Coming Sunday . . .

Perry Holley professes a "profound love of nature" and a fascination with birds — songbirds, game fowl, eagles . . . .

Holley, a former Midland cabinetmaker, puts his flair for nature and birds into wood carvings of birds of the Southwest. The product of his whittling art usually goes to Neiman-Marcus, where his birds are worth much more than their weight in gold.

You can read about Holley in Sunday's West Texas Life section in The Reporter-Telegram.

Photographer Brian Hendershot focused on the artist and his works, and writer Ed Todd took some notes and "wrote the man up."

It starts with a shout and a cry for help, and hopefully ends with a life saved instead of lost.

It's Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, or CPR for short.

In Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, staff writer Brooks Keller follows a recent article with a second look at CPR and its life-sustaining techniques.

Canal issue prompts 'real debate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The arguments are familiar, but the Panama Canal debate is giving Americans the opportunity to hear a rare experience: a genuine gloves-off, give-and-take debate on the Senate floor.

Time after time, senators took the floor Thursday to give their views on the history, politics, legality or economics of the canal issue. But each time, someone from the opposition interrupted to question the accuracy of the speaker's point.

It was not a normal Senate session, in which debate often seems a lost art.

So why the unusual drama playing itself out coast-to-coast via National Public Radio?

Because, as Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., noted, the treaties "still don't have the votes to pass the Senate. ... What goes on here will decide the outcome."

Baker, who supports the treaties, agrees with his opponents that this debate is a rarity in that arguments on the floor might change key votes or sway one of the handful of undecideds.

Most polls indicate opponents are about three votes shy of the 34 needed to preclude the treaties' ratification. Both must be approved by a two-thirds majority.

Thursday's debates covered a multitude of points.

Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., sparred with James Allen, D-Allen., and Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., over whether a Panamanian had signed the 1903 treaty that gave the United States the Canal Zone.

Byrd said no Panamanian actually signed the document.

Laxalt interrupted him. "The treaty was ratified by the people and the federal government of Panama," he told Byrd.

"As if it were with a pistol at its temple," Byrd parried.

Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Clifford Case, R-N.J., debated whether the treaties would require large appropriations of American tax dollars to keep the waterway open in the future.

Hatch, one of the opposition's leading spokesmen, clashed with Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., over legal points involved in the canal issue.

There were disagreements over Panamanian politics, over how well Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos might adhere to the treaties and over his government's human rights record.

Lozano autopsies will be reviewed

By BROOKS KELLER
R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA—Ector County District Attorney John Green said Thursday that he will personally deliver the evidence and reports of two separate autopsies on the Jan. 22 death of Larry Lozano in Ector County Jail to Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk in Hoston.

Dr. Jachimczyk is the medical examiner for Harris County. Green said that he would make the trip to Houston on Monday or Tuesday, and that a Tuesday coroner's hearing would have to be postponed, probably until around March 1.

Earlier Thursday, Dr. Jachimczyk told The Reporter-Telegram that he had not had contact thus far with either of the pathologists who conducted autopsies on the body of Lozano.

These are Dr. Kris Challipalli of Medical Center Hospital here, and Dr. Frederick Bornstein, El Paso County medical examiner.

Dr. Challipalli's findings have not been made public so far. She made the first autopsy on Lozano's body.

Dr. Bornstein made a second autopsy, at the request of the Lozano family. His autopsy reportedly found Lozano's death "incompatible with suicide."

Green said Thursday that the El Paso doctor had told him (Green) that he could not determine the exact cause of death.

Green said the autopsy material he will deliver in Houston next week will consist of written reports from the two pathologists and slides and tissue cultures.

Dr. Jachimczyk said Thursday that he had not been subpoenaed for the Tuesday hearing and that he did not think he would be present for it.

But, he admitted, "a lot can happen between now and then."

Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee said today that any evidence uncovered by a U.S. Department of Justice inquiry would go to a federal court.

Lumpee said Dr. Jachimczyk may be able to look at the autopsies as early as Tuesday night. He said he did not know when Dr. Challipalli's report would be turned into him.

Lumpee noted that whatever the findings of the coroner's hearing were he would give a transcript of the hearing to the district clerk to pass on to the grand jury.

The central contention in the case is whether Lozano committed suicide in his padded cell, by hitting his head agsinst a thick glass window, or whether he was beaten to death by sheriff's officers.

SOMETIMES IT FEELS like you are holding up the whole world, or at least a tree-sized chunk of it. Smokey arrives

Smokey, a Weimaraner purchased by the city of Midland Police Department to be used in a drug detection program, arrived Thursday night from Houston and was introduced to Police Chief Wayne Gideon this morning.

In cooperation with the Midland Independent School District, the dog, working with Sgt. Joe Carr of the Midland police narcotics division, will be used primarily for detection of drugs on school campuses, according to Gideon.

Gideon and Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey confirmed that conferences would be held next week to coordinate use of the dog on the

Midlander dies abroad

Mrs. William F. (Oza) Walker, 54, wife of the pulpit minister of Midland's North A and Tennessee Streets Church of Christ, died Friday in a hospital in Kakinada, India, following a sudden illness.

The body is to be returned to Midland early next week. Funeral arrangements are pending until then.

Mrs. Walker and her husband were on a missions trip to India, visiting various Churches of Christ whose work is supported in part by the Midland church. The Walkers had departed Midland Jan. 30, joining a group of 14 preachers from elsewhere in the U. S. for the trip.

Mrs. Walker had resided in Midland 12 years.

Survivors, in addition to her husband, include two sons, Greg Walker of Temple and Doug Walker of Dallas; her mother, Mrs. Alton Smith of Lawton, Okla., several sisters and two grandchildren.

No bill returned

GARDEN CITY — A 12-person Glasscock County grand jury at noon today returned a finding of no bill against ex-deputy sheriff G. B. Therwhanger, 51, in the Nov. 6 shooting of farm laborer Tiburcio Griego Santome.

The jury listened to 25 to 30 witnesses Thursday and today, said District Attorney Rick Hamby of Big Spring.

Griego was fatally shot in Glasscock County Sheriff Royce "Booger" Pruit's patrol car after Griego had been arrested on a disturbance call at a church festival at St. Lawrence, southwest of Midland.

The return of a no bill means, in effect, that Therwhanger was not indicted in the matter.

Monsieur had highest place in owner's home

Melvin and Evalena Simmons are heartbroken over the loss of their pet, Monsieur, a French toy poodle which was kept in a state of royalty.

Theirs is a universal grief: the death of a loved one.

"He was our little pride and joy for 13½ years," Mrs. Simmons said of the six-pound poodle. "He was a gentle, sweet thing," she said.

Monsieur, with his pedigree, was like a child to them.

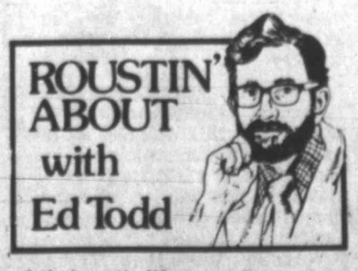

"To us, he wasn't a dog," said Simmons. "He really didn't know he was a dog."

Monsieur, who had been in poor health for two years, died at 5 p.m. on Jan. 14. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons were at his side when Monsieur slipped into a coma and died two days later.

Monsieur suffered from heart trouble, kidney problems, arthritis "and he had vertebrae that were separated in his back," Simmons said.

Monsieur lived to be 13 years, two months and 20 days old, Simmons said.

Simmons credits the last two years of their pet's life to medical science and to the care of Monsieur's doctor, Odessa veterinarian John Bill Oman.

"We enjoyed him two more years due to Dr. Oman," Simmons said.

Monsieur came into the Simmons household at age five weeks in 1964. He was a gift from Simmons' mother, Leora Trice of Midland.

Monsieur's coming was, in a sense, timely. A year later, the Simmonses 17-year-old pet Pekingese, Teddy, was killed just outside their home in

Midlanders take issue with proposed textbooks

By MARLEEN RAY

After listening to opinions of two persons concerning textbooks under consideration for adoption by Midland public schools, Superintendent James H. Mailey said the textbook committee plans to make a recommendation to the school board in March.

During the public hearing of the textbook committee, the first one the committee has had in many years, according to Mailey, Elaine Mitchell appeared before the members and gave her views of the literature books proposed for adoption for seventh and eighth graders.

She said, as a parent, she would not recommend the adoption of "Focus: Themes in Literature, Themes and Writers" for seventh graders nor the second text in the series, "Perception: Themes in Literature, Themes amd Writers," for eighth graders because she felt the discussion questions at the end of each story were "too controversial."

For examples, she cited such discussion questions as "It's easier to be law-abiding if you're not too smart," "Puerto Ricans cheat their neighbors " and "Man cannot escape his savage nature."

Mrs. Mitchell pointed out that discussion questions stating it is better to have peace than scientific advancement are "kind of deep" for seventh-grade students.

She said these discussion questions are designed to change the attitudes of children, not improve their reading.

In her objections to the books, "Projection in Literature" for seventh-grade students and its eighth-grade counterpart, "Counterpoint in Literature," Mrs. Mitchell said she thought they contained "much death-oriented literature . . . more than I think belongs in a seventh or eighth grade book." She read a paragraph from one of the stories, describing a child beating a buzzard to death.

Mrs. Mitchell also voiced strong objections to the classic story called "The Tell-Tale Heart," by Edgar Allen Poe, carried in the text for seventh graders, "Introduction to Literature." She said the story was "too gruesome" for a seventh-grade student since it described a man suffocating another, dismembering the corpse and hiding the pieces under the floor boards.

Instead of these textbooks, Mrs. Mitchell said she recommended the school district adopt the series, "Adventures for Readers," since, in her opinion, "these books will help our children to appreciate good literature, at an impressionable age."

She said, although the literature books, "Focus on Action" and "Focus on People," hadn't arrived for review by the committee or other interested person, she understood that it is a good series and recommended it as her second choice for adoption.

Mrs. Mitchell said her reviews are based on work done by Mel Gabler, educational research analyst, in Longview, who appears before the state textbook committee every year in Austin.

In the second appearance before the committee, H. G. Orson presented his reviews and recommendations of books on free enterprise being considered for adoption by the district.

Orson represented Leonard H. Caryl, who originally requested to appear before the committee but was unable to do so at the last minute.

Orson said, although neither textbook up for adoption was totally satisfactory for educating students about free enterprise, the book, "Fundamentals of the American Free Enterprise System," is the better one, and he recommended it.

However, he said if it is adopted by the district, it should be supplemented with books that "demonstrate the theory and practice of true laissez-faire capitalism" to counteract the government-oriented bias of the book. He said this book fails to define or explain inflation, which he considers "probably the most single important economic question of our day."

Orson said he opposed the adoption of the other text, "Consumer Economic Problems," because, he said, in many cases, the opinions of the authors are stated as fact, the authors state information in a misleading or one-sided manner and because there are errors in fact.

For example, Orson cited the statement "The cost (of government services) must be paid from public income, which comes from taxes paid by both businesses and individuals" and "The more services we obtain at public expense and the higher the cost of government services, the more taxes we pay . . ." as being in error, in his opinion.

He said this book would not educate students about free enterprise as required by state law.

At the end of the hearing, Mailey said the committee is planning "to listen further to its advisors" and it "will deliberate in considerable length" before making its recommendation to the school board, taking into account the opinions presented at the hearing.

Mailey said the board then may reject or approve the recommendation of the committee, but it cannot substitute a suggestion for one of its own.

Rep. Mahon hospitalized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, is in Bethesda Naval Hospital for observation after feeling pains in the lower chest and abdomen Thursday.

Aides said Mahon reported by telephone Friday that he is "feeling fine" but might remain in the hospital through the weekend for medical tests.

Mahon, 77, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, canceled a scheduled speech in Amarillo, Texas, Friday because of his illness.

Both Gideon and Mailey emphasized that the dog would be used in regular police operations, as well as on the campuses.

Mailey said the dog would be used on campuses when Carr is off duty.

Gideon said that Smokey would be given a "day or two" to acclimatize himself to the weather and his new home and then he would be "pressed into service."

Plans to purchase a dog to be used in drug detection on the school campuses began about a year ago, according to Mailey. Members of the school board and staff members studied procedures being used by other school districts and were impressed by the program at Spring Branch, which also used a dog.

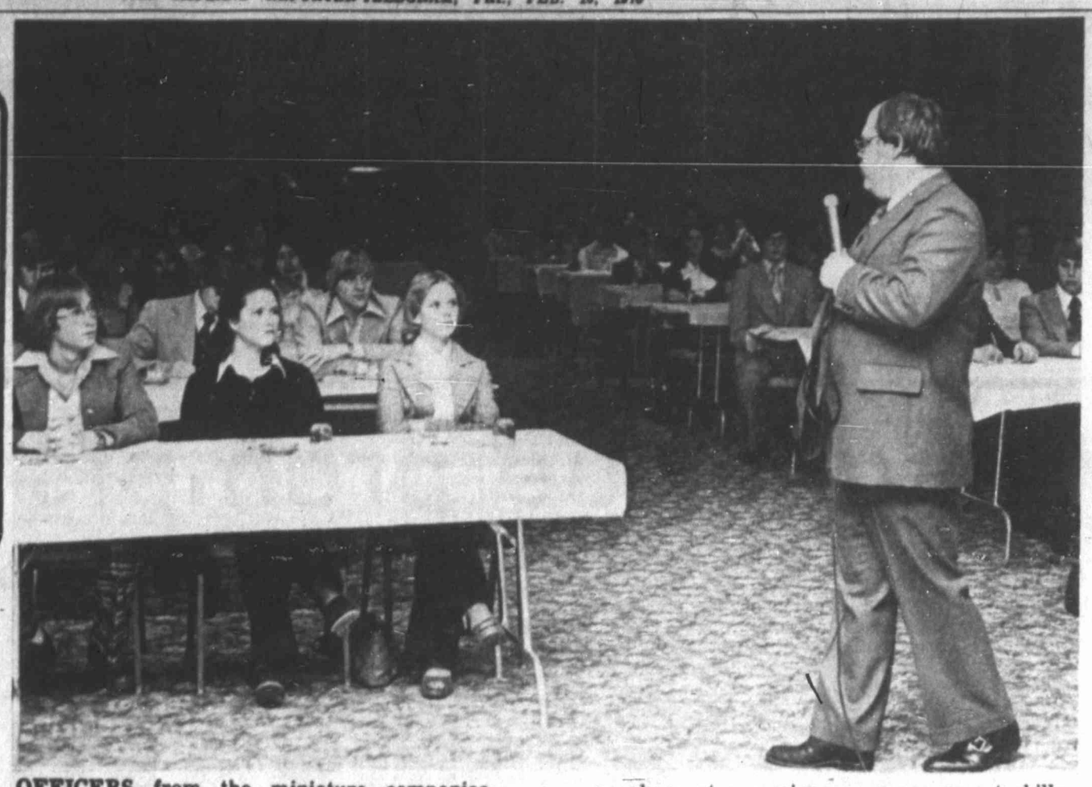

Security Associates of Houston demonstrated one of their dogs during an October school board meeting and City Council meeting.

Smokey was purchased from a kennel in Houston and trained by Security Associates. During the past two weeks, Sgt. Carr has been in Houston learning to work with the dog, Gideon said.

Approximate cost of the dog is $3,000.

Rehabilitation contracts ready on Midland homes

By JIM STEINBERG

Pleased with community support for the project, members of the Midland Commission for Local Community Development announced today that contracts to rehabilitate seven houses in Midland had been awarded under a program designed to substitute community involvement for federal funds.

Gary Thurman, chairman of the community development committee of 20 people, noted that the response from church groups and individuals has been encouraging.

Committee member J. M. Fullinwider said that $36,295 had been raised by the commission so far — enough, he said, to rehabilitate approximately 12 houses.

The local development commission was appointed by Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. in November as a means to carry out a low-income housing rehabilitation program that had previously been funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development under a Community Development Grant.

The goal of the commission is to rehabilitate 50 houses, Thurman said. "There is no set life to the commission," Thurman noted, adding that when the commission has completed it's task, he expected it would not be continued in its present form.

Thurman said the commission this summer will probably make recomendations to the City Council on the form the project should take in the future.

He said it was believed that the repairs on 50 houses would make a very substantial dent in city needs for housing rehabilitation in this area.

Susan Edwards of the Human Relations Commission said during the press conference that applications for the rehabilitation program are still being accepted by the council. She urged that those who have applied in the past for the housing rehabilitation progam check to see that their applications are current.

This year, Mrs. Edwards said, the housing rehabilitation program is not limited to certain "poverty" areas of the city, but available citywide.

To be eligible for the program, however, most persons must be living on assistance incomes of $250 a month or less, Thurman noted.

As was the case when the program was funded under federal funds, the local housing rehabilitation program is administered by the Midland Housing Authority. The screening of applicants is done by the Human Relations Council.

Mrs. Edwards and Thurman pointed out that some houses that do not meet the city building code and therefore are not qualified to participate in this rehabilitation project may be picked up by an all volunteer housing project called "Christmas in April."

Thurman speculated that perhaps in the future the local community development program might merge with the "Christmas in April" programs, which now meet separate needs, without duplication.

Pet had high place

far west Midland. A car ran over her.

"She liked to take a stroll late in the evenings," Simmons said of Teddy.

That year (1965), the Simmons' oldest son, Gene, graduated from high school in Midland and went off to college. Three years later, their other son, Mike, did the same thing.

But Monsieur was there, and filled the Simmonses with joy. And wherever they went on out-of-town travels, Monsieur was with them. Simmons, a claims manager for an insurance company, was and is on the road a good deal.

"He followed me everywhere I went," Simmons said, "and when I stopped, he'd sit on my foot."

Monsieur was quite select with whom he chose to keep company, however briefly.

"He couldn't stand cats. He hated cats," Simmons said.

And with rare exception, he couldn't stand other dogs.

That exception was Gigi Jones, the 9-year-old French toy poodle living with Roy and Louise Jones of Midland. But Monsieur and Gigi were "just friends." Their relationship never developed into an affair. It was about as platonic as one dog can be to another.

"He never would mate . . .," Mrs. Simmons said. As far as Monsieur was concerned, no other creature on earth "was equivalent to him," she said. "The rest of them, as far as he was concerned, were 'dogs.'"

The simple passing of time has taken Monsieur from the midst of the Simmonses.

They won't forget him. For one thing, his grave is in their backyard.

"This house was his — wherever he wanted to go (he went)," Mrs. Simmons said. He slept with his keepers. "We just loved him to death," she said.

And should the Simmonses ever move from their two-story turn-of-the-century home, Simmons said he'll open the grave and take Monsieur. He's properly buried in a baby coffin lined with satin.

"He really was the sweetest little dog you've ever seen," Mrs. Simmons said. "But he was not a lap dog. And he didn't like anybody but us."

Big Spring police investigating

BIG SPRING — Big Spring police this morning still were investigating leads in the shooting death early Thursday morning of 69-year-old Enrique Longoria.

Longoria had just returned home from work shortly after midnight, when two men pounded on the door, police said.

Police said Longoria's wife started to open the door, but attempted to slam it shut when she saw the men were wearing ski masks. The two men then shot their way into the house and shot Longoria about six times with an a pistol or pistols, police said.

Police have not determined yet exactly how many times Longoria was shot.

Man charged in robberies

An Odessa man charged Jan. 30 with the Jan. 17 aggravated robbery of the Desert Inn Liquor Store, 3101 Bankhead Highway, is now in Midland City Jail charged with the Desert Inn robbery, the Jan. 17 robbery of the B & B Liquor Store and forgery.

Frankie James Warden, 24, was taken into custody Jan. 30 by Ector County Sheriff's deputies on felony and misdemeanor warrants out of Ector County, a felony warrant out of Harris County and a warrant for armed robbery out of Midland County.

Warden was transferred to Midland's jail Thursday afternoon, after bonds had been set in Ector and Harris counties.

According to Capt. Billy Ray, Midland Police Department, the original warrant for Warden was issued by Peace Justice Robert H. Pine Jan. 19.

At the time the warrant was issued, investigation continued on whether the robbery of the Desert Inn Liquor Store was connected to the robbery of the B & B Liquor Store, 612 N. Big Spring, Ray said.

The two armed robberies occured within 30 minutes of each other.

Passenger count grows

The Midland Regional Air Terminal set an all time record of 342,177 emplaned passengers in 1977, representing a 46 percent increase in passengers boarded in 1977 over those in 1976, Director of City Aviation Col. Wilson Banks said Thursday.

With about the same total of incoming passengers, and considering those people who came to the airport to meet or see someone depart, it can be assumed that approximately one million people utilized the terminal during 1977 for one purpose or another, he said.

Dr. Cardozier addresses UT regents

By BROOKS KELLER
R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA — Speaking to university regents who preside over 12 campuses and 90,000 students, Dr. V. R. Cardozier, president of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said today teaching excellence was the key to UTPB's success to date.

He told the University of Texas System Regents that most of his faculty received Ph. D. degrees from such prestigious schools as Harvard, Yale, UT-Austin, Michigan and Rice.

A second factor in UTPB's success, he said, is the absence of a mandatory "publish or perish" policy, common at many universities.

"Publish or perish" is a policy which puts a premium on scholarly writing by professors, often at the expense of their enthusiasm for teaching.

A teacher at UTPB may elect to "publish or perish," but is not compelled to do so. He may be evaluated on his teaching skills only.

But a healthy level of quality research and writing still comes out of UTPB, minus the scholarly trivia that passes for publication in some larger universities, he said.

The regents are meeting at UTPB as part of a plan to hold each regular meeting at a different school within the UT system.

Dr. Cardozier told of many innovations pursued at UTPB. Included among these are self-paced instruction, contract study, open laboratories where students can work at any time, and internships for students in business, government and the arts.

He said UTPB has been rated as one of the five most innovative schools in the country by the National Educational Reaources Information Center for Higher Education.

A 12-minute film showing every aspect of student and faculty life at UTPB was warmly applauded.

In an early action today, the regents named former Secretary of State Dean Rusk as the first appointee in the new Richardson Fellows Program for Distinguished Public Officials in the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at UT-Austin.

As such, Ruck will speak and participate in forums in Austin the second week in March.

Pipeline application to be mailed

RANKIN — Upton County officials expect to mail today a pre-application form to the Farm Home Administration in Temple for a 98.7-mile water pipeline between Big Spring and the Upton County cities of Rankin and McCamey.

The cost of the pipeline, water treatment plant and 50 million gallon water storage plant is $10,375,000.

The pre-application form proposes to finance the project with a $3 million grant, $2 million loan and the sale of $5,375,000 in bonds.

"We might survive this summer, but I doubt if we can survive the next (without the pipeline)," said Upton County Attorney John A. Menefee of the water situation in Rankin and McCamey.

The proposal was approved by the board of directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission on Wednesday.

According to the pre-application, "The future of Rankin, McCamey and all of Upton County depends upon the development of an adequate and proper water supply system.

More rain may be due

Don't put away your umbrellas!

According to the weatherman this morning, a major storm, developing out in the West and moving towards the East, may bring some rain to the Midland area Saturday.

Despite the drizzle that has fallen over the city and the surrounding area the past few days, the weatherman also said Midland still is suffering from a drouth and "needs all the rain it can get."

He said the storm moving in from the West has been pouring down rain in California for the past 24 hours, bringing relief from the drouth there and even creating flood threats. He said as the storm moves in an easterly direction it should dump some snow on the northern half of the country and bring some rain to the southern half.

The probability of rain Saturday is 30 percent. Skies should be partly cloudy tonight with the low temperature dipping to near 40 degrees and southerly winds decreasing to 10 to 15 mph.

The weatherman further predicted that temperatures should get warmer Saturday with the high temperature reaching to the middle 60s.

A trace of precipitation was reported for the last 24 hours this morning by the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal. The high temperature Thursday was 40 degrees, and the overnight low temperature dropped to 23 degrees.

Some fog was reported this morning in Andrews, Rankin, Stanton and Garden City. Crane had clear skies and cold temperatures, while the skies in Big Lake had almost cleared up. It was cloudy and cold in Lamesa and Big Spring this morning.

'It ain't fair!'

"Why do you allow me only $675 income deduction to raise my child for one year when you allow $1,200 per year for a Cuban refugee? And if a Cuban boy or girl is going to school, an extra $1,000 per year?"

Good questions, and they are asked by "A Harassed Taxpayer," in an article appearing in a recent issue of the El Paso Scottish Rite Bulletin.

Perhaps the United States Government, to whom the questions undoubtedly were directed, has the answers. If so, they are awaited with interest.

The harassed taxpayer didn't stop with the questions, however. He or she continued, as follows:

"You allow $2,390 to keep a man in the federal pen. Retired persons receive $168 per month under Social Security but you say I need less than $57 per month for my child's cost.

"The Vista Training Program costs $3.1 million to train only 202 young people. This is more than $15,000 per year per trainee. The Job Corps so far has spent approximately $18,000 per year to train each high school dropout. To feed, clothe and train a boy in the armed forces costs $1,076.14 but you expect me to do the same for my youngsters on $675.

"But this is what takes the cake; you allow me only $675 to take care of my child, but will give through A.D.C. (Aid to Dependent Children) $800 to care for an illegitimate child. This leads me to believe you feel that child is more important than mine.

"I am yelling Uncle, because I think it's time someone pointed out these inconsistencies."

Yes, it certainly is, and the harassed taxpayer has done a good job in this respect.

In yelling "Uncle," as the taxpayer has done, perhaps Uncle Sam will get the message and at least provide some explanation to these perplexing problems.

Unusual J. A. product

The young people who form and operate miniature business firms under the Junior Achievement program in Midland and elsewhere, often come up with some most unusual products to manufacture and market.

But a J. A. group in Anchorage, Alaska, chose a product which beats all, insofar as is known.

Realizing that one sure way to make a buck is to make and sell something which always is in demand, the Anchorage Achievers decided on coffins — yes, that's correct, coffins.

When the suggestion first was heard, the youths thought it was made as a jest, but it wasn't, and the choice ultimately was made, particularly after they found that they could make $30 on each one.

The coffins are produced at a rate of one per two-hour meeting. At last account, the company had sold three.

The coffins, according to a news release from Alaska, are simple hinged boxes, made of plywood and equipped with slender brass handles. They are sold for $50 to an Anchorage funeral home.

And the funeral home is glad to purchase them. It usually buys the coffins from a Seattle firm for $55 or $60. But there often is a delay in delivery of from four to six weeks, a spokesman for the home said. Delivery is much more prompt from the Junior Achievement company — usually a week.

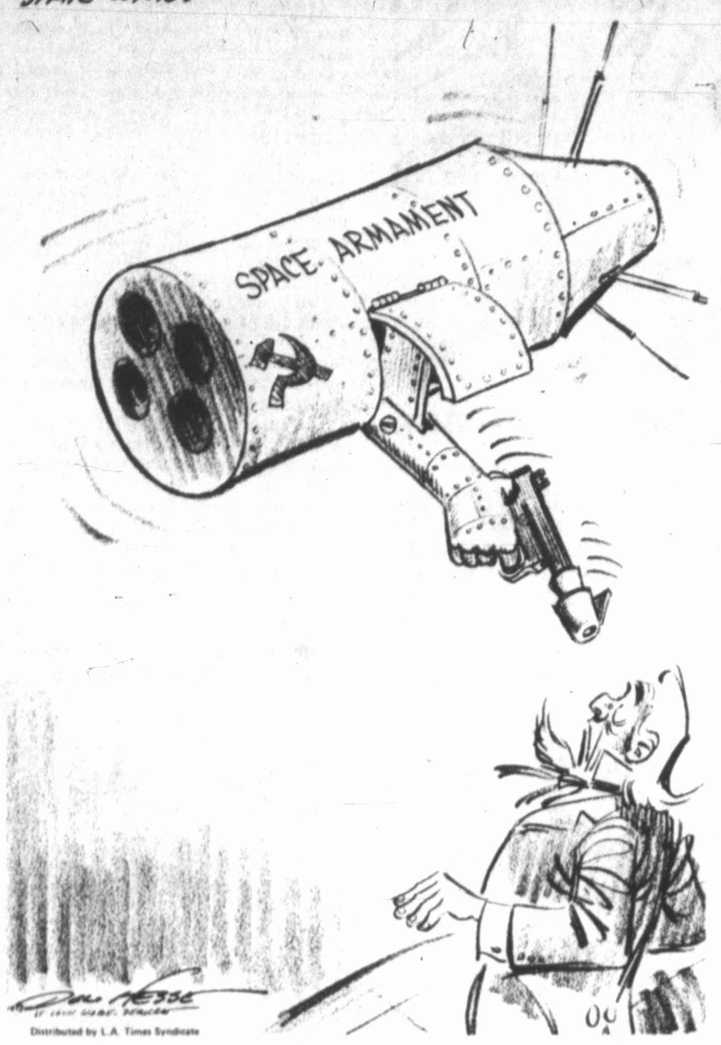

Junior Achievement's goal is to teach high school students the workings of the free enterprise system, and this is an example of free enterprise at its best.

Midland Junior Achievement just last week staged its annual J. A. Fair, so it's a bit late for this year, just in case the J. A. companies here get any ideas.

But don't be surprised if you see a J.A.-made coffin or some product just as unusual at the 1979 Midland Junior Achievement Fair.

CHARLEY REESE:

Public pressure is last hope for Edw. Kuznetsov

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — It is not often any of us has the opportunity to save a life, but each of you who is reading this now has such an opportunity.

The life belongs to Edward Kuznetsov. As you read this he is, if it is not too late, a prisoner in Camp 10, Mordovia, the Soviet Union. His is a life very much worth saving.

With the last weapon left to him, his life, he is defying his oppressors with a hunger strike to the death. His wife, Sylva, who was freed four years ago and is in the U.S. on a speaking tour in his behalf, says he will not give in.

I have just read his "Prison Diaries," which he kept and managed to smuggle out and I believe her. This is one of those great individuals in whose soul the fire of freedom burns so intensely that no amount of torture or oppression can break his spirit. He is the rare man who can be destroyed but not defeated.

Kuznetsov's father was a Jew but he died when the boy was three years old. Kuznetsov was reared a Russian and his internal passport is stamped Russian. He knew nothing of Jewish religion or culture as a child.

His first act of defiance was to publish what the Soviet authorities considered "anti-Soviet" literature. For that, he served seven years in prison. While in prison, he became aware of the anti-Semitism the Soviet government encourages and he became aware that two-thirds of the dissidents in Russia are Jewish.

As an act of both faith and defiance, he insisted, upon being released, that he be classified as a Jew. Soviet officials have refused. For just two years, he was outside prison walls. He married and with 10 other young Russians plotted a desperate attempt to escape from the Soviet Union.

The KGB, the Russian secret police, learned of the plot from the first moment, yet they allowed the young people to proceed until the last few hours. Their plan had been to capture an empty plane and fly to freedom. They never got to the airport.

In a show trial in 1970, the 11 were tried in Leningrad for treason. Kuznetsov and one other received the death sentence. The other received prison sentences ranging from eight to 15 years. A few days later, the death sentences were commuted to 15 years in prison.

Sylva, who is now a citizen of Israel, hopes to create enough public pressure on Soviet authorities to release her husband or at the least allow him visitors who can talk him out of his hunger strike.

His health is ruined but the Soviets are force-feeding him. For some Byzantine reason, they do not wish him to die, and for the same obscure reasons, they are sometimes susceptible to public pressure, which is the last hope of Edward Kuznetsov.

It is only a coincidence but he and I have the same birthday. I am celebrating mine as I write this, comfortably at home on a sunny afternoon, surrounded by the people I love most. The very act of writing a newspaper column without fear is a demonstration of the freedom we in this country take for granted but which for Kuznetsov, in all his 39 years, has been only a dream.

God, how I hate tyranny but how easy it is to hate it from a free country. At this moment, Kuznetsov sits in a dark, cold cell shut off from the human beings who love him, ill and in pain, yet magnificently defying the tyrants who actually have their hands around his neck.

In one interview with a KGB officer, the policeman shook his head and said, "If in 20 years they told me Kuznetsov had reformed, I wouldn't believe them," and Kuznetsov replied, "And how right you'd be!"

Please help this man. Sit down and write four letters. Two to your U.S. senators, one to President Jimmy Carter. Ask them to put pressure on the Soviet Union to release Kuznetsov. The fourth, address to: Anatoliy F. Dobrynin, 1125 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036. He is the Soviet ambassador.

A few moments of your time and 52 cents worth of postage may save a brave man's life. Public pressure in these cases is like adding weights to a scale. Your letter may be the one that tips the balance.

The man is drowning. Will you just watch or will you reach out with your hand? Now that you know, your conscience can never escape the consequences of your decision.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Was N.J. politician's trial fair?

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — U.S. marshals are supposed to safeguard juries from outside influences that might interfere with a defendant's constitutional right to a fair trial.

But shocking, secret evidence has been developed that several federal marshals seriously compromised the jurors who returned a guilty verdict against a leading New Jersey political figure. The incident raises questions about the conduct of U.S. marshals in other courts.

The secret evidence has been laid before federal Judge Lawrence Whipple in his chambers. He has issued stern orders to everyone involved in the scandal not to talk to the press. We have been able, nevertheless, to dig out the details.

The story grew out of the 1974 conviction of New Jersey's former Republican Party leader, Nelson Gross, for tax fraud. He was sentenced to two years in prison and was paroled after five months.

But last February the marshal who had been assigned to oversee the sequestered Gross jury, Leon Harvey Stacey, told the FBI that he and other marshals had romanced some of the jurors during the trial.

Naming jurors who had participated in sex parties with the marshals, he alleged in an affidavit that they "did not have Nelson Gross on their minds during their deliberations and could not have cared less about his guilt or innocence or the instructions of the judge."

Stacey confessed that he had applied "subtle and indirect" persuasion on one juror "to convince her that the government represented the good guys." He indicated it was the practice, or "office motto" as he put it, of the marshals to use their subtle influence to help the government win cases.

In the Gross case, Stacey related how he and another marshal had worked on two female jurors. "Both admired our guns, badges and all the paraphernalia of our positions and authority," he attested. "It was easy for me to persuade (her) that Nelson Gross, as a politician, would receive merely a slap-on-the-wrist treatment if he were found guilty."

Stacey also took advantage of the Watergate atmosphere. "We all knew," he said, "Nelson Gross was part of the Nixon administration. It was therefore easy for me to ellude to a general disenchantment with politicians. In other words, as part of the romancing of the juror, my reference to politicians was always in a negative, screw-them attitude."

Stacey confessed that he wound up having sexual relations with the juror for the reason simply of wanting to score and make out with her."

He has expanded upon his affidavit during five days of closed hearings before Judge Whipple. Corroborative evidence has also been introduced, including allegations that still another marshal developed a close relationship with another juror. This marshal allegedly took the juror with him on a later trip to transport some prisoners and, incredibly, arranged for her to be placed on the government payroll temporarily as his assistant.

U.S. Attorney Robert DelTufo, who is handling the case for the government, refused to comment on the case because of the judge's orders. But he referred to a statement he had made in open court, referring to the Stacey affidavit as "replete with hearsay and innuendo."

The acting chief U.S. marshal for New Jersey, Edward R. Scheu, acknowledged that three marshals assigned to the Gross jury have been suspended with pay pending the outcome of the investigation. He refused any other comment.

Judge Whipple refused to explain to our associate Gary Cohn why he had closed the hearings and ordered the participants not to talk to the press. What is this, an inquisition?" he snorted. "I've made a court order, and it stands."

VITAMIN PROBE: The National Cancer Institute, which has failed to examine hundreds of cancer-causing substances, curiously is now focusing its attention on vitamin C.

The institute has no reason to believe that the popular vitamin causes cancer. There is not the slightest preliminary evidence that it is hazardous. Nevertheless, the cancer institute is planning to spend $300,000 on long-term animal studies to test vitamin C.

"There is such a massive public exposure to vitamin C that we decided to test it," said a spokesman for the institute. "It doesn't mean it's suspected of being a carcinogen. We just want to see if it is or not."

Ironically, there is considerable evidence to suggest that vitamin C in tablets, orange juice and other foods may actually help prevent cancer. Nobel Laureate Dr. Linus Pauling has asked the institute five times for a mere $50,000 to test this theory.

Pauling pointed to studies in which 100 advanced cancer patients treated with vitamin C lived four times as long as those who didn't get the vitamin. Almost all the vitamin C patients improved to some degree.

The institute approved Pauling's grant proposal in 1975, but assigned it such a low priority that it never received funding.

Pauling told us that the institute does a good job of developing a known treatment, but they don't know how to make discoveries. They're too cautious. They don't want to take the chance."

BIBLE VERSE

Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner. — Pro. 13:6.

Mark Russell says

By now you know that John Wayne has been made an honorary commodore in the Panamanian Navy.

He must be mellowing, having come out in favor of giving back the Panama Canal. This is a severe wound to Ronald Reagan, whose response was, "Et tu, Duke?"

That's quite a switch for the old cowboy. In his next movie he'll probably play an Indian.

John Wayne looked into the mirror and said, "Mirror, mirror, on the wall, who's the toughest hawk of all?" And the mirror answered, "Would you believe Robert Dole?"

INSIDE REPORT:

Deletion of six little words triggers doubt, fear

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The deletion of six little words from the official testimony given to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last July by William F. Schaufele Jr. has triggered doubt and fear in the government of Greek Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis over U.S. intentions in the Aegean Sea, an explosive hotbed in the crisis between Greece and Turkey.

This unreported event must be perceived in the light of a new phase-out of World Bank aid and a cutback of grant military aid for Greece. Both of these are viewed by the strong pro-Greek congressional lobby as pressure on Greece to show flexibility in its dangerous Aegean Sea dispute with Turkey over control of the continental shelf and air space over the sea.

What deeply disturbs Greece's powerful allies here is the overall political impact on Caramanlis, severely weakened in last November's election, and on President Carter's uphill fight to restore the integrity and strength of NATO's southern flank.

It was on July 12 that Schaufele was questioned on his appointment as ambassador to Greece. Until now, the withdrawal of Schaufele's name for that post has been attributed to Greek anger over his use of the phrase "unusual, I must admit, arrangements" governing Greece's sovereignty over Aegean Sea islands almost touching the coast of Turkey.

Evans

Novak

In fact, however, Schaufele (since named ambassador to Poland) was ruled unacceptable by the Caramanlis government not by those words. What triggered Caramanlis's wrath was deletion of the last six words in the following State Department "correction" of Schaufele's testimony on ownership of the Aegean islands:

"This ownership is based on longstanding international agreements which the United States fully supports."

Shortly after that correction for the official record had been submitted to the Foreign Relations Committee, the State Department ordered the very same words deleted, a fact discovered by Elias Demetracopoulos and quickly transmitted to Athens. Demetracopoulos is a Greek expatriate and former Athens newspaperman now living in Washington. He is best known for his relentless opposition to the former Greek military dictatorship.

U.S. officials vehemently deny any U.S. intention or long-range consideration of any sort for reopening the 1923 Lausanne Treaty, which gave Greece ownership of the controversial offshore islands. Indeed, not even Turkey has questioned the treaty.

But the result of the deletion of that phrase — "which the United States fully supports" — caused anguish in Athens, raising the obvious question of why the phrase was struck unless there is at least some future intention of tampering with the treaty.

That a government led by as sophisticated a prime minister as Caramanlis should be traumatized by what may conceivably have been no more than middle-level bureaucratic stupidity at the State Department shows the extreme delicacy of the Greek-Turkish dispute — and the overwhelming influence on it of U.S. policy.

Thus, within days of the unannounced correction, top-level conversations were taking place within the Greek government on the "extremely dangerous" implications of any future change in the Lausanne Treaty. The chamber of horrors exposed by these conversations was what really persuaded Caramanlis to refuse to accept Schaufele as ambassador (an inalienable right of any government).

Starting with the horror of Turkish pressure on the offshore islands, these include long-standing Bulgarian demands for an outlet of its own to the Aegean Sea across a narrow strip of territory now held by Turkey. Any juridical change in the Aegean Sea would automatically open up this demand, with the Soviet Union standing to gain a Warsaw Pact outlet to the Mediterranean, bypassing the Dardanelles.

To Carter administration diplomats, Greek preoccupation with such future hobgoblins may be patently ridiculous, but Caramanlis believes the hobgoblins could materialize. On Aug. 19, 1976, then-Prime Minister Demirel of Turkey referred to the disputed islands this way: "They are not Greek islands. Do not call them this way. You should say Aegean islands."

Caramanlis immediately accused Demirel of "demagogic and contradictory statements." The Greek prime minister's private reaction to the deletion of those six little words by the State Department is not very different.

Cooperation assured

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury probing the recent business activities of convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes will get full cooperation from the state attorney general's office, says Attorney General John Hill.

"In the course of our civil investigation, we've obtained information considered pertinent to the grand jury's probe. Our office will be cooperating in every possible way to assist the grand jury with its work," Hill said Thursday.

Hill's staff, which has conducted a 10-month probe into fraud allegations against Estes, received a subpoena late Wednesday asking that it turn over its documents and information to the grand jury.

The grand jury met Jan. 10-11 in Abilene, where Estes now lives, and will reconvene Feb. 27 in Wichita Falls.

Estes was convicted in 1963 in a multimillion dollar fraud case and sentenced to 15 years in prison. Estes, paroled in 1971 after serving six years of his sentence, had secured millions of dollars in loans with nonexistent fertilizer tanks as collateral.

Under terms of his parole, Estes is barred from self-employment or engaging in any promotional business activities.

The only public action taken as a result of the attorney general's probe was a temporary injunction obtained about six months ago against former Estes associate Raymond K. Horton, involving the leasing of inoperable or allegedly non-existent oil field steam cleaners.

Hill's office filed a civil suit in Midland contending that at least three leasing companies, including Guardian Leasing and Polaris Leasing, were defrauded of $500,000.

J.H. Burkett, an Abilene used car dealer who was in Estes' Bible class at Highland Church of Christ, filed a $50,000 suit last June 24 against Estes and Sue Goolsby, a former secretary for Estes in Abilene.

In the suit, Burkett said he wrote two $25,000 checks to invest in Frenchman's Creek, Inc., a now-defunct Abilene electronics firm, and in Permian Petroleum, the firm where Estes says he works as a parttime janitor and truck dispatcher.

Estes promised him a good return on his money within a year, Burkett said in the suit, filed in the same federal court in which the grand jury is now convened. Interest on the $50,000 investment was due May 27, 1977, but when he asked Estes about it, Burkett said, Estes denied any knowledge of the money and refused to pay the interest or repay the $50,000.

Ms. Goolsby appeared before the grand jury last month, it was reported Thursday. She has admitted signing a letter of guaranty for the $50,000 promissory note, backing up Burkett's investment with the money of Billy D. Pyron, a Tyler millionaire.

The federal and state investigations began almost a year ago, when Don Trull, a former business associate, signed an affidavit charging that Estes secretly controlled 17 companies through silent trust agreements.

First inflation measure due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government economists are hoping that inflation is under control at the start of 1978 as they look at the year's first measure of rising prices.

That indication was due today with the release of figures reflecting prices that wholesalers received in January for products just before they reach the consumer.

The rise in prices paid at the wholesale level is an important indicator of inflation because it presages corresponding rises in retail prices a few months later.

The Labor Department was releasing an index of what it calls finished-good prices — what grocers pay for food or auto dealers pay for new cars before the products are sold to consumers.

The department is still publishing its monthly index of wholesale prices for all commodities, but is trying to phase it out. The index measures wholesale prices all the way from the farm or the mine to the marketplace, and economists say the index exaggerates inflation because it counts many increases more than once.

In its previous report, for December, the department said wholesale prices of finished goods rose 0.7 percent, nearly twice the November rise, mainly because of higher food prices. Food prices were up 1.5 percent in December, the biggest increase in seven months.

For all of 1977, wholesale prices of finished goods were up 6.6 percent, close to the 6.8 percent increase in consumer prices for the year.

The Carter administration is hoping the inflation rate for 1978 will not exceed that 6.8 percent.

The administration also wants to stimulate economic activity with a tax cut, but several members of Congress said at a hearing Thursday that much of its impact will be cancelled by higher Social Security taxes.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal testified that Congress and the administration may have to re-evaluate the Social Security increases in coming years because they hit middle income families particularly hard.

"The entire issue of Social Security and its financing requires another look," he said.

Blumenthal also defended the administration's voluntary anti-inflation program, which some members of Congress' Joint Economic Committee said was too weak.

Blumentahl said no one wants wage or price controls, and pressure tactics have failed in the past.

"If labor and management in this economy are actively opposing you, you haven't got it," he said.

New judgeships not 'hatched'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen isn't one to count his chickens — or his judges — before they hatch.

When the House voted 319 to 80 on Tuesday to create 145 additional federal judgeships, Texas was earmarked for nine more U.S. district court judges. The Senate version calls for 148 judges—10 for Texas — and the matter will now be bounced back to the Senate for reconsideration. The Senate can either accept the House version or send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee. Texas now has 12 federal judges.

With Congress agreeing the need exists to create new judicial posts, Bentsen is placed in an enviable position.

The Texas Democrat will recommend persons to the president to fill the positions created in Texas. In the past, the nomination from a state's senior senator, or, in the case of Bentsen, the state's senator aligned with the administration, has received rubber-stamp approval.

Federal judges are appointed by the president, pending Senate approval, and serve for life. The current annual pay for a federal judge is $58,000.

The House bill did express "the strong desire" of Congress to "move toward an established, affirmative system of merit selection of federal judges" and called attention to the lack of qualified "women, blacks, Hispanics and other minority invidiuals" currently serving on the federal bench.

The House bill calls for the appointment of four judges in Texas' northern district, three in the southern district and one each in both the eastern and western judicial districts.

Bentsen's office said recently that the senator has "received a number of inquiries concerning federal judgeships but until legislation has concluded, the senator has no comment on the persons that have shown interest or will he participate in speculation as to who may receive a nomination."

Texas farmers reject farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas farmers plowed into the government's "Prophets of Doom" during the concluding session of hearings this week before the House Agriculture Committee.

Jerome Friemel of Hereford said Thursday that Congress spent "much energy and research in the creation of the 1977 Farm Bill," but the legislation has been rejected by America's farmers.

"It could be time to question the sources of information on the farm problem and its possible solutions," the West Texas grain farmer added. "Many of your high-ranking advisers and economists seem to offer no solutions—they are only Prophets of Gloom—who believe that there is absolutely no solution to the problems of the family farmer.

"It may well be time to seek solutions from other sources, new minds that have a positive attitude toward the problem and really believe that there is a solution."

The cure-all, according to farmers, bankers, implement dealers and other agribusinessmen, is 100 percent parity, the prime demand of the American Agriculture Movement which sparked the committee hearings following more than a month of rallies and lobbying on Capitol Hill.

The hearings will resume Tuesday.

"Many in the administration presently in power in Washington seem to have dificulty with the term parity," said Friemel. "They treat it as though it is a dirty word... parity is the quality or condition of being equal or equivalent... so we are, in reality, speaking of equality; equality for the producers of food and fiber in the United States."

The Agriculture Department estimates farmers are receiving an average of 65 percent parity for their crops.

Like most of their counterparts from other states, Texans came to the committee hearings armed with statistics showing the built-in loss to farmers under the current price structure.

Lazbuddie farmer, Jerry Don Glover, testified that his costs per acre in 1977 totaled $126.28 compared to a maximum income per acre of $112.50.

"I will lose less money by destroying the wheat than I will by producing it," he said. "I believe this will be the rule rather than the exception in my area. When I consider my loss in 1977 and my locked-in loss of 1978, under our tax structure, there is no way to legally repay such a deficit."

Testifying in a room crowded with more than 100 farmers, Hart grain dealer-farmer DeWayne Brown noted, "I usually get frightened and scared when I talk to a group such as this, but today I share the same feelings the people sitting behind me have—fright and fear of the American farmer going broke."

A four-man panel of Texas cotton producers voiced similar sentiments.

"We must have a workable farm program in the near future," said Seagraves' Tommy Lacy. "The continuous disastrous approach that we are now following is only digging the farmers' hole deeper and deeper."

He also gave the committee a list of businesses in Seagraves with comments on the state of the town's economy. "Gross sales down 63 percent," said Condit Implement. "Slow, ready to close," accompanied Seagraves Floral.

Stan Shockley, a 23-year-old cotton farmer from Ropesville, testified that the young farmer who doesn't own his land is bolting headlong into bankruptcy.

Young mother turned to crime for 'thrills'

HOUSTON (AP) — Sylvia Jean Brown tired of tending house and raising children. Looking for something to enrich her life, she chose a .38-caliber pistol, a .45-caliber automatic, a sawed-off shotgun and five years of crime.

The 5-foot, 110-pound Mrs. Brown was caught and sentenced to 25 years in prison for seven armed robberies, two forgeries and a burglary.

"I don't really know exactly what happened," she said in a recent interview. "There was always something about me which called for an independent life. I had lost my individuality.

"I was trying to be so many different people and I wasn't myself. I said to myself, here I am 30 years old, and I've never done anything or been anywhere."

Prosecutors called the petite redhead, now 35, "a regular Ma Barker," a desperado of the 1930s.

"If I had lived in her time, life would have been gorgeous," she said, and pointed out she would not have needed a Pretty Boy Floyd or Clyde Barrow to help her.

"The thing that makes me mad," she said, "is when police act like I couldn't do it all by myself without some man along.

"My femininity is the element of surprise. You should see the look on their faces when I pull a gun and tell them what I want. My life's dream has been to have lived in the 1920s or the 1800s. I can imagine being an outlaw then. Women then were always in the background."

Mrs. Brown said it began when she moved from Huntsville to Houston in 1973 and decided her children "are going to have what I want them to have."

She stole a car and sold it. As well as the money, the theft gave her "a complete, natural high, a feeling of knowing I could do it. It was power."

A few months later, she said she left the children with her former husband and took off with an ex-convict named Erik, stealing cars, duping a salesman out of a mobile home, embezzling, robbing and dealing in drugs. A hostage was taken in Arizona.

She said she was back in Houston for a bank robbery when she was arrested while visiting her children. Extradited to Arizona, she pleaded guilty to kidnapping and served some time, then "hit the streets again in '75," she said.

Mrs. Brown was arrested last August by Bryan police while driving a stolen car. Officers found the three weapons in the auto, and an investigation led to her prison sentence.

"It's too bad there is no legal way people can live like this," she said. "It's strictly the freedom and the type of excitement this life can afford."

Mrs. Brown said she has no regrets other than the suffering of her family.

"I know I have a conscience because I regret my loved ones having gone through this," she said. "They suffered more than me, but I was just making a living."

AAM wary of rally turn-out in Valley

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Striking farmers, embarrassed in the past when their rallies drew far smaller crowds than predicted, were making wary forecasts as plans were made for today's Rio Grande Valley rally.

Fred Lundgren, a member of the Austin branch of the American Agriculture Movement, Thursday confidently predicted a "bunch of people" would attend the football stadium gathering.

Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill, seeking support for his gubernatorial race, was scheduled to speak at the rally.

The farmers admitted the Valley is an area of weak support for the nationwide strike. Movement leaders have spent the week meeting with area farmers at community meetings. Lundgren said the speakers have been asking local farmers to cut their crops by 50 percent.

"We would create our own farm program. We would get parity and say the hell with what the government does," he said.

Cocaine traffic 'unstoppable'

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Cocaine smuggling into the United States is unstoppable, a congressional committee has concluded after a visit to cocaine-producing South American nations.

According to the House Select Committee on Narcotics:

—Cocaine's tremendous profits permit effective corruption of police, prosecutors, judges and other government officials in the major producing nations of Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia.

—Cultivation of coca plants, from whose leaves cocaine is processed, is a major part of the nations' peasant economy and not easily replaced.

—U.S. law enforcement is too small to deal with the huge amounts and large numbers of persons involved in cocaine smuggling.

The committee, which has just issued a report on its late-summer inspection trip to the four major producing nations plus Brazil and Chile, makes these recommendations for escalating the fight:

—Increase financial support to the producing nations to help peasants develop another cash crop, which should not be too difficult because the farmers receive very little for the coca leaves that have such high value to smugglers and distributors.

—Pass laws designed to make it more difficult for U.S. citizens to shift large amounts of money in and out of the U.S. without government notice.

—Increase public education of the harmful effects of cocaine in an effort to shrink the U.S. market.

However, the committee report concludes that even these measures may be ineffective against an illegal international business that rivals huge corporations for profits and sophistication.

"Compounding the problem of cocaine abuse in our own society in recent months," said committee chairman Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., "is the mounting of considerable internal political pressure within certain South American countries to legalize the exportation of cocaine."

Driving teachers face death 'thousand different ways'

By PAUL COUR
Copley News Service

Bob Newhart's comedy record, "The Driving Instructor," poked fun at women drivers.

Newhart was the driving instructor teaching a woman to drive.

"How fast were you going when your first instructor, Mr. Adams, jumped out of the car?" Newhart asked his pupil.

"... Seventy-five miles an hour. ... And you were backing out of the driveway. ..."

Newhart may have had the driver's license examiner in mind, too, when he saluted the men "who face death in a thousand different ways every day."

While their lives may not be as eventful as the driving instructors — after all, they get the pupil when he's supposedly ready to graduate — some of the darndest things happen to the men and women who decide if you're going to be licensed to drive a car.

Frank Quattlebaum is a driver's license examiner at one of the busiest offices in California — downtown Los Angeles — and is the first to tell you that the life can be harrowing.

"There's statistics to support the fact that examiners often wind up with hypertension and nerve problems," Quattlebaum said. "An examiner will average 15 to 20 drivers a day and each driving test takes 15 to 20 minutes."

Quattlebaum has been on the job for two and one-half years and has had some funny experiences. His sense of humor helps him get through the day.

"The biggest problem most applicants have is in turnabout, backing up and parking," he said. "I remember one man I told to back up, he put the car in reverse and gunned it. He didn't stop until he had backed onto some railroad tracks where we stalled. It was a little hairy."

The written test throws some people.

"One time, we had a man come in to get a license," Quattlebaum recalled. "We told him to go to window No. 1 and get a written test sheet and to fill it out in the examining area.

"We forgot about him. About five hours later, he was still standing taking the test.

"He had gone back to every window and taken every test sheet we had. He explained, 'I thought I had to take ALL the tests before I could get a license.'"

Quattlebaum said most people are uptight when they take the driving test.

"You'll tell them to start the car and instead they'll often turn on the lights, radio or turn signals."

Approximately 40 percent of the applicants fail their first driving test, he said. "By the second time, they usually pass because we've told them what they have to improve on."

One license examiner tells of the prospective driver who put out his arm signaling left on a busy downtown street and then turned right. "We just missed wiping out another car," he said.

Another candidate was passing the test with flying colors until he got to the parking.

"Oh, I didn't know I had to learn to park, too," he told the examiner. "I figured the parking lot attendant could do that."

One of the most embarrassed driving applicants had to be the woman who jumped the curb and wound up on a newly seeded lawn.

To compound the problem, the sprinklers went on, giving the occupants of the car the feeling of being in a car wash.

Then there's the true story of the male applicant who wanted to bring his wife along on the test drive, explaining, "She's very helpful. She sees things that I don't."

Examiners go through a four-week training course before they go out in the field. They train in the classroom and field office before going along for what sometimes is the ride of their life.

While working in the office, an examiner received a phone call one day that tops them all.

The caller who said he'd been driving for 40 years and had just moved to California wanted to know if it's true he had to take some kind of test to get a license to drive.

When advised he did, the caller retorted, "I'm not going to take any dad-blamed test, I can drive as good as anybody," and hung up.

Pet collie saves lives of family

FLORENCE, Texas (AP) — A gallant pet collie gave its life in searing flames and smothering smoke to save a sleeping Central Texas family from the blaze gutting their home, officials say.

Mary Fenoglio told fire officials that she and her two teenage children were asleep about 12:30 a.m. Thursday when the dog began barking to warn her of the fire on the stairs of the two-story home.

"The dog was penned up in a washroom behind a small wooden gate," said Florence Volunteer Fire Chief Jerry Smith. "It jumped the gate and ran into the den where Mrs. Fenoglio was sleeping and started barking."

Mrs. Fenoglio told officials the flames were too intense on the stairs and blocked her from going upstairs where Beth, 16, and John, 13, were sleeping.

But she said the dog leaped up the stairs through the flames and smoke to alert the youths, who leaped to safety from the windows of their bedrooms.

The collie, however, was trapped and died in the blaze, said officials. The name of the dog was not immediately available.

Mrs. Fenoglio, whose husband, John, was in Houston on a business trip, suffered minor burns and her children were treated and released for minor smoke inhalation.

The $75,000 rock and wood home about nine miles from this small town was totally destroyed.

Smith said the fashionable, new home was totally engulfed in flames when the Florence Volunteer Fire Department arrived.

Authorities theorized the fire began in the central heating system.

Privacy act stalls loan collection

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, concerned about possible violations of the federal privacy act, is delaying its plan to turn $430 million in student loan defaults over to private bill collectors.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare had invited bids on the first collection contract and was about to select a private collector when Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. sent word to postpone any decision, administration sources said.

Undersecretary Hale Champion, when asked about the delay, said some questions had been raised about privacy act limitations in turning over certain information on the students to private agencies.

But he expressed confidence the questions would be resolved and that the department would go ahead with the plan "as part of an organized approach to collecting the debts that are outstanding."

Califano told a congressional education hearing on Thursday that former students have defaulted on $500 million in federally guaranteed education loans. He pledged a major effort to collect.

The secretary was testifying in support of President Carter's proposal to increase aid to college students, particularly those from middle-class families, by $1.46 billion for the 1979-1980 school year. The plan would add nearly $300 million to the guaranteed student loan program, where the bulk of defaults have occurred.

Califano blamed much of the problem on "unbelievably inadequate" record keeping during the previous administration and said he wouldn't have recommended an increase in the loan program without changes in the way it is managed.

It was at least the fourth time since last fall the secretary has promised to get tough with loan defaulters.

In September, his new director of student financial assistance, Leo Kornfeld, announced the plan to give the defaulters one last chance to pay up and then turn their cases over to private bill collectors.

He told an interviewer at the time the privacy questions had been worked out, but they apparently have cropped up again under more detailed review of the issue.

Last November, Califano issued a statement promising "to pursue those students who are in default and those schools that are defrauding the student loan program with all the resources at our command."

An analysis of defaults in the 10-year-old program showed that most of the debtors weren't ungrateful college graduates. Typically, they were high school dropouts or graduates who had enrolled in vocational school to learn a specific job.

Trade school 'stigma' no longer as pronounced

DALLAS (AP) — The "dirty fingernails" stigma attached to trade schools remains only in the minds of the college-oriented, college-educated student counselors, according to the head of a national trade schools organization.

"Numerous studies point to the fact that it is becoming evident that young persons today are seeing the college-education myth for what it is," said Jack Tolbert, president of the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools.

"I think the stigma is there, but it's only in the counselors' minds who want to be able to show 99 percent of their students chose to go to college."

Tolbert, in town for a two-day vocational instructors' seminar starting today, quoted the Bureau of Labor Statistics as saying 80 percent of the nation's jobs through 1985 will require special vocational training, but only 20 percent will require college educations.

"I think the federal government is aware that we need trade-oriented counselors in our schools. And some states are aware of it as well," he said. "I think it's going to happen.

"Employers throughout the country are saying 'We don't need a four-year liberal arts major. We need a good computer technician, or we need a good mechanic or a good bricklayer.'"

As evidence of the need for vocational training, Tolbert referred to President Carter's recent submission to Congress of a $2.1 billion increase in student financial aide. However, instead of giving the funds to institutions, Tolbert said the money should be given to the student who could then make his own choice — trade schools or college.

"In my travels around the country, I have found that the kid, the student, is really the leader, not the institutions themselves" he said. "We need more mechanisms that would help the students financially, but would allow them to decide their own course of education."

The NATTS currently operates 480 trade and vocational schools nationwide where students are taught everything from auto mechanics, and computer repair to "gaming," the art of being a good poker dealer.

Odessa nursing home denied recertification

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The Texas Department of Health Thursday denied an application for certification filed by Western Hills Manor, an Odessa nursing home that was the target of a December district attorney's investigation into alleged patient abuse.

The department's action leaves the facility ineligible to receive state and federal Medicaid money for nursing services to eligible patients.

The home recently changed ownership, but on recent visits, department inspectors apparently found uncorrected deficiencies "in record keeping and patient care," a brief department report indicated.

In other action, the department recertified Leisure Lodge of Midland, after that facility corrected operational deficiencies, the report states. Medicaid payments to that home will now resume.

Outlook better on DES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary results from a major study of young women whose mothers took the synthetic hormone DES indicate the daughters may face less of a risk of early genital cancer than previously believed.

The federally sponsored study found no cancers after examining about 1,500 daughters of women who took DES while pregnant, the project coordinator disclosed Thursday.

However, many of the young women had abnormalties in the cells lining the vagina, and it is unknown if this could indicate a greater risk of cancer later in life, he said.

Dr. Leonard T. Kurland of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., disclosed the first findings at a meeting in Washington of the advisory committee of the National Cancer Institute's Division of Cancer Control and Rehabilitation.

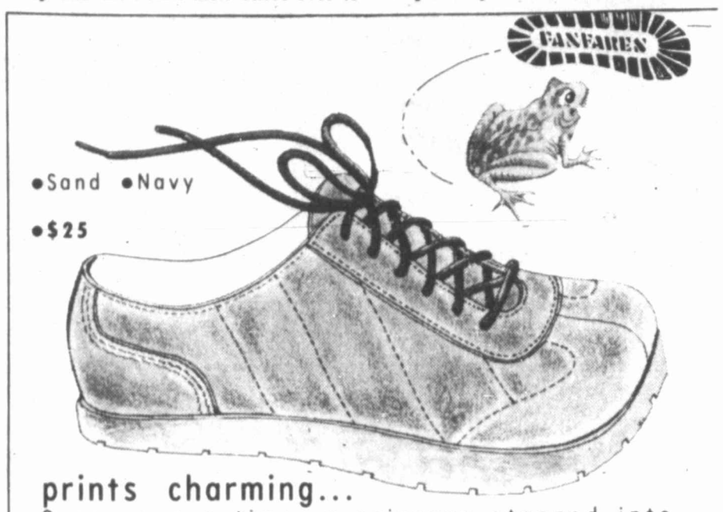

Kurland, head of the institution's department of medical statistics and epidemiology, cautioned that the unpublished findings are preliminary and that more work has to be done before drawing final conclusions.

"But we think the data help put the problem into perspective and may help ease some of the concern," Kurland said in an interview. "We have not found a single cancer in this eligible group, indicating that the prevalence is rare."

The study, being conducted at four major medical centers, is the most extensive ever undertaken into the effects of DES — which stands for Diethylstilbestrol — on the offspring of women who took the drug to ease problem pregnancies.

Some previous reports indicated that genital cancers would be more common in daughters exposed to DES than found in the new study. Kurland attributed the differences to the smaller size of previous study groups, which can exaggerate statistics, and the care the new study took to look at cases representing an accurate cross-section of the women affected.

In the 1940s and 1950s, it was common for many doctors to give DES to pregnant women who had difficulty carrying a baby to full term.

Chaps sock it to OC with 94-85 loop upset

BY TED BATTLES

It has taken three years, but the Midland and Odessa college basketball rivalry came of age Thursday before a crowd that came as close to capacity as they've ever had in the MC gym and one that easily ranked as the most argumentive debaters ever to see a game in the still-young and innocent arena.

And the Chaparral fans were rewarded with a 94-85 victory over the Western Junior College Conference leaders.

Understandably, first-year coach Jerry Stone was delighted by the upset that squared the season's series league win apiece.

"I'M NOT taking anything away from Odessa. They are a good team," Stone said, "but we never felt we played a good game against Odessa College this season and tonight the team went out on the floor feeling we were going to play like we could."

The result was probably the Chaps' finest effort of the season as they raised their WJCC record to 5-9 which Stone feels still keeps MC in the running for a regional tournament playoff berth. "I know we are down in the standings, but some of those teams ahead of us are only one or two wins up and we still have a chance. If we finish fifth, there would be a playoff with the fourth place team in the eastern conference."

That would just about mean finishing 9-9, but Stone believes the way the team played Thursday, that's not impossible.

THE LAST time the teams met, OC won 96-87, so what was the difference this time?

"We have had a lot of little problems throughout the year...new coach, friction with the coach and some of the players, and that injury to Cullen (Mayfield, the 5-9 point guard who had missed more than a month of conference play with a thigh injury.)

"In the last three or four games we've corrected that. We're a good team and we showed it tonight," Stone said.

"This was just a great team effort."

STONE CREDITED the return of Mayfield and the inside-post play of Clifford Taylor and Ricky Hudgins with much of the turnaround. Statistically, there could be no argument. In the league game at OC, the two big guys played like a couple of NFL defensive tackles, 12 points and two rebounds between them.

Thursday, they were poetry in motion. Hudgins scored 27 points, yanked down 17 rebounds and Taylor, playing less time, scored 16 points and had five rebounds.

That enabled he Chaps to monopolize the boards against the Wranglers who had four players with a high of four rebounds.

Rebs, Pack pin season on tonight's games

Coach Don Humphrey's Midland Bulldogs play their biggest game of the season tonight when they travel to Abilene to take on the talented Cooper Cougars in a District 5-4A basketball showdown.

While Midland and Cooper are going at each other, the Midland Lee Rebels and Abilene Eagles meet in a game that is just as important in determining the second half champion.

The Bulldogs and Cougars are 5-0 in the league race while the Rebels and Eagles stand one step behind with 4-1 readings.

Abilene has already won the first half of the race with a 7-0 mark, so Coach James Boynton's Warbirds are in good shape no matter what happens in the next two games as far as being in either the 5-4A playoff game or the Class AAAA playoffs.

MIDLAND KNOCKED off Abilene, 76-70, in the Tall City last week to help throw the second half race up for grabs between the two Midland and Abilene powers.

The Rebels would be in great shape if they should topple Abilene and Midland beat Cooper, thus setting up the Lee-Midland battle Tuesday in the MHS Gymnasium in another showdown battle.

And don't forget that Abilene and Cooper still have to play on Tuesday, so the race is far from being over.

Of course, should Midland beat Cooper and Lee, it would win the second half outright and face Abilene in a one-game playoff to see who faces L. D. Bell in the bi-district game, but the Bulldogs and Rebels could still wind up tied for the title and would meet in a one-game playoff for another shot at Abilene.

Should Abilene wind up in a tie with anybody, the Eagles would advance into the bi-district tilt without a 5-4A playoff game.

TIP-OFF TONIGHT for the two big shootouts is 8 'O clock in the Lee and Cooper Gymnasiums.

Abilene roars into Midland with a 29-4 record in seeking its 30th win of the year while Lee is 21-9 and has been playing well since that big 71-46 loss to Cooper in Abilene.

Boynton pulled a cute stunt on Wednesday stating that he didn't want to use the officials originally chosen for tonight's game with the Rebels in the Lee Gymnasium. This being the case, Athletic Director Sam Cox was forced to call the UIL and get some new officials.

It seems that a visiting coach can change his mind anywhere up to 24 hours before a game and the home team must get new officials.

Lee Coach Paul Stueckler, in his 23 years of coaching, has never gone to these extremes, according to Cox. If Lee should beat Abilene, it won't matter who wins the Cooper-Abilene game, because that would give the Eagles two losses in the second half.

LEE MOST likely will go with Mike Oestmann, 6-5 senior; Dave

Lee, Midland sweep Abilene

The Midland and Lee girls basketball teams both won Thursday night, Midland topping Abilene Cooper, 35-28 and Lee taking an exciting double overtime win from Abilene, 50-48, to set the stage for Monday's big faceoff between the two Tall City teams, strict 5-4A record to 6-0, while the Pack is now 5-1. Thus, the situation looks like this going into Monday's contest:

— Should Lee beat Midland, the Rebels would win the league title outright. They tied for the first half title with Midland, and by winning the second half crown, they would represent the district in the playoffs.

— Should Midland beat Lee, the two Tall City teams would tie for the second half title and a playoff game would decide the 5-4A and the district representative.

Debra Kittle was the hero in the Lee's exciting win over Abilene Thursday night in the Key City, as she came off the bench to score two clutch baskets in the second overtime victory and vault the Rebels to their two-point victory. Kittle finished the game with 10 points.

Schilla McCallister led Coach Shirley Stevenson's club in scoring with 18 points.

The score was tied 42-42 at the end of regulation, and 46-46 after the first extra period before Kittle pulled it out.

The Rebels' board play was exceptional in the win, as Lisha Watkins and Carla Goodley both hauled in eight rebounds apiece.

In the junior varsity contest, Lee won 50-25. Tanya Parrish had 20 points, 16 of them in the final quarter.

Midland had an easier time of it Thursday night on their home floor, as they battled back from an 8-2 first period deficit to win going away.

The Pack guards held Cooper scoreless in the third quarter, while the Midland scoring machine notched 11 points.

Beth Thomason and Karen Cook were the only Bulldogs in double figures, as Thomason threw in 13 and Cook 11.

In the preliminary contest, the Cooper JV's derailed Midland, 58-26.

In other 5-4A action Thursday night, San Angelo Central whipped Odessa Permian, 50-37.

Rangers eye title

GARDEN CITY — Greenwood's Rangers, winners of the first half, will play second-half winner Forsan for the district championship here at 7:30 p.m. today.

The Greenwood boys swept through the first half unbeaten and suffered their lone loss in the second half to Forsan.

Greenwood finished up its regular season schedule with a 50-34 win over Sterling City as Mark Swafford scored 17 and, and Rex Evans 13. Greenwood also won the girls game Tuesdas, 50-44, as Lavonda Pruitt pumped in 20 points.

Dedeaux immortalized

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Ordinarily, to get a baseball stadium named after you, you have to be (1) dead (2) famous or (3) rich. you have to be Connie Mack or have to have led the American League 10 years in batting or home runs, or pitched 40 career shutouts.

But one of the newest of baseball stadium in the country was named after a guy who went to bat a total of four times in two games in the big leagues and got one hit. He drove in a run with it, but nobody names ball fields for .250 hitters unless they were 30-game winners on the side. Also, he is very much alive.

Raoul (Rod) Dedeaux Field on the campus of the University of Southern California is the home field of one of the most important baseball franchises in history. As a minor league farm club, it makes the Newark Bears of the '30s look like a sandlot group.

THE OTHER day an alumni group played the varsity nine in a preseason game at Dedeaux Field, and 26 major league players were on the field. That's probably more than there have been at Anaheim Stadium since the beginning.

To give you an idea of things to come, the major leaguers lost the contest to the college boys, 4-3. As a matter of fact, most of the time it was tough to tell which was which.

The University of Southern California is ordinarily thought of as a football factory, but any baseball man can tell you that's a fallacy. SC turns out more left fielders than left halfbacks. It is not unusual to see the entire USC starting nine signed to major league contracts, sometimes after their freshman seasons. The reason for this remarkable state of affairs is the man who gets the ballpark named after him. Rod Dedeaux is a perpetually sunny Louisianan who can tell a good ballplayer from a mediocre one standing in the dark in two feet of water.

WHEN ROD Dedeaux came to USC, baseball was a backwater sport, very low in profile in the hierarchy of athletics on campus.

The trouble was, baseball was the only major sport in this country which had flourished at the pro-

Eagles see the light financially

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles, who sell out nearly every home game but still end up in the red, are finally on their way to solid financial footing, owner Leonard Tose's financial counselor says.

"Everything in the Eagles' financial picture is in good order, and the other NFL owners are delighted that the team's problems have been resolved," said Charles Sullivan, a member of the National Football League Management Council who represents Tose in loan negotiations.

Tose paid the interest on a $7.8 million short-term loan Thursday to a Detroit bank under an agreement allowing him to obtain long-term refinancing before paying off the principal.

According to Sullivan, the principal will not be due until the refinancing is completed. "By long term, we mean more than three years," Sullivan explained in a telephone interview from his New York office.

Clancy gives Spinks chance against champ

By DAVE BRADY
The Washington Post

Gil Clancy, a stand-up fellow who shills for no promoter, thinks Leon Spinks has a chance of beating Muhammad Ali in their heavyweight title fight next week.

The fight manager who dragged George Foreman back from his unsuccessful tilting at Ali's rope-a-dope defense and finishing punches said, "I really think Spinks is going to bang Ali around for seven or eight rounds ... punish him pretty good.

"Then Spinks will run out of gas and Ali will stop him along about the 11th round. The big factor is, Ali can take a tremendous punch or he would be in serious trouble.

"Spinks is no Rademacher," Clancy said, referring to Pete Rademacher, who took on Floyd Patterson with no professional experience. Spinks has had seven pro fights.

"Unlike Rademacher, Spinks is a swarmer who has no respect for Ali. He will go out and tag him. Some guys in the gyms say Spinks will get the decision.

"Patterson was not shot, like Ali is, when Floyd fought Rademacher.

"PATTERSON could still punch and move around fast (in 1957). But Ali is going through the motions now. He hasn't had a good fight since he stopped Joe Frazier in Manila.

"People forget that Spinks had 185 amateur fights. They are not like pro fights, of course, but some of the guys he went up against were better than some inexperienced pro fighters. Spinks was always going up against the best amateurs before he turned pro.

"You saw what a tough fight Earnie Shavers gave Ali (before Ali won a decision? Well, if Shavers fought Spinks, Leon would be an even bet to win. The guys in the gyms would bet Spinks.

"Spinks is an instinctive fighter; he is not going to out general Ali. He will take punches in the face; he will take and give. He will bust Ali up.

"ALI DOESN'T pet (punch hard) any more. He gets tired. Ali can't put three good minutes together anymore. If he does, he can't do it for two rounds in a row. He has to rest for a round.

"But Ali finds a way to win."

Spinks won the light-heavyweight gold medal in the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal. At 24, he is 205 pounds, 6-foot-1 1-2 and a 75-inch reach to 6-foot-3 Ali's 80-inch reach. Spinks figures to be outweighed by about 15 pounds in their bout Feb. 15 in Las Vegas.

He has won six of his seven professional bouts, five by knockouts. He was held to a draw by Scott LeDoux in a 10-rounder in Las Vegas in October. Ali, also a former Olympic light-heavy weight champion, has won 55 of 57 bouts, 37 by knockouts.

Spinks became an instant, if limited, celebrity by his exposure on the worldwide telecasts of the Olympic Games. His early pro bouts thus were insured of television ratings.

That may account for the lack of serious formal protests to his fighting Ali for the heavyweight title, though Bob Martin's "Sports Book" in Las Vegas thinks Ali will be so prohibitively a favorite that it will put up no odds on the bout.

That happened on the Patterson-Rademacher bout, too.

Hudgins, Taylor supply punch

he went on. "And, yes, I think the crowd had a lot to do with it. If the fans would see a game like this, they'd know what they are missing."

MC jumped in front early and led until OC tied it at 66 with 8:33 left in the game on Ed Williams' basket off an interception. The Wranglers had rallied from a 64-56 deficit, mostly on recoveries of loose balls and turnovers.

"THAT'S ONE reason I put in Ricky Murdock (6-3 freshman from Lubbock Coronado), he's very active and comes up with a lot of loose balls." Ricky also responded 11 points, all in the last half and seven of eight from the line.

Williams later snaked loose down the lane to give OC its first lead, 72-71, and Arnold McDowell's follow up shot off a misfire made it 74-73 after a Mayfield corner shot. That was the only time OC led.

Mayfield converted a pair of technicals on OC Coach Ron Mayberry to make it 75-74 with 4:55 left and 40 seconds later Hudgins spun inside and the Chaps just pulled away after that. Ron Jones and Mayfield each converted a brace of free throws. Jones added another and then Mayfield hit Hudgins under the hoop on a backdoor play and it was 84-75 with two minutes left and the large segment of OC fans began rushing for the exits.

JONES CONTRIBUTED 11 points and a couple of assists while the rusty Mayfield ad 12 points, 10 of 11 from the line, and four assists.

For OC, Arnold McDowell's 19 led the way as the former San Angelo star hit nine of 18 from the field. Billy Ray Ennis, whose 31 points destroyed MC last time, was held to 17.

However, Hudgins and Taylor were the ones. Taylor made seven of eight field shots while Hudgins was 12 of 15 and contributed three assists.

The loss still leaves OC with a share of first place at 11-4 with a 21-6 mark for the season. MC is 14-13.

Midland, Lee face tests

Stueckler, 6-3 senior; Nate Goudeau, 6-2 senior; Mike Richard, 5-11 senior and Joe Garner, 6-0 senior, against Abilene tonight with 6-1 junior Ernest Merritt ready to see plenty of action along with Mike McGaha, 6-4 junior, Tyler Alcorn, 5-10 junior and Bruce Crawford, 6-1 junior.

Abilene has a great one-two punch in 6-6 David Little and Cisco Smith, a 6-2 senior. Both have been averaging 20 points or better in 5-4A play. Joining Little and Smith in the Abilene lineup are Darren Edwards, 6-2 senior; Mark Pierce, 5-7 senior and Byron Roberts, a 6-2 senior.

Midland will start Milton Sanders, 6-4 junior; Walter Bryson, 5-10 junior; Charles Johnson, 6-3 ½ junior; Tim Lucas, a 6-2 senior and Kiffy Hickey, 6-3 senior. Roy Lee Jefferson, 6-1 junior along with Bill Fredrickson, 6-4 senior, will also see some action along with 5-11 sophomore Archie Booth.

COOPER, LIKE Abilene, has two prolific scorers in 6-7 sophomore Woody Martin and 6-3 senior Dennis Bradford. Terry Orr, 6-2 sophomore, has come into his own after scoring 20 points against Big Spring Tuesday. The rest of the lineup will include Bobby Miers, 6-0 senior and 6-4 senior Sam Houston, who is an all-around athlete for the Cougars.

Cooper takes a 27-4 mark into the game while Midland stands 20-10 on the year and has come on strongly in the second half of the race.

Junior varsity action starts at 6:15 p.m. at both sites with Radio Station KBAT doing the playby-play of the varsity game in Abilene, starting at 7:55 p.m.

Majors should have built Dedeaux Field

fessional level first. Red Grange, the Four Horsemen, the Big 10 and Harvard-Yale made football what it is. The pros came along later and cashed in on its ready-made auciences. Hank Luisetti, Bob Cousy and George Mikan made basketball.

Before Rod Dedeaux, the pros never looked on campuses for baseball players. When a collegian made the big leagues, it was headline news. When a Yaley made the Yankees, they wrote books about it.

Baseball maintained an expensive and bulky farm system for the care and training of big league prospects. The great state universities did the gratis for football and basketball.

The American and National leagues should have erected Dedearux field themselves out of gratitude for a man who found a way to find and train major league ballplayers at no expense to their management. Dedeaux Field will probably see almost as many Cy Young winners as the old Polo grounds.

IT'S NOT only in procurement and training that the big leagues owe Rod Dedeaux a debt, it's in philosophy, too. Rod Dedeaux was the original Tommy Lasorda. The clap on the back, the lively dugout, the one-of-the-boys attitude on the part of the coach, the let's-make-the-game-fun approach were all pioneered and found to be the way to go at SC long before the Dodgers did it. "You can't play this game unhappy," was the cheerful Dedeaux theory. "Thev (the Trojans) not only beat you, the laugh at you," a rival coach oncy complained. "They think everything's funny. And, when you're winning 10-1 every day, I guess it is."

Rod Dedeaux Field is as important to the major leagues as the kingdome. In fact, major league scouts are its most important - and numerous - customers. It should be as much a shrine to baseball as Yankee Stadium or Fenway Park. As Red Patterson once said, "When Tom Seaver went from the USC Trojans to the New York Mets, he probably felt like the first guy in history who was bing sent DOWN to the major leagues."

Watson, Palmer push leaders Hope Desert Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson says he's been having trouble with his swing, so he's made some changes, while Arnold Palmer has made a few adjustments in his putting.

The moves must have benefitted both players because they were among the leaders going into the third round of the 90- hole, $225,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic today.

However, the lead is held by unheralded Bill Rogers, now in his fourth year on the pro tour who shot a 67 Thursday to put him at 8-under-par 136.

Miller Barber and Watson, who shot a 68 Thursday, are 1 stroke behind Rogers. Barber had one of five 67s for the day.

Palmer, who had a 70, joined a group of seven who are 5-under at 139. The pack includes Lee Trevino, who had a 67.

HOWEVER, another group of seven lies at 138, only 2 strokes behind Rogers, led by Lon Hinkle and Danny Edwards, who had 67s on Thursday.

Gusting winds of 40 mph hampered some of the 128 pros who played the four courses used in the tourney. Luckily, the players escaped the rainstorm that hit downtown Palm Springs, some 20 miles away.

"I played probably as good a round as I've played on the tour," said Rogers, who has never won a tournament on the tour but won the Japan Open last year. "I hit my irons as solid as I could hit and got the ball close to the hole."

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Second-round scores Thursday in the 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Classic:

Bill Rogers	69-67—136	John Mahaffey	71-73—144
Tom Watson	69-68—137	Dave Evans	72-72—144

Penn State in market for coach

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State University, looking for an end to its 11-game basketball losing streak, is also looking for a new coach.

John Bach said Thursday he was resigning at the end of this season, which has already brought the Nittany Lions a school record of 17 defeats.

"I regret only that we did not win enough games for Penn State," said Bach, whose team plays Saturday at Navy.

Bach, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., came to Penn State in 1968 after 18 seasons as coach at his alma mater, Fordham, which he guided to two NCAA and five NIT tournaments.

Razorbacks survive furious Aggie press

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — It was like watching the rerun of an old movie in Thursday night's critical Southwest Conference basketball battle between second-ranked Arkansas and the Texas Aggies.

Arkansas fumbled away a 13-point lead at halftime last year then survived a Texas A&M rally for a 63-62 victory.

Arkansas watched a 13-point margin melt away under the pressure of a full-court press Thursday night but went to radar-accurate Ron Brewer in the final 12 seconds for an 80-79 victory.

"It's always been tough for us to win here," sighed Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, whose team is now 22-1 and 10-1 in SWC play, just a half-game behind the Texas Longhorns. "We had a 13-point halftime lead here last year, too. A&M made a great run at us."

Brewer, who scored 25 points and canned 10 of 16 field goal attempts made two free throws with 12 seconds to play to axe the Aggies, who play like the NBA All-Stars in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

The Aggie press forced Arkansas into 15 turnovers as Willie Foreman scored 20 of his 26 points in the second half.

"Arkansas still has the same weakness as last year," said A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "The way to beat them is to press for 40 minutes. We just can't do that. We pressed for 20 minutes in the second half and made up 12 points ...we just can't stop Brewer."

Brewer made his free throws while the pro-Aggie crowd of 6,997 roared and waved their jackets and arms.

Foreman and Joey Robinson had hit two key buckets to pull the Aggies within one point.

Grateful Cardinals give Coryell the ax

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A stalemate between Billy Bidwill, owner of the National Football League's St. Louis Cardinals, and Coach Don Coryell was ended today when Bidwell fired him.

Bidwill made the announcement in the club's offices at a news conference not attended by Coryell. Bidwell said the settlement was reached Thursday night.

"Don Coryell did many positive things for the St. Louis franchise. He is a winner and we are grateful for his help in making us one of the most exciting teams in the NFL the past few seasons.

"We had to reach an agreement, because we believe that the circumstances of the past two months would prevent Don from becoming an effective coach for us in 1978."

There was no immediate announcement on a successor to Coryell, 53, who directed the Cardinals to a 42-29-1 record in five seasons and to two Nationanl Conference East titles.

"I want to thank Mr. Bidwill for giving me the opportunity to coach pro football," Coryell said.

Palomino to fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — What's a 28-year-old college graduate like Carlos Palomino doing fighting professionally?

Very well.

"It's a business for me," said the World Boxing Council welterweight champion. "Any day I can get paid I'll fight."

His next payday comes Saturday, when he makes his fifth defense in 13 months by meeting Ryu Sorimachi of Japan.

The scheduled 15-rounder at the Hilton Hotel here will be televised live on the CBS Sports Spectacular, beginning at 4:30 p.m., EST.

NBA czar replies to court action

NEW YORK (AP) — National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien has replied to charges that he failed to recognize the severity of the Kermit Washington-Rudy Tomjanovich case by charging the Houston Rockets with making a difficult situation even worse.

O'Brien sent a sharply worded telegram Thursday to Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson, who had said that O'Brien's "unwillingness to assume a role of leadership in this matter creates a void of immeasurable dimensions."

Patterson also said that O'Brien's "failure to recognize the severity and magnitude of the problem" left the Rockets no alternative but to seek compensation in the courts.

However, O'Brien told the Rockets that "if there is any failure here, it lies in your mischaracterization of recent events, which only serves to exacerbate an inherently difficult situation."

Midland Wildcat Committee hosts reception for Santa Fe officials

Officers and directors of Santa Fe International Corp., one of the world's largest oil and gas drilling concerns, were guests of the Midland Wildcat Committee Thursday in the Petroleum Club of Midland.

The company, headed by Ed L. Shannon Jr., chairman of the board and president, held a board of directors meeting in Midland today.

Santa Fe International, with more than 9,500 employes, was founded as a domestic drilling company in Santa Fe Springs, Calif., in 1947 when it bought 11 rigs from Union Oil Co. of California.

By 1970, the company had 45 rigs, including 10 offshore units. All were on location outside the United States.

Last year, Santa Fe International purchased the A. W. Thompson, Inc., a Midland-headquartered drilling company, and "got back into the domestic onshore drilling business," Shannon said.

A. W. Thompson, headed by president Frank L. Thompson, continues to operate umder that name as Santa Fe's Mid-continent Division.

Santa Fe International, which operates in almost every foreign country where there is oil and gas exploration, both onshore and offshore, had revenues of approximately $600 million last year.

The company also is engaged in oil industry engineering and construction, a business it went into in 1968.

When Santa Fe purchased the Thompson organization in 1977 it added 11 rigs with the capability of drilling from 20,000 to 30,000 feet, to its operations. All 11 of the rigs are at work in the West Texas area. The Santa Fe organization now operates 71 rigs.

Shannon, the company's chief executive officer, became a member of the Santa Fe organization in 1953 after working several years for Union Oil of California. He became Santa Fe's chief executive in 1962.

Board members who were unable to make the reception and board meeting because of the blizzard conditions in the Northeast, were Robert M. Jenney, president of Jenney Oil, Chestnut Hill, Mass.; Roderick M. Hills, chairman of Peabody Coal, St. Louis, Mo., and Robert G. Stone Jr., chairman of West India Shipping, New York City.

Ominous gurgle signals start of nation's first crude gusher

By NICHOLAS C. CHRISS
The Los Angeles Times

BEAUMONT, Tex. — There was an ominous gurgle deep inside the earth around the oil rig. Mud began bubbling up from the drill hole. An oil worker scrambled down from his perch 40 feet up the wooden oil derrick where he had been guiding the drill stem into the earth.

Two other workers fled the rig in fright. All three were old hands at drilling oil, but they had never seen or heard anything quite like this — something strange was about to happen.

Suddenly, with a roar, six tons of four-inch pipe erupted from the earth and hurtled into the air, snapping off into sectios, then crashing to earth like giant metal toothpicks.

Just as suddenly, it became quiet. Was that all? They had put down their last piece of drill pipe. There was no money to drill further. Perhaps the cynics were right. There was no oil at Spindletop.

"What the hell are we going to do with the damned thing now?" Peck Byrd asked in frustration.

But wait! More peculiar gurgling. Again the upward torrent of mud. Then the whoosh of gas — hydrogen sulfide — a sure sign of oil and gas. And after that a blessed thick, steady stream of heavy green crude oil, gushing 200 feet into the air. The pent-up force of ages had broken loose.

The spectacular burst was the nation's first oil gusher, an epochal event that turned Spindletop hill into the cradle of the modern oil industry. It was Jan. 10, 1901, at about 10 a.m. Suddenly the United States had more oil than it knew what to do with, as well as the assurance that the oil was there in vast quantities.

Today, when the nation is trying to increase its use of coal because it has consumed much of its oil and is importing great quantities, Spindletop is still producing.

The Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil and gas production in the state, says the field, perhaps the most famous in the world, has yielded 151,930,800 barrels of oil since its birth. Today, about 66 oil wells are in production at Spindletop.

"There are other fields in the country, in the world, that have produced much more oil than Spindletop but none can surpass Spindletop's impact," said James A. Clark, a leading petroleum historian who wrote "Spindletop," the definitive book about the field.

Although the nation had a few producing oil wells on the East and West coasts in 1901, until the "Lucas Gusher" came in at Spindletop there had been only two previous gushers in the world, both in Baku in Russia, which was then the world's leading petroleum producer.

It was the glut of Spindletop oil that transformed the United States into the world's leading industrial and military nation and helped take man out of the horse and buggy era into the age of automobiles and airplanes. Just around the corner were two dreamers at Kitty Hawk who wanted to put man into the air and a shy man named Ford in Detroit who had plans for a horseless carriage.

One of the few persons around to witness the thunderous roar of that Spindletop gusher is Bill Fehl, 82.

"I was at home, about a mile away. There was nothing between my house and the well, just bald prairie," Fehl recalled in an interview.

"It was not long before noon. There's a story that the driller had money enough to drill until noon and then he would be broke. But he hit it, and that's the only one that counts," he said.

"It shook our two-story home. Everybody ran outside to see it. It tore that old wooden derrick all to pieces. and the noise? Oh my Lord. It was a gigantic roar. It sounded like a cannon going off. People commenced coming in from all over the place. They were very excited. They came on bicycles, horseback, wagons and walking.

"What happened then was enough to make you remember it today. Lots of people came here and lots of people were killed for money. The derricks were so close together you could walk from one to the other without ever touching the ground."

"In those days there were no rules or regulations as there are today," Fehl recalled. "People today can hardly imagine what it was like then. For one thing, the place was full of con artists."

Clark, Spindletop's historian wrote that with the first gusher came the realization that the field could produce more oil in one day than the rest of the fields of the world combined. "The natural phenomenon of a mineral, worth millions of dollars, gushing hundreds of feet into the air more freely than the geysers of hot water at Yellowstone, was enough to move a people to action and a feeling of new independence and national strength. Beaumont became the mecca for every man who yearned for wealth. It was the door-opened for a boom where every man had a chance to make millions or go broke."

International Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland No. 1-64 P. C. Coates has been staked as a 14,000-foot wildcat operation in Pecos County, 25 miles south of Bakersfield.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and 1,600 feet from west lines of section 64, block 2, CCSD&RGNG survey and one mile north of the Coates (Strawn oil and gas) field.

GOMEZ TEST

Exxon Co., USA No. 2-B John May is a new project in the Gomez (Wolfcamp) field of Pecos County, 12 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

Scheduled for an 11,300-foot bottom, it is 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 67, block OW, R. Maxwell survey.

WARD TESTS

Exxon announced locations for a pair of projects in the Estes Block 34 (Pennsylvanian oil) area of Ward County, nine miles south of Monahans.

No. 36 American National Life Ins., Co. will be drilled to 9,250 feet, 1,980 feet from northeast and 660 feet from northwest lines of section 25, block 34, H&TC survey. It is 2,640 feet northeast of production.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

Exxon No. 76 Louis Richter will be drilled as a 9,250-foot project in the same area. It is 660 feet from northwest and 660 feet from southeast lines of section 27, block 34, H&TC survey and nine miles southwest of Monahans.

PAYTON WELL

The Three-B Oil Co. of Monahans has completed its No. 20-A Blair in the Payton field of Ward County.

On 24-hour potential test it flowed 45 barrels of 27-gravity oil, through perforations from 2,196 to 2,298 feet after 2,000 gallons of acid and an unreported amount of fracture solution.

Location is 8,700 feet from north and 1,090 feet from east lines of section 5, block 32, H&TC survey and three miles south of Grandfalls.

LOVING WELL

Exxon Corp. No. 2-1 Linebery Gas Unit has been completed in the Linebery (Silurian) field of Loving County, 18 miles northeast of Mentone.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 14.477 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 19,920 to 20,075 feet after a 4,500-gallon acid treatment.

Total depth is 20,200 feet and plugged back depth is 20,117 feet. Five-inch casing is set at 20,195 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 12, block C-25, psl survey. It is ⅞ mile northeast of the field's Silurian discovery.

SCHLEICHER TEST

Jay-Bo, Inc., of Fort Worth spotted location for an 8,000-foot wildcat in Schleicher County, nine miles west of Eldorado.

It is No. 2 Forlano, 660 feet from south and east lines of section 199, block A, HE&WT survey and two miles northwest of Henry Speck (Canyon gas) production.

CROCKETT TEST

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas staked No. 2-B J. W. Childress as a 9,000-foot Ellenburger gas wildcat in Crockett County, eight miles northeast of Ozona.

It is to be dug 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 37, block GH, GC&SF survey.

Site is 2¼ miles north of 7800-foot Canyon gas production in the Ozona, Northeast field.

TOM GREEN WELL

The Susan Peak, South (Strawn oil and gas) field of Tom Green County has gained its fourth Strawn gas well.

The producer, Foy Boyd Associates, Inc., of Midland No. 1 Keyes, was finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 17.5 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 5,036 to 5,038 feet after a 350-gallon acid treatment.

The well is 10 miles east of Christoval, one location west of other production, and 330 feet from south and 2,173 feet from west lines of section 28, block 25, H&TC survey.

Nolan area wildcat set

Champlin Petroleum Co. No. 1 Sears-Boyd is a new 6,650-foot wildcat in Nolan County, six miles southwest of Trent.

Scheduled to drill into the Cabrian, it is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 71, block 20, T&P survey.

Site is 15/8 miles south of the Dora, North (Cambrian) field.

Sprayberry tests set

Michael T. Halbouty of Houston announced locations for a trio of projects in the Spraberry Trend Area of Reagan Couuty.

No. 2 Rocker B is 1,240 feet feet from south and 1,350 feet from west lines of section 7, block 1, T&P survey.

No. 3 Rocker B is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 12, block 1, T&P survey.

No. 4 Rocker B is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 12, block 1, T&P survey.

The three projects, 26 miles northeast of Big Lake, will each be drilled to 7,400 feet.

Val Verde well finals

C&K Petroleum, Inc., of Midland No. 1-39 Exxon-Mills has been completed as an Ellenburger well in the Will O gas field of Val Verde County, 6½ miles northeast of Pandale.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 4 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 13,912 to 14,714 feet after a 6,000-gallon acid treatment.

The Ellenburger was topped at 12,893 feet and hole was bottomed at 15,383 feet. Plugged back depth is 15,333 feet.

Wellsite is 1,754 feet from north and 2,478 feet from west lines of section 39, block Q-3, TC RR survey. It is a ⅝-mile southeast extension.

Wildcat plugs back for field completion

Amoco Production Co. No. 8-A Yellowhouse Land Co. has been completed as a San Andres well in the Yellowhouse field of Hockley County.

Drilled as a wildcat to 7,800 feet, the project was plugged back to 4,674 feet for completion.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential of 61 barreis of 31-gravity oil, through perforations from 4,564 to 4,596 feet. The well also made 130 barrels of water during the potential test.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of labor 9, league 718, State Capitol Lands survey and 12 miles northwest of Levelland.

A drillstem test in the Abo, from 7,406 to 7,462 feet, open 1 hour and 5 minutes, recovered 240 feet of salty drilling mud, 90 feet of mud-cut salt water and 130 feet of sulfer water.

COTTLE WELL

Graham Energy Development Corp. No. 1 Tippen has been potentialed in the Tippen, Southwest field of Cottle County.

The well finaled for a daily potential of 90 barrels of oil, plus 18 barrels of water, glowing through a 17/64-inch choke and perforations from 6,663 to 6,694 feet in a conglomerate.

Gas-oil ratio was 1,666-1.

The pay section was acidized with 2,000 gallons and fractured with 15,000 gallons.

The pay, shallower than the regular conglomerate pay in the field, may be classified as a new pay.

Location is 3,346 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of Robert Middleton Survey, abstract 170, 10 miles southeast of Paducah.

Fred M. Newman, Inc., of Midland No. 1 J. M. Rape
Estate has been completed from the Bell Canyon in the Cable (Wolfcamp) field of Reeves County, 15 miles southeast of Pecos.

Operator reported a daily flow potential of 25 barrels of 30.8-gravity oil through perforations from 5,222 to 5,250 feet. The well produced a calculated, absolute open flow of 85,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

A re-entry project of the former reopener of the Cable (Wolfcamp) field, it originally was completed by Texaco Inc. after it was drilled to 21,150 feet in the Ellenburger and plugged back to 11,500 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 24, block C-1, psl survey, 15 miles southeast of Pecos.

STEPOUT FINALS

Hytech Energy Corp. of Midland No. 1 Hulse Unit has been completed as a ⅝-mile extension to Yates gas production in the Loop, Northeast field of Gaines County, ½ mile northeast of Loop.

The well finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,390,000 cubic feet of gas per day, from open hole section at 3,335-3,351 feet.

The pay was fractured with 15,000 gallons. Total depth is 3,351 feet and 5½-inch casing was set at 3,335 feet.

Wellsite is 1,320 feet from north and 1,520 feet from east lines of section 6, block C-32, psl survey.

PAY REOPENED

The Strawn gas pay has been reopened in the Baugh field of Schleicher County, six miles northeast of Eldorado, with the completion of Jack McQueen of Abilene No. 2 A. L. Baugh.

The well finaled as a shut-in gas well for a potential of 750,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¾-inch choke and perforations from 5,755 to 5,760 feet after a 5,000-gallon acid treatment.

Total depth is 5,760 feet. The project is a re-entry operation formerly drilled by Westbrook Oil Co. No. 1-A A. L. Baugh.

Location is 2,173 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 8, block M, GH&SA survey.

More research could uncover new drug for mental cases

By CHARLES CAMPBELL

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A prize-winning neurobiologist says learning more about the brain should help develop drugs that would depopulate mental institutions.

"I can't tell you when we'll find that drug," Dr. Fridolin Sulser said in an interview at his office. "It could be tomorrow, it could be 50 years."

Sulser's work 15 years ago at the National Institutes of Health in Washington, D.C., led to the discovery of drugs that help people overcome deep depression.

"The drugs we have are not very good. They are not very specific and they have terrible side effects," he said. And it takes about three weeks for them to work.

Sulser is director of the Tennessee Neuropsychiatric Institute, a part of the Middle Tennessee Mental Health Institute. TNI is funded by the state and by government grants, and is staffed by Vanderbilt University's faculty.

Last fall the 51-year-old, Swiss-born researcher accepted, in ceremonies at the University of Basel, Switzerland, his alma mater, the International Anna-Monika-Stiftung prize. Given every two years, the award is for "scientific work leading to advances in the understanding of the neurobiology of depression and the opening up of avenues of a neurochemotherapy of depressive illness."

In the prize-winning work, Sulser administered to animals a drug called reserpine, which produces severe depressive reactions in humans.

"You don't have schizophrenic rats, you see. You don't have manic-depressive rabbits," he said. So he simulated depression in the animal brains and studied chemical changes. One of the most important involved norepinephrine, a hormone with a role in the brain's regulation of emotional behavior.

"If one produced a model depresson, the amount of norepinephrine decreased," Sulser said. "Drugs that antagonized the model depression increased the amount of norepinephrine."

He believes depression is linked to an overload of receptors of emotional signals which tames the supply of norepinephrine and subjects the victims to overpowering emotional stress.

"We are trying now to find a chemical that will reduce receptors in 24 hours," Sulser said. "It is of no use to prescribe to a patient a drug which might work in three to four weeks if the patient is in danger of committing suicide."

Sulser wants basic research to get its share of the credit for medical advances. Before a polio vaccine was possible, he said, someone had to learn exactly what polio was and how it worked.

Skylab recharge to avoid earth crash

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The 85-ton Skylab, whose last astronaut visitors left more than three years ago, will be revived in April in an attempt to slow down a descent that could bring it crashing to earth as early as late summer, 1979.

From the Mission Control Center in Houston, Tex., flight directors will attempt to recharge Skylab's dormant batteries using the space station's solar panels, which in springtime will be almost in line with the sun as Skylab follows the southernmost part of its orbit.

The recharged batteries will then be commanded to fire small jet engines to force Skylab into a slow, end-over-end tumble to reduce the drag now forcing the space station toward earth.

"The tumble would be so slow it could be likened to the minute hand moving around a clock," said an engineer at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., where Skylab was built. "We could put Skylab nose on end into the wind, so to speak, just like a football where there's almost no darg on the ball after it's been perfectly place-kicked."

Skylab is in a slowly descending orbit that brings it as close as 230 miles to earth. If left alone, its orbit could drop another 80 miles in the next 18 months and bring it perilously close to falling into the earth's atmosphere.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is concerned that Skylab might burn and break up in the atmosphere into pieces of jagged metal big enough to damage or harm whatever it might strike on earth.

The size of a four-bedroom house, Skylab is by far the biggest satellite circling the earth, dwarfing the 5-ton Soviet surveillance satellite that burned up over western Canada on Jan. 24.

It has been the space agency's plan to have astronauts rendezvous the airplane-like space shuttle with Skylab in October 1979 so they can install a small rocket engine in the space station's docking port. The rocket engine could then be fired remotely to lift Skylab into a higher and safer orbit where it could stay unattended for another 10 years.

Recent calculations show that Skylab might fall out of orbit before the space shuttle astronauts could reach it.

Demographer reports on illegal aliens in U.S.

By ROBERT C. TOTH
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A Texas demographer told Congress that from 370,000 to 400,000 illegal aliens entered the United States each year from 1970 to 1975, virtually all of them from Mexico. He estimated that there are now about four million aliens in this country.

In addition to these figures, which are considerably less than the Carter administration gave out last year, Prof. Dudley L. Poston Jr. of the Population Research Center and Sociology Department, University of Texas, testified before the House Select Committee on Population that:

—Patterns of legal migration have changed radically since 1965. Latin Americans and Asians have replaced Europeans as the major source of new American citizens. Mexico is in first place as the source of both legal and illegal immigrants.

—This new wave has "higher visibility" than earlier immigrants because they have different "phenotypical features (physical appearance), language and culture." They have had, and probably will continue to have, greater trouble achieving socio-economic equality than their European predecessors.

—Legal immigrants also number about 400,000 a year. While this may represent a paltry percentage of the total U.S. population, such immigrants account for almost one-fourth of the annual population increase in this country. If birth and death rates continue to go down, newcomers will make up all of the U.S. population growth in three decades.

Poston's estimate of the illegal immigration rate — between 370,000 and 400,000 each year from 1970 to 1975, over 93 percent of them from Mexico — was less than one-fourth of the administration's estimate.

The administration offered no hard-and-fast figures on the number of illegal aliens entering this country when it presented its program for dealing with the problem last August. But it said that for every three illegal border crossings, one entrant gets caught and is deported. Since 900,000 persons were said to have been deported last year, this suggested 1.8 million successful illegal entries.

Similarly, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell told reporters at that time that six to 12 million illegal aliens are in the United States. Other estimates range from one to 12 million, with eight million the popularly accepted figure. But Poston said the methods by which these estimates were arrived at were harshly criticized by experts. The current consensus is that "there may be four million," he said.

The enormous disparaties in these "guestimates" upset Committee Chairman James H. Scheuer D-N.Y., who noted that there were not 900,000 deported aliens last year but 900,000 "arrests of deportable aliens." Many of them could be the same alien caught and sent back several times.

Scheuer asked rhetorically how Carter could recommend national policy on aliens and how Congress could legislate intelligently on an issue when the basic facts were unknown. He suggested efforts involving many experts were necessary to get reliable data.

Carter in August asked for new laws to give citizenship and residence status to illegal aliens already here.

Center gives children place to explore, pursue interests

More than just a way to provide integrated experiences for Midland public school children, the Carver Culture Center gives students an opportunity to explore and pursue their own interests, ranging from mathematics to cooking.

The center was set up, under the court-ordered desegregation plan, so that students in kindergarten through third grade can get acquainted with other children in their cluster and participate in multicultural activities, center Director Beverly I. Ihinger said.

The children visit the center three times a year. They also are required to have three integrated experiences on their school campus and go on two field trips.

While the children are at the center, they can participate in activities in four main learning centers, with several centers in each main area, Mrs. Ihinger said. The main areas are language arts and science; math; art, and science, woodworking and cooking.

The center occupies two wings of the old Carver Junior-Senior High School on Wall Street. Students work in one wing of the building for half of the day and switch to the other wing for the remainder.

"The emphasis for the centers is on small-group interaction. We have organized the centers so that they are exploratory. We have used student interest to select where the student works," Mrs. Ihinger said.

However, if students need individual attention, the center staff sees that they get it.

"If John needs to work on his handwriting, we make sure John is at the handwriting table. Once the teacher has given us the information, we make sure we have the material that matches that child's needs," Mrs. Ihinger said.

Six teachers and two teachers' aides work at the center. In addition, when the children come to the center, their teachers accompany them, she said.

Although students are supposed to work in each of the main learning centers each day, there's no requirement on how much they must accomplish, and they are not graded, Mrs. Ihinger said. They are allowed to choose which area they wish to work in on a first come, first serve basis.

"The response from teachers has been overwhelmingly positive, and I cannot think of an instance when a parent has said 'my child will not be at that school,'" Mrs. Ihinger said.

"And I think the children have a good time," she said.

CB radios send Texan toward $1 million goal

By JULES LOH

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Being a Texan, Randy Veselka had a predictable boyhood ambition. He decided that when he grew up, he would be a tycoon. Now he is one.

The business he started 2½ years ago will surely gross close to a million dollars this year. He is equally sure that in just a few more years — six, at minimum — he himself will be worth a million. Then he can sit back and enjoy the fruits of his labor.

Randy is 19.

He took time out the other day from appointments with his banker, his lawyer, his accountant, his worries ("I've got a carload of products stuck in the snow in New York, and I need them, now.") to explain how he did it, and why.

"Why? I used to visit a friend who lived in a four-story house with 58 rooms and a Rolls Royce parked out front. I decided I liked that kind of living.

"How? I put in 70 to 90 hours a week on the business and go to college two days a week. I don't mind hard work if the reward is large."

There is, of course, more to the story.

Like many another teen-ager, Randy Veselka earned his spending money working after school. He washed cars, flipped hamburgers, waited tables.

Unlike others his age, Randy was ever on the prowl, not for pocket money but an idea. He itched for a big score. "I intend to be a millionaire at 25. You don't do that working for somebody else."

In the fall of 1975 he hit on it.

"The CB radio craze was just warming up. It looked like a hot item. I had $500 saved up and I figured if I lost it, I could always go out and earn another $500 and try something else."

He bought 10 radios from a distributor, stuck 100 handbills under windshield wipers, sold out his stock in five days and ordered more. The second batch went as fast, so did the third, fourth, fifth.

In two months he built his capital to $20,000.

By the following June, two months before his 18th birthday, traffic was so thick in his driveway, and neighbors' complaints were so frequent, the city cracked down on him with zoning laws.

Undaunted, he borrowed $10,000 from the bank, leased an old shed out on the highway — in the fastest-growing part of town — fixed it up and put up a sign: CB Warehouse. "It is a short, simple name and it sounds big."

In 60 days, he had outgrown the shed and expanded. In a single torrid month last year, his gross was $80,000.

If he cared to adorn his sign in a time-honored American way, he could add the line: Randy Veselka & Father.

That is correct. Before long, the parking lot was so crowded, the cash register so overworked, that his father sold his own business, a chain of exercise parlors, and joined his son.

Randy's success also attracted other eyes. Two of his distributors switched to retail and went into competition on the same highway.

He has button-holed contacts at manufacturers' conventions, built his product line to 500 items, hired a crew of 11, leased a townhouse, tripped to Europe, bought a fleet of four trucks, enrolled in college toward a law degree ("I'm at my lawyer's three times a week asking questions; I don't want to have to ask.") and bought a choice piece of property for a new two-story, 10,000-square-foot building for his retail business and a second business he is starting up, a distributorship. Branch offices are next.

"I've already ordered $25,000 worth of office furniture."

Some coal town businesses decline

By STRAT DOUTHAT

MULLENS, W.Va. (AP) — B.E. "Bud" Hypes was seated in his restaurant one afternoon sipping coffee and talking about the United Mine Workers strike and its effect on this southern West Virginia coal town.

A newspaper lay beside his elbow, its big, black headline proclaiming: "Coal Talks Fizzle."

"My restaurant business is off a little," Hypes said. "But my poolroom is doing better than ever. The boys have all the time in the world these days, and they're still able to come up with a dollar or two. Yessir, the pool business is booming."

However, the big money games have disappeared in the wake of the strike over wages, pensions and health and welfare benefits.

W.A. "Boots" Davis is another big stakes player who isn't seeing much action in Mullens these days. His game, however, is banking.

"Our cash flow has all but dried up," said Davis, president of the People's Bank, across the street from the poolroom. "Coal is everything here. We're surrounded by little coal camps, and when the coal stops, everything else stops, too. Our merchants are doing little more than opening and closing. It's a very depressing time for them."

Davis said his bank was holding its own, but just barely.

"The checking accounts were the first to go," he said. "Now, people have begun dipping heavily into their savings accounts. Normally, we could have anticipated about three quarters of a million dollars worth of growth in the past 60 days. But, instead, we experienced a drop of about $200,000 last month."

He said he's had few foreclosures, however.

"The thing that has made the difference is the number of elderly miners who get Social Security and black lung checks," he said. "While these people are not usually big spenders, they have been keeping some money in circulation by helping their children meet their loan and mortgage payments.

Drug rehabilitation center launches questionable changes

By WILLIAM OVEREND
The Los Angeles Times

The most recent of many life-style experiments within Synanon, the communal organization that began 19 years ago as an innovative rehabilitation program for drug addicts and alcoholics, surfaced publicly late last year. It amounted to almost all of Synanon's married couples agreeing to get divorces and finding new mates as a result of a decision by Synanon's founder, Charles (Chuck) Dederich, to launch a new program called "changing partners."

After the death of his wife in April, the 64-year-old former alcoholic chose a new mate from one of six of the commune's female residents who expressed interest. He began advocating the change of partners, which came to be known as the "love match," for others in the 1,100-member organization. The result, according to Synanon, was that 230 couples had agreed to divorces and "fewer than 20" had left rather than join the experiment.

The divorces were the latest of several social experiments at Synanon that attracted outside interest. Among the first were decisions to give up cigarettes and sugar. Then, in 1975, women residents shaved their heads. The following year there were vasectomies for men and abortions for pregnant women. There was an increasing emphasis on alternative life-styles. In addition, Dederich said in an October news conference that he considered marijuana to be a "marvelous" drug, adding that Synanon, long committed to a drug-free philosophy, would consider its use for "ceremonial" purposes if it were legalized.

Since contacted in early December, Synanon officials repeatedly refused to discuss any of the organization's changes and policies with the Los Angeles Times, which had published earlier accounts of charges that children living in Synanon facilities had been subjected to physical abuse. Synanon, which also refused to allow interviews with residents, accused the newspaper of being biased and inaccurate in previous stories about the organization and warned that anything published about the most recent changes would be "at your peril."

During the following weeks, media interest in the most recent developments within Synanon increased. After Time magazine published a critical article in late December, Synanon responded with a $76.75 million libel suit. Dederich also warned that he could not be held responsible for more violent actions that Synanon's "friends" might take.

"I don't know what these people might do," he told a television reporter during an interview at Synanon's headquarters in Badger in Tulare County. "I don't know what action they might take against the people responsible, their wives, their children...Bombs could be thrown into odd places, into the homes of some of the clowns who occupy high places in the Time organization. That's too bad. That's too bad. I would certainly not institute anything like that, but I have no way of preventing it if it would happen...."

When first contacted, former residents of Synanon, including some who had left in recent months because of the marriage changes, were reluctant to talk. Many were upset by events within Synanon, but some believed that speaking publicly wouldn't accomplish anything and said they still felt grateful for what Synanon had once done for them. Others said they didn't want to talk because they still had relatives in Synanon or were afraid they might be sued if they publicly criticized the organization. But, gradually, some decided to voice their feelings.

"I am very saddened by Synanon today," said Dr. Jerry Newmark, an author and educational consultant who left Synanon in 1976, one of several former residents who decided to speak publicly. "I thought it had tremendous potential as a model for society. To me, it's now become a caricature of a social movement. As far as I'm concerned, the Synanon I knew doesn't exist anymore."

Controversy isn't new for Synanon. In the years after Dederich launched what was then primarily a rehabilitation program for drug addicts and alcoholics, it faced a constant struggle for survival. But Synanon proved that by treating heroin addiction as a character disorder, addicts could change their self-destructive behavior patterns and lead productive lives. Its pioneering approach to drug addiction remains the model for successful therapeutic communities throughout the nation.

Over the years, however, Synanon began to change. Some of its members had no drug problems, but joined because they were attracted by Synanon's philosophies and communal life-style and saw it as a utopian society.

Household noises are music to woman's ears

FERGUS FALLS, Minn. (AP) — The whirring of the kitchen exhaust fan, the rumble of the furnace kicking in, the eerie music of wind and the buzz of a fly — all are music to Hazel Magdich.

After 28 years of hearing trouble and 21 years of dependence on a hearing aid, surgery has enabled Mrs. Magdich to hear again.

The hearing loss itself was not so painful as the worry it caused her. Mrs. Magdich said when she discovered she was losing her hearing she was concerned that people might think she was a freak.

"I should have been more open about it," she said.

After discovering she couldn't hear with her left ear, Mrs. Magdich visited several specialists who couldn't find anything wrong. "They all said it was nerve deafness."

The condition worsened, and by 1950 it was bothering her at work, where she used the telephone. The hearing in her right ear was slowly diminishing, too.

In 1951, when she married Steve Magdich, her hearing loss was really bothering her. She recalls how nervous she was meeting her husband's coworkers and trying to pretend she could hear what they were saying.

When she became pregnant with her first child she said she was more worried about being able to hear the doctor than about the labor pains. But she didn't mention her problem.

"I was not about to admit there was anything wrong with my hearing," she said.

Pretending she could hear normally was getting more difficult. One day, she and another woman were standing side by side in the kitchen washing dishes. And Mrs. Magdich couldn't hear the conversation.

Finally, it was too much and she bought a hearing aid. That helped, but not enough.

And she was always worried she wouldn't be able to hide the hearing aid and conceal all the wires.

"I was just a nervous wreck through it all. I don't know how long it was before I admitted it," Mrs. Magdich said. "The only time I ever felt relaxed was late at night."

Specialists had told her surgery would not produce much improvement in her hearing. But, finally, in desperation, she decided to try it anyway.

Surgeons replaced the tiny "stirrup" bone in each ear with a tiny piece of wire. Normally, this bone vibrates when struck by sound waves, but in her case the bone had become rigid.

The first sound she heard after the surgery was her husband and two children walking into the room to see her.

"It sounded like a herd of elephants doing a tap dance," she said.

"Double Pineapple Heart" is a show-off dessert that's easy to make. Canned pineapple chunks shimmer in a layer of clear raspberry flavored gelatin topping a creamy base.

Pineapple dessert a valentine show-off

Celebrate St. Valentine's Day with a show-off pineapple dessert. It's a loving touch to tell your family how much you care. Pretty enough for a party, the dessert's dramatic appearance belies its ease of preparation.

"Double Pineapple Heart: is a two hearts-in-one gelatin mold. There's both syrup and fruit from a can of pineapple chunks in the raspberry gelatin which is divided into creamy and clear layers. When chilled, the mod is turned out with the shimmering clear fruit filled layer on top, and the creamy one on bottom.

You can still make this luscious dessert after Valentine's Day has come and gone. Use a 6-cup mold with a solid bottom: It will turn out just as handsome and delicious as it did the first time it was served.

DOUBLE PINEAPPLE HEART

1 (6 oz.) package raspberry flavor gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 (1 lb. 4 oz.) can pineapple chunks
1 cup syrup from pineapple
1 (8 oz.) package cream cheese, softened
½ cup dairy sour cream

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Add water to syrup, if needed, to measure one cup liquid, and stir into gelatin. Arrange pineapple chunks around edges of oiled 6-cup heart shaped mold and remaining chunks in center. Spoon about one cup gelatin into mold, using just enough to cover pineapple. Set mold in pan of ice water to chill firm. Meanwhile, chill remaining gelatin until slightly thickened. Beat softened cream cheese and sour cream together, mixing until smooth. Gradually blend in the slightly thickened gelatin. Pour over firm clear layer in mold. Chill 4 to 5 hours, or overnight. Unmold on serving platter. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

There's too many 'Charlie's Angels'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — It's not the "Charlie's Angels" of television fame who will appear at a concert to raise money for anti-abortion campaigns.

The Life Amendment Political Action Committee says it made a mistake when it announced that the three actresses who play "Charlie's Angels" would appear at a concert Sunday in Washington, D.C.

Instead, it is a singing group called Charlie's Angels that is scheduled to appear.

The organization plans to set the record straight in the February issue of its newsletter — National Right to Life News.

"LAPAC is sorry for any inconvenience this may have caused and apologizes to Jaclyn Smith, Cheryl Ladd and Kate Jackson," the statement says.

However, the National Abortion Rights Action League says an apology is not enough.

It filed a complaint Wednesday with the Minnesota Office of Consumer Services, alleging that the newspaper had engaged in possible consumer fraud.

The complaint asks that the Right to Life News print a retraction and refund all money

Bloody Mary created in Paris bar

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

As a longtome believer that the Bloody Mary helps settle the stomach before lunch, I have often wondered where this unique drink got its start. Recently I heard an interesting version of its origin.

It seems that, back in the 1920s, a certain Fernand Petiot worked at Harry's New York Bar in Paris, which was frequented by notables such as Ernest Hemingway and F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Somewhere along the way, Petiot came up with the idea of a comforting midday drink composed of equal parts of vodka and tomato juice, and called it the Bloody Mary.

The drink was an instant success, so the story goes, and when Petiot decided to pull up stakes and move to a hotel in New York City, he brought his creation with him.

New Yorkers reportedly liked the mixture, too, but some commented that it could be a little spicier. Petiot obliged by adding a dash of black pepper, a little cayenne pepper and a few drops of Worchestershire sauce.

Then, for patrons who wanted a still more spirited drink Petiot threw in some Tabasco and the Bloody Mary was on its way to fame.

In the years that followed, other bartenders began adding their own touches. One put in a splash of lemon juice, another preferred vinegar and a third revved the drink up with horseradish.

One story tells of a young lady who ordered a Bloody mary in a Chicago cocktail lounge. When she noticed the swizzle stick was missing, she took a celery stalk from a nearby relish dish and stirred her drink. It did something for the flavor, and the management began serving celery with all Bloody Marys. Now many bars all over the country poke a fragrant celery rib in the drink before serving.

Today, most bloody Mary drinkers agree that Tabasco and lemon juice or vinegar are needed ingredients, but many have special versions of their own with other additions.

1½ ounces vodka, preferably 80 proof
⅛ teaspoon each salt and pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco
¼ teaspoon horseradish
3 ounces tomato juice
¼ ounce beef bouillon
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Combine ingredients, shake well with ice and serve in an old-fashioned glass with two ice cubes or straight up, as preferred, and a stalk of celery.

Works of female artists exhibited

NEW YORK (AP)—An exhibition of works by 116 prominent women artists ranges from tiny jewelry pieces in precious metals to sculptural fiber pieces of monumental scale.

The exhbiit at the Bronx Museum of the Arts, entitled "Clay, Fiber, Metal by Women Artists," is co-sponsored by the museum and the Women's Caucus for Art.

Directions to make heart shaped cake

First make a square cake and a round cake. Cut the round cake in half. Then turn the square cake so that one of the corners faces you and it appears to be diamond shaped rather than square. Place each half of the round cake on the two uppermost edges of the square cake, and you now have a perfectly heart shape cake. Just cover with frosting and serve.

DEAR ABBY

'Speak up' buttons could help hard of hearing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I notice that you commend restaurants that provide their blind customers with menus in braille. Will you please do a little favor for those of us who are hard of hearing or partially deaf:

Suggest that some enterprising novelty or gift manufacturer make up large, easy-to-read buttons that we can wear on our coats and dresses reading as follows: PLEASE SPEAK UP—I'M HARD OF HEARING. I for one would be glad to buy one and wear it.

I am so tired of having to ask people who mumble to please repeat what they have said. I'll bet those "Speak up" buttons would sell like hotcakes!—HARD OF HEARING.

DEAR HARD: Oddly enough, many people who have a hearing disability are so self-conscious about it, they refuse to wear even the most inconspicuous hearing aid. But to your suggestion, I say, "Hear! Hear!" Such buttons would be a blessing for those who want them.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this in respnse to JUST PLAIN JEALOUS, who resents her husband's taking business trips with an attractive, young female co-worker.

Dear Just Plain Jealous: I am a professional woman. The fact that I am young and attractive should be in my favor, but it isn't. It's just the opposite. I'm tired of hearing those "What will my wife think" comments from men who refuse to travel with me, and the snide remarks made about men who do.

Believe me, I am not interested in seducing your husband. I'm just trying to do my job, and it's women like you who make it very difficult. Your insecurities are YOUR problem, please don't make them MINE.

It's not fair for attractive, professional women to be held back by men with jealous wives, so next time you kick up a fuss because your husband has an out-of-town assignment with a woman, trying walking a mile in my shoes. It's not easy. Sign me. . .—PROFESSIONAL GAL

DEAR PRO: You make a good point. Youth and beauty are not always advantages to a professional woman.

Soviets, Cubans take active role in revolution

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — The Russians and Cubans are no longer spectators in Ethiopia's struggle for survival. Today they are participating partners, advising, deciding, executing. They are the trustees of the Marxist revolution here, the sponsors of the military game plan.

Their precise role in the war against Somalia — combatant or adviser — is still not clear, but their presence in this capital of numbing poverty and rampant terrorism is hardly a secret any more. They are visible, numerous, influential and, more often than not, very young.

Africa's response to the Communist buildup has been surprisingly muted. The reason: It coincided with Somalia's invasion of Ethiopia's Ogaden region last July 23 and, faced with a similar crisis, almost every African nation would have been willing to accept help from whoever offered it. Russia and Cuba did.

The Soviet Union has poured an estimated $1 billion worth of war supplies into Ethiopia since last April when the Marxist military government in Addis ended 23 years of dependency on the United States for arms. In the process, Ethiopia has developed one of the most potentially powerful military machines modern Africa has ever seen.

Soon — some say in a few months, others a few days — Ethiopia will unleash this machine in an attempt to reclaim the Montana-sized Ogaden desert region as well as the national pride it lost when Somalia, a Moslem nation of 3 million people, drove with stunning ease more than 400 miles through the Ethiopian defenses.

The unleashing of a counter offensive, impartial observers believe, is likely to have two major effects:

—Ethiopia, a Christian nation of 30 million people, will win back the Ogaden barring unforeseen developments. Its army, its weaponry and its air force appear to be overwhelmingly superior to that of the Somalis.

"The Ethiopians will win because the Russians won't let them lose," a Western diplomat said.

—A military victory will enhance Soviet and Cuban prestige in much of Africa, provided Ethiopian forces do not cross the southern Ogaden border into Somalia. It will give the Soviet Union a Red Sea port and, more important, an East African springboard — similar to Angola in West Africa — from which its influence can be extended down the Indian Ocean coast to Marxist Mozambique.

There is ample evidence to suggest, however, that many Ethiopians do not share the revolutionary zeal espoused by the military junta and do not welcome the Russians and Cubans as anything but a means to regain lost territory. The revolution, they will tell an inquirier, is destroying society in order to save it.

"This is not revolution, it is madness," said a government civil servant. "The killings, the terror, they cannot go on if we are to servive. No one trusts anyone any more. What must the world think of Ethiopia now?"

Indeed, Ethiopia today reflects the most savage spirit of man. The shooting starts in Addis Ababa's shantytown neighborhoods known as kebeles long before the midnight curfew. By morning, every morning, there are 15, 20, 25 dead sprawled in the streets, left there to rot in the summer sun as a lesson to those who have the audacity to question.

The killing is sanctioned by the government. It encourages its "red terror" kebele defense squads "to mete out social justice" to all "white terror" counter-revolutionaries and they do it with great, if undisciplined, enthusiasm. In some cases, both the hunter and the hunted are uneducated youths in their early teens.

So extensive is the killing that the government has started a cemetary for revolutionaries in St. Joseph's Churchyard near city hall, and foreign envoys hang sings reading "diplomatic immunity" on their gates. But there is no immunity. Two weeks ago the defense squads crashed into the Netherlands Embassy compound and snatched away the two daughters of the ambassador's chauffeur. And last week, on a quiet, sunny Monday morning in Addis, 20 bodies awaiting disposal were piled up behind the Ministry of Interior.

"When the revolution started three years ago. I felt it was doing some very exciting things for the people," said one European envoy. "Land reform, of course, was the major accomplishment. But since then, there's been nothing. Absolutely nothing has happened for a year or more that in any way benefits the people.

"The revolution today is just one of rhetoric and death. Everyone has a license to kill in the name of the revolution. And I feel rather sad about it because if any country ever needed a revolution, Ethiopia did. It's just that this revolution is being run by very bad people."

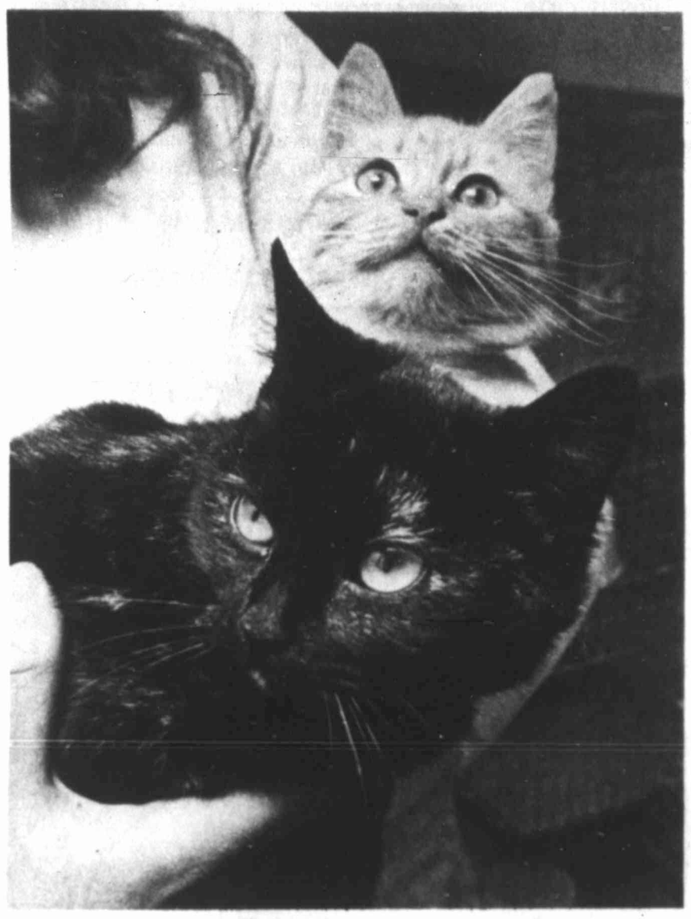

Not only is the society in convulsions today, the country itself is facing disintegration. Besides the anarchy in the city streets, a dozen antigovernment rebellions are raging in the countryside. Somali insurgents have captured all of the Ogaden except for the cities of Harar and Diredawa. Eritrean secessionists control the northernmost province except for the capital, Asmara, and the ports of Massawa and Assab. Only the presence of 10,000 Ethiopina troops stationed along the 400-mile, German-built road from Assab to Addis Ababa enables military convoys to bring supplies into the capital.

Ethiopia, about three times the size of California, is the oldest independent country in Africa and is among the world's oldest civilizations. According to legend, the Ethiopian emperors were descended from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

The last emperor, Haile Selassie, who ruled for 53 years, held the empire together through a combination of force, fear and favors. The royal family and the church owned two-thirds of the land. Under Haile Selassie's feudal system, the average peasant — the majority of whom still live at least a day's walk from the nearest road — was slightly worse off than most cows. On Sept. 12, 1974, the emperor was overthrown by a military junta known as the Dergue, thus ending the empire and a long, intimate relationship with the United States.

With Washington-Addis relations often strained nearly to the breaking point, the U.S. Embassy staff here has dwindled in the past year from 700 persons to 46, including six marine guards and 10 AID diplomats who administer a modest $10 million rural development program. There has been no U.S. ambassador here since May 1976, and the Carter administration is in no hurry to fill the vacancy, diplomatic sources said.

Ethiopia condemns the United States on several fronts today. It believes Washington is supplying arms through the back door to Somalia, it believes Washington reneged on its promise to deliver $40 million in U.S. arm ordered before the cancelation of the defense agreement April 30 and it believes Washington's failure to denounce the Somalis as aggressors in the Ogaden war is tantamount to condoning the Somali territorial claim on the Ogaden (where the population of a few hundred thousand nomads are of Somali origin).

IF IT'S MYSTERY, sudden surprises and cuddly company that's on your mind, then the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Shelter, 5101 Andrews Highway, has a roomful of felines waiting to bring a little excitement into your life. These two cats, an 8-month-old male, back, and a 1-year-old female, front, are among those waiting. (Staff Photo)

Grass user turns out loser

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dear Doctor: I'm sure you have heard of my problem a million times but please help. I am dating two guys. Both are cute but one of them smokes pot and I like being with both of them.

Now for my problem. The guy who smokes pot asked me to date only him. I'm afraid that if I do this, I will lose the other boy for sure, but if I don't the other boy may eventually drop me and I would have no boyfriend.

Please help. — Barbara, Sacramento, Calif.

Dear Barbara: This answer is easy! You shouldn't be dating a boy who continues to use marijuana.

Tell him this is the main reason you won't be dating him but if he should shake the habit you would be happy to see him again, but not steadily.

Dear Doctor: Both of my parents work, so for doing the dishes, mowing our big yard, taking out the trash and keeping my room clean I get $2 a week. I think this is unfair to be paid so low for doing so much.

Whenever I get a part-time job outside the home mowing lawns or shoveling snow I don't get my $2 per week but I still must do my work.

Do you think this is fair? Do you think I should be paid more for my work? I am 13 years old. — Anthony, Goshen, Ind.

Dear Anthony: I feel $2 per week is adequate if you are allowed to spend the money any way you choose but I also feel that not giving you the $2 when you decide to do outside work is unfair and I can't understand your parents' reasoning.

Questions may be sent to Dr. Robert Wallace, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Daily zinc dose stops body odor

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am bothered by underarm perspiration odor. Deodorants and antiperspirants don't seem to help. What could I do about it?—Ms. X.

Dear Ms. X.: Body odor, as it is usually called, is caused by the action of bacteria or yeast on sweat. That is why cleanliness is so very important—but I am sure you know this. Shaving underarm hair is one thing that helps. An antibacterial ointment may also be useful.

Let me pass along an interesting tip I came across in the Archives of Dermatology a short time ago. Dr. Morton D. Scribner reports good results with a daily zinc supplement.

Dr. Scribner says he discovered this from a patient who had been prescribed zinc supplements because of leg ulcers (zinc helps the healing process). The patient also happened to have had an underarm perspiration odor problem all his life and suddenly noticed a distinct improvement when he began the zinc therapy.

As a result, Dr. Scribner tried zinc supplements on other patients with body odor complaints—and with uniformly good results. Why not mention this to your doctor and see if he thinks it might be worth a try?

Dear Dr. Solomon: What exactly causes hemophilia? My daughter-in-law's younger brother is a hemophiliac, and so I am anxious to know just how careful he has to be.—Diana W.

Dear Diana: Hemophilia is a hereditary disease in which the blood does not clot properly because a special protein in the blood is lacking. With a very few exceptions, it affects only men, but women transmit the disease.

Hemophilia varies a great deal in severity—from mild to severe. In any case, the important thing to realize is that treatment is much more effective today. And most hemophiliacs can grow up and lead nearly normal lives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I liked your column on food additives, especially your comments on food coloring. It is certainly true we could do without colors, but marketing tests show that consumers reject unfavorably colored food products in favor of those that are more attractive. The nutritional value of uneaten food is zero.—Howard M., Chicago

Possible sale of new jet plane hanging in air

By TOM REDBURN
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Every month, just about the time the directors of Pan American World Airways gather for their regular meeting, the rumors start to fly.

Will it be Boeing, which has already sold Pan Am 35 of its giant 747s? What about McDonnell Douglas, makers of the increasingly popular DC-10? Or will Lockheed, which boldly gambled with its precious capital when things looked bleakest by investing some $100 million in a long-range version of its loss-plagued L-1011 Tristar, win the coveted contract?

And then, every month, Pan Am — the airline that pioneered the jet age, that first introduced widebodies — delays its decision once again.

Under different circumstances, the gossip, the delays, the tension that buzzes around Pan Am's decision to buy a few planes to replace some of its aging 707s might be funny. But no one is laughing.

For each of the three manufacturers is engaged in a high-stakes poker game to win a contract that will eventually mean a $1 billion-plus payoff — but just for one of them.

And even more important, riding on the outcome is not just the money and the jobs the order will bring to either Seattle, Long Beach, or Burbank, but also the very future of Lockheed's Tristar program itself.

"It is now or never for the L-1011," says John Simon, an aerospace analyst for Crowell, Weedon and Co. in Los Angeles. "What Pan Am decides, along with Braniff, is the most critical decision for Lockheed's commercial program since it was launched 10 years ago. I can't tell you how important it is."

Lockheed won't shut down Tristar production if it fails to win the Pan Am contract, company officials say, but the loss would almost certainly condemn the program to limp along forever, making the L-1011 a kind of walking wounded of the aviation industry.

At present production rates, each of the Tristars that is turned out costs Lockheed about $7 million in hard cash over and above its sale rises to about 18 planes will the program be able to cover its fixed operating costs.

According to Roy A. Anderson, Lockheed's chairman, the Tristar can reach a breakeven production rate even without the Pan Am deal. But others aren't so sure.

"I'm sure Lockheed can hang tough if they want," says Wolfgang Demisch, an analyst with the Wall Street firm Smith Barney, Harris Upham and Co. "But without a new airline to expand their customer base, it will be awfully painful."

Recently, stories had floated out of Pan Am's headquarters in New York that the board would be presented with management's recommendatin at the February meeting.

Lockheed has the edge, most industry analysts agree, primarily because its long-range L-1011, called the Dash 500, is smaller and slightly more fuel-efficient than its competitors. This should make it better suited for the less-heavily traveled routes where Pan Am now flies its old 707s.

But when President Carter overturned a Civil Aeronautics Board decision granting Pan Am a new route between Dallas and London and gave the route to Braniff Airways, it forced Pan Am to reexamine its situation once again. The delay, which may have shifted the decision to April, has increased the tension further.

Lockheed's Anderson flew to New York last Wednesday for another meeting with Pan Am's executives. "This competition is extremely fierce," he said in an interview last week. "And it is never over until the last day."

Anderson figures Pan Am is in the market for "at least 15 planes and probably more." But others believe the airline will eventually need about 30 additional aircraft. At $30 million each, the current price, Pan Am is facing at least $900 million in new orders.

And that may be only the tip of the iceberg. If Pan Am decides to introduce a new plane into its fleet — either the DC-10 or the L-1011 — it will have to expand its maintainance facilities around the world to handle the new equipment. With new facilities, a number of other international airlines would probably follow Pan Am's lead.

"To get a customer like Pan Am," says Anderson, "we are willing to go all out."

As the manufacturer with the smallest share of the airline market, Lockheed desperately needs to convince a big airline that doesn't currently operate L-1011s to take the plunge. "We know how important we are to Lockheed," says one Pan Am executive.

Four graduate from course

Four students have graduated from the Midland Memorial Hospital School of Medical Technology, according to Miss Margaret Kepple, registered medical technologist and educational coordinator for the school.

The graduates are Mrs. Marie Neely, Houston; Mrs. Terri Sanders, Odessa; Gary Wood, Muleshoe, and Marshall Dolloff, Denver City.

Wood and Dolloff have joined the MMH pathology laboratory staff as full-time technicians, with Mrs. Neely working part-time. Mrs. Sanders has taken a position with an Odessa hospital.

The MMH program is a 12-month intensive course in the various disciplines of medical technology.

Careful play based on enemy's ability

It may seem risky to trust your safety to somebody else, especially to an opponent, but this risk is sometimes justified. In today's hand Philadelphia expert Norman Kay wisely decided to trust an expert opponent.

West should open a trump. When he got in with the ace of clubs he could lead another trump. Eventually, West would get a second club trick.

Actually, dummy's jack of spades held the first trick, and a club return forced out the ace. West led his other spade, and South won with the ace.

This was when Kay made his key play as declarer.

TRUSTED WEST

Kay cashed the ace of hearts. This was safe because West knew how to count. If West had six hearts and saw six other hearts in the dummy he would surely lead a heart on taking the ace of clubs.

After the key play, declarer cashed the queen of clubs and ruffed a club with dummy's jack of trumps. East could not make a useful discard but he would have discarded his singleton heart if South had failed to take the ace of hearts first.

Kay next led dummy's king of hearts. East ruffed, and South overruffed. Declarer ruffed another club with the ace of trumps and drew the rest of the trumps. His last club was then good, and the slam was safely home.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player bids one heart. You hold: SK1087653; J9; D762; C97. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Avoid getting into a contested auction when your entire strength consists of one king. If the hand belongs to your side, your partner will be able to act at his next turn; and then you can bid the spades without misleading him.

Air routes given OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Civil Aeronautics Board law judge Thursday recommended the award of air routes to seven carriers, most of them involving service to Louisville, Ky.

Judge William H. Dapper said Allegheny Airlines should be allowed to fly between Louisville and Baltimore and between Louisville and Houston; Delta Air Lines between Louisville and Memphis; Hughes Air West between Louisville and Los Angeles and between Louisville and Nashville; Piedmont Airlines between Louisville and Washington, and both Ozark and Southern between Louisville and Nashville.

The judge also recommended that American Airlines be given authority between Cincinnati and Houston.

All the routes would be nonstop. The full board must now consider the recommendations.

Changes in military assignment, status noted

Airman Joni L. Rice, daughter of Mrs. Lucretia Lincoln of Big Spring, has been assigned to Chanute AFB, Ill., after recently completing Air Force basic training.

During six weeks of training at Lackland AFB, she studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. At Chanute AFB she is receiving specialized training in the vehicle maintenance field. She is a 1973 graduate of Kaufman High School.

Navy boiler technician Fireman Recruit Jeffrey A. Raney of McCamey has completed the Navy's basic boiler technician course. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Ramey of McCamey.

Ramey, who joined the Navy in July 1977, completed his specialized schooling at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes.

Cpl. Jimmie B. Holguin, son of Mrs. Carolina Holguin of Lamesa, recently completed a primary noncommissioned officer course at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. The course offers increased career educational opportunities while preparing the student for leadership duty.

Cpl. Holguin is a graduate of a California high school and entered the Army in March 1976.

Navy Seaman Recruit Gary W. McBride, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. McBride of Midland Route 3, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center in San Diego.

During the eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's numerous basic occupational fields. He is a 1977 graduate of Midland High School.

Navy Signalman 1st Class James L. Copeland, son of James T. Copeland of Midland, has reported for duty aboard the aircraft carrier USS Independence, with home port in Norfolk, Va. He joined the Navy in May 1970.

Airman Jeral B. Loper, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Loper of Big Spring, has received a new assignment following graduation from the law enforcement specialist course conducted by the Air Training Command at Lackland AFB.

Now trained in security and law enforcement, Airman Loper will go to Carswell AFB for duty with a unit of the Strategic Air Command. The airman is a 1974 graduate of Big Spring High School.

Pvt. Doyce M. Creekmore, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. William R. Creekmore of Andrews, has completed seven weeks of advanced individual training at Fort Benning, Ga. The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. This has qualified him a light weapons infantryman and as an indirect fire crewman.

Pvt. Creekmore joined the Army in 1977. His wife, Elizabeth, resides in San Antonio.

Navy Seaman Apprentice Robert T. Shanks III, son of Mary R. Shanks of Midland, recently departed for an extended deployment in the Western Pacific.

He is serving as a crew member aboard the salvage ship USS Safeguard, with home port at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. While deployed, his ship will operate as a unit of the U. S. Seventh Fleet. Seaman Shanks joined the Navy in May 1977.

Marine Pfc. Mark V. Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Evans of Crane, has completed the infantry combat training course at the Marine Corps base, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

During the six-week course, he received classroom instruction and also participated in field exercises involving infantry tactics. His specialized training centered on the duties of a rifleman, with emphasis on squad tactics and the techniques of fire of the squad's weapons.

A 1977 graduate of Crane High School, he joined the Marines last September.

Navy Chief Machinist's Mate Thomas B. Kingon, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Kingon of Midland, recently departed for an extended deployment with the Atlantic Standing Naval Force. He is serving aboard the frigate USS Pharris, with Norfolk, Va., as home port.

After joining the Atlantic Standing Naval Force in Bermuda, he and his shipmates are scheduled to participate in exercises with units from Canada, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal and the Federal Republic of Germany. Kingon joined the Navy in July 1958.

Airman George A. Clarke has been selected for instruction in the civil engineering mechanical and electrical field at Chanute AFB, Ill., following completion of basic training at Lackland AFB at San Antonio.

A 1973 graduate of Big Spring High School and former student at Howard College in Big Spring, Airman Clarke is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Clarke of Big Spring.

Marine Pfc. William D. Gonzales, son of Rosa D. Gonzales of Andrews, recently reported for duty at the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, near Santa Ana, Calif. He has been in the Marines since July 1977.

Airman 1st Class Fabrice F. Clark, whose wife is the former Dana Rampone of Andrews, has arrived for duty at Seymour Johnson AFB, N. C. Airman Clark, a cook with a unit of the Tactical Air Command, previously served at Gila Bend Air Force Auxiliary Field, Ariz.

The U. S. Air Force has promoted Paul G. Brockington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Brockington of Midland, to the rank of airman 1st class.

Airman Brockington is serving at Fairchild AFB, Wash., as a material facilities specialist. He is a 1976 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School in Midland.

Air Force Sgt. Martha L. Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin W. Lipham of Andrews, is a member of the staff of "Wingspread," the base newspaper at Randolph AFB, San Antonio. The publication recently won top honors for the third consecutive year in the Air Training Command's annual newspaper competition.

Airman Joni L. Rice

"Wingspread" entries will now be sent to higher headquarters in Washington, D. C., where they will be judged in competition with other Air Force base newspapers worldwide.

Sgt. Davis is a 1966 graduate of Andrews High School and attended San Antonio College.

Uneasy cease-fire follows three days of fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian and Lebanese Christian forces observed an uneasy cease-fire today after three days of heavy fighting in which 150 killed and 250 wounded were reported.

Burned-out cars, gaping holes in shop shutters and debris in the streets testified to the intensity of the fighting that raged in the low-income Christian residential quarter of Ein Rummaneh.

The Syrians sent armored vehicles into the district Thursday, fought house to house against Christian militiamen and set up new positions afterward.

They also maintained a ring of tanks and multiple rocket launchers around a Lebanese Army garrison of 600 troops, most of them Christians, at the Fayadiyeh Barracks, where the fighting erupted Tuesday on the outskirts of the Christian sector of Beirut.

Syria's military commander in Lebanon, Gen. Ali Aslan, ordered his troops to stop attacking Christians Thursday and said his men were to fire only in self-defense.

A Lebanese delegation was negotiating in Damascus. The newspaper As Safir, which has access to Syria's highest government echelons, said President Hafez Assad told the Lebanese they should disband their army, which broke up during the civil war and was slowly rebuilt after the cease-fire 15 months ago.

"This army is made up of factions loyal to political parties," Assad reportedly said in a reference to the Christians. "It should be disbanded to make way for rebuilding the real army of unified Lebanon."

The fighting started when Christian soldiers at Fayadiyeh demanded the Syrians remove a checkpoint outside the barracks. Sources said the Syrians set up the checkpoint to prevent the soldiers from running guns to the private armies of Christian political factions.

The Syrians quickly ringed the garrison with tanks and opened fire. The fighting died down after two hours but resumed on Wednesday and spread to adjacent Christian East Beirut when Christian militiamen began attacking Syrian positions.

Informants said the Syrians were demanding the removal of the Christian commander of the Fayadiyeh garrison, Col. Antoine Barakat, who they accused of ordering an attack on the checkpoint Tuesday. The Lebanese army commander, Brig. Victor Khoury, reportedly rejected the demand and said Barakat and his men "opened fire only in self defense."

The fighting tapered off after midnight Thursday. There were a few explosions and some sniper fire, but people ventured out to buy food. Government offices and schools in the Christian sector stayed shut, and traffic with the western Moslem sector was slight.

Andrews man hospitalized

ANDREWS — An 18-year-old Andrews man this morning was listed in guarded condition in the intensive care unit of Permian General Hospital in Andrews following a traffic accident Thursday night.

The accident occurred at 8:55 p.m., 5.5 miles west of Andrews on Texas Highway 176.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Richard E. Southern was driving east on Texas 176 when his vehicle went off the road and collided with a mobile trailer parked off the south side of the road.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Richard Andrews of Odessa.

Man likes monkey business

By Hugh A. Mulligan
(AP) Special Correspondent

VENICE, Fla. (AP) — Mike Corradino is the nation's, maybe the world's, only licensed and bonded monkey catcher.

Right now he is looking after 115 "homeless and unwed monkeys." He was once up to 160.

Mulligan's Stew

The other day Eastern Airlines called him up: "We got a monkey for you. Come get it." Unsolicited, some guy in Pennsylvania had sent him a monkey.

"I get them from every state," said Mike, who is the unsalaried curator of the Florida Monkey Sanctuary, located on the 10 acres behind his house. "It's the same old story. People buy a young monkey for a pet, then when it gets old and makes a mess or bites one of the kids, they want to get rid of it."

Mike was a disc jockey with WJRZ in Newark, N.J., who came South 10 years ago to get out of the rat race and instead ended up in the monkey marathon.

It started simply enough, like most domestic situation comedies.

Three days after they arrived in Florida his wife Maryjane wanted a pet monkey. She had once made a movie for NBC with J. Fred Muggs, the chimpanzee star of the early TV talk shows, and went ape over the scene stealing primate. So for $80, "including the cage," Linus, a cinnamon ring tail, came into their lives. Mike and Linus never hit it off.

"He was very intelligent, used to watch Captain Kangaroo and Sesame Street," Mike recalled. "He was a great escape artist and great at breaking and entering. You couldn't keep a combination lock in the house; he'd watch you once and knew the combination. But he didn't like me and I guess I didn't care much for him, for $160, including the cage, I got my own pet monkey, a wooly monkey."

Then one day the Humane Society called and asked if Mike was interested in buying a homeless monkey for $2, the base fee.

"The mathematics seemed right after spending $80 and $160," said Mike. "This poor monkey had lost all its hair because the pet shop had kept it in a cat cage. A lot of pet shops don't know anything about monkeys."

Next the county called and asked Mike if he would capture a monkey that someone had abandoned. One thing led to another and Mike, who was living downtown then, soon had 28 monkeys in his backyard.

He successfully petitioned the Sarasota County Commission for $500 for a watergun to clean out the monkey cages, and thereby became the country's first official monkey catcher.

In his first year on he job, Mike captured 70 monkeys, while working full time as a newspaper man with the Sun Coast Times. One of them, who had bitten five children, took three days to corral, with the dubious help of a woman who appeared on the scene and said she could tranquilize runaway monkeys with a primitive sexual dance.

"She lifted her skirt and began making weird girations," Mike recalled the dance. "The monkey fled in horror into the garage, where I managed to grab him with a great Lou Brock slide."

Another day a man called up with the anguished plea, "Come get this monkey before I kill it." It was a spider monkey that had all but wrecked the house, ripped out the telephone lines, torn up the upholstery and curtains and blocked up the plumbing by dropping stones in the toilet.

"Softly, softly catchee monkey," advised ancient simian lore. After three futile days with a net, Mike concocted what he called a "Monkey-toff cocktail, two parts vodka, one part peach nectar. It worked, but the totally bombed captive bellowed in his cage and pounded his chest like King Kong.

Mike gave up using his special cocktail "because monkeys when they're drunk act too much like people. Some get ugly, some sit and cry. Now I use a tranquilizer rifle and a net."

Moved out to his new 10-acre place, the Florida Monkey Sanctuary was almost entirely supported by recycling aluminum cans, until the price of aluminum went from 10 to 17 cents a pound. About this time, the state came up with new regulations for wildlife and animal centers, which would mean $28,000 worth of improvements for Mike's nonprofit sanctuary. The county approved a grant of $2,500 for some new cages and a septic system, which is when some official ruled that anyone receiving that amount in public funds should be bonded. Thus, Mike Corradino became the nation's only licensed and bonded monkey catcher.

While working late at night atop a cage to meet the new standards, Mike was attacked by a white faced Capucian monkey. "It bit me on the ankle, almost severed the Achilles tendon. Monkeys have very sharp teeth, you don't even feel it. I don't know how often he bit me, but I had to get 35 stitches and almost died. He weighed only seven pounds, but monkeys pound for pound are four times as strong as men and they can come at you with four fists and a tail."

Mike estimates there are three-quarters of a million pet monkeys in the United States, but since the goverrnment two years ago banned the import of monkeys his work and sanctuary population has declined.

Contrary to popular opinion, monkeys can swim better than Johnny Weismuller, Mike sets the record straight. "And they don't pick fleas off each other. They pick off salt flakes and dry skin. It's a social gesture, like shaking hands."

Americans find past holds family interest

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — One of Americans' more favored pastimes these days is tracing their ancestry. And whether they discover a hero or a skeleton in the family closet doesn't seem to matter, says James A. Funkhouser, genealogy enthusiast and chairman of general and public services studies at Edison State Community College her.

"People are more interested in the individual today," Funkhouser says. "That's one reason why family-tree tracers find an uncle who died a pauper or a thief just as fascinating as a great-grandparent who knew Abraham Lincoln."

Funkhouser, who teaches a non-credit course in genealogy at Edison State, believes the revival of interest in family roots began long before the book by that title took America by storm.

"We've become a nomadic people," he says, "and our family ties are more fragmeted than they used to be. Finding out more abut your faimly gives you a feeling of belonging, of being tied to a certain locality at a certain time. Call it 'roots' if you want to.'

But Funkhouser doesn't totaly discount the effect the book "Roots" had on increased interest in genealoy-especially among black Americans.

"The book certainly showed that blacks could also trace their ancestry although it is a long and difficult process because of sketchy records," he says.

Tunkhouser believes other reasons for increased interest in "second cousin Tabitha" include the bicentenial, which aroused a beightened interest in history among Americans, and more emphasis on ethnic groups such as Polish Americans and Italian Americans.

Whatever the reason, though, Funkhouser thinks the hunt for ancestors an intriguing business.

"You have to have a bit of Ellery Queen in you to be a genealogist" he says. Look for clues solve the mystery. The only difference is the mystery concerns people who once really lived."

How and where do you find these Clue. Quiz everyone in your family; then consult family records like the old Bible, family papers, journals and photos. Finally, go to the public libarary and to the original records, Funkhouser advises. There are numerous stories for this sort of thing," he notes, "such as county court records, state archives, church, land and probate records, federal censuses and military records go back to the days of settlement, if something like fire hasn't happened to them. The original colonies were required to keep vital records but states didn't start keeping them until the mid-19th century of even as late as 1900."

What happens when you've traced back as far as you can in this contry. "Overseas ancestors are harder to trace," Funkhouser says. "The ideal thing would be to go abroad and continue the search but this isn't practical for most people.

Jury probe of slaying due to end

GARDEN CITY — The Glasscock County grand jury's investigation into the death of Mexican farmer laborer Tiburcio Griego Santome was expected to be completed by noon today.

Griego, 37, was fatally shot last Nov. 6 after he reportedly attacked Glasscock County Sheriff Royce "Booger" Pruit and ex-lawman G. B. Therwhanger, 51, of Stanton, following a disturbance at an annual church festival at the St. Lawrence farming community 15 miles southwest of Garden City.

Griego, who was arrested for allegedly being both drunk and belligerent, reportedly, lashed out at the two, as Pruit was taking Griego to Garden City following the arrest. Therwhanger reportedly fired the fatal shots.

Therwhanger was not charged in the incident.

The grand jury interviewed 18 witnesses on Thursday on the first day of its formal probe.

The shooting has been under investigation by District Attorney Rick Hamby, the Texas Rangers, the Texas Attorney General's Office, and, until recently, by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

SENIOR CITIZENS AGAINST CRIME seminar is planned for March 16 in the Fine Arts Building of Midland College. Discussing the workshop, purpose of which is to educate the older citizens of Midland and the surrounding area to protect themselves from the criminal element, are, from left, Ann Bradford of the Texas Department of Human Resources, Sgt. Lalo Camarillo of the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department, Marcia Ingram of Casa de Amigos and Ernie Kuhnel of Austin, law enforcement consultant for the TDH and formerly associated with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and City of Austin Police Department for a total of 44 years. Flu hits epidemic levels

ATLANTA (AP) — Medical experts here have confirmed what half-empty office buildings around the country have been witness to for the last month — the flu has reached epidemic proportions in the United States.

The national Center for Disease Control reported that there were more than 3,000 deaths attributed to influenza and pneumonia in the United States in the last four weeks, 1,000 more than were expected.

On the basis of those figures, the center said Thursday it had concluded that influenza had reached epidemic proportions.

Center officials said most of the damage is being done by older strains of the virus, although cases of the new Russian flu have been reported in Wyoming, Colorado, Michigan, Texas and New York.

Other viruses, including the more familiar A-Texas and AVictoria strains, have been reported in practically every state, the center said.

Many of the cases reported so far have been among young military personnel, and their recovery has been rapid.

The center said Russian flu recently struck the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., affecting more than half the 4,400 cadets at the institution. Another outbreak at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado hit more than 60 percent of the 4,200 enrolled there.

University under audit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Math department secretaries at Sam Houston State University cranked out letters for the Rotary Club, and school employees repaired the president's private home, a state auditor has reported.

Audit supervisor Mike Ferguson Jr. said the state should be reimbursed.

"We have the responsibility of clarifying before we say somebody did or did not. . . . If this is cause for reimbursement, it will be done," said university president Elliott T. Bowers in response.

Ferguson, in a letter to Bowers, cited 16 "irregularities" involving use of school funds, property and employees.

He told Bowers that university employees had spent 90 hours and used school materials worth $78.60 making repairs on Bowers' private residence.

He said a regents order seemed to allow the use of state employees at Bowers' home only for functions relating directly to university activities — not for general maintenance.

Oil industry 'fight' seen

Regardless of what goes on in the nation's capital, "the oil busineas is not going to pot," members of the Downtown Rotary Club were assured Thursday noon at their meeting in the Midland Hilton.

The speaker was Ed Poulter, head of the Petroleum Technology Department at Midland College, who added that "everything we do, and all the luxuries we enjoy are dependent on crude oil. We are not going to give it up — we are going to fight for it."

Poulter's comments on the oil business were used to lead into his talk on Midland College and its Petroleum Technology Department.

"Most of our children will not go to a four-year college," Poulter said in explaining that many high school graduates are not four-year material. Many high school graduates, he added, never will see a diploma from a four-year college."

He said the area between high school graduation and graduation from a four-year college is most critical, and that this is where two-year colleges come into the picture.

There was a time, he continued, when junior colleges were looked down on, but this no longer is true.

"The junior college of today has a specific purpose," Poulter said in explaining that they are yielding good, qualified people in a wide variety of courses, particularly in the area of occupational technology.

He cited specific instances to prove his point.

The speaker praised Midlanders for realizing the demand for a community college and in responding to it in a magnificent manner.

In discussing the Petroleum Technology Department at Midland College, Poulter told how it came into being and reviewed its tremendous growth in enrollment, benefits and stature in a short period of time.

"It is a bold program," he said. "It is not a snap course. It is designed to produce qualified technicians, and it does just that. It is fantastic."

Poluter said the department offers eight courses in petroleum technology.

Concluding his program, Poulter used a slide presentation to illustrate some of the highlights of his talk and to show the excellent facilities and equipment available at the college.

The program was arranged by Rotarian Harris Kerr.

Cuban troops involved in combat in Somalia

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Some 2,000 Cuban troops are involved in "a combat role" in escalating border fighting between Ethiopia and Somalia, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Thursday night.

Despite frequent Somali claims that Cuban troops are leading the Ethiopian forces, it was the first time the United States has said Cubans are involved in the actual fighting in the Ogaden region in southeastern Ethiopia.

Vance, speaking to a group of business leaders at the State Department, did not give details of the specific combat role the Cubans were playing, but he did say "probably more are on the way." There have been reports this week that 3,000 to 6,000 Cuban soldiers are enroute to Ethiopia on Soviet ships.

The secretary gave no indication what the United States intended to do about the increased Cuban involvement, but said it had "created problems in connection with our dialogue" with Havana, a reference to the Carter administration policy of seeking improved relations with Cuba.

Over recent weeks, the United States has consistently increased the estimate on the number of Cuban and Soviet troops in Ethiopia, this week saying there were more than 3,000 Cubans and about 1,000 Soviets, including pilots. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III on Monday indicated that Cuban pilots were flying missions in the combat zone.

The Soviet Union, formerly allied to Somalia, switched sides last year after the United States cut off military aid to Ethiopia and has since poured in about $800 million worth of military equipment.

Vance did not say whether the Cubans were flying air support missions, manning tanks, acting as advisers or were fighting on the front line as they did in the Angolan civil war in 1975-76.

Apparently, the Cubans are involved in more than just the air war, since the size of the entire Ethiopian air force is about 2,000 men.

Lions get driving tips

Texas Department of Public Safety Lt. Jimmie Rhoads and Trooper Jack White presented a program on conserving energy while driving on highways, speed and laws pertaining to highway travel at the Thursday night meeting of the Evening Lions Club.

The Evening Lions Club met at 6:30 p.m. at the Westside Lions building.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Pursuant to Art. 5421q, V.A.T.S., notice is hereby given to the City of Midland Parks Department and the general public of a public hearing to be held on the 28th day of February, 1978, at 5:00 o'clock p.m. in the City Council Chamber at 300 N. Loraine St. in the City of Midland, Texas, for the following purpose:

The City Council of the City of Midland is contemplating the use of Block 23 of the West End Addition to the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, commonly known as "Crier Park" for the site of a combination park and Central Fire Station. This property is bounded on the north by Texas Avenue; on the east by North "H" Street; on the south by Wall Avenue; and on the west by North "I" Street.

The proposed program or project is described as follows:

The new central station for the Midland Fire Department will be a one-story building of 20,000 square feet which together with required parking and driveways will occupy approximately two-thirds of the site now used as Crier Park. The building will be situated in the southern portion of the lot facing Wall Avenue with the majority of parking in front. There will be additional parking to the side facing "I" Street and the fire truck driveways will exit both ways from the building onto "H" and "I" Streets.

To the rear of the building facing Texas Avenue will be a landscaped park area approximately one-third of the lot in depth, and occupying the entire block front along Texas Avenue. This park is designed with sidewalks, trees, benches, a playing field, and appropriate landscaping.

An Earth Berm will be constructed against the rear portion of the Fire Station itself to provide visual and sound relief from the station activities.

The park will provide an area approximately 90 feet by 300 feet which could be used for outdoor activities of all sorts from jogging to concerts, and is designed to accommodate the City Christmas tree.

The public hearing is to assist the City Council in determining whether or not (1) there is no feasible and prudent alternative to the use or taking of such land for the above described project, and, (2) such program or project includes all reasonable planning to minimize harm to such land as a park or recreation area resulting from such use or taking.

James W. McCullough
City Secretary
City of Midland, Texas
(February 3, 10, 17, 1978)

LEGAL NOTICE

Sealed bids will be accepted at the office of the County Auditor, Second floor of the courthouse or P.O. Box 421, Midland, Texas until 4:30 o'clock P.M., Friday February 24, 1978 to be opened by the Commissioners' Court Monday, February 27, 1978 at 1:30 o'clock P.M. for the following:

FOUR (4) 1978 AUTOMOBILES

Specifications and bid information may be obtained from the Auditor's office.

The County of Midland reserves the right to reject all bids or any part of the bid and to waive all formalities.

15 Help Wanted

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE IN THESE TWO PETROLEUM ENGINEERS?

$8,000 A YEAR.

Given identical talents, education and job experience, a Petroleum Engineer can make up to 35 percent more money working for Aramco in Saudi Arabia.

For example, if his base salary is $20,000 in the U.S., he'll get another $8,000 (tax-protected) in Saudi Arabia as an overseas bonus.

If you'd like to compare what you're making with what you could be making, consult the table below.

Annual U.S. Base Salary	U.S. Take-Home Pay*	Saudi Arabia Take-Home Pay*
$20,000	$17,483	$25,483
$25,000	$21,430	$31,430
$30,000	$25,240	$37,240

*Based on married person filing joint return, with three exemptions. Calculations observe 1976 Federal income tax laws using a 20 percent deduction. Does not include state or local or other income taxes.

Seven weeks off every year.

Every 12½ months, you get 40 days' paid vacation. Plus 12 paid holidays.

That adds up to more than seven weeks off. So you'll have plenty of time to see the Near East, Middle East, Far East, Africa, and Europe. All are close by.

You'll also get round trip transportation and travel expenses to the U.S. and back for your entire family.

Other benefits.

Aramco offers you a lot of benefits. Excellent savings and retirement plans, and while you're in Saudi Arabia, free medical care for you and your family and free education for your children.

Your career will profit, too.

In addition to profiting financially, you'll profit professionally because you'll have the opportunity to work with some of the best international engineers on some of the biggest projects in the world.

Currently, Aramco is developing 37 onshore and offshore fields containing over 120 oil reservoirs.

We're producing between eight and nine million barrels of oil per day, plus associated gas.

We employ 25 onshore and offshore rigs to explore new fields and develop existing ones. And we're expanding our operations every day.

You can't find another company that offers you experience on jobs of this scope.

You won't find a better Petroleum Department either. Aramco's Petroleum Department has four divisions: Drilling and Workover, Production, Reservoir Development and Technical Service Laboratories.

Some of the things we do are drill wells, construct surface facilities, run mathematical simulation studies for reservoir behavior and multiphase pipe flow, and make long-term development plans.

This means you'll have the opportunity for rapid professional advancement, either technical or management, through a multitude of assignments in all phases of the oil industry. And through a variety of educational seminars and schools.

The requirements.

If you're a Petroleum Engineer with a minimum of 2 years' experience in production, drilling and workover, or reservoir development, this could be the most important job offer of your career.

Call us.

Even if you're happy with your present job, and making lots of money—you should call us for an interview.

You might be surprised about the kind of job we can offer you and how much more you could make.

Call our representatives in Midland at the Midland Hilton Inn from Monday, February 13 thru Tuesday, February 14 for a personal and confidential interview at (915) 683-6131. (Out-of-town, call collect.)
