mother, Frank Lane replied yes, and he'd throw in his grandmother if the price was right.

The longtime baseball executive died Thursday at age 85 following a lengthy illness, said officials at the Apple Tree Nursing Home in this Dallas suburb. Funeral arrangements were pending.

Lane was in charge of four baseball front offices during his long career, including stints as general manager for the Chicago White Sox, St. Louis Cardinals and Kansas City A's, plus tenure as executive vice president for the Cleveland Indians.

His nickname in baseball circles became "Trader Lane," as he often used hotel telephones while his room-service meals cooled to work out deals that would — more often than not — send a hometown favorite packing.

Baseball experts guess he made more than 400 deals for the White Sox, Indians, Cardinals and A's. With the White Sox alone, Lane arranged 241 deals involving 353 players.

A Chicago cab driver, not recognizing his passenger, once told Lane, "That guy with the White Sox would trade his own mother."

"That's right," replied Lane, "and for a slight cash consideration he would throw in his grand mother."

In 1960, while running the Indians, Lane made trading history, swapping American League home run champion Rocky Colavito to Detroit for league batting champion Harvey Kuenn, then followed that blockbuster by trading his manager, Joe Gordon, to the Tigers for their manager, Jimmie Dykes.

When criticized for frequently trading away fan favorites, such as Colavito, Lane replied sarcastically, "Maybe I was wrong. Maybe I should have taken a vote of the fans before I made the deal."

Sitting in the stands while with the White Sox at one home game, Lane upset with an umpire's call and complained loudly and profanely to American League President Will Harridge, watching the game from a box seat.

Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick fined Lane $500 and ordered him to give Harridge a public apology.

Gymnastics meet opens tonight

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Tracee Talavera leads the United States contingent in the three-day American Cup invitational gymnastics competition beginning tonight at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

The event, sponsored by the U.S. Gymnastics Federation, features top competitors from 19 nations. The men's individual competition begins tonight at 8 p.m., with women's individual events Saturday night. The top eight finishers in each event will qualify for Sunday's all-around competition.

Each participating nation, except for the United States, will be represented by two women and two men.

Among the better-known foreign competitors are Romania's Emilia Eberle, one of the world's best in the women's floor exercise, and China's Yuejiu Li, whose large, muscular legs have earned him the nickname "Thunder-thighs."

A spectacular feature of Li's horizontal bar routine is a triple somersault dismount, and his floor routine features a high, spinning double back-somersault with a full twist.

Joining Talavera on the U.S. women's team will be Kathy Johnson and Julianne McNamara. The U.S. men are Bart Conners and Jim Hartung, both chosen to the 1980 U.S. Olympic team.

Syracuse tops Michigan in NIT quarterfinals

By The Associated Press

Suddenly the Big Ten is no longer the big force in the National Invitation Tournament.

Three teams from the Big Ten Conference got as far as the round of eight, but two were knocked off Thursday night as Syracuse defeated Michigan 91-76 and West Virginia upended Minnesota 80-69.

The quarterfinals continue tonight when Purdue, now the only surviving Big Ten team, plays host to Duke and South Alabama visits Tulsa. The semifinals and finals will be played at New York's Madison Square Garden March 23 and 25.

Syracuse, leading 46-42 at halftime, hit its first 16 shots of the second half to pull away from Michigan. The Orangemen did not miss a shot until Leo Rautins' layup attempt rolled off the rim with 6:05 to play. By that time, Syracuse had built a 79-64 advantage.

"They were just hot. There's not much you can do against a team like that," said Michigan's Mike McGee, the Big Ten's all-time leading scorer who had 20 points for the Wolverines, 19-11. "That Schayes, I don't think he missed at all."

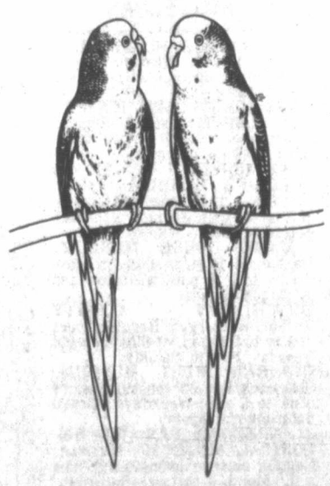

Senior center Dan Schayes had 22 points on 10-for-14 shooting for Syracuse, 21-11, which will face West Virginia in the semifinals. Erich Santifer had 21, Tony Bruin 18 and Rautins 16.

It was Syracuse's sixth postseason victory on its home floor and came before a crowd of 20,695 at the Carrier Dome.

The home-court advantage was not enough to save Minnesota, which led 11-2 after 2½ minutes but was outplayed the remainder of the game.

West Virginia, 23-8, recovered from its slow start and went ahead for the first time at 23-22 after 12 minutes.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White asked President Reagan on Thursday to increase federal efforts against drug smuggling in Texas.

He sent the president a letter saying Texas' long border with Mexico and its Gulf of Mexico coastline make Texas "increasingly attractive to smugglers from other states who are moving into the Texas area to avoid enforcement pressures in other areas of the Gulf."

Texas has more than 75,000 heroin addicts, White said.

"I am calling upon you to increase federal funding in support of those agencies responsible for the prevention of drug and narcotics smuggling activities. This would involve an increase in border patrols, more funding for U.S. customs activities, and increased support for Drug Enforcement Agency, Coast Guard and Immigration and Naturalization Service activities in our state," White told Reagan.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dr. Robert Bernstein, state health commissioner, has been named president-elect of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials.

He was chosen at the close of the association's annual meeting in San Antonio.

Bernstein came to the State Health Department in 1978 after retiring from the Army as a major general. His last command was the Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

——— CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — U.S. Distric Judge Owen D. Cox will assume senior status Friday on his 71st birthday after ten years on the federal bench.

Cox will continue to handle certain cases filed prior to Jan. 1 and will draw a full salary of $67,100 annually.

U.S. Sen. John Tower will nominate a replacement who must be approved by President Reagan and confirmed by the U.S. Senate.

Cox was appointed to the federal judgeship Dec. 1, 1970, by former President Nixon. At the time he was in private practice here. Cox is a former city attorney and assistant attorney general.

His docket included the Corpus Christi school desegregation case and the income tax fraud case of George Parr, long-time political kingpin of Duval County.

Federal judges in Brownsville, Laredo and Houston have been assigned cases remaining on Cox's docket that were filed after Jan. 1.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A towboat operator has filed suit asking a federal judge to discontinue the U.S. Coast Guard's jurisdiction over waterways in peacetime.

Bobby E. Yates, acting as his own attorney, identified himself as an officer in the U.S. Merchant Marine operating on the Mississippi River. He is seeking $110 million in damages from the federal government.

He claimed Coast Guard patrol of waterway violates his right not to be deprived of civil liberty "by being placed under arbitrary martial rule."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Norwegian film star Liv Ullmann, describing her recent tour of refugee camps in the Horn of Africa, says that "in a few days, the death toll is like Hiroshima."

"While we are sitting here, thousands of children are dying," Ms. Ullmann told a hearing of two House Foreign Affairs subcommittees Thursday.

Ms. Ullmann spoke of "the silent lines of people, waiting for a plane with food, a the cargo truck, for medicine, for doctors. ... Women holding forth their children, some of them saying: 'This is my last child, the others are dead.' One little child has only sticks for arms, sticks for legs, but still reaches up her hand to take my finger and leads me around in a refugee camp of 75,000 people."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The successful Soviet test of a satellite-killing space weapon is the latest move in "a technological chess game of development and counterdevelopment," says the head of a major electroncis firm.

Bernard L. Schwartz, chairman and chief executive officer of the Loral Corp., said at a press conference here Thursday that the United States was aware of the Soviet efforts and already has done a lot of work on it.

"You are going to see in this decade laser-directed missiles," he predicted. Schwartz said the United States is substantially ahead of the Soviets in the strategic area but they have deployed their electronic capability in the tactical area more effectively.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For more than a century, the historic wooden cable cars that helped make San Francisco famous have given lifts to millions of foot-weary tourists and residents.

But the cable cars are showing their age, so the city has mounted a $60 million renovation drive. That drive got a boost Thursday when Mayor Dianne Feinstein accepted a $1 million contribution from United Airlines and Westin Hotels, formerly Western International Hotels.

The donation raised the total of contributions to about $3.5 million of the $10 million expected to be raised by 1982. The city hopes the federal government will come up with the rest of the money, said Mel Wax, an aide to the mayor.

TORONTO (AP) — Ontario's Conservatives won their 12th consecutive election, giving Provincial Premier William Davis a new mandate.

The Conservatives took 70 seats in the legislature, up from the 58 they won in 1977, the Liberals remained at 34, and the New Democratic Party went from 21 to 33.

Davis, criticized by some members of his party for breaking with national Conservative leader Joe Clark to support Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's constitutional proposals, said in a post-election speech Thursday:

"While my responsibility is to the people of this province, I have always regarded myself as a Canadian first and I shall continue to pursue that point of view as long as I am in the premier's office."

———

HONG KONG (AP) — China's air force court will try 12 people associated with the late Lin Piao on charges of conspiring to rebel and kill Mao Tse-tung, the Hong Kong communist newspaper Wen Wei Po reported today.

The paper gave no date for the trial, but said similar trials will take place after further investigations.

Five associates of Lin, the former defense minister, were sentenced in December to 17 and 18 years' imprisonment on charges of plotting to kill Mao.

Lin reportedly died in 1971 in a plane crash when he tried to flee China to the Soviet Union after his alleged attempts to kill Mao failed.

———

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Panamanian President Aristides Royo said the U.S. military presence in Panama may be objectionable, but there is nothing his government can do to prevent it.

"Panama can shout, protest, tell Mexico and the world that it doesn't like it, but it definitely does not have the force to expel Americans from the Canal Zone," Royo told a news conference Thursday.

Royo, in Mexico on a state visit, said Panama is opposed to any foreign intervention in El Salvador, where the Reagan administration has dispatched military advisers to help the junta battle leftist guerrillas.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Superior Court judge has refused a request from a teachers union to prevent an end to mandatory busing in the nation's second largest school district next month.

The busing was put into effect as part of a desegregation plan, but a judge later ruled that the board could not be forced to bus students for integration.

United Teachers of Los Angeles has said it is not opposed to the end of busing, but believes it should not take place in the middle of a semester. Judge David Eagleson turned down on Thursday a union request for a temporary restraining order, but set a further hearing on the matter for April 2.

———

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Women employees of Kelvinator Inc. who were victims of sex discrimination will receive awards ranging from $250 to $32,000 under a plan approved by the women and company attorneys.

The company agreed in February to pay $475,000 to 77 women, but the individual awards were only recently determined.

U.S. District Judge John Feikens of Detroit must still decide whether to approve the plan. He was hearing testimony in the suit last fall when proceedings were halted to allow for out-of-court negotiations.

———

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy was being held on a charge of murder in the death of his stepfather even though an autopsy showed the man died of a heart attack.

The boy, whose name was withheld because of his age, was charged with second-degree murder Wednesday. His stepfather, Gene Morris, 43, who reportedly had a history of heart problems, died after the two were involved in a scuffle.

Police said they filed the charge because they believed the death resulted from the scuffle. After the autopsy, police said they would continue to hold the boy until they completed their investigation.

Allergy fund is growing

BRISTOL, England (AP) — British television viewers have responded generously to the plight of Sheila Rossall, the Englishwoman allergic to nearly everything.

The 31-year-old former pop singer was flown to Dallas last month for three months' treatment at the Brookhaven Medical Center in a bid to save her life.

When the British Broadcasting Corp. showed a program about Miss Rossall's plight, viewers sent in nearly 7,000 pounds ($16,100) to help offset her expenses.

Sheila suffers from "total allergy syndrome," a rare condition in which she is affected by chemicals connected with 20th century life. Doctors at Brookhaven, equipped with space-age isolation and filtration equipment, say Miss Rossall is making progress, but has shown no dramatic improvement since her admission.
